The exhibition of the American Carnation Society brought together a splendid lot of flowers. Vases of all the standard varieties, together with some sterling novelties, filled the tables set apart for them in the center of the building. There were eighty vases in all, many of them holding one hundred blooms. Chief among the novelties was a vase of Matchless, from the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y. This is a wonderful large white that outclasses all others now in commerce. The display was awarded a gold medal, the highest gift of the society. Princess Dagmar, M. A. Patton's new crimson, a superb, large flower, won the silver medal of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England, also first prize for the best crimson and a bronze medal. Gorgeous is a grand red and was easily first in its class. In fact it is sure to be the coming red. Miss A. Coombs, an immense salmon, was a very conspicuous flower. It is a great step forward in this color. It was awarded a silver medal. Electra, Beacon, Wm. Eccles and Scarlet Gem were competing reds. Beacon won out. Quite a number of vases of this fine red were seen. Pink Delight looked small when compared with Gloriosa and Salmon. Benitz was shown in a small vase. The flowers were immense. Mrs. C. W. Barron, M. A. Patton's large blotched pink and white, is a very beautiful sort and received first in two classes. A small vase of a fine crimson called Carola showed well. The Mikado, from the Howard Gould estate, was pretty in its ugliness. It takes an acquired taste to admire this variety.

The western entries, generally so important, were greatly missed. E. G. Hill's entries were delayed on account of poor railroad facilities in the west, while the Dorner novelties, owing to the lateness of the season, have all been cut back for cuttings. Most of the growers were of the opinion that it was too late to show carnations at their best. A large shipment of odontoglossum plants in flower and cut sprays of the same, also cyripediums, were received on Tuesday afternoon from W. A. Manda's English branch. They were staged at once and were a great attraction. K.

National Association of Gardeners.

A meeting of the National Association of Gardeners was held in the lecture hall of the Grand Central Palace on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Preceding the meeting the executive board of the association met and acted on several matters which were later reported at the general meeting. President William H. Waite, after welcoming the visiting members, introduced J. K. M. L. Farquhar, president of the Society of American Florists, who lauded the gardeners and their splendid exhibits which, he said, made it possible to produce such a magnificent show as they were assembled at. He followed this with a forcible address which can aptly be summarized as a heart-to-heart talk with the men of the gardening profession and in which he urged the cultivation of a closer confidence between the gardener and his employer.

Mr. Farquhar was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his remarks. W. J. Kennedy, president of the Gardeners & Florists' Club of Boston, was next introduced. Born, as he said, a gardener, he spoke with authority of the development of the profession, endorsing all the previous speaker had to say on the opportunities which are presenting themselves for the advancement and elevation of the profession. Mr. Kennedy spoke of the great interest which has sprung up over the activities of the National Association and pledged his efforts to its further progress. He was followed by John Shields, of Monticello, Ill., one of the directors of the association.

Next came J. J. MacKey, also of Monticello, who spoke on the development of agriculture in the West. H. H. Bartsch, vice-president of the Gardeners & Florists' Club of Boston, was next introduced. Harry Bunyard announced that owing to sudden sickness in the family of R. J. Felton of London, England, who was to lecture at the meeting, he was prevented from sailing for this side at the last moment. The secretary was called on next to report on the doings of the executive committee. After briefly reviewing the financial condition of the association, showing a most substantial balance in bank, he read a communication received from the New York Horticultural Society inviting the National Association of Gardeners to hold its annual convention in New York city this fall, in connection with the Fall Show of the Horticultural Society. The invitation was accepted.

Mr. Farquhar, as president and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, extended an invitation to the association to hold its summer meetings in July, at the time of the summer show of the National Horticultural Society, in conjunction with the sweet pea show of the American Sweet Pea Society. This was also favorably acted on by the committee, which decided to hold the summer meeting in Boston. An invitation was read from President C. C. Moore of the Panama Pacific International Exposition, addressed to the National Association of Gardeners to hold its 1915 convention in the city of San Francisco during the time of the Exposition. Resolutions were passed at the meeting, extending the association's thanks to the Exposition Company, and that the association go on record that it was the sense of the meeting that the 1915 convention be held at San Francisco. The ratification by the board of directors for the establishment of a service bureau to offer an opportunity to the younger men in the profession for a source to which they can look for betterment, was also reported at the meeting.

THE BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

The bowling tournament of the National Association of Gardeners, held at Thum's alleys, New York, Wednesday, April 9, brought together a large number of gardeners and florists, members of the N. A. G. and S. A. F. While no record scores were made, the event was enjoyed by all and proved a success. Donaldson, Miesem and Iquey carried off the honors for the Astoria team, which won in the team tournament. Iquey made the high score, 235. Seybold won in the sweepstake contest. The following morning the N. A. G. invited the ladies of the S. A. F. Auxiliary to a bowling contest.

On the evening preceding the bowling event, many of the bowlers attended the "Dutch treat" of the N. A. G., held at the Murray Hill hotel. Good music was enjoyed. The assembly was addressed by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, E. H. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Man., President William Siebrecht of the New York Florists' Club, Edward Jenkins of Lenox, Mass., and Charles Weathered of New York.

White Fly.

I note in a recent issue of your paper the article about getting rid of white fly and I wish to acquaint those who are troubled with these pests with the plan I use and find very effective. At the same time it is very cheap, simple, and easy to use. It is the best insecticide I ever heard of and so far have never known it to injure foliage of any sort. San Jose scale, mealy bug, thrip and all aphids are done for easily with it and two or three applications will finish any of them without injury to foliage.

The preparation comes in the form of a soap. According to the directions, one pound bar of it will make 10 gallons. It seems to be composed of whale oil and a formaldehyde preparation. I prepare it according to directions in one gallon lots. Get the nicotine preparation called "Black Leaf 40," and add a good big teaspoonful of this to the gallon and use a spray pump throwing a fine mist. Add the nicotine after the spray solution gets cold, after having been dissolved in the hot water. The fine mist or spray seems to suffocate the white fly and they fall whirling and dead. I find this plan cheap and easy to use and prepare. So far it seems to be a complete insecticide.

Eliminating Funeral Flowers.

In THE AMERICAN FLORIST of March 8 I noticed an article entitled "Eliminating Funeral Flowers," by M. C. Ebel. Mr. Ebel treats the matter very well, I think, and I heartily agree with him in that we should make some centralized movement against such ideas. I have had this to face frequently, as all florists have, I presume. I do not know if it is general, but in this location the Orthodox Jews will not allow flowers at funerals.

Of course the florist does not need argument to persuade him that flowers should be used at funerals but sometimes other people do, and I have found it very effective to meet sentiment with sentiment. I have yet to find the person who will answer the following three direct questions and answer all three in the affirmative: Did anyone very dear to you ever die? If so were there any flowers at the funeral? If so did you consider it a waste of money, and would you rather the flowers had not been sent? Then follow up your questions somewhat in this manner: Flowers sent in honor of the dead are for the living more truly than at any other time; for the loved ones who remain surely appreciate them more than if they were sent as presents to themselves.

The very man who scoffs at flowers for funerals and talks of waste of money on the dead who can not see and appreciate the flowers is the first and most extravagant in that line when one dear to him dies. He seems to try to forget the slurs and endeavors to make up for them. We might say, especially if talking with some representative of a charitable institution: "How much of this money, if not spent for flowers, would be contributed to charity?" Show me a person who scoffs at flowers for the dead and I will show you, nine times out of ten, one who gives very little for any charitable purpose. Instead of furthering the cause of charity, the discontinuance of flowers at funerals would be a detriment to it. Every time a person sends flowers for this purpose, that person is himself helped, and he will be more likely to assist a needy one than if he had kept his flower money in his pocket.

I contend also that few flowers are sent to funerals for the sake of charity, but a large majority for the sake of friendship. Hence we will find that the chief contenders against this beautiful custom often turn out to be chief "offenders" when the death touches them nearly. I think that while we should strike the snake whenever it shows its head, still we are in a winning fight, especially with such evidence all around us. The thing for us to do is to head off organizations which may make this decision against funeral flowers, in cold blood, when there is no specific case to consider, then when one dies whom they would like to remember with flowers they have no appropriation set aside for the purpose. I repeat these are the ones to consider. The problem of the individual will take care of itself. The man who advocates no flowers at funerals usually seems to think that he is the originator of the idea, yet I suppose this idea of "eliminating" is as old as the custom itself. As long as we have a world it is my opinion that we will have flowers—also kickers.

The Double Spray.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

When the order is for a spray of large dimensions, it is best to propose that it be made double or in two parts, with a ribbon tie in the center. When appropriate, as for an elderly person, palm leaves should be used as a background or foundation, projecting from either end, adding to the stability as well as the size of the piece. Almost all long-stemmed flowers are appropriate for such arrangements. In the illustration Easter lilies with lilies of the valley grouped together in the center form a chaste combination. With these flowers white ribbon should be used. With the addition of violets in the center violet or purple ribbon is appropriate. Many request that violets be placed in the center on each lily. Customers should be told that this is no longer in vogue, it being much better to bunch the violets where the ribbon is tied, in which case the color effect is better and the graceful forms of the lilies are seen to much greater advantage.

These double sprays are not unwieldy when made up to a length of six feet, at which dimensions they are available for casket covers. For this purpose they should not be too formal but rather loosely tied and shaped at the ends so as practically to cover the space on which they are to be laid. Lilac, snapdragon, long-stemmed tea and American Beauty roses are all fine for such work, but they should all be at their very best when ready for delivery. Much work is seen made of half blown blooms or spikes that do not begin to reveal the beauty of the flower so that much of the effect is lost. Economy should be the watchword in every workshop; two dozen roses at their best make as good an effect as three dozen buds, and one-third of the price is saved. The same may be said of open lilac and snapdragon. Lily buds, as a rule, do not add to the effectiveness of a bunch, so quite a saving is realized by detaching the open flowers from stems with buds, allowing these to come on later.

These flowers are tied to other stems bearing open flowers and as nearly all the blooms can be arranged to show in one direction the decorative effect is much better. In arranging these large sprays they should be kept flat on the table and the bobbin of wire or spool of thread—a bobbin of No. 23 wire is best—wrapped around as additions, not of one but of several flowers are made. Some makers-up tie in one flower at a time and in doing so twist the bunch several times in the air, until finally they are obliged to lay it down to relieve the cramp in their hands. A loose effect is produced if several of the flowers used are first tied together, five dozen roses being made into twenty small sprays of three each. Short stemmed stock can sometimes be used up in connection with the longer stems in this way. The large spray is now quickly put together.

Appreciative.

THE FLORIST AS A POET.

If the Office Window man had not been an Office Window man, he would have wished to be a florist. There is a profession, now, that is worthy of a poet. You have beautiful thoughts, and instead of translating them into words, you translate them into plants and flowers. You must be an artist in order to be a successful florist, for success in that line consists of more than putting cuttings in pots and setting them up on a bench and letting them grow. You must possess the subtle knack of bringing them forward in an unusually successful way, and making them more beautiful than your neighbor's flowers. The florist must possess brains, too, in order to be able to forecast the season's fashions in flowers, and to produce exactly the things which the market will call for. He has to be an artist first and a business man afterward. But always the artist first, for in this age and place of keen competition, the shrewdest florist cannot dispose of his stock profitably if it is inferior.

THE OLD SUBURBAN FLOWER MAN.

The Office Window man has known a good many florists, and they have mostly been philosophical men. His latest friendship among florists has been with a man of Swiss birth and education, who specializes on violets, carnations and chrysanthemums, out in a suburban town. It is always a pleasure to go in and chat with this man. He knows not only about the stock in trade of the professional florist, but understands the native wild flora as well. Nothing that blossoms is foreign to him. He will tell you about the thousands of red cedars that grew about his greenhouse forty years ago, when he first settled in the neighborhood, and will lament their disappearance. He is happy in the first dandelion that blossoms in the grass on the terrace in front of his house, and he will not extirpate the dandelions from his lawn, though no one understands better than he how it can be done. He watches for the song sparrows and bluebirds in the first week of March.

A WORTHY MONUMENT.

This florist is a happy philosopher, but he has his griefs. His greatest sorrow is the bad tree planting, the bad gardening, the melancholy efforts at flower gardening, that people engage in about him. He grieves that suburban Americans should be so slow to learn. A neglected maple on the street, with snickers springing up about it, and bark gnawed away by the horses that have been hitched to it, gives him real pain. He has gone to a neighbor and asked permission to make a slit with his knife in the side of a bark-bound maple. He has planted a tree now and then for the town, without any charge, because he wanted to see the tree have a chance to grow and thrive. And his heart swells with pride when he points to the noble German lindens which he set out here and there in the village thirty or forty years ago. Those lindens, and a good many other fine trees in the town, will be the old florist's monuments after he is gone. No doubt he will be forgotten, but something of his spirit will descend upon the villagers for a hundred years, from the spreading branches of those trees.—New York Mail.

ABLENE, KANS.—Local greenhouses were damaged by hail in a recent storm.

PLANT NOTES.

Gladiolus.

The gladioli that are being forced for spring blooming will soon begin to open their flowers and to have good clean stock they will require attention. The spikes should first of all be kept erect, for if they get bent and crooked half their value is gone, and this will occur very quickly on the bright sunny days when the plant leans over, so they should be kept tied either to stakes or wires to prevent this. The spike should be cut when the first flower opens and placed in water and the other flowers opened in the office or store room. These flowers spot very quickly if water is sprinkled upon them in the greenhouses and at this season of the year syringing on bright days is a necessity or red spider is sure to obtain a foothold, and if these pests become once well established it is almost impossible to eradicate them. Considerable discussion is often heard as to whether the corms of gladiolus forced are of any value another year. If the plant is not cut too far down on the stem and the corms are given an opportunity to thoroughly ripen there is no doubt but that the bulbs may be grown another year and good results obtained, but if the plant is cut off clear down to the ground the corm has no chance to make its full growth or to ripen and the corms will be practically worthless. Corms that are forced this year, and the spike cut so as to leave three or more leaves, if properly ripened can be planted outside another year and the following year first-class corms will be the result. The Gladiolus Colvillei can be forced year after year if grown properly.

Preparation for Memorial Day.

With the Easter stock out of the way, there will be room available for the plants that have of necessity been crowded more closely together for the last few weeks and the next great day before the grower is Memorial day. In those sections of the country where the late frosts are passed the bedding stock must be ready for planting out at that time, and the demand will be for plants in flower, for the customers will desire plants that will make a good showing by May 30, and the stock must be grown with that object in view to have a good sale. The geraniums and other blooming plants should be placed in their blooming pots, spaced out and given a good sunny location that they may be full of bloom by the last of May. It is next to impossible to sell plants that are not in flower at Memorial day. The production of flowers for that day must also receive prompt attention. Much of the floral work for Memorial day is what is called "cheap" work, that is, flowers that make a great show and are not expensive. So although there are many roses and carnations used, yet large quantities of the cheaper flowers are employed to fill in and make the sprays and bouquets larger. Early outdoor flowers and blooming shrubbery can be used, but in some sections these cannot be depended upon, so flowers must be grown in the houses. Stocks make a splendid flower for this purpose and should be benched at once. The plants should now be about three or four inches high and growing rapidly. Candytuft is grown in large quantities by some growers for Memorial day. Seedlings can be transplanted in early April and brought into flower the latter part of May. Spiraea, both as a pot plant and for cut flowers, are very useful at this time; six to eight weeks will bring them into flower at this season. There are other annuals that can be raised for Memorial day blooming, but the two mentioned are grown in largest quantities.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

The plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both the young rooted stock and the older plants, will now begin to make active growth. There is still time to propagate much stock; many growers prefer the May rooted plants to those propagated earlier, for the plants start right off into growth at this time while those rooted earlier grow very slowly during the late winter and early spring months. The young shoots that break from the old plants make fine cuttings at this time and if the plants are in good health are just as good as the leaf cuttings made earlier. As soon as rooted they should be potted in a light, fibrous loam in 2½-inch pots, and placed in a light, well ventilated house, but should be protected from all chilling draughts. They cannot be successfully grown in a stuffy-moist temperature and to have strong, healthy plants should not be forced in too warm a temperature. They will require a house at which the night temperature does not fall below 60° and should be given all the air possible without chilling during pleasant, bright days, carefully avoiding drafts. They will need to be watered carefully, for the roots are very fine and are growing slowly yet, and overwatering quickly shows in the growth of the plant. It is now a good time to procure young stock if the grower is not supplied for those making a specialty of this plant have the best of stock at this time.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

Small stock of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are now a necessity with all plantmen, for they are freely used in fern dishes and in plant baskets, being very satisfactory plants for house culture. Fresh seed can now be obtained and the stock grown on through the summer, which will make fine stock for the next winter. The seed will germinate more readily and evenly if soaked in luke warm water placed in a warm location for 24 hours before planting. Instead of sowing the seed broadcast it is better to sow them about three-quarters of an inch apart and they can then be allowed to remain in the flats until they are strong enough to transplant. Do not cover the seed too deeply; an eighth of an inch of soil sifted over the seed is ample. The first potting must be carefully done, for they make a long tap root with very few small roots and the soil does not adhere to it, and in the young stage this root is easily broken. A warm house with plenty of moisture and careful watering with a slight shade is all they require after being potted. Overwatering will always cause the fronds to take a yellowish hue.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Hill-Heller Co. has filed a petition to change its name to the E. G. Hill Floral Co., Myer Heller having sold his interests to his partner, E. G. Hill of Richmond. The firm has another store in Cincinnati, O., and will establish others.

OBITUARY.

Wm. B. Sands.

Judge Wm. B. Sands, publisher of the American Farmer, and head of the firm of Wm. B. Sands & Sons Co., died suddenly of apoplexy at his home in Hollins, Md., near Baltimore, Tuesday, April 8. Judge Sands was well known as a horticulturalist, and for many years, until advancing age made the duties too heavy, he was one of the leading contributors of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. He had always taken a prominent part in horticultural affairs and was well and favorably known within his home state and elsewhere.

He was born in 1842 and was the son of Samuel Sands, the man who first typed the "Star Spangled Banner." He was one time judge of the Orphans' Court of Baltimore county and took a prominent part in the Baltimore county fair. For the last six or seven years he had been chairman of the art and design school of the Maryland Institute, of which he had long been one of the board of managers. He was a charter member of the Baltimore Gardeners and Florists' Club. Judge Sands is survived by six children. The funeral was held April 10 at the home. Pallbearers were Abraham Jessop, Clinton Jessop, Frank N. Hoen, Robert Halliday, John C. Hill and Augustin Ryan.

Addison Brown.

Addison Brown, from 1881 to 1901 a judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, died on April 9 at his home in New York city, aged 83 years. He was born in West Newbury, Mass., in 1830, being descended from Pilgrim stock. In the horticultural world, Judge Brown was known as one of the founders of the New York Botanical Garden. In 1896 and 1898 he was a co-worker with Dr. N. L. Britton in the preparation and publication of "Illustrated Flora of the United States and Canada." As a diversion from his legal and judicial duties he had always been a student of botany. As a judge he upheld the liberty of the press. When in 1895 Charles A. Dana, the noted editor, was charged with libeling the government, Judge Brown refused to grant his extradition from New York to Washington. He held that if the removal of any person accused of a crime against the United States is sought, it must first be shown that an offense against the government has been committed. That decision remains and is quoted today as a precedent. A. F. F.

Adolphus J. Thompson.

Adolphus J. Thompson, a well known florist of New Haven, Conn., died March 29 of pneumonia, after an illness of two weeks. He had been a resident of New Haven all his life, being born there in 1850. He is survived by two daughters.

Mrs. Mary O'Brien.

Mrs. Mary O'Brien, widow of James O'Brien, who was one of the pioneer florists of Boston, Mass., died recently at her home, Jamaica Plain, aged 72 years. Several sons and daughters survive.

NORTH EASTON, MASS.—A valuable collection of orchids in the Langwater Gardens, on the estate of John S. Ames may suffer from lack of care as a result of a strike and subsequent discharge of a score of expert gardeners.

RENEW subscriptions promptly so that no copies of the paper may be missed.

It is always bad policy to risk tender stock outdoors in advance of the usual time, without adequate facilities for protection.

BANKERS and others with money to loan greenhouse men for projected improvements are now investigating the fire, hail and tornado insurance carried by the borrowers on their existing establishments.

THE National Flower Show at New York is reported a financial success, with total gate receipts of about $13,500 and total paid admissions 30,000. Tickets taken in large blocks were sold at reduced rates.

THE approaching Minneapolis convention of the Society of American Florists' was well advertised at the National Flower Show and Vice-President Wirth, who was in attendance, secured $2,200 worth of advertising for the souvenir programme.

Society of American Florists.

MEETING OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

The board of directors of the Society of American Florists met February 25 at the Hotel Radisson, Minneapolis, Minn. There were present President Farquhar, Vice-President Wirth, Treasurer W. F. Kasting, Directors Allan Peirce, Harry A. Bunyard, C. H. Totty, J. A. Evans, R. Vincent, Jr., Thomas Roland, August F. Poehlmann, and, as secretary pro tem, George Asmus. The president announced that owing to the serious illness of Secretary John Young he had appointed Mr. Asmus secretary pro tem, which appointment was endorsed by the board. A telegram was sent to Mr. Young, who was an inmate of the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, expressing sympathy with him in his illness and the hope that he would speedily recover.

A sample of the proposed membership badge for 1913 was submitted to the meeting and the design being favorable to the board it was adopted and the secretary ordered to procure a supply of badges for the August convention. A design for a life membership badge was submitted by the secretary and was adopted. The secretary was ordered to procure a supply of these badges at a price not to exceed 75 cents each, and to place them at the disposal of life members at the cost price. A resolution was passed to the effect that the leading florists, or others having trade interests, forward any suggestions or demands they might wish considered relating to tariff legislation, affecting their interests, to Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., chairman of the tariff and legislation committee, which committee met during the National Flower Show held in New York City April 5-12. Upon motion, the following were appointed as a local advisory committee in connection with the preparations for the convention in Minneapolis next August: Theo. Wirth, chairman, W. Desmond, Hugh Will, and George Asmus.

Vice-President Wirth submitted a plan covering the utilization of a large piece of land adjoining the Armory in which it was proposed to house the convention for an outdoor exhibition, the laying out of the ground, securing exhibits from the growers, and caring for them, turning the whole over to the society at the opening of the convention. The plan meeting the approval of the board it was, on motion, decided that such outdoor exhibition be provided for, merged with the general trade exhibit and made a part of the general expense, and that the secretary and advisory board be ordered to work out a feasible plan for carrying out the idea, and give public notice through the papers.

Charles Critchell of Cincinnati was appointed chairman of the sports committee of the convention. In regard to the rates for space in the trade exhibition at Minneapolis, it was decided that the rate be 40 cents per square foot, with a minimum price of $20. It was further arranged that the business convention occupy four days and that the trade exhibit should be opened for the same period; and that all articles exhibited must be left in place until the close of the business session of the convention, which would be at 10 o'clock p. m. on the fourth day.

A resolution was passed that it was the sense of the board of directors that some action be taken by the society at the next convention whereby exhibits of artificial flowers at the society's trade exhibitions and flower shows be prohibited. On Wednesday morning, Feb. 26, the board visited the Armory to inspect the building and arrange plans for the convention and trade exhibition. Afterwards a convention program was arranged and duly adopted.

The following appropriations were made: Entomologist, $100; pathologist, $100; botanist, $100; convention badges, $100; assistant to secretary at convention, $100; sports committee, $75; president's messenger, $25; school garden committee, $75. The accommodations at the Hotel Radisson having been found satisfactory, that hotel was appointed headquarters for the convention. Vice-President Wirth was invested with authority to make arrangements for the lease of the Armory. C. H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, reported on the arrangements made for the show to be held in New York, and the report was accepted.

The salary of the secretary was fixed at $1,000 per year, with an additional allowance of $300 per annum for office rent. It was also decided that in consideration of his additional work as superintendent of the trade exhibition he be paid an additional salary of $500 per annum, with a further allowance of $200 to cover the expense of a thirty day stay in the convention city which would be required through his duties. After a resolution covering thanks to the local societies and Vice-President Wirth for hospitalities enjoyed during the visit of the board in Minneapolis the board adjourned to meet at the National Flower Show in New York City.

The Belgium Strike

Under date of April 14, we are advised by McHutchison & Co., New York, as follows: "Our cable advices from Belgium inform us that the general strike goes into effect there today. The Red Star Line, which brings all Belgium plant shipments, will not accept perishable freight even though the Belgium government-owned railroads could carry the stock from Ghent to Antwerp. This completely ties up plant shipments from Belgium and catches us right at the beginning of the spring shipping season. Only one shipment has left Belgium—mostly bay trees. Further spring shipments will be delayed as long as the strike lasts—which is hoped to be not over two or three weeks."

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

Flood and Storm Victims

- ¶ President Guy French announces that the Chicago Florists' Club, would be very glad to receive any information regarding fellow florists who have lost all they had from the recent floods and storms, and are worthy of help.
- ¶ The Club has a committee in the field investigating the needs of such cases and will arrange to help with all in their power. The reporting of the cases will lead to prompt investigation and such help as necessary being extended.
- ¶ All florists have some surplus stock, and this, with a little cash, will, no doubt, help many a man who has lost all he had to regain his feet. Address

Does This Solve Your Problem?

Have your Conifers, Hardy Shrubs or Hedges the appearance of being stunted?

Have you learned what ails them?

Is it not an attack from the red spider which has done so much havoc to the Evergreens the past few seasons?

If so, you can overcome it by using SCALINE, which will rid your plants of this pest and will promote a healthy growth.

SCALINE is an effective material that can be used in the growing season for aphids, thrips, red spider, mealy bug, soft scale and all sap sucking insects. It can be safely applied to all hardy plants.

As a winter spray for San Jose and all hard scale it has no equal.

SCALINE is composed of a high grade of petroleum and contains the properties of the well known fungicide, Fungine, also making it an excellent preventive against various blights affecting trees and shrubs.

It is readily soluble in water, contains no sediment and can be applied through the finest spray nozzle; being more economical than the old-fashioned Kerosene Emulsion and Fish Oil Soaps and much more effective.

TRADE BETTER.

There was a sudden change for the better in the market conditions on April 11 when stock of all kinds was in brisk demand. The local trade was very lively and the shipping trade in general was much better than it has been for a long time. Trade on Saturday continued to be good and on Sunday the market was practically cleaned up before the stores closed at noon. American Beauty roses had a very heavy call and the extra fancy stock in some cases brought as high as $4.00 per dozen. Good American Beauty roses were very scarce and many orders were left unfilled. Killarney and White Killarney were in good supply but cleaned up well, as all the other roses did. Carnations advanced in price and were sold in many instances as high as $4.00 per 100, although $3.00 per 100 was the average price asked. Splits brought $2.00 easily and cleaned up good at that. Sweet peas had a tremendous call and brought more money during the past few days than they did for the last several weeks. Richmond roses are in brisk demand and are bringing good prices. Orchids are none too plentiful at present, but Cattleya Mossiae is now coming in crop, so it is expected that the supply of them will soon be much larger. Lily of the valley is moving freely and southern bulbous stock is selling well. Snapdragons are moving fairly good as well as Spanish Iris, but there seems to be plenty of lilies and callas to go around. Greens, with the exception of Mexican Ivy and asparagus, are plentiful. Wild smilax is to be had in quantity and ferns are still being offered at bargain prices. The wholesalers are not experiencing so much trouble now in their shipping trade, and business in general so far this week has been very satisfactory.

NOTES.

The invitation tendered to the trade in last week's issue by Mrs. Ida M. Latshaw, local manager of the Meredith Flower and Vegetable Co., Libertyville, to spend Thursday, May 1, as guests of this concern, seems to have met with great favor by a number of local florists who are making preparations to spend the day there. A good time is assured everyone.

Wietor Bros. have a fine lot of young rose plants on hand, especially American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney and Sunburst, which means that the planting season at this establishment will soon begin. N. J. Wietor is undecided whether he will part company with Mrs. Jardine now or grow this rose again for another season.

Erne & Klingel are handling a portion of the Killarney and White Killarney roses grown at the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s greenhouses at Edgebrook and which won first prize at the recent spring flower show in the Art Institute. Cut spires from the same place are in brisk demand at this store.

A. Lange and wife have returned from a visit to Omaha, Neb., where they spent several days in looking over the district that was recently swept by a tornado. Mr. Lange says that the damage was very heavy and much greater than newspaper reports had it.

S. Freund, sales manager for A. A. Arnold, the well-known paper box manufacturer, is now out of town, calling on the trade. He reports a heavy demand for their high-grade folding flower boxes, which they are now manufacturing.

George Peterson, of C. Peterson & Sons, Escanaba, Mich., was in the city for a few days this week, returning from Benton Harbor, Mich., where he was a delegate to the convention of the Woodmen of the World.

W. J. Keimel is the proud possessor of a new seven passenger Hudson touring car and is already planning on making a trip to the S. A. F. convention in Minneapolis in August by auto.

James Psenicka has been delayed somewhat with his building at Gross Point by the unfavorable weather conditions of the past few weeks.

It is rumored that Rober & Radke, of Maywood, have secured a lease on a range of houses in Wilmette and will move there very shortly.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting more heavily in American Beauty roses but are disposing of their stock very quickly at good prices.

The next regular meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association will be held at the Tavern, West Washington street, on April 17.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has just received a large importation of boxwoods and reports that a second shipment is about due.

Mrs. A. Steinman is rapidly recovering from her fall off a street car some time ago and soon expects to be back in the store.

Fred Munzing, manager of the North Edgewater Floral Co., reports a good deal of landscape work in his locality.

Frank Benthey says that Kyle & Foerster had no trouble in disposing of their sweet peas this week at fancy prices.

George Collins, Henry Smith's foreman at Grand Rapids, Mich., transacted business here on April 10.

awarded to Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago and Morton Grove, Ill., is in itself a great victory over all other great growers in the United States. Taking in consideration the fact that we exhibited at the Chicago Flower Show, held April 2nd to 6th, which called for the same amount of Beauties and Roses in each class, receiving the first prize at this show, must be convincing that Poehlmanns are the greatest growers in the country. Shipping Roses a thousand miles in competition against New York grown stock, by so eminent growers as we had to compete against, should leave no doubt of our often claimed statement in public print to the effect. We are the Largest Growers of the Best Cut Flowers in the World. Do not lose sight of one very important fact. Our facilities for shipping and knowledge of packing flowers to travel a thousand miles in such good condition as to be capable of receiving First prize, should prove that we can pack flowers satisfactorily to ship anywhere in a radius of 1000 miles. We are doing this now almost daily. We are picking carnations for regular orders, on the close side, at the greenhouses each lot marked for the order intended; this innovation gives your carnation order special attention with the best quality of stock obtainable.

Our superior quality of Valley, "not only for shows," but for all occasions and every day the year around makes us Valley Headquarters, as we also are for fancy American Beauties, good short, medium and long Roses of all the leading varieties, including the new varieties.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a tremendous call for American Beauty roses as well as a good demand for all their other seasonable stock. The supply department under the able management of T. E. Waters is enjoying a good season and the plant department, which is in charge of C. G. Anderson, is very busy with shipping orders at present. This department has a surplus of some 50,000 pansy plants in assorted varieties which are now being moved at very reasonable prices.

F. O. Franzen is offering some very fine boxwood to the trade. This shipment is said by many to be fine and better than last season. Although pyramidal boxwood predominates in this shipment, there are also to be had some fine globular and bush-shaped stock.

A. L. Vaughan is again attending to his duties regularly at the store after a severe siege of rheumatism. Business at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store the past week was very good, according to W. E. Lynch, who had trouble in filling all the orders.

The Albert Dickinson Co. has been receiving some very complimentary testimonials from various consumers of their lawn grass, the sales of which are exceeding all previous records.

J. F. Kidwell says the Chicago Flower Growers' Association is disposing of its large supply of stock daily and that lily of the valley especially is in great demand.

Peter Pearson's philanthropic announcement in last week's paper has been received with heartfelt thanks by many of the trade who had suffered in the recent floods.

John Kruchten is receiving a regular supply of gardenias notwithstanding the fact that one of his growers'

Guy French, president of the Chicago Florists' Club, is busy making arrangements to give assistance to the flood and storm victims who are in actual need of help. The club would be glad to receive any information regarding fellow florists who have lost all they had from the recent floods and storms, and are worthy of assistance. A committee is in the field investigating the needs of such cases and will arrange to help with all in their power. The reporting of such cases will lead to prompt investigation and such help as necessary will be extended. All florists have some surplus stock, and this, with a little cash, will no doubt assist many a one who has lost all he had to regain his feet. Anyone in the trade who is interested in the matter would do well to get in touch with the committee, and can do so through the secretary of the club, Edw. C. Toepel, Morton Grove, Ill.

Phil Schupp, with J. A. Budlong, has received a letter from Mrs. Matthews at Dayton, O., which contains the welcome news that Mr. Matthews is recovering from an attack of pneumonia and that he will open one of his stores as soon as he is able to do so. Mr. Schupp generously offers to make a shipment of stock to Mr. Matthews free one day each week for a few months until he is better situated, and is also willing to supply a few other florists who have suffered from the floods and storms and are in actual need of assistance. This is certainly a credit to the Budlong establishment, so if any of the flood victims would like to partake of this generous offer they would do well to communicate with this firm immediately.

Peter Olsem has returned from the National Flower Show, which was held in New York last week and is again attending to his duties as superintendent at the Chicago Carnation Co.'s greenhouses in Joliet, relieving A. T. Pyfer of the responsibility. Mr. Pyfer is again in charge at the store.

Randall H. Read, for the past 25 years in the employ of Vaughan's Seed Store, most of the time as chief of the shipping department, has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the loss of his wife, who died April 11.

S. Cohen, proprietor of the Jackson Floral Shop, 1217 East Sixty-third street, is taking legal action against the real estate agents who leased the store he now occupies to another concern over his head.

F. A. Parkmire of the North Shore Greenhouses reports that since the opening of his new establishment last month he has completed another greenhouse which will be used in growing bedding stock.

The Rogers Park Cut Flower Co., which recently opened their establishment in Rogers Park, contemplates moving to Lake View about May 1, but as yet no definite location has been decided upon.

H. E. Philpott has returned from abroad and will spend a few days here before returning to his home in Winnipeg, Man. He attended the Third National Flower Show while he was in New York.

George Kinkley, better known as "Buffalo Bill," Adam Zenda's expert rose grower, reports that their crop of roses this season has exceeded all former crops both as to quality and quantity.

John Steinmetz, local representative of Ralph M. Ward & Co., reports a heavy demand for this concern's lily bulbs.

J. Oliver Johnson, 1874 Milwaukee avenue, reports a heavy demand for his high-grade lawn seed. Mr. Johnson does only a wholesale business, which is increasing each year.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg is having a good call for Richmond roses, of which he now has a good supply, and that all his other stock is cleaning up well.

Chas. W. McKellar says that his sister writes from Chillicothe, O., that the Elsass greenhouses suffered damages to the extent of $10,000 during the recent floods.

Percy Jones had a big run on both cut flowers and supplies all week and he was fortunate in having a good supply of fancy sweet peas to supply his trade.

H. Munson is kept busy taking care of the wants of the local trade with flues, piping, gutter posts, etc.

Visitors: W. D. Desmond, C. H. Carlson, Theo. Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; O. J. Olson, St. Paul, Minn.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; all returning from the National Flower Show much pleased with their trip; George Collins, Grand Rapids; George Peterson, Escanaba, Mich.; John Forrer, La Crosse, Wis.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of The Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant, April 10, President French in the chair. One important feature of this meeting was the selection of the route to the convention of the Society of American Florists, which will be held at Minneapolis, Minn., next August, the Chicago Great Western being finally chosen as the official road.

The principal feature of the meeting, however, was the excellent talk on fertilizers by Prof. F. W. Muncie of the State Agricultural College, Urbana. The professor told of the principal constituents of common fertilizers, and how they are utilized by plants, in plain language that everyone interested could understand. This was one of the most practical discourses given before the club for a long time and it is hoped that the professor will find an early opportunity to be with the members in a more extended journey over the same field.

E. O. Orpet spoke in terms of the highest praise regarding the new canas Firebird and Carl Lutz exhibited by Vaughan's Seed Store, stating that they are the finest productions in that line that have come under his observation and moved to the exhibitors a vote of thanks which was generously extended, most of those present sharing Mr. Orpet's views as to the superiority of these exhibits.

Three new members were elected. Howard Wilter, Morton Grove, Herbert Scharenberg, Morton Grove, and W. H. Hilton, 1461 E. Fifty-first street.

MARKET DEMORALIZED.

The weather is warming up and is more springlike. All week was cold and raining and the market was in a demoralized condition. Carnations here sold in lots as low as $3 a thousand and good stock at that; but Monday morning the market showed a more normal condition. Violets are about gone. Sweet peas have shortened up considerably and the better grades are now bringing fancy prices. The bad weather has greatly hampered the plant men.

The St. Louis Florists' Club met with 30 members present, E. W. Gay in the chair. The trustees decided to abandon the boat excursion and give a picnic as usual. The club decided to postpone their meeting.

TRADE GOOD.

The incessant rain for the last two days has not affected the flower business to any extent. The sales at the Florists' Exchange have been good. The trade at Easter, according to some of the florists, was the best they had ever had.

NOTES.

The flower market, under the auspices of the home garden committee of the Civic League, promises to be more beautiful than last season. It is held May 7 around the Washington monument. There will be booths containing flowering plants and garden tools, a Japanese exhibit, a fern grotto and a booth of pottery and novelties. The children also have booths and they are always attractive and well patronized.

Judge Wm. B. Sands, publisher of the American Farmer, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home at Hollins, Md., Tuesday, April 8. An obituary notice will be found elsewhere in this paper.

W. S. Manning, general superintendent of parks, says that 75,000 pansies and 300,000 tulip bulbs have been planted in the public squares and they are looking very beautiful just now.

The Baltimore florists who visited the New York show speak of it in glowing terms. They call it the finest show yet. B.

THE FLOOD DAMAGES.

Four of the local florists were affected by the flood. Clarence Communicavish's place on Spy Run avenue was under water for several days, the plants all being submerged. The soft wooded stock is all gone and everything injured more or less. Markey Bros.' establishment on Hale avenue suffered no particular damage to houses or stock. The water came up to the benches, but they were able to keep the temperature up by means of oil and heating stoves. At the Flick Floral Co.'s greenhouses the boilers were out of service for several days and the water came up into the lower houses. They lost quite a great deal of stock. The garage with their electric automobile and large touring car was under water and the machines badly damaged.

At W. J. & M. S. Vesey's the flood did a great deal of damage. The plants were all under water from Tuesday until Saturday. They were not able to get any heat into the houses until Sunday night. The orchids had been removed to the cellar of the residence and packing house by boat and were being kept warm with oil stoves. The stoves became overheated during the night and the barn, garage, packing house and office were completely destroyed by fire with all the supplies, two machines and live stock. The residence caught from the barn and all the rear of the house was burned and the rest damaged by smoke and water. The loss to the stock in the greenhouses is not as great as was thought at first. While a great deal is completely lost, the rose stock will come through better than was expected, but with the loss of a crop or two. Some of the young stock will also come through all right, from present indications, but a great deal is having to be thrown out from day to day and it is impossible to tell the extent of the damage.

Cincinnati.

SHIPMENTS START AGAIN.

Business is opening up splendidly. The number of shipments is very near that of normal conditions. This was brought about when the Pennsylvania railroad managed to open their line west and northwest. This brought in the Indiana and Michigan stock that the market had been receiving up to the time of the floods. With the increase in the number of shipments there has, however, been a decrease in the size of them. Most of the growers seem to be somewhat off crop. This, coupled with the increased demand, has kept the market in a good, firm condition. Shipping, too, is again growing more brisk. Roses are cleaning up very nicely. The supply includes all the varieties from Killarney to American Beauty that the market has received regularly. The call at the time of this writing easily takes up receipts. Carnations are in not so large a supply relatively speaking as they were a fortnight ago. The demand is strongest for the white and lighter colors. All colors are selling, however. The supply of both giganteum and calla lilies is large, but both of them are moving very slowly. The sweet pea cut has shortened very considerably and they are in demand. Lily of the valley sells very well. The present supply hardly proves adequate. Marguerites clean up nicely. The same is true of snapdragons. Some very fine stock is coming in.

NOTES.

The Florists' Society held its regular meeting at the club rooms recently. A committee consisting of Henry Schwartz, Wm. Schumann and Wm. Speck was appointed by President Gus Adrian to arrange for the handling of flowers and plants for those florists in this vicinity who lost nearly all in the flood.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Ruttle, daughter of R. D. Ruttle, and Dr. John Maloney will take place Wednesday morning.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some very fine snapdragons from Robert Buck & Co., Washington C. H.

The stork left a baby boy at the home of Geo. E. Fern and wife last week.

R. Witterstaetter has been on the sick list for several days.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

●A car of florists left Lancaster, Pa., for the greenhouse establishment of W. B. Girvin of Leola on a fraternal visit March 4, at 4:30 p. m., and after an inspection of this modern place and a little time to recover from the shock of seeing so many chrysanthemum cuttings at one plant, returned to the city for the evening meeting of the club at 8 p. m.

Considering the fact that Easter was just over, the attendance was good, and after hearing and discussing a paper by Ira Landis of Paradise on soils, Frank Kohr of Dillerville told us in a well-written paper how the club had benefited him and how it could be made of further benefit to us. Co-operative buying was discussed at some length and a free discussion was urged on all subjects.

The president urged every member of the club to attend the National Flower Show, a one-day trip being possible from this city at an expense of $15. About twenty expressed their intention of going.

At our next meeting, April 17, we expect to have S. S. Pennock of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, tell us of some of the faults of the consignors in dealing with the commission houses, this being a phase of the subject not often enough dwelt on.

ROSES AND CARNATIONS HIGH.

The market for the past week has been brisk. There was plenty of all kinds of stock during the first part of the week, but towards the latter part all stock shortened up, bringing the prices higher. Carnations are at top notch and are bringing good prices, as are all kinds of roses. American Beauty roses are again in the market and are of a fine flower and color. There are plenty of Harrisii lilies, but a shortage of lily of the valley. There is plenty of mignonette. Sweet peas are arriving in quantities and sell readily. Enough greens to fill all orders.

Gust Rusch & Co. report business very satisfactory for the past week. This firm is receiving some very fine mignonette and luppins.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. will vacate its present quarters and will soon occupy the new quarters in the Stephenson building.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports business very satisfactory but a shortage on roses.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. had a busy week with enough stock to fill all orders.

EASTER BUSINESS DECREASES.

Those in the trade here are free to admit that the volume of Easter business was fully 25 per cent lower than last year, the decrease in demand being felt in both cut flowers and plants. The weather was no doubt responsible for a serious diminution in the Sunday morning trade, for, unusual for this locality, we had a very blustery and somewhat rainy day, and Easter flowers, Easter hats, and Easter dresses among the church-goers, were all conspicuous by their absence. We blame the winter chiefly for our Easter trade being smaller than is usual. Among flowering plants offered there was certainly a wide variety, though some were of only mediocre quality. Poorly grown schizanthus and begonias will spoil the appearance of any collection of flowering plants, however perfect the rest of the stock in the collection may be. Among the plants were many well grown American Beauty roses, lilies, spireas, hydrangeas, and pans of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and lily of the valley. A few cyclamens and a yellow oxalis were also offered. Little was attempted in made-up baskets of plants as there is not much demand for anything in the plant line if the cost exceeds three dollars. In cut flowers the roses and carnations offered were of ideal quality. The latter sold at $1.00 a dozen and were really too cheap to be very profitable. The most popular grades of roses were those salable at $3.00 a dozen for Killarney and American Beauty at $6.00. There were a few calls, however, for the $9.00 and $12.00 grades of this variety. There were plenty of good sweet peas but for some reason or other these were not popular, and failed to clean out. The same may be said of yellow narcissus and lily of the valley. California violets at $1.00 a 100 sold fairly well. When the stores closed Sunday afternoon there still remained in hand a fairly good supply of plants and cut flowers.

NOTES.

There was a fairly good demand for flowers from the churches. Just why a 25 per cent discount should be allowed to places of worship for flowers seems strange to us. Neither churches nor undertakers have a right, nor should they be given the privilege of purchasing flowers at a discount.

When the managers of a church require a high salaried minister, or a new organ, or a better organist, they go after them and pay the price, and there is no reason why, when they want a few flowers, they should ask the florist for a 25 per cent discount. Somebody please start something that will put a stop to all discounts to people outside of the trade.

Like many other cities, the help problem for holiday rushes is ever with us. Outside assistance is absolutely necessary to take care of the rush and an incompetent clerk in a florist's store is always the source of mistakes followed by complaints from customers.

S. S. B.

Rochester N. Y.

WEEK CLOSES WELL.

Business for the first half of the week was somewhat dull, but the latter part showed a decided increase. Good fresh stock arrives each day and plenty of it. Carnations are fairly good. Sweet peas are full of fragrance and are quickly disposed of. Roses, snapdragons, lily of the valley, stock, etc., are exceptionally fine.

NOTES.

Geo. T. Boucher says business for the past month has been the "best ever." Apart from the store trade he has had large decorations as well. Mr. Boucher will erect two good sized houses in West Brighton in the near future.

Henry P. Neun recently decorated at a large church wedding. For the altar palms, lavender rhododendrons, daffodils and lavender lilacs were used. Business with Mr. Neun is very good. Cecil Lester is now in his employ.

The Rochester Floral Co. is to be congratulated on the remodeling of their new store at 255 East Main street. This store is larger and better equipped for the large amount of business this firm carries on.

Hiram E. Wilson, who has been in Florida during the winter, has recently left on a visit to Panama. He is expected home in a few weeks.

A good number of florists with their wives represented Rochester at the National Flower Show in New York.

BUSINESS VERY QUIET.

The last week has been very quiet. Florists like all others are suffering from the streetcar strike. All that kept trade going was funeral work. Stock is plentiful, bulbous stock in particular. Roses also are in over supply and of good quality. A few more warm days and the inquiries will be for veranda boxes, cemetery vases and lawn work, which will forcibly impress on the greenhouse men that their busy time is on and will be until July 1.

The Buffalo delegation has returned from the National Flower Show well pleased with their trip. S. A. Anderson was one of the prize winners, which is a good advertisement for Buffalo, as was the prize given J. J. Albright for the best 25 cyclamen plants in the private exhibit, Charles Sandiford, gardener.

W. J. Palmer has been in rather poor health and consequently did not go to New York for the show.

W. F. Kasting has been at Hot Springs, Ark. He returned for the show.

DEMAND IS FAIR.

The business is about as usual for the season, there being a fair demand. Stock in all lines is plentiful. Roses are offered in excess. Carnations, while selling fairly well, are low-priced. Sweet peas are an exception, being off crop and selling out clean every day. Snapdragon is in full supply, but sells well, being good value for the money. There is an abundance of calla and Easter lilies, with prices low. American Beauty roses in quantity lots are offered at bargain prices. All growers of this rose are now cutting large quantities and they are now almost as difficult to handle as they were to obtain two months ago. Emperor daffodils have been good stock, for while the returns have not been large there has been little waste, the stock selling up very well. There has been a good business in the early spring plants for window boxes. Pansies and English daisies move off lively. Some boxes are seen planted with geraniums and marguerites, but the recent cool weather has halted this demand.

NOTES.

The feature of the week has been the great New York show. To give a list of the florists of this city who visited the exhibition would be to enumerate all the live ones. It really seemed as if almost everyone who could possibly get away made the trip. All reports were of a glowing character. That it was the greatest exhibition ever held in this country appeared to be the universal opinion. There were quite a number of exhibitors in the plant and cut flower classes, but none of the retail men plucked up courage enough to try their skill against the other artists of the country. Batchelor, Dodds and Robertson, the plantsmen of the Newbold-Wanamaker and Pepper estates, were winners with nearly all their entries. Batchelor scored ten firsts, Dodds fifteen firsts, six seconds and other prizes including a special prize of $200 for the best new foliage plant. Robertson's record was eleven firsts and a bronze medal.

The Joseph Heacock Co., John Welsh Young, J. Stephenson's Sons, Edward Towill, R. Scott & Son, Myers & Samtman, H. J. Andre, all received one or

STOCK SHORTENS UP.

Flood damages to railroads have about all been repaired and express orders come and go regularly from this point. Stock of all kinds has shortened up considerably; in fact, on Saturday carnations and medium and long stem roses were not to be had on the local market. Sweet peas, too, owing to the dark cold days, were very scarce. Funeral work has kept most of the retailers busy all week, and with a few decorative jobs cleaned up nearly everything in sight. Easter lilies are not quite so plentiful and have been in good demand. Violets have met with a good call, and stock is uniformly good for this time of the year. Greens of all kinds seem plentiful. Lily of the valley is received in greater abundance and the demand is good. A little bulbous stock, such as Poeticus narcissus, single and double daffodils and single and double tulips still arrive, but clean up quickly at fair prices. Pansies are moving fairly well. Columbine, snapdragon, mignonette, daisies, forget-me-nots, lilac, calandula, etc., clean up daily.

Monday, April 14.—There is a fair market this morning, though roses continue cheap. The first gladioli we have noticed came in this morning to Walter F. Sheridan, from E. G. Mott, Glen Head, L. I.

FLORIST CLUB MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the club was held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of April 14, President Siebrecht in the chair. While there was a good attendance, the reaction after the strenuous week of the show was apparent and the business was soon transacted. Appropriate resolutions on the death of Philip Einsmann and Abraham Moltz, late members, were adopted. The outing committee reported progress and stated that the summer outing will be held July 1 at Witzel's Point View Grove, where the club's outings have been held in the past.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., chairman of the committee appointed by the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, reported that Park Commissioner Stover will grant all of the north end of Union Square Park to the plant growers for a market and will co-operate with the New York Florists' Club, the Plant Growers' Association and the Flower Market Association. President Siebrecht appointed A. L. Miller, Oscar Boehler and John Birnie a committee of cooperation from the club.

President Siebrecht also appointed a committee of three to report at the next meeting on the style of the emblem for the club badge. Chas. Weathered presented an emblem which was viewed by the members. The following names were proposed for membership: A. M. Kirchner, Chas. Hispen, Herman Branch, Louis Enne, Joseph Levy, H. F. Marquardt, John E. Sefton, Ernest Ulrich, Frank Grumbach, George Ehrle, John Watts, Vivian L. Outerbridge. The house committee furnished refreshments.

NOTES.

At the banquet on April 10 ex-President Joseph A. Manda was presented with an assortment of table silver. Patrick O'Mara in a witty speech handed the present to Mr. Manda.

It has been stated that the total attendance at the show was about 40,000.

CARNATION SHORTAGE FEARED.

There has been somewhat of a see-saw movement in the market this week. Carnations are shortening and some see a scarcity of the flower if present conditions continue. The rains have had a bad effect on business.

NOTES.

The show of the Co-operative Flower Market was a great success. Much credit should be given those in charge. It was a surprise to many to see so many entries and so much high-class stock. The carnation and rose exhibits were simply superb. Nothing we can remember in any market show has equalled it. The members of the Boston Flower Exchange contributed largely to the exhibits, both in roses and carnations, and also outside parties. The retailers put up a splendid exhibit of made-up pieces of high-class work which was a credit to them and a credit to the exhibition. There was nothing in the show but what was of good quality and well grown. The Waban Rose Conservatories showed a new red rose, under the name of Rex, which won the prize for the best rose of 1913 not disseminated. Also a gold watch went with the prize. The Mrs. Chas. Russell rose was awarded the silver cup for the sweepstake prize. Wm. Sim's exhibits of sweet peas were wonderful. They were of the winter-flowering Spencer type and they were staged as only Mr. Sim can stage them. There was a good attendance all day. It was a show worthy of a larger hall to display the good qualities of the flowers. It goes to show what can be done by the united efforts of all interested in the trade.

We are told by one of the members of the Horticultural Club of Boston that the club is not a business organization but a social club with a limited membership of 25 and a large waiting list. We, as many others who have never been inside the club rooms, did not know what the club stood for. One of its aims is to give hospitality to any distinguished men who may visit this city and see that their stay is pleasant and that nothing is lacking to make their visit an enjoyable one.

Everyone returning from New York is well satisfied with the trip. The rose growers say it was the best exhibition of roses they ever saw or ever hope to see, as regards quality. All feel that it was a great show.

Small towns and rural communities will have the way paved for park districts and recreation centers if S. B. 74 introduced by Senator Maclean, which is now on third reading in the Senate, is enacted into law. This measure provides for public recreation districts upon the petition of 100 legal voters to the county judge. In the petition the boundaries of the recreation district are named and the district shall be organized if it is favored by a majority of the voters of the district at a referendum election. Such recreation districts are to be under the supervision of six directors to be named at the time the referendum vote is taken.

FROM THE BRITISH PRESS

The Sporting of Californian-grown Sweet Peas.—The subject of the sporting of Californian sweet peas, raised by several correspondents, is one of interest to all lovers of this flower. Why, however, limit the observations to Californian sweet peas only? I ask this question because, until I hear of conclusive evidence to the contrary, I shall believe that the same laws governing this matter hold in California as they do here. One has often seen it advanced that different insects abound abroad to what are seen here, and that they may have a different way of working to those in our own country. Personally I cannot follow this, as even if they do work differently and actually enter the flowers and carry away pollen to other flowers, my experience of many years' standing teaches me that they might bring about cross-pollination but not cross-fertilization—a very different matter. The fertilization has taken place before this pollen is transferred, and would have no more effect than so much inorganic dust. I have never in all my experience come across a case of "sporting" which I could trace to natural cross-fertilization. There is a lot of nonsense talked about insects and their effect upon cross-fertilization. I admit they do bring it about in many flowers, but it is much rarer than is supposed. Is it likely that nature would rely upon the chance visitation of an insect to insure the perpetuation of any species of plant? Nature does not believe in the haphazard. We have been so accustomed to take for granted all we read of the conclusions of such men as Darwin that we have, very few of us, taken the trouble to see whether such conclusions are correct. Eminent scientific writers have done the same, hence too much stress has been laid upon the importance of insects to flowers. Because Darwin and others have noticed certain things to take place at different times they have concluded that it always happens, and is the universal law of nature with regard to the particular plants observed. This, however, is a digression. I think several of your correspondents hit the nail on the head when they infer that there is not as much care shown in the growing of Californian stocks as in this country. They are grown without sticks upon a huge scale, and cannot be as carefully superintended. Growers know well that one has to pass along rows scores of times before all rogues come out. You might miss one many times. If this is so when grown upon sticks, what about those growing low down, to which the Chinaman has to bend in the heat of a scorching sun? Is it to be wondered at that many are left?—The Garden.

Sweet Peas for Glass Culture.—For some reason the Zvolanek and Telemly varieties are not satisfactory here, yet in America the first-named type can be made to grow 10 feet or more, and produce 12 to 18 inch stems, the flowers oftentimes selling wholesale at $1 per 100 or more. American growers, however, admit that their flowers are not nearly equal to those produced under glass by British growers, but there is just the difference that America has sweet peas in November, while none worthy of the name are to be seen at home until mid-April or later. The reason is as stated; Americans grow the early Zvolanek type, while home growers depend upon the Spencer types. The difference between the two is that the early-flowering kinds are active all the time, and they run up without a check, while the Spencer, or late-flowering type, stand still after germinating, while they are breaking at the base, and any attempt to force them along ends in failure. The British public has been educated up to big blooms, and the small flowers of the Zvolanek type are not acceptable. It is generally admitted that the early sorts already in existence are not satisfactory. Apart from their small size and hooded form, they are sometimes much mixed, but nevertheless I am convinced that the treatment generally accorded them is not conducive to their well-being. Owing to our dull winters the seed ought to be sown early in August instead of late September or October as is usually the case. Treated properly, the early types will flower weeks ahead of the ordinary forms, but no treatment will make them take on the size so much desired. We therefore must confine ourselves to the giant Spencers already in favor. —Gardeners' Magazine.

Sweet-Scented Flowers from Seed.—Most people agree that a garden minus a good complement of fragrant flowers is devoid of its most charming attraction; but surely nobody wilfully makes his or her plans for the coming year with the express intention of leaving out the sweetly-scented of floral subjects, yet nobody who has observed the general run of the flower FREDERICTOWN, N. B.—John Bebbington & Son report a small increase in Easter sales over last year. Prices were no better. The supply of plants and cut flowers was ample. Easter lily plants sold the best. Daffodils and tulips in pots at 35 cents sold well. High priced plants did not seem popular. Lily of the valley and roses had little call, carnations, violets and daffodils having the run in the cut stock. The early date no doubt militated against heavy sales. Money seems not too plentiful. The weather has been very bad.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Business was about the same as last Easter and prices were no better, say A. C. Oelschig & Son. The plant supply was ample but more cut flowers could have been sold. Easter lilies, calla lilies, hyacinths and lily of the valley sold readily, but there was little call for made-up plants. All white cut flowers sold well. There was much cloudy weather before Easter. A fine crop of carnations was cut but the roses could have been better.

DALLAS, TEX.—Business for Easter increased 20 per cent over that of a year ago according to the Texas Seed & Floral Co. Prices were about the same. The plant supply was not sufficient to meet all calls, but cut flowers were in ample supply. Lilies were the best selling plants and cut lilies and carnations also sold well. Roses moved slowly. Hydrangeas and baby rambler roses proved good sellers.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Sales were 15 per cent greater this Easter than in 1912, with prices about the same, says Mills, the Florist. Plants and cut flowers were both in ample supply. Cheap plants did not sell readily, but azaleas and Easter lilies were popular. Easter lilies, carnations and violets sold best of the cut flowers.

OGDEN, UTAH.—This year sales were greater than for the Easter of a year ago and prices were better, says F. J. Hendershot & Son. The supply of plants was not equal to the demand but there were plenty of cut flowers. Calla lilies, Easter lilies, azaleas, geraniums, etc., sold well but palms and ferns had little call. Orchids and American Beauty roses did not sell readily, daffodils, carnations and Killarney roses proving the most popular of the cut flowers.

DECATUR, ILL.—Fully 50 per cent more Easter business was done this year than last, says John N. Bombersbach. Prices remained as before. The supply of plants was equal to the demand as was that of cut flowers with the exception of carnations. Hardy roses, spireas, hydrangeas, azaleas and Easter lilies were most in demand of the plants. Hyacinths seem to be losing in popularity. Cut flowers all sold readily.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—A 20 per cent increase in Easter sales is reported for this year by Abele Bros. Prices were about the same as a year ago. The supply of both plants and cut flowers was equal to the demand with the exception of cut lilies of which more could have been sold. Lily plants were the most popular and cut lilies and carnations sold best of the flowers.

GREELEY, COLO.—Sales and prices were about the same this Easter as a year ago, reports the Gardner Floral Co. The supply of plants and flowers was equal to the demand. Daffodils, primroses, azaleas and colored tulips were least in demand but there was a good call for lilies, hyacinths, white tulips and spireas.

CANAL DOVER, O.—The Easter business was more than double that of former years, says C. Betscher. Fresh, crisp stock and reasonable prices helped increase the sales.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President;
Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First
Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford,
Conn., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

SEED POTATOES are in good demand.

SWEET and field corns are as yet moving slowly.

ONION SETS at Chicago are selling about as follows: Yellows, $2; Whites, $1.75; Reds, $1.60.

JESSE E. NORTHRUP is still at the Presbyterian hospital, Chicago, and his condition remains unchanged.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Everett Seed Co., a new concern, is preparing to do a big mail order business this spring.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade April 16 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.

PETER HENDERSON & Co., New York, were awarded a gold medal for their exhibit at the National Flower Show in that city.

FOR eight or ten days preceding April 15, cold and rainy weather has caused slow counter trade, but warmer weather April 16 stimulated again the delayed demand.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, has issued a neat booklet giving much interesting and valuable information regarding their specialties in farm seeds.

WHOLESALE seedsmen whose salesmen have been making country towns on their routes have found that it pays them to have automobiles of their own for this purpose.

TEXAS growers of Bermuda onions propose to establish local selling (retail) stations in large cities like Chicago. Ten pounds for 30 cents is a price suggested.

The Late Frank Banning's Business.

The business of the late Frank Banning, gladiolus specialist of Kinsman, O., whose death on March 17 at the age of 53 years was noted in one of our recent issues, will be carried on in two sections, one under the name of Bidwell & Fobes, Kinsman, O., and the other the Perkins-King Co., of West Mentor, O.

Seeds and Plants Imported.

In the introduction to its bulletin on "Seeds and Plants Imported from October 1 to December 31, 1911," the Department of Agriculture calls attention to the collections made by Frank N. Meyer in central Asia. One of much importance, it is believed, is a new durum wheat which was originated at the Bezenshook agricultural experiment station in Russia. It has proved extremely hardy, withstanding the cold at Samara, though other varieties tested at the same time were killed outright or severely injured. Mr. Meyer also found two distinct wild forms of alfalfa, one a bunchy, upward form and the other a very vigorous prostrate form. The same investigator found twelve species of vetches on the steppes of southwestern Siberia. Some are thought to have great promise as forage plants and may be introduced into the northwestern ranges.

"Perhaps nothing which he found will create a more general interest than the Siberian cherry from the Ural district and western Siberia," says the bulletin. "This cherry, identified as a form of Prunus fruticosa, is a low bush not over four feet high, perfectly hardy and extremely drought resistant, so resistant in fact to extreme cold and drought, that it can doubtless be grown throughout the entire Northwest. A plantation of these cherries resembles a tea plantation. The fruits are about the size of currants, are borne in great quantities, and make a most delicious preserve. Not only is this likely to prove a valuable plant as it stands, but two improved varieties have already been produced in Russia and Mr. Meyer has secured these. The possibility of producing a race of perfectly hardy bush cherries by the use of these species is suggested by Mr. Meyer."

Two varieties of large-fruited black currants have been discovered and are thought capable of introduction into the interior of Alaska. A new form of asparagus was found growing on the dry mountain sides in the southwestern part of the Caucasus. The shoots have a special piquancy. Another wild form was discovered in South Africa and is said to be preferred to the cultivated kind. A plum has been introduced from near Naples, Italy, which is described as being three inches long, of a greenish yellow color and a very thin, slender stone. It is said by its introducer to be the finest plum he ever ate.

Dynamite in the Garden.

The Gardeners' Magazine, published in London, Eng., has the following in a recent issue: "It is very doubtful whether dynamite will ever take the place of the spade in gardening, though it may well supplement the work of the plow in agriculture. Experiments are being conducted in several parts of the country. Dr. Herbert Durham has recently worked his garden at Hampton, Hereford, with the aid of cheddite, a form of dynamite. The explosive was placed in holes three feet deep, and though the garden is near the house, and the soil dealt with only a few yards from a glass house, there was little concussion, and no damage, nor was the soil forcibly thrown into the air. The soil was moved to a depth of six feet by the explosive, and it has been estimated that in a couple of hours the cheddite did as much work as a man could have done in a fortnight, and loosened the soil to a greater depth. It is anticipated that the gases generated would kill insects, pests, and add to the fertility of the soil."

Chicago, April 14.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 60 cents per pound; lettuce 22½ cents to 25 cents, small cases; radishes, 20 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 25 cents per bunch; cucumbers, $1.25 to $3.00 per box of two dozen; asparagus, $2.25 to $2.75 for 24 bunches.

New York, April 12.—Cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 65 cents to $2.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, $2.00 to $3.00 per 100 bunches; mint, 25 to 65 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 30 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen; beet tops, 25 cents to 75 cents per box.

Soil Acidity.

Soil acidity is caused by large amounts of decaying vegetable matter generally in muck or sandstone soils, but it is likely to occur in limestone soils as well. We are located on limestone area near limestone quarries, yet in five years we have added enough humus to need correction by adding quicklime. Many agricultural writers mention methods of soil testing. We have never found these of value; we prefer to put the question directly to the crops. To this end we should experiment constantly, as nobody else can exactly fit our case.

We procure common builder's lime and throw it into some shed or place where water cannot reach it. The air will soon reduce this to a fine powder; we are careful to have this well tempered before using it by exposing it to moist air, as under greenhouse benches or in a cellar. For the experiment we can select any partly grown crop, such as a sash of lettuce plants, or radishes, or cabbage plants, and by placing some lime into a sieve as fine as mosquito wire, we distribute the lime directly upon the plants by rapping the screen as needed.

We use a fair even covering and immediately wash it off and into the soil by a good watering. We always aim to have the plants dry before applying the lime to prevent damage. There is danger of damage if the lime remains on the plants over night. Also where lime is placed between rows of plants we prefer to wash it into the soil at once to prevent its caking over night. If after a week or ten days the limed plat is "head and shoulder" above the rest we know the reason and can make arrangements accordingly. Results are sometimes indifferent, seldom harmful, and very often of the utmost benefit. When lime is needed and not supplied we operate at a big disadvantage.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

Horticultural Tariff Schedules.

We are in receipt of a letter from McHutchison & Co., New York, calling attention to the fact that part of the proposed new tariff bill before congress does not correct certain well-known and annoying errors which occurred in the Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1909. Among these they mention the fact that in the old and in one section of the proposed new law one section rates greenhouse plants at 25 percent ad valorem and in another section rates greenhouse stock at 15 percent ad valorem, while the items are the same. The azalea tariff is not specific because while A. Indica is a greenhouse plant, all other varieties are nursery stock. They say, further, that the terms, "greenhouse stock" or "greenhouse plants" are too indefinite, many plants and shrubs which grow in the open air in the south being known as nursery stock while further north the same are known as greenhouse stock. One section rates seedlings of Myrobolan plum at $1 per 1,000 and another rates Myrobolan duty free. The latter section should specifically state whether seeds, fruit, or seedlings are rated. One section rates evergreen shrubs and vines 15 percent and another rates evergreen and seedlings free, but places them under the classification of seeds. This was an error in the last tariff bill and should be corrected in the new one. The old section quoted seedlings of briar roses 3-year-old or less at $1 per 1,000 with rose plants, own-root, 4 cents each. The principal briar rose in our commerce is the Rosa rugosa, a shrub grown from seed and sold as 2 or 3 years old. The tariff decision, made after much expense and three years of trouble to the importers, was that the Rosa rugosa is not a rose. The new tariff should be specific in including Rosa rugosa as a briar rose and dutiable at $1 per 1,000, being sold as low as $4 per 1,000. The new and the old tariff rate hyacinths as clumps instead of bulbs. This should be corrected. When the classification is not clear it opens a large avenue for fraud, the result being that the dishonest firm pays only half the duty the honest firm pays. Under the present tariff honest firms are paying 25 percent duty on evergreens grown by grafting or cuttings, while other firms are getting them in free as evergreen seedlings. The tariff should be specific as to what an evergreen seedling is. Messrs. McHutchison & Co. suggest new readings for Sections 219 and 220, but they omit the word peony entirely and omit the words Germanica and Kamferi as qualifying iris. Thus if the sections as proposed by them were used the very cheapest iris would have to pay one cent per bulb while peonies would be imported at a duty of 50 cents per 1,000.

No doubt the new schedules should be gone over very carefully by custom house officials and committees from the seed, nursery and florist trades.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition

GET INTERESTED, MR. FLORIST, THIS IS FOR YOU!

If you contemplate painting your house this year, it will be well for you to investigate the merits of which I use exclusively in the erection of the large ranges of glass that I erect on private estates and public parks. I have increased my plant to take care of the demands made upon me for this paint by florists in all parts of the country. The Lutton reputation for high class material is back of this product. Send for a sample free of cost and then you will send your order. We also furnish materials for the complete erection of modern Iron Frame Greenhouses. Some of the largest growers in the country will testify to this fact.

PEONIES.

PEONIES.

"Peonies for Pleasure." This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history; soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable Peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and the new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the Peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the Rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink Peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of Peonies for Fall Sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

Frank R. Pierson Gives His Opinion

Thirty-five Years Ago We Built the First House for F. R. & P. M. Pierson at Scarborough, N. Y.

Mr. Pierson Writes as Follows:

I HAVE just been turning the hands of memory's clock back a bit and I find it was thirty-five years ago when we bought the first material from you for some wooden houses 20x100 feet. We thought them wonders then, and they were for those "dark ages."

Ten years later we put up the first Iron Frame ones. They were 20 ft. 6 in. wide and 300 ft. long. We were mighty proud of these houses, and they are still standing and producing as well as the first season they were used.

The thought, however, of these narrow houses makes me smile now, when I think of our seven big Shadeless Ridge Iron Frame houses that you have since erected for me, 55 feet wide and from 300 to 375 feet long.

How do I like them? I have kept on building them year after year. Isn't that answer enough?

Irvington, N. Y.
Des Plaines, Ill.

RALEIGH, N. C.—An increase over the 1912 business is noted in the Easter sales of this year by J. L. O'Quinn & Co. Prices were about the same. More plants could have been sold, although the supply was large. There were not enough violets or lily of the valley and the violets were in poor condition. Lilies, primulas, hydrangeas and spireas sold readily. All cut flowers sold out. The firm mentioned above says it will not handle violets at Easter again unless the growers and commission men quit holding back stock and then shipping in poor condition.

SANTA CRUZ, CALIF.—W. E. King reports business about the same as a year ago and prices no better. The supply of plants and flowers was equal to the demand. Roses, carnations and violets were most in demand. A fine rainfall has brought the average to date up to half the normal standard which is 24 inches. Snow shows now on the hills and this will check the fruit. The trees are now in bloom.

Inferior Ventilating Apparatus

is a nuisance. Proper ventilation is most essential in a well conducted greenhouse. We furnish ventilating machinery to the largest plants in the country. Let us fit your houses with Advance Ventilating Apparatus and fixtures. Write for Catalog

Advance Co., RICHMOND, IND.

SEDALIA, MO.—An increase of 20 per cent in Easter sales over those of a year ago is noted by the Archias Floral Co. Prices were the same. Plants were in sufficient supply, as were cut flowers with the exception of carnations and roses. Moderate priced plants sold well. Thursday and Friday before Easter the weather was too cold for satisfactory handling of stock. Saturday and Sunday it was milder but in the afternoon of Sunday there were hard rains. Extremes of weather have been the rule.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Easter sales were greater this year than last, according to the Wm. Blackman Floral Co. Prices were about the same. The supply of plants was just about equal to the demand. American Beauty roses and violets were in short supply. Lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas, and all bulbous stock as well as plant baskets sold well. Of the cut flowers roses, carnations, sweet peas, violets and daffodils went the best. Plants were never in better condition. Lilies were a little shorter than in former years.

PUEBLO, COLO.—Business and prices were about the same as last Easter, says G. Fleischer. The supply of plants and cut flowers was equal to the demand. Easter lilies, azaleas, hyacinths, spireas, tulips in pans and daffodils sold well. Roses, tulips and snapdragons were the most popular. Carnations and violets sold poorly. We had a heavy windstorm with snow three days before Easter. Saturday was fine, but Sunday there was a bad sandstorm.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—A 20 per cent increase is reported over last year's business by E. V. Brown. Prices were the same. The lily supply was short but other plants were plentiful. In cut flowers violets and roses were scarce. All blooming plants sold well and there was a good call for all cut flowers. Ideal weather facilitated delivery.

POMONA, CALIF.—Sales were 20 per cent greater than in 1912 with prices a very little better, says O. Roessner. There were sufficient cut flowers but the supply of plants was not equal to the demand. All plants in bloom sold well. Lilies and carnations sold best of the cut stock.

If You Want to Plough Your House Our New Cantilever Construction Has Great Advantages.

TO plough in a house filled with columns is almost impossible.

At least, it is so difficult, that after one attempt with the whiffle tree continually catching in the columns, preventing ploughing close—you give it up in disgust.

For vegetable or sweet pea and violet growing, it is a great saving to plough.

This new Cantilever construction reduces the number of columns 25 per cent and in some widths 50 per cent.

Another thing about it is, you can locate the columns practically where you want them to meet your ideas about walk locations.

It's the least arbitrary of all the constructions.

Fewer rafters and fewer purlins are used.

It has no tension trussing

In spite of all its many advantages, it costs no more than the regular standard flat rafter constructions.

It's worth looking into carefully.

The growers are taking hold of it better even than we anticipated.

Faults of the Grower

Paper by S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., Read Before the Lancaster County Florists' Club, April 17.

The Wholesaler's View.

When your president wrote and asked me to read a paper before your club, I felt considerable hesitancy in accepting the invitation, as it is rather a delicate thing to do—to point out the faults of the other man's way of conducting his business. It is human nature to criticize, in fact it is a very easy habit to fall into, and if one is not careful it soon becomes chronic. But you have asked me to tell you of your faults as we see them, of the things that help to make or mar the sales of your stock, and I am going to pay you the compliment of believing that you want what you have asked for; so I will try to give you my honest criticism and hope you will accept it as well meant advice and not as though it were given in a spirit of finding fault with your own individual ideas and methods.

To begin with, I do not think that we try to help one another enough with a word of encouragement here and there as we go along the path of life, which is of infinitely more benefit than a word of condemnation, not only to the one who may justly deserve it, but to the one giving it as well. We are all glad to be praised when we do something which we think is good. How often do we hear from a grower when we are able to make him good returns; but when his returns are not satisfactory, we hear from him very quickly and there is not very much time wasted in telling us about it. It is an easy matter to kick, sometimes too easy, in fact we get far more kicks than we should and not enough praise when lots of times we really deserve it. By this I don't mean to say that the growers are the only ones who don't give praise when praise is due. The retailers and the wholesalers are just as negligent in this respect as any one, probably they don't really consider the other fellow as much as the grower does.

On a dull market, often times the returns are so low that we are disgusted with them and hate to send them out but we have no alternative.

We have no wish to send out low returns any more than our growers care to receive them, and it is through no wish of ours that the stock brings low prices, as it is certainly to our advantage to get all we possibly can out of the stock and get as high prices as possible for every flower that comes in to us. It is certainly as hard on us as on the growers to have to sell stock at low prices, especially as we are selling them on a commission basis. And we assure you that when the letters of commendation or praise do come to us, they are certainly appreciated and they stimulate us to even greater efforts on behalf of our growers, and we know that they make for a better feeling and understanding between us.

The mutual good feeling among the florists, particularly among the growers, is improving each year—hardly a grower but who is willing to live and learn, to profit by his neighbor's successes and mistakes, and meetings such as these where you get in closer touch with each other are of splendid value and benefit, for there is always something to learn. Then there are our shows—what schools of learning they are—particularly such shows as the National Flower Show which has just taken place in New York! I know that every florist who attended this show went home feeling that it was time and money well spent, and I was very much pleased to see Lancaster so well represented—it shows progressiveness. Not only was it of advantage to see the exhibits, showing how stock could be grown, the newer flowers and plants (many of them novelties never before seen), but the greatest advantage of all was the opportunity the little man had to get in touch with the big men of the trade on an equal footing, conversing with them, getting their ideas and helpful suggestions, and going back home with the knowledge of how to do bigger and better things, knowledge that he could not acquire in years of hard grinding.

Not only are these shows valuable to growers, retailers and wholesalers in the way of being a source of knowledge and information, but they are one of the greatest advertising mediums we have for the flower business. The publicity committees that are working in the different cities are doing all they can, and mighty good work too, to bring the flower business before the public. But the flower shows are infinitely more lasting and more far-reaching in their effects than ordinary advertising. By this I do not wish to convey the idea that I do not think advertising pays, as I am a very firm believer in advertising. But for that reason, if no other, these shows should have your firm and hearty support, and your individual attendance whenever it is at all possible.

This may be digressing from the subject somewhat, but I hardly think so, as these are points every florist, whether he is a grower, retailer or middleman should consider. Don't be afraid to leave home now and then to see what the other fellow is doing. Many a grower finds at the end of his year that he has come out with little or no profit, owing sometimes to his staying at home entirely too much and not understanding how properly to market his stock or to get it into the best possible shape for marketing. Then, too, often a grower does not know just where he is making or losing money, owing to the fact of his not keeping accurate records as to production per plant or per square foot. Then sometimes a greenhouse is run in connection with another enterprise and not kept separate, only in a superficial way, a way that is more harmful than helpful. Accurate accounting, even if it does take a little more time and expense, is bound to pay in the end.

