OF THE

TRUSTEES, FACULTY, OFFICERS, AND OF THE ALUMNI

OF THE

BELLEVUE HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE,

OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK,

FROM 1861 TO 1871.

COMPILED BY

FREDERICK A. CASTLE, M. D.,

HISTORIAN OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

PRECEDED BY A HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE, FROM ITS ORGANIZATION TO 1872, BY

LEROY MILTON YALE, M. D.,

PRESIDENT OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

NEW YORK:

D. APPLETON AND COMPANY,

549 & 551 BROADWAY.

THE statements contained in the Catalogue have been mainly derived from answers to circular letters, which were, as far as possible, sent to all Alumni. Obituaries have been inserted when they have been attainable, but, owing to the want of addresses of relatives or friends, it has been impossible to do so in the cases of some who are known to be deceased. It is hoped that the publication of the Catalogue will lead to a correspondence, which will not only render it possible to fill these omissions at some future time, but will contribute to the permanent record which is being kept of facts regarding living Alumni, which will be of general interest. This record will serve as a basis for corrections and additions, which will be made in the Catalogue, whenever it is practicable to do so.

The facts with regard to the history of the College have been compiled from authentic and official sources, most of them having been taken from the minutes of the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital, the minutes of the Faculty, and the published minutes of the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction.

Every Graduate of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in good and regular standing, is considered a member of the Association.

The annual meeting of the Association is held on the day before the Commencement of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE.

THE first Catalogue of Alumni of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College can have no more appropriate, and, it is believed, no more acceptable preface than a brief history of the college itself. Such a sketch cannot fail to be interesting to those who have enjoyed its practical advantages or to those who desire to know what fortunate circumstances, or what energy and forethought lay at the foundation of a success so phenomenal as its has been; what it was that gave the school high rank from the first, and has, at the end of a decade, given it the foremost place among its sister institutions in this country.

The Bellevue Hospital was formerly the Almshouse Hospital, and included a large part of those charity patients which abound in any large city, and of which New York has its full share. The field for medical study was immense; but, for a long time, it was not open, except to the favored few whose position as resident physicians, or dressers, gave them peculiar facilities. Previous to 1847, the direction of the medical affairs of the hospital appears to have been confided mainly to a resident physician, appointed from time to time. In the year mentioned, a change was made, and, on the 19th of November, 1847, the Medical Board was organized on the basis that has existed until the present time; viz., the division of the staff into physicians and surgeons, who should hold their positions permanently, and visit the wards in alternation. This change in the medical officers seems to have directly led to an attempt to utilize for instruction the abundant resources of the hospital; for we find in the minutes of the Medical Board, under date of February 28, 1849—but fifteen months after the organization of the Board—that an amphitheatre had already been constructed. This amphitheatre was formally opened on the 2d of March following, the exercises consisting of an address by Dr. D. M. Reese, then resident physician, and of the operation of lithotomy, and other surgical operations, by Dr. W. H. Van Buren. The minutes farther announced that clinical lectures would be delivered by members of the hospital staff, every Friday, at one o'clock P. M. This, then, is the beginning, as far as the records show, of that clinical teaching, with which the name of Bellevue has since become synonymous. From this opening until the present time, clinical lectures have been given in the hospital with greater or less regularity.

Another event which had a marked influence in making the hospital a centre of medical teaching was the erection of a building in which pathological studies could be advantageously carried on. This building was inaugurated, October 25, 1857. An address was delivered by Dr. John W. Francis, and additional remarks were made by Profs. Valentine Mott, Stevens, and Parker, and by Dr. (since Professor) James R. Wood. The venerable Dr. Mott closed his remarks on this occasion by demonstrating, in his well-known elegant manner, the anatomy of hernia. From the published report of these addresses, it appears that the erection of the pathological building was due to the energy and zeal of Dr. Wood.

