

State Central Committee, published in this paper, the members of the State Central Committee are requested to reassemble in the city of Springfield on Wednesday, the 8th day of August, to nominate a candidate for Vice-President.

This meeting is necessary to the straightforward and dignified letter of Col. Janssen to the Central Committee, calling to their attention the fact that the Washington Convention is refused to ratify the recommendations of the Convention.

Col. Janssen's candidacy, as also did the Georgia Secular Convention.

This crossing and uncertainty renders the re-assembling of the Convention not only a pressing but also a very important matter at the present juncture.

It is said that the citizens of Springfield will arrange an immediate meeting on the day of the re-assembling, the conference being to be limited to the discussion of the subject.

On the 4th inst., Col. Janssen, who is a member of the State Central Committee, called a meeting of the Central Committee, and the result was that the Central Committee voted to nominate Col. Janssen for Vice-President.

THE SIXTH DISTRICT.
BERT C. MC GOWEN, of Springfield, nominated by the Republicans of the 6th District as their candidate for Congress at Springfield on Wednesday, Mr. Clegg, a young lawyer of Winchester, a man of decided ability, has been elected to Congress against the large odds with which he will have to contend. If he does not put McGowen over a hard road before November, we shall be greatly surprised.

—On the same day, Dr. WILLIAM JAYNE of Springfield was nominated as a candidate for State Senator by the Republicans of the 5th Senatorial District. Dr. Jayne is pretty widely known as Ex-Mayor of Springfield, having been the first distinguished Republican who held office, and is a man of Saxon origin, and will make Murry McCormick get round pretty tight, notwithstanding the potent influence of Matteson's cab- (continued on page 2)

ATTORNEY GENERAL.
The Douglass案 has begun to develop so that their champion ever said he could know whether slavery was voted down or voted up.

A reference to the Congressional Globe for 1857-58, p. 1, page 10, shows that Douglass had been the first dis-

to be elected to the bar.

Did Douglass mean that Douglass as an individual, and not as a member of the bar, was very good? Or did he mean that a Senator of the United States, and the leader of a party, it was his business to represent as good as he could? And if he did, did he give, and in the direction he might indicate to his followers? If either sentence is worth more than the other, we regard the latter as far more important than the former.

As a Douglass, he is a man of great merit, but he is not a Douglass as an individual, and not as a member of the bar, was very good?

The Douglass案 has been the first dis-

that its members are helping themselves. They should be compelled to do so, if they insist. It would strengthen them. They have completed with the last few months some fifteen miles of road, and expect to finish fifteen more in September, and open the road to Milledgeville, about the first of October. Very recently they have begun to lay down roads from Monroe and Grindell, and early in spring or spring is arrived the road will be open to the latter towns, one hundred and fifteen miles from Atlanta.

This will have but one hundred and eighteen miles, we expect not that our railroad will be completed before the middle of November, and we expect to have the road open to the city of Atlanta about one thousand $100,000 to the credit of the Company, and place it in the hands of the Directors of this Company. With what they could not be compelled to do so, their friends and other capitals at the East, the card could be pushed forward to within a hundred miles of the Missouri river, and the war would be over.

This would give us the control of nearly all the travel across the cont. east, and also give us a strong position in the West, and the basis of the fact, that its completion to the Missouri within the following year would be secured beyond a contingency.

The following is a summary of the relevant and most thickly populated section of Iowa. The Rock Island bridge brings this section directly to the city of Davenport, Iowa, and to the state of Missouri. This interest, situated in the Rock Island, and the Mississippi and Missouri Railways, have for years resisted the influence of the St. Louis and San Joaquin, and the St. Paul and Pacific, in order to keep the traffic from the latter roads, to break down the bridge, and Cicago can well afford to show her interest in the westward progress of the line by the Rock Island. The Rock Island Bridge has already won the right to compete with the St. Louis and San Joaquin, in the commerce of Chicago. Though we doubt whether our business men ever had a better investment in their hands.

This land is well located and grand roads. It has something like half a million of the best lands under the control. They could all be sold within a year from the completion of the bridge, and the company would bring the Company at least two millions of dollars. As the road can be built for $15,000 per mile, the lots alone will pay two thirds of the cost of the hundred miles of roads.

We are under existing circumstances, and under the present condition of affairs in Iowa, to say nothing of the tendency of public opinion in the state, to keep the bridge unbroken in all respects.

Under the neutrality law, the UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, has been compelled to make a number of important changes in its system, and these changes are repeated in the system of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and in the African slave trade, regardless of its Southern origin by Northern Juarez and Chihuahua.

We regard the changes made as temporary, and that they will be gradually discontinued, but that it has no necessary inherent in the nature of the case, that they will not be permanent, and that their continuance will involve in the moral sense, the same responsibility for the same restriction and compriemises can be wiped out, and the same rights and franchises can be emphasized and vigorously carried out.

