SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Sweet Peas.

A bed or bench of sweet peas sown at this time will produce a nice crop of flowers in spring when the winter blooming plants are nearly through flowering and the blooms beginning to grow small and before any outside can be had. The newer Spencers make splendid varieties to plant at this time, and while they will not bloom as early as the winter blooming varieties, yet will flower before the warm summer weather, and the beautifully formed flowers make a welcome change. Select a bench with plenty of head room, for these easily grow to a height of six or eight feet under favorable conditions. The seed can be sown six inches apart in rows, with about three feet between rows, and lightly covered. It is just as well to sow two or three seeds together and when they begin to grow thin out to one plant. The beds must be watered sparingly until the plants are large enough to twine on the supports, for they damp off easily even when five or six inches high if overwatered. As soon as the tendrils on the vines appear provide some support for them to twine upon and keep the plants growing erect throughout their culture or crooked stems and worthless flowers will be the result. A cool house is far better for these plants than one having a warm temperature. Aphid are often troublesome in growing sweet peas and a spray is far better with these plants than fumigation.

Chrysanthemum Stock.

This is the time to look over the chrysanthemum stock to see how the cuttings are breaking. There may be some varieties that are not throwing as many cuttings as they should or some that are not in good health and there are yet some growers that have stock plants for sale, so where from either cause it looks as if the supply might not be sufficient, new stock should be purchased at once. Where the stock plants are in good health but there are not enough to furnish the requisite number of cuttings, the early cuttings may be taken and rooted and these grown in flats until it is time to propagate the plants for blooming, and cuttings made from these. There are also some varieties of which good cuttings can be procured at this time, but after the first growths are removed, do not break satisfactorily. These should surely be taken now and grown on in flats, notably as one of this class is Miss Virginia Poehlmann, and some varieties, such as President Roosevelt, are short-jointed and slow in their growth, so early cuttings are preferred. It is a good time now to look the stock over and be sure of good plants and enough of them for another season.

Stocks.

The demand for flowers at Decoration day is in many cases for bunches or sprays to lay upon the graves of the departed relatives and friends, and as much show as can be made is often the object, therefore, the grower must have a quantity of what are called the cheaper flowers, and stocks are one of the best at this time, for they are large and prominent, make up well in bouquets or sprays, and are quickly and easily grown. The seed should be sown by February 1 to be sure to have them in flower by the end of May. The seed germinates quickly and as soon as large enough should be potted. Many grow them in flats but to have them early pot culture is better, for they do not receive such a severe shock when transplanted in the benches. The planting in the benches should be done in the month of March and the plants can be grown in two ways, to the single spike which will produce a much larger, handsome bloom or to eight or ten lateral spikes. The former method allows of planting from three to four inches apart, while in the latter the plants should be set eight to nine inches each way. Growing the latter way, that is to eight or ten spikes, is the culture most often practiced, and in order to cause the plant to branch, as soon as the terminal flower forms it is rubbed out, and the laterals will grow at once. To have these laterals in bloom for Decoration day the terminal bud should show by the last of April, which will allow about four weeks for the growth of the laterals and the finishing of the bloom. Constant fumigation will be necessary to keep the plants clean of aphids, which very rapidly accumulate on the succulent growth unless kept in check.

Hydrangeas.

The plants of hydrangeas that are to be in bloom for Easter should be started at once, for it is much better to grow them along slowly than to wait and bring them in later and force them much harder. This will give the plants more natural conditions and they will finish with shorter-jointed growths, being not nearly so tall, and well furnished with large heavy foliage completely covering the stems. The plants started at this time should be first placed in a greenhouse having a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees and if the buds and stems look very dry, frequent syringings of the branches will quickly make the buds fill up. After the first leaves are fully formed the plants can be moved in a warmer house and they should come along nicely for Easter—a house with carnation temperature should bring them in bloom by that time, but if the buds are not well set early in March a still warmer temperature will be required. If grown in a warm temperature keep a sharp lookout for red spiders, which gather on the blooms and quickly ruin them.

Hybrid Roses.

Well grown plants of Hybrid Perpetual roses are always good property at Easter and they are very easily brought into bloom when the date of that festival is in April. Pot grown stock is surer of the best results, but dormant stock of many varieties will produce nice plants if properly handled. The plants should be cut back to two eyes on each growth and started in a cool house, one with a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees being preferred, from the first to the fifteenth of January. Frequent syringings will swell the wood and cause the breaks to open evenly. When the buds form the plants should be watered with liquid manure at least once a week. They will probably not have to be carried to a warmer house, but if it is found they are not going to be in bloom in time a little warmer temperature will hurry them along. There are a few varieties that make fine pot plants, those most generally known being Magna Charta, Mme. Gabriel Luizet and Frau Karl Druschki.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Kindly inform me if it is injurious to the roots of sprengeri to pull it, or should it be cut?

Ontario.

F. C.

Sprays of sprengeri should be cut, not pulled. By pulling, especially when the plants are young, they are apt to be disturbed and when they are big and strong the labor of pulling would be greater, besides leaving an unsightly stump. C.

Mrs. Wilson's Table.

The accompanying illustration shows the table exhibited by Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, Cleveland, at the Ohio Horticultural Society's show November 14-16. This table took the second prize in an entry list of seven. The roses were Killarneys, a high vase of them being in the center. Clustered at the base of the vase were three beautiful "hats" of pink chip straw. These were trimmed with clusters of the roses and "feathers" made of tulle and roses with a judicious use of wide satin Killarney ribbon. The candle shades were about the line of vision and were a perfect match in color. The corsage bouquets were of the same with boutonnières to match. The guest cards were a popular feature.

Girdle Shower Corsage Bouquet.

Of all the pretty suggestions recently seen in the way of corsage bouquets the girdle shower is among the most artistic and picturesque, especially for the debutante. It lends to so many ways of arrangement and should be deftly made.

A violet girdle shower made to be worn at a reception recently was made in the following manner: A narrow velvet ribbon, the shade of the lightest tone in the violets was used. On this the violets were sewed as if in a circle. At the left side about fifteen violets were bunched and from this the shower was suspended—tiny strands of the very narrow baby velvet ribbons were used to tie the tiny bunches of violets. An occasional small green leaf of the violets were used to break the monotony of color. This girdle arrangement was also put into use at a wedding where the bridesmaids all wore the girdle shower made of lily of the valley and pink sweet peas, the girdle part being of sweet peas and the shower of a combination of the two. Pink ribbons were used. At a New Year's reception the hostess wore a shower girdle of red berries and made a most striking effect. The same arrangement as above described was used and a small bunch of the berries finished the shower at the left side.

This will also look well when used with tiny pink rosebuds and maiden hair for the bridesmaids and flower girls. The girdle shower has been very popular during the holidays and bids fair to become even more so as the season advances. A. E. K.

Memorial Vase.

The basket used for this was about three feet tall and was made the regulation way of the tall affairs of the umbrella-stand variety. As the flowers to be placed in were intended to last for several days they had to be arranged in wet moss and receptacles placed in the basket. Very choice poinsettias were used and made the taller back effect of the arrangement. These tapered in different lengths toward the center, where they were, down to the edge of the basket. In the center, attached to a round branch, an artistic small cross made of red berries was placed. Boxwood was used for greens and a garland made of boxwood interspersed with red berries was draped around the base of the vase. On either side of the vase, which had wicker handles, an immense red satin bow was arranged and fell to the platform on which it was standing.

Another memorial vase was made entirely of American Beauties and asparagus vines. The asparagus vines were interlaced with garlands of rose foliage. In front of the lower half of vase a sort of medallion effect was arranged of lily of the valley and catleya orchids. Six large roses in the center stood up above the others and had an immense bow of American Beauty shade of ribbon attached to them. The ends of this were taken in through the foliage and tied in another bow at the left. A. E. K.

THE CRITIC.

The Rationale of Propagating.

Growing plants and propagating them can never be reduced to an abstract science. Some classes of work can be so standardized and worked out along special lines that a man need have little more brains than a machine to carry them out. But when we come to deal with living plants it is different. When a doctor diagnoses a case his patient can tell him "where he feels the pain," and usually does so free enough. But a doctor of plants, though dealing with a living object, has to form his own conclusions by observation alone as to what is the matter. When healthy he must also be able to keep them healthy. In no branch of the business is this more necessary than in propagating. A noted florist of the old school in England said that "every portion of a live plant contained all the rudiments essential to the formation of a new one." This may be perfectly true, but it does not follow because the rudimentary parts are there that conditions can be so arranged as to insure the metamorphosis into a living, rooting plant of, say, a rose or carnation leaf or stem.

Plant growers know well that certain genera, gloxinias, begonias and others, will root perfectly from a leaf or even a portion of a leaf, but it does not follow that everything else will do so, even if the rudimentary parts are there. This being so, it is up to the propagator to find out just what is the best method of increase for any species which he is called upon to handle. There are many of our hard wooded shrubs that root finely outdoors from cuttings made of ripened wood. Others again need heat, and still another lot cannot be propagated this way at all, and the grower has to catch his wood just in the right stage between the green, undeveloped wood and the ripened, just in fact when the cambium is sufficiently in evidence to granulate or callus. But as deciduous trees are carrying the first leaves at this stage, it becomes necessary to place the cuttings in such an atmosphere that the foliage will not wilt, hence the propagating frame or light.

As a general rule the worst difficulty in propagating is to give sufficient heat and moisture to cause the emission of roots without causing active top growth, and this is the reason why a brisk bottom heat and cool tops are best for the purpose. Some go on the theory that it is impossible to keep cuttings too moist, but this is an error. It is true there are some plants that will root even in water without the aid of soil or sand, but take it as a rule and roots are not caused by water—they are put forth by the plant to look for water. But in order that the cutting has this power some atmosphere as well as soil and water is needed, for without it the leaves and stems wilt, the circulation stops and it is all over with that individual specimen. A safe rule in propagating is never to allow the leaves or stems to wilt or shrivel or to give more moisture than is necessary to prevent this. As to heat, there should always be a balance in favor of the soil end and the wood should be of such consistency that the cambium layers are well developed, but the heart wood not hardened. These are only a few words on a subject worth much more and we would like to see more about it from those able to speak from experience.

Sins of Omission.

Never a holiday passes but that we see or hear of something that we could have done to further business, some little plant or flower that our neighbor had and we had not, or some other little omission that means the loss of dollars and cents. Why not make a note of some of these and file them away to come up at the proper time for attention? No business man with large interests would think of trusting to his memory for important or unimportant details that have to be attended to several months hence. Four or five months from now the grower will be busy with plants or flowers needed just at that time, and he may not think of the little things that have been impressed upon his mind in the recent holiday rush. "When found make a note on" is as good advice now as when the fictitious old sea captain gave it so truly. Anything written is always more or less indelibly stamped on the memory, and if the written notes are filed to come up at a certain date then there is a double assurance of attention.

In line with this thought is the need of keeping up your vigorous stock of decorative plants. Every retailer knows the difficulty of obtaining little, showy, neat specimens of anything outside of ferns and palms, yet there is a wondrous variety that may be given and would always secure a good market. Frequently at Christmas there are plenty of large pans and pots of poinsettias, finely grown and with a big price. But a customer comes along and wants a few small dishes or a low table centerpiece of something bright and in keeping with the spirit of Christmas. Little plants of poinsettia rooted late in the season would be just the thing, but they were not rooted, consequently they are not to be had. Again at Easter there are plenty of big Easter lilies and Rambler roses, but how useful would a few dozen small Lady Gay or Dorothy Perkins in 3-inch pots be for the filling in, or a few bits of choice foliage begonias, coleus, fittonia or Dracena Sanderiana or Godseffiana? The supply men do not forget these things. They have small, natty productions and novelties in endless variety to suit all tastes, and it is quite time that the grower also got busy and put some variety into his stock. It is not so much in the big cities where this paucity of little things that tell is seen—it is among the large and ever increasing number of small florists and growers in our less important towns, and the first one in any community to see the advantage of catering to this class of business will make money and a home for himself that will quickly set him ahead of his competitors.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Commercial Quality of Chrysanthemums.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Being desirous to purchase some of the newer chrysanthemums. I would be pleased to learn through your valuable paper regarding the commercial qualities of Wm. Turner, Naomah and Harvard. Kindly state their weak as well as strong points and oblige.

A. P.

We will endeavor to give A. P. the "black and white" of the three varieties mentioned, without permitting the white to cover up the black. A perfect bloom of Wm. Turner is really magnificent. In fact, we do not think there is another white its equal for exhibition use. Its color is very pure, of the largest size, fine incurved, stem and foliage excellent, free and easy to propagate, of dwarf habit and not difficult to grow. If it would produce uniformly perfect flowers it would be an excellent commercial. Unfortunately it has the habit of making one-sided blooms. We grew 100 plants in 8-inch pots the past season for exhibition, giving them every attention, with the result that over 90 per cent were more or less malformed. There may be localities where it will come uniformly good. It may do so on the Pacific coast or it may come perfect grown with several flowers to the plant, as reports from England state, but such a course would greatly reduce the size. However, be this as it may, it is common talk that the percentage of perfect blooms is small.

Naomah was not sent out as a commercial variety, nor do we recommend it for this purpose to the average grower. If not planted early and grown strong, with ample room, full sunlight and without food overly nitrogenous, its stems are liable to be weak. Those who grow it properly appreciate it very much. Its foliage is beautiful, of perfect incurved form, not quite so white or large, nor as free of propagation, as Turner, but it will give 90 per cent or more of perfectly formed blooms whether grown ordinarily or with special care.

Harvard is a new red (or perhaps garnet is more correct), 6½ inches or less, according to conditions under which it is grown. It is reflexed, showing the upper surface, double from any bud, maturing the third week of November, fine stem and foliage, very abundant with cuttings and roots freely, a condition unusual among reds. All the characteristics given are what we consider ideal for the commercial grower.

Since writing the above we have had a similar inquiry regarding Chrysolora and Ramapo, and have taken the liberty to append our reply, thinking it may be of interest to others. Chrysolora is a medium shade of yellow, fine incurved form, of large size, a very heavy stem with ample foliage, maturing October 10, and easy of propagation. We might say the best commercial yellow for mid-October, which we really believe it is, but such presumptions carry very little weight, and are often humiliating if the grower fails to sustain the endorsements given.

Ramapo is a little darker yellow than Chrysolora, being about the shade of Col. D. Appleton, not as closely incurved as Chrysolora but of a decided globular form. In other respects is good, large in size, free grower, easy of propagation and good stem and foliage. With us it matures between Chrysolora and Appleton and will be an acquisition to fill this gap, but we question its ability to withstand rough handling with the indifference shown by Chrysolora. These two varieties do not conflict, owing to the difference in their flowering season. In fact, both are fine yellows for October.

Propagating Houses and Benches.

As most of the florists doing their own propagating defer this work until after March 1, it is rather early for much thought to be given this subject except by those interested in early delivery of plants and cuttings. Some means of shading the cuttings will have to be provided as the season advances, and as we fasten such material to the underside of the rafters we will find it more convenient to do this while the benches are empty. Star fiber wrapping paper in rolls 30 inches wide that has been treated with linseed oil is the most satisfactory we have used.

This system has some advantages over the old way of covering the cuttings with newspapers. In the first place it saves the labor of covering the cuttings every time the sun appears and the worry lest some one neglect this important detail. There is also less danger from cutting bench fungus, in as much as the air has free circulation to all parts of the house and comes in contact with the cutting and sand, thereby evaporating the surplus moisture, keeping both in the best condition.

EASTER LILY.

Oiled paper is also useful for protecting stock in frames or to keep the cold out of the houses that are getting open. If anyone is interested in this subject, we will be pleased to supply instructions in detail for the construction of an inexpensive home-made machine for applying the oil, with illustration, inquiry to be made to THE AMERICAN FLORIST to this effect.

All benches to be used for cuttings should be thoroughly cleaned and given a coat of whitewash before they are filled with sand. It is advisable to have the bottom of cutting benches so arranged as to afford ample drainage, to prevent stagnation, which is very apt to occur where there are impurities in the sand or water.

The cracks between the boards may be calked with either moss or excelsior to prevent the sand from washing through, or gravel or coal ashes may be placed at the bottom for this purpose. The quality of sand varies greatly in different localities, but this is not important, provided it is fairly clean. We prefer a sand that is moderately coarse as it keeps sweet longer. Benches 4 inches deep should be filled level and, after being thoroughly watered, tamped down until firm, when they will be ready to receive the cuttings.

Easter Plants.

Paper read January 6, 1913, by Julius Luck, before the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club.

After Christmas and New Year's commercial greenhouses are fairly empty, and after a business like the one this season they are generally a deplorable sight. Naturally the first thought in restocking them turns to Easter plants. Lilies always will take first place. To have them in on time they should be potted as soon as received. Of all the different varieties Lilium giganteum (the black stemmed variety) appears to be the best for Easter. Lilium Harrisii has been improved some of late years, but it is a long way from satisfactory yet. Lilium formosum is a good one to grow but pays poorly as it produces few flowers. Lilium multiflorum responds to about the same treatment as giganteum. It arrives about November 1.

I prefer to pot them in six-inch pots at once, for they do not like any disturbance, much less a check during their growth at any time, which they most likely would receive in transplanting. For an early Easter like we shall have this year, both take considerable forcing, but this should not be resorted to until the buds appear, as then they can be sorted and heat applied according to their needs. If necessary 65° to 70° may be had at night, and all the way up to 80° in the day time, with full sun. But do not attempt 80° on dull days. The ideal lily should have from six to ten buds and be about two and a half feet high.

Roses in pots have come to the fore of late years and easily take second place. The variety suitable for forcing is large, but Orleans is the best of the Baby ramblers, all of which are worth while to the grower. Baby Dorothy, Mrs. Cutbush, Tausendschoen, Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins all are good. Of the hybrid perpetual class Magna Charta, Mrs. John Lang and Frau Karl Druschki are the best. In forcing roses they should be started in a cool house until rooted and then gradually brought into higher temperature, but at no time higher than 60° at night with a rise of 10° during the day time.

Hydrangeas, well budded, pot grown plants, force readily for Easter. If started immediately after New Year's there should be no need of heavy forcing to bring them in on time. Their splendid keeping qualities after being in full bloom makes them a favorite house plant. There has been some trouble caused by the foliage turning yellow, but this can be overcome by careful watering. The general impression is that hydrangeas need an abundance of water, as they do, but only after they have a good head of leaves. To my mind the "yellows" are caused by over watering in the early stages before the leaves appear. The above refers to the old Hydrangeas Otaksa only. Of the new varieties I cannot say much. I am growing some for the first year. Avalanche and La Lorraine are said to be the best.

Spiraea Japonica Gladstone and Queen Alexandra are two of the best of the spireas. These plants will respond better to forcing if they are subjected to a slight freezing. Start them in a warm place at once. Like lily of the valley they can be grown cool afterwards if needed. They require plenty of water, but don't place in saucers if you want clean foliage and give them plenty of room to grow well shaped plants.

Azalea Indica in a large number of varieties can be held for Easter. Mme. Van der Cruyssen is one of the best. Azalea Mollis and Pontica rhododendrons are all suitable for Easter. All they require is a proper timing—that is, to have them in bloom at the right time. It is impossible in a paper like this to give the length of time it takes, as a good deal depends upon the condition of the plants and of the date of Easter, but as a rule these plants generally have to be held back and only need a few weeks in the greenhouse to finish them up.

Lilacs are very showy Easter plants. Charles X, pink, and Marie Legray, white, are the best singles. Mme. Lemoine is a good double white. Lilacs take about six weeks, according to condition, to bring into flower. They like a shady place and an ordinary greenhouse temperature to bring out their showy foliage, which is so necessary to a pot plant. Primula obconica and sinensis can easily be grown for Easter but there is only a limited demand for these plants.

There are a number of hardwooded plants which force very well for Easter. Deutzia gracilis, single, and Lemoine, double, staphaelia, wisteria, prunus, thorns in variety and Spirea Van Houttei. Some of our perennials are also adaptable, such as the tree peony, Dialiatra spectabilis, and some of the campanulas.

Dutch bulbs all find a ready sale and are very easy to bring in at that time if kept in a root house or any other place free from frost. From 2 to 3 weeks is sufficient time to bring most of these in. A dozen pips of lily of the valley planted in a 5-inch pot will make a nice pot, and at this time should come along in a warm house in about 25 days. There always is a certain demand for palms and ferns, especially of the latter for the filling of baskets, but these cannot be classed as Easter plants.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Plans for a new greenhouse in Garfield park, to cost $25,000, were discussed at a recent meeting of the board of park commissioners.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The following officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association: John Dunbar, president; George Arnold, vice-president; H. B. Stringer, secretary; W. L. Keller, treasurer. W. H. Dildine, William Price and A. H. Salter were elected directors.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Wm. E. Day and Robert C. Bard will represent the Syracuse Florists' Club at the mid-winter meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., in February. The Syracuse Rose Society will send Congressman John R. Clancy and Geo. E. Thorpe.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Indiana State Florists' Association elected the following officers at the meeting held here January 14: W. W. Coles, Kokomo, president; John Hartje, Indianapolis, first vice-president; J. V. Vesey, Fort Wayne, second vice-president; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, secretary; H. L. Wiegand, Indianapolis, treasurer.

British Gardeners' Examination.

The first examination for professional gardeners was held by the British Gardeners' Association Wednesday, April 26, 1911. Twenty-nine candidates entered for the examination, according to the association's journal, and twenty-eight sat in as many different centers in England and Wales. There was one candidate in Scotland but none in Ireland. Three hours were allowed for the examination, and candidates were requested to answer eight questions only from amongst the following twelve:

1.—What kinds of fruit trees would you recommend for walls with a south, north, east and west aspect? Name three varieties in each kind.

2.—What is the object of pruning fruit trees and state which shoots are most likely to bear fruit on the apple, the pear, the plum, the sweet cherry and the black currant.

3.—Describe propagation of the vine and its cultural treatment for the subsequent three years.

4.—How would you grow potatoes in the open air to secure the heaviest crops? Name two good early, two midseason, and two late or maincrop varieties.

5.—Describe the cultivation of twelve kinds of vegetables to be grown from seed. Six kinds to be fit for use in June and six in December.

6.—How and when would you propagate hippeastrums (amaryllis), dracaenas, ficus elastica, gooseberries, carnations, apples, roses, seakale and statice latifolia?

7.—Give a list of hardy herbaceous perennials (excluding bulbous and tuberous plants) having (1) white, (2) blue, (3) red and (4) yellow flowers, three distinct kinds of each most useful for cutting.

8.—What dwarf flowering and dot plants would you use to fill a circular bed 15 feet in diameter for summer decoration, and show how you would arrange them in a diagram. Not less than 12 distinct kinds to be used.

9.—What flowering plants would you employ to decorate a greenhouse for a year? Give a list of plants for the purpose and state the flowering period of each.

10.—What are the principal plant foods obtained from the soil and air, and how are they best and most readily secured? Is air essential for the roots of plants, and if so, why? What gases compose the air and of what use are they to plants?

11.—What situation would you select for a kitchen garden of two acres? How would you proceed to lay it out? What fruit trees would you plant on walls? Give aspect in each case.

12.—Mention the insect pests most injurious to the apple, the pear, the black currant, the gooseberry, the vine, the cucumber, the rose, the cabbage, the celery, the onion, and the euonymus, and suggest remedies for the same. What causes "club root" in cabbage crops, and what remedy would you suggest for it?

The whole twelve questions were well patronized. Question 4 seemed to be most popular, as 26 out of 28 candidates answered it. The least popular question was No. 8, which was attempted by only eight candidates. The answers to question 7 were on the whole unsatisfactory.

Drawings and diagrams were conspicuous by their absence. Two or three candidates attempted a diagram to illustrate question 8, but they were not of such a high order as one would like.

The candidates' work securing the highest marks was in every way superior to that having the lower numbers. The writing in most cases was of a very fair character, the composition was good in some cases, but comparatively poor in others. The punctuation was not so good as it might have been and the singulars and plurals were frequently confused. While the spelling of English was fairly good in most cases, the names of plants were in a number of cases misspelled.

Three hundred marks were allowed as a maximum. Candidates obtaining 200 marks and over were placed in the "First Class;" those obtaining 150 to 200 marks in the "Second Class," and those obtaining 100 to 150 marks in the "Third Class."

H. Chandler, having obtained the highest number of marks in the "First Class," was awarded the gold medal of the British Gardeners' Association.

RAIN LESSENS TRADE.

Last week's market was not any too strong. Some flowers sold nicely while the small business in other lines kept the week's trade down to only an ordinary one. The warm rainy weather probably had a lot to do with keeping down the demand, for the consumer simply will not come out in rainy weather. He will order only what he needs, or rather only what he thinks he needs, by telephone. In this way the stores lose much of the transient business. The supply of roses is about the same as at last writing. Where some consignors have gone off crop, others came in stronger and thus kept up an even supply. The demand for pink is much larger than that for white roses. American Beauties are adequate for the demands made upon them. Very many carnations are being sold, but the demand only at times catches up with the supply. The balance of the time the latter is too strong. As a result of this condition, only low prices rule. The choice sweet peas sell nicely while the culls and seconds do not find a market except at the lowest prices. Liliun giganteum and callas are proving very good property. Single violets sell well and easily outstrip the doubles as far as the demand is concerned. The Paper White market is very poor. Other offerings include valley, jonquils, daffodils and tulips.

NOTES.

The high water of the past fortnight has caused very heavy damage to many gardeners. It completely flooded their hotbeds and in many cases either carried away or destroyed their frames and sash. Fortunately, the two local florists who were in the way of the rising river suffered little damage, thanks to the warm weather.

L. A. Fennel, the orchid man of Cynthia, Ky., while in the city on Monday reported to C. E. Critchell that he would have a heavy cut of orchids for him in the near future.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have fine lots of cyclamen and primulas. The latter have unusually large flowers and the selection of colors is choice.

E. G. Gillett spent Thursday and Friday of last week in Springfield, where he went to attend the funeral of an uncle.

Fred Backmeier was confined to his home for several days last week with a very severe cold.

The Hill-Heller store has been having some very attractive window displays.

Visitors: Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.;

Sam Seligman, representing Wert-helmer Bros., New York; Ellis Woodworth of the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago; Chas. Steidle, Richmond, Ind.; and A. Miller of Henderson & Co., Chicago. H.

Indiana Florists' Association.

The annual meeting of the Indiana Florists' Association was held January 15, at Indianapolis, and was one of the best attended meetings for several seasons. Over forty members were present. The younger generation was especially conspicuous. The exhibits were numerous and of very fine quality. The judges, W. J. Vesey, Jr., Paul Tauer and W. W. Coles, reported as follows:

Robt. Ellis, Indianapolis; Len Elder, Indianapolis; Robt. Glaubke, Indianapolis; John Hartje, Indianapolis; Herman Junge, Indianapolis; Al Kempke, Indianapolis; Wm. Langstaff, Indianapolis; John Grande, Jr., Indianapolis; Al Schreiber, Indianapolis; Al Marshall, Indianapolis; Charles Pahud, Indianapolis; Albert Pettit, Indianapolis; H. W. Riegan, Indianapolis; A. W. Warren, Indianapolis; Earl Mann, Richmond; Fred Lemon, Richmond; Morris Marer, Indianapolis; M. F. Morris, Bloomington; Warren Huckleberry, North Vernon; Theodore Dorner, North Vernon; B. F. Hensley, Knightstown; H. L. Wiegand, Indianapolis; Paul Tauer, Lebanon; Thomas Woodward, Edinburg; R. A. McKeand, Marion; M. A. Barick, Seymour; H. A. Maxiner, Alexandria; A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis; W. W. Coles, Kokomo; George R. Gause, Richmond; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis; W. J. Vesey, Jr., Ft. Wayne; J. A. Evans, Richmond; J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; J. S. Stuart, Anderson; Paul Hoffman, Indianapolis; Lynn Barnaby, Columbus; C. S. Barnaby, Columbus; F. L. Lemeke, Chicago; — Martin, Chicago Carnation Co.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis—St. Nicholas, color, size and stem excellent. Radiance, color and size extra good. Flowers are held up by an exceedingly good stem. Would say it is good commercially. Also some good vases of Rose Pink Enchantress, Enchantress and Dorothy Gordon were shown by this firm. Shasta, good fringed, white.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.—British Triumph, no comment; arrived in poor condition. Lady Northcliffe, pink; color and stem good; flower small. Wm. Eccles, red, flowers arrived in poor condition, although from appearance it must be a good carnation. It has an extra strong stem, good calyx and size.

Hartje & Elder, Indianapolis—The best displayed carnations were staged by this firm, consisting of some exceedingly fine White Enchantress.

F. Dorner & Sons, Lafayette—Seedling 271; a flesh pink of excellent texture; stem, calyx and form ideal; has the appearance of a good commercial variety. Yellow Prince, an exceedingly good yellow carnation; Seedling 31, the best cerise pink that has come under our notice. Seedling 138, Yellow Stone, good color, calyx and stem; a deep flesh color, extra large in size; we consider it the best carnation we have noticed in that color; an exceedingly good exhibition carnation, 4 inches, strong. 254, an exceedingly good red and an exceptional stem; extra large size, looks like a winner in the red class. 251, a rose pink in color, honorable mention. 111, very good red. 42, a good light pink. A vase of good mixed seedlings was shown by this firm, some of which colors will be heard from later. F. Dorner & Son's seedlings are an advancement in the right direction, and have created comment among all the members present.

W. W. Coles of Kokomo, showed several vases of good commercial carnations.

Traendley & Schenck, New York, showed Salmon Beauty, a beautiful salmon color, but arrived in poor condition. Rose Queen, a beautiful sweet pea, one of the finest pink peas to be found on the market wherever you go. We certainly give it an 'exceedingly good recommendation.

Two other vases of peas were shown by A. G. Pittit, Indianapolis, both showing good culture.

Collection of plants were shown by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

Philadelphia Notes.

The growers hereabouts are disappointed with the mid-winter actions of the Mrs. Ward rose which is not producing flowers in paying quantities at this time. The Mrs. Taft is also a little shy just now, but all agree that this is one of the good things in roses and worth while growing in moderate quantities.

Greenhouse builders are satisfied that this city is a good field for them. The Lord & Burnham Co. has had a great year. Dennis Connor is back again with his old love and predicts the best season ever. Hitchings & Co. are also about to open an office in this city.

We are glad to see that S. S. Skidelsky has landed the best pink carnation up to date and that he honors his home city by christening it Philadelphia.

At the Leo Niessen Co.'s busy market they have offered the past week something very choice in sweet peas. American Beauties are also a feature.

Spring flowers, with lilacs leading, are leaders at Berger Bros.' central market. Sweet peas are also a feature.

The M. Rice Co. is working on new Easter stock that they say will be worth any retail merchant's time to see. It will soon be on the market.

There was a great demand for box-wood trees the past fall and the market is entirely cleaned up, there being no stock of any sizes in this city.

Raid's Kanstead establishment is showing extra fine carnations. The Wards, both pink and white, are the best seen here.

OBITUARY.

Francis A. Friedly.

Francis Asbury Friedly of Rocky River, O., died at his home Thursday afternoon, January 16, at the age of 67 years. A blood vessel which burst in his head was the cause of his death. He was busy in the greenhouses in the morning, when he took sick; he became dizzy and was carried to his home, where he became unconscious and died shortly after. He was buried Sunday afternoon in the Rockport cemetery. A large concourse of his many friends with floral tributes were present. He was a member of the Cleveland Florists' Club and well known and liked by all who knew him. He was "one of the boys" in many of their games and pleasures. He was the father of Frank Friedly, who is secretary of the Cleveland Florists' Club and foreman of the J. M. Gasser Co.'s range of greenhouses at Rocky River. The sympathy of the trade is extended to the son and daughter in their bereavement.

Mrs. E. D. Badgley.

Mrs. E. D. Badgley, mother of W. G. Badgley, of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, died at her home in Murray Hill, N. J., January 15, aged 67 years. She was the mother of fourteen children, eleven of whom, with her husband E. D. Badgley, a well known florist, survive her. The funeral was held January 18 at the Presbyterian church of New Providence, N. J., Mrs. Badgley having been for many years a member of the Presbyterian denomination. The Badgley family is well known both in this city and the neighboring towns and cities of New Jersey and have the sympathy of a host of friends in this affliction.

Bunzo Suzuki.

Bunzo Suzuki, well known in America through his connection with the Yokohama Nursery Co., died at Yokohama, Japan, December 13. Mr. Suzuki was born in Yokohama November 27, 1869, and first came to this country in 1891. He was employed at San Francisco about 18 months and then went to the establishment of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton, N. J. In 1893 his father attended the World's Fair at Chicago and the junior Mr. Suzuki acted as his guide. For a number of years he made regular trips for the Yokohama Nursery Co. between Japan and this country.

FALLS CREEK, PA.—Goss & Goss, growers of geranium plants, will grow a general line of cut flowers this year. They now have 5,000 carnations and 3,500 chrysanthemum plants.

NEW YORK.—Judge Holt in the United States District Court has granted a discharge from bankruptcy to Joseph Fleischman, formerly president of the Fleischman Floral Co., Broadway and Twenty-fifth street.

LILIES will need careful watching from this time to insure a good Easter crop, March 23 being the early date of the feast this year.

THE United States Department of Agriculture is reported to be not only furnishing funds to soil and crop clubs in certain states but is also paying as high as $100 per month on account of salary for soil expert to work with such organizations. The plan is put through under some theory of naming such associations experiment stations. This looks dangerously like unfair distribution of government funds.

Personal.

Inquiry For A. Loemel.

The present whereabouts of A. Loemel, a florist who has worked in several cities of the United States, and for the firm of Gude Bros. Co., 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is very much desired by that firm. Anyone knowing his address will confer a favor by communicating it to them.
GUDE BROS. Co.

Gladiolus Bulletin.

Bulletin number six of the American Gladiolus Society, containing an account of the meeting in Chicago, August 22, 1912, has been issued. It contains, among other interesting material, an account of the election of officers, the address of President Isaac S. Hendrickson, the treasurer's and secretary's reports, financial secretary's report, list of awards, a list of the members, and some valuable comments on the gladiolus, etc. A copy may be had of the corresponding secretary, L. Merton Gage, South Natick, Mass.

French Exports of Artificial Flowers.

French customs statistics do not separately state the exports of artificial flowers from that republic, but include them under the heading "Artificial flowers, leaves, and fruit"—the last-mentioned being made of papier-mache and forming a more or less important article of commerce. The total shipments of this class of goods from France to all countries in 1911 were valued at $3,497,700, the United States taking $681,300 worth; by far the greater portion of these exports were from the Paris consular district, reports Consul General Frank H. Mason.

Publicity.

I have read with interest the report of the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, issue of January 18, page 1502. From the fact that I have personal acquaintance with every man with but one exception, whose views are reported, I may say that I was pleased to learn their views. They are all excellent men and deserve credit for their outspoken statements. I may be pardoned for making a few remarks.

This publicity movement will never travel very far while the wholesalers are blaming the retailers and vice versa, the retailers are blaming the wholesalers, for all the unfortunate accidents and incidents that occur in the business. The truth and the trouble at the present time is that the public, meaning a large majority of all the people, knows quite enough already about certain phases of the flower business. Having carefully surveyed the situation, I am prepared to state that the best form of publicity is to give the public a square deal.

At Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter in nearly every city, attempts are made to push up prices on all stock, even when there is more stock than can possibly be sold. If any wholesaler or retailer, and I will add, any grower, thinks that this can go on from year to year and the public be kept in the dark, he is very much mistaken. With the enormous increase in the supply of cut flowers during the past few years, even now, but few of the "plain people" can afford them, and I know what I am writing about. If the business is to continue prosperous, we must have a new deal.
JOHN DAN DELION.

National Association of Gardeners.

The National Association of Gardeners has selected the Murray Hill Hotel, Forty-first street and Park avenue, New York city, as its headquarters during the International Flower Show. The hotel is conveniently situated to the Grand Central Palace, being only five short blocks from the hall and the same distance from Broadway, so that it is also easy of access to the city's amusement center.

The management has set a rate of $2 per day for a single person and $3 for two persons in a room, including privilege of bath. The men's dining hall will be set aside as the rendezvous for members to congregate morning, noon and night. Breakfast, luncheon and dinner will be served in this hall at a reasonable price. The hotel management promises to provide every facility to make the hotel a hospitable hostelry for the gardeners during their stay.

Members can communicate direct with the hotel for reservations of rooms. Those who intend to attend the International Flower Show will do well to reserve their rooms at an early date, as a big crowd is looked for and as the National Association of Gardeners' headquarters will be a popular place, those that apply late may find that they cannot be accommodated.
M. C. EBEL, Sec'y.

Boston Parks.

The thirty-seventh annual report of the board of park commissioners of Boston, Mass., for the year ending January 31, 1912, shows a commendable increase in park improvements. The total amount of money expended was $404,974.71. Of this $49,914.72 was for construction work and $355,059.99 for maintenance. Trees have been planted in many places, adding much to the beauty of the city's public pleasure grounds. Governor's Island, the use of which was tendered by the government to the people for a park, was improved by new trees, etc. The surplus oaks in Franklin park were root pruned and later transplanted. The trees were well grown specimens, 15 to 20 feet in height. They were moved several miles. Annual pruning is commended in the report as a great benefit to the plantations. The herbaceous garden of Franklin park and the shrubberies are noted as fully repaying the care expended on them. The ginkgo, a tree of Japanese or Chinese origin, was to be planted in a lot of nurse trees for shelter until it reached a size where it was capable of caring for itself. European elms, lindens, etc., were also to be used to beautify the city streets and avenues as well as the parks.

Directory Revision

We are revising our Trade Directory of the Florists, Nurserymen, Seedsmen, etc., of the United States and Canada, and as there have been many changes in firm names and considerable extension of the area under glass, nursery grounds, etc., you would greatly oblige by supplying the following information with reference to your business:

In all cases state (1) Name of firm or proprietor, with the officers of corporations; (2) Name of manager; (3) Address, giving street and number or rural route; (4) City or town; (5) State; (6) When business was established; and (7) Whom present owner succeeded.

If Florists, state whether (1) Grower; (2) Retail, having store only, (3) Wholesale; or (4) Commission. If a grower state acreage of ground operated and give number of square feet of glass.

To ascertain the number of feet under glass in a given house, 12x145 feet      145 multiply the length (145 feet) by the width (12 feet) and you have in      12 that house 1,740 feet under glass, thus,..... 1,740

If Nurserymen, state whether (1) Wholesale; (2) Retail; (3) Acreage of ground operated, and area under glass as in the case of florists above.

If Seedsmen, state whether (1) Dealer; (2) Grower; (3) What your specialties are; (4) If a grower, state acreage operated and area under glass, as in the case of florists above.

ROSES SCARCE.

Henry E. Williams, assistant chief of the weather bureau at Washington, D. C., said last Saturday, January 18, that the "atmospheric conditions over the American continent may be likened to nothing so aptly as a bubbling caldron, which soon is to boil over, and when it does it will mean a change in the weather conditions in every part of the country." It seems as if the caldron has started to boil over a trifle, especially in this vicinity, for on the Monday following Mr. Williams' predictions, the thermometer dropped considerably and the temperature was much colder. Everyone is hoping that the cold bright weather will continue, for the flowers that are now arriving on the market clearly show the effects of the mild weather of the past week, especially carnations, which in some instances are very soft and not fit for shipping any great distance. The supply of stock in general is none too large, but trade is very quiet and the only shortage is in roses, especially in this true in the shorter grades. Long stemmed American Beauty roses are in good supply, but the better grades find immediate sale. Carnations are in oversupply everywhere and are being sold for very low prices which is something unusual at this time of the year. The average price asked for carnations is $2 and $3 per hundred, but the price is likely to advance almost any moment if trade improves at all. Orchids are plentiful and are being made a great feature by nearly all the large retail stores, beautiful baskets and vases being shown in the windows and on the counters, and are also being largely used for personal decoration in corsages. The growers have been sending them in good quantities and some exceptionally low prices are being quoted for larger quantities. Violets are very plentiful and are being offered at very low prices and the quality is steadily improving. The demand for lilies has been fair, but the supply is not very large. Home-grown gardenias are scarce, but large shipments of these flowers are now arriving from the east. Bulbous stock is increasing rapidly and the quality is also improving. Tulips of white, pink, red and yellow are offered in quantities and the stems are much longer and the flowers much better. Trumpet Major narcissi are also to be had in quantity and the flowers are now of better substance. There is a great supply of Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths. Lily of the valley is having a fair call and the supply is adequate. Freesia is now in good supply and some blooms of excellent quality are obtainable. Sweet peas are of splendid quality and the receipts are much larger, so that all the colors are obtainable. Greens of all kinds are very plentiful. On Wednesday noon, January 22, there was no change whatever in the market conditions. The wholesale dealers are receiving telegrams from all parts of the country for roses, but in nearly all cases they return the following answer, "Impossible to fill." The retailer has a splendid opportunity to have a special sale on carnations and bulbous flowers now, for the local market is completely glutted and the stock can be had at very reasonable prices.

NOTES.

Last year at this time the growers in this vicinity, due to a car shortage, experienced a great deal of trouble in receiving enough coal to properly heat their greenhouses but now it is just the opposite and the dealers are actually urging them to buy.

Today the storage space of the dealers is taxed to the limit because the mild weather has not compelled householders to burn the average amount of coal, consequently the demand has fallen far below the average. In a good many cases the supply of coal is such, both in this city and the territory to the west, that it will take a protracted spell of cold weather to clean up the stock.

James Psenicka and V. Bezdek, proprietors of the Northwestern Floral Co., will dissolve partnership on May 1, as stated in these columns before and at which time the Northwestern Floral Co. will cease to exist. There will be an equal division of the property and each one of the proprietors will build several new houses so each of the individual ranges will be about as large as the present Northwestern Floral Co.'s plant.

H. Lowe is at the hospital with scarlet fever which followed an attack of heart failure and congestion of the lungs. Mrs. Lowe, who is a very industrious woman, is also under the doctor's care, her illness being due to overwork. The fireman took sick in November and for eight weeks Mrs. Lowe did the firing. The first of the year the greenhouses took fire, but little damage was done.

John Poehlmann's home was again robbed on Sunday, January 19, when $100 in cash and jewelry valued at $40 were stolen while the family were visiting relatives at Morton Grove. Mr. Poehlmann firmly believes in the old saying that experience is a good teacher, so he is not the loser this time as he took out burglar insurance immediately after the first robbery.

Michael F. Dziadul, 1514 West Chicago avenue, says that wedding orders were never so plentiful with him as they were this week.

CHICAGO

The George Wittbold Co.'s retail department never seems to be idle, for the force is always busy with something or other. Most of the time it is with decorations of some sort but this week it is with funeral work. Their trade extends to all parts of the city and the orders were so widely scattered on January 20 that 14 men were needed on the delivery service that day.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s fancy sweet peas in all colors are the leaders at the store this week and measure fully 12 inches in stem. The supply of orchids at this house was never larger than at present and the average daily cut is 600 blooms. The supply department is now headlining Waters' butterfly corsage tie which is something new and bound to be a winner.

Wietor Bros. are having a big demand for American Beauty roses, which are now just coming in crop. N. J. Wietor and party, who are enjoying a visit in the southland have just reached Ocean Springs, Miss., after a delightful stop at Chattanooga, Tenn., and New Orleans, La.

Peter Reinberg is cutting from a new crop of American Beauty roses which are now seen at his store in quantity. The supply of other roses is fair and just about large enough to go around.

At Kenniteott Bros. Co.'s store bulbous stock of all kinds is seen in large quantities with a fancy grade of tulips the principal offering. Another delayed shipment of boxwood, intended for the holidays, has just been delivered to their store.

Harry Manheim says that Hoerber Bros.' stock is sold at an early hour each day, carnations included. Hoerber's have every reason to feel proud of their Killarney roses for the stock that they are now cutting is of the best quality.

Bassett & Washburn's American Beauty roses are now of very good quality and no trouble is being experienced in disposing of the cut. Lilies, tulips and other bulbous flowers are also seen in large supply here.

Miss Martha Gunterberg and Gus Alles, Tim Matchen, Chas. Drissler and wives attended the Bald-Griffin wedding which was held at Our Lady of Lourdes Church on Wednesday, January 15.

Percy Jones is displaying a fine line of corsage accessories especially adapted for St. Valentine's day. His cut flower department is on deck as usual with all the desired stock in season.

The J. B. Deamud Co.'s tables are filled with "good things" each morning after the shipments of stock have been unpacked, especially with bulbous flowers and carnations.

Indiana Florists' Association.

The annual meeting of the Indiana Florists' Association was held January 15, at Indianapolis, and was one of the best attended meetings for several seasons. Over forty members were present. The younger generation was especially conspicuous. The exhibits were numerous and of very fine quality. The judges, W. J. Vesey, Jr., Paul Tauer and W. W. Coles, reported as follows:

Robt. Ellis, Indianapolis; Len Elder, Indianapolis; Robt. Glaubke, Indianapolis; John Hartje, Indianapolis; Herman Junge, Indianapolis; Al Kempke, Indianapolis; Wm. Langstaff, Indianapolis; John Grande, Jr., Indianapolis; Al Schreiber, Indianapolis; Al Marshall, Indianapolis; Charles Pahlud, Indianapolis; Albert Pettit, Indianapolis; H. W. Riegan, Indianapolis; A. W. Warren, Indianapolis; Earl Mann, Richmond; Fred Lemon, Richmond; Morris Marer, Indianapolis; M. F. Merris, Bloomington; Warren Huckleberry, North Vernon; Theodore Dörner, North Vernon; B. F. Hensley, Knightstown; H. L. Wiegand, Indianapolis; Paul Tauer, Lebanon; Thomas Woodward, Edinburg; R. A. McKeand, Marion; M. A. Barick, Seymour; H. A. Maxiner, Alexandria; A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis; W. W. Coles, Kokomo; George R. Gause, Richmond; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis; W. J. Vesey, Jr., Ft. Wayne; J. A. Evans, Richmond; J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; J. S. Stuart, Anderson; Paul Hoffman, Indianapolis; Lynn Barnaby, Columbus; C. S. Barnaby, Columbus; F. L. Lemeke, Chicago; — Martin, Chicago Carnation Co.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond—Commodore, red carnation, color and stem very good; flowers appeared to be picked prematurely.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis—St. Nicholas, color, size and stem excellent. Radiance, color and size extra good. Flowers are held up by an exceedingly good stem. Would say it is good commercially. Also some good vases of Rose Pink Enchantress, Enchantress and Dorothy Gordon were shown by this firm. Shasta, good fringed, white.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.—British Triumph, no comment; arrived in poor condition. Lady Northcliffe, pink; color and stem good; flower small. Wm. Eccles, red, flowers arrived in poor condition, although from appearance it must be a good carnation. It has an extra strong stem, good calyx and size.

Hartje & Elder, Indianapolis—The best displayed carnations were staged by this firm, consisting of some exceedingly fine White Enchantress.

F. Dörner & Sons, Lafayette—Seedling 271; a flesh pink of excellent texture; stem, calyx and form ideal; has the appearance of a good commercial variety. Yellow Prince, an exceedingly good yellow carnation; Seedling 31, the best cerise pink that has come under our notice. Seedling 138, Yellow Stone, good color, calyx and stem; a deep flesh color, extra large in size; we consider it the best carnation we have noticed in that color; an exceedingly good exhibition carnation, 4 inches, strong. 254, an exceedingly good red and an exceptional stem; extra large size, looks like a winner in the red class. 251, a rose pink in color, honorable mention. 111, very good red. 42, a good light pink. A vase of good mixed seedlings was shown by this firm, some of which colors will be heard from later. F. Dörner & Son's seedlings are an advancement in the right direction, and have created comment among all the members present.

W. W. Coles of Kokomo, showed several vases of good commercial carnations.

Traendley & Schenk, New York, showed Salmon Beauty, a beautiful salmon color, but arrived in poor condition. Rose Queen, a beautiful sweet pea, one of the finest pink peas to be found on the market wherever you go. We certainly give it an exceedingly good recommendation.

Two other vases of peas were shown by A. G. Pittit, Indianapolis, both showing good culture.

Collection of plants were shown by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

Philadelphia Notes.

The growers hereabouts are disappointed with the mid-winter actions of the Mrs. Ward rose which is not producing flowers in paying quantities at this time. The Mrs. Taft is also a little shy just now, but all agree that this is one of the good things in roses and worth white growing in moderate quantities.

Greenhouse builders are satisfied that this city is a good field for them. The Lord & Burnham Co. has had a great year. Dennis Connor is back again with his old love and predicts the best season ever. Hitchings & Co. are also about to open an office in this city.

We are glad to see that S. S. Skidelsky has landed the best pink carnation up to date and that he honors his home city by christening it Philadelphia.

At the Leo Niessen Co.'s busy market they have offered the past week something very choice in sweet peas. American Beauties are also a feature.

Spring flowers, with lilacs leading, are leaders at Berger Bros.' central market. Sweet peas are also a feature.

The M. Rice Co. is working on new Easter stock that they say will be worth any retail merchant's time to see. It will soon be on the market.

There was a great demand for boxwood trees the past fall and the market is entirely cleaned up, there being no stock of any sizes in this city.

Reid's Ranstead establishment is showing extra fine carnations. The Wards, both pink and white, are the best seen here.

OBITUARY.

Francis A. Friedly.

Francis Asbury Friedly of Rocky River, O., died at his home Thursday afternoon, January 16, at the age of 67 years. A blood vessel which burst in his head was the cause of his death. He was busy in the greenhouses in the morning, when he took sick; he became dizzy and was carried to his home, where he became unconscious and died shortly after. He was buried Sunday afternoon in the Rockport cemetery. A large concourse of his many friends with floral tributes were present. He was a member of the Cleveland Florists' Club and well known and liked by all who knew him. He was "one of the boys" in many of their games and pleasures. He was the father of Frank Friedly, who is secretary of the Cleveland Florists' Club and foreman of the J. M. Gasser Co.'s range of greenhouses at Rocky River. The sympathy of the trade is extended to the son and daughter in their bereavement.

Mrs. E. D. Badgley.

Mrs. E. D. Badgley, mother of W. G. Badgley, of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, died at her home in Murray Hill, N. J., January 15, aged 67 years. She was the mother of fourteen children, eleven of whom, with her husband E. D. Badgley, a well known florist, survive her. The funeral was held January 18 at the Presbyterian church of New Providence, N. J., Mrs. Badgley having been for many years a member of the Presbyterian denomination. The Badgley family is well known both in this city and the neighboring towns and cities of New Jersey and have the sympathy of a host of friends in this affliction.

Bunzo Suzuki.

Bunzo Suzuki, well known in America through his connection with the Yokohama Nursery Co., died at Yokohama, Japan, December 13. Mr. Suzuki was born in Yokohama November 27, 1869, and first came to this country in 1891. He was employed at San Francisco about 18 months and then went to the establishment of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton, N. J. In 1893 his father attended the World's Fair at Chicago and the junior Mr. Suzuki acted as his guide. For a number of years he made regular trips for the Yokohama Nursery Co. between Japan and this country.

FALLS CREEK, PA.—Goss & Goss, growers of geranium plants, will grow a general line of cut flowers this year. They now have 5,000 carnations and 3,500 chrysanthemum plants.

NEW YORK.—Judge Holt in the United States District Court has granted a discharge from bankruptcy to Joseph Fleischman, formerly president of the Fleischman Floral Co., Broadway and Twenty-fifth street.

Inquiry For A. Loemel.

The present whereabouts of A. Loemel, a florist who has worked in several cities of the United States, and for the firm of Gude Bros. Co., 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is very much desired by that firm. Anyone knowing his address will confer a favor by communicating it to them. GUDE BROS. CO.

Gladiolus Bulletin.

Bulletin number six of the American Gladiolus Society, containing an account of the meeting in Chicago, August 22, 1912, has been issued. It contains, among other interesting material, an account of the election of officers, the address of President Isaac S. Hendrickson, the treasurer's and secretary's reports, financial secretary's report, list of awards, a list of the members, and some valuable comments on the gladiolus, etc. A copy may be had of the corresponding secretary, L. Merton Gage, South Natick, Mass.

French Exports of Artificial Flowers.

French customs statistics do not separately state the exports of artificial flowers from that republic, but include them under the heading "Artificial flowers, leaves, and fruit"—the last-mentioned being made of papier-mache and forming a more or less important article of commerce. The total shipments of this class of goods from France to all countries in 1911 were valued at $3,497,700, the United States taking $681,300 worth; by far the greater portion of these exports were from the Paris consular district, reports Consul General Frank H. Mason.

Publicity.

I have read with interest the report of the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, issue of January 18, page 1502. From the fact that I have personal acquaintance with every man with but one exception, whose views are reported, I may say that I was pleased to learn their views. They are all excellent men and deserve credit for their outspoken statements. I may be pardoned for making a few remarks.

This publicity movement will never travel very far while the wholesalers are blaming the retailers and vice versa, the retailers are blaming the wholesalers, for all the unfortunate accidents and incidents that occur in the business. The truth and the trouble at the present time is that the public, meaning a large majority of all the people, knows quite enough already about certain phases of the flower business. Having carefully surveyed the situation, I am prepared to state that the best form of publicity is to give the public a square deal.

At Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter in nearly every city, attempts are made to push up prices on all stock, even when there is more stock than can possibly be sold. If any wholesaler or retailer, and I will add, any grower, thinks that this can go on from year to year and the public be kept in the dark, he is very much mistaken. With the enormous increase in the supply of cut flowers during the past few years, even now, but few of the "plain people" can afford them, and I know what I am writing about. If the business is to continue prosperous, we must have a new deal. JOHN DAN DELION.

National Association of Gardeners.

The National Association of Gardeners has selected the Murray Hill Hotel, Forty-first street and Park avenue, New York city, as its headquarters during the International Flower Show. The hotel is conveniently situated to the Grand Central Palace, being only five short blocks from the hall and the same distance from Broadway, so that it is also easy of access to the city's amusement center.

The management has set a rate of $2 per day for a single person and $3 for two persons in a room, including privilege of bath. The men's dining hall will be set aside as the rendezvous for members to congregate morning, noon and night. Breakfast, luncheon and dinner will be served in this hall at a reasonable price. The hotel management promises to provide every facility to make the hotel a hospitable hostelry for the gardeners during their stay.

Members can communicate direct with the hotel for reservations of rooms. Those who intend to attend the International Flower Show will do well to reserve their rooms at an early date, as a big crowd is looked for and as the National Association of Gardeners' headquarters will be a popular place, those that apply late may find that they cannot be accommodated. M. C. EBEL, Sec'y.

Boston Parks.

The thirty-seventh annual report of the board of park commissioners of Boston, Mass., for the year ending January 31, 1912, shows a commendable increase in park improvements. The total amount of money expended was $404,974.71. Of this $49,914.72 was for construction work and $355,059.99 for maintenance. Trees have been planted in many places, adding much to the beauty of the city's public pleasure grounds. Governor's Island, the use of which was tendered by the government to the people for a park, was improved by new trees, etc. The surplus oaks in Franklin park were root pruned and later transplanted. The trees were well grown specimens, 15 to 20 feet in height. They were moved several miles. Annual pruning is commended in the report as a great benefit to the plantations. The herbaceous garden of Franklin park and the shrubberies are noted as fully repaying the care expended on them. The ginkgo, a tree of Japanese or Chinese origin, was to be planted in a lot of nurse trees for shelter until it reached a size where it was capable of caring for itself. European elms, lindens, etc., were also to be used to beautify the city streets and avenues as well as the parks.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

Mrs. Frank H. Traendly, president Ladies' S. A. F., has appointed three directors to serve two years, as follows: Mrs. W. N. Rudd, Illinois; Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, Wisconsin; Mrs. Chas. H. Totty, New Jersey. Also three committees to serve at New York city and Minneapolis as follows: Reception committee—Miss A. M. O'Mara, New Jersey, chairman; Miss Matilda Meinhardt, Missouri; Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, Illinois; Mrs. James W. Boone, Maryland; Mrs. Chas. Critchell, Ohio. Theater committee—Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, Michigan, chairman; Mrs. U. J. Virgin, Louisiana; Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, Massachusetts; Mrs. Walter Sheridan, New York; Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Jr., New Jersey. Working committee—Mrs. J. Manda, New Jersey, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Bullock, Indiana; Mrs. J. S. Wilson, Iowa; Mrs. Geo. Cooke, District of Columbia; Mrs. John Donaldson, New Jersey.

RENEW subscriptions promptly so that no copies of the paper may be missed.

LILIES will need careful watching from this time to insure a good Easter crop, March 23 being the early date of the feast this year.

THE United States Department of Agriculture is reported to be not only furnishing funds to soil and crop clubs in certain states but is also paying as high as $100 per month on account of salary for soil expert to work with such organizations. The plan is put through under some theory of naming such associations experiment stations. This looks dangerously like unfair distribution of government funds.

Personal.

ROSES SCARCE.

Henry E. Williams, assistant chief of the weather bureau at Washington, D. C., said last Saturday, January 18, that the "atmospheric conditions over the American continent may be likened to nothing so aptly as a bubbling caldron, which soon is to boil over, and when it does it will mean a change in the weather conditions in every part of the country." It seems as if the caldron has started to boil over a trifle, especially in this vicinity, for on the Monday following Mr. Williams' predictions, the thermometer dropped considerably and the temperature was much colder. Everyone is hoping that the cold bright weather will continue, for the flowers that are now arriving on the market clearly show the effects of the mild weather of the past week, especially carnations, which in some instances are very soft and not fit for shipping any great distance. The supply of stock in general is none too large, but trade is very quiet and the only shortage is in roses, especially is this true in the shorter grades. Long stemmed American Beauty roses are in good supply, but the better grades find immediate sale. Carnations are in oversupply everywhere and are being sold for very low prices which is something unusual at this time of the year. The average price asked for carnations is $2 and $3 per hundred, but the price is likely to advance almost any moment if trade improves at all. Orchids are plentiful and are being made a great feature by nearly all the large retail stores, beautiful baskets and vases being shown in the windows and on the counters, and are also being largely used for personal decoration in corsages. The growers have been sending them in good quantities and some exceptionally low prices are being quoted for larger quantities. Violets are very plentiful and are being offered at very low prices and the quality is steadily improving. The demand for lilies has been fair, but the supply is not very large. Home-grown gardenias are scarce, but large shipments of these flowers are now arriving from the east. Bulbous stock is increasing rapidly and the quality is also improving. Tulips of white, pink, red and yellow are offered in quantities and the stems are much longer and the flowers much better. Trumpet Major narcissi are also to be had in quantity and the flowers are now of better substance. There is a great supply of Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths. Lily of the valley is having a fair call and the supply is adequate. Freesia is now in good supply and some blooms of excellent quality are obtainable. Sweet peas are of splendid quality and the receipts are much larger, so that all the colors are obtainable. Greens of all kinds are very plentiful. On Wednesday noon, January 22, there was no change whatever in the market conditions. The wholesale dealers are receiving telegrams from all parts of the country for roses, but in nearly all cases they return the following answer, "Impossible to fill." The retailer has a splendid opportunity to have a special sale on carnations and bulbous flowers now, for the local market is completely glutted and the stock can be had at very reasonable prices.

NOTES.

Last year at this time the growers in this vicinity, due to a car shortage, experienced a great deal of trouble in receiving enough coal to properly heat their greenhouses but now it is just the opposite and the dealers are actually urging them to buy.

Today the storage space of the dealers is taxed to the limit because the mild weather has not compelled householders to burn the average amount of coal, consequently the demand has fallen far below the average. In a good many cases the supply of coal is such, both in this city and the territory to the west, that it will take a protracted spell of cold weather to clean up the stock.

James Psenicka and V. Bezdek, proprietors of the Northwestern Floral Co., will dissolve partnership on May 1, as stated in these columns before and at which time the Northwestern Floral Co. will cease to exist. There will be an equal division of the property and each one of the proprietors will build several new houses so each of the individual ranges will be about as large as the present Northwestern Floral Co.'s plant.

H. Lowe is at the hospital with scarlet fever which followed an attack of heart failure and congestion of the lungs. Mrs. Lowe, who is a very industrious woman, is also under the doctor's care, her illness being due to overwork. The fireman took sick in November and for eight weeks Mrs. Lowe did the firing. The first of the year the greenhouses took fire, but little damage was done.

John Poehlmann's home was again robbed on Sunday, January 19, when $100 in cash and jewelry valued at $40 were stolen while the family were visiting relatives at Morton Grove. Mr. Poehlmann firmly believes in the old saying that experience is a good teacher, so he is not the loser this time as he took out burglar insurance immediately after the first robbery.

Michael F. Dziadul, 1514 West Chicago avenue, says that wedding orders were never so plentiful with him as they were this week.

CHICAGO

The George Wittbold Co.'s retail department never seems to be idle, for the force is always busy with something or other. Most of the time it is with decorations of some sort but this week it is with funeral work. Their trade extends to all parts of the city and the orders were so widely scattered on January 20 that 14 men were needed on the delivery service that day.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s fancy sweet peas in all colors are the leaders at the store this week and measure fully 12 inches in stem. The supply of orchids at this house was never larger than at present and the average daily cut is 600 blooms. The supply department is now headlining Waters' butterfly corsage tie which is something new and bound to be a winner.

Wietor Bros. are having a big demand for American Beauty roses, which are now just coming in crop. N. J. Wietor and party, who are enjoying a visit in the southland have just reached Ocean Springs, Miss., after a delightful stop at Chattanooga, Tenn., and New Orleans, La.

Peter Reinberg is cutting from a new crop of American Beauty roses which are now seen at his store in quantity. The supply of other roses is fair and just about large enough to go around.

At Kennitcott Bros. Co.'s store bulbous stock of all kinds is seen in large quantities with a fancy grade of tulips the principal offering. Another delayed shipment of boxwood, intended for the holidays, has just been delivered to their store.

Harry Manheim says that Hoerber Bros.' stock is sold at an early hour each day, carnations included. Hoerber's have every reason to feel proud of their Killarney roses for the stock that they are now cutting is of the best quality.

Bassett & Washburn's American Beauty roses are now of very good quality and no trouble is being experienced in disposing of the cut. Lilies, tulips and other bulbous flowers are also seen in large supply here.

Miss Martha Gunterberg and Gus Alles, Tim Matchen, Chas. Drissler and wives attended the Bald-Griffin wedding which was held at Our Lady of Lourdes Church on Wednesday, January 15.

Percy Jones is displaying a fine line of corsage accessories especially adapted for St. Valentine's day. His cut flower department is on deck as usual with all the desired stock in season.

The J. B. Deamud Co.'s tables are filled with "good things" each morning after the shipments of stock have been unpacked, especially with bulbous flowers and carnations.

OF HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON.

A well attended meeting of the above society was held on the evening of Tuesday, January 14, at the conservatories of Smith College. The meeting opened at eight o'clock. After the reading of minutes of the previous meeting, two were admitted to membership and three others were nominated. The question of having a banquet was next discussed. It was decided to have one in Northampton on a date to be fixed at our February meeting. At this point of the meeting, G. H. Sinclair at the close of a graceful speech presented on behalf of the members a handsome pair of cuff links to the retiring secretary, F. G. Bartlett, for faithful and efficient service. This was followed by the reading and discussing of essays.

The subjects chosen were "The Retail Trade," by D. J. Gallivan of Holyoke, and "Heating," by Prof. Whiting of Amherst Agricultural College. Mr. Whiting spoke of the advantages and disadvantages of steam and hot water, but personally felt that the method of heating by steam was by far the best and most economical. —Radcliffe of Elmwood told an interesting story of the culture of the aster. After plowing the land, he harrows in a dressing of lime and at planting time he places a handful of finely broken tobacco stems under each plant, stimulating later with a slight application of nitrate of soda, if he thinks necessary. No other fertilizers are used. Francis Canning and Frank Barnard were highly complimented by the members for the very fine specimen of the Staghorn fern exhibited by them, which received the society's highest award. The members were also very interested to see one of the true rubber plants, Castilleja elastica. The next meeting will be at the greenhouses of the Amherst Agricultural College, Tuesday evening, February 11.

PRICES ARE CUT.

In spite of the inclement weather the cut flower supply does not seem to be affected. There are plenty of flowers of all kinds. There has been a severe cut in prices. Carnations were moved last week at a much lower figure. Roses were selling well and were more in demand than carnations.

NOTES.

Governor Cox's inaugural festivities, held the week of January 13, furnished an outlet for a part of the large amount of stock on hand. Sweet peas for corsage work and white carnations for decorations were especially in demand.

The Riverside Floral Co. had a big rush for white carnations on January 17, which was Mother's Day. At the revival services held here by "Billy" Sunday.

Wilson's Seed Store held its first special sale January 19. Enormous quantities of carnations and roses were disposed of.

The trade extends its sympathy to Miss Howard of Howard & Co., in the recent death of her mother.

Joe Hellenenthal says funeral work has been very heavy for the past week.

TRADE NOT BRISK.

The last week has been more like the breaking up of winter than what we had in January last year. Trade conditions are not what could be called brisk. The supply of stock is equal to all demands. American Beauties and Richmond roses are somewhat scarce.

NOTES.

The florist that has a greenhouse at the present time with any degree of good management, can keep his store well filled with flowering plants and when prettily trimmed together with the ability of the salesman, can sell them in preference to roses, carnations and many other cut flowers to be used for certain purposes. Lilacs, azaleas, cyclamens and primrose plants are good and can be found in almost all the stores. "Bargains in rubber plants" was the way a sign in one of the local flower stores read recently.

Stephen Greene, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called last week and got acquainted with Buffalo live ones.

Omaha, Neb.

The Christmas trade, according to Hess & Swoboda, was 40 per cent greater than in 1911. The fine weather is credited with much of the increase. Very little wrapping was necessary. Flowers were plentiful, of good quality and everything sold. Potted plants, especially poinsettias, went well. Plant baskets sold readily as did holly and boxwood. Palms, ferns and araucarias sold better than ever before. New Year's day was fully as good as a year ago.

NOTES.

We have been having some real winter. Coal seems to advance in price every year. Two years ago we paid $2.40 a ton for coal, last year $2.85 to $3.00 and this year $3.45 to $3.65. Flowers remain at the same price, however.

The department stores sold carnations for 15 cents a dozen January 4. Such prices are suicidal for the grower. They may be all right before the plants are thrown out of the houses in June or July, but not in January.

J. J. Hess has been sick with grippe, but is much improved. The Hess & Swoboda Co. cut 4,800 carnations December 23, 3,000 the next day and 2,000 on Christmas. All were sold.

Business since New Year's has been good. Stock seems plentiful but prices are firm. Violets are coming in more freely but find a ready market.

Of our firm, its products, and its methods of doing business means to you, the buyer, Better Service, Better Goods, and Better Satisfaction. Our aim is to produce quality in quantity at reasonable prices.

Better business to us means better employes and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

FRENCH bulb growers complain January 6 of lack of rain up to that date.

ALBERT DICKINSON and wife, of Chicago, will make a trip to Europe in March.

THE recent freezing weather in California will, it is thought, cut short the supply of California Asparagus plumosus nanus seed.

VENTURA, CALIF., January 18.—We have had two and one-half inches of rain which insures a good crop of most of the products of this vicinity.

ROCKY FORD, COLO.—Local seedsmen are favorably incensed with the parcels post and expect to use that means of delivery in preference to the express.

ALEX. FORBES, for many years identified with Peter Henderson & Co., New York, has secured the controlling interest in J. F. Noll & Co., Newark, N. J.

PALO ALTO, CALIF., January 18.—We have just had two inches of rain here, with promise of more, which will materially improve seed crop prospects if followed by warm growing weather.

TOPEKA, KANS.—F. W. Barteldes, of Lawrence, J. G. Peppard, of Kansas City, and other representative seedsmen to the number of about a dozen were here January 18 in the interest of the seed trade to consult with the committee in charge of the new state seed law.

THE low price of California onion bulbs grown on contract caused the seed growers who owned these to put most of these onions into the ground to grow seed instead of selling same on the market as they sometimes do. The result of this may make some overstock of flat varieties for next year.

ALPENA, MICH.—The Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co. has filed suit against the Detroit & Mackinac Railway Co. for $10,000 damages it alleges was done to its interests by the building of a new station. The seed firm is located just west of the new building, which the complaint sets forth prevents vehicles from reaching the factory directly.

Visited Chicago: L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Palo Alto, Calif.; J. C. Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif.; A. B. Haven, of the Haven Seed Co., Santa Ana, Calif.; A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Chas. P. Guelf, representing the Jerome E. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; E. O. Pieper, representing the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Calif.; C. Kimberlin, of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Calif.; W. J. Fosgate, Santa Clara, Calif.; J. W. Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose, Calif.; J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.

American Seed Trade Association.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association was held at the Hotel Ponchartrain, Detroit, Mich., January 20. The following were in attendance: President Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Chas. D. Boyles, Chicago; W. D. Ross, Worcester, Mass.; C. N. Keeney, Le Roy, N. Y.; and Secretary C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Cleveland was chosen as the place for the annual convention next June.

New Postal Regulations.

Third assistant postmaster general. James J. Britt, issued the following affecting seeds, bulbs, plants, etc., January 17:

"Fourth class matter inclosed in boxes to which the lids are nailed or screwed may be accepted for mailing at the fourth-class rates of postage if, with reasonable effort, the lids can be removed for the purpose of permitting examination of the contents. It would appear that in cases where the lids of boxes are fastened in the manner indicated, they may be easily removed by the use of a chisel, screwdriver, or other suitable instrument, and as easily replaced. Postmasters are cautioned to exercise care in replacing the covers or wrappers of parcels which have been opened for inspection, so that the contents of the parcels may not be injured or lost in transit.

"Seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, although chargeable with the special rate of one cent for each two ounces or fraction of two ounces, regardless of distance, are fourth-class matter, and postage on them must be prepaid by parcel post stamps. Samples of grain, potatoes, beans, peas, etc., sent for purposes other than planting, are chargeable with the regular fourth-class rates of postage, which are set forth in Section 3, Parcel Post Regulations.

"When it is desired to send merchandise as first-class matter, under ordinary postage stamps, the packages should be sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, in order to avoid any confusion in the mails as to their proper classification.

"Hereafter ordinary postage stamps must be used in payment of postage on parcels and other mail matter addressed to foreign countries, including Canada, Cuba, Mexico and the republic of Panama. Parcel post stamps must not be affixed to mail matter of any kind whatever addressed to any foreign country."

Disclaimer Again Holds Good.

In a suit brought against the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., the New York supreme court holds that though the stock delivered was not true to name, the seller was not responsible. The action was brought on an alleged breach of warranty in the sale of peas. According to the evidence, Peter H. Platts bought of the Page firm fifteen bushels of peas of the Duke of Albany variety in February, 1911, and again in June, 1911, five more bushels of the same variety. It developed that the peas were purchased for Faye E. Van Voorhis, who brought the suit.

The crop did not prove satisfactory and the contention of the plaintiff was that the seeds were not of the variety claimed. The company attempted to settle out of court to avoid suit, but was unsuccessful. It then decided to stand trial on the non-warranty or disclaimer clause and its contention was upheld. It was claimed that Platts, who acted as agent for Van Voorhis, was aware of the non-warranty clause under which the peas were sold and that Van Voorhis was therefore chargeable with the same knowledge.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade January 22, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.

ROSE SUPPLY SHORT.

The bad weather is still with us, but it doesn't seem to have much effect on the supply of cut flowers, except roses, which are running very short. American Beauties are another scarce article, but there is not much call for them anyway. Lilies are coming in very strong and are also of fine quality. Roman hyacinths have become a drug on the market, as nobody seems to care for them. Sweet peas continue to be the leaders here. Some of the finest ever seen in the city are arriving by the thousands. There is the usual good supply of violets, daisies, mignonette, white lilac, daffodils and valley. A little freesia is seen, but does not amount to much.

NOTES.

We had a very strong windstorm Saturday, which played havoc with windows and everything else not nailed or screwed down. It reached a velocity of 56 miles an hour for a short period and took the plate glass in one of the McCallum Co.'s doors along with it.

The A. T. Lorch Co., the carnation specialists of De Haven, are consigning some fine carnations, especially White Lawson, to the McCallum Co.

Jos. Thomas of Greensburg was in town last week, and reports a very heavy run on funeral work, cleaning up every flower he had in sight.

A. F. Morrison, the chrysanthemum grower of Mars, was in town Friday, talking over plans for next season.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange has temporarily discontinued the handling of cut flowers.

The Empire Floral Co. has opened a store on Sandusky (formerly Seventh) street.

Mrs. E. M. Niggel, who has been sick, is now regaining her former health.

Chas. Puhlman reports that his winter crop of sweet peas will be on soon. Miss Tillie Kyle is visiting friends in Cleveland.

J.

Nashville, Tenn.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

The trade has been very quiet the last few days than at any time since the holidays, only funeral work serving to keep the florists busy. The supply has been fine and all kinds of stock very good. Roses are a little off crop, but carnations are unusually good and plentiful. The florists' windows are full of blooming potted plants. Violets are plentiful and of very fine quality, and there seems to be plenty of lily of the valley. Easter lilies are also plentiful. Narcissi and Romans are in fine condition and abundant enough to supply all demands.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. are making a fine cut of carnations and their roses are just beginning to come in again after a rest.

McIntyre Bros. have some fine sweet peas. Their new store has proved very successful.

L. Haury & Sons also have sweet peas and violets as well as fine potted plants.

The Joy Floral Co. has a fine lot of orchids.

It is semi-double, medium dwarf, of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade, 2 1/2-in. pots, 50c each; $5.00 per doz. 3-in. pots, $1.00 each; $10.00 per doz. cash. # "History Repeats Itself"

Some Roses are like men—they have to be transplanted to bring out their best qualities. American Beauty never attained the importance in its native France as "Mme. Ferdinand Jamain," that it has in America. The same was true of "Katherine Mermet," from which we got the two sports Bride and Bridesmaid. Liberty and Killarney never developed under the weepy skies of Ireland as they did in America.