Such members of the hospital staff as were so disposed continued to give clinical instruction during the winter for the next three or four years; but the first recorded suggestion we have of a distinct school of medicine is found in the minutes of the Medical Board, under the date of December 18, 1860. The old Board of Ten Governors, which had for a time administered the charities of New York, had given place to the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, which still controls the charitable and penal institutions of the city. In accordance with a request of the Commissioners, a committee from the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital had been appointed to examine and report upon the various institutions situated upon the islands, and under the control of the Commission. This committee consisted of Dr. Isaac E. Taylor, chairman, and Dr. James R. Wood. Their report, presented at the date above given, contained the following paragraph:

“In view of the great advantages accruing from the addition of such a large field of practice, presented to us by the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, and, after the patients are established in the new Island Hospital, and the assignment of the different wards to the various classes of disease—medical, surgical, uterine, and obstetrical—and the transfer of any acute or sub-acute cases to Bellevue Hospital of the patients, and without any advantage to the attending physician or surgeon in attendance on the island, thus enlarging the field for clinical instruction, and the extensive opportunities for advancing the cause of medical science, therefore attracting to an institution in the city of New York a large number of medical students, does it not, with even this cursory view of the subject, become an important question whether, ere many days elapse, Bellevue Hospital should not, nay, ought to have connected with it and established a college for the education of young men, independent of a mere hospital for clinical teaching, and thus making it one of the largest hospitals, and, it may be, schools in the United States—nay, Europe? The committee think the subject is one worthy of consideration, and that when the institutions on the island and Bellevue Hospital are carefully regulated and in good working order, some plan might be suggested to carry it with effect. There are many reasons why it should be, and every exertion ought to be attempted to accomplish it, and the Commissioners will come up to the work when the proper time arrives for its consummation, as it is now at their suggestion and request. All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) ISAAC E. TAYLOR, Chairman of Committee.
JAMES R. WOOD.

NEW YORK, December 18, 1860.

At the meeting of the Medical Board, at which the report was read, that part of the report referring to the establishment of a medical college was referred back to the committee, who were directed to confer with the Commissioners upon the subject and to report.

This conference resulted favorably to the proposed school. The Board of Commissioners were enthusiastic in their endeavors to increase the value of the charitable institutions by making them, in addition to their original purpose, subserve more completely the cause of medical education. The project was so rapidly matured that at the meeting of the Medical Board, on the 1st of March, 1861, a committee was appointed to procure plans for a college building. On the 30th of the same month, the Commissioners notified the Medical Board that they would allow such a building to be erected upon the hospital grounds. At the same meeting at which this permission was received, the question of the formation of the Faculty came up in the shape of an inquiry as to what members of the Medical Board were willing to connect themselves with the new college. Some members of the Board were already connected with medical schools, others did not care to undertake the duties of teaching, and yet others were prevented by important engagements. At this meeting, however, Drs. B. W. McCready, I. E. Taylor, J. R. Wood, L. A. Sayre, S. Smith, A. B. Mott, and A. L. Loomis, declared themselves ready to join the enterprise, and the Faculty was organized upon the following day by the election of Dr. I. E. Taylor as President, Dr. B. W. McCready as Secretary, and Dr. I. E. Taylor as Treasurer. At the same time a committee was appointed to definitely ascertain what members of the hospital staff would become members of the Faculty. Eight members declined and ten accepted. To these ten, on the 2d of April, chairs were assigned as follows:

Principles and Practice of Surgery.....	S. SMITH.
Surgery of Bones and Accidents.....	F. H. HAMILTON.
Operative Surgery and Surgical Pathology.....	J. R. WOOD.
Surgical Anatomy.....	A. B. MOTT.
Orthopedic Surgery.....	L. A. SAYRE.
Obstetrics..	I. E. TAYLOR, FORDYCE BARKER, G. T. ELLIOT, Jr.
Materia Medica and Therapeutics.....	B. W. MCCREADY.
Anatomy.....	J. W. S. GOULEY.

During the month of April, the Faculty was completed by the following appointments:

Principles and Practice of Medicine.....	A. FLINT.
Physiology.....	A. FLINT, Jr.
Chemistry and Toxicology.....	R. O. DOREMUS.

These constituted the original Faculty of the college. The changes in this body and the additions to it will be later mentioned in detail. (Minutes of Commissioners, April 11, 1861.)

The first exercises of the college, as such, were short courses, given during April and May, 1861, by Profs. Wood and Hamilton, upon points connected with military surgery, a subject which the breaking out of the war—that had just taken place—rendered particularly important. These lectures were attended by about two hundred practitioners and students.

