STOICS, disciples of Zeno, the philosopher (about 290 B.C.) ; obtained the name because they listened to his instructions in a porch or portico at Athens, called in Greek Stoa. Zeno taught, that man's supreme happiness consisted in living agreeably to nature and reason, and that God was the soul of the world. Stanley.

STOKE, EAST (near Newark, Nottinghamshire). Near here, on 16 June, 1487, the adherents of Lambert Simnel, who personated Edward, earl of Warwick, and claimed the crown, were defeated by Henry VII. John De la Pole, the earl of Lincoln, and most of the leaders were slain ; and Simnel, whose life was spared, was afterwards employed in the king's household.

STONE. Stone buildings were introduced into England, 670. A stone bridge was built at Bow, in 1087, and is accounted the first ; but a bridge exists at Crowland, which is said to have been built in 860 ; see Bridges. The first stone building in Ireland was probably a round tower ; see Building. Stone china-ware was made by Wedgwood in 1762. Artificial stone for statues was manufactured by a Neapolitan, and introduced into England, 1776. Stone paper was made in 1776 ; see Ransom's Artificial Stone, and Lithotomy.

STONEHENGE (on Salisbury Plain, Wiltshire) is said to have been erected on the counsel of Merlin, by Aurelius Ambrosius, in memory of 460 Britons, who were murdered by Hengist the Saxon about 450. Geoffrey of Monmouth. Erected as a sepulchral monument of Ambrosius, 500. Polydore Vergil. An ancient temple of the Britons, in which the Druids officiated. Dr. Stukeley. The Britons had annual meetings at Abury and Stonehenge, where laws were made, justice administered, and heinous crimes punished.

STONEWALL BRIGADE, see United States, 1862, note.

STORMS, see Meteorology, and Cyclones. The following are among the most memorable:—

In London a storm raged which destroyed 1500 houses, 944.

In several parts of England, the sky being very dark, the wind coming from the S.W.; many churches were destroyed; and in London 500 houses fell, 5 Oct. 1091.

On the coast of Calais, when Hugh de Beauvais and several thousand foreigners, on their voyage to assist king John against the barons, perished, 1215. Holinshed.

It thundered 15 days successively, with tempests of rain and wind, 1233.

Storm with violent lightnings; one flash passed through a chamber where Edward I. and his queen were conversing, did them no damage, but killed two of their attendants, 1285. Hoveden.

Violent storm of hail near Chartres, in France, which fell on the army of Edward III. then on its march. The hail was so large that the army and horses suffered very much, and Edward was obliged to conclude a peace, 1339. Matt. Paris.

When Richard II.'s queen came from Bohemia, on her setting foot on shore an awful storm arose, and her ship and a number of others were dashed to pieces in the harbour, Jan. 1382. Holinshed.

Richard's second queen also brought a storm with her to the English coasts, in which the king's baggage was lost, and many ships cast away, 1396. Holinshed.

Hurricane throughout Europe, which did very considerable damage, on 3 Sept. 1658, the day that Cromwell died. Mortimer.

Storm on east coast of England: 200 colliers and coasters lost, with most of their crews, 1696.

The "Great Storm," one of the most terrible that ever raged in England. The devastation on land was immense; and in the harbours and on the coasts, the loss in shipping and in lives was still greater, 26-27 Nov. 1703. The loss sustained in London alone was calculated at 2,000,000. sterling. The number of persons drowned in the floods of the Severn and Thames, and lost on the coast of Holland, and in ships blown from their anchors and never heard of afterwards, is thought to have been 8000. Twelve men-of-war, with more than 1800 men on board, were lost within sight of their own shore. Trees were torn up by the roots, 17,000 of them in Kent alone. The Eddystone light-house was destroyed, and in it the ingenious contriver of it, Winstanley, and the persons who were with him. The bishop of Bath and Wells and his lady were killed in bed in their palace in Somersetshire. Multitudes of cattle were also lost: in one level 15,000 sheep were drowned.

Snow-storm in Sweden, when 7000 Swedes, it is said, perished upon the mountains, in their march to attack Dronheim, 1719.

One in India, when many hundreds of vessels were cast away, a fleet of Indiamen greatly damaged, and some ships lost, and 30,000 persons perished, 11 Oct. 1737.

Dreadful hurricane at the Havanah: many public edifices and 4048 houses were destroyed, and 1000 inhabitants perished, 25 Oct. 1768.

Awful storm in the north of England, in which many vessels were destroyed, and four Dublin packets foundered, 29 Oct. 1775.

One at Surat, in the East Indies; destroyed 7000 of the inhabitants, 22 April, 1782.

One hundred and thirty-one villages and farms laid waste in France, 1785.

One general throughout Great Britain: several hundred sail of shipping destroyed or damaged, 6 Oct. 1794.

One which did vast damage in London, and throughout almost the whole of England, 8 Nov. 1800.

A tremendous storm throughout Great Britain and Ireland, by which immense damage was done, and many ships wrecked, 16-17 Dec. 1814.

An awful gale, by which a great number of vessels were lost, and much damage was done to the shipping in general on the English coast, 31 Aug. 1816.

Dreadful hurricane, ravaged the Leeward Islands, from the 20th to 22nd Sept. 1819. At the island of St. Thomas alone, 104 vessels were lost.

Great storm along the coast from Durham to Cornwall; many vessels lost, Nov. 1821.

In Ireland, particularly in the vicinity of Dublin, many houses were thrown down, and vast numbers unroofed, 12 Dec. 1822.

Awful storm on the coast of England: many vessels lost, and 13 driven ashore and wrecked in Plymouth alone, 12-13 Jan. 1828.

At Gibraltar, where more than 100 vessels were destroyed, 18 Feb. 1828.

Dreadful storm at the Cape of Good Hope, where immense property was lost, 16 July, 1831.

A hurricane visited London and its neighbourhood, which did great damage to the buildings, but without the destruction of human life, though many serious accidents occurred, 28 Oct. 1838.

Awful hurricane on west coast of England, and in Ireland. The storm raged through Cheshire, Staffordshire, and Warwickshire; 20 persons were killed in Liverpool, by the falling of buildings, and 100 were drowned in the neighbourhood; the coast and harbours were covered with wrecks; the value of two of the vessels lost being nearly half-a-million sterling. In Limerick, Galway, Athlone, and other places, more than 200 houses were blown down, and as many more were burnt, the winds spreading the fires. Dublin suffered dreadfully; London and its neighbourhood scarcely sustained any damage, 6-7 Jan. 1839.

[The winter of 1852-3 (Dec. and Jan.) was one of storms, many of which were very destructive, particularly to shipping.]

Great storm in the Black Sea, 13-16 Nov. 1854, causing much loss of life, shipping, and stores sent for the allied armies in the Crimea.

Great storm on N. coast of Europe, &c., 31 Dec. 1854.

Great storm on N.E. coast of Scotland; 42 fishermen lost, 23 Nov. 1857.

Dreadful storm on the night 25-26 Oct.: the Royal Charter totally lost, and many other vessels; another storm, 31 Oct. and 1 Nov. 1859.

Great storm in the channel, causing much loss of life and property, 1 Jan. 1860.

Dreadful gales, doing much mischief, 26, 27, 28 Feb.; 28 May; and 2 June, 1860.

Great storm on British coasts, 143 wrecks, 28 May, 1861.

Storm on the north-east; 50 wrecks, 13-14 Nov. 1861.

At Market Laverton, &c.; hail six and seven feet deep; much damage to crops, 2 Sept. 1862. Storm on British coasts; very many wrecks, 19, 20 Oct. 1862. There were severe gales, doing much damage and loss of life, 19 Jan. &c. 1863; and 14 Jan. &c. 1865 (see under Wrecks).	Dreadful hurricane in the Indian Ocean, &c. STORTHING, the Norwegian parliament, said to have been first held at Bergen by Hacho V. in 1223.

STOVES. The ancients used stoves which concealed the fire, as the German stoves yet do. They lighted the fire also in a large tube in the middle of the room, the roof being open. Apartments were warmed by portable braziers. Stoves on this old principle, improved, continue in use in many houses and public establishments in England, and generally on the continent. Dr. Franklin and count Rumford pointed out the waste of fuel in our open fires; and Dr. Neil Arnott patented his "improvements in the production and agency of heat," 14 Nov. 1821; see Chimneys, and Cottage's Stove.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS, including Malacca, Penang or Prince of Wales island, and Singapore, were made a separate dependency of the British crown in 1853, and placed under the governor-general of India. They were separated from India, and constituted an independent settlement by an act passed 10 Aug. 1866, and took effect April, 1867. Governor, sir Harry St. George Ord, 1867.

STRALSUND (Pomerania), a strong fortified Hanse-town, built about 1230. It resisted a fierce siege by Wallenstein in 1628; it was taken by Frederick William, of Brandenburg, in 1678, restored to the Swedes, and re-captured by the Prussians and their allies, in 1715. It surrendered to the French under Brune, 20 Aug. 1807; but in 1815 was awarded to Prussia.

STRAND (London). Houses were first built upon the Strand about 1353, at which period it was the court end of the town, or formed the communication between the two cities of London and Westminster, being then open to the Thames and to the fields. Somerset and other palaces were erected 1549-1605. Stow. The Strand bridge was commenced 11 Oct. 1811; see Waterloo Bridge. The Strand improvements were commenced in 1829.

STRASBURG, the Roman Argentoratum, the capital of Alsace. Here Julian defeated the Allemanni, 357. This town, formerly Imperial, was taken by Louis XIV. in 1681. The citadel and fortifications, which he constructed, have been so much augmented, that Strasburg may be considered one of the strongest places in Europe. It was confirmed to France by the peace of Ryswick in 1697. Strasburg is remarkable for its magnificent cathedral and lofty tower. An attempt at insurrection in the city was made 30 Oct. 1836, by prince Louis Napoleon (afterwards president of the French republic, and now emperor), aided by two officers and some privates. It was instantly suppressed by their arrest. The prince was then shipped off to America by the French government; see France.

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON (Warwickshire), see Shakespeare.

STRATHCLUYD, a kingdom formed by the Britons, who retired northward after the Saxon conquest, about 560. It extended from the Clyde to Cumberland. The Britons in it submitted to Edward the Elder, in 924.

STRATHFIELD-SAYE, a parish partly in Berkshire and Hampshire, in which is situate the estate bought of lord Rivers by the nation for 263,000*l.*, and presented to the duke of Wellington, 1817. An act to provide a suitable residence for his grace and his heirs was passed 11 July, 1815.

STRATHMORE ESTATES. Miss Bowes, of Durham, the then richest heiress in Europe, whose fortune was 1,040,000*l.* with vast additions on her mother's death, and immense estates on the demise of her uncle, married the earl of Strathmore, 25 Feb. 1766. Having, after the earl's death, married Mr. Stoney, she was forcibly carried off by him and other armed men, 10 Nov. 1786. She was brought up to the King's Bench by habeas corpus and released, and he committed to prison, 23 Nov. The lady recovered her estates, which she had assigned to her husband under the influence of terror, in May, 1788.

STRATTON-HILL, BATTLE OF, in Cornwall, 16 May, 1643, between the royal army under sir Ralph Hopton, and the forces of the parliament under the earl of Stamford. The victory was gained over the parliamentarians, who lost numbers in killed and wounded.

STRAWBERRY, see Fruits.

STRAWBERRY-HILL, the Gothic villa of Horace Walpole, erected by him, 1753-76, at Twickenham, near London. In April and May, 1842, his collection of pictures, and articles of taste and virtue, were sold by auction for 29,615*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

STREET-MUSIC. An act was passed in 1864 for the better regulation of street-music in the metropolitan police districts.

STREET RAILWAYS, previously established by Mr. Train in New York, were opened by him at Birkenhead, Cheshire, 30 Aug. 1860, and at Bayswater, London, 23 March, 1861; see Ireland, 1868. A street railway bill was rejected by the house of commons in April, 1861. Several of these railways existed for a time in various parts of the metropolis in 1861, but were all taken up in 1862.

STRELITZ, the imperial guard of Russia, established by Ivan IV. about 1568. Becoming frequently seditious, it was suppressed by Peter the Great; great numbers were put to death, many by the czar's own hand, 1697-1704.

STRIKES, see Preston, and London, 1859-61.

The tailors of London struck for increase of wages in . . . April, 1834

The strike of the calico-printers of Glasgow, lasted nine months in . . . "

See Trials, Aug. 1867.

STRONTIUM. The native carbonate of strontia was discovered at Strontian, in Argyleshire, in 1787. Sir Humphry Davy first obtained from it the metal strontium in 1808.

STRYCHNIA, a poisonous vegetable alkaloid, discovered in 1818 by Pelletier and Cavantou in the seeds of the strychnos Ignatia and nux vomica, and also in the upas poison. It is so virulent that half a grain blown into the throat of a rabbit occasions death in four minutes; its operation is accompanied by lock-jaw. Much attention was given to strychnia in 1856, during the trial of William Palmer, who was executed for the murder of Cook, 14 June, 1856.

STUART, HOUSE OF, see Scotland, p. 659, and England, p. 276.

STUCCO-WORK was known to the ancients, and was much prized by them, particularly by the Romans, who excelled in it. Abbé Lenglet. It was revived by D'Udine, about 1550; and in Italy, France, and England in the 18th century.

STUHM (W. Prussia). Here Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden defeated the Poles, 1628.

STUTTGART (Wurtemberg), first mentioned in 1229, was made his residence by count Eberhard, 1320; enlarged by Ulric, 1436; and made capital of the state, 1482. It has been greatly adorned during the last and present centuries.

STYLE. The style was altered by Augustus Cæsar's ordering leap-year to be once in four years, and the month Sextilis to be called Augustus, 8 B.C.; see New Style.

STYLE ROYAL, see Majesty, and Titles. The styles of the English sovereigns are given in the later editions of Nicolas's "Chronology of History."

STYLITES, see Monachism.

STYRIA (Austria), part of the ancient Noricum and Pannonia, was held successively by the Romans, Ostragoths, and Avars. It was conquered by Charlemagne, and divided among his followers, styled counts, among whom the count of Styria, about 876, was the most powerful. The count became margrave about 1030; and Ottocar VI., in 1180, was made duke. At his death, 1192, Styria was annexed to the duchy of Austria. In 1246 it was acquired by Bela IV. of Hungary; in 1253 by Ottocar II. of Bohemia; after whose defeat and death, at Marchfeld, in 1278, it reverted to Rudolph of Austria, and was annexed to his possessions.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH, see Telegraph (under Electricity).

SUBSIDIES to the kings of England were formerly granted in kind, particularly in wool; 30,000 sacks were voted to Edward III. on account of the war with France, 1340. Anderson. Subsidies were raised upon the subjects of England by James I. 1624; but they were contained in a bill for the redress of grievances, 1639. Four subsidies were granted to Charles II. in 1663.*

SUCCESSION ACTS, see Settlement.

SUCCESSION, WAR OF (1702-1713), distinguished by the achievements of the duke of

* England granted subsidies to foreign powers in several wars, particularly in the war against the revolutionists of France, and against Bonaparte.

Marlborough and the earl of Peterborough, and their unprofitable results, arose on the question whether an Austrian prince or a French prince should succeed to the throne of Spain. The British court opposed Louis, and Marlborough was victorious; but the allies withdrew one after another, and the French prince succeeded; see Spain, and Utrecht.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51), after much discussion, was passed 4 Aug. 1853. By this act the legacy duty was extended to real estate, and was made payable on succession to both landed and personal property.

SUDBURY, in Suffolk, was disfranchised for bribery in 1844.

SUEVI, a warlike Gothic tribe, which with the Alani and the Visigoths, entered Spain about 408, were overcome by the latter, and absorbed into their kingdom about 584.

SUEZ CANAL. A plan for a canal between the head of the Red Sea and the bay of Pelusium was brought forward by M. de Lesseps in 1852. He undertook to cut a canal through 90 miles of sand, to run out moles into the Mediterranean; to deepen the shallow waters; to create ports to receive the ships from India and Australia, and to adapt the canal to irrigation. The consent of the Egyptian, Turkish, Russian, French, and Austrian governments was gradually obtained, but not that of the British. A company has been formed for the purpose, and the work commenced in 1858. The cost was estimated at 8,000,000*l.*

M. Delacour, a French engineer, after viewing the works which were "employing 25,000 men in the desert," expressed his conviction that this important work will be completed in four or five years . . . 7 Nov. 1862
 The waters of the Mediterranean have been admitted into a narrow channel communicating with Lake Timsah; a very insignificant part of the work . . . Dec. "
 The works were visited by the sultan and by Mr. Hawkshaw . . . 1863
 The company compelled by the Egyptian government to give up the employment of compulsory labour, and litigation ensued . . . Aug. "
 M. de Lesseps reported that a vessel containing 30 persons had been tugged along the canal the whole distance between the two seas . . . Feb. 1865

 Delegates from the British chambers of commerce visited the works, and reported that the success of the scheme was only an affair of time and money . . . 17 April, "
 The flood gates of the smaller Suez canal were opened, the fresh water of the Nile admitted; a coal vessel passed from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea . . . 15 Aug. "
 The Primo, 80 tons burden, passed through the canal from the Mediterranean into the Red Sea . . . 17 Feb. 1867
 A loan raised in France . . . "
 M. de Lesseps expects the larger canal for ships will be ready in . . . 1868

SUFFRAGAN BISHOPS. Power to appoint them was given by parliament in 1534 to Henry VIII. as head of the church; see Supremacy.

SUGAR.* (Saccharum officinarum) is supposed to have been known to the ancient Jews. Found in the East Indies by Nearchus, admiral of Alexander, 325 B.C. Strabo. An oriental nation in alliance with Pompey used the juice of the cane as a common beverage. Lucan. The best sugar was produced in India. Pliny. It was prescribed as a medicine by Galen. Brought into Europe from Asia, A.D. 625. In large quantities, 1150. It was attempted to be cultivated in Italy; but not succeeding, the Portuguese and Spaniards carried it to America about 1510.† Our chief importations of sugar are from the British West Indies, the East Indies, Mauritius, and Brazil. Sugar was first taxed by name, 1 James II. 1685. The previous customs duties upon sugar were repealed, and moderated duties substituted, by the act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 63, passed 18 Aug. 1846, by which act the same duties were levied upon the sugar of foreign countries as levied upon sugar the produce of British colonies: annually reduced until 5 July, 1851. The importations of sugar have in consequence considerably increased, and amounted in 1852 to upwards of 8,000,000 cwts., paying a duty exceeding 4,000,000*l.* sterling. Raw sugar imported in 1854, 9,112,364 cwts.; 1860, 8,817,277 cwts.; 1866, 10,639,085 cwts.‡ In 1855, the duty was increased; reduced in 1864; modified in 1867. Sugar was extracted from beet-root in France, by Achard, in 1799, and has been since largely manufactured.

* Sugar, long considered a neutral substance, without congeners, has of late years become the head of a numerous family, viz.: Cane-sugar (sucrose, from the sugar-cane; boiled with dilute acids it yields glucose); fruit-sugar (from many recent fruits); grape-sugar (glucose; from dried fruits and altered starch); sugar of milk; Melitose (from eucalyptus, by Berthelot in 1856); sorbin (from the berries of the mountain ash, by Pelouze); inosite (from muscular tissue, Scherer); dulcose (by Laurent); mannite (from manna, obtained from the fraxinus ornus, a kind of ash); quercite (from acorns); to these have been lately added mycose, by M. Mitscherlich, and mellezotose and trehalose, by M. Berthelot.

† About the year 1138 the sugar-cane was transported from Tripoli and Syria to Sicily, thence to Madeira, and finally to the West Indies and America. It is not known at what date sugar was introduced into England, but it seems to have been prior to the reign of Henry VIII. Mr. Whittaker, in the History of Whalley, p. 109, quotes an earlier instance in 1497. A manuscript letter from sir Edward Wotton to lord Cobham, dated Calais, 6 March, 1546, advertises him that sir Edward had taken up for his lordship twenty-five sugar-leaves at six shillings a loaf, "whiche is eight pence a pounce."

‡ In 1840, the imports of sugar into the United Kingdom were nearly 5,000,000 cwts., of which nearly four millions were for home consumption: and the duty amounted to about five millions and a half sterling. In 1850, the imports were 8,285,734 cwts. and the reduced duty amounted to 4,138,951*l.*; in 1853,

SUGAR-REFINING was made known to Europeans by a Venetian, 1503, and was first practised in England in 1659, though some say that we had the art a few years earlier. Dr. Coffern's processes were patented in 1848-50.

SUICIDE (from sui, self: cadere, to kill), the slayer of himself. The first instances recorded in Jewish history are those of Samson, about 1120, and Saul, 1055 B.C. The Greek and Roman philosophers deemed it a crime, and burned the offending hand apart from the rest of the body. In the early part of the Roman history, the only instance recorded occurs in the reign of Tarquin I., when the soldiers, thinking themselves disgraced by being ordered to make common sewers, destroyed themselves, 606 B.C. Instances afterwards occurred, however, of illustrious men committing suicide, as Cato, 46 B.C.* In the Roman catholic church, in the 6th century, it was ordained that no commemoration should be made in the Eucharist for such as committed self-murder. This ecclesiastical law continued till the Reformation, when it was admitted into the statute law of England by the authority of parliament, with the confiscation of land and goods. Till 1823 the body of the suicide was directed to be buried in a cross-road, and a stake to be driven through it.

SUITORS' FUND (in the Court of Chancery), in 1862 amounted to 1,290,000l. As this money has no specific owner, a proposal was made by government to apply it to the building of new law-courts, payment of all legal claims being guaranteed, which was directed by the "Courts of Laws Fees" act, passed 20 Aug. 1867.

SULPHUR has been known from the earliest times. Basil Valentine mentions its production from green vitriol. Sulphuric acid (vitriol), produced from the burning of sulphur, 7,272,833 cwts. were retained for home consumption; duty, 4,083,836l.; in 1859, 8,641,920 cwts. were retained for home consumption; duty, 5,935,909l.; in 1864, 8,927,798 cwts. were retained.

* There have been three instances of self-destruction by fire; that of the philosopher Empedocles, who threw himself into the crater of Mount Etna; of a Frenchman, who, in imitation of him, threw himself, in 1820, into the crater of Vesuvius; and of an Englishman, who jumped into the furnace of a forge about the year 1811. Plutarch relates that an unaccountable passion for suicide seized the Milesian virgins, from which they could not be prevented by the tears and prayers of their friends; but a decree being issued that the body of every young maid who did self-murder should be drawn naked through the streets, a stop was soon put to the extraordinary frenzy.

was introduced into England about 1720. Sulphur has been the object of research of many eminent chemists during the present century, and many discoveries have been made, such as its allotropic condition, &c. It is the inflammable constituent in gunpowder.—The sulphur mines of Sicily have been wrought since the 16th century, but the exportation was inconsiderable till about 1820; in 1838 the trade increased so much that Great Britain alone imported 38,654 tons. In that year the Neapolitan government was induced to grant a monopoly of the trade to a French company; but a firm remonstrance from the British government led to a discontinuance of this impolitic restriction in 1841, which, however gave a great and lasting impetus to the British sulphur manufacture.

SULTAN, a Turkish title, from the Arabic, signifying king of kings, and given to the grand signior or emperor of Turkey. It was first given to the Turkish princes, Angrolipez and Musgad, about 1055. Vattier. It was first given, according to others, to the emperor Mahmud, in the 4th century of the Hegira.

SUMATRA, an island in the Indian ocean, called Java Minor by Marco Polo, and visited by Nicoli di Conti prior to 1449. Mainly on account of the pepper trade, the Dutch formed a settlement at Padang about 1649, and the British at Bencoolen about 1685. The Dutch possessions with Java were acquired by the British in 1811; but were restored in 1816. In 1824 the Dutch acquired all the British settlements in Sumatra, in exchange for Malacca and some possessions in India.

SUMPTUARY LAWS restrain excess in dress, furniture, eating, &c. The laws of Lycurgus were severe against luxury about 844 B.C. Those of Zaleucus ordained that no woman should go attended by more than one maid in the street, unless she were drunk; and that she should not wear gold or embroidered apparel, unless she designed to act unchastely, 450 B.C. Diog. Laert. The Lex Orchia among the Romans (181 B.C.), limited the guests at feasts, and the number and quality of the dishes at an entertainment; and it also enforced that during supper, which was the chief meal among the Romans, the doors of every house should be left open. The English sumptuary laws, chiefly of the reigns of Edward III. and Henry VIII., were repealed in 1856; see Dress.

SUN. * Pythagoras taught that the sun was one of the twelve spheres, about 529 B.C. The relative distances of the sun and moon were first calculated geometrically by Aristarchus, who also maintained the stability of the sun, about 280 B.C. Numerous theories were ventured during fifteen centuries, and astronomy lay neglected till about A.D. 1200, when it was brought into Europe by the Moors of Barbary and Spain. The Copernican system was made known in 1530; see Copernican System, and Solar System. Galileo and Newton maintained that the sun was an igneous globe. The transit of Mercury was observed by Gassendi.

By the observations of Dr. Halley on the spot which darkened the sun's disc in July and August, 1676, he established the certainty of its motion round its own axis.

Parallax of the sun, Dr. Halley 1702

Solar spots were first observed by Fabricius and Harriot in 1610. A macula three times the size of the earth passed the sun's centre, 21 April, 1766, and frequently since.

Herschel measured two spots, whose length together exceeded 50,000 miles 19 April, 1779

Since 1851 much attention has been given to the luminous protuberances observed on the edge of the sun's disc during a total eclipse. Mr. Warren De la Rue took two photographs at the time of total obscuration 18 July, 1860
Mr. James Nasmyth discovers the lenticular-shaped objects on the sun (termed by him "willow-leaves," by Stone "rice-grains") 28 Aug. "

SUNDAY or LORD'S DAY. Most nations have counted one day in seven holy. Sunday was the day on which, anciently, divine adoration was paid to the Sun. Among Christians it is commonly called Dies Dominica, or Lord's day, on account of our Saviour's appearance on that day, after his resurrection. The first civil law that was issued for the observance of this day, combined it with that of the seventh-day Sabbath and other festivals (Eusebius, Life of Constantine), and it was followed by several imperial edicts in favour of this day, which are extant in the body of Roman law, the earliest being that of Constantine the

* The estimated diameter is 882,000 miles, and the distance from the earth, till lately given as 95,000,000 miles, has been recently corrected to 94,000,000, by the result of the experiments and calculations of N. M. Fizeau and Foucault (1864). "The error corrected corresponds to the apparent breadth of a human hair at 125 feet, or of a sovereign at 8 miles off." Herschel. The sun is now described as consisting of a solid or liquid nucleus, surrounded by a luminous envelope (photosphere) over which is a dense atmosphere, containing the vapours of various metals and other elements (1865); see Spectrum.

SUPPER, see Lord's Supper.

SUPREMACY over the church was claimed by Pope Gelasius I. as bishop of Rome, 494. On 15 Jan. 1535, Henry VIII. by virtue of the act 26 Hen. VIII. c. 1, formally assumed the style of "on earth Supreme Head of the Church of England," which has been retained by all succeeding sovereigns. The bishop of Rochester (Fisher) and the ex-lord chancellor (sir Thomas More), and many others were beheaded for denying the king's supremacy in 1535; and in 1578, John Nelson, a priest, and Thomas Sherwood, a young layman, were executed at Tyburn for the same offence.

SURAT (E. Indies). Before the English East India Company obtained possession of Bombay, the presidency of their affairs on the coast of Malabar was at Surat; and they had a factory here established under captain Best in 1611. The Great Mogul had here an officer who was styled his admiral. An attack of the Mahratta chief Sivajee, on the British factory, was defeated by sir George Oxenden, 1664. The English were again attacked in 1670, and 1702, and often subsequently. The East India Company, in 1759, fitted out an armament, which dispossessed the admiral of the castle; and, soon after, the possession of this castle was confirmed to them by the court of Delhi. Surat was vested in the British by treaty in 1800 and 1803.

SURGEONS, ROYAL COLLEGE OF. The first charter was granted by Henry VIII. 1540. Formerly barbers and surgeons were united, until it was enacted that "no person using any shaving or barbering in London shall occupy any surgery, letting of blood, or other matter excepting only the drawing of teeth." The college obtained charters in 1745, 1800, and 1843 (when it was styled the "Royal College of Surgeons of England"), 1852, and 1859. Since that period, various legislative and other important regulations have been adopted to promote their utility and respectability; and no person is legally entitled to practise as a surgeon in the cities of London and Westminster, or within seven miles of the former, who has not been examined at this college. The college in Lincoln's-inn-Fields was re-modelled in 1836, and the interior completed in 1837. The premises were enlarged in 1852-3. The museum began with the Hunterian collection, 1800; and the library was founded in 1801; see Medical Council.

SURGERY. It was not until the age of Hippocrates that diseases were made a separate study from philosophy, &c., about 410 B.C. Hippocrates mentions the ambr, the ancient instrument with which they reduced dislocated bones. Celsus flourished about A.D. 17; Galen, 170; Ætius, 500; Paulus Ægineta, in 640. The Arabians revived surgery about 900; and in the 16th century a new era in the science began; between these periods surgery was confined to ignorant priests and barbers. Anatomy was cultivated under the illustrious Vesalius, the father of modern surgery, in 1538. Surgeons and doctors were exempted from bearing arms or serving on juries, 1513, at which period there were only thirteen in London; see Physic.

SURINAM (Dutch Guiana). The factories established by the English in 1640 were occupied by the Portuguese, 1643; by the Dutch, 1654; taken by the British, 1804; and restored to the Dutch, 1814.

SURNAMES first began in the East. Jacob was named Israel, 1739 B.C. Gen. xxxii. 29. Surnames were introduced into England by the Normans, and were adopted by the nobility about 1100. The old Normans used Fitz, which signifies son, as Fitz-herbert. The Irish used O, for grandson, as O'Neal, O'Donnell. The Scottish Highlanders used Mac, as Macdonald, son of Donald. The Saxons added the word son to the father's name, as Williamson. Many of the most common surnames, such as Johnson, Wilson, Dyson, Nicholson, &c., were taken by Brabanters and other Flemings, who were naturalised in the reign of Henry VI., 1435. M. A. Lower's "Dictionary of English Surnames" was published in 1860.

SURPLICES were first worn by the Jewish priests, and are said to have been first used in churches, 316, and encouraged by pope Adrian, 786. "Every minister saying public prayers shall wear a comely surplice with sleeves," Canon 58. The garb prescribed by stat. 2 Edw. VI. 1547; again, 1 Eliz. 1558; and 13 & 14 Chas. II. 1662; see Ritualism.

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS (near London) were established in 1831, by Mr. Edward Cross, who brought hither the menagerie formerly at Exeter change. Various picture models have been exhibited here since 1837, viz. Vesuvius, Iceland, &c., accompanied by fireworks. In 1856, a company which had taken the gardens, erected a large yet elegant building for concerts; the architect being Mr. Horace Jones. On 19 Oct. 1856, when the hall contained about 9000 persons, attending to hear the rev. C. H. Spurgeon, seven were killed and thirty seriously injured, by a false alarm of fire. In 1862 the hall was temporarily taken for the reception of the patients of St. Thomas's hospital.

SURVEY, see Ordnance.

SUSPENDING POWER, see Dispensing Power.

SUSPENSION BRIDGES are ancient in China. The Hungerford (or Charing Cross) suspension bridge, opened May 1, 1845, was removed to Clifton and opened there, 8 Dec. 1864. Parliament empowered the commissioners of woods to erect (among other improvements there) a suspension bridge at Battersea, Sept. 1846; and many bridges of similar construction have been erected in various parts of the kingdom. Lambeth and Westminster suspension bridge was opened 10 Nov. 1862; see Menai Strait, Hungerford, Clifton, &c.

SUSPENSORY BILL, the name given to "a bill to prevent for a limited time [to 1 Aug. 1869] new appointments in the church of Ireland; and to restrain, for the same period, in certain respects, the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland." This bill was introduced into the commons by Mr. Gladstone, 14 May, and passed through committee, 5 June, 1868.

SUSSEX, see Britain.

SUTLEJ, a river in N.-W. India, on the banks of which were fought the desperate battles of Aliwal, 28 Jan., and Sobraon, 10 Feb. 1846 (which see).

SUTTEES, the burning of widows. This custom began in India from one of the wives of "Bramah, the Son of God," sacrificing herself at his death, that she might attend him in heaven. Seventeen widows have burnt themselves on the funeral pile of a rajah; and in Bengal alone, 700 have thus perished in a year. The English government, after long discouraging suttees, formally abolished them, Dec. 1829; but they have since occasionally taken place. The wife of the son of the rajah of Beygoon thus perished, June, 1864.

SWABIA, a province in S. Germany; was conquered by Clovis, and incorporated into the kingdom of the Franks, 496. After various changes of rulers, it was made a duchy by the emperor Conrad I., in 912, for Erchanger; according to some, in 916, for Burckhardt. The duchy became hereditary in the house of Hohenstaufen in 1080. Duke Frederic III. became emperor of Germany as Frederic I. (usually styled Barbarossa, red beard), in 1152. Conradin, his descendant, was defeated at the battle of Tagliacozzo (which see), in 1268, and beheaded shortly after. The breaking up of the duchy gave rise to many of the small German states; part of Swabia is included in Wurtemberg and Switzerland. Swabia was made a circle of the empire in 1387 and 1500. A league, composed of Swabian cities and states, about 1254, was the germ of the great Swabian league, formed for the preservation of the peace of Germany, under the auspices of the emperor Frederic, in 1488.

SWAN RIVER SETTLEMENT, see Western Australia.

SWEABORG, a strong fortress in Finland, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Helsingfors; it is situated on seven rocky islands; the fortifications were commenced by the Swedes in 1748, and were not completed in 1789, when Finland was united to Russia, by whose government the works were zealously continued. It is termed the Gibraltar of the north. On 6 Aug. 1855, the English and a part of the French fleet anchored off Sweaborg, and bombarded it by mortar and gun-boats from the 9th to the 11th, causing the destruction of nearly all the principal buildings, including the dockyard and arsenal. But few casualties and no loss of life ensued in the allied squadron. Success could not be pursued for want of mortars.

SWEARING ON THE GOSPELS, first used about 528, and introduced in judicial proceedings about 600. Rapin.—PROFANE SWEARING made punishable by fine; a labourer or servant forfeiting 1s., others 2s. for the first offence; for the second offence, 4s.; the third offence, 6s.; 6 Will. III. 1695; see Oaths.

SWEATING SICKNESS, see Plague.

SWEDEN (N. Europe). The ancient inhabitants were the Fins, now the modern inhabitants of Finland; a diminutive race, who retired to their present territory on the appearance of the Scandinavians or Goths, who have ever since been masters of Sweden; see Scandinavia. The internal state of this kingdom is little known previously to the 11th century. By the union of Calmar in 1397, Sweden became a province of Denmark, and was not wholly rescued from this subjection till 1521, when Gustavus Vasa recovered the kingdom from the Danish yoke. He became king in 1523, and his descendants ruled till 1809. The government of Sweden is a limited monarchy. The diet consists of four orders, the nobles, the clergy, the peasants, and the burghers, and meet every three years (last time, 15 Oct. 1865). The king is, as in Britain, the head of the executive. There are two universities, Upsal and Lund; and Sweden can boast, among its great men, Linnæus, Celsus, Scheele, Bergman, Berzelius, Thorwaldsen, and Andersen. Population (1866) of Sweden, 4,160,677; of Norway, 1,701,478.

SWEDENBORGIANS, call themselves "the New Church," or "the New Jerusalem Church;" * and hold the opinions of baron Emanuel Swedenborg (born at Stockholm, 1688; died at London, 1772). He stated that he began to receive spiritual manifestations, &c., in 1745, of which an account is given in his numerous works. The sect arose about 1760, and began to spread in 1783 in England, where there were 50 congregations in 1851.

SWEET-BAY, Laurus nobilis, was brought to these realms from Italy before 1548. Laurus indica, or Royal Bay, was brought from Madeira in 1665. The Sweet-Fern bush, Complonia asplenifolia, came from America, 1714. Laurus aggregata, or the Glaucous Laurel, came from China in 1806.

SWING. Between 1830 and 1833 many haystacks and barns were fired in the rural districts of England, and attributed to an imaginary person named "Swing." Many persons were caught and punished. The probable cause was disputes between the farmers and their deluded labourers.

SWITHIN'S DAY, ST., 15 July. St. Swithin lived in the 9th century; and, having been the preceptor to king Ethelwulf, was made bishop of Winchester in 852. The tradition, that if it rain upon this day, it will rain forty days following, is supposed to have a shadow of reason only from the circumstance of some constellations, which have the character of portending rain, rising cosmically about the time of St. Swithin's festival.

* They do not receive the usual doctrine of the Trinity, but believe that the three persons are one in Christ; they reject the doctrine of justification by faith alone, and the imputed righteousness of Christ, and hold that salvation cannot be obtained except by faith and good works. They accept baptism and the Lord's Supper, and use a liturgy and hymns.

SWITZERLAND, the ancient Helvetia, was conquered by the Romans, 15 B.C.; and afterwards was successively subject to the Burgundians and Germans. Franks also settled here in the early ages. The canton of Schweiz was peopled by the Cimbrians, who, leaving their original habitation in Scandinavia, invaded Italy, and were defeated by the Roman general Marius; after which they fled into Helvetia, about 100 B.C. This canton has given name to the whole confederacy.—The present national council is elected every third year, at the rate of one member for 2000 persons.—Population (Dec. 1860) 2,510,494.

SWORDS were formed of iron taken from a mountain by the Chinese, 1879 B.C. Univ. Hist. The Roman swords were from 20 to 30 inches long. The broadsword and scimitar are of modern adoption. The sword of state carried at an English king's coronation by a king of Scotland, 1194. Damascus steel swords are most prized; the next the sword of Ferrara steel. The Scotch Highlanders were accustomed to procure the latter from the celebrated artificer named Andrea di Ferrara, and used to call them their Andrew Ferraras. The broadsword was forbidden to be worn in Edinburgh in 1724.

SYBARIS, a Greek colony in S. Italy, founded about 720 B.C.; destroyed by the Crotonians about 510 B.C. The people were greatly addicted to luxury, hence the term Sybarite.

SYCAMORE TREE, called the Egyptian fig-tree. In Mrs. Jameson's "Memoirs of Female Sovereigns," we are told that Mary queen of Scots brought over from France a little sycamore tree, which she planted in the gardens at Holyrood, and that from this have sprung all the beautiful groves of sycamore now to be seen in Scotland.

SYDNEY, capital of New South Wales; founded by governor Phillip, on a cove on Port Jackson, 26 Jan. 1788, as a British settlement for the colony of convicts originally intended for Botany bay. It was named after lord Sydney, secretary for the colonies. A legislative council was first held, 13 July, 1829; the university opened, 11 Oct. 1852. Sydney was erected into a bishopric in 1836; afterwards into an archbishopric. It was lit with gas in May, 1841, the first place so lit in Australia. The Roman Catholic cathedral burnt, and valuable property destroyed, 29 June, 1865. It was visited by the duke of Edinburgh, Feb. 1868; and, at Port Jackson, he narrowly escaped assassination; O'Farrell, a Fenian, who shot him in the back on 12 March, was convicted on 31 March, and executed 21 April following. The duke sailed for England on 4 April. See Australia, New South Wales, Convicts, &c.

SYMPIESOMETER, a species of barometer invented by Adie of Edinburgh in 1819.

SYNAGOGUE (literally an assembly), a congregation of the Jews, and the place where such assembly is held for religious purposes. When these meetings were first held is uncertain; some refer them to the times after the Babylonish captivity. In Jerusalem were 480 synagogues. In 1851 there were in London 10 synagogues, in England and Wales, 53. A magnificent synagogue was consecrated at Berlin, 5 Sept. 1866.

SYNOD. The first general synods were called by emperors, and afterwards by Christian princes; but the pope ultimately usurped this power, one of his legates usually presiding; see Councils. The first national synod held in England was at Hertford, 673; the last was held by cardinal Pole in 1555. Made unlawful to hold synods but by royal authority, 25 Hen. VIII. 1533; see Dort, and Thurles.

TABERNACLE, the Holy Place of the Israelites, till the erection of Solomon's temple, was constructed by Divine direction, 1491 B.C. When the Jews were settled in Canaan, the tabernacle was set up at Shiloh by Joshua, 1444 B.C. It was replaced by the temple erected by Solomon, 1004 B.C.—The chapel erected for George Whitefield in Moorfields in 1741, being of a temporary nature, received the name of Tabernacle, which was afterwards given to their chapels by the Calvinistic Methodists. Whitefield's Tabernacle in Tottenham-court-road was erected in 1756, and enlarged in 1760. His lease expired in 1828; and the chapel was opened by the Independents in 1830. A large metropolitan tabernacle, erected for the ministrations of Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, a Baptist, near the "Elephant and Castle," Kennington-road, Surrey, was opened on 31 March, 1861.

TABLES, see Decemvirs.

TABLE TURNING. This delusion, which came from America, and was popular in 1853, was attributed by Faraday and others to mechanical action.

TABOR, in Bohemia, was founded by Ziska in 1420, and became the chief seat of the Hussites; see Hussites.

TADMOR, see Palmyna.

TAEPIINGS, see China, 1851, note.

TAFFETY, an early species of silken manufacture, more prized formerly than now, woven very smooth and glossy. It was worn by our elder queens, and was first made in England by John Tyce, of Shoreditch, London, 41 Eliz. 1598. Stow's Chron.

TAGLIACOZZO, in the Abruzzi mountains, S. Italy, where, on 23 Aug., 1268, Charles of Anjou, the usurping king of Naples, defeated and made prisoner the rightful monarch, young Conradin (the last of the Hohenstaufens, and grandson of the emperor Frederic II.), who had been invited into Italy by the Ghibelline or Imperial party; their opponents, the Guelfs, or papal party, supporting Charles. Conradin was beheaded, 29 Oct. following.

TAGLIAMENTO, a river in Lombardy, N. Italy, near which the Austrians, under the archduke Charles, were defeated by Bonaparte, 16 March, 1797.

TAHERITES, a dynasty of Persia, 813-872.

TAHITI. The French abbreviated name for Otaheite; see Otaheite.

TAILLEBOURG (W. France). Near here Henry III. of England was defeated and nearly captured by Louis IX. of France, 20 July, 1242.

TALAVERA DE LA REYNA (central Spain), was taken from the Mahometans by Ordoño, king of Leon, 913. Here a battle was fought 27, 28 July, 1809, between the united British and Spanish armies under sir Arthur Wellesley (19,000 British and 30,000 Spaniards), and the French army (47,000) commanded by marshals Victor and Sebastiani. After a conflict on the 27th, both armies remained on the field during the night, and the French at break of day renewed the attack, and were again repulsed by the British with great slaughter. At noon Victor charged the whole British line, was repulsed at all points, and retreated with a loss of 10,000 men and 20 pieces of cannon. The British lost 800 killed, and 4000 wounded or missing; and as Soult, Ney, and Mortier were in the rear, retired after the victory.

TALBOTYPE, see Photography.

TALLY OFFICE in the Exchequer took its name from the French word tallier, to cut. A tally is a piece of wood written upon both sides, containing an acquittance for money received; which, being cloven asunder by an officer of the exchequer, one part, called the stock, was delivered to the person who paid, or lent, money to the government; and the other part, called the counter-stock, or counter-foil, remained in the office, to be kept till called for, and joined with the stock. This manner of striking tallies is very ancient. Beatson. The practice was ordered to be discontinued in 1782. On 16 Oct. 1834, the houses of parliament were burnt down by too many of these tallies being used in heating the stoves in the house of lords; see Exchequer.

TALMUD. The ancient Jewish oral or unwritten law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch or written law; its origin is coeval with the return from the Babylonish captivity, 536

B.C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the Scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B.C. It is composed in prose and poetry, and contains two elements, legal and legendary; divided into the Mischnah and the Gemara. After being almost universally condemned, and the MSS. often burnt, its defence was mainly undertaken by the German reformer Reuchlin, in the 16th century, and between 1520 and 1523, the "Talmud Babylonicum," in 12 vols. fol., and the "Talmud Hierosolytanum," in 1 vol. fol., were printed at Venice. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy is rather Platonic than Aristotelian. A discourse on the Talmud was given at the Royal Institution, 15 May, 1868, by Mr. Emanuel Deutsch, whose article in the "Quarterly Review," Oct. 1867, had attracted much attention.

TANAGRA (Bœotia). Here the Spartans defeated the Athenians 457 B.C., but were defeated by them in 426, when Agis II. headed the Spartans, and Nicias the Athenians.

TANDY ARREST. James Napper Tandy proposed a plan of reform in 1791. In the French expedition against Ireland he acted as a general, Aug. 1798. After its failure he fled to Hamburg, and was there delivered up to the English, 24 Nov.; for which Bonaparte declared war upon Hamburg, 15 Oct. 1799. Tandy was liberated after the peace of Amiens in 1802.

TANGIER (Morocco, N.W. Africa), besieged by prince Ferdinand of Portugal, who was beaten and taken prisoner, 1437. It was conquered by Alfonso V. of Portugal in 1471, and given as a dowry to princess Catherine, on her marriage with Charles II. of England, 1662; who, in 1683, caused the works to be blown up, and the place abandoned. Tangiers afterwards became a piratical station.

TANISTRY (in Ireland), the equal division of lands, after the decease of the owner, amongst his sons, legitimate or illegitimate. If one of the sons died, his son did not inherit, but a new division was made by the tanist or chief. Abolished 1604. Davies.

TANJORE (W. India). About 1678, Vencajee, a Mahratta chief, brother of the great Sevajee, made himself rajah. In 1749 a British expedition endeavoured to restore a deposed rajah without success; the reigning prince bought them off by the cession of territories. Much intervention ensued. In 1799 the company obtained possession of the country, engaging to support the rajah with nominal authority. The last is said to have died in 1855.

TANNENBERG (E. Prussia). Here Ladislaus V., Jagellon of Poland, defeated the Teutonic knights with great slaughter, the grandmaster being among the slain, 15 July, 1410. The order never recovered from this calamity.

TANNING leather with the bark of trees was early practised. It was introduced into these countries from Holland by William III. for raising orange-trees about 1689. It was discontinued until about 1719, when ananas were first brought into England. Great improvements have been made in tanning by means of chemical knowledge.

TANTALUM, a rare metal, discovered in an American mineral by Hatchett, in 1801, and named by him columbium; and in a Swedish mineral by Ekeberg, who gave it its present name. Wollaston pointed out the identity of the two metals in 1809; and Berzelius prepared pure metallic tantalum in 1824. In 1846 Rose discovered that tantalum was really a mixture of three metals, which he named tantalum, niobium, and pelopium. Gmelin.

TAPESTRY. An art of weaving borrowed from the Saracens, and hence its original workers in France were called Sarazinois. The invention of tapestry hangings belongs [the date is not mentioned] to the Netherlands. Guicciardini. Manufactured in France under Henry IV. by artists invited from Flanders, 1606. The art was brought into England by William Sheldon; and the first manufactory of it was established at Mortlake by sir Francis Crane, 17 James I. 1619. Salmon. Under Louis XIV. the art of tapestry was much improved in France; see Gobelin Tapestry. Very early instances of making tapestry are mentioned by the ancient poets, and also in Scripture; so that the Saracens' manufacture is a revival of the art. For the tapestry wrought by Matilda, queen of England, see Bayeux Tapestry.

TAR. The chemist Becher first proposed to make tar from pit-coal—the earl of Dundonald's patent, 1781. The mineral tar was discovered at Colebrook-dale, Shropshire, 1779; and in Scotland, Oct. 1792. Tar-water was first recommended for its medicinal virtues by the good Dr. Berkeley, bishop of Cloyne, about 1744. From benzole, discovered in coal-tar, brilliant dyes are now produced; see Aniline.

TARA, a hill in Meath, Ireland, where it is said a conference was held between the English and Irish in 1173. Near here, on 26 May, 1798, the royalist troops, 400 strong, defeated the insurgent Irish (4000 men), 500 killed. On 15 Aug. 1843, Daniel O'Connell held a monster meeting here (250,000 persons said to have been assembled).

TARANTISM, see Dancing.

TARBES (S. France, near the Pyrenees). The French, under Soult, were forced from their position at Tarbes, with considerable loss, by the British army commanded by Wellington, 20 March, 1814. See Toulouse.

TARENTUM (now Taranto, S. Italy), was founded by the Greek Phalantus, B.C. 708. The people of Tarentum, assisted by Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, supported a war which had been undertaken B.C. 281 by the Romans, to avenge the insults the Tarentines had offered to their ships when near their harbours; it was terminated after ten years: 300,000 prisoners were taken, and Tarentum became subject to Rome. Except the citadel, Tarentum was captured by the Carthaginians, 212, but recovered by Fabius, 209 B.C. Tarentum has shared in the revolutions of Southern Italy, and only ruins remain.

TARGUMS or EXPLANATIONS, names given to certain ancient Chaldee paraphrases of the Old Testament. The most remarkable are those of Onkelos, Jonathan-ben-Uzziel, and Joseph the Blind. The Targum of Onkelos is referred by some writers to the 1st century A.D.

TARIFA (S. Spain), the ancient Joza and Julia Traducta, where Muza landed when invading Spain, 712. It was taken from the Moors by Sancho IV. of Castile, 1291 or 1292; and was relieved, when besieged by them, after a great victory over the kings of Morocco and Granada, by Alfonso XI. of Castile and Alfonso IV. of Portugal, 28 or 30 Oct. 1340. The conflict is called the battle of Salado, being fought on the banks of that river. Tarifa was taken by the French in 1823.

TARIFF (said to have been derived from Tarifa, where duties were formerly collected), a book of duties charged on goods exported or imported. Our tariff in 1840 comprised 1042 articles; the number was reduced (by sir Robert Peel) in 1845 and 1847. It comprised 439 articles in 1857; the number was greatly reduced in 1860.

TARPEIAN ROCK (Rome), owed its name to the tradition that Tarpeia, daughter of the keeper of the Roman citadel, was here crushed to death by the shields cast on her by the Sabines, whom she treacherously admitted, having bargained for the gift of what they wore on their left arms, meaning their bracelets; about 750 B.C.

TARRAGONA (N.E. Spain), occupied as a naval station by the British before their capture of Gibraltar in 1704. It was stormed and sacked by the French under Suchet, 28 Jan. 1811, and the inhabitants put to the sword.

TARTAN or HIGHLAND PLAID, the dress of the Scottish Highlanders, said to have been derived from the ancient Gauls, or Celts, the Galli non braccati.

TARTARIC ACID is said to have been the first discovery of the eminent chemist, Scheele, who procured it in a separate state by boiling tar with lime, and in decomposing the tartrate of lime thus formed by means of sulphuric acid, about 1770. In 1859 Baron Liebig formed tartaric acid from other sources.

TARTARY (Asia). The Tatars, or Tartars, or Mongols, or Moguls, were known in antiquity as Scythians. During the decline of the Roman empire, these tribes began to seek more fertile regions; and the first who reached the frontier of Italy were the Huns, the ancestors of the modern Mongols. The first acknowledged sovereign of this vast country was the famous Genghis Khan. His empire, by the conquest of China, Persia, and all central Asia (1206-27), became one of the most formidable ever established; but it was split into parts in a few reigns. Timur, or Tamerlane, again conquered Persia, broke the power of the Turks in Asia Minor (1370-1400), and founded the Mogul dynasty in India, which began with Baber in 1525, and formed the most splendid court in Asia till the close of the 18th century; see Golden Horde. The Calmucks, a branch of the Tartars, expelled from China, settled on the banks of the Volga in 1672, but returned in 1771, and thousands perished on the journey.

TASMANIA, the name now given to the British settlement in Van Diemen's Land (which see).

TATTERSALL'S, see Racces.

TAUNTON (Somerset) was taken by Perkin Warbeck, Sept. 1497; and here he was surrendered to Henry VII. 5 Oct. following. The duke of Monmouth was proclaimed king at Taunton, 20 June, 1685; and it was the scene of the "bloody assize" held by Jeffreys upon the rebels in August.

TAVERNS may be traced to the 13th century. "In the raigne of king Edward the Third, only three taverns were allowed in London: one in Chepe, one in Walbrok, and the other in Lombard-street."* Splman. The Boar's Head, in Eastcheap, existed in the reign of Henry

* Taverns were restricted by 7 Edward VI. 1552-3, to 40 in London, 8 in York, 4 in Norwich, 3 in Westminster, 6 in Bristol, 3 in Lincoln, 4 in Hull, 3 in Shrewsbury, 4 in Exeter, 3 in Salisbury, 4 in Gloucester, 4 in Chester, 3 in Hereford, 3 in Worcester, 3 in Southampton, 4 in Canterbury, 3 in Ipswich, 3 in Winchester, 3 in Oxford, 4 in Cambridge, 3 in Colchester, 4 in Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

IV., and was the rendezvous of prince Henry and his dissolute companions. Shakspeare mentions it as the residence of Mrs. Quickly, and the scene of Falstaff's merriment. Shakspeare, "Henry IV." The White Hart, Bishopsgate, established in 1480, was rebuilt in 1829. Taverns were licensed in 1752.

TAXES were levied by Solon, the first Athenian legislator, 540 B.C. The first class of citizens paid an Attic talent of silver, about 55*l.* of our money. Darius, the son of Hystaspes, levied a land-tax by assessment, which was deemed so odious that his subjects styled him, by way of derision, Darius the Trader, 480 B.C. D'Eon. Taxes in specie were first introduced into England by William I., 1067, and he raised them arbitrarily; yet subsidies in kind, as in wool, leather, and other products of the country, continued till the accession of Richard II., 1377. Camden; see Revenue, and Income Tax.

TCHERNAYA, a river in the Crimea. On 16 Aug. 1855, the lines of the allied army at this place were attacked by 50,000 Russians under prince Gortschakoff without success, being repulsed with the loss of 329 slain, 1658 wounded, and 600 prisoners. The brunt of the attack was borne by two French regiments under general D'Herbillon. The loss of the allies was about 1200; 200 of these were from the Sardinian contingent, which behaved with great gallantry, under the command of general La Marmora. The Russian general Read, and the Sardinian general Montevecchio, were killed. The object of the attack was the relief of Sebastopol, then closely besieged by the English and French.

TEA was brought to Europe by the Dutch, 1610. It is mentioned as having been used in England on very rare occasions prior to 1657, and sold for 6*l.* and even 10*l.* the pound.

Samuel Pepys records his first "cup of tea" 25 Sept. 1660	"Millions of pounds' weight of sloe, liquorice, and ash-tree leaves, are every year mixed with Chinese teas in England." Report of the House of Commons 1818
A duty of 8 l. was charged upon every gallon of tea made for sale (12 Ch. II. c. 13), 1660; the East India Company first import it 1669	"The consumption of the whole civilised world, exclusively of England, is about 22,000,000 of pounds, while the annual consumption in Great Britain is 30,000,000." Evidence in House of Commons 1830
It was brought into England in 1666, by lord Ossory and lord Arlington, from Holland: and being admired by persons of rank, it was imported from thence, and generally sold for 60 shillings per pound, till our East Indian Company took up the trade. Anderson .	The first tea-sale in London on the abolition of the exclusive privilege of the East India Company took place in Mincing-lane 19 Aug. 1834

"TEARLESS VICTORY," was won by Archidamus III., king of Sparta, over the Arcadians and Argives, without losing a man, 467 B.C.

TEA-ROOM MEETING of members of the house of commons, 8 April, 1867; see Reform, 1867.

TE-DEUM, a song of praise used by the Romish and English churches, beginning "Te Deum laudamus—We praise thee, O God," supposed to be the composition of Augustin and Ambrose, about 390.

TEETOTALLER, a term applied to an abstainer from all fermented liquors, originated with Richard Turner, an artisan of Preston, who, contending for the principle at a temperance meeting about Sept. 1833, asserted "that nothing but te-te-total will do." The word was immediately adopted. He died, 27 Oct. 1846. These facts are taken from the "Staunch Teetotalter," edited by Joseph Livesey, of Preston (an originator of the movement in August, 1832), Jan. 1867; see Eucratites, Temperance, and United Kingdom.

TEFLIS, see Tiflis.

TELEGRAPHS. Polybius (died about 122 B.C.) calls the different instruments used by the ancients for communicating information, pyrsia, because the signals were always made by fire. In 1663, a plan was suggested by the marquess of Worcester, and a modern telegraph was suggested by Dr. Hooke, 1684. M. Amontons is also said to have been the inventor of telegraphs about this period. M. Chappe then invented the telegraph first used by the French in 1793, and two were erected over the Admiralty-office, London, 1796. The semaphore was erected there 1816. The naval signals by telegraph enabled 400 previously concerted sentences to be transmitted from ship to ship, by varying the combinations of two revolving crosses; see Electric Telegraph, under Electricity. Acts relating to telegraphs were passed in 1863 and 1866.

TELESCOPES. Their principle was described by Roger Bacon about 1250, and Leonard Digges (who died about 1573) is said to have arranged glasses so that he could see very distant objects.

Telescopes constructed by John Lipperhey and Zacharias Jansen, spectacle-makers of Middelburg, and James Metius of Alkmaer, about 1608
 Galileo (from a description of the above) constructed telescopes (May, 1609), gradually increasing in power, till he discovered Jupiter's satellites, &c. Jan. 1610
 The telescope explained by Kepler 1611
 Huyghens greatly improved the telescope, and discovers the ring and satellites of Saturn, &c. 1655-6
 Telescopes improved by Gregory, about 1663
 Reflecting telescope invented by Newton 1668
 Achromatic telescopes made by More Hall, about 1723; re-invented by John Dollond 1758
 Sir Wm. Herschel (originally an organist at Bath) greatly improves telescopes, and discovers the planet Uranus (which see), 21, March, 1781, and a volcanic mountain in the moon, in 1783; he completes his forty-foot focal length telescope in 1789, and he discovers two other volcanic mountains; he lays before the Royal Society a catalogue of 5000 nebulae and clusters of stars 1802

A telescope made in London for the observatory of Madrid, which cost 11,000*l.*, in 1802
 Telescopes improved by Guinand and Fraunhofer 1805-14
 The great telescope taken down, and one of twenty-feet focal length erected by sir John Herschel (who afterwards took it to the Cape of Good Hope, and made with it his observations) 1822
 The earl of Rosse erected at Parsonstown, in Ireland, a telescope (at a cost exceeding 20,000*l.*) 7 feet in diameter, and 52 feet in length; it is moved with ease 1828-45
 Mr. Lassell constructed a telescope by which he discovered the satellite of Neptune; and the eight satellites of Saturn 1848
 One of gigantic size, 85 feet in length (very imperfect), completed at Wandsworth by the rev. John Craig 1852
 Magnificent equatorial telescopes set up at the national observatories at Greenwich and Paris 1860
 M. Foucault exhibits at Paris a reflecting telescope, the mirror 31½ inches in diameter; the focal length 17½ feet 1862

TELLERS, see under Exchequer.

TELLURIUM, a rare metal, in its natural state containing small quantities of iron and gold, was discovered by Müller at Reichenstein in 1782.

TEMESWAR (Hungary), capital of the Banat, often besieged by the Turks. On 10 Aug. 1849, Haynau totally defeated the Hungarians besieging this town, and virtually ended the war.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETIES originated with Mr. Calhoun, who, while he was secretary of war in America, in order to counteract the habitual use of ardent spirits among the people, prohibited them altogether in the United States' army, 1818. The first public temperance society in America was projected in 1825, and formed 13 Feb. 1826. Temperance societies immediately afterwards were formed in England and Scotland. In Ireland, the rev. Dr. Edgar, of Belfast, published upon temperance in 1829-31; and Father Mathew, a Roman catholic clergyman, affirmed that in 1839, 1840, and 1841, he had made more than a million of converts to temperance. Father Mathew arrived in America in July, 1849, but was not so successful there. He died 8 Dec. 1856, aged 66. In England, the National Temperance Society was formed in 1842; the London Temperance League in 1851; and the United Kingdom Alliance for the legislative suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquors, 1 June, 1853; see Teetotalter.

TEMPLARS. The first military order of Knights of the Temple was founded in 1118 by Baldwin II., king of Jerusalem. The Templars were numerous in several countries, and came to England before 1185. Their wealth having excited the cupidity of the French kings, the order was suppressed by the council of Vienne, and part of its revenues was bestowed upon other orders in 1312. Numbers of the order were tried, condemned, and burned alive or hanged in 1308-10, and it suffered great persecutions throughout Europe: 68 were burnt at Paris, 1310. The grand-master Molay was burnt alive at Paris, March, 1314.

TEMPLE (London), the dwelling of the Knights Templars, at the suppression of the order, was purchased by the professors of the common law, and converted into inns, 1340. They are called the Inner and Middle Temple, in relation to Essex-house, which was also a part of the house of the Templars, built in 1185, and called the Outer Temple, because it was situated without Temple-bar.

The Temple Hall was built in 1572
St. Mary's, or the Temple Church, situated in the Inner Temple, is an ancient Gothic stone building, erected by the Templars in 1240, and is remarkable for its circular vestibule, and for the tombs of the crusaders, who were buried here. The church was recessed with stone by Mr. Smirke in 1828

The new Middle Temple Library was opened by the prince of Wales 31 Oct. 1861
Temple bar was erected by sir Christopher Wren, and completed in 1672. It was reported to be in an unsafe condition in March, 1868

TEMPLES originated in the sepulchres built for the dead. Eusebius. The Egyptians were the first who erected temples to the gods. Herodotus. The first erected in Greece is ascribed to Dencalion. Apollonius.

The temple of Jerusalem built by Solomon, 1012 B.C.; consecrated 1004; pillaged by Shishak, 971; repaired by Joash, 856; profaned by Ahaz, 740; restored by Hezekiah, 726; pillaged and fired by Nebuchadnezzar, 588, 587; rebuilt, 536; pillaged by Antiochus, 170; rebuilt by Herod, 18; destroyed by Titus, A.D. 70.

The temple of Apollo, at Delphi, first a cottage with boughs, built of stone by Trophonius, about 1200 B.C.; burnt by the Pisistratidæ, 548; a new temple raised by the family of the Alcæonidæ, about 513.

Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built seven times; planned by Ctesiphon, 544 B.C.; fired by Herodotus, to perpetuate his name, 356 B.C.; to rebuild it employed 220 years; destroyed by the Goths, A.D. 260.

The temple of Piety was built by Acilius, on the spot where once a woman had fed with her milk her aged father, whom the senate had imprisoned, and excluded from all aliments. Val. Max.

Temple of Theseus, built 480 B.C., is at this day the most perfect ancient edifice in the world.

Most of the heathen temples were destroyed throughout the Roman empire by Constantine the Great, 331; see separate articles.

The "Temple" at Paris, formerly an asylum for debtors, was made the site of a market in 1809, and rebuilt in 1864.

(See Temple.)

TENANT, see Rent. "Tenant-right" in Ireland has caused much discussion in that country recently.

TENASSERIM (N.E. India), ceded by Burmah to the British, Feb. 1826.

TENERIFFE (Canaries, N.W. coast of Africa). The celebrated peak of Teneriffe is 15,396 feet above the level of the sea. It was ascended in 1856 by professor C. Piazzini Smyth for astronomical observations. An earthquake in this island destroyed several towns and many thousands of people in 1704; see Santa Cruz.

TEN MINUTES' BILL, see Reform, 1867.

TENNESSEE, a southern state of North America, was settled about 1760, and admitted into the union 1 June, 1796. An ordinance of secession from the union was passed—it is asserted illegally—on 6 May, 1861. On 23 Feb. 1862, the federal general Nelson entered Nashville, and in March, Andrew Johnson (afterwards the president of the United States) was made military governor over a large part of Tennessee. In Sept. 1863, Rosencrans expelled the confederate government. The representatives of Tennessee were re-admitted to the congress, July, 1866.

TEN TABLES, see Decemvirs.

TENTHS, see Tithes.

TENURES, the mode in which land is held. Military tenures were abolished in 1660. Lyttelton's book on Tenures is dated 1481.

TERBIUM, a metal sometimes found with yttrium (which see).

TERCEIRA, see Azores.

TERMS OF LAW AND VACATIONS. They were instituted in England from the Norman usage, the long vacation being suited to the time of the vintage in France, 14 Will. I. 1079. Glanville de Leg. Anglie. They were gradually formed. Spectman. The terms were fixed by statute 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV. 22 July, 1830: Hilary Term to begin 11 Jan. and end 31 Jan.; Easter, 15 April, to end 8 May; Trinity, 22 May, to end 12 June; Michaelmas, 2 Nov. to end 25 Nov. This act was amended 1 Will. IV. 15 Nov. 1830.

TERROR, see Reign of.

TEST ACT, directing all officers, civil and military, under government, to receive the sacrament according to the forms of the Church of England, and to take the oaths against transubstantiation, &c. ; enacted March 1673. The Test and Corporation acts were repealed by statute in 1828.

TESTAMENT, see Bibles, and Wills.

TESTER. Testone. A silver coin struck in France by Louis XII. 1513 ; and also in Scotland in the time of Francis II. and of Mary, queen of Scots, 1559. It was so called from the head of the king, stamped upon it. In England the tester was of 12*d.* value in the reign of Henry VIII., and afterwards of 6*d.* (still called a tester.)

TESTRI (N. France). Pepin d'Heristal, invited by malcontents, here defeated and captured Thierry III., king of Austrasia, and established himself as duke, 687.

TETTENHALL (Staffordshire). It was probably at this place, then named Testenheal, that the Danes were defeated by the Anglo-Saxons sent against them by Edward the Elder, 6 Aug. 910.

TETUAN (Morocco) was entered by the Spaniards 6 Feb. 1860, after gaining a decisive victory on 4 Feb. The general, O'Donnell, was made a grandee of the first class.

TEUTONES (hence Deutsche, German), a people of Germany, who with the Cimbric made incursions upon Gaul, and cut to pieces two Roman armies, 113 and 105 B.C. They were at last defeated by the consul Marius at Aix, and a great number made prisoners, 102 B.C. (see Cimbric), with whom authors commonly join the Teutones. The appellation came to be applied to the German nation in general.

TEUTONIC ORDER, military knights established in the Holy Land about 1191, through the humanity of the Germans (Teutones) to the sick and wounded of the Christian army in the Holy Land, under the celebrated Guy of Lusignan, when before Acre. The order was confirmed by a bull of pope Coelestine III. On their return to Germany, they were invited to subdue and christianise the country now called Prussia and its neighbourhood, which they gradually accomplished. Their territories were invaded, and their army was defeated, with great slaughter, near Tannenberg, in East Prussia, 15 July, 1410, when the grand master and many of the knights were slain. A large part of their possessions was incorporated into Poland in 1466, and into Brandenburg about 1521. In 1525, the grand master was made a prince of the empire, and the order was finally dissolved. Its remaining possessions were seized by Napoleon I. in 1809 ; see Prussia, &c.

TEUTOBURG FOREST (the Teutoburgiensis saltus, Tacitus), probably situate between Detmold and Paderborn, where Hermann, or Arminius, and the Germans defeated the Romans under Varus, with very great slaughter, A.D. 9. Varus and many of his officers preferred suicide to captivity. This defeat was regarded at Rome as a national calamity, and Augustus, in agony, cried, "Varus, give me my legions !"

TEWKESBURY (Gloucestershire), where Edward IV. gained a decisive victory over the Lancastrians, 4 May, 1471. Queen Margaret, the consort of Henry VI. and her son were taken prisoners. The queen was conveyed to the Tower of London, where king Henry expired a few days after this fatal engagement ; being, as is generally supposed, murdered by the duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III. The queen was ransomed in 1475 by the French king, Louis XI., for 50,000 crowns. This was the last battle between the houses of York and Lancaster ; see Roses.

TEXAS (N. America) was settled by the French, 1687, who were expelled soon after. It revolted from Mexico in 1835 ; was helped by the Americans in 1836. Its independence was acknowledged in 1840. Its proposed annexation led to war between Mexico and the United States. It was admitted into the Union by the latter in 1846 ; seceded from it in 1861 ; submitted in 1865.

TEXEL (at the mouth of the Zuyder Zee, Holland). Its vicinity has been the scene of memorable naval engagements. An engagement of three days' continuance between the English under Blake, Dean, and Monk, and the Dutch under Van Tromp and De Ruyter, in which the latter were worsted and admiral Van Tromp was killed, Aug. 1653. Again, in the mouth of the Texel, when D'Etrees and Ruyter were signally defeated 11 Aug. 1673. The Dutch fleet vanquished by lord Duncan on 11 Oct. 1797 ; see Camperdown. The Dutch fleet of twelve ships of war and thirteen Indiamen surrendered to admiral Mitchell, who, entering the Texel, possessed himself of them without firing a shot, 28 Aug. 1799.

THALLIUM, a metal, occurring in the sulphuric-acid manufacture, discovered by Mr. Wm. Crookes, by means of the spectrum analysis in March, 1861.

THAMES (London). The Roman Tamesis or Tamesa. It has been erroneously said that its name is Isis till it arrives at Dorchester, when, being joined by the Thame or Tame, it assumes the name of Thames. What was the origin of this vulgar error cannot now be traced : poetical fiction, however, had perpetuated the error, and invested it with a kind of classical sanctity. It was called Thames or Tems before it came near the Thames. Camden; see London, and London Bridge.

