The papers that came by yeaterday's is educerned, at the fliery of Great Britain.

I should have set on already if I dad not see among the national names of the magnetic sent calculated to impress upon us the greatness of the provisional government, that of a prince with which mine never can have any thing in containing the following information:

Office of the Margantile Advertiser,

We admit the Battish protension of considering the belongs, cannot be the branch to which he belongs to the branch to the branch to the branch to the branch to the belongs to the belongs to the branch to the belongs to the belongs to the belong we admit the Retain pretension of considering their solemes in a double character—at one time as integral parts of the empire, at another as distinct from the mother country, and subject to entirely different regulations. The effect of this double relation is, that England views her own trade with the colonies, and requires others to view it as a string trade; while in their trade with other i those same colonies are put looting, and submitted to different regulations, from those which govern the intercourse between the same nations and Great Britain.

Secondly.—And as a consequence of the above pretention, we agree to trade with the British colonies, as countries not identified with and composing parts of the mother country; and, at the same time, agree to consider them so far part of the mother country as to suffer ourselves to be interdicted from the trade between the colonies and the mother country, (though we may trade from the colonies to all other parts of the world) because that is claimed by England as in the nature of a coasting trade!

Thirdly.—We agree that British ships, from any where, shall load in our ports for, or unload from, the West Indies, upon precisely the same boting, as to duties on cargo and vessel, as Anerican ships; the effect of which may be, that British West Indiamen, which now for the most part go out in ballast, and upon expense, to the colonics, may, in London, Liverpool, Bristol, or elsewhere, take freight for this country—salt, coals, crates, and other heavy articles,—thereby interfering with our own ships in those portscome to the United States, and there take another freight for the colonies-interfering thus a second time with our own navigation-and, arrived in the colonies, have the choice either of going to any other part of the world; thus a third time competing with our vessels. If freights mme from the colonies be dull, then West Innamen may come here with their cargoes upon the same footing as Americans, discharge the same, or such parts as may be profitable, and then for a forth time interfere with our shipping, by taking, at diminished rates, the produce of this country to Great Britain. Here are conces-sions, which, in our judgement would, if Bri-

Fourthly.—In the teeth of our whole practice and history, as a commercial people, seriving on all occasions to influduce the principles of perfect reciprocity in trade, we agree to accept a trade restricted to certain ports, and to certain enume-rated articles—which articles are burdened with eavy duties-to which similar articles from the Vorth American Colonies are not subject; and, as an aquivalent for such privileges! we concede to British vessels, equally with our own, an undimited right to import from the Colonies, into any of our ports, any article of any sort!

Such as a squivalent for such privileges! we concede to British vessels, equally with our own, an undimited right to import from the Colonies, into any of our ports, any article of any sort!

Such as squivalent for such privileges! we concede the control of the sincerity of his any of our ports, any article of any sort!

When dying on the rock of St. Heles, back the second of the sincerity of his publica, Chadwick, 35th second of the sincerity of the such tends of the sincerity of his publica, Chadwick, 35th second of the sincerity of th s an aquivalent for such privileges! we concede and clsewhere, and thence taken to the British islands, may now be carried to these islands di-rectly, equally in American and British ships. Live stock and lumber, which cannot bear a circannot see and tamber, which cannot bear a cir-culture voyage, and to the trade in which arti-cles, therefore, the opening of a direct intercourse may be chiefly henelicial, can now be carried di-rectly to the British ports; and American ships can thence bring back cargoes to the United States, of rum, molasses, and any thing else they may find in the Colonies, suitable to our market or they may load for any European port, out of Great Britain, that may tempt their enterprize. It is to this last provision that we look for a possible compensation for some of the disadvantages to which the other conditions of this intercourse may subject us: but even in indulging this antieipation, we bear in mind that, from the cir-ships obtained a state enough that our ships obtained a state enough the ships obtained a state enough the carrying freights from the Colonies Europe. As to any general effect of the opening of this trade upon the commerce of this country, or any be left to themselves in the struggle for indelimmediate or perceptible activity to be given by it to business in general, the expectation, if it be is a wonderful regenerator. Paris, under the mercenary steel of Swiss.

The great trial of the revolution is not yet de termined. The Emperer Napoleon thought that blood enough had been spilt in the interior of France, and wished to close every wound. He threw the country open to all those whom he go hay, to the master.

Ship Alciopers hite from Newburyport. deemed as tired of civil war as he was; adjourning the complete freedom of the nation till a general peace, when he should no longer need immense, dictatorial power, with which to make head against the united forces of Europe, incessandy excited by the rivalry of England, and the oligarchy of its ministry. He wished to put an end to the revolution, and offered himself as mediator in France, and moderator in Europe. England constrained him by the wars she perpetually raised, to those conquests which she Assurances are given that our youth have mude great progres towards republican opinions. Doubtless government is a semedy for an evil. Doubless government is a semely for an evil. Happy the country wise enough to do without it. We perceive scarcely any traces of it in the happy the country where we have so long resided. But is that a state suitable for France? Is it not the irritation caused by the absurd pretensions of the government that has weighed it down for fifteen years, which has roused that generous youth beyond, perhaps, what will suit the rest of their fellow-citizens at present, and the tranquility of France and Europe?

A third hypothesis remains: that of my being called upon by honor, by duty, by what I now to France emancipated, and to Aspolean Second, to the son of a brother whom I ought to love and the restors.