In the mean time the college had been incorporated, with the following Board of Trustees:

HON. SIMEON DRAPER,	} Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction.
HON. JAMES B. NICHOLSON,
HON. MOSES H. GRINNELL,
HON. ISAAC BELL, "Jr.,
HON. ROBERT T. HAWS,	Comptroller of New York.
HON. JAMES T. BRADY.	GEORGE F. TALMAN, Esq.
MOST REV. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.	EDWARD MINTURN, Esq.
JOHN J. ASTOR, Esq.	J. P. GIRAUD FOSTER, Esq.
MOSES TAYLOR, Esq.	ANTHONY L. ROBERTSON, Esq.
WILLIAM B. CROSBY, Esq.	RICHARD M. BLATCHFORD, Esq.
JOHN WARD, Esq.	ROBERT S. HONE, Esq.
REV. SAMUEL D. COOK, D. D.	WATTS SHERMAN, Esq.
REV. E. H. CHAPIN, D. D.	MATTHEW MORGAN, Esq.

The Commissioners were notified of this incorporation on the 8th of April, 1861, and, on the 11th, they passed the following preamble and resolutions :

"In consideration of the gratuitous services heretofore rendered, as well as the promised continuance of the same, by the Medical Board, and with a view of rendering a permanent, extended, and more valuable service to the living, it is

"Resolved, That permission be granted to the Trustees of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College to build and place under their charge, subject to the rules and regulations which now exist under the authority of this Board, a suitable building according to the plans submitted by Messrs. Post and Gambrill, architects, on the southerly part of Bellevue Hospital grounds.

"Resolved, That a meeting of the Trustees be held at No. 1 Bond Street, on Tuesday next, 16th instant, at four o'clock P. M., of which the corporators be notified, and that they be represented by a committee or otherwise.

"SIMEON DRAPER, Pres. ,	} Commissioners.
ISAAC BELL, Jr.,
MOSES H. GRINNELL,
JAMES B. NICHOLSON;

"Report accepted and resolutions adopted."—(Minutes of Commissioners, vol. ii., p. 169.)

The first meeting of the Trustees was accordingly held at the time and place designated in the resolution, and the Board was then organized. The Hon. Simeon Draper was the first President of the Board of Trustees, and retained the office until his death, in November, 1866. A complete list of the trustees of the college, from its incorporation up to 1872, will be found on pages 3 and 4.

During the following summer, the first building of the college was erected, a circular issued, and preparations were made for the opening of the school. In June, 1861, Dr. Gouley, to whom had been assigned the chair of Anatomy, resigned this position, considering it his duty to remain in the army during the continuance of the war. Dr. Timothy Childs was called to fill the vacancy; and the Faculty, as then constituted, continued unchanged until the death of Dr. Childs, four years later.

The first session of the college was opened by an excursion to the institutions on Blackwell's and Randall's Islands. The present Charity Hospital, on the former island, had then been recently built, to replace the old hospital destroyed by fire. It had been placed under the medical direction of the staff of Bellevue Hospital, and was one of the objects of interest on this occasion. After the return of the excursionists, addresses were delivered in the afternoon in the lecture-room of the college. The set address was delivered by Prof. McCready, of the college, and in it he gave some account of the clinical teaching, or rather the want of it, that had existed in New York up to that time. He showed, moreover, the need and advantages of such a school as then was being inaugurated. Dr. Taylor, the President, followed with remarks of advice and encouragement to the students. Still farther remarks appropriate to the occasion were made by the Hon. Simeon Draper, President of the Board of Commissioners and of the Board of Trustees, by Archbishop Hughes, by the Rev. Dr. Chapin, and by the Hon. James T. Brady, of the Board of Trustees.

Although the college was new, the corps of professors was by no means inexperienced. Profs. Flint, Sr., Barker, Hamilton, Flint, Jr., Childs, and Doremus, had already held chairs of their respective branches in other colleges—some of them for many years—while the remainder of the Faculty had been clinical lecturers at the hospital and elsewhere for a long time. They were men conversant with their subjects, and accustomed to teach them. So, while the school was a new enterprise, it had so many elements of success, that it could by no means be counted an experiment.