The Thames was made navigable to Oxford . . . 1624
It ebbed and flowed twice in three hours, 1658;
again, three times in four hours, 22 March, 1682;
again, twice in three hours . . . 24 Nov. 1777
An act of parliament gave the conservation of the Thames to the corporation of London: twelve conservators were to be appointed—three by the government . . . 1857
In consequence of the great contamination of the Thames by the influx of the sewage of London, and the bad odours emanating from it in the summer of 1858, an act was passed empowering the Metropolitan Board of Works (which see) to undertake its purification by constructing new drainage . . . 1858
The Thames Angling Preservation Society (established about 1838) is revived in . . . 1863
Mr. Leach, engineer of the conservators, reported that "the river is dreadfully mismanaged from its source to its mouth," . . . 23 July, "
The Thames navigation acts, appointing five more conservators, &c., and prohibiting pollution by sewage, &c., passed . . . Aug. 1866
The powers of the act extended up to Staines. 1867 THAMES EMBANKMENT: sir Christopher Wren recommended it in 1666. The corporation embanked a mile in 1767. It was further recommended by sir Fred. Trench, in 1824; by the duke of Newcastle in 1844; and by John Martin the painter in 1856. In 1860, the Metropolitan Board of Works recommended that the north bank of the Thames should be embanked; whereby the bed of the river would be improved; a low-level sewer could be easily constructed beneath a broad roadway; docks to be constructed within the embankment wall; the expense to be defrayed by the city duties on coal, and by means provided by government. The principle of this recommendation was approved by parliament, and a committee was appointed, which sat for the first time 30 April, 1861

An act for "embanking the north side of the Thames from Westminster bridge to Blackfriars bridge, and for making new streets in and near thereto," passed 7 Aug.; the work began in . . . Nov. 1862
Mr. J. W. Bazalgette presented a report, with a plan for embanking the south side of the Thames, 6 Nov. 1862; act for carrying it out passed . . . 28 July, 1863
First stone of the northern embankment laid " by Mr. Thwaites near Whitehall-stairs 20 July, 1864
First stone of the southern embankment laid at Stangate by Mr. Wm. Tite . . . 28 July, 1866
THAMES TUNNEL.—Projected by Mr. I. K. Brunel, to form a communication between Rotherhithe and Wapping. The bill received the royal assent, 24 June, 1824. The shaft was begun in 1825; the first brick was laid by Mr. Smith, 2 March; the excavation commenced, 1 April; and the first horizontal excavation . . . in Dec. 1825
At a distance of 544 feet from the shaft, the first irruption took place . . . 18 May, 1827
The second irruption, by which six workmen perished . . . 12 Jan. 1828
The tunnel was opened throughout for foot-passengers, 25 March, 1843. [The length of the tunnel is 1300 feet; its width is 25 feet; height, 20 feet; clear width of each archway, including foot-path, about 14 feet; thickness of earth between the crown of the tunnel and the bed of the river, about 15 feet.]
The Thames Tunnel Company was dissolved in 1866

THANE, a Saxon title of nobility, abolished in England at the conquest, upon the introduction of the feudal system, and in Scotland by king Malcolm III., when the title of earl was adopted, 1057.

THANET (Kent) was the first permanent settlement of the Saxons, about 448. The Danes held a part of it, 853-865, and ravaged it 980, 988 et seq.

THAPSUS (N. Africa). Near here Julius Cæsar totally defeated the army of the party which supported the policy of Pompey, Feb. 46 B.C. The suicide of Cato followed soon after.

THEATINES, a religious order, the first who assumed the title of regular clerks, founded by Caraffa, bishop of Theate, in Naples (afterwards pope Paul IV.), 1524, to repress heresy. They first established themselves in France, according to the historian Hénault, in Paris, 1644. The Theatines endeavoured, but vainly, to revive among the clergy the poverty of the apostles. Ashc.

THEATRES. That of Bacchus, at Athens, built by Philo, 420 B.C., was the first erected. Marcellus' theatre at Rome was begun by Cæsar, and dedicated by Augustus, 12 B.C. Theatres were erected in most cities of Italy. Most of the inhabitants of Pompeii were assembled at a theatre on the night of 24 Aug. 79, when an eruption of Vesuvius covered the city. Scenes were introduced into theatres, painted by Balthazar Sienna, A.D. 1533; see Drama, Plays, &c.

THEATRES IN ENGLAND. The first royal licence for a theatre in England was in 1574, to master Burbage and four others, servants of the earl of Leicester, to act plays at the Globe, Bankside; see Globe. But, long before that time, miracle plays were represented in the fields. The prices of admission in the reign of queen Elizabeth were—gallery, 2d.; lords' rooms, 1s.; see Drama, Drury Lane, and other theatres.

The first play-bill was dated 8 April, 1663, and issued from Drury-lane; it runs thus: "By his Majesty his company of Comedians at the New Theatre in Drury-lane, will be acted a comedy called the Humorous Lieutenant." After detailing the characters, it concludes thus: "The play will begin at three o'clock exactly" . . . 8 April, 1663

Lincoln's-inn theatre was opened . . . 1695
Acts for licensing plays and play-houses (10 Geo. II. c. 28) . . . 1737
Act for regulating theatres (6 & 7 Vict. c. 68) . . . 22 Aug. 1843

THEATRICAL FUNDS. The Theatrical fund of Covent Garden was established in 1765; that of Drury Lane in 1776. They grant pensions to their members and their families. The General Theatrical fund was established in 1839.

THEBAN LEGION, according to tradition, was totally composed of Christians, and consequently submitted to martyrdom rather than attack their brethren during the persecution of the emperor Maximin, or sacrifice to the gods, about A. D. 286. Their leader Maurice was canonised.

THEBES or LUXOR, in Egypt, called also Hecatompulos on account of its hundred gates, and Diospolis, as being sacred to Jupiter. In the time of its splendour (1600-800 B. C.) it extended above thirty-three miles, and upon any emergency could send into the field, by each of its hundred gates, 20,000 fighting men and 200 chariots. Thebes was ruined by Cambyses, king of Persia, 525 B. C., and by the foundation of Alexandria, 332 B. C.; it rebelled and was taken by Ptolemy Lathyrus, 86 B. C., and few traces of it were seen in the age of Juvenal; see Memnonium. After centuries of neglect, it has been greatly visited since the explorations of Belzoni, 1817.—THEBES (the capital of the country successively called Aonia, Messapia, Ogygia, Hyantis, and Beotia) was called Cadmeis, from Cadmus, its founder, 1493 B. C. It became a republic about 1120 B. C., and flourished under Epaminondas 378-362 B. C. Its seven gates are mentioned by Homer; see Beotia, and Greece.

THEFT was punished by heavy fines among the Jews; by death at Athens, by the laws of Draco; see Draco. The Anglo-Saxons nominally punished theft with death, if above 1*2d.* value; but the criminal could redeem his life by a ransom. In the 9th of Henry I. this power of redemption was taken away, 1108. The punishment of theft was very severe in England, till mitigated by Peel's acts, 9 & 10 Geo. IV. 1829. The laws respecting theft were consolidated in 1862.

THEISTS (Theos, God), a name given to deists about 1660. Dean Martin.

THELLUSSON'S WILL, one of the most singular testamentary documents ever executed. Mr. Peter Isaac Thellusson, a Genevese and an affluent merchant of London, left 100,000*l.* to his widow and children; and the remainder, amounting to more than 600,000*l., he left to trustees, to accumulate during the lives of his three sons, and the lives of their sons; then the estates, directed to be purchased with the produce of the accumulating fund, were to be conveyed to the eldest lineal male descendant of his three sons, with the benefit of survivorship. Should no heir then exist, the whole was to be applied, by the agency of the sinking fund, to the discharge of the national debt. Mr. Thellusson died on 21 July, 1797. His will incurred much public censure, and was contested by the heirs-at-law, but finally established by a decision of the house of lords, 25 June, 1805. The last surviving grandson died in Feb. 1856. A dispute then arose whether the eldest male descendant or the male descendant of the eldest son should inherit the property. The question was decided on appeal by the house of lords (9 June, 1859), in favour of the latter, lord Rendlesham, and Charles S. Thellusson, confirming the decision of the Master of the Rolls in 1858. In consequence of the legal expenses the property is said not to exceed greatly its value in the testator's lifetime.

THEOCRACY, government by God, existed among the Israelites till Saul was made king, about 1095 B. C. (1 Sam. viii. 7).

* In 1800 an act of parliament was passed, preventing testators devising their property for purposes of accumulation for longer than 20 years after their death.

THEODOLITE, an instrument for measuring horizontal angles, used in surveying, consists of a telescope and a divided circle. It was probably first constructed in the 17th century. Jesse Ramsden, in 1787, completed the great theodolite employed in the trigonometrical survey of England and Wales by general Roy.

THEODOSIAN CODE, see Codes.

THEOLOGY (from the Greek Theos, God), the science which treats of the nature and attributes of God, of his relations to man, and of the manner in which they may be discovered. It is generally divided into two heads. 1. Inspired, including the Holy Scriptures, their interpretation, &c. 2. Natural; which Lord Bacon calls the first part of philosophy.—Butler's "Analogy of Religion" (1736) and Paley's "Natural Theology" (1802) are eminent books on the latter subject.—The "Summa Totius Theologiæ" by Thomas Aquinas (born about 1224), a standard Roman catholic work, was printed with commentaries, &c., in 1596.

THEOPHILANTHROPISTS (lovers of God and man), a sect formed in France in 1796; and headed by one of the five directors, Lepaux, in 1797, was dissolved in 1802.

THERMIDOR REVOLUTION. On the 9th Thermidor of the 2nd year (27 July, 1794), the Convention deposed Robespierre, and on the next day he and twenty-two of his partisans were executed.

THERMO-ELECTRICITY, see under Electricity, and Heat.

THERMOMETER. The invention of this instrument is ascribed to several scientific persons, all about the same time. Freezing point: Fah. 32°; R. 0°; C. 0°. Boiling point: Fah. 212°, R. 80, C. 100.

Invented by Galileo, before 1597. Libri.
 Invented by Drebbel of Alcmæer, 1609. Boerhaave.
 Invented by Paulo Sarpi, 1609. Fulgentio.
 Invented by Sanctorio in 1610. Borelli.
 Fahrenheit's thermometer invented about 1726;
 Reaumur's and Celsius's (the latter now termed centigrade) soon after. [Fahrenheit's scale is usually employed in England, and Reaumur's and the centigrade on the continent.]

The mode of construction by substituting quick-silver for spirits was invented some years subsequently.

Halley proposed it in 1697.

Mr. L. M. Casella issued a minimum thermometer in Sept. 1861. It registers degrees of cold by means of mercury.

THERMOPYLÆ (Doris, N. Greece). Leonidas, at the head of 300 Spartans and 700 Thebians, at the defile of Thermopylæ, withstood the whole force of the Persians during three days, 7, 8, 9 Aug. 480 B.C., when Ephialtes, a Trachinian, perfidiously leading the enemy by a secret path up the mountains, brought them to the rear of the Greeks, who, thus placed between two assailants, perished gloriously on heaps of their slaughtered foes. One Greek only returned home, and he was received with reproaches for having fled. Here Antiochus the Great, king of Syria, was defeated by the Romans, 191 B.C.

THERMUM, THERMUS or TIERMA (Greece), a strong city, the Acropolis of Ætolia, N. Greece, was captured and ravaged by Philip V. of Macedon, 218 and 206 B.C., on account of its favouring the Romans.

THESPIÆ, a city of Bœotia, N. Greece. 700 of its citizens perished with Leonidas at Thermopylæ, Aug. 480 B.C. It suffered much through the jealousy of the Thebans, who destroyed its walls in 372 B.C.

THESSALONICA (now Salonica), a city in Macedonia, N. Greece, originally Therma, but rebuilt by Cassander, and said to have been named after his wife, Thessalonica, daughter of Philip, after 315 B.C. Here Paul preached, 53; and to the church here he addressed two epistles in 54. In consequence of seditions, a frightful massacre of the inhabitants took place in 390, by order of the emperor Theodosius. Thessalonica partook of the changes of the Eastern empire. Thessalonica was taken by the Saracens, with great slaughter, July or Aug. 904; by the Normans of Sicily, 15 Aug. 1185; and after various changes was taken from the Venetians by the Turks under Amurath, 1430.

THESSALY (N. Greece), the seat of many of the adventures described by the poets. The first king of whom we have any certain knowledge was Hellen, son of Deucalion, from whom his subjects were called Hellenists, a name afterwards extended to all Greeks. From Thessaly came the Achæans, the Ætoliens, the Dorians, the Hellenists, &c. The two most remarkable events in the early history of this country are the deluge of Deucalion, 1548, B.C., and the expedition of the Argonauts, 1263 B.C.; see them severally. Thessaly long aimed at neutrality in Grecian affairs, but became involved through its rulers, the tyrants of Phææ; Lycophron, about 404 B.C.; his son Jason, 374, assassinated 370; Alexander, the most eminent, defied Athens and Thebes; assassinated 359. Philip of Macedon, after a defeat (353 B.C.), gained a victory over the tyrants, 352; and subjugated the country wholly, 343.

The Romans gave a nominal freedom to Thessaly after their victory at Cynoscephalæ, 197. It is now included in the kingdom of Greece.

THETFORD (Norfolk), the Roman Sitomagus, and an important Saxon town, was a bishopric from 1075 to 1091, when the see was removed to Norwich. It was made a suffragan bishopric by Henry VIII. by the power given him in 1534.

THIBET or TIBET (central Asia), is said to have been a kingdom 313 B.C., conquered by Genghis Khan 1206, and gradually subdued by and annexed to China, 1255-1720. Buddhism became the dominant religion about 905; and the Lamas have absolute power in religious affairs.

THIEVES' ISLAND, see Ladrones.

THIMBLES are said to have been found at Herculaneum. The art of making them was brought to England by John Lofting, a mechanic, from Holland, who set up a workshop at Islington, near London, and practised the manufacture in various metals with profit and success, about 1695. Anderson.

THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES, see Articles.

THIRTY TYRANTS, a term applied to the governors of Athens, in 404 B.C., who were expelled by Thrasybulus, 403; and also to the numerous aspirants to the imperial throne of Rome during the reigns of Gallienus and Aurelian, A.D. 259-274.

THIRTY YEARS' WAR, in Germany, between the catholics and protestants. It began with the latter in Bohemia in 1618, and ended with the peace of Westphalia in 1648. It is renowned for the victories of Wallenstein and Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, and for its history by Schiller, published 1790-93.

THISTLE, * ORDER OF THE, SCOTLAND, founded by James V. 1540. It consisted originally of himself, as sovereign, and twelve knights, in imitation of Christ and his twelve apostles. In 1542, James died, and the order was discontinued, about the time of the Reformation. The order was renewed by James VII. of Scotland and II. of England, by making eight knights, 29 May, 1687; increased to twelve by queen Anne in 1703; to sixteen by George IV. in 1827. The original knights of 1687 were killed in a duel, 1712.

George, duke of Gordon.

John, marquess of Athol.

James, earl of Arran, afterwards duke of Hamilton;

Alexander, earl of Moray.

James, earl of Perth; attainted.

Kenneth, earl of Scaforth; attainted.

George, earl of Dumbarton.

John, earl of Melford; attainted.

THISTLEWOOD'S CONSPIRACY, see Cato-street Conspiracy.

THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, ST. (Southwark), was founded as an almshouse by Richard, prior of Bermondsey, in 1213, and surrendered to Henry VIII. in 1538. In 1551 the mayor and citizens of London, having purchased of Edward VI. the manor of Southwark, including this hospital, repaired and enlarged it, and admitted into it 260 poor, sick, and helpless objects; upon which the king, in 1553, incorporated it, together with Bethlehem, St. Bartholomew's, &c. It was rebuilt in 1693. In 1862, the site was sold to the south-eastern railway company, and the patients were removed to the Surrey music hall. The foundation stone of the new hospital, erected at Stangate, near the Surrey side of Westminster bridge, was laid by the queen 13 May, 1868.

THOMAS, ST., see Virgin Isles.

THOMISTS, see Scottists.

THOMITES or TOMITES, a body of enthusiasts who assembled at Broughton, near Canterbury. A Cornish publican named Thom, or Tom (religiously insane), assumed the name of sir W. Courtenay, knight of Malta and king of Jerusalem, and incited the rabble against the Poor Law act. On 31 May, 1838, a farmer of the neighbourhood, whose servant had joined the crowd which attended Thom, sent a constable to fetch him back; but on his arrival on the ground he was shot dead by Thom. The military were then called out, and lieutenant Bennett proceeded to take the murderer into custody; but Thom advanced, and, firing a pistol, killed the lieutenant on the spot. One of the soldiers fired at Thom, and laid him dead by the side of lieutenant Bennett. The people then attacked the military, who were compelled to fire, and several persons were killed before the mob dispersed.

THORACIC DUCT, discovered first in a horse, by Eustachius, about 1563; in the human body, by Ol. Rudbec, a Swedish anatomist. Thomas Bartholine, of Copenhagen, and Dr. Joliffe, of England, also discovered it about 1654; see Lacteals.

* Some Scottish historians make the origin of this order very ancient. The abbot Justinian says it was instituted by Achaius I. of Scotland, 809, when that monarch made an alliance with Charlemagne, and then took for his device the thistle. It is stated that the king Hungus, the Pict, had a dream, in which St. Andrew made a midnight visit, and promised him a sure victory over his foes, the Northumbrians; and that the next day St. Andrew's Cross (×) appeared in the air, and the Northumbrians were defeated. On this story, it is said, Achaius framed the order more than 700 years before James V.

THORINUM, a very rare metal (a heavy gray powder), discovered by Berzelius in 1828.

THORN (on the Vistula, Poland) was founded by the Teutonic Knights in 1231. Here they acknowledged themselves to be vassals of Poland in 1466. Thorn was taken by Charles XII. of Sweden, in 1703. Many protestants were slain here (after a religious riot) at the instigation of the Jesuits, in 1724. Thorn was acquired by the Prussians in 1793, and taken by the French in 1806; and was restored to Prussia at the peace in 1815.

THRACE (now Roumelia, in Turkey) derived its name from Thrax, the son of Mars. Aspin. The Thracians were a warlike people, and therefore Mars was said to have been born and to have had his residence among them. Euripides; see Odryse.

THRASHING-MACHINES. The flail was the only instrument formerly in use for thrashing corn. The Romans used a machine called the tribulum, a sledge loaded with stones or iron, drawn over the corn-sheaves by horses. The first machine attempted in modern times was invented by Michael Menzies, at Edinburgh, about 1732; Andrew Meikle invented a machine in 1776. Many improvements have been since made.

THRASYMENE or TRASIMENE (N. Italy). A most bloody engagement took place near the Trasimene lake between the Carthaginians under Hannibal and the Romans under Flaminius, 217 B.C. No less than 15,000 Romans were left dead on the field of battle, and 10,000 taken prisoners; or, according to Livy, 6000; or Polybius, 15,000. The loss of Hannibal was about 1500 men. About 10,000 Romans made their escape, all covered with wounds. Livy; Polybius. On the same day, an earthquake occurred, which desolated several cities in Italy.

THREATENING LETTERS. Sending letters, whether anonymously written, or with a fictitious name, demanding money, or threatening to kill a person, or fire his house, was made punishable as a felony, without benefit of clergy, by the Black Act, in 1722. Persons extorting money by threatening to accuse others of such offences as are subjected to death, or other infamous punishments, were to be adjudged imprisonment, whipping, or transportation, by 30 Geo. II., 1756; and other acts, the latest, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 66, 1847.

THREE DENOMINATIONS, see Denominations.

THUGS, organised secret fanatical murderers in India, who considered their victims to be sacrifices to their gods. The English commenced suppressing them about 1810, but did not succeed till about 1830, when a plan for the purpose was adopted by lord Wm. Bentinck.

THUMB-SCREW, an instrument used in the first stages of torture by the Spanish inquisition. In England, the rev. Wm. Carstairs was the last who suffered by it, before the privy council, to make him divulge secrets entrusted to him, which he firmly resisted. After the revolution in 1688, the thumb-screw was presented to him by the council. King William expressed a desire to see it, and tried it on, bidding the doctor to turn the screw; but, at the third turn, he cried out "Hold—hold! doctor: another turn would make me confess anything."

THUNDERING LEGION. During a contest with the invading Marcomanni, the prayers of some Christians in a Roman legion are said to have been followed by a storm of thunder, lightning, and rain, which tended greatly to discomfit the enemy; and hence the legion received the name, A.D. 174.

THURI or THURIUM, a Greek city, S. Italy, founded after the fall of Sybaris, about 452 B.C. It suffered from the incursions of the Lucanians, by whom the Thurians were severely defeated, 390 B.C. It became eventually a dependent ally of Rome; and was ravaged by the troops of Hannibal, 204; was established as a colony by the Romans, 194; and was captured by Spartacus in the Servile war, who levied upon it heavy contributions, 72.

THURINGIA, an early Gothic kingdom in central Germany, was overrun by Attila and the Huns, 451; the last king, Hermanfried, was defeated and slain by Thierry, king of the Franks, who annexed it to his dominions, 530. It formed two duchies, 630-717, and 849-919; a margraviate, 960-1090; landgraviate and county, 1130-1247; and was, after various changes and many conflicts, absorbed into Saxony in the 15th century. In 1815 it was surrendered to Prussia.

THURLES (S. Ireland). Here was held a synod of the Roman catholic archbishops, bishops, inferior clergy, and religious orders, under the direction of archbishop Cullen, the Roman catholic primate, 22 Aug. 1850. It condemned the Queen's Colleges, and recommended the foundation of a Roman catholic university, 10 Sept. following. The acts were forwarded to Rome for approval of the pope, Pius IX.

THUROT'S INVASION. Thurot, an Irish commodore in the French service, by his courage and daring became a terror to all the merchant-ships of this kingdom. He had the command of a small armament, and landed 1000 men at Carrickfergus in Ireland, and plundered the town. He reached the Isle of Man, and was overtaken by Captain Elliot, with three frigates, who engaged his little squadron, which was taken, and the commodore killed, 28 Feb. 1760. Thurot's true name was O'Farrell. His grandfather had followed the fortunes of James II.; but his mother being of a family of some dignity in France, he assumed her name. Burns.

THURSDAY, the fifth day of the week, derived from Thor, a deified hero worshipped by the northern nations, particularly by the Scandinavians and Celts. His authority was said to extend over the winds, seasons, thunder and lightning, &c. He is said to have been the most valiant of the sons of Odin. This day still retains his name in the Danish, Swedish, and Low-Dutch languages, as well as in the English. Thursday is in Latin dies Jovis, or Jupiter's day.

THYATIRA (Asia Minor), the place assigned for the battle at which the rebel Procopius was defeated by the army of the emperor Valens, 366; see Seven Churches.

THYMBRA (Asia Minor). Here Cyrus the Great defeated the confederate army aiding Cresus, and obtained supremacy in Asia, 548.

TIARA, head ornament of the ancient Persians. The name is given to the triple crown of the pope (anciently called regnum), indicative of his civil rank, as the keys are of his ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The right to wear a crown is said to have been granted to the bishops of Rome by Constantine the Great, and by Clovis, founder of the French monarchy. Their ancient tiara was a high round cap. Pope Damasus II. first caused himself to be crowned with a tiara, 1048. "Boniface VIII. encompassed the tiara with a crown; Benedict XII. added a second; and John XXIII. a third." Rees.

TIBERIAS, a city in Palestine, built by Herod Antipas, and named after the emperor Tiberias, 39. Near it Guy de Lusignan, king of Jerusalem, and the crusaders, were defeated by Saladin; and Jerusalem fell into his hands, 1187.

TIBET, see Thibet.

TIBUR (now Tivoli), a Latin town more ancient than Rome, and frequently at war with it. The Tiburtines were defeated 335 B.C., and the subjection of all Latium followed; for which Furius Camillus obtained a triumph and an equestrian statue in the forum.

TICINO or TESSIN, a Swiss canton south of the Alps, conquered by the Swiss early in the 16th century; made a separate canton in 1815. It suffered by internal disputes 1839 and 1841.

TICINUS, a river, N. Italy. Here Hannibal defeated the Romans, 217 B.C.

TICKETS OF LEAVE, see Transportation, and Crime.

TICONDEROGA (N. America). The French fortress here was unsuccessfully besieged by Abercromby in July, 1758; taken 26 July, 1759. The Americans took it in 1775, but retired from it in July, 1777. The British retired from it shortly after.

TIDES. Homer is the earliest profane author who speaks of the tides. Posidonius of Apamea accounted for the tides from the motion of the moon, about 79 B.C.; and Caesar speaks of them in his fourth book of the Gallic war. The theory of the tides was first satisfactorily explained by Kepler, 1598; but the honour of a complete explanation of them was reserved for sir Isaac Newton, about 1683.

TIEN-TSIN, see China, June, 1858-Jan. 1861.

TIERRA DEL FUEGO, see Missions, note.

TIERS ETAT, see States-General.

TIFLIS (Asiatic Russia), built about 469 by Vakhtang; became the capital of Georgia. It was taken by Genghis Khan in the 12th century; by Mustapha Pacha, 1576; by the Persians, 1796; and by the Russians, 1801.

TIGRANO-CERTA, capital of Armenia, built by Tigranes the Great, and taken by Lucullus and the Romans, after a great victory, 69.

TIGRIS, a river forming the eastern boundary of Mesopotamia, celebrated for the cities founded on its banks : Nineveh, Seleucia, Ctesiphon, and Bagdad. It was explored by an English steamer in 1838.

TILBURY (Essex). The camp formed here in 1588 to resist the Spanish invasion was visited by queen Elizabeth.

TILES are said to have been first made in England about 1246. They were taxed in 1784. The number of tiles taxed in England in 1820 was 81,924,626 ; and in 1830, 97,318,264. The tax was repealed in 1833.

TILSIT (on the Niemen), on which river, on a raft, the emperors of France and Russia met, 25 June, 1807. By a treaty concluded between France and Russia, signed 7 July, Napoleon restored to the Prussian monarch one-half of his territories, and Russia recognised the Confederation of the Rhine, and the elevation of Napoleon's three brothers, Joseph, Louis, and Jerome, to the thrones of Naples, Holland, and Westphalia.

TILTS, see Tournaments.

TIMBER. The annual demand of timber for the royal navy, in war, was 60,000 loads, or 40,000 full-grown trees, a ton each, of which 35 will stand on an acre ; in peace, 32,000 tons, or 48,000 loads. A 74 gun ship consumed 3000 loads, or 2000 tons of trees, the produce of 57 acres in a century. Hence the whole navy consumed 102,600 acres, and 1026 per annum. Allnut. Iron is now used in preference to timber. In 1843 we imported 1,317,645 loads of timber (cut and uncut) ; in 1857, 2,495,964 loads ; in 1866, 3,638,344 loads. In 1866, we imported 53,458 tons of mahogany. The duties on timber were modified in 1851.

TIMBER BENDING. Apparatus was invented for this purpose by Mr. T. Blanchard, of Boston, U.S., for which a medal was awarded at the Paris Exhibition of 1855. A company was formed for its application in this country in 1856.

TIMBUCTOO (N. Africa), a city built by Mansa Suleiman, a Mahometan, about 1214, and frequently subjugated by the sovereigns of Marocco. Since 1727 it has been partially independent.

TIME. Our ideas in regard to time have been of late greatly extended. The distant planet Neptune, discovered by Adams and Le Verrier in 1846, requires above 900 of our years for a single revolution ; and the coal measures in Wales, a thickness of strata of more than twelve miles, would require for its deposition hundreds of thousands of years ; while other formations could only be estimated in millions of years. Phillips ; see Clock, Sundials, Watches, &c.

TIMES NEWSPAPER. On 13 Jan. 1785, Mr. John Walter published the first number of the Daily Universal Register, price 2½d., printed on the logographic system (invented by Henry Johnson, a compositor), in which types containing syllables and words were employed instead of single letters.

On 1 Jan. 1788, the paper was named the Times. In 1803, when Mr. Walter gave up the paper to his son, the circulation was about 1000 ; that of the Morning Post being 4500.

Dr. Stoddart (satirised as Dr. Slop by Moore the poet) became editor in 1812, but five years after retired and set up in opposition the New Times, an unprofitable speculation. Thomas Barnes became next editor. He died 7 May, 1841. The succeeding editors were William F. A. Delane, who died in 1858, and John Thaddeus Delane (his son).

On 28 Nov. 1814, the Times was first printed by steam power (the invention of F. König), 1200 per hour, afterwards increased to 2000 and 4000.

The powerful articles contributed by Edward Stirling gained the paper the name of the Thunderer.

On 19 Jan. 1829, the first double number appeared. In July, 1834, an attack of Mr. O'Connell in the house of commons on the correctness of the reports of the debates in the Times was signally defeated.

Shortly after began the convenient summary of the debates, written in the first instance by Mr. Horace Twiss.

In 1841 the Times was instrumental in detecting and exposing a scheme organised by a company, to defraud by forgery all the influential bankers of Europe. This brought on the proprietors an action for libel (in the case Bogle v. Lawson). The jury found the charge to be true, giving a verdict of one farthing damages, but the judges refused costs. Subscriptions were set on foot in all parts of Europe to reimburse the proprietors for the immense outlay in defending the action. This they firmly declined ; and the money was expended in establishing Times Scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge, and at Christ's Hospital, and other schools ; marble tablets also, commemorating the event, were set up in the Royal Exchange and in other places. These were the greatest honours ever conceded to a newspaper.

In Oct. 1845, the Times express was for the first time conveyed to India overland, by the agency of lieut. Waghorn.

Of the number of the Times containing the life of the duke of Wellington for 19 Nov. 1852, 70,000 were sold—the ordinary number being then 36,000 ; the present circulation is stated to vary from 50,000 to 60,000 (1868).

In 1854, the proprietors sent Mr. W. H. Russell as their special correspondent to the seat of war in the Crimea ; in 1857 to India, and in 1861 to the southern states of North America.

Times Fund.—On the 12th of Oct. 1854, sir Robert Peel originated by a letter in the Times a subscription for the sick and wounded in the Crimean war and in less than a fortnight 15,000*l.* were sent to the Times' office to be thus appropriated. Mr. Macdonald (the present manager) was sent out by the proprietors as special commissioner to administer the fund, from which large quantities of food and clothing were supplied to the sufferers, with inestimable advantage; see Scutari, and Nightingale.

In Dec. 1858, the Times drew attention to the state of the houseless poor of London; and in a few days 8000*l.* were subscribed for their relief.

In 1851, 13,000,000 copies were sold; in 1857, 16,100,000; in 1859, 16,900,000; in 1860, 16,670,000.

In 1860, 16,400 copies per hour were printed.

On 21 June, 1861, the Times consisted of 24 pages, containing 4076 advertisements (about 1810 it contained 150 advertisements).

TIN. The Phœnicians traded with England for this article for more than 1100 years before the Christian era. It is said that this trade first gave them commercial importance in the ancient world. Under the Saxons, our tin mines appear to have been neglected; but after the coming in of the Normans, they produced considerable revenues to the earls of Cornwall, particularly to Richard, brother of Henry III. A charter and various immunities were granted by Edmund, earl Richard's brother, who also framed the Stannary laws (which see), laying a duty on the tin, payable to the earls of Cornwall. Edward III. confirmed the tinners in their privileges, and erected Cornwall into a dukedom, with which he invested his son, Edward the Black Prince, 1337. Since that time the heirs-apparent to the crown of England, if eldest sons, have enjoyed it successively. Tin mines were discovered in Germany, which lessened the value of those in England, till then the only tin mines in Europe, 1240. Anderson. Discovered in Barbary, 1640; in India, 1740; in New Spain, 1782. In 1857, 9783 tons, in 1860, 10,462 tons, in 1864, 10,108 tons, in 1865, 10,039 tons, of metallic tin were procured from British mines. Of tin plates we exported in value, in 1847, 484,184*l.*; in 1854, 1,075,531*l.*; in 1860, 1,500,812*l.*; in 1864, 1,263,246*l.*; in 1866, 1,896,341*l.*

TINCHEBRAY (N.W. France), where a battle was fought between Henry I. of England and his brother Robert duke of Normandy. England and Normandy were reunited under Henry, at the decease of William Rufus, who had already possessed himself of Normandy by a mortgage from his brother Robert, at his setting out for Palestine. Robert, on his return, recovered Normandy by an accommodation with Henry; but the two having afterwards quarrelled, the former was defeated by the latter in the battle of Tinchebray, 28 Sept. 1106, and Normandy was annexed to the crown of England. Hénauld.

TIPPERMUIR (near Perth). Here the marquess of Montrose defeated the covenanters under lord Elcho, 1 Sept. 1644.

TITANIUM, a rare metal, discovered by Gregor in menakite, a Cornish mineral, in 1791, and in 1794 by Klaproth.

TITHES or TENTHS, were commanded to be given to the tribe of Levi, 1490 B.C. Lev. xxvii. 30. Abraham returning from his victory over the kings (Gen. xiv.), gave tithes of the spoil to Melchisedek, king of Salem, priest of the most high God (1913 B.C.). For the first 800 years of the Christian church they were given purely as alms, and were voluntary. Wickliffe. "I will not put the title of the clergy to tithes upon any divine right, though such a right certainly commenced, and I believe as certainly ceased, with the Jewish theocracy." Blackstone. They were established in France by Charlemagne, about 800, and abolished 1789. Tenths were confirmed in the Lateran councils, 1215. Rainaldi.—The payment of tithes appears to have been claimed by Augustin, the first archbishop of Canterbury, and to have been allowed by Ethelbert, king of Kent, under the term "God's fee," about 600.

The first mention of them in any English written law, is a constitutional decree made in a synod strongly enjoining tithes, 786.

Offa, king of Mercia, gave unto the church the tithes of all his kingdom, to expiate the death of Ethelbert, king of the East Angles, whom he had caused to be basely murdered, 794.

Tithes were first granted to the English clergy in a general assembly held by Ethelwold, A.D. 844. Henry.

In 1545, tithes were fixed at the rate of 2*s. 9d.* in the pound on rent; since then, many acts have been passed respecting them.

The Tithe Commutation act, passed 13 Aug. 1836. It was amended in 1837, 1840, and 1846.

A rector is entitled to all the tithes; a vicar to a small part only, frequently to none.

Several acts relating to tithes in Ireland have been passed in 1832-47, altering and improving the tithe system.

TITHING. The number or company of ten men with their families knit together in a society, all of them being bound to the king for the peaceable and good behaviour of each of their society; of these companies there was one chief person, who, from his office, was called (toothingman) tithingman; but now he is nothing but a constable, formerly called the headborough. Cowel.

TITLES ROYAL. Henry IV. had the title of "Grace" and "My liege," 1399. Henry VI., "Excellent Grace," 1422. Edward IV., "Most High and Mighty Prince," 1461. Henry VII., "Highness," 1485; Henry VIII. the same title, and sometimes "Grace," 1509 et seq. But these two last were absorbed in the title of "Majesty," being that with which Francis I. of France addressed Henry at their memorable interview in 1520; see Field of the Cloth of Gold. Henry VIII. was the first and last king who was styled "Dread Sovereign." James I. coupled to "Majesty" the present "Sacred," or "Most Excellent Majesty." "Majesty" was the style of the emperors of Germany; the first king to whom it was given was Louis XI. of France, about 1463.

TIVOLI, see Tibur.

TOBACCO, Nicotiana tabacum, received its name from Tabacco, a province of Yucatan, New Spain; some say from the island of Tobago, one of the Caribbees; others from Tobasco, in the gulf of Florida. It is said to have been first observed at St. Domingo, 1492; and to have been used freely by the Spaniards in Yucatan in 1520. Tobacco was either first brought to England in 1565, by sir John Hawkins; or by sir Walter Raleigh and sir Francis Drake, in 1586. It was manufactured only for exportation for some years. Stow's Chron. The Pied Bull inn, at Islington, is said to have been the first house in England where tobacco was smoked. In 1584 a proclamation was issued against it. James I. published "A Counterblaste against Tobacco," and the star-chamber ordered the duties to be 6s. 10d. per pound, 1614. Its cultivation was prohibited in England by Charles II., 1684. Act laying a duty on the importation was passed 1684. The cultivation was allowed in Ireland, 1779. The tax was increased and put under the excise, 1789. Anderson; Ashe. Various statutes have passed relative to tobacco. Act to revive the act prohibiting the culture of tobacco in Ireland passed 2 Will. IV., Aug. 1831. Act directing that tobacco grown in Ireland be purchased in order to its being destroyed, 24 March, 1832. The quantity consumed in England in 1791 was nine millions and a half of pounds, and in 1829 about fifteen millions of pounds. We imported in 1850, 35,166,358 lbs., and 1,557,558 lbs. manufactured (cigars and snuff): in 1855, 36,820,846 lbs., and 2,651,544 lbs. manufactured; in 1860, 48,936,471 lbs., and 2,110,430 lbs. manufactured; in 1864, 61,042,667 lbs., and 6,578,707 lbs. manufactured; in 1866, 54,374,800 lbs., and 3,171,906 lbs. manufactured. The tobacco duties were modified in 1863.

TOBAGO (West Indies), discovered by Columbus in 1498; settled by the Dutch 1642. Taken by the English, 1672; retaken, 1674. In 1748, it was declared a neutral island; but in 1763 it was ceded to the English. Tobago was taken by the French under De Grasse in 1781, and confirmed to them in 1783. Again taken by the English, 14 April, 1793, but restored at the peace of Amiens, 6 Oct. 1802. The island was once more taken by the British under general Grinfield, 1 July, 1803, and was confirmed to them by the peace of Paris, in 1814. Population in 1861, 15,410.

TOBITSCHAU (Moravia). In a sharp action here, on 15 July, 1866, the Austrians were defeated by the army of the crown prince of Prussia with the loss of 500 killed and wounded and 500 prisoners, and seventeen guns.

TOISON D'OR or GOLDEN FLEECE (which see).

TOKENS, BANK, silver pieces issued by the Bank of England, of the value of 5s., 1 Jan. 1798. The Spanish dollar had a small profile of George III. stamped on the neck of the Spanish king. They were raised to the value of 5s. 6d. 14 Nov. 1811. Bank tokens were also current in Ireland, where those issued by the bank passed for 6s. and lesser sums until 1817. They were called in on the revision of the coinage. Tradesmen were permitted to issue tokens as small coins from 1648 till 16 Aug. 1672, when their circulation was prohibited by royal proclamation. These tokens are figured and described in a work by Wm. Boyne, 1858.

TOLBIAC (now ZULFICH), near the Rhine, where Clovis totally defeated the Allemanni, 496.

TOLEDO, the ancient Toletum (Central Spain), made capital of the Visigothic kingdom by Athanagild, 554; taken by the Saracens, 712. Toledo was taken after war, begun 1081, by Alfonso I. of Castile, 25 May, 1085. In 1088 the archbishop was made primate of Spain. The university was founded in 1499. Toledo sword-blades have been famed since the 15th century.

TOLENTINO (in the Papal states), where a treaty was made between the pope and the French, 19 Feb. 1797. Here Joachim Murat having resumed arms against the allies, was defeated by the Austrians, 3 May, 1815.

TOLERATION ACT, passed in 1689, to relieve Protestant dissenters from the church of England. Their liberties were, however, greatly endangered in the latter days of queen Anne, who died on the day that the Schism bill was to become a law, 1 Aug. 1714.

The toleration granted was somewhat limited. It exempted persons who took the new oath of allegiance and supremacy and made also a declaration against popery, from the penalties incurred by absenting themselves from church and holding unlawful conventicles; and it allowed the quakers to substitute an affirmation for an oath, but did not relax the provisions of the Test act (which see). The party spirit of the times checked the king in his liberal measures.

TOLLS were first paid by vessels passing the Stade on the Elbe, 1109. They were first demanded by the Danes of vessels passing the Sound, 1341; see Stade, and Sound. Toll-bars in England originated in 1267, on the grant of a penny for every waggon that passed through a certain manor; and the first regular toll was collected a few years after for mending the road in London between St. Giles's and Temple-bar. Gathered for repairing the high-ways of Holborn-inn-lane and Martin's lane (now Aldersgate-street), 1346. Toll-gates or turnpikes were set up in 1663. In 1827, 27 turnpikes near London were removed by parliament; 81 turnpikes and toll-bars ceased on the north of London on 1 July, 1864; and 61 on the south side, ceased on 31 Oct. 1865; and many others on the Essex and Middlesex roads ceased on 31 Oct. 1866; see Wales, 1843.

TOLOSA. On the plain named las Navas de Tolosa, near the Sierra Morena, S. Spain, Alfonso, king of Castile, aided by the kings of Arragon and Navarre, gained a great victory over the Moors, 16 July, 1212. This conflict is sometimes termed the battle of Muradal.

TONNAGE, see Tonnage.

TONOMETER, a delicate apparatus for tuning musical instruments, by marking the number of vibrations, was invented by H. Scheibler, of Crefeld, about 1834. It received little notice till M. Kœnig removed some of the difficulties opposed to its successful use, and exhibited it at the International Exhibition of 1862.

TONQUIN, South Asia, part of the kingdom of Anam. Here a French missionary bishop, Melchior, was murdered with great barbarity 27 July, 1858: the abbé Neron was also murdered, 3 Nov. 1860; see Anam.

TONSURE, the clerical crown, adopted, it is said, in imitation of St. Peter, was disapproved of in the fourth century as pertaining only to penitents, and not made essential till the end of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century.

TONTINES, loans given for life annuities with benefit of survivorship, invented by Laurence Tonti, a Neapolitan. They were first set on foot at Paris to reconcile the people to cardinal Mazarin's government, by amusing them with the hope of becoming suddenly rich, 1653. Voltaire. Tonti died in the Bastille after seven years' imprisonment. A Mr. Jennings was an original subscriber for a 100*l.* share in a tontine company; and being the last survivor of the shareholders, his share produced him 3000*l.* per annum. He died, aged 103 years, 19 June, 1798, worth 2,115,244*l.*

TÖPLITZ (Bohemia). Here were signed, in 1813, two treaties—one between Austria, Russia, and Prussia, 9 Sept.; and one between Great Britain and Austria, 3 Oct.

TORBANEHILL MINERAL. Mr. Gillespie, of Torbanehill, granted a lease of all the coal in the estate to Messrs. Russell. In the course of working, the lessees extracted a combustible mineral of considerable value as a source of coal-gas, and realised a large profit in the sale of it as gas-coal. The lessor then denied that the mineral was coal, and disputed the right of the lessees to work it. At the trial in 1853 there was a great array of scientific men and practical gas engineers, and the evidence was most conflicting. One side maintained the mineral to be coal, the other that it was bituminous schist. The judge set aside the scientific evidence, and the jury pronounced it to be coal. The authorities in Prussia have since pronounced it not to be coal. Percy.

TORDESILLAS (near Valladolid). Here was signed, in 1494, a treaty modifying the boundary line which pope Alexander VI. had assigned, in 1493, in his division of the new world between Spain and Portugal.

TORGAU (Saxony, N. Germany), the site of a battle between Frederick II. of Prussia and the Austrians, in which the former obtained a signal victory; the Austrian general, count Daun, a renowned warrior, being wounded, 3 Nov. 1760. He had, in 1757, obtained a great victory over the Prussian king. Torgau was taken by the allies in 1814; and given to Prussia, 1815.

TORIES, a term given to a political party about 1678; see Whig. Dr. Johnson defines a Tory as one who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy of the Church of England. The Tories long maintained the doctrines of "divine hereditary indefeasible right, lineal succession, passive obedience, prerogative," &c. Bolingbroke; see Conservatives. For the chief Tory administrations, see Pitt, Perceval, Liverpool, Wellington, Peel, Derby, and Disraeli.

TORONTO, the capital of Canada West, founded in 1794 as York; it received its present name in 1834. It was made a bishopric in 1839.

TORPEDO SHELLS, a name given to explosives placed under ships, an invention ascribed to David Bushnell, in 1777. Torpedo shells ignited by electricity were employed in the war in the United States, 1861-5. On 4 Oct. 1865, Messrs. M'Kay & Beardslee tried them at Chatham before the duke of Somerset and others. An old vessel, the Terpsichore, was speedily sunk. The preliminary arrangements are considered rather complicated. Magneto-electricity was employed. Torpedoes, made by professor F. Abel, of Woolwich, were tried in May, 1866.

TORRES STRAIT, dividing Australia from Papua or New Guinea, was discovered by Torres, a Spaniard, in 1606.

TORRES VEDRAS (a city of Portugal). Near here Wellington, retreating from the French, took up a strong position, called the Lines of Torres Vedras, 10 Oct. 1810.

TORTOLA, see Virgin Isles.

TORTURE was only permitted by the Romans in the examination of slaves. It was applied to heretics by the Roman catholic clergy, and was used in England so late as 1640 (when Archer, who took part in an attack on Laud's palace, was racked), and in Scotland until 1690. The trial by torture was abolished in Portugal, 1776; in France, by Louis XVI., in 1789; and in Sweden, by Gustavus III., 1786. General Picton was convicted of applying the torture to Louisa Calderon, in Trinidad, at his trials, 21 Feb. 1806, and 11 June, 1808.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE, see Tetotalter.

TOTNES (Devon): thought to be the Roman Ad Durium Amnem. It was held by Judhael de Totneis, who built the castle about 1085. It was disfranchised for gross corruption and bribery, by the Reform act, 15 Aug. 1867.

TOULON (S. France), an important military and naval port. It was taken by the constable of Bourbon, 1524, and by the emperor Charles V. in 1536. In 1707 it was bombarded by the allies, both by land and sea, by which almost the whole town was reduced to a heap of ruins, and several ships burned; but the allies were at last obliged to raise the siege. It surrendered 27 Aug. 1793, to the British admiral, lord Hood, who took possession both of the town and shipping, in the name of Louis XVII., under a stipulation to assist in restoring the French constitution of 1789. A conflict took place between the English and French forces, when the latter were repulsed, 15 Nov. 1793. Toulon was retaken by Bonaparte, 19 Dec., when great cruelties were exercised towards such of the inhabitants as were supposed to be favourable to the British.—A naval battle off this port was fought 11 Feb. 1744, between the English under Mathews and Lestock, against the fleets of France and Spain: in this engagement the brave captain Cornewall fell. The victory was lost by a misunderstanding between the English admirals. Mathews was afterwards dismissed for misconduct.

TOULOUSE, the ancient TOLOSA (S. France), founded about 615 B.C.; was the capital of the Visigothic kings in A.D. 419; and was taken by Clovis in 508. The dukes of Aquitaine reigned here, 631-761. A university was established here, 1229, and a parliament, 1302. The inquisition was established here to extirpate heretics, 1229. The troubadours, or rhetoricians of Toulouse, had their origin about 850, and consisted of a fraternity of poets, whose art was extended throughout Europe, and gave rise to the Italian and French poetry; see Troubadours. The allied British and Spanish army entered this city on 12 April, 1814, immediately after the BATTLE OF TOULOUSE, fought between the British Peninsular army under lord Wellington, and the French led by marshal Soult, 10 April, 1814. The French were forced to retreat, after twelve hours' fighting. Neither of the commanders knew that Napoleon had abdicated the throne of France.

TOULOUSE. The county was created out of the kingdom of Aquitaine by Charlemagne, in 778. It enjoyed great prosperity till the dreadful war of the Albigenses (which see), when the count Raymond VI. was expelled, and Simon de Montfort became count. At his death, in 1218, Raymond VII. obtained his inheritance. His daughter Jane and her husband, Alphonse (brother of Louis IX. of France), dying without issue, the county of Toulouse was united to the French monarchy in 1271.

TOURAINÉ, the garden of France, was conquered by the Visigoths about 480. It was ceded to Geoffroy count of Anjou, 1044, and thus became the property of the Plantagenet kings of England. It was seized by Philip Augustus in 1203, and was made a duchy by John 1360. It was finally united to the crown at the death of the duke of Anjou, 1584.

TOURNAMENTS or JOUSTS, were martial sports of the ancient cavaliers. Tournament is derived from the French word tourner, "to turn round." Tournaments were frequent about 890; and were regulated by the emperor Henry I., about 919. The Lateran council published an article against their continuance in 1136. One was held in Smithfield so late as the 12th century, when the taste for them declined in England. Henry II. of France, in a tilt with the count of Montgomery, had his eye struck out, an accident which caused the king's death in a few days, 29 June, 1559. Tournaments were then abolished in France.—A magnificent feast and tournament, under the auspices of Archibald, earl of Eglintoun, took place at Eglintoun castle, 29 Aug. 1839, and the following week: many of the visitors (among whom was the present emperor of the French) assumed the characters of ancient knights, lady Seymour being the "Queen of Beauty." Among the festivities at the marriage of prince Humbert, at Turin, was a tournament, 24 April, 1868.

TOURNAI (S. Belgium) was very flourishing till it was ravaged by the barbarians in the 5th century. It has sustained many sieges. Taken by the allies in 1709, and ceded to the house of Austria by the treaty of Utrecht; but the Dutch were allowed to place a garrison in it, as one of the barrier towns. It was taken by the French under general La Bourdonnaye, 8 Nov. 1792. Several battles were fought near Tournai in May, 1793, and May, 1794.

TOURNIQUET (from turner, to turn), an instrument for stopping the flow of blood into a limb, by tightening the bandage, employed in amputations, is said to have been invented by Morelli at the siege of Besançon, 1674. J. L. Petit, in France, invented the screw tourniquet in 1718.

TOURS, an ancient city, central France, near which Charles Martel gained a great victory over the Saracens, and saved Europe, 10 Oct. 732, and from which he acquired the name of Martel, signifying hammer. This conflict is also called the battle of Poitiers.

TOWERS. That of Babel, the first of which we read, built in the plains of Shinar (Gen. xi.), 2247 B.C.; see Babel. The Tower of the Winds at Athens, built 550 B.C. The Tower of Pharos (see Pharos), 280 B.C. The round towers in Ireland were the only structures of stone found at the arrival of the English, 1169, except some buildings in the maritime towns founded by the Danes. These towers are tall hollow pillars, nearly cylindrical, but narrowing towards the top, pierced with lateral holes to admit the light, and covered with conical roofs. Fifty-six of them still remain, from 50 to 130 feet high; see Pisa.

TOWER OF LONDON. The tradition that Julius Cæsar founded a citadel here (about 54 B.C.) is very doubtful. A royal palace, consisting of no more than what is now called the White Tower, which appears to have been first marked out by William the Conqueror, 1076, was commenced in 1078, and completed by his son, William Rufus, who, in 1098, surrounded it with walls and a broad deep ditch. Several succeeding princes made additions to it, and king Edward III. built the church. In 1638, the White Tower was rebuilt; and since the restoration of king Charles II. it has been thoroughly repaired, and a great number of additional buildings made to it. Here are the Armoury, Jewel-office, and various other divisions and buildings of peculiar interest; and here took place many executions of illustrious persons, and many murders (king Henry VI., 1471; king Edward V. and his brother, 1485; sir Thomas Overbury, 1613). The armoury and 280,000 stand of arms, &c., were destroyed by fire, 30 Oct. 1841. The "New Buildings" in the Tower were completed in 1850; see Blood.

TOWNLEY MARBLES, in the British Museum, were purchased in 1805 and 1814.

TOWTON (Yorkshire), where a sanguinary battle was fought, 29 March, 1461, between the houses of York (Edward IV.) and Lancaster (Henry VI.), to the latter of whom it was fatal, and on whose side more than 37,000 fell. Edward issued orders to give no quarter, and the most merciless slaughter ensued. Henry was made prisoner, and confined in the Tower; his queen, Margaret, fled to Flanders.

TOXOPHILITES (from toxon, a bow, and philos, a lover), a society established by sir Aston Lever in 1781. In 1834 they took grounds in the inner circle of Regent's-park, and built the archery lodge. They possess a very curious piece of plate, given by Catherine, queen of Charles II., to be shot for by the Finsbury archers, of whom the Toxophilites are the representatives.

TRACT SOCIETIES. The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge was founded in 1698; the Religious Tract Society, London, in 1795; and other similar societies since.

TRACTARIANISM, a term applied to certain opinions on church matters propounded in the "Tracts for the Times," of which ninety numbers were published, 1833-41. The principal writers were the revs. Dr. E. Pusey, J. H. Newman, J. Keble, J. Froude, and I. Williams—all of the university of Oxford; see Puseyism.

TRACTION-ENGINES were used on common roads in London in 1860, but afterwards restricted. In Aug. 1862 one of Bray's traction-engines conveyed through the city a mass of iron, which would have required 29 horses.

TRADE AND PLANTATIONS, BOARD OF. Cromwell seems to have given the first notions of a board of trade: in 1655 he appointed his son Richard, with many lords of his council, judges, and gentlemen, and about twenty merchants of London, York, Newcastle, Yarmouth, Dover, &c., to meet and consider by what means the trade and navigation of the republic might be best promoted. Thomas's Notes of the Rolls. Charles II., on his restoration, established a council of trade for keeping a control over the whole commerce of the nation, 1660; he afterwards instituted a board of trade and plantations which was remodelled by William III. This board was abolished in 1782; and a new council for the affairs of trade on its present plan was appointed, 2 Sept. 1786.

TRADES' MUSEUMS. The formation of one was undertaken in 1853, jointly by the commissioners of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and the Society of Arts. The animal department was opened 17 May, 1855, when a paper on the mutual relations of trade and manufactures was read by professor E. Solly. The contents of this museum were removed to the South Kensington Museum, which was opened 24 June, 1857. The French "Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers" was established 1795.

TRADES' UNIONS. By 6 Geo. IV. c. 129 (1825), the combination laws were repealed, and other provisions made. As trades' unions formed for maintaining the rate of wages, &c., are not recognized by law, a commission (including lord Elcho, Thomas Hughes, and others, with sir Wm. Erle as chairman) was appointed to inquire into their constitution, 14 Feb. 1867, and an act to facilitate their proceedings was passed 5 April following. Their reports were issued during the year, disclosing the existence of murderous practices, with great intimidation; see Sheffield, and Manchester.

TRAFALGAR (Cape S. Spain), off which a great naval victory was gained by the British, under Nelson, against the combined fleets of France and Spain, commanded by admiral Villeneuve and two Spanish admirals, 21 Oct. 1805. The enemy's force was eighteen French and fifteen Spanish vessels, all of the line: that of the British, twenty-seven ships. After a protracted fight, Villeneuve and the other admirals were taken, and nineteen of their ships captured, sunk, or destroyed. Nelson was killed, and admiral Collingwood succeeded to the command. Nelson's ship was the Victory; and his last signal was, "England expects every man will do his duty;" see Nelson.

TRAFFIC in the metropolis is now regulated by the Metropolitan Streets act, passed 20 Aug. 1867.

TRAGEDY, see Drama.

TRAINING SCHOOLS, one of these useful establishments was founded at Battersea in 1840, by sir J. Kay Shuttleworth, and Mr. E. C. Tufnell; the latter, who was then in the Poor Law Commission, devoting a year's salary towards the expenses. Mr. Mann stated, in 1855, that there were about forty of these schools in different parts of the country.

TRAJAN'S COLUMN (in Rome), erected 114, by the Roman senate and people, to commemorate his victories, and executed by Apollodorus. It was built in the square called the Forum Romanum; it is of the Tuscan order, and from its base, exclusive of the statue and pedestal, is 127½ feet high.

TRAM-ROADS, an abbreviation of Outram-roads, derived the name from Mr. Benjamin Outram, who, in 1800, made improvements in the system of railways for common vehicles, then in use in the north of England. The iron tram-road from Croydon to Wandsworth was completed on 24 July, 1801. Mr. Outram was father of the late sir James Outram, the Indian general. Chambers.

TRANQUEBAR (East Indies), the Danish settlement here, founded in 1618, was purchased by the English in 1845.

TRANSFIGURATION. The change of Christ's appearance on Mount Tabor, in the presence of Peter, James, and John, A. D. 32 (Matt. xvii.). The feast of the Transfiguration, kept on 6 Aug., was instituted by pope Calixtus II. in 1455.

TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD, see Blood.

TRANSIT, see Venus.

TRANSLATION TO HEAVEN. The translation of Enoch to heaven for his faith at the age of 365 years, 3017 B. C. The prophet Elijah was translated to heaven in a chariot of fire, 896 B. C.—The possibility of translation to the abode of eternal life has been maintained by some extravagant enthusiasts. The Irish house of commons expelled Mr. Asgill from his seat, for his book asserting the possibility of translation to the other world without death, 1703.

TRANSPADANE REPUBLIC, comprising Lombardy and part of the Venetian territories, was established by Bonaparte after his victory at Lodi, 10 May, 1796. With the Cispadane republic, it merged into the Cisalpine republic, Oct. 1797.

TRANSPORTATION, see Banishment. Judges were given the power of sentencing offenders to transportation "into any of his majesty's dominions in North America," by 18 Charles II. c. 3 (1666), and by 4 Geo. I. c. 11 (1718). Transportation ceased in 1775, but was revived in 1786. The reception of convicts was successfully refused by the Cape of Good Hope (in 1849) and by the Australian colonies (1864). Transportation, even to West Australia, where labour is wanted, is to cease in a few years, through the fierce opposition of the eastern colonies. In consequence of the recent difficulty experienced in transporting felons, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99 was passed to provide other punishment, namely, penal servitude, empowering her majesty to grant pardon to offenders under certain conditions, and licences to others to be at large: such licences being liable to be revoked if necessary; and many have been. These licences are termed "tickets of leave." The system was much assailed in Oct. and Nov. 1862, on account of many violent crimes being traced to ticket-of-leavers; see Crime.

John Eyre, esq., a man of fortune, was sentenced to transportation for stealing a few quires of paper. Phillips 1 Nov. 1771
The Rev. Dr. Halloran, tutor to the earl of Chesterfield, was transported for forging a frank (rod. postage) 9 Sept. 1818
The first transportation of felons to Botany Bay was in May, 1787; where governor Phillip arrived with about 800 on 20 Jan. 1788; convicts were afterwards sent to Van Diemen's Land, Norfolk Island, &c.

Returning from transportation was punishable with death until 5 Will. IV. c. 67, Aug. 1834, when an act was passed making the offence punishable by transportation for life.

The last shipment of convicts was to West Australia (which had already received 10,000) in 1867.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION, the doctrine of the "real presence." That the bread and wine in the Eucharist are changed into the very flesh and blood of Christ by the consecration, was broached in the days of Gregory III. (731), and accepted by Amalarinus and Radburtus (about 830), but rejected by Rabanus Maurus, Johannes Scotus Erigena, Berengarius, Wickliffe, and others. In the Lateran council, held at Rome by Innocent III., the word "Transubstantiation" was used to express this doctrine, which was decreed to be incontrovertible; and all who opposed it were condemned as heretics. This was confirmed by the council of Trent, 18 Jan. 1562. John Huss, Jerome of Prague, and other martyrs of the reformation, suffered for denying this dogma, which is renounced by the church of England (28th article), and by all protestant dissenters.* The declaration against transubstantiation, invocation of the saints, and the sacrifice of the mass, on taking any civil office, was abolished by an act passed 25 July, 1867.

TRANSYLVANIA, an Austrian province, was part of the ancient Dacia (whish see). In 1526, John Zapoly rendered himself independent of the emperor Ferdinand I. by the aid of the Turks. His successors ruled with much difficulty till Jan. 1699, when the emperor Leopold I., by the treaty of Carlowitz, finally incorporated Transylvania into the Austrian dominions. The Transylvanian deputies did not take their seat in the Austrian parliament till 20 Oct. 1863. A decree for the convocation of the Transylvanian diet was issued 12 Sept. 1865. The inhabitants are about 1,100,000 ignorant Roumans, 1,500,000 Saxon colonists, and 550,000 Magyars, the last being the ruling class. The union of Transylvania with Hungary in 1848, which has caused much discontent, was ratified by the Transylvanian diet, 25 Dec. 1866.

TRAPPISTS. The first abbey of La Trappe in Normandy was founded, in 1140, by Retron, comte de Perche. The present order of Trappists owes its origin to the learned Jean le Bouthillier de la Rancé (editor of Anacreon when aged 14), who, from some cause not certainly known, renounced the world, and sold all his property, giving the proceeds to the abbey of La Trappe, to which he retired in 1662, to live there in great austerity. After several efforts he succeeded in reforming the monks, and in establishing a new rule, which commands silence, prayer, reading, and manual labour, and which forbids study, wine, fish, &c. Rancé was born in 1620, and died in 1700.†

* Luther maintained the doctrine of con-substantiation, viz., that after consecration the body and blood of Christ are substantially present in the bread and wine. He was opposed by Bucer, Carlstadt, Zwingle, and others (termed sacramentarians), who asserted that the Lord's supper is only a commemorative rite.

† A number of these monks, driven from France in the revolution of 1790, were received by Mr. Weld, TRASIMENE, see Thrasymene.

TRAUTENAU (Bohemia). On 27 June, 1866, the first corps of the army of the crown prince of Prussia seized Trautenau, but was defeated and repulsed by the Austrians under Gablenz: on the 28th, the Prussians defeated the Austrians with great loss.

TRAVELLERS' CLUB (Pall-mall), established in 1815. A member must have "travelled out of the British islands to a distance of at least 500 miles from London, in a direct line."

TRAVELLING IN ENGLAND. In 1707 it took in summer one day, in winter nearly two days, to travel from London to Oxford (46 miles). In 1817 the journey was accomplished in six or seven hours. By the Great Western Railway express (63 miles) it is done in 1½ hour. In 1828, a gentleman travelled from Newcastle to London (273 miles) inside the best coach in 35 hours, at an expense of 6*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* or 6*d.* per mile (including dinner &c.). In 1857, the charge of the Great Northern railway (275¼ miles) first-class express (6 hours) was 50*s.* 9*d.*

TREAD-MILL, an invention of the Chinese, to raise water for the irrigation of the fields. The complicated tread-mill introduced into the prisons of Great Britain is the invention of Mr. (afterwards sir William) Cubitt, of Ipswich. It was erected at Brixton gaol, 1817, and soon afterwards in other large prisons.

TREASON, see High Treason. PETTY TREASON (a term abolished in 1828, defined by the statute of 25 Edw. III. 1352) was a wife's murder of her husband; a servant's murder of his master; and an ecclesiastical person's murder of his prelate or other superior.

TREASON-FELONY. By the Crown and Government Security Act, 11 Vict. c. 12 (1848), certain treasons heretofore punishable with death were mitigated to felonies, and subjected to transportation or imprisonment. The Fenians in Ireland were tried under this act; see Trials, 1865.

TREASURER OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH, the third great officer of the crown, a lord by virtue of his office, having the custody of the king's treasure, governing the upper court of exchequer, and formerly sitting judicially among the barons. The first lord high treasurer in England was Odo, earl of Kent, in the reign of William I. This great trust is now confided to a commission, and is vested in five persons, called "lords commissioners for executing the office of lord high treasurer," and of these the chancellor of the exchequer is usually one; the first lord being usually the premier; see Administrations, for a succession of these officers. The first of this rank in IRELAND was John de St. John, Henry III. 1217; the last, William, duke of Devonshire, 1766; vice-treasurers were appointed till 1789; then commissioners till 1816, when the revenues of Great Britain and Ireland were united. The first lord high treasurer of SCOTLAND was sir Walter Ogilvie, appointed by James I. in 1420; the last, in 1641, John, earl of Traquair, when commissioners were appointed.

TREASURER OF THE CHAMBER, formerly an officer of great consideration, and always a member of the privy council. He discharged the bills of all the king's tradesmen, and had his office in Cleveland-row, in the vicinity of the royal palace. His duties were transferred and the office suppressed at the same time with the offices of master of the great wardrobe and coffer of the household in 1782. Bealson.

TREATIES. The first formal and written treaty made in England with any foreign nation was entered into at Kingston between Henry III. and the dauphin of France (then in England and leagued with the barons), 11 Sept. 1217. The first commercial treaty was with Guy, earl of Flanders, 2 Edw. 1274: the second with Portugal and Spain, 1308. Anderson. The chief treaties of the nations of Europe will be found described in their respective places: the following forms an index; see Coalitions, Leagues, &c.

TREBIA, now Trebbia, a river in North Italy, near which Hannibal defeated the Roman consul Sempronius, 218 B.C.; and Suvarrow defeated the French marshal Macdonald and compelled him to retreat, 17-19 June, 1799.

TREBIZOND, a port of Asia Minor in the Black Sea, was colonised by the Greeks, and became subject to the kings of Pontus. It enjoyed self-government under the Roman empire, and when the Latins took Constantinople in 1204, it became the seat of an empire which endured till 1461, when it was conquered by the Turks under Mahomet I.

TRECENTO, see Italy, note.

TREES OF LIBERTY were planted in Paris and other parts of France during the revolutionary eras, 1790 and 1848. These trees were cut down in Paris in Jan. 1850, when riots ensued, put down by the military.

TRENT (the ancient Tridentum), in the Tyrol, belongs to Austria. The council held here is reckoned in the Roman catholic church as the 18th or last general council. Its decisions are implicitly received as the standard of faith, morals, and discipline in that church. It first sat 13 Dec. 1545, and continued (with interruptions) under pope Paul III., Julius III., and Pius IV. to 4 Dec. 1563; its last sitting (the 25th). A jubilee in relation to this council was celebrated in June, 1863. Trent was several times taken during the French war.

At this council was decreed, with anathemas: the canon of scripture (including the apocrypha), and the church its sole interpreter; the traditions to be equal with scripture; the seven sacraments (baptism, confirmation, the Lord's supper, penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony); transubstantiation; purgatory; indulgences; celibacy of the clergy; auricular confession, &c.

TRENT STEAMER, see United States, Nov.-Dec. 1861.

TRÈVES, the Roman Treviri, in Rhenish Prussia, was a prosperous city of the Gauls 12 B.C. The emperor Gallienus held his court here A.D. 255. Trèves was made an electorate in the 14th century, and became subject to the archbishop in 1585. The archbishopric is said to have been founded before the 7th century and to be the oldest in Germany. After various changes, Trèves was acquired by Prussia in 1815. In 1844 much excitement was occasioned by miracles said to have been wrought by a "Holy Coat."

"TRIA JUNCTA IN UNO" (three joined in one), the motto of the knights of the military order of the Bath, signifying "faith, hope, and charity;" see Bath.

TRIALS. Regulations for conducting trials were made by Lothaire and Edric, kings of Kent, about 673 to 680. Alfred the Great is said to have begun trial by jury; but there is good evidence of such trials long before his time. In a cause tried at Hawarden, nearly a hundred years before the reign of Alfred, we have a list of the twelve jurors; confirmed too by the fact that the descendants of one of them, of the name of Corbyn of the Gate, still preserve their name and residence at a spot in the parish yet called the Gate. Phillips; see Appeal.

- tism; the court held that the charge against the plaintiff of holding false doctrine was proved, and that the bishop was justified in his refusal. Mr. Gorham appealed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which pronounced its opinion (8 March, 1850) that "the doctrine held by Mr. Gorham was not contrary, or repugnant to the declared doctrine of the church of England, and that Mr. Gorham ought not, by reason of the doctrine held by him, to have been refused admission to the vicarage of Brampton-Speke." This decision led to subsequent proceedings in the three courts of law, successively, for a rule to show cause why a prohibition should not issue directed to the judge of the Arches court, and to the archbishop of Canterbury, against giving effect to the judgment of her majesty in council. The rule was refused in each court, and in the end Mr. Gorham was instituted into the vicarage in question, 7 Aug. 1850.]

The defendant, F. H. Swynfen, son of the testator's eldest half brother, claimed the estate as heir-at-law on the ground of the testator's insanity. The issue was brought to trial in March, 1856; but proceedings were stayed by Mrs. Swynfen's counsel, sir F. Thesiger, entering into an agreement with the opposite counsel, sir Alexander Cockburn, without her consent, and in defiance of her instructions. After various proceedings, the court of chancery ordered a new trial. She gained her cause, mainly through the energy of her counsel, Mr. Chas. R. Kennedy, to whom she had promised to pay 20,000*l.* for his extraordinary services. Mrs. Swynfen, however, married a Mr. Broun, and repudiated Mr. Kennedy's claim. The latter, in an action against her, obtained a verdict in his favour on 29 March, 1862, which was, on appeal, finally reversed in Feb. 1864. Mrs. Swynfen was non-suited in an action brought against her counsel (afterwards lord Chelmsford and lord chancellor), in July, 1859, and June, 1860.]

TRIBUNES OF THE PEOPLE (Tribuni Plebis), magistrates of Rome, first chosen from among the commons to represent the people, 494 B.C., at the time the people, after a quarrel with the Senators, had retired to Mons Sacer. The first two were C. Licinius and L. Albinus; but their number was soon after raised to five, and 37 years after to ten, which number remained fixed. Their office was annual, and as the first had been created on the 4th of the ides of December, that day was chosen for the election. In A.D. 1347, Nicolo di Rienzi assumed absolute power in Rome as tribune of the people, and reformed many abuses; but committing many extravagances, he lost his popularity and was compelled to abdicate. He returned to Rome and was assassinated, 8 Sept. 1354.

TRICHINIASIS, a fatal disease, occasioned by eating raw or underdone pork containing a minute worm named Trichina spiralis. Professor Owen discovered these worms in cysts, in human muscle, in 1832. The trichinæ are thoroughly destroyed by proper cooking. The disease excited much attention in 1865, and was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Thudichum at the Society of Arts on 18 April, 1866.

