☛ The Donors made provision for this Catalogue (now printed after many years) by the purchase of paper and the engraving of a vignette showing the Interior of the Athenaeum Library, and by the gift of a sum of money, which was enlarged by the generosity of the EXECUTORS OF THOMAS DOWSE, and was to be also used to build up a collection of Washingtoniana. ☛ ☛ ☛

INTRODUCTION.

THE Inventory of Washington's books made at the time of his death by the appraisers of his estate shows that his library then numbered about nine hundred volumes. These under his will became the property of his nephew Judge Bushrod Washington, who also inherited his papers and the Mansion House of Mount Vernon. Here Judge Washington lived and added to General Washington's library a part at least of his own books. In his will in 1826, he provided as follows: "All the papers and letter books devised to me by my uncle, Gen'l Washington, as well as the books in my study, other than law books, I give to my nephew Geo. C. Washington; the books in the cases in the dining-room, I give to my nephew John A. Washington." In the inventory of his estate are these items: "In the dining-room, 468 vols. miscellaneous works left to John A. Washington," "658 vols. of miscellaneous works left to Geo. C. Washington," "1125 N. of miscel. Pamphlets left Geo. C. Washington," beside "169 vols. of State papers," "22 vols. of Journals of Congress," and "649 vols. of Law Books, 22 law pamphlets." These latter were destined for Bushrod Washington Herbert, the son of a niece, in case he should be trained for the law.

Mount Vernon was next occupied by John A. Washington. The books left to George C. Washington remained there for many years, but in 1847 or 1848, a considerable portion of them, perhaps all that remained, were sold to Henry Stevens, the bookseller. Mr. Stevens announced his intention of sending them over to the British Museum. To prevent this and to secure them for Boston a number of Boston and Cambridge men, particularly Prof. Jared Sparks, Prof. Andrews Norton, Mr. George Livermore, and Mr. Charles Eliot Norton, who acted as Treasurer, undertook to solicit subscriptions, and raise the five thousand dollars which Stevens demanded for them, a sum which he afterwards reduced to three thousand eight hundred dollars. This amount and four hundred and fifty dollars beside was collected, the Athenæum itself contributing five hundred dollars; and at a meeting of the subscribers it was voted to place the books permanently in the Boston Athenæum, of which a majority of the subscribers were Proprietors. The additional sum subscribed was used in part by the Committee for a book-plate, a vignette of the interior of the Athenæum Library, and paper for the Catalogue which they expected to have printed. The vignette appears on a previous page, and fifty copies of the Catalogue have been printed on the paper provided in 1850. They also bought from S. G. Drake a collection of books and pamphlets relating to Washington. The balance remaining in their hands they paid over to the Athenæum.

At the meeting of the Trustees of the Athenæum in January, 1849, the Committee on the Library reported that

“The last year has been distinguished beyond all precedent in the history of the institution by the number and value of the donations made to the Library.

“First in importance is a collection of books which formerly belonged to Washington. Seventy gentlemen of Boston, Cambridge and Salem, by a subscription of fifty dollars each, amounting to nearly $4,000, have secured to the Athenæum this treasure. The light in which they regard it, and the motives which animated them will best appear from their own words.

“‘The greater number of these books,’ they say, ‘contain Washington’s autograph. All which so distinguished, and next after them, those which were presentation copies to him, and, next to them, those which contain his book-plate, or can in any other way be proved to have been in his possession, would be regarded even in Europe as curiosities of great interest and value, and would command prices which might seem incredible to one unacquainted with the sums given for objects associated with the memory of highly distinguished men. . . .’

“It should be remarked that of these seventy¹ benefactors, twenty-eight, contributing $1400, are not Proprietors, but friends of the Athenæum only as they are friends of learning and of those high interests of the community, which the Athenæum was intended and is expected to promote.”

Of the purchase of the Washington Library Professor Charles Eliot Norton wrote in September, 1887, “The acquisition of the books by the Athenæum was, finally, in largest measure due to the efforts of the late George Livermore, one of the most public-spirited, generous and modest of men.”

It was Mr. Livermore also who, in 1858, as one of the executors of the will of Thomas Dowse obtained for the Athenæum the appropriation of "one thousand dollars for preparing and printing a descriptive catalogue of the books formerly belonging to Washington, and for completing the collection of works illustrating his life." To this gift, part of the income from which has been spent from time to time in buying books and portraits relating to Washington, is mainly due the collection of Washingtoniana here described, as well as the Catalogue itself.

The collection of books bought from Stevens, and described in the first two sections of this Catalogue, comprises 455 volumes and about 750 pamphlets. Of these, 354 volumes (including 36 made up of pamphlets bound together) and several hundred unbound pamphlets may be assigned to General Washington's library, the large majority of them without question; the remaining 80 bound volumes and the rest of the pamphlets belonged to Judge Bushrod Washington or to other members of the Washington family. The former are described in Part I. of this Catalogue under 835 entries, 105 of which represent unbound publications of the Board of Agriculture of Great Britain, and 61 United States government publications. The other books from Mount Vernon, not General Washington's, numbering 252 titles, are contained in Part II. Many of the unbound pamphlets and a few of the volumes bear no mark of ownership, but if their character and date make it probable that they were Washington's, they have been included in the first division, though further study of the Inventory and of the history of Washington's other books has shown that a very few of these titles should probably be transferred to the second division.

Only one book from Washington's library has been added to the collection since the Stevens purchase.

The remainder of Washington's library has been scattered, and no large number of his books now exists in any one place beside the Boston Athenæum. What became of the rest of the books left to George C. Washington can only be conjectured. Those given to John A. Washington passed to his son John A. Washington, and then to his son Lawrence Washington, of Alexandria, Va.

In 1876 a portion of them, after having been on exhibition in Philadelphia during the Centennial Exposition was sold at auction by Messrs. Thomas & Sons. Lots 1-138 and 450-474, including 282 volumes, were stated to be from the Library of George Washington, and most of them can be identified with entries on the Inventory. The largest buyer at this sale was John R. Baker, of Philadelphia, whose collection came under the hammer in February, 1891, in Birch's auction-rooms, when exceptionally high prices were realized for the Washington books. At the same rooms, under the direction of Stan. V. Henkels, in December, 1890, when the effects of Lawrence Lewis and Lorenzo Lewis were sold, in April, 1891, when relics, papers, and books belonging to Lawrence Washington, Bushrod C. Washington, and others were disposed of, and again in December, 1891, April, 1892, and December, 1892, other sales have given an opportunity to book collectors to bid for books which once belonged to Washington. The titles of the Catalogues of these sales will be found on pp. 470-475 of this volume. A sale of books claiming to be from Washington's library, but having spurious book-plates, took place in Washington, in 1863 (see p. 475).

In order to show as far as possible how and when the several volumes in the Athenæum Collection were acquired by Washington, a careful examination of his published writings, and of the inedited material, account-books, letter-books, etc., in the Department of State, Washington, the Congressional Library, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Massachusetts Historical Society (the Pickering papers), and the Lenox Library, was made, and a good deal of information gathered. Very many books, it is shown, he received by gift, especially during his public career, but he was also a constant buyer, mainly in practical lines, as appears by the orders to his agents, copies of which exist in his account-books preserved in the Department of State. The character of his library as a whole may be learned from the Inventory printed in the Appendix, where, however, the titles of the pamphlets included in tract volumes are not given. From these it appears that he did not overlook the political questions of his time. The literature of the "Parson's Cause" and the "Two-Penny Act," subjects which agitated Virginia prior to the Revolution, is well represented. The tracts issued in the pre-revolutionary controversy appear in fair abundance, and there is a considerable number of works upon the principles of the Revolution, and the later politics of the United States.

The manuscript material examined has also made it possible to state for the first time in these pages the authors of several anonymous publications, as in the case of the "Five minutes answer to Thomas Paine," the author of which is shown by unpublished letters to be Charles L. P. Horry, nephew of the Pinckneys of South Carolina.

In Parts I. and II. (including all the books from Mount Vernon) the titles have been given with great fullness on account of the special interest of the books. In Parts III. and IV. (Writings of Washington and Washingtoniana) the titles are given with a trifle less detail, but at sufficient length for bibliographical purposes. Contributions relating to Washington in the American Historical Record, the Historical Magazine, the Magazine of American History, and the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography are all catalogued, but those in other magazines of a popular character have been taken only when having a special value or actually existing as separate numbers on the shelves of the Washington collection.

The Athenæum also possesses a large collection of portraits¹ of Washington (about 553 different plates), but these have not been included in this Catalogue, both because of the size which the book had already reached, and because the field has been well worked by W. S. Baker in his "The Engraved Portraits of Washington."

To all who have assisted him with information, and aided his researches, the compiler offers his sincerest thanks. Among those whose courtesies should be specially acknowledged are: A. H. Allen, chief of the Bureau of Rolls in the State Department; his assistant, S. M. Hamilton, in charge of the historical manuscripts; Frederick D. Stone, LL.D., Librarian of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania; Wilberforce Eames, A.M., of the Lenox Library; and Samuel Abbott Green, M.D., Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The compiler feels that he cannot properly omit to acknowledge the unfailing courtesy and helpfulness of Mr. William C. Lane, the Librarian of the Boston Athenæum, throughout the progress of the work.

The Catalogue is now submitted in the hope that this first contribution to a general bibliography of George Washington may prove serviceable to the large and constantly increasing number of students of the career of this great American.

"As during my residence at Mount Vernon you did allow me to have the honor to present you with a Book concerning the culture of the Pine Apple & other different fruits in Hot-Houses, I do prevail of the opportunity of my friend M^r. James Barry going to that part of the country, to forward it to you. Philadelphia 31st of July, 1796."

Without autograph or book-plate. Entered upon the Inventory as "The Hothouse Gardener." $1.50.

ADAMS, JOHN.

A Defence of the Constitutions of Government of the United States of America. By John Adams, LL.D. And a Member-of the Academy of Arts and Sciences at Boston.

Philadelphia: printed for Hall and Sellers; J. Crukshank; and Young and M'Culloch. M.DCC.LXXXVII. xx, 390 pp. 16°.

This work was written in haste to meet some criticisms by French writers, particularly by Turgot and Mirabeau. It is not a defence of the Constitution of the United States, but of the constitutions of the several States as then existing. It was first published at London in 1787, and immediately reproduced in the United States, editions being brought out at Boston, New York, and Philadelphia. The latter edition was much circulated in the Federal Convention, and is thought to have had considerable influence in affecting the opinions of the members. The demand for the work induced the author to write two more volumes, which were published in 1788. A French translation came out at Paris in 1792, and a new English edition appeared at London in 1794. William Cobbett put out an edition at Philadelphia in 1797. The above constituted all the different issues of the work, until the text was brought out in a rearranged form in Charles Francis Adams's edition of "The Works of John Adams."

— Letters [to Dr. Calkoen of Amsterdam on American Affairs. Oct. 4 to Oct. 24, 1780].

[London, 1786.] (4), 74 pp. 8°.

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Common Sense, &c." Contents given under PAINE, Thomas. Common Sense.

The author makes the following statement concerning the origin and character of the work in an advertisement printed on two leaves following the title-leaf: "Dr. Calkoen, an eminent civilian at Amsterdam, to whom these letters were written, composed, by the means of them, a comparison between the revolt of the Low Countries from Spain, and the revolution of the United States of America; in which he concluded, upon the whole, that 'as it was a kind of miracle that the former succeeded, it would be a greater miracle still if the latter should not.' This composition was read by him to a society of gentlemen of letters . . . and by its means just sentiments of American affairs began to spread in that country. . . . These papers are now printed, in order to preserve them; but by no means to be made public for the present."

The work passed through several editions under the title "Twenty-six Letters upon interesting Subjects respecting the American Revolution," and was reprinted in the seventh volume of "The Works of John Adams."

Washington received this copy from Gen. Benjamin Lincoln and acknowledged its receipt in a letter dated Mount Vernon, November 14th, 1788, as follows:—

"Your letter of the 25th of last month, accompanying the political letters of Mr. Adams, came safely to hand; and I have to acknowledge my obligations for both those favours. There is good sense in the answers given by M^r. Adams to the questions of D^r. Calkoen, combined with an extensive knowledge of the interests and resources of this Country. If there be in some instances an exaggeration of our force, it is not a matter of wonder—but the tenor of the whole performance rather affords a subject for admiration that so much accuracy should have been discovered in representations, mostly drawn from recollection. Indeed I was very much pleased with the perusal and doubt not but the work must have been well calculated to answer the good purposes for which it was intended."—From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

ADDISON, ALEXANDER. Jurist, 1759–1807.

Observations on the Speech of Albert Gallatin, in the House of Representatives of the United States, on the Foreign Intercourse Bill. By Alexander Addison.

Washington [Penn.]: printed by John Colerick, 1798. (2), 52 pp. 8°.

Given to Washington by the author. The letter of Addison transmitting the work is preserved in the State Department, where is also a press copy of Washington's letter of acknowledgment. The portions of these letters having reference to the pamphlet are printed below:—

"I take the liberty of sending a pamphlet—and in a separate inclosure a Newspaper. And I am with the greatest respect

Your most obed^t Serv^t

"ALEX^R ADDISON.

"WASHINGTON (Penn^a), 17 May, 1798."

To which Washington replied:—

"I pray you, Sir, to accept my thanks for the Pamphlet you had the goodness to send me containing your remarks on Mr Gallatin's Speech in the house of Representatives of the United States, on the foreign Intercourse Bill—and for the Gazette containing an Oration delivered at the Town of W. on the day recommended by the President to be observed as a General Fast.

"Both of these productions I have read with equal attention & satisfaction; and although it has been justly observed in one of them that to offer conviction to a person convinced before . . . is labour lost, yet, much good may & I am persuaded will result, from the investigation of political heresies. . . . Mount Vernon, 3^d June, 1798."

— Liberty of Speech, and of the Press. A Charge to the Grand Juries of the County Courts of the Fifth Circuit of the State of Pennsylvania. By Alexander Addison, President of those Courts.

Washington [Penn.]: printed by John Colerick, for the author. 1798. 24 pp. 16°.

Judge Addison was on the bench in Allegheny County throughout the Whiskey Insurrection and during the excitement caused by the Alien and Sedition Acts. In the present charge he enjoined upon the Grand Jury the duty of enforcing the Sedition Laws; making an able exposition of their legality and justice. A biographical sketch of Judge Addison is given in an article on "The Judiciary of Allegheny County," by J. W. F. White, in "The Pennsylvania Magazine of History," vol. vii. pp. 155–158.

Inscribed on the cover, "General Washington." The letter of acknowledgment from Washington to Addison is here printed:—

"PHILA. 6th Decr 1798.

"SIR, — Your favor of the 21st Ult^o enclosing thoughts on the 'Liberty of Speech & of the press'—in a charge to the grand Juries of the County Courts of the fifth circuit of the State of Pennsylvania, has been duly rec^d and I pray you to accept my thanks for this fresh inst^d of your attention & politeness to me. — I am persuaded I shall read it with the same pleasure and marked approbation that I have done your other productions of a similar nature which have come to my hands, — I say shall because my occupations since I came to this city have been such as scarcely to afford me time to look into a newspaper. With great esteem. . . .”

Concerning this work and the subject of which it treats, Washington wrote to Marshall as follows : —

“The Alien & Sedition Laws have employed many pens, — and we hear a number of Tongues, in the assembly of this state, — the latter I understand to a very pernicious purpose. I send you the production of Judge Addison on these subjects. — Whether any new lights are cast upon them by his Charge you will be better able to decide when you have read it. My opinion is that if this or other writings flashed conviction as clear as the sun in its meridian brightness, it would produce no effect in the conduct of the leaders of opposition, who have points to carry from which nothing will divert them in the prosecution. When you have read the charge give it to Bushrod Washington or place it to any other you may think proper. Mount Vernon, 30th Dec^r 1798.” — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

ADDISON, ALEXANDER.

On the Alien Act. A Charge to the Grand Juries of the County Courts of the Fifth Circuit of the State of Pennsylvania, at December Sessions, 1798. By Alex. Addison, President of those Courts. Washington [Penn.] : printed by John Colerick. 1799. 19 pp. 16°.

In a letter preserved in the State Department, dated Washington, Penn., 31 Jan^y 1799, Addison writes : —

“I have taken the liberty of inclosing you a small pamphlet. In doing this it is not my intention to tax your politeness with any acknowledgment such as by your letter of the 6th of December last you honoured me with.”

To which Washington briefly replied from Mt. Vernon, 4th March, 1799, as follows : —

“Your favour of the 31st of Jan^y enclosing your second charge to the Grand Juries of the County Courts, etc. has been duly received.”

Washington's autograph on the dedication page. Three pages are devoted to a dedication, "Al chiarissimo e libero uomo il generale Washington." Inserted is a MS. translation of the dedication by G. W. Featherstonhaugh. Upon a sheet of note-paper pasted on the fly-leaf is another translation in the handwriting of Charles Eliot Norton.

This is perhaps the work referred to in a letter from John Paradise of London to Washington as follows: "I avail myself of the opportunity afforded me by my friend Count Andriani, of conveying to you an Ode, which Count Alfieri, the author of it, desired me long ago to convey to you. The rambling, and of course unsettled condition, I have been in since my return to Europe, has entirely put it out of my power to comply sooner with Count Alfieri's request." vols. 8°.

Vols. 8-10 have the title: The American Museum, or Universal Magazine, with imprint, Philadelphia: Carey, Stewart, and Co.

The magazine continued publication until December, 1792, when it ceased in consequence of certain post-office regulations, whereby it was refused admittance "into the Post-Office on any terms." The career of the magazine is briefly related in Smyth's "The Philadelphia Magazines and their Contributors, 1741-1850," pp. 67-73, with some account of its contributors and the principal articles that appeared in it.

Washington's autograph on all the title-pages. In a letter to Carey, the publisher, under date of June 25, 1788, Washington writes about the magazine as follows:—

"Although I believe the 'American Museum,' published by you, has met with extensive,
I may say, with universal approbation from competent judges, yet I am sorry to find by your favor of the 19th, that, in a pecuniary view, it has not equalled your expectations. A discontinuance of the publication for want of proper support would, in my judgment, be an impeachment on the understanding of this country. For I am of opinion, that the work is not only eminently calculated to disseminate political, agricultural, philosophical and other valuable information; but that it has been uniformly conducted with taste, attention, and propriety. If to these important objects be superadded the more immediate design of rescuing public documents from oblivion, I will venture to pronounce, as my sentiment, that a more useful literary plan has never been undertaken in America, or one more deserving public encouragement. By continuing to prosecute that plan with similar assiduity and discernment, the merit of your 'Museum' must ultimately become as well known in some countries in Europe, as on this continent; and can scarcely fail of procuring an ample compensation for your trouble and expense." — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

AMES, FISHER. 1758-1808.

The Speech of Mr. Ames, in the House of Representatives of the United States, when in Committee of the Whole, on Thursday, April 28, 1796, in Support of the following Motion: Resolved, that it is expedient to pass the Laws necessary to carry into effect the Treaty lately concluded between the United States and the King of Great-Britain.

Philadelphia: printed by John Fenno. M,DCC,XCVI. (4), 59 pp. 8°.

A powerful appeal in support of the "Jay Treaty." Two copies.

Concerning this speech, Washington wrote to Pinckney as follows: "The enclosed speech, however, made by Mr. Ames at the close of the discussion, I send to you; because, in the opinion of most, who heard it delivered or have read it since, his reasoning is unanswerable. Mount Vernon, May 22d, 1796."

[AMORY, THOMAS. Eccentric English writer, 1691 (?) - 1788.]

The Life of John Bunclø, Esq; containing Various Observations and Reflections, made in several Parts of the World, and many extraordinary Relations.

London: printed for J. Johnson and B. Davenport. M,DCC,LXVI. Vol. I. iv, (iii)-ix, (7), 511 pp. Vol. II. (16), 532 pp. 8°.

"The book is a literary curiosity, containing an extraordinary medley of religious and sentimental rhapsodies, descriptions of scenery, and occasional fragments of apparently genuine autobiography. 'The soul of Rabelais,' says Hazlitt, 'passed into John (Thomas) Amory.' The phrase is suggested by Amory's rollicking love adventures. He marries seven wives in the two volumes of Buncl, generally after a day's acquaintance, and buries them as rapidly. They are all of superlative beauty, virtue, and genius, and, in particular, sound Unitarians. A great part of the work is devoted to theological disquisition, showing considerable reading in defence of 'Christian deism.' Much of his love-making and religious discussion takes place in the north of England, and there is some interest in his references to the beauty of the lake scenery. His impassable crags, fathomless lakes, and secluded valleys, containing imaginary convents of Unitarian monks and nuns, suggest the light-headed ramblings of delirium." — Leslie Stephen.

Washington undoubtedly read this book, as he takes care to note the interruption of the continuity of the narrative caused by the transposition of the parts in binding. The volumes bear no marks of frequent reading or use; on the contrary, they have a very fresh and clean appearance.

ANDERSON, JOHN. English physicist, 1726–1796.

Essais sur l'Artillerie de Campagne, depuis que l'on fait usage de la poudre à canon dans les combats. Par John Anderson, M. A., F. R. S. . . . Professeur de Physique dans l'Université de Glasgow.

[Paris, 1791]. 79, (1) pp. 12°.

Given to Washington by the author. The extracts printed below are from papers preserved in the State Department:—

“Of these inventions I made an offer to my own country; and in order to point out their advantages to the Duke of Richmond and the Board of Ordnance, I printed the English Essays on Field Artillery. N. 1. which are now sent you. But such are the habits of Professional men, and the powers of Aristocratic wisdom, that His Grace not only saw no merit in the invention, but used me ill . . . when I saw that this was the humour of the Master General, I stopped at Page 48 in the English Essays that are sent you.” The remainder upon that subject will not be published till there is peace in Europe, or till after my death.

“In summer 1791, I went to Paris. . . . The Essays in French on Field Artillery which are sent to you likewise, and marked N. 2 were printed at Paris for the use of the Military Committee and Artillery Officers. There are two papers at the end of them which were not in the English Essays presented to the Duke of Richmond. Glasgow College, 1793. August 6th.”—John Anderson, Professor Natural Philosophy, to Washington.

“ . . . That the advantages of these two inventions are pointed out in printed papers which accompany this Memorial: to wit. N. 1. Essays on Field Artillery 1788. N. 2. Essais sur L'artillerie de Campagne 1791. N. 3. Of Cast Metal Cannon. N. 4. Of Anderson's Ship Gun. London: printed for John and Paul Knapton. MDCCXLIX. (24), 548 pp. 2 folded charts. 8°.

Washington's autograph on the title-page. In 1761 a claim was put forth that Benjamin Robins and not Richard Walter was the compiler of this work. This theory has never been substantiated, although it is admitted that Robins was employed as sub-editor. The work was virtually written by Anson. See Barrow's Life, p. 408. Upon Walter's share in the editing, see Notes and Queries, 5th ser. vol. iv. pp. 78, 100.

THE ASSOCIATION, &c. of the Delegates of the Colonies, at the Grand Congress, held at Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1774, versified, and adapted to Music, calculated for grave and gay Dispositions; with a Short Introduction. By Bob Jingle, Esq; Poet Laureat to the Congress.

[New York: J. Rivington] Printed in the Year M,DCC,LXXIV. 22 pp. 8°.

Bound with other pamphlets, in a volume lettered "Plays, &c." Contents given under [BICKERSTAFFE, I.] Lionel and Clarissa.

This is a piece of the loyalist poetry which was so rife in the early period of the Revolution. The most of these poetical burlesques were issued from the press of Rivington, the Tory publisher. The fact that this is a production of Rivington's, is established by a memorandum in Du Simitière's diary preserved in the Library of Congress. The title is given in Hildeburn's "Issues of the Philadelphia Press," but with a query as to its being a Philadelphia publication. The author's name is unknown. It is possible that Jonathan Odell was the writer, as the poetry is similar to his pieces published in Sargent's "Loyal Verses of Joseph Stansbury and Dr. Odell."

BACKUS, AZEL, D.D. 1765-1817.

BANCROFT, EDWARD, M.D. English naturalist and diplomatist, 1744-1821.

Experimental Researches concerning the Philosophy of Permanent Colours; and the best Means of producing them, by Dying, Calico Printing, &c. By Edward Bancroft, M.D. Fellow of the Royal Society, &c. Vol. I.

London: printed for T. Cadell, jun. and W. Davies. M DCC XCIV. xlvii, 456 pp. 8°.

The author of this work was the well-known confidential agent of Franklin during the French negotiations. He kept Franklin informed of the political happenings in England and performed such other services as his entrée into English official circles put it within his power to do. The office that he filled at this time has been a subject of much discussion. Bancroft, the historian, and others have regarded him as a British spy acting under the guise of an American agent, to keep the British Government informed of the transactions of the Americans at the French Court.

Wharton, in his "Diplomatic Correspondence of the American Revolution," has gone into the question with much care and patient investigation, with conclusions favorable to the faithfulness of Bancroft's work for America. Subsequent to the conclusion of the Peace in 1783, Bancroft visited this country and was favorably received by representative people.

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

Inscribed on the bastard title-page:—

"To George Washington President of the United States &c. &c. &c. this volume is most respectfully presented by The Author."

Both speakers made complimentary remarks upon Washington.

Dr. Bartlett said: "For while a Noah, a Solomon, a Warren and a Franklin, are in the happy enjoyment of the celestial temple, we have for our imitation, the pious and heroic example of a beloved Washington, who is not less distinguished for his private virtues, than for that wisdom, prudence, perseverance, and unwearied attention to the arduous duties of his exalted station, which has often been celebrated in strains of the most persuasive eloquence."

MS. 35 pp. Sm. 4°.

Bound with "Philosophical Transactions," 1744, and other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Miscellanies."

Dedicated "To His Excellency George Washington, Esquire, LL.D. Member of the American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, etc."

This MS. was submitted to Washington by the author for his views as to the utility of the work. He wrote to Washington as follows:—

"Altho' barely known, however, to you, I take the liberty of inclosing, for your own perusal, a short treatise on a subject little understood, or attended to, in this Country, namely, Heraldry or Blazon. This Essay, (the manuscript copy of which subscribed with my name, I beg your acceptance of,) I have presumed to inscribe to Your Excellency. . . .

"If Your Excellency should think proper to favor me with the sanction of your name, in approbation of the Essay, I shall not only rest assured, that the principles therein advanced are perfectly consistent with those which an American Citizen ought to maintain; but shall deem it a great honor done to me personally. Philadelphia Aug: 28th 1788." — From the original in the State Department.

To which Washington replied:—

"At the same time I announce to you the receipt of your obliging letter of the 28th of last month, which covered an ingenious essay on Heraldry, I have to acknowledge my obligations for the sentiments your partiality has been indulgent enough to form of me. . . .

