ANTONIO ALLEGRI DA CORREGGIO

His Life, His friends, AND his time.

BY

CORRADO RICCI,DIRECTOR OF THE ROYAL GALLERY, PARMA.

TRANSLATED BY FLORENCE SIMMONDS.
Containing 16 Photogravure Plates, 21 full-page Plates in 'Tint, and Igo Illustrations in the Text. In One Volume, imperial 8vo, £2 $\mathscr{E}^{2}$ s. net.
 Also a Special Edition printed on $\mathcal{F}$ apanese vellum, limited to 75 copies for the United Kingdom, with duplicate plates on India paper. Price on application.

By inducing Dr. Ricci to undertake an elaborate life of Correggio. in which ad the scattered results of recent research, including his own, shall be embodied in a continuous narrative, and illustrated with the utmost completeness, the Publisher of this volume hopes to be conferring a real boon upon lovers of Renaissance Art. As Director of the Gallery in Parma, the city in which Correggio spent the most fruitful years of his life, Dr. Ricci has had access to otherwise inaccessible material, and has received help not only from the Italian Government, but from all who were able to throw new light on the work of this great artist.

Correggio stands out clearly as a man of extraordinary ability and accomplishments, dwelling in an environment which will be realised with surprise by those who have believed him to have been born and bred in uncultivated and rustic surroundings. Dr. Ricci shows Correggio to have been born and to have grown up in the very centre of Emilian Civilisation, living at the courts of princes and noblemen, and thrown into constant contact with his intellectual peers. Influenced alike by them and by the remarkable women of the time, such as Veronica Gambara, Isabelle d'Este, and others, his life's history becomes almost a record of that most splendid period of intellectual and artistic activity which filled the towns and palaces of Northern Italy with invaluable artistic treasures.

A detailed and illustrated prospectus will be forwarded on application.

PREFATORY NOTE

HE greater part of the works exhibited in this National Gallery of Spain belonged to the Crown and decorated the palaces of Madrid and other Royal seats before the year i8i8. With them King Ferdinand VII. formed the Real Museo de Pintura del Prado, adding other pictures which he acquired expressly for so important an institutionafterwards to be thrown open to the public. The remaining part proceeds from the so-called Museo Nacional founded in 1840 , in what had been the Convent de la Trinidad. This Convent served as a museum for the pictures proceeding from the churches of the provinces of Madrid, Toledo, Avila and Segovia, in 1836.

Of the convents or churches to which the pictures of this latter contingent belonged, little is known with certainty ; owing to the confused state in which they were collected. Definite information can be given only of those works acquired by the State after the formation of the above-mentioned Museo Nacional de la Trinidad.

In the present Catalogue the editor has aimed at giving to the public all the salient points of interest in the lives of the masters represented, and in the history of their respective works. He has attempted to supply a hand-book, which, without being heavy with information, will yet have an interest, not only for English-speaking visitors to the Prado ; but also for those lovers of Art who may not have the good fortune of seeing this precious gallery. A brief biographical sketch is appended to the name of each artist; and a note, explanatory of the composition, follows the title of each work. These notices, though brief, will sufficiently serve the visitor as a prelude to the study of the pictures themselves ; or give to the reader, absent from the gallery, a fair idea of the subjects treated.

This Catalogue is based upon the two Spanish editions, by Señor Don Pedro de Madrazo. The editor of the present edition has freely used these two excellent books: in many cases having borrowed, by the granted right of translation, entire paragraphs from them. The names of the artists are arranged alphabetically, and the pictures numbered in regular ascending sequence. The occasional breaks in the regular numeration merely indicate recent eliminations of pictures, or change of attribution to artists,

In the plan of the Museum (page v) the names of the various rooms have not been translated into English, as they correspond to signs posted over the entrances of the respective departments. To save confusion these signs have been copied down as they appear; and being inserted in the margins of the pages opposite the titles of the works, enable the visitor to know at once the location of any picture.

The editor gladly takes this opportunity of expressing his grateful appreciation of the courteous kindness and assistance rendered him by the accomplished author Señor de Madrazo. His thanks are also due to the officials of the Museo del Prado for many kindnesses.

ALBANI (Francesco), commonly called Albano. Bolognese School: 1578-1660.

Albani was born at Bologna. His father, a silk merchant, placed him, at the age of 13 , to study drawing under the direction of Denis Calvert. In Calvert's house he contracted a friendship with Guido Reni, with whom he went to the studio of Ludovico Carracci. Here his rapid progress attracted Annibale, brother of his new master, who employed the young Albani to assist him in his work in the Farnese Gallery. On returning to his native land, he executed work for the Cardinal of Savoy and for various cities. He died when 82 years of age, in the arms of his disciples, in whom he had inspired the greatest reverence and love.
The works of this artist are characterised by a freshness of colour, a certain grandeur of drawing and elegance of composition. Among the principal ot his disciples were the brothers Mola, Carlo Ciquani, and Andrea Sacchi.
I. The Toilet of Venus. The Mother of Love, gracefully reclining in chair of crimson velvet, calmly contem- Central: plates herself in a mirror which a little cupid holds autores before her, while three nymphs occupy themselves italianos about her person. ANGELICO (Fra Giovanni da Fiesole), commonly called Il Beato. Ancient Tuscan School: 1387-I 455.
Born near the village of Vecchio in Mugello. In 1407 he became a member of the Order of Predicants of Fiesole. He left Fiesole in 1409, and for about ten years painted at Foligno and Cortona. He then returned to Fiesole, where he remained for eighteen years. In I436 he went to Florence, and worked in the Convent of St. Mark until I445, producing there his greatest works. He next went to Rome, in the service of Pope Eugenius IV., to paint in the Vatican. Here he painted a chapel for Nicholas V. He was one of the greatest idealistic painters of the ancient Tuscan school. He died at Rome in 1455.

14. The Annunciation. In a luminous vestibule of Middle Age Latin architecture, whose ceiling is painted blue and studded with gold stars. Our Lady receives the message brought by Gabriel, a beautiful angel with golden wings and rose-coloured vestment, who appears to her with his hands crossed on his breast. The nimbi which encircle the heads of Mary and the angel are of gold. The Holy Spirit, in the form of a dove, descends from the heavens in a ray of light. On the right is represented the earthly Paradise with Adam and Eve being expelled by an angel, for their sin. Below, in five octagonal compartments, are represented the principal scenes from the life our Our Lady. This precious panel was ceded by the Monastery de las Descalzos Reales to this CMisseum in 1861, by the intervention of Sr. D. Federico de cNadrazo, the Museum's late Director. Panel: 6 ft. 3 in. by 6 ft .3 in .

ANGUISOLA or ANGOSCIOLLA (Lucia). Lombard School. Born early in the sixteenth century; died 1565.

This famous accomplished woman was born in Cremona. She was a pupil of her sister Sophonisba. She was both painter and musician, and belonged to a family of exceptional culture. She is said to have been in Spain, and to have painted a portrait of Queen Isabel, wife of Philip II., which she sent to Pove Pius IV.

Barocci, or Baroccio, was born at Urbino. After studying drawing under his father, Ambrogio Barocci, be entered the studio of Battista Franco, who at that time was in the service of the Duke Guidubaldo II. Barocci left Urbino shortly after Franco, and in company with his uncle, Bartolomeo Genga, went to Pesaro. Here he made copies of Titian in the ducal gallery. At 20 years of age he went to Rome, where he spent his time in the study of Raphael and Correggio. Having returned to Urbino, he painted several pictures on religious subjects which gained much praise. At Rome he was employed in the Vatican by Pope Pius IV. His style seems to have been the result of his patient study of Raphael and Correggio. He died of apoplexy at Urbino in 16I2, and was buried in the church of San Francesco.

ALFONSO
CAMPI (Antonio). Lombard School: Sixteenth century.

This distinguished painter, architect and litérateur, was born at Cremona in $\mathbf{1 5 2 2}$. His father had destined him to be a silversmith, but the impression made on the youth by two of Raphael's cartoons, copied by his relation, Giulio Campi, caused him to leave his first occupation and devote himself to painting. After remaining for some time with Giulio, he went to Mantua and placed himself under Hippolite Costa. There he became intimate with Giulio Romano and his disciples. He applied himself diligently to the study of Romano, Correggio and Titian ; and made such rapid progress that in a very short time he had taken his place among the greatest masters. He executed works of importance for the cities of Mantua, Parma, Modena, Reggio and Milan. His style is brilliant and vigorous. Among his literary works may be mentioned his Pareri sopra la pintura, an excellent book of art. He was in Madrid, and painted for Philip II.

CANGIASI or CAMBIASO (Luca). Genoese School; I52I-I585.
Cangiasi's only master was Giovanni Cambiasi, his father. But he studied the works of the great masters which embellished the public buildings of Genoa. He reccived a commission to paint a noble's house at the age of I5, and from that time his reputation grew rapidly. The enormous amount of work which he did in Genoa gave him such practice that he painted without making cartoons, and often with both hands at once.
"Notwithstanding much mannerism, he occasionally pleases by a clever and sound conception of nature " (Kügler). He came to Madrid in 1583, and Philip II. received him as his painter in November of that year. He died at the Royal Seat of San Lorenzo in 1585.