Every year the competition in the flower business becomes keener and the supply larger, which makes it necessary to grow the stock and market it in the best possible manner. Having succeeded in growing fine, first class flowers, it is equally, if not more important, to see that they are not spoiled by poor handling. This often happens, and is due to the grower's not looking after the details and appreciating that it is just as important to market flowers in the very best up-to-date manner as it is to produce the best flowers in the first place. How much quicker and better will a box of flowers sell that comes in to the market carefully graded and packed and put up in attractive shape? That shipment commands a buyer, particularly on a dull market, far more quickly than the shipment that is carelessly graded and packed even if the stock in this shipment be well grown and some of the flowers be of even better quality than the first shipment. If this condition be allowed to go on day after day from one year's end to the other, it means many a dollar out of the grower's pocket. Don't be afraid to watch the details; the larger things will then fall into line naturally and take care of themselves. Be particular about the grading; keep the quality up and do not allow poor stock to creep in. It is very important that rubbered or wired carnations should not be put in the same bunches with the better blooms, as a few wired or rubbered blooms will spoil the sale of the bunch. Some growers feel that this is not important but every grower who does this, loses out in the end, as these bunches of carnations will not sell only on a scarce market, and almost all the time it is a buyer's and not the seller's market. Let the poorer blooms come in a lower grade. Details carefully watched spell success in any line of business.

I believe most growers and wholesalers do not keep in close enough touch with each other. Advices from the wholesaler as to the market conditions, or advices from the grower as to his future crops, probable quantity and when these particular crops will come in, are points that are too often ignored and too little considered. Often a crop will come in which could have been marketed to much better advantage had the wholesaler known about it and understood what to expect, whether this was a new crop coming on or simply an extra big cut. The knowledge of this would help the commission man to plan for better sales of the stock, perhaps even give him an opportunity to advertise it, and the results would more than offset the trouble and expense of the grower's writing or telephoning about it. If it were possible for the wholesalers and growers to visit each other oftener, it would be a great help to each of them and would save many a misunderstanding, bring them closer together, each one helping the other, pointing out when and where things could be improved and having many things considered and talked over that otherwise would never come up.

Then, again, there are times when a grower thinks he knows better than the wholesaler when he should send his stock in. This is a very great mistake as the commission man's business is to know when the goods should be sent in and when there should be the best market for them. Of course sometimes his judgment is at fault and things do not work out just as he has expected, but on the whole, he is certainly in a better position to make the decision than the grower. And when the grower does not have confidence enough in his commission man to be willing to abide by his decisions in these matters and persists in sending in his stock as he thinks best, then he had better send his stock to some other market, or else try and get a little confidence from some of his neighbors who do back up their commission men, feeling that that is the only way to do in sending stock to any wholesaler. More than once have we instructed our growers to send in their stock on a certain day or days and then have had them disregard these instructions and send in the stock when they thought best and in such cases the flowers have probably arrived too late to get the benefit of the best market.

The wholesale markets are coming more and more each year to do their business early in the morning and this brings us to another important point. Get your stock in early in the day for the man who has his shipment in early is the man who is going to have his flowers sold first. There is no doubt about this. And if you wish the best results you will have to conform to these conditions, even if it does mean starting your day's work an hour or two earlier. The old saying that "the early bird catches the worm" is only too true in this case.

I would like also to speak of the tendency which some growers have to hold back stock, hoping for big prices, particularly at holiday times, although this is something which has troubled us more in the past than it has for the last year or two. This is a very bad practice and can never be anything but detrimental to the sale of the stock. As an illustration of this, I remember one Memorial day when a large shipment of carnations came in to us from one of our growers. Some of the stock was beautiful—fresh and well grown flowers, but a large proportion of it was stock which showed that it had been pickled and this poor stock condemned the whole shipment. This particular grower must have lost $200 or $300 by holding his stock, where if he had sent it in when it was good and fresh, even on a lower market, he would have come out far ahead of the way he did. It was a lesson to him, one which he never forgot, and he told us afterwards that he would never repeat that mistake.

We would very much prefer to have to notify our customers that we had sold up clean and were not able to take care of their orders or were only able to send them a portion of their order, rather than to send them stock that we knew would not hold up for them, stock that would be bound to make trouble. Pickling is a thing of the past and any grower who indulges in it, does so at his own expense. We cannot force these goods on the buyer of today. I have said practically nothing about the growing and it would be a hard matter for me to give you any advice on points on which you were at fault in this respect. When the stock comes in I can tell whether it has been well or poorly grown, or whether it has been grown in too high or too low a temperature or various points of that kind, but naturally it is the conditions governing the marketing of the stock with which I am most familiar. But I would say that here again in the growing is where details count, and where good results will not come without proper attention to details. Well grown stock always shows that it has had the attention and care that are necessary to produce good flowers and without such attention and care it is very seldom that good stock is grown. Sometimes it is possible to get good stock without attention to these details, but this is more good luck than good management, and it is very seldom that a grower is able to repeat such a chance success.

These are the points which our experience as wholesalers has brought most forcibly to my attention, and I hope you will consider them as they have been given—hints and suggestions made in a spirit of frankness and helpfulness and not in the spirit of fault finding. I believe that every man wants to improve his business whenever and wherever he can and is glad to get pointers even if they are in the line of criticism and not praise. We too have our faults and are glad to be told of our mistakes so that we can seek a remedy for them. But our interests are identical and there can be no separation of our motives, our ambitions and our results. One hinges on the other and the more we try to help each other with friendly criticism and deserved praise as well as blame, the greater efforts we will both be able to put forth. Give us your confidence and support, believe that we are working for your best interests as well as our own, and then there can be no question of our mutual success and profit.

CLASS C.

Hontsch & Co. (J. P. Dahlborn, Weehawken Height, N. J.)—The largest possible heating surface in boilers. They can, even in full operation, easily be cleaned in a few minutes. The intense heat under the firebed, which in many other boilers is not only wasted but increases the running expense by burning out the grate bars quite frequently, is, in the Hontsch boiler, utilized to heat the water flowing through the grate bars, thereby greatly increasing the heating capacity. These so-called water-bars further make the burning out of the grate an impossibility. They prevent the formation of clinkers. The Hontsch boilers have a sheet-iron cover with patent lining, which, no matter how intense the heat, always remain cool, thereby proving that every particle of heat is utilized. The Hontsch boilers can in half an hour be made larger and this can be done by the fireman, with the help of a common laborer. We recommend that the Hontsch boiler be awarded highly commended.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.—The combination of self cleaning direct fire surfaces with a long downward fire travel is the principle of the construction carried out in the Kroeschell boiler. The hottest gases impinge against the crown sheet fire surface, then follow the downward course along the smooth inside surfaces, leaving the boiler at the coolest part through the rear of ashpit base. In this manner the fire travels along four surfaces, transmitting the heat units to the thin waterways, on the two sides, the top, the front and the back of the boiler. At high temperatures the gases travel from the combustion chamber along the extensive surfaces and enter the chimney at a lower degree of heat than any other boiler made. One of the cardinal points in designing this new type of heating boiler is the arrangement of all fire surfaces as direct self-cleaning fire surfaces, thereby insuring 100 per cent efficiency at all times. The fire surfaces consist of entirely crown sheet and perpendicular surfaces upon which it is impossible for any soot or ashes to accumulate. These highly effective surfaces insure the greatest absorption of products of combustion before the gases pass off to the chimney. The large combustion space enables the gases to fully expand, causing perfect and complete combustion, thereby producing the maximum amount of heat units per pound of coal consumed.

The deep fire-pot carries a sufficient amount of fuel to last over night or through the day. Any kind of fuel can be used, hard coal, soft coal, wood, gas or oil. The boiler is made of rolled plate material, which has a tensile strength of 55,000 to 60,000 pounds to the square inch. This same material is used for locomotives and high pressure steam boilers because of its great strength and quick heating transmission. This boiler is built in one piece, and is a complete unit when shipped. No assembling of parts. No brick setting is required. We recommend that the Kroeschell Bros. Co. boiler be highly commended.

S. Jacobs & Son, Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Metropolitan patented greenhouse gutter which, the manufacturers say, "We believe is without question the most modern and best gutter made in the world. Patented iron wall construction, which we believe is the only construction whereby the side wall of a greenhouse can be erected without the use of nails or screws for holding the side bars. Liquid putty machine, which is a practical novelty. Iron frame greenhouse construction, the feature of which is that any florist can put up with less trouble on all iron frame greenhouses than a wooden greenhouse." We recommend that the entries exhibited by S. Jacobs & Son receive no award.

King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.—Improved flat rafter greenhouse, doing away with much shadow cast by heavy rafters, of ordinary flat rafter construction. New iron eave plate for greenhouse having the advantage of more of the metal being exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse, thus making the eaves more ice clearing than others in use. Also superior arrangement of drip pan, improved shape of eave, throwing the water away from the side wall of the house.

THE ROSE.

Commercial Roses.

Paper read by Eber Holmes at the annual meeting of the American Rose Society at the National Flower Show, April 7, 1913.

In considering the subject, Commercial Roses, the first question which might arise, would be: "What is a commercial rose?" The answer to this would naturally be: "One that can be grown and sold at a profit." The next consideration would be the requisites of a rose to stand the test of our exacting cultural and marketing conditions. Among these would be freedom of growth in an ordinary temperature, profusion of blooms of good quality that open freely in winter and have enough substance to make them of service during the summer months, ability to withstand disease, vigorous foliage to resist mildew, and straight leaves which can be easily syringed to dislodge red spider as distinguished from the crinkly foliage of some kinds. It is almost impossible to find a rose that answers to all these qualifications, but we have some that average up well the year around, and others that are very good at certain seasons of the year.

We may divide commercial roses into three or more classes. First in importance as regards numbers and cash returns are the ones grown from under glass for cut flowers, of which the Killarney is a type. This class may be subdivided into the ones which may be grown profitably by almost all growers with ordinary treatment, another lot which does better in certain localities or under prescribed treatment, whether it be purely cultural, or growth on a particular stock, or on their own roots, and still a third division that can only be grown by experts, and then not always profitably.

The next is the pot plant class which embraces roses that are forced for Easter and spring sales. This is a large and important class and is growing in numbers and varieties yearly. Nearly all these may be planted outdoors after blooming and will thus do double service. After beautifying the home, they will, with ordinary care, adorn the garden for years to come. The advantage of these pot roses is that they may be planted outdoors at any time during the summer with the certainty of their living.

The third class includes the ones grown for permanent planting outdoors, including dwarf bedders and climbers for every purpose and location. The possibilities of the last two classes have hardly been appreciated yet by the growers and public in this country, and the magnitude of the demand which might be created along these lines is undreamed of by the majority of our growers. Every one knows of the beauties of roses. The working man and his family admire them as much as the millionaire, but how few people know that they can grow them and possess them. Educate the public in this desire, and supply the demand with good, live stock, clean, and likely to grow, in varieties suitable to your locality; give advice on planting and the care required; encourage the school children and school garden movement and help the local society to hold a successful rose show. These are only a few of the methods that might be employed to help the interest in the rose outdoors; others will suggest themselves to any one of you and all should be made use of.

To return to the first and most important class to the majority of our members, I feel that cultural directions would be out of place at this time and in this audience. There are, however, problems that confront us all, and it is in the hope that a discussion may result to our mutual benefit that I mention a few of them. First, in building the large modern houses, is the danger from windstorm exaggerated or not? One of our foremost growers asserted recently that he had ceased to worry about plant diseases and insect pests. He could control these things, but felt his insignificance in a windstorm. I am speaking now of ordinary high winds. I do not consider the recent occurrences in the Middle West, for it is not to be expected that greenhouses will be left standing when towns or villages are blown down, and there is no discredit to any greenhouse builder whose work collapses under these conditions. But how few houses, properly built, go down under general conditions? We lose glass, but in most cases this can be traced to the vibration of the roof owing to improper or insufficient bracing or supports. Given a rigid roof, good putty and paint, and glass well laid and nailed, there is little loss of glass in windstorms. There is trouble if careless workmen leave the ventilators open during high winds. There is seldom any loss in very cold weather, for the glass is frozen down. It is a good plan to keep boards of the proper size, or stout paper, to stop a hole instantly from the inside.

The methods of growing have advanced greatly in the past few years, but it is questionable whether the manner of selling has kept pace with the production, and there is room here for the experts to point the way to success along this line, and the man who can perfect some plan for concerted good, will confer a lasting benefit on the whole country.

To get down to cultural methods, the first consideration is to know your plants—to find out their peculiarities and requirements and to cater to their special needs. Do not condemn a variety because you cannot grow it successfully. Some of the worst mistakes have been made in this way. I could point to a number of condemned varieties that are making more money on certain places today than any other kind. In regard to growing young stock for sale, I think there is little money in it, except for specialists. It pays to graft your own supply, but beyond this, the average grower should proceed with caution. The best is none too good for yourself, and you cannot sell the poor stock.

By very carefully selecting the best, and growing for your own requirements only, you can build up your plants and flowers to a high standard. Plant as early as possible so that you may get a large, well established plant by fall that will produce much better results through the winter than a late planted one possibly could. It has been stated that early planted stock is liable to black spots in the fall. If this is so, why is it? The answer is, reckless treatment and over-confidence—the pitfall of so many in all walks of life. Early planting means large, vigorous growth, heavy foliage which has demanded and has been receiving lots of water; condensation is heavy on cool evenings and fire heat should be applied as soon as the first indication of its need is apparent. Enough air should be carried at all times. The late syringing and damping down should be dispensed with and heavy cropping should not be attempted. Do not put on too heavy a top dressing to keep the soil unduly wet and avoid any check in growth, and the danger from black spot will be reduced to a minimum.

The question of American grown manetti for grafting has been raised at times and seems in a fair way of being solved in the near future. With a good irrigating system and labor properly directed, I think that we can compete with European grown stock, both in price and quality; at any rate, we must protect ourselves and the advancing prices of the past few years, caused in a great measure by a scarcity of good stock, is a cause for our concern.

Can roses be grown successfully under glass near the salt water? And if not, why not? We hear of locations where an overcoat is needed on nights in July. Would not reducing the air and running steam through the houses offset these conditions? And would the extra cost of fuel be prohibitive? The establishment of dairy farms in connection with rose growing opens up the question of feeds and bedding. Taking up the former, it has been taught by certain people for the past thirty years that manure from cows fed on brewers' grains was injurious to roses grown under glass. Having added 30 cows to our establishment, we have been looking into this question and can find no specific case where any injury can be traced to this manure. Several experiment stations have written me their opinion that there is no danger in this manure and that some other cause was at the root of the trouble.

CHAS. H. TOTTY'S EXHIBIT OF THE NEW ROSE MRS. GEO. SHAWYER

Taking up the question of bedding, brings up the use and abuse of sawdust for this purpose. This we do not like in the soil, and by common consent, it has been condemned in manure, but the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, in Bulletin No. 158, states that in three years' experiments with roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and sweet peas, the plants were not affected adversely by the sawdust, but that by comparison with manure which contained no bedding at all, and with other which contained stalks, the sawdust manure showed an increase in cut blooms. However, we intend to go slowly in both of these things until we have proven things to our own satisfaction. Urine and the liquid from all manure, as you all know, is very valuable, and an effort should be made to preserve it, either by water-tight tanks or a good absorbent. Horse manure is used with fair results by a number of growers, and where cow manure cannot be obtained, this material makes a fair substitute.

All roses for winter forcing must be kept in active growth in the fall to insure best results. Some varieties need more heat than others to accomplish this, and if they are allowed to become dormant, there is no hope of starting them again until spring. All varieties will stand a higher night temperature in the spring and will grow rapidly if well fed and watered. Some growers reduce the night temperature 2 degrees in the spring to keep up the quality of the flowers. These are minor matters which individual growers can work out for themselves. Some kinds cannot be cut until well developed to get the best results; others must be cut in the bud or they will not be salable. There is no doubt as to the remarkable results obtained by pinching back roses to produce long stems or an immense crop at stated times.

The question of profit is sometimes a debatable one. A variety that will produce a long stem on one growth may be as profitable as another that gives many more flowers with short stems. Generally speaking, the kinds that produce flowers freely are the best, as they can easily be manipulated to get the best results. In times when the market is poor, the long-stemmed flowers, as a rule, suffer the greatest depreciation in value. The slim growing kinds can be planted a little closer together than the others, and a little more may be gotten out of the ground in this way than if they were planted at the regular distance.

The cost of production is a serious question and should be carefully considered. The three most important items are: First, labor; good men must be selected and assigned to their proper places and all must be carefully directed or there is a heavy loss on this item. I would place interest on the investment, depreciation account and taxes next in order to be taken care of, and here it is important to build wisely and well, without unnecessary expense to increase the first cost and to keep all in proper repair that there will be no need of rebuilding. The third heavy item is the coal bill, and here again is a chance for loss to creep in through buying inferior coal or the various wasteful methods sometimes practiced by firemen.

Unfortunately, up to the present time, the cost of production has not been properly figured in the selling of our goods. There is no doubt that the man who can produce the best flowers at the cheapest rate can control the market and make the most money. It should be our aim to all be in the best class and to produce good flowers at a low price, which can be bought and spread broadcast over the country to the advancement of our art and the pleasure of our citizens.

PLANT NOTES.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphid and red spider accumulate very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plants all the ventilation possible but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation, such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spider than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. Where the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and deepen the color of the flowers.

Callas.

As the summer weather approaches the callas will cease producing flowers and will require a rest to prepare them for another year. They should be dried off gradually until they become "dust dry," when the roots will be thoroughly ripened. If watered the calla will grow all the year round, but plants grown this way will not produce as many flowers as those that are rested. Those grown in pots can be laid on their sides in the greenhouse until all danger from freezing weather is passed, when they can be removed outdoors, still placing the pots on the side in full sunlight. Those grown on the bench can be lifted with as much soil as possible and placed under the bench where they will dry out gradually and later planted in the full sun outside in a dry location, and as soon as thoroughly ripened shaken out and stored until wanted to start for another season. The yellow calla, Richardia Elliottiana, is being grown more largely and the blooms have been used the last winter in many elaborate decorations. The culture of these is in pots and similar to the older varieties.

Marguerites for Winter.

To have good marguerites for winter flowers the plants must have a good start in the spring. For large plants the stock should now be in 2½ or 3-inch pots and growing vigorously, but if the cuttings have not been made they can now be propagated in a cool bench and good-sized plants grown, or stock should be secured at once. Do not allow these plants to become pot bound but shift them into 4-inch pots as soon as they require it and pot very firmly. Keep the plants pinched back that they may branch more freely and keep all flowers and buds picked off. For many years these plants were grown in the open ground but in some localities they have been attacked with a club root in field culture and inside culture has become necessary for success. A cold frame in which the pots are plunged is the culture successfully practiced by many growers. In late summer they should be potted in large pots, 8-inch or 9-inch, or planted in the bench in good rich soil, so that they will be well established for fall and winter flowering. The plants grown in pots are more prolific in flowering and the size of the flowers can be maintained with liquid manure. Aphid should be kept down by fumigation and the leaf miner is a very destructive insect if once firmly established, but persistent spraying with strong nicotine solution will eradicate this pest.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouses. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground the success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or discing and then leveled. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once for heavy rains occur at this season which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering and if in boxes or the bench cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 15 to 20 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers, and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica for blooming next spring May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed to start well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve as the seed is very small and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation and until the plants begin to make growth keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly some soils will often become caked or scaly and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed pot in 2½-inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole house and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry, yet they are easily over-watered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked; frequent and light waterings are the best.

A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for a free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished. There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May or June planting when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Annuals in the Flower Garden.

There has been such a rapid improvement in the various flowering plants which are annually raised from seeds, that it is now almost possible to dispense entirely with the plants that one had to rely upon a few years ago for carrying out schemes of floral decoration in the flower garden. It is not prudent nor desirable to entirely do away with these old-fashioned bedding subjects, but, by making proper use of annuals in positions which are really suitable for them, a great deal more variety may be introduced into the general scheme of garden decoration. There are, of course, many annuals which cannot be employed in prominent positions, as their flowering season is so short. These should be relegated to mixed borders in the kitchen garden or vacant places in shrubberies. Those selected for filling beds in the immediate vicinity of the dwelling should flower during the greater part of the season.

Among the most useful flowers for this purpose are the antirrhinums. They are not really annuals, but are best so treated. To make the best use of these the seed should be sown in heat in February or early in March. When the seedlings are large enough, they should be pricked out into boxes. While in boxes they must not be allowed to become crowded or starved, and should the beds which they are intended to furnish be occupied with spring-flowering plants they should be again transplanted in the reserve garden. Here they will make strong plants, and be capable, when transferred to their summer quarters, of flowering all through the season. The intermediate class is generally the most useful, although in filling large beds with mixed colors both the tall and Tom Thumb kinds may be intermixed with admirable effect.

The annual delphiniums are also invaluable for massing in beds, and need similar treatment to that recommended for antirrhinums. Lavateras are excellent for massing in mixed borders. These should be sown in specially prepared stations where they are intended to flower; they are invaluable for decorative purposes indoors. Clarkias are also useful for the mixed border and need much the same treatment as lavateras. Salvia Blue Beard is a most effective annual, which may be employed in various ways. It makes a pleasing combination with Hyacinthus candicans, which are intended to flower; they are invaluable for decorative purposes indoors. Clarkias are also useful for the mixed border and need much the same treatment as lavateras. Salvia Blue Beard is a most effective annual, which may be employed in various ways. It makes a pleasing combination with Hyacinthus candicans, which mixed border, but to obtain the best results they should be grown in pots until flowering commences. Asters, Coreopsis, Phlox Drummondii, Phacelia campanularia, petunias, nigellas, nasturtiums, nicotianas, centaureas, and annual chrysanthemums are all very useful annuals for summer bedding. It is a good plan to may be dotted over the bed. A mixed bed of salpiglossis always calls forth admiration. Nemesias cannot be excluded, as they are always admired either in beds by themselves or massed in their various colors in mixed borders. East Lothian stocks may be made use of for filling beds by themselves, and they must be sown early in the spring, pricking the young seedlings out singly into small 60-sized pots when large enough, and planting them out in April. They will commence flowering in July, and continue to bloom until the end of the season.

Dianthus Heddewigi is exceedingly valuable, and must also be sown early and treated liberally to obtain the best results. Gaillardias will respond to annual treatment if sown early enough and treated liberally. These are invaluable for massing in clumps in the mixed border. Dimorphotheca aurantiaca deserves more extended cultivation, as it will bloom continuously during the greater part of the season if planted in a sunny situation.

Godetias deserve recognition in every garden, as they offer a wide range of most brilliant coloring. These may be grouped in separate colors in the mixed border or massed in several colors in beds or narrow borders. Lupins should be grown specially for the mixed border. Linum grandiflorum rubrum is always admired, and it is most effective when grown in large groups in the mixed border. Eschscholtzias, of which there is now a charming variety, cannot be excluded. Cosmeas are very effective in the have a border of annuals of sufficient size to include many kinds of varieties, as, apart from those mentioned above, there are a host of others deserving of attention.—E. HARRISS, in the London Gardener's Magazine.

Bookkeeping.

Paper read by J. Able, before the Kentucky Society of Florists.

The subject of this paper, bookkeeping, I must explain in the beginning, contains unlimited possibilities, which it is hopeless for me to try and reach. The broad and constantly improving methods of bookkeeping are as large in scope as the business of the florist, and it would require as much time and patience for me to try to cover them, as it would for you to reveal the many phases of your business—even more so, because bookkeeping, being strictly detail work, cannot be generally covered in a satisfactory manner. In this paper, I dwell chiefly upon the value of perfection in bookkeeping, its relation to the trade, holding it in rein up to the minute, and preserving it for a general back glance before surveying the future.

It is naturally understood that each of us has his own system of bookkeeping. That alone prevents me from dwelling upon the detail, and confines me to those traits of the work which deal with all systems. My experience in bookkeeping in the flower business has been entirely with the retailer's side of the question, but I believe that all branches of the business have about the same fundamental rules. Bookkeeping, as we all know, is the operation of keeping accounts in such a manner as to give a true record of the transactions of the business. This enables us to find out at any time with absolute certainty any particulars regarding the business. It does not matter how small it may be, or whether you are a grower, wholesaler or retailer, you will find that the successful management of your business can only be attained by keeping an accurate record of your transactions. We should realize that we must have these records to be able to show the condition of the business at all times. They enable us to look ahead and see where improvements can be made in decreasing losses and increasing profits of the future. It helps us to economize in many ways, which we would never think of, were it not for the knowledge we gain by looking back over our past records, and discovering little loopholes for losses which had escaped our attention at the time of the transaction.

It will also have a tendency to make us hustle, especially when we find that our sales are not coming up to our standard, or possibly when the running expenses are too large in proportion to the profits. It shows us what we have on hand, what we have received, what we have paid out, what we owe, what is owing to us, what losses we have incurred, what profits we have made, and a great deal of other information which is of such vital importance to the business man. Bookkeeping, consisting mainly of daily routine, dealing with figures day after day, is one of the most monotonous parts of the business. This being the case, the assistance of everyone should be given the bookkeeper, especially in the detail work that must pass to him through the hands of the proprietor and his employees. I would like to suggest at this time several ways of simplifying the work. First of all, the clerks should realize the importance of the sale-ticket, especially when it is a charge. It should be explicit in every detail, giving particular attention to the name and address of the party to whom the charge is to be made. You will often find it necessary to refer to these tickets at some future time, and, by having them filed away properly, you are always ready to straighten out any misunderstanding which might arise.

Another great assistance, which the bookkeeper now receives from the majority of the growers, is the ticket rendered with each delivery. It does not matter whether the goods are to be charged or paid for at the time of delivery, this itemized ticket or invoice is a great help. This is especially so, when you are buying from a number of growers, because you are unable to determine the amount of stock you receive each day and the cost of same unless you have these tickets to refer to. The grower should keep duplicates of these tickets, by all means. This alone will assist in correcting any mistake which may have been made by either party. Another suggestion would be the use of the loose-leaf ledger. Owing to the fact that quite a number of the personal accounts have so many items, and, consequently, rapidly fill your pages, by using this system, it enables you to transfer these filled pages into another book or binder, as it is called. Thus having only the active accounts to handle, considerable time and labor are saved.

It is in bookkeeping as in anything else, the saving of time and labor is an important matter to be considered.

In conclusion, I would like to impress upon you the importance of your books relative to the business. No matter whether it is large or small, you should at all times pay especial attention to the conditions of your books. Our leading business men of today will undoubtedly tell you that their success is not only due to their efforts put forth in building up their trade, but largely to the fact that they have kept a watchful eye over their business through their bookkeeping.

Ornamental Cacti.

The Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin (No. 262) on "Ornamental Cacti: Their Culture and Decorative Value," which is likely to prove of great value to all those interested in the culture of these plants. The article is written by Charles Henry Thompson, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, well known as an authority on the subject.

Mr. Thompson reviews the history of the cactus plant so far as it is known and points to the fact that with the exception of a few species of Rhipsalis it is strictly indigenous to the western hemisphere. The introduction of the plant began with the early Spanish, English and Dutch settlers, and twenty-two species are recognized by Linnæus in his "Species Plantarum," published in 1753. Only within the last half century has any interest been manifested in America in cacti, however. Collections by Dr. Geo. Engelown volume of sand." The bulletin emphasizes the necessity for using a clean, sharp knife in making cuttings where propagation is made in this manner instead of by seed. The plants are soft in tissue and filled with water, and any bruise or mutilation is likely to be attacked by rot fungus. The cuttings should be placed in a dry atmosphere until a kind of cuticle has formed over the cut surface, which takes a day or two.

"Grafting," says the bulletin, "is easily accomplished throughout this whole group of plants. The possibilities of uniting both species and genera seem to be unlimited. For a long time it has been a practice to graft Epiphyllum on Peireskia or some upright, stiff-stemmed Cereus in order to produce a more decorative bush plant. The rattail cactus (Cereus flagelliformis) is frequently treated in the same manner. Aside from its ornamental possibilities, grafting may be resorted to profitably as a means of propagation. It not infrequently happens that a plant becomes decayed at its base, and when all evidence of decay or disease has been removed there will be so little healthy tissue left that it is next to impossible to get it to grow as a cutting. Such a piece may be grafted on a healthy stock and the plant be preserved, if the growing tip is intact."

As cacti thrive from southern Canada to far down in South America it is apparent that different sorts must be treated differently. Epiphyllum Rhipsalis, a few species of Phyllocactus and some species of Cereus require practically the same moist atmospheric conditions as tropical orchids, but the soil should be very loose and easily mann laid the foundations for those at the Missouri Botanical Garden and Dr. Asa Gray added to the botanical garden at Cambridge, Mass.

Although the seeds are generally fertile only a small per cent germinate and develop into mature plants, because of unfavorable environment. "The best soil for growing from seed," says Mr. Thompson, "is a thoroughly decomposed sod mixed with at least its drained to reproduce as near as possible the dry, semi-arid conditions under which they grow naturally. It should never become absolutely dry, however. Pruning may be done at any time but preferably when the atmosphere is dry. A temperature of from 60 degrees to 70 degrees should be maintained.

"The one disease," according to Mr. Thompson, "from which cacti suffer more than any other is rot. The plant body is so saturated with water that it forms an excellent medium for the growth of this disease. Any cut or bruised place presents the most favorable point for infection. Water dripping on a plant for even a short time may induce infection. By far the greater number of the plants receive the infection through their bases or roots whence it works upward through the center of the plant.

"The chief attractiveness and beauty in cacti as a group is the remarkable symmetry of growth in the individual plants. The columnar and most of the genera of smaller cylindrical or globular forms have clean-cut, longitudinal, parallel angles, ribs or wings, and located on them at regular intervals are the buds or pulvini, which bear the plants or flowers, and from which side branches may be developed. The coloring of the epidermis of the plant is frequently very attractive. A single plant is well worth the little time and trouble required for its keeping. It occupies a very small amount of space in comparison to its weight, which is an advantage in many instances.

"Cactus roots naturally penetrate deep into the soil, and at the same time some of them spread widely from the plant stem. This tendency is necessarily limited in potted plants, and the plant does not receive the nourishment or water that it should have; hence it is always better to place them in the open ground if possible. In the northern states it is necessary that the plants be protected from frost in winter. In such localities room in a greenhouse may be set aside for this group of plants and beds made in the native earth to receive them. In the warmer southern or southwestern portions of our country a very large number of cacti will thrive out of doors the year round."

THE CARNATION.

Carnation Matchless.

The new carnation Matchless, to be introduced next season by the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., has every appearance of being well named. The vase of blooms shipped from Queens to the annual exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association held at Peoria, March 5, came out in fine shape after their long journey. It has good size, fine form, pure color, strong stiff stem and the fragrance and keeping qualities are excellent. As seen growing by the writer early last November the plants were in grand shape. The house was then a picture of fine large white blooms carried on long stems and the plant had every appearance of being a good producer. Its sponsors write that the Eastern experts are very much pleased with its action and that the advance sales are already exceedingly large.

The Spring Work.

It is now time to begin preparations for getting the young stock out in the field. In localities where the weather conditions will permit and the land can be worked properly, the last of April or the early part of May should find the work of planting out well under way. It is very important, especially with plants intended for planting inside the latter part of July or early in August that they be given an early start in the field so as to make as much growth as possible and get well rooted before the hot weather begins. If well hardened off before being set out the young plants will stand any cool weather we get after the dates mentioned and be greatly benefited by it. We find that quite a number of growers who are very busy at this time with spring stock are very apt to put off the planting out of the young carnations from day to day. This is a serious mistake, because there is no other period when the young plants will suffer and get hard wooded quicker than at this time, owing to the rapid growth which now takes place with carnations as well as every other kind of plants.

If it is not possible to get the plants out on time, then remove them from the greenhouse to cold frames, where fort put forth to have a good cut of blooms for Memorial day, a time when, according to the records of the last few years, carnation blooms are extremely scarce and bring good prices. It is now time to put a little shade on the glass, not dense enough to make the house dark, but enough to break the direct glare of the sun. The side shoots on the stems make very rapid growth at this season. These must be removed or the stems will quickly become crooked and the blooms can only be used as short stemmed stock. The temperature of the houses, both day and night, is also a very important matter. The natural temperature for carnations is a moderately cool one, but to keep the plants in perfect health dampness in the houses at any time must be guarded against. There are many the sash can be taken off during the daytime, and left off at night when the weather permits. Make sure to guard against heavy rains, which are injurious to young carnation plants. By doing this they can be held back safely for several days. A few days before planting out go over the plants and top back any shoots that are lengthening out. This will help the young plants into root action quickly after planting and save having to do this work for two or three weeks after being set in the field. The preparation of the land for planting is a very important item. If it was plowed last fall it should now be dragged, the clods broken up and the surface made as level as possible. Be sure that all the hollow places are filled up, so there will be no chance for the water to stand in pools after heavy rains, because conditions of this sort start the stem-rot and check the root action of the plants.

When working the land it should be borne in mind that it is better for the plants and easier to do the planting if the ground is worked close to the time you are ready to set out the plants. So arrange the work that the planters can follow up close to those preparing the ground. While attending to the young stock the flowering plants on the benches should not be neglected, but every ef-nights at this time of year when the thermometer will register the regular temperature without firing up at all. This is all right if there is ventilation on and the atmosphere is dry, but if there is an excess of moisture in the air it is far better to steam up a little. Another very important item to insure a long season of good blooms is to watch very closely the temperature early in the day, so that the houses do not become too hot and dry. Ventilation should begin as the sun rises, so that by 8 or 9 o'clock, according to the outside conditions, full ventilation can be given.

Mendelian Inheritance In The Carnation.

Experiments recently carried on at the Vermont Experiment Station on the breeding of carnations are summarized as follows by Wm. Stuart, in Bulletin No. 163 of that station:

1. That the commercial carnation as grown by florists is a heterozygote or unfixed hybrid of a cross between the single and double carnation.
2. That the single is recessive to the double.
3. That singles x singles produce only singles.
4. That commercials x singles give practically an equal number of each.
5. That commercials x commercials give very nearly the expected ratio of singles.

6. That commercial and double together closely approximate the required ratio.

7. That the progeny of single x double, of which there were 1,004, were all of the commercial type except four which were single, the presence of which may possibly be ascribed to error in technique.

8. That crosses between single and double carnations were more prolific than were the other crosses, a fact of importance in carnation breeding.

9. That the "bursting" commonly occurring in leading varieties may be largely due to the formation of adventitious buds in the flower, rather than to inherent weakness of the calyx or to unfavorable temperatures shortly before the flowers open. The cause, whatever it may be, occurs at a much earlier stage in the development of the flower.

10. That carnation doubling is due to a variety of morphological modifications of the floral organs.

Minneapolis Manufactures.

Minneapolis, Minn., the seat of this year's convention of the Society of American Florists, is essentially a manufacturing city. It ranks fourteenth among all the industrial centers of the country. Its manufacturers have an annual production representing in value $548,000 for every man, woman and child in the city. The development of manufacturing in Minneapolis, however, has not been accomplished at the expense of its natural beauties. On the other hand, the wealth of scenery with which nature so generously endowed the city has been preserved and has exerted a beneficial effect upon the upbuilding of the manufacturing business. There are no "sweat shops" or slums in the city. Its manufacturing establishments are models of modern construction, with plenty of light and air.

The first industry to engage Minneapolis was the reduction of the great pine forests of the state to lumber. The Falls of St. Anthony with their tremendous energy were harnessed and made to turn the saws. With the settlement of the fertile country surrounding the city and its planting to grain the falls were made to revolve the millstones, which turned the grain into flour and meal.

Long before the forests had diminished perceptibly and marked the waning of the lumber industry Minneapolis had provided itself with other manufacturing plants to take the place of the saw mills. A variety of industries began to surround the falls and to make use of the power generated by them. The manufacturers have multiplied and their products have increased until now nearly everything within the range of necessity and a large number of so-called luxuries are produced by Minneapolis manufacturers, and their products find their way into the remotest parts of the world. Flour blazed the path for the other manufactured articles and it remains the chief product of Minneapolis. The brands of its great milling companies are known in nearly every household in the civilized world. Linseed products, textiles, machinery and a long list of other manufactured wares are sharing the prominence gained by the city's flour in the markets of the globe.

Visitors to Minneapolis find St. Anthony Falls and the grain mills which line both banks of the river at that point one of the interesting "Things to See." The mills have a combined capacity of 84,000 barrels of flour per day. The largest flour mill in the world stands among this group of flour producers. Minneapolis has the largest grain elevators and they give a distinctiveness to the city's sky line no matter in what direction the visitor looks.

Only a few blocks from the milling district are the Chamber of Commerce and the Flour and Corn Exchange buildings. It is in the Chamber of Commerce that the tremendous tonnage of grain used in producing the city's flour is bartered. More cash wheat is sold in the Chamber of Commerce than in any other place in the world. The Falls of St. Anthony have been affectionately nicknamed "The Cradle of Minneapolis." It was to them that this great manufacturing city owed its existence.

Minneapolis.

The regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held at the Park Greenhouses, Minneapolis, being called to order at 8:35 by President Will; 19 present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Gust Malmquist of the state fair committee made a report outlining what had been done in the way of premiums. — Olson of the same committee also reported. Bernard Busch of Lyndale avenue and Fiftieth street was proposed for membership and on motion the by-laws were suspended and he was duly elected. Mr. Hanson of the dance committee reported that all arrangements had been made for holding the annual ball at the Junior Pioneer hall April 17.

Theo. Wirth spoke of the National Flower Show which he had recently visited, also of the plans being made for the S. A. F. convention to be held here. Mr. Olson also spoke of the National Flower Show in New York which he attended. Louis Boeglin told how he winters red pennisetum. The next meeting is to be held at Holm & Olson's store May 13. The members present inspected the park greenhouses and contents very thoroughly, after which they partook of a sumptuous repast prepared by Mr. Wirth.

Flood Relief in Ohio.

The Cleveland Florists' Club committee appointed by President Graham to investigate the conditions in Ohio and to give relief to those in need, has made very good progress, but there is still much to be done. John Evans, who with E. G. Hill and August Poehlmann, was appointed by President Farquhar of the S. A. F. as an investigating committee, passed through Cleveland recently and held a meeting with the local committee, consisting of A. Graham, H. A. Hart, Geo. W. Smith and Frank Friedley. The field was gone over thoroughly and methods discussed.

The list of donations to date is as follows: Arthur Doeble, Norwalk, O., 1,000 geraniums, 1,000 salvias, etc., etc.; Matthew Macnair, Providence, R. I., $10 in cash; Louis Epple, N. Pelham, N. Y., $2 in cash; Geo. L. Ely, Clyde, N. Y., 1,000 geraniums; Stubbs Nursery, Augusta, Ga., five boxes mixed plants asparagus, salvias, coleus, etc., etc.; L. G. Barbier, Dunkirk, Ind., Boston ferns, 500 geraniums, 400 chrysanthemums; Woodbury & Woodbury, St. Johns, Mich., 10,000 carnation cuttings, callas, daisies, etc., etc.; R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., 10,000 geraniums; Wauseon Floral Co., Wauseon, O., 500 salvias, etc., etc.; J. F. Shed, Westerville, O., 500 salvias, geraniums, pelargoniums, etc.; A. Graham & Son, Cleveland, O., geraniums, etc.; J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., Godfrey callas, chrysanthemums, carnations, etc., etc.; Adam Graham, Cleveland, O., $10 in cash.

The names of those helped are not to be published. Never was there a more opportune time to help a man who has lost all of his stock, for with Memorial day only a few weeks away he can quickly turn plants into cash. If you know of any florist in this state who is in need of help, a man to whom a few hundred or a few thousand plants would be of benefit to put him on his feet, let us know. If you have surplus stock of plants and want to know where to send them to do the most good, let us know. If you are a retailer or a supply man, or if you have no plants to offer, a small amount of cash will help pay expressage on a box of plants to some brother florist, who has met with misfortune in the flood. What is to be done must be done at once. Reports have been very hard to get from this state or this should have been attended to sooner. Address all communications to Cleveland Florists' Club,

FRANK FRIEDLEY, Sec'y.

Help Asked for Hans Jensen.

At a meeting of the Omaha Florists' Club, April 10, and at the request of Ed. Williams, president of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, it was decided to send a call to the florists of the state for a voluntary cash contribution for the relief of one of our florists, Hans Jensen, at 49th and Leavenworth streets, Omaha, whose picture was recently published showing him standing upon the ruins of his greenhouses and home, destroyed by the tornado Easter Sunday, March 23. He stands there with bruises and scratches, barely escaping with his life, the fortune of nearly a life time shattered to pieces, without any means of income to take care of his wife and two children.

We believe that all florists should be willing to contribute in such sum as they feel able to give. Quick action is asked, for the money is needed to start up for the spring trade. Therefore send your check by early mail to Lewis Henderson, secretary, 1519 Farnam street, Omaha, Neb. All money will be properly accounted for and immediately turned over to Mr. Jensen. LEWIS HENDERSON, Sec'y.

Old Trick Revived.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Hoping that our experience may be of value to others, I would be pleased to have you publish an account of a smooth swindle which was worked on us last week. About 9 o'clock on the morning of April 11 a young man called at the store and representing himself as a new decorator recently employed by one of the principal dry-goods stores, asked for prices on a quantity of roses and carnations and the rental of a number of palms and ferns which they wanted for a window decoration.

After obtaining our prices he left, stating that he would see "how much the boss would stand for." Shortly before noon he returned and placed an order for a quantity of roses, carnations, greens and the rental of a number of palms and ferns, and wished them delivered to the store the following morning. Upon leaving he said that he might just as well take such of the cut flowers as he could carry along with him. Upon delivering the palms the following morning we found that we had been "worked," as they had no such man at their store. As a result we are out about $15 worth of cut flowers.

This man is about 30 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, about 150 pounds in weight, with a smooth-shaven round face; nose slightly Roman. He is a smooth talker, but hardly what one would call a "hot air" artist. He wore a rather light tan overcoat and a brown telescoped soft hat. Thinking that possibly he is obtaining these flowers to dispose of in some nearby city and may try his game elsewhere, I would like to bring this to the attention of the trade and thereby hope to be able to apprehend the culprit. Any information will be thankfully received.

THE daily newspapers report that the Belgian labor strike, affecting many spring shipments of florists' and nursery stock, will terminate April 24.

ONE excellent way to use the surplus cash of the Society of American Florists would be to divide it among the members who suffered serious loss in the recent floods and tornadoes. If there is any better way, let us know about it.

Tariff Revision.

All florists and horticulturists who have any suggestions to make as to changes, if any, in the present tariff bill which is now before congress, should send them in at once (if they have not already done so) to Chairman W. F. Gude, of the S. A. F. tariff committee, 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C. Mr. Gude will be pleased to do all he can to further the interests of the florists and horticulturists, and members of kindred organizations, but is at a loss to know what action to take until those interested make their wishes known.

[The chairmen of the entire tariff committees of the three national organizations, seedsmen, nurserymen and florists, should meet and unite on schedules as they did with the Payne-Aldrich bill, when they secured the most satisfactory recognition ever given the trade.—ED.]

Society of American Florists.

At the adjourned meeting of the board of directors, held in New York, Tuesday, April 8, 1913, the report of the judges of the trade exhibition held at the convention in Chicago, was approved. Vice-President Theo. Wirth reported that he had leased, by order of the board of directors, the Armory and Coliseum in Minneapolis, Minn., from August 15 to 23, for use of the next annual convention. The vice-president also gave a detailed report of the outdoor plant exhibit, stating what progress had been made in this important project. It was decided to rent this space at 10 cents per square foot for the inside bedding space and 5 cents for the borders, intended for perennials, shrubs, etc. Mr. Wirth stated that there would be 13,000 square feet in this garden available for bedding plants and 17,000 square feet available for shrubbery, making the total available space 30,000 square feet. Mr. Wirth was empowered to hire such additional assistance as is necessary and render a bill to the S. A. F. who will reimburse him for any outlay he may make.

Secretary Young, who was unable to be at the meeting of the board of directors in February, was instructed to make a trip to Minneapolis at an early date so that he might become entirely familiar with all the possibilities of the convention. On Thursday, April 10, the board had another meeting, when ex-President Vincent brought up the question of the sufferers from the recent flood in the middle West and those who had much stock destroyed should have as much help as possible from this society. The plan outlined was that we co-operate with them as far as possible and ask them to make their wants known and publish the fact that certain sufferers were in need of different kinds of stock. Those having surplus stock might communicate with a committee appointed for the purpose and find out the names of those who are in need. It was finally decided that a committee of three be appointed with power to act without expense to the society. This committee is to gather information in regard to the sufferers and to recommend, in their judgment, those most in need of it. John A. Evans, E. G. Hill and August Poehlmann were appointed as such committee.

A PLEA TO GROWERS.

One of the principal attractions of the coming convention to be held in Minneapolis, August 19-23, 1913, will be an outdoor plant exhibit, as shown by plans recently published in the trade papers. Applications for space should be made at once to John Young, secretary, S. A. F., 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city. The plants should be shipped the last week in May, addressed to Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn. (Outdoor Exhibit). Freight charges must be prepaid. The plants will be planted, and properly taken care of by expert employes of the board of park commissioners, and every exhibitor can feel assured that his exhibit will be well taken care of at no other expense than the rental space paid to the S. A. F., namely, 10 cents per square foot for the inside bedding space and 5 cents for the borders, intended for perennials, shrubs, etc.

Every grower is earnestly requested to participate in this exhibit. Novelty and superior varieties of any and all classes of plants are desired. Enough plants to fill one bed should be sent. The plants will be left in the garden until fall and the exhibitor will be permitted to display a sign of his firm. These signs must be made of uniform size and will be furnished at cost price by the Superintendent of the S. A. F. exhibits. Even at this date several growers have taken space to assist in making this outdoor exhibition the success it deserves to be.

DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION.

John Bauscher, 104 Chicago street, Freeport, Ill., offers for registration the following plant: Geranium, American Beauty. Description—American Beauty geranium originated in a novelty collection. It is a vigorous grower. Stocky in growth; has a more bushy habit than any others. Its foliage is of a green with a brown zone in leaf, leaf slightly corrugated; it grows about 12 to 15 inches high. The form of the flower is similar to that of S. A. Nutt, differing in color, which is that of an American Beauty rose.

TRIAL GROUND COMMITTEE.

President Farquhar has appointed W. F. Gude, F. R. Pierson and Wallace R. Pierson a committee to represent the S. A. F. in the proposal to establish a national trial ground for roses at Washington, D. C., by the United States Department of Agriculture and to do what they think best to further the project either in the name of the S. A. F. or in conjunction with any other societies that may be interested.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

American Gladiolus Society.

REPORT OF COLOR CHART COMMITTEE.

The color chart committee of the American Gladiolus Society, after examining all the available charts, recommends the adoption of the Reper-toire de Coleurs as the official color chart of the society.

A. C. BEAL,
ARTHUR COWEE,
Committee.

GLADIOLUS TRIAL GROUNDS.

As the time for gladiolus planting is near, the committee on nomenclature again desires to call the attention of members of the society to the importance of their support, and especially in the contribution of bulbs of varieties, the names of which are duplicated, as well as varieties which have been renamed. Three hundred and eighty-five named varieties and seedlings have been tested on the trial grounds. It is known that there are at least 450 named varieties in the American trade which we have never tried. In other words, we have tested less than half of the varieties grown. It is impossible for us to determine whether seedlings are distinct unless we have all the varieties. Have you sent bulbs of all your varieties to the trial grounds? Your committee feel that this particular part of their task is even of more importance than the registration of new varieties, and unless the requests of your committee are heeded, the advancement of this work is delayed, and results naturally expected by the members from their committee are not secured.

A. C. BEAL,
ARTHUR COWEE,
LEONARD JOERG,
Committee.

D. 2, Finleyville, Pa.

Pittsburg.

SCARCITY OF STOCK.

There is still a scarcity of flowers of all kinds, but the weather is turning warm and we expect enough stock within a few days to take care of all customers. Carnations are still very scarce and prices are a little higher than usual. Roses are not too plentiful and just enough are coming to supply the needs. Sweet peas are also in limited quantities, and the quality of these is getting lower. Yellow daisies are here in abundance. Mignonette is the joke of the wholesale markets. Lily of the valley has also become scarce, and the only staple flowers that are in abundance are lilies. Some very good snapdragon is still coming in, and the demand for this is very good. Calla lilies are plentiful and are taking well. Sunburst roses of a fine quality can be obtained now without any trouble. The Mrs. Ward rose is coming in well also, but does not take nearly so well as does the Sunburst. Cattleyas and Gardenias are both in abundance and are of fine quality. Smilax has been very scarce of late, but all other greens are being thrown away by the armload. Violets stopped arriving a week ago, but they are not missed very much, sweet peas taking their place to some extent. We are expecting the arrival of miniature gladioli any day. American Beauty roses are coming very nicely and most of them are of a very good quality. The wild smilax season is over now and what little is on hand is not good.

NOTES.

The decorations at the Zieger Co. and others at the automobile show were very attractive. The Zieger Co. did the greater part of the work. Among the decorations were 100 imported tropical song birds.

The new rose Mrs. Geo. Sawyer has arrived, but has not become very popular thus far. Pittsburgers, it seems, will always stick to the Killarney, as they think there will never be anything to surpass it.

A. T. Lorck of Allison Park has decided to grow nothing but carnations next season, his bulb stock being a failure. The carnations Mr. Lorck is cutting now are excellent.

F. H. Westhoff, the rose grower of Allison Park, is contemplating the putting up of a few new houses.

Karl Koenig is consigning some very fancy lilies to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

F. A. Suter is consigning some very fine sweet peas to the McCallum Co.

Mrs. Porter, the florist at Copeland station, died Wednesday, April 18.

Jos. Haube reports a big rush in funeral work.

FINE WEATHER HELPS TRADE.

Trade has been quieter since Easter but the recent fine weather has made a big improvement. The quality of cut flowers is very good. The W. & H. Bruno Floral Co. is sending in some roses and carnations that are hard to beat. Violets are becoming off color and will soon be over. Sweet peas, stocks and antirrhinums are seen in larger quantities than before and find a ready sale.

NOTES.

The past winter has been one of the mildest, but by present appearances one of the hardest on perennials, shrubs and roses. Hollyhocks, fox gloves and canterbury bells are in most cases completely killed out, and only a few in favored positions survived. Weigelia and lygustrum are badly killed back. Hardy and climbing roses also suffered severely. The prolonged January thaws, combined with heavy rains and followed by 15 below zero, seems to have done the mischief. Landscape gardeners and nurserymen are having a busy time this spring replanting not only frost killed stock but that which the last ice storm destroyed. Numerous shade trees have to be replaced. Besides this, the extra large amount of new work going on this year, and the scarcity of skilled labor, will make it quite a problem to do it all in an efficient manner.

The Montreal delegation to the International Flower Show, New York, was said to be the largest from any city in the United States or Canada. There were also delegations from Ottawa, Toronto, Brampton, London and Winnipeg. The exhibition was really great and fully repaid visitors for the time and expense. Among all the big things one stood higher than any other. It was the exhibit of roses on 200 square feet by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and the vase of Killarney Queen by the same firm. We quite expected to see big things but these two exhibits surpassed our most sanguine expectations.

The local seedsmen are in the midst of their busy season. Their files are full of orders and it will be some time before the last customer gets his order filled. Field seeding of onions, parsnip, salsify and the like has begun, and if the weather keeps warm many more varieties will be started. L.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Twenty-five members of this club made a visit to the greenhouses and seed establishment of Geo. W. Park at La Park, Pa., Thursday, April 17. The greenhouses are in charge of E. W. Eyer, who grows some 600 varieties of plants in addition to the immense stock of bulbous and hard wooded stock found on the grounds, quite an undertaking for one man. The seed houses were a genuine hive of industry with a modern printing establishment turning out 600,000 of Park's Floral Magazine every month. Some idea of the business done here can be formed from the fact that one day's mail brought orders for over 500 tuberous begonias, that over a million gladioli bulbs are sold at retail by mail every year, and every imaginable variety of seed and mailable bulbs are sold in the same proportion.

After coming back to Lancaster, a meeting of the club was held at which every member but four was present. S. S. Pennock of the Pennock Mechan. Co., Philadelphia, was the essayist and the attraction. His subject was "The Faults of the Grower in Growing and Consigning His Stock." It was exceptionally well handled, bringing out quite a discussion that has practically put an end to the pickling of stock in this section, and has determined the grower who grows less than 5,000 plants for bloom to consign his stock, to stick to from one to three varieties so that he may have them in reasonable quantity.

Thos. Fries read a paper on Easter stock which was well received and discussed. A committee was appointed to select a place for our summer picnic and make all arrangements.

Another committee was appointed to work out a co-operative system of buying and report at the meeting in September for action. After the meeting a large delegation escorted Mr. Pennock, Jas. Brown, of Coatsville, and C. P. Barnard, of Northbrook, safely through Lancaster's "White Way" to the station.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Some New Jersey Florists.

H. Schmidt, a well known florist of Fulton street, Weehawken, has bought the greenhouses of the late Chas. Zarembo, Church lane, New Durham. It is understood that Mr. Schmidt will remove the glass that he now has at the Fulton street place and re-erect it on the Zarembo property, taking possession this summer. The Zarembo range has long been noted for its fine geraniums and there is a good and well flowered stock of them there now. Mr. Schmidt is well spoken of by members of the craft and it is believed that his new venture will be successful.

J. H. Fiesser, of North Bergen, who specializes in table ferns, has a great stock of them coming on. If we said millions it might appear to some people like exaggeration, but it looks that way to us, with houses filled with seed flats and men busy picking them out and transplanting. He also has a good stock of Dorothy Perkins roses, hydrangeas, geraniums and other bedding plants.

Other New Jersey plantsmen who are showing good stock in bedding plants are Charles Menne and August Menne of Church lane, Weehawken.

A new store is being erected by Rudolph Schwoerer of Hoboken, who will soon move to 108 Third street.

Elizabeth, N. J.

J. J. Brummer, who was with Henry Leahy for twenty years, from the time he left school until a year and a half or two years ago, has now a neat and commodious flower store of his own at 1155 Elizabeth avenue. He is doing a good business, carrying also a good line of seeds. He is a young and energetic man and his prospects look good to us.

A visit to the Elizabeth Nursery Co. April 18 showed that everybody was literally on the jump. Trees and shrubs of all kinds were being loaded and shipped out as fast as they could be handled.

The retail store of J. E. & A. G. Hutchinson, 227 Broad street, is one that might well attract attention in a metropolitan city. It is well located, has good arrangements and carries good stock.

George Wolfe of Summit, who has had experience in the cut flower business at that place, has recently accepted a position with John F. Martin in the Orchid Shop, 290 North Broad street.

A week of extremely wet weather has retarded the business of nurserymen as well as seedsmen. A. F. F.

King Construction Co.

W. J. Muth of Lansdowne, Pa., has been appointed representative of the King Construction Co. in Philadelphia and adjacent territory. Mr. Muth has been connected with the wholesale florist business for over twenty years in that city and is therefore well acquainted with the requirements of the trade. Growers in the Philadelphia territory can reach Mr. Muth by mail at Lansdowne, Pa., or through the general office of the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.

BUSINESS GOOD.

Business has been good the past week but stock of all kinds with a few exceptions has been very plentiful. Roses are seen in good supply everywhere and some fancy stock is obtainable. Killarney and White Killarney are arriving in fine condition and some fancy My Maryland are to be had. Richmond are moving freely and fancy long stemmed American Beauty roses are having a good call and clean up well. The shorter grades of American Beauty are more plentiful and are being sold in large lots at bargain prices. There are plenty of carnations to go around but the prices might be better. Evidently some of the dealers must have a large surplus of carnations, for a retailer in a nearby state writes that he could buy all he wished at $5.00 per 1,000, but it was probably from some other market, for the prices asked for here have been much higher. Lily of the valley has been very scarce and has sold in some instances as high as $5.00 per 100. Orchids are none too plentiful and the better grades sell quickly at $7.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are in good supply and the best are moving freely at $1.50 to $2.00 per 100. There is a great oversupply of short stemmed sweet peas but these are being sacrificed at bargain prices. Snapdragons of exceptionally fine quality are arriving in quantities. Spanish iris is very plentiful but lilies and callas seem to be holding their own. There are a few home double violets arriving as well as a number of home grown singles. Gladioli have made their appearance and some large shipments of Mrs. Francis King are now arriving from Florida. Trailing arbutus can be seen prominently displayed at some of the stores, but they are moving well, some bunches bringing as high as 20 cents. Ferns have dropped a little again in price but a shortage in fancy stock is expected soon. Smilax is scarce and some houses are asking $2.50 per dozen.

Fred Hoerber says that the insurance on Hoerber Bros.' greenhouses, which were recently partially destroyed by the heavy storm, has been settled very satisfactorily by Florian D. Wallace, who carried the risk. A carload of material for Hoerber's new stack has been delivered and building operations at Des Plaines will commence soon.

F. Jerome's many friends are pleased to hear that Mrs. Jerome is recovering from her recent illness and that she will soon be able to be about. Mr. Jerome is better known in the trade as the manager of the American Importing Co., with offices in the Temple Court building, South Dearborn street.

Percy Jones had an unusually good Saturday, on April 19, when the force was on the jump filling the many orders that were booked. This firm is building up a fine shipping trade in both cut flowers and supplies, and now has a long list of desirable customers.

Erne & Klingel have had a very good week and succeeded in disposing of nearly all their stock at good prices. They are still receiving regular shipments of the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s choice Killarney, White Killarney and My Maryland roses.

Bassett & Washburn are having a good run on American Beauty roses of which they are cutting quite heavily at present. Trade at this store has been good all week, April 19 being an exceptionally good Saturday.

John Michelsen, with the E. C. Amling Co., expects to see a shortage in fancy ferns before Memorial day. The Amling Co. is showing a new pink snapdragon that is unusually fine and is grown by A. A. Frey.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s baseball team opened its season at Joliet last Sunday, April 20, when it defeated the Elks of that city by a score of 4 to 2.

Frank Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., returning home from the National Flower Show in New York saw the Naps defeat the Sox here by a score of 9 to 2 on April 19.

Zech & Mann have disposed of several shipments of magnolia blooms the past week, and are now handling lupines in large quantities.

The Hughes Plant Co., on Douglas boulevard, has a nice lot of seasonable shrubs lined along the front of the greenhouses and they are moving rapidly.

John Kruchten is handling a supply of Oscar Leistner's natural prepared oak leaf wreaths as a side line which promise to be in big demand for Memorial day.

R. Parker, the American Importing Co.'s city salesman is now quite often called "Gold-Letter Dick."

Chas. W. McKellar is another one of the local florists who is planning on making the trip to the S. A. F. convention in Minneapolis next August by auto, providing the weather is at all favorable. His bookkeeper, Miss Marie Olmert, will leave soon for a cruise among the Thousand Islands.

A. L. Vaughan left on April 20 for Milwaukee, Wis., to receive treatment for rheumatism at the Sacred Heart Sanitarium. John Zech, who had formerly received treatment there, accompanied Mr. Vaughan on the trip, returning home the following Monday.

Robt. Northam says that trade has been very good at George Reinberg's store the past week, the demand being principally for Richmond roses.

L. Hoeckner, better known as "Stogie," will again operate the flower booths at Riverview park, which opens on May 14.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is cutting heavily in American Beauty roses but is finding a ready market for all its stock.

Dwight L. Harris reports that the Pulverized Manure Co. is having an unprecedented demand for its Wizard brand.

J. J. Leborious of Duluth, Minn., was in the city on business several days last week, returning home on April 20.

Miss Paradise is again attending to her duties as cashier at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store after a week's illness.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had several large shipments of Mrs. Francis King, glad-ioll from Florida this week.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is busy with interior decorations at its Milwaukee avenue store.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. is at present shipping fancy snapdragons to this market.

B. Abrahamson will move into his new store at 915 Blue Island avenue on May 1.

The Chicago Great Western has been named the Official Route of the Chicago Florists' Club to the Minneapolis Convention, August 19th to 22nd.

The Chicago Florists' Club will leave Chicago by Special Train at 6.15 p. m., August 18th, an invitation is extended to all eastern Florists and their friends and families to join them at Chicago and go to the convention in a body.

Special train will be "up-to-the-minute" throughout—including compartment and drawing room and standard sleepers, Buffet Club car, dining cars, Observation parlor, etc., etc.

Several of the members of the league participated in the state tournament which opened at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys April 19. Unfortunately the boys were slated to bowl the opening night, so the reader would do well not to criticize the showing made. In the two-men team contests Price and Berg rolled 957, A. Zech and Lorman 990, and Ayers and Huebner 963. In the individual contest A. Zech rolled 544, Lorman 469, Ayers 528, Huebner 437, Price 511, and Berg 499. In the five-men team contests Huebner rolled 465, Graff 453, Wolf 505, Price 427, and A. Zech 503, making a total of 2,353 pins.

Lawrence Story Washburn, son of E. B. Washburn, junior member of the firm of Bassett & Washburn, will celebrate his second birthday on April 27. Lawrence is at Pasadena, Calif., at present, where his parents are now located, but some day he will return and manage the Bassett & Washburn business in this city.

Frank Beu, H. C. Blewitt, Sinner Bros., A. E. Hunt & Co. and M. C. Guntenberg will move on May 1 to 56 East Randolph street in the building formerly occupied by Henry Wittbold. Henry Wittbold will continue in business and will make his headquarters at 56 East Randolph as before.

Tim Matchen says that the Richmond was the principal selling rose at the Peter Reinberg store during the past season, Killarney and White Killarney not doing as well as in former years.

J. A. Budlong is enjoying a busy season and is cutting heavily in all lines of stock. His lily of the valley is moving quickly at good prices.

Miss Olga Tonner reports a good demand for Spanish Iris which she is now featuring in quantity and in all the leading varieties.

Weiland & Risch are supplying their trade with about as complete a line of stock as any other one grower in this city.

A. L. Randall Co. is handling some appropriate cut flower boxes for Mothers' day that are considered out of the ordinary.

Joseph Ziska's wire department is busy as ever and the men are still working overtime to catch up on orders.

Cook County Florists' Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association was held at the Tavern, West Washington street, on April 17, President Kohlbrand in the chair. D. Papatony, 218 West Madison street, Frederick Chas. Price, 5823 Drexel avenue, George Wieter, 2133 Devon avenue, and Peter Tremulis of Aurora were elected as members and the application of Fred. J. Krauss was read.

Allie Zech reported that the Milwaukee bowlers were entertained here on April 13 when a return game was played resulting in favor of the locals. He also reported that the league had entered a five men team and three two men teams in the state bowling tournament which was to open at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys on the following Saturday.

Peter Pearson, chairman of the publicity committee, read a very interesting paper on advertising, and Mr. Shelton, of the Chicago Car Advertising Co., addressed the meeting for a few minutes. There was some talk about doing a little street car advertising but the matter was deferred until A. Henderson, who represented the Association at a recent meeting of the National Publicity Committee in New York, made his report.

H. E. Philpott gave an interesting account of his trip in England and the National Flower Show which was recently held in New York. An acknowledgment of the donation to flood sufferers which was received from the Flood and Relief Committee, was read at this meeting by the president.

J. J. Leborious, of Duluth, Minn., was in attendance.

BAD WEATHER, LITTLE BUSINESS.

Business for the past week has been rather quiet with only a few weddings or funerals of any consequence and very little activity in the social line. There is plenty of first-class stock to meet all the demands with quite a little surplus. A week of cloudy, dismal weather has discouraged everybody and very little is doing in any line.

NOTES.

A club of this city has offered prizes amounting in all to $375 for the best improvement made on a city lot. The amount is divided into some 40 different prizes—the first of $100—so arranged that the poor man stands as much of a show as the rich. The owner or one of his family must do all the work. No help of any kind is permitted. The mayor has added $75 more to the above amount, his prize to go to improvement of the back yard and alley.

CLUB MEETING.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met at the home of H. Bills of Davenport on the evening of April 10 and in spite of the disagreeable weather every member, with the exception of two, was present. The following officers, elected at the March meeting, were installed, ex-President Ewoldt introducing them: John Staack, Moline, president; Edw. Patton, Rock Island, R. Rohlf, Davenport, — Sorenson, Moline, vice-presidents; Wm. Goos, Bettendorf, corresponding secretary; A. Anderson, Moline, financial secretary; Wm. Knees, Moline, treasurer. Henry Pauli gave a lengthy and interesting talk on concrete benches and cement for greenhouse construction. Edw.

Patton spoke on rose culture and the Chicago Spring Show. A. Anderson, who won a first prize on carnations at the Chicago show, also gave a talk on the show and on the newer varieties of carnations. C. Pruner, our Chicago member, was present and helped to entertain the boys. A fine hot supper and a social hour followed routine business. Wm. Knees of Moline will entertain the members on the evening of May 8. T. E.

TRADE AGAIN NORMAL.

Trade conditions have resumed their normal state, the dullness of last week being only a delayed after-holiday effect. With the resumption of social activities business should be steady until the annual exodus of pleasure seekers to the country takes place. There is a noticeable scarcity of flowering plants in the shops this week. A small lot of giant amaryllis sent in by E. James & Co. is the best offered. A few belated rhododendrons and azaleas help some, which cannot be said of the hydrangeas, coming in, as they do, with half developed blooms. Cut flowers are good and quite plentiful at prices fair to all. Carnations are much improved. Orchids are slow, so is the demand, but a few offerings of Cattleya Mossiae stock, are coming in well and move readily. Lily of the Valley and lilies are in good demand and maintain even prices. Peonies sell well, but are later this season.

NOTES.

At the current meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society the appalling disaster which befell Dayton, O., and vicinity, and the probability that many in the trade would be among the suffering was considered at length. The majority of the members had already contributed to the Red Cross fund, but, desiring as a society that a special effort be made to assist members of the trade in urgent need, a committee composed of Daniel MacRorie, Angelo J. Rossi and E. W. McLellan was appointed to get in touch with the scene of the calamity. The committee was voted $150 for their immediate use; if needed a special fund will be raised in this city from the growers and florists. Proposed new by-laws were given the first reading. E. W. McLellan showed a vase of very select Frau Karl Druschki roses and was awarded 95 points. An exhibit of giant amaryllis by the E. James Co. was given 95 points. The MacRorie-McLaren Co. was awarded 90 points for a fine specimen rhododendron and H. Plath received 90 points for some well-flowered primulas. The judges for the evening were Jos. Thompson, Rich. Lohrmann and Chas. Abrahams. M. A. Hofinghoff was elected corresponding secretary, vice L. F. Taylor, resigned. New members elected at this meeting are: Jas. Cant, Thos. Munroe and Jas. Lindridge, all of Ross Station, Marin county.

Julius Epstein of the California Florists recently executed a very handsome decoration in the Colonial room of the St. Francis hotel, the occasion being a dinner given by his uncle, Henry Rosenfeld. A fine garden effect was obtained by the liberal use of tall palms and shrubs interspersed with groups of azaleas, rhododendrons and kalmias and bordered with primulas. Suspended over each of the twenty tables was a large Indian umbrella from which the cover had been stripped and replaced by an artistic floral arrangement, the ribs being outlined with smilax which was allowed to fall from the ends. No two were alike, a different flower predominating in the arrangement of each umbrella. In the ultimate arrangement much care was taken to preserve the color harmony. The general effect was artistic and elegant and was much admired.

The Retail Florists' Association of this city was reorganized this week with the following officers: Fred Jaeger, of the Fairmont Floral Co., president; Victor Podesta, vice-president; Miss May Hannon, treasurer; Julius Epstein, secretary. Among other matters concerning the retailers the association will immediately move for the passing of a stringent municipal ordinance prohibiting the maintenance of street stands by hawkers for the sale of flowers or other commodities. At the next meeting an active executive committee will be appointed to represent the association before the board of supervision at such time as the proposed ordinance shall be considered. The meeting was well attended, every shop in the city being represented.

Encouraged no doubt by the splendid sales of all recent holidays, much building may be looked for this summer. The Ferneries (H. Plath, proprietor) are being enlarged by the addition of two houses, each 26x150 feet. A. Picetti is putting up six houses 25x125 feet at his new place on San Jose avenue.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is sending in a quantity of Bridesmaid and Druschki roses, superbly done; better blooms have never been seen at the shows. The firm received a carload of glass last week to be used in the construction of several new houses for the growing of more of this stock.

Hogan & Koolesy of Oakland have issued a trade catalog of Holland bulbs for this season. The firm is making a specialty of direct shipments and reports very satisfactory results for the last year.

The San Joaquin Floral Co., of Stockton, was attached last week by Mrs. R. E. Darbee, a local florist and decorator.

ROSES OFF CROP.

Dull, rainy weather had a bad effect on the stock, which has not graded as high as usual the past week. There has been a fair demand, however, and the market has cleared up very well at fair prices. Most of the roses are reported off crop. There are not half as many coming in as there were two weeks ago. American Beauty roses that have been so plentiful were last week behind the demand and stiffened a trifle in price. My Maryland are seen in good shape and from now on will be quite a factor. Lady Hillingdon is still in good demand. It is one of the best of the new roses. Carnations are scarcer. They seem also to have been affected by the adverse weather. Prices have advanced twenty-five per cent. There are still a few Lady Campbell violets but their season will surely close this week. The sweet pea supply does not generally last the day out, shipments from all growers being light. Snapdragon is one of the staples, selling very well. Cattleyas are in good demand, selected flowers bringing good prices. Gardenias move off freely but a large supply keeps the prices low.

NOTES.

The Robert Craig Co. has got together an immense stock of bedding plants, including begonias, geraniums, salvias, periwinkle and other like plants by the ten thousand. It will take considerable hustling to move them all before the close of the season.

At the Leo Niessen store American Beauty roses are a feature. Several of the largest growers of these flowers send their entire cut to this house. Carnations and snapdragons are also seen in large quantities.

The M. Rice Co. is very busy with wedding requisites, and preparations for Memorial day. Magnolia leaves are being sold by the pound in case lots instead of by the thousand leaves.

The second Sunday in May will soon be here but there has not as yet been much said about Mother's day. Now is the time to lay plans to get the public in a receptive mood.

The M. Rice Co. report that unusually large orders have been placed for Memorial day metal goods.

Berger Bros. are strong on sweet peas. Killarney and Richmond roses are also a feature.

Those from this city who took part in the recent National Flower Show at New York are not at all afraid of the great undertaking it will be to go this truly grand exhibition one better. This city as a horticultural center is second to none in this country and with the great convention hall to spread out in where a bird's eye view of the whole display could be seen from the galleries, a garden effect could be worked out with the various exhibits that would surpass anything that has been seen so far.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and H. Papworth, New Orleans, La., were recent visitors.

Baltimore.

The country appeared very beautiful Saturday as a party consisting of I. H. Moss, Mrs. Moss, W. Price and T. C. Stevenson and sister motored to Cowenton and on to White Marsh, the farm of R. Vincent, Jr., and the "home of the dahlia." Mr. and Mrs. Vincent welcomed the party and they were shown over the large area of glass, containing bedding stock of all varieties, including geraniums, coleus, fuchsias, heliotrope, chrysanthemums, cannas in bloom, dahlias in bloom, and hundreds of other plants. Fruit trees in that section and all outdoor shrubbery were found more advanced than in the section nearer the city, and although a biting wind was blowing all reported an enjoyable trip.

The nurserymen's season is practically over. The advanced spring and rains of the previous week caused the work of planting out trees and shrubbery to cease.

Manager J. Perry of the Florists' Exchange is still receiving congratulations on the arrival of a new daughter a few weeks ago.

Boston.

With a rainy cold week business has not improved much from the last report. Carnations still are good property. The echoes of the New York show still are heard, and those who were fortunate enough to be there sound the praises of their New York brethren.

WHOLESALE CONDITIONS BETTER.

There is a decided change for the better in the conditions of the wholesale market. We will not say that this has been brought about by any great increase in demand, but by a light supply of stock. While the scarcity of roses during the latter part of the past week was not as noticeable as the scarcity of carnations, there was a great falling off in the supply of both stocks. Ice boxes that were full of roses two or three weeks ago over night, are now practically empty at the close of the day's business and prices have advanced. In carnations, the scarcity is more pronounced. On April 19, Boston Market, one of the old timers, wholesaled at $3.00 a hundred. The larger and more popular varieties went up to $4.00, $5.00 and even $6.00, which in popular parlance, is "going some," for this time of year. Many florists say that it will not last. If they mean that it will not last all summer we agree with them. However, we are of the opinion that there will be a scarcity for several weeks to come. It has been a mild winter and stock has bloomed freely. In the life of a plant, as in the life of a man or woman, there comes a time for rest. The supply of bulbous stock such as narcissus and tulips, is falling off and anything good wholesales for $2.00 a hundred and up. Stocks are now a feature of the market, good doubles wholesaling at 75 cents and $1.00 a dozen. Another noticeable feature are the snapdragons, many of which, we may add, are wonders compared with the old types. These wholesale at $3.00 a dozen, possibly for more in special stock. Orchids are good property and the best are running high. Gardenias, excepting the very best, are slow and hard to move. Violets are practically out of the running. A few are coming in but they are no longer factors in the market. The plant trade is beginning to loom large.

Monday, April 21.—There was a good market this morning, no stock being in surplus. While the demand for American Beauty roses is limited there has been a slight advance in price. In Killarney and other tea roses there is a stronger demand for the medium grades than for specials, but there is some advance all along the line. Carnations go freely at from $2.00 to $4.00 a 100, with small lots of special stock selling up to $5.00. The week opens with sunshine and if it continues a heavier supply may be expected before April 26.

NOTES.

A writer for one of our evening papers recently interviewed a number of leading business men as to their loss by bad weather. He has figured out that a rainy day costs this city $1,000,000! While he mentions loss to the florists he does not mention the name of any he visited. This investigation of the loss by bad weather was brought about by the recent wet spell, from April 11 to 16, when the sun never shone, and the constant downpour on the sixteenth which brought all business practically to a standstill. In some lines, the trade lost on a stormy day may come in when it clears up, but in others this is not the case and the flower business seems to be one of them. This last wet spell hit hard at the seedsmen and nurserymen, if not in actual loss, in crowding the business of two weeks into one, with consequent confusion and overwork.

The courts of Queens County are looking up the heirs of Daniel Creedon, an aged florist of Woodside, now deceased, once an employe of Alexander Burns. Mr. Creedon was called a "man of mystery." He lived in the lower part of an old windmill on the Burns estate. At the time of his death no one knew of his wealth or his heirs. John T. Robinson, a lawyer of Elmhurst, who was appointed administrator, has been investigating. As a result he found that Creedon was worth nearly $60,000, having accounts in more than twenty savings banks. As a result of advertising for heirs, nearly 1,000 persons have put forward claims. Ellen O'Connor and her three children, of Inniscareen, Ireland, are all that have qualified to date.

Visiting the plant market under the Queensboro Bridge, April 19, we were shown around by our genial friend, Rudolph Wittman of West Hoboken, who, with a number of other New Jersey plantmen, sells there, and found excellent stocks of well flowered geraniums, Little Gem fuschias, hardy roses, hydrangeas and many other plants. All conditions point to an excellent plant trade for this spring. The call for suitable stock for vases and window boxes seems to be on the increase. While hyacinths, tulips and daisies are now mostly seen, the call for geraniums will come later. In the meantime English ivy is a prime factor.

The will of Judge Addison Brown, whose death was reported in last week's paper, was filed with the surrogate of New York county, April 18. He left an estate valued at $800,000. His largest public bequest was $21,750 to the New York Botanical Gardens, to establish and maintain a magazine devoted to American plants. As previously stated, Judge Brown had always been interested in botany and was one of the founders of the Gardens.

Two well known young men of the wholesale district are said to be pass-

Many fine geraniums are now on the market and none are finer than the stock of William Kessler, 113 West Twenty-Eighth street. As a specialist in plants he is always well supplied with the best that can be found in the local greenhouses.

Features of the rose offerings in the wholesale district are the Ulrich Bruner roses which A. J. Guttman is receiving from the range of Victor Zuber & Sons, Whitestone, L. I.

BUSINESS BETTER.

During the past week business has been better. Trade started well at the beginning of the week and continued so until Saturday when, owing to the sudden change to cold weather, it dropped off somewhat as far as store trade was concerned. Funeral work has kept everybody busy. Sweet peas and daisies are becoming favorites for corsage work and make a pretty combination. Small fancy baskets filled with daisies and pansies, which sell for a dollar, are quickly disposed of. Stock is arriving in fine shape. We get a great quantity of carnations, which are large and long stemmed. Roses in all grades and kinds are fine, especially the Sunburst, which is a ready seller. Orchids are of fair quality. Lily of the valley is very good. Easter lilies are plentiful, but there is a shortage of calla lilies. Mignonette and snapdragons are also good.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Association was held April 14 with John Dunbar presiding. R. Salter gave an interesting talk on "The Florist Business of Rochester, Past and Present." Other short talks on the New York flower show were made by — Ogston on "Orchids"; E. P. Wilson, "Roses"; C. Suhr, "Carnations"; George R. Hart, "General Conditions"; John Dunbar, "Shrubs." Afterwards a discussion took place followed by a "pick-up" lunch, provided kindly by one of the members.

