On the 17th of April, 1791, the State of Pennsylvania granted to "The Society of the United Brethren for Propagating the Gospel among the Heathen," commonly known as the Moravians, two tracts of land of 2,500 acres each, with allowance, to be located respectively on "the River Connought, near the northwestern corner of the State," and "on the head of French Creek." This association had long maintained missionaries at its own expense among the Indians, and the above generous gift was intended by the State as a remuneration in part for the service it had rendered in behalf of peace and good will. In locating its lands, the society chose 2,875 acres within the limits of LeBœuf Township, and 2,797 in Springfield and Conneaut, paying for the excess in money. The French Creek tract was given the name of "Good Luck," and that on Conneaut Creek the title of "Hospitality." The agent of the society for many years was William Miles, who was succeeded on the failure of his health by his son, James Miles, as Manager of the "Hospitality," and by John Wood, of the "Good Luck" tract. The land was occupied on lease till about 1850, when it was bought by James Miles and N. Blickensderfer, cut up into farms, and sold in the main to the present owners or their predecessors. The Moravian grant extended from the Wilson Moore farm to within about a mile of LeBœuf Creek, and lay principally upon the north side of French Creek. P. G. and John D. Stranahan made the first purchase of Moravian lands in 1849, the latter moving from Concord the same year, and his brother in 1854, both locating at what is now LeBœuf Station. The Academy grant, at the mouth of LeBœuf Creek, embraced 500 acres of the richest soil in the county, donated by the State for the support of Waterford Academy. The lands were sold off about 1840, having been previously occupied on lease. North of this grant was a large body of land known as the Reserve tract, from the fact that the State reserved or withheld it from settlement under the general law to encourage emigration. Of the Reserve tract, 400 acres extended into LeBœuf, the bulk being in Waterford. An act was passed in 1799, throwing the land into market, and most of it was bid off at low prices about the commencement of the century. The Holland Land Company held some 400 acres west of Mill Village, which were sold off between 1802 and 1810. It was their purpose to have taken up an extensive tract within the township, and they sent surveyors out to that end in 1796. George Fisher, of Dauphin County, took up twenty-seven 400-acre tracts at an early period, lying within the limits of LeBœuf, Waterford and Washington Townships. This property he divided with Col. McNair in 1824, and the same year the portion belonging to the latter was disposed of at Sheriff's sale. The remainder fell to Mr. Fisher's children in 1845, who sold it off at intervals ending in 1873.

The beautiful grove on the Flats road between Waterford and Mill Village, opposite the residence of William Hunter, deceased, was a favorite place for religious meetings for many years. Tradition says this was a choice camping place for the Indians, and it is certain that numerous Indian graves and relics have been found. On the Hunter place was once a circular mound, sixteen to twenty feet in diameter, with banks four to six feet high, on which trees were growing of a size indicating an age of 150 or 200 years. The remains of one of these pre-historic circles are also to be seen near the home of C. M. Wheeler.

COMMON ROADS.

The principal thoroughfares of LeBœuf Township are the old Waterford & Susquehanna Turnpike, once the great highway between Lake Erie and Eastern Pennsylvania, which follows the valley of LeBœuf and French Creeks, to Pollock's bridge, where it cuts across the hills to Cambridge; the Erie & Warren road, which passes through the township by two routes that unite near the Stranahan bridge; the Flats road, from Mill Village to Waterford; the road from Mill Village to Union; and the road from Mill Village to Pollock's bridge, connecting with the turnpike. Most of these are in a fair condition. The township has the benefit of two railroads—the Philadelphia & Erie, extending across the northeastern part, for about three miles, and the Atlantic & Great Western, following French Creek nearly to the center, where it deviates to hit Mill Village, and then returning to the valley further south. LeBœuf Station, on the Philadelphia & Erie, consists of some tenement houses for the railroad men, a number of farm houses, and a long platform for handling lumber and stone, of which great quantities are shipped from the quarries near by. LeBœuf possesses the largest and best quarries of building stone in Erie County. The bluff from which the stone is taken extends along French Creek from near Dunlap's mill to opposite the residence of A. L. Tilden, a distance of about a mile, and averaging about thirty feet in height. The material is a blue sandstone of fine quality, more durable than the far-famed Berea stone, but saturated with oil, which spoils it for the highest class of work. Three quarries have been opened, known respectively as Seuger's, Henderson & Canty's, and the Atlantic & Great Western.

CHURCHES.

The churches of the township are the Union or Manross, on French Creek, near Pollock's bridge, a Methodist Episcopal at Edenville, and a United Brethren near New Ireland.

The Methodist Episcopal society at Edenville was organized about 1839, and was placed on the Cambridge Circuit. In 1844, it was changed to Rockville, in 1849 to Waterford, in 1855 to Cambridge, in 1857 to Rockville, in 1861 to Union, in 1863 to Waterford, and in 1865 to Mill Village, to which circuit it has ever since belonged. The congregation began by worshiping in the schoolhouse, and continued to do so until 1855, when the Edenville Church was built at a cost of $800.

The Manross Church edifice was built at a cost of $3,000 in 1869 by John W. Manross, who intended it to be used by religious bodies generally. The first minister officiating there was Rev. Mr. Barnhart, a Methodist. It has since been used principally as a Methodist preaching place, the appointment having been on the Mill Village Circuit since the erection of the edifice.

The United Brethren Church, located near New Ireland, is the outgrowth of a revival held in that neighborhood in 1876. Preaching of this denomination had years before been held in the neighborhood, but the society had ceased to exist until revived and re-established as above stated. The church building was erected in 1877, and was dedicated on the 6th of January, 1878, by Rev. John Hill. In 1876, it was styled Mill Village Mission. It has since, for periods, been a missionary church, and at other times connected with Union Circuit. It now forms a part of Union Mission. Revs. R. McIntire, Root, W. H. Childs and Starkey have preached for this church. The present pastor is Rev. W. H. Childs.

SCHOOLS.

In the Ford neighborhood, some two and a half miles north of Mill Village, a schoolhouse was standing in 1820, in which at that time a summer school was taught by Miss Elizabeth Strickland; a later summer teacher was Hannah Hall. The winter school was taught by James Skinner. Other teachers in the building at about this time, and perhaps a little subsequent, were Stephen Skinner, Paddy McGill, Cyrus Nutt and Thomas Graham. This schoolhouse was known as the Smith Schoolhouse, and it served that portion of Le Bœuf Township for many years. A log schoolhouse was built in the north-eastern corner of the township west of French Creek about the year 1822, which was burned after several terms of school had been taught in it, and another schoolhouse was erected on a branch west of French Creek on land now owned by James Stranahan. Among the teachers in this portion of the township, at about the period spoken of above, were Sophia Sackett, a Mrs. Ward and a Mr. Crownstar. In 1825, a log schoolhouse was built by the people living in the vicinity of the United Brethren Church near New Ireland. Early instructors in this house were Nathan Mallory, Mr. Reynolds and Miss Emeline Sloan. Le Bœuf has at this writing twelve school buildings, all of which are frame.

PUBLIC MEN.

The citizens of LeBœuf and Mill Village, who have held State and county positions, are as follows: Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1837-38, James Pollock. Assembly, James Weston, 1813, 1814, 1815 and 1822; John D. Stranahan, 1868-69. Sheriff, James Weston, 1810-13. County Commissioners, James Weston, 1803-04; James Pollock, 1830-33; A. L. Tilden, 1878-84. Director of the Poor, William Bracken, 1846-49 and 1859-62. Auditors, Thomas Pierce, 1844; John Wood, 1847; E. K. Range, 1875-78. Mercantile Appraiser, H. L. Minium, 1883. Perry G. Stranahan, Jury Commissioner from 1867-70, was long a resident of LeBœuf, moving from there to Union about 1859. Alfred King, ex-Mayor of Erie, and Prothonotary from 1854-57, and his brother, Wilson King, County Surveyor from 1827-33, are grandchildren of Capt. Robert King, the first man who took up lands in the township. John Clemens, a prominent business man of Erie, is a son of one of the first settlers in the township.

VILLAGES.

Edenville consists of the church mentioned above and perhaps a dozen dwellings. Formerly the site boasted a store, post office, saw mill, oil refinery and blacksmith shop. The village went down after the construction of the A. & G. W. Railroad, which diverted the trade and travel to Mill Village. The settlement is on the road from the latter place to Union, in the south part of the township. The locality known as New Ireland is on the road from Ford's bridge to Lincolnville, about a mile and three-quarters east of Mill Village. A church, a school and a few dwellings make up the village, if such it can be called. Quite a settlement has grown up around C. M. Wheeler's mill, in the northeast part of the township, which gives the site very much the appearance of a small village. Mr. Wheeler alone has five dwellings and eight barns, besides which there are a cheese factory and some farm buildings.

The late William Hunter was one of the wealthiest farmers in the south part of the county, leaving an estate supposed to be worth about $50,000. He came to LeBœuf from Forest County about the close of the last war, and having plenty of ready money, realized from the sale of oil territory, was enabled to buy some of the finest land in the township. Mr. Hunter died in the spring of 1869, leaving thirteen children.

BOROUGH OF MILL VILLAGE.

The borough of Mill Village occupies a pleasant site nearly in the center of LeBoeuf Township, from which it was taken, and about a mile from French Creek. The town owes its origin to Mill Run, which flows through its limits, and unites with the chief creek of the township a short distance beyond. Three saw mills with their attendant buildings, sprung up along Mill Run, which gave the settlement the name of Milltown. When the A. & G. W. road was built, the station was called Mill Village, and in 1860 was incorporated as a borough by that title. Before the opening of the railroad, there was nothing on the site, in addition to the mills, but a cooper shop, blacksmith shop and a few houses. Now it has become a brisk town, with a population, according to the census of 1880, of 388. The idea of laying out a town was conceived by William Kingen, and the survey was made by Judge Benson, of Waterford. The plat includes portions of the farms of Mr. Kingen, P. H. Colt, John Gregory, H. M. Range, E. K. Range, David McKinley, James Hunter, F. N. Reynolds, W. C. Ford, M. S. Edmunds and G. W. Gillett.

The manufacturing establishments of Mill Village are one cheese factory, built in 1870 by H. B. Ames; one planing mill, one stove mill, one cider and jelly mill, one steam saw mill, three blacksmith shops, one wagon shop and a shoe shop. The business houses in 1883 were one drug store, two groceries, three general meat stores, one hardware store, one millinery store, one furniture store, one meat market, one jewelry store, one paint shop, and a portable photograph car. A good hotel is kept on the temperance plan. Among the most creditable buildings is the Union Schoolhouse, which furnishes accommodations for two schools on the first floor, and the second story of which is used as the town hall of the borough and LeBœuf Township. The Knights of Honor have their hall in Kingen's building, the Grangers in the hotel, and there is a public hall in Beardsley's building.

The churches of Mill Village are a Methodist Episcopal and a Presbyterian.

The Methodist Episcopal Church dates its beginning prior to 1810, when Erie Circuit was a four weeks circuit of about 200 miles, and composed of twenty-three appointments. In 1810, Rev. Joshua Monroe was in charge. The most prominent of the appointments were Brush's meeting-house in West Springfield, Erie County; Leech's, on Little Shenango; Mumford's, near Meadville; Pit Hole; Mrs. Mitchell's, in Venango, and Ford's on French Creek Flats, in Erie County. This latter class formed the nucleus from which sprang the church in question. The preaching was held in the dwelling of Capt. Robert King, and subsequently in that of one of the Fords. The first church building was erected in 1850, about one-half mile south of the village. In five or six years this building was destroyed by fire, when the church edifice in the village was erected, which was enlarged in 1878. The appointment for a long time was on the Waterford Circuit, and from that circuit it was placed on the Mill Village Circuit at its formation in 1865. H. M. Chamberlain is present pastor.

The Presbyterian congregation was organized by Rev. J. M. Gillett, then pastor of the church at Union Mills, in 1870, with fifteen members. The building was erected in 1872, costing $2,800. The present incumbent is Rev. M. Wishart, who has the charge at Waterford also.

The assessed valuation of the borough in 1883 was as follows: Real estate, $75,469; cows, 44; value, $1,039; oxen, 3; value $150; horses and mules, 44; value, $3,256; personal property, $4,445; value of trades and occupations, $5,020; total assessment for county purposes, $84,934; money at interest, $13,716.

The Mill Village Herald, the only newspaper of the borough, was started by C. C. Wright in January, 1876. It was purchased in October, 1882, by J. S. Ross, who is still its proprietor and editor.

CHAPTER V.

VENANGO TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF WATTSBURG.

VENANGO RIVER was the name given by the French to the stream afterward called by the English and still known as French Creek. It is a corruption of the Indian word Innungah, which is said by Mr. Day, in the Historical Annals of Pennsylvania, to have had reference to a rude and indecent figure carved upon a tree near the mouth of the creek, which the Senecas found when they drove out the Eriez and took possession of this region by the right of conquest. The township of Venango received its title at the organization of the county. It is bounded on the north by Greenfield, on the east by French Creek Township, Chautauqua County, N. Y., on the south by Amity, and on the west by Greene. The township has regular lines, and is nearly square, having a width of about six and a quarter miles by a breadth of seven. The population was 490 in 1820, 683 in 1830, 812 in 1840, 1,019 in 1850, 1,301 in 1860, 1,650 in 1870, and 1,445 in 1880. The east line of Venango, Greenfield and North East Townships forms the boundary between Pennsylvania and New York, which is exactly on a parallel with the western extremity of Lake Ontario. It was established in the year 1788 by a joint commission of Pennsylvania and the United States, leaving a Triangle which was subsequently purchased by the State. Venango Township is within the Triangle, and its south line is a part of the original northern boundary of the commonwealth. The villages are Lowville and Phillippsville, both of which have post offices. The highest point in Erie County is said to be in Venango Township, near the Greenfield and New York lines.

By the assessment for 1883, the township contained 25,595 acres, and was valued as follows: Real estate, $553,458; cows, 994, worth, $17,892; oxen, 48, worth $1,925; horses and mules, 381, worth $15,680; personal property, $35,497; trades and occupations, $3,975; money at interest, $28,141.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first white man who is known to have visited Venango Township was William Miles, who came out as a surveyor with David Watts in 1785, fell in love with the beautiful flats at the junction of the East and West Branches, and after going East to make his report returned in 1795 and took up 1,400 acres, including the site of Wattsburg. He was followed in 1796 by Adam Reed and his son James, who located 400 acres on the East Branch, and at a later period built the first grist mill in the township. Thomas Smith settled at Lowville in the same year, and was soon followed by Burrell and Zalmon Tracy. In 1797, John and David Phillips became possessed of 1,100 acres on which Phillippsville now stands. In 1798, William Allison and wife, from Northumberland County, with their son James, a boy of three years, settled near Lake Pleasant. From that year to 1800 a number of colonists went in whose names will be found in the list of taxables further on. In 1822, Lowville was settled by Samuel Low and his brother-in-law, Dr. Wright, both from Genesee County, N. Y. Timothy Butler and father, from Onondaga County, N. Y., made their settlements in 1816; John R. Smith about 1826, David Bailey in 1828, and Dr. D. T. Bennett, from Delaware County, N. Y., in 1829. William Biore, the Chapins, the Tituses, and others took up their residence in the township in 1830. The Norcrosses and the Davisons, who had located on the high lands west of Lake Pleasant, changed to Mill Creek. John Warren, another of the early settlers, moved to Erie in 1810. During the interval between 1810 and 1820 there was little increase, but about the latter year a new population, mainly from New York, commenced going in, whose descendants generally remain. For many years the nearest stores were at Erie and Waterford, and the nearest grist mills at North East and Union. Most of the early settlers were Scotch Presbyterians from the Susquehanna Valley. The first child was Robert, son of William Allison and wife, who was born in 1799, soon after his parents moved into the township. The first death was that of Adam Reed, in 1805. Samuel Henderson came with William Miles from Carlisle, Penn., in 1795. That winter he spent in driving pack-horses to and from the mouth of French Creek. He and his brother, Stuart, located 400 acres of land in the spring of 1798, and then went to Fayette County and married.

TAXABLES IN 1800.

The taxable citizens of the township in 1800 were as follows: William Allison, Hezekiah Barker, Philo Barker, Henry Bontz, John Boyd, John Carnahan, William Carnahan, Thomas Carnahan, John Clark, Thomas Davison, Sr., Francis, Robert, George, Arthur and Thomas Davison, Jr., John and William Dickson, Bailey, John and James Donaldson, John Dickson, Jr., Samuel and Stuart Henderson, Stephen Hazleton, James and John Hunter, Thomas Hinton, Jr., Robert and Wilson Johnston, John B. Jones, Caleb Lyon, David McNair, Joseph McGahen, William Miles, Barnabus McCue, Andrew Norcross, John, James M. and David Phillips, Thomas Prentice, James Perry, James M., Thomas E. and Robert R. Reed, Ralph Spafford, Thomas, Samuel and John Smith, Benjamin Saxton, Zalmon and Burrill Tracy, Nathaniel Wilson, John Warren and John Yost. In 1817, William Miles was assessed for 2,400 acres in Venango Township, most of which were at Wattsburg and Lowville. They were valued at $3,400.

POLITICAL.

The following is a list of the citizens of Venango who have held State and county positions: Canal Commissioner, John Phillips, 1826 to 1829. Assembly, John Phillips, 1809, 1810, 1811, 1812 and 1824; Wareham Warner, 1856 and 1857. Prothonotary, Giles D. Price, December 28, 1875, to January 1, 1882. Clerk of the Courts, Charles L. Pierce, November 20, 1867, to November 14, 1873. County Treasurer, John Warren, 1817; elected from Erie, where he had moved. County Commissioners, John Phillips, 1804 to 1807; Samuel Low, 1836 to 1840, elected from Harbor Creek, where he moved in 1834; Jacob Fritts, 1860 to 1863; Daniel W. Titus, 1875 to 1881. Clerk to County Commissioners, Giles D. Price, chosen in January, 1883. County Auditors, Samuel Low, 1832; Daniel W. Titus, 1872; C. R. Gray, 1878 to 1881. Col. J. S., M. Rush and Joseph Warner, well known business men of Erie, were born at Lowville. The first named was a Colonel in the Union army during the late war. D. B. Foote was a Captain in the same service, and Dr. S. F. Chapin a Surgeon.

WAR OF 1812.

Following is the muster roll of Company E of the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia, at the breaking-out of the war of 1812:

Captain, William Dickson; Lieutenant, Robert Davison; Ensign, Thomas Davison; Sergeants, Arthur Davison, John Dickson, David Phillips; privates, James Donaldson, David McNair, Bailey Donaldson, Thomas Johnson, John Hunter, Samuel Smith, George Davidson, John B. Jones, John Smith, James Smith, James White, Thomas Prentice, Samuel Henderson, Thomas Henton, Griffith Henton, William Henton, Zalmon Tracy, Burrill Tracy, Thomas E. Reed. Capt. Dickson moved from the county in April, 1813, and Lieut. Davison assumed command, continuing during the war. The company was called out in June, 1813, and for some time guarded the shipyards at the mouth of Cascade Creek, where Perry's fleet was building. They remained until the fleet sailed and were then sent home, but were ordered into service again when the news came in January, 1814, that the British had taken Buffalo.