LANFRANCHI or LANFRANCO (Il Cavaliere Giovanni di Stefano), Decadent Lombard School: Born at Parma in 1581 or 1582 , and died in 1647.
He studied first under Agostino, and then under Annibale Carracci. In Rome he was well patronised by Pope Paul V. He died at Rome. Art, in the hands of this painter, degenerated into a mere mechanism through his desire to produce effects by purely superficial means; by violent contrasts of light and shade and groupings, suggested more by the precepts of the school than by the nature of the subject.
280. The Obsequies of Julius Cæsar. In the middle of the picture is raised a funeral pile of cedar trunks, surrounded by vases containing balsams and perfumes. This artist imbued the youth with a love for ancient classic art by bringing before him old paintings, vases, fragments of sculpture, &c., which he had collected in his travels. At 25 years of age the ungrateful Mantegna abandoned his master and adopted father to become a member of the family of Jacopo Bellini, whose daughter he married. He died in Mantua. His works reveal his zealous study of the antique. His style is somewhat severe, but his drawing is correct and his execution remarkably vigorous. PALMA (Jacopo), called Palma il Vecchio, to distinguish him from his nephew, Jacopo Palma Il Giovane. Venetian School: Born about 1480 , and died about I 548.
He may have been a pupil of Giovanni Bellini. It is certain that he was condisciple and rival of Titian and Giorgione, and friend of Lorenzo Lotto. He developed their styles. In his earlier works his heads partake of a certain severity of expression. The figures of his transition style are restful and charming, and his ultimate style places him on a level with Titian for the softness and ease of his pencil and the splendour of his tints. The following picture is a good example of this ultimate style.

SANZIO (Raffaello Santior), commonly called Raphael. Roman School: 1483-1520.
Born at Urbino, April 6, 1483. Nothing is known positively of his early education, but it is generally supposed that in 1495 , one year after the death of his father, he was placed by his uncle, Ciarla, under the direction of Pietro Vannucci (Perugino), at Perugia. His master having gone to Florence in 1500, the youth went to Città di Castello, where he executed many works. He next went to Urbino, where he painted his St. Michael and St. George, among other notable works. He made a prolonged stay in Florence, and there it was principally that he moulded himself. Under Pope Julius II. Raphael commenced to work on a large scale, his first large productions being the Disputa del Sacramento and the School of Athens in the Vatican. In most of his undertakings he had assistants ; among whom were Giulio Romano, Perino del Vaga, and other distinguished artists. In 1514 he was appointed architect of St. Peter's, and this new responsibility, added to his already enormous labours, seems to have overtaxed his constitution; his health gave way ; he contracted a fatal fever; and died in 1520 .

364. Holy Family. Very minute and highly finished. sala de Signed on the drapery of the Virgin: "RAPH. UR- la Reina BINAS, MDVII." Proceeds from the Royal Monastery of the ISAbel Escorial. Probably the idea of the picture is to represent the admission of the Book of Tobit as a canonical book. Proceeds from the Escorial. SARTO (Andrea del). Florentine School: 1486-1530. Born at Florence. One of his first masters was Pietro di Cosimo. He modelled himself on the pattern of Michelangelo and Fra Bartolommeo. For some time he was Court Painter to Francis I. of France, and executed many excellent works for the various personages of that King's Court. One of the most famous of these is Charity, now in the Louvre. He was remarkable for his beautiful frescoes. He died of the plague at Florence, aged 45 years. Profound originality, natural elegance of style and thoroughness of execution characterised the works of this distinguished artist.

SEbASTIANO DEL PIOMBO (Fra Sebastiano or Luciani, commonly called). Venetian School: $1485-1547$. Born at Venice. First was a pupil of Giovanni Bellini, and afterwards of Giorgione. In 1512 he went to Rome, where he executed some frescoes for Agostino Chigi, a patron of the arts in the Capitol. Here he became the friend of Michelangelo, with whose assistance and his own vigorous colouring he was able to rival, as a painter of altar-pieces, the great Raphael himself. He also excelled as a portrait painter, and Vasari particularly praises his painting of the head and hands. His masterpiece is The Raising of Lazarus, in the National Gallery, London.

Proceeds from the Royal Monastery of San Lorenzo of the Escorial. Remored from board to canvas: 3 ft .5 in . by $2 \mathrm{ft} .4 \frac{3}{4} \mathrm{in}$.

SOLIMENA (Francesco), also called Il Abate Ciccio. Neapolitan School: 1657-1747.
Born at Nocera de' Pagani (kingdom of Naples). His first master in drawing, as in belles lettres, was his father Angelo, but the youth modelled his early productions on the works of Giordano and Calabrese. He was afterwards attracted by the pictures of Pietro da Cortona, and formed a peculiar style in which energy of expression, vigour of tone, and freedom of treatment are certainly not wanting. He was an intimate friend and sincere admirer of Giordano.

SPADA (Leonello). Eclectic Bolognese School: 1576-italianos 1622.

Born of very poor parents at Parma. While a boy he was employed in the studio of the Carracci in grinding and preparing colours. Here he showed his predilection for painting, and, assisted by the instructions of Cesare Baglione, Girolamo Curti and others, he made rapid progress. He went to Rome and made the acquaintance of Caravaggio, whom he imitated, and whose style he assimilated with the noble and majestic sentiment of the Carraccis. He died in poverty at 46 years of age.

Tintoretto (Jacopo Robusti, called Il). Venetian School: 1512-I594.
Tintoretto, so called from the trade of his father, a dyer (tintore), was born at Venice. He was a selftaught painter; for, with the exception of a few days with Titian, he received training from no master. After being dismissed by Titian for no assigned reason, he wrote upon the wall of his studio, "Il disegno di Michelangelo ed il colorito di Tiziano," and worked with such unremitting perscverance and rapidity, that he not only gained for himself the name of "Il Furioso," but also a place as the acknowledged rival of the great Vecellio. He was, however, so unequal in his execution that the Venetians used to say he painted with three pencils, one of gold, one of silver, and one of iron. His best works are still in Venice. He had a son Domenico, who survived him, and a daughter Marietta, an excellent portrait painter, who died before her father. This great master died at Venice in I 594.

Titian (Tiziano Vecellio, called by us). Venetian School: 1477-1576.
Titian was born in the district of Cadore in the Carnic Alps. He was the greatest of all the great Venetian painters, At the age of nine years he was sent to Venice in the care of his uncle, a lawyer, who placed him with Giovanni Bellini. There it is likely that he met Giorgione, who exercised a great influence over the young genius, which influence is clearly seen in Titian's early works. The two great painters worked together in 1507 in the decoration of the Fondaco de' Tedeschi, and in that year Giorgione died. After the death of Giovanni Bellini, Titian finished the works that his master had left incomplete in the Sala del Gran Consiglio in Venice. At Bologna, in 1530 , he painted the portrait of the Emperor Charles V., and two years later another portrait of the same Emperor. He was much patronised by Philip II. of Spain. He lived to the age of 99 years, and died of the plague in 1576 .

George Vasari was born at Arezzo. He learned the rudiments of art from the French painter, Guillermo of Marseille, and at the age of 15 years went to Florence. He there studied under Buonarroti, Andrea del Sarto, and other great masters. In Pisa and Bologna he left some works of importance ; and afterwards, with Catdinal Hippolyti de Medici, he visited Rome, where he executed important works for Pope Clement VlI., Paul III., Julius II., and others. But Vasari excelled rather as author than as painter. His Vite de' piu eccellenti pittori. scultori ed architetti is an invaluable collection of notices of the lives of celebrated artists, and perhaps the most important of its kind for studying the development of the Italian schools. Vasari died at Florence at 62 years of age.

VERONESE (Paolo Cagliari), called Paul Veronese. Venetian School: 1528-1588.
Paul Veronese was born at Verona. His father, a stone-carver, seeing the inclination of his son for painting, placed him, at the age of 14 years, under Antonio Badile, Paul's uncle, and a painter of no great merit. Paul soon began to do independent work, and in 155 I he received a commission from the Soranzi family to paint frescoes in their new villa by Castelfranco. In I 552 he was painting, together with Battista del Moro, Domenico del Riccio, and Farinato, in the Cathedral at Mantua. He went to Venice in 1555, where he lived, almost continuously, the remainder of his life. He died of pleurisy in April 1588. Paul Veronese was one of the greatest naturalistic masters. One of his best works is The Marringe at Ciann, in the Louvre.

VOLTERRA (Daniele Ricciarelli da). Florentine School: i509-I 566.
Born at Volterra (Tuscany) in I 509 . He first learned to draw from Giovanni Ant. Razzi, and afterwards he placed himself under Baldassare Peruzzi. In Rome he became pupil to Perino del Vaga, whom be assisted in many works, He was appointed superintendent of the works of the Vatican, on recommendation of Michelangelo, by Pope Paul III. Besides being a painter, he was also a sculptor, and executed some important works in this other branch of art. This artist owes his celebrity more to his earnest application than to his genius. His compositions are energetic, but somewhat conventional of expression.

ARIAS FERNANDEZ (Antonio). School of Madrid. Born at Madrid, date unknown ; died at Madrid 1684.

He was pupil to Pedro de las Cuevas, and so precocious an artist that, at the age of 14 years, he painted all the canvas of the greater altar of the Carmen Calzado of Toledo, a work that gained for him a great reputation in the capital. At 25 years he had attained to the name of being one of the greatest artists in Madrid. Nevertheless, in spite of his laborious life and distinguished reputation, he spent his old age in poverty, and died in the general hospital of the royal city of Spain.

CARDUCCI or CARDUCHO (Vincent). School of salas de Madrid : 1578-1638. ALFONSO XII.

Born at Florence, but was brought to Spain by his brother Bartolomeneo at a very early age, and was educated in Madrid. He was painter to King Philip III. and executed extensive works in the Palace of Pardo. His Diálogos are the best work on painting, in the Spanish tongue. He did much to further the cause of the school in which he was formed, and had such pupils as Félix Castello, Francisco Fernandez, Francisco Rizi, and others. His works are characterised by facility of composition, natural attitudes, good drawing, and vigorous colouring. He died at Madrid at 60 years of age, COELLO (Claudio). School of Madrid: Date of birth unknown ; died in Madrid in 1693.