The latest aspirant, "MRS. GEO. SHAWYER," we predict will find its way to the front just as have the varieties mentioned. Come and see it growing and convince yourself. $30.00 per hundred; $250.00 per thousand. Grafted or own root.

ROSE SUPPLY SHORT.

The bad weather is still with us, but it doesn't seem to have much effect on the supply of cut flowers, except roses, which are running very short. American Beauties are another scarce article, but there is not much call for them anyway. Lilies are coming in very strong and are also of fine quality. Roman hyacinths have become a drug on the market, as nobody seems to care for them. Sweet peas continue to be the leaders here. Some of the finest ever seen in the city are arriving by the thousands. There is the usual good supply of violets, daisies, mignonette, white lilac, daffodils and valley. A little freezia is seen, but does not amount to much.

NOTES.

We had a very strong windstorm Saturday, which played havoc with windows and everything else not nailed or screwed down. It reached a velocity of 56 miles an hour for a short period and took the plate glass in one of the McCallum Co.'s doors along with it.

The A. T. Lorch Co., the carnation specialists of De Haven, are consigning some fine carnations, especially White Lawson, to the McCallum Co.

Jos. Thomas of Greensburg was in town last week, and reports a very heavy run on funeral work, cleaning up every flower he had in sight.

A. F. Morrison, the chrysanthemum grower of Mars, was in town Friday, talking over plans for next season.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange has temporarily discontinued the handling of cut flowers.

The Empire Floral Co. has opened a store on Sandusky (formerly Seventh) street.

Mrs. E. M. Niggel, who has been sick, is now regaining her former health.

Chas. Puhlman reports that his winter crop of sweet peas will be on soon.

Miss Tillie Kyle is visiting friends in Cleveland.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

The trade has been more quiet the last few days than at any time since the holidays, only funeral work serving to keep the florists busy. The supply has been fine and all kinds of stock very good. Roses are a little off crop, but carnations are unusually good and plentiful. The florists' windows are full of blooming potted plants. Violets are plentiful and of very fine quality, and there seems to be plenty of lily of the valley. Easter lilies are also plentiful. Narcissus and Romans are in fine condition and abundant enough to supply all demands.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. are making a fine cut of carnations and their roses are just beginning to come in again after a rest.

McIntyre Bros. have some fine sweet peas. Their new store has proved very successful.

L. Haury & Sons also have sweet peas and violets as well as fine potted plants.

"History Repeats Itself"

Some Roses are like men—they have to be transplanted to bring out their best qualities. American Beauty never attained the importance in its native France as "Mme. Ferdinand Jamain," that it has in America. The same was true of "Katherine Mermet," from which we got the two sports Bride and Bridesmaid. Liberty and Killarney never developed under the weepy skies of Ireland as they did in America.

The latest aspirant, "MRS. GEO. SHAWYER," we predict will find its way to the front just as have the varieties mentioned. Come and see it growing and convince yourself. $30.00 per hundred; $250.00 per thousand. Grafted or own root.

Important Construction Points

In the Wm. R. Nicholson New House, at So. Framingham, Mass.

IT'S an iron framer, 52x200. It was erected right over a smaller wooden house which was not removed until after the Decoration Day stock was sold.

It is our two column compression truss design.

The columns are not pipe, but made at our factory by bolting together two angle irons. You can at once see what strength such a column, made such a way, must have.

The supporting and non-buckling strength of columns made this way is so great that we can place them about 40 feet apart and still be able to use only an exceedingly simple form of compression trussing.

When you walk in this house of Nicholson's, you scarcely notice the columns, they are so wide apart.

There are two things you do notice, however, and keep on noticing; they are the convincing rigidity and surprising lightness of the entire frame; also the particular attention given to each part that every part shall have abundant strength.

It is evident that the construction has been carefully thought out and every stress and strain proved up by greenhouse engineering experts.

It was far from an easy task to sell Mr. Nicholson this house, because he is the kind of man that has to be shown and convinced step by step and part by part.

He tried every way possible to shoot holes in the way we proposed to frame it. In fact, he was one of the hardest men to convince, we ever had to deal with.

But ask him or write him about what he thinks of his house now.

Better yet, go and see it.

See for yourself.

Convince yourself.

Let the house do its own talking.

If you'll do this, we will run the risk of anyone else getting your order. If you can't go, we will gladly send you an interior photograph 24 inches long and full particulars.

Double Glass Sash

Never mind the weather!

Your plants in hot-beds or cold-frames under Sunlight Double Glass Sash will not mind it

Between the two layers of glass in the Sunlight Double Glass Sash is an air space of  $\frac{5}{8}$  of an inch in thickness

Above the glass is winter weather—zero perhaps. Below the glass is warm earth and plants growing like May

The secret of it all, is that the air space between the two layers of glass being a non-conductor will not let the cold in or the heat out. It makes the Sunlight Double Glass Sash complete in itself. It needs no mats or boards. The only cover is the air sealed between the layers of glass.

You can have hot-beds and cold-frames with Sunlight Double Glass Sash far cheaper in the long run than your single layer sash with heavy, dark covers of mats or boards. You can save more than half the labor and worry and you can control your beds better and get earlier, stronger and far more profitable plants.

The Sunlight Double Glass Sash method comes right home to every gardener and florist in the country. It is good business to learn all about it.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Genistas.

The plants of genistas should now be making their blooming growth and no further pinching will be necessary except in the case of long, strong growths which sometimes break from the stem and thereby spoil the symmetry of the plant, and these should be cut back as soon as they grow beyond the other flowering shoots. They can now be bloomed in succession by moving some into a warmer house, but those that are wanted at Easter are still better left in a cool house, one with a temperature of 45 degrees being the one that will produce the best results. These plants are never partial to great heat, reveling in a cool atmosphere, and often when taken into the warm living rooms where the air is extremely dry will soon drop their leaves. Those that are being grown to certain shapes, such as the balls, pyramids or baskets, will doubtless require some pinching back yet, but this should be done with great care or the flowering buds will be removed. A close examination of the tip of the shoot will clearly show whether the buds are forming and when this occurs all pinching must be immediately stopped. Any blind wood or extra strong growths that are cut out may be made into cuttings and young stock obtained. These will root much better in a cool propagating bench than in one where the bottom heat is confined. When the plants are full of bloom they will require heavy watering, and do not place them in a dry warm location for any great length of time.

Verbenas.

The verberna makes a very satisfactory bedding plant if properly grown, but the thin, spindly plants produced from late grown seed and planted in flats and baskets as closely together as is possible in order that they may be sold at a cheap price, seldom make any showing in the beds until very late in summer. The seeds should be sown early enough that the plants may be stopped and branched and grown in pots, and one plant so grown will make more showing during the season than half a dozen of the poor plants so freely offered at the spring sales. It is really better to buy the rooted cuttings of selected varieties that are advertised at this time than to sow seed after the middle of February. Seed sown up to this date, however, can be grown on to make fine plants. Care must be exercised in the germination of the seed, which is often blamed for the carelessness or lack of knowledge of the grower, for the seed damps off very easily when it germinates, being very sensitive to any change in temperature and moisture. Until they begin to make growth, the plants should be watched carefully, never allowed to become dry, or exposed to any draughts.

Pelargoniums.

While all the plants so well known as geraniums are pelargoniums, yet it is the show or fancy type called by many Lady Washington geraniums that are generally known under this name. The plants that are wanted in bloom in April and May will now be in their blooming pots and beginning to show their blooming growths, but for June and July flowering the plants should now be shifted to the blooming pots, five or six-inch as the plants may require, except with large specimens, of which few are now seen. They like a turfy, coarse loam, to which may be added one-fourth well rotted manure, and if the soil is heavy a liberal amount of sharp sand to keep it open, and the plants should be potted very firmly. A cool, well-ventilated house should be selected for growing them, and until the days grow warmer and brighter they should be watered sparingly. In early spring, when they are well covered with foliage and the blooming shoots begin to grow, more water will be needed. A little stopping may be necessary if the plants send forth strong, long growths, to make the plant shapely, but care and judgment should be used in this operation, which should cease upon the appearance of the bud shoots, which are easily distinguished by the different manner of growth. Do not attempt to take any cuttings at this time, for after the plants are through blooming is the best time for propagation, and any cuttings taken now are pretty sure to rob the plants of the bloom. These plants are very subject to attacks of both red spider and green fly, and should be fumigated or sprayed regularly. As the extremely hot, dry days of summer approach a slight shade will be found very beneficial to both the plant and flowers.

Antirrhinums.

The grower of antirrhinums has an opportunity now to select the best plants from which to propagate the stock for another year, as the plants are now producing fine spikes and it is possible to select the best types. Those that have fine large flowers set closely together on the stem, and yet not close enough to crowd, are to be preferred. The earliness of blooming is another matter to take into consideration. It will be found in raising these plants from seed that there is a great difference in their time of blooming, and for winter flowering the earliest that there are of good type should be chosen. There are plenty of good cuttings to be obtained now for the laterals which grow from the axil of each leaf make the best cuttings and the flower is enlarged by their removal. Plants that are in bloom will be benefited greatly from now on by feeding either with liquid manure or a strong mulch, and the next growth thinned to eight or ten shoots, which will insure a much better crop for spring cutting than to allow all the small shoots to grow. Keep the plants tied erect all the time, for it takes but a few hours' sun to draw the tip up from a stem that leans away from the center, with the result that a crooked stem is formed, which greatly impairs its appearance. These spikes of bloom should be handled very carefully, especially the long sprays, for they are very brittle and break easily. It is better not to cut too many at once. When cutting hold them with the heads hanging down, and when there are as many as can be easily held in the hand cut, take them at once to the flower room, trim off all surplus growth and tie the stems a dozen in a bunch, then loosely tie strings around the center and toward the top of the bunch, and place the stems in a deep jar of water. This prevents crooked stems, so often seen, for the plant continues its growth after being cut, and if allowed to hang away from the jar the blooms grow crooked.

GARY, IND.—John Owens, proprietor of the Boulevard Heights Greenhouses, has purchased the Gary Floral Co., which has been in business about a year under the management of Mrs. Kay M. Wells.

Everybody wishes Harry success as he has been connected with the florist business in Worcester for the past twenty-five years. He has secured the services of William Soden, who has had much experience as a designer and decorator.

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Helen Gould's Wedding.

The wedding of Helen Gould and Findley J. Shepard took place in the old Gould mansion, which commands a long range of view to the west and north, overlooking the Tappansee, the widest portion of the Hudson River. The ceremony was performed in the south parlor, the bride and room standing under a bower of tall Kentia palms and Areca lutescens—the foliage gracefully drooping over at the top, forming a complete bower. Interspersed in this bower were *Lilium longiflorum*s in profusion, which together with the white satin priedieu and the wedding aisle formed of white aisle posts (each post decorated with a bunch of white roses) and broad white satin ribbon, produced a very artistic effect.

The palms used in the decorations were from Miss Gould's own spacious with a decoration of some very tall specimens of Caryota urens, or fish-tail palm. These plants were 12 feet high, and branchless except at the top. The graceful foliage produced a very pleasing effect. The flowers here were American Beauty roses (long stemmed) in deep vases.

The art gallery on the second floor was decorated with foliage plants and long stemmed American Beauty roses; the other rooms on this floor with cut orchids (principally cattleyas). The bride carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and orchids (Phalenopsis amabilis). The groom wore a boutonniere of gardenias.

The ceremony was witnessed by a number of wealthy and some titled relatives; but one unusual feature of the wedding was the admitting of thirty-five or forty employes on the estate, to the ceremony. These men, headed by Supt. Robbie, filed into the main hall, then opening the ranks. The bride, leaning upon the arm of her brother, George J. Gould, descended the stairs and greeted her employes, almost individually, by a bow and a smile.

The employes remained until the marriage ceremony was performed. Some time after the ceremony, and characteristic of the now Mrs. Shepard all the reporters were invited into the house to view the decorations and the presents. The photographers, with their cameras were also granted the same privilege.

The decorations were entrusted to Alexander McConnell, as have the other large Gould functions, since 1895. Mr. McConnell and Superintendent Robbie, of the Gould estate, both deserve great credit for the manner in which the decorations were carried out. A. F. F.

St. Valentine's Day Suggestions.

The constantly growing demand for novelties and attractive special holiday windows is the best evidence of an increasing appreciation of the florist's art, which, (until lately) as compared with other arts, has had but a small degree of general attention. Some of us think, because we sell flowers that only flowers should be displayed in the window. But now a concentrated effort is being made and systematically undertaken, not only to attract by nature's beautiful flowers, but so to arrange and combine them as to make them still more attractive. In other words to give them a constantly different setting.

Our old-time florists may say this is not necessary, but times are different now and it is necessary in the flower business to take note of the larger advertising possibilities and the larger financial returns produced by making the window a special attraction as each national or other holiday appears on the calendar. Especially is this true of St. Valentine's day for it offers many pretty suggestions.

The fashioning of an attractive heart—one of good size and dimensions—made of wire and about two feet in height, the wire bound with red satin ribbon and on the upper left hand side an artistic arrangement of red roses (Meteors) or red carnations, will be an excellent setting for the center of the window. This should be suspended from the ceiling, or on either side, as a more elaborate setting, make two artificial trees. Place the greenhouses. The ceiling of the parlor was garlanded with heavy strings of Asparagus plumosus interspersed with white roses, suspended in the garlands. Two broad mantels were banked, and filled with lilies of the valley. The fireplaces were banked with a fine variety of large crotons. Above the mantels a fine effect was produced by clusters of long stemmed American Beauty roses.

At the extreme south end of the house is the sun parlor. This room was draped with Alabama smilax and groups of growing orchids fastened to the walls. The music room was effectively decorated with asparagus and Pink Killarney roses. The library was decorated with American Beauty roses and Asparagus plumosus; the dining room with Radiance roses and Alabama smilax.

The buffet table was decorated with White Killarneys. These decorations were two feet 6 inches above the table and very effective. The table was garlanded with smilax, white roses and lily of the valley. The hall was treated stump in a red basket or small tub. Cover the trunk and all branches with rose foliage. Then arrange small red wire satin hearts, or rather the wire hearts covered with red satin ribbon (wound tightly) and on which three small rose buds have been tied. Attach these to trees at different branches. A few large red roses can also be attached to different branches—at the top of the tree, for instance, and in such places where they alternate with the hearts. These trees should be so placed that the large center heart point will just reach a center between the trees. From under the crown of the trees stretch a red satin sash ribbon across, allowing the ribbon to fall loosely. On the ribbon the words "St. Valentine" should appear in gold. Use palms for a background and small ferns in the foreground, around the base of tree tubs or baskets.

As selling novelties which can be used for the day, take the ordinary kind of basket which can easily be enameled a rich red color and fill with baby rambler roses, placing in them the tiny specimens which are obtainable now. The small Japanese baskets enameled red will also look well with red carnations and a few sprays of lily of the valley. Red heart shaped baskets will make an acceptable Valentine gift arranged with marguerites and lily of the valley. The valentine boxes which are most attractive are those having the white covers with a red heart cut effect in center in which the sender's card is placed. A few of these can be advantageously placed in the window at one side, tilting the cover so as to show a bunch of violets. The violets should be arranged with a violet bouquet dolly of paper, or even white will look well. To further embellish the cover a rosette of white gauze or one of red can be prettily and jauntily arranged at the side of the tilted cover.

If you have glass trays suspended in your windows, as is quite the thing for display purposes, especially where boxes of flowers are to attract the attention of the casual passerby, heart shaped corsages can be shown to good advantage. In finishing the heart shaped corsages use the shower streamers made of baby red gauze ribbon in which a green carnation bud has been tied. Perhaps, nothing could be finer for a valentine than the old fashioned bouquet made of a miscellaneous collection of flowers, such as a few red carnations, a goodly bunch of Meteor roses and a few fine sprays of mignonette, a spray of paper white narcissi, a tulip, a hyacinth and a little boxwood for a green finish. Cover the handle with green foil and instead of the regulation ribbon bow use about a dozen long loop strands of green and red ribbon of about an inch in width. The green should match the mignonette and the red the shade of the roses. A heart should be placed in among the ribbon loops and on the sender's card might be suggested the following inscription:

"A simple little nosegay.

Yet not without some art;

For somewhere in its make-up

Is Cupid's hidden dart."

Philadelphia Retail Florists' Association.

There have been a number of rumors floating about regarding the motives that prompted the organization of the Retail Florists' Association of Philadelphia, Pa. Many of them are wide of the mark, some made by men who fear the retail florists will boycott them for selling to the curbstone merchants or for some other fancied wrong that no one else ever thought of. This not yet "fully fledged" organization is the result of a few leading spirits in the retail ranks who believed that much good could be accomplished along lines pertaining to this particular branch of the trade if their co-workers would get together and work as a whole to bring about several important reforms or changes in the business.

There is no animus or ill-feeling back of the movement. The aim of the organization is to be uplifting, to put into concrete form the best ideas of the many, which after adoption cannot help but be of benefit, not only to the members themselves, but to the whole trade. There are three branches of the trade—the grower, the commission or middle man, and the retailer. To be successful in any of these branches requires skill or knowledge to be attained only by experience in that particular line. The groundwork of all and without which none can be successful is business instinct.

The retailer is often taken to task by the other interests for his lack of aggressiveness. The grower says he does not push this or that new rose, or other new flower that the grower thinks is a good thing, and which the public are standing ready to buy; only they cannot get it because the retailer will not carry it in stock. The commission man complains because the retailer will not stock up heavily in times of overproduction and help carry a part of the load which is demoralizing the market and which they feel sure could be disposed of by a little more aggressive work on his part. The growth of the business in the last ten years has been phenomenal and while the retailers may not have kept up the pace, which I, however, very much doubt, there seems to be an overreaching on the part of the grower which results in a situation which at times is very demoralizing to all concerned.

One of the salient features of this new movement is to help the market by creating an added demand for flowers. The public are to be taken into hand, they are to be given facts about flowers concerning their beauty and their appropriateness for this or that occasion. Much is to be made of their use for the various holidays of the year. A stop is to be put to the "negative" stories that go the rounds of the daily press and frighten the public off by their tales of high and fancy prices at holidays and other special seasons. People are to be given to understand that flowers are a necessity, that they are not dear, or high priced, but can be had at prices to suit any purse. A plan is proposed that at seasons of overproduction with the co-operation of all branches of the trade, the public will be notified through the reading columns of the press of special sale days when they can go to their florist and buy for that day flowers at a great reduction. Correct information is to be given about house plants, mentioning those best suited for the purpose. Simple cultural directions will also be given so that even those without luck will be successful.

Most of this information will reach the public through the columns of the press, without cost except that of preparation, the expense of which is to be defrayed by all interests alike, and by putting the various branches to the test it will be seen who is lacking in aggressiveness. There are other features that concern this branch alone, such as protecting themselves from those who do not pay their bills. The matter of the commission men entering the retail field is also one of the problems that may come up for arbitration. Social matters will also be taken up later. That will be one of the enjoyable features of the new organization.

THE ROSE.

Propagation.

One of the most essential things in rose culture is to start right. To have good healthy bushes that will give good flowers during the winter months, care must be taken to plant nothing but the very best stock and in order to have good stock great care must be exercised in propagating.

Many of the diseases which in after life affect the rose are contracted either in the cutting bench or are perpetuated by propagating diseased or weakened wood, through lack of knowledge of the requirements of the cutting or through carelessness. Opinions regarding the best style of a cutting are almost as numerous as growers, some persistently advocating one-eyed cutting while others advocate as earnestly two or even three eyes. Some again recommend that cutting be taken from flower stems, while others are content to use blind wood entirely.

In such varieties as American Beauties and Richmonds where canes from the bottom are desirable, cutting may be taken with three eyes, leaving two eyes above the bud and one at the base of the cutting. Many growers have condemned this practice, but as it has worked well with me and with many others—I give it for what it is worth and recommend the younger grower to give it a trial. Such varieties as Maryland, Killarney and the yellows, do well with one or two eyes.

After many years' experimenting I do not think it makes much difference whether flowering stems or good strong blind wood be used, the after treatment of the cutting being of more importance. We must also take into consideration the expense attending propagating from flower stems. Few modern growers would care to denude their plant of buds when, because of dark and short days, roses are scarce and command their best price. But whatever style of wood is used, it ought to be carefully selected, rejecting all weak, strawy wood and taking only that which is in a right ripened condition and growing on the most vigorous and healthy plants, taking special care to pass by all such plants as have foliage the least bit off color.

In making the cutting, use a keen edged knife, making a clear, short cut, and avoid a long slicing one, as the smaller and cleaner cut will callous more quickly and give roots of better arrangement than the longer cut. From the time of taking off the wood until it is in the sand, it should be kept moistened to prevent wilting. In preparing the bench remember that cleanliness is most essential to success. The bench ought to be thoroughly washed and should have a coating of hot lime rubbed into every joint and crevice.

Clean, sharp sand from river or pit, not too fine, is a good propagating medium. Put it on the bench to the depth of five inches, water well and pound firm. With a common butcher knife draw a straight line across the bench at a depth of one and a half inches; do not go deeper as it is better to have every cutting touch bottom than to have them hang. Put the cuttings in neatly from one to two inches apart, according to the size of the cutting, (American Beauties will require lots of room) press the sand firmly along the line, then make another parallel to the first at two inches distance. Water well and never allow the sand to become dry, as wilting at this stage is ruin. Syringe lightly, so as not to disturb the cutting, as often as necessary.

In shading, a very thin cheese cloth answers the purpose very well. This ought to be arranged in such a way as not to be too near the cuttings and should be easily removed during nights and cloudy weather or just as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench, as cuttings will root more quickly and be of better quality by having all the light available, though of course not the direct rays of the sun. The temperature of the sand should be as near 60 degrees as possible, with a house temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. By carefully attending to these rules the cutting will be in a fit condition to pot in from 28 to 30 days. C.

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIF.—The associated chambers of commerce of this county will petition the legislature to appropriate $1,500,000 to establish a horticultural experiment station in the northern part of this state.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Varieties to Propagate.

In a very little while it will be time to begin propagating the stock for the coming season's plantings, and before starting in on this work it is a good plan to map out the planting, figure up the quantity of the varieties required and then work up the stock to meet these requirements. The grower who kept a record of the results obtained last year from each variety knows exactly what to figure out for the coming season. He can tell whether with him the variety Ivory or any other, as the case may be, suffered in comparison with Chas. Razer, or some other white of larger size. He also knows whether it is advisable for him to drop any of the yellows, such as Monrovia, Robert Halliday or Donatello, to make room for increased plantings of Chrysolora or Ramapo. He also has at hand the data of how much of the very early varieties Golden Glow or Smith's Advance the demand of his trade will warrant him planting. Furthermore he can tell where he stands as regards the planting of the pompon and single varieties.

To those who are not so well acquainted with the several varieties or any who may wish to add to their list of varieties, a few notes of our experience of the last few seasons may be useful at this time. The demand with us for chrysanthemums before October 1, or until the asters are finished is not enough for the varieties Golden Glow and Smith's Advance to be profitable for us to grow; and as our space is limited we have come to the conclusion that we can get better returns from some of the later varieties. So these two will have to go, but this does not mean that they are not profitable elsewhere. However to those who are growing them for the first time I would advise timing the buds so that the blooms are ready to cut around September 15 or as the asters begin to wane, because with the exception of a very few instances the blooms that have appeared earlier than this have not been very tempting.

Starting with the early part of October we commence with Polly Rose for white. I place this variety first because of its dwarf habit and when well grown it is equal to any other white of its season, but it should be propagated early and given a long season of growth to get it at its best. The cuttings should be ready to come out of the sand, March 15, potted into 2½-inch pots, then repotted into 3-inch pots, April 15 to May 1, and planted into the bench the latter part of May. This variety requires close attention to keep the side shoots pinched out. I do not know of any other that needs closer looking after in this respect. October Frost is another popular early white. It is a tall grower and requires early planting. But when grown strong and the early bud taken we do not favor it as much as Polly Rose.

White Gloria is a new variety of 1912. It is a sport of Gloria and is a fine variety for high class trade, but it must be handled carefully because the flowers bruise easily. Virginia Poehlmann is another fine incurred white of sterling commercial qualities, but is hard to propagate, consequently it is not grown in very large quantities. However, if it is given extra care it will repay for it. Clementine Tousey is a variety that was grown in larger quantities a few years ago, than it now is. It is a beautiful white when well done, but is liable to come uneven, consequently it does not average as well as some others. Early Snow and Mlle. Arlette Dubois are new early whites highly recommended, but I am not acquainted with them enough to pass upon their qualities.

Ivory is still the standby of the second early white varieties for side benches. This is one of our oldest varieties, yet it is astonishing how very few growers there are that really understand the treatment that it requires to bring out its best qualities. The cuttings should be rooted in February or early March, potted up in light, sandy soil, and given a temperature a little higher than that given the others, because the wood is so hard it is slow to move in a low temperature. When as the growth is made the plants should be potted along and given every encouragement to stretch out and make growth. They should be planted into the beds not later than June 15. Owing principally to the formation and the hard nature of the foliage of the Ivory family it is among the hardest subjects of all the chrysanthemums to keep clean of red spider and thrips but fortunately it will stand liberal syringings.

Chas. Razer, another early white that has come to the front quite largely in the last few years, is of fine form and petalage and easy to grow. It is of good size, a beautiful variety. The white varieties of the mid-season and later have not been increased during the last two or three years by any valuable acquisitions from a commercial standpoint and Timothy Eaton, Chadwick Improved and W. H. Chadwick are grown in larger quantities than any others. Among the exhibition varieties are the fine whites like Naomah, Mrs. David Syme and Wm. Turner, which can be grown successfully for first class commercial trade if given special culture. Some growers complained of Mrs. Syme being soft in petalage during the past season, but with us it proved to be very satisfactory.

GENISTA RACEMOSA.

Pacific Supreme, though not entirely satisfactory owing to its heavy foliage and coarse growth, is still a good early pink, but the new variety Unaka appears destined to take its place as the best early pink for the beginning of October. Gloria is a beautiful shade of pink, but unfortunately it lacks substance for ordinary commercial purposes. We will grow a small batch, because it is at its best when other pinks are scarce and there is a demand for this color.

We have a strong selection of pink varieties to choose from, but a number require special treatment to bring out their best qualities. This together with the heavier demand for white and yellow has caused the pinks to be somewhat neglected. During the last two years we have a number of very beautiful shades of pink added to our list, namely: Manhattan, a light pink of clear even color; Hironnelle, a bright rosy color of good form; Mme. Corday, a fine early variety; Pink Gem, perfect in form and color with that silvery sheen to its petalage that is so pleasing with some varieties; Smith's Sensation, a very fine new pink of 1912, a variety that brought forth more favorable comments than any of last year's novelties and will be more largely planted this coming season. It is also large enough for any exhibition company. As a variety in fancy pink colors I would advise trying small quantities of some of the larger exhibition varieties that are a little different from the general run of commercial stock. The last season we had some very fine blooms of the varieties Reginald Vallis and M. Loiseau that were satisfactory in every way and well repaid the extra care given them.

We are "strong on" yellow varieties in every section, early, late and mid-season with plenty to select from to meet our every requirement, but do not overlook the varieties Chrysolora and Ramapo. Both are very fine yellows for October. It is indeed a great pleasure to handle such varieties as these and I would again advise to try a few others a little different from what is common on the market. Mrs. J. C. Neill is a great favorite with us and always responds wonderfully to our treatment. Mary Donnellan also is one that we like. We were successful with this variety last season. It was grown in stiff soil, so that it was kept a medium dwarf. Naceur Bey was another that opened our eyes when we found out what we could do with it when grown in a commercial way. There are many others that with a little extra care will respond most surprisingly.

Another word for the crimson and light bronze colors. It sometimes appears to me that we form an altogether too hasty judgment when we pass some of these varieties as of not any use commercially. Try them out more and study their requirements as to culture so as to bring them to perfection, and I believe that there will be some surprises in store for us. A word now as to the stock plants. See that they are not neglected. Give them a cool light position and pay close attention to the watering. They do not need to be kept wet all the time, but it is also important that they do not suffer for water so that the stems become hard and wiry. Another very important point is to keep them free from insects and though there is every opportunity for fumigating at this season, we also keep the spray going as well and find that it pays.

WITH THE GROWERS

Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.

Among the younger men who have achieved great success in the cut flower business none are more worthy of mention than Adolphus and William F. Gude of Washington, D. C. In the past few years they have been rapidly increasing their glass area till it now comprises a total of about 300,000 square feet, and the output is an immense amount of good stock. Though they have for years been known as large growers of American Beauties and other roses, they by no means confine their activities to these flowers.

On a recent visit we noted several houses of gardenias, all in fine condition, and blooming freely. There was evidence also of a great Christmas cut. As an example of the extent of their American Beauty growing it may be stated that they have about 20,000 plants of fine special stock, much of which is used in their own large retail business but a great deal also is sold at wholesale. In the other roses they have been equally successful. The Killarneys, Radiance, My Maryland, Richmond and other varieties are all successfully grown and when carnations, sweet peas and various other stocks are added the exhibit at their F street store each morning is very fine.

One of their late ventures which has attracted much attention was the purchase of the range once conducted by the American Rose Co. When the Gudes acquired this property the houses were in poor condition and they have gone steadily forward building and improving until it is now a fine range. In addition to very fine crops of roses, sweet peas of the finest quality are grown at this range, which is situated on the Bladensburg Road about 3 miles from their Anacostia range. Adolphus Gude superintends both ranges, making the rounds daily by automobile.

At the Anacostia range, in addition to what has already been enumerated, many good single violets are grown as well as a great stock of fine pot plants, azaleas, lilies, rhododendrons, primulas in variety being very noticeable. Wm. F. Gude is the store and sales manager, and this with his activity in District and society affairs makes him a very busy man. The visitors to this interesting firm are always sure of a hearty welcome, for the Gude Brothers are never too busy to be hospitable.

A. F. F.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.

Baur & Steinkamp extended an invitation to the members of the Indiana State Florists' Association to visit their greenhouses, January 14. Quite a number of visitors accepted the invitation and all seemed well paid with their visit.

This firm has three large carnation houses, each 350 feet long and I think 40 feet wide. All their carnations were producing a heavy crop of first-class blooms. Several varieties were carried over stock, and judging from the appearance, much of this will be done another year. However, Mr. Baur informed us that for the best results it was necessary to cut plants back about May 15. This, of course, would cut a crop short for Memorial day, but whether enough extra flowers would be produced from the plants cut back or carried over during the winter is something that has to be proved.

At the time of our visit the carried-over plants of Gloriosa were a sight, with buds and blooms of the very best quality. In white Shasta, White Wonder and White Enchantress were the leaders. St. Nicholas has done well again this winter and has proved to be a "bread and butter" kind.

However, the finest sight on the place was their new scarlet, Radiance. It seemed to be everything desired in a red carnation. It has size, color, stem and early free blooming qualities. I understand it is not to be placed on the market until 1914. After spending an hour or so with the carnation plants, Baur & Steinkamp invited the visiting guests to take luncheon with them, and were escorted to the Commercial club rooms, where the inner man was well provided for.

W. W. COLES.

J. W. Davis & Co., Bettendorf, Iowa.

Workmen are putting on the finishing touches to the last house of the new range of the J. W. Davis Co., Bettendorf, Ia. The new plant will be devoted to flowers exclusively and will consist of three houses, 34x300 feet each. The buildings are of Lord & Burnham construction, steel frame with concrete wherever possible. A fine brick work shop and boiler room was also added. The smokestack is 100 feet high and built large enough to accommodate several more boilers. It is as up-to-date a place as can be found anywhere.

The first range built by the Davis firm and devoted mostly to the forcing of cucumbers, consists of three houses 34x600 feet, two houses 64x600 feet and one house 34x300 feet. These are also of steel and concrete and of Lord & Burnham construction. Everything in connection is as up to date as money can make it. Six 150 horse power boilers do the heating. All are fitted out with the latest improved flue blowers. The condensation is pumped back into a large steel tank elevated above the boilers, where the water is kept hot, so in case of a sudden change in temperature and before the water would get back through thousands of feet of pipes, and naturally would be cold, the boilers are replenished out of this tank, and, the water being hot, does not lower the temperature.

So perfect is the heating system that the far house—more than 1,000 feet away from the boiler—is heated with only 1½ pounds pressure on the pipes. A steam main from the boilers to the farthest house has been put in to be used in case of a break down. The establishment is lighted by electricity, having their own electric light plant. A private telephone connects the office, work room, boiler room, greenhouses and the residence. Air pressure raises the water out of a drilled well into a cistern, where it is pumped to the main by steam all over the place. Fifty thousand gallons of water are used each day. A box or crate nailing machine is being installed, as some 400 boxes are used each day.

Cucumbers are shipped as far west as Butte, Mont., and east into Ohio. One house, 34x600 feet, is devoted to sweet peas this winter, and at the (time of the writer's visit (January 22) 20,000 blooms were being picked per day. It surely was a grand sight to stand at the end of one house and look over 600 feet of sweet peas all in their glory. Four houses are devoted to cucumbers, and they surely did look great—"cukes" 16 to 18 inches long everywhere. Radishes, beets and beans are raised between the cucumbers as catch crops. One house, 34x300 feet, is filled with tomatoes, and by March 1 will be in full crop.

Thirty-five employes are on the payroll. It takes about four carloads of coal a week to keep things warm. The night man, who regulates the temperature, walks 15 miles every night in the performance of his duty. A passenger and also freight depot are right on the place, and everything shipped in or out has only to be moved about 25 feet. A one-horse wagon is all that is really needed to do the hauling, and that is only used for local deliveries.
THEO. EWOLDT.

The Late Lydia C. Conard.

Lydia C. Conard, widow of Alfred F. Conard, died in her seventy-fourth year at her home in West Grove, Pa., January 21. She had been in good health up to September 28. On that afternoon she suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which she never recovered. All her life she was a member of the orthodox Friends' church and true to the principles she had learned in her youth.

She was born near West Grove, on the old homestead farm, a daughter of Samuel and Mary Ann Hughes, and is survived by a brother, Mark Hughes, of that town, and a sister, Hannah, widow of Edward Savery, West Chester.

Her husband, who died some years ago, was for many years a partner of the late Charles Dingee, they having organized the firm of Dingee & Conard. Later this firm was dissolved and Mr. Conard organized the Conard & Jones Company, in which he was active up to the time of his death.

Parkersburg, W. Va.

Chas. Dudley of the firm of Dudley & Son has been elected president of the Parkersburg board of commerce. This is the highest honor business men can confer upon a citizen of their town. Mr. Dudley is a very progressive man and believes in doing large things in his own business. He has brought about the success of two branch stores, one operating in Huntington, W. Va., another in Clarksburg, W. Va. The greenhouses comprising about 150 square feet and main store, are located in Parkersburg. D. J. Dudley, the youngest brother of the firm, will wed Miss Julia Savage February 12. Miss Savage is a very prominent girl of Parkersburg and the two are busy attending to many parties given them by their friends. D. J. Dudley attended West Point Academy for two years. However, the flower business offered greater opportunity, so he left to go into business with his brother.

Western Gladiolists Don't Stick.

E. S. Thompson, Benton Harbor, Mich., has issued a call for a meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, to be held at Chicago, February 7 and 8. We understand this organization has about six members. H. W. Koerner, former vice-president, has announced his withdrawal from the association and other prominent western growers claim the organization has scarcely established itself in the trade; they say one society in the interest of gladioli should be for the present sufficient.

American Gladiolus Society.

Public notice is hereby given that the following named varieties of gladioli have been registered by the nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society for the originator, John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.:

RAISER'S DESCRIPTIONS.

Fireflare—Bright, soft salmon-rose, with beautifully marked and rayed center. Flower large, perfect and of great substance. Spikes stout, compact and perfect in form.

Fireking—Long graceful spikes, showing half a dozen immense blooms open at the same time. Color intense fire scarlet. More brilliant than Brenchleyensis. Cardinal. Mrs. Francis King or any other variety. It is perfectly grand, and will become the leading cut-flower variety of its color.

Mrs. F. M. Lupton—A distinct light rose, equal to Panama or America. Large, wide-spreading flower and long perfect spike.

Rareray—Large, wide-spreading flower of a rare bright lilac-pink, with carmine flaked throat. It is a very rare and most beautiful and desirable shade of color.

Shedowa—Soft, delicate pink flower, exquisitely marked and mottled in center. Enormous spike and large, wide-spreading flower of perfect form.

Southampton—An immense spike of large flowers. Color a soft orange-rose, sometimes slightly flaked. White bars and light yellow throat. This is quite a distinct and most pleasing color, and a splendid flower in every way.

All of the above are of the Childsii type.

California Conditions.

Lompoc, January 9.—So far very few sweet peas have been planted in Lompoc Valley; none that I can learn of, except those planted by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. These were made possible through irrigation, for we have had no rain worth mentioning—less than an inch—since last spring.

The irrigating plant recently installed by the Burpee firm is proving very satisfactory and will, no doubt, insure crops even if this proves a short year. There are some indications of its being such, among which are the early and continued frosts, commencing the first week in October. We surely had them early and only this week at Floradale the thermometer registered ten degrees on the sixth and thirteen on the seventh and eighth. In Lompoc proper the temperature was two degrees lower than it was three miles nearer the Pacific Ocean.

When entering into a new proposition in irrigating there is more or less anxiety as to whether the available water will prove deleterious to the land. Some growers in the valley here use water from the river Santa Ynez, which is liable to contain abundant weed seeds; besides it is believed by some observers to contain more alkali than is found in the deep wells. The Messrs Burpees' well is 312 feet deep, which is a greater depth by 100 feet than any other well in operation in this valley. So we may feel reasonably safe in making use of such water freely, especially as the land hereabouts is naturally well drained.

At this writing Floradale has about sixty acres irrigated, in addition to that planted and this will soon be ready for preparation to receive the seed. It is understood, of course, that natural rainfall is preferable to irrigation, because the land is then more easily worked; besides, irrigating adds very materially to the operating expenses.

There is abundant time for copious rains for crops in general but the sooner the sweet peas are planted the better.

ROSES STILL VERY SCARCE.

The market is practically in the same condition as it was last week, with trade in general considerably quieter. Roses are still very scarce, especially the shorter grades, but there is a fair supply of long-stemmed flowers. Extra select Killarneys have sold for $15 a hundred in many cases, and in some instances the stock was exceptionally fine. American Beauty roses are in good supply, but the quality of the stock is not up to the standard, so what few really good flowers are arriving are sold quickly at good prices. Carnations are in over-supply nearly everywhere and are being sold in large lots at sacrifice prices. It is surprising that the demand for these flowers is not heavier during the present shortage of roses, and it was particularly noticeable that the demand for carnations has fallen off considerably for Carnation Day in comparison to former years. In fact, there was practically no call whatever for them this year. Violets are in over-supply everywhere and extra select stock is being sold at very low prices. There is a good supply of fine lily of the valley and tulips in all colors, with the exception of pink, which are somewhat scarce. Lilies are more plentiful and so are callas, but the better grades sell quite freely. Jonquils have had a good call all week. Orchids, especially cattleyas, continue to arrive in large quantities and the price has been gradually dropping, so a great many of the retail stores are featuring them daily in their window displays. Sweet peas are in good supply and greens of all kinds are plentiful. The weather has turned colder with a heavy snow on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Trade, however, is still very quiet and with the exception of roses stock is plentiful.

NOTES.

H. Wittbold is making a number of changes in his store to make room for the new growers who have rented space from him. Mr. Wittbold will continue in the wholesale commission business as before and the new growers who have rented space from him will be open for business on February 1. A large variety of stock will be handled, so fresh flowers will be obtainable at these quarters at all times.

Hugo Lowe, whose illness was reported in our last issue, died January 23 at the Cook County hospital from a complication of heart trouble and scarlet fever. Mr. Lowe was born in 1858 in Detroit, Mich. He came to Chicago in 1886 and was an employe of the Crane Co. up to the time of his last illness. Mr. Lowe is survived by his wife, who manages the flower business at 1943 North Forty-third avenue.

N. J. Wieter writes from Ocean Springs, Miss., that he likes the southern country real well and is seriously considering buying a pecan farm. Mr. and Mrs. Wieter's many friends will be pleased to hear that they are both enjoying splendid health and having a delightful visit.

Chas. W. McKellar was operated upon again last week for blood poisoning in the right thumb, but is on the job as usual as though nothing had happened. This is the second operation he has had for the same trouble, which resulted from a scratch by a rose thorn.

C. L. Washburn is in receipt of a handsome Christmas card from George Mount and wife, mayor and mayoress of Canterbury, England. Mr. Mount is the well-known nurseryman of that place who, with his son, visited this country last fall.

Louis Wittbold says the Geo. Wittbold Co. is now cutting enough roses at their Edgebrook greenhouses to supply its retail trade. This firm's Killarneys are exceptionally fine and have fine foliage, color and stem.

H. Van Gelder says that Percy Jones' sales on January 25 were the largest ever outside of the holidays. He is now featuring a fine line of bulbous stock, especially tulips, which are exceptionally good.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is cutting some fancy American Beauty roses but the demand is so heavy that O. Johnson, the city salesman, is experiencing trouble in filling all his orders.

Hoerber Bros. have placed a large order with the Chicago Carnation Co. for its new scarlet seedling carnation, The Herald, and will grow this variety instead of Beacon next season.

L. Hoekner, one of Peter Reinberg's store employes, continues to make a little extra money by supplying the local wholesalers with clean newspapers for lining shipping boxes.

The trade is cordially invited to attend an open meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Union at 232 North Clark street, hall 2, Wednesday evening, February 12.

James H. Burdett, former secretary and advertising manager of the Horticultural society, was slightly injured in the Illinois Central train wreck January 24.

John Kruchten's carnations are of good quality considering the unfavorable weather and the better grades of flowers are having a good call.

Fred Lautenschlager has returned from a business trip to Wisconsin cities in the interests of the Kroeschell Bros. Co.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s principal offerings this week are orchids and carnations which are now to be had in large quantities. The receipts of roses have been quite large, but it is impossible to fill all the orders. John Poehlmann is pretty good-natured since his last robbery, but thinks it is rather strange that he has not had a visitor at his home since Sunday, January 19.

Jack Byers, the Chicago Carnation Co.'s city salesman, escorted Robt. Miller, of the Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah, through his firm's greenhouses at Joliet, last week. Mr. Miller was so pleased with the carnation company's new scarlet seedling carnation, The Herald, that he placed his order for cuttings immediately.

Bassett & Washburn are showing a large supply of fancy lilies with stems fully four feet long. They grow about 25,000 each year and always manage to have a good crop for Easter. The American Beauty roses at their greenhouses are now commencing to set buds.

Buchbinder Bros., 518 Milwaukee avenue, are now mailing their new illustrated catalog, "Refrigerators for Florists," to the trade. It shows many styles of their new makes and contains valuable information that every florist should have.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a fine grade of Killarney roses and sweet peas in addition to the regular line of seasonable cut flowers and greens. J. F. Kidwell says that the demand for carnations at this house on January 25, was very brisk.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are featuring a fancy grade of sweet peas and are strong on bulbous flowers of all kinds. Mr. Vaughan says that the shipping trade has been rather quiet this week but he expects an improvement soon.

Erne & Klingel report business as good and will start February with a green ticket, using this color exclusively in the future. A fine grade of roses and tulips are but a few of their many offerings in cut flowers.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is strong on bulbous stock of all kinds, but is featuring a fine grade of tulips. Freesia of good quality is obtainable in quantity at this store.

Peter Reinberg has been cutting American Beauty roses in quantity all week, but Tim Matchen disposes of the stock at the store quickly at good prices.

The Briggs Floral Co., West Madison street, is doing a good transient business and the proprietor is well pleased with his new location.

M. C. Gunterberg is supplying her customers with her usual good line of violets and freesias.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Beginning next Saturday, February 1st, the following growers will sell their own stock in the quarters now occupied by Henry Wittbold, 56 Randolph Street, Second Floor:

Frank Beu      H. C. Blewitt
Hunt Bros.      Sol. Garland      A. E. Hunt & Co.

These growers have a large variety of stock which will make this one of the best sales quarters in the Great Central Cut Flower Market—a store, where fresh stock will be obtainable at all times.

H. WITTBOLD will continue in the wholesale commission business and calls attention to the fact that his store is headquarters for Wild Smilax and Choice Mexican Ivy.

Zech & Mann are receiving their share of Killarney roses during the shortage, which enables them to take care of their regular customers in fine shape. This is the firm's eighth year in the wholesale commission business and the proprietors have every reason to feel proud of the splendid showing that they have made.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is having a big demand for baskets and is well supplied with stock to supply their Easter trade. This firm's business has increased rapidly until it now extends from coast to coast.

It is interesting to note that Robt. D. Elder, attorney in the famous Wilson avenue bank case, is the third stockholder and director of Percy Jones, Inc.

J. C. Vaughan, chairman of the Horticultural Society poster committee, has secured a wonderfully beautiful production for the spring show, April 1-5.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union restaurant, next Thursday, February 6.

Joseph Ziska has recovered sufficiently from his recent illness to attend to his duties at the store.

Schiller the Florist has leased the Koropp store and property at 4509 Evanston avenue.

Visitors: E. E. Stewart, River Junction, Mich.; Geo. E. Valke, Minot, N. D.; A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.

MARKET VERY UNCERTAIN.

The uncertain weather makes one imagine a glut of carnations is on the way and next day stock turns scarce with bad weather. It is the most uncertain market this year we have ever seen. Roses are scarce, though, every day, and American Beauties are not to be seen.

NOTES.

Several weeks ago the McCallum Co. started to handle gardenias, which were more or less of an experiment on this market, but they state that they are well pleased with the result.

T. Malbranc, of Johnstown, called on the trade this week. Mr. Malbranc is at present moving his range of glass, the present site being too valuable as building lots.

M. C. King, of Washington, Pa., has sold his store at that place to B. W. Spragg, of Waynesburg, Pa.

A beautiful consignment of Milady roses, intended to be shown at the annual meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association, shipped by W. R. Milady created quite a sensation among florists and also commanded an unusual amount of attention from the public. Those who ought to know pronounce the rose a valuable acquisition.

ROSES VERY SCARCE.

The weather is warm and spring-like and the market is not so crowded as formerly. Graduating exercises and social events before Lent cause somewhat of a demand. Roses have been decidedly scarce. Carnations are plentiful enough to go around, with a surplus of poor stock. Violets are selling well, and the demand is increasing. Good sweet peas are selling. Good American Beauties and lilies are in demand. There is a steady call for plumosus, sprengerl and smilax.

NOTES.

The Retail association met last Monday and a committee was formed to meet the Florists' Club in regard to holding a flower show this fall. The committee is composed of Jules Bourdet, Chas. Young and Alex. P. Geranias.

Dominic Bova and his brother are doing a nice cut flower trade at Union market. These boys are well liked by all the wholesalers, as they are very consistent buyers. They conduct business under the name of the Red Bud Floral Co.

Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has had some nice stock in violets, sweet peas and carnations. They were very shy on good American Beauties and other roses, notwithstanding their good supply.

The W. C. Smith Floral Co.'s supply of violets and sweet peas, though very large, seems to be very easily taken care of by their staff of good salesmen.

H. G. Berning, with a large stock of everything, was completely cleaned out Sunday. Mrs. H. G. Berning, we regret to announce, is seriously ill.

Foster, the Florist, is doing a rushing trade, according to late reports. His electric American Beauty sign can be seen for blocks.

Geo. H. Angermueller had a good stock all week. He was short on violets and sweet peas. Fred Alves, head salesman, is sick.

C. A. Kuehn had an immense stock of very fine grade flowers which were cleaned out at good prices.

Grimm & Gorly will move about March 1, a few doors west of their present location.

Mrs. Matilda Waldmann is doing a good trade. She is a very large buyer in this market.

Julius Dilloff, with Schloss Brothers, New York, was with us the past week.

George Dimond, from New York, has opened up a store on Sixth street.

BETTER TONE IN TRADE.

The market shows a very much better tone than it did a week ago. An active demand for most lines causes good clearances. It is now not an unusual thing when calling up the wholesale houses late in the afternoon to hear the words nothing but Paper Whites until morning or in other places nothing till evening. The demand while larger than a week ago is not so much larger as to be a real brisk demand. The supply has shortened somewhat and is now more equal to the demand than it was for a fortnight. The rose supply has shortened very considerably and as a result these flowers are cleaning up at sight. Even white is taken up regularly. More Pink Killarney might at the time of this writing be used. The same is true of red and American Beauties. Carnations with the exception of whites are again selling nicely. Enchantress especially is cleaning up well. With a few exceptions the local retailers are not making any strenuous efforts to create a large demand for colored carnations for McKinley day. Most of them seem content to allow the day to follow the even tenor of its way. Both giganteum and callas are proving very good property. Sweet peas are selling very well and more might easily be used if the present demand keeps up. On the day of this writing one house reported that they might easily have sold ten thousand more had they been forthcoming. Violets, valley, orchids and gardenias are finding a fair market. Tulips and jonquils have been finding a demand. Narcissi seem to be about the last things the buyers notice. They are in an oversupply. Freesia sell well.

NOTES.

Miss Margaret Weiland of Evanston, Ill., who has been visiting P. J. Olinger and wife for the past fortnight has returned to her home. Mrs. Olinger is a sister of Miss Weiland.

C. J. Jones at the Walnut Hill's Floral Bazaar had a large decoration at the country club one day last week.

E. G. Gillett has been keeping his wire working steadily here of late to fill orders.

C. E. Critchell is receiving some fine gardenias each day.

SHORTAGE OF ROSES.

The market condition remains practically unchanged from last week with a shortage in roses. All rose growers seem to be off crop and it is impossible to fill orders. Carnations are coming in more plentifully and they are in sufficient quantities to supply the demand. There are plenty of sweet peas, violets and lily of the valley to fill all orders. Stevia is being replaced by freesia and Star of Bethlehem, which are arriving in fair quantities. There are enough Harrissii to supply the demand but a scarcity of callas. Bulbous stock is arriving in sufficient quantities to supply the trade, and there are enough greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports business most satisfactory. This firm is receiving a fine cut of carnations from their greenhouses; also a good cut of daffodils, narcissi and sweet peas.

Gust Rusch & Co. report business satisfactory, but a scarcity in roses. Ella Voelzke is again on duty at this place after a two weeks' illness.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is receiving some fine carnations. A shortage of roses at their greenhouses is reported here.

The Currie Bros. Co. is busy in the seed department, getting ready for the spring trade. Business is reported good.

Fred C. Schmeling is seriously ill at his home on the Blue Mound road, and his condition remains unchanged.

George E. Valker, Minot, N. D., called on friends while en route to Chicago on business.

SCARCITY AT CLOSE.

A rather quiet week closed with a scarcity of flowers. All the crops appear to be off. Roses especially are short. American Beauties and Richmond are very scarce. For some time past leading members of the trade have questioned the policy of growers of these roses, bringing them in for the holidays at the expense of the season before and the month of January, when there is always a good demand for the choice stock. Orders for these roses the past week were only filled with the greatest difficulty. Carnations are about equal to the demand. The quality is fine. Cattleyas and gardenias are much in evidence and prices favor the buyer. The calandula is seen in very good form, its bright orange flowers being very conspicuous in some of the window displays. From now on forced shrubbery will be a factor. Forsythia is freely offered. In fact, branches of this shrub have been gathered out of doors that showed flowers well developed owing to the remarkable weather. Such a mild winter has never been experienced before here. At least so says the oldest inhabitant. Lilac is quite plentiful. All the growers seem to be in with their crops. Sweet pea growers say that the vines are loaded with buds and good crops may be expected soon. Quite a few of the gentlemen who make a specialty of these flowers should come to town occasionally and get instructions about the condition their stock should be in before it is cut. In many cases it is sent in too green, lacking size, color and fragrance. It seems a pity to devote the time and money necessary to get so far in the race and then fall down almost at the tape.

NOTES.

—Franklin's venture, the new 600-foot rose house is proving very satisfactory. The output has been heavy and of the best, the stock grading high and bringing prices that were quite satisfactory. Mr. Franklin was entirely without experience in the business, but had the courage to invest nearly $50,000 in the undertaking, and is particularly well pleased with the result.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have been very busy the past week with social affairs at the Bellevue-Stratford. New additions to this magnificent hotel the past season provide exceptional rooms for public and private functions. The Habermehl firm's work is carried out for the most part by Wm. Graham, who is a past master in handling flowers.

We are glad to see that our old fellow townsman, Walter W. Coles, has been honored by the trade in his adopted state with the presidency of their society. When in Philadelphia Mr. Coles was always an active member of the Florists' Club and served on many important committees.

The Joseph Heacock Co. has just added another carload of cows to the dairy at the farm at Rodefes. All the stock has been pronounced free from disease germs. Daily shipments of milk are now one of the features of the business.

The M. Rice Co. is pushing its Valentine novelties. Novel weaves and fancy color effects make these heart-shaped baskets and hampers very attractive. Gilt arrows are also an offering that should find a ready sale.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., will address the club at its next meeting. Mr. Pierson is one of the successful men of the business, and the members of the club have a great treat in store for them.

Carnations are the feature at the Leo Niessen establishment, some splendid stock being offered. Liliun roseum is seen in good condition and finds a ready sale.

Edw. Reid's Ranstead street market is showing something fine in cattlesyas. Special carnations are also seen in quantity.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES SCARCE.

The business of the past week was as good as could be expected when all conditions are considered. American Beauties were scarce and the price for specials fluctuated between 75 cents and $1.00 each. On Saturday, January 25, some inferior specials sold for 75 cents, but the best stock wholesaled for $1.00 each. In tea roses, good Killarneys sold well. The Killarney Queens and Red Killarneys are new factors in this market and clean up well at good prices. There is a good demand for Sunburst and Lady Hillingdon—both yellow roses—and there is a wide difference of opinion as to their respective merits. In some quarters, Sunburst is all the rage. There are conservative critics who say that, while Sunburst is a fine rose its keeping qualities are not equal to those of Lady Hillingdon. To be more explicit, while the color of Lady Hillingdon improves after cutting, the color of Sunburst deteriorates. There are a few Brides and Bridesmaids on the market here, but there is little demand for them. Useful as they have been in the past, it seems a certainty that their popularity is in total eclipse. Of the new productions such as Mrs. Chas. Russell, Milady and others, there is not enough of them on the market to enable us to arrive at a correct estimate concerning their possible popularity. It might seem, to some people, a strange statement to say there is a surplus of orchids. Nevertheless that seems to be a fact. The orchids have put violets in the discard. Cattleyas are very plentiful and inferior stocks sell at very low prices. Oncidiums are also surprisingly plentiful. They are admirably useful for window decorations in the retail stores and are much used for that purpose. Our old friend, the carnation, is battling against fearful odds, the same being 50 cents a hundred for a clean up and $2.00 to $3.00 a hundred for the best stock, and they go slow at that. Sweet peas, which sold well earlier in the season, seem to be very slow just now, this doubtless being due to the great influx of tulips, yellow narcissi, freesias and other spring stocks. In the prices of gardenias, there is a wide variance. There are gardenias on the market with 30-inch stems, beautiful glossy green foliage, and large well formed flowers, that wholesale for $4.00 a dozen; there are many others that sell for any old price. While there are now many tulips on the market, but little strictly fine stock has yet been seen. There is also an abundant supply of paper white and yellow narcissi and freesias, all of which keep moving. In lilies, excellent stock of Lilium giganteum and L. rubrum is seen, the latter being well adapted and much used for window decorations.

Monday, January 27—The day was ushered in with pouring rain, consequently business is very slow. As a rule, the retailers are compelled to do some buying on Monday, but with unfavorable conditions they buy as little as possible. There is plenty of stock, considering the volume of trade, and if there is any change in prices they will go lower before the close of business.

NOTES.

C. G. Myer, Fifty-eighth street and Madison avenue, and the Plaza hotel, has recently arranged a number of fine and expensive decorations at the latter place. For a reception given by Thomas Diamond he used 2,000 lilies, 2,000 white roses, 5,000 lilies of the valley and over 40 cases of southern smilax. Another of his recent features at this hotel was the Oppenheim reception for which he had carte blanche. The arrangements were very beautiful. Mr. Myer is fortunate in having an able force of assistants. He has recently purchased another fine automobile for delivery.

Joseph Millang, general manager of the New York Cut Flower Co., sailed for Europe, January 26, on the White Star liner Majestic, for a month of rest and recuperation. It is said by his friends that during the sixteen years of his connection with the New York Cut Flower Co., he has never taken a vacation and that the constant strain and close application is affecting his health. Genial and popular, the good wishes of a host of friends will follow him.

Haupt Brothers, 684 Madison avenue, arranged a fine wedding decoration at Grace church on January 25, in which American Beauty roses and much other fine stock was used. At their store we recently noted very handsome baskets, made up with yellow roses, sweet peas and other suitable stock. These small baskets were suspended in their show windows from garlands of smilax, and the effect was good.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., who has just returned from an extended trip to Panama and West Indian ports, has recently been in this city calling on business associates and friends. He was struck with the magnitude of the work of constructing the canal and is enthusiastic over its possibilities, when opened. His trip was an enjoyable one and he returned with renewed vigor to push rose growing.

Horace E. Froment recently received an interesting letter from James Maloney, his former bookkeeper, who is now a resident of San Francisco, Calif. In the letter Mr. Maloney speaks of the great changes in that city since the fire and earthquake. He also alludes to the great damage done to fruit trees this winter in Southern California by cold weather.

Inquiring recently about a pink azalea of pyramidal form, at the store of George M. Stumpp, we learned it had been named Stumppii, as a compliment to Mr. Stumpp, on one of his recent visits to Belgium, and is shipped exclusively to him, in this city. It makes a fine plant and grows to a good pyramidal form without training or pruning.

Thomas Young, Jr., with a retail store on Fifth avenue, and greenhouses at Bound Brook, N. J., has certainly the last word in gardenia growing. The stock recently seen at his store was magnificent, some of the stems rising above 30 inches, with bloom and foliage to match.

John S. Nicholas, of Madison avenue, who has secured the concession for flowers and fruit in the new Grand Central station, expects to take possession about March 15. His store will occupy 55 or 60 square feet of space, and will doubtless be a paying proposition.

Mrs. Mary Kimball died at her home, 215 Audubon avenue, January 24. She was the wife of Willard Kimball, a well-known and respected employe of Chas. Thorley. She is survived by her husband, two sons and two daughters.

At Thorley's House of Flowers we recently noted a very fine window decoration of cattleya orchids, Lilium rubrum, lilac and other suitable blooms, the whole having an artistic background of fine foliage plants.

On January 22 there was an accession to the A. T. Bunyard force, not necessarily a florist, though he may become one later. Mother and child are doing well. There are now three lusty boys in the Bunyard family.

Miss M. Roessler is now bookkeeper at J. K. Allen's wholesale store, she having succeeded Miss Mona Smedley, who was recently married.

Ralph Armstrong, Madison avenue and Forty-seventh street, has recently arranged a number of fine decorations for social events for Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, the well-known society leader.

Although there has been a change in name, the business of A. J. Guttman continues prosperous under his management.

At the store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. good stock of Killarney Queen is frequently noted. A. F. F.

Horticultural Society of New York.

This society held an exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History, by permission of the trustees, on January 25. There were quite a number of exhibits of select stock. Notable were the carnations, Matchless, by the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.; the carnations, Northport, by James D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y.; orchids by Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., and orchids by Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J. The meeting of the society was held in the east assembly room, where also, Prof. George T. Powell delivered a most interesting lecture on "The Educational and Financial Importance of Horticulture in the Community." Representing the exhibition committee were: F. R. Pierson, secretary; Geo. V. Nack and Joseph A. Manda.

The awards were as follows:

A vase of pink carnations, Northport—James D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y., silver medal.

Vase of white carnations, Matchless—Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., silver medal.

Twelve carnations, Winsor shade; variety, Dorothy Gordon—Henry Siegel, Mamaroneck, N. Y. (Thos. Atchison, gardner), first prize.

Carnation, Erskine Park—Mrs. Westinghouse, Lee, Mass., second prize.

Twelve Enchantress carnations—Jas. A. MacDonald, Flushing, N. Y. (R. Hughes, gardner), first prize.

Collection of orchid plants—Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., first prize.

Collection of orchids, cut flowers of cattleyas—Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., first prize.

Hybrid orchid plant—Clement Moore, first prize.

Amaryliss—James MacDonald, special prize.

Freesia hybrids—Wm. Ziegler, Norton, Conn., special prize. This was a very interesting collection, showing variety in color, a very desirable feature in freesias.

Twelve seedling crimson carnations—James A. MacDonald, first prize.

New York State Floral Clubs.

The programme of the sixth annual Farmers' Week, to be held at the New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., February 10-15, 1913, has been issued and promises an unusually interesting and instructive meeting. The New York State Federation of Floral Clubs will meet Wednesday, February 12, in connection with the Farmers' Week. Home Gardening day will be Friday, February 14.

An exhibition will be held in connection with the meeting of the florists' clubs, and it is desired that all the growers of new varieties of flowers will send in exhibits. This is expected to prove one of the largest of the mid-winter exhibitions. The meeting of the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association will be another interesting feature of the week. There will be a horticultural banquet Wednesday evening and an address by Prof. L. A. Bailey, Monday evening.

The programme on Wednesday will include the following lectures: "Greenhouse Construction," Prof. A. C. Beal; "The Rose and Its Culture," Dr. E.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Twenty-seven members of the Lancaster County Florists' Club left Lancaster, Pa., to visit Strasburg, the first stop being made at Amos Rohrer's place, where we found the carnations in extra fine form, clean, vigorous and well set with buds and flowers. The varieties grown are Mrs. C. W. Ward, White Wonder, White Perfection, Pink Delight, Enchantress and a very fine house of Mrs. T. W. Lawson, as highly colored flowers as the writer ever saw.

From there we went to the greenhouses of Chas. B. Herr, the cleanest and best kept greenhouses in the state devoted to carnations, the varieties being Pink Delight, Enchantress White Wonder, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Gloriosa and as fine a lot of Beacon as one would want to see. He also had a few of Henry Rohrer's red seedling on trial and they certainly outclass anything in this line grown today in this section.

A call was also made on Enos Kohr of North Lancaster, where the third fine lot of stock was seen, his Mrs. C. W. Ward being the best thing on the place, which is saying a good deal; for all of his stock is good. The stock in the wooden benches is slightly better than that in those of cement, of which he has several houses. At this place a part of a bunch of Rosette made a very good showing.

A meeting of the club was held at 7:30 p. m. and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Albert M. Herr, president; Elmer Weaver, vice-president; Lemon Landis, secretary; Harry K. Rohrer, treasurer.

E. P. Hostetter of Manheim made a display of about twelve vases of very fine sweet peas with foot long stems. After an informal discussion on the Christmas trade the president appointed M. J. Brinton, H. K. Rohrer and Frank Kohr, a committee to arrange a programme for the remaining winter meetings. This committee reported that Thursday, February 20 would be carnation night, with a paper by Elmer Weaver on the novelties of last season's introduction.

As there are 55 growers in this section and 51 of them belong to this club and the average attendance is about 40, 45 of whom are growing carnations in a wholesale way, it stands to reason that a bunch of flowers from the introducers of this season's novelties will find an appreciative audience. Intending exhibitors should send their exhibits to H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa., to reach him by or on February 20.

After the meeting the first annual dinner of the club was held at the hotel Weatland. ALBERT M. HERR.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The seventh annual dinner of this society was held at Glen Cove, L. I., on the evening of January 23, and was one of the largest gatherings ever held under the auspices of this society, eighty-five members and guests being present. President Brown on behalf of the society presented the retiring president, J. F. Johnston, with a pearl scarf pin as a token of esteem for the valuable service rendered the society by him during his term as president. Arthur Herrington of Madison, N. J., was introduced as toastmaster and read a letter from M. C. Ebel, secretary of the National Association of Gardeners, offering his regrets at not being able to attend and informing the members of the bowling tournament to be held the week of the International Flower Show in New York. C. H. Siebrecht responded for the New York Florist Club and spoke on the coming big show in New York and asked every member to do his share in making this exhibition a big success. Among others who entertained the guests with addresses and songs were J. T. Ingrahm, E. Ortiz, Rev. J. Gammock, J. C. Davis, Wm. Kinnear, and F. Bownes. Out-of-town guests who responded were, Messrs. Spurling, McTaggard, Bunyard, Manor and Goodsul. The dinner was served in excellent manner and was undoubtedly the best ever.

ROSE MARKET FIRM.

The weather is still the all-absorbing topic. Some Scotchmen were predicting the usual blizzard Burns' birthday, but the day passed with clear skies and spring-like air. Ploughing the fields is no unusual sight. Landscape men are planting shrubs and trees. The market in roses is yet firm. There is not an oversupply. Crops with many of the growers is off, short stock being particularly scarce. Carnations are about the same, and there are some very fine blooms of this flower on the market. Tulips are in. Trade as a whole is satisfactory, and the shipping trade—the backbone of it all—is good. This is a business which was created by the wholesalers, and many flowers in glut times find an avenue but for which they would be thrown on the dump.

NOTES.

A fire was discovered Friday at 3 a. m. on "Brimstone Corner," at the Co-Operative Market's headquarters. The fire is supposed to have started in the toilet room, and had gained considerable headway when discovered. Saturday morning the glaziers were finishing putting in the windows. The ceiling was badly burned, the stalls were scorched and some of the growers' boxes burned up. A cigar or cigarette, we hear, thrown carelessly, was the cause.

Glass at present is somewhat higher than last year, and growers are shy in

WHY FAILURES RESULT

The following is an abstract of a communication received:

*"I would like you to advise me how much Aphine to use. . . The reason I make this inquiry of you direct is, I used Aphine in in my house (for green aphid) in a mixture of one teaspoonful* to each quart of water without success. . . This is the way Aphine was used by party giving me information. . ."*

(*Directions:—six teaspoonfuls)

Had the inquirer followed directions, instead of accepting advice of the friend, his results would have been different.

In this instance Aphine was not condemned, but information sought of the manufacturer and advice given in reply,—carefully follow directions—then your results will be satisfactory.

How many, failing to get satisfactory results from a product after using according to some one's suggestions and not following directions, have condemned that product; whereas, investigation may have turned failure into success for you?

BUSINESS BRISK.

Business has been pretty brisk since the holidays, and especially the demand for good quality of flowers. The demand for roses is very good and the long-stemmed perfect buds find ready sale. The social season will soon close now, and the functions demanding many flowers will be over until Easter. The outlook, though, for the grower is that there will be enough good stock on the market for that season.

NOTES.

The Florists' Exchange had their regular business meeting January 13 at the Exchange hall. The following directors and officers were elected to serve the present year: Isaac H. Moss, president; Philip B. Welsh, secretary; William A. Kehursh, treasurer; Martin Lohr; John Rider; William Lerch; Fred Bauer. A marked increase in business over last year was noted. This is the only cut flower commission house in the city and the consignments have been larger from the growers and of better quality than in past years. Flowers of all kinds have run better, consequently the orders coming into the exchange have been filled with better satisfaction. It has been found necessary to increase the size of the offices, and this work is going on at present.

The weather of the past two weeks has been so spring-like in its variety that some of the flowering shrubbery has blossomed out. Some apprehension has been felt about the fruit and flowers budding too early this year.

Manager Perry, of the Florists' Exchange, has recovered from an attack of illness.

Lehr Bros. will erect a larger house for American Beauties in the spring, 60x125 feet. They have quite a large range of glass and their houses are up to date in every respect. B.

Cleveland.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

The weather in and around Cleveland is very poor for the florist. It's either rain or slush, and transient business is very light. Lent beginning February 4 will most likely put another crimp in business, but we live in hopes of having a good Easter trade. Stock just now is in good supply. There are plenty of tulips, narcissi, etc., although most of it is short stemmed stock. Daffodils are a little scarce. Carnations are about equal to the demand, but a vast number of them are "splits." Pink and White Killarney are quite plentiful. Sweet peas are still short of the demand. Valley is plentiful. Orchids are selling better. Lilies are good stock. Local wholesale houses are showing a fine line of novelties for Washington's birthday and St. Patrick's day.

NOTES.

Jack Eckert, road salesman for the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, had to cut his trip through southeastern Ohio and Pennsylvania short this week on account of the floods, but made several long distance telephone calls, got the business and saved the day.

The Cleveland Florists' Club's novelty night of this year will be Monday evening, February 10. All the new roses and other flowers are expected, and any novelty will be given space.

I. Rosnosky, representing the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is a visitor this week.

Purple Ruscus for the Easter trade is meeting with a good demand. C. F. B.

Rochester, N. Y.

MARKET CONDITIONS GOOD.

The market for the last week has been very good; stock is arriving in pretty good condition, and retailers are disposing of it very nicely. Roses are in good shape and sell well, especially Sunbursts and Killarneys. Violets are plentiful.

NOTES.

Geo. B. Hart received a fine shipment of cyclamens during the week.

Edw. Brockmann, of Irondequoit, has three houses of well grown carnation plants and a large house completely filled with bedding plants. In the near future he expects to make extensive improvements at his plant.

Montgomery Cushman & Co., of this city, have been awarded a contract for $10,000 worth of seeds for the United States Department of Agriculture. The seeds are to be grown this year and supplied to the department after January 1, 1914.

A massive floral boat was supplied by H. E. Wilson to one of his customers who gave a going-away party to friends. The design measured four feet in length. Several hundred carnations and violets were used.

Hiram E. Wilson did the decorations at the Noyes-Williams wedding on January 22. Pink Killarney roses and asparagus plumosus were used exclusively.

Visitors this week included Morris Cohen, of Wertheimer Brothers, New York, and Julius Berg, of Lion & Co., also of New York.

(Copyrighted and Title Trade-Mark Registered.)

Directory Revision

We are revising our Trade Directory of the Florists, Nurserymen, Seedsmen, etc., of the United States and Canada, and as there have been many changes in firm names and considerable extension of the area under glass, nursery grounds, etc., you would greatly oblige by supplying the following information with reference to your business:

- In all cases state (1) Name of firm or proprietor, with the officers of corporations; (2) Name of manager; (3) Address, giving street and number or rural route; (4) City or town; (5) State; (6) When business was established; and (7) Whom present owner succeeded.

If Florists, state whether (1) Grower; (2) Retail, having store only, (3) Wholesale; or (4) Commission. If a grower state acreage of ground operated and give number of square feet of glass.

To ascertain the number of feet under glass in a given house, 12x145 feet multiply the length (145 feet) by the width (12 feet) and you have in that house 1,740 feet under glass, thus, 145 x 12 = 1,740

If Nurserymen, state whether (1) Wholesale; (2) Retail; (3) Acreage of ground operated, and area under glass as in the case of florists above.

If Seedsmen, state whether (1) Dealer; (2) Grower; (3) What your specialties are; (4) If a grower, state acreage operated and area under glass, as in the case of florists above.

Inclose your printed letterhead or business card with above details of the business.

Please send the names and addresses of new firms in your vicinity.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President;
Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First
Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford,
Conn., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

VISITED CHICAGO: Chas. Loechner, of Loechner & Co., New York.

CLEVELAND, O.—It is reported that Ohio gladiolus growers will hold a meeting at the American house, February 1.

Congressional Seed Bids.

After the bids for supplying seeds for congressional distribution were opened at Washington, D. C., January 7, they were referred to the Bureau of Plant Industry for consideration and recommendation by a sub-committee which acts in an advisory capacity to the department board of awards and supervises the tabulation of the bids by varieties, bidders and quotations on each variety. In making recommendations for the award of contracts the committee is guided by the following considerations:

(1) Varieties which are not deemed suitable for distribution are ignored regardless of low price. (2) Surplus seeds are secured in all cases where prices are not excessive, usually all offered being taken. (3) Balance of the seed required to fill the distribution is purchased on growing contract basis, sometimes slightly more than the requirements, to provide for probable crop shortages. (4) Preference is always given to American-grown seed and to American bidders unless the difference in price is excessive. (5)
Surplus orders are divided between bidders at the same price. (6) Contract orders are divided between growers at approximately the same price in order to have the seed grown in different localities and provide against crop failure in one locality. (7) Where bids are the same, preference is given to the bidder who has made the most satisfactory deliveries in the past.

Approximately 75 per cent of the seed required for congressional distribution is purchased from surplus stocks; (1) in order to have seed in the warehouse to keep the packing force and equipment employed in the autumn before new crop seed can be harvested, cured and delivered; (2) to avoid interruption and delay in handling the distribution on account of the partial crop failure and shortage on contracts; (3) to relieve the seed trade of large surplus stocks due to over-production. As an illustration of the manner in which the purchase of surplus seed by the government directly benefits the seed trade, the item of onion seed may be mentioned. Large quantities were offered at comparatively low prices, showing that there is more surplus onion seed than the trade can absorb. If carried over by the seedman it would have to be at a loss and if thrown on the market it would force prices down to a very low point throughout the country. By purchasing heavily for the congressional distribution a large portion of this surplus will be withdrawn from the trade and prices on the remaining stocks can be maintained at normal.

The government wishes to emphasize this point because it says it has, so far as lies within its power, endeavored to conduct the congressional distribution and the purchase of seed for that purpose in such a manner as will result in the least disturbance to normal conditions as determined by supply and demand. It has always seemed clear to the officials in charge of the distribution that if the seed trade would cooperate with the department in the matter of submitting quotations on surplus stocks at prices not greatly in excess of growing contract prices, the Department could often relieve a serious situation in the seed trade.

Where sufficient seed to meet the requirements of the distribution is not purchased from surplus stocks, contracts are made for growing new crop seed, thereby enlarging the area planted and increasing the amount of surplus stocks in case of overproduction.

