The deliberate selection and use of a deadly weapon is evidence of malice; and where malice exists, together with the killing, the crime of murder is complete. S. v. Jackson (Del.), 82 A. 824.

The burden of disproving malice is then on the accused. S. v. Short, 2 Boyce (Del.) 491, 82 A. 239.

"By the terms of article 51 of the Penal Code the intention is presumed whenever the means used are such as would ordinarily result in the commission of the forbidden act, but under the terms of article 717, supra, if the instrument be one not likely to produce death, then the presumption is reversed, and no such presumption can be indulged that death was designed unless from the manner in which the instrument was used such intention is made evidently to appear. It follows, therefore, from these statutes that the weapon or means used must possess the character of a deadly weapon without regard to the manner in which it is used; and, second, though not deadly, the manner of its use must show an evident intention to kill. The character of the weapon, therefore, cannot be fixed or determined by the manner of its use." Grant v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 143 S. W. 929.

Evidence by a witness as to what persons had told her of a difficulty between accused and deceased on the day before the killing, is not admissible. S. v. Lee, 130 La. 477, 58 S. 155.

A justice of the peace testified that he had a case in his court against defendant for fighting his wife, and also a constable that the defendant had paid fines for fighting his wife and assaulting her with a pistol and a gun. "The objection to this was that it was an attempt to put the defendant's general character and reputation in evidence; that the evidence was hearsay and immaterial. When appellant was on the stand, he was asked if he had not paid fines for fighting his wife. This he denied, and said he and his wife had always gotten along well. The court said he allowed this testimony to impeach appellant. We hold the testimony was admissible for the purpose of proving motive, animus, and intent at the time of the homicide." Wilson v. A witness "having testified, among other things, to the fact that he was the person nearest to defendant and deceased at the time the latter was shot, and the first to get to them afterwards, also that the defendant had no pistol at that time, and that he had never seen him with a pistol during the month that he lived with him, also that he never saw him with a pistol at any time, was asked: 'Did you ever see the defendant with a pistol?' To this question the solicitor objected, and the court sustained the objection, and defendant excepted. In this ruling there was no error. In addition to the fact that the witness had just testified as above, it was immaterial as to whether the witness had ever seen defendant with a pistol." Olden v. S., 176 Ala. 6, 58 S. 307.

"As we understand the rule, evidence of a threat, or a general threat to do violence to some person or persons, although the declarant may not mention the name of any person, and the witness may not know what person or persons the threats are directed against or have reference to, is competent as showing malice and ill-will either general or personal, when, shortly after the threat is made, the declarant carries the threat out by an attack or assault on the person he is being prosecuted for assaulting. The subsequent assault shows that the declarant in threatening to do violence had malice and ill-will towards everybody or towards some particular person, and evidence of the threat is competent to show general malice and ill-will and a general desire to commit violence, or malice and ill-will towards the person who is the subject of the assault." Admissibility of declarations relative to deceased's threats. Maxwell v. S. (Ala. App.), 65 S. 732.

But if the state puts in exculpatory declarations of the accused it is bound by them. Giesecke v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 142 S. W. 1179.

The question asked the witness Butler on cross-examination, "What did he [defendant] tell you, what did he say to anyone?" was properly refused, as calling for a self-serving declaration on the part of the defendant that was a part of the res gestae. The declaration is not shown to be part of a conversation previously brought out by the state, and was not offered as such, but as independent statements constituting part of the res gestae. Sanford v. S., 2 Ala. App. 81, 57 S. 134.

"It is competent for the accused, in a homicide case, to prove why he was carrying a weapon at the time of the encounter, in order to negative a criminal purpose. State v. Kretschmar, 232 Mo. 29, 133 S. W. 16. But it would not be competent to prove such fact by statements made by the defendant when he was not under oath, and we have been unable to find any exception to the rule against hearsay which would make Ketchel's statements competent as to why he carried a weapon." S. v. Dipley, 242 Mo. 461, 147 S. W. 111.

The defendant's good will or ill will towards the deceased's wife was not an issue in the case, and cannot be shown. Sanford v. S., 2 Ala. App. 81, 57 S. 134.

"What the court below held, and what the state asks us to approve, is that such abuse and ill treatment need not necessarily be shown by the testimony of witnesses having any knowledge thereof, but by mere hearsay—the statements of witnesses who claim to have heard the deceased in her lifetime and not in the presence of her husband make such charges against him. We are cited to no authority whatever that goes to this extent." S. v. Beeson, 155 Ia. 355, 136 N. W. 317.

Defendant's possession of money above what he could account for. Saulsberry v. S., 178 Ala. 16, 59 S. 476.

In P. v. Wolter, 203 N. Y. 484, 97 N. E. 30, "no witness was produced who ever saw Ruth Wheeler and the defendant together; nor was it made to appear that they had ever met one another prior to the day of her death. The proof, however, points unerringly to the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime. He admits that he wrote the postal card in response to which she set out to visit his apartment; and in a book kept by him was found, in his handwriting, an entry of her name and address, which it is impossible he could have ascertained, except from her on the occasion of her visit. In his fireplace were found a hatpin and ring which Ruth Wheeler had worn on the morning of her disappearance; and in a house to which the defendant had moved on the following day was discovered an umbrella which the girl was known to have had with her when she left home. The defendant gave no explanation to account for the presence of these articles or the traces of homicidal death upon his premises."

"Letters of guardianship and the order of the court appointing deceased guardian of his brothers and sisters, including the two girls staying at appellant's house. The judgment of the probate court, being regular on its face, could not be collaterally attacked, and the letters admitted are shown by the evidence to be the identical letters of guardianship presented by deceased to appellant on the morning of the tragedy. There was no error in overruling the objections made and in admitting this testimony, for it shows that appellant knew the mission of deceased, and under the evidence in this case this testimony would tend strongly to show the motive of appellant in killing deceased if he unlawfully killed him. Rev. Stats., arts. 2306, 2312; Harvey v. Edens, 69 Tex. 420, 6 S. W. 306; Collins v. Ball, 82 Tex. 259, 17 S. W. 614, 27 Am. St. Rep. 877. If the state's theory was correct, appellant had threatened to penitentiary deceased if he qualified as guardian; when shown the letters of guardianship he said he would not give up the girls; and when deceased intimated he would get them if the law authorized, the difficulty followed in a short time thereafter, this being evidence tending to show the motive of appellant in his actions." Welch v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 147 S. W. 572.

Even when motive is not of the essence of the crime it is relevant as a circumstance to identify the prisoner as the perpetrator of the crime, and to establish malice, deliberation and premeditation. S. v. Wilkins, 158 N. C. 603, 73 S. E. 992.

The accused may employ such means of protection and defense as at the time and under all the present conditions appeared to him to be reasonably necessary and he may relate what the conditions were, and what his belief was as to the necessity for the action he took; but it is then for the jury, with all the facts before them, to say whether or not he did more than was necessary, or than appeared to him to be necessary." In McMurphy v. S., 4 Ala. App. 20, 58 S. 748, "the evidence tended to show that the deceased was drinking at the time, and there was some evidence tending to show that his drunken condition must have been so apparent that the defendant must have known that the behavior of the deceased was due entirely to his drunken condition, and that he was in a state of mental imbecility on account of such drunken condition. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the court committed no error in permitting testimony tending to show that 30 minutes before the homicide the deceased was 'drunk sleep' on a railroad near defendant's house."

