THE UNION-IT MUST BE PRESERVED.

TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 12, 1885.

Another Panic Senator Fallen! It is with feelings of extreme gratification, that we an rounce the election of CHARLES GAYARRE, an unwaversug and unflinching friend to the present administration to the senate of the United States, in the room of George party throughout the Union rejoice with us, for our triumph is that of truth and reason over falsehood and deception. To public men in our state the result of this e ection conveys a striking example. Deceit and falsehood may for a time delude the people, but ultimately truth must prevail. I. July last, our opponents rejoiced at the successful manner in which they had duped the people, little reflecting that the base means they had resorted to for the purpose, would rooner or later become known, and would cover them with shame and confusion. THE DAY HAS ARRIVED, and at an important contest, when they calculated upon a sure victory-they have been foiled; and what must render this circumstance still more galling, one of the very men whom they had defeated before the people by lies and calumnics, has succe ded to a higher and more responsible station.

Every inducement was held out to our friends to support one of the opposition candidates. The supporters of Mr-Waggaman urged with great warmth, that he had voted for e'le gold bill, and for the nomination of Mr. Stevenson, while those of Mr. Brownson contended that he was both motherate and temperate in his apposition to the president and would not act the part of a partizan. But it would not do-our representatives would have no MALF-WAY MEN: they wanted a senator who would yield a thorough support to the measures of the administration, and in selecting Mr. Gayarre they hit goon the very man. That gentleman, to talents of a high order, unites a rare ingredient in the characte s of statesmen at this day, political honesty. He knows the interests of the state, and will be found ever advocating them anainst any coalition that may be formed in the body to which he has been elevated.

Toschator Porter, who has acted so conspicuous a par among the panic-orators, the election of Mr. Gayarre will come as a death-knell. His doom is sealed. The people's eves are open, and so sure as his claims come again before the legislature, so sure will they be rejected. Let him therefore learn discretion, and not make himself more odious than he is at present to the republican party throughout the state. His predictions of distress and ruin are fa a fied by the state of the country, and he now stands before his fel low-cutzens, as one who represents in the senate chamber his own sentiments, and not those of the people of Louisi

LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE. SENATE-Monday, Jan. 12th.

Mr. Bossier presented a resolution, authorizing the board of public works to examine into the nature and extent of as possible.

The president of the senate presented a long memorial numerously signed, from the citizens of Lalayette and its suburbs, against a m morial forwarded by others last week, which entreated are peal of the charter incorporating those districts. The present memorial states that those who signed the former are chiefly conresidents, or but transient inhabitants; and are not adequately informed, nor suffi-ciently informed in the local concerns of Lafayets. It was referred to a special committee, consisting of Mesers.

Mr. Becsier presented a resolution relative to providing arms for the Jackson Guards of Louisiana.
Mr. Saunders introduced a resolution, to authorize the committee on expenses to have the senate chamber lighted with any

Mr. Moore presented another, proposing a joint committee of both chambers, to inquire into the state of the penitentiary at Baton Rouge; and to report what improve

Mr. Saunders presented a report from the committee of education, to whom had been referred that part of the government of a message soluting to requesting congress, for an appropriation of land, to subserve the purposes of public education in this state; and an accompanying resolution (which was read and passed) instructing the senators and representatives in congress from this state, to request a grant of public lands.

The resolution to repeal the act establishing public weighers of cotton, having been read, Mr. Moore moved that it be adopted. Mr. Hoa acked what reasons had been member from St. Helena to support the resolution. He had heard nene addesed.