Another feature of the distribution which can be made of benefit to the seed trade is the opening of the seed bids in the presence of competing bidders or their representatives. This affords an excellent opportunity for seedsmen to estimate the quantity of surplus stocks on the market and the range of prices for growing contracts.
A number of seedsmen are shrewd enough to see this point and are taking advantage of the opportunity each year. The department does not feel justified in publishing the quantities or prices of seed purchased from individual seedsmen but had no hesitation in giving the names of successful bidders:

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch 9-inch and 12 inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, January 27.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 45 cents per pound; lettuce, 20 cents to 22½ cents, small cases; radishes, 45 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 35 cents to 50 cents per bunch; tomatoes, 18 cents to 20 cents per pound.

New York, January 25.—Cucumbers, $1 to $2 per doz., and $3 to $6 per box; mushrooms, 60 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, $2.50 to $3.50 per 100 bunches; mint, 75 cents to $1 per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 40 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 20 cents to 30 cents per dozen.

Prince Edward Island Vegetables.

The potato crop, [of Prince Edward Island] which for several years has been between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 bushels, in 1911 was estimated at only 4,500,000 bushels. This was a partial recovery, however, from the year 1910, when the total was only 3,000,000 bushels. Furthermore, the 1910 price of 40 cents, double that prevailing previously, continued into 1911, so that the crop was computed to be worth $1,800,000. Had there been adequate moisture the yield would have been up to the record. The potato shortage in the upper Provinces enabled the island potatoes to sell for high prices in Ontario and Quebec, an almost unprecedented situation.

The good crop in the United States, on the other hand, threw Maine potatoes into New Brunswick; and American tubers were sold at Picton, just across the straits from Charlottetown. The average export of potatoes from the island has been estimated at 1,250,000 bushels by the authorities of the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

The root crop, aside from potatoes, was stated as 5,000,000 bushels in 1911, valued at $750,000. Turnips had a rather poor year; but mangels and carrots did moderately well, the latter not suffering greatly from the drought. Peas and beans yielded well, together totaling 16,500 bushels, worth approximately $25,500. Many peas are sown with oats and cut green as forage. Cabbages had a bad season.

Minneapolis, Minn.

STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' association was held Tuesday evening, January 21, at Holm & Olson's store, St. Paul. Theodore Wirth, vice-president of the S. A. F., was very active in arousing interest in the national society. Several life memberships were assured. The parcel post was the subject of discussion and proved very interesting. The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening, February 18, at R. A. Latham's conservatory, 83 South Tenth street, Minneapolis, at which meeting Stephen A. Jamieson, of the Geo. M. Garland Co., will deliver an illustrated talk on greenhouse building.

NOTES.

The second annual ball of the Minneapolis Florists' Club was given Tuesday evening, January 14, at the Masonic temple, and was a great success. Ninety-five couples were in the grand march, which was led by President and Mrs. Wm. Desmond. Dainty refreshments were served. The committee in charge deserve great credit for the excellent way in which the affair was handled.

The next regular meeting of the Minneapolis club will be held Tuesday evening, February 4, at Rice Bros.' store. S. A. Jamieson, of the Geo. M. Garland Co., has prepared an illustrated talk on greenhouse building which will be presented.

John Munson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., figures that he will have 20,000 lilies ready for shipment ten days before Easter.

Wm. Desmond, of the L. S. Donaldson Co., spent several days of last week in Chicago on business.

Rice Bros. say that their January business exceeds any previous January in their history.

A. Currie, of Milwaukee, Wis., called on the Twin City trade during the past few days. S. A. J.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Nurserymen are beginning to inquire regarding the convention of this association to be held in Portland, Oregon, June 18-20, 1913. The selection of the date was left to the executive committee by the last convention, and the National Nurseryman says they have "exercised good judgment in deciding upon these dates, as that will be immediately following the great rose festival" to be held in Portland. Then, too, there will be a large gathering of Pacific Coast nurserymen, and a splendid opportunity will be afforded for a genuine "getting together" occasion.

J. B. Pilkington, the generalissimo of arrangements and the writer have been in frequent communication for the past few weeks and matters are shaping nicely. In all probability the magnificent new Hotel Oregon will be decided on as headquarters. It possesses a palatial auditorium for meetings and ample space for exhibits, for which there will be no charge by the hotel management. Hotel rates will be reasonable, varying from $1.50 to $3, for one or two persons without bath; with bath, from $2 to $6; numerous elegant suites composed of private parlor, private dining-room and one, two or three sleeping chambers, with private bath, at rates furnished by the management on application.

The famous Oregon cherries will be ripe at the time of meeting and an ample supply of this luscious fruit will be at the disposal of members. Mr. Pilkington says, "there are two bites to an Oregon cherry." Members of the American Association should now anticipate this notable convention. There is every indication that the Pacific Coast nurserymen will be there in force, and it is up to the fraternity living east of the Rockies to assist in making the event one never to be forgotten.

The Trans-Continental Passenger Association has published its schedule of rates and will issue summer tourist tickets from Chicago to Portland, returning by same or any other direct route, for $75.00. The Trunk Line Passenger Association announces "special occasion fares" within its territory, and it will be possible to buy a ticket in New York city to Portland and return for $111.30. The rate from Rochester, N. Y., will be $96.30. I have asked the Trans-Continental Association to include our members in the special excursion class, and this request has been referred to interested lines for their decision, and if granted the rate will be $7.50 less from Chicago.

President Meehan has appointed Marsden G. Fox of Rochester, N. Y., to rally the eastern members on the subject of special cars, and Mr. Fox at once inaugurated a vigorous canvass, the results of which are quite gratifying. He hopes that members in the middle, southern and southwestern states will arrange to connect at Chicago so that all can cross the continent together.

Members will do well to send their membership fee early to the secretary, and those who use the badge book should endeavor to get their copy to that official as soon as convenient. I shall be pleased to answer any questions and give such information as I am possessed of if members will address me, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y. JOHN HALL, Sec'y.

KING GREENHOUSE EAVES

They solve the Eave problem. They make the least possible shade. And, as you can see, present no surface for icicles to form on. They have great strength with lightness. They are designed and made for the purpose and not adapted from stock structural shapes. We want to figure with you.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "S"

This Eave is intended for use on detached houses with either fixed glass or side sash. It is practically all exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse and so is ice clearing.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "L"

This Eave, although lighter than Style "S", is amply strong for all eave purposes. It obstructs little light and is ice clearing in the most severe weather. It is intended for use with fixed glass only.

The Frame of Our Iron Frame

YOU know that it takes much more strength to hold a weight out at arm's length, straight from your shoulder, than it does when held closer to your body.

How altogether reasonable it is to apply the same principles to framing a greenhouse!

Our method of iron framing is based on that same principle of placing the supporting members in such a way that the load is distributed and eased up, so that there are no excessive strains on the columns.

Trussing—unless it is the compression type—we protest against using.

Look at this 55-foot house above and compare its extreme simplicity of compression framing with other houses of similar widths; and you surely must be impressed with the advantages of such simplicity in construction.

In this week's Florists' Exchange we take two pages to show our New Cantilever Iron Frame that requires fewer rafters, fewer purlins, fewer columns, and still has the necessary strength.

Twenty-inch glass is used.

Be sure to look the Ad. up.

Better yet, let us come and talk it over with you.

Double-Glass Double Profits

The old single layer hot-bed sash are far better than none; but they must be covered with mats, boards or shutters every evening and uncovered every morning. They are wasteful.

The new SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH, with two layers of glass enclosing an air space, are COMPLETE IN THEM-SELVES. They eliminate all extra covers; they wipe out half the labor cost; they admit all the light by day to store warmth in the bed and then save the warmth at night.

They make plants earlier and stronger. They double final profits.

Every practical gardener or florist will see the value of this.

And it is good business for you to get our free catalog for full information. Write your address plainly

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Early Annuals.

During the warm days of June the carnations deteriorate very rapidly and there is often a great need for some flower to take their place, and an early bench of asters is a great boon at such a time, especially for those who have a good call for funeral work. Seed planted during February and grown in pots or flats until after Easter can be then transplanted to the benches in which the Easter crops are grown and they will be in bloom at the time when most desired. A good strain of early flowering varieties either Comet or Victoria should be selected and with good care a paying crop is assured. A sowing of candytuft by March 1 will also produce plants that can be benched after Easter in the same manner and a good cut for Memorial day be had. The strains of white giant candytuft now offered make splendid spikes for the filling in of sprays at that great flower day. There are many annuals that can be grown for early spring blooming that are greatly appreciated by the trade among which might be mentioned calendulas, nasturtiums, scabiosa, sweet sultans and bachelor's buttons.

Hydrangeas.

The greatest demand for hydrangeas is in May and June and to have them in the best condition at that time the plants should be started before March 1. While they may be started later and forced harder, yet the plants so grown are not as sturdy and do not give so good satisfaction after they are placed on the porches. Start the plants in a cool house and if the wood has become dry in their winter quarters, frequent syringing will assist in softening it. When they begin to grow do not crowd them. Crowding and too much heat are the principal causes of the long, ungainly plants so often seen. If they are grown in a cool house, with plenty of room, the plants will be sturdy and short-jointed, covered with beautiful foliage and shapely, and are a great ornament, which surely cannot be said of the tall plants with small foliage and bare stems toward the base. When the plants begin to grow rapidly they will require plenty of water and during the warm, sunny days of spring, when the houses are hot, all the ventilation possible, and at this time watch carefully for red spider, which gather in great numbers on the young growths and blooms and quickly spoil them. If they appear, syringe heavily until they are overcome. Keep the plants staked and tied as soon as required.

Azaleas.

The azaleas for spring flowering and Easter will soon need attention. If they have been in cold pits they should be brought into cool houses, and those that have been kept in cool houses will need spacing out and a careful going over. March and April being nearer their natural time of blooming than those brought into flower early in the winter, the plants will not have to be forced as hard and are much better brought along in a cooler temperature. The plants, however, that bloom later will require more attention, especially in regard to pinching out the soft growths that start around the cluster of buds. This should be done as early as possible and with great care, so as not to injure or break the buds. These soft growths grow very rapidly at this time and if they attain any length, quickly draw the nourishment from the stem and blast the buds, so it will require constant attention to keep them pinched off. They should be looked over at least once a week and all young shoots removed. Give the plants plenty of room so as to allow a good circulation of air, that the plants can dry off after syringing. These plants are often crowded together as closely as possible, but this invariably results in the loss of much foliage and the plant grows out of shape.

What to do with the plants that have flowered is often a question. Many growers assert that a better and earlier plant can be produced the second year than can be bought abroad and imported, but to do this the plants must be given good culture and not placed in some out-of-the-way corner where it suffers for lack of air, light and water. Whatever trimming into shape the plant requires should be done now, and the plant given an opportunity to start a new growth. As early as it is safe from all frosts the plants can be plunged outside in a frame and during the summer a mulch should be spread over the soil to prevent too much evaporation. Frequent syringings may be required during hot weather to keep down red spider, these plants being quickly infested with these insects in certain locations and they quickly ruin the foliage. Like all hard-wooded stock, be sure they do not get dry. They do not show it as quickly as the soft-wooded plants and often when it is seen it is too late to remedy the injury done.

Marguerites.

As the warm days of spring approach the marguerite plants will bloom profusely and those in pots will have, to a great extent, exhausted the plant food in the soil, so to keep up the size of the flower and length of stem watering with liquid manure will be necessary. Liquid cow manure can be safely used in frequent waterings with no danger of any injury if the plants are in a healthy condition. The flowers should be cut daily and placed in water; they will keep much longer than if allowed to remain on the plants where they quickly fade if not picked when the warm spring days come on. This should be prevented for it not only gives the plant an untidy appearance but takes the strength of the plant and the following flowers are often much shorter in stem. A few well bloomed plants are very decorative at Easter, especially in churches where they make a splendid showing. Propagation for next year's stock should now be carried on; the cuttings root easily and there are plenty to be obtained at this time. As soon as rooted they should be grown on in good soil, and to secure the best results another year given the best of culture.

Dahlias.

The forcing of early dahlias has been practiced successfully by growers the last few years, and roots started at this time will produce flowers for Decoration day and during June. A good deep bench, in a house not too warm should be selected, and while the plants are great feeders in the open ground, it is better not to have the soil too rich in the houses, for the plants grow very tall inside, and with a rich soil make a strong, rampant growth, which will not bloom as early. They can be fed when the buds begin to form by giving them a mulch of half-decayed manure, which will materially assist the flowering and also provide a covering that will prevent evaporation. They will require but little attention except that long, strong stakes will be necessary to keep the plants growing erect, to which they should be firmly tied, and then dis-budding to produce the better blooms. Any varieties that it is desired to increase the stock can be planted in the house and the young growths made into cuttings, which root easily at this time.

SOUTH AUBURN, NEB.—The greenhouse of C. G. Milam & Sons was badly damaged and the stock nearly all destroyed by fire Sunday, January 26. The furnace room and the supply house, with all the contents, were included in the loss. There was no insurance. The firm had enjoyed a splendid business.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Washington's Birthday Favors.

Washington's birthday, of course, brings out the Colonial ideas which have been very popular for some time in floral arrangements. If heirlooms or rare antiques are not available, such elegant reproductions are now made in the old styles that even the quite ordinary porcelain and pressed glassware of Colonial pattern are better suited for the occasion where appropriate and inexpensive favors are desired. Everything should be truly American.

Bonbon baskets made to imitate bark covered stumps should be used. Place in the center a few violets of the paler shade, encircle around this a row of lily of the valley and these in turn encircle with red carnations, making the red, white and blue national combination. Finish it with a red and white lace paper tissue as is used on bouquets, but of the smallest size. The ordinary paper plate doilies in lace effect, which are easily obtainable, can be used by cutting out the centers. Arrange this in a circle as an outer garnish and tie it with red, white and blue ribbon. A small ordinary handle basket, enameled a bright red, will help to carry out the red, white and blue effect by arranging white daisies in the basket, tying on one side of the handle a blue ribbon to which an artificial sprig of cherries can be attached.

Small shields can be obtained at the manufacturer of fancy paper novelties and these can be utilized in connection with baskets especially on the round handleless style. Use about three of these on a basket, depending, of course upon the size of basket and shield. Fill the basket with Prince de Bulgarie roses and use boxwood as a finish. Where the shields do not meet tuck in a spray of boxwood. Place in the center of the table a large bowl of Prince de Bulgarie roses arranged with boxwood. Use about three shields to hide the bowl. If the shields obtainable are not as large as necessary arrange the boxwood so that they can be made to appear as if in a framework of boxwood. Use a garland of boxwood for the base at the table, making a fringe of the roses around this garland to continue the color effect. Stretch from the favors to the centerpiece streamers of red, white and blue ribbon.

This same arrangement used with Shasta daisies and lily of the valley will make a pretty table setting. If candle sticks are to be used on the table attach shield to the shades and place around the base of each candle stick a garland made of Prince de Bulgarie roses and boxwood. The rustic baskets or birchbark canoes always lend beauty to an arrangement for this occasion. A large birchbark canoe should be used as a centerpiece, each end of the boat resting on a special boat rest which can be made of rustic basket material and covered partially with grey moss. Fill the canoe with red and white roses, using the Colonial effect in the arrangement. Place an American flag on each end and spread a handsome silk flag on the table underneath this centerpiece.

MARGUERITE NICHOLSON'S WHITE.

For favors use three canoe paddles tied together in such a way that they will allow a space for the inserting of a bunch of red rose buds. Tie with a red, white and blue ribbon. A little novelty can be made in this manner: Take a small round basket of any sort and moss it. Take toothpicks and paint them green. Place these in the center of the moss and on each tooth-

The Florist and His Market.

Paper read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club by Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., February 4.

In taking a subject for my talk to you this evening that is as broad as this, I have a reason for so doing and that reason I wish to express in just as plain English as the law allows. We are all in the same boat—retailnor our ultimate end. We must reach out and bring money into our business from outside, just as outside industries are dependent on us to support them. We have been considered a luxury in years past and we want to be considered a necessity, and when the flower business is once settled on that basis it will continue to grow in proportion to the population.

For some years past it has been growing out of proportion to the population and anticipated demand has caused a building boom that has added much to the glass area and very little to the organization of the flower industry. The public has caught some of the spirit and would catch more were we, as real business men, doing our part to teach them that our product has become to them a necessity rather than a luxury, and that as a necessity, at almost all times in the year flowers are within reach of the average pocket-book.

The statement that I have made and which will, in my opinion, bear repeating, although perhaps in different language, is that the selling end of the greenhouse game has not kept up with the building end, and this I firmly believe. Our energy has gone into production, leaving the product to take care of itself or to be taken care of by those who have a customer in sight, but no selling organization has been perfected that aids in moving the output at all times to the best advantage. We have a business no one can corner. Our goods are produced from the soil, our products are perishable. Our quality is a personal matter. Were all the glass built in the last ten years constructed by a flower trust it would be no small concern. Do you believe for one minute that such an organization would sit idly by and allow the product to sell itself? I doubt it. Now, I'm not here knocking the wholesaler, for he does his best to sell it to pick place a red preserved cherry—the large maraschino cherries—and as these also can be had in green, use a few green ones with the reds. Around these cherries circle the Paper White narcissi and finish with a few tiny twigs of maidenhair ferns and tie a blue satin ribbon around the body of the basket. Lily of the valley will also look well with the cherries, as will also white sweet peas.

McCormick Decorations at Chicago.

Henry Wittbold arranged the decorations for the H. F. McCormicks' Italian garden dance, which was given in the gold ballroom at the Congress hotel, Chicago, on Friday evening, January 31. It was a delightful surprise to the guests as far as the decorations were concerned, for they were very beautiful and the largest ever arranged in this city by an individual firm. Canvas painted to represent the sky hung from the top of the ballroom, and the walls from the floor to the gallery were massed with smilax and other greens, and the French windows of the room were banked with pink azaleas. Arbor vite trees with their tops reaching to the ceiling were grouped about the gallery and tall Italian vases were placed at intervals among the trees. Begonias, azaleas, cyclamen and Boston ferns in pots with no covering adorned the walls on all sides of the large ballroom and artificial roses covered the 20 pergolas that lined the slides. At one end of the room fountain pots on stone pedestals held large pots of azaleas and that the picture might not be spoiled, all the halls leading from the stairways and the elevators throughout the entire front of the ballroom suite were decorated similarly to the room itself.

er, wholesaler, large grower, small grower—and whoever is dependent upon the florist's business for a living. What I have to say tonight deals with not one market or another, as the term is commonly understood, but largely with the great market that is everywhere—"the people." We may raise what we will buy and sell among ourselves, but that is not our market advantage, and the retailer no doubt tries in his way to reach the people, but I am trying to impress on you the one fact that we are all in one boat and that boat is drifting for lack of some power that is not gasoline.

The retail florist without glass in any city is perhaps the most independent one of our fraternity. All he has to do is to stop buying and he is out of business. All his assets, usually the case when he fails, are an unexpired lease, some poor accounts and an ice-box. I wager that nine out of ten of these men are above realizing that they are with us in the boat, that our success is theirs, although we all know how much of their failure is ours. The retail florist so situated with relation to what he sells is not independent, for the source of supply rules, but he will continue to rule so long as the producers allow it and no longer. The retailer who realizes that he is in the boat and that the welfare of the one is the welfare of all, is usually the man with the busy store who is trying to help move stock and who by so doing has increased his business. These men are the salvation of the grower.

Then there is the retailer who grows his own product. I could almost defy you to name one who is not successful. I can name many that are and some of them are among our best known men in the profession, and why are they? Because they grow the goods and must sell it. There is business instinct there. They cannot sign over the ice-box and leave the janitor to wash their name from the window. The spirit of self-preservation keeps them at the task and I would be almost willing to state that they enjoy being business men in the modern sense of the word. You will find the advertisements of these men in the daily papers of their home towns and people with moderate means in their stores, buying flowers. Some of these men were growers who took up the retail end because of the failure of existing flower stores to move their output at paying prices to them as producers, and others are growers to maintain a supply they must have, but however they got into it doesn't alter the fact that they have invested capital and brains and are keeping both working to get to the one market we all want to reach—the people.

The small grower who places his product direct is fortunate. He is in a class by himself, and yet in this paper is considered one of the crowd in the boat, for his welfare is dependent on us all. Unless the retailers with whom he deals directly, are above par, he is getting below par for his stock. That is the way I've found it. When the market drops, they drop him, but they stick to him hard and fast when it goes up. This grower ends by becoming one of the class who ship their product to the wholesale market to share the honor of shipping to the big city with a lot of others, to get less than he got before for his product, and finally he stays out in the suburbs and advertises his carnations and roses "at the greenhouse." The next season he has a new show house in front and a delivery car, and so far as the market is concerned, he becomes a buyer rather than a shipper, advertising in the local papers having brought business to him and made him independent to a large extent.

The small florist out in the country is not so located that this is practicable. How can he better himself? By being a specialist. Grow the one crop that you can do well—maybe roses, maybe snapdragons—only grow it well. Keep the supply and the business is yours, for the specialist gets to be known and his goods in demand. There is no place today in the big cities for job lots, and this the small florist must realize or be the loser. The odds and ends of stock from a small grower, although perhaps of good quality, are in the same class with a few odd roses of unusual excellence. They don't bring what they are worth and the competition of the specialist and of the large concerns is too strenuous for a mixed lot from the country. That takes in all of them, for the large grower specializes in more than one line, but each department is capable of holding its own as a rule, and the big places by holding a steady supply, can maintain a sale for their goods and can, as a rule, produce better goods for the money than the small places that do not specialize. The wholesale house is between them all—a clearing house, a necessary evil—but a link in the chain that binds every man dependent on flowers for a livelihood with a common bond, and we must realize that this chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

That bond is the cause for which we should work. To strengthen it should be our mission, the assimilating of the idea of common fellowship in the trade, will be the tie that binds. Some of that spirit has been in the air this season and that spirit, we may hope, will be the yeast that will leaven the whole, but the working is slow, though if successful, it will not be in vain. One of the strong links in the chain is the S. A. F., and this must be the foundation upon which to build.

Let us consider briefly what the society means to the average florist. It means a picnic and a vacation in the summer, free lunches and a social time with a lot of kindred spirits (and other spirits), and a feeling when he gets home that the florists are after all a jolly bunch and a lot of pretty good spenders. But this is not all. There is creeping into that organization a feeling that as a national society, there is a purpose to accomplish and that purpose is the elevation of the florist profession from the huckster standard to the dignity of a business. The meetings should be to better business conditions, and not to settle seedsmen's arguments with the ruling that votes are power. That feeling has brought about the National Flower Shows to teach the people of the world that we are alive to some of the opportunities of horticulture as a profession in America, to instill into our minds confidence in ourselves as a whole, as American business men, and to teach us to respect our calling in life by showing us public opinion of horticultural achievements.

I look forward to the day when we shall be in reality not a society of florists, but an organization of florists with serious intent and business betterment the sole interest, and with such a spirit we will have the co-operation, not of one florist out of ten, but of the entire profession. There are, of course, features in every exhibition that are wholly trade features, but they all have instructive value and more instructive to the public than to the profession. Any flower show properly advertised, educates the public to the flower industry and anyone who fails to support the next National Flower Show in the Grand Central Palace, New York, will be doing himself and his profession an injustice and deserves to lose his share of the benefits which must result to the business as a whole. It is up to the newspapers to make or break this show financially, but aside from the financial end, they will be doing a great injustice to the people of the country as a whole, if they do not give an educational exhibit of this character all the prominence it deserves. It is one of the many unexplainable things that newspapers crave to give the American people glowing accounts of insignificant celebrations and scandal and fail to give prominence to that which is not only interesting to many, but instructive to all.

This brings us to the question: Are we putting the material before them in such shape that it can be used? We certainly are not. What then, is the solution? At the last convention in Chicago, a motion was passed providing for a publicity committee of the Society of American Florists, and there is reason to believe that at the call of President Farquhar, there will be a meeting in connection with the National Flower Show, and that a resolution will be drawn up to present to the Society in convention at Minneapolis for a term of years a sum large enough to insure a fitting start for this work. The balance of the necessary funds must come from the florists' clubs and private individuals. No man can head a publicity bureau who does not have his entire time devoted to it, and be successful and accomplish the purpose. No man can be obtained to fill this position for a small salary. It takes money to make it go. Would not the

S. A. F., with its $3.00 a year membership, be doing the right thing to make it a business organization if every florist in the country could become a member on the grounds that two-thirds of his yearly donation would be used to advance his profession and benefit his business? I believe so, and that properly canvassed, they could be induced to join.

Then a publicity bureau could have a chance to become a power and a few of the good things it could do would be the dissemination of the papers of proper information relating to flowers and plants; it could teach the public what flowers are used for and how; bring to public notice special flower days and make them national; teach the florist how to properly conduct his local advertising; show political parties that a flower is an appropriate party emblem; bring pressure to bear on the government to teach home beautifying, to enhance value as well as to improve the farm land; assist magazines of national scope to obtain articles that relate to flowers; aid in advertising national flower shows; teach the people that the parks are their property and their gardens, and instill in them local pride in their parks and its flowers; make our big days like Memorial Day national in their scope, and teach some sections of the country that flowers at Easter are a necessity as they are in the East. Perhaps I am painting this too rosy, but it is worth the thought.

We want co-operation rather than competition, and unless we have it there will be more florists selling their own product direct to the real market, and that is—the people. Consider the possibilities of the parcel post and the demand that has come from the people. "Buy from the producer," is the watch-word of modern times, and they are doing it more and more in every line of business. It is to be regretted that plants are not included under parcel post rates as well as cut flowers. Consider the possibility of an organization of growers with a chain of stores, spending the money they are now paying for commissions, in proper publicity and advertising,

H. P. Joslin, Secretary.

P. S. Randolph, Executive Committee.

catering to the people direct, bidding for parcel post shipments to be made direct from the greenhouses. This class of business would be a big feature. The people enjoy buying from the real source of supply and they like to buy direct from the greenhouse as experience has proved. Parcel post has aided in making such an arrangement possible.

I tell you, gentlemen, we are all in the same boat. We do not want competition. We want co-operation; but unless there is co-operation of retailers, wholesalers and growers, there will be competition and plenty of it. Some of us may then realize that we allowed the goose that lays the golden eggs to starve to death for lack of business sense.

A link in the chain that binds us all together is the local florists' club. It is to be hoped that the Florists' Club of Philadelphia has proved this to the local people, that the flower business in Philadelphia is on the level, that it has educated them to the fact that you are producing for them the best products of American floriculture, that you have made Philadelphia and the state of Pennsylvania proud of its flowers. If not, your mission has not been accomplished, but you have the foundation to work with right here in the club. Every dollar that you spend collectively to boom your business and put it before the public in its true light, will come back to you individually many times over. You have a new organization here in Philadelphia, the Retail Florists' Association. Let us hope that it will be conducted as an organization of business men, in sympathy with the grower and his problems, willing to meet with you, becoming part of your organization, aid in solving the problem of getting flowers to the real market—the people.

I am not under the impression that this talk to you tonight is going to be a heel-all, that everything will follow the course I have mapped out, but if it gives you the basis for thought and aids in strengthening the bond of fellowship, and helps to impress on you the fact that our interests are mutual, I shall be satisfied.

Plant Introduction.

An article on "Plant Introduction for the Plant Breeder," by David Fairchild, has been reprinted from the Department of Agriculture's Yearbook for 1911. "It is now nearly two centuries," says Mr. Fairchild, "since the first successful attempt to hybridize plants was made by an English gardener. This seems a long time if measured in the terms of mechanical invention, but when it is remembered that with most plants such a cross as that first one produced can be made only once a year, the accomplishments of plant hybridization appear truly remarkable. A mechanic makes a new machine and tests it at once; a plant breeder makes a new cross, but must wait for the following season, and if his plant is a tree or shrub he must wait for many seasons before he knows whether he has obtained from his cross something worthless or a new hybrid which is an improvement over that which the world already has."

The practical value of plant breeding and the influence of new environment are treated fully by Mr. Fairchild, who speaks hopefully of the expected results from the introduction of hardy wild stock from Asia and elsewhere. The crossing of these with native stock is expected to produce hardier plants and an improved fruit.

"Eighty years ago the way in which plants were built up was so imperfectly understood, says Mr. Fairchild, that the cell organ called the nucleus, which has come to play such an important role in plant hybridization, had not been discovered; while the presence of a definite mechanism by which the matter that is transmitted from parent to offspring is divided and redivided until every cell in the entire body of the offspring has received a portion of the substance of the parent was not so much as even suspected.

"The influence which the introduction of a single new species may sometimes have on the creation of a whole range of new varieties is nowhere more strikingly demonstrated than in the case of the introduction of the Bengal rose into Europe. As Viviani-Morel remarks in his article on the hybridization of the genus rosa:

"The changes that upset the genus rosa were contemporary, or nearly so, with the French Revolution. It was about this time, in fact, that there was introduced into cultivation the rose called the Bengal, which transformed the genus and altered it from top to bottom."

"According to the English gardener, Philip Miller, who wrote in the eighteenth century, there were only 30 varieties of double roses in cultivation in his time. Compare this number with the 2,000 or more of today. What has been done with the rose probably can be done in greater or lesser measure with many of our other cultivated plants.

"In other words, plant breeding is now on the very borderland of our knowledge of the microscopic structure and chemistry of proto-plasm on the one hand and touches the great commercial interests on the other, and therefore its study has all the fascination of true research which is stimulated by the quick utilization of newly discovered facts."

New York and New Jersey Plant Growers.

The fifth annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers was held Wednesday evening, January 29, 1913, at Louis Martin's, Broadway and Forty-second street, New York. It was the largest in the history of the association and declared to be the most successful one. The table was arranged in the shape of a horseshoe and was beautifully decorated with smilax, orchids, roses, carnations, alpine violets, etc., and when occupied by the guests made a pleasing spectacle. Louis Dupuy, the president of the association, acted as toastmaster and after the dinner had been served he introduced the following speakers: J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, president of S. A. F.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; William H. Siebrecht, president of New York Florists' Club, and F. B. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.

The president then addressed Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., the secretary of the association, and stated that the association appreciated his efforts in making the dinner a success and as a token of esteem presented him with a watch fob and locket studded with an immense diamond. It was a total surprise to the secretary and in accepting it he thanked the members and stated that he had done only that which he considered was his duty. After the ### International Flower Show.

GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, NEW YORK.

The Final Schedule of Prizes is now in course of distribution and copies of same may be had by anyone applying to John Young, secretary, 54 West 28th St., New York, or C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., chairman of the National Flower Show Committee. It embraces forty pages and is believed to be the most comprehensive flower show schedule ever issued for any show in the world, catering, as it does, not only to the large grower, but to the private men and amateurs, and covering everything in the line of plants and cut flowers. It is gratifying to note that there are some twenty-seven contributing societies in conjunction with the S. A. F. & O. H. This will insure a unity of purpose such as has never before been manifest in American horticulture.

The amount of cash premiums is very large, and in addition there will be some thirty-five silver cups and about the same number of gold, silver and bronze medals to be competed for. Mr. Young has mailed a copy of the schedule to every member of the S. A. F. & O. H. The membership in the contributing societies will be reached through their secretaries. The local committee meets weekly and is holding frequent conferences with the management of the International Exposition Co., which is co-operating.

The feature program for the show, while not yet completed, will include free lectures to the public every afternoon and evening. President Farquhar of the S. A. F. & O. H., will speak on "Gardens of Japan." Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia will lecture on "A Trip through the Canadian Rockies." E. H. Wilson, of Boston, will speak on "Chinese Plants." F. W. Brown, of Buffalo, has kindly consented to give his ideas on "Floral Arrangement and Art." R. F. Felton, of London, Eng., it is also hoped will speak on "Floral Decorations as used at the British Court." Other well known lecturers will be Leonard Barron, of the Garden Magazine; Geo. V. Nash, of the New York Botanical Garden; J. H. McFarland, of the McFarland Publicity Co., Harrisburg, Pa.; and Miss Beatrice Jones, of New York, the well known landscape artist. The lecture room, which is on the third floor of the Palace, will be used by members of the different societies for their meetings in the mornings; definite dates will be set for each society as soon as the program is properly arranged.

The board of jurors composed of about sixty well posted men in American horticulture, will work in conjunction with about a dozen European gentlemen, in order that the show may be judged expeditiously and the prizes all awarded before the building is opened to the public.

Arrangements are being made to have the music in keeping with the magnitude and importance of the event.

Some of the commercial firms think the price of 75 cents, $1 and $1.50 per foot (according to location), for space in the trade exhibition section is too high, but it must be remembered that conditions in New York are very different from those found in small towns. Mr. Young still has a few good locations for sale, and, as purely a business proposition anyone interested who does not have space in this show will surely regret the fact afterward. The building in which the show will be held (of which a very fine picture appears on the back of the Final Schedule of Prizes) rents for $2,000 per day; the lighting and other essentials are additional items; and while the S. A. F. & O. H. has an agreement with the International Exposition Co. which relieves the Society of much direct responsibility, still it will have to be provided for. The cost of space, however, if any business man will sit down and conscientiously figure it out, is really very little, considering the fact that automobile shows in the same building rented their space for from $3 to $5 per foot; and also considering the fact that an exhibitor is putting his goods before the greatest buying public in the world. When one considers, too, that more than seventy-five thousand people passed through the gates at a local exhibition one Sunday, last Fall just to see a Chrysanthemum exhibition, the prospects for a record breaking attendance at the International Show look exceptionally bright.

The International Exposition Company, through its arrangement of the advertising agencies, will have an announcement of the show in all the surface, elevated and subway stations, and in this way it will come to the direct notice of over two million people a day, a great many of whom will be interested in the show.

It is expected that one day will be known as "Society Day," on which day the admission fee will be double that on ordinary days. This will be the big display day of the rose and carnation societies.

J. H. PEPPER,

Philadelphia Florists' Club.

The February meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club was a record-breaker in point of attendance. The feature was the paper of Wallace Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., on "The Florist and His Market." It was a splendid essay and like all of Mr. Pierson's work it showed him to be thoroughly up to date and an earnest worker for the welfare of the business. It will be read with great interest by the trade generally all over the country, as he has touched on a subject of general interest. John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., made an address, speaking of the great exhibition to be held in New York in April and predicting great success for it. He also praised the work of Vice-President Wirth of Minneapolis, Minn., and the great work he is doing in preparation for the coming convention of the S. A. F.

Charles Totty, Madison, N. J., was full of the coming International Flower Show in New York. He was pleased to see so much interest being taken by the trade here and predicted that it would be the greatest and most complete horticultural exhibition ever held in any country. M. C. Ebel of the Aphine Manufacturing Co., also addressed the club on publicity in the flower business and thought that great good would come from it. The Retail Florists' Association was accorded the use of the club room for a general publicity meeting to include all branches of the trade to set on foot a bona fide movement that is expected to have something more than mere promises and hopes for results. Every effort will be made to get all interests together and give the publicity cause such a boost that it will never stop. Very interesting remarks were made by Robert Craig, A. Farenwald, Charles Fox, John Gracey, President Thilow and others. K.

Washington.

GOOD STOCK SCARCE.

Business keeps up very well, but good stock is not over plentiful. Good roses are very scarce. American Beauties are in very short supply. Carnations are coming in fairly well. Snapdragon and bulbous stock are plentiful with a ready sale for all. The florists all report a very good trade.

NOTES.

The florists' bowling team has entered the city tournament and they would like to have a few of the club out to see them the night they bowl.

The next club meeting will be election night. There will be a number of candidates for the presidency.

J. H. Small & Sons have had some very pretty table decorations of late. In one of them the centerpiece was an old-fashioned bouquet over four feet high with old-fashioned bouquets laid on the cloth for the ladies.

Geo. H. Cooke had a very pretty window of farleyense, pink pearl and white lilac with some very fine wall flowers in vases. Mr. Cooke is kept very busy just now with plenty of table decorations.

Geo. Shaffer is well pleased with the new store. He reports business very good.

Z. D. Blackstone is not saying much but you can always find his force on the move. G. C. D.

Baltimore.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club has called a meeting for February 10 to appoint a committee to wait on the legislature and ask for an appropriation for a horticultural hall. Flower shows heretofore have been held at the Fifth Regiment Armory, but owing to the atmosphere it has been impossible to keep the flowers alive for any length of time. The Maryland Horticultural Society promises its assistance in furthering the project. Among those who spoke in favor of the hall at a recent meeting were: Geo. M. Morrison, former president of the Maryland Horticultural Society; Wm. Christie, president of the Gardeners and Florists' Club; Isaac H. Moss, vice-president of the Maryland Horticultural Society.

TOPPENISH, WASH.—F. A. Wiggins, sales manager of the Washington Nursery Co., and a member of the city council, has been chosen city purchasing officer.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH.—The attendance at the convention of the Washington Horticultural Association reached 700 on January 16 and much enthusiasm was awakened.

New Orleans.

MARDI GRAS FLOWERS.

There was a big demand for orchids, lily of the valley, pink roses, carnations, violets and daffodils for the annual Mardi Gras festivities. There was little call for American Beauty roses. Corsage bouquets of violets and jonquils were very popular and there were large sales of these flowers. Carnival dinner and luncheon decorations were more elaborate than ever, all sorts of flowers and decorative plants being used. American Beauty roses sold at from $3 to $10 for the best, and best Killarneys at $2 to $3. Carnations brought from 75 cents to $1.50. Parma violets were not in demand, the local dark blue variety being preferred.

Flowers for King Rex included daffodils, violets and smilax in a large bou-quet tied with green, yellow and purple carnival ribbons. The bouquet is carried by the king and presented to the queen on arrival at the king's club. The king furnishes the flowers for the ball. The queen carried an arm bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley, her maids carrying American Beauty rose bouquets; all tied with carnival ribbons.

Imported carnations were very good, but out-of-town roses and other flowers were high priced and of very poor quality. All roses were off color and the stems were weak. There were many poor shipments of imported stock.

Chinese Agricultural Department.

The Republic of China has established a Department of Agriculture and Forestry on modern lines, and this institution has begun publishing an agricultural journal (all in Chinese), which appears three times a month. It is understood that a national meteorological service will be established as a branch of this department, and that it will be under the direction of Dr. Hing Kwai Fung, who was educated at Cornell University, and who for a year past has been attached to the Bureau of Plant Industry in Washington as an agricultural expert. Dr. Fung has started for China by way of Europe, where he will make a round of visits to meteorological observatories. —Scientific American.

OBITUARY.

A. H. Schuermann.

A. H. Schuermann, 61 years old, a dealer in flowers and plants, died of heart disease, Wednesday, January 29, at his home, 1439 E. Grand avenue, St. Louis, Mo. He was well known in the trade. He did the art work of over one-third of the buildings at the World's Fair in 1904. He executed the decorated bamboo work on the buildings of the Philippine reservation and after the fair he was presented with 10 carloads of bamboo. He made pipes and beer steins out of the bamboo. He fashioned the decorations for the Veiled Prophet's ball, the St. Louis horse show and the Alps at the fair. Mr. Schuermann was born at Mella, Germany. He leaves a wife and three children.

Fred C. Schmeling.

Fred C. Schmeling, one of the oldest and best known florists of Milwaukee, Wis., died Friday morning, January 31, after an illness of four weeks. Mr. Schmeling had been in the flower business for thirty-five years, twenty-eight of which he had grown his own stock. He was born May 22, 1861, and was therefore not quite 52 years old. Besides the many friends who mourn his loss, Mr. Schmeling leaves a widow and five children. The funeral was held February 3. The floral designs were many and beautiful.

G. T. Cerdua.

Gustave Theodore Cerdua, 83 years old, for nearly forty years a florist in Orange, N. J., died at his home, 46 Hillyer Street, January 27. For a number of years he had practically retired from business, but was well known and highly respected by all the older residents of Orange, as well as the older florists of New York city, where in his younger years he worked as a journeyman grower.

Harley M. Walbridge.

Harley M. Walbridge, who for the last 18 months had been in charge of the wholesale store of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., died January 31. Death was the result of pleural pneumonia and came after a short illness at the home of Mr. Walbridge's parents, Hornell, N. Y.

Prof. T. V. Munson.

Prof. T. V. Munson, well known as a nurseryman, died at Dennison, Tex., January 21. He had written several books on grape culture and was decorated by the German emperor for discovery of a preventive of a worm disease that was killing grape vines.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—H. W. Allerson will build an addition to his greenhouse to cost $2000.

RALEIGH, N. C.—The State Forestry Association met here in annual convention, January 16.

Personal.

Elmer D. Smith and wife, Adrian, Mich., are making preparations to visit Florida and other southern points this winter.

Rose Mrs. Chas. Russell in London.

Rose Mrs. Chas. Russell, Alexander Montgomery's wonderful new variety, was exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society, London, January 25, and attracted much attention. The flowers were shipped from New York and were two weeks on the way, arriving in fairly good condition and received the society's much coveted award of merit.

McKinley Day Waning.

McKinley day as a flower factor appears to be decidedly on the wane, notwithstanding the fact that the trade has made heroic efforts to keep it alive. In Washington, D. C., we note that a number of the florists combined in special half-page advertisements in the local newspapers, including Geo. C. Shaffer, Gude Bros. Co., O. A. Oehmler, Z. D. Blackstone and J. H. Small & Sons, Inc., but we fear no amount of advertising can revive the special use of carnations or other flowers on this day.

Local Advertising.

Knoble Bros., Cleveland, O., had a full-page advertisement in colors in the Plain Dealer of January 19. Besides an attractive border this advertisement contained considerable reading matter under the heading of "To Cleveland—Flowers" with the following sub-heads: "As near to you as the nearest phone," "Cleveland productions far surpassed," "Cut flowers, foliage and blooming plants," "Decorations and social functions," "Flowers for Funerals," "The story of a flower as told by Knoble Brothers," "The carnation," "The chrysanthemum" and "Violets." This looks to us like good advertising.

Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

At a meeting of gladiolus growers at Cleveland, February 1, 1913, in response to a call, the Gladiolus Society of Ohio was organized, a constitution adopted and officers elected as follows: C. Betscher, Canal Dover, president; Mrs. A. H. Austin, Wayland, vice-president; Wilbur A. Christy, Warren, secretary-treasurer. An executive committee was also ordered, consisting of—Alford, M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, and R. E. Huntington, Painesville. Other committees were also named and the society is ready for business. The membership is not to be confined exclusively to Ohio, as the name might seem to indicate, and the society hopes to co-operate in a friendly way with other organizations of similar purpose, in testing and exhibiting varieties of its specialty.

Piping Greenhouses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please state how much piping will be required for a house of the following dimensions: 40x200 feet, six feet at the eaves, two glass gables, one side 48-inch glass, other side about 24-inch glass and balance of side to abutt on the side of a present house. Glass all to be abutted. Hot water to be used for heating. No larger than 3-inch pipe for the flows to be used. To be heated to 60 degrees at 25 degrees below zero. F. B.

British Columbia.

The amount of radiation required in a house 40x200 feet at 25 degrees below zero will depend somewhat upon the duration of such an extreme temperature, as, if it lasts only a few days, it will be possible, by a little extra attention to the firing, to maintain the desired temperature in the house, even though the amount of radiation is considerably less than would be considered necessary when the cold periods are of long duration. Thus, while it might be possible to heat the above described house by using five 3-inch flow pipes and twenty 2-inch returns, it might be more economical of fuel and labor if as many as 25 returns are used.

One of the flows can be on each wall plate, another under the ridge and the other two under the purlins or upon the purlin posts if such are used. Each flow pipe will then connect with four or five of the returns, which should be under the benches, or in the walk if solid beds are used. In order to keep up the temperature at the ends of the house drop down a three-inch pipe from the end of the middle flow pipe and carry two or three 2-inch return pipes in either direction across the end of the house, and along the walls back to the boiler.

Boston Flower Exchange.

An event of more than usual importance in the trade will take place February 15, when the Boston Flower Exchange, Inc., will hold an opening reception and exhibition at its market, in the heart of the wholesale district, Otis street and Winthrop square, Boston, Mass. The necessary alterations are nearly completed and the quarters will be all shipshape when the opening occurs. Exhibits are invited and the show is expected to bring out some of more than ordinary merit.

The Boston Flower Exchange was established in 1892 under the name of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, their first market being under the old Horticultural Hall, Bromfield street. Within a year this proved entirely too small and the market was moved to Tremont and Park streets, under the Park Street church, where it remained until the present time with the exception of one year, when it occupied a location on Columbus avenue. Dissatisfaction among the members led to the organization of a rival company and the Exchange was moved back to its Park street quarters.

The Boston Flower Exchange was the pioneer cooperative flower market in the United States, the sale of flowers being restricted to the producer, who himself or through an agent sells direct to the store-keeper or wholesaler. In 1910, under the leadership of E. Allan Peirce, of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass., the market was reorganized as a stock company with $20,000 capital, $10,000 of which was paid in. The surplus accumulated in three years amounted to more than $10,000, giving the company a financial strength sufficient to grasp the opportunity of moving to one of the best locations possible for a wholesale flower market.

The headquarters included a ground floor and basement with more than 22,000 feet of floor space. It is in the heart of the business district and near all railway stations, express offices, etc. Boston's oldest wholesale florists, Welch Bros., are located in this square and N. F. McCarthy & Co., the next oldest firm, are located directly across the street from the new market. In the 21 years since the Flower Exchange was established, only one addition in the wholesale trade has been added in Boston. This is Henry F. Robinson & Co. A large part of the business is handled by the grower himself, eliminating the middleman's profit almost entirely.

The first floor of this market will be divided into 200 stalls, each three feet and six inches by four feet. There will be four large ice chests, also offices, etc. Seven telephones are distributed over the floor. The basement, which contains 12,000 square feet and is well lighted, will be sublet to some of the larger florists and dealers in supplies. It is hoped that anyone in the country who has a flower or plant he wishes to introduce to the New England trade will make a special effort to send it to the show.

E. Allan Peirce is chairman of the flower show committee and other members well known throughout the country are members of the various committees as follows:

Arrangements—William Stickle, Eber Holmes, George Cartwright, Andrew Christensen.

Roses—Alexander Montgomery, Eber Holmes, Wm. McAlpine.

Entertainment—S. J. Goddard, William R. Nicholson, Wm. Hastings.

Carnations—Wm. Nicholson, M. A. Patton, Peter Fisher, S. J. Goddard, E. Allan Peirce.

Plants, etc.—Lester Mann, A. Parker, Andrew Christensen, Thomas Roland, Herman Bartsch.

The officers of the organization are: Wm. Stickle, president; Wm. Nicholson, vice-president; Geo. Cartwright, secretary and treasurer. The directors are Alexander Montgomery, Lester Mann, E. Allan Peirce, Andrew Christensen, S. J. Goodard and A. Parker.

Cleveland.*TOO MUCH BULBOUS STOCK.

The local market is pretty well loaded up with all the different varieties of bulb stock, which goes to prove that the bulb salesmen from over the water know how to sell their goods, as every year there are a few thousand dollars go to waste by reason of an over supply of such stock, and the American growers are the losers. The American Beauty and Richmond rose crop seems to be the shortest ever at this time of the year, both in the eastern and western markets. Pink and White Killarney are a lot more plentiful and yet they have cleaned up daily at fair prices. Aaron Wards are becoming a little more plentiful and orders are being filled more promptly. Carnations are increasing in supply every day, but a large percentage are "splits," which help to lower the price of these flowers in general. Sweet peas are short of the demand. Violets are selling fairly well. Valley is good and selling well at moderate prices. Orchids are in good supply and can be had at reasonable prices, and the blooms are of exceptionally good size and color. Easter and calla lilies are arriving in quantity now, with a fair demand. Purity freesia is good stock. Calandula is short of the demand, as is mignonette. Tulips, all colors; daffodils, single and double; jonquils, Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths, take up the most space on the tables of local wholesale houses. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Boxwood is having a good call and stock is fine. Southern smilax can be had at any time. Pan-

Plan of Sale of the Jackson Pecan Groves

We offer these groves for sale under two plans. In either case the company continues to give the groves scientific care and cultivation for five years from date of contract, without expense or taxes to the purchaser.

Plan A. The purchaser is to pay the entire amount of the purchase price---ten per cent (10%) in cash the balance in sixty monthly installments, without interest---the purchaser to have all nuts grown on the tract from date of contract. Price of 3-year-old groves under this plan cost only $400 per acre.

Plan B. The purchaser is to pay three-fifths of the purchase price---ten per cent (10%) in cash, the balance in sixty monthly installments, without interest. The company to have all nuts grown on the tract during the time the purchaser has to pay for it. Our 3-year-old groves under this plan cost only $300 per acre.

Average Annual Income.

8 "	40 "	20 00	400 00	2,000 00

The above estimate may seem large, but we will convince you that our experience has been better than this.

Why should you not own one of these premium bearing groves and receive an income that will increase each and every year for fifty years or more?

Write to-day for full particulars. Now only a few of these private groves left unsold.

sies are having a good call but the stems are rather short. String smilax for the church holidays during Lent will be in good supply.

NOTES.

"Uncle Mose" Cleveland has a flower show on all the time nowadays in Gordon Park, for the first show greenhouse has been completed. City Forester John Boddy announces the orchids are in full bloom. Until recently all city greenhouses have been propagating houses, where slips were prepared for outdoor planting. Gifts of tropical and show plants by several prominent and wealthy Clevelanders led to the building of a new structure.

Monday evening, February 10, will be novelty night at the rooms of the local Florists' Club. Any grower who has something new, odd, or out of the ordinary in any way, is asked to bring it in and put it on exhibition. Luncheon and a good time go with it.

The Florists' Bowling Club has organized again, and all are welcome to witness these exhibitions, at which a good time is always had. Cash prizes for individual and team scores will make it interesting.

Greenhouse firemen still have a few more days to study up on their examination questions for a license, as the state examiner will soon be around. C. F. B.

SCRANTON, PA.—C. S. Weston, 624 Monroe avenue, is building a greenhouse at a cost of $3,000.

WEST GROVE, PA.—The Conard & Jones Co. advertises goods for delivery by the parcel post.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—H. D. Allersma will build a greenhouse at Benjamin avenue and Dunham street.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—One of the greenhouses of the Webb Floral Co., used for palms, ferns and stock plants generally, was almost totally destroyed by fire early in January. The fire occurred early in the morning during a severe snow storm, spreading to the office building and another greenhouse where the plant stock was almost a complete loss. The loss was covered by insurance. The firm is now rebuilding.

COLDER WEATHER.

This city experienced its first real cold weather this year on February 1 when the temperature dropped to 13 degrees below zero. The "ground hog" came out the following day but scurried back to his hole as soon as he saw his shadow, which to some people means that we will have six weeks more of cold weather. There has been no great change in the market conditions since last week, trade is still quiet and roses continue to be scarce and command high prices. American Beauty roses are in good demand and clean up readily, although there is a fair supply of short stem flowers. Carnations are as plentiful as ever with a noticeable increase of splits. Violets have not advanced any yet in price, lily of the valley is of good quality and in good supply. The supply of bulbous flowers is increasing and the counters of the stores are well filled with tulips, jonquils, freesias and Paper White narcissi. Lilies are in greater supply and some exceptionally fine stock is obtainable. Fancy snapdragons are arriving and a fair supply of bouvardia is to be had. Orchids are obtainable in quantities at low prices and are still seen featured in many of the down town windows. Sweet peas are in large supply and the quality is good, with a large variety of colors obtainable. Marigolds and mignonette of good quality are also offered. At this writing, Wednesday, February 5, the weather is still cold but trade is as quiet as ever. The supply of bulbous flowers is increasing and much fine stock is obtainable. The demand for flowers from New Orleans for Mardi Gras week was unusually quiet this year and like Mc-Kinley day there was practically "nothing doing" as far as this market was concerned. The shipping trade is disappointing and the same can be said of the local business. A New York wholesale house which evidently knows the true condition of the local market has asked several of the wholesalers here to consign a portion of their carnations to them at present or until the demand here is better. The New York dealer claims that he has an outlet for fancy stock at practically double the price asked for here, which is indeed surprising, for if one scans the market report of that city in last week's issue he will find that carnations there have been very plentiful and that the prices were quite low. But then, there may have been a great change in the market there or the wholesaler referred to may do such a large business that he can handle some of the local stock at the prices he mentioned to good advantage. Really, under the present conditions here it might prove to be of benefit to give him a trial, for the house has a good reputation.

NOTES.

Albert Haisch, formerly with the Memphis Floral Co., at Memphis, Tenn., was in the city this week on business connected with his new store which he will open at the corner of Main and Madison streets in that city, on February 15. Mr. Haisch also visited relatives in Milwaukee, Wis., on this trip, returning home the latter part of this week.

N. J. Wiator and wife are back from a delightful visit at Ocean Springs, Miss., and a few days' stay at New Orleans, La. His firm, Wiator Bros., is now cutting a better supply of fancy American Beauties and the supply of roses in general is increasing daily.

John Poehlmann, Jr., who is attending the Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind., writes that the students of that institution have been enlisted for the inaugural parade at Washington, and it is needless to say that they are looking forward with much pleasure to that event.

By order of Postmaster Campbell of this city the last mail delivery will be made at 3:30 p. m. instead of 4:30 as heretofore. Out of town customers are requested to bear this in mind when mailing their letters and act accordingly.

O. Johnson says that one of the Batavia Greenhouse Co.'s residences occupied by his partner, Henry Winberg, burned to the ground on Friday, January 31. Fortunately the building was partly covered by insurance.

Sol. Garland of Des Plaines has leased a stand from Percy Jones and is now disposing of a portion of his own stock at wholesale.

Dwight L. Harris, general manager of the Pulverized Manure Co., will be back soon from an extended eastern trip.

W. J. Smyth's many friends will be pleased to hear that he was taken home from the hospital on January 31.

Mrs. F. Ennis of Milwaukee, Wis., transacted business here on January 30, returning home the same evening.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union restaurant on February 6.

H. C. Wullbrandt, proprietor of the Globe Greenhouses, has returned from a most enjoyable visit in Cuba.

W. F. Vik has moved one block farther south to 5118 South Ashland avenue.

Western delegations can stop off for this exhibition on the way to New York to attend the national flower show April 5-12.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a tremendous quantity of long and medium stemmed American Beauties which are pretty good property during the present shortage of other roses. Tim Matchen has been supplying several wholesalers with stock the past week, besides taking care of all of his regular customers.

Bassett & Washburn's cut of carnations is exceptionally large and plenty of fine stock is now being sold at the store. Their new red seedling carnation is attracting considerable attention and is having a good call. An increased supply of roses is expected at this establishment in the course of another week.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is disposing of a large quantity of carnations each day and J. F. Kidwell says that the stock is all pretty well sold out before the store closes for the day. Some fine tulips in addition to a large assortment of other bulbous flowers are now the leaders here.

At A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store, stock of all kinds is arriving in fine condition and some of the best tulips and other bulbous flowers of the season are now being featured in quantity. W. E. Lynch is suffering considerably with rheumatism, but refuses to remain away from work.

The J. B. Deamud Co. had a new floor laid in its store this week which is the fourth one since the firm occupied the present quarters. The counters are always well filled with all the stock in season when the shipments arrive in the morning, especially with bulbous flowers.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply of orchids is still very large, and some magnificent blooms can now be seen at their establishment. Otto W. Frese says that the New Orleans shipping trade was very light this year as far as the Mardi Gras was concerned.

The Alpha Floral Co.'s window displays at present are very beautiful and continue to attract much attention. George Economopolis, the proprietor, believes in this kind of advertising and always makes a big showing of all the seasonable flowers and plants.

Weilands, Inc., have sold their lease at 15 East Washington street at a good figure and are now busy vacating the premises. It is understood that the proprietors had an eight-year lease on the store, so it must have been an object to sell.

The George Wittbold Co. has had an unusually large run on funeral work all this week, but particularly so last Sunday, when the force was obliged to work until 10 p. m., the usual closing hour on that day being at noon.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has renewed the lease on its present quarters for a term of years. Mr. Winter-son says that business has been very good right along and that he has no cause whatever to complain.

Percy Jones is offering a large supply of bulbous stock of all kinds and he is featuring some exceptionally fine tulips. The supply department is also growing and quite a trade has been worked up in this line.

J. A. Budlong is having a good call for lily of the valley so he has no great surplus of stock. A good supply of roses is arriving but is sold quickly at good prices.

John Welsh has opened another store at 4703 North Robey street, where he will be in charge. His son William will hereafter look after the old establishment at Hoyne and Ainslie avenues.

At Kyle & Foerster's store, sweet peas and American Beauty roses of fine quality are only a few of their many offerings.

Miss A. Sigmund says that funeral work has been exceptionally brisk at the Madison Floral Co.'s store the past few weeks.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been a little under the weather the past week but gallantly sticks to the ship.

The A. Dietsch Co. has received another order from Carl Zeidler of Evansville, Ind., for several new greenhouses.

John Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., was in the city on pleasure a few days this week.

August Jurgens left this week to spray the peach trees in his Mississippi and Alabama groves.

Miss C. Knappstein is the latest addition to Stollery Bros.' Wilson avenue store force.

F. J. Simon, recently with the A. L. Randall Co., is again with Percy Jones.

The Chicago Carnation Co. received several seedlings the past week from out of town growers, two of which look very promising. No. 61 is a variegated Enchantress and the other is a variegated Enchantress and both came from A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, Mo. No. 61 is marked very much on the order of Mrs. Patten with a heavy medium stiff stem that bears a large flower of a very good type which seems to possess good keeping quality. The blooms were sent by parcel post and arrived in very good condition, and two days later developed wonderfully well in the cooling room. The variegated Enchantress is the same as the White Enchantress and is also nicely penciled somewhat on the order of Mrs. Patten. Both of these seedlings will be disseminated by A. T. Pyfer and A. Jablonsky the coming season. Another lot of seedlings were received from C. Akehurst & Son, of White Marsh, Md. They were 48 hours in transit, and were not in very good condition when received, but revived after having been placed in the cooling room. No. 45 is a very large, full pink, about the Rose Pink Enchantress shade. It is an exceptionally striking flower because of the great number of petals extending out well and showing the flower off to very good advantage. It has a good calyx and very stiff stem. No. 40, of a Lawson shade, is a small flower somewhat of the Lawson type but having a long stiff stem. No. 105 is a yellow, variegated with cerise. These seedlings are in their second year and appear good enough to pass the experimental stage, and no doubt they will be put on the market within the next year or two.

Henry Wittbold arranged the decorations for the McCormicks' Italian garden dance at the gold ballroom of the Congress hotel on January 21, which were very elaborate.

St. Louis.

DEMAND IS GOOD.

The weather has become cold. There has been a good demand for flowers all week. Carnations have cleaned up well and there has been a scarcity of roses. Violets have been cleaning up well, but the cold weather has caused the demand to slow up. Jonquils, mignonette and valley are selling well.

NOTES.

A visit to the loop at Wellston found Alex Johnson at the retail store very busy, assisted by Jim North. A visit to his greenhouses a few blocks south was very interesting. A new fern and palm house fronts the St. Charles Rock road. It is 22x100 feet. A beautiful grotto, with the finest collection of rock and filled with gold fish and running water, is to be seen here. In addition, there are three houses, 14x135 feet, filled with rose plants; three fine houses of carnations, 14x135 feet, four houses 16x135 feet, two houses 14x135 feet and one house 18x25 filled with plants. Mr. Johnson contemplates further building in the spring. He is installing an additional boiler. The entire plant was erected by Alex and his employees.

The meeting Thursday, February 6, of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be interesting. It is to be a publicity meeting to further interests of all members and their business interests.

KILLARNEYS BEAUTIES CARNATIONS
And All Other Seasonable Flowers at Lowest Market Prices. 30 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO

Will Ossig with the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says the demand for good stock is large. The demand for violets had slackened a little on account of weather conditions.

The Windler Floral Co. has had a splendid stock of flowers all week. Frank Windler and Al Gumz prove very popular and energetic salesmen.

The Red Bud Floral Co. will open a flower stand next to the Columbia Theater on Sixth street. They run flower stands at the Union market.

Geo. B. Windler is shipping some very fancy cut mignonette to this market. It is handled by the Windler Floral Co.

McKinley day was not kept to any extent here. It was killed when exorbitant prices were demanded for carnations.

C. A. Kuehn says the demand is greater than the supply with him, especially in roses.

Morris County Gardeners and Florists.

ANNUAL DINNER.

The annual dinner of the above-named society was held at Piper's Hotel, Morristown, N. J., on the night of January 28. There was a very large attendance and a good list of speakers, a number of whom brought out good points. Walter F. Sheridan, the well-known wholesaler of New York city, was chosen toastmaster and acted the part in a very effective manner. Notable among the speakers were Wm. H. Siebrecht, president of the New York Florists' Club; Chas. H. Totty, Martin C. Ebel, and Wm. H. Duckham of Madison, N. J. A pleasing feature of the gathering was the presentation to Edward Reagan, secretary of the society, of a silver tea service, the presentation speech being made by Wm. H. Duckham. The table decorations were effective and appropriate.

Milwaukee.

ROSES VERY SCARCE.

The market conditions remain practically unchanged, with roses very scarce. There are plenty of carnations, violets, sweet peas, freesias, narcissi and other stock, and enough greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports business very satisfactory with plenty of carnations, sweet peas, violets and bulb stock. The same complaint which the other wholesalers made is heard here, too, a rose shortage.

Chas. Dettman announces the arrival of a baby boy at his home. With this new partner in the A. M. Dettman & Son company it expects to continue business, for some time to come.

Sam Seligman, better known as "Sprinkleproof Sam," of Wertheimer Bros., New York, spent several days here making things lively in the local trade.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. says there is a shortage of roses at their greenhouses but plenty of other seasonable stock to fill all orders.

J. E. Matthewson of Sheboygan, Wis., reports the completion of two new additions to his greenhouses.

W. C. Zimmermann attended the bowling tournament held at Beaver Dam last week.

The death of Fred C. Schmeling took place January 31 after a four weeks' illness.

Gust. Rusch & Co. report business satisfactory, with plenty of carnations.

FLOWERS VERY SCARCE.

The feature of the week was the scarcity of flowers. Roses in all varieties and grades were scarce, beginning with American Beauties which were hardly to be had at any price. It was to a degree the same all along the line. One had to have the order in to insure getting the stock when it arrived. It is quite an interesting sight in the commission houses to see the various salesmen lined up about a box as it is opened, and the wild scramble there is to get enough for this or that order. The head of the house is often called in and has a hard time in portioning off among six or more people when there is only enough to fill one order. It is puzzling to know why everything is so scarce, as the weather has never been more favorable at this season. The weather bureau had to go back for over one hundred years to find a parallel. There should be a great saving in coal. Orchids, valley, violets and gardenias appear to be in better supply than most other flowers and prices on these favor the buyer. Cattleyas sold as low last week as $12.50 a hundred, which is about bottom price for this market. The price for a single dozen, however, was much higher. Daffodils and other bulbous stock was quite plentiful and brought fair prices. Good freesia was scarce. There is quite a demand for good stock of this flower. Sweet peas are soon going to have their innings. They are very popular with the public. The Japanese pink lily is getting to be one of the indispensables. This stock is nearly all imported. Why do not some of our home growers get into the way of forcing this lily? It should pay.

NOTES.

The M. Rice Co. has a very attractive Easter folder appropriately entitled "Parcel Post Helps." It contains many good suggestions for the Easter trade. B. Eschner says they will be glad to mail a copy upon request to any florist.

Carnations were the feature of the Leo Niessen market, although scarce in many places. There were quantities seen here and of excellent quality. Pink Japan lilies are also handled in quantity.

Ed. Reid is "there" with good cattleyas. His select flowers are wonder-

Godfrey Aschmann is about again after a harrowing experience. Such a trilling thing as slightly scratching his shin against the bath tub proved dangerous, as the wound, which in some way became infected, kept everybody on the anxious bench for two or three weeks. The Easter stock here looks well, and Mr. Aschmann says he will now have no trouble with his lilies, as he can get them ready without a bit of forcing.

Although Easter is so early this year, the lily growers as a rule say they will have no trouble to make it with their lily crop. H. Foust, who makes a specialty of this flower, reports that even the few giganteums that he grew will make it easily. His stock this year looks very well. The buds are for the most part set and show that the plants will be quite heavily flowered.

At the automobile truck show of last week quite a number of the fraternity were interested visitors. Mark Mills, W. K. Harris, Robert Crawford and the Jos. Heacock Co. in a body were all looking into the merits of the different cars. Several others were also known to be on the lookout and it appears as if it will be all motor cars in the near future.

The Church of the Messiah, Broad street and Montgomery avenue, will erect a flower shop and greenhouse on the northeast corner of its large and attractive lawn. This will be for rent for a term of from three to five years and should provide a good opening for some progressive florist.

Why does not some enterprising grower make a specialty of rose geranium leaves? They are always in demand in a small way and at this season it seems almost impossible to get them.

William Wyatt of Thirteenth street, above Race, put a fine machine on the street last week. It is quite up-to-date and will be a great help to him in his business.

K.

SPECIAL AMERICAN BEAUTIES SCARCE.

Storm signals up all along the coast and a low temperature on the night of February 1, was the week-end record. Sunday, February 2, was clear and cold. In the cut flower trade the most noteworthy feature of the past week was the great scarcity of good special American Beauty roses. The oldest and most seasoned buyer in the wholesale district made a few remarks on this condition on February 1. While he was willing to pay $1.00 each for good specials he decidedly objected to paying that price for anything "just as good," which practically tells the story. There are not enough good special American Beauties to supply the demand. In tea roses, it cannot be said that there was any great surplus throughout the week, while on Saturday, February 1, the supply was rather light with an increased demand. Carnations, too, on that day moved more freely though there was no noteworthy advance in prices. Good carnations will usually sell, if anything sells, and if they can be kept moving at $3.00 and $4.00 a hundred there is no particular ground for complaint. The cut lilac that is on the market is not of first quality and moves slowly, but some very excellent plant stock is seen. There is an abundant supply of all bulbous stock. Stocks, or gilly flowers, are now arriving in considerable quantities. There is a steady movement in orchids and gardenias, much of the inferior stock being used in funeral work. Lily of the valley is not very plentiful and prices are firm at $3.00 and $4.00 a hundred. As to violets, let us forget them.

Monday, February 3.—The supply of stock is not heavy this morning and prices of roses are firm. Carnations are doing a little better than they were a week ago. A heavy snowstorm is raging, and following, as it does, a great drop in temperature, we may reasonably look for a lighter supply of stock for the remainder of the week. Nevertheless, there is little possibility of any great advance in prices, as buying is light.

NOTES.

As the time approaches for the holding of the third International Flower Show, Charles H. Totty, chairman of the committee, is frequently seen in this city. He has been a tireless worker in the interest of the show and we have reason to believe that in his case it is largely a labor of love and devotion. Aside from any personal consideration, and there are no personal considerations that we know about, he wants the show to be a nation-wide success, and we trust that the trade throughout the country will, as one man, rally to his support. Secretary Young is a very busy man also. He has been mailing the final schedule of prizes, attending committee meetings and answering letters of inquiry which, added to his regular duties as secretary of the S. A. F., keeps him constantly on the job, so to speak.

Among the many interesting figures in the cut flower and plant trade of this city are the Flatbush, Brooklyn, growers. It is quite probable that all these men could sell their ranges for sums that would enable them to retire and live at ease, for real estate in that section is, year by year, greatly increasing in value, but from their inherent love of the business they keep on growing. Notable among them are the Dailedouze Brothers, the business being now conducted by Eugene Dailedouze. At this range, carnations are the leading features and the new production, Enchantress Supreme, which is now being disseminated, is meeting a good demand and is well deserving of the attention of all carnation growers.

One of the very interesting figures in this section is Louis Schmutz, Sr., who in conjunction with his son, Louis Schmutz, Jr., conducts two ranges. Speaking recently of his experience he said: "I came here in 1871 and went to work for Mr. Dailedouze, father of Eugene, Henry and Paul. I could not speak a word of English and felt fortunate in getting work where I could be understood." He eventually started in business for himself and has made a great success of plant growing, being strong on all the leading commercial varieties and having a taste for novelties.

Marshall Clarke, of the well-known firm of David Clarke's Sons, has just returned from a trip to Bermuda. He was well pleased with the island, but thinks that onions and other vegetables are now more profitable crops than Bermuda lilies.

At the Henry Hession range, carnations are almost exclusively grown and a great number of most excellent blooms, covering all the leading varieties, are daily sent to M. C. Ford of Twenty-eighth street.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, was a visitor on February 1. He, too, had just returned from Bermuda. He was pleased with his trip and said the roses and hibiscus were blooming in the open.

G. Messeberg not only grows good carnations but also a variety of other stock, callas at present being very noticeable. He also grows a good variety of plants.

A. J. Guttman has formed a partnership with A. Moltz, the firm name being Guttman & Moltz, Inc., A. J. Guttman, president.

Carl A. Woener is another plantsman who, though but about five years in business for himself, has been very successful.

F. W. Smythe of Wadley & Smythe, sailed for Europe February 5 on a pleasure trip. He will return before Easter.

A. Demeusey is another carnation grower who has made a record for good stock.

Horticultural Society of New York.

The fall exhibition of this society will be held October 31-November 4, 1913, at the American Museum of Natural History. The announcement is made thus early so that other societies may avoid, as far as possible, conflicting with this date. A special feature of this exhibition will be a silver cup, valued at $100.00, offered by the society for 12 vases of chrysanthemums, in 12 varieties, 3 blooms of each, stem 18 inches long. It is expected that this will result in keen competition. Announcement is made at this early date so that ample time may be given for preparation. The exhibition committee is now at work on a schedule which will be issued early in the spring.

The eighth annual convention of the Tennessee State Horticultural Society, the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association, which are affiliated, and the State Beekeepers' Association, held joint sessions at the Maxwell House, this city, January 29-31. The membership of the three organizations is practically the same, and the connection between the three is very close.

On Wednesday, January 29, the horticulturists held the floor. They were welcomed by T. F. Peck, state commissioner of agriculture, on behalf of the state and city. Dr. J. S. Ward, of Nashville, made a very interesting and instructive address on the "Relation of Beekeeping to Horticulture." J. F. Jones spoke on a "Peach Fete." W. G. Wilkerson gave an excellent talk on the "Place of Fruit and Truck Crops in General Farming." A feature of the meeting was an excellent display of Tennessee apples, which were pronounced by experts to compare favorably with those of any state in the Union, and all concluded that there was a remarkable future for the horticultural business in this state. The following officers were elected: H. R. Howard, Chattanooga, president; W. A. Easterly, vice-president for East Tennessee; C. L. Wade, vice-president for West Tennessee; H. C. Scruggs, vice-president for Middle Tennessee; Chas. A. Keffer of Knoxville was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

On Friday the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association met and had a number of addresses and discussions along the line of their work. The Joy Floral Co. invited the nurserymen, horticulturists and the beekeepers to visit their floral gardens to witness a practical demonstration of the use of dynamite. A large number of the visitors accepted. The election of officers resulted as follows: Chas. Pennington, Rutherford, president; Harvey Templeton, Winchester, president at large; A. J. Fletcher, Cleveland, vice-president for East Tennessee; Harry Nicholson, Decherd, vice-president for Middle Tennessee; J. S. Swinney, Greenfield, vice-president for West Tennessee. Prof. G. M. Bentley, of the State University, Knoxville, secretary and treasurer. M. C. D.

TRADE SLOWS UP.

The cold weather the latter part of the week has forced the trade to slow up, but on the whole it is in a pretty good condition. During the week cat-tleas were abundant but the sales slow. Carnations are coming in very poorly. Roses, violets and daffodils have been moving well all week.

ROSES STILL SCARCE.

Saturday saw a change in the weather. It is now decidedly chilly and ice seems assured. The market is good. Roses are still scarce and are easily sold. They bring good money. Carnations have taken a drop. Trade on other things is about the same.

BUSINESS INCREASING.

During the last week business has been on the increase. Society events have been numerous, calling for many decorations. Funeral work has been plentiful with plenty of stock suitable for designing. Business was greatly enlivened McKinley day. Everything was cleaned up. Roses are of good quality but not plentiful enough to supply all. Valley is moving nicely, being sold before it is ready to cut. For the last ten days sweet peas have been scarce.

NOTES.

Nothing more beautiful in the way of floral decorations for a social affair has been seen in this city than the arrangement of flowers at the dinner given by F. W. Schumacher and wife at the Columbus Club for Governor Cox. The decorations were an exact reproduction of those at the dinner given for Lord Kitchener at Shepherd's, in Cairo, Egypt, recently. The design was sent from Germany to F. C. Viereck and carried out very effectively by him. Each woman guest was presented with a large corsage bouquet of violets and lilies, and the men received boutonnières of lilies.

Ralph Knight reports bad luck with his sweet peas. The plants are looking fine but are dropping all the buds.

The Art Floral Co. reports business good, having had a big run on American Beauties last week.

Sherman Stephens says trade is good. Many telegraph orders are received.

Underwood Bros. had a big week, all the staff being busy at the designing tables.

The Ohio Floral Co. reports many orders for corsage and bouquet work.

Visitors for the week were: Fred Lembke, Chicago; I. Rosnosky, Philadelphia, and S. S. Skidelski, Philadelphia, Pa. L. S. B.

ROSES VERY SCARCE.

This week finds us amid another great scarcity of stock, particularly of roses. Carnations are coming in in quantities satisfying to all, and the quality is fine. Gardenias are still plentiful, as are also cattleyas. Lilies are rather scarce, but an abundance of fine white lilac is coming in, which takes their place to some extent.

NOTES.

At the meeting of the Pittsburg Florists' Club Tuesday night the following officers were elected: Neil McCallum, president; E. C. Reineman, vice-president; T. P. Langhans, treasurer; H. P. Joslin, secretary; W. A. Clarke, assistant secretary; executive committee, P. S. Randolph, C. H. Sample and Aug. Frishkorn. Cultural certificates were awarded to Carl Becherer for collection of plants, and Jas. Wiseman for carnations. A reception committee was appointed to prepare for the banquet to be given President-elect McCallum at the next meeting.