STREAMS, LAKE AND BRIDGES.

Venango is one of the best watered townships in the county. The West Branch, which rises in Findley's Lake, N. Y., enters the township from Greenfield, and crosses its entire width from north to south, past Lowville and Wattsburg. The East Branch takes its rise near Sherman, N. Y., and coming in not far from the southeast corner, flows in a southwestern course into Amity, where the two unite near the township line, just outside the borough limits of Wattsburg. The West Branch, which is very crooked, has a length of about twelve miles in Venango, and the East Branch of about four miles. The tributaries of these streams are as follows: Of the West Branch, Middlebrook, Alder and Fritts Runs; of the East Branch, Stafford Run. Several streams start in the southwest corner of Venango and unite with French Creek proper in Amity.

Lake Pleasant, in the extreme southwestern part, near the corners of Venango, Greene, Amity and Waterford, is a beautiful body of water, about three-fourths of a mile long and a third of a mile wide, with a depth of twenty-five to fifty feet. Its outlet is a stream about the size of Le Bœuf Creek at Waterford, that never diminishes except in the driest seasons. After furnishing power to several mills, it falls into French Creek about three miles south, in Amity Township. The North East, Colt Station, Phillippsville & Waterford road, one of the first in the county, runs just above the head of the lake, and the Lake Pleasant road from Erie follows its east bank and outlet to French Creek.

The township owns one iron bridge over the East Branch at the Tanner place, and a covered wooden bridge over the West Branch at Lowville. All of the other bridges are ordinary open wooden structures. The one over the West Branch at Wattsburg was the first bridge in the county. It was built originally by the County Commissioners, through the influence of William Miles in 1822.

PUBLIC ROADS.

The chief avenues of Venango Township are the Erie & Wattsburg Plank Road; the old Erie & Wattsburg road by way of Phillippsville, which branches off from the former at the Siegel farm in Greene Township; the Wattsburg & North East, up the West Branch and through Greenfield; the Waterford & North East through Phillippsville and Colt's Station; the Erie & Lake Pleasant, by way of French Creek and the lake; the Wattsburg & New York, up the East Branch to Clymer and Sherman; the Union & Wattsburg; the Wattsburg & Corry; and the cross road from A. N. Woods to M. S. Rouse's. The old Erie road was opened in 1809, partially changed in 1828 and improved in 1832; the Waterford & North East in 1804; and the Wattsburg and North

Pliny Chapin

East in 1798. The latter was the great route for conveying goods between Lake Erie and the Allegheny until the road was opened between Presque Isle and Waterford. The Erie & Wattsburg Plank Road was commenced in 1852, completed in 1853 and abandoned as a toll road in 1865, after all the gates had been torn down by a party of indignant farmers. The road from Erie to Lake Pleasant was opened as far south as the Martin Hayes place in Greene, in 1821-22, and completed to French Creek in 1826-27. From Erie to Wattsburg by the Lake Pleasant road is eighteen and three-quarters miles; by way of Phillippsville eighteen miles, and by way of Lowville twenty miles, the latter route, however, having the advantage of better grades. Venango is without a railroad, the nearest station being at Union. In 1853, the Erie City Railroad Company was chartered to build a road from the bay of Presque Isle to the State Line, three miles from Wattsburg, where it was to connect with an extension of the New York & Erie from Jamestown, N. Y., making a continuous route between the lake and the Atlantic Ocean.

The valleys of both branches are quite wide, running from a mile to a mile and a half, and spreading out to about three miles at Wattsburg, where they come together. Along Alder Run, Middle Brook and Stafford Run, the flats are from a quarter of a mile to a half mile in width, and upon the outlet of Lake Pleasant they are very similar to those along the branches. The value of farm property is from $30 to $60 an acre in the valleys, and from $20 to $50 in the hill region. Most of the marketing is done at Wattsburg and Lowville. A good stone quarry has been opened on the farm of David E. Foote, and another on that of J. H. Sears.

MILLS, FACTORIES AND SCHOOLS.

The manufacturing interests of Venango Township are as follows, not including those of Wattsburg Borough: At Lowville—A grist mill run by water; a saw mill by steam and water, and a steam shingle and heading mill. The grist mill was built in 1822, has been remodeled since, and has frequently changed owners. At Phillippsville, a cheese factory. In other sections—A steam saw mill on the plank road near Robinson's Corners; a steam shingle mill on the farm of William S. Henderson; and a steam saw and cider mill on the farm of John H. Bennett, upon the East Branch. There is also a steam saw and shingle mill owned by Henry Jenkins, and Jones' steam shingle mill. Besides the above, there is a creamery in Amity, just outside of Wattsburg, where much of the milk in the south end of the township is disposed of.

The schools require two joint and eleven full buildings as follows: Joint schools—Wales, in the northwest corner, maintained by Venango and Greene; and the Venango and Amity, on the south line, near the center. Full schools—Milltown, in the northeast; Phillippsville; Titus, on the road from Phillippsville to Milltown; McNair, in the north part, near the center; Lowville (a graded school); Sears, a little northwest of the latter village; Henderson, in the north; Maple Grove, on the old Erie road; Moore, on the Wattsburg & New York road; Wicks, on the cross road from Wood's Corners to the State line; and Tower, on the same road.

Not far from the year 1818, a school was held in the dwelling of B. Tracy, situated about one and a half miles east of the present borough of Wattsburg, taught by a Mr. Lewis. In the Phillippsville settlement, about the year 1833, a frame schoolhouse was erected not far from the present site of the school building now at that village. A log schoolhouse had previously been used by the settlement, in which taught at one time Amanda Tracy. Among the teachers in the frame house were Norman Chapin, a Mr. Pelton, and Benjamin Grant. Later teachers in this neighborhood were William Wood and Miss Sylvia Brown. In the summer of 1819, Ann Riddle taught a school in the neighborhood of the old Middlebrook Meeting-house. Near the line between Venango and Greenfield Townships, but in the former, stood what was known as the Campfield Schoolhouse, in which school was taught during the decade beginning with 1822 (at periods) by Warren Loomis, Milan Atkins and Lorenzo Rogers.

CHURCHES.

The religious edifices of Venango are a Methodist Episcopal Church each at Lowville and Phillippsville. The Lowville congregation was organized in 1875, and built its house in 1876, at a cost of $2,500, Rev. J. A. Kummer being the first pastor. This appointment is on the Wattsburg Circuit, with which it has been ever since its organization.

The congregation at Phillippsville was organized some years prior to 1848. The church building was erected in 1862, on land deeded to the society by Norman Chapin. In 1849, this charge was on the Wesleyville Circuit, with which it continued until the formation of Greene Circuit in 1864. It is now on Greene, the pastors of which since that period have been as follows: S. L. Wilkinson, J. K. Mendenhall, T. D. Blinn, C. L. Barnhart, R. D. Waltz, W. Hoover, J. Akers, Z. W. Shaddock, I. N. Clover, A. Bashline, J. C. Ridout and J. O. Osborne. In addition to the above congregations, the United Brethren hold services in the Macedonia and Wick's Schoolhouses, and the Methodists in the Tower Schoolhouse.

THE MIDDLEBROOK CHURCH—GRAVEYARDS.

The Middlebrook Church, the first house for religious worship in the county, stood about a mile and a half north of Lowville, along the Wattsburg & North East road, upon a tract of two acres deeded by John Warren to the congregation, to be held as long as used for church and cemetery purposes. The first services, held in August, 1801, in the woods on the east bank of the West Branch, near a spring now owned by Enos Mann, were attended by every man and woman in the township, the young men having previously cleared the ground and provided a pulpit and seats by chopping down and squaring the timber. At their conclusion, a motion by John Hunter that a church building be erected, was eagerly adopted. On the next Thursday, all the able-bodied men and boys met, concluded upon a site, and put up a structure—all within the same day—which though more modest than modern churches, doubtless afforded the people as much satisfaction. The first church was replaced in 1802, by another of more pretentious style, built of hewed and split logs. Services were regularly held in this building, until the Presbyterian Church at Wattsburg was erected about 1828, when most of the congregation dropped off. Rev. Absolom McCready was the pastor in charge for a time. He was succeeded, in 1802, by Rev. Robert Patterson, who continued until April 22, 1807, having charge at the same time of the congregation of Upper and Lower Greenfield. The congregation at Middlebrook continued to decline until April 30, 1829, when it was dissolved and attached to the one at Wattsburg.

In the Middlebrook Graveyard were interred the bodies of many of the foremost Presbyterian pioneers in the county. Most of the remains have been taken up, and the old burying place is no longer interesting except from its associations. The other cemeteries and graveyards of the township are the Lowville, Wattsburg and Phillippsville, the old Butler Burial Ground on the James W. Davis place and some family inclosures.

VILLAGES.

The pleasant village of Lowville is on the West Branch of French Creek, eighteen miles southeast from Erie, and two north of Wattsburg. The Wattsburg Plank Road runs through the place and constitutes its main street. Besides the mills, church and school above noted, Lowville contains the town house of Venango—a frame building 24x40 in size and 16 in height, built in 1872, at a cost of $675—one dry goods store, one general store, one grocery, one wagon shop, one blacksmith shop, one shoe shop, and about thirty houses. It has a lodge of the Knights of Honor, organized in 1877, with twenty-nine members. The Lowville Cemetery, a tract of four acres, on the bank of the creek, contains some costly monuments, is neatly laid out and carefully kept, and a credit to the place. Several soldiers of the last war with Great Britain are buried in the cemetery. Lowville owes its origin to the enterprise of Samuel Low, who moved there in 1822 from Genesee County, N. Y., and established the grist and saw mill. Mr. Low's business proving unsuccessful, in 1834 he changed to Harbor Creek. Col. Wareham Warner carried on a tannery at Lowville with success for some years, but collapsed about 1860 or 1861. The village contained ninety-nine inhabitants by the census of 1880.

Phillipsville was founded by Gen. John Phillips, of political fame, who took up a large quantity of land in 1797 in company with his brother David, and opened a tavern about 1810 on the Waterford & North East road, a few rods west of the corners, which has been torn down. The village is fourteen miles from Erie and five from Wattsburg, in the midst of a beautiful rolling country, at the crossing of the Waterford & North East road by the old Erie & Wattsburg road. The village contains, in addition to the church, school and mills before referred to, a dry goods and grocery store, a shoe shop, and a blacksmith shop. It has about a dozen residences, and numbers probably sixty people. There is an organization of the State Police and a Grange, the latter possessing a hall of their own. The cemetery covers two acres, and is fairly kept up.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A NATIVE OF THE TOWNSHIP.

The following interesting reminiscences were contributed to the Erie Observer of May, 1880, by James D. Phillips, of Union City, a son of one of the pioneers of Venango Township:

“Thomas Phillips, with his sons John, David and Thomas, Jr., and his daughters Elenor, Hannah and Polly, moved from Northumberland County, Penn., in the year 1797. His daughter Elenor married John Hunter, Polly married Burrill Tracy, and Hannah married Nathaniel Wilson. John Phillips took up 1,400 acres of land, Thomas, Sr., 200, and David 200 acres. Messrs. Yost, Donaldson and others followed about the same period. James Phillips, son of Thomas, Sr., and brother to John, David and Thomas, Jr., moved from Lancaster County, Penn., in 1827. He left Waterford on the morning of the 1st day of June at sunrise, and cut the road most of the way to Phillipsville, a distance of eight and a half miles, arriving at sunset. James Phillips died in 1846 at the age of seventy-five years and eight months. James D. Phillips, son of James Phillips, and grandson of Thomas, Sr., is now the only living representative of the Phillips family in this county. John Phillips was Paymaster General in the war of 1812, under Gen. Harrison. He received his money, to pay off the army, in silver at Pittsburgh, and carried it through the wilderness to Fort Meigs on pack-horses. He served for years as the first Representative of this county in the State Legislature at Lancaster; afterward, he was appointed Canal Commissioner of the State, and subsequently was appointed and served as Justice of the Peace for several years. He died in the fall of 1846. The first post office at Phillipsville was established in 1829. James Phillips, father of James D., was appointed Postmaster. A post route was established at that time from Jamestown, N. Y., via Phillipsville, to Erie. The mail was carried by Mr. Polly on foot from Jamestown to Erie, with nothing from Phillipsville to Mill Creek Township to mark the way through the wilderness except blazed trees. The county at that time was a home for the bear, the wolves and the deer. Levi Butler and sons Jackson and Timothy, from Onondaga, N. Y., made their settlement in 1828-29. The first schoolhouse was built in the year 1828, of logs. * * * The grist and saw mills were at Lowville, Colt's Station, Lattimore's, at Waterford, and Miles, at Union Mills. The mode of getting to Erie from Phillipsville was via Colt's Station, North East and then up the Buffalo road to Erie, a distance of twenty-eight miles to get the distance of fourteen miles across. Had no roads for wagons, and consequently used oxen and sleds in the summer or winter to carry our produce and get household supplies, salt, etc. The products of Venango Township at that time were maple sugar and black salts—the salts taken to Colt's Station and sold for $2.50 per hundred, half cash and half store pay; the cash part to pay taxes and to buy leather for shoes. We paid our school teacher $12 a month in maple sugar at six cents a pound."

BOROUGH OF WATTSBURG.

The first clearing at Wattsburg was made in 1796 by William Miles, who built a storehouse as a depot of supplies for the surrounding country and for the purchase of furs. At that time the headquarters of the Population Company were at Colt's Station, and all the trade between the lake and the Allegheny was carried on in canoes up and down French Creek. The first road was opened to North East, by way of Greenfield, in 1800. In 1809, through the persuasion of Mr. Miles, joined to that of the Russells, of Belle Valley, and others, the county opened a road from Erie to the Forks of French Creek, as the site was then called, which, in general, followed the route of the old Wattsburg road, though it was afterward changed in some places. Previous to 1822, the West Branch had to be forded, but in that year Mr. Miles got the county to build a bridge on the same site used for the purpose to-day. This was the first permanent bridge erected in Erie County. During the same season he erected a grist mill and saw mill, and in 1822 he induced Lyman Robinson, a surveyor at North East, to move over and build a tavern. He located in 1795 on the head-waters of Oil Creek, near the Crawford County line, in Concord Township, where he remained until 1800, when he changed to Union. In 1828, Mr. Miles laid out Wattsburg, naming it after his father-in-law, David Watts, of Carlisle. In February of the same year, he had a post office established at Wattsburg, and at the same time a weekly mail route was opened between Erie and Jamestown, by way of the infant village. The mail was carried for years on the back of a man, who walked the whole distance. Mr. Robinson acted as agent at Wattsburg for William Miles for many years, and after his death served in a similar capacity for his son James Miles. The large tract of 1,400 acres taken up by Mr. Miles was not originally in his own name, but in that of Watts, Scott & Co.

INCORPORATION.

Wattsburg was incorporated as a borough in 1833, its limits being thus described: "Beginning at French Creek where the old State line crossed the same, being the south boundary of Venango Township; thence east along said line 100 perches; thence north 180 perches; thence west 180 perches, more or less, to the creek; thence southward by its windings, to the place of beginning." The town stands on the wide and fertile plain just above the junction of the two branches, twenty miles by the plank road, eighteen by the old road, and eighteen and three-fourths by the Lake Pleasant road from Erie, and eight miles from Union. It contains three church buildings, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian and Baptist. The Methodist Episcopal congregation was organized in 1827, by Elder Knapp, who went there as a missionary in 1820. The first edifice was erected in 1831, and the present one, which cost $3,400, in 1861. H. H. Moore was pastor for 1881, 1882 and 1883. The circuit embraces Wattsburg, Lowville and Hatch Hollow.

RELIGIOUS.

The Presbyterian congregation, organized in 1826, is the legitimate successor of the old Middlebrook society, the history of which is given in the sketch of Venango Township. The first church was built in Wattsburg about 1828, and the second in 1855, costing $1,350. The pastor when the first building was put up was Rev. Absalom McCready, who began preaching for this congregation in February, 1826, and the following April his time was divided between the two congregations. His installation took place on the second Tuesday of September, and he severed his pastoral relation with the church October 1, 1833. In November of that year the Wattsburg Church was recognized by the Presbytery as a separate congregation. Rev. Alexander McCandless became the successor of Mr. McCready and served until April 1, 1834. Revs. O. Fitch McKean, and J. B. Wilson preached for the congregation at Wattsburg, in the order given, from 1834 to 1837.

The Baptist Church at Wattsburg was organized April 6, 1850, with twenty-two charter members. On the 25th of that month the church was duly recognized. The meeting-house was erected in 1851. The pastors of the church have been Revs. F. Kidder, J. W. C. Covey, James A. Newton, S. Akerly, W. J. Hughes, and C. W. Drake (closed labor in 1872 on account of sickness). In 1875, he renewed his pastorate and remained with the church until 1877. For several years following, the church had no regular pastor. Rev. Charles Bowman became pastor in 1881 and remained about one year. The charge is now without a pastor.

SOCIETIES, ETC.

Wattsburg is the headquarters of no less than three secret societies—a Masonic Blue Lodge, instituted in 1875; a lodge of the Knights of Honor, in 1877, and a Grange, in 1874—all of which are in a flourishing condition. The Masonic Lodge commenced with seven members, C. R. Gray being first Master, and has increased to twenty-eight. This society and the Grange have creditable halls of their own. There is also a branch of the State Police, established in 1877, a co-operative insurance society, and a section of the Sunday School Scientific Circle of Chautauqua Lake, which latter holds frequent meetings for the discussion of Biblical history. The manufacturing establishments are a grist mill, saw mill, sash factory and two planing mills run by water, a handle factory and a sash and blind factory owned by Wood & Page, run by steam. There is also an extensive broom and fork handle and shingle factory carried on by Patterson, Gross & Baldwin. The water-power afforded by the two branches of French Creek is considerable, and, with railroad facilities, the town could not fail to become a point of importance.

BUSINESS FEATURES.

Among the business interests of the borough, other than those mentioned above, were (in 1883) one tailor shop, one dry goods store, three groceries, four general stores, two furniture stores, one wagon shop, one hardware store, one clothing store, one meat market, one hotel, two shoe-shops, four blacksmith shops, one jewelry store, one drug store, one bakery, one photograph gallery, one dental office, one harness shop, several millinery stores, one barber shop. A roller skating rink was built and opened in the summer of 1883. The town gives support to four physicians, two attorneys, two Justices, one dentist, and one draughtsman. It is the headquarters of three stage lines—one running to Union and back each day; one to and from Erie daily, by way of Phillipsville and Lowville; and one to North East twice a week by way of Lowville and Greenfield. Wattsburg has been a famous butter market for thirty years. "Wattsburg butter," which includes the produce mainly of Amity, Venango and Greenfield, ranks as "Chautauqua butter" in the New York market and brings the same price. The schools are held in one large and substantial frame building. The population of the borough was 286 in 1870, and 389 in 1880.