TRICOTEUSES (knitters), a name given to a number of French republican females, who zealously attended political meetings and executions in 1792, knitting at intervals.

TRIENNIAL PARLIAMENTS. On 15 Feb. 1641, an act was passed providing for the meeting of a parliament at least once in three years. This law was broken by the Long Parliament, and was repealed in 1664. Another triennial bill, passed in 1694, was repealed by the Septennial act, 1716; see Parliaments, and Septennial Parliaments.

TRIESTE, an Austrian port on the Adriatic, declared a free port by the emperor Charles VI., 1719, confirmed by Maria Theresa in 1750. It was held by the French in 1797 and 1805. Since the establishment of the overland mail to India, it has risen to great commercial importance. After various changes of rulers it was restored to Austria in 1814; see Lloyd's, note.

TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY, see Ordnance.

TRIMMER, a term applied to Charles Montague, earl of Halifax, and others who held similar political opinions, midway between those of the extreme Whigs and Tories, about the latter part of the 17th century. He assumed the title as an honour, asserting that it could be rightly given to the British constitution and church. Macaulay says that Halifax was a Trimmer on principle, and not a renegade. He died in 1715.

TRINCOMALEE (Ceylon), was taken from the Dutch, by the English, in 1782; it was retaken by the French the same year; but was restored to the Dutch by the peace of 1783. It surrendered to the British, under colonel Stewart, 26 Aug. 1795, and was confirmed to England by the peace of Amiens, in 1802; see Ceylon. Of a series of actions off Trincomalee between sir Edward Hughes and the French admiral Suffren, one was fought 18 Feb. 1782, the enemy having eleven ships to nine; on 12 April following, they had eighteen ships to eleven, and on 6 July, same year, they had fifteen ships to twelve. In all these conflicts the French were defeated.

TRINIDAD, an island in the West Indies, was discovered by Columbus in 1498, and was taken from the Spaniards by sir Walter Raleigh in 1595; but the French took it from the English in 1676. Taken by the British, with four ships of the line, and a military force under command of sir Ralph Abercromby, to whom the island capitulated, 18 Feb. 1797; they captured two, and burnt three Spanish ships of war in the harbour. This possession was confirmed to England by the peace of Amiens in 1802. The insurrection of the negroes occurred 4 Jan. 1832. Population in 1861, 84,438. Governor, Hon. Arthur H. Gordon, 1866.

TRINITY AND TRINITARIANS. Theophilus, bishop of Antioch, who flourished in the 2nd century, was the first who used the term Trinity, to express the three sacred persons in the Godhead. His "Defence of Christianity" was edited by Gesner, at Zurich, in 1546. Watkins. An order of the Trinity, termed Mathurins, was founded about 1198 by John de Matha and Felix de Valois. The Trinity fraternity, originally of fifteen persons, was instituted at Rome by St. Philip Neri, in 1548. The act to exempt from penalties persons denying the doctrine of the Trinity (such as Unitarians and Swedenborgians) passed in 1813.

TRINITY COLLEGES, see Cambridge, and Oxford. Trinity College, Dublin, called the University: grant of the Augustine monastery of All Saints within the suburbs for erecting this college, conferred by queen Elizabeth, 1591. First stone laid by Thomas Smith, mayor of Dublin, 1 Jan. 1593. New charter, 1637. Made a barrack for soldiers, 1689. Burns. The principal or west front erected, 1759. Library erected, 1732.

TRINITY HOUSE, LONDON, founded by sir Thomas Spert, 1512, as an "association for piloting ships," was incorporated in 1514, and re-incorporated in 1604, 1660, and 1685. The present Trinity House was erected in 1795. By their charter the brethren of the Trinity House have the power of examining, licensing, and regulating pilots, and of erecting beacons and lighthouses, and of placing buoys in the channels and rivers. Spert, the first master, died 8 Sept. 1541.—TRINITY HOUSES, originally guilds or fraternities, founded at Deptford, Hull, and Newcastle, were incorporated by Henry VIII., 1536-41.

TRINITY SUNDAY, that following Whitsunday. The festival of the Holy Trinity was instituted by pope Gregory IV. in 828, on his ascending the papal chair, and is observed by the Latin and protestant churches on the Sunday next following Pentecost or Whitsuntide, of which, originally, it was merely an Octave. The observance of the festival was first enjoined in the council of Arles, 1260. It was appointed to be held on the present day by pope John XX. in 1334. Trinity Sunday in 1868, 7 June; 1869, 23 May; 1870, 12 June; 1871, 4 June.

TRINOBANTES, a British tribe which occupied Middlesex and Essex, and joined in opposing the invasion of Julius Cæsar, 54 B.C.; but soon came to terms with the Romans.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE was ratified between the States-General and England against France, for the protection of the Spanish Netherlands; Sweden afterwards joining the league, it was known as the Triple Alliance, 23 Jan. 1668.—Another Triple Alliance was that between England, Holland, and France against Spain, 1717.

TRIPOLI (three cities). I., in Syria, comprised three quarters built by the Tyrians, Sidonians, and Aradians; was taken by the Crusaders 1109, and made a county for Raymond of Tonlouse. It was conquered by the Egyptians in 1832; restored to the Porte 1835; surrendered to the British 1841. II., a Turkish province, N. Africa, comprised the cities Sabrata, Cea (the present Tripoli, the capital), and Leptis (the ancient Tripolitana), after having been held by Greeks, Romans, Vandals, and Saracens, was conquered and annexed by the Turks 1551. Hamet Bey, pacha in 1741, made himself independent, and the government remained in his family till 1835, when Tripoli was restored to nominal subjugation to the sultan.

TRIPOLITZA (Greece), was stormed by the Greeks, who committed dreadful cruelties, 5 Oct. 1821; retaken by the Egyptians, 1825; given up to the Greeks, 1828.

TRIREMES, galleys with three banks of oars, are said to have been invented by the Corinthians, 784 B.C.

TRIUMPHS were granted by the Roman senate to generals of armies after they had won great victories. They were received into the city with great magnificence and public acclamations. There were the great, called the Triumph; and the less, the Ovation; see Ovation.

TRIUMVIRATES, ROMAN. The first, 60 B.C., consisted of Julius Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus, who formed a coalition to rule the state. Their union lasted ten years, and the civil war ensued. The second triumvirate, 43 B.C., was formed by Octavius Cæsar, Mark Antony, and Lepidus, through whom the Romans totally lost their liberty. Lepidus was expelled in 36; Antony subdued in 31, and Octavius made himself absolute in Rome; see Rome. In Feb. 1849, a triumvirate was appointed at Rome, consisting of Joseph Mazzini, Armetlini, and Saffi, which resigned on 1 July, 1849, when the city was taken by the French.

TROPPEAU, CONGRESS OF, in Austrian Silesia. The emperors Francis of Austria and Alexander of Russia met at Troppau, 20 Oct. 1820. The conference between them and the king of Prussia, against Naples, took place 10 Nov.; and the congress was transferred to Laybach, as nearer to Italy, 17 Dec. 1820; see Laybach.

TROUBADOURS AND TROUVÈRES (from troubar, trouver, to find or invent), the poets of the middle ages (from the 11th to the 15th century). The former flourished in the south of France and north of Spain, and used the Langue d'oc (that is, oc for oui, yes); the latter flourished in the north of France, and used the Langue d'oïl (that is, oïl for oui). The Troubadours produced romances, yet excelled chiefly in lyric poetry; and the Trouvères excelled in romances, several of which are extant; as, the Brut d'Angleterre, and the Rou, by Wace; the "romance of the Rose," by Guillaume de Lorris, and Jean de Meung. The Troubadours were usually accompanied by Jongleurs, who sang their masters' verses, with the accompaniment of the guitar. Histories of these French poets, and specimens of their works, have been published in France. These poets, although frequently very licentious, undoubtedly tended to promote civilisation during those warlike times.

TROY WEIGHT. The Romans introduced their ounce, our avoirdupois ounce, into Britain. The present ounce was brought from Grand Cairo into Europe, about the time of the Crusades, 1095, and was first adopted at Troyes, a city of France, whence the name. It is used to weigh gold, silver, and precious stones. The Troy weight, Scots, was established by James VI. (our James I.) in 1618; see Standard.

TROYES (Central France), where a treaty was concluded between England, France, and Burgundy, whereby it was stipulated that Henry V. should marry Catherine, daughter of Charles VI., be appointed regent of France, and, after the death of Charles, should inherit the crown, 21 May, 1420. Troyes was taken by the allied armies, 7 Feb.; retaken by Napoleon, 23 Feb.; and again taken by the allies, 4 March, 1814.

TRUCE OF GOD (Frera or Treuga Dei), a term given to a cessation of the private feuds and conflicts so general during the middle ages all over Europe, said to have been first proposed by the bishop of Aquitaine, in 1032. The clergy strenuously exerted their influence for the purpose. A synod at Roussillon, 1027, decreed that none should attack his enemy between Saturday evening (at nones) and Monday morning (at the hour of prime). Similar regulations were adopted in England, 1042 (sometimes Friday and Wednesday being chosen for the time). The truce of God was confirmed by many councils of the church, especially the Lateran Council, in 1179.

TRUCK SYSTEM of paying workmen's wages, in goods instead of money, was prohibited by parliament in 1837.

TRUMPET. Some of the Greek historians ascribe the invention of the trumpet to the Tyrrhenians, and others to the Egyptians. It was in use in the time of Homer, but not at the time of the Trojan war. First torches, then shells of fish, sounded like trumpets, were the signals in primitive wars. Potter. The Jewish feast of trumpets was appointed 1490 B.C. (Lev. xxiii. 24). Offa, king of Mercia, is said to have had trumpets sounded before him when travelling, about A.D. 790. The speaking trumpet is said to have been used by Alexander the Great in 335 B.C.; improved by Kircher in A.D. 1652; by Salland, 1654; and philosophically explained by Moreland, 1671.

TRUMPET-FLOWER, Bignonia radicans, was brought hither from North America, about 1640. The Trumpet Honeysuckle, Lonicera sempervirens, came from North America in 1656. The Bignonia capensis was brought to England from the Cape in 1823. The Large-flowered Trumpet-flower, or Bignonia grandiflora, was brought from China in 1800.

TRUSS. A transverse spring truss for ruptures was patented by Robert Brand in 1771, and by many other persons since. The National Truss Society, to assist indigent persons, was established in 1786; and many similar societies since.

TUAM (W. Ireland). St. Jarlath, the son of Loga, who lived about 501, is looked upon as the first founder of the cathedral of Tuam, though the abbey is said to have been founded in 487. The church was anciently called Tuaim-da-Gualand. In 1151, Edan O'Hoisin was the first archbishop, at least the first who had the use of the pall, for some of his predecessors are sometimes called bishops of Connaught, and sometimes archbishops, by Irish historians. The see of Mayo was annexed to Tuam in 1559. Tuam is valued in the king's books, by an extent returned anno 28 Eliz., at 50*l.* sterling per annum. Beatson. It ceased to be archiepiscopal, conformably with the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV., 1833; and is now a bishopric only, to which Killala and Achonry, a joint see, has been added; see Archbishops.

TUBULAR BRIDGES. The Britannia Tubular Suspension Bridge, then the most wonderful enterprise in engineering in the world, was constructed, 1846-50 (Mr. R. Stephenson and Mr. Fairbairn, engineers), about a mile southward of the Menai Strait Suspension Bridge.*

On the Britannia rock, near the centre of the Menai Strait, the surface of which is about ten feet above low water level, is built a tower two hundred feet above high water (commenced building, May, 1846), and on which rests two lines of tubes or hollow girders strong enough to bear their weight and laden trains in addition, the ends resting on the abutments on each shore; each tube being more than a quarter of a mile in length. The height of the tube within is thirty feet at the Britannia tower, diminishing to twenty-three feet at the abutments. The lifting of these tubes to their places was a most gigantic operation, successfully performed, 27 June, 1849. The first locomotive passed through, March, 1850. The Conway tubular bridge, a miniature copy of the Britannia (principal engineers, Mr. Robt. Stephenson and Mr. Fairbairn), erected . . . 1846-8. At Chepstow, a railway tubular bridge . . . 1852. A bridge or viaduct on the tubular principle (called the Albert viaduct) over the river Tamar at Plymouth, opened by the prince consort . . . 2 May, 1859. The most stupendous tubular bridge in the world is that over the St. Lawrence, Canada; see Victoria Bridge.

TUDELA (N. Spain). Near here marshal Lannes totally defeated the Spaniards, 23 Nov. 1808; see Ebro.

TUESDAY, in Latin Dies Martis, the day of Mars, the third day of the week, so called from Tuisto, Tiw, or Tuesco, a Saxon deity, worshipped on this day. Tuisto is mentioned by Tacitus; see Week Days.

TUGENDBUND ("league of Virtue"), formed in Prussia soon after the peace of Tilsit, June, 1807, for relieving the sufferers by the late wars, and for the revival of morality and patriotism, gradually became a formidable secret political society, opposed to the French

* The Britannia tubular bridge was intended to supply the place of one of the finest bridges in the kingdom; and the railway, of which the tubular bridge forms a part, is in like manner a substitute for one of the finest mail-coach roads ever constructed. The road from London to Holyhead has been long regarded as the highway from the British metropolis to Dublin; and the late Mr. Telford was applied to by the government to perfect this route by the London and Holyhead mail-coach road, which he did by erecting a beautiful suspension bridge over the river Conway and over the Menai Strait; commenced in July, 1818, and finished in July, 1825. When Chester became a centre of railway communication, it was considered that a through route to Holyhead would be more conveniently established from that point than from Shrewsbury, which lies in the route of Telford's road. Accordingly the Chester and Holyhead railway was constructed; and in its course, both the Conway and the Menai had to be crossed; and hence were formed the present tubular bridges.

predominance in Germany. Its head-quarters were at Königsberg. It excited the jealousy of Napoleon, who demanded its suppression in 1809. It was dissolved at the peace in 1815.

TUILERIES (Paris), the imperial palace of France, commenced by Catherine de Medicis, after the plans of Philibert de l'Orme, 1564; continued by Henry IV.; and finished by Louis XIV. This palace was stormed by the mob, 10 Aug. 1792; and ransacked in the revolutions of July, 1830, and Feb. 1848. Louis Napoleon made it his residence in 1851, and has since greatly renovated it.

TULIPS came to England from Vienna about 1578. It is recorded in the register of Alkmaer in Holland, that in 1639, 120 tulips, with the offsets, sold for 90,000 florins; and that one, called the Viceroy, sold for 4203 guilders! The States stopped this ruinous traffic. The tulip-tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, was brought to England from America, about 1663.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS (Kent). The springs were discovered, it is stated, by Dudley, lord North, who, in the last stage of consumption, was restored to health by the use of its waters, 1606. The wells were visited by the queens of Charles I. and II. The place soon became fashionable.

TUNGSTEN (also called wolfram and scheelium), a hard whitish brittle metal. From tungstate of lead, Scheele in 1781 obtained tungstic acid, whence the brothers De Luyart in 1786 obtained the metal. In 1859 it was employed in making a new kind of steel.

TUNIS (N. Africa) stands near where Carthage was built. The territories of both formed part of the Carthaginian state, and were entirely destroyed by the Romans after the third Punic war, 148 B.C. Tunis was besieged by Louis IX., of France, who died near it 25 Aug. A.D. 1270. It remained under African kings till taken by Barbarossa, for Solyman the Magnificent. Taken with great slaughter, and Barbarossa expelled, by the emperor Charles V., when 10,000 Christian slaves were set at liberty, 1535. The country was recovered by the Turks under Selim II. The bey of Tunis was first appointed in 1570. Tunis was reduced by admiral Blake, on the bey refusing to deliver up the British captives, 1655. In July, 1856, the bey agreed to make certain constitutional reforms. The bey died 22 Sept. 1859; and his successor Sidi Sadok took the oath of fidelity to the constitution. An insurrection broke out 18 April, 1864, and in May the European powers sent ships of war to protect their subjects.

TUNNAGE AND POUNDAGE were ancient duties levied on every tun of wine and pound of other goods, imported or exported, and were the origin of our "customs." They commenced in England about 1346. They were granted to the kings of England for life, beginning with Edward IV. At the beginning of his reign Charles I. gave great offence by levying them on his own authority. They were granted to Charles II. for his lifetime, 24 June, 1660. By the act 27 Geo. III. c. 13, these and other duties were repealed, 1787, and a new arrangement of excise and customs was introduced.

TUNNELS. The earliest tunnel for internal navigation was executed by M. Rignet, in the reign of Louis XIV. at Bezières in France. The first in England was by Mr. Brindley, on the duke of Bridgewater's navigation, near Manchester, about 1766. Project of the Gravesend tunnel, 1800—the report upon it, 1801. The Thames Tunnel was projected by Mr. Brunel in 1823, and opened for foot passengers, 25 March, 1843; see Thames Tunnel. In 1857 M. Thomé de Gamond proposed the making a submarine tunnel from France to England! Innumerable tunnels have been made for railways. The railway tunnel at Liverpool was completed in the middle of 1829, lit up with gas, and exhibited once a week. On the London and Birmingham railway there are eight tunnels (the Primrose-hill, Watford, Kilsby, &c.), their total length being 7336 yards. Smiles. It was computed by Mr. Fowler, that there were 80 miles of tunnels in the United Kingdom in 1865, which cost about 6,500,000*l.*, at the average of 45*l.* a yard; see Alps, and Thames.

TURIN, the ancient Augusta Taurinorum in Piedmont, capital of the Sardinian States, and of the kingdom of Italy, till 1864, when it was superseded by Florence. Its importance dates from the permanent union of Savoy and Piedmont in 1416. The French besieged this city; but prince Eugène defeated their army, and compelled them to raise the siege, 7 Sept. 1706. In 1798, the French republican army took possession of Turin, seized all the strong places and arsenals of Piedmont, and obliged the king and his family to remove to the island of Sardinia. In 1799, the French were driven out by the Austrians and Russians; but shortly afterwards the city and all Piedmont surrendered to the French. In 1814, it was delivered up to the allies, who restored it to the king of Sardinia; see Italy, 1864, and Treaties. Here prince Humbert was married to his cousin Margherita amidst great rejoicing, 22 April, 1868.

TURKESTAN, Independent Tartary, the original country of the Turks, in Central Asia, was reached by Alexander, 331 B.C. The Russians are gradually encroaching on this country; and on 14 Feb. 1865, a new province, Turkestan, was created by decree.

TURKEY. The Turks were originally a tribe of Tartars; but by incorporation with the peoples they have conquered, they must be regarded as a mixed race. About 760, they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania. They afterwards gradually extended their power; but in the 13th century, being harassed in their new possessions by other Tartar tribes, they returned to Asia Minor. The Turkish empire comprehends the almost independent principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia, Servia, and Montenegro, and the hereditary vice-royalty of Egypt. The population of the empire is estimated at 40,590,367.

TURNER'S LEGACIES. Joseph M. W. Turner, one of the greatest of landscape painters, was born in April 1775, and died 19 Dec. 1851. He bequeathed to the nation all the pictures and drawings collected by him and deposited at his residence, 47, Queen Anne-street, London, on condition that a suitable gallery be erected for them within ten years; and directed his funded property to be expended in founding an asylum at Twickenham for decayed artists. The will was disputed by his relatives, but a compromise was made. The oil-paintings (100 in number) and the drawings (1400) were obtained by the nation, and the engravings and some other property were transferred to the next of kin. The drawings were cleaned and mounted under the careful superintendence of Mr. Ruskin, and the pictures were sent to Marlborough-house for exhibition. In 1861, the pictures were removed from the South Kensington Museum to the National Gallery.

TURNING, see Lathe. In our dockyards, blocks and other materials for our ships of war are now produced by an almost instantaneous process, from rough pieces of oak, by the machinery of Mr. (afterwards sir Mark Isambard) Brunel (died 1849); see Blocks.

TUSCAN ORDER OF ARCHITECTURE, a debased Doric, used in Tuscany for buildings, in which strength is principally intended, without regard to ornament or beauty. Wotton.

TUSCANY, formerly a grand duchy in Central Italy, the northern part of the ancient Etruria (which see). It formed part of the Lombard kingdom; at the conquest of which by Charlemagne, it was made a marquisate for Boniface about 812 or 828. His descendant, the great Countess Matilda, bequeathed the southern part of her domains to the pope (1115). In the northern part (then called Tuscia), the cities, Florence, Pisa, Sienna, Lucca, &c., gradually became flourishing republics. Florence became the chief under the government of the Medici family; see Florence. The duchy in that family began in 1531; and the grand-duchy in 1569. After the extinction of the Medicis in 1737, Tuscany was given by the treaty of Vienna (1738) to Francis, duke of Lorraine (married to Maria Theresa of Austria in 1736), who had ceded his hereditary states to France. TUSCULUM (now Frascati), a city of Latium (S. Italy). The Tusculans supported Tarquinius Superbus against the Romans, by whom they were totally defeated, 497 B.C. The Tusculans, on account of their friendship with Rome, suffered much from the other Latins, who took their city, 374, but were severely chastised for it. Here Cicero during his retirement wrote his "Tusculanæ Disputationes," about 46 B.C.

* Much interest and sympathy were excited in England and other protestant countries of Europe, by the imprisonment at Florence of the Medici (husband and wife), who had embraced the English reformed religion, and read the Bible in due conformity with the teaching of their new faith. For this "crime" they were separately incarcerated in loathsome dungeons, and subjected to all the rigours of the Romish ecclesiastical law, May, 1852. A protestant deputation from England, headed by the earls of Shaftesbury and Roden, proceeded to Florence in October, 1852, with the view to their release from confinement; but the grand-duke refused to receive them. The Medici were set at liberty, by the interposition of the British government, in March, 1853. An annuity of 100*l.* was provided for them by subscription.

street as "a deep, hollow road, and full of sloughs, with here and there a ragged house, the lurking-place of cut-throats."

"TYBURNIA" (a N.W. suburb of London), was built between 1839 and 1850, on the green fields and nursery grounds in Paddington belonging to the see of London.

TYLER'S INSURRECTION arose in opposition to the poll-tax imposed on all persons above 15, 5 Nov. 1380. One of the collectors acting with indecent rudeness to Wat Tyler's daughter, the father struck him dead June, 1381. His neighbours took arms to defend him, and in a short time almost the whole of the population of the southern and eastern counties were in a state of insurrection, extorting freedom from their lords, and plundering. On 12 June, 1381, they gathered upon Blackheath to the number of 100,000 men. On 14 June they murdered Simon of Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, and sir Robert Hales, the royal treasurer. The king, Richard II., invited Tyler to a parley, which took place on the 15th at Smithfield, where the latter addressed the king in a menacing manner, now and again lifting up his sword. On this the mayor, Walworth, stunned Tyler with a blow of his mace, and one of the king's knights dispatched him. Richard temporised with the multitude by promising a charter, and thus led them out of the city, when sir R. Knollys and a band of knights attacked and dispersed them with much slaughter. The insurrection in Norfolk and Suffolk was subdued by the bishop of Norwich, and 1500 of the rebels were executed.

TYRANT. In early Greek history, the term was applied to any man who governed with irresponsible power. Solon objected to the term, and chose the name Archōn (ruler), 594 B.C. The earliest tyrants were those at Sicyon, beginning with Cleisthenes, in the 7th century B.C. Tyranny declined in Greece about 490 B.C., and revived after the close of the Peloponnesian war, 404 B.C.; see Thirty Tyrants.

TYRE (Phœnicia), a great city, said to have been first built by Agenor. Another city was built 1257 (about 2267, Hales) B.C. It was besieged by the Assyrians, who retired from before it, after a siege of upwards of five years, 713 B.C. Taken by Nebuchadnezzar, 572 B.C., and the city demolished, when the Tyrians removed to an opposite island, and built a new and magnificent city. It was taken by Alexander with much difficulty, after a siege of seven months, July, 332 B.C. He joined the island to the continent by a mole. Strabo. Tyre was captured by the Crusaders, 7 July, 1124; by the French, 3 April, 1799; and by the allied fleet, during the war against Mahomet Ali, 1841.

TYRE, ERA OF, began on 19 Oct. 125 B.C., with the month of Hyperberetæus. The months were the same as those used in the Grecian era, and the year is similar to the Julian year. To reduce this era to ours, subtract 124; and if the given year be less than 125, deduct it from 125, and the remainder will be the year before Christ.

TYROL, the eastern part of ancient Rætia, now a province of the Austrian empire, was ceded to the house of Hapsburg in 1359 by Margaret, the heiress of the last count. The province became an appanage of the younger (or Tyrol) branch of the imperial house, which came to the throne in the person of Maximilian II., in 1618. The French conquered the Tyrol in 1805, and united it to Bavaria; but in 1809 an insurrection broke out, headed by Andrew Hofer, an innkeeper, who drove the Bavarians out of the Tyrol, thoroughly defeated some French detachments, but laid down his arms at the treaty of Vienna. He was subsequently accused of corresponding with the Austrians, captured and sent to Mantua, and there shot by order of the French government (to its great disgrace) 20 Feb. 1810. The Austrian emperor ennobled his family in 1819, and erected his statue in Inspruck in 1834. The Tyrolese riflemen were very effective in the Italian war in 1859.

TYRONE (near Ulster, N. Ireland), formerly the territories of the O'Neills, and the seat of the insurrection in 1641.

TYRRHENI, included the ancient Etruscans, and other tribes, said to have come from Lydia, Asia Minor.

U.

UBIQUITARIANS, a small German sect, originated by John Brentius about 1560, who asserted that the body of Christ was present everywhere (ubique).

UKRAINE (Polish for a frontier), a vast fertile plain in Russia, ceded to the Cossacks by Poland in 1672, and obtained by Russia in 1682. The country was divided, Poland having the West side of the Dnieper, and Russia the east. The whole country was assigned to Russia by the treaty of partition in 1795.

ULM, in Wurtemberg, S. Germany, where a PEACE was signed, 3 July, 1620, by which Frederick V. lost Bohemia (having been driven from it previously). Ulm was taken by the French in 1796. After a battle between the French and Austrians, in which the latter, under general Mack, were defeated with dreadful loss by marshal Ney, Ulm surrendered with 28,000 men, the flower of the Austrian army, 17-20 Oct. 1805.

ULPHILAS'S BIBLE, see Bible.

ULSTER, the N. division of Ireland. At the death of Strongbow, 1176, John de Courcy was made early of Ulster; Hugh de Lacy was earl, 1243; and Walter de Burgh, 1264; whose descendant, Elizabeth, married Lionel, son of Edward III., 1352. In 1611, the British colonisation of the forfeited lands (termed the Ulster settlements) began, much land being granted to the corporation of London. The rebellion of the Irish chieftains, Roger More, Phelim O'Neale, McGuire, earl of Inniskillen, and others, broke out on 23 Oct. 1641.

ULTRAMONTANISTS (from ultra montes, beyond the mountains), a term originally applied in France to those who uphold the extreme authority of the pope in opposition to the freedom of the Gallican church, which had been secured by various bulls, and especially by the concordat of 15 July, 1801. Ultramontanists now are those who maintain the official infallibility of the bishop of Rome.

UMBRELLA, described in early dictionaries as "a portable pent-house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat." Umbrellas are very ancient, as they appear in the carvings at Persepolis. Niebuhr, who visited the southern part of Arabia, informs us that he saw a great prince of that country returning from a mosque, preceded by some hundreds of soldiers, and that he and each of the princes of his numerous family caused a large umbrella to be carried by his side. Old chinaware shows the Chinese shaded by an umbrella. It is said that the first person who generally used an umbrella in the streets of London was the benevolent Jonas Hanway, who died in 1786.

For a long while it was not usual for men to carry them without being branded as effeminate. At first, a single umbrella seems to have been kept at a coffee-house for extraordinary occasions—lent as a coach or chair in a heavy shower, but not commonly carried by the walkers. The Female Tatler advertises: "The young gentleman belonging to the custom-house who, in fear of rain, borrowed the umbrella from Wilks's coffee-house, shall the next time be welcome to the maid's pottens." As late as 1778, one John Macdonald, a footman, who wrote his own life, informs us that he had "a fine silk umbrella, which he brought from Spain; but he could not with any comfort to himself use it, the people calling out, 'Frenchman! why don't you get a coach?'" The hackney-coachmen and chairmen, with true esprit de corps, were clamorous against their portentous rival. The footman, in 1778, gives us some farther information:—"At this time there were no umbrellas worn in London, except in noblemen's and gentlemen's houses, where there was a large one hung in the hall to hold over a lady, if it rained, between the door and her carriage." This man's sister was compelled to quit his arm one day, from the abuse he drew down upon himself and his umbrella. But he adds, that "he persisted for three months, till they took no further notice of this novelty. Foreigners began to use theirs; and then the English. Now it is become a great trade in London." New Monthly Magazine.

UNCTION, EXTREME, see Anointing.

UNDULATORY THEORY OF LIGHT, supposes a progressive wavelike motion between the eye and the luminous body seen. It was propounded by Robert Hooke and Huyghens, about 1672; opposed by Newton; but confirmed by Thomas Young by experiments in 1801, and is now generally adopted; see Emission.

UNIFORMITY ACTS. That of 2 & 3 Edward VI., 15 Jan. 1549, ordained that the order of divine worship, drawn up by Cranmer and others, "with the aid of the Holy Ghost," should be the only one used after 20 May. The penalties for refusing to use it were fine and imprisonment. This act was re-enacted by Elizabeth in 1559. The act of Uniformity, 14 Charles II. c. 4, was passed in 1662. It enjoined uniformity in matters of religion, and obliged all clergy to subscribe to the thirty-nine articles, and use the same form of worship, and same book of common prayer. Its enforcement on 24 Aug. 1662, termed Black Bartholomew's day, caused upwards of 2000 ministers to quit the church of England, and laid the foundation of the dissenting interest. The day was commemorated by dissenters in 1862.

UNIFORMS. Military uniforms were first used in France, "in a regular manner," by Louis XIV. 1668. In England the uniform was soon afterwards adopted in the military service, but with little analogy to the modern dress. Ashe; see under Navy.

UNIGENITUS, see Bull.

UNINFLAMMABLE SALTS. At the British Association, 15 Sept. 1859, MM. Versmann and Oppenheim announced their discovery that fabrics steeped in solutions of tungstate of soda, or sulphate or phosphate of ammonia, burn without flame.

UNION OF CALMAR, 1397 ; of Utrecht, 1579.

UNION OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND by the accession of James VI. of Scotland as James I. of England, 24 March, 1603. The legislative union of the two kingdoms (as Great Britain) was attempted, but failed in 1604 and 1670 ; in the reign of Anne, commissioners were appointed, the articles discussed, and, notwithstanding a great opposition made by the Tories, every article in the union was approved by a great majority, first in the house of commons, and afterwards by the peers, 22 July, 1706 ; was ratified by the Scottish parliament, 16 Jan. 1707, and became law, 1 May, same year.

UNION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, proposed in the Irish parliament, 22 Jan. 1799. Rejected by the commons of Ireland, 24 Jan. the votes being 105 for, to 106 against the union. The English house of commons on the same question divided, 140, 141, and 149 for the union ; against it, 15, 25, and 28 respectively. Lord Castlereagh detailed his plan of the union, in the Irish house of lords, founded on the resolutions of the British parliament thereon, 5 Feb. 1800. Votes of the commons agreeing to it, 161 against 115, 17 Feb. ; and again, 152 against 108, 21 Feb. The houses of lords and commons wait on the lord lieutenant with the articles of union, 27 March. The act passed in the British parliament, 2 July, 1800. The imperial united standard was first displayed at the tower of London, and upon Bedford Tower, Dublin Castle, in consequence of the act of legislative union becoming an operative law, 1 Jan. 1801. For attempts to dissolve this union, see Repeal.

UNION JACK. The original flag of England was the banner of St. George, i.e., white with a red cross, which, 12 April, 1606 (three years after James I. ascended the throne) was incorporated with the banner of Scotland, i.e., blue with a white diagonal cross. This combination obtained the name of "Union Jack," in allusion to the union with Scotland, and the word Jack may be considered a corruption of the word "Jacques," or James. This arrangement continued until the union with Ireland, 1 Jan. 1801, when the banner of St. Patrick, i.e., white with a diagonal red cross, was thus amalgamated with it, and forms the present Union flag.

UNION CHARGEABILITY ACT, providing for the better distribution of the charge for relieving the poor in unions, was passed in June, 1865. One object of the act is the improvement of the dwellings of agricultural labourers.

UNION RELIEF ACT, passed in 1862, continued in 1863, to enable boards of guardians of certain unions to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary expenditure for relief occasioned by the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts.

UNIT, a gold coin, value 20s., issued by James I. in 1604.

UNITARIANS, began with Michael Servetus, a learned man, who printed a tract in disparagement of the doctrine of the Trinity. In 1553, proceeding to Naples through Geneva, Calvin induced the magistrates to arrest him on a charge of blasphemy and heresy. Servetus, refusing to retract his opinions, was condemned to the flames, which sentence was carried into execution, 27 May, 1553. Servetus is numbered among those anatomists who made the nearest approach to the doctrine of the circulation of the blood, before Harvey established that doctrine. The Unitarians were numerous in Transylvania in the 17th century ; they came to England about 1700, and many of the original English presbyterian churches became Unitarians about 1730. They were not included in the Toleration act till 1813. There were 229 congregations in England in 1851. Their tenets resemble those of the Arians and Socinians (which see). They believe in and worship one only self-existent God, in opposition to those who worship the Trinity in unity. They consider Christ to have been a mere man ; and do not admit the need of an atonement or the complete inspiration of the Scriptures. The Unitarian marriage bill was passed, June 1827. In Dec. 1833, by a decision of the vice-chancellors the Unitarians (as such) lost the possession of lady Hewley's charity ; the decision was affirmed on appeal in 1842.

UNITED BRETHERN, see Moravians.

UNITED IRISHMEN, a political society which met secretly, was formed to establish a republic about 1795. Theobald Wolf Tone, the founder, was captured by sir John Warren in the Hoche, one of six frigates destined to support the rebellion, in Oct. 1798. He anticipated his punishment by suicide in prison Nov. 1798.

UNITED KINGDOM. England and Wales were united in 1283 ; Scotland to both in 1707 ; and the British realm was named the United Kingdom on the union with Ireland, 1 Jan. 1801 ; see Union.—The UNITED KINGDOM ALLIANCE, for the total suppression of liquor traffic, was founded 1 June, 1853.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, in Scotland, was formed 13 May, 1847; see Burghers, and Relief Church.

UNITED PROVINCES (Holland, Zealand, Utrecht, Friesland, Groningen, Overyssell, and Guelderland), the deputies of which met at Utrecht, 23 Jan. 1579, and signed a treaty for their mutual defence; see Holland.

UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION, near Whitehall, London, was established in 1830. Its museum contains many remarkable military and naval relics. The lectures given are reported in its journal, which first appeared in 1857.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA were so styled by the congress of the revolted British provinces, 9 Sept. 1776. Their flag was declared to be thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, and thirteen stars in a blue field, corresponding with the then number of states of the union, 20 June, 1777. The government of the United States is a pure democracy. Each of the states has a separate and independent legislature for the administration of its local affairs, but all are ruled in matters of imperial policy by two houses of legislature, the senate and the house of representatives, to which delegates are sent from the different members of the confederacy. The president of the United States is elected every fourth year by the free voice of the people. The election of Abraham Lincoln as president on 4 Nov. 1860, was followed by the secession of eleven slaveholding states, and led to the great civil war, 1861-5; see Confederates.

ARMY.—That which achieved independence was disbanded at the end of the war. In 1789, a war department was established, and in 1790 the army consisted of 1216 men. In 1808, the militia was newly equipped. When war with Great Britain was declared on 18 June, 1812, 35,000 men were voted; and this army was disbanded at the peace in 1815. Armies were voted for the wars in 1833 and 1835, afterwards disbanded.

In 1855, Army, 11,658. Militia, 1,873,558. Fleet, 72 vessels (2200 guns).
 In 1860, the United States Militia were 3,070,987. The Fleet consisted of 92 vessels (of all kinds); in Oct. 1862, of 256 vessels of war.
Federal Army, July 29, 1861, estimated at 660,971. In Dec. 1862, nearly 1,000,000 men. In April, 1865, about 1,500,000, at the end of the war, when the reduction began at once. Number of soldiers in 1867, 54,890. Fleet, in July, 1867, 261 vessels of all kinds, 2218 guns.

UNIVERSALISTS, who believe in the final salvation of all men. This doctrine, declared in the Talmud, and ascribed to Origen, about 230, was advocated by other early fathers, but opposed by St. Augustin, about 420; and condemned by the 5th general council at Constantinople, May, June, 553. It was held by individuals from that time downward; was received by the Unitarians in the 17th century, and avowed by numerous clergymen of the church of England. James Rely, who published his "Union" in 1760, founded the sect of Universalists in Britain; and John Murray, in America, about 1770. The sect barely exists in Britain, but flourishes in America.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE (Plebiscitum), one of the six points of the charter (see Chartists), was adopted by the French in their constitution of 1791; and used in the election of their president in 1851, and of their emperor in 1852; and by the Italian States in voting for annexation to Sardinia in 1860, 1861, and 1866.

UNIVERSITIES. The most ancient in Europe are those of Oxford, Cambridge, Paris, Salamanca, and Bologna. In old Aberdeen was a monastery, in which youths were instructed in theology, the canon law, and the school philosophy, at least 200 years before the University and King's College were founded. The following dates are generally those given by Bouillet.

UNIVERSITY BOAT-RACE. The contest between the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, on the river Thames, began in 1829, and has been annual since 1856. In 1864, after 20 contests, the opposing parties were equal; but, on 8 April, 1865, 24 March, 1866, 13 April, 1867, and 4 April, 1868, Oxford won; the last time being the 8th in succession.

UPSAL (Sweden). The Swedish rulers were kings of Upsal till 1001. The university was founded in 1476, by Sten Sture, the "protector."

URANIUM, a brittle grey metal discovered by Klaproth in 1789, in the mineral pitch-blende. It has lately been employed in the manufacture of glass for certain philosophical purposes.

URANUS, a planet with six satellites, was discovered by William Herschel, 13 March, 1781, first called Georgium Sidus, after George III.; next Herschel; and, finally, Uranus. It is about twice as distant from the sun as the planet Saturn. The anniversary of its first revolution (in 84 years 7 days) since its discovery, was celebrated on 20 March, 1865. Its perturbations led to the discovery of Neptune, in 1846. Uranus has 8 satellites; 6 discovered by Herschel, 2 in 1787, 2 in 1790, 2 in 1794; and 1 by Lassell, and 1 by Struve, in 1847.

URIM AND THUMMIM, LIGHT AND PERFECTION (Exodus xxviii. 30). It is conjectured that these words are in some way connected with the breastplate worn by the high-priest when he entered into the holy place, with the view of obtaining an answer from God (1490 B.C.).

URSULINE NUNS (so called from St. Ursula), founded originally by St. Angela of Brescia, about 1537. Several communities existed in England; and some still exist in Ireland.

URUGUAY, BANDA ORIENTALE, a republic in South America; declared its independence, 25 Aug. 1825; recognised 4 Oct. 1828; constitution proclaimed 18 July, 1830. The president of the executive, G. A. Pereyra, elected in 1856, was succeeded in 1860 by B. P. Berro. A civil war broke out in consequence of the invasion of the ex-president, general Venancio Florès, 26 June, 1863. On 1 March, 1864, the vice-president Aguirre became president, who refused (in June) to modify his ministry according to the desire of general Florès, who marched towards the capital in June. In Feb. 1865, Florès became provisional president. F. A. Vidal was elected president on 1 March, 1866; on 4 Nov. 1866, general Florès deferred the election of a president for a year. During an insurrection of the Blanco party (headed by Berro), at Montevideo, general Florès was assassinated. The troops remained faithful. Insurrection soon suppressed, and Berro shot, 19 Feb. 1868. Gen. Lorenzo Battle elected president, 1 March. Population in 1865, about 350,000.

USHANT, an island near Brest, N. W. France, near which two naval battles were fought between the British and French fleets.

(1.) On 27 July, 1778, after an indecisive action of three hours, the latter, under cover of the night, withdrew into the harbour of Brest. Admiral Keppel commanded the English fleet; the count d'Orvilliers the French. The failure of a complete victory was attributed to admiral sir Hugh Palliser's non-compliance with the admiral's signals. Palliser preferred articles of accusation against his commander, who was tried and acquitted, and the charge against him declared to be "malicious and ill-founded."

(2.) Lord Howe signally defeated the French fleet, taking six ships of the line, and sinking one of large force, and several others, 1 June, 1794. While the two fleets were engaged in this action, a large fleet of merchantmen, on the safety of which the French nation depended for its means of prosecuting the war, got safely into Brest harbour, which gave occasion to the enemy to claim the laurels of the day, notwithstanding their loss in ships, and in killed and wounded, which was very great. The day was long termed the "glorious first of June."

USURY from a stranger was permitted to the Jews, but forbidden from their brethren, 1491 B.C. (Exod. xxii. 25, Deut. xxiii. 13.) This law was enforced by Nehemiah, 445 B.C. (Neh. v.) Usury was prohibited by the English parliament, 1341. Until the 15th century, no Christians were allowed to receive interest of money, and Jews were the only usurers, and therefore often banished and persecuted; see Jews. By the 37th of Henry VIII. the rate of interest was fixed at 10 per cent. 1545. This statute was repealed by Edward VI. but re-enacted 13 Eliz. 1570; see Interest for later legislation.

UTAH, a western territory of North America, was organised 9 Sept. 1850. The capital, Great Salt Lake City, is the chief seat of the Mormonites (which see).

UTICA (N. Africa), an ancient Tyrian colony, an ally of Carthage, named in the treaty with the Romans 348 B.C. Here Cato the younger, after the defeat of the partisans of Pompey at Thapsus, committed suicide, 46 B.C. Utica flourished greatly after the fall of Carthage, and was made a Roman city by Augustus on account of its favouring Julius Cæsar. It suffered by the invasion of the Vandals, 439; and of the Saracens, about 700.

UTRAQUISTS, see Calixtins.

UTRECHT (the Roman Trajectum ad Rhenum) was the seat of an independent bishopric, founded about 695. The last prelate, Henry of Bavaria, weary of his turbulent subjects, sold his temporal government to the emperor Charles V. in 1528. The union of the Seven United Provinces began here (see United Provinces) 1579. The treaty of Utrecht, which terminated the wars of queen Anne, was signed by the ministers of Great Britain and France, and all the other allies, except the ministers of the empire, 11 April, 1713. This treaty secured the Protestant succession in England, the separation of the French and Spanish crowns, the destruction of Dunkirk, the enlargement of the British colonies and plantations in America, and a full satisfaction for the claims of the allies. Utrecht surrendered to the Prussians, 9 May, 1787; was acquired by the French, 18 Jan. 1795, and restored at the peace.

UXBRIDGE (W. Middlesex). On 30 Jan. 1645, commissioners met here to discuss terms of peace between Charles I. and the parliament; they separated without effect, 22 Feb. The latter required absolute control of the army and navy, and the abolition of the episcopacy, liturgy, &c.

V.

VACCINATION (from Variola Vaccina, the cow-pox), discovered by Dr. Edward Jenner. He was born in 1749, and educated for the medical profession, partially under John Hunter. Having heard that milkmaids who have had the cow-pox never take the small-pox, he, about 1780, conceived the idea of vaccination, which was then ridiculed by eminent physiologists. He made the first experiment by transferring to a healthy child, on 14 May, 1796, the pus from the pustule of a milkmaid who had caught the cow-pox from the cows. He announced his success in a memoir published 1798, and vaccination became general in 1799, having been introduced 21 Jan. in that year. Dr. Jenner received 10,000*l.* from parliament for the discovery, 2 June, 1802, and 20,000*l.* in 1807. The first national institution for the promotion of vaccination, called the Royal Jennerian Institution, was founded 19 Jan. 1803. The emperor Napoleon valued this service of Dr. Jenner to mankind so highly, that he liberated Dr. Wickham, when a prisoner of war, at Jenner's request, and subsequently whole families of English, making it a point to refuse him nothing that he asked. Vaccination, although much opposed on moral and religious grounds, was practised throughout all Europe previously to 1816. Dr. Jenner died in 1823.* The Vaccination Act, 3 & 4 Vict. passed 23 July, 1840. Vaccination was made compulsory in England in 1853, and in Ireland and Scotland in 1863. These laws were consolidated and amended by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, 12 Aug. 1867; see Small-pox, and Inoculation. An important blue-book, entitled "Papers on the History and Practice of Vaccination," edited by Mr. John Simon, was published by the board of health in 1857.

VADIMONIS LACUS, the Vadimonian lake, Umbria, central Italy, near which the Etruscans were totally defeated in two severe engagements by the Roman consuls: 1, by Fabius Maximus, 309 B.C.; 2, by Cornelius Dolabella, 283.

* Dr. Jenner died suddenly in 1823. A statue, subscribed for by all nations, was erected to his memory in Trafalgar-square, 30 April, 1858, in the presence of the prince consort. It was removed to Kensington in 1862. Another statue was erected by the French at Boulogne, and inaugurated 11 Sept. 1865.

VAGRANTS. By law, after being whipped, a vagrant was to take an oath to return to the place where he was born, or had last dwelt for three years, 1530. A vagrant a second time convicted to lose the upper part of the gristle of his right ear, 1535; and a third time convicted, death. A vagabond to be marked with a V, and be a slave for two years, 1327. Vagrants were punished by whipping, gaoling, boring the ears, and death for a second offence, 1572. The milder statutes were those of 17 Geo. II.; 32, 35, and 59 Geo. III. The present Vagrant Act was passed in 1824. There were about 33,000 tramps in England and Wales in 1865.

VALDENSES, see Waldenses.

VALENCAY, a château near Chateauroux, central France, where Napoleon I. imprisoned Ferdinand of Spain from 1808 to 1813. His kingdom was restored to Ferdinand by a treaty signed 8 Dec. 1813.

VALENCIA (E. Spain), the Valentia Edetanorum of the Romans, the capital of a Moorish kingdom. Its university was founded, it is said, in the 13th century, and was revived in the 15th. Valencia was taken by the earl of Peterborough in 1705, but submitted to the Bourbons after the unfortunate battle of Almanza, in 1707. It resisted the attempts made on it by marshal Monecy, but was taken from the Spaniards with a garrison of more than 16,000 men, and immense stores, by the French under Suchet, 9 Jan. 1812.

VALENCIENNES (N. France). This city (founded about 399 B.C.) was besieged from 23 May to 28 July, 1793, when the French garrison surrendered to the allies under the duke of York. It was retaken, together with Condé, by the French, 27-30 Aug. 1794; on capitulation, the garrison and 1100 emigrants were made prisoners, with immense stores.

VALENTIA, a Roman province, including the country between the walls of Severus and Adrian, was reconquered from the Picts and Scots by Theodosius, and named after Valentinian I. the reigning emperor, 368.

VALENTINE'S DAY (14 Feb.). Valentine is said to have been a bishop, who suffered martyrdom under Claudius II. at Rome; others say under Aurelian, in 271. 618,000 letters passed through the post-office on 14 Feb. 1856. 530,300 is the estimated number of valentines delivered in 1864. The origin of the ancient custom of "choosing a valentine" has been much controverted; see post.

VALENTINIANS, followers of Valentine, a priest, who, on being disappointed of a bishopric, forsook the Christian faith, declaring there were thirty gods and goddesses, fifteen of each sex, which he called Æones, or Ages. He taught in the 2nd century, and published a gospel and psalms: his followers added other errors.

VALLADOLID (Spain), the Roman Pincia and the Moorish Belad Walid: was recovered for the Christians by Ordoño II., the first king of Leon, 914-23. It became capital of Castile in the 15th century. It was captured from the French by the English, 4 June, 1813. Here died Christopher Columbus, 20 May, 1506.

VALMY (N.E. France). Here the French, commanded by Kellerman, defeated the Prussians, commanded by the duke of Brunswick, 20 Sept. 1792. The victory was of immense moral advantage to the republicans.

VALOIS, a county (N. France) given by Philip III. to his younger son Charles, whose son Philip became king as Philip IV. in 1328; see France, p. 315.

VALPARAISO, principal port of Chili, South America, was bombarded by the Spanish admiral Mendez Nuñez, on 31 March, 1866, when much property was destroyed.

VALTELLINE (N. Italy), a district near the Rætian Alps, seized by the Grison league, 1512, and ceded to it, 1530. At the instigation of Spain, the catholics rose and massacred the protestants, 19-21 July, 1620. After much contention between the French and Austrians, the neutrality of the Valtelline was assured in 1639. It was annexed to the Cisalpine republic in 1797; to Italy, 1807; to Austria, 1814; to Italy, 1860.

VALVASOR or VAVASSOR. The first dignity beneath a peer was anciently that of vidames, vicedomini, or valvasors. Valvasors are mentioned by our ancient lawyers as virī magnæ dignitatis, and sir Edward Coke speaks highly of them. Now, the first personal dignity after the nobility is a knight of the order of St. George or of the Garter. Blackstone.

VANADIUM (from Vanadis, the Scandinavian Venus), a metal discovered by Sefström, in 1830, combined with iron ore. A similar metal, discovered in lead ore by Del Rio in 1801, and named Erythronium, was proved by Wöhler to be Vanadium. Vanadium was discovered in the copper-bearing beds in Cheshire, in 1865, by H. E. Roscoe, by whom its peculiarities were further studied, and published in 1867-8.

VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, North Pacific ocean, near the main land. Settlements were made here by the English in 1781, which were seized by the Spaniards in 1789, but restored. By a treaty between the British government and that of the United States in 1846, this island was secured to the former. It has become of much greater importance since the discovery of gold in the neighbouring main land in 1858, and the consequent establishment of the colony of British Columbia (which see). Victoria, the capital, was founded in 1857. The island was united with British Columbia by act passed in Aug. 1866.

VANCOUVER'S VOYAGE. Captain Vancouver served as a midshipman under captain Cook, and was appointed to command during a voyage of discovery, to ascertain the existence of any navigable communication between the North Pacific and North Atlantic oceans. He sailed 7 Jan. 1791, and returned 24 Sept. 1795. He compiled an account of this voyage of survey of the north-west coast of America, and died in 1798.

VANDALS; a Germanic race, attacked the Roman empire in the 3rd century, and began to ravage Germany and Gaul, 406-14; their kingdom in Spain was founded in 411; under Genseric they invaded and conquered the Roman territories in Africa, 429, and took Carthage, Oct. 439. They were subdued by Belisarius in 534. They were driven out by the Saracen Moors. The dukes of Mecklenburg style themselves princes of the Vandals.

VANDAL KINGS IN AFRICA.

429. Genseric (see Mecklenburg).
477. Hunneric, his son.

484. Gundamund.
496. Thrasimund.

523. Hilderic.
531. Gelimer.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND (called Tasmania since 1853), was discovered by Abel Jansen Tasmah, 24 Nov. 1642, and named after the governor of the Dutch East Indies.

Visited by Furneaux, 1773; Cook 1777	Bishopric of Tasmania established 1842
Proved to be an island by Flinders, who explored Bass's Straits 1799	Transportation abolished 1833
Taken possession of by lieut. Bower 1803	Visited by the duke of Edinburgh 7-18 Jan. 1868
Arrival of col. Collins, the first governor, with convicts; Hobart Town founded 1804	Population, 1857, 81,492; 1865, 95,201 (only 4 remained of the aborigines).
	Present governor, col. Thos. Gore Browne . . 1862

VARENNE, a town in N. E. France, is celebrated by the arrest of Louis XVI., his queen, sister, and two children. They fled from the Tuileries on 21 June, and were taken here on the 22nd, 1791, and conducted back to Paris, mainly through Drouet, the postmaster, at an intermediate town, who recognised the king.

VARIABLE STARS. The variation of brightness in certain stars is said to have been first observed in a small star of Cetus, or the Whale, by Daniel Fabricius, 13 Aug. 1596. In Oct. of same year the star had vanished. Since then many similar variations have been observed by Goodricke, Herschel, and other astronomers; and Mr. Pogson has constructed a table of 38 variable stars. No satisfactory explanation has yet been given of the phenomena. Eng. Cyc.

VARNA, a fortified town and seaport in Bulgaria, European Turkey. A great battle was fought near this place, 10 Nov. 1444, between the Turks under Amurath II. and the Hungarians under their king Ladislaus, and John Hunniades. The latter were defeated with great slaughter: the king was killed, and Hunniades made prisoner. The Christians had previously broken the truce for ten years, recently made at Segedin. The emperor Nicholas of Russia arrived before Varna, the head-quarters of his army, then besieging the place, 5 Aug. 1828. The Turkish garrison made a vigorous attack on the besiegers, 7 Aug.; and another on the 21st, but were repulsed. Varna surrendered, after a sanguinary conflict, to the Russian arms, 11 Oct. 1828. It was restored at the peace in 1829; its fortifications were dismantled, but have since been restored. The allied armies disembarked at Varna, 29 May, 1854, and remained there till they sailed for the Crimea, 3 Sept. following. While at Varna they suffered severely from cholera.

VASSY (N. E. France). The massacre of the protestants at this place by the duke of Guise on 1 March, 1562, led to the civil wars which desolated France to the end of the century.

VATICAN (Rome), the ancient Mons Vaticanus, a hill of Rome. The commencement of the palace is ascribed to Constantine, Liberius, and Symmachus. It became the residence of the pope at his return from Avignon, 1377. The palace is said to contain 7000 rooms, rich in works of art, ancient and modern. The library, founded by pope Nicholas V., 1448, is exceedingly rich in printed books and MSS.—Pistolesi's description of the Vatican, with numerous plates, was published 1829-38.—The phrase "Thunders of the Vatican" was first used by Voltaire, 1748.—The ancient Vatican Codex of the Old and New Testament in Greek was published at Rome in 1857.

VAUD, a Swiss canton, after having been successively held by the Franks, kings of Burgundy, emperors of Germany, dukes of Zähringen, and dukes of Savoy, was conquered by the Bernese, Jan. 1536, and annexed, 1554. Vaud was made independent in 1798, and joined the confederation in 1815. A new constitution was obtained in 1830, after much agitation.

VAUXHALL BRIDGE, constructed of iron under the direction of Mr. Walker, at an expense of about 150,000*l.* (to be defrayed by a toll). The first stone was laid 9 May, 1811, by prince Charles, eldest son of the duke of Brunswick; and the bridge was opened on 4 June, 1816.

VAUXHALL GARDENS (London), were so denominated from the manor of Vauxhall, Fox-hall, or Faulkeshall; but the tradition that this house or any other adjacent was the property of Guy Fawkes is erroneous. The premises were the property of Jane Vaux in 1615, and the mansion-house was then called Stockden's. From her it passed through various hands, till it became the property of Mr. Tyers in 1732. There is no certain account of the time when these premises were first opened for the entertainment of the public; but the New Spring Gardens at Vauxhall are mentioned by Pepys 1665, Wycherley 1672, and in the Spectator 1711, as a place of great resort. The gardens were opened for a "Ridotto al fresco" 7 June, 1732, by Jonathan Tyers, who spared no pains or expense to maintain his success. The greatest season of Vauxhall was in 1823, when 133,279 persons visited the gardens, and the receipts were 29,590*l.* The greatest number of persons in one night was 2 Aug. 1833, when 20,137 persons paid for admission. The number on the then supposed last night, 5 Sept. 1839, was 1089 persons. Vauxhall was sold by auction, 9 Sept. 1841, for 20,200*l.* The last performances at Vauxhall took place on 25 July, 1859. The ground has been sold for building purposes.

VEDAS, the sacred books of the Hindoos, in Sanskrit, were probably written about 1000 B.C. Veda means knowledge. These books comprise hymns, prayers, and liturgical formulæ. The edition by professor Max Müller, printed under the patronage of the East India Company, appeared in 1849-62. Four volumes of a translation by H. H. Wilson appeared in 1850-67.

VEGETABLES for the table were brought from Flanders about 1520; see Gardening.

VEGETARIAN SOCIETY, founded 1847, whose members restrict themselves to a vegetable diet, held their fifteenth anniversary in London, 4 Sept. 1862.

VEHMIC TRIBUNAL (Vehmgerichte, Fehmgerichte, or Femgerichte), secret tribunals established in Westphalia to maintain religion and the public peace, had their origin in the time of Charlemagne, and rose to importance in 1182, when Westphalia became subject to the Archbishop of Cologne. Persons of the most exalted rank were subjected to their decisions, being frequently seized, tried, and executed. The emperors endeavoured to suppress them, but did not succeed till the 16th century. The last court, it is said, was held in 1568. Sir W. Scott has described them in "Anne of Geierstein." A remnant of this tribunal was abolished by Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, in 1811.

VEII, an independent Latin city near Rome. Between the Romans and Veientes frequent wars occurred, till Veii was utterly destroyed, after ten years' siege, 396 B.C. The Roman family, the Fabii, who had seceded from Rome for political reasons, were surprised and destroyed at the river Cremera, by the Veientes, 477 B.C.

VELLORE (S.E. India) became the residence of the family of the dethroned sultan of Mysore, and was strongly garrisoned by English troops, 1799. The revolt of the sepoy, in which the family of the late Tippoo took an active part, took place 10 July, 1806. The insurgents were subdued by colonel Gillespie, and mostly put to the sword; about 800 sepoy were killed.

VELOCIPEDES, vehicles of German construction, first appeared in England in April, 1818, and obtained the name from being impelled by the feet with great celerity, the mover of the vehicle sitting astride upon it as upon a rocking-horse.

VENAISSIN COMTAT, or COMTAT (S. France), after various changes, was ceded to pope Gregory X. 1274; and retained by his successors till 1791, when, with Avignon, it was reunited to France.

VENDEE, see La Vendée.

VENETI, maritime Gauls inhabiting Armorica, N.W. France, who rose against the Romans 57 B.C., and were quelled by Julius Cæsar, who defeated their fleet, 56, and cruelly exterminated an active commercial race.

VENETIA, see Venice.

VENEZUELA, the seat of a South American republic. When the Spaniards landed here in 1499, they observed some huts built upon piles, in an Indian village named Cora, in order to raise them above the stagnated water that covered the plain; and this induced them to give it the name of Venezuela, or Little Venice. This state in July, 1814, declared in congressional assembly the sovereignty of its people, which was recognised in 1818. It formed part of the republic of Columbia till 1831, when it separated from the federal union, and declared itself sole and independent. General D. T. Monagas was elected in 1855 president, and continued so till March, 1858, when a revolution broke out, and Don Jose Castro became president, who also was compelled to resign in Aug. 1859; and Dr. Pedro Gual assumed the government. A new constitution was promulgated in Dec. 1858. General José Paez was elected president, 8 Sept. 1861. He resigned on 17 June, 1863, and Juan E. Falcon succeeded him, 17 June. General Febres Cordero protested, and set up a rival government at Porto-Cabello, which broke up in Oct. following. Marshal J. C. Falcon was proclaimed president, 18 March, 1865. The population in 1859 was about one million and a half; see Columbia.

VENI, VIDI, VICI,—“I came, I saw, I conquered;” see Zela.

VENICE (N. Italy). The province of Venetia, held by the Veneti, of uncertain origin, was invaded by the Gauls about 350 B.C. They made an alliance with the Romans, 215 B.C., who founded Aquileia, 181, and gradually acquired the whole country. Under the empire, Venetia included Padua, Verona, and other important places. Population of the city of Venice in 1857, 118,172.

VENLOO (Holland), surrendered to the allies, under Marlborough, 23 Sept. 1702; and to the French, under Pichegru, 26 Oct. 1794.

VENNER'S INSURRECTION, see Anabaptists, 1661.

VENTILATORS were invented by the rev. Dr. Hales, and described to the Royal Society of London, May, 1741; and the ventilator for the use of ships was announced by Mr. Triewald, in November, same year. The marquis of Chabanne's plan for warming and ventilating theatres and houses for audiences was applied to those of London about 1819. The systems of Dr. Reid (about 1834) and others followed. Dr. Arnott's work on this subject was published in 1838. A commission on warming and ventilation issued a report in 1859.

VENTRILOQUISM (speaking from the belly). The phenomena are evidently described in Isaiah xxix. 4 (about 712 B.C.). Among eminent ventriloquists were baron Mengen and M. Saint Gille, about 1772 (whose experiments were examined by a commission of the French Academy); Thomas King (about 1716); Charles Mathews (1824); and M. Alexandre (1822).

VENUS. Her transit over the sun on 24 Nov. 1639 was first ascertained by Horrox in 1633. The astronomer-royal Maskelyne observed her transit at St. Helena, 6 June, 1761. Capt. Cook made his first voyage in the Endeavour, to Otaheite, to observe a transit of Venus, 3 June, 1769; see Cook's Voyages. The diurnal rotation of Venus was discovered by Cassini in 1667. The transit on 9 Dec. 1874 may be observed in Eastern Europe and in Asia.

VERA CRUZ (Mexico), built about 1600; was taken by the Americans in 1847, and by the allies on 17 Dec. 1861 during the intervention; retaken by the liberals, under Juarez, 27 June, 1867.

VERCELLI, the ancient Vercellæ, Piedmont, near which Marius defeated the Cimbri, 101 B.C. It was the seat of a republic in the 13th and 14th centuries. It was taken by the Spaniards, 1630; French, 1704; and allies, 1706; and afterwards partook of the fortunes of Piedmont.

VERDEN (Hanover). Here Charlemagne massacred about 4500 Saxons, who had rebelled and relapsed into idolatry, 782.

VERMANDOIS (N. France), a county given by Charlemagne to his second son Pepin, whose family held it till the 11th century; in 1156 it came, by marriage, to the counts of Flanders; and in 1185 it was seized by Philip II., and incorporated with the monarchy in 1215.

VERMONT, a northern state in North America, was settled by the French, 1724-31; and ceded to Great Britain in 1763. It was freed from the authority of New York, and admitted as a state of the union in 1791.

VERNEUIL (N.W. France), the site of a battle fought 17 Aug. 1424, between the Burgundians and English under the regent duke of Bedford, and the French, assisted by the Scots, commanded by the count de Narbonne, the earls of Douglas and Buchan, &c. The French at first were successful; but some Lombard auxiliaries, who had taken the English camp, commenced pillaging. Two thousand English archers came then fresh to the attack; and the French and Scots were totally defeated, and their leaders killed.

VERNON GALLERY. The inadequate manner in which modern British art was represented in the National Gallery was somewhat remedied in 1847 by the munificent present to the nation, by Mr. Robert Vernon, of a collection of 157 pictures, all but two being by first-rate British artists. They were first exhibited at Mr. Vernon's house in Pall-mall, next in the vaults beneath the National Gallery, afterwards at Marlborough House, and are now at the South Kensington Museum. In 1857, Mr. John Sheepshanks followed Mr. Vernon's example; see Sheepshanks' Donations.

VERONA (N. Italy) was founded by the Gauls or Etruscans; see Campus Raudius. The amphitheatre was built by Titus, A.D. 82. Verona has been the site of many conflicts. It was taken by Constantine 312; on 27 Sept. 489 Theodoric defeated Odoacer, king of Italy. About 1260 Mastino della Scala was elected podestà, and his descendants (the Scaligeri) ruled, till subdued by the Visconti, dukes of Milan. Verona was conquered by the Venetians 1405, and held by them with some intermissions till its capture by the French general Massena, 3 June, 1796. Near to it Charles Albert of Sardinia defeated the Austrians 6 May, 1848. Verona is one of the four strong Austrian fortresses termed the Quadrangle, or Quadrilateral, and here the emperor Francis Joseph, on 12 July, 1859, in an order of the day announced to his army that he must yield to circumstances unfavourable to his policy, and thanked his people and army for their support. It was surrendered to the Italian government, 16 Oct. 1866; and the king was received by 70,000 persons in the amphitheatre, 18 Nov. 1866.

VERSAILLES (near Paris). In the reign of Louis XIII. Versailles was only a small village, in a forest thirty miles in circuit; and here this prince built a hunting-seat about 1632. Louis XIV. between 1661 and 1687 enlarged it into a magnificent palace, which became the usual residence of the kings of France. By the treaty of peace between Great Britain and British North America, signed at Paris, the latter power was admitted to be a sovereign and independent state, 3 Sept. 1783. On the same day a treaty was signed at Versailles between Great Britain, France, and Spain, by which Pondicherry and Carical, with other possessions in Bengal, were restored to France, and Trincomalee restored to the Dutch. Here was held the military festival of the royal guards 1 Oct. 1789, which was immediately followed (on the 5th and 6th) by the attack of the mob, who massacred the guards and brought the king back to Paris. It was afterwards the residence of Louis-Philippe, and is still a royal palace. The historical gallery was opened in 1837.

VERSE, see Poetry, Hexameter, Elegy, Iambic, &c. Surrey's translation of part of Virgil's Æneid into blank verse is the first English composition of the kind, omitting tragedy, extant in the English language (published in 1547). The verse previously used in our grave compositions was the stanza of eight lines, the ottava rima (as adopted with the addition of one line by Spenser in his Fairy Queen), who probably borrowed it from Ariosto and Tasso. Boccaccio introduced it into Italy in his Teseide, having copied it from the old French chansons. Trissino is said to have been the first introducer of blank verse among the moderns, about 1508. Vossius.

VESERONCE (S.E. France), near Vienne. Here Gondemar, king of the Burgundians, defeated and killed Clodomir, king of Orleans, and revenged the murder of his brother Sigismund and his family, 524. This conflict is called also the battle of Voiron.

VESPER, see Sicilian Vespers. In the house of the French ambassador at Blackfriars, in London, a Jesuit was preaching to upwards of three hundred persons in an upper room, the floor of which gave way with the weight, when the whole congregation was precipitated to the street, and the preacher and more than a hundred of his auditory, chiefly persons of rank, were killed. This catastrophe, termed the Fatal Vespers, occurred 26 Oct. 1623. Stow.

VESTA. The planet Vesta (the ninth) was discovered by Dr. Olbers, of Bremen, on 29 March, 1807. She appears like a star of the sixth magnitude.

VESTALS were priestesses of Vesta, who took care of the perpetual fire consecrated to her worship. The mother of Romulus was a vestal. Numa, in 710 B.C., appointed four and Tarquin added two. After the expulsion of the Tarquins, the high-priest was entrusted with the care of them. Minutia was buried alive for breaking her virgin vow, 337 B.C.; Sextilia, 273 B.C.; and Cornelia Maximiliana, A.D. 92; see Chastity.

"VESTIGES OF THE NATURAL HISTORY OF CREATION," a work which upholds the doctrine of progressive development as a hypothetic history of organic creation, first appeared in 1844.

VESUVIUS. By an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum (which see) were overwhelmed A.D. 79, and more than 200,000 persons perished, among them Pliny the naturalist. Numerous other disastrous eruptions have occurred. In Dec. 1631 the town of Torre del Greco, with 4000 persons, and a great part of the surrounding country, were destroyed. One of the most dreadful eruptions ever known took place suddenly, 24 Nov. 1759. The violent burst in 1767 was the 34th from the time of Titus. One in 1794 was most destructive: the lava flowed over 5000 acres of rich vineyards and cultivated land, and the town of Torre del Greco was a second time burned; the top of the mountain fell in, and the crater is now nearly two miles in circumference. Eruptions in May, 1855, May and June, 1858, and June, 1859, caused great destruction, and in the spring and summer of 1860. A series of violent eruptions causing much damage occurred in Dec. 1861, and in Feb. 1865. Torre del Greco was again destroyed in Dec. 1861. Another eruption began 12 Nov. 1867, and continued increasing in grandeur and danger, March, 1868. The phenomena were observed by professors Tyndall and Miller, sir John Lubbock, and other scientific men, in April, 1868.

VETERINARY COLLEGE (London), was established at Camden-town, 1791; and Albert Veterinary College was opened in 1865.

VICE, an instrument of which Archytas of Tarentum, disciple of Pythagoras, is said to have been the inventor, along with the pulley and other implements, 420 B.C.

VICE-ADMIRALTY COURTS ACT, 1863, was extended and amended in 1867.

VICE-CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND, an equity judge, appointed by parliament, first took his seat 5 May, 1813. A new court was erected about 1816 contiguous to Lincoln's-inn-hall. Two additional vice-chancellors were appointed under act 5 Vict., Oct. 1841. The office of vice-chancellor of England ceased in August, 1850, and a third vice-chancellor was appointed in 1851, when two more equity judges, styled lords justices, were appointed.

VICENZA (the ancient Vicentia, N. Italy) was the seat of a republic in the 12th century. It greatly suffered by the ravages of Alaric, 401, and Attila, 452. Having joined the Lombard league, it was sacked by Frederic II. 1236. After many changes it was subjected to Venice, and with it fell under the French domination, 1796; and was given to Austria in 1814. Having revolted, it was retaken by Radetzky, 11 June, 1848. It was annexed to the kingdom of Italy, Oct. 1866.

VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRADE. This office was abolished in 1867, and a secretary with a seat in parliament substituted.

VICKSBURG, see United States, 1863.

VICTORIA, formerly PORT PHILLIP (Australia), situated between New South Wales and South Australia, the most successful colony in that region. In 1798, Bass, in his whale-boat expedition, visited Western Port, one of its harbours; and in 1802 Flinders sailed into Port Phillip Bay.

VICTORIA CROSS, a new order of merit, instituted to reward the gallantry of persons of all ranks in the army and navy, 5 Feb. 1856. It is a Maltese cross made of Russian cannon from Sebastopol. The queen conferred the honour on 62 persons (of both services) on Friday, 26 June, 1857; and on many of the Indian army, 2 Aug. 1858.