Charles E. Sharpe, formerly of H. E. Wilson, left recently for Cleveland, O., to manage a new store opened up by one of the florists there.

H. E. Wilson had a very busy week with enough stock to fill all orders, several for large out-of-town funerals being included.

Julius Berg, with Lion & Co., New York, was in town during the week and called on his usual customers.

The Maur-Haap Company is doing a rushing business in shrubs and nursery stock.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Doran's hall, Greenwich, Conn., April 11, President Robt. Williamson in the chair. Quite a large number of members were present to hear the lecture given by Prof. Jarvis of Starr College on the "Diseases of Fruit Trees," which proved very practical and instructive. A large number of pictures were shown illustrating the methods of pruning, planting, etc., recommended for the reclaiming of old orchards, so long neglected in this state. Prof. Jarvis answered the many questions put to him in a very able and practical manner. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer for his very instructive address, which proved to be one of the best of the season. On account of the Third International Flower Show in New York, where a large number of our members had exhibited, the exhibits at the meeting were not so much in evidence as usual. The following received awards:

James Forster, cultural certificate for splendid specimen marguerite.

A. Wynne, cultural certificate for Schizanthus Wisetonensis.

Thos. Ryan, honorable mention for Hydrangea hortensia.

P. W. Popp, honorable mention for chrysanthemum Seven Oaks. This chrysanthemum, which had previously

AT THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Held in the Grand Central Palace at New York, April 5-12, we were awarded the following Prizes:

First on 100 American Beauties	First on 25 Richmond	First on 25 Mrs. Taft	Second on 50 Mrs. Aaron Ward	Second on Double White Killarney
First on 50 American Beauties	First on 50 Mrs. Taft	Second on 50 Melody	Second on 25 Mrs. Aaron Ward	Second on 100 Red or Scarlet Carnations

THE ABOVE PRIZES

Awarded to Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago and Morton Grove, Ill., is in itself a great victory over all other great growers in the United States. Taking in consideration the fact that we exhibited at the Chicago Flower Show, held April 2nd to 6th, which called for the same amount of Beauties and Roses in each class, receiving the first prize at this show, must be convincing that Poehlmanns are the greatest growers in the country. Shipping Roses a thousand miles in competition against New York grown stock, by so eminent growers as we had to compete against, should leave no doubt of our often claimed statement in public print to the effect. We are the Largest Growers of the Best Cut Flowers in the World. Do not lose sight of one very important fact. Our facilities for shipping and knowledge of packing flowers to travel a thousand miles in such good condition as to be capable of receiving First prize, should prove that we can pack flowers satisfactorily to ship anywhere in a radius of 1000 miles. We are doing this now almost daily. We are picking carnations for regular orders, on the close side, at the greenhouses each lot marked for the order intended; this innovation gives your carnation order special attention with the best quality of stock obtainable.

Our superior quality of Valley, "not only for shows," but for all occasions and every day the year around makes us Valley Headquarters, as we also are for fancy American Beauties, good short, medium and long Roses of all the leading varieties, including the new varieties.

CUT FLOWERS.

In addition to the large supply of prize winning stock in the above items we can supply in quantity extra fancy Spanish Iris, in Yellow, White, Lavender and Purple at $6.00 per 100.

STOCK LESS PLENTIFUL.

The weather has been fair and somewhat cool and stock in certain varieties are less plentiful. White and light pink Enchantress carnations are plentiful while dark colors are scarce. The rose supply has not been so large, especially the white varieties. Sweet peas have stiffened in price, the absence of violets helping materially. Southern outdoor lilac has made its appearance and if the weather warms up the local supply will soon start. Short American Beauty roses are plentiful.

NOTES.

F. H. Weber is down to read a paper at the next meeting of the Retailers Association on "How to Start and Run a Retail Establishment." Mr. Weber having been in the business several years his remarks should prove interesting and instructive.

H. G. Berning is receiving quite a number of short stemmed American Beauty roses of fairly good color. These shipments are now arriving on schedule. The flood has delayed them of late and hurt the sales.

Ostertag Bros. have a fine display of blooming plants. Their stock of shrubs is the largest in the city. They have disposed of these by the car load.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has had a fine stock of roses and carnations and a fair supply of sweet peas which have sold at fair prices.

George H. Angermueller received a nice shipment of outdoor lilac, also some very fancy stock in long stem American Beauty roses.

Foster, the Florist, has started a palm garden in his large basement, serving soft drinks and ice cream.

Charles Cannon is now helping his brother at the greenhouses at Webster.

The Union Market flower and plant stands are now running in full blast.

Chas. L. Frank and wife of Portland were married April 8. Mrs. Frank was Miss Minnie Boyles of Portsmouth, O. In making the trip to the bride's home Mr. Frank encountered many obstacles as a result of the recent floods. He was forced to make a detour of several hundred miles but gallantly declared that he would have built a raft if it had been necessary. They will make their home in Portland, where Mr. Frank has charge of the growing department of Frank Bros. The firm has a fine range of houses 300 feet long, growing carnations and roses. They now have a fine house of Kaiserin.

Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

It is reported that blight is showing on Crystal White Wax onion in Tennessee.

THE warmer weather has given great impetus to counter trade in all the retail stores.

J. C. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, will celebrate another birthday anniversary April 24.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade April 23 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.

SCREENINGS of wheat, oats and barley, when imported from Canada, are now included in the list of seeds, samples of which must be forwarded to the seed laboratory of the Department of Agriculture.

NEW YORK—A call at the office of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., Hoboken, found Marshall Duryea as busy as usual. Henry Nungesser has been in Europe for about three weeks and is likely to be absent for some time.—A week of wet weather, April 11-17, gave the seed business something of a shock, but it was no hindrance to the importers whose stocks were running low, giving them time to replenish.—Henry W. Wood of the firm of T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va., spent the past week in this city and vicinity.

New Seed Drill.

An article in the Sydney, Australia, Herald, describes a new seed drill, the invention of a Sydney man, the distinctive feature of which is that it sows fertilizer 3 or 4 inches below the grain. It is claimed that this makes possible an increased production of 1 to 4 bushels per acre, especially in dry seasons or dry regions by keeping the fertilizer away from the seed and by greatly strengthening the lower roots.

Rochester N. Y.

Jas. Vick's Sons say their catalogue trade passes all expectations. Their store trade has been badly hit by the treacherous weather. This year they have increased their hotbed stock 400 per cent and the asters coming in look well. An increased acreage for the growing of asters and fifteen other different kinds of flower seeds, in which they specialize, has been provided. This summer a specialist from Cornell University will work on their farm and will try out several different methods of production, prescribing on request for those who are having insect disease or other troubles with their crops.

A. W. Gilman reports business very good with unusual demand for Golden Self-Blanching celery and cabbage.

California Rainfall.

San Jose, April 18.—At the present time, the period of California's usual heavy rains has passed. Ordinarily, with but few exceptions in the interim between April 15 and June 1 we have only light showers; the records indicate that the average is something less than one inch. To date, 4.29 inches is the total rainfall for the season. This is about one-third of the normal in this vicinity. Some three weeks ago we received about one inch of rain, which brightened up all crops and gave some of the late-planted lettuces a good start. Otherwise its benefit was merely temporary. At present our farms look surprisingly well, considering this season's very limited rainfall, coupled with the short rainfall last year. This, however, cannot be taken as a guide to the ultimate yield, for from about June 1, the plants will have to be sustained by such moisture as exists in the soil. It is at this period therefore that all crops are bound to suffer, for the lower stratas and subsoils carry but little moisture. To still further aggravate this condition, the orchardists are utilizing all the old wells and every new well that it has been possible to drill; as a result the water level has dropped so low that many of the wells have ceased to supply the pumps. Unless considerable rain falls within the next two or three weeks, the growth of all plants will cease during May. At that time, the first opportunity to prepare a crop estimate will offer itself. It has not been customary to irrigate seed farms in this section—with the possible exception of certain root crops. Several attempts at general irrigation have been made, but it is yet too early to determine to what degree these efforts will be successful.

THE SPRING SHOW.

The spring show of the California State Floral Society was a beautiful exhibition of plants and cut stock and drew many visitors, especially admirers of flowers that grow with only nature's help. Wildflowers, bulbous stock and spring flowering shrubs formed the principal exhibits. Tulips, narcissi and hyacinth grown by amateurs were particularly good and included some fine collections of daffodils of the best exhibition varieties. In tulips and daffodils several of the amateurs more than equalled those shown by professional growers.

William H. Crocker (Wm. Eldred, gardener), was awarded first prize for largest and best collection of flowering shrubs. The large number of varieties shown was remarkable for coming from one private place. Mr. Crocker was also awarded the first premium for collection of narcissi grown under professional care.

To Mrs. M. D. Roberts was awarded a gold medal for a collection of wild flowers consisting of 312 varieties gathered in San Francisco county and vicinity. The arrangement of the collection was quite artistic and received much attention.

The complimentary exhibit of the E. James Co., of Elmhurst, was a pleasing feature and included lilies, rhododendrons, azaleas, amaryllis and ericas. The amaryllis shown were of the strain originated by Howard & Smith, the Los Angeles growers. The blooms were immense and remarkable for the variety and intensity of color.

Golden Gate Park showed a collection of fine palms in tubs and a handsome lot of cinerarias, single and double, that were a credit to the grower, Dolph Holm, of the park conservatories.

The show was held in the Norman Hall of the Fairmont Hotel and was continued for three days, a good-sized crowd being present each day. For the tasteful decoration of the hall and the well arranged exhibits the credit is due Miss Charlotte F. Williams whose efficiency as manager contributed much towards the success of the

The California State Floral Society is composed largely of amateur growers and flower lovers, giving spring shows annually at which liberal provision is made for trade entries. The society is active in advocating park extension and playgrounds, and encourages the popular use of flowers and plants for beautifying the home and surroundings.

T.

Cincinnati.

WEEK BEGINS POORLY.

This week started off very slowly. There was a very large supply of seasonable stock but a very light demand. The close of the week should, however, be very much better, for then grand opera, with its many social functions, will be here. This should cause a large demand for corsage bouquets and flowers for suppers and receptions. The weather the last few days has been glorious and if it keeps up this way for another week the bedding season will be here in full blast. All the growers who specialize in this line locally are well stocked with excellent plants and are only waiting for the weather to open up that they may begin to hustle. On Sunday night there was a frost in exposed places. The supply in the market includes large and adequate supplies of roses, carnations, lilies, including Easter and calla lilies, snapdragons and bulbous stock, including tulips and narcissi.

NOTES.

The relief committee of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, consisting of Henry Schwarz, Wm. Schumann and Wm. Speck, state that the florists have responded liberally to their appeals and that by the end of this week they will have a nice amount of stock for the local florists whose establishments were inundated by the waters last month.

H. Lodder of Hamilton was in town on Monday. He said that so far the efforts of a large force of men in cleaning up their plant had had very little noticeable effect on the appearance of the place.

Recent visitors were: — Roepke of Indianapolis, Ind.; Robert Graves, Adams, Mass., and W. C. True of John C. Meyer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

I. Bayersdorfer of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was in the city for several days showing his line at the Sinton hotel.

C. E. Critchell is again having a very strong call for wild smilax.

H.

Cleveland.

Adam Graham, president of the Cleveland Florists' Club, delivered a very interesting talk on the Panama Canal last Monday evening. Mr. Graham has but recently returned from a trip to the "big ditch," and everyone present was greatly pleased with his talk.

Henry Heepe and — Wiener of Akron passed through this city in Mr. Heepe's new automobile which he purchased in Detroit. They came from Detroit on the steamer and left Cleveland in the machine for Akron.

Peter Stelber lost a horse by death the past week. Another argument in favor of the automobile.

Carl Hagenberger of Mentor, Ohio, is cutting a fine lot of pink snapdragons.

Robert Groves, the fern man, was a visitor last week.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 21.—Mushrooms, 25 cents to 60 cents per pound; lettuce 35 cents to 37½ cents, small cases; radishes, 20 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, $1.00 per box; cucumbers, $1.25 to $3.00 per box of two dozen; asparagus, $1.00 to $2.25 for 24 bunches.

New York, April 19.—Cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.12 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; mint, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 25 cents to 40 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 25 cents to 40 cents per dozen; beet tops, 25 cents to 75 cents per box.

The Montreal Muskmelon.

A recent bulletin of the Vermont Experiment Station (No. 169), "Cultural Studies on the Montreal Market Muskmelon," by Wm. Stuart, gives some interesting information regarding this well known muskmelon. Mr. Stuart summarizes his bulletin as follows:

1. That the Montreal market muskmelon may be successfully grown in the northeastern states, provided the crop is handled as skillfully and intelligently as it is by the Montreal grower.

2. That there are at least two distinct types and possibly a number of distinct strains, although it should be said that the latter point is not sufficiently well established to warrant dogmatic assertion.

3. That the demand exceeds the supply.

4. That though a costly crop to grow, sales prices are so high that the enterprise when successful is a highly remunerative one.

5. That the chemical analysis of the melons affords some guide to the selection of high quality strains.

6. That the development of a uniformly high quality strain is well worth the attention of the plant breeder.

Soil Conditions.

The recent heavy rains, floods and washouts have tremendous consequences on all cultivated lands. Only such lands as are covered by a growth of green plants, such as grass, clover or rye, etc., escaped without material damage. In some cases where manure has been applied and spread the best parts are washed away. In this case we should figure to supply additional plant food by using fertilizers later on. Where lands drain slowly and strawy manure has been spread it is best to rake such litter into long continuous windrows, say, 20 feet apart, to give the land a chance to dry out.

Often grit and gravel are washed in on good lands and if this cannot be removed, one way is to plow an extreme depth and thus bury this debris. Deposits of soft mud often delay the drying of fields and in such cases there is no use forcing the land by plowing while wet. Such a course is ruinous. We must wait until the land becomes friable even if we have to change our plans.

This is a good time to lay additional tile, as grades are easily established in running water, and nothing is more important than perfect drainage. In our own case we can never carry out our plans in regard to planting, as the weather compels us to do quite differently at times. Where spring work is delayed we may help matters by raising more plants, as even such subjects as lima beans, cucumbers and melons can be transplanted, and seeds may be soaked and sprouted in advance, anticipating our work. To sprout seeds we place in flats, sprinkle and stir daily and keep covered with burlap sacks under greenhouse bench. If sprouted too far seeds are lost.

MARKETMAN.

Alunite and Kelp on Soils.

The Bureau of Soils, United States Department of Agriculture, has been conducting investigations showing the effect of alunite and kelp on soils. The results show that the soils treated by each of the fertilizers shows increased growth over the untreated soil. The raw alunite used in amounts of 25 to 500 pounds per acre increased growth from 10 to 20 per cent. The best results were secured with 50 to 100 pounds of potash per acre. The average increase in growth over the untreated soil was 14 per cent. The increase in growth with the treatment of ignited alunite over the untreated soil varied from 35 to 43 per cent, the average increase being 40 per cent. The raw alunite was not as good as were similar amounts of potash as potassium sulphate and 38 per cent and with potassium chloride 31 per cent.

The soil treated by kelp produced a considerable increase in growth over the untreated soil. The increase varied from 17 to 43 per cent. In experimenting with Volusia soil, kelp gave an average increase of 23 per cent, potassium sulphate 25 per cent, and potassium chloride 22 per cent. Each of the potash fertilizers had a beneficial effect on the Volusia silt loam. The raw alunite produced less increased growth than the ignited alunite. In addition to the amount of potash added to the soil by the kelp a small amount of nitrogen and phosphorus proved effective. From the experiment the bureau draws the conclusion that dried kelp and ignited alunite are about as effective potash fertilizers as the salts potassium sulphate and potassium chloride.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Albert Smith, a florist at 491 Gates avenue, was left unconscious on the floor of his store after a battle with a burglar, who escaped. Mr. Smith, who is a cripple, grappled with the intruder after his revolver had failed to explode. Later it was discovered that Mrs. Smith had removed the cartridges because she found their little daughter playing with the weapon and feared she might shoot herself.

HARDY PERENNIALS. The most complete collection of varieties and the largest stock in the country. Our Perennial plants have a National reputation. We spare no expense to have them in the best possible shape for the planter. Such varieties that move better when pot grown are prepared in this shape. This does not mean little seedlings, but in the majority of cases the plants were field grown, were dug and potted during the fall and winter months and are of just the right size to give immediate results. They are not to be compared with so-called field clumps. Try them and be convinced.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresler, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.
Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

REGULATION 6 of the Secretary of Agriculture under the plant quarantine act has been amended to provide "that nursery stock which can be cleaned by disinfection or treatment may be delivered to the importers, consignee, or agent for the proper care and treatment thereof upon the filing of a voluntary bond with approved securities."

Formosa Trees.

The exploitation of the Mount Arisan forests is progressing. The mountain railway is three-fourths completed and about 25 miles are operating. By the end of this year the entire railway, 41 miles, will be finished, and the American sawmill, to be erected at Kagi, the terminus of the lower line, may be ready for working the first shipment of logs. The Government has appropriated over $2,000,000 in gold for the Mount Arisan undertaking, and as a high value has been placed on the different kinds of wood, large returns are naturally expected.

The principal trees of Taiwan (Formosa) number 51, and there are eight genera of special scientific and commercial interest found in the north and central regions. There is moreover, one genus endemic to this island. The eight genera are: Cinnamomum, Chamæcyparis, Taiwania, Libocedrus, Pinus, Keteleeria, Machilus and Quercus. Of these, Taiwania is an endemic genus. The most important of the timber trees are: Cinnamomum camphora, Japanese nomenclature "Kusu;" Chamæcyparis formosensis, Japanese "Benihi," an endemic species; Chamæcyparis obtusa, variety formosana, Japanese "Hinoki," practically the same as the Hinoki of Japan; Taiwania crytomerioides, Japanese "Taiwan-sugi," a monotypic and endemic genus; Libocedrus macrolepis, Japanese "Shonamboku;" Pinus, four species, one, P. formosana, endemic; Keteleeria davidiana, variety formosana, Japanese "Shimamomi," an endemic variety; several species of Quercus (oak) and Machilus.

San Diego, Calif., Parks.

We have received from Superintendent John G. Morley the report of the board of park commissioners of San Diego, Calif., for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1912. More work was done during the year than ever before, according to the report. Two funds were drawn on, one the maintenance fund allowed by taxation, and the other the proceeds of the park improvement bond fund. The Fort Stockton and Presidio site was to have been purchased out of the maintenance fund but the measure was vetoed by the mayor on the ground that the money could not legally be used for that purpose. The sum of $15,000 was therefore carried over. Of the million dollar bond issue, $383,000 had been sold up to the first of the year, of which $106,405.04 remained in the treasury showing an expenditure of $276,594.96. A great deal of the work of the past year has been in the nature of a preparation for what is to follow. It has included the grading of roads and avenues, the installation of irrigating water lines, the building of retaining walls and the doing of heavy planting in the canyons and around the park borders. This work is practically finished. The bridge across Cabrillo Canyon is now under way and will be completed by July 1. Much drilling and blasting has been necessary in Balboa park on account of the rocky nature of the ground. A new water system has been installed in the west part of this park, where 85 acres were plowed, graded and prepared for planting. Considerable damage to trees and shrubs by wind is reported at La Jolla park. Several improvements have been carried out here. The number of trees and shrubs planted in Balboa park in 1912 was 16,480; La Jolla, 873.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition

GET INTERESTED, MR. FLORIST, THIS IS FOR YOU!

If you contemplate painting your house this year, it will be well for you to investigate the merits of which I use exclusively in the erection of the large ranges of glass that I erect on private estates and public parks. I have increased my plant to take care of the demands made upon me for this paint by florists in all parts of the country. The Lutton reputation for high class material is back of this product. Send for a sample free of cost and then you will send your order. We also furnish materials for the complete erection of modern Iron Frame Greenhouses. Some of the largest growers in the country will testify to this fact.

PEONIES.

PEONIES.

"Peonies for Pleasure." This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history; soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable Peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and the new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the Peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the Rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink Peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of Peonies for Fall Sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

What Boiler?

Water

OF COURSE, if your range is of a size economical for heating with cast iron boilers, you won't consider for a minute putting in an unwieldy, short lived wrought iron tubular boiler.

If it is to be a water boiler, this Sectional one of ours has a rather enviable reputation for greenhouse economy that puts a stop to your considering anything but this greenhouse boiler made especially for greenhouse work.

Knowing how essential a prompt, strong circulation is in greenhouse heating, we designed this boiler to do just that thing. And it does it.

Steam

If you install water, and also want an auxiliary system of steam, or if you prefer steam, our steam boiler will surely suit you. A system of this kind is invaluable for sulphuring a rose-house.

One thing many growers tell us about our steam boiler, is its quick steaming power and the fact that after steam is down, a vapor heat continues for some time.

You will instantly recognize the advantage of a continued "gentle heat."

Let us talk it over—you and I.

Where There Is Condensation

—there is need for a Morehead Steam Trap Condensation in steam lines is akin to matter out of place—means wasted energy.

If your lines are sluggish—if your houses are not of uniform temperature, write us. We guarantee to drain your lines perfectly—return the pure, hot condensation to your boiler without pump or injector or make no charge for the trial. Obey that impulse—write now.

WINDOW AND PORCH BOXES.

Plant Boxes for Downtown District.

Recognizing the importance of flower boxes in the business district, the committee on downtown streets of the Chicago Association of Commerce has issued a booklet calling the attention of business men to their opportunity in this direction. The advertising value of this touch of nature in the heart of a great city is one of the many advantages pointed out. Already several of the great hotels, banks and other business institutions are using window and interior plant boxes, adding much to the beauty of the place and making a decided impression on the public.

To quote from the committee's booklet: "Chicago has the opportunity greatly to improve the appearance of its business district during the summer months by the adornment of business buildings with flowers, vines, or shrubbery grown in boxes. The cooperation of all progressive building owners and tenants is invited in adding 'a touch of nature' that will be a source of pleasure to the people of Chicago, to visiting business men and to tourists. The favorable impression you make will bear direct fruit. Such ornamentation is a 'living advertisement' and worth many times its small cost. Dispel from the minds of people the idea that downtown Chicago is ugly. The growing of plants within the loop district is not an experiment." The booklet here notes a number of hotels, banks, restaurants, etc., where the idea has been carried out.

"The use of flower boxes has a favorable effect upon one's trade and one's employes. Progressive manufacturers in Chicago and elsewhere have found that more and better work can be secured from employes when the windows of the working rooms are filled with growing plants. What is true of manufacturers is true of all other lines of business. Those who have tried the plan find that they cannot afford to be without the growing plants. Flower boxes exert an influence both from the inside and from the outside. In other cities tenants in offices too high to be seen from the street have maintained flower boxes for the influence they seem to have upon their employes and their clients.

In a mechanical age, when surrounded on every side by things artificial, the use of growing plants is the one touch of nature that brings us back to real things.

"Experience with flower boxes in Chicago and elsewhere has proven that growing plants can be maintained for months with a little regular attention, that the flower boxes do not fall on people's heads, and that they do not leak and stain the building. The best results seem to have been obtained by the use of a sub-irrigated flower box. Wherever flower boxes are cared for by the tenant this is preferable.
The plants may be cared for by the tenants or by the florist. Growing plants may be rented from the florist for the summer season, in which case the work of maintenance is done by the florist."

Plant Arrangements and Box Styles.

This is the season of plant and flower boxes of all kinds, and this department is one which the florist can ill afford to neglect. The work pays well whether the choicest of foliage plants and vines are used or the ordinary kinds. If attended to properly it is sure to give satisfaction and this means more trade from the same customers in days to come. Florists would do well to call the attention of the public to the beauty of a few flowers growing in a box in the summer months, for unless the public gets the habit the retailer will not do a great deal of this class of work. Among the rich and the people who, if not rich, are at least very comfortably situated, thousands of dollars are spent every summer on this one item.
The man of average income, however, need not be without his window box, for the ordinary, everyday plant at a very reasonable price will add much beauty to any home. Boxes in the re-tailer's place of business, adequate advertising, and wherever possible, the use of circulars, and even personal canvassing on occasion may succeed in building up a good trade in this line.

The accompanying illustrations give a good idea of what may be done in this branch of the trade. Some of the more elaborate arrangements are, of course, too costly for the average salaried man, but others are within the reach of almost everybody who is unwilling to slight his love and appreciation of growing things where growing things are all too scarce. Palms, rubber plants, dracenas, pandanus, etc., are all used with fine effect in the more elaborate arrangements. What the person of moderate means needs, however, is something that will keep on flowering all summer. White marguerites, vincas, both green and variegated, and geraniums are splendid plants for such cases. If watered and fed as required they will keep well during the entire season. S. A. Nutt and Jean Viaud are two very good geraniums to use. Dwarf lobelias and vines of Thunbergia alata are also desirable. Ingenuity in making combinations that will not be prohibitory in price but will still be beautiful is necessary on the part of the florist. Nasturtiums, ivies, Boston ferns, Asparagus Sprengeri, Solanum jasminoides are a few of the many plants that may be used.

The box obviously must be made to fit the window and to set off but not to obscure other objects of beauty, but otherwise its shape is immaterial. It should be deep enough for good drainage, nine or ten inches at least. The material of which the box is made of course will depend a great deal on the price the customer wishes to pay. Boxes of oak and cypress are, however, cheaper in the end than the less costly kind, as they do not have to be renewed. The box should harmonize in color with the house and the common green color is often out of place, not fitting its surroundings, and often detracting from the green of the vines or plants. Especial care must be taken of the soil if the plants are to continue to do well. If satisfied customers are desired they must retain their freshness throughout the season. Loam from rotted soil should form the basis of the compost. One-fourth well rotted cow manure and leaf mold in about equal parts should be added. If the soil is of a close-knit nature sand or grit should be included. The plants must be able to run their roots throughout the soil but there should be substance enough to make for life and to keep them vigorous.

Planting.

Where the vines are heavy they must be planted firmly so the wind will not tear them loose. It is better to plant them first and then firm the soil around them. Rough-leaved plants should be left out of consideration if there is a great deal of dust to contend with. The ferns, asparagus and the like can be placed between the vines. Do not water too heavily if the boxes are to be filled at the greenhouse and removed at once. Use just enough to settle the soil when they are first planted and give a good watering when their final destination is reached. If the boxes are filled at the house the help must be cautioned to clean up the litter and to leave everything in a neat condition if a regular customer is desired. It is well also to instruct the purchaser in the best manner of caring for the plants to keep them in good condition. If in a sunny position copious watering will, of course, be necessary. If the dust from the street reaches the plants frequent syringings will be in order. Above all, it must be remembered that it is not necessary for the box to look well merely at the time of the sale, but that every precaution must be taken to keep it in that condition. On just such little details does success or failure in the flower trade hinge.

The Lawn Vase.

Lawn vases are quite as important summer adjuncts of the flower business as are window boxes, although not in such general use. They are indispensable for large grounds, however, but they are too frequently not the objects of beauty they should be. There may be several reasons for this. Plants in metallic receptacles should be placed in shady positions as they will otherwise be likely to suffer from overheating of the roots. Good drainage must also be provided. Overcrowding must be avoided also. The selection of colors that harmonize is as important here as with window boxes, and unless the plants are arranged in good taste the mere fact that they are in a thriving condition will not matter materially. The rustic idea is often carried out with good effect where lawn vases are used, as it lends itself naturally to the work. A lard barrel sawed to the right length and with perforations in the bottom for drainage will do very nicely, but of course the plants should hide the barrel from view.

Dundonald Memorial Wreath.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

Our supplementary illustration this week shows a Dundonald memorial wreath, which was made of bronze magnolia and genuine Scotch heather for the anniversary of the death of General Sir Isaac Brock, who led the Canadian forces in the War of 1812. The Dundonald plaid was used for draping and the wreath was on a 36-inch frame. This wreath suggests a great variety of new things in wreaths and other designs for Memorial day approaching.

The New Woodward Flower Shop.

The most recent addition to Detroit's numerous well appointed floral stores is that of the Woodward Flower Shop, 361 Woodward avenue. Norman Sullivan, well known to the trade, is the proprietor. The store proper is 20x65 feet and attached thereto is a greenhouse 20x85 feet. The store is modern in all respects with terrassa floor, high ceiling and well-lighted both day and night. The window platform, which is of white tile, is 9 feet long by 5 feet wide. The ceiling of the window is of white paneled woodwork provided with subdued electric light of maximum requirement.

The booth effect to the right side of the entrance is both novel and useful, for here the rest chairs and patrons' desks are located. On the opposite side stands the capacious refrigerator in which the choicest of the season's flowers are kept. The store has a splendid basement with concrete floor and is provided with departments for a large supply of boxes, wire designs and florists' requisites. The greenhouse has a central aisle 5 feet wide on each side of which are raised benches, for display of plants in the most advantageous manner. The rear 25 feet of the greenhouse is partitioned off and used for the storage of the automobile, affording facilities for loading and unloading, a feature particularly desirable in cold weather. The greenhouse is nine feet high to the gutter plates and affords a splendid opportunity for the installation in future of a fountain and rockery as an embellishing and attractive feature. The business is situated in a new and fast developing shopping district and it will be one of the leading flower shops of the city.

Mothers' Day.

Because Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, Pa., lost her mother by death a few years ago, thousands of people will wear flowers Sunday, May 11. In this way will they honor not only Miss Jarvis' mother but all mothers, their own especially. Mothers' day comes appropriately the second Sunday in May, when flowers are plentiful because the mother earth from which we all sprang is working overtime that we may do honor to our other mother, the one who gave us life at risk of her own and cared for us when we were not able to care for ourselves.

Most florists and many people who are not florists are familiar with the story of how Mothers' day originated. It is an old story that becomes new again just as the earth itself becomes new each spring with the same flowers it wore before, the flowers that never become old or tiresome. It is a story that bears retelling, because as we grow old, stories of mothers are as sweet and as perennially beautiful and enduring as are stories of children to the mothers themselves.

Six years ago Miss Jarvis conceived the idea of a special floral holiday in honor of the mothers of all the people of all the world. We already had holidays for other occasions, days commemorating special events or in honor of significant phases of our national life. But for her who made those holidays possible we had no holiday. We had days in which we honored our soldier dead, the birth of our nation, the daily struggle and travail which we call labor and which makes life possible, the gathering of the harvest and the birth and resurrection of Jesus. But for her who gave us all of these days we had no day at all. And the mother herself, patiently enduring, forgetful of self, repaid for her care and her self-abnegation only as the giver is more blessed than the recipient, would have been the last in all the world to complain. Had it remained for her to speak there would never have been a Mothers' day. Had it been left to any act of her own volition we would not now wear flowers in her honor. The only way that she could bring it about was by bringing home to us our loss when she was gone. It was only by her death that she could give us this one more token of her love, a day to remember her by and to be softened and mellowed by that remembrance.

Mrs. Jarvis, mother of Mothers' day and of Anna Jarvis, died the second Sunday in May. This day, of all the days in the year, the daughter kept especially in the mother's memory. This was her "Mothers' day," and she conceived the idea of a similar day for everybody whose mother had crossed to the other shore. Why shouldn't every living person devote a special day to the memory of his mother who was here no more? And from that the idea spread to honor all mothers both living and dead. Miss Jarvis chose the date of her own mother's death for the world-wide holiday and the rest of the world, which had quickly taken up the suggestion, acquiesced. That much was due the originator of the idea and the sweet-faced woman whose memory brought it about.

How best to observe the day she had conceived? The answer was so obvious that Miss Jarvis could hardly have hesitated a moment. By wearing a flower, of course. And the flower must be white—white for purity. The white carnation was the flower chosen. "Its whiteness stands for purity," she wrote; "its form, beauty; its fragrance, love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all a true mother's attributes." But Miss Jarvis is not a florist. She did not know that in all the land there were not enough white carnations to go around, that happily there are more mothers than carnations. So any white flower came to be appropriate. Even this, however, was not sufficient. There were not enough white flowers. Then the idea came: "Bright flowers for mothers living. White flowers for mother's memory." So now, for those whose mothers have gone to their reward, there will be white flowers, with the white carnation predominating. But for those whose mothers are still here, any bright flower will suffice. The bright colored flower will doubtless be in sufficient quantities to fill all demands, but the white ones will probably be somewhat scarce as heretofore.

How best to meet the holiday impulses of the public, to create a demand and to provide against the contingency of oversupply as well as shortage, is always a problem with the florist. Advertising of the right kind will create the demand. Display advertisements, individually and in cooperation, in the daily papers, calling attention to the day's significance, will bring home to the public its simple duty in observing the day. But let the florist whose greed overreaches itself take warning. In the flower business commercialism and sentiment are interwoven so inextricably that neither can live at the cost of the other. What hurts one will kill them both. It is necessary for the florist to capitalize sentiment, the sentiment on which the trade is built. If it were not for the message flowers convey there would be no flower shops, and if it were not for the business acumen of the men in the trade there would be no message of beauty and love brought to thousands who are made happy through the medium of flowers.

So this is the warning florists should heed: Mothers' day is yet a young institution. Indeed it is of such recent birth it can hardly be called an institution yet. The next two or three years will, probably decide whether it is to live or to die out as suddenly as it sprang into being. And its future rests with the florists themselves. If they let the business override the sentiment of the day they will kill the day itself—the goose that lays the golden eggs. If they attempt to raise the price of flowers beyond reason the public will repay them, rightly, by wearing no flowers. And in a few years the day will be remembered as a fad that did not last. But if they make the flowers as cheap as possible they will be repaid time and time again for years to come. To make Mothers' day popular it is necessary to induce as many people as possible to wear flowers. To do this it is necessary to make the flowers cheap. Whether Miss Jarvis' beautiful idea is to die abornin' or is to live in proclamations and people's hearts depends solely upon the florists themselves.

PLANT NOTES.

Winter Flowering Geraniums.

With all growers having a greenhouse and doing a retail business there is in the fall a good demand for pot geraniums for house culture. Plants lifted from the open ground and potted in the fall are not very satisfactory, for the plants recover from the later transplanting slowly and go out of bloom, and often do not flower weather grows warm enough. The place selected for growing them the coming season should, however, be prepared, the ground spaded deeply and if not manured last fall some well-rotted manure spaded in. Many growers do not advise heavy manuring when the clumps are planted and especially no fresh manure, much preferring to get a fair supply in the ground the previous fall so that the rankness will be dissipated in the soil, for too strong manure causes a rank growth and the plants do not bloom as early. With

Stevia.

If the stevia cuttings have not been rooted this should be attended to at once. As these plants grow very rapidly they are generally the last to be propagated but the rooting of any stock in June is always attempted with more or less chance of failure unless under the most favorable conditions. As soon as rooted they should be potted in 3-inch pots and placed in a cold frame, the pots plunged in the soil and shifted into large sizes as required. Keep the plants pinched back until the middle or last of July when they should be potted in their blooming pots and placed in quarters safe from high winds and early frosts. The dwarf stevias may be grown in the field, being kept pinched back during the summer and potted the last of August or first of September.

again until spring. It is better to grow plants for this purpose in pots through the summer and these with good culture will bloom all winter long if in a sunny position. Cuttings taken at this time will make nice stock for this purpose, or small plants left over after the spring sales can be used. The plants should be potted firmly so that they will make a short, stocky growth, and kept well pinched back throughout the summer, that as many branches may be procured as is possible. All buds should be picked off as soon as formed, allowing no blooms until the plants are firmly established in blooming pots, in which they should be planted the last of August. A 6-inch pot makes the best size for house culture and the plant can be easily grown so that it will fill this size nicely. A frame outside is the most convenient and best place for growing them through the summer months.

Dahlias.

Although the dahlia is of very robust growth and comparatively easy of culture, yet it is one of the most tender plants and will not stand any cold treatment, for the slightest frost will check the growth and almost invariably kill the plant back. It is then too early yet to plant the clumps except where all danger of late frosts has passed, but the eyes may start into growth during the warm days of May, so they should be kept in safe and warm quarters. Where the grower has a good, tight frame that is frost proof the clumps can be taken from storage and placed in the frame and the tubers will grow plump and the eyes break ready for planting as soon as the enough manure incorporated in the soil to produce a good hard growth, and not too soft, and then mulch with manure when the buds begin to set, is the manner of some of the most successful growers. The young stock that was propagated from clumps started in March should now be good, stocky little plants, and the last of the propagating should be done early in May to have good stock for June planting. Keep the young plants under safe cover and plunge the pots in soil to keep them moist and not require too frequent or too heavy watering.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Early Propagated Stock.

The early propagated stock being grown for exhibition cut blooms must be given close attention from this time on. Do not allow the plants to become hard and rootbound, but pot them along as they require it. If they are to be grown in pots throughout the entire season they should now be well rooted in 4-inch and ready to go into 6-inch pots, which will give them time to get into shape for transferring into 7 or 8-inch the latter part of May or early in June. Seven or 8-inch pots are large enough to produce the best exhibition blooms grown to single stem. Varieties with light growth and dwarf habit will give better results under close attention in 7-inch than in larger receptacles. Take as examples the varieties Lenox and Pockett's crimson. Lenox is light of growth and Pockett's crimson is dwarf of habit and we have been able to get very much better blooms from both of these when flowered in 7-inch pots than we could do in 8-inch.

To encourage the plants to make a strong, healthy growth is the main object just now. For them to do this it will be necessary to give them a live, moderately rich soil, but beware of large proportions of boned meal or any prepared manures which are inclined to produce a rapid growth. Sturdiness should be the watchword in the treatment of the plants. It is best to pot firmly because it keeps the plants short and stocky and prevents their stretching out and becoming long jointed. Good drainage is a very essential item and every provision should be made to allow the water to pass through the soil freely. Chrysanthemums delight in plenty of water but there are no other plants that will suffer as quickly or the soil turn sour in such a short time as it does with chrysanthemums when the drainage is not good enough to allow the water to pass quickly through it.

LOW WINDOW BOXES WHICH DO NOT OBSCURE SIGNS.

WINDOW BOXES OF VINCAS AND GERANIUMS.

By growing the plants in pots the whole season the grower is enabled to set his plants outdoors for a short season if he so desires. But owing to the many insects that attack the chrysanthemum, such as trips, red spider, tarnish bug, etc., it is a question whether it is a wise move to put the plants outside at all. However, if the spraying with insecticide is kept up continually these pests can be held in check and I am certain from experience that better results can be got from the plants if they are given a short season outside. Anyway, let them get rooted in the soil before putting them out. Give them a place where they will get the full benefit of the sun and at the same time be sheltered from the direct sweep of the winds.

The early propagated stock intended for bench culture inside for fancy cut blooms should be encouraged and kept in active growth. Do not allow them to become pot-bound or drawn from want of room. If it is necessary to give them more space to keep them dwarf see that they get it. Good results cannot be expected unless every little detail is closely looked after from this time on. May 20 might be set as the date that everything should be ready for this class of stock to go into their permanent quarters. Every day after this is putting so much more handicap on the plants.

The plants grown for large specimens also need our attention from time to time right along now. Attend to their wants as regards potting when they need it, treating them to a live, rich soil. Also pay particularly close attention to the work of topping back the shoots so as to encourage the plant to make as many breaks as possible. Provide supports for the branches, as they need it. These large plants are sensitive as regards the water given them at this stage of their growth. They should not be allowed to become dry but too much water is a great deal worse for them. Their best growth is made when the soil is kept in a moderate condition.

When thinking and writing of the fancy stock we must not forget that intended for commercial cut blooms the very early flowering varieties should be almost as well along as the exhibition or fancy stock to be able to get the best results from them. The date advocated for planting the fancy stock in the benches is also the time that everything should be ready for the early varieties. To be sure of getting early blooms the plants must be given long enough season to make their growth and thoroughly ripen the wood. The midseason varieties that may be still in the sand should not be allowed to remain there for their roots to get hard and wiry but should be taken out and potted as quickly as they become rooted. Late varieties still to be propagated should also receive attention. Get the cuttings into the sand so that the roots will get started before the hot days begin.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Large Annual Asters.

It may appear strange to admit it, but the fact remains that in these times I sow no annual flower seeds beyond sweet peas and asters. A garden of annuals is a delight, but those who, like myself, want to make gardening easy, shirk the trouble, be it ever so little, that many annuals incur. By growing bulbs, herbaceous plants, and roses, I obtain practically all the flowers I desire, and so I worry not about seeds other than those named.

The aster gives the maximum of pleasure with no great amount of trouble, and by cultivating the giant, mid-season, and late types, one can almost dispense with the early chrysanthemums. Early asters do not appeal to me, neither do the dwarf types. These I quietly ignore, as they are only suitable for edges or bedding, and my garden prohibits their use. Ultra early forms are scarcely required when so many other flowers are available, and so I survey the efforts of those who aim to get asters in June without the least enthusiasm.

The asters I have favored for some years past are the American forms. Experience has proved that there are no finer seeds than American-grown, and, taken collectively, the American asters are superior to the average European, particularly if one can secure the specially selected stocks such as are grown by the American market men. Asters are very largely grown in this country for the markets, but the quantity and quality of the flowers are very much below the stocks produced in the United States, where climatic conditions are much more favorable to the highest development of this flower.

It may surprise some to learn that certain American varieties of asters reach nearly four feet in height, and the special market blooms have stems up to three feet in length, while prices as high as four shillings per dozen have been made. This is a very different return from what is usually secured here, where rates rarely exceed six shillings per dozen bunches, or about one gross of blooms. Although I have never been able to equal the American sizes, I have often cut flowers five to six and a half inches across on stems twenty to twenty-four inches long, and the object I have always in mind when growing flowers is their value for cutting. So far as asters are concerned it is quite a simple matter to get big blooms and long stems if one handles the right types. Moreover, one needs no greenhouse; not even a frame.

I raise my asters, as do most of the Americans, by sowing in the open ground about the first of May. Drills half an inch deep are made between the sweet pea rows, and newspaper is laid over the rows until the seedlings are through. If at all crowded, some of them are pulled out, and later, when carrying a few leaves, and about one and a half inches tall, they are transplanted to where they are to flower. I always grow one row of asters between each row of sweet peas; the rest of the plants are put where there is room. If there is a spot in the kitchen garden available asters are planted, and these come in useful for lifting when in flower.

Sowing in heat and pricking out is waste of time, and, as often as not, it means drawn, weakly plants, which receive a check when planted out. Asters, if once checked, never make good plants, and by transplanting straight from the seed bed one avoids the second shift. Further, open ground sowing means no trouble from "damping off." When planting out, never set deeply, and remove any foliage that touches the soil. Deep planting, and allowing foliage to decay, invariably results in wholesale dying off, often just when the plants are running to bud.

The best soil for asters is a heavy loam, and plenty of rotten manure should be used, but on no account use fresh manure in the spring. Failing the right sort of manure, use dried blood, or fish manure, with a fair addition of superphosphate. Potash is most essential, and the sulphate form is perhaps the best; use no nitrates whatever, or the plants will run to leaf, and easily become a prey to disease. Lime liberally before planting, and dust lime between the plants several times during the season. Keep the hoe everlastingly on the move, and give plenty of water in dry weather.

Mulching is useful, but I never mulch. Some of the big American growers water their fields by the Skinner overhead system, and along the Pacific coast water is essential, for there is little or no rain throughout the summer. The tall varieties of asters require staking, as the heavy flowers are apt to be dashed or torn about by wind and rain in the autumn.

The following varieties are my favorites, but there are several newer American types I have not yet tried, including the upright branching, which are erect in growth, instead of spreading, as the average branching types. Peerless Pink, a fine giant blush-pink, averages thirty inches tall, with blooms five inches across and quite two and a half inches deep. Marvel Late Branching can be had in azure blue, white, purple, and rose-pink. These are September-October flowering, all very large, and in form similar to Vick's Branching. Another branching, i. e., Crimson King, Shell Pink and Deep Rose, form a very fine strain of late bloomers, but there are several other colors. The Giant White and Giant Pink are magnificent forms of the Comet type, and easily lead this section, with the exception of the German Hohenzollern, which is not to be surpassed by any other white Comet variety, but American-grown seed is better than European; at least, that is my experience.

Electric, another German variety, might be called a quilled Comet; the petals are narrow, and very stiff. It is pure white, and comes six inches across, but is rather flat. Mikado Pink, or Rochester, is a gem, with delicate lavender-pink flowers. It is one of the finest asters of the Comet type ever raised, and a great favorite in America. It was raised by Vick, and it is the official flower of the city of Rochester, New York. Violet King, a deep purple of the branching type, has rather narrow petals, but is a very full flower; a real masterpiece, and a great rival of the chrysanthemum, which shows nothing in this color.

Anyone growing such asters as these can reckon on flowers from four to seven inches across, without the removal of flower buds other than those that may appear on the individual flower stems. The branching types average eight to twelve flowers each. No pinching is necessary with these asters, and, so far as my experience goes, the flowers do not gain much in size if the plants are kept to three or four stems.—T. A. Weston, in the Gardener's Magazine.

THE ROSE.

Care of Young Stock.

The care of young stock should now be one of the most important duties of the grower. From now up till planting time they will require special attention so that they do not become pot-bound, too crowded or suffer from either want or excess of water. Stock that gets crowded soon shows the effects by losing a percentage of leaves and every leaf lost is a detriment to the vigor of the plant. Overcrowding also allows red spiders to get in their work, as it is so difficult to dislodge them with the syringe. By giving plenty of room so the air can circulate freely among the leaves, they also dry more quickly after watering and consequently become hardier and healthier than if allowed to stand a long time wet.

One of the worst enemies we have to contend with in young stock is mildew. Keeping the stock hardy by judicious ventilation is the best preventive. Dusting the foliage with flower of sulphur once or twice a week on bright days also helps to keep it in check. Young American Beauty plants should have ample room as any crowding at this season is certain to result in black spot. If this appears pick off all affected leaves, give plenty of ventilation and keep an even temperature of 56 to 58 degrees at night and they will soon grow out of it.

In order to have soil in good condition for planting it ought to be collected in good time. If the collecting has not been done in the fall it should now be done as soon as possible. The top spit of old pasture land should be secured if possible. This should be mixed with cow manure, one load to four of soil, and should be thoroughly incorporated by being turned over several times, choosing bright sunny weather for the operation, as it is ruinous to handle soil in a wet condition.

To keep crops from deteriorating by reason of hot weather it is advisable to give the benches a rather heavy mulch before the hot weather commences, thus preserving the surface roots from burning and keeping the soil cool. It is of special benefit to give a sprinkling of bone meal before applying the mulch. After mulching the benches should get a thorough soaking and special care should be taken that the soil does not become dry under the mulch. The mulch absorbs and retains the moisture and to all appearance the bench is wet when a careful examination may show the soil to be quite dry. As the mulch soon becomes exhausted keep on giving liquid food, as this will help materially to keep up the quality.

In most houses about this season, owing to defects in the glass, some of the foliage will be apt to get burned. This is very annoying and usually a good deal of damage is done, especially in American Beauty houses before it is detected. To prevent this the house should be gone over carefully when the sun is shining and with a brush tied to a long stake touch the burning spots lightly with linseed oil. It may take a few days to find all the spots but it will pay in the end.

Helen Keller's Tribute.

New York, April 13.—A bouquet of the prize-winning American Beauty roses, presented to her at the International Flower Show in this city, brought happiness to Helen Keller. Inhaling their fragrance her face was alive with expression as though her eyes saw the deep wonder of the flowers' coloring and her ears heard the many compliments of the little crowd that surrounded her. Still holding the long-stemmed blossoms in her arms, Miss Keller said plainly to a reporter:

"I need not tell you that I love them. I cannot see them, but I can enjoy their fragrance and delicate texture, woven of air and rain and sunshine. I wish that in the garden of life the same knowledge and science and success were devoted to producing equally happy and beautiful human beings. I believe the time will come when we will give as much time and thought to bringing forth fine children as we now do to producing fine flowers."

The roses were presented to Miss Keller by Irving Bertermann of Indianapolis, and the moment her arms closed over them a battery of cameras caught her picture.

DENVER, COLO.—At a recent meeting of the park board it was definitely decided to begin work on a new greenhouse at City Park, to cost $25,000.

FLORISTS' FERNS.

Ferns From Spores.

Paper read before the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club by A. W. Walker, of McDonald College, March 3, 1913.

In many books on horticulture the growing of ferns from spores is treated as though they were as easily raised as a pansy. It is therefore very evident that some of the information to be found in such books is not the result of actual experience and may prove misleading to a beginner. Raising ferns from spores is much like mushroom growing in that there is always a certain degree of uncertainty about results. Why should this be? might be asked. In the first instance, say, the spore is procured from a seedsman. Now a spore is so minute that one can not tell whether it is spore or not or whether it is fresh or some years old. Then there is the fear lest damping off fungus start in before you can pick them off with safety. Instead of "uncertainty" make the word "fascinating."

In order to be reasonably sure of success there are certain hard and fast rules that must be observed which I will endeavor to outline as I proceed. A suitable soil for this work should be capable of absorbing and holding moisture. Peat is excellent for this purpose. Where peat is not to be had fresh loam and leaf mould, using equal parts of each, will answer well. Whatever soil is used it has to be sterilized in order to destroy all bacteria, worms or weed seeds. It is absolutely necessary as the spores are so minute and take such a long time in some cases to germinate, and especially so as the soil has to be kept constantly moist, that if this was not done there would be great danger of a scum forming over the soil, which would smother out the spore, or if the spore did germinate there would be danger later of damping off fungus.

There are many ways by which you can sterilize. It makes no difference what means you adopt. The simplest method I know of is to prepare the soil, fill the pans or boxes, then take water at the boiling point and soak thoroughly, using a fine spray on the watering can. The grower should save his own spores of any variety, from which he can later produce properly matured spores. In order to be able to do this plants two or more years old should be grown from year to year. Fronds bearing spores are gathered from time to time as they are produced, placed in paper bags and hung up in some dry place where a fairly even temperature is maintained well above the freezing point until they are required for sowing. Never use spores that are over two years old if you can avoid it. I made a test one year with one variety, sowing freshly gathered spores in one pan, one-year-old in another and two-year-old in another. The two-year-old took fully twice as long to show signs of growth, which proved that vitality is lost with age. That being so, if you are forced to buy spores get them from the most reliable source possible.

While spores can be sown at any time of year, for florists' use two sowings a year is all that is necessary. A sowing made in September from all the quick producing sorts will give plants in 2½ inch pots ready for using the following September, and by making another sowing the beginning of February this batch of plants are ready by Christmas, when the September sown stock is getting over, and these will carry you through until June. In sowing, drain the pans or boxes with broken pots or cinders, cover with moss, then fill to within ¼ of an inch of the top with the soil the seed pan or box until the little fronds are showing, then move little clumps to other boxes of well prepared soil of half loam and leaf mould. This work should be done in the fern house, where there is, or should be, lots of moisture in the atmosphere, and not in the potting shed, which is generally dry and draughty. Use a piece of glass in preference to wood or cardboard on which to separate the prothallium

European Horticulture.

FROM THE FRENCH AND BELGIAN PRESS.

New Large-flowering Gladioli.— This is one of the rare orders of plants which continue to show material improvement after reaching a high state of cultivation. The three principal races, G. gandavensis, Lemoinei and Nanceianus have evolved slowly but unceasingly, and each year sees new improvements. The youngest of these races, G. Nanceianus, is 19 years old, and gandavensis, the oldest, 67 years. This constant improvement is due to the great facility which the gladioli have for hybridizing, to the comparatively short duration of these hybrids, and to the occasional infusion of new blood from wild species of East Africa. The new delicately-colored hybrids of G. primulinus are an example of this process. Among the new very large-flowering sorts, Iris, with its lovely blue-mauve coloring and exceptional size, is especially to be recommended. Jean Ragot, of the gandavensis red coloring with the mauve lines and large size of the nanceianus type, is a fine flower. Gloire de Villenoy, another Ragot seedling is a bright salmon rose with a light medium line of white and small ivory blotch. Pfizer's Europa, a splendid pure white gandavensis with bluish stamens, like the White Lady, has shown itself deficient in vigor. Up to the present time Reine Blanche, or its synonyms, te.ne de L'Anjon, Radium, Jeanne d'Arc, White Excelsior, though only of medium size and saving some red streaks in the throat, is the only pure white variety which florists have found desirable. The great disadvantage with the large flowering gandavensis sorts continues to be the difficulty of propagation. Among the best new sorts of the house of Lemoine is Salvator Rosa, very large nanceianus, soft pink, marbled with bright rose, throat marked with carmine; Phoebus, Lemoinei, violet blue, marked maroon and cream; Tolstoi, nanceianus, very large open flower, bright salmon, straw colored throat surrounded with a violet ring. Among the newer Vilmorin sorts, Alexandre, gandavensis, is remarkable for the size of its light red flowers with ivory blotch, and is, besides, strong and multiplies freely. Brunetiere, Lemoinei, large, light salmon, scarlet blotch, bordered white and white median lines. Flamboyant, nanceianus, fire red, blotched bright red and lighted with white; one of the most brilliant yet obtained. For growing for cut flow-before mentioned in the rough state, packing moderately firm, then add a coating of, say ¼ of an inch of same soil passed through a fine sieve, level over and press moderately firm. Sterilize in the manner already mentioned and sow as soon after the soil cools as possible, for the reason that the soil being very damp the spore adheres, and any pieces of frond can then be blown off without danger of removing the spore.

Place the pan or boxes in a moist, warm house. Place squares of glass over them, tilting the glass a little to allow a slight circulation of air; shade heavily, especially if in an exposed part of the house. Care should be taken to remove glass twice daily, in the morning and late afternoons, and either wipe off the drop of water which you will find on the under side of the glass, or a simpler way is to turn them upside down. In applying water later, it has to be done by sub-irrigation. In the case of pots or pans this matter is simple, as they are easily handled, but large flats are clumsy and it takes quite a large tank to set them in, and with a number of flats this means a lot of work. I have tried a little scheme which worked out satisfactorily with an ordinary sized plant. I placed eight 2½-inch pots at intervals over the box, sinking them to half their depth in the soil, and filling these with water whenever it was necessary. Never allow the soil at any time to get dry, and especially so during the period when fertilization takes place; at that time they require to be swimming in moisture.

Some growers prick off in little clumps while the prothallium is quite small. Personally I don't see any advantage in so doing unless you are in trouble with damping off, when of course you have to prick off to save them. I usually let them remain in into little clumps as that doesn't absorb the moisture from the soil. Now that they are pricked off, watering can be done in the ordinary manner, using a very fine spray on the watering can. Cover with squares of glass and shade heavily for some time until growth is pushing, when more airy and light conditions can be given. In time, when they are large enough, they will require to be picked out singly into other flats and later potted up into 2½-inch pots. In the case of the ones intended for early work in September these can be potted up after bedding season is over and placed in the frames vacated by the bedding stock. Shade light with fresh slacked lime, attend carefully to watering and give abundance of air during July and August.

ers, on account of their hardy growth, bright coloring, and easy multiplication two Lemoine sorts are very desirable: Eclairer, bright red with yellow bordered garnet blotch; Enclade, bright orange with purple blotch.—S. Mottet in Revue Horticole.

Epiphytal Ferns.—While the majority of ferns have the fronds more or less finely divided, there are a good many in which they are quite simple. A good proportion of these is epiphytes, with rhizomes of a more or less creeping character. Numerous examples, all growing on dead tree fern stems, formed quite a feature of a group shown by H. B. May & Sons, of Edmonton, at the Horticultural Hall on January 21. The greatest puzzle to the uninitiated was a Davallia, D. heterophylla, which is as unlike the generally accepted idea of a Davallia as it is possible to be. It has a creeping rhizome, from which are produced spear-shaped, sterile fronds, each from 3 inches to 6 inches, or thereabouts, in length, and of a deep-green color. The fertile fronds are narrower, thicker and deeply notched. This distinct Davallia, which used to be included in the genus Humata, is a native of the Islands of the Malayan Archipelago, and needs a warm-house for its successful culture. Several of the polypodiums were also shown in the same way, among them being P. lycopodioides, P. nitens, P. percussum, P. repens, P. vacciniifolium, P. squamulosum, P. piloselloides, and the following members of the genus Niphobolus, namely, N. rupestris, N. angustata, and N. heterachitis. All of these have simple fronds, for the most part small, and growing as they were on pieces of tree fern stem, were seen to great advantage.—Gardening Illustrated.

Solanum Capsicastrum "Melvinii."—This new variety of the popular "winter cherry" should prove a valuable plant both for market and home use. In America it is claimed to be one of the best winter plants yet offered, and it has won several medals and certificates. It was introduced as a seed novelty early last year by the Thos. J. Grey Co., of Boston, U. S. A., and the present writer secured seed for one or two English market growers to test. Owing to the delay in securing seed, this novelty did not have a full trial here last season. Market growers sow their solanum seed early in January, whereas the seed of "Melvinii" did not come to hand until late in February. Further, the cold season was not favorable to solanums, and nowhere were plants equal to the average. "Melvinii," however, made good growth, and is proved a wonderfully free setter, the berries coming in clusters of three or four. These are conical, with quite a sharp apex, and a trifle less in size than the best strains of S. capsicastrum. The color is all that can be desired, and the fruit holds well. The foliage is narrower than the old form, rather crimped at the edges, and it is thought to be more persistent than in the ordinary variety of S. capsicastrum now in cultivation. The growth is free, but less dense than the type, unless the habit was influenced by the late sowing and cool season.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

Acacia Baileyana.—This pretty acacia, which occurs both in New South Wales and in Queensland, is at present not very generally distributed. I was, therefore, surprised to see large sprays of it hawked about at Kingston-on-Thames at a penny a bunch, the same price as the so-called mimosa—Acacia dealbata—with which it had in all probability been sent over from the south of France. As a conservatory or greenhouse shrub in this country, Acacia baileyana has much to recommend it, for it will flower freely in a much smaller state than Acacia dealbata. The leaves are of an intense glaucous tint, so that a specimen either in or out of flower is very ornamental. The blossoms themselves are borne in small globose heads arranged in loose racemes. Within the London district Acacia dealbata is frequently injured by the sulphur-laden fogs which occur during the autumn and winter months, but as far as my experience goes A. baileyana is less affected thereby. While some of the acacias attain the dimensions of timber-trees, others will flower quite freely as small plants, especially if they are struck from cuttings and not raised from seeds.—Gardening Illustrated.

Flower Shows for Children.—For the encouragement of nature study, and to supplement the efforts of teachers to encourage study of botany and horticulture among scholars, the Manchester authorities provided about 25,000 plants in May and June, at a charge of twopence each. These plants were grown by the children throughout the summer, and when the schools reopened after the summer holidays about 9,000 plants were brought to the schools, and 2,500 of these were selected for exhibition at the chief centers. Medals, fern cases, etc., were awarded as prizes for the best plants, and all plants selected for the final display gained certificates for their juvenile owners.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Asparagus Lutzii.—This new asparagus was awarded a certificate of merit by the National Horticultural Society of France in November last, under the name, Asp. plumosus, var., Lutzii. Branches rigid, light, thornless, spreading well; the foliage, soft green and cloud-like, is at the flowering time almost hidden by the abundant pure white flowers. The cut branches keep a long time, with or without water. Blooms are produced the year round on the various branches. The culture is easy, as it requires little heat; a good garden soil, rather clayey, suits

Rose "Merrow Dora van Tets."—A new Dutch rose which has received many honors. Flower, medium size, not very double, agreeably scented; color a deep crimson scarlet, velvety sheen. The vegetation is vigorous and compact, and the flowering continuous.—Revue Horticole.

OBITUARY.

The Late Frank Emerson.

Those numerous members of the seed trade to whom he was known will learn with regret of the death of Frank Emerson, who died at Mercedes, Tex., April 23. Frank Emerson was born in Boston, Mass., June 11, 1853, and was educated in that city until about 16 or 17 years of age, when he entered the employ of the seed department of the Ames Plow Co., under his father, J. Homer Emerson. The entire family moved to Chicago in 1869, where with his father Mr. Emerson continued in the seed business, with the firm of Emerson & Stafford, who were burned out in the Chicago fire and suffered practically a total loss or nearly so on account of the insolvency of a large number of insurance companies. The entire family returned to Boston immediately following the fire and Mr. Emerson entered the employ of Jos. Breck & Sons, with whom he was associated in all of the branches of the seed business and had worked up to be manager of the seed department when he entered the partnership of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., about the year 1880, and was identified with this firm 6½ years.

Mr. Emerson and family removed to Omaha, Neb., during the spring of 1887, where he entered into a retail and jobbing seed business in connection with the wholesale growing of seeds. In 1891 he sold the retail and jobbing business to the Nebraska Seed Co. and entered into partnership with Phil Stimmel, with whom he was associated for three years, in the wholesale growing. In 1894 he organized the Western Seed & Irrigation Co. at Waterloo, Neb., and incorporated the word "irrigation" in the firm name with the idea of having as many seeds as possible grown under irrigation on the seed farm of this concern, nearly 500 acres, at Monroe, Neb., then under the Nebraska Central Irrigation & Land Co.'s canal, but which has been without water for the past six or eight years. He also contracted quite a large acreage of cucumber, melon, pumpkin and squash to be grown under irrigation at Fort Morgan, Rocky Ford and other Colorado points, the growing of which has been continued, under irrigation to a large extent, since he retired from the company.

On account of ill health Mr. Emerson was obliged to retire from the management of the Western Seed & Irrigation Co. in the fall of 1905 and has since lived at Mercedes, Tex., where he had 160 acres of land under irrigation in which he was growing different kinds of fruit trees and truck crops more suitable for that location. He leaves a wife, two daughters, one son and several grandchildren, also his mother and four brothers now living. Mr. Emerson devoted nearly 35 of the best years of his life to the seed business, in all branches of which he took a great interest.

Herman Blumenscheid.

Herman Blumenscheid, a carnation grower of Richfield, near Paterson, N. J., died of pneumonia in a Paterson hospital April 27. He was a native of Germany and about 40 years old. He was formerly located at Bayside, N. Y., and shipped his stock to E. C. Horan of West Twenty-eighth street, New York. About a year ago he erected several good houses at his New Jersey location. He is survived by a wife and three children. A. F. F.

BOB NEWCOMB says it is not a sign of rascality when florists water their stocks.

RENEW subscriptions promptly so that no copies of the paper may be missed.

WE are in receipt of Bulletin No. 7 of the American Gladiolus Society containing a number of interesting items and a list of the members.

MOTHERS' DAY this year will be celebrated Sunday, May 11. While THE AMERICAN FLORIST was the first to give trade publicity to the new flower day, this paper had no hand whatever in the shady birth, brief life or early demise of father's day.

Personal.

Dr. Wm. Trelease, former director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Mo., has been appointed chief of the botanical department at the Illinois State University, Champaign, Ill.

Ladies' Society American Florists.

The Ladies' Society of American Florists added 16 new members at the National Flower Show in New York, from states as follows: New York, 7; Massachusetts, 3; Kansas, 2; Washington, D. C., 1; Connecticut, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; Maine, 1. Thanks are due Mrs. Traendly, the president, and assistants, Mesdames Manda, Sheridan, Schenck and others.

MRS. CHAS. H. MAYNARD, Sec'y.

Philippines at Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The Director of Agriculture of the Philippine Islands expects to sail from Hongkong on the S. S. Korea, reaching San Francisco about May 20, and to spend about ten weeks in the United States. As Director General of the Philippine exhibits at the San Francisco exposition he will confer with the officials at San Francisco, after which he expects to go east, making numerous stops, reaching Washington early in July and sailing from New York in August on his return to Manila. Mail or telegrams may be addressed: F. W. Taylor, Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department, Washington, D. C.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

American Gladiolus Society.

Preliminary subscriptions to the prize schedule of the American Gladiolus Society's Exhibition at Minneapolis, August 19-22, 1913, are as follows:

C. Betscher, Canal Dover, O.—$10 for best display of 50 spikes Gladiolus primilimes hybrids; stems 18 inches from first bloom; blooms over 4; open form; $5 for best new seedling; 3 spikes; variety must be ready for market within 3 years. Plant must be 4½ ft. high. Blooms 5 in. wide; open form, clear color.

B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.—$5 in gold for best vase of 25 spikes Dawn; $5 in gold for best vase of 25 spikes Maize; $5 in gold for best vase of 25 spikes Mrs. Jas. Lancashire.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.—$25 for best vase of 25 spikes of War by an amateur; $10 for best vase of 25 spikes Peace, by an amateur.

H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis.—$10 for best vase of 25 spikes Early Bird, open class; $5 for best vase of 12 spikes Early Bird, amateur class.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.—Silver medal, best vase Chicago White; best vase Mrs. Francis King; best vase Princeps. $10 best vase Vaughan's Rainbow mixture.

E. E. Stewart, Brooklyn, Mich.—$5 for best vase of 25 spikes Golden Queen; $5 for best vase of 25 spikes Michigan; $5 for best vase of 25 spikes Lucille; $5 for best vase of 25 spikes Purity.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Michell's silver medal for a vase containing six spikes of the best white gladiolus; Michell's bronze medal for a vase containing six spikes of the best yellow gladiolus.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, —$10 for best 12 varieties not now on the market, 3 spikes each.

W. Atlee, Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—$10 for best collection 10 varieties, six spikes each.

M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, O.—$5 for best 12 spikes any white variety.

Chamberlain & Gage, South Natick, Mass.—$5, second prize, for best yellow, six spikes; $5, second prize, for best white, six spikes.

Plant Quarantine Decision No. 2.

The Federal Horticultural Board recommends that regulation 5 of the rules and regulations for carrying out the plant quarantine act, published in circular No. 41, Revised, office of the secretary, be amended by the addition of the following:

Permits for the entry of nursery stock or other plants and plant products of any grower or exporter may be refused, and existing permits may be canceled, on proof that such grower or exporter has knowingly shipped into the United States any nursery stock, or other plants and plant products, the importation of which is forbidden by the Secretary of Agriculture under the authority conferred by section 7 of this act.

Regulation 5, as amended, shall become and be effective on and after April 15, 1913.

hotel at St. Lucerne, Switzerland has been offered a fortune by some American and other millionaires of the world to make for them a clock similar to that, but he declined the offer, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years to come. I was fortunate enough on my last visit there to obtain from him, the head gardener—creator of the clock—a supply of seeds and stock plants of these beautiful varieties of Begonias, sufficient to raise a crop of about 50,000 young plants in 2½, 3 and 4 inch pots for you to use in a similar clock, carpet beds or other outside work. A bed of this improved Begonia Erfordi or improved bright red Vernon is a joy forever. A constant bloomer, stems always short and bushy; the hot rays of the sun have no bad effect on them; grows in shady or sunny places.

GODFREY ASCHMANN

1012 W. Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Where Are You Going From Here.

"Where do you go from here?"
How tired I am of that phrase;
From year to year it greets my ear,
Three hundred and sixty-five days.

The hotel man gets sociable,
As I pay for his high-priced cheer,
And drops my bill in the yawning till
With a "where do you go from here?"

The friends I meet upon the street
Keep digging in my ear;
Their only song the whole day long
"Where do you go from here?"

At last I dreamed—and so it seemed
My time had come to die;
With angels bright I took my flight
To the pearly gates on high,

St. Peter stood in a thoughtful mood
At the foot of the golden stair,
But raised his eyes as we drew nigh
And asked with a doubtful air.

"Your papers please (What ails your knees?)"
Then grinning from ear to ear,
"Oh, you're one of those traveling men."
Now, "Where do you go from here?"

Ornamental Grasses.

There are many positions in a garden where ornamental grasses may be used with telling effect, but nowhere do they yield more charming harmonies or greater contrasts than when grouped close to water, writes Thomas Smith in the Gardeners' Magazine. Plants that make no claim to attract attention by conspicuous beauty must of necessity call for different treatment than if the effect desired was a floral one, and the commonest error that planters of ornamental grasses fall into is vain repetition, which not only weakens a composition, but produces a sense of irritation.

A typical instance of the misuse of grasses in garden ornamentation is found in the case of the pampas grass. This is one of the few grasses in which the inflorescence attains to conspicuous beauty, and is strong enough in this respect to immediately arrest the eye; consequently, when it appears at frequent intervals it causes distraction, and instead of giving emphasis to the garden scheme, its oft repeated presence becomes a source of weakness, from which the whole scheme suffers. Another grass that frequently suffers in a similar way is Arundo donax, the great reed of the Mediterranean regions. The form known as A. d. macrophylla glauca is a handsome object in any water-garden scene, where it introduces a unique effect. The topmost, undeveloped leaf is erect, like a lance-point, while the fully-expanded leaves suggest pennons, and the softest breeze is able to set all in motion. The glaucous blue-grey color of the leaves is an outstanding feature of this fine plant. Arundo conspicua is quite distinct from the last named, being more in the way of a small pampas grass, but it flowers in July, whereas the true pampas does not flower until the end of September. Miscanthus (Eulalias) are useful grasses, frequently used among herbaceous perennials in borders, where they are quite appropriate in large gardens, but lack sufficient merit where the area treated is small. I have used them as a foil to Lilium croceum and varieties of L. umbellatum, the miscanthus widely planted, with liliums between them, and if top-dressed with rich manure each season, the lilies do not suffer from the greedy roots of their companions.

It is this aspect that should have the greatest attention directed to it when introducing grasses, for we are falling into the tendency of regarding and even modeling our flower borders on the principle of the exhibition table, producing huge banks of color, that approximate to, if they do not actually reproduce, the gaudiness of an Oriental scheme. This principle, while good in its own place, is quite foreign to the water garden, which depends on more subtle influences for its charm, where light and shade, and the form of leaf contrasts directly with that of the flower, and where every bay and promontory should present a different aspect, inviting comment and sustaining interest from start to finish. Viewed in this manner, grasses occur as foils or monotonous that indirectly give emphasis to the higher colors, while in themselves they impart grace and lightness to the scene.

Some grasses like Carex pendula, C. riparia, and C. japonica; Scirpus zeb- rinus, Glyceria spectabilis variegata, Juncus effusus striata aurea, J. lacustris, and J. spiralis, Typha angustifolia, and T. minima, will grow either submerged in shallow water or in ground kept continually moist. Arundo donax and its varieties are partial to much moisture in the growing season, but enjoy drier conditions in winter. This applies also to the varieties of miscanthus, and Phalaris elegantissima, and all the bamboos. Planted in ordinary garden soil, in a sunny aspect, Elymus glauca is a singularly beautiful grass; its foliage is intensely blue-grey, while it fills up quickly, and soon forms a thicket some 18 to 24 inches high. Stipa pinnata is also a pretty grass for similar positions.

The silver and golden forms of Dactylis glomerata, and Festuca glauca with its blue-green, thread-like foliage, are three of the dwarfiest grasses, frequently employed in bedding arrangements, and valuable at all times for edging or to form a carpet for taller subjects.

TRADE FAIR.

Trade has been fair the past week but stock of nearly all kinds is plentiful but the cuts have shortened up considerably since the cold weather set in. Carnations are not quite so plentiful, as they have been but in most instances; the best stock now brings $3.00 per 100. On Saturday the fancy grades could be had at $2.00 per 100 but the price advanced shortly after and the market at the time of this writing is firm at $3.00 per 100. American Beauty roses are in good supply but the fancy stock is moving quickly at $3.00 per dozen and at $4.00 per dozen for extra select stock. Roses are plentiful, especially Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, with a good demand for the latter. Some fine Mrs. Jardine are now arriving and can be seen featured in many of the downtown store windows. There is a good supply of Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody, Lady Hillingdon, Sunburst, Radiance, Killarney Queen and Rhea Reid roses, but a few brisk days would clean up the market in these varieties. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful yet and the same might be said of orchids. There are a few gardenias arriving, but no surplus is ever noticed. Sweet peas are in good supply but the long-stemmed stock is still bringing good prices and the only cheap stock to be had are those that are short-stemmed. Spanish iris, in white, blue, yellow and lavender is seen at nearly all the houses in good supply but the demand for this stock is increasing now. Snapdragon can be had in quantity and some exceptionally fine stock is now arriving. Gladioli are more plentiful and some fine local grown Mrs. Francis King are now to be had. Daisies are in good supply, but lilies and callas are not overplentiful. Trailing arbutus of fine quality are arriving in quantity and are having a good call. Smilax is still none too plentiful, but other greens are to be had in quantity.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is booking a large number of orders for carnations for Mothers' day, and it seems that the day is being well advertised by the retailers throughout the country. Otto W. Frese called our attention to the letter head of the Alpha Floral Co., of Kansas City, Mo., which had a border consisting of many elderly women that was indeed very appropriate for the occasion.

Oscar Leistner has returned from a trip in the northeast with a nice lot of orders for Ove Gnatt's line of decorative goods. Mr. Leistner's best seller at present is the natural prepared oak wreath, which is now being recognized as a good article to handle for Memorial day by retailers everywhere.

The Foley Manufacturing Co. is completing a beautiful conservatory for Archbishop Quigley on Dearborn and North avenues. The building is octagonal with curvilinear roof, the materials being wood, iron and rock-faced limestone.

J. F. Kidwell, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says that the inquiries for carnations for Mothers' day are numerous and that he would not be at all surprised if the best white brought 8 cents on that occasion.

William S. Grower of this city was appointed on April 29 by Governor Dunne as West Park Commissioner to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John P. Howland.

Treasurer Wieter has returned to the contributors 40 per cent of the amounts subscribed for the entertainment of S. A. F. visitors last summer.

S. Freund, with A. A. Arnold, the paper box manufacturer, has returned from a successful business trip in the east. Mr. Freund attended the National Flower Show in New York while he was calling on the trade in the large eastern cities and reports having had a most delightful time.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s crack baseball team was defeated at Joliet last Sunday, April 27, by the Speed Boys in a close and exciting twelve-inning game by a score of 3 to 2. Peter Olsem as usual is managing the nine, which is a pretty fast aggregation.

Bert Cole has taken possession of the store which he recently purchased from the Columbia Floral Co. at 3103 Cottage Grove avenue. Mrs. Cole and Miss Gallagher will manage the store while Mr. Cole is attending to his duties on the local market.

C. L. Washburn has been troubled more or less the past week with gall stones and was obliged to go home one day and consult his physician. He has just had another attack, which his friends hope will not prove serious.

Peter Reinberg is still strong on Richmond roses but the stock cleans up well each day at good prices. Tim Matchen expects a good sale for this rose for Mothers' day.

The Gross Park Florist Store which recently opened at 2016 Roscoe boulevard is enjoying a good season under the management of Fred J. Dittberner.

Emil Danz, the West Lake street florist, who has been confined to his home for several months, is able to be about again.

Jack Henesh, formerly with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is now with the Batavia Greenhouse Co.

Harry Garland is calling on the trade in Wisconsin and Michigan in the interests of the Geo. M. Garland Co.

E. F. Winterson's magnificent home on South Hamlin avenue, surrounded by several hundred standard bay trees, is attracting a great deal of favorable attention at present. Mr. Winterson takes great pride in keeping up the appearances about his premises and it is safe to say that his home will be the beauty spot of that neighborhood this summer.

N. J. Wiator says that Wiator Bros. have already booked several large carnation orders for Mothers' day and that more are continually arriving. This firm has a good supply of roses and carnations at present with choice American Beauty the principal offerings.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is having a big call for trailing arbutus which it is now featuring in quantity. The stock is unusually fine this spring and as formerly comes from the wilds of Wisconsin and Michigan.

E. E. Pieser of Kennicott Bros. Co., left on April 28 for Philadelphia, Pa., where he will receive treatment at the Rest Sanitarium. Mrs. Pieser left the day previous and will remain in the east for several weeks.

H. Wenberg says that the Batavia Greenhouse Co. will devote some of its houses now planted with carnations to roses next season as the former have been a poor investment for several years.

John Risch thinks that Mrs. Taft is the best rose in commerce today. This rose is always in great demand at Weiland & Risch's store, as are all their other novelties in cut flowers.

A. L. Vaughan, who is receiving treatment for rheumatism at the Sacred Heart Sanitarium in Milwaukee, acknowledges a pleasant visit from C. C. Pollworth of that city.

The Association of Commerce is advocating extended use of window boxes in the downtown district and all florists should aid the movement in every way possible.