There was some evidence tending to show the the defendant's younger brother was also present at the time of the homicide and that his gun was there, and it seems to us that this evidence was also relevant as tending to explain why the defendant was present and why he had his shotgun with him on that occasion, and as also explaining the presence of the younger brother and the presence of the gun of the younger brother. It certainly had some tendency, if believed, to rebut the idea that the defendant had engaged in a conspiracy, and that he was there armed for the purpose of aiding and abetting the other defendants in carrying out a common design to violate the law." Threats by third person admissible where they constitute part of series of events leading up to the killing. S. v. Clifford, 59 W. Va. 1, 52 S. E. 981. May be shown if there was least degree of concerted action by him and another against accused. Magan v. C. (Ky.), 119 S. W. 734 (if made known to accused); Price v. S., 1 Okla. Cr. 378, 98 P. 447. Communicated threats of third person previous to time he and deceased threatened defendant may be proved though conspiracy did not exist between deceased and person who made threats. S. v. Horseman, 52 Or. 572, 98 P. 135.

798-13 Admissible when third person is killed in same transaction. See Newton v. C., 31 Ky. L. R. 327, 102 S. W. 264.

798-15 Tetterton v. C., 28 Ky. L. R. 116, 89 S. W. 8.

Illicit relation of deceased with wife of accused may be shown. U. S. v. Ancheta, 1 Phil. Isl. 30.

800-21 Body of deceased may be disinterred for examination where self-defense pleaded and evidence conflicts as to who was aggressor. Gray v. S., 55 Tex. Cr. 90, 114 S. W. 635.

800-24 Contra, S. v. Crawford, 66 W. Va. 114, 66 S. E. 110, unless accompanied by acts showing purpose to do violence to accused.

Insults to defendant's wife may be shown. Hobbs v. S., 57 Tex. Cr. 299, 117 S. W. 811. If accused shows insult by deceased to his wife state may show former exposed wife to insult. Caples v. S., 3 Okla. Cr. 72, 104 P. 493. The influence of insults offered by deceased to wife of accused is removed by latter's admission of them, so as to render it immaterial whether accused believed wife's statements or not and to excuse delay in acting upon them. Akin v. S., 56 Tex. Cr. 324, 119 S. W. 863.

Nothing less than assault by deceased will reduce murder to manslaughter. Brantley v. S., 5 Ga. App. 428, 63 S. E. 519.

Threats by deceased cannot be proved where murder committed with deliberation and premeditation. Thompson v. S., 88 Ark. 447, 114 S. W. 1184.

819-39 Control of house.—In a prosecution for keeping a bawdy house the court said: "We regard this presumption as being in the same category as is the presumption that that which the wife does in her husband's presence, she does because of his coercion, and like it to be held to be only prima facie and rebuttable. See State v. Ma Foo (State v. Baker) 110 Mo. 7, 19 S. W. 222, 33 Am. St. Rep. 414. Such a presumption is said to be regarded in most of the later cases as something to be easily rebutted, 'especially in that numerous class of cases which relate to the illegal sale of liquors, a business in which married women frequently engage understandingly.' Schouler's Domestic Relations (5th ed.) §50. This theory of easy rebuttal should also be held especially applicable to cases like the present one, 'for,' says another learned writer, 'this is an offense as to the government of the house in which the wife has a principal share; and also such an offense as may generally be presumed to be managed by the intrigues of the sex.' 1 Russell on Crimes, p. 151." Contra.—By the Arkansas statute a married woman is not authorized to contract generally, and when the complaint alleges a contract made by a married woman it must also allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against her under the statute, in which event, of course, the burden of proof would be upon the plaintiff. ''When appellant, after setting up in her answer the defense or coverture, had shown that she was a married woman at the time of the making of the note, she established a prima facie good defense to the action, which could only be overcome by testimony that the obligation was one she was authorized to make under the statute; and, notwithstanding it may be true that production of the note, with the proof of her signature thereto, entitled the plaintiff prima facie to recover, upon the ground that it was apparently upon its face the note of an unmarried woman, when it was shown in defense that she was a married woman at the time of the execution thereof, the presumption changed, and plaintiff's cause of action at common law was destroyed, and if he had one under the statute he was entitled to prove it, but the burden rested upon him to do so. Massachusetts.—"It is well to note the difference as to the various kinds of testimony with which the statute deals. As to private conversations with each other, neither husband nor wife is allowed to testify, no matter how much the testimony is desired by either of them or by any third party. As to their testimony against each other either may testify, but shall not be compelled so to do in a criminal proceeding against the other. The privilege is that of the spouse called and not of the defendant. In the case of the defendant in a criminal suit the question whether he will testify is decided by him alone. In only this last case is his failure to produce the evidence not to be taken against him. In all other proceedings and as to all witnesses except himself in a criminal proceeding against him, the defendant is left to the general principles of law as to what inference may be drawn against him for his failure to produce evidence in his favor. In this respect our statute differs from those of some states which expressly provide that the failure of one spouse to produce the other shall not in a criminal case be taken against the defendant." "Witness was not willing to testify positively that the defendant was the man who sold him the liquor, nevertheless he did testify that to the best of his recollection the defendant was the man. The evidence of the above witness rises above mere conjecture or suspicion. It assumes the dignity of the positive testimony of a witness who from the fact that he had no acquaintance with the defendant and had only seen him when he bought whisky from him on one occasion in the dark was unwilling to positively say that he was the man, but was willing to testify that, to the best of his recollection, he was the man. This witness having testified that, to the best of his recollection, the defendant was the man who had sold him the liquor, it was the duty of the court to submit, under the evidence in this case, the question of the defendant's guilt vel non to the jury." Witness testified that just before the shooting he heard one of the crowd or mob cry out, "Turn the damned negro loose." At that time West was about 250 or 300 yards away and was not able to recognize any member of the crowd or to determine or to say from seeing them whether any of them was a white man. In describing the tone of the voice, he said, "It was a cultured voice"; that he could distinguish the voice of a plantation negro from that of a cultured white man; and that in this instance it was the voice of a white man. The court said: "We think that this testimony was admissible. The recognition of the voice is a conclusion reached through the sense of hearing, like the recognition of the appearance of a person is a conclusion reached through the sense of sight. It is not a mere matter of opinion. It is admissible as direct and positive evidence, the weight of which is for the jury's determination. One may by the sense of hearing recognize the voice of a person with which he is familiar, and may likewise recognize and know the difference between the voices of persons of different nationalities, and between that of a white man and a negro." "In examination of the witness, the prosecution would hand the vest to a certain witness and ask them if they had ever seen the vest, and the witnesses were permitted to answer that it was Mr. Rudolph's vest. "While the burden is upon the plaintiff in such cases to prove whose machine was responsible for the accident resulting in his injury, and he must identify it to the satisfaction of the jury, he is not required to do an impossible thing, but only to produce such evidence as will satisfy the minds of 12 intelligent jurors of the identity of the machine. This might be done by showing the similarity between the peculiar and unusual decorations on the Roberts machine and those on the machine which frightened the plaintiffs' horse, and the plaintiffs might thus make a prima facie case which the defendants would be called upon to answer. . . . The rapidity with which an automobile travels, and especially the speed at which this one was going, would prevent a more specific identification than that given by the plaintiffs." When such evidence has been admitted defendant should have "the fullest opportunity by cross-examination to inquire into the breeding and testing of the dogs, and into any facts or circumstances tending to show that, by reason of their unreliability, or of their lack of proper training, the incriminating value of the evidence was impaired. "Prof. Wigmore says that such testimony is admissible for the purpose of restoring the credit of an impeached identifying witness; that is to say, where the witness is impeached by proof of prior contradictory statements showing that the identification is a recent contrivance. 2 Wigmore, 119, 1130. His views on this subject are not in accord with the weight of authority, as we attempted to show in Burks v. State, 78 Ark. 271, 93 S. W. 983, 8 Ann. Cas. 476, and we there declined to follow them. But nowhere, so far as we can ascertain, has it ever been held that a so-called 'extra judicial identification' is admissible as original testimony; and it was therefore, in any view of the case, inadmissible, for there was no attempt to impeach the witness by contradictory statements, or otherwise. The testimony was introduced as original evidence, and it was clearly inadmissible, for it was not competent to corroborate the identifying witness by proof of former identification." "In no case can a party calling a witness be permitted to impeach his general reputation for truth and veracity; but there are special circumstances under which he may be permitted to impeach or discredit him by showing that he had previously stated the facts in a different manner. The conditions under which this is allowable are thus stated in Smith v. Briscoe, 65 Md. 561, 5 Atl. 334: 'If the witness has made to the party who calls him, or to the attorney of such party, a statement totally variant from his sworn testimony, and on the faith of such testimony he has been called, he may be asked if he made such a statement, and if he denies, we see no objection to the proof of such statement, not for the purpose of impeaching the general character of the witness, but for the protection of the party calling him.'" Witness had testified that the defendant did not give the pistol to her, which was a material fact in the case, and it was proper to show that she had contradicted that statement by stating that he did give it to her. Harmon v. S., 166 Ala. 28, 52 S. 348.