VICTORIA PARK (E. London) was originated by an act passed in 1841, which enabled her majesty's commissioners of woods and forests to purchase certain lands for a royal park, with the sum of 72,000*l.* raised by the same act, by the sale of York-house to the duke of Sutherland. The act described the land to be so purchased, containing 290 acres, situate in the parishes of St. John, Hackney; St. Matthew, Bethnal-green; and St. Mary, Stratford-le-bow, at the east end of London. The park was completed and opened to the public in 1845. Miss Burdett Coutts presented a handsome drinking fountain, and was present at its inauguration, 28 June, 1862.

VICTORIA RAILWAY-BRIDGE, on the tubular principle, over the St. Lawrence, Montreal, erected by Mr. James Hodges, under the superintendence of Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. A. M. Ross, engineers, was completed and formally opened by the prince of Wales, 25 Aug. 1860. It forms part of the Grand Trunk railway, which connects Canada and the seaboard states of North America. The length is about sixty yards less than two English miles, and about $7\frac{1}{2}$ times longer than Waterloo bridge, and ten times longer than new Chelsea bridge; the height sixty feet between the summer level of the river and the under surface of the central tube. It is supported by 24 piers. The cost was 1,700,000*l.* On 5 Jan. 1855, while constructing, the bridge was carried away by floating ice, but the stonework remained firm.

VICTORIA REGIA, the magnificent water-lily brought to this country from Guiana by sir Robert Schomburgk, in 1838, and named after the queen. Fine specimens are at the Botanic Gardens at Kew, Regent's Park, &c. It was grown in the open air in 1855, by Messrs. Weeks, of Chelsea.

VICTORY, MAN-OF-WAR, of 100 guns, the finest first-rate ship in the navy of England, was lost in a violent tempest near the race of Alderney, and its admiral, sir John Balchen, and 100 gentlemen's sons, and the whole crew, consisting of 1000 men, perished, 8 October, 1744.—The Victory, the flag-ship of Nelson, at the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct. 1805, is kept in fine preservation at Portsmouth.

VICTUALLERS, an ancient trade in England. The Vintners' company of London was founded 1437; their hall rebuilt in 1823.

VICTUALLING OFFICE (London), managed the victualling of the royal navy; was instituted Dec. 1663. The number of commissioners was five, afterwards seven, and then reduced to six. The various departments on Tower-hill, St. Katherine's, and Rotherhithe, were removed to Deptford in Aug. 1785, and the office to Somerset-house, 1783. In 1832 the office of commissioners was abolished, and the victualling-office made one of five departments under the lords of the admiralty.

VIENNA (the Roman Vindebona), was capital of the margraviate of Austria, 984; capital of the German empire, 1278; and since 1806 the capital of the Austrian dominions only. Population in 1857, 476,222; in 1865, about 560,000; see Austria.

		Conferences respecting the Russo-Turkish war held at Vienna *	1853-5

* A conference of the four great powers, England, France, Austria, and Prussia, was held 24 July, when a note was agreed on and transmitted for acceptance to St. Petersburg and Constantinople, 31 July. This note was accepted by the czar, 10 Aug., but the sultan required modifications, which were rejected by Russia, 7 Sept. The sultan's note (31 Dec.) contained four points:—1. The promptest possible evacuation of the principalities. 2. Revision of the treaties. 3. Maintenance of religious privileges to the communities of all confessions. 4. A definite settlement of the convention respecting the holy places. It was approved by the four powers, and the conferences closed on 16 Jan. 1854.—A new conference of plenipotentiaries, from Great Britain (lord John Russell), France (M. Drouyn de l'Huys), Austria (count Buol), Turkey (Arif

TREATIES OF VIENNA.

1. The treaty between the emperor of Germany and the king of Spain, by which they confirmed to each other such parts of the Spanish dominions as they were respectively possessed of; and by a private treaty the emperor engaged to employ a force to procure the restoration of Gibraltar to Spain, and to use means for placing the Pretender on the throne of Great Britain. Spain guaranteed the Pragmatic Sanction. 30 April, 1725.
2. Treaty of alliance between the emperor of Germany, Charles VI., George II., king of Great Britain, and the states of Holland, by which the Pragmatic Sanction was guaranteed, and the disputes as to the Spanish succession terminated. (Spain acceded to the treaty on the 22nd of July.) Signed 16 March, 1731.
3. Treaty of peace between the emperor Charles VI. of Germany and the king of France, Louis XV., by which the latter power agreed to guarantee the Pragmatic Sanction, and Lorraine was ceded to France. Signed 18 Nov. 1738; see Pragmatic Sanction.

4. Treaty between Napoleon I. of France and Francis (II. of Germany) I. of Austria, by which Austria ceded to France the Tyrol, Dalmatia, and other territories, which were shortly afterwards declared to be united to France under the title of the Illyrian Provinces, and engaged to adhere to the prohibitory system adopted towards England by France and Russia. 14 Oct. 1809.
5. Treaty between Great Britain, Austria, Russia, and Prussia, confirming the principles on which they had acted by the treaty of Chaumont, 1 Mar. 1814. Signed 23 March, 1815.
6. Treaty between the king of the Netherlands on the one part, and Great Britain, Russia, Austria, and Prussia on the other, agreeing to the enlargement of the Dutch territories, and vesting the sovereignty in the house of Orange. 31 May, 1815.
7. Treaty by which Denmark ceded Swedish Pomerania and Rugen to Prussia, in exchange for Lauenburg. 4 June, 1815.
8. Commercial treaty for twelve years between Austria and Prussia. Signed at Vienna, 19 Feb. 1853.
9. Treaty for the maintenance of Turkey, by the representatives of Great Britain, France, Austria, and Russia. Signed 9 April, 1854.
10. Treaty between Austria and Prussia and Denmark, by which Denmark ceded the duchies. 30 Oct. 1864.
11. Treaty of peace between Austria and Italy; Venetia given up to Italy. 3 Oct. 1866.

VIENNE, the ancient Vienna Allobrogum (S.E. France). Here the emperor Valentinian II. was put to death by Arbogastes, 15 May, 392, and a short reaction in favour of paganism followed. Vienne was capital of the kingdom of Burgundy in 432 and 879, and sometimes gave its name to the kingdom. A general council was held here in 1311. Vienne was annexed to the French monarchy, 1448.

VIGO (N.W. Spain) was attacked and burned by the English, under Drake and Norris, in 1589. Sir George Rooke, with the combined English and Dutch fleets, attacked the French fleet and the Spanish galleons in the port of Vigo, when several men of war and galleons were taken, and many destroyed, and abundance of plate and other valuable effects fell into the hands of the conquerors, 12 Oct. 1702. Vigo was taken by lord Cobham in 1719, but relinquished after raising contributions. It was again taken by the British, 27 March, 1809.

VILLA FRANCA. Near here, and Llerena, Spain, the British cavalry, under sir Stapleton Cotton, defeated the French cavalry under marshal Sout, 11 April, 1812.—VILLA FRANCA, a small port on the Mediterranean, near Genoa, was bought for a steam-packet station by a Russian company, about Aug. 1853, which caused some political excitement.—At VILLA FRANCA, in Lombardy, the emperors of France and Austria met, on 11 July, 1859 (after the battle of Solferino), and on 12 July signed the preliminaries of peace, the basis of the treaty of Zurich (which see).

VILLA VICIOSA. 1. in Portugal. Here the Portuguese, under the French general, Schomberg, defeated the Spaniards, 1665. 2. in Castile, Spain. Here the struggle for the Spanish crown was decided in favour of Philip V. by Vendôme's victory over Staremberg and the Austrians, 10 Dec. 1710.

VILLAIN, see Slavery in England.

VIMEIRA (in Portugal), where the British, under sir Arthur Wellesley, defeated the French and Spanish forces, under marshal Junot, duke of Abrantes, 21 Aug. 1808. The attack, made with great bravery, was gallantly repulsed; it was repeated by Kellerman at the head of the French reserve, which was also repulsed. And the French, being charged with the bayonet, withdrew on all points in confusion, leaving many prisoners.

VINCENNES, a strong castle near Paris; a residence of the French kings from the 12th to the 14th centuries. Henry V. of England died at the Bois de Vincennes, 31 Aug.

Effendi, and Russia (count Gortschakoff), took place, March, 1854. Two points, the protectorate of the principalities and the free navigation of the Danube, were agreed to; but the proposals of the powers as to the reduction of the Russian power in the Black Sea were rejected by the czar, and the conference closed, 5 June, 1855. The English and French envoys' assent to the Austrian propositions was not approved of by their governments, and they both resigned their official positions.

1422. In the fosse of the castle, Louis duc d'Enghien was shot by order of Napoleon, after a hasty trial, early on the morning of 22 March, 1804.

VINCENT, CAPE ST. (S. W. Portugal). Admiral Rooke, with twenty men-of-war, and the Turkish fleet under his convoy, was attacked by admiral Tourville, with a force vastly superior to his own, off Cape St. Vincent, when twelve English and Dutch men-of-war, and eighty merchantmen, were taken or destroyed by the French, 16 June, 1693. Near here admiral Rodney destroyed several Spanish ships, 16 Jan. 1780; see Rodney's Victories. The celebrated battle was fought 14 Feb. 1797, between the Spanish and British fleets off the cape; the latter commanded by admiral sir John Jervis, who took (after a well-fought battle) four line-of-battle ships, and considerably damaged the rest of the Spanish fleet, 14 Feb. 1797. Two of the captured ships were of 100 guns each, and the other two each of 74. From this cape the earl had his title.

VINCENT, ST. (West Indies), long a neutral island; but at the peace of 1763, the French agreed that the right to it should be vested in the English. The latter soon after engaged in a war against the Caribs, on the windward side of the island, who were obliged to consent to a peace, by which they ceded a large tract of land to the British crown. In 1779 the Caribs greatly contributed to the reduction of this island by the French, who, however, restored it in 1783. In 1795 the French landed some troops, and again instigated the Caribs to an insurrection, which was not subdued for several months. The great eruption of the Scoeffrier mountain, after the lapse of nearly a century, occurred in 1812. Population in 1861, 31,755.

VINCENT DE PAUL, ST.,* CHARITABLE SOCIETY, founded in 1833, in France, by twelve young men. It extends its extremely beneficial operations even into Britain. Its power excited the jealousy of the French government, which suppressed its central committee at Paris, in Oct. 1861.

VINE. The vine was planted by Noah, 2347 B.C. Gen. ix. 20. A colony of vine-dressers from Phocæa, in Ionia, settled at Marseilles, and instructed the South Gauls in tillage, vine-dressing, and commerce, about 600 B.C. Some think that vines are aborigines of Languedoc, Provence, and Sicily, and that they grew spontaneously on the Mediterranean shores of Italy, France, and Spain. The vine was carried into Champagne, and part of Germany, by the emperor Probus, about A.D. 279. The vine and sugar-cane were planted in Madeira in 1420. The vine was planted in England in 1552; and in the gardens of Hampton-court palace is an old and celebrated vine, said to surpass any known vine in Europe; see Grapes, and Wine. The Tokay vines were planted in 1350.

Vine Disease. In the spring of 1845, Mr. E. Tucker, of Margate, observed a fungus (since named Oidium Tuckeri) on grapes in the hot-houses of Mr. Slater, of Margate. It is a whitish mildew, and totally destroys the fruit.

The spores of this oidium were found in the vinerias at Versailles in 1847. The disease soon reached the trellised vines, and in 1850 many lost all their produce.

In 1852, it spread over France, Italy, Spain, Syria, and in Zante and Cephalonia attacked the currants, reducing the crop to one-twelfth of the usual amount.

Through its ravages, the wine manufacture in Madeira ceased for several years.

Many attempts have been made to arrest the progress of this disease, but without much effect. Sulphur dust is the most efficacious remedy.

The disease had much abated in France, Portugal, and Madeira, in 1863. In 1862 Californian vines were introduced into the two latter.

VINEGAR. Known nearly as early as wine. The ancients had several kinds of vinegar, which they used for drink. The Roman soldiers were accustomed to take it in their marches. The Bible represents Boaz, a rich citizen of Bethlehem, as providing vinegar for his reapers (1312 B.C.), a custom still prevalent in Spain and Italy.

VINEGAR-HILL (near Enniscorthy, in Wexford, S. E. Ireland). Here the Irish rebels, headed by father John, a priest, encamped and committed many outrages on the surrounding country. They were gradually surrounded by the British troops, commanded by Lake, 21 June, 1798, and after a fierce struggle, with much slaughter, totally dispersed.

VINTNERS, see Victuallers.

VIOL AND VIOLIN. The lyre of the Greeks became our harp, and the viol of the middle ages became the violin. The violin is mentioned as early as 1200, in the legendary life of St. Christopher. It was introduced into England, some say, by Charles II. Stradivarius (or Stradivarius) of Cremona was a renowned violin-maker (1700 to 1722). The eminent violinist Paganini died 27 May, 1840.

* He was born, 1576; established the congregation of Lazarists, or Vincentines, 1625; Sisters of Charity, 1634; a founding hospital, 1648. He died 1660.

VIRGINIA, see Rome, 449 B.C.

VIRGINIA, the first British settlement in North America, was discovered by John Cabot in 1497, and was taken possession of and named by Raleigh, after the virgin-queen Elizabeth, 13 July, 1584. Vain attempts were made to settle it in 1585. Two expeditions were formed by patent in 1606, and others in 1610. In 1626, it reverted to the crown; and a more permanent colony was established soon afterwards. George Washington was delegate for Virginia in the congress of 1774. Eastern Virginia seceded from the Union, 25 April, 1861, but Western Virginia declared for the Union, 13 Feb. and elected a governor, 20 Feb. 1861. Virginia was the chief seat of the war; see United States, and Richmond.

VIRGIN ISLANDS (West Indies), an eastern group (discovered by Columbus, 1494): Virgin Gorda, Tortola, Anegada, &c., and the Danish Isles, St. Thomas and St. John. Governor of the British Isles, sir Carlo A. Rumbold, 1866.

Tortola settled by Dutch buccaneers about 1648; expelled by the English (who have held it since) 1666
St. Thomas settled by Danes 1672, and St. John a few years after; held by the British 1801-2; 1807-15; sold to the United States for 1,500,000, to be made a "territory." Danish proclamation 25 Oct. 1867
By a dreadful hurricane off St. Thomas, the Royal Mail steamers Rhone and Wye were entirely wrecked; the Conway and Derwent, and above 50 other vessels, driven ashore; about 1000 persons said to have perished.

Much suffering occasioned in Tortola; houses blown down or unroofed, &c. (a report reached London that the isle was submerged) 29 Oct. 1867
Earthquake at St. Thomas's and other isles; much damage; few lives lost . . . Nov. ,, VIRGIN MARY. The Assumption of the Virgin is a festival in the Greek and Latin churches, in honour of the miraculous ascent of Mary into heaven, according to their belief, 15 Aug. A.D. 45. The Presentation of the Virgin is a feast celebrated 21 Nov., said to have been instituted among the Greeks in the 11th century; its institution in the West is ascribed to pope Gregory XI. 1372; see Annunciation, and Conception, Immaculate.

VIRTUE, LEAGUE OF, see Tugendbund.

VISCONTI, the name of a noble Italian family, which ruled in Milan from about 1277 to 1447; the heiress of the family was married to Francesca Sforza, who became duke 1450.

VISCOUNT (Vice Comes), anciently the name of an officer under an earl, who being oftentimes required at court, was his deputy, to look after the affairs of the county. The first viscount in England created by patent was John, lord Beaumont, whom Henry VI. created viscount Beaumont, giving him precedence above all barons, 10 Feb. 1440. Ashmole. This title, however, is of older date in Ireland and France. John Barry, lord Barry, was made viscount Buttevant, in Ireland, 9 Rich. II. 1385. Beatson.

VISIBLE SPEECH, a term applied by Mr. Alex. Melville Bell to his "Universal Self-Interpreting Physiological Alphabet," comprising thirty symbols representing the conformations of the mouth when uttering sounds. He stated that about fifty different types would be required to print all known languages with these symbols. He expounded his system to the Society of Arts, London, 14 March, 1866; and published a book in 1867.

VISIGOTHS, separated from the Ostragoths about 330; see Goths. The emperor Valens, about 369, admitted them into the Roman territories upon the condition of their serving when wanted in the Roman armies; and Theodosius the Great permitted them to form distinct corps commanded by their own officers. In 400, under Alarie, they invaded Italy, and in 410 took Rome. They founded their kingdom of Toulouse, 414; conquered the Alani, and extended their rule into Spain, 414; expelled the Romans in 468; and finally were themselves conquered by the Saracens under Muza, in 711, when their last king, Roderic, was defeated and slain; see Spain for a list of the Visigothic kings. Their rule in France ended with their defeat by Clovis at Vouglé, in 507.

VITTORIA (N. Spain), the site of a brilliant victory obtained by Wellington over the French army commanded by Joseph Bonaparte, king of Spain, and marshal Jourdan, 21 June, 1813. The hostile armies were nearly equal, from 70,000 to 75,000 each. After a long and fearful battle, the French were driven, towards evening, through the town of Vittoria, and in their retreat were thrown into irretrievable confusion. The British loss was 22 officers and 479 men killed; 167 officers and 2640 men wounded. Marshal Jourdan lost 151 pieces of cannon, 451 waggons of ammunition, all his baggage, provisions, cattle, and treasure, with his bâton as a marshal of France. Continuing the pursuit on the 25th, Wellington took Jourdan's only remaining gun.

VIVARIUM, see Aquavivarium.

VIVISECTION. Physiological experiments upon living animals, having much increased, the societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals in Dresden and Paris in 1859 requested the opinion of a committee of eminent scientific men on the merits of the knowledge thus acquired. Their judgment was not unanimous. The London society took up the question in 1860; and printed a pamphlet by Mr. G. Macilwain against vivisection. In Aug. 1862 an international conference to discuss the question was held at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The subject was discussed in 1866, and a prize awarded by the London society. Sir Charles Bell's opinion of vivisection was, that it either obscured the subject it was meant to illustrate, or misled men into practical errors of the most serious character.

VIZIER, GRAND, an officer of the Ottoman Porte, first appointed about 1326. The office was abolished in 1838; but since revived.

VLADIMIR (central Russia), a city founded in the 12th century, and the capital of a grand duchy from 1157 to about 1328.

VOIRON, see Veseronce.

VOLCANOES. In different parts of the earth there are above 200 volcanoes which have been active in modern times; see Etna, Vesuvius, and Iceland. In Mexico, a plain was filled up into a mountain more than a thousand feet in height by the burning lava from a volcano, in 1759. A volcano in the isle of Ferro broke out 13 Sept. 1777, which threw out an immense quantity of red water, that discoloured the sea for several leagues. A new volcano appeared in one of the Azore islands, 1 May, 1808.

VOLHYNIA, a Polish province, annexed to Russia 1793.

VOLSCI, an ancient Latin people, frequently at war with the Romans. From their capital, Corioli, Caius Martius (who defeated them about 490 B.C.) derived his name Coriolanus. The story of his banishment by his ungrateful countrymen; of his revenge on them by bringing the Volsci to the gates of Rome, yet afterwards sparing the city at the entreaties of his mother, Volumnia (487 B.C.), is considered by many as a poetical legend. The Volsci and their allies totally defeated at Sutrium by the consul Valerius Corvus (346 B.C.), and incorporated with the Roman people about 338 B.C.

VOLSINII, the inhabitants of an Etrurian city, who, after a sharp contest, were completely overcome by the Roman consul Titus Coruncanus, 280 B.C.

VOLTAIC PILE or BATTERY, was constructed in consequence of the discoveries of Galvani; see Galvanism in article Electricity. The principle was discovered by Alessandro Volta, of Como (born 1745), for thirty years professor of natural philosophy at Pavia, and announced by him to the Royal Society of London in 1793. The battery was first set up in 1800. Volta was made an Italian count and senator by Napoleon Bonaparte, and was otherwise greatly honoured. While young he invented the electrophorus, electric pistol, and hydrogen lamp. He died in 1826, aged 81. The form of the Voltaic battery has been greatly improved by the researches of modern philosophers. The nitric acid battery of Mr. W. R. Grove was constructed in 1839; the carbon battery of Professor Robert Bunsen in 1842. The former is very much used in this country; that of Bunsen on the continent.

VOLTURNO, a river in S. Italy, near Capua, near to which Garibaldi and his followers held a strong position. This was furiously assailed by the royal troops on 1 Oct. 1860, who were finally repulsed after a desperate struggle, the fiercest in which Garibaldi had yet been engaged. He was aided greatly by a band of Piedmontese from Naples. On 2 Oct. general Bixio completed the victory by capturing 2500 fresh Neapolitan troops and dispersing others.

VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS. Public contributions for the support of the British government against the policy and designs of France amounted to two millions and a half sterling in 1798. About 200,000*l.* were transmitted to England from India in 1799. Sir Robert Peel, of Bury, among other contributions of equal amount, subscribed 10,000*l.* Annual Register; see Patriotic Fund. In 1862 nearly a million pounds were subscribed in the British empire for the relief of the Lancashire cotton spinners; see Cotton.

VOLUNTEERS were enrolled in England in consequence of the threatened invasion of revolutionary France, 1793-4. Besides our large army, and 85,000 men voted for the sea, we subsidised 40,000 Germans, raised our militia to 100,000 men, and armed the citizens as volunteers; the yeomanry formed cavalry regiments. Between 1798 and 1804, when this force was of greatest amount, it numbered 410,000, of which 70,000 were Irish.* On 26 Oct. 1803, king George III. reviewed in Hyde Park 12,401 London volunteers, and on 28 Oct. 14,676 more. The English volunteers were, according to official accounts, 341,600 on 1 Jan. 1804; see Naval Volunteers. In May, 1859, in consequence of the prevalence of the fear of a French invasion, the formation of volunteer corps of riflemen commenced under the auspices of the government, and by the end of the year many thousands were enrolled in all parts of the kingdom.

* The first regiment of Irish volunteers was formed at Dublin, under command of the duke of Leinster, 12 Oct. 1779. They armed generally to the amount of 20,000 men, and received the unanimous thanks of the houses of lords and commons in Ireland, for their patriotism and spirit, for coming forward and defending their country. At the period when the force appeared, Irish affairs bore a serious aspect;

- [The first Middlesex volunteers were formed in 1803 as the duke of Cumberland's sharpshooters. They retained their organisation as a rifle club, when other volunteers were disbanded. In 1835 they were permitted by the duchess of Kent to take the name of the Royal Victoria Rifle Club.]
- National Volunteer Association* for promoting the practice of Rifle-shooting, was established in London, under the patronage of the queen and prince consort; Mr. Sidney (afterwards lord) Herbert, secretary at war, president, and the earl of Derby and other noblemen vice-presidents. VOSSEM, PEACE OF, between the elector of Brandenburg and Louis XIV. of France; the latter engaged not to assist the Dutch against the elector; signed 6 June, 1673.

VOTING PAPERS, see Dodson's Act. The proposal to use them was negatived in the debates on reform in 1867.

VOUGLÉ or VOUILLÉ, S. W. France (near Poitiers), where Alaric II., king of the Visigoths, was defeated and slain by Clovis, king of France, 507. Clovis immediately after subdued the whole country from the Loire to the Pyrenees, and thus his kingdom became firmly established. A peace followed between the Franks and Visigoths, who had been settled above one hundred years in that part of Gaul called Septimania. Clovis soon afterwards made Paris the capital of his kingdom. Hénault.

manufactures had decreased, and foreign trade had been hurt by a prohibition of the export of salted provisions and butter. No notice of the complaints of the people had been taken in the English parliament, when, owing to the alarm of an invasion, ministers allowed the nation to arm, and an immense force was soon raised. The Irish took this occasion to demand a free trade, and government saw there was no trifling with a country with arms in its hands. The Irish parliament unanimously addressed the king for a free trade, and it was granted, 1779.

The first voyage round the world was made by a ship, part of a Spanish squadron which had been under the command of Magellan (who was killed at the Philippine Islands in a skirmish) in 1519-20; see Circumnavigators, and North-West Passage.

VULCANITE (vulcanised india-rubber), also termed Ebonite.

VULGATE (from vulgatus, published), a term applied to the Latin version of the Scriptures, which is authorised by the council of Trent (1546), and which is attributed to St. Jerome, about 384. The older version, called the Italic, is said to have been made in the beginning of the 2nd century. A critical edition was printed by order of pope Sixtus V. in 1590, which being considered inaccurate, was superseded by the edition of pope Clement V. in 1592. The earliest printed Vulgate is without date, by Gutenberg and Fust, probably about 1455; the first dated (Fust and Schœffer), is 1462.

WAGES IN ENGLAND. The wages of sundry workmen were first fixed by act of parliament 25 Edw. III. 1350. Haymakers had but one penny a day. Master carpenters, masons, tilers, and other coverers of houses, had not more than 3d. per day (about 9d. of our money); and their servants 1½d. Viner's Statutes.

By the 23rd Hen. VI. the wages of a bailiff of husbandry was 23s. 4d. per annum, and clothing of the price of 5s. with meat and drink; chief hind, carter, or shepherd, 20s., clothing, 4s.; common servant of husbandry, 15s., clothing, 40d.; woman-servant, 10s., clothing, 4s. 1444

By the 11 Hen. VII., a like rate of wages with a little advance: as, for instance, a free mason, master carpenter, rough mason, bricklayer, master tiler, plumber, glazier, carver or joiner, was allowed from Easter to Michaelmas to take 6d. a day without meat and drink; or, with meat and drink, 4d.: from Michaelmas to Easter, to abate 1d. A master having under him six men was allowed 1d. a day extra 1495

In 1866 the annual amount of wages paid in the United Kingdom was estimated by Mr. Gladstone at 250,000,000l.: by Mr. Bass at 350,000,000l.; and by professor Leone Levi at 418,300,000l., earned by 10,697,000 workers, ages 20 to 60.

WAGGONS were rare in the last century. They, with carts, &c., not excepting those used in agriculture, were taxed in 1783. The carriers' waggons are now nearly superseded by the railways.

WAGHORN'S NEW OVERLAND ROUTE TO INDIA. Lieut. Waghorn devoted a large portion of his life to connect India with England. On 31 Oct. 1845, he arrived in London, by a new route, with the Bombay mail of the 1st of that month. His despatches reached Suez on the 19th, and Alexandria on the 20th, whence he proceeded by steamboat to a place twelve miles nearer London than Trieste. He hurried through Austria, Baden, Bavaria, Prussia, and Belgium, and reached London at half-past four on the morning of the first-mentioned day. The authorities of the different countries through which he passed eagerly facilitated his movements. The ordinary express, viâ Marseilles, reached London 2 Nov. following.* Mr. Waghorn subsequently addressed a letter to the Times newspaper, in which he stated that in a couple of years he would bring the Bombay mail to London in 21 days. He died 8 Jan. 1850.

* The Overland Mail, which had left Bombay on 1 Dec. 1845, arrived early on the 30th in London, by way of Marseilles and Paris. This speedy arrival was owing to the great exertions made by the French government to show that the route through France was shorter and better.

slaughter on both sides was dreadful : 20,000 Austrians were taken by the French, and the defeated army retired to Moravia. An armistice was signed on the 12th ; and on 24 Oct. by a treaty of peace, Austria ceded all her sea-coast to France ; the kingdoms of Saxony and Bavaria were enlarged at her expense ; part of Poland in Galicia was ceded to Russia ; and Joseph Bonaparte was recognised as king of Spain.

WAHABEES or WAHABITES, a warlike Mahometan reforming sect, considering themselves the only true followers of the prophet, arose in Arabia in about 1750, under the rule of Abd-el-Wahab. His grandson, Saoud, in 1801, defeated an expedition headed by the caliph of Bagdad. In 1803 this sect seized Mecca and Medina, and continued their conquests, although their chief was assassinated in the midst of his victories. His son, Abdallah, long resisted Mahommed Ali, pacha of Egypt, but in 1818 he was defeated and taken prisoner by Ibrahim Pacha, who sent him to Constantinople, where he was put to death. The sect now flourishing is well described by Mr. W. Gifford Palgrave in his "Journey and Residence in Arabia in 1862-3," published in 1865.

WAITS, the night minstrels who perform shortly before Christmas. The name was given to the musicians attached to the king's court. We find that a company of waits was established at Exeter in 1400 to "pipe the watch." The waits in London and Westminster were long officially recognised by the corporation.

WAKEFIELD (W. Yorkshire), an ancient town. Near it is the site of a battle between Margaret, the queen of Henry VI., and the duke of York, in which the latter was slain, and 3000 Yorkists fell upon the field, 31 Dec. 1460. The death of the duke, who aspired to the crown, seemed to fix the good fortune of Margaret ; but the earl of Warwick espoused the cause of the duke's son, the earl of March, afterwards Edward IV., and the civil war was continued. An art and industrial exhibition was opened at Wakefield, 30 Aug. 1865.

WALBROOK CHURCH (London), reputed the masterpiece of sir Christopher Wren, completed in 1679. There was a church here in 1135, and a new church was erected in 1429.

WALCHEREN (an island at the mouth of the Scheldt, Holland). The unfortunate expedition of the British to this isle in 1809 consisted of 35 ships of the line, and 200 smaller vessels, principally transports, and 40,000 land forces, the latter under the command of the earl of Chatham, and the fleet under sir Richard Strachan. For a long time the destination of the expedition remained secret ; but before 28 July, 1809, when it set sail, the French journals had announced that Walcheren was the point of attack. Perhaps a more powerful and better appointed armament had never previously left the British ports, or ever more completely disappointed public expectation. Flushing was invested in August ; a dreadful bombardment followed, and the place was taken 15 Aug. ; but no suggestion on the part of the naval commander, nor urging on the part of the officers, could induce the earl to vigorous action, until the period of probable success was gone, and necessity obliged him to return with as many of the troops as disease and an unhealthy climate had spared. The place was evacuated, 23 Dec. 1809. The house of commons instituted an inquiry, and lord Chatham resigned his post of master-general of the ordnance, to prevent greater disgrace ; but the policy of ministers in planning the expedition was, nevertheless, approved. The following epigram appeared at the time :—

WALDECK and PYRMONT, united German principalities, established in 1682. The late reigning family claim descent from the Saxon hero, Witikind, who flourished about 772. Prince George Victor succeeded his father, George, on 15 May, 1845 ; abdicated ; and on 22 Oct. 1867, the states approved a treaty of annexation, and the administration was transferred to Prussia, 1 Jan. 1868. Population in Dec. 1861, 58,604.

WALDENSES, a sect (also called Valdenses, Vallenses, and Vaudois) inhabiting the Cottian Alps, derives its name, according to some authors, from Peter de Waldo, of Lyons (1170). They had a translation of the Bible, and allied themselves to the Albigenes, and were much vilified and persecuted, which led to the establishment of the Holy Office or Inquisition. Pope Innocent III. commissioned some monks to preach against the heresies of the Waldenses in Narbonne and Provence ; but the French bishops were at first jealous of this mission, armed as it was with great power, and the feudal chiefs refused to obey the orders of the legates, 1203-4. One of the monks, the first inquisitor, Peter Chateaufneuf, having been assassinated, the aspiring pontiff called on all the neighbouring powers to march into the heretical district. All obstinate heretics were placed at the disposal of Simon de Montfort, commander of this crusade, and the whole race of the Waldenses and Albigenses were ordered to be pursued with fire and sword; see Albigenses. They settled in the valleys of Piedmont about 1375, but were frequently dreadfully persecuted, especially in the 17th century, when Charles I. of England interceded for them (1627-9), and Oliver Cromwell (1655-6) obtained them some degree of toleration. They were permitted to have a church at Turin, Dec. 1853. In March, 1868, it was stated that there were in Italy 28 ordained Waldensian ministers, and 30 other teachers.

WALES (Cambria), called by the Romans, Britannia Secunda. After the Roman emperor Honorius quitted Britain, Vortigern was elected king of South Britain. He invited over the Saxons to defend his country against the Picts and Scots; but the Saxons perfidiously sent for reinforcements, consisting of Saxons, Danes, and Angles, by which they made themselves masters of South Britain. Many of the Britons retired to Wales, and defended themselves against the Saxons, in their inaccessible mountains, about 447. In this state Wales remained unconquered till Henry II. subdued South Wales in 1157; and in 1282 Edward I. entirely reduced the whole country, putting an end to its independence by the death of Llewelyn, the last prince.* The Welsh, however, were not entirely reconciled to this revolution, till the queen gave birth to a son at Caernarvon in 1284, whom Edward styled prince of Wales, which title the heir to the crown of Great Britain has borne almost ever since. Wales was united and incorporated with England by act of parliament, 1536; see Britain.

* At the commencement of the civil war, Pembroke castle was the only Welsh fortress in the possession of the parliament, and it was entrusted to the command of Col. Langharne. In 1647, he, and colonels Powel and Poyer, embraced the cause of the king, and made Pembroke their head quarters; after the defeat at St. Fagan's, they retired to the castle, followed by an army led by Cromwell. They capitulated, after having endured great sufferings from want of water. Langharne, Powel, and Poyer were tried by a court-martial, and condemned to death; but Cromwell having been induced to spare the lives of two of them, it was ordered that they should draw lots for the favour, and three papers were folded up, on two of which were written the words, "Life given by God;" the third was left blank. The latter was drawn by colonel Poyer, who was shot accordingly on the above mentioned day. Pennant.

WALHALLA or VAHALLA (the Hall of Glory), a temple near [Ratisbon, erected by Louis, king of Bavaria, to receive the statues and memorials of the great men of Germany, commenced 18 Oct. 1830, and inaugurated 18 Oct. 1842. The name is derived from the fabled meeting-place of Scandinavian heroes after death.

WALKING, see Pedestrianism.

WALLACHIA, see Danubian Principalities. On 23 Dec. 1861, the union of Wallachia and Moldavia, under the name of Roumania, was proclaimed at Jassy and Bucharest.

WALLER'S PLOT. Edmund Waller, the poet, and others, conspired to disarm the London militia and let in the royalists. The plan was detected and punished, June-July, 1643. Waller betrayed his confederates, and was suffered to emigrate.

WALLIS'S VOYAGE. Captain Wallis sailed from England on his voyage round the world, 26 July, 1766; and returned to England, 19 May, 1768.

WALLOONS, descendants of the ancient inhabitants of the Low Countries. Some of them fled to England from the persecution of the duke of Alva, the governor of the Low Countries for Philip II. of Spain, 1566. A church was given to them by queen Elizabeth. Their language is considered to be based on that of the ancient Gauls.

WALLS, see Roman Walls.

WALNUT-TREE has long existed in England.† The black walnut-tree (Juglans nigra) was brought to these countries from North America before 1629.

WALPOLE'S ADMINISTRATIONS. Mr. Walpole (afterwards sir Robert, and earl of * WALES, PRINCESS OF. This title was held, some authors say, during the early period of her life, by the princess Mary of England, eldest daughter of Henry VIII., and afterwards queen Mary I. She was created, they state, by her father princess of Wales, in order to conciliate the Welsh people and keep alive the name, and was, they add, the first and only princess of Wales in her own right; a rank she enjoyed until the birth of a son to Henry, who was afterwards Edward VI., born in 1537. This is however denied by Banks.

† Near Welwyn, in Hertfordshire, there was the largest walnut-tree on record; it was felled in 1627, and from it were cut nineteen loads of planks; and as much was sold to a gunsmith in London as cost 10*l.* carriage; besides which there were thirty loads of roots and branches. When standing it covered 76 poles of ground; a space equal to 2299 square yards, statute measure.

Orford) was born in 1676; became secretary-at-war in 1708; was expelled the house of commons on a charge of misappropriating the public money, 1711; committed to the Tower, 17 Jan. 1712; became first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer in 1715. He resigned, on a disunion of the cabinet, in 1717, bringing in the sinking fund bill on the day of his resignation. On the earl of Sunderland retiring in 1721, he resumed his office, and held it till 1742. He died 18 March, 1745.

SECOND WALPOLE ADMINISTRATION (1721).

Sir Robert Walpole, first lord of the treasury.
 Thomas, lord Parker, created earl of Macclesfield, lord chancellor.
 Henry lord Carleton (succeeded by William, duke of Devonshire), lord president.
 Evelyn, duke of Kingston (succeeded by lord Trevor), privy seal.
 James, earl of Berkeley, first lord of the admiralty.

Charles (viscount Townshend), and John, lord Carteret (the latter succeeded by the duke of Newcastle), secretaries of state.
 Duke of Marlborough (succeeded by the earl of Cadogan), ordnance.
 George Treby (succeeded by Henry Pelham), secretary-at-war.
 Viscount Torrington, &c.

WALRUS. One placed in the Zoological Gardens in 1853 lived a few days only; another was placed there in the autumn of 1867, and died 25 Dec.

WALTZ, the popular German national dance, was introduced into England by baron Neuman and others in 1813. Raikes.

WANDEWASH (S. India). Here the French, under Lally, were severely defeated by colonel Eyre Coote, 22 Jan. 1760.

WANDSWORTH, near London. Here was opened a meeting-house, the first place of worship for dissenters in England, 20 Nov. 1572. In Garratt-lane, near this place, a mock election of a mayor of Garratt was formerly held, after every general election of parliament, to which Foote's dramatic piece, The Mayor of Garratt (1763), gave no small celebrity.

WAR, called by Erasmus "the malady of princes." Osymandyas of Egypt, the first warlike king; he passed into Asia, and conquered Bactria, 2100 B.C. Usher. He is supposed by some to be the Osiris of the priests. It is computed that, up to the present time, no less than 6,860,000,000 of men have perished on the field of battle; see Battles.

WAR AFFAIRS. On account of the war with Russia, the duke of Newcastle, previously colonial secretary, was appointed a secretary for war affairs, and a cabinet minister, 9 June 1854; see Secretaries. An act for the protection of war department stores was passed in 1867.

WARBECK'S INSURRECTION. Perkin Warbeck, the son of a Florentine Jew, to whom Edward IV. had stood godfather, was persuaded by Margaret, duchess of Burgundy, sister to Richard III., to personate her nephew Richard, Edward V.'s brother, which he did first in Ireland, where he landed, 1492. The imposture was discovered by Henry VII. 1493. Some writers consider that Warbeck was not an impostor.

Warbeck attempted to land in Kent, with 600 men, 150 were taken prisoners, and executed, 1495. Recommended by the king of France to James IV.

Left Scotland, and went to Bodmin, in Cornwall, where 3000 joined him, and he took the title of Richard IV., 1497.
Taken prisoner by Henry VII., 1498.
Set in the stocks at Westminster and Cheapside, and sent to the Tower, June, 1499.

Plotted with the earl of Warwick to escape out of the Tower, by murdering the lieutenant, Aug.; the plot failed, and he was hanged at Tyburn, 28 Nov. 1499.

WARBURG (N. Germany). Here the French were defeated by the duke of Brunswick and the allies, 31 July, 1760.

WARDIAN CASES. In 1829, Mr. N. B. Ward, from observing a small fern and grass growing in a closed glass bottle, in which he had placed a chrysalis covered with moist earth, was led to construct his well-known closely glazed cases, which afford to plants light, heat, and moisture, and exclude deleterious gases, smoke, &c. They are particularly adapted for ferns. In 1833 they were first employed for the transmission of plants to Sydney, &c., with great success, and Professor Faraday lectured on the subject in 1838.

WARDMOTES, meetings of the citizens of London in their wards, where they elect annually their common councilmen. The practice is said to have begun in 1386. They had previously assembled in Guildhall.

WARRANTS, GENERAL, do not specify the name of the accused. They were declared to be illegal by lord chief justice Pratt, 6 Dec. 1763, in relation to the seizure and committal of Mr. Wilkes for a libel on the king; see North Briton.

WARRIOR, see under Navy of England, 1860.

WASIUM (named from the royal house of Wasa or Vasa), a supposed new metal, discovered by F. Bahr, of Stockholm, in 1682. In Nov. 1863 Nicklès declared it to be a compound of didymium, yttrium, and terbium.

WASTE LANDS. The inclosure of waste lands and commons, in order to promote agriculture, first began in England about the year 1547, and gave rise to Ket's rebellion, 1549. Inclosures were again promoted by the authority of parliament, 1785. The waste lands in England were estimated in 1794 to amount to 14 millions of acres, of which there were taken into cultivation, 2,837,476 acres before June, 1801. In 1841, there were about 6,700,000 acres of waste land, of which more than half was thought to be capable of improvement; see Agriculture.

WATCH OF LONDON, at night, appointed 1253, proclaimed the hour with a bell before the introduction of public clocks. Hardie. The old watch was discontinued, and a new police (on duty day and night) commenced, 29 Sept. 1829; see Police.

WATCHES are said to have been first invented at Nuremberg, 1477, although it is affirmed that Robert, king of Scotland, had a watch about 1310.

Watches first used in astronomical observations by Purbach 1500
 Authors assert that the emperor Charles V. was the first who had anything that might be called a watch, though some call it a small table-clock 1530
 Watches first brought to England from Germany in 1577
 A watch which belonged to queen Elizabeth is preserved in the library of the Royal Institution, London.
 Spring pocket-watches (watches properly so-called) have had their invention ascribed to Dr. Hooke by the English, and to M. Huyghens by the Dutch. Dr. Derham, in his Artificial Clockmaker, says that Dr. Hooke was the inventor; and he appears certainly to have produced what is called the pendulum watch about 1658; manifest, among other evidences, from an inscription on one of the double-balance watches presented to Charles II., "Rob. Hooke, inven. 1658; T. Tompion, fecit, 1675."

 Repeating watches invented by Barlowe 1676
 Harrison's first time-piece produced (see Harrison) 1735
 Watches and clocks were taxed in 1797
 The tax was repealed in 1798. See Clocks.

WATER. Thales of Miletus, founder of the Ionic sect, considered water to be the original principle of everything, about 594 B.C. Stanley. In the Roman Church water was first mixed with the sacramental wine, A.D. 122. Lenglet.

In freezing, water contracts till it is reduced to 42° or 40° Fahr.; it then begins to expand till it becomes ice at 32°.
 Water was first conveyed to London by leaden pipes, 21 Henry III. 1237. Stow. It took nearly fifty years to complete it; the whole being finished, and Cheapside conduit erected, only in 1285
 The New River water brought to London from Amwell in Hertfordshire, at an immense expense, by sir Hugh Myddelton, in 1613
 The city was supplied with its water by conveyances of wooden pipes in the streets and small leaden ones to the houses, and the New River Company was incorporated, 1620. So late as queen Anne's time there were water-carriers at Aldgate-pump.
 The water-works at Chelsea completed, and the company incorporated 1722
 London-bridge ancient water-works destroyed by fire 29 Oct. 1779
 Cavendish and Watt demonstrated that water is composed of 8 parts of oxygen and 1 part of hydrogen 1781
 Water was decomposed into oxygen and hydrogen gases by the voltaic battery by Nicholson and Carlisle, 1800; by the heat of the oxy-hydrogen flame by W. R. Grove 1846
 An act to supply the metropolis with water,

15 & 16 Vict. c. 84, was passed 1 July, 1852
 [The supply is now considered to be much improved in quality and quantity.]
 A company was formed to carry out Dr. Normandy's patent for converting salt water into fresh, in Jan. 1857
 Commissioners for metropolitan water supply appointed; met 20 Feb. 1867
 London supplied by nine companies: the New River (the best), East London, Chelsea, Grand Junction, Southwark and Vauxhall, Kent, West Middlesex, Lambeth, and South Essex; who deliver about 103,000,000 gallons daily 1867
 New schemes for supplying London with water, 1867:—
 1. Mr. Bateman; from the sources of the Severn.
 2. Messrs. Hemans and Hassard; from the Cumberland lakes.
 3. Mr. Telford Macneill; Thames water filtered through Bagshot sands.
 4. Mr. Bailey Denton; storage reservoirs near the sources of the Thames.
 5. Mr. Remington; from the Derbyshire and Staffordshire hills.
 The water from the first two sources analysed and highly approved by professors Frankland and Odling April, 1868
 See Artesian Wells.

WATER-COLOUR PAINTING was gradually raised from the hard dry style of the last century to its present brilliancy, by the efforts of Nicholson, Copley, Fielding, Sandby, Varley, the great Turner, Pyne, Cattermole, Prout, &c., within the present century. The exhibition was founded in 1805.

WATER-GLASS, a name given to a liquid mixture of sand (silex) and one of the alkalis (potash or soda). Glauber (De Lithiase) mentions a similar mixture in 1644. Dr. Von Fuchs, the modern inventor, gave an account of his process in 1825; and Mr. Frederick Ransome of Ipswich, ignorant of Von Fuchs' discovery, patented a mode of preparing water-glass in 1845, which he has since greatly improved upon. In 1857, M. Kuhlmann of Lille published a pamphlet setting forth the advantageous employment of water-glass in hardening porous stone and in stereochromy (which see). It has been applied to the exterior of many buildings in France and England. The memoirs of Von Fuchs and Kuhlmann were translated and printed in England in 1859 by direction of the prince consort.

WATER-MILLS, used for grinding corn, are said to have been invented by Belisarius, the general of Justinian, while besieged in Rome by the Goths, 555. The ancients parched their corn, and pounded it in mortars. Afterwards mills were invented, which were turned by men and beasts with great labour; yet Pliny mentions wheels turned by water.

WATERFORD (S. Ireland), built 879, was totally destroyed by fire in 981. Rebuilt and considerably enlarged by Strongbow in 1171, and still further in the reign of Henry VII., who granted considerable privileges to the citizens. Richard II. landed and was crowned here in 1399: in 1690, James II. embarked from hence for France, after the battle of the Boyne; and William III. resided here twice, and confirmed its privileges. Memorable storm here, 18 April, 1792. The cathedral of Waterford, dedicated to the blessed Trinity, was first built by the Ostmen, and by Malchus, the first bishop of Waterford, after his return from England from his consecration, 1096. This see was united with that of Lismore in 1363. It was valued in the king's book, by an extent returned 29 Henry VIII., at 7*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.* Irish per annum. By stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. the see of Waterford and Lismore was united by the Irish Church Temporalities act with the see of Cashel and Emlly, 14 Aug. 1833. The interior of the cathedral, organ, &c., were destroyed by fire, 25 Oct. 1815.

WATERLOO,* in Belgium, the site of the great battle on Sunday, 18 June, 1815, between the French army, of 71,947 men and 246 guns, under Napoleon, and the allies, commanded by the duke of Wellington; the latter, with 67,661 men and 156 guns, resisted the various attacks of the enemy from ten in the morning until five in the afternoon. About that time, 16,000 Prussians reached the field of battle; and by seven, the force under Blucher amounted to above 50,000 men, with 104 guns. Wellington then moved forward his whole army. A total rout ensued, and the carnage was immense. Of the British (23,991), 93 officers and 1916 men were killed and missing, and 363 officers and 4560 men wounded—total, 6932; and the total loss of the allied army amounted to 4206 killed, 14,539 wounded, and 4231 missing, making 22,976 hors de combat. Napoleon, quitting the wreck of his flying army, returned to Paris; and, finding it impossible to raise another, abdicated the throne of France. P. Nicholas.

WATERLOO BRIDGE, LONDON. A bridge over this part of the Thames was repeatedly suggested during the last century, but no actual preparations to carry it into effect were made till 1806, when Mr. G. Dodd procured an act of parliament, and gave the present site, plan, and dimensions of the bridge; but, in consequence of some disagreement with the committee, he was superseded by Mr. Rennie, who completed this noble structure. It was commenced 11 Oct. 1811, and finished 18 June, 1817, on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, when the prince regent, the duke of Wellington, and other distinguished personages, were present at the opening. Its length within the abutments is 1242 feet; its width within the balustrades is 42 feet; and the span of each arch, of which there are nine, is 120 feet.†

WATERSPOUT. Two waterspouts fell on the Glatz mountains in Germany, and caused dreadful devastation to Hautenbach and many other villages; many persons perished, 13 July, 1827. A waterspout at Glanflesk, near Killarney, in Ireland, passed over a farm of Mr. John Macarthy, destroying farm-houses and other buildings; seventeen persons perished, 4 Aug. 1831. The estimated length of one seen near Calcutta, 27 Sept. 1855, was 1000 feet. It lasted ten minutes, and was absorbed upwards. One seen on 24 Sept. 1856, burst into heavy rain.

WATTIGNIES (N. France). Here Jourdan and the French republicans defeated the Austrians under the prince of Coburg, and raised the siege of Maubenge, 14-16 Oct. 1793.

WAVE PRINCIPLE (in accordance with which the curves of the hull of a ship should be adapted to the curves of a wave of the sea) formed the subject of experiments begun by Mr. John Scott Russell in 1832, with the view of increasing the speed of ships. Colonel Beaufoy is said to have spent 30,000*l.* in researches upon this matter. It was also taken up by the British Association, who have published reports of the investigations. The principle has been adopted by naval architects; see Undulatory Theory.

WAVERLEY NOVELS. The publication of the series began with "Waverley; or, 'Tis Sixty Years since," in 1814, and closed with "Tales of my Landlord," fourth series, in 1831. The authorship was acknowledged by sir Walter Scott, at a dinner, 23 Feb. 1827.

* The British forces have been twice signally successful over those of France on the same ground—Waterloo; and by the side of the very chapel of Waterloo, which was remarked for being uninjured by shot or shell on 18 June, 1815, did Marlborough cut off a large division of the French forces opposed to him on 17 Aug. 1705. The conquerors on the same field are the only commanders in the British service whose military career brought them to dukedoms.

† On Oct. 9, 1857, two youths, named Kilsby, found on one of the abutments of the bridge a carpet bag, containing human bones and flesh, which had been cut up, salted, and boiled, and some foreign clothes. After much investigation no clue could be found respecting the name of the individual, and the remains were interred in Woking cemetery.

The original MSS. of several of Scott's poems and novels were sold by auction by Christie and Manson for 1255 guineas, 6 July, 1867.

WAWZ or WAWER (Poland). The Poles under Skrzynecki attacked the Russians at Wawz, and after two days' hard fighting, all the Russian positions were carried by storm, and they retreated with the loss of 12,000 men and 2000 prisoners, 31 March, 1831. The loss of the Poles was small, but their triumph was soon followed by defeat and ruin.

WAX came into use for candles in the 12th century; and wax candles were esteemed a luxury in 1300, being but little used. In China, candles of vegetable wax have been in use for centuries; see Candleberry. The wax tree, Ligustrum lucidum, was brought from China before 1794.—SEALING-WAX was not brought into use in England until about 1556. Its use has been almost superseded by the introduction of adhesive envelopes, about 1844.

WE. Sovereigns generally use we for I, which style began with king John, 1199. Coke. The German emperors and French kings used the plural about 1200.

WEATHER, see Meteorology.

WEAVING appears to have been practised in China more than a thousand years before it was known in Europe or Asia. The Egyptians ascribed the art to Isis; the Greeks to Minerva; and the Peruvians to the wife of Manco Copac. Our Saviour's vest, or coat, had not any seam, being woven from the top throughout, in one whole piece. The print of a frame for weaving such a vest may be seen in Calmet's Dictionary, under the word Vestments. Two weavers from Brabant settled at York, where they manufactured woollens, which, says king Edward, "may prove of great benefit to us and our subjects" (1331). Flemish dyers, cloth drapers, linen-makers, silk-throwsters, &c., settled at Canterbury, Norwich, Colchester, Southampton, and other places, on account of the duke of Alva's persecution, 1567; see Loom, and Electric Loom.

WEDDING-RINGS, were used by the ancients, and put upon the wedding finger, from a supposed connection of a vein there with the heart. According to Pliny they were made of iron; in the time of Tertullian of gold. Wedding-rings are to be of standard gold, by statute, 1855; see Adriatic.

WEDGE-LIKE CHARACTERS, see Cuneiform.

WEDGWOOD WARE, pottery and porcelain produced by Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, of Staffordshire, in 1762. His potteries, termed Etruria, were founded in 1771. Previously to 1763, much earthenware was imported from France and Holland.

WEDNESDAY, the fourth day of the week, so called from the Saxon idol Woden or Odin, worshipped on this day. Woden was the reputed author of magic and the inventor of all the arts, and was thought to answer to the Mercury of the Greeks and Romans.

WEEDON INQUIRY (Northamptonshire). Commissioners were appointed to inquire into the accounts of Mr. Elliot, superintendent of the great military clothing establishment at this place, in July, 1858, and commenced sitting in September. Many of the statements, afterwards disputed, caused much dissatisfaction.

WEEK, the space of seven days, supposed to be first used among the Jews, who observed the sabbath every seventh day. They had three sorts of weeks—the first, the common one of seven days; the second of years, which was seven years; the third of seven times seven years, at the end of which was the jubilee. All the present English names are derived from the Saxon:—

Latin.		English.	Saxon.
Dies Solis,	Day of the Sun,	Sunday,	Sun's day.
Dies Lunæ,	Day of the Moon,	Monday,	Moon's day.
Dies Martis,	Day of Mars,	Tuesday,	Tiv's day.
Dies Mercurii,	Day of Mercury.	Wednesday,	Woden's day.
Dies Jovis,	Day of Jupiter,	Thursday,	Thor's day.
Dies Veneris,	Day of Venus,	Friday,	Friga's day.
Dies Saturni,	Day of Saturn,	Saturday,	Saterne's day.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. These and the stamping of gold and silver money, were invented by Pheidon, tyrant of Argos, 895, B.C. et seq.; see Arundelian Marbles. Weights were originally taken from grains of wheat, the lowest being still called a grain. Chalmers.

The standard measure was originally kept at Winchester by the law of king Edgar, 972.

Standards of weights and measures were provided for the whole kingdom of England by the sheriffs of London, 9 Rich. I. 1197.

A public weighing-machine was set up in London, and all commodities ordered to be weighed by the city-officer, called the weigh-master, who was to do justice between buyer and seller, stat. 3 Edw. II. (Stow) 1309.

Edward III. ordered that there should be "one weight, measure, and yard," throughout the kingdom, 1353.

Weights and measures ordered to be examined by the justices at quarter-sessions, 35 Geo. III. 1795.

Again regulated, 1800.

Statute for establishing a uniformity of weights and measures, 1824, took place throughout the United Kingdom, 1 Jan. 1826.

New acts relating thereto passed in 1834, 1835, 1855, and lastly in 1859.

16 & 17 Vict. c. 29, regulates the weights to be used in the sale of bullion, and adopts the use of the Troy ounce, 1853.

A committee of the house of commons recommended that the decimal system should be legalised, but not made compulsory until sanctioned by general approval, 1862.

A commission (consisting of Mr. G. B. Airy, gen. E. Sabine, lord Rosse, Mr. T. Graham, and others), appointed to examine the standards, 9 May, 1867.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE (Sandhurst), was erected by subscription in memory of the great duke of Wellington. It was instituted for the support and education of the orphan children of soldiers. The first stone was laid by the queen on 2 June, 1856; and the building was opened by her majesty on 29 Jan. 1859. Out of the 159,000*l.* subscribed, 55,000*l.* were expended on the building, and the rest invested for the maintenance of the institution.

WELLINGTONIA GIGANTEA, the largest tree in the world, a native of California, was discovered by Mr. Lobb in 1853, and first described by Dr. John Lindley. When full grown it is about 450 feet high, and 116 feet in circumference. The prince consort (5 June, 1861) and the queen (24 July, 1861) planted Wellingtonias at the new gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society.

The military consisted of the household regiments of horse and foot guards, the 2nd battalion of the rifles, a battalion of the Royal Marines, the 33rd regiment, the 17th Lancers, and the 18th Light Dragoons, with the regiment of Scots Greys. There were besides a body of Chelsea pensioners, and men of different arms of the East India Company. The body was placed, early in the morning of the 18th, by means of machinery, upon a lofty and sumptuous funeral car, drawn by twelve horses richly caparisoned, and the coffin was thus seen by the whole of the crowd. The procession moved about seven o'clock, and it was three o'clock before the body was lowered into the vault beside the remains of Nelson, under the dome of St. Paul's cathedral. In 1857 a number of models for the tomb were exhibited in Westminster Hall; none chosen. The stone sarcophagus, completed in 1853, cost 1100l Memorial by Marochetti erected by his son and tenants at Strathfieldsaye, July, 1866

WELLS were dug by Abraham, 1892 B.C., and Isaac, 1804 (Gen. xxi. 30, and xxvi. 19). Danaus is said to have introduced well-digging into Greece from Egypt. The "tube-well" is the invention of Hiram J. Messenger, Stephen Brewer, and Byron Mudge, Americans of the state of New York. The apparatus consists of an iron tube perforated with holes at the lower end, and shod with a steel point, which readily enters the hardest soil when forcibly driven. It was used with great advantage during the civil war 1861-4, and by the British in their campaign in Abyssinia in 1867-8.

WELLS (Somerset). The cathedral church was built by Ina, king of the West Saxons, 704, and by him dedicated to St. Andrew. Several other of the West Saxon kings endowed it, and it was erected into a bishopric in 909, during the reign of king Edward the Elder. The present church was begun by Robert, the 18th bishop of this see, and completed by his immediate successor. The first bishop of Wells was Æthelm or Adelmus (afterwards bishop of Canterbury). Beatson. The see was united with Bath (which see) in 1088.

WENDS, a branch of the Slavonic family which spread over Germany in the 6th century, and settled especially in the north-eastern parts.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS, a large sect founded by John Wesley (born 1703, died 1791) and his brother Charles, who in 1727 with a few other students formed themselves into a small society for the purpose of mutual edification in religious exercises. On account of their strictness of life they were called Methodists, in 1729. John Wesley went to Georgia in America, in 1735, with a view of converting the Indians. On his return to England, in 1738, he commenced itinerant preaching, and gathered many followers. On finding many churches shut against him, he built spacious meeting-houses in London, Bristol, and other places. For some time he was united with George Whitefield; but differences arising on account of the doctrine of election, which Wesley rejected, they separated in 1741; see Whitefield. Wesley was almost continually engaged in travelling through the United Kingdom. His two leading doctrines were the instantaneity of conversion, and Christian perfection, or deliverance from all sin. His society was well organised, and he preserved his influence over it to the last. "His genius for government was not inferior to that of Richelieu." Macaulay. In 1851 there were 428 circuits in Great Britain, with between 13,000 and 14,000 local or lay preachers, and about 920 itinerant preachers, and 6579 chapels.

The Conference, the highest Wesleyan court, is composed of 100 ministers, who meet annually. It was instituted by John Wesley in 1784. At the centenary of the existence of Methodism 216,000l. were collected, to be expended in the objects of the society . . . 1839
Out of the original connection have ceased:—
Chapels in 1851
New Connection (in 1796) 301
Primitive Methodists (1810) 2871
Bible Christians, or Bryanites (1815) 403

Wesleyan Methodist Reformers (1849) 2000
The last arose out of the publication of "Fly Sheets," advocating reform in the body (1844-8). The suspected authors and their friends were expelled. By these disruptions the main body is thought to have lost 100,000 members. —This sect in America numbered about a million in 1844, when a division took place on the slavery question.

WEST AFRICAN SETTLEMENTS—Sierra Leone, Gambia, Lagos. Governor, Arthur E. Kennedy, 1867.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA, formerly SWAN RIVER SETTLEMENT, which was projected by colonel Peel in 1828. Regulations issued from the colonial office, and captain Stirling, appointed lieutenant governor, Jan. 17, 1829, arrived at the appointed site in August following. The three towns of Perth, Freemantle, and Guildford were founded same year. In March, 1830, fifty ships, with 2000 emigrants, with property amounting to 1,000,000l., had arrived before hardly any dwellings had been erected or land surveyed. The more energetic settlers left for home or the neighbouring colonies, and the colony languished for twenty years for want of suitable inhabitants—the first settlers, from their previous habits and rank in life, proving unfit for the rough work of colonisation. In 1848, the colonists requested that convicts might be sent out to them, and in 1849 a band arrived, who were kindly received and well treated. The best results ensued. By 1853, 2000 had arrived, and the inhabitants of Perth had requested that 1000 should be sent out annually. The reception of convicts is to cease in after years, in consequence of the energetic opposition of the other Australian colonies (1865).—The settlement of King George's Sound was founded in 1826 by the government of New South Wales. It was used as a military station for four years. In 1830, the home government ordered the settlement to be transferred to Swan River. Since the establishment of steam communication, the little town of Albany here, employed as a coaling station, has become a thriving sea-port. It possesses an excellent harbour, used by whalers. A journal called the Freemantle Gazette was published here in March, 1831. Population of Western Australia in 1859, 14,837; Jan. 1862, 15,555, Jan. 1866, 20,260. Governor John Stephen Hampton, appointed 1861; succeeded by sir Benjamin Pine, May, 1868.

WESTERN CHURCH (called also the LATIN or ROMAN) broke off communion with the Greek or Eastern Church, 653; see Greek Church. The history of the Western Church is mainly comprised in that of the popes and of the several European kingdoms; see Popes. This church was disturbed by the Arian heresy about 345 and 500; and by the Pelagian about 409; by the introduction of image-worship about 600; by the injunction of the celibacy of the clergy and the rise of the monastic orders about 649; by the contests between the emperors and the popes respecting ecclesiastical investitures between 1073 and 1173; by the rise and progress of the Reformation in the 15th and 16th centuries; by the contests between the Jesuits and Jansenists in the 17th and 18th centuries; and by the progress of modern philosophy and rationalism in the 19th; see Roman Catholics.

WESTERN EMPIRE. The Roman empire was first divided into Eastern and Western by Diocletian in 296; but was reunited under Constans in 340. It was again divided into Eastern and Western by Valentinian and Valens, of whom the former had the Western portion, or Rome, properly so called, 364; see Eastern Empire, Italy, and Rome.

WEST INDIES, islands discovered by Columbus, St. Salvador being the first land he made in the New World, and first seen by him in the night between the 11th and 12th Oct. 1492. The largest are Cuba, Hayti (or St. Domingo), Jamaica, Porto Rico, Trinidad, and Guadaloupe; see the Islands respectively.

WESTMINSTER, so called on account of its western situation with regard to St. Paul's cathedral, or from there being formerly a monastery named East Minster, on the hill now called Great Tower-hill. This city joins London at Temple-bar. Formerly Westminster was called Thorney, or Thorney Island: and in ancient times Canute had a palace here, which was burnt in 1263. Westminster and London were one mile asunder so late as 1603, when the houses were thatched, and there were mud walls in the Strand. It is said that the great number of Scotsmen who came over after the accession of James I. occasioned the building of Westminster, and united it with London. Howel's Londinopolis; see Palace of Westminster, and Parliament.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY. The miraculous stories concerning this pile of buildings were questioned by sir Christopher Wren, who was employed to survey the present edifice, and who, upon close examination, found nothing to countenance the belief that it was erected on the ruins of a pagan temple. Historians have fixed the era of the first abbey in the 7th century, and ascribed to St. Seberty, king of Essex, the honour of erecting it.

The church becoming ruinous was splendidly rebuilt by Edward the Confessor (1055-65) and filled with monks from Exeter. (Pope Nicholas II. constituted it the place for the inauguration of the kings of England.) Dedicated 28 Dec. 1065
 The church once more built in a magnificent and beautiful style by Henry III. 1220-69

WESTMINSTER BISHOPRIC AND DEANERY. At the dissolution of monasteries, Westminster abbey was valued at 3977*l.* per annum; king Henry VIII. in 1539, erected it into a deanery; and in 1540 into a bishopric, and appointed John Thirleby prelate. But he, having wasted the patrimony allotted by the king for the support of the see, was translated to Norwich in 1550, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster; Middlesex was the diocese, being restored to London. The dean continued to preside until the accession of Mary, who restored the abbot; but Elizabeth displaced the abbot, and erected the abbey into a collegiate church of a dean and twelve prebendaries, as it still continues. On the revival of the order of the Bath, in 1725, the dean of Westminster was appointed dean of that order, which honour has been continued. Dr. Nicholas Wiseman was created archbishop of Westminster by the pope Pius IX. in 30 Sept. 1850; see Papal Aggression. Dr. Wiseman died 8 Feb. 1865; Henry Manning was consecrated his successor 8 June, following.

WESTMINSTER BRIDGES. The old bridge was accounted one of the most beautiful bridges in the world. It was begun (after a design of M. Labelye), 13 Sept. 1738, the first stone was laid 29 Jan. 1738-9; and it was opened for passengers 17 Nov. 1750; cost 426,650*l.* It was built of Portland stone, and crossed the river where the breadth is 1223 feet. Owing to the sinking of several of its piers, most of the balustrades on both sides were removed, to relieve the structure of its weight.—By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 46 (4 Aug. 1853), the estates of its commissioners were transferred to her majesty's commissioners of works, who were empowered to remove the then existing bridge, and build a NEW BRIDGE (near the old one), which was shortly after begun. The contract required the completion of the works by 1 June, 1857. The driving of the first elm pile commenced on 3 July, and the driving of the iron piles and plates in September. The works were suspended for a time, in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Mars the contractors. The government eventually undertook the building, which they entrusted to Mr. Thomas Page, the engineer. One half of the new bridge was opened for use early in 1860; the whole on 24 May, 1862.

WESTMINSTER CONFESSION OF FAITH AND CATECHISMS were drawn up by the "Assembly of Divines" (partly consisting of laymen), who sat by authority of parliament in Henry VII.'s chapel, Westminster; from 1643 to 1647. These have ever since been the doctrinal standards of Scotch Presbyterians.

WESTMINSTER HALL (London). One of the most venerable remains of English architecture, first built by William Rufus in 1097, for a banqueting-hall; and here in 1099, on his return from Normandy, "he kept his feast of Whitsuntide very royally." The hall became ruinous before the reign of Richard II. who repaired it in 1397, raised the walls, altered the windows, and added a new roof, as well as a stately porch and other buildings. In 1236 Henry III. on New-year's day caused 6000 poor persons to be entertained in this hall, and in the other rooms of his palace, as a celebration of queen Eleanor's coronation; and here Richard II. held his Christmas festival in 1397, when the number of the guests each day the feast lasted was 10,000. Stow. The courts of law were established here by king John. Idem. Westminster hall was stated to be the largest room in Europe unsupported by pillars: it is 270 feet in length, 74 feet broad. The hall underwent a general repair in 1802. Concurrently with the erection of the palace of Westminster, many improvements and alterations have lately been made in this magnificent hall. The Volunteer Rifle corps were drilled in the hall in the winter of 1859, and since.

WESTMINSTER PALACE, see under Palace of Westminster, and Parliament.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL or ST. PETER'S COLLEGE, was founded by queen Elizabeth in 1560, for the education of forty boys, denominated the Queen's scholars, who are prepared for the university. It is situated within the abbey enclosure. Besides the scholars on the foundation, many of the nobility and gentry send their sons to Westminster for instruction. A proposal in 1860 to remove the school was disapproved of in 1861.

WESTMINSTER STATUTES, see Acts of Parliament.

WESTMORELAND. This county and Cumberland were granted as a fief to Malcolm of Scotland by Edward the Elder in 945; and resumed by Henry III. in 1237. Neville, earl of Westmoreland, revolted against Elizabeth in 1569, and was attainted in 1570.

WESTPHALIA (Germany). This duchy belonged in former times to the dukes of Saxony, and afterwards became subject to the archbishop of Cologne. On the secularisation of 1802, it was made over to Hesse Darmstadt; and in 1814, was ceded for an equivalent to Prussia. The kingdom of Westphalia, one of the temporary kingdoms of Bonaparte, composed of conquests from Prussia, Hesse-Cassel, Hanover, and the smaller states to the west of the Elbe, was created by decree 18 Aug. 1806, and Jerome Bonaparte appointed king, 1 Dec. 1807. Hanover was annexed to it, 1 March, 1810. The kingdom was abolished in 1813, and the countries restored to their former rulers.

WESTPHALIA or MUNSTER, PEACE OF, signed at Munster and at Osnaburg, between France, the emperor, and Sweden; Spain continuing the war against France. By this peace the principle of a balance of power in Europe was first recognised; Alsace given to France, and part of Pomerania and some other districts to Sweden: the Elector Palatine restored to the Lower Palatinate; the religious and political rights of the German states established; and the independence of the Swiss Confederation recognised by Germany, 24 Oct. 1648.

WEST SAXONS, see Wessex, in Britain. 1

WHALE-FISHERY, it is said, was first carried on by the Norwegians in the ninth century. Lenglet. Whales were killed at Newfoundland and Iceland for their oil only till 1578; the use of their fins and bones was not yet known, consequently (a writer quaintly adds) no stays were worn by the ladies. The English whale-fishing commenced at Spitzbergen in 1598; but the Dutch had been previously fishing there. The fishery was much promoted by an act of parliament passed in 1749. From 1800 to 2000 whales have been killed annually on the coast of Greenland, &c. The quantity of whale-oil imported in 1814 was 33,567 tuns. The quantity in 1826, when gas-light became general, was reduced to 25,000 tuns; so that the consumption of oil had become, on this account, greatly diminished. In 1840 the quantity was about 22,000 tuns; in 1850, 21,360 tuns; in 1861, 19,176 tuns; in 1864, 14,701 tuns; in 1867, 15,945 tuns.

WHARNCLIFFE MEETINGS of public companies (held to give enlarged powers under certain prescribed conditions), are so called because the standing orders of the house of lords, under which they are held were introduced by lord Wharncliffe, about 1846.