Frank Pasternik, formerly with the Ernst Weinhoerber Floral Co. and later with Canger & Bergmann, is now in the employ of the A. L. Randall Co.

Mrs. Kemar, formerly located on West Twenty-sixth street, opened a new store at 2143 South Fifty-second avenue on April 26.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting heavily in roses and carnations and report business as brisk with a cleanup in stock each day.

Schiller's north side store is enjoying a busy season under the able management of Herman Schiller.

W. N. Rudd left for Springfield April 28 in the interest of state experiment station work.

The George Wittbold Co. has a very attractive card in the north side street cars this month.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union restaurant, West Randolph street, May 8. The flood relief committee will make its report and an interesting meeting is looked for. All members and their friends in the trade are earnestly requested to be present.

Zech & Mann are in the market for a few peony growers and will without question secure some for their spring trade. John Zech attended a banquet at Hotel La Salle this week when one of the church societies of which he is a member met at the well known hostelry.

Fred Lautenschlager has returned from New York, where he attended the National Flower Show. Mr. Lautenschlager as usual met with much success on his trip, selling enough Kroeschell boilers to heat 199,600 square feet of glass.

Mrs. August Dressel died at the home of her son-in-law, Sam Pearce, April 26. The trade was well represented at the funeral April 30 and the floral offerings were profuse.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has already planted out 200,000 carnation plants since April 23, an average of 50,000 a day.

Mrs. T. E. Matchen is entertaining her sister, Mrs. French, of Kilbourn, Wis., this week.

MARKET OVERCROWDED.

The less that is said about last week's business the better. There was an oversupply of good stock. Practically every line in the market is crowded or glutted. The local demand is rather slow, while the out of town demand has also let down somewhat. Monday, which is usually one of the best days of the week, started very poorly. As the week progressed matters grew worse and toward the close the only possible thing left for the wholesalers was to try to clean up at any price. The offerings include the usual good supply of roses and carnations. Short stemmed American Beauty are too plentiful. Spanish iris and snapdragon sell very well but are not bringing quite the fancy prices they realized a short time ago. The sweet pea supply is very much heavier. Both Easter lilies and callas are coming in strong. Smilax is on the short side of the market.

NOTES.

The florists in the flower market are offering a very good line of bedding stock to their trade. Schumann & Wahlers, Wm. Schumann, Ed. Fries, Wm. Speck, Tom Jackson, Louis Pfeiffer's Sons, Chas. Pfeiffer's Sons, C. Witterstaetter, Deller & Witterstaetter, Popp Bros. and the others have elegant offerings of geraniums and the like. Ed. Fries also has a large lot of choice potted roses, while Schumann & Wahlers and Wm. Schumann also have some fine hydrangeas.

J. A. Peterson, with the thoroughness with which he goes about everything he does, has carefully laid out the grounds about his home and has planted many varieties of trees and shrubs. His place should be beautiful this summer.

C. E. Critchell left for Chicago Sunday evening. Minneapolis is his final destination. He is going there to arrange preliminary matters of his committee relative to the coming S. A. F. convention.

R. Witterstaetter is convalescing rapidly and will no doubt soon be able to be about again.

Mrs. Mulford of Lebanon, Pa., was a caller and a heavy buyer on Monday.

WEATHER MAKES STOCK PLENTIFUL.

We had a week of delightful spring weather until Saturday, when it turned colder and rained all day. However, the warm weather during the week brought the stock in in almost unlimited quantities. Sweet peas were almost a glut by Saturday. The same may be said of roses and carnations, although these had been more plentiful all week, but several social functions at the end of the week, as well as considerable funeral work, cleaned them up fairly well. American Beauty roses with long stems and good flowers are arriving in good supply, as are those of medium stems. Short stemmed stock of this variety is also plentiful. Some very good long stemmed Maryland roses are on the market. Aaron Ward roses are in full crop at present, and stock is exceptionally fine. Lily of the valley is more plentiful in several grades. Violets still arrive, but the demand has dropped off. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. An unusually heavy demand for string smilax kept the wholesalers busy Saturday.

NOTES.

While delivering a "hurry-up" cut flower order Friday morning, Chas. Schmitt, 142 Burton avenue, was arrested and heavily fined for speeding on his motorcycle. It was the most expensive delivery Charley ever made.

The Chicago Great Western has been named the Official Route of the Chicago Florists' Club to the Minneapolis Convention, August 19th to 22nd.

The Chicago Florists' Club will leave Chicago by Special Train at 6.15 p. m., August 18th, an invitation is extended to all eastern Florists and their friends and families to join them at Chicago and go to the convention in a body.

Special train will be "up-to-the-minute" throughout—including compartment and drawing room and standard sleepers, Buffet Club car, dining cars, Observation parlor, etc., etc.

To do a decorating job well is not unusual, but to have it appreciated to such an extent by the bride's father as to merit a diamond stickpin as a present is something out of the ordinary. Such was the good fortune of Clarence Meyers, decorator for the Smith & Fetters Co. At St. Paul's Church and at the residence of the bride on East Forty-sixth street, Mr. Meyers had charge of the decorations for the Hubbard-Todd nuptials. The church was decorated with Southern smilax, Easter lilies and white lilac, while at the residence Southern smilax and Pink Killarney and American Beauty roses predominated. The bride's bouquet was of lily of the valley and lavender (nearly white) orchids, tied with a bridal scarf. The maids of honor carried yellow iris and lily of the valley bouquets.

The J. M. Gasser Co. retail store has had on exhibition a floral design of a boat, the new "See and Bee" which will soon be launched on the great lakes. The design consists of a frame in which several flowering rambler rose plants are growing completely hiding the frame, and making a very pretty and artistic design. It attracts much attention.

It has just become known that Chas. A. Woodman of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange was married Saturday, March 29, to Miss Dora Zimmerman. Their marriage had been kept a secret from their many friends until this week. They will shortly go to house-keeping on the south side.

Peter J. Probeck has sold his place—greenhouses, residence, stock and everything—to E. G. Buyer, who is a son-in-law of G. M. Nauman. Mr. Buyer has a good location, and without a doubt will make a success of the venture.

The Hough Avenue Flower Shop has closed its doors. The fixtures and stock were bought by Mrs. Lincoln Brown.

Saturday, April 26, was flower day for the German hospital and thousands of blooms were sold.

OVERSUPPLY OF STOCK.

Two funerals, one of a distinguished clergyman, the other of a popular jurist, the early part of the last week, gave the florists the only active work the week brought. Otherwise, the trade could be called decidedly dull. Unfavorable weather is blamed for the stagnation, which was general. Saturday there was a heavy downpour of rain the entire day, continuing into the night, and most of the day following. The supply of flowers of all kinds kept up unceasingly, to the loss of both growers and dealers. The local rose growers are sending in an abundance of short-stemmed roses, and but few long ones, the latter being the only kind much in demand. There is no excess of good lilies on the market, but a surplus of the poor grades is always seen. Carnations are fair in quality, but too many are coming in for the limited demand. Indoor grown iris is now appearing and sells fairly well. Bulbous stock is about done for the season. Sweet peas are in fair supply and all are used to advantage.

NOTES.

Wm. Wells, the well known florist of Marstham, Surrey, England, visited the trade here Friday, April 25. A luncheon in his honor was given at Harmonie Hall. Those in attendance included Philip Breitmeyer, M. P. Hurlburt, E. A. Fetters, Robert Rahaley, A. Pochelon, Harry Breitmeyer, J. F. Sullivan. The distinguished visitor related the methods of growing and marketing in his country, and said that the methods of American carnation growers are being most generally adopted by the English growers who specialize in this flower. In the afternoon the party visited the establishment of Thos. Browne, to inspect the new carnation Philadelphia. Mr. Wells, after highly complimenting the variety, left a large order for two-inch pot plants of it, with which he will supply the European demand. Mr. Pochelon succeeded in getting a long list of florists in England for the Florists' Delivery Association.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club is called for Wednesday evening, April 30, at the L. Bamb Co. store for the purpose of perfecting plans to advertise Mothers' day.

MARKET HAS BETTER TONE.

Things have taken on a somewhat brighter aspect this week. The sluggishness of last week is less apparent, although prices have not advanced with the exception of carnations. There is more of a clean out each day. Carnations are going the best of any flowers and the price has been raised accordingly. The Spencer variety of sweet peas are very fine. They overshadow the winter sweet peas, which are in the last stages of decline. The wholesalers report a satisfactory trade.

NOTES.

We made a call at Chas. Holbrow's place at Brighton. Charlie, as he is called by his many friends, is one of the best known and most successful growers in this section. His two new big rose houses are looking the picture of health. The houses are of King construction. His grower, — Kelly, certainly deserves credit. An attractive office has been added, hardwood floors and well lighted. He has an ideal location for a retail trade. This end of the business is looked after by Miss Holbrow, his daughter. We thought there must be a touch of the feminine art when we entered, for unlike most florists' offices it was scrupulously clean and the arrangement of the show plants was well done. The older houses are filled with carnations and bedding plants, and one house with palms and other foliage plants. Around his new dwelling the grounds are neatly kept, which is an added attraction and an incentive for visitors to purchase. His surplus is sold by the Flower Growers' Sales Co. An automobile is to be added to his other equipment. Mrs. Holbrow sails for England June 11 to be gone for some time.

Welch Bros. are stocking up with all kinds of metal and wax wreaths, etc.

for the Memorial day trade. David Welch says: "We don't like them, for everyone we sell makes one sale less in the fresh flower division, but we had such a heavy call for them last year and early inquiries for them this year that we have stocked up pretty heavily."

Wm. Morris of Wellesly and Nelson & Johnson of Framingham have each purchased a car. The horses have become too slow for these enterprising florists.

ROSES PLENTIFUL.

The market is still short on good carnations, but roses are plentiful. The best American Beauty are sold from $15 to $25 per hundred. Killarney, Richmond, My Maryland, Bride, Lady Hillingdon, and Killarney Queen bring from $4 to $12 for the best.

NOTES.

The banquet of the Washington Florists' Club will be held at the Ebbett House, May 4. Judging from present applications for tickets it will be one of the best attended the club has ever had.

J. H. Small had the church decoration for the wedding of the daughter of the secretary of the navy to Lieut. Rogers April 26. The home was decorated by the Washington Florists' Co.

W. W. Kimmell is kept very busy at present with outside work. He is planting three carloads of evergreens and rhododendrons for Geo. Vanderbilt.

Theo. Diedrich is still sending in some good single violets. He is also cutting some of the finest snapdragon the stores have had this season.

The social season is about over but there are always a few dinner decorations up until the middle of May.

New Jersey Notes.

In addition to the Orange florists who make growing their chief business, there are a number of fine retail stores, to nearly all of which several greenhouses are attached. The stores of East Orange are noteworthy, being well equipped, carrying good stocks and catering to high class trade. George Smith has a fine retail store and conservatories and is a heavy buyer of cut flowers in the New York market. Charles Hale, once a Washington, D. C., florist has a good store and conservatories. Mr. Hale has several sons and a daughter with him in the business and contrives to keep busy himself. On Main street, which runs through all the Oranges, other good stores are those of Reichy & Simpson, P. Popken and Geo. Perdue.

With fresh laurels won at the International Flower Show, W. A. Manda of South Orange, with his large force, is now greatly rushed, filling orders. The great variety of stock grown at this place makes it a popular resort for the buyers who wish to beautify their home grounds. Both the nursery and greenhouses show, in their respective lines, an abundance of good stock, and it is going fast.

Jos. A. Manda, of West Orange, a brother to W. A., and who is also well known in the horticultural world, erected two new houses last summer and his range is well stocked with fine orchids which are his specialties. He also has a good line of foliage plants and the neatness of his place is a noteworthy feature.

"Ornamental Trees and Shrubbery" is the title of the annual published this year by the New York state education department for its Arbor day booklet. The pamphlet of 56 pages is the compilation of George Martin Wiley, chief of the administration division of the department. In it are several special articles of unusual interest. Among them are: "Significance of Arbor Day." Samuel S. Draper; "Planting and Care of Trees and Shrubs for Ornament," Herman W. Merkel; "Insect Enemies of Trees and Shrubs," Prof. E. P. Felt, state entomologist; "John Walton Spencer," Anna Botsford Comstock, of Cornell University.

Harry W. Riggs of Whittle & Riggs, 97 Hudson avenue, and his father-in-law, have purchased a place in the town of Bethlehem, six miles south of Albany, where Mr. Riggs will make his home. BUSINESS GOOD.

Business has been good for the season and, stock which is about equal to the demand, brings satisfactory prices. There has been a very good out-of-town shipping trade which, with the local call, keeps the market cleaned up every day. American Beauty roses are still in good shape, some excellent stock being seen. Prices are a shade better. Killarney roses show a little mildew, as is generally the case at this season. Some growers, however, seem to escape it. Richmond roses as well as Mrs. Taft, Lady Hillingdon and Mrs. Ward, are still in good demand. They will all be largely planted for next season. There are plenty of carnations at present, much of the stock being fine. The supply for Mothers' day will, it is said, be about the same as last season. Snapdragon moves lively, as do sweet peas, which are now seen in large quantities. Cattleyas are an important factor and large quantities are used daily. While there seems to be a good daily supply of lily of the valley, the man with an order for any quantity had best look out for his supply, as it is uncertain and the market is at times found bare over night. Gardenias are offered at buyers' prices.

NOTES.

Adolph Farenwald will be the essayist at the next meeting of the Florists' Club. His subject will be "Affiliation." We look for a valuable paper, as Mr. Farenwald is one of the live wires of the craft. Edw. Reid, as chairman of the essay committee, is doing splendid work. There will also be a report of the New York show by the various members who were there. As nearly the whole club attended it will be a sort of love feast. The movement to bring the next show here should be started at once and kept to the fore so constantly that there will be no denying this city the honor which it deserves.

The H. A. Dreer Co. is having the greatest business in its history. The immense packing shed is crowded to its fullest capacity. Men stand shoulder to shoulder, and yet, with the enlarged force, they are hardly able to

Because the 150 members of the Irondequoit Gardeners' Association did not attend the annual auction of stalls at the public market April 25, the sale was postponed until May 30. Changes in the terms and conditions are said to be the cause of the gardeners' failure to rent the stalls. A. J. Warren, secretary of the Gardeners' Association, is quoted as saying they would establish a market of their own outside the city.

New York.

GOOD STOCK SELLS WELL.

The weather of the past week was exceptionally warm. This has caused outdoor work to move swiftly. Many of the trees are in full leaf, lawn mowers are clattering, and bedding and window box work is active. While the supply of cut flowers began to increase about the middle of the week, there has been no marked surplus. There was a gradual lowering of prices, but carnations have held up, as a rule, to three and four cents. There was a good market, Saturday, April 26, though an increased supply of stock was noticeable. In American Beauty roses, the price for specials hovered around 25 cents. In Killarney and other tea roses a great amount of stock is being moved and good stock is selling well for this season. In fact, all good stock brings a good price, but the unseasonably warm weather is bringing in much that is inferior.

Monday, April 28.—The day opened with a deluge of rain which has put a damper on business. However, there is always some business on Monday and the buyers are about, but stock is moving slowly. There is little change in the prices of good stock.

The friends of Alexander Moore, who sells the roses from the noted Asmus range, in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., are congratulating him on his marriage to Miss Mabelle Nate, which took place April 27 at North Bergen, N. J. A humorous story is told in regard to the ceremony. Mr. Moore is a brother-in-law of Mayor Adolph Asmus of North Bergen, who is also head of the rose growing firm of E. G. Asmus & Son. Mayor Asmus had promised to marry them and the guests were assembled. At the last moment the mayor refused. He said he was a politician and he feared it would bring them bad luck. It will thus be seen that there are yet politicians who have a conscience. Judge Medina of the recorder's court was sent for and performed the ceremony.

NOTES.

We hear that some promoting is already being done with the object of having another show in the Grand Central Palace in the spring of 1914. The Horticultural Society of New York has done a good work by its shows at the American Museum of Natural History, where excellent shows have been staged; doubtless it can in the future do more and better work if that work is properly appreciated and supported. To the people who are always expecting "knocks" we will say that this is not a criticism of anybody, but a statement of facts as we see them. As proof we point to what has been done by the Massachusetts and the Pennsylvania Horticultural societies which have received liberal support.

G. Meyer, of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, arranged a handsome decoration for the Ritch-Tonnele wedding at the Plaza hotel, April 26. The decorations were of huckleberry and apple blossoms with a background of palms. It was on a large scale and both the ballroom and banquet hall were handsomely decorated. The ceremony took place in the reception room under a canopy of apple blossoms. On the same day Mr. Meyer arranged an exceptionally fine wreath of Richmond roses and lilies of the valley for the funeral of the late J. T. Burden, an old and prominent citizen.

Henry Weston, the well known grower of Hempstead, L. I., and one of the founders of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., of West Twenty-eighth street, is seriously ill in the Mineola hospital. About two weeks ago he was operated on for appendicitis and progressed favorably until April 25, when he had a relapse. While we do not understand that he is in a dangerous condition, it is said that he is likely to be confined to the hospital for some time. He is a member of the New York Florists' Club and was an exhibitor at the recent National Flower Show.

Max Schling, whose store is at 22 West Fifty-ninth street, had a record-breaking day in table decorations April 24. For the opening of the new Woolworth Building, the latest wonder of New York, he decorated for a dinner of 900 covers, there being 102 centerpieces, the smallest of which contained 150 roses. On the same day he decorated for nine other dinners and one luncheon in which many roses and other flowers were used. Eleven hundred Richmond roses alone were used.

Phillip J. Schaefer, surviving partner of the retail firm of Reisner & Schaefer, 1247 Lexington avenue, has been declared a bankrupt and the stock and fixtures of the store were sold, by order of the courts, April 25. The deceased member of this firm, Samuel Reisner, was run down in the streets of Hamilton, Bermuda, several months ago, and died a few hours later.

Kamman & Crowley, retailers, at 31 W. Fifty-Eighth street, recently received a large shipment of fine crotons, dracaenas and other plants from the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., which they are using with effect in changing the plant decorations in one of the leading cafes on Forty-second street.

P. J. Schroeder of Pine Brooks, N. J., whose Purity freesias were a leading feature during the winter at the wholesale store of J. K. Allen, has formed a partnership with Wm. Aubry and they will at once begin the construction of two new houses, 26½x150 feet each, at Caldwell, N. J.

Maurice Kleinman, the clever buyer and foreman of G. Myer, Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, has just finished an artistic piece of work in the planting and arrangement of the window and veranda boxes and vases at the Hotel Plaza. Many unusually fine foliage plants were used.

The annual meeting of the Cut Flower Exchange will be held May 3. At this meeting five directors will be elected to succeed George Galiner, P. Smith, G. Matthews and John Schneider, whose terms expire, and Philip Einsman, deceased.

Notable features of the market are the fine long stemmed sweet peas which Herman Mammitch, whose range is near Paterson, N. J., is sending in to A. Sauter of the Cut Flower Exchange. Many of the stems run from 12 to 15 inches.

One of the Kramer brothers of Farmingdale, L. I., was in the wholesale market on April 25. This firm is shipping a fine line of stocks to Alex. Dutcher of the New York Cut Flower Co.

Much good stock is now seen in the Cut Flower Exchange. Philip F. Kessler has daily a noteworthy display of Easter lilies, tulips and narcissi, as well as other good stock.

John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, left for Minneapolis, Minn., on the night of April 26 to arrange for the coming convention.

There is now considerable Spanish iris on the market but there is little variety in color, most of it being of the lavender or purple shade.

Visitors: S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. J. Stewart, Boston.

Boston Notes.

Preparations are in progress for a noteworthy gathering of florists at the next meeting of the new Boston Florists' Club, to be held the first Tuesday in May. The officers of the organization are: Henry Penn, president; Henry R. Comley, vice-president; Julius A. Zinn, treasurer; Benjamin H. Green, secretary. They are putting forth unusual efforts to increase the membership, and hope that in time it will include practically all the leading men of the retail trade in greater Boston. There is to be a dinner at the City Club, where the previous meetings have been held, and among the speakers expected are William Stickels, William H. Elliott, John MacFarland and others of prominence.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., who will remove from 15 Province street May 1 to their new quarters in Winthrop square, directly under the Boston Florists' Exchange, secure by the change one of the finest and most commodious stores devoted to florists' supplies in New England, and possibly in the entire country. They will have about a quarter of an acre of floor space, and have been building ice chests during the week that cover 1,000 square feet, in preparation for an opening that will be a veritable exposition. As Henry Robinson of the firm puts it, they will show everything, "from a blade of grass to a 50-foot tree, and from a cowslip to an American beauty."

N. Rosenthal, of the Boston Cut Flower Co., who took a number of prizes at the show in New York and also made an enviable record as an entertainer, is much pleased with his trip, also with the invitations he received to attend "the next." He has increased his help in anticipation of additional May business, including preparations for Memorial day. The company had the decorations for the Fleischmann wedding, one of the features being a beautiful seashell canopy.

Richard Ludwig, manager for the N. F. McCarthy Co., has been receiving congratulations lately. The occasion is the advent of a new 12-pound boy in his family. Mr. Ludwig is gratified with the call from the retail trade for designs in artificial flowers for Memorial day, which promises this season, he says, to surpass anything previously reported in that line of goods. The concern is holding auctions of shrubs, etc., every Tuesday and Friday.

A cable message from Philip Carbone, received last week, announced his safe arrival in England, whence he is proceeding to Italy. Mr. Carbone is making his annual trip abroad in quest of artistic garden decorative pottery from the best European sources and of the newest types, sun dials, animal pieces in terra cotta, garden seats, jardinières and statuary being among his importations in this line.

Edward McMulklin, who has recovered from his recent illness, is devoting considerable attention now to a number of suburban estates that are entrusted to his care, notable among them being two summer places in Swampscott. He is busy also with the new spring supplies for the Lawson place in Scituate. From his orchid house he is getting a good supply of fine orchids for the retail trade.

Arnold & Petros, florists, 460 Boylston street, on April 18 filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court. The members of the firm are James M. Petros and George E. Arnold. Their liabilities are $5,784.81; assets, $380. Mr. Petros has individual debts also aggregating $1,444.19, including $500 for rent. The schedules include $3,000 due for rent.

Welch Bros., the Devonshire street wholesalers, are experiencing a greatly increased demand this year for Memorial day display goods from the retailers. They have a larger stock than ever before of designs in artificial flowers, set pieces in excellent variety and of artistic construction. Thus early the buying is breaking the record.

The Howard Flower Shop, recently opened by Frank Howard, who has a shop also in Cambridge, reports that the new venture is taking root satisfactorily. Mr. Howard has with him, as salesman, H. Simons, formerly in business on Boylston street, and Charles Ahlgren, who was previously with J. Newman & Sons.

Boston florists are expecting an excellent demand for flowers for Mothers' day, which has come into considerable favor here, and is observed by a great number of individuals, as well as by churches and societies. Some of the florists issue special advertisements in the local papers.

J. Newman & Sons furnished the decorations for one of the noteworthy society weddings of the week in the suburban town of Winchester. Large quantities of Southern smilax and flowering potted plants were used; also shower bouquets of pale pink sweet peas for the bride and bridesmaids.

M. Liebman, representative here of J. Kopelman, Providence, R. I., reports the quantity of output in many lines increased by the recent warm weather, although the advantage is offset, naturally, by some lowering of prices. He is getting a lot of new asparagus.

When the Thomas F. Galvin establishment moves from its present quarters at 124 Tremont street it will go to No. 126, next door. Customers will hardly know they are in another store when the change is made (about July 1) the two entrances are so close together.

William Carr, representing E. K. Mundy of Reading, is showing at the Exchange, in Winthrop square, some beauties in sweet pea bunches, white and pink of unusual size. Mr. Carr also showed last week for Waldecker of Braintree some fine iris in all colors.

The special basket window display that Wax Bros. have been making during the past week has attracted a great deal of attention. A bridal bower of smilax, overhanging vines and greenery is the feature of another of their display windows.

F. J. Dolansky & Co. have plans under way for two new greenhouses at Lynn. This concern is importing this spring 175 cases of orchids to add to its supply, which will make it one of the biggest orchid growers in this section.

Thomas F. Galvin's shop reports large shipments of gardenias and orchids. This company furnished the floral decorations for the Phelan-Gaffney wedding last week, at which Cardinal O'Connell performed the ceremony.

G. H. Davis, the Cambridge florist, is nursing a troublesome eye, which he had to keep bandaged last week. His physician says "too much nicotine" is responsible for it, and Mr. Davis has thrown away all his pipes.

The Montrose Greenhouses of Wakefield are cutting some fine Killarney roses and are also marketing good quantities of new dark pink roses, Richmond, Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon.

Mann Bros. of Randolph have some Spanish iris on the market this week, and say that the supply is coming along well. Lilies, tulips and other bulb products are also flourishing.

William H. Welchans, manager of the Flower Growers' Sales Co., is handling the products of William Sim of Cliftondale, the big prize winning grower of sweet peas and pansies.

Penn's establishment furnished the flowers last week for decorative purposes at the Masonic Temple, on the days when the State Consistory was in session, and for the banquet.

B.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—James Chacona, well known florist of 87 Wisconsin street, has leased the Belvidere block for 50 years at a ground rental of approximately $600,000. Improvements costing $100,000 will be made. The first floor will be used for store purposes and the rest of the building will be converted into an up-to-date hotel. There will be 250 rooms in the hotel.

LETHBRIDGE, ALTA.—Frache Bros. have completed 40,000 square feet of greenhouse glass, all new, 1½ miles from the city. The buildings are opposite City park. The firm will open a city store in July. In addition to flowers they grow lettuce and tomatoes extensively and will handle seed at the store. The firm has a prosperous establishment at Columbia, B. C., and will doubtless make a success of the enterprise here.

BRISTOL, TENN.—The Fairmount Gardens report a 50 per cent increase over the Easter sales of any previous year. Stock was in splendid condition, especially the Easter lilies which sold readily.

HATTIESBURG, MISS.—The Hattiesburg Floral Nursery has been purchased by the city which will furnish cut flowers to the public under the style of Park Greenhouses. I. Kling, proprietor, has been retained to manage the business.

WAUKEGAN, ILL.—Easter sales were about the same as in 1912, prices being no better. The supply of plants and flowers was equal to the demand. Hyacinths, tulips, cinerarias and cyclamens were popular. There was little call for genistas or azaleas. Carnations, tulips, narcissi and lilies sold well.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—A. Whitcomb & Co. report Easter sales as about the same as last year with prices practically the same also. Easter lilies were very scarce. Geraniums sold well. Home-grown cut flowers were not equal to the demand. All plants sold readily and roses, carnations and daffodils moved the best of the cut stock. The early Easter compelled the florists to wrap stock. Church decorations helped out considerably.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Business generally was about the same as last year, according to the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. Prices were but slightly above normal and this greatly stimulated sales. The supply of plants and cut flowers was ample. Lilies and azaleas were most in demand of the plants. Hyacinths singly and in pairs were also popular. In the cut flowers, lilies, roses, violets, carnations, narcissi and tulips sold in the order named. Made-up baskets of plants sold well. The blizzard on Good Friday kept everybody inside and the loss to the florists was no doubt considerable.

 Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
 June 24-26, 1913.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. A. Naldrett, representing Kelway & Son, Langport, Eng.

THE garden seed business of the country for the spring of 1913 is well on its way to the end.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—D. I. Bushnell of the D. I. Bushnell Co. will sail from New York for Europe about May 4.

THE death of Frank Emerson at Mercedes, Tex., April 23, is recorded in our obituary column this week.

CABLE advices of April 30 indicate that early sales of French white Roman hyacinths are being made by growers at advanced prices.

ENGLISH papers are calling attention to the scarcity of seed potatoes in that country and the greatly increased imports of the tubers this season.

J. E. NORTHRUP and party left Chicago for Minneapolis last week, although his condition was not much improved. Mr. Northrup was taken to his home, where he has gained somewhat.

A DRASTIC and highly objectionable Seed Bill, House No. 534, has been introduced in the Illinois legislature. It is said to be almost identical with the recent Wisconsin bill, which was drawn up as a result of an investigation by a legislative committee and is very radical.

WAKEMAN, O.—C. S. Clark reports having done the largest business on all of the different varieties of seed corn, especially field corn, that he has ever done. He has shipped twice as many carloads during the month of April as he shipped one year ago. He has been averaging three carloads per day, and the end is not yet.

RECENT reports on the French bulb crop indicate that late rains should supply sufficient moisture to give an average crop of the various sizes of Paper White narcissus. The general dryness of the winter is thought not to have affected the Roman hyacinths as much as some of the growers have predicted, it being conceded that Roman hyacinth bulbs do not require so much moisture as most other kinds. The action of the growers' syndicate on May 3 is awaited with interest by all of the trade both in Europe and America.

Iowa Weights and Measures Law.

The Iowa legislature has passed a new weights and measures law to take effect immediately. The state dairy and food commissioner is charged with the duty of carrying out the provisions of the act, and is given power to appoint a chief inspector of weights and measures. It is provided that boxes for the sale of berries, onion sets, etc., must hold at least one quart, pint, or half pint, dry measure. Boxes which do not fulfill the provisions are to be confiscated. This part of the law is not to take effect until October 1, 1913.

Tariff Reductions.

Proposed reductions in the tariff affecting horticulture seem to be as follows:

Nursery cuttings and seedlings, from 25 per cent to 15 per cent.

Fresh vegetables, from 25 per cent to 15 per cent.

Beans, from 45 per cent to 25 per cent.

Chinese Narcissus.

Amoy, China.—Weather conditions March 19 indicated that a full crop of Chinese narcissus would be gathered. Local use of these bulbs has decreased, hence last year's surplus and low prices. The bulbs now about to be harvested will likely make as large a crop as last year's but the 1914 crop will be smaller and price probably more nearly on a level with that of 1911.

Alfalfa Weevil Parasite.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—Parasites which will destroy the weevil that preys on the alfalfa crops of the west have been discovered in Italy by W. R. Thompson, representative of the United States bureau of entomology in that country. He has just notified Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau, that a shipment of these parasites is on the way from Europe.

Idaho Alfalfa Seed Case.

United States Senator James H. Brady has entered into the fight the state is to make through the attorney general's office and the state horticultural department to secure an accounting with the seed firm of Rosenberg & Lieberman, of Madison, Wis., claimed by the horticultural department to have misused the mails by sending literature broadcast over the country branding Idaho alfalfa seed as infected with weevil and at the same time disposing of the same seed under a Montana brand. The legal battle that is to be waged in this case promises to cause a genuine sensation.

The horticultural department discovered facts that led it to believe a reaction had set in prejudicial to Idaho seed. A quiet investigation was conducted and it is alleged that it was discovered Rosenberg & Lieberman had flooded the mails with literature branding this state's alfalfa seed.

It is also alleged to have been discovered that these people have bought up a large amount of Idaho alfalfa seed and, labeling it Montana seed, were disposing of it. Sears & Seabel, seed dealers of Chicago, who handle Idaho seed, found that something was preventing the sale of the Idaho product. Complaint was made to the federal officials and the probe has now been carried to Senator Brady at Washington.

A telegram was received from Senator Brady by State Horticultural Inspector McPherson relative to the matter. It is as follows: "H. G. Sears and John H. Seabel are here and have discussed with me the action of Rosenberg & Lieberman relative to Idaho alfalfa seed. I think it is a matter that should be looked into thoroughly and if these parties have wilfully misrepresented our state it should be called to the attention of the post office department at once."

State Horticultural Inspector McPherson wired a reply as follows: "Attorney general's office has taken the matter of Rosenberg & Lieberman up with post office federal authorities at Minneapolis. Attorney general also securing the affidavits from parties from whom seed was purchased by Rosenberg & Lieberman. Will advise later regarding same."—Boise Evening Capital News.

At present he, with his family, are in the South of France, having reached there in the course of a somewhat extended tour of information through Europe and the British Isles in the interest of horticulture and agriculture. Mr. Breck will join the commission, which sailed April 26 on the Saxonia from April 26 on the Saxonia from New York, at Rome.

California Outlook Serious.

Palo Alto, April 26.—The outlook for seed crops could not be much more unfavorable. This year will show the shortest harvest ever experienced in the history of seed growing in California. The rainfall in the principal seed growing district of the state, viz., Santa Clara and San Benito counties, averages less than 6 inches where the normal is around 15 inches and little or no rain can be expected after this date. Another important factor is that there was only 60 per cent of the normal rainfall in 1912, thus leaving the soil impoverished of water. We had an unusually cold, windy winter and most of the crops are a poor stand. Onion, which stools during winter when conditions are favorable, has this season made a poor growth and the plants have far less shoots than usual.

The acreage of onion is only about 60 per cent of last year but on the other hand there is considerable carried over, and this seed will in our opinion be of better germination than the present crop, as a dry season usually makes light seed. We do not think onions will average over 30 per cent of a crop and with the carry-over we may have available this year 50 per cent of the amount harvested last autumn. We have growing for seed about 1,000 acres, over an area of 100 miles in Santa Clara, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties, which are representative of the principal seed crops of California.

Some irrigation is being done, but only in a limited way, as it is not practical to irrigate all crops and none of the growers are in a position to do so. Most of the irrigation is confined to onion.

Lettuce is a very poor stand in general and late, and we do not think there is a possibility of over 25 per cent of a crop.

Radish will also be very short and we doubt whether it will average over 20 per cent.

Sweet peas will be a poorer crop than last year, and that was bad enough, the average being only about 15 per cent of a crop.

We have just had a week of unusually hot weather which has taken the moisture from the already dry soil and crops will surely go back from now on. Altogether the outlook is most unfavorable and we venture to assert that those growers who sold the government large lots of seed at exceedingly low prices are now wishing that they had retained them against the shortage which is bound to exist the coming autumn.

PORT CLINTON, O.—W. S. Woner has contracted to raise 300,000 tomato plants for a large canning company. He is building three additional greenhouses.

New York, April 26.—Cucumbers, 60 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; mint, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 20 cents to 35 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 25 cents to 40 cents per dozen.

Tomato Variations.

Bulletin No. 173, a valuable treatise on "Tomato Variations Induced by Culture" by Thos. H. White, has been issued by the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station. The effects of excessive amounts of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, and the effects of dried blood, dissolved phosphate rock, sulphate of potash and iron filings as well as of temperature, pruning and cross-pollination of well fed and starved plants, were noted. The plants growing on the complete fertilizers made a strong, vigorous growth. The same effect was obtained with dried blood, but the fruit was decidedly darker in color. The plants were lighter where dissolved phosphate rock was used and the fruit ripened earlier. No marked general variations were noted in the temperature test, although the experiments will be continued. A great increase in size resulted where pruning was resorted to.

HARDY PERENNIALS. The most complete collection of varieties and the largest stock in the country. Our Perennial plants have a National reputation. We spare no expense to have them in the best possible shape for the planter. Such varieties that move better when pot grown are prepared in this shape. This does not mean little seedlings, but in the majority of cases the plants were field grown, were dug and potted during the fall and winter months and are of just the right size to give immediate results. They are not to be compared with so-called field clumps. Try them and be convinced.

Nymphaea.

ROSES FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING TO GIVE IMMEDIATE RESULTS. We have three hundred thousand 5 and 6-inch pots the usual Dreer stock and the style of plants your retail customers are looking for. These are all two-year field grown plants which have been potted during the winter months and which were stored in cold houses and frames and which are now in prime condition for out-door planting. The collection is the most up-to-date, including many new varieties not offered by anyone in the trade.

 Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

NOGALES, ARIZ.—B. W. Getsinger is establishing a nursery near here. F. G. Sheffer, a nursery expert, has charge of the work.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. — The Brainard Floral and Nursery Co. has discontinued its cut flower business and changed its name to the Brainard Nursery and Seed Co.

BERLIN, MD.—Orlando Harrison, of Harrison's Nurseries, has purchased 3,000 acres in Surry county, Virginia, and will plant in apples. He is also negotiating for North Carolina real estate.

MADISON, WIS.—Less than 20 per cent of the nursery stock sold in this state is home grown, according to Prof. J. G. Sanders. A state nurserymen's association has been formed to push the Wisconsin nursery trade.

WESTERN SPRINGS, ILL.—Vaughan's nurseries are taking in heavy shipments of handsome evergreens, imported from Europe, in choice kinds which have proven to be absolutely hardy here during the past three seasons.

Seedless Grape Fruit.

Noting the article entitled, "Seedless Grape Fruit Next," in your issue of April 5, page 622, will say that the Marsh Seedless grape fruit is a practical reality, many thousands of trees having been set the past ten years in Florida and the West Indies. One of our neighbor's groves is simply loaded with them yet, as they hold on until very late in the season. The seeding varieties do not hold so late as the seeds sprout in the fruit and then it falls off the trees, but not so with the Marsh Seedless, which has no seeds to sprout.

Pacific Coast Nurserymen.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen will be held at Portland, Ore., June 17-20, in joint convention with the American Association of Nurserymen. The roster of the Pacific Coast association showed a membership of 272 at the last meeting. A standard for grading stock has been adopted and is now generally in use. The local committee, including M. McDonald, J. B. Pilkington, F. W. Powers and H. A. Lewis, are making preparations for the entertainment of visitors.

PEONIES.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."
This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply; and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as alpine and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

ROSE AFTER-SATISFACTION.
When you buy G. & R. ROSES you get along with the after-satisfaction—that sense of realizing all the success that should come from planting quality roses, the knowing that no better results are possible to be obtained outside of G. & R. Roses. It is the after-satisfaction that has compelled us to plan to grow for the coming season one million additional Roses. Think of it—the after-satisfaction selling five million roses, and demanding a million increase in one year! Going some! you say. Yes, but are you getting your share of this Rose after-satisfaction? If not, why not? Plant G. & R. quality roses. None better, none so good. Our new catalog giving prices on all roses and other plants now ready. Write for it today.

Lawn Silicate

For Killing Weeds in Lawns.

LAWN SILICATE is unquestionably superior to any preparation ever applied as a top dressing to lawns to destroy Plantain, Buckhorn, Dandelion, and other low growing flat leaved weeds that a lawn mower will not kill. It is odorless and is easy to apply. Does not stain or injure hands or clothing. Is positively the most economical, quickest and most effective method of getting rid of weeds ever devised.

A 5-lb. package covers 200 to 500 square feet. It does not kill the grass, but the weeds are practically all killed in 24 to 48 hours and are afterwards literally burned up and blow away.

This is not a "fairy tale." We invite investigation. It is sold on "money back guarantee."

kills plant Lice of every species.*

The Recognized Standard Insecticide.

Not a cure-all, but a specific remedy for all sap sucking insects infesting plant life, such as green, black, white fly, thrips, red spider, mealy bug and soft scales.

$1.00 per Quart. $2.50 per Gallon.

FUNGINE

An infallible remedy for mildew, rust and bench fungi. Unlike Bordeaux and lime and sulphur it does not stain the foliage, but cleanses it.

75c per Quart. $2.00 per Gallon.

VERMINE

A soil sterilizer and vermicide. Destroys eel, cut, wire and grub worms, maggots, root lice and ants. Used 1 part to 400 parts water, it does not injure plants, but protects your crops against ravages under the soil.

$1.00 per Quart. $3.00 per Gallon.

All are spraying materials and are effective in the greenhouse and in the garden.

Two Neighbors' Experiences

BOTH of these are actual photographs of neighbors. By the merest coincidence our photo man happened along at just the right time to snap them. Are you like the man on the left, who bought roof bars that cost less than ours, and when he came to untie the bundles, the bars jumped all out of shape because of the unseasoned cypress?

Or are you "the happy folks" kind, like the man on the right, who paid more for our bars, because they were worth paying more for?

When he untied his bundles they lay as straight as when they left the mill machines.

There are no two ways about it, cypress is not fit to go into a greenhouse until it has air-dried for not less than two years.

Ours always is!

Then another thing—a grower doesn't expect to get as good a price for "the run of the cut" in his roses as he does for his long-stemmed, selected ones.

Neither can you expect to buy sap-free, sorted cypress as cheap as you can the "run of the mill" kind.

We sell only the one kind; and it's the only kind worth putting into your house.

Send for prices.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Peonies.

The peony is one of the most important flowers to the florist during the early part of June, and they are used in large quantities for decorations and other floral work. In cutting peonies for market especially those that are to be shipped it is best to cut them when the first petals unfold, and allow them to open in water. They ship much better in this condition and also last much longer. Where they are allowed to remain on the plant until open the flowers not only bruise more or less in transportation, but the petals drop more easily when the flowers are unpacked if they are open when cut and made ready for shipment. In cutting the flowers from the plant, many growers make the mistake of cutting too low. The demand of the customers is of course for long stems, but for the good of the plant there should be left two well-formed leaves upon the stem when the flower is cut off. This will allow enough foliage for the plant to continue its growth and thoroughly ripen off.
Where the plant is cut back too severely the root action is injured and a diminished number of flowers will be the result in the succeeding year.
Keep the plants tied up by stakes and strings outside of the row; a heavy rain when the plants are heavy with buds will often knock them down and ruin many of the flowers.

Ficus Elastica.

While the rubber plants do not enjoy the popularity that they did ten or more years ago, yet there is always more or less demand for good small plants every fall and cuttings rooted now and given good culture can be grown to fine stock at that time.
Every plantsman will have plants of Ficus elastica that have outgrown the salable size or have lost many of the lower leaves and the tops of these can be propagated during the warm weather. The best way to root the young plants is on the plant by mossing the cut. Make an incision in the stem about half way through, in which insert a small stick about the size of a match stick to keep the cut open. Bind around the cut wet moss which should be firmly tied on with raffia and kept wet constantly. The plant should then be placed in a warm, moist house, kept fairly close, and in two to four weeks the roots will be seen protruding from the moss. The top should then be cut off and potted in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot and grown in a warm, close house until the roots have become established in the soil. If a number of these plants are being grown, a mild hotbed can be made up outside, built up with boards so as to allow 18 inches of room between the soil and glass, and covered with a shaded sash. Plunge the pots in the soil and if the frame is kept close, allowing air only on the warmest days, the plants will grow rapidly.

As fall approaches more air can be admitted and the plants gradually hardened off and splendid stock will be the result.

Rambler Roses.

The plants of the different varieties of rambler roses that were forced for Easter and late winter flowering will have passed out of bloom and should be grown on for another year's flowering, and will make larger plants than those of this year. These plants immediately after blooming commence the growth of the wood that will bear flowers another year, and as the soil in the pots has become pretty well exhausted they will require potting at once. Uncoil the canes of those plants that were twisted into forms and tie them to a strong stake, for with the new growths that will be made it will be almost impossible to keep them to the shape. New canes will spring from the base of the plant which will make fine blooming wood and these should be given room to grow and mature.
With the plants that were grown in standard form, such as umbrellas or parasols, it will be necessary to cut these young canes out if that form is to be retained another year, and induce new growth at the top. Re-pot the plants in a good rose soil, that is, a compost of three-quarters fibrous loam and one-quarter old cow manure. Many of the plants will not require a larger pot, for much of the old soil can be shaken off, if carefully done, and the plant re-potted in the same pot in the new soil. Pot firmly ramming the soil down with a blunt stick. Keep the plants in the shade for a few days until the roots have obtained a hold in the new soil. Then they should be placed outside, the pots plunged in the ground to the rim, and in a place where they can be supplied with water throughout the summer.

Ardisias.

One of the most popular berried plants for Christmas is the ardisia, but it is not grown as generally as it should be, the production being left to a few plant growers, for it is of very easy culture, the only drawback being that it is of very slow growth. The seeds on the old plants are now thoroughly ripened and should be sown at this time. They germinate slowly and should be sown about an inch apart, in rows the same distance apart, and they can then be left in the seed box until early summer, and potted in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, and grown in a warm, lightly shaded location. They should be potted in good fibrous loam and kept in a moist, close house that all the growth possible may be obtained at this time, for the plant naturally checks in winter. In early spring these young plants will flower and produce a crop of berries for the next winter. The plants that have been grown for three years or more have generally passed the ornamental stage for they lose their leaves and have a "leggy" appearance. When they reach this stage the tops can be rooted and a fine plant obtained. This can best be done at this time of the year by cutting in to the stem and wrapping the cut with wet moss firmly tied around. Keep the plants in a warm, close atmosphere and the moss continually damp, and in four or five weeks new roots will grow in the moss when the top can be cut off and potted, still keeping the plant in the same temperature until new growth starts. This operation will not interfere in any way with the plants blooming for they frequently set an abundance of buds while the top is making new roots. The brown scale is the greatest enemy of ardisias even in the young stage and they must be removed at once when found for they sap the strength of the plant. The older plants should be frequently sponged with strong nicotine solution.

Foliage for Design Work.

During the hot summer weather, it is often difficult to obtain what might be called select flowers for funeral work, but orders will be received for some very nice work and the dealer is at his wits' end to supply or obtain the necessary materials. The retailer having a greenhouse can readily have a good assortment of high colored foliage plants that make most beautiful designs for just such an occasion. The crotons are particularly adapted for this purpose, and a few plants kept growing in the house, especially the varieties bearing large and highly colored leaves, will give a supply which can be had at any time. The Rex begonias are also very useful for making designs and the silver leaved ones make beautiful work with other foliage. Begonia metallica and B. argentea guttata are also good plants to grow for design work, and there are a number of other plants of variegated foliage that can be used for this purpose. All of this foliage is quite soft during the summer and unless properly prepared, wilts quickly. The leaves and branches should be cut the day before and allowed to stand in a tub of water over night, and they will then absorb enough water to stand up for a long while.

thousand red and white carnations were used to complete it. The tree scheme was of white flowering almond, the base being filled in with Richmond roses. The height of the design was nine and a half feet.

Another Foreign Delivery Triumph.

A customer came into the store and said, "The S. S. Caronia arrives at Liverpool about April 15 or 16 from a Mediterranean trip, and I would like some corsage bouquets delivered on board the ship or at the wharf." Not knowing a good correspondent at Liverpool, I wrote a nice letter to the postmaster, including the money for the bill, and asked him to transfer this order to a good Liverpool flower shop. On May 2 I received a letter from the florist who filled the order and I am much pleased with it, because it shows the good spirit the English florist has towards our American orders, and it is well worth while for the members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery to get a chain of reliable florists all around the world. Although they had some trouble in filling this order they enjoyed making the delivery just the same. The following is a copy of the letter:

Liverpool, Eng., April 19, 1913.

Dear Sir:

We received your letter from the postmaster last Monday and on enquiring about the "Caronia" we found it had arrived on Sunday and the Cunard office could give us no information regarding the ladies. We then phoned all the hotels where they were likely to go, but without success. However, on Tuesday we sent a messenger down to the purser on board the "Caronia" and he told us the ladies were going back to America the following Saturday. Therefore we sent the flowers down to the "Carmania," and they were placed in the ladies' own cabin.

We were very pleased to receive your order and will be pleased to execute any orders you might be good enough to send us.

Yours truly,

Turner Bros.

These deliveries are becoming more frequent and when we get a complete list of all foreign reliable retail florists we can come before the public and make this an everyday affair. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery is working hard on this problem, and will solve it before long for the benefit of its members. Being a member of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery then will be thought a great deal more of than at the present time, and it will make every retailer help to work and advertise these facilities.

The average retailer only has in mind the coming-in orders, but he does not realize that the going-out orders are almost as profitable, as it means a net profit of 20 per cent with no more work than to write a letter or send a telegram. We now have quite a number of foreign correspondents, but the chain is not complete enough to be sent out to our members. However, anyone wanting an address in any country may drop me a card and I will let him have the address at once.

Suggestion For a May Window.

Like the "Fetes des Narcisses" which take place during May in Switzerland, where that stately flower grows wild on the mountain slopes—let us feature this flower when the supply is plentiful by devoting a special window display showing it to the best advantage. While all good Americans cannot attend the May day festivities in Switzerland, they can take home a goodly bunch for the dining room table. A rustic stump is always a good setting and by using green sheet moss around it will help to emphasize the effectiveness. Place on this an immense copper bowl filled with narcissi. Also arrange small white baskets with growing narcissi enhancing their beauty by using a number of small growing ferns as a finish. A large tray covered with green moss can be placed in the foreground on which arrange narcissi nosegays. On the sides of the window and where most effective arrange automobile vases and baskets with the same flowers, using a little fern as a softening. Or you can use the French method of scattering tall vases (they should be of crystal) here and there, filling each one with narcissi around which a white lacette bouquet holder can be prettily fastened. Make some bouquets in loose manner, some in the Colonial, or round flat effect and some in the pyramid style with a suggestion of maidenhair fern. Place on each bouquet a dainty printed card stating the kind of bouquet. That is, specifying whether the design is the French or Regent street nosegay, the AMERICAN EAGLE DESIGNED BY A. T. BUNYARD, NEW YORK.

Colonial or pyramid design and so forth.

A funeral piece can also be made of narcissi around which a mat of tea ticking or raffia may be placed artistically. The double bunch tied with a wide sash ribbon in through the center would be the most effective piece. Or a crescent design could be prettily fashioned of narcissi. Place tall palms in the background of your window and if a touch of color is desired a fine vase of American Beauty roses will add to its effectiveness. Let us emphasize the flowers of May in our window displays for every day of the month the narcissus with its beautiful clusters bursts into bloom.

THE ROSE.

Roses in the United States.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., in the English National Rose Society's Annual for 1913.

In average winters, over a great part of our country, we have a wonderful abundance of sunshine which enables us to grow roses and to bring them into bloom in the coldest weather, at least a few varieties so lend themselves, and these few sorts are grown in enormous quantities.

Our rose houses are now constructed on scientific lines, giving the freest possible admission to every ray of light and of sunshine. Very light wrought iron is used for a skeleton, just strong enough to support the slender wooden sash bars and the double-strength glass which form the roof. These modern glass structures are nearly all heated by steam in radiating pipes varying from 1¼ inches to 2 inches in diameter; a vacuum pump is used to clear them of the water formed by condensation; a temperature from 56° to 65° Fahrenheit is required according to variety. The houses vary from 200 feet to 1,000 feet in length, and are of varying widths, running from 60 feet down to 32 feet; the benches on which the roses are grown are four feet to five feet wide. The bench bottom is either of cypress boards, four inches to six inches in width, and spaced three-fourths of an inch apart for drainage, or it is of ordinary porous drain tile; everything possible is done to make sure of a quick drying out of the soil after watering. A few growers use what are called solid benches; these are constructed by first putting in a porous 4-inch drain tile, over this eight inches or 10 inches of broken stone, and upon this the soil is spread, usually about 10 inches, while on the shallow board and tile bottoms only four inches to six inches of soil is used.

SOIL AND STOCKS.

The preparation of the soil is very important; virgin sod wherever possible is used, composted with one-fourth well rotted manure, to which is added a good sprinkling of bone flour. Nearly all our growers now prefer plants grafted on manetti for indoor work, as they produce a stronger growth, and are not liable to the root disease of own-root stock; some of the yellow-flowered sorts, like Perle des Jardins and Sunburst and some others, have an inclination, as the season goes on, to canker at the union, but nearly all of our forcing varieties do admirably on manetti. Briar stocks, either seedlings or from cuttings, are never used for winter forcing, as this stock has a decided tendency to go dormant in the short days, and nothing alarms the rose grower more than to see his forcing roses getting "sleepy" in mid-winter. The young grafted plants are shifted on, absolutely without check, until they are established in 4-inch pots, when they are planted in the soil of the benches, which is done any time from March till the first of July, according to the plans or the convenience of the grower.

The rose plants are spaced 12 inches to 16 inches apart and are kept carefully tied to wire stakes; they are given frequent top dressings of old pulverized manure, both horse and cattle, and also very light and frequent sprinklings of sheep manure, dried blood, etc. Quite a number of growers boil their manures in a vat, with steam pipes, before applying, and certainly get good results. Rose plants treated as above will have attained a height of three feet or over by January 1. Red spider, thrip, the leaf-roller, and greenfly demand constant attention, as well as mildew and the disease known as black spot; this last disease is the dread of the growers of American Beauty (Mme. Ferdinand Jamin).

BEST VARIETIES TO GROW.

Only a limited number of varieties can be forced profitably in the winter, and the grower wants to be reasonably sure of a good return per square foot of glass before admitting a variety to his benches. The four Killarneys, White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Killarney Queen, and the original Killarney hold a very large proportion of the space allotted to forcing roses the country over, with Double White and Killarney Queen entering their final test the present season. Double Killarney has been discarded because of its faded color, and Pierson's Dark Killarney is too slow in growth; if the splendid growth of the former could be combined with the glorious color of the latter, we should have little left to desire in a red rose.

Richmond is still our only red at present, and likely to hold first place for some time to come; Meteor, a lovely red rose, was discarded long ago because it required too high a temperature, making it expensive to produce; and My Maryland, a lovely pink, must be kept at 65° or it will go to sleep in mid-season.

Radiance, an American introduction, is in considerable favor and is being grown in good quantity; the new yellow varieties are in high favor, Mrs. Aaron Ward being a great favorite with flower buyers, being especially adapted for corsage bouquets and for table bowls.

Sunburst has fine forcing qualities, and is a wonderful keeper, lasting splendidly on or off the plant. Lady Hillingdon has its admirers, and is planted in good numbers in the east;

it is best in mid-winter. The writer predicts a great future for Sunburst as it is a strong grower, with handsome foliage and grand bud, a fit companion for the best grade of Killarney, but Mrs. Aaron Ward holds a place of its own with the ladies, and is deeply entrenched in their affections.

Antoine Rivoire is largely planted and is growing daily in popularity; a bunch of it is a beautiful sight; its canes are long and stiff, its foliage ample, and the flower is lovely in color and form; this is the variety traveling under the synonym of "Mrs. Taft";

W. D. Desmond.

the explanation of the synonym is that the bundle of Antoine Rivoire reached this country without a label.

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer is destined to find a place, for it is one of the most vigorous growers, producing large quantities of buds on long stems; Rose Queen, Melody, Mrs. David Jardine, and Rhea Reid, are all grown in limited quantities; in certain localities one or other of these sorts flourishes amazingly, but with the majority of growers they have been disappointing.

American Beauty (Mme. F. Jamin) is grown by the hundred-thousands; some places are given over entirely to this one variety. It brings the highest price of any cut rose, and is eagerly sought on account of its fragrance, its long stiff stem, its grandly beautiful leafage, as well as the loveliness of the bloom. An incident in the history of this rose may be familiar to some of my readers. The late Hon. George Bancroft, the historian, was a great lover of the rose, and after his demise a beautiful variety, without a label to disclose its identity, was found growing in his garden. A former countryman of yours, Geo. Field, discovered the value of his rose for forcing, and the provisional name of American Beauty was given to it, which name has clung to it ever since, and now it would be impossible to change it.

QUALITIES OF GOOD FORCING ROSE.

It might be interesting to tabulate the qualities that a rose must have before it can secure a place as a forcing variety: 1—A strong, clean, free growth; 2—A long, shapely bud, erect and pointed; 3—Not too many petals, or it will not open well in dull weather; 4—A resistant texture, that will make it a good keeper and shipper; 5—A strong stem and good foliage; 6—The color must be true; if pink, it must not shade into lavender; if red, it must never "blue"; if yellow, the tone must be intense; 7—It must produce bloom freely, otherwise it cannot be grown profitably; 8—And it must not show the slightest tendency towards going dormant in the winter; 9—It should be fragrant; 10—It must prove popular.

Do you wonder that, out of the thousands of roses in existence, so few answer our requirements for winter forcing in America? La France, Mrs. W. F. Grant, and its sport, Joseph Lowe, Wellesley, Papa Gontier, Liberty, Mme. Hoste, Mme. Caroline Testout, Muriel Grahame, Golden Gate, Sunset, Sunrise and Mme. Cusin, have all had extensive trial but are now discarded. Catherine Mermet, and its sports, the Bride and Bridesmaid, had the longest run of popularity, but they have practically passed off the stage. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria is a favorite for summer growing under glass, but in our northern states it produces few flowers during the five coldest months.

Our firm has made a specialty of testing new roses, both our own seedlings and the importations, and many and grievous have been our disappointments. The writer has seen charming roses at Lyons, interesting varieties at Trier and Luxemburg, grand novelties in England, and seductive seedlings in Ireland, yet how few of them gain a foothold in America!

M. Pernet-Ducher's novelties not yet disseminated have great promise, especially in the line of yellows, and as they are close kin to Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward, we hope for some clear, bright shades of golden hue; and in the Irish rose fields last July it did look as if the ultimate had been reached; critical judgment fails one in that genial air, but it does look as if Killarney has some fine cousins who will migrate to this country at some not far distant day. Garden roses are a different matter; our country is so large, our climatic conditions so various, that a congenial home can be found for any rose in existence within our borders, and our own Pacific states stand unrivalled in the magnificent blooms produced.

News from the Convention City

Society of American Florists. ADVISORY BOARD MEETING.

A meeting of the advisory board was held at Minneapolis April 29-30, at which were present all of the committee, also C. H. Critchell, Cincinnati, and John Young, secretary of the S. A. F. The general situation regarding the trade exhibition was reviewed and plans laid whereby the exhibitors in the trade section would be given sufficient space by widening the aisles more than has been done in past exhibitions of this kind. Both the Auditorium and the Coliseum are magnificent, large, light halls, and all the exhibition space will be on the ground floors. All materials for structural work will be placed in the Coliseum. At no previous convention has there been such favorable opportunities to make displays. In view of the fact that the outing day will be the fifth of the convention, it will give the trade people another day for business without having any event to detract the attention.

The most impressive thing so far is the wonderful work that had been accomplished by Theodore Wirth and others in Minneapolis in conjunction with the outdoor plant exhibition. Adjacent to the Armory, where the convention will be held, the surroundings of the outdoor exhibit are naturally beautiful, and it behooves the growing interests to give every support to this laudable undertaking, this being the first time when by arrangement the society is in a position to guarantee the plantmen that their exhibits will be cared for and grown on under every favorable condition, having the constant attention of competent help who will be under the supervision of Mr. Wirth.

Everything is ready for immediate planting, but as the space is limited, application should be made at once to Secretary John Young, who is superintendent of the trade exhibition. He will forward applications immediately to Mr. Wirth. This outdoor plant exhibit will be a success and will be one of the features of future conventions. The price of space is nominal—only sufficient to cover the expense of planting and maintenance of the plants during the season. Outdoor plant exhibits must be shipped, charges prepaid, to Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn., marked (Convention Exhibit).

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Minneapolis Greenhouse Establishments.

Floriculture in Minneapolis, Minn., is nearly as old as the city itself. In 1857 Dr. Alfred E. Ames, uncle to the famous Dr. A. A. Ames, instructed his brother, then a consul in Hamburg, Germany, to send him a gardener. Wm. Buckendorf was engaged. He, therefore, was the first florist. A year later they built two neat greenhouses on Eighth avenue south, between Fourth and Fifth streets. For several years these greenhouses were kept for private use only, when Mr. Buckendorf decided to operate them for commercial purposes. In 1866 Mr. Buckendorf built a greenhouse on his own property, Fourth street and Seventh avenue south. This ground was sold for building purposes and in 1890 Mr. Buckendorf built another house on Fourth avenue south and Seventeenth street, which was discontinued in 1900.

In 1862 Wyman Elliot, having a large nursery on Park avenue, built two greenhouses where Elliot park is today. In 1865 R. J. Mendenhall decided to have a few small greenhouses for his private use. He engaged Henry Buckendorf, a brother of William Buckendorf. They began in a small way and kept enlarging until the plant was one of the foremost in the country. This was located on Nicolet avenue and Eighteenth street south. First avenue was not opened up at that time. After this plant covered a city block and some space across the street, another one was started at Twenty-eighth avenue south and Thirty-eighth street. In 1903 Mr. Mendenhall sold out to L. S. Donaldson, and one year later the greenhouses were torn down.

About the same year Mr. Mendenhall started, George Brackett built a greenhouse where the City hospital is now located. This was operated a few years by Mr. Brackett, with Boose as florist, and later — Kilvington in the same capacity. In 1883 Mr. Kilvington built a greenhouse near Lakewood cemetery on Hennepin and Thirty-sixth street south, which has been dismantled for many years.

In 1880 — White started the establishment on Twenty-second avenue and Garfield street, N. E., which now belongs to O. H. Carlson. Mr. White had a nursery, a dairy, and one small greenhouse. This was purchased in 1905 by O. H. Carlson and rebuilt into a modern plant. The same year C. A. Smith erected a plant at 3501 Portland avenue, which he operated until 1899, when it was bought by L. S. Donaldson. Mr. Donaldson has been running this in connection with his department store. W. D. Desmond is manager.

In 1886 Wesling & Hartman, then two young men, started what is now Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouse on Hennepin and Thirty-sixth street. Two years later they separated. Mr. Hartman remaining on the old place, and Mr. Wesling building in his present location, 3538 Hennepin Avenue. The same year Fred Bush began the erection of his present handsome plant on Lyndale and Fiftieth street south, then far out in the country. In 1888 John Vasatka started on Chicago avenue and Thirty-fourth street south and he is still doing business at the same stand. In 1887 Henry Bartsch opened up on Twenty-fourth street and Twenty-ninth avenue south. Five years later he moved to Sixth avenue north and Irving, where he stayed until he discontinued business a few years ago. In 1888 E. Nagel commenced the greenhouse now owned by his son, T. Nagel, on 1118 West Lake street.

About the same time Henry Buckendorf started in business on Aldrich avenue north and Western avenue. He stayed there until a large factory building was erected which obscured practically all the light, so he sold out to the factory and retired. Aug. Swanson began what is now called Merriam Park Greenhouse in 1882. Mr. Swanson kept enlarging this plant until it became a leader in the Twin Cities. He leased it a few years ago to Kaiser & Welander. Washburn, Desmond and Sunnyside greenhouses were built in 1890. Mr. Desmond's house on Portland and Twenty-fourth street, was sold in 1893 to R. J. Mendenhall. Gust Malmquist directed the building of Senator Washburn's greenhouse on Stevens avenue and Twenty-fourth street, and the last few years he has been running it on his own account. The Sunnyside greenhouse at 817 Fifth avenue S. E. was built by Miss Hilliker and it is now owned and operated by her husband, Walter Pier.

R. Will laid the foundation of the extensive plant of the Will Bros. Co. in 1892. It was run on a small scale until 1901, when the old houses were torn down and large modern houses built in their place. In 1898 the Drake greenhouse on Fourth avenue south and Lake street, was built. In 1900 John Munson commenced the plant of the Minneapolis Floral Co., Thirty-sixth street and Calhoun boulevard. By building additions from time to time this has become a leader in size. About this time greenhouse building became quite popular. In 1901 Sauer & Rosacker built the plant of the East Side Floral Co. at 1621 Adam street N. E. The next year Hans Rosacker started his own plant on Nineteenth avenue N. E. and Stinson boulevard.

Robert Stern built a greenhouse on Thirty-eighth avenue north and Girard in 1904. The same year — Drake erected a building across the street. Both plants are now operated by Mr. Stern. Two years later the following greenhouses were erected: Thos. Hall, Lyndale avenue and Thirty-sixth street south; Julius Rieck, 1318 Washington avenue north; Hiawatha Gardens Co., 3406 University avenue S. E. In 1911 the latter company built another plant on Lyndale avenue and Fifty-seventh street south. The same year Hopper & Magnusen built the plant of the Central Floral Co. on Central avenue and Twenty-sixth avenue N. E.

The park board started to build a greenhouse ranch at the Lyndale Farmstead, Thirty-eighth street and Bryant avenue south in 1897. Additions have been made since then. The plant now consists of five growing houses and the total amount of glass is 12,000 square feet. This completes the list, but material is already on the place of John Vasatka, Chicago avenue and Forty-third street, for a new modern plant.

Up until 1900 every grower was his own retailer and there were only two retailers, namely, Miss H. B. Whitted, who began in 1894 and Aug. Swanson in 1898. We now have a large number of stores. Thos. Lynes opened up in 1901, and R. Latham in 1903. In 1906 Miss H. B. Whitted moved to Fifth street and opened another store at Tenth and Nicollet in 1910. In 1912 she opened a store in the Radisson hotel building.

O. E. Amundson began business in 1904 and Carl Lindskoog in 1907. In 1912 W. F. Holmes and W. H. Boffending went into business. In addition there are candy and grocery stores which handle flowers as a side line, too numerous to mention. In 1900 Brant & Noe of Chicago opened up a commission house in Minneapolis, with Cal. Rice in charge. After a year's experience this was discontinued as not being profitable. After this, Cal. Rice and Arthur Rice continued the business under the name of Rice Bros. From a very small beginning, they now have a fine up to date establishment.

Affiliation.

Address by Adolph Farenwald before the Philadelphia Florists' Club.

Affiliation is the proper word for the subject on which I am going to talk to you tonight. It means to adopt children. Some of you have possibly seen my article, "Straight Talk." Your essay committee thought it wise for me to go into this subject a little more thoroughly, and as it is of vital interest to us all, I gladly consented. I start right off by giving you the kernel of the nut. Our national society, the S. A. F., should adopt all florists' clubs membership as her legitimate children, with $1.50 as dues, thereby getting a membership from ten to fifteen thousand on short order. Why should we do this? Because the S. A. F. has not enough members and funds to do its great mission justice. It is a national society without power, and it is up to us to give it that, so it can help all of us. Now, what can it do for us?

First, it should have a press bureau. This, to look after our interests which are jeopardized by false statements in newspapers; to send out educational articles, such as we have had lately in Philadelphia papers; to advertise nation wide. Second, it should have means to pay men to look after our interests regarding tariff, or other legislation. It should be able to get into line, either by itself or with other merchant societies, to fight excessive freight or express rates. Such matters as these should be taken care of by the S. A. F. for the benefit of its members. The S. A. F. through lack of funds, is not able at the present time to give us the necessary assistance in these matters.

For a single business man to attack a corporation is simply useless—a waste of time and money. For instance, there are the coal-carrying roads through the East. They are charging for the hauling of the coal as much as the coal itself costs. Other business corporations have taken this matter up to fight it, but our national society is not able to stand in the firing line. We growers, as an aggregate, are large coal consumers, and to have our expenses for freight reduced is only proper economy. The same way with the express companies. We are continually overcharged on those lines. The redress carried through by the S. A. F. for us some years ago against the express companies was a short-lived victory, as the express companies, inside of a year, were, in most places, back to their old rates, or nearly so, as the S. A. F. did not have the necessary means to follow up our success against them.

told us here one evening that we are all in the same boat, and he is right. Or, in other words, we have all the same interest—floriculture is our boat. It doesn't matter if a cut flower or a plant grower, retailer or commission man, our aim is to advance this boat with as little friction or damage as possible, as by this time it has grown to very large proportions; in fact, so large are its proportions that it is often rubbing its sides or running into the mud. We are today in the same fix with our boat, Floriculture, as the first great steamboat was, the Great us much good along those lines I have mentioned and others. In fact, what little the S. A. F. has done has been done mostly through the generosity and earnest desire of some of its most loyal members, at their own expense of time and money.

Fellow members, we have a national society, which, if properly backed up by the majority of the men in our profession, could give us splendid results. But, we must not stand pat, we must all be willing to do our little share in this crusade for the regeneration of our national society. The florists' clubs all over the country are the offspring of the national society. They are all strong and in a healthy financial condition. There should be no objection whatever to giving back to our national society what is actually her due. It will strengthen not only the S. A. F., but the florists' clubs all over the country as well. Nobody who has the least idea of the importance of our business, should have any objection to paying $1.50 a year to be a member of the S. A. F. We should have no trouble whatever in making it the strongest commercial horticultural society in the world, able to take care of its members, and by so doing solving the many conditions which, at the present time, are very perplexing.

I know it is uphill work. President Wilson, in his last week's speech at Trenton, said: "It takes courage for a handful of men to start a battle." I hope that all of you members of the Philadelphia Florists' Club will be with me, will be that handful of loyal men to do our best to bring about a larger and more useful national society, worthy of the great cause it stands for.

Dairying Helps Floriculture.

That progressive gentleman, Joseph Heacock, began commercial life raising garden vegetables for the market and drifted from that into the greenhouse business, then specialized as a rose grower, which soon made him famous. Later he took up the culture of palms and worked up the largest stock of home-grown plants in this country until his trade extended from coast to coast. Orchids were then taken hold of in his energetic way with the result that his is now one of the largest commercial collections in the state. As the business grew it was

The daily press goes on unchallenged when it comes out and tells the flower-buying public that prices for Easter, or other holidays, on roses and other flowers, are going to be very high, and that only millionaires can afford them. Such nonsense. There is where a press bureau should take hold. Or, the agitation against flowers at funerals. You all know that our business is hurt by such wrong statements, and our central press bureau would be the best and the only place to fight against it. The education when and how to use flowers is a problem for this bureau. Skillfully written articles, such as have been appearing in some of the Philadelphia papers, will educate the public and make them ashamed to wear artificially made flowers.

There is the tariff which should be taken care of by our national society. Just a few days ago, I received a communication telling in what shape the tariff on plants is at the present time. In many respects it was simply ridiculous the way it was worded. This should have been taken care of by our society. Sometimes it has taken care of it through some of its most interested members, who spent their time and money to work for the interests of our profession. But we cannot always ask these men to do so without the proper recompense. This time, it seems, it has passed over—nobody has paid any attention to it, and this ridiculous tariff will go on for another period.

Gentlemen, there are so many important jobs for the S. A. F. that I cannot go into them all. I just give some of the most important lines along which it should use its power. But, fellow members, such a great task cannot be performed by a few. Wallace Pierson, a few weeks ago, Eastern, years ago. I think it was about eight hundred feet long, but it lacked powerful engines and steering gear to make it a success.

Twenty-seven years ago, when this boat of Floriculture was a youngster, some of our best captains then put a new and most up-to-date set of engines and steering gear into it, called the S. A. F. It then, and for several years after, did its work well. But as this boat of Floriculture has grown so large, and steering gear and engines have not increased in the same proportion, its rudder of twenty-seven years ago is not able to keep us straight, and we get bruised and run into the mud. We need larger machinery and steering gear, which means membership and money. Without larger membership and increased funds, our national society cannot do necessary to add new greenhouses, which finally completely covered the ground at Wyncote, Pa. The natural growth of the business compelling the erection of more greenhouses, a farm of fifty acres was purchased at Roelofs and a house of the latest type, 50x600 feet, was erected. This was devoted entirely to rose growing, requiring 16,000 plants to fill it. This venture was very successful and prompted the building of another and still larger structure 72x600 feet. This house is also entirely planted in roses and gives promise of splendid returns.

The question of enough fertilizer in the shape of cow manure which is recognized as the best material for the purpose, has been solved in this case, as with a number of other large growers, by having it made on the premises. With this end in view another farm of 100 acres adjoining the original purchase was added and Mr. Heacock soon had this stocked and running to quite the equal of any of the farms in this section. The dairy is the feature of this farm. It is up to date in every respect, nothing being left undone that would at all add to its efficiency. The herd consists of eighty head of cows, two-thirds grade Holstein, one-third grade Guernsey. They have all been examined and declared free of tuberculosis. Their stable is sanitary to a degree. The floor is of cement with the trough of the same material in front and a gutter behind for the manure. This gutter is kept cleaned and flushed as often as necessary, everything being collected in a large underground cistern situated some distance away towards the stable, from which it is pumped directly to the rose beds. It is considered the most economical way of handling manure and the results are all that could be desired. Two modern silos eighteen feet wide and forty feet in height are large enough to contain all the corn from 45 acres of ground. A large air shaft that rises between them affords complete ventilation for the entire stable. A chicken house adjoining contains something over 300 fowls, while five head of horses and some twenty-five hogs at another barn make up the balance of the live stock.

The roses in the houses are in splendid shape. Cutting has been continuous since November and full crops are now in sight. Of the new varieties, Radiance looks as if it was a "comer." The growth is splendid and the flowers are borne on a stout long stem that commands for them a top market price. Mrs. Aaron Ward has not done well through the winter although it gives promise of coming into good crop soon. Lady Hillingdon is ideal in every respect except for the stem, which is too weak. It is thought that by careful growing this may be overcome to a certain extent. The mild winter has been a disadvantage to the proper growth of the plants. Without fire heat the beds do not dry out fast enough in mid-winter and water, which is so essential, could not be given.

OMAHA, NEB.—The city has been made a present of a greenhouse and its collection of tropical plants and flowers belonging to George A. Joslyn. They will be transferred to Hanscom park.

Tariff Amendments Adopted.

We are pleased to be able to advise you that all of the following amendments to Tariff Bill H. R. 3321 have been adopted by congress in response to our demand for a tariff free from the errors and ambiguities in former tariffs.

No. 1—Page 53, line 11, section 215, the words "and all other decorative or greenhouse plants" are omitted. This will make orchids, palms, azaleas and cut flowers dutiable at 25 per cent advalorum, and all other greenhouse or nursery stock not otherwise stated at 15 per cent advalorum under section 216. This will prevent disputes as to what is greenhouse stock or nursery stock.

No. 2—Page 53, line 14, section 215, the word "bulbs" is added after hyacinths. This changes "hyacinth clumps" to "hyacinth bulbs," dutiable at $2.50 per 1,000 bulbs.

No. 3—Page 53, line 16, section 215, the word "herbaceous" is prefixed to peony. Some peonies as Peony Moutan are grafted shrubs and not bulbs, and are dutiable at 15 per cent advalorum under section 216 instead of $10.00 per 1,000 under section 215.

No. 4—Page 53, line 18, section 215, changed so as to read, "all other roots, rootstocks, corms and tubers." This will aid in exact classification and avoid expensive disputes.

No. 5—Page 53, line 22, section 216, the words "Rosa rugosa" are added after multiflora. This is a most important change. It makes Rosa rugosa seedlings 3 years old or less dutiable at $1.00 per 1,000, unquestionably. The government cannot say now, collect duty of $4.00 per 1,000, as roses on Rosa rugosa seedlings are sold at $3.00 per 1,000, as under former tariffs. This will save honest importers much expensive litigation and will largely prevent fraudulent entries of budded roses as briar roses.

No. 6—Page 122, line 6, section 600, the word "coniferous" is prefixed to evergreen seedlings and the words "four years old or less" are added. This correction is of inestimable value to the government and honest importers; it should prevent boxwood, bay trees, rhododendrons, Koster blue spruce, kalmias, etc., being brought in free by reason of fraudulent entries as evergreen seedlings; it will also make large evergreens 5 years old or more dutiable at 15 per cent advalorum under section 216.

These amendments correct and simplify the tariff immensely as applied to horticultural imports. It will make it much easier for the customs officials to detect and correct fraudulent entries, it should avoid expense to honest importers now that "evergreen seedlings," "briar roses," etc., are defined, and it will largely prevent the confusion and abuses which have arisen under former tariffs owing to incorrect varying treasury decisions handed down at different ports of entry on the one item. These amendments do not change the rates of duty on proposed tariff in any way; to have recommended them would have meant the defeat of our important demands—a tariff free from errors and ambiguities.

Let us take this opportunity of thanking you, the government officials, congressmen and the numerous friends in the trade who have helped and supported us in this campaign, the benefits of which are obvious to every florist, nurseryman and seedsman in the United States who either directly or indirectly handles imported stock.

Meredith Flower and Vegetable Co.

The annual spring opening of the Meredith Flower and Vegetable Co. was held at its greenhouses at Libertyville, Ill., on Thursday, May 1. The opening was largely attended by the residents in the immediate vicinity and from several of the smaller towns farther north in Wisconsin. It is impossible to state just how many were present for the crowd kept coming and going all afternoon, but it is safe to say that nearly 200 people were presented with a carnation on that day. The Meredith people have 50,000 feet of glass and grow principally roses, carnations and bedding plants. J. E. Meredith is the general manager of the concern and Mrs. Ida Latshaw looks after the local interest. The firm disposes of nearly all its own output direct from Libertyville, shipping what surplus remains to the Chicago market. Business has been so good the past year that the firm will in all likelihood build an addition this summer. H. Nelson, Frank James, George Hedaik, foreman of the rose, carnation and plant departments, ably assisted the manager in escorting the vast crowd of sightseers through the plant on outing day.

Proposed Illinois Seed Bill.