M. C. King, the Washington, Pa., florist who sold out to B. W. Spragg recently, has accepted a position with his former employers, the A. W. Smith Co.

Jos. Thomas dropped down from Greensburg Sunday, reporting a heavy run on funeral work, which takes his cut of carnations very quickly.

DEMAND ONLY FAIR.

While the market is apparently firm, when you analyze it it is not as bright as it seems on the surface. The demand is fair. If it was larger there would be a very positive shortage of some lines of stock. Shipping business is very good. Roses are selling up as fast as they come in. Most all of them are of a very high quality. The demand extends evenly to all colors, but the pink, being in a more limited supply than the others, clean up the fastest. The carnation supply is shortening considerably. The good first-class stock that arrives is selling nicely. There is, however, a considerable number of carnation arrivals that will not bear close inspection any too well. Most are soft and many are just ready to sleep. They have evidently been held too long before being shipped into the city. Bulbous stock of all kinds is in an over-supply. There are many short tulips that find a very poor market. The large receipt of jonquils and daffodils has forced the price of these down a little, but not far enough to cause a serious drop. Paper Whites have slackened considerably. Freesias, too, are for sale. The offerings of valley are excellent in quality. Other offerings include violets, both double and single, orchids and sweet peas. The last named are selling quickly.

NOTES.

Henry Nieporte, the amiable printer at the J. W. McCullough's Sons Co., and Miss Julia Vogt were married last Wednesday.

Wm. Gardner, manager of P. J. Olinger's greenhouses in New Castle, Ind., was in the city the middle of last week.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some very fine valley and daffodils from W. R. Miller Sons' of Covington, Ky.

Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York, called on trade in this town last Tuesday.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President;
Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First
Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Millard,
Conn., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. B. Haven, of the Haven Seed Co., Santa Ana, Calif.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The case of P. Hohenadel versus Buckbee has been non-suited.

A. H. GOODWIN and wife, of Chicago, are motoring in the Chateau district, Paris, France.

IT is reported from Holland that at a recent sale 100 each Panama and Niagara gladioli brought $1,000.

RIVES JUNCTION, MICH.—E. E. Stewart has bought a large farm at Brooklyn, Mich., and will move there about April 1.

AT Chicago strictly fancy small onion sets free from sprouts and likely to keep well into March are none too plentiful.

PELARGONIUM ZONALE, Centaurea candidissima and Lobelia cardinalis are about the shortest items in the flower seed line this year.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.—J. Chas. McCullough, of Cincinnati, O., was here January 15 after spending a week at the Santa Ynez ranch of Trimble McCullough.

TARIFF.—We understand that any action taken on the tariff at this session of congress dies with this session unless it has the signature of the president.

THE annual convention of the National Cannerns' Association will be held at Louisville, Ky., February 10-15, inclusive, with headquarters at the Seelbach hotel. Machinery Hall has been reserved for the great exhibition to be held in connection with this meeting.

CLEVELAND, O.—Seeds for the raising of vegetables of every adaptable variety will be distributed by the city's special bureau again this spring. It is planned to have every vacant lot in the city under cultivation. Prizes will be awarded at an exhibition next fall.

Advices from southern France indicate that white Roman hyacinths are just coming into flower. It is hoped that the crop will be healthy as the winter has been rather dry but the question of an abundant crop depends on the rains which usually come in March and April. Liberal rains insure a larger output of good sized bulbs. The same condition applies to Narcissus grandiflorus.

Chicago.—Prices on the Board of Trade February 5 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3.25 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.—Carl Cropp of Vaughan's Seed Store counted in another year this week.—Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is completing an extended tour of the trade, being at Baltimore, Md., February 3, and expects to attend the cannerns' convention at Louisville next week.

JACKSON, MICH.—It is reported that the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co. will occupy a big warehouse, formerly used as an automobile factory, here the coming season.

THE boys' corn club contests instituted a few years ago by Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture, furnish the subject for a circular issued recently by the Department. The importance of keeping the youth interested in farm life and the value of co-operative club work are pointed out.

WARNAAR & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, are sending out a set of colored plates of five varieties of gladiolus. Among them are Princeps, America and Baron J. Hulot. They are printed in Holland by a process entitled "Luminochrome" and the size of the plates is 6¼x12½ inches. The reproductions of the natural colorings are very good.

THE quantity of potatoes in the hands of the growers January 1, 1913, according to the Crop Reporter was about 39.8 per cent of the total quantity raised for market in 1912. A year ago the per cent of the crop still held was 33.1. The quantity in the hands of dealers on January 1, 1913, was about 9.8 per cent of the total crop.

Proposed Kansas Seed Law.

Seedsmen and professors of the Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kans., met recently and drew up a bill which may be presented, with some changes, to the legislature and which provides against the selling of seeds containing noxious weeds and the mis-labeling of seeds. The proscribed weeds, according to the proposed law are: bindweed, Johnson-grass, quack-grass, Canada thistle and sow thistle. Dodder in amounts greater than one seed per each five gram sample taken from a mixed representative bulk sample of not less than two ounces in weight is also prohibited. The label must contain the full name and address of the seller, the name and kind of seed and the common name of the noxious weeds. Weeds designated as noxious are: wild oats, chicory, Russian thistle, fox tail, crabgrass, wild buckwheat, cheat, mustard, French weed, peppergrass, shepherd's purse, yellow trefoil, wild carrot, buckhorn and broad plantain.

Section 5 provides for the dating of papered or packet seeds, which was found impracticable in the Vermont state law and discontinued.

Section 8 should be changed to include the words willingly and knowingly, reading "Whoever willingly and knowingly sells, or offers or exposes for sale," etc., instead of "Whoever sells, or offers or exposes for sale," etc.

Section 12 gives the experiment station commissioner authority in settling seed questions but in our opinion seedsmen involved in such questions should be in position and have the legal right to call in other authorities.

Provision should be made to make the farmer grower responsible for the adulterants he sells in his seeds as well as the dealer who buys them.

Seedsmen and the Parcels Post.

Some of the western seedsmen are dissatisfied with the new parcels post, as it relates to the seed business. They claim that the original intention of the special regulation regarding seeds was to give seeds a better grade rate than other merchandise. Under the new ruling the carrying charges for seeds, and this applies principally as far as western houses are concerned to short hauls, is much higher than other merchandise.

The result of these mixed systems places mail order seed houses, which are located far away from their customers, at a decided advantage over the local seedsmen; the latter, if given for seeds the privileges of the regular parcels post zone system, could make their local deliveries to much better advantage than under the regular seed rates.

NEW SINGLE ROSE IRISH FIRE FLAME.

A new departure in Roses for winter forcing. IRISH FIRE FLAME is a single rose with only five petals, and is the most striking and the best single rose Messrs. Alex. Dickson & Sons have ever raised. It flowers profusely during the winter months, producing both single flowers and sprays of from three to five buds.

The bud is an intense fiery crimson scarlet at the tip, shading at the base of petals to orange salmon; the open flower is a beautiful bright salmon. It is of strong vigorous growth, with dark green foliage, reverse of leaf deep bronze.

We have tested this rose for two years, and can confidently recommend it as a sterling novelty in Roses.

It has been awarded a Gold Medal by the National Rose Society of Great Britain, and has taken several prizes for table decoration.

Grafted stock, $35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000.

Own Root, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

Grafted plants, March delivery, Own Root in April.

GRAFTED ROSES.

We graft our Roses early on Dicksons' Irish Manetti Stock from firm flowering wood, and the result is strong vigorous plants in March and April.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink — a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

Seakale.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

When is the best time to start a bed of seakale and what is the best method?

Iowa.

J. J.

This plant is not a "kale" in the general acceptance of the word, that is, not one of the cabbage family. It is Crambe maritima, and as the specific name intimates, is a native of the coast regions where the soil is sandy and more or less impregnated with salt. The culture from root-cuttings is exactly the same as for horseradish, planting two or more pieces of root together, giving as much room as for cabbage, in rich soil, growing on for a year at least, then lift the roots, trimming off all the smaller ones for cuttings. Those as thick as the finger are the best. Place the main stems with the crown buds in a warm, dark place to force, just like rhubarb. The growth should be about 10 inches high when ready to cut and perfectly white. Seakale is boiled and served with a white sauce.

In the absence of root-cuttings, seed may be grown in the open, but these will take two years to become large enough for forcing with success. The application of salt is not an essential in its cultivation. We are told that salt has no manurial value even for asparagus. However, it does help to keep down weeds, and has a valuable mechanical action in that it attracts moisture from the atmosphere to the soil.

Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

YANKTON, S. DAK.—The Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., has acquired the collections of the late H. C. Warner, of Mitchell, including some 352 named varieties of gladioli, 347 named varieties of peonies and 136 named varieties of iris, which will be moved to the firm's establishment here in the spring.

Ohio Nurserymen's Association.

The sixth annual convention of the Ohio Nurserymen's Association was held Wednesday, January 22 at Zanesville. The attendance was good and the reports very encouraging. President W. N. Scarff made the opening address. Others on the programme were: W. F. Bohlender, "Nature of the Nursery Business;" A. R. Pickett, "Cherry Growing and Orchard Heating;" T. B. West, "Parcel Post Rates Applied to Nursery Stock." There were general discussions on hail, cyclone and fire insurance, etc. The old officers were re-elected as follows: W. N. Scarff, New Carlisle, president; W. B. Cole, Painesville, secretary; A. R. Pickett, Clyde, treasurer. The executive committee is again composed of Robert George Painesville; A. R. Dinsmore, Troy; T. B. West, Perry; W. F. Bohlender, Tippecanoe City; J. W. Gaines, Xenia.

Checking Tree-Beetle Ravages

Investigations conducted by the government in 1907 and 1910 to determine the conditions on an area of more than 1,000,000 acres in northeastern Oregon showed that the killing of a large number of trees by the mountain pine beetle had been going on in this area since 1905. In order to demonstrate the practicability of the control measures recommended by the expert on forest insects of the bureau of entomology, an area of about 90,000 acres, principally in the yellow pine, was selected in which to conduct a beetle control project. This area was located south and southeast of the advance movement of the swarms of depredating beetles in order to check it. In the spring and summer of 1912 a thorough inspection was made of the treated area. A similar untreated or check area in another forest was also examined. It was found that on the 87,950 acres of the treated area the number of trees killed by the insects had decreased from 37,178 trees to 4,698—a reduction of 32,480 trees—or more than 80 per cent, while on the untreated check area in the other forest there was no decrease and in one small isolated area the increase in the number of trees killed was 240 per cent, demonstrating the practicability of the control project.

August Doemling, Lansdowne, Pa., says
You Can Look Hard and Still Find No Faults in L. & B. Houses.

THERE is no fault to be found with your houses, even by those who have looked the hardest to find it.

"I am sure your twin 50-foot wide Pipe Frame houses that you put up for me last year are as good for my purposes as any 100 feet Iron Frame house. Your method of roof supports and bracings makes a strong, solid construction.

"The eight feet high gutter I am sure makes a better growing house and one easier to heat and ventilate."

KING GREENHOUSE EAVES

They solve the Eave problem. They make the least possible shade. And, as you can see, present no surface for icicles to form on. They have great strength with lightness. They are designed and made for the purpose and not adapted from stock structural shapes. We want to figure with you.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "S"

This Eave is intended for use on detached houses with either fixed glass or side sash. It is practically all exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse and so is ice clearing.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "L"

This Eave, although lighter than Style "S", is amply strong for all eave purposes. It obstructs little light and is ice clearing in the most severe weather. It is intended for use with fixed glass only.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Violets.

With the approach of spring the violet plants grow rapidly and quantities of runners will spring from the old stools and propagation of the runners at this time will save much time and room later in the season when the spring stock is insistently demanding space, and much better plants are procurable from cuttings taken now than from divisions in May, when the days are often warm and the plants more or less exhausted. And if the young stock is procured now the old plants can be thrown out as soon as through blooming, securing available room at once. These runners or laterals root easily at this time in a propagating bench or can be taken off with a few small roots and either potted or placed in flats and will take but little room, and as early as possible placed in a cold frame. Treated in this manner splendid stock may be obtained for planting out early, either in the field or in the houses, and with good strong stock to start with much better results are sure to be attained than by being obliged to plant small, weak stock later in the year.

As the warm days approach the houses will need to be shaded, for the sun bleaches the flowers, and a watering of liquid manure will greatly assist in maintaining the size of the blooms and also keeping up the color.

Mignonette.

The grower will always find some plants in his beds of mignonette that produce exceptionally large spikes of bloom, the plants are more vigorous in foliage or the blooms of better form, and these spikes that show special characteristics should be selected and the seed saved, and in this way the grower can procure a strain which after two or three years' selection will be far ahead of any seed he can buy.
This seed should, however, be saved before the bees and other insects are flying around and attracted to the houses, for they will cross-fertilize the flowers with undesirable strains. The seeds of mignonette do not ripen all at once, and as the pod remains open, the ripe seed falls out and is lost, so special preparation must be made to receive it. Select the spikes that are to be saved for seed and tie them to strong stakes and mark them. The flowers should then be cross-fertilized, by rubbing a camel's hair brush up and down the flowers. This should be done every bright day so as to secure a thorough pollination. To catch and hold the seed take a piece of heavy brown paper and roll it into a cone shape, and after winding a piece of cotton around the stem and stake below the flowers, tie the small end of the cone-shaped paper around the cotton, the paper spreading upward so as to catch all the seed that drops out of the seed pods. This can remain until all the seed has ripened and as the spike grows the cross-fertilization continued, but care should be taken that no water gets into the paper to wet the cotton, and the seed must be gathered before the days become so warm that insects and bees are in the houses.

Easter Lilies.

The one important crop to the plantsman at this time is the lilies for Easter, for they must be properly timed to be at their best on that date. Easter this year comes early and most growers like to see buds on their plants six weeks before that time. If the buds are not showing, the temperature will have to be increased to 70° at night. This will do the plants no harm if they have good sunlight during the day, and are given all the ventilation possible, but the ventilators should not be opened unless the sun is shining and the thermometer at least at the same degree as the night temperature, and avoid all draughts possible for the plants grown so warm are very tender. It is next to impossible to bring a lot of lilies in all together, so it is better to grow them that the slowest ones will be in on time, and move those that are more advanced into a cooler house and retard them, but this should not be done until the buds are nearly full grown.
A lily retarded when the buds are forming is very difficult to start into active growth again, but after the first buds begin to turn white the plants can be moved into a house of 50° or lower and they come on slowly and will be of better quality than those grown warmer. The plants should be all tied to a neat stake as soon as the buds form, if not already done, for the buds add considerable weight to the top of the stem and they bend over very quickly. When the buds form, if the plants are pot bound, a watering of liquid manure will increase the size and substance of the flower. It will be a continual fight against aphids from this time on and fumigation or spraying with nicotine will have to be regularly and continually practiced to bring the plants into bloom in the best condition.

Cannas.

One of the most decorative beds for summer, especially if it is of large size, is a bed of blooming cannas, for they are very showy and will bloom throughout the summer until frost cuts them down, and the varieties have been greatly improved during the last decade. To make the best showing the plants should be started early enough to have good strong stock at bedding-out time in May and June. The plants should be started by March 1 and now is the time to procure stock of varieties of which the grower is short or which he has not on hand. The clumps when removed from the winter storage should have all the old soil shaken off, the dried up stalk and roots cut away. They are then cut up into small pieces and if the stock is plentiful two or three eyes can be left to each piece, but where stock is short they are cut up to single eyes although with single eyes many weak plants will be produced. Often the clumps have started into growth and where this has happened the eyes should be sorted, those already started being planted together and the dormant eyes by themselves. Have boxes all ready and place an inch of soil on the bottom and then place the divisions on this closely together and cover with light, sifted soil and then water thoroughly. Keep the varieties separate and properly labeled, each box to contain but one variety and the name plainly marked on the box, for labels are often lost or misplaced. Place the boxes in a warm location—where hot water heating is used; they can be placed on the return pipes. In two or three weeks the plants will have made sufficient roots to be placed in 3½ or 4-inch pots, when they can be grown on in a house with a temperature of 50° to 60°. In planting cannas outside it should always be remembered that they are very tender and should not be set out until all danger of late frost is past.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—At the annual meeting of the Battle of Flowers Association the following officers were elected: Mrs. S. G. Newton, honorary president; Mrs. T. A. Coleman, president; Mrs. William Aubrey, vice-president; Mrs. Wm. A. Herff, secretary. The "battle of flowers" will be held April 25 this year.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—Bert Johnson was re-elected president of the Arkansas Horticultural Society at the meeting held here recently. This is the first time in the history of the organization that the president has been chosen to succeed himself. At this meeting the sweet potato growers of the state organized a society to educate the people of the North to the value of the Southern sweet potato. Officers of the new society are G. C. Nordin, Russellville, president; E. F. Waldrip, Nashville, vice-president; G. C. Watkins, Fort Smith, secretary-treasurer.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hartman-Felsenehal Wedding Decoration.

W. J. Smyth, Chicago, had the decoration for the Hartman and Felsenehal wedding at the Blackstone hotel on February 5. The ceremony took place in a summer house arranged with smilax and pink roses. The bridal path was lined with white pedestals and vases of pink roses with garlands of smilax and pink roses connecting each pedestal. The bride carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and white orchids and the bridesmaids an arm-basket of pink sweet peas neatly arranged with pink ribbon. John Mangel had the table decorations which consisted of prettily arranged baskets of Killarney roses, pink tulips, freesia and pussy willows. String smilax was also used in the table decorations and a mass of palms occupied the center of the room.

Publicity in Philadelphia.

The newly formed Florists' Association of Philadelphia, Pa., has arranged for a meeting on Thursday evening, February 20, to be held in the Florists' club room, of all the interests connected with the trade that find their market in that city. The object of this coming together is to find ways and means to "boost" the business in all its various branches. It is hoped to see at this meeting not only the retail and the wholesale florists and the growers of cut flowers as well as the nurseymen, but the kindred interests, the florists' supply dealers, the greenhouse builders, the potters and others.

Every man in business is interested in the pushing of his particular venture and is more or less successful according to his ability. All sorts of advertising schemes, many of them quite expensive, are used to attract trade. It has been felt for a long time by many men already interested in the production of cut flowers, that a publicity campaign carried on intelligently by men skilled in the business would bring to the attention of the people, facts about flowers and plants that would awaken a new interest and create a demand that would give an added impetus to the business.

It is therefore proposed to establish in Philadelphia a publicity bureau that shall be one not only in name but, backed by the enthusiasm and hearty support of all the trade, shall become a live and active organization for the dissemination of horticultural knowledge, correctly informing the people how plants should be cared for and of the many uses for cut flowers. They will be told how the industry has grown and how by economical methods the cost of producing flowers has been greatly reduced. Flowers are to be proved no longer a luxury, but a necessity, and they will now be offered at prices in the different grades to suit all purses.

The head of this bureau is to be a trained newspaper man who will take the matter furnished him by the various committees and dress it up so that it will be accepted as news by the papers and go into the reading columns without expense other than the cost of its preparation. There are one hundred and one ways, and then some, in which the people may be approached to get them interested in the business, all of which can be worked out by this bureau with the support of the trade. It will not interfere with individual initiative but will create a demand that the live dealer will be quick to take advantage of and turn to his own profit. This, in brief, is the object of the meeting. Let everybody come. If all cannot pull they can fall in behind and push. Let Philadelphia put her best foot forward and maintain her place in the van of movements for the betterments of the business.

ROBT. KIFT.

TACOMA, WASH.—The majority of the old officers were re-elected at the annual meeting of the Tacoma Dahlia Society. The officers for the ensuing year are: W. H. Reed, president; Mrs. Belle Freeman, first vice-president; Mrs. W. S. Cutler, second vice-president; Mrs. W. D. C. Spike, secretary; Geo. M. Lee, treasurer. For the other three members of the executive committee President Reed appointed James R. Thompson, Mrs. O. E. Spooner, and F. Graham.

Third International Flower Show.

NEW GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, NEW YORK.

One of the few really grand buildings in New York is the new Grand Central Palace, Forty-sixth street and Lexington avenue, close to the magnificent and newly opened Grand Central Station of the New York Central Railroad, and easily and quickly reached from any part of the city. The building is notable for the immense amount of floor space it provides, and for the many conveniences presented in its general arrangement, such as are not approached by any other public building in the city. In this building will be housed the Third International Flower Show, to open Saturday, April 5 and continue until Saturday evening, April 12.

The main floor, mezzanine floor and floor above have been engaged at an expense in the neighborhood of $12,000, and the premiums to be offered will in all probability exceed twice that amount in value—an undertaking which in magnificence has never before been attempted in the history of horticulture in America.

Entering the building by the main entrance one is confronted by the grand staircase, large enough to accommodate a big crowd of people at one time; and at the sides are the ticket offices, each presenting an easy approach. The staircase, owing to its design and surroundings, permits of lavish floral decoration, and something wonderful in this direction is in store for the public. From the staircase one emerges into the main hall, a triumph in point of architecture. Massive stone columns with Corinthian capitals, support the floor above, and the ceiling is most ornamental. A stone parapet surmounted by large vases gives prominence to the mezzanine floor, from which a splendid view of the main floor is obtained. The main floor is about 185x275 feet altogether, including a cafe and restaurant, which occupies a space about 25x122 feet. Between the columns on the main floor, running transversely, are a series of "halls" each about 40 feet wide, but these halls will not be reckoned with separately in the layout of the show, and the columns will lend themselves very nicely in the arrangement of exhibits. The artificial lighting arrangements are superb—not a gloomy spot anywhere.

All who have visited these sections of the building express themselves as highly pleased with them as being excellently adapted to flower show requirements. The freight elevators are of more than ordinarily large capacity, as may be imagined when it is stated that the largest motor trucks were placed on the main floor at the recent automobile show without difficulty. The cafe and restaurant are first-class in every respect and the service of the finest, at moderate prices. The telegraph and telephone service, too, is most ample.

J. H. PEPPER,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mayor Fitzgerald will ask the city council to appropriate money for plans and estimates for a public horticultural building to cost $100,000 for the Fenway.

Local Grown Seed and Local Conditions.

Paper read by W. W. Tracy, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at Boston, Mass., February 8, 1913.

In December of 1907 I had the honor of addressing your society, and I talked at that time about the great number of varietal names of cultivated vegetables, as compared with the comparatively limited range of distinct varietal differences which the names really stood for, and of the great importance to profitable cultivation of the use of seed, each one of which was uniformly of the exact varietal character desired. During the five years since that talk I have had opportunity to see hundreds of cultures of vegetables and to learn of the comparatively greater satisfaction and profit that comes from the use of seed which was not only uniform, but of the exact character best adapted to each particular culture and economic use, and because of this experience I am very glad of the opportunity to talk to you today about the adaptation of strains of cultivated vegetables to local conditions and special requirements.

In the case of most cultivated plants, and particularly those most generally used as culinary vegetables, there are indefinite and indescribable differences in stocks or strains of plants called by the same varietal name through which they are more or less perfectly adapted to local conditions of soil and climate, and still more so to distinct market conditions or culinary uses. The basic purpose of all horticulture is the direction and control of the character of vegetable growth rather than a mean increase in its value. Cultivated fields do not generally carry a greater burden of vegetation than the wild forest or prairie but under cultivators the productive energy of soil and sun is directed towards the development of the particular kind of plant which is most desirable. In the case of most fruits this can be easily secured by multiplications of vegetative parts of the original plant, but as most garden vegetables are propagated by seed, uniformity of crop can only be secured through the use of seed, every grain of which, because of hereditary tendency, will under cultivation develop into a plant of the desired varietal form, well suited to some specific condition and use. Such varietal character of seeds is seldom indicated by any observable difference in the seed itself, but are like those between two apples from the same tree, which are indistinguishable by the eye or the scales, but differ most materially in flavor or keeping quality, or like that between two turnips or two tomatoes from the same plants, which may be so alike that they cannot be distinguished by eye or scales, and yet differ most materially in palatability. In a like way seeds produced by plants of the same heredity, but grown under different climatic or soil conditions, will often carry a materially different tendency and potentiality of development, and even in environment as identical in character as it is possible to secure will develop into plants showing very distinct varietal differences.

Different plants vary greatly as to the degree and in the way they show such inherited tendencies. We all know in the case of corn the growing for even a single generation in a more northern climate or during an exceptionally cold season will result in the shortening of the time it will require for plants from such seed to develop from germination to ripened grain, and that the corn plant will, through its seed, adjust subsequent generations to the climatic conditions where it is grown. On the other hand, I have known a five-acre field in Michigan to be planted in equal parts with two lots of watermelon seed, both originally of the same stock, but one of them grown for the five preceding seasons within one hundred miles of the Gulf of Mexico, and the other for the same number of generations in Michigan, with the agreement that if the grower could detect any material difference in the earliness of maturity of the lot grown from the Michigan seed he was to have a bonus of $100. The outcome was one of the finest and most evenly ripening field of melons I ever saw, and the grower made no claim for the bonus. I have had opportunity to observe a great many similar comparisons of crops from northern and southern grown seed of the same varieties of cucurbitaceous plants without being able to detect any differences in time of maturity, but have known of instances where there was clearly a material difference in other qualities that seemed to have resulted from environmental conditions of the seed producing plants, and the most successful southern melon growers are careful to use only southern grown seed.

I might take up the whole afternoon in discussing the adaptation of plants through their seed environmental conditions, and such adaptation is not limited to cultivated plants. I well remember an experience of fifty years ago, when I found growing in the open cracks in limestone ledges in Northern New York very pretty little geranium-like plants which seemed quite different from any I remembered ever having seen before, but after a careful botanical examination I could find no difference except much smaller size and a deeper, brighter color of the flower between the new plant I had discovered and the common wild geranium, or cranesbill Geranium maculatum, which grew everywhere in Michigan. I saved and took home some of the seed from my dainty little plants and grew it for three generations in Michigan, where it became the comparatively coarse and unattractive wild geranium.

Again, I would refer to scenes of similar experiences, all showing that at least some of both wild and cultivated plants are capable of, within a few generations, readjusting themselves to changed conditions and environment. A careful observer cannot have failed to notice the material difference often seen in the character of plants of the same species, and even of the same garden variety when grown on different soils and exposures, and that one plant will reach its most attractive and useful development where another, possibly of the same species, and even supposedly of the same variety, will develop but poorly. I think it needs no further discussion to show that, in order to secure the most satisfactory results in quantity and form, we must plant seed which is not only uniformly of the varietal forms which will be most satisfactory, but which has been so grown as to be the most perfectly adapted to that particular climate and soil, and for the particular use for which it was planted.

We think that this is not universally practiced by even our most careful planters. Growers from Maine to Florida depend upon California for their lettuce seed. The Boston grower who forces a crop in midwinter uses seed grown in the same California fields as that used by a Norfolk or Florida planter for an outdoor crop. If the variety and the stock was the best possible for use in one set of conditions, it can hardly be the best possible for the other. We have found that by growing lettuce seed under glass we were enabled to select and breed from plants which did much better inside than otherwise equally good and carefully selected plants grown in the open. We think that the success of such growers as the Hettinger Brothers of your city and Dell Titus of Irondequoit, N. Y., is very largely due to their use of strains of seed especially adapted to their local conditions and cultural practice, and that an interchange of seed would mean comparative failure to both.

The first success of the melon growers at Rocky Ford was very largely due to the use of carefully selected and local grown seed especially adapted to their location, cultural methods, and last but not least, shipping requirements. Nearly twenty years ago I visited a melon field in Rocky Ford with Col. Swink, the father of the melon industry in that section, and asked him to select for me ideal specimens, which he did, taking great care to select fruits very uniformly of a certain distinct character. Then a little later, when he very carefully selected some fruits to take home to eat, I called his attention to how different these were from the first selection, and he said the first fruit was the best for shipping and good enough to sell, but not such as he wanted for his own table. The Montreal melon is very different in character and is grown and handled very differently, but the growers, like those of Rocky Ford, use local grown seed carefully tried and selected so as to secure the best possible adaptation to local conditions and requirements. No two farms are exactly alike in climate and productive energies, no two men will follow identical cultural methods, and the varietal character of a vegetable which will give the best satisfaction and profit on one farm and for one market will not be as satisfactory in another, so that the best possible results can only come from the use of seed, at least of those vegetables upon which your reputation and profit chiefly depends, and from which it is possible for you to grow a superlative quality. How can such seed be secured?

I have had an intimate connection with American seedsmen for over thirty years, and I believe them to be quite as honorable and considerate of their customers' needs as any class of merchants, but they are in business for the sake of personal profit rather than from altruistic motives, and cannot be expected to push the sale of, or to long continue to offer, varieties or special stocks which afford them little or no profit. Often a certain variety can be depended upon to give a good yield of seed in one location, but rarely more than a very light crop in another, although what you do get is apt (not certain) to yield large crop of better quality than that of plants from seed of the large crop. Can you expect the seedsman to push the sale or long continue to offer the stock which affords him no profit? I have known of many instances where a variety or special stock materially better than that generally used has never come into the general planter's hands and has dropped out of cultivation because the seedsmen could not handle it with profit. Again, could a seedsman be expected to furnish distinct stocks of common sorts so grown as to be especially adapted to the conditions and wants of each of thousands of customers, many of those using only one ounce or two of seed? One has no right to criticize common practice without suggestion for betterment, and so I make bold even here in Horticultural Hall, and before this society made up of the wisest and most skillful horticulturists in the United States, to make the following suggestion for the securing of strains of seed, of the vegetables of which the quality is the greatest importance to you, that will give the greatest satisfaction and profit.

First, form a very definite, clear and exact conception of the exact varietal form you want, and that you may do this intelligently it is advantageous, almost a necessity, to make or at least see and carefully study growing tests made in climatic soil and cultural conditions that you can reproduce as closely as possible in your own cultures, of as many varieties and stocks of the vegetables you are specially interested in as possible. Such trials should include as many as practical of the special stocks and so-called novelties of seedsmen. It is probable that such a test will demonstrate that most of the claimed superlatives are useless to you, but if one lot does better than anything you have previously used, and you are thus guided and helped to the developing of a stock which is the best possible for your conditions, this discovery will be worth more than your trials for a dozen years would cost. When you are sure as to the exact varietal form which will be most satisfactory and profitable, I think it is very desirable, if not absolutely essential, that a description of it be written out and, if possible, illustrated by drawings or photographs and frequently referred to in order to avoid the indefiniteness and change in conception of the exact form selected, which is the root of much of the variability so common in most stocks.

The second is to select a score or more plants, each of which comes as near to this ideal as possible, avoiding the temptation to include even superlative plants that differ in any way from the recorded ideal sought for. When the habit of growth is such as to make it practical to do this, each of these selected plants should be screened so as to insure its self-fertilization, and in any case, the seed of each of those, even of those which are so near alike as to be indistinguishable, should be saved separately.

but human control of conditions is imperfect, and it is quite possible that our selected foundation plant did carry a hidden variant which may crop out in some future generations and reveal the want of uniformity. In which case we simply have to try again, and in any case it is wise to start a new selection from our very first full seed crop in order to guard against the effect of the inevitable crossing in future generations.

I do not think it would be profitable or advantageous for one to attempt to grow all the various seed he uses, but I do think that very often it would be

HYDRANGEA—WELL GROWN PLANT.

The third step is to make a growing test of a generous sample of each lot of seed under uniform conditions of soil and culture. As the plants develop they should be carefully studied and the lot in which the plants are most evenly like our ideal of the sort should be selected, resisting the temptation to take lots which may contain superlative plants, but also many inferior ones, or those which differ in any particular from our described ideal. In order to guard against a concealed variant, and the mishaps to which all such selections are subject, it is wise to select one or more second choice or substitute plants.

The fourth step is to plant the reserved seed of the plant or plants which our trial has proved to be the most uniformly like our ideal, each as completely separated and protected from the chance of contamination through the pollen from other plants as it is possible to secure and carefully save the seed so grown as foundation stock to be planted in an isolated block from the product of which we may develop any desired quantities of stock seed. If our selection was as good as our sample trials indicated, and we have in it a plant of the exact form desired, which did not carry a hidden tendency to variations, which was recessive and unexpected in our test samples, but developed in later generations, our work is accomplished, an advantage for a grower, or better yet, for a united group of growers, to grow what seed they need of one or more of the crops which are adapted to their location, and to which they pay special attention, and I am certain that if the work is wisely and carefully done along the lines suggested it would give them seed which, because of its adaptation to their conditions, would give them crops better in quality and quantity than it would be possible to produce from seed grown elsewhere.

New England Dahlia Society.

The seventh annual meeting of the New England Dahlia Society was called to order by the president, J. K. Alexander, at 2.30 p. m., at Horticultural Hall, Boston, January 29. After the reading and adoption of the minutes of the last meeting the president announced that we would proceed to the election of officers for the year 1913. John K. Alexander of East Bridgewater, Mass., was nominated and unanimously reelected to a third term as president, W. C. Brady of Wollaston, Mass., was reelected vice-president; J. Herbert Alexander of East Bridgewater, Mass., secretary, and George L. Stillman of Westery, R. I., treasurer. The executive committee selection was as follows: Edgar W. Ela, Woburn, Mass., J. H. Flint, Salem, Mass., C. N. Bacon, Holliston, Mass., L. B. R. Briggs, Cambridge, Mass., and Parker A. Mansfield, Malden, Mass.

Following the election of officers President Alexander called upon Maurice Fuld, representing the Henry F. Mitchell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who gave an exceedingly interesting address on the progress and development of the society, and made some valuable suggestions. The secretary read a communication from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, inviting the New England Dahlia Society to cooperate with them and hold their annual dahlia exhibition in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's annual dahlia show. The matter was then discussed and the president appointed a committee, consisting of Edgar W. Ela, Maurice Fuld, and George L. Stillman, to interview the Horticultural Society in regard to the matter. The committee retired and after an interview with William P. Rich, secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, they returned, reporting that the societies would hold their shows in conjunction but that each society would use its own exhibition rules and regulations, retain its own name and offer its own prizes. The New England Dahlia Society then voted to hold its annual Dahlia exhibition September 12-14, and to make it the largest dahlia exhibition ever held in this country. After numerous suggestions for the good of the society the meeting was adjourned.

We ought to have a full thousand members before the 1913 show is held. Twenty-eight states, including Porto Rico, and five foreign countries are already represented on our list. The society issues quarterly a "Dahlia News," which deals with all phases of dahlia life, a paper of great value to lovers of the flower.

J. HERBERT ALEXANDER, Sec'y.

HARBOR SPRINGS, MICH.—The Babcock Floral Co. has completed two new greenhouses, one 25x100 and the other 10x100 feet, besides extending the old house to 100 feet in length. This gives the firm 5,500 square feet of glass. An up-to-date hot water heating system has been installed.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—E. C. Burlingame, president of the Washington State Horticultural Association, has announced the appointment of the following as members of the legislative committee: E. F. Benson, Tacoma, chairman; H. M. Gilbert, North Yakima; W. P. Sawyer, Wapato; H. W. Otis, Peshastin; Michael Horan, Wenatchee.

Bedding Plants.

Active work should now be the order in all lines of bedding plants. To be sure of having a good stock on hand for planting out at the proper time it is of the utmost importance that the propagation be followed up closely from this time. Where large quantities of this class of plants are needed the lack of propagating space is sometimes a serious problem and it becomes necessary to work the stock fast. This can only be done by potting up the cuttings as quickly as they have formed roots, and that is just what these plants need. They push forward into active growth much faster when taken from the sand with roots one-half inch long than if allowed to remain long enough for the roots to become long and wiry.

Another very important item essential to the successful culture of bedding plants is a good live soil. A compost, comprising one part of thoroughly rotted manure to four parts of light soil, with a little sand added, is best suited for them. Leaf mold, when it can be obtained, is also good for mixing with the soil, but it should be thoroughly decayed. It is essential that the soil be brought inside long enough ahead to be well dried and warmed through before it is used. To be able to obtain the required number of cuttings of some plants it sometimes becomes necessary to encourage the stock plants a little. If through having been held in the pots a long time any have become hard the wisest course to take with such plants is to take what cuttings are fresh and fit, then treat the stock plants to either a re-potting or a top dressing of fresh soil to start them into active growth again to produce the wood for the cuttings.

The geranium being the leading bedding plant, I take it as the first subject on the list with the object in view of producing a first-class plant in bloom ready for sale by May 10 or later. A large majority of the geraniums growing are from cuttings rooted last September and October, and should now be in 3-inch pots. If the work of putting them from 2¼-inch to 3-inch receptacles has not been attended to up to this time it should be done without further delay. The treatment we give our main batch of geraniums is to put in the cuttings during September and October. They are then generally rooted and ready for potting by the time some of the chrysanthemums are out of the way. We then pot them into 2¼-inch pots and water them well at the time of potting, after which they are held a little to the dry side and the temperature of the house held around 50 degrees at night with an advance of 4 degrees in cloudy weather. On bright days we control the temperature by means of ventilation, being careful never to allow the house to become close or stuffy or any cold draught to strike the plants.

These plants are then potted into 3-inch pots sometimes between January 20 and February 10. They very soon get into active growth and are watered as they need it with the same cool temperature maintained as before mentioned. They are held in these pots until about March 8, when they are potted into 4-inch pots, which is their flowering size. The soil is increased in richness with each stage of development, the first potting being a pure soil without any manure in it, beyond a little that was put in at the time of making the compost heap a year before. When they are shifted into the 3-inch size in January a little extra well-rotted manure can be added. Then at the time of potting into the 4-inch size in March a sprinkling of bonemeal can be mixed in. The watchword at all times in the culture of the geranium should be to avoid anything that has a tendency to promote a soft growth and every encouragement given them to make a sturdy dwarf habit.

As soon as the plants get well rooted after shifting into the 3-inch pots and the growth is strong enough that it can be done without distressing the plant too much, a cutting can be taken from them; but in doing this consideration should be given to the after effect and good judgment used while doing the cutting, it being very poor policy to cut a plant away so that there is little left of it. They take too long to recover from this to catch up in time to make a good plant in bloom by May 15. To keep the plants dwarf and sturdy pinch out the tips of the growth shoots and remove all flower buds as they appear. The pinching of the shoots should be discontinued early in March and the removal of the buds about April 1. By following this up there will be no danger of the plants not having sufficient blooms on when the selling time comes. Geraniums are not subject very much to attacks from insects, but they will suffer a great deal from overcrowding, losing their lower leaves and thus making the plants look stalky. Care should be taken at all times to avoid this, especially after they get into the 4-inch pots, because when in active growth in the spring they will get away from you in two or three days if not watched.

Alternanthera growers follow different methods of carrying these plants over winter. Some lift the old plants in the fall, trim them back, pot into 3-inch pots and propagate fresh stock in the spring. If this method has been followed it is now time to think about getting the cuttings into the propagating bed. Alternantheras need a high temperature to keep them moving, and to get the stock plants to make a good supply of cuttings it will therefore be necessary to give them a light, warm place. A temperature of 70 degrees or more is none too much. The same thing applies to their propagation. With a strong bottom heat and a moist sand they will root readily in a short time. Another method followed is to lift the old plants in the fall, bunch them together in pots or flats, then divide them in spring and either pot them up or plant them out in a hotbed. It is yet too soon for hotbeds, so plants intended for this method should remain as they are for four or five weeks yet, unless they are not keeping well. Then they should be cleaned up and given a warmer place. The most up-to-date culture of alternantheras is the method followed by the gardeners at the leading cemeteries where large numbers of these plants are used. They propagate them in July and August, pot into 2-inch pots, carry over winter until the middle of March, then shake out, re-pot with fresh soil into 2, 2½ or 2½-inch receptacles, and plunge the pots to the rim in a hotbed. The principal points to consider in growing alternanthera is to use a light sandy soil, give them a high temperature, keep them on the dry side during the winter, and water freely when in active growth in the spring.

The many different kinds of soft wooded plants for bedding, such as ageratum, heliotrope, petunias, salvias, abutilons, lobelia, sweet alyssum, etc., should all be propagated and worked along now with the main object in view of having a growing young plant for planting out when the time comes, and not one that is hard and woody. Antirrhinum (snap-dragon), pilea, cuphea, lantana, achyranthus and the coleus should also not be overlooked; propagated now, they will need all the time to grow into first-class shape.

Cannas should be started now. Clean all the rubbish from the roots and remove any that are decayed, then cut the roots up into pieces of two and three good, strong eyes. Choose a propagating bench with bottom heat and fill in with sand, then run the canna roots in close. Water only enough to settle the sand around them. Care must be taken not to get the sand too wet before fresh roots are made. As quickly as they have started enough they should be taken out and potted into 3½ or 4-inch pots—according to the size of the bulbs—and given a warm place to grow in. Seed of the various annuals needed should be sown now. Lobelias, verbenias, centaureas, bellis and all of this class of stock ought to be under way by this time. A fine light, sandy soil, firmly pressed in shallow flats, should be used. Care must be taken in the watering, so that they do not dry out too much, using the same judgment that the soil does not get too wet. This, together with care that the seed is not sown too deep, are the essential points to get a good stand of the seedlings. Pansies that were sown four weeks ago will be ready for transplanting in a few days. They must be attended to right away to guard against their becoming drawn and spindling.

The Florist and His Market.

Discussion of paper read by Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, February 4, 1913.

Any one who has the idea that the Philadelphia Florists' Club is going into a decline should have been present at the February meeting, when the capacity of the club's large room was taxed to accommodate the two hundred or more who had gathered to hear Wallace R. Pierson's paper on "The Florist and His Market." Mr. Pierson is one of the coming men of affairs in the business of this country and anything from him is always found full of inphia to deliver it. The fact that stock was being produced faster than it was sold and then not to advantage was certainly a coming problem, said Mr. Craig. It had been partially solved in New York city by an energetic man, through the aid of the department stores, where immense quantities of the surplus had been handled at satisfactory prices. He cited Bloomingdale's department store, where the stock carried was equal to that of any of the retail stores and where prices were maintained. This was in charge of — Burnham who on account of his business ability had built up the business formation. He is always on the job, keeps himself well informed, and in consequence is rapidly becoming a national figure in horticultural circles. His paper was very comprehensive, the main thought being that we are approaching a crisis in the business on account of the growing or producing part of the business going ahead at a much faster pace than the retail trade, on which depends the final distribution to the people. In other words, that the supply is greater than the demand, and further that the fault, for the most part, lies with the retail florists, who lack aggressiveness. Mr. Pierson intimated that if these gentlemen did not get a "hustle on" their market was likely soon to have to stand a competition from the producers, who would place their flowers before the people in a way that would insure their sale at all times at popular prices. As an alternative, he proposed that all hands get together and start a campaign of publicity that would spread the love for flowers, and by its persistency and the information given out of the many uses for flowers and their prices, at all seasons of the year, would disabuse the mind of the public that flowers are a luxury and bring them into much more general use.

Robert Craig, in his usual affable manner, complimented Mr. Pierson on the great thought he had given the subject, and reminded the club of how much was due such a busy man as Mr. Pierson, who had not only prepared the paper but had journeyed to Philadeluntil eight delivery wagons were assigned to this department. In Philadelphia nothing like this had been attempted, department store stock offered being for the most part job lots bought up to be sold at bargain prices. Such business, he claimed, did not hurt the retail florist any more than Childs' lunch houses would interfere with the business of first-class restaurants. He spoke of other trades getting together and limiting production, but with the flower business he did not think this feasible. Perhaps the principal growers might agree to devote a certain amount of their space to tomatoes and other vegetables and cut down production in this way. He was in favor of the publicity movement and thought, as did Mr. Pierson, that it was a matter for the S. A. F. to take hold of. He approved of exhibitions and liberal payments to exhibitors but without prizes, as the humiliating thought of being second, or third, kept many good men out. Showing the public what could be done with plants and flowers in a decorative way was, he thought, very educational. He hoped to see many examples of this work at the coming International Flower Show.

Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists was glad to be present. He wanted to hear Mr. Pierson's paper and also to tell Philadelphia about the great coming exhibition. He was glad to find such interest being taken here, and urged all who were in the habit of attending the trade exhibits to be sure and engage space, as it was going rapidly. More than $10,000 worth had been engaged up to this time. The souvenir programme had sold $3,700 worth of its advertising space in its pages. In referring to the decorative features he said several prominent florists had agreed to make displays, giving examples of their work on an elaborate scale. Mr. Young also spoke of the great work that was being done at Minneapolis by Theodore Wirth, the society's energetic vice-president.

Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was introduced by the president as being active every day of his life in advancing the florists' affairs. Mr. Totty was full of the third International Flower Show, which he declared would be the greatest the world had ever seen. He had found the private growers in this neighborhood very much alive to the situation and in consequence there would be some great exhibits. He referred to the advertising of the show, which he said was in good hands. Last fall's show had had an attendance of 130,000. Of course that was free, but it showed the interest the people were taking in flower shows. He said that the New York Herald was getting out a special section to advertise the show that would not cost the florists anything. Twenty-eight local bodies were all working for the success of the show and it could not help being a success. Exhibits were expected from Europe, which if they carried well, would be an important feature of the exhibition.

M. C. Ebel of the Aphine Mfg. Co., Madison, N. J., pulled hard for the publicity idea. He spoke of the great work done by the cement and other industries which maintain publicity bureaus always on the alert for good, and ready to offset anything of a negative tendency to their interests. He believed that work in a national way by a competent man who was well paid for his services would produce great results. Mr. Pierson's publicity feature was taken by Adolph Farenwald as his text and the flower show as the best way to reach the public. The flowers were best brought before them in this way and they saw them at their best. The great show in New York will give a grand opportunity to the public to see the great strides that are being made. You could write whole pages to the people and they would soon forget it, but with the flowers before them it will make a lasting impression, said Mr. Farenwald. He spoke of a prize for a vase of 75 roses, the money for which is being raised in this city. It was going to be well worth working for and should bring out such a display of this flower as has never been seen before. He urged all the Philadelphia growers to get a move on and beat New York to it.

Mr. Pierson here spoke of the great benefits likely to accrue to the grower from the parcel post. People like to get flowers from the grower and as the grower and consumer could easily get together in this way it opened a new field that many growers ought to be prepared to take advantage of. Charles Fox was much pleased with the tone of Mr. Pierson's paper, particularly the get together movement for publicity. He had no time for this talk of the poor grower, as this was all nonsense. There was more glass going up every day and this did not show adversity. It was time for all to get together. What he had spent for publicity, and it was considerable, he felt had paid him, and what could be gotten into the newspapers without cost would, he felt, surely be of great benefit to the trade in general. Robert Kift thought Mr. Pierson's view a little pessimistic, as much new glass was going up presumably from profits of that now in operation. It was almost impossible for the retail men to increase their sales to keep up with the production of the growers with their constantly added greenhouses.

There was a fine exhibition of roses and carnations. The Mrs. Charles Russell rose, The Robert Scott Co.'s new brilliant Killarney, is the latest and best deep pink sport of this great variety. As seen here it was superb. Irish Fire Flame looked well. A new white carnation, Matchless, from the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., is a fine thing. Eureka, Salmon Queen and Enchantress Supreme from Dailledouze Brothers, Brooklyn, N. Y., were all fine carnations. Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. J., staged their carnation Wm. Eccles. Northport, from J. D. Cockroft, Northport, N. Y., made a fine show. The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., sent two fine seedling carnations. J. N. Eisser, Columbia, N. C., exhibited, through Edw. Reid, a fine pink carnation like Enchantress. It was a pleasure to see such fine stock and the exhibition was much enjoyed by everybody there.

WITH THE GROWERS

F. Dorner & Sons Co., LaFayette, Ind.

No florist ever visits F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., without being well paid for his time. The firm invited the Indiana State Florists' Association to visit their place February 4. About 30 accepted the invitation, and a more satisfied lot of florists never visited a florist's establishment. We all know that for a number of years this firm has been headquarters for new and improved carnations, and judging by what we saw there are better things in store for us than we could have dreamed of.

Our attention was first called to a red seedling named Champion. This variety seems to be so much in advance of all other red sorts now in commerce that there is little comparison. It is a large bloom, calyx perfect, color ideal; extra long stem that stands erect anywhere. Theo. Dorner informed the writer that it was early and fully as free as White Wonder. No. 138 is certainly a phenomenal variety. A light shade of pink hard to describe as I have never seen another carnation the same shade, and without question it has the largest blooms in commerce—some flowers five inches in diameter, the smallest 3½. Perhaps this is the most striking variety among all this firm's seedlings. If this mammoth kind has keeping and productive qualities it will be the greatest acquisition in a carnation that has been given us in many years.

However, the variety that most took my fancy among the lot was No. 271. This is a light pink, something on the order of Gloriosa, and, I think, between the shade of the latter and Pink Delight. It is much larger than either of those varieties and had the appearance of traveling 2,000 miles in first class condition. I saw this sort at this place last year and was much impressed with it then and have not changed my mind in regard to it now. Many other good things were noted here but the three mentioned above were truly wonderful in the eyes of the visiting florists.

There were many hundred varieties of seedlings and many worthy of comment. However, I will mention but few briefly that seem most striking. No. 251 is a rose pink of wonderful texture and early. No. 5 a beautiful large bloom, the same color as Rosette, but Mr. Dorner informed us it was too late to be profitable. No. 148 is a beautiful salmon pink with 4-inch blooms. No. 150 a very charming color of the Lawson shade. No. 189 is a dark pink, larger than Rosette. No. 254 is a large bright red, extra strong stem.

Of the 1911 seedlings some very promising sorts were noticed, but it is hard to judge the merits of a variety when only a few plants are seen. We noticed a salmon pink sprout from Gloriosa which should prove acceptable to the trade. We measured some of the seedlings here that had stems fully three feet long. Of the standard varieties White Wonder and Gloriosa were grown in the largest quantities. Mr. Dorner informed us that the demand for these two sorts this year exceeded their expectations.

The Dorners are not confining their energies to seedling carnations, but are experimenting somewhat with roses. A few plants of a seedling red rose was noted. It is of the most intense crimson and delightfully sweet. After a few hours spent in the greenhouses the meeting of the society was held in the spacious packing room, where the regular business was transacted. After the adjournment of the meeting we were all escorted to carriages and conveyed to the LaFayette club for dinner. A vote of thanks was tendered to the Dorners for their kind treatment and I feel sure that the whole crowd have nothing but the most pleasant recollections of their visit to LaFayette and the establishment of F. Dorner & Sons Co.

FUNERAL WORK LARGE.

February was ushered in with trade conditions about the same as prevailed in January. This last month the usual after holiday lull has been on but the period has been marked for the unusual amount of funeral work, which has compensated largely for the light counter sales. Growers and storemen alike have no complaint, their report in general being "satisfactory," and in view of the unprecedented sales during the late holidays and the normal conditions prevailing in trade circles all are looking forward to the Easter trade with serene confidence. Rose stock this week was plentiful in the second and lower grades, but as usual first-class stock was scarce, resulting in high prices all along the line. Lilies are good but scarce, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips are fair and not overplentiful, freesias the best and most abundant of the bulbous stock. Cattleyas and phalaenopsis are excellent and move well. Violets are plentiful and greens sufficient for demand.

The entire stock of what was one time the F. Ludemann Nursery, later purchased by H. Kempf and known as the Pacific Nursery, covering 70 acres of evergreens, ornamental and flowering shrubs, deciduous trees, dracaenas and more than 80,000 roses, has been bought by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., who have a large force lifting and removing the stock to their Beresford place. Much of it is being shipped to various points on the coast and to places where they have landscape work in progress. A large motor truck has been purchased to expedite the work.

A feature of the Pelleano & Rossi store last week was a vase of superb American Beauty roses on 8-foot stems, both flowers and foliage being excellent. This fine stock was sent in by Henry Maier of the Hillsborough Nurseries, who is also sending in a supply of Boston and Elegantiissima ferns that are second to none.

Domoto Bros. are sending in a limited stock of the new rose Prima Donna. Next to American Beauty this variety brings the best price on the market and is quickly bought up. Prima Donna has proved all that was claimed for it.

Jos. Jacques has returned from a honeymoon spent in Southern California. His bride is a charming young lady of Redding, Calif. A host of friends extend their best wishes.

E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, is looking over some choice land in the interior valleys.

D. Cameron of F. Sanders & Sons, St. Albans, Eng., is making a tour of this state.

Ed. Schwerin is still sending in quantities of first-class lily of the valley.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Twenty-two of us started January 30 for Christiana, Pa., and the establishment of M. J. Brinton, reaching his place 11:15. Mr. Brinton is the successor of a very worthy sire who knew how to and did grow a variety of plants and flowers to perfection. The senior Mr. Brinton is living on the original homestead and takes an active interest in the work. The miscellaneous stock is all good and kept in better condition than any such stock the writer ever saw. All manner of Easter plants are working themselves into shape and a lot of general spring plants are following along to fill the vacant spots that will be left by Easter.

The carnation range here is almost ideal and the Gloriosa variety altogether so, certainly the best in this part of the country. A bed of O. P. Bassett was without any imperfection and if this bed could be duplicated everywhere, all other reds would be relegated to the rubbish heaps. Mrs. Brinton surprised us with a very fine lunch and that it was fully appreciated goes without saying. She made an ideal hostess and we all united in extending her a hearty vote of thanks.

Coming back toward Lancaster our first stop was made at — Ranck's of Vintage, where the unusual spectacle of the main crop of flowers having been cut for the holidays was seen. Every other grower in this section has his main crop just coming on. Here among the carnations we saw an immense large pink sport of Gloriosa. The second stop was made at Walter Denlingers, where a fine batch of Alma Ward carnations were the special feature. It might be well to say that all of the growers visited on this trip had uniformly good carnations and most of them had the regular standard varieties growing in quantity. The third stop was at Ira H. Landis's place at Paradise. Here the chief attraction was a fine bench of Benora carnations, so fine that our critical Chas. B. Herr of Strasburg placed an order for some cuttings. We had another unusual spectacle of an old, almost forgotten variety—a half bench of Lawson Enchantress, as fine as ever it was grown. Mr. Landis gives considerable space to freecias and white and yellow daisies for cut flowers. He also grows outdoor sweet peas, gladioli and peonies for spring and summer flowers.

The fourth and last stop was made at the combined establishments of Chas. B. and Elmer Weaver, the largest area of glass in the county. Chas. Weaver grows calendula, mignonette and sweet peas good and in quantity. The sweet peas are grown in houses of modern type, the other stock in older houses. Elmer's part of the establishment is devoted to carnations and the novel one here was a bed of Comfort, which he likes above all other reds. Here we found Enchantress missing as he has discarded it for Pink Delight, of which he had a large lot. His whites are likely to follow the same fate and all be discarded for White Wonder. Here concrete benches are used for propagating and that they are satisfactory is proved by the fact that new ones are in the course of construction. Here Jacob Flear almost lost himself in the boiler cellars. A searching party found him inspecting the ash carrier and other mechanical appliances in use at this establishment.

A jolly but tired party reached Lancaster at 5 p. m. Outside the sociability of these trips they are educators. Sometimes the grower with one or two houses has worked out some ideas that the larger grower overlooks and yet these ideas are worth money to him. Our next meeting is on February 20. This will be carnation night—a good chance for novelty introducers to show a number of growers their flowers. Any one sending flowers should address them to H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa.

Cyanide in Greenhouses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly let me know how much cyanide to use and how to use it in the following houses? They are infested by white fly. Will the cyanide injure any plants and how long will I have to stay out of the houses after using? One house is 43 feet long, 12 feet high, 20 feet wide, glass on sides four feet from ground. One house 35 feet long, 10 feet high in center and 13 feet wide.

G. D. R.

The amount of cyanide necessary for efficient fumigation of a greenhouse is dependent upon the number of cubic feet in the house. It is often recommended that one ounce of cyanide be used for each 1,000 cubic feet. We have, however, recently had good success in killing the white fly with only half that amount, and would recommend that. In purchasing the cyanide it will be necessary to insist on having it 98 per cent pure.

The method of producing the gas is by dissolving the cyanide in a mixture of sulphuric acid and water. For each half ounce of cyanide will be required one ounce of concentrated sulphuric acid and about two ounces of water. The application to any house is a matter of estimation based on the above given figures. The 43-foot house has approximately 7,000 cubic feet and the smaller house about 3,000, provided the figures have been correctly interpreted. For the former would be required 3½ oz. cyanide to be dissolved in a mixture of 7 oz. acid and 14 oz. water; for the latter 1½ oz. cyanide in 3 oz. acid and 6 oz. water. The acid and water should not be combined until all is ready for addition of the cyanide and should then be effected by pouring the acid into the water. Earthen jars of one gallon size would be best adapted to the amounts here suggested.

The gas is very dangerous, fatal to human beings as well as to insects, and every precaution must be taken not to expose oneself to it either at the beginning or at the end of the process. The cyanide may be suspended in paper bags over the jars by strings leading to the outside so that it can be lowered without entering the house. The house should be closed as tightly as possible during fumigation. A number of ventilators should be arranged so that they can be opened from the outside, as it is dangerous to enter while the house contains the gas. With some ventilators and the doors open for half or three-quarters of an hour it will then be safe to enter. Care should be taken to prevent the accidental entrance of any one not advised of the fumigation and the contents of the jars should be buried afterwards.

The best time to fumigate is at night. If the process is continued for a period of two hours it will be likely to accomplish its purpose, but an exposure lasting from 10 or 11 o'clock at night until morning is more convenient. Whether there will be any injury to the plants will depend upon the species. Some are more susceptible to injury than others. Since there is no information in this inquiry on that point no advice can be given. Young and tender shoots on rapidly growing plants are sometimes injured. This is true of roses and we have had similar trouble with tomatoes. Chrysanthemums are said to be sensitive. Ferns, geraniums, begonias, violets, and string beans do not seem to be injured in any stage of growth. It will probably be a good thing not to water too freely for five or six days before fumigation.

Moninger Samples for Colleges.

The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, is taking another forward step in furnishing samples of greenhouse structural material for state agricultural colleges where there are classes in horticulture in which greenhouse construction is taught. Only state colleges have thus far been chosen as recipients of these gifts, but the Moninger firm states that other schools of standing having such courses will be included if they make their needs known. The samples are of a high class and cost money and are not intended for indiscriminate giving, only such institutions as have bona fide courses in greenhouse construction being selected. Instructors in such schools have often expressed a need for samples to use in class work.

ECHERIAS.—There is inquiry for bedding echeverias again this season. Who has them?

A new yellow dahlia is being introduced by Warnaar & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, which they have named Mrs. Vaughan, and of which they say they have high expectations.

It is not stated why commission florists of New York state should be placed under bond but that will be the effect of a bill now before the legislature at Albany if it is not changed before passage.

JOHN N. MAY'S retirement from active business February 1 is announced, his son Harry O. May succeeding to the famous establishment at Summit, N. J. Mr. May's work will forever assure him high rank in the florists' hall of fame and the many thousands who have enjoyed the fruits of his labor will join us in saying to him, "Let calm and sunshine long be thine."

Insecticide Board's Report.

The report of the insecticide and fungine board of the Department of Agriculture under the insecticide act of 1910 has been issued. Samples of insecticides and fungicides entered for interstate commerce are collected, analyzed and tested to determine whether there has been any misbranding or adulteration. Foreign importations are subject to the same restrictions as those manufactured here.

During the year 1912 there were 650 samples collected, representing 330 different articles produced by 212 different concerns. Of this number 246 cases have been disposed of, 82 being placed in permanent abeyance, and 64 transmitted to the attorney general for prosecution. Seven of these have resulted favorably to the government, while the others are still undecided.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The next annual meeting and exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held at Peoria, March 4-5. The Chicago delegation will leave on the Rock Island Railroad from the LaSalle street station at 9:10 a. m., arriving at 1:25 p. m., March 4. An elaborate program will be issued shortly and it is said the exhibition will be the finest ever held under the auspices of this organization. The people of the convention city are looking forward to this event, expecting perhaps too much from the local trade, but it is believed the members throughout the state will lend a generous hand in making the exhibition the brilliant success it deserves to be in this thriving center. The officers of the association are Chas. W. Lovelidge, Peoria, president; C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, vice-president; J. F. Amman, Edwardsville, secretary; and Frank L. Washburn, Bloomington, treasurer.

American Rose Society.

SPECIAL PRIZES.

The members of the American Rose Society are much in earnest about putting up a fine exhibition at the coming International Flower Show in New York. There have been special prizes of considerable value offered by the New York Cut Flower Co., which have not yet been finally adjusted, the value being $200.00. There is also a special prize from Moore, Hentz & Nash, of a silver cup valued at $50.00 for the best six roses, six roses in each entry; no three to be of the same variety, no stem to be longer than twenty inches; the roses of each variety to be judged on their own merits and not by comparison with the other varieties. There is also a special grower's prize, first, second and third, $15.00, $10.00 and $7.00 in cash. This prize is for the actual grower of any exhibit and not for the exhibitor, excepting in the case where he does his own growing. The object is to recognize the man who actually does the good work. This prize was first offered by Frank L. Moore of Chatham, N. J., and has been renewed by some one almost every year since. There is also another special prize reported as coming from Philadelphia, for 75 roses of any variety, excepting American Beauties.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Callas Falling to Bloom.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I have a house of calla lilies which are not doing well and I would like to know what is the trouble with them? They are in 7-inch pots and are pot-bound with good healthy roots. I run the house at 60 to 65 degrees at night and 75 degrees in daytime. Now, when I had only a few hundred plants, they did very well, but the 500 I bought this fall are very shy bloomers and when they do bloom the first bloom is all right, but the one following is not worth anything, consequently there is nothing until the third bloom. These plants seem very healthy, but the greater part of them have not bloomed at all. They were potted last September.

SUBSCRIBER.

So long as the plants remain in good health, there is no need to despair. Some seasons the roots do not ripen equally well and consequently they are a little disappointing in their flowering season. Keep the night temperature at 62° and refrain from feeding until the flowers begin to show. Feed once a week after that and as the season advances, give a rich mulch, one inch deep. C.

Soil for Killarney Roses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What is considered an ideal soil for the Killarney varieties of roses?

R. E. P.

Wisconsin.

Killarney roses can be grown in a variety of soils very successfully. A mixture of loam and clay is very much in favor with many growers. This is best when taken from old pastureland, using the top "spit" of about five inches deep, thus securing the fibrous grass roots which serve to keep it porous and sweet. In the absence of this class of soil, any soil that is not too fine in texture or too sandy in its composition, can, with a fair proportion of manure, be made to produce high grade stock. C.

Washington.

An automobile carnival is being held here, February 10-15, and on account of a silver cup being awarded for the best decoration the florists of Washington have been kept busy the past few days with the result that many of the automobile houses could easily be mistaken for flower shops.

Among the visitors this week were Julius Dilloff of Schloss Bros., New York; A. G. Keroes, with Wm. J. Boas Co., Baltimore, Md., and Chas. McCannley, formerly of this city but now of Chicago. Charlie was gladly welcomed by his old friends.

The local growers are cutting some fine stock. F. H. Kramer's Queen Beatrice roses are exceptionally good and are finding a ready market through the Florists' Exchange.

In the store of Geo. H. Cooke can be seen the finest Killarney Queen roses in the city, also some five-foot Pink Killarneys, very fine stock.

Primroses coming from Chas. M. Wernig of York, Pa., are the finest seen in this vicinity for some time.

Stock seems to be plentiful, the windows of the local florists being filled with the choicest flowers. G. C. D.

Maywood, Ill.

P. E. Weiss, Henry Meyer and F. H. Weiss have incorporated a new company, capital $15,000. They will build three new houses 27x37½ feet each. They will specialize on American Beauty roses. Mr. Meyer is the chief American Beauty grower for the A. F. Amling Co. now.

W. H. Amling has bought the establishment of P. E. Weiss which he will run in addition to his own place. He is also building a new dwelling.

A. F. Amling Co.'s new automobile truck is proving a big asset. E. C. Amling, Jr., has bought a new car also.

A. F. Amling and wife have returned from Florida after a few weeks' stay.

Wm. Wichtendahl intends to build a greenhouse 27x100 feet.

H. W. Wehrmann will build two houses 21x300 feet each.

NO GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.

There has been no great improvement in trade since last week, although the weather has been very favorable. Even the early demand for stock for St. Valentine's day was light and it was the general opinion that it was far below that of last year. With the exception of roses, all kinds of stock are coming in more plentifully, especially is this true of bulbous flowers and carnations. Roses still are quite short of the demand and all the stock cleans up quickly at good prices. Most of that coming in is of the longer grades and short-stemmed stock has been at a premium for some time. American Beauties are in as good a supply as any of the varieties but the prices in some cases have advanced a little this week. Killarney and White Killarney sell quickly and Richmond has improved considerably in quality. Some fine My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine are to be seen now, and Rhea Reids are also arriving in fine condition. Sunburst and Melody are in larger supply but sell quickly at all times. Carnations are still very plentiful and have not advanced any yet in price, although red were somewhat scarce the first of the week. Most of the local wholesale dealers think there are too many White Enchantress grown in this vicinity, for a review of the market the past several months finds that there has been a surplus at nearly all times. One dealer says that this is because funeral work has been exceptionally light, which is probably the reason, for the percentage of deaths this winter is much less than last year. Too many bulbous flowers are also grown and it is really a shame to see such magnificent stock that is now ar-iving in the market sold for such low prices as it is now. One of the leading growers of bulbous stock says that if he was ever to build another range he would not devote so much glass to these flowers as he does now. Tulips of all the colors, narcissi, both single and double yellow, are plentiful. Lily of the valley is quite plentiful and sweet peas are also in large supply. Orchids are still in good supply and are sold at a price at which all the stores can afford to make fine displays of these exotics. Violets are plentiful, but are having a little better call. Lilies and callas are more plentiful and some extra fine stock is to be had.

NOTES.

A. T. Pyfer returned on February 7 from Milwaukee, Wis., where he exhibited a vase of the Chicago Carnation Co.'s new scarlet seedling carnation, The Herald, at a meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club the previous evening. Mr. Pyfer also visited Nic Zweifel's range in North Milwaukee and incidentally booked his order for rooted cuttings of The Herald.

The next annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held at Peoria March 4-5. The local delegation will leave on the Rock Island Railroad from the LaSalle street station at 9:10 a. m., arriving at 1:25 p. m., March 4.

Wm. Mailander reports that five of the thirteen houses in process of reconstruction for Bassett & Washburn at Gregg's Station, from the materials of the old ranges at Hinsdale, are now completed and the remaining eight well advanced.

C. L. Sherer, formerly with the Wells-Fargo Express Co., has accepted a position as packer in the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co., to succeed Wm. Lorman, who has been promoted.

Fritz Bahr returned from California last week and is very enthusiastic about the great west. He expresses himself astonished with the tremendous possibilities of the Sacramento valley.

The next regular meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association will be held at the Tavern, Thursday evening, February 21, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held.

Joseph Ziska, who has manufactured wire designs for the past 33 years, says that he has never before experienced such a heavy demand for his stock in January and February as this year.

The machinery for the Geo. M. Garland Co.'s new wood working plant is being installed and according to the proprietors everything will soon be in readiness for starting.

George Kranze, of Muscatine, Ia., called on the manufacturers of greenhouse materials here this week with the intention of purchasing two new large houses.

M. Fink, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father, who died last week.

P. J. Foley, of the Foley Mfg. Co., says there is a large volume of inquiry for plans and estimates in the greenhouse building line.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co. is enlarging its office, more room being needed conveniently to handle its ever increasing trade.

Philip L. McKee, with the John C. Moninger Co., has returned from a business trip to Milwaukee, Wis.

August Jurgens has returned from a visit to his Mississippi and Alabama peach groves.

The Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, O., manufacturers of the Overland delivery car, is mailing a handsome illustrated catalog to the trade. The Willys-Overland Co. is not exhibiting at the Commercial Automobile show at the Coliseum, but the cars may be seen at the show rooms of the Overland Motor Co. at 2426 Michigan avenue. The Overland people are making a special car for florists that sells at a figure within reach of all.

Samuel J. Pearce, who recently sold his Clybourn avenue establishment to railroad interests, will vacate the premises on October 1. It will be well worth one's time to visit his greenhouses now, for the bulbous stock is in exceptionally fine condition and a sight to behold. His lilies are in grand shape and he will have a fine lot for his Easter trade. Mr. Pearce grows L. giganteum exclusively and grows them right.

Herman Rogers, Weiland & Risch's obliging storeman, and family have returned from Detroit, Mich., where they attended the funeral of Mrs. Rogers' father, B. Evans. The late Mr. Evans was taken suddenly ill while visiting at the Rogers' home here and died after a brief illness. He was formerly the light keeper at Pentwater, Mich., and was well known and popular in marine circles.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store carnations are seen in large supply and Otto W. Frese says that the quality of the stock throughout is very good. Orchids are still seen in large quantities here but the shipments are noticeably smaller. The supply department had a good demand for supplies for St. Valentine's day and is now making preparations for Easter.

Henry Wittbold and wife left for an extended trip in the southland this week and will visit the principal cities in Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and probably Texas. Mr. Wittbold is entitled to a well earned rest, for it is the first vacation he has taken in 20 years. His efficient manager, H. H. Wilkerson, will be in charge as usual during his absence.

Percy Jones is having a special lot of new ribbons made for his trade that H. Van Gelder says cannot be surpassed for quality and price. There is now a great deal of keen rivalry between the cut flower and supply departments at this store, all of which is proving beneficial to the proprietors.

At Peter Reinberg's store American Beauty roses are still seen in good supply but Richmond and carnations are now the principal offerings. The demand for American Beauties at this store has been very heavy and no trouble has been experienced in disposing of the tremendous cut.

N. J. Wietor and Wm. Gast are telling their many friends of the delightful time they had at Ocean Springs, Miss., and New Orleans, La. Mr. Wietor met his old friend F. B. Faessell, formerly in the trade, at Ocean Springs and it is needless to add that the surprise was a pleasant one.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. must expect to do a big business the coming month, for the genial proprietor never was in a better frame of mind over the spring business than at the time of our visit to his store on January 10.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has been fortunate in having a good supply of fine Killarney and White Killarney roses the past week. Pussy Willows in bunches are now among the offerings.

Wietor Bros. are showing a fine grade of My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine, as well as their usual good line of other roses and carnations. Adiantum is seen in quantity here now.

At the J. B. Deamud Co.'s store bulbous stock of fine quality is seen in quantity, as well as carnations and nearly all the other seasonable flowers.

The Fleischman Floral Co. is making a fine display of cut flowers and plants at its magnificent store, and is moving a large quantity of stock by advertising and special prices.

Bassett & Washburn are now coming in crop with roses and are cutting carnations in quantity. Over 10,000 of the latter were received and sold at the store on January 10.

Mrs. A. Kindler says that the Raedlein Basket Co. had a big demand for baskets for St. Valentine's day and that Easter orders are now occupying the firm's attention.

John Zech has no complaint whatever to make as far as Zech & Mann are concerned, for the close of each day finds their stock fairly well cleaned up.

Emil Danz, proprietor of the Union Park Floral Co., is confined to the sick room due to an acute attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Chas. W. McKellar has fully recovered from his recent case of blood poisoning and promises to be more watchful in the future.

Erne & Klingel had a fine supply of violets for St. Valentine's day and succeeded in moving the greater portion of their stock.

Ed. Misiewicz, 3211 South Halsted street, is now looking for a new location owing to recent changes in his neighborhood.

Herman Schiller is in charge of the Koropp establishment on Evanston avenue, which Schiller the Florist recently leased.

George Reinberg's callas and Richmond roses are arriving in fine condition now and sell quickly.

The E. C. Amling Co. is receiving a fine grade of Rhea Reid roses from the Wendland & Keimel establishment.

John Kruchten is featuring a large supply of Nelson Fisher carnations of exceptionally fine quality.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg now has violets of quality in quantity.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' club was held at the Union Restaurant February 6. President French in the chair. Harry Balsley, Detroit, Mich., and Benjamin Kappel, 1735 Jackson boulevard, were elected members, and John Tiplady, Lake Forest, and Geo. Ball, Glen Ellyn, were proposed for membership. E. F. The other members of this committee are Frank Ayres, E. A. Ollinger, Fred Kraus and Frank Potocka.

Chairman Deamud of the transportation committee and President French handed in some railroad documents relating to the convention trip next August and these were duly presented by the secretary. Mr. Deamud also announced that the Chicago delegation to the annual meeting and exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held at Peoria March 4-5 will travel on the Rock Island railroad, train leaving the La Salle street station at 9:10 a. m. and arriving at 1:25 p. m., March 4.

ROSES VERY SCARCE.

The market conditions remain practically unchanged with plenty of all kinds of stock with the exception of roses. American Beauty roses of good quality are exceptionally scarce. Carnations are arriving in large quantities, as are violets, sweet peas, daffodils, narcissi and tulips. There is plenty of lily of the valley to supply the demand but a shortage of Harrissi lilies. Plenty of green goods to fill all orders.

CLUB MEETING.

The Florists' Club met February 6. This being carnation night, the meeting was largely attended by members, local visitors and people from out of town as well. Among the prize winners were Nic Zweifel, the C. C. Pollworth Co., and the Mueller Greenhouse Co. Honorable mention was awarded the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., for carnation Commodore; Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago, for The Herald; and the C. C. Pollworth Co., this city, for three white seedlings. The judges were: J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis., and A. T. Pyfer, Chicago. Edw. Ollinger, Chicago, acted as secretary to the judges. At the meeting President Leidiger appointed Messrs. C. C. Pollworth, C. Dalwig and Gust. Rusch to draw up resolutions of condolence to be forwarded to the family of the late Fred Schmeling. The out-of-town guests attending the meeting included Otto Sylvester and son Alfred, and — Kuehne, Oconomowoc, Wis., and P. L. McKee, representing the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago.

NOTES.

P. L. McKee, representing the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, spent several days in Milwaukee last week. This concern contemplates putting in materials for several new greenhouses to be built this spring.