Born at Madrid. His father, an engraver in bronze, placed him to study drawing in the school of Francisco Rizi. This excellent artist, seeing the boy's talent for painting, persuaded the father to allow him to study colours. Under Rizi he made rapid strides, and while yet very young he executed works for the monks of San Plácido and for the churches of San Andres and Santa Cruz. He contracted a friendship with Carreño, who helped to perfect him in colour. He also had a friend in José Donoso, with whom he painted frescoes in the church of Santa Cruz. On the death of Rizi in 1685 he completed the picture which that artist was painting for the altar of the Santa Forma of the sacristy of the Escorial. He died at Madrid. Coello was the last Spanish painter of the period which preceded the rapid decline, in all their branches, of both art and literature.

GOYA Y LUCIENTES (D. Francisco). 1746-1828.

This great regenerator of naturalistic painting in Spain was born at Fuendetodos in Arragon. At I3 years of age he commenced his studies with Luzán, at Saragossa. He next spent some years in Rome, and returned to Spain in 1769 , the most gifted painter of his time. He gained a great reputation by frescoes which he executed in the church del Pilar at Saragossa, his canvas in the church of St. Francis the Great at Madrid, his pictures on customs, and his historical portraits ; and in 1795 was made Director of the Academy of St. Ferdinand. He was Court Painter to both Charles IV. and Ferdinand VII. In 1822 he went to France, and after spending a short time in Paris, established himself at Bordeaux, where, with the exception of a visit to Madrid, one year before his death, he spent the rest of his days. Goya's most notable frescoes are those executed in the Iglesia del Pilar at Saragossa, in San Antonio de la Florida at Madrid, and in the Palace of Almirantazgo. His best historical works in oil are in Valladolid and Valencia, and his portraits and pictures on customs, besides in this museum, are to be found in various cities of Spain.

Herrera (Francisco), called Herrera el Mozo. Born at Seville in 1622; died at Madrid in 1685.
He first studied with his father, Herrera el Viejo, and then went to Rome, where he came under the baneful influence of the Mannerists. He returned to Seville, and after remaining there for some time, in which he executed many unimportant works, he established himself in the capital. Here he received marked distinctions from the Queen Regent, Mary of Austria, though he never attained to the title of Court Painter. His principal merit consisted in a pleasing colour.

JOANES (Vicente), or Vicente Juan Macip, commonly called Juan de Juanes. Born between 1505 and 1507 ; died in 1579.
The facts relating to this artist's birth, school, and death are very obscure. His style, however, reveals the influence of Raphael's school in Italy, as is seen in the picture No. 763 of this Museum. He supplied work for the Jesuit churches in Spain-namely, San Nicolas, Santa Cruz, Carmen Calzado, San Estéban, and many others. His style is majestic and noble, notably in his images of the Saviour. In portraiture he approached Raphael, and perhaps excelled Bronzino. This great painter was distinctly Italian in his art, but as none of his pupils followed his maxims, he cannot be classed at the head of a school.
749. St. Stephen in the Synagogue. (Acts of the Apostles vi.) Represents Stephen speaking the words of wisdom in the synagogue. LEONARDO (José). School of Madrid : i6ı6-i656.
Born at Calatayud. Fusepa Martinez assures us that Leonardo was one of the best pupils of Eugenio Caxés; and Cean Bermudez makes him a disciple of Pedro de las Cuevas. His constant study of the great masters at Madrid and other centres gave him a remarkable freshness of colour, good drawing, and grace in disposing and grouping his figures in historical composition. He painted in the Royal Alcázar restored by Philip IV. In the prime of life he plunged himself into a deplorable insanity by a drink, which misfortune or envy induced him to take, and he died at Saragossa at 40 years of age.

MARCH (Esteban). Born at Valencia at the end of the sixteenth century ; died at the same city in 1660.
His master was Orrente, the great imitator of Bassano. He painted battles: in the opinion of Palomino, con superior exelencia. He was not of sound mind, and Palomino tells some remarkable stories of his insane eccentricities. His style sometimes partakes of Orrente, and at others of Jusepe Ribera. Facility of execution, freshness of colour, and great iruth characterise some of his works.

MaZo (Juan Bautista Martinez del). School of Madrid. Born at the Capitol, date unknown ; died also at Madrid in 1667.
Mazo was pupil and assistant, and afterwards son-inlaw, of Velasquez. He was a good imitator of his master's style, and some of his copies have passed as originals of the great Velasquez. He excelled in portraits, landscapes, views of cities, &c., and most of his landscapes are characterised by grandeur of composition. On the death of Velasquez, Mazo was appointed private painter to the King.
788. View of the City of Saragossa. The masterly touch of Velasquez is seen in the style of execution of the figures in this picture. Painted for Philip IV. on the occasion of his son, Prince Balthazar, receiving the homage of Aragnon and Navarte. Canvas: 5 ft. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. by Io ft. 9 in.

MORALES (Luis de), commonly called the Divine Morales. Born at Badajoz in the beginning of the sixteenth century ; died in 1586.
There is much difference of opinion as to what influences Morales owes his style. It seems most probable that he moulded himself in the assiduous study of the Florentine masters. His works, however, also reveal the influence of the Flemish and German schools. He lived all his life in his native city, with the exception of a short time spent at Madrid in the service of Philip II. His subjects were always religious, and his treatment so excellent that he received the name of el Divino Morales.

Murillo's first master was Juan del Castillo. When this master moved to Cadiz Murillo began to paint independently, selling devotional images on wood and canvas to picture-dealers, as well as to traders from Mexico and Peru. Having accumulated some money in this way he went to Madrid, with the intention of afterwards visiting England and Italy. But advised by Velasquez, who gave him the full benefit of his great influence in the capital, he decided to remain at Madrid. In 1645 he returned to Seville, where he executed a series of pictures on the life of St. Francis for the Franciscan Convent. In 1648 he married a rich lady of Pilas, and soon his house became the centre of taste and fashion in Seville. Among his most important works may be mentioned the eight large pictures painted for the Hospital of St. George, and called La Caridad.

Born at Logroño. From an illness in his infancy he remained deaf and dumb all his life. He received lessons in painting from a monk named Vincente and then went to Italy, visiting all the principal cities, and finally settling at Venice with Titian, from whom he acquired the soft mellow colour which distinguishes him. He was Court Painter to Philip II. and did many works for the Escorial. He was a faithful follower of the maxims of Titian. He died at Toledo in 1579.

Palomino and Jusepe Martinez make him a pupil of Bassano, Cean Bermudez believes that he studied with Greco at Toledo, where he passed some years, and for whose cathedral he executed celebrated works. He gained a great reputation in Valencia from a San Sebastian which he executed in the cathedral. There he established a school, and was master of Estéban March, and afterwards of Garcia Salmeron, in Cuenca. In Madrid also he executed works: He excelled in painting animals. His colour is of the chaste Venetian kind, and in his landscapes there are effects of light worthy of Titian.

PaCHECO (Francisco). School of Sevilee: 157 I -1654. Born at Seville, where he learned to draw and paint under Luis Fernandez. For some time he occupied himself in colouring and painting in backgrounds of the works of sculptors and engravers. In 1600 he painted six large pictures from the Life of St. Raymond for the principal cloister of the Merced Calzada. In 503 he executed, in distemper, a ceiling for the palace of the third Duke of Alcala. He came to Madrid in 16 I . On his return to Seville he established his famous school, from whence came Alonso Cano, Diego Velasquez, and others. With the young Velasquez, his son-1n-law, he returned to Madrid in 1623. He spent his latter days in Seville, where he wrote his Art of Painting and other interesting works on art. As a painter Pacheco is distinguished more by his great knowledge than by genius. His drawing was not wanting in a certain natural nobleness, but his colour was dry and his handling poor and graceless. He excelled in portraits, of which, Cean tells us, he executed over 150 in oil.

Born at Ñoles Bujalance in 1653 ; died in 1725.
While very young he was taken by his parents to Cordova, where he studied theology, philosophy, jurisprudence, &c. Then left to choose a profession, he decided on painting, and at 19 years of age placed himself under Juan de Valdés Leal. In 1678 he went to Madrid, where he was recognised as an artist of merit and soon made for himself a place in good society. He was introduced into the Palace by the King's painter, Claudio Coello, and in company with this artist painted a ceiling in the Queen's apartment. He also painted in Valencia, Granada, Cordova, &c. Palomino is more distinguished by his writing than his painting. In his frescoes his colour is poor, his composition good, but execution weak. Nevertheless his oil pictures are brilliant, and some of them approximate those of Escalante and Vaccaro.

During the reign of Philip he painted nearly all the portraits for the royal family, and on the death of this king, Philip UII. extended to him a like patronage. Although Pantajo's forte was portraiture, nevertheless he executed important religious compositions in the Chapel del Tesoro of Madrid, at Valladolid, Segovia, and Seville. His portraits are characterised by correct drawing, by the exquisite conclusion of the accessories and combination of the flesh tints.

PRADO (Blas del). Born at Toledo, probably in the second third of the sixteenth century; died about 1600 .
He made two trips to Morocco; one about 1580 , when he was sent by Philip II., and another on his own account. Between the dates of these two trips lies the epoch of his flourishing in Madrid and Toledo. His principal qualities were correct drawing, a certain grandeur-inspired by the school of Raphael and Andrea del Sarto-and Roman simplicity. Palomino supposes that Prado died at Madrid; Martinez be"lieved that he died at Fez.