"Imperfectly acquainted with the subject, as I profess myself to be, and persuaded of your skill as I am it is far from my design to intimate an opinion, that heraldry, coat-armour, &c., might not be rendered conducive to public and private uses with us; or that they can have any tendency unfriendly to the purest spirit of republicanism." Washington goes on to consider the opposition that an effort to establish a system of heraldry in this country might meet. He thinks that the sensitive state of the public mind in regard to class distinctions, and an existing feeling among certain people "that those, whom they wish invidiously to designate by the name of 'well born' are meditating in the first instance to distinguish themselves from their compatriots, and to wrest the dearest privileges from the bulk of the people," are objections to the publication of the work. He concludes by saying:—

"My remarks, you will please to observe, go only to the expediency, not the merits of the proposition. . . . You may, however, rest satisfied, that your composition is calculated to give favorable impressions of the science, candour, and ingenuity, with which you have handled the subject; and that in all personal considerations, I remain . . . Mt. Vernon, 7 Sept. 1788." — Sparks, vol. ix., pp. 297-299.

Barton wrote in reply:—

"I cannot forbear intruding upon your Excellency again, to return you my most sincere and thankful acknowledgments for the Candor and Politeness, with which you have been pleased to communicate to me your sentiments, on the subject of my Essay: and I should be wanting in that respect which is due to your Character, as well as committing a Violation of my own feelings, were I now to publish it. . . . Phila. Sept: 18th 1788." — From the original in the State Department.

"In 1772 he [Bartram] began explorations in the Floridas, Carolina and Georgia, the expense of which for nearly five years was borne by Dr. Fothergill, and to him William's collections and drawings were turned over. William made many contributions to the natural history of the country through which he traveled, and in 1791 published his Travels. . . . The volume contains many engravings of plants and birds from the author's own drawings."—Sketch of John and William Bartram in Popular Science Monthly, vol. 40.

Coleridge says: "The latest book of travels I know written in the spirit of the old travelers is Bartram's account of his tour in the Floridas. It is a work of high merit."

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

The letters which passed between Washington and Powel, in June, 1790, printed below, show that Washington declined the dedication of this book to him, but subscribed for its publication. Samuel Powel writes:—

"The Bearer hereof, M^r. Robert Parish, an Inhabitant of this city, informs me that his Journey to New York is undertaken with a View to obtain Subscriptions to a Work of M^r. William Bartram's, containing an Account of his Travels thro' Florida &c. & also to obtain Permission to dedicate this work to you.

"From M^r. Bartram's character as a Botanist and as a Man, I have no Doubt that his Work is an interesting one, & such as will do him credit. Philadelphia, 11 June, 1790."—
From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

"Your letter of the 11th instant was handed to me by M^r. Parish, together with proposals for publishing and requesting permission to dedicate to me, the Travels of M^r. William Bartram through Florida &c.—

"The request I declined, as I have done many others of a similar nature—not with a view to discourage a work of this kind, which I am persuaded, if executed by an able hand, may be very useful amongst us—but to avoid with propriety future applications of this nature unless where some particular circumstances might induce a compliance.

"If affixing my name as a subscriber to this work can promote the authors good intentions, I am happy in having done it; and I sincerely wish it all the success which it merits. New York, June 20th 1790."

BLAND, RICHARD. Virginia antiquary and writer, 1710–1776.

A Letter to the Clergy of Virginia, in which the Conduct of the General-Assembly is vindicated, against the Reflexions contained in a Letter to the Lords of Trade and Plantations, from the Lord-Bishop of London. By Richard Bland, Esq; one of the Representatives in Assembly for the County of Prince-George.

Williamsburg: printed by William Hunter. MDCCLX. vi, 3–20 pp. 8°.

The author of this tract, familiarly known as the “Antiquary,” was a leading statesman and writer in pre-revolutionary times in Virginia. He wrote the first treatise on the relations of the Colonies with Great Britain, from an American standpoint, under the title, “Enquiries into the Rights of the British Colonies.” This work made a decided impression, and Jefferson placed it above the Farmer's Letters in its logical presentation of the principles of colonial rights. Bland was a member of the Continental Congress of 1774 and also of the Virginia Conventions that brought forth the Declaration of Rights and other important Revolutionary measures.

The present tract is one of several controversial publications occasioned by the case of the Clergy against the Virginia Assembly, known as the "Parsons' Cause." The writer opposed the Clergy, and the Rev. John Camm's tract, "The Colonels dismounted," was aimed at him and Col. Landon Carter.

Bland's Letter to the Clergy, and a tract written presumably by Peyton Randolph, are animadverted upon by Commissary Robinson in a letter to the Bishop of London as follows:—

"My Lord, I send you two pamphlets both printed here, and received with great applause, which sufficiently shew to what a pitch of insolence many are arrived at, not only against our most worthy diocesan and the clergy, but likewise against his Majesty's most Honorable Privy Council. Such dispositions to ferment and encourage disaffection to the Church and Clergy, if suffered to proceed may at a Crisis, bring about such a change in our religion, as may alter the Constitution of the State."

For other tracts on this controversy, see titles under John Camm, Landon Carter, and Peyton Randolph in this Catalogue.

"In Maryland, he [Washington] watched with interest the experiments of John Beale Bordley, who was working upon the same lines, and was among the first to publish the results—A View of the Courses of Crops in England and Maryland." W. C. Ford.

The author was a prominent lawyer and politician, holding at different times important public positions in Maryland until 1791, when he removed to Philadelphia. From 1753 to 1766 he was prothonotary of Baltimore County; in 1766 Judge of the Provincial Court, and from 1767 to 1776 of the Admiralty Court; and during the early Revolutionary movement a member of the Provincial Council, when he advocated the colonial cause. His agricultural experiments were conducted first at his plantation near Joppa and later at Wye Island, Chesapeake Bay.

The last-named estate came into his possession in 1770 and: "There in elegant retirement, adopted into a well-educated and affluent circle of neighbors, who commanded from their own estates, with ease, all the comforts and luxuries of life, he became still more than ever attached to rural life and concerns." The writings in which he set forth the results of his experiments were first published anonymously, but later in 1799 were brought out in a collected edition under his name. An account of his career and of his writings is given in Gibson's "Biographical Sketches of the Bordley Family."

Transmitted to Washington by Samuel Powel, President of the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture, as appears by the following:—

"In conformity to the Directions of the Society, I have enclosed its Address to the public, & also a summary View of a Course of Crops &c: written by a Mr. Bordeley of Maryland. Philadelphia, July 5, 1785." — From the original in the State Department.

Transmitted to Washington by James McHenry, who wrote the following:—

"Mr Boardley put into my hands the other day the annexed little work which he requested me to send you, excusing himself from doing it least it might be thought to require a letter of thanks which he did not wish to expose you to for such a trifle. I have not had time to read it. Philadelphia 9th July, 1797."—From the original in the State Department.

Washington acknowledged its receipt as follows:—

"It is a little out of time, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th ult^o. but 'better late than never'—and an object in doing it, is to pray you to thank Mr. Bordley in my name, for the work he had the goodness to send me, through the channel of your conveyance. Mount Vernon, August 14, 1797."—From the press copy in the Lenox Library.

Washington acquired all of Bordley's works by gift from the author. In 1799 a collected edition was sent him by McHenry, Secretary of War, as appears from the extract printed below. Single works had previously been sent him by Bordley, as explained in the extracts from letters printed with their respective titles in this Catalogue.

"Mr Bordley left the inclosed collection of his works with me, with a request that I should forward it to you. There are some useful things in the book, but I believe little of it is his own. Philad. 29 July 1799."—From the original in the State Department.

[BOUCHER, REV. FRANCIS, of Barbados.]

Barbados. Printed for the Author, by John-Edward Orderson. M,DCC, LXXXV. (8), 16 pp. Sm. 4°.

Bound with "POEMS on Several Occasions. By a Gentleman of Virginia" and other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Poems."

This book was forwarded to Washington by John Tucker of Barbados at the request of the author, whom he describes as a "Worthy Clergyman of this Island." The compiler of this Catalogue has been unable to gather any facts concerning the author other than those furnished by the correspondence printed below. It is quite probable that he was related to the Rev. Jonathan Boucher whose relations with Washington are set forth in the note under the next title in this Catalogue. The letters from which the following extracts are drawn are in the State Department at Washington.

"... Your generous overture to inclose a Copy of my Treatise to His Excellency Gen! Washington, deservedly places you in the first class [of my friends]. It will give me a sensible Pleasure, & confer the highest Honor, to be known tho' only in a literary Point of View to so illustrious a Personage equally renowned with the most celebrated Worthies of Antiquity, unrivalled by any Patriot, or Hero, of the present Age & whose Memory will be perpetuated thro' the loud Trump of Fame, with distinguished Lustre to the latest Posterity. . . . Should he be at Leisure from more important Concerns, & deign to read the Dissertation, he will be pleased to make Allowances for the Inaccuracies of a Young Printer, accustomed only to the Publication of a common News Paper. For he will find it shockingly stopped, mis-spelt in some Places, & erroneous in the Application of great & small Letters. Indeed my Distance from Town would not permit me to revise & correct, the Press: and a Friend who undertook the Task had too much Business of a different Nature to attend to it. I had originally wrote it as a Sermon, & intitled it a Discourse on the Cessation of Hostilities & the Establishment of the Independence of America.

“But some learned Friends, in whose Friendship, I confided; & to whose Judgment I paid a Deference, for an Air of Novelty, term'd it a Dissertation on the Revolutions of States & Empires, tho' I candidly own, the contents do not answer the Title & should it ever be judged worthy being reprinted, I think the Appellation of a Discourse on the Cessation of Hostilities, & the Establishment of the Independence of America, more characteristical. As to the Subject Matter, I have expressed my real & genuine Sentiments. From the Course of my Studies, I was led to think the Establishment of the Independence of America an extraordinary Dispensation of Providence & effected by the Agency of it, operating thro' the Instrumentality of human Means. In this Light it struck me, and if the Generals Ideas coincide with mine his Commendation will be the greatest Compliment & I shall feel myself highly favoured by a Letter from him on the Subject. 6 June, 1785.” Francis Boucher to John Tucker, Esq.

“The sensible pleasure I feel at being Personally known to you, has Induced me to send you the Inclosed Dissertation on the Revolutions of States and Empires. It is the performance of a Worthy Clergyman of this Island: a Gentleman of a most amiable Character, and who I have the happiness of being Intimately acquainted with. . . .

“Inclosed I send you a Letter M^r Boucher wrote to me on the Subject; and to which I beg leave to Refer you; by which you will find he has under Contemplation a Code of Laws respecting the future Prosperity and Happiness of America. . . . I shall by the first Vessel to Norfolk, send to M^r Tho^s Newton and to M^r W^m Pennock at Richmond One hundred Copies to be disposed of at a Dollar Each; so that should this Gentleman's Sentiments Coincide with your Ideas; Permit me, Sir, to request the Favor of your Countenance in the Disposal of them. . . . Barbados, July 16th, 1785.” John Tucker to Washington.

BOUCHER, JONATHAN. English divine and loyalist in America, 1738-1804.

A View of the Causes and Consequences of the American Revolution; in thirteen Discourses, preached in North America between the Years 1763 and 1775: with an historical Preface. By Jonathan Boucher, A.M. and F.A.S. Vicar of Epsom in the County of Surrey.

London: printed for G. G. and J. Robinson. M.DCC.XCVII. (6), xciv, (2), 596 pp. 8°.

Inscribed “From the Author” on the bastard title-page. Pp. (2-6) are taken up with a dedication “To George Washington Esquire, of Mount Vernon, in Fairfax County, Virginia.”

The significance of the dedication lies in its expressions of regard for Washington, showing a revolution in the sentiments of the author from those expressed by him in a letter written to the leader of the colonists in 1775.

At the beginning of the Revolutionary troubles, Boucher was the incumbent of the living of Queen Anne's parish in St. George's County, Maryland, which place on account of his Tory sentiments and actions he was forced to leave in 1775, and sailed for England. He added to his church occupation that of tutoring, and had among his pupils Washington's stepson, Parke Custis. Having had friendly and even intimate relations with Washington, Boucher was very angry with the latter for his failure to use his influence in the country to protect him from the insults he endured, and under this feeling of resentment he wrote in August, 1775, a reproachful and bitter letter to Washington.

This letter, which is printed in full in the "Notes and Queries" of August 26, 1876, closes with the following stinging sentences:—

"And yet you have borne to look on, at least as an unconcerned spectator, if not an abettor, whilst, like the poor frogs in the fable, I have in a manner been pelted to death. I do not ask if such conduct in you was friendly: was it either just, manly, or generous? It was not: no, it was acting with all the base malignity of a virulent Whig. As such, sir, I resent it: and, oppressed and overborne as I may seem to be by popular obloquy, I will not be so wanting in justice to myself as not to tell you, as I now do with honest boldness, that I despise the man who, for any motives, could be induced to act so mean a part. You are no longer worthy of my friendship: a man of honour can no longer without dishonour be connected with you. With your cause I renounce you."

Washington replied to Boucher's letter presenting this work to him as follows:—

"For the honour of its dedication, and for the friendly and favourable sentiments therein expressed, I pray you to accept my acknowledgments and thanks. Not having read the book, it follows of course that I can express no opinion with respect to its political contents; but I can venture to assert beforehand, and with confidence, that there is no man in either country more zealously devoted to peace and a good understanding among the nations than I am; no one more disposed to bury in oblivion all animosities which have subsisted between them and the individuals of each. August 15, 1798."

"The troubling you to read the enclosed Oration may perhaps need an Apology, undoubtedly the liberty I have taken, to address it to you, without your express permission, renders one absolutely necessary.

"A number of concurring Circumstances, added to the subject & design prompted me to it, and a dependance on your known Candor & Friendship makes me hope, it will not give Offence. Elizabeth Town, Nov^r 12th 1793."—From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

"I have been duly favoured with your letter of the 12th Inst^d, and the Pamphlet which accompanied it.—I am sensible of the honor you have done me in the address, and am grateful for the flattering expression of it.—I shall peruse the sentiments which you have breathed in the Pamphlet with pleasure as soon as my leisure will allow me to read it. BUCHANAN, GEORGE, M. D. 1763-1807.

An Oration upon the Moral and Political Evil of Slavery. Delivered at a public Meeting of the Maryland Society, for promoting the Abolition of Slavery, and the Relief of Free Negroes, and others unlawfully held in Bondage. Baltimore, July 4th, 1791. By George Buchanan, M. D. Member of the American Philosophical Society.

Baltimore: printed by Philip Edwards. M,DCC,XCIII. 20 pp. 8°.

Bound with "A SERIOUS ADDRESS to the Rulers of America," and other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Tracts on Slavery."

This address has great significance as being one of the earliest public Abolition arguments put forth in the South. The speaker used the most forcible terms in picturing the evils of slavery and in pointing out the anomalous character of such an institution in a country proclaimed as the home of liberty. He scouted the notion of the inferior mental capacity of the Negro race, supporting his contention by giving examples of intellectual attainments in the careers of "Ignatius Sancho, whose letters are admired by all men of taste — Phillis Wheatley, who distinguished herself as a poetess — The physician of New Orleans — The Virginia Calculator — Banneker, the Maryland astronomer."

Dr. Poole, in a paper read before the Cincinnati Literary Club, November 16, 1872, gives an interesting description of this work in a consideration of the history of "Antislavery Opinions before 1800." He then relates his efforts to identify "The Physician of New Orleans" and "The Virginia Calculator," which were rewarded after considerable research and inquiry by identifying the former as James Durham, who was in 1789 a "practitioner of medicine in New Orleans. He was twenty-six years of age, married, member of the Episcopal Church, and having a professional income of $3,000 a year." The latter proved to be "Negro Tom," whose obituary was published in the "Columbian Centinel" of December 29, 1790: "Died Negro Tom, the famous African calculator, aged 80 years. He was the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, of Alexandria. Tom was a very black man. He was brought to this country at the age of fourteen, and was sold as a slave with many of his unfortunate countrymen. This man was a prodigy. Though he could neither read nor write, he perfectly acquired the use of enumeration. He could give the number of months, days, weeks, hours, minutes, and seconds for any period of time that a person chose to mention, allowing in his calculations for all the leap-years that happened in the time. . . . Thus died Negro Tom, this untaught arithmetician, this untutored scholar. Had his opportunities of improvement been equal to those of thousands of his fellow-men, neither the Royal Society of London, the Academy of Science at Paris, nor even Newton himself need have been ashamed to acknowledge him a brother in science."

The author strenuously urged the early adoption of measures looking towards the gradual abolition of slavery and the immediate public disapproval of its continuance.

Dr. Buchanan was born near Baltimore, September 19, 1763. He studied medicine in Philadelphia and abroad at Edinburgh and Paris. He was a practising physician in Baltimore for many years, and removed to Philadelphia in 1806, where he died a year later of yellow fever contracted from his duties as lazaretto physician.

Dr. Poole relates in his paper the visit of Jefferson Davis to the Boston Athenæum in 1858, when he showed him Dr. Buchanan's oration. Mr. Davis expressed great surprise at this evidence of such antislavery sentiments having been entertained and proclaimed in the South at the time of the delivery of the address. He read the paper with close attention, and nothing else in the library interested him so much.

This tract is exceedingly rare, Dr. Poole being able after fifteen years' inquiry to discover but one other copy in existence, that in the library of the New York Historical Society. A newspaper cutting containing Dr. Poole's address is inserted in this volume.

"The inclosed pamphlet on Orcharding, addressed to you by the author, I received this evening under cover from Mr King.

"Another copy is also addressed to you and has the following addition on the cover —

In the mean time I may find an opportunity of reading it."

To which Washington replied: —

"MOUNT VERNON 6th Nov^r 1797.

"DEAR SIR — Since writing to you a few days ago — I have been favoured with your letters of the 26th and 30th Ult^o . . .

"It would be more formal than necessary to introduce Mr Bucknall's Orchardist to the Philosophic Society of Philadelphia otherwise than through you. — If then you will be so good as to relate the manner in which it came, & present it with my best respects to that body, I will thank you." — From the original in the Pickering Collection.

BURGES, BARTHOLOMEW.

BURKE, ÆDANUS. Soldier and jurist, 1743-1802

Considerations on the Society or Order of Cincinnati; lately instituted by the Major-Generals, Brigadier-Generals, and other Officers of the American Army. Proving that it creates a Race of hereditary Patricians, or Nobility. Interspersed with Remarks on its Consequences to the Freedom and Happiness of the Republic. Addressed to the People of South-Carolina, and their Representatives. By Cassius. Supposed to be written by Ædanus Burke, Esquire, one of the Chief Justices of the State of South-Carolina.

Philadelphia: printed and sold by Robert Bell. M,DCC,LXXXIII. 16 pp. 8°.

Bound with "The Institution of the Society of the Cincinnati" in a volume of pamphlets lettered "Cincinnati."

Washington submitted this work to Jefferson in asking for his opinion upon the Society of the Cincinnati. In a letter to Jefferson dated Mount Vernon, 8 April, 1784, Washington writes: "The pamphlet ascribed to Mr. Burke, as I am told, had its effect — people are alarmed, especially in the Eastern States — how justly, or how contrary to the avowed principles of the Society, and the purity of their motives, I will not declare; lest it should appear that I wanted to bias your judgment, rather than to obtain an opinion — which if you please, might be accompanied with sentiments, under the information here given respecting the most eligible measures to be pursued by the Society at their next meeting." — Ford's Washington, vol. x. pp. 387-388.

"Mr. Burke happened to have recently published a pamphlet on the affairs of his own State, casting down the glove to Governor Rutledge and the dominant faction of the day. It was by these very men that the Institution of the Cincinnati in South Carolina was most warmly espoused. This was sufficient to fire his mind against the scheme. With a spirited but specious pen he attacked its origin, its constitution, and its consequences." — Winthrop Sargent in North American Review, vol. 77, p. 293.

The work was reprinted at New York in 1783 and at Hartford in 1783 and in 1784. A description of the various editions with a list of some of the controversial articles upon it is given in the "Bibliography of the Society of the Cincinnati," by Lloyd P. Smith, published in the Bulletin of the Library Company of Philadelphia for July, 1885. A pamphlet in reply to Burke appeared at Philadelphia in 1783 (reprinted at Hartford in 1784) under the title "Observations on a late pamphlet entitled 'Considerations upon the Society of the Order of the Cincinnati,' clearly evincing the innocence and propriety of that honorable and respectable institution. . . . By an obscure Individual."

[CALLENDER, JAMES THOMSON. Died, 1803.]

The History of the United States for 1796; including a Variety of interesting Particulars relative to the Federal Government previous to that Period.

Philadelphia: from the press of Snowden & M'Corkle. 1797. viii, 312 pp. 8°.

The author was a Scotchman who came to Philadelphia in 1790. He wielded a scurrilous pen, and was soon writing bitter attacks on the Federalists, in the pay of the Anti-Federalists, among whom at one time was none other than Thomas Jefferson. He afterwards sold his services to the Federalists.

The present work is one of his most notorious productions. Chapters V. and VI. are devoted to unfounded charges against Hamilton's financial integrity, which brought forth from Hamilton the famous "Reynolds Pamphlet," wherein the real offence of the Secretary of the Treasury is placed before the world. Callender returned to the charges with increased venom in his "Sketches of the History of America," Philadelphia, 1796.

McMaster says that in a period noteworthy for its libellous and malicious productions, Callender outdid them all in vituperation and falsehood.

Washington directed Clement Biddle, who acted as his business agent at this time, to purchase this book, as appears by the following:—

"Send me the History of the United States (by whom I know not) but the one which contains Nos. 5 and 6 alluded to in Col^o Hamilton's late Pamphlet. Mount Vernon, 15th Sept 1797." P.S. of a letter from Washington to Clement Biddle.—From the original in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

[CAMM, REV. JOHN. 1718-1779.]

A Review of The Rector Detected: or the Colonel Reconnoitred.
Part the First.

Williamsburg: Printed by Joseph Royle, MDCCLXIV. 29 pp. Sm. 4°.

The author for twenty-eight years was connected with William and Mary College as Professor and President. President Lyon G. Tyler says: "A man of high spirit and of great talent, he was loyal to the King and Church, but unfortunately involved the College in the political struggles of the times." He was a pronounced Tory, and in 1777 was dismissed from the Presidency of the College. See William and Mary College Quarterly, vol. i. no. 2.

The "Two penny act" in opposition to which Camm took a leading part, was passed by the Virginia Assembly in 1758, and was in some respects a revival of a law passed in 1755, which continued in force for ten months. The act provided that payments of salaries to the clergy might be made either in currency or in tobacco. The motive of this was to relieve the people from paying the clergy in tobacco, which had risen greatly in price in consequence of short crops.

Camm was very active in opposing the law, and was attacked by Col. Landon Carter in a tract called "The Rector detected," to which the clergyman replied in the present publication. Later he brought out in Maryland a tract called "The Colonels dismantled," being a reply to the works of Carter and of Colonel Bland. In 1759 he went to England to plead the cause of the clergy before the Lords' Commissioners of Trade, and succeeded in having the law disallowed. The Bishop of London wrote a letter to the Board condemning the law, which called forth the two tracts catalogued in this list under Richard Bland, "A Letter to the Clergy of Va.," and Peyton Randolph, "A Letter to the Right Reverend Father in God," etc.

The cause of the clergy is set forth in correspondence between the Bishop of London and the ministers, printed in Perry's "Historical Collections relating to the American colonial church," vol. i. The history of the controversy is given in Meade's "Old Churches, Ministers, and Families of Virginia," vol. i., pp. 216-225; and some account is given in Gillett's article on "Tobacco and the Clergy in Virginia" in the "Historical Magazine," 3d ser., vol. i., pp. 14-18. Henry's "Life, Correspondence, and Speeches of Patrick Henry," vol. i., reviews the case and gives an account of Patrick Henry's speech in defence of the law.

The Washington Library contains four of the tracts issued in this controversy. They are the present publication by Camm; Richard Bland's "Letter to the Clergy;" Landon Carter's "The Rector detected," and the Letter to the Bishop of London, written presumably by Peyton Randolph.

The Carter and Camm treatises were bought by Washington, as appears from an entry under date of April 16, 1764, in his Ledger preserved in the State Department.

Bound with "POEMS on Several Occasions. By a Gentleman of Virginia" and other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Poems, &c."

The author early in the Revolutionary agitation had entered into an agreement with his clerical friends, Bishop Seabury and Dr. Inglis, Rector of Trinity Church, to "watch and confute all publications in pamphlets or newspapers, that threatened mischief to the Church of England and the British Government in America." Such was the hostility felt against them that Drs. Chandler, Cooper, and Seabury were compelled to go into hiding, and for a considerable period they successfully concealed themselves in the old Wilkins mansion on Castle Hill Neck, Westchester.

“Toute nation, toute individu capable de penser, tout homme surtout qui a fait cas de la liberté, ne doit prononcer qu'avec respect le nom de Washington, nom à jamais célèbre. Tous vous doivent des tributs de gloire & d'honneur. Trouvez bon, je vous prie, Mon seigneur, que je vous présente le mien dans un exemplaire de l'Amérique Délivrée. C'est le premier ouvrage en vers où l'on ait célébré la grande et mémorable révolution, à laquelle Votre Excellence a eu plus de part que personne. Ce Poëme n'a pas à beaucoup près toute la perfection dont il est susceptible; et je ne me dissimule pas que l'auteur est resté au-dessous de son sujet; mais l'à-propos me fait espérer que votre Excellence ne le dédaignera pas. Au surplus, il Vous est offert par un homme qui met du plus haut prix la liberté, et qui est prêt à donner son sang ou pour l'obtenir ou pour la maintenir.

“J. A. CRAJENSCHOT.

M. Gouverneur Morris en a un Exemplaire. . . J'ose donc espérer que votre cœur ne sera point insensible à ce faible tableau de mes misfortunes, bien au-dessous de la vérité, je vous en assure; je compte que votre belle âme, dont j'ai si bien peint la sensibilité en tant d'endroits de l'Amérique délivrée, ne lira cette lettre avec indifférence, & que nous pourrons bientôt ma famille & moi, vous mettre au rang de nos premiers bienfaiteurs. Charleston, 10 juillet 1787.

THE COLUMBIAN Magazine, or Monthly Miscellany containing a View of the History, Literature, Manners & Characters of the Year 1787-1791. Vols. 1-5.

Philadelphia: printed for T. Seddon, W. Spotswood, C. Cist, & J. Trenchard. [1787-1791.] 5 v. in 4. Illustrated. Plates. 8°. The imprint of vols. 3 & 4 reads: Printed for the Proprietors.

The first number is dated September, 1786. Vol. V. is entitled The Universal Asylum and Columbian Magazine for 1791.