It is not, then, a matter of surprise that, before the first session was finished, the necessity of a larger building was felt. A committee was accordingly appointed to take measures for its erection. In May, 1862, the Commissioners, in order that they might have more perfect control of the buildings upon the hospital grounds, bought from the Faculty the college building, and, in return, leased it to the Faculty for a term of years. The project of a larger building remained incomplete until the following year, when (March, 1863) a conference of the Commissioners and committees from the Trustees and the Faculty of the college was held regarding it. The committee from the Faculty suggested a subscription to erect a building; the committee from the Trustees opposed any such subscription unless the college could secure a title to the ground upon which it should be built. The Faculty committee then proposed that the building should be placed upon the south side of Twenty-sixth Street, opposite to the entrance to the hospital, and presented a proposal from the owner of the ground to sell the amount requisite for the purpose. The Commissioners of Charities and Correction, however, stated to the Faculty at this interview that they (the Commissioners) did not wish the college to go outside of the hospital grounds, and proposed to erect a new building and to lease it to the college. This proposal was accepted, and in May, 1863, the Faculty of the college (Minutes of the Commissioners, vol. iii., p. 209) presented to the Commission a complete plan of the organization of the Bureau of Medical and Surgical Relief for Out-door Poor as it now exists. In July, the Commissioners established this Bureau (Minutes, vol. iii., p. 256), and, although some delay occurred in the execution of the plan, eventually, during the autumn and winter of 1865-'66, the Commissioners erected a large building, so arranged as to serve the purposes both of the college and of the Out-door Bureau. The lower floor was divided in such a manner as to answer the requirements of a dispensary, and the upper part of the building was leased, December 2, 1865, to the Faculty, for the use of the college. This fine building is the one at present occupied. The old college building was altered, so that the lower floor is now occupied by the dead-house, the autopsy-rooms, a room for judicial inquests, and the Morgue. The former auditorium has become the museum. So large a room was eminently necessary, as, in addition to the specimens belonging to the hospital, which were constantly accumulating, the collections of Profs. Wood and Mott are in the building, together with the Museum of the New York Medical College, purchased by the Trustees of the college in 1864. In 1871, the Commissioners still farther improved the facilities for students, by erecting a larger and finer amphitheatre than the one previously used for clinical purposes, the old one having been found inadequate to the accommodation of the great numbers of students yearly in attendance at the hospital.

For the sake of clearness in the narrative, the changes in the Faculty have been reserved for mention by themselves. We have already given the composition of the Faculty, as it began its work in the autumn of 1861. With the exception that, during the session of 1862-'63, Dr. Doremus was absent in Europe, and his duties were performed by Prof. B. Silliman, Jr., of Yale College, no change occurred until the melancholy death of Dr. Childs, the Professor of Anatomy, which took place at Norwich, Ct., September 3, 1865. Dr. Childs had, in early life, been surgeon to the Massachusetts regiment during the Mexican War; and later, had been for many years Professor of Anatomy and Surgery in the Berkshire Medical College, at Pittsfield, Mass., whence he was called to his position in this college. A vacancy being thus created, Dr. Stephen Smith was appointed to deliver the lectures upon anatomy, which he continued to do until his resignation, in 1872, having been made Professor of Anatomy in 1867, after he had delivered two courses. The Principles of Surgery, which had formerly been in Dr. Smith's charge, were assigned to Prof. Hamilton, in addition to his other duties.

In the spring of 1866, Dr. Henry D. Noyes, formerly Demonstrator of Anatomy, who had for some years held clinics at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, was made Professor of Ophthalmology. A summer course of lectures was proposed, in which several of the regular Faculty were to take part; and, to complete the course, Dr. Freeman J. Bumstead was appointed Professor of Syphilology in the summer term, Dr. Foster Swift, Lecturer on Diseases of the Skin, and Dr. J. Lewis Smith, Lecturer on Morbid Anatomy. A few weeks later, Dr. Bumstead resigned, and Dr. W. H. Van Buren, formerly Professor of Anatomy in the Medical Department of the University of New York, was chosen to fill the newly-created chair of Diseases of the Genito-Urinary System.

In April, 1867, the chair of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System was created, and Dr. W. A. Hammond was elected to its occupancy. At the same time, the President, Dr. Taylor, tendered his resignation; but the Faculty, unwilling to lose so valued a member, declined to accept his resignation, but relieved him of a portion of his duties by electing him Emeritus Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children. About the same time, Drs. Swift and J. Lewis Smith were made professors in the summer term, of the branches upon which they had respectively lectured.