Gust. Rusch & Co. report business good, but have the same complaint that all others have on the rose proposition. This firm is receiving some exceptionally fine carnations, also bulb stock.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports business good. This firm is cutting some fine daffodils, narcissi, hyacinths and tulips and also an exceptionally fine cut of carnations.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports shipping trade good with plenty of all kinds of stock to fill orders with the exception of roses.

Currie Bros. say business is brisk with plenty of funeral work.

Manke Bros. made a business trip to Chicago Wednesday in the interests of their greenhouses.

Edw. Ollinger, Chicago, made a business trip to Milwaukee on Thursday.

STOCK IS SCARCE.

The weather the past week was clear and cold. Lent is on but has not affected the market to any extent. This is owing to the scarcity of stock. Roses are especially scarce and carnations with the exception of splits are bringing good prices. Weather conditions have affected the sale of violets as the public will not wear them when there is freezing weather. Jonquils are plentiful. There is a good supply of lilies. Smilax and all greens are selling well. Some fine sweet peas are in and are selling well.

NOTES.

W. T. Thies, Jr., of St. Louis County, a landscape gardener, was poisoned by eating wild parsnips. They were transplanting trees when the parsnips were found and eaten.

Robt. J. Windler's store is always very attractive. He is well supplied with the finest the market can produce. His store is patronized by the best people on the South Side.

C. C. May of Webster Grove is bringing to this market some extra fine sweet peas and some fine carnations. He has three houses. He expects to enlarge in the fall.

Ostertag Bros. have decorated their show windows beautifully with a fine St. Valentine decoration. This firm is up-to-date with the necessary materials for all occasions.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is receiving a fine supply of sweet peas. The firm's carnations are good, especially their keeping qualities.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. unloaded an immense supply of violets last Saturday when the weather warmed up.

Alex Siegel had good sales on carnations and violets last Saturday. He does a profitable business.

Julius Schaffer is doing a good trade. He has a fine supply of blooming plants.

Geo. H. Angermueller received some extra fine pink roses, also some fine orchids.

V. J. Gorly is back from the East, where he had been for the past two weeks.

The Riessen Floral Co. had a fine display of all varieties of flowers.

Mrs. Chas. Schoenle's new store will be on a very busy thoroughfare.

Henry Darenburgh is no longer in the employ of Grimm & Gorly.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., is doing a very nice trade.

Oscar Hessormann was on the jury last week.

Nashville, Tenn.

TRADE QUIET.

Trade has been very quiet for the past week and flowers have been scarce, roses particularly being short in crop. There has been much funeral work and a fine sale on pot plants. Just now there is a fine stock of pot plants on the market. The stock for Easter is in fine shape. Easter lilies will be plentiful and the roses and carnations will come in again just right. All are looking forward to a good trade Valentine day. There will be lots of violets, and the pot plants now on hand will meet all demands.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. will also have an abundant supply of violets and these with lily of the valley and Roman hyacinths will meet the popular demand.

McIntyre Bros. are also strong on violets and will cut many thousand for the Valentine call.

The Joy Floral Co. expects to cut 20,000 violets for Valentine day.

BUSINESS QUIET.

With the coming of Lent business has been somewhat quiet. The market is druggery. The staple flowers feel the effects of the bulbous stock being piled up in the market. Rose crops are still off, which helps that commodity. Carnations are at the low point again. There are some fine flowers on the market, but there is not much disposition to buy in lots. Some sweet peas we saw are such in name only. Stems about three inches long. It must make the grower feel proud to send such stuff into the market, and angry when he gets back his tags.

BUSINESS ONLY FAIR.

Business in the first week of February was but fair. The supply of carnations is ample, but the scarcity of roses is very keenly felt and prices continue high. Violets are plentiful and cheap, and with the exception of a few home grown ones mostly unsatisfactory. Good sweet peas are scarce. The best seen in this market at the present moment are grown by Alfred Petit, the originator of a strain of winter blooming sweet peas that are in a class by themselves. Easter lilies as well as Calla lilies are short and the quality of those received are not of the best.

FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held its February meeting at Lafayette February 4, following an invitation of F. Dorner & Sons Co. to visit their establishment. As was expected the meeting was interesting and well attended. The visitors spent considerable time in examining and admiring the Dorner greenhouses and their contents. It is needless to say that everything was in good condition and fully up to the Dorner standard. The novelties and seedlings were the center of attraction. Next to this the propagating benches containing some 200,000 cuttings received a large share of the visitors' attention. President W. W. Coles of the Association is very much elated over the well attended meeting and the continued increase of membership.

NOTES.

W. W. Coles', Kokomo, lucky number is 13. Reading the announcement of the thirteenth annual poultry show he selected 13 of his best Wyandottes, which captured the blue ribbon in their class. Will Roepke of Riemann & Roepke at this same show captured first prize on Indian runner ducks.

George Wiegand, with rare forethought, returned from Florida just in time to enjoy the first real cold wave we have had this winter, and his brother Homer with equal forethought departed in time for the sunny south to escape the aforesaid cold wave.

A. W. Brandt is very well satisfied with his first week's business in his new store which is very prominently located in one of our most up-to-date buildings. Mr. Brandt has spared neither pains nor money in making his store attractive.

and these fall far short of the demand, particularly in the short and medium grades. The variety of stock, however, leaves nothing much to be desired, as the quality is good. The following are a few of the different kinds of flowers now on the local market from which the retailer can pick, to be used either for cut flower orders or funeral work: Lily of the valley, orchids, violets, pansies, sweet peas, baby primroses, freesias, calendulas, mignonette, Easter and calla lilies, tulips (all colors) Roman hyacinths, Paper White narcissi, daffodils, carnations, roses, etc. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Most growers report a fine variety of plants will be in for Easter. Violet orders for St. Valentine's day forecast a good trade in that flower.

NOTES.

The funeral of S. Homer Everett, one of Cleveland's most prominent and wealthy sons, was the cause of a big demand for flowers of the better class of stock, such as orchids, valley, violets and Easter lilies, and the orders were well distributed to the different florists.

Burglars or rowdies broke several lights in the greenhous of F. Wittuhn, Saturday evening, but were frightened away by Carl Witthuhn before anything was taken.

TRADE VERY DULL.

The first week of the Lenten season has been dull. There is no great quantity of flowers, as even the light demand appears about sufficient for the supply, and prices have not broken to any extent. American Beauty roses are a shade more plentiful but the specials are still quoted at from 60 to 75 cents. Killarneys are becoming more plentiful. The color is also improving. My Maryland is seen in good shape. The growers appear to have this variety in hand and fair crops in mid-winter are the result. Richmond roses are picking up and can soon be had in any quantity. The new yellows sell up clean. There will no doubt be a large increase in the planting of these varieties for next season's forcing. Carnations appear to keep moving at fair prices for good stock and job lot figures for the seconds and culls. Good freesia sells well, as do sweet peas. Some very choice stock is seen. The first of the Easter lily crop is in and from now on there will be lilies galore. Callas are in good demand. Cattleya orchids are ahead of the demand and prices rule low. Gardenias were never finer and bring fair prices. Violets are about normal.

NOTES.

One of the features at the Leo Niessen Co. establishment is their snapdragons. In spite of the dull market they have advanced in price and are in demand. A Niessen idea is a carnation tag. This is about 2½ inches long by one inch wide with a number in red ink. Above the number is printed: "To refer to these carnations retain tag and state variety." These tags are sent out in quantity to their carnation growers, who are expected to attach one to each bunch of carnations, the numbers thus identifying the grower. Mr. Niessen says it has helped considerably, the stock now being put up more carefully and the dealers ask for the number of the grower whose flowers are found to be in good condition.

Edw. Reid keeps well to the front with his special carnations. The stock is fine. He is proud of the work of his essay committee, Wallace R. Pierson's paper in answer to his request bringing out the banner attendance at the Florists' Club meeting.

Spring flowers are the leading card at Berger Bros.' central market. Good Richmond roses are also a specialty.

Robert Crawford is soon to have a new automobile on the street. He was the first to experiment in this line some years ago, running an electric. With a car of the latest design he will have a fine delivery conveyance.

George Uber won his case against the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, or rather the company lost its case, in trying to collect their bill for lilies which were not true to name, according to Mr. Uher. They agreed, it is said, that for an extra price they would guarantee this variety true to name and here is where they lost out.

COLD WEATHER REDUCES SUPPLY.

A touch of real winter, which we have experienced for the past week, has somewhat reduced the supply of cut flowers; nevertheless, there are enough to go around. The beginning of Lent always marks a falling off in the demand and this year shows no exception to the general rule. While American Beauty roses are not plentiful the demand is light and prices have dropped below the $1.00 mark. There is an abundant supply of tea roses, but prices on good stock are all that could be expected at this season. In every other stock, it may be said that there is an abundant supply. In yellow narcissus, tulips and freesias, there seems to be almost a surplus, but it keeps moving, to the disadvantage, to some extent, of carnations and sweet peas. In sweet peas there is now good stock on the market.

Monday, February 10.—The cold wave is growing worse, the temperature being near the zero mark early this morning. Notwithstanding the sudden drop in temperature, the supply of cut flowers keeps up well, particularly in carnations, sweet peas and bulbous stock.

NOTES.

Henry Blume, for many years manager and buyer for V. F. Lichtenhan, who had the flower concession in the Grand Central Station, has gone into the retail business for himself at 182 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street. He is an experienced man and a clever buyer, and we wish him abundant success. Mr. Lichtenhan has retired from the cut-flower business and, it is understood, will hereafter devote his energies to farming.

A bill is now before the state legislature at Albany, the aim of which is to put all commission men under bond. After careful investigation we believe that this bill was drawn to catch the dealers in foodstuffs. Nevertheless, it seems to cover the wholesale florists, and we think it an injustice. It is up to the supporters of Gov. Sulzer to enter an emphatic protest.

John Tryforos, of Tryforos Brothers, well known retailers of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, recently returned to Greece to join the army. John was well known and popular among both wholesalers and retailers and it is hoped that he will escape Turkish bullets and soon return to New York.

Charles Zvolanek of Bound Brook, N. J., is now bringing to the Cut Flower Exchange a most excellent quality of the Spencer type of sweet peas. His father, Anton Zvolanek, is now in California looking after his seed farm but is expected here in time for the International Flower Show.

William Kessler, the plantsman of 113 West Twenty-eighth street, is now handling very fine stock in all the staple varieties of plants. Particularly noteworthy are his cinerarias, in the demand for which there seems to be a revival and they are worthy of the attention of plant lovers.

W. L. Trumper, for many years manager and buyer for J. H. Small & Sons, and who recently underwent an operation in the French Hospital, is reported to be doing well. He is a familiar figure in the wholesale district and it is hoped that he will soon again be restored to health.

A Chatham, N. J., grower who called last week was David Falconer, who ships an excellent quality of roses to J. K. Allen. Mr. Falconer is a fine man and a fine grower and the only fault we can find with him is that he persists in spelling his name in an old-fashioned way.

J. G. Panos, who for a number of years has conducted a fine retail store at Fifth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, has now another store at 188 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, he having taken the business formerly known as the Cable Florist.

The "Four Buffs" Association, composed largely of the younger men in the trade, enjoyed a beefsteak dinner at their club room, 162 West Twenty-ninth street on the night of February 11. Prominent in this organization are Nicholas Schreiner and Chas. Matthews.

G. F. Neipp of the Floral Hill Gardens, Chatham, N. J., drops in occasionally to look over the market. His cut of fine carnations is handled by A. H. Langjhar, the well known Twenty-eighth street wholesaler.

Calling recently on Wm. P. Sears, 729 Sixth avenue, we found him very busy. He has recently added Wm. Hanft, a well-known designer and decorator, to his force.

The partnership reported in last week's notes between A. J. Guttman and A. Moltz was not consummated. Mr. Guttman continues to conduct the business.

S. S. Pennock, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa., Washington, D. C., and New York, made a flying visit to their store in this city, February 5.

The Horticultural Co. is now doing a good business in its new store. This firm has gone quite extensively into seeds but does not neglect to feature fine plants.

Joseph Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., who is in Europe, has been heard from and is enjoying his trip. He will return before Easter.

Our Greek friends are making elaborate preparations for the ball of the Greek-American Association, which takes place February 20.

George M. Stumpp is not enjoying very good health, but says he does not want to go away during the busy season.

At Walter F. Sheridan's a very fine stock of the carnation, Improved Enchantress is seen.

Wm. P. Ford is handling a fine line of the variegated carnation Rainbow.

Henry M. Robinson of Boston spent several days here last week.

It is hoped that St. Valentine's day may improve business. A. F. F.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of February 10, President Siebrecht in the chair. There was a very large attendance and the new president seems to have struck a popular chord. There was considerable discussion relating to the entertainment of guests at the International Flower Show, in which such veterans as Patrick O'Mara, Frank Traendly, Robert Simpson, W. E. Marshall, Chas. J. Totty and Chas. Weathered participated. It was finally decided to leave the whole matter to the committee in charge of the arrangements. The annual dinner of the club will be held at the time of the exhibition; members of the club to pay for their tickets.

The following new members were elected: Chas. F. Meyer, 99 Warren Street, New York; H. B. McKnight, 34 Leo Place, Newark, N. J.; H. C. Harris, Long Island City, N. Y.; W. B. Leach, Long Island City, N. Y.; John J. Coulters, 110 West Twenty-eighth street, New York; James Dean, Long Island City, N. Y.; David Fuerstenburg, Philadelphia, Pa.; Peter Jacobson, Astoria, L. I., N. Y.; Alex. J. Anderson, Port Washington, N. Y.; D. Irving Deans, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Chas. Arnold, Astoria, N. Y.; Henry B. Siebrecht, Astoria, N. Y.; Geo. L. Freeman, Fall River, Mass.; Frederick Cowperthwait, Floral Park, N. Y.; Marshall Crissman Mt. Kisco, N. Y.; John Hall, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.; John White, Jr., Elizabeth, N. J.; I. Warwick Smith, Tarrytown, N. Y.

The veteran, H. E. Philpott, of Chicago, Canada and other places, was present at the meeting. He said he was on his way to Europe to bring over a large delegation to the International Flower Show. John C. Bodger, of Los Angeles, Calif., was present and extended a cordial invitation to everybody to come to the Pacific Coast in 1915, to see what Californians can do in the line of an exhibition. President Siebrecht and Secretary Young were appointed to attend the convention at Ithaca, N. Y. One of the pleasing and interesting features of the meeting was the purchase by Charles C. Trepel, a well known retailer of this city and Brooklyn, of 5,000 tickets for the opening night of the International Flower Show, to be distributed to his customers. M. C. Ebel read a very able and interesting paper on "Publicity." He was given a vote of thanks.

A. S. Burns, Spring Valley, N. Y., exhibited the scarlet carnation Electra. James D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y., exhibited his pink carnation, Northport. Henry B. McKnight, Newark, N. J., exhibited a cross of Enchantress and White Perfection, a cross of Winsor and Victory and a cross of Beacon and Prosperity. The house committee furnished the usual refreshments.

CLUB MEETING.

One of the pleasant features of the February meeting of the Albany Florists' Club was the presentation to the retiring president, Fred A. Danker, of a silver set consisting of a pitcher, tray and gold lined cup. The presentation came as a complete surprise to the recipient and was gracefully performed by Frederick Goldring, who was president of the club before Mr. Danker. The articles were on display after the meeting and were much admired. Louis H. Schaefer entertained the members with an account of his recent trip to Buffalo and Rochester. He told particularly of the way the Buffalo Florists' Club does things and the recital was entirely to the credit of the Buffalo organization. One of the things the Buffalo club does is to feature the use of flowers for special occasions like Thanksgiving, the Christmas holidays, McKinley's birthday and others through display advertisements in the newspapers. The Buffalo florists also make up boxes of specialties which they offer at the end of the week and announce widely. These things create a public interest in and a demand for flowers. The subject led to a discussion in which many of the members took part and the publicity committee of the local club, Fred Goldring, chairman, was instructed to take up the matter in Albany and to start a similar campaign here on the first suitable holiday. The subject of attending the national flower show in New York in April was discussed and action deferred until the March meeting. Harry Latham was elected a member. William M. Quinn, foreman of Beaver Park, who was elected at the January meeting, was introduced to the other members.

Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Cut Flower Exchange, reports that the weather the past two weeks has been good for the development of carnations and that the growers are shipping them in such quantities that the price has suffered. Some heavy shipments have been received of Enchantress, Pink and White and the improved Enchantress Supreme. The last named has sold readily.

Assemblyman Jackson of Buffalo has introduced a bill to appropriate $60,000 for a range of greenhouses at the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. The florists of the state are considerably interested in the measure, as the greenhouses would

BUSINESS IS FAIR.

The market, the last week has been very fair, although the extremely cold weather the last couple of days has made things a little slow. Stock has been coming in in good shape and in good quantity, except that carnations have been a little scarce. The Lenten season does not appear to be causing the slump that was feared. The trade are all making special efforts for Valentine day and are producing some very pretty novelties.

NOTES.

J. B. Keller's Sons have had on show a number of things this week that are somewhat out of the ordinary for the Rochester trade. The center of attraction was a fine large acacia in full bloom. This was recently used at the Haynes-Finnucane wedding. They had quite a display of flowering Japanese cherries and crabapples which were brought down from their greenhouses. They have recently been putting out a new table decoration. It is a square or round shallow glass dish filled with water. On one side is set what appears to be an orchid plant or some spring plant in full bloom, while floating on the water are a couple of blooms and leaves. On the edge of the dish is a little artificial bird or in the water a couple of little gold fish. It makes a very novel, yet an exceedingly pretty and neat dish, if it is not overdone.

George Boucher has had a number of big decoration jobs lately. Among the largest were those for the fireman's ball at the armory, and the auto show at Exposition park. His work at the auto show was especially commendable. He used 360 palms to very good advantage. At the armory his decoration consisted largely of flowering plants, laurel and wild smilax. Besides the extra big jobs he has been having his full share of funeral work. He is expecting soon to start building a new house at Brighton for the growing of sweet peas, etc.

H. E. Wilson's greenhouses are in fine shape for the coming Valentine and Easter trade. For his Valentine trade he is putting out a number of pots of red and white hyacinths and red tulips with white hyacinths. Either one makes very pretty combinations of red and white and, so far, they are promising a very ready sale.

Walter Lickner, a landscape gardener of this city, died recently. He was an enthusiastic worker in the Salvation Army and his body will lie in state at the army barracks.

H. J. Head is expected out of the hospital Thursday. He will then go to stay with friends in the country for two or three weeks.

H. P. Neun has been showing a very fine specimen of wistaria in his window.

Visitors this week were: C. B. Coe of the D. M. Ferry Co., Detroit, Mich., and E. H. Klipp, who has charge of the greenhouse department of the Burt Olney Canning Co., at Medina and Albion, N. Y.

MARKET OVERLOADED.

Stock is coming in much heavier at this writing, carnations and bulb stock being thrown away to quite an extent. Daffodils and tulips are a drug on the market and can be picked up at the retailer's own prices. Roses are also coming in a little heavier, as are lilies. Violets are shortening up in crop but enough are expected for St. Valentine's day. The weather has turned slightly warmer which is the cause of the unexpected glut. Paper White narcissi are not to be seen very much any more. A few callas are coming in and find good sale. Sweet peas continue to sell as well as ever, and the stock still retains its fine quality. Primroses are also very nice and the demand is also good. Yellow roses have shortened up greatly, and the few that come in do not last very long. The outlook for St. Valentine's day is very good.

NOTES.

Ross E. Adgate, road agent for the McCallum Co., was called home last week from Lancaster to the bedside of his father, who was taken suddenly sick. At the latest writing he has slightly improved, and the hope of the trade is that he will have a speedy recovery.

The Saxonwald Greenhouses of Castle Shannon are sending some extra fine freesia to this market. They are also cutting heavily on fine carnations.

Mrs. A. J. Joyce has opened a new flower stand in the Pittsburgh Market, and seems to be doing well.

I. V. Kinder of Charleroi was in town Monday buying greenhouse supplies.

MARKET WELL SUPPLIED.

The market at the present time is well supplied in all lines. The demand is just ordinary. Shipping business continues good. The carnation supply continues very large. All those from the regular consignors are generally of a good quality. Some of the stock dumped in, however, is not all it should be. Many of the carnations are splits or mended splits. The rose market is much easier than it was a week ago. Then all were selling up very nicely. Now, however, there are times when some—and good ones too—are left over. Fortunately during the past week these last that went to waste were very few in numbers. Orders are beginning to come in strong too for lily of the valley, orchids and sweet peas for St. Valentine's day. The sweet peas have been good sellers right along. There is a very large supply of both double and single violets. The latter are particularly fine. The supply of bulbous stock of all kinds is very large. The list includes daffodils, jonquils, tulips, Dutch hyacinths, narcissi and freesia. None are selling any too well and as a result the prices have dropped down to practically the lowest point. The green goods supply is more than adequate for requirements. There is an over-supply of both plumosus and sprengeri but the plumosus moves more slowly.

NOTES.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the club rooms. After a very short business session the quorum present adjourned to the club session. Henry Schwarz and Max Rudolph had an even better sup-Alt Heidelberg and there held a supply of new stories on hand than the good ones they always have.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange expects to do a large business in sweet peas Valentine day. They have made arrangements for an extraordinary supply and most of them are already sold.

The cut flower department of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. received some very excellent Dutch hyacinths from Albert McCullough's own place.

Wm. Dittman and daughter of New Castle, Ind., stopped in this city on their way to Jacksonville, Fla., last week.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving fine roses, including American Beauties, from the South Park Floral Co.

Visitors: Peter Weiland, New Castle, Ind.; Harry Frank, Portland, Ind.; E. E. Stewart, Rives Junction, Mich.; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, Pa.; A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; J. J. Goudy, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.

New Bedford Horticultural Society.

More than 50 members of the New Bedford Horticultural Society, New Bedford, Mass., attended the society's annual banquet February 6. The dining room was handsomely decorated with flowering plants, ferns and palms, furnished by James Garthly of Fairhaven. Mr. Garthly and David F. Roy also furnished carnations for the guests. The past year has been the most successful in the history of the society and the banquet was all the more enjoyed on that account.

President Frank C. Barrows acted as toastmaster. He reviewed the history of the society and spoke optimistically of the future. It was hoped to have President Farquhar of the S. A. F. on the programme, but Mr. Farquhar found it impossible to be present. Vice-president Roy read a paper on the culture of chrysanthemums. The subject was well handled and the paper was much appreciated. On motion of Geo. H. Reynolds, chairman of the entertainment committee, a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Garthly and Mr. Roy for the plants and flowers. Wm. Keith told of the early struggles of the society. John P. Rooney and Louis W. Macey gave several well rendered solos and there were other musical numbers on the programme.

CARNATIONS FLOODING MARKET.

This city and vicinity have been favored with two months of remarkably mild weather to the last of January, which will be a great help in advancing stock for the early Easter. Reports from several growers are a trifle doubtful as to Giganteum lilies being on time. Many growers stick to their favorite brand whether it be formosum, giganteum or Harrisii, and only grow the one variety. This means win or lose on all. Others, who divide sorts, seem to have blooms from Christmas on and always on hand for Easter. Carnations are flooding the market not only by local growers but many are being shipped from the West, which fact is significant and was never known here before. Much glass has been erected in central and western Kansas and eastern Colorado and the products are put on this market. Reports from five sweet pea growers show heavy losses by buds falling off and each grower has a different reason. These men should get together and compare notes, causes, remedies, etc. Roses are scarce with no prospect for a surplus in the near future. The extremes of summer and winter have been rather unfavorable to many crops. The demand for pans of daffodils, tulips, etc., is good. Carnations are showing more splits than for many years. The beautiful bulb crop now on gives the show windows varied and pleasing effects and is stimulating a good business both in pan stock and cut

NOTES.

Plans are being prepared for a conservatory in connection with the Westport high school for botanical experiments. This will be the first of its kind in this part of the country.

E. H. Frandsen has added a fine 10-room house and two acres of land to his place. He says the lily prospects are a trifle uncertain if the cold dark weather continues.

The Rosery is showing some fine potted stock. Their 2,000 lilies are in fine shape and will be ready for Easter.

R. C. Peacock, Independence road, is still adding to his new plant and trade is already coming his way.

John Stempel has found the key to the mignonette secret. His product is choice.

Ed. A. Humfeld's place is well filled and is usually "there" when the time comes.

Samuel Murray shows a gorgeous window of bougainvilleas and white lilacs.

NEW SINGLE ROSE IRISH FIRE FLAME.

A new departure in Roses for winter forcing. IRISH FIRE FLAME is a single rose with only five petals, and is the most striking and the best single rose Messrs. Alex. Dickson & Sons have ever raised. It flowers profusely during the winter months, producing both single flowers and sprays of from three to five buds.

The bud is an intense fiery crimson scarlet at the tip, shading at the base of petals to orange salmon; the open flower is a beautiful bright salmon. It is of strong vigorous growth, with dark green foliage, reverse of leaf deep bronze.

We have tested this rose for two years, and can confidently recommend it as a sterling novelty in Roses.

It has been awarded a Gold Medal by the National Rose Society of Great Britain, and has taken several prizes for table decoration.

Grafted stock, $35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000.

Own Root, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

GRAFTED ROSES.

We graft our Roses early on Dicksons’ Irish Manetti Stock from firm flowering wood, and the result is strong vigorous plants in March and April.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President; Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford, Conn., Second Vice-President; C.E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary. Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O., June 24-26, 1913.

MANY foreign flower seed growers are late in completing their American orders this season.

F. W. BARTELDES is now hopeful that the proposed Kansas seed law will be kept off the calendar or afterward knocked out altogether in the house.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found a paper read by W. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C., before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, February 8, 1913.

HOLLAND seed growers complain that because of the wet summer their seed crops came in late and it has taken long to dry and clean them, hence late shipments.

THE protest of J. Kissock & Co., New York, who claimed that celery seed imported by them was of the wild variety and not dutiable, has been sustained by the board of general appraisers.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Truckers in this section had a very successful year in 1912, which would indicate an increased acreage this season for all crops grown in this vicinity.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade February 12 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.—Onion sets hold steady at, whites $1.25, reds $1.05, and yellows $1, in carlots.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The J. Steckler Seed Co. say that the gardeners in their territory all made very good crops last year where they were not flooded but on account of their vegetables being marketed at the same time as the crops from Florida and other states the prices were not as good as in previous years. This firm's trade in 1912, however, was the best since the establishment of the business.

The Cannery Convention.

The following were noted among seedsmen and their representatives attending the cannery convention at Louisville this week: Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; A. B. Clark, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; E. M. Parmelee, representing the John H. Allen Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.; W. B. Lucas, representing the John H. Allen Seed Co., Sheboygan, Mich.; S. F. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; J. C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; S. P. Landreth, of the D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa.; G. W. Warren, representing Rogers Bros., Alpena, Mich.; Chas. P. Guelf, representing the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; W. C. Langbridge, representing the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; A. W. Livingston, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.; B. E. Brotherton, of the Peninsula Seed Co., Port Huron, Mich.; Watson S. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn.;

F. H. Woodruff, of F. H. Woodruff & Sons, Milford, Conn.; A. O. Hogg, of Hogg & Lytle, Toronto, Ont.; W. P. Stubbs, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.; F. M. Clark, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.; Lytle, of Hogg & Lytle, Toronto, Ont.; T. C. Fagan, representing J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O.; L. M. Graham, representing the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.; W. S. Reynolds, Sturgeon Bay, Wis.; Edw. Reynolds, Sturgeon Bay, Wis.; C. P. Pyle, representing the F. G. Johnson Co.

Another Federal Seed Bill.

Another federal seed bill has been introduced by Senator Gronna. It is known as Senate Bill 8382 and is entitled, "A bill to prohibit the interstate shipment of impure seeds." Where shipments are made for the purpose of cleaning the seed before offering it for sale the law will not apply but such shipments must be made subject to such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may see fit to impose. He may demand a bond of the owner or consignee if he deems it necessary.

According to the bill red clover must not contain more than three per cent by weight of yellow trefoil or similar seed, and alfalfa must not contain more than three per cent of yellow trefoil, burr clover and sweet clover, singly or combined. Any variety containing more than five per cent of another kind of seed is also prohibited, clover and timothy mixtures excepted. The percentage of germination of any of the seeds must not be less than 90. The bill carries with it a penalty of a fine of not more than $100 and not less than $10 for each offense.

TACOMA, WASH.—The Morisse Seed Co., a new firm, has opened for business at 1131 South C street. Carl Morisse, former president of the Tacoma Rose Society, and Fred J. Morisse, are members of the firm.

MANKATO, MINN.—More than $1,500 in cash premiums will be distributed by the commercial club of this place at the annual meeting of the crop breeders' association and the mid-winter seed show, to be held here February 25-28. The meeting is held under the direction of the agricultural division of the state university.

Alfalfa Crossing.

Alfalfa of Northern Africa, development of seedling alfalfa, descriptions of crosses, etc., are some of the features of a valuable bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture, entitled "Some New Alfalfa Varieties for Pasture," by George W. Oliver. In crossing, the bulletin says that "very often the parents selected do not come true even from seeds resulting from flowers which have been self-pollinated. The reason for this is that the flowers are perfectly constructed for intercrossing." According to Mr. Oliver, "it requires at least two seasons before one can be reasonably certain that he has parents which are fixed enough in the desired character to begin hybridizing."

Seed Importation Act.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy. With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

NO, we are not "married" to any particular method of supporting and bracing the main members of our iron frame work, aside from the fact that we do insist on using compression trussing as the main trussing, when trussing is necessary.

The truth of the matter is, we first figure the stress and strain on a house and then build to meet the figures with a 20% margin for safety. Let us send you particulars of our new construction, making it possible to build a house 70 feet wide, with only two columns.

Double-Glass Double Profits

The old single layer hot-bed sash are far better than none; but they must be covered with mats, boards or shutters every evening and uncovered every morning. They are wasteful.

The new SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH, with two layers of glass enclosing an air space, are COMPLETE IN THEMSELVES. They eliminate all extra covers; they wipe out half the labor cost; they admit all the light by day to store warmth in the bed and then save the warmth at night.

They make plants earlier and stronger. They double final profits.

Every practical gardener or florist will see the value of this.

And it is good business for you to get our free catalog for full information. Write your address plainly and send it today; the hot-bed season is not far off. Prof. Massey's booklet on Hot-beds and Cold Frames sent for 4c in stamps.

Your No. 9 Boiler is heating my entire range and will easily take care of 5000 square feet more. With the thermometer 18 degrees outdoors, fire at 11 p. m. and not again until 6 a. m. The boiler surely is giving me perfect satisfaction. I have used one steam and five hot water boilers. I like your boiler and cannot keep still when I meet a brother florist, but must tell him about your boiler and how much it has saved me in coal hills. With my best boilers I required four to five carloads of coal to heat the same space which is now heated by your boiler with about three carloads of coal. # KING GREENHOUSE EAVES

They solve the Eave problem. They make the least possible shade. And, as you can see, present no surface for icicles to form on. They have great strength with lightness. They are designed and made for the purpose and not adapted from stock structural shapes. We want to figure with you.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "S"

This Eave is intended for use on detached houses with either fixed glass or side sash. It is practically all exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse and so is ice clearing.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "L"

This Eave, although lighter than Style "S", is amply strong for all eave purposes. It obstructs little light and is ice clearing in the most severe weather. It is intended for use with fixed glass only.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Spireas.

The spireas for Easter should now be throwing up the spikes of bloom from the foliage and will be in a good light location. While these plants are always regarded as one of the cheaper plants for Easter, and will not return enough for space occupied in a warm house, still there will always be a demand for them, especially for church decorations, and if they are not forward enough will have to be given a warm location to have them in bloom. They are rather slow in coming into flower, so will have to be well timed to have them in the best of condition. This plant requires plenty of water, no matter where grown, and in a warm house will need frequent waterings. Keep the plants well spaced out as they grow, for where crowded, poorly shaped plants and bad foliage is often the result and it is the glossy foliage of this plant that is greatly admired. Do not fumigate with tobacco smoke when the foliage is young, for it quickly burns the tender leaves, and if they are in a house that requires fumigation remove them or cover closely with papers. Spraying with nicotine solutions or fumigating with nicotine papers will not injure them.

Lilacs for Easter.

A large variety of blooming plants can be grown for Easter, and dwarf, shapely lilacs are appreciated by all flower lovers, and the cut sprays have now become a standard winter flower. For the pot plants the imported budded stock is preferable, but for cut blooms any lilac may be lifted and they force quickly and easily in a warm house. The varieties most grown for pot plants are Marie Lagraye white and Charles X purple. Four weeks in a temperature of 65 degrees will bring them into flower. The plants when placed in the greenhouse should be syringed several times a day in order to assist the buds to swell and kept in a dark place. As soon as the buds begin to open the plants can be placed in full sunlight. The common lilac can be forced in the same manner. A bush which is well set with flower buds, and these are easily distinguished from the leaf buds, can be lifted and planted in a bench and will furnish fine sprays of flowers. If the plant is kept shaded from the sun by spreading a heavy cloth over it the flowers of the purple varieties will be white when forced. The plants will require plenty of water, for they make but little root growth and bloom upon the vitality which has been stored.

Rambler Roses.

The plants of rambler roses that are intended for Easter blooming should now be showing color and if they are not, they will require quite a little forcing to have them in the best of condition for that date. If the plants are at all potbound, watering with liquid manure will be of great assistance to them and stimulate the flowers and make them much larger and an addition of soot to this will intensify the color. The plants will often when setting the buds make long growths from the base of the plants; these should be cut out, for they are taking much strength that should go into the flowers. These canes can be made into cuttings and propagated and will make small plants for next year's growing or can be planted outside and grown on for stock for the future.

There is always a good demand for well-grown pot ramblers for Decoration day and early June, and plants started now will be in the best of condition at that time. They can be started in a cool house and frequently syringed until the eyes break, when they can be moved into warmer quarters and full sunlight. For June decoration there is nothing better in blooming plants than Crimson Rambler and the other rambler roses and hydrangeas; they make a beautiful combination and are also very decorative for porches.

Azalea Mollis.

One of the showy plants grown for Easter is the Azalea mollis, for the flowers are of those peculiar shades of red, yellow and orange that are not found in other plants. They can be forced very quickly, for the plants have stored up nutriment enough to produce their flowers, and they make but little foliage and but few roots. Three weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees will bring them into bloom at this season, but the flowers will be of better substance and color if the plants are grown a little cooler and given more time. Careful handling of the plants is necessary for the buds are very brittle and easily broken off. Pot firmly in a pot just large enough to take the clump of roots, and water heavily. Frequent spraying until the flowers show color will be required, and when the blooms unfold, the bright coloring is better held and intensified, by moving the plants into a cool temperature and the watering reduced.

Fish-Scrap Fertilizer.

Artificial fertilizer is divided into three general classes, that supplying nitrogen, that supplying phosphoric acid, and that from which potash is obtained. In the United States compounded commercial fertilizer usually contains all three ingredients and to a considerable extent is applied rather indiscriminately with little regard to the particular needs of the soil or the crops. The world's supply of potash is obtained largely from Stassfurt, Germany, and phosphoric acid is derived mostly from bone, mineral phosphates, and phosphatic, basic, or Thomas slag. Nitrogen, the most costly ingredient of the fertilizers, is derived from organic matter, ammonium salts, and nitrates. Of the organic matter used in the United States cottonseed meal has been the most important, tankage and slaughterhouse products next, and fish scrap third (plowing under legumes not being considered in this treatment of the subject). Cottonseed meal, however, is coming to be very largely used as a cattle feed and is consequently becoming too expensive for fertilizing

Sibley's Unique Decoration.

Chas. W. Sibley of Athol, Mass., has utilized one of nature's own arrangements in a unique decoration scheme, as shown in the accompanying illustration. While hunting ferns in the woods near his home town Mr. Sibley found a thrush's nest built on a fern with nothing else to support it. He left the fern and the nest as he found them, and two broods were hatched out last summer. In the fall Mr. Sibley returned and took up the fern with the nest still intact. He made some artificial eggs and crayoned them to look like the real ones. He has used the same fern, nest and eggs in two different decoration arrangements and his idea has proved very attractive. He expects to return the fern and the nest in the spring and endeavor to coax the birds back again. The picture was taken in the deep shade of the woods.

A Beautiful Floral Urn.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

Just when or how the urn originated as a floral design would be hard to say, but probably it was first used as a funeral decoration. It is still quite popular in this connection, but its popularity does not stop here, as it is used for almost every occasion where flowers themselves are used in a decorative way. The supplement to this issue is a good example of what taste and correct judgment may do along this line. White carnations are the loose, slip-shod effect must be avoided, and on the other care must be exercised to steer clear of the lumpy effect too often noticed where the flowers are not arranged as they should be. Each flower should show plainly and none should be crowded by the others. A bow of ribbon to match is often used with good effect. If it is used at all it should be broad and not too tightly tied. There should be sufficient foliage to set off the flowers. Oftentimes a garland or spray of flowers may be substituted for the ribbon.

Valentine Week in the Chicago Stores.

In one respect flowers are like music: they both speak a language of the heart that is at once personal and universal, or capable of conveying an individual sentiment and at the same time appealing to a common taste and imagination. Equally well music charms all listeners—and the corsage carried on St. Valentine's day is equally expressive of the donor's admiration while it delights every beholder with its own intrinsic loveliness. To have noted some of the very beautiful displays during the week one could not help but value the beauty and thought displayed by some of our leading florists. Beautiful weather gave the florists a great boom for flowers in great abundance and a great variety were seen everywhere. The only note of scarcity seemed to be in Killarney roses, while the spring blooms were out in great quantity and of a very good quality.

The Fleischman Floral Co. displayed some very beautiful red azaleas and red tulips and their fine show windows were resplendent with pans of spring flowers of the choicest varieties. The white lilac trees were prettily finished with ribbon bows—especially those having long ungainly branches had the branches entwined with ribbon—each branch having its small rosette of ribbon. It was a very pleasing and attractive innovation. Featuring red azaleas and red tulips was prettily appropriate for St. Valentine's day. It was quite unusual to see so many particularly fine red azaleas in a group together.

Mangel, the Florist, always has his window filled with novelties and especially was this noticeable during Valentine week. A round Japanese basket of good size was planted with one fine specimen of white cyclamen in the center, surrounded with aspidistra's of the cream-white and green-striped variety, making a wonderfully attractive combination. The effect was one of complete harmony and every leaf and flower perfect. Another pretty novelty were the "Flowering Almond" bushes with their pink coverings and ribbon ornamentation. They made as pretty a present as could be imagined and reminded the writer of the miniature Japanese cherry trees that are so often pictured and never seen in nature's garb. A large red heart of red carnations made an appropriate emblem of St. Valentine's day. It was made with a goodly appreciation of the artistic.

Canger & Bergman have one of the finest display windows possible for exhibition purposes, and they certainly do full justice to its artistic possibilities. The old-fashioned garden grouping of potted plants was a feature of this week. In the background stood a tall and stately marguerite bush with its snowy whiteness emphasized purposes. Fish meal is also increasing in popularity as a stock food, and it is thought that it may in time follow cottonseed meal in becoming too valuable to be used on the land, though as great quantities are now wasted its utilization as a fertilizer will probably continue to increase for some time. While dried fish scrap is valued chiefly as a source of nitrogen, it also contains a large proportion of phosphoric acid, the former running about seven to nine per cent and the latter six to eight per cent. There is also a trace of the third ingredient, potash, but it is insignificant.

used with pleasing effect for the body of the urn, and roses, lily of the valley and cattleyas add greatly to its beauty.

In using the urn for a decoration the designer begins with the wire frame which all supply houses carry in stock. This is made solid with the flower which predominates in the arrangement, the idea being to bring out the lines of the urn as distinctly as possible. Especial care must be taken in arranging the flowers in the vase-shaped part. On the one hand by the deep cinerarias, the tiny English primroses, hyacinths in different colors, pink and white tulips and rich red tulips as a border. The edge was a sort of uneven line spreading in width as it reached the forepart of the window. In the background pussy willows were peeping out for recognition among the other bright and happy constituents. This was to the left of the window—and to the right the same design of grouping was kept in mind as to the outward general effect, but grouped in one yellow color scheme. That is, in the center was a handsome bunch of the golden forsythias. This was surrounded with yellow daffodils and jonquils. The space left in the center of the window was utilized for novelty displays and the firm did itself justice in the artistic daintiness in arrangement. A large round basket in the center was covered with a mound of asparagus vines in which little Paris nosegay bouquets were prettily arranged to attract the passerby. Among these nosegays were some Colonial designs; one in particular of good size had pink sweet peas, white carnations, violets and a few roses in combination with a white bouquet holder of paper in lacy effect. As an embellishment the three colors used were shown in the ribbon rosette which had the different colors prettily harmonized and also in keeping with the times, for Paris is going mad over the Roman color combinations in everything. Roman sashes are used on nosegays, baskets and every way possible. This firm also displayed some boutonnières, using a single marigold with a setting of a lace paper holder to go with the Colonial bouquets. Numerous fancy basket designs of decidedly original make were also displayed, some being of a clover shape in a red fine straw weave. Four beautiful bunches of white violets gave a finish to a wonderfully pretty window display typifying spring's advent.

O. J. Friedman's window was a rare garden of choice cut flowers featuring all the different and finest specimens obtainable. He had a very fine display of roses, among them some specimen American Beauties. Red was the predominating keynote.

A. Lange's window displays are the best example of an up-to-date flower shop, for he is never wanting in appropriate suggestions for every occasion. From the most inexpensive to the choicest flowers, all are displayed to attract not only the small buyer but those of fastidious taste. His gardenias were a wonder to behold and one had to look and look and wonder whether they really grew so perfectly. His Valentine basket of red heart shape was very artistically arranged. At the top, from under the cover, Roman hyacinths were gracefully placed and these were encircled with tiny red rosebuds which were in turn surrounded with fine New York violets. A large satin ribbon rosette gave a finish to a very attractive and appropriate Valentine floral offering. It was a happy and effective color combination. The little primrose baskets were very dainty and made a very charming gift made up in Mr. Lange's way of arrangement, for simplicity gave them a distinctive air of springtime.

H. C. Rowe's window had a very artistic arrangement of spring flowers. A birchbark window box was beautifully arranged with a fine red azalea in the center and grouped around it were specimen plants of cyclamen of the deep rich reds. It was a truly fine conception of the florist's art in combination and general arrangement. In featuring these boxes he had a note of difference from the displays of the other florists and he should feel justly proud of the showing they made.

The Bohannon Floral Co.'s window was replete with spring blooms, among them a rare display of orchids. Heart-shaped boxes in all the different varieties were prominent.

The Alpha Floral Co.'s three display windows were a perfect bower of springtime loveliness. One window was devoted entirely to jonquils and daffodils with a fine group of Easter lilies in the background. The second had blooming plants of every description dressed artistically in fancy paper and ribbons. The third had one of the largest variety displays obtainable, from the fine New York violets to a tiny bunch of pansies, butterfly sweet peas, freesias, lilies of the valley, orchids, marguerites, tulips, hyacinths—very nearly everything that is grown for the trade at this season. Appropriate boxes for Valentine's day were also displayed. Among them was the long ordinary flower box which had an artistic drawing of a young woman in one corner with Cupid below aiming his arrow at the red heart attached to the figure. In one corner of the cover a heart-shaped card drawn on the box had a suitable inscription or rather an appropriate little sentiment in verse. These boxes were all white with a red edge—the other color being displayed in the designs which were different on the different styles of boxes.

Lubliner & Trinz had an exceptionally fine display of New York violets which they were selling for fifty cents a bunch. They also had some of the deep rich single variety—the sweet violets in small bunches at twenty cents per bunch. They displayed the new Valentine boxes and heart-shaped designs. The heart-shaped boxes were red with white covers, the white cover allowing for a more elaborate designing. A tiny heart in the center of the cover was left blank for name and address.

The Atlas Floral Co. featured very attractive violet baskets arranged and placed most artistically. Some fine specimens of growing plants were also conspicuous for their perfect blooms and foliage. Heart-shaped baskets were also displayed in their many different designs.

Some of our Eastern florists are not satisfied with the regulation stock baskets and boxes and have special designs made up for their particular use. One such box of heart-shape design was made of white moire paper with gold edge—a full telescope box with sashes of ribbons in various shades across the top fastened on the inside of the cover. These had small hearts in white with artistic and suitable subjects inscribed and pasted on the sash. White hearts were the new feature among our Eastern florists, and the idea of a suitable sentiment inscribed on the cards has become very popular. Some very beautiful sentiments were shown on some of these white hearts which were pasted on the sash ribbons. It mattered not whether it was a Paris nosegay (or, as some of us call it, the French bouquet), or whether a basket of potted plants, each and every floral offering had its little heart attached.

We sincerely hope some of our pioneer florists will take a leaf from the book of the younger ones and make the most of the larger possibilities in the flower trade, and not think the old is good enough—for the old way is just a habit we have of doing things because we do not wish to put ourselves to the trouble of thinking out new advertising schemes. It is a mighty fine thing to keep in touch with the new things. Let us have the atmosphere of progressiveness and keep pace with our country's progress.

Third International Flower Show.

NEW YORK, APRIL 5-12.

The New York Cut Flower Co., 55 West Twenty-sixth street, is offering a grand silver vase, value $200, for the finest display of cut roses, irrespective of number of varieties shown. This premium does not appear in the Final Schedule of Prizes, just issued. A supplementary schedule will be issued before the show opens, to take care of the prizes that will be offered from now on.

In the Final Schedule, class 87, "first prize, silver cup" should instead read "grand silver medal and $15" as a first prize, and the same, is offered by The Horticultural Society of Chicago; in class 91 in section C the medal offered is the grand bronze medal of the Horticultural Society of Chicago. Class 524, the M. C. Ebel prize, is open to members of the National Association of Gardeners only; notice of this fact was inadvertently omitted from the schedule.

The most noteworthy classes in the Final Schedule are classes 192, 193 and 194, covering $200 for the most valuable economic plant, which may be a new fruit, new vegetable, or other plant which has a distinct economic value; $200 for the most valuable new foliage plant; and $100 for the most valuable new flowering plant. These prizes are to be awarded for plants not yet in commerce, showing characters distinctly new and useful. Should the entries in any one class not be meritorious enough to secure an award, the total money assigned to that class may be divided among the two remaining classes provided the plants exhibited in the remaining classes are worthy of such a prize. Should no plant exhibited be considered worthy to secure an award under these conditions, the entire prize may be withheld. These prizes are offered by the Missouri Botanic Garden of St. Louis, and, as far as known, no schedule has ever contained such a liberal provision. These offers should bring numbers of exhibits from the growers of novelties in Europe.

Anyone desiring a copy of the Final Schedule of Prizes may have one on application to John Young, secretary, 54 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York.

TACOMA, WASH.—At the meeting of the Tacoma Rose Society, February 11, it was decided to reorganize and incorporate. A draft of a constitution was considered and laid on the table for future action at the next meeting. Two additional vice-presidents were chosen, namely, Herbert Hunt and F. C. Fisher. Under the proposed constitution members will be transferred to the new organization upon payment of $1 for membership certificate.

THE ROSE.

Potting.

Cuttings ought to be potted just as soon as the roots attain three-quarters of an inch in length. If allowed to stand in the sand any length of time after they have reached this stage the roots extend through the sand and get so tangled up that it is difficult to handle them without breaking. They will also begin to make wood of a very inferior quality, which will be sure to wilt when they are potted and retard the starting of growth in the young plant.

Rose soil left over at planting time is good material for first potting. It ought to be in a nice mellow condition and passed through a three-quarter inch screen. Two-inch standard pots are just the size for first use. These should be thoroughly clean inside and, if possible, unmixed in color, as pots of a uniform color keep the moisture more nearly equal.

It is best not to take too many cuttings from the sand at one time, as the roots are so delicate and tender a lengthened exposure will shrivel them up, and the fewer checks the young plant is subjected to the more quickly will root action commence in the soil. Great care ought to be used in handling the young plants, as the roots are so easily broken. The roots ought to be placed about one-third down the depth of the pot, and the soil firmed equally all the way down. Firm potting is essential to secure success and more especially at first potting. No drainage is required in any kind of soil at this stage.

At this season room is usually scarce, and those who have no regular stock house will have to find room by removing some crop to make room for the young stock. Select the best position in the house for this purpose. It will pay to make a sacrifice to give it a good place. After the plants are arranged in the house they should be thoroughly watered. To get the whole body of soil moistened they will require going over two or three times. If the weather is bright, shade for the first three days, but only while the sun is shining on the bench, as the more light they get the quicker they will start into growth. Syringe twice a day during bright weather. Keep the night temperature at 58 degrees to 60 degrees, and the day temperature during dark weather 62 degrees. On bright days it can be run up to 70 degrees.

Mildew on Roses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What is the cause of mildew, the best preventive, and the cure? How often should sulphur be used on steam pipes for a stubborn case?

Wisconsin.

R. E. P.

The causes of mildew are many and complex. The most common cause is sudden change of temperature, causing a check to the growth and lowering the vitality of the plants, which makes them susceptible to the attacks of disease and pests. A stagnant atmosphere is also very conducive to the germination of mildew spores, which are ever present in the house and only wait favorable conditions to germinate. The best preventive is to induce a good, vigorous growth by giving proper attention to ventilation, watering and the maintenance of a steady temperature. Stock grown in this manner in a tight house is nearly immune. A mixture of two parts sulphur and one part air slaked lime, mixed with water to the consistency of paint and applied to the pipes twice a week, shutting the house entirely for one hour after applying, will effect a cure in the most stubborn case.

Cactus Insects of United States.

A valuable bulletin on the "Principal Cactus Insects of the United States" has been issued by the Department of Agriculture. The first systematic work on cactus insects that was undertaken was done by H. G. Hubbard in 1895. Mr. Hubbard lived in Florida. According to the bulletin, "he discovered a lepidopterous larva which feeds upon the prickly pear, traced out its life history and transformations and published a most interesting account of his observations." Later he made studies of the insect fauna of the giant cactus (Cereus giganteus) of Arizona. The insects infesting plants of the genus Opuntia were also studied, possessing a special interest because of the cochineal insect from which dye is made.

The department investigators have discovered 324 species of insects associated with the cactus plant. The species which injure the plant number 92; parasites of injurious species, 28; scavengers, 73; flower visitors, 40; species only incidentally associated with the plant, 91. Twelve of the different species attack the roots or stem and 27 the joints. Eleven of these latter feed inside the joints while 16 destroy the outside part. Thirteen species are harmful to the fruit. Of those found in the blooms a few are injurious but the others assist in fertilizing the plant.

Among the insects which affect the roots or stems, the most important forms are eight species of the cerambycid genus Moneilema, says the bulletin. These are wingless, robust, shining black beetles from about 15 to 25 mm. in length. They are to be found upon the Opuntia plants as adults throughout the season. In the adult stage they do considerable damage by gnawing the edges of the newly formed joints. This injury, however, is insignificant in comparison with that done to the stems and roots by the larvæ.

It is interesting to note that the work of the adult beetle sometime results in the dissemination of the plant. Frequently the beetles cut at the base of a newly formed joint, so that it is soon broken from the plant. In some cases the joints thus separated from the plants take root upon falling to the ground. As a matter of fact, this accidental planting by the Moneilema beetles is one important cause for the growth of the prickly pear in very dense clusters around the old plant.

Cutworms often are injurious to Opuntia plants, especially young plantings. The pulp exposed in cutting seems to attract the worms. Arsenate of lead is found to be a preventive. The parts used for seed should be soaked in a solution, or the plants dusted with the poison in a powdered form before planting. The scale insects which attack the roots of Opuntia plants do not have a marked effect on their vigor.

Of the coreid bug, which attacks the joints externally, the bulletin furnishes the following description: "It is a yellowish bug, resembling the common squash bug in general appearance, feeding generally gregariously on the joints of Opuntia and allied genera. It is chiefly nocturnal in its habits." These are by far the most harmful insects feeding on the plants. The bug leaves a small circular discoloration on the joints of the plant which are not discovered for some time after the feeding begins. It becomes very conspicuous soon, however, and the plant becomes weakened and falls over. The scientific name of this bug is Chelinidea vittigera, and with it is sometimes found the Chelinidea tabulata Westwood. This latter insect is not common, the only thing which keeps it from being a serious menace.

The bulletin recommends the burning of the trash upon which the insects collect in winter when they are nearly dormant. The gasoline torch may be used effectively to get rid of the immature insects, at which stage they are of a very gregarious habit. Next in importance to these Chelinidea bugs is the Mimorista flavidissimalis. Its range is limited, however, being confined to parts of Texas and Arizona.

The cottony cochineal insect, closely allied to the true cochineal insect, which is not found in the United States, are frequently found in large masses in the joints of Opuntia. The true cochineal insect has long been well known as the source of a dye taken from the dried bodies of the female.

The larvæ of the insects which feed on the inside of the joint are laid on the outside and the insects work their way inside soon after hatching. There they remain. The larvæ are cannibalistic and only one or two are ever found within a joint. Their work is noticeable by reason of the yellowing of the joint followed oftentimes by large swellings on both sides.

There are a number of others of minor importance. Only one worthy of mention works on the bloom. It is a slender beetle found in southwestern Texas and in New Mexico. Of the bugs which injure the first those of the genus Narnia are most important, N. pallidicornis Stål being most common. Seventy-three species of scavengers also have been found. Many of them feed only on joints already killed while others attack the living joint through the mines made by the Moneilema and other forms. The cavities they infest are often attacked by fungi and bacteria, increasing the diseased area. But for the scavenger the wounds would often heal.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Samuel Murray issued an attractive St. Valentine's day circular, calling attention to his facilities for the filling of orders on that day.

SAYVILLE, L. I.—The greenhouse of Seymour Burr at Oakdale was destroyed by fire February 5. The loss was great, many thousands of choice plants being included.

LILAC FOR EASTER.

The Publicity Propaganda.

Paper read by M. C. Ebel before the New York Florists' Club, February 10, 1913.

No more perplexing problem confronts the business man than what to do, and how to do it, to get the greatest return from his expenditures in creating a selling market for his products. More money is wasted in this branch of a business than in any other department because it is next to impossible to trace returns on all that is expended, and so we must be content to strike a happy medium, whereas cost of production may be accurately figured.

I have, however, been quietly watching the course of events since I fired my first shot at publicity in the trade papers last May, and the interest which has been manifested among the florists generally in this subject since then must assure anyone not a pessimist that the publicity movement will not be permitted to wane, but that it will progress until it will finally make its power and influence felt in the florist's industry just as it is doing among the younger industries to-day.

The power of the press, and nothing else, has built up many industries in the past quarter of a century so that where their resources a decade ago were reckoned in the hundred thousands, they are to-day counted in the hundred millions. And let me tell you some of these industries did not have the foundation to build on that the old florist's industry has, but which up to now it has not undertaken to develop. I say, the old florist's industry, for it is the oldest industry in the world. What other industry can trace its ancestry as far back as the Garden of Eden? And had the first partners in the business been alive to conditions as they exist to-day, they would probably not have trafficked so unwisely with the fruit, but would have begun to create a better market for it, by which we might all have benefited before the cost of high living for everything but flowers overtook us.

The consequences of the lack of wisdom on the part of the first planters is that some of the boys have risen above the old man and our younger industries have become prosperous and powerful enterprises, though some of them have admittedly been founded on very flimsy superstructures. Now there is that stability behind the florist's industry which as it develops cannot be shaken, for it will be builded differently than you may say practically all other industries, in that it will never be created as a monopoly or trust; and thus it will remain separated from the greatest of all evils, political intrigues, which are seriously affecting the business life of this country today.

There is no question, however, that the florist's business, and in that I mean the various branches of horticulture and floriculture, is already unconsciously following in the evolution through which other successful industries have passed from their minor state into great enterprises. I refer principally to the large commercial florist establishments which are producing along the same lines that the large manufacturers produce, studying all the phases where economies may be practiced and then taking advantage of the economies to reduce the cost of production, and so as in other fields of endeavor the large grower can make money at prices at which the small grower cannot afford to produce.

This feature of the florist's business is never again going to diminish, but on the contrary will continue to increase, and with this development of the business the chances of your ever seeing much higher prices for flowers than those now prevailing become more and more remote. It is true that in food, products and in other necessities of life there has been a constant increase in prices due to a large extent to manipulation, but among manufacturers generally the selling price if anything has been lessened, brought about by modern manufacturing systems which have helped the strong and driven out the weak in various trades, and this is the situation which sooner or later is bound to confront the florist.

Wallace R. Pierson in his paper, "The Florist and His Market," presents some arguments which should make grower, wholesaler, and retailer sit up and take notice. He says they are all in the same boat. He is right, taking the florist's business collectively, and this he has done, for I am satisfied that the establishment with which he is identified is not concerned over the selling markets. His plant is one I had in mind where every branch is carefully watched and where the cost of production is regarded more essential than the going market prices. He urges co-operation between the grower, wholesaler, and retailer, rather than competition and warns of the possibility of a chain of stores handling flowers as they do other commodities.

This is no longer a possibility but will soon be an announced fact; for a strong organization is already under contemplation having associated with it a man heavily interested in several similar successful, what might be termed, endless chain store enterprises. It will seek direct outlets for its productions, and as its retail business expands, it can continue to increase its growing capacity, if it chooses, or exercise the privilege if it finds it more profitable to do so, of going direct to growers and contracting for their entire output. The opportunity is a great one. The mystifying part of it is that it has not been taken advantage of before. It brings to mind an old saying that it takes an outsider to discover the inside of one's opportunities. No general publicity campaign will be required by such a concern. It will do its own advertising and create its own markets; but this is individual advertising and will not help its neighbor in the business. Individual advertising only helps the individuals to whom it is directed.

Then we have our local publicity or advertising campaigns. They may have some good features, but I have failed to discern any in watching what has so far been undertaken. No doubt some of them have been productive of results, but could they be declared a success when the expenditures are taken into account? For argument's sake let us concede that one of the local publicity committees would hit on a plan whereby a greater demand and better prices for flowers could be established within its region. How long would it be before the growers from elsewhere would swamp that locality with shipments to get some of those better prices and they would again be confronted with the problem how to overcome the glut.

Curtailement of products can not be successfully maintained in the florist industry although the suggestion was offered at the Philadelphia meeting, where Mr. Pierson first read his paper, that the florists devote some of their glass for a time to vegetable growing. The weak point here is that the vegetable grower is confronted with the same problem as the florist—no proper selling market—but were this not so and the experiment tried and proved successful, and prices of flowers would advance, Mr. Vegetable Grower would soon be found giving some attention to the florist's business. It is but human nature.

Universal publicity, educating the public to the usages of flowers and plants, instructing them how to grow and care for them, how to employ them and convince them that they are not luxuries but comforts which gladden the heart and mitigate sorrow and suffering, that is what is now required to increase the selling market for the florists and there is nothing else left to accomplish this for you. Some will dispute my idea and say that we are having lots of education already and are getting it for nothing, but let me ask you if you ever obtained anything for nothing that was worth anything?

I know the Sunday supplements are furnishing a lot of gardening talk about this season of the year as an incentive to get the florists and seedsmen to advertise in them, but it is not of the right sort. For instance, I picked up a paper yesterday which told how to care for plants during the winter to carry them over into the spring. This information is given in February and will be useful to some next fall. How many people do you imagine that article interested? Such matter is not instructive and will not hold the attention of readers long. Tell them something they can do now and they will be interested. Our garden magazines are already doing much good instructive work in floriculture and horticulture, but they reach a very small percentage of the people. To get at the public, the daily newspaper is the great channel.

Mr. Pierson has struck the right trail on publicity when he states that we need a national publicity bureau.

And that bureau must be under the supervision of a man who is well informed on the details of the industry he is to represent, and on all the inner workings of the press in general, in addition to being well qualified to write on floricultural and horticultural matters. He is not easily found, but he exists and when you do find him, give him a fair chance. He must be a man who will not only think publicity all day, but dream it all night. There is probably no better salaried position today than that of the publicity promoters—but their jobs do not last long if they fail to make good. The job is not abolished, but some other fellow is given the chance to prove what he can do. There can be no inactivity in such a position and the man on the job for the florist must be a hustler. He will never have occasion to worry over time hanging heavy on his hands.

It is fallacy to believe that any one can work up publicity. You might do without a doctor by relying on medical books to relieve some of your ills. You might, through the study of law books, handle some of your own legal matters, but to do real journalistic work it must be born in you and books cannot teach you. By this I do not mean to imply that you may not be able to write well on some specific topics, but the nose for real news instinct must grow on you. As I stated on a previous occasion in a discussion of publicity no other industry was ever so well prepared in the way of organization to establish a national bureau, as are the florists, and this bureau should from its very inception, if properly conducted, make its influence felt.

Such a bureau should disseminate instructive reading matter of interest to the more advanced, and yet easily understood by amateur growers, to serve the suburbanite; city folk, limited to the back yard; and even the flat dweller, restricted to a few window boxes. Contributing timely articles on outdoor and indoor growing; the care and cultivation of house plants; notes on home decoration and on all usages of flowers. Almost everyone loves flowers. Learning about their cultivation, habits and way of keeping will delight young and old among newspaper readers and there will be no difficulty on the part of the local societies in having newspapers of their communities accept such matter, if this reading matter will arouse interest among the readers, and what is quite important, if it is obtainable by the newspapers at no cost to them.

A weekly service should be established to furnish a series of articles that at times contain contributions from well known authorities in the trade, accompanied by illustrations, especially written for the service. Publicity committees should be maintained by the various local societies to work in conjunction with the national bureau, supplying the local papers regularly with literature received from the bureau and to keep the bureau informed on developments in its locality which may be of interest to it.

It should be the duty of the publicity manager, promoter, or whatever title may be conferred on him, to handle any local situation which may arise out of adverse press or legislative work. He should be at the disposal of the management of all important flower shows to render his service in the capacity of publicity manager, but above all he should be a man who can direct his business from a distance so that he may be found at his home most of the time and not feel it incumbent upon himself to be on the jump to meet every little local demand made on him. As I have previously stated, such a man exists, and if we only seek him we will find him.

You will say all this sounds well but who is to pay the piper for all this music? All of us. Let the support be forthcoming from the Society of American Florists, from the local societies and all allied interests of horticulture and floriculture. We will all benefit by it—growers, wholesalers, retailers, seedsmen, supply-men, greenhouse men and all.

The big men need publicity less than the small men. The small grower is the sufferer in a bad market and I predict that the time is not far distant when he will have to abandon the big markets and find his own direct market at home, as many are already doing. Therefore, he should be prepared to contribute his mite to the share expected of the large growers and others towards making it possible to inaugurate a campaign of publicity which must be national in scope to build up for him a greater demand for his products. We need this sort of publicity. We want it and we will have it. It needs but the man to pass the hat to get it under way. Who will volunteer as that man?

Parentage of Carnations.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please state the parentage of O. P. Bassett, Enchantress, White Perfection and James Whitcomb Riley carnations.
 M. A. B.

I am not sure of the parentage of any of these. The best thing would be to write to the raisers: O. P. Bassett, Bassett & Washburn, Chicago; Enchantress, Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; White Perfection, Fred Dornier & Sons Company, Lafayette, Ind.; James Whitcomb Riley, Bertermann Bros., Indianapolis, Ind.
 C. W. J.

LEXINGTON, ILL.—Mayor Ambrose is building an addition 36x52 feet to his greenhouse, giving him a total of more than 4,000 feet of glass.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The board of park commissioners has filed notice that bids will be received for material for the construction of a greenhouse in Garfield Park. Sealed proposals will be received until 10 a. m., Friday, February 21.

Wm. Florist Gude.

THE GREAT ILLUMINATOR.

The Big Stick, one of whose favorite mottoes is "light for all," takes pleasure in presenting a personification of said motto as its today's principal contribution to permanent literature.

Although we have known our est. f. c., William Florist Gude*, as a shedder of the radiance of friendly cheer about him ever since the first day he entered our sanctum with the heaviest item of the season about the firemen's pensions, he is especially prominent as an enlightener just now because he is chairman of the inaugural illuminations committee. With a limited amount of illuminating juice at his disposal, so to speak, he is sure to radiate delight.

Mr. Gude gives fair credit to his colleagues on the committee. True it is, when he called for volunteers there was almost a crush at the committee rooms, and an extra mail carrier. The Big Stick learned exclusively last night, had to be put on to bring written applications to illumination headquarters.

"I have been lit up for years," wrote one man in a shaky hand.

"This is no steady job," Mr. Gude explained to The Big Stick man last night. "What we want are quick fierce burners, good for a couple of nights.

"Without boasting, I can say that our committee has had the pick of champion illuminators. In the main, however, we have selected theorists, believing that just a few plain, practical men are sufficient to put our plans into execution."

The Big Stick feels justified in promising that, if nothing else is accomplished, Mr. Gude will make hearts lighter.

*Gude, said to be the Scandinavian spelling of "Goody."

Boston Flower Exchange Opening.

The opening of the new market of the above named organization, on February 15, was a very notable event in the history of horticulture in New England, for the interest in this movement has a wider range than the city of Boston or the state of Massachusetts. There were exhibitors from Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York and even from as far west as Chicago, and all this is more noteworthy when it is stated that there were no awards and no prizes.

The new market is a splendid example of the enterprise and energy of a few men who, for more than twenty years, have been co-operating for mutual benefit. The space already occupied covers 11,000 square feet on the ground floor of a fine modern building at the corner of Otis street and Winthrop square. There is a basement, covering 13,000 square feet which, we believe, will be fitted up in a short time with stands, as the demand increases. On the ground floor there are about 200 stands and on February 15, within an hour, more than 150 of these were taken, all of which shows the interest that is being exhibited in this movement. To those who have visited the old market in the basement of the old Park street church, the new market will be a revelation. On Otis street it has a frontage of over 100 feet, nearly all plate glass. While the space on the square is less, the facilities are excellent.

The opening was a most enjoyable event. The exhibitions of cut flowers and flowering plants, the excellent entertainment of oratory and music, a fine orchestra being on hand, as well as the bounteous luncheon served, all had a tendency to please visitors and impress them with the idea that the enterprise was being conducted by men of worth.

Visitors.

Among the out-of-town visitors at the opening of the Boston Flower Exchange, February 15, were: Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; James Scott, Elmsford, N. Y.; J. H. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; S. P. Dernison, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, New York; Manager Brown of the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y.; M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Mass.; Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; J. Parker, Tewksbury, Mass.; Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass. President Farquhar of the S. A. F. was one of the interesting guests at the opening of the market. William Hastings was another notable figure at the opening. The officers of the Exchange were untiring throughout the day in their efforts to make visitors feel at home.

Officers Boston Flower Exchange.

Wm. Stickle, president, is a native of Cambridge, Mass. Twenty-one years ago he started the movement for a cut flower market. It was successful and he was elected president and has held the office during all these years. He is a genial and kindly man; nevertheless, he understands business. For the past 12 years he has been located at Lexington, Mass., where he grows fine stock.

Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., is vice-president. The florist who does not know him must have been in a sort of Rip Van Winkle sleep for a number of years. Mr. Nicholson is a Scotchman. He fussed around in England a few years before he came to this country, but just the same he is a Scotchman, and a mighty loyal one, too. He located in Framingham, Mass., over 40 years ago and has been there ever since. In the early days he grew both vegetables and flowers, sending his vegetables to the old Fanetuil Hall market. In later years he has confined his activities to flowers, making a specialty of carnations, chrysanthemums and marguerites. Of late years he has very largely turned over the business to his son, a big, strong fellow, who makes good, but Mr. Nicholson, Sr., is still on the job.

George Cartwright, secretary and treasurer, is a native of England, and we may add in passing that he is very proud of it. He was a grower in Dedham, Mass., for about 40 years, but about seven years ago the Boston Flower Exchange discovered that he was such a useful man they could not do without him, so he sold his business in Dedham and has ever since devoted all his time to the interests of the Exchange.

It seems like "carrying coals to Newcastle" to write about Alex. Montgomery, one of the directors. Nevertheless, we will write a few words about him. He also is a Scotchman, and some of these Scotchmen, we must acknowledge, are wise and canny. He learned the flower business on the estate of the Earl of Galloway. He came to this country in 1872. Thirty-three years ago he went to the Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., as head grower and has been there ever since and always advancing. Since the death of E. M. Wood Mr. Montgomery has been in complete control of this great range, the products of which are well known to all in the trade. He is a past president of the American Rose Society, a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the S. A. F. and the Boston Florists' Club and active in every good work pertaining to the business.

Lester Mann, also a director, is a senior member of the firm of Mann Bros., Randolph, Mass., is a big, brawny fellow with a heavy black mustache that makes him look fierce, but he belies his appearance. He is very genial and clever and knows quite a lot about the flower business. He is a native of Randolph. His firm has now about 65,000 square feet of glass and specializes in Easter lilies and other bulbous stocks.

E. Allan Peirce, still another director, is senior member of the firm of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass. The business was started by his father in 1869. For many years the Peirce Easter lilies have been in demand all over New England. At present this firm, in addition to lilies, are extensive growers of roses, carnations and various other stocks. In addition to his other activities, Mr. Peirce is a director of the Society of American Florists and president of the Flower Growers' Sales Co., of Boston. His firm has about 150,000 square feet of glass.

Andrew Christensen, director, is from Stoneham, Mass. He is a native of Denmark, which should be in his favor, as the race is virile and successful as a rule. He came to this country when quite young, working in different places until 1895, when he went into business for himself at Stoneham, where he has been ever since. He makes a specialty of carnations and has about 40,000 square feet of glass.

S. J. Goddard, director, Framingham, Mass., was one of the original discoveries of Wm. Nicholson. Through his remarkable intuition "Uncle Bill" learned that S. J. had brains, so he immediately put him to work. Mr. Goddard was with Mr. Nicholson for a number of years, but finally went into business for himself. He has a very neat and well kept range and grows good stocks of carnations, chrysanthemums and marguerites. He is active and popular in the affairs of the Exchange.

A. S. Parker, director, Stoneham, Mass., is a regular live wire. If you try to put anything over on A. S. Parker you will surely get left. He has been in business in Stoneham for about 14 years, though he is yet a young man. He has 20,000 square feet of glass, growing violets in winter and asters in summer. He is popular with all branches of the trade.

Boston Notes.

Notwithstanding the very cold weather of the past week, business was very satisfactory. St. Valentine's day created quite a ripple, so to speak, in the trade. All the leading retailers were very busy, possibly because they had the foresight to prepare for it with appropriate arrangements and designs. Heart-shaped boxes of flowers were very popular and sold well, the contents of the box depending on the taste and fancy of the buyer. Red was the prevailing color of the boxes.

Welch Brothers view with equanimity the opening of the new market in their immediate vicinity. All the Boston florists seem to have a bond of fellowship and none of them are more fraternal than Welch Brothers.

The Henry M. Robinson Co., wholesalers, 15 Province street, were well pleased with the condition of business and were handling a fine line of stock.

At the establishment of Penn, the Florist, it was said that they stocked up with 2,700 boxes and that they were all sold before noon Valentine day.

The Eastern Chemical Co. is compelled to remove from Pittsburgh street in a short time on account of prospective building operations.

Alfred M. Davenport, of Watertown, was one of the interesting visitors the past week. He is a noted grower of plants.

At Thos. Galvin's a large force was busy all of February 14 and could scarcely keep up with their orders.

Wax Brothers did a rushing Valentine day business and their offerings were in excellent taste. A. F. F.

RENEW subscriptions promptly so that no copies of the paper may be missed.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE will not be helped by damage to property of any kind, especially such vandalism as the wreckage of English gardens and greenhouses recently reported in the daily press.

BOSTON, MASS.—In case this city succeeds in landing the 1914 convention of the Society of American Florists it is planned to hold the exhibition in the open air on 10 acres to be set aside in the Back Bay Fens.

WE received early this month the proceedings of the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, held at Chicago, August 20-23 last. We have failed to find the society's charter in this report and we think every member should have a copy of the national document.

Personal.

Miss Sarah A. Hill, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., we regret to learn, is on the sick list.

Correction.

In the notice of the death of Mrs. Lydia C. Conard in our issue of February 1, page 59, reference is made to the dissolution of the firm of Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa. We are advised this firm has never been dissolved and last year, quite to the contrary, added 60,000 feet of new glass at the original home plant.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The next annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held in the Gold Room of the Jefferson hotel, Peoria, Ill., March 4-5. The program includes the following:

Address of Welcome by Mayor E. N. Woodruff of Peoria; Response, by Vice President C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park; President's Address, by Chas. Loveridge, Peoria; Report of Secretary, by J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; Report of Treasurer, by F. L. Washburn, Bloomington; Report of Secretary of Advisory Committee of the Illinois Florists' Experiment Station, by W. N. FLORISTS VERY BUSY.

The past week has been a very busy one, topped off by the best St. Valentine's business in many years. The weather conditions here were ideal, not too cold with plenty of sunshine, and retailers generally report a fine trade. Roses of all grades and varieties are still short of the demand and advance orders generally clean the tables of the more desirable stock. Carnations, too, the latter part of the week cleaned up entirely. Sweet peas found a good market and stock has been exceptionally fine. Lily of the valley is moving slowly at present, but stock is first-class. Orchids are not in demand as much as could be desired, some fine stock going at low figures in quantity orders. Bulbous stock is moving fine and the supply seems unlimited. Callas and Easter Lilies are in good supply and the demand is good. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Southern smilax for spring openings are coming in strong. Freesias, calendulas, etc., clean up daily.

CLUB HOLDS NOVELTY NIGHT.

"Novelty night" at the Florists' Club was a success in every way, and these special occasions will be continued from time to time. A good attendance was recorded. Following is the report of the committee, composed of Geo. W. Smith, Robert George and Herman A. Hart:

Geo. A. Barber, Beloit, O.—A very creditable exhibit of Sweet peas, carnations and daffodils. Special mention for a vase of White Wonder carnations.