A. H. Smyth in his "The Philadelphia Magazines and their Contributors, 1741-1850," gives a brief account of the origin and career of this publication. It was started in September, 1786, upon the model of the Gentleman's Magazine and the London Magazine under the direction of Matthew Carey, T. Seddon, W. Spotswood, and J. Trenchard. It was the most ambitious enterprise in magazine publication that had appeared in this country. In the first number Matthew Carey began the publication of a "Life of General Greene," and contributed to the first volume "The Shipwreck," "A Philosophical Dream," and "Hard Times." Carey withdrew from participation in the editorship in December, 1786. In January, 1789, the sole ownership of the magazine came into the hands of John Trenchard, an engraver by profession, who made most of the plates. Jeremy Belknap wrote for the work "The Foresters, an American Tale," in which he depicted in a humorous style the history of the United States. The magazine was edited for a period of nearly three years by Alexander James Dallas, who in 1787 undertook to report for it the proceedings of the Pennsylvania Convention for the ratification of the Federal Constitution, but he was obliged to discontinue printing them in consequence of having offended the Federalists, who withdrew their subscriptions from the magazine.

The matter relating to Washington in the work consists of the following:—

Vol. 1. Letters relative to the treatment of Captain Asgill, while prisoner in the American army; being a full refutation of the charges of inhumanity exhibited in London against General Washington, by David Humphreys, with portrait of Washington engraved by J. Trenchard; "Portrait of General Washington. Translated from the French of Mr. Mandrillon, by a very Young Lady"; Poem by "Emelia," addressed to General Washington in the year 1777, after the battles of Trenton and Princeton; Mount Vernon, an Ode inscribed to General Washington, August, 1786, by Colonel Humphreys; Italian sonnet, by Signor Domenico Bertini in praise of General Washington.

Vol. 3. Account of the preparations at Gray's Ferry, on the river Schuylkill, and of the reception of General Washington there, April 20, 1789 (illustrated); Account of the manner of receiving at Trenton, his Excellency, George Washington, President of the United States, on his route to the Seat of Federal Government, (illustration).

Vol. 4. A Sketch of the character of the President of the United States from Dr. Ramsey's History of the American Revolution; Address to both Houses of Congress by the President, Dec. 8, 1791.

Washington received the numbers of this magazine for 1786 as a gift from the publishers as appears by the letters printed below.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec^r 10 [1787]

SIR — We beg leave to present you with a copy of each of the Numbers of the Columbian Magazine which have been already printed, & hope they will meet your approbation.

We are, Sir, your very humble Servants

T. SEDDON & C^o.

His Excell^y Gen. Washington.

Copy of original letter preserved in the State Department.

“I have received your letter of the 10th of Decemb^r together with the several numbers of the Columbian Magazine.

“I thank you for your attention to me in sending the several numbers which have been published, & wish you to consider me a subscriber; as I conceive a publication of that kind may be the means of conveying much useful knowledge to the community which might otherwise be lost, and when it is properly conducted, it should, in my opinion be properly encouraged. Mo^t Vernon 9th Jan^y 1787.” Washington to Mess^{rs} Seddon & Co. — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

Washington became a subscriber, and his Cash-book preserved in the State Department contains the record of payments for the subscription in 1787.

A receipt from William Spotswood to Washington, for six months' subscription, July to December, 1788, was sold by Mr. Henkels of Philadelphia (Henkels' Catalogue No. 751. Historical Papers of Col. David Greer and Major John Clarke).

COMBER, THOMAS, D.D. Dean of Durham, 1645–1699.

Short Discourses upon the whole Common-Prayer. Designed to inform the Judgment, and excite the Devotion of such as daily use the same. The fourth Edition. By Tho. Comber, D.D.

London, printed for J. Nicholson. . . . MDCCLXII. (16), 460, (4) pp. Plate. 8^o.

The first fly-leaf contains Washington's autograph when 13 years of age; his own name and that of his mother are written together in the same hand. Against the former George C. Washington has written “The above is Gen^l Washington's autograph when 13 years of age,” and under the latter he writes, “The above name of his Mother, is in the handwriting of Gen^l Washington at 13 years of age — which will be seen by comparison with his writing of that age in Spark's work.” The same fly-leaf contains the autographs of Washington's father and mother, “Auguste Washington, his Book 1727 and Mary Washington”; and the title-page has the autograph of the former in the same form. Upon the fly-leaves, at the end of the volume, the youthful Washington has written his father's name several times.

The volume has been rebacked, otherwise it is in the same binding of old calf as it was when Washington handled and probably studied it in his boyhood.

Edited by Thaddeus Mason Harris. Presented to Washington by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, as appears by the correspondence printed below, from the MS. Records of that Society :—

"Desirous to enlarge the boundaries of Social Happiness, and to vindicate the Ceremonies of their Institution, This Grand Lodge have published a Book of Constitutions ; (and a Copy for your acceptance accompanies this) which by discovering the principles which actuate, will speak the Eulogy of the society : though they fervently wish the conduct of its Members, may prove its higher recommendation." — Address of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts to Washington.

To this address, which was signed by John Cutler, G. M., Josiah Bartlett, S. G. W., and Mungo Mackay, J. G. W., Washington replied :—

"Flattering as it may be to the human Mind; and truly honorable as it is, to receive from our Fellow-Citizens, Testimonies of approbation for, Exertions to promote the Public Welfare, it is not less pleasing to know, that the Milder Virtues of the heart are highly respected by a Society whose liberal principles, are founded in the immutable laws of Truth and Justice.

"To enlarge the Sphere of social happiness, is worthy the benevolent design of a Masonic institution; and it is most fervently to be wished that the Conduct of every Member of the Society, as well as those publications that discover the principles which actuate them may tend to convince Mankind, that the grand Object of Masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race.

"While I beg your acceptance of my thanks for the Book of Constitutions, which you have sent me, and for the honor you have done me in the Dedication, permit me to assure you that I feel all those emotions of Gratitude, which your affectionate Address, and cordial wishes are calculated to inspire. And I sincerely pray that the Great Architect of the Universe, may bless you here and receive you hereafter into his Immortal Temple."

Stitched in the same covers is a pamphlet of 36 pp., containing two addresses from Congress as follows:—

— To the People of Great Britain, from the Delegates, appointed by the Several English Colonies of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, and South-Carolina, to consider of their Grievances in General Congress, at Philadelphia, September 5th, 1774.

— To the Inhabitants of the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of New-Castle, Kent and Sussex in Delaware; Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

The first Address, which was drafted by John Jay, occupies pp. 1-15 of the pamphlet. It is reprinted in Henry P. Johnston's "The Correspondence and public Papers of John Jay, vol. I. pp. 17-31.

The second, was drafted by Richard Henry Lee, and occupies pp. 16-36 of the pamphlet. It is printed in "Memoir of the Life of Richard Henry Lee, by his grandson," vol. I. pp. 119-133.

On the 21st of October, 1774, the following order was passed by Congress:—

Ordered, that the Address to the people of Great Britain, and the Memorial to the Inhabitants of the British Colonies be immediately committed to the press; and that no more than one hundred and twenty copies of each be struck off, without further orders from the Congress." — Quoted by Ford in his Bibliography of the Continental Congress.

This variety of the issues of The Association and the Two Addresses is not mentioned by Ford in his bibliography of the Continental Congress. He notes the separate issues, but not that of the two together.

The addresses were reprinted in England with the title: "Two letters from the American Continental Congress, held at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1774. The one addressed to the People of Great Britain, and the other to the Inhabitants of the American Colonies. Coventry: printed and sold by J. W. Piercy. 1775."

All three of the documents were issued later in 1774 with the "Bill of Rights" and other papers under the title: "Extracts from the Votes and Proceedings of the American Continental Congress, held at Philadelphia on the 5th of September 1774," and, with the addition of other papers, were several times reprinted in the subsequent proceedings of the Congress.

A facsimile of the original draft of the Declaration is given in Dr. George H. Moore's monograph, "John Dickinson, the Author of the Declaration on taking up Arms in 1775." New York, 1890. Dr. Moore goes into the question of the authorship of the paper and establishes Dickinson's claims. The first and second drafts made by Jefferson for the Declaration are printed in parallel columns in Ford's "Writings of Thomas Jefferson," vol. I. pp. 462-476. Jefferson's paper was not accepted by the committee, and it was submitted to Dickinson, who prepared "an entire new statement," but inserting sentences from Jefferson's draft, which was adopted.

"That production [the Declaration] was one of the most popular ones ever issued by Congress. It was read amid thundering huzzas in every market place, and amid fervent prayers in nearly every pulpit in the colonies. The commanders read it at the head of our armies." Randall.

It was read, July 18, 1775, "on Prospect Hill amidst such shouts that the British on Bunker Hill put themselves in array for battle." Bancroft. Dr. Langdon, President of Harvard College, read it July 15, 1775, to the army at Cambridge in the presence of Washington.

Washington sent a copy of this to George William Fairfax in England, as appears by the following:—

“Enclosed I send you a second address from the Congress to the inhabitants of Great Britain; as also a declaration setting forth the causes and necessity of their taking up arms. 25 July, 1775.”

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Political Tracts." Contents given under VIRGINIA. Proceedings of the Convention, 20th March, 1775.

This Address was drawn up by James Madison, and the plan for raising revenues to pay the debts of the Revolutionary War which is set forth in the paper was reported by a committee consisting of Madison, Hamilton, Gorham, Fitzsimons, and Rutledge. Accompanying the Address are the following documents : —

An Estimate of the national Debt; The Report by Hamilton, Dec. 16, 1782, on the refusal of the State of Rhode Island to pay the impost duties; Estimate of the Produce of the Impost on imported Articles; Papers on the French and Dutch loans; The Address and Petition of the Officers of the Army of the United States to Congress in regard to half-pay or other compensation, Dec., 1782; Extract from Washington's letter to the President of Congress, in regard to the Newburgh Addresses; Letters by [John Armstrong], known as the Newburgh Addresses, to the Officers of the Army upon their grievances; General Orders of March 11, 1783; Washington's Address to the Officers and his letter to the President of Congress reporting the result of the Convention of the Officers, Mar. 18, 1783; with detailed report of the proceedings of the meeting.

Washington's letter of March 12, 1783, to the President of Congress was referred to a committee consisting of Gilman, Dyer, Clark, Rutledge, and Mercer. The committee was thus made up, Madison said, to "saddle with this embarrassment [the disaffection of the officers of the Army] the men who had opposed the measures necessary for satisfying the Army, viz.: the half-pay and permanent funds; against one or other of which the individuals had voted." Madison further remarks that "the steps taken by the General to avert the gathering storm, and his professions of inflexible adherence to his duty to Congress and to his Country, excited the most affectionate sentiments towards him."

COOMBE, THOMAS, D.D. 1747-1822.

A Sermon, preached before the Congregations of Christ Church and St. Peter's, Philadelphia, on Thursday, July 20, 1775. Being the Day recommended by the Honorable Continental Congress for a General Fast throughout the twelve united Colonies of North-America. By Thomas Coombe, M. A. Chaplain to the Most Noble the Marquis of Rockingham. Published by Request.

Philadelphia : printed by John Dunlap. M,DCC,LXXV. (4), 29 pp. 8°.

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

Bound with this in a pamphlet volume lettered "Political Sermons" are: Hurt, J. The Love of our Country. — Evans, I. A Discourse delivered near York in Virginia. — A Sermon, on the present Situation. Phila., 1782. — Evans, I. A Discourse delivered in New-York. — Langdon, S. The Republic of the Israelites. — Smith, W., D.D. A Sermon on the present Situation. — Langdon, S. Government corrupted by Vice, and recovered by Righteousness. — Gordon, William. The Separation of the Jewish Tribes, etc.

The author was born in Philadelphia in 1747. From 1768 to 1772 he was chaplain to the Marquis of Rockingham. In 1772 he was chosen assistant minister of Christ Church and St. Peter's. He advocated the cause of the colonies up to the time of the Declaration of Independence, when on account of his church vows he declined to take a pronounced step; and was regarded with suspicion by the patriots. In 1778 he went to England, and in 1794 became chaplain in ordinary to the king.

Washington in his Diary for Oct. 2, 1774, says "Went to Christ Church." Dr. Toner says: "Christ Church was the earliest Episcopal organization founded in Philadelphia. The Society erected, in 1695, a small wooden building on Second street, between Market and Arch streets. The structure was enlarged at different times, and was finally, about 1755, entirely rebuilt. The service Washington attended was in this handsome new structure." John Adams visited the church in 1774 and records having heard "Mr. Combe." Washington probably listened to the same preaching.

Without autograph or book-plate. Entered on the Inventory: "Letters of American Farmer, (in French), 3 do [vols.] 4.50."

Concerning this work, Washington wrote in 1788 as follows:—

"Of books at present existing, Mr. Jefferson's 'Notes on Virginia' will give the best idea to a foreigner; and the 'American Farmer's Letters' written by Mr. Crèvecœur (commonly called Mr. St. John), the French Consul in New York, who actually resided twenty years as a farmer in that State, will afford a great deal of profitable and amusing information, respecting the private life of the Americans, as well as the progress of agriculture, manufactures, and arts, in their country. Perhaps the picture he gives, though founded in fact, is in some instances embellished with rather too flattering circumstances. 19 June, 1788."—Washington to Richard Henderson. Sparks, vol. ix. p. 386.

Given to Washington by the author and acknowledged by him as follows:—

"The letter you did me the honor of writing to me by Commodore Paul Jones came safe; as did the volumes of the Farmer's Letters. For both, particularly for the compliment of the letter, I pray you to accept my best thanks." Phil^a 9 July, 1787.—Sparks vol. ix. p. 259.

THE CRITICAL Review; or, Annals of Literature. November, 1775; May, June, 1793; September, 1796.

London, printed for A. Hamilton. 1793–1796. 4 unbound numbers. 8°.

The number for September 1796 is inscribed on the cover in Washington's handwriting, "From M^r Jn^o Carey, London." This number contains a critical notice of the publication entitled, "Epistles domestic, confidential and official from General Washington," now known as the spurious letters.

A letter from Carey to Washington preserved in the State Department discloses the fact that he was the author of the review, the original MS. of which he sent with a letter. Carey wrote as follows :—

“ I have the honor of transmitting to your Excellency a copy of the Critical Review, containing remarks on a publication which bears your name, — as mentioned in a letter of Sept. 9, which I took the liberty of addressing to your Excellency. . . . At the same time I beg leave to assure your Excellency, that had I known from what Source the letters were derived, I should not have thought it worth while to trouble your Excellency on the Subject. To the politeness of the American minister, Mr King, I am indebted for my knowledge of the fabrication, which of course rendered it necessary to make many alterations from the manuscript inclosed in the letter above mentioned. London Octob. 1. 1796.”

To this Washington replied :—

“ I have received your letters of the 8th & 9th Sept; and 1st of Oct

“ I am much indebted to you for the Interest you feel, to have the imposition that has been attempted upon the public detected. — With great truth you pronounce it such. — I shall have something on this subject to be used when I shall be permitted to enjoy peace and repose. —

The letter of transmittal and Washington's reply are printed below. The former from the original and the latter from the Letter-Book, preserved in the State Department:—

WORKINGHAM BERKSHIRE May 1st 1794.

SIR,—By the Will of the late Dr Wilson Prebendary of Westminster & Rector of S. Stephens Walbrook in London I was directed to transmit to your Excellency a Copy of his Fathers Works, the Venerable Bishop of Sodor & Man; and the English Bible in which are contained the Notes of the good Bishop.—I have yet delayed to fulfill the desire of my friend that I might at the same time have the honour of requesting a place in your Library for a work of my own A Concordance, by me intended as a Companion to the Bible. That you may long enjoy the Honours you have so well deserved in a country of peace & prosperity is the fervent wish and prayer of Your Excellency's most obedient Servant and admirer

CLEMENT CRUTTWELL.

To this Washington replied:—

"It has so happened . . . that I have been very deficient in not acknowledging at an earlier period the receipt of your obliging favor of the 1st of May, last year, accompanying a copy of the works of the venerable Bishop of Sodor & Man, which . . . you had the goodness to send me.

"Accept now I pray you, Sir, my thanks for the part you have executed in this business; and the assurances that my not having done it before, did not proceed from want of respect to the memory of the author—his son—or yourself, but to mere accident. Philadelphia 10th July 1795."

DAVIDSON, ROBERT, D.D. 1750-1812.

A Sermon, on the Freedom and Happiness of the United States of America, preached in Carlisle, on the 5th Oct. 1794. And published at the Request of the Officers of the Philadelphia and Lancaster Troops of Light Horse. By Robert Davidson, D.D. Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Carlisle, and One of the Professors in Dickinson College.

Philadelphia: printed by Samuel H. Smith for Robert Campbell. M.DCC. XCIV. 29 pp. 8°.

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Sermons, &c." Contents given under [WHITE, W.] The Case of the Episcopal Churches.

This Sermon was delivered in the presence of President Washington, Governor Mifflin, and other officials. The occasion of its delivery was the gathering at Carlisle of the troops about to march for the suppression of the "Whiskey insurrection." Judge Gibson in his reminiscences of the Insurrection relates: "The rendezvous of the northern division, by far the strongest, was at Carlisle, where the President joined it as Commander-in-chief. Passing through the town without dismounting at the quarters proposed for him, he proceeded at once, under an escort of New Jersey dragoons, to the plain at the south of it, where ten thousand volunteers, the flower of the Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania youth, were drawn up to be reviewed by him. Finer looking fellows were perhaps never brought into line; and their uniforms, arms and accoutrements were splendid. But the observed of all observers was Gen. Washington. Taking off his small revolutionary cocked hat, and letting it fall at his side with inimitable grace, he rode slowly along the front, receiving, with a puff of military pride, the salute of the regiments with drums and colors; of the officers with swords and spontoons; and of the private soldiers with presented arms. His eye appeared to fall on every man in the line; and every man in the line appeared to feel that it did so. No man ever sat so nobly in a saddle, and no man's presence was ever so dignified. To a boy, as the writer then was, it was an impressive spectacle, that review."

In his address to the soldiers the preacher said: "You are called upon to act under the direction and authority of Him, who never exposed to danger a single life without necessity; and who graced his victories with that clemency which is the greatest ornament of true courage, and one of the surest tests of magnanimity."

Washington records in his Diary the fact of his listening to the Sermon as follows:—

"1794. Oct. 5th — Sunday.

"Went to the Presbyterian meeting and heard Doct: Davidson Preach a political Sermon, recommendatory of order & good government, and excellence of that of the United States."

This is very likely the work referred to in a letter to Washington, as follows:—

"A Treatise on the Poor Laws is just come out, as it is highly spoken of and as an object of high Importance to all States, I have sent one to Your Excellency, in hopes some usefull hints may be found in it. Washington's autograph on title-page. Title on back is "End of Time," under which it is entered in the Inventory. These two books are evidently parts of a projected general work on Time.

The author wrote a long letter to Washington in 1790 in which he described the plan of his work, and transmitted a MS. of what he called one Branching or Division of this extraordinary literary performance. The following is an extract from the letter:—

"... after 10 months more were added to my Stay in Britain I felt the Lord's Will directed me to America, where this day I begin to be deeply concerned to address thee O Hesperian George! on the same great and awful Subject, which I have been led to trace through Time's whole Period.

"The Openings on this Subject I have compiled in a work under the Title of The Time, wherewith Man the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil is permitted in Eight Branchings (these are called the Divisions or Chapters) to attain the great concerns of God and his creatures, which are worthy of the most serious inquiry, the more especially, as they are in the Capacity of the first Man (the Patriarch if he pleases) of this extensive Continent, whose Inhabitants to the Number of many Myriads may by thy Example and precept be disposed duly to meet their God coming at this soon expiring Midnight :

"The Preface of the Work (an Epitome of the whole) I beg leave to affix. Should by thy composed and patient reading the Lord be pleased to reach thy heart to long for the whole Work, I hope at thy requiring I shall be furnished with the ability to transcribe and forward one Branching (or Division) after another. Thy assured Friend

"JOHN WILLIAM GERARD DE BRAHM."

1769. May 18. By the Farmers Letters. 3/6.

"While the leaders of the opposition throughout the country were doubtful and hesitating; there appeared in the Pennsylvania Chronicle for the 2d of December, 1767, the first of a series of letters on the political situation, afterwards known as the 'Farmer's Letters.' The first letter was dated on the 7th of November, the anniversary of the day upon which William of Orange had landed in England, a day of ill omen to those who the Colonists contended were governing them in the same arbitrary manner as that in which James II. had governed their forefathers. The letters, fourteen in number, followed one another in quick succession, and they were read by men of all classes and opinions throughout the Continent as no other work of a political kind had hitherto been read in America. It was, of course, soon known that John Dickinson was their author, and people remembered that he was the person who had formulated what was a genuine Bill of Rights in the Stamp Act Congress. . . . To most Americans they [the Farmer's Letters] became, until the beginning of the [Revolutionary] war, a genuine political text-book, and their maxims were received with absolute confidence." — Stillé's Life and Times of John Dickinson.

KINGSTON JAMAICA, May 10th 1790

SIR—The Respect which the World shews to your eminent Virtues and exalted Rank, has induced me to forward the inclosed Papers, relative to the Slave-Trade; which I beg leave to present to You, thro' the Indulgence of the Vice-President, to whom I have the Honour to be known.

“In obedience to the command of the President of the United States, I have the honor to inform you that the Pamphlets relative to the Slave trade which you have been so obliging as to present to him thro' the hands of the Vice President have been received, and he requests you to accept his best thanks for the same with acknowledgments for your very polite letter which accompanied them. Given to Washington by the author. Washington's letter of acknowledgment is printed below in full, on account of the interest attaching to it as showing the attention given by Washington to a subject of philological and historical import:—

“I am to acknowledge the receipt of the letter and Pamphlet, which you have been pleased to forward to me by a late conveyance; and to desire you will accept my thanks for them.

“You have been rightly informed relative to the application, which had been made to me from Europe, for Documents concerning the Indian language. It seems that a Society of Literati are endeavouring to make discoveries respecting the origin and derivation of different Languages. In the prosecution of this curious study, all judicious philological communication must be important. Yours I consider will not be deficient in that quality. I have long regretted that so many Tribes of the American Aborigines should have become almost or entirely extinct, without leaving such vestiges, as that the genius and idiom of their language might be traced. Perhaps, from such sources, the descent or kindred of nations, whose origins are lost in remote antiquity or illiterate darkness, might be more rationally investigated, than in any other mode. The task you have imposed upon yourself, of preserving some materials for this purpose, is certainly to be commended.

“I entreat you, Sir, to believe that I am duly penetrated with your friendly and pious wishes for my happiness and that “I am, with much respect

Yours &c

G^o WASHINGTON.”

In one of these, or in some other way, I find by a writer in a Richmond paper, a private letter of mine to M^r Gouv^t Morris is given to the public. FILSON, JOHN. Historian, 1747?-1788.

The Discovery, Settlement and present State of Kentucke : and an Essay towards the Topography, and Natural History of that important Country : to which is added, An Appendix, containing,

- I. The Adventures of Col. Daniel Boon, one of the first Settlers, comprehending every important Occurrence in the political History of that Province.
- II. The Minutes of the Piankashaw council, held at Post St. Vincents, April 15, 1784.

- III. An Account of the Indian Nations inhabiting within the Limits of the Thirteen United States, their Manners and Customs, and Reflections on their Origin.
- IV. The Stages and Distances between Philadelphia and the Falls of the Ohio ; from Pittsburg to Pensacola and several other Places. — The Whole illustrated by a new and accurate Map of Kentucke and the Country adjoining, drawn from actual Surveys. By John Filson.

Wilmington, printed by James Adams, 1784. 118 pp. 8°.

The map is lacking. For a long time the existence of the map described on the title-page was questioned by bibliographers, as no copies of the work having the map could be found. The theory that the map was issued separately was held by some authorities. In 1884 Reuben T. Durrett traced a copy of the map to the Harvard Library, and by the courtesy of the Librarian he was enabled to present a heliotype reproduction of it in his work on John Filson, issued as the first publication of the Filson Club.

The question of the method of publication of the book and map receives fresh light from the correspondence printed below, copied from the Washington Papers in the State Department. It will be observed that in his letter of 15th of March, 1785, Filson writes to Washington that he sends him "a book and a map enfolded," and that in his letter of acknowledgment Washington thanks Filson for "your map & history of Kentucke." The copy here catalogued shows that the map was at one time attached to the book, and has been torn out, as a fragment of the margin pasted on the title-page remains. In Filson's letter he also speaks of having "consigned a number of these books & maps to Mr John Page at Rosewel." This seems to afford evidence that the book and map were sold together; but does not show conclusively that the map was attached to the volume.

Washington's autograph on the title-page. Gift from the author, who wrote:—

WILMINGTON Feby 8th 1785

"I herewith send you a book and a map enfolded, requesting your Excellency to receive them, and if upon perusal you think them worth notice, I presume you will favour the following requests with a letter to the Author, Containing a permission to dedicate a second edition of this narrative to Your Excellency, to which will be added interesting accounts. About the first of March the printer will begin the work. I request you will honour the publication with your sentiments respecting the Commercial Circumstances practicable to be effected between the waters of Potowmack and Cheat rivers : This, Sir, may be of practical utility and Certainly more acceptable from you than any other. Your concern for the public good so gloriously manifested to the world, and so deeply impressed on the hearts of your grateful Countrymen will by this favour render the publication more acceptable and beneficial to mankind. In November last I consigned a number of these books & maps to Mr John Page at Rosewel desiring him to forward one to you, and a letter imparting the substance of this, but probably they are miscarried. If we are to expect your addition to this work it is humbly wished for before March. At present will subscribe myself Your Excellencies sincere friend and humble Serv^t

JOHN FILSON.

P. S. perhaps a few of these would be acceptable in your part.
GENERAL WASHINGTON."

From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied : —

“ It was but a few days ago that I was favor'd with your letter of the 8th of Feb^r accompanied by your Map & history of Kentucke, for which you will please accept my thanks. Those which you expect were handed to me by M^r Page of Rosewell, are not yet arrived ; nor have I heard anything from that gentleman respecting them.

Previous to the receipt of the above letter, I had written & addressed my letter to the care of M^r Dunlap printer in Phil^a — taking it for granted you must have received it 'ere this, I beg leave to refer to its contents, as aught I could say on this Subject would be only repetition. Mt. Vernon 15th March 1785.” — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

PUBLICATIONS. The titles are given below after the preliminary Notes.

In regard to Washington's acquisition of these agricultural publications, the following is found in Sir John Sinclair's "Correspondence," London, 1831, vol. 2: "About the year 1790, I began to be engaged in those statistical inquiries, regarding the general state of Scotland . . . ; and having resolved to send copies of the first papers which were printed respecting those inquiries, to several distinguished characters in foreign countries, I could not think of neglecting an individual, so pre-eminently conspicuous, as the President of the United States of America. In answer to the first letter I had the honour of addressing to him, I received the communication, dated 20th day of October, 1792.

I embraced every opportunity of transmitting to him, from time to time, the additional papers which were afterwards printed on the subjects of our correspondence, accompanied by letters, of which I have only a copy of one. . . ."

Washington's letter above referred to reads in part as follows:—

"PHILADELPHIA, Oct^r 20th 1792

"I have received your letter of the 18th of May, enclosing the Pamphlets & papers which you had the goodness to send me.