First studied with a professor in Valencia. He went to Italy, and there studied assiduously the works of Raphael, Sebastian del Piombo, and the Carraccis. On his return to Valencia his reputation grew rapidly, and was greatly enhanced by The Last Supper which he executed for the College of Corpus Christi. He painted for the Churches Andilla, Algemesi, Carcagente, Torrente, &c., and many of his works are in the Provincial Museo of Valencia. On his death in 1628 his remains were interred in the Church of St. John of Valencia. Ribalta was a good draughtsman, and in some of his pictures his figures are noble and gracious. In others he seems to waver between the idealism of Italy and the realism of Spain.

RIBALTA (Juan de). $1597-1628$.
Pupil of his father Francisco. At 18 years of age he painted the great picture The Crucifixion of the Lord in the Monastery of St. Michael of the Kings. He was always a naturalistic painter, and within the sphere of naturalism his drawing is correct, and his characters generally noble. His colour is fresh and pleasing, and his touch spontaneous. Many of his works have passed as productions of Estéban March and other colourists of the seventeenth century.

RIBERA (José or Jusepe De). Born at Játiva, Valencia, in 1588 ; died at Naples in 1656. José Ribera, commonly called Lo Spagnoletto (the little Spaniard), first studied in the school of Francisco Ribalta. He went to Italy while still very young. 'There his first impulse was to follow in the lines of Raphael and Annibale Carracci, but he afterwards more closely confined himself to the style of Caravaggio. He also studied Correggio at Parma. He then settled in Naples, having married the daughter of a rich picture-dealer ; and, according to Cean Bermudez and Palomino, he died in that city. He was one of the most distinguished naturalists of his time. His drawing is correct and his colour rich. Among his pupils were Luca Giordano and Salvator Rosa.

After spending his early youth in the town of Navalcarnero he went to Madrid and placed himself under his first master, Raymond Bayeu. In 1802 he was rewarded by the Academy of St. Ferdinand and obtained a pension of 7000 reales annually, with the object of enabling him to study in France. There he was under the direction of the celebrated David, and made such progress that Charles III. augmented his pension by 5000 reales. But the hostilities between France and Spain made the pension void, and Ribera, very poor, went to Rome. He was then made Court

RIZI (Francisco). School of Madrid : i608-i685.
Rizi was born at Madrid, and was a pupil of Vincencio Carducho. Although a very fertile genius who worked with great facility, he was often very poor. At 40 years of age he decorated, in company with Pedro Miñez, the theatre of the Royal Alcázar. In his 48th year he was made King's Painter with a salary which he had some difficulty in drawing; and afterwards Court Painter to Charles II. He painted in the Royal Alcázar and Palace of Madrid, and in the chapels. By the abuse of his great facility, Rizi contributed much to the decadence of the brilliant Spanish school.

RIZI (Fr. Juan). School of Madrid: i595-1675.
Rizi was born at Madrid, and was brother of the distinguished painter Francisco Rizi. He learned to paint under Friar Juan Bautista Mayono. He studied theology in Salamanca, and became a priest of the Monastery of Medira del Campo. His works in the various convents and churches created for him a great reputation. Those executed at Monte-Casino brought him in touch with Pope Innocent XI., who presented him with the title of Bishop in Italy ; but Rizi could not take possession of it, for he died in 1675. He was a great naturalistic painter.

Seville about 1558 or 1560 ; died in the town of Olivares in 1625.
In 1603 he was Prebendary in the chapel of Olivares, for whose treasurer he painted several canvases illustrating the life of the Virgin. From 1607 to 1624 we find him painting great works at Seville and Madrid. Cean Bermudez, in considering his works at Seville, places him on a level with Tintoretto and Palma. His drawing is somewhat severe, his groups well disposed, his attitudes majestic, and his colour full of harmony.

SÁNCHEZ COELLO (Alonso). Born early in the sixteenth century at Valencia; died at Madrid in 1590. It is understood that he learned his profession in Italy. In I54I he was residing in Madrid, where he married, and eleven years after, in 1552 , he went to Lisbon with Antonio Moro. Here he was well patronised by Cardinal Granvela and the Royal Family. He entered the service of Philip II., whose example of patronage was followed by all the most distinguished persons of the capital ; and there were few magnates of his time who were not eager to be portrayed by so famous an artist. He painted many canvases of the Spanish King and seventeen other royal personages. There were portraits by him in the royal palaces of Madrid, Pardo and Valladolid, many of which were destroyed in the fire of the royal Castle of Madrid and the Palace of Pardo. It was really in portraiture that Sánchez Coello excelled, though he executed some notable religious works, among which may be mentioned his great altar-piece of the Church del Espinar. He also made copies of some of Titian's most notable works. Among his pupils were Pantoja de la Cruz and Felipe de Liaño.

TEJEO (D. Rafael). Born at Caravaca in the year 1800 ; died at Madrid in October of 1856.
Studied drawing at Murcia. In his early youth he went to Madrid, and there studied under the Court Painter, D. José Aparicio. Four years later he passed to Rome, where he began to study seriously, and where he executed the beautiful Magdalen, now in this Museum. On his return to Madrid he was made individuo de mérito of the Academy of San Ferdinand, and subsequently, in 1842, honorary director. Hc also received the honour of Court Painter. He painted chiefly historical and mythological subjects, though he also did some notable portraits.

TOBAR (D. Alonso Miguel de). School of Seville. Born in the town of Higuera, near Aracena, in 1678 ; died at Madrid in 1758.
In his early youth he studied under Juan Antonio Fajardo, a painter of small importance at Seville. He soon, however, outgrew his master, and set himself to copying and studying the works of Murillo. His productions attracted several personages of the Court of Philip V. when he was at Seville, and obtained for him the title of King's Court Painter in 1729. In 1734 he came to Madrid with the Court, where he remained, painting till the year of his death. He made portraits of many persons of distinction, among whom was the Cardinal of Molina. His style more nearly approaches Murillo than that of any of the other imitators of the great Sevillian master.
1044. Portrait of Bartolomé Esteban Murillo. About 40 Central years of age. Life-sized bust. Tobar probably painted this SALON: portrait from another canvas by Murillo himself. Canvas: 3 ft . $3 \frac{1}{4}$ in. Autores by 2 ft . $5 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{in}$.

TOLEDO (El Capitán Juan de). Born in the city of Lorca in 16II; died in Madrid in 1665.
Studied first under his father, Miguel del Toledo, and afterwards in Rome under Cerquozzi (Michelangelo of the Battles), to whose friendship he owed his success in Italy as a soldier, and which, together with his own valour and genius, raised him, in a short space of time, to the rank of Captain of Cavalry. He afterwards abandoned the military life to become an artist, and after studying some time in Italy he returned to Spain and settled at Granada, where he painted a considerable number of battles and seascapes. He then passed to Murcia, and there painted notable works. Finally he came to Madrid, where he died in 1665.

TRISTÁN (Luıs). Born near Toledo about 1586 ; died at Toledo in i640. School of Madrid.
Tristan was a pupil of Greco, and with exquisite discernment imbibed the good and discarded the extravagant qualities of his master. At 30 years of age he painted for the Parochial Church at Yépes what are regarded as his greatest works-namely, The Birth of Cbrist, The Adoration of the Magi, Cbrist at the Column, Fesus bearing the Cross, The Resurrection, and The Ascension, and various saints in half-length figures. In 1619 he executed for the collection of prelates in the Cathedral of Toledo the portrait of Cardinal Archbishop D. Bernardo de Sandoval, which is one of the greatest of the series. Bürger speaks of this painter as the precursor of the brilliant Peninsular school of the seventeenth century.

VALDIS LEAL (D. Juan de). School of Seville. Born at Cordova, 1630 ; died at Seville in October 1691.
His first master was Antonio del Castillo, but his works do not partake of Castillo's style. Having established himself at Seville he was made superintendent of the Public Academy of Drawing in the Casa Lonja in 1660. He resigned this post eleven years later on being elected judge of painting in the Fraternity of San Lúcas; but was again in 1663 reinstated as superintendent, and a few months afterwards made president of the Academy. He executed a considerable number of etchings. In 1672 he visited Cordova, where he painted some works, and gave useful counsels to the biographer Palomino in the management of the brushes. Having returned to Seville he executed the beautiful frontispiece for the interesting book preserved in the Hospital of Charity, which contains an inventory of the furniture, pictures, &c. &c., of that institution; and painted several pictures from the life of St. Ambrose for the Archbishop Spinola ; and for the cited Hospital of Charity the two greatest pictures which he ever produced : allegories of the Vanity of Life and Death. He visited Madrid in 1674, but left without painting any works of importance. His great rival Murillo having died in 1682, Valdis was left in command of all the important commissions of Seville and all the glory that Murillo had monopolised.

VALERO (D. Cristóbal). Born at Alboraya, Valencia, date unknown ; died at Valencia in December 1789.
Studied philosophy at Valencia, and learned painting from Evaristo Muñoz. He spent some time at Rome, where he made great progress, though in the manneristic school of Sebastian Conca. On his return to Valencia he took holy orders. He contributed more than any other professor to the founding of an academy in his city, and was director of the Academy of Santa Barbara, and Academician of San Ferdinand. His works were chiefly in the convents of Valencia.

VELASQUEZ (Diego de Silva y). School of Madrid. Born at Seville, and baptised on the 6th of June 1599 ; died at Madrid on the 7 th of August 1660.
Velasquez was son of Juan Rodriguez de Silva, an advocate of Portuguese descent, who settled at Seville. He was placed by his father with Herrera the elder to study painting, but this master was soon changed for Francisco Pacheco, who gave the young Diego his daughter in marriage. But though Velasquez's taste was greatly influenced and improved by the cultured Pacheco and his refined circle, there is no doubt that he learned more of actual painting from Herrera and Luis Tristan. In 1622 he visited the capital, and in 1623 was invited to return by the Duke of Olivares, by whom he was introduced to Philip IV. He was appointed Court Painter. In this year he commenced a portrait of the Prince of Wales (afterwards Charles I.). In 1629 he went to Italy, and after spending some time in Rome and Naples, he returned to Madrid in 163I. He was then made quartermaster to the King, and attended him on various journeys. This and other irksome duties being too much for him, together with his enormous labours in painting, no doubt caused the breaking-up of his system and his death in 1660. He was buried in the Church of St. John.

