1. It is believed that reliable data on a number of airfields in China and Manchuria has probably been compiled by the Air Division of the United States Army Advisory Group, APO 909. That organization and its subordinate units furnished airlift for the Peiping Headquarters Group (United States Branch, Executive Headquarters) and for the Army Graves Registration Service in China during 1946 and 1947 and actually operated into airfields on which little or no recent information is available to this office.

2. Any airfield information provided by the Air Division Army Advisory Group would be of material value in the compilation of airfield data now in progress. This includes information which supplements, confirms or refutes data contained in standard airfield publications such as JANIS and the AAF Provisional Airfield List covering China, Manchuria and Korea.