"While I beg your acceptance of my acknowledgment, for the polite mark of attention in transmitting these things to me, I flatter myself you will be assured that I consider the subject therein recommended as highly important to Society, whose best interests I hope will be promoted by a proper investigation of them, and the happiness of mankind advanced thereby.

"I have to regret that the duties of my public station do not allow me to pay that attention to Agriculture and the objects attached to it (which have ever been my favourite pursuit) that I could wish; but I will put your queries respecting sheep into the hands of such Gentlemen as I think most likely to attend to them satisfactorily; I must, however observe that no important information on the subject can be expected from this Country where we have been so little in the habit of attending either to the breed or improvement of our stock."—From the facsimile printed in the "Letters on Agriculture from his Excellency George Washington," Washington, 1847.

“From the British Board of Agriculture.

— AGRICULTURAL SURVEY OF THE COUNTIES OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The reports of this Survey were transmitted to Washington by Sir John Sinclair as published. The correspondence in relation thereto is in part printed below. In 1794, Washington wrote to Sinclair:—

“I have read with peculiar pleasure and approbation, the work you patronise, so much to your own honour and the utility of the public. — Such a general view of the agriculture in the several counties of Great Britain is extremely interesting; and cannot fail of being very beneficial to the Agricultural Concerns of your Country and to those of every other wherein they are read. . . . I am so much pleased with the plan & execution myself, as to pray you to have the goodness to direct your Bookseller to continue to forward them to me accompanied with the cost. . . . When the whole are received I will promote as far as in me lays, the reprinting of them here. Philadelphia July 20th 1794.”

In 1795 he acknowledged the receipt of additional publications:—

“I could not omit so favorable an opportunity, as the departure of Mr Strickland affords me, of presenting my best respects to you; and my sincere thanks for the views of Agriculture in the different counties of Great Britain, which you have had the goodness to send me.—and for the Diploma (received by the hands of Mr Jay) admitting me a foreign honorary member of the Board of Agriculture.

“You will add to the obligations already conferred on me, by directing your Bookseller to supply me regularly with all such proceedings of the board as are intended for the public ; — and when they are in fit state for it, that they may be neatly bound. — To this request, I pray he may be desired to add the cost, which shall be paid at sight, to his order here, or committed to him as may be most convenient and agreeable to himself. Philadelphia 10th July 1795.” — From the facsimile printed in the “Letters on Agriculture from his Excellency George Washington.”

In transmitting the concluding volumes of the Survey, Sinclair wrote : —

“Sir John Sinclair presents his best Respects to General Washington, & has the pleasure of sending him by the hands of the gallant Kosciusko the remainder of the Agricultural Surveys. If General Washington should want to complete his sett Sir John begs to know the deficient Counties, and he will take particular care to send them to America, for though those Reports are merely to be considered as printed Manuscripts for correction, and additional observations, yet they contain a great Mass of valuable Matter, & the first instance of a whole Country being completed in that stile. It is therefore worth while to have a complete sett, or two of the original Surveys of Old England preserved in America. Whitehall 9th June 1797.” — From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied : —

“Since I had the honor of writing to you, on the 15th of July, I have been favoured with your letter of the 13th of Feb^y . . . together with the Surveys, and papers accompanying both. — For your goodness in sending them I pray you to accept my best thanks, and that I may not be a burthensome member of the Board, I enclose a small Bill of Exchange to be deposited in the hands of your Bookseller to defray the cost of the several copies of your works which may be forwarded to me.

“An eight years absence from home (except occasional visits to it) has thrown my building, and other matters of private concern, into so much disorder, that at no period of my life have I ever been more engaged than in the last six or eight months to repair & bring them into tune again. — This has prevented me from looking into the Agricultural Surveys of the Counties of England & Scotland with the attention I propose to do the ensuing Winter. I shall certainly be very desirous of having a compleat sett of them, and if any are missing will apply accordingly ; — as it is my intention to have them classed, & bound neatly. Mt. Vernon 6th Nov^r 1797.” — From the facsimile printed in the “Letters on Agriculture from his Excellency George Washington.”

Sinclair wrote in reply : —

“I have the honour to inform you, that at the last Meeting of the Board of Agriculture, it was unanimously resolved, that the £10 remitted by you, as a Subscription for the Publications of the Board shall be laid out in binding a complete set of the same, in the handsomest manner, and that they be sent to you, with a letter expressive of the sentiments which the Board entertains for so distinguished a character. Whitehall 24th February, 1798.”

Given to Washington by the author as explained in the following extracts from letters which passed between them; wherein are also noted the circumstances of the preparation of the work:—

"From the Commencement of the American War to this time, I have kept a daily Journal now swelled to some thousand pages,—from this Journal, I am now writing Memoirs containing Anecdotes, Details of Skirmishes, Battles and other Military events during the War. Roxbury April 17th 1797." — William Heath to Washington. From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

"It gives me great pleasure to hear from yourself, that you are writing Memoirs of those transactions which passed under your notice during the revolutionary war. Having understood that you were exact and copious in noting occurrences at the time they happened, a work of this kind will, from the candor and ability with which I am persuaded your notes were taken, be uncommonly correct and interesting. Whether you mean to publish them at your own expense, or by subscription, it is not intimated in your letter. If the latter, I pray you to consider me as a subscriber, and in any event as a purchaser of your production. May 20, 1797."

Upon receiving the book in 1799 Washington wrote in acknowledgment as follows:—

"I have been duly favoured with your letter of the 11th Ultimo from Roxbury, accompanying your Memoirs of the American War; which I accept and dare say beforehand shall read with pleasure, as soon as the bustle in which we now are engaged at the wedding of our Grand daughter Miss Custis is over. The Tongue is a Fire, a World of Iniquity; so is the Tongue amongst our Members, that it defileth the whole Body, and setteth on Fire the Course of Nature, and it is set on fire of Hell. — Behold how great a Matter a little Fire kindleth. This historical Collection is finished by repeating a Prophecy of an Ass, another of a Bull, and a third and last of a Lamb, lately revealed by them, concerning the present Comotions in the Kingdom of Great-Britain. By Joseph Hewes, a Student of Nature.

A curious plea for the Colonies, in which the author castigates Gov. Hutchinson, and gives an account of an alleged plan of one Wheelwright to inform the French of the intended Louisbourg expedition. The author exercised his medical skill throughout the plague of 1665. By following a regimen of his own, of which the consumption of sack and the use of condiments formed a part, he was enabled to labor incessantly with plague-stricken patients and to withstand the contagion himself.

"In 1671 he completed an account of the plague, which was published in 1672 as 'Λοιμολογία, sive Pestis nuperæ apud Populum Londinensem grassantis Narratio Historica.' This book shows Hodges to have been an excellent observer both as to symptoms and the results of treatment." — Norman Moore, M.D.

Williamsburg: printed by Joseph Royle, MDCCLXIII. 15 pp. Sm. 4°.

In the course of a panegyric on liberty, the speaker made (considering the time) some significant remarks on the evils of slavery. He said: "Respecting this particular and the manner in which it is here conducted, it may be said it loses much of it's Horror, when compar'd with that of other Places . . . and I am likewise fully persuaded, that in some of those Families which properly respect Humanity, the State of Servitude approaches to the Condition of an easy Dependance, and thro' the Consideration and mildness of the Master the very Name of Slave is oft forgotten. But of these how few!"

[HORRY, CHARLES LUCAS PINCKNEY. 1769-1830.]

A five Minutes Answer to Paine's Letter to Genl Washington.

London: printed by L. F. J. Gransart. Anno 1797. 44 pp. 8°.

Inscribed on the cover in gilt letters:—

"George Washington, of Mount-Vernon.

From the Author."

Handsomely bound in full morocco, with gilt edges and silk facings. This is the first time that this work has appeared under the author's name.

The following particulars about the author are kindly furnished in a letter by Mrs. Charles C. Pinckney of Charleston, South Carolina, a granddaughter of Mr. Horry's only sister. "C. L. Pinckney Horry was the only son of Col Daniel Horry, a planter on the Santee river, of Huguenot descent, and Colonel of Cavalry in the Revolutionary War. His mother was sister of the two Generals Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth, and Thomas; Pinckney Horry was born in Charleston in 1769, —in 1783, his father took him to England for his education. He spent some years at school, then entered Trinity College, Cambridge, —and, his college course ended, he travelled in France. There he married the daughter of the Count de Latour-Maubourg, purchased an estate near Paris and made his home in France for life, visiting this country but seldom. He died in 1830. Mr. Horry was an accomplished man, with a fine figure and distinguished air. A very beautiful portrait of him by Romney was preserved by his sister's family until the [Civil] War. It was a full length portrait showing Mr. Horry in the picturesque dress of the period, long vest, knee-breeches, etc., with college cap in hand, and his gown, as a Gentleman Commoner, blue silk, laced with silver, gathered in graceful folds over his arm. The figure had the life and spirit that characterize Romney's pictures. The background was a view of Trinity College. Mr. Horry was always called Pinckney Horry, his letters were so addressed and so signed —only on his book plate do the initials C. L. appear." The letter printed below is, however, signed with the two first initials of his name. The family in South Carolina have no copy of Horry's "A Five Minutes Answer to Paine's Letter to Genl Washington." The authorship is disclosed in the letters, for the first time printed below.

The letter presenting the book to Washington reads:—

SIR — It is with hesitating reluctance that I intrude on your leisure to beg you will peruse with indulgence the small publication I have the honor to present you, your goodness will I hope excuse this liberty and pardon my desire of showing to you (tho' by a very imperfect production) that I partake the admiration which the Character (sic) of Genl Washington everywhere inspires, and the profound contempt I have for his insignificant Enemies. . . . I intreat you Sir to accept the assurances of all the sentiments of esteem and respect with which I have the honor to be

Your most obedient and very humble servant

C. L. PINCKNEY HORRY.

April 23^d [1798.]

From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

MT VERNON 6th May 1798.

SIR — A Post or two ago favoured me with a note from you dated the 23^d Ult^o accompanying your ans^r to Paine letter addressed to me. —

For the favourable sentiments you have been pleased to express for me in both, I feel grateful; and pray you to accept this acknowledgment of the sense I entertain of them.

Until the Gazette announced your arrival in Philadelphia, I was unacquainted with your route from Baltimore. — Should you return to Charleston by land, I shall be happy in seeing you at this place — about nine miles from Alexandria & but little out of the Post Road.

Inscribed on the title-page: "To His Excellency Gen^l Wash[ington] from His friend & most hu[m]ble Servant? the Autho[r]. The bracketed portions have been trimmed off by the binder.

The author's letter of presentation reads:—

"Some of my acquaintances here who had seen a little Poem of mine solicited for copies in such a manner as to make a publication of it necessary — it has also been reprinted in London & occasioned the author to be the subject of many news paper paragraphs, tho' the Sentiments & descriptions were not calculated to please English readers; yet their criticisms, as far as I am able to learn, have been sufficiently favourable as to the merits of the composition — I have the honour of forwarding a copy herewith. Paris, July 17, 1785." — From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

"I am very much obliged to you for the Poem you sent me; I have read it with pleasure, & it is much admired by all those to whom I have shewn it. Mount Vernon 30th Oct^r. 1785." — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

— Discours en vers, adressé aux officiers et aux Soldats des différentes armées Américaines. Par M. David Humphreys, Colonel au service des États-Unis, & Aide-de-Camp de son Excellence le Général Washington. Imprimé pour la première fois, à New-Haven, dans le Connecticut.

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Raynal &c." Contents given under CHASTELLUX, F. J., Marquis de. Discours, etc.

Translated by the Marquis de Chastellux, who has added several notes (pp. 60-66), and "Lettre du traducteur au Colonel Humphreys," (pp. 3-5) signed "Le marquis de Ch." The original and translation are given on opposite pages. The translation is in prose.

The letter of the translator contains the following:—

"J étois avec vous, mon cher Colonel, lorsqu' après une campagne glorieuse, vous composiez, en silence, ces beaux vers où vous avez montré toute l'étendue de vôtre génie, en ne voulant exprimer que vos sentimens patriotiques. Vous m'en avez fait un mystère, & votre modestie vous a exposé à commettre une faute impardonnable contre l'alliance que vous avez si noblement célébrée. . . . Traducteur en prose, et Traducteur qui ne se pique pas d'être littéral, j'aurois bien à redouter de mon Auteur, si cet Auteur n'étoit pas le Colonel Humphreys, que je voudrois en tout point prendre pour modèle."

Given to Washington by Chastellux. Washington's letter of acknowledgment is here printed:—

"I cannot omit to seize the earliest occasion, to acknowledge the receipt of the very affectionate letter you did me the honor of writing to me on the 22^d of May; as well as to thank you for the present of your Travels in America & the translation of Col^o Humphrey's Poem, all of which came safe to hand by the same conveyance. Knowing as I did, the candour, liberality, & philanthropy of the Marquis de Chastellux, I was prepared to disbelieve any imputations that might militate agst these amiable qualities.—For characters & habits are not easily taken up, or suddenly laid aside. Nor does that mild species of philosophy which aims at promoting human happiness, ever belye itself by deviating from the generous & godlike pursuit. Having notwithstanding understood that some misrepresentations of the work in question, had been circulated; I was happy to learn that you had taken the most effectual method to put a stop to their circulation, by publishing a more ample & correct edition. Col^o Humphreys (who has been some weeks at Mount Vernon) confirm'd me in the sentiment by giving a most flattering account of the whole performance: he has also put into my hands the translation of that part in which you say such & so many handsome things of me; that (altho' no sceptic on ordinary occasions) I may perhaps be allowed to doubt whether your friendship and partiality have not, in this one instance, acquired an ascendancy over your cooler judgment. Mount Vernon 18th Aug^t 1786." — From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

This is probably the work referred to by Gen. Benjamin Lincoln in a letter to Washington as follows :—

" I have the pleasure of enclosing to your Excellency a political publication which lately made its appearance in this Common-wealth. — It was ushered into light with all that cover of secrecy which often attends that of an illegitimate child. The father however has shared the fate which is common in such cases his likeness being so strongly impressed upon his offspring that all our shrewd observers think they can point him out, and many blame him for his attempts to keep behind the curtain. — The eagle-eyed folks say that it is a fine child, that it has an open and manly countenance, that it has evident marks of originality of thought, strength of mind, firmness of views (?), and an independency of soul, and will come forward with peculiar advantages to the world. — Whether these observations are just or not, your Excellency from your great knowledge in physiognomy, will on examination, be able to determine. The title forms two lines at the head of the first page of the text.

At the bottom of pages 10 and 11 there is a note in the handwriting of Jefferson, part of which has been trimmed off by the binder.

The tract was written for presentation to the French ministers as a protest against the Arrêt of Sept. 28, 1788, which injuriously affected American commerce.

It was privately printed by Jefferson, but a few copies were distributed among friends, and this copy was given to Washington by Jefferson, who wrote:—

"On the subject of the whale fishery I enclose you some observations I drew up for the ministry here, in order to obtain a correction of their Arrêt of Sepr. last; whereby they had involved our oils with the English in a general exclusion from their ports. They will accordingly correct this, so that our oils will participate with theirs in the monopoly of their markets. . . . KEEP your Heart. A Sermon, occasioned by the Murder of the Federal Marshal of this State, Major Robert Forsyth: preached at the Desire of the District Society of Cincinnati at Augusta, and most respectfully inscribed to their President, Governor Mathews.

Augusta : printed by John Erdman Smith. MDCXCIV. (4), 20 pp. 8°.

From information furnished by William Harden, Esq., Librarian of the Georgia Historical Society, it appears that this Sermon was preached by the Rev. Adam Boyd. The Augusta Chronicle and Gazette, of February 8, 1794, has the following notice: "By desire of the Cincinnati, on Sunday next will be delivered, by the Rev. Mr. Boyd, a discourse on the lamentable event — that deprived the society of a worthy member, Major Forsyth, marshal of the state, and slain in the execution of the duties of his office."

Mr. Harden writes that "Dr. Williams, the present rector of St. Paul's Church, Augusta, Georgia, says that Adam Boyd was the full name of the clergyman who preached the Sermon." The Rev. Adam Boyd was Rector of the Church in Augusta from 1790 to 1799.

The above information was gained too late to give the Sermon under the author's name in this Catalogue.

There is another copy in the Collection which is unbound.

Given to Washington by the author, who wrote under date of Jan. 14, 1792 : —

"I take the Liberty of writing your Excellency which I hope you will excuse, and of sending you a few Copies of a Pamphlet on Weights, Measures and Coins of which I beg your acceptance.

"I write to you as a man of Mind, not as a man of Rank. But I should not trouble you with this Letter, if the Treatise which accompanies it were not the work of much labour, and considered one of the best which has hitherto been published on the subject.

"In June 1790 I addressed a copy of the first of these Tracts to Dr. Nisbet of Carlisle College, to be forwarded to your Excellency. And about five months ago a Copy of the Treatise when printed was sent to London to be forwarded to the President of the United States. But as the conveyance between Britain and America is very irregular, I have given you the trouble of this Letter, which comes by a channel on which I can depend. . . .

"As Mr. Jefferson has lately published a plan for the Equalization of Weights & Measures, And as the National Assembly of France has proposed two different theories on this subject, I found it necessary to add a few pages in writing, — the last three of which I request your Excellency will peruse with attention. . . .

"P. S. I shall send to your Order in London 100 Copies to be given to the Members of your Legislature, if you think them worth the carriage to America." — From the original in the State Department.

To which Washington replied, under date of June 22, 1792:—

"I have received your letter of the 14th of January, together with the copies of a pamphlet on Weights, Measures & Coins, which accompanied it. . . .

"I have now to request you will accept my thanks for this further mark of politeness and attention in sending me this additional number of your tracts, as well as for the manuscript which accompanied them. The Subject of your Book is of high importance to Society in general, and particularly to the commercial world. If an uniformity of weights & measures could be established upon a proper foundation through the several nations of Europe and in the United States of America, it's advantages would be great indeed, and so important is the object that we ought not to lose sight of it; altho' it may not be attained at the present moment.

"I have caused the letter to Mr. Barclay, and one of the Pamphlets to be sent to Easton agreeably to your request

"By order of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, I am indulged the honor of presenting to your Excellency, in their name, Judge Lowell's Eulogy on the late Governor Bowdoin.

“ Thinking it possible, that some of your friends might be gratified with this tribute to the memory of a gentleman, who had a place in your esteem, I have ventured to forward six copies. Your Excellency’s goodness will also excuse my presumption in begging your acceptance of the latest catalogue of our College. Cambridge 10 Sep^r 1791.” — Eliphalet Pearson to Washington. From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied :—

“ I have received your letter of the 10th of September enclosing by order of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Judge Lowell’s Eulogy on the late Governor Bowdoin.

I must beg, Sir, you will present my proper acknowledgements to the Academy for this mark of attention, and at the same time receive yourself my thanks for the polite manner in which you have transmitted to me the Eulogy on that worthy Character, and for the catalogue of Harvard College, which accompanied it. Lugduni Batavorum, apud A. et J. Honkoop, M DCC XCVI. (4), viii, 134, (2) pp. 4°.

Given to Washington by the author, who wrote in rather hesitating English as follows :—

“ There are at the same time in the movement to which I give up myself, in speaking of your excellency, not only as a public annalist, but as a Litterary man in the dedication to your worthy successor, at the head of the work of which I have the honor to offer you a copy. Leyden, 10 September 1797.” — From the original in the State Department.

Washington’s letter of acknowledgment in which he indulges in some reflections on political experiences, reads in part as follows :—

MOUNT VERNON 2^d Decr 1797

SIR, — The letter for which I am indebted to your politeness, dated “ Leyde the 10th September 1797 ” with the book which accompanied it, I had the pleasure to receive about three days since, and in thanking you for both, hasten to acknowledge the sense I have of the favourable sentiments you have been pleased to express of me.

In times of turbulence, when the passions are afloat, calm reason is swallowed up in the extremes to which measures are attempted to be carried, but when these subside and the empire of it is resumed the man who acts from principle — who pursues the path of truth, moderation & justice, will regain his influence. — Such I persuade myself will be, if it has not already been, your case.

To the writings & conduct of men of this description (amongst whom you have always been placed) America is much indebted. — and as a private citizen for that is the class in which I now move, I offer you my thanks for the part you avow to have acted, — and for the annals you have been pleased to record of one who with pleasure subscribes himself

Your most obed^t and H^ble Servant

Observations on the Reflections of the Right Hon. Edmund Burke, on the Revolution in France, in a Letter to the Right Hon. the Earl of Stanhope.

London, printed for C. Dilly. M.DCC.XC. 95 pp. 8°.

Given to Washington by the author, who wrote:—

"Sometime in the course of the last summer I did myself the honor of sending you my thoughts on the important subject of education. I now send you my observations on M^r Burke's reflections on the French revo. a work which has been much read in England both on account of the importance of the subject and the virulent manner in which the Author has abused the French Legislators and supported all those unjust distinctions in society which have so long oppressed and humbled mankind. When you have read M^r Burke y^r Excellency will not be surprised that he has a large party in this country as it comprehends the Court, the Dignified Clergy, the Aristocratists and their dependants. The French Revolution I thank God yet stands firm, to the great mortification of the European Aristocratists, and the great joy of all those who like myself are zealous friends to equal liberty. Bucknall Berks, March '91."—From the original in the State Department.

Washington wrote in reply as follows:—

"At the same time that I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st of March, with which I have been honored, let me request you to accept my thanks for your polite attention in sending me the pamphlet which accompanied it. The importance of the subject, which has called forth your production and numerous others, is so deeply interesting to mankind, that every philanthropic mind, however far removed from the scene of action, cannot but feel anxious to see its termination; and it must be the ardent wish of every good man, that its event may increase the happiness of the human race. Philadelphia, 19 July, 1791."—Sparks, vol. x. p. 169.

NORMAN MAC LEOD

M.P. Great Britain.”

The author served in the British Army in the American Revolution, and at one time it came in Washington's way to do him a kindness, which he acknowledges in the following letter, with which he sent a copy of this book:—

“SIR—Permit a person who owes you the dearest obligations to intrude himself on your notice, though the circumstance most probably has escaped your memory.—A Captain MacLeod and some other officers of the British army, with their wives, in a very delicate situation, were most humanely sent by you to New York on their parole, in the end of the year 1776; and this saved the lives of the poor women—I am that Captain MacLeod; I have since had the good fortune to arrive at the rank of Major General in the service of my Country, & to represent my native County in Parliament—. . . Some attempts have lately been made to meliorate our Constitution: they have hitherto been unsuccessful, but for your amusement I use the freedom of sending some of the publications on that subject. London, March 9th 1795.”

From the original in the State Department.

Washington's letter of reply was as follows:—

Philadelphia Feb'y 4th 1798."—

To which Washington replied:—

"The last Post brought me your favor of the 4th instant accompanied by a Dramatic piece of Poetry,—for both I thank you.

"The latter I have read with pleasure; highly applauding the motives which gave birth to it:—for lamentable and much to be regretted indeed it is, that in a crisis like the present, when all hearts shou'd be united & at their Post ready to rejoice at the good or repel the evils which await us, that nothing but internal dissensions & political hostilities are to be found in the councils of our common country. “Your approbation of the institution which I had the honour of introducing to you, encourages me to send the inclosed, which have been published by order of the Society. Boston, May 16, 1788.”

To this Washington replied:—

“Your very acceptable favor of the 16th of May, covering a recent publication of the proceedings of the Humane Society has, within a few days past been put into my hands. I observe with singular satisfaction, the cases in which your benevolent institution has been instrumental in recalling some of our fellow creatures, as it were, from beyond the gates of eternity, and has given occasion for the hearts of parents and friends to leap for joy. The provision made for the preservation of shipwrecked mariners is also highly estimable in the view of every philanthropic mind, and greatly consolatory to that suffering part of the community. These things will draw upon you the blessings of those who were nigh to perish. These works of charity and good will towards men reflect, in my estimation, great lustre upon the authors, and presage an era of still further improvements. Mt. Vernon, 22 June, 1788.”—Sparks, ix. p. 388.

“ I have duly received your favor of the 4th instant, accompanying the Transactions of the Society for promoting Agriculture, Arts, and Manufactures; and am very much obliged by your goodness in sending them to me.

"Works of this sort are of the most interesting importance to every country; and it is much to be regretted, that similar societies are not more general in our own, or not more attended to in those States where they are established. I shall, the moment I have a little more leisure than the winding up of the present session of Congress will afford me, read your experiments on lucerne with attention; and I am persuaded I shall do it also with pleasure and edification as I have long been favorably impressed with the value of that grass; especially if it can in this country, as in some others, be cultivated in broadcast, thereby saving the expense of the labor required when it is raised in drills."—Sparks, vol. x., pp. 17, 18.

[OGDEN, REV. JOHN COSENS. 1755-1800.]

An Appeal to the Candid, upon the present State of Religion and Politics in Connecticut.

[Stockbridge? 1799?] 23 pp. 16°.

The series of anonymous tracts here for the first time catalogued under the author's name, all having the purpose of exposing the alleged oppressive acts of the New England Congregational clergy, whom the writer is pleased to call the "New England Illuminati" or "Calvinistic Clubs," and "Edwardeans," are undoubtedly from the pen of the Rev. John Cosens Ogden. The compiler of this catalogue had evidence enough in hand to satisfy himself of Ogden's authorship before finding in the Washington manuscripts in the State Department conclusive testimony of the fact.

The letters from Ogden to Washington are written in the same strain and style as the pamphlets and also speak of these writings, not always by title, but with sufficient definiteness to establish their identity.

The writer was a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and had charges in New Hampshire, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. From 1786 to 1793 he was Rector of the church at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. He seems to have been of a somewhat contentious disposition, and engaged in a controversy with the Rev. Samuel Langdon in regard to the possession of the ancient glebe, in the town of Portsmouth, which he claimed was unjustly taken from the Episcopalians. This charge was made in a pamphlet published at Boston in 1791 under the title "Letters occasioned by the publication of a private epistolary Correspondence, begun by Mr. Samuel Macclintock." The tract which drew this out was published in Portsmouth in 1791 with the title "An Epistolary Correspondence between Rev. John C. Ogden and the Rev. Samuel Macclintock on a variety of Subjects principally the high Powers and Prerogatives claimed by diocesan Bishops." The Rev. Mr. Langdon replied to Ogden in a tract called "A Correction of some Mistakes committed by the Rev. John Cosens Ogden . . . in his late Letters published at Boston," a copy of which is in this Collection, and appears in the Catalogue under Langdon.

Concerning one of these publications Ogden wrote to Washington as follows:—

"I thought it to be my duty to give you this specimen of the freedom of the press, and the privilege of asserting the cause of his order and ministers of religion, as an other proof of the liberty we enjoy under our excellent constitution. Litchfield Goal, Feby 20th 1799."

[—] A View of the Calvinistic Clubs of the United States.

[Stockbridge? 1799?] 23 pp. 16°.