The assessment for 1883 gave the following results: Real estate, $65,675; cows, 29; value, $850; horses and mules, 63; value, $4,085; personal property, $4,935; trades and occupations, $8,025; money at interest, $9,915.

Before the era of railroads, Wattsburg was a place of more consequence, comparatively, than now. It had a tract society in 1828, and an agricultural society in 1856. The first temperance society in Erie County was organized in Wattsburg in 1828. In 1832, a project was agitated for a new county, to be called Miles, with Wattsburg as the county seat.

PUBLIC MEN.

The following State and county officers have been residents of Wattsburg: Assembly, Lyman Robinson, 1842 and 1845; Byron S. Hill, 1863 and 1864; Samuel F. Chapin, 1875 to 1878; A. W. Hayes, 1881 to 1884. County Superintendent of Common Schools, William H. Armstrong, 1854 to 1860, the first incumbent of the office. County Commissioner, Lyman Robinson, 1839 to 1842. County Treasurer, Newton T. Hume, December 14, 1874, to January 7, 1878. Director of the Poor, O. J. McAllister, 1883 to 1886. Jury Commissioners, D. N. Patterson, 1868 to 1871; Robert Leslie, 1874 to 1877. Mercantile Appraisers, James T. Ensworth, 1856; D. N. Patterson, 1868 and 1878; O. J. McAllister, 1882.

SCHOOLS AND NEWSPAPERS.

In the immediate vicinity of the present large and commodious school building in the borough in 1821 stood a schoolhouse, in which school was held by John Brown. The schoolhouses of the borough have all been situated on almost the same site. Among the teachers have been a Miss Roberts, Wm. H. Armstrong, Lucius Chapin, David Shafer, Phineas Platt. The present schools consist of three departments, which were graded by R. P. Holliday in 1878. Mr. Holliday is still Principal of the schools, and has two assistant teachers. The average enrollment is about 100 pupils.

The first newspaper published in Wattsburg was an eight-page weekly styled the Chronicle, begun in 1878 by W. A. Moore, and discontinued in about one year. In 1881, the Wattsburg Occasional was started by R. P. Holliday. Mr. Holliday was then Principal of the Wattsburg Schools, and the paper was started as a kind of a school paper, devoting its columns principally to school matters. As its name indicated, it was only published occasionally. In 1882, it was made a semi-weekly, and subsequently a weekly paper. It is still the village paper, and has not changed hands. The mechanical work is executed at Union City.

CHAPTER VI.

HARBOR CREEK TOWNSHIP.

THE earliest location within the limits of Harbor Creek Township was made by Thomas Rees, who took up a large tract of land, long known as the Rees Reserve in 1796. He was the first surveyor in the county, having been appointed by the Population Company in 1792, but was prevented from entering regularly upon his duties until the spring of 1795, by the threats of the Indians. He did not become a resident of the township, however, until some years after. The first actual settlers were William Saltsman, Amasa Prindle and Andrew Elliott, who went in in 1797. These were followed by Hugh McCann and Alex. Brewster in 1800; by Thomas Moorhead, John Riblet and sons, John, Christian and Jacob Ebersole and the Backus family about 1801, and by Ezekiel and Benjamin Chambers in 1802. Mr. Moorhead's father, and brothers John, Robert and George, came in at intervals running from 1802 to 1806. Robert Scott, Thomas Greenwood, Robert Jack, John Shattuck, Aaron Hoag, Henry Clark, Andrew Culbertson, Thomas Bunnell and the Caldwell brothers were among the first settlers. Several of these persons were from the eastern portion of the State; the others were mainly from New England and New York. Mr. Saltsman was from Northumberland County; the Riblets and Ebersoles from Lancaster County; Mr. Clark from New England and Mr. Elliott from Ireland. The Riblets and Ebersoles were the first of the "Pennsylvania Dutch" stock that settled in the county. A man by the name of Jack was on the Jesse Ebersole place in 1802. Dr. Ira Sherwin made his location in the township in 1825. William Henry and brother settled in Mill Creek in 1803, and changed from there to Harbor Creek. The descendants of these pioneers generally occupy the land to-day. Mr. Brewster cleared thirty acres, which he abandoned and moved to Erie. Sarah Prindle was the first female child born in the township, in 1799, and William Clark the first male child, in 1801. Thomas Rees was the first justice, and Thomas Greenwood and Myron Backus held the same office at an early day.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

The township was one of the original sixteen established, and has retained the same limits to this day. It has an area of 20,481 acres, and is noted as having more colored population than any other in the county. The negroes are mostly descendants of three slaves who were taken in by Thomas Rees. To two of these, Robert McConnell and James Titus, upon reaching the twenty-eighth year of their age, when they became free by the emancipation act, Mr. Rees gave fifty acres of land near Gospel Hill. The Moorhead family also brought in a slave, known as Cæsar, who was emancipated as above, but continued to live with his former master until his death. Harbor Creek is bounded on the north by the lake, on the east by North East and Greenfield, on the south by Greene and on the west by Mill Creek. It has a frontage on the lake of about seven miles, its east line is a trifle longer, its south line is about four and a half miles, and its west line very nearly five miles. The township is one of the wealthiest and most populous in the county, and its citizens are not surpassed as a moral, intelligent and church-going people. It maintains unusually good schools, has many neat houses and barns, and its farms, as a rule, are under a fine state of improvement. Of late years, the farmers of this section have given much attention to the culture of fruits, berries, grapes and melons, meeting with a degree of success that far exceeds their original anticipations. The First and Second Ridges extend across the entire southern portion of the township from east to west. On the First Ridge and back of it, on the second plain, the land continues quite good. From the Second Ridge south, it is broken, cold and clayey, being better suited for grazing than grain. The township contains three villages—Wesleyville, Harbor Creek and Moorheadville—each of which is a station on the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate Railroads. These are also the post offices of the township; through them most of the inhabitants receive their mail matter. Another post office, known as Southville, was kept up for some years, near the Cass Woolen Factory, but was abandoned about 1840. Since that period, the southern portion of the township has been without mail facilities, though a post office somewhere on the Station road would seem to be a necessity.

The population of the township has been as follows: 555, in 1820; 1,104, in 1830; 1,843, in 1840; 2,084, in 1850; 2,033, in 1860; 1,974, in 1870, and 1,781 in 1880. The assessment of 1883 gave the following results: value of real estate, $1,114,000. Number of cows, 584; of oxen, 12; of horses and mules, 605; value of the same, $58,058. Value of trades and occupations, $12,280. Money at interest, $35,744.

CREEKS AND GULLIES.

The streams of Harbor Creek are Four, Six and Twelve Mile Creeks, Elliott's Run and Scott's Run, all emptying into the lake, and McConnell Run, a branch of Four Mile Creek. Four and Six Mile Creeks head in Greene, and Twelve Mile Creek on the edge of North East and Greenfield. All the rest are wholly within the township. Elliott's Run and Scott's Run are both small, short streams; the first flows through or near Harbor Creek Village, and the second is the next stream east. They were named after two of the earliest settlers. McConnell's Run crosses the Station road a little south of Gospel Hill, and joins Four Mile Creek near the foot of the great gully. It received its name from a mulatto, who built a cabin at an early day on the bank of the stream. The great gully or gorge of Four Mile Creek, which has attracted the attention of nearly every person who has ever traveled over the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, commences in Greene Township, and extends to very near the bridge of the Station road, about half a mile south of Wesleyville, gradually becoming shallower as it reaches its northern terminus. Its length is about six miles, and it varies in depth from fifty to a hundred and fifty feet. There are a number of mills along Four Mile Creek, in both Harbor Creek and Greene Townships. The Old Cooper Mill, near the foot of the great gully, was once a famous landmark of the lake shore region. William Saltsman first built a saw mill at this point in 1815, and added a grist mill in 1826. These afterward became the property of William Cooper, Sr., under whose management they obtained wide reputation. Mr. Cooper bought the mill property in 1839, and rebuilt the mills in 1850. The third saw mill in the county was erected by Thomas Rees, near the mouth of the creek, on the Crowley place, in 1798, for the Population Company. In the same year, Eliphalet Beebe constructed the sloop Washington, of thirty-five tons, on the shore of the lake, near the mill, for the use of the same company, being the first sailing vessel built on the south shore of Lake Erie. The gorge of Six Mile Creek extends to within a mile or a mile and a half of the Buffalo road, and its windings must be nearly five miles long. The deepest part of the gorge is at the Clark settlement, where it is but little short of 150 feet deep, with an average width of not more than 100 feet.

Strong Vincent

MILLS.

There are a number of mills in the township, but the most important are the Cooper Grist, Saw and Cider Mill at Wesleyville, the Neeley Grist and Saw Mill at the mouth of Twelve Mile Creek, Dodge's handle, shingle and saw mill, Troop's basket factory and cider mill at Harbor Creek Station, and Cass' woolen mill on the head-waters of Six Mile Creek, in the southeastern section. A small grist mill was erected in 1800 by James Foulk, at the fall of Six Mile Creek, near its mouth, but was only kept up a year or two. Neeley's mill was established in 1802 by Capt. Daniel Dobbins and James Foulk. Capt. Dobbins lived there with his family seven years, until their removal to Erie. The mill fell into the hands of Joseph Neeley in 1816, who did a very prosperous business until 1841. From that time the mill was run by his son-in-law, the eminent Gen. John W. McLane, until the outbreak of the war, when it was sold by Mr. Neeley. Since then it has changed proprietors several times. The mill of the Messrs. Dodge was built in the spring of 1870, and has always done a good trade. It is run by steam, which is partially created by the gas from a well on the premises. A carding and woolen mill was erected on the site of the Cass factory as long ago as 1810, and was kept up till 1841 or 1842, when Thornton, Cass & Co. purchased the property, which had run down, and built the present extensive works. The factory was carried on very successfully for some years, and is still running on a small scale. In this connection, it may be noted that there were fully twenty-five woolen factories in the county forty or fifty years ago, of which five were in Erie city or its vicinity. Joseph Backus had a grist mill, saw mill and distillery near the Cass Mill in the early years of the county. The grist mill and distillery were abandoned fifty years ago; the saw mill continued to be run till a comparatively recent period, when it, too, was left to decay. Cooper's mill at Wesleyville will be referred to in connection with that village. Troop's basket factory was started about 1878. In addition to the above, there is a large cider mill at Moorheadville. The building used as a barn, on the north side of the road, on the Joseph McCarter farm, was once a grist mill, the power of which was furnished by Elliott's Run. Joseph Backus built mills at an early date in the Backus neighborhood in the southeast. The first cargo of flour and pork shipped to New York from Erie County was taken through the Erie Canal by Joseph Neeley in 1826. The flour was made at the mill near the mouth of Twelve Mile Creek.

ROADS, ETC.

The main public roads are the Buffalo and the Lake, in the north portion, crossing the township from Mill Creek to North East, and the Station road, commencing at Wesleyville and running in a general southeastern course into Greenfield. The Lake road extends through the township at a distance of from a quarter to a half mile from the water, having one tier of farms between. The Buffalo road runs at an average distance of a mile and a half south of the lake. The Station road was laid out through Colt's Station to Mayville, N. Y., about 1813. The Lake Shore and Nickel Plate railroads pass through the whole width of Harbor Creek Township from east to west, and the Philadelphia & Erie road runs through about a mile of its western portion in a semi-circular direction at the gully of Four Mile Creek. The first two have stations at Wesleyville, Harbor Creek and Moorheadville. The last has no station in the township.

Near the close of the last century, the State of Pennsylvania made a donation of 2,000 acres of land in the newly purchased Triangle to Gen. William Irvine for his services in the Revolutionary war, giving him the privilege of making his own selection. In 1795, while in the county to lay out the towns of Erie and Waterford, he took up a mile along the lake from Brawley's old tavern to the Greenwood Schoolhouse, embracing the mouth of Six Mile Creek, and running back a proportionate distance. In 1830, Gen. Callender Irvine, son of William, had 800 acres surveyed on both sides of the Buffalo road, and sold it off, reserving the water power, which was still regarded as of great value. About 1848, the balance of the reserve was disposed of by Dr. William A. Irvine, son of Callender.

WESLEYVILLE.

Four and a half miles from the Parks in Erie is the village of Wesleyville, containing three stores, three blacksmith shops, one shoe shop, one large grist mill (using both steam and water), two cider mills, a saw mill, a wind mill factory, a brick church and schoolhouse, some thirty or forty buildings, and between 150 and 200 people. Four Mile Creek runs through the village, and the Buffalo road is its main street. The schoolhouse is built upon the diamond, near the center of the village, which was donated by Gen. Kilpatrick to the public for the purpose. Wesleyville enjoys a good trade with the farmers of western Harbor Creek, Greenfield and eastern Mill Creek. The Lake Shore and Nickel Plate Railroads run just north of the place, and it is the point of intersection of the Station road with the Buffalo road. The alley on the west side of W. R. Kelley's store is the line between Harbor Creek and Mill Creek Townships. Wesleyville was laid out in 1828 by John Shadduck, who owned the farm and mill now widely known as Cooper's mill. He built a grist mill in 1823, and a saw mill two years later, both on the west bank of Four Mile Creek. It was named Wesleyville after John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. The Methodist Episcopal Church, the only one in the village, was built by Mr. Shadduck in 1828, and rebuilt by the congregation in 1866. Mr. Shadduck's death in 1834 was a heavy blow to the place.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Wesleyville above referred to was a moderate sized one, and at a quarterly meeting held in it late in the fall thirteen were converted. Two young men, while at work in the brickyard making the brick for the above church, were awakened and converted, one of whom subsequently became an able preacher of the Gospel. From 1830 to 1834, this appointment was on the Erie Circuit. The latter year Wesleyville Circuit was formed. The apportionment of the church at Wesleyville for the support of the preacher in 1833 was $40. P. D. Horton and T. Benn were pastors in 1834; J. C. Ridout in 1881-82-83.

HARBOR CREEK AND MOORHEADVILLE.

The village of Harbor Creek is one of the pleasantest in the county. A station was established here by the railroad company because it was half-way between Erie and North East. The village contains two stores, one hotel, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, Dodge's shingle, handle and saw mill, Jonathan Troop's basket factory and cider mill, and 75 or 100 people. The post office at Harbor Creek was established about 1832, and was originally located some distance east of the village. It is fifteen miles from Erie to North East, and Harbor Creek is exactly midway by the Buffalo road.

Moorheadville, on the Buffalo road, half a mile north of the railroad station of the same name, is not properly a village, but a cluster of neighborly farm residences. The locality received its name from the large number of Moorheads living there. It was first settled by Thomas Moorhead, in 1800, who was soon followed by others of the family from the eastern part of the State. The first Sabbath school held in Erie County was established in 1817, at this place, by Col. James M. Moorhead and Rev. Mr. Morton, in a log schoolhouse which was removed in 1857. Moorheadville is ten and one-half miles from Erie, and four and one half from North East, by railroad.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The township contains six churches, viz.: Methodist Episcopal, at Wesleyville; Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal, at Harbor Creek Station; United Brethren, on the road up Six Mile Creek, in the Clark settlement; Baptist, at Lowry's Corners, and another Methodist Episcopal, on the Ridge road, south of the Walker settlement. The Presbyterian congregation at Harbor Creek was organized May 26, 1832, with fifty-eight members set off from the church at North East. The first building was erected half a mile east of the present site, on a piece of ground donated by Judah Colt, who owned a large farm there. It was of brick, costing $2,089, and was dedicated November 7, 1834. The present beautiful edifice was built and dedicated in 1871, at a cost of $10,000. The first Elders of the congregation were Myron Backus, Samuel Kingsbury and J. M. Moorhead. Rev. Giles Doolittle, of the North East Church, supplied the congregation during the first year of its organization. Rev. George W. Cleveland was installed as pastor of the new school branch August 26, 1849; continued after the re-union, and is still in charge of the congregation. There was quite a struggle between Harbor Creek and Moorheadville over the site of the new building, and when the former place was decided upon some of the congregation withdrew and attached themselves to the church at North East.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in the same village was erected in 1873, on ground donated by Rev. Noah Sullivan, at a cost of about $4,000; it was dedicated December 11 of that year by Rev. B. J. Ives, of Auburn, N. Y. For many years, Methodist preaching has been enjoyed in the village of Harbor Creek and vicinity. This appointment has been on the Wesleyville Circuit.

The South Harbor Creek Methodist Episcopal Church in the Walker and McGill neighborhood is the outgrowth of a class organized in that vicinity at an early day. An early preaching point was at Lowry's Corners, in a schoolhouse, which was the main place of worship until the building of the church in 1841 or 1842, which was dedicated by Rev. John Robinson. Erie Circuit was formed in 1830, and the first quarterly conference for the new circuit was held at Harbor Creek September 13, 1830. There were present Wilden B. Mack, Presiding Elder, Joseph A. Barrass and A. Young, circuit preachers. In 1834, Wesleyville Circuit was formed, and since that time the appointment at South Harbor Creek has been on Wesleyville Circuit; however, the word south does not appear in the minutes until 1836, yet the name Harbor Creek undoubtedly referred to the class at Lowry's Corners, as the class at Harbor Creek Station was not organized until a later day, and then for convenience' sake, many previously having been converted with that class. Among the members in 1833 may be mentioned Silas Walker and wife, Audley McGill and wife, William Allen, James Clark, David Nellis and wife, and Jesse R. Prindle and wife.

The Harbor Creek Baptist Church located at Lowry's Corners, dates back as far as 1822. It was organized in a schoolhouse near Hoag's Corners. The congregation subsequently moved to a schoolhouse at Lowry's Corners, and later erected the church there. The charge is weak, and the congregation is now without a pastor.

The United Brethren congregation in the Clark neighborhood, was organized in 1856, with a membership of about ten, by Rev. J. W. Clark; the building was erected the same year. This field of labor was then Erie mission, but one year later it became a part of Harbor Creek Circuit. J. W. Clark was pastor in 1857, in 1874-75, and in 1882-83.

Besides the above places, religious services are frequently held in the schoolhouse at Gospel Hill, on the Station road. This place received its name because most of the early citizens were Methodists who were very devoted to their religion. The graveyard on Gospel Hill has been in use for fifty-six years. The first bodies interred were those of two girls who were drowned in Six Mile Creek in 1823.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

The county officers from Harbor Creek Township have been as follows: Sheriff—John Kilpatrick, October 28, 1855, to October 21, 1858; John W. McLane, October 21, 1858, to November 16, 1861. Register and Recorder and Clerk of the Courts—William P. Trimble, November 10, 1857, to November 19, 1860. County Treasurer—James Chambers, January 4, 1853, to January 6, 1855. Clerks of the Courts—Robert S. Moorhead, January 1, 1883, to January 1, 1886 (resident of Erie when elected). County Commissioners—James M. Moorhead, 1827 to 1830; Samuel Low, 1836 to 1840; James Chambers, 1864 to 1867. Director of the Poor—George W. Walker, 1840 to 1843. County Surveyor—G. W. F. Sherwin, November 12, 1866, to February 22, 1869. County Auditors—Thomas Rees, 1821 and 1824; James Chambers, 1846; Jesse Ebersole, 1870; William P. Edwards, 1880 to 1883.