H. 534. Introduced by Mr. McCabe, April 16, and referred to Committee on Agriculture.

A Bill for an Act to prohibit the sale of adulterated agricultural seeds, defining impurities and providing for seed inspection and penalty for its violation.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: No person, firm or corporation shall by himself, his agent, or as representative of any other person, firm or corporation, sell or offer for sale or distribution within the State for seedling purposes any lot or package of agricultural seeds, exceeding one pound in weight, unless the same when put up in either open or closed packages, shall have attached thereto a label on which is plainly printed or written in the English language the following: (1) Name and kind of seed. (2) Full name and address of seedsmen, importer, agent or dealer. (3) Statement of purity of the seed contained therein. (Impurities defined in Sections 3, 4 and 5 hereof.) (4) Germinating power of the seed. (5) State or locality where seed was grown.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this Act the term "agricultural seeds" shall include seed of the red clover, either medium or mammoth; white clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, timothy, orchard grass, Kentucky blue grass, red top, bromus inermis, oat grass, rye grass, the fescues, millets, other grass and forage plant seeds, flax, rape, buckwheat and cereals.

SEC. 3. (1) No agricultural seeds, as defined in Section 2 of the Statutes, shall be sold or offered for sale or distributed within the State which contain in greater numbers than one to one thousand of the seeds under examination the seeds of the following named noxious weeds: Canada thistle (carduus arvensis robs), couch, quack or quitch grass (agropyron repens Beauv.), clover dodder (casentia epithymum murr.), field dodder (casentia arvensis Beyrlieb), alfalfa dodder (casentia inderora choisy.), English charlock or wild mustard (brassica arvensis B. S. P.), Indian mustard (brassica juncea cosson), wild oats (tavena fava L.), corn cockle (agrostemma githago L.), ox-eye daisy (chrysanthemum leucanthemum L.), snapdragon or butter and eggs (linaria linaria karst.), buckhorn, ribwort or narrow-leaved plantain (plantago lanceolata L.) (2) Where the seeds of the weeds herein mentioned are present in fewer numbers than one to one thousand of the seed being examined a statement shall be so made on the label attached to the package naming the weed seeds present therein.

SEC. 4. Seeds of any other kind than those in the named sample, or those mentioned in section 3, when found in any sample of agricultural seeds shall be classed as impurities therein, and when present in quantity exceeding two per cent of the sample, either singly or in combination, the approximate percentage of each shall be printed on the label attached to the container, as required by section 1 of this Act.
 SEC. 5. Sand, dirt, sticks, broken seeds and other foreign matter shall be considered as impurities when found as agricultural seeds sold, offered or exposed for sale within the State for seedling purposes, and when present in the sample in quantity exceeding two per cent thereof the name and approximate percentage of each shall be stated on the label attached to the container.

SEC. 6. Agricultural seeds shall be considered as adulterated when they contain five per cent or more by weight of seed other than the named sample, and when so adulterated shall not be sold within the State.

SEC. 7. Agricultural seeds shall be considered as misbranded, (1) When seeds low in value are substituted under the label for those of similar appearance, but greater value. (2) When other than Illinois grown agricultural seeds are labeled as such. (3) When southern grown seeds are labeled as northern grown. (4) When seeds are in any other respect not true to the label under which they are sold or offered for sale. (5) When so misbranded agricultural seeds, as defined herein, shall not be sold or offered for sale within the State.

SEC. 8. The provisions and restrictions of this Act shall not apply to: (1) Any person growing, possessing for sale or selling seeds for food purposes only. (2) The persons selling or offering for sale to a seed dealer uncleaned seeds to be re-cleaned and tested by him before being exposed for sale upon the general market. (3) Seed that is in store for the purpose of re-cleaning, and which is not possessed, sold or offered for sale for seed purposes. (4) Mixture of seeds for lawn, pasture or meadow purposes, except that the sale of such mixtures is subject to the restrictions of sections 3 and 4 of the statutes.

SEC. 9. For the purpose of this Act seed shall be deemed pure when it contains no seed of any kind except the one being examined.

SEC. 10. The enforcement of this Act is hereby placed in the Agricultural Experiment Station, under the supervision of the director, and he is hereby empowered to appoint such inspectors and assistants as may be necessary to execute its provisions.

SEC. 11. (1) It shall be the duty of the inspectors and assistants to collect samples of agricultural seeds in the open market and analyze the same in conformity with the rules and regulations established by the seed inspector. They are vested with all necessary powers for the proper execution of their duties, including entrance upon or into all premises or grounds where seeds are being sold or exposed for sale, and by tendering payment at the current rates shall have power to take samples of all such seed; Provided, also, that a scaled duplicate sample is left with the dealer. All samples of seed sent to the inspector for testing, or collected by him or his assistants, shall be accompanied by a statement of the quantity of seed like the sample held for sale by the dealer. (2) A fee of twenty-five cents shall be paid for each sample of seed sent to the seed inspector for testing. Such fees to constitute a special fund for defraying the expenses hereof. (3) Prosecutions for violations of this Act shall be brought in the proper court by the district attorney of the county in which said violation occurred, upon complaint by the seed inspector or his assistants.

SEC. 12. Samples of seed collected in the open market by the inspector and his assistants shall be tested as herein provided and the results of all such tests shall be published in bulletins of the experiment station, together with the names and postoffice addresses of the persons, firms or corporations from which such samples were obtained.

SEC. 13. Guarantys of purity and viability shall be based upon tests made by the experiment station or by seed dealers or their agents, subject to retest and ratification by the experiment station when it shall be necessary. Dealers who are testing their own seeds shall be required to submit samples thereof to the experiment station for retesting upon demand of the inspector. Should the tests shown on the dealer's label not be substantially equivalent to the actual value of the seeds, as determined by the experiment station, the dealer shall be subject to prosecution and penalty, as defined in section 15 hereof; Provided, however, that before prosecution is begun the dealer shall be entitled to a private hearing on the case. Printed standards of purity and germination of agricultural seeds and directions for making analysis of seeds shall be furnished by the experiment station upon request.

SEC. 14. For the purposes of this Act a sample of agricultural seed, as defined in section 2 hereof, shall consist of not more than four or less than two ounces of the seed to be examined.

SEC. 15. Whoever violates any of the provisions named in any section of this Act, or who shall attempt to interfere with the inspectors or assistants in the discharge of the duties named herein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for each and every offense.

SEC. 16. To provide the necessary inspectional force and for collection of samples of seeds in the open market, together with traveling and other expenses incident thereto, there is hereby appropriated the sum of three thousand dollars annually. All expenses in carrying out the provisions of this Act shall be paid from the aforementioned fees and appropriation, upon approval by the director of the experiment station and audited by the Secretary of State, as other expenses are audited and paid.

SEC. 16. This Act shall take effect and be in force from and after July 1, 1913.

DETAILS of tariff amendments adopted and other important legislative matters will be found on pages 884 and 885 of this issue.

DURING the past few years growers have found such difficulty in obtaining adequate supplies of manure and soil that the more progressive have come to regard dairy farming as quite a necessary adjunct of floriculture. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., adopted the dairy idea some years ago, and Joseph Heacock has a well organized manure and soil producing farm connected with his establishment at Roelofs, Pa. Some description of the latter's operations, "Dairying Helps Floriculture," will be found elsewhere in this issue.

This is a whirling busy world,
But take this one small part
And show your mother, on that day,
The love within your heart.

Heating Records.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

In these days of strenuous striving after large sales at good prices and attempts to run a greenhouse at a reasonable cost, it seems to us the question of efficiency in heating is too seldom considered; that this indifference is due to lack of interest on the part of florists is apparent. Their time is taken up with other matters—they must keep their plants in good shape, they must wait on their customers, they must do a thousand and one things, and as the heating is a necessary evil, they do what they are forced to do and let it go at that. This letter is to try to induce them to watch out for the heating and keep records of costs for each season. The glass surface is the unit generally used in greenhouse firing, and the question is how many pounds of coal and what will be the cost of it for heating 1,000 feet of glass.

We would like very much to interest your florist readers and have them write the records of their experience in past years. We know there are many keen-witted men who just as thoroughly appreciate the benefit of saving a dollar by reducing costs as making it on the selling price of their product. Such men are apt to keep records and know what their cost of heating is.

Can you not call for records of this kind and induce a generous emulation on the part of florists to secure greater efficiency in their management and get heat at the lowest possible cost? Such information if given freely and accurately will be of great benefit to all florists, and will repay the time any man spends in preparing it.

EFFICIENCY.

[We shall be pleased to receive and print statistics of greenhouse heating, as suggested by our correspondent.—Ed.]

Gude's Tariff Letter.

The following is a copy of a letter sent under date of May 5 by Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, to each of the members of the Senate tariff committee:

The new tariff bill contains exactly the same errors in classification as the Payne-Aldrich law, which took years to rectify and is still open to much dispute. There cannot be any good reason why this tariff bill should go through filled with errors and ambiguities, which only serve to enrich lawyers, puzzle importers and allow openings for fraudulent entries. The wording should be clear and specific, and not an incentive to fraud and litigation, as it at present reads.

Sections 215 and 216, schedule G, cover horticultural products. On such items accuracy of classification is of vastly more importance than the rates of duty, because the duty depends upon the definition. I respectfully call your attention to some of those errors and request that they be corrected.

Section 215 rates greenhouse plants 25 per cent advalorum. Section 216 rates greenhouse stock 15 per cent advalorum. These terms mean the same. The words "or greenhouse" should be erased from section 216, as nursery stock is quite distinct from greenhouse stock.

The word "azaleas," section 215, is too vague. Some varieties of azaleas are greenhouse stock while others are nursery stock. The word "Indica" should be added after the word "azalea," as Azalea Indica is the only greenhouse plant. All other varieties come under the heading of nursery stock.

Section 216 rates "Myrobolan plum seedlings $1.00 per 1,000." Section 558 rates "Myrobolans" free of duty. It should be specifically stated whether section 558 refers to Myrobolan seedlings, seeds or fruits.

Section 600 rates "evergreen seedlings" free, but places them under the classification of "seeds." This should read "evergreen seedlings four years old or less," otherwise nothing could prevent large evergreen trees grown from seed coming in free of duty instead of paying 15 per cent under section 216 as nursery stock; besides it would pave the way for all kinds of fraudulent entries.

Section 216 rates "seedlings of briar rose three years old or less, $1.00 per 1,000," also "rose plants, budded, grafted or on own roots four cents each." After the words briar rose should be added "and Rosa rugosa." This is the principal briar rose in commerce. There are many treasury decisions on file to prove that it is a briar rose—not a rose; it is always a seedling, and properly dutiable at $1.00 per 1,000 as a briar rose, and not four cents each as a rose.

Section 215 rates "hyacinths" as "clumps" instead of "bulbs;" after the word hyacinth should be added the word "bulbs" to avoid further litigation.

In-as-much as our four trade organizations do not ask for any changes of duty on the new tariff bill, but only for correct classification, I earnestly urge that you use your influence to have the schedule corrected as outlined above.

Movable Glass Houses.

The advantage of being able to move a glass-house, heated or unheated, so as to cover in succession a number of plots of land planted in advance, has long been obvious to market gardeners. The only difficulty in bringing the system into common use has been that of moving great structures easily and without racking them, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle, published in London, England. That this difficulty has been entirely overcome I have been convinced without a shadow of doubt by the inspection of the patented invention of H. and A. Pullen-Burry, Ltd., of Sompington, near Worthing. When it is stated that a little son of A. Pullen-Burry, six years old, in March last, moved a double-span house, 41x97 feet, weighing, I was told, about 20 tons, for a few minutes in my presence, by turning a fly-wheel at one end of the house, which is moved sideways, the perfection of the mechanism may be easily imagined. I found that I could move the house with the greatest ease by turning the wheel with one hand. The movement, of course, is slow, as it should be; but the house can be shifted from the space which it covers over an equal space of fresh ground by one man in twenty minutes.

The house is exactly similar to an ordinary glass-house, except that, instead of being built on walls, it rests on a strong pitch-pine frame-work, which is carried on large wheels running on concrete walls a few inches above the ground. These walls run the whole length of the set of plots of land over which the house is to be shifted in the course of twelve months. They are placed at intervals of about 16 feet, and along each run five wheels, the middle one in each set, which is between the two span, being a driving wheel. The two outside walls have iron rails embedded in them, while the intermediate ones are plain concrete made smooth on the tops with cement. The boiler is fixed in one corner of the house, so as to run with the house on one of the outside rails. None of the wheels are flanged; but at each corner are wheels placed horizontally, so as to run along the sides of the iron rails just mentioned. These would keep the house quite square while it is being moved, even if the gearing did not work truly. As a matter of fact, however, the gearing runs so perfectly that, as already stated, there is no interval between the starting of the two ends of the house. The way in which the tendency to torsion has been overcome is one of the cleverest parts of the invention. By means of a simple arrangement of set screws, the driving shaft is allowed a graduated amount of play from one end to the other. In this way the motion of the shaft between the set screws takes up what little lost motion there would otherwise be owing to torsion, so that the motion of the shaft is imparted to all the driving wheels instantaneously. Before the actuating wheel has been moved around one-sixth of its circumference the house is in motion evenly at both ends, in spite of the fact that the gearing is 120 to 1.

Standing at the end opposite to the one at which the fly-wheel is stationed so that I could see the man beginning to work it, I found that there was not a moment's delay in the starting of the end at which I stood. Even in the case of a house 300 feet long, Mr. Pullen-Burry informed me, the two ends would start moving simultaneously.

The rotation of crops which may be finished off or helped forward to finish in the open air in the course of twelve months my means of one movable house can be varied indefinitely. The eleven plots laid out for the house inspected are for the following crops: 1, double white narcissus; 2, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower and carrots; 3, tomatoes and french beans, the latter to be gathered before the former are fully grown; 4-7, asparagus in successive lots; 8, mint; 9-10, Golden Spur narcissus; 11, Ornatus narcissus. The space covered by the eleven plots is one acre. When asked to name a rotation excluding flowers, Mr. Pullen-Burry off-hand suggested three plots of asparagus, one of cauliflowers, cabbages, lettuces, and carrots grown together; one of turnips, one of French beans and tomatoes together, and one of Globe artichokes for a succession to cover twelve months. The asparagus would be ready to be marketed in December and up to the middle of January, when they would command extremely high prices.

toes to be finished off in August and September, and one for finishing off a July-sown French bean crop, to be marketed in October.

It is further suggested that peaches, nectarines, choice pears, and even vines, trained on hinged trellises which can be bent down towards the ground when a hot-house is to be moved over them, could be included in the crops to be forced by means of a movable structure. Again, various crops can be started under glass, and left to mature in the open, the movable house being transferred to other crops. In theory, at least, there seems to be hardly any limit to the uses to which the new movable hot-house may be put, though it remains to experience to prove how far what appear to be reasonable expectations will be realized.

To me it seems almost certain that French gardening in this country will be superseded by the movable glass-house. It is estimated that the capital outlay in levelling an acre of land, constructing the concrete travelling ways, and purchasing a hot-house of two spans 10x100 feet, complete with boiler, hot water pipes, and cold water supply pipes, will be about 500 pounds. This is much less than the capital required for an acre of a French garden, including the vast quantity of manure which it requires, while the subsequent cost of manure will be greatly less than for a French garden, and the saving in labor and anxiety will be enormous. Moreover, a movable house is considered a "tenant's fixture"; and, in Mr. Pullen-Burry's opinion, would not be subject to rates.

A visit was also paid to the extensive orchards in which the various kinds of hardy fruit are grown, with

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

The warm days of the past week were productive of a large quantity of stock, especially roses, which have been received in heavy shipments the past few days. The roses are still of excellent quality and there is a plentiful supply of all varieties and all grades but a shortage is expected soon. Killarney and White Killarney, especially, are very plentiful, but like the other roses, are being sold in large lots at bargain prices. American Beauty roses are also in large supply and have sold for lower prices this week than they have for some time past. The shorter grades are in good demand but the long stemmed flowers are more plentiful. Richmond are selling well but there is also a surplus of this rose. There is a great variety of other stocks to be had for the outside flowers are coming in more heavily now, especially outside tulips and narcissus and quantities of lilac, both white and purple, and with the large amount of greenhouse stock available at this season the buyer has a great variety from which to select and with which to make a display. Carnations are in adequate supply to meet the demand, but there is no great over supply, and the stock that comes in finds good sale but not at any too good prices. Some growers are inclined to think that there will be plenty of carnations for Mothers' day and others again look for a shortage which will probably occur especially as far as the white varieties are concerned. Sweet peas are seen in large supply everywhere and are being offered very cheaply at many of the down-town loop stores. The trailing arbutus did not last long on the market, but what stock did arrive brought more money than it did last year. Orchids are a little more plentiful and are more generally displayed. Snapdragons are still plentiful and some exceptionally fine stock is obtainable. Spanish iris is shown in large quantities and is having a good sale. Some fine gladioli are arriving and the Bride is now daily offered as well as Mrs. Francis King and America. Lily of the valley is in good supply. Marguerites, both yellow and white, and the new variety, Mrs. Sanders, are seen in good quantity. The first peonies of the season arrived this week and both Queen Victoria, white and Officinalis red are seen on the market. Mignonette, lupines, pansies and calendulas all add to the great variety obtainable. On Wednesday noon, May 7, there was still a large quantity of accumulated stock on the market, but a few brisk days would clean up nearly all lines in short order.

NOTES.

Michael Winandy, who recently purchased the Hedrich greenhouses on Western avenue, has practically rebuilt the entire range. The M. Winandy Co.'s new improved heating system has been given a thorough test at this plant, and has proved so satisfactory that the manufacturers are willing to guarantee it, which they would not do for any other system.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of his choice prize-winning lily of the valley but the close of each day finds the stock well disposed of at good prices.

George Kaspar will open his new store at 4005 West Twenty-sixth street on May 15. Buchbinder Bros. of this city have the order for his refrigerator.

Governor Dunne on May 3 designated Sunday, May 11, as Mothers' day in the State of Illinois.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is featuring a large supply of fancy Spanish iris as well as choice American Beauty roses. The supply department is having a good run in Memorial day goods and the plant department at Morton Grove is taxed to the utmost in getting out orders.

Buchbinder Bros., 518 Milwaukee avenue, are having an unusually brisk demand for florists' refrigerators. The orders are coming from all sections of the country, but the majority are from the trade in this immediate vicinity.

John Kruchten is in the market for a few peony growers and would like to hear from some one who desires to ship stock to this market. Mr. Kruchten does a good business and is anxious to secure stock as soon as possible.

Joseph Ziska, the oldest wire manufacturer in this city, is busy manufacturing designs for Memorial day purposes. Joseph Ziska, Jr., looks after the supply department, which at present is enjoying a good run.

The Auburndale Goldfish Co. has moved to 1449 Madison street. Small fish are reported in short supply on account of the floods, in which this concern lost some 35,000.

The E. C. Amling Co. is still featuring fine snapdragons and sweet peas in quantity. The latter are exceptionally fine and are in great demand.

The C. C. F. A. bowling league resumed play at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys on May 7.

Lublimer & Trinz are now located in their new temporary quarters at 29 West Washington street.

Guy Reyburn, of A. Henderson & Co., has returned from a western business trip.

Chairmen of the convention trade committees celebrated the close of their labors with a supper at the Union Restaurant May 1. Toastmaster Poehlmann, on behalf of the album committee, presented J. C. Vaughan with a handsome souvenir of the occasion. Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists and Chairman C. E. Critchell of the S. A. F. sports committee, who had just returned from a meeting of the advisory board at Minneapolis, were in attendance and spoke very enthusiastically of the preparations for the coming convention.

W. W. Randall is seen at A. L. Randall Co.'s store now and will probably remain until the Memorial day rush is over. Eric Johnson says that his firm manages to clean up all its cut flowers each day even though all lines have been plentiful the past week.

A. L. Vaughan returned on May 3 from Milwaukee, Wis., where he was receiving treatment for rheumatism at the Sacred Heart Sanitarium. Mr. Vaughan is feeling much better now and is again attending to his duties at the store.

Kyle & Foerster are strong on sweet peas, of which they have had a good supply all season. Joe Welsh, formerly in the employ of the firm, is now assisting his father at his retail stores.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is offering both purple and white lilac now in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable stock.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. was greatly handicapped on May 3 when its usual large Saturday shipment failed to arrive at the store through the carelessness of the local express companies. It arrived the day following but was refused because the firm had already put in a claim for some $400. The express company sent the shipment back later to be sold to the best advantage and seemed disposed to settle the matter agreeably.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s baseball nine met its second defeat of the season on May 4 when one of the other Joliet teams gave them a good trimming. However, Superintendent Olsen has a pretty fast aggregation and is bound to stir things up in the penitentiary city before the season closes. Why not take revenge on the local florist nine?

Wietor Bros.' stock is arriving at the store in large quantities now but cleans up well each day notwithstanding the present market condition. N. J. Wietor has finally come to the conclusion that Mrs. Jardine is a rose of the past and will discard it next season.

E. E. Shelton of the Chicago Car Advertising Co. is calling on the trade in the interests of the Cook County Florists' Association with a view of having the local florists contribute to a general publicity fund to be spent in streetcar advertising.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association reports a good business with a brisk demand for carnations. This firm is now showing a fine line of plants at the store in addition to its regular line of seasonable cut flowers.

D. E. Freres is handling large quantities of stock nowadays and is at present featuring a fine grade of Killarney roses. Carnations are also one of his principal offerings.

John Zech and wife visited their old home at La Porte, Ind., on May 4 when they also attended the K. of C. banquet in that city which was quite an elaborate affair.

M. Pekarek, proprietor of the California Co., was drafted for jury service this week but was finally excused owing to pressure of spring work.

Chas. W. McKellar says that Cattleya Trianae is still arriving in good supply but that the demand also keeps up well.

Fred Hoerber says the coroner's inquest was held on May 3 at Des Plaines over the death of the two trainmen who were killed by the falling of a chimney at Hoerber Bros. plant during the recent cyclone. Accidental death was the verdict rendered.

At Peter Reinberg's store the Richmond is still the leader in roses although the other varieties are arriving in quantity now. Trade has been good at this house, all things considered, and a brisk Mothers' day trade is anticipated.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is already receiving a good supply of peonies, the first of the season arriving early in the week. The Peony King as usual will be on deck at the store with a large supply for Memorial day.

Percy Jones is doing a good supply business and is finding that his special weekly bargains are bringing good returns. The cut flower department under the management of T. J. Simon is having its share of trade.

H. Wittbold, Frank Reu, H. C. Blewitt, Sinner Bros., M. C. Gunterberg and A. E. Hunt & Co. are now sharing the quarters at 56 East Randolph street formerly used by H. Wittbold as a large display room.

Miss O. A. Tonner, the Iris Queen, is having a good run on Spanish iris which she is featuring in quantity in white, yellow, blue and lavender.

The Chicago Great Western has been named the Official Route of the Chicago Florists' Club to the Minneapolis Convention, August 19th to 22nd.

The Chicago Florists' Club will leave Chicago by Special Train at 6.15 p. m., August 18th, an invitation is extended to all eastern Florists and their friends and families to join them at Chicago and go to the convention in a body.

Special train will be "up-to-the-minute" throughout—including compartment and drawing room and standard sleepers, Buffet Club car, dining cars, Observation parlor, etc., etc.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, on Thursday, May 8. The business of the evening will be the report of the executive committee on the needs of flood and storm victims and the ways and means of assisting them; report of the special committee that was appointed to represent the club at the meeting of the publicity committee of the S. A. F. at the Grand Central Palace, New York, April 7, 1913, and the report of the transportation committee on transportation to Minneapolis next August to the convention. Prof. McMillan of Urbana will give an interesting talk on insects.

Mrs. William Jonathan Head, Miss Mary Holabird, Miss Alice Leavenworth and Miss Lillian Fuellgraff, prominent local society women, will be among the active workers in the Mothers' day flower festival to be held throughout the city and suburbs on May 10. The proceeds will be used to establish a mothers' free room at the Chicago Union Hospital. Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, chairman; Mrs. George W. Davis, general chairman; Mrs. N. L. Pietrowski, acting chairman, and Dr. Elmer E. Vaughan, president of the hospital, are in charge of the arrangements.

The John C. Moninger Co. has just closed a contract for 6 houses, 28x400 feet, for Holton & Hunkel Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., and 8 houses, 30x200 feet, for the Alpha Floral Company of Lansing, Mich. The latter will start to build in June and the Holton & Hunkel Co. in August.

John B. Eberhart and wife of 7442 Bond avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Marie Elizabeth, to John J. Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo. No date has been set for the wedding.

Bassett & Washburn expect to have a large crop of carnations for Memorial day but it is well fixed on roses at present and is showing some fancy American Beauty roses in the larger grades.

FLINT, MICH.—A. J. Mackinnon is building a greenhouse on Flint street.

MARSHFIELD, WIS.—Theodore Hefko is enlarging his greenhouse and building a new garage. He will raise vegetables in addition to flowers this season.

GOOD MOTHERS' DAY EXPECTED.

Mothers' day promises to be the best ever, as already the orders for stock are such as to make the wholesalers get busy. There never was too much stock for Mothers' day since it started and this year will be no exception. The past week stock has been in fairly good supply. Carnations were a little short of the demand, and will continue so this week. Pink and White Killarney roses are in good supply and stock is very good. Richmond roses with longer stems are beginning to arrive. Easter lilies are in good demand, and as a result the supply is becoming limited. A fine lot of snapdragon, in pink, white and yellow, is arriving daily. Orchids are arriving in good shape. The blooms are exceptionally large and of very fine color. They move quickly at moderate prices. Daisies, white and yellow, are a part of the daily stock. Sweet peas are again more plentiful. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria roses will be with us again in about a week. All outdoor stock is making good headway in this vicinity and Memorial day will see local peonies besides lilac, etc.

NOTES.

G. Loeffelhein, florist at 6515 St. Clair street, was seriously hurt when the wagon he was driving was struck by a street car early Friday morning. The wagon was demolished, the horse cut and badly bruised, and Mr. Loeffelhein was thrown from his wagon, sustaining several broken ribs and a torn scalp. Owing to his advanced years he is in a serious condition. He was taken to his home in an ambulance.

"Bramley & Son, Florists," is the name that will appear on the suits of nine of the snappiest baseball players in the city championship contest. Mr. Bramley is willing to wager any reasonable amount he gets the pennant this year.

PLANTSMEN BUSY.

The weather the past week warmed up considerably and gave the plantsmen a chance to get busy. Geraniums are not so plentiful as last year and prices are higher. Lilac, iris and other outdoor flowers are now seen. Carnations, good stock, are quoted at 1½ and 2 cents. Whether Mothers' day will stand for an advance in prices remains to be seen, but the public will not stand for high prices. Some good sweet peas are seen and bring good prices. Peonies from the South will soon be in and Cape Jasmines about May 10. Some good white and purple lilac sold out clean.

NOTES.

Mrs. Ed Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., reports good business during the past week. Funeral work was very large and orders were pouring in from all quarters.

George Waldbart had the floral decorations at the Peace Congress, and also at the home of Robert S. Brookings, where Andrew Carnegie stayed while here.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has a fine stock of everything, and their business is growing. Al Gumz and Frank Windler are hustlers.

A tree was planted Friday, May 2, by Andrew Carnegie on the playgrounds at Tower Grove park to commemorate the Peace Congress.

Grimm & Gorly's new store is now completed and presents a very handsome appearance. A fine stock of blooming plants are shown here.

Miss M. S. Newman has been very busy preparing for a large international wedding which took place Wednesday, May 7.

Mrs. H. G. Berning, we regret to announce, shows but little improvement in her health as a result of her visit to the coast.

Ostertag Bros. are doing an immense spring trade in plants and shrubs. They dispose of the latter by the carload.

The Ellison Floral Co. suffered somewhat as a result of an explosion that occurred in the adjoining neighborhood.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports stock plentiful, especially the poorer grades; good stock hard to get.

C. A. Kuehn is doing a nice trade in cut flowers and supplies.

Some extra fine sweet peas were seen at H. G. Berning's.

George Hartman is bringing in some good carnations. W. F.

BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

Business last week was very good when taken as a whole. The week started rather inauspiciously but by the middle the supply was more limited than a fortnight ago, while there was a very active demand for stock. Toward the end of the week the market was a little easier but still in fine condition. Monday of the present week was good. The rose supply was and is good and large; not a single variety is an exception. American Beauty in all lengths can be had in fair quantities. The stock is good, too. Some fine Kaiserin are coming in while the other standard lines, such as Pink and White Killarney, Taft, Richmond and Ivory are coming in strong. The carnation receipts have let up considerably. This fact, combined with a good demand, has caused a decided boosting of price. As to whether or not the present prices will be maintained on all varieties even up to Mothers' day depends entirely upon how the demand keeps up. Any appreciable slackening of the call is bound to cause a corresponding slump in the price even though the receipts are not overly large. Spanish iris and gladioli are meeting with a very good call. The German iris does not sell nearly so well. The lighter colors in an-tirrhinum sell nicely while the deeper colored sorts are not so popular. Out-door lily of the valley is coming in very strong, and up to the time of this writing has been finding a good market. The blooms are very clean and of good quality. The forced lily of the valley is very limited in supply. The sweet pea supply is large and the good stock finds a fair market. Stock that is not so good finds no market at all. The demand for Easter lilies and callas has picked up a little but not sufficiently as yet to affect the prices materially. The green goods supply is adequate.

On Saturday business in the Sixth street flower market was very good. Cut flowers cleaned up well while the bedding stock, hydrangeas, roses and ferns sold very nicely.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving many fine lots of Indiana Beauty roses from the South Park Floral Co. at New Castle, Ind.

Miss Margaret Anstead's condition has so greatly improved that she has been removed to her home from the hospital.

A. Sunderbruck's Sons decorated the Pogue stores on their fiftieth anniversary.

Visitors: Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Jos. Goldman, Middletown, Ohio, and Mrs. W. H. Guadinger, Cynthiana, Ky. H.

CONDITIONS MUCH IMPROVED.

Trade conditions the past week were a decided improvement in all respects over the previous week, the only complaint being the scarcity of stock at times, when heavy demands were made, caused chiefly by an extra amount of funeral work. Good carnations continue scarce, and a decided shortage is indicated for Mothers' day, when the demand will, in all probability, be great. Some good snapdragons is now coming in, and some improvement in both quality and quantity of roses is noted. Sweet peas are coming in in greater quantities than formerly, but the demand for these does not permit any accumulations. Easter lilies are fairly plentiful, but are little used for anything except funeral work. Calla lilies are now decidedly scarce. Boxwood plants and trees are much in favor this season, and nearly all the retailers carry them in various sizes, and are doing a satisfactory business in this line.

NOTES.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was called Wednesday evening, April 30, at the L. Bomb Floral Co.'s store, for the purpose of consummating plans for the development of trade for Mothers' day. The publicity committee, consisting of R. Rahaley, A. Poch-

Mothers' Day Monopoly.

Has any organization a monopoly on the word "mother"?

The Mothers' Day International Association of Philadelphia says it has. The Mothers' Emergency League of Chicago is equally emphatic in its assertion this city has as much right to use the word as has the "The City of Brotherly Love."

A letter from the eastern organization to the Tribune, protesting against the local use of the word "mother," was received yesterday. It called attention to the proposed flower festival to be given by the Chicago organization for the benefit of the Chicago Union Hospital's free room for destitute mothers next Saturday, and declared Philadelphia had the sole right to solicit funds through any Mothers' day measure.

"No person or society in your city or state is authorized, or has any right, to solicit 1 cent in any way through Mothers' day, either directly or by subterfuge of any kind," reads the letter. "To this association alone belongs the right to use its work, although we have never exercised the privilege."

"There is no monopoly on the word 'mother,'" said Edward J. Brundage, a director of the Union Hospital, and attorney for the league. "I received a letter from this Philadelphia association, but find they are not incorporated in this state, so I can see no reason why we should not use the word mother. I have told the league officials to ignore this protest."—Chicago Tribune.

Illinois Agricultural Board Retained.

Springfield, April 29.—Representative Lovejoy's bill abolishing the state board of agriculture, and providing for the appointment by the governor of a state fair commission of five members was killed today by the house committee on agriculture. The action of the committee in referring the measure to a subcommittee practically was unanimous.

BOONE, IA.—The plant of the Kemble Floral Co. was badly damaged by fire recently.

OMAHA, NEB.—Trees from the city's nurseries are being set out to replace those blown down by the recent tornado.

NOTES.

Carnations of the Reid brand for Mothers' day are to be a feature with Edward Reid. He has made sure of a good supply for this demand. David Rust, secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and manager of the hall says that the past year is the best they have ever had, there being a nice balance on the right side of the ledger. The exhibitions do not pay expenses but the use of the hall for other purposes is steadily increasing.

The M. Rice Co. is much pleased with the outlook for Memorial day. Large orders are received daily. This firm reports that many of the trade are preparing magnolia wreaths to be decorated with flowers when the day arrives.

The Robert Craig Co. has a tremendous stock of bedding plants. The empty Easter houses are now completely filled with this class of stock. It is in splendid shape and will keep them busy selling it for the next few weeks.

Pennock Brothers are renovating their store. Everything in fixtures is offered for sale, as an entire change is to be made. Liddon Pennock says that when completed it will be one of the best of its kind in the country.

Berger Bros. are making great preparations for Mothers' day. They have already booked large orders and are confident the business will be much larger than last year.

At the Leo Niessen market great quantities of stock is turned over daily. Peonies are a feature. American Beauty roses are handled by the thousands.

W. K. Harris has brought on some very fine plants of the favorite rambler roses that are very much in demand at this time.

New York.

BUSINESS VERY UNSATISFACTORY.

The business of the past week was not at all satisfactory, though it might have been worse. There was an increase in the supply of stock, but no noticeable increase in the demand, and while there was no glut there was more or less slaughter in prices in order to clean up. Good American Beauty roses, we mean specials, kept near to 25 cents each. Both red and yellow roses have been very slow, and if the present hot weather continues they, particularly the red ones, will be likely to come to a full stop. There is a fair movement in Killarney and other tea roses but at reduced prices. A humorist suggested a few days ago, that: "They will soon be selling sweet peas by the bale," and it almost looks like it. An immense quantity of sweet pea stock is on the market and much of it is excellent, but there is a surplus which is hard to move. Fifty cents per dozen bundles is now a high price for sweet peas. Our old friends, the carnations, are making a brave fight and at this writing are holding the field with less loss than other stocks. While carnation prices have declined, the decline is not so marked as in most of the other stocks. First-class carnation stock is selling, wholesale, for 2½ and 3 cents, which we consider good for this season. Stocks, snapdragons, lilac and various other minor stocks are on the market in quantity, but they are not leading factors and have to take their chances according to the taste and fancy of the buyers.

Monday, May 5.—Business is quiet this morning, with an abundance of stock. The weather is cooler.

NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Cut Flower Exchange was held May 3. The principal business was the election of directors and several able men were added to the board including Frank Millang and Philip F. Kessler. The officers and directors are now as follows: John Donaldson, president; Gustave C. C. Schrader, vice-president; Victor Darvel, secretary; Philip F. Kessler, assistant secretary; Charles Beckman, treasurer. Fred Smith, Anton Schultheis (re-elected), Philip Hass, John Schneider (re-elected), Jasper McMullen, Frank Millang, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr. (re-elected), John Anderson Leach, directors. Mr. Leach is a city magistrate who studied law in his spare moments, in the potting shed, and is now not only a magistrate but a leading citizen of Astoria, which is a part of greater New York.

The stock of the rose Mrs. Geo. Sawyer arriving at the wholesale stores of Henshaw & Fenrick is very fine and sells well. A. M. Henshaw and wife have gone on a trip for the benefit of Mrs. Henshaw's health, which has been delicate of late.

George Hanges of 685 Columbus avenue is rejoicing over the arrival of a fine baby boy at his home, who has been appropriately named Nicholas Hanges. George is one of the clever Greek florists and has the good-will of everybody in the trade.

A meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, May 12. A large attendance is expected, as there is likely to be considerable discussion relative to the recent show and to shows in general.

The hot weather of the past week—it was 90 in the shade May 2 and 3—has played havoc with the Richmond roses and they are arriving in an unsalable condition.

Orchids are not over-plentiful and the best sell well. We recently noticed fine cattleya stock at Badgley, Riedel & Myers'.

Practically every line of business in the vicinity of Fifth avenue, the florists included, was tied up on the afternoon of May 3 on account of the suffragette parade.

Traendly & Schenck have issued a neat poster which they give to their customers, calling attention to Mothers' day.

Henry Weston of Hempstead left the hospital May 3, and is now at his home and progressing finely.

The first peonies were seen May 5 at the store of George C. Siebrecht, West Twenty-eighth street.

Alfred H. Langjahr is reported as yet suffering greatly from inflammatory rheumatism.

Gardenias are somewhat in the disrepair and going very cheap.

Lilac is now plentiful but much of it seems to be of poor quality.

Long Island Notes.

The soil and climate of Long Island is very favorable to florists and it is easy to find colonies of them within twenty miles of New York. At this season many interesting features can be found both in greenhouses and in the open ground. John Lappe of Maspeth, which is a part of Greater New York, is the banner pansy grower, of this section and his place is at present well worth a visit. It is a conservative estimate that he has five acres of pansies. They grow on a gentle slope rising from the street level and the wealth of color would enrapture a landscape painter. Mr. Lappe has also a large glass area and grows a great variety of other plants. His trade at this season is very large.

Peter Beuerlein, Elmhurst, has 35,000 square feet of glass, and grows a great variety of stock. He is particularly strong on forcing bulbous stock, handling about 400,000 bulbs each season. This season he forced 50,000 Paper White narcissi and the remainder of his bulb stock was yellow narcissi and tulips. He also grows carnations, chrysanthemums, gladioli and a variety of other stocks.

A. L. Miller, a former president of the New York Florists' Club, has a fine range and nursery at Jamaica, in addition to his home range in Brooklyn. We were struck with the neat and well kept nursery where a great variety of evergreen trees and shrubs may be seen, as well as a variety of hardy herbaceous plants. The greenhouses are well stocked with flowering and bedding plants.

Near Maspeth is Middle Village, which has over forty florists, nearly all of whom have glass, their chief business being cemetery work, there being two large cemeteries in that section. The glass areas of their places ranges from less than 1,000 to 25,000 square feet. Many cut flowers are sold but at present the principal business is in plants and in caring for cemetery lots.

Among the most progressive of these florists is Frederick Marquardt, who has over 25,000 square feet of glass and does a very large business. One of his latest innovations was the purchase of a large auto truck, a Packard, for the transportation of plants. In addition to his cemetery work he has a number of men employed at landscape work on private estates.

Anton Schultheis, College Point, is so well known to the trade that it is hard to write anything new about him. At the recent International Flower Show he carried off a number of prizes for orchids, pot roses and other stocks. His range is an extensive one and good pot stock is grown in great variety.

Victor Dorval's Sons is one of the old-established growing firms of Woodside. It was established many years ago by the late Victor Dorval, and is now conducted by his sons, one of whom, Victor, is secretary of the Cut Flower Exchange. They grow a variety of good stock.

Knight & Struck, Flushing, who bought the ranch of H. D. Darlington, retaining the latter as grower, specialize in ericas or heather. Their exhibit at the International Flower Show was very fine, showing many varieties, for which they were awarded a silver medal.

E. L. Enggren of Aqueduct has a fine carnation range and markets his stock at the New York Cut Flower Co. Though there has been some talk of late about a scarcity of carnations we found no scarcity with him, there being many good flowers in sight.

G. Mulhauser of Aqueduct shows good stock and up-to-date methods in his work. At this place we found carnation planting in the field well under way. A new house is being erected, the material being supplied by S. Jacobs & Sons of Brooklyn.

W. O. Cherry is another Maspeth grower, well known in Manhattan where he markets his cut flowers in the Cut Flower Exchange. At present he has a fine stock of daisies and sweet peas and grows a variety of other stock.

Peter Wenk of Ozone Park is a plantsman who has been making a record in the past few years, not only by increasing his glass area but by the large and excellent quality of bedding plants which he grows.

Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, is one of the best plant growers of Long Island, or any place, for that matter. His prize-winning hydrangeas were notable at the show and all that he grows is good.

John Donaldson, Elmhurst, is another well-known grower of lilies and general stock. He is president of the Cut Flower Exchange and vice-president of the New York Florists' Club.

Spiwak & Newman is a new firm of young men who have recently taken the old Matthies place at Woodside. Both had previously been favorably known as employes of other florists.

John Miesem, Elmhurst, is a lily specialist, and brings in fine stock all the year round. As a trustee and active member of the New York Florists' Club, he is well known in the trade.

Fred Smith, Woodside, who conducts the business of Chas. Smith's sons, has a large range, and specializes in Easter lilies, of which he is now sending to market very fine stock.

The firm of Wakefield & Donnelly of Woodhaven has been dissolved and George Donnelly is now proprietor. He has a great stock of geraniums and other bedding plants.

Paul Grumbach of Aqueduct, formerly salesman for his brother Frank of Jamaica, has now a neat carnation range of his own and is growing good stock. A. F. F.

WESTBROOK, ME.—The new greenhouse built by Mrs. Roland Barrows will be devoted to the growing of carnations.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—W. Schlatter & Son report a 10 per cent increase in business over the Easter sales of last year. The prices were practically the same as in 1912. The supply of plants and cut flowers was ample. Lilies and azaleas were the best selling plants, bulbous flowers, sweet peas and violets the most popular cut stock. Carnations and roses were not in great demand.

CLUB MEETING.

An interesting discussion on the use of colored carnations for Mothers' day was a feature of the May meeting of the Albany Florists' Club. The subject was brought up by Frederick Goldring, chairman of the committee on publicity, who said that the call for white carnations on Mothers' day is so great that it is impossible for the growers and the retailers to supply the demand. It was agreed that the use of white carnations might be restricted to honor the memory of a mother who is dead and colored ones might be worn to honor mothers who are living. The subject, it was brought out, is one that has already attracted attention in a number of florists' organizations throughout the country. Edward F. Meaney, chairman of the committee appointed at the April meeting to revise the constitution and by-laws, reported on six amendments, which were discussed and will be voted upon at the June meeting. Two proposals for membership were also laid over until the next meeting. After the adjournment refreshments were served by the committee, of which Louis H. Schaefer is chairman, and a social time was enjoyed.

NOTES.

The firm of Holmes Brothers, Byron C. and William, has completed negotiations for the lease of the store at 20 Steuben street, and expects to open a retail store there soon. Byron C. Holmes has a store at 327 Central avenue which he says he will continue.

Preparations are under way for a historical pageant at Saratoga on July 28-August 2. It will be held in Congress Spring park. R. D.

Baltimore.

WEATHER KEEPS GROWERS BUSY.

Weather conditions are fine at present. Every tree and bush is in full leaf, and flowering shrubbery is blooming profusely. The hot sun is bringing out all the roses under glass and the rose growers are having their hands full just now. Carnations are smaller, though there seems to be quantities for Mothers' day. We hope to see large sales for Memorial day. If the people would buy here as they do in the northern cities and towns everything would be sold out. Here they do not seem to get a rush for flowers after Easter.

CLUB MEETING.

The Gardeners' Club held their regular business meeting Monday night, April 28, at the club rooms. This was "ladies' night." Robt. Brown, horticultural reporter for a local daily, gave an illustrated lecture on his travels through the south and west, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. A number of the young people enjoyed dancing to the music of a very fine orchestra. Refreshments were served. A rising vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Brown by President Wm. Johnston, which was warmly responded to by all. B.

OUTDOOR WORK GOING ON.

The past week has been good for not only the retailer but the greenhouse man, the one who makes a business of caring for lawns, or the landscape gardener. Inquiries are being made daily for veranda boxes and lawn vases which Buffalo is noted for, also for the vases for the various cemeteries, which will keep the greenhouse men in the vicinity of this city very busy. Killarney roses are coming in good quality as are Pink and White Killarney and Killarney Queen. Mrs. Ward is also perfect now. Carnations will be scarce from now on. They have been very plentiful the past three weeks, making bargain sales necessary.

NOTES.

The bill appropriating $60,000 for a school of floriculture and vegetable culture has passed the legislature and awaits the signature of the governor.

The W. F. Kasting Co. has instituted suit against one of the local florists for conspiracy. The case is on trial in the supreme court.

W. J. Palmer is again at the store, very much improved in health.

Window Boxes.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What are the proper dimensions for window boxes, how deep and how wide at top and bottom? Are zinc-lined boxes better than those made entirely of wood?

Ohio.

C. C. B.

There is no standard size for window boxes. They are made to fit the window ledge, or the front of the porch they are to decorate. For the city house window they vary from thirty inches to four feet in length. They should be at least seven inches deep and eight inches in width. These are all outside measurements. The front of the box may flare out so as to be one to two inches wider at the top, giving more room for small plants. It is better to make boxes six feet or over in two lengths, because they are much easier handled, and when placed together they have the appearance of one box.

For the porch the box may be wider. Twelve inches gives much more room for the plants. These boxes should always be raised above the porch floor by inch strips of wood. This prevents rotting out of both the wood of the porch and the box. All boxes should have a coating inside of linseed oil, which helps materially to preserve the wood. Cement and terra cotta boxes are now coming into general use. They cost about five times those from the carpenter shop, but with ordinary care they will last a lifetime. They are very heavy and require to be well supported, but there is no doubt that they are the coming receptacle for flower plants for window ledge decoration. Zinc linings are not as a rule used for outside boxes. Good drainage with copious watering is necessary.

The Seed Trade.

American Seed Trade Association.

Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., President;
Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First
Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford,
Conn., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

EUROPEAN crops of turnip, swedes, mangel and table beets are reported as reduced to 50 per cent of expectations at planting time.

DETAILS of tariff amendments adopted and other important legislative matters will be found on pages 884 and 885 of this issue.

G. C. ELDERING of W. J. Eldering & Sons, Overveen, Haarlem, Holland, arrived on the S. S. New Amsterdam April 29, and will make his usual calls on the trade.

FRENCH bulb crop reports indicate that the growers' syndicate fixed prices on white Roman hyacinths at 100 francs, Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora at 18 to 25 francs.

BALTIMORE, MD.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland, of which Former Governor Edwin Warfield is president, held March 5, 1913, resolutions touching the death of the late Joseph A. Bolgiano, of J. J. Bolgiano & Son, were unanimously adopted.

CHICAGO.—The summer season has come on with a rush and foliage generally is advanced equal to May 15 of an average season. Onion sets are well cleaned up, season practically over.—Prices on the Board of Trade May 7 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.

THE Lompoc Valley, California, has in recent years produced good crops of pole beans of the small seeded varieties at low cost, but this season there has not been sufficient rainfall to warrant putting stock seeds into the ground in that locality, and many growers of this class of beans in California have therefore been obliged to plant these beans in localities where higher growing prices are made.

RECENT California seed crop reports indicate a poor outlook for the following seeds, as it is generally believed that the rainy season is now over: Endive, very short; lettuce, all varieties short, many will be failures; radish, very short; sweet peas, very short, possibly failure of many varieties, except the early flowering kinds, which will be nearly a full crop. Beated rains might materially help the above serious outlook.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Dutch bulb firm of Van Meeuwen & Tegeleer has lost its suit against August S. Swanson, in which it sought to collect for goods that were shipped but not accepted. Mr. Swanson ordered the bulbs on the Holland firm's solicitation, but later informed the firm that he had sold out his business. The purchaser refused to accept the goods and they perished. The district court found for Mr. Swanson, and the supreme court has now affirmed the decision.

NEW YORK.—The seed trade has been very brisk during the past few weeks but is now beginning to wane. At the stores that stock up with vegetable and flowering plants there is yet good business.—At Vaughan's Seed Store the plant trade now seems to be a leading feature; there is a good variety of plants, the store is well equipped for handling them and trade is good.—We regret to hear of the death of Henry Eicke, well known to the trade as representative of various local houses.—V. Shaketam, a clever young man, has established an agency, at 50 West Thirtieth street, for Francesco Bulleri of Italy.—Wm. C. Rickards is now on the road for S. D. Woodruff & Sons.—W. A. Sperling of Stump & Walter's staff is still in Europe.

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—The Jno. B. Davis Seed Co. of this city is again placing seed pea contracts in Idaho, the results obtained by the company in that territory last year having been highly satisfactory. The western headquarters will again be at St. Anthony, Idaho, where other former Sturgeon Bay growers are now located. The Davis Co. is represented in the west by J. T. Wilcox of Chicago and it is expected that Mr. Wilcox will place contracts for about five to six hundred acres of peas, which under fair conditions, should produce about ten cars of seed. Mr. Davis states that a large part of the western crop will be shipped direct from St. Anthony to the consumers, but that part of it will again be brought to this city for hand picking next winter.

Kentucky Blue-Grass Seed in Germany.

It is impracticable to obtain data showing the exact German importations of Kentucky blue-grass seed, as this product is not separately classified in the official statistics. Large quantities of this seed are purchased by European dealers each year, considerable of which goes to Germany. The extent of the German importation depends greatly on the price of the seed and the extent of the German crop. The prices of Kentucky blue-grass seed have shown a marked decrease during the past year, as a result of the recent large harvest. The following are the average German prices of this seed per 100 English pounds for the past three years c. i. f.

Hamburg: Autumn of 1910, $22.10 to $22.50; autumn of 1911, $21.50 to $22.50; autumn of 1912, $8 to $12.

Kentucky blue-grass seed is purchased from the United States and sold abroad in bags of about 100 pounds in weight, and is usually shipped via New York on through bills of lading in carload lots of at least 30,000 pounds. Buyers claim that existing freight rates make the purchase of smaller quantities impracticable. Ocean freights are determined either by weight or space, according to the nature of the commodity shipped. The seed is usually bought by samples which are thoroughly tested by the buyer as to purity and fertility.

Another California Report.

Los Angeles, April 26.—Seed conditions here at this time are anything but favorable. Since the big rain of February 24, we have had a continued drought, excepting light showers which have been of no benefit to our crops. We have had very unfavorable growing weather, and this, together with the drought, has held back our crops, especially the sweet peas. We fear there will be many acres which will not produce seed, as in the past year. The lack of spring rains has also made it extremely difficult to get a stand of flower seeds, and we expect to have some failures on these. It is now time to plant beans, and the continued drought is making it look very serious for this crop. Taking everything into consideration, we fear the crops of 1913 will be shorter, generally speaking, than any year before. B.

Lawn Silicate

For Killing Weeds in Lawns.

LAWN SILICATE is unquestionably superior to any preparation ever applied as a top dressing to lawns to destroy Plantain, Buckhorn, Dandelion, and other low growing flat leaved weeds that a lawn mower will not kill. It is odorless and is easy to apply. Does not stain or injure hands or clothing. Is positively the most economical, quickest and most effective method of getting rid of weeds ever devised.

A 5-lb. package covers 200 to 500 square feet. It does not kill the grass, but the weeds are practically all killed in 24 to 48 hours and are afterwards literally burned up and blow away.

Potato Dry Rot.

The Nebraska Experiment Station has issued a bulletin on dry rot of the Irish potato tuber. The bulletin says inoculation experiments have shown that the disease is caused by a parasitic fungus, not previously described, and for which the name Fusarium tuberivorum is proposed. According to the experiments there is no connection between this disease and blight or other potato troubles. Formalin dip, formalin vapor or lime-sulphur wash before storage is recommended.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 5.—Mushrooms, 10 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 25 cents, small cases; radishes, 20 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 25 cents to 40 cents per box; cucumbers, $1.00 to $2.50 per box of two dozen; asparagus, 65 cents to $1.00 for 24 bunches.

New York, May 3.—Cucumbers, 50 cents to 90 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 30 cents to $1.50 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 20 cents to 35 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, 25 cents to 40 cents per dozen.

Tomato Notes.

Most market gardeners make a special effort to have early tomatoes; the successful ones well know the money possibilities. We know of one grower who said last year that if he could make one-half of his place pay at the rate of his tomato patch he could spend the winters in the South at pleasure. But there is the rub. What is possible on one-fourth or one-half acre is often out of the question on five or ten acres. This particular grower took a great risk with a one-half acre of Earliana so early in the season that it looked almost like folly. However, the weather favored him and he scored a success. That same plan may mean absolute failure another season.

There is no question that the plants are the first requirement. It is not so much a matter of size as their make-up. They must be hardy, well rooted and well hardened and the land must be rich and well drained. Poor plants and good land is as bad as good plants and poor land. And often poor planting spoils the best chances. Of all the methods we have seen we like a greenhouse bench the best, because the roots cannot travel away into rich manure as in a hot-bed. This is the drawback to a hot-bed—in about 24 hours of favorable weather the plants double in size and are soft and flabby. On a greenhouse bench we can withhold water and confine the roots;

if in pots so much the better. On the other hand, pot plants can be starved by long waiting which is disastrous. If in danger we often knock out of pots and plunge for a week or two in a bench. MARKETMAN.

Sweet Potato Plants.

In many parts of our country there is a large demand for sweet potato plants that can be turned to profit by any grower who has some hot bed sash. Often at this time of the year sash are to spare, as the hardier plants, such as lettuce and cabbage, have been transferred to the field. To produce sweet potato plants heat is necessary. About the easiest method is to prepare a new hot-bed with fresh manure.

As soon as the heat has started the tubers may be bedded in some box material, such as sand, sawdust or leaf mold, or in the absence of these, light garden earth may be used. We generally place a layer of common earth over the manure just as for a common hot-bed but less in depth—say two and one-half or three inches deep. Upon this the tubers are laid flat, allowing three or four inches space between them. Then the light covering material is put over them about three inches deep. Put on the sash, which should be tight to exclude cold and rain.

A heat of 80° is desirable and 90° will do no harm. Ventilate sparingly but enough to purify the air. Moisture should be moderate only, but dryness will not do. If everything is well done, the sprouts will appear in a short time when the air must be increased. After the plants are well up the sash are removed in good weather to harden the plants. When ready to set or sell the plants should be sturdy and full of roots. To dig them, simply hold the tuber down with one hand and jerk up the plants with the other. Thus several crops can be had.

MARKETMAN.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Easter sales were 20 per cent greater than in 1912, according to the Seattle Floral Co. Prices were the same. Lily plants were short of the demand but there were sufficient cut flowers. Plants of all kinds sold out. In the cut stock hydrangeas were the poorest sellers and lilies the best.

HARDY PERENNIALS. The most complete collection of varieties and the largest stock in the country. Our Perennial plants have a National reputation. We spare no expense to have them in the best possible shape for the planter. Such varieties that move better when pot grown are prepared in this shape. This does not mean little seedlings, but in the majority of cases the plants were field grown, were dug and potted during the fall and winter months and are of just the right size to give immediate results. They are not to be compared with so-called field clumps. Try them and be convinced.

AQUATIC PLANTS, WATER LILIES, NELUMBIUMS, VICTORIAS. Tender and Hardy Aquatics have been a special feature with us for nearly a quarter of a century. Over eight acres of artificial ponds are devoted to their culture, if we can assist you in making plans or selecting varieties. The services of our expert are at your disposal for the asking.

Nymphaea.

ROSES FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING TO GIVE IMMEDIATE RESULTS. We have three hundred thousand 5 and 6-inch pots the usual Dreer stock and the style of plants your retail customers are looking for. These are all two-year field grown plants which have been potted during the winter months and which were stored in cold houses and frames and which are now in prime condition for out-door planting. The collection is the most up-to-date, including many new varieties not offered by anyone in the trade.

ESCONDIDO, CALIF.—W. E. Alexander, president of the Escondido Valley Land and Planting Co., is starting a deciduous nursery two miles east of town. One hundred thousand apple and peach grafts will be planted immediately.

Caucasian Forests.

Notwithstanding the variety and excellent quality of their timber, the Caucasian forests are hardly worked, the absence of railway communication rendering transport costly if not prohibitive. Another difficulty is the lack of good workmen. Timber exporting is therefore confined to firms rich enough to maintain regular communication with the forests and to erect sawmills where needed. Such a firm operates not far from the bathing and winter resort of Gagry, on the Black Sea. This coast is the most convenient for the export of timber and lumber. Caucasian beech is noted for its good quality, being suitable for the manufacture of casks, furniture, etc. Excellent oak grows in some parts of the Caucasus, while other trees, such as elm, birch, pine, maple, ash, and lime, abound.

Some of Aschmann's Choice Plants

A wonderful clock at a hotel in Interlaken, Switzerland. The biggest wonder of nature the world has ever seen.

See that clock? It is made of flowers. It has hands and shows the time! See that little house in the rear, also made of flowers? There is hidden a mechanism that strikes the quarter, half and the hour. What do you think this clock is made of? It is made of plants of brilliancy—mostly of dwarf begonias, the Vernon type, short variety, pink and red. The head gardener, the creator of this clock, of this famous, world-wide known hotel at Interlaken, Switzerland, has been offered a fortune by American and other millionaires of the world, to make them a clock similar to this, but he declined the offers, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years. I was fortunate enough, during my visit there, to obtain from the head gardener, the creator of this clock, a supply of seed and stock plants of those beautiful varieties of begonias to raise a sufficient crop of about 50,000 young plants in 2½, 3 and 4-inch pots for you to use in a similar clock, carpet bed or other outside work. A bed of these begonias, pink, the Erfordii, or the bright red improved Vernon, is a joy forever. Constant bloomers, stay always short and bushy, the hot rays of the sun have no bad effect on them. They can be grown in a sunny or shady place. We can sell you large 4-inch pot plants, either of the improved Erfordii, the beautiful pink, or the dark bright red improved Vernon, at 10c, $1.00 per 100; 3-inch, $1.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $5.00 per 100; 5½-in. plants, 25c each; big plants, 25 at 100 rate.

PEONIES.PEONIES."PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply; and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

ROSE AFTER-SATISFACTION.

When you buy G. & R. ROSES you get along with the after-satisfaction—that sense of realizing all the success that should come from planting quality roses, the knowing that no better results are possible to be obtained outside of G. & R. Roses. It is the after-satisfaction that has compelled us to plan to grow for the coming season one million additional Roses. Think of it—the after-satisfaction selling five million roses, and demanding a million increase in one year! Going some? you say. Yes, but are you getting your share of this Rose after-satisfaction? If not, why not? Plant G. & R. quality roses. None better, none so good. Our new catalog giving prices on all roses and other plants now ready. Write for it today.

Aphine

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species.

The Recognized Standard Insecticide.
 Not a cure-all, but a specific remedy for all sap sucking insects infesting plant life, such as green, black, white fly, thrips, red spider, mealy bug and soft scales.
$1.00 per Quart. $2.50 per Gallon.

FUNGINE

An infallible remedy for mildew, rust and bench fungi. Unlike Bordeaux and lime and sulphur it does not stain the foliage, but cleanses it.
75c per Quart. $2.00 per Gallon.

VERMINE

A soil sterilizer and vermicide. Destroys eel, cut, wire and grub worms, maggots, root lice and ants. Used 1 part to 400 parts water, it does not injure plants, but protects your crops against ravages under the soil.
$1.00 per Quart. $3.00 per Gallon.

All are spraying materials and are effective in the greenhouse and in the garden.

CAST IRON BOILERS WASTE FUEL.

I had a cast iron 8 section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I only had 2050 sq. ft. of glass heated with the 8 section cast iron boiler.

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have another boiler than a Kroeschell, and will recommend it whenever I get a chance.

The Unrivaled Henkel Knife Shown Above Ivory Handle and Fine English Steel Blade will be mailed absolutely free to anyone sending in Two New Subscriptions to The American Florist, the new subscribers being persons in the trade or trade employes. This knife cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25 and most dealers will probably ask more for it, as the price of Ivory has been advanced recently.

Send Post Office Money Order or Express Money Order for $2.00 with the names and addresses of two New Subscribers (persons in the trade, as Florists, Seedsmen or Nurserymen, or their Employes) and we will send them the paper for one year after receipt of subscriptions.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

Where We Stand On Our Wind-Resisting Iron Frame Construction.

JUST after the big Western blow that laid low so many houses, an advertisement appeared in the Florist magazines stating that "All concerns have had some of their houses blown down sometime."

We want to flatly contradict such a statement, because never, to our knowledge, in our long years of greenhouse building have any of our iron frame houses been blown down. They have been up against many big blows too.

For example, one of our representatives has just returned from Omaha, Nebraska, where the recent wind, although it blew the glass out of a range of our houses and broke some of the wooden roof bars, still the iron frame-work itself, stood there unharmed.

Directly attached to it, were several houses, not our construction, which the wind tumbled over and made kindling wood of.

We tell you these things, not in an attempt to profit by less experienced firms' misfortunes, but as a conclusive bit of evidence, that our constructions are based on an accurate knowledge of stress and strain and the safe way of providing for them.

As staunch and strong as our stand. ard iron frame house is, we believe our New Cantilever Construction to be still stronger, although fewer columns and rafters are used.

Send for our commercial iron frame catalog and go carefully into the details of our various constructions. Then, and not till then, are you in a position to buy intelligently.

The houses still standing are Hitchings Iron Frame houses.

GHENT QUINQUENNIAL EXHIBITION.

April 26-May 4.

Great Belgian Plant Show.

The seventeenth quinquennial international exhibition of the Royal Society of Agriculture and Botany of Ghent, Belgium, has just taken place in new buildings erected at the Parc de la Citadelle, close to the St. Pierre railway station. This station has been converted from a little wayside station into one of great size and importance, having twelve platforms, and being on the direct route from Ostend to Brussels, Cologne, St. Petersburg, Vienna and eastern Europe and Asia generally. It is also very conveniently situated for exhibitors from the British Islands and America, being within almost a stone's throw of the exhibition grounds. Several new and capacious hotels have also been built in the vicinity, and some of them have not been backward in charging as much as 25 francs a night for a bedroom, although excellent accommodation is obtainable for from five to 10 francs a night. These facts are mentioned in case some American gardeners or nurserymen intend to visit the exhibition, the major part of which will remain open till about November next.

The floral exhibition or "Floralies," as it is locally called, was one of the finest yet held by the Ghent society. It covered about seven acres out of a total exhibition area of some 270, and its cost has been put down at one and three quarter millions of francs (about $350,000). There was a particularly large number of exhibitors this year, and those from England were conspicuous for the fine material shown, chiefly in the way of American carnations. It may be of some interest to American florists to know that the taste in carnations is different on the continent from what it appears to be in England and America. In France and Belgium, ladies are particularly keen on quaint coloring, and prefer blooms that are striped and bizarre to those of uniform tints. One grower assured me that he could not sell the blooms of some of the best American varieties of self-color while those that were variegated, and even with burst calices, sold readily. Stuart Low & Co., of Enfield; Carl Engelmann, of Saffron Walden; Cutbush & Son, of Highgate; Young & Co., of Cheltenham, and A. F. Dutton, of Iver, Bucks, were the most important carnation exhibitors, and it is not too much to say that they opened the eyes of the Belgian growers to the possibilities of carnation growing in their own country. At present there are only two or three growers of these flowers in all Belgium, the most important being M. Draps-Boudry, of Costdunkerke, and M. M. Bouckenooghe, of the Societe Horticole Yproise, Ypres, both of whom put up very creditable exhibits. A good idea of Mr. Engelmann's carnations and his bold and decorative arrangement, is given in the illustration. He not only obtained a gold medal for the group, but he won five first prizes in competition and one second prize. Amongst his finest varieties were Carola, Lady Northcliffe, Sunstar, Mrs. C. W. Ward, and Lady Neeld, the latter a cherry red bordered with white. Mr. Dutton's group was also awarded a gold medal, and included Winsor, British Triumph, Enchantress, Mikado, Niagara and Mrs. A. F. Dutton, the last named being apple-blossom pink and very attractive. Messrs. Cutbush, in addition to a gold medal for their group, also won the first prize gold medal for the best collection of varieties not yet in commerce. Some of the most noteworthy forms included Mrs. W. Astor, buff yellow fringed with carmine; Mrs. McKinnon, scarlet; Frank Galsworthy, a cerise and mauve hybrid Malhaison. Young & Co., also awarded a gold medal, had Lady Neeld, cerise edged with rose; Duchess of Devonshire, bright crimson; A. S. Montgomery, lilac pink; Baroness de Brienen, Cecelia, yellow, and the Hon. John Boscawen, a beautiful delicate pink, in their collection; while Low & Co., in addition to many of the varieties already mentioned, and also Cinnabar, an old rose terra cotta color, and Lady Allington, a deep salmon.

The only American firm exhibiting was Pitcher & Mandl, of South Orange, N. J., and St. Albans, England. They exhibited in seven different classes, chiefly with new and rare plants, and met with a fair amount of success. Their Polypodium Mandaium is now becoming well known, and its more compact form Superbum is also making a reputation for itself; the same may be said of Nephrolepis Millsi. Dracena Mandaiana is a fine cross between D. terminalis and D. Youngi and has large rosy purple or ruby red leaves. Sansevieria Craigi is a good ornamental plant with erect fleshy leaves banded with green and yellowish cream. Begonia Christmas Red seems likely to keep in bloom up to midsummer, or even till next Christmas, as the plants toned down by the purity of the whites and pinks and salmons. Some of the finest scarlets included Firebrand, Cocarde, Joseph Vervaene, Apollo, Brillante Belgica, Winifred Haerens, Madame van der Cruyssen, Faust, and Hexe. The latter seems to be a particularly free deep crimson variety, and is capable of giving rise to numerous forms. Indeed prizes were offered for 25 varieties of it, and this was won by Oct. Van der Cruyssen with 25 distinctly colored forms varying from vivid scarlet to deep violet purple. Among the finest white azaleas were Queen of the Closely rivalling it, but not quite so substantial in petal perhaps, are Blushing Bride, and Daybreak. Anyone interested in these particular shades could not do better than stock the varieties mentioned. One very fine pink-flowered variety called Haerewille's "Pink Pearl" is worthy of note. It has fine clusters of salmon pink flowers speckled with crimson at the very base of the petal. Among the many exhibitors the following were the most conspicuous: Aug. Haerens, Somerghem; Sander & Sons, Bruges; J. B. Haerens & Wille, Somerghem; Alexis Dalliere, Ledeberg; J. De Cleene, Loochristy; Mdme. H. Dombrecht, Mont St. Amand; Oct. Van der Cruyssen, Gentbrugge; G. D'Hooge, Loochristy; Des Reusefreres, Saffelaere; Louis Van Houtte, Ledeberg; the Societe anonyme D'Haene, and M. K. J. Kuyk, Mont St. Amand.

Orchids are becoming increasingly popular among the elite of Belgium, and the exhibits this year were far more numerous than on former occasions. Unfortunately, although thousands of plants were shown, they could not be seen in the aggregate as they were split up into several rooms. Some people like this particular method of arrangement, but the general impression was that if the orchids were placed all together in one spot they would have produced an effect quite equal to anything that has been seen at the Temple show in London, or even at last year's International show at Chelsea. The illustrations show some of the most important exhibits. M. Firman Lambeau's magnificent group, which won the large gold medal offered by the king of the Belgians for the most varied and most noteworthy collection of orchids, was especially good. This was awarded with the felicitations of the jury and also by acclamation. It will be noticed that cattleyas, miltonias, choice odontoglossums, phalenopsis, and oncidiums were conspicuous. Another fine amateur's group was that of Chas. Dietrich, of Auderghem, who won a work of art valued at 200 francs for a group of 100 orchids. As may be seen from the illustration odontoglossums, lalias, cattleyas, brasso cat- shown with masses of small deep red flowers were in fine fresh condition. A striking plant was a hybrid calceolaria obtained by crossing a shrubby and a herbaceous variety. The flowers are bright golden yellow, numerous, and the foliage is intermediate between that of the parents.

As might be expected, azaleas of the indica tribe formed one of the most dazzling features of the show. Indeed, the great azalea hall, which covered a space of nearly three acres, was almost entirely taken up with these glorious flowering shrubs, and without them the exhibition would have been poor indeed. The illustration, although naturally on a very small scale, nevertheless gives a very good impression of how the azaleas were arranged and massed, but it gives no idea as to their beauty and magnificence of color, or of their grandeur and cultural skill. The Indian azalea is practically a Belgian blossom, and nowhere else in the world does it seem to flourish as it does in the nurseries of Ghent and Bruges. There was very keen competition among the various growers, and specimens varying from six inches or a foot high to three or four yards across were to be met with, in all kinds of shapes, from the dwarf bushy ones to the taller stemmed and pyramidal ones. In the great majority of cases it was impossible to see the leaves, so completely were they hidden by the profusion of blossom. Single and double varieties were shown in about equal proportions, and while scarlets, crimsons and crimson magenta shades gave a dazzlingly brilliant effect to the scene, they were Whites, Perle de Ledeberg, Niobe, Raphael, and the old favorite Deutsche Perle. Special mention must be made of a few clear fleshy or salmon-pink varieties which seem to be coming to the front of late years. Lady Roosevelt was shown five years ago, and is more conspicuous this year. It is very free growing, and is usually smothered in masses of double flowers that compel one's attention on account of their great beauty.

tleyas, oncidiums, and phalænopsis were conspicuous. Among the non-competitive groups, that of Duchesne & Lanthoine, of Watermael, was conspicuous for 150 fine specimens of Odontoglossum crispum grown to perfection. Other orchid exhibitors were Th. Pauwels, Meirelbeke, who won ten first prizes; Jules Hye, who had a marvellous collection of miltonias; M. Vuylsteke, fine hybrid odontoglossums; Charlesworth & Co., Haywards Heath, England, who won the first prize worth 200 francs with the felicitations of the jury for a magnificent lot of choice and varied hybrids and species; M. Vincke-Dujardin, Bruges, had a dozen fine Vanda tricolor which took the first prize; M. Verdonck, Gentbrugge, who showed a collection from Peru, Venezuela, Colombia, and the equatorial regions, and who won several prizes for dendrobiums, etc.; Janssens Bros., of Merxem, had a fine lot of cattleyas and odontoglossums; and Comte Jos. de Hemptinne put up a group of odontoglossums that attracted universal admiration and won the gold medal with the felicitations of the jury. There were several other exhibitors less well known, and perhaps one of the most remarkable plants was a fine specimen of Eulophiella Hamelii (Pectersiana) in the collection of Th. Pauwels.

Hydrangeas have always been well done by Belgian, French and Dutch firms, and some very fine plants were shown. One of the best groups came from Mouillere & Son, Vendome, France, and from the firm of Dedstel, Amsterdam, the group of the latter being illustrated, in the distance being a splendid lot of lilacs from Fl. Stepmann de Messemaker. There are now hydrangeas with both toothed and plain bracts, the former becoming perhaps more popular. The best toothed white is undoubtedly Madame E. Mouillere, but it is being run close by Mlle. Rene Gaillard, and La Perle. The best of the blue hydrangeas are General Viscomtesse de Vibraye, un-toothed, and Souvenir de M. E. Chautaud (toothed), while among the rose-colored varieties President Viger, Senateur H. David, are both remarkable. Mlle. Lucienne Chauve is a bright rose pink with toothed bracts, and Duc de Vendome has large trusses of deep rose flowers.

Palms are always a feature at the Ghent shows, and specimens of all sorts, shapes and sizes are exhibited. Some veterans 20 feet or more high are used as a background in the large hall devoted to the stove and greenhouse plants, and here and there they are interspersed with plants of Cycas circinalis and C. revoluta. The latter are not so much grown now, but there is still a trade done in them with California. Another illustration shows a group of palms and cycads from Jules de Cock of Meirelbeke, which won the prize of a work of art valued at 500 francs by acclamation. The same exhibitor won prizes for Cyas revoluta and for zamias, and also for 10 fine specimens of platyceriums shown in the illustration immediately in front of the palms and cycads. One of the features among the palms was the splendid group of Phoenix Roebeleni shown by the Societe anonyme "Flandria," Bruges, who won the first prize of a gold medal for 15 plants standing at least about five feet high. The illustration shows one of the winning plants with gracefully arching fronds. As a commercial palm Phoenix Roebeleni now stands in the front rank.

Stove and greenhouse plants are always a great attraction at Ghent, and there was no falling off this year. Dracenas, crotons, pandanus, medinillas, clivias, gardenias, clerodendrons, calatheas, marantas, etc., were all represented, as were also several fine lots of New Holland plants, the latter much to the astonishment of many who thought these particular plants were no longer worth the trouble or expense of growing. Boronia heterophylla, B. megastisma and B. elatoir were conspicuous in Low & Co.'s English collection, and in continental ones. Diosmas, eriostemons, melaleucas, pittosporums, pimelias, polygalas, cytisis, chorizemas, correas, acacias, and epacris were all well represented, and a certain amount of trade seems to be done in these plants, but more particularly with botanic gardens and private collections where representative collections are maintained. Bromeliads did not seem to be quite so prominent as on former occasions and with the exception of a few good specimens of tillandsias, billbergias and aechmeas, there were not many. Aroids were well done by several firms and 30 classes were entered for competition. Anthurium Scherzerianum and its numerous forms were most popular. The illustration shows groups by Arthur de Smet and Louis Van Houtte pere, both of Ledeburg. Another picture shows a miscellaneous group of aroids and ferns, some huge specimens of which lent a tropical luxuriance to the exhibition. Tree ferns as shown in a group by Jules de Cock were finely staged and included many species and varieties of the older types. The Plumose nephrodiums so beloved by American florists, although present, were not so conspicuous as one might have expected. Adiantums, pteris, polypodiums, aspleniums, cyatheas and Dicksonias, were in abundance however, and were evidently appreciated by continental growers.

Among trees and shrubs rhododendrons and forms of Azalea mollis and sinensis were particularly well done and formed bold groups of vivid color. Lilacs, already referred to, were also fine and full of blossom. Hardy plants were shown, but these are always a weak spot in continental exhibitions—at least they are never shown to any advantage as they are in England. Rockeries are practically unknown, the only attempt made at picturesque gardening indoors being the garden of Madame Osterrieth-Mols of Ant-

Giant Montbretias.

Montbretia Star of the East will long be regarded as an epoch-making one in the history of hardy flowers. When shown before the floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society, August 13 of last year, this montbretia was awarded a first-class certificate, a very high honor for a variety of any flower, yet it was an honor that was unanimously agreed upon by the members of the committee, and one that was fully deserved. We have only to compare this newcomer, with flowers nearly four and a-half inches in diameter, with the old montbretias that still do duty in many good gardens to clearly see what a wonderful change has been brought other excellent montbretias, we are indebted to G. Davison, head gardener at Westwick, Norwich. These newer montbretias have been put into commerce by R. Wallace and Co. of Colchester, and among those of special merit, though not so large and brilliant as Star of the East, mention must be made of Prometheus, King Edmund, Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton, Hereward and Norvic.

Happily, the cultivation of these useful and beautiful flowers does not call for any great amount of skill. Mr. Davison believes in selecting a rather cool position for them, but not one that is shaded by overhead trees. Then the soil should be well and deeply dug, and a good amount of leaf-soil added to it; and if clay naturally predominates, some coarse grit or other lightening material should be well mixed with the whole, a friable rooting medium that contains a good amount of humus or decaying vegetable matter being the ideal to aim at. Planting is best done in March, covering the corms or bulbous-looking roots with about two inches of soil. Bold groups towards the front of a mixed border, or lawn beds filled with them, are very effective during August, September and October, months when too many of our herbaceous plants are past their best. When the tops get blackened by frost, usually at the end of October, the roots should be lifted, the tops shortened to about six inches, and then stored in a cold frame where actual frost can be kept away. During fine days in winter the stored roots should have as free ventilation as possible.—London Garden.

werp. This was greatly admired, and it is possible that future exhibitions may see a little more in the way of picturesque gardening. A general view of the stove and greenhouse section, which was well arranged so that there was no difficulty in getting about with the huge crowds that visited the exhibition, is shown in the accompanying illustration. If there was anything in which the show was lacking it was in the dearth of new plants. The only novelty of any importance was a splendid new hybrid peony named La Lorraine from Lemoine of Nancy, France. This won the first class silver medal (avec felicitations) as a seedling that had never been shown before the society. The flowers are of a beautiful bright yellow shaded with salmon pink, each one being six inches across. The plant is a hybrid between P. Moutan and P. lutea, the last named of which made such a sensation at the last quinquennial exhibition in 1908. Other novelties of note consisted chiefly of foliage plants, and among these mention might be made of Trevesia Canderi, a plant with spreading deeply lobed and cut leaves; Alocasia colossa and A. Micholitzii, both ornamental; and Diefenbachia Canderæ, with broad deep green leaves, creamy white at the base.

MEMORIAL DAY SUGGESTIONS.

The Observance of the Day.