Velasquez was perhaps the greatest realistic painter the world knows of. In portraiture he has been excelled by none. He was the founder of the great school of Madrid, and at Madrid his greatest works are still to be seen.
1054. The Adoration of the Kings. Mary, seated at the foot of an ancient construction, presents the Infant to the adoration of the kings, two of whom are presenting cups of gold, while the third awaits his turn. ini8. Portrait of the Child, Prince Baltasar Carlos, in Court dress, with a gun in his hand. This portrait passed as an original of Velasquez; but the execution is poor and the conception not entirely successful. Nor is the face painted with the freedom that the great Velasquez always made use of, especially at the time indicated by the age of the boy. The disposition of the accessories also does not justify the opinion that this canvas is an original. Canvas: 5 ft. $\mathrm{I} \frac{1}{2}$ in. by 3 ft .8 in.

VILLAVICENCIO (Don Pedro Nuñez de). School of Seville: i635-I700.
Villavicencio was born at Seville, and died in the same city. He received his first lessons in painting from Murillo, whom he succeeded as the head of that great master's school. His duties as Knight of the Order of St. John often took him to Malta. where he studied with Matti Preti, a former pupil of Guercino, and a Knight de la Lengua de Italia. On his return to Spain he again became a faithful follower of Murillo, whom he never abandoned. After the death of Murillo he came to Madrid and presented Charles II. with the canvas now possessed by this Museo. He served the King and his Order in carrying out many important commissions, and died in his native city in 1700.

ZURBARÁN (Francisco de). School of Seville. Born in Ñoles Estremadura, at Fuente de Cantos, in 1598 ; died at Madrid in 1662.
His father, who was a farmer, soon discovered the son's genius for painting and sent him to Seville to study under Juan de Roélas. Although, like Velasquez, he studied Nature more than the works of any artist, he certainly showed in his work the influence of the forcible Caravaggio, and was even called the "Spanish Caravaggio." Without leaving Seville, he had, at the age of 2 I years, gained a great reputation. It is thought that he rarely left this city of his adoption until his friend Velasquez persuaded him to remove to the Spanish capital. But it is definitely known that he was Painter to the King before this, and it seems most likely that he must therefore have been in Madrid on a previous occasion. He died in the capital in 1662. His greatest works are to be seen at Seville, but he is represented in the Louvre, the galleries of Dresden, and Berlin.

BOUDENYNS (Anton Frans). Flemish School. According to A. J. Wauters, was born at Brussels in 1644 , and died in I7II.

This artist worked in collaboration with Picter Bout. Bout inserted the numerous figures and animals in Boudenyns' landscapes. Kügler says of their work, "The landscape part by Boudenyns is generally borrowed from ltalian scenery, and of clean and minute execution. The figures and animals by Bout are also treated with much picturesque feeling, well drawn, and painted with a clever but somewhat meagre brush."

DÜRER (Albrecht), commonly called Albert Dürer. German School: 1471-1528.
Albert Dürer was born at Nuremberg, and at an early age was placed by his father, a goldsmith, under the direction of Martin Schön. In Schön's studio he met Hans Burgkmair, who was to become his principal assistant in after-life. In 1486 he was apprenticed to Michael Wohlgemuth for three years. As a painter's companion he went to Italy in 1490 , and spent some time in Venice, to which city he returned in 1506.
"In him the style of art already existing attained its most original and highest perfection. He became the representative of the German art of his period. His spirit was rich and inexhaustible : not content with painting and the other arts of design, he exerted himself in the kindred studies of sculpture and architure. He was gifted with a power of conception which traced Nature through all her finest shades, and with a lively sense, as well for the solemn and the sublime, as for simple grace and tenderness."Kügler.

DYCK (Anthony van), commonly called Van Dyck. Flemish School. Born at Antwerp on the 22nd of March 1599 ; died in London in December 1641.
This artist, by far the greatest of Rubens' scholars, received his early instruction from Van Balen. When only 19 years of age he was admitted into the Guild of Painters at Antwerp, and in the year 1620 was assistant to Rubens. Three years later he went to Italy and made copies of Titian at Venice. He also visited Rome and made a prolonged stay at Genoa. Before leaving for Italy he had entered the service of James I. of England.

In 1626 he returned to his native city, where during the next few years he executed his best historical subjects and some notable portraits. At the end of this period he was appointed chief Court Painter to Charles I. of England. He was above all a portrait painter; and though as an inventive genius he was less famed than his master, he excelled the great Rubens in draughtsmanship.

EYCK (Hubert van). Flemish School: i366-i426.
Hubert was elder brother of Jan van Eyck. It is highly probable that both brothers were in the service of Philip of Charolois, heir-apparent to the throne of Burgundy. They were among the founders of the great school of Bruges. Of Hubert, Kügler says : "He carried the idealistic tendency, already existing in the Flemish masters, to an extraordinary degree of excellence, whilst in many respects he adhered to the more ideal feeling of the previous period, imparting to this, by means of his far richer power of representation, greater distinction, truth of nature, and variety of expression. . . . . The prevailing arrangement of his subject is symmetrical, holding fast to the architectonic rules which had hitherto presided over ecclesiastic art. . . . . That, however, which is almost the principal quality of his art is the hitherto unprecedented power, depth, transparency, and harmony of his colouring."

EYCK (Jan van). Flemish School. Born at Maas Eyck on the Maas, about 1390 ; died at Bruges, July 9th, I 440.
Jan or John van Fyck was many years the junior of his brother Hubert, but together they are rightly considered the founders of the school of Bruges, and perfectors, if not discoverers, of oil painting.

FLORIS (Frans de Vriendt, called). Flemish School. Born at Antwerp about 1518 , and there died in 1570. Frans Floris the elder, was the son of a stone-cutter at Antwerp, and received his first instruction in painting from Lambert Lombard. He went to Italy about 1540, and was so much influenced by Raphael that he received the name of the Flemish Raphael. He was admitted into the Guild of Painters at Antwerp, and in that city opened a school. His drawing is not good, and his historical subjects are uninteresting. In portraiture, however, he was rather better.

Jan Glauber, a pupil of Bercham, was born at Utrecht in 1646 , and died at Amsterdam in 1726 . On leaving Bercham he devoted himself to the study and imitation of Nicolas Poussin, with which object he spent several years in Italy. On his return he resided for a time at Hamburg, but he seems to have settled at Amsterdam. Here he became intimate with Gerard Lairesse, who painted figures in his landscapes. "His pictures always combine a certain elevation and poetry of composition with admirable drawing." In warm and juicy colouring, and individuality of detail, he often surpassed Poussin.

GOSSAERT (Jan), commonly called Jean de Mabuse. Flemish School: 1470-154I.
Gossaert was born at Maubeuge, or Mabuse, about 1470 , and was called after his native town, Jean de Mabuse, or, more commonly, Mabuse. He went to Italy, after spending some years in Antwerp, with Philip the Bastard of Burgundy, and there introduced into his Flemish style, with no beneficial results, some of the Italian characteristics of art. All his work is characterised by careful execution and fine finish. He painted portraits with much success. He is represented at Vienna, Berlin, Munich, Antwerp and elsewhere. He died at Antwerp in 1541 .

HOLBEIN (Hans), the younger (?). German School: 1497-I 543.
Hans Holbein the younger was son of Hans Holbein of Augsburg, one of the greatest Swabian painters of the latter part of the fifteenth century. He was born at Augsburg, and, together with his brother Ambrose, studied under his father. About 1515 the brothers went to Basle, where Hans met Erasmus, the greatest scholar of his time. In 1516, in his 19th year, he painted several portraits ; among others the Burgomaster of Basle and his wife. In 1520 he was a citizen of Basle. The frescoes which he commenced to paint about this time have perished, as also have the works with which he decorated the Rathaus of Basle. In 1526 he journeyed to England, stopping at Antwerp, where he met Quinten Massys. His introduction to Sir Thomas More, from Erasmus, made him welcome at London, where his portraits soon made him famous. In 1528 he returned to Basle, where he spent some years, and again came to London in 1532 . He soon after entered the service of King Henry VIII., whose painter he remained until his death, which occurred in 1543. Holbein was as great in historical works as in portraits. His painting is characterised by fine drawing, force, and delicacy, and the entire absence of mannerism.

MEMLINC or MEMLING (Hans). Flemish School.
Van Mander supposes this artist to have been born at Bruges; but it has also been stated, with reason, that he was born at Mayence. In 1478 he was living at Bruges as an established painter. Vasari classes him as a pupil of Roger Van der Weyden. "Compared with those of his master, his figures are of better proportions and less meagreness of form ; his hands and feet truer to nature ; his heads of women are sweeter, and those of his men less severe ; his outlines are softer ; in the modelling of his flesh parts more delicacy of half-tones is observable; and his colours are still more luminous and transparent."

MENGS (Anton Raphael). German School : 1728-1779. This painter, son of Ishmael Mengs, a distinguished miniature painter, was born at Aussig, in Bohemia.

He studied under the strict and severe rule of his father, who took him to Rome at the age of 12 , and set him to study antique art. At the age of 17 he was Court Painter at Dresden to King Augustus of Poland, with a salary of 600 thalers. At Rome he was commissioned on various works by Cardinal Albani and Pope Clement XIV. He was invited to Spain by Charles III., and he went to that country in 176I. Mengs was a good colourist and excellent draughtsman and a master of technique ; yet there is in all his pictures (as also in his writings on art), a coldness of feeling that makes them unattractive. He was at his best in portraiture.

