VOTING PRACTICES IN THE UNITED NATIONS

A. What the report is and is not:

This report provides the "comparison of the overall voting practices in the principal bodies of the United Nations" requested by the Congress. From these comparisons there can be inferred the "degree of support by the government of such country during the preceding twelve month period for the foreign policy of the United States." Naturally, the data presented here refer only to the U.N. context and do not take account of support for U.S. policy in other contexts. The report describes all the plenary votes cast at the regular session of the Thirty-Eighth General Assembly (1983), and also the voting records of those nations who were members of the U.N. Security Council during 1983.

During the 1983 General Assembly, the 158 member states discussed and decided a dazzling array of issues. Many of these issues were decided by consensus with no vote recorded, but many were settled by vote. In some cases, votes were cast not only on final resolutions but on separate paragraphs as well. The resolutions dealt with an extremely broad range of subjects: the Soviet invasion and continuing occupation of Afghanistan; economic development; arms control; outer space; the Indian Ocean "Zone of Peace"; human rights in three Latin American countries; apartheid; the Arab-Israeli conflict; and others. By the end of the General Assembly, of necessity, every member had expressed itself on a very broad range of very difficult questions.

Because a General Assembly acts on so many diverse issues, the voting record of a U.N. member during a General Assembly tells us a good deal about a country's orientation in world arenas: where it stands, with whom it stands (at least in a U.N. context), and for what purposes.

In examining the voting record of U.N. member states, it should be borne in mind that relations in the United Nations are only one dimension of our relations with other countries and often are not the most important aspect of these relations. Economic, strategic, and moral factors may be and often are more important to our interests and to U.S. policy and policymakers than a country's behavior inside the United Nations. However, at the same time, that country's relations inside the U.N. are not trivial. If the decisions and policies of the key bodies of the United Nations matter, then the votes of member nations also matter.

B. Why U.N. votes matter:

1. Votes determine the policy of U.N. bodies

The United Nations was conceived as a kind of global parliament, organized and conducted on the same basis as legislative bodies in democratic countries. As in a legislature the General Assembly and Security Council consist of representatives who meet, adopt agendas, discuss and debate issues and eventually deal with them either by consensus or by vote. As in most democratic legislatures, votes are distributed on the basis of one country, one vote. When votes are taken, the majority decides. Votes cast in the United Nations determine the decisions that are the principal product of the United Nations.

Votes in the General Assembly and the Security Council provide mandates and guidance to the Secretary General and the Secretariat, and the diverse worldwide operations of its subgroups. U.N. decisions allocate funds, call conferences, authorize programs.

Since the UN System has a combined budget of over 4 billion dollars and employs over 50,000 persons, decisions concerning the use of these worldwide resources are significant indeed.

2. Votes focus world attention

As in other bodies organized on democratic principles, the agendas of U.N. bodies are set by their members. And the agendas of the principal U.N. bodies have a unique influence on the definition and perception of global problems.

To an extent often not appreciated in the United States, discussions, debates and votes in the United Nations are followed by the world press. U.N. affairs are covered extensively in the press of many less developed nations, and are closely followed by the media of most European countries. Subjects discussed in major U.N. fora come to be widely regarded as important. Because of their ability to focus attention on some subjects and ignore others, the agendas of major U.N. organizations influence the definition of what is and is not important in the world; what is a problem, what is a problem worthy of "world" attention.

This is the reason efforts to frame the U.N. agenda are made by those who seek to manipulate world opinion. Cuba has worked hard to have Puerto Rico inscribed on the agenda of successive General Assemblies as a problem of "decolonization," in spite of the fact that the people of Puerto Rico enjoy full self determination. In so doing Cuba has sought not only to embarrass the U.S., but to create a problem where none exists, simply by defining a relationship as a problem. For the reverse reasons, the Soviet Union and her associated states try to keep off the agenda subjects such as repression in Poland, the Libyan invasion of Chad, the downing of the Korean airliner, etc.

Manipulation of U.N. agendas achieves the desired results. When year after year Security Council resolutions focus on Israeli "practices" as violations of the Fourth Geneva Convention and ignore greater violations by other countries, there is a powerful tendency for many to come slowly to believe that Israel is especially guilty of gross human rights abuses. Conversely, the continuing focus of U.N. bodies on the Palestinian refugee question has kept it higher on the agenda of world politics than the plight of other, more numerous refugee populations, and has won it especially generous financial support.

If the only human rights abuses ever noted by the United Nations take place in Israel, or in Latin American nations fighting Communist insurgency, the impression spreads that these countries are uniquely guilty of gross abuse and lawless treatment of their citizens. Conversely, if African, Arab, Asian, Soviet bloc governments escape attention or censure for human rights abuses, the impression is cumulatively created that they are both powerful enough to silence critics and not so bad in any case.

3. Votes define "world opinion" on major issues

The decisions of the United Nations are widely interpreted as reflecting "world opinion." For this reason they are endowed with substantial moral and intellectual force. The cumulative impact of decisions of U.N. bodies influence opinions all over the world about what is legitimate, what is acceptable, who is lawless and who is repressive, what and who are successful and not successful, who are and are not capable of protecting themselves and their friends in the world body. The commitments and policies of the U.N. itself, the settlement of disputes, and the cumulative impact of U.N. decisions affect perceptions of power, effectiveness, and legitimacy. Examples abound.

Each year large majorities of the General Assembly put on record their disapproval of the occupation of Afghanistan and Kampuchea and request the withdrawal of all foreign forces from these countries. Even though the Afghanistan and Kampuchea resolutions do not name the occupying powers, their meaning is clear and is understood by everyone. The large votes for these resolutions make clear that the majority of member states understand and disapprove what has happened and is happening in those two states, and that Soviet influence in the U.N., though indubitably great, is not large enough to prevent the expression of disapproval.