"Among other things these witnesses were permitted to testify, after a proper predicate had been laid, that she (Mrs. Willie Pratt) stated to them soon after the homicide that she had never heard Mr. Lide say anything against Mr. Pratt, and again that she had stated that appellant's wife asked him immediately after the killing: 'Have you gone and killed old man Lide?' and appellant replied, 'Yes, by God, I have.' There can, we think, in the light of the record, be no sort of question that it was entirely proper to permit the impeachment of Mrs. Pratt as to the statement that she had never heard Mr. Lide say anything against Mr. Pratt.'' "There was no error in the allowance of this question, propounded by the solicitor on cross-examination of defendant's witness: 'Were you and his mother ever married?' On this examination in chief, this witness had testified 'that he was the father of the defendant.' The question complained of related, as is obvious, to the very matter, viz., paternity, which the defendant himself had introduced before the jury. While it does not appear that the state could be benefited by a refutation of the paternity which the witness had confessed on his examination in chief, yet it cannot be said that such want of benefit deprived the state of the right to reflect upon the truth of the former statement of fatherhood by showing that the witness and defendant's mother were never married." It was held error to refuse "to permit appellant to introduce in evidence the original sworn rendition of the property in question for taxes made by the appellee in January preceding the killing, and in refusing to require the appellee while a witness on the stand to answer whether or not he had rendered the jack for that year at the sum of $200. In Massachusetts, attention of witness need not be called to previous statement unless it is party's own witness. Am. A. C. Co. v. Hogan, 213 Fed. 416 (C. C. A.).

Defendant offered to read in evidence, for the purpose of impeachment, all of the testimony given by the witness on the trial of another. "There is no authority, under the laws of this state," said the court, "for the impeachment of a witness in that manner." S. v. Potts, 239 Mo. 403, 144 S. W. 495.

S. who testified on behalf of defendant was asked by the prosecutor if she did not at the preliminary examination of E. testify to a state of facts at variance with her evidence in this case. Said witness denied making the statement attributed to her, whereupon the prosecutor, over the objection of defendant, called one L., the magistrate who held the preliminary examination of E., and proved by him that the evidence of said S. upon the said preliminary was in conflict with her evidence as then given in this case. The court committed no error in permitting said witness to be impeached and discredited in this manner. "It matters not whether such prior statement was made in court as a witness in the same or a different case or made outside of a court at a time when the witness was not under oath." S. v. Eastham, 240 Mo. 241, 144 S. W. 492.

Discretionary with courts as to time question be asked, when witness absent. Miller v. Pearce, 86 Vt. 322, 85 A. 620.

"The court, without requiring the record to be shown the witness, permitted the cross-examination of the co-defendant Carpenter as to his failure to testify at the coroner's inquest and the preliminary examination concerning certain matters related at the trial. The questions were: 'I will ask you, Mr. Carpenter, if at the coroner's inquest, when you were detailing this affair before the inquest, if you testified to anything before the jury about hearing voices upon the bank'' and ''Now, I will ask you if both at the coroner's inquest you testified to anything about the peddler fishing there?'' and 'Now, I will ask you if both at the preliminary examination of this case, and at the former trial of this case, if you didn't place my hand upon this gun and testify that that was the manner in which the Indian grabbed it?' As to the first two, they were merely preliminary for the purpose of impeachment and were properly allowed, although the transcript of the testimony of the witness was not first shown him. "In the examination of H., it appeared that after D went away, and before the bankruptcy officials took possession, H. was in charge of the store, practically as agent for D., and on H's cross-examination there were intimations or efforts to show that he had not faithfully accounted to any one for the proceeds received, and, in effect, that he had embezzled such proceeds. This had no direct bearing on the issue, but was in the nature of an attack on his credibility. Later, D put on a witness and sought to prove the amount of money which had thus come into H's possession. The court excluded the evidence. This ruling was right. H's credibility as a witness could not be tried by raising and trying an independent issue as to his honesty, his interest or his motives." Daniels v. U. S., 196 Fed. 459, 116 C. C. A. 233.

"When a defendent in a criminal case becomes a witness in his own behalf, he is subject to impeachment like any other witness. The testimony which he gives may be discredited in the same manner that this may be done in the case of any other witness. Upon his cross-examination, therefore, he may be questioned relative to specific acts for the purpose of discrediting his testimony, and he may be asked as to whether or not he has suffered a former conviction for some crime affecting his credibility. When a defendant is a witness in his own behalf, the purpose of such testimony is only to impair his credibility, and not to exclude him as a witness, and such conviction may be shown therefore by his own cross-examination, and need not be shown by the record of the judgment. "When one seeks to impeach a witness, then his statements made at the time of or shortly after the occurrence are admissible to support his testimony in the trial, if it does do so." Williams v. S. (Tex.), 148 S. W. 763; Dickson v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 146 S. W. 914; Lewis v. S., 64 Tex. Cr. 490, 142 S. W. 875.

"Testimony of this character is known as evidence of a consonant statement; and this may be defined as a prior declaration of a witness whose testimony has been attacked, and whose credibility stands impeached which, considering the impeachment, the court will allow to be proved by the person to whom the declaration was made, in order to support the credibility of the witness, and which, but for the existence of such impeachment, would ordinarily be excluded as hearsay. To sustain the admission of such declarations, the impeachment must plainly appear, and must go to the credibility of the witness." Lyke v. R. Co., 236 Pa. 38, 84 A. 595. The court further said: "To a considerable extent the admission of such testimony is a matter to be decided in each case by the trial judge in the exercise of a wise discretion, and depends largely upon the character and degree of impeachment indulged in by the opposite party. Here the jury had the testimony of numerous witnesses for the defendant to declarations by the plaintiff contrary to his evidence given at the trial, and this with the other impeachments, despite the assertion of counsel for the defense, in objecting to the rebuttal testimony, that he did not so intend, could well be taken as conveying the charge that the plaintiff's testimony was not the story told by him from the time of the accident, but one concocted for the purpose of the trial, or what is known in the law as a recent fabrication. Therefore the trial judge was within his right in permitting the plaintiff to show that his testimony at the trial was consistent with his declarations made a few minutes after the accident and years before the suit was brought. Whether or not the declarations then made were for the purpose of putting him in a position subsequently to bring suit against the defendant was for the jury to consider in passing upon the weight of the evidence."