WHEAT. The Chinese ascribe to their emperor, Ching-Noung, who succeeded Fohi, the art of husbandry, and method of making bread from wheat, about 2000 years before the Christian era. Wheat was introduced into Britain in the 6th century, by Coll ap Coll Frewi. Roberts. The first wheat imported into England of which we have a note was in 1347. Various statutes have regulated the sales of wheat, and restrained its importation, thereby to encourage its being raised at home. Imported into the United Kingdom in 1854, 2,656,455 qrs. of wheat, and 6,329,038 cwts. of flour; in 1861, 6,912,815 qrs. of wheat, and 6,152,938 cwts. of flour; in 1864, 23,196,714 cwts. of wheat, and 4,975,935 cwts. of flour; in 1866, 23,156,329 cwts. of wheat, and 4,972,280 cwts. of flour; see Corn Laws, and Bread. In 1862 attention was drawn to the probable utility of considering the pedigree of wheat.

WHEEL, BREAKING ON THE. A barbarous mode of death, of great antiquity, ordered by Francis I. for robbers, about 1515; see Ravaillac, &c.

WHEEL-WORK, see Spinning, Looms, Automaton.

WHIGS. In the reign of Charles II. the name Whig was a term of reproach given by the court party to their antagonists for holding the principles of the "whigs," or fanatical covenanters in Scotland; and the name Tory was given to the court party, comparing them to the Tories, or popish robbers in Ireland. Baker. This distinction arose out of the discovery of the Meal-tub plot (which see) in 1678. Upon bringing up the meal plot before parliament, two parties were formed: the ones who doubted the plot styled those who believed in it Whigs; these styled their adversaries Tories. In time these names, given as marks of opprobrium, became honoured distinctions. Hume. The Whigs brought about the revolution of 1688-9, and established the protestant succession. They were instrumental in obtaining the abolition of the slave trade and slavery, the repeal of the Test and Corporation act, Catholic emancipation, parliamentary and municipal reform, and the repeal of the corn laws. The Whig Club was established by Charles James Fox; one of its original members was the great Francis, duke of Bedford, who died in 1802. For the principal Whig ministries, see Godolphin, Halifax, Walpole, Rockingham, Grenville, Grey, Melbourne, Russell, Palmerston.

WHISKY, the spirit distilled from malt and other corn in Scotland and Ireland, of which about eight millions of gallons have been distilled annually in the former, and upwards of nine millions of gallons in the latter. The duty upon this article has produced an annual revenue of about three millions. The distillation of whisky in these countries is referred to the 16th century; but some authors state it to have been earlier; see Distillation. In 1855 the duties on spirits distilled in Scotland and Ireland were equalised with those distilled in England.

WHITEBAIT DINNER, when the cabinet ministers meet at the end of each session, is said to have begun at the end of the last century, through sir Robert Preston and sir George Rose inviting Mr. Pitt and his colleagues to dine at Dagenham, and afterwards at Greenwich. Another account dates its origin in 1721. The whitebait (clupea alba) is a subject of controversy. Albert Günther, of the British Museum, in his Catalogue of Fishes, says the whitebait is "a purely nominal species," and that all the examples which he has examined were young herrings (1868).

WHITEBOYS, a body of ruffians in Ireland, so called on account of their wearing linen frocks over their coats. They committed dreadful outrages in 1761, but were suppressed by a military force, and their ringleaders executed in 1762. They rose into insurrection again and were suppressed 1786-7. Whiteboys have appeared at various times since, committing the most frightful crimes. The insurrection act was passed on their account in 1822.

WHITEFIELDITES. George Whitefield, the founder of the "Calvinistic Methodists," was the son of an innkeeper at Gloucester, where he received his first education. He was admitted a servitor at Oxford in 1732, and became a companion of the Wesleys there, and aided them in establishing Methodism. He parted from them in 1741, on account of their rejection of the doctrine of election. His first tabernacle was built. He was the most eloquent preacher of his day. His first sermon was preached in 1736, and he commenced field preaching in 1739. He is said to have delivered 18,000 sermons during his career of 34 years. His followers are termed "the countess of Huntingdon's connection," from his having become her chaplain in 1748, and her energetic support of the sect, and by establishing a college at Trevecca. There were 109 chapels of this connection in 1851; but many of his followers have joined the Independents. He was born in 1714, and died in 1770; see Tabernacle.

WHITE FRIARS, see Carmelites, White.

WHITEHALL (London), built by Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, before the middle of the 13th century. It afterwards devolved, by bequest, to the Black Friars of Holborn, who sold it to the archbishop of York, whence it received the name of York-place, and continued to be the town residence of the archbishops till purchased by Henry VIII. of cardinal Wolsey, in 1530. At this period it became the residence of the court. Queen Elizabeth, who died at Richmond in 1603, was brought from thence to Whitehall, by water, in a grand procession. It was on this occasion, Camden informs us, that the following quaint panegyric on her majesty was written:

"The queen was brought by water to Whitehall, At every stroke the oars did tears let fall.
More clung about the barge: fish under water Wept out their eyes of pearl, and swam blind after.
I think the bargemen might, with easier thighs, Have rowed her thither in her people's eyes;
For howso'er thus much my thoughts have seann'd, She had come by water, had she come by land."

Whitehall was partly burnt 9, 10 April, 1691; and all destroyed by fire, 4 Jan. 1697-8, except the banqueting-house, which had been added to the palace of Whitehall by James I., according to a design of Inigo Jones, in 1619. In the front of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded 30 Jan. 1649. George I. converted the hall into a chapel 1723-4. The exterior of this edifice underwent repair between 1829 and 1833.

WHITE HATS, a party in the Low Countries formed about 1377, against Louis, count of Flanders. The struggle lasted till 1384, when it was settled by Philip, duke of Burgundy.

WHITE HOODS, see Catechumens.

WHITE HOUSE (Washington), built of freestone, the residence of the president, gives name to the United States government, as St. James's palace does to that of Great Britain.

WHITE PLAINS (N. America), where a battle was fought 28 Oct. 1776, between the revolted Americans and the British forces under sir William Howe. It terminated in the defeat of the Americans, who suffered considerable loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners.

WHITE SHEEP, a name given to the Turcomans who conquered Persia about 1468; and persecuted the Shiites, but were expelled by Ismail, who founded the Sophi dynasty in 1501.

WHITE TOWER, the keep or citadel in the Tower of London, a large square, irregular building, erected in 1070, by Gandulph, bishop of Rochester. It measures 116 feet by 96, and is 92 feet in height: the walls, which are 11 feet thick, having a winding staircase continued along two of the sides, like that in Dover Castle. It contains the sea armoury, and the volunteer armoury—the latter for 30,000 men. Within this tower is the ancient chapel of St. John, originally used by the English monarchs. The turret at the N.E. angle, the highest of the four by which the White Tower is surmounted, was used for astronomical purposes by Flamsteed previously to the erection of the royal observatory at Greenwich.

WHITSUNTIDE, a festival appointed to commemorate the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles: the newly-baptised persons or catechumens, used to wear white garments on Whitsunday. This feast is moveable, being always exactly seven weeks after Easter. Rogation week (which see) is the week before Whitsunday. Whitsunday 1868, 31 May; 1869, 16 May; 1870, 5 June; 1871, 28 May.

WHITTINGTON'S CHARITIES. Sir Richard Whittington, a citizen and mercer of London, served the office of lord mayor three times, the last time in 1419. Many false stories are connected with his name, and his munificent charities are little known. He founded his college, dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the Virgin Mary, in 1424; and his almshouses in 1429; the latter stand on Highgate-hill, near the supposed site of the famous stone which commemorated the legend of his return to London, after leaving it in despair, the church bells chiming him back by the promise of his future greatness.

WHITWORTH FOUNDATIONS. Mr. Joseph Whitworth, the eminent engineer, in a letter to the first lord of the treasury, dated 18 March, 1868, offered to found 30 scholarships of the annual value of 100*l.* each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their intelligence and proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country; and he expressed hopes that means might be found for bringing science and industry into closer relation with each other than at present obtains here. This offer was accepted by the lords of the committee of the privy council, 28 March, 1868.

WICKLIFFITES, the followers of John Wickliffe (born 1324), a professor of divinity in the university of Oxford and rector of Lutterworth in Leicestershire. He was the father of the reformation of the English Church from popery, being among the first who opposed the authority of the pope, transubstantiation, the celibacy of the clergy, &c. Wickliffe was protected by John of Gaunt, Edward's son and Richard's uncle, yet virulently persecuted by the church, and rescued from martyrdom by a paralytic attack, which caused his death, 31 Dec. 1384, in his 60th year. The council of Constance, in 1414, decreed his bones to be disinterred and burnt, which was done by the bishop of Lincoln, and his dust was cast into the river Swift, 1415. Wickliffe's English version of the Bible was commenced in 1380; an edition of it was printed at Oxford in 1850.

WIDOWS. The Jewish law required a man's brother to marry his widow (1490 B.C.). For the burning of widows in India, see Suttees. Among the numerous associations in London for the relief of widows are, one for the widows of musicians, instituted in 1738; one for widows of naval men, founded in 1739; one for widows of medical men, 1788: a law society, for widows of professional gentlemen, 1817; and a society for artists' widows, 1827.—WIDOWERS were taxed in England as follows: a duke, 12*l.* 10*s.*; lower peers, smaller sums; a common person, 1*s.*; 7 Will. III. 1695.

WIG, see Peruke.

WIGAN (Lancashire). In the civil war the king's troops commanded by the earl of Derby, were defeated and driven out of the town in 1643 by the parliamentary forces under sir John Smeaton. The earl was again defeated by colonel Ashton, who razed the fortifications of Wigan to the ground, same year; and once more by a greatly superior force commanded by colonel Lilburne, 1651. In this last engagement, sir Thomas Tildersley, an ardent royalist, was slain; a pillar was erected to his memory in 1679. The colliers in the neighbourhood struck, and acting riotously 17, 18 April, 1868, were quelled by the military. Arrangements were soon after made with the employers.

WIGHT, ISLE OF, the Roman Vecta or Vectis, was conquered by Vespasian in the reign of Claudius. It was conquered by the Saxons under Cerdic about 530; in 787 by the Danes; and in 1001, when they held it for several years. It was taken by the French, 13 July, 1377, and has several times suffered from invasions by that people. In the year 1442, Henry VI. alienated the Isle of Wight to Henry de Beauchamp, first premier earl of England and then duke of Warwick, with a precedence of all other dukes but Norfolk, and afterwards crowned him king of the Isle of Wight, with his own hands; but this earl dying without heirs male, his regal title died with him, and the lordship of the isle returned to the crown. Charles I., after his flight from Hampton-court, was a prisoner in Carisbrook castle, in 1647. In the time of Charles II. timber was so plentiful, that it is said a squirrel might have travelled on the tops of the trees for many leagues together; but it is now much reduced, through supplying the dockyards for the British navy. In this isle is the queen's marine residence, Osborne-house.

WILLOW-LEAVES, see Sun.

WILLS and TESTAMENTS are of very high antiquity, see Genesis xlviii. Solon introduced them at Athens, 578 B.C. There are many regulations respecting wills in the Koran. Trebatius Testa, the civilian, was the first person who introduced codicils to wills at Rome, 31 B.C. The power of bequeathing lands by the last will and testament of the owner was confirmed to English subjects 1 Henry I. 1100; but with great restrictions and limitations respecting the feudal system, which were taken off by the statute of 32 Henry VIII. 1541. Blackstone's Commentaries. The first will of a sovereign on record is stated (but in error) to be that of Richard II. 1399; Edward the Confessor made a will, 1066. Various laws have regulated the wills and testaments of British subjects. All previous statutes were repealed by 1 Vict. c. 26, 1837, and the laws with relation to wills thereby amended.* The present PROBATE COURT (which see) was established in 1857. An office for the reception of the wills of living persons was opened in Jan. 1861; see Thellusson's Will.

EXTRACTS FROM THE LAST WILL OF NAPOLEON I., EMPEROR OF FRANCE.†

[He died 5 May, 1821, eleven days after he had signed these documents. The original in French occupies about twenty-six pages in Peignot's "Testamens Remarquables," 1829.]

"This day, 24 April, 1821, at Longwood, in the island of St. Helena. This is my testament, or act of my last will:

"I leave to the comte de Montholon 2,000,000 francs as a proof of my satisfaction for the attentions he has paid to me for these six years, and to indemnify him for the losses which my residence in St. Helena has occasioned him. I leave to the comte Bertrand 500,000 francs. I leave to Marchand, my first valet-de-chambre, 400,000 francs; the services he has performed for me are those of a friend. I desire that he may marry a widow, sister, or daughter of an officer or soldier of my old guard. To St. Denis, 100,000 francs. To Novarre, 100,000 francs. To Pijeron, 100,000 francs. To Archambaud, 50,000 francs. To Cuvier, 50,000 francs. To Chandelle, idem.

"To the Abbé Vignali, 100,000 francs. I desire that he may build his house near Ponte Novo de Rossino. To the comte Las Casas, 100,000 francs. To comte Lavalette, 100,000 francs. To the surgeon in chief, Larrey, 100,000 francs. He is the most virtuous man I have known. To general Brayer, 100,000 francs.

"To general Lefevre Desnoettes, 100,000 francs. To general Drouet, 100,000 francs. To general Cambonne, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Muton Duvernaix, 100,000 francs. To the children of the brave Labédoyère, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Girard, killed at Ligny, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Chartrand, 100,000 francs. To the children of the virtuous general Travost, 100,000 francs. To general Lallemand, the elder, 100,000 francs. To general Clausel, 100,000 francs. To Costa Bastillia, also 100,000 francs. To the baron de Meneville, 100,000 francs. To Arnault, author of Marius, 100,000 francs.

"To colonel Marbot, 100,000 francs: I request him to continue to write for the defence and glory of the French armies, and to confound the calumniators and the apostates. To the baron Bignon, 100,000 francs: I request him to write the history of French

* By this act the testator must be above 21, not a lunatic or idiot, not deaf and dumb, not drunk at the time of signing, not an outlawed or unpardoned felon. All kinds of property may be devised. The will must be written legibly and intelligibly, and signed by the testator, or by his direction, in the presence of two or more witnesses, who also must sign. A married woman may bequeath only her pin money or separate maintenance, without the consent of her husband.

† These documents, dated from 15-24 April, which had been deposited since 1821 in England, have been, at the request of the French government, given up to the authorities at Paris, to be deposited among the archives of that capital.

Diplomacy from 1792 to 1815. To Poggi de Talaro, 100,000 francs. To the surgeon Emmery, 100,000 francs.

"These sums shall be taken from the six millions which I deposited on leaving Paris in 1815, and from the interest at the rate of 5 per cent. since July 1815; the account of which shall be adjusted with the bankers by the counts Montholon and Bertrand, and by Marchand.

The following are part of the eight Codicils to the

"On the liquidation of my civil list of Italy—as such as money, jewels, plate, linen, coffers, caskets of which the viceroy is the depositary, and which belong to me, I dispose of two millions, which I leave to my most faithful servants. I hope that without their showing any cause, my son Eugene Napoleon will discharge them faithfully. He cannot forget the forty millions which I have given him in Italy, or by the right (paroge) of his mother's inheritance.

"From the funds remitted in gold to the empress Maria Louisa, my very dear and well-beloved spouse, at Orleans, in 1814, there remain due to me two millions, which I dispose of by the present codicil, in order to recompense my most faithful servants, whom I beside recommend to the protection of my dear Maria Louisa. I leave 200,000 francs to count Montholon, 100,000 francs of which he shall pay into the chest of the treasurer (Las Casas) for the same purpose as the above, to be employed according to my dispositions in legacies of conscience.

"10,000 francs to the sub-officer Cantillon, who has undergone a prosecution, being accused of a desire to assassinate lord Wellington, of which he has been declared innocent. Cantillon had as much right to assassinate that oligarch, as the latter had to send me to perish on the rock of St. Helena, &c., &c., &c.

"These legacies, in case of death, shall be paid to the widows and children, and in their default, shall revert to the capital. I institute the counts Montholon, Bertrand, and Marchand my testamentary executors. This present testament, written entirely by my own hand, is signed and sealed with my arms.

LETTER TO M. LAFITTE.

"MONSIEUR LAFITTE,—I remitted to you in 1815, at the moment of my departure from Paris, a sum of nearly six millions, for which you gave me a double receipt. I have cancelled one of these receipts, and I have charged comte de Montholon to present to you the other receipt, in order that you may, after my death, deliver to him the said sum with interest at the rate of five per cent., from the 1st of July, 1815, deducting the payments with which you have been charged in virtue of my order. I have also remitted to you a box containing my medallion. I beg you will deliver it to comte Montholon.

"This letter having no other object, I pray God, Monsieur Lafitte, that He may have you in His holy and worthy keeping.

WILMINGTON (N. Carolina, U. S.) was held by the confederates; resisted severe attacks of the federals in Dec. 1864. Fort Fisher was taken by assault on 15 Jan., and Wilmington was evacuated by the confederates, 22 Feb. 1865.

WILMINGTON ADMINISTRATION, succeeded that of sir Robert Walpole, Feb. 1742.

Earl Gower, lord privy seal.

Mr. Sandys, chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl of Winchelsea, first lord of the admiralty.

Mr. Henry Pelham, paymaster of the forces.

With several of the household lords.

[On lord Wilmington's death, 26 July, 1743, Mr. Pelham became prime minister; and in Nov. 1744, he formed the "Broad-bottom" administration; see Pelham.]

WINCHESTER (Hampshire), a most ancient city, whose erection may reasonably be ascribed to the Celtic Britons, though the alleged date of its foundation, 892 B.C. is manifestly unworthy of attention. It was made the capital of the West Saxon kingdom under Cerdic, about 520; and of England by Egbert, 827; it became the residence of Alfred 879-901. In the reign of William I., though Winchester was still a royal residence, London began to rival it; and the destruction of religious houses by Henry VIII. almost ruined it. Several kings resided at Winchester, and many parliaments were held there. Memorials of its ancient superiority exist in the national denomination of measures of quantity, as Winchester ell, Winchester bushel, &c., the use of which has but recently been replaced by imperial measures. The bishopric is of great antiquity. The cathedral church was first founded and endowed by Cynegils, or Kenegilsus, the first Christian king of the West Saxons. Becoming ruinous, the present fabric was begun by bishop Walkelyn, the 34th bishop, 1073. The church was first dedicated to St. Amphibalus, then to St. Peter, and afterwards to St. Swithin, once bishop here. Dedicated to the Holy Trinity by Henry VIII. St. Birinus was the first bishop of the West Saxons, his seat Dorchester, 636; Wina, in 660, was the first bishop of Winchester. The see is valued in the king's books at 2793*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* annually. Present income, 10,500*l.*

WINCHESTER SCHOOL, the oldest of our great schools, "Seinte Marie College of Wynchestre," the charter of which is dated Oct. 1382, was founded in 1387, by William (Long) of Wykeham, bishop of Winchester, who had established a school here in 1373. The ancient statutes were revised in 1855.

WINDING-UP ACTS (to facilitate the winding up the affairs of joint-stock companies which are unable to meet their engagements) were passed in 1848, 1857, and 1862.

WINDMILLS are of great antiquity, and some writers state them to be of Roman or Saracen invention. They are said to have been originally introduced into Europe by the knights of St. John, who took the hint from what they had seen in the crusades. Baker. Windmills were first known in Spain, France, and Germany, in 1299. Anderson. Wind saw-mills were invented by a Dutchman, in 1633, when one was erected near the Strand, in London.

WINDOWS. There were glass windows in Pompeii, A.D. 79, as is evident from its ruins. It is certain that windows of some kind were glazed so early as the 3rd century, if not before, though the fashion was not introduced until it was done by Bennet, 633. Windows of glass were used in private houses, but the glass was imported, 1177. Anderson. In England, in 1851, about 6000 houses had fifty windows and upwards in each; about 275,000 had ten windows and upwards; and 725,000 had seven windows, or less than seven.

The revenue derived from windows was in 1840 about a million and a quarter sterling; and in 1850 (to April 5), 1,832,684.
The tax repealed by act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36 (which act imposed a duty upon inhabited houses in lieu thereof) . . . 24 July, 1851

WINDSOR CASTLE (Berkshire), a residence of the British sovereigns, begun by William the Conqueror, and enlarged by Henry I. about 1110. Edward III., who was born here, caused the old building, with the exception of three towers at the west end, to be taken down, and re-erected the whole castle, under the direction of William of Wykeham, 1356, and built St. George's chapel. He assessed every county in England to send him workmen. James I. of Scotland was imprisoned here 1406-23. Several additions were made by Henry VIII. Elizabeth made the grand north terrace; and Charles II. repaired and beautified it, 1676-80. The chapel was repaired and opened, Oct. 1790. The castle was repaired and enlarged, 1824-8; and George IV. took possession of it, 8 Dec. 1828. Our sovereigns have here entertained many royal personages: as the emperor and empress of the French, in April, 1855. A serious fire occurred at the castle, in the prince of Wales's tower, owing to some defect in the heating apparatus, 19 March, 1853. Here died the prince consort, 14 Dec. 1861.

Windsor Forest, situated to the south and west of the town of Windsor, was formerly 120 miles in circumference; in 1607, it was 77½ miles round, but it has since been reduced in its bounds to about 56 miles. It was surveyed in 1739, and found to contain 59,600 acres. Virginia Water and the plantations about it were taken out of the forest. The marshes were drained and the trees planted for William, duke of Cumberland, about 1746; and much was done by George IV., who often resided at the lodge. On the south side is Windsor Great Park, which was fourteen miles in circumference, but it has been much enlarged by the Inclosure act; it contains about 3800 acres. The Little Park, on the north and east sides of the castle, contains about 500 acres. The gardens are elegant, and have been considerably improved by the addition of the house and gardens of the duke of St. Alban's, purchased by the crown.

WIRE. The invention of drawing wire is ascribed to Rodolph of Nuremberg, about 1410. Mills for this purpose were first set up at Nuremberg in 1563. The first wire-mill in England was erected at Mortlake in 1663. Mortimer.

WIRTEMBERG, see Wurtemberg.

WISCONSIN, a N. W. state of N. America, was organised as a territory in 1836; and received into the union, 29 May, 1848.

WITCHCRAFT. The punishment of witchcraft was commanded in the Jewish law (Exodus xxii. 18) 1491 B.C., "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." Saul, after banishing or condemning witchcraft, incurred the wrath of God by consulting the witch of Endor, 1056 B.C. (1 Sam. xxviii.) Bishop Hutchinson's historical "Essay on Witchcraft" was published in 1718. The church of Rome subjected persons suspected of the crime to the most cruel torments; and pope Innocent VIII. issued a bull against witchcraft in 1484. Thousands of innocent victims were burned alive, while others were killed by the tests applied.

Many Templars burnt at Paris for witchcraft, 1309. Joan of Arc was burnt at Rheims as a witch, 30 May, 1431.

About five hundred witches were burnt in Geneva, in three months, 1515.

One thousand were burnt in the diocese of Como in a year, about 1524.

An incredible number in France, about 1520, when one sorcerer confessed to having 1200 associates.

Nine hundred were burnt in Lorraine between 1580 and 1595.

One hundred and fifty-seven were burnt at Wurtzburg between 1627 and 1629, old and young, clerical, learned, and ignorant.

At Lindheim, thirty were burnt in four years, out of a population of 600; and more than 100,000 perished, mostly by the flames, in Germany.

Grandier, the parish priest at Loudon, was burnt on a charge or having bewitched a whole convent of nuns, 1634.

In Bretagne, twenty poor women were put to death as witches, 1654.

Disturbances commenced on charges of witchcraft in America, at Massachusetts, 1648-9; and persecutions raged dreadfully in Pennsylvania in 1683.

At Salem, in New England, nineteen persons were hanged (by the Puritans) for witchcraft, eight more were condemned, and fifty confessed themselves to be witches and were pardoned, 1692.

Maria Renata was burnt at Wurtzburg in 1749.

At Kalisk, in Poland, nine old women were charged with having bewitched and rendered unfruitful the lands belonging to that palatinate, and were burnt 17 Jan. 1775.

Five women were condemned to death by the Brahmans, at Patna, for sorcery, and executed, 15 Dec. 1802.

WITCHCRAFT IN ENGLAND.

Severe laws were in force against them in these countries in former times, by which death was the punishment, and thousands of persons suffered both by the public executioner and the hands of the people.

A statute was enacted declaring all witchcraft and sorcery to be felony without benefit of clergy, 33 Hen. VIII. 1541. Again, 5 Eliz. 1562, and 1. James 1603.

The 73rd canon of the church prohibits the clergy from casting out devils, 1603.

Barrington estimates the judicial murders for witchcraft in England in 200 years at 30,000.

Matthew Hopkins, the "witch finder," causes the judicial murder of about 100 persons in Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk, 1645-7.

Sir Matthew Hale burnt two persons for witchcraft in 1664.

Northamptonshire and Huntingdon preserved the superstition about witchcraft later than any other counties.

Seventeen or eighteen persons burnt at St. Osyth's, in Essex, about 1676.

Two pretended witches were executed at Northampton in 1705, and five others seven years afterwards.

In 1716, Mrs. Hicks, and her daughter, aged nine, were hanged at Huntingdon.

In Scotland, thousands of persons were burnt in the period of about a hundred years. Among the victims were persons of the highest rank, while all orders in the state concurred. James I. even caused a whole assize to be prosecuted for an acquittal. The king published his Demonologie in Edinburgh, 1597.

The last sufferer in Scotland was at Dornach in 1722.

The laws against witchcraft had lain dormant for many years, when an ignorant person, attempting to revive them, by finding a bill against a poor old woman in Surrey for the practice of witchcraft, they were repealed, 10 Geo. II. 1736.

Credulity in witchcraft still abounds in the country districts of England. On 4 Sept. 1863, a poor old paralyzed Frenchman died in consequence of having been ducked as a wizard at Castle Hedingham, Essex, and similar cases still occur, 1867.

WITENA-MOT or WITENA-GEMOT, the assembling of the wise men, the great council of the Anglo-Saxons. A witena-mot was called in Winchester by Egbert, 800, and in London, 833, to consult on the proper means to repel the Danes; see Parliament.

WITEPSK (in Russia), where a battle was fought between the French under marshal Victor, duke of Belluno, and the Russians commanded by general Wittgenstein. The French were defeated after a desperate engagement, with the loss of 3000 men, 14 Nov. 1812.

WITNESSES. Two or more witnesses were required by the law of Moses, 1451 B.C. (Deut. xvii. 6), and by the early Christian church in cases of discipline (2 Cor. xiii. 1), A.D. 60. The evidence of two witnesses required to attain for high treason, 25 Edw. III. 1352. In civil actions between party and party, if a man be subpoenaed as a witness on a trial, he must appear in court on pain of 100*l.* to be forfeited to the king, and 10*l.*, together with damages equivalent to the loss sustained by the want of his evidence to the party aggrieved. Lord Ellenborough ruled that no witness is obliged to answer questions which may tend to degrade himself, 10 Dec. 1802. New act relating to the examination of witnesses passed 13 Geo. III. 1773. Act to enable courts of law to order the examination of witnesses upon interrogations and otherwise, 1 Will. IV. 30 March, 1831.

WIVES, see Marriage. By the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes act, passed in 1857, the condition of married women has been much benefited. When ill-used they can obtain a divorce or judicial separation; and while in the latter state any property they may acquire is secured to them personally, as if unmarried. By another act passed in 1857, they are enabled to dispose of reversionary interests in personal property or estates. On 21 April, 1868, a bill was introduced into the commons giving a wife powers over money, her fortune, &c., as if she were single; read a second time 10 June, 1868.

WIVES' POISON or WATER TOFANA, see Poisoning.

WOLVERHAMPTON (Staffordshire), an old town named Hamton; owes its present name to the foundation of a college here by Wulframa, sister of king Edgar, and widow of Aldhelm, duke of Northampton, 996. The queen was present at the inauguration of the prince consort's statue here, 30 Nov. 1866, and the church congress was opened here 1 Oct. 1867. Wolverhampton is eminent for its manufactures in metal.

WOLVES were once very numerous in England. Their heads were demanded as a tribute, particularly 300 yearly from Wales, by king Edgar, 961, by which step they were said to be totally destroyed. Carte. Edward I. issued his mandate for the destruction of wolves in several counties of England, 1289. Ireland was infested by wolves for many centuries after their extirpation in England; for there are accounts of some being found there so late as 1710, when the last presentment for killing wolves was made in the county of Cork. Wolves still infest France, in which kingdom 834 wolves and cubs were killed in 1828-9.

WOMEN, see Wives. The employment of women is regulated by the Factory and Workshop Regulation acts (which see). Female suffrage for members of parliament was proposed by J. S. Mill, 20 May, 1867, and negated by 196 against 73. Lily Maxwell, a shop-keeper at Manchester, voted for Jacob Bright, 26 Nov. 1867. Her name was on the register; see Female Medical School.

WONDERS OF THE WORLD. 1. The pyramids of Egypt. 2. The mausoleum or tomb built for Mausolus, king of Caria, by Artemisia, his queen. 3. The temple of Diana, at Ephesus. 4. The walls and hanging-gardens of the city of Babylon. 5. The vast brazen image of the sun at Rhodes, called the Colossus. 6. The ivory and gold statue of Jupiter Olympus. 7. The pharos or watch-tower, built by Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt; see separate articles.

WOOD-CUTS, see Engraving on Wood.

WOODS, FORESTS, &c., see Forests. The board of woods, forests, and land revenues was constituted in 1810. The oversight of works and public buildings was added to its duties in 1832, but transferred to a separate board of commissioners in 1851.

WOOD'S HALF-PENCE, for circulation in Ireland and America, were coined by virtue of a patent, passed 1722-3. Against them, Dr. Jonathan Swift, by his Drapier's letters, raised such a spirit that Wood was virtually banished the kingdom. The half-pence were assayed in England by sir Isaac Newton, and proved to be genuine, in 1724.

WOODEN PAVEMENT (expensive and perishable) seemed at one time likely to supersede stone in the principal thoroughfares of London. A wooden pavement was laid down at Whitehall in 1839; and in Oxford-street, the Strand, and other streets. The principal part was soon taken up, but some still exists in Cornhill and Lombard-street (1868).

WOODSTOCK (Oxfordshire). In Woodstock, now Blenheim-park, originally stood a royal palace, in which king Ethelred held a parliament, and Alfred the Great translated Boetius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, 888. Henry I. beautified the palace; and here resided Rosamond, mistress of Henry II. 1191. In it were born Edmund, second son of Edward I., 1301, and Edward, eldest son of Edward III., 1330; and here the princess Elizabeth was confined by her sister Mary, 1554. A splendid mansion, built at the expense of the nation, for the duke of Marlborough, was erected here to commemorate his victory at Blenheim in 1704. At that time every trace of the ancient edifice was removed, and two elms were planted on its site; see Blenheim.

WOOL. From the earliest times to the reign of queen Elizabeth the wool of Great Britain was not only superior to that of Spain, but accounted the finest in the universe; and even in the times of the Romans a manufacture of woollen cloths was established at Winchester for the use of the emperors. Anderson. In later times wool was manufactured in England, and is mentioned 1185, but not in any quantity until 1331, when the weaving of it was introduced by John Kempe and other artisans from Flanders. This was the real origin of our now unrivalled manufacture, 6 Edw. III. 1331. Rymer's Fœdera.

WOOL-COMBERS in several parts of England have a procession on 3 Feb., in commemoration of bishop Blaize, who is reported to have discovered their art. He is said to have visited England; and St. Blazy, a village in Cornwall, is celebrated for having been his landing-place. He was bishop of Sebaste, in Armenia, and is said to have suffered martyrdom in the Diocletian persecution, 289.

WOOLSACK, the seat of the lord high chancellor of England in the house of lords, is so called from its being a large square bag of wool, without back or arms, covered with red cloth. Wool was the staple commodity of England in the reign of Edward III. when the woolsack first came into use.

WOOLWICH (Kent), the most ancient military and naval arsenal in England, and celebrated for its royal dockyard, where men-of-war have been built so early as the reign of Henry VIII. 1512, when the Harry Grace de Dieu was constructed. Here she also was burnt in 1552. The royal arsenal was formed about 1720, on the site of a rabbit-warren; it contains vast magazines of great guns, mortars, bombs, powder, and other warlike stores; a foundry, with several furnaces, for casting ordnance; and a laboratory, where fireworks, cartridges, grenades, &c., are made for the public service. The Royal Military Academy was erected in the royal arsenal, but the institution was not completely formed until 19th Geo. II. 1745.

The arsenal, storehouses, &c., burnt, to the value of 200,000*l.* 20 May, 1802. Another great fire occurred 30 June, 1805. Fatal explosion of gunpowder, 20 Jan. 1813. The hemp-store burnt down, 8 July, 1813. Another explosion by gunpowder, 16 June, 1814. About 10,000 persons are now employed in Woolwich arsenal.

WORCESTER was successively an important Welsh, Roman, and Saxon town. It was burnt by the Danes (1041) for resisting the tribute called Danegelt. William I. built a castle 1090. The city was frequently taken and retaken during the civil wars of the middle ages, and by Cromwell in 1651.—The BISHOPRIC was founded by Ethelred, king of the Mercians, 680, and taken from the see of Lichfield, of which it composed a part. The married priests of the cathedral were displaced, and monks settled in their stead, 964. The church was rebuilt by Wolstan, 25th bishop, 1030. The see has yielded to the church of Rome four saints, and to the English nation five lord chancellors and three lord treasurers. It is valued in the king's books at 1049*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* per annum. Present income, 5000*l.*

knowledge as each man feels he is most in want of. The colleges engage to find a teacher wherever 10 or 12 members agree to form a class, and also to have lectures given. There were eleven classes at the one in Bloomsbury, London, in 1856; Mr. Ruskin gave lessons in drawing. These colleges have been found to be self-supporting.

WORMS, a city on the Rhine, in Hesse Darmstadt. Here Charlemagne resided in 806 B.C. Several imperial diets have been held at Worms, where was held the imperial diet before which Martin Luther was summoned, 4 April, 1521, and by which he was proscribed. Luther was met by 2000 persons on foot and on horseback, at the distance of a league from Worms. Such was his conviction of the justice of his cause, that when Spalatin sent a messenger to warn him of his danger, he answered, "If there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles upon the roofs of its houses, I would go on." Before the emperor, the archduke Ferdinand, six electors, twenty-four dukes, seven margraves, thirty bishops and prelates, and many princes, counts, lords, and ambassadors, Luther appeared, 17 April, in the imperial diet, acknowledged all his writings and opinions, and left Worms, in fact, a conqueror. Yet, to save his life, he had to remain in seclusion under the protection of the elector of Saxony for about a year. The edict putting him under the bans of the empire was issued 26 May, 1521. Worms was burnt, by order of Louis XIV., 1689, the cathedral excepted; and was taken by the French, under Custine, 4 Oct. 1792. A memorial statue of Luther at Worms was uncovered 25 June, 1868, in the presence of the king of Prussia and other sovereigns.

WORSHIP. The first worship mentioned is that of Abel, 3872 B.C. (Gen. iv.) "Men began to call on the name of the Lord," 3769 B.C. (Gen. iv.) The Jewish order of worship was set up by Moses, 1490 B.C. Solomon consecrated the temple, 1004 B.C. To the corruptions of the simple worship of the patriarchs all the Egyptian and Greek idolatries owed their origin. Athotes, son of Menes, king of Upper Egypt, is supposed to be the Copt of the Egyptians, and the Toth, or Hermes, of the Greeks, the Mercury of the Latins, and the Teutates of the Celts or Gauls, 2112 B.C. Usher.

WORSHIP IN ENGLAND. The Druids were the priests here, at the invasion of the Romans (55 B.C.), who eventually introduced Christianity, which was almost extirpated by the victorious Saxons (455-820), who were pagans. The Roman catholic form of Christianity was introduced by Augustine, 596, and continued till the Reformation (which see).

WORSTED, spun wool, obtained its name from having been first spun at a town called Worsted, in Norfolk, in which the inventor lived, and where manufactures of worsted are still extensively carried on, 14 Edw. III. 1340. Anderson. "A worsted-stocking knave" is a term of reproach or contempt used by Shakspeare.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE. An international society for the succour of the wounded in battle was established at Geneva by M. Dunant in 1862. Neutral ambulances, or moveable hospitals are furnished, and served by volunteers. The society exhibited apparatus at the International Exhibition at Paris, April, 1867.

WOUNDING. Malicious wounding of another was adjudged death by the English statutes. The Coventry act was passed in 1671; see Coventry Act. By lord Ellenborough's act, persons who stab or cut with intent to murder, maim, or disfigure another were declared guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. Those guilty of maliciously shooting at another in any dwelling-house or other place, are also punishable under the same statute in the same degree, 43 Geo. III. 1802. This offence is met by some later statutes, particularly the act for consolidating and amending the acts relating to offences against the person, 9 Geo. IV., June, 1828. This last act is extended to Ireland by 10 Geo. IV., 1829. An act for the prevention of maliciously shooting, stabbing, &c., in Scotland, 6 Geo. IV., 1825; amended by 10 Geo. IV., 4 June, 1829. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, 1853, was passed for the prevention and punishment of assaults on women and children.

WRECKS. The loss of merchant and other ships by wreck upon lee-shores, coasts, and disasters in the open sea, was estimated at Lloyd's, in 1800, to be about an average of 365 ships a year. In 1830, it appeared by Lloyd's Lists that 677 British vessels were totally lost, under various circumstances, in that year.

British vessels wrecked in 1848, were, sailing vessels, 501; steamers, 13; tonnage, 96,920. In 1851, there were wrecked 611 vessels, of which number 11 were steamers: the tonnage of the whole being 111,976. The year 1852-3, particularly the winter months (Dec. and Jan.) was very remarkable for the number of dreadful shipwrecks and fires at sea; but a few of them are recorded.

Many vessels were lost in the great storms, 25, 26 Oct. 1859; 28 May, 1861; 19, 20 Oct. 1861; and 13, 14 Nov. 1862: by a cyclone, India, 5 Oct. 1864; in the West Indies, Oct. 1867.

From the establishment of the Royal National Life-boat institution, in 1824, to the end of 1867, 16,987 lives had been saved by its life-boats.

WRITING. Pictures are considered to be the first essay towards writing. The most ancient remains of writing which have been transmitted to us, are upon hard substances, such as stones and metals, used by the ancients for edicts, and matters of public notoriety. Athotes, or Hermes, is said to have written a history of the Egyptians, and to have been the author of the hieroglyphics, 2112 B.C. Usher. Writing is said to have been taught to the Latins by Europa, daughter of Agenor, king of Phœnicia, 1494 B.C. Thucydides. Cadmus, the same rock, on 25 Nov. 1120, was wrecked the Blanche Nef, containing the children of Henry I. and a large number of attendants; in all 363 persons perished.

* Luna, American emigrant vessel, wrecked on rocks off Barfleur; about 100 lives lost, 19 Feb. 1860. Lady Elgin, an American steamer, sunk through collision with schooner Augusta on lake Michigan; of 385 persons on board, 287 were lost, including Mr. Herbert Ingram, M.P., founder of the "Illustrated London News," and his son; morning of 8 Sept. 1860.

the founder of Cadmea, 1493 B.C., brought the Phœnician letters into Greece. Vossius. The commandments were written on two tables of stone, 1491 B.C. Usher. The Greeks and Romans used wax table-books, and continued the use of them long after papyrus was known; * see Papyrus, Parchment, Paper. Astle's "History of Writing" was first published in 1784.

WROXETER (in Shropshire), the Roman city Uriconium. Roman inscriptions, ruins, seals, and coins were found here in 1752. Some new discoveries having been made, a committee for further investigation met at Shrewsbury on 11 Nov. 1858. Excavations were commenced in Feb. 1859, which were continued till May. Large portions of the old town were discovered; also specimens of glass and pottery, personal ornaments and toys, household utensils and implements of trade, cinerary urns, and bones of man and of the smaller animals. A committee was formed in London in Aug. 1859, with the view of continuing these investigations, which were resumed in 1861, through the liberality of the late Beriah Botfield, M.P. The investigations, stopped through want of funds, were resumed for a short time in 1867.

WÜRTEMBERG, originally part of Swabia, was made a county for Ulric I., about 1265, and a duchy in 1495. The dukes were protestants until 1722, when the reigning prince became a Roman catholic. Würtemberg has been repeatedly traversed by hostile armies, particularly since the revolution of France. Moreau made his celebrated retreat, 23 Oct. 1796. The political constitution is dated 25 Sept. 1819. Würtemberg opposed Prussia in the war of 1866, but made peace, 13 Aug. following; and in Oct. 1867, joined the Zollverein (which see). Population of Würtemberg in Dec. 1864, 1,748,328; of Stuttgart, the capital, 69,084.

WURZBURG (in Bavaria), was formerly a bishopric, and its sovereign was one of the greatest ecclesiastic princes of the empire. It was given as a principality to the elector of Bavaria in 1803; and by the treaty of Presburg, in 1805, was ceded to the archduke Ferdinand of Tuscany, whose electoral title was transferred from Salzburg to this place. In 1814 this duchy was again transferred to Bavaria, in exchange for the Tyrol, and the archduke Ferdinand was reinstated in his Tuscan dominions. Ministers from the second-rate German states met at Wurzburg to promote union amongst them, 21-27 Nov. 1859. The archduke Charles defeated the French under Jourdan, 3 Sept. 1796; and the Prussians defeated the Bavarians, 26 July, 1866.

the inhabitants buried themselves in the ruins. It was besieged by the Romans under Brutus 42 B.C. After a great struggle the inhabitants set fire to their city, destroyed their wives and children, and perished. The conqueror wished to spare them, and offered rewards to his soldiers if they brought any of the Xanthians into his presence, but only 150 were saved. Plutarch.

XERES DE LA FRONTERA (S.W. Spain), the Asta Regia of the Romans, and the seat of the wine-trade in Spain, of which the principal wine is that so well known in England as Sherry, an English corruption of Xeres. The British importations of this wine in 1850 reached to 3,826,785 gallons; and in the year ending 5 Jan. 1852, to 3,904,978 gallons. Xeres is a handsome and large town, of great antiquity. At the battle of Xeres, July 19-26, 711, Roderic, the last Gothic sovereign of Spain, was defeated and slain by the Saracens, commanded by Tarik and Muza.

XERXES' CAMPAIGN. Xerxes crossed the Hellespont by a bridge of boats, and entered Greece in the spring of 480 B.C., with an army which, together with the numerous retinue of servants, eunuchs, and women that attended it, amounted (according to some historians) to 5,283,220 souls. Herodotus states the armament to have consisted of 3000 sail, conveying 1,700,000 foot, besides cavalry and the mariners and attendants of the camp. This multitude was stopped at Thermopylæ (which see) by the valour of 300 Spartans under Leonidas, 7-9 Aug. 480 B.C. The fleet of Xerxes was defeated at Artemisium and Salamis, 20 Oct. 480 B.C.; and he hastened back to Persia, leaving behind Mardonius, the best of his generals, with an army of 300,000 men, who was defeated and slain at Platea, 22 Sept. 479 B.C. Xerxes was assassinated by Artabanus, 465 B.C.

XIMENA (S. Spain), the site of a battle between the Spanish army under the command of general Ballasteros, and the French corps commanded by general Regnier, 10 Sept. 1811. The Spaniards defeated their adversaries; the loss was great on both sides.

YANKEE, from "Yengees," a corruption of "English," the name given by the Massachusetts Indians to the colonists originally; applied solely to the New Englanders by the British soldiers in the American war (1775-81), and afterwards by foreigners to all natives of the United States; and latterly by the confederates of the south to the federals of the north during the war 1861-64.

YARD. The precise origin of our yard is uncertain. It is, however, likely that the word is derived from the Saxon gyrd, a rod or shoot, or gyrdan to enclose; being anciently the circumference of the body, until Henry I. decreed that it should be the length of his arm; see Standard Measures.

YARMOUTH, GREAT (Norfolk), was a royal demesne in the reign of William I., as appears from Domesday Book, 1086. It obtained a charter from John, and one from Henry III. In 1348, a plague here carried off 7000 persons: and that terrible disease did much havoc, again in 1579 and 1664. The theatre was built in 1778; and Nelson's pillar, a fluted column 140 feet in height, was erected in 1817. The suspension chain bridge over the river Bure was built by Mr. R. Cory, at an expense of about 4000l. Owing to the weight of a vast number of persons who assembled on this bridge to witness an exhibition on the water, it suddenly gave way, and seventy-nine lives, mostly those of children, were lost, 2 May, 1845. The railway from London to Norwich was opened in 1844. Great Yarmouth was disfranchised for bribery and corruption by the Reform Act of Aug. 1867.

YEAR. The Egyptians, it is said, were the first who fixed the length of the year.

The Roman year was introduced by Romulus, 753 B.C.; and it was corrected by Numa, 713 B.C., and again by Julius Cesar, 45 B.C. (see Calendar). The solar or astronomical year was found to comprise 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 51 seconds, and 6 decimals, 265 B.C.

The lunar year, which comprehends twelve lunar months, or 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes, was in use among the Chaldeans, Persians, and ancient Jews. Once in every three years was added another lunar month, so as to make the solar and the lunar year nearly agree. But though the months were lunar, the year was solar; that is, the first month was of thirty days, and the second of twenty-nine, and so alternately; and the month added triennially was called the second Adar. The Jews afterwards followed the Roman manner of computation.

The sideral year, or return to the same star, is 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes, 11 seconds.

The Jews dated the beginning of the sacred year in March, and civil year in September; the Athenians began the year in June; the Macedonians on 24 Sept.; the Christians of Egypt and Ethiopia on 29 or 30 Aug.; and the Persians and Armenians on 11 Aug. Nearly all Christian nations now commence the year on 1 January.

In France, the Merovingian kings began the year with March; the Carolingians sometimes began the year with Christmas, 25 Dec.; and sometimes with Easter, which being a moveable feast, led to much confusion.

Charles IX. of France, in 1564, published an arrêt, the last article of which ordered the year for the time to come to be constantly and universally begun, and written on and from 1 January.

See *N.º Style, Platonic Year, Sabbatical Year, French Revolutionary Calendar.

The beginning of the year has been reckoned from the day celebrating the birth of Christ, 25th Dec.; his circumcision, 1 Jan.; his conception, 25 March; and his resurrection, Easter.

The English began their year on the 25th of December, until the time of William the conqueror. This prince having been crowned on 1 Jan. gave occasion to the English to begin their year at that time, to make it agree with the then most remarkable period of their history. Stow. Until the act

YEAR-BOOKS contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the courts of common law. The printed volumes extend from the beginning of the reign of Edward II. to nearly the end of the reign of Henry VIII., a period of about 220 years; but in this series there are many omissions. These books are the first in the long line of legal reports in which England is so rich, and may be considered as, to a great extent, the foundation of our unwritten law, "Lex non scripta." In 1863 et seq. the year-books of 30 & 31 Edward I. 1302-3, were edited by Mr. A. J. Horwood, for the series of the Chronicles and Memorials published at the expense of the British government.

YELLOW FEVER, a dreadful American pestilence, made its appearance at Philadelphia, where it committed great ravages, 1699. It appeared in several islands of the West Indies in 1732, 1739, and 1745. It raged with unparalleled violence at Philadelphia in Oct. 1762; and most awfully at New York in the beginning of August 1791. This fever again spread great devastation at Philadelphia in July 1793; carrying off several thousand persons. Hardie. It again appeared in Oct. 1797; and spread its ravages over the northern coast of America, Sept. 1798. It re-appeared at Philadelphia in the summer of 1802; and broke out in Spain, in Sept. 1803. The yellow fever was very violent at Gibraltar in 1804 and 1814; in the Mauritius, July 1815; at Antigua, in Sept. 1816; and it raged with dreadful consequences at Cadiz, and the Isle of St. Leon, in Sept. 1819. A malignant fever raged at Gibraltar in Sept. 1828, and did not terminate until the following year.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD, a peculiar body of foot guards to the king's person, instituted at the coronation of Henry VII. 30 Oct. 1485, which originally consisted of fifty men under a captain. They were called beef-eaters, a corruption of buffetiers, being attendants on the king's buffet or sideboard; see Battle-axe. They were of a larger stature than other guards, being required to be over six feet in height, and were armed with arquebuses and other arms. The band was increased by Henry's successors to one hundred men, and seventy supernumeraries; and when one of the hundred died, it was ordered that his place should be supplied out of the seventy. They were clad after the manner of king Henry VIII. Ashmole's Instit. This is said to have been the first permanent military band instituted in England. John, earl of Oxford, was the first captain in 1486. Beatson's Pol. Index.

* The year in the northern regions of Siberia and Lapland is described in the following calendar, given by a traveller:—"23 June. Snow melts. 1 July. Snow gone. 9 July. Fields quite green. 17 July. Plants at full growth. 25 July. Plants in flower. 2 Aug. Fruits ripe. 10 Aug. Plants shed their seed. 18 Aug. Snow." The snow then continues upon the ground for about ten months, from 18th Aug. of one year to 23rd June of the year following, being 309 days out of 365; so that while the three seasons of spring, summer, and autumn are together only fifty-six days, or eight weeks, the winter is of forty-four weeks' duration in these countries.

for altering the style, in 1752 (see Style), the year did not legally and generally commence in England until 25th March. In Scotland, at that period, the year began on the 1st of January. This difference caused great practical inconveniences; and January, February, and part of March sometimes bore two dates, as we often find in old records, 1745-1746, or 1745-6, or 1745 $\frac{1}{2}$. Such a reckoning often led to chronological mistakes; for instance, we popularly say the "revolution of 1688," as that event happened in February 1688, according to the then mode of computation; but if the year were held to begin, as it does now, on the first of January, it would be the revolution of 1689.

YEAR OF OUR LORD; see Anno Domini.

YEAR OF THE REIGN. From the time of William the Conqueror, 1066, the year of the sovereign's reign has been given to all public instruments. The king's patents, charters, proclamations, and all acts of parliament have since then been generally so dated. The same manner of dating is used in most of the European states for all similar documents and records; see List of Kings under England, p. 275.

YEAR AND A DAY. A space of time in law, that in many cases establishes and fixes a right, as in an estray, on proclamation being made, if the owner does not claim it within the time, it is forfeited. The term arose in the Norman law, which enacted that a beast found on another's land, if unclaimed for a year and a day, belonged to the lord of the soil. It is otherwise a legal space of time.

YERMUK (Syria). Near here the emperor Heraclius was totally defeated by the Saracens, after a fierce engagement, Nov. 636. Damascus was taken, and his army was expelled from Syria.

YEW-TREE (Taxus). The origin of planting yew-trees in churchyards was (these latter being fenced) to secure the trees from cattle, and in this manner preserve them for the encouragement of archery. A general plantation of them for the use of archers was ordered by Richard III. 1483. Stow's Chron. Near Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire, were lately seven yew-trees, called the Seven Sisters, supposed to have been planted before 1088; the circumference of the largest was thirty-four feet seven inches round the trunk. In 1851, a yew-tree was said to be growing in the churchyard of Gresford, North Wales, whose circumference was nine yards nine inches, being the largest and oldest yew-tree in the British dominions; but it is affirmed on traditional evidence that there are some of these trees in England older than the introduction of Christianity. The old yew-tree mentioned in the survey taken of Richmond palace in 1649, is said to be still existing.

YEZDEGIRD or PERSIAN ERA, was formerly universally adopted in Persia, and is still used by the Parsees in India, and by the Arabs, in certain computations. This era began on the 26th June, 632, when Yezdegird was elected king of Persia. The year consisted of 365 days only, and therefore its commencement, like that of the old Egyptian and Armenian year, anticipated the Julian year by one day in every four years. This difference amounted to nearly 112 days in the year 1075, when it was reformed by Jelaleddin, who ordered that in future the Persian year should receive an additional day whenever it should appear necessary to postpone the commencement of the following year, that it might occur on the day of the sun's passing the same degree of the ecliptic.

YINGLINGS (youths, or off-shoots), descendants of the Scandinavian hero Odin, ruled Sweden till 830, when the last of the pontiff kings, Olaf Trætelia, being expelled, led to the foundation of the Norwegian monarchy.

YOKE. The yoke is spoken of as a type of servitude throughout Scripture. The ceremony of making prisoners pass under it was practised by the Samnites towards the Romans, 321 B.C.; see Caudine Forks. This disgrace was afterwards inflicted by the Romans upon their vanquished enemies. Dufresnoy.

			1406. Edward (his son), was degraded by Henry IV. in 1399, but restored in 1414; killed at Agincourt, 1415; succeeded by his nephew, 1415. Richard (son of Richard, earl of Cambridge, who was beheaded for treason in 1415); became regent of France in 1435; quelled the rebellion in Ireland in 1449; claimed the throne, and was appointed protector in 1454; his office was annulled, and he began the civil war in 1455, and was slain after his defeat at Wakefield in 1460.
			1460. Edward (his son) afterwards king Edward IV.
			1474. Richard (his second son), said to have been murdered in the Tower, 1483
			1494. Henry Tudor, afterwards Henry VIII.
			1605. Charles Stuart, afterwards Charles I.
			1643. James Stuart (his second son), afterwards James II.
			1716. Ernest (brother of George I.); died 1728.
			1760. Edward (brother of George III.); died 1767.
			1784. Frederic (son of George III.), born, 16 Aug. 1762; marries princess Frederica of Prussia, 29 Sept. 1791; commands the British forces at Antwerp, 3 April, 1793; present at the siege of Valenciennes, 23 May; defeated at Dunkirk, 7 Sept.; at Bois-le-Duc, 14 Sept.

YORK, continued.

and at Boxtel, 17 Sept.; appointed commander-in-chief, 1798; defeated near Alkmaar, 19 Sept. and 6 Oct. 1799; accused by colonel Wardle of abuse of his patronage;

he resigns, 27 Jan. 1809; becomes again commander-in-chief, 1811; strongly opposes the catholic claims, 1825; dies, 5 Jan. 1827.

YORK, ARCHBISHOPRIC OF. The most ancient metropolitan see in England, being, it is said, so made by king Lucius about 180, when Christianity was first partially established in England. The bishop Eborius was present at the council of Arles, 314. The see was overturned by the Saxons, was revived by pope Gregory on their conversion, and Paulinus is said to have been consecrated archbishop, 21 July, 625. York and Durham were long the only two sees in the north of England, until Henry I. erected a bishopric at Carlisle, and Henry VIII. another at Chester. York was the metropolitan see of the Scottish bishops; but during the time of archbishop Nevil, 1464, they withdrew their obedience, and had archbishops of their own. Much dispute arose between the two English metropolitans about precedence, as by pope Gregory's institutions it was thought he meant, that whichever of them was first confirmed, should be superior: appeal was made to the court of Rome by both parties, and it was determined in favour of Canterbury. The archbishop of York was allowed to style himself primate of England, while the archbishop of Canterbury styles himself primate of all England. The province of York now contains the dioceses of York, Carlisle, Chester, Durham, Sodor and Man, Manchester, and Ripon (which see). York has yielded to the church of Rome eight saints and three cardinals, and to England twelve lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, and two lord presidents of the north. It is rated in the king's books, 39 Henry VIII. 1546, at 1609*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* per annum. Beatson. Present income, 10,000*l.*

 1862. William Thomson, translated from Gloucester, PRESENT archbishop.

YORK MINSTER (dedicated to St. Peter), was erected at different periods, and on the site of former buildings; is said never to have been occupied by monks. The first Christian church erected here, which appears to have been preceded by a Roman temple, was built by Edwin, king of Northumbria, of wood, about 625, and of stone about 635. It was damaged by fire in 741, and was rebuilt by archbishop Albert, about 780. It was again destroyed by fire in the year 1069, and rebuilt by archbishop Thomas, of Bayeux. It was once more burnt down in 1137, with St. Mary's abbey, and 39 parish churches in York. Archbishop Roger built the choir, 1154-81; Walter Gray added the south transept in 1227; John de Romayne, the treasurer of the cathedral, built the north transept in 1260. His son, archbishop Romanus, laid the foundation of the nave in 1291. In 1330, William de Melton built the two western towers, which were finished by John de Birmingham in 1342. Archbishop Thoresby, in 1361, began to rebuild the choir, in accordance with the magnificence of the nave, and he also rebuilt the lantern tower. Thus, by many hands, and many contributions of multitudes on the promise of indulgences, this magnificent fabric was completed. It was first set on fire by Jonathan Martin, a lunatic, and the roof of the choir and its internal fittings destroyed, 2 Feb. 1829; the damage, estimated at 60,000*l.*, was repaired in 1832 under sir Robert Smirke. An accidental fire broke out, which in one hour reduced the belfry to a shell, destroyed the roof of the nave, and much damaged the edifice, 20 May, 1840. This was restored by Sidney Smirke, at a cost of 23,000*l.*, 1841.

YORK AND LANCASTER, WARS OF, see Roses.

YORK (Upper Canada), founded in 1794; since 1834 named Toronto. In the war between America and Great Britain, the United States' forces made several attacks upon the province of Upper Canada, and succeeded in taking York, the seat of the government, 27 April, 1813; but it was soon afterwards again retaken by the British.

YORK TOWN (Virginia, United States). Lord Cornwallis had taken possession of York town in Aug. 1781; but after sustaining a disastrous siege, he was obliged to surrender his army, consisting of about 7000 men, to the allied armies of France and America, under the command of general Washington and count Rochambeau, 19 Oct. 1781. This mischance was attributed to sir Henry Clinton, who had not given the garrison the necessary succour they expected; and it mainly led to the close of the war. It was strongly fortified by the confederates in the American civil war, but surrendered to McClellan, May, 1862.

YTTRIUM, a rare metal. The earth yttria was discovered by professor Gadolin in a mineral at Ytterby, in Sweden, 1794. The metal was first obtained by Wöhler in 1828. It is of a dark grey colour, and brittle.

YVRES (now IVRY, N.W. France), where a battle was fought, 14 March, 1590, between Henry IV. of France, aided by his chief nobility, and the generals of the catholic league, over whom the king obtained a complete victory.

Z.

ZAGRAB (Hungary). Here Andrew II. defeated the invader Charles Martel, to whom the pope had assigned his crown, 1292.

ZÄHRINGEN (Baden), the seat of dukes, ancestors of the grand dukes of Baden, descended from Herman I., margrave, 1074; see Baden.

ZAMA (near Carthage, N. Africa), the scene of the battle between the two greatest commanders in the world at the time, Hannibal and Scipio Africanus. The victory was won by Scipio, and was decisive of the fate of Carthage; it led to an ignominious peace the year after, which closed the second Punic war. The Romans lost about 2000 killed and wounded, while the Carthaginians lost in killed and prisoners more than 40,000; some historians make the loss greater; 202 B.C.

ZANTE. One of the Ionian Islands (which see).

ZANZALEENS. This sect rose in Syria, under Zanzalee, 535; he taught that water baptism was of no efficacy, and that it was necessary to be baptised with fire, by the application of a red-hot iron. The sect was at one time very numerous.

ZE, ZOW, ZIERES. For ye, you, and yours. The letter z was retained in Scotland, and was commonly written for the letter y so late as the reign of queen Mary, up to which period many books in the Scottish language were printed in Edinburgh with these words, 1543.

ZEALAND, one of the 13 provinces which formed the League of Utrecht, 1579; see Holland, and New Zealand.

ZELA, N.-E. Asia Minor. Where Julius Cæsar defeated Pharnaces, king of Pontus, son of Mithridates. Cæsar, in announcing this victory, sent his famous despatch to the senate of Rome, in these words: "Veni, vidi, vici,"—"I came, I saw, I conquered" (perhaps the shortest despatch on record). This battle ended the war; Pharnaces escaped into Bosphorus, where he was slain by his lieutenant, Asander; Pontus was made a Roman province, and Bosphorus given to Mithridates of Pergamus, 47 B.C.

ZELL (Hanover), see Denmark, 1772.

ZEND-AVESTA, ancient sacred books of the Parsees; of which 3 out of 21 are extant. The age of these books is much disputed. Professor Max Müller says that the MSS. had been preserved by the Parsee priests at Bombay, where a colony of fire-worshippers had fled in the 10th century. Anquetil Duperron's French translation, from a modern Persian version, was published in 1771.

ZENO, see Stoics.

ZENOBIA, Queen of the East, see Palmyra.

ZENTA, in Hungary, the scene of a battle where the Germans, under prince Eugene, defeated the Turks, 11 Sept. 1697. This victory led to the peace of Carlowitz, ratified, January, 1699.

ZIDON, see Sidon.

ZINC. The ore of zinc, calamine or spelter, was known to the Greeks, who used it in the manufacture of brass. It is said to have been known in China also, and is noticed by European writers as early as 1231; though the method of extracting it from the ore was unknown for nearly five hundred years after. The metal zinc is first mentioned by Paracelsus (who died in 1541). A mine of zinc was discovered on lord Ribblesdale's estate, Craven, Yorkshire, in 1809. Zincography was introduced in London shortly after the invention of lithography became known in England, in 1817; see Lithography. Zinc is much used in voltaic batteries; and its application in manufactures has greatly increased of late years; see Photozincography. In 1866 we imported 29,239 tons of zinc, and exported 8903 tons.

ZIRCONIUM, the metallic base of the earth Zirconia, which was discovered by Klaproth in 1789; from this Berzelius obtained the metal in 1824. Zirconia is found in the sand of the rivers of Ceylon. The metal exists in the form of a black powder.

ZIZYPHUS VULGARIS. A shrub brought from the south of Europe about 1640. The Zizyphus Paliurus shrub (Christ's Thorn) was brought from Africa before 1596; see Flowers.

ZODIAC. Its obliquity was discovered, its twelve signs named, and their situations assigned them by Anaximander, about 560 B.C. The Greeks and Arabians borrowed the zodiac from the Hindoos. Sir W. Jones.

ZOLLVEREIN (Customs' Union), the name given to the German commercial union, of which Prussia is at the head. It began in 1818, and was gradually joined by nearly all the German states except Austria, and a treaty was signed 22 March, 1833, which became the basis of the association. On 19 Feb. 1853, an important treaty of commerce and navigation, between Austria and Prussia, to last from Jan. 1854 to Dec. 1865, was signed, to which the other states of the Zollverein gave in their adhesion on 5 April, 1853. In Nov. 1861, Prussia threatened to withdraw unless certain changes were made. By the treaty of 8 July, 1867, between the North German confederation, and the southern states, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Baden, and Hesse, various changes were made, and by other treaties signed in Oct. these states agreed to send delegates to a customs' parliament to be held at Berlin. A session of this parliament was opened by the king of Prussia, 27 April, and closed 23 May, 1868.

ZOOLOGY (from zōōn, Greek for animal) is the division of biology which treats of animals. Aristotle (322-284 B.C.) is the founder of the science. Systems of classification have been made by John Ray (1628-1705), Charles Linné (1707-78), G. Buffon (1707-88), and George Cuvier (1769-1832).

The animal kingdom was divided by Linnæus into six classes, viz. :—Mammalia, which includes all animals that suckle their young; Aves, birds; Amphibia, or amphibious animals; Pisces, fishes; Insecta, insects; Vermes, worms; 1741.

Cuvier, who died in Paris, 13 May, 1832, in his great work, Règne Animale, published in 1816, distributed the animals into four great divisions, the Vertebrata (back-boned); the Mollusca (soft bodied); the Articulata (jointed); and the Radiata (the organs disposed round a centre).

In 1859, professor Owen made known a system of arranging the class Mammalia according to the nature of their brains.

The Zoological Society of London (originally the Zoological Club) was founded in 1826, and its gardens in the Regent's Park were opened in April, 1827; the society was chartered 27 March, 1829.

Dr. James Murie was appointed by the society to be their first "anatomical prosector," 3 May, 1865.

On the demolition of Exeter Change, in 1829, the menagerie of Mr. Cross was temporarily lodged in The King's Mews, whence it was removed to the Surrey Zoological Gardens, 1832.

The Zoological Gardens of Dublin were opened, 1832.

See Aquarium, Hippopotamus, Giraffe, and Acclimatization.

ZORNDORFF, Prussia, where a battle was fought between the Prussian and Russian armies; the former, commanded by the king of Prussia, obtained a victory over the forces of the czarina, whose loss amounted to 21,529 men, while that of the Prussians did not exceed 11,000, 25, 26 Aug. 1758.

ZOUAVES AND FOOT CHASSEURS. When the French established a regency at Algiers, in 1830, they hoped to find the employment of native troops advantageous, and selected the Zouaouas, a congregation of Arab tribes, famous for daring and skilful courage. In time numbers of red republicans, and other enthusiastic Frenchmen, joined the regiments, adopting the costume, &c. : eventually the Africans disappeared from the ranks, and no more were added, they having been frequently guilty of treachery. Among their colonels were Lamoricière and Cavaignac. The French Zouaves formed an important part of the army in the Crimean war, 1854-5.*

ZUG, the smallest canton of Switzerland.

* The Zouave organisation and drill were introduced into the federal army in the great civil war in America, by Ephraim E. Elsworth, early in 1861. He was assassinated on 24 May same year, at Alexandria, just after taking down a secession flag.

ZUINGLIANS, the followers of the reformer, Ulrich Zuinglius, who at Zurich declaimed against the church of Rome, and effected the same separation for Switzerland from the papal dominion, which Luther did for Saxony. He procured two assemblies to be called; by the first he was authorised to proceed, by the second, the ceremonies of the Romish church were abolished 1519. Zuinglius died in arms as a soldier, being slain in a skirmish against his popish opponents in 11 Oct. 1531. The Zuinglians were also called Sacramentarians.

ZÜLLICHAU (Prussia). Here the Russians, under Soltikow, severely defeated the Prussians under Wedel, 23 July, 1759.

ZULPICH, see Tolbiac.

ZURICH was admitted a member and made head of the Swiss confederacy, 1351, and was the first town in Switzerland that separated from the church of Rome; see Zuinglians. A grave-digger at Zurich poisoned the sacramental wine, by which eight persons lost their lives and many others were grievously injured, 4 Sept. 1776. The French, under Massena, after repelling an attack of the Austrians, retired from Zurich, 5 June, 1799. The Imperialists were defeated by Massena, the former losing 20,000 men killed and wounded, 25, 26 Sept. 1799; see Switzerland. On 24 June, 1859, the Austrians were defeated by the allied French and Sardinian army at Solferino. Preliminaries of peace were signed at Villa Franca by the emperors of Austria and France on 12 July following. A conference between the representatives of the powers concerned having been appointed, the first meeting took place on 8 Aug. After many delays a treaty was signed on 10 Nov. Lombardy was ceded to Sardinia; the formation of an Italian Confederation, under the presidency of the pope, was determined on, and the rights of the ex-sovereigns of Tuscany, Modena, and Parma were reserved. The formation of the kingdom of Italy in 1861 annulled the treaty of Zurich.

ZUTPHEN, in Holland. At a battle here 22 Sept. 1586, between the Spaniards and the Dutch, the amiable sir Philip Sidney, author of "Arcadia," was mortally wounded. He died 7 Oct. He was serving with the English auxiliaries, commanded by the earl of Leicester.

ZUYPER SLUYS (Holland). Here sir Ralph Abercrombie defeated an attack of the French under Brune; the latter suffered great loss, 9 Sept. 1799.

EARL RUSSELL'S MINISTRY — With Gladstone Chancellor of the Exchequer; Lord Cranworth, Lord Chancellor; Earl Granville, &c.
Dec. 1865.

DERBY ADMINISTRATION — Earl of Derby, First Lord, &c.; D'Israeli, Chancellor of Exchequer; Lord Stanley, Sec. for Foreign Affairs, &c.
June 19, 1866.

ADMIRALTY. There is no separate court of admiralty in the U. S. By Statute of 1789, the District Courts have "cognizance of all civil causes of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction." They are also Prize Courts and hear all cases of trespass and civil injuries on the Sea. Capital crimes committed at sea are tried by the U. S. Circuit Courts.

ADVERTISING. The rate of charge of American Dailies is from 5 to 20 cents per line; of weekly papers, up to $2.00. A few monthly and quarterly periodicals charge $2.50 per line. The price of one page for advertisements in Harper's Magazine is $250. In 1865, the advertising receipts of the N. Y. Tribune were above $359,000. By act of July, 1861, advertisements in American papers are taxed 3 per cent. on gross receipts. Papers of less than 2,000 copies circulation are exempt. The duty on advertising in England was abolished in 1853.

AGRICULTURE. Agriculture is the most important material interest of the United States. It is estimated that seven-eighths of the population are engaged in agricultural pursuits or in occupations immediately dependent thereon. In 1860 the number of acres in cultivation was 163,000,000, valued at 6,600 million dollars. In the same year the value of agricultural implements was $247,000,000.

