

If you wanted to see a fox or a bear, or almost any fur bearing animal, you would probably have the chance. The woods contained many trees, such as fir and maple. The wood from these trees was used for making chairs. The woods and hills were ideal for hiking. The ground was covered with snow for several months each year, and you might have a hard time if you want to go to town for the day. Also, we were near the ocean, and it was not uncommon to see a dolphin's dorsal fin, even though on many days fog would block the view.