The last floral day of the yearly season for the florist is Memorial day, May 30, and to the retailer this means a much larger amount of labor for the same return than on any other floral holiday, for where much of the trade at Christmas and Easter is in plants and cut flowers, a large proportion of the sales at Memorial day are for flowers arranged in designs and bouquets. To the grower, Memorial day is one of the best of the year for there is not only a demand for all that can be produced and at a good price, but the expense of growing is comparatively small in comparison to that of other large flower days, for the coal bill is almost at the lowest figure and the labor expended in wrapping is almost nothing. Yet both the grower and retailer must be fully prepared to meet this great demand which will necessitate not only a large supply of flowers but also a great quantity of supplies and accessories for which there is always a large sale.

While the selection of one day in the year which was to be observed in memory of the dead by decorating their graves with flowers originated with those who desired to commemorate the deeds of the soldiers who gave their lives in the great civil war fifty years ago, yet it has been adopted by the general public, and in many places the cemeteries are covered with flowers by the relatives and friends of those who have departed. Memorial day, notwithstanding its general observance, is regarded as the day of the Grand Army of the Republic and last year was more extensively observed than ever before in many sections of the nation, and without question this will be increased this year.

It has often been remarked that the observance of the day is much more general in some sections of the country than in others, especially in New England, where the demand for everything in flowers is almost impossible to fill, notwithstanding the large supply. This may be perhaps somewhat accounted for by the intense feeling throughout that section before and during the war which has been handed down by fable and anecdote and the official observance of the day by state and municipalities which devote the day by proclamation, making it a legal holiday, and appropriation of money to assist the Grand Army of the Republic in holding processions, having orations, and in decoration of the graves. In some cities and towns a large proportion of the populace attend the services which are held at the cemetery and everybody decorates their family burial lot and the graves of their relatives.

Sprays and Bouquets.

While there is always a large demand for cut flowers which are taken by the purchasers to the cemetery and arranged, yet as a rule the greatest call is for bouquets and sprays which are placed upon the graves. Those that have provided themselves with vases at the cemetery generally prefer the round bouquet while those not having these will purchase the flowers in spray form, that they may lay them on the grave or fasten them to the monuments. Many of these will be of low price and it is necessary that a large quantity of the cheaper flowers be employed, but generally there is some outside stock, such as lilacs and shrubbery, flowers that can be advantageously used for filling up the bunch. The demand will naturally be in both bouquets and sprays for something that is rather showy and not for the more select flowers and smaller work, as it is the desire of the purchaser to make as good an effect as possible at a distance and not for close inspection. The greenhouses in some cities that are located at the entrance or near the cemeteries do an immense business in bouquets and sprays, the number sold reaching into the thousands and the force frequently has to work all night arranging bouquets. While there are many of them low in price, the majority being one and two dollars each, yet where such a quantity is sold and the necessary stock obtained, the trade, although it entails much labor, is very remunerative. Large quantities of roses, carnations and late bulbous stock are used as well as the cheaper greenhouse flowers such as stocks, spirea and candytuft, and the size of the sprays is increased by the liberal use of green and lilac. Spirea Van Houttei, deutzia or any outside stock that is procurable. Peonies are one of the flowers, par excellence, and when the season is far enough advanced to procure them in large numbers at fair value, large quantities are used, for they make an admirable display. But the florist is not restricted to any of the several flowers for everything that is in bloom can be adapted to their use. The outside stock is sometimes quite unsatisfactory, especially if the weather is warm, on account of its wilting, but this can be overcome to a great degree are used largely in cemeteries and these are particularly adapted for planting in beds that are shaded by trees, but to make a pansy bed last through the season they must be planted in such a location and not in the full sun, and arrangements must be made to keep the bed watered through the warm weather and attention given the bed as far as picking off the old flowers and seed pods or the plants will go out of bloom, and the beds, instead of being a thing of beauty, will be a blot on the lot. Echeverias all over the country to plant over graves and when once established makes a very ornamental feature on a cemetery lot and does not require any great attention. Urns and vases are popular with many who can give them the necessary attention throughout the summer, or in cemeteries where perpetual care is the rule and these will be attended to by the help. If these are not given the proper care, however, they are never satisfactory. Vines are a necessary stock for the dealer having vases to fill. Vinca major and English ivy are the two best and the other vines so freely used in window boxes and vases are also in much demand. One necessary feature which the dealer should impress upon the mind of those ordering vases or urns filled is the replenishing of the soil with good live compost. It is useless to suppose that plants set out in exhausted soil in the hot sun and whipped by the wind can survive and be ornamental.

The plantsman will surely have demand for specimen plants to place upon the lot or plunge in ground at the base of monuments or foot of the graves, and there are some beautiful plants at this time that can be used for this purpose. The hydrangeas are particularly suited and they make a grand show. The rambler roses are also fine plants and can be easily bloomed at this time. For cheaper plants the spireas are adapted and are very satisfactory. There is one thing in selling these plants that should never be neglected and that is that the plants be given a good soaking of water before leaving the greenhouse, and if this is attended to properly the plant will be in good condition when the lot owner visits the cemetery on Memorial day, but if this is not done and the plant placed on the ground in a dry condition the chances are that it will be wilted when the purchaser sees it and a dissatisfied customer is the result. When the buyers take the plant themselves impress this necessary detail upon their mind.

Floral Designs.

While the florist will probably have demands for many different floral designs, yet the wreath is by far the one

GHEENT QUINQUENNIAL EXHIBITION.
Hybrid Peony La Lorraine.

if it is picked the day before and allowed to stand in deep jars of water overnight in a cool place, thereby becoming well filled with moisture. A large supply of greens is necessary, hardy ferns to back the sprays or finish the bouquets, and as well to fill in, and quantities of asparagus, both A. plumosus and A. Sprengeri are used. Another green that is very useful is the foliage of Spirea Japonica, the bright shiny leaves adding materially to the work.

Bedding Plants, Etc.

The floral work for Memorial day is not nearly as large in some localities as is the plant trade. In the northern sections of the country the last of May is too early for the setting out of many bedding plants, but throughout the intermediate and southern sections all the plants ordinarily used for beds can safely be transplanted outside, and the demand for these is exceedingly large. The dealer must be fully prepared to meet the call, but of one thing he must be assured, and that is that the plants must be in bloom. At this time the lot owners will desire that the beds make a fine showing. While it is possible at other times to sell plants enough to fill the bed with a few in flower and the rest showing bud, in the beds set out for Memorial day the customer will desire all the flowers possible, and the promise of a beautiful showing later will be of no avail. Geraniums will probably be in greatest demand and the popular varieties S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, Beaute Poitevine and Mme. Buchner will in many cases be far short of the demand for plants in bloom. Pansies are another flower that are used extensively in some cemeteries and they are especially adapted to warm and dry locations and require but little attention, and the other bedding plants such as coleus, alternantheras, heliotropes and stock suitable for small beds, will be in great demand. A plant that the dealer having a good cemetery trade must always have in supply is grave myrtle, Vinca minor. This plant is used in great quantities most desired for Memorial day. Crosses are often ordered and pillows are also the design selected by some for Memorial day, but the wreath is adapted for so many locations that it is always, next to the bouquets and sprays, the most popular floral design. Floral wreaths can be made of all the flowers of the season, depending greatly upon the price obtained, but the dealer must be prepared to arrange them at all prices, many desiring this arrangement for they can be used to fasten upon the monument, lay upon the grave or stand upon an easel. The several green and colored leaves are used in large quantities on this occasion; the galax, both green and bronze, can be made up in beautiful arrangements; the magnolia leaves also are to be had in green and bronze and these make one of the richest wreaths when nicely arranged. Another green that makes up in artistic work is the leucothoe and the cycas fronds are beautifully adapted for backgrounds or intermingling with flowers or other foliage. These prepared and natural leaves have the great advantage of standing the rigors of the weather, whether hot or stormy, and lasting in fine condition a long while. A spray of flowers on one side of these foliage wreaths are a great ornamentation, and can be made so as to please the most fastidious customer.

Immortelle Designs.

Wreaths and other designs made of immortelles and other dried flowers are a prominent feature of the Memorial day trade with many dealers. There is one great use that the florist can make of these—they can be arranged some time before, for they will last in good condition for a long time, and a great display can be arranged in the window the week before Memorial day, which will remind many a shopper of the approach and observance of the day and induce many a sale that would not otherwise be made. The immortelles can be obtained in several colors and very pretty combinations arranged and these flowers, as well as cape flowers, can be wired by the force during leisure moments and arranged long before any rush, and if well displayed are sure to attract attention. They can be further ornamented with the preserved adiantum and other vines and they will find much favor with some people. If made up in this manner they are inexpensive either as regards material or labor and will prove to be a paying investment and attract a customer who would not buy flowers on account of their being so perishable, or having to be sent a long distance with no one to take proper care of them. The metal floral work is also shown in large quantities and is popular with some people, for we have seen large numbers of the different designs in many cemeteries. Where there is a demand for this class of work the florist should have a stock on hand, for the purchasers are sure to desire it, and he might just as well obtain the sale as to leave it to some other tradesman, yet if it interferes with the sale of flowers it had better be discontinued as far as the florist is concerned, and let him devote his energies to the rightful product of his business.

Cemetery Vases.

The florist located near a cemetery will have many customers come to purchase flowers who have not beforehand provided themselves with any receptacles in which to place them. These people will always be anxious to obtain some vessel which will hold water in which they can place the flowers so that they will not immediately wilt, and if they can obtain such a receptacle so that the flowers will last so much longer it is a great satisfaction to them. We have often seen almost everything from fruit jars to pitchers, pressed into service at such a time, and these people who perhaps have purchased their flowers of some other dealer or cut them from curable. A dealer so situated should have a stock of these vases on hand. They can be obtained in different materials, glass, pottery or iron, and are made very ornamental, will stand hard usage and can be bought so that they can be sold at a very moderate price. Having these on hand and making a good display of them may also materially assist in disposing of much stock for many persons will often buy when the flowers can be properly cared for who would let the matter go by default or refuse to purchase unless they had the necessary fixtures. Demands for some vase or receptacle in which to place the flowers are often made and the dealer having a Memorial day trade should have a good supply in various sizes.

Californians Neglect Ornamental Planting.

Lompoc, Calif.—No effort whatever is made toward effective planting of flowering and foliage plants in this vicinity. A sort of go-as-you-please method in planting is the only "effort" made. Opportunities, however, are abundant to make really effective plantings. A native phacelia—but which one at this writing I am unable to determine; only I can say it is a beautiful blue—is now, April 28, in full bloom. Hereabouts it is by some people called "Baby Blue Eyes." Its coloring, however, is too deep to be so classified.

Delphinium Chinensis is now in bloom also. Many of the hybrids and the beautiful D. Belladonna are commencing to show color. Wallflowers have been in bloom for some weeks, as also have many of the mathiolas, to which the well known ten weeks stocks belong. These and wallflowers might be used very effectively out here as spring bedding plants, and at the risk of being called a heretic I very much prefer the single flowering varieties. There is an airy grace about the single varieties that the double flowering types do not possess.

Among daisy-like flowers we have the single pyrethrums in a variety of shades, also Dimorphotheca aurantiaca and D. hybrida. These latter are from plants known out here as "volunteers," or self sown. The same may be said of Arctotis grandis, all of which apparently delight in conditions as found here, both soil and climatic. Pansies! I never saw better pansies anywhere than are grown here and if some intelligent attention was bestowed upon them much better results might be had. Alyssum saxatile and Arabis albidia are fast going past their best, especially the latter. Iris pallida and I. Florentina are still in bloom to some extent.

If planting for effect were the only object in view one could surely make a most spectacular display, and it requires spectacular floral displays to awaken the multitude. Artistic effects come later. The rainfall so far has fallen very short of that recorded last year and last year was a short year. However, we are making good use of a well we had drilled last autumn, so that if we do not have bountiful crops, we believe we have done our best toward trying to secure them.

A Table Novelty.

Spring flower bouquets are pretty substitutes for dinner or luncheon cards. Each one should differ in some detail either in shape or color. Duplicate bouquets of those provided for the table may be presented by the hostess in the drawing room as a greeting to each guest upon her arrival. Later in the dining room each guest finds the mate to her bouquet, indicating her place at the table. Or, instead of place cards, use a rose or other flower tied to an oblong-shaped card. Buttonhole bouquets can be used on those for the men and worn after dinner. If further embellishment is desired a neat little verse can also be inscribed below the rose.

Flowers For Mothers' Day.

In regard to this new event in the cut-flower trade possibly a more general discussion by florists will help to make the handling of the demand more profitable to all concerned if a universal wearing of any kind of flower can be induced. At present, the most of the demand is for white carnations. Now, at this time of year, any kind of a carnation is hard to handle in a satisfactory manner. The carnation is strictly a cold weather flower and in May the weather is usually very changeable. Hot days and nights, lots of rain, the air sometimes sultry and laden with moisture, cause a soft growth on the plants and flowers that deteriorate rapidly no matter how tight in the bud they are cut. The tendency of growers to save up their white carnations just as long as possible on the plants in order to take advantage of the extra demand and extra prices are all features which hurt this event, as by the time the consuming public gets such flowers they are not satisfactory. In order to make Mothers' day a satisfactory event in the floral trade, this demand for only carnations and especially white carnations, must be changed. The public expect a flower that will wear well and be reasonable in price. If the Florists' Clubs and societies could take this matter up in some way so that any variety of flower should be worn, the event can be made much more popular than under present conditions.

Mirror Decorations.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE

The mirror is one of the vantage points of the decorator. Here his work is made doubly attractive by the reflection in the glass which adds a finish to the work that is not obtained in any other way. The mirror, which generally rests on a mantel is so high as to attract attention from all parts of the room, and when well dressed, in connection with the mantel shelf, is sure to be one of the features of the display. The supplement shows an arrangement of Kaiserin roses and asparagus, held in position by an adjustable vase-holding rod. The vases are filled with water, and when in position it is a matter of a short time to produce a similar effect with almost any kind of medium or short-stemmed flower.

With the addition of a well-arranged mantel shelf banked with ferns or with pots of ferns placed among asparagus, sprays of which fall gracefully along the front, and vases of roses high at one corner and gradually lowering to a falling spray at the other, a very beautiful and artistic effect is produced. Tall palms either side or high at one side and lower on the other with a lower connecting line of the same on the floor adds the finishing touch. In the mirror and mantel decorations at the recent National Flower Show in New York, the mirrors were very small and far out of proportion to the mantel on which they rested. Here the decorators used liberal quantities of palms and ferns as a background. Asparagus and cut ferns, as well as quantities of flowers in vases and sprays, were then used to carry out the color effect. One very pretty effect was produced with roses and cut ferns alone. The variety Lady Hillingdon was arranged in vases and sprays. The effect was simple and very artistic. Another in which the green was entirely of Parleyense fern and red roses, with a few Lady Hillingdon, was stunning. The above are cited as showing the work of the best artists at this time. K.

Gowns Trimmed with Natural Flowers.

A recent cable from Paris, describing the costumes worn at Longchamps paddock, contains the following: "Perhaps the prettiest innovation today was the wearing of a single American Beauty rose with a long stem in place of the usual bouquet. The rose was not fastened to the dress but carried in the hand. Fashion experts explain that the length and grace of the American rose go far to enhance the beauty line and slimmness of the wearer.

"Fresh flowers, indeed, will take first place in the budget of the smart woman this summer. They will be worn on the hats, also as trimming on gowns, in the latter case being made up in long strings, secured by jeweled clasps. They will be worn along the borders of coats, the hems of sleeves, around the waist, and even on the hems of folds in draped skirts. When used as trimmings small May roses will be preferred, although daisies and other field flowers are favored as being apt to last longer than the garden products. It was said today that the campaign to make flowers popular was begun in order to stamp out the craze for aigrettes."

Memorial Day.

The desire to pay tribute to the departed by means of the sweet gifts of nature manifests itself more keenly on Memorial day as each year rolls by. Strewing graves with flowers is a pretty custom that should be encouraged by our florists in our advertisements—making up special boxes for this purpose at a low price. The Germans show considerable taste in decking their tombs and strewing their graves with flowers. Their favorite flower for the purpose is the forgetmenot.

Some plants and flowers have ever been considered more appropriate than others for the purpose of decorating the last resting places of the departed. Pansies have always held their own for the thought they convey. Among the Romans it appears the rose was the favorite flower for strewing the graves and garlands were used for the tombs. Others have taken the lily as symbolical. Just as the trefoil legend of Ireland tells of how St. Patrick explained the doctrine of the Trinity by its triple leaflets to the pagan Irish till they became its converts, just so have we symbolized each flower for its special meaning, and these are the flowers that should be emphasized on Memorial day.

What could be more appropriate for a child's grave than an artistically arranged wreath of forgetmenots and the grave strewn with maguerites? Or, the wreath of marguerites, and the grave strewn with forgetmenots? Sweet alyssum combined with forgetmenots are most attractive. Make a flat double bunch of these, tying it in the center with a white ribbon rosette and streamers. A raffia mat can be prettily arranged with pansies and finished with a ribbon bow which would be most appropriate for an elderly person and can be readily attached to the grave. The pansies could be wired to the raffia in clusters, using maidenhair fern as a filler. This same arrangement can be effectively made with full blown pink roses. Garlands of roses, snowballs, or any of our beautiful wild flowers will be a happy suggestion for a limited purse.

A word about our wild flowers—it is a matter of congratulation that wild flowers are now regarded with so much interest that our florists display them. But, in placing them in our windows, would it not be a good idea to label them and attach to the card any little legend in connection with them? It has been said of the birds that they are the poor man's music; and that the flowers are the poor man's poetry. The garden beds present the fair snowdrop, and the rich gold of the crocus; the small rose-colored or blue flowers of the hepaticas and brilliant vases of the anemones. But how many of us do really recognize them and call them by their right name? The wild flowers, with the cultivated varieties, make a most happy combination and especially on Memorial day, and nearly all kinds can be secured from the wholesaler.

The loose bunch of mixed flowers is always popular and is easily arranged to a better profit than some of the more set effects. However, we should not overlook the cemetery vases and make a goodly display of them in our windows, showing appropriate suggestions for filling. A good idea would be to drape an American flag at the back of the window and show nothing but cemetery vases filled with flower suggestions for the day. Mounds could be made of various sizes in graduated lines covered with green sheet moss and the vases placed on these. At the sides of the window arrange palms so they will overhang, much as the branches of a tree falling over the graves. The lacette bouquet holders will add to the effectiveness of the bouquets in the cemetery vases. But, in every case use the white lacette. If pansies or a short stemmed flower is desired stem them in groups on tall stiff wire. Wet moss can be placed in the cemetery vases in such cases and the arrangement made more showy.

It would be a good plan to plant some of the cemetery vases with small ferns. Of course, they will not hold many, but a better profit can in this way be made. As the cemetery vase at wholesale costs but about 25 cents and small ferns about as much more for filling, a retail price of one dollar and a half would net a good profit. Of course, there are a great many ways that the ingenious florist can make these cemetery vases attractive and profitable. The spring flowers are usually the least expensive and sell more readily, especially where the trade demands a nominal price, and where a great deal of transient trade is done. Dogwood, iris, violets (the wild ones), daffodils, etc., too many to mention, are all salable. A. E. K.

Peonies.

The following interesting and valuable article on peonies appears in a bulletin issued April 23 by the Department of Agriculture, compiled from the publications of the agricultural experiment stations:

The peony is one of many old-time flowers which have experienced a decided modern improvement and revival of popularity. This is shown by the recent rapid growth of its culture and by the larger number of varieties that are being originated and propagated by the trade. The American Peony Society has for several years been co-operating with the Cornell Experiment Station in the study of the nomenclature and classification of the peony and the station has recently issued its fourth report on this work. This and previous reports give descriptions of 626 varieties, including probably 95 per cent of the important commercial varieties. Those in charge of this work have, however, been strongly "impressed with the large number of only medium varieties which are being continually originated and propagated by the trade."

It is probably a conservative statement to say that the peony interests of the country would be better off if about 75 per cent of the varieties were destroyed and future propagation made from the remaining 25 per cent of superior varieties. It is not that these 75 per cent of the varieties are positively unattractive; far from it. But the remaining 25 per cent fill every purpose and have many more virtues than the only medium to inferior sorts. By discarding the mediocre or poor sorts and selling only the more desirable varieties the customers would be even more infatuated with this beautiful flower, and a more extensive and higher-class trade would be built up, to the benefit of all concerned.

Varieties recommended by the American Peony Society for cut flowers and landscape or border planting are as follows:

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Busy Season at Hand.

The month of May is a busy period for the palm grower, from the fact that it is at this season that a large portion of the stock gets its spring handling, which usually includes more or less cleaning, repotting and the re-arrangement of the stock on the benches. Where dipping, sponging or any method of removing insects from the leaves and stems is required, the operation should take place before the plants are repotted, as any disturbance of the plant immediately after potting is likely to cause more or less of a check, the handling necessary for the changing of the foliage tending to loosen the plant in the soil. The fore-handed grower, therefore, does his cleaning first, then repots, and afterwards the plants are in condition to go ahead as the days lengthen and the sun heat grows stronger.

The best foundation for potting soil for palms is found in rotted sod from an old pasture, if such can be obtained, this being composted with good stable manure in the proportion of one part of manure to four parts of soil. If the soil is naturally heavy, it will be improved by the addition of some sand, or peat, or both, but it must be remembered that the addition of these substances does not add greatly to the soil's fertility, but chiefly helps in making it more open. Humus is essential in potting soil for plants in general, and this is supplied most readily in the decayed sod and stable manure, from which we find that these two constituents are the most valuable in the compost.

This does not mean that other fertilizers have no value, but it does indicate that one needs to experiment with some care in the use of special fertilizers for palm growing. I never received any benefit from dried blood mixed in the potting soil, but did find some improvement in the case of root-bound specimens that we watered with blood solution. A fertilizer containing only a moderate proportion of nitrogen and a rather high proportion of potash seemed to help considerably in some soils, but these special mixtures require much experimentation in order to give positive results. Soil that has been run through a grinder or well broken up with a shovel is, in most cases, fine enough for potting in any size pot larger than 3-inch, and it is only for seedlings, or for shifting from 2-inch to 3-inch pots that sifted soil is required.

Always pot firmly, the thumbs of an experienced potter giving pressure enough on the soil for any size up to 4-inch pots, but beyond that size a rammer is required. No palm should be potted with a dry ball, for under those conditions it is very hard to get it thoroughly watered afterwards, the water finding an easier passage through the fresh soil than through the old ball. To avoid this difficulty it is good practice to soak any doubtful plants in a tub of water previous to potting them, this precaution being very frequently found necessary in the case of imported stock, owing to the fact that much of such stock has been grown in a light compost of which leaf-mould forms a considerable part, and such a soil requires much water to keep it in condition.

From time to time the question arises as to whether it is safe to cut away some of the roots from palms at the time of repotting in order to keep down the size of the pots within reasonable limits. In reply to this question it may be said that root pruning of palms is a safe operation at this season, provided the plants are given proper care afterward. And proper care under these circumstances means that the plants shall be thoroughly watered after potting, shall be placed in a shaded house and kept comparatively close for a few weeks, for a temperature of 85 degrees in bright weather and 70 degrees at night will do them no harm, provided they get moisture enough, and that the foliage shall be well sprayed twice a day in bright weather until the plants get a fresh start.

Most of the phoenix family are rather troublesome in regard to roots, which are frequently out of proportion to the foliage and often push the plants out of their pots. At the spring potting these may be pruned rather severely, as they will soon recover from the shock and go ahead quite naturally. The main object of the palm grower for the next few months is to take advantage of the weather, and with that in view he repots as early as the condition of the plants will admit, then gives them a moist and growing atmosphere, fresh air without strong draughts, and sufficient shade to bring up the color of the foliage, knowing that with careful attention to these details now he will be able to harden off his plants in time for the fall trade. W. H. TAPLIN.

dries out rather quickly. It is representative of about 2,000,000 acres in New Jersey and of large areas in other States of the South Atlantic seaboard. The soil used in the experiments had in previous years received applications of both manure and fertilizers, but was not very productive. In preparing the soil for the experiments the following materials were applied: Lime 1,000 pounds, acid phosphate 320, ground bone 100, muriate of potash 160, and dried blood 150 pounds per acre. In addition to these, three of the plats received each 16 pounds of nitrate of soda, or at the rate of 80 pounds per acre, applied as a top dressing after the plants were well started. The crops were arranged so as to provide a reasonably uniform supply of forage.

The crops grown included corn, wheat, rye, barnyard millet, wheat and vetch, rye and vetch, oats and vetch, cowpeas, soy beans, red clover, crimson clover, alfalfa, beets, and mangels. Two crops were harvested annually from each plat. More than half of the crops were either legumes or a mixture of legumes and non-legumes. The legumes included five crops of crimson clover, four crops of cowpeas, three crops of soy beans, six crops of vetch grown alone, or together with rye, wheat or oats, and single crops of red clover and of alfalfa. The crimson clover, cowpeas, and vetch all grew splendidly when the seasonal conditions were favorable, and proved themselves well adapted for supplying generous amounts of animal food, and for adding to the store of nitrogen and humus in the soil. The frequent growing of legumes served a twofold purpose. It permitted larger yields of protein, since these crops are particu-

Improvement of Sandy Soils.

In 1904 the New Jersey experiment stations undertook experiments at Hammonton on the light sandy soils of southern New Jersey which had as their object the working out of methods of cropping and fertilizing by which the farmers on such soils might secure a sufficient supply of succulent forage for their cattle and gradually improve the productive capacity of the soil. The soil experimented upon was typical light sandy soil which holds water "but indifferently well" and larly rich in nitrogenous constituents. It permitted, also, the fixation of large amounts of atmospheric nitrogen by means of these crops, and the addition of a part of it to the soil. With a plentiful supply of phosphoric acid, potash, and lime there was thus no difficulty at all in obtaining the nitrogen for the soil and the protein for the animals at comparatively slight expense. Succulent foods for the animals were available for a considerable portion of the growing season. Of course, no attempt was made to establish a complete soiling system, it being the purpose of the experiments to demonstrate merely that such a system may be made both practicable and profitable on the sandy soils of South Jersey.

The initial outlay for fertilizers ranged from $11.92 to $13.52 per acre. The cost of subsequent applications was small, not exceeding about $4 in 1905 and 1906. The value of the crops produced, less the cost of fertilizers, was $20.01 in 1904, $46.02 in 1905, $64.07 in 1906, and $76.90 in 1907. The returns from the land showed a gradual and marked increase. Excluding those of 1904, when only one crop was secured, the value of the crop in 1905 exceeded the cost of fertilizer by $46.92. The gain in 1906 was $64.07 and in 1907 $76.90. No attempt is made here to allow for the cost of seed and labor, for it was the purpose of the experiment to demonstrate merely that the growing of forage crops on light soils may be made both practicable and profitable, while increasing at the same time the productive capacity of the land. The valuation placed on the crops, which we believed justified by local conditions, may be considered excessive in other localities. This would, however, in no wise affect the main points under discussion. Whatever the value of the crops under varying market conditions, it still remains true that the land has improved and that the crop yields have proved profitable. From the standpoint of forage production the problem has been solved in a most gratifying manner, and the method as followed on the experiment plats can be applied, therefore, just as successfully on larger areas of similar land.

The experiments prove convincingly that it is possible and practicable to grow forage crops for the dairy on the light, sandy soils of South Jersey; that two crops may be easily harvested each season; that the purchase of organic matter for maintaining the soil humus is not necessary; that the purchase of nitrogen may be largely dispensed with; that this method secures the accumulation of organic matter in the soil and an improvement in its physical properties; that with proper management it may be made to provide for the accumulation of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash in the soil. It may be especially noted in this connection that the gratifying results secured are due in great part to the large proportion of leguminous crops grown. Indeed, the cowpeas and crimson clover, which grow so splendidly on this type of soil, have shown very marked improvement. From these results it is considered not unreasonable to assume that by systematic cropping and fertilizing millions of acres of sandy soils in New Jersey and other States of the South Atlantic seaboard now uncultivated and unproductive may be profitably utilized "for dairy purposes to supply local needs, and to furnish, besides, a supply of dairy products for the large centers of population more or less distant. They emphasize once again that these lands have before them a prosperous future, and that some day they are destined to be the scene of intelligent farming and of highly profitable returns, where at present they are scarcely tilled at all."

Uses of the Sweet Potato.

The food value of the sweet potato is quite fully appreciated. That it has other possible uses of great importance is not so fully understood. For several years the South Carolina Experiment Station has been investigating the possibilities of the sweet potato as a starch producer. In a recent bulletin of the station T. E. Keitt summarizes the results of this work to date. It has been shown to be entirely practicable to make starch of high quality especially suited to laundry and other uses from sweet potatoes. In order to do so, however, it is necessary to have varieties specially suited to starch production. The South Carolina station has made a careful study of a large number of varieties with reference not only to their use for starch production but for other purposes.

It is only by a study of the different varieties that we can determine to what purpose these varieties are best adapted. There are many uses to which the sweet potato may be applied, but in every case the requirements are different, and a potato that is excellent for one purpose may be entirely unfit for another.

For market or for table use early maturity, shape, size, color, texture, flavor, and keeping qualities are all very important factors. The first potatoes on the market, even if not absolutely first class in quality, command a good price; a medium-sized, uniform, evenly colored, fine-textured, sweet-flavored potato is the favorite in the South. At the North the sweet potato that is yellow in color and bakes to a candy is discarded for a white-colored starchy potato; therefore the market requirements of the place of consignment should be closely studied. The potato that can be kept for a long time and sold when scarce is most profitable of all.

For stock-feeding purposes pounds of dry matter per acre is the most important consideration, because the nitrogen-free extract constitutes most of the dry matter, and nitrogen-free extract is what the southern feeder is most deficient in. Cottonseed meal and leguminous forages furnish an abundance of protein, but on account of the lack of enough carbonaceous feed he is constantly forced to feed a narrow ration, which is consequently a high-priced one and one which will not give the best returns for money invested. The color, texture, uniformness of size, and uniformness of shape are of no importance when they are fed to stock. Content of dry matter and yield per acre are paramount.

When potatoes are grown for starch production, a light-colored or white potato is preferable, because the starch is discolored by the coloring matter of the deeply colored potatoes. Percentage composition of starch and yield per acre are the most important factors to consider in this connection, because it is possible to bleach the starch, but deficiencies in composition and yield will cut the profits. For this purpose we would want light-colored, heavy-yielding varieties, high in starch and low in sugar content.

For fermentation purposes for the production of alcohol, a high yield of fermentable carbohydrates and a high yield per acre is all that is necessary. It matters not how high the sugar content is, for the starch must be converted into sugar before it can be fermented.

The value of the variety tests is twofold; in the first place, we learn which varieties are best suited for the different purposes, and, secondly, we know which varieties should be best to use in selection breeding for any particular purpose.

Summarizing the results of the variety tests it is stated that—

For early maturity for table use, Nancy Hall is the best variety that we have tested. It is also a heavy yielder, considering its earliness. Other good table varieties are: Fulleton Yellow Yam, Pumpkin Yam, and Vine-land Bunch Yam; the latter, however, is a shy bearer. Of these the Fulleton Yam gave us the best yield.

For stock-feeding purposes the heavy yielding varieties are best suited (probably Nancy Hall could be included on account of its earliness), and some of the following varieties: Brazilian, Southern Queen, Providence, Myer Early, Red Jersey, Molly Malone, all of which yielded heavily, could be planted to form a succession which should last from about August 1 to January 1, after which time the potatoes will be too valuable as a human food, if they can be preserved, to be used as a stock food.

In the manufacture of starch, unless the starch is to be chemically bleached, a white potato is necessary. The other requisites are heavy yield and high starch content. The varieties that would seem best suited are Southern Queen, Providence and Brazilian, for they are all either white or very light yellow in color, besides being heavy yielders and running high in starch content. Other varieties that yielded high in starch were Myer Early, Strausburg, Red Jersey, and Molly Malone. * * *

In composition the different varieties vary a great deal, and there are certain other influences that seem to produce marked effects on the content of starch. The time of digging is a very important factor, for after the starch content reaches the maximum there is a change to sucrose. This change may take place either in the field or in the storehouse. * * * The best time to dig the crop is after the first killing frost, for then the yield and the starch content are both at their maximum; while earlier, the yield would be less, and later, the starch is partly changed to cane sugar, which is soluble in water, and consequently would be lost in the wash water in the manufacture of the starch.

It is also pointed out that—

The sweet potato might serve as a valuable source of fermentable carbohydrates for the production of alcohol. For, in addition to its content of starch, which would first have to be converted into sugars and then fermented, it also contains several per cent of sugars. The sugar content varies with time of gathering. * * * The first wash waters and the pulp might be fermented and the alcohol derived in this way recovered, thus furnishing a valuable by-product to the starch industry.

The sweet potato possesses high value as a stock feed in the South as a cheap and productive source of carbohydrates.

While there would be a great deal of trouble in keeping sweet potatoes the whole year round, and their value at certain seasons, if they are successfully kept, is so great as to be prohibitive of using them as a stock feed, yet they could be fed judiciously to great advantage from the first of September to the first of January. And even when there is a good market the scarred ones and culls could be fed to good advantage. All kinds of stock seem very fond of them, and they possess a great advantage over the other root crops, in that they contain as high as 37 per cent of dry matter, and can be depended upon to contain as high as about 30 per cent of dry matter. Besides, sweet potatoes are better suited to our conditions than are most of the other root crops. * * *

On land in [South Carolina] which, under the ordinary system of cropping, yields 20 bushels of corn, we should be able to produce about 200 bushels of sweet potatoes. The potatoes would furnish more than three times as much nitrogen-free extract and as much, or more, of each of the other proximate constituents of a feeding stuff as that contained in the corn.

A South Carolina farmer who has used sweet potatoes for years as a feed for horses, mules and cattle, says:

"I find them to be a fine feed; of course, it is better not to feed exclusively on them." He continues by saying that he feeds one meal per day of corn and two meals of sweet potatoes, and that during the past fall and winter he fed them every meal for at least three months. He found that his mules, which were being worked to two-horse plows, did good work and kept in good condition. He uses a vegetable cutter to chop the potatoes and finds that 5 or 6 quarts sprinkled with 1 pint of rice meal makes a good feed which is readily eaten by the stock. It is [his] opinion that this rice meal will cause the stock to learn to eat it more readily in the beginning, and that they relish the mixture more than potatoes alone. * * *

In addition to the value of the tubers as a feed, the vines also are highly nutritious and much relished by stock. * * *

The great trouble would be, however, the expense of gathering these vines, which are not only trailing vines, but they take root in many places. On account of the high percentage of fertilizing constituents present and the great need for humus in our soils, perhaps, taking into consideration the cost and difficulties of gathering, it would be best to leave them on the land. If, however, they can be gathered cheaply and are fed on the farm and the manure saved and returned to the land, the feeding would unquestionably be best.

Analysis shows that although they contain about 4 per cent less protein they contain about 1 per cent more fat and 8 per cent less fiber and 11 per cent more carbohydrates than hays of legumes like clover, cowpeas and soy beans.

The food value of the sweet potato is generally recognized, especially in the South. The South Carolina station has found "that by drying and grinding the dried product into a meal the meal can be preserved indefinitely, and that it does not lose any of its flavor when made into pies and custards."

Apples in the Arnold Arboretum.

One of the handsomest of all crab-apples, Malus floribunda, is one of the earliest to flower. As it grows in this country it is a broad shrub, with a trunk dividing at the base into several large branches, states the bulletin issued by the Arnold Arboretum. The pink flowers, which are deep rose color in the bud, turn white before the petals fall and are produced in the greatest profusion. The dark green foliage is abundant but the yellow or orange-colored fruits, which are not much larger than peas, make little show. The origin of this plant is uncertain; it was first sent to Europe from Japan but it is not a native of that country where it was probably introduced from China, although it does not appear to be known in China now in a wild state. By some authors it is considered a hybrid between two of the species of northern China, although it bears but little resemblance to its supposed parents. A plant which is evidently a hybrid of M. floribunda appeared spontaneously in the Arboretum several years ago and has been named Malus Arnoldiana. It has much larger pink flowers and larger fruit than M. floribunda, and in flower is one of the most beautiful of all crab-apples.

The crabapple of eastern Siberia, Malus baccata, is a tall narrow tree with white flowers on long, drooping stems and very small yellow fruits from which the calyx falls before the fruit ripens. There is a fine old specimen of this tree in front of the gardener's house in the Harvard Botanic Garden at Cambridge. In the Arboretum a number of forms of this species have been raised. They are distinguished from the Siberian tree by larger pure white flowers and larger fruits than those of M. baccata. Some of these forms are among the most beautiful of the early flowering crab-apples.

Malus spectabilis from northern China is a tall shrub or small tree with erect, slightly spreading stems, large pink flowers which in the cultivated plants are more or less double, and medium-sized yellow fruits. This is an old inhabitant of gardens where several forms have appeared. The handsomest of these is known as the Rivers Crab (M. spectabilis Riversii) from the English nurseryman by whom it was raised or distributed. The Parkman Crab (M. Halliana) owes its name to the fact that it was first cultivated outside of Japan by Francis Parkman, the historian, who received it from there in 1860. It is a small and not very vigorous tree with dark bark and bright, clear pink, semidouble flowers drooping on long, slender stalks. This is a Chinese plant now only known in gardens and long cultivated in those of Japan. It should be in a list of the four or five most beautiful crab-apples. Another handsome plant in this group is Malus Scheideckeri which is supposed to be a hybrid between M. floribunda and M. prunifolia. It is vigorous and fast-growing, with erect stems which form a narrow head, pink and white flowers and light yellow fruits.

Interesting species now well established at the Arboretum are Malus zumi from Japan, with pink and white flowers, M. toringo from northern China and Japan, and M. Sargentii from Japan. The two last flower late, have small flowers in crowded clusters and are distinguished by the threelobed leaves on the shoots of the year. Unlike all other crab-apples, M. Sargentii is a low shrub growing naturally on the borders of salt marshes.

The so-called Siberian crab-apples of pomologists are trees of much ornamental value and are well worth cultivating for the beauty of their flowers and fruits; they are fast-growing trees with straight stems and pyramidal heads, large white flowers, and brilliant, often translucent, red or yellow, long-hanging fruits. The fruit is used in preserves and jellies, and for their fruits these trees are much grown in regions too cold for the successful cultivation of the common apple. One of the most curious apple-trees in the collection, M. Niedzwetzkyana, has deep purplish red flowers and fruit, even the flesh being purple, purple leaves at least early in the season and dark bark. It comes from central Asia and is probably a form of M. pumila, one of the parents of the common apple-tree, as seedlings raised in the Arboretum have sometimes purple but more often green leaves.

The crab-apples of eastern North America bloom later than the Old World species. They all have large, pink, fragrant flowers, and fragrant, green or yellowish fruit characterized by the sticky exudation with which it is covered. The last of the crab-apples to flower is the double-flowered form of M. ioensis, known as the Bechtel Crab. This tree has double pale pink flowers which look like small clustered roses, and attract so much attention that the ground around the trees is trodden hard every day by visitors who wish to examine them at close range.

OBITUARY.

Alexander L. Don.

Alexander L. Don, of the seed firm of Weeber & Don, 114 Chambers street, New York, died May 8 at his home in Ridgewood, N. J., of a complication of diseases. He was born in Scotland 58 years ago and came to New York when 21 years old. For a time he was an agent or employe of various foreign and local seed firms, later becoming a partner in the firm of Weeber & Don, which has existed for about 25 years. Mr. Don was a highly respected member of the trade. He is survived by a widow, two sons and three daughters. The funeral took place May 10 at Christ Church, Ridgewood. A. F. F.

William Ewing.

Wm. Ewing, head of Wm. Ewing & Co., seedsmen and florists, of Montreal, Que., died suddenly as he was about to enter his house recently at 100 Sherbrooke street west. He was 69 years of age, and was born in Scotland. He had been a resident of Montreal for fifty years. He first started as a wholesale druggist, but soon entered the seed and cut flower business and became one of the best known men in the trade in Canada. He was very popular in his home city and among the trade generally, and news of his death comes as a great shock to his many friends.

Thos. H. Paterson.

We are sorry to report the death of another Baltimore, Md., florist, Thomas H. Paterson, for four years master of Lexington Market. His death came very suddenly, a result of apoplexy. He and his father were florists together, his place of business at one time being Eutaw street, above Lexington. Mr. Paterson is survived by a widow and two sisters, both florists: Mrs. Graham, of Waverly, and Mrs. Wm. Johnston of Baltimore. He was a member of the Gardeners' Club.

SECRETARY YOUNG of the Society of American Florists is mailing the new buttons to members who have paid their dues.

THE trade of Minneapolis and some few other cities combined in Mothers' day advertising, using the daily press with good results.

THOSE who wish to participate in the outdoor exhibition at the Minneapolis convention should ship the stock in good season for planting.

THE Mothers' day business was a great surprise to many florists, growers, dealers and retailers alike, the demand for cut flowers, carnations especially, being away beyond the supply of good stock.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. Erwin F. Smith, plant pathologist in the Agricultural Department, has declined an offer of $10,000 a year with the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research to continue in his present position at a salary of $4,000.

American Institute Shows.

The eighty-second annual exhibition of the American Institute of the City of New York will be held in the Engineering building, 25-33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York. Premiums will be awarded for dahlias, orchids, gladioli, roses, carnations, ornamental plants, etc., and fruits and vegetables, September 23-25, 1913, and for chrysanthemums, orchids, roses, carnations and other ornamental plants, etc., November 5-7, 1913.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Albert A. Sawyer of Forest Park, Ill., offers for registration the following aster:

RAISER'S DESCRIPTION.

Name, Sawyer Asternum. Description: During the summer of 1904 I caught a "sport" among my asters having a beautiful shade of lavender and from it, by careful selection, I have produced the Sawyer Asternum in the three colors, lavender, pink and white. The blossoms are on the order of the Hohenzollern but the petals are much longer and thicker, making a good shipper. In contrast, however, to the Hohenzollern the blooms of the Asternum are produced in a plant of upright growth, sending straight up strong long stems, and the plant is not a branching variety. For this reason I claim it is original with me, owing to its remarkable resemblance to many varieties of chrysanthemums.

(Signed) ALBERT A. SAWYER.

April 25, 1913.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Carnation Year Book.

We are in receipt of the fourth Year Book of the Perpetual Carnation Society of England, containing the list of members, the rules of the society, reports of meetings, awards, etc. Two exhibitions were held during the year, the winter show at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regents Park, December 4-5, 1911, and the spring show at the Royal Horticultural Hall, March 21-22, 1912. The report of the finances shows the society to be out of debt and in a flourishing condition. The American varieties, Gloriosa and Benora, were both granted an award of merit and the first named was awarded 45 points. American varieties registered in 1912 were; Gloria, true pink, H. W. Field, Northampton, Mass.; Vivid, cerise, Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.; Radiance, scarlet, Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.; Princess Dagmar, crimson, Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass. Show dates for 1913 are April 10-11, spring show, Leamington; December 2-3, winter show, R. H. S. Hall, London. The book contains a number of valuable articles by T. A. Weston, R. F. Felton and others. The secretary of the society is T. A. Weston, Floradale, Orpington.

American Rose Society.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The elegance and brilliancy of the National Flower Show has left a mark behind it, and awakened a popular feeling of appreciation. Said one man from Westchester County: "I never saw anything like this. But if you dropped the roses out it would look like a pond with a hole in the bottom." An expression which, if not elegant, was certainly suggestive. The roses displayed were without doubt the most perfect specimens of greenhouse culture, and the plant section in pots and tubs was unrivaled. The number of entries and the quantity en masse has never been equaled in the history of the American Rose Society, and this display came from members of this society. The total value of prizes exceeded $2,700.

The executive committee will meet in New York Friday, May 16, at Vice-President Traendley's office. The Rose Society might become a powerful organization for pushing rose culture if it could offer to each local civic or horticultural society the Rose Society medals. The plant growers of the United States should all join the A. R. S. Three societies have asked if permission to do this could be granted.

President Farenwald has appointed as judges for the Hartford Rose Garden Wallace R. Pierson, Eber Holmes and John Huss. The committee consisting of Robt. Pyle, Patrick O'Mara and Wm. F. Gude was appointed at the annual meeting to confer with the United States commissioner of agriculture relative to the establishment of a rose test garden in Washington, D. C. This committee is in accord with the S. A. F. committee.

Another movement in this same direction comes from the New York state Agricultural College at Ithaca. Here is an opportunity for New York state people to make a test out in the central part of the state where the winters are usually steady and in an inland climate. The Rose Journal, which last year was upheld by five gentlemen, should be sustained. If we can get 50 persons who, as rosarians, will take space for 50 inches it will be a great help. Our committee on membership will take hold and do whatever it can to aid the cause.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Humidity Regulator.

The importance of a humidity regulator has long been recognized and especially in the growing of plants, where accurate control of temperature is essential. Such an invention is described by Wm. Mansfield Clark, chemist of the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture, in a bulletin issued recently by the department. "The regulator," says Mr. Clark, "operates on the principle of the wet and dry bulb hygrometer. It consists of a dry bulb and a bulb kept moist by a thin covering of wicking or muslin. This is fed with water from the reservoir. The bulbs are connected by a capillary tube partially filled with mercury.

The tube is connected with a levelling bulb or a cup and plunger, by which the height of the mercury in the capillary may be adjusted. Electrical connection is made with the mercury by a sealed in platinum wire. The whole instrument is placed in a current of air whose humidity it is desired to regulate. Evaporation takes place on the moist bulb, producing a cooling of the inclosed gas. The consequent reduction in pressure permits the excess pressure in the first bulb to drive the mercury away from the platinum contact." A steam or water spray results and as the humidity is increased the evaporation from the second bulb diminishes, and consequently the cooling.

Boston.

MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS FINE.

The Mothers' day business was far greater than ever before in the history of this modern cut-flower occasion. Carnations sold out completely, the price going as high as 6 cents and they are still scarce, selling even now at 4 to 5 cents. The general market conditions are very good, with no surplus. The dealers are carefully canvassing the situation as to the possibilities for Decoration day material and are looking forward to a very heavy business. Mrs. Chas. Russel roses are selling well. American Beauty going at low prices.

NOTES.

There were some very fine carnations at the Flower Exchange from Albert Roper, Tewksbury; W. R. Nicholson, Framingham, and A. G. Pembroke, North Beverly.

Much interest is being shown in the proposed excursion to Wm. H. Elliott's establishment at Madbury, N. H., May 21.

The Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, R. I., is sending in rose stock of good quality in fine variety.

Welch Bros. have been exceedingly busy and are handling a lot of fine stock. A. F. F.

Sixty Degree Orchids.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Give the names of a few orchids that will do well in a temperature of 55° to 60° in zero weather with some general cultural directions. E. J. Connecticut.

There are very few orchids that need a minimum of 60° in zero weather. To most, it would be injurious. The same may be said of 55° under the same conditions. Some of the tropical kinds, such as the Phalaenopsis, Vandas, and a few others need heat, but the great majority of really good flowering kinds will do well in what may be easiest to describe as a carnation house temperature—something less than 55° during coldest nights. Cattleyas, laelias, dendrobis, cyripedes all thrive with a maximum of 55° during winter, and on zero nights it will do no harm if the temperature is a little below 50°.

With orchids, it is not so much a matter of temperature as atmosphere, and a heat that exhausts the moisture in the house, when it cannot be replenished, as during the night, is inexcusable and detrimental. The names of 12 orchids that will do well for some time with a 60° temperature are as follows: Dendrobium Phalaenopsis, Aerides, Vandas, and Phalaenopsis, the evergreen Dendrobis, as D. thysiflorum, D. densiflorum and D. chrysoxum, all of the variegated leaved cyripediums, stanhopeas, Miltonia roezlii, the Brazilian oncidiums, and the forms of Laelia anceps. Had the question been placed five degrees lower, it would have been possible to include all the orchids that are generally grown and appreciated.

S. G. BENJAMIN, Fishkill, N. Y.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mrs. Olivia F. Zinn has been enjoined from using the name "Zinn's Flower Shop" in connection with her place of business. Suit was brought by Julius Zinn, the husband, who charged that the use of the name was detrimental to his business, his establishment being known as "Zinn, the Florist." Mrs. Zinn formerly worked in her husband's store, but differences in regard to its management led to her starting a separate concern.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Mothers' day trade this year was exceptionally good and nearly equal to that of one of the other leading flower days. The shipping trade was very brisk but the greater demand was principally local, although orders were refused from all sections of the country. The demand from the south was not so heavy as in former years but many large eastern orders were filled. The supply was far too short and it was rather disappointing that no other flower could be substituted. Of course, white carnations were in best demand, but the supply of these was sold up quickly as well as the colored ones which were to be had. The best white easily brought as high as six cents but much inferior stock was sold for a great deal less. The colored varieties easily brought four and five cents and Eucharist for a time seemed to be the only variety that was at all plentiful. There was as in former years the usual amount of pickled stock, a practice which the grower ought to stop immediately for it is doing much injury to the cut flower business. The stock that was sold by the Mothers' Emergency League on the street on May 10 called for a large amount of blooms, but the flowers that were sold in many instances were of such quality that the purchaser threw them away rather than wear them. Whether the florist was to blame for this or not or whether the society was responsible it is difficult to state, but one thing is certain and that is if the practice continues Mothers' day will meet the same fate as McKinley day did and nearly every florist knows what that means. White roses were in great demand, in fact everything seasonable sold well, although the prices in some lines could have been better. Richmond roses were in great demand and sold out quickly. American Beauty roses also sold up well and had an unusually good call. The market which was very weak last week is firm now and no great surplus of stock is looked for before Memorial day. Carnations are scarce and the supply of Spanish iris is none too plentiful. Peonies are being received in large quantities and the assortment of varieties increases every day. To the white and red offered last week have been added the early pink varieties. Tulips and narcissi are plentiful. There is a good supply of antirrhinum, especially the pink, and it is largely shown in the retailers' windows. Poeticus narcissus is also received now and sweet peas are plentiful, the beautiful Spencer varieties are to be had in good quantity and of excellent quality. Mignonette is still in good supply. Marguerites are seen in quantity, especially in the retailers' windows where baskets of these flowers are now being featured. Gladiolus is now coming in in larger supply. There is the Colvillei varieties, both Bride and Blushing Bride and some fine blooms of Mrs. Francis King and Augusta. Lilacs are seen everywhere and lupines, pansies, calendulas and stocks can be procured at all times.

NOTES.

Zech & Mann have leased the basement of the Atlas building at 30 East Randolph street, which was formerly occupied by the Poehlmann Bros. Co., and will in all probability move in before Memorial day. This firm has been greatly handicapped for room for some time, due to increasing business, and the change to larger quarters will be beneficial to all concerned. D. E. Freres has taken over the lease of the store Zech & Mann now occupy, and the Chicago Carnation Co. will locate in the store he vacates. There have been numerous rumors afloat for several days in regard to these changes, but the information the writer secured was obtained from John Zech after all arrangements had been definitely settled.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving regular shipments of peonies now and J. F. Kidwell says that he would not be at all surprised if local grown stock would be in for Memorial day. The directors of the association held a meeting on Wednesday, May 14.

Chairman T. E. Waters, of the good-of-the-club committee, reports that the Florists' Club picnic will be held on Sunday, August 17, a day previous to the departure of the florists to the convention. Further particulars to be announced later.

Oscar Leistner is finding Ove Gnatt's American oat wreaths a winner all right for Decoration day, for it is selling good with all the dealers. The wreath is made in two sizes and is cherry red, golden brown and natural green.

Phil Schupp reports business at J. A. Budlong's store as good, with a clean-up of stock each day. Lily of the valley is in good supply here, and a fine grade of sweet peas is now being featured.

E. H. Hunt's creditors, according to notice issued May 7, have to file their claims with Master in Chancery Chas. P. Abbey at 1612 Tribune building, within twenty days of the date of notice.

Kyle & Foerster will again handle large quantities of local grown peonies, but they are doubtful if the stock will be in before Memorial day.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is finding business good but has such a large stock of florists' baskets on hand that it can easily fill all orders.

The A. L. Randall Co. is having a big run on American oak spray wreaths, which are now one of the best Memorial day sellers.

The E. C. Amling Co. is still supplying its trade with fancy Butterfly sweet peas.

Chas. W. McKellar is having a good call for orchids, which have not been any too plentiful for some time.

The North Shore Florists and Nurserymen's Association was organized on May 1 when the following officers were elected: George Stollery, president; F. O. Franzen, vice-president; Herman Schiller, secretary, and Louis Wittbold, treasurer. About 16 florists of the north side were present at the meeting, which was held in Winona Hall, Winona street and Evanston avenue. The club will endeavor to elevate the prices of cut flowers so that the dealer will make a reasonable profit, and will also try to establish a standard set of prices for bedding plants. Another meeting will be held at the same place on May 16 and the result of the association's experiments will be watched with interest.

Joseph E. Papacek and Miss Pauline Kaspar were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the St. Ludmelas Catholic church on Wednesday, May 7. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion and the wedding was quite an elaborate affair. Mr. Papacek conducts a store at 3250 West Twenty-sixth street and is well and favorably known to the local trade.

John Mangel, the Palmer House florist, has enlarged his window considerably, and is now enabled to make a much bigger display. He is a firm believer in window displays, and his window is always so beautifully arranged that it is one of the chief attractions in East Monroe street.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store peonies are arriving in large quantities and this establishment is gradually taking on a holiday appearance. The "Peony King" is on the job as usual and seems to be most contented when he is at work amongst his favorite flowers.

N. J. Wieter says that the Mother's day trade at Wieter Bros.' store was very good and that the sales on that day were nearly equal to those of a good Christmas. White carnations were as usual in good demand, but in many instances white roses were substituted.

Erne & Klingel had a brisk Mothers' day trade and sold out completely in all lines before the store closed on May 11. This firm expects to have a good supply of flowers for Memorial day in addition to its regular line of stock.

Percy Jones had a big day on May 10 when trade in both the cut flower and supply departments was extraordinarily good. H. Van Gelder says the sales for that day were double what he expected.

Hoerber Bros. are supplying their customers with fancy Richmond roses, which are in good crop with them now. Work on their new chimney at Des Plaines is well under way and will be completed soon.

John Kruchten is enjoying a good season, and is looking forward to a brisk Memorial day trade. This firm has been featuring a fine line of sweet peas in addition to its other choice stock.

Weiland & Risch had two banner days on May 10 and 11. This house has been featuring a fine line of novelties all season and their cut of flowers now is about as complete as can be.

O. Johnson says that the Batavia Greenhouse Co.'s carnations brought Mothers' day prices on May 12 when the scarcity was nearly as great as on the previous day.

Wm. Stoll's place at 3704 North Western avenue, was visited by fire on May 10, but the blaze was extinguished before any great damage was done.

The next regular meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association will be held at the Tavern, West Washington street, on Thursday, May 15.

Carl Ickes, with the A. Dietsch Co., will leave soon with his family for a tour of the European continent and will likewise visit his old home in Germany from where he has been absent for 27 years. Mr. Ickes' many friends in the trade wish him a pleasant voyage and a speedy return. A. Dietsch will assume charge and will be ably assisted by his sons Albert and Alfred. Mr. Dietsch, who has just returned from Florida, is feeling better than he has at any time during the past eight years and will be on the job at the stand where he will be pleased to meet all of his old friends and customers.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a large Mothers' day trade and was obliged to buy a large quantity of carnations to fill their orders. This firm was off crop nearly altogether on carnations for this day, but will be fortunate in having a large supply for Memorial day. Roses, however, are in good crop and fancy stock in all lines is seen at the store.

Louis Wittbold says that the spring work is on in earnest and that the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s landscape department is now taxed to its utmost with work. The front of the Wittbold store on Buckingham place presents a very refreshing appearance with the walk lined with bay and box trees on either side for a distance of several hundred feet.

Peter Reinberg cleaned up completely on all lines for Mothers' day, the demand for carnations and Richmond roses being exceptionally heavy. Richmonds have been in good demand all season and this house has been one of the fortunate ones to have a supply at all times.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are booking a large number of orders for Memorial day which from present indications promises to be "some big day." Peonies are arriving in quantity at this firm's store now and the stock is moving well at good prices.

At Bassett & Washburn's the trade has been brisk all week and all lines of stock are cleaning up well at good prices. This firm was obliged to buy heavily in carnations for Mothers' day but expects to be well fixed on these flowers for May 30.

The J. B. Deamud Co. will again feature double white narcissus for Memorial day and are booking orders for them. Mr. Deamud made a trip to Bay City, Mich., this week, returning home May 14.

Gust Rusch, of Gust Rusch & Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., was here on business on May 13, returning home the same day.

Miss O. A. Tonner expects to have some local grown peonies on sale next week.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' club was held at the Union Restaurant May 8, President French in the chair. Arrangements were discussed regarding the distribution of stock donated for sufferers in the recent tornado and floods and the president and secretary of the club delegated to take care of this matter. There was a brisk discussion on publicity for florists in which T. E. Waters and George Asmus were the principal participants, the latter advocating flower shows as the cheapest and most desirable form of trade advertising, and giving in the course of his remarks a very interesting account of the National Flower Show at New York, concluding with the statement that the country has barely awakened to the great possibilities of these exhibitions.

Mr. Asmus also referred to the recent Minneapolis meeting of the convention advisory board of the Society of American Florists, stating that work was well advanced toward the largest and most delightful gathering in the history of the organization, each man and woman of the Twin Cities' trade bending every energy to make the affair a huge success and in every feature a credit to the northwest.

The committee on elevated railroad abuses of the flower business reported that some progress was being made in their interviews with the city authorities and that already there has been some curtailment of these encroachments on the rights of taxpayers. The good-of-the-club committee was instructed to investigate the possibilities of a picnic in July and report at the next meeting.

W. H. Harris and Clark T. Roberts, 140 Dearborn street, were nominated for membership in the club.

The transportation committee reported that preparations are going forward that will insure for the Minneapolis trip in August the finest special train that ever left this city and a number of clubs and individual members of the national organization have already written the committee stating that they will join the party here enroute to the convention city.

Vactor P. Niemetz, horticulturist, representing the Russian government on a tour of inspection of the United States, was a visitor and addressed the meeting on the past and present conditions of Russian floriculture.

STOCK VERY PLENTIFUL.

Stock was very plentiful the last week. Carnations and roses were especially so in the finer grades. Sweet peas are not so abundant. Peonies are in. Carnations stiffened somewhat Friday and Saturday on account of Mothers' day. Some of the florists reported increased business, while others complained of high prices. White carnations were quoted at three and four cents while others were quoted at two and three. Extra fancy whites brought five cents. Some extra fine long stem American Beauty roses are in.

NOTES.

The decorations for the wedding of Miss Thornburgh to Sir Wilfred Peck were arranged by Miss M. S. Newman. The church was decorated with Easter lilies and pink hydrangeas, ferns, palms and bay trees. Bridal wreaths decorated the chancel. The bride carried a bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley. M. M. Ayres had several large orders for receptions held for the bridal party.

Henry Ostertag of Ostertag Bros., says that he sold Enchantress carnations Mothers' day at five cents, his customers refusing to pay $1.00 a dozen for whites. This firm will erect in the near future an aquarium and fountain in their store.

Andrew J. O'Leary, formerly with J. H. Small & Sons of New York and Washington, will open a store May 15 on Grand avenue. This is a good location and a very pretty store has been erected by the New Grand Central Theatre Co.

The St. Louis Florists' Club met Thursday. Only a few members were present. F. H. Weber was in the chair. The next meeting will be held at Shaw's Gardens.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had a fine supply of sweet peas and carnations. They had a specially fine supply of white carnations.

Grimm & Gorly have a very pretty scene in their window. It is an old fashioned cotton plantation which attracts much attention.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. had a big trade during the past week. They expect some fine asters shortly.

The publicity committee had some very pretty announcement cards for sale for Mothers' day.

Weber & Sons nursery sent in a fine supply of white carnations for Mothers' day.

George H. Angermueller had a splendid supply of extra fancy long stem American Beauty roses.

C. A. Kuehn said that the Mothers' day trade showed an increase.

Lilacs this year were of very short duration.

At the range of the Julius Roehrs Co. everything seasonable in the plant line is now seen. There are so many good things at this range that it would take large space to enumerate but a part of them. A great stock of young begonia plants, in Glory of Cincinnati, Lorraine and other varieties, are seen. The orchid houses are a great feature, and there is a large stock of pot roses and hydrangeas coming on. A. F. F.

GOOD MOTHERS' DAY TRADE.

The volume of business done Mothers' day showed a heavy gain over last year, and the prices prevailing were about the same. The local wholesale houses were cleaned out of about everything they had in stock. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, lilac, snapdragon, easter lilies, in fact every kind of flower was in demand. Stock generally was of excellent quality. The week's business was good, the cool weather not bringing in a surplus of stock, and steady prices prevailed throughout. White carnations were held back somewhat and were a little short of the demand all week, but there were plenty of Enchantress, Rose Pink Enchantress, etc. Roses, too, were in sufficient supply to meet the demand. Lily of the valley and orchids are very plentiful just now. Sweet peas are short of the demand. Baby gladioli are arriving in limited quantities. Easter lilies are plentiful and sell well. Greens of all kinds are abundant.

FROST KILLS FRUIT.

It is believed that this city's supply of fruit and vegetables will be considerably lessened from nearby sources from the effects of the heavy frosts. The temperature dropped until 28 degrees was reached in the county as far north as Towson. Peas, just in blossom, were badly damaged. Tomatoes, in certain sections, were killed—acres of young plants cut down. Potatoes also suffered. Strawberries and fruits generally are injured. Orchards of peaches, pears and cherries had the fruit frozen. Vineyards, especially the young, tender grape plants, are destroyed. Farmers, gardeners and orchardists have lost thousands of dollars, it is estimated.

The Florists' Exchange has been fairly deluged with flowers for the past week. The local supply is abundant for the demand, but supplies from other cities have been coming in also. Commission men have been sending their over abundance to our city, selling at such reductions that the street vendors prefer buying the cheaper goods, and so the supply that would go from our commission houses is simply left unsold. This hurts our flower market very much, but is done every year. Why should not our commission men try the same game?

DEMAND VERY GOOD.

Business has been about normal for the season, several quite elaborate weddings, some public dinners and a fairly good transient trade keeping things moving. The supply has been a trifle over the demand, giving the growers and commission houses a chance to prepare for Mothers' day, which gave the week a great clean up. Roses were perhaps a trifle more plentiful than other stock. American Beauty is seen in quantity and while yet in good shape is beginning to show the effects of the warm weather. My Maryland roses are now coming fine and for the next month will be quite a factor. Hillingdon and Taft are in good demand, as is also Mrs. Aaron Ward. Carnations were in fair condition for Mothers' day and while no doubt there had been efforts made to save them for the large demand, they were very presentable. Prices for the white ones soared, as was expected, as high as fifteen cents for the topnotchers, ten to twelve for very good stock and six to eight for Boston Market and those of similar size. The colored ones could be had from three to five. Snapdragon is seen in full supply everywhere. Cattleyas and gardenias are a trifle ahead of the demand, while lily of the valley sells up closely every day. Double corn flower is quite popular. Sweet peas are a great factor, great quantities of them being used. Some very fine stock is seen. Peonies may now be purchased in quantity. Festiva maxima is a feature. The sale of flowers for Mothers' day was quite up to the expectations. All the white carnations sold at good prices while the colored were advanced but slightly. The demand was also felt in the whole list and a general cleaning up was the result. The out-of-town demand was very good, large orders being received from all sections that depend on this market. The Wanamaker store helped the good work along by having a Mothers' day meeting in the auditorium of their store with Miss Jarvis as the principle speaker. They also gave away thirty-five thousand assorted carnations, but no white. When this supply was exhausted they added three thousand roses, which were also distributed. This gave a great impetus to the trade, as all of these flowers were immediately worn on the street. The observance on Sunday was quite marked, many of the Sunday schools giving them out to the children.

NOTES.
The growers of bedding plants say that this is the best season in their experience. The favorable weather has caused early planting and they are having trouble to get stock for all the orders. One of the growers says that carnations may be kept in good condition for a week or ten days in storage. They are picked from the plants when ready and placed at once, without being dipped in water or sprinkled, in a box well lined with newspapers. When closed up they are placed in a cool cellar. They are taken out when wanted and placed in deep jars of water and in a few hours have swelled up and look as good as if they had just been pulled. Peonies are treated the same way with very good results.

Members of the club who were not at the last meeting missed a great treat. The proceedings are always very interesting, the papers read are of a high class and up to date in every particular, and the discussions bring out the best thoughts of the members. At nearly every meeting prominent members of the trade from out of town are present and their talks are well worth hearing.

At H. A. Dreer's the business of the present season is immense. The demand seems general in all departments and every facility is taxed to the utmost to get the orders out in time.

The Leo Niessen Co. is strong on American Beauty roses, snapdragon and fine carnations. This firm's Mothers' day business was fine, an immense shipping trade being done.

Edward Reid's Mothers' day business was immense. Carnations were a feature, Mr. Reid said. "We expected a large demand, prepared for it and of course we got it."

Berger Bros.' central market sold out clean for Mothers' day. Sweet peas are a feature here. Splendid My Maryland roses are also a leader.

BIG SALE OF CARNATIONS.

The sales of carnations for Mothers' day, May 10, was the most important factor in the business of the past week, the preceding days having been very dull. Had it not been for the purchase of about 60,000 carnations by one of the largest department stores to give away to its customers, Mothers' day from a financial standpoint would not have been a great success. As it was, there was a strong demand for these flowers, particularly the white ones, which sold readily at from $3.00 to $6.00 a hundred. Some fancy white stock was held at $8.00 a hundred, but ruling prices were as quoted above. Colored carnations sold at from $1.00 to $3.00 a hundred, according to quality. Although the Saturday sales were heavy, there were many carnations in the wholesale district on Sunday morning, May 11. As a wholesaler said on that morning, it seems impossible to create a scarcity in anything any more. The weather of May 10 and 11 was decidedly cooler and if it continues is likely to cause a decrease in the supply, but no scarcity. American Beauty roses have been moving slowly around $20.00 to $25.00. A great quantity of tea roses have been going cheap in order to clean them up. Gardenias are being sold on the streets, which explains their status. Peonies in small lots are frequently seen and doubtless within the next two weeks they will be plentiful and crowding the other stock. In sweet peas, stocks, snapdragons and various minor stocks, there is an abundant supply.

Monday, May 12.—While the supply of cut flowers is not heavy this morning, buying is light. There is a surplus of Richmond roses and though good stock is arriving it is hard to move. Carnations are holding up well at $3.00 per 100, possibly $4.00 for fancy stock. Some excellent orchid stock is on the market but it moves slowly. There is a falling off in the supply of sweet peas and a slight advance in prices. The weather is clear and cool.

NOTES.

F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, was in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co. May 8, looking over the improvements that are being made there. As previously reported, the company has signed a lease on the second floor of the Coogan Building, which has been thoroughly renovated and refitted for their accommodation. In a very short time General Manager Joseph Millang, who handles the Pierson stock of roses, will remove with his force to that floor. Moore, Hentz & Nash will also occupy a large section of the same floor.

John Berger, of Berger Bros., Philadelphia, Pa., was in the wholesale district May 9 looking over the prospects for a good supply of white carnations for Mother's day. As Mother's day originated in Philadelphia it is but natural that it should be observed there in a whole-hearted manner. Speaking of Mother's day in general, we doubt if the lady who originated the idea ever dreamed to what extent it would be commercialized. At a time when stock is going to waste the price of white carnations is doubled and often trebled.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, has a remarkably fine lot of hydrangeas and climbing roses coming on for Memorial day, in addition to much other fine stock. Mr. Schultheis went to Syracuse May 12 as a delegate to the state convention of the Knights and Ladies of Honor.

The new flower and fruit store of John S. Nicholas in the Grand Central terminal has been a success from the start, and is a very attractive feature of the place.

We have recently noticed at the store of Walter R. Siebrecht, 129 West Twenty-eighth street, exceptionally fine stock of cattleya orchids.

A committee of the Florists' Club has been given full power to arrange for a flower show to be held next year.

The Lord & Burnham Co. is erecting two new houses for Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, Brooklyn, 57x200 feet each.

Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was in this city May 9 on his way home from a business trip to Boston.

Herman Weiss is now located at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, in the rooms of A. L. Young & Co.

CARNATIONS STILL HIGH.

With Mother's day over and gone, the prices of carnations are still rather high, but warmer weather is coming soon, and we will find plenty of all kinds of flowers. The weather for the past four days has been very cool. Twenty-eight degrees was the lowest report. The latest arrivals are miniature gladioli, candytuft and peonies. Spanish iris is fine, but not much is seen around the markets. The quality of lily of the valley is fine, and it is here in abundance and finding many sales. With the coming spring weddings, we expect to move much of this. Snapdragon is getting shorter, and it is also very plentiful. Sweet peas are coming in in quantity, but the quality of most of them is ordinary. Carnations are beginning to show their yellow with some growers, but the majority of the stock is of fine quality. In roses American Beauty and Sunburst are very plentiful, and good white is scarce. This city could also stand more longer roses than those coming in, most of them being firsts or seconds. Some very nice lilies are being sold and the price is still fair. Yellow and white daisies are drugs on the market, and many are thrown away. Some very good plumosus is coming in from the south. The reports from the retailers regarding Mother's day were all good, there being just enough stock to supply all orders.

NOTES.

The A. W. Smith Co. is cutting some very fine cattleyas, disposing of 200 weekly at their retail store. They are also the first to show gladioli this year.

Theo. Verscharen has some of the finest bedding stock ever to offer for Decoration day. He says he is not afraid to show it against anyone's for quality.

Ross Adgate, road agent for the McCallum Co., has just returned from a five weeks' trip through the flood district and finds things still in bad shape.

Sam Gideas, of Oakland, is out of the flower business for a short time, and expects to open a nickleodeon on Forbest street.

Chas. Puhlman of Carnegie reports furnishing some very expensive designs for the funeral of a prominent hotel man of that place.

D. T. McCarthy & Sons, of Lockport, N. Y., are consigning some very fancy carnations to the McCallum Co.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is showing a nice window with some fine white peonies as the chief attraction.

Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was in town for a few days recently.

Geo. Franks reports business as being very good for his first week in the new stand.

J. Elicker, the Homestead florist, has been extremely busy with funeral work.

The South Hills Floral Co. of Carrick is cutting some nice carnations.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are cutting some good White Enchantress.

John Martin visited his home in Waynesburg Sunday.

Visitors: Wm. Baird, Greenville; J. A. Keeney, Monongahela; Geo. Huscroft, Steubenville, O.; J. F. Kendall, Tarentum; F. J. Farney, M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Jas. Laskey, Uniontown.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the club was held in the Grand Opera House building on the night of May 12, President Siebrecht in the chair. There was a large attendance and much interest was shown. The matter of a suitable badge or button for club members was taken up and disposed of. As adopted, the button will be permanent. The transportation committee reported in regard to the coming Minneapolis convention. It was suggested that the trip be made, in part, by boat to Duluth, the expense being no greater than by rail. The outing committee reported progress, it being understood that arrangements have been perfected for a banner outing on July 1. John B. Nugent, Jr., for the dinner committee, reported the annual dinner a success.

Richard Vincent, Jr., ex-president of the S. A. F., was present and made a stirring address on the pending tariff bill. There was considerable discussion in regard to flower shows, past and prospective, in which Patrick O'Mara, Chas. H. Totty, W. A. Manda, Jos. A. Manda and others took part, and a committee was appointed to arrange for an exhibition in 1914. A number of new members were elected. The house committee furnished the usual refreshments.

WEEK VERY GOOD.

Taken as a whole last week was a very good one. Monday opened with a very brisk business. The succeeding days up through the middle of the week showed a very noticeable falling off in demand. From then on, however, the demand for flowers for Mothers' day came on very strong and the week finished up in good shape with practical clearances in everything. The Mothers' day demand was the best this market has had up to this time. The florists, however, need be careful lest they kill this demand, at least locally. The great call was of course for white carnations. The other carnations, too, came in for their full share. It is this very demand for carnations alone that is likely to kill the day, at least in this city, because no matter how liberal the ultimate consumer is when he buys a thing one day and pays a certain price and goes back the next day and pays double the previous day's price for the same flower, he will naturally sit up and take notice. If the salesmen would devote a large part of their energy towards selling all kinds of flowers for a day like this instead of the one flower the demand would naturally cover a larger field. The increase in prices will be a natural increase which cannot but seem reasonable to the customers. A system of this kind should keep Mothers' day on a good sound basis and help to make the day one of the extraordinary good ones for the florists. Shipping business is very good. The call from out of town has kept up steadily. Last week, of course, it was very heavy on account of Mothers' day. It has, however, kept up nicely without these special days. The supply of every seasonable flower is adequate. The carnation market will be tight the early part, but by the middle of the week should resume its usual condition. Peonies are in.

NOTES.

The Flower Market was hit very hard by the strike on Saturday when the street cars were tied up completely by the striking of the motormen and only a very ordinary number of cut flowers were sold, while the sale of plants was extremely limited. The day's business served to show that quite a large number of the patrons of the Flower Market are suburbanites.

The car strike prevented a Florists' Club meeting. Only four were present.

Three local florists have recently acquired autos. Max Rudolph and Frank Schneider have each a Ford. William Pfeiffer of Ft. Thomas has an Overland.

Miss Margaret Anstead of E. G. Gillett's is convalescing rapidly at her home.

Tom Windram was the first local grower to cut peonies this season.

C. E. Critchell received some very nice gladioli from the south last week.

Forced Shrubs Planted Outdoors.

EDITOR AMERICAN FLORIST:

I notice that many plants forced in greenhouses become soft in the store, and often the leftover ones are thrown away because it is believed that they are not hardy and will not grow in the open ground. Last year I tried several lilacs like this and they grew nicely. On the other hand, some forced cherry and peach trees, florists' stock, died. Are such cherry and peach stock, sold by florists, not hardy and capable of being grown in the open? Cherry and peach trees can be bought cheap from the big florists, but I should be glad to know whether they will grow outdoors in this climate. Also, please tell me how to grow Iris Kampferi from seed imported from Japan.

takes two years before they fully recover. Cherries and peaches suffer a good deal more by forcing and although they are generally hardy stock it is difficult to make them survive the forcing process. By leaving them in the pots and plunging the pot entirely below the surface and giving some protection from sunshine until they begin to grow you may succeed in saving some. It is better, however, to purchase nursery stock at planting time.

Sow the seed of Iris Kampferi in a shallow pan, using some sphagnum on the bottom. Cover this with roughly broken turf and place a layer of sand one-half inch deep on top. Cover the seeds deep enough to hide them. This being a sub-aquatic, it requires copious supplies of water. By placing the pan in water one-half inch deep the supply is just about right. As soon as the seedlings begin to show give them full exposure to light and when strong enough prick out in boxes. They will require care for at least one year before being fit to plant in the border.

C.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—Total sales were larger by 15 per cent than for Easter, 1912, with prices about the same, report Clarke Bros. The supply of lily plants was very short as were azaleas. Cut lilies were not to be had except in limited quantities. Carnations and roses were also scarce. All plants with the exception of hyacinths sold well. Cut flowers cleaned up in good shape. The scarcity of lilies, which was greater than ever before, was caused by bulb disease, only giganteum escaping.

FROST FOLLOWS WARM WEATHER.

During the warm weather of the last couple of weeks trade in bedding plants has been quite active. Even tomato plants were demanded and sold, but the last few nights heavy frosts have been the order, and anything left unprotected undoubtedly must have been killed. Carnations planted in the field fared badly. Firing has been resumed at night, but the days are sunny and bright. Rain is badly wanted. Horse show week made a big demand on cut flowers for the table and for decorations. The use of flowers is on the increase in connection with advertising in the show windows of the large department stores.

CLUB MEETING.

The Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club met last Tuesday for the first time in the new quarters, Unia Hall, Sherbrooke street west. Many old members were present. All expressed satisfaction with the new meeting place, and all who had been denied the privilege of a smoke in the old hall enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. J. Kean, manager of the St. Bruno Floral Co., exhibited a collection of carnations which were awarded the club's certificate of merit. Mr. Kean was told by some of those who had seen the carnations in New York that he could have taken honors with them at the International Flower Show. Comfort was recommended as the best red. It was decided to hold, as usual, an annual picnic. Alderman C. A. Smith, of Lachine, offered the use of that city's public park, which proposal the executive committee will consider. Jas. McKenna sent greetings to the members from the hyacinth fields of Holland.

NOTES.