In the following April, 1868, Prof. Wood tendered his resignation. It was not accepted as a member of the Faculty; but, instead, he was appointed Emeritus Professor of Surgery, continuing his hospital clinics, with the establishment and progress of which he had been so closely identified, long before the organization of the school. In the autumn of the same year, Prof. Barker resigned his position; but, in order to lighten his work, and yet not to lose his much-esteemed teaching, he was appointed Professor of Clinical Midwifery and Diseases of Women. The resignation of Profs. Taylor and Barker placed the full didactic course on Obstetrics in the hands of Prof. Elliot, who gave the entire course during the two sessions, 1868-'69, 1869-'70, Drs. Taylor and Barker continuing to give their clinics as before. In the summer of 1870, Dr. Elliot was disabled by an attack of apoplexy, and in the following autumn was unequal to the task of giving the course. Prof. Swift, of the summer school, was appointed to give the course, but was prevented from so doing by illness. The services of Prof. J. P. White, of Buffalo, were secured. Dr. White gave the course, but declined to receive the fees from the tickets, very generously yielding them to Prof. Elliot. Dr. Elliot, however, was never able to resume his duties at the college; a second attack of apoplexy, on the 29th of January, 1871, terminated his valuable life, at the early age of forty-three. Although, at the formation of the college, Dr. Elliot was quite a young man, his preparation had been such that he was already fully equal to the position of professor. He received his doctorate in 1849, at the Medical Department of the University of New York. The next three years he spent as interne in the Dublin Lying-in-Asylum, at the Royal University Hospital in Edinburgh, under the instruction of the late Sir James Y. Simpson, and on board the Dreadnaught Hospital Ship, as well as in private studies in Paris. From 1852 to 1854, he was Resident Physician at the New York Lying-in-Asylum. In 1854, he was appointed one of the Physicians to Bellevue Hospital, which post he occupied until his death. Previous to the organization of the Bellevue school, he had lectured one session on anatomy in the Woodstock school, and one session (1858-'59) on Operative Midwifery, at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. He had, during his professional life, been connected with most of the charities for the relief of lying-in women or for children in New York, and notably with the Nursery and Child's Hospital. Accomplished as a gentleman, erudite and experienced in his profession, lucid and eloquent as a teacher, he ably and gracefully filled a position attained by few men of his years, and his loss was correspondingly felt by his associates. Few men have been more regretted.

The vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Elliot was filled in April by the election of Dr. William T. Lusk, an alumnus of the college, who had spent several years in the study of obstetrics in the principal schools of Europe, and who had become well known as a lecturer on physiology in the Long Island College Hospital and in the Medical Department of Harvard University. At the same time, Dr. Foster Swift resigned his position in the school, and Dr. Edward L. Keyes was elected Lecturer on Dermatology.

At the end of the session of 1871-'72, Profs. McCready and Stephen Smith resigned their chairs. The vacancies were filled by the election of Dr. W. A. Hammond to the chair of Materia Medica and Therapeutics, in addition to his professorship of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System, and of Dr. Alpheus B. Crosby to the chair of Anatomy. Prof. Mott also retired from the chair of Surgical Anatomy, and assumed charge for the entire year of the surgical clinic in the Out-door Bureau, with the title of Professor of Clinical and Operative Surgery. In addition, at the Bureau for Relief of the Out-door Poor, a medical clinic was established, under the direction of Prof. Flint, Sr., and a clinic for Diseases of Children, under the direction of Prof. Lusk. At the same time, a chair of Pathological Anatomy in the regular session was established, to which Dr. Edward G. Janeway was appointed, and Dr. Keyes was made Professor of Dermatology.

In glancing over these changes, it is apparent that the Faculty designed to make the curriculum more thorough, by subdividing some branches in such a way that the various departments should be assigned to men whose especial study had made them unusually skilful in these particular directions. In addition, they have constantly been on the watch for teachers of special branches, and from time to time have added new chairs. Thus, the Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System, of the Eye, of the Skin, and Pathology, are taught by special professors.