The burden of this screed is stated by the author as follows: "These are the Monthly Meetings of the Calvinistical Clergy. As they have not assumed a name by which they can be properly designated, I will call them the Calvinistic Clubs. These originated about thirty years ago, and were designed to increase the power, and influence of the clergy. They were projected by Doctors Bellamy, Goodrich, Sproat, Williams and others in New England. They were organized by delegations from the Presbyters and Associations of the Clergy, through the colonies, in as extensive a Manner, as the times and distances of the respective residences of the founders would admit."

[OGDEN, REV. JOHN COSENS. 1755-1800.]

A View of the New-England Illuminati: who are indefatigably engaged in destroying the Religion and Government of the United States; under a feigned Regard for their Safety — and under an impious Abuse of true Religion.

Philadelphia: printed by James Carey. 1799. 20 pp. 8°.

The Rev. Drs. Bellamy, Goodrich, and Williams come in for reprehension as founders of the monthly "Ministers' meetings," to which he traces the beginning of the theocratic dynasty. "They have been known by the appellation of Ministers' Meetings. But I shall take the liberty of calling them the New-England Illuminati." The author here dwells on the domination of the "Illuminati" over the colleges of Yale, Harvard, and Dartmouth. "Birth, education, elevation, and connections have placed Dr. Dwight at the head of the Edwardean sect and Illuminati."

[—] A short History of the late Ecclesiastical Oppressions in New-England and Vermont, by a Citizen. In which is exhibited a Statement of the Violation of religious Liberties, which are ratified by the Constitution of the United States.

Richmond: printed by James Lyon. 1799. 19 pp. 8°.

The "New England Illuminati" or "Edwardeans" are considered; and the confiscation of the church lands in Vermont; and the sufferings of the Episcopalians in New England.

Concerning this book the author wrote to Gov. Tichenor of Vermont:—

"At leisure to write, I have prepared for the press, a detail of the poignant sufferings of the widow and family of General Wooster & an impartial view of the pillage of the church in Vermont and New Hampshire. Troy, September 18th, 1798." — From a copy sent by Ogden to Washington, preserved in the State Department.

PAINE, ROBERT TREAT. 1773-1811.

The Invention of Letters: a Poem, written at the Request of the President of Harvard University, and delivered, in Cambridge, on the Day of annual Commencement, July 15, 1795. By Thomas Paine, A.M. [afterwards Robert Treat Paine].

Boston: printed for the Subscribers. July 27, 1795. 15 pp. Sq. 16°.

Inscribed on the title-page: "His excellency, Geo: Washington." Has manuscript corrections.

This poem is dedicated to Washington. The recital of the poem was attended with some excitement as the author persisted in reading certain lines upon Jacobinism that had been stricken out by the college authorities. A hearer records that "Mr. Paine's poem was received with very great applause. When the erased lines were spoken, a little hissing was heard, which was soon drowned by repeated, loud rounds of approbation." Its publication was a great financial success, as it yielded the author fifteen hundred dollars clear of expense.

Washington acknowledged the gift as follows:—

PHILADELPHIA 7th Sept. 1795

MR THOS PAINES of Boston

SIR— Since my return to this City from Mount Vernon, I have been favored with your letter of the 30th of July with the accompanying Poem,— the Invention of Letters.— For the honor of inscribing them to me, and the flattering sentiments there expressed, I pray you to accept the best thanks of

Sir

Your most Obedt Servt

GO WASHINGTON.

[PAINE, THOMAS.]

Common Sense; addressed to the Inhabitants of America, on the following interesting Subjects.

- I. Of the Origin and Design of Government in general, with concise Remarks on the English Constitution.
- II. Of Monarchy and Hereditary Succession.

III. Thoughts on the present State of American Affairs.

IV. Of the present Ability of America, with some miscellaneous Reflections.

Philadelphia: printed, and sold, by R. Bell. M DCC LXXVI. (4), 79 pp. 8°.

Concerning this work Washington wrote to Reed in 1776 as follows:—

"My countrymen I know, from their form of government, and steady attachment heretofore to royalty, will come reluctantly into the idea of independence, but time and persecution bring many wonderful things to pass; and by private letters, which I have lately received from Virginia, I find 'Common Sense' is working a powerful change there in the minds of many men. April 1, 1776." To Madison he wrote in 1784 as follows:—

"Can nothing be done in our Assembly for poor Paine? Must the merits and Service of Common Sense continue to glide down the stream of time unrewarded by this country? His writings certainly have had a powerful effect upon the public mind. Ought they not then, to meet an adequate return? Mount Vernon, 12 June, 1784."

Bound with this in a volume lettered "Common Sense, &c.," are:—

Paine, T. Letter addressed to the Abbé Raynal. — Continental Congress. — A Declaration by the Representatives of the United Colonies of North-America; The Association, &c. [1774]. — Letters [by John Adams to Dr. Calkoen of Amsterdam on American affairs, 1780]. — [Trumbull, J.] M^lFingal. — Continental Congress. Several Methods of making Salt-Petre; recommended to the Inhabitants of the United Colonies. — [Shipley, J.] A Speech intended to have been spoken on the Bill for altering the Charters of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay.

[PAINE, THOMAS.]

Public Good, being an Examination into the Claim of Virginia to the vacant Western Territory, and of the Right of the United States to the same. To which is added, Proposals for laying off a new State, to be applied as a Fund for carrying on the War, or redeeming the national Debt. By the Author of Common Sense.

Philadelphia: printed by John Dunlap. M,DCC,LXXX. 38 pp. 12°.

The writing of this pamphlet was used with effect as an argument against a proposed measure of relief for the author, which was before the Virginia Assembly in 1784.

The subject is explained in a Letter from Richard Henry Lee to Washington, an extract from which follows:—

"I had not the good fortune to be present when Mr. Paine's business was considered in the House of Delegates, or, most certainly, I should have exerted myself in his behalf. I have been told, that a proposition in his favor miscarried, from its being observed that he had shown enmity to this State, by having written a pamphlet injurious to our claim of western territory. It has ever appeared to me, that this pamphlet was the consequence of Mr. Paine's being himself imposed upon: and that it was rather the fault of the place than of the man." For further note on the work, see WHARTON, S.

Letter addressed to the Abbé Raynal on the Affairs of North-America. In which the Mistakes in the Abbé's Account of the Revolution of America are corrected and cleared up. By Thomas Paine, M.A. of the University of Pennsylvania, and Author of the Pamphlet and other Publications, entitled, "Common Sense."

Philadelphia: printed by Melchior Steiner, and sold by Robert Aitken. M,DCC,LXXXII. (2), 77 pp. 8°.

Bound with his "Common Sense."

Given to Washington by the author, as appears from the following:—

"I have the honor of presenting you with fifty copies of my Letter to the Abbé Raynal for the use of the army, and to repeat to you my acknowledgments for your friendship. Sept, 7, 1782."—Paine to Washington. From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

"I have the pleasure to acknowledge your favour of the 7th inst., informing me of your proposal to present me with fifty copies of your last publication for the amusement of the army. For this intention you have my sincere thanks, not only on my own account, but for the pleasure, I doubt not, the gentlemen of the army will receive from your pamphlet. Sept. 18, 1782."—From the Washington Letter Books in the State Department.

— Letter to George Washington, President of the United States of America. On Affairs public and private. By Thomas Paine, Author of the Works entitled, Common Sense, Rights of Man, Age of Reason, &c.

Philadelphia: printed by Benjamin Franklin Bache. 1796. 76 pp. 8°.

Has what is ostensibly Washington's autograph on the bastard title-page; but careful examination seems to show it to be a labored facsimile. This copy was not in the original purchase from Henry Stevens of Washington's books; but was bought later. Autograph of "W. Rawle, Dec. 3 1796" on the title-page. There is another copy in the collection unbound; which was undoubtedly in Washington's Library.

Concerning this Letter Washington wrote as follows:—

"But finding a neutral conduct had been adopted, and would not be relinquished by those who administered the government, the next step was to try the people; and, to work upon them, several presses and many scribblers have been employed. . . . This not working as well as was expected, from a supposition that there was too much confidence, and perhaps personal regard for, the present chief magistrate and his politics, the batteries latterly have been levelled at him particularly and personally. Although he is soon to become a private citizen, his opinions are to be knocked down, and his character reduced as low as they are capable of sinking it, even by resorting to absolute falsehoods. As an evidence whereof, and of the plan they are pursuing, I send you a Letter from Mr. Paine to me, printed in this city, and disseminated with great industry. June 8, 1797."—Washington to David Stuart.

Paine's anger was aroused against Washington because of the latter's refusal to interpose to secure his release from a French prison, where he had been placed by Robespierre. On gaining his freedom, Paine went to live with Monroe in Paris, and it was while in Monroe's house that he composed this bitter attack on Washington. This letter is reproduced in M. D. Conway's edition of "The Writings of Thomas Paine," with notes by the editor.

There are two replies to this work in the Washington Collection. See HORRY, C. L. P., and KENNEDY, P.

Virginia : a pastoral Drama, on the Birth-Day of an illustrious Personage [George Washington] and the Return of Peace, February 11th, 1784.

The scene of this pastoral drama is laid at Mount Vernon; the shepherds, shepherdesses, huntsmen and huntresses assembling to do honor in song to Daphnis (Washington).

The author served in the Quarter-master's department in Washington's army and became Lieutenant-Colonel. "The volume of Poems is dedicated to Washington, and the ode on the return of Augustus from Spain is applied to Washington's victorious return to Virginia. The translations which are in rhymed verse, are paraphrased by the substitution of American public characters for the Roman worthies to whom Horace addressed his odes, and by the application of descriptive passages and allusions to local and contemporary conditions."

The author sent a copy of this work to Washington, as appears from the following letter of acknowledgment:—

SIR — I have received the 2 Vol. of your poetical works which you were so polite as to send me and for which I beg you to accept of my best thanks.

The Honor which you have done me in dedicating your book to me merits my grateful acknowledgments; altho' I have refused many applications which have been made to dedicate literary performances to me — Yet I always wish to give every possible encouragement to those works of Genius which are the production of an American. Had I known of your intention to publish your work I would with pleasure have become a subscriber.

G. WASHINGTON.

This copy was purchased of Samuel G. Drake, with some works about Washington; it is not thought to be the one which Washington owned; but is given in this catalogue as representing a work formerly in his library.

PENNSYLVANIA.

An Act for the Regulation of the Militia of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia: printed by E. Oswald. M,DCC,XCIII. 16 pp. 8°.

Stitched in the same covers is a pamphlet entitled:— Regulations for the Order and Discipline of the Troops of the United States.

Part I. Philadelphia: printed by E. Oswald. M,DCC,XCIII. 48 pp. 8°.

— Debates of the Convention, of the State of Pennsylvania, on the Constitution, proposed for the Government of the United States. In two volumes. Vol. I. Taken accurately in Short-hand, by Thomas Lloyd.

Printed by Joseph James, in Philadelphia, A. D. M.DCC.LXXXVII. 147, (4) pp. 8°.

Washington's autograph on the title-page. Inscribed on a fly-leaf: "For his Excellency General Washington." Has the book-plate.

No more was published. The author was an expert shorthand writer who undertook to report the debates, and solicited subscribers under the promise to furnish a complete account of the convention to be published at a charge of one dollar for each hundred pages. This was never carried out, in consequence, it is thought, of a bargain with the Federalists, who are said to have paid Lloyd to suppress his work. He was permitted to publish the present volume which is devoted to the speeches of Wilson and Thomas M'Kean, Federalists who argued for the adoption of the Constitution. There exists no complete record of the Convention, the Federalists being successful in preventing the full reports getting before the public and thus prejudicing the cause of the Constitution. See McMaster and Stone, "Pennsylvania and the Federal Constitution. 1787-8."

This copy was transmitted to Washington by James Wilson, as appears from the following letter of acknowledgment:—

"You will please to accept of my best thanks for the copy of the debates of your late convention, which you have been so polite as to send me. . . . The violent proceedings of the enemies of the proposed constitution in your State are to be regretted, as disturbing the peace of society, but in any other point of view they are not to be regarded, for their unimportance effectually precludes any fear of their having an extensive or lasting influence. . . Mount Vernon, 4 April, 1788." — Sparks, ix, 342.

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

Given to Washington by Pickering, who wrote as follows:—

"Convinced of the utility, the necessity at all times of a well disciplined militia, to every free state;—when the united wisdom of the continent, referring to the contest with the parent kingdom, called on every colonist to prepare for the most unhappy events;—and the more immediate recommendations of our provincial Congress demanded a diligent application to the military art; deeming the plans of discipline then extant, inadequate to the instruction of men unused to this kind of study, & destitute of living instruction: I gladly embraced the opportunity when then presented, of applying to the service of my country the little knowledge & experience an office in the militia had led me to acquire, by writing the following plain rudiments of the military art. They were designed as their title imports, merely for the militia; & chiefly written before the predicted 'unhappy events' had called my fellow citizens to arms. This call, & the various avocations & interruptions consequent thereon, greatly retarded the completion of the work; & perhaps have rendered it less useful than it might otherwise have been: some parts of it, & those perhaps the most essential, I imagine however may prove advantageous to an army hastily assembled, & frequently called from the exercise of arms to the other equally necessary but more laborious occupation of war. This army being to the joy of every American, committed to your excellency's care & direction, both duty & inclination lead me to present the ensuing plan of discipline for a militia & submit to your decision the expediency of recommending or permitting its use among the officers & soldiers under your command." — From the copy in the Pickering Collection.

Bound with this in a pamphlet volume entitled "Militia" are: — Knox, H. A Plan for the General Arrangement of the Militia of the United States. — A List of the Officers of the Army serving in North-America, under the Command of his Excellency General Sir Guy Carleton.

A Letter from Mr. Pickering, Secretary of State, to Mr. Pinckney, Minister plenipotentiary at Paris, in Answer to the Complaints communicated by Mr. Adet, Minister of the French Republic, against the United States of America.

Richmond: printed and sold by T. Nicolson. [1798.] 93 pp. 16°.

The circumstances of the publication of this edition of Pickering's Letter, are related by William Heth in a letter to Washington, an extract from which is here printed:—

"To counteract this measure [the Virginia Resolutions], it was recommended by a few friends to Government to send forth the observations which I had the presumption to add to Addison's valuable Epitome of our late revolution & the present state of American affairs in the shape of a pamphlet; together with Col^o Pickering's inestimable letter to Mr. Pinckney; of which we had one thousand copies struck at private expense. — My hasty production was calculated, as you could readily perceive, for the perusal of the plain farmers & planters. City Point [Va.] 30th July, 1798." — From the original in the State Department.

Washington wrote to Pickering as follows concerning this letter:—

"That the statement of facts in the printed letter to Gen^l Pinckney will work conviction & produce a change of conduct in those who are desirous of information, & not obstinately bent upon wrong measures, I have no doubt;—and I can say with truth that my mind has never been alarmed by any fears of a War with France. Mount Vernon 29th Aug: 1798." — From the original in the Pickering Collection.

A list of errata is pasted upon the last fly-leaf.

Washington's autograph on the title-page. Book-plate.

Given to Washington by the author, who wrote:—

"Although a permission to dedicate my book to your Excellency, the honor of which however, I had no right to claim, would have afforded me the highest gratification, yet your Excellency's declining to grant it, though in the most obliging & condescending manner, was mortifying to a breast glowing with affection & esteem.

"You will undoubtedly observe, Sir, that the date of my dedication is prior to that of the letter with which your Excellency was pleased to honor me. . . .

"Although your Excellency's library does not admit any useless books, yet as that which accompanies this, is the first fruit of my labors, I hope your Excellency will have the honor to accept it as a small token of the unfeigned gratitude and esteem of your obliged & humble serv^t: 1st Jan. 1788."

Sparks, ix. p. 174.

Washington's letter of acknowledgment reads:—

MOUNT VERNON, June 20th 1788.

SIR,—I request you will accept my best thanks for your polite letter of the 1st of January (which did not get to my hand till yesterday) — and also for the copy of your "System of Arithmetic" which you were pleased to present to me.

The handsome manner in which the work is printed, and the elegant manner in which it is bound, are pleasing proofs of the progress which the arts are making in this Country. But I should do violence to my own feelings, if I suppressed an acknowledgement of the belief that the work itself is calculated to be equally useful & honourable to the United States.—

It is but right, however to apprise you, that, diffident of my own decision, the favourable opinion I entertain of your performance is founded rather on the explicit & ample testimonies of Gentlemen confessedly possessed of great mathematical knowledge, than on the partial and incompetent attention I have been able to pay it myself. — But I must be permitted to remark that the subject, in my estimation, holds a higher rank in the literary scale than you are disposed to allow.— The science of figures, to a certain degree, is not only indispensably requisite in every walk of civilized life, but the investigation of mathematical rules accustoms the mind to method and correctness in reasoning, and is an employment peculiarly worthy of rational beings. In a cloudy state of existence, where so many things appear precarious to the bewildered research, it is here that the rational faculties find a firm foundation to rest upon.— From the high ground of Mathematical & Philosophical demonstration, we are insensibly led to far nobler speculations & sublime meditations.

I hope & trust that the work will ultimately prove not less profitable than reputable to yourself.— It seems to have been conceded, on all hands, that such a system was much wanted.— Its merits being established by the approbation of competent Judges, I flatter myself that the idea of its being an American production and the first of the kind which has appeared; will induce every patriotic and liberal character to give it all the countenance & patronage in his power.— In all events, you may rest assured, that, as no person takes more interest in the encouragement of American genius, so no one will be more highly gratified with the success of your ingenious, arduous & useful undertaking than he, who has the unfeigned pleasure to subscribe himself with esteem & regard

Your most obed^t and

Very H^{ble} Servant

G^o WASHINGTON.

The manuscript of this work was submitted to Washington by the author, who wrote :—

“The countenance your Excellency has been pleas'd to give, to my feeble efforts in agriculture, has encouraged the promulgation of this Essay, the manuscript of which I send to Your Excellency's perusal, before I giv' it to the printer, from whom I expect the alteration, of the to a foreigner unavoidable faults of ortography.

“Permit me Sir to decorate this Pamphlet with a great Title, by writing on the head, This Essay is respectfully inscribed &c &c : to your Excellency : this will make more impression on the minds, than all arguments contained in the Essay, as it conveys the Idea, that what may be useful in it, has received Your Excellency's Gracious Sanction. N. Y. 26th Dec. 1789.”— From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied :—

“I have received your letter of the 26th and given such attention to the manuscript which accompanied it, as my obligations to public duties would permit. I shall always be happy to see experiments in agricultural machines, which can be brought into general use. Dec. 29, 1789.”

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "Political Tracts." Contents given under [SMITH, William Loughton]. The Politicks and Views of a certain Party, displayed.

Concerning this work Washington wrote to Hamilton :—

"A voluminous publication is daily expected from Mr. R[andolph]. The paper alluded to in the extract of his letter to me of the 8th inst., and inserted in all the gazettes, is a letter of my own to him, from which he intends (as far as I can collect from a combination of circumstances) to prove an inconsistency in my conduct, in ratifying the Treaty [Jay's] with G. Britain, without making a rescinding (by the British government) of what is commonly called the Provision order, . . . intending thereby to show, that my final decision thereon was the result of party advice; and that that party was under British influence. . . . But the paper he asked for is but a mite of the volume that is to appear; for without any previous knowledge of mine, he had compiled every official paper (before this was asked) for publication, the knowledge of which can subserve the purposes he has in view. . . . 26 Oct. 1795."

"Ere this, I presume you have seen the long promised vindication, or rather accusation. What do you think of it? and what notice should be taken of it. . . . His declaration that he was always opposed to the Commercial part of the Negotiation is as impudent and insolent an assertion as it is false, if he means more than that it was contingent (as the Instructions to Mr. Jay declare), and to apply the knowledge of it to me. Dec. 22, 1795."

Hamilton's reply was as follows :—

"I have read with care Mr. Randolph's pamphlet. It does not surprise me. I consider it as amounting to a confession of guilt; and I am persuaded this will be the universal opinion. His attempts against you are viewed by all whom I have seen as base. Dec. 24, 1795."—Ford's Washington, vol. xiii.

"I have a great deal of Trouble and uneasiness from the factious Disputes and violent Heats of a most impudent troublesome Party here, in regard to the silly Fee of a Pistole; they are very full of the great Success of their Agent, the Atto. Gen'l, w'ch I give small Notice to, as it is yet impossible that any great matter can be done in that Affair, and as I am well perswaded the Steps taken by me in having that Fee establis'h is agreeable to Instructions." . . . *Dinwiddie to C. before) that he has discovered the Art of propelling Boats, by mechanism & Small manual assistance, against rapid currents; that the discovery is of vast importance — may be of the greatest usefulness in our inland navigation — &, if it succeeds, of which I have no doubt, that the value of it is greatly enhanced by the Simplicity of the works, which when seen & explained to, might be executed by the most common mechanics. —

[SEABURY, SAMUEL, D.D. Bishop of Connecticut, 1729-1796.]

Free Thoughts, on the Proceedings of the Continental Congress, held at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1774: wherein their Errors are exhibited, their Reasonings confuted, and the fatal Tendency of their Non-Importation, Non-Exportation, and Non-Consumption Measures, are laid open to the plainest Understandings; and the only Means pointed out for preserving and securing our present happy Constitution: in a Letter to the Farmers, and other Inhabitants of North America in general, and to those of the Province of New-York in particular. By a Farmer.

[New-York: Printed in the Year M.DCC.LXXIV. 24 pp. 8°.]

Signed "A. W. Farmer."

"Prior to this, the colonial interests had been discussed in two pamphlets printed without the name of author or publisher, and one of them, entitled 'Free Thoughts on the Proceedings of the Continental Congress,' was signed 'A. W. Farmer,' and attributed at the time and since to Isaac Wilkins, then an influential member of the loyal Provincial Assembly of New York, and an intimate friend of the rector of the church in Westchester. . . . A bitter feeling was excited towards the unknown author of these pamphlets, which were extensively and gratuitously circulated among the people of New York and other provinces. Vengeance was denounced upon him, and failing to find him, copies of the pamphlets were gathered and burnt, and in some instances they were tarred, feathered, and nailed to the whipping-post, as an indication of the treatment which their author would receive if he were detected. . . . But who was the spirited writer that signed himself 'A. W. Farmer'? Seabury at an earlier day, had entered into a compact with his clerical friends, Dr. Chandler of New Jersey, and Dr. Inglis, rector of Trinity Church, New York, to watch and confute all publications in pamphlets or newspapers that threatened mischief to the Church of England and the British government in America. Out of this compact undoubtedly sprung 'Free Thoughts on the Proceedings of the Congress at Philadelphia,' which was from his pen, as were the other publications that immediately followed on the same side of the question." — Beardsley. Life and Correspondence of Samuel Seabury, D.D.

The task of defending the cause of the colonies against the attacks of "A. W. Farmer" was confided to Alexander Hamilton, then a youth of eighteen, about to close his studies at King's College.

"The author, John Searson, was born in Ireland about 1750, was educated by his uncle, a clergyman of the Church of England, came to this country and took up his residence in Philadelphia, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. Before leaving Ireland, he published two volumes. In the dedication of his 'Mount Vernon' to George Washington, he says: 'I did myself the honor to visit your Excellency 15th May last, so as to obtain an adequate idea of Mount Vernon; wishing to compose a poem on that beautiful seat, which I now most humbly dedicate to your Excellency! . . .' And, lest some envious critical person might call in question his claims to the regards of the American people, he gives an item of his personal experience. 'I published,' he says, 'a rural, romantic and descriptive poem on Down-Hill, the seat of the Earl of Bristol, Bishop of Londonderry, in Ireland, for which the gentlemen of that country actually gave me a guinea a copy, and Sir George Hill, from Dublin, gave me five guineas in the city of Londonderry.'" — *Stockbridge. the Aldermen, and the Common-Council of the City of London. In two Parts.

London : printed by G. Bigg, in the Year MDCCLXXI. xvi, 42, (6) pp. 8°.

The writings of Granville Sharp were received by Washington at the hands of Elkanah Watson, who brought them as a gift from the author. The circumstances of the presentation are recorded in Watson's "Men and Times of the American Revolution," as follows:—

"The last evening I spent in England was in the capacious library of Surgeon Sharp, a man of eminence, and brother of the philanthropist Granville Sharp, who was a bachelor and an inmate of his brother's house. I was, in a manner, enchained, for several hours, by this noble enthusiast in the cause of African emancipation and colonization . . .

"Mr. Sharp confided two bundles of books to my care, embracing his entire publications on emancipation and other congenial topics, directed to Washington, which I subsequently delivered to him at Mount Vernon.

"I had feasted my imagination for several days in the near prospect of a visit to Mount Vernon, the seat of Washington. No pilgrim ever approached Mecca with deeper enthusiasm. I arrived there in the afternoon of January 23d [17]85. I was the bearer of the letter from Gen. Green, with another from Col. Fitzgerald . . . and also the books from Granville Sharp."

NEW YORK, December 23, 1789.

SIR, — Your letter of the 27th of November and the Discourse which it enclosed have been duly read. I consider the Sermon on the death of Sir William Pepperell which you were so good as to send me by the desire of Lady Pepperell his Relict as a mark of attention from her which required my particular acknowledgments; and I am sorry, that the death of that lady, which I see announced in the public papers, prevents my thanks being returned to her for her respect and good wishes. You, Sir, will please accept them for yourself in forwarding the discourse, and my request that they may be added to the Rev^d Clark with my approbation of the doctrine inculcated.

I am, Sir, y^{rs} &c^a

G^o WASHINGTON.

Mr. Conway says: "This letter to Dr. Buckminster is especially notable, because, though the larger part was dictated, Washington has added in his own hand his approbation of the doctrine of the discourse. It is doubtful if in all his writings similar approval of any statement of doctrine can be found. . . . The text selected for [this Sermon] was from the 82nd Psalm, 'But ye shall die like men.' Referring to the previous part of the verse (7), 'I have said ye are Gods,' the preacher said that rulers might in a sense be properly so styled, because governments being appointed of God, magistrates were his representatives. He defined God as a moral governor, engaged in a great plan of wisdom and benevolence. As this world is not a state of retribution, it is requisite that these earthly Gods should be removed by Death as well as other Men, in order to compleat the Plan of the Divine Government. Indeed the great ends of the moral administration of God seem to require this, to suppress the progress of vice and promote virtue and goodness in the present state, but especially for the final adjustment of all things with equity.' This, probably, is the doctrine of which Washington intimates his approval."

By Liberty and Fame thy glorious actions crown'd."

Pickering sent this to Washington, with the following remarks:—

“My answer to the rude & insolent letter of the Chevalier de Yrujo, of the 11th of July being long and a number of copies wanted, I concluded to print it, tho' it is not to be published, unless it should be laid before Congress, and they should order it. “The complaints of the French Minister embraced most of the transactions of our government in relation to France from an early period of the present war, which therefore it was necessary carefully to review. A collection has been formed of letters and papers relating to those transactions, which I now lay before you, with a letter to Mr. Pinckney, our Minister at Paris containing an examination of the notes of the French Minister, and such information as I thought might be useful to Mr. Pinckney in any further representations to be made to the French Government.” — From Washington's Message on page 3.