SCHOOL HISTORY.

Early in this century, a school was taught in the barn of Robert Hurst, which for some reason had been vacated; this was in the vicinity of the present site of Moorheadville, on the Buffalo road, and was attended by Walter Greenwood, from whom we get this information, when a small lad, as his first school. He was born in the spring of 1798. The master was Walter Patterson. School was kept here but a short time. On the Col. Moorhead farm, probably a half mile east of the Hurst barn, a log schoolhouse was built, where the next school in that settlement was taught. This house was too far for the Harbor Creek settlement, which led to the building of another house on the farm of William Wilson, on the Buffalo road, just north of the Lake Shore Railroad. In this house, among the early teachers were a Mr. Fisk and Miss Clara Cain. In 1825, at Harbor Creek settlement, Miss Elenor Burgett taught a school. Where Wesleyville now is, at a point opposite Kelley's store, there stood a schoolhouse as early at least as 1811 or 1812, the first schoolhouse erected in that neighborhood, in which school was taught by a Mrs. Burrass.

Here the venerable James Chambers, who was born in 1805, learned his letters. Later teachers in this building were Nathaniel Lowry, Freeman Wing, W. Taggart and George Hampson. The schoolhouses of the township are now thirteen in number, of which all but two are brick, the material of the Shaw School being stone, and of the Owen, frame. They are as follows: On the Lake road—Shaw, near A. Shaw's, and Crowley neighborhood. On the Buffalo road—Wesleyville, in the village; Chambers, near Henry Chamber's; Elliott, near Harbor Creek Village; Ebersole, near Joseph Ebersole's, and Moorhead, near William Moorhead's. In other parts of the township—Gospel Hill, near John Bunnell's; Tuttle, near John Tuttle's; Owen, near William Cass'; Williams, near Hugh Campbell's; Lowry, near the N. D. Lowry place; Backus, near Edwin Cass'. The Elliott House was built for a graded school, and is two stories in height.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The venerable James Chambers, whose home is a little east of Wesleyville, is the oldest continuous Justice of the Peace in the county, and probably in the State. He was first commissioned by Gov. Ritner in 1837, and has held the office from then to the present time, with the exception of an interval of six years, during which he served a term each as County Treasurer and County Commissioner. Aaron Hoag, one of the pioneers, who died in 1857, was always in litigation, and it is stated as a fact, that after his demise, the law business of the court suddenly dropped off twenty-five per cent. Elias Campbell died at the house of his son-in-law, Thomas E. Kendrick, October 8, 1882, aged ninety years; he emigrated to Washington Township with his mother in 1797.

The value of land in Harbor Creek ranges from $200 an acre on the lake shore plain to $30 on the high ground south. Several valuable gas wells have been drilled in the township, but most of them are now yielding little or nothing.

CHAPTER VII.

NORTH EAST TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF NORTH EAST.

THE section of country now included in North East Township was known for several years as Lower Greenfield. It received its present title when the county was organized, and derived the name from its position as the northeast township of the original sixteen. Its limits were extended in 1841, by adding a wedge-shaped strip from Greenfield. The township has an area of 25,419 acres, with a frontage upon the lake of more than eight miles, a breadth of over seven miles in the widest part, along the New York line, and of a little less than five miles on the Harbor Creek line. North East Township is bounded on the north by Lake Erie, on the east by Chautauqua County, N. Y., on the south by Greenfield and on the west by Harbor Creek. Its lands average as well as any section of the county, and the township includes numerous intelligent and successful farmers. The lake shore plain is about three miles in width, rising gradually from a height of about seventy-five feet near the water's edge to a hundred and fifty feet or more in the vicinity of the borough. An abrupt rise takes place in Harbor Creek Township, at Twelve Mile Creek, and this elevation continues across North East nearly to Twenty Mile Creek, where the land again falls to the general level of the lake shore. The greatest height is on the Bothwell farm, a mile east of North East Station, where the summit of the railroad is attained between Buffalo and Erie. The lake shore lands readily produce every kind of grain, fruit, flower and vegetable that can be raised in this latitude, and are equal to the most noted in the world. East of Sixteen Mile Creek, on the Lake road, they are usually a sandy loam; west of that on the same road and on the Buffalo road they are of a gravelly nature. The hills in the south part rise gradually to the summit at Colt's Station, and there is scarcely any waste country in the township. The hill land is clay loam and gravel, and yields fine wheat, barley, etc. Land ranges in value from $50 to $125 an acre.

The population of the township has been as follows at the periods stated: 1,068, in 1820; 1,706, in 1830; 1,793, in 1840; 2,379, in 1850; 1,900, in 1860; 2,313, in 1870; and 2,152 in 1880. The assessment of 1883, gave the following results: Value of real estate, $1,382,699; number of cows, 754; of oxen, 10; of horses and mules, 572; value of the same $64,835, value of trades and occupations, $25,900; money at interest, $19,087.

EARLY SETTLERS.

North East was the first of the lake shore townships to be settled, and by 1810 was pretty well covered with a hardy and worthy class of emigrants. The first settler to reach the township was Joseph Shadduck, who came in from Vermont, and took up a tract in 1794, near the center. He was joined in a few months by George and Henry Hurst from New Jersey. Although these parties located and made application for their lands in that year, they did not make an actual settlement until 1795. Henry Hurst, after a brief residence, moved to Meadville, and was elected to represent the five northwestern counties in the State Senate. Shadduck also changed, going to Greenfield, where he remained until his death. The same year that Shadduck and the Hursts made their settlement, George Lowry went in and took up a tract of 400 acres, in or near the borough. He was followed in 1796 by his mother, Margaret Lowry, and her family, who located 2,800 acres more in the vicinity of George's land, of which they paid the State for 2,000 acres. Mrs. Lowry was of Scottish and Irish birth, but emigrated to Cumberland County, in this State, and came from there to this county. She was the mother of ten sons, of whom four—Robert, Andrew, George and Morrow—married four daughters of James Barr, of Cumberland County. From this stock descended Hon. Morrow B. Lowry, so famous as a politician. James and Bailey Donaldson arrived in 1795; Henry and Dyer Loomis in 1796; Thomas Robinson, Joseph McCord, James McMahan (all of Perry County), William Wilson, James Duncan, Francis Brawley and Abram and Arnold Custard in 1797; Thomas Crawford, with his sons, William, James and Robert, Lemuel Brown, Mathew Taylor, William Allison, Henry Burgett, and John, James and Mathew Greer in 1797-98. In the summer of 1800, Robert Hampson, with his wife and one child, coming from Juniata County, settled in the township, where he lived until his death in 1851. Among those who reached the township about 1800 were Alexander T. Blaine, John and Andrew McCord, Samuel Graham, Robert Burrows, William Dundas, Mr. Campbell, Joel Loomis, James Barr, Timothy, Amos and Jerry Tuttle Timothy Newton, James Silliman, Thomas Mellen, Cornyn Shadduck, Hezekiah and Tristram Brown, Robert McNeill, Stephen Sparrow, Perrin Ross, Charles Allen, John Russell, M. Brown and Hezekiah Brown. Of the later settlers, Henry Taylor located in the township in 1802; Wendell Butt, in 1810;

Jesse Belknap, in 1812; Cyrus Robinson, in 1813; Justin Nash, Gilbert Belknap and W. E. Mason, in 1814; Harmon Ensign, Buell Phillips, Edmund Orton, Joseph Force, Joseph Law and Levi and Shubal Atkins, in 1815; Alexander Davidson, William Hall, Dr. Smedley, Clark Putnam and John Butt, in 1816; Arnold Warner, of Oneida County N. Y., in 1817; O. Selkrigg, in 1818; Hugh Beatty, in 1819; Clark Bliss, in 1821; Bester Town, in 1824; James Cole, in 1825; John Scouller, William Graham, D. D. Loop and N. C. Remington, in 1830; Amos Gould about 1831; E. N. Fuller, in 1835; Calvin Spafford, in 1836; J. S. Haynes, in 1837; William Griffith and R. A. White, in 1840; Stephen Griffith, in 1846; Henry Wolf about 1857; William E. Marvin and Isaac Wolf, in 1859. James Barr moved to Harbor Creek in 1813, and from there to Mill Creek. Levi Atkins died in the township a few years ago in his one hundredth year.

Reference is made in the general history to the litigation between the Pennsylvania Population Company and the citizens, who claimed title by virtue of mere settlement. The burden of these troubles largely fell upon the settlers of North East. The Lowrys, Wilsons and Barr fought the claims of the company until the matter was settled by the decision of the United States Supreme Court.

FIRST THINGS.

The first church was organized under the auspices of the Presbytery of Ohio in 1801. The first brick house in the county outside of Erie was erected by James Silliman in 1809, about a mile east of the borough, and is still standing. The first Justices of the Peace were Timothy Tuttle and Thomas Robinson, the first being commissioned March 3, and the second March 23, 1799. Mr. Robinson was the Justice who married the parents of Gen. C. M. Reed in 1801. The sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered for the first time in the county according to the Protestant form, at the house of the William Dundas in 1801. The first grist mill in the township was built by Col. Tuttle on Sixteen Mile Creek in 1807. The first building used for a schoolhouse was built in 1798, on "the north side of the main road near the house belonging to the Brookins farm." The first road was cut through from Freeport to Greenfield in 1797. The first mail route between Buffalo and Erie was established in 1806. The first regular line of coaches was in 1820-21. The first telegraph line was put up in 1847 or 1848. The first regular passenger train passed through from the State line to Erie on the 8th of January, 1852.

RAILROADS AND COMMON ROADS.

The Lake Shore Railroad runs across the township from east to west, at an average of two miles from the lake, in nearly a straight line and with a very light grade. The road is almost straight between Erie and North East, and it is said that the signal lights can be seen at the Union depot a distance of fifteen miles. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad crosses the township in the same direction as the Lake Shore road, and, generally speaking, at a distance of only a rod or so south of it. Both roads have stations at North East and Northville. The common roads which are most extensively traveled are the Buffalo road, running across the township at an average distance of about a mile and a half south of the lake, and the Lake road, which approaches the water's edge in the eastern part of Harbor Creek, and follows the bank of the lake through North East Township, almost to the mouth of Sixteen Mile Creek. From there to Twenty Mile Creek the direct road has been abandoned, but another road further back from the lake carries the route to the mouth of the latter stream, where it again follows the water eastward through New York.

THE CREEKS.

North East is one of the best watered townships in the county, a great number of rivulets springing out of the high land in the south and uniting their waters before reaching the lake. The main streams are Twelve Mile Creek in the west, Sixteen Mile Creek in the center, and Twenty Mile Creek in the east, with Spring Creek, Spafford Run and Averill Run between. Twelve Mile Creek rises on the northern edge of Greenfield, flows in a general north-eastern direction and falls into the lake in Harbor Creek, after a course of about thirteen miles. Sixteen Mile Creek takes its rise in Greenfield Township, within a mile of French Creek, passes the borough on its west side, and enters the lake at Freeport. Its length is about ten miles, and its general course due north. About two and a half miles south of the borough, Sixteen Mile Creek is joined by Graham Creek, which rises in New York, and is perhaps four miles long. At the point of junction, there is a "hog's back," which is nearly perpendicular on the east side. The gully at the "hog's back" is not far from 200 feet deep. The heads of Twenty Mile Creek are in Westfield and Sherman Townships, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and its mouth is near the northeast corner of North East Township. It enters the State about a mile above the crossing of the Lake Shore Railroad, and must have a length of ten to twelve miles. The deep gulf of this stream, which attracts so much attention from travelers, begins three or four miles south of the Lake Shore Railroad culvert, and continues nearly to the lake, some three miles further by the windings of the creek. Its depth where the railroad crosses is about 100 feet. The culvert at this point is a mammoth work, and one of the finest pieces of masonry in the country. The Nickel Plate road has an iron bridge some distance above, which is a skillful piece of work. The gully on the headwaters of Sixteen Mile Creek, in the south part of the township, runs out in the vicinity of the borough, but begins again just below, and continues to the lake. It is nowhere as abrupt as that of Twenty Mile Creek, except at the junction above referred to. Twelve Mile Creek has steep banks from Moorheadville to its mouth, but above that the gully is less deep and striking than those of the other streams.

MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENTS.

Although North East may be said to be quite a manufacturing center, it is a curious fact that nearly all of the most important establishments are outside of the borough limits. Among the past and present mills and factories of the township are Gay & Beatty's grist, saw and shingle mill, in the gulf of Twenty Mile Creek, at the crossing of the Buffalo road; Rhodes' cider and vinegar mill, a large four-story building, near the same; Jones' grist mill, built by James Haynes, to which a distillery was added by B. C. Town. In the spring of 1883, this mill passed into the hands of A. K. & W. D. Wing, who have enlarged it. Grimshaw's woolen factory—built by Archibald Duncan in 1845 and burned in the spring of 1883—and Coffman's pump factory, all on Spring Run; a turning works, table factory, saw mill, the Franklin Paper Mill, Ezra Scouller's grist mill—the largest in the township—Bannister's brewery, Greene & Chase's cider and vinegar mill, now owned by Alfred Short; E. K. Nason's tannery, Green's door, blind and sash factory, Stetson's handle factory, a grape basket and fruit and cigar box factory, all on Sixteen Mile Creek; New Era Organ Factory—started in the spring of 1873 by a joint-stock company—Jones' barrel factory—established in 1864 by Bothell & Clark, and burned in 1881—Applebee & Butt's steam saw mill and John Scouller & Tyler's large tannery—built in 1875. All of these concerns, some of which are quite extensive, are within a radius of perhaps a mile from the public park, with the exception of those on Twenty Mile Creek. Most of the mills use steam and water. Besides the establishments named above, E. Scouller and Dr. Porter have warehouses on the railroad, just across the borough line, for handling grain, coal, lime, etc. There is also a cheese factory at Grahamville (started in 1881) and a saw and heading mill at the State line. The township contains three brick yards, two of which are managed respectively by Gen. Kilpatrick and John Kane, on the Francis Brawley farm, now owned by Sampson Short, two miles and a half west of the borough; and the third, near the borough, is owned by Dyer Loomis. The paper mill was established by Steele, Judd & Easton in 1833, and, after passing into the hands of William L. Hall, was burned in 1838. It was immediately re-built by John Scouller and Chauncy Easton, the former of whom soon purchased his partner's interest. Mr. Scouller sold the mill in 1853 to James S. Johnson, who was the victim of another fire on the 16th of August, 1881, which almost totally destroyed the property. By July 2, 1872, Mr. Johnson had the mill running again on a more extensive scale than ever, but in re-building he became involved, and the low prices setting in at the same time, was obliged to succumb to the financial pressure. The mill was sold to Cochran & Young, of Erie, who ran it until January 1, 1883, when it passed into the hands of West, Swaney & Jackson, of Pittsburgh. These gentlemen failed, and the mill now belongs to the estate of Cochran & Young.

Chas H Boyer

THE GRAPE CULTURE.

The culture of grapes was commenced in North East Township about 1850, by Messrs. Hammond & Griffith, who planted their first vineyard in the vicinity of Jones' grist mill. It was soon discovered that the soil and climate were peculiarly favorable to the growth of this luscious fruit, and the small beginning of thirty years ago has developed until there are thousands of acres under cultivation in the township. The South Shore Wine Company was formed in 1869. They built a large cellar on the road between the borough and lake, and have done an extensive business in shipping grapes and making wine. J. & C. Mottier have a smaller winery near by, and Alonzo Butt has another, about a mile and a half northeast of the borough. Most of the vineyards are north of the borough, on the fertile land between Sixteen and Twenty Mile Creeks. The grapes are shipped to all parts of the North, but the bulk of them are sold in Erie and the oil region. Besides the grape culture, the township has become an important berry, fruit, melon and vegetable growing region. A good deal of trucking is done for the Erie and oil country markets. The principal truckers are the Mottiers, Butts, McCords and McGaugheys. In the vicinity of the vineyards, and near the bank of the lake, is the Lake View House, which was at one period a promising summer resort. It is a large four-story building, surrounded by beautiful grounds and in a charming location. The enterprise was started by H. S. Southard in 1875. The villages of the township are Northville, Freeport and Grahamville. Northville is the only post office.

VILLAGES.

Freeport, at the mouth of Sixteen Mile Creek, a mile and a half north of the borough, though now nothing more than a straggling collection of houses, was once expected to become a lake port of considerable magnitude. When the Population Company established their headquarters at Colt's Station, their supplies were first received mainly by boat from Buffalo and landed at Freeport. To transport these goods, the first road in the county—with the exception of the old French road—was opened from Freeport to Greenfield in 1797, which a year afterward was extended to Wattsburg. The road followed generally the same route as the one which now runs from the depot at North East, southward to French Creek. Quite a trade was done at Freeport till 1802, when the removal of the company's headquarters to Erie suspended the lake traffic. Afterward it did some business as a lumber port, but this did not last long. Capt. Freeman Judd built a small vessel at Freeport, with which he touched at the harbor as necessity required till 1834 or 1835, when the commerce of the port ceased, and has never been renewed. The village consists at present of a wagon shop, saw mill, turning and table factory and fifteen or twenty buildings. It is something of a fishing place and several families are supported by the fisheries. The first foundry in Erie County was established at Freeport in 1824, by Philetus Glass and others, for the manufacture of cast iron plows.

The village of Northville is mainly in New York, but the post office and church are in Pennsylvania. The place embraces a store, hotel, cooper shop, wagon shop, blacksmith shop, schoolhouse and twenty or thirty dwellings. The Buffalo road passes through, and the town is a station on the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate Railroads. The Methodist Episcopal Church at Northville is the only one in the township outside of North East Borough. It is at least sixty years old, and in its early existence was an appointment on North East Circuit and of the other circuits of which North East, Wattsburg and Ripley were parts. Since Ripley Circuit was formed, this appointment has been on that circuit. Among the early members of Northville Church were, Jacob Pier and wife, Mrs. Crocker, Phœbe Myers (now Mrs. Taylor) and Benjamin Lawrence and wife; the latter was Class Leader in 1833. The first church building was erected in 1841, and the present one in 1880. Prior to 1841, the society worshiped in a school house on the York State side. The graveyard attached to the church has been in existence many years.

The little settlement of Grahamville, at the cross roads, about three and a half miles southeast of the borough, was founded by Samuel Graham, who came from Centre County in 1800, his brothers James and Ebenezer locating at the same time in Summit Township. A tannery was established there in 1835 by Robert Graham, a saw mill by James Graham in the same year, an ashery by E. N. Fuller in 1842, and a distillery, wagon shop and blacksmith shop some time between 1830 and the latter year. The place was at the height of its prosperity from 1842 to 1846, when, for some reason, it began to run down, the store being closed in 1847, and the ashery and distillery soon after. It consists at present of a schoolhouse (in which religious services are sometimes held), a cheese factory, blacksmith shop, wagon shop, about fifteen houses, and fifty or seventy-five inhabitants.

CEMETERIES.