Still farther completeness of instruction has been accomplished by the institution of a summer session, including lectures and recitations. The first course of the summer school was given in 1867. Drs. Noyes, J. Lewis Smith, and Foster Swift, with Profs. Van Buren, Elliot, Flint, Jr., and Doremus, took part in it, the members of the regular Faculty lecturing upon topics which could not be sufficiently emphasized in the regular course. With this lecture-course, the recitations became, from year to year, more and more prominently associated, until the session of 1871, when they superseded the systematic lectures entirely, the course being made up of clinics, by members of the Faculty, of practical instruction in Diagnosis, Surgical Operations, and Chemical Manipulations, in addition to the recitations, which were conducted by a corps of instructors throughout the year. This remains until now, with the addition of courses of lectures upon various subjects delivered by alumni of the college. The clinics of the college have become more and more varied, those of the hospitals (Bellevue and Charity) presenting every variety of disease that can demand in-door treatment, while the clinics at the Out-door Bureau afford cases of minor surgery, of those medical disorders that are less grave, but which, to the student, are of far more immediate importance, as well as a great variety of the disorders of children.

On the organization of the Faculty, March 31, 1861, Dr. I. E. Taylor was elected President, Dr. B. W. McCready, Secretary, and Dr. I. E. Taylor, Treasurer. Dr. Taylor has been President of the Faculty from the organization of the college to the present day. May 2, 1861, Dr. R. O. Doremus was elected Treasurer, in place of Dr. Taylor, resigned. October 21, 1861, Dr. A. Flint, Jr., was elected Secretary, in place of Dr. McCready, resigned. April 4, 1862, Dr. A. Flint, Jr., was appointed Treasurer, in place of Dr. Doremus, resigned. Dr. Flint, Jr., has been Secretary and Treasurer of the Faculty from 1862 to the present time.

The narration above given answers the questions proposed at the start; viz., what favorable circumstances and whose endeavors have brought about the great success of our Alma Mater? The favoring circumstances lay in the immense unimproved field presented by the public hospitals of this city, and in the fact that the officials governing them had the intelligent benevolence to rejoice at an opportunity of making their beneficent influences more widespread than before. The requisite zeal and foresight were abundantly found in the medical staff of Bellevue Hospital. In the good they have done, in the renown they have gained, in the honor that attaches to the title of surgeon or physician to Bellevue Hospital, they are now reaping a reward. The plan they chose was akin to the union of school and hospital, so common in Great Britain; but its continued success springs from the wisdom and enterprise with which improvements have been constantly sought for and adopted.

Let us consider for a moment some of the advantages that have directly or indirectly followed the establishment of the school; and these we would state without any feeling or intent of disparagement of the sister institutions that have preceded it, or are to-day her generous rivals! The first great benefit is an improvement in the education of medical students. Formerly, any thing like a practical knowledge of the duties and resources of his profession was rare indeed in the recent graduate of an American medical school. The establishment of the Bellevue school has placed it in the power of every student to enter the profession, competent to intelligently meet any emergency. This effect is not confined to those who are enrolled as her pupils. Other schools have been incited to greater exertions and to similar methods of teaching, until, to-day, the influence of Bellevue is felt, not only in neighboring schools, but in all throughout the country. The reform she inaugurated was so greatly needed, and was so patent a want, that it was perforce adopted wherever possible. It was this hope, this assurance, indeed, of making more thorough students, better qualified medical men, and, through them, "of rendering a permanent, extended, and more valuable service to the living," that induced the Commissioners to give their aid and countenance to the formation of a school in such close connection with their hospitals. And, if the benefits of the school had ceased here, they would have been enough; but the school has also been of material service to the institutions themselves and to their inmates.

In the first place the inmates of the hospital gained, by the general fact that no one observes so closely, no one studies so diligently, as he who must in his turn instruct. So that, when the medical officers of a hospital become teachers, they become doubly attentive, doubly watchful: no off-hand diagnosis will now do; they must be sure and careful, for mistakes now are not only, as before, an injury to the patient, but they mislead scores of students, who are, by-and-by, to treat others in their turn. Directly, then, the patients of any hospital are benefited by clinical teaching. By this general benefit, a special advantage has accrued to the charitable institutions from the establishment of this school; and this has arisen from the increased and especial zeal and sense of responsibility for the welfare of these institutions manifested by the Faculty of the college. Evidences of this could be multiplied by instancing the work done, the organizations perfected, and the reforms instituted mainly or solely by their endeavors. These have not been done in a selfish spirit; and whatever benefit has resulted from their labors has been generously shared with their associates. As an example of this kind of service, two instances will suffice. The first is the presentation, already mentioned, of the plan of organization for the Bureau of Medical and Surgical Relief for the Out-door Poor, fully elaborated by the Faculty of Bellevue Hospital Medical College. By this plan, a large dispensary has been thrown open to the poor, with the advantage of all the medical and surgical skill of the staff of Bellevue Hospital, whenever required. The out-door department has proved of great service to the poor, whose respect for the skill of the attendants is increased by the association of the Bureau with the hospital. Again, in 1866, the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction made a communication to the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital, suggesting the organization of a separate medical board for the hospital on Blackwell's Island, and changing the name of this hospital to that of "Charity Hospital." The Commissioners requested those members of the Medical Board of Bellevue, who were willing to assume the additional labor of serving on the Medical Board of Charity Hospital, to communicate their views to the Commission. Drs. Taylor, Wood, Flint, Hamilton, Sayre, Mott, Elliot, McCready, and Smith, of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and Dr. Loomis, of the University Medical College, agreed to serve on the Medical Board of Charity Hospital. The other members of the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital declined to assume the additional responsibility of service at the Charity Hospital.—(Minutes of the Commissioners, vol. vii., p. 136.)