There are various ways U.N. bodies can damage a country's reputation. South Africa has been damaged by being subjected to continuous denunciation and longstanding exclusion from U.N. bodies. And the determined effort to make Israel a pariah state reflects her adversaries' conviction that Israel could be similarly damaged. One technique is to secure passage by the Security Council of resolutions that make demands in the knowledge that they will be ignored. Refusal to respect a Security Council resolution leaves a country open to the charge that it is an "international outlaw," "not a peaceloving nation" and, therefore, eligible for further sanctions. Thus, Israel, having been requested in 1982 by Security Council action to withdraw all its troops from Lebanon, is "guilty" of noncompliance, while Syria is "not guilty" because there were never enough votes in the Security Council to demand Syria's withdrawal. The fact of noncompliance becomes yet another ground for censuring Israel in the U.N., regardless of the fact that Israel agreed to withdrawal of its troops from Lebanon simultaneously with those of Syria, and actually began a withdrawal which Syria refused even to discuss.

Omission from the agenda can also influence world opinion. When the Soviet Union is able to protect itself against being criticized by name -- no matter how flagrant its violations of the U.N. Charter -- it establishes itself as skillful, effective, and influential, as a power to be reckoned with in what is regularly called the international community. When its client states and allies are able to escape criticism -- no matter how flagrantly they violate the United Nations Charter -- the Soviets are judged influential, useful friends. Soviet success and influence in the United Nations becomes then an additional incentive to be sensitive to Soviet views and to associate with the Soviet bloc. Conversely, if, when the United States and its friends are subjected to harsh and often unfair attack, the U.S. appears to be devoid of influence, association with it becomes undesirable if not dangerous. U.N. votes thus affect both the image and the reality of power in the U.N. system and beyond.

More is at stake than a country's reputation or image, though these matter in international politics. U.N. votes help to define the limits of the permissible. If, after shooting down the Korean airliner, the Soviet Union had not been forced for the first time since the invasion of Afghanistan to veto a resolution (if nine of the fifteen members of the Security Council do not vote for a resolution, it fails and no veto is required to prevent its passage) then the impression of worldwide revulsion against attacking a civilian airliner would have been weaker. Or if, in spite of accumulating evidence on the use of deadly "yellow rain" chemicals against Hmong tribesmen, Khmer people, and others, the U.N. had not received the mandate needed to continue its investigation of the use of chemical weapons in Southeast Asia, the impression would have been created that use of chemical weapons is not taken seriously.

4. U.N. Votes affect U.S. foreign policy

Actions by United Nations bodies, especially by the Security Council, have greater consequences for U.S. foreign policy and the world than often is realized. At the time of writing (February, 1984), the situation in Lebanon is rapidly deteriorating. President Amin Gemayel's government is under progressively serious attack from Syrian-supported forces, U.S. Marines are departing Beirut, and the possible enhancement of the U.N. role in Lebanon is once again under discussion. Had there been a U.N. decision to deploy a substantial observer group in Beirut earlier, before the government of Lebanon had been so weakened, it might have discouraged some of the fighting and helped lay the groundwork for a UN peacekeeping force to replace the MNF. The failure to deploy observers thus may have had important effects on the evolution of events in Lebanon, the viability of its government, the security of Israel, the role of the Syrians (and Soviets) in the region, and the options available to the United States. The Security Council's pending decision on a proposal to deploy U.N. troops in Beirut could also have important repercussions for U.S. policy. And Lebanon is by no means an isolated case.

Nicaragua works hard to move the discussion of Central American problems from the regional level into the U.N. where it can profit from the support of the Soviet bloc and its friends. Nicaragua's initiatives have important implications for the Contadora process, which in turn is important to U.S. policy and prospects in Central America.

The influence of U.N. decisions in the context and conduct of U.S. foreign policy may be incremental, rather than sudden or dramatic, but its cumulative importance should not be underestimated.

C. What U.N. votes tell us:

Votes in the United Nations, as in other political systems, are determined not only by cool consideration of the facts and values involved in a particular issue, though these may figure in the final decision. Votes are also a consequence of group identifications and loyalties, and the personal, moral, and financial incentives perceived to be at stake.

There is much votes cannot tell us. The votes of a Congressman do not necessarily tell us where and how he stands within his party or within the Congress, what he cares most deeply about, his relation with his peers, or about the views of his constituency, or his legislative assistant. A vote does not even tell us to which party a Congressman belongs. A Congressman may argue that his votes do not accurately reflect his true values and preferences but instead result from election year pressures of his constituency, his party, the financial pressures on him, and the issues he was forced to vote on. But cumulatively a Congressman's votes tell us in a general way about where he stands on various kinds of issues, what he stands for, and whom he stands with.

Similarly in the United Nations, a country's votes do not tell us everything we need to know because they are not the only way of acting in the U.N., and because their meaning is sometimes indeterminate. Votes are not the only means by which countries express their support and opposition inside the United Nations. Speeches, lobbying inside closed group caucuses and in the corridors, making "threats and promises" (as an African delegate put it) have their effect though they show up on no tally. A number of countries work behind the scenes to aid the U.S. in modifying offensive resolutions. Moreover, the meaning of a single vote, when cast, is not self-evident. A cumulative voting record, however, tells us what a government judged to be in its best interest in the U.N. context. When an African government votes with the majority of African States, or with the majority of the non-aligned group, for a resolution that is unfairly critical of the United States for violating the South African arms embargo, that African state is not necessarily expressing hostility to the U.S.; it may simply believe there will be more unpleasant (personal or official) consequences from voting no than from voting yes.

1. The determinants of voting

Over time, a country's votes on important issues reflect its choices among values and priorities. Many factors influence how a nation votes inside the United Nations, just as many factors influence how a Congressman votes. Among the most important of these are:

- (1) A country's form of government and basic political values. This factor is most important at the extremes. Warsaw Pact Communist states almost always vote together; democratic countries often vote together.
- (2) Its geographical location. Geography -- as seen in groups such as the Organization of African Unity or the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- are an important influence in the U.N. voting.
- (3) Its level of economic development. On a range of issues involved in the "North-South" dialogue, less developed countries tend to vote together, as do the industrialized countries.

