TRENTON

THE historic city of Trenton traces its existence back to the year 1680 at which time a mill was built at the mouth of the Assanpink Creek. The place was then known as "The Falls" and held that title until 1714 when the interests of the original founder, Mahlon Stacy, were transferred to Colonel William Trent, and thus was derived the name Trent-town, later shortened to the present Trenton. Trenton has been a city since 1792, when it was granted a charter by the State legislature. It became capital of the State in 1790. The population in 1810 was approximately 3,000, which has increased steadily until now her inhabitants number 80,000 persons.

It covers an area of nine square miles of which one hundred and fifty acres are devoted to parks. The assessed valuation of the city is forty millions and the public debt two million dollars. There are forty miles of electric railroad; one hundred miles of streets, thirty miles of which are paved.

Trenton is a strictly American city, modern and up-to-date in every respect, and her streets which in Washington's time resounded to the tramp of the contending armies now tell with unmistakable voice the story of the armies of industry.

Trenton is splendidly equipped for the education of her young. Thirty public schools cater to the needs of over nine thousand pupils.

On account of her adjacency to the great cities of the Atlantic Seaboard, Trenton offers unusual advantages for the shipment of manufactured goods. Her means of communication by rail and water are unsurpassed. Her citizens cordially extend the hand of welcome to all comers.