This document was issued in two separate pamphlets; the one in 92 pp., consisting of Pickering's letter of Jan. 16, 1797, to Charles C. Pinckney, Minister Plenipotentiary to France; the other (52), 16, (372) pp., the Appendix of accompanying documents. Transmitted to Washington by Pickering who wrote:—

“A copy of the laws neatly bound, and of my letter to General Pinckney with the documents to which it refers, have been some time packed up for you. Philadelphia July 1, 1797.” — From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied :—

“That the Statement of facts in the printed letter to Genl Pinckney will work conviction, & produce a change of conduct in those who are desirous of information, & not obstinately bent upon wrong measures, I have no doubt;—and I can say with truth, that my mind has never been alarmed by any fears of a War with France. Mt. Vernon 29th Aug^t 1797.”

There is another official issue of Pickering's letter in the collection, without title, but having the following in lieu of it :—

INSTRUCTIONS to Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, John Marshall and Elbridge Gerry, Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary to the French Republic, referred to in the Message of the President of the United States of the third instant [April, 1798]. Philadelphia: printed by Way & Groff. 1798. 20 pp. 8°.

Pickering sent this with the President's message of April 3, 1798, to Washington with the following comments:—

"I do myself the honor to inclose copies of the instructions to and dispatches from the Envoys of the United States at Paris.

No statement of the facts described in the letter can give them their proper force: but the facts as related by the envoys, with the manner and all their circumstances, carry irresistible evidence to every fair and unprejudiced mind, that this display of corruption and injustice exhibits the true character of the French Government. Philadelphia April 11 1798."—
From the original in the State Department.

To this Washington replied:—

MOUNT VERNON, 16 April 1798

DEAR SIR:—Your obliging favour of the 11th inst^l enclosing copies of the Instructions to, & dispatches from the Envoys of the United States at Paris, was received with thankfulness, by the last Post. One would think that the measure of infamy was filled, and the profligacy of, and corruption in the system pursued by the French Directory, required no further disclosure of the principles by which it was actuated than what is contained in the above dispatches, to open the eyes of the blinded; and yet, I am persuaded that those communications will produce no change in the leaders of the opposition, unless there should appear a manifest desertion of their followers.—There is sufficient evidence already in the Aurora, of the turn they intend to give the business, and of the ground they mean to occupy—but I do not believe they will be able to maintain that, or any other much longer.—With very great esteem & regard

I am—Dear Sir—Your obed^t Serv^t

This is another edition of the preceding.

Attached to page 15 of this copy there is a sheet containing additions in Pickering's handwriting; and at the bottom of pages 18, 19 there are notes by the same hand. This copy was sent to Washington, by Pickering, and the character and significance of the manuscript notes are explained in the letter presenting the document, here printed: —

“ I have the honor to inclose copies of the President’s Communication to Congress on the 18th & 21st of January, concerning French affairs. In my report I had noticed (in as gentle manner as possible) M^r Gerry’s conduct, as wrong in principle, and in many particulars very reprehensible: but these (contrary to my wishes) were omitted. There was one omission which I deemed important to retain, as it was the text of my observations on M^r Gerry’s strange opinion of the sincerity of Talleyrand in his talks of negociation prior to the arrival of the Envoys’ dispatches in Europe. For your own eye, I have inserted in the copy of my report now inclosed, the passages referred to, as I had written them. It was this absurd but mischievous opinion which suggested to me the necessity of making a report on the communications. I call it mischievous, because many will read and respect his opinion without examining or discovering that it is without foundation. M^r. Gerry’s whole letter is calculated to apologize for his improper conduct, so improper as to be inexcusable, and of this he is apparently conscious and hence his laborious but weak attempt to justify it. The report as it now is will wound his feelings, but the direct application of my remarks and of divers other passages omitted were the smallest censures which I thought his conduct merited. My letter of June 25, prefixed to his papers, he will not see in print — for he left France before it could have arrived. Philadelphia, Feby 2 1799.” — From the press copy in the Pickering Collection (Massachusetts Historical Society).

Washington’s letter of acknowledgment, preserved in the same collection, reads as follows: —

MOUNT VERNON 10th Feby 1799

DEAR SIR — Your letters of the 24th of the last, and 2^d of the present month, have been duly received; — for which, & their enclosures, I thank you. —

I am not surprised that some members of the H^o of Representatives should dis-relish your Report. — It contains remarks, and speaks truths which they are desirous should be unknown to the People. — I wish the parts which were left out, had been retained. — The crisis, in my opinion, calls loudly for plain dealing; that the Citizens at large may be well informed, and decide, with respect to public measures upon a thorough knowledge of facts. Concealment, is a species of mis-information; — and misrepresentation and false alarms found the ground work of opposition. — The plan of w^{ch} is, to keep the People as much as possible in ignorance & terror; for it is believed by themselves that a perfect understanding of our real situation, in regard to our foreign relations would be a death blow to their consequence and struggles, & for that reason, have always something on foot to disquiet the public mind.

I am sorry to hear that M^r Gerry is pursuing a mischievous path. — That he was led astray by his own vanity & self importance, and was the dupe of Diplomatic Skill, I never had a doubt; but these doubts were accompanied by faint hopes (faint indeed they were) that he possessed candour, fortitude & manliness enough to have come forward with an open declaration that, he had been practised upon, & was deceiv’d. — But M^r Gerry’s mind is not enlarged enough for such conduct as this; especially, assailed as I presume it was, on his arrival, by those whose labours are unceasing, to inculcate their doctrines of hostility against the proceedings of their own government. — The Session of Congress is drawing fast to a close; — what traits it will leave behind of strong, & energetic measures, remains to be seen. — Such I hope as will shew that, we are ready at all times to negociate upon fair, honorable terms, but never to be bullied or duped into them. — With very great esteem & reg^d I am always Yours.

G^o WASHINGTON.

[VARLO, CHARLES.]

The finest Part of America. To be sold or lett, from eight hundred to four thousand Acres, in a Farm, all that entire Estate, called Long Island, in New Albion, lying near New York : belonging to the Earl Palatine of Albion, granted to his Predecessor, Earl Palatine of Albion, by King Charles the First. * * * The Situation of Long Island is well known, therefore needs no Description here, New Albion is a Part of the Continent of Terra Firma, described in the Charter, to begin at Cape May . . . ; taking its Course into a Square, bending to the North by a right Line 120 Miles. [Then follows a description of the bounds of the grant, comprising a tract 120 miles square.] N. B. Great Encouragement will be given to improving Tenants, by letting the Lands very cheap, on Leases of Lives, renewal for ever. . . .

London, 1784. 30 pp. 8°.

Lacks the title-page. Title taken from the Pennsylvania magazine of history and biography, vol. 7, pp. 53-54.

Contents : A true Copy of the Grant of King Charles the First, to Sir Edmund Plowden, Earl Palatine of Albion, of the Province of New Albion, in America ; Copy of a Lease granted to Sir Thomas Danby, by Lord Earl Palatine, of Albion, of 10,000 Acres of Land, for ever, and Sir Thomas Danby is to plant 100 residenter Settlers thereon, &c. registered in St. Mary, in Maryland, along with many other deeds concerning Albion ; A Release of such Persons as are mentioned in the Grant, in trust for the Earl of Albion, wherein they deliver up their Claim or Trust, in Consideration of 500 Acres of Land, to be given to them and their Heirs, out of the Lands of New Albion ; The Address of the Right Hon. Lord Earl Palatine of Albion, to the Public.

This pamphlet is an exceedingly rare one; there was a perfect copy in the Library of Charles H. Kalbfleisch, Esq., of New York City; and Whitehead in his "East Jersey under the Proprietors" mentions two other copies, one as belonging to the late John Rutherford of Newark, N. J., and the other to the late Henry C. Murphy of New York. An examination of the latter's catalogue fails to confirm this statement. William Rawle, the attorney for Varlo in the prosecution of his claims, had a copy, but, it is said, to have long since passed out of the possession of the family.

The author of the pamphlet came to this country in 1784 for the purpose of establishing his claims to a third part of the territory embraced in the Plowden patent of New Albion, which comprised all of New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania "embraced in a square, the eastern side of which, forty leagues in length, extended (along the coast) from Sandy Hook to Cape May, together with Long Island, and all other isles and islands in the sea within ten leagues of the shores of the said region."

To promote the acknowledgment of his claim, Varlo printed the present pamphlet, containing a translation of the original charter to Plowden and other documents enumerated in the contents, and distributed it throughout the States whose lands were involved in the Plowden patents. He also issued a proclamation in the form of a handbill, addressed to the people of New Albion in the name of the Earl of Albion.

The genuineness of the documents printed by Varlo has been disputed by Penington in an article entitled "An Examination of Beauchamp Plantagenet's Description of the Province of New Albion," published in volume four of the Memoirs of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. The authenticity of the Plowden charter of 1634 has been established by the discovery in 1880 of the charter in the original Latin, preserved in the Public Record Office at Dublin, where Varlo stated that it existed; a copy of the latter is printed with an introductory note by G. B. Keen in the Pennsylvania magazine of history, vol. 7, pp. 50-66.

Dr. Neill in an article on "Sir Edmund Plowden, Lord Earl Palatinate, Governor and Captain General of New Albion in North America," published in Pennsylvania magazine of history, vol. 5, pp. 206-216, takes ground against the validity of the charter, as no evidence could be adduced of its having had affixed the great seal of England. Varlo's Documents are in part printed in Hazard's "Historical Collections," volume I.

Bound with other pamphlets in a volume lettered "America." Contents given under WILLIAMS, J. An Enquiry into the Truth of the Tradition, etc.

— Ordinances passed at a Convention held at the Town of Richmond, in the Colony of Virginia, on Monday the 17th of July, 1775.

Williamsburg: printed by Alexander Purdie. [1775.] 51 pp. 4°.

This is probably one of the publications sent by Richard Henry Lee to Washington, mentioned in a letter, dated 26 September, 1775, as follows:—

"As I suppose it will be agreeable to you to know what is passing in Virginia, I have inclosed you the proceedings of our last Convention, with two of Purdie's Gazettes." — From Sparks's Correspondence of the American Revolution, vol. i. p. 51.

This Convention took decisive steps towards Revolution. Among its first acts was the passage of an ordinance providing for raising an armed force for the protection and defence of the Colony. The introduction of this ordinance occasioned great excitement, as described by Randall in his Life of Jefferson. 'The ordinance as finally passed was drawn up by George Mason, who sent a copy to Washington with the following remarks: "I enclose you the ordinance for raising an armed force, for the defence and protection of the Colony; it is a little defaced, but is the only copy I have at present with me. You will find some little inaccuracies in it; but upon the whole, I hope it will meet with your approbation. Oct. 14, 1775." Other important ordinances passed were those providing for the appointment of a Committee of Safety; regulating elections; establishing a manufactory of arms, and enacting articles for the government of troops.

[WHARTON, CHARLES HENRY, D.D. 1748-1833.]

A Poetical Epistle to His Excellency George Washington, Esq. Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States of America, from An Inhabitant of the State of Maryland. To which is annexed, A Short Sketch of General Washington's Life and Character.

Annapolis printed 1779: London reprinted for C. Dilly; J. Almon. . . .
M DCC LXXX. 24 pp. Portrait. Sm. 4^o.

Washington's autograph on the title-page.

The authorship of this has been attributed to C. H. Worster and others. That the Rev. C. H. Wharton was the author was shown by Bishop Doane in his "The Remains of the Rev. Charles Henry Wharton, D.D.," Phila., 1834; but the fact does not seem to have been recorded in the bibliographies until its appearance in Baker's Bibliotheca Washingtoniana. The New York reprint of 1865 is printed without any indication of the author's name; and Stockbridge's Catalogue of the Harris collection, as well as the Brinley Catalogue, gives the author as C. H. Worster.

The first edition of which we have definite knowledge is the Annapolis edition of 1779, of which this is a reprint. Bishop Doane thinks there was an edition in 1778, because a correspondent of Wharton's wrote, Nov. 2, 1778, "there have been two criticisms on the poem, — the first by the pencil-marker, and writer of the enclosed note; the other by the celebrated Persian Jones." It is quite possible that the criticisms were made upon manuscript copies, as the author made more than one copy in manuscript. Bishop Doane had a copy; and another came into the hands of David Pulsifer of Boston, in 1857, since owned by Dr. Norton, of Everett, Massachusetts. Probably Wharton distributed manuscript copies among his friends for their examination.

The editions of which we find any definite description, beside the one under notice, are those issued at Annapolis in 1779; Philadelphia, 1781; Providence, 1781; Springfield, 1782; London, 1796; New York, 1865; and Boston, 1881. This last is printed from the manuscript mentioned above as belonging to David Pulsifer, and varies slightly from the earlier editions. The author of the poem was born in Maryland in 1748; he was educated for the priesthood, and at the time of its production was a chaplain to the Roman Catholics of Worcester, England. The object of the publication was the raising of money for the benefit of American prisoners in England. Bishop Doane's Memoir gives some extracts from the author's correspondence in regard to the purpose of the work and the means taken to procure the portrait which the volume contains. Wharton writes in one of his letters, "I have at last got a print from P—s [Paris] of G. W—, a tolerably good likeness; but as it is a front face, and only of bust size, I got W— [West] to promise to make a full length drawing, in order to get a print engraved." The portrait in the volume is engraved by W. Sharp; but whether or not West made the drawing is not known.

The anonymous sketch of Washington, which occupies pp. 14-24 of this edition of the Poetical Epistle, was written by John Bell of Maryland, and has been many times reprinted. The various editions will be noticed in the part of this Catalogue devoted to Washingtoniana.

[WHARTON, SAMUEL. Merchant, 1732-1800.]

View of the Title to Indiana, a Tract of Country on the River Ohio. Containing Indian Conferences at Johnson-Hall, in May, 1765 — the Deed of the Six Nations to the Proprietors of Indiana — the Minutes of the Congress at Fort Stanwix, in October and November, 1768 — the Deed of the Indians, settling the Boundary Line between the English and Indians Lands — and the Opinion of Counsel on the Title of the Proprietors of Indiana.

Philadelphia : printed by Styner & Cist. M DCC LXXVI. 46 pp. 8°.

The name of Indiana was given by the grantees to a tract of land ceded to them by the Indians at Fort Stanwix in 1768. The territory granted covered that forming a large part of the present State of West Virginia. The Indiana Company was merged into a larger undertaking, called the Walpole Company, which had a scheme for founding a State on the western lands under the name of Vandalia.

Franklin was one of the principal promoters of this plan, and gave aid to Samuel Wharton, who spent several years in England trying to procure a patent from the government. In 1775, the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantation had reported favorably upon the petition, and a grant was about to be given, when the "Lord President of His Majesty's Privy Council requested that the Honorable Mr. Walpole and his associates would wait for the grant aforesaid and the plan of government of Vandalia until hostilities, which had commenced between Great Britain and the United Colonies, should cease."

In 1780, Franklin presented a Memorial to Congress (printed in vol. 10 of Bigelow's edition of his works) reciting the history of the cause in England, and asking for a grant of the same privileges as were to have been given by the British government.

Samuel Wharton, one of the principal grantees of Indiana, is mentioned in several places as having written a pamphlet in support of the Indiana grant; but not identified. The present publication is undoubtedly from his pen; and another entitled "Plain Facts; being an Examination into the Rights of the Indian Nations of America, to their respective Countries; and a Vindication of the Grant from the Six united Nations of Indians to the Proprietors of Indiana," Philadelphia, 1781, is also by him. The last-named is an enlargement of the first pamphlet, and Wharton's authorship is attested by Du Simitière in his Note-books preserved in the Library of Congress.

Washington's copy of the "View of the Title to Indiana" was sent to him by Col. George Morgan, one of the Indiana grantees, as shown by a letter from him to Dr. John Morgan, dated April 10, 1776, in which he says:—

"The 7th instant I received your favour of the 24th Ult^o. from Cambridge. As it is chiefly on the Subject of General Washington's 9000 acres of Land in Indiana, I will endeavour to explain the Matter more fully. . . .

"For the General's information I inclose him a Copy of our Deed & Minutes of the Treaty."

The Indiana grant interfered with the interests of the Ohio Company, in which Washington was concerned; and he appears to have sought from Dr. Morgan, then in camp at Cambridge, information as to the claims of the Indiana grantees.

The schemes of the different western land companies are treated in an article by F. J. Turner on "Western State-making in the Revolutionary era" in the American Historical Review for October, 1895. There it is stated that Col. Morgan wrote to a Kentucky friend in December, 1780, that he would soon send him a "pamphlet now in the press on the subject" (the rights to the western lands). Mr. Turner advances the opinion that Morgan had reference to Paine's Public Good, which was issued Dec. 30, 1780. In view of the fact that Morgan was in close association with Wharton in the Indiana undertaking, it seems more probable that he refers to the latter's pamphlet "Plain Facts," published in 1781.

Paine has been accused of having written his "Public Good" in the pay of the Indiana Company; and Morgan's supposed reference to it is thought to be evidence of the truth of the charge.

WILMER, REV. JAMES JONES. Born 1749.

A Sermon, on the Doctrine of the New-Jerusalem Church: being the first promulgated within the United States of America. Delivered on the first Sunday in April, 1792, in the Court-House of Baltimore-Town, by James Wilmer, examined and approved for the Ministerial Office, by the late Dr. Terrick, Bishop of London.

Baltimore: printed and sold by William Goddard and James Angell. M.DCC.XCII. 23 pp. 8°.

Given to Washington by the author; see correspondence printed below.

"The first New Jerusalem Church was, by permission, opened in the Court House of this town by the Rev. Mr. Wilmer, amidst a large assemblage of hearers of various denominations. The Hon. Judge Chase was present, as well as several other liberal and enlightened gentlemen of the bar." — Scharf. Chronicles of Baltimore.

The preacher of this Sermon was the first minister to teach the doctrines of the New (Swedenborgian) Church in the United States. In January, 1793, he transmitted to Washington an Address from the Members of the New Church at Baltimore, which was accompanied by some New Church books. The correspondence begins with the following:—

"Allow us, by the first opportunity, to present to Your Excellency, among other Tracts, the Compendium of the New Church, signified by the New Jerusalem in the revelation, as the readiest means to furnish you with a just idea of the Heavenly Doctrines."

The Address is dated January 22, 1793, and was signed by Hy. Didier, Secy., pro tem.

Learn transmitted under date of January 27, 1793, Washington's reply to this Address, which follows:—

To the Members of the New Church at Baltimore

GENTLEMEN, — It has ever been my pride to merit the approbation of my fellow citizens, by a faithful and honest discharge of the duties annexed to those Stations in which they have been pleased to place me; and the dearest rewards of my Services have been their testimonies of esteem and confidence with which — they have honored me. But to the manifest interposition of an over-ruling Providence and to the patriotic exertions of united America, are to be ascribed those events which have given us a respectable rank among the nations of the Earth.

We have abundant reason to rejoice, that in this land, the light of truth and reason have triumphed over the power of bigotry and superstition, and that every person may here worship God according to the dictates of his own heart. In this enlightened age and in this land of equal liberty, it is our boast that a man's religious tenets will not forfeit the protection of the laws, nor deprive him of the right of attaining and holding the highest offices that are known in the United States.

Your prayers for my present and future felicity are received with gratitude; and I sincerely wish, Gentlemen, that you may, in your social & individual capacities, taste those blessings which a gracious God bestows upon the righteous

The Virginia Declaration of Rights is one of the most important Revolutionary documents, and bears a striking resemblance in many points to the Declaration of Independence, for which paper it undoubtedly furnished suggestions and in some cases phraseology. It may be said to be definitely settled that the author of this document was George Mason of Gunston Hall, Virginia. The original draft of this instrument was presented to the State of Virginia by General John Mason in 1844, and bears upon it the following memoranda in the handwriting of George Mason: "Virginia Declaration of Rights in 1776. Copy of first Draught by G. M. This Declaration of Rights was the first in America: it received few alterations or additions in the Virginia Convention (some of them not for the better), and was afterwards closely imitated by the other United States." A facsimile reproduction of this draft is given in Kate Mason Rowland's "Life of Mason." A comparison of the Declaration as drafted by Mason, and as adopted by the Convention shows that the alterations from Mason's draft consisted in the addition of two articles, "not of a fundamental nature," the tenth and fourteenth, so that the two concluding ones in Mason's paper appear as the fifteenth and sixteenth.

That Mason was the author of the Virginia Constitution, as well as of the Declaration of Rights, was the common opinion until 1825, when Judge Woodward advanced the theory that Jefferson was the author.

Judge Woodward's argument brought out the following from Jefferson: "The fact is unquestionable that the Bill of Rights and the Constitution of Virginia were drawn originally by George Mason, one of our really great men, and of the first order of greatness." The question of the authorship, and the characteristic features of the Constitution are examined in detail in Rowland's Life of Mason.

This collection was edited by John Carey, LL.D., a brother of Mathew Carey. In regard to his work, he wrote to Washington, from London, March 31, 1795, as follows:—

SIR: By the Ship Factor, Captain Bowen, I have the honor of transmitting to Your Excellency two copies of your letters to Congress, written during the first four years of that memorable contest, which, under your auspices, so happily terminated in the establishment of American Independence.

If, in any passage, I have mistaken your sense, — if, by any errors of the press, it is obscured, — permit me, Sir, to hope that such mistakes will be excused, when with great truth I declare, that I have used my best endeavors to guard against them, and intend to rectify in a second edition whatever I can discover to be wrong in the first.

Respecting the plan of publication that I have adopted, which I fear Your Excellency will at first sight disapprove, and which is far from being satisfactory to myself, — I would beg leave to refer to one of the copies above mentioned, — the one in boards, — containing some manuscript remarks expressive of the motives that influenced me on the occasion. . . .

Your Excellency's most obedient Servant

JOHN CAREY.

THE WRITINGS of George Washington; being his Correspondence, Addresses, Messages, and other official Papers, official and private, selected and published from the original Manuscripts; with a Life of the Author, Notes and Illustrations. By Jared Sparks.

Boston, 1834-37. 12 vols. Portraits. Plans. 8°.

The method followed by Sparks in editing the Washington letters has been the subject of much controversy. Lord Mahon in the sixth volume of his History of England attacked the integrity of Sparks's work. In reply, Sparks printed three letters in the Evening Post in April, 1852, which were republished in a pamphlet entitled "A Reply to the Strictures of Lord Mahon and Others on the Mode of editing the Writings of Washington," Cambridge, 1852. This pamphlet, with the addition of a review of Lord Mahon's History by J. G. Palfrey, from the North American Review, was republished in England later in the same year. The publication of Sparks's Reply called forth "A Letter from Lord Mahon to Mr. Sparks, being an Answer to his Reply to the Strictures of Lord Mahon and Others . . .," in which he retracted his most serious charge that Sparks had made "unauthorized additions," but reaffirmed what he termed the far lesser charges of "corrections and omissions." As a rejoinder, Sparks issued another pamphlet entitled "Letter to Lord Mahon, being an Answer to his 'Letter addressed to the Editor of Washington's Writings,'" Boston, 1852, in which he replied to Mahon's charge, namely, "that a desire to save the dignity of Washington, and a tenderness for the people of New England caused the corrections and omissions."

Lord Mahon's worst charges had been based upon a comparison of the Reed letters as they appeared in W. B. Reed's "Life and Correspondence of Joseph Reed," with the text of the same as given by Sparks. Shortly after the publication of Sparks's Reply, a "Reprint of the original Letters from Washington to Reed" was brought out by W. B. Reed. To show Sparks's changes, the original letters were given verbatim from the manuscript with Sparks's variations in parallel columns. Sparks now published "Remarks on a Reprint of the original Letters from Washington to Joseph Reed," in which the text as printed by W. B. Reed and that of the Letter Books were printed side by side. From this the differences between the text of the Letter Books, upon which Sparks depended, and that of the letters sent out, were discoverable, and also the extent of Sparks's editorial corrections. The whole controversy is gone over in detail from a standpoint friendly to Sparks, by Prof. Herbert B. Adams, in a chapter on "Lord Mahon and the Reed Letters" in his "The Life and Writings of Jared Sparks."

Boston: Marsh, Capen, Lyon, and Webb. 1840. 2 vols. Vol. 1. 402 pp. Vol. 2. 388 pp. 12°.

Only a few copies of this edition are known to exist; the work having been suppressed as infringing on Sparks's copyright. The plates were transferred to England, and issued in 1851 under the title given below.

The editor, Mr. Upham, was unaware of the existence of the London edition until a copy was shown him by Dr. Samuel A. Green, Librarian of the Historical Society, in the summer of 1869.

THE LIFE of General Washington, first President of the United States, written by Himself, comprising his Memoirs and Correspondence, as prepared by him for Publication, including several Letters now first printed. Edited by the Rev. C. W. Upham, of Boston, U. S. In two Volumes.

London: George Willis. MDCCCLI. 2 vols. Vol. I. 443 pp. Portrait. II. 423 pp. 8°.

The engraved title-pages and the portrait of Franklin belonging in vol. ii. are missing.

— Same. London: Office of the National illustrated Library. MDCCCLII. 2 vols. Vol. I. 443 pp. Portrait. Vol. II. 423 pp. Portrait of Franklin. Engraved title-pages. 8°.

Two copies; one of which is extra-illustrated.

THE WRITINGS of George Washington. Collected and edited, by Worthington Chauncey Ford.

New York & London: G. P. Putnam's Sons. 1889-93. 14 vols. 8°.

This edition contains letters not printed in Sparks's collection, but omits many which are found there. Consequently both editions must be consulted by the historical student who wishes to have all the printed material before him. Mr. Ford claims for his edition greater textual exactness. The relative merits of Sparks and Ford are discussed by Prof. Herbert B. Adams in the introduction to his "The Life and Writings of Jared Sparks."

UNPUBLISHED Washington letters: to Bouquet, 1758, with notes by William Henry Smith.

(In Magazine of American history, 1888, vol. 19, pp. 116-143.)

These letters were written from the Camp at Fort Cumberland, twenty of them in July and August, 1758, and two dated Sept. 2 and Nov. 29, 1758.

They are here printed from the Bouquet Papers preserved in the British Museum. The editor prints some extracts in parallel columns with the text of Sparks. The divergences give the editor opportunity to declare that if Mahon had had access to the original Bouquet letters, he "would never have qualified the indictment, as he did, as to additions."

This charge was noticed by Dr. Winsor, in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, who remarked that the discrepancies are fully explained by the fact that Sparks depended upon the Letter Books, "in which Washington revised his early draughts thirty years after the originals were sent to his correspondent."

FOUR unpublished letters from Washington's family correspondence: President Washington to his sister, Mrs. Betty Lewis, Mount Vernon, Oct. 7, 1772; Mrs. Betty Lewis to Washington, Jan. 29, 1793, April 6, 1793; President Washington to his nephew, Major George Lewis, 7th April, 1796.
(In Magazine of American history, 1884, vol. 11, pp. 71-74.)