(4) Its bilateral relations. Bilateral relations, especially economic, military, historic relations may be important determinants of voting inside the U.N..

(5) Its group memberships inside the United Nations. Is it a member of the OAU, the Group of 77 or the Non-Aligned Movement?

(6) The character of the groups of which it is a member. Is the group cohesive and disciplined, like the Soviet bloc, or a loose, shifting coalition, such as the Non-Aligned Movement?

(7) The balance of power inside the United Nations sometimes is a factor. If the outcome of a vote appears a foregone conclusion, then many governments seek to join the majority.

(8) The groups with which a country is associated outside the United Nations may also be an influential determinant of its behavior inside the U.N.. Countries closely allied with the Soviet Union outside the U.N. form the most cohesive bloc within the U.N.. Membership in the British Commonwealth, which has no formal existence in the U.N., nevertheless on occasion has been an important determinant of voting.

(9) Estimates concerning whether vital bilateral relations outside the United Nations will be affected by a vote in the U.N.. An important reason for the decline in U.S. influence in the U.N. was the perception that we did not care much about what went on there.

(10) The facts and values involved in a particular issue.

This list of determinants of voting behavior, while not exhaustive, illustrates the range of influences which contribute to a voting decision on a particular issue. With regard to any particular vote, the factors influencing a country's vote may push the country in conflicting directions. Except in the case of the Soviet bloc, therefore, it is difficult to predict with certainty how a country will vote in a particular instance.

Although it is rarely possible to predict the relative influences of the various factors in any given vote, it is possible to formulate some generalizations.

2. The Blocs

In many ways the United Nations resembles a democratic legislature. As in a legislature where members combine in parties or factions, nations have banded together into blocs whose combined strength is many times that of the individual members. Many of the blocs work together only in the U.N., where they function much as parties do in a legislature. The blocs offer influence, security and fellowship. They caucus, discuss, adopt common positions. Unless there are countervailing influences, the blocs control the agenda, the debate, and the decisions.

The blocs are geographical, ethnic, political and cultural in character. There is the Organization of African Unity, which unites all African nations except South Africa. There is the Latin American Group, in which are gathered the nations of Latin America and the Caribbean; the Group of 77, or the G-77, which consists of some 120 developing countries who gather together to try to promote economic development. The Islamic Conference links together all Moslem nations, Arab and non-Arab.

In some cases, relationships that exist among countries outside the United Nations determine their behavior inside the U.N.. The most striking example is how countries linked to the Soviet Union vote in the U.N. exactly as the Soviet Union votes. The relationships between the Soviet Union and Ukraine, Poland, Afghanistan are exactly the same in the Security Council or General Assembly as in the world. The Soviet Union decides.

Other groups that exist outside the U.N. function as blocs inside the organization. The European Community and ASEAN are examples, though neither is nearly so tightly disciplined and monolithic as the Soviet bloc. The Commonwealth, which links together in loose association the former members of the British empire, does not normally play a role in U.N. affairs. However, these ties are occasionally mobilized as in the Falklands conflict, when the U.K. herself was embroiled in a war with a non-Commonwealth member. Similarly, the French government maintains especially close ties to former French colonies. In several of these cases, bilateral economic assistance reinforces bonds of loyalty.

Overarching and overlapping all these groups is the most important bloc of all: the Non-Aligned Movement. Founded twenty years ago on the initiative of Tito, Nehru and Nasser at a time when the United Nations agenda tended to be dominated by East-West rivalries, this has become the most powerful bloc in the United Nations. The Non-Aligned group has grown to include some 100 of the 158 nations in the United Nations. It contains all of the African and Arab, most of the Asian and some of the Latin American states. Support from the Non-Aligned Movement guarantees the success of any resolution in the General Assembly or in any of the committees or organizations of the United Nations that operate on the principle of one country, one vote. The opposition of a united Non-Aligned Movement guarantees defeat, even inside the Security Council, where the Non-Aligned constitute a caucus of eight in a body of fifteen.

The power of the blocs depends, of course, on their cohesion as well as on their size; they are not equally cohesive. The Latin American group suffers from the same tendency toward schism that characterizes the politics of most Latin American nations. It is almost never able to agree on a common position, usually because Cuba, Guyana and Nicaragua (often joined by Mexico) block consensus. The Organization of African Unity, on the other hand, operates with notable sophistication and discipline and is usually able to reach and maintain common positions. So does the European Community. On the other hand, deep divisions inside the Arab world prevent the Islamic Conference States from acting together on most issues except those involving Israel.

The Non-Aligned, with its approximately 100 members, is heterogeneous and cannot agree on many issues. But despite this heterogeneity, it is sufficiently cohesive to have influence in all arenas in the United Nations.

3. Some consequences of bloc politics

As already noted, the blocs have overlapping memberships, and most U.N. members belong to more than one bloc. The fact that a number of Marxist-Leninist states are simultaneously members of the Soviet bloc and one or two other blocs as well is a source of great strength for the Soviet Union because it gives Soviet bloc representatives access to the internal procedures of other blocs. As Chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement from 1979 to 1983, Cuba was able to radicalize the NAM further and sometimes to make it serve as an instrument of Soviet foreign policy. Meanwhile, as a member of the Latin American group, Cuba was able to bloc Latin consensus on candidate slates thus forcing the selection of Latin America's representatives in many UN bodies into the General Assembly where moderates' chances of success would be lessened. Overlapping memberships of the Soviet bloc with the Arab, African, Non-Aligned group and G-77 in many cases produce the famous "automatic majority" of Third World and Soviet bloc nations. The United States, on the contrary, is a member of no group at the United Nations, though we work closely with many nations. This fact makes us rather like a country without a party in the midst of a body with a highly developed party system.

There are important rewards for belonging to one of the blocs and following its decisions. There are the pleasures of group solidarity and the displeasures of peer pressure and disapproval. There are also more concrete rewards. Blocs function as mutual protection associations and membership guarantees allies. Alliances among the blocs often guarantee each member enough allies to protect each against censure.