The caterpillars are worse than ever this year. Although the civic authorities and everybody else, including the newspapers, are thoroughly aroused and spending a lot of money for insecticides, and extra help to exterminate the pest, very little seems to have been accomplished, as they are everywhere, on shrubs, fruit and shade trees. It was hoped that the recent night frosts would kill them, but today, during the sunny hours, they are as lively as ever.

T. Martel will undertake this summer a trip to Holland, France and England.

THE death of Alex. L. Don, of Weeber & Don, New York, is recorded in our obituary column this week.

BISMARCK, N. D.—O. S. Will reports that garden seed trade has been good but field seed business rather poor.

WE have it on excellent authority that one section of the new Minnesota seed law is plainly unconstitutional:

TUBEROSE bulbs this year have suffered more than usual from rot in storage and it is believed that the growers could cure the bulbs more carefully than most of them do.

CHICAGO seedsmen held a meeting at the LaSalle hotel May 12 and discussed the ways and means of preventing injurious seed legislation and of amending the proposed Illinois seed law.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. C. Massie of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., with wife and daughter, returning from California; A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade May 14 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4 per 100 pounds.—Geo. S. Green of the Illinois Seed Co. was at Springfield this week looking after the interests of seedsmen in the proposed seed legislation.

OMAHA, NEB.—The De Georgi Bros. Co., doing a general seed, nursery stock and plant business, has filed articles of incorporation to take effect July 1. The capital stock is given as $25,000, and the directors are Ferdinand De Georgi, Vaclav Fuks, Joseph F. Pribyl, F. E. Britton and Vaclav Tosar.

REPORTS from California indicate that the sweet pea crop will not be over 25 per cent of anticipated yield, perhaps; not that much. Lettuce and leek will do no better, if as well. Edible round-pod pole beans will all be greatly reduced as these will not be planted to their full extent for want of rain, and if the dry conditions continue, all the California crops will be reduced to a great extent.

French Bulbs.

The French bulb situation has changed materially, especially in regard to Roman hyacinths, since our last issue. Jobbers asking prices are much mixed, some naming a figure as high as 120 francs for the 12-15 centimeter grade, others offering the same at from 102 to 115 francs. The fact is that the rain came too late and this crop did not get much benefit therefrom. Romans will be worth as much more in the United States as the cut-flower growers can afford to pay. Dutch dealers will make very light deliveries on their Roman contracts.

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—Frank C. Blakefield, who has been in southern Michigan since last January in the interests of the John H. Allen Seed Co., returned the latter part of the week. He reports that all the contracts have been made for the raising of peas in that vicinity, so that he will be at home until the season for roguing comes on. He looks for a good season in his line.

Horticultural Society of New York.

Clusters of gigantic lilacs of the deep purple color of Chambertin wine brought forth exclamations of delight from the hundreds of flower lovers at the flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York which opened May 10 in the museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, in Bronx Park. The lilacs, which professional and amateur growers alike pronounced remarkable both for size and color as well as fragrance, were grown by T. A. Havemeyer, at Glen Head, L. I. and were a part of a large exhibition of flowering trees and shrubs grown on his estate. The blossoms when fully opened are nearly as large as a fifty-cent piece, and their heavy rich color makes the ordinary lilac appear pale and bleached.

In Mr. Havemeyer's collection were some remarkable specimens of arbutus, wistaria and tulips, which aroused general admiration from the five hundred or more persons who attended the exhibition in the afternoon, but next to the lilac display, interest centered in the red and yellow calceolaria exhibited by Mrs. F. A. Constable, and the pelargoniums also grown by Mrs. Constable.

There were other exhibits of shrubs, trees, flowers in pots, vases, climbing and cut flowers and wild flowers offered by F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown; Mrs. A. M. Beoth and Louis C. Tiffany. The premiums awarded May 10 were:

Collection of shrubs and trees.—T. A. Havemeyer, first; F. R. Pierson, second.

Collection of tulips, largest and finest display.—Mrs. A. M. Beoth, first; T. A. Havemeyer, second.

Six pots of pelargoniums.—Mrs. F. A. Constable, first.

Six pots of calceolarias.—Mrs. F. A. Constable, first; Louis C. Tiffany, second.

Forster and Flaherty were elected on the executive committee in place of H. Wild, elected vice-president and James Aitcheson, resigned. A fine display of spring flowers was very prominent at this meeting, and received the judges' decision as follows:

Robt. Williamson, highly commended for collection of flowering shrubs.
James Stuart, highly commended for Calceolaria Stewarti.

A. L. Marshall, highly commended for Miltonia vexillaria.

TABLE No. 1 presents statistics of grass seed and flower and vegetable seeds, by states. As already stated, the acreage from which grass seed and flower and vegetable seeds were raised has not been tabulated. In some cases such acreage was not reported, and in many other cases it would represent a duplication of the acreage reported for hay and forage, flowers and plants, and vegetables. The reported production of flower and vegetable seeds doubtless represents chiefly that of farms producing such seeds for sale, small quantities raised by farmers for their own use presumably being often, if not generally, omitted. Since statements of quantity for all classes of flower and vegetable seeds combined would obviously have no significance, only the total value of these seeds is shown in Table 1. For the country as a whole the value in 1909 was $1,411,013. The most important states in the production of such seeds in 1909 were California, Illinois, New York, and Ohio.

Minor Seeds—Acreage, Production and Value: 1909.

Table No. 2 shows, for 1909, the acreage, quantity, and value of the minor seeds produced in the United States as a whole and in the states which lead in the production of each kind. Mustard seed is used mainly as a condiment and sunflower seed probably largely for poultry feed, but the other classes of seed are for the most part raised for the purpose of planting.

It is probable that the quantities reported do not represent the entire production of these classes of seeds, as they were not listed by name in the census schedule. The combined acreage of all these classes of seeds in 1909 was only 81,208, and the total value $769,625. Of the total acreage reported, 72,497 were devoted to sorghum cane seed. The quantity produced was reported to be 833,707 bushels, valued at $544,322. Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, and Oklahoma lead in production.

It is believed that in most cases the acreage shown in this table for seeds is separate from and additional to the acreage of the corresponding products, and therefore does not involve duplication.

Grass Seed—Production and Value.—Table No. 3, From the Census of 1910.

Table No. 3 shows, by geographic divisions, for 1909 and 1899, the total quantity and value of grass seed produced, and also, for 1909, the production and value of the leading classes. The acreage of grass seed is not shown, for the reason that in most cases it would involve duplication of the acreage reported for the grasses themselves under hay and forage crops.

The total value of the grass seed produced in 1909 was $15,138,000, which constitutes 0.3 per cent of the total value of farm crops and represents an increase of 81 per cent over the value in 1899. Much the larger part of the production of grass seed, considered as a group, was reported from the West and East North Central divisions. As measured by value, clover seed is the most important kind of grass seed, followed by timothy and alfalfa. The East North Central division leads in the production of clover seed, the West North Central in that of timothy seed and millet seed, and the Mountain in that of alfalfa seed.

LYCORIS SQUAMIGERA, OR AMARYLLIS HALLI

(THE MAGIC LILY OF JAPAN)

A perfectly hardy Amaryllis, producing beautiful pink flowers. Lycoris squamigera produces in early Spring foliage which grows until July, when it ripens off and disappears, and one not familiar with its habits would think the bulb had died, but about a month later, as if by magic, the flower-stalks spring from the ground to a height of 2 or 3 feet, developing an umbel of large and beautiful lily-shaped flowers 3 to 4 inches across and from 8 to 12 in number, of a delicate lilac-pink. Very useful for cut flowers in the Summer. Strong blooming bulbs, each 10c., per doz., $1.00; per 100, $6.50.

INCARVILLEA.

INCARVILLEA Delavayi (Hardy Gloxinia). The foliage resembles that of the Acanthus, while the blossoms appear like clusters of pink Gloxinias. It is extremely decorative. Strong roots, each 10c.; per doz., 75c.; per 100, $6.00.

OXALIS.

OXALIS (Summer-Flowering) Deppei. Pure white; very fine.
Lasiandra. Fine rosy pink, beautiful cut foliage.
Shamrock. Lovely clover-like foliage, pink blossom.
Mixed Colors. Several colors. Per doz., 10c.; per 100, 35c.; per 1000, $2.50.

SPIRAEA.

SPIRAEA Palmata Rosea. The beautiful deep pink hardy Spiraea. Per doz., $1.00; per 100, $7.50.
SPIRAEA Aruncas. The grand hardy white Spiraea. 4 to 5 feet; per doz., $1.00; per 100, $7.50.

KUDZU VINE.

The quickest climber known in horticulture; grows 1 to 2 feet per day. Invaluable for quickly covering unsightly objects. Strong roots, each 20c.; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $12.00.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 12.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 20 cents to 22½ cents, small cases; radishes, 15 cents to 25 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 30 cents to 40 cents per box; cucumbers, 90 cents to $2.25 per box of two dozen; asparagus, 50 cents to $1.00 for 24 bunches.

New York, May 10.—Cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 40 cents to $1.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 20 cents to 35 cents per dozen bunches; lettuce, $1.25 to $1.75 per 2-box strap.

Crossing the Tomato.

The influence of crossing in increasing the yield of tomatoes furnishes the subject for a recent bulletin of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station. The infusion of new blood often results in fruits of greater size and of better quality, the increase in size being due to the heterozygous condition, which stimulates the growth of either the size or the number of cells, or to the combination of two or more size-increasing characters, such as thick interlobes and long interlobes. An experiment was begun in 1907 to determine how much crossing increased the yield of tomatoes, if it increased the yield at all. The Livingston Stone, Dwarf Aristocrat and Hedrick varieties were used. Reciprocal crosses were prevented because one variety was planted too late and pollen of the standards was secured for the fertilization of the Dwarf Aristocrat blossoms. The experiments were continued during several years and showed real gains. In the 1908 summer experiment Dwarf Aristocrat and Livingston averaged 4.438 pounds more fruit per plant than the Livingston Stone, and 10.558 pounds more fruit than its maternal parent. At the same ratio six tons more fruit to an acre of 2,722 plants would have resulted from the cross than from Livingston Stone, and fourteen more tons than from Dwarf Aristocrat. "The best results," according to the bulletin, "may be obtained by keeping within a species and crossing the distinct varieties and the distinct strains."

Seed Potatoes.

"Good Seed Potatoes and How to Grow Them" is the title of an article by Wm. Stuart issued in bulletin form by the Department of Agriculture. A review of the potato industry shows that production per acre is practically where it was 45 years ago. For the five-year period of 1868-1872 the average was 94.8 bushels and for the period 1908-1912 the average was 96.1. The intervening periods show a decrease, running as low as 73.7 in 1888-1892. The price for the last period, 1908-1912, was 62.3 cents and for the first period, 34.9 cents. The Colorado potato beetle, the financial depressions and a gradual depletion of soil fertility are blamed for the decline. The influence of the agricultural experiment stations, the Bordeaux-mixture treatment, and the development of special potato-growing sections are credited with the return to the old production level. "Pure seed from productive plants, not overripe, uniform in size and shape, firm and sound, with sprouts just showing at planting time," is the kind recommended. "A conservative estimate of the increase that might be expected from the use of high grade seed is certainly not less than 10 per cent. Such an increase based on the average of the past five years would amount to over thirty-four and one-fourth million bushels, having an approximate valuation of $21,000,000." Tests show that strong plants give more than sixteen times as large a yield as weak plants.

Diseases of Cabbage.

The United States Department of Agriculture's farmers' bulletin 488 contains an important article by L. L. Harter on the "Diseases of Cabbage and Related Crops and Their Control." The bulletin says that the family garden, where the same crops are grown year after year, provides the most favorable conditions for the perpetuation of the various diseases. The importance of growing the seed on ground free from the diseases of all crucifers that the pests may not be distributed throughout the country is pointed out. Fungus and bacterial diseases may be spread, according to Mr. Harter, by insects, infected seed, transplanting from an infected seed bed to the field, drainage water, stable manure and compost, animals and wind. Before sowing the seed should be disinfected with one-fourth pint formaldehyde (40 per cent) to seven gallons of water. The seed should be left in the solution about 15 minutes, dipped in pure water to wash off the formaldehyde, and spread out to dry.

In preparing the seed bed care must be exercised to prevent infection. Never make the bed on an old cabbage field, and see that the manure for the compost is not taken from a heap where diseased plants are thrown. Steam sterilization by means of drain tile at the bottom of the bed through which steam is passed, steam sterilization by means of an inverted pan, sterilization by drenching the soil with a formalin solution or treating the soil with a Bordeaux mixture, may be practiced. Crop rotation also is essential. The bulletin lists a number of diseases attacking cabbage, cauliflower, and the like, and describes some of the methods of control in practice.

HARDY PERENNIALS. The most complete collection of varieties and the largest stock in the country. Our Perennial plants have a National reputation. We spare no expense to have them in the best possible shape for the planter. Such varieties that move better when pot grown are prepared in this shape. This does not mean little seedlings, but in the majority of cases the plants were field grown, were dug and potted during the fall and winter months and are of just the right size to give immediate results. They are not to be compared with so-called field clumps. Try them and be convinced.

ROSES FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING TO GIVE IMMEDIATE RESULTS. We have three hundred thousand 5 and 6-inch pots the usual Dreer stock and the style of plants your retail customers are looking for. These are all two-year field grown plants which have been potted during the winter months and which were stored in cold houses and frames and which are now in prime condition for out-door planting. The collection is the most up-to-date, including many new varieties not offered by anyone in the trade.

Grape Roots Grafted.

French grape growers grafted their vines on American root stocks as a protection against the ravages of phylloxera; but they also found in this practice other advantages that both European vineyardists and California wine and raisin-producers have made profitable. Where American varieties of the grape are grown, however, the phylloxera is not dreaded, and lacking this incentive to grafting on other roots, this practice has not become common in eastern America. But an experiment in root-grafting made by the New York Agricultural Experiment Station in a vineyard near Fredonia indicates that this method of handling vines is worth consideration. The progress of the test was far from satisfactory, owing to poor stocks, cold weather, insect ravages, hail-storms, etc., yet the work proves that root grafting improves the yields, gives better vines, and advances the season of some varieties. Those interested should write to the Station at Geneva for Bulletin No. 355.

THE GENUS IRIS

By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYRES

With 48 colored plates and 30 line drawings in the text

This volume brings together the available information on all known species of Iris. The most striking feature of the book is the life-size colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of great beauty as well as of scientific importance.

254 pages, demi folia, half morocco: $37.50, postpaid, $38.36.

Some of Aschmann's Choice Plants

A wonderful clock at a hotel in Interlaken, Switzerland. The biggest wonder of nature the world has ever seen.

See that clock? It is made of flowers. It has hands and shows the time! See that little house in the rear, also made of flowers? There is hidden a mechanism that strikes the quarter, half and the hour. What do you think this clock is made of? It is made of plants of brilliancy—mostly of dwarf begonias, the Vernon type, short variety, pink and red. The head gardener, the creator of this clock, of this famous, world-wide known hotel at Interlaken, Switzerland, has been offered a fortune by American and other millionaires of the world, to make them a clock similar to this, but he declined the offers, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years. I was fortunate enough, during my visit there, to obtain from the head gardener, the creator of this clock, a supply of seed and stock plants of those beautiful varieties of begonias to raise a sufficient crop of about 50,000 young plants in 2½, 3 and 4-inch pots for you to use in a similar clock, carpet bed or other outside work. A bed of these begonias, pink, the Erfordii, or the bright red improved Vernon, is a joy forever. Constant bloomers, stay always short and bushy, the hot rays of the sun have no bad effect on them. They can be grown in a sunny or shady place. We can sell you large 4-inch pot plants, either of the improved Erfordii, the beautiful pink, or the dark bright red improved Vernon, at 10c, $10.00 per 100; 3-inch, $7.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $5.00 per 100; 5½-in. plants, 25c each; big plants, 25 at 100 rate.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

GET INTERESTED, MR. FLORIST, THIS IS FOR YOU!

If you contemplate painting your house this year, it will be well for you to investigate the merits of which I use exclusively in the erection of the large ranges of glass that I erect on private estates and public parks, I have increased my plant to take care of the demands made upon me for this paint by florists in all parts of the country. The Lutton reputation for high class material is back of this product. Send for a sample free of cost and then you will send your order. We also furnish materials for the complete erection of modern Iron Frame Greenhouses. Some of the largest growers in the country will testify to this fact.

PEONIES.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply; and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateurs simply as a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

OUR GREENHOUSE MATERIAL TESTS—THEY SAVE YOU MONEY

LONG AGO we gave up testing materials after a house was built. We now test our materials before. Do it in their raw state, and make sure the substance and strength is there, that we know needs to be there.

IRON TEST.

Take, for example, those Wrought Iron Posts we use. When buying the wrought iron, we specify just what the mixture of the various minerals going into that iron shall be and just how it shall be made.

We place our orders way in advance and buy such large quantities, that we can have it made the way we insist on its being made.

When the iron arrives, our chemist takes samples and gives them the severest kinds of laboratory tests. If the results don't average up—the iron goes back—not a pound of it goes into our houses.

WHITING TEST.

Take so little a thing as whitening: you wouldn't think a pure powdered whitening hard to find—but it is. A couple of years ago one lot we bought mysteriously slipped through without our usual test. Six months later we found out that the putty made from it was "powdering up." We promptly offered to replace every house so afflicted. It cost us thousands of dollars. But that's our way of doing business.

If anything you buy of us isn't good, we make it good.

WHITE LEAD.

Only a short time ago we shipped back several tons of white lead that our chemist found had "traces of an adulterant." We wouldn't stand for even a "tracer." It must be pure white lead.

CYPRESS.

Our expert "chalker" is a crank—the crankiest kind of a crank. It's his business to chalk the sappy parts of cypress as it comes from our air dried piles. That chalk part is cut out. Not an inch goes into our greenhouses.

PRIMING.

It pays to have us prime your cypress before it is shipped. It protects it from the weather. The other coats stick better. If you are afraid to buy your cypress primed, because you are afraid the paint will cover up sappy parts so you can't tell what you are getting, then you better not buy such a firm's cypress—or anything else that firm sells. If you can't depend on their cypress, you can't depend on them.

OUR PRICES.

Some say our prices are high. When they really take the trouble to investigate our materials then they change their minds. What's a few dollars on a house, if you know you are absolutely getting a square deal and that all the materials and workmanship are the best for the purpose money can buy?

Isn't it worth something to be sure of the things you can't see—as well as those you can?

You can't afford to spend your time and have the worry of watching a firm like a cat, to be sure you are getting what you are paying for. No one can save money on a deal like that.

Do you want to see one of us and get right down to talking business with fair and square business men?

Write us, suggesting a time convenient for you.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Pot Chrysanthemums.

The chrysanthemums that are to be grown for bush plants will require constant attention from this time on, for they grow very rapidly both at top and root, and should be gone over regularly and often and have the ends of the growths rubbed out, that they may be kept in shape and grow as bushy as possible. Do not be afraid of their being too short, for all pinching back must stop about July 1, and they will have plenty of time to make a good growth before the buds set. Keep the plants growing and in good health and never allow them to get potbound, for the wood hardens very quickly if this happens, and it is next to impossible to grow good flowers on a plant which has become hard; so shift the plants into a larger size as soon as they require it. Pot firmly and in a good, strong soil. The plant potted good and firm will make a much shorter-jointed growth than one potted loosely, but it is better not to pinch back the tops at the time of potting. Go over the plants carefully two or three days before potting and do all the pinching back necessary. If field culture is undertaken they should be set out as early as possible and tied to a stake to prevent the wind from breaking them down and given good cultivation all summer.

Hydrangeas.

There is always a good call for hydrangeas up to the middle of July and they are as valuable during June as those bloomed at Memorial day, and the plants are much better than those that are forced too hard. Give the plants plenty of water and all the ventilation possible, and all the room they require. If the plants are on a shelf or stand it is well to place the pot in a saucer, and when watering fill the saucer, for they are very succulent and the large leaves and blooms wilt very quickly and often before it can be seen that they are dry. Good ventilation will prevent red spider, for it is in dry, close places that this little insect gets a good hold. The stock for next season should be moving about nicely, that which is intended for early flowering should be grown in pots, while those that are grown for next spring and summer flowering can be planted outside. For the former a good frame with hose and water handy is the best place to plunge the pots, and those that are to be planted out should be set as early as possible. Keep the plants shapely by pinching out the ends of the shoots, but this should be stopped by July 1, that the plant may make a finished growth and set the bud by lifting time in the fall.

Water Lilies.

The use of water lilies in floral work has increased enormously during the last few years, and any grower that has a natural pond or a brook which can be made into a small pond in which they can be cultivated is losing a golden opportunity in not undertaking their culture. The making of artificial ponds is expensive and should be left to the large estates, but there are many low places with a brook running through them that could be made suitable for the cultivation of water lilies that are now utilized for no purpose. While the native nymphæas are used to some extent, it is the improved cultivated plants that produce the attractive flowers that are seen all the summer in the florists' shops in the large cities, and are used extensively in floral work. The roots can be obtained at this season and planted either in the bed of the pond or in boxes in good soil rich in vegetable matter, and placed in the water two or three inches below the surface until they have made their first floating leaves, when they should be gradually lowered until they are about 15 to 18 inches below the surface. If cultivated in this manner the plants are entirely under control and can be made a good investment.

Celosias.

The celosias that are to be grown for show plants through the late summer and fall will need constant attention. The little plants move very slowly and are subject to damping off in the seed bed, or if they become too dry, will burn off. They should not be allowed to remain in the seed pan until they become drawn, but potted into small pots and kept well shaded until they begin to grow and then moved into a lightly shaded location. As soon as fully established and growing strongly a lightly shaded frame is the best location, where they can be given plenty of air and easily attended. Shift into larger pots as soon as the roots are well through the soil and pot them in a good strong compost. In mid-summer they can be moved into the greenhouse and placed on a light bench with sufficient shade on the glass to prevent all danger from burning the foliage and when the flower spikes appear stake and tie the plants to a good strong stake.

Crotons.

The croton is very popular for bedding out in some sections of the country, and where they grow well they make exceedingly decorative beds, but these plants are heat-loving subjects, and where cool nights are the rule they are not wholly satisfactory. They should not be set out until all danger of nights of low temperature are passed, for not only is there danger from frost but a succession of nights in the neighborhood of 40° will cause many leaves to drop. Where crotons are grown extensively propagation is practically carried on all the year round, but it is necessary during the winter months to have a propagation bench of great heat. In places where such a bench is not to be had, spring and early summer is a good time to propagate the young stock for next season. The cuttings root readily if kept moist both at top and bottom and it is much better to have a closed bench, that is, one with a sash on top that can be lifted which will keep the temperature and moisture even, and prevent draughts from blowing over the cuttings. The cuttings should be made from the end shoots when the plants are in active growth and the leaves tied up with a piece of raffia before being inserted in the sand, and they can then be placed quite close together, and with the sash down the bed can be kept close. When rooted they should be potted in a good turfy loam with a small amount of rotted cow manure added, but not too rich, and placed in a shady location in good heat until firmly established in the soil, when they can be given full sunlight. Too much sun or too strong draughts before they become established will often cause them to drop many leaves. Grown on in the houses during the summer, nice stock for the holiday and next year's trade can be obtained.

Asparagus and White Scale.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I am enclosing a piece of asparagus which is in a bad way and wish you would advise me of the cause and its remedy. E. W. R.

Nebraska.

The asparagus in question is very badly infested with white scale, and the first thing to do in order to remedy such a condition would be to cut off and destroy the shoots that are so much covered with the insects. Then try either dipping or spraying with a solution of tobacco soap, or with a solution of nicotine, using the latter in accordance with the directions on the package. It may require several applications of the insecticide to clear the plants of the insects. W. H. T.

A Timely Window Display.

The opening of the planting season offers suggestions for the florist to utilize the many popular plants the market offers. Why not take the idea of the Japanese flower vendors, whose beautifully filled baskets are generally strung on a pole and borne on the shoulders? The pole effect may be used in the window. Take, for instance, a good sized tree stump and nail to this a pole—even the ordinary curtain pole will answer and is easily obtained. Cover the pole and also the stump of the tree with green sheet moss, giving it the out-of-doors appearance.

This stump should be sufficiently tall to allow baskets to be hung on the pole and still have a goodly space between the floor and the baskets. The baskets should be of different lengths and sizes. Fill one with pink and white geraniums, one with marguerites, another with pansies, using the blue colors; then start from the other side and use the same red, white and blue effect in the basket arrangement. The baskets can be the very cheap ordinary carrying kind and the price of each could be indicated. On the center of the stump, where the pole is fastened, fill in with ivy plants, allowing the vines to fall in graceful manner, trailing them to the ground which should be covered with green sheet moss.

Baskets filled with a miscellaneous collection of plants can be advantageously scattered around the window and farthest sides and labelled. In the foreground, directly in front of the stump, mass on either side in crescent shape pansy plants to represent a flower bed. At the back, in tall vases, arrange snowballs, taking the green ones for the center and the snowy whites for the edge. If a distinctive color scheme is desired, use the rich double red geraniums in the small baskets on the pole and feature miscellaneous baskets with different varieties at the sides.

It would, perhaps, be well to place an attractive window card in a conspicuous place with the following: "A suggestion for your garden or back yard. Take home a basket at the special grouping price." All of the garden plants of the small potted varieties can be prettily arranged as outlined. To still further enhance the attractiveness of the window large hydrangea plants can be arranged in the background with a group of Boston ferns. Small ferneries can also be suggested and will give a finish to the tout ensemble. A. E. K.

Care of Plants in the Dwelling.

Alfred T. Bunyard, New York, in the Third National Flower Show Programme.

There is nothing more discouraging to the purchaser of living plants and cut flowers than their perishability. The first principle with regard to plants is never forget the fact that they are living things, and they require as close attention as anything that breathes, if you wish to keep them in a healthy condition. Some species require a great quantity of water, and others very little. Plants in living rooms require closer attention than those in conservatories, where they have good light from above. Plants in dark corners, if they must be placed in such situations, must never be over-watered; they should, to use a technical phrase, be left on the dry side, that is, the soil must never be allowed to become muddy; if it does happen, watch the plant until it has dried out thoroughly before watering again. This will sweeten the soil, and often save the plant.

A florist is invariably asked the question, "How often shall I water this plant?" The only correct answer is "When it needs it," which means the plant must be watched for that purpose. To water a plant at regular intervals is a mistake; if your rooms are warm with artificial heat, it will likely require water every day. Then also the size of the pot or tub makes a difference, and while a plant in a small pot may require water every day, those in larger pots or tubs would be sufficiently watered every other day, or even twice a week, but it is best and safest to look them over every day. The condition of plants in earthenware pots can easily be judged by tapping the pot with the knuckles. If dry it will give off a hollow sound and should be watered at once. This is the truest test as often a plant will appear to be wet enough on top, while very dry under the surface. By this method, with a little experience one may tell instantly if a plant be too dry or wet.

PLANTS IN JARDINIÈRES.

I believe there are more plants killed by placing them in jardinières than any other way. Plants so placed must be carefully watched, as the accumulation of stagnant water is very detrimental to the welfare of growing plants, and will surely cause them to die if allowed to remain. Plant receptacles should be emptied and cleaned out at least twice a week.

KEEPING THE PLANT CLEAN.

Dust is another enemy. Plants breathe, that is to say, they give off and take up oxygen from the air, and dust closes the pores which prevents them doing this freely. For the same reason it is beneficial to change the air in the rooms at least once a day, by opening the windows if only for a few minutes. If they are gone over daily with a soft feather duster, they are easily kept clean. They should also be sponged off with tepid soapy water at least once a week. It is a mistake to use an oily or sticky substance in cleaning palms, as it not only clogs the pores, but it makes it much more difficult to clean them when once it has been used.

FLOWERING PLANTS.

If possible keep flowering plants in the coolest part of the room, and always water immediately upon arrival. Plants in bloom must never be allowed to get dry, as they are forced into flower with artificial heat, which makes them tender and susceptible to draughts. A plant that is badly wilted from dryness may often be saved by submerging the pot in a pail of water until fully revived. Hydrangeas and azaleas, and many other flowering plants that look quite hopeless may be brought back to their normal state by following these methods.

Flowering plants purchased in bud, give the best results and last the longest, but be careful the buds are not too tight, as these will only open under the most favorable conditions. This does not apply to bulbous plants which will give good results, even when the buds are only just starting to appear. Plants in flower should be given all the daylight possible, for the best results. Plants in full flower will last longer, however, if kept from the direct rays of the sun, as this hastens their development, thereby shortening their flowering period.

BEST PLANTS FOR THE HOME.

The selection of palms and foliage plants for home adornment has passed the experimental stage, and the up-to-date florist can tell you just which plant will do best in certain locations. Any plant will thrive in the house for a short period, but varieties with lasting qualities are confined to a comparatively small number and are the kind usually seen in the flower shops. Some of the most attractive and curious varieties of foliage plants are condemned for their poor keeping properties, and are only valuable for conservatories, or for temporary decorations.

The toughest of all house palms is the phoenix or date palm, but it lacks grace, and for that reason the kentia is usually preferred, its long graceful fronds being highly decorative, and an ornament in the finest houses. The areca, once largely employed for the purpose, is seldom used today, as it does not last well in houses. The durability of the rubber plant is too well known to comment upon it here. But the "violin rubber" so-called from the form of the leaf, which resembles the body of that instrument, has become a great favorite; the large, handsome foliage giving it a unique appearance, while its lasting qualities are of the best. The fan leaf palm, Latania borbonica, is indispensable for certain effects, but not especially robust for our purposes. Possibly the most graceful palms in cultivation are the cocos or cocoanut palms; Cocos flexuosa having a wonderful plume-like foliage, growing as high as twenty feet, and unequalled for corner or mirror decoration, as it takes very little space. Another palm of recent introduction, as a house palm having wonderful keeping qualities, and very graceful, is the Phoenix Roebelenii.

Next in importance to palms, are dracænas, their varied form and coloring making them indispensable for certain effects, where a variety of coloring is required. Ferns also have an important place as house plants, and are perhaps better known and more widely used than any other plant. Of these there is an endless variety, the most popular being the Boston fern and its varieties. Cibotium Schiedeii, one of the most graceful and durable ferns, is particularly valuable as a decorative plant; its light green foliage makes it distinct from all others. It does well but must not be neglected with regard to watering, as there is no chance of saving it, once it gets thoroughly dry. There are many other plants that could be mentioned here, that do fairly well, but the varieties named are among the best for home decorations.

CUT FLOWERS.

A few words regarding the care and selection of cut flowers will, I hope, be of value to the amateur. I have always contended that if cut flowers could be made to last longer, most people would be interested in buying them, but the fact that they are so short-lived discourages many. Introducers and growers of cut flowers are all working to increase the lasting quality of their product, and only varieties of good keeping quality are considered. Cut flowers immediately on receipt should have the ends of the stems clipped and placed in deep cold water, unless they are to be used for immediate effect. Water must be changed daily, preferably the last thing at night, and the flowers placed in a cool place, away from draughts. If the ice-box is sufficiently large, that is the best place to put them, as they are then left at a good temperature, and away from the air. Flower buyers soon learn by experience the variety of flowers that keep the best, but the florist will willingly give that information, as it is to his best interest to have his flowers give satisfaction to his customers. Many beautiful varieties of roses, carnations and other flowers have been discarded by the florist for their poor keeping qualities.

Hydrangeas for Memorial Day.

There is no plant more called for or better suited for Memorial day than the hydrangea, but heretofore we have not had a very good selection of colors to choose from. However, with the coming of the new French varieties we have some additions to the list that are a decided improvement over the older varieties. They are more dwarf in growth, freer in bloom and grand in color and size of flower heads. Having the whole set sent out by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., on trial, a few notes on their adaptability for Memorial day sales may be useful.

Mme. A. Riverain.—This, in our soil, is a beautiful blue color. The flower heads are of the largest size and the plant is a good dwarf grower. The least that can be said of it is that it is a decided acquisition in every way.

Souvenir de Mme. E. Chantard.—This variety we consider one of the very best. The flowerheads are not as large as some, but the dwarf robust habit of its growth and the beautiful rose colored flowers give it a very striking effect.

Dentelle.—This we consider a very fine variety, being distinct from any of the others, both as to growth and flower. The color is pure white when fully developed and the flowers are deeply serrated, giving them a beautiful appearance, the time of its flowering being just right for Memorial day without forcing.

Mme. Raymond.—When the flowers begin to expand they have the appearance of being coarse and of a dirty white color, but as they develop the color becomes a beautiful cream, shaded with pink; a very desirable variety.

Mme. Maurice Hamar.—A very fine pink variety with blue shadings. This variety forced for Easter will come a very pretty blue.

Mlle. Agnes Barillet.—We like this the best of all the white varieties, every shoot producing a large white bloom and the habit of the plant is of the very best.

Mlle. de Tremault.—An erect free growing white variety easy to do and worthy of more extended trial.

Botaniste Peltreau.—A very large flower of pretty mauve color. This looks to be a very fine variety.

Avalanche.—Also a very fine white. This is very easy to grow and of fine habit.

Mlle. Renee Gaillard.—This variety has the largest flowerhead of all the white varieties. The individual florets are very large and deeply serrated, making a very graceful looking bloom.

Ronsard.—Very similar to Mlle. Renee Gaillard in style of flower but a beautiful tinted rose color. A very fine variety.

Radiant.—This is, as its name implies, a beauty. The color is a beautiful deep pink, fine large flowerheads; very fine in every way.

La Lorraine.—Another very pretty pink variety and a good grower.

Mouselline.—A fine large white variety with a slight tint of pink. One of the largest flowers of any. The habit of the plant is good in every way.

Bouquet Rose.—This appears to be a fine thing but our plants of this variety are not as strong as the others, so we cannot tell enough about its qualities but intend to continue growing it.

General de Vibrayz.—This variety, contrary to expectations, is later than the others, therefore we cannot tell much about it at this time, but it seems to be a promising variety.

Mont Rose.—A very fine pink variety, very free with larger flowerheads and a good grower.

The Minneapolis Park System.

Minneapolis, Minn., has today a park system of 3,710 acres. Of this total area about one-third is made up of lakes, lagoons and canals. Park history dates back to 1857, but active acquisition and development commenced only with the creation of the board of park commissioners in 1883, and the existing three small squares were at that time transferred to the jurisdiction of the board by the city council.

The well distributed and comprehensive system of parks and parkways bears testimony to the wisdom and forethought exercised by early public-spirited citizens; and the securing and developing of what is rightly considered one of the city's chief assets has been in capable hands. Minneapoltans are justly proud of the city's park possessions, and visitors are agreeably surprised at the liberal way nature has endowed the system. Many and varied are its natural advantages and attractions. Park authorities agree that it will rival any in the country. Famed are its system of urban lakes, the historic falls, the mighty river and an almost endless variety of picturesque scenery. The city devotes one acre in every ten of its entire area to public recreation purposes; a much greater proportion than in any of the twenty-eight principal cities in the United States having a population exceeding 250,000 each. The park system represents an investment of over $6,000,000 for land and improvements, and the value of donations is estimated at about $800,000.

A brief description of the system will give a general idea of the park possessions. Loring Park, of thirty-six acres, named in honor of C. M. Loring, known as the "father of the Minneapolis park system," is the most centrally located, and is much admired for its natural beauty and the many embellishments provided by the hand of man. The system of parkways starts at this point, and for a distance of seventeen miles one travels continuously on park lands over an ever changing course, connecting many of the principal parks through varied and beautiful scenery. Kenwood parkway, starting at Loring park and going west, skirts on the right the Parade, a large open space of sixty-eight acres, ideal for a playground and athletic field, and then through a fine residential district, past the wooded and rolling Kenwood park of thirty-three acres, and connects with the chain of magnificent urban lakes, with finely wooded shores and splendid encircling boulevards.

Lake of the Isles, of 200 acres (water area 107 acres), is the first, and rightly called the most picturesque, with its pretty islands and irregular shore line. Next, in a southerly direction, we come to Lake Calhoun, of 522 acres (water area 460 acres), the largest of the system. This lake is much used for sailing, boating, canoeing and other water sports, and here is located the commodious Calhoun baths, said to be the most up-to-date in the country. A little farther south is Lake Harriet, of 408 acres (water area 353 acres), the favorite recreation spot of park visitors. Free concerts are given here daily during the summer by the famous Minneapolis park band, and canoeing, boating, fishing and spacious picnic grounds add to the popularity of this resort.

Minnehaha parkway connects with Lake Harriet boulevard, and in an easterly direction follows the winding course of Minnehaha creek through natural scenery of hill and dale the whole distance of five and one-half miles, past Lake Nokomis, of 409 acres (water area 295 acres), and then bringing us to that romantic spot called Minnehaha park, of 142 acres, considered by many the gem of the park system. Here we have the celebrated Minnehaha falls, immortalized by the poet Longfellow.

From here we follow the course of the Mississippi river along the west bank in a northerly direction. The boulevard is built on the bank high above the river, and the land between the drive and river is rolling, irregular of contour and finely wooded. For a distance of three and one-half miles we travel along the west bank through attractive natural scenery and get occasional glimpses and again unobstructed views of the Mississippi river and gorge. At Franklin avenue we cross over to the east side, and continue along River road east, which connects with the grounds of the University of Minnesota and brings us within three miles of our starting point at Loring park.

There are many other parks, large and small, embracing a general plan of large and medium-sized neighborhood parks, at convenient distances, throughout the city, there being 85 in all, ranging from one acre or less to 584 acres, which is the size of Glenwood park, the great scenic park of the system. This grand natural park of hill, meadow, woods and lakes will soon be linked with the system of parkways through connection with the Cedar Lake boulevard from Lake of the Isles. The nursery, supplying practically all the planting material for the various park plantings, is located here at Glenwood park, also a wild botanic garden.

The chief attraction at Lyndale park is the rose garden, and rose culture in the northwest has received a great stimulus through the successful development of this garden. It is the Mecca for visitors during the flowering season. Trailing and climbing roses are planted along the enclosing fence, and arbors, and border plantings of wild roses enhance its setting. The adjoining grounds are being developed along the lines of an arboretum. Among the many attractive and pleasing features of the park system that has received hearty popular approval are the elaborate, appropriate and well-arranged floral displays. There are about 300 flower beds in the different parks, and approximately 200,000 plants are used in their embellishment. All the material for this purpose is grown at the Park Board greenhouses.

Splendid opportunities have been provided for the enjoyment of outdoor sports of all kinds; particularly is this true of water sports. At Lake Calhoun the recently finished and splendidly arranged bath house furnishes accommodations for 1,300 bathers at one time. The building is of pleasing design, concrete construction, fire-proof throughout, and cost about $65,000. Admission to the baths and use of all the privileges are free. In connection with this building is provided the finest inland bathing beach known. The beach is 1,400 feet long and 150 feet wide, gradually sloping into the lake. There are also bath houses at Glenwood lake, Lake Nokomis and Camden park.

Minneapolis has eight modern, well-equipped and properly supervised park playgrounds, and several more are being improved and equipped. In most parks play apparatus for the children is provided, and there is almost unlimited opportunity for tennis, baseball and kindred sports. Great strides in park improvements have been made here during the past seven years, and the money liberally and judiciously expended has brought results which, to be appreciated, must be seen. Minneapolis is justly proud of her park possessions, and is particularly glad of an opportunity to show so well informed a body on park matters as the S. A. F. her system of parks and boulevards.

Park System of Copenhagen.

The area of the public parks and gardens in Copenhagen, Denmark, belonging to the municipality amounts to about 125 hectares (309 acres), of which about 75 hectares (185 acres) have been added during the last 35 years. About 60 hectares (148 acres) of these 75 have been constructed especially for sports. Some 13,000 trees are planted in the streets and roads of Copenhagen, and the total expenditure for the maintenance of the municipal parks and trees amounts to $48,240 annually, of which about $8,040 is for inspection. Besides the area of municipal parks and gardens given, there are about 75 hectares of parks in Copenhagen belonging to the State, consisting of parks and gardens surrounding old castles. The annual expenditures for the maintenance of these parks amounts to $17,420, of which about $4,020 is for inspection. The city of Copenhagen, including the suburb of Frederiksberg, has a total population of 559,398.

THE ROSE.

Early Planting.

Rose growers, like carnation growers, are planting much earlier than in former years. The benefits derived from early planting are many. The young stock gets the advantage of the best growing season and has more time to form a thrifty bush before taking a first cut. Where a system of record keeping is strictly enforced the cut from houses planted in May will show a vast superiority both in quantity and quality over those planted in July.

The repairing of the benches takes up considerable time which can be ill-spared at this season and those who are fortunate to have cement or other indestructible benches are to be envied. Wood benches after being repaired should be thoroughly washed and get a wash of hot lime. This helps to preserve the wood and also destroys insects and their eggs. The sash bars also should be cleaned of all scum and dirt, which has accumulated during the winter. The old soil should be removed from under the bench and everything made clean and tidy.

To hasten the young stock a sprinkling of bone meal should be added to the soil; twenty pounds to a bench 43x100 feet is enough at this time. The balls of the young plants should be disturbed as little as possible and should be exposed just as short a time as possible to the drying air of the house after being taken out of the pot. Any ball showing dryness should be dipped in water previous to planting, as it is difficult to water it thoroughly after it is planted. Water each plant carefully around the ball, keeping the rest of the soil dry. Continue this individual watering for a week, syringing the plants twice a day during bright weather. The afternoon syringing should be done early enough to have the foliage dry by sundown. C.

BROCKTON, MASS.—Robert McIntyre, 114 Gladstone street, Campello, has built an addition to his greenhouse.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Planting Time.

The time for planting the stock intended to be grown in the bench for exhibition and fancy cut blooms is at hand. To get the best results for these purposes and be able to make the plants produce the big heavy blooms of great depth necessary for exhibition the plants must be given a long season of growth and they should be planted into their permanent quarters as soon after May 20 as possible. The first thing to consider before attempting to plant is to make sure that the new stock is clean and healthy, so there will be no check in planting and the plant will take hold and commence to work right away. This stock requires a good rich soil which should be a little inclined to be heavy in order that the plants may make a short-jointed, vigorous growth. If the soil is light in nature the plants will grow very tall and long-jointed, making them very difficult subjects to produce exhibition or high class blooms from. Before bringing in the soil the general routine work of preparation should be followed out, cleaning out every bit of rubbish and attending to all the needed repairs, then giving every crack and corner a thorough good washing out with the hose.

Everything that can be given for these plants to feed on is so much gained; for this reason I have found it beneficial to use well rotted manure to cover up the cracks in the bottoms of the benches, which by the time the roots get through the soil is in fine condition for them to work in. As I have said before, this class of plants require a rich soil, but green manure should be avoided because of the danger of the roots getting a check and the plants turning yellow. After the soil is on the benches and before planting is begun give the beds a good firming down and even up the surface, and as each plant is planted the soil should be well firmed around it. The distance apart that these plants should be set depends somewhat upon the character of the growth of the variety, some having very much heavier foliage than others; consequently they need more space than those of light foliage. But all varieties should be allowed ample space for the proper development of the bloom. Another very important item when figuring on the planting is to be sure to allow sufficient head room for the plants to develop their blooms. Also do not plant a dwarf variety between two tall growing varieties but plant the tall growers by themselves and the dwarfs by themselves.

When planted, water directly around the plants only until the roots have taken hold of the soil, so the soil will keep fresh and sweet for the roots to work into. As quickly as the plants require it, attend to the matter of supports. This is very important, because if the stems get badly crooked it takes some time for them to straighten out again. The early propagated stock of the early flowering varieties should also be planted at this time to encourage them to make a rapid growth, so that the wood will ripen early and mature the blooms at the proper time. The exhibition stock being grown in pots both for fancy cut blooms and for specimen plants should be potted along as they are in need of it to give them all the show possible to make growth. The commercial stock should also receive attention to get it into shape. If any of the earliest propagated stock becomes hard and woody shift them up into a larger pot to carry them along until they can be benched. Also pay close attention to working up the stock of late varieties.

An Ax To Grind.

"Mr. Pulsifer, our new neighbor, says our fruit trees should be trimmed," said Mrs. Jamesworthy. "He says they'll never bear fruit the way they now are. He was a nurseryman for several years and knows how to do the work properly, and says he'll do it for 50 cents an hour."

"If Mr. Pulsifer doesn't like the looks of our trees he can go to thunder," replied Jamesworthy. "So we have another officious neighbor who is eager and anxious to tell you how to blow in the few thalers your toil-worn husband has accumulated in blood and tears. And instead of bating him over the head with the fire shovel you listen to his incendiary remarks and now I suppose you figure on camping on my trail until I loosen up and engage this Pulsifer pirate to come and mutilate my vines and fig trees."

"There's nothing to it, Mrs. Jamesworthy. You'll see the pigs flying and the cow swinging on the garden gate before you see me handing out my large, round piasters to such a man as Pulsifer."

"If the trees were worth it, I could prune and trim them myself in two hours, for I also worked in a nursery in my youth. I was employed in one of the largest nurseries in the west for half a day, driving a blind mule, and what I don't know about trimming trees isn't worth knowing. Just give me a spokeshave and a jackplane and I'll trim a tree until it brings tears to your eyes."

"But first I want to be satisfied that the trees are worth trimming, and ours are not. We bought them from an oily tongued stranger, and he said they were apple and cherry trees, but his tongue was forked. He was one of those men who couldn't tell the truth unless they were under the influence of an anæsthetic. The trees are slippery elms and basswoods, and they'll never produce any apples or cherries in a thousand years."

"You might as well hire a man to trim the fence posts in the back yard and then expect them to produce gooseberries. But you never consider such things when you see a chance to spend my paltry savings. Any old scheme appeals to you if it will put me a few rods nearer to the poorhouse. You'd be perfectly willing to hire such a corsair as Pulsifer and have him hang around here until the robins nest again, sawing a few twigs off those trees and talking politics and woman suffrage at the rate of 50 cents an hour. If he once got started at such a job he'd never break loose from it until he saw my goods and chattels sold at auction to satisfy my creditors. That's the kind of a man Pulsifer is."

"As for spending any real money to trim those imitation trees in our back yard, the idea is preposterous! We could buy enough cherries and apples to last us the rest of our natural lives for what Pulsifer would charge for shingling one tree."

Niessen Co.'s New Home.

One of Philadelphia's most modern reinforced concrete buildings is that erected for the Leo Niessen Co., wholesale florists, at the northwest corner of Twelfth and Race streets. The new building has eight stories and a basement, with the advantage of facing three streets, having a frontage of 58 feet on Race and Spring streets and 100 feet on Twelfth street. The interior and exterior columns, also the floors and roofs, are of reinforced concrete. Cage construction was used, and the entire framework was erected before the walls were begun. There is one row of interior columns extending longitudinally, 16 feet apart, the girders having a span of 29 feet at right angles thereto. The exterior of the building is of cream-colored pressed brick, with granite and terra cotta trimmings. The first story is 22 feet in height and contains a mezzanine story of about one-half its area; the upper stories are 13 feet 4 inches in height. The basement and the first floor will be used for the wholesale florist business, while the upper floors will be occupied by tenants for light manufacturing purposes.

OBITUARY.

G. L. Grant.

G. L. Grant, formerly identified with the trade of Chicago, died at Soquel, Calif., May 18, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Grant was at one time president of the Chicago Florists' Club. He was a telegraph operator and drifted into trade press work through Vaughan's Seed Store, at which place he was employed when THE AMERICAN FLORIST, the first trade paper, was established. He leaves a widow and five children.

Charles L. Doran.

Charles L. Doran, for years a familiar figure in the cut-flower business of New York city, died at his home, 1015 Walton avenue, Bronx Borough, May 15. He was nearly 60 years old. Mr. Doran's father was a florist before him and Charles grew up in the business. He at one time conducted a large retail store on Sixth avenue near Forty-fifth street. He was a democrat and actively interested in politics. In late years his activities had been devoted to contract work, some of it being in the city parks. He was known as a genial and kindly man who made many friends. He was married and leaves a family. A. F. F.

Elbridge G. Moore.

Elbridge G. Moore, aged 78, died recently at his home in Milford, Mass. Mr. Moore had been a resident of Milford for 50 years and had long been known as a successful florist. He had been in poor health for a year and a half. He was a veteran of the Civil War and prominent in the G. A. R. He is survived by the widow and one brother.

Chas. P. Bender.

Chas. P. Bender, one time proprietor of a nursery in Fruitvale, Calif., died at his home in Melrose at the age of 73. He was a soldier in the Civil War and a member of the G. A. R.

SUBSCRIBERS should renew promptly to insure regular delivery of the paper. The yellow address label on the paper shows date of expiration.

SOME growers rename gladioli and other plants so that they can make more money out of them than they are worth, and these growers will pay heavy penalties and perhaps go to jail when we get a plant law similar to that which now exists for food products. The men who are now doing this are "speeding the day" of such a law, one which, when enacted, will work hardships on innocent members of the trade.

Chicago Peony Show.

The peony show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago has been set for June 12-13, at the Art Institute, date subject to change as the condition of the crop warrants. The premium list will be ready in a few days and includes medals and cash prizes. Copies may be had on application to Secretary R. J. Haight, Rand-McNally Building, Clark and Harrison streets, Chicago.

Third National Flower Show.

PREMIUMS DISTRIBUTED

The cash premiums have all been awarded and distributed as have also the silver cups so generously donated by different parties. Checks have been mailed to the Rose, Carnation, Sweet Pea and Gladiolus Societies. The committee is making this fact public at this time so that if any winner has not received his prizes in full he will kindly communicate at once with the secretary, John Young, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York. The medals will be sent out as soon as they are received and a complete report of the show will be submitted to the S. A. F. at the convention in August. The flower show committee begs publicly to thank every individual and society that contributed to the success of this exhibition.

CHARLES H. TOTTY, Chairman.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., offer for registration, the following geranium:

RAISERS' DESCRIPTION.

Name: Maryland. A semi-double geranium, the result of a cross of Alphonse Ricard and La Pilote, showing the character of growth and habit of blooming of La Pilote combined with the size and substance of the Alphonse Ricard. The color is a most dazzling, fiery red. The florets average about 2 inches in diameter. The foliage has a heavy chocolate zone.

BAUSCHER'S REGISTRATION COMPLETE.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the geranium American Beauty by John Bauscher of Freeport, Ill., becomes complete.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

May 15, 1913.

National Insecticides Law Needs Amending.

Most persons interested in insect control are generally familiar with the national insecticide law, and it is generally regarded as a good law. Honest manufacturers favor the law because it protects them from the dishonest manufacturers. The prosecutions, however, by the government under this law would make it appear that the manufacturers of insecticides and fungicides were a set of rogues and thieves. The fact is there is no class of manufacturers that strive more earnestly to make high-class products. The competition is such that any other course would be suicidal. Furthermore, the injury to trees and plants by the use of imperfect or adulterated insecticides is such as to invite legal entanglements and much unfavorable advertising, so that manufacturers of insecticides are more than cautious.

A recent decision in the United States Circuit Court, according to the Fruit Belt, involved a manufacturer wherein he was compelled to plead guilty to sending out adulterated insecticides and was subjected to a fine of $200. Unfortunately the newspaper reports of these cases seldom give all the facts and the reader is left with a prejudiced opinion of not only the manufacturer in question but all manufacturers in general. The charge in this particular case was that the label on the package stated this maker's arsenate of lead contained 15 per cent.

of arsenic acid and not over three-fourths of 1 per cent of water soluble arsenic acid. While the package in question, as found by the government inspectors, contained a fraction less than 15 per cent of arsenic acid and a little over three-fourths of 1 per cent of water soluble arsenic acid, the difference being so small that the value of the arsenate of lead as an insecticide was not lessened in the least, and yet this manufacturer had to plead guilty to a wilful violation of the law in order to escape the greater penalty that might be imposed and the additional cost of fighting the case on a final appeal to a higher court.

This particular package which showed misbranding under the act of congress that the government inspectors investigated may perhaps have been the only one out of 100,000 packages manufactured that did not meet all the requirements of the law, and this particular case may have been the fault of a workman who failed to carry out fully the instructions of his employer. Had he done so he would have saved his employer the humiliation, the fine and the loss of business that this suit entailed.

This is one instance with only one manufacturer, but we understand that almost every manufacturer of insecticides in the United States has been enjoined, for one reason or another, within the past year. One case where it was stated on the label that the contents of the package would positively kill all leaf-eating bugs, and the qualifying statement that it would do this if properly applied was omitted. This was construed by the court as misbranding, and, therefore, a violation, and the manufacturer in this case was fined accordingly and received the usual amount of injurious advertising.

The Fruit Belt favors the insecticide act, but we do not wish to see it administered in such a manner as to impeach the integrity and character of responsible and honest men. Just what the attitude of the department at Washington is, whether against the manufacturer of insecticides, or that they are doing the best they can with a law that does not furnish adequate protection to the manufacturer of insecticides, we do not know, but we do know that unless the manufacturer has more protection than the present action would indicate he must either quit business or employ more expert supervision over the compounding of his products, which means increased cost to the consumer. With but one or two exceptions violation of the law is charged. Therefore we believe there is something at fault somewhere which should be corrected, as it would be wholly unjust to impugn the motives of so large a number of manufacturers of a commodity that is so necessary to American agriculture and horticulture.

Tempted.

"I thought you had planned to spend all day working in the garden."

"I did. But I started to dig and the worms were so plentiful that I changed my mind and decided to go fishing."—Detroit Free Press.

There are Some Improvements.

"These seed people are as particular about getting out an annual floral catalogue as are the automobile people."

"Why shouldn't they be?"

"I didn't suppose there were any new moles in jonquils and daffodils."—New York Evening Mail.

MARKET CROWDED.

The market during the past week has been very crowded. Flowers of all kinds have been plentiful. Outdoor flowers, such as roses, peonies, etc., have influenced the market. Miniature gladioli are very plentiful. Mrs. Francis King, America and Augusta are bringing good prices. Lilies are quoted from 8 to 10. Lily of the valley is also plentiful. The better grades of sweet peas have stiffened somewhat in price. Roses and carnations have been extremely plentiful. Dagger ferns are in.

NOTES.

The F. C. Weber store is a very pretty sight with a good supply of good blooming plants and an endless assortment of all cut flowers in season. Mr. Weber is very enthusiastic over carnation Delight which is a great keeper.

Edward P. Cizkowski, the Cass avenue florist, will occupy the store at 1510 Cass avenue, formerly occupied by Mrs. E. C. Simmonds. He will thoroughly overhaul the stock and fix up a very pretty store.

Otto G. Koenig, one of the recently elected city councilmen, is out with a bill to further the establishment of a zoo in Forest park with many other improvements.

The Southern hotel will be reopened. This will be a good thing for the Riessen Floral Co., which always did a big business with this establishment.

The growers and plantsmen have organized a county club. They will hold monthly meetings. Any grower in the county is eligible to membership.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. had an immense stock on hand Saturday, but this stock was well cleaned up before 10 o'clock.

The Red Bird Floral Co. had special sales Saturday of all varieties of flowers. Their store on Sixth street was crowded all day.

John Barnard is doing a very nice business and his trade is fast growing. He has purchased a large touring car.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had a splendid stock of gladioli and also Killarney roses.

The wholesale grocers are meeting here this week and are invited to visit Shaw's Garden in a body.

C. A. Kuehn had some extra fancy lily of the valley, fine carnations and some very fine peonies.

F. H. Weber seems to be doing good business all the time. He has always a fine stock on hand.

George H. Angermueller's stock of long stem American Beauty roses is very fine.

The Diemer Floral Co. is always busy. The buyer is daily at the market.

Luther Armstrong is shipping some nice Shasta daisies into the market.

H. G. Berning has a fine stock of everything. W. F.

Morris County Gardeners and Florists.

At our regular meeting of May 14 Arthur Herrington gave us an illustrated lecture on "Tree Planting." The views were clear and every detail, from the digging out to the setting, was shown in a remarkable manner. All the trees illustrated were of quite large size, making it all the more interesting. The root-system was in many cases over 20 feet in diameter, which was shown by comparison of a 6 foot man standing beside a tree ready for transit. Mr. Herrington received the applause of the members and a rising vote of thanks for his lecture, which was given in his happiest vein.

A very fine specimen of Cattleya gigas was brought down by J. Linda-bury, gardener to Robt. D. Foote. It had over 30 blooms in perfect condition and the judges awarded it a silver medal. At the next Fall Show, which will be held October 28-29, vegetables will be a special feature. The "Madison class," first prize, $75.00; second, $50.00; third, $25.00, will, it is hoped, bring many exhibits from other places. It will be an open class and we would like to see this class made worthy of the name of Madison. We would like to have our sister societies as well as individuals help us to this end. E. R.

Washington.

BUSINESS FAIR.

Business is fair with the local florists. Commencements are calling for a number of bouquets and some very pretty decorations. Peonies are the principal flower. They are at their best with the best selling for $10 a hundred, while others are bringing from $4 to $6.

NOTES.

Geo. H. Cooke had the church and home decoration for the wedding of Miss Frauline Perkins to Capt. Wallack. The church was very prettily decorated with plumosus, white peonies, Easter lilies and cibotium ferns. The decoration at the home of the bride consisted mostly of palms, ferns, and hydrangeas with large vases of American Beauty and Killarney Queen roses placed around the rooms.

Gude Bros. had an order from the Washington fire department for one hundred and fifteen wreaths to be placed on graves of deceased firemen.

Z. D. Blackstone has started to cut down his large force of help by letting one of his decorators and three of his clerks have a long vacation.

Visitors: O. Gresham, Atlanta, Ga.; S. Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia, Pa.; John Buback, New York. G. C. D.

PEONIES VERY PLENTIFUL.

The market is in good condition but not quite as firm as it was last week. Peonies are arriving in large quantities and the quality of the stock so far received is higher than that of last season. There may be a few local grown peonies in next week but the supply will not cut much of a figure with the southern grown flowers as far as the Memorial day trade is concerned. Roses are very plentiful and although some very fine stock is obtainable there is a little that shows signs of mildew, but this in most cases is disposed of locally by the dealers. American Beauty roses are quite plentiful but the quality in some instances could be better. There are some fine flowers from young plants now arriving and this is having a good call. My Maryland is arriving in fine condition now as well as Richmond, but the latter clean up well. Killarney and White Killarney are seen in large supply everywhere but the latter have been in brisk demand the past week, due to the large amount of funeral work. Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Sunburst are also to be had in large quantities and are seen featured in many of the leading stores. Sweet peas are moving well but there is always a surplus of these flowers to be found. Carnations are more plentiful but choice stock is still bringing good prices. Orchids are more abundant and the same can be said of lily of the valley. The outdoor valley is keeping the price of good indoor stock down. Tulips and pansies are prominently displayed on the tables of many of the wholesale stores as well as daisies, snapdragons, gladioli and other miscellaneous seasonable stock. Greens of all kinds are plentiful with the exception of smilax, which is somewhat scarce.

NOTES.

Bassett & Washburn have been unusually busy all week and the large number of orders that they are receiving indicate that there must be a shortage in certain lines of stock throughout the country. Roses are seen in large supply here but they are cleaning up well at good prices. C. L. Washburn expects to leave for a visit to California some time in July.

The North Shore Florists and Nurserymen's Association held another meeting at Winona Hall on May 16, when much important business was transacted. Several new members were admitted into the club and another meeting will be held on June 2. The first Monday of each month will hereafter be the regular meeting night.

Peter Reinberg is in crop with roses and Tim Matchen, the able storeman, expects to fill all Memorial day orders in full. Richmond is still the principal offering in roses at this store and it is needless to mention that they are in good demand.

Frank Kral's delivery car was struck last week by another machine and damaged to the extent of $250.

Wilder S. Deamud, a son of J. B. Deamud, the well known local commission man, and Miss Myrtle Larsen stole a march on their many friends last Thursday, May 15, when they were quietly married at Bay City, Mich. It was well known that the young couple were engaged for some time, but the wedding was a complete surprise, not even the parents of either knowing anything about it. The newlyweds will make their home in Bay City, where Mr. Deamud is part owner of a promising retail store. The young couple have the best wishes of the trade for a happy voyage on the matrimonial sea.

Zech & Mann are rushing the work on their new store which was formerly occupied by the Poehlmann Bros. Co., and are making every effort to have it in readiness for the Memorial day rush. The entire place is being repainted and when the new fixtures are in they will have a finely equipped place and one which will be a credit to the enterprising firm. This house will have large supplies of peonies, roses, carnations and cape jasmine for their Memorial day trade.

At J. A. Budlong's store American Beauty roses and carnations are now seen in large supply and the stock is of fine quality. Wm. Homberg and his assistant have been working short handed for several days but managed to get out all the orders on time with a little extra hustling. Roswell Schupp was away on his vacation and A. J. Phillips was called away by the death of a relative.

Wiator Bros. have been fortunate in having a large supply of White Killarney roses the past week for there was an unusually large amount of funeral work. N. J. Wiator says his firm will be fixed all right in stock for the big flower day, including carnations which are now in crop with his firm.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife are spending all their leisure time touring the surrounding country with their automobile and are already planning for a trip to the S. A. F. convention. Choice peonies are now seen at this store in quantity but the supply of orchids is none too large.

Hoerber Bros. manage to dispose of their choice stock at an early hour each day and judging from the large shipments that are now arriving one would never think that their range suffered any damage from the recent cyclone.

Erne & Klingel are now receiving regular shipments of peonies in addition to their regular line of seasonable flowers. They report business as good with a brisk Memorial day trade in sight.

A. L. Randall is again on deck at the store after an enjoyable visit in Europe.

Kennicott Bros. Co. will certainly be on deck as far as peonies are concerned for Memorial day, for the stock is now arriving in quantity and some very fine flowers are to be seen at the "Peony King's" headquarters now. Memorial day is a big event with this firm and the peony, as nearly everyone knows, is its principal offering.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. expects to have an unusually large supply of carnations for some time and are continually booking orders for Memorial day with the intention of filling all of them in full. This firm will also feature cape jasmine in quantity on that occasion.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are strong on peonies at present and expect to dispose of large quantities for Memorial day. The stock this firm is handling is extra fine now and much better than in former years.

Robt. Northam says that the shipments of stock that were received at the George Reinberg store on May 18 were the largest of the season, which according to his figuring, means a good supply for Memorial day.

At J. B. Deamud Co.'s store double white narcissi are now arriving in quantity and from present indications this firm will have an unusually large supply for Memorial day.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s baseball nine was again defeated at Joliet on May 18, by a score of 12 to 8. Cheer up, Mr. Olsem, better days coming!

John Kruchten says that he never knew a season when his peonies were as good as they are now and points with pride to his daily shipments.

Sullivan Bros. are planning on building a conservatory on their East Sixty-third street property.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association also have large quantities of peonies to offer now and from the present outlook the stock will be in fine shape for the big flower day. The stockholders of this firm had a meeting on May 14.

Edwin A. Kanst, the landscape gardener, and Martin Flanagan of the same locality in Hyde Park, have had a strenuous dispute as to the ability of their expert workmen in the sod cutting department, resulting in a proposition from Mr. Kanst to match a giant Polish turf thrower with a Hibernian on Mr. Flanagan's force. This match is expected to come off in the near future at Chicago Ridge. Refreshments will be served.

Miss M. C. Guterberg is in the market for a good peony grower and would be pleased to hear from some one who has any surplus stock he wishes to consign to this market.

The heavy rains of May 20 hurt the appearance of bedding stock in open frames and the sales of retail plant dealers have been curtailed this week in consequence.

Percy Jones is having some special sales again in his supply department this week that are now attracting the attention of the buyers.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is having a busy spring season and is filling a large number of orders for bridal and commencement baskets.

Kyle & Foerster are handling southern grown peonies now but it is doubtful whether they will have local stock for Memorial day.

At Wieland & Risch's store all the novelties of the season can be seen in addition to their usual line of roses and carnations.

H. Wilkerson says H. Wittbold has several large jobs in sight which will probably materialize within a few days.

“ASK YOURSELF WHY”

No matter where you were if you wanted “The Best” you would go to the oldest and largest dealer to get what you wanted.

Why You Should Come to Us for Peonies

¶ We are not alone the oldest firm in this line, but the largest growers and handlers of Peonies in the world. “Why.” Of course you understand that our different farms are so located that we start with May 10th and get daily shipments to the end of June and our output is over 500 dozen a day. We control the cut from so many thousands of plants that we shall have a large supply and the present indication is that the quality will be the finest in the history of the cut flower trade. The Peony is the big seller for May 30 and you are vitally interested in the supply and price.

Order of Us. Get The Best. “Prices Are Right.”

Quality is Right. Quantity is Right. You can order One Dozen or 1000 Dozen and every flower will be what you want.

CARNATIONS IN BRISK DEMAND.
The market is in a good condition and carnations are having a very good call. There are some magnificent blooms arriving at present and it is plainly seen that the quality of the local stock is far superior to that which is arriving from the outside markets. Sweet peas are in good demand and can be seen featured in many of the leading stores. Peonies are arriving but are not having much of a call yet, although the stock is good and deserving of immediate sale. The usual supply of spring flowers is available and the retailer now has an opportunity to use a great variety of flowers to good advantage. Bedding stock is in good supply here yet, but a cleanup in all lines is expected before the season is fairly over. Geraniums are to be had in quantity, but a few more weeks will find the supply greatly depleted.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. will grow its improved Golden Chadwick chrysanthemum more abundantly this season. Mr. Pollworth thinks a great deal of this variety and says that it is particularly valuable because it usually comes in crop just right for Thanksgiving. Mr. Kennedy reports that about 10,000 of this firm's carnation plants were affected by the recent cold snap and adds that some tomato plants which he had set out in the cold frames were completely destroyed.

Holton & Hunkel Co. have had an unusually good season and clean up their stock well each day. H. V. Hunkel who looks after the greenhouses says that building operations on their new plant will not begin until August. This firm has a large stock of fine S. A. Nutt geraniums on hand which is somewhat surprising for all the other varieties have been completely sold out and this is the only one that remains.

Currie Bros. Co. report a brisk spring trade in the seed line and also a good cut flower trade. Wm. Currie in talking of the late National Flower Show in New York, thinks that it would not be advisable to hold an exhibition every year, but that a show every other year as it is at present would be much better.

Gust. Rusch & Co. are mailing a handy telephone directory cover to their patrons which should be a very acceptable gift. This firm is now showing a fancy grade of carnations and peonies. A fine Mothers' day trade and a brisk outlook for Memorial day are reported.

Fred Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, came up here this week to sell Chas. T. Kitzew a new boiler. His firm has already broken all previous records for sales this spring in this vicinity and sold enough boilers to heat 127,000 feet of glass.

Zimmerman, the enterprising Grand Avenue florist, has just closed another three year lease on his present quarters.

PLATTEVILLE, WIS.—Wm. A. Schaefer, proprietor of the Platteville Floral Co., says that the Mothers' day trade was unusually good and that this day will in future compare favorably in sales with the other big flower days.

Nassau County Hort. Society.

A well-attended meeting of this society was held at Glen Cove on Wednesday, May 14. Communications were read from the Cottage Gardens Co., John Lewis Childs, Lord & Burnham and the Gardener's Chronicle. There was a fine display of Darwin tulips. F. O. Johnson showed 34 varieties, all of them very fine. The following varieties were most admired: Elegans alba, Mrs. Moon, Karl Becker, Picotee, and Carmen. The judges awarded the collection a certificate of culture. The winners of the monthly prizes were as follows:

- Vase Darwin tulips—A. Mackenzie, first.
  - Eight heads of lettuce—J. McCarthy, first.
  - Vase gladiolus—H. Gant, first.
  - Vase Picotee tulips—V. Cleres, honorable mention.
- At the next meeting, June 11, prizes

WEATHER AFFECTS ROSES.

The effects of the cold spells of the past week are seen on the roses, considerable mildew being in evidence. After so much warm weather it was thought that summer had set in for good, but early in the week the thermometer registered below 30° and icicles were seen hanging to the eaves of the greenhouses over a foot long. The old gardeners say no matter how warm it gets early in the season it is never safe to plant out in this neighborhood before May 10. There has been quite a change in the demand for flowers over that of last week, and stocks have accumulated considerably. All lines of roses are full with a falling off in quality. American Beauty sells fairly well, as the price is moderate. My Marylands are seen with great strong canes, armored with thorns that strike terror to the handlers. This cool weather the Killarneys come in tight and after the weather petals are picked off are small indeed. Carnations are not overly plentiful. Sweet peas are a trifle off, but are in good demand. Peonies in all colors are now plentiful and prices are receding. If the weather keeps as cool as at present they will hold over nicely for Memorial day. However, there will be a dearth of shrubby, as it is all in full flower at this time. The rambler roses will make up partly for this loss, as they are showing color, and should be in nicely by May 30. Easter lilies are scarce and callas are about over. Spanish iris has been a good seller, while snapdragon is in over supply.

NOTES.

Charles Henry Fox is forced to move from his Broad street store, the building having been sold. This is the third time that Mr. Fox has had a like experience in ten years. The Ritz-Carlton hotel bought him out the last time, two years ago, and he took a ten years' lease on the building next door, putting up with the litter of the new building for over a year, in order to get the location. The hotel finding their building too small had to purchase additional ground to the south and east and buy the leases of the occupants to get immediate possession. One store on Walnut street is reported to have received $20,000. Mr. Fox has to vacate by June 1, but has not as yet secured a new location. He has had charge of the publicity of the Retail Florists' Association, being chairman of the committee having this work in charge. He has been working hard and he and his committee should feel proud of their labors. The work has been along the lines of suggestion, showing how flowers could and should be used for many occasions. This is a good beginning and if continued with added features will bring returns fully compensating for the trouble and expense.

The Leo Niessen Co. is preparing for a big Memorial day business. Peonies, roses and carnations are leaders. New crop dagger ferns are in, and are a great help, as the cold storage stock has of late been very poor.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Pennock, daughter of Abraham L. Pennock and wife, to Robert C. Folwell, Jr., will take place on the lawn at the Pennock Landsdowne home at 6 o'clock on the evening of June 5.

The M. Rice Co. is having a great run on metal wreaths and magnolia leaves for Memorial day. Bridesmaids' baskets for the spring weddings have also sold well.

Wm. J. Colflesh's Sons are contemplating extensive improvements, replacing some old structures with larger houses. Their spring business has been a record breaker.

Edw. Reid says his Reid brand of American Beauty roses can not be excelled in this country. Carnations in great variety are also a feature at his store.

George Anderson has his new house well under way. When finished it will add considerably to his glass area.

John Kuhn of Olney is sending in very well grown Calceolaria ragosa. It is much appreciated by the stores.

Berger Bros. are strong on sweet peas, extra fine stock. Roses and peonies are also seen in quantity.

BUSINESS LIGHT.

The business of the past week was very moderate, with some improvement on May 16 and 17. While there was no great surplus of stock, there was enough to supply all demands. American Beauty roses have been cheap and there is not likely to be much improvement this month. There has been a falling off in the supply of sweet peas and good stock sells well. Carnations keep around the one and two dollar mark, depending on quality. There is an appreciable quantity of peony stock coming in from the south. Large lots of native lilies are now seen.

Monday, May 19.—The supply of stock is light this morning, as is buying. American Beauty roses move slowly (being plentiful with a light demand) at from $10 to $20 a hundred, only a few going at the latter figure. The Spencer type of sweet peas, being much superior to the common sorts, are selling freely at from $1.00 to $1.50 a dozen bunches. Carnations are more plentiful, as the demand is lighter, and $2.50 a hundred is a good price. There seems to be an abundant supply of short tea roses which will be cleaned up at various prices. While there is considerable peony stock on the market, the best stock has not yet appeared. Seventy-five cents and $1.00 a dozen is the best price at present.

NOTES.

The event of May 17 was the annual parade of police, firemen and other city employes. The employes of the parks have felt, in the past, that they were not as well represented in their parades as they should be, so they made a special effort and came out strong this time. Floats of flowers and growing trees symbolized the activities of the park department. The playground floats were filled with children in a bower of palms and growing plants. There were also sprinkling carts, asphalt carts, "bug" wagons carrying their spraying devices, plows, scrapers, rakes, and lawn mowers.

George Saltford, said to be the pioneer of the Rhinebeck violet industry and author of a book on violet growing, retired from the wholesale business on May 17, having sold the fixtures of his store at 129 West Twenty-eighth street to Walter R. Siebrecht. Aside from his interest in the cut flower business, Mr. Saltford has been at all times an intelligent, genial and kindly gentleman and his familiar figure will be missed in the wholesale district.

Robert E. Berry, who for some time has been located at Summit, N. J., shipping his carnations and sweet peas to J. K. Allen, has leased the Ryan Greenhouses at Chatham, N. J., and will continue growing there. The genial "Bob" is a good grower and well known in the wholesale district. J. K. Allen, 106 West 28th Street, is now receiving good peony stock from Gilbert H. Wild, Sarcoxie, Mo.

Many fine floral tributes were noted at the funeral of Chas. L. Doran, an old time florist, who died on May 15. Mr. Doran had many friends in the wholesale district. His obituary appears elsewhere in this issue.

We recently noted a very fine lot of sweet peas with remarkably long stems at the store of Henshaw & Fenrich. They were grown by George Jurgens, grower for Arthur Cockcroft, Northport, L. I.

We recently noted fine peonies at the store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. Among many of their rose shipments, the stock from the Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, R. I., is very noteworthy.

Alex. M. Westwood, who has a good retail store in the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, reports an excellent spring business.

Henry M. Robinson, of Boston, Mass., spent several days in this city the past week, looking over the firm's business here.

W. P. Ford is receiving a fine line of double white stock which sells well. A. F. F.

Providence, R. I.

A recent visit to the extensive range of the Budlong Rose Co. at Auburn, showed that this firm is not lagging in the production of good roses. They grow other stock also, but roses are the leading factors from the florist's viewpoint. With half a million square feet of glass, it is to be expected that a good business is being done and the visitor is not disappointed. This firm has discarded the old Pink and White Killarney roses, now growing instead Killarney Queen, Double White Killarney and Dark Pink Killarney. One house, 30x500 feet, is planted entirely with Killarney Queen. There are other sections planted with the same variety. One house, 38x470 feet, is all Mrs. Taft and there are other lots of it in the range. Richmond, Sunburst, Mrs. Chas. Russell, and Milady are other leading features, the two last named being now on trial. Cardinal is grown and is well thought of. The planting of young stock is now about finished and it looks very promising. No potting of young stock is done at this range. It is planted from the sand to benches, grown on and then transplanted when the time comes to the permanent benches. While we write of benches, we may state that much rose stock at this range is grown on beds which are made up of broken rock and cinders covered with good soil and all the soil at this place seems good. While this firm has previously grown chrysanthemums, they will this year plant on a larger scale than ever before, 60,000 plants being now ready for the planting. The iron frames for new houses to cover this stock are now up. With 1,000 acres of land and several hundreds of it under a high state of cultivation, this firm also does a large vegetable business. There are acres of glass frames that are now planted to tomatoes that will come to maturity about July 1. Onions and other vegetables are also extensively grown.

Boston Fishermen at Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.

Geo. Johnson & Son, 521 Elmwood avenue, are very busy with nursery work and landscape gardening. There are so many Johnsons and Johnstons in this city that there is danger of getting the names confused, but this firm, we believe, are the leading nurserymen.

A good rain on May 17 has made a great improvement in landscape features. Passing through Roger Williams park, we were much impressed with its beauty.

We found business good at the store of Johnson Bros., 35 Dorrance street, and there was a fine stock in sight.

Matthew McNair's two stores show evidence of prosperity and a good Memorial day trade is anticipated.

J. Kopelman & Co. are now busy on artificial stock for Memorial day. A. F. F.

CALL FOR ARTIFICIAL STOCK.

Preparations for the Memorial day business are everywhere apparent. It may interest some people in the trade who think the price of natural flowers should advance on every holiday to know how much artificial stock is now being used for this day as well as other special occasions. Penn the Florist is working up about 100,000 wax roses with magnolia leaves into wreaths and will send them out to the trade all over New England. With Mr. Penn this is merely business, as he has constant demands for that kind of work. He keeps an excellent stock of natural flowers and will just as cheerfully fill an order for them. Whatever may happen elsewhere there is no indication of a surplus of any greenhouse stock here for Memorial day. It is conceded that carnations will be scarce for the rest of the season. Roses are more plentiful but not extremely so. Sweet peas now seem to be the most plentiful stock on the market. A noteworthy feature is the yellow marguerite.

NOTES.