Only so much of prior statements as have been contradicted are admissible, and they only for purpose of affecting credibility. Hicks v. S., 165 Ind. 440, 75 N. E. 641.

255-2 Vickers v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 154 S. W. 578, opinion evidence.

255-3 Skidmore v. S., 57 Tex. Cr. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, competent to rebut evidence showing birth of child.

Reason of husband for marrying female whom he knew to be pregnant admissible as bearing on question of his paternity of child. Harris v. S., 64 Tex. Cr. 594, 144 S. W. 232.

255-6 S. v. Burt, 17 S. D. 7, 94 N. W. 409, under statute forbidding wife to testify against husband without consent, except when crime committed by him against her.

255-8 Pridemore v. S., 53 Tex. Cr. 620, 111 S. W. 155.

Not conclusion for prosecutrix to testify that accused had "sexual intercourse" with her. Details may be elicited on cross-examination. Straub v. S., 5 O. C. C. (N. S.) 529.

Consent of female or lack of it immaterial. McCaskill v. S., 55 Fla. 117, 45 S. 843; S. v. Freddy, 117 La. 121, 41 S. 436; Straub v. S., 5 O. C. C. (N. S.) 529; S. v. Winslow, 30 Utah 403, 85 P. 433; S. v. Aker, 54 Wash. 342, 103 P. 420 (and so of means used).

Conspiracy of prosecutrix and others to bring about commission of offense cannot be shown. S. v. Rennick, 127 Ia. 294, 103 N. W. 159.

Completion of sexual act obviates proof of emission. Latter inferred from circumstances. S. v. Judd, 132 Ia. 296, 109 N. W. 892.

Dying declarations of woman inadmissible.—P. v. Stison, 140 Mich. 216, 103 N. W. 542.

Exhibition to jury of child to show resemblance is proper. S. v. Russell, 64 Or. 247, 129 P. 1051.

Birth of child to prosecutrix proved (Barrett v. S., 55 Tex. Cr. 182, 115 S. W. 1187), though married at time of birth. Smothers v. S., 81 Neb. 426, 116 N. W. 152.

Birth of child admissible.—Jordan v. S., 62 Tex. Cr. 388, 137 S. W. 114.

Prosecutrix allowed to testify that she had a child where from the condition of the evidence the jury would infer that her testimony would have been against the state on this point. Harris v. S., 64 Tex. Cr. 594, 144 S. W. 232. "It is true that, in view of the testimony of the prosecutrix that she had no intercourse with any other man than her father, a doubt as to the paternity of the child might give rise to a doubt by necessary inference as to the general truthfulness of the testimony of the prosecutrix, but such a doubt would not necessarily result in an acquittal. The jurors might believe that in this one respect the prosecutrix testified falsely, and yet in view of the corroboration as to the transaction complained of have believed beyond a reasonable doubt that it took place." S. v. Heft, 155 Ia. 21, 134 N. W. 950.

258-18 P. v. Stison, 140 Mich. 216, 103 N. W. 542; Pridemore v. S., 53 Tex. Cr. 620, 111 S. W. 155; S. v. Manley, 82 Vt. 556, 74 A. 231.

Defendant's confession shown as substantive evidence, though denied by him. P. v. Block, 120 App. Div. 364, 105 N. Y. S. 275.

Mother of prosecutrix must be lawful wife of defendant. Hamilton v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 153 S. W. 331.

258-19 Knowledge of relationship no element of crime. S. v. Judd, 132 Ia. 296, 109 N. W. 892; S. v. Rennick, 127 Ia. 294, 103 N. W. 159. Otherwise under statutes. S. v. Winslow, 30 Utah 403, 85 P. 433.

258-20 Affirmative proof essential; witness' understanding as to existence of fact essential to validity of marriage relied on to establish relationship inadmissible. Harvill v. S., 54 Tex. Cr. 426, 113 S. W. 283.

258-21 S. v. Judd, 132 Ia. 296, 109 N. W. 892; Watkins v. S., 58 Tex. Cr. 110, 124 S. W. 959.

259-22 Relationship of daughter inferred from long residence with one whom she habitually addressed as mother, and that of uncle from frequent reference to him as such by accused, and of the mother in her presence as brother. S. v. Judd, 132 Ia. 296, 109 N. W. 892.

Where it appears that defendant had been married prior to marriage to the mother of prosecutrix it must also be proved that first marriage had been legally dissolved. Vickers v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 154 S. W. 578; Burford v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 151 S. W. 538.

Defendant's confession in presence of his wife and daughter not a confidential communication within Code Cr. Pro., 1911, art. 794. Cowser v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 157 S. W. 758.

Mere proof that female was his niece not sufficient. Blalack v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 162 S. W. 865.

259-23 Marriage license and return admissible without other proof than party who performed ceremony was public officer except designation following his signature. Baker v. S., 56 Tex. Cr. 16, 118 S. W. 542.

"Nothing was said about this testimony, or the age of the witness, before verdict; but the point was made in the motion for a new trial. If the defendant had any reason to believe that the witness was not qualified, he should have suggested this to the trial judge, either before he was permitted to testify, or by motion to exclude his evidence. A defendant will not be permitted to play fast and loose with the court. Courts are not forums in which to test the relative adroitness and ingenuity of opposing counsel, but are organized to administer the law with fairness and impartiality." INJURIES TO PERSON

Testimony of plaintiff, 375-4; Declarations of injured person, 375-4; Declaration amounting to conclusion, 377-9; Judicial notice pain suffered, 385-31; Actions for wrongful death, 406-99; Persons abnormal or suffering from incurable disease, 427-62; Duration of ancestor's life, 428-68; Responsibility of beneficiary for death, 441-6.

374 That defendant is protected by accident insurance is inadmissible. Shay v. Horr (Wash.), 139 P. 604. So also the admission of testimony that counsel for defendant represented an indemnity insurance company is error because it neither affected his liability or his credibility. Watson v. Adams (Ala.), 65 S. 528.

374-1 See "Expert and Opinion Evidence."

374-2 Contra if medical expert called examine plaintiff with a view to qualifying as a witness. Comstock v. Georgetown, 137 Mich. 541, 100 N. W. 788.

If plaintiff's condition has been fully testified to physician should not give opinion as to whether he was simulating. McCormick v. R. Co., 141 Mich. 17, 104 N. W. 390. Comp. Judd v. Caledonia, 150 Mich. 480, 114 N. W. 346.

375-4 Testimony of plaintiff he was injured and suffered is not only competent, but jury can accept and credit testimony based on his knowledge in preference to the evidence of "a whole college of physicians" he was not injured. Southern R. Co. v. Tankersley, 3 Ga. App. 548, 60 S. E. 297.

Declarations of injured person he was injured are admissible when part of res gestae. Runnels v. R. Co., 49 Tex. Civ. 150, 107 S. W. 647; St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. Coats (Tex. Civ.), 103 S. W. 662. See Nielson v. Co., 5 Neb. (Unof.) 430, 98 N. W. 1090, exclusion of evidence of declarations not fatal, the fact of injury being otherwise established.

Conversation between plaintiff and conductor of car from which plaintiff thrown, occurring immediately on reboarding car, in which conductor asked plaintiff if she was hurt, to which she replied she was, is part of res gestae and admissible. Nixon v. R. Co., 79 Neb. 550, 113 N. W. 117.

Statement of plaintiff to companion he was hurt, made immediately after arising from a fall and in response to inquiry, is admissible. Lexington v. Flcharty, 74 Neb. 626, 104 N. W. 1056.