LETTERS to Tench Tilghman, and others. 23d Mar., 1773; 9th of July, 1782; 10th Jan., 2d Oct., 1783; 18 May, 1784; 2d June, 14 July, 29 Aug., 1785; May 10th, 1786; 5 June, 1786.
(In Memoir of Lieut. Col. Tench Tilghman, pp. 109-122. Albany, 1876.)

CORRESPONDENCE between General George Washington and Richard Henry Lee, July 10, 1775, to Aug. 2, 1789.

(In Massachusetts historical Society. Collections, 5th series, vol. 10, pp. 1-281. Boston, 1888.)

Contains 111 letters from Washington. Pp. 326-329 contain a list of the letters; those that have been printed in other publications being indicated.

THE WASHINGTON-DUCHÉ Letters. Now printed, for the first time, from the Original Manuscripts, with an introductory Note by Worthington Chauncey Ford.

Brooklyn, N. Y.: privately printed. 1890. 38 pp. Sheet containing facsimile of a page of Duché's letter. Sm. 4°.

The original letter by Duché to Washington was for a long time undiscovered. Sparks stated his inability to find it, but it was finally brought to light by the present editor, who found it enclosed in Washington's letter to the President of Congress of Oct. 16, 1777.

The Duché letter first got into print at the hands of Rivington the Tory printer of New York. The Rivington text was used by Sparks in his edition of Washington's Writings. The present text is the first printed from the manuscript.

The pamphlet also includes a letter from Duché to Washington, of Aug. 5, 1775, concerning the dedication to him of a sermon preached to Dickinson's battalion on the 7th of July, 1775; extract from Washington's letter to the President of Congress enclosing the offensive Duché letter of Oct. 8, 1777; a letter from Washington to Francis Hopkinson in regard to the same; Hopkinson's letter to Duché, Nov. 14, 1777; and letters which passed between Duché and Washington in 1783 in regard to the wish of the former to return to America.

Berne, chez la Nouvelle Société typographique. 1782. 304 pp. 2 folded sheets. Portrait of Washington. Baker. 8°.

"These papers were never published by order of the House of Lords as stated on the title-page. The active and intelligent Collector of Secret Intelligence for France was so ingenious as to get access to and to copy, translate, and print many of the papers laid on the table of the House of Lords. This book was probably printed by our Allies, the French, in 1782 to influence the Peace Negotiations going on in Paris. It is not in the Library of Parliament, nor was I able to find a copy in any library in London till one was very recently procured by the British Museum. Several libraries in America possess it. The State Library of Berne has it. The copy containing Manuscript Notes by Clinton, now in the Library of the Department of State at Washington, has the above imprint [Londres et Versailles, chez Poinçot], and a portrait of Washington; others bear the imprint Berne, chez la Nouvelle Société Typographique, 1782." — B. F. Stevens, The Campaign in Virginia, 1781.

3. THE SPURIOUS LETTERS.

LETTERS from General Washington. To several of his Friends in the Year 1776. In which are set forth a fairer and fuller View of American Politics, than ever yet transpired, or the Public could be made acquainted with through any other Channel.

London: printed for J. Bew. M.DCC.LXXVII. (2), 73 pp. 12°.

This is the first edition of the collection of the seven letters, which Washington declared to be fabrications. The letters were put out with all the appearances of genuineness, the compiler ingeniously explaining in the preface how they came into his hands. He pretended that they were taken from Billy, Washington's old body servant, who had been brought a prisoner into the English camp.

The London edition was reviewed by John Carey in the Critical Review, who cast doubt upon the integrity of the letters. A copy of the number of the magazine containing the article, sent by Carey to Washington, is in the Athenæum Collection. See page 61 of this Catalogue.

The letters were first reprinted in this country in Rivington's Gazette, with the exception of the letter to Mrs. Washington, which was put out as a broadside, probably at New York. From these sources they were reprinted in other newspapers, and early in 1778 the whole collection was published in a volume by Rivington at New York, and also by another publisher at Philadelphia. The titles of these issues are given below.

When the publication came to Washington's notice, he wrote to Richard Henry Lee, disavowing the authorship of the letters, saying:—

"These letters are written with a great deal of art. The intermixture of so many family circumstances (which, by the by, want foundation in truth) gives an air of plausibility, which renders the villainy greater; as the whole is a contrivance to answer the most diabolical purposes. Who the author of them is, I know not. From information, or acquaintance, he must have had some knowledge of the component parts of my family; but he has most egregiously mistaken facts in several instances. The design of his labors is as clear as the sun in its meridian brightness."

It has been suggested that the author of the forged letters was a "young Episcopal clergyman," the Rev. John Vardill, an American, then (1776) living in England. A letter from Tilghman, quoted by Worthington C. Ford in his edition of Washington's Writings, gives the name of John Randolph as the probable fabricator of the letters; and a manuscript note upon a copy of the broadside issue of the letter to Mrs. Washington, preserved in the Du Simitière Collection, which reads "Spurious: wrote in London by a Mr. Randolph of Virginia," affords contributory evidence to the theory of Randolph's authorship.

Tilghman's letter reads: "The letters published under General Washington's signature are not genuine. . . . He suspects Jack Randolph for the author, as the letters contain a knowledge of his family affairs that none but a Virginian could be acquainted with. The sentiments are noble, and such as the General himself often expresses."

The "Jack Randolph" named was John Randolph, father of Edmund, Washington's first Secretary of State. He was Attorney-General of Virginia under Lord Dunmore, and acted as an intermediary between the latter and the House of Burgesses after Dunmore's flight from Williamsburg in 1775. At the outbreak of the Revolution, Randolph sailed for England, and for a time resided with Lord Dunmore. During his residence abroad, he was in constant correspondence with Jefferson, who considered him friendly to the American cause.

LETTERS from General Washington, to several of his Friends in the Year 1776. In which are set forth, a fairer and fuller View of American Politics, than ever yet transpired, or the Public could be made acquainted with through any other Channel. Together with the Reverend Mr. Jacob Duché's (late Chaplain to the Congress) Letter to Mr. Washington, and an Answer to it, by Mr. John Parke, a Lieutenant-Colonel in Mr. Washington's Army.

[New York:] Printed [by J. Rivington] in the Year 1778. (2), 53 pp. 12°.

Two copies.

This is assigned to Rivington's press on the authority of Worthington C. Ford, who has compared the type with that of Rivington's newspaper. The edition given below was probably published at Philadelphia.

LETTERS from General Washington, to several of his Friends in the Year 1776. In which are set forth, a fairer and fuller View of American Politics, than ever yet transpired, or the Public could be made acquainted with through any other Channel. Together with the Reverend Mr. Jacob Duché's (late Chaplain to the Congress) Letter to Mr. Washington, and an Answer to it, by Mr. John Parke, a Lieutenant-Colonel in Mr. Washington's Army.

[Philadelphia.] Printed in the Year 1778. (2), 52 pp. 12°.

The pamphlet has actually 53 pp., the same number as the Rivington issue, but two pages being numbered 48 cause the apparent discrepancy. This is given in Hildeburn's "Issues of the Press in Pennsylvania."

This edition is not described by Worthington C. Ford in his bibliography of the "Spurious Letters;" and it was apparently unknown to him. The fact of there being a difference in these issues has hitherto escaped notice. The type of the pamphlet is distinctly different from that of the Rivington edition, the pagination varies, as noted above, and the title-page has the word "Politics" so spelled, while in the Rivington it is given "Politicks."

In 1795, at a critical period of American politics, the Letters were republished at Philadelphia as a part of the hostile attacks on Washington; and in 1796 they were issued as "Epistles, domestic, confidential, and official," by Rivington at New York. These editions are described below.

LETTERS from General Washington to Several of his Friends, in June and July, 1776; in which is set forth, an interesting View of American Politics, at that all-important Period.

Philadelphia: republished at the Federal Press. 1795. 44 pp. 8°.

Two copies.

"The following letters are at this time republished from a Boston Edition, now out of print, as furnishing an interesting appendix to the Official Letters of General Washington, which have lately made their appearance." — Preface.

This is a reprint of the 1778 edition of the "Spurious Letters," brought out at the time when much bad feeling existed in consequence of Washington's action in regard to Mr. Jay. It was intended to add to the disaffection towards him, by showing that he had always entertained feelings of partiality for England. The Boston edition spoken of in the preface is believed by Ford to be imaginary, as no such edition can be traced. In 1796 the letters were reproduced in the work next described below.

EPISTLES domestic, confidential, and official, from General Washington, written about the Commencement of the American Contest, when he entered on the Command of the Army of the United States. With an interesting Series of his Letters, particularly to the British Admirals, Arbuthnot and Digby, to Gen. Sir Henry Clinton, Lord Cornwallis, Sir Guy Carleton, Marquis de la Fayette, &c. &c. To Benjamin Harrison, Esq. Speaker of the House of Delegates in Virginia, to Admiral the Count de Grasse, General Sullivan, respecting an attack of New-York; including many applications and addresses presented to him with his answers: Orders and Instructions, on important occasions, to his Aids de Camp, &c. &c. &c. None of which have been printed in the two Volumes published a few months ago.

New-York: printed by G. Robinson, . . . and sold by James Rivington. M,DCC,XCVI. (2), xiv, 303 pp. Portrait (Baker 132). 8°.

Three copies; two of which have the printed leaf (described below) containing Washington's letter to Pickering, in which he designates the forged letters contained in the volume.

January 1, 1796, Rivington wrote in a letter to Bradford, of Philadelphia, the following in regard to the intended publication of this work: —

"As I shall soon have ready the Epistles, Domestick & Confidential of General [Washington] together with his Letters, Orders & Instructions to his own Generals as Sullivan, La Fayette, &c., &c., to Mr. Speaker Harrison of Virginia House of Delegates — To Lord Cornwallis, Sir Henry Clinton, Admirals Digby & Arbuthnot, to Admiral the Comte de Grasse, &c. . . . In one Octavo Volume upwards of three hundred pages, in half binding, price twelve shillings, with the best likeness of the General by way of Frontispiece, a book far more momentous than any yet produced respecting the General's conduct and character, or ever was digested, not one of which is in the two Octavo volumes published the last Summer: of these I request you to write in a post or two how many to send, as no person shall have one copy before you." — Printed in Henkels' Catalogue, No. 712.

The spurious letters occupy pages 4-66 of the volume, the remainder (pp. 67-303) is taken up with a collection of miscellaneous letters called the Appendix.

Shortly after the appearance of the work, Washington wrote to Pickering denouncing the publication, and giving a list of the fraudulent letters. Pickering caused this letter to be published in the United States Gazette, and it was afterward printed in page form, and it is found inserted in some of the copies. Worthington C. Ford says in the preface to his edition of the "Spurious Letters": —

"In a few copies of the Epistles I find pasted into the front a reprint of the Washington-Pickering letter, printed in octavo form, and probably designed to protect the seller in case any question should arise, rather than disabuse the misplaced confidence of the buyer in the genuineness of his purchase. When I came across this leaf in one copy of the Epistles in my father's collection, I thought it unique, and it was long before I came across another. In the catalogue of Henry Steven's sale of 1872 mention is made of the 'rare page printed to match' the book, and the catalogue adds, 'This ought to have ended the matter, but it did not, for to this day there are writers who from choice or warped moral vision give credit to lies rather than truth.'"

Washington's letter reads in part as follows: —

"At the conclusion of my public employments, I have thought it expedient to notice the publication of certain forged letters, which first appeared in the year 1777, and were obtruded upon the public as mine. They are said by the editor to have been found in a small portmanteau that I had left in the care of my mulatto servant, named Billy, who, it is pretended, was taken prisoner at Fort Lee, in 1776. The period, when these letters were first printed, will be recollected, and what were the impressions they were intended to produce on the public mind. It was then supposed to be of some consequence to strike at the integrity of the motives of the American Commander-in-Chief, and to paint his inclinations as at variance with his professions and his duty. Another crisis in the affairs of America having occurred, the same weapon has been resorted to, to wound my character and deceive the people." This letter furnishes a list of the fabricated epistles, and after an explicit disavowal of them it closes with the request that the declaration "may be deposited in the office of the Department of State, as a testimony of the truth to the present generation and to posterity." Washington adverts to the same in a letter to Benjamin Walker, of Jan. 12, 1797, and again in writing to the Rev. Wm. Gordon, the historian, under date of Oct. 15, 1797.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S Rules of Civility traced to their Sources and restored. By Moncure D. Conway.

New York: United States Book Company. [1890.] 180 pp. 16°.

Pp. 55-180 contain Washington's Rules, with the French text from which they are derived. The remote source of these rules is shown by Mr. Conway to have been a work composed in 1595 at the College of La Flèche by the "pensionnaires," entitled "Bonséance de la Conversation entre les Hommes." The work was translated into Latin by Father Périn, the latter adding a chapter of his own. This was translated into French, and published in 1663, as "Les Maximes de la Gentillesse et de l'Honnesteté en la Conversation entre les Hommes." From this last, and from an English version by Francis Hawkins entitled "Youth's Behaviour," containing some additional precepts, were derived, but not at first hand, the Rules written in Washington's copy book.

Mr. Conway's theory is that Washington took down these precepts from the oral instructions of Jean Marye, a French Catholic teacher, whose school he attended at Fredericksburg.

MÉMOIRE contenant le Précis des Faits, avec leurs Pièces justificatives pour servir de Réponse aux Observations envoyées par les Ministres d'Angleterre dans les Cours de l'Europe.

A Paris, suivant la copie de l'Imprimerie royale. M.DCCLVI. xii, 275, (1), 12 pp. 12°.

This is a reprint of an edition in quarto issued by the French Government, and transmitted to the Courts of Europe as a justification of the War with England. It recounts among the aggressions of the British the two expeditions led by Washington in 1753 and 1754 respectively, in the course of which the killing of Jumonville by men under Washington's command is called an assassination. This expression was embodied in the terms of capitulation at Fort Necessity, but escaped the notice of the interpreters for Washington, and was thus allowed to go as an admission of the charge on Washington's part.

In this volume was printed for the first time, in a French translation, Washington's Journal of the expedition of 1754, which, with other papers, had been found by the French at Fort Necessity after the departure of the English troops. The volume was translated into English and first published at Philadelphia in 1757, and also in the same year at New York.

The other papers relating to Washington's Expedition here printed are: Copie des ordres donnés à M. de Jumonville par M. Contrecoeur le 23 mai, 1754; Copie de la Sommation dont M. de Jumonville étoit porteur; Lettre écrite par M. de Contrecoeur, le 2 Juin, 1754, à M. le Marquis du Quesne; Journal de la campagne de M. de Villiers, 1754; Capitulation accordée par M. de Villiers, Capitaine commandant les troupes de Sa Majesté, à celui des troupes Angloises dans le fort de Nécessité, le 3. Juillet, 1754; Traduction d'une Lettre écrite du fort du Quesne par Robert Stobo Anglois, un des otages fournis pour sûreté de la capitulation accordée aux troupes Angloises commandées par le sieur Washington.

The volume also contains translations of Braddock's papers captured at the Battle of the Monongahela, and closes with a copy of the Declaration of War against Great Britain, dated the 9th of June, 1756.

Hildeburn says that "Proposals for publishing, by subscription, a translation, appeared in the Pa. Gazette, Feb. 17, 1757. In May the subscribers were informed that the volume was ready for delivery. Two editions (of the same translation) were also printed in New York in 1757 under the same title. A translation also appeared in London in "The Conduct of the late Ministry." Part of it was appended to the edition of Livingstone's Review of the Military Operations in North America, printed in Dublin, 1757. "The Mystery Reveal'd," published at London in 1759, also had a translation.

"To preserve the continuity of the story I have embodied such of Washington's letters as written during his march to the Ohio into a translation of a journal which the French captured at Fort Necessity. . . . I have compared the following with the French and believe it to be the most accurate translation yet made." — W. C. Ford.

JOURNAL of Colonel George Washington, Commanding a Detachment of Virginia Troops, sent by Robert Dinwiddie, Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, across the Alleghany Mountains in 1754, to build Forts at the Head of the Ohio. It comprises the History of Marches, Campings, and Events, a Skirmish with the French, and the Death of their Leader, De Jumonville.

The Journal fell into the hands of the enemy, who, in 1756, printed a version of it into French; a new translation of this into English is what is here given in the absence of the original. To complete the history of the Expedition, an Appendix is added in the form of a Diary, supplying an Account of the Battle of the Great Meadows and the Capitulation of Fort Necessity; the Retreat of the Army; with Copies of original muster and pay Rolls of the Virginia Regiment, and other Documents connected with this Expedition. Edited, with Notes, by J. M. Toner, M. D.

6. ORDERLY BOOKS.

ORDERLY BOOK kept at Valley Forge, 18 May–11 June, 1778.

79 pp. MS. Sm. 4°.

This volume was purchased at a sale of Washingtoniana in 1860. The catalogue described it as an Orderly Book of the Army of Washington, on its march through New Jersey, and "supposed to be in the handwriting of Washington, Knox, and other distinguished generals."

The volume, however, contains nothing in the handwriting of Washington, but most of the orders are in the handwriting of Major Samuel Shaw, Aide-de-Camp to General Knox. It contains Washington's orders, written in a manner to indicate that they were taken at first hand.

One of the Washington Orderly Books, preserved in the War Department, is in the same handwriting, at least it so appears from a facsimile given in the American Historical Record of December, 1873. The editor of the Record (B. J. Lossing) says that "any one familiar with the writing of Washington will not for a moment doubt the genuineness of the Orderly Book, as his;" but this facsimile has been compared with Major Shaw's Letters in the Knox Papers, and it seems quite certain that the handwriting is his, and not Washington's.

This is not the only time that the handwritings of Washington and Shaw have been confused. In the Transactions of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, there was lately published a facsimile of a draft of the Institution of the Society of the Cincinnati, which was put forward by the Editor as Washington's; an opinion which, however, he retracted after having his attention called to Shaw's Letters.

Brief extracts from this Orderly Book were printed with prefatory remarks by Charles Elliot Norton, in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts historical Society (June, 1863), vol. 7, pp. 132–136.

Inserted in the volume is a broadside containing the Resolutions of Congress of May 15, 1778, providing for half-pay for officers of the army for seven years after the war.

REVOLUTIONARY Orders of General Washington, issued during the Years 1778, '80, '81 & '82, selected from the MSS. of John Whiting, Lieut. and Adjutant of the 2nd Regiment Massachusetts Line, and edited by his Son Henry Whiting, Lieut. Col. U. S. Army.

New York : printed by, and for John Low, 1807. 349, vii. pp. Portrait (Baker, 327). 12°.

With the additions and changes in the edition, it is said that very little of Corry's work remains, but enough to prevent the attribution of it to him on the title-page from being a complete misstatement. This is not the First American edition, as one appeared at Baltimore in 1801.

The compilations published under Corry's name are very numerous and of great variety of text. The distinctive features of the various editions are pointed out by Baker in his Bibliotheca Washingtoniana.

Philadelphia: published by W. A. Leary & Co. 1852. 588 pp. Engraved title-page. 8°.

[—] An illustrated History of Washington and his Times: embracing a History of the Seven-Years' War, the Revolutionary War, the Formation of the Federal Constitution, and the Administration of Washington. And exhibiting the daring Exploits and heroic Endurance of the noble Patriots who won our Liberties and established our Independence. With an Appendix, containing the Maxims of Washington, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, the Constitution of the United States, and Washington's Farewell Address. Edited by Rev. William Hutchinson, A. M., Principal of the Norwich Free Academy.

Norwich, Conn.: published by Henry Bill. 1868. 626 pp. Portrait after Stuart. 8°.

This is evidently printed from the same plates as the "Pictorial Life of George Washington," by John Frost. The editor states that "The main body of the work was originally prepared by Dr. Frost, and its facts and incidents are all drawn from the most reliable authorities. It has been carefully revised by the present editor; defects have been removed; portions have been rewritten, and an Appendix of much value added." The alleged revisions are not discoverable by a casual comparison, and it is quite certain that the "Maxims" printed in the Appendix constitute the only material change from the original work of Frost's.

[GRISWOLD, RUFUS WILMOT.]

New York : William H. Graham. 1849. 64 pp. Portrait. 8°. (American biographical Library.)

Reprint of the sketch in "Washington and the Generals of the American Revolution," edited and partly written by Griswold. The authorship of the sketch is usually attributed to Griswold, but Baker in his "Bibliotheca Washingtoniana" casts doubt upon the idea, and thinks the chances are in favor of Horace Binney Wallace. He, however, enters the work under Griswold. See also Lossing's Life of Washington, of which Griswold wrote the first two hundred pages.

LA FAYETTE, MARIE JEAN PAUL JOSEPH ROCHE YVES GILBERT DU MOTIER, Marquis de.

[Proclamation to the French Canadians, in French.] Broadside.

“Sur la Rivière Connecticut, le mille Septe cens quatre Vingt.

LA FAYETTE.”

Concerning this Proclamation, Washington wrote to Lafayette, 19 May, 1780: “We talked of a proclamation to the Canadians. If it is not already done, I think it ought not to be delayed. It should be in your own name, and have as much as possible an air of probability. Perhaps it will be more plausible to have two different kinds made, one intimating to them the arrival of a French fleet and army in the River St. Lawrence, to co-operate by the way of Rhode Island, where, to answer some important purposes, they are to touch, and dwelling on the happy opportunity it will afford them to renew their ancient friendship with France, by joining the allied arms and assisting to make Canada a part of the American confederation, with all the privileges and advantages enjoyed by the other members. . . . The other should be drawn on the supposition of the fleet and army being already arrived, and should contain an animating invitation to arrange themselves under the allied banners. In both proclamations you should hold yourself up as a French and American officer, charged both by the King of France and by Congress with a commission to address them upon the occasion. It may indeed be well to throw out an idea, that you are to command the corps of American troops destined to co-operate with the French armament. The more mystery in this business the better. It will get out, and it ought to seem to be against our intention.” The proclamation was sent out, and, as was intended, it came into the hands of Sir Henry Clinton. The object of the paper was to mislead the British commander and distract his attention from New York. The good effect that it might have had, is thought to have been destroyed by the disclosure of the true character of the proclamation by Arnold, who had been intrusted with several copies by Washington, before the former’s treason. Clinton was for a time deceived by it, as he wrote to Lord George Germain, “I have the honor to transmit to you the copy of a proclamation, which I have reason to believe the Marquis de Lafayette intended to have published in Canada, if the proposed expedition against that province had taken place.”

In an edition of his collected poems in 1786 the author substituted Washington's name for Johnson's, so as to make it appear that as early as 1772 he had appreciated Washington's qualities and prophesied his career.

— A Poetical Epistle to George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States of America. By Rev. Charles Henry Wharton, D. D. From the original Manuscript belonging to David Pulsifer, A.M.

Boston: printed for David Pulsifer. For sale by A. Williams & Co.
1881. 106 pp. Woodcuts in text. 16°.

The poem occupies pp. 7-16 of the volume. Pp. 17-23 have an account of the Author. Pp. 24-106 contain illustrative documents about Washington, such as Addresses by Congress and other legislative and public bodies, papers relating to the statue of Washington in the Massachusetts State House, etc.

The MS. used for this issue of the Poem came into the possession of Mr. David Pulsifer in 1857. At a meeting of the New-England historic genealogical Society in April, 1857, he read extracts from the poem and asked for information as to its authorship and history.

This brought forth replies from correspondents (printed in the Historical Magazine for 1857), by which its identity with the Epistle first published anonymously at Annapolis in 1779, written by Charles Henry Wharton, D. D. was established. Bishop W. S. Perry transmitted to the New England Society some MS. private letters of Wharton, which, when compared with the MS. poem, showed that the latter was in the handwriting of Dr. Wharton. Mr. Pulsifer's MS. is now owned by Dr. Charles E. Clark of Lynn, Mass. Bishop G. W. Doane who edited Dr. Wharton's works, speaks of a MS. in his possession presumably but not certainly different from the Pulsifer copy.

There are slight differences between the Pulsifer MS. and the text in the earlier printed editions. A sharp reference to Whitehead, the poet laureate, in the MS. is omitted in the published work. "The manuscript contains one hundred and ninety-three lines; the printed editions have two hundred and nine; the same sentiments being remodelled at greater length in several instances."

The report of the Committee of the New England historic genealogical Society on the MS. is in the Historical Magazine, for Oct., 1865.

The catalogue enumerates 138 items from Washington's Library, the larger part of them having Washington's autograph. The collection was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, and was afterwards sold at auction. A considerable number of the books were purchased by John R. Baker of Philadelphia and were sold by Birch's Sons of the same city in 1891, when his collection was put on sale.

WALL, W. L., & Co.

Catalogue of Library of Rare Books, in part from the collection of a Gentleman in Alexandria, about 200 volumes from the Library of General Washington, sold in Alexandria, in 1802, consisting of over 6,000 volumes. To be sold at auction, commencing March 9th, 1863.

[Washington, 1863.] pp. 96. 8°.

The so called "Books of Washington, sold at Alexandria at Executors' sale, July 6, 1802," are lots 1772-1969. Shortly before the sale it appeared that the book-plates inserted in these books were spurious, and, the fact being made known, the books sold at very low prices. Most of the titles here catalogued do not appear on the Inventory; some titles might be identified with items there given, but of several of these other and more authentic copies are known.

The Executors' accounts preserved at Fairfax County Court House afford no evidence of a sale of books in July, 1802.

THE INVENTORY OF WASHINGTON'S LIBRARY.

INVENTORY OF WASHINGTON'S LIBRARY,

RE-ARRANGED, ANNOTATED, AND EXTENDED

By WILLIAM C. LANE,

Librarian of the Boston Athenaeum.

THE Inventory of Washington's books was drawn up by the appraisers of his property, Thompson Mason, Tobias Lear, Thomas Peter, and William H. Foote, and was deposited with his will, the schedule of his property, and the accounts of the executors at Fairfax Court House. The original will is still to be seen there, and this with the other papers mentioned was copied into the large record volumes, but at the bottom of p. 326, Liber J. 1 following the "account of the estate of the late Gen'l Washington with Lawrence Lewis" is found this note, — "Inventory and appraisement of the Estate of Gen'l George Washington Deceased (ought here to be Recorded). For Inventory look to Wills &c of August Court 1810 filed. T. C. Nash." But on inquiry for the files of this date it appears that all the original papers of this time and earlier were scattered during the occupation of Fairfax by the Federal troops during the Civil War. The Washington Inventory may possibly have been saved, but its present location, if it is extant, is unknown to the writer.

Fortunately "through the kindness of Mr. John A. Washington," Edward Everett procured a copy of the whole Inventory of Gen. Washington's personal estate and printed it in his "Life of George Washington," New York, 1860. Lossing printed the inventory of the books and maps again in his "Home of Washington," New York, 1870, where it is said to be "reproduced as copied from the original document among the public records at Alexandria." This is an evident error and he probably followed Everett's printed list or perhaps the MS. copy made for him. Everett's list is the more correct as to spelling and punctuation, but he doubtless himself corrected some of the errors of the appraisers' list.