North East Township contains three regularly incorporated cemeteries, besides the graveyard at Northville and one near the woolen mill. The one known as the North East Cemetery, which is used by the borough and township in common, occupies high ground on the west bank of Sixteen Mile Creek, along the Buffalo road, a short distance west of the borough limits. The cemetery company was incorporated April 15, 1882. Twelve and one-half acres were purchased from the heirs of P. S. V. Hamot, to which five acres were added that had been used as a burial ground for fifty years. The cemetery of the Phillipsville Burial Ground Association is on the Henry Wolf farm, about two and a half miles east of the borough, along the Buffalo road. Although there has been a graveyard on the site for forty years, the management was never regularly incorporated until 1863. Mrs. Buel Phillips, wife of the donor, was the first person buried there. Her death took place in 1822. The Grahamville Burying Ground Association was incorporated in the spring of 1879. The society's grounds are on the road from North East to Grahamville, near H. D. Taber's. The site has been used as a graveyard for forty-three years.

SCHOOLS.

In the western part of the township, located about a half mile north of the present track of the Lake Shore Railroad, was what was known as the Hildebrand house, in which school was taught about the year 1811 by Betsy McCray. In the same building Joseph Townsley taught. Not long after this (about 1814), a log schoolhouse was built eighty or one hundred rods south of the above-named site, in which the first school was taught by Joseph Neeley. Other early teachers in this building were Miss Eleanor Lawhead (who subsequently married a Moorhead), Charles Brown, a Mr. Stearns, Henry Neeley and George Hampson. This was up to about 1820. In the early history of the township, the children residing east of the "gulf," in the northeastern portion of the township, attended school in New York State. An early school was taught not far from the State line in a building vacated by James Taylor. A schoolhouse was built probably one mile from the line in York State as early as 1816. Ebenezer Poorman taught in these houses. About one mile southwest of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Northville, in what was known as the Orton District, a schoolhouse was erected, in which school was opened in the winter of 1832-33 by James Taylor, now of North East Borough, which was most likely the first school established in the northeastern part of the township, west of the New York State line. Mr. Taylor taught a school in the Belknap District, about one and one-half miles south of the Orton School, in the winter of 1833-34. The township maintains at present seventeen schools, and the school term consists of four months in the summer and four in the winter. Below is a list of the buildings, with their locations: Gay, near the mouth of Twenty Mile Creek; Dewey, on the Butt road; Jones, near the woolen factory; Freeport, near Scouller's mill; McCord, on Lake road; Brawley, on the Buffalo road, west; Maple Grove, on S. C. Remington's farm; Orton, on the William E. Marvin farm; Law, near the borough, in the south; Gifford, on J. E. Williams' farm; Spooner, on B. P. Spooner's farm; Putnam, in Putnam settlement; Union, on Greenfield line; Adkins, in Adkins settlement; Bird, near the southeast corner of the township; Grahamville, at Grahamville; and Bingham, near B. Bingham's. The Freeport, Brawley, Maple Grove, Law, Gifford, Putnam and Bingham Schools are of brick; the rest are of frame. The Union school is maintained jointly by North East and Greenfield.

REV. CYRUS DICKSON.

Probably the best known name associated with North East Township is that of Rev. Cyrus Dickson, for many years the famous Secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States. He was one of the most eloquent pulpit orators in the country, and his reputation was as extended as the Union. His grandfather, James Dickson, was a Captain in the Revolutionary war. Removing after the close of the war from the Mohawk Valley, where his father had first settled, he made his home for a time in Westmoreland County, Penn. Not satisfied there, he came with his family, in 1801, to Erie County, locating near the head-waters of French Creek. A few years afterward, his son William bought a farm in North East Township, near the lake, and there took up his residence. He married, after the death of his first wife, Christina, daughter of James and Catherine Moorhead; and in the log cabin of this uncleared farm was born, in 1816, Cyrus Diekson—destined to become one of the most distinguished sons of the Presbyterian Church. He completed his college course at Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, in 1857; taught for a year or two, first in Girard, Erie County, and then near Princeton, N. J.—at the same time studying theology and attending lectures at the seminary at the latter place. After the usual examinations, he was licensed in 1839 by the Presbytery of Erie to preach the Gospel. Within a few months he became settled in his first pastorate at Franklin, Penn.

BOROUGH OF NORTH EAST.

The borough of North East is very nearly in the center of the township, between its eastern and western lines, about a mile and a half south from the lake. It stands upon the highest ground of the lake shore plain, and is surrounded by one of the most beautiful and fertile sections of Erie County. It is an important station on the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate Railroads, fifteen miles east of Erie and seventy-three west of Buffalo. The Lake Shore road forms the southern boundary line of the borough and the Buffalo road is its main street. A branch of Sixteen Mile Creek runs entirely through the place, and the main stream touches its southwestern edge, affording water-power to a number of mills and factories. North East is justly regarded as one of the most pleasant and enterprising towns in the county. It has good church buildings and supports excellent schools. It has a number of elegant private residences, and some of its stores are upon a scale that would do credit to a larger place. It is the center of a large manufacturing interest, and its mercantile establishments embrace almost every line of trade.

The land covered by the borough was purchased from the State by a man named Brown, who sold it in 1804 to an Eastern speculator by the name of Gibson. The earliest dwelling within the borough limits was a log cabin, built by William Dundas, a little to the east of the Presbyterian parsonage. In this modest abode the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered for the first time in Erie County according to the Protestant form, on Sunday, the 27th of September, 1801. The Dundas property was sold in 1806 to Henry Burgett, who converted it into a tavern, and occupied it as such for many years. A more pretentious tavern was erected in 1808, by Lemuel Brown, grandfather of Gen. H. L. Brown, of Erie city, on the site of the present Haynes House. Previous to the ventures of Burgett and Brown, a tavern had been kept by George Lowrey, near the park. The first store was opened in 1816, by Alexander McCloskey, in a building on Main street, at the foot of Vine, which was long since destroyed. By degrees a village sprung up around the taverns, which received the title of Burgettstown, after Henry Burgett, the landlord. In 1819 the name was changed to Gibsonville, in honor of the man who owned most of the property, and donated the park. It was known by that title until the 27th of February, 1834, when the village was incorporated as the borough of North East. The original limits were extended in 1852, so that they are now about a mile in length by a little more than half a mile in breadth. The population by the United States census was 339 in 1840, 387 in 1850, 952 in 1860, 902 in 1870, and 1,396 in 1880. The Burgettstown Post Office was established May 10, 1812, and the name has been changed twice to suit the varying appellations of the town.

By the assessment of 1883, the real estate in the borough was valued at $526,025; the number of cows was 51, and of horses and oxen 141; their value was $13,075; the valuation of trades and occupations was $118,450, and $78,961 were reported as drawing interest.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The churches of North East are seven in number, as follows: Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, St. Paul's Lutheran, St. Gregory's Catholic, German Evangelical, and Mission of the Holy Cross (Episcopal). The Presbyterian society, the oldest religious organization in Erie County, was founded in 1801, as "The Church of Lower Greenfield," in the house of William Dundas (which was afterward converted into Burgett's tavern), by Revs. McCurdy, Satterfield, Tait and Boyd, who were sent out as missionaries from the Ohio and Redstone Presbyteries. Thomas Robinson and John McCord were ordained as the first Elders. Services were held in the woods and in the barn or tan bark house of Joseph McCord till 1804, when a log church building was erected upon a tract of five acres, given for the purpose by Henry Hurst, which is now occupied as a part of the North East Cemetery. A Sabbath school was established, and a day school was also maintained in connection with the church. In 1818, the congregation commenced the erection of a new frame building nearly in the center of the present park, which had been donated by Mr. Gibson, for public and religious use, and finished it in 1822. In 1832, fifty-eight members separated from the congregation and were constituted a church at Harbor Creek, leaving the original society 105 strong. The present building—a large, handsome brick—was completed in 1860, at a cost of about $9,000, and the old edifice in the park was torn down in 1862. The first regular minister was Rev. Robert Patterson, who was ordained as pastor of the churches of Upper and Lower Greenfield. His ordination took place September 1, 1802. His pastoral relation was dissolved by his own request April 22, 1807. From the date of his departure a long interval ensued, in which the church was without a regular pastor, with the exception of Rev. Mr. McPherson, who was employed for six months in 1812. In 1815-16, Rev. Mr. Eaton was engaged for one-fourth of his time, the rest being spent at Erie and Fairview. Rev. Mr. Ely officiated half of his time for six months in 1823. Rev. Cyrus J. Hunter, present incumbent, took charge of the congregation July 16, 1880.

The Methodist Episcopal congregation was organized in 1812, with ten members, by Rev. Thomas Branch, a missionary from Connecticut. The original members were Tristram Brown, George Culver, John Russell and two others, with their wives. For ten years this small congregation was without a house of worship. In 1822, a brick building was erected on the eastern side of the park, facing the south. The present edifice was built in 1852 at a cost of $3,000, and the old one was torn down the same year. Rev. James Watts was the first pastor, and Rev. W. W. Woodworth, 1881-82-83.

The first Baptist society occupied a small log structure in the eastern part of the township. In 1832, a new congregation was organized, and erected a building on the Buffalo road, about two miles east of the borough in 1833. This society ceased to exist about 1850. A third congregation was established, through the efforts of Rev. Zebina Smith, in 1858. The present church building was put up in 1859, and a Sabbath schoolroom was added in 1870. The Rev. Mr. Smith served the church as pastor about two years. The pastors have since been L. Rathburn, Mr. Weatherby, Mr. Husted, William Dunbar, M. Tennant, Theodore Leonard, J. C. Ward, H. N. Cornish and Charles Parson, the present incumbent. The church membership is now about 125.

St. Paul's German Evangelical Church was organized in 1864, by Rev. P. Brandt, who served as pastor of this mission in connection with the charge at Farnham, N. Y., until April, 1866. He was succeeded by Rev. H. Kanold, who served the two appointments until November, 1867. Then for one year the congregation had supplies only. St. Paul's became a separate charge in 1868, and the first pastor was Rev. E. J. Flickenstein, who entered upon his duties in October, 1868, and left the pastorate in September, 1872. Rev. E. Leemhuis, the present pastor, was his successor, entering upon the duties of his position in November, 1872. The church building was erected in 1867. Present voting membership, about eighty, principally the heads of families.

St. Gregory's Catholic Church was erected about the year 1866. For years prior to this, the Catholic families had been visited by priests from Dunkirk and occasionally from Erie. In July, 1870, Father F. Riordy, the present pastor, entered upon his duties as pastor of this parish in connection with the one at Girard. The church as first erected was a mere shell of a building, which has under Father Riordy's efficient pastorate been greatly remodeled and improved until the building is now a very neat, substantial and pretty one. A parsonage adjoins the church and is the property of the congregation. Father Riordy's predecessor was Father Madigan. The membership is composed of about fifty families.

The German Church of the Evangelical Association of North America was organized in 1870, yet preaching had been held occasionally for several years prior to this time, the Rev. Louis Wilt, of Westfield, N. Y., officiating. The corner-stone of the present neat frame building on Division street was laid October 2, 1870, and the church completed and dedicated January 15, 1871; sermon by Rev. Louis Wilt. Mr. Wilt remained with the charge about two years after the building was dedicated, when he was succeeded by Rev. Jacob Long. He was succeeded by Rev. P. Klantz. Mr. Klantz's successor was Rev. Nathan Yoder, who was succeeded by Rev. John Honecker, the present pastor, in March, 1880. Present membership, eighty.

The Episcopal Mission of the Holy Cross was organized in 1872. The society placed a neat building under roof during the season of 1879, which in due time was completed and is an imposing structure. The mission was supplied by Revs. McConnell, McKay, Tongue and Newman, during the years ending with 1876. Rev. J. Melville Benedict was installed on Advent, 1877. He left early in 1881, and was succeeded by Rev. J. H. Burton April 1 of the same year, who is still rector of the parish.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND COLLEGE.

A day school was taught in the old log meeting house, above referred to, soon after the year 1804, which was maintained until about 1817, when a log schoolhouse was built and stood not far from the center of the park. This was the regular school for the vicinity, and among the teachers who taught in it were John Brown, Miss Leech and Miss Riddle. In 1824, the present Academy grounds were purchased and a small brick building erected, in which Rev. Miles Doolittle taught as early as 1826. In 1818, a summer school was taught in the office of Dr. Dunlap, the site being just in front of the present house of E. Scouller, Esq.

The next village schoolhouse was a larger frame building, erected in 1844, on the site of the brick house, at a cost of $3,000, raised by subscription. This was replaced by the present school building of four apartments, erected in 1878 at a cost of $10,000. We should have mentioned above that among the teachers in the brick house, built in 1824, were Dyer Loomis, Mr. Chambers and A. S. Moss. The public schools of North East are excellent. In 1878, F. N. Thorpe, Ph. D., was chosen as Principal and Superintendent, and at that time they became graded. Scholars are here prepared for college. The first commencement exercises were held in 1881, when a class of seven were graduated. There are now enrolled 348 scholars, under the care of the Principal and five lady assistants. In the old frame building, such educators as Profs. Post, Armstrong and Stewart taught. Mr. Armstrong was the first County Superintendent. Mr. Thorpe is still Principal of the schools, and the present Board of Education is B. C. Town, S. S. Hammond, Norman Clark, Ezra Scouller, D. D. Dewey and E. K. Nason. B. C. Town is President and S. S. Hammond, Secretary.

The Lake Shore Seminary was established at North East in 1870, occupying a stately four-story brick building on the highest knoll in the vicinity. While not denominational in its teachings, it was, to a certain extent, under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Among its professors were J. P. Mills in 1872, L. T. Kirke in 1875-76, and H. U. Johnson in 1879-80. The seminary did not prosper and the buildings and grounds were sold at Sheriff's sale to the People's Savings Institution of North East. The bank in turn sold the property about February 1, 1881, for $10,000, to the Redemptionist Fathers of Annapolis, Md. It was dedicated as St. Mary's College August 2, 1881, and is used as a preparatory school for young men intending to enter the Catholic priesthood.

HOTELS, BANKS, ETC.

The hotels of North East are the Brawley House, built in 1833; the Haynes House, in 1852-53, and the Palace Hotel, by Sampson Short, in 1877. They are all well kept, and have a liberal patronage. The Palace Hotel is probably the finest public house in the county outside of Erie. The first hotel—or more properly, tavern—in the borough, as before stated, was opened by George Lowry, the second by Henry Burgett, the third by Lemuel Brown, and the fourth by the latter's son, Hiram L., who erected the house lately owned by Miss Davison for that purpose. In course of time, the two Browns almost monopolized the tavern business of the town. Hiram L. eventually purchased the Eagle Hotel at the corner of State street and the northeast side of the Park in Erie. It burnt down and he erected another house on its site, which was known as Brown's Hotel until its purchase by Col. Ellsworth, when the name was changed to the Ellsworth House. The father of B. F. Sloan, of Erie, at one time kept a hotel in North East opposite the Brawley House.

North East until recently has supported three banks, namely, The First National, the private firm of Short, Blaine & Co., and the People's Savings Institution. The first banking institution of the borough was established on a small scale by A. W. Blaine about the year 1860, and was carried on at the corner of Lake and Main streets. This was merged into the First National Bank when it was organized in 1865. The First National Bank was opened in the building now occupied by that institution under the following officers and directors: William Griffith, President; A. W. Blaine, Cashier; Directors, William Griffith, John Greer, Amos Gould, George P. Griffith, A. F. Jones, J. S. Haynes and John McCord. The President of this bank is now W. A. Ensign and the Cashier is Charles A. Ensign. The capital stock has been $50,000 from the beginning.

The People's Savings Institution was incorporated in April, 1870, and opened for business May 1 of that year in Duncan Block on Main street. The first President was J. L. Brookins; Treasurer, John Greer, and Secretary, G. C. Cleveland. The present President is Alfred Short; Treasurer, B. C.

Spooner. The firm of Blaine, Gould & Short, which subsequently became Short, Blaine & Co., opened in 1871 in the Graham Building on Main street. This institution stopped business May 14, 1883, to which the People's Savings Bank became successor, and moved into the building on Main street occupied by that firm as an office. The combined capital of these two banks is upward of $500,000.

The manufactories within the corporate limits are John W. Griffith's wagon and blacksmith shop; Fromyer's carriage and trimming factory, established by George French in 1865, and carried on by the Fromyer Bros. since May, 1873; Pease's tub and firkin factory, established in 1876 by David Pease and J. M. Cook; the latter going out in one year, the factory has since been carried on by Mr. Pease; Philetus Glass's foundry, established in the borough in 1851, by P. Glass and O. Chase, and the North East Fruit Canning establishment, which was started in the spring of 1880 by a number of enterprising men.

NEWSPAPERS.

The newspapers until recently were the Sun and Advertiser, both published weekly, and both well edited. The first attempt to establish a paper was by J. J. Barker, who commenced the North East Guard in 1855, but only printed it a few months. In August, 1867, the North East Herald was put forth by S. O. Hayward, who abandoned its publication at the end of a year. The North East Star was commenced September 26, 1868, by Brainerd & Cushman, both of whom are now practicing lawyers in Erie. Mr. Brainerd sold his interest in 1869 to L. B. Cushman. The name of the paper was changed to the Sun in March, 1873. The North East Advertiser was started in March, 1877, by W. E. Belknap & Co., and so published until May 2, 1883, when the two papers were consolidated, Mr. Cushman, of the Sun, purchasing. Since that period the two have been issued under the title of the Sun from the former building of the Advertiser, now the Sun building, on Lake street. In politics, the Sun is Republican, and has a circulation of over 1,500. It is the largest paper in the county, being a quarto, with fifty-six columns.

STATE AND COUNTY OFFICERS.

The State and county officials furnished by North East Borough and Township are as follows: Presidential Elector, John Greer, 1860. Congress, S. M. Brainerd, 1883-85 (resident of Erie when elected). State Senators, Henry Hurst, 1816-21 (resident of Meadville when elected); James D. Dunlap, 1845 (resident of Erie when elected). Assemblymen, James D. Dunlap, 1840-41 (resident of Erie when elected); Mark Baldwin, 1844; A. W. Blaine, 1850-51; Charles A. Hitchcock, 1876-77; Alfred Short, 1878-79. District Attorneys, S. M. Brainerd, 1872-75; A. B. Force, 1875-81; E. A. Walling, 1881-84. Sheriff, E. W. M. Blaine, 1840-43. Coroner, John McCord, 1812-15. County Commissioners, James Lowry, 1804-06; Francis Brawley, 1808-11; Henry Taylor, 1811-17; Alex. McCloskey, 1823-26; John McCord, 1832-35; Amos Gould, 1857-60; Clark Bliss, 1871-75. County Treasurer, James P. Crawford, 1881-84 (resident of Erie when elected). Associate Judges, John Brawley, 1840-51; John Greer, 1856-66. Director of the Poor, Archibald Duncan, 1862-65. Steward of the Almshouse, Calvin Pool, 1863-72; George W. Griffin, 1872-80. Mercantile Appraisers, John D. Mills, 1860; James W. Crawford, 1864; R. L. Pierce, 1874. County Auditors, James Smedley, 1831-34; William H. Crawford, 1836-39; George W. Griffin, 1869 (one year).