Conversation between plaintiff and daughter when latter reached her mother immediately after the fall, not admissible Potter v. Cave, 123 Ia. 98, 98 N. W. 569.

Non-injury of other persons, similarly situated with person claiming to have been injured, may be shown. Kelly P. Co. v. London (Tex. Civ.), 125 S. W. 974.

Giving notice.—If statute requires notice be given defendant before suit brought plaintiff must show compliance therewith. Gutierrez v. R. Co., 102 Tex. 378, 117 S. W. 426.

If the actual physical cause of the injury is admitted by defendant upon the record, there is "left for inquiry only the question whether such actual physical cause was the legal or proximate cause. That may be a question of fact or a question of law, according to whether the evidence bearing on the subject is controverted or uncontroverted. The fact of reasonable anticipation of injury as an element of proximate cause may be established by the evidence, and, if so, any error in submitting it to the jury becomes innocuous if the jury answers the question correctly. Brossard v. Morgan Co., 150 Wis. 1, 136 N. W. 181.

The Indiana statute requires that an employer operating emery wheels shall provide exhaust fans of sufficient power for the purpose of carrying off dust from such wheels. If the plaintiff claims injury from failure to comply with this, to enable him to recover, he must show, in addition to the other material facts alleged in his complaint, that he was injured by the dust coming from the emery wheel in controversy and in considering that question the term "dust" should be considered and construed in accord with the ordinary and generally accepted meaning of the term. Indianapolis Fdry. Co. v. Lackey, 51 Ind. App. 175, 97 N. E. 349.

In an action for injuries sustained by being struck by an automobile, evidence as to whether the driver would or would not have driven at a dangerous rate of speed is irrelevant. McCown v. Muldrow, 91 S. C. 523, 74 S. E. 386.

(Del.) 52, 62 A. 898; Dunn v. R. Co., 130 Ia. 580, 107 N. W. 616 (where plaintiff was injured by a crowbar lying near the track, struck by a passing train, and hurled against him, it was improper to ask a physician whether the injury might have been caused by a crowbar "thrown by coming in contact with a swiftly moving object like a train"; the material question for witness was whether the injury might have been caused by the impact, and not whether the bar might had been thrown by the train or some other force).

It was objected, in substance, that the opinion of an expert in answer to an hypothetical question, "in a suit for damage for personal injury, is inadmissible in the development of plaintiff's prima facie case for the purpose of establishing the existence of such injuries, where the issue was not whether such character of accident could cause such injuries, but whether it did in fact cause the same." The court said: "There is nothing in this proposition. Plaintiff was clearly entitled to adduce any testimony of a competent character to connect the cause and the proximate results of the injury. This the plaintiff was entitled to do in making out her case as well as at some other stage of the proceeding." Gulf, etc. R. Co. v. Abbott (Tex. Civ.), 146 S. W. 1078.

A physician was asked if he heard appellee "make any complaint of pain about his hand, expressions of pain, and if so to state what he said." "The only objection to this question was that the statement was not competent unless prior to the commencement of this action. This was not a good objection. The question, fairly construed, asked him to state what he heard, if anything, in the way of expressions of present existing pain relating to the time he saw appellee. This class of testimony is competent, and its admissibility does not depend upon the statements being made before suit is begun. The ground of this objection might be considered in weighing such testimony, but not in determining its admissibility." Indianapolis So. R. Co. v. Tucker, 51 Ind. App. 480, 98 N. E. 431.

This deduction was one only which a medical expert could draw from the facts, or the jury in their exclusive province as triers of the facts."

Co., 58 Iowa 158, 12 N. W. 222. In the case before us the evidence was received on redirect examination of a witness and was explanatory of matters developed upon the cross-examination of the same witness. It was made to appear by the direct examination of such witness that the decedent was earning $3 to $4 per day. He was only 23 years old. On cross-examination it was shown that he had saved none of his earnings and had no property. This later circumstance was proper for the consideration of the jury as bearing upon the injury to the estate of the decedent by reason of his death. It follows, we think, that it was a proper explanation of the absence of property saved to show that he was supporting a dependent family on such earnings." Dufree v. R. Co., 155 Ia. 544, 136 N. What person has done and said for many years is pertinent. "On this ground, evidence that he had habitually cursed his wife and children during many years, and applied to them vile epithets, and questioned the chastity of his daughters when but 11 or 12 years of age, was admissible. As argued, a person may employ the language he indulged in, or consume the intoxicants he was shown to have disposed of, without being of unsound mind; but this does not obviate the probative value of such evidence, when considered in connection with other circumstances indicative of a weakened or diseased intellect." Evidence insufficient.—No specialist or person who had any experience in treating diseases of the mind was called as a witness. With the exception of two physicians, the witnesses were all neighbors, who did not claim and would not say that Miracle was mentally unsound. "Bill of exceptions shows that appellant offered to prove by the witness McIlvany that he had known the defendant 15 or 16 years, and had had more or less intimate knowledge of him for the last 3 or 4 years, and that from such knowledge he did not believe defendant could think consecutively, and that he did not think defendant had mental strength enough to form and plan a design to take life and carry same out, and that said witness McIlvany, if permitted by the court, would have so testified, to which counsel for the state objected for the following reason, to-wit: Because the test of lunacy was the knowledge of right and wrong, and that if such knowledge was possessed by defendant he would be guilty of murder in the first degree if the facts of premeditation and design and malice could be proven notwithstanding defendant's weak mental condition incapacitating him to make and carry out a plan. The court signs the bill with the statement that witness was not a doctor, nor expert in diseases of the mind, and question was leading, and also called for expert opinion. We think the ruling of the court was correct." Lane v. S., 59 Tex. Cr. 595, 129 S. W. 353.

Where witness was wife.—Melvin v. Murphy (Ala.), 63 S. 546.

California Code Civ. Proc., §1870, subs. 10, provides witness must be "intimate acquaintance." In re Coburn, 165 Cal. 202, 131 P. 352.

A witness who states that he had known the subject of inquiry while he was young, and had seen him while he was young every day or so, and had known him intimately for 27 or 28 years, is qualified to testify, from his observations he must necessarily have made of the conduct and declarations of the defendant, whether from such acts and declarations the defendant was, in his opinion, sane or insane. Bishop v. S., 96 Miss. 846, 52 S. 21.

The jailer was permitted to testify that during appellant's custody in the jail he had frequently talked with him, and from such he believed defendant was sane. He did not repeat any statement of defendant. This testimony was admissible. Lane v. S., 59 Tex. Cr. 595, 129 S. W. 353.

"It is no part of an insured's duty to negative a condition subsequent. The authorities are practically agreed in holding that the burden of proving the fraud is on the insurer." Benanti v. Ins. Co., 86 Conn. 15, 84 A. 109.

522-58 Mahoney v. Ins. Co., 3 O. N. P. (N. S.) 246.

"Because of the practical inconvenience of compelling proof of all of the conditions precedent in a policy of insurance the plaintiff under our rule may, upon proof of his interest, the issuance of the policy to him, the loss and compliance with the proofs of loss, rest upon the legal presumption that these conditions are prima facie established and the case made out. Thereupon the defendant may offer its proof of the several breaches which it may have pleaded, and these the plaintiff may in turn rebut. This burden of proof never shifts. Upon the whole evidence it is where it was at the beginning, upon the plaintiff, to prove his compliance with the terms and conditions precedent of the policy." Benanti v. Ins. Burden discharged if death by unexplained violent external means is shown. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding, 35 Colo. 19, 83 P. 1013.