F. C. Bartels, North Olmstead, O.—Vase of freesia, Purity, exceptionally well grown, worthy of comment.

J. M. Gasser Co.—Exceptionally fine display of sweet peas in variety, remarkable for size of flower and length and strength of stem. Vase of Flamingo tulips, a well colored variety, showing great substance and form. Also a vase of prosperity tulip and Improved Pink Loraine, worthy of mention.

Jas. D. Cockroft, Northport, N. Y.—Vase of new dark pink carnation Northport. This variety shows up remarkably well, and is well worthy of honorable mention.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.—Three vases of new carnations, most noteworthy among which was Wm. Eccles, a fine large bright red and exceptionally strong-stemmed carnation, well worthy of mention. Also British Triumph, a fine deep crimson, and Lady Northcliffe, a fine flesh pink; a fine flower and good calyx.

G. S. Ramsburg, Sommersworth, N. H.—Vase of Silver Pink snapdragon. A beautiful variety and highly recommended by the committee.

S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Vase of carnation, Philadelphia, a beautiful medium pink, exceptionally large flower, on long and remarkably stiff stems, and a very good calyx. Highly commended and considered by the committee as one of the best on exhibition.

S. M. Merwarth, Easton, Pa.—Vase of carnations Comfort, a new red with a long stem, attracted much attention.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—Vase of carnations Commodore, a beautiful shade of red, large and well proportioned, flower of good substance, with

ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL.

The St. Valentine's day trade was good this year considering the Lenten season, and the wholesalers in general seemed to be well pleased with the week's receipts. Violets sold well and it is estimated that over 1,750,000 were handled on the market during St. Valentine's week, including, of course, both the double and single varieties. The quality of the stock was good throughout, much better than in former years, and most of the stock sold at wholesale at prices ranging from 30 cents to $1 per 100. The demand for the other flowers was also good, especially for roses and orchids, but the latter did not bring the prices expected. Business since St. Valentine's day has been fair, with plenty of stock of all kinds. Long-stemmed American Beauty roses are none too plentiful, but there is a good supply of short and medium-stemmed flowers. Killarney and White Killarney are seen in larger supply, but Richmond is off crop. Some fine My Maryland are to be had; also Mrs. Aaron Ward, but the supply of Sunburst is limited. Lily of the valley was a little scarce the opening of the week. Home-grown gardenias are also scarce and what little supply of good flowers there is arriving is sold quickly at $3 and $4 per dozen. Lilies are in good supply and some blooms of splendid substance and size are to be had from the dealers handling them. Callas too are plentiful. Sweet peas are being received in large quantities and beautiful long-stemmed flowers of all colors are obtainable. Carnations are seen in large supply at all the stores, but there is very little first-grade stock arriving and it is safe to say that 50 per cent of the blooms that are now arriving in the market are splits. Carnations have had a tendency to advance slightly in price, but the advance cannot come too soon to suit the grower, who is at present pretty much discouraged. Bulbous stock is still too plentiful. Large quantities of tulips of all the leading varieties, both double and single, are received daily, and narcissi of all kinds are in bountiful supply. Besides Von Sion there are Golden Spur, Trumpet Major and a few Emperors and Orange Phoenix. Mignonette, marguerites, calendulas, Roman hyacinths, antirrhinums and stocks both single and double are also among the daily offerings.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have added another American Beauty rose shipper to their list and are now receiving large regular daily shipments of these flowers. The first shipment that arrived contained some excellent flowers and if the balance are of the same quality this firm will never have any difficulty in moving the stock.

Edgar Winterson, Jr., chairman of Florists' Club's sports committee, is arranging several games with out-of-town bowling teams and will very likely play Milwaukee here or in the Cream City in the near future. Anyone wishing to bowl on the local teams should notify Mr. Winterson immediately.

Sinner Bros. have recently made many improvements in their greenhouses and the range is now in better shape than it has been for some time. The proprietors were unfortunate in having a run of bad luck last year, but 1913 with them promises to be much better.

The next annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held at Peoria March 4-5. The local delegation will leave on the Rock Island and Railroad from the LaSalle street station at 9:10 a. m., arriving at 1:25 p. m., March 4.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is now in better crop with Killarney and White Killarney roses. O. Johnson says that the demand for American Beauties is so brisk that his stock is sold almost every day long before the closing hour.

Mrs. F. C. Thom has rented her new building at 1641 Milwaukee avenue, which adjoins her establishment, to the People's Gas Company. She also is making preparations to build a conservatory in the rear of her store.

Phil. Schupp and wife are visiting friends in the south, their last stop being Louisville, Ky. Wm. Homberg, as usual, is in charge of the J. N. Budlong store during Mr. Schupp's absence.

Chas. W. McKellar says that there was an increased demand for orchids at his store on St. Valentine's day and that $6.00 per dozen in a few instances was the highest price received.

The Cook County Florists' Association will meet at the Tavern on Thursday, February 20, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held.

Blewitt & Prickett, proprietors of the Des Plaines Floral Co., have purchased two Brush automobiles and will convert one into a delivery car.

John Mangel had a fine triple column display advertisement in the February 12 issue of the Tribune.

Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., called on the trade here this week.

N. J. Wietor says that the St. Valentine's day trade was very brisk at the Wietor Bros.' store and that in course of another year the sales on this day will equal those of a good Thanksgiving. His firm is now cutting a good supply of roses, with Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland showing up exceptionally well. The carnation supply is quite large and fine stock is being sold at the store.

M. Matchen, the chief engineer at the Peter Reinberg establishment, has taken the local agency for the Detroit steam trap and is now making a bid for the business in this territory. He is giving the trap a thorough trial in the Reinberg greenhouses and says that it is working in A1 condition. Mr. Matchen and Tim Matchen, Peter Reinberg's storeman, are brothers.

George Perdikas, the South Wabash avenue florist, had a record breaking Valentine's day trade and disposed of a vast quantity of violets. He has three stores now and it would not be at all surprising if he would soon open another.

H. B. Gerhardt, of Wilmette, says his St. Valentine's day trade was the best ever. He disposes of the entire output of 12,000 feet of glass at retail and often finds it necessary to buy on the market besides.

Henry Gabel, one of the Chicago Carnation Co.'s traveling representatives, has returned from a western trip with a nice lot of orders for his firm's new scarlet seedling carnation, The Herald.

Louis Wittbold and Fred Nelson are testing out a couple of auto trucks this week with the intention of purchasing another machine for the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s delivery service.

Peter Weiler of the Superior Machine & Boiler Works says that the

The J. B. Deamud Co. is showing a full line of all seasonable flowers and reports a good St. Valentine's day trade. Mr. Deamud has returned from a business trip to Michigan.

Sidney Buchbinder says that Buchbinder Bros. will sell more refrigerators in 1913 than any other year if the orders continue to arrive as they have during the last month.

Peter Propps, of the Chicago Flower Market, is recovering from a severe case of blood poisoning. He had one of his fingers amputated a short while ago.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, had a very pleasant visit this week from his old friend, Wm. Hartshorne, head gardener at the Joliet penitentiary.

It is rumored that Lubliner & Trinz, the East Randolph street florists will open a new store in the Plankinton block in Milwaukee, Wis.

A. Henderson & Co. report trade as very brisk with no let-up in orders. D. P. Roy is lending a hand in the shipping department.

John Michelsen says that the E. C. Amling Co.'s St. Valentine's day trade was very satisfactory, all things considered.

Weiland & Risch are on the job as usual with their fine line of roses, carnations and other miscellaneous stock.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s line of bulbous flowers is complete and a large supply of fine stock is now to be had here.

George Reinberg is still featuring fine callas in quantity and has every reason to feel proud of the fine stock.

C. L. Huffert, 4011 North avenue, says that funeral work is very brisk this February.

J. A. Arnold says that the Pulverized Manure Co. is having an unusually brisk demand for cattle manure at present but manages some how or other to take good care of its regular patrons. Dwight L. Percy Jones is more than pleased with the outlook for the spring business, especially in the supply line and this department is being rapidly stocked up with new goods. ### St. Louis.

ADVERTISING SELLS STOCK.

Publicity had an inning and scored St. Valentine's day. Placards were hung in all the stores pushing trade and the results were the best seen in years. Violets had the call and ranged in price from $6.00 to $10.00 a thousand. Roses, carnations and sweet peas sold well; in fact, everything was cleaned up. Roses and carnations of good quality continue scarce. The weather is clear and warming up.

NOTES.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held a very important and enthusiastic meeting last Thursday. Publicity was discussed. Forty members were present; F. H. Weber in the chair. The attendance would have been larger, but preparations for St. Valentine's day

Montreal.

TRADE VERY BRISK.

Trade during last week was quite lively and Lent has not made itself felt so far. Flowers are plentiful and in great variety. All stores have big displays of cut blooms in their windows. Easter plants are coming along nicely, but it will be extremely difficult to bring enough lilies on time; as far as present appearance go they are a very uneven lot and will have to be carefully graded. Roses in pots are promising, with a good show of buds. There are some spireas and a lot of other stock in sight, such as azaleas, lilacs and bulbous plants. On cut flowers we have to depend on outside growers, but the Montreal Floral Exchange (wholesale only) is ably looking after this end and it is said that they handle 75 per cent of the cut flowers coming to this city.

COOK COUNTY FLORISTS' LEAGUE.

There is a two-men team tournament on now at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys that will continue for six weeks at the close of which $200 in prizes will be awarded to the winners. Pete Hawley, manager of the alleys, has set aside a special prize for the Cook County Florists' Association league which ought to be an inducement for all its members to enter the contest. Allie Zech and Fred Price lead the florists so far in the tournament race with a three game total of 1,059 pins.

VALENTINE DAY TRADE GOOD

The feature of the week was the demand caused for St. Valentine's day. There was a ready sale for all the violets, sweet peas, gardenias and other flowers suitable for corsage bunches that were offered. Roses which have been off crop are becoming more plentiful and of superior quality, some fine Killarneys being seen. American Beauties, which have been almost prohibitive on account of the high price, are easing up and before long will be offered at popular figures. Carnations are about equal to the demand and clean up fairly well. Orchids, which took a "spurt" for the holiday, being very much used in valentine work, are still above the demand. In the highest grades exceptionally fine flowers are seen. Gardenia growers appear to have reached perfection with their specialty, as the stock coming to the market this season is much better than ever offered before. Many of the flowers are as large as camellias, borne on stems twelve inches or longer, with an abundance of glossy green leaves. There appears to be too many for the demand, however, as at times the prices range very low for such fine stock. The first crops of the Easter stocks of lilies are coming in, and from now on there will be no dearth of these flowers. Callas are also plentiful. Snapdragon has been in good demand at prices that were better than before the holidays. Some of the growers say that quite a good deal of the stock has come blind, but as the sun gets stronger they hope for better results. In speaking of prices, one of the wholesale men said he thought that the general run of prices for this season would be at least 10 per cent less than those realized last year. The reason for this he attributed to the increase in the supply, which is growing faster than the demand. There was an increased sale over that of last season, the shipping trade particularly growing in volume, but they never appeared, except in times of scarcity, to get ahead of the supply.

NOTES.

A prominent grower in speaking of expansion and the future of the market said he never ventured to tell another man how to run his business. If the demands of his business called for another house and he saw his way clear to do so, he went ahead and built it, regardless of what others were

WHOLESALE FLORIST,

Orchids, Beauties, Valley, Tea Roses. The best on the market for the price. Every facility for rapid delivery doing. He had always been able to dispose of his increased product and saw no reason now for doubting the future.

That this city is still leading as the country's center for florists' supplies is daily demonstrated, the approach of Easter bringing many of the trade from other cities. The M. Rice Co. entertained a prominent New York retailer one afternoon last week who came over especially to look their stock over and after leaving a good order left for home, saying that he felt very well repaid for his journey.

In spite of all the talk of overproduction there are a number of growers who seem to see a future in the business and are going ahead increasing their output. George Burton, who has been very successful with American Beauty roses, will add an additional house 56x275 feet for this variety. A new boiler and stack, together with a packing room and refrigerator, are also to be built.

For St. Valentine's day there was not much seen in the novelty line, most of the orders being for corsage bouquets of violets and gardenias, orchids, lily of the valley, sweet peas and roses. These were put up in fancy heart-shaped pasteboard boxes or the regular corsage bouquet box tied with tape or ribbons and sealed with the wax trademark or name of the house.

At the Leo Niessen market they had a very good trade for St. Valentine's day, all flowers being in demand. Sweet peas, lily of the valley and violets were leaders. American Beauty roses are a factor here.

Exceptionally fine cattleyas are the top-notchers at Edward Reid's Ranstead street establishment. Such fine flowers are a pleasure to handle. At least so says Mr. Reid.

At Berger Brothers' market spring flowers and violets were leaders. Richmond roses are also a feature. Business is reported good for the season.

The gilt arrows made by the M. Rice Co. made quite a hit and were seen in many of the boxes generally tied outside with a few flowers or pussy willow sprays. K.

New York.*PRICES REMAIN THE SAME

While the condition of business in the wholesale district during the past week was not actually discouraging there was nothing to boast about. Some loose talk has been heard about New York being able to "take care" of everything that came here in the line of cut flowers. New York is a great city, great in all that tends toward human progress, but it cannot stand for the sins and sorrows of the whole nation, and relating to cut flowers, it should not be made the dumping ground for the entire country. Stock moved rather slowly during the early part of the past week, but it cleaned up very well on February 14 and 15. There seems to be a revival of interest in St. Valentine's day and all the retailers report good business. There has been practically no change in prices since our report of last week. There is an abundance of good stock.

Monday, February 17.—While there is a fair movement in stocks today the tendency of prices is downward. Heavy shipments of roses, carnations and bulbous stock are arriving, and there is more stock in sight than can be cleaned up.

NOTES.

An event worthy of note is the securing of another floor in the Coogan Building, Sixth avenue and Twenty-sixth street, by the New York Cut Flower Co. This is the floor recently occupied by A. J. Guttman and others. It is understood that all the present tenants, excepting the Henry M. Robinson Co., will immediately vacate. A. J. Guttman has already secured a store on Twenty-eighth street, near Sixth avenue. Manager Joseph Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., is expected home from Europe on February 22.

The sweet peas from the A. Zvolanek greenhouses, Bound Brook, N. J., are now being shipped to Philip Kessler, in the Coogan Building.

New York Federation of Floral Clubs.

The regular meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs was held at the Agricultural College, Cornell University, Ithaca, Wednesday, February 12. Among those present were President Wm. F. Kasting, Secretary John Young, Treasurer W. A. Adams, Prof. J. F. Cowell, Harry A. Bunyard, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., H. C. Steinhoff, Prof. A. C. Beal, Dr. Erl A. Bates, George E. Thorp, M. H. Hoffman, Fred Vick, John Dunbar, E. R. Fry, George Arnold, Dr. Edmund M. Mills.

There was a lecture by Dr. Edmund M. Mills on "The Rose and Its Culture," illustrated by lantern slides, and another by Harry A. Bunyard on "Twentieth Century Horticulture," also illustrated, "Asters and Their Culture" and "Diseases of Florists' Crops" were discussed by Geo. Arnold and Dr. Donald Reddick. This was followed by a business meeting. President Kasting reported as to the progress made toward getting an appropriation of $60,000 from the state for greenhouses for experimental work. At the time the outlook was very favorable that the appropriation would be made. Dr. Erl A. Bates reported progress for his committee, which is seeking to get an appropriation for a horticultural building at Syracuse. In this matter they were having the support of the fruit and vegetable growers. President Kasting explained that if the appropriation was obtained 60 per cent would be used for experimental work in floriculture and the other 40 per cent in experimental work in vegetable culture.

Prof. Beal made a report showing the amount of greenhouses in the state, area covered, exclusive of sash and frame houses. Upon Dr. Bates' motion Prof. Beal was directed to prepare a letter to be sent to the clubs belonging to the federation to be distributed by them to their members, giving them information as to what was being done, and what we were trying to do and to cover the interesting points brought out in his talk to the federation. Prof. Cowell, Dr. Bates and Charles Vick were appointed a committee to get in touch with the new secretary of the State Fair Commission, to assist him in strengthening the flower show in connection with the state fair. Dr. Erl A. Bates, H. N. Hoffman and W. H. Siebrecht, Sr. were appointed a committee on extension to organize floral clubs in different parts of the state so they could join and make it the strongest organization of its kind in New York state. Mr. Siebrecht invited all the members and their friends to be present at the International Flower Show, New York, April 5-12, 1913, and promised all a good time. Meeting adjourned to meet at the state fair at Syracuse in September.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Buffalo.*TRADE RATHER QUIET.

This city usually gets its real winter some time between January and May each year and this has been no exception. The past week has been about as cold as one could wish for, with very good sleighing in the residence section. Social functions and weddings are rather quiet, many making the usual attempts to keep Lent as it should be. Funeral work has been very active.

NOTES.

The winter meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs was held at the Agricultural building at Cornell University, Ithaca, Wednesday, February 12. President Kasting presiding. There was a good attendance from New York, Rochester, Buffalo, Syracuse and Elmira. Secretary Young read his report of the Syracuse meeting and President Kasting outlined the provisions of the bill in the legislature asking for an appropriation for greenhouses for floriculture and vegetable growing under glass. It was farmers' week at Cornell and the attendance was very large. Those who were at the meeting from Buffalo were: W. F. Kasting, president; W. A. Adams, treasurer; Professor John F. Cowell, George Arnold, farm superintendent for Jas. Vick & Sons, Rochester, gave a lecture on aster growing, together with lantern slides. It was very interesting, as was also the lecture of Dr. Reddick on diseases of sweet peas, carnations and several other plants. Both lectures were well attended.

St. Valentine's day has got to be one of the best days in the year in this city. A judicious amount of the much talked of publicity by one of the local florists for several years in the daily papers has convinced the people that a bunch of violets, a corsage bouquet, or a box of spring flowers are more appreciated than the pretty card. Artistic boxes and other accessories to go with the flowers has made it a great day.

The last regular meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held February 4. Nomination of officers was the principal business. The election will be held in March. The Florists'

Bowling Club went to Rochester February 17 to endeavor to maintain their past records and win again.

There have been several conventions and trade exhibits which have been followed by banquets. Those held in the hotels gave the florists doing hotel work some good orders, and as a whole trade has been very good.

S. A. Anderson, wife and two sons have returned from Bermuda. BISON.

Rochester, N. Y.*TOO MANY CARNATIONS.

The market for the past week has been overstocked with weak-stemmed carnations. We had a very busy Valentine week trade. The market furnished an abundance of red roses, violets, sweet peas and narcissi for the occasion. We are in the grip of winter, but trade holds up fairly well.

NOTES.

The Vert bill was opposed as unjust, unworkable and unnecessary at the annual meeting of the National Association of Retail Nurserymen, held at the Chamber of Commerce assembly room on February 13. The bill is said to be unworkable since no way is provided for keeping a record of the trees from the time they are sold until they mature sufficiently to show their variety. Besides discussing the Vert bill, the association re-elected officers. They are Edward S. Osborn, president; J. H. Pitkin, vice-president; F. E. Grover, secretary-treasurer. About forty retail nurserymen attended the meeting. They represented for the most part New York and other Eastern states.

John Dunbar, president of the Rochester Florists' Association, and assistant superintendent of the Rochester parks, says the Markham elm, near Avon, of which only a small piece remains, may have begun to grow six hundred years ago. The immense size of this giant of the past can readily be judged from the hollowed and partial shell of the base which remains. The trunk of the elm was 45 ft. in circumference three feet above the ground, and at noon the shade of the branches extended over an acre. In the spring of 1893 the north side of the tree, which was mainly a shell, blew down.

At the monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, John Dunbar read two papers on "The North Carolina Poplar," and "Hardy Fruiting Trees and Shrubs," mentioning 110 specimens which are found in the city parks.

E. R. Fry is this week visiting Ithaca, for Farmers' week, he being a delegate. He also hopes to get ideas on farming, having recently purchased a 40-acre farm.

Horace J. Head, who was recently operated on at the hospital for appendicitis, is now spending a few weeks in the country to recuperate his health.

R. W. Wilson, manager of the Rochester Floral Co., was instrumental in capturing a burglar on the next floor above his store.

H. E. Wilson reports having had a very good Valentine trade and says business for the past week has been good.

Harry Bruel, representing G. B. Hart, started on the road last week.

Louis Dilloff of Schloss Bros., New York, called on trade this week.

H. J. H.

LANSING, MICH.—The Michigan Experiment Association, organized a year ago, will hold a special meeting February 26-27, during institute at the Michigan Agricultural College. Members of the organization will report on tests made of seed received for the experiment station.

MARKET NONE TO GOOD.

The market is not any too good, yet roses are more plentiful, also bulbous stock, of which there is a fine array. Carnations are still coming in plentifully and violets are very druggy and somewhat hard to dispose of.

OPENING OF FLOWER EXCHANGE.

The opening of the Boston Flower Exchange Saturday, February 15, was a great event. The trade was represented from nearly all over the country. There were nice exhibits of flowers and plants of all kinds, and everything was of a high order. Some nice roses were exhibited. Milady from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., was shown. This rose has been described before, and it has not lost any of its good qualities. From the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., came a new surprise, a new rose, a light pink very full, of splendid growth and a color unlike anything we have at present. They also exhibited their Mrs. Chas. Russell, The New England Conservatories, Exeter, N. H. showed some well grown commercial stock. Pink and White Killarney, Killarney Queen, and Richmond roses. S. J. Reuter & Son Co. showed some nice Melody, and Mrs. Ward roses. The carnations exhibited were in very fine shape, Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, Wm. R. Nicholson and others showing some remarkable stock. Mayor Fitzgerald officially opened the meeting in the afternoon and was given a rousing reception. John Farquhar for the S. A. F. and Wm. Kennedy for the local Gardeners and Florists' Club made remarks. An orchestra supplied music. Many of the fair sex were present. Luncheon was served in the basement. It was a red letter day in the history of the local flower trade, and the new market is one that the trade must feel proud of with good light, plenty of room, and everything to do business quickly.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKET STICKS.

The stockholders of the Co-operative Flower Market held a meeting at the Quincy House, Wednesday night, February 12, to discuss consolidating with the Flower Exchange, and moving their business to Winthrop square. The records and correspondence between the two markets were read, to give the stockholders an idea of everything which had been done between the two committees from both markets. A general discussion followed. J. N. McFarland was chairman, B. A. McGinty advocated more publicity, and more telephones. J. M. Cohen said the publicity greatly depended on the salesman himself. If he got out and hustled the public would be forthcoming, and more business would come to the market. W. H. Elliot, who is landlord of the market and from whom the society hires it, spoke at length. The terms which the Cooperative Flower Market wanted would prohibit him from leasing, or letting it for the sale of flowers, he said. He stated he had spent $12,000 to put the place in shape for a market, and it was fair he should be reimbursed for the 41-2 years the lease had to run, but he left it to the organization to do what they thought best. Chas. Robinson didn't wish to express an opinion, because his trade was with both markets. R. E. Lassman was emphatic in his attitude to have the market stay where it was. The sense of the meeting was, that consolidation would have been a good thing and perhaps at some future time it might be brought around, but the agreements wanted were not good enough for them to dissolve and give up their charter, and it was stated that in the new market there were not stalls enough for all, and one man stated about 20 would have to go in the basement. David Duncan made a motion for a vote to be taken, which was, and showed a unanimous vote to stay in Park street, and do business. The meeting adjourned about 10 o'clock.

MAC.

Washington.

The automobile carnival called for some very pretty decorations. Geo. H. Cooke had the decoration for the Buick Co., which won the first prize, a large silver loving cup. J. H. Small decorated the show rooms of Cook & Stoddard, which carried off second honor. Both places were very beautifully decorated with smilax, palms and flowering plants.

Gude Bros. had the decoration for the wedding of Miss Ruth Noyes to Dr. Ralph Walker, at St. Thomas' church. The decorations consisted of smilax, palms, ferns and Easter lilies. The bridal bouquet consisted of white orchids and lily of the valley. The bridesmaids and flower girls carried large bunches of roses.

The ladies of the Washington Florists' Club were the guests of the Baltimore ladies on February 12, at a dinner. After dinner they howled a few games.

Ed. Midomanski, with Geo. H. Cooke, has been laid up for a few days with the gripe.

BUSINESS FAIR.

The weather last week was very favorable, but it did not bring with it any tremendous increase in business or anything of that kind. Business was, however, very fair. The very large receipts were taken up fairly well by the demand at only fair prices. The notable exceptions are double violets and lily of the valley. The call for both was expected to be very large last week because of St. Valentine's day. The first did not sell well because of the heavy receipts of home-grown single violets. When these come in strong at this season the doubles hardly seem able to compete with them. The lily of the valley did not elicit any unusually strong call and as a result the receipts were hardly taken up. The good, long sweet peas find buyers easily. The short ones go begging and move only at the very lowest prices. Roses of all kinds are selling very well. The demand and supply are about equal, although on some days the latter runs a little ahead of the call. Choice American Beauty roses are in large supply and do not clean up entirely. The carnation supply is still very large and includes very many splits and culls. The good ones sell well. The demand for giganteum lilies is not quite as strong as it was a fortnight ago. The supply of tulips, jonquils, daffodils and hyacinths continues larger than the call for them and as a result some very excellent stock is moving at prices below its real value, while the poorer grades are hardly selling at all.

A baby girl, weighing 11½ pounds, arrived at the home of Ray Murphy last Saturday. Mother and baby doing nicely. Congratulations.

Henry Gockels' home was burned Sunday evening. The volunteer firemen were unable to cope with the flames.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting at Glen Cove, L. I., January 12. President Brown in the chair. The attendance was not as large as usual. C. A. Coffin, Locust Valley, was elected a life member. Fred Mambotan and L. Callahan, Glen Cove, were elected to active membership. The committee appointed to visit Valentine Cleres and pass on his seedling carnation, Red Spring, recommended that a certificate of merit be awarded. This is a good red carnation and sure to make a mark. It was decided to hold the annual euchre and dance of this society at Glen Cove April 3. Schedules for the Third International Flower Show of the S. A. F. were distributed to the members interested. Awards in the monthly competition were: V. Cleres, gardenias, first; J. MacDonald, sweet peas, first; J. Robinson, vase of fine freesias, honorable mention. Prizes are offered for three calliflowers, one cineraria and one stock at the next meeting, March 12.

MARKET UNCHANGED.

The market remains practically unchanged with plenty of all kinds of bulb stock. Roses are still a scarcity, but are a little more plentiful than previously. Carnations are arriving in large quantities but seem to be moving fairly well. Carnations, sweet peas and violets were in demand for St. Valentine's day, but the sale was not especially noticeable on account of the large quantities of stock. Lilies of the valley are in quantities enough to supply the demand, but there still remains a scarcity in the Harrisii lilies. Enough green goods to fill all orders.

NOTES.

C. C. Pollworth reports business good with a heavy demand for red carnations, sweet peas and violets for St. Valentine's day. This firm is receiving some fine bulb stock, sweet peas and violets and a heavy cut of carnations from their carnation range.

R. Leitz has purchased another new delivery car to enable him to give his customers better service. He reports business fine and is adding another greenhouse to his range.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports business good. From the outlook at the Brown Deer plant this firm will have an exceptionally fine cut of Harrisii lilies for Easter.

Manke Bros. are making arrangements for their new greenhouse addition. The materials will be furnished by the J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago.

E. Praefke is adding a new greenhouse to his range. Mr. Praefke is bringing some exceptionally fine tulips to the market.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Allister Currie, of the A. Currie Co., and Mrs. Clauson, of this city.

J. J. Karins, of the Henry Dreer Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called on the local trade the latter part of the week.

G. Baerman is sending in some exceptionally fine bulb stock to the local market from his new greenhouses.

It is rumored that a new retail store will be opened in the Plankinton block by Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago.

Gust. Rusch & Co. report business good with plenty of all kinds of stock, with the exception of roses.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President; Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford, Conn., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary. Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O., June 24-26, 1913.

J. C. VAUGHAN and wife, of Chicago, are at Miami, Fla.

ARTICHOKEs in carloads are arriving in New York from California.

MANY beans were frozen in the vicinity of Miami, Fla., February 16.

WE are advised that the proposed Kansas seed law was killed in committee.

W. ATLEE BURPEE of Philadelphia, Pa., was in Havana, Cuba, early in the month.

MIAMI, FLA.—J. E. Northrup and daughters, of Minneapolis, Minn., have spent a month here.

FARGO, N. D.—Prof. G. W. Randlett has been elected president of the North Dakota Improved Seed Association.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade February 19 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.

THE Florida Seed & Floral Co. is a new establishment at Jacksonville, Fla., located on Bay street. G. H. Evans is manager.

PALO ALTO, CALIF.—F. C. Sloan, writing February 3, says that it looks as if seed growers of that section were to have another dry season.

IT is said to be between Chicago, Buffalo and Rochester for the Canners' convention next year, with San Francisco talked of for 1915.

CORVALLIS, ORE.—Plans are under way for the establishment of a seed house by the agronomy department of the Oregon Agricultural College. Threshing, cleaning and weighing rooms are to be included in the new building.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—J. W. Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, has returned from a prosperous eastern trip and, while realizing the necessity of more rains, says the seed crops are generally in good condition.

MUSCATINE, IA.—J. E. Hoopes & Co. report that orders are coming in freely for seed sweet potatoes, asparagus and rhubarb roots and horse radish sets for spring establishment. Contract seed orders for 1913 crop are starting off good.

HOLLAND BULBS.—The mild weather has encouraged the growth of hyacinths, which are now uncovered and subject to damage by cold winds in March. Tulips in the poorly drained sections have suffered severely through the continuous rains.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Chris. Reuter reports that notwithstanding poor crops and low prices last season the market gardeners in his territory are planting their usual acreage of beans, corn, cucumbers, tomatoes and potatoes and that the outlook is for good returns.

Kansas Hits at Free Seeds.

The Kansas state senate has passed a resolution to request Kansas congressmen and United States senators to quit sending free seeds to their constituents. The resolution sets forth the fact that the growth of the agricultural colleges and the general knowledge of the people regarding the advantages of using good seeds has put an end to the need of the old, time-worn congressional practice. In addition, the resolution stated that this practice loaded up the mails and constituted a heavy and needless expense to the federal government and the mail service. The resolution also requested the Kansas congressmen to use their influence towards securing a bill putting an end to the distribution of free seeds by members of congress. The senate passed the resolution without a dissenting vote.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent. Color a light salmon pink — a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

Celery Plants.

Since the introduction of mechanical watering celery culture has taken a renewed hold, as by proper irrigation excellent celery can be produced almost anywhere; and by adding the mulch system there is hardly a soil so dry and sandy that celery can not be grown. With added interest and increased output there is a widespread demand for plants, especially for early plants. While the main crop of plants is probably grown by putting in the open ground, these plants come too late for many purposes, as they scarcely are fit for transplanting before July.

When starting celery seed early in greenhouses or hot beds one must bear in mind the great danger of one entire output going to seed the first season, which would mean a total loss. There is no question whatever that a few weeks earlier or later controls this tendency. We therefore do not feel safe in sowing celery seed before March 1. It is much better to start a little later and then keep the plants growing all the time, permitting no stop. Rich earth should be used from the start and water supplied freely. The seed being fine and slow to germinate, is in constant danger of drying out. We do not cover it at all, but firm it well with a brick or plank and then spread a piece of cheesecloth over the ground, laying the cloth directly on the ground. Thus one can water right on the cloth, which prevents washing out and drying out at the same time. This cloth may remain until the plants lift it. Thus it is fairly easy to get a stand under trying conditions.

We avoid thick seeding and prefer rows 2½ inches apart to the broadcast method. When several inches high the seedlings are transplanted closely in rows four inches apart by the "heeling in" method, which is faster and better than dibbling. The foregoing remarks are especially applicable to Golden Self Blanching, which is the most popular early kind and at the same time the seed of this kind is scarce, expensive, weak in constitution, and the plants slow to develop. On the other hand, we can produce an immense quantity of plants from one ounce of seed. We believe we handled almost 50,000 plants last year from a single ounce.

To produce late plants out of doors we need a fine firm seed bed and an early start. Just as soon as the ground can be fitted, sow the seed. We prefer not to plow or dig up deeply—merely rake the land fine and even and drill the seed ¼-inch deep and 12 inches apart for weed hoeing. By mixing some easy-growing seed like lettuce with the celery, the rows can be seen earlier and worked sooner. It is also an advantage to prepare the celery seed a week or ten days in advance of planting by spreading in a box or pan in a warm room, cellar, greenhouse or hot bed and keeping it damp. Planted first before the sprout, the seeds will come up more quickly, and often this is the only way to get a stand.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held February 14. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to hold the fall show in Stamford, Conn., date to be announced later. Quite a number of splendid exhibits were staged, the culture being of the highest. The judges reported as follows:

Robt. Williamson—Cultural certificate for well flowered specimen Coe-logne cristata.

James Stuart—Cultural certificate for splendidly grown collection of amaryllis.

P. W. Popp—Honorable mention for vase of the new carnation California Giant, an immense flower measuring 6 inches across; color white, tinted with pink, showing Prosperity blood; stems 2½-3 feet long and free flowering.

A. L. Marshall—Highly commended for Byrophyllum calycinum.

Louis Whitman—Highly commended for vase of finely grown Richmond roses and lily of the valley.

W. J. Seeley—Highly commended for Primula obconica.

Anton Peterson—Very highly commended for Nephrolepis elegantissima.

C. A. Hakamon—Vote of thanks for vase of Christmas flowering sweet peas.

Edward Frenzell—Vote of thanks for sweet peas and narcissus.

A. L. Marshall—Vote of thanks for narcissus Golden Spur and amaryllis vittata hybrid.

The feature of the evening was the illustrated lecture on the International Horticultural Exhibition held in London, May, 1912, delivered by H. A. Bunyard, of New York. Mr. Bunyard spoke in glowing terms of the splendid exhibits staged at the meeting, and also the large number of members present, also requesting their support toward the success of the International Flower Show to be held in New York in April. The speaker dwelt at length on the wonderful exhibits, the high excellence of culture attained, and the splendid interest shown by the public. While perhaps the pictures failed to do justice to the exhibition, the able manner in which the lecture was given by Mr. Bunyard more than made up for their defects. At the conclusion of the lecture a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Bunyard by the members. Wm. Scott, of Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., has promised to speak at our next meeting.

The Late William D. Ellwanger.

William D. Ellwanger, a son of the late George Ellwanger and himself an active figure for many years in the business and social life of Rochester, N. Y., died Sunday, February 16, at his home, 510 East avenue. He had not been in good health for some time, but his condition was not considered serious. Mr. Ellwanger was president of the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Company and also president of the Ellwanger & Barry Realty Company. His club connections were numerous and his name appeared in the directorate of several business institutions. He also was a writer of prose and verse that were received with favorable comment. Besides his wife he leaves one daughter, Evelyn S. Ellwanger.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Association.

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association was held in the offices of the state entomologist at the agricultural experiment station, New Haven, February 12. President McCartney in the chair. Election of officers resulted as follows: T. E. Burroughs, Deep River, president; Steven Hoyt, New Canaan, vice-president; F. S. Thomas, Manchester, secretary; W. W. Hunt, Hartford, treasurer; John Barnes, Yalesville, chairman legislative committee; C. R. Burr, Manchester, chairman executive committee; Paul Hubbard, Bristol, chairman entertainment committee.

The association was found to be in a flourishing condition financially and otherwise. Among those on the programme were John Barnes, "Storage Cellars;" C. R. Burr, "Replacement of Nursery Stock;" Dr. W. E. Britton, state entomologist, "Insect Pest Law." The legislative committee was instructed to take such steps as possible to do away with some of the objectionable features of the bill. A bill permitting a short open season for deer, which are found to be very destructive of young nursery stock, was recommended.

At the afternoon session there was a lecture by Prof. E. H. Jenkins of the agricultural experiment station on "Fertilizers," and an illustrated lecture on "Japan and Japanese Gardens," by E. F. Coe. Both were very instructive and were much appreciated.

the work of pruning, thinning and shaping can be attended to with neatness and dispatch. Gather up all the twigs and branches and do not leave them to be trampled into the mud or they will make trouble when you are cultivating next spring. Besides, many of these prunings will make excellent material for propagation. Gather them up and store away in a place where they will not dry out and the first stormy day they can be made into cuttings for spring planting.

Six or eight inches is the length usually advised for hardwood cuttings for outside planting, but they may be made shorter or longer as conditions require. If too short they are likely to dry out before getting established, and if too long it will increase the work of digging. Much will depend upon the character of the soil in the cutting beds and on the facilities for caring for them. A great many grape vines are propagated in this section and the long cutting is used to a great extent, the two-storied plant being demanded by most of the planters. But whatever the length of the cutting, there is no reason for having more than one or two buds above ground. This applies to cuttings of deciduous plants.

The sooner cuttings are made the better, though many kinds may be taken for a month or more and some even after the buds begin to swell. The slower rooting kinds, however, should be taken early so that they may have time to form a good callous before the buds begin to grow. Cuttings of evergreens should have been taken before this, as most of them are slow and require more time than deciduous plants. They may still be taken, however, if the wood is still plump and stiff.

It is customary to put these evergreen cuttings directly into sand. Put them in a cool place to begin with and later they can be given more heat. These cuttings do not need to be planted very deep. We propagate in a small way in ordinary flats with about two inches of sand. If the wood is in good condition, the larger the cutting the larger will be your plant at the end of the year's growth. There is a great difference in the time required for different evergreens to strike root. Some will strike in a few months and some will remain in the sand a year or even more before rooting.

We find it pays to prepare our evergreens for winter by bringing the branches closely together and passing stout twine around them, to hold them in place. This prevents the snow and ice from breaking and bending them and also prevents burning to a great extent. Recently we passed through a severe ice storm and our trees and shrubs were coated with ice until they were carrying five or six times their weight. These conditions lasted for three days. Unprotected plants were badly bent and torn, while those which had been wrapped up came through without injury. C.

Greens are scarce and smilax exceptionally so.

CLUB MEETING.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met at the home of Henry Gaethje of Rock Island on the afternoon of Thursday, February 13, with nearly every member present. The members first inspected the plant of Mr. Gaethje, and many were the comments on the stock, which is exceptionally fine. Mr. Gaethje does a retail business and grows most of the stock required to run a first-class place. Wm. Gows of Bettendorf, ta., read a paper on hardy plants for cut flowers for florists' use which was well received and brought out a lengthy discussion. Nomination of officers took place, the election to be held at the next meeting, which will be March 13 at the home of Wm. Knees of Moline. Supper and a social hour followed.

NOTES.

Ludwig Stapp is preparing to build a large cistern to hold several thousand barrels, to be used in an emergency in case anything happens to his large pumps, as occurred last spring when he was without water for three days. His bulb cellar built of concrete, half in and half out of the ground, has proved a success and saves lots of hard work getting in bulbs in zero weather.

McKinley day had no effect on the carnation market, no doubt because the day was not made a feature at the down-town stores. St. Valentine's day, however, proved a bigger trade-getter than ever before. There have been very few events that call for large orders, but plenty of funeral work to keep all busy.

Rohlf's, the nurseryman, had the misfortune to have a section of his boiler give way, flooding his cellar and playing freeze-out with the rest of his home. A faulty casting was the cause. The boiler is a new one.

Superintendent Boehm of the Davenport parks is busy designing plans for the new park. The winter has been so mild that much grading has already been done.

John Temple's place, the oldest establishment in Davenport, will be sold out and torn down as soon as possible. The ground will be platted and built up.

Hensley of Rock Island is the proudest and happiest man in the country. It's a 11-pound girl.

Ludwig Stapp of Rock Island is the owner of a new delivery car.

The shaded part "C" shows the amount of shade cast by ridge and furrow houses running east and west.

This Shows Why Wide Houses Cast Less Shade

WITH a ridge and furrow house you have two ridges and a wide centre gutter to cast the shade, as against only one ridge in the wide house. It takes exactly the same roof to cover one as the other. The same sides, glass, benches, heating go in both. Once heated, it takes less to keep up the temperature in a single wide house. You have better ventilation conditions. The wide house is the logical house. Wide houses when built with the "L & B" Improved Sectional Iron Frame construction are economical in every way. You get the lightest house possible, and one that has the endorsement of hundreds of growers. It has stood the test of years—not months. Investing your good money in a house is a serious matter, so give it the careful consideration it deserves. It will be greatly to your advantage to talk it over with us.

VALENTINE DAY BREAKS RECORD.

St. Valentine's day proved a record-breaker in the amount of business done and the generally satisfactory prices realized. This festive day is yearly becoming more of a factor to reckon with. The growing popularity of flowers as valentines has awakened the public and florists alike and the latter this year were better prepared than ever before for the extraordinary demand that the advertising and appropriate window displays developed. Some of the displays were most elaborate and included practical suggestions of gifts for the day and the response of the flower lovers was most generous. No florist could name the most popular of the many attractive plants and novel arrangements offered. Violets, of course, had a great call and sweet peas were exhausted early in the day. Heart-shaped boxes filled with attractive, dainty effects met with great favor and many were sold, while bulbous stock, both cut and in pot plants, moved with a freedom similar to the Easter trade. Roses were very scarce, the supply being far short of the demand. Carnations for the first time this season were plentiful, but all the really good stock was used up and even the poorer grades found an outlet the next day at prices corresponding to the quality. The supply of cut bulbous stock is daily increasing and the quality improving, though much of it is not entitled to the original cost of the bulbs.

COLLEGE POINT, L. I.—The firm of G. Golsner's Sons is suing the New York and Queens Gas Co. for loss of plants alleged to have been caused by leakage from a gas main. It is charged that the gas seeped through the earth, filling the greenhouse and causing the plants to die.

FLORISTS AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists and Gardeners' Club was held Tuesday evening, February 11, at French hall, Amherst Agricultural College. The members had been specially invited to Amherst on this occasion so as to take the opportunity of meeting Wm. Duckham and C. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., who during the day had been lecturing to the students.

Mr. Totty is a man whose perseverance has carried him to a very high standing in the ranks of commercial florists, and pleased the members greatly by the interesting account he gave of his visit to the International Flower Show held in London last year. The speaker declared himself delighted not only with the well grown plants and flowers, but also spoke highly of the arranging of the exhibits and the color blending. Mr. Duckham is superintendent of the Willis D. James estate at Madison, which is one of the finest in the country.

It was decided to hold the banquet on the evening of Tuesday, March 11, at Mrs. Boydens. Frank Barnard and Tickey were appointed as a committee to arrange an entertainment program. The next meeting will be held at the greenhouse of Fields, the Florist, Northampton, Tuesday evening, March 11. Prof. Waugh of Amherst is down for an illustrated lecture.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Seeds for March Sowing.

The middle of March is the proper time for the sowing of the main crop of summer annuals. The seedsmen have seen that the growers have the catalogues, and the lists of the wants for the year should be made out at once, if not already done, and the seeds procured and sown. How often have we seen good growers spending valuable time during the busy days of May and June hunting for some small stock that could have been easily grown, but was neglected at the proper time. It is a good time now to look back at the sales of the last year or two and note what lines of stock were in short supply or were carelessly omitted. Such matters as this are the little things that count in a successful business, for the time taken in hunting up and procuring the cheaper kinds of stock during the busy season more than eats up all the profit received in handling it. The seeds that should be sown now are almost endless in variety, and they include asters, Phlox Drummondii, zinnias, marigolds, balsams, antirrhinums, begonias, calandula, celosias, cobæas, cosmos, gauras, mignonette, nicotianas, nasturtiums, petunias, salpiglossis, ricinus, salvias, scabiosa, stocks, thunbergias and others that may be demanded. With the exception of Cobæa scandens, mignonette and ricinus, which should be sown in pots, these can all be sown in flats and as soon as large enough transplanted to pots or spaced in flats, and good stock be had for summer bedding.

Iceland Poppies.

A beautiful cut flower for summer use not often grown is the Iceland poppy. While it is a perennial, yet it can be treated as an annual if the seed is sown early and the plants transplanted. Seeds sown in March will bloom the coming summer, and the varieties of color range through the yellow and orange to white. The petals have a peculiar satiny texture and are beautifully crumpled, and if the flowers are picked in the early morning they will stand in water for a long time and are very decorative. There are few annuals that will attract more attention than a vase of these lovely poppies arranged with appropriate green, and besides they have a delicious fragrance. They are easily grown, and if the flowers are kept picked will continue to bloom all summer. Another poppy that can be grown for cut flowers is the Shirley poppy, but the flowers do not last as well as the Iceland poppies.

Camellias.

While it is a question if the camellia will ever become as popular as it was years ago, yet there seems to be a growing demand for the blooms of the "Japonica" as it was so familiarly known to the grandparents of the present generation, and the flowers are well adapted to certain classes of work or occasions. A few dwarf plants are now also seen in flower in some of the stores. They are easily grown, the prime requisite being a cool house, one with a night temperature of 45 degrees to 50 degrees, and the constant care throughout the year that all hardwooded plants require. The large specimens which are grown for cut blooms may be planted in the ground of the house, first spading in a quantity of leaf-mold and rotted cow manure. The smaller plants are generally grown in pots, firmly planted in the same kind of soil, with plenty of drainage. They do not need repotting often and when done the shift should be to only one size larger, and this should be done just after the plant is through flowering, for it then starts to make its growth for another season. When the growth starts the plants should be given plenty of water and frequently syringed; in fact, careful watering is the one thing necessary in their culture. They should never become dry, and during the hot days of summer frequent syringings are required, which also greatly assists in keeping down mealy bug and scale, the only two insects to which the plant is subject. The cause of the buds dropping, which will sometimes occur, can invariably be traced to the plant becoming dry sometime during its growth. During the summer heavy shade over the plants will be required and an abundance of air should be provided at this time.

Geraniums.

At the approach of spring the geraniums and other bedding stock will make rapid growth and from those which are large enough a top cutting may be taken now. While these cuttings will not make good-sized plants for bedding out yet they can be grown on for stock plants for another year. It is time now to take account of the stock on hand and look over the amount that has been required in the past and if it is found that there will be a probable shortage of any varieties procure them at once. They can be obtained at this time, either small plants or rooted cuttings, at low prices. Many growers lose every year by putting off their buying too late when the prices have advanced to such a figure that there is no profit in handling them. It is seldom that one who has much bedding to do has geraniums enough especially of S. A. Nutt or Alphonse Ricard, and this is the time to procure the stock, and if a grower has any room to spare it is good business to stock up with these varieties, for there is a guaranteed sale for all well grown plants in May. The plants that are now in 3-in. pots will require going over often and spacing out, that well grown stocky plants may be had. If crowded now, tall, weak, spindly plants are too often the result, and when grown in this way are not fit to make a good showing in the bed when planted.

Greenheart.

A wood which, according to the Department of Agriculture, outlasts iron and steel when placed in water is British Guiana greenheart. It is used in ship and dock building, trestles, bridges, shipping platforms, flooring, and for all purposes involving great wear and tear. The woods of two species of West African trees have been introduced into English markets as substitutes for greenheart under the name of African greenheart, but both are inferior to the South American tree.

All the gates, piers and jetties of the Liverpool docks and practically all the lock gates of the Bridgewater canal in England are of greenheart. The use of greenheart has been specified for sills and fenders in the lock gates of the Panama canal. Nansen's ship, the "Fram," and the Antarctic ship "Discovery," were built of greenheart.

Though it grows in parts of British, French, and Dutch Guiana, Venezuela, Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Trinidad, Jamaica, and Santo Domingo, it is being cut only in British Guiana, where it is found along the sea coast and water courses, seldom extending more than 50 miles inland. Greenheart used to bring $1.00 per cubic foot at the point of shipment, but the present price is considerably less. Constant drain for more than 100 years upon the most accessible stands of greenheart in British Guiana has stripped the forest of its best material, and the wood now obtained is of inferior quality. Tracts are now being cut over in some places for the third time. Only the heartwood of the tree possesses the peculiar durability desired, and the best wood is found in old trees.

ALLIANCE, NEB.—This town's first greenhouse has been built by E. W. Ray. It contains 1,200 feet of glass and is thoroughly modern in heating and general equipment.

St. Patrick's Day Window.

Make two good sized circles of shamrocks and suspend in the center of the window with green ribbons. From these circles suspend at uneven lengths tiny green baskets filled with shamrocks. At different intervals suspend a shower of shamrocks, and if more effective tie a little bunch of shamrocks to the ribbons holding the tiny baskets. In the center of the window on a mound of moss place an immense green rose made of a heavy green silk to which shamrocks have been fastened. In the center place a tin or vase and fill with lily of the valley. An ordinary glass flower bowl can be utilized, arranging the green shamrock rose leaves around it. Each petal of the green rose should be well shaped with the slope decidedly marked in the center of each leaf. On the green moss mound interspersed here and there arrange little groups of shamrocks.

Shamrock vases filled with shamrocks can be advantageously placed in the foreground. At one side a few of those tall spiral vases just large enough to hold one rose will look attractive with a spray of white lilac; a fine specimen spray of the large mignonette will be pretty and perhaps a white rose or two of perfect growth. These tall spiral vases will give a tone of daintiness to the general effect. Use tall palms for the background of this setting and smaller ferns in the front part of the window where a finish is needed. If a selling feature of loose flowers is desired a few green boxes can be filled with spring flowers and placed to advantage. Also the small green fancy baskets can be scattered here and there, some tied with ribbons with no flowers in them, simply showing a variety of different designs suitable and symbolical of St. Patrick's day. A. E. K.

Parcel Post and the Florist.

With parcel post in full operation florists are divided in their opinions of its value to their particular industry. The general sentiment among the retailers is one of more or less distrust. They are afraid that delivery will be too slow for their needs. With the old law in force the florist could mail his goods second class, affix a special delivery stamp and have them receive almost the same treatment as first-class matter. Under this provision it was customary for New York dealers to send many packages by mail to middle western points. With parcel post in effect, flowers receive just the same treatment as any other fourth-class matter and they cannot be hurried. As a result, the express companies are getting more business than they did formerly.

Many florists, however, are desirous of seeing what sort of treatment they will get at the hands of parcel post and to find out a number of them are going to send trial shipments. The results will show what confidence may be placed in the new system. One point which has been disposed of by wholesalers and by the retailers who are shipping by parcel post, is that it is almost imperative that a shipping tag and not a paper label be used on the package.

If the address label is used on the parcel post bundle there is danger of the latter becoming damaged when the clerk strikes the label with the cancellation stamp. This fact is particularly important to florists because the package must arrive in good order. A man does not want a handsome box, which enters largely into his cost, to be so broken in transit that it is in no condition to be brought into the home upon its arrival. To make the proper impression, the box and its wrapping must be as neat as possible.

When a tag is used, on the other hand, there is no need of the clerk striking the package with the stamp. The postage stamps are placed on the tag. The clerk simply lays the tag on the block and strikes it with the cancellation stamp. This method is also thought to be favored by the postal authorities because it enables the clerk to do his work quicker and with less liability of damage.

Another point not to be overlooked is that the tag offers a splendid chance to the man who wants to do some effective advertising. The stamps and the address go on the face of the tag. On the reverse may be placed an attractively worded advertisement calling attention to particular facilities for out-of-town shipping. For years progressive business men, and especially florists, have realized that a distinctive tag has a definite advertising value, and with the advent of parcel post this value is greatly increased. The results of the experiments of florists with parcel post will be awaited with interest by the trade.

JOLIET, ILL.—Albert C. Rott will move his flower store from 110 North Chicago street to the Young building.

CINCINNATI, O.—According to a local paper, the Hill-Heller flower firm of this city and Indianapolis, Ind., will dissolve partnerships March 1. Myer Heller, New Castle, Ind., will retire and the business will be taken over by E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., the other partner.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Propagation.

Assuming that the benches have been properly renovated and filled with sand, they should be given a thorough watering and tamped firmly—in fact the firmer the better—and then to be certain that all parts are moist give another good watering, when they will be ready to receive the cuttings. Stock plants that have had proper attention as to watering and airing will be producing strong cuttings from February onward. Some varieties make more robust cuttings than others and while strong ones are considered best, these differences between the many kinds should not be seriously considered, as they are constitutional and we must accept and conform to the variations as we find them.

Cuttings taken from the stock plants usually vary from 1½ to 3 inches in length, according to the kinds and their vigor. After removing the lower leaves and shortening the tips of the larger ones they are ready to insert in the sand. With a case knife make a cut in the sand about an inch deep, into which stand the cuttings about an inch to one and a half inches apart. When this cut is filled, firm to sand around the base of the cutting with the thumb and fingers. The next row is made from 1½ to 3 inches from the first, into which the cutting is inserted in a like manner.

The first watering should be given without great delay. The first few days are the most critical and they should be given copious waterings to settle the sand firmly around the base of the cutting, so they can take up moisture by capillary attraction through the cells and channels exposed when the cutting is severed from the plant. This process of taking up the moisture contained in the sand is the only means by which they are sustained until the roots appear and it also prevents their wilting.

Wilting on warm bright days is due to the inability of the cutting through the pores on the end to supply sufficient moisture to counteract the evaporation of this moisture through the pores of the leaves. This process of evaporation is constant and the higher the temperature the greater the demand to supply the tissue of the leaves and keep them fresh and crisp. From this it will be seen that a greater supply of water is necessary to keep the cuttings firm in warm than in cool weather and while the power of the unrooted cutting is limited and can not give adequate supply, the frequent application of water is beneficial as it sustains the leaves for the time being and prevents the flagging until the heat again reaches a point sufficient to exhaust the evaporating power of the cutting, when they must again become limp. Occasional dewing over is an excellent practice when the weather is bright and the air dry and buoyant.

In cool, damp weather watering should be discontinued until there is urgent need of it. The most unfavorable weather is when the temperature is above seventy and the air is humid. Under such conditions the cuttings wilt and if water is added they do not dry off quickly and consequently there is danger of their rotting. Dampening the walks and side walls is about all that can be done, thus lowering the temperature as much as possible. At no time should they become very dry, as such a state will soon harden the end of the cutting so that it can not take up the moisture.

Abundance of good fresh air is essential to good healthy cuttings. In fact, the ventilation should never be closed unless severe weather necessitates. Strong drafts are to be guarded against, as they dry out the cuttings too quickly. For this reason we prefer ventilation at the top rather than from the side. Cuttings usually root in one to three weeks, although a close case and hardened to a normal condition, otherwise the most of them are likely to be lost.

ELMER D. SMITH.

Treating Rooted Cuttings.

As stated in a previous article, some kinds of chrysanthemums make roots more quickly than others, so no fixed time can be given to indicate when they should be removed from the sand. With a gentle bottom heat of sixty to sixty-five degrees, Golden Glow will be well rooted in ten days, while Chrysanthemiste Montigny may require six weeks or more to be in the same condition. Mrs. Drabble and some others are even more reluctant,

MAGNOLIA WREATH BY G. M. GERAGHTY, MGR. DUNLOP'S, TORONTO.
Design for Funeral of Mrs. Nordheimer on Order of the Imperial Daughters of the Empire.

some kinds are very slow, requiring several months, and are often unpopular on this account. The temperature of the propagating house should be about 55 degrees over head and the sand warmed by the pipes underneath about 10 degrees higher. They are so susceptible of being rooted that no fast rule can be given. They will root slowly in 40 degrees or quickly in 80, but the latter has a tendency to weaken them. Cuttings from this temperature should be placed in sometimes requiring eight to twelve weeks to show roots. These conditions are modified somewhat by the condition of the cuttings when taken. If soft and in an active growing state they require less time than if half ripened when inserted.

The temperature of the sand also has an influence upon the time required. As soon as roots appear the cuttings show signs of new growth and if such a condition is not a sufficient indication a few may be lifted to determine how far the roots have advanced. When half an inch long they should be removed from the sand, potting or shipping to the customer as the demands may require. If permitted to remain in the sand for a longer period, they gradually harden, owing to the lack of nourishment supplied by the sand. They also become thinner, losing their vitality because of the continuous heat applied from the bottom.

Two and a quarter inch pots are large enough for the first potting and when this operation is completed they should have a thorough watering. See that all parts of the soil are moist, for if dried out at this time, they seldom recover and make as good plants as those given prompt attention in this respect. If rooted cuttings for distribution is the object they should be removed at this stage and wrapped in damp moss. As far as possible do not allow the moss or wrapper to extend far above the roots. Such a course tends to keep the foliage wet and should any of them have the least trace of cutting bench fungus the whole bundle are likely to perish before reaching their destination. Such precautions should also be applied to prevent the cuttings from heating, especially later in the season, at which time all soft growth soon rots when air is excluded whether due to faulty wrapping or by inclosing in air tight boxes. The object is to keep the roots damp so the cuttings will not shrivel and the tops dry and cool to prevent decay. If these conditions are properly considered the packer will be troubled with few complaints.

ELMER D. SMITH.

Illinois Experiment Greenhouses.

The florists of Illinois, who meet in annual convention at Peoria March 4-5, will be interested to know of the greenhouse construction work being done at the University of Illinois at Champaign. The buildings are the work of the Foley Manufacturing Co., Chicago, and the still uncompleted range shows the state university to be a leader in this department. In one illustration is shown the agronomy greenhouse. The main building here is 42x120 feet long, a full flat iron rafter greenhouse without interior supports. It was built on a brick foundation which originally supported two old greenhouses and is an excellent piece of work.

The plant breeding house is especially adapted to the work for which it is intended. It has large double doors at both ends, it being the intention of the college to lay rails on the ground to operate cars to carry large tubs or plant boxes with big plants. To the south of the plant breeding house is being erected a large wire house to keep birds away from the experimental work being conducted out of doors. The wire house will be practically the same as the end sections of the greenhouses.

In the third illustration is shown the house at the extreme east end of the range and next to it the two vegetable houses. The smokestack in the distance shows the temporary heating plant. The heating for the entire range when completed will come from a single plant already in-

The Commission Man and Publicity.

February 15.

To the Committee on Publicity,
New York Florists' Club.

Gentlemen:—

Within the past three months I have been in receipt of communications advocating a publicity campaign and soliciting contributions thereto. As I understand it, the project is to encourage the public to buy and use flowers more freely. I believe the plan is worthy and merits serious consideration. I am satisfied that quite a sum of money has already been expended for printed matter—Hallowe'en and Thanksgiving placards, etc.

The gentlemen who have responded and contributed to this movement so promptly are to be commended for their action in endeavoring to further the interests of the trade, but unless other ways and means are devised or discovered it seems like a waste of both energy and money. I am directing this communication and criticism to the gentlemen who are furthering this movement and I would strenuously advocate getting at the root of the evil, and perhaps dispensing with irregular and fabulous prices, which the retail florist is always directly held responsible for, and which oftentimes causes loss of business. If a campaign inaugurated to encourage the public to buy and use flowers more frequently is to be successful, I would consider it a very important feature first to undertake to discourage the growers being inconsistent regarding their demands on their commission men.

At present the grower flits from one commission man to another whenever he believes he can realize the highest prices. Oftentimes he is "stung" for pursuing such methods, being misled and influenced by false quotations, and consequently there is bred a lack of confidence in the commission merchant. If the growers would single out the reliable dealers who are acting on the level, and give them a fair and square deal, conditions might be somewhat improved. My theory is to try to eradicate irregular fluctuations of prices. An instance of this kind happened to me recently, and I think mention of it here is apropos, although there is no necessity for mentioning the commission man's name.

Previous to Thursday, January 30, I was buying sweet peas from Mr. Commission Man at $1.50 a dozen. As usual, I left my order for the following day (Friday) and without notice I was charged $1.75 a dozen. Notwithstanding the advance in price, I again left an order for the following day (Saturday) and again without notice the price was advanced to $2 a dozen.

Now, gentlemen of the publicity committee, you who are so interested in this movement to encourage the public to buy and use flowers more freely, suppose you seriously consider such instances as I have just related. It gives food for thought. Why not opera season there was no demand for violets.

You will appreciate that such instances tend to discourage the sale of any product, and I also believe ways and means can be devised to govern and control prices. For instance, if the important growers would put limitations on the asking-prices of their products it might help. No doubt there is competition among the commission men, and too often false values constant fluctuations and irregular demands keep the retailers guessing.

Perhaps if others, like myself, would offer their criticisms encouraging the public to buy and use flowers more frequently, it might tend to discourage the usage now in vogue of wearing artificial flowers for corsage purposes and many times for table decorations. The campaign of publicity is no doubt meant to work for the interests of the trade generally, and it certainly is an undertaking which demands serious consideration and deliberation before launching. Why not solicit the views of our brother retailers, big ones as well as small ones?

J. P. KLAUSNER.

Publicity at Philadelphia.

The meeting in the interest of the publicity movement called by the Retail Florists' Association and held in the Florists' club rooms Thursday evening, February 20, was very well attended as a starter, and if the same interest is shown six months from this time the results will be most gratifying to all concerned. The various branches of the trade were well represented, about seventy-five being present, among them several ladies. The meeting resolved itself into a general discussion of publicity. President Gracey called the assemblage to order and read a short paper outlining the object of the meeting. He thought that much was to be gained by co-operation and hoped the question would be discussed fully, one way or the other, so that it could be viewed from all sides.

Hugh O'donnell, manager of the Philadelphia Press, gave a very interesting talk on publicity. Newspapers were in business to make money and in doing so they catered to the people. In fact, the people edited the paper, he said. The papers were always trying to find out what the people wanted and then they gave it to them. Newspapers are more sentimental than instructive. They give the news, paying well for much that is thrown away which could not be used for want of space. Referring to the publicity movement, Mr. O'donnell likened the florists to the tailors, both trades being too exclusive, too dignified to advertise. The tailors in this way had allowed the clothing manufacturers to run away with their trade. The average-sized man can go try to control such unwarranted irregularity in price? No doubt you know that there are many such instances, of which I could cite quite a number. I name the sweet pea occurrence merely as an example.

Surely I could not raise the price to my patrons as rapidly as I was being advanced. The consequence is, I go shy on sweet peas and do not advocate the sale of them. I cannot account for the continual increase in price, unless that on previous days this commission merchant had sold out his consignment at the $1.50 price and began to feel that he could safely raise the price. And then, finding that he had sold out his consignment of sweet peas at $1.75 a dozen, he decided he was still not demanding enough and concluded to ask $2 a dozen on Saturday. The advances were made on three consecutive days.

However, on the following Monday, Mr. Commission Man, having perhaps found himself deserted by his usual sweet pea buyers, rang me up on the phone and inquired if I wanted any sweet peas, whereupon I informed him that I could not rely on his prices since I did not know where he would stop, and that I had concluded to handle less of them if they were to continually increase in price. He then informed me that I could buy them at the usual price, $1.50 a dozen, which price I was paying only four days previous.

Another instance is, I have never seen in the past fifteen years that the price of violets has been so low with no call for them. This, I believe, is the result of former high prices, and also is due to the fact that the Princeton and New Haven football games on Saturdays would advance the price 100 to 200 per cent from the price as it was two days previous. Thus the public generally has been discouraged from buying them. Even during horse show week and the opening of the are quoted on stock in order to win growers and shippers away from some other commission dealer.

Now, gentlemen, I particularly desire not to be misunderstood or quoted as being opposed to any wholesale commission florist or grower. As previously stated, I offer this communication only as food for thought to the committee on publicity who have so kindly volunteered and interested themselves in this movement. As for the wholesale commission florists, I will state that they are essential to our business. Many of them are considerate and accommodating and willing to render all the assistance they may be called upon to render.

Try first to encourage the grower before you take the public in hand, and with Mr. Commission Man and Mr. Retailer in co-operation, the public will be given a fair and square deal, and business for all hands will increase. Nowadays competition is keen and fabulous prices are things of the past. Only legitimate profits are sought. But into any large clothing store and find a suit ready to wear that will be almost a perfect fit, and at a price considerably lower than that of the merchant tailor. This was largely brought about by advertising. It was the same with shoes. Standard makes are extensively advertised, and shoes to order are now almost a thing of the past. Mr. O'donnell thought florists catered too much to the select trade. They ought to get in touch with the middle classes and encourage the use of flowers with this part of the population, which was by far the largest. It is the people of modest means that kept the wheels of trade moving, he said, and the florists should get their share of this trade. As to getting matter in the papers without cost, he would suggest that the services of some good woman writer, who was in love with the subject of flowers should be secured, and short pithy articles from her pen would, he thought, find entrance as reading matter to the columns of the daily papers on the woman's page. Care must be taken, however, that commercialism does not show in or between the lines. There were many instances of concerted movements by allied interests in advertising. The tailors in Chicago, becoming alarmed at the great growth of the ready-made clothes business in the department stores, got together and by cleverly-worded advertisements showing the advantage of their perfectly fitting garments, as compared with those of the ready-made establishments, brought about such a change in sentiment that the large stores, on the strength of their greater advertising patronage, wanted the papers to refuse the tailors their columns. While advertising is very expensive it is profitable, as there is no business of any importance in this country that has not been built up by printer's ink. Mr. O'donnell felt sure that a publicity campaign through the columns of the press and magazines, if intelligently carried out, would result in making florists more popular, increasing their sale and leading to a more general use among all classes.

A number of well-known members of the trade gave their views. Edward Reid thought that advertising should commence in the displays of the retail florist which he contended were frequently very meager. He advocated the carrying of more stock and selling at lower prices when lower prices were made to him. S. S. Pennock also thought that many retail florists did not take advantage of their opportunity to purchase flowers at low prices in quantity lots and force their sale. This plan had worked very well by men who had tried it. He believed in advertising and would do what he could to help any concerted movement along. Leo Niessen spoke of the great help Mother's day had been to the trade; how sales were largely increased and prices advanced 250 per cent. He also thought that florists should carry better stocks. They should come oftener to the markets to see the new and good things as they made their appearance. Stock up with them and increased business would surely result.

Adolph Farenwald advocated the display of flowers. To show them was the way to make sales. The successful florists carried large stocks. The Greeks were the real up-to-date men.

They bought in large quantities and moved their stock quickly at small profits. Charles Grakelow was full of the get-together movement. Much could be done to improve the business by all branches, and if all would come together and work in harmony great good would result. Charles Fox said that a great deal had been said, but not much done, and he asked those present to step up and show their interest in the work by signing their names with the amount they were willing to give to start the work. Subscriptions amounting to nearly $500 were thus voluntarily obtained, which is certainly a good start and a foundation to build on. With this to work on the committee will try to perfect an advertising campaign that will meet with the approval of the subscribers, who will then be asked to forward the sinews of war and the work will be started at once.

Constructing Park or Estate.

How and where to construct a public park or private estate was entertainingly described by Arthur A. Shurtleff, engineer of the Boston Park Department, at Horticultural Hall, February 15, 1913. Mr. Shurtleff said:

"When selecting territory for a public park or a private estate, consider the following: The site should be accessible by road and rail not only to those who are to frequent the land for pleasure purposes, but also to those who are to furnish labor and supplies. Breezy northern slopes are suitable for grounds which are to be used only in summer, but for winter enjoyment southern slopes and protection from the wind are essential. These slopes must not be so steep or so wanting in contour as to prevent the construction of roads of moderate gradient between points of strategic importance. Test these gradients with an instrument before you purchase. Scan the ground for rock. If ledge occurs where you intend to build roads or excavate cellars, serious items of expense will be involved. Outcrops of ledge which furnish building stone or which add picturesqueness to your landscapes are to be prized.

"Boundary lines should be regular and should embrace all the land needed for the control of the immediate landscapes. Dig many and deep test pits to determine the nature of the soil. Sandy gravel on the upland is very precious because it means cheap roads, cheap concrete, dry cellars and ready sewage disposal, though on the other hand the grass and trees may suffer from lack of water in such ground. A heavy clay soil may be endured here and there for its economic uses and for the good grass it produces. The top soil or loam should be deep and underlain with a liberal supply of yellow loam. This combination, with an adequate rainfall, is the mainstay of all vegetation. A liberal water supply must be obtainable within easy pumping distance of your building sites and nurseries.

"Select your land also with consideration of the appearance as well as the condition of its woodlands, meadows, brooks, ponds and fields. These natural features are the materials of scenery and they must compose or must be capable of composition into landscapes pleasing to the eye. If the land of your choice fulfills all severely practical requirements, and at the same time possesses fine landscapes, your search has been well rewarded."

BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

The market at the present time is better supplied than at any time since last season. In the last two months business has been better than on any previous year, and although many growers complain of the scarcity of stock and bad weather the prices have held up so well that the returns are considerably higher than in other years. American Beauty roses have been decidedly off crop since the holidays and it will take some time before the cut will amount to anything. Of the other roses, Killarneys and Richmonds have been of very good quality but short of the demand. Maids and Brides are again seen in prominent numbers. Carnations have been the standby for some time, with a fairly large cut, good quality and heavy demand. The prices realized have been the best for years. Violets, valley and orchids have all had great runs and at no time have they been over plentiful. The heavy supply of bulbous stock at present is noticeable in the cut rate stores, but it is expected that about another week will run off this surplus.

CLUB MEETING.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club held a social meeting Tuesday, February 18. About 250 turned out and were given a very enjoyable evening. A well arranged programme provided amusement and our esteemed treasurer, Geo. Mills, looked after the refreshments. There were some very fine flowers on exhibition, Enchantress Supreme, from Dailedouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Commodore, from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Both arrived in splendid condition and were well thought of. R. Jennings, of Brampton, showed a new seedling called Roseite, which for a dark pink looks better than the best. It is a good strong grower and of good lasting habits. Mr. Jennings also showed a table of carnations of good varieties. The Dale Estate showed carnations and two fine vases of Brides and Maids, also some very fine violets. Miller & Son showed carnations; Thomas Manton, W. Jay and Fred Adams, miscellaneous stock. Visitors were: — Cassels, representing Lord & Burnham, New York; Wm. Dykes, representing Ed. Jansen, New York; J. Dilloff, with Schloss Bros., New York; Wm. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

NOTES.

Grobba & Wandrey have dissolved partnership, Carl Grobba having taken over the interests of the firm. A new block of houses are under way, an electric dynamo has been installed for the blacksmith shop and general improvements for an increased business are under way. The houses are well filled with bulbous stock and decorative plants.

Melntyre & Trimbee have some nicely shaped prunus. Their eight houses are mostly devoted to asparagus and ferns, the demand for which is always steady.

E. Wandrey, late of Grobba & Wandrey, has left for a trip to southern California and Florida to look over possibilities of growing plants, etc.

The Georgetown Floral Co. has a fine crop of Killarneys, both Pink and White, the flowers and stems being first-class. H. G. D.

Montreal Notes.

The Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club at its last meeting elected three new members. The dinner account of the twenty-fifth anniversary was finally disposed of. W. Cotter, manager of the Montreal Floral Exchange, offered the use of their new hall to the club for the purpose of holding their meetings after May 1. It was gratefully accepted.—Travis then read his paper on poinsettias, which provoked an interesting discussion. The waning interest of some of the oldest members was revived by the presence of W. J. Wilshire. More of the pioneers would be gladly welcomed.

E. J. Hayward is seriously considering specializing in mushrooms. He has been very successful with them, and as a money maker he says they put plants or flowers away down the list.

Curling is the talk of the day. Many local florists are leading members of opposing clubs.

G. A. Robinson has been elected alderman for the third term by acclamation.

James McKenna contemplates a visit to Europe in the near future.

Hall & Robinson are installing new electric lights in their store.

John Walsh is delighted with his new greenhouse. L.

FORT DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson has sold the four lots on which stand his greenhouses for $10,500. The plant is under lease to R. P. Atwell until July 1, when it will be moved and Mr. Larson will resume the business in another location.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The Syracuse Florists' Club has been organized and the following officers elected: Matthew T. Keenan, president; W. E. Day, vice-president; David J. Murphy, treasurer; Thomas J. Godvin, secretary. The executive committee is composed of Hugh T. McCarthy, chairman; Warner F. Bultmann, Thomas J. Christian, Wm. C. Mohr.

OBITUARY.

Edward Bourque.

Edward Bourque, an expert designer and decorator of New York city, died at his home in Yonkers, N. Y., on February 20 of a complication of lung disease and heart trouble after an illness of one week. He was 47 years old. He was a native of New York city and on leaving school entered the employ of Charles A. Dards, the well known Madison avenue retailer, where he remained continually, a period of thirty years, until stricken by his last illness. Mr. Bourque had been twice married. His first wife died a number of years ago. About five years ago he married again and is survived by his widow and three children, two now grown to adult age, being children of his first wife. No finer tribute can be paid to his memory than the following from his employer, Charles A. Dards:

"Edward Bourque's loss is the greatest grief to me as he has been with me for such a number of years, coming to me first as a boy fresh from school to run errands. I had watched his growth into manhood on until his lamentable ending so early in life. Mr. Bourque was a man who endeared his friends to him by his genial manner and his constant thought and consideration for the feelings of those with whom he came in contact. He was ever watchful and anxious to further the interests and wants of my customers, always keeping in view the necessities of business. Through the whole of his business career with me, about thirty years, Mr. Bourque was never late one hour, or away from business, except on account of illness in his family. He was a friend to all he met and everybody was his friend. Everyone who knew him in any way will mourn his loss, especially his immediate associates in the business who loved him to a man."

The funeral took place from the Catholic Church, Yonkers, N. Y., on the morning of February 22, Mr. Dards and his entire staff attending. The store was closed for the day.

Abraham Moltz.

Abraham Moltz, for the past twenty-five years a florist of New York city, died suddenly February 20. In the wholesale district, where he was best known, "Abe" Moltz has been a familiar figure for many years. His business career was beset by many hardships. He was of Jewish descent and his funeral was held on February 21 at a Jewish synagogue. He is survived by a widow.

Chas. Siebrecht.

Chas. Siebrecht, a well known florist of Winona, Minn., ended his life by hanging, February 14. He complained of illness at the noon meal and shortly after disappeared. When he failed to appear for supper a search was made and he was found hanging to a rafter in a barn at the rear of his home.

Charles Williams.