MISCELLANEOUS.

The contribution of North East and vicinity to the Union army in the rebellion was fully as large as any section of the county. She furnished one

W. J. Bennett

Captain to each of the Erie County regiments, viz.: N. L. Terrell, Captain Company K, Eighty-third; John Braden, Company F, One Hundred and Eleventh; Dyer Loomis, Company C, One Hundred and Forty-fifth. The borough has been visited by three destructive fires. One on Sunday night, the 19th of December, 1858, consumed a row of buildings extending from the Presbyterian Church to the Union Block. Another on May 23, 1872, destroyed a number of wooden structures on Main street. The last one, in the summer of 1874, demolished some buildings that occupied the present site of the opera house. Rev. Thomas H. Robinson, son of Thomas Robinson, one of the pioneers, has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Harrisburg many years. Dyer Loomis was elected Justice of the Peace in the spring of 1845, and held the office until the spring of 1880, a period of thirty-five years. North East A. Y. M., Lodge was organized in 1867. North East Lodge, I. O. O. F., was established in 1850.

CHAPTER VIII.

FAIRVIEW TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF FAIRVIEW.

THE first known settlement in Fairview Township was made in 1797, by Francis Scott, who had been in the employ of Thomas Rees, the surveyor, for a year previous. Nearly a year before—on the 25th of July, 1796—a company of ten men was formed at Harrisburg, for the purpose of improving and populating the country near and adjoining Lake Erie. Their names were Richard Swan, Thomas Forster, John Kean, Alexander Berryhill, Samuel Laird, John A. Hanna, Robert Harris, Richard Dermond, William Kelso and Samuel Ainsworth. Each contributed £200 ($1,000), as a common stock for the use of the company, and the money was agreed to be used in the purchase of inlots and outlots in the town of Erie and elsewhere, and for improving and settling such lands as might be bought. The company was styled the Harrisburg and Presque Isle Company. Thomas Forster was a native of Paxtang, born in 1762, brought up as a surveyor, served as Colonel during the Whisky Insurrection of 1794, an Associate Judge of Dauphin County, member of the Legislature in 1798; subsequently removed to Erie in the interest of the Harrisburg & Presque Isle Land Company, where he became thoroughly identified with its interests, and filled important positions, dying in 1836. Richard Swan was a native of Paxtang, born in 1757; served in the war of the Revolution, and was a gentleman of influence in his locality. He removed to Erie County, and here many of his descendants reside. He died in April, 1808. William Kelso, the son of Joseph and Margaret Kelso, who located on the Susquehanna in Paxtang, prior to 1830, was a native of that township. He lived many years on the Cumberland Valley side, in the old Kelso ferry house, where he died May 22, 1807. He was the father of John Kelso, who went to Erie in 1802, there located, and the ancestor of the family in this county. Immediately after the first compact, Messrs. Harris and Kean were delegated to go to Carlisle, where public sale of the lots in the towns of Franklin, Erie, Waterford, Warren and Beaver were being made, and purchase such as they deemed proper in the interests of the company. This sale was on the 3d and 4th of August, 1796, and resulted in the company becoming the owners of numerous town lots in Erie and Waterford.

Capt. Swan moved his family to Erie County in 1802, and settled on Walnut Creek. He rented the company's mill for one year from April 11, paying $250 rental, and agreeing to clear a piece of land. He managed the mill until his death in 1808. His widow bought a farm about one and a half miles from the mills. In 1817 her son Richard built the first frame house in Fairview Township. This house stood until a few years ago. When Col. Forster and Capt. Swan first arrived at the point where the mills were built, they were standing on a high bluff overlooking the lake, and the former exclaimed, "This is the fairest view I have seen yet." The expression pleased them, and they named the future town Fairview. A log tavern was built in 1797, of peeled hemlock logs, and contained four rooms in the first story, besides a back kitchen and three rooms above. Capt. Swan, who rented the mills in 1802, also rented this tavern, paying $100 a year.

Among other early settlers who reached the township in 1797 were John and George Nicholson, John Kelso, Patrick Vance, Alexander, Patrick and John McKee, William Sturgeon and William Haggerty. The Nicholsons were born in Ireland, but emigrated to Lancaster County, where they remained a short time before coming to the lake shore. Mr. McKee remained in Fairview a few years, and then changed to Mill Creek. Gen. Kelso moved to Mill Creek in 1800, and from there in 1804 to Erie, where he died in 1819. In 1798, the colony was enlarged by the arrival of John Dempsey, of Dauphin County; and in 1800, by that of Thomas Kennedy, James Moorhead and Thomas McCreary. The latter was from Lancaster County, his brothers having come north at the same time and settled in Mill Creek. The settlers during 1802 were S. F. Gudtner, of Franklin County, William and James Arbuckle, of Maryland, and Joseph M. Kratz, a Frenchman, who afterward removed to Erie. About 1801, Jacob Ebersole, of Lancaster County, moved in, followed in 1805 by James Ryan, of Dauphin County. Rev. Johnston Eaton arrived the same year as Mr. Ryan, remained but a few months and returned for a permanent residence in 1806. Among other early settlers were John Caughey and Samuel McCreary, of Lancaster County. Mr. Caughey moved to Washington County in 1812, and came back in 1822. Moses Barnett, from Dauphin County, went in about 1816; Arthur Oney, from Otsego County, N. Y., in 1820; John Silverthorn, probably in the same year; David Russell about 1822; Samuel P. Allen, from New England, and Daniel Bear, from Lancaster County, in 1823. The first colonists, with the exception of Messrs. Ebersole and Gudtner, were of Protestant Irish stock, but at a subsequent date many Pennsylvania Dutch moved in, followed still later by numerous foreign Germans. Of the Pennsylvania Dutch, Daniel Waidler, from Lancaster County, made his settlement in 1834. Mr. Oney took up a 400-acre tract, at the rate of twenty shillings an acre.

In 1805 occurred the first death of a grown white person in the township, being that of John Gordon. The body was buried on the bank of the lake, near Manchester, and has never been removed.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

Fairview is one of the original townships of the county, but its size was largely reduced by the formation of Girard Township, which took place in 1832. It only embraces 16,198 acres now, making it one of the smallest townships. The old west line ran through Girard to a point near Miles Grove, parallel with the boundary between Elk Creek and Conneaut. The south line ran parallel with the one between Elk Creek and Girard, from Springfield on the west to McKean on the east, embracing what is now the northern portion of Franklin. Fairview is bounded on the north by Lake Erie, on the east by Mill Creek and McKean, on the south by Franklin, and on the west by Girard. Its shape is somewhat like that of a cross, and its greatest length is eight miles, with a breadth in the widest part of about six and a half miles. The population was 536 in 1820, 1,529 in 1830, 1,480 in 1840, 1,760 in 1850, 2,157 in 1870, and 1,482 in 1880. The post offices are Swanville and Avonia, and most of the trading is done in Fairview Borough. By the assessment of 1880, the valuation of the township was as follows: Real estate, $908,750; horses, 403; cows, 516; oxen, 24; total personal property, $34,570; trades and occupations, $6,400; money at interest, $15,363.

LANDS AND STREAMS.

With the exception of the gullies along Walnut and Elk Creeks, the sides of which are too abrupt to be tillable, there is hardly an acre of worthless land in the township. The lake shore plain attains a width of about two miles and a half. Its soil is of a sandy nature along the lake, merging into a gravelly formation further back, and producing every kind of grain, fruit and vegetable that can be cultivated in this section. The back lands are usually clay and loam, varied by patches of gravel. Wheat prospers in every part of the township. Potatoes are cultivated in large quantities, and many car loads are shipped every fall from Fairview Station to the large cities. Apple and peach trees bear yearly. Lands range in value from $50 to $125 on the lake shore plain, to $40 to $50 in the back districts. The chief streams of Fairview are Walnut Creek and Elk Creek, both of which have been described in the general sketch. Walnut Creek enters the township from Mill Creek, and, taking a northwesterly course, empties into the lake at Manchester. Elk Creek comes in from McKean, flows across the southern portion into Girard, and unites with the lake a little northwest of Miles Grove. The deepest part of the Walnut Creek gorge is in the vicinity of the Lake Shore Railroad culvert, where the banks are over a hundred feet high. A short distance above, and almost on the site of the Nickel Plate bridge, was the Walnut Creek aqueduct, once the wonder of this region, built to carry the water of the canal across the gully. It was constructed of timber, and was 104 feet high by about 800 feet long. The railroad culvert and embankment cover a space of about 600 feet, with width enough for three tracks. Bear Run is the principal tributary of Walnut Creek within the township. It heads on the J. Rusterholtz place, in the extreme eastern corner of Fairview, near the edge of Mill Creek, and falls into the main stream a short distance south of Weigle's grist mill, after a course of about four miles. Brandy Run rises near the center, on the farm of J. A. Kline, and after flowing seven or eight miles, joins Elk Creek, a little south of Girard Borough. Falls Run, another branch of Elk Creek, comes in from Franklin, on the south edge of the township, having a length of some three miles. It received its name from a beautiful cascade, near the Franklin stone quarry, where the water of the creek passes over a ledge fifty feet high. From there to Elk Creek its banks are 100 feet in height and almost perpendicular. Little Elk Creek rises in Franklin Township, runs through a corner of McKean, and falls into Elk Creek proper on the John Sterrett place. Trout Run is an independent stream which rises on the east line near McKean, runs in a northwesterly course through Fairview Borough, and empties into the lake two miles beyond, at Lock Haven. Its length is between six and eight miles, and it is subject to sudden and damaging overflows. Beaver Dam Run, a rivulet which tumbles into Walnut Creek about eighty rods below Bear's mill, received its name from an extensive embankment built by the beavers which formerly existed on what used to be termed the Barnett farm. Traces of their work were to be seen about forty years ago.

BRIDGES AND MILLS.

The principal bridges in Fairview Township are as follows: On Elk Creek—The Swalley, Ryan and Brooks (the latter of iron). On Walnut Creek—Manchester, Lake road (iron). N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R. (iron). Ridge road, Cross roads and Town line (built jointly by Mill Creek and Fairview Townships); also the Lake Shore Railroad culvert. On Bear Run—One across the breast of the dam at Bear's mill. On Trout Run—Culverts, at the grist mill and at the paper mill. On Little Elk Creek—Silverthorn, Galusha and Town line (built jointly by McKean and Fairview Townships).

The manufacturing industries of Fairview Township are as follows: On Bear Run—Nason's grist mill. On Walnut Creek—Weigle's grist mill, Lohrer's grist mill and Morgan & Co.'s paper mill, just below Avonia or Fairview Station (the paper mill was destroyed by fire August 30, 1883), and Feidler's grist mill at the Lake road (now owned by McKee & Kermick). These are all run by water except Feidler's mill and the paper mill, which have used steam in connection, but more recently water only. George Siegel has tile and brick works on the Andrews place, a mile south of the borough, and L. Vettner a tannery on the Lake road. The Walnut Creek Mills of Mr. Weigle were established at a very early day by S. F. Gudtner. In 1856, the flouring mill was rebuilt by Alexander Nicholson. Nason's mill was built by Daniel Bear in 1823, and fell into the hands of Mr. Nason in 1864. The second saw mill in Erie County was built at the mouth of Walnut Creek in 1797, under the supervision of Col. Thomas Forster, who added a grist mill in 1799, which was the first in the county. Both of these have gone down. In 1815, Samuel McCreary erected the first woolen mill in the county at the intersection of the Depot and Lake roads. He continued to operate it till 1841, when two of his sons succeeded him. In 1848, the firm became McCreary, Thornton & Co., and after that the mill had several changes of ownership until it was abandoned. The building was used as Morgan & Co.'s paper mill. The Lock Haven Woolen Mills, on the bank of the lake, were established by the Messrs. Caughy in 1842, who had built a saw mill the year previous. They disposed of the woolen factory in 1850 and of the saw mill in 1864, after which time they had various owners. The property was destroyed by fire in October, 1878. A number of saw mills once successfully operated have gone to ruin.

SCHOOLS.

From the venerable Richard Swan, Esq., who was born in 1796, we learn that the first schoolhouse in what is now Fairview Township, was erected in 1804, and stood probably a mile from the mouth of Walnut Creek (south and east). School was held in this building the first winter by John Linn, a Revolutionary soldier. The next teacher was William Gordon. The next schoolhouse, or rather cabin, in which school was taught, was located on the land of Jeremiah Sturgeon, which was within the present limits of the borough of Fairview. School was kept at this place two winters, taught first by John Hays, then by Squire McCreary. This was probably as early as 1810. William Sturgeon erected a schoolhouse on the present site of the dwelling of William R. Sturgeon, about 1811 or 1812, in which Jacob Eckison and John Hays taught respectively. The next schoolhouse in this neighborhood stood about one mile west of the residence of Thomas Sturgeon. It was erected about the year 1816 or 1817, and was a frame structure. It was built by the neighborhood, and among the teachers who held sway there were a Mr. Brown, Charles Landon and Alonzo Strong. Later than the above house, another, built of logs, stood near the present dwelling of Johnston Eaton, in which school was taught by Abner Jackson and Francis Plum. There was a regularly built schoolhouse in the southeastern part of the township, near the line dividing the townships of Mill Creek and Fairview, at a very early day. The second school attended by Mr. Swan was in a cabin house which had previously been vacated by Alexander McKee, and stood about one mile east of the present residence of Richard Swan on the Lake road. Robert Maxwell taught here about the close of the war of 1812. Following is a list of the present schools: Swan, on Lake road, at Richard Swan's; Willis, on the same road, near Frank Willis'; Lake road, north of Avonia (a graded school—two rooms); Swanville; Vance, on Bear Run; Heidler, on Heidler road; Ruhl, on McKean road; Sturgeon, near the cemetery; Rick, on the Girard road; Van Camp, near Elk Creek; Beckman, on the southwest, and Stuntz, south of the borough.

COMMON ROADS, RAILROADS AND CANAL.

The leading thoroughfares are the Lake and Ridge roads, extending across the whole width of the township from east to west—the former at an average distance of three-fourths of a mile, and the latter from one and a half to two and a half miles back from the lake; the Depot road from the borough to the lake; the Fairview and Waterford, running southeast into McKean; and the Girard and Waterford, which intersects the latter at Sterrettania. A route along the beach of the lake was opened between Erie and the mouth of Walnut Creek as early as 1797. The Ridge road crosses the Walnut Creek gully at Weigle's mill by two quite steep inclines, which are a source of considerable anxiety to teamsters and pleasure-seekers. The side hill at Walnut Creek was first cut down for a roadway by Arthur Oney, who received $100 for the job. He also built the first bridge across Walnut Creek on the line of the Ridge road. The Lake Shore Railroad passes through the township from Mill Creek to Girard at a short distance from the lake. The railroad stations are Fairview (or Avonia) and Swanville, both of which lie north of the towns they are intended to accommodate. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad also crosses the township a little south of the Lake Shore road, and the Erie & Pittsburgh Company use the Lake Shore track for their trains between Miles Grove and Erie. The old canal followed nearly the same line as the Nickel Plate road across the township.

POLITICAL.

The following is a list of the citizens of the township who have held State and county positions: Assembly, Myron H. Silverthorn, 1879-83. Sheriff, Miles W. Caghey, November 12, 1846, to November 5, 1849; Andrew F. Swan, November 29, 1867, to November 4, 1870; Joseph W. Swalley (by appointment), March 31, 1864, to December 6, 1864. Deputy Sheriff, Joseph W. Swalley, 1861-64. Register and Recorder, Daniel Long, November 12, 1872, to January 1, 1879. County Treasurer, Joseph W. Swalley (by appointment), March 10, 1870, to December 23, 1870; Jacob Yeagla, December 27, 1872, to December 17, 1874; William C. Hay, January 7, 1878, to January, 1881. County Commissioners, George Nicholson, 1820-23, also by appointment from August 6, 1828, until the ensuing October election; Isaac Webster, 1844-47; William W. Eaton, 1856-59; Myron H. Silverthorn, 1870-75.

Directors of the Poor, Curtis Heidler, 1845-48; M. M. Kelso, 1850-53; Alex. Nicholson, 1857-60; William W. Eaton, 1870-73. Clerk and Treasurer to the Directors of the Poor, D. W. Nason, 1879 to date. County Surveyor, Robert P. Holliday, November 5, 1863, to November 12, 1866, and February 22, 1869, to November 11, 1872. County Auditor, George Nicholson, 1809, and 1816-19; Daniel Sayre, 1823-26; David H. Chapman, 1827-30; John J. Swan, 1830-33; Moses Barnett, 1841-44; H. H. Bassler, 1858-1862; Jos. W. Swalley, 1861-64; Oliver P. Ferguson, 1865-68. Mercantile Appraisers, Johnston Eaton, 1859; John McCreary, 1876.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The following-named churches are located in the township: Salem Church of the Evangelical Association, Christian Church, United Brethren and St. Jacob's Evangelical United. Salem Church is the outgrowth of the Missionary labors of Rev. J. Siebert, whose labors began in this field in 1833. Other early missionaries in the county who also served this people were Revs. E. Stoovers, D. Brickley and J. Noecker. The house of worship, located in the eastern part of the township, was erected about thirty years ago. Rev. P. J. Fowl is the present incumbent. The circuit, since 1877, has been designated Fairview Circuit.

St. Jacob's Evangelical United Church is located on the Ridge road about a mile and a half east of the business part of Fairview Borough. The congregation was organized in the winter of 1852, and the church was built about the same time at a cost of $1,000. The first pastor was the Rev. Michael Kuchler. The present pastor is Rev. C. Gavehling, who has been in charge of the congregation in connection with the one at Girard for the past four years.

The United Brethren Church is upon the road from Franklin Center to Sterrettania, five miles south of Fairview Borough. The congregation was organized about 1857, and held meetings until some five years ago in the Van Camp Schoolhouse. Rev. Z. C. Dilley is the present incumbent. The church building was dedicated February 22, 1880, by Rev. J. Hill.

The Christian Church is three miles south of the borough, on the direct road from Girard to McKean Corners. The congregation was organized by Rev. Asal Fish, first pastor, in 1835. The building was erected in 1845, at a cost of $1,000. Among other pastors of the church have been Elders Ziegler, Morse, Sherman, Langdon, Washburn and Kendell.

MANCHESTER AND SWANVILLE.

As before stated, the first settlement at the mouth of Walnut Creek was made by Col. Forster and Mr. Swan, who gave the place the name of Fairview. John M. Kratz started a store in 1802, and a log tavern was kept by Richard Swan, who was followed by James Dunn. The latter was Postmaster in 1822. This was the great point of the township, till 1824, containing, besides the tavern and mill, a distillery, a blacksmith shop, etc. The elections and military trainings were held there, and as long as the stages and travel ran down to the mouth of the creek, it was rather a lively little village. The mills fell into the hands of Daniel Lord in 1829, who changed the name of the place to Manchester and erected a paper mill. It burned down while in charge of the Messrs. Reed, and no attempt has been made to rebuild it. A Presbyterian congregation was organized at Manchester in 1806, and a building erected there in 1810. Rev. Johnston Eaton was the pastor. The place of worship was removed to Swanville in 1832.