The United Nations response to the Libyan invasion of Chad offers an opportunity to observe how the system works. As the Libyans moved in force into Chad, that country appealed to the Security Council for help. Chad is a member of the Organization of African Unity, the Non-Aligned Movement, and, as a former French colony, enjoys a special relationship with francophone Africa and with France. Libya, however, is also a member of the OAU, the NAM, and, in addition, of the Arab group, the Islamic Conference and usually votes with the Soviet bloc. By virtue of these memberships, Libya was able to divide and immobilize the African group and the NAM. Chad finally could count for help only on the francophone African members of the Security Council -- Togo and Zaire -- and on those western countries -- the U.S., the U.K., the Netherlands and France -- committed to trying to discourage the use of force in international disputes. The result has been that to this day the small, poor African nation which has been the object of invasion and occupation, has been unable to obtain relief from the Security Council.

For most countries, most of the time, bloc membership is probably the most important single determinant of their votes. But, except in the case of the Soviet bloc, it is not automatic. And although the blocs inside the United Nations importantly influence behavior inside the U.N., they rarely are more important than relations outside the U.N. --- provided countries believe that what happens inside the U.N. will have significant consequences for their relations outside.

D. What the votes tell us about the U.N. today:

The record in both the Security Council and the General Assembly establishes that the diverse members of those bodies are more often able to reach consensus on issues than is usually believed to be the case. Ten of twenty Security Council resolutions and 183 of 331 General Assembly actions were adopted without a negative vote. Though behind-the-scenes negotiations often were tense and prolonged, they usually resulted in consensus. The price of consensus, however, often was a rather anodyne resolution which did not contribute materially to the solution of the problem in question.

The record also shows that when no consensus existed, outcomes more often were favorable to Soviet positions than to Western views. This is partly because the political culture of the U.N. often filters the world through quasi-Marxist categories and partly because of Soviet organizational influence. Overall, the nations of the Non-Aligned Movement and Western nations agreed on about 20% of their votes, while 80% of the time the Non-Aligned and the Soviet bloc were in agreement. Obviously, this is damaging not only to the United States but to all the industrialized democracies.

Perhaps more disturbing than the disparities in outcome, was the fact that the United States was the only major country singled out for criticism by name in several resolutions of the Thirty-Eighth General Assembly. One such resolution falsely attacked the U.S. for violating the South African arms embargo (which in fact we have not done); one unjustly attacked the U.S. for nuclear collaboration with South Africa; a third attacked the U.S. for its assistance to Israel.

Neither the Soviet Union, which maintains more than 100,000 occupation troops in a brutal war against Afghanistan, violates chemical warfare agreements, and shot down an unarmed civilian airliner; nor North Korea, whose bombs murdered South Korea's ministers in Rangoon; nor Vietnam, which maintains a huge occupation force in Cambodia; nor Libya, which invaded Chad and promotes worldwide terrorism; nor Iran, which is seeking systematically to eliminate its Baha'i population; nor states, which created great hardship by expelling tens of thousands, have been the object of specific disapproval in a U.N. resolution.

Explicit criticism of a country by name has become, inside the U.N., something very different than in most human situations. It is an act of powerful blocs against countries unable to defend themselves in the U.N. context. Only those countries which lack the protection of membership in an influential bloc are singled out for explicit criticism in the U.N. Such selective censure necessarily is discriminatory and unfair. Moreover, the political use of the U.N. to embarrass countries unable to protect themselves undermines the Organization's capacity to do the valid and important tasks for which it was created.

E. What can be done

Patterns of voting behavior in the U.N. are less rigid than is sometimes supposed. With the single exception of the Soviet bloc, it should not be assumed that membership in this or that group will necessarily determine how a country votes or speaks on a given issue. Overlapping memberships create conflicting claims; relations outside the United Nations may conflict with relationships inside the U.N. There are significant variations in the votes on important issues among the nations of Africa, the Islamic Conference and in the Non-Aligned bloc. It should never be assumed that membership in this or that bloc constitutes an automatic reason for casting a hostile vote. Togo and Zaire, for example, almost always agreed with the Western nations in the Security Council votes; Zimbabwe was usually on the other side of conflicted issues; yet all three are active members of the African and Non-Aligned groups. It is only necessary to look at the voting support scores to understand that countries within each of the groups diverge on important issues.

The United States has many good friends among the members of the United Nations and in most of its blocs. If countries which are good friends of the U.S. outside the U.N. do not always act like good friends inside that body, an important reason is surely our failure to communicate that the United States cares deeply about U.N. outcomes. Experience has shown that when we let other nations know we are deeply interested in an outcome, those others are much more likely to take our values and interests into account in casting their votes. The goal of the Administration in the United Nations is to encourage that body to contribute, as it was originally intended, to the peaceful resolution of disputes among nations, the enhancement of human freedom and human rights, the encouragement of economic development and well-being of peoples. The Congress' help in underscoring our national concerns and values, and their connection with voting patterns in the U.N. context, surely will help.

ALL VOTES

A Note on Methodology

The tables contained in this section reflect percent coincidence of countries' votes with the U.S. in the 38th UN General Assembly Plenary. This coincidence takes into account all recorded votes, including procedural motions and paragraph votes, which occurred in the Plenary but does not include issues approved without vote or by consensus. The percent coincidence is calculated on the basis of Yes/No votes only and does not take into account abstentions or absences. This method provides less distortion than any alternative. Table 1 is broken down according to geographical regions. Tables 2-9 reflect voting coincidence according to significant regional or political groupings.

During the 38th United Nations General Assembly
Fall 1983

The ten votes described below were judged by the U.S. Mission to the UN as the most important affecting U.S. interests during the 38th UN General Assembly.

The ten votes selected also reflect regional and functional distribution of issues. There are two votes on the Middle East (Israel's Credentials and the Resolution on U.S. support for Israel); two on Latin America (both on Grenada); two on Africa (Apartheid and the U.S.-South Africa relationship); two on Asia (Kampuchea and Afghanistan); one on arms control (chemical and bacteriological weapons); and one on human rights (El Salvador).