Charles Williams, formerly a florist at Bay City, Mich., died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. N. G. McPhee, Grand Rapids, Mich., recently, aged 81 years. Mr. Williams was a native of England, but had lived in the United States for the last 30 years. Two daughters survive.

ELKHART, IND.—W. H. Troger has sold his greenhouse to Samuel S. Jones and N. Aldus Harold of Knightstown for $12,500.

THE United States Department of Agriculture is publishing in the shape of bulletins a record of the judgments which they have obtained against manufacturers of misbranded insecticides. Their latest bulletin is dated December 20 and is marked No. 9.

Commission Men Fight Bill.

The publicity committee of the Fruit and Produce Association of New York and the New York branch of the National League of Commission Merchants has opened fire on the Roosevelt-Cole bill recently introduced in the New York state senate. In a bulletin it is charged that the bill will give the commissioner of agriculture and his employes authority to enter the office and examine the dealer's books at will. It is pointed out that a dishonest employe might make capital of the lists of names gathered from all over the world at great expense and jealously guarded, and furnish a competitor with valuable data.

Third International Flower Show.

MORE GUARANTEES NEEDED.

The guarantee fund of the International Flower Show to be held April 5-12, 1913, amounts to some $8,500. Our contract with the International Exposition Co. requires that we have a guarantee fund of $10,000. By present indications we will not have to use any of it, but a contract is a contract and I would appreciate it very much if fifteen active members of the S. A. F. who have not yet contributed will each guarantee $100 or thirty florists will guarantee $50 each. I would very much like to get this matter settled before March 15, and take this method of doing so publicly to obviate the necessity of writing so many personal letters.

CHAS. H. TOTTY, Chairman.

Washington's Birthday at Washington.

Washington, Feb. 22.—This was a city of waving flags today. The Washington's Birthday celebrations began with memorial services by the Knights of Columbus, at the Catholic University, and the services conducted by the Sons of the Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution this morning, followed by similar services by patriotic and state organizations through the day. The tomb of Washington, at Mount Vernon, was strewn with flowers by the hundreds who visited it. Wreaths were placed there by the George Washington Birthday Association and the George Washington Masonic Memorial Association, members of both making the pilgrimage there for the purpose. The house and senate, despite the pressure of public business, observed the day. In the senate, Senator Brandegee of Connecticut in response to a request from the presiding officer read Washington's Farewell Address. This exercise took nearly fifty minutes.

Haeren's New Azaleas.

Under the auspices of the Bourse Horticole Gantoise (Ghent Horticultural Exchange), an exhibition of azaleas in bloom was held in Ghent, Belgium, at Christmas, partly with the object of demonstrating the best varieties to force for Christmas trade. An exhibition at that time of the year is something new for the Ghent nursery trade, and the result surpassed in every respect the expectations of those interested in this innovation.

Azaleas indica, running, from the best whites to the brightest reds, were on view, including commercial varieties and a lot of very nice novelties from the well-known azalea growers, T. B. Haerens and H. Wille, at Somergem, including a pure white large flower, camellia form; a light pink, very delicate color, about the same in color as the rhododendron Pink Pearl; and a very nice crimson one, a strong large flower, a beauty in the real meaning of the word. An exceedingly fine lot of their well known new azalea Mrs. John Haerens was exhibited by the same growers, a brilliant crimson flower which made a wonderful effect, the bouquet of the show. A similar nice lot was exhibited by G. Vervaeet, Mt. St. Amand, of Vervaeana, Pharaillde, Mathilde and President Oswald de Kerckhove, all flowering perfectly. J. B. Haerens and

H. Wille obtained six first prizes. Among the judges of the show were Chs. Vuylsteke (president), L. Poelman, P. Van Acker, De la Rue Cardon, L. de Meyer, Lammius-Boutmans, Raphael Vervaeene, Enkhaut.

The aim of this exhibition was to familiarize the azalea growers with the names of the best forcing varieties, to learn how they have to grow and prepare their azaleas for early forcing and thus avoid the too frequent claims from buyers abroad on account of bad or unripe wood. The azaleas must be prepared for early forcing. This is the work of the grower and the society, by endeavoring to draw the attention of the azalea trade to this fact, hopes that both the seller and the buyer will gain by it. The azalea trade in Belgium has had a large growth and hundreds of growers of these flowers in a small line of business are growing them without commercial knowledge, unaware of the many difficulties and serious material and moral damage they are causing to the whole trade by placing plants of inferior quality on the market. English importers of azaleas should read these lines with pleasure, because in years to come, only good well-budded azaleas easy to force will come on the market to the great satisfaction of all concerned. The president of the society is J. B. Haerens, Somergem, the vice-president Alph. De Coster, Melle; secretary, Jean de Meyer, Loochristy.

American Rose Society.

PRIZES OFFERED TO GROWERS.

A letter received from Coubert, France, inquires concerning the prize as offered by Mrs. Frances Roche for the new rose to be an improvement upon the Marechal Niel. There has been discussion regarding the large prize offered by Moore, Hentz and Nash of a $50 cup for six roses. Mr. Moore says some small grower may have just a few very fine flowers, as fine as grown in the largest establishment, and it is just here that he has his chance against the big man. A small bunch spreads the offer far more widely and that is what we want to do, if it gets more exhibitors and varieties and sets people talking about such a valuable prize for "only six roses." No stem must be longer than 20 inches, not over two roses of any one variety, the roses of each variety to be judged on their own merits and not by comparison with the other varieties.

The following letter has been received from G. S. Dennison of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, department of horticulture:

"I have been referred to you by Prof. L. H. Bailey, of Ithaca, N. Y., to whom I had written regarding a list of the rosarians of America. The exposition management is to offer a trophy of a cup of the valuation of $1,000 in addition to the usual awards, to the originator of the finest new and unnamed rose exhibited at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915, the rose to receive its name from the committee appointed by the board of directors. I wish to lay this fact before the rose-growers at a very early date, and will thank you for any assistance you can give me as to how to obtain a list of them."

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Palm Beach, Fla.

The mid-season event here, the Washington ball, finds the Foster & Foster establishment under the management of Madge Dolan, doing a greatly increased cut flower business. The bulk of these shipments are coming from Chicago. Trade with Philadelphia, which was formerly the exclusive source of these, being now limited to a few holiday shipments. New fast trains out of Chicago in part account for this. A beautiful dinner decoration February 24 consisted of a pyramid of Florida fruit surrounded by Killarney roses, orange blossoms and adiantum. Mrs. Aaron Ward roses, lily of the valley and roses generally from Chicago arrive in best condition. Some Philadelphia carnations are of better quality than Chicago stock. Rhinebeck violets come direct by parcel post. Asparagus plumosus and outdoor lily of the valley is grown locally, with a few outdoor roses, whose short buds and good foliage are often helpful.

SEVERE STORM DAMAGES PROPERTY.

This city has been experiencing all kinds of unfavorable weather during the latter part of the past week, with a severe wind, rain, sleet and hail storm doing much damage. It is estimated that the property loss in this city alone on the day of the big storm was more than $1,000,000, with the telephone, telegraph and transportation companies the principal losers. Telegraph poles in every direction were blown down and broken off and communication to some of the suburban towns was cut off for some time. If the wind, which was from the north, had not shifted to the south when it did and brought a warm wave with it the loss would have been much greater, for the ice clinging to the telegraph wires melted, preventing them from breaking and the ice-covered trees in the park and residence districts were also saved. Of course, all this has affected business more or less, with the result that trade has been very quiet outside of a slight increase in the shipping on February 24. Stock of all kinds is plentiful with the exception of long-stemmed American Beauty roses. Short and medium-stemmed American Beauties are plentiful and the supply of roses in general is steadily increasing. Killarney and White Killarney are arriving in good condition and the receipts of Richmond are much larger. Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Melody are showing fine form now and are in good supply. Carnations are very plentiful with a large quantity of splits still arriving. The better grades are now bringing $2 and $3 a hundred, but much inferior stock is being sold for less. Lilies are in larger supply, and the prices on these flowers have dropped considerably during the last few days. Callas are to be had in quantity and the same can be said of sweet peas. Lily of the valley is in better supply and violets can be had in large quantities at very low prices. Last week violets sold for 30 cents and upward a hundred, but this week the dealers are glad to move them at any figure. One large dealer said Monday, February 24, that he could fill an order for 75,000 very easily without any special effort and then have enough left to supply his regular trade. Orchids are in good supply yet. Home-grown gardenias are scarce but there is a great deal of eastern stock available at $2 and $3 a dozen. The supply of bulbous stock is not quite as large as it was last week, but there is no shortage of any flower in this line.

NOTES.

Erne & Klingel began making their overnight shipments in corrugated boxes on February 24, which means a saving to both the buyer and the shipper. Mr. Erne thinks that it will only be a matter of a short time before the plan will be adopted in general for short shipments, because the cost of the wooden box is becoming too expensive. Shipments in corrugated boxes also mean a saving in express-charge to the buyer.

H. N. Bruns is planning extensive changes in his establishment this year, including a new store and several new houses. He has a nice lot of lilac plants now in bloom and his customary large supply of fine lily of the valley in all stages of development, from the cold storage pips to the blooming plants in benches, pans and boxes.

Wendland & Keimel, of Elmhurst, will discard Rhea Reid next season and grow the new rose Milady more abundantly instead. They have at present two large houses planted with Rhea Reids.

Robt. Newcomb, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, is back from a successful trip feeling as fine as a lark and weighing 212 pounds.

F. F. Scheel, of Shermerville, will have 32,000 feet of glass when his new addition of Moninger houses is completed.

Oscar Leistner, 17 North Franklin street, distributing agent for Ove Gnatt, of Hammond, Ind., preparer of foliage, is making preparation for a big Easter and spring trade. This firm deals principally in ruscus, magnolia leaves, cycas leaves, statice, natural green American oak sprays and American oak shrubs. Theodore Kirchen calls on the trade in this vicinity and has many satisfied customers among the local florists and elsewhere.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. consisting of President Farquhar, R. Vincent, Jr., W. F. Kasting, Thos. Roland, E. Allan Peirce, John A. Evans, August Poehlmann, George Asmus, Harry A. Bunyard and Chas. H. Totty passed through this city on February 24, enroute to Minneapolis. August Poehlmann joined the party here, likewise George Asmus, who is taking the place of John Young, who is ill.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., has returned from Minneapolis and will leave on March 4 for Peoria to attend the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, where he will have charge of Philadelphia, the new carnation that S. S. Skidelsky of Philadelphia will disseminate next season. Mr. Miller's next birthday falls on the opening day of the meeting.

Phil. Schupp, with J. A. Budlong, has returned from a most delightful visit in the south where he was treated royally by his many acquaintances in the trade. He stopped off for a few days at Louisville, Ky., to join Mrs. Schupp, who was visiting friends there.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg is cutting more heavily now in Richmond roses, which have been somewhat scarce for some time. A fine grade of Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney and White Killarney are now seen in good supply here.

The Raedlein Basket Co. received sixty large cases of baskets for its Easter trade from its large factories in Germany on February 22. The firm has just installed a tinshop in its local distributing store for the purpose of lining its own goods.

George Reinberg says that the outlook is bright for a good supply of both roses and lilies for Easter as far as his establishment is concerned and this seems to hold good in general. The lily crops according to him are running rather uneven.

O. Johnson says that the Batavia Greenhouse Co. will postpone its building until next year, when 50,000 feet of glass will be added to the present plant. Work, however, will be started on a new cistern as soon as the weather permits.

The Geo. Wittbold Co.'s retail department, according to Louis Wittbold, is having an unusually good season with funeral orders the most plentiful. A new Auto-truck has been added to the delivery service this week.

The Schack Artificial Flower Co., 1739 Milwaukee avenue, manufacturers and importers of preserved adiantum, sea moss, areca, grass, etc., are mailing a handsome catalogue to the trade.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says that violets are more plentiful this week than they have been for some time and the outlook for a brisk demand is none too encouraging.

John Scheiden has sold his home at Oakdale and Ashbury avenues and will build another residence on his present property at Howard and Ashbury avenues.

The proprietors of the Madison Floral Co., who cater more to the transient trade, report that funeral work was never so brisk with them as it is at present.

W. N. Rudd's series of lectures at the State University made a big hit with both students and faculty—eminently practical and to the point, they say.

Sam Pearce has placed a large order for greenhouse glass which is a pretty good criterion that he will build a new range in the near future.

Mrs. Duncan A. Robertson has been under the doctor's care for the past six weeks, receiving treatment for injuries sustained from a fall.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, on Thursday, March 6.

J. Kochorabus & J. Papadogian have opened a flower establishment at the foot of the Adams street bridge, 372 West Adams street.

Mrs. Oscar Kreitling, 1049 West Twelfth street, reports a busy season taking care of various wedding decorations.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. received a letter this week from W. G. Matthews, of Dayton, O., which contained the sad news that his mother, Mrs. Berkeley, had died in that city on February 19. Mrs. Berkeley previous to her death had made her home with her son in Dayton during the winter and with her daughter in this city during the summer. She was 72 years of age and had a host of friends in both cities and was loved by all who knew her.

King, with the Butte Floral Co., Butte, Mont., has been in the city for several days this week on business connected with the new range of glass his firm will build in the near future. Mr. King will use Moninger material in his new range, which will be quite an addition to their already large range of 65,000 feet of glass.

Wietor Bros. have employed Gus Wiedenhoff, of Terre Haute, Ind., as their foreman, who will assume charge about the middle of March. Mr. Wiedenhoff is now with the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co. and will succeed James Novak, who will take charge of the Weber place in Bowmanville.

Word was received in the market this week that Chas. Layer, a pioneer florist of Gilman, died on February 22. The funeral was held the following Monday. The late Mr. Layer was a heavy buyer on this market and had many friends among the local trade as well as elsewhere.

The next annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held at Peoria March 4-5. The local delegation will leave on the Rock Island Railroad from the LaSalle street station at 9:10 a. m., arriving at 1:25 p. m., March 4.

Henry Wittbold returned from his trip south on February 24 and is now busy with several large decorations, one in Lake Forest, another at the Saddle & Cycle Club and one at the Clay Show at the Coliseum.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s roses are now arriving in fine condition especially Melody which is at its best now. The supply of other varieties, especially in the short and medium grades, is nearly equal to the demand.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is supplying their trade with fine ferns and other green goods. This firm's shipments of bulbous stock are quite large and contain all the flowers in season.

A. L. Vaughan says that A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s shipping trade showed much improvement the opening of the week but that local trade at present has been somewhat quiet.

The A. L. Randall Co. is making improvements right along to its store, and by the time Frank Johnson gets through he will have things in pretty fine shape.

Cook County Florists' Association.

The regular meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association was held at the Tavern, Thursday evening, February 20, President Kohlbrand in the chair. The principal business of the evening was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: A. C. Kohlbrand, president; Allie Zech, vice-president; John Zech, treasurer; A. T. Pyfer, secretary; Michael Fink, sergeant-at-arms; Walter Scott, E. C. Amling, H. N. Bruns, A. Henderson and W. J. Keimel, trustees. H. N. Bruns was nominated for president after Nic Miller withdrew from the race in favor of A. C. Kohlbrand. Four new members were admitted into the association and several new names were proposed for membership. Several important letters were read and much other important business was transacted.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway was selected as the official route for the society to the S. A. F. convention to be held in Minneapolis, August 19-22, and the Michigan Central lines to the Third National Flower Show, which will be held in New York, April 5-13. The next regular meeting was postponed until March 27, a week later, on account of Easter week, which is always a busy time for the florists.

There was also a fine exhibit of carnations, notable among which were the following:

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., exhibited their new scarlet carnation, William Eccles, but it was not in good condition for judging, being a long time in transit, but even considering this the fine large flowers borne on long stiff stems showed up exceptionally well and created a very favorable impression. Lady Northcliff, a beautiful salmon pink, also exhibited by this firm, was awarded the club certificate. Its pleasing color was greatly admired.

James Aldour & Son, Iowa City, Ia., exhibited new seedlings cut at different stages of development that showed up exceedingly well and looked very promising.

Avard Anderson, of Moline, Ill., exhibited a number of seedlings, among which a fine large scarlet was awarded the club certificate. No. 113, a cerise pink, was a large flower that measured nearly five inches, although it was not fully developed. His other seedlings were highly complimented.

The Blackman Floral Co., Evansville, Ind., had a vase of three different seedlings on exhibition, among which the most prominent one, a medium pink, received the club certificate.

J. D. Cockerott, Northport, L. I., exhibited his new cerise carnation, Northport, which was awarded the club certificate. It was highly commended and favorably looked upon as an addition to the numerous varieties of this color now on the market.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s new carnation No. 246, a medium pink of the Scott shade, scored 89 points and was awarded a certificate of merit. This firm also exhibited a fine vase of White Wonder and Gloriosa and a very attractive vase of their new scarlet carnation, The Herald.

A. F. Amling & Co., Maywood, had on exhibition a fine grade of winter-blooming Spencer sweet peas that were highly praised and acknowledged as the best ever exhibited before the club.

The new rose, Mrs. Chas. Russell, grown by the Waban Rose Conservatories of Natick, Mass., did not arrive in time to be staged, but was on exhibition for several days after at the Chicago Carnation Co.'s store, where it was greatly admired by the trade in general. It is a splendid keeper and a fine large flower similar to the American Beauty that has a fine stem well clothed with luxuriant foliage.

Philadelphia, another new carnation of a fine medium pink shade, also arrived too late, but was placed on exhibition at the Chicago Carnation Co.'s store, where it attracted much favorable attention for several days. It is a very large flower with many other good qualities and will be disseminated next year by S. S. Skidelsky of Philadelphia, Pa.

Minnesota State Florists' Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held at R. A. Latham's conservatory, Minneapolis, Tuesday evening, February 18. A. J. Olson of the dance committee reported that nothing had been done except to ascertain about the hall and that there was some objection toward giving a dance during the Lenten season. He recommended that one be given after Easter. Discussion resulted in the committee being granted authority to arrange for the annual affair to be held as soon as practicable after Easter week. The application for membership of L. F. Nordine of the Andrews Heating Co., Minneapolis, was accepted.

W. A. Keeling, with Holm & Olson, St. Paul, exhibited two very fine specimen plants of Dendrobium Wardianum which were scored 90 points by the judges.

A. Lauritsen of the Warrendale Greenhouses, St. Paul, exhibited a fine bunch of orchid-flowering sweet peas, which scored 90 points.

W. S. Desmond, of the L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, exhibited White Wonder carnations, scoring 84 points; single violets, Princess of Wales, scoring 80 points; Golden Spur narcissi, scoring 75 points.

A standing vote of thanks was extended the exhibitors for their excellent exhibits. Vice-President Theodore Wirth of the S. A. F. told the association about the work which has been done toward making the coming convention a great success. He extended an invitation to the Twin City trade to attend the meetings of the board of directors to be held February 25-28, and placed especial emphasis on attendance at a banquet to be given the visiting directors Wednesday evening, February 26, at the Raddison hotel. An amusing ode to the Minneapolis bowlers was read. It is claimed that the poet lives in St. Paul. His identity remains unsolved but all clues lead in one direction.

S. A. Jamieson of the Geo. M. Garland Co. gave a talk on the uses of concrete in greenhouse building and also took up building in general. Lantern slides were used to illustrate the talk. Much interest was shown. The pictures of the "greenhouses on wheels" and other types of modern construction proved to be of particular interest. L. F. Nordine gave the association some fine information on greenhouse heating and accepted the invitation which had been extended him to present a paper on the subject at the next meeting. The meeting adjourned to meet again on March 11 at Holm & Olson's store, St. Paul. S. A. J.

GOOD AMERICAN BEAUTIES SCARCE.

The market condition for roses has eased up considerably and stock is coming in more plentifully both in the short and long grade. The American Beauty rose situation remains unchanged with very few good blooms in the market. Carnations are here in plenty but seem to move fairly well, as do sweet peas, violets, tulips, daffodils and other bulb stock. Harrisii lilies are still a scarcity. There are plenty of green goods.

NOTES.

Last week occurred the marriage of Walter M. Maas, of the Walter M. Maas Co., and Miss Diedrich. After spending several days ice-boating on Lake Nagawicka the young couple will make their home on Eighteenth street and North avenue. Mr. Maas is well known in the local trade and both have the best wishes of all for their future happiness.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is shipping in some excellent carnations from its range. This firm reports trade good with plenty of all kinds of stock.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is commencing to cut from its new crop of roses at Brown Deer and is sending in some very fine stock.

Louis Manos, of the Nohos Co., reports business good. He was kept busy last week with a large amount of funeral work.

Gust. Rusch & Co. report business good with plenty of stock to fill all orders.

BUSINESS DULL.

Business appears to have fallen off considerably since St. Valentine's day, trade being reported dull all around. There were some good funeral orders which called for choice stock, but the transient trade, which generally keeps things moving, was very light. There does not appear to be an abundance of stock about, and while prices have softened a little, the market cleans up at fair prices. The very large shipping trade worked up by the commission men helps to keep down the surplus and the open mild weather has encouraged the street men to stock up, so that they are also quite a factor. The quality of the stock offered is excellent. American Beauty roses are a trifle more plentiful, but prices are firm. Extra fine Killarneys are seen. Among the fancy roses, Melody, Hillingdon and Sunburst are the leaders, being always in good demand. Carnations are now at their best, but on account of the light demand prices are low. Bulbous stock is offered in variety and quantity. Southern daffodils have made their appearance and will be a factor while they last. This is the earliest date at which they have ever been offered. Violets are ahead of the demand. Valley holds to a fair price. Cattleyas are not quite so plentiful. Gardenias are in good demand. Easter and calla lilies are in rather full supply.

NOTES.

Wm. A. Leonard of Lansdowne is the first grower to try retailing by parcel post. Large advertisements in the evening papers announced that he would deliver fresh stock at about half store prices by that method. This experiment will be watched with interest by the trade.

The M. Rice Co.'s Easter baskets are the latest word in this line. Their iridescent effects make them suitable for almost any colored flower. Porto Rico mats in fancy weaves in all hues of the rainbow are seen in great variety at this place.

Edward Reid is handling some extra fine Hudson river violets. They come done up, 100 to a bunch. Exceptionally fine carnations are also a feature here.

At Berger Bros.' central market fine sweet peas are a leader. Violets and all kinds of bulbous stock are handled in quantity.

That some growers are satisfied with the market and their returns is seen

The next meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club will be held Tuesday evening, March 4, at Donaldson's Greenhouses, Thirty-fifth street and Portland avenue. Some good exhibits are expected. S. A. J.

BUSINESS UNSATISFACTORY.

Business is very unsatisfactory in all branches of the trade. In the past it has been said that after the first week of Lent business usually improved, but for this year there has been no improvement thus far. The market is well stocked with roses, carnations, orchids, gardenias and a great variety of bulbous stock, but all move very slowly at reduced prices. In the great financial centers there seems to be a feeling of doubt and uncertainty relating to the future. Such a condition always has a depressing effect on the flower trade. There is much fine bulbous stock on the market at the present time and leading retailers are using it for display purposes with fine effects.

Monday, February 24.—The condition of business is far from satisfactory. There is a large amount of stock on the market, but it moves slowly. American Beauty roses are not plentiful, but the demand is limited; there is almost a surplus of tea roses and the same may be said of carnations and bulbous stocks. The violet market is in bad shape.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., was operated on February 23, in Roosevelt hospital for a carbuncle on his neck. He is resting comfortably.

GREEK-AMERICAN BALL.

A notable social event of the past week was the ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association at Terrace Garden on the night of February 20. This was the sixth annual ball of the association and was a very successful affair. The various committees were composed of well-known men of the association. The hall was beautifully decorated with garlands of laurel, southern smilax and bunting. While the Greek flag was very noticeable, the Stars and Stripes were even more prominent, showing that our Greek fellow-citizens are withal good Americans. The decorations were arranged by N. Lales, Geo. D. Nicholas, D. J. Pappas, N. Christatos and C. A. Bird. Previous to the dancing there was a fine exhibition of moving pictures depicting interesting scenes in the late Balkan war, in which it is well known the Greeks took a prominent part. There were excellent musical selections, notable being songs by Mrs. Riedel, wife of Harry Riedel of the firm of Badgley, Riedel & Myer. Prominent among the American florists present were Walter F. Sheridan, Chas. Schenck, M. C. Ford, P. J. Smith, Jos. Fenrich, Wm. Ford, A. J. Guttman, Harry Riedel, Anton Schultheis, Jr., Geo. Dreyer, P. Gerlaid, Dan Sullivan and Geo. Siebrecht. The following comprise the officers and committee of arrangement: N. Lales, president; Jas. Carlafes, vice-president; J. J. Fellouris, secretary; D. J. Pappas, treasurer; Geo. Michinicos, assistant secretary. Board of Directors—J. Tryforos, J. Andriopoulos, C. Cardasis, A. Demetracopoulos, N. Christatos, J. Soteriades, J. S. Nicholas, N. Lecakes, J. Doganges. Committee of Arrangements—Jas. G. Carlafes, chairman; John Tryforos, Th. Cardasis, P. Velotas, G. Polykranas, G. Rontires, J. Doganges.

NOTES.

The Horticultural Society of New York held an exhibition February 22 in the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street. The exhibitions of this society are always interesting events and as we see it are productive of much benefit to the trade in general, for at each one there is always a new or novel production to be seen. A feature at this show was the Cali-

Charles Millang has been in court for several days during the past week. He is prosecuting a case against the city of New York for $25,000 damages for serious injuries he received some time ago while running his automobile through a defective street.

Young & Nugent have been very busy of late with funeral orders. They made up about 30 designs February 22, most of them being of large size. In addition their decoration and counter trade is constantly increasing.

The partnership of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, has been dissolved. Walter Siebrecht, formerly a member of that firm, has located in the storeroom of George Saltford, Inc., 129 West Twenty-eighth street.

Anton Schultheis, Jr., of College Point, is a daily visitor among the leading retail stores. His big automobile loaded with fine flowering plants is one of the features in the trade.

Alfred H. Langjahr, the well-known wholesaler, has had a severe attack of rheumatism, but we are glad to state that he is again so far recovered as to be at his store.

William Plumb, a florist well known in this city, is now located at Bound Brook, N. J., but frequently calls on his old friends.

Joseph Voek, salesman for Wm. H. Siebrecht in the Coogan building, is now handling a fine line of cut acacias.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., went to a hospital on February 23 for treatment for a carbuncle on his neck.

A flower market for Union Square is one of the improvements planned by the Central Mercantile Association.

The sudden death of A. Moltz has brought forth many expressions of regret in the wholesale district.

FLOWER MARKET GLUTTED.

There is no use pretending about the market conditions. There is a glut, and a bad one. There is everything in flowers one could wish and the quality as a general rule is good. Whether it is Lent or the beginning of a general retrenchment of the public it is hard to state. Accompanied by the change of administration, which may be giving the moneyed interests the shakes to know what is going to happen. The general trade reports, "outside of the florist business," show a somewhat drawing in. Outside of the contracts that have been let previously, there seems to be a marked degree of caution. On the face of all this some of the florists are gaily talking of adding more glass. Whether this is a wise policy, in the face of the foregoing, time alone can tell. The past week we have had winter and spring intermixed, with a thunder storm Saturday night, February 22.

At the meeting of the Boston Gardeners and Florists February 18 President Kennedy proposed to have classes in salesmanship and decorative floral art. It was left to the consideration of the club. A first-class salesman is a jewel and if they can be made, President Kennedy will have the plaudits of the trade in general. And from the business point of view we need some more knowledge of making up and decoration. I don't mean the professional, but the general run of the trade at large. MAC.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND GOOD.

This week finds us with many more flowers on hand than usual, particularly carnations. Since the last week many unexpected crops came on, but the demand was good, and we cleaned up very nicely, much better than was expected. Roses are still scarce while lilies are also rather short. Sweet peas are now coming in much stronger, which has reduced the prices somewhat. Romans are not seen much any more and American Beauties are still out of sight. Tulips and Daffodils are in their height, but narcissi are gradually becoming scarcer. Greens of all kinds are scarce and much more could be used. The weather has turned a little colder.

NOTES.

President elect McCallum of the Florists' Club will be interesting enough to bring out every member during his term of office. He has some new and novel features planned for each meeting. For the next meeting, March 4, he has arranged for Otto E. Jennings, president of the Botanical Society of Pennsylvania, to deliver a lantern slide lecture, choosing as his subject, "Along the North Shores of Lake Superior with the Botanist." It goes without saying that Mr. Jennings will handle this subject in an interesting style. He also has a lot of interesting information regarding wild animals in this section, that will appeal to any interested in hunting. He also expects to have some new carnations on exhibition.

Wednesday night the boys of the McCallum Co., and Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., got together and held a

ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL.

Notwithstanding the Lenten season trade has held up fairly well. Carnations in good quality are bringing two to three cents; splits and inferior grades at your own price. Roses are more plentiful, especially American Beauties. A good supply of callas and Harrisii lilies are seen. Sweet peas are increasing in quantity and prices on these and violets are considerably lower. Many of the stores, even apart from the downtown stores, are having special sales.

NOTES.

Foster, the Florist, reports the death of his father, who lived in Scotland, during the past week. Mr. Foster's store on Kings Highway and Delmar avenue will be extended. The basement will be fitted up as a palm garden where ice cream and soft drinks will be served.

Henry Duernberg has left for the East to obtain ideas and novelties for Easter decorations before taking up a position with a prominent florist here. He was formerly with Grimm & Gorly.

Ostertag Bros. had the decorations at the Fred Garden reception for Gov. Major at the St. Louis Club. Mountain laurel, grey moss and American Beauty roses were used in the decorations.

Grimm & Gorly's new team has arrived in the city. They are a very odd looking couple and cause quite a sensation getting in the way of automobiles and street cars.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has an endless supply of violets and sweet peas and a fine stock of home grown roses and carnations.

A. N. May, Kirkwood, had a fire at his residence Monday morning and was entirely burned out. His greenhouses were uninjured.

C. A. Kuehn had a splendid stock in sweet peas, 15-inch stems and big flowers, also the finest lily of the valley and bulbous stock.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is well supplied daily with fine grade carnations, lilies of the valley, violets and sweet peas.

George H. Angermueller has a fine supply of roses and his supply department is one of the best in the trade.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., will have a fine supply of American Beauty rose plants which will be right for Easter.

Alexander Waldbart & Sons are very busy and expect a large amount of outside landscape work this spring.

C. Young & Son have a fine assortment of blooming plants. They expect a big crop for Easter.

The Diemer Floral Co. is always busy. Funeral work is never slack with this firm apparently.

The Oakland Floral Co., Oakland, is bringing into this market some good narcissus poeticus.

Samuel Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros., New York, is in the city and reports trade good.

Al. Gumz, secretary of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., has been ill at home since Friday.

H. G. Berning's supply of American Beauty roses and carnations are daily disposed of.

At the New York state fair exhibit of Jas. Vick's Sons last September, George Arnold put a little formalin in the water used for holding the cut flowers. This he found a great aid in keeping the water fresh and clear. This is a discovery well worth the attention of florists.

Dick Salter says that considering the uneconomic way in which florists run their business it can't pay. Still we see that Salter Bros. are in business and running the largest retail store in town.

WEEK'S TRADE ONLY FAIR.

Last week's business may at the best be characterized as merely fair. The opening showed a very active demand that gradually fell off as the week progressed. During the same time the supply was on the increase. Only stock of a high quality found a good market. The average price was not very high. The supply of both tea roses and American Beauties is large. The latter are very fine but in order to move all of them some must be sold at a sacrifice. The other roses seem to just about clean up. The carnation supply is still large and contains the usual quota of split stock. The Pink and Red Enchantress are selling better than white ones. The quality of the present receipts of bulbous stock is much better than a fortnight ago. Practically all of the offerings are longer and cleaner than they were at that time. The list includes jonquils, daffodils, tulips, dutch hyacinths and freesias. For the first time in many weeks there is a surplus of lilies and callas. The offerings are much larger than the call for them. Most all of the stock is of excellent quality. Some very fine snapdragons are to be had. The good sweet peas sell nicely, while the poor ones and short ones do not find any market. There is very little call for violets, lily of the valley, orchids and the like. The green goods supply is adequate.

NOTES.

The Bloonhurst Floral Co. of Lockland has been sending large cuts of Killarney roses to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

Peter Weiland is getting in some exceptionally fine jonquils and daffodils from his plant at New Castle, Ind.

C. E. Critchell has been getting large shipments of outdoor jonquils from the south.

The J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. has been getting some very excellent Harrissii lilies.

J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

A. H. GOODWIN and wife, of Chicago, are at Nice, in southern France.

J. E. NORTHROP and daughters, of Minneapolis, Minn., are touring Florida.

THE Holland seed growers pump the water off their land while the California growers pump it on.

C. C. MORSE & Co. have issued "A Bulletin on Spencer Sweet Peas," by Lester L. Morse, from notes taken during the season of 1912.

VISITED CHICAGO: John C. Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif.; C. W. Scott and A. Kakuda, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York.

DEPOSIT, N. Y.—The Deposit Seed Co., the leading growers and dealers in this locality, report seed business good, especially bulbs, of which they are large growers.

OAKLAND, IA.—Webb McConnell, manager of the Green Valley Seed Co., recently shipped more than 5,000 bushels of blue grass seed to foreign countries. Mr. McConnell invented his own machinery for harvesting and cleaning the seed.

ENID, OKLA. This is the Corry Seed Co.'s twenty-seventh year contracting watermelon and muskmelon seed for the wholesale trade and it has never missed a year in the past 27. Last year this concern planted 1,500 acres and sold over 150,000 pounds of seed. About 2,000 acres will be planted this spring.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—I. N. Simon & Son, whose representatives cover the market gardening districts from Norfolk to Boston, say that on the whole the majority of the truckers broke about even last season, some few having made money and others being unable to pay their seed and fertilizer bills. Crops in general were good but prices were too low. The cost of production is increasing each year but prices seem to remain the same and at times are lower.

War on Free Seed.

A fight to abolish congressional free seed distribution, which is widely regarded as a graft, will be made in the Senate when the agricultural appropriation bill comes up.

The senate has passed two resolutions by Senator Kenyon calling on the Agricultural Department for information as to the cost of the seed distribution and on the postoffice department for information as to the cost to the government of franking out free seeds.

It is the intention of the opponents of free seeds to use the data thus obtained to have an amendment put on the agricultural bill abolishing the distribution.—Washington Times, February 20.

THAT PHILADELPHIA BULB CASE.—Manager Scott of the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, says his firm's suit against G. W. Uber, 5401 Grays avenue, West Philadelphia, Pa., to recover payment for 4,000 multiflorum lily bulbs and the countersuit of the defendant for $1,860 damages, were recently dismissed. These cases have been in the court some seven years and Mr. Uber, who claimed the bulbs were of poor quality, pays costs.

Seed-Importation Act.

The government has issued the following regulations by which customs officers are to be governed in their duties under the Seed Importation Act of August 24, 1912, which took effect February 24, 1913:

The collector of customs shall draw and forward for examination when so requested by the Secretary of Agriculture or his representative samples of the seeds enumerated in the act which are offered for import, and shall immediately notify the consignee that samples have been drawn and forwarded and that the remainder of the shipment must be held intact pending a decision of the Secretary of Agriculture in the matter.

The collector of customs may deliver to the consignee shipments which have been sampled on the execution of a bond in a penal sum equal to the invoice value of the seeds, together with the duty thereon, if any, conditioned upon the redelivery thereof to the collector when demanded by him for any reason within 30 days from the date of entry. Form Cat. No. 332E may be slightly modified and used for this bond, and should be drawn to cover also any re-cleaning that may become necessary.

If the Secretary of Agriculture shall inform the collector that the seeds are not in violation of the said act, the collector shall no longer detain the shipment under that act, but if the seeds are found to be in violation thereof, the collector shall permit the importer to re-clean the seeds under bond at the expense of the importer.

The collector of customs shall draw and forward to the Secretary of Agriculture or his representative a sample of the re-cleaned seeds, together with a sample of the screenings or other refuse removed from the seeds in the course of cleaning, accompanied by a statement of the amount of both the re-cleaned seeds and of the screenings, and the same procedure shall be followed with respect to such sample of the re-cleaned seeds as upon the original sample, as outlined in regulation 1.

If the Secretary of Agriculture shall inform the collector that the sample of the re-cleaned seeds is not satisfactory, or if the importer shall decline to re-clean any shipment of seeds which the Secretary of Agriculture has found to be in violation of the said act, the collector shall refuse delivery of the shipment and require it to be exported under customs supervision.

The collector of customs shall cause the screenings or other refuse removed from the seeds in the course of re-cleaning to be disposed of in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Should the importer fail to export within three months from the date of refusal of delivery any seeds the delivery of which has been refused under these regulations, the collector shall report the facts to the department and to the United States attorney.

The collector of customs shall report to the department and to the United States attorney any willful violation of the act which shall come to his knowledge.

Irrespective of the foregoing regulations, collectors of customs will continue to observe the requirement in T. D. 32705 of July 13, 1912, relative to forwarding to the Department of Agriculture samples of certain seeds.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—W. J. Busch has completed improvements which make his seed house up to date in every particular. New machinery will greatly facilitate the work of unloading.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy. With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

A RULING of the Interstate Commerce Commission makes the watermelon grower pay freight on watermelons shipped by him.

THE cantaloupe and melon growers of Lowndes county, Alabama, will begin planting about March 1; there will probably be more watermelons planted but fewer cantaloupes than last year.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, February 24.—Mushrooms, 25 cents to 65 cents per pound; lettuce 18 cents to 22½ cents, small cases; radishes, 10 cents to 40 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 30 cents to 45 cents per bunch; cucumbers, $1.25 to $2 per box of two dozen.

New York, February 21.—Cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 per doz., and $4 to $6 per box; mushrooms, $1 to $2.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, $1 to $2 per 100 bunches; mint, $1 per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 20 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 10 cents to 40 cents per dozen; beet tops, 75 cents to $1.

Mexican Tomato Crop Damaged.

Unprecedented cold weather in the Nogales district about January 6 and 7 seriously damaged the tomato and fruit crops along the west coast of Mexico. Reports indicate that in the southern extremity of this district and the district of Hermosillo the loss is about 75 per cent. At Guaymas it is said to be about 50 per cent, and in the vicinity of Los Mochis, Sinaloa, where most of the tomatoes are raised, the loss is estimated at fully 25 per cent of the crop. While these figures may later be revised, it is noted that the demand for refrigerator cars for exporting tomatoes has been reduced to two cars per day. Before the cold weather every available car was demanded by the tomato exporters.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Herbert Haftenkamp has filed suit against Frank P. Goebel for money he alleges is due him by reason of a contract existing between the two when they were in the greenhouse business at Wabash, Ind. Haftenkamp alleges that he furnished the money and Goebel kept the books.

Hotbeds.

Every spring late storms do a lot of damage to hotbeds, often freezing the contents entirely. The reason for this is that the hotbed is rather inaccessible, that is, the operator is often poorly informed in regard to condition inside. The writer has never lost a bed of plants in a life time, by following a simple rule and that is by watching the frost on the glass.

Whenever glass freezes, covering is in order, and if after an hour the glass is still frosted, more protection is needed, or in other words, the inside temperature, if right, will remove any frost if glass is covered with boards, mats, shutters, or straw. This rule will work invariably. When a cold wave strikes us we examine the beds at various points, several times during the night, and correct conditions.

Just the other extreme is sometimes met with in a heavy fall of snow. The beds are damaged by too high temperature as the even snow cuts off any radiation of heat. In such cases it is sometimes necessary to sweep off the snow two or three times in 24 hours to admit light and air. And last never plant a new bed at once. Wait and raise a crop of weeds first and then the bed will be in prime shape.

TAKE THE HINT.

The successful man in business keeps cool. Don't cry, don't worry about hard times, don't lose your head. Just keep calm and think of your old friend in Philadelphia. His name, Godfrey Aschmann, is not forgotten and is a name in the mind of every florist who dealt with him last Easter. He is more active than ever. He will take care of you this Easter, 1913. His big stock of fine plants and his low prices will pull you through at all times.

Therefore Prepare for Easter

Twenty-five years' experience in shipping Easter plants—well-known, popular from Atlantic to Pacific Oceans. Our shipments of Easter plants reach every city and state of the United States, Mexico, Canada, and as far as Cuba.

Specialist in the growing of Lilies. 35 years experience.

ONE OF GODFREY ASCHMANN'S LILIUM MULTIFLORUM HOUSES.

No argument needed; speaks for itself. The real stuff; the cream of Japan's production. The True Variety of the Lilium Multiflorum, raised from 9 to 10 selected bulbs, at $95 a 1000, direct from Japan. Look at the picture! Just right for Easter.

Azalea Indica.

Is another specialty of ours, inspected personally by myself on my yearly trip to Europe at our grower's establishment in Belgium, who is a specialist in cultivating Azaleas over there. Only the best American sorts are raised and imported for me.

What is the name of the Best Pink Azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name.

Originated by the well-known Azalea specialist, Mr. Van der Cruyssen, of Ghent, Belgium. Millions are raised every year of this so world-wide known popular pink Azalea and are shipped out to every part of the globe from Belgium. We are well provided and have a big stock of this so well favored variety in America, the Mme. Van der Cruyssen; covered with buds and flowers, ready for Easter trade; well shaped round as an apple; in all sizes, 6-7-8-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 $2.50 to $3.00. On account of scarcity in Belgium of this variety, we were only able to obtain a limited quantity of the smaller sizes; therefore larger sizes must accompany the order for Van der Cruyssen. Have 3000 Van der Cruyssen. Simon Mardner, double pink, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00 $1.25 to $1.50.

Spirea Gladstone.

What is a home, what is a store, what is a church, what is an Easter present, without having a few of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spirea Gladstone the pride of Holland? O, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, of such a beautiful wax deep green is a jewel in itself! Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants they will complete the flower decoration for your happy joyful Easter home of 1913. Knowing the great demand for these plants during past Easters, when not half the customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush, and were fortunate in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland. When other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers we obtained enough of the bulbs to fill two houses with the choicest, and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly. Prices: 5 1/2, 6 and 7-in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or more, the same price. Some are as big as a small washtub.

SPRING WEATHER FLOODS MARKET.

This city and vicinity has enjoyed nearly a week of real spring weather, with the result that stock of all kinds arrived the latter part of the week in enormous supply. Bulbous stock in particular yielded to the warm sunshine, and local wholesale houses were flooded with tulips and daffodils, and some of the stock showed the effect of the extremely warm weather. Carnations too arrived in large supply and for the first time in weeks exceeded the demand, except red, which color cleaned up daily. Sweet peas are fast increasing in supply and some very good stock can be had at reasonable prices. Violets are selling fairly well. Lily of the valley has been a little short of the demand. Orchids are a little slow. Adiantum has been short of the demand, as has asparagus, sprengeri and plumosus. String smilax is plentiful and in good demand. Aaron Ward roses are arriving in better supply, but clean up daily. Richmond roses have been a little short of the demand on this market. Long stemmed American Beauties are off crop, and retailers have trouble in filling orders. Short stemmed roses of this variety are plentiful and used extensively in funeral work. Pink and White Killarney roses are in better supply, and orders are being filled with better satisfaction to all concerned. Calla and Easter lilies are in better supply with a good demand. Calandulas, freesia, etc., are less plentiful. Poeticus narcissi are on the market. C. F. B.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Karl Zeidler, a well known local florist, has been appointed trustee of Locust Hill cemetery.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Get the Boiler You Can Recommend to Your Friends

The No. 4 boiler is heating 7500 square feet of glass—it would take care of 10,000 square feet. Have no trouble to keep up temperature of 60° in coldest weather. I fire every six hours. The boiler works satisfactory in every way, and I recommend it to all my friends. #### VALENTINE DAY GOOD.

With the arrival of Lent quite a difference was noted in the local market. Funeral work has been heavy enough to keep stock moving. Valentine day was one of the heaviest ever known here. Baskets were in demand and many different combinations were used. From the wholesaler's point of view everything went smoothly. Carnations were in good crop and good stock was to be had in quantity. Lily of the valley was up to the standard and sold readily at a good price. Roses sold well. Daffodils, jonquils, Roman hyacinths, Paper White narcissi, tulips, freesias, azaleas, cinerarias and other pot plants sold readily.

NOTES.

Chas. Yapp, formerly of Shropshire, England, and now employed on the private estate of Mrs. Rays, Hague avenue, has been employed by the Columbus Floral Co. to take charge of their plant department. This company contemplates building an additional 12 houses this spring. This space will be devoted to orchids, gardenias, and a general line of potted stock.

The wholesale and retail florists got busy, cooperated and inserted a large advertisement in the three leading newspapers and an enormous amount of stock was used.

The Art Floral Co.'s windows were gorgeously decorated with a profusion of flowers. Mr. Graff says it was the largest Valentine day he ever saw.

Visitors: Joe Marks, with Arnold & Co., Chicago; Martin Ruekauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Hall, of Wertheimer Bros., N. Y.

Two Column 70 Ft. House

IT is our new Cantilever Construction.

The rafters are lattice constructed. On first thought it would seem such a house would not be as light as our regular standard flat rafter construction. In truth it is much lighter.

You must bear in mind that this new rafter is an open rafter, not a solid shade casting piece of metal.

Then another thing of great importance in its favor; we use just half as many of them as in other constructions. They are placed about 12 feet apart instead of the usual 8.

Fewer purlins are needed, which still further increases its lightness.

The glass is 20 inches, which being a happy medium between 16 and 24, is thoroughly practical. It will lap joint in a way to suit the hardest cranks to suit.

If you are one of those careful, cautious buyers who go into a thing "from a to izzard" before you spend money—then you are just our kind of folks. Nothing pleases us more than a buyer who digs into things. Such men become customers and they stay customers.

Washington.

Chas. Merryman was awarded the contracts for the inaugural decoration of the State, War and Navy Department, the Court of Honor and the Plaza, which he is decorating with cedar trees. The trees are 25 feet in height and he is bringing them from the lower Potomac by the hundreds. He also will use more than one hundred cases of Southern smilax for the front of the reviewing stands.

Robert Bowdler will open up a first class store at Fourteenth and I streets, in the store formerly occupied by Geo. Shaffer. He extends an invitation to all to call after March 1. when he hopes to be ready with one of the finest and most up-to-date stores on the Fourteenth street.

Ed. Fancourt paid the trade a visit this week. Since the Pennock-Meehan Co. opened its new store Mr. Fancourt does not get to Washington very often.

Arthur Ward, who has been with J. H. Small & Sons for more than 25 years, is laid up with a bad attack of grippe.

WHY IT PAYS TO BUILD GARLAND CONSTRUCTION.

Mary E. Marcy, proprietress of the Miles City Greenhouses at Miles City, Montana, in speaking of her two houses, each 34x100 feet, of Garland Construction says: "I think there is nothing finer in the state than these houses, and I hope to add several houses to the plant as soon as possible, and want to use only Garland material. They are well constructed and easily built."

Mr. Irving Dunford of North Olmstead, Ohio, who has two Garland Trussed Iron Frame houses, says: "That house has doubled my business this spring." The second house was ordered about 10 days after his testimonial letter.

Let us show you what we have.

Geo. H. Cooke had the decorations for the dinner and dance given by Mme. Von Herworth February 21. The ballroom was decorated all in yellow, forsythia and jonquils being used in wall pockets and boxes of tulips and jonquils in all the windows. The dining room decorations consisted of smilax and more than 500 poinsettias. The reception room was very prettily decorated with banks of farleyense ferns, white lilac and azaleas. There were large vases of acacia throughout the room. For the dance favors over ten thousand single violets were used.

The florists' bowling team captured fifth prize in the city tournament. Eiker and Shaffer took seventh prize in class A, while Cooke and Simmonds captured fifth prize in class B. Cooke got a score of 557 in the singles.

STOCK NOT PLENTIFUL.

The last few days winter has set in and the mercury went as low as five below zero. It snowed all day Friday, February 21, and turned cold over night. The cold weather came in time to prevent trees and shrubs from putting out buds. Stock is not so plentiful as some time ago and many funerals take all the good stock readily. Easter soon will be here and lilies will be very scarce. Hardly 50 per cent of the lilies grown for the Easter market will come in. Formosa lilies will be pretty well all gone and the Bermuda and Giganteum varieties are two or three weeks behind for a full crop. Violets and sweet peas are in their glory and sell well. American Beauty roses are very scarce and will be none too plentiful for Easter. Roses and carnations will be in full crop with most of the florists.

Theo. Wirth and wife of Minneapolis, Minn., spent February 21 at Council Bluffs, Ia. Mr. Wirth was asked by the Council Bluffs park board to read a paper on how to beautify the pretty wood covered hills around the town. The business men tendered Mr. Wirth a banquet at the Grand hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Wirth were guests of J. J. Hess and wife of Omaha Sunday night. Mr. Wirth is very enthusiastic over the S. A. F. convention to be held at Minneapolis next August.

A March Song.

The crocus holds her golden heart
Close folded from the storm,
The robin finds in hemlock wood
A place to keep him warm.

Hepatica, her furry hood
Wears till the cold be past;
She will not lift her tender face
To meet this wintry blast.

But snowdrop, when the March wind calls,
Comes swiftly to his hall,
And let him with his icy dart
Pin on her bridal veil.

SUGGESTIONS FOR EASTER TRADE.

Easter Preparations.

Easter, the great flower day of the year, is now almost at hand and the growers and retailers must both be prepared to meet the demand that will probably tax all the ability and capacity possessed. The grower has, of course, been a long time making preparations to have the stock in the pink of condition and the retailer should also provide himself with all the necessary stock and accessories at as early a date as possible. The supplies should be procured at least two weeks before the great day, so that the energies of all the force can be expended upon finishing the product, waiting upon the trade and seeing that the deliveries are properly made and the decorations arranged in an artistic manner. The stock of baskets for plants, ribbons and decorating them and tying the flowers, paper, boxes and numberless other supplies should all be looked over and where necessary replenished. It is poor business to wait until the last minute and worry over these details which can be attended to early and take time that can be more advantageously spent with the other necessary work. There will probably be something called for, the sale of which cannot be foreseen, so it is best to get everything that it is known will be required as early as possible.

Whatever plants are to be procured should be ordered early, and wherever it is possible a visit made to the growers' houses and a personal selection made. The winter has been unusually severe and it has been very difficult in many cases to keep up the necessary temperatures, and even where the heat has been maintained the plants have been retarded, so that much will depend on the three weeks before Easter to have them in the best of condition and it will pay the buyer to look over the stock. This should be done early, for the large buyers sometimes place their orders two months before Easter in order that they may be assured of the stock and of a good selection. No two plants grow alike and although as far as descriptions go they are the same, in pot, size and bloom, yet placed side by side one may be much more valuable than the other, so there is much in selection, and it is a great advantage to anyone to go and inspect the plants in the greenhouses and to pick out the ones desired and have them held until the proper time of delivery. If baskets of plants are to be made up, and this is one of the growing features of the Easter trade, a supply of small ferns, asparagus and other greens will be necessary to properly finish them and these can be obtained at any time and be on hand when wanted. To successfully conduct a business when such a large increase for a few days is expected, it is necessary to do everything that can be done previous to the demands of the customers and at as early a date as possible.

Rambler Roses for Easter.

The rambler roses now occupy a very important place with the principal stores. The great improvement in varieties which has been made during the past few years has enabled the grower to present these beautiful plants in a great variety of colors ranging from the brightest crimson through the shades of pink to white, and the Baby rambler produces a fine small plant well covered with bloom. The rambler are grown not only in bush form but in many grotesque shapes, being trained as ships, umbrellas and in basket form. Hydrangeas, if well bloomed, are among the most popular Easter plants and they are very decorative, either in church or residence. While these can never be grown and offered at low prices, for a plant with four to six large heads will require much valuable space for a long period, yet they last a long time in bloom and the purchasers get their full value if they will but take proper care of the plant. Spireas are one of the best low-cost plants of the time. The older varieties make a splendid show for a little money and can be used very largely in church decorations. In selling the plant or in placing it in a decoration be sure that it is well watered before it leaves the store or greenhouse. Genistas are grown in quantity for Easter and many growers have them in fancy forms, such as baskets, pillars, pyramids and balls. Another yellow flowering plant that is highly regarded in some sections is the acacia, beautifully grown specimens of these plants being displayed by the large dealers. Cyclamen in splendid shape are invariably offered for Easter and primulas, especially P. obconica, are grown extensively for sale at this time and many of the heaths are produced for the Easter trade. Another beautiful plant that is largely grown is the bougainvillea, and splendid specimens are produced of this showy plant and they always attract attention.

Easter Plants.

Easter has become a great plant day, not only for church decorations, but it has also been a growing practice with the public to make presents of blooming plants to friends at this time. First among these are the lilies which are grown by the thousands for the day. With all the disadvantages of weather and temperature which the grower has experienced this year, it looks as if the supply would be good. The general reports are that most of the stock is of excellent quality. The prices quoted, notwithstanding the increased cost of growing, are about the same as in previous years. Next to the lilies are the azaleas, and these are in very fine condition. The varieties grown are those which have attained the greatest popularity with the trade. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Prof. Wolters, Empereur de Brazil, Niobe, Dr. Moore, Apollo, Bernard Andrea Alba, De Schryveriana and others not so well known. Bulbs are always grown in great quantities for Easter and thousands of pans of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths are annually bloomed for this great flower day. They make a gorgeous show and are emblematic of the awakening of spring which Easter symbolizes, and as they can be produced and marketed at a low price they are great favorites at this time. Lily of the valley in pans are one of the most popular Easter plants and these when well grown find a very ready sale.

Plant Baskets for Easter.

The sale of plant baskets at Easter is made as important a feature as it is at Christmas and they occupy a prominent place in the trade of the principal stores. They can be made up in beautiful combinations at this time, for there is a wealth of material for this work. The baskets can be procured at very low prices with metal pans in which the plants are placed, and by careful planning and buying, taking combinations can be put up at reasonable prices. A point that seems to be lost sight of by many growers is that in these plant baskets or boxes can be used much stock that cannot be disposed of in any other way. The most successful and careful grower of plants is sure to have some that are not perfect specimens, either growing more or less one-sided, or having one part not well covered with bloom; and these can be used advantageously in their plant combinations, making the basket less expensive and at the same time getting good returns for what would otherwise be a loss. This is a line of the business which ordinarily requires a fair degree of salesmanship to properly show the advantages of these beautiful offerings, but when they are properly put up and well shown they are a valuable feature of the Easter trade.

St. Patrick's Day Suggestions.

A charming Scandinavian legend tells us that when March winds begin to blow over the earth, playing softly on long reed pipes, the seductive strains of music penetrate deeper and deeper into the brown earth and awaken the flowers from their winter sleep and by and by little tender green buds come peeping to the surface. This is one of the many stories of spring typified by the green of St. Patrick's day. A good idea for this occasion is to station at each cover for the dinner or luncheon little shamrock dishes (obtainable from your dealer) fill each with little spring bulbs of the very small variety and use shamrocks as a finish. For the center of the table would be an ordinary Irish potato of extra size utilized in this way: Cut out the greater part of the inside pulp, leaving a good outside crust so that it will not collapse easily. Fill with the tiny shamrocks. "St. Patrick's Day" can be written on the side facing the guest, using either gold or green lettering. Place them on a mat of shamrocks and make two tiny baby ribbon rosettes, attaching them to a toothpick and stick in each oblong end as a finish. In selecting the potatoes it is preferable to use the large California or Oregon specimens, as they have the desired oblong shape and are of extra size.

A centerpiece in the form of a high black stove-pipe hat lined throughout with some soft yellow material—silk is best—placing in it a "March Harp" sitting upon his haunches is a good idea. Crown the rabbit with wisps of use a clover shaped centerpiece of emerald green surrounded with white carnations. In the center arrange white carnations gracefully about a miniature gilded "Erin's Harp." Tie the harp with vivid emerald green ribbons. Little green shamrock shaped baskets filled with tiny Irish potato bonbons would answer as souvenirs when tied with a fine cluster of shamrocks at one side.

EASTER BASKET ARRANGED BY GEO. M. STUMPP, NEW YORK Rambler Roses, Acacia, Lily of the Valley, Pink Tulips and Ferns.

An attractive and odd souvenir straw to straggle over his eyes and place on his head a crown made of shamrocks. Put this in the center of a basket—the round flat kind in which white tulips and sprengeri have been arranged. Finish the centerpiece with a border of small shamrock plants. Around each pot of shamrocks tie a green satin ribbon and extend a streamer to each guest. The guest's name can be placed on the end and the shamrocks used as favors.

Daffodils, jonquils and masses of all the early spring flowers may be prettily arranged about the dining room if a more elaborate decoration is desired. In this case it would be advisable to adhere to a strict color combination, namely, either white and yellow or all white and all yellow, using the different groups in old-fashioned garden effect. For instance, if an open fireplace is to be decorated, place in the background the tall tulips of the double yellow variety and from this extend in semi-circles alternately white and yellow tulips, leaving a path down from the center which can be covered with white gravel and sprinkled with the green shamrock powder. The sides of the boxes or pots can be covered with a green moss. On the mantel boxes or potted baskets can be prettily arranged, using showers of shamrocks to fall over the edge in a sort of curtain effect. Green candles with shamrock shades will be a good setting if lights are desired. Mignonette can be effectively arranged in a cut glass vase in the center of a silver platter. Over this sprinkle little shamrocks. White clay pipes filled with small green candles and tied with green ribbons in groups of twos can be prettily arranged around the centerpiece. Or, Pat's hat of the smaller sizes can be filled with shamrocks and can be used alternately with the pipes, using the hats as souvenirs for the lady guests and the pipes for the men.

Easter Basket.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

The plant basket is one of the retailer's most popular offerings for Easter and there are a vast number of arrangements possible to catch the fancy of the public. In making up the basket care must be taken that the color effects and the shape of the foliage contrast well. The plants must not be too crowded, but should stand out well, each being permitted to retain its own individuality while adding to the beauty of the whole arrangement.

Rambler roses are among the most popular of plant basket flowers, although there are a large number of others equally beautiful and quite as popular. Tausendschon, Baby Rambler, Crimson Rambler and Lady Gay are all good varieties to use. In the accompanying supplement is shown a basket which illustrates the Easter idea and is both beautiful and unique. Here Dorothy Perkins is the variety of rose used and the effect is excellent, the foliage and flowers showing to the best advantage. The rabbits and the nest of goslings make one think immediately of Easter and both add greatly to the basket's value from the retailer's point of view.

Easter Suggestions.

The Easter lily, it is said, never bloomed until the day of the death of our Savior, and ever since that time has been used at Easter-time in token of the resurrection. A pretty basket or box of Easter lilies gives much pleasure to an invalid and child on that day as well as a token of thought or esteem to a friend. A new and pretty setting for a large bunch of Easter lilies was recently made with a matting holder in deep purple intended for a casket ornamentation. This mat takes the place of the bouquet holder on funeral designs and is of a flat, oblong or square shape. The one described was caught up in the center with purple ribbon and tucked in at the ends by little folds to give it an artistic touch. One of these bunches was recently displayed in one of our up-to-date florist's windows and was made of specimen white carnations intermingled with the little white cluster flower called the "Star of Bethlehem." The flowers were grouped from both low tulips. A handsome rosette of liberty satin ribbon of the same shade of the tulips serves as a finish at the top of handle and was taken in one strand down to the side of front part and another bow of ribbon attached. In order to make such an open top shopping basket practical in which to arrange the flowers it is advisable to use a stout wire around the inner top edge which will make it extend. A little ends and tied in the center with ribbon bow. This also had the purple mat. This mat looks like tea ticking and has a fringe of about one inch. It is evenly woven and richly colored and makes a novel and pretty finish for the funeral bunch.

There are a great many new and pretty novelty baskets on the market and particularly are those novel made to imitate the shopping bag with deep gussets at the sides allowing it to spread, making a goodly space in which to arrange cut flowers. One such basket was of the natural straw with an orange border of straw at top and handle of straw. It was prettily arranged with the double white and yellow tulips. A handsome rosette of liberty satin ribbon of the same shade of the tulips serves as a finish at the top of handle and was taken in one strand down to the side of front part and another bow of ribbon attached. In order to make such an open top shopping basket practical in which to arrange the flowers it is advisable to use a stout wire around the inner top edge which will make it extend. A little maidenhair will look pretty as a softening finish. Another pretty basket was a round pink straw of about seven inches in height with a handle suggestion of straw. This was arranged with the Butterfly sweet peas in the deep rose shades, and had just one fine pink Killarney rose in the center with a little of that new green leaf foliage now becoming very popular as an inexpensive finish, for it will last a long time.

The simple little violet baskets shown recently had bunches of New York violets arranged in them with a few deep red rose buds at one side and tied with a purple gauze ribbon. The combination is Frenchy and effective. The long handled small Japanese brown tinted baskets look pretty with just a fine primrose plant in them—the tiny flowered primrose which has become so popular. A little chick or duck can be nestled at the side or top of the flower, fastened to it with a white satin ribbon. These little chicks and ducks are very inexpensive—one retail florist had a quantity of small ducklings in his window at 10 cents each. The little chicks or ducks arranged with the flower baskets give them more of the Easter spirit.

Greening Cut Flowers.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please advise me of the best way to dye carnations and other flowers green.

J. C. L.

Success with this artificial coloring is best secured by dissolving the green dye powder in boiling hot water, about one quart of water for each package of dye. This makes a stock solution which should be kept bottled up and is enough to color several quarts of water. White carnations should be fresh and take the color best when just off the plants—before they have been put in water. Immerse the stems in the dye solution, the flowers absorbing the dye through the stems. Two or three hours in the dye is generally enough to give them the desired color. The stems should then be washed thoroughly and placed in jars of clear water when they are ready for sale. All other white flowers, such as roses and lilies, can be greened as easily as the carnation; in fact, yellow tulips, daffodils and other like flowers present very odd features when treated in this way. Care should be taken not to leave the flowers in the solution too long as too much color appears to shorten the life of the bloom.

The table can be prettily arranged to look like a miniature pond. A large oblong pan can be secured of about three inches in depth. The plumber can make this at a small cost and paint white. This lake should form the center of the table, banked with smilax. Place in it floating swans, ducks and green frogs and some gold fish. In the center of the pond on a raised elevation place a "bunny." He can be a toy rabbit bought at a candy store or toy store. A cabbage leaf can be placed under the "bunny." Place in bunny's paws a carrot. Surround the entire centerpiece with a garland made of tulips and daffodils, using generously of the foliage. As favors use bon-bon boxes in cabbage leaf design and fill with candies made of carrot design. Tie on each bon bon box a small French nosegay made of small spring flowers in different varieties.

Propagating By Grafting.

Propagating by grafting as compared with propagating by cutting seems irksome and tedious. Those who have had no experience in this class of work are usually a little afraid to make a trial, the bugbear of failure being ever present in their minds. Grafting operations usually begin in January and are continued by some growers even as late as May, but the most successful batches are those produced from the middle of January to the end of March, as during that period we have more control of conditions as regards moisture, temperature and light than when the season is further advanced.

The first essential towards successful grafting is to have a good frame or box in which to place the newly grafted stock. This can readily be converted out of an ordinary bench by boarding up the back and front so as to conserve the heat, much in the same way as we make a propagating bench for cuttings when pressed for room. But to get full benefit it must be as nearly airtight as possible. There should be sufficient piping underneath the bench to insure a temperature of 75 degrees to 80 degrees during zero weather. The bottom boards should be at least 15 inches above the piping, so as to be removed from the ardent heat. Have a covering of sifted ashes at least one inch deep on which to set the pots. This frame or box should be fitted with glazed sash, leaving plenty of room for the plants without being too close to the glass.

The manetti stocks should be potted and brought in and placed on the bench some time previous to grafting, so that root action may be started, thus giving a supply of sap for the immediate support of the scion but not left long enough to cause the eyes to break. The scion should be of the same quality of wood as that used for cutting and should be selected with the same critical care. Many are the styles of grafting recommended, but as expediency and speed are the principal objects to be attained, nearly every propagator has his own, usually being the style at which he is most expert.

Whip grafting is that in most general use for indoor work. The manual part of this operation while being simple is rather difficult to describe, a very short object lesson being of more material aid than columns of descriptive matter. The fundamental principle pertaining to all styles of grafting is the necessity of having direct contact between the inner layers of bark in all the parts to be united, as without this a perfect union cannot be effected. The woody part of the stock and scion never unite but are usually so covered up by the outer growth that unless the parts are dissected it is never discovered. If this principle is attended to the style of grafting can be varied at pleasure with the same assurance of success. A keen edged knife is one of the first requisites, as a clean cut will unite much sooner than one made with a dull edge.

The scion should be tied firmly but not tightly in its place with some soft material that will not cut into the bark. Immediately after the scion is attached the plants should be replaced in the frame, syringed and the sash closed tightly. The case should be kept closed for the first ten days, opening it only for a few minutes night and morning to dry off the superfluous moisture and to change the air. As soon as union has taken place they should get a little ventilation, which should be increased gradually from day to day, keeping a careful watch that no wilting takes place. In about three weeks from the time of grafting, if conditions have been right, they can be moved to the open bench, where a temperature of 60 degrees at night can be maintained and given a light shade during bright sunshine for a week or so until they are hardened off, when the temperature can be reduced to normal. In syringing, they require more care than own root stock, as the scions are liable to get detached if much force is applied. Otherwise they can receive identical treatment. From time to time they should be looked over and any suckers removed. If any of the tying material remains on too long it is apt to cut into the bark and should be removed after its use is no longer needed.

Easter Shrubs.

The flowering shrubs are forced in large quantities, lilacs especially being great favorites when the dwarf plants are to be obtained well covered with flowers. Both the white and purple are grown, Marie Legraye being the popular white and Charles X the purple. Wistarias are also to be seen and they make a beautiful decorative plant when well flowered, but they are among the most expensive offerings. The flowering prunus are forced by many growers and add to the great variety to be had at this season, and the metrosideros, or bottle brush, is always the cause of much comment and many inquiries by the customers if well bloomed.

The flowering plants are made very attractive, either by placing the pots in pot covers or by wrapping them in Porto Rican or raffia matting, or crepe paper, but care should be taken in the selection of colors that they are either in harmony or of decided contrasts, especially is this so with the shades of pink and red. Many plants are nicely ornamented by the use of ribbons, but here again the best of taste is required, for it is very easy to overdo this and also to injure the attractiveness of the plant by a poor selection of color.

Some of Lemoine's Novelties.

FROM THE INTRODUCER'S DESCRIPTIONS.

New Hybrid Primulas.—Among the many introductions due to the celebrated explorer and botanist, E. H. Wilson, is the hardy Primula Veitchii, native of Le-Tchuen (China), a variety with downy foliage and purplish flowers, with golden yellow eyes. This species has been fertilized with the pollen of a variety of Primula cortusoides, resulting in vigorous hardy plants, with abundant foliage persisting throughout the summer and flowering brilliantly. The introducers hope to see them the beginning of a new race which will have a place in every garden. Another new one, Primula La Lorraine, quickly forms a large clump. Foliage of medium size, crinkled, curved and lobed at the edges. The lower side is very velvety. A seedling plant one year old carried 18 flower spikes, standing 26 inches above the foliage. They are stiff and velvety, with large umbels of 25 flowers, sometimes 1½ inches in diameter and of a beautiful carmine rose color with a large bright yellow eye. Some of these spikes present a second circle of flowers. They have a sweet and agreeable fragrance. Primula Ville de Nancy is of similar foliage, perhaps a little more velvety underneath. Floral spikes are elegant. Flowers of a new form, the lobes deeply lacinated and toothed. Color is bright purplish carmine with yellow eye and very sweet in fragrance.

New Hydrangeas Hortensis.—In a sowing of several thousands of plants the results of an artificial cross between Hydrangea Otaksa monstrosa, Mariesii, Souvenir de Claire and Rosea have proved most satisfactory. Among the plants studied, a number have been chosen for introduction, either on account of freedom of bloom, size of flower, grace of form or beauty of color. Visitors to the Paris Expositions of 1910 and 1912 will remember the beautiful varieties Avalanche, Bouquet rose, La Lorraine, Ornament, Mont rose and several others which were highly praised and awarded a number of prizes. Another, Hortensis E. G. Hill, is the result of Rosea X Otaksa. It is of rigid stem, large horizontal inflorescence with medium flowers of soft rose color and extremely free blooming.

Viburnum Carlesii. — A Korean shrub, absolutely hardy, more or less wooly, resembling a little in wood and foliage the Viburnum lantana. Stems are light brown, leaves oval, toothed and light green. Inflorescence terminal, the buds appearing in Autumn. It develops in April. Produces large corymbs of flowers, all fertile and similar. Large, measuring ¾ of an inch in diameter, with a half-inch tube and five rounded lobes. Color rosy white, passing to pure white. Flowers exhale a delicious fragrance, as fine as that of jasmine, and when the plant is freed in a temperate house, the entire atmosphere is perfumed. The bush remains a low clump. The prediction is made that it will be used for forcing.

Peony Hybrid of P. Lutea, L'Espérance.—Vigorous variety with tall straight stems. Foliage similar to P. Moutan, which the plant resembles. Flower stems are rather stiff, flowers attaining eight inches in diameter, formed of eight to 10 rounded petals, waved and crinkled. Light primrose yellow, shaded Havana, with carmine rose blotches at the base. Stamens numerous with blood red filaments and golden anthers. Pistils green surrounded with a bronze red tunic, stigma scarlet. Flowers June 5 to 15.

Deutzia Crenata Recta.—Result of a cross between D. crenata candidissima plena and D. Vilmorine. Forms a clump of straight and quite vertical shoots. Flower panicles pyramidal, perfectly erect. Flowers large and single, milk white, erect and crowded. plant of especially good habit.

Eliminating Funeral Flowers.

The news from Cincinnati to the effect that one of the large Catholic parishes in southern Ohio has announced that in the future "no funerals to which flowers are permitted to be sent will be permitted in the church" places an issue up to the florists' trade, which, if permitted to become generally effect-be contributed to charity to help the living. This, however, was merely a suggestion and no adverse effects have thus far been felt by the florists resultant therefrom; but this church order is reported to be mandatory and prohibitive, and the statement comes from one of the parish managers that this is the beginning of a nation-wide movement to eliminate flowers from funerals.

This action should certainly arouse the progressive florists, including those directly and indirectly interested in floriculture in a commercial way, to the absolute urgency of a concentrated organization within the flower industry to counteract the adverse influence of such an order. It is not a condition that can be coped with by local publicity committees, for it would not be a local but, as above stated, a nation-wide movement if it persisted. Local publicity committees under a proper ive, will mean a decided curtailing of one of its principal sources of revenue. It is only about a year ago that one of the leading Jewish charities of this country advocated that the money usually spent for flowers at funerals head, such as a national bureau to govern them, could be developed into strong forces for good in their respective communities, but no committee constituted of florists, seedsmen, supplymen, etc., could ever be found sufficiently capable to stem the effects that a church movement as the one referred to would have on the public. It will require a man on the job who has had practical experience and who knows the publicity game from A to Z to instigate a country-wide public sentiment against abolishing the time honored custom of burying our dead with flowers and thus making unpopular any attempt of church or charity to abolish it.

There is no necessity for the flower industry to experiment as to how it can best obtain this publicity essential to protect its interests and to further develop its business. There are established policies now employed by much larger industries which have been proven productive of great results. The flower industry can benefit by these successes, if it will but investigate and adopt these tried and tested methods. The time is most opportune and the publicity most needful. The subject is of such vast importance to the entire industry that a special session should be given up to it by the S. A. F. during the week of the third International Flower Show with a view of formulating some definite plans for immediate action.

My interest in this is not inspired by any philanthropic motive. The market for my products is the florists' trade; an increase in that business means gain to me, and a decrease means loss, so that the interest I manifest in publicity may even be regarded as mercenary. For the good I expect to derive from it, however, I am quite ready to come across with my share to make up an appropriation to set the wheels in motion at once and no doubt there are many more willing to do likewise if the opportunity is presented to contribute to a plan which will give promise of real achievement.

Mealy Bug on Ferns.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Our pot ferns have, for some time, been badly infested with mealy bug. How can we get rid of the bugs without injuring the ferns?

Pennsylvania.

J. H. T.

It is not an easy matter to get rid of mealy bug on ferns without doing some injury to the ferns, for while the fully developed fronds of many varieties may stand, the use of strong insecticides without injury, yet the young fronds that are just unfolding are almost sure to suffer to a greater or less degree. I would try cutting out the worst fronds and then giving the plants a dip in nicofume solution, the solution to consist of one part of nicofume to 500 parts of water, and repeating the dip after three days. Do not expose the plants to the sun for a few hours after this treatment.

THE CARNATION.

The Spring Routine.

The winter season is drawing to a close and the bright days of spring will soon be with us, bringing with them the necessity of changing a little the general routine in the care of the plants. Now is the time that red spider will be troublesome if not kept in check by syringing the plants occasionally. Choose a bright morning about once a week (or as the weather will permit) and syringe thoroughly the under parts of the plants. An even temperature, closely watching the airing of the houses and paying strict attention to guard against the temperature inside becoming too high and dry, is one of the surest means of preventing red spider.

growth of the shoots before they have a chance properly to expand and in a very short time there is a crop of twisted and yellow-tipped shoots leading to affected buds and flowers. This trouble can be avoided by the regular use of the insecticide every ten days or two weeks.

The soil in the beds that have not been replenished by mulching earlier in the season will now be in need of this mulching to carry the plants through the late spring or early summer. The material for this purpose should be thoroughly well rotted cow manure or cow and horse manure mixed, but it is very important that it be well rotted. If there is any doubt about this it is the safest plan to mix considerable soil with it. Green manure put on the beds as a mulch at this time will cause the stems to

SOME OF LEMOINE'S NOVELTIES.

Primula Hybrida Ville De Nancy.