The Faculty of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, it will be seen, formed the nucleus of the Medical Board of the Charity Hospital, which was completed by the election of other members. This reorganization of the hospital was attended with great improvement in the administration of its affairs. Enough has been said to show that the Faculty of the college have always manifested a willingness to labor for the good of the public institutions with which they have been connected; and the wisdom and energy which they manifested in the first instance in organizing the school and developing the resources of the hospital for medical teaching, they have again and again exhibited for the benefit of the hospital, by devising reforms, and executing them when authorized by the Commission.

Thus we have simply detailed the early history of the college, and its progress through its first decade. Success so great needs no comment, no eulogium. We may rest assured that her future will not be unworthy of the past.

It remains to say a few words concerning the Alumni Association of the college, under the auspices of which this Catalogue is published. This Association was organized five years ago, and its existence seems to be not generally recognized by the Alumni themselves. Every graduate of the college, in good and regular standing, is a member of the Association. No fees are required. Any graduate is welcome at its meetings, and has a voice in the direction of its affairs.

The great object of the Association is to keep up that feeling of kinship which should exist among the graduates of an institution, and which tends so much to strengthen and extend its influence.

It is hoped that every graduate will keep the college historian, or the Secretary of the Faculty, informed of his address, and of any medical position he may occupy, or honors to which he may attain.

CATALOGUE OF ALUMNI.

1862 TO 1871.

 In this Catalogue, the date immediately following the name refers to the year of graduation; the date immediately following the address refers to the time when the address was ascertained; the (?) which, in some instances, is placed before the address, signifies that the Alumnus has not been heard from definitely since his graduation, and that the address is the one given by him when in attendance at the college.

- Brownell, Russ B., 1864,
Deceased. Dr. Brownell was born in Sharon, Ct., 1838, and received a classical education in Marietta College, Ohio. He studied medicine with Dr. Weber, of Cincinnati, and, after graduation, served as House Surgeon in Bellevue Hospital until April, 1865. During the latter portion of his service he was Curator of the Museum.
In consequence of the development of pulmonary tuberculosis, he accepted an appointment as Surgeon to the steamship "Arago," and held this position for eighteen months, but without any apparent benefit to his health; on the contrary, his disease continued to advance, and, notwithstanding his condition was becoming worse, for the sake of a warmer climate, he joined a party of gentlemen intending to make the tour of Upper Egypt. During his passage up the Nile, he was seized with pulmonary hemorrhage, which caused his death in about ten minutes, January 27, 1867. His body was interred in the vaults of a convent, near Edfou, on the Nile.
He was twenty-nine years of age at the time of his death. The Medical Record contains a paper, on the "Treatment of Fistula in Ano by Compressed Sponge," written while he was aboard the "Arago."

Dr. Hamilton was the son of Prof. Hamilton, of this College. He was born at Rochester, N. Y., on the 24th of June, 1841, and underwent a thorough academic and collegiate training, receiving, in 1868, the honorary degree of A. B. from Union College. During the last year of his collegiate course, the war broke out, and he was among the earliest of those who enlisted in the Army of the United States. He was present at the first battle of Bull Run, and was soon afterward promoted to a First Lieutenantancy in the 16th N. Y. Vols., in which capacity he served until ill health obliged him to resign. Immediately after his graduation in medicine, he was appointed Acting Asst. Surg., U. S. Army, and placed on duty at the McDougall General Hospital. While there, an epidemic of hospital gangrene occurred, furnishing the materials for a paper which he wrote on this subject, and which was incorporated in his father's work on "Military Surgery." He died on the 18th of October, 1869, "full of promise and excellence," and loved by all who knew him.