Vote totals shown for each vote are Yes, No, Abstain/Absent (Y-N-AB), with the US vote shown in parentheses.

1. Israeli Credentials. Procedural motion that no action be taken to an amendment which would not have approved Israel's credentials.
Vote: 79(US)-43-19.
2. The Middle East Situation. Resolution 38/180 E. States awareness that reported agreements between the U.S. and Israel will increase Israel's intransigence and escalate Israel's expansionist and annexationist policies; demands that the U.S. refrain from any step that would support Israel's war capabilities.
Vote: 81-27(US)-29.
3. Afghanistan. Resolution 38/29. Calls for the immediate withdrawal of foreign troops from Afghanistan, reaffirms the right of the Afghan people to determine their own form of government, and calls on all parties to work for a political solution.
Vote: 116(US)-20-17
4. Kampuchea. Resolution 38/3. Deplores foreign armed intervention and occupation by foreign forces in Kampuchea, and reiterates conviction that withdrawal of foreign forces, non-interference, and non-intervention are principal components of any just and lasting resolution of the Kampuchean problem.
Vote: 105(US)-23-19.

5. Grenada. Motion to close debate (gag rule). Approval of this motion prevented the U.S. and others from speaking in the General Assembly debate on Grenada.

Vote: 60-54(US)-24

6. Grenada. Resolution 38/7. Deplores armed intervention in Grenada and calls for immediate withdrawal of foreign troops from Grenada.

Vote: 108-9(US)-27.

7. Chemical and Bacteriological Weapons. Resolution 38/187 C: Requests the UN Secretary General with experts to pursue the investigation of violations of the 1925 Geneva protocol on gases and bacteriological warfare; requests completion in 1984 of documentation on identification of symptoms associated with use of prohibited agents.

Vote: 97(US)-20-30.

8. Human Rights in El Salvador. Resolution 38/101: expresses deepest concern that gravest violations of human rights are persisting in El Salvador, recommends reform, calls for comprehensive negotiated political solution, and urges all states to abstain from intervening and to suspend any type of military assistance.

Vote: 84-14(US)-45.

9. Collaboration with South Africa. Resolution 38/39 G: Expresses alarm at violation of arms embargo and continued nuclear collaboration by the U.S. and others with South Africa and condemns U.S. decision to approve request for seven corporations to provide services to South Africa's nuclear installation.

Vote: 122-9(US)-17.

10. South Africa. Resolution 38/39 A: Condemns the United States for its policy towards South Africa of constructive engagement; condemns the policies of the U.S., Israel, and others, their transnational corporations, and their financial institutions for collaboration with South Africa; calls upon the IMF to terminate credits to South Africa; and recognizes that national liberation movements have the right to armed struggle against South Africa.

Vote: 124-16(US)-10.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "The situation in the Middle East",

Recalling its resolutions 36/226 A of 17 December 1981 and 37/123 F of 20 December 1982, in which it stated, inter alia, its concern over certain factors which exacerbate the situation in the Middle East,

Deeply concerned at the recent developments in the Middle East and the critical situation confronting the region resulting from the continued escalation of Israeli policy of aggression, expansion and annexation in the region,

Expressing grave concern over the continued supply of modern arms and war materials to Israel augmented by substantial economic aid, without which Israel's policy of aggression and flouting United Nations resolutions could not be maintained,

Deeply aware that the recent reported agreements following the memorandum of understanding between the United States and Israel will increase Israel's intransigence and its war potential and escalate its expansionist and annexationist policies in the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, at the time it is defying United Nations resolutions,

1. Declares, accordingly, the international responsibility of any party or parties that supply Israel with arms or economic aid that augment its war potential;
2. Expresses deep concern at and condemns all steps which may result in augmenting the capability of Israel and contributing to its policy of aggression against countries in the region;
3. Demands that all States, particularly the United States of America, in the light of the said agreements, refrain from taking any step that would support Israel's war capabilities and consequently its aggressive acts, whether in the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967 or against countries in the region;
4. Calls upon all States to review, in the light of the present resolution, any agreement, whether military, economic or otherwise, concluded with Israel.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "The situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security",

Recalling its resolutions ES-6/2 of 14 January 1980, 35/37 of 20 November 1980, 36/34 of 18 November 1981 and 37/37 of 29 November 1982,

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue those efforts with a view to promoting a political solution, in accordance with the provisions of the present resolution, and the exploration of securing appropriate guarantees for the non-use of force, or threat of force, against the political independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and security of all neighbouring States, on the basis of mutual guarantees and strict non-interference in each other's internal affairs and with full regard for the principles of the Charter of the United Nations;
8. Requests the Secretary-General to keep Member States and the Security Council concurrently informed of progress towards the implementation of the present resolution and to submit to Member States a report on the situation at the earliest appropriate opportunity;

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

[without reference to a Main Committee (A/38/L.2 and Add.1)]

38/3. The situation in Kampuchea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 34/22 of 14 November 1979, 35/6 of 22 October 1980, 36/5 of 21 October 1981 and 37/6 of 28 October 1982,

Recalling further the Declaration on Kampuchea 1/ and resolution 1 (I) 2/ adopted by the International Conference on Kampuchea, which offer the negotiating framework for a comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean problem,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 37/6, 3/

Noting the increasing effectiveness of the coalition with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as President of Democratic Kampuchea,

Deploing that foreign armed intervention and occupation continue and that foreign forces have not been withdrawn from Kampuchea, thus causing continuing hostilities in that country and seriously threatening international peace and security,

1/ Report of the International Conference on Kampuchea, New York, 13-17 July 1981 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.81.I.20), annex I.

2/ Ibid., annex II.

3/ A/38/513.