Bushels of Wheat.....	132,000,000	181,000,000	148,000,000
Bushels of Oats.....	172,000,000	171,000,000	235,000,000
Bushels of Rye.....	20,000,000	21,000,000	19,000,000
Tons of Hay.....	19,000,000	20,000,000	23,000,000
Pounds of Wool.....	60,000,000	114,000,000
Bales of Cotton.....	4,000,000	1,000,000
Bushels of Corn.....	800,000,000	500,000,000	600,000,000

In the Statistics of 1862 and 1865 the States in rebellion are not included. In 1862 the shipment of wheat from the U. S. to Great Britain alone amounted to 29,700,000 bushels. Total exports of grain 1863 were 77,300,000 bushels. The cereals of the Northern States in 1865 amounted to 1,228 million bushels, valued at $1,047,000,000. The Southern cotton crop for 1866-7 is estimated at 2,000,000 bales. "Department of Agriculture" established May 15, 1862, at Washington, D. C. Its object, to diffuse information on subjects connected with agriculture among the people of the U. S.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS. The earliest attempt at one was the Abbé Rosier at Chambord, France, 1775. In 1844 Mr. Colman found but nine agricultural schools in existence "worth notice." Seven years after (1851), Professor Hitchcock enumerated no less than 352 in Europe, of which five were in England, sixty-three in Ireland, and seventy-five in France. Among the first in the United States is that at Ovid, Seneca county, New York, founded in 1856. The Westchester N. Y. Farm School, founded 1856, was the first private institution exclusively agricultural. There are now (1860) agricultural professorships in Virginia, Georgia, &c., as well as in Yale College. An annual course of thirty lectures on agriculture established in 1850, at New Haven, by Professor Norton. Michigan Agricultural College, established by the legislature in 1850. By act of July 2, 1862, Congress made provision for "donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide Colleges for the benefit of agriculture and mechanic arts." Up to Sept. 1863, 15 States had taken advantage of the act, and many colleges introduced Agriculture among the branches of their scientific course. Agricultural college at Amherst, Mass., in process of construction (1867).

ALABAMA. One of the United States; most of its territory was included in the original patent of Georgia. It was made a part of the Mississippi territory in 1817; admitted into the Union as a State in 1820. Population in 1810 was less than 10,000; in 1816, 29,683; in 1820, 127,901; in 1830, 308,997; in 1840, 590,756, including 253,532 slaves. Exports of the State in 1840 amounted to $12,854,694; imports to $574,651. The governor in his message, November, 1851, recommends a discriminating tax on all articles from those States that continue slave agitation. Population in 1850: white, 426,515; free colored, 2,250. Total free, 428,765; slaves, 342,894. In 1855: white, 464,456; free colored, 2,466; slaves, 374,731. Population, 1860: white, 520,444; slaves, 435,473. The slaves have increased more rapidly than the whites. Ordinance passed "seceding" from the United States January 7, 1861. During the war the State was untouched by the national army until March, 1865, when Gen. Wilson with 17,000 cavalry penetrated its most productive region. In June, 1865, L. E. Parsons was appointed Provisional Governor. The State sent 120,000 men to the war, and lost 35,000. Estimated loss in wealth, $500,000,000. Present debt (1865) is $3,400,000.

ALBANY, N. Y. Population in 1850, 50,700; in 1860, 62,367; in 1865, 62,613. It became the capital of the State in 1807. The most important article of commerce is lumber; in 1863, $7,000,000 worth was received there. Its Law Library, the best in the country, contains 70,000 volumes.

ALE AND BEER, U. S. By act of Congress, July 13, 1862, a tax of $1.00 is levied on every barrel of ale and beer manufactured and sold.

ALIENS, U. S. In 1850 there were 2,210,800 in the United States. In 1866, 233,408 arrived. Of these, 106,000 came from Germany; 68,000 from Ireland; 36,000 from England. Aliens now pay income tax. (Act of Congress, July, 1866.) See Emigration.

ALMANACS (American):—

Franklin's "Poor Richard's Almanac" (Phil. 1732) was the first of any note in the U. S.

"The American Nautical Almanac" was established in 1849 and superintended by Capt. Davis, U. S. N. It has few equals in scientific accuracy. The "American Almanac" of Boston was discontinued in 1857 (?) after being published 29 years.

The "National Almanac" (valuable and comprehensive), published by Childs of Phila., appeared only 1863 and 1864.

At the present time (1867) no general almanac of any special value is published in the U. S.

The "Family Christian Almanac" of the Tract Society has a wide circulation.

AMBASSADORS. The U. S. has never sent any person of the rank of ambassador in the diplomatic sense, but is represented by ministers plenipotentiary. (Kent). In 1867 the U. S. had her ministers at the courts of Austria, Brazil, China, France, Great Britain, Italy, Mexico, Peru, Prussia, Russia, Spain. To the smaller states, "ministers resident" are sent, 22 in all. Number of consuls from U. S. to foreign countries in 1862, 272. Some of these are known as agents simply. 10 are stationed in England and 10 in France. The highest salaries are given to the consuls at London and Liverpool, $7,500 each. Number of foreign consuls in U. S. in 1863, 356.

AMERICA. See United States.

AMERICAN FLAG. Previous to 1776, the colors used by the American army exhibited a snake with thirteen rattles, in a crimson ground interlaced with white. On the 14th June, 1777, Congress resolved, "that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternately red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white, on a blue field—representing 'a new constellation.'"

ANÆSTHETICS. Substances to alleviate pain:—

Carbonic acid gas, recommended by Dr Hickman.....	1828	and a controversy on the respective claims was continued for several years.
Chloroform or its use discovered nearly at the same time by Dr. G. Guthrie, Sacketts Harbor, N. Y., M. Soubiran in France, and Prof. Liebig in Germany.....	1831	Bill introduced in U. S. Senate to purchase Dr. Morton's patent for $100,000. Aug. 28, 1852
Use of ether to relieve pain first effected at the instance of Dr. W. T. G. Morton at the Mass. Hospital.....	Oct. 16, 1846	Claim of the widow of Dr. Horace Wells, of Hartford, Conn., that he originated the use of ether previous to Morton. (These various claims fully discussed in Morton's statements of Evidence, 1858, and Littell's Living Age, vols. 16 & 17.)
Patent for it secured by Dr. Morton.....	Nov. 12, 1846	Use of chloroform first proposed for same purpose as sulphuric ether, by Dr. Simpson of Edinburgh.....
Dr. Chas. T. Jackson appeared as claimant of the discovery.....	Jan. 2, 1847	184*

In 1863 Dr. Colton (dentist) of N. Y. used nitrous oxide. No ill effects followed in the 3,000 cases he had up to 1865. (See this subject in Appleton's Cyclopædia, 1864.)

ANIMALS, SOCIETY TO PREVENT CRUELTY TO. A society, chartered by the State of N. Y. in 1866, chiefly through the exertions of Mr. Henry Bergh, who became its Secretary in 1866. Its object is to prevent cruel treatment to animals, by bringing offenders to trial. Laws prohibiting cruelty to beasts and also "game fighting," passed April, 1866. The Pennsylvania Legislature incorporated a similar society in the Spring of 1867.

ANNUITIES. An annuity is a sum of money allowed to a person yearly during his life. Governments borrow money and grant annuities in return. The U. S. gives pensions as annuities for services rendered. They are granted generally by incorporated companies. In Louisiana the "contract of annuity is that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon." (Civil Code.)

ANTIETAM, BATTLE OF. Antietam Creek is in the western part of Maryland, and flows into the Potomac. Great battle fought there (Sept. 17, 1862) between the army of the Union, under Gen. McClellan and the Confederate army under Gen. Lee. It was commenced on the right by Gen. Hooker; next to him in line were Sumner, Mansfield, Porter, Burnside, in all 87,000 men. Opposed to these were the corps of Longstreet, Jackson, and the Hills—70,000 strong. The fight raged fiercely all day. Burnside at length carried a bridge across the creek and stormed the heights beyond. At night the advantage was with the national army, and Lee retreated across the Potomac. Entire loss in McClellan's army 12,469; in Lee's, 13,533, with 13 guns, 39 colors and 6,000 prisoners, captured by the Union army. General Mansfield, U. S. A., was killed. Two Confederate generals killed, 8 wounded; 1 Union general killed, 6 wounded.

APPEALS. In the U. S. nearly all courts can hear appeals from those next inferior. The highest courts of the States are courts of appeal only. The Supreme Court of the U. S. sits on appeal from Circuit and Territorial Courts, and also from the highest State Courts, whenever the question turns upon the validity of a treaty or law or authority of the U. S. (Statute of 1789.)

APPLES. The Romans knew of 22 varieties of apples, according to Pliny. Ray reckons 78 kinds in his day, in England (1688). In the U. S. 200 varieties exist. Apple-trees of finest quality last 80 years. Some reach the age of 200 years. Throughout the U. S. the following appear to be the favorites: For summer apples, the Early Harvest, Sweet Bough and Red Astrachan; for autumn, the Fall Pippin, Porter and Gravenstein; for winter, the Baldwin and Rhode Island Greening. The demand for the fruit is greatly in advance of the supply, and in London the American apple commands fabulous prices. In 1860, the yield of orchard fruit amounted to $19,000,000, the greater part of which was derived from the apple product. In 1865, the orchards in the State of New York yielded 16,275,605 bushels of apples.

APPRENTICES. In the U. S. apprenticeship is not so common as in England. The American apprentice rarely pays a fee to the master. In some Eastern States, farmers take them to learn husbandry, clothe them, and, when they leave, present them with a sum of money. Whole number in the U. S. in 1860 was about 55,000. There is a Library in Mechanics Hall, N. Y. City, containing 16,000 volumes, for youthful apprentices. For laws respecting them, see Kent's Commentaries. Number of apprentices in N. Y. State, in 1865, 1,361.

AQUEDUCT. The greatest of modern or perhaps of any time is the Croton aqueduct, which supplies the City of New York with water from Croton lake, 40 miles distant. It was commenced 1837; its completion was publicly celebrated in 1842; its cost was $10,375,000. It is carried across the Harlem river on a bridge 100 feet high. Chief engineer John B.

Jervis; contractor for the bridge, Geo. Law. The aqueduct which supplies Boston from lake Cochituate, 23½ miles, was commenced in 1846; its completion celebrated Oct. 25, 1848; cost $5,370,818. That which supplies the city of Brooklyn, L. I., was finished 1858; engineer J. P. Kirkwood; cost $640,828. Jersey City, N. J., is supplied by an aqueduct 8 miles long from the Passaic river at Belleville; W. S. Whitwell, chief engineer. It was completed in 1856 and cost $640,000. Washington, D. C., is furnished with water from the Potomac by an aqueduct 15 miles long, commenced in the administration of Pres. Pierce. The water was first admitted into it Dec. 5, 1863, at which time the cost amounted to $2,900,000; Capt. M. C. Meigs (U. S. A.) chief engineer. This aqueduct discharges 67,596,400 gallons in 24 hours, or nearly 3 times as much as the Croton aqueduct.

AQUARIUM, or AQUAVIVARIUM. Mr. C. E. Hammett, Jr., of Newport, R. I., published 1859 his observations and experiments with Aquaria, which were very remarkable. Aquaria have been introduced into several public museums in the U. S., and they are also largely cultivated in private houses. In 1860 there was but one regular establishment for their manufacture in the U. S. Annual value of products $5,500.

ARCTIC EXPEDITIONS. See Northwest Passage, and Franklin's Expeditions. Lieut Hartstein with the Arctic and Release leaves Brooklyn May 31, 1855, and finds Dr. Kane at Lieveley, Greenland, Sept. 13, 1855; and returns to New York with him Oct. 11, 1855. Steamer Fox, Capt. McClintock, sails from Aberdeen (sent by Lady Franklin), in search of remains of Franklin's Expedition, July 10, 1857. Capt. McClintock returns, bringing relics and remains of Franklin's Expedition, and ascertaining his fate, 1859. Mr. C. F. Hall sailed from New London, Conn., in ship George Henry, May 29, 1860. Returned Sept. 13, 1862. He went again with strong hopes of finding some of Franklin's men. Discovered the fate of four who died from cold and starvation, June, 1864. Dr. Hayes sailed from Boston in schooner United States, and returned in fifteen months. Valuable surveys and experiments made by him, July 10, 1860. Capt. Parker Snow sailed from England in schooner Intrepid, in search of Franklin's companions, June, 1861. Expedition from Sweden blocked by ice and unable to accomplish its objects, May 9, 1861.

ARIZONA, known as the Gadsden purchase, a territory of 30,000 square miles, purchased from Mexico by the U. S. for $10,000,000 in 1855. It had in 1856 about 5,000 inhabitants, chiefly Mexicans. By act of Congress, Feb. 24, 1863, the territory was organized and part of New Mexico added to it, the whole containing 131,000 square miles. The capital is Prescott. The first Governor appointed, in 1863, was R. C. McCormick. Population in 1866, white, about 8,000.

ARKANSAS, one of the United States, was a part of the Louisiana purchase. It was made a separate territory in 1819, and was admitted into the Union in 1836. Population in 1830, 30,388; in 1840, 97,574, including 19,935 slaves. Population in 1860, 435,450, of whom 111,115 were slaves. The State "seceded" from the Union May 6th, 1861. Being unaided during the war by the Confederate Government, she manufactured her own war material. At the close of the rebellion L. Murphy was appointed provisional Governor (1865). Many of the plantations have been divided up for sale, and land can be bought at $1 to $5.00 per acre (1866).

ARMY OF THE U. S. INCLUDING VOLUNTEERS. The following list is official:

Date.	Regulars.	Volunteers.	Present for duty.	Aggregate.
July, 1861.....	14,108	169,480	183,588	286,751
Jan. 1, 1862.....	19,871	507,353	527,204	175,917
Jan. 1, 1863.....	19,169	679,633	698,802	918,191
Jan. 1, 1864.....	17,237	591,013	611,250	860,737
Jan. 1, 1865.....	14,661	606,263	620,924	959,460
May 1, 1865.....	797,807	1,034,064

From May 1, 1865, to Jan. 20, 1866, 918,722 volunteers were mustered out of service. Entire number of colored troops during the war, 178,975. By act of Congress, July, 1866, the regular army comprises 45 regiments of infantry, 10 of cavalry, 5 of artillery: 2 regiments of cavalry and 4 of infantry are colored troops. Total number of regulars in service, Jan. 1867, 54,300. The higher officers are: 1 General, 1 Lieut.-General, 5 Major-Generals, and 10 Brigadier-Generals. During 1861-5 the Pay Department disbursed $1,029,239,000 among the troops. The loss of life in the Northern armies during the war was 286,751, of whom 5,221 officers and 90,886 men were killed or died of wounds, and 2,321 officers and 182,329 men died of disease. See Enlistment.

The following is a list of ordnance and ordnance stores furnished to the army during 1861-65:

Cannon—number.....	7,892
Artillery carriages—number.....	11,787

Artillery projectiles (shot and shell)—number.....	6,335,595
Grape and canister shot—pounds.....	6,539,999
Field artillery ammunition—rounds.....	2,562,177
Small-arms, muskets, rifles, carbines, and pistols.....	3,477,655

Horse blankets—number.....	732,526
Cartridges for small arms—number.....	1,022,176,474
Percussion caps for small arms—number.....	1,220,555,435
Cannon-primers.....	10,281,305
Fuses for shell.....	4,226,377
Gunpowder—pounds.....	26,440,054
Nitre—pounds.....	6,395,152
Lead in pigs and bullets—pounds.....	90,416,295

This only includes what was consumed in the army, and not what was used by the navy.

ARTISTS' FUND SOCIETY, N. Y. In Nov. 1865, sixty pictures were contributed to it by members, which sold for $7,500. The object of this society is to assist indigent and disabled artists. Established in 1859, and has an exhibition and sale, annually.

ARTS, FINE. The progress in the fine arts has been very marked in the U. S. since 1850. The National Academy of Design founded 1828; its new building, the first in the United States wholly designed for such a purpose, was completed and dedicated 1864. The amount annually expended in the U. S. for works of art, has increased ten-fold in as many years. In 1864, 30 collections of pictures in N. Y. sold for $500,000. The Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia, had an exhibition in April, 1865, a collection of over 800 pictures and sculptures. A handsome building for the Yale School of Fine Arts was completed at New Haven in 1866, the gift of Mr. Street. The first exhibition was opened with much distinction July, 1867. Over 70 paintings and 13 sculptures were sent to the Paris Exposition (1867) by the American Committee; see Paintings; Tuckerman's Book of the Artists.

ART-UNION. For distributing works of art by lot. The first was in Germany, founded at Munich in 1823; followed by those of Berlin (1828), Dresden, Leipzig, Bremen, Dusseldorf, Frankfurt, Vienna, etc. "Roman Catholic Art-Unions" were started in 1851. London Art-Union founded 1837; its receipts increased in nineteen years from $500 to $90,000 per ann. The first in the U. S., the American Art-Union (originally the Apollo Association) was founded at N. Y. in 1839. It continued thirteen years, purchasing and distributing works to the amount of $453,853. It was closed in 1851 as being forbidden by the State laws against lotteries.

ASSAY OFFICE, U. S. The one established in N. Y. City, in 1854, assayed more than $180,000,000, of gold, in the seven years prior to 1866. The following table, taken from the official returns in the Treasury Department, shows the collections on bullion and the amount of bullion assayed in each State and Territory of the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866:

States and Territories.	Collections on Bullion.	Bullion Assayed.
California.....	$294,121	$49,020,250
Colorado.....	1,219	219,860
Idaho.....	3,210	535, 05
Missouri.....	4	815
Nevada.....	91,635	15,272,246
New Jersey.....	82	13,688
New York.....	43,774	7,295,803
Oregon.....	28,711	4,785,221
Pennsylvania.....	24,265	4,044,218
Rhode Island.....	13	2,211
Utah.....	361	60 2 8
Washington.....	857	139,533
Total.....	$488,377	$81,389,541

The foregoing compilation does not include the coinage of the United States Mint, at San Francisco, which amounted to $20,000,000.

ASTRONOMY. Astronomy received little attention in the U. S. prior to 1843. At that time, a large comet suddenly appearing, public interest in the science was awakened. Profs. Bond and Pierce, of Cambridge, Mass., Capt Davis, U. S. N., Prof. Hubbard, Naval Academy, Profs. Olmstead and Loomis, of Yale, Prof. O. M. Mitchell, of Cincinnati, and Miss Mitchell, of Nantucket, have contributed largely to the science. Asteroid No. 66 was first seen from Harvard College, April 10, 1861. Others have since been discovered. The La Lande Astronomical Prize, of 500 francs, was awarded by the French Academy of Science to

Mr. Alvan Clark, of Cambridgeport, Mass., Jan. 1863, for his discovery of the companion of Sirius. Mr. Clark produces telescopes equal to any in the world. His discovery was made through an object glass, $18\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter. The instrument cost \$11,187. Astronomical observatories are established at Cambridge, Washington, Cincinnati, Chicago, Albany, New Haven. See Observatories.

ATLANTA. An important central town in Georgia. In 1864 there was heavy fighting in its vicinity. On July 20 and 22, Gen. Hood made desperate attacks on the left of the National Army under Gen. Sherman, but was repulsed, with severe loss. Sherman then moved to the south of the city, compelling its evacuation, and beating the rebels at Jonesboro. Sept. 2d, 1864, Gen. Slocum with the 20th Corps entered the place. The loss of the Confederates in the various contests about Atlanta, from June 20, were about 24,000; that of the National force, 11,800. The town was almost entirely destroyed by fire Nov. 15, 1864. Chartered as a city in 1847. Population in 1860, 9,554.

ATTORNEYS. In 1860 the number of judges and lawyers in the U. S. was 33,980. In 1866 there were 3,500 attorneys in N. Y. city.

AUCTIONS. From 1817 to 1831 there was a strong feeling on the part of American merchants against auctions. At the present time (1867) they are greatly favored. By Act of Congress (1861) there is a tax of $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1 per cent. on the gross amount of auction sales.

B

BALLOON. On June 23, 1859, Mr. Wise and three others ascended from St. Louis in a balloon. After travelling 1150 miles they descended in Jefferson county, New York, very narrowly escaping with their lives. A monster balloon, constructed by Mr. Lowe for the professed intention of an air-voyage to Europe, was inflated and exhibited at New York, May, 1860, and again in Pennsylvania, but the weather or accident defeated the project. In an ascent over Washington, D. C., June 18, 1861, Mr. Lowe telegraphed a message to the President by means of a wire conducted by the rope which held the balloon. Height, 600 feet. Balloons were used for military purposes in Gen. McClellan's campaign (1862). At the battle of "Seven Pines" one ascended 2,000 feet, from which Richmond could be seen. One used also at the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 1862. In New York city, in the summer of 1866, a balloon was suspended daily by a rope, and used to convey parties up and down for sight-seeing.

BALTIMORE, the third city in population and fifth in commerce in the United States; founded 1729; named for Lord Baltimore, the proprietor of the Maryland patent. In 1765 it contained but 50 houses; chartered as a city in 1797. Population in 1790, 13,503; in 1810, 35,583; in 1830, 80,625; in 1840, 102,313, including 3,199 slaves. A handsome monument in the city commemorates its successful defence against the attack of the British under General Ross, Sept. 12, 1814. Population in 1860, 214,037, including 2,213 slaves. On the 19th of April, 1861, U. S. troops passing through the city to the defence of Washington were fired upon and two men killed. Military occupation of the place by Gen. Butler, May, 1861. President Lincoln, who passed through Baltimore (1861) in disguise, to his first inauguration, was nominated with great enthusiasm for his second term by convention there assembled (1864).

BANK OF THE UNITED STATES; first one established 1791; capital $10,000,000. A new one, with capital of $35,000,000, 1816. The Act of Congress re-chartering it vetoed by President Jackson, July 10, 1832. The removal of the deposits of the U. S. Government from the bank, by order of President Jackson, signed by R. B. Taney, Sec. of the Treasury (W. J. Duane, the late Sec., having refused to sign the order), Sept. 23, 1833. Resolution of the Senate that the removal was uncalled for, and the responsibility assumed by the President unconstitutional, &c., introduced by Mr. Webster and passed (26 to 20) March 28, 1834. Senate refused to enter on their journal the President's protest against their resolution, May 7, 1834. Noted resolution of the Senate "expunging" from their journals their resolution of 1834, passed 24 to 19, Jan. 16, 1837. Sub-Treasury Bill passed Jan. 1840, repealed Aug. 9, 1841. The U. S. Bank newly incorporated by Pennsylvania, March 29, 1836: suspended payment Feb. 5, 1841. Bill for establishing a "Fiscal Bank of the U. S." passed the House of Representatives August 6, 1841; vetoed by President Tyler Aug. 16. Another bill for a "Fiscal Corporation" vetoed Sept. 9, 1841, followed by a resignation of all the Cabinet except Mr. Webster.

BANKING SYSTEM, U. S. Before the outbreak of the war, paper currency issued from incorporated independent banks. In 1860 there were in the U. S. 1562 Banks, having an aggregate capital of $421,880,000, and a circulation of $207,104,400. In 1861-2 many banks were compelled to suspend payments. The government established by act of Congress

Feb. 25, 1863, a uniform national banking system. An additional act was passed June 3, 1864. In Jan, 1866, there were 1,579 National Banks. Capital, $403,350,000. Circulation, $213,000,000. These Banks deposit bonds with the U. S. Treasury to the extent of one third of their capital. There are 14 cities containing 218 Banks, which are selected as points of redemption. Jan. 1867, the national bank-note circulation was $291,093,294; total currency of the United States (circulation and deposits), $1,496,672,065.

BANK PAYMENTS. Suspension of specie payments by the banks of New England and New York, May 10-16, 1837; legalized for one year by legislature of New York. Banks of Philadelphia, Baltimore, &c., also suspended same month. Specie payments generally suspended in the U. S. 1861.

BANKRUPT LAW, U. S. A general bankrupt law was passed by Congress, April 4, 1800, and repealed 1803. Another was passed Aug. 19, 1841, and repealed 1843. An act "establishing a uniform system of Bankruptcy in the U. S.," passed Congress, March, 1867, and is now in operation (July, 1867), the "Registers in Bankruptcy" throughout the Union having been appointed by Chief Justice Chase, as prescribed in the law.

BAPTISTS IN U. S. In 1858 they had 12,000 churches with about 1,000,000 members. In 1762, they had 56 churches only; 1792, 1,000; 1812, 2,432; 1832, 5,322; 1852, 9,500. In 1866 (Baptist Almanac) they had 592 associations, 12,702 churches, 7,867 ordained ministers and 1,043,300 members.

BASTARDS IN THE U. S. A bastard has no inheritable blood in him, and therefore no estate can descend to him. But he may take by testament, if properly described, after he has obtained a name by reputation. This rule has been somewhat mitigated in some of the States, where, by statute, various inheritable qualities have been conferred upon bastards. They may be legitimated by the subsequent marriage of their father and mother. Bowier.

* See Charities, Missions, etc. In New York City, in 1866, there were about 300 religious and benevolent societies, hospitals, dispensaries, asylums, &c. Total receipts of 28 leading societies in 1866, $4,766,698.81. These are national organizations, and the proportion contributed by New York city is from 10 to 15 per cent. The American Board of Foreign Missions, founded 1810, had an income, in 1849, of $260,000, and in 1866, $446,000. American Bible Society, founded 1816, income in 1849, $284,000; in 1866, $734,000. American Tract Society founded in 1814, income, 1849, $308,428. American Home Missionary Society, founded 1826, income, 1849, $157,000. American Sunday School Union, founded 1814, income, 1849, $207,600, 1860, $234,436.

BIBLIOGRAPHY, THE SCIENCE OF BOOKS. The most important work on English and American bibliography is Allibone's Dictionary of Authors, 2 vols. R. 8vo. 1859-67. In 1866, Mr. John R. Bartlett published the bibliography of the American Civil War, containing 6,073 titles of books and pamphlets relating to that struggle, and issued between 1860-6.

BISHOPS, U. S. A. In 1866, there were 41 Episcopal Bishops in the U. S. Methodist Episcopal Bishops in 1865, numbered 22. Lt. Gen. Polk (Confederate), Protestant Episcopal Bishop, was killed near Kenesaw Mt., Georgia, June 14th, 1864. In 1859 the Catholic Bishops numbered 45.

BLIND, ASYLUMS FOR THE. The number in the U. S. in 1860 was 20. The first one was the "Perkins Institution and New England Asylum," founded at Boston in 1832, by Dr. Howe and Col. Perkins. New York Institute for the Blind, 1832. Philadelphia Institute, 1833. Institute at Columbus, Ohio, 1837. At Raleigh, N. C., 1848. Number of blind persons in the U. S. in 1860, 11,125. Estimated at about the same number in 1866.

BOOK-TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN. Number of new publications in 1850, 4,400. In 1859 there were 5,507 different works entered for copyright, and 4066 volumes and pieces of music. This is an increase of 700 per cent. on the returns of 1838, about 400 per cent. on those of 1836, and about 50 per cent. on those of 1854. In 1864, there were 3,553 works published in London. UNITED STATES. The number of new books recorded as published during one year ending June 30, 1851, was 1261. No accurate statistics have been compiled in recent years. In 1855 the number of new works and new editions recorded as then first published in the U. S. was about 2400. There are in the U. S. (1860) about 3,000 booksellers and 400 publishers. In 1864, there were 2,028 distinct publications; in 1865, 1,802, of which about 80 were histories and stories of the late War. The increased value of paper and labor has raised the price of books very materially since 1863-4, an average increase of more than 60 per cent.

BOSTON, the capital of Mass., founded in August, 1630. Here commenced the American Revolution. British soldiers fired on the people, 1770. The celebrated "Tea Party" here took place 1773. The port closed by parliament, 1774. British army evacuated Boston March, 1776. [See Lexington and Bunker Hill.] The cause of American freedom was nowhere more actively sustained than by the people of Boston. Benj. Franklin was born here Jan. 17, 1706. John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a Bostonian. Boston incorporated as a city, 1822. Population in 1700, 7000; in 1790, 18,038; in 1810, 33,250; in 1820, 43,298; in 1830, 61,391; in 1845, 114,366. Tonnage of vessels in 1840, 220,243 tons. The population in 1850, was 136,881; in 1855, 160,508; in 1860, 177,902. Free Public Library, a noble institution, first opened 1858. Population in 1867, estimated at 200,000. In 1867, an act was passed by the legislature uniting Roxbury with Boston; this was vetoed by the governor. During the last twelve years, she has spent for teachers, $3,668,000; for school-houses, $1,600,000; incidentals, $1,357,000—a total of $6,629,358, which is claimed to be a larger proportionate expenditure than that of any other city in the world for educational purposes. The salary of the Principals in the several high schools is $4,000.

BOUNDARY QUESTIONS, IN THE UNITED STATES. Award of the king of the Netherlands on the boundary between Maine and the British possessions, Jan. 10, 1841 (rejected by both parties). Collisions between the people of Maine and New Brunswick in the disputed territory on the Aroostook 1838-9, suspended by a mutual agreement between Sir J. Harvey, Governor of New Brunswick, Governor Fairfield, of Maine, and General Scott, of the U. S. army, March 21, 1839. This boundary settled by the Treaty of Washington, 1842. Oregon boundary—49th parallel agreed upon as the northern boundary of the United States, in Oregon, by treaty signed at Washington, June, 1846.

BRAZIL. First steamship line from New York to Brazil, established through the agency of Rev. J. C. Fletcher, 186-. Kidder and Fletcher's work on Brazil (the most comprehensive) published in successive editions 1859-1867. Prof. Agassiz' scientific explorations in Brazil, 1866. Preliminary steps taken to abolish slavery in the empire, April, 1867. The plan is the gradual emancipation of the slaves in 20 years.

BREWERIES, U. S. The number of them in the Northern States in 1860, was 969. In that year 3,235,345 barrels of ale and beer were manufactured. Number in New York State in 1865, 201. Philadelphia has a greater number of breweries than any other city.

BRICKS. In the U. S. very fine bricks come from Baltimore, Philadelphia and Milwaukee, Wis. Number of brickmakers in 1860, 13,700. The time for burning bricks is 3 or 4 days; 16 cords of wood are necessary to 100,000 bricks (Prof. Mather). A patent for pressing brick was granted in 1847 to Mr. Sawyer of Baltimore. A brick-machine patented by Mr. Gard of Chicago, 1866, turns out by steam power 25,000 bricks per day. Number of manufacturing in U. S. in 1860, 1,595. Annual value of products, $10,253,734.

BRIDGES, U. S. The famous natural bridge in Virginia, Rockbridge Co., is 100 feet long over a chasm 215 feet deep. Another in Walker Co., Alabama, 120 feet long and 70 high. There are also two in California, Calaveras Co. remarkable for their immense arches. The finest stone bridge in the U. S. is High Bridge across Harlem river, N. Y.; it is 1,450 feet long, 114 feet high, and is supported on 14 arches. The Schuylkill R. R. bridge at Philadelphia has a single span of 340 feet. The first suspension bridge in the U. S. was built by Mr. Finley about 1800. The Wheeling Bridge over the Ohio, with a span of 1,000 feet, was put up in 1818 and blown down in 1854. The R. R. suspension bridge over the Niagara was built by Mr. Roebling; completed in 1858. Its span is 821 feet; height 245 feet; 14,500 wires are used in the cables. The Covington and Cincinnati suspension bridge is 2,252 feet long. Height of pier, 80 feet; width, 45 feet; size of cable, 12 inches; cost, $1,750,000. The R. R. bridge across the Susquehanna at Havre de Grace is 3273 feet long; completed in 1865, after 4 years work of about 1,000 men. It is a trestle-work with arches, and rests on solid piers sunk in the River. Cost, $1,500,000.

BROOKLYN, on Long Island, but really a suburb of New York, in 1820 had 7,175 inhabitants; in 1830, 15,292; in 1855, consolidated with Williamsburgh; in 1860, 266,661; in 1865, 296,378. In 1866, 2,178 new buildings were erected in the city.

BUILDING SOCIETIES, for mutual benefit of persons of limited means who would build or buy their houses economically, are said to have originated at Kirkcudbright, Scotland. A large number were organized in New York in 1848-9, but they do not appear to have been generally sustained. In 1866-7 they were again revived to a limited extent.

BUNKER HILL, BATTLE OF, (near Boston,) between the British under Howe, and the Americans under Prescott and Putnam, June 17, 1775. British loss, 1,054 killed and wounded; American, 453. The latter obliged to retreat for want of powder. But this, the first important battle of the Revolution, has always justly been regarded as a great victory for the American cause, and is so commemorated by the granite obelisk on the battle-ground, of which the corner-stone was laid by general La Fayette in 1825. It was finished July 23, 1842, at the cost altogether of about $100,000, raised by voluntary contributions. The height is 220 feet. Its completion celebrated by a procession, &c., and an oration by Daniel Webster, president Tyler and 50,000 people present, June 17, 1843.

BUTTONS, IN THE U. S. In 1864, $415,863 worth of buttons were imported to New York. The number of button factories in 1860, in the U. S. was 59; annual value of products, $964,350.

BURGLARY. Defined to be a "breaking into and entering, in the night-time, the dwelling house of another, in which there shall be a human being, with intent to commit some crime." It is punishable by a term of years' imprisonment, which varies in the different States.

C

CABRIOLET. One-horse cabriolets (vulgo, cabs) were introduced in London as public conveyances in 1823, when the number in use was 12. In 1830, they had increased to 165. In 1859 there were in London 5,500 cabs, of which, about 1500 ply on Sunday. Hackney-coaches there are now almost extinct. In 1853 the legal fare was made 6d. per mile. In New York and other American cities, a clumsy style of cab was introduced in 1844-5, but not being a desirable shape they were not popular, and soon disappeared. The carriages known as the "Victoria" and "Brougham" answer the description of the Cabriolet, but the latter term is not used. "Coupées," close carriages drawn by one horse, have been lately introduced as private conveyances, (1867), and a few have appeared in New York for public use.

CABINET, U. S. See Administrations.

CAIRO, U. S. A town at the southern limit of Illinois, situated at the junction of the Mississippi and Ohio, an important military post during the war. First occupied by Illinois troops, April, 1861. Expeditions into the States of Tennessee and Kentucky fitted out at this point, also part of the gunboat flotilla of the Western waters.

CALABRIA. See Naples.

CALIFORNIA, LOWER, discovered by Grigalon, sent by Cortes, the conqueror of Mexico, 1534; explored by Cortes himself, 1536, and by his subordinate Ulloa, 1538. First settlement by Viscaino and a small colony sent out by Philip II. of Spain, 1596. Viscaino explored the coast and founded St. Diego and Monterey, and was the first Spaniard in Upper California, 1602.

CALIFORNIA, UPPER, discovered by Francis Drake, and named New Albion, 1596. The Spanish colonists having been expelled by the ill-used natives, the country was granted by Charles II. of Spain to the Jesuits in 1697. Jesuit missions and Presidios established in New California, 1769. Eighteen missions established up to 1798. California a province of Mexico, 1824; the Mexican governor expelled from Monterey, 1836. California explored by the United States expedition, under Wilkes, co-operating with that of Fremont, overland, in 1841-3. Another expedition under Fremont, 1845-6. Mexican war began 1845. San Francisco taken possession of by Com. Montgomery, July 8, 1845. Com. Stockton takes possession of Upper California May, August, 1846, and institutes United States military government. Movements of General Kearney, Lieutenant Emory, &c, 1846. California secured to the United States by the treaty with Mexico, 1848. Gold placers first discovered on the grounds of Captain Sutter, February, 1848. Great emigration from the United States commenced November, 1848. Convention at Monterey for forming a state constitution, Aug. 31, 1849. Constitution adopted by popular vote, and P. H. Burnett chosen first governor, Dec. 1849. In 1831 the population (Mexican) was estimated at 23,000. By the census of 1850 the number was 92,597; by that of 1852 it was 264,435, of whom only 22,193 were white females. In 1856 the population was 518,380, of whom 336,380 were Americans; 15,000 Mexicans; 10,000 Irish; 10,000 Germans; 2,000 English, and 15,000 various (white) nationalities; 50,000 Chinese; 65,000 Indians. From 1849 to 1847 inclusive, 75,301 Chinese arrived at San Francisco, of whom 17,524 returned during the same time. Population in 1860, 380,000; in 1866, nearly 500,000. In 1865 there were 947 schools in the State and over 100 newspapers and periodicals. From 1848 to 1864, her mines produced $816,500,000. Of this $541,600,000 has been coined at the mints. In 1866, the export of gold was $44,360,000. Over 18,000,000 bushels of cereals were produced in 1863; 17,000,000 vines were growing in 1866, giving 1,252,000 gallons of superior wine.

CALORIC ENGINE. First reduced to practice by John Ericsson in London in 1833, and then considered a success, but not made practically available till 1852. In that year it was introduced in a ship of 2,000 tons, which it propelled from New York to Alexandria in the Potomac, and back in very rough weather February, 1853. This achievement created great excitement in the scientific world, but the speed attained was not commercially sufficient. Subsequently Ericsson devised an engine that for all purposes requiring a moderate power, has proved entirely successful, and is now extensively used in the United States, Cuba, Canada, and in most South American and European States. It is inexplosive, entirely free from danger, consumes but little fuel, and requires no water. Innumerable motors have been planned and patented by men of science during the last hundred years, but the only one (other than steam engines) that has become an article of use and commerce is Ericsson's Caloric Engine, patented in the United States, Dec. 14, 1858. It establishes an epoch in the history of motive power.

CANALS IN THE UNITED STATES. Act for commencing the Great Erie Canal in New York, passed chiefly through the influence of De Witt Clinton, 1817. The canal (363 miles long) completed; a grand celebration, 1825. Chesapeake and Delaware Canal opened, &c., July 4, 1829. The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal (Md.), cost \$10,000,000, completed. The Lachine Canal, in Canada, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles, cost \$235,934 per mile; the Erie Canal cost \$19,679 per mile. Number of miles completed in 1858, 388; cost \$90,000,000. Tolls received from U. S. canals in 1866, \$1,436,639. Number of boats, 485. By the Erie Canal 2,235,700 tons of produce from the West were brought to tide-water.

CANCER. A hospital to receive persons suffering from this fearful disease was founded by Miss Burdett Coutts, at Brompton, near London, on May 30, 1859. Experiments to cure it by acetic acid in progress in New Haven and New York (1866-7).

CANNON, U. S. In 1820 the maximum size of guns in American forts was a 24-pounder; in 1850 the largest was a 10-inch bore, carrying balls of 124 lbs. A volume of reports of experiments in gunmaking was published by the U. S. Ordnance Department in 1856. Just before the rebellion Capt. Parrott invented at West Point a rifled gun of great efficiency. The 10-pounder has a range of 5,000 yards. The 300-pounder can throw a shot of 250 lbs. $5\frac{1}{4}$ miles. The guns invented by Major Rodman during the war have a smooth chamber; calibre, from 8 to 20 inches. The first 20-inch gun was cast at Pittsburg in 1864; weight, 116,000 lbs.; weight of shot, 1,000 lbs.; charge, 100 lbs. of powder. The guns generally in use in the navy were invented by Capt. Dahlgren, U. S. N. The 9 and 11-inch bores are unequalled for powerful effect in close action. An enormous Columbiad is mounted at Fortress Munroe, carrying shot of 525 lbs. weight. From 1861 to 1866 the Ordnance Department (U. S.) provided 7892 cannon for the army and navy. Steel cannon were first manufactured in the U. S. by Mr. N. Ward of New York, June, 1861.

CAPITOL OF THE UNITED STATES. The corner-stone of the original edifice was laid by Washington, Sept. 18, 1793. It was burnt by the British 1814; restored 1818. Corner-stone of the new wings laid by Pres. Fillmore, July, 1851. The present structure is 751 feet long, and covers $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres. The colossal Statue of Freedom, by Crawford, was raised to the top of the dome Dec. 2, 1863. The iron dome cost \$900,000. Up to Nov., 1862, the cost of the marble and the cutting and setting of the same was \$2,402,000.

CAROLINA. See N. and S. Carolina.

CARPET MANUFACTURE. The value of carpets manufactured in Mass. in 1855 was $1,362,000. Carpets imported into the U. S. in 1857, valued at $2,181,290. In 1866 there were 200 carpet manufactories in the country, but of these "only six were capable of producing the fine class of carpeting required in the best houses."

CASUALTIES FOR 1865. During the year 1865, there were 354 fires in the United States where the amount of loss was $20,000 or upwards, at which property was destroyed amounting, as estimated, to $43,139,000. The losses by fire from 1855 to 1865, inclusive, were $214,588,000. During the year there were 183 railroad accidents, by which 335 persons were killed and 1,427 wounded; and 32 steamboat accidents, by which 1,788 were killed and 265 wounded. During the last twelve years there were 1,413 railroad accidents, by which 2,204 were killed and 8,356 wounded; and 324 steamboat accidents, by which 5,372 were killed and 1,579 wounded.

CEMETERIES. Some of the rural cemeteries of the United States, especially that at Mount Auburn, near Boston (opened in 1831), Laurel Hill, Philadelphia (183-), and Greenwood, near New York (1839), are far more beautiful in their natural features than any of those near London or Paris. NATIONAL.—For soldiers of the U. S. who fell in battle or died in the service. In June, 1866, there were 41 National Cemeteries, with 104,528 graves. Ten more were to be added, containing a total of 249,397 graves. The "Antietam National Cemetery" has 8,000 graves, half of them marked "unknown." Provision made by Congress in 1867 for substantial headstones and improvements. Oration delivered by President Lincoln at the dedication of the Gettysburg Cemetery, July 4, 1864. In the suburbs of New York, several new rural cemeteries have been opened—(1840-67)—viz., Woodlawn, Calvary, The Evergreens.

CENSUS OF THE UNITED STATES has been taken at six different periods, viz., 1790, 1800, 1810, 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, and 1860. See Population. The Census is taken by the general government every ten years; that of New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Florida is by those States taken decennially at intermediate periods, thus giving returns every five years. Other States have different periods for a census. In 1865, it was taken in the States of Illinois, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Alabama, Rhode Island, and Iowa. The number of persons employed in taking the U. S. census of 1860 was 4,481; expense to the Government, $1,045,206.

CENSUS REPORTS, U. S. In 1700, the entire population of the Anglo-American colonies was 262,000; in 1750, it was 1,000,000; in 1775, 2,389,300. In 1790, the population of the United States alone was 3,929,827; and in 1860, 31,443,521. Anticipated population in 1900, 107,000,000.

The unimproved lands of the United States, in 1860, amounted to 244,101,818 acres; improved lands, 163,110,720 acres; cash value of the whole estimated at $6,645,045,007.

Estimated product of our manufactures in 1860, $4,000,000,000.

Commercial railroads in the United States, 35,935 miles, costing $1,432,649,000.

City railroads, 402 miles, costing $14,862,840.

Slack-water canals and branches, 118, of which 68 cost $147,393,997.

Real and personal property estimated at $19,089,156,289.

Educational institutions reported, 113,006; teachers, 148,742; students, 5,417,880. Collegiate institutions, 445; students, 54,969. Churches, 54,000.

Newspapers, 4,051; circulation, 928,000,000 copies.

Revolutionary army, from 1775 to 1783, 231,791; vessels, 4.

In 1812, regulars, 32,360; volunteers, 6,000; militia, 30,000; navy, 8 frigates and 170 gun-boats. In 1815, 276 vessels, with 1,636 guns.

In March, 1865, we had 684 vessels of war, with 4,477 guns, many of them of large calibre; and the aggregate number of men raised for the Union armies was 2,688,000. If the Confederate forces be added, the grand total would be reached of 4,000,000 of men at arms—the largest force ever yet raised in any country or age of the world.—Christian Almanac.

CHANCERY. In the U. S. federal courts equity and law are both administered, and this system was adopted by the State of New York in her Constitution of 1846.

CHARITIES OF THE WAR IN THE U. S. A careful statement made of the amount contributed by the people of the loyal states for philanthropic purposes connected with the war, not including the donations for religious or educational objects, gives the following noble record: The total contributions from States, counties, and towns for the aid and relief of soldiers, amounted to $187,209,608 62; the contributions of associations and individuals for the care and comfort of soldiers were $24,044,865 96; for sufferers abroad, $380,040 74; for sufferers by the riots of July, for freedmen and white refugees, $639,633 13: making a grand total, exclusive of expenditures of the government, of $212,274,248 45.

CHARLESTON, S. C., was first settled in 1680. In 1690 a colony of French refugees, exiled in consequence of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, settled in Carolina, and some of them in Charleston: from them are descended many of the most respectable of the inhabitants. At the close of 1779 the city was taken by the British, and held by them until May following. Population in 1790, 16,359; in 1810, 24,711; in 1820, 24,780; in 1830, 30,289; in 1840, 29,261—a decrease of 1,028 in ten years) including 14,673 slaves; Population in 1860, 40,578. A severe fire destroyed the business portion of the city, December 11, 1861; 17 old hulks were sunk by U. S. forces to blockade the channel, December 21, 1861. The city surrendered to National troops, February 18, 1865.

CHATANOOGA, BATTLE OF, U. S. Fought on Nov. 23, 1863, between the Union armies under Gen. Grant, and the Confederates under Gen. Bragg. The Confederates were driven from every position. On the right, Hooker stormed Lookout Mountain, Thomas in the centre carried the rifle pits, Sherman forced the left after hard fighting. On the 25th the whole of Missionary Ridge was in the hands of the Union army, and the enemy completely routed. This has been regarded as one of the most brilliant achievements of the war. Union loss about 4,000; 6,000 Confederate prisoners and 42 guns were captured.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS. The growth of this place has been of a remarkable and extraordinary character. In 1831 it contained about a dozen families. The "town" was organized by the election of five trustees, 1833, there being in all 28 voters. First census, 1837, showed a population of 4,170. Population in 1850 was 28,269; in 1855, it was 83,509. It is now the largest primary grain depot in the world. More than 100 trains of cars arrive and depart daily. Receipts of grain in 1857 were $21,856,000. Population in 1860, 109,260; in 1865, estimated at 180,000. This city is the largest pork-packing depot in the country; 1,000,000 hogs are annually killed and packed here. Loss by fires in Chicago in 1866, $2,457,673.

CHICKAMAUGA, BATTLE OF, U. S. A creek by this name was the scene of a severe battle between the Union and Confederate forces, Sept. 19, 20, 1863. The Union right was completely broken and retreated. The left under Gen. Thomas withstood the fierce assaults of the enemy, and saved the army from a total defeat. Gen. Bragg (Confed.) had been reinforced by Longstreet from Va. Gen. Rosecrans (Union) withdrew to Chattanooga, and acted entirely on the defensive for some time after. The entire Rebel loss, as stated in their papers, 18,000. Union loss, 16,350, and 36 guns.

CHINA TRADE. A large trade is developed with China through the city of San Francisco. "Flour, wheat, lumber, bacon, butter, cheese, lard, wine, and vegetables are exported from that city in increasing quantities." The value of exports from the U. S. to China in 1862, was $4,328,500. In 1866, 2,530,000 lbs. of tea were received through San Francisco; in the same year one shipment reached New York, via California and Panama, in 60 days. In 1867 a regular line of steamers was established between China, Japan and California, owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. of New York. Anson Burlingame appointed U. S. Minister to China, 1861.

CHOLERA. The Cholera visited America again in 1865-6, and was most severe at the West, especially at Chicago, St. Louis, and Nashville. From July to Sept. 1866, there were 573 deaths from this disease in Brooklyn, and 583 in N. Y. city.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, the most populous city west of the Alleghanies in the United States, was founded in 1789, by emigrants from New England and New Jersey. Population in 1795, 500; in 1800, 750; in 1810, 2,540; in 1820, 9,642; in 1830, 24,831; in 1840, 46,338; in 1850, 115,486; in 1860, 161,044.

CIDER. In the State of New York (1865), 591,379 barrels of cider were manufactured.

CIRCULATING LIBRARY. The largest circulating library in the U. S. is the Mercantile of N. Y. city. It contains 86,000 volumes, and has 10,000 members; 12,000 volumes were added in 1866, costing $15,000; 200 copies of the "Court of Joseph II." were bought to supply the demand, and liberal numbers of all new books of general interest.

CLUBS IN THE UNITED STATES. IN NEW YORK: The most important are the Athenæum, founded 1859, in 5th avenue, afterwards in Union square; now (1867) in Madison square; Century, founded in Broadway in 1848, now in 15th street; Eclectic, founded 186-; Jockey, founded 186-; New York, 18-; Travellers', 1865; Union, 5th avenue and 21st street; Union League, founded Feb. 6, 1863, incorporated Feb. 16, 1865; University, founded 1866. The Century and the Athenæum were originated as "associations for the advancement of literature and art." The Union League was started on the basis of "unconditional loyalty" to the government, and to aid in the suppression of treason and rebellion. It was said to have made loyalty "fashionable in the best circles." It raised three regiments of colored troops for the U. S. volunteer forces, and otherwise rendered important services. IN PHILADELPHIA, the Union League Club, founded Dec. 27, 1862, was the foremost of its kind in the U. S. It raised ten regiments for the government. It numbers 2,000 members, and has a magnificent club-house. One of the oldest clubs in Philadelphia was the Wistar. In Boston the Union League Club was founded in 1863.

COAL IN THE UNITED STATES. Lehigh coal from Mauch Chunk, Pennsylvania, first mined and used, 1806. According to Mr. Lyell, the coal strata in Pennsylvania, Ohio, &c., extend 700 miles. The "Statistics of Coal," by R. C. Taylor, published in Philadelphia in 1854, give a full and reliable account of coal products in all parts of the world. The anthracite coal of Pennsylvania was first used by a blacksmith in the Wyoming Valley in 1775. Bituminous coal first mined in U. S. in 1845. Total amount produced in 1860, 6,218,080 tons. Amount of all coals in 1860, 14,333,992 tons. Coal is worked in fifteen of the States. The upper seam of the Pittsburg coal fields is estimated to contain 53,516 million tons. A single lump of coal, weighing 4 tons, was sent to the Paris Exposition of 1867. The area of coal in the U. S. is 206,939 square miles; 470 miles is anthracite in Pennsylvania. The product in 1865 was 22,000,000 tons, of which 10,000,000 was anthracite.

COFFEE AND TEA. The consumption in the United States at different periods is reported by the Secretary of the Treasury thus:

1821.....	Tea, 4,586,223 lbs.....	Coffee, 11,886,063 lbs.
1830.....	" 6,873,691 lbs.....	" 38,363,687 lbs.
1835.....	" 12,331,638 lbs.....	" 91,753,002 lbs.
1842.....	" 13,482,645 lbs.....	" 107,387,507 lbs.
1846.....	" 16,891,020 lbs.....	" 124,336,054 lbs.
1856.....	" 240,676,227 lbs.

In 1867 a company was being organized to introduce the cultivation of coffee in South Florida. The duty on imports of coffee, by tariff of July, 1862, is five cents per pound.

COIN OF THE U. S. The U. S. Mint was established in 1792. The gold coinage consists of double eagles $20, eagles, half-eagles, quarter-eagles, and dollars. Gold dollars were first coined in 1849. The first deposit of California gold for coining was made by Mr. David Carter, 1,804 ounces, Dec. 8, 1848.

COINAGE of the U. S. Mint from 1793 to 1866, inclusive :—

	Gold.	Total.
1793 to 1850, 57½ years,	$117,569,825	$196,354,337
1851 to 1860, 9½ years,	470,838,189	520,115,556
1861 to 1866, 6 years,	257,128,585	271,194,433
Total,	$845,536,599	$987,424,026

COLLEGES IN THE UNITED STATES. The first established was Harvard, at Cambridge, Mass., by John Harvard, 1638; and this is now the most important and best endowed in the United States. The second was William and Mary, in Virginia, 1693. Third, Yale, at New Haven, 1700. Fourth, College of New Jersey, Princeton, 1746. Fifth, Columbia, New York, 1754. Sixth, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, 1755. Seventh, Brown University, Providence, 1764. Eighth, Dartmouth, at Hanover, N. H., 1769. Ninth, Rutgers, New Brunswick, N. J., 1770. These were all prior to the Revolution. The first medical school was that at Philadelphia, founded 1734. The first law school was founded at Litchfield, Conn., 1782. In 1857 there were 118 colleges in the United States; 47 theological schools; 15 law schools; 39 medical schools. See Education, Schools, &c.

COLORADO, U. S. A territory of the U. S. organized March, 1861. Area, 104,000 square miles. Capital, Denver City. In 1862, $12,000,000 in gold was produced from its mines. Population in 1860, 34,230, and about 6,000 Indians. A bill to admit the territory as a state passed Congress, but was vetoed, May, 1863.

COLUMBIA, DISTRICT OF. A tract of country 10 miles square, ceded by Virginia and Maryland to the United States, for the purpose of forming the seat of government. It included the cities of Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria; but in 1843 the latter was ceded to Virginia. Population in 1800, 14,093; in 1840, 43,712, including 8,361 free colored persons, and 4,694 slaves. In 1850, 51,687, including 3,687 slaves; in 1860, 61,403; in 1864, 75,000, including 31,500 blacks. In 1866, 74 colored schools were in operation in the district. Its area is 60 square miles. Population in 1867, 118,800, of whom there were several thousand more women than men. Impartial suffrage bill passed by Congress, admitting colored voters in the district, 1867: first in force at the municipal election of 1867, when colored votes were cast for city officers.

COMMANDERS IN CHIEF, U. S. Army :—

Jacob Brown, 1821.	George B. McClellan, 1861.
Alexander Macomb, 1835.	Henry W. Halleck, 1862.
Winfield Scott, 1841.	U. S. Grant, 1864.

Of the 3,676 failures in 1860, 695 are set down as swindlers; their debts amounting to $10,664,000. In the Northern States, in 1862, the number of failures was 1,652; liabilities, $23,049,300. In 1865, 530; $17,625,000.

COMETS. Two new comets were discovered in 1862; one at Athens, Greece, July 2d, another at Cambridge, Mass., July 18th. Besides these, the regular return of Encke's comet took place in the beginning of the year. In 1863, five new comets were found, none of them in the U. S.; one only was visible to the naked eye with any certainty.

CONCORDANCE. Mrs. Cowden Clarke's Concordance to Shakespeare, a remarkable monument of a woman's intelligent and patient industry, was completed in 1844, after ten years' labor.

CONGRESS, U. S. A. The first Colonial Congress, composed of the delegates from nine of the colonies (Mass., R. I., Conn., N. Y., N. J., Pa., Del., Md., S. C.), met at N. Y. Dec. 7, 1765; Tim. Ruggles, Pres. The Continental Congress met at Phila. Sept. 5th, 1774; again May 10, 1775; adopted Decl. Indep. July 4, 1776; met at Balt. Dec. 20, 1776; at Phila. March 4, 1777; at Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 27, 1777; at York, Pa., Sept. 30, 1777; at Phila. July 30, 1778; at Princeton, June 30, 1783; at Annapolis, Nov. 26, 1783; at Trenton, Nov. 30, 1784; at N. York, Jan. 1785; and that continued to be the place of meeting until the adoption of the constitution, 1789; removed to Phila. 1790; to Washington, 1800. The apportionment made by Congress, March 4, 1862, under the census of 1860, increased the number of Representatives to 242. There were also 9 Delegates from the Territories, who deliberate but have no vote. The Senators in 1860 were 62 in number. Each Senator and Representative is allowed $10,000 compensation for each Congress (two years), deducting for absence (1866). In the 39th Congress there were 52 Senators and 192 Representatives, the Southern States not yet being represented. In the 40th Congress (1867), the same number, with the addition of Senators and Representatives from Tennessee.

CONGRESS, "CONFEDERATE." Delegates from seven Southern States met at Montgomery, Alabama, Feb. 4, 1861, to organize a congress; Howell Cobb, chairman. On the 8th, a constitution was adopted similar to that of the U. S. On the 9th, a President and Vice Pres. were elected for the "Confederacy," Jeff. Davis and Alex. H. Stephens. Virginia was admitted into it May 7, 1861. May 22, it adjourned to meet at Richmond, Va., on July 20, 1861. The Confederate Government was compelled to leave the city in haste, by the approach of the National army, April 3, 1865. Its Congress never assembled again.

CONNECTICUT. One of the U. States: first settled in 1633, at Windsor, by a colony from Massachusetts. Hartford settled by the English in 1635, the Dutch having previously built a fort there which they did not permanently hold. English colony founded at New Haven, 1638. The two colonies of New Haven and Hartford united by a charter of Charles II., in 1655. This charter, when in danger from the tyranny of Andros, was preserved in an oak, near Hartford, since called the Charter Oak. Conn. took an active part in the Revolution; a number of its towns, Danbury, N. London, &c., burnt by the British during that struggle. It became one of the original 13 States, adopting the constitution of the Union in 1788, by a vote of 128 to 40. Population 1713, 17,000; 1790, 237,946; 1810, 261,942; 1830, 297,655; 1840, 309,978; 1850, 370,792; 1860, 460,670.

CONSERVATIVE, U. S. A term used in American politics to denote the opposite of extreme and sectional views. In the Presidential campaign of 1860, Mr. Fillmore was known as the candidate of the "Conservative party," in distinction from the anti-slavery party of the North and the pro-slavery party of the South.

CONSTITUTION OF THE U. S. Adopted by the general convention of delegates from all the (ther) States, May, 1787. Ratified by the several States at different times. See the respective States. The 50th anniversary of Washington's inauguration was celebrated in New York as a jubilee of the constitution, and John Quincy Adams pronounced an oration before the Hist. Soc'y, April 30, 1840. The great amendment to the constitution abolishing slavery in the U. S., passed Congress, Jan. 1865. Three fourths of the States, 27 in number, ratified it, and it became the law of the land, Dec. 18, 1865. Another amendment passed Congress, June 13, 1866, declaring all men to be equal before the law; that Representatives shall be apportioned according to the whole number of persons in each State; that no person who shall have engaged in the insurrection shall hold any office under the U. S. Government; and that the validity of the National debt shall not be questioned nor the Rebel debt recognized. This amendment has not yet (1867) been ratified by three fourths of the States.

CONSULS, U. S. See Ambassadors.

CONTRABANDS, U. S. In May, 1861, some slaves coming into the lines of Gen. Butler at Fort Monroe, Va., he refused to surrender them to their owners on the ground that they were "Contraband of War." Since then the term has been used for "blacks or slaves."

CONTRIBUTIONS, IN AID OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE U. S. (1861-65). See Charities. The contributions from States, counties, and towns for the aid and relief of Union soldiers, amounted to $187,209,608. The contributions of associations and individuals for the care and comfort of soldiers were $24,044 865: for sufferers abroad, $380,040: for sufferers by the riots of July, for freedmen and white refugees, $639,633. Total voluntary contributions of the people of the loyal States, $212,274,248. The famous Sanitary and Christian Commissions, in which hundreds volunteered their services for the relief of soldiers, were of invaluable assistance to the Government during the war.

CONVENTIONS IN THE U. S. In Feb. 1861, a Convention of distinguished men from the States met at Washington, D. C., as a Peace Conference to propose compromise measures between the North and South. Their propositions were referred to Congress, which rejected them, however.

COPYRIGHT IN UNITED STATES. The first act for the protection of literary property in the United States, passed chiefly through the influence of Noah Webster, the lexicographer, May 31, 1790. Another act in relation to it, April 29, 1802—granting copyright for 14 years, subject to renewal for 14 years if the author is living. Memorial of 56 British authors asking for International Copyright, presented in the Senate by Mr. Clay, Feb. 1, 1837. Act to establish the Smithsonian Institute, requiring that copies of books to secure the copyright must be deposited in there as well as in the library of Congress, and office of Sec. State, Aug. 10, 1846. This act modified so that the copy must be sent to the library of Congress. The law of 1831 gives an author exclusive right to his works for 28 years, and a right of renewal to himself, his wife and children for 14 years more, making 42 years in all. No foreigner can secure a copyright unless residing in the U. S. So far (1867) the American Government has refused or failed to respond to the British offer of reciprocity in literary copyright. A treaty for this purpose was framed by Mr. Everett in 1854, but never acted upon.

COPYRIGHT OF BOOKS, PRODUCE OF. The most profitable copyrights in the U. S. have been those on school-text-books, many of which have yielded large sums to the authors. Of literary and historical works the most profitable have been the works of Prescott, Bancroft, Irving, Longfellow, Kane, Mrs. Stowe, and the several Histories of the late Rebellion.

COPYRIGHT, INTERNATIONAL. In England in 1838 and 1852 acts were passed to secure to authors, in certain cases, the benefit of international copyright (1 & 2 Vict. c. 59 & 15 Vict. c. 12), and conventions were in consequence entered into with France, Russia, Saxony, &c. Up to 1854, American and other authors were (informally) allowed a copyright in England when their works were first or simultaneously published there; but the House of Lords, in the case of Jeffrey vs. Boosey, decided in 1854 that the privilege should be enjoyed only by authors of those nations which reciprocated it, unless the author resides in England.

CORINTH, U. S., a town in northern Mississippi; important during the war as a military position. After the battle of Pittsburg Landing Gen. Beauregard (Confed.) entrenched himself there and was partially besieged by U. S. forces under Gen. Halleck. Heavy fighting there May 27, 1862. The place was evacuated by the Rebels, May 29, 1862.

CORN (INDIAN), U. S. See Agriculture. The monthly report of agriculture for December contains a final estimate of the corn crop of 1866. The total result is 880,000,000 bushels. Corn used for fuel in Iowa in 1865. It is said to give as much heat per bushel as coal. Exports of corn in 1866 amounted to $12,299,879.

COSTUME. An attempt to introduce a semi-masculine female costume known as Bloomers (from Mrs. Bloomer, of Seneca, N. Y.) was made in 184—, but with very limited success. It was overshadowed by the other extreme, the crinoline, ascribed to the empress Eugenie, originating a few months before the birth of the heir to the French throne (about 1854). The latter was the prevailing fashion until 1866-7, when it was superseded by a walking dress with a very small expansion.

COTTON, U. S. The exports of cotton since 1821, have thus advanced (stated in millions of pounds weight):—

1830	298	9	1860	1767	11
1849	1026	6	1862	5	23½
1850	635	11	1863	11	66
1855	1098	8	1864	10½	83
1856	1351	9	1865	6½	88
1858	1118	11

Total value of cotton exported in 39 years, 2383 millions of dollars. Value in 1859, 161 millions. The ratios of cotton imported by Great Britain in the 5 years 1844-9, were as follows: U. States 78½ per cent; India 10½; Brazil 7; Egypt 3½; W. Indies, &c. ½ per cent. In England a cotton supply association to obtain from Africa, India, &c., was formed at Manchester about 1857. Lieut. Burton, who explored the interior of Africa in 1859, states that cotton grows there in great profusion, and a decent kind of cotton cloth is manufactured by the natives. In the U. S. the estimates show a total product of 1,750,000 bales of 400 pounds each in 1866. The estimates are made up as follows: North Carolina, 91,000 bales; South Carolina 152,000; Georgia, 205,000; Florida, 36,000; Alabama, 220,000; Mississippi, 270,000; Louisiana, 100,000; Texas, 300,000; Arkansas, 182,000; Tennessee, 148,000; other States, 87,000 bales. In 1860 the product of the U. S. was 5,198,077 bales. Revenue to the Government from the production of cotton in 1866, $18,409,655. Exports of cotton in 1866 amounted to $281,385,223. Imports of cotton manufactures in 1866, $30,166,300.

COTTON SPINDLES in operation in Europe and America, 1851. The following was the estimated number of spindles in actual operation: Great Britain, 17,000,500; France, 4,300,000; Zollverein States, 815,000; Russia, 700,000; Switzerland, 650,000; Belgium, 420,000; Spain, 300,000; Italy, 300,000. Total, 27,485,000

In the U. S. in 1850, the number of spindles employed in the five New England States was 2,751,078 ; in 11 other States, 236,480. Number of spindles in the whole country in 1860, 5,235,727.

COTTON-GIN. This invention, in 1793, by Eli Whitney of New Haven, gave an extraordinary impetus to the culture of cotton in the U. S. It cleans and prepares 300 lbs. per day ; by the old mode only a single pound a day could be cleansed.

COURTS-MARTIAL, U. S. By Act of Congress, May 29, 1830, officers commanding distinct posts, and all general officers, can convene Courts-Martial. There are several limitations to the act. The number forming a court is from 5 to 13. Great numbers of these Courts were in session during the late war. In 1866, 8,188 records of Courts-Martial and Military Commissions were received and reviewed at the Bureau of Military Justice, Washington, D. C.

COURT, SUPREME, OF THE U. S. By Act of Congress, July 23, 1866, no vacancy in this Court is to be filled, until the number is reduced to one Chief Justice and six associate Justices. Before this there were eight associate Justices.

The U. S. is divided into nine districts for Circuit Courts.

CRIME, NEW YORK CITY. Who Furnish our Criminals and Paupers. A recent publication states that of the criminals in New York city for twenty-one months, 31,088 were natives of this country, while 89,589 were foreigners ; of whom 60,442 were Irish, 9,488 Germans, and 4,000 English. Of 28,821 persons admitted to the alms-house in ten years, 22,468 were foreigners ; 15,948 were Irish, 1,240 Germans, and 1,297 English. During the same time, of 50,015 admitted to Bellevue hospital, 41,851 were foreigners. Of 4,335 inmates of the lunatic asylum, 3,360 were foreigners. Of 251,344 committed to the city prison, only 59,385 were natives, while 86,431 professed to be members of the church of Rome.—Number of arrests in New York city, in 1865, 39,616.—11,222 were convicted in the court of Special Sessions. During the war, there was a marked diminution of punished crime throughout the country. See Prisons.

CRYSTAL PALACE IN NEW YORK, built chiefly of iron and glass, in form of a cross, with a dome, was commenced Oct. 1852. Exhibition opened to the public (Pres. Pierce being present) August, 1853. The building destroyed by fire, with its contents, as exhibited by Amer. Institute, Sept. 1859.

CUSTOMS (DUTIES) IN THE UNITED STATES. The amounts collected were, in

1789	$4,399,478	1825	$20,098,714	1847	$23,747,864
1800	9,080,938	1830	21,922,391	1-48	31,757,070

1820	15,005,612	1846	26,712,628	1865	179,000,000

D

DAGUERREOTYPES. In 1855 not less than 15,000 persons were engaged in this business in the U. S. In 1867 the number must be nearer 30,000. The art of photography on paper, however, is rapidly superseding the former use of metal plates. See Photography.

DEAF AND DUMB, BLIND, AND INSANE PERSONS, IN THE UNITED STATES. In 1840 there were 6,916 blind persons, or 1 in 2,467 of the population ; 7,659 deaf and dumb, or 1 in 2,228 ; 17,434 insane and idiotic, or 1 in 979. There were in the United States 23 asylums for the insane, with about 2,840 patients. In the United States in 1860 there were 14,269 Deaf and Dumb persons. The Institution for such persons situated at N. Y. City, is the largest for the "instruction of deaf-mutes only, in its accommodations and number of pupils, in the world," (National Almanac). Number of teachers in Dec., 1863, 16, of whom 8 were deaf-mutes. Number of pupils 332. The asylum was founded in 1817. Whole number of graduates 1300. In 1862 there were 22 institutions in the country for the deaf and dumb, with 130 teachers and 2000 pupils. Their annual support requires about $350,000, of which $300,000 is appropriated by the Legislatures of 29 States. Among the most prominent and successful of the philanthropists who have promoted the education and good treatment of the above persons in the United States are Dr. Amariah Brigham, Dr. Butler, and Rev. T. H. Gallaudet, of Hartford ; Dr. S. G. Howe, of Boston.

DEATH. Punishment of, U. S., is inflicted for the crimes of murder, treason, and arson in the first degree. Capital punishment is abolished in the State of Wisconsin.

DEBT, NATIONAL, U S. See National Debt.

DECIMAL SYSTEM of Coinage, Weights, &c., was established in France in 1790, and shortly after in other countries. The subject was brought before the English Parliament in 1824, 1838, 1843, 1853, 1854, 1855. The decimal currency was adopted in Canada, 1858. International Decimal Association formed at London, 1855. Congress of the U. S. passed law legalizing the use of the Metric system in the country, in 1866, without at once substituting it for our present system. It is already used in some arts and trades. By act of Congress, July 27, 1866, the Secretary of the Treasury is to furnish each State with one set of the standard weights and measures of the Metric System.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE. The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence (North Carolina) was passed in May, 1775, two months before that drawn up by Jefferson at Philadelphia.

DEGREES, U. S. Academical degrees are marks of distinction conferred on students, in testimony of their proficiency in arts and sciences. They are of pontifical origin.—Bouvier. Graduates of American colleges are Bachelors of Arts, A. B. By a further course of study for three years, they become Master of Arts, A. M. The title Doctor of Medicine, M. D. is conferred on students on their graduation from Medical schools; but Doctor of Divinity (D. D.), and of Law (LL. D.), is an honorary degree conferred by Faculties on distinguished persons.

DELAWARE. The smallest of the U. States except R. Island. First settled in 1630, by the Swedes and Finns under the patronage of Gustavus Adolphus, and received the name of New Sweden. They were subdued in 1655 by the Dutch, who in turn surrendered it, with New Netherlands, to the English in 1664, and then named Delaware. The Duke of York granted it to Wm. Penn, in 1682, and it remained nominally united to Pennsylvania until 1775. This State bore an honorable part in the Revolution, and suffered much in the struggle. She adopted the Constitution of the U. S. by a unanimous vote in Convention, Dec. 3, 1787. Population,—1790, 59,094; 1840, 78,085; including 2,605 slaves. Population in 1850, 89,242, and 2,290 slaves; in 1860, 110,548, and 1,805 slaves. The Delaware Breakwater, two-thirds of a mile long, cost the Government $2,000,000.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, U. S. Established as a military post by the French, 1670. Came into the possession of the British, 1760. In 1783 surrendered to the United States. In 1812, captured by the British, but evacuated in the same year. In 1805, the town was completely destroyed by fire. It was the capital of the State until 1850. Population in 1865, about 60,000.