Mr. Moore briefly neticed the act to be repealed in its advocacy and introduction; and the debate on it during the last squared the legislature: when be thought arguments against the continuance of public weighers had been sufficiently supported by authentic facts—preving that imposition on inhoposition had been repeated to an enormouse extent. The nature of the employment of cotton weigherefront their mode of being paid, and the haste with which they must perform their duties, is of itself objectionable, and leads to many errors. And if they are willing to truet them with the proceeds of their crep, they are equally may, therefore, be implicitly relied on. The letter is from wiffing to trust them with the weighing of it. If the cetton planters find cause of complaints, they can dismise their factors; but new they have no mede of radress, so any complaint will be attributed to the ewern weighers—whem they cannot remove but by abelishing the effice altegether. He has heard all the cetton planters complained their loss of cotton; and knews that they are tantalized by the weighers. One young man had said to himself, that should be repeal the law, it would be a benefit to him of $16,000; for he could make so much more afterwards by his interest with the factors. Merchants alone should be responsible to the planters; yet they are not now responsible. The grattemen from New Orleans may indeed feel disposed to sheld the merchants from responsibility; and be more careful of their interests, than of the interests of the planters.

Mr. Hoa made a very animated reply, denying that private views ever controlled his conduct regarding the public interests; he never advocates any measure which he thinks. willing to trust them with the weighing of it. If the cetton Paris, under date of 15th November.

Yet such a difference is comman an Jaxtravarant. We consider the weighers incapable of doing jus-tice; and has heard one of them even assort that should office by sholished, he could get the merchants to re-

THE DRAMA.

MR. H. G. PEARSON, Is a sterling actor, he pessesses not enly the natural qualifications of person, but a strong well educated mind, which deep study has formed into a decided mould, from tain him; and would receive 10 cents instead of what the law allows him. He quated from a speech by Mr. Depresent upon his profession without daily weighing the during ast session, to prove the loss sustained by a friend importance of a career which places him before the public.

> "Which bids all welcome." Those lessons which form the mind—exalt the character, and gives vigor to the understanding. To point out these characters in which he excels, would be to lengthen this number beyond our usual limits. His Richard is still remembered—of late we have seen him in other and different characters—all of which elicit that admiration and applause they deservedly merit. When stars come among us Pearson shines as brilliant, and in many instances the refraction of sight is still brighter, and the applause equally divided. The path—the gierious path to honor and fame is before him, in the dim perspective like the visions in Shakspearo's dream, we see him a "Richard—Lear—Shyleck—Macboth—Hamlet, and as the noble Roman recalling the proudest days of Cooper, all this is before him, let not proud ambition overstep the mark— Those lessons which form the mind-exalt the character

"Ambitton is an idel, on whose wings "Great minds are carried only to extreme

"To be sublimely great or nothing."

"To be sublimely great or nothing."

But go on like the relking snew-ball gathering strength at every turn, correcting in your progress the little errors hab t forms until you fulfil our prognostification.

Our ideas of stars are very erroneous and judgments too eften warped by "seant-couriers" in the shape of newspaper puts, who blow forth qualities as inflated as a balloon, or an airy bubble—prick it and it will burst let us analyze these stars as they come smanng us: what are 'hey, many are but the stack actors and actresses of some other company who were out their welcome at home and mugrate to pany who went out their welcome at home and migrate t other towns and cities. Upon this subject one word to ou morit. Pearson's Richard in Now York or Philade'phia, would establish him at once as a first rate actor let him play Hamlet, Lear, and Macbeth, and he will have few competitors not even in a Forrest, whose line of acting is already marked out, and they will never clash, but move along in their own separate spheres. Pearson is the Herculos of our theatre, he is called upon frequently to give his popularity to a piece which otherwise would be d—d. He adds a rich tint to a dingy shadow like the rays of the sun on a dark and sombre shade. In this hasty penn'd article we have expressed our opinions of Mr. P.—if overdrawn, let our fault be attributed to admiration of the gentleman and actor. The little errors to be corrected are habits which eustom makes a part of our nature. Certain modulations of voice—a rasping down a harshness—softening a husky invoice—a rasping down a harshness—softening a husky in-tonation—smoothing the deep guttural, and correcting a habit of lengthening words or rather sounding them, a habit of shaking the had—as implying. I understand, a look—a glance of his eye would be much better than lais Lord Burleigh's shake, or nod of the head, which meens nothing. In some characters he rants too much, Pearson is alway, better when he avoids this—his ranting, however, when re quired by the author, is good, and is always applauded by the nucleose. I have no space or time to point out the characters in which these latter errors are most conspicuous but will take another opportunity.