Gravely concerned that the continued deployment of foreign forces in Kampuchea near the Thai-Kampuchean border and the renewed attack on civilians by those forces, in violation of humanitarian principles, have aggravated tension in the region,

Greatly disturbed that the continued fighting and instability in Kampuchea have forced Kampucheans to flee to the Thai-Kampuchean border in search of food and safety,

Recognizing that the assistance extended by the international community has continued to reduce the food shortages and health problems of the Kampuchean people,

Emphasizing that it is the inalienable right of the Kampuchean people who have sought refuge in neighbouring countries to return safely to their homeland,

Emphasizing further that no effective solution to the humanitarian problems can be achieved without a comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean conflict,

Seriously concerned about reported demographic changes being imposed in Kampuchea by foreign occupation forces,

Convinced that, to bring about durable peace in South-East Asia, there is an urgent need for a comprehensive political solution to the Kampuchean problem that will provide for the withdrawal of all foreign forces and ensure respect for the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and neutral and non-aligned status of Kampuchea, as well as the right of the Kampuchean people to self-determination free from outside interference,

Convinced further that, after the comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean question through peaceful means, the countries of the South-East Asian region can pursue efforts to establish a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in South-East Asia so as to lessen international tensions and to achieve lasting peace in the region,

Reaffirming the need for all States to adhere strictly to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, which call for respect for the national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States, non-intervention and non-interference in the internal affairs of States, non-recourse to the threat or use of force and peaceful settlement of disputes,

1. Reaffirms its resolutions 34/22, 35/6, 36/5 and 37/6 and calls for their full implementation;

2. Reiterates its conviction that the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Kampuchea, the restoration and preservation of its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the right of the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny and the commitment by all States to non-interference and non-intervention in the internal affairs of Kampuchea are the principal components of any just and lasting resolution of the Kampuchean problem;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea ^{4/} and requests that the Committee continue its work, pending the reconvening of the Conference;
4. Authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee to convene when necessary and to carry out the tasks entrusted to it in its mandate;
5. Reaffirms its decision to reconvene the Conference at an appropriate time in accordance with Conference resolution 1 (I);

Date: 16 December 1981 Meeting: 100
Vote: 84-14-45 (recorded) Report: A/38/680

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 151/

Conscious of its responsibility in all circumstances to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all,

Reiterating that the Governments of all Member States have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms and to carry out the responsibilities they have undertaken under various international human rights instruments,

Determined to remain vigilant with regard to violations of human rights wherever they occur and to take measures to restore respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling that, in its resolutions 35/192 of 15 December 1980, 36/155 of 16 December 1981 and 37/185 of 17 December 1982, it expressed deep concern at the situation of human rights in El Salvador, especially in view of the death of thousands of people and the climate of violence and insecurity prevailing in that country, as also the impunity of paramilitary forces and other armed groups,

Bearing in mind Commission on Human Rights resolutions 32 (XXXVII) of 11 March 1981, 152/ in which the Commission decided to appoint a Special Representative on the situation of human rights in El Salvador, 1982/28 of 11 March 1982 153/ and 1983/29 of 8 March 1983, 154/ whereby the Commission extended the mandate of the Special Representative for another year and requested him to report, inter alia, to the General Assembly at its thirty-eighth session,

Taking note with grave concern of the interim report of the Special Representative of the Commission on Human Rights, 155/ in which the continuation of a climate of violence and insecurity in El Salvador characterized by armed clashes, acts of economic sabotage and grave and large-scale violations of human rights, as well as the failure of the Salvadorian authorities to prevent these constant violations of human rights in that country, are confirmed,

Bearing in mind that in its resolution 37/185 the General Assembly observed that the elections which were held in El Salvador in March 1982 had not led to the cessation of violence or to improvement in the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in that country;

Noting with satisfaction that the Peace Commission, officials and special envoys of other Governments within and outside the region as well as the representative political forces have initiated conversations in the search for a negotiated comprehensive political solution,

1. Commends the Special Representative for his interim report on the situation of human rights in El Salvador; 156/
2. Expresses its deepest concern at the fact that, as indicated in the report of the Special Representative, the gravest violations of human rights are persisting in El Salvador and that as a result the sufferings of the Salvadorian people are continuing, and regrets that the appeals for the cessation of the acts of violence formulated by the General Assembly, the Commission on Human Rights and the international community as a whole have not been heeded;
3. Again draws the attention of the Salvadorian parties concerned to the fact that the rules of international law, as contained in article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 157/ and the additional Protocols of 1977, 158/ are applicable to armed conflicts not of an international character, such as that in El Salvador, and requests all parties to apply a minimum standard of protection of human rights and of humane treatment of the civilian population;

4. Takes note of resolution 1983/18 of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of 5 September 1983, 159/ in which it recommended to the Special Representative that in his report he should give special attention to respect for and/or violations of humanitarian laws in armed conflicts;

5. Recommends that the reforms necessary for the solution of the economic and social problems which are at the root of the internal conflict in El Salvador should be put into effect so as to allow the effective exercise of civil and political rights in that country, and reaffirms the right of the Salvadorian people freely to determine their political, economic and social future without interference from outside and in an atmosphere free from intimidation and terror;

6. Calls upon the Government and other political forces to intensify their conversations and work for a comprehensive negotiated political solution which will put an end to the internal armed conflict and establish a lasting peace which will allow the full exercise both of civil and political rights and of economic, social and cultural rights by all Salvadorians;

7. Once again urges all States to abstain from intervening in the internal situation in El Salvador and to suspend all supplies of arms and any type of military assistance, so as to allow the restoration of peace and security and the establishment of a democratic system based on full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Expresses its deep concern at the reports which prove that government forces regularly resort to bombarding urban areas which are not military objectives in El Salvador, and its concern for the fate of several hundred thousand displaced persons who are currently located in camps in which they are subjected to abuse and even the minimum conditions of internment, in terms of either material needs or humane treatment, are not observed;

9. Likewise expresses its concern at the resurgence of disappearances and murders, for which the so-called "death squads" claim responsibility, committed against persons who belong to various sectors of the civilian population, and urges that these activities should be investigated with a view to punishing those responsible;