DESIGN, ACADEMY OF, OF N. Y. Founded in 1826. A beautiful building, in the Gothic style, was erected in 1863. Architect, P. B. Wight; cost, $150,000. There is an annual exhibition of paintings, lasting from April to July.

DICTIONARY, U. S. Noah Webster's great American Dictionary of the English language, in two quarto volumes, was first published at New Haven, in 1828. It was reprinted in London, under the supervision of E. H. Barker, 1832. The revised edition of Webster's Dictionary, in one volume quarto, was issued by its present proprietors (Messrs. Merriam), in 1844-5. A new and enlarged edition appeared in 1864: it contains 114,000 words, and 3,000 illustrations. Worcester's edition, in quarto, was published in 1860. It is also illustrated, and contains 104,000 words. The former is edited at Yale College, the latter at Cambridge, Mass.

DIPHTHERIA, U. S. The number of deaths by this disease in New York State, from Dec. 1864 to June 1865, was 2942.

DIRECTORY, NEW YORK CITY. The earliest published was in 1786: a small volume of eighty-two pages, printed by Shepherd Kollock, Wall street. The names of the individuals and firms include about 900, and occupy thirty-three pages, the remainder being filled with general statistics of the city, United States Government, Post Office Regulations, &c. In his address, the editor states it was the "first directory ever attempted in this country." The New York Historical Society possesses a complete set from its first publication. The Directory of 1866-7 contains 176,511 names; increase of 10,367 over 1865-6. The volume for 1867-8 contains 177,317 names; a further increase of 806 only.

DISPENSARIES, U. S. There are eleven in New York City. The oldest was founded in 1795. The poor receive treatment and medicine in them free of charge.

DISTILLATION, U. S. The number of Distilleries in the U. S. in 1860 was 1,138, employing a capital of $24,253,000. Number in New York State in 1865, 67. The consumption of distilled spirits in U. S. in 1865 was about 40,000,000 gallons. It appeared in that year that for every three gallons that paid the revenue tax, five evaded the payment. The revenue amounted to $29,198,000.

DIVORCE FOR ADULTERY. In this country adultery is a ground of divorce in all the States. In Massachusetts, Maine, and New Jersey, wilful desertion for five years, and in some other States desertion for two and three years, and some other causes, are ground for divorce. Divorce has been granted most frequently in Vermont, Connecticut, and Indiana. In Connecticut cruel treatment is a ground of absolute divorce. The Ministers of the Gospel in that State have called the attention of the Legislature to the laxity of its Divorce Laws (1867).

DOGS, LAWS ABOUT, U. S. In New York dogs are required to be muzzled during June, July, and August. A reward of fifty cents is given for every dog brought to the pound unmuzzled. Unless redeemed in 24 hours they are drowned. In 1866, 4,819 dogs were drowned in New York City, at an expense of $3,000.

DUELLING. The most noted American duels were these: two during the Revolution, viz., Gen. Charles Lee and Col. John Laurens; and Gen. Cadwallader and Conway (1778). Gen. Greene was challenged by a Capt. Gunn of Georgia, but refused to fight, and his refusal was approved by Washington. Gen. Hamilton killed by Aaron Burr, July 11, 1804. Com. Decatur killed by Com. Barron, March 22, 1820. Henry Clay encountered John Randolph, April 8, 1826. Gen. Jackson killed Mr. Dickinson, and had other duels. Col. Benton killed a Mr. Lucas, and had other duels. Cilley, of Maine, killed by Graves, of Kentucky, both mem. of Cong.), 1838. Dewitt Clinton exchanged five shots with John Swartwout, 1802. See Millingen's Hist. of Duelling, and Sabine's Notes on Duels, 1855.

E

EDUCATION IN THE U. S. has been largely promoted and systematized since 1835 by the efforts and publications of Horace Mann, Henry Barnard, Dan P. Page, Alonzo Potter, Barnas Sears, and others. Am. Inst. of Instruction organized at Boston Aug. 19, 1830, and has held annual meetings since. During the last two years of the war, 1864-5, the very large sum of $848,000 was donated to New England colleges. The New England seminaries for young ladies meanwhile received less than a fiftieth part of the above noble subsidy. The munificent donation of George Peabody ($2,000,000) to promote education in the Southern States was confided to a Board of Trustees, Robert C. Winthrop of Boston, President, 1867; and Barnas Sears, President of Brown University, accepted the general agency of this Trust. See Colleges and Schools.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH. Prof. Morse's services to the world as the originator of the practical application of electro-magnetism to telegraphing, were acknowledged by the French Government in 1859, by the voluntary presentation to him of $80,000 (?); and by public honors and rewards from other governments of Europe in 1860.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH LINES. In 1860, in America, 45,000 miles; in England, 10,000; in France, 8,000; in Germany and Austria, 10,000; in Prussia, 4,000; in Russia, 5,000; in the rest of Europe, 7,650; in India, 5,000; in Australia, 12,000; elsewhere, 500. Total in 1858, 96,350. Over all the lines in the United States the number of messages per year is estimated at 4,000,000. It is supposed that a telegraph could be laid around the globe for less than half the cost of the Erie railroad. See Submarine Telegraph. In the United States the overland line from Missouri to California was completed Oct. 22, 1861. A cable was laid across Chesapeake Bay from Fortress Monroe in 1861. Ninety-five lines of telegraph are laid under American rivers.

EMBARGO IN THE UNITED STATES. Embargo on all vessels in the ports of the United States, passed by Congress with reference to the quarrel with Great Britain after the attack on the U. S. frigate Chesapeake, 1807. Repealed, and non-intercourse act passed, 1809. Embargo again laid for 90 days, April, 1812. War declared June 19, 1812.

EMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES. The total number of alien emigrants who arrived in the U. S. from 1819 to 1856, was 4,212,624. From 1784 to 1819, the number did not probably exceed 150,000; in all, say 5,000,000 arrived from 1784 up to January, 1859. Of this number about 2,600,000 came from Great Britain and Ireland; 1,600,000 from Germany; 200,000 from France; 50,000 from Sweden and Norway; 40,000 from Switzerland, and 18,000 from Holland. (Appleton's Cyclo.) The commission for receiving emigrants at Castle Garden, N. Y. City, was established in 1847. From that time to 1867, 3,658,800 emigrants have landed there. See Aliens.

ENCYCLOPEDIA. The Iconographic Cyclopedic, 6 vols., based on a German work, published at New York, 1853-4. The English Cyclopedic (Charles Knight), based on the Penny Cyclopedic, 1855-60. The 8th edition of Encyclop. Britannica completed 1860. Appleton's Cyclopedic, 1857-62, 16 vols. (N. York). Appleton's "Annual Cyclopedic," begins with the year 1861, and is a complete review of the great events in the world, of each year. The volumes, 1861-5, contain a valuable history of the war.

ENLISTMENT, U. S. The following is a list of the various "calls" for troops by the Government during the war:—

Date of Call.	Number of Men.	Term of Service.	Number obtained.
April 15, 1862	75,000	3 months	93,326
May to June 25, 1862	530,000	3 years	714,213
July 2, 1862	300,000	3 years	431,358
Aug. 4, 1862	300,000	9 months	87,000
Oct. 17, 1863	300,000	3 years	374,807
Feb. 1, 1864	200,000	3 years
March 14, 1864	200,000	3 years	284,021
July 18, 1864	500,000	1-2-3 years	384,882
Dec. 19, 1864	300,000	1-2-3 years	204,568

There were other calls for 30 and 100 days' men. The whole number called for was 2,759,049; total obtained, 2,656,553. By Act of March 3, 1863, called the "Conscription Act," the President was authorized to draft troops. The act provided for an enrollment, a draft, the reception of substitutes, and arrest of deserters. About 3,000,000 men between the ages of 20 and 45 were enrolled. The calls from Oct. 17, 1863, were orders for drafts. But probably not more than 50,000 drafted men performed personal service. Substitutes were obtained. "The Substitute Fund" of the Government, consisting of money paid in as a release from service, and which was used as a "Bounty Fund" for volunteers, amounted to $25,902,029. See Army of U. S.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES. Episcopacy established in New York by law, 1693; introduced into Connecticut, 1706. The first bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America were Bishops White of Pennsylvania and Provost of New York, consecrated in London, 1787. First Episcopal convention, 1789. Bishops of Vermont, New Jersey, Kentucky, and Ohio consecrated at New York, Nov. 2, 1832.

EQUITY COURTS OF U. S. In New England, New York, and several other States, the same Judge may try cases of Equity as well as of Law. There are no Chancellors in these States. In New York the distinction between "actions at law and suits in equity," was abolished in 1849. In New Jersey, Delaware, and other States, the English form of Chancery Courts and practice is still preserved (1867).

ESQUIRE, TITLE OF, U. S. A title applied by courtesy to officers of almost every description, to members of the bar, and others. No one is entitled to it by law, and, therefore, it confers no distinction in law.—Bowyer.

ETHNOLOGY. The study of the relations of the different divisions of mankind to each other. It is of recent origin. Balbi's Ethnographic Atlas was published in 1826, and Dr.

Prichard's great work, Researches on the Physical History of Mankind, 1841-7. The London Ethnological Society, established in 1843, publishes its transactions. Dr. R. S. Latham's works, on the Ethnology of the British Empire, appeared in 1851-2. The American Ethnological Society was founded in New York in 184-. Albert Gallatin was its first president. It has published 3 or 4 vols. of "Transactions." The works of Schoolcraft on the history of American Indians are copious and valuable. The belief in the original unity of the human race has been opposed in the works of Nott and Gliddon (Ethnological Researches), Agassiz and others, 1854-9. Mr. George Peabody, in 1866, donated to Yale College $150,000 to maintain a museum and Professorship of Archæology and Ethnology, also a like amount for the same purpose to Harvard College.

EXCISE LAW, U. S. See Internal Revenue.

EXCHANGE (MERCHANTS') IN NEW YORK. The present building, on the site of the one destroyed in the great fire of 1835, was commenced in 1836, and finished in 1840. It is of blue granite, and cost $1,800,000. In 1864 it was purchased by the U. S. government for use as the Custom House. That of Boston, also of Quincy granite, finished in 1846.

EXPLORING EXPEDITION (U. S.), consisting of the Vincennes, sloop of war; Peacock, ditto; Porpoise, brig; Relief, Flying Fish, and Sea Gull, smaller vessels, under Lieut. Wilkes, U. S. N., sailed from Hampton Roads, Va., Aug. 19th, 1838. Antarctic continent discovered, July 19, 1839. Attack on the Fejees for murdering two of the officers, July 25, 1846. The Peacock lost on the bar of Columbia river, July, 1841. The Vincennes (flag-ship) returned to New York, after an absence of nearly four years, June 11, 1842. Captain Wilkes's Narrative of the Expedition, in 6 vols. imp. 8vo. and quarto, was published in 1845. The scientific reports of the expedition form about 20 quarto and folio volumes.

F

FENIANS (See p. 297). A society of Irishmen in the U. S. and in Ireland, pledged to work for the liberation of Ireland. Organized in 1857. First attracted notice in the U. S. in 1863. In that year, Nov., a Fenian Congress met in Chicago, composed of 200 delegates. In 1865 the regular members of the order numbered 80,000. "Head Centre" Stephens figured conspicuously as the leader. In 1866, Fenian meetings were held all over the country. In the Spring considerable numbers assembled at Buffalo, N. Y., and St. Albans, Vermont, apparently with hostile intentions towards Canada. June 1, 1866, a body of them crossed over and engaged in a skirmish with Canadian troops. They were compelled to re-cross with slight loss. The Fenian officers were arrested by the U. S. government, and the men sent to their homes. In 1867, the excitement over this organization had greatly subsided. Attempts to create a revolt in Ireland proved unsuccessful. Several of the leaders were arrested and tried and condemned to death, but the sentences were commuted to imprisonment for life. This movement was unquestionably originated and carried on by men of Irish birth and immediate descent, and was not an American movement, as indicated by Haydn, p. 297.

FIRES IN THE U. S. The losses by fire from 1855 to 1865 inclusive were $214,588,000. In 1865 there were 354 fires, where the loss was upwards of $20,000, at which property was destroyed to the amount of $43,139,000. The largest fire of late years was at Portland, Maine, July 4, 1866. 1600 buildings were burned; loss, $9,000,000; insurance, $3,500,000. Fire in Nashville, Tenn., July 24, 1866, loss, $1,000,000. Colt's Armory, Hartford, burned, Feb. 8, 1864; loss, $1,000,000. Academy of Music and University Medical College, N. Y., burned, May 21, 1866. Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, March 23, 1866. The Smithsonian Institution, Washington, partially burned Jan. 24, 1865. The Meteorological Department suffered heavily.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS, with steam engines and paid employees. In 1867, the following cities had introduced the new system:—

Steamers.	Men.	Cost.	Steamers.	Men.	Cost.

FIREARMS, U. S. The Sharp's Rifle was the first breech-loader used in this country. During the war, great improvements were made in this branch of ordnance. The Spencer Repeating Rifle, patented in 1860, carries seven cartridges. The Henry Rifle can be fired 15 times before reloading; patented 1861. 120 shots have been fired from it in 5½ minutes, including the time for re-loading. The standard musket used in the U. S. Army, is the Springfield Rifle, muzzle-loader. They are being converted into breech-loaders at the arsenal (1866-7).

FLORIDA, now one of the United States, was discovered by Sebastian Cabot, sailing under the English flag, in 1497. Ponce de Leon, a Spanish adventurer from Hispaniola, explored the country 1512 and 1516. In 1539, Hernando de Soto, who had been an officer under Pizarro, overran the peninsula with an armed force, but most of his followers were cut off a few years after. In 1763, Florida was ceded to Great Britain by Spain, in exchange for Havana. The Spanish reconquered it in 1781, and ceded it to the United States in 1819. It was admitted into the Union in 1845. First war with the Seminoles in Florida in 1818, when General Jackson subdued them. Another protracted and expensive warfare then commenced and continued until 1842. General Jessup, General Taylor, and others, were engaged in it. The Seminole chief, Osceola, was captured, 1837. Population in 1830, 34,723; in 1840, 54,477, including 25,717 slaves. Passed an ordinance of secession from the U. S., Jan. 11, 1861, and seized the U. S. Navy Yard at Pensacola. Population, 1850, 87,445. In 1860, 81,885 free, and 63,800 slaves. Population in 1866, 77,747 white; colored, 62,677, total, 140,424. Wm. Marvin appointed Provisional Governor of the State, July 13, 1865.

FRANKING PRIVILEGE, U. S. This privilege was granted to the widows of Presidents Madison and Harrison. An act granting the same privilege to Mrs. Lincoln, passed Feb. 10, 1866.

FRENCH WAR IN NORTH AMERICA. The first war between France and England, which was carried on also by the American colonies, 1689. The French destroyed Schenectady, N. Y., Casco, Me., &c., 1690; but were defeated by Schuyler at La Prairie, 1691. Peace of Ryswick, 1697. "Queen Anne's war," 1702. French and Indians ravaged Maine, 1703. French and Spanish invade Carolina, 1706. Expedition from New England against the French in Port Royal, 1707; and against Canada, 1710; both failed. Peace of Utrecht, 1713. Another war declared by England, 1744; Louisbourg and Cape Breton taken by the English colonists, 1745. Peace, 1749. French encroachment on English colonies, 1750, leads to the noted French war, 1752-3. Washington's mission, 1754. Braddock's defeat, 1755. Oswego, &c., taken by French, 1756, and Fort William Henry, 1757. Louisbourg taken by the English General Amherst, and Fort Du Quesne by General Forbes, 1758. Ticonderoga, Crown Point, Niagara, and Quebec, taken by the English (Sir W. Johnson and General Wolfe), 1759. Canada surrendered to Great Britain, Sept. 8, 1760, and secured to her by the peace of Paris, 1763. French alliance with the United States, in the war of the revolution, Feb. 6, 1778. French revolution and politics, caused dissensions in the United States, 1793-6. French spoliations on American commerce, 1797.

FUGITIVE SLAVE BILL, introduced in the U. S. Senate by Mr. Mason of Va., and passed, Sept. 1850. It imposed a fine of $1,000 and 6 mos. imprisonment on any person harboring fugitive slaves or aiding their escape. It was declared by the Sup. Court of Wisconsin to be unconstitutional, Feb. 3, 1855. This law was repealed by Congress, June 23, 1864.

G

GEOGRAPHY, U. S. The N. Y. Geographical and Statistical Society was incorporated. April 3, 1852. It publishes occasionally a Journal chiefly of original papers.

GEOLOGY, WORKS ON, U. S. "Geology of the Globe" by Prof. E. Hitchcock, 1853. Prof. St. John's Elements of Geology, 1855. "Text book of Geology," Prof. Dana, 1863. Besides these text books there are many treatises and reports on Geology which are to be found in most of the large libraries in the country, such as Prof. Hall's Geology of New York; Owen's, of Indiana; Percival's, of Wisconsin; Hitchcock's, of Massachusetts; each in quarto volumes.

GEORGIA, one of the United States, was granted by George II. to Gen. Oglethorpe, who with forty followers founded Savannah, Feb. 1, 1733. Savannah taken by the British in the revolutionary war, Dec. 29, 1778; the town and State evacuated by them in July 1782. The State unanimously adopted the Federal Constitution, Jan. 2, 1788. Population in 1790, 82,584; in 1840, 691,392, including 280,944 slaves. Staple commodities, cotton and rice. Population in 1860 (including 462,198 slaves) 1,057,286. Act of "Secession" passed Jan. 19, 1861. Debt of the State in Oct. 1866, $5,706,500.

GETTYSBURG, BATTLE OF, U. S. Fought July 1, 2, 3, 1863, at Gettysburg, Penn. near the Maryland line. Union forces 60,000 and 200 guns; Confederate about 80,000. On the first day the 1st and 11th corps (U. S. forces) were attacked and beaten by the superior numbers of the enemy: Maj. Gen. Reynolds (U. S. A.) killed. On the second day, the 12th, 3d and 2d corps came up, and the whole under command of General Meade formed line on Cemetery Ridge. No fighting until 4. P. M. when a terrible artillery fire was opened by the Rebels, and fierce assaults made on the left and then on the right of the Union Army. The contest was heavy and doubtful until evening, when the enemy retired. On the third day the same furious charging and stubborn resistance was continued. The Union army bravely held its ground, and at night the enemy retreated. Union loss 2,834 killed, 13,709 wounded, 6,643 missing. In the brief campaign which ended with this battle, the Rebels lost 3 guns, 41 standards, 13,621 prisoners, besides an enormous number of killed and wounded. Over 6000 men, loyal and rebel, were buried on the field. The Union victory was of immense importance to the country at that critical period.

GOLD AND SILVER. The exports of gold from the U. S. in recent years were as follows (stated in millions of dollars.)

1850.	1851.	1852.	1853.	1854.	1855.	1856.	1857.	1858.	1859.	1860.	1861.	1862.	1863.	1864.	1865.	1866.

"GREENBACKS," U. S. A term given to legal tender notes issued by the U. S. Treasury, in 1862. So called on account of the green print on their backs. All national bank notes are known by this name. The merit of the green tint is that it cannot be photographed or in any way counterfeited. It was first discovered by a Canadian. The "American Bank Note Company" print the notes.

GUTTA PERCHA is procured from the sap of the Isonandra Gutta, a large forest tree, growing in the Malayan Peninsula, and on the islands near it. Previous to 1844, the very name of gutta percha was unknown to European commerce. In that year two cwt. were shipped experimentally from Singapore. The exportation of gutta percha from that port rose in 1845 to 169 piculs (the picul is 1,330 lbs.); in 1846, to 5,364; in 1847, to 9,292; and in the first seven months of 1848, to 6,768 piculs. In the first four and a half years of the trade, 21,598 piculs of gutta percha, valued at $274,190, were shipped at Singapore, the whole of which were sent to England, with the exception of 15 piculs to Mauritius, 470 to the continent of Europe, and 922 to the United States. The great variety of articles for domestic use, the ornamental arts, &c., to which this material has been applied, has given employment to thousands, not only in the factories of our own and other countries, but also to the gatherers in the Indian Archipelago, with whom it at present constitutes one of their most profitable articles of export. In 1848, S. T. Armstrong, of Brooklyn, N. Y., first applied it for coating telegraph wires. J. J. Craven, of Newark, N. J., claims to have applied it thus at the same time or before. Charles Goodyear used it, in connection with caoutchouc, for various articles of common use; a large boat made of gutta percha was exhibited in New York, 1858.

H

HABEAS CORPUS. The constitution of the U. S. provides that this law (adopted from that of England) "shall not be suspended unless when in case of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it," 1787. President Lincoln authorized Gen. Scott to suspend the privilege if it became necessary, April 27, 1861. In Sept., 1862, it was not allowed to relieve persons arrested by military authority for disloyal practices. The President (authorized by express Act of Congress) proclaimed a general suspension of the privilege of habeas corpus, to "continue throughout the duration of the rebellion," Sept. 15, 1863. C. L. Vallandigham, ex-member of Congress, being arrested for disloyal utterances, was refused the privilege of the writ, and sent into the rebel lines, May, 1863. Great excitement among his friends and sympathisers in the country.

HANOVER. Population in 1864, 1,923,492, of whom 1,584,700 belonged to the Lutheran church, and 226,000 to the Catholic. The army numbered 26,900 men. 3,618 vessels of all kinds composed the merchant navy. This State was annexed to Prussia, Aug., 1866, against its will.

HARPER'S FERRY, Va. A village at the junction of the Potomac and Shenandoah. Population in 1860, about 5,000. The scene of "John Brown's raid." On Oct. 17, 1859, he with 16 white and 5 colored men seized the U. S. arsenal at this point, took 60 citizens prisoners, and gave out as his object "to free the slaves." The insurgents were overcome on the morning of the 18th. Those who did not escape or were not killed, were executed. This affair created intense excitement throughout the country. At the breaking out of the rebellion, Lieut. Jones evacuated and blew up the arsenal, April 18, 1861. Sept. 16, 1862, Col. Miles and 11,000 U. S. troops surrender to "Stonewall Jackson," at Harper's Ferry. In 1867 it was decided not to re-establish the arsenal there.

HARVARD COLLEGE, U. S. Established 1638, at Cambridge, Mass. Denomination, Unitarian. In 1863, it had 44 instructors; 814 students in all departments; 7,440 alumni, of whom 2,679 were living. Value of its buildings and endowments, over $2,000,000. Annual expenses of the University, $130,000. Its commencement occurs the third Wednesday of July. President: Rev. Thomas Hill, D.D.

HEALTH, BOARD OF, N. Y. Act passed by the Legislature of New York, Feb. 26, 1866, establishing a "Board of Health and Sanitary District for the preservation of life and health, and to prevent the spread of disease." It was organized March 5, 1866; Dr. E. B. Dalton, Superintendent. The district includes the counties of New York, King, Westchester, Richmond, and part of Queens. First report, Nov. 1, 1866. It issued 22,592 orders requiring nuisances to be removed. Death rate in New York City, 1 in 33.33; in London, 1 in 45.

HISTORICAL SOCIETIES, U. S. The one in New York City was organized Dec. 10, 1804, and incorporated Feb. 10, 1809. It now numbers nearly 2,000 members. After occupying rooms many years in the New York University Buildings, it was removed in 1857 to a new fire proof building on 2d avenue, corner of 11th street, which was dedicated Nov. 17 of that year. The Society possesses a library of over 30,000 volumes particularly rich in historical works and manuscripts, a choice gallery of paintings, and a collection of antiquities, coins, medals, and charts. Among its collections are a series of large tablets of Assyrian sculpture, the gift of James Lenox, Esq. The Massachusetts Historical Society, founded 1791, is limited to fifty members. This Society has a valuable library, including a very choice collection of books in English literature, bequeathed to it by the late Thomas Dowse, of Cambridgeport, a leather-dresser, whose library was one of the best of its kind in the country. The Massachusetts Historical Society has published about 30 vols. of transactions and historical collections. There are historical societies also in nearly every State in the Union, several of which have valuable collections, and have published transactions.

HOMŒOPATHY. This science—the essential characteristic of which consists in the use of such remedies against any disease as, in a healthy person, would produce a similar but not precisely the same disease its fundamental principle being similia similibus curantur—was introduced by Samuel Hahnemann, a native of Meissen, in Saxony (born April 10, 1755, died at Paris, 1843). The first periodical organ of the system was established 1822. Although violently attacked and ridiculed by "allopathic" practitioners, the system was practised in 1860 by about 1,200 physicians in Europe, and 2,500 in the United States. It has 3 hospitals, 3 colleges, and 3 journals, and about 30 societies in the U. S., and all these are numerous in England, France, and Germany (1861). An attempt to establish a State Homœopathic Hospital, in Connecticut, was strenuously opposed (1866). The matter was compromised, the Legislature allowing the Homœopaths certain rights in the hospitals.

HYDROPATHY. Hydropathic Society formed in London, 1842. First Hydro. establishment in U. S., at 63 Barclay st., N. Y., 1844. Those at New Lebanon, N. Y., and Brattleboro, Vt., opened 1845.

I

ICE TRADE, THE, in the United States, was commenced by Frederick Tudor, of Boston, in 1805, who shipped the first cargo to Martinique and the first to Calcutta, in 1833. The ice-houses of the dealers near Boston at present are capable of containing 141,332 tons. In 1854, Boston shipped 156,540 tons. In New York in 1855, 305,000 tons were stored up. The exports of ice from 1860 to 1866, averaged about 48,000 tons. During the four years ending June 30, 1861, $712,000 worth was exported from the U. S. In 1856, $8,000,000 were invested in the ice trade, giving employment to 8,000 or 10,000 men. Ice is not subject to duty in the U. S. 600,000 tons were provided for the consumption of N. Y. City in 1867.

IDAHO, U. S. Organized as a territory March 3, 1863. Area, 326,373 square miles. Population in 1864 about 24,000. This territory has been settled rapidly by adventurers and gold seekers, within the past few years (1867). Boise City is the capital. Estimated product of gold and silver in 1865, $7,000,000.

ILLINOIS. One of the United States, first settled on the Kaskaskia and Cahokia by the French from Canada. Ceded to Great Britain at the peace of 1763. Chiefly settled by emigrants from other States since 1800. In 1789 it was part of the Northwest territory. In 1809 it was made a separate territory, and 1818 admitted into the Union, being the 23d State. Population in 1810, 12,282; in 1830, 157,575; in 1840, 476,183. It is a free State, and has always been so. The chief products are grain and Indian corn; it has inexhaustible lead-mines. New constitution adopted August 31, 1847. Population in 1850, 851,470; in 1860, 1,691,233. Increase 1840-50, 80 per cent.; 1850-60, 99 per cent. Population in 1865, 2,151,007; gain since 1860 of 459,774. Assessed valuation of property in 1865, $391,683,284. From April 1861 to Jan. 1863 the State placed in the field 119,400 men. Amount expended for school purposes in 1862, $2,007,000. Number of schools 9,811. There are in the State 1 institution for deaf-mutes, 1 for the insane, 1 for the blind.

IMPORTS, U. S. The value of imports during the war greatly decreased. In 1860 they amounted to $362,000,000; in 1862, $205,000,000; in 1865, $234,000,000; in 1866, $437,000,000. See Exports.

INCOME TAX, U. S. Levied by act of Congress July 1, 1862. Tax on incomes from $600 to $10,000, 3 per cent; over $10,000, 5 per cent. Receipts from this source in 1863, $455,741; in 1864, $14,919,280; in 1865, $20,740,451; in 1866, $61,071,932. In 1866 a single merchant of New York paid the sum of $407,125 as a tax on his income for 1865, the income being stated by himself as amounting to $4,071,250; probably the largest personal tax of the kind ever paid. The law of 1866 taxed all incomes over $1,000, 5 per cent.

INDIANA. One of the western United States, first settled at Vincennes by the French; ceded to England at the peace of 1763, but no settlement made by them until 1787. Was part of the N. W. Territory in 1801. Suffered much during the war of 1812. See battle of Tippecanoe. Admitted into the Union in 1816. Population in 1800, 5,641; in 1820, 147,178; in 1840, 685,866; in 1860, 1,350,428. Number of public schools 6,098 in 1862. Common school fund $4,991,202. The State sent 195,147 men to the war. In 1865 the Legislature voted that negroes could be competent witnesses in courts. The "fillibuster" Gen. Morgan invaded the State, July 9, 1863. In 24 hours 60,000 men offered their services to drive him out. He effected no damage and retreated rapidly.

INDIANS, U. S. According to the best data in the possession of the Indian Department, at Washington, there are now (1867) between 320,000 and 350,000 Indians within the limits of the U. S. comprised in about seventy-five tribes and occupying about one hundred localities.

INDIAN WARS, U. S. In the war of the rebellion, the Choctaws, Chicasaws, and Cherokees, took sides with the Confederates. They furnished three regiments. The war upon the plains commenced in April, 1864, in Colorado. It was inaugurated by apparently too hasty action of the U. S. troops towards the Cheyennes. An Indian village was soon destroyed and 40 warriors killed. Fearful massacre of Indians near Fort Lyon, Nov. 28, 1864, by forces under command of Col. Clivington. After this several Indian tribes formed an alliance and committed murders and depredations on the lines of travel. On Dec. 21, 1865, the Sioux massacred a company of soldiers at Fort Kearny. A general Indian War fairly begun in May, 1867. Gen. Sherman takes the management of it into his hands. Gen. Meagher declares war against the Indians of Montana Territory, April 24, 1867.

INSOLVENCY IN THE U. S. In May, 1837, a 'commercial crisis' was at its height. The 'heavy failures' in two months in New York alone amounted to 260, besides countless smaller ones. Failures in New Orleans to the amount of $27,000,000 in two days. In Boston 168 failures from Nov. 1, 1836, to May 12, 1837. New York city Banks all suspended specie payments May 10, 1837. The New England Banks generally, immediately after. See Bankruptcy.

INSURANCE. The marine risks assumed by Insurance Companies of New York alone, in 1860, amounted to $80,379,892; in 1866, they were $378,880,003. The fire risks in 1860, were $1,049,551,594; in 1866, $2,753,493,107. The losses paid in 1866 were $15,312,750.

INSURRECTIONS IN THE UNITED STATES. Shay's Insurrection in Massachusetts, (caused by the scarcity of money and heavy taxes), 1786. Insurrection in Pennsylvania, caused by duties on spirits, 1794. See the accounts of Conspiracies, Massacres, Rebellions, Riots, &c.

INTEREST OF MONEY IN THE UNITED STATES. The rates vary in different States, viz:—In La. five per cent., in Maine, N. H., Vt., Mass., R. I., Conn., N. J., Pa., Del., Md., Va., N.

Ca., Tenn., Ky., Ohio, Ind., Ill., Mo., Ark., and the United States government claims, the rate is six per cent. In N. Y., S. Ca., Mich., and Wis., seven per cent. In Geo., Ala., Miss., and Flor., eight per cent. Laws against usury, with penalty of forfeiting the whole d.b', in Maine, Conn., N. Y., N. J., Penn., Del. Forfeit of the usury and double, treble the usury in 14 other States. Usurious contracts void in Md., N. Ca., Geo., Tenn., Ohio, Ark.

INTERNAL REVENUE, U. S. See Revenue.

IOWA, now one of the United States, once formed part of the French possessions, and was included in the vast tract of country purchased in 1803 under the general name of Louisiana. First purchase of land from the Indians in Iowa was made in 1832. Iowa separated from Wisconsin as a territory, 1838. Admitted into the Union as a State, Dec. 28, 1846. Population in 1840, 42,924; in 1850, 191,881; in 1856, 519,148, and 271 colored; in 1860, 682,000. In 1863 she had 800 miles of railroad completed. Value of the exports from her river ports in 1862, $8,200,000. Population in 1865, 754,732, of whom 3,607 were black. The State furnished 72,300 men for the war. In 1865 the women of Iowa made 14,538,216 pounds of butter, and 1,000,738 of cheese. There are institutions for the insane and blind in the State.

IRON. The value of the annual product of the U. S. in 1860, was about $7,000,000, or about 1,200,000 tons. The quantity of pig iron produced in the U. S. in 1866, was 939,956 tons. 339,764 tons were manufactured into new and re-rolled rails; 129,858 in nails; 946,613 in castings over 10 pounds weight. The mountains of Missouri, it is computed, would yield 1,000,000 tons of wrought iron yearly for 400 years.

J

JAPAN. U. S. exped. under Com. Perry (7 ships of war), entered the Bay of Yeddo, Feb. 1854, to demand protection for American seamen and ships wrecked on the coast, and to effect a treaty of commerce, which was agreed upon, March 31. A British squadron for the same purpose reached Nagasaki, Sept. 1854, and effected a treaty. The Russians followed; and the Dutch made a new treaty, Nov. 9, 1855. Mr. Townsend Harris, consul-general for the U. S., made a new treaty, June 17, 1857, by which Nagasaki, Simoda, and Hakodadi were opened to American trade. Harris was received in Yeddo in 1858, and effected another treaty. Lord Elgin's treaty opening several ports to British trade, Aug. 26, 1858. Death of the Tycoon, August, 1858. Japanese embassy to the U. S. (with attendants, 70 persons), reaches San Francisco, March 28, 1860; Washington, May 14; Philadelphia, June 9; New York, where they were received with a great military display, June 16; embarked for home in U. S. frigate Niagara, July 1; reached Yeddo, Nov. 10, 1860. A troop of Japanese jugglers arrived in the U. S. in 1866. In the spring of 1867, their performances in N. Y. city excited much sensation. Their proprietor is under bonds to return them to Japan in two years. Commissioners from Japan again visited Washington in 1867, and made purchases of large quantities of school books for public schools in Yeddo, and also bought from the government the iron-clad frigate Stonewall, for the sum of $400,000. Ministers of the U. S., England, France, &c., notified May, 1867, that Yeddo and other ports would be opened to foreign nations in Jan., 1868.

JOCKEY CLUBS, U. S. One was organized in N. Y. city in the summer of 1866, by Messrs. Jerome, Belmont, and others. Its object is to improve the breed of horses, and establish a better system of races. A park and course have been laid out at Fordham, near the city, at the expense of Mr. Jerome. The races were inaugurated Sept. 25, 1866. The celebrated horse "Kentucky" won the 4 mile heat in 7.25.

JUDGES IN THE UNITED STATES. Those of the Supreme Court, eight in number, are appointed for life or during good conduct, by the President and Senate. The chief justices of the Supreme Court of the United States have been John Jay, appointed 1789; William Cushing of Mass., 1796; Oliver Ellsworth, 1796; John Marshall, 1801; Roger B. Taney, 1836; Salmon P. Chase, 1864. U. S. Circuit Judges were first appointed 1801. The judges of the several States are thus appointed:—

By the Governor and Legislature, or Senate, or Council, in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Louisiana, Missouri, Indiana, and Michigan. By the Legislature alone, in Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Ohio, and Illinois. By the Governor alone, in Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Kentucky. By popular vote, in Mississippi and in New York, and Maryland. The TERM OF OFFICE of the superior judges is for life (or "during good behavior") in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Kentucky, and Illinois. Until seventy years of age, in Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut. Until sixty-five years of age, in Missouri. For periods varying from two to twelve years, in New Jersey, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan; and for one year in Rhode Island and Vermont. THEY ARE REMOVABLE—By impeachment in fourteen States. By conviction of misconduct in a court of law, in Maryland. By joint resolution of Senate and two-thirds of Assembly, in New York.

K

KANSAS. One of the United States (the 34th), organized as a territory, May, 1854, and by the same act the Missouri Compromise of 1820 was declared "inoperative and void" in both Kansas and Nebraska. Emigrant companies from Mass. began to arrive in July and founded the town of Lawrence. An association formed in Missouri, July 29, to "remove all emigrants" coming "under the auspices of northern emigrant aid societies;" another formed Aug. 12 to introduce slavery. A. H. Reeder of Pa., app. governor, arrived Oct. 6. Election for delegate to Cong., Nov. 29; the polls mobbed by armed bands from Missouri; of 2,871 votes cast 1,729 were estimated illegal. Another election March 20, 1855, similarly controlled. Reeder removed July 26. Wilson Shannon of Ohio, his successor, assumed office Sept. 1. Topeka ("free State") Convention promulgates a Constitution Nov. 11. Collisions with bloodshed between the "free State" and "pro-slavery" people commenced at this time, and continued more or less for many months. Topeka Const. accepted by the people Dec. 15, and under it Charles Robinson chosen governor, Jan. 15, 1856. Armed men from Geo., Alabama, &c., arrived in the territory April, 1856. Report of H. Repes. of U. S. on Kansas affairs, proving fraud and violence of pro-slavery invaders. Robinson arrested for treason, May 5, and imprisoned four months for taking office under Topeka Constitution. Raid of pro-slavery men on the town of Lawrence, May 21. Fight at Potawatamie, May 26, and several other collisions for several months. Free State legislature at Topeka dispersed by U. S. troops under Col. Sumner, July 4. Shannon removed, and John W. Geary of Pa. appointed in his stead Aug. A party led by Ex-Senator Atchison of Mo. repulsed in an attack on Osawatomie Aug. 29. Free State men driven by Missourians from Leavenworth Sept. 1. Robinson and others released on bail Sept. 8, and Geary promising protection to free State men they gave up their arms. Topeka legislature met Jan. 6, 1857; the Speaker and others arrested by U. S. Marshal. Pro-slavery legislature at Lecompton provides for a convention. Geary resigned in consequence of illegal acts of Lecompte, U. S. judge, 1857. Robert J. Walker appointed governor, and F. P. Stanton of Tenn., secretary, June. M. J. Parrott elected delegate to Cong. Lecompton Constitution promulgated, and caused great excitement Dec., 1857. Walker denounces it as a fraud, and resigns because the Const. is approved by the President. J. W. Denver of Calif. app. governor Dec., 1857. Lecompton Const. submitted to the people and repudiated by 10,226 votes. Convention at Wyandot adopts a Const. prohibiting slavery, July 27, which is ratified by the people (4,900 majority), Oct. 4. Under it Charles Robinson chosen governor Dec. 6. A famine and great suffering prevails in the territory 1860, relieved by contributions from many States. Kansas admitted into the Union under the Wyandot Constitution Jan. 29, 1861. Population in 1859, 69,950; in 1860, 143,645. Act establishing an "Agricultural College" passed Jan., 1863. The State furnished 19,500 men to the war. Efforts to advance the internal condition of the State are being made by the legislature every year. Asylums for the deaf, blind, and insane, have been organized.

KENTUCKY, one of the United States, was first explored by Daniel Boone, an enterprising hunter, in 1770. First white settlement near Lexington, 1775. Was a part of Virginia until 1782, when it was made a separate district. Admitted into the Union 1792. Population in 1790, 73,677; in 1810, 406,511; in 1830, 688,844; in 1840, 779,828, including 182,258 slaves. Population in 1850, 771,424 and 210,981 slaves. In 1860, 933,707, and 225,902 slaves. Increase of free persons in 10 years 19 per cent., inc. of slaves 7 per cent. There was a slight decrease of the population, caused by the war, in 1865. The State sent 63,995 white and 20,400 colored soldiers (Union) to the war. Population in 1865, 1,155,668.

L

LANGUAGE. Hon. George P. Marsh, in a lecture, stated that there were nearly 100,000 English words found in use by good writers, but that no single writer employed more than a very small proportion of the whole. Few scholars used as many as 10,000 English words, and ordinary people not more than 3,000. In all Shakespeare there were not 15,000 words, and in all Milton but 8,000. There were but 300 of the Egyptian hieroglyphics.

LAW. The number of lawyers in the United States, in March, 1851, was 21,979, or about one to every fifteen hundred inhabitants. Monthly Law Magazine. Estimating their average receipts at $1,000 per annum, their aggregate income would reach within a fraction of twenty-two millions of dollars. In 1851 there were in New York, 4,740 lawyers; in Pennsylvania, 1,848; in Ohio, 2,031; in Massachusetts, 1,132; in Kentucky, 1,066; and in Georgia, 908. Livingston's Law Register. See Attorneys.

LECTURES, POPULAR, IN THE U. S. They are a prominent source of entertainment and information among the American people. Lectures on all subjects, and by persons of every degree of ability, are delivered in the winter season throughout the country. Prof. Agassiz, of Harvard College, lectured on Geology for $500 a night (1867).

LEGACY DUTY, INTERNAL REVENUE, U. S. By the Revenue laws of 1861-62-63, Legacies were included on the taxable list. A tax of 75 cents to $5 is imposed on "every hundred dollars of the clear value of interest in such property." In 1863, the revenue from legacies to parent, child, &c., was $25,869, to nephew, niece, &c., $11,333, to uncle, &c., $921, to corporations, strangers, &c., $18,470. Total Revenue from legacies and successions in 1864, $310,836; in 1865, $546,703; in 1866, $1,170,979.

LEXINGTON, BATTLE OF. This battle, or rather skirmish, claims distinction as being the first between Great Britain and the American colonies in the war of Independence. The British troops, under Major Pitcairn, sent from Boston to destroy the American stores at Lexington, were attacked by the Americans and 273 of them killed and wounded, April 19, 1775.

LIBEL LAW OF THE U. S. Action for libel lies against the proprietor of a newspaper, edited by another, though the publication was made without the knowledge of such proprietor.

LIBERIA. The number of American Africans in 1860 was about 10,000; natives under jurisdiction of the republic about 250,000. In 1856 the sugar-cane was introduced, and in May, 1860, a cargo of sugar was sent to N. Y. Palm oil reported in 1859, $500,000. A college, several schools, 2 newspapers, and several churches had been established (1859). Population in 1863, 422,000, of whom 16,000 were born in the U. S., and 6,000 rescued from slave-ships. The government is Republican. Capital, Monrovia. Revenue of the Republic in 1861, $149,550.

LIBRARIES IN THE U. S. The number of volumes in the chief public and college libraries in the United States in 1849, was stated to be 1,294,000. The number of libraries is 182. Of these, 43 contain over 10,000 volumes each; 9 over 20,000; and only 2 over 50,000. In 1849, the precedence of the largest as to numbers stood thus:

	Vols.		Vols.
1 Harvard College, including Divinity and Law Schools.....	72,000	6 Mercantile Library, New York.....	30,000*
2 Philadelphia and Loganian Lib.,.....	60,000	7 Georgetown College, D. C.,.....	25,000

5 New York Society Library,.....	32,000	10 Yale College,.....	21,000
		11 Astor Library, New York,.....	20,000†

The number of volumes in the School District libraries of the State of New York, in 1849, was 1,338,848. There were 10,621 school districts, and 1,785 incorporated or private schools. The mercantile libraries, chiefly for merchants' clerks, in the large cities, are of comparatively recent date and of great utility. That in New York was founded in 1820, and contains 30,000 volumes; in Boston, founded 1820, contains 7,637 volumes; in Philadelphia, founded 1822, contains 12,200 volumes. There are similar ones in Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Troy, &c. The public libraries containing over 5,000 volumes, were distributed (according to evidence in the British Museum Report in 1849) thus:

	Vols.		Vols.
1 Alabama had 1 Public Library,.....	6,000	Brought up, had 3,.....	453,609
2 Columbia, Dist. of, had 2,.....	53,000	12 New Jersey,.....	28,500

	453,609		979,656

The above estimate is perhaps below the mark, and does not include school, parish, and town libraries, which are numerous, but of moderate extent. The city of Paris alone has 1,474,000 volumes, in large public libraries; i. e. half as many again as the whole of the United States. LIBRARIES. The Astor Library, founded by the late J. J. Astor, who left, by will, \$400,000 "for the establishment of a public library in New York," "which should be open at all reasonable hours, free of expense, to persons resorting thereto." The original building opened to the public Jan. 9, 1854. Another building of similar style and extent was added by W. B. Astor, 1860. The whole contained in 1860 about 120,000 volumes, including the most valuable, rare, and costly works purchasable. The free Public Library in Boston, opened Sept. 17, 1858, is a noble institution of a similar kind founded at a similar expense by several munificent citizens. It is wholly free to the public, and about 30,000 volumes are provided, which may be taken from the library by any resident of Boston. It is a remarkable fact that these 30,000 volumes had thus been freely loaned to all comers without loss or damage to the amount of \$100 in 2 years. In 1864 there were 104 libraries in the U. S. of over 100,000 volumes distributed among 23 of the States and containing 2,404,000 books, or about $\frac{1}{2}$ the total number in all the public libraries of the country. The Church and Sunday School libraries were estimated to contain from 5 to 6 million volumes. In the work entitled "Private Libraries of New York" (Dr. Wynne) are found notices of over 40 collections of 4000 and 12 with 10,000 volumes (1864). In 1859 the following statistics were compiled: Number of Libraries in the U. S. with volumes reported, 1,297, estimated, 1,563; libraries of common schools, 18,000; Sunday Schools, 30,000; total, 50,890 libraries, number of volumes, 12,720,686. See Circulating Libraries.

LICENSE TAX, U. S. Levied by act of Congress, July 1, 1862. Total receipts from this source in 1863, $6,824,178; in 1864, $7,145,389; in 1865, $12,613,478; in 1866, $18,038,098. In 1865, the largest amount was received from wholesale dealers, $5,428,345. Retail dealers in liquors paid $2,807,225. Receipts from bowling alleys were the smallest, $19,749.

LIGHTHOUSES. In 1859, there were 491 light stations on the coasts of the U. S. including the Pacific and the lakes, the annual cost to gov. being $932,000. The No. of buoys and beacons was about 5000. A large number of the lighthouses from Cape Henry to the Rio Grande were destroyed by the Confederates in the late war.

LONGEVITY, IN THE U. S. In 1860 there were 2960 persons over 100 years of age. In the State of N. Y. (1865) there were 108.

LOTTERIES. In N. Y. and Pa. Lotteries have been declared by law to be "public nuisances," and to be indictable as such. The Am. Art Union was pronounced illegal, as a lottery, 1851. About 1820 there was a lottery at Natchez for building a Presbyterian church. At other times colleges, roads, ferries, hospitals, &c. have been aided by lotteries. They were still tolerated in Maryland, Georgia, and perhaps other States (1861) The "Crosby Opera House" Association, in 1866, was a lottery, in which the "opera house" at Chicago was the principal prize. All who invested received a prize equivalent to their amount immediately on payment. The proprietors made large profits, as subscriptions came in from all parts of the country.

LOUISIANA. One of the U. S. first explored by the French, and received its name in 1862, from M. La Salle, in honor of Louis XIV., and a settlement was attempted in 1684, but failed. In 1699 a more successful attempt was made by M. Iberville, who entered the Miss., and founded a colony. His efforts were followed up by one Crozat, a man of wealth, who held the exclusive trade of the country for a number of years. About the year 1717, he transferred his interest in the province to a chartered company, at the head of which was the notorious John Law, whose national bank and Mississippi speculation involved the ruin of half the French nobility. In 1731, the company resigned the concern to the crown, who, in 1762, ceded the whole of Louisiana to Spain. In 1800, Spain reconveyed the province to the French, of whom it was purchased by the United States, in 1803, for $15,000,000. The purchase included the territory of the United States W. of the Mississippi. In 1812 the present State of Louisiana formed a constitution, and was admitted into the Union. Population in 1810, 76,556; in 1820, 153,407; in 1830, 215,575; in 1840, 352,411, including 168,452 slaves. Population in 1850, 517,762. In 1855, by state census, 587,774, including 244,000 slaves. In 1860, 666,413, including 312,186 slaves. Ordinance of secession from the U. S. passed by Convention, Jan. 26, 1861. Motion to submit the question to the people was defeated by a large majority. The principal portion of the State came under the authority of the Government before the close of the war. Number of men furnished to the Union army, mostly blacks, 40,000. Debt of the State in 1867, $13,358,000.

LUNATICS, U. S. The number of asylums in 1860 was 47; number of insane persons, 24,000; number of idiots, 18,865. Only about one half could be accommodated in the public institutions.

LYNCH LAW, U. S. "A common phrase used to express the vengeance of a mob, inflicting an injury, and committing an outrage upon a person suspected of some offence. In England this is called Lidford Law."—Bowyer.

MAGAZINES, U. S. See Periodicals, Reviews, and Magazines.

MAINE, one of the United States; first permanent settlement in, at Bristol. The district was granted in 1635 to Sir Ferdinand Gorges, who appointed a governor and council. It was purchased of the heirs of Gorges in 1652, by the State of Massachusetts, for $5,334; annexed to Massachusetts, under charter from William and Mary, in 1691; became a separate State in 1820. Population in 1790 was 96,540; in 1810, 228,705; in 1840, 501,793; in 1850, 533,169—increase in 10 years, 16 per cent.; in 1860, 619,958—increase in 10 years, 6½ per cent. The State sent 71,558 men to the war in 1861-5.

MARRIAGE, LAWS OF, U. S. The common law requires no particular ceremony to the valid celebration of marriage. Only the consent of the parties is necessary. In the State of New York marriage is valid if declared before witnesses. In Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and other States, the marriage must be made in the presence of a magistrate or minister.

MARYLAND, one of the middle United States, was originally included in the patent of Virginia, granted under charter to Calvert, Lord Baltimore, in 1632; named in honor of Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I.; first colony were Catholics who settled at St. Mary's, on the Potomac, 1634; free toleration of all religions and creeds granted by Lord Baltimore; Constitution settled in 1650, and again in 1776; the State bore an active part in the Revolution; adopted the Federal Constitution April 28, 1788, by 63 to 12. Population in 1790 was 319,728; in 1810, 380,546; in 1840, 469,232, including 89,485 slaves; in 1850, 533,034, including 74,723 free colored, and 90,368 slaves. Increase in ten years, 24 per cent. In 1860, the population was 646,183, and 85,382 slaves. Increase of free persons in ten years, 11 per cent.; decrease of slaves, 6 per cent. In 1865 the Legislature passed an act refusing all who fought against the Union the right to vote.

MASSACHUSETTS, one of the United States. First settled at Plymouth by a colony of English Puritans from Holland, who landed Dec. 22, 1620. This was called the Plymouth colony. The Massachusetts colony at Salem and Charlestown, in 1628, and Boston, 1630. These colonies united in 1692. The American Revolution originated here, at Boston and vicinity, and this State bore an important and honorable part in the contest. See Boston, Bunker Hill, Lexington, &c. Present State Constitution formed in 1780; revised and altered in 1820; slavery abolished in 1783; Shay's rebellion in this State in 1786; Federal Constitution adopted Feb. 6, 1788, by 187 against 168. Population in 1721, 94,000; in 1790, 388,727; in 1810, 472,040; in 1820, 523,287; in 1840, 737,699; in 1850, 994,514; increase in 10 years, 34 per cent. Population in 1855 (state census), 1,132,369, increase in 5 years, 16 per cent. These returns placed Mass. the 6th in the Union in population. In 1860 the population was 1,231,494. Increase in 10 years, 24 per cent. Total industrial production in 1855, 295 millions of dollars. Exports, 1859, 18 millions. Railroads, 1,602 miles, which cost 63 millions. Number of troops sent to the war in 1861-5, 159,165, of whom about 6,500 were blacks. Population in 1865, 1,267,229.

MATCHES, U. S. The tax on matches, imposed Aug. 1864, is one cent per hundred. The revenue from this source, in 1865, was about $1,000,000.

MEDICAL COLLEGES, U. S. There were 54 medical schools and colleges in the U. S. in 1862. The oldest is the University of Penn. at Phila., 1765.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGES, U. S. Organizations of business men established in the principal cities of the country, for mutual acquaintance and discussion.

METHODISTS. The first Methodist organization in the U. S. was at Baltimore, 1784, Wesley sanctioning it as the "Meth. Episcopal Church of America." Introduced in S. Carolina and Georgia, 1785. Secession of Anti-Episcopal branch, 1830. Secession (on account of the slavery question), of the "Methodist Episcopal Church South," 1844. The northern branch had, in 1860, 956,555 members, and 13,000 preachers, under 51 "annual conferences," 24 colleges, 2 biblical institutes, and 120 seminaries. The "M. E. Church South," in 1845, had 6 bishops, 24 conferences, 330,710 white members, 124,811 colored members, 2,978 Indians. In 1859, the total membership was 721,023, with 21 colleges for males, 28 colleges and 27 high schools for females; and a publishing house at Nashville, which issued 660 million pages in 5 years. The Meth. Prot. Church, in 1858, had 90,000 members, and 2,000 ministers. Number of Methodists in the U. S. in 1863, 1,650,000; number of churches 11,638; ministers, 10,911.

MEXICO. In July, 1863, an assembly of notables in the city of Mexico declared Mexico a moderated monarchy, and offered the crown to Maximilian, arch-duke of Austria, who accepted it; entered the city of Mexico June, 1864; defeated the liberals in several engagements. In the spring of 1867, the French troops who had been sent in 1861, to enforce certain claims made by France, and by whose assistance Maximilian had established himself in Mexico, were withdrawn. The liberals after this regained their lost ground, besieged Maximilian in Queretaro, and compelled his surrender. The Juarez government declared him to be a usurper, and sentenced him to be shot. His execution took place against the protest of all foreign ministers, June 19, 1867. Miramon and Mejia executed as traitors at the same time. A state of anarchy has existed in Mexico for years, and Maximilian's object was to reduce the country to order under a monarchy. The contest was waged with great bitterness and cruelty. City of Mexico surrendered to the Republicans, June, 1867.

MICHIGAN, one of the United States, first settled by the French at Detroit in 1647. Many of the Hurons, a native tribe in this region, were converted to the Catholic faith by the Jesuits. The territory ceded to England by the peace of 1763; made a separate territory of the United States in 1805; admitted into the Union as a State in 1836. During the war of 1812-13, the territory was gained for a time by the British, but it was recovered by General Harrison. Population in 1810 was 4,528; in 1820, 9,048; in 1830, 31,639; in 1840, 212,267. Population in 1850, 399,654; in 1860, 754,291. Increase in 1840-50, 87 per cent.; 1850-60, 89 per cent. Population in 1864, 803,745. 600,000,000 feet of timber were sawed in the State in 1864. Number of men sent to the army in 1861-5, 90,119.

MILITIA, U. S. The militia force of the United States in 1860, as near as can be ascertained from official reports, consisted of 53,589 commissioned officers, and 2,036,520 non-commissioned officers, musicians, artificers, and privates; a total of 2,090,109 men. Since the late war, most of the States have organized their militia into a more efficient system than formerly. Volunteers in the war are exempt from duty for a certain period; in Conn. for 3 years.

MINES, U. S. The famous Hayward gold mine, in Amador county, California, extends 1200 feet below the surface of the earth. In thirteen years, $7,000,000 have been produced from it. The greatest silver mine is known as the "Comstock lode," in Nevada, discovered in 1860. It is owned by about 100 different companies. The length of mining shafts in the West varies from 500 to 1000 feet. The annual yield of gold and silver mines in the U. S. in 1860 was nearly $150,000,000.

MINNESOTA, U. S. Made a territory, 1849; admitted into the Union as a State, 1857. Population, 1850, 6,077; 1860, 176,535; 1865, 248,848. A terrible Indian massacre occurred in this State in August, 1862. The Sioux rose in a body, and commenced a series of fiendish outrages. 500 whites were murdered in cold blood, and millions worth of property destroyed. Their depredations extended over an area of 20,000 square miles in the western part of the State. Gen. Libbey finally checked and defeated them; 2,000 prisoners were taken, of whom 38 were hung as murderers. In Sept. 1862 over 8,000 fugitive whites were receiving aid in Eastern Minnesota.

MINT OF THE UNITED STATES established at Philadelphia, 1792. Branch at New Orleans, 1838; at Charleston, N. C., 1837; at Dahlonga, 1838; at San Francisco, 1854; Assay office at New York, 1854. See Coining.

MISSIONS, PROTESTANT. The number of Protestant missionaries in the world in 1860 was 1369, who are distributed as follows: North America, 125; South America, 11; the Antilles and Guiana, 218; Northern Africa, 6; West Africa, 107; South Africa, 152; Western Asia, 74; India and Ceylon, 419; Burmah and Siam, 39; China, 72; Oceania, 146. To the above must be added 934 assistant missionaries, and 2737 native helpers (1860). Modern missionary effort has given to 20 millions of people the benefits of a written language. 26 dialects of Africa have been thus supplied, and 500,000 persons enjoy oral teaching. See Benevolent Societies.

MISSISSIPPI, one of the United States. First settled by the French at Natchez, and claimed as part of Louisiana, 1716. Colony destroyed by the Indians. The country ceded to Great Britain by the peace of 1763. Part of it belonged to Georgia, and the southern part to Florida. The territory, together with Alabama, constituted the "Mississippi Territory" until 1817, when it was admitted into the Union as a State. Population in 1816, 45,929; in 1830, 136,806; in 1840, 375,651, including 195,211 slaves. This State repudiated $5,000,000 of its bonds in 1839 (?). Population 1850, 606,325; 1860, 791,303; increase from 1840 to 1850, 61 per cent. "Ordinance of Secession" from the U. S. passed Jan. 9, 1861. Wm. D. Sharkey appointed Provisional Governor, June 13, 1865. The delegates of the State Convention petition for the pardon of Jefferson Davis Aug. 1865.

MISSOURI, one of the United States. Was included with Louisiana in the purchase from the French in 1803. Town of St. Louis settled by the French in 1764, but was little more than a trading post until 1804, when the territorial government was formed. Missouri admitted into the Union as a State in 1821, after a long debate on slavery, ending in the Missouri Compromise, which prohibits slavery north and west of Arkansas, but tolerates it in Missouri. Population in 1810, 19,833; in 1830, 140,074; in 1840, 383,702, including 58,240 slaves. In 1850, 682,044, including 87,422 slaves. In 1856, 911,001, including 101,605 slaves. Increase in 10 years, 77 per cent. From 1830 to 1840 it was 133 per cent. Pop. 1860, 1,201,214, including 115,619 slaves. Desperate attempts were made by rebels in this State to effect secession, but they were defeated. This State was the scene of numerous minor conflicts and some important battles, during the slaveholder's war 1861-5. See United States and Battles. War debt, $7,546,575; Common School fund in 1865, $678,660.

MORAVIANS, U. S. In 1863 they numbered 32 ministers, 46 churches, and 5,760 members.

MORMONS. The pretended revelation of the Mormon Scriptures to "Joe Smith," is said to have been made in the State of New York, about 1835. Surrender of a body of 700 Mormons under arms, with their leaders, Joe Smith, Rigdon, &c., to the Missouri militia, under Gen. Atchison, Oct. 28, 1838. Joe Smith and his brother murdered in jail by a mob, June 27, 1844. The Mormon temple at Nauvoo, Illinois, sold to the Ucarians, or Socialists, and the Mormons emigrated to Deseret and California, 1848-9. In Utah, their chief settlement, Brigham Young, their leader, was made Governor by Pres. Fillmore in 1850. The U. S. chief justice being repudiated by Young, and the U. S. laws disowned, Col. Steptoe, U. S. A., was appointed governor in place of Young, and sent with a battalion to enforce the U. S. authority, Aug., 1854. His authority being defied he resigned. Alfred Cummings appointed gov. by Pres. Buchanan, and arrived with 2,500 U. S. troops, Oct. 5. His trains were attacked and open rebellion proclaimed; but in March, 1858, the Mormon leaders submitted and order was restored. Army withdrawn May, 1860. In April, 1851, their elders and preachers were gathering converts to their principles in Italy and Switzerland, and especially among the Waldenses; also in Paris. Their celebrated "Bible," professed to have been delivered to Joe Smith, was really written by Rev. Sol. Spaulding, about 1812, as a supposed history of some ancient mounds in Ashtabula Co., Ohio. The MS. is said to have been borrowed by one of the Mormons, who copied it, and subsequently printed it. In Europe the number of Mormons has been estimated as high as 100,000; and some are reported in Asia, Africa, and Polynesia. Their number in Utah was estimated at 50,000, in 1862, and composed the greater part of the white population. They denominate themselves the "Church of Jesus of the Latter Day Saints." Their church organization is composed of a series of hierarchies, the highest being the First Presidency, consisting of their chief prophet Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, and Daniel H. Wells; next the Twelve Apostles; then the quorums of Seventies, of which there are said to be 62 organized in the territories, each having seven presidents and 63 members; then follow quorums of High-Priests, Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons. A somewhat anomalous office is that of patriarch, which has been conferred on John Smith (son of Hyrum and nephew of their first prophet, Joseph Smith) and on a few others. There is also in each settlement a High-Council, composed of 12 members, and a bishop for each ward, the wards containing from 500 to 1,000 persons. (National Almanac.) Reported schism among the Mormons, 1867.

MORTALITY IN WAR. The Provost-Marshal-General has compiled a complete list of all the deaths in battle and from wounds and disease, of every regiment from all the Northern States during the war. This record shows that 280,751 officers and men lost their lives in the service; of whom, 5,221 commissioned officers and 90,886 enlisted men were killed in action or died of wounds, and 2,321 commissioned officers and 182,329 men died of disease.

MOUNT VERNON. The home of Washington, on the Potomac; purchased for the nation for the sum of $200,000, raised by ladies' associations, originated by Miss Pamela Cunningham, of South Carolina, 1858-60. During the war this place was protected and was undisturbed by the conflict.

MUSIC, U. S. Music seems to have engaged public attention first through the theatre. There was one established at the Capital during Washington's administration; also afterwards at New Orleans. About 1825 an opera troupe appeared in New York, under Signor Garcia, a fine artist. Madame Malbran, his daughter, met with great success as an opera singer. Other Italian troupes followed. Large Opera Houses are at Boston, Brooklyn, New York, New Orleans, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati. Miss Kellogg, the American Prima Donna, first appeared on the stage early in 1861. Her success has been complete. Philharmonic and musical societies are to be found in all large towns of the U. S., and musical concerts are greatly encouraged. The excellence of American Pianos is acknowledged. Among eminent players are Gottschalk, Mason, Mills. About $15,000,000 worth of Pianos are manufactured yearly. See Pianos.

N

NASHVILLE, U. S. The capital of Tenn., occupied by the Union forces, Feb. 23, 1862. Great battle fought here Dec. 15, 1864, between the forces of Gen. Thomas (Union) and Hood (Confederate). The former had been besieged for several days, when he marched out and attacked Hood, taking 16 guns. On the 16th he completely routed him, taking 20 guns. This was the last campaign of the Southern army of the West.

NAVY OF THE UNITED STATES. The first ship of war of the United States was built under the superintendence of the celebrated John Paul Jones, at Portsmouth, N. H., 1781; but the regular navy was commenced by act of Congress, authorizing the building of six frigates, March 30, 1794. The Constitution launched at Boston, Constellation at Baltimore, 1797. In 1860, consisted of 10 ships of the line, 10 frigates, 21 sloops of war, 3 brigs, 8 steamers first class, 6 screw do. 2d class, 15 do. 3d class, 9 side-wheel steamers, 3 store ships, 6 receiving ships. Total, 91 vessels. At the opening of the war in 1861, there were 58 serviceable vessels, with 1,110 guns. The home squadron consisted of but 12 ships, with 187 guns. In 1862 there were 427 vessels and 3,268 guns; in 1863, 588 vessels, 4,443 guns; in 1864, 671 vessels, 4,610 guns. At the close of 1864, there were 62 "iron-clads" completed or on the docks. Total number of seamen in 1861, 7,600; in 1865, 51,500. Since 1861, 208 vessels were commenced, and 418 bought, of which 313 were steamers, costing $18,366,681. Total expenses of Navy department from March 4, 1861, to June 30, 1865, $314,170,960. The first "iron-clad" was the "Monitor," built by Capt. Ericsson at N. Y. in 100 days, completed March 5, 1862. In 1866, the navy was reduced to 278 vessels, 2,351 guns. In commission, 115 vessels, 1,029 guns. Number of seamen in the naval and coast survey service in 1866, 13,600.

NAVAL ACADEMY (U. S.) at Annapolis, Md., founded during the presidency of Mr. Polk, chiefly at the instance of Geo. Bancroft, sec. of the Navy. During the war it was removed to Newport, R. I. It has since been re-established at Annapolis.

NATURALIZATION, LAWS, U. S. By the constitution, Congress has power to establish "one uniform rule of naturalization." Over fifteen different acts have been passed since 1787 on the subject. In 1860, the law required a residence of five years in the country to entitle any one to citizenship. In the city of New York, between 1850 and 1860, about 60,000 persons were naturalized.

NEBRASKA, U. S. Organized as a territory 1854. Capital, Omaha City. Area, about 100,000 square miles. Population in 1860, 28,841; also 5,000 Indians. Admitted into the Union March 1st, 1867.

NEVADA, U. S. Organized as a territory, March 2, 1861. Capital, Carson City. Area about 80,000 square miles. Population, 1860, 50,568, of whom 16,260 were Indians on reservations, and 7,550 tribal Indians. Admitted as a State, Oct. 31, 1864. It is one of the richest mineral States in the Union.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. One of the United States; was first granted to Ferdinando Gorges in 1662, first settled at Dover and Portsmouth in 1623. It came voluntarily under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1641; but was made a separate province by an act of Charles I. in 1679. It was several times afterwards connected with Massachusetts until 1741, since which it has remained a separate State. Constitution formed in 1784, and amended, 1792. Population in 1790 was 141,885; in 1800, 138,858; in 1830, 269,328; in 1840, 284,574; in 1850, 317,976; increase in 10 years, 11 per cent. In 1860, 326,072, increase, 3 per cent. Number of troops furnished to the army in 1861-5, 33,427.

NEW JERSEY. One of the United States; first settled by the Dutch from New York, at Bergen, 1614-20. A Colony of Swedes and Finns on the Delaware, 1627. The province included with New York in the grant by Charles II. to the duke of York in 1664; granted by the duke to lord Berkley and sir George Cartaret, who established a government in 1695. Subdued by the Dutch in 1672, but surrendered by them, 1674; purchased by a company of English emigrants, who formed the first English settlement at Salem, 1674; government surrendered to the crown (in consequence of difficulties about titles, &c.,) and accepted by queen Anne, 1702; continued under royal instead of proprietary government until 1776. This State suffered much in the Revolution, and acted an important part. Adopted the Federal Constitution by unanimous vote in 1787. Population in 1732, 47,000; in 1790, 184,189; in 1830, 320,779; in 1840, 373,306; in 1850, 488,552, including 22,269 colored persons; in 1860, 676,084. Increase in 10 years, 35 per cent. Number of troops furnished to the army, (1861-5,) 79,348. Population in 1865, 773,700.

NEW MEXICO, U. S. Ceded to the U. S. in 1848. Organized as a territory, 1850. Capital, Santa Fé. Population in 1860, 83,000; besides 55,100 tribal Indians.

NEW ORLEANS, U. S. The chief city of Louisiana, called the "Crescent City" on account of the circular bend of the river on which it stands. Founded by the French, in 1718. Ceded to the U. S. in 1803. Population then, 8,000; in 1840, 102,000; in 1860, 168,800, of whom 13,300 were slaves. In the war for the Union, New Orleans surrendered to the U. S. forces,—the naval command by Admiral Farragut, and the land forces commanded by Gen. B. F. Butler, April 26, 1862. The misrepresentations as to Butler's "brutal tyranny, especially towards females," as recorded by Haydn, (p. 513), and believed in England, have been long since exploded. Butler superseded in the command of the city and the Department of the Gulf by Gen. N. P. Banks, 1863. Gen. Canby appointed to the post,—1864. Rebel riots against the negroes and their friends, in the "Radical Convention," July, 1866.

NEWPORT, R. I. One of the principal places of summer resort in the U. S. In 1861 the Naval Academy was removed from Annapolis to this place. In 1865 it was re-established at Annapolis.

NEW YORK, CITY OF. Founded by the Dutch, 1614; fort built by them at S. point of the island, 1623; surrendered to the English, 1664; assessed value of all the property in the town in 1668 was £78,231; city taken by the British, 1776; evacuated Nov. 25, 1783; meeting of first United States Congress here, 1783; Washington inaugurated President of the United States, at the City Hall in Wall street, April 30, 1789; yellow fever prevailed here in 1795 and 1805; cholera in 1832, 1834, and 1849. Great fire in the business part of the city, swept over 40 acres, and destroyed property valued at about $20,000,000, Dec. 16, 1835; another in same neighborhood, 1845; the whole district rebuilt and improved shortly after; celebration of the completion of Croton Aqueduct, Oct. 14, 1842. Population in 1790, 33,131; in 1810, 96,373; in 1830, 202,589; in 1840, 312,710; in 1850, 514,547; in 1860, 805,651; in 1865, 726,386. The density of the population is about 32,000 to the square mile, including 1,100 acres of parks. Debt of the city in 1867, $51,000,000. Value of real and personal property in 1865, $608,784,355. On the eleven street railroads in the city of New York there were carried, during the year ending Sept. 30, 1864, the enormous number of 60,323,795 passengers, exceeding that of the previous year by nearly 20,000,000. The earnings of the roads for the same period were $4,623,583, and the expenses $2,821,625.

NORTH CAROLINA. One of the United States. First permanent settlement at Albemarle, by emigrants from Virginia, who fled from religious persecution about 1660. The district granted to Lord Clarendon, who induced the celebrated John Locke to prepare a constitution for it, 1663. The chief magistrate was called the palatine, and there was an hereditary nobility. This constitution abolished, as defective, 1693. The two Carolinas purchased by the crown for £17,500, and divided into North and South, in 1720. The population was as follows:—

	Whites.	Slaves.	Free-Col.	Total.
1810	484,870	245,517	22,732	753,119
1850	553,028	288,748	27,463	869,239
1860	679,965	328,377		1,008,342

It was at Mecklenburgh, in this State, that the first declaration of independence of the British crown was made as early as May, 1775. Ordinance of "secession" passed May 21, 1861. Loss by the State in the war, $250,000,000. Gen. Sherman marched across the State in the spring of 1865. May 29, W. W. Holden was appointed provisional governor. Legislature declared the ordinance of secession "null and void" Oct. 7, 1865.