Swanville, on the Ridge road, nine miles west of Erie, and about a third of a mile south of the Lake Shore Railroad, received its name through John J. Swan, who built the first house and established the first tavern on the site. It consists of a blacksmith shop, store, schoolhouse, about twenty residences, and had a population of about 98 in 1880. Mr. Swan opened his tavern about 1832, and soon after another was started by the Nicholsons. These continued in operation until 1853-54, when the want of business compelled their closure. The Westminster Presbyterian Church in Mill Creek Township was built at Swanville in 1832, and removed to its present site in 1851. This church is interesting from the fact that Rev. Johnston Eaton, the first permanent minister of that denomination in the county, began and closed his career as its pastor. He came on in 1805, remained for a short time, went back to his former home and returned in 1806 to stay permanently. The first service held by Mr. Eaton was in Swan's tavern at the mouth of Walnut Creek. He was ordained on the 30th of June, 1808, in the barn of William Sturgeon, which stood within the present limits of Fairview Borough, and was installed as pastor of the congregations at Fairview and Springfield. His relations with the Springfield Church continued till November 8, 1814, and those with the Fairview Church till his death, on the 17th of June, 1847, in the seventy-second year of his age and the forty-second of his ministry. After his release from the Springfield Church, Mr. Eaton occupied his time till 1818, between Erie, Fairview and North East, and between Fairview and Erie till 1823, when the latter church felt strong enough to sustain a separate pastor. Mr. Eaton served as an army Chaplain during the campaign of 1812 and 1813. His venerable and estimable lady died in 1872 in the ninety-third year of her age, leaving a family of eight children, all of whom but one are living. The first church building was erected at Manchester, then known as Fairview. This was abandoned and a new building put up in 1832, at Swanville, which still retained the name of the Fairview Church. About 1837, the New School element of the congregation seceded and established a church in Fairview Borough, and in 1845 they were followed by a number who belonged to the Old-School side. This left the main body of worshipers in the church at Swanville living in the western part of Mill Creek. In order to have their place of worship more convenient, they removed the building in 1851 to a point on the Ridge road, several miles east of Swanville, where it is still in use, under the name of the Westminster Church. The building at Swanville stood where the school-house is now.

OTHER MATTERS.

Fairview Depot, or Avonia, is the railroad station of Fairview Borough, from which it is about half a mile north. The buildings of the place, besides the railroad offices, are George S. Stone's store and warehouse, some half a dozen residences and an eating house.

Lock Haven, at the mouth of Trout Run, is nothing more than a name. It once had a woolen factory and saw mill, but the latter fell into ruin and the former burned down, as stated above.

Two quarries have been opened in Fairview, one at Manchester and the other on Trout Run, just below the depot. From the Manchester quarry, some of the stone were taken for the locks of the canal. The material is not very good, however, and neither of the quarries has proved of much value. Most of the stone used in the township and borough comes from Howard's quarry in Franklin.

BOROUGH OF FAIRVIEW.

The borough of Fairview was incorporated in 1868, covering an area of one mile square, and including a population at that time of some 400. It stands on the first rise of the lake shore plain, twelve miles west of Erie, a mile and a half south of the lake, and a half a mile from the railroad station. The Ridge road forms its main street, and Trout Run winds through its limits. The churches of Fairview are Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Lutheran and German Evangelical, the first being of brick and the two others of frame. Its schools are all held in one large two-story building erected in 1866. It has three apartments, and the schools are graded. Two teachers are employed. The first schoolhouse in the village was erected by the people some time prior to 1838. The manufacturing concerns of the place are Henry Kreider's steam planing and saw mill, James H. Glazier's steam cider mill, J. Galyard's steam cider, sorghum and jelly mill, S. J. Fargo & Gardner's wagon shop, and three or four blacksmith shops. The mercantile interests embrace one dry goods store, one grocery, one clothing store, two hardware stores, one millinery store and one drug store. The hotel is known as the Monitor House. The borough once boasted of two military companies—the Fairview Guards, organized in 1858, with J. Beckman as Captain, and another with O. H. P. Ferguson as Captain. By the United States census, Fairview Borough had a population of 480 in 1870 and 425 in 1880. The assessment of the latter year gave the following results: Real estate, $165,081; horses, 64; cows, 35; personal property, $4,011; trades and occupations, $9,155; money at interest, $35,435.

EARLY INCIDENTS.

The first settlers upon the site were the Messrs. Sturgeon, in honor of whom the place was long known at Sturgeonville. The first tavern, a small log building on the bank of Trout Run, along the Ridge road, was built and kept by William Sturgeon. This was closed some years, when Mr. Sturgeon erected another tavern near by, of which W. W. Warner was long the landlord. The present Monitor House was erected by S. C. Sturgeon, and has been kept at periods by John Clemens, of Erie, S. N. McCreary, and others. Following the tavern came a store, a blacksmith shop, etc. On the death of William Sturgeon in 1837, he directed that after the demise of his wife some fifty acres of land and twenty town lots should go to the Presbyterian Church of Fairview. A church was to be organized and a building erected within one year from the time specified in the will, otherwise the property was to be donated to the Presbyterian Board of Publication. In the year of Mr. Sturgeon's death, the general assembly of the church separated into New School and Old School, and both branches found ardent friends and advocates in the Fairview congregation. Each side made haste to get up edifices in time to avail itself of Mr. Sturgeon's legacy, and as a matter of course the question as to which it belonged had to be settled by the courts. After a short legal tussle, the court below decided in favor of the Old School branch, and, on appeal to the Supreme Court, that body affirmed the decision. The union of the denomination in November, 1869, did away with the need of two buildings, and both of the contending branches now worship together in harmony. The building at present occupied was built in 1874, and cost $11,000. It occupies the same lot on which both the Old and New School edifices stood during the days of contention. Rev. Mr. De Witt, installed in 1879, is present incumbent. The first Old School church in Fairview was replaced by another, which burned down. The New School building was removed and is now occupied by another denomination.

D. B. McCreary

OTHER CHURCHES.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is the outgrowth of a class formed in the house of Justice Osborne by Rev. John P. Kent in 1817. It consisted of Justice Osborne (leader), wife and daughter, Giles Badger and wife, Alexander Nicholas and wife, and Mrs. Odell. As early as 1841, the appointment was on McKean Circuit, to which it belonged until 1860, when Fairview Circuit was formed. A. Bashline was pastor in 1881, 1882 and 1883. The first church edifice was built in 1836 and stood outside of the village. The second building was erected in 1854, costing $600.

Mt. Nabo Church of the Evangelical Association owes its origin to the early missionary labors of Rev. J. Siebert, who began preaching in Erie County in 1833. Following him in this field were Revs. Stoevers, D. Brickley and J. Noecker. Preaching was held at private residences and later in school-houses. The congregation was on Erie Circuit until 1877, since which time it has been on Fairview Circuit. The church building of the society was formerly occupied by the Presbyterians, of whom it was purchased in April, 1872.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church of the village was organized in 1856, with less than a dozen members. This congregation and the one at St. Jacob's on the Ridge road were originally one and the same church society, but at the date given above became separate bodies, owing to some difficulties which arose between the membership and pastor. The Rev. Michael Kuchler became the first pastor of this society. The first house of worship was built in 1857, on the outskirts of the borough, and used until the present one was erected in 1878. At present the congregation is without a pastor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Fairview Cemetery, on the northwest edge of the borough, covers a tract of fifteen acres, and has been in use about sixteen years. The first body interred was that of Mrs. Milton Sturgeon, and the second that of a five-year old daughter of George Waidler.

Mrs. Sarah Green, who was living at Fairview in February, 1883, was claimed to be one hundred and two years old, and able to go about and do all kinds of housework. The wife of Casper Doll died in February, 1883, aged ninety-seven years and ten days.

CHAPTER IX.

SPRINGFIELD TOWNSHIP.

SPRINGFIELD is the northwestern township of the county, and has an area of 21,788 acres. It was one of the original sixteen. The township is bounded on the north by Lake Erie, on the east by Girard and Conneaut, on the south by Conneaut, and on the west by Ash-tabula County, Ohio. Up to the year 1835, the south line was a mile or so further north than now, but by an arrangement with Conneaut the latter ceded that portion of her territory lying beyond the creek, on condition that Springfield should pay one-half the expense of maintaining bridges along the boundary. The east line of Springfield extended to Miles Grove, parallel with that of Conneaut and Elk Creek, until 1832, when the township was reduced by the formation of Girard. The first officers of the township were elected in 1811. Springfield contained 896 inhabitants in 1820, 1,520 in 1830, 2,344 in 1840, 1,916 in 1850, 1,742 in 1870, and 1,792 in 1880. Its greatest length is about seven and a half and its greatest width about six and a quarter miles. The villages are East Springfield, West Springfield and North Springfield, all of which have post offices of the same name. The old State line of Pennsylvania, before the purchase of the Triangle, terminated on the farm of Joseph Hewitt, in Springfield, between four and five miles east of the Ohio boundary.

LANDS, ETC.

The lake shore plain is about three miles wide in Springfield, and while there is a good deal of high broken land in the south part, the township is less marred by gullies than is the case further east in the county. The best portion of the township is conceded to lie along the Ridge road, in the vicinity of East Springfield. A mile or less west of that place, on the same line, the quality of the land deteriorates, though some excellent farms are found at and around the village of West Springfield. In the eastern part of the township, the lake shore lands are generally good, but in the neighborhood of Raccoon Creek they become sour, and from there on to Ohio are below the average of the county. Numerous stretches of sand are met with that hardly pay for cultivation, and other parts are cold, swampy and difficult of drainage. Back of the Ridge road, and from there to Conneaut Creek, the soil is usually clay, with here and there a sand hill, which forms a curious feature of the topography. As there are exceptions to all rules, so there is to this statement. A valley commences just south of West Springfield and extends clear into Ohio, with a width ranging from a half a mile to a mile, which is one of the best portions of the township. Wheat and other grains are raised everywhere, but the back country is best adapted for grazing. Great quantities of potatoes are produced, and many carloads are shipped annually from Cross's Station and North Springfield. The lake shore farms are valued at $30 to $100 per acre, the Ridge road at $40 to $100, and the back country from $30 to $70.

The bank of the lake is bold and abrupt along the front of Springfield Township, ranging in height from fifty to sixty feet. The Moravian grant embraced 2,797 acres in Springfield and Conneaut, extending from the lake to a short distance south of Conneaut Creek, and taking in a strip about a mile wide, except at the Ridge road, where it narrowed to fifty or sixty rods. The reason for this diversion was that the surveyors encountered a formidable beaver swamp at that point, which has since been mostly reclaimed by drainage. William and James Miles were long the agents of the Moravians. The tract was bought in a body by N. Blickensderfer and James Miles in 1849, who sold it out in pieces from 1850 on. The Ridge road is closely settled between East and West Springfield, and many of the farmhouses are large, neat and pleasant, giving an impression of wealth and comfort. Several of the buildings are brick, and nearly all are surrounded by pretty grounds. Some delightful homes are also to be seen on the road from the lake to East Springfield.

The assessment for 1883 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $941,410; cows, 558; value, $13,947; oxen, 6; value, $340; horses and mules, 448; value, $28,660; value of trades and occupations, $9,750; money at interest, $34,860.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first settler in the township was Capt. Samuel Holliday, of Franklin County, who came on in 1796, located 700 acres at the mouth of Crooked Creek, built a cabin, and returned to his former home in the fall of the year. Soon after his arrival, he was joined by John Devore, of Bedford County, John Mershon, of New Jersey, and William McIntyre and Patrick Ager, natives of Ireland, but residents for a time in Eastern Pennsylvania, all of whom became permanent settlers. Capt. Holliday married in Franklin County in April, 1797, and the young couple started immediately on a wedding tour to their new home, Mrs. H. riding on horseback and her husband walking by her side with his gun over his shoulder. Their route was by a trail through the woods from Pittsburgh to Erie, and from there along the beach of the lake to the mouth of Crooked Creek. Their goods came some time after, in boats up the Allegheny and French Creek to Waterford. During the year 1797, the little colony was increased by the arrival of Oliver Cross, from Vermont, and of Thomas and Oliver Dunn, from Ireland. The Duns remained but a few months, when they changed to McKean, where they settled permanently. Other pioneers reached the township as follows: In 1798, Nicholas Lebarger, of Bedford County; in 1800, Matthias Brindle, of Franklin County, and a Mr. Bruce; in 1801, Robert McKee, of Cumberland County, and Oliver Smith, from Massachusetts; in 1802, Isaac, Jesse, John D. and Thomas R. Miller, John Eaton and John Law, all of Franklin County, Henry Adams, of Massachusetts, John Hewitt, of Connecticut, and John Rudd, Jr.; in 1803, Andrew Cochran and Abraham Eagley, of Dauphin County, George Ferguson, of Cumberland County, and William Ferguson, of Ohio; in 1804, Samuel Rea, of Franklin County, and John Rudd, Sr., and family; in 1806, John Hall, of Mifflin County; in 1808, Erastus DeWolf, of New York; in 1810, Joseph Ware, of Vermont; in 1813, Zachariah Thomas, of Vermont; in 1815, William Gould, of Chautauqua County, N. Y., Anderson Hubbard, of Ohio, and Luke Thayer, of Massachusetts; in 1816, Benjamin Carr, of Essex County, N. Y.; in 1817, John Albert, of Cattaraugus County, N. Y.; in 1818, David Ellis, of Massachusetts, and Derby Walter and Ezekiel Currier, both of Lyme, N. H.; in 1819, Andrew and Henry Mallory and Thomas Ivory, all of New York; in 1820, James, Benjamin and Lucius Bond, of Massachusetts, John S. Sherman, of New York, and James Anderson, of Virginia; in 1824, A. Whiton, of Ashtabula County, Ohio; in 1826, John Monell, of Otsego County, N. Y., and Peter Simmons; in 1829, Geo. Simmons, of Saratoga County, N. Y.; in 1830, Lorenzo Harvey, of New York, William H. Townsend, of Washington County, N. Y., and Selah Walbridge, of Vermont; in 1831, I. Pond, of New York, and Seymour Devereaux, of North East; in 1832, Scott Keith, of Girard, Penn., Stephen Warner, of Genesee County, N. Y., and Matthew Gray, of Lockport, N. Y.; in 1833, R. R. Robinson, of Sparta, N. Y.; in 1834, William Marsh and E. Smith, both of Wyoming County, N. Y.; in 1835, Clark Baldwin, of Vermont, Thomas Potter, of New York, and E. R. Hedden and William Church, both of New Jersey; in 1836, Thomas Webster, of Washington County, N. Y.; in 1839, T. S. Cowles, of Connecticut; in 1840, C. Lindsey, of New York; in 1841, Joseph Strong, of Massachusetts; in 1842, Gilbert Hurd, from Rock Stream, N. Y.; in 1846, L. W. Savage, of Genesee County, N. Y.; in 1854, Joel Day, of Wyoming County, N. Y.; in 1863, Humphrey A. Hills, of Conneaut Township. Mr. Brindle, like Capt. Holliday, first came on in 1800, located lands, went back and brought his family the next spring. He was a soldier of 1812, and the father of thirteen children. Jesse Miller removed to Mercer County in a few years, and remained there the balance of his life. Mr. Smith reached the county by an open boat from Canada, where it was his original purpose to locate.

INCIDENTS OF THE PIONEERS.

Mr. McIntyre died in 1867, at the ripe age of ninety-five. He brought the first potatoes planted in the township, carrying them in a sack thrown over his back the entire distance from Pittsburgh. In 1802, a barrel of salt cost Robert McKee fifty Spanish dollars; it had to be brought from Buffalo to Erie in a small boat, and from the latter place to Springfield on pack-horses. In 1800, the only route to Erie was along the beach of the lake or by a bridle path through the woods. At that period, there was a wide beach along the whole lake front of the county. Andrew Cochran was Captain of a company of soldiers during the last war with Great Britain, who volunteered for the protection of our coast, and remained in service till the declaration of peace. It was attached to the command of Col. Wallace, at Erie; was frequently called out, but was never actually in an engagement. Some time during the campaign, a rumor reached the township that the enemy had landed at the mouth of Conneaut Creek, which created the utmost consternation in the infant settlement. Several families fled, and others had preparations made for a hasty departure. Luckily, the report proved to be false. The first female white child was Elizabeth Holliday, born May 14, 1798; the first male white child was Joseph Brindle, born March 1, 1800; and the first funeral is said to have been that of the wife of Isaac Miller, whose grave, some assert, was the first in the old Presbyterian Graveyard. This is disputed, however, by one of the old residents, who is positive the interment of a Mr. Davis took place earlier. Mr. Simmons is the oldest man who has ever resided in the township, and one of the oldest in the county. He was still living in 1881 in his ninety-eighth year.

STREAMS, MILLS AND FACTORIES.

The chief stream of Springfield is Conneaut Creek, which forms its entire southern boundary. The stream does not receive a single tributary in the township; on the contrary the high but tillable hills which border its channel, are the head-waters of two or three creeks which flow northward to the lake. Next in importance to Conneaut Creek is Crooked Creek, which rises within the borough limits of Lockport, runs in a general northwesterly course, through the southern portion of Girard and the northeastern of Springfield, and falls into the lake about a half a mile beyond North Springfield, having a length of some ten miles. Raccoon Creek heads on the farm of J. Cross, near Conneaut Creek, and flowing north, after a course of about ten miles, reaches the lake at Eagley's Grove. Turkey Run takes its rise on the Gleason farm, a little south of West Springfield, and flows about four and a half miles within the township and a mile or more in Ohio. It falls into the lake east of Conneaut harbor. Two or three small streams run into the lake, which are not of sufficient importance to have a name. The channel of Crooked Creek, from the Girard line to the lake, is wide and deep, but the banks are less precipitous through the lake shore plain than those of Elk and Walnut Creeks. Five substantial covered bridges span Conneaut Creek, built, owned and maintained by the two townships. The Lake Shore Railroad culvert and embankment over Crooked Creek at North Springfield is one of the most solid and costly pieces of work in the county. The embankment is ninety feet above the water, and from 700 to 800 feet long. It was through this culvert that a house was washed in the fall of 1878, during the greatest flood ever known on the stream. The manufacturing concerns of Springfield Township are Porter's grist and saw mill, on Conneaut Creek, half a mile north of Cherry Hill; H. V. Lines' grist and saw mill, on the Ridge road, a mile east of East Springfield; J. M. Strong's grist and saw mill, a mile north of East Springfield; Reed's saw mill, on the Ridge road, half a mile west of West Springfield; a cheese factory at the latter place and an extensive tile works. Lines' and Strong's mills are both in the valley of Crooked Creek, and propelled by the water of that stream, in connection with steam. The Porter Mill was built by Comfort Hay about 1823, and the West Springfield Tile Works were started in 1869. The cheese factory at the latter place was established in 1874, has run successfully from the first, and is still well patronized. The Strong Mills were built by Andrew Cochran about 1820, and rebuilt by Thomas Webster, about 1841 or 1842, who ran them till his death, in 1860, when they fell into the hands of Joseph M. Strong. He has recently overhauled them, and they are in as good condition as any similar property in the county. The first saw mill where Lines' mills are was built by Amos Remington and Oliver Cross about 1814, and rebuilt by Nathan Cass about 1824 or 1825, who managed it jointly with Willard Pope. The firm sold the property to Mr. Case, who built the grist mill about 1832. After Case, the mills changed owners frequently, being sold in succession to Tucker & Woodruff, Justin Nash, William Cross, Scott Keith and Walter and Henry Keith, who rebuilt them in 1857 or 1858. Two or three years after they were put up at Sheriff's sale, and bid in by Judge Cross, who gave the title to Jonathan Keith; from him they passed into the hands of Oliver & Brecht, of Mr. Finkinger, and finally, about 1870, of Mr. Line. They were burned in 1871 and rebuilt in 1872. The very first mill owner in the township was Capt. Holliday, who built a saw mill about 1801 or 1802, and a grist mill in 1803, near the mouth of Crooked Creek, both of which have gone down. This grist mill was erected a little later than the Silverthorn Mill in Girard, contrary to the usual belief.