"The burden was at all times upon the plaintiff to show, not only the death of the assured, but that it was caused by violent, accidental, and external means. Taylor v. Pacific Mutual Life, 110 Ia. 621, 82 N. W. 326. The appearance of the wound would clearly support the finding that the cause of the wound was violent and external. Jenkins v. Hawkeye Commercial Assn., 147 Ia. 113, 124 N. W. 199, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1181." Caldwell v. Traveling Men's Assn., 156 Ia. 327, 136 N. W. 678.

Burden sustained.—"On the Sunday of his death, C. with his son who was then about 15 years of age, had breakfast after 9 o'clock in the morning, and dinner at a little after 1 o'clock. Soon after dinner, the two went to the Elks' lodge-room, and in a few minutes after reaching there they both went to the pool for a bath. C. had been in the water a few minutes, and was walking towards his son, when he made a slight jump forward, made a few faint motions with his hands, and sank. He was taken from the pool five or ten minutes later, dead. An autopsy showed him to have been in perfect health in life, and the opinion of several medical experts was that the cold water had produced a shock from which C.'s system did not react; that his vitality was thereby reduced and a fainting spell brought on which caused him to sink; and that he was drowned. While the appellant earnestly insists that the evidence is insufficient to sustain a finding that C. was drowned, we think otherwise. The testimony of the physicians, based largely on the autopsy, it is true, together with the testimony of the eyewitnesses, was ample to take the case to the jury on that question." If the only question is whether death was accidental the burden of proof is on plaintiff to show the injury was not self-inflicted. Bemick v. Men's Assn., 175 Ill. App. 511.

"It has been repeatedly held that, in the absence of direct evidence on the subject, a presumption arises that the wound was not intentionally inflicted either by the assured or by another. This presumption is almost the equivalent of a presumption that the wound was inflicted through accidental means. The authorities, however, stop short of announcing the presumption in this later form. They do hold, however, that the presumption first stated is available to the plaintiff as affirmative evidence; and that an inference may be drawn therefrom by the triers of fact that the wound was caused by accidental means as the only other alternative." For court or jury?—"It is true that in cases such as this suicide is an affirmative defense, and generally it is a defense that should be submitted to the jury as an issue of fact; but it is not true that an affirmative defense cannot be so clearly and indisputably established that its existence should not be accepted by the court as proved in law. Where all the evidence in a case is of such character that it affords no room for reasonable controversy about an ultimate fact, there can be no issue, and therefore nothing concerning such fact for the triers of fact to determine. In Noonan v. Luther, 206 N. Y. 105, 99 N. E. 178, "when the defendant was testifying, he was asked this question. 'Did you have any intention, in placing your hands upon her as you did and pushing her as you did, did you have any other intention than to remove her from the premises as quietly as you could, using only such force as necessary?' On the objection of the plaintiff, the evidence was excluded as immaterial, to which the defendant excepted. In some respects, the form of this question was improper; but the objection taken was not to the form of the question, but to the materiality of the evidence. If objection had been made to the form, that could have been changed. We think the ruling of the trial court was erroneous, and that the evidence was not only material, but that the question of the defendant's intent was of vital importance, not on the amount of damages alone, but on the plaintiff's right of action."

A recent Alabama statute (Acts Special Session, 1909, pp. 63, 93, §32½) permits the state to give in evidence the fact that the beverage which the defendant sold or otherwise disposed of possessed "the same color, odor and general appearance, or the same taste, color and general appearance of a prohibited liquor or beverage." "Evidence that a beverage has the color, odor and general appearance of whisky, for instance, or that it has the taste, color and general appearance of beer, has some tendency to prove that it is a prohibited liquor within the meaning of the statute. But it cannot be said that proof of the mere color of a beverage has a logical or legitimate tendency to identify it as a prohibited liquor." Wright v. S., 4 Ala. App. 150, 58 S. 803.

In Johnson v. Grondin, 170 Mich. 447, 136 N. W. 423, there was testimony tending to show the use of vile language addressed to the plaintiff by her husband when he was in an intoxicated condition, of repeated assaults upon her, and of other misconduct on his part. "We think," said the court, "as was said by this court in Rice v. Rice, 104 Mich. 381, 62 N. W. 833, that when damages of this nature are recoverable, the amount of damages lies in the sound discretion of the jury; that they are not capable of actual measurement, and that it is not necessary to introduce any evidence of value. When the jury have before them the circumstances surrounding the wrong done, they have the basis on which they may find a verdict."

"There is no law which prohibits a person from keeping whisky, no matter what the quantity, unless it is kept for some unlawful purpose, and when the above charge is made the proof must not only show that the person charged had intoxicating liquors, but that the liquor was kept for an unlawful purpose. The testimony in this case does no more than create a suspicion that the beer found was kept for an unlawful purpose, if it can be said to do that. That a person ordered a cask of beer raises no presumption that he ordered it for an unlawful purpose. When a house is searched, and it is discovered that the beer has been put to the use which it might be supposed the party ordering it intended it should be, and for which it is made, and when it additionally appears that the beer had been opened with a cork-screw and drunk from a glass, this is not sufficient to warrant the presumption that it was kept for an unlawful purpose. When section 1747 of the Code of 1906, as amended by Acts 1908, p. 117, provides that the fact that any person had in possession appliances adapted to the retailing of liquor shall be presumptive evidence that the person having the appliances is engaged in keeping intoxicating liquors for sale, or for the purpose of giving same away in violation of law, it does not and cannot mean that when a home is invaded and searched, and glasses, and a waiter, and a corkscrew, and intoxicating liquors are found, that these things alone shall warrant the conviction of any person under this statute. . . . If these things be found in a storehouse, or in and about a person's place of business, this fact may be a stronger circumstance of guilt than when found in a home; but in all cases these things alone cannot be said to be such appliances, within the meaning of the statute, as to warrant a conviction in themselves. It may be difficult to prove the crime charged in this affidavit, and it should be.'' Minter v. City of Jackson, 101 Miss. 139, 57 S. 549.

Evidence that empty whisky bottles and other jugs and bottles containing whisky were found on premises was admissible. Smith v. S., 12 Ga. App. 482, 77 S. E. 651.

"It appears that prior to the adoption of the local option law appellant was engaged in the saloon business, and when prohibition was adopted he entered into the cold drink business, and took out internal revenue license to sell intoxicating liquor; that when prosecuting witness desired a bottle of whisky he went into appellant's place of business and called for 'cheese,' and placed 75 cents on the counter, when appellant would go into the back room, and upon his return the prosecuting witness would go into the room and get the whisky wrapped in tissue paper. This would tend to show a method and system by which appellant was engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors, and was admissible for the purpose of showing the system by which appellant made sales, if he did do so. James v. State, 138 S. W. 612." Columbo v. S. (Tex. Cr.), 145 S. W. 910.

In Texas "the legislature, in making it an offense to pursue the business or occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, has provided that no person shall be convicted of that offense unless it be shown that he has made at least two sales in three years, and this court has held, in the case of Fitch v. State, 58 Tex. Cr. R. 366, 127 S. W. 1040, that as the legislature has provided that two sales must be proven, that the person to whom the two sales were made must be alleged in the indictment, and it being necessary to prove two sales, they must be proven as alleged, but the rules of evidence are not otherwise changed, and all evidence which would tend to show that the person under indictment was guilty of the offense of pursuing that business or occupation named would be admissible." In Hall v. Hall, 122 N. Y. S. 401, the attack was sought to be made not by a party, but by a stranger to the record, and the court held such course permissible, cit. Brownell v. Snyder, 122 App. Div. 246, 106 N. Y. S. 771. "It may be that in the present case the defendant in the Colorado action could only attack the judgment which was rendered against him by application to the court in which that judgment was rendered, and in the action in which it was rendered. But the plaintiff in this action was not a party to the action in Colorado, and would have no standing to make such an application. He must have the right, either in Colorado or elsewhere, to question the validity of the judgment collaterally in so far as it affects his interests. He has satisfactorily established that that judgment was procured by fraud, which would require the court by which it was rendered to vacate it upon a proper application, and I think it may be pronounced void in the present action."