Another very important work that should be looked after very closely is that of fumigating to keep the plants clean of green fly. This pest is usually very active at this season when the plants are making heavy growth. They commence to get hold of the new soft become very brittle and snap with the least touch; it also causes the calyx to split and is very likely to start stem rotting. A thick mulch should be avoided. About one-half inch thick is plenty. This gives the grower in charge a chance to keep the lower part of the beds in the right condition, which is very much harder to do when a heavy mulch is put on. Extra care in the watering directly after putting on the mulch is very necessary, as it is essential to guard against the soil getting too wet.

The young stock now being worked along for next season's planting should receive every care necessary to keep them growing along. If enough stock to meet the requirements have not been provided it should be attended to at once either by putting in the cuttings or purchasing the shortage. The cuttings will take considerably less time to root now than they will three or four weeks later and they need all the time from now to planting time to grow into thrifty, hardy plants.

As quickly as the cuttings become rooted in the propagating bed pot them up and do not allow them to remain long in the sand to weaken their roots. The care of the flowering plants as regards temperature, airing and keeping the insects in check also applies very particularly to the young stock. They delight in a cool temperature, plenty of fresh air on every favorable occasion and the soil at their roots kept moderately moist. The early propagated stock that has become well rooted in the pots should be shifted along into larger sizes as they need it. Also pay close attention to the work of topping these young plants to give them every chance to break freely and make sturdy stock in time for planting out in the field.

Experiments on Stem Rot

AT ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY.

A number of fungus diseases of greenhouse plants have been under observation during this past year, and some interesting data have been collected. However, as a number of experiments are still in progress, it is thought better to give a short resume of what is being done. Following the plan of last year, most of our attention has been confined to one disease, namely, "wet stem rot" of the carnation. The work was taken up where — Anderson dropped it and along very similar lines. One-half of a house is devoted to experimental work, such as methods of control, infection, etc. Most of these experiments are still in progress. In the laboratory experiments are now being performed on the relation of the fungus to light, temperature, moisture, acidity and alkalinity. A number of strains of rhizoctonia from various hosts, potato, clover, corn, bean, carrot, thistle and other vegetables, were obtained from various sources during the past year. These were compared with the rhizoctonia from the carnation. While these different strains do show cultural differences in the laboratory, it still remains to be seen whether they will show varying powers of infection on the carnation.

The objection of the experiments at the present time is to determine whether the strain of rhizoctonia from the carnation host alone or those from all other hosts can produce stem rot of the carnation. If the first statement proves to be the case, then the matter of controlling stem rot will be simple, for it will be merely a question of eliminating the diseased plants. On the other hand, if other strains of rhizoctonia are able to attack the carnation it will be a difficult problem to work out a means of control, for one will never know when the plants will be attacked in the field. Further, the soil brought into the greenhouse if taken from a field on which the hosts named above have been grown, might be infected with rhizoctonia. This question is of fundamental importance. From observations in the carnation field last summer, the following conclusions, some of them no doubt being well known, but which can probably bear repeating, may be made:

(1) When plants are put out in the field in the spring they are very liable to be set too deep, which perhaps may bring about some morphological difference in the stem just at the surface of the ground, causing the plant to become more susceptible to stem rot. Great care should be exercised in planting the plants just the required depth. This should be done again when the plants are taken into the house in the fall.

(2) From data collected from diseased plants in the field, a plant with a single stem which breaks one or two inches above the surface of the soil is much less liable to stem rot than a plant breaking just at, or slightly below, the ground. The reason is obvious. The branches of a plant forking at the surface of the ground are very easily broken off in different ways. They generally break at the base, so there is exposed a wound, through which fungi can easily enter. The wound is later covered with soil, and so it is an easy matter for the fungus rhizoctonia to enter the exposed tissue and produce stem rot. A large number of plants examined show that in the majority of cases the fungus gains entrance through a wound of this kind.

(3) Cultivating too deep and throwing the soil up around the plants also produces a condition more favorable to rhizoctonia. Great care should be exercised not to injure any of the plants with the cultivator.

(4) If stem rot is present in a carnation field all dead or wilted plants should be pulled up as soon as noticed and the soil surrounding the plant should be soaked with a fungicide, preferably formalin. It can be applied in the dilution of 1:200. Formalin is very desirable in this work, as it will kill the mycelium of the fungus rhizoctonia in the ground; it is inexpensive; the fumes of the formalin escape from the soil quickly and it does not injure the soil in any way.

SOME OF LEMOINE'S NOVELTIES.

Concerning the work in the greenhouse, only general statements can be made at this time. A number of agents for sterilizing the soil were tried, including steam and a number of fungicides. The experiments were conducted in the following manner: The soil was first infected with soil cultures of the fungus rhizoctonia grown in the laboratory, and then half of it was sterilized, the other half being left as a check. In the steam sterilized bench no plants have died, while in the bench infected with rhizoctonia and not sterilized the loss due to stem rot is 60 per cent. The fungicides Bordeaux mixture, copper sulphate and sulphate acid, all gave poor results. Formalin applied at the rate of 1:200 and the soil allowed to dry for a week has given excellent results, none of the plants being diseased up to this date. The application of limestone also appears to retard the growth of rhizoctonia. Next year we will confine all our efforts to steam sterilized soil, the formalin treatment and the application of limestone.

Steam sterilized soil appears to have one serious disadvantage, mainly that the growth of plants is slightly retarded for the first two or three weeks. There seems to be no satisfactory explanation for this phenomenon. A number of infection experiments have also been conducted in the greenhouse. These bear out the general conclusion reached by a number of the growers. The first set of plants inoculated with the fungus rhizoctonia one week after the plants were set in gave almost 100 per cent of infection inside of two weeks. This was especially true with plants inoculated with a strain obtained from diseased plants from the field a few weeks previous. The second set of plants inoculated a month later produced a much lower percentage of deaths and a longer period of time before death occurred. A third series of inoculations has produced infection in only four out of twenty plants; in each case these plants were wounded at the point of inoculation. The first death occurred almost two months after the plants had been inoculated, showing that the progress of the fungus at this season is very slow indeed. The rest of the plants are still healthy. The most obvious reason is that the plants are much stronger and are able in most cases to withstand the attack of the fungus.

Steam sterilized sand has been used for cuttings in the experimental work and has proved satisfactory. To date no rhizoctonia has been found in any of the carnation cutting beds at the station and it is very doubtful that the disease is carried in this manner. It seems more probable than that the plants are first attacked in the field, and as men have stated before, it is of the utmost importance to know whether strains of rhizoctonia infecting various plants in the field are also able to attack the carnation plants. While rhizoctonia has not been found in the carnation cutting bench other fungi have been constantly noticed. The most important of these is the fungus fusarium, which also causes "the dry stem rot" of carnations. The cut ends of the leaves are first attacked, the fungus then passing down the leaf into the stem and finally killing the cutting. This disease is easily recognized in the first stages by the wilting and drying of the infected leaves which turn yellow and then brown.

SOME OF LEMOINE'S NOVELTIES.

A rhizoctonia was found last fall in the cutting bench, causing some damage to cuttings of coleus, salvia and alternanthera. The origin of this fungus in the bench was followed out and it gave a very interesting example as to how a fungus may be brought into the greenhouse. The cuttings of alternanthera were first attacked, so the bed outside was examined to see if any of the plants were infected. However, all plants appeared to be perfectly healthy. On closer examination of several of the plants, a brown mycellum was seen ramifying between the numerous closely packed branches and leaves of these plants. When taken into the laboratory and pure cultures made of this fungus, it was found to be the same fungus causing the damping off of the cuttings inside. Here we have a very interesting case of a fungus being protected by a plant and tided over unfavorable conditions. As the plants were normal and healthy the fungus was unable to infect the plant, but just as soon as it was brought into the greenhouse with the plants and introduced into the cutting bench conditions were very favorable for its growth and development, and it was fully capable of attacking the cuttings.

One of the most important factors in the control of stem rot in the greenhouse is the careful selection of carnation plants when brought in from the field. Last fall every plant that showed any signs of disease as well as all unhealthy or damaged plants was examined. As a result only a few plants have been lost on account of this disease. This matter of selecting plants is, therefore, a very important factor in the control of this disease. If occasionally a plant is killed by rhizoctonia in the greenhouse it should be pulled up immediately and the soil drenched with a solution of formalin. A fresh plant should not be put in until the soil is dry and it should receive careful treatment. Four plants replaced in the same place have been seen to die, in each case for the simple reason that they received the same treatment as the surrounding plants, which were strong and healthy and had been growing for some time, and that the fungus was still present in the soil. The problem of the control of the wet stem rot is far from being complete, but experiments give some encouragement so that in the near future a method of control will probably be found for this serious disease.

Another disease which causes more or less loss to growers of carnations is the so-called dry stem rot, which I suggest be called "branch wilt" to distinguish it more sharply from the wet stem rot, due to rhizoctonia. This "branch wilt" is due to a species of the fungus fusarium. This fungus has never been seen to attack a healthy growing carnation plant. It gains entrance to the tissue of the part in each case through wounds and cuts on the plant. The spores which are everywhere in the soil and air of the house are able to germinate in a drop of water, so that if the plants are wet and a flower is cut the spore will germinate on this cut surface and work its way into the branches. When the young shoots arise they grow until the fungus reaches the base of the shoot and in a short time the shoot will wilt suddenly and die. The fungus is rarely able to kill the whole plant. By looking over a carnation house infected with "branch wilt" the dead branches are very conspicuous and characteristic of this disease.

The only control that can be suggested at this time is absolute cleanliness of the house. As this fungus is able to grow on dead leaves of the plants as well as on and under the branches, such conditions should not be tolerated. Overhead watering should be discontinued as much as possible, especially in cloudy weather. "Yellows," as I shall call this disease for the present, to distinguish it from bacteriosis and stigmose, is widely distributed throughout the state, and from reports seems to be increasing rapidly. The trouble starts in the young leaves and is first noticed as small pale green areas, varying in size and shape. On holding an infected leaf up to the light the dots appear translucent. These spots become more distinct and turn yellow, while the tissue beneath collapses. The trouble is confined not only to the leaves, but in badly infected plants the branches and flower stems may be covered with the yellow elongated spots.

Several distinct forms of "yellows" can be recognized, which differ in general appearance and subsequent behavior. The early stages of the first type consist of small translucent dots, scattered irregularly through the leaf. At first they are a paler green than the surrounding tissue, but distinctly delineated from it. The spots increase more or less rapidly until they reach a diameter of 1 to 8 mm. Most of these spots are approximately circular but may be irregular in outline, rarely elongated. Few of the spots coalesce in this form. This type is especially noticeable on the White Enchantress. A single leaf may have from one or two to fifty or more spots, depending on the extent of infection. Another characteristic of this first type is that the spots do not tend to make the leaves brittle.

The development of the second form is similar to the one above, except that while still in the early stages the spots coalesce and become very much elongated, so that a single spot may be one to two inches or more in length. On badly infected leaves these elongated areas run parallel to the mid rib and have a sort of flaky appearance. The leaves become very brittle and are very easily snapped off. In the later stage the tissue beneath the areas collapses, the spot becomes sunken and finally turns brown as the leaf dies. This type of yellows is found in the Beacon and Pink Enchantress and is, as a rule, much more destructive than the first type.

A third form may be mentioned here, which is found only on the red-flowered varieties, as Beacon. Here the areas in the late stages take on a purplish color and are slightly raised. It is not known whether this form is the same as the others or not. The Microscopical observations show no rupture of the epidermis and with a lens the bloom on the leaf above the spots appears to be undisturbed. The chloroplasts are lighter in the diseased areas but do not seem degenerated. No bacteria or fungi are present except when the epidermis of the leaf is broken down. No insect punctures, as have been described by Woods, have been observed; in fact, no collapsed tissue can be traced to the epidermis except in later stages, when the tissues have collapsed. No explanation as to the cause of this disease can be given at present. However, preliminary experiments have shown that the disease is not transmissible from one plant to another, but that it is carried from season to season by means of infected cuttings. Until the cause has been determined, the suggestion is made that no cuttings from plants that show "yellows" be taken; and if any plants show these spots at any time from the cutting bench stage to the time they are brought into the house in the fall, they should be discarded. In this way the disease to a large extent will be eliminated.

A bacterial disease of begonia, or rust as it is commonly called, was under observation last fall on begonias of the Lorraine type. The extent of this disease is not known, having been observed only in the station greenhouse. The trouble first appears as very fine rusty colored spots on the leaves. These rapidly increase in size and finally kill the leaf in some cases. Even if all the leaves are not killed outright they are so spotted that they are rendered useless for show purposes.

SOME OF LEMOINE'S NOVELTIES.

red-flowered varieties are also susceptible to the second type, besides this third form. As new shoots arise they become infected, while the old leaves at the base of the plant die off, giving the plant a very diseased appearance. While "yellows" does not kill the plants outright it renders them useless, for they will produce only a few imperfect flowers, and in only slight attacks of "yellows" it retards the growth of the plant.

The spots are due to an invasion of bacteria, which occurs only when the leaves are wet. The spray from the hose striking the leaves causes the tissues beneath to become slightly water soaked. When this occurs it gives a favorable opportunity for the bacteria to enter and finish the destruction.

It might be well here to give a brief review of the history of the Lorraine type as it suggests a proper treatment of this disease. B. Socotrana was discovered by Dr. Balfour on the Island of Socotra in the Mediterranean Sea. The semi-tuber was found growing on the hot, sandy, arid soil of this island. It was later crossed with B. Dregi, a native of Cape of Good Hope. B. Gloire de Lorraine was the result of this cross. From the history of this type, then, it can readily be seen that the plant was not accustomed to much water and that by overhead watering the plant becomes more susceptible to this bacterial disease. The method for the control of this disease is to place the plants on inverted pots, to give them plenty of room and to discontinue syringing the leaves. In this way the bacteria will not be able to pass through the epidermis, and so no spots will be formed.

This same disease was noticed in cuttings taken from rusted plants. Here the cuttings rotted badly and a large per cent of them were killed. This bacterial disease has not been observed on other varieties of begonia. There has lately been found a crown rot of Primula malacoides, and if any of you are troubled with this disease I would be very glad indeed to receive material and suggestions from you.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Best Commercial Varieties.

In considering so broad a subject as the above, the writer must be farsighted to discern those best suited for the average grower. In the first place, there are so many who grow for the trade, each vicinity demanding certain kinds in varied quantity, and on the other hand some retail their entire product, while others consign entirely, so that sorts which would meet the requirements of the former might not be the most serviceable to the latter, inasmuch as the entire output must be of such quality as to permit their being handled several times before they reach the consumer. To look at this subject from all sides it is necessary to keep constantly in mind the most important characteristics favored by the majority interested in this specific branch, owing to the fact that the returns received indirectly indicate either profit or loss for the season's work.

When we consider the million or more plants and cuttings transplanted to and from all parts of the country, varying in variety as they do, that these transactions represent the scrutiny of our ablest and most brainy buyers, we must decide which of these characteristics are most staple. Let us first consider the likes and dislikes of the flower buying public in making these deductions. It is true the customer is often indifferent, being influenced or swayed in deciding by the judgment or preference of the salesman. Such indifference is usually applicable to quantity to be used or the style of arrangement most suitable for the occasion, rather than the color, which is the pre-eminent factor in producing the desired effect. So we must give color first place. Fullness varies the form, and so in conjunction with color has a decided influence upon the artistic phase of all kinds of arrangement, for "Grace gives charm where mass might harm."

In summing up these conclusions it is evident that color and form are of major importance to the average purchaser. It is also important that such gifts be fresh and in a condition to insure the recipient of as many hours of pleasure as possible. This factor, which is known as "keeping qualities," and which is termed also "substance," is modified by the amount of firmness of the tissue which nature imparts to the petals and is of a constitutional character, although it may be more or less changed by the conditions governing this quality, namely, the fully developed or semi-developed state when blooms from this space as we should. Some are malformed, while others are off color, especially where early buds were selected. We shall try it another year but fear its merits will not warrant our retaining it very long; in fact, we are now looking for something better."

At this point we have pictured a perfect flower from the consumer's standpoint, and now let us consider the qualities requisite for perfection from the grower's point of view. Those who recut or the conditions under which they are kept after being cut.

For certain kinds of arrangement those possessing strong, rigid stems are superior to those which are more or less limp. At this day and age the public demand long stemmed flowers with foliage abundant and perfect so that any curtailment along these lines is considered a defect, even though a minor one. Another peculiarity which often receives only slight consideration is the high percentage of perfect blooms that can be cut from a certain space. You often hear the following expressions when inquiring as to the merit of certain kinds: "We have made more money from this bench than any other, having cut a larger percentage of high-grade blooms than from equal space elsewhere." Another will say, "Yes, we like it and yet we do not. The color is fine and it comes at a time when there is good demand, but we do not cut nearly as many perfect tail their entire cut do not seriously consider these qualities, inasmuch as they know there will be no trouble in disposing of any kinds regardless of quality, owing to the varied uses to which they can be put. Those who consign must look more closely for existing faults, rejecting such as have weak stems, fragile flowers which shatter or muss easily and such as will wilt quickly after cutting, as well as those which are not of the best form, thereby becoming bruised or discolored in the course of packing, also those possessing undecided color.

When these qualities have been carefully considered and the most promising kinds selected then ascertain which of these will come to the highest state of perfection in the least time and also if subsequent stock can be propagated and again brought to this state without great loss of time and space. In summing up we find those best adapted to this purpose are those possessing the most popular colors, namely, white, yellow, pink and a limited number of red. Why? Because they are in greatest demand. Those with best keeping qualities and having the longest stems and ample foliage are more serviceable to all concerned. Those developing perfect blooms, even if not planted early, are more profitable, permitting other stock to be grown and disposed of from the same space, with the advantage of requiring less labor

Among the extra early flowering sorts are Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and Unaka. Those flowering in early October were formerly known as early, but since the advent of the foregoing are now considered second early are represented, as follows: Chas. the pompons and a few of the most upright growing anemones and singles may be added. The grower who retails his crop can with impunity add a great many of the exhibition sorts and increase the list of anemones and singles. Such a course is permissible for the sake of variety, as an infinite number of striking colors and artistic forms are thus made available to customers who demand these novelties in a limited quantity.

Flower Markets of Paris.

The flower stalls of Paris, like the tea houses of Tokio, are institutions indelibly impressed on their environment. The Parisian public demands its cut flowers the year round, as well in the dog days, as in the bitterest, brightest cold of winter. In the summer the cut flowers of the Paris markets are supplied by the growers in the environs, but during the winter months hyacinths, narcissus, roses, renoncules and carnations arrive literally by millions of shipments during the season from the south of France. One little town, Ollioules near Toulon, on the shores of the Mediterranean, alone sends a quarter of a million colis postaux each year from October to May.

The Rapide des Fleurs, or the "Cut Flower Express," of the Riviera runs express from Marseilles on the same schedule as the celebrated Cote d'Azur Rapide de Luxe, Europe's fastest and most luxurious express train. En route from Vintimille to Ollioules it stops at every flower growing station and loads up its ten freight cars with countless thousands of baskets of cut flowers, which are sorted by a train crew en route as the letters are sorted in a mail van, for this cut flower express also carries its precious freight to London, Berlin and, once a week, even to St. Petersburg, certain of the cars being switched off before arriving at the Paris Gare de Lyon. This train of flowers is one of the remarkable industrial enterprises of old Europe. In 1900 Riviera flower growers sold on the Paris markets carnations to the value of over two million francs, roses for a million and a half, half a million francs' worth of violets, and hyacinths and narcissus and time devoted to their maintenance. The season of flowering has nothing to do with the financial end of this question further than the variation of the market, at certain periods better prices prevailing than at others.

All that confronts the grower from this angle is the possibility of unsatisfactory prices when the crop is harvested and his ability to grow the most useful salable grade, when size, color and other conditions are considered. As to the best varieties, this depends wholly upon the fact previously set forth and the growers to produce stock which will merit remunerative returns and constant demand. The production of such stock is not certain under all conditions and in all localities, owing to the fact that climatic influences and other local differences often enter into the case and prevents the grower from securing as favorable results as a near or distant neighbor may be blessed with. Such varied results are usually due to the lack of knowledge of the person caring for such crops.

Those called upon to suggest the most suitable kinds must be blessed with a thorough knowledge of the kind best suited and with the courage to maintain their convictions. Those who recommend such as are usually included in the exhibition section must be assured that size, finish and earliness do not constitute commercial qualities in the literal sense, unless associated with other good traits. It is preposterous for one person to imagine he can discern all these qualities, intricate as they are, and suggest only the best. Every grower has his favorites which seem to respond to his treatment, while others of apparent equal merit are stubborn and do not respond to his best efforts. In conclusion, it will suffice to say the following kinds meet the commendation of most of the growers who consign.

Ivory and Yellow October Frost. Of the mid-season kinds the following are considered best: Aesthetic, Antique, Col. D. Appleton, Crocus, Dick Witterstaetter, Dr. Enguehard, Geo. W. Childs, Golden Eagle, Golden Wedding, Mrs. W. E. Kelley, Major Bonnaffon, Nontero, Patty, Pink Gem, President Roosevelt, Ramapo, Roman Gold, Timothy Eaton and Yellow Eaton. In the so-called late section we find the best are as follows: W. H. Chadwick and its several sports, December Gem, Harvard, Helen Frick, Intensity, John Burton, Jeanne Nonin, Maud Dean, Mrs. J. Jones, Nagoya, Venetta, White Bonnaffon, White Helen Frick and Yanoma. To this list the majority of of a value too great even to estimate. A dozen or fifteen hours after these blooms were actually growing in the warm sunny corners about Ollioules, Hyeres, or Antibes on the shores of the Mediterranean are to be found for sale on the side walk stalls opposite the Madeleine and the Palais de Justice at much lower prices than those of Broadway or Piccadilly.

Alphonse Karr, the ecrivain-jardinier, was a great admirer of the flora stallation is very crude and altogether insufficient and inconvenient from all points of view, but recent agitation promises to remedy all this.

The flower market is held in a vast open space which separates several of the ten pavilions of the general markets, or halles, under the shadow of the Eglise de St. Eustache just back of the Quartier de la Bourse. In this cold passage, open in winter to all the winds that blow, almost from the sale opens. The stock is spread out on the bare pavement, perhaps even in the middle of the street. Each seller pays by the day for the space he occupies thirty to forty centimes a square metre, according to whether he is sheltered or in the open air, say six to eight cents a square yard.

When the temperature is very low, during the long dark nights of winter, the flowers are covered to protect against any damage that might possibly diminish their commercial value. They have less to complain of than their unhappy watchers shivering against the biting cold north wind, with only such solace as they can get from a concoction of chicoree and petits verres at the neighboring cabarets. The sale begins at three o'clock in the morning in summer and four in winter. It is then that the activity and animation of the market are really remarkable. There are no retail buyers at this early hour; all business is conducted as between growers or their representatives, and wholesale and retail dealers. All are apparently known to each other and the business is transacted as enigmatically and rapidly as the deals on the stock exchange. Chiefly the flower buyers at the "halles" are only the intermediaries, or jobbers, who buy to re-sell again. Some clever dealers will buy at the beginning of the sale, when there are many flowers at a low price, and when prices have risen dispose of their stocks at a great profit. These dealers are the despised of their race and are called "regrattiers." Auctioning is not allowed at the halles; only two individuals have this privilege for flowers in all Paris, and they pay ten thousand francs a year license. They are carefully watched and no disorder is allowed and, as far as can be, absolute veracity and probity is assured.

There are two classes of individuals which render great services to the flower dealers of the halles—the Commissionnaires en Fleurs and the Forts des Halles. Commissionnaires to the number of forty facilitate the access of foreign (country) products to the Parisian markets; their services can hardly be dispensed with any more than those of a broker in dealing with a customs house or a lawyer for a of Mediterranean France, and to acquaint the great Paris public with its variety and charm he sought, something like forty years ago, by every possible means to bring it to public attention, with the result that it was not long before bouquets of violets and roses of Nice and Hyeres were articles of current consumption in all the faubourgs. The growth of the industry since the dilettante days of the author of "Guepes" has been of a magnitude undreamed of by that flower lover. From Karr's celebrated and picturesque Maison Close at St. Raphael—still a stock sight for tourists passing that way—the author first set the machinery in motion which gave a new employment to thousands of residents of Maritime Provence. And who shall say, after this, that poets are not practical? Whether the flowers come from the environs of Paris or from a distance, upon entering the capital they all converge upon the Halles Centrales, from whence they retake their course in different directions, following the buyers from all parts. Every night at the Paris Halles is to be witnessed a wonderful spectacle. Those outside the trade know little of this and rarely assist on account, perhaps, of the inconvenience of the hour. At all events this great flower sale is a thing to see, this flower market, or Crie, the largest in the world. Then, and then only, may one have an adequate idea of the importance of the cut flower traffic of Paris, and of the numbers of people that occupy themselves therewith. In no other city, London perhaps excepted, is there any semblance of flower traffic on a similar scale. The public flower sale at Paris is not at its best either, for there is no pavilion devoted to the traffic; the present in-the beginning of nightfall the arriving shipments of cut flowers are stacked up mountain high, each variety to itself as in the stalls of a meat, fish and vegetable market. First come the arrivals by the railway, small baskets of split reeds enclosing their precious merchandise from the Midi just disembarked from the cars at the Gare de Lyon. Then come the horticulturists from the environs of Paris, their products in two-wheeled, hooded carts. If they come from a great distance a boy or man is sometimes sent on ahead to hold a good place, the carts arriving only just as case in court. The horticulturists of the provinces do not always have their own representatives at Paris to receive their product and offer it in the markets. In this event they have recourse to a commissionaire, or broker, who takes charge of the receiving and selling of the grower's product, collecting therefor and naturally keeping a profit for himself—sometimes a substantial one. Situated in the very Easter if it comes early in the season. The number of horticulturists and market-gardeners who bring their flowers to the Paris halles also vary in number according to the season, their activity diminishing after autumn. The average is about two or three hundred, bringing altogether perhaps eight thousand baskets a day.

The "Forts des Halles" are celebrated; they are an old corporation above all, if he has been spry enough to secure a good place for his client. By nine in the morning all flower selling at the halles is over and the little hand carts of the ambulants, full to overflowing, are making their way to their own quarters and faubourgs. Now the country growers, the horticulturists, take to the "grand routes," sleeping the sleep of the just and leaving their horses and carts to encumber the traffic to the great rage of automobilists, until they arrive at their gardens, ten, twelve and twenty kilometres out over the Route d'Orleans, the Route de Quarante sous or the Route des Ambassadeurs.

The eleven officially controlled retail flower markets of Paris have no intimate connection with the wholesale market of the halles. Here are sold cut flowers of a prime quality, generally done up in bouquets, but chiefly the specialty of these municipal flower stands is the selling of potted plants. Certain of these flower markets are very ancient and many of them are celebrated in the history of Paris streets. That of la Cite, by the banks of the Seine, just beneath the majestic tour de l'Horloge of the Conciergerie, has occupied the same site since 1809. It is known as the Quai Aux Fleurs. The flower market of the Madeleine dates from 1834; that of the Chateau d'Eau, in the Place de la Republique, from 1836; that at the Place Saint Sulpice from 1845. Seven others of these Paris flower markets have been open since 1870, so one infers that the traffic is constantly increasing, and so it is. These flower markets are a typical Parisian institution and their owners could in no way be induced to give up their picturesqueness and traditional aspect for an installation more nearly perfect and comfortable.

The Paris flower stalls consist chiefly of a simple frame covered with an awning, or "bache," to protect the merchandise from the elements. Cut flowers of all hues and colors and rows of potted plants half wrapped in curiously folded white paper often cover a hundred yards of sidewalk. In the midst of this fragrant stock, maelstrom of the tide of affairs, the commissionaire is able to note the tendency of the market, the rise or fall, and informs his client that he may reduce or augment his shipments in conformity and thus not drug the market, and that he may not be found short in case of an abnormal demand or exaggerated prices, for the flower market is the most fluctuating of all markets, more speculative than wheat with a commodity as perishable as fish out of water and about as unsaleable once it becomes contaminated.

The commissionaire is useful in another way—particularly to himself. Among the enormous quantities of flowers which he receives he will often separate rare ones and sell them at appropriately high prices to the chic florists or wealthy amateurs, remitting to his client often enough the current market price for ordinary varieties. This thing is not unknown. The expense of the culture and forwarding of the whole shipment is often covered by the proceeds from the sale of a few choice varieties, "les tres beaux Midis," as the expression goes in the trade. The traffic is a very profitable one when all goes well, but a disastrous one indeed if there is a slump. In consequence the common varieties, the "Midi Ordinaires," bought on the Paris markets are usually to be had for a very low price. It is this product chiefly that is found for sale at the street stalls, and often carnations, narcissi or violets may be bought on the streets of Paris at a lower price than they may be had in the markets of Nice near the home of their birth. The flower arrivals on the Paris markets change greatly as to quantity and quality from day to day, varying from a few thousand baskets to hundreds of thousands at or association of laborers who unload the wagons, which are afterwards given a ticket of "stationnement," where they may be tranquilly left under cover in a neighboring street, where for ten sous they are as carefully guarded as if they were luxurious limousines in a fire-proof garage. The "fort" who removes the flowers from the carts is responsible for them until the actual opening of the market, and watches them carefully, knowing that, in addition to his regular fee his "pourboire" will be ample half sheltered in the lee of a canvas-covered stall, sits the flower sales girl, who may be a "jeune fille" of twenty summers or again a grandmotherly old matron of seventy. In summer she effects the shade, but in winter she will sit all day in the pale sunlight, which she calls the "cheminee du roi Rene," with her feet on a chauffrette, a tiny charcoal enclosed brasier, and invite passing customers to buy her flowers. Neither rain, wind nor sun can deter her from devotion to her trade. She is not the best of saleswomen, the Paris flower seller, for she always claims that her blooms are fresher and better than those of her neighbor. This we know is bad business, but it seems to work here, and since when one buys flowers in Paris he, or she, thinks it necessary to "shop" and "bargain" one can't blame the seller for using all her wiles and graces. During the beautiful days of spring the Paris flower markets are at their greatest splendor; there is always an embarrassment of choice of early blooms from every part of France; competition is then the strongest, and if prices are not then at their lowest the stock is at its best. The most violent cold snap does not in the least discourage nor cool the ardor of the Parisian flower seller of the gentler sex. Their nomad-like booths are closed in with thick hangings and a charcoal-burning stove raises the temperature sufficiently that the flowers and plants may not suffer. One could hardly tell from a cursory glance that several of the vendeuses of the Paris flower stalls were wealthy individuals, though their large diamond earrings would suggest that they are not poor; though, on the other hand, that indeed is no indication that they own large properties in the suburbs. One of these women who sits out in the open rain or shine 365 days in the year is said to be worth a million francs—and there may be others.

The most popular flower sellers in Paris are the "marchandes de quatre saisons," as the green vegetable sellers are known. These ambulants either rent or own their little wagons and stalls, and every morning go early to the halles to gather in a cheap stock, often a varied one, a combination perhaps of mimosa, cauliflowers and herrings. These roving flower sellers have for their clientele all those whose occupations and infirmities keep them in the house and thus have not the opportunity of going to market themselves. There are as many as five thousand of these itinerant flower sellers who go from house to house with their carts, many of which are pushed by the women themselves, though as often as not the motive power is furnished by an old man or a boy. Roses not too faded, violets a bit frost-nipped, or hyacinths or narcissi a trifle wilted find buyers at ridiculously low prices through the "Marchandes de Quatre Saisons" and the shawl-clad flower "girl," whereas they might otherwise be an entire loss. In this case, as is obvious, it is not the grower who reaps the benefit.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

Eighth Annual Convention.

The eighth annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held in the gold room of the Jefferson hotel, Peoria, March 4-5. More than 100 were present and the meetings were all of great interest. President Chas. Loveridge called the first day's session to order at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday. The address of welcome by Mayor Woodruff was warmly applauded. Vice-President Chas. W. Johnson thanked the mayor on behalf of the association for his hearty welcome. It was voted that President Loveridge's address, which followed, be properly preserved to be referred to during the year. The report of Secretary J. F. Ammann and the minutes were read and adopted as was also the report of Treasurer F. L. Washburn. President Loveridge appointed a committee to audit the secretary's and the treasurer's reports.

Charles Loveridge.

President Illinois State Florists' Association.

Secretary Ammann recommended an appropriate badge or button for life members. Fred Lautenschlager moved that a committee be appointed to investigate designs and costs. President Loveridge appointed a committee of three with power to act. Mr. Ammann's suggestion that members more than two years in arrears with dues be made associate members was referred to the executive committee. Mr. Ammann confidently predicted a life membership of sixty before adjournment. A letter of resignation from Thomas E. Franks, Champaign, was received, Mr. Franks giving as the reason for this action the fact that flowers from the University of Illinois Experiment Station were placed on the market for local sale. After a hot discussion of more than one hour a motion was finally carried asking the advisory board to recommend the placing of surplus flowers on the open market, allowing any and all florists to buy them. The election resulted in the unanimous choice of the following officers, all elected:

Charles Loveridge, Peoria, president.
Chas. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, vice-president.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, secretary.

F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, treasurer.

President Loveridge's invitation to the entire body to visit his greenhouses was accepted with thanks. The meeting then adjourned. The annual banquet was held in the hotel at 7:30 p. m. A flashlight photograph was taken of the 110 guests. After-dinner speeches were made by Eugene Baldwin, editor the Peoria Star, A. C. Kohlbrand, Chicago, W. H. Gullett, Lincoln, and others. August and Adolph Poehlmann and wives of Chicago arrived during the banquet. The exhibition in the gold room of the hotel was pronounced the finest the association ever held.

Thursday's meeting was called at 11 a. m. The reports by H. B. Dorner, Geo. L. Peltier and Fred W. Muncie on floriculture at the University of Illinois were very interesting. Mr. Dorner's report was read by A. H. Nehrling of Champaign. The auditing committee's report, which showed the association to be in good financial condition, was accepted and filed. W. N. Rudd's paper on landscape gardening was read by C. W. Johnson and accepted with a vote of thanks. A motion was carried instructing the executive committee to ask a joint meeting next year with the Indiana State Florists' Association. H. E. Smith invited the association to meet next year at Danville. His invitation was referred to the executive committee. It was voted to give the flowers on exhibition to local hospitals, newspapers and commercial clubs. A rising vote of thanks was given to the judges and a final resolution adopted thanking the city of Peoria and the trade in general for the great success of the meeting. The meeting adjourned at 1 p. m., after which President Loveridge entertained the guests at his greenhouses, where a luncheon was served.

President Loveridge's Address.

Ladies and gentlemen, and members of the Illinois State Florists' Association: Another year has passed away since our last meeting and eight years since we met in Peoria and organized this association, and while we have not grown in numbers as fast as most of us would like, for I believe every florist in the state of Illinois should be a member of this association, yet we have had the eyes of other states watching us in our progress in experimental lines, as this association was instrumental in establishing the first state experimental station for solving some of the many problems the florists have to contend with; and we have now in the course of construction at Urbana a range of greenhouses for that work that when completed will be second to none in this or any other country, something the florists of Illinois may well be proud of. In regard to the work that is being done there you will hear later from the men that have it in charge, H. B. Dorner, F. W. Muncie and G. L. Peltier, who will report on the different branches of work now being carried on at the experimental station.

But much as has been accomplished in the past, there are greater things for the future, for vast as has been the progress of the florist's business during the last quarter of a century, yet I consider it today only in its infancy, and it is up to us gentlemen as members of this association and as individuals to do our part in bringing this healthy infant to maturity, and for my part I know of no better way than these annual meetings, where we meet as one family and exchange ideas with one another and discuss the various problems that we are most interested in; and also to display our products to the public, so they can see what we are doing, and by so doing create a love for the beauties of nature and an increased demand for the same, but the majority of us do not appreciate the real value of these exhibitions. We are apt to look at them from a mere selfish standpoint, and think of only the dollars and cents we are going to get out of them and not the benefit it is to the business at large, for I honestly believe these flower shows given in different cities throughout the country have done more to create a demand for flowers than any one thing the florists have ever done. Therefore, I would like to see this feature of our meetings given more prominence and for every member of our association to contribute something, no matter how small, to the success of these public exhibitions.

There are a few things I would recommend for the association to try to do for the future. First we are all vitally interested in fertilizers, and there should be a state law enacted compelling every manufacturer or dealer in fertilizers to have an analysis made and printed on the bags or packages, whichever they may be sold in, so the purchaser may know just what he is getting for his money. Whenever the contents do not come up to the standard the manufacturer should be prosecuted by the state. Second, the florists have, I think, more to contend with in the way of insect pests and diseases of plants than any other industry I know of. Therefore, I would recommend to our advisory board to work with the faculty at the state university to have a portion of our appropriation set aside to defray the expenses of sending a competent man to any part of the state where a florist is troubled with any unusual insect pest or plant disease to study the local conditions and find out the cause, and to recommend a remedy, thereby saving the florists of the state hundreds and sometimes thousands of dollars through loss by these pests.

Then I would recommend a standing committee of three to be appointed by this association to appraise any loss a member of our association may have through any cause. This matter was brought to my attention very forcibly about a year ago while trying to settle a loss I had through gas with the superintendent of the gas company, when he told me the trouble he had in getting competent and impartial advice in the matter. Now I thank you for your kind attention and hope you will one and all have a good time while in Peoria and go away feeling well repaid for the time spent here. I hope it will not be so long as eight years before you will pay us another visit to renew old acquaintances and make new ones.

Secretary's Report

Your secretary reports with pleasure a very successful year for our society. We have added 49 new members to our annual membership and have enrolled six life members. While this is not yet what we should have in the way of membership, yet this increase is more than our usual average per annum. Much of this is due to the work of our booth committee during the S. A. F. meeting at Chicago last August.

More credit is due C. F. McCormick of Chicago than any other man for securing new members, yet we are indebted to several other members for much active work along this line the past year. Our membership now stands 220 annual members and 48 life members. The latter should especially be increased, for I find that a life member is always a permanent asset to any organization. The sum of ten dollars is very low, and I feel more of our present annual members should become life members.

We lost one highly respected member the last year in the death of that grand old pioneer florist, Joseph Heil, of Jacksonville. I am sure all who knew this grand old man heard the sad news with regret. Your secretary again wishes to thank all those who have helped to bring new members into our ranks, and the trade journals for their liberality in publishing matters pertaining to the welfare of our association. Your treasurer in his last report showed a balance of $234.01; amount paid to the treasurer for dues during year, $147; total, $381.01; orders drawn on treasury during year, $182.95; balance, $198.06.

Floricultural Work at Illinois.

STAFF REPORT.

The staff of the Division of Floriculture at the University of Illinois begs to make the following report:

CHANGES IN STAFF.

H. W. Anderson, who was appointed to the position of pathologist in the division on July 1, 1911, resigned in April, 1912, to accept a professorship in botany at Wabash College. On July 1, 1912, George L. Peltier was appointed to the position and now has charge of the pathological work. A detailed report on the work of this section will be given by Mr. Peltier. On the same date Fred W. Muncie was appointed physiological chemist to the division and has active charge of the fertility work. A report on the work of this part of the division will be given by him. The staff of the division now numbers five.

EXPERIMENTAL WORK.

The research work in floriculture has been continued, for the past year, along the lines agreed upon by your advisory board. At a meeting of your board, held at the university last spring, it was decided to continue, for another year, the experiments on commercial fertilizers with roses and carnations and on the stem-rot of carnations. The experiments on the growing of roses with chemical fertilizers and the testing of own-root and grafted stock, are a continuation of the work of the past two years. The results, up to date, bid fair to verify the conclusions of the past year. Without doubt, the results of these experiments will be of great value to all florists growing roses. The experiments on carnations are a continuation of the comparison of commercial and natural manures and on overfeeding with nitrogen, potassium and phosphorous. This work also promises very gratifying results. The results on the experiments on commercial fertilizers with carnations, which were completed last year, are now awaiting the verification of this year's work so that they may be published in full. The first year's work on stem rot was a study of the life history of the fungus that causes the disease. The work of this year has been a further study of the action of the organism and preliminary experiments on its control.

PROJECTED EXPERIMENTS.

While the work of the coming year has not, as yet, been decided upon by your committee, the following lines will be presented for their approval. It is proposed that the work with roses be continued along the lines of soil fertility, on both own-root and grafted plants. The work on carnations, as planned, contemplates further work on the effects of overfeeding and measures to overcome it, on the study of the limiting element in feeding and on the chemical constituents of the plant and their relation to feeding. The study of stem-rot of carnations is to be continued and methods for its prevention and control will be worked out. An entire house will be devoted to pathological work. It is also proposed to carry on some work with chrysanthemums along the line of feeding to determine the kinds and amounts of fertilizer required and when they should be applied. A study of the effects of overwatering and overfeeding of various pot plants is also proposed. A study of this kind will assist the florist in diagnosing such cases without difficulty.

ADDITION TO EQUIPMENT.

A number of valuable additions have been made to the equipment for research work. An adding machine, a microtome, a camera and other minor pieces of apparatus do much to facilitate the work of the division. A number of valuable books have also been added.

PUBLICATIONS.

Two circulars have been issued by the division. A 22-page circular on the experiments on carnations and roses and a 16-page circular on the instructional work were printed in time for distribution at the Chicago meeting of the Society of American Florists. Later, copies were mailed to all the addresses of Illinois firms listed in THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S Trade Directory. They were also sent to all members of the S. A. F. Additional copies will be mailed to all florists who have not received them, if they will mail their requests to the Division of Floriculture, Department of Horticulture, Urbana, Ill. More complete circulars will be issued as soon as this year's work is completed and the results can be compiled and verified.

QUERIES.

Many requests have been received during the year from florists and amateurs concerning plant troubles. These have all been given close attention and the growers have received all the help possible. The results of this work have been very gratifying. The reports show that in many cases the help given has been the cause of the saving of thousands of dollars. It is hoped that more florists will avail themselves of the opportunity and allow your workers at the station to be of service to them. All queries and material sent to the Division of Floriculture will receive prompt attention.

STUDENT REGISTRATION.

Eight students are now registered for the four-year course in floriculture. The completion of the new houses will add greatly to the facilities of the division and make it possible to give the students considerable work along practical lines. In addition to the regular floricultural students, over eighty men and women registered in other departments of the university are registered in courses offered in the division.

BUILDINGS.

As stated in a previous report, the revision of the campus plans, necessitates the removal of the greenhouses to a new location on the east side of the campus. The new houses that were provided for in the appropriations of two years ago are being built upon the new site and are now nearing completion. Plants have already been moved into one of the houses. The plans are to move the old range this coming summer. The new range consists of two houses 35x105 feet and a curvilinear palm house 40x80 feet. These with the addition of another house 35x105 feet, to be built this coming summer and the old houses to be moved cover an area of 27,700 square feet. The new houses are all of iron frame construction. The range as now planned provides for future extensions, if the work demands it. The plat set aside for this purpose makes it possible to increase the glass area to 70,000 square feet. The contract has also been let for a new service building 35x95 feet and two stories high. In this will be located the work rooms, storage rooms, laboratories, class room and offices. The land surrounding the buildings will be devoted to gardens and other ornamental plantings.

CARNATIONS.

The experimental work during 1912-13 includes a combination of the experiment carried on during the previous year and described in our pamphlet published in July, 1912, in regard to the relative efficiency of commercial fertilizers and natural manures for growing carnations. The data from October 1 to December 17, 1912, bear out the conclusions drawn from the results of last year, that the number and quality of flowers produced by either method is practically the same. From October 1 to December 17 of last year the number and size of flowers produced from 264 plants in each treatment are as follows:

No.	Plants Treatment	Total	WHITE ENCHANTRESS.			Av. Size	Av. Length of Stem
			Calyx OK-Split	Stem Strength
264	Manure	1660	1516	44	1221	397	6	2.88	11.36
264	Com. Fert.	1602	1557	45	1231	363	8	2.85	11.06

The results as given for the total number indicate a slight preference for natural manures, while those of last year, October 1 to May 1, giving a total yield with natural manures of 3,400 and with commercial fertilizers of 3,473, indicate a slight preference for the latter treatment, so that the two treatments seem to yield as nearly identical results as could be expected. Similar results were obtained with the variety White Perfection, as will be seen from the following table:

No.	Plants Treatment	Total	WHITE PERFECTION.			Av. Size	Av. Length of Stem
			Calyx OK-Split	Stem Strength
264	Manure	1896	1651	245	1702	189	4	2.68	10.61
264	Com. Fert.	1612	1528	199	1580	147	0	2.66	10.18

The somewhat larger number produced by the treatment with natural manures will be partly offset by the larger number produced by the second treatment in 1911-12, averaging nearly equal results. It seems well here to repeat the amount of fertilizers used and to describe the method of application. When the soil is put into the benches in the latter part of July, 2 pounds of dried blood, 2 pounds of acid phosphate and 2 pounds of potassium sulphate are mixed with the soil for each 100 square feet of bench space and thoroughly worked in with trowels; and after a thorough watering the soil is allowed to stand over night before setting the plants. At three other times during the year, at about November 1, January 1 and February 15, additional applications of 2 pounds of dried blood worked into the top inch of soil with weeders are made, making a total application per 100 square feet of bench space of eight pounds of dried blood, 2 pounds of acid phosphate and 2 pounds of potassium sulphate.

The results as given indicate no danger of causing splitting by treatment with commercial fertilizers. In the variety White Enchantress 97.1 per cent of the flowers in each case were those with perfect calyces; in the variety White Perfection 87 per cent of the flowers had perfect calyces when grown with natural manures and 94.7 per cent when grown with commercial fertilizers. We may safely conclude from these data that the use of commercial fertilizers will not lead to an abnormal percentage of splits.

In order to determine the effects of commercial fertilizers upon the strength of stems, flowers were gauged as first, second or third, according to their stem length, first indicating the normal condition and third an excessive weakness. With White Enchantress, treatment with natural manures produced flowers 78 per cent of which were classed as first; with commercial fertilizers 76.8 per cent, while in the variety White Perfection the percentages are 89.7 per cent and 98 per cent respectively. Clearly then, the use of commercial fertilizers will not lead to weakness in stems.

Records were kept in 1909-10 and 1911-12 as well as during the present

Sec. Treatment	Total	WHITE PERFECTION.			Av. Size	Av. Length of Stem
		Calyx OK-Split	Stem Strength
F Excess Dried Blood	264	237	27	2	2.65	10.29

year to determine whether raising flowers with commercial fertilizers injures their keeping quality. Records were taken upon some hundreds of them, in a room at about 50° F., the water being changed daily but without clipping the stems. Without the burden of too many figures, the results may be summarized as follows: (1) Excessive feeding tends to diminish the keeping qualities of the flowers. The effect is seen most quickly with an excessive application of dried blood, ammonium sulphate or some other nitrogenous fertilizer. (2) No ill effect follows the use of the amounts of commercial fertilizer as indicated above.

In the experiment outlined above, the plants treated with natural manures were fed during the year with 3 light mulches of sheep manure and in addition with 13 applications of liquid manure, 13.5 gallons being used each time for each 100 square feet of bench space. Thus the total number of fertilizer applications made was 16; on the other hand, after the beginning of the season, only three applications of a fertilizer (dried blood) were made. The latter treatment no doubt would result in a considerable saving of time and labor.

As favorable as the results indicate commercial fertilizers to be for the production of a satisfactory number of flowers of good quality, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the care with which they must be used, and the danger of overfeeding in case they are applied in uncertain quantities or too often. The Experiment Station feels that it ought not to recommend the use of these materials unless the grower uses a balance for weighing out the fertilizers according to the amounts indicated above, and unless they are not applied oftener than indicated. The danger from overfeeding is peculiar in that it does not manifest itself immediately in case the excessive applications are made in the fall of the year; and because no warning is given in the color or shape of the foliage in advance of the deterioration of the flowers. These points are well illustrated by the following experiments carried out during the present year. Four sections containing 40 plants each were used for this experiment, the first to receive a weekly application of one pound of dried blood, the second and third to receive one pound of acid phosphate and potassium sulphate respectively; while the fourth received the "normal" treatment as outlined in the previous experiment. No signs of overfeeding were noticeable in any of the sections up until about January 1. The plants looked healthy and the flowers were normal. During that period the production was as follows:

A consideration of these figures as they stand would lead to the conclusion that the weekly application of dried blood was superior to the treatment called normal; for 45 additional flowers, more than one per plant, were produced during this time. Eighty-nine and seven-tenths per cent of these, or 237, had perfect calyces, while under the "normal" treatment only 84 per cent had perfect calyces. The size of flower and length of stem were about the same. Soon after the turn of the year, however, signs of overfeeding became noticeable. The petals became crinkled in appearance, and were easily browned if watered overhead. In a fortnight the flowers in the sections thus heavily fed became affected to such a degree that hardly a salable flower could be found. The first sign was on the petals and when this sign was shown, the flowers were ruined.

The injury, for an application of equal weights of dried blood, acid phosphate and potassium sulphate, was greatest on the plants which received the extra applications of potassium sulphate, and on these sections at present, growth has practically stopped and the flowers are ruined. It is possible that the reason underlying this behavior of the plants is that in the fall of the year the sunlight is the limiting factor of plant growth. Then whatever excess of plant food is applied lies unused by the plant in the soil. When the days become longer and the sunlight more intense, after the new year, this material is absorbed by the plant with very harmful results. No injury has been noticed as yet upon the plants fed large amounts of acid phosphate, possibly due to the fact that acid phosphate is only half soluble, possibly to the nature of the chemical.

The following table listing the content of various fertilizing materials illustrates the great strength of commercial fertilizers compared even with a powerful natural manure such as sheep manure.

COMPOSITION OF FERTILIZERS IN POUNDS PER TON.

Name	Kind	Nitrogen	Phosphorus	Potassium
Horse Manure	Solid	11.2	.3	1.6
	Liquid	30.4	trace	14.0
Cow Manure	Solid	8.8	1.0	.6
	Liquid	21.0	trace	21.0
Sheep Manure	Solid	14.4	3.6
	Liquid	26.2	.2
Dried Blood		280
Sodium Nitrate		310
Ammonium Sulphate		400
Acid Phosphate			125
Potassium Sulphate				850

From the foregoing experiment and from these data, emphasis once more should be placed upon the necessity of using chemicals accurately weighed and applied not oftener than four times per year, if the weights recommended are used. Experiments have demonstrated that on the soil at Urbana, an application of twice these amounts has not produced harmful results. On another soil, ill effects might have followed such an application, while upon some kinds of soil more might safely be applied. The exact amount for each florist to use is a matter to be settled by careful trial upon a small number of flowers, using the amounts given above as a working basis.

Various remedies have been suggested for relieving the plants injured by an excess of fertilizer, among them, addition of the other elements on the theory that a balanced excessive application is not so harmful as one in which one element is present in excess; also the planting of oats or some other quick-growing crop in the benches to relieve the plants of excess of food. These remedies are being tried at the Experiment Station and a report upon their value can be made after this season. It is to be hoped that by following the above suggestions, the florists will avoid the need of any remedy.

The fertilizer experiments at the University up to the present time have been based on the use of combinations of the three elements—nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, which are most often lacking in our soils and hence are the most essential elements in plant growth from the standpoint of fertility. It is very desirable that careful experiments be made to determine, first, which is the element that is lacking in the soils and so constitutes the limiting factor to plant growth, and second, what is the specific effect upon size, shape, structure and color of forced plants of each of these constituents. The value of the first point is seen in that from it as a basis, only that element lacking need be applied. With the second fact as a basis, fertilization for a specific purpose may be accomplished by application of fertilizer producing this specific effect. A study of the data gathered from the work of the past three years indicates that probably the limiting element of plant growth is nitrogen and that this element chiefly should be considered in any scheme of fertilizing. Whether the other elements added have any definite effect upon the plants cannot be said without further study.

ROSES.

The cultivation of roses with chemical fertilizers has been continued during this year. A visit to our greenhouse will demonstrate that good roses can be grown by this treatment. An extended study of the data cannot be given in this paper, but the station unhesitatingly recommends the use of 16 pounds of dried blood, four pounds of acid phosphate and four pounds of potassium sulphate as a basis if they are applied as directed in our pamphlet.

In addition to the main work as stated above, tentative experiments are being carried out to determine the effects of overfeeding and overwatering upon the following plants: Primula (3 species) cineraria (2 species), schizanthus, smilax, geranium, asparagus (plumosus and sprengeri), begonia (3 varieties), cyclamen and marguerite. It is believed that these two factors, in addition to restricted drainage and consequent poor aeration, the natural deterioration of a variety, and possibly soil acidity, are responsible for a great many of the so-called physiological diseases. This step is being taken as the first in our purpose ultimately to solve some of them. The receipt by the station of diseased specimens adds to the material which is being collected for the purpose of understanding them, and whatever experience we have in these matters is gladly put to the service of the public in return.

Landscape Gardening for the Florist.

Paper read by W. N. Rudd at the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association.

Many of us fail to realize the possibilities of increasing our business and of making it more profitable, by adding landscape gardening to our regular lines. It seems strange that this is so, because if one stops to think, the customers for our bedding plants and perennials are the very people who need such work, and we shall not have the difficulty met with in taking up most new lines; that is, the getting of new customers and building up an entirely new business. Our customers are ready to hand. Their names are on our books as buyers of plants and all there is to be done is to equip ourselves to supply their wants properly, and to let them know we are so equipped. Of course the downtown store man in the large cities and the strictly wholesale grocer, will probably not find it advisable to take up this work, but those florists who both grow and retail their product, and who are located in the smaller cities and towns, or in the residence districts, will find much and profitable demand for good service of this kind.

There is a great and growing desire among the middle class of home owners, for better and more beautiful outdoor surroundings. They are being taught by precept and example that the round bed of geraniums or cannas planted in the middle of the lawn is often a very unlovely thing, that it dwarfs the place and gives no lasting satisfaction. They feel that there are better and more artistic ways of decorating their grounds. They are tired of the everlasting sameness of the red patch of S. A. Nutt with a border of Salleroi, which is repeated and repeated on each side of each of our residence streets. If we are to keep these customers and to sell them more, instead of less of our goods, we must arrange to give them something better, something more artistic and more interesting, something which they and their neighbors and the passers by will delight in looking at again and again.

Whoever, nowadays, stops on the street and looks at any of these prim, commonplace flowerbeds we are planting by the thousand every spring? And why should they? Flowering plants need a background of green. This means that they must generally be planted in front of taller growing specimens. Of course we can use the taller perennials at times for this purpose, but why do it when there are a wealth of shrubs at hand which are so much better in every way? Shrubs are never unsightly, even in winter, while many of those with ornamental bark or colored berries are beautiful all the desolate winter days and carry us through to the time of green leaves and flowers again. The shrub puts forth its leaves quickly in the spring and arrives at its full beauty in a few days, while we must wait, often half the summer, for our full growth from the other types of tall growing flowers.

We are now to rule No. 1: Plant shrubs for a background and plant your flowers in front of them. It has been an axiom almost from the first real study which was ever given the subject, which we may state here as rule No. 2: Plant around the boundaries and keep the center of the lawn open. If the lawn is large, a small specimen tree or shrub or two may be planted, but they must be nearer to one side—never in the center. The line where the foundation of the house meets the lawn is ugly. So we get rule No. 3: Plant shrubs around the foundation of the house and especially around the porch, both to conceal the ugly space underneath and also to afford a feeling of protection. Rule No. 4: Frequently conditions in the back yard are unsightly, therefore plant a screen of tall shrubs across from the back of the house to the boundary fence to conceal such things. Of course this screen is to be as far back from the street as possible. Rule No. 5: Do not plant in straight lines. Use shrubs of varying sizes and heights and plant so the line is irregular. Rule

No. 6: Mass your shrubs. That is, do not dot them around, but plant all of one kind together. Rule No. 7: Do not plant clipped formal hedges for our climate. It is very difficult to make them do well here. If after years of work a plant dies out, the whole thing is ruined and they take an immense amount of care to keep them in proper condition. Finally, even when in perfect condition, they are formal and ugly and a good honest wire fence covered with Virginia Creeper and other vines has the advantage from every point of view.

We now have the backbone of our work done and the places for planting flowers will suggest themselves. The big, the showy, and the brilliant colored things, we will get well to the back. The cannas and hollyhocks will make a gorgeous show planted in front of the screen at the rear. The little bays in our undulating border will be just the place for geraniums or other plants in long irregular beds. Clumps of the earlier hardy bulbs, as squills, snowdrops and the like, may be planted under the edges of the over hanging shrubbery, to remain permanently. The smaller and more delicate flowers, which must be seen at close range, will naturally be planted near the front. Sweet scented blossoming plants should be near the windows and the porch. Great care must be taken not to plant discordant or clashing colors together, and a red or brightly colored house requires discrimination in selecting the colors to be planted closely to it.

Time permits here only the crudest and briefest hints, but there are numberless books and magazines dealing with the subject very fully—to be sure there is an immense lot of rubbishy nonsense being published also. Many publishers appear to think that a flashy literary style is all important and real knowledge of the subject an entirely secondary matter. If space available permits, some well grown shrubs, or small trees on the florist's grounds will not only be ornamental, but will make excellent selling samples. Unless conditions are unusual it will probably not be advisable to attempt to propagate or grow on shrub stock, as it can be bought very cheaply as wanted from the nurseries. In conclusion, let me earnestly urge every florist in the class mentioned to look into this matter and try it. I am sure that the profit and the pleasure derived will both be great.

Easter Plants at Philadelphia.

They do things on a large scale in Philadelphia. Plants are grown here for the Easter trade in greater variety and larger quantities than in any other city in the land. The Robert Craig Co., with their 200,000 feet of glass, more than half of which is given over to the forcing of plants for this great spring holiday, never had such an assortment as is offered this season. To begin with, 10,000 lilies, mostly giganteum, fill house after house. All are given plenty of room and are nicely staked and arranged. They present a beautiful sight. The early date appears to have made little difference, as all the stock is almost right as to time. Two large houses of rhododendrons are exceptionally well budded. Thousands of Spirea Gladstone with their flamed spikes of bloom make a great show. It is the largest stock of these plants ever offered here. The greatest feature is the rose. Rambler roses have always been a specialty since their introduction and this season's offerings show greater variety and a more varied selection in shapes and forms of growth than ever before. Pyramids, globes, umbrellas, fans, baskets and other trained forms are seen filled with buds and all so far advanced that there is no doubt as to their readiness without forcing. Tausendschon is grown in quantity as are Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay. Baby Tausendschon is a novelty, yet seen in a large block. It is an ideal basket-plant. Splendid plants of the old favorite Crimson Rambler are loaded with buds. Hydrangeas, more than seven thousand of them, many of the new French hybrids, splendidly budded plants, fill several houses and make a grand showing. Genistas by the houseful, with their yellow blossoms, add a needed color effect and are a very popular Easter plant. Marguerites, gardenias, lily of the valley, hybrid roses, and azaleas are also features in the blooming stock. Added to which is house after house of all the popular ferns, crotons, dracenas and other decorative plants.

W. K. Harris has his usual fine collection. Azaleas are a leading feature. Splendidly budded plants, especially in the larger sizes in bush and pyramid form, in white, pink and red, fill a number of houses. Rambler roses, very well flowered, fine showy plants, are seen in quantity. Ganistas, spirea and duetzia, the latter very well done, add to the variety. Metrasiderous are a novelty here, but are very well flowered. Bougainvilleas in large plants are done as well as usual in this, the home of this very decorative plant. The lily is also forced and several houses of well budded plants are seen. Hydrangeas are also a feature. Shamrock in 2½ inch pots fills one large house and part of another—70,000 pots in all, most of which is grown to order for a department store to be given away to the customers on St. Patrick's day.

Godfrey Aschman presents a large assortment of Easter plants, fine Azaleas, lilies, spireas, begonias, cinerarias and bulbous plants in pots and pans. Mr. Aschman grows for the multitude. All his plants are in medium sizes, the kind that sell quickly. Araucarias, rubber plants, kentia palms, Scotti, elegantissima, and other forms of the Boston ferns, help to make up a stock that is sufficient for any flower shop in the country. Packing is an art here, the greatest care being taken to see that plants shall not suffer in transit.

H. I. Faust of Merion offers a splendid stock of lilies. He makes a specialty of this Easter flower and rarely has a failure. The stock this season is very even and is well budded.

J. W. Colflesh's Sons have lilies, daisies, cinerarias, azaleas, and a fine lot of genistas. Everything is neatly arranged and shows good culture.

George Anderson is strong on lilies, but did not try to have his hydrangeas ready for Easter, owing to the early date.

At George Carpenter's are seen very choice lilies and a house of medium hydrangeas.

Jacob Becker offers exceptionally well flowered azaleas and choice Easter lilies.

February 14 was "carnation night" on our calendar, and brought out a superb display of blooms. The members' usual exhibition was augmented by fine collections from A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell; George W. Fraser, assistant horticulturist of Storrs Agricultural College; Scott Brothers, of Elmsford, N. Y.; the Cottage Gardens Company, of Queens, N. Y. The judges were C. H. Sierman and J. Alfred Weber, of Hartford; and George B. Baker, of New Britain. After much deliberation they announced awards as follows: Cottage Gardens Company, for Matchless variety, first class certificate; the Whiting Greenhouses, West Hartford (Carl Peterson, manager), first class certificate; Scott Brothers, for British Triumph, William Eccles and Lady Northcliffe (82, 85 and 79 points, respectively), first class and cultural certificates; A. N. Pierson, Inc., for Benora, etc., first class certificate; Alfred Cebelius, Hartford, certificate of merit; George W. Fraser, for seedlings, certificate of merit; and J. Alfred Weber, for collection of blooming cineraria plants, certificate of merit.

James T. Scott, of Scott Brothers, was present and gave some valuable information regarding the merits and demerits of the leading varieties of market carnations. He showed what extraordinary changes are taking place in this respect, by the introduction of new kinds and the elimination of old ones. He answered many questions for the benefit of inquirers. Geo. W. Fraser also addressed the society, as did R. T. Beers of Cromwell, representing A. N. Pierson. Many valuable facts were elicited by the impromptu addresses, and by the discussions that ensued from them, chiefly concerning modern commercial carnation culture. The presence of many out-of-town visitors was a pleasant feature of the evening.

President John S. Huss has the sympathy of many friends, both here and abroad. In the recent decease of his venerable mother in Switzerland, who recently passed away in her ninety-third year. Mr. Huss has been the recipient of many letters of condolence. He has had the joy of visiting his mother a number of times in the last few years at his old home in Switzerland.

Our society is temporarily deploring the withholding of the annual state appropriation, through a new and apparently technical interpretation of the statute providing the fund. Several new bills have consequently been presented to the present legislature, to cure the defect in the phraseology of the present statute. We hope for the enactment of the best one of these bills, retroactive in character, and hence covering our share of the state fund for last season.

Greenhouse Construction and Equipment.

Paper read by Prof. W. J. Wright at the annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 4-6.

It has been conceded by everyone who has had any reason to consider it, that the vegetable forcing industry of this country has been going forward by leaps and bounds during the last decade. I doubt, however, if any of us, unless we have had some occasion to consult the figures, actually comprehend the amount of glass used for forcing purposes.

According to data collected at the last census, and which I have permission to present at this meeting, there was in 1909 an area of 114,655,276 square feet covered by glass and used for forcing purposes. Of this amount 105,165,730 square feet was under permanent glass structures classified as greenhouses. (Notice that this is area under glass and not area of glass.) Reduced to acres this means that there is under greenhouses in the United States alone an area equivalent to twenty-four hundred acres. To put it another way: if this vast area was in the form of a house 20 feet wide it would reach a distance of more than 1,000 miles or farther than the air line distance from this city (Rochester, N. Y.) to Jacksonville, Florida. At the time of the preceding census there was an area of approximately 80,000,000 square feet under glass which might have been classified as greenhouses. To continue our illustrations, if this had been in the form of a house 20 feet wide it would have reached a distance of about 750 miles, or a little farther than from Jacksonville to Washington, D. C.

We have, then, in the last decade increased the area under greenhouses by the equivalent of a greenhouse 20 feet wide and extending from Rochester to Washington, D. C. As a matter of fact, the actual amount of greenhouse construction during this time has been much greater, for it is but reasonable to expect that at least 20 per cent of the houses enumerated in 1900 have since been replaced by new ones. If we assume this to be true the amount of greenhouse construction during the last ten years has been equal to 96,000,000 square feet of surface covered, at a cost of probably not less than $70,000,000. It is apparent, therefore, that the subject of greenhouse construction is worthy of some discussion.

A fair idea of the amount of greenhouse construction in this country during the last decade may be obtained by reference to a table compiled from data furnished by the Bureau of the Census.

TABLE I.

It will be observed from a study of this table that the relative rank of the states in amount of glass has changed materially in the past ten years and also that the amount of glass in some states has apparently decreased. It should also be emphasized that these figures are totals used for all purposes and do not represent the amount used for vegetable forcing alone. No attempt was made at the last census to classify glass into that used for vegetable forcing or for other purposes.

In order to discuss this subject from the standpoint of the vegetable grower, I have secured data from 100 or more well-known, practical vegetable growers, both large and small, living in all but two of the states mentioned above. This data covers the important points which I hope to discuss in this paper and it is fair to assume that the average experience of these growers represents conditions applicable to the average vegetable grower.

COST OF CONSTRUCTION.

One of the first questions asked was the cost of range complete, not including the cost of land. The average for houses covering 10,000 square feet or more was a little less than 39 cents for each square foot of ground covered. The average for ranges covering less than 10,000 square feet was 55 cents for each square foot of ground covered.

TYPE OF CONSTRUCTION.

Ninety-two per cent of the growers from whom data was secured preferred even span construction to uneven span construction; seventy per cent preferred home erected houses to contract erected houses on account of less cost; and seventy-six per cent preferred 16x24-in. glass. No data was asked for as to the size of houses, but several stated the size of houses they preferred. The average width appears to be about 36 feet.

KIND OF HEAT.

Eighty-six per cent of those having 20,000 square feet or more under glass preferred steam heat. The chief reasons stated being "better control," "cheaper maintenance," and "less shade from pipes." Six per cent preferred a combination of hot water and steam, using the steam as a help in extreme weather and for use in soil sterilization. The remaining eight per cent preferred hot water, stating as their reasons "steadier heat," "plants grow better," "pipes do not rust out during the summer as with steam," and "cheaper to operate when but little heat is required."

Of those having less than 20,000 square feet, seventy-four per cent preferred hot water, giving in addition to the reasons named above "less labor to fire, especially at night," and "needs no night fireman." Of those using hot water, twenty-one per cent were using some form of mercury pressure system or "generator" and fourteen per cent more believed them desirable. The reasons given were "needs less piping" and "circulation better."

COAL.

The average amount of soft coal a season for each 1,000 square feet of area covered (all kinds of heat) was 11.6 tons and the average price was $2.33 per ton, delivered.

WATER.

Sixty per cent of these growers depended entirely on city water. Thirty per cent depended entirely on their own private system and ten per cent used both city water and private supply. The average cost per 1,000 gallons for city water was 18 cents. The average supply including the cost of equipment, depreciation, and maintenance, was 21 cents. The average cost of equipment for home supply for each 1,000 square feet of area served was $177.50.

Seventy-eight per cent used an overhead system of watering. Of these, eighty per cent found it an unqualified success and twenty per cent found it necessary to supplement it with hand watering. Only two were using sub-irrigation to any extent, but both preferred it to overhead irrigation during the short, dull days of winter. The average estimate of the maximum amount of water required for 1,000 square feet of surface each day, during May and June was 280 gallons. In other words, in planning for a water system, it is necessary to provide for a supply of 280 gallons of water a day for every 1,000 square feet of area in crops and, because the watering is done during a period of from three to four hours, this water must be supplied within this time, rather than within the twenty-four hours of the day. The average pressure preferred for overhead watering was 47 pounds a square inch.

Having in mind some of the points mentioned above, I will call your attention to a form of semi-iron construction which is light, yet firm, will stand for twenty years or more, and which can easily be built at home with the assistance of a mechanic and such tools as it will be found necessary to keep about a greenhouse. The material for such a house may be secured of almost any one of the many firms handling greenhouse builders' supplies. This house is 30 feet wide, 6 feet high to the eaves, and 16 feet 5 inches high to the ridge. The foundation is of concrete, 8 inches thick, and extends 2½ feet below the surface and 2 feet above. The posts and purlins are of wrought pipe and the posts are either imbedded in the concrete or rest on concrete piers and are tied together by split malleable iron castings and pipe cross ties.

There are two methods of bracing, the one requiring two rows of purlin supports on each side and the other but one row on each side. There is but little difference in the cost, but it is often desirable to do away with one row of posts, especially where horse tillage is practiced. The number of purlins depends upon the length and size of the sash bars and the size of glass used. With ordinary size sash bars and 16x24-inch glass, the maximum distance for safety between purlins is 6 feet 9 inches. In this case the sash bars are about 17 feet long and it is therefore necessary to have two purlins. If they were over 21 feet long they would require three purlins. There is also on the right a form of metal eave plate now quite popular and a small glazing sill in place of the heavy glazing sill formerly used.

PITCH OF ROOF.

One of the first questions to decide in planning a greenhouse is the pitch or slope of the roof. On this will depend the lengths of the sash bars and the amount of glass required for a house of given width. In deciding the pitch it must be remembered that a greenhouse roof does more than simply shed rain or snow. It traps the light and heat rays of the sun. When these rays strike the glass at right angles practically none are reflected. When they strike the glass at an angle of 15 degrees about 30 per cent are reflected. In the early winter when the sun is at its lowest, it is at noon in this latitude only about 25 degrees above the horizon. In order that the rays strike the glass at right angles it would be necessary for the pitch of the roof to be as great as 65 degrees, which is impracticable in an even span house. The following table gives approximately the proportion of heat and light rays which are reflected from the roofs of various angles during the winter months.

TABLE II.

Showing per cent of light reflected by roofs of different pitch.

Pitch.	Per cent of rays reflected.
20 degrees.....	16.8
25 degrees.....	11.2
30 degrees.....	8.4
35 degrees.....	5.7
40 degrees.....	3.1
65 degrees.....	Practically none

As a general rule, even span houses are built with a pitch of either 26 degrees, 32 degrees, or 35 degrees. When built with a pitch less than 26 degrees, they are more likely to leak and the snow does not clear well, so that there is danger of their being broken down because of the excessive weight.

When a pitch of more than 35 degrees is desired the roof would be too high to be practical if built even span. This pitch is secured by making the short steep span toward the south and a long sloping span toward the north.

The material at liberal current prices required for a house of this design, 30 feet wide and 90 feet long, without benches, will cost not far from $1,400. To this must be added the cost of erection, which will vary with the cost and efficiency of labor, but should not exceed $300 to $350. This will make the total cost not far from $1,750, or a little less than 65 cents a square foot of area covered. It can easily be seen why larger houses may be built more cheaply. In the first place, a greater discount may be secured on materials bought in larger quantities. Second, large ranges are often built in the ridge and furrow system, thus saving great expense in walls. Third, large heating plants may be installed much more cheaply in proportion to areas served.

HEATING.

The calculations for greenhouse heating are based on certain simple fundamental facts which may be stated briefly as follows: A square foot of glass will give off, under ordinary greenhouse conditions in winter weather, approximately 1 B. T. U. (British Thermal Unit) of heat for each degree difference in temperature between the temperature of the air inside the greenhouse and that outside. In hot water heating, the heating coils will give off 2 B. T. U.'s a square foot for each degree difference in temperature between that of the coils and that of the surrounding air. Suppose, for example, that a house contains 1,000 square feet of glass and that it is desired to keep it at a temperature of 60 degrees and that the lowest temperature that may be expected is 10 degrees below zero. The number of B. T. U.'s given off by such a house each hour would be 60 degrees—(—10 degrees) x 1 x 1,000, or 70,000 B. T. U.'s. In hot water heating the average temperature of the heating pipes may be assumed to be 160 degrees and if the temperature to be maintained in the house is 60 degrees the difference will be 100 degrees. Since each square foot of pipe will radiate 2 B. T. U.'s each hour for each degree difference in temperature, under these conditions 1 square foot of radiating surface will give off about 200 B. T. U.'s. Dividing the 70,000 B. T. U.'s given off by the glass surface by 200 will give us 350 or the number of square feet of radiation necessary. These principles may be embodied in

$$(T-t) \times G = R.$$

$$(160-T)2$$

In this formula R = the number of square feet of radiation, T the temperature to be maintained inside the house, t the lowest outside temperature to be expected, and G the number of square feet of glass and equivalent glass.

Glass will give off about six times as much heat as a good, substantial, well-built wall. To find the amount of heat radiated by any house, therefore, find the number of square feet of exposed glass and add to it 1-6 of the exposed wall surface. In the house I have illustrated in figure 1 the total glass surface amounts to 4,205 square feet and the exposed wall surface is 480 square feet, which divided by six gives an equivalent of 80 square feet of glass or a total of 4,285 square feet of glass and equivalent glass. If we substitute these values in our formula it becomes as follows: 60—(—10) x 4285

= 1450 square feet, which is the number of square feet of radiation necessary to heat this house to 60 degrees when the weather outside is 10 degrees below zero. To find the number of linear feet of pipe necessary to supply this radiation, it is necessary only to find the amount of radiating surface in one linear foot of the size of pipe it is desired to use. For example, one linear foot of 1½-inch pipe furnishes about .5 of a square foot of radiating surface. Dividing 1,450 by .5 gives us 2,900 linear feet of 1½-inch pipes necessary to heat the house, and since the house is 90 feet long, it would be necessary to use 32 lengths of 1½-inch pipe. Since, however, these pipes must be fed by flow pipes which carry the hot water, and since these flow pipes radiate heat, the number of coils may be somewhat reduced. But to allow for a margin of safety it would probably be well to use about thirty 1½-inch hot water heating pipes. Pipes this size are large enough for coils 150 feet or less in length.