METSYS or MASSYS (Quinten). Old Flemish School.
This master was born at Antwerp some time before 1460. He was admitted into the Guild of St. Luke in 1491, and after acquiring great reputation and riches in his native town he died there in 1530. Massys was one of the most distinguished painters of his school. He possessed all the technical knowledge of the Van Eycks, but was broader in handling. His modelling, too, was beautifully soft and subtle. He is well represented in the galleries of Berlin and St. Petersburg. His earliest known work is a large triptych in the Brussels Gallery. The Public Gallery at Antwerp also has a large triptych which was painted for the Joiners' Guild. Besides religious subjects, he sometimes painted money-changers, &c.; and some excellent portraits by him are extant.
1442. Ecce Homo: Triptych. In the centre, Jesus crowned with thorns, is presented to the people. At His side are Pilate and two Jews, one of whom raises His mantle and reveals the wounds on the Saviour's body. In the right wing are seen the Jewish people. Six figures. In the left the disciples of Jesus. This triptych zwas purchased by Ferdinand VII., in 1829, from the heirs of D. $\mathcal{F}$. Antonio Ruiz, of Valencia. Panel: height, 3 ft . $6 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{in}$. ; width of centre panel, $2 \mathrm{ft} .10 \frac{3}{\mathrm{I}} \mathrm{in}$. ; width of each of the wings, 1 ft. $5 \frac{1}{4} \mathrm{in}$.

METSYS or MASSYS (Jan). Flemish School: i 509-I 575.
This painter, son of Quinten Massys, was born at Antwerp. His fame was more or less the reflected glory of his father, of whose pictures he made repetitions in his early career. "Warm, powerfnl colouring, and careful though somewhat coarse treatment," characterise these works ; but his later efforts are decidedly feeble. He died poor, in August 1575.

MOR or MORO (Antonצ̈), known in England as Sir Antonio More. Dutch School.

This great master, a scholar of Jan Scorel, was born at Utrecht in I512. He entered the Guild of St. Luke at that city in 1547 . He studied some time in Italy. In 1552 he was commissioned by Emperor Charles V. to visit Lisbon and paint the portrait of the Emperor's son Philip's betrothed bride. Later he went to England and took the portrait of Philip's second wife Mary, to whom he was appointed painter. After that Queen's death he still remained in the service of her husband Philip II., and again went to Spain. For Philip he painted portraits and copies of Titian. He was obliged to leave Spain by the Inquisition, and returned to Antwerp, where he died between 1576 and 1578 . He was certainly one of the most distinguished portrait painters of the Dutch and Flemish schools of his time : his portraits rival Holbein, Sanchez Coello, and Titian.

PENS or PENCZ (Georg). German Transition School: 1500-1556.
This artist, one of the most gifted of Albert Dürer's pupils, was born at Nuremberg. He was an excellent draughtsman, and his colour is warm and vigorous; to these qualities he added a happy power of conception and a fine sense of beauty. He studied Raphael in Italy, but unlike nearly all the Flemish painters who imitated Italian art, he preserved his own originality and individual feeling. Without doubt he was among the foremost German portrait painters of his time. He also studied engraving under Marc Antonio, and some of his plates compare favourably with those of that master. He died at Breslau in 1556.

1530. Charity : represented by a nude woman, standing by a cradle in which are two infants, one of which she alfonso holds round the body with its face pressed to her xil. breast. Figures life-size and entire. This precious panel, which some critics attribute to Lambert Lombard, was brought from Flanders in the time of Philip III. (1608) and formed part of the Pardo collection. Panel: $5 \mathrm{ft} .3^{\frac{1}{4} \mathrm{in} .}$ by 3 ft .5 in.

POELENBERG (Cornelis). Dutch School: 1586 -1660. Poelenberg learned to paint from Abraham Bloemart and went to Rome, where he followed Elzheimer for a time. Then he devoted himself to the study of the more elegant forms of Italian art and became very popular. He is represented in nearly all the galleries of Europe. His subjects are landscapes with small figures in classic taste. He died at his native city, Utrecht, in 1660.

RembRandt (Van Ryn). Dutch School: $1606-\mathrm{i} 669$. Rembrandt was born at Leyden in July i606. His first instructor in art was Jacob van Swanenburch; but he also studied at Amsterdam under Pieter Lastmann. When only 17 years of age, however, he began to study independently, improving himself by painting heads from life. In this way he soon made a reputation as a portrait painter. In I630 he settled in Amsterdam, where he remained till his death in 1669, Notwithstanding the fact that he married a lady of fortune, Saskia Uilenburg, he seems to have been in great financial difficulties, for in 1656 he was publicly declared bankrupt. But these difficulties were evidently not sufficiently great to prevent him in any way from producing his best work. He treated all kinds of subjects, and in such a way that he has had no equal. He had many pupils, among whom were Gerbrandt van den Eechout, Ferdinand Bol, Govert Flinck, Adriaen Backen, and Nicolas Maes.

RUBENS (Peter Paul). Flemish School: $1577-1640$.
Rubens was born at Siegen in 1577 . When he was but io years of age he lost his father, and his mother, though wishing the boy to follow the profession of law, yielded to her son's inclination towards painting, and placed him to study with Tobias Verhaagt and Adam van Noort. After having received some instructions from these artists he next entered the school of Otto van Veen, the most celebrated painter in Antwerp at that time. In 1600 he went to Italy and entered the service of the Duke of Mantua, for whom he made copies at Venice and Rome. In 1605 the Duke sent him on a mission to Philip III. of Spain, and at Madrid he painted some portraits of the nobility. He returned to Antwerp, viâ Genoa, in 1608 , and was taken into the service of the Archduke Albert, Governor of the Netherlands. In I620 he went to Paris and was there commissioned by Marie de' Medicis to paint his famous series of pictures for the new Luxembourg Palace. He was sent on another mission to Spain, to Philip IV., by the Infanta Isabella, in 1628. In 1629 he was knighted by Charles I. of England, and in the same year also by Philip IV. of Spain. Rubens died immensely wealthy at Antwerp in 1640.

RUYSDAEL (Jacob van). Dutch School.
It is believed that Ruysdael was born at Haarlem in 1625. He was probably instructed in painting by his uncle, Salomon van Ruysdael, but the influence of Allaert van Everdingen is very evident in his work. He became a citizen of Amsterdam in 1659. He painted landscapes with much poetic feeling, and was one of the first Dutch painters who made landscape painting a speciality. Notwithstanding his great abilities, he received but little encouragement in his time, and died in a poorhouse at Haarlem in March 1682.

SNYDERS (Frans). Flemish School : 1579-1657.
Frans Snyders, whom probably no artist has excelled in the art of fruit and animal painting, was born at Antwerp in 1579. He studied both under Peter Brueghel the younger and Hendrick van Balen, and was afterwards the intimate friend of Rubens. He entered the Guild of St. Luke in 1602 , and later travelled in Italy. From the painting of such subjects as fish, dead game, fruit, &c., he passed to the larger compositions, wild boar hunting with hounds, which he rendered with great vigour and vividness. He was a splendid colourist, and was broad in his handling. After his return from Italy, in 1609 , he established himself in Antwerp, where he died in 1657. He is represented at Paris, St. Petersburg, Antwerp, Brussels, Dresden, Munich, and other places.

TENIERS (David). Flemish School: i6io-i6ig.
David Teniers, second of that name, was born at Antwerp in 16 ro. He adopted the style of his father, who was also his master; but he was much influenced by Rubens and Adriaan Brouwer. He entered the Guild at Antwerp in 1632 . He was appointed Court Painter to Archduke Leopold William, Governor of the Netherlands, and his house soon became the rendezvous of the Flemish and Spanish nobility. His subjects were festivals, market scenes, taverns, guardrooms, &c. He gave lessons in painting to Don Juan of Austria. Teniers married twice, his first wife being the daughter of Velvet Brueghel. He died at Brussels in 1690 . Examples of his work are to be found in all important collections.

THIELEN (Jan Philip van). Flemish School: 16181667.

Thielen was born at Malines in 1618, was apprenticed to Theodore Rombouts at Antwerp in 1632, and was admitted as master in 1642 . He settled at Malines in 1660, and there died in 1667 or 1677 . His second master was Segers, and though Thielen was much weaker in drawing and colour and more delicate in execution, yet he painted in the style and taste of his great instructor. He excelled in the painting of flowers.

THULDEN or TULDEN (Theodore van). Flemish School: 1607-1676.
This artist was born at Herlogenbosch, and at an early age went to Antwerp, where he studied first under Abraham Blyenberch, and later under Rubens. He assisted Rubens in many of his great works, especially those done for Marie de' Medici in the Luxembourg Palace. He visited Paris in 1633, and among many works executed there, the best is the altar-piece St. Barbara. He returned to Flanders and settled at Antwerp, where he married Van Balen's daughter. He treated historical subjects, village scenes, &c., and collaborated with Pieter Neefs, Steenwyck, Wildens, and Moneper.