Deceased. Dr. Rowe was born in New York on the 5th of September, 1841, and, after receiving a good primary education, entered a mercantile house. A professional life being, however, more suited to his tastes, he commenced the study of medicine with his brother-in-law Prof. James R. Wood, and, after passing an examination for his degree, entered Bellevue Hospital, as a member of the resident surgical staff on the 20th of September, 1863. He served with great credit until the end of the year, when having contracted typhus fever while nursing one of his associates on the staff, who was the cause of the disease, he died on the 12th of January 1864, his death being lamented by every one who had known him, either in private life or the practice of his profession.

- Southack, John W., 1865,
Deceased. Dr. Southack was born in New York, on the 21st of December, 1839. He graduated in Arts at Columbia College, in 1861, and the year following commenced the study of medicine with Prof. Wood. After receiving his professional degree, he served during 1864 and 1865 as House Surgeon in Bellevue Hospital, and during this time contracted a dissection-wound which resulted in the partial loss of the use of one of his fingers, and led to the formation of an axillary abscess. He suffered, at the same time, an attack of acute articular rheumatism, from which he made a tedious and but partial recovery, assisted, however, by a couple of months' travel in England. In 1866, he was appointed Curator to Bellevue Hospital, and Assistant Demonstrator of Anatomy in the College. At about the same time, he also became Clinical Assistant at the New York Eye Infirmary. He commenced practice in 1866, but during the succeeding year, was obliged to give it up, owing to an attack of hæmoptysis. Following this he went again to Europe, where he spent three months, with much benefit to his health, and, on his return, was appointed Attending Surgeon to the Bureau of Medical and Surgical Relief for Out-door Poor, Bellevue Hospital. In February, 1868, he was again obliged, on account of ill health, to go abroad. He studied in Virchow's laboratory, and with Stricker, in Vienna, and Recklinghausen, in Würzburg, and again returned to New York, in September, 1869. He inaugurated a course of practical pathology at Bellevue, and devoted the greater portion of his time to private teaching. In a few months, however, his health again failed, and he died on the 14th of December, 1869.

In 1864, he enlisted in the 6th Ohio Cavalry, and served until the end of the war, having risen to the position of lieutenant. He studied medicine with Dr. G. W. Bettis, of Randolph, Ohio, and after his graduation settled at Ravenna, Ohio. In the spring of 1869 he had an attack of pulmonary hæmorrhage. The loss of his health caused his removal to Clermont, Iowa, and, later, to his native town, where he died on the 80th of August, 1869.

Deceased. Dr. Stone was born at Newburyport, Mass., on the 23d of October, 1826. He graduated from Harvard University, in 1848. During the summer in which he graduated, he went as an assistant to Prof. Agassiz, on a survey of the shores of Lake Superior. In consequence of an attack of typhoid fever, he was obliged to abandon the expedition, and, to expedite his recovery, he undertook a voyage to Singapore, where he remained for two years, engaged in mercantile pursuits. He then returned to the United States, and settled in California. In 1859, he commenced the study of medicine at the Harvard Medical School, and afterward attended two courses of lectures at the Bellevue Hosp. Med. College. He graduated in 1863 and became House Phys. in Bellevue Hospital, serving until October, 1868. He next obtained the position of Acting Assistant Surgeon, United States Army, and was on duty in the Military Hospital in charge of Prof. Mott, on Lexington Avenue (now Nursery and Child's Hospital), and at the same time commenced practice in the city. After about a year, he moved to West Farms, N. Y. (1864), where he died, April 8, 1868, of double pneumonia, contracted from exposure during a midnight drive in a cold rain-storm to visit a patient.

The recapitulation by years includes the names of one graduate for 1864, and two graduates for 1865, who were known to have become irregular practitioners before the lists of graduates of those years were issued, and whose names have never been published as Alumni. It does not include the name of one person, who obtained a degree upon a forged certificate of study, but whose diploma was recovered by the Secretary of the Faculty.

At the end of the war, in 1865-'66, a large number of students, who had served in the army, completed their courses and graduated. The classes of all the prominent medical schools were exceptionally large for that year.