10. Expresses its concern at the consequences of the damage done to the economy of El Salvador as a result of the attacks on the economic infrastructure attributable for the most part, according to the report of the Special Representative, to the opposition forces;

11. Reiterates its urgent appeal to the Government of El Salvador to fulfil its obligations towards its citizens and to assume its international responsibilities in this regard by taking the necessary steps to ensure that all its agencies, including its security forces and other armed organizations operating under its authority, fully respect human rights and fundamental freedoms;

12. Urges the competent authorities of El Salvador to establish the necessary conditions to enable the judiciary to uphold the rule of law, prosecuting and punishing speedily and effectively those responsible for the grave violations of human rights which are being committed in that country;

13. Reiterates its appeal to all Salvadorian parties in the conflict to co-operate fully and not to interfere with the activities of humanitarian organizations dedicated to alleviating the suffering of the civilian population, wherever these organizations operate in the country;

14. Deplores the violent death of Marianella Garcia Villas, President of the Commission of Human Rights of El Salvador, and, given the contradictory reports on the matter, requests the Special Representative of the Commission on Human Rights to investigate the circumstances of her death;

15. Renews its appeal to the Government of El Salvador, as well as all other parties concerned, to continue to co-operate with the Special Representative of the Commission on Human Rights;

16. Decides to keep under consideration, during its thirty-ninth session, the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in El Salvador, in order to examine this situation anew in the light of additional elements provided by the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION JA/101: Situation in El Salvador

Military and nuclear collaboration with South Africa

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions on military and nuclear collaboration with South Africa, in particular its resolution 37/69 D of 9 December 1982,

Recalling that the Security Council had determined in resolution 418 (1977), under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, that the acquisition by South Africa of arms and related matériel constituted a threat to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Having considered the reports of the Special Committee against Apartheid, 124/ the International Conference on Sanctions against South Africa 125/ and the International Conference on the Alliance between South Africa and Israel, 126/

Taking into account the declarations of the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries 127/ and the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its nineteenth ordinary session, 128/

Gravely concerned that, despite the arms embargo imposed by the Security Council, the racist régime of South Africa has continued to obtain from certain Western countries and Israel military equipment and ammunition, as well as technology and know-how, to develop its armaments industry and nuclear-weapon capability,

Noting with grave concern that military and nuclear collaboration of certain Western countries and Israel with South Africa has enabled the racist régime to develop its arms production and become an arms-exporting country,

Recognizing that the stepped-up arms build-up and nuclear-weapon capability as well as escalating acts of aggression by the racist régime of South Africa constitute a grave threat to international peace and security,

Expressing alarm at the growing violation of the arms embargo as well as the continued nuclear collaboration by the United States of America and some other Western States and Israel with the apartheid régime,

Condemning the actions of those transnational corporations that continue, through their collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa, to enhance its military and nuclear capabilities as well as the failure of the Government of the home countries of those corporations to take effective action to prevent such collaboration in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Considering the urgent need for mandatory decisions by the Security Council, under Chapter VII of the Charter, to prohibit any military and nuclear collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa, 123/ See General Assembly resolution 38/181 of 20 December 1983.

124/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirty-eighth Session, Supplement No. 22 (A/38/22-S/16101).

127/ See A/38/132-S/15675 and Corr.1 and 2, annex.

128/ See A/38/312, annex.

1. Urges the Security Council to take mandatory decisions, under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, to ensure the total cessation of all military and nuclear co-operation with the racist régime of South Africa by Governments, corporations, institutions and individuals;
2. Strongly condemns the actions of certain Western States and Israel which have provided the racist régime of South Africa with an enormous arsenal of military equipment and technology, as well as assistance in its nuclear plans, and which have allowed corporations under their jurisdiction to invest in the armaments industry in South Africa;
3. Also condemns the recent decision of the United States of America approving the request from seven corporations to provide technological and maintenance service to the nuclear installation of racist South Africa;
4. Further condemns any manoeuvres to create military pacts or arrangements with the participation of the racist régime of South Africa;
5. Calls upon all Member States:
 - (a) To monitor effectively and to reinforce the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa;
 - (b) To prohibit all military and nuclear co-operation with South Africa by Governments, corporations, institutions and individuals;
6. Calls upon all Governments that have not yet done so to terminate all military and nuclear collaboration with South Africa and to take all necessary measures for preventing corporations and enterprises under their jurisdiction from any such collaboration.

38/39. Policies of apartheid of the Government of South Africa

A/Situation in South Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling and reaffirming its resolution 37/69 of 9 December 1982.

Having considered the report of the Special Committee against Apartheid, 102/ as well as its special report on recent developments concerning relations between Israel and South Africa, 103/

Taking note of the declarations of conferences organized or co-sponsored by the Special Committee, namely, the International Conference of Trade Unions on Sanctions and Other Actions against the Apartheid Régime in South Africa, 104/ held at Geneva on 10 and 11 June 1983, the International Conference for Sanctions against Apartheid in Sports, 105/ held in London from 27 to 29 June 1983, the International Non-Governmental Organizations Conference on Action against Apartheid and Racism, 106/ held at Geneva from 5 to 8 July 1983, the International Conference on the Alliance between South Africa and Israel, 107/ held at Vienna from 11 to 13 July 1983, and the Latin American Regional Conference for Action against Apartheid, 108/ held at Caracas from 16 to 18 September 1983,

Gravely concerned over the threat to international peace and security, and repeated breaches of the peace and acts of aggression, caused by the policies and actions of the racist minority régime of South Africa,

Condemning the racist minority régime of South Africa for its repeated defiance of the United Nations, its oppression of the great majority of the people of South Africa and its ruthless repression of all opponents of apartheid,

Reaffirming that apartheid is a crime against humanity,

Strongly convinced that peace and stability in southern Africa require the total eradication of apartheid and the exercise of the right of self-determination by all the people of South Africa, irrespective of race, colour or creed,

Convinced that the racist minority régime of South Africa has been encouraged to perpetuate these criminal acts by the protection accorded by major Western Powers against international sanctions and by their continued collaboration with it,