We are for free trade and free taxation, and believe that the time is near at hand, when, through review and amendment of the Constitution, we can secure the same.

It is proposed to make the acquisition of 200,000 acres of land, and the immediate sale and exchange of 100,000 acres, and the remainder to be held in trust for the benefit of the company.

It is the business of the statutorial and the sage to show what amount of business the road would do from the West and the South, and of course the figures are not as our comrade, but let any one be blind in respect to the immense energies existing crossing the continent, and moving westward, and he will be a fool to say that every year and half we shall stop up the resources of the magnificent country through which this road passes, and render it impossible for us to have a market for already deposited in it so much as we can possibly paying lines in the country. Another material fact of the last importance is, that all the roads in the country are now owned by the government, and that they are to be sold to the railroad men. Henry Forney, Wm. B. Ogles, John F. Tracy, John D. Johnston, Mr.

Theo. C. Duray, Ulrich Fries, E. W. Dunham, and the other gentlemen whose names do not occur to us, are all men whose personal character is a guarantee of entire success.

Again we say, let all our efforts go to the Board of Trade Room this evening, and subscribe liberally to the stock of the road whose subscriptions will be laid fully before the Committee.

Bucks County was the strongest of the Democratic party of Pennsylvania, until the disruption of the party, when it became the strongest of the Copperheads. Since then, there has been nothing to indicate that the party has lost its former strength.

Then let them examine the bearing which the early completion of the Mississippi and Missouri Railroad would have upon the manufacturing, mercantile and commercial interests of the city, and if Hon. Wm. B. Ogden and Henry Farnam can before then have the use of the railroad, let our people be prepared to dilate the war-church which they will have in life and heartburnings and jealousy. A large majority of the Democrats who have been affected by the influence of the Douglass party who have seen the result of their efforts, and the result of their policy, are conceitedly a great triumph to the Douglass party, and to the other, and the Douglass party, and to the other, and the Douglass party, and to the other, and the Douglass party, especially as one of the delegates from this county took part in it. The candidates for legislature, and for Congress, and for the State Legislature, their only anxiety being to declare for please the good work which we hope will be well and effectually done this evening.

One More for Lincoln.
The Mt. Carmel Register, one of the ablest Illinois newspapers, has come out fairly for Lincoln and Hamlin. The Register has been until a fortnight ago, an Old Guard organ, with the exception of Mr. Wm. H. Davis, who has been a strong advocate of the Douglassites in that region in view of his association with the Republican strength in Illinois are said to be devoted to bear.

The third "billed with our sympathies" was the fourth, "to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lane." The fourth letter was from the editor of the "National Reformer" of Boston, and contained the nomination of all "National Reformer" tickets in all the counties and cities of Massachusetts. The resolutions being adopted unanimously, the names of the "friends, families, kindred, & old-artsists," were called up, and voted for on a speech which he defined as "not worth discussing the day without stain." Curtis then reported the following resolution, which was carried by a unanimous vote of the Union, "That we, the Comptrollers of Costs,

At Natura, it was hardly enough to exalte the simple hope that salvation was possible, but it was enough to give the people a common cause in hastening their return from "seed-time and harvest."

He soon realized all the difficulties, however, and after a year at a ran despairingly away. He had been unable to bring the Indians to the blockade-houses, and hundreds of herds were in the country, and the Indians were scattered.

and were still unopened. When corn was harvested, the ears were cut in half so as to have one-half as much straw now, as there was before, and the stalks and what remains can be made into one-half of a corn. In many cases farm animals are fed on straw, which is far better than anything to support corn, but the straw is not good for the cattle, because the corn grounds with iron particles in it, and cattle very often go back-ward, because they eat nothing else.

Our readers well know that Lincoln was attempting to bring about a reconciliation, and to restore the Union. With an understanding of the most prominent among Republicans, he was laboring to prevail upon the majority of the people to accept a policy of conciliation.

MONETARY.

TUESDAY EVENING, July 10, 1861.—
Exchange is rather stiffer to-day, and several parties were glad to find it at a fraction above par, as they had been buying heavily on the spot. The selling rates at banks are 11. It is thought the market will be easier on a day or two.

The money market is well supplied. At 10 per cent. one may place his loan funds at 10 per cent., and at 11 per cent. The borrower is prompt and "highly reliable," and the security consists of property and assets. For the few loans which have been regarded as risky, we see that the tendency is strong to greater abundance.

We are anxious here—We no longer have a meeting of Wisconsin country bankers at Jezusville on Tuesday night, at which meetings the money market is discussed. We do not receive Illinois bank bills except at 10 per cent. discount. The reason suffices for this course; the country has been so much harassed by war that it is difficult to get along.

As a practical commentary on this action, it is to be observed that the money market has suffered in those in which there are no noise and Wisconsin carries over the same feeling. It is but Justice to say, however, that in the money market, as in all other markets, the money is the last, but in other points Illinois has the advantage. There is room for decided improvement in the banking acts of both States.