WEyDEN（Roger or Rogier van der）．Flemish School ： 1400－1464．
Rogier van der Weyden，called Rougelet de la Pas－ tine，was born at Tournay about 1400．In 1426 he was apprenticed to a Robert Campin to learn paint－ ing，and in 1432 entered the Painters＇Guild at Tournay as a master．He received about this time an important commission from the Municipality of Brussels，namely，to paint four subjects illustrative of Justice in the Golden Chamber in the Hôtel de Ville．These works，which were much praised in their time，have perished．He travelled in Italy， and was patronised by Leonello d＇Este of Ferrara； and it is evident that he painted for many other noble Italian families．Van der Weyden was the founder of the school of Brabante，whose centre was Brussels．His style，though Flemish，is distinct from that of Jan Van Eyck．He seems to have been of an intensely religious nature，and painted with much pathetic feeling scenes from the history of Christ． He died in June 1464．Among those masters whose work is evidence of the widespread influence of Van der Weyden, may be mentioned Hans Memlinc, Dierick Bonts, Martin Schongauer, and others.

Philip Wouwerman was a native of Haarlem, and was baptised in that city in May i6ig. He gathered the rudiments of art from his father, and studied afterwards under Jan Wynants. In I 540 he became member of the Painters' Guild at Haarlem, and was elected Dean of Guild in I645. It is supposed that he spent all his life in his native city, and there died in May 1668. He is distinguished by the grace with which he composed and painted hunting parties, cavaliers, and battles. He was a master of animal painting, and thoroughly understood the painting of motion. He excelled also in the treatment of landscape, which is always a prominent feature of his pictures．His works are very numerous，and are to be found in most galleries．

ZEGERS (Daniel). Flemish School: i590-166i.
Daniel Zegers, often wrongly styled Segers, was born at Antwerp in 1590. He was a scholar of Jan Brueghel. At the age of 24 he attached himself to an order of Jesuits, and was popularly known as the Fesuit of Antwerp. He embellished the works of Cornelis Schut and Rubens with flowers and fruit. He is said to have died in a Jesuit convent at Antwerp in 166I.
"His flowers, which are sometimes highly finished, and at others somewhat decoratively treated, combine admirable drawing, and great truth of nature in form and colour, with a tasteful arrangement. In painting red roses he employed colours which have remained unchanged, while the roses of every other flowerpainter have either turned violet or faded altogether." ZEGERS (Gerard). Flemish School: i591-165i.
Gerard, brother of Daniel Zegers, was born at Antwerp in 1591. He was first a scholar of Hendrick van Balen, and afterwards, iu Italy, placed himself under Abraham Janssens. At Rome also he became a disciple of Bartolomeo Manfredi. He went to Spain under the patronage of Cardinal Zapara, and entered the service of the Spanish King. He painted in the style of Caravaggio, and his subjects were usually street musicians, card-players, &c.
"His compositions are well balanced, his heads of elevated form, though seldom important, his figures elegant, actions graceful, his colouring always harmonious, and his treatment broad."- Kügler, Handbook, p. 294

BOURDON (Sebastien). 16ı6-1671.
This artist was born at Montpellier and was the son of a painter on glass, who gave him his first instruction in art. When seven years of age he was taken to Paris. and placed under Jean Barthélemy. He also studied for three years at Rome. In 1643 he painted The Crucifixion of St. Peter, which gained for him a great reputation. (This picture is now in the Louvre.) Being a Protestant, he went to Sweden in 1652 to avoid the troubles of the civil wars; and was there appointed by Christian his principal painter. He settled in Paris again in 1663. He was one of the twelve artists who founded, in 1648 , the old Academy of Painting and Sculpture, and was master of that Academy from 1655 until his death, which took place on May 8th, 167I. Bourdon painted historical subjects, landscapes, portraits, and battle and hunting scenes.
1974. St. Paul and St. Barnabas at Lystra. "Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people. Which, when the Apostles Barnabas and Paul heard of, they rent their clothes and ran among the people, crying out--" $\& c$. (Acts xiv.) Canvas: I ft. $6 \frac{1}{4} \mathrm{in}$. by I ft. $2 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{in}$.

CALLET (Antoine François). i74I-I823.
Callet was born at Paris in 174J. In 1764 he gained the Prix de Rome, and was made Academician in 1780. "He belonged to that school of French art of which Vien was the most distinguished representative, and which by rescuing it from the degeneracy of Boucher, prepared the way for the epoch of David." After exhibiting for forty years in the Academy, both historical subjects and portraits, he died at Paris in 1823.
1975. Portrait of Louis XVI., King of France. Standing by sala his throne in the formal dress of the Order of Sancti francesa Spiritus. Life-sized figure. This fine portrait, a repetition of another of the same author which exists at Valenciennes, was presented to the Count of Aranda, Ambassador for Spain at Paris in 1783, by Louis XVI. Isabel II. acquired it from the executrix of the Duke of Hijar. Canvas: 8 ft . I I in. by $3 \mathrm{ft} .6 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{in}$.

CHAMPAGNE (Philippe de). i602-1674.
Though a native of Brussels, Champagne must be classed with the French school. He studied under Bouillon and Fouquières, and went to Paris in his seventeenth year. There he placed himself under the direction of L'Allemand. He worked with Nicolas Poussin in the Luxembourg, in the service of Du Chesne, the royal painter; and made a great reputation for himself by the work which he executed for churches, &c., at Paris. "His pictures have a certain affinity to those of Nicolas Poussin, whose influence he felt, but they surpass them in brilliancy, truth, and technical skill." His conceptions, however, were less happy, and his compositions weaker than those of Poussin. Champagne excelled also as a portrait painter. He died at Paris in 1674.
1976. St. Anne going to teach the Virgin Mary. Background: rich architecture, with perspective interior of the temple annexed to the dwelling of Mary. ## COURTOIS (Jacoues). 1621-1676.

Jacques Courtois, commonly called Giacomo Cortese, was born at St. Hippolyte, in Franche-Compté, in 162I. He was the son of an obscure painter named Jean Courtois. At 15 years of age he went to Milan, and there entered the army ; but after serving three years he gave up the military life to follow painting. At Bologna he met Guido Reni and Albani. He was prompted to attempt the painting of battles by seeing The Battle of Constantine of Giulio Romano in the Vatican ; and it was in this branch of painting that he made his reputation. Unfortunately, however, while yet in his prime, Courtois lost public favour through a suspicion that he had poisoned his wife ; he was obliged to abandon society, and sought the protection of the Jesuits. Yet he painted with unrelaxed ardour until his death in 1676 .

FOSSE (Charles de la). 1636-1716.
Charles de la Fosse was born, and died, at Paris. His first master was François Chauveau, and later he studied under Charles Le Brun. While in Italy, where he went at 22 years of age, he attracted the attention of Colbert, through whom he obtained a pension from the king. This enabled him to spend two years at Rome and then at Venice, after which he returned to Paris an accomplished colourist. He was taken into the service of Louis XIV., and first painted in the Tuileries. His Adam and Eve, The Marriage of the Virgin, and other works soon gained for him a great name. He visited England on more than one occasion, and from 1690 he spent over two years in London, during which he decorated the mansion of the Duke of Montagu, afterwards the British Museum, in which he painted the ceilings. Though a good colourist, this artist was weak in drawing.

GELLÉE (Claude), called Le Lorrain. i600-1682.
Claude Gellée or Gillée, commonly called Claude de Lorrain and Le Lorrain, was born at Champagne, near Charmes, in 1600 . He was placed by his parents with a baker or cook, and afterwards went to Rome in search of employment. There he became servant to Agostine Tassi, a landscape painter, and once a pupil of Paul Bril. In 1617 he was acting as assistant to his master. About eight years later Claude revisited Lorrain and for a short time studied under Dernet. He again started for Rome in 1627 , where he met and contracted a warm friendship with the German Joachim Sandrart, who became his biographer. Gellée did some engraving between i630 and 1663. Many of his drawings are preserved in the various European collections, a large number being in the British Museum. As a painter Claude excelled chiefly in the treatment of aërial perspective. He was probably the most celebrated landscapist that France has produced. He died at Rome.

JOUVENET (Jean). r644-I717.
Jean, one of the fifteen children of Laurent Jouvenet, the younger, was born at Rouen in 1644. He was sent to Paris in I66I, where he was much influenced by Poussin, and painted his best works in that master's style. Le Brun employed him at Versailles for many years. He held in succession the various offices of the Academy, of which he was Rector in 1707. He died at Paris in 1717 . Jouvenet painted history, portraits, and customs. "Like Le Sueur, he was entirely home-bred; neither ever visited Italy, a circumstance much boasted by the French. Jouvenet, however, scarcely approached Le Sueur in dignity and character, though he must be considered, on the whole, a superior painter to Le Brun" (Wornum).

VERNET (Claude Joseph). 1714-1789.
Claude Joseph, son of Antoine Vernet, was born at Avignon in August r714. He received his first instruction from his father, and afterwards studied under Adrian Manglard. He spent nearly twenty years in Italy, painting chiefly the marine landscapes about Genoa and Naples. In 1752 he received an invitation from Louis XV. to come to Paris. In 1753 he became member of the French Academy of Arts, and received a commission from the Government to paint his well-known pictures of the French seaports.

VOUET (Simon). 1 590-i649.
Simon Vouet was born at Paris in 11590 . He received his first instruction from his father Laurent Vouet, an obscure painter. At 14 years of age he went to England as a portrait painter. In i6il he was taken to Constantinople by the French Ambassador, and there he distinguished himself by painting a portrait of the Sultan. He went to Rome in 16i3, and seems to have been influenced, first by Caravaggio, and afterwards by Guido Reni. He decorated the palace of the Doria family in 1620 , and on his return to Rome received commissions from Pope Urban VIII. Having been summoned to France in 1627 by Louis XIII., he was appointed principal painter to the king, and given apartments in the Louvre, and a liberal pension. It was no doubt due to the great number of commissions which he was called upon to perform that his work became mannered and monotonous. But he influenced the French art of his time tremendously, as seen in the works of almost all the great artists who flourished in France in the seventeenth century. He died at Paris in 1649.