Recognizing that the policies and actions of certain Western Powers and Israel are the main obstacles which have frustrated international efforts for the elimination of apartheid,

Condemning, in particular, the increased collaboration by the Government of the United States of America with the racist régime of South Africa in pursuance of its policy of so-called "constructive engagement" which has encouraged the racist régime to entrench apartheid, intensify repression and escalate acts of aggression and destabilization against independent African States,

Condemning the increasing collaboration by Israel with the racist minority régime of South Africa, particularly in the military and nuclear fields,

Rejecting the so-called "constitutional proposals" by the racist minority régime of South Africa as designed to entrench apartheid,

Commending the unity of the oppressed people of South Africa for their opposition to the constitutional proposals as well as for their struggle for the elimination of apartheid and for the establishment of a democratic and non-racial society in non-fragmented South Africa,

Taking note of the advance of the armed struggle for liberation undertaken by the national liberation movements in the face of brutal repression of peaceful protest,

Recognizing that the legitimate struggle of the South African people for liberation from apartheid is a contribution to the objective of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that the elimination of apartheid constitutes a major objective of the United Nations,

Considering that all the agencies in the United Nations system have a duty to make a maximum contribution, within their mandates, to the international campaign against apartheid,

2. Declares that the United Nations and the international community have a special responsibility towards the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movements in their legitimate struggle for the elimination of apartheid and the establishment of a non-racial democratic society assuring human rights and fundamental freedoms to all the people of the country irrespective of race, colour or creed;
3. Again proclaims that the national liberation movements of South Africa are the authentic representatives of the people of South Africa in their just struggle for national liberation;
4. Recognizes the right of the oppressed people and their national liberation movements to resort to all means at their disposal, including armed struggle, in their resistance to the illegitimate racist minority régime of South Africa;

 - (a) Release persons imprisoned or restricted for their opposition to apartheid;
 - (b) Allow those who have been exiled for their opposition to apartheid to return unconditionally to their country;
 - (c) Rescind bans on political and other organizations and media opposed to apartheid;

7. Commends the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movements, particularly the African National Congress of South Africa, for intensifying the armed struggle against the racist régime of South Africa;
8. Calls upon all States and organizations to provide all necessary moral, political and material assistance to the South African liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity at this crucial stage of their struggle for liberation;

111/ A/32/144, annex I.

112/ United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 75, Nos. 970-973.

10. Strongly condemns the apartheid régime of South Africa for its brutal repression of all opponents of apartheid, its torture and killing of detainees, its execution of freedom fighters and its repeated acts of aggression, subversion and terrorism against independent African States;

11. Condemns the policy of "bantustanization" designed to dispossess the African majority of its inalienable rights and to deprive it of citizenship, as well as the continuing forced removals of black people, as an international crime;

12. Condemns the policies of certain Western States, especially the United States of America, and Israel, and of their transnational corporations and financial institutions that have increased political, economic and military collaboration with the racist minority régime of South Africa despite repeated appeals by the General Assembly;

13. Again urges the Security Council to determine that the situation in South Africa and in southern Africa as a whole, resulting from the policies and actions of the apartheid régime of South Africa, constitutes a grave and growing threat to international peace and security, and to impose comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against the racist minority régime under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations;

14. Urgently calls upon the International Monetary Fund to terminate credits or other assistance to the racist minority régime of South Africa;

15. Again requests the International Atomic Energy Agency to refrain from extending to South Africa any facilities which may assist it in its nuclear plans and, in particular, to exclude South Africa from all its technical working groups;

17. THE SECURITY COUNCIL, 1983

The Security Council:
Prefatory Remarks

The Security Council discussed a wide range of issues in 1983. The following tables contain a summary of Council voting on issues where unanimity was not achieved and an indication of voting agreement with the United States. The tables do not reflect the fact that many issues debated in the Council did not come to a vote. In some cases, the President of the Council was authorized by the members to make statements reflecting the views of the Council. In other cases the Council decided not to take any action. Some debates occurred at the request of United Nations member states; in other instances the Council discussed reports of the Secretary General without taking further action.

In addition, many of the issues which came to a vote were not contentious. Ten of the twenty resolutions voted on by the Council in 1983 were adopted unanimously. Of the resolutions not unanimously approved, three cases involved standard Soviet and Polish abstentions on renewals of the mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and also were not contentious.

The most significant votes in the Council were the three draft resolutions which failed because of vetos. The vote on the draft resolution condemning the shootdown of KAL 007 was important because nine Council members voted for the draft, forcing the Soviet Union to exercise its first veto since 1980 when it took similar action on a draft resolution on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The United States vetoed a draft resolution on the intervention in Grenada and one which contained unbalanced and wholesale criticism of Israeli settlement policies. The country papers in Section VI describe how individual Council members voted on these issues.

VOTES ON BUDGETS

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

General Assembly Vote on the 1984-85 Program Budget

Budget votes tend to divide the interests of major contributors from the remaining membership of the United Nations. During the thirty eighth General Assembly, a two year budget (1984 and 1985) totalling a gross amount of $1,587,159,800 was approved by 122-9-13(US). Those voting against were: Bulgaria, Byelorussia, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland, Ukraine, and the USSR. Abstaining were: Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Romania, Spain, United Kingdom, United States and Viet Nam. The combined contribution level (for payment of assessments to the budget) of the abstentions and negative votes totalled 79.78 percent.

The Soviet bloc had called for a complete absorption of inflation and non-recurring costs in the new budget and since this was not accomplished voted against the budget. In practice the Soviets and their allies were not entirely consistent in that they supported many supplementary appropriations for political reasons.

The United States and about half the Western European and Others Group abstained on the budget in light of the overall small real growth rate (0.9 percent). The Secretary General presented a budget which had been more thoroughly reviewed than ever before and which followed "maximum restraint." The Thirty Eighth General Assembly demonstrated restraint by not pushing through a large number of add-ons to the basic budget.