"It has come to be accepted law that where the right to letters of administration of an estate depends upon relationship to the intestate (Code, §2520), and that question is investigated and determined by a court generally jurisdictioned in the premises, and the letters are granted accordingly, that adjudication is conclusive, as to relationship to the decedent and as to the right to distribution, upon parties to that proceeding, and the judgment therein cannot be collaterally assailed in another form. "There is no presumption that one who does not appear to have been a party had his day in court, but the recital or silence of a judgment is not fatal. The true facts may always be shown. In the one instance that jurisdiction was never acquired over an alleged party; in other instance that a person not named as a party of record, did, in fact, appear in the action as a party. Recitals in a judgment of a court of record are not necessary, and the facts of jurisdiction may always be shown. 2 Rumsey's Practice, p. 688; Freeman on Judgments, §48; Hampton v. Dean, 4 Tex. 456. Numerous are the instances where a party not in privity with any party to the action and not named as a party of record has yet been bound by the judgment." Hendrick v. Biggar, 66 Misc. 576, 122 N. The test is not the nature of relief prayed, but whether facts found and adjudged are same as those to be litigated in case at bar. Tew v. Webster, 118 Minn. 375, 136 N. W. 1098. And see Mason v. Mason, 5 Ala. App. 377, 59 S. 699.

"The claim asserted by the complaint in the former suit was broad enough to have comprehended the one sought to be maintained in the present action, and that damages because of the failure of the principal in the bond, after the date of the judgment in that suit, to provide the stipulated maintenance and support were recoverable in that suit, and that judgment, the result of a trial of the case had upon the merits, might well be pleaded as a bar to the plaintiff's right to maintain the claim asserted by her in the present suit." Mason v. Mason, 5 Ala. App. 377, 59 S. 701.

"The verdict of the jury renders res adjudicata as to the complainant and the defendants or their successors (it happens that they are the same parties in this action) the precise question only which was submitted to the jury, namely, whether or not, upon any of the grounds upon which a verdict could depend, the complainant had sustained the burden of proof." In Roanoke Rapids Power Co. v. Power Co., 152 N. C. 472, 68 S. E. 190, the court pointed out that the language of the court in the former case excludes the idea that the present facts were considered or decided.

The burden is on the party who relies on the judgment as a bar to show such happenings at the former trial as would make the judgment an adjudication of issues now presented. Sparrow T. A. Co. v. Mack, 195 Fed. 474, 115 C. C. A. 384.

"Where a cause of action, matter in defense, or counterclaim is once litigated on the merits in a court of competent jurisdiction, whether decided properly or otherwise, the judgment is a bar, and whether the judgment be res adjudicata is to be decided on the "record," which, in the limited sense in which that term is here used, means the judgment roll only showing the pleadings and judgment, provided the judgment be such, in the light of the pleadings, that it necessarily shows whether or not the cause of action, defense, or counterclaim over which the question arises was litigated; but, if not, then it is incumbent on the party interposing the judgment as a bar to show the essential facts by the record of the proceedings on the trial or other parol evidence." "Where a suit, action, or proceeding is sought to be maintained upon the same claim, a previous judgment concerning it, as an estoppel, is very broad in its effect. It concludes every fact necessary to uphold it, and extends not only to matters actually determined, but to every other matter which the parties might have litigated and have had decided as incident to and essentially connected with the subject-matter of the litigation. But the rule is otherwise where the second action or proceeding is sought to be maintained upon a different claim. There the prior judgment will only operate as an estoppel against matters actually litigated, or as to facts distinctly in issue and upon which such judgment is predicated. These principles are well established. Cromwell v. County of Sac, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; White v. Ladd, 41 Or. 324, 332, 68 Pac. 739, 93 Am. St. Rep. 732. It is also settled law that a judgment upon a question directly involved in one suit is conclusive as to that question in another suit between the same parties; but to have this operation it must appear from the record or be shown by extrinsic evidence that the precise question was raised and determined in the former suit. Any uncertainty on this head must be dispelled by extrinsic proof; otherwise, the entire subject-matter of the action will be set at large upon the new contention. Russell v. Place, 94 U. 863-46 Bench notes of judge.—The mere fact that the bench notes made by the judge do not mention the pleadings in question does not furnish record evidence that no such action was taken as set out in the minutes, for the reason that there is no law requiring the judge to make bench notes, and the minutes of the court, and not the bench notes, constitute the record of the case. Nor does the fact that the previous judgment appears on the loose leaves of the minutes furnish any such record evidence, for, without the aid of parol testimony, it shows that it was erased, which is presumed to be the act of the court. Lessor may testify of purpose in taking possession of and reletting premises abandoned by lessee. Higgins v. Street, 19 Okla. 45, 92 P. 153, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 398.

Unauthorized entry upon premises after abandonment, and attempt by lessor to relet them in own name tends strongly to show acceptance of surrender, but not conclusive. It seems, that an actual reletting by lessor in own name to another tenant for a different period than they were leased to defendant for would be conclusive evidence of acceptance of surrender. "Evidence of the cost price of an article is not conclusive as to its value; nor, indeed, is evidence as to its selling price. The test by which the degree of guilt of the accused is to be determined is the value of the article at the time it was stolen, and this value is to be arrived at by the jury from a consideration of all the facts and circumstances shown in the evidence. Where the article stolen is in general use, and has what might be called a standard market value, of course, the best evidence of the value of such an article is the price at which it sells in the open market. But where the article does not appear to have a standard value in the open market, or its standard value is not shown, the evidence of its value must be arrived at from facts and circumstances testified to by witnesses who qualify themselves to speak as to its value." Denials of paternity by the putative father are admissible only for the purpose of determining whether or not the acknowledgment was in fact ever made and intended, but not for the purpose of defeating such acknowledgment once actually made and intended. Haddon v. Crawford, 49 Ind. App. 551, 97 N. E. 811.

Presumption of paternity from subsequent marriage.—Where statutes declare if a man having a child by a woman afterwards marries her and recognizes the child, it shall be legitimate, the marriage of a man to an unmarried woman who has had a child born out of lawful wedlock creates some presumption that it was his child, though not as strong as in case of child born after marriage. Stein v. Stein, 32 Ky. L. R. 664, 106 S. W. 860. Such statutes sometimes make such recognition a legitimation of the child, in which case the contrary cannot be shown. Where they do not, presumption of paternity, and hence of legitimacy, arising from such recognition is at least as strong as in case of child born in lawful wedlock. The same is true when the servant is working overtime. St. Louis I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Martin, 104 Ark. 274, 149 S. W. 69.

Rebutted by custom to warn.—Wickstrom v. Whitney, 118 Minn. 416, 136 N. W. 1099.

So it would seem that, where a servant knows of dangers incident to doing a work in a particular way, and voluntarily undertakes to perform it that way, instead of doing it in a safer way which was known to him, he should be denied a recovery for injuries sustained, upon the ground that he assumed the risk of the known danger. Jenney Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Flannery (Ind. App.), 98 N. E. 424.

Even though such dangers are not usually incident thereto.—Jenney Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Flannery (Ind. App.), 98 N. E. 424.