O

OBSERVATORIES, U. S. The first one was established in the country in 1834 at Washington, for the Naval Depot of Charts. It was equipped with a three and three-quarter inch transit-instrument. In 1835, a five-inch telescope was placed in a tower at Yale College. In 1838, a small observatory was established at Hudson, Ohio, through the exertions of Prof. E. Loomis. In 1840, one at Philadelphia for the "High School." In 1841, one at West Point, for the U. S. Military Academy. Bill to provide for a U. S. Naval Observatory passed Congress, Aug., 1842. In 1844, under the superintendence of Lieut. Gilliss, U. S. N., a building was completed at Camp Hill, Washington, and furnished with European instruments. Lieut. Maury assigned to its charge, Oct., 1844. Capt. Gilliss appointed in 1861, vice Maury absconded. First volume of astronomical observations appeared in 1842, compiled by Lieut. Gilliss. The Dudley Observatory, Albany, N. Y., founded by Mrs. B. Dudley, 1858. The one at Cincinnati founded by Prof. Mitchel, 1843. Cambridge Observatory, 1845. Ann Arbor Observatory, 1854. The Chicago Observatory has the largest telescope in the country. The Yale "Scientific School" has a revolving turret for observations. Telescopes have been mounted at various places by private individuals; the principal one at Nantucket, Mass., under the charge of Miss Mitchel.

OHIO. One of the United States. First permanently settled at Marietta, April 1788; second settlement was Symmes's purchase, 6 miles below Cincinnati, 1789; third by French emigrants at Gallipolis, 1791; fourth by New Englanders, at Cleveland and Conneaut, 1796. First territorial legislature met at Cincinnati, 1799. The Western Reserve, under jurisdiction of Connecticut, was sold by that State for the benefit of her "School fund" in 1800. Ohio formed her State Constitution and was admitted into the Union, 1802. Population in 1790 was 3,000; in 1800, 45,365; in 1810, 230,760; in 1820, 937,637; in 1840, 1,519,467. The total population of this State in 1850, was 1,980,408, viz. white, 1,956,000; colored, 24,300. Farms in cultivation, 143,887; manufacturing establishments producing annually over $500,-110,550; houses, 336,098. Census Returns. In 1850 the wheat crop of Ohio amounted to 30,000,000 bushels. April, 1851, completed 62 years since the first band of white settlers entered Ohio. Population in 1860, 2,377,917; increase in ten years about 20 per cent. Number of men sent to the war in 1861-5, 317,133. In 1866 there were erected in Ohio, at a cost of $4,882,900, 4,850 houses, 1,158 barns, 78 mills, 311 factories.

OIL WELLS, which supply a good burning oil, were discovered at Titusville, Pa., 1859. The first was through 29 feet of earth, and 30 feet of rock. There were in 1861 numerous wells in that vicinity yielding about 15 barrels per day. In August, 1861, the excitement on petroleum increased wonderfully by the discovery of wells which threw up immense quantities of oil in the valley of Oil Creek, Pa. 3000 barrels were obtained from a single well in one day. Wells were discovered later in Ohio, California, Kentucky, and West Virginia. From Penn. in 1860, 2,000,000 galls. were sent to market; in 1861, 20,000,000. In 1862, $60,000,000 worth was exported to foreign countries from the U. S. The yield from the wells of the Oil Creek region was stated to be 5,717 barrels per day in 1862. From 1861-65, Petroleum was the subject of numberless speculations, and fortunes were daily made and lost. In Jan. 1862, the price of refined oil was 40 cents in New York; in Nov. it rose as high as $1 10; in Dec. it fell to 40 cents again. In 1866-7 the petroleum fever had greatly diminished.

OMNIBUSES, U. S. In New York City, in 1866, there were 8 lines of omnibuses with 204 vehicles. Their average number of trips a day is 10 up and 10 down the city.

OREGON. Territory of the United States, on the N. W. coast of America. First visited by the Spaniards under Juan de Fuca, 1592; by Sir Francis Drake, 1578; by Vancouver, 1792. The Columbia river discovered and entered by Capt. Gray, of merchant ship Columbia, of Boston, United States, May 7, 1792; overland expedition of Lewis and Clarke, sent out by Jefferson, 1804-5-6. Missouri Fur Company established at St. Louis, 1808; Pacific Fur Company (J. J. Astor) at New York, 1810; Astoria founded at the mouth of the Columbia, by Astor's colony, 1811; sold to the N. W. Company, 1813; occupied by the British until restored by treaty of Ghent, 1815; operations of the Hudson's Bay Company (English) commenced 1821; the territory divided at the 49th parallel of lat., leaving all north of that line, with the whole of Vancouver's island, to Great Britain, remainder to the United States, by Mr. McLane's treaty, signed at London, ratified by the Senate, 41 to 14, June 18, 1846. Population at that time about 20,000. Territorial government established by the U. S. Congress, Aug. 2-13, 1848. Admitted into the Union 1859. Capital, Salem. Population in 1860, 52,566; in 1865, about 70,000.

OPERA, U. S. See Music.

OPIUM. The Custom-house returns state that in 1858, 300,000 lbs. of opium were imported in the United States, and it is calculated from reliable data that not more than one-tenth of this is used for medicinal purposes. Druggists and physicians say that the habit of taking opiates is very prevalent, and extending every year. The duty on opium is $2.50 per lb.; on opium prepared for smoking, 100 per cent. (acts of Congress, 1864-5).

ORGANS. The largest organ in the U. S. is that in the Music Hall at Boston, Mass., completed 1862. The next largest in H. W. Beecher's church at Brooklyn, 1866.

OYSTER TRADE, U. S. The oyster product of the Chesapeake Bay in 1858 was valued at $20,000,000. From Baltimore, in 1860, $3,500,000 worth was distributed through the country. The trade of the town of Fair Haven, Conn., is almost exclusively devoted to the cultivation and export of oysters.

P

PAINTING, IN THE U. S. The first practising artist of celebrity was John Watson (born in Scotland, 1685), who commenced painting portraits in New Jersey, 1715. Nathaniel Smybert, of Edinburgh, began in Boston, 1728. Benjamin West was the first native American artist; born in Chester County, Pennsylvania, 1708; painted his first portrait in Lancaster, Pa., 1753. John Singleton Copley, born in Boston, 1738; first painted in 1760; he was the father of lord Lyndhurst, lord chancellor of Great Britain. Chas. W. Peale (born in Maryland, 1741), Gilbert Charles Stuart (Rhode Island, 1754), John Trumbull (Connecticut, 1756), William Dunlap (New Jersey, 1766), E. G. Malbone (Rhode Island, 1777), Allston of S. C. and Boston, Morse of New York, historical painters. More recently, Cole, Doughty, and Durand, in landscape, and Inman, Sully, Harding, and Elliot in portrait. In landscape painting during the last 20 years great advances have been made; and the works of Church, Bierstadt, Gifford, and others have won fame and honor beside the best European works. See List of Painters in Biographical Index, also Tuckerman's Book of the Artists, Spooner's Biog. Hist. of Fine Arts, J. J. Jarves, Works, etc.

PALÆONTOLOGY. Prof. James Hall of Albany is the author of an elaborate work on the Palæontology of New York. A Professorship of Palæontology established at Yale College in 1866. It was endowed by Geo. Peabody, Esq.

PAPER. The manufacture of printing and writing papers in the United States has been greatly advanced in the last 20 years. Printing paper is now made, especially in Conn., Mass., Maine, N. J., and Pa., fully equal in quality to the best in England. The amount of capital employed in this business is estimated at $20,000,000. The quantity produced cannot be precisely calculated, but it is now (1867) probably greater than the product of Great Britain. Mass. manufactures more paper than any other State. Number of mills in 1865, 77; value of stock $5,381,671; capital $3,875,000. The materials for making paper in the U. S. are various, such as rags, flax, worn out bagging, cable-rope, straw, hay, henlock, corn-husks, mulberry leaves and bark, canes and reeds. In 1855 there were in the U. S. 750 paper mills, 3,000 engines, producing 280,000,000 lbs., which at 10 cts. per lb. would amount to $28,000,000. The manufacture of printing and stationery papers in 1860 was 153,766,000 lbs. An examination of the returns of the incomes paid by persons and firms interested in the manufacture of paper, in a single collection district of the United States, for the years 1865-'66, gives the following results: Total income of ninety-nine persons, firms, and corporations, $948,988. Of these, one corporation reported an income of $178,000, and ten individuals an aggregate of $314,000; being an average of $31,400 each. The annual value of paper produced in the U. S. is estimated at $17,500,000, nearly as large as in England.

PAPER CURRENCY. In 1857 the Bank of England had $98,800,000, other banks in England, $89,585,000, total, $188,385,000; France, $121,070,000; United States, $148,929,000. In 1863 the circulation of the 1466 Banks in the U. S. was $238,677,218.

PARKS. The great "Central Park," N. Y. city, originated 1851 by the suggestions of the late A. J. Downing, and first officially recommended by A. C. Kingsland, then mayor. It was authorized both by the Common Council and by the Legislature, within 100 days after; and the award of the commissioners of Assessments, made July 2, 1855. The park came into possession of the city, Feb., 1856. It originally extended from 59th to 106th St.: in 1859 it was extended to 110th St., and then included in all 843 acres; being 2½ miles long, ½ mile wide. The cost before extension was $5,444,369, of which $1,657,590 was assessed on adjoining property; the net cost being greater than was ever before known to be expended on a public park. It is now more than twice the size of Hyde Park in London; but of its area 142 acres is occupied by the two Croton reservoirs. Preliminary surveys by Mr. Vielè (1856) were followed by the adoption of plans by Olmsted and Vaux, April 28, 1858, and the appointment of Mr. F. L. Olmsted as Superintendent and "Architect-in-chief." Work on this plan commenced June 1, 1858, since which from 500 to 3500 persons have been employed to this time (1867) under the general direction of commissioners appointed by the Legislature. A park of about equal extent to the "Central Park," is projected but not yet (1867) completed for the city of Brooklyn.

PATENTS, U. S. The Patent Office of the U. S. at Washington, an extensive and imposing edifice, was completed 1858. The number of Patents issued has rapidly increased during the last seventeen years, being nearly nine times as great in 1856 as in 1843. The numbers in some of these years are thus stated :

Years.	Applied for.	Granted.	Years.	Applied for.	Granted.
1843.....	819.....	531.....	1857.....	4771.....	2710.....
1850.....	2193.....	995.....	1858.....	5364.....	3710.....

The receipts of the office increased from $35,315, in 1843, to $245,942, in 1859. Of the patents granted in 1859, 4,491 were to citizens of the U. S. (1,237 being from N. Y.), 23 to British subjects, 16 to French, and 8 to other foreign applicants. Number of patents issued in 1863, 3,887; receipts of the office, $179,378; expenditure, $189,803.

PEABODY FUND, U. S. Mr. George Peabody, the great American banker at London, during a visit to the U. S., donated in 1866-7 the sum of $2,000,000, to be used as an educational fund for the benefit of the Southern States. It was committed to a Board of Trustees, who have absolute discretion as to the manner of its distribution. Dr. Sears, of Brown University, appointed General Agent. The promotion of Primary and Normal School education is to be the leading object. Mr. Peabody delivered over bonds, covering the amount of his gift, March 4, 1867.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the United States. Granted by James II. to William Penn, of the Society of Friends, in 1681. (Previously settled by Swedes and Finns, and conquered by the Dutch in 1654.) A tract of 20,000 acres sold by Penn for £400 to a colony which formed a settlement at Philadelphia. The colony governed by proprietors until the revolution of 1776, when the legislature purchased it, paying the proprietors £130,000 in lieu of quit-rents. Battles of Brandywine and Germantown, and other important actions in this State in the war of independence. See Philadelphia. Federal Constitution adopted in convention, Dec. 13, 1787, by 46 to 23. Continental Congress at Philadelphia, in 1774. United States Congress, 1790 to 1800, when it was removed to Washington. Population of State in 1732, 30,000; 1790, 434,373; in 1800, 602,545; in 1820, 1,049,13; in 1840, 1,724,033; in 1860, 2,906,115. Number of common schools in the State in 1865, 12,950. The State furnished 362,284 soldiers for the war. It had under its care (1866), about 1200 soldiers' orphans, appropriation having been made by the legislature to support such.

PENSIONERS, U. S. The whole number of pensioners of all classes on the rolls in 1860, was 11,585; and the aggregate amount required per annum for their payment, $1,183,141. Of revolutionary soldiers, 165 were on the rolls in 1860. In 1866, only 5 were on the rolls. Congress granted in 1866, to each of these, $300 annuity, in addition to the $100 pension. The war of the rebellion produced a new list of pensioners. The entire number on the rolls, July 1, 1866, was 126,722. The amount paid to them, including expenses of disbursement, was $13,459,996. The Naval Pension Fund amounts to $11,750,000 (1866).

PERIODICAL LITERATURE, U. S. See Reviews and Magazines.

PHILADELPHIA, CITY OF. First surveyed and regulated by the English colony under Penn's grant, in 1682. [The Swedes had settled on Delaware bay in 1627]. Named after a city in Asia Minor, and first laid out with a view to rival ancient Babylon in extent; but the plan was restricted to its present limits by the charter of 1701. First or "Continental" Congress at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1774. The Declaration of Independence adopted, July 4, 1776, in the State House, still standing in Chestnut street. The city taken by the British, Sept. 26, 1777; evacuated by them, June 18, 1778. Convention met here, May 17, 1787, and on 17th of Sept. following, agreed on a constitution for the United States. Yellow fever raged, 1793 and 1798. Congress removed to Philadelphia, 1800. United States Bank established here, 1816. United States Mint, in 1792. Girard College opened, 1846. Population in 1732, 12,000; in 1790, 42,000; in 1810, 96,664; in 1830, 167,811; in 1840, 220,423; in 1850, 340,045; in 1860, 585,529. During the war for the Union, 1861-5, Philadelphia was distinguished for its enthusiastic patriotism and benevolence. Northern troops going to the field were most hospitably entertained by her citizens, and a very liberal and efficient provision was made for the sick and wounded in hospitals, &c. See Clubs.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN THE U. S. M. Gourard, of Paris, first introduced Photography in the U. S. in 1839, exhibiting some daguerreotype views in the course of a lecture at the Broadway Tabernacle, early in that year. Professors Morse, Draper, and Wollcott, simultaneously, before the end of the year, improved Daguerre's process, and during 1840 applied it to portraiture. Ambrotypes were introduced in 1853, and paper photographs in 1851; although very little was done in the business-way until 1854. Early in 1855, Mr. C. D. Fredricks made the first successful life-sized photographs, with an apparatus invented by Mr. H. H. Snelling; and it is mainly to the introduction of this apparatus by Mr. Fredricks, that photography owes its rapid progress and popularity in this country, almost entirely superseding the earlier daguerreotypes. Stereographs were introduced in 1852, but commanded no attention until 1857. Professor Bond, of Cambridge, Mass., first exhibited a photograph of the moon in 1851. Photographs of rapidly moving objects are taken in a fractional part of a second. Ingenious counterfeits of bank notes have been effected by photography.

PHOTO-SCULPTURE has been introduced in New York in 1867, by Messrs. McKaye & Co.; among the earliest specimens are statuettes of Grant, Farragut, Greeley, and others.

PIANO-FORTES. Those made by Steinway of New York, and Chickering of Boston, received the highest award (gold medal), at the Paris Exposition of 1867, July 1. This manufacture has advanced very largely in the last 15 years, and is one of the most important branches of American industry. There are in New York city alone 113 piano-makers (1867).

POLICE. The "Metropolitan Police" law for the city of New York and suburbs, passed 1857, resisted by the mayor (Wood), and a serious collision resulted between the old and new police force, June 16, 1857. The new law pronounced to be constitutional by the Court of Appeals, July 2, and the old force is disbanded next day. The present police force of New York (1867), is unquestionably the most effective and the most perfect that has ever been organized on this continent. In 1866 the police force consisted of 26 captains, 105 sergeants, 42 roundsmen, 60 detailments, 1,250 patrolmen, 56 doormen. There are 26 Police districts. Expense to the city for supporting this force in 1866, $1,836,120.

POLITICAL ECONOMY. In the U. S. the most elaborate works on this subject, are those of Mr. Henry C. Carey, of Phila., who has published (as a protectionist), several volumes which are highly esteemed also in Europe. Works favoring free trade have also been issued here by Opdyke and others. See Free Trade.

POPULATION OF THE U. S. In 1850, 23,191,000; in 1860, 31,429,000. In 1860, the following cities had over 100,000: New York, 805,651; Philadelphia, 585,529; Brooklyn, 266,661; Baltimore, 212,418; Boston, 177,812; New Orleans, 168,675; Cincinnati, 161,044; St. Louis, 160,773; Chicago, 109,260. By an unofficial but accurate census taken by an officer of the government in Dec. 1866, the total population of the U. S. was found to be 34,505,882.

POST-OFFICE IN THE UNITED STATES. The first post-office in the colonies was established in 1710, by act of Parliament for establishing a general post-office for all her majesty's dominions. During the Revolution this department was, of course, controlled by Congress, and the Constitution of the United States, 1789, provided for the continuance of this control—the Postmaster-general being appointed by the President and Senate, as one of the cabinet. For successive Postmasters-General, see Administrations. The following table gives the statistics of the post-offices in the United States at different times since 1790:—

Year.	No. of Post Offices.	Amount of Postage.	Net Revenue.	Extent in miles of Post Roads.

Number of post-offices in 1863, 29,047; mail routes, 139,598 miles; revenue, $11,163,000; expenditures, $11,314,000. In 1865 $12,099,787 worth of postage stamps were sold; $724,135 worth of stamped envelopes; $23,315 worth of stamped wrappers. 467,500,000 letters were conveyed in the mails, of which 2,352,000 were lost or destroyed; number of dead letters, 4,368,000. There were 74,277 money orders issued, of the value of $1,360,122. The revenues of the year 1865 exceeded the highest annual receipts from all the States previous to the rebellion by $6,038,090. Length of postal routes in 1867, 180,900 miles. The revenue of the department for the year ending June 30, 1865, was $14,556,158, and its expenditures $13,694,728; the rate of increase being 17 per cent., and of expenditure 8 per cent., compared with the previous year. Postage stamps to the value of $12,092,787 were sold, also $724,135 worth of stamped envelopes, and $23,315 of stamped wrappers. The average annual increase of the revenue for the last four years over the preceding four years was $3,353,845. The Postmaster-General thinks that in a few years letter postage may be reduced to the rate adopted by Great Britain.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS. On Aug. 2, 1866, 300 new money-order offices were added, making 700 such post-offices. The largest amount that can be sent by any one order is now $50. The fees also have been changed—the charge now being 10 cents on any order from $1 up to $20; and 25 cents on any order over $20.

PRESBYTERIANS. The Presbyterian church in the United States was divided into the "Old School," and the New School, 183-. In 1850, the aggregate No. of churches was 4,584, accommodating 2,040,000 persons. The Presbyterians of the Southern States formed an independent organization, Dec. 1861. The New School assembly in May, 1863, at Phila., passed resolutions "that to support the President and the Government of the U. S. is religiously the duty of all good citizens" in the present crisis. Number of "Old School" Presbyterians May, 1865, who were communicants, 232,450; ministers, 2,301; churches, 2,629. "New School" communicants, 143,645; ministers, 1,694; churches, 1,479. Aggregate in other "schools" in 1862, 200,000. Contributions of "Old School" in 1865, $2,400,000; "New School," $2,200,000.

PRESS, FREEDOM OF THE, U. S. Several papers were mobbed in the North in 1861, for expressing Southern sentiments. The N. Y. "Journal of Commerce," "News," "Day Book," "Freeman's Journal," were complained of by a Grand Jury of the U. S. District Court at New York, as treasonable in their declarations; the Government accordingly refused them the privilege of the mails, Aug. 1861. Orders from the War Department prohibiting the publication of military movements, Feb. 1862. In June, 1863, Gen. Burnside suppressed the "Chicago Times." In 1864, about 35 newspapers were mobbed or suppressed for disloyalty in the Northern States. In 1863 the editors of the N. Y. papers passed resolutions that the restrictions on them were dangerous in their tendency. During the war the Press was free, so long as it did not express treason or give information to the enemy.

PRINTING. In the United States this important art has made great advances during the last 15 years (1867). The best presses of Boston and Cambridge, Mass., of New York, and of Philadelphia, have produced specimens, nearly or perhaps fully equal to the best in England or France. Excellence has been especially aimed at of late in this country, while economy and cheapness have been more studied in England.

PRINTING PRESSES. The largest presses more recently constructed by Hoe & Co., of New York, will throw off 25,000 impressions per hour. These are the "ten-cylinder type-revolving printing machines." Two of these have been supplied to print the London Times, and a similar one is used by four daily newspapers in New York. The cost of each press is about $30,000. Of the eight and six cylinder machines Hoe & Co. have supplied 20 in Great Britain, 4 in Paris, and 2 in Australia! The Adams printing presses are now manufactured by Hoe & Co. Sir Morton Peto, in his book on "American Resources," declares that in Printing Presses, Americans have excelled every European nation. See Type-setting Machines.

PRISONERS during the "Rebellion," U. S. At the close of the war, 174,223 were surrendered by the Confederates to the Union Armies. The Government also had in prisons in the North, 98,800. In 1863 there was a general exchange of prisoners, the U. S. giving up 121,900 in return for 110,800 Union soldiers. During 1863 the Confederates held an excess of prisoners. From 1861 to 1864, 225,000 Union soldiers passed the doors of Libby Prison, Richmond; 35,000 were at one time at Andersonville, Geo. Capt. Wirz (Confederate) tried at Washington, D. C. for inhuman treatment to U. S. prisoners at the latter place, and executed Nov. 10, 1865. Union officers (prisoners) placed under fire of Federal guns at Charleston S. C. in retaliation for bombarding the city, 1864.

PRISONS, U. S. Number of state prisons in 21 Northern States, in 1865, 25. No two are alike in their general construction. Average number of prisoners in them in 1865, 6,650. The Auburn silent system, inaugurated in 1821, is in practice in most of the States. The Amer- ican Prison Discipline Society was founded at Boston, 18—. The Prison Association at New York was founded chiefly by the efforts of Isaac T. Hopper, about 1850.

PRIVATEER. A vessel belonging to one or more private individuals, sailing with a license from Government in time of war, to seize and plunder the ships of the enemy. The practice first became general during the war between Spain and the Netherlands, about the end of the seventeenth century, and was very general during the last French war. Privateering was abolished by the great sovereigns of Europe by treaty, March 30, 1856; but the U. S. government declined to join in this treaty. During the war of 1812 there were 250 privateers commissioned by the U. S. of which 58 were from Baltimore, 55 from New York, 40 from Salem, and 31 from Boston. During that war 2,000 British vessels were captured by the Americans, a large portion being by privateers. About 500 American vessels were captured or destroyed by the British. See Coggeshall's Hist. of Am. Privateers. The thirty-seventh Congress (1863) passed a Letter of Marque Bill enabling the President to cover every sea with Privateers. None were commissioned, the regular navy being sufficiently effective. The Southern Confederacy fitted out about 30 vessels as Privateers. Seven of them proved formidable. They captured 275 vessels of American merchants, 100,000 tons in all, and valued at many millions. The fleetest of these Privateers were of French and British build, and some of them manned by seamen from those nations.

PRIZE MONEY, U. S. From May 1, 1861, to the close of the war in 1865, 1149 Rebel blockade-runners and privateers were captured. Net proceeds for distribution among seamen, $20,501,927. The crew of the Kearsarge which sunk the Alabama (Rebel) in the English Channel, received $300 a piece.

PROPERTY IN THE U. S. In 1856, the real and personal property of the U. S. was estimated by Mr. Guthrie, Sec. of the Treasury, at $11,317,611,672 (more than 11,000 millions). By the census of 1860, this had increased to $14,282,726,088, but this estimate is probably too low. The value of similar property of Great Britain at the same time was about $31,000 millions.

PRUSSIA. War was declared by Prussia and Italy against Austria June, 1866. Bavaria, Saxony, and Hanover sided with Austria. The Prussian army occupied Hanover and Saxony June 17 and 18, 1866. (See Battles, Austrian and Prussian.) Negotiations for an armistice commenced July 12, 1866: Prussian advance in sight of Vienna, July 22. Treaty of Peace signed Aug. 30, 1866. Prussia acquired Hanover, Schleswig-Holstein, Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, Frankfurt, parts of Bavaria, and Hesse-Darmstadt. By these annexations her population became 23,583,000. The strength of Austria remained united, but she paid Prussia $28,000,000. Venetian Province ceded to Italy, Oct. 19, 1866. A vote on the question of annexation of Venetia to Italy was had in that province, resulting in 641,758 affirmative, 68 negative. The King of Italy entered Venice Nov. 7, 1866, amid great demonstrations of joy.

PUBLIC LANDS, U. S. From 1838 to 1860 the sales of public lands reached 122,038,290 acres, which produced $136,401,302 (1860). In Sept. 1863, the amount of surveyed public lands undisposed of was 133,487,495 acres; the quantity disposed of in 1863 was 2,966,690 acres, of which 91,354 were sold for cash, the remainder granted for bounties, railroads, &c.

PUBLIC WORKS, AMERICAN. The Croton Aqueduct carries more water than any other in the world, and is but two miles shorter than the Julian Aqueduct at Rome, the longest in the world. The stone arch over Cabin John's Creek, in the Washington Aqueduct, is about 50 feet longer span than any stone arch in the world. The suspension bridge at Lewiston, and the railroad suspension bridge, both over the Niagara river, have each the largest span in the world. The United States Dry Dock at Brooklyn is not equalled in dimensions, nor surpassed in workmanship, by any of the kind anywhere.

R

RAGGED SCHOOLS. In New York, and other large cities of the United States, "Ragged Schools" have been established by benevolent individuals to the great benefit of many thousand destitute children, who would otherwise have received no instruction. "Mission Schools" also have gathered in thousands from the cellars and gutters, who have been provided not only with oral teaching, but with lodging, food, and raiment. The "Howard Mission" in the Fourth Ward and "Five Points" Missions are of this character.

RAILROADS IN THE UNITED STATES. The first railway in the United States was the Quincy and Boston, to convey granite for Bunker Hill Monument, 1827; Boston and Providence Railroad, opened June 2, 1835; Boston and Lowell, June 27, and Boston and Worcester, July 6, same year; Utica and Schenectady, opened Aug. 1, 1836; Baltimore to Wilmington, July 19, 1837; Providence and Stonington, Nov. 10, 1837; Worcester and Springfield, Mass., Oct. 1, 1839; Housatonic, Feb. 12, 1840. In June, 1859, the length of railways in operation in the United States was stated to be 27,857 miles; cost, $961,047,364. Increase since 1847, 24,057 miles. In 1865, the length of completed railroads was 35,935 miles; cost, $1,432,649,000; cost per mile, $40,000. Pennsylvania had 3,967 miles; Ohio, 3,593; Illinois, 3,206; New York, 2,956. Railway accidents in 1866, 183, in which 335 persons were killed.

RAILWAYS IN CITIES. On the eleven street railroads in the city of New York there were carried, during the year ending Sept. 30, 1864, the enormous number of 60,328,795 passengers, exceeding that of the previous year by nearly 20,000,000. The earnings of the roads for the same period were $4,623,583, and the expense $2,821,625.

RAPE, PUNISHMENT OF, U. S. In New York state the extreme penalty is ten years imprisonment. Military laws impose death on the guilty party. During the rebellion, death was inflicted in several instances, on soldiers convicted of rape.

RECIPROCITY TREATY WITH CANADA. Ratified at Washington, June 5, 1854. It allowed certain privileges of trade to both parties, and either could withdraw from it upon notice of one year. In Dec. 1864, the President was authorized to terminate the treaty. It expired March, 17, 1866. It was argued against the treaty, that under its operation, the balance of trade proved to be against the U. S. One great advantage of it was, that American fishermen could have the same rights as the English in the bays and inlets of Canada and the British Provinces.

REPUBLICAN PARTY, U. S. first appeared as a distinct organization in 1854. The whig party dissolved when the south united on the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and the repudiation of the Missouri Compromise. All who opposed the bill were called "anti-Nebraska," and afterwards "Republicans." In 1854, they carried most of the free state elections. (Greeley's History.) Their first presidential convention was held at Philadelphia, 1856. Gen. Fremont was nominated for president but was defeated. In 1860, Republican Convention at Chicago nominated Abraham Lincoln for president, who was elected. The south considered this a cause for seceding from the Union. In 1864, the vote of the country was overwhelmingly "Republican."

REVENUE OF THE UNITED STATES, THE, up to 1863, was derived chiefly from customs and sales of public lands. The aggregate revenue was, in REVENUE, INTERNAL, U. S. The aggregate revenue from 1789 to 1861, was $1,800,000,000. Between 1817 and 1861 no internal taxes were imposed on the people of the U. S. by the general government. During the years 1861-2-3, Congress passed laws for increased revenue to maintain the war. The Excise law of July 1, 1862, levied a heavy tax on about 500 different articles. The revenue from this source in 1862 to 1866 is stated in above table.

REVIEWS AND MAGAZINES IN THE UNITED STATES. Before the American revolution, various attempts were made to establish religious and literary journals in several places in this country, particularly Boston, New York, and Philadelphia; but no one of them obtained a liberal support, or had a long duration. The following are some of the leading literary and religious reviews and magazines:

REVIEW, MILITARY, U. S. Grand review of a part of the national army at the close of the war, at Washington, D. C., May, 1865. The army of the west under Sherman, and of the east under Meade, reviewed by the President, Cabinet and Gen. Grant. About 200,000 troops marched by the White House, occupying two days. Great numbers of citizens from all parts of the country were present to witness the sight.

RHODE ISLAND, one of the United States; first settled by Roger Williams and his associates, who left Massachusetts to escape religious persecution, and founded the town of Providence, in 1636. Williams obtained a patent from Plymouth Co. in 1644, including Providence Plantations and Rhode Island, which had been settled 1638. New charter by Charles II., in 1663, which has continued in force till recently, unchanged by the Revolution. Dorr's attempt to change or overturn this constitution by armed force, in June, 1842, defeated by the military force of the government. New constitution adopted in convention, September, 1842. Constitution of the United States adopted May 29, 1790; this state being the last to accede to it. Population in 1790, 53,825; in 1810, 76,931; in 1830, 97,212; in 1840, 108,130; in 1860, 174,621; in 1865, 184,695, of whom 112,207 were born in the state. It sent 25,355 soldiers to the war. War debt, $4,000,000.

RICHMOND, Va. Founded in 1742. It became the capital of the State in 1779. Population in 1800, 5,730; in 1830, 16,060; in 1850, 27,570; in 1860, 37,910, of whom 11,700 were slaves. It was distinguished for many years for the eminent men it furnished to the councils of the nation. On the secession of Virginia, Richmond was made the capital of the "Southern Confederacy," June, 1861. During the war it was the main object aimed at by the "Union army of the Potomac." The place was fortified with great skill. It fell April 2, 1865. A severe fire broke out during its evacuation by the Confederates, which consumed the business portion of the city. The notorious "Libby Prison" was situated in Richmond.

RIOTS IN THE U. S. The largest and most alarming was the riot caused by the enforcement of the draft in N. Y. city, July 13, 1863. It lasted three days. The rioters destroyed and burnt property to the amount of $2,500,000. They were finally put down by the police and military. Loss of life estimated at 1,000. Similar but smaller riots occurred in Boston, Portsmouth, and Holmes County, Ohio. Threatened disturbances in many other places. Bread riots in Mobile, Ala., Sept., 1863, by women; also at Salisbury, N. C., March 18, and at Richmond, Va. Riot at New Orleans, July 30, 1866; a State Convention broken up by ex-rebels and policemen; 30 negroes and a few whites killed. Attack on Judge Kelley at a public meeting in Mobile, May, 1867. Attack on negroes at Memphis, 1866.

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES, in 1839, 1849, and 1859; from the Metropolitan Catholic Almanac for 1859:

Dioceses	16	30	48	Churches	418	966	2334
Bishops	18	26	45

The estimated number of Roman Catholics in the U. S., in 1863, was 3,177,000.

RUSSIA, AMERICAN INTERCOURSE WITH. Commercial relations: In 1861, exports from Russia to U. S. were $1,290,000; imports, $800,000. 8,220 tons of shipping from Russia entered U. S. ports; 9,300 tons cleared for Russia. Diplomatic relations between the two countries have been most cordial. July, 1861, the Emperor of Russia communicated to the American Government his sincere hope that the Union would not be dissolved. Resolutions passed Congress May, 1867, congratulating the Emperor on his escape from assassination.

S

SANITARY COMMISSION, U. S. Organized under appointment of the Secretary of War, dated June 9, 1861, H. W. Bellows, D.D., Prost., Fred. Law Olmsted, Secretary. [The Women's Central Relief Association had been previously organized, April, 1861.] Supplies furnished through the Comm'n estimated by Sec. at $15,000,000. Cash receipts at central treasury to May 1, 1866, $4,962,014.26, of which New York contributed $229,328, and California, $1,233,977. The Metropol. Fair, N. Y. produced $1,184,487; that at Philadelphia, $1,035,368; 12 others about $425,000. See History Sanitary Commission, 8vo. Philadelphia, 1866. The Freedmen's Union Commission rec'd and disbursed for teachers at the South, in 1863, $318,670; for supplies, $490,755. Total, $809,425.

SANITARY REFORM, U. S. The ventilation of buildings has been greatly improved since the publication of Perry's Essays on School Houses, 1833, and Barnard's School Architecture, 1838. This reform was specially needed in printing-offices, book-binderies, and manufactories generally.

SANITARY LEGISLATION, U. S. Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out regulations of quarantine to guard against cholera, passed Congress May 26, 1866. States and cities enact local sanitary laws. Board of Health of N. Y. city, organized, 1866. See Sanitary Commission.

SATIRE, U. S. Among the best American humorous and satirical publications are the Biglow Papers and Fable for Critics, by J. R. Lowell; the New Gospel of Peace, castigating secessionists and peace democrats during the recent war; the broadly humorous essays of "Artemus Ward," Petroleum V. Nasby, and others; and the very clever pictorial satires of Thos. Nast.

SAVINGS BANKS, U. S. The number of savings banks in the New England states, New York, and Pennsylvania, was about 300 in 1862. The amount of deposits, $70,000,000. Massachusetts has more banks than any other state, the number being 93; deposits, $44,785,400. There are comparatively few savings banks in the states not mentioned above.

SCHOOLS, PUBLIC, IN UNITED STATES. Schools both English and classical were almost instantly established by the first settlers of New England on their arrival; were soon made obligatory by law, and have since grown with the population, being, however, fewer and worse in the southern states. The present era of public schools commenced about 1800. Its important dates are: Connecticut school fund, established 1795; first state school sup't., New York, 1812; first state school system, Ky., 1821; Colburn's arithmetic, 1821; second movement of 1825-40, commenced by publications of Carter, Gallaudet, and Johnson; Cousin's report on Prussian schools, published here 1835; Horace Mann, sec'y of Board of Education in Mass., 1837; Stowe's report on European schools, 1837; first normal school, at Lexington, Mass., 1839. From 1840 to 1860, the improved principles and methods thus introduced have been increasingly put into practice. The following totals for the United States are approximate for 1858: children of school age, 6,933,441; public schools, 97,621; school funds, $49,324,384; expended for public schools in the year, $20,159,268.

SCIENCE IN THE U. S. Franklin's discoveries in electricity, 1752. American Philosophical Society established, 1769. American Academy of Arts and Sciences, 1780. First course of Chemical Lectures in the United States, by Dr. S. L. Mitchill, N. Y., 1702. Botanic garden and Professor of Natural History established at Harvard College, 1805. American Association for the Advancement of Science, formed, 1845. National Academy of Sciences, founded at 18. Among the important National and State publications are the U. S. Exploring Expedition under Com. Wilkes, with its Scientific Reports, to be in some 30 quarto and folio volumes; the Reports on the Mexican Boundaries, Pacific Railway &c; the Natural History of the State of New York, in about 20 quartos, the great work of Agassiz on Natural History, pub. by subscription, etc, etc., See Astronomy, Observatories, &c.

SCULPTURE, U. S. No progress was made in this art in the U. S. before the time of Horatio Greenough, who resided some years in Italy, and died 1852. His chief successors have been Hiram Powers, Clevenger (died 1843), Crawford (died 1857), Ball Hughes, W. W. Story, Miss Hosmer, E. D. Palmer; Quincy Ward; Launt Thompson, Mead; Akers. See Tuckerman's Book of the Artists, 1867.

SECRETARIES OF STATE, U. S. See Administrations. Each State in the Union has a "Secretary of State" in its government.

SEWING MACHINE. To America unquestionably belongs the honor of giving to the world the first practical sewing machine. Here also, it has received its fullest development. Mr. Howe's patent was granted in 1846. Very little advance was made for the next six years. Since that period the sales of reliable machines have been as follows: 1853, 2,509; 1854, 4,469; 1855, 3,515; 1856, 7,225; 1857, 12,715; 1858, 17,589; 1859, 46,245. The machine has been improved, and adapted to all branches of sewing. Indeed it has revolutionized and developed every department of needlework; introduced new branches of industry; rendered healthful, pleasant and profitable an employment hitherto proverbially unhealthful, and proved itself the most beneficial invention of the age. In the domestic world it ranks as do railroads and telegraphs in the commercial. The following table exhibits the economy of the sewing machine in stitching the various parts of the following garments.

	BY MACHINE.		BY HAND.
	Hours.	Minutes.	Hours.	Minutes.
Gentlemen's shirts.....	1	16	14	26
Frock coats.....	2	38	16	35
Satin vests.....	1	14	7	19
Silk dress.....	1	13	8	27
Merino dress.....	1	4	8	27

Seams of considerable length are ordinarily sewed with the best machines at the rate of a yard a minute, and that, too, in a manner far superior to hand sewing. The manufacture of sewing machines has become a well established branch of industry. The capital invested is immense, employing an army of mechanics, and extending the reputation of American science and mechanical skill over the globe. The number of machines manufactured in the U. S. up to 1866, was about 750,000; 200,000 are made yearly at the present time. In N. Y. City, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Boston the manufacture of clothing by machine-sewing amounted to $40,000,000 worth in 1860. Sewing-machine manufactories in the U. S. in 1860, 74; capital, $4,247,000. At the Paris Exposition of 1867, the highest prize (gold medal) was awarded to Wheeler & Wilson of New York for the best machines. Elias Howe, Jr., was also, as the inventor, awarded the gold medal and badge of Legion of Honor.

SHEEP, U. S. They have generally been reared to supply mutton rather than wool. Of late, however, much attention has been paid to breeding them for their value in producing wool. The number of sheep in 1850 in the U. S. was 21,723,000; in 1860, 22,471,000. Ohio, New York and Indiana, produced the most. California in 1860, had 1,075,000 sheep; in 1867, 3,000,000. The ravages among sheep by dogs is very great. In 1866 about 500,000, worth $2,000,000, were killed by dogs. 12 merino ewes from Westminster, Vermont, took the first two premiums at the Agricultural Exhibition at Hamburg, in 1863, against all the best breeds of England, France, Saxony, Prussia and Silesia. They were sold for $5,000 to a Count of Silesia. This result, surprising to Americans, gave a new impetus to sheep raising in the U. S.

The above table shows the loss of American shipping, or its transfer to foreign flags, during the rebellion. The total tonnage of the United States, June 30, 1858, was 5,049,808 tons; of which registered for foreign trade, 2,499,741; enrolled and licensed, 2,502,086; steam navigation, 729,390. Increase for the year, 108,965 tons. In 1860, the tonnage of the U. S. was 5,353,868, tons. In the same year there were built 212,892 tons. Amount of licensed tonnage in 1866, 2,259,947 tons. Since the year 1860, American ship-building has greatly declined. In November 1866, there was but one vessel in the course of construction in N. Y. City, and but two in Boston. This is due to the great cost of material and labor in seaboard cities. Ships which cost $100 per ton in N. Y. cost only $60 in the same currency in the British Provinces (1867). In 1860, two-thirds of American imports were carried in American ships; in 1866 nearly three-fourths in foreign vessels. Number of ship-carpenters in the U. S. in 1860, 13,392.

SHIPPING. Before the war, the Stars and Stripes led the carrying trade of the world. Not only was there a larger tonnage afloat under our flag than under any other, but American ships had the preference for enterprise, speed, and care of cargo, which gave them the lead in every port and on every ocean. The entire tonnage of Great Britain in 1861 was 4,806,826 tons, and that of the United States, 5,539,813 tons. In the trade of this country we kept the lead without the assistance of discriminating legislation. During the five years ending with 1861 the carrying trade of New York amounted to $1,644,000,000, of which over $1,000,000,000 was done under the American flag, leaving but little more than half that amount for the flags of all other nations on the globe. With the advent of war there came a disastrous change. The few privateers fitted out in English ports, chiefly through the assistance of British capitalists, turned the scale against us, and almost the entire fleet of American vessels were forced to engage in the government service, lie idle at the dock, or transfer their ownership to a foreign flag. Thus in the four years which followed, out of $1,700,000,000 of foreign trade for the city of New York, less than $400,000,000 was done under the Stars and Stripes, while over $1,300,000,000 was carried under foreign flags. In 1865, the entire foreign commerce of New York was $429,100,229; of which $345,750,622 was in foreign ships, and only $82,349,607 in American ships. This is a humiliating and exasperating record; yet in the recent Fenian movements our government and people refused to retaliate. —Chr. Almanac.

SILVER COIN, U. S. The silver coinage of the U. S. Mint, for one year, ending June 30, 1859, was $7,336,609. From 1793 to 1859 inclusive, it amounted to $122,694,836. In England, in the first ten years of Victoria, the amount of silver coined was $2,440,614. It is supposed that the silver coinage of the world amounts to twelve hundred millions of dollars.

The largest amount coined in any one year in the U. S., was $9,077,571, in 1853. In the year ending June 30, 1863, the coinage was $1,564,297, in 3,053,150 pieces. Of this, $1,040,638 came from the mint at San Francisco, Cal., and the rest from Philadelphia and New York. The coinage in 1866, including two and three cent pieces, was $1,183,330. A tax of three per cent is levied on silverware in use, by act of Congress, July 1, 1862. Revenue from this source to the government in 1863, $18,372; in 1866, $128,522.

SLAVERY IN THE UNITED STATES. Before the War of Independence, all the states contained slaves. In 1783 the statement in the Massachusetts Bill of Rights, "All men are born free and equal," was declared in the Supreme Court at Boston to bar slaveholding in that State. Before 1790 the further introduction of slaves had been prohibited in five other states. On July 13, 1787, Congress passes unanimously the celebrated ordinance "for the government of the territory to the N. W. of the Ohio," which contained an "unalterable" article forbidding slavery or involuntary servitude in the said territory. After 1800, several of the states prayed without effect, to be relieved of this prohibition. In 1803 Louisiana was purchased, which act was considered by many as fatal to the constitution. In February, 1820, the celebrated Missouri Compromise, drawn up by Mr. Clay, was carried, by which slavery was permitted in that state, but was prohibited in all that part of it to the north of 36° 30' N. Lat. In 1845, a fresh contest arose between the slaveholders and their opponents, at the annexation of Texas. The utmost the advocates of freedom could obtain was a similar division to that of Missouri, Dec. 25, 1845. In 1850 another compromise was effected. California was admitted as a free state, but the fugitive slave act was passed (which see). In 1854 the Missouri compromise was abrogated with the admission of Nebraska and Kansas as slaveholding states, in the latter of which civil war ensued. See Kansas; United States. An attempt to create a slave rebellion took place in Virginia, headed by John Brown, and failed, in October, 1859. Number of slaves in 1850, 3,204,313; in 1860, 3,999,283.

Upon the secession of the southern states, Mr. A. H. Stephens, of Georgia, declared that "slavery" was the corner stone of their confederacy (1861). During the war slaves were held to be "contraband of war" by the U. S. Government. By act of Congress, June 19, 1862, slavery was forever excluded from the territories. Jan. 1, 1863, the great "Emancipation Proclamation" of President Lincoln was issued, declaring all slaves in the rebellious states free, on the ground that it was a "fit and necessary war measure for suppressing such rebellion." Slavery was finally abolished from the United States by act of Congress, January 1865. See Constitution.

In nearly every State of the Union there is an Historical Society, devoted to the collection and preservation of historical records, printed and in MS. Several of them have published transactions and collections. That of the Mass. Hist. Soc. comprises about 30 vols. The N. Y. Hist. Soc. has published 6 or 7 vols.

SOUTH CAROLINA. One of the United States; first settlement was made under Governor Sayle, at Port Royal, in 1670, and at Charleston 1671; received a colony of French refugees, exiled by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, 1690; church of England established by law, 1703; proprietary government in the two Carolinas superseded by one established by the people in 1719; the country purchased of the proprietors by the English parliament in 1721, when the country was divided into North and South Carolina; received colonies of Swiss, Germans, and Irish at various times. This state early resisted the claims of the mother country, and was active in the revolutionary war. Charleston and a large part of the State taken by the British in 1780; battle of Eutaw Springs, 1781; federal constitution adopted May 23, 1788, by 149 to 73; "nullification ordinance" passed Nov., 1832. Population in 1790 was 249,000; in 1810, 415,115; in 1830, 581,458; in 1840, 594,398, including 327,538 slaves. Population 1850, whites, 274,463; free colored, 8,960; slaves, 384,984; 1860, whites, 308,186; slaves, 407, 185. Ordinance declaring "secession" from the United States, passed Dec. 20, 1860. The "Star of the West" with U. S. troops for Fort Sumter, fired on and repulsed from the harbor, Jan. 1861. Gen. Sherman marched unopposed through the state early in 1865. B. Perry appointed provisional governor June 30, 1865. Act of secession repealed Sept. 15, 1865, by the state legislature. Debt of the state in Sept. 1866, exclusive of past due-coupons and military debt, $4,426,440. South Carolina included in the "Second Military District," by act of Congress 1867, and Gen. Sickles appointed Governor.

STEAM NAVIGATION. The Collins line of steamers from New York to Liverpool, commenced running April, 1850. The Pacific of this line crossed the Atlantic in 9 days, 19 hours, May 1851. The Adriatic, the largest of the line, first left N. Y. Nov. 23, 1857. The City of Glasgow, first of a line between Philadelphia and Liverpool, arrived Jan. 1, 1851. In 1865, there were 12 steamship companies employed in the transit between Europe and the U. S., none of which were American! The difficulty is that steamships cannot be constructed in America to the same advantage as in England. See Shipping.

STEAM-BOAT BUILDING. The annual report on commerce and navigation, gives the following aggregate of the number of steam-boats built in the United States since 1824—thirty years—in periods of five years each:

“ 1829 to 1834.....	304	“ 1849 to 1854.....	1203

Since 1860 steamship building has fallen off very materially (except for inland navigation). In 1860 the whole registered "steam tonnage" built in the U. S. was the small amount of 97,296 tons; in 1865 it decreased to 69,500 tons.

STRIKES. The sailors of London struck for increase of wages in April, 1834. The strike of the amalgamated engineers took place in 1853. A general strike among the shoemakers of New England continued for several months, 1859-60. 1,700 miners strike at Dover, New Jersey, April, 1867. Moulders strike at Ironton, Ohio, May, 1867; riot and loss of life Carpenters', laborers', and plasterers' strike in New York City, April, May, 1867.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH, ATLANTIC. A plan to unite Europe and America by the electric telegraph was entered at the British registration office in June 1845, by Mr. J. Watkins Brett, who made proposals to the government, which were not accepted. This plan was attempted to be carried out by a company in 1857 and 1858, chiefly promoted by Cyrus W. Field, of New York, with the concurrence of the British and American governments. 2,500 miles of wire were manufactured and tested in March, 1857. The laying it down commenced at Valentia, in Ireland, on Aug. 5. The vessels employed were the Niagara and Susquehanna (American vessels), and the Leopard and Agamemnon (British vessels). After sailing a few miles the cable snapped. This was soon repaired; but on Aug. 11, after 300 miles of wire had been paid out, it snapped again, and the vessels returned to Plymouth. In 1858 a second attempt to lay the cable failed, through a violent storm on June 20-21; but the third voyage was successful. On Aug. 5, the junction between the two continents was completed by the laying down of 2,050 miles of wire from Valentia in Ireland to Newfoundland. The first two messages, on Aug. 5, were from the Queen of England to the President of the United States, and his reply. The event caused great rejoicing in both countries; but unfortunately the insulation of the wire became gradually more faulty, and on Sept. 4 the power of transmitting intelligence utterly ceased. The grand celebration in New York of the (supposed) completion of this enterprise, Sept 1, 1858. In 1865, another attempt to lay a cable was made. A new one was manufactured 2,500 nautical miles long, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ times stronger than the old one. Diameter, a little more than an inch. It was coiled in the mammoth ship Great Eastern. The expedition started July 23, 1865 from Valentia Bay. 1,200 miles were successfully laid when suddenly the cable parted, in water $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles deep. 4 attempts to grapple it were made, but the cable could not be raised to the surface without much stronger wire ropes. The ships returned to England, but the enterprise was not given up. A new company was formed at once, called the "Anglo-American Telegraph Company"; capital, £600,000. A more perfect cable was constructed, and the Great Eastern started again with it, July 13, 1866. On the 27th she reached Heart's Content, Newfoundland, with the cable in perfect order. The news was received with great enthusiasm in both countries, and ovations tendered to Cyrus W. Field, the American, to whose energy the success was in great part due. The Great Eastern returned to the spot where the cable of 1865 parted, and after many attempts it was discovered Sept. 2, 1866, and continued to the American side, making two cables across the Atlantic. One of the cables was injured near the Newfoundland shore in May, 1867, but was soon repaired, and both cables have now been in constant and successful use for 13 months. (Aug. 1867.)

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPHS COMPLETED. The cable from Key West to Cuba successfully laid August, 1867, by a New York company. More than sixty submarine cables have been completed to this date. The most important are these:

SUGAR. The following is the official statement of the amount of sugar imported into this country from 1851 to 1860:

	Value of Sugar.	Duty paid.		Value of Sugar.	Duty paid.

The sugar crop of Louisiana in 1860 was valued at $24,988,000. The average for five years ending 1861 was $17,000,000. In New York State in 1865, 9,635,200 pounds of maple-sugar were produced. Pennsylvania produces 2,500,000 pounds a year. The sorghum-sugar plant has lately been introduced from China, and sugar produced from it in considerable quantities. Sugar from beet-root is also pronounced a success. 100,000 pounds were manufactured in Livingston County, Illinois, in 1867.

SUNDAY LAWS. In the State of New York, the laws against selling liquors and against certain theatrical performances on Sundays have caused much discussion and some resistance, chiefly on the part of the German and Irish population, but are still enforced (1867).

SUSPENSION BRIDGES, U. S. See Bridges.

TAXATION, U. S. Before the rebellion the revenue of the U. S. general government was raised wholly from customs and sale of lands. Subsequently, to support the war, direct taxation was imposed. The direct taxes in 1865 amounted to $211,129,529. See Revenue, Debt, &c.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETIES. It is to the credit of the American people that the first great public movement in behalf of temperance was made in this country. Temperance societies began to be formed in 1825-6. One of the most prominent of the first promoters of the reform was the Rev. Dr. Hewitt of Connecticut, who was worthily styled the Apostle of Temperance. The exertions of this and other energetic advocates of temperance and total abstinence have effected a wonderful change for the better in the general habits of the people. Several thousand temperance societies, under various names, have been formed, and a large number of vessels now sail from various ports of the United States, the crews of which are unsupplied with spirituous liquors of any kind. The movement has spread to some extent in Europe, but by far the most successful of its promoters there was the Rev. Theobald Mathew, a Roman Catholic clergyman in Ireland, who administered the "total abstinence" pledge to about two millions of his countrymen. He commenced his ministry in this cause in 1830. In Germany there were 300 temperance societies in 1846. Legislation against intemperance in the U. S. has been attempted in several States. The "Maine Law," passed chiefly through the influence of Neal Dow, 1851, was adopted essentially by Connecticut (1862?), New York (1856?), and Massachusetts (1856?). It was strongly enforced in the latter State, although vigorously opposed by many, 1866-7. It was repealed in Maine, 1856.

TENNESSEE. One of the United States; was originally included in the charter of North Carolina by Charles II., in 1664; first settlement on Wetanga river, 1757; attacked, and 200 men, women, and children massacred by the Indians in 1760; the Indians chastised next year, but continued frequent contests with the colonists for several years. The territory ceded by North Carolina to the United States in 1790; admitted into the Union as a state, 1796. Population in 1790, 35,691; in 1810, 261,727; in 1830, 681,904; in 1840, 829,210, including 188,059 slaves; in 1850, 763,154, and 239,460 slaves; in 1860, 859,528, and 287,112 slaves. Ordinance of "separation" passed May 6, 1861. The eastern part of the State was noted for its loyalty to the Union during the war. State debt in 1865, $1,213,700. At the state election, Aug. 1, 1867, Governor Brownlow, of the "Union" or Radical ticket, was re-elected by a majority of nearly 50,000, chiefly made up by the negroes, who voted in this state for the first time.

TEXAS. One of the United States; first settled by the Spaniards at San Francisco in 1690; made one of the federal states of Mexico, in conjunction with the adjacent state of Coahuila, on the formation of the Mexican republic—an unpopular union to the Texans, and productive of the first disagreement with the central government; colonization of Texas by emigrants from the United States commenced 1821; war with Mexico for independence commenced 1833, and ended by the defeat and capture of the Mexican president, Santa Anna, at San Jacinto, 21st April, 1836, which secured the independence of Texas; admitted into the Union as a state (the 28th), after active opposition with reference to the exclusion of slavery, Feb. 20, 1845. Population at that time about 200,000. [The first treaty for its annexation was rejected by the United States Senate, 35 to 16, June 8, 1844.] Population in 1850, 154,431, and 58,161 slaves; in 1860, 416,000, and 184,956 slaves. "Ordinance of secession" from the United States passed Jan. 1861. Debt in 1865 $8,192,000. After the war Gen. A. J. Hamilton was appointed provisional governor, by Pres. Lincoln; but at the first election after the restoration (1866) a secessionist (Throckmorton) was elected. Texas included in 5th Military District, under Sheridan, March 1867.

TOBACCO. In a recent lecture in England, the Dean of Carlisle stated that in 1856, 33,000,000 pounds of tobacco were consumed in that country, at an expense of $40,000,000, over $26,000,000 of which went in duties to the government. In 1821 the average annual consumption was 11½ ounces to each person; in 1853 it had risen to 19 ounces. In France much more is consumed in proportion to the population, the emperor clearing $20,000,000 annually by the government monopoly. In Denmark the annual consumption averages 70 ounces to each person, in Belgium 73 ounces, and in America the average is vastly higher. It is calculated that 2,000,000 tons, or 4,480,000,000 pounds of tobacco are annually used in the world, at a cost sufficient to pay for all the bread and corn used in Great Britain. It is boasted that 100,000,000 of the human race are smokers. In New York city it is stated that there are about 200,000 smokers, each using two cigars daily, making, at an average of four cents each, the sum of $16,000 daily, or $5,840,000 a year, wasted in smoking in this city, alone. There are about 900,000,000 cigars manufactured in the same city annually, amounting, at the same price, to $36,000,000. The total exports of tobacco from the United States in 39 years (1821-59) amounted to $339,274,520. The production of tobacco in the northern states has increased wonderfully since 1850. In 1850, N. Y. state produced 83,000 lbs; in 1860, 5,765,000 lbs; Conn. produced in 1850, 1,267,000 lbs; in 1860, 6,000,000 lbs. The exports of tobacco from the U. S. in 1862 amounted to $12,325,356, being almost entirely from the North.

UNIVERSITIES IN THE U. S. See Colleges. Those of Harvard, at Cambridge, Mass.; Yale, at New Haven; Brown, at Providence, and Michigan, at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Virginia, at Charlottesville, are the chief institutions called universities—but they differ little from the other colleges.

V

VERMONT, one of the U. S. First settled by colonists from Massachusetts, 1723. The territory was claimed by New Hampshire, from 1741 to 1764: claimed also by New York, and granted to that colony by Parliament in 1664. Owing to these conflicting claims, the state was not admitted into the Confederacy during the Revolution, but it still performed its part in that struggle. The British defeated at Bennington by Gen. Stark, in 1777. Claims of New York withdrawn on payment of $30,000, in 1790. The state admitted into the Union, 1791. Population in 1790, was 85,589; in 1810, 217,895; in 1830, 280,679; in 1840, 291,948; in 1850, 314,120; in 1860, 315,827. War expenses $8,811,600. The state sent 34,650 soldiers to the army in 1861-5.

VICKSBURG, Miss., U. S. A town on the Mississippi river, made famous during the war. It completely blockaded the navigation of the river, and its batteries were impregnable from the water side. After various attempts, Gen. Grant moved to the south of it, crossed the river from the west side, and marched towards the rear of the town, May 1, 1863. He defeats the enemy at "Port Gibson," "Champion Hills," and "Big Black River Bridge," and on the 18th reaches the fortifications. He at once invested the place. After many assaults and constant bombardment, the garrison surrendered July 4, 1863. Number of prisoners, 30,000; guns, 220; small arms, 70,000. Union loss during the siege, 545 killed, 3,682 wounded, and 303 missing.

VIRGINIA. One of the United States; sometimes called the "Old Dominion," having been settled, April, 1607, at Jamestown, on James river—the first white settlement in the United States. Named Virginia in honor of Queen Elizabeth, who had granted the country to Sir Walter Raleigh. A settlement attempted by Raleigh but failed, and the grant was vacated on his attainder and execution. The country granted by James I. to two companies, the London and the Plymouth. Jamestown settled by the former, and named in honor of their royal patron. The colony suffered much from the Indians, and by various disasters; proved loyal during the English revolution; was the first to proclaim Charles II on his restoration; established the Church of England by law, 1662; took an early and prominent part in the struggle for independence. Surrender of the British army under Cornwallis, at Yorktown, October 19, 1782. Constitution of the United States adopted June 25, 1788, by 89 to 79. Virginia has given birth to six presidents of the United States, viz.: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Harrison, and Taylor; and also, Patrick Henry, John Marshall, and many distinguished patriots. Population in 1790 was 747,610; in 1810, 974,622; in 1830, 1,211,272; in 1840, 1,239,737, including 448,937 slaves. According to the census returns, the real estate, &c., of Virginia, 1850, was $530,000,000, viz.: Real estate, $278,000,000; value of slaves, $147,000,000; other personal estate, $105,000,000. The returns further show that nearly 83,000 white persons over the age of 21, can neither read nor write! The new constitution of this state, adopted in 1851, in the 111th article has the following clause: "And no person shall have a right to vote who is of unsound mind, or a pauper, or a non-commissioned officer in the service of the United States." Population in 1850, 1,421,081, including 473,026 slaves. In 1860, 1,593,199, including 495,826 slaves. The state "seceded" May 1861. Soon after, the western counties formed a new and loyal state. See West Virginia. Debt of the old state in 1865, $41,061,300.

VOLUNTEERS, U. S. See Army.

W

WAGES IN THE U. S. In 1866 laws were enacted in some of the states making eight hours a legal day's labor unless otherwise agreed upon by the parties. Under this law, what a laborer would have received for ten hours' work, he can claim for eight hours' labor.

WAR, REVOLUTIONARY, ending in the independence of the United States, commenced by the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775. See Battles. Ended by the treaty of Paris, 1783. This war cost $135,193,700.

WAR IN THE U. S. The war of the rebellion commenced April 12, 1861, by the firing of South Carolina forces on Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor. The battle of Bull Run, Va., July 21, adverse to the Union army, was decisive of a prolonged conflict. Until the summer of 1863, the Confederates maintained their ground successfully. But after the fall of Vicksburg, and the battle of Gettysburg, the National army was almost uniformly victorious until the final surrender of the rebels. See Army, Battles, Volunteers, &c.

WASHINGTON, D. C. The Capital of the United States, founded in 1791, and first made the seat of the Government in 1800. The House of Representatives was opened for the first time, May 30, 1808. Washington was taken in the late war by the British forces under Gen. Ross, when the Capitol and the President's house were consumed by a general conflagration, the troops not sparing even the National Library, Aug. 24, 1814. Gen. Ross was soon afterwards killed in a desperate engagement at Baltimore, Sept. 12, following. See United States, and Dist. Columbia.

WASHINGTON, GEORGE. Born Feb. 22, 1732; in the expedition of Braddock against Fort Duquesne, 1755; appointed commander-in-chief of the American army, 1775; elected president of the Convention for forming constitution 1787; elected President of the United States, 1789; again in 1793; died 1799. Washington monument at New York, corner stone laid July 4, 1848; oration by Robert C. Winthrop. Virginia monument to Washington, corner stone laid by President Taylor, February 22, 1849.

WEST VIRGINIA. On Oct. 24, 1861, the western counties of Virginia voted to separate themselves from the old state and form a new state, called West Virginia; admitted to the Union, June 20, 1863; capital, Wheeling; area, 23,000 square miles. Population by census of 1860, 393,200. The new state sent 31,880 men to the Union army.

WINE, U. S. In 1866, California produced 1,252,700 gallons of wine; Kentucky, 180,000; Indiana, 88,000; New York, 61,000; N. Carolina, 54,000; Illinois, 47,000; Connecticut, 46,000; Virginia, 40,000; Pennsylvania, 38,000. During the year ending June 30, 1866, 9,476,814 gallons were imported into the U. S.

WHALE FISHERY OF THE UNITED STATES. In 1845 this trade employed 650 vessels aggregate tonnage, 200,000 tons; cost, $20,000,000; manned by 17,500 officers and seamen. "Commercial history furnishes no parallel to this whaling fleet. It is larger than those of all other nations combined."—Speech of Mr. Grinnell. But in recent years, by the introduction of petroleum and other burning fluids, and of gas, the whaling business has become reduced to much smaller dimensions.

WHEAT AND FLOUR. The amount exported by the United States, from 1790 to 1838 was 10,283,471 bushels, average, 209,666 bushels per annum. In 1845 the amount exported was valued at $5,735,372; in 1846, $13,350,644. This was exclusive of corn, rye, &c. The amount was greatly increased by the scarcity in Europe, especially in Ireland. See Agriculture.

WHITEPLAINS, BATTLE OF, U. S. Fought Oct. 28, 1776. Washington was attacked here by the British and Hessians, under Howe. The loss on both sides was considerable. The Americans retained their ground until the 30th, when Lord Percy arriving with British reinforcements, the former withdrew to North Castle and Fort Lee, on the Hudson.

WISCONSIN. Population in 1850, 305,391; increase in 10 years, 900 per cent.: in 1860, 768,485; increase in 10 years, 152 per cent. Debt in 1866, $2,664,550. The state sent 96,100 soldiers to the army, 1861-5. Number of miles of railroad, 1,631 in 1865. Number of school-houses, 4,338; scholars, 241,590.

Y

YORKTOWN. A village in Virginia, memorable for the surrender of the British army under Lord Cornwallis, consisting of 7,000 men, to the Americans and their allies under Washington and Count Rochambeau, Oct. 19, 1781. This event decided the contest for independence in favor of the Americans. This place was fortified by the rebels, and withstood the siege of Gen. McClellan, from April 4 to May 5, 1862, when it was evacuated; 71 spiked guns were found in the works.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS, U. S. First one under this name founded in Boston, Jan. 10, 1852; in N. Y. city, June 30, 1852. They are now (1867) established in many of the principal cities. At a general convention of Young Men's Christian Associations, at Montreal, in June, 1867, 215 associations in the United States and Canada were represented.

WRECKS. Ar tic, U. S. mail steamer, by collision in a fog, with the Vesta, French steamer, off Newfoundland; above 300 lives lost, Sept. 27 1854. Philadelphia, Liverpool to Philadelphia, Sept. 17, 1854. U. S. sloop of war Albany, from Aspinwall, Sept. 28, 1854, never heard from. Lyonnais, French steamer, New York to Havre, collision with barque Adriatic, 134 lives lost, Nov. 2, 1856. Steamer Niuqara, burned on Lake Michigan; 60 lives lost, Sept. 24, 1856. Central America, steamer, Lieut. Herndon, Aspinwall to New York, founders, 427 lives lost, and $2,000,000 in gold, Sept. 8, 1857. Russian line of battle ship in the Baltic, founders, all on board (825) lost, Sept., 1857. The total number of American seagoing vessels reported during 1859, as lost or missing, was 402, valued at $5,599,000, being an increase over the previous year of 114 vessels, and $1,128,000 in value. Of the whole number 8 were steamers, 84 ships, 48 barks, 64 brigs, and 198 schooners.

YACHT. The ancient thalamegus or navis lusorice was a vessel for pleasure, like the modern yacht. The English are very fond of yachting. Their yachts are commonly cutterrigged, and with one mast. Yachting has come into vogue in the United States only since about 1830. The American yachts are sloops or schooners. The yacht America, modelled and built by a young ship-builder, George Steers, of New York (died 1856, aged 35), beat all the English yachts in a regatta at Cowes, Aug. 22, 1851. She was a schooner, with her greatest breadth abaft the beam, and with "hollow lines" forward. A yacht race from New York to Cowes, Isle of Wight, Dec., 1865, between three New York yachts, Henrietta, Vesta, and Fleetwing; Henrietta winner by seven (?) hours.

YANKEE. The derivation of the word is generally accredited to the Indian pronunciation of the word English, which they render Yengeese. In New York it is applied to the New Englanders; in the south to all northerners; and in Europe to all Anglo-Americans. In a curious book on the Round Towers of Ireland, published some years ago, the origin of the term Yankee Doodle, was said to have been traced to the Persian phrase Yanki douniah, or "Inhabitants of the New World." Layard, in his "Nineveh," also mentions Yankhidunia as the Persian name of America.

The production for 1862, 1863, 1864 and 1865 is given as found in the Reports of the Department of Agriculture. The estimated production for 1866 is taken from the Tobacco Circular of M. Rader & Son.

The quantities of leaf tobacco exported are estimated from the returns of commerce and navigation for the years 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864, and 1865. The quantities of leaf for 1866, and of manufactured tobacco for each year specified, are taken from the returns of commerce and navigation for those years.

In 1862, the production of only twenty-one States is given, Kentucky and the disloyal States being omitted. In 1863, 1864, and 1865 Kentucky is included, and in 1866 all the States.

WHEAT STATISTICS.

1866,	151,999,906	5,579,103	2,183,050	1.85 to 2.75

No returns of the production of 1861 are to be had, although inquiry was made at the Department of Agriculture.

The figures relative to production in 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865, and 1866 are taken from the Monthly and Annual Reports of the Department of Agriculture, and embrace 22 States and Nebraska Territory, except 1866, which embraces 29 States and Nebraska Territory. There being no returns from California in 1864 and 1865, the crop for each year is estimated at 11,000,000 bushels, which is believed to be a low estimate, the crop for 1863 being 11,664,203 bushels. A barrel of flour is considered as equal to 5 bushels of wheat.

BIOGRAPHICAL INDEX

UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

N. B. This list of remarkable persons, from the earliest period, is not, of course, intended to include every name mentioned in history, but merely the most important in their several departments. The names of Sovereigns are referred to occasionally only, as full lists are given in their proper place.

This list may be useful in two ways, viz. .

First, as an Index to the names mentioned in the Chronological Tables in the "World's Progress;" and Secondly, to indicate, by reference to those tables, the chief political events and contemporary public characters during the life of each person in the list.

Thus: SOCRATES, the Greek philosopher, was born 470, and died 400 B. C. The tables on page 20 to 24 show who lived, and what happened, during the seventy years of Socrates' life.

MILTON was born A. D. 1608, one year after the first settlement at Jamestown, Virginia; six years after the East India Company was founded; five years after James I. ascended the throne; the same year that the Protestant Union was formed in Germany; one year before Gustavus Adolphus became king of Sweden; two years before Louis XIII. became king of France. He was 12 years old when the Puritans first landed at Plymouth; he was 17 when Charles I. succeeded James, and he was 41 years old when Charles was beheaded. Among his contemporaries were Lord Bacon, Inigo Jones, Jeremy Taylor, Algernon Sydney, Sir C. Wren, Butler, Waller, Dryden, Henry More, Baxter, and Boyle, in England; Peter Stuyvesant, Winthrop, Cotton, and Eliot, in America; Richelieu, Mazarine, Colbert, Rubens, Kepler, Descartes, Molière, Corneille, Racine, Pascal, on the Continent. He died A. D. 1674, nine years after the great plague in London, 14 years after Charles II. was restored, and 7 years after New York was ceded to the English.

And thus, of any person mentioned in the Index, a great variety of particulars may be found at a glance, on referring to the tables.

ABBREVIATIONS.—See list in the Introduction. Bar. (Barbarian) includes several different nations, some not entirely civilized. f. is used for flourished. The dates before Christ are indicated by B. C.; all others are A. D. In some cases the dates are necessarily left blank.