The Inventory may also be found in President Potter's "Washington a Model in his Library and Life," New York, 1895; as printed there many of the books in the Athenæum are indicated by an asterisk, and the author mentions a number of other books once belonging to Washington that had come to his notice. The Inventory is also printed in Miss Elizabeth B. Johnston's "Visitors' Guide to Mount Vernon."

The Inventory as given below is taken from Everett's Life in which it was first printed. Of the many errors in it some, such as Barlow for Varlo, Miller for Miles, Skombrand for Chambaud, are no doubt in the original document and were due to imperfect reading and hearing on the part of the compilers; but in regard to many of the other mistakes it is impossible to say whether the compiler or the transcriber is to blame.

The Inventory having been already printed several times in its original order, it seemed better in printing it again to rearrange the items under subjects so as to show more clearly the character of the library. The pamphlets bound collectively in volumes, and lettered "Tracts," etc., are not thus classified, but are entered under the factitious titles in the division devoted to Tract volumes. The whole number of volumes entered in the Inventory, not counting the entries under the heads Pamphlets and Maps is 884. Of these the Athenæum has 341. These are distinguished by an asterisk in the list as printed below. The number preceding each entry indicates the order in which the items stood in the original Inventory, and makes it clear that in the several cases where titles are repeated they actually occurred more than once in the original.

Great pains have been taken to determine the full titles and to trace the present ownership of the volumes not in the Athenæum collection, but in about 262 cases no clue has yet been found, and in a number of others the names of the present owners cannot be stated although a record of the sale of the books at auction is at hand. The identifications of the titles of the books entered on the Inventory are in some cases conjectural; but in most instances they are without doubt correct. The titles of the catalogues of the principal sales at which any of Washington's books have been sold will be found on pp. 470-475.

Washington usually wrote his name on the upper right-hand corner of the title-page, but occasionally on the first page of preface or text. An A following the title indicates that the volume bears Washington's autograph, and Pres. that it has an inscription as a presentation copy.

The subject of Washington's book-plate has long been a puzzling one to book-collectors. I have indicated by a B in the list following all the volumes, either in the Athenæum collection or elsewhere, which contain it, but it will be difficult to draw any conclusions as to how Washington used it, when he first had it, or when, if ever, he discontinued its use. Of the 884 volumes noted below, 137 volumes bear what is in most cases the genuine plate. Re-strikes from it exist, usually to be detected by the quality of the paper; the original plate was at one time in the hands of Mr. George Livermore, and is pretty certainly still in existence, though the statement has been made that it was destroyed. It has been several times copied for purposes of illustration, but apparently only once, and then very clumsily, with intent to deceive. In 1863 about two hundred volumes, many (perhaps all) of them bearing this spurious book-plate,¹ were offered for sale at auction in Washington (see the note on p. 475), and the very fact that the plate if a forgery was such a poor one, has induced some collectors to suspect that it was a genuine second plate, but the character of the books in which it appeared in this sale is a sufficient argument against this assumption. Whether the original is of English or American workmanship is still disputed, and in spite of the carefulness with which Washington kept his accounts, no entry bearing on the book-plate has yet been discovered in any accounts which are preserved. C. D. Allen, in his "American book-plates," New York, 1894, discusses the history of Washington's book-plate and the counterfeit of it, pp. 90-95.

For the notes from Washington's correspondence and account books bearing on the way in which many of the volumes came into his possession, I have to thank Mr. A. P. C. Griffin, the compiler of the Catalogue of the Athenæum Collection. Most of the letters thus quoted are preserved in the State Department at Washington. For notes in regard to the books in the Athenæum and for fuller titles the reader is referred to the pages of the Catalogue itself. My thanks are also due to Mr. S. V. Henkels, through whose hands almost every book of Washington's that has been sold since 1876 has passed, to several book-dealers who have furnished useful clues, and to many of the present owners of Washington's books who have generously shown me their treasures or communicated careful descriptions of them.

In spite of an extensive correspondence for some months, the identity and present whereabouts of many of the books on the Inventory remains undetermined, but I hope that the present publication will lead to the discovery of many more of them, and I shall be under great obligation to any one who has any of the books the present ownership of which has not been noted, or who knows of any such, if he will have the kindness to communicate with me.

Washington's unpublished correspondence affords evidence that he owned many books not given in the Inventory. These are not recorded in the following list except in cases where something is known of their subsequent history.

¹ For a list of thirteen books in the Boston Athenæum with this spurious plate see the last page of this Catalogue.

The other copy seems never to have appeared for sale. Washington's accounts show that he paid 22 sh. 6d. for a copy of Don Quixote, Sept. 17, 1787.

- 493 The Works of Monsieur Chamousset (in French), 2 vols. $4.00
 CHAMOUSSET, M. de. Œuvres complètes. 2 vols. Paris. 1787. 8°. A copy, probably this one, was sold in the 1876 sale for $1.75 (no. 455).
 These volumes edited by the author's daughter, the Countess Des Essarts, were by her presented to Washington accompanied by a letter dated May 1, 1787. She writes,— "Admiring your virtues, I am persuaded that the inclinations of a great man will not be averse to reading the works of one of the best of Citizens,—a citizen who consecrated his life & fortune to the purposes of humanity & to the establishment of pure & refined manners. My attachment to this tender parent & virtuous man induces me to promote his views as much as in my power by collecting & publishing his different memoirs."
 Washington acknowledged the receipt of the volumes in a letter dated Jan. 5, 1788.

- 50 Conquest of Canaan, 1 vol. 1.00
 DWIGHT, Timothy. The conquest of Canaan; a poem in eleven books. Hartford. 1785. 12°. The author had obtained from Washington in 1778 permission to dedicate his poem to him. "A variety of intervening obstacles" delayed the public appearance of the book, and it was not until Nov. 1785, that he sent Washington a copy, when he writes: "The fear lest the work should not possess such a degree of merit as to occasion no pain in a considerate and delicate mind, upon seeing it inscribed to your Excellency creates in the writer very humiliating sensations. Should this unfortunate circumstance prove real, the only reflection which would alleviate his mortification, is that he has very faithfully endeavored to prevent it." Washington, writing Apr. 1, 1786, hopes that the author's fears are removed, "for it is a pleasing performance." Apparently Noah Webster sent Washington another copy about the same time, to judge from a letter dated Mar. 31, 1786.

- 246 Adventures of Telemachus, 2 vols. $2.00
 FENELON. The adventures of Telemachus. From the French of Fenelon by the celebrated Jn^o Hawkesworth. Corrected and revised by G. Gregory. With a life of the author and a complete index, historical and geographical. Embellished with engravings. 2 vols. Printed by T. & J. Swords for David Longworth, No. 66 Nassau St., New York. [1797.] 8^o.
 Washington owned a copy of this edition, as is shown by the following letter from the publisher, —
 "Perhaps your Excellency will be disposed to pardon, & think it a laudable ambition, which has stimulated me to endeavor to make my publication appear worthy your patronage. — The whole of the materials & execution of the edition of Telemachus, now presented you, are entire American; my mode of hot pressing is on an entire new principle from that practised in Europe — under these considerations, I pray your Excellency to view with a favorable eye this attempt to improve the art of printing in this (my native) Country, & to excuse the forwardness of one who has taken this opportunity of usurping the honor of subscribing himself your

There is no reason to suppose that these volumes were at Mount Vernon in Gen. Washington's time, but they are mentioned here on account of the interest attaching to them.

Washington's correspondence and accounts show that he subscribed to the Maryland Gazette, 1764-69; and to the Pennsylvania Evening Herald, 1784-87; and that he received the Independent Chronicle from Rev. Dr. Gordon, of Boston, circa 1786; and the Farmer's Monthly Museum from the publishers in Walpole, N. H., in 1798.

 Washington subscribed for two copies of this work, and assisted the author in obtaining subscriptions in Virginia as is shown by letters from Gordon, dated Jamaica Plain, Nov. 2, 1785, and London, July 13, 1786. On Feb. 16, 1789, he wrote to Washington from Ringwood in Hampshire:—
 "I have at length finished that arduous undertaking, in which I have been engaged for many past years. I shall have peculiar pleasure in learning that it meets with your Excellency's approbation; & that you are not disappointed in that reliance you exercised on my honor & prudence, when you admitted me to a free inspection of your valuable papers. . . . One thousand sets have been printed of the demy paper & two hundred & fifty of the best wire-wove. A set of the latter has been ordered to be very elegantly bound & if it can be got in readiness to be sent with the forty & two sets I beg your Excellency's acceptance of it, as a small token of the sincere & warm affection that the writer entertains for you. . . ."

Mr. Geo. A. Washington received the "forty & two sets" for distribution, and wrote to General Washington, Aug. 26, 1789:—

"Gordon's History I will have put in the Hands of Mr. Porter (who rec^d the Subscriptions) for distribution, those for Fredericksburg shall be forwarded to that place, and yours will go to you by first conveyance. For the set you have been pleased to give me I beg leave to tender you my thanks."

Washington acknowledged the receipt of "the elegantly bound volumes," Feb. 25, 1791, with apologies for delay in answering, and wrote: "The forty-two sets of your history which you mention to have sent over for the subscribers have been received as the within accounts will show."

The price, however, suggests that it may have been some earlier work considered in 1800 to be out of date and valueless.

 MINOT, Geo. Richards. The history of the insurrections in Massachusetts in the year 1786 and the rebellion consequent thereon [Shays's Rebellion]. Worcester. 1788. 8°.
 The author sent a copy of this to Washington, which Washington acknowledged in a letter dated Aug. 26, 1788. For his opinion in regard to the book see his letter to Benj. Lincoln written two days later, and printed in Sparks's edition, vol. 9, p. 417, or Ford's edition, vol. 11, p. 312.
 William Tudor also sent a copy to Washington, as is shown by a letter dated July 26, 1788, in which he writes, — "The strong attachment which I know you have always felt, and in a Variety of Instances demonstrated, for the State of Massachusetts, induces me to send you, what is here considered, an interesting Pamphlet, which, with great Impartiality, states the rise, causes, and happy Termination of the late most alarming Insurrection in from Washington's library, was sold in the 1876 sale (lot 454).

 The second volume was printed in 1803, after the author's death.
 Minot sent a copy of this book to Washington, and wrote, —
 "The volume accompanying being a continuation of Massachusetts history, necessarily embraced many general transactions in the late British Colonies. In these you were so essentially concerned that the detail of them must be a familiar subject in your mind: and I am aware that you cannot avoid marking the imperfections of one, who tells the story from the traditions of accidental narrators and the few publications written at the time, more perhaps with a view of aiding some particular measures, than future history of general events. Feb. 10, 1798."
 Washington acknowledged receipt of the book, March 5, 1798, and wrote, — "From the accuracy of your pen, and the purity with which your former productions have been given to the public, I entertain no doubt of the correctness and valuableness of the present work."

"London March 15th 1797."

The Athenæum Collection has a copy of the Philadelphia edition of 1797, which, though it contains no mark of ownership, has been catalogued as Washington's (p. 75), but it may have belonged to some other member of the family and have come to Mount Vernon later.

- 436 Federalist, 2 vols. 3.00

- 478 Federalist, 2 vols. 1.50

The FEDERALIST: a collection of essays, written in favour of the new constitution, as agreed upon by the Federal Convention, September 17, 1787. 2 vols. New York. 1788. 8°. A. B.

This was bought by John R. Baker in 1876 at Thomas's (lot 3) for $100. At the sale of his collection in Feb. 1891, it brought $1900 (lot 6, facsimiles given), and is now owned by Mrs. Senator Hearst of Washington. This is one of the few copies issued on thick paper, and has the names of the authors of the several numbers in Madison's handwriting.

Washington's other copy seems never to have been offered for sale.

Washington received copies of the Federalist or its parts from each of its three authors. Hamilton sent him the first number, Oct. 30, 1787 (Lodge's Hamilton, 8: 181), which Washington acknowledged Nov. 10, 1787 (Sparks, 9: 275). Madison sent him the first seven numbers, Nov. 13, 1787, the second seven, Nov. 20, and promised to send the others as they came out (Madison's Writings, 1: 360, 361). The first seven Washington sent "to a gentleman in Richmond for republication" (Ford, 11: 191). On Feb. 5, 1788, he wrote to Madison, "Perceiving that the Federalist under the signature of Publius is about to be republished, I would thank you for forwarding to me three or four copies, one of which to be bound, and inform me of the cost" (Ford, 11: 215). Jay also sent Washington the 1st vol. of the Federalist, March 24, 1788. Hamilton wrote, Aug. 13, 1788 (Lodge's ed. 8: 194), "I have delivered to Mr. Madison, to be forwarded to you, a set of the papers under the signature of Publius, neatly enough bound to be honored with a place in your library. I presume you have understood that the writers of these papers are chiefly Mr. Madison and myself, with some aid from Mr. Jay." Washington, in a letter to Hamilton, Aug. 28, 1788 (Ford, 11 : 315), expressed his high appreciation of the value of the publication.

 Bought at the 1876 sale (lot 62) for $27. Offered for sale by Henkels at Birch's in May, 1895, (lot 1175) and said to have been sold for $1650.
 It is at present probably owned by a gentleman of Philadelphia, who prefers to withhold his name.
 Although only one copy of these Official Letters appears on the Inventory, Washington certainly owned two copies, as is shown by the letter from the editor, quoted on p. 275 of this Catalogue. The other copy, containing the MS. notes referred to in that letter, after having long disappeared from sight, is now owned by Bishop John F. Hurst of Washington, who bought it in that city some years ago. It bears Washington's autograph and also the names: "G^{nl} Turner, 1834" and "H. S. Turner."
 Two long notes by the editor referring to what he says on p. vii. of the Advertisement in regard to his failure to copy many of the inclosures, and in regard to the passages he has omitted from the letters, are here printed by the kindness of Bishop Hurst.

NOTE A. — At present I possess but a small proportion of them [the inclosures], as will appear by the notes in the margin, where I have marked every inclosure of which I have a copy.

I at first intended to have copied them regularly as I proceeded: but I found the files in such confusion as rendered this impracticable, — most of the inclosures being misplaced, few having any marks to shew what letters they belonged to, and many being lost; wherefore I was soon obliged to postpone the copying of them, until I should have completed my transcript of the principal letters, — arranging the other papers as well as I could in my progress.

After some time spent in the prosecution of this task, certain discouraging circumstances prevented my proceeding. I resumed the business, however, after some interval, but not till I had already formed a resolution of returning to Europe by the first opportunity. I hoped, nevertheless, to have completed the correspondence of the Commander-in-chief before my departure, and collected such information as would have enabled me to add the necessary notes. When the time of embarkation approached, — finding my task unfinished, and having had neither leisure nor opportunity to collect my materials for notes and illustrations, — I was desirous of remaining a few months longer in Philadelphia to complete the work: but the same considerations, which had before interrupted my progress, now forbade my further stay.

This plain statement will, I hope, plead my apology to the illustrious writer of these letters, for the manner in which I have ventured to begin their publication; and also induce him to pardon me, if, without being able to preserve the necessary connexion, I proceed to publish the remainder of what is in my possession, viz. — the contents of the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th volumes of the record, beginning with August 16, 1779. These, however, I mean to lay before the public in a more satisfactory form than the preceding part, — subjoining the inclosures to the respective letters they severally belong to: and in order, if possible, to avoid leaving any chasm, I shall not print anything further till I have an opportunity of being honored with a line from some one of the following gentlemen, to whom I have taken the liberty of writing on the subject, viz. — the hon^{ble} Mr. Madison, hon. Mr. Page, and John Beckley, esq^{re}

NOTE B. The omissions are of such passages as might have a tendency to excite jealousy or uneasiness in the bosoms of persons now living under the Federal Government. — A gentleman, high in office and in the President's esteem, having honored me with a long conversation upon the subject in Philadelphia, and expressed his apprehensions lest anything of that nature should unguardedly be suffered to appear in print, I determined to act cautiously, and, if I should err in the business, to err on the safe side, — it being very easy, in a second edition or an Appendix, to supply any unnecessary omission but impossible to recall a single word once escaped from the press.

In a few letters, indeed, at the beginning of the first volume, some passages have been omitted, which are by no means exceptionable. When I began to print, I thought it advisable to pass over some of the less important occurrences, in order to condense the more interesting matter into a narrower compass; and under this idea I sent a few sheets to press. When I afterwards saw reason to change my opinion, it was too late to remedy the defect in the first edition, except in a very awkward or a very expensive manner. In a second edition, I mean to supply all deficiencies of this kind.

 This was sent to Washington by Samuel Campbell who wrote
 April 23, 1794, —
 "Having lately printed an American Edition of the Trial of Thomas Muir, please allow a copy thereof a place in your Library.
 "Mr. Muir since he received his rigorous sentence, intimated indirectly to me a desire that a Copy of his Trial might be presented to you, but was disappointed in sending out one of the British Editions.
 "It is peculiarly gratifying to me, to have it in my power to accomplish his wish, in sending the present."
 A copy, doubtless Washington's, though not claiming to be so, was sold in 1876 at Thomas's (lot 471).
- 179 Essay on Property, 1 vol. 1.00
 [OGILBY, J.] Essay on the right of property in land. London.
 [1781.] 8°. A.
 This is in the British Museum, being probably one of the three volumes reserved by Stevens from the books which he sold to the Boston Athenæum.
- 150 The Law of Nature, 1 vol. 12mo. .75
 This may be the same as entry 274, "Sharp on the law of nature." or it may be, —
 PUFENDORF, Samuel, Freiherr von. The law of nature and nations.
 Done into English by Basil Kennet. 5th ed. London. 1749. f°.
 The size given in the entry above does not agree and the price is not proportioned to the size and importance of the book, but a copy of Pufendorf was sold as from Washington's library, though without name and book-plate, at the 1876 sale (lot 117). The Library of Congress is said to have bought it, but that Library has no records by which the copy of this edition which it has can be surely identified as bought at this sale. The copy in the Library of Congress bears the names of H. Ridout, Thos. G. Addison, and E. B. Caldwell, and has been rebound.
- 324 Sharp on Crown Law, 1 vol. 8vo. .50

 No work by Sharp of this title can be found, and there are so many books by other authors on the subject that it is impossible to say which one is meant.
- 269 Virginia Justice, 1 vol. 1.00
 This may be either of two works, —
 STARKE, Richard. Virginia justice. Williamsburg. 1774. 8°. A.
 WEBB, George. Virginia justice. Williamsburg. 1736. 8°. A.
 A copy of the former, with the autographs of John and Baily Washington, and stated to be from the library of Gen. Washington, was sold at Birch's in April, 1891 (lot 309), and was bought by Sabin for $13.
 A copy of the latter, with the autographs of W. Fairfax, George William Fairfax, and John Carlisle, and presumably from Washington's Library, is said to be owned by Mrs. Burton Harrison.
- 259 Swift's System, 2 vols. 3.00
 SWIFT, Zephaniah. A system of the laws of the State of Connecticut. In six books. 2 vols. Windham. 1795-96. 8°. A.
 This was lot 38 in the 1876 sale, and was bought by Senator Jos. R. Hawley of Connecticut for $22.
- 177 Reports, 1 vol. 1.50
 This is an indefinite title, but probably indicates a volume sold in 1876 (lot 22), bought by Sabin for $15, and containing the two following titles, and perhaps others.
 UNITED STATES. Report of the cases decided in the Supreme Court of the United States, February, 1793. A.
 NEW YORK CITY. Arguments and judgment of the Mayor's Court of the City of New York in a cause between Elizabeth Rutgers and Joshua Waddington. New York. 1784. 8°.

Malice itself, will not deny me the Merit of Propriety in addressing it. I have the Honour to be, with the highest Sentiments of Consideration and Regard, Sir and Madam, Your most obedient, and very humble Servant, James Wilson."
 It was sold at Thomas's in 1876 (lot 45) for $13.50, and is now owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

| 273 | Debates of the State of Massachusetts on the Constitution, 1 vol. | .50 |

- 283 *Debates of the Convention of Massachusetts, 1 vol. $0.50
 These two entries probably refer to the same work of which Washington must have had two copies. The Athenæum has one of these.
 MASSACHUSETTS. Debates, resolutions and other proceedings, of the Convention of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts convened . . . for the purpose of assenting to and ratifying the Constitution. Boston. 1788. A. B.
- 212 Laws of New York, 2 vols. 12.00
 NEW YORK. Laws of the State of New York, comprising the Constitution, and the Acts of the Legislature since the Revolution from the first to the twelfth session, inclusive. 2 vols. New York. 1789. f^o. A. B.
 This copy was sent to Washington by Gerard Bancker, the Treasurer of the State of New York, who wrote Feb. 20, 1790: "In pursuance of concurrent Resolutions of the Senate and Assembly, I do myself the Honor to send for the use of the President of the United States, a sett of the Laws of this State, as lately revised."
 C. R. Hildeburn in his Sketches of printers and printing in colonial New York, 1895, p. 84, says of these volumes: "The copy of this work which was specially bound and presented to General Washington, was sold at auction in Philadelphia in November, 1876, with other volumes from Washington's library. It is in two volumes, and is a remarkable specimen of American book-binding of its day, but it sold for no more than $9 a volume. Its purchaser found in one of the volumes a survey of Mount Vernon drawn in Washington's own hand. Taking this out, he sold the volumes for $30 apiece to Mr. C. W. Frederickson, at whose sale they were bought by Dr. George H. Moore for $104 a volume. Dr. Moore disposed of them to the writer for the comfortable advance of $750 for the two, and they now repose in the Tower collection of American Colonial Laws in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania."
- 285 *Debates in the Convention of Pennsylvania, 1 vol. .50
 PENNSYLVANIA. Debates of the Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, on the Constitution. Vol. 1 (no more published). Phila. 1787. A. B. Pres.

 Specially bound, and with an inlaid label on each front cover, stamped "President of the United States."
 These volumes are in the Library of the Department of State, Washington, having been bought with Washington's papers from Mr. George C. Washington.

- 253 Journal of the Senate and House of Representatives, 9 vols. fol. $27.00
 260 Journals of the Senate and House of Representatives, 3 vols. 6.00

On July 1, 1797, Pickering wrote to Washington from Philadelphia: "In respect to the journals of Congress, I do not recollect whether you wished for an entire set, or such volumes as were necessary to complete what you have. The volumes will not be uniform; as of late they are printed in octavo only. If you will be so good as to send me a memorandum of the volumes you now possess, the residue shall be provided without delay."

Washington replied from Mount Vernon, July 7, 1797: "The Journals of the 1st, 2^d, & 3^d Sessions of the first Congress I have, and no later.

"These are in folio — One Volume of the Senate and another of the house of representatives.

"If no complete set can be had either in folio or octavo, it would be useless to obtain a copy of what I now possess: but if they are to be continued in the latter, and an entire set could be had of that size it would be preferred on acc^t of the uniformity."

Pickering wrote in August, "The Journals of Congress are neatly bound, as well as the Laws, and are ready to be forwarded by the first conveyance;" and on Aug. 24th he wrote, "Your Journals and Acts of Congress in one box . . . are sent to Mr. Hodgdon, who will put them on board a packet . . . which it was expected would sail this day."

- 254 Laws of the United States, 7 vols. 28.00
 267 Laws of the United States, 3 vols. 6.00
 272 Laws of the United States, 2 vols. 4.00
 277 Acts of Congress, 1 vol. .75

It is perhaps impossible to identify the last four entries separately, but the following six volumes, all of which were sold in 1876, at Thomas's, certainly belonged to Washington.

Acts passed at a Congress of the United States of America, begun and held at the City of New York, on Wednesday the fourth of March in the year 1789 . . . being the acts passed at the first session of the first Congress of the United States, to wit, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, etc.; which eleven States respectively ratified the Constitution of government of the United States, etc. New York; printed by Francis Childs and John Swayne. N. D. F^o. A. B.

Specially bound, and inscribed on the cover, "President of the United States."

This was lot 114 in the 1876 sale, and was bought by Mr. C. H. Hart for $13. It was sold again at Birch's in April, 1892, (lot 842), and brought $1150. Its present owner is unknown to me. Mr. Henkels says it was bought by W. F. Havemeyer of New York. Acts passed at a Congress of the United States of America, begun and held at the City of New-York, on Wednesday the Fourth of March in the year 1789; [also at New York, on Monday the 4th of Jan., in the year 1790; and at Philadelphia, on Monday, the 6th of Dec., in the year 1790.] Philadelphia; printed by Francis Childs and John Swaine. N. D. F°. A.

This was lot 100 in the 1876 sale, and was bought by John R. Baker for $6.50; at the sale of his collection in Feb. 1891 (lot 38, facsimile of title-page in catalogue) it was bought by W. R. Benjamin for $160, and is now owned by Mr. W. F. Havemeyer of New York.

Another copy of the same.

Specially bound, and with a label inserted on the cover, "President of the United States."

This was lot 118 at the 1876 sale, and was bought for $3.25 by Senator Jos. R. Hawley of Connecticut, who still owns it.

Acts passed at a Congress of the United States of America. Vol. 1. New York. 1789. 8°. A.

Lot 28 in the 1876 sale, and bought by Sabin for $7. The above imperfect title is taken from Thomas's Catalogue of 1876.

Acts passed at the 1st session of the Congress of the United States of America begun 4th of March, 1789. Philadelphia; printed by F. Childs and John Swaine. 1791. 8°. pp. 414 + 120. A.

These two volumes formed lot 20 in the 1876 sale, and were bought by John R. Baker for $17. At the sale of his collection at Birch's, in Feb. 1891 (lot 8), they brought $180, and are now owned by Mrs. Senator Hearst of Washington.

Another note shows that the book was seized during the Civil War as contraband of war (being then in John A. Washington's possession in Farquhar Co., Va.); but was returned by command of Gen.  "Not until within a few days have I been honor'd with your favor of the 27th of Sept! 1783 accompanying your treatise on education.
 "My sentiments are perfectly in unison with yours Sir, that the best means of forming a manly, virtuous and happy people, will be found in the right education of youth. — Without this foundation, every other means, in my opinion, must fail; & it gives me pleasure to find that Gentlemen of your abilities are devoting their time & attention in pointing out the way. — For your lucubrations on this Subject which you have been so obliging as to send me, I pray you to accept my thanks, & an expression of the pleasure I felt at the declaration of your intention to devote a further portion of your time to so useful a study. Of the importance of education our Assemblies, happily, seem fully impressed; — they establishing new & giving further endowments to the old Seminaries of learning, and I persuade myself — will leave nothing unessayed to cultivate literature & useful knowledge, for the purpose of qualifying the rising generation for patrons of good government, virtue & happiness."

This entry probably describes a folio volume, in many ways as interesting as any that belonged to Gen. Washington. It was sold at Thomas's in 1876 (lot 104) for $26, and is now owned by Senator J. R. Hawley of Connecticut. It is made up of maps of the British Colonies, many of them the most recent and detailed that could be had at the time of the Revolution, which were without doubt used by Washington in planning his campaigns. They appear to have been made up into a volume later in order to preserve them. A list of the maps follows:—