WATTEAU (Antoine). 1684-172I.
Antoine was son of a tiler, and was born at Valenciennes in 1684. While a mere boy his father refused to support him any longer, and the lad journeyed to Paris. There he managed to exist on the profits of painting cheap pictures for dealers, but in the meantime was studying on his own account in his spare moments, acquiring in this way a great facility in drawing. In 170I-3 he was in the studio of Claude Gillot, from whom he acquired a taste for modern subjects. Having surpassed this master, he left him to assist Andran at the Luxembourg. Andran he also left soon and returned to Valenciennes, where he remained but a short time, and again came to Paris. This time he was encouraged by a famous collector, M. Crozat, who lent him drawings to copy, and in other ways assisted him. In 1717 he became a full member of the Academy. In 17 I 9 he visited England, and in the following year returned to Paris. He died at Nogent, near Vincennes, in July 1721. Watteau was the first painter in France who introduced poetry and grace into scenes of real and common life.

Salas de 2139. Scene from the Life of St. Dominic of Guzmán. The writings of the saint and those of the Albigense heretics are subjected to the proof of the fire at Fanjeaux. In the presence of two groups of people of various condition, in one of which is seen St. Dominic himself, a man throws into the bonfire the books that are the object of God's judgment. The volume written by the saint rises into the air, untouched by the flames, while the works of the Albigenses are consumed. Some parts of the background, and several accessories, are made realistic by means of gold. This panel and the eight which follow, used to decorate the Royal Cloister of the celebrated Convent of St. Thomas de Avila, where they were collected by the Commission of the Royal Academy of St. Ferdinand, in 1836. As to the author of this picture, Sr. Cruzada Villaamil points out the analogy betzveen its style and that of the great altar-piece of the Cathedral of Avila, an undoubted rwork of P. Berruguete and Santos Cruz. In these pictures also the intervention of a second less expert hand is evident. Panel: 5 ft. $2 \frac{1}{4}$ in. by 3 ft .

2144. Miracles of St. Thomas after his death. Various afflicted people visit the urn of the saint. A noble lady prays on her knees ; a sick woman, seated, offers her supplication; a blind man led by a little boy; and a young man, who enters surrounded by several people with disabled arms, &c. 2148. Arbitrary Representation of an Auto de Fé presided over by St. Dominic. On the right of the spectator in a high hall, under a canopy of gold brocade, are the saint-inquisitor and three judges on each side; lower, are three other official personages, seated as the first.

Standing on an elevated scaffold are two naked heretics tied to the place of torture; in the public square two other offenders are conducted to torture by mounted and foot soldiers. Below the scaffold many people watch the scene. Background of silver, with gold in many of the accessories. This fanel adorned the Sacristy of the Convent of St. Thomas of Avila, where it had a comfanion. It somehozu became the property of Sr. Don Miguel Puche y Bautista, by whose will it passed, through successive transmissions, into the fossession of the Government of Spain. Panel: 5 ft . by 3 ft .

GALLEGOS (Fernando) (?). Born at Salamanca in the second half of the fifteenth century. and died about the middle of the sixteenth. Biographical data of this artist are rare, and almost all those given by Cean erroneous. His style is entirely Flemish, and very similar to that of $T$. Bout.
2155. The Visitation. Mary and Elizabeth embrace in the salas de entrance of the house of Zacharias. Behind the alfonso Virgin is St. Joseph leaning on his staff, and two xil. women. Background: landscape with town in the distance. This panel and its companions, the five which follow, proceed from the Convent of the Carthusian Order of Mirafores. We do not know whether Bosarte included them among those which he asserted to have been the property of King Fuan II. Although we attribute them to Gallegos in doubt ful form, the analogies which their styic offers, with authenticated works by that fainter cxisting at Zamora and Salamanca, argue a solid foundation for our attribution. These pictures should not be confused with the tanels on the life of 'y ohn

ANONYMOUS PICTURES OF THE SPANISH SCHOOLS

SCHOOL OF CASTILE, XVTH CENTURY

2180. The Adoration of the Kings. Figures life-size. See note to No. 2178. Transferred from wood to canvas: 6 ft. $11 \frac{1}{2}$ in. by 3 ft. $6 \frac{1}{2} \mathrm{in}$.
2181. The Presentation of the Infant Jesus in the Temple. Figures life-size. See note to No. 2178. Transferred from zwood to canvas: 6 ft. 7 in by 3 ft .3 in .
2184. The Catholic Kings in prayer before the Virgin and Child. Jesus, in the arms of his mother seated in an alabaster throne, receives the adoration of the kings and of the following personages: Prince Don Juan, a child of some 13 years, who kneels beside his father; the Infanta Doña Juana, a girl of 12 years, beside her mother; the Inquisitor-General Friar Thomas of Torquemada behind the king; and St. Peter Martyr of Verona behind the queen. The figures of St. Thomas of Aquinas and St. Dominic of Guzmán complete the group. Background: polygonal chapel with windows at the sides of the Virgin's throne. This picture has the peculiarity of having had twice painted in it the head of Prince Don Fuan; in the first place as it is seen to-day, and two years afterwards as it appeared when Sr. Valentin Carderera copied the figure for his Iconografia Española. A restoration of late years has caused the superimposed head to disappear, revealing the first one, which differs in having a bonnet. This picture decorated the Chapel of the Royal Apartment in the Convent of St. Thomas of Avila, and was painted for the famous Inquisitor Torquemada about the year 1491. Panel: 4 ft. by $3 \mathrm{ft} .7 \frac{1}{2}$ in.

SALAS DE ALFONSO XII.

2184\%.St. Ursula with the eleven thousand Virgins: represented seated, according to her legend, with accompaniment of the Pope, the bishops and cardinals, who by divine calling followed her in her journey to Rome. Companion to No. 2184a. This picture suggests the style of Fernando Gallegos, but there is not sufficient grounds for classifying it with the old school of Castile. Panel: $4 \mathrm{ft} .2 \frac{1}{4}$ in. by $2 \mathrm{ft} .6 \frac{1}{4} \mathrm{in}$.

2184c. The Temptations of St. Anthony. Various hideous monsters bear the saint through the air and torment him; and the Saviour appears to him in an aureola of gold. This picture is a poor imitation of the fantasies of Pieter Brueghel the elder, Bosch and Peeter Huys. It must therefore, though certainly a companion of the freceding trwo panels, have been fainted in the sixteenth century. Panel: 3 ft. 7 in. by 2 ft. 6 in.

EYCK (Jan van). See biographical notice, page 176.
2188. The Triumph of the Church over the Synagogue. The sala scene takes place in a fantastic palace or temple of española very elegant architecture, disposed in three different planes, the highest of which is occupied by the Almighty, with the mystic Lamb at his feet, seated in his throne, to which the principal tower of the edifice serves as a back. On the right of the Father is Mary; on the left St. John the Evangelist. In the middle plane, angels celebrate with music and song the glories of the Law of Christ; and the Triumph is figured in the lower plane, in which is seen the disruption of the Synagogue and the exaltation of the Christian Church. Sr. Don Pedro Madraza has demonstrated in his Museo Español de Antigïedades that this precious panel, the object of much controversy among learned weriters on the critical history of Flemish painting, was executed by Fan Van Eyck, after that artist's journey to Spain in the time of King $\mathcal{F}$ uan II.; and presented by the son of $\mathcal{F}$ uan, Henry IV., to the Monastery del Parral of Segovia, on its foundation about the year 1454. Michiels affirms that it is a work of the brothers Van Eyck; Cavalcaselle believes it to be the work of Fan Van Eyck alone; and Passavant considered it a production of Hubert Van Eyck. Mündler and Wagen held the opinion that it zwas by neither of the Eycks; and Bode and Bredius shared the belief that it was a reproduction of a lost original, belonging to the sixteenth century. It alzways remained in the Parral, from whose sacristy it was taken by the Commissioner of the Royal Academy of St. Ferdinand in I836. Panel: 5 ft . $10 \frac{1}{2}$ in. by 4 ft .3 in .

KESSEL (Jan van), the younger. See biographical notice, page 185.

WEYDEN (Rogier van der). See biographical notice, page 236.
2189. The Crucifixion. Centre of a triptych, to which the salas de following four pictures belong. Jesus crucified, with alfonso Mary and St. John at the sides of the cross, occupies XiI. the centre, under a great arch which forms the entrance to a spacious temple. The splendid oratorio wohich this and the four following panels formed, was taken from the Convent of the

SALAS DE ALFONSO XII．

Angels of Madrid in 1836，by the Commission of the Royal Academy of St．Ferdinand deputed to form the Museo de la Trinidad．Accord－ ing to $M$ ．de Laborde，this triptych was ordered to be painted by Fean Robert，Abbé of Saint Aubert de Cambrai．There does not seem to be any doubt concerning the authenticity of this picture as the work of the most impassioned and energetic Flemish painter of the fifteenth century． The learned Waagen recognizes it（mit der grössten Bestimmtheit） as a production of Rogier van der Weyden．The reverses of the wings alone offer doubts as to authorship．Pantel： 6 ft .4 in ．by 5 ft .7 in ．
2190．The Punishment of the Original Sin．Right wing of triptych．Adam and Eve are driven from the Garden of Eden，at the gate of which appears the angel，who lifts his sword against the delinquents：all within a Gothic arch with little figures on a background of gold， in which are distinguished the various scenes of the Creation．See note to No．2189．Panel： 6 ft .4 in ．by $2 \mathrm{ft} .55^{\text {量 in }}$ ．
2193．The Coin of Cæsar．Reverse of the preceding panel．In chiaro－ oscuro．See note to No．2189．Panel： 6 ft． 4 in ．by $2 \mathrm{ft} .5 \frac{3}{\mathrm{I}} \mathrm{in}$ ．