Presumption rebutted.—Larsen v. Mange-Lilica Co., 14 Cal. App. 70, 111 P. 119.

If one has full knowledge of the dangers, momentary forgetfulness would not relieve him from the rule of assumption of risk. Courtney v. Mfg. Co., 122 N. Y. S. 721.

No hidden defects.—Davis v. Co., 133 N. Y. S. 247.

It is manifest that the inflexible rule cannot be laid down that in all cases linemen are charged with the entire responsibility for due inspection of poles before going upon them, for the responsibility would depend on the rules and practice of the companies which they serve, the knowledge of the linemen of such rules and practice, the experience of the linemen, and, perhaps, other circumstances.'' Construing the statute, "the reasonable and obvious interpretation is that an assumption of risk does not follow as a matter of law from a knowledge or understanding of the risk, but is a question of fact to be decided by the jury under all the circumstances peculiar to the case. In this respect, the change wrought by the statute was to make applicable to actions brought under it the prevailing doctrine of recent English cases, where the rule as to the assumption of risks was applied less rigidly as against the employe." "A promise to remedy a defect complained of does not prove that the defect actually existed, or establish negligence on the part of the master; but, a defective condition having been proved, a promise to repair may be proved for the purpose of shifting the risk from the servant to the master himself. Where a defect which might constitute negligence is shown, the injured employe may prove that he called the attention of his master to the defect, and that the master promised to repair, and during the continuance of the promise, if it was in fact made, the risk of injury through reasonable care in the use of the defective machine rests on the master, and not on the servant." 612-82 Henderson Mfg. Co. v. Nicholson (Ky.), 126 S. W. 139.

614-93 Presumption as to rights of respective lessees.—There is a presumption that right to let down surface of land by lessee of it for mining purposes does not exist unless contrary is apparent from lease. This presumption may be met by evidence of the circumstances, under which lease executed, including facts known to both parties. Butterknowle C. Co. v. Co. (1906), App. Cas. 305. Thus, if it is shown the authorized working of lower seam will not make it impossible to work upper seam and it is impossible to work such seam without affecting the upper one, presumption is overcome. Plaintiff must show it was practicable for defendant to comply with statute requiring safe-guarding of machinery. Laporte C. Co. v. Sullender, 165 Ind. 290, 303, 75 N. E. 277; Henschell v. R. Co., 78 Kan. 411, 96 P. 857. (In the latter case statute used words "when practicable," in former, such words not used.)

The fact that accurate evidence of the manner and cause of the accident is not available does not change the burden. Hayden v. Joline, 122 N. Y. S. 629, injury from defective pavement.

That damage was caused by plaintiff's negligence set up in answer as matter of defense in reducing the amount of the special damage which the plaintiff claimed to recover for the defendant's breach of his covenant to repair must be established by defendant. "It is not a case, as the defendant claims, of contributory negligence. If the defendant broke his covenant, he was liable for at least nominal damages. If the plaintiff negligently placed his goods where he knew they must be damaged by water from the leaky window and roof, he could not recover for that damage." Rumberg v. Cutler, 86 Conn. 8, 84 A. 107.

A servant to make a case against his master "must present to the jury a state of facts that will show that at the time of the injury an ordinarily prudent man in the place of his master would have apprehended that the use of the tools or appliances furnished would, by reason of their condition, probably result in injury to the servants." Lowe v. R. Co., 165 Mo. App. 523, 148 S. W. 956.

In an action for injury to a passenger to cast the burden upon the carrier, it must first be shown that the injury complained of resulted from something improper or unsafe in the conduct of the business or in the appliances of transportation. Smith v. Ribblett, 233 Pa. 300, 82 A. 245.

Where the pleader has averred several specific acts of negligence in his petition and pointed out the particulars in which the obligation to exercise ordinary care for the safety of plaintiff's husband was breached, the presumption of negligence involved in the phrase "res ipsa loquitur" is not available as prima facie evidence of fault on the part of defendants; and it, therefore, devolved upon plaintiff to show, by the facts and circumstances in evidence, at least one of the breaches of duty specified in the petition. Capehardt v. Murta, 165 Mo. App. 55, 145 S. W. 827.

A statute imposing upon a railroad company the duty of maintaining fences does not change the rule. Cross v. R. Co., 123 N. Y. S. 908.

Modified by statute in some cases. See Park v. Buxton, 10 Ga. App. 356, 73 S. E. 557; New England Box Co. v. R. Co., 210 Mass. 465, 97 N. E. 140.

"In personal injury cases the burden is always on the plaintiff to prove that the injury was the direct result of the negligence alleged. The principles and rules of the 'humanitarian doctrine' have not affected this rule." Veatch v. R. Co., 145 Mo. App. 232, 129 S. W. 404.

Gross negligence.—"Where a plaintiff charges gross negligence and the injury is one that might, under the circumstances, be the result of mere inadvertence, it is necessary, to sustain the charge, to have some evidence to take the injury out of the field of ordinary negligence. The burden is upon the plaintiff to show gross negligence; and such burden is not met by showing facts and circumstances amounting at most to only ordinary negligence." Willard v. R. Co., 150 Wis. 234, 136 N. W. 646.

Individual responsibility for negligent act need not be shown if injury resulted from thing in defendant's custody. Crawford v. Co., 215 Mo. 394, 114 S. W. 1057.

Question for court.—"Sometimes proof of a particular fact establishes the negligence, in case of there being any, because the act of commission or omission, under the circumstances, is negligence as matter of law. Then the act being conclusively established there is nothing for a jury to do. But where whether there was negligence or not is dependable upon inference of fact from evidentiary circumstances, established by direct evidence, or conceded, in general, the question is for the jury. It is only where there is, obviously, no conflict in the permissible inferences from the evidence, circumstantial and direct, that the question is for the court." The Georgia act of 1909 "creates a cause of action in all cases where an employe is killed or injured as the result of negligence on the part of the agents or servants of a railroad company, or negligent defects in its equipment or roadbed. If death results from an injury to an employe, the company is presumed to have been negligent, and carries the burden of proving diligence. 'If death does not result from the injury, the presumption of negligence shall be and remain as now provided by law in case of injury received by an employe in the service of a railroad company.' Civil Code 1910, §2782. In Wrightsville & Tennille R. Co. v. Tompkins, 9 Ga. App. 154, 70 S. E. 955, this court had occasion to discuss the act of 1909 at some length, and especially that part of the statute quoted above. It was held that the act 'did not affect existing presumption, so far as an employe injured, but not killed, is concerned.'" Atkinson v. Swords, 11 Ga. App. 167, 74 S. E. 1093.

See, however, North German Lloyd S. S. Co. v. Roehl (Tex. Civ.), 144 S. W. 322, where it is said; "The fact that other steamship companies and other persons engaged in a similar business had not equipped toilet rooms of the kind in question with guard rails, if such was proven to be a fact, did not justify appellant in failing to provide such a rail in the room in question, if a very cautious and prudent person, in the exercise of that high degree of care that is required by law of a carrier of passengers would have provided it. Whether such guard rail should have been provided, and whether a failure to so provide it was negligence, were questions that were, under the peculiar facts of this case, ones for the jury."

Conflicting evidence.—Sumpter v. S., 62 Fla. 98, 57 S. 202.

Where, during the trial of a criminal case, the jury were, by consent, allowed to disperse, and one of the jurors heard a conversation between a witness for the state and a third person, in which the accused was denounced by the witness as having stated a falsehood, in his statement to the jury, as to a material fact, this denunciation had presumptively an effect on the mind of the juror detrimental to the accused, and this presumption was not fully rebutted by the affidavit of the juror that it did not influence his finding.