Stephen Donnellan, who for the past thirteen years has been foreman of the plant division of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and who grew the gold medal cyclamen at the last National Flower show at New York City, has accepted the position of foreman in the plant division of S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I. Before leaving he was presented with a gold watch and chain from his fellow workmen. Mr. Donnellan was very popular with all the gardeners and florists in and around this city and all wish him success in his new position.

Sidney Hoffman's store, 59-61 Massachusetts avenue, is now particularly attractive both within and without. The front, which is extensive, is adorned with large tubs of flowering hydrangeas and bay trees and the windows are filled with flowering and foliage plants and an excellent stock of cut flowers is always to be seen. At his greenhouses there is a great stock coming on for Memorial day.

At Thos. F. Galvin's there seems to be good business every hour of the day. While there may be other flower stores in this country that are just as busy, in visiting many cities we have never seen a busier store than Mr. Galvin's. Al. Bock, formerly with Geo. M. Stumpp, New York, is now at the Galvin Tremont street store.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. have been busy for the past two weeks arranging their immense stock of florists' supplies in their new quarters, Winthrop square and Otis street. The equipment of this store for wholesale and supply business is complete and the firm has evidently entered upon an era of greater prosperity.

One of the many noteworthy features at the store of N. F. McCarthy & Co. during the past week was a large importation of fine bay trees. The sales of evergreen and other plants and shrubs have been very heavy of late at this store.

Very good roses are reaching the Flower Exchange from the New England Conservatories (McAlpine Bros.), Exeter, N. H. This firm has been very successful with roses and is likely to greatly increase its glass area in the near future.

At the store of Wm. E. Doyle, Inc., 306 Boylston street, we recently noticed a handsome and unique flower holder for the display of clusters of lilac or other large bunches. It was hand-made and the holders were of hammered brass.

Newman & Sons, 24 Tremont street, have posted a notice in their store asking customers to send or leave their Memorial day orders early. This would be a good thing for every retailer to do.

There are many busy retail stores in Boston but we found none busier than the Wax Bros. However, they occasionally find time to go to the lakes and land a fine string of fish.

Philip L. Carbone is expected to be absent in Europe until fall. In the meantime the business is being taken care of by an efficient manager and staff.

Neal E. Boyle of Malden is another rose grower who has been having good success and is about to erect another house 50 x 150 feet.

We found A. Leuthy of Rosindale busy superintending the shipment of plants. He has a fine lot of young palms coming on.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. has during the past week been making heavy sales of roses in boxes.

At The Rosery, 549 Boylston street, we found a very attractive store, and excellent stock.

OUTDOOR STOCK SCARCER.

Cool weather the past two weeks has made the outdoor stock rather scarce. Some good lilacs have been on sale, also the late tulips. Retail trade has been only fair. Moving time, house cleaning and other things that come in May have had a tendency to make trade none too brisk. June promises to be a good month. A great many weddings are on the calendar. Roses, carnations and sweet peas are equal to all demands and of good quality.

NOTES.

The florists have been to a great inconvenience owing to the strike of the expressmen compelling them to have their stock shipped to points near Buffalo for about a week and then going out after it. Now they can be Outside work has been very backward, owing to the cold weather. Those who depend on lawn work have been very much hampered by the cold and the light frosts.

Memorial day should be good as the florists are making special prices on wreaths. Mother's day was much better than last year.

Baltimore Notes.

The flower market held at the base of Washington's monument. Mt. Vernon Square, was beautiful and popular. Florists of this city and vicinity are very liberal in contributing to this affair. The proceeds go to help local civic improvements.

Mother's day was duly celebrated in the churches and many carnations were donated and sent to the hospitals.

MANCHESTER, CONN.—Mrs. O. D. Miner placed a few potted plants and cut flowers in vases on sale in the window of her millinery store a few months ago. The other day she opened a flower store next door as a result of the steadily increasing demand. The store is known as the Park Hill Flower Shop.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY SUPPLY.

The wholesalers promise a good supply for Memorial day. The present cut of everything is larger than the market requires in every line, and if the cuts of peonies, double narcissi and other flowers that come in just in time for this day come up to expectations the supply should be exceptionally large. Already many large orders, especially from out of town, are hooked and more are coming in every day. The new offerings include corn flowers, candidum lilies and pyrethrum. All have so far been selling very well. In roses there are some excellent and large cuts of American Beauty. The other varieties, too, are in a good supply. None of them are selling up the way they should sell at this time of the year. Carnations are again in heavy supply, clearances of even any color in this line have been impossible for more than a week. Bulbous offerings include Easter lilies, callas, Rubrum speciosum and candidum. Many large tulips are coming in white and red. Double narcissi have just made their initial appearance. If the history of past years repeats itself this year they will be good property until after Memorial day and then they will overcrowd the market and produce a glut. Peonies are meeting with only a fair present demand. The call for Memorial day, however, is strong, even as early as the present writing and will be stronger as the day draws near. Lily of the valley is again in good supply, but is finding slow sales. The same is true of orchids. Only choice sweet peas meet with a ready call. Open offerings include snapdragon, iris, miniature, gladioli and the regular variety. New-Kentucky ferns are coming in.

Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa., First
Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford,
Conn., Second Vice-President; C.E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, at Cleveland, O.,
June 24-26, 1913.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park,
N. Y., returned from California May 19.

LILIUM HARRISII prices will be 10 per cent higher, the crop being only a moderate one.

VISITED CHICAGO: G. C. Eldering, representing W. J. Eldering & Son, Overveen, Haarlem, Holland.

PEDRICKTOWN, N. J.—Geo. R. Pedrick and wife have returned to their home,
Mr. Pedrick's health being much improved.

FIELD seed corn is in as slow demand this year as it was active in 1912. Nearly all western seed houses are carrying good stocks.

WHILE there has been no definite decline in prices of French bulbs of Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora, yet there is a suspicion in the minds of American dealers that this article exists in goodly supply.

FARIBAULT, MINN.—Wm. Kueker, president of the Farmer Seed and Nursery Co., has been at the St. Luke's hospital for the past two weeks, where he underwent an operation for gall stones. The patient is recovering nicely and expects to resume his duties at the office in the course of a few weeks.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—The Barteldes Seed Co. says the garden seed trade has been fully up to the average.
Crops of such seeds as timothy, Kaffir, millet, cane and corn were very good last year and consequently the farmers were plentifully supplied with these seeds. This has cut down the sales of field seeds materially and the trade in these lines has not been up to the normal.

BOSTON, MASS.—While the rush of spring business in seeds is declining, there is yet a good trade in plants very evident on North Market street and Faneuil Hall Square. The seedsmen agree that this has been a good season.
Some complaint has been coming in from farms and gardens of the dry and cool weather, but any forebodings were happily dispelled by a good rain on May 15.—At the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co.'s store we found business active there being large sales of vegetables and the smaller flowering plants. It was also said that the seed trade was keeping up well.—At the Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation everybody was found busy.
The activities of this firm are remarkable, a real estate department now being added to their seed, nursery and implement features. The veteran Thomas J. Grey is now with this firm and his many friends will be glad to meet him there, for he is a man who is remembered by his friends.—The New Mineral Fertilizer Co., with works at Rum-ford, Me., has now a store at 11 South Market street.

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—The Door County Seed Co., which since its organization has occupied the Hay building with its business, within the week purchased the property known as the Marine saloon, located on the north side of St. John near the railroad track. The company proposes to remodel and rebuild the building and fill in the lot and use it for the carrying on of the business in which it is engaged. The firm expects to move as soon as this has been done, which may not be for a couple of months.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade May 21 for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3.25 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.—The onion set stand south of the city is none too good. Either from the drought or other causes the germination has not been what it should be and the consequent stand is on the whole rather thin.—Geo. S. Green of the Illinois Seed Co. appeared before the Agricultural committee at Springfield, May 20, in regard to the proposed seed law and says the committee after a thorough discussion decided to report the bill to the house unfavorably. This action of the committee will probably dispose of seed legislation in this state during the spring session.

Minnesota Seed Law.

In a letter from a well-known expert on seed laws to a Minnesota seedsmen commenting on the new Minnesota seed law we find the following:

"In section 2, paragraph 1, it is required that every special variety of agricultural seed be stated, it must be true to type. In other words, if you secure from the European or eastern wholesaler a variety of, say, alsike clover, and a mistake is made by your vendor, you are liable for the first offense for a $10 fine, and supposing in your numerous transactions you make another mistake, the minimum fine is $100 for each offense. Gambling in Wall street is not in it for fun compared to your business. Of course germination is going to give trouble.

"To give the approximate percentage by weight of certain weed seeds like dodder is, of course, almost impossible, unless you have secured the services of an expert in decimal fractions. How are you going to state the presence of five dodder seeds in a pound of 350,000 seeds of red clover?

To state where the seed is grown will in some cases be very difficult, and in other cases impossible.

"Your law allows lawn mixtures, but why not have taken care of other mixtures for pastures, etc. All such mixtures are left out by this definition.

"In section 4, the fines imposed are exceedingly heavy. Simply because an honest mistake may occur at one time, the seedsmen are fined the minimum fine of $10. Thereafter any other fine cannot be less than $100, for an honest mistake. Inasmuch as the seedsmen is dealing with vast quantities of seeds, some of which are entirely similar to other kinds of seed, the penalties are outrageously heavy.

"Section 9, which allows the certificate of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, giving the result of any examination of seeds, to be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated, this in my judgment is clearly unconstitutional. In other words, in a criminal prosecution, criminal in character, the accused shall have the right * * * to be confronted by the witnesses against him (Article 1, Sec. 6, Constitution of Minn.) In section 9, we have, however, a mere statement of an officer not under oath and the witness not sworn in the cause and subject to the searching of conscience or of facts. Any prosecution under this seed law is a criminal prosecution within the constitutional provision above cited. (State vs. Sauer, 42 Minn. 258)."

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

LYCORIS SQUAMIGERA, OR AMARYLLIS HALLI

(THE MAGIC LILY OF JAPAN)

A perfectly hardy Amaryllis, producing beautiful pink flowers.
 Lycoris squamigera produces in early Spring foliage which grows until July, when it ripens off and disappears, and one not familiar with its habits would think the bulb had died, but about a month later, as if by magic, the flower-stalks spring from the ground to a height of 2 or 3 feet, developing an umbel of large and beautiful lily-shaped flowers 3 to 4 inches across and from 8 to 12 in number, of a delicate lilac-pink.
 Very useful for cut flowers in the Summer. Strong blooming bulbs, each 10c., per doz., $1.00; per 100, $6.50.

INCARVILLEA.

INCARVILLEA Delavayi (Hardy Gloxinia). The foliage resembles that of the Acanthus, while the blossoms appear like clusters of pink Gloxinias. It is extremely decorative. Strong roots, each 10c.; per doz. 75c.; per 10, $6.00.

OXALIS.

OXALIS (Summer-Flowering) Deppel. Pure white; very fine.
Lasiandra. Fine rosy pink, beautiful cut foliage.
Shamrock. Lovely clover-like foliage, pink blossom.
Mixed Colors. Several colors. Per doz., 10c.; per 100, 35c.; per 1000, $2.50.

SPIRAEA.

SPIRAEA Palmata Rosea. The beautiful deep pink hardy Spiraea. Per doz., $1.00; per 100, $7.50.
SPIRAEA Aruncas. The grand hardy white Spiraea. 4 to 5 feet; per doz., $1.00; per 100, $7.50.

KUDZU VINE.

The quickest climber known in horticulture; grows 1 to 2 feet per day. Invaluable for quickly covering unsightly objects. Strong roots, each 20c.; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $12.00.

AMERICA.

This beautiful new Gladiolus has produced as great a sensation as the now famous Princeps. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color, and, as a florist who saw it said, it is "fine enough for a bride's bouquet."

New York, May 17.—Cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, 75 cents to $1.25 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 50 cents to $1.00 per 100 bunches; lettuce, $1.50 to $2.00 per 2-box strap.

Lettuce Troubles.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We are having a great deal of trouble with our lettuce, which develops brown spots on the edges of the leaves. This does not occur until the lettuce is nearly ready to cut and we are sure it is not smoke, as we have not smoked one house for 2 months. There seems to be some mildew also, and the parsley and radish crops seem to have become diseased within the last week or two. The leaves of the parsley show little brown spots and the radish leaves something of the same nature, only of a different color. It appears to be some bacterial or fungus disease. The lettuce trouble seems to be caused by some fault of culture rather than disease. These plants are all grown on good soil with about one-third rotted manure, and in a temperature of 45° at night and with plenty of air whenever possible.

Nebraska, A. B.

The samples arrived in poor condition. However a fair examination was possible and we agree with the sender that the trouble is a fault of culture, and that mainly in ventilating. This belief is further strengthened by the presence of mildew which is caused by bad ventilation and improper watering. Mildew will always produce spotted lettuce, which tendency is intensified as the lettuce approaches maturity. The sample of lettuce sent is much too old as evidenced by the stem. Such lettuce drops an outer leaf for a new one formed, hence no progress is possible.

Mildew is especially fatal to young plants and those attacked never produce a good crop. Mildew corresponds to the human ailment known as a "cold" and is the result of the same condition: cold currents on tender parts. The remedy is not in preventing the cold currents as much as in preventing a soft growth. There is no greater safeguard than a sturdy, solid growth produced by ample ventilation day and night. Most growers err in the morning. They wait too long in admitting air. Just as soon as the temperature advances several degrees over the night temperature some air should be admitted and increased toward noon as needed. In the afternoon the houses should be closed gradually, and not suddenly.

We have often in these columns recommended a gradual advance up to, say, 2 o'clock and then a gradual decline towards evening. This is nature's way. And finally observe the rule: either air or heat. If no heat is required never shut the houses, and if you have to shut down, turn the heat on at once. During warm rainy spells fire a little with the air on. The great fault of hot water heating is the overheating of houses when a bright morning follows a cold night. The remedy is the early ventilation. If the temperature is allowed to run up 15 or 20° damage will surely result. Mildew will yield to some extent to sulphur on steam pipes or sulphur evaporated on a special heater made for the purpose, but this must go hand in hand with good culture. Faulty watering is also productive of mildew—wet foliage over night or excessive dampness in the house. Water on bright days only and early in the morning. If need be, fire with vents open to dry off the houses.

The sample of radishes and parsley also confirms the opinion that the ventilation is faulty. These crops are all so hardy and healthy and easily grown that any remedies are almost unnecessary. Radishes should be thinned promptly after up, to prevent overcrowding and parsley if not closely cut may need cleaning to remove dead leaves. These are the only precautions we have ever used. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure," applies to this case. Lettuce plants will mildew more easily on the ground floor than on benches and also more easily in connected houses than in single houses. Try to raise good plants for a good start.

Some of Aschmann's Choice Plants

A wonderful clock at a hotel in Interlaken, Switzerland. The biggest wonder of nature the world has ever seen.

See that clock? It is made of flowers. It has hands and shows the time!

See that little house in the rear, also made of flowers? There is hidden a mechanism that strikes the quarter, half and the hour. What do you think this clock is made of? It is made of plants of brilliancy—mostly of dwarf begonias, the Vernon type, short variety, pink and red. The head gardener, the creator of this clock, of this famous, world-wide known hotel at Interlaken, Switzerland, has been offered a fortune by American and other millionaires of the world, to make them a clock similar to this, but he declined the offers, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years. I was fortunate enough,

Is Not That a Sight.

A Sight, yes! "the greatest sight we ever saw," explained one tourist to another, gazing from the other side and pointing at an old-fashioned house, on barnyard No. 10 north, exposing in the moonlight a heap of waxy, large, white, fragrant flowers. "What kind of a vine is that," they asked one another? It is that so well reputed, white flowering moon-flower. A gentle-man hearing the conversation of the two, remarked that Godfrey Aschmann of Philadelphia was the man that raised them and shipped them all over the entire country.

It is a rapid grower and a constant bloomer, grows fifty feet high in one summer. Nothing better for quick shade; grows everywhere; on the garden walls on the roof garden, the bars and all over the house in a remarkable short time; thrives well in any soil. The botanical name is Ipomea Noctiflora.

We raise them by the 100,000 and it is one of our great specialties—35 years on the market. It bears an abundance of sweet, pure white, waxy flower as big as a saucer; nothing is more amusing than watching them in the evening when they open. 2 1/2 in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 4 in. pots, $12.00 per 100. ### MOTHERS' DAY TRADE SHOWS GAIN.

Business the past week was very satisfactory in the plant line but very quiet in the cut flower business with the exception of Mothers' day, which was better by far than last year. In fact, it exceeded all expectations and white carnations were cleaned up long before the day was half over. Colored flowers were more in demand also than last year. The outlook for Memorial day is gloomy, with light frost every night. Peonies and other outdoor flowers are likely to be late. However, warm weather in the meantime with an occasional shower may put things in fine shape.

CLUB MEETING.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met in regular session at the home of Wm. Knees of Moline, Ill., May 8, with nearly all of the members present. President John Staack presiding. The "Trials of a Wholesaler," by Ludwig Stapp, and "Outdoor Bedding," by Henry Meyers were the subjects of the evening, both papers being well received. A lively discussion followed. A question box is to be a feature at the meetings hereafter in addition to the regular subjects of discussion. The holding of the annual picnic came up for its share of attention and the president appointed A. Anderson, C. Sorenson and Wm. Knees committee on arrangements with full power to act. Theo. Ewoldt, president of the Bachelors' Club, offers as a prize to the lady over 16 years of age winning the 100 yards dash a handsome hand-painted china plate. The picnic probably will be held at the summer home of Wm. Knees on Rock river. After other routine matters were adjusted and after accepting Theo. Ewoldt's invitation to the annual strawberry supper to be held in the middle of June, the members adjourned to the dining room where Mrs. Knees and her daughter were waiting with a fine hot supper. After a vote of thanks were given Mr. Knees and his family and a social hour enjoyed the members left for their homes. The club has entered upon its tenth year.

HALIFAX, N. S.—The Easter business was greater than in 1912, according to a report by F. W. Killiam. Prices were about as usual for the occasion. Plants were equal to the demand in most varieties, but the supply of cut flowers was not quite large enough to meet the call. The demand was good for all plants, particularly bulbous stock. All flowers sold readily. In addition to the Easter trade there was a heavy demand for funeral flowers and also flowers for the Duchess of Connaught and party who were returning to England.

SMITHVILLE, TENN.—H. F. Keith, a local nurseryman, was shot and probably fatally wounded by W. H. Scarborough, a wealthy citizen of Cumberland City, who objected to Mr. Keith's attentions to his stepdaughter. Miss Scarborough immediately took her place as nurse at the wounded man's bedside. The result of the shooting has not been learned.

DE LAND, FLA.—The following officers were elected at the recent meeting of the Florida State Horticultural Society: H. H. Hume, Glen St. Mary, president; H. B. Stevens, De Land; W. C. Temple, Tampa, and L. B. Skinner, Dunedin, vice-presidents; E. O. Painter, Jacksonville, secretary; W. S. Hart, Hawks Park, treasurer. The 1914 convention will be held at Palatka.

TOPPENISH, WASH.—The packing and shipping plant of the Washington Nursery Co. was completely destroyed by fire May 4. Heroic work saved the office and the storage warehouse. The loss is estimated between $7,000 and $10,000, and the insurance on the building and contents amounted to $4,000.

TEXARKANA, TEX. E. L. Kiley has purchased the State Line Floral Co. of Mrs. Aleon. Mr. Kiley has been in the cut flower business in this city only a short time, having moved here from Paris.

RAIN HURTS TRADE.

Unseasonably cold weather with heavy rains the past week was responsible for a decided depression in trade which was felt by all dealers, especially those who do a big trade in bedding plants. As a result of the general stagnation an accumulation of some lines of stock was daily to be seen. This was particularly true of roses, of which unusually heavy cuttings are being made. Carnations have been soft and generally poor in quality but there is no surplus. Sweet peas of the Spencer type are now coming in and their appearance relegates the ordinary varieties to the rubbish barrels. Some Ohio-grown peonies are on the market, but little call for them has yet developed.

CLUB MEETING.

The Florists' Club meeting Monday evening, May 19, was fairly well attended, as a result of the call of the secretary to hear an address by A. Pochelon on the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. Mr. Pochelon, who is secretary of the association, related in detail the work of the society and pointed out the great benefits to be gained by joining it. A vote of thanks was given him for his interesting address. The meeting was held in the L. Bemis & Co. store, which will hereafter be the regular meeting place the first and third Monday evening of every month. The publicity committee made a report of its work for Mothers' day which met with the members' approval as the trade developed on the occasion was most satisfactory and in most cases exceeded that of last year. Encouraged by the success of the committee's efforts in advertising their annual events instructions were given to repeat the publicity plans for Memorial day as far as the funds subscribed will permit. There was on exhibition some blooms of the new carnation Princess Dagmar sent by M. A. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass. It is a deep crimson variety, very large and fragrant and borne upon long, stiff stems. It made a very favorable impression upon growers and retailers alike. S. S. Skidelsky was a visitor.

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all the horticultural trade; it is also taken by over 1000 of the best continental houses.

As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalog or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

Money orders payable at Lowdham, Notts. Address Editors of "H. A."

PEONIES.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use; how and when to plant; fertilizers and how to apply; and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new as well as plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur simply as a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure." We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the books. Our catalog of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

A Red Buggy— How It Suggests Hard Working Vent. Apparatus

WELL do I remember a red wheeled "buggy" that Dad gave me when I first started to "go with the girls."

The first thing he told me was: "Be sure to grease it often." It seemed to me that most of the time I had those wheels jacked up, wiping off the axles and greasing them. It was a nuisance—a most unpleasant job.

On buying my own carriage, you can depend on it, I saw that it was a rubber tired, ball bearing one that you only had to pack the grease cups once a season and then forget them.

Every time I go into a recently erected greenhouse and see those old fashioned gears that you have to climb a greased pole to grease; it makes me think of that red buggy.

Just why a man won't spend, just a little bit more and get our self-oiling, neat, easy working gear, is hard to understand.

You fill the top reservoir with oil once every year or two and it will always run "slick as grease."

Perhaps you don't know all you ought to know about this Hitchings' gear.

Send for our Supply Book. You will find it fully illustrated and described, both inside and out.

If this red buggy talk hasn't stirred up your interest—that Supply Book surely will.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Peonies.

The work on these plants is not finished by any means when the blooms are cut, for they must be taken care of to insure a good crop for another year. Where the plants are grown in rows the constant traveling has packed the soil down hard and the ground should be given a good cultivation in order to lighten it up. The weeds should be kept down all summer and not allowed to rob the soil of its richness. If the plants were severely cut in harvesting the bloom, so that there is not much foliage left on the plant, it is well to spread a mulch of straw manure on the surface. This is often the case with the officinalis varieties which do not make the heavy growth of the later varieties, and as it is natural for the roots of the peonies to have the shade of the heavy foliage of the plants during the summer, the cutting of the stems and foliage of these varieties robs the roots of this, and a mulch that will protect the ground from the hot summer sun is very beneficial and will also reduce the labor of weeding. Any old blooms left on the plant should be cut and thrown away. Plants that have become broken down by high winds or heavy rains should be tied up in shape.

Small Ferns.

The fern spores that were sown in late winter should now be in condition to transplant into flats. It will be difficult to separate the plants yet into individual specimens, but little clumps can be lifted with a toothpick and planted in flats about an inch apart. The flats or boxes should not be deep; about an inch and a half of soil is sufficient. The soil should be composed of two parts live loam and one part leaf mold, with a generous sprinkling of sand and sifted through a fine sieve. The flats should be placed in a moist house that is well shaded, and the walks kept well wet down all through the hot weather. If a nice warm moist temperature is maintained, the plants themselves will not require much watering, only light sprinklings, and they will very rapidly root into the new soil and send forth their fronds. If the grower has not grown his own ferns, it is a good time now to place an order for them with the fern specialists, for they can be purchased at very low prices and they are very easily grown on, and where there are many fern dishes to be filled in the fall, the difference in cost of the young plants lifted from the flats in midsummer and those purchased out of small pots in the fall is considerable; plants that will cost three and four dollars a hundred at that time can now be obtained for one-third of that amount, and a thousand or more of this small stock does not take up much space and will be disposed of before the bench room is needed in winter.

Solanums.

These little Christmas plants should not be allowed to stand around in the hot greenhouses badly pot bound and drying up every day, for they will grow hard and it cannot be expected to obtain a good plant under these conditions. They will stand lots of abuse and do fairly well, and that is the reason probably that they are so often neglected during these busy days. But it is much better to plant them out in the field than to carry them along in this condition. They can be easily handled in this manner, lifting them early in the fall. They will need to be kept pinched back into shape—any strong leading shoots should be cut back when they are soft. They can be planted fairly close together and will need frequent cultivation. If there is no suitable outside location where they can be planted out they can be plunged in a frame and potted up as it becomes necessary, but outside treatment of some kind is far preferable to the greenhouse, which is too warm, unless shaded, and they make better growth and bloom more freely in the bright sunlight.

Primulas.

The young primulas that were sown early should now be in 3-inch pots and be given as cool and airy a location as possible. To get the best growth on these plants, they should never be subjected to great heat, for the species are naturally a cool growing plant on the edges of the woodland in their native state. Outside in a frame with a lath covering is the best place that they can be grown, the pots sunk in the soil even to the rim. In potting these plants, they should be placed in the soil deep enough for them to stand firmly; they will not stand deep potting, but many growers do not pot them deep enough, and they frequently get turned over sideways during the watering. They must be watered carefully and preferably with a can with a fine rose. The later sowings will have to be carried on in the houses until they are large enough to be placed outside. They will have to be shaded, but do not shade them heavily enough to cause them to get drawn.

Cinerarias.

The sowing of cinerarias is better done in June than later. Many postpone this until July, but during the extremely hot days of that month it is often difficult to obtain good germination, and the seed pans or boxes will have to be watched carefully or they will become dry and the young seedlings burn off. The soil should be well shaded until the young seedlings show themselves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as the plants have one or two well defined leaves, they should be potted in small pots and given a nice airy position near the glass, which should be shaded, but care should be taken that the young stock does not get drawn. Always bear in mind that the one thing in growing cinerarias to be on the watch for is the aphid. These insects quickly infest these plants and rapidly suck the life out of them. Constant fumigation will keep them in check, but if not attended to regularly it will be time and money thrown away to attempt their culture. Cineraria hybrids is the variety most grown, and these are obtainable in some elegant strains with large high-colored flowers. The cineraria stellata is a much larger and more rapid growing plant which is very showy, but is not so well adapted for house culture when in flower.

Larkspur.

Larkspur or "poison weed" is treated of in a recent bulletin of the Department of Agriculture, in which it is pointed out that many losses are suffered each year by western ranchmen by reason of the stock eating the weed. There are two groups of these larkspurs on the ranges, the tall and the low varieties. The low larkspurs prefer the hills and rather dry ground, while the tall kinds grow in the gulches and canyons. Among the tall species are Delphinium barbeyi and D. cucullatum. The tall larkspur is easily distinguished after it blossoms, but in the early stages is often confused with the geranium and aconite. Of the low larkspurs D. nelsoni is a type. It grows in considerable abundance in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah. The root is short and tuberous and the plant never exceeds a foot in height. The blossoms are a violet blue. They appear, arranged in a loose raceme, in May.

The Colonial Bouquet.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE

The 'old-fashioned' Colonial bouquet has made quite a hit the past winter. It was used as a special leader the year before by a few of the trade who thereby gained prestige and at the same time accumulated money, as there was a good demand for this class of work at high prices. The past season the demand has become general all over the country, and the variety of flowers used in their construction is as varied as the prices at which they are sold. To get the close formal effect each flower must be stemmed separately and must be without stems or foliage. Anything that is fresh can be used and the color schemes are limited only by the flowers at hand.

In the accompanying supplement one bouquet contains, as a center, a pink rose, around which is a row of white peas. Next is one of pink roses in different shades, enclosed in a fringe of lilies of the valley. The whole is finished with an ordinary white scalloped bouquet paper, tied with broad and narrow white and pink ribbon. Another has a chrysanthemum flower for the center, with rows of roses, daisies and a border of snapdragons. A cluster of Hillingdon roses, a double row of Mrs. Aaron Ward, and a liberal fringe of lily of the valley make another. This in addition to the bouquet paper has a double layer of dotted chiffon which is sewed lightly to the paper, and adds a soft and pretty finish. The addition of the narrow ribbons of a different color and tied with a few of the same flowers as are used in the bunch is sure to receive commendation.

The miniature colonial bouquet made to sell in quantities for fifty cents, and even as low as twenty-five cents each, has had quite a run, taking the place of the artificial nosegay. These are made with one rose as a center and single florets of sweet peas around, or a carnation with a few violets. A carnation is broken up and wired and used around a rose, and so on ad libitum. A tiny bouquet paper in miniature only three inches in diameter is used for these bay bunches. Narrow baby ribbon is sometimes used to give an extra touch. K.

Retarding Peony Blooms.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago has issued the following instructions for intending exhibitors of peony blooms.

The peony is undoubtedly the most gorgeously beautiful of all our hardy flowers, and the ease with which it may be cultivated, and the fact that it is under any reasonable condition sure to produce a fine crop of blooms every year after it is established, make it deservedly a great favorite. Its only drawback is its habit of opening all its blooms nearly at the same time, giving a great surplus of flowers for a few days and none afterwards. It is not generally known that the blooming of peony buds can be very easily delayed for from several days to several weeks, depending on the variety and the method of treatment.

To delay the opening of the blooms for a few days, they are cut when the petals are just loosening, but when none of them have turned back. All the leaves are removed, except a few of the upper ones, sufficient to give the flower a proper setting of green. They are then wrapped somewhat snugly—one dozen or less in a bunch—in two thicknesses of damp (not wet) newspapers, leaving the lower four or five inches of the stems uncovered. The bundles of blooms so wrapped are placed in jars of water so that the lower one-third of the stems are submerged, and placed in a cold, dark location. A cool cellar is an ideal place. In this condition they will keep up to a week without opening, but will open very quickly when unwrapped and brought into the light and warmth.

If it is desired to retard them a longer time, they are cut earlier, while showing full color but before any of the petals have loosened at all, and treated in the same way. The tighter the bud is when cut, the longer it will keep. Some few varieties can be retarded only a few days in this way without being injured, while others can be held back for a very long time. The professional peony grower, after preparing the blooms as described, will place them in cold storage warehouses, where the temperature is kept very low and perfectly even, and will hold them there for six or more weeks in the case of some varieties. There are probably a million or more peonies stored in this manner every season by florists in Chicago. Where the advantages of artificially cooled storage with an absolutely even temperature can not be had it is probably not advisable to attempt retarding the blooms over two weeks in this way, while some varieties can be held only a very few days.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago will hold a grand peony exhibit at the Art Institute about June 12, depending on the earliness or lateness of the blooming of these flowers. Florists and expert growers from all over the country will compete in the open classes, while most liberal premiums and medals are offered in special classes for the amateur growers. It is hoped that all amateurs who love the peony and who grow even a few plants will send one vase or more of flowers to the show. These instructions are given out by the society so that those varieties blooming too early for the show may be held back. Premium lists and full information may be had by addressing R. J. Haight, Secretary, Rand-McNally building, Clark and Harrison streets.

The Saffron Plant.

The saffron plant (Crocus sativus), belonging to the same family as the common garden crocus (Crocus vernus), has been known and valued since earliest historical times for at least some of the many useful qualities which make of it an important article of commerce to-day. The origin of its name is the Persian word "zafaran," to which the Arabians added the prefix "al," which was adopted in the eighth century by the Spanish as "Alzafaran," and has since been modified to the present form of "Azafraan," and in English and other languages to obvious derivatives of the same origin. It is believed that saffron originated in Asia, whence it was brought to Europe long before the Christian era.

It is a bulbous, iridaceous plant having blue flowers with large yellow stigmas. These stigmas, with part of the style, are dried or toasted by fire in a species of sieve, and the pungent aromatic result is the saffron of commerce. It is used in large quantities in some countries in cookery, and in all to more or less extent for coloring confectionery, wines, liquors, cheeses, varnishes, etc., though its former wide employment in medicine and as a dye has much decreased in recent years.

Trees and Shrubs in May.

The horsechestnut (Aesculus Hippocastanum) growing naturally in a restricted area has the power of flourishing and reproducing itself in regions with climates as unlike as those of eastern New England and western Scotland. The home of this tree among the mountains of northern Greece is of such limited extent that, although the horsechestnut has been cultivated in Europe for more than three centuries, it is only in comparatively recent years that the wild tree has been discovered. The Grecian horsechestnut is one of the noblest of the exotic trees cultivated in the United States, but for the development of its greatest beauty it requires deep, rich, moist soil and abundant space for the spread of its branches. Few other trees suffer more from smoke, dust, and the other unnatural conditions of city life. There are a number of forms in cultivation but none of them equal the typical tree in beauty. One of the best known of these abnormal forms is the variety with double flowers (var. Baumannii, or flore pleno). This form flowers later than the single-flowered tree and the flowers last a long time in good condition. There are varieties with erect branches (var. pyramidalis) and with erect and spreading branches forming a round-topped tree (var. umbraculifera); and there are varieties with variously incised leaflets (var. incisa and var. laciniata), and with leaves blotched with yellow (var. variegata), but these are all horticultural curiosities and of no interest to the general planter.

The so-called red-flowered horsechestnut, which appeared in Europe many years ago, although its origin is not entirely clear, is probably a hybrid of the common horsechestnut with the red-flowered A. Pavia of the southeastern United States. The right name of this tree is A. carnea, although it is often found in nurseries under the name of A. rubicunda. It has the general habit and appearance of the common horsechestnut, but it is a smaller tree and blooms later, and the flowers on different individuals vary from red to pale rose color. The handsomest form (var. Briotii) has deep red flowers and is one of the most ornamental of the arborescent horsechestnuts. The Japanese horsechestnut (A. turbinata) is rather closely related to the Grecian tree and resembles it in general appearance, although the flowers are less showy. In its native country this is a large and handsome tree, and it promises to be a valuable ornamental tree here. The largest specimen in the United States is in Rochester, New York, where the Japanese horsechestnut has flowered and produced large crops of seeds for several years. The Himalayan horsechestnut, the species from central China discovered by Wilson, and the California species are not hardy here, and the north China horsechestnut is not yet established in the Arboretum.

Southeastern North America is the real home of the horsechestnuts, judging by the multiplication of species in that part of the world where a number of interesting and valuable new forms have recently been discovered. The earliest of the American species to flower is the so-called Ohio buckeye, A. glabra, which has now been in bloom for ten days. This is a small tree with pale flowers, fruit like that of the Grecian tree covered with prickles and dark bark exfoliating in thin flakes. There is a tree of the Ohio buckeye in the horsechestnut group on the Meadow road, but the largest specimen in the Arboretum is on the left-hand side of the South street entrance. A form of this tree with usually seven instead of five leaflets (var. Buckleyi) is not otherwise different from the common form and flowers with it in the rear of the horsechestnut group. Near this is another form of this tree (var. leucodermis) from southern Missouri and Arkansas, with pale bark which blooms about two weeks later than the type and is just coming into flower.

The other yellow-flowered arborescent horsechestnut of the eastern states (A. octandra) differs from the Ohio buckeye in the absence of prickles from the fruit. It is a larger tree, growing sometimes on the slopes of the southern Appalachian Mountains to the height of eighty feet, and blooms a week or ten days later. This is a valuable ornamental tree which is now rarely found in collections. The other arborescent species of the southern states, the red-flowered A. Pavia, is not yet established in the Arboretum, although some garden forms of this tree (var. atrosanguinea and var. Whitleyi), flower here freely.

From a race of hybrids between A. octandra and A. Pavia some valuable garden plants have been obtained. This hybrid appeared in Paris at the beginning of the last century and the correct name for it is A. hybrida, although in recent European publications it is sometimes called A. versicolor. The flowers are of different shades of red, and individuals differ in foliage, in the size and color of the flowers, and in their time of opening. There are two large bushy specimens of this hybrid quite different from each other in appearance in front of the horsechestnut group and next to A. glabra on the Meadow Road, and other forms can be found in the rear of this group. Of recently described species from the southeastern states only A. georgiana from central Georgia will flower this year. This is a broad, round-topped shrub, growing sometimes to the height of five or six feet, with large red and yellow flowers in long compact clusters, and a plant of much promise as a garden ornament. A large bed of this shrub will be found on the path in the rear of the horsechestnut group and opposite the mass of A. parviflora. This well known shrub is the last of the horsechestnuts to flower and its tall narrow spikes of white flowers will not open before midsummer. Near this bed are beds of young plants of the yellow-flowered A. arguta, a small shrub from eastern Texas, and of the beautiful red-flowered shrub or small tree from the southern and southwestern states usually called A. austrina. Much attention has been paid to the formation of the Arboretum collection of horsechestnuts and it will well repay the attention of persons interested in a beautiful genus of now too little known trees and shrubs well suited for the decoration of northern parks and gardens.

Among the American magnolias in the group on the right-hand side of the Jamaica Plain entrance M. Fraseri is already opening its large cream-colored flowers which are conspicuous on the ends of the branches. This small tree is a native of the southern Appalachian Mountains and is perfectly hardy in the Arboretum. The small, bright canary yellow flowers of M. cordata open almost at the same time. This magnolia was sent from the United States to France more than a hundred years ago and is now only known in the descendants of the trees cultivated in France, all attempts to find the wild trees in recent years having proved unsuccessful. This is a shapely, desirable and perfectly hardy ornamental tree. The leaves are dark rich green; the abundant flowers are of an unusual color for those of a magnolia, and the second crop of flowers which these trees usually produce in summer adds to its value. The cultivated trees produce no seeds, and as it can only be propagated by grafting Magnolia cordata is rare in collections.

Some of the most beautiful and interesting shrubs now in flower will be found among the bush honeysuckles. The decorative value of some of these can best be seen in the grass border by the Bussey Hill Road, opposite the lilac group, where several of these shrubs have been so planted that they have abundant space for full development and can show all their beauty of foliage, flowers and fruit. In the shrub collection there are a large number of these plants, and others can be found in the supplementary collection in the border on Linden path in the rear of the group of Linden trees. In the shrub collection several interesting species are in flower or will soon be in flower. Attention is called to Lonicera syringantha and its variety Wolffii from western China, with purple fragrant flowers, and to L. tibetica. Two charming plants in this collection are L. amoena and L. amoena Arnoldiana, the latter a product of the Arboretum. They are garden hybrids, with slender pink flowers, of the Tartarian honeysuckle, with L. Korolkowii, a species of central Asia. Other honeysuckles now in bloom which should be examined are L. bella, a large and vigorous hybrid of L. Morrowii with the Tartarian honeysuckle, L. minutiflora, remarkable in beauty of its brilliantly colored fruits, L. notha, a hybrid of the Tartarian honeysuckle with L. Ruprechtiana of eastern Siberia, L. minutiflora from central Asia, and the slender and graceful L. coerulea firciliflora with its beautiful drooping flowers. Of the shrubs introduced by the Arboretum into New England gardens none is now more generally cultivated or has proved more valuable than L. Morrowii from northern Japan. This in cultivation here is a broad high bush with wide-spreading branches clinging close to the ground. The pale blue-green leaves are pleasant in tone, and the yellow flowers are produced in the greatest profusion. This remarkable shrub, which has been largely planted in several of the Boston parks, appears to grow here more vigorously than it does in its native country.

On Azalea path the red-flowered Rhododendron (Azalea) Kaempferi is in flower. There are masses of this plant on both sides of the lower end of this path and between the hemlocks and the laurels at the northern base of Hemlock Hill. The shade and coolness of this position suit this inhabitant of the high mountains of Japan, and it flowers later here than on Azalea path and the flowers remain longer in good condition. These flowers, in front of the dark background of hemlocks, make one of the most brilliant shows of the Arboretum season.

The earliest of the American Rhododendrons to flower, R. carolinianum, is opening its flowers in the collection at the base of Hemlock Hill. This is a southern plant with handsome, very dark green leaves and small clusters of bright pink flowers. It grows at a considerable elevation on the Appalachian Mountains and although it was known in England and recognized as a distinct variety as early as 1810, it was afterwards confused with another southern species, R. punctatum and entirely lost sight of; and it is only recently that a comparison of the two plants in cultivation has shown the differences between them. It is perfectly hardy and a valuable garden plant. R. punctatum is a plant of lower altitudes with smaller leaves and flowers; it blooms several weeks later and is a less valuable plant.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Elliott's Madbury Outing.

Florists and gardeners of Boston and vicinity to the number of 140 or more arrived at Madbury, N. H., by special train, May 21, at 11 o'clock to be the guests of William H. Elliott, proprietor of the Rose Farm. The visitors were met at the depot by Mr. Elliott and a number of automobiles were on hand to convey them to the farm, which is but a short distance from the depot. The visitors first went on a tour of inspection through the extensive greenhouses and they were shown all places of interest about the large farm.

Mr. Elliott has recently had a large new barn erected on the farm near his residence and the barn had been converted into an ideal dining room for the day. The large barn was handsomely decorated and patriotic colors were very much in evidence at the residence and through the barn. The dining room was decorated with many American flags and red, white and blue bunting together with the flowers raised there. At two o'clock a fine banquet was served by Caterer Arthur W. Simpson of Madbury and his efficient corps of assistants. The long tables were loaded down with all the choice viands of the season. At the close of the banquet there were post prandial exercises, short speeches being made by many of the guests.

At the close of the post prandial program, Mr. Elliott had a large number of automobiles in waiting to take the party for a drive through the country including a visit to New Hampshire College. Mr. Elliott had arranged a fine program for the entertainment of his many guests and they had nothing but words of praise for the hospitality which he extended them during their visit.

American Peony Society.

The tenth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held at the Grays Armory, Cleveland, O., June 12-14, in connection with the peony show of the Ohio Horticultural Society. Copies of the premium list can be had on application to Secretary John N. Stockwell, room 218, City Hall, Cleveland, O.

Chicago Peony Show.

The peony show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago has been set for June 12-13 at the Art Institute, date subject to change as the condition of the crop warrants. The premium list is now ready and includes medals and cash prizes. Copies may be had on application to R. J. Haight, Rand-McNally Building, Clark and Harrison streets, Chicago.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society announces the following dates of exhibitions in June, 1913: Peony and rhododendron exhibition, June 7-8; special exhibition of peonies, schedule classes Nos. 192-207 to be shown, June 14-15; rose and strawberry exhibition,

June 21-22. The committee on prizes and exhibitions will be glad to receive suggestions from exhibitors and others interested in the society concerning the arrangement of the schedule of prizes and exhibitions for the year 1914.

Plant Culture Under Calico.

Intensive cultivation of land is now under discussion everywhere, and how to make the best of every available inch it may be one's lot to cultivate. I hope to be able to explain in the following notes some of the uses to which calico can be put in horticulture, and at the outset I may say I have tried it for many subjects during the past eight years, and have found it very useful indeed, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, published in London, Eng. In the first place, it is very light and mobile, as well as being comparatively cheap compared with the cost of glass. I am prepared to admit that it is not so generally useful, nor will it take the place of glass, but some subjects will thrive so well under it that I strongly advocate its use.

I generally purchase calico at about 2½d. to 3¼d. per yard, taking several rolls of about ninety yards each. The width is twenty-eight to thirty inches, and those pieces with strong texture and not much starch dressing are selected. For general use I cut it into about thirty-five-yard pieces, and sew three pieces together with the machine, allowing a lap of about an inch, so, when finished, I have a sheet of thirty-five yards long by seven feet and a few inches.

For the building of one of my calico greenhouses I obtain a quantity of ¾ x 2 x 8 feet tile laths, and some of five feet in length, and these make frames five feet by eight feet, each frame containing five pieces of eight-foot lath and four of five-foot lath, nailed together with 2½-inch wire nails. The eight-foot laths lie on top of the five-foot ones. It will require twenty-one of these frames on each side of our house, 42 in all. I next obtain eight pieces of timber 2 x 4 x 14 feet as a "top-rail," and lay it on the ground where the center of the house is to be, putting the ends close together; at each end I drive into the ground securely a post of 2 x 4 inches, and about seven feet long, so that the top rails may each rest on it two inches, and be secured with one four-inch nail in each end. At the middle of the top rail I put another post of 2 x 4 inches crossways, to prevent the top rail from tipping. We have now the center of the house complete. For side rails a lighter timber may be used, and 1 x 4 inches is heavy enough, and posts 2 x 2 inches; the latter, instead of being six feet out of the ground should be four feet. The rail must be nailed up securely, and when completed we have three rows of posts eight feet apart, with a rail on each. In gauging be particular about having each rail exactly eight feet from the other, or the frames will not fit. The next business is to put the frames on, and secure them with one three-inch nail in each of the four corners, not driven quite home, but left so that it can be withdrawn without injury to the frames when the house has to be removed. When the frames are fastened the house looks like a greenhouse in course of construction.

Take the sheet of calico and draw it over the structure; roll one end round an eight feet  $\frac{3}{4}$  x 2-inch rod, and secure this with two three-inch nails at one end of the building. Roll the calico round a similar piece at the other end, and nail down after pulling as tightly as possible. Do this on either side, and then stretch a single width of calico over the top of the house. Place some more lights, bottom upwards, on the house to keep the calico down, nailing them as before at the corners. The ends of the houses can be closed with calico fastened with some laths 3-16 x 1 inch. Where a house is exposed to wind it pays to put two colds on the top of the calico under the top lights. I use New Zealand two-ply, because it does not stretch unduly. The sides can be formed with wood, bags, Russian mats, tiffany, hessian, grey calico, or old calico not fit for the top put on double, and secured with sawn laths nailed on with inch wire nails.

For chrysanthemum growing I generally have three houses together, and use a spout between them. For this I ask the timber merchant to cut a fourteen-foot piece of 2 x 2 inches angleways, and then nail these angles on the top outside edges of the 2x4x14 feet.

I erect these in the same way as the top rails, and line them with roofing felt when erecting the houses.

This makes them waterproof. Other adaptations of such a house will readily occur to a practical man. Frames can be made instead of houses, for instance.

The great crop that is grown in these houses is chrysanthemums, and they succeed splendidly. Many growers cultivate their decorative varieties out of doors, then lift them, and either pot them, about September, or plant them under glass. I plant six rows, twelve inches apart, in the centre of the house, then leave eighteen inches as a path, then three more rows. About September, when early frosts are expected, I erect the houses, but put no calico on until really compelled to do so by wind, rain, or frost. Often it is not necessary to put the sides or ends on until late in November. The whole of the early ones will open fit for cutting with no other protection than the sheeting. If the calico is stretched tightly it carries off the water as well as a good umbrella, and when frost comes it freezes the moisture on the calico, so that it is a sheet of ice, through which no wind or air can pass, and thus it keeps out a good deal of cold. By heating such a house chrysanthemums may be grown till mid January.

For spring use calico is invaluable, when glasshouses are over full, and one does not know where to put half-hardy seedlings. A calico house is a great boon for pricking out asters, sunflowers, stocks, celery, etc.; it affords slight shade from the scorching sun, and protection from cutting winds or heavy rains, besides finding work under cover when the weather will not permit outside work being done. Chrysanthemum stools flourish all the winter, and the cuttings strike readily either in boxes or on nicely-prepared beds. In such houses a crop of winter parsley can be protected from the weather. I have sown quantities of aster and stock seeds with great success under calico, and, after taking the covering off for the growing period, put it on again when asters are in flower to keep the rain off.

Tulips and narcissi are a great success with this treatment, and for tulip, hyacinth, and narcissi forcing in quantity erect a house as already described, only lower by about two feet, and put another lot of calico on the underside of the lights. Benches of any rough wood are built, and some long litter put on them, and a very little soil; on these are placed the boxes or pots in which the bulbs are growing, and with an occasional sprinkling of water, and a day temperature of 60 degrees, flowers can be produced superior to anything under glass, both in coloring and length of stem. Under the benches rhubarb, sea-kale, and chicory can be grown. If bulbs are to be forced under glass it will pay to line the house with calico, as the subdued light gives a delicate coloring to the blooms that must be seen to be appreciated.

If it is not thought desirable for a house to be built, I should advise that the frames be made eight feet by five feet, and these be used as ordinary garden frames, but the calico can be stretched quite tight, and secured to each light with 3-16 x 1 inch sawn laths, so that we have lights of calico instead of glass, and under these frames cauliflower, lettuce, and parsley can be wintered, removing the lights altogether in open weather. When the lights are on more light will be admitted to the plants than when glass is used and covered with mats. When these plants are put into permanent quarters early potatoes may be planted, or annuals sown or pricked out. It may be found more convenient to fasten the calico to fifteen-foot laths, and roll it over a framework just as greenhouse shading is rolled. I have found that a bed of dahllas can be covered with the frames in September, and have sheeting thrown over them for two or three nights, and, as a result, they have been protected through the first frosts, and I have had plenty of dahllas till mid-November.

MINNEAPOLIS PARK SYSTEM.

The heating of these structures, if necessary, is carried out by means of a conical independent boiler fitted with three flows and three returns, 1½ inch, screwed to take gaspipe. I have a quantity of 1½ inch, 1¼ inch, and 1 inch gas piping, with fittings of all kinds. In the autumn I put two flows and two returns in a thirty-five-yard long case, and one flow and one return, 1¼ inch, in the midseason house, and when the house is cleared I take out the pipes.

After Christmas I fit up a forcing house, branching each flow pipe into two, and thus get five flows and the same number of returns in a forcing house, and a flow and return to run round a set of glass frames forty feet long, in which mint, radishes, and lettuce are growing. There is no difficulty about fitting such a boiler; the only requirements are a rise in the pipes to the air vents, and a fall back to the boiler, and that the supply cistern be higher than any other part of the system.

TACOMA, WASH.—Regretting that the best exhibition roses will have come and gone before the Montamara Feste in July, the Tacoma Rose Society decided May 16, to hold this year's show on Friday and Saturday, June 20 and 21. The exhibition will be held in the armory.

WALTHAM, MASS.—Ruane, the Florist, has opened a temporary store in the Lawrence building where the old American Express office used to be. There Mr. Ruane will have an excellent variety of flowers on sale and he will keep the north side demand supplied there until after Memorial day.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—P. A. Chopin, a local florist, became suspicious after cashing a check for a youth who represented himself as William Bastrop and chased him several blocks in a street car, finally handing him over to the police. The culprit fled when he saw Mr. Chopin following him but was outdistanced. He told the police he was James Giles of New York.

OREGON CITY, ORE.—June 7 has been fixed as the date on which the Oregon City Rose Society will hold its annual show, and it is expected that this year's exhibition will outrank all former displays in this city. Busch's hall has been secured for the showing of blooms and all exhibitors must have their displays on hand before 11 a. m., or else they will not be eligible for the large list of prizes that have been offered.

OBITUARY.

Wm. C. Trimble.

Wm. C. Trimble, senior member and vice-president of the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., Princeton, Ill., died of heart trouble at the ripe age of 82 years, seven months and two days, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Saturday, May 24, while playing croquet on the City Club grounds. He was born in Ohio and moved to Princeton in 1849, where he has since made his home. He leaves a widow and ten children, five sons and five daughters, all of whom, with the exception of two sons, are married. The funeral was held Monday at 3 p. m. at the residence, 501 East Peru street. The funeral offerings and decorations surpassed anything ever seen in Princeton. Mrs. Trimble and eight of the children were present. Some of the leading florists from neighboring cities who attended were as follows: Robert Simmen, La Salle, Ill.; Barney Katzwinkle, Mendota, Ill.; George Heath, Morris, Ill.; also Carl Erickson, Princeton, and Mrs. N. P. Colberg, Princeton.

Jean Rudolph Trumpy.

Jean Rudolph Trumpy died on the night of May 21 in the Flushing, N. Y., hospital. He was in his eighty-third year. About six weeks ago, while taking a bath at his home he slipped and fell, breaking his right hip. To a man of his advanced age such an accident was extremely serious and the situation was more complicated from the fact that neither he nor the members of his family realized for several days how serious was his injury. Mr. Trumpy was born in Switzerland, and came to this country when 26 years old. He was for many years connected with the Parsons Nursery, Flushing. He was one of the most successful propagators of nursery stock, and in fact, all kinds of plants, of his day and generation. He is survived by a widow and two daughters.

A. F. F.

H. I. W. Winfield.

Henry T. Wellington Winfield, who with Mrs. Winfield had conducted a retail flower store at 202 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., for about 25 years, died in his home above the store May 24. He was stricken with apoplexy May 12 and never regained consciousness. Mr. Winfield was born in Oxford, England, 65 years ago, receiving his early education there. He is said to have been a graduate of Oxford College. He had lived in Brooklyn for 26 years and was active in politics, being a member of the Seymour Democratic Club. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. James A. Jenkinson, and a son, Harold Winfield.

A. F. F.

Wm. C. Strong.

Wm. C. Strong, for many years owner of an extensive nursery at Brighton, Mass., died in New York city at the home of his son, May 14. He had been a resident of Waban, Mass., for 48 years but gave up active business 15 years ago. Mr. Strong had been four times president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He was a member of the Congregational Church and was highly respected by all who knew him. He leaves a son and two daughters.

Samuel D. Willard.

Samuel D. Willard, head of the firm of S. D. Willard & Co., nurserymen, of Genoa, N. Y., died there May 23, aged 78 years. He was widely known in the nursery and fruit growing business.

The Sweetest Time o' Year.

It's getting time o' year just now when May swings into bloom,
And all the peach and apple trees are reeking with perfume,
A panoramic glory gilds the morning in the East,
With an iridescent glamor of a mighty sumptuous feast.

The blackbird in the hollow and the robin in the tree,
Are shouting hallelujahs up to heaven and to me;
The forest trees are budding with a freshness rich and rare,
And pronounce a benediction through the blossom-scented air.

The South wind in his rambles, searches ev'ry shady nook,
And gathers sweetest perfume from the blossoms by the brook.
The sun in gorgeous splendor smiles upon the sprouting grain;
The flowers nodding to and fro are welcoming the rain.

I love to hear the droning of the husky bumble bee,
As he tumbles through the meadow in a muffled ecstasy,
I love to hear the ripple of the bustling little rills,
And the music of the breezes as they kiss the daffodils.

There is something that is pleasing ev'ry minute of the day,
When Maytime brings the blossoms out and flutters her banners gay,
All the glories of the seasons in a single bunch appear,
For the blossoming of Nature is the sweetest time of year.

It's part of my religion I would like to have you know,
That a loving smile's an antidote for ev'ry human woe.
It's a trite and useful saying and its secret I'll impart,
When your thoughts are with the flowers there's no winter in the heart.

SUBSCRIBERS should renew promptly to insure regular delivery of the paper. The yellow address label on the paper shows date of expiration.

WE shall be pleased to have reports of the Memorial day business from all of our readers for next week's issue. Reports mailed Saturday, Sunday or Monday will reach us in good season.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high-grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved, as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

Attention, Florists' Clubs.

To the secretaries of the Florists' Clubs of the United States:

Please send the number of members of your club to the secretary of the S. A. F., John Young, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

By so doing you will greatly oblige,
A. FARENWALD.

Society of American Florists.

The following is the preliminary program of the twenty-ninth annual meeting and exhibition to be held in the National Guards Armory, Minneapolis, Minn., August 19-22, 1913. The program for the sports is not yet complete. The list of events, etc., will be included in the program when it is mailed to the members at a later date. It will be necessary to have the 1913 button for admission to the hall and meetings. This button has been sent to all members who are in good standing. It will save time and confusion at the convention and facilitate the work in the secretary's office very much, if the members who are in arrears, will remit their 1913 assessment promptly to the secretary, upon receipt of which the 1913 button will be sent them.

The floor plans showing available spaces in the trade exhibition, are now in the hands of the printer and will be mailed within a week. Inquiries are arriving at the secretary's office from all sections of the country, which show the wide-spread interest that is being taken in this convention, which undoubtedly will be one of the most successful in the history of the society. Exhibitors desiring space in the outdoor planting exhibition should take the matter up at once and communicate with the undersigned, who is superintendent of the trade exhibition, or write directly to Theo. Wirth, Court House, Minneapolis, Minnesota, the vice-president of the society, who is making strenuous efforts to make this outdoor planting exhibition one of the great features of the convention.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

DISAGREEABLE WEATHER.

Business has been fairly good all week but there was plenty of stock of all kinds to go around and no shortage whatever was reported. Carnations have had a good call and what little fancy stock there was cleaned up quickly at good prices. The unfavorable weather of the past week has affected trade considerably and consequently stock has suffered also, especially carnations, which in most cases were unfit for shipping any great distance. There was, however, a brisk demand for them the opening of the week, when the best red and white easily brought four cents and in some instances as high as five cents each. The poorer grades, though, were more plentiful and sold for much less. Peonies are arriving in quantity and, like the carnations, have suffered considerably from the weather, and many of the dealers are complaining because the fresh stock quickly drops its petals. One dealer says that he has watched his stock very carefully and does not remember a season when the fresh flowers dropped their petals so quickly before. Sweat peas have also suffered greatly and there is now much inferior stock to be had. Roses are good property now and many of the dealers look for a shortage before Memorial day. Yellow roses have advanced considerably in price. My Maryland is arriving in good condition and is in good demand. Richmond are also good but they too show the effects of the weather. Killarney and White Killarney are arriving in quantity but are moving well this week. Sunburst is in good demand. American Beauty has been in good supply but the fancy grades clean up quickly at good prices. The supply of young stock is more plentiful, especially the shorter grades. Lily of the valley is in fair supply. Cape jasmines have made their appearance but are moving none too well. Orchids are seen in larger supply and daisies, gladioli, snapdragons and other miscellaneous stock is still to be had in quantity. There seems to be a shortage of stock in some sections of the country, for some of the nearby markets are buying heavily in certain lines. At this writing, Wednesday noon, the weather is ideal and the stock is now arriving in much better condition. Short roses are very scarce and peonies seem to be holding their own. Roses will probably clean up well and from present indications all good stock will be pretty well sold up before the big day is over.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. was fortunate in having a large crop of carnations for Memorial day in addition to a heavy cut of roses and other seasonable stock. The supply department is having a good run on holiday goods and the plant department at Morton Grove is having about all the business that it can properly attend to. A new lath house is being erected for this branch of the business.

Peter Olsem's Carnations finally won a game of ball on May 25 when they defeated the crack Lenbons by a score of 4 to 2. The game was one of the best played in Joliet this season and the victory was due mostly to the work of Olsem's newly-acquired battery, Fisher and Offerman.

Harry Manheim visited Hoerber Bros.' greenhouses in Des Plaines on May 25 and found the crops of roses and carnations in fine condition for Memorial day. He says that Hoerber's new concrete chimney is well under way and will be completed soon.

W. E. Lynch, with A. L. Vaughan & Co., will leave next week for an indefinite stay in the east where his family is now awaiting him. Ernest Farley has returned from Indianapolis and is now in the employ of A. L. Vaughan & Co.

Zech & Mann moved into their new store at 30 East Randolph street on May 26 and are now in a better position than before to take care of their ever-increasing business.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is receiving a fine grade of peonies and are well supplied with stock for Memorial day.

Wietor Bros. cut heavily in roses and carnations this week and had a fine line of stock for Memorial day. The carnations especially were in good crop and some fine blooms were obtainable this week at the store. Bonfire was in fine shape and came in handy for the shipping orders. N. J. Wietor says that the planting is well under way and that their business last season as a whole was very satisfactory. Milady and Mrs. Chas. Russell, the two new roses, will be given a trial next season.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a large quantity of American Beauty roses from young plants now in addition to a good supply of My Maryland, Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney. Tim Matchen says that orders are very numerous for Memorial day and are still arriving in every mail.

Vaughan's Seed Store employes will have an outing at Western Springs, June 1, when there will be a baseball match between teams representing the store and the nursery.

Special prizes for the coming peony show are offered by E. E. Pleser, W. W. Barnard Co., Peterson's Nursery, Vaughan's Seed Store and Kennicott Bros. Co.

H. Van Gelder says that Percy Jones' sales for the past 44 days have shown a great increase over those during the same period of last year.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant next Thursday, June 5.

The North Shore Florists and Nurserymen's Association will meet at Winona Hall next Monday, June 2.

M. C. Gunterberg is still receiving a small supply of orange blossoms.

August Barnett, formerly with E. H. Hunt, is now with Erne & Klingel.

T. E. Waters has returned from Duluth, Minn., where he was called to give expert testimony in the Viasias-Gregory Co. case, which was held last week in that city. He also visited the establishments of J. J. LeBorjous and the Duluth Floral Co. while he was there, and found the proprietors very busy with spring work.

Jack Byers, the Chicago Carnation Co.'s right hand man, accidentally took a swim on May 25 when he was overhauling a launch in the Lincoln park lagoon. Jack says the water was fine but advises his friends to wait a few weeks before donning their bathing costumes.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is showing a fancy grade of peonies, as well as roses, carnations, sweet peas and other choice stock. The Memorial day trade has been very good so far, carnations especially being in brisk demand.

F. Jerome of the American Importing Co., and several of his force will leave some time in June for Europe to select stock for next year's business. Mr. Jerome expects to add a line of ribbons and baskets soon.

Fred Klingel has had a great deal of sickness in his family lately, both of the twins being seriously sick. They are a great deal better at this writing and an early recovery is hoped for.

George Perdikas has been featuring sweet peas in quantity the past week in all of his three loop stores, which command a good transient trade.

The peony show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago has been set for June 12-13 at the Art Institute, date subject to change as the condition of the crop warrants. The premium list is now ready and includes medals and cash prizes. Copies may be had on application to R. J. Haight, Rand-McNally Building, Clark and Harrison streets, Chicago.

The Auburndale Goldfish Co., which recently moved into larger quarters at 1449 Madison street, expects another large shipment of goldfish soon. Miss K. N. Cooper's many friends in the trade are pleased to find her again attending to her duties at the store.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has a tremendous supply of baskets in stock at its large salesroom at 713 Milwaukee avenue which includes everything in the florist's line. This firm will again be an exhibitor at the next S. A. F. convention.

C. L. Washburn will leave on June 29 for a visit with relatives at Pasadena, Calif. He will return in time to allow Bassett & Washburn's store force to enjoy their regular summer vacations.

Henry Wittbold had a large decoration in Evanston this week. He is now receiving a large supply of huckleberry foliage, the green that made Finn famous.

John Kruchten says that Nelson Fischer was his best offering in carnations this week and that the blooms all sold quickly at fancy prices.

The Florists' Club sports committee, Edgar Winterson chairman, will meet at the Union Restaurant next Thursday, June 5, at 7 p. m.

The E. C. Amling Co. is featuring some very choice peonies at present in addition to a complete line of other seasonable stock.

Chas. W. McKellar received his first local grown peonies this week. Orchids are more plentiful now at this establishment.

Frank Oechslein's plant trade has been very brisk and this year's Memorial day trade promises to be one of the best ever.

Peonies hereabouts have been badly damaged by frost this month, probably 20 to 50 per cent of the buds being crippled.

W. W. Randall, with the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from a western business trip.

The Chicago Great Western has been named the Official Route of the Chicago Florists' Club to the Minneapolis Convention, August 19th to 22nd.

The Chicago Florists' Club will leave Chicago by Special Train at 6.15 p. m., August 18th, an invitation is extended to all eastern Florists and their friends and families to join them at Chicago and go to the convention in a body.

Special train will be "up-to-the-minute" throughout—including compartment and drawing room and standard sleepers, Buffet Club car, dining cars, Observation parlor, etc., etc.

Louis Visias of this city is suing his landlords for $5,000 damages he alleges he suffered by loss of flowers because the stipulation as to temperature was not complied with and for other reasons. Mr. Visias says that according to the terms of his lease the temperature was to have been kept at at least 50° Fahrenheit, but that it dropped below 40° at times and many plants were damaged as a result. He also charges that in spite of his objections the defendants leased an adjoining building to a man in the gasoline engine business and that the fumes from the gasoline had a detrimental effect on plants and flowers.

MUCH WASTE STOCK.

The weather opened up very warm the first part of the week and the counters at the wholesale houses were well filled. Peonies, lilies, lily of the valley and Pink Killarney roses were very numerous and quite a number of flowers were consigned to the dump pile. Planting out is about finished. Very dry weather is reported in the country. Memorial day and two weeks in June will about finish up the season's work. At the time of this writing the weather is cloudy and cool.

NOTES.

The Jacquemin-Lambach Floral Co. is making a fine display of French imported dracenas which cannot be told from the natural kinds at a distance. This firm also has a fine assortment of artificial wild flowers which are used very much in decorations.

The Red Bird Floral Co. has vacated its temporary store on Sixth street next to the Columbia theatre. The building will be torn down and remodeled.

By mutual agreement the five wholesale houses have decided to close at noon Saturdays from June 1 to October 1. This will prove a boon to the employes.

The Mullanphy Flower Co. and the Bentzen Floral Co. seem to be very busy. Their machines can be seen daily in all parts of the city.

O'Leary, the Florist, has installed a very handsome ice box in his new store. He makes a very neat and choice window display.

John Held has had a fine supply of geraniums. The plantsmen have called on him heavily this season and he is still filling orders.

The Alexander Floral Co. is disposing of the most of the flowers it grows at the retail store on Locust street.

Fancy ferns are more plentiful now than usual at this season and are being sold cheaper than ever before.

The indoor sweet peas are coming now with short stems. These come in handy for funeral work.

Charles Cannon is attending to business at his brother John Cannon's place at Webster Grove.

Ostertag Bros. have been very busy during the past week with funeral work.

Grimm & Gorly had some large wedding orders during the past week.

Cape jasmines are in and will hold the fort for a week or ten days.

Outdoor roses are in and make quite an inroad on the regular stock.

Quite a number of Shasta and yellow daisies are on the market.

Peonies during the latter part of the week were very plentiful.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is in with early asters.

Many of the Kirkwood growers are in with peonies. W. F.

Maywood, Ill.

Weiss & Meyer Co.'s new range is nearly completed and the proprietors expect to have the houses ready for planting next month. American Beauty roses will be grown. Mr. Meyer will have charge of the greenhouses and Mr. Weiss will manage the business.

little against the crop but at that the flowers were of good quality and compared favorably with others seen in the Chicago market.

A. F. Amling has received his six-cylinder Franklin touring car, which is indeed a beauty. His manager, Mr. Collatz, has placed an order for a six-cylinder Studebaker.

Hugo Luedtke was discharged from jury service in the municipal court this week. He is at present cutting some fine snapdragons.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Stock of all kinds has been in sufficient supply to meet all demands the past week. Pink and white Killarney roses are in fine shape, both as to color and large blooms, and will continue throughout the next few weeks. Local American Beauty roses are off crop, although enough short stemmed stock is arriving to meet all demands. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Richmond are in good demand and the quality is fine. Kaiserin, the peerless white rose for summer, is arriving in fine shape, and orders for quantity and quality are well taken care of. Carnations were almost a glut the middle of last week, but cleaned up by Saturday. Sweet peas are plentiful, some very fine butterfly varieties having first call. Retailers have a fine variety from which to make their selections, of which the following are a few: snapdragon, mignonette, calandula, canterbury bells, lupins, snowball, daisies, forget-me-nots, gladioli, peonies, orchids, narcissi, centaurea. It looks as if local peonies will miss us for Memorial day, but there will be enough of the Maryland and Southern peonies to meet all demands. String smilax was exceptionally scarce the last few weeks, and what there was to offer was short. The supply of greens is equal to the demand. A few calla lilies still arrive, while Easter lilies are quite plentiful. Cut pansies are hard to get as most greenhouse men are busy planting out and will not take the time to cut them. Lily of the valley is not overplentiful. A fine lot of hydrangeas in 8-inch pots sold out very quickly, also a lot of spirea, both pink and white, in smaller pots, sold exceptionally well. Potted lily of the valley was in for Mothers' day, but arrived a little late. It sold remarkably well, however, under the circumstances.

PEONY STOCK FINE.

Peonies are now the feature and all danger of their scarcity for Memorial day is over, as the cool weather of the past week retarded their flowering season and the big crop will come the week of the holiday when they are most in demand. The stock is very fine. Festiva Maxima is seen in large quantities and is of course one of the best sellers. There are quantities of roses, although American Beauty is not any too plentiful, all the other sorts are a trifle ahead of the demand. However, the special and better grades move well at fairly good prices. Carnations are notably smaller and in fair demand. Outdoor sweet peas are now coming in. The heavy rains of the past few days have hurt some, but the next few weeks should see some fine stock in this line. Snapdragon is still a factor. Gardenias grade much lower. Cattleyas are ahead of the demand. C. Gigas is seen in quantity. The flowers are fine. Calla lilies are about done. Good stock of the longiflorums find ready sale. Corn flower, especially the double, is in demand. Greens are about equal to the demand, except smilax, which is scarce at high prices.

NOTES.

Fairmount park is now a very beautiful spot. The hemlocks and the Colorado spruce are full of the new growths, the silvery points of which are as beautiful as flowers. The rhododendrons are at their best, being profusely covered with great heads of bloom. Most of these are planted to the south of the horticultural hall in a somewhat sheltered spot and have grown into plants eight to ten feet in height. They are planted in clumps of several colors each. One of the features of the rose garden is a long bed filled with a row of Gruss an Tepitz, which, covered with its brilliant red flowers, is the admiration of all visitors. The fancy bedding is in a transition state. The beds of pansies bordered with white English daisies have done well but are finished and are to be replaced with cactus in a week or so. The depressed plateau will soon be filled with fancy bedding.

At H. A. Dreer's there is a little respite from the extraordinary rush of the past six weeks. Their spring business has been phenomenal. In another week their trial rose grounds will be an interesting spot for the rose men. It contains the largest and finest collection of the newer sorts in this country.

It is reported that Charles Henry Fox is to receive $10,000 for his lease from the Ritz-Carlton hotel. The Weightman estate will in addition provide him with a new location on the property 221-223 South Broad street, a few doors below his present location.

The Joseph Heacock Co. reports a splendid season. A run on Scottii ferns was a feature the past week. A very fine stock of young kentias in various sizes are crowding the houses, and are being repotted as fast as room can be made for them.

B. Eschner of the M. Rice Co. is investigating the retail business of Europe and thinks that the leaders of the trade in this country suffer little by comparison. His early purchases are arriving.

Edward Reid, one of the first in this city to have an automobile for pleasure, but which was a great help to him in a business way, wore out his old one and now has another. It will be of great help.

American Beauties, tea roses and peonies are the features at the Niessen store. Great quantities of stock are turned out here in a day. Outdoor sweet peas are also a feature.

Berger Bros. are featuring peonies, roses, carnations and sweet peas. They are much pleased with the increase of the business the past season.

The Jersey laurel is now on the market. Branches of this in full flower are very decorative. It is largely used in store decorating.

BUSINESS FAIR FOR SEASON.

While there is more or less complaint of dullness, business is as good as it can be expected to be at this season and is well up to the average of the past few years. Stock is comparatively cheap, but that is to be expected. Practically every stock is in abundant supply and considering the fact that many good customers of the retail stores have gone abroad, it is almost surprising that stock moves as freely as it does, even at low prices. Peonies are now much in evidence and some good stock is arriving, though there is much that is of inferior quality. Gladioli are also a noteworthy feature. There is a variety of other stock on the market from garden, field and wood, which sells cheap, but adds color to the great collection. While there will be considerable Memorial day business, this city is not noted for lavish expenditure on that day, much of the business being done by florists in the outlying towns near the large cemeteries.

Monday, May 26.—The supply of stock is not heavy, but there is enough to fill the demand. In roses and carnations much poor stock is arriving, the mildew having attacked many of the roses. As we have frequently stated, strictly first-class stock always commands a price. There are Killarney and other tea roses that are selling at $10.00 for one hundred and upward, but not many. There is considerable outdoor lily of the valley in the market which is hard to move at $1.00 to $1.50 a hundred. The greenhouse stock is generally disposed of at $3.00 a hundred. Fine stock of peonies is now coming in, but prices do not soar. The leading idea now is to keep stock moving.

NOTES.

The Lord & Burnham Co., having outgrown its old quarters at 1133 Broadway, is now located in the new Forty-Second Street building, at 30 East Forty-Second street, opposite the Grand Central station. This building is one of the many new skyscrapers that have recently been erected, it being 21 stories high. The Lord & Burnham Co. has very commodious, well furnished and well equipped offices and drafting rooms. W. R. Cobb, architect for this firm, has recently prepared plans, which we have been permitted to see, for a new store and conservatory for F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y. The plans show that when completed it will be one of the finest commercial florist establishments in the country. Work is now well under way and it is estimated that the total cost will be over $40,000.

The Greek-American Florists' Association held a meeting May 14 and elected the following officers: Jas. G. Carlafies, president; G. Cotsonas, vice-president; John J. Pellouris, secretary; P. Theophine, treasurer; P. Mantgoras, assistant secretary. New directors, term expiring 1915—D. Tryforos, D. J. Pappas, James T. Kaparell, G. Rontires, P. Velotas. The newly elected officers are all well known and popular men in the trade, which is ample assurance that the association is established on a firm footing. Elaborate preparations are being made for the annual outing of the association, which will be held at Witzel's Point View Grove, July 9. This association has, in the past, made a fine record with its outings and the coming one will be as good and probably a little better than previous ones.

Chairman Philip F. Kessler of the outing committee of the New York Florists' Club, has mailed a request to every member of the club, asking for contributions to the fund for prizes for the children's sports at the annual outing at Witzel's Point View Grove, July 1. He has received many liberal responses but there are yet some members who have not been heard from. Doubtless in the rush of spring business they have overlooked or neglected Mr. Kessler's communications, but as this is a very important matter it is hoped that every one will soon respond. The steamship Isabelle will take the party to the Point, and Chairman Kessler assures us that he expects more prizes and more fun than in any previous years; also plenty to eat and drink.

At a time when many retailers are complaining of dull business we were pleased to find one May 24 who was well pleased with the volume of trade coming into his store. This was Herman Kuhn, 896 Sixth avenue. On May 21 he had a wedding at Trinity church with a home decoration for the same event, all of which called for a large amount of stock. On the same day Mr. Kuhn made up three casket covers, in which many orchids were used. On May 24 he sent out nearly fifty boxes of flowers to prominent customers, many orchids being included. In addition, he sent several of his men to Albany in charge of a large number of fine funeral pieces.

We recently noted a very fine window display of orchids and other choice flowers at the store of Geo. D. Nicholas, 2059 Seventh avenue. Mr. Nicholas has for many years been an active and interesting man in the business and conducts a fine store. One of his original ideas for this year is a pocket calendar with a handsome cover design, which he gives to friends and customers.

We learn that the Pierson U-Bar Co. has secured the contract for the erection of the greenhouse on the roof of the new Thos. H. Galvin building, Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street. Work is being rapidly pushed on this structure.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on the evening of June 9. This will be the last meeting before the summer vacation and is sure to be an interesting one, as various matters of importance will be discussed.

Frank Millang has removed with his family to his summer home at Yorktown Heights, Westchester county, for the summer. He will be one of the grand army of commuters who come to town every day to attend to business.

We noted at the store of J. Battinelli, 219 Mulberry street, a large amount of fine funeral work. Mr. Battinelli is one of the bright young men of the downtown district who has built up a good trade.

Ralph Armstrong, of Madison avenue and Forty-Seventh street, will open a new retail store on Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I., June 1.

Alfred T. Bunyard had a fine dinner decoration on May 21 at the Hotel Savoy, in which over 1,000 Radiance roses were used.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

At the regular meeting of this club we had for an essay a paper by Beyer of La Park, on bedding plants and their culture. The subjects he enumerated were as follows: abutilons, ageratum, alternantheras, browallias, begonias, caladiums, coleus, fuchsias, geraniums, lantanas, lobelias, pansies, petunias, salvias, verbenas, vincas, antirrhinums, asters, alyssum, chrysanthemums, dahlias, heliotropes and others. The paper was well received and afterward Rudolph Nagle gave a very interesting talk on his experiences in southern France. A representative of the H. F. Michel Co., Philadelphia, was with us and expressed surprise at the number of members present at the meeting (over forty out of a membership of a few over fifty), and told us of the good times that are coming.

The picnic committee reported having made arrangements to picnic at Hershey, where there is a picnic park of over two miles in length with all the requisites for a good time, and as we will be partly the guests of Hershey and taken through his estate and the chocolate works it will be quite an affair. Any florist between the Arctic circle and the Antaretic snow-capped hills is welcome to come with us July 14 or 15, date to be announced later. The president appointed Harry Rhorer, Chas. B. Herr, Jacob Flear and others as a serving committee and refreshments were served and a general social time indulged in.