BURIAL PLACES.

The cemetery at East Springfield is the principal burying place of the township, though small graveyards are attached to the Christian Church in the same village, at West Springfield, at the Town House, and in other localities. The inclosure takes in eighteen acres of high and dry gravel and loam on the north side of the village, is tastefully laid out, contains some fine monuments, is carefully kept, and is deservedly the pride of the people. It was originally the burial ground of the Presbyterian Church, to which other land was added by purchase. The cemetery was surveyed and graded in 1864, John H. Millar being the engineer and Robert P. Holliday the contractor. The first sale of lots was in October of that year, and the first body interred was that of Henry Keith, which was placed in the inclosure in August, 1864, before the work was completed. The original officers were: William Holliday, President; I. Newton Miller, Secretary; T. Webster, Treasurer; William Cross, Samuel Holliday, Henry Teller, J. M. Strong and Samuel H. Brindle, Managers. Judge Cross was elected President in January, 1878, and still retains the position. Messrs. Miller and Webster have been officers from the day the cemetery originated to the present hour. Funerals come from Girard, Elk Creek and Conneaut. In the northeast part of the cemetery are still to be seen traces of one of the series of ancient earthworks, four in number, which extended from the western part of Girard to the southern portion of Springfield. The other mounds in Springfield are on the M. Oney farm, about a mile southwest of East Springfield, and on the Thomas McKee place, half a mile further west. They are all in a direct line from northeast to southwest, and are similar in character, each one covering over half an acre, being circular in form, and having earthen embankments two to three feet high by six feet thick at the base.

During the war for the Union, Springfield sent about 150 men into the army. Every one of the departed patriots has a headstone at the township expense.

PUBLIC MEN.

The following is a list of citizens of Springfield who have held State and county offices; Assembly, Thomas R. Miller, 1836; David A. Gould, 1843 and 1846; I. Newton Miller, 1870. Associate Judge, William Cross, November 22, 1861, to November 8, 1866; elected without opposition, his name being on the Union and Republican tickets. Prothonotary, Maj. S. V. Holliday, January 2, 1882-85. County Superintendent of Public Schools, L. W. Savage, 1860-63. Register and Recorder, Samuel Rea, Jr., November 17, 1863, to November 16, 1866; Henry G. Harvey, November 16, 1866, to November 19, 1872. County Treasurer, Thomas J. Devore, December 23, 1858, to December 20, 1860. County Commissioner, Thomas R. Miller, 1831-34; Richard Robinson, 1852-55. Directors of the Poor, Thomas R. Miller, 1840-42. John Spaulding was elected in 1856, but refused to serve. County Auditor, John Eagley, 1848-51. Mercantile Appraisers, Samuel Rea, Jr., 1858; Perry Devore, 1862. County Surveyor, Robert P. Holliday, November 5, 1863, to November 12, 1866, and February, 1869, to November 11, 1872; George M. Robison, January, 1879, to May, 1879. Hon. Humphrey A. Hills, County Commissioner from 1847-50, Deputy Marshal for taking the census in 1850, Commissioner to fix the boundary between Erie and Crawford Counties in the same year, and Assemblyman in 1852-53, has been a resident of East Springfield since 1863, moving there from Conneaut, his former home. E. B. Ward, the Detroit millionaire, was a native of the township, where he began life as a fisherman and sailor. The citizens of Springfield who have become residents of Erie City are Samuel Rea, Jr., Col. E. P. Gould, Carl Walbridge, Joseph Patterson and A. E. Sisson.

ACADEMIES AND SCHOOLS.

The township possesses no less than three Academies, one each at the villages of East, West and North Springfield. The first of these, at West Springfield, was founded in 1853, and had a hundred and sixty-five pupils in 1855, with four teachers. Among its Principals were John A. Austin, W. H. Heller, Joseph H. Colt and C. C. Sheffield. It was burned down in December, 1859, and rebuilt of brick two or three years subsequently. The East Springfield Academy, once an institution of high repute, opening with 150 scholars, grew out of the rivalry between the two villages, and was built in 1856. The first Principal was B. J. Hawkins, and L. W. Savage held the position in 1858. Neither school has been maintained distinctly as an academy for some years. The one at East Springfield is now used wholly as a public school, and the West Springfield one as a select and public school, the former having two and the latter three teachers. The North Springfield academy was established in 1866, after the two others had run down, and is still maintained as a select school. The other schools of the township are the Depot, at North Springfield; Anderson, on the Lake road, three-quarters of a mile north of Strong's mill; Weed, two miles south of East Springfield, on the Albion road; Baldwin, on the Ridge road, a mile west of East Springfield; Moon, on the road from West Springfield to Albion; Center, near the Town House; Brockway, one mile north of the Town House; Brindle, on the Lake road, a mile and a half west of North Springfield; Deveraux, near Deveraux Corners; Hubbard, on the Ridge road, beyond West Springfield; Blickensderfer, on the Lake road, one mile west of Raccoon Creek, and Hewett, in the southwest. One of the first schoolhouses was built at an early day on the Joseph Eagley place, near the lake. The material was logs, with chimney of stones and sticks. In 1818, a log schoolhouse was standing in what is now the village of East Springfield, in which James Porter was teaching school. William Clark, a Mr. West and a Mr. Smith were other early teachers in the East Springfield settlement. About the year 1822, Louisa De Wolf kept a school in a vacated log cabin located in the Ferguson neighborhood, about three miles southwest of East Springfield. Not long after this, another school was held in a similar building, probably a mile east of East Springfield, in the summer by Jane Ferguson and in the winter by William Branch. About the year 1827, a frame schoolhouse stood in the Vandeventer neighborhood, some two and a half miles southwest of East Springfield. Hiram Dixon was one of the early teachers in this house.

RAILROADS, COMMON ROADS AND HOTELS.

Springfield has the advantage of two through lines of railroad—the Lake Shore and the Nickel Plate—which cross the township from Girard into Ohio, the first at a distance of half a mile to a mile from the lake, and the second farther south. The Lake Shore has a station at North Springfield, and the Nickel Plate one each for East and West Springfield. The Erie & Pittsburg Railroad branches off from the Lake Shore in Girard Township, half a mile from the Springfield line, which it follows southward into Conneaut, at about the same average distance. Crosses' Station, in Girard Township, a mile and a half from East Springfield, was established for the accommodation of the township. The principal common thoroughfares are the Ridge road, which runs nearly through the center of the township, forming the main streets of East and West Springfield; the Lake road, which is half a mile from the water at North Springfield, and follows the lake front to the Ohio line; the Middle Ridge, which leaves the Lake road not far from North Springfield, runs southwest and strikes the Ridge road a mile beyond West Springfield; the Kingsville, which branches off from the Ridge road two-thirds of a mile west of East Springfield and continues to Kingsville, Ohio; and the roads from East and West Springfield to Albion, which come together at Sherman's Corners, near Conneaut Creek, in the southeast.

From the close of the last war with Great Britain to the opening of the railroad, the travel on the Ridge road was very extensive, requiring numerous public houses on the route. Scott Keith opened a house at East Springfield for the accommodation of the public in 1832, which became one of the most famous and popular between Erie and Cleveland. It is still open. In 1822, William Doty removed to East Springfield from North East, and took charge of the old Remington stand, which he kept till his death in 1864. The Keith House is still kept open. The East Springfield Post Office, the first in the township, was established many years ago. The post office at West Springfield was established in 1838 or 1839, with Samuel Castle as the first Postmaster, and the one at North Springfield some time after 1860. That at West Springfield was long kept by Riley Potter. On the night of the 6th of December, 1874, this office was broken into and robbed, set on fire by the burglars and destroyed with the store to which it was attached. Two of the guilty parties were caught, convicted and sent to the penitentiary.

CHURCHES.

The churches of the township are Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal and Christian at East Springfield, and Methodist Episcopal, Baptist and Universalist at West Springfield. The Universalist and the two Methodist Episcopal buildings are brick: all the rest are frame. The Methodist congregations are one charge, having their parsonage at West Springfield. John Mershon was married to Miss Bathsheba Brush, of Greene County, in January, 1799, three years after his settlement in this county. When the bride came to her new home she brought with her a church letter from the Methodist minister at the place of her former residence. By her inducement, Rev. Joseph Bowen, a local preacher of the denomination at Franklin, Penn., held services in the Mershon house in September, 1800, and later in the same year he came again. These were the first Methodist services in the county. In the spring of 1801, a class was organized by James Quinn, near Lexington, and in 1804 a church building was erected about a mile south of West Springfield, which was long known as the Brush Meeting-house. During the latter year, nearly a hundred persons were converted under the ministry of Rev. Andrew Hemphill. In July, 1810, nearly forty persons were awakened through the instrumentality of a powerful sermon preached by Rev. John Gruber, Presiding Elder. A second society, with fourteen members, was formed on the 7th of January, 1815, at the house of Mr. Webber, in what is now Girard, but was then a part of Springfield, which has since been known as the Fair Haven Church. This congregation divided in 1821, in consequence of a personal difficulty between two of the leaders, and twenty-one of the members formed what they styled a "Reformed Methodist Church." In 1825, a fourth society was organized in the east part of the town, which was the beginning of the church at East Springfield. The Cottage Church, which stood on the Ridge road, about half a mile west of West Springfield, was commenced in 1830, but was not finished till 1836. The present church at West Springfield was built in 1854, and the one at East Springfield about 1866. The second parsonage in Erie Conference was built at Springfield. S. Ayers and J. C. Ayers were the first pastors in 1830, and latterly E. M. Kernick, 1882-83.

The first Presbyterian edifice was a small log structure which stood on the old portion of the cemetery grounds. A preaching point was established at Springfield in 1804, by Rev. Robert Patterson, of North East, who was then the only regularly settled minister in the county, and the building referred to was put up the same year. The congregation was organized in 1806, by Rev. J. Eaton, pastor of the church at Fairview, who assumed the same relation to the Springfield Church June 3d, 1803. His relation with the Springfield Church continued until November 8, 1814. The original congregation consisted of about thirty members. Isaac Miller, James Blair and James Bruce were the first Elders. The present church edifice was built in 1844, at a cost of $4,000.

The Christian Church at East Springfield was organized with twelve members in 1826 by Rev. Asa C. Morrison, and had Rev. Joseph Marsh for its first pastor. The church was built in 1839, and cost $700. A graveyard is attached to it, from which the bodies are gradually being removed to the cemetery. Elder H. Crampton is the present incumbent.

The Baptist congregation was organized in 1826, and erected a church in 1833, which cost $1,600. This building, which stood on the Ridge road, about two and a half miles west of East Springfield, was sold to the township, and a new one was erected at West Springfield in 1858, at a cost of $1,600. Rev. Asa Jacobs was the first pastor of the congregation. The old edifice is used as a Town House. The present pastor is Elder Telford, who has served the congregation for three years.

The Universalist congregation at West Springfield was organized January 10, 1848, and built a house of worship in 1850. The pastors of the congregation have been as follows: Revs. P. P. Fowler, J. S. Flagler, B. F. Hitchcock, A. J. Patterson, C. E. Shipman, I. George, H. S. Whitney, and the present incumbent, C. L. Shipman.

VILLAGES.

The village of East Springfield occupies a high and beautiful site along the Ridge road, three miles south from the lake, two and a half from North Springfield, on the Lake Shore Railroad, one and a half west of Cross's Station, on the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, four and a half southwest of Miles Grove, five west of Girard, and twenty-one by common road from Erie. The country around is the best portion of the township, and the village is the largest settlement. East Springfield comprises three churches, one academy, one hotel, one general store, two groceries, one hardware store, one millinery store, one drug store, one harness shop, one tailor shop, one meat market, one wagon shop, one furniture store and undertaking establishment, one cider mill, three blacksmith shops, and about forty buildings. The population in 1880 was 102.

West Springfield has grown up at the junction of the Albion with the Ridge road, three miles east of the Ohio line, four west of East Springfield, and twenty-five by common road from Erie. It is not as large as its sister village, but contains some neat residences and other buildings. The institutions of the place are three churches, an academy, a cheese factory, hotel, general store, tile works and two blacksmith shops. The village sustains one physician and one minister. The old cemetery has fallen pretty much into disuse and the bodies are being removed to the more attractive burial ground at East Springfield.

North Springfield has sprung up within the last thirty years on the Lake Shore Railroad, just west of the Crooked Creek embankment, about half a mile south of Lake Erie, and twenty by railroad from Erie. The railroad company have at this place a station house, two water tanks and an engine house to pump the water up from Crooked Creek. Besides these there are an academy, an old hotel building, now used as a boarding house, a general store, a grocery and a public school. The village consists of perhaps twenty buildings and sixty inhabitants. It stands mostly on a portion of the John Holliday farm. The station was established in 1852, the year the railroad was opened, ground for the purpose being given by Samuel and John Holliday.

On the M. H. Gould farm, near the residence of Seymour Ware, in the valley of a branch of Turkey Run, is a famous salt spring, the water of which is so strongly impregnated with the mineral that the cattle on the place need no salting. Some sixty years ago Judge Gould drilled a well at this spot to the depth of 200 feet, but in putting the well down a fresh water spring was struck which diluted the salt water to an extent that rendered it valueless.

CHAPTER X.

CONNEAUT TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF ALBION.

CONNEAUT TOWNSHIP is one of the original subdivisions of Erie County. It is the extreme southwestern township of the county, and contains 25,540 acres. The population was 631 in 1810; 1,324, in 1830; 1,746, in 1840; 1,942, in 1850; 2,118, in 1860; 1,538, in 1870, and 1,545, in 1880. The decrease between 1860 and 1870 was due to the incorporation of Albion as a borough in 1861. The township is bounded on the north by Springfield and Girard, on the east by Elk Creek, on the west by Astabula County, Ohio, and on the south by Beaver and Spring Townships, Crawford County. Its greatest length is about eight and three-fourths miles from east to west, and its greatest width six and one-fourth from north to south. Conneaut contains the villages of Cherry Hill, Keepville, Tracy and Albion Depot, all of which have post offices except the last. The township received its title from Conneaut Creek, its principal stream. The word Conneaut is of Indian origin, signifying "snow place," from the fact that the snow used to lie longer upon the ice of Conneaut Lake, Crawford County, than anywhere else the country round.

The appraisalment for 1883 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $686,536; number of cows, 574; value, $14,250; number of oxen, 16; value, $995; horses and mules, 423, value, $23,240; total value of personal property assessed, $38,485; value of trades and occupations, $8,820; amount of money at interest, $6,378. The census returns for 1880 show that there were 433 houses occupied by 453 families.

THE FIRST SETTLERS.

The first settler within the bounds of the township was Jonathan Spaulding, who reached there from New York in the year 1795. Two years after the Population Company sent Col. Dunning McNair on as agent, who established his headquarters at what became known as Lexington, and with a corps of assistants surveyed the country, laid out roads, and made preparations for disposing of the property. In 1798, Abiather Crane and his brother Elihu, from Connecticut, located near Col. McNair, but neither remained long, the former moving to Mill Creek in 1809, and the latter to Elk Creek in the spring of 1800. Abiather first went into Conneaut as a surveyor in 1797, but did not locate there until the ensuing year. The arrival of other pioneers was as follows: In 1800, Matthew Harrington, from Vermont; George Griffey and Andrew Cole, from Onondaga County, N. Y., and Stephen Randall and his son Sheffield, from Rensselaer County, N. Y.; in 1801, Robert McKee, from Cumberland County, Penn.; in 1802, Henry Ball, from Fredericksburg, Va., Patrick Kennedy, his son Royal, and William Payne, from Connecticut; in 1803, Marsena Keep and son Marsena, from Montgomery County, N. Y.; in 1804, Joel Bradish and brothers, from New York; in 1806, Lyman Jackson, from Otsego County, N. Y.; in 1810, Michael Jackson, son of Lyman, who remained but a few months, returned to New York and came back five years later. The following persons settled in the township at a later date: In 1815, George Stuntz, from Barclay County, Va., and his son E. W. Stuntz; in 1816, Medad Pomeroy, from Massachusetts, with his sons, Nathaniel, Uriah, John, Lyman, James, George and Horace, and three daughters, together with James W. and G. Spicer, from New York; in 1817, Benjamin Sawdy and Isaac Pomeroy, from Massachusetts; in 1818, David Sawdy, from Massachusetts, Abijah Barnes, from Cayuga County, N. Y., and Samuel Bradish; in 1819, Noah Kidder and son Francis, Edward DeWolf and Daniel Rossiter, from New York, and Samuel Sawdy (father of David and Benjamin), with his sons John, Job and Daniel, from New Bedford, Mass.; in 1820, Rodolphus Loomis, from Chautauqua County, N. Y.; about 1824 or 1825, Harrison Parks; in 1829, Jonas Lewis; in 1831, Thomas Bowman, wife and family (including Ralph), from Oneida County, N. Y.; in 1832, William Cornell and John Curtis; in 1833, Chester Morley and Andrew and Silas Morrison; in 1834, Christopher Cross, Edward Dorrence and Hiram Griffis; in 1837, Andrew Swap, Daniel Waters and Joseph Tubbs; in 1838, Isaiah and Johnson Pelton; in 1839, Marcus A. Bumpus. Among those who went in about the commencement of the century, are Bartholomew Forbes, Howard, John, Nathan, David and Charles Salisbury, Thomas Sprague, James Paul, James Whittington, Thomas Alexander, John Stuntz, Giles Badger, Ichabod Baker and Jacob Walker. A large portion of the settlers whose former homes are not given were from New York, principally from the central counties. Henry Ball was a Captain in the war of 1812, and several of the others served against the British as privates. Jonathan Spaulding's sons, David, John and George, were born in the township, the first in 1802, the second in 1806, and the last in 1816. William Harrington, the oldest son of Matthew, was born in 1805. William Paul went into Elk Creek with Mr. Colton in 1797; returned to Connecticut, and came back about 1816. George Stuntz was a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Noah Kidder and son went to Springfield in 1817, but moved to Conneaut two years after. Medad Pomeroy settled on Conneaut Creek, about a mile north of Albion, where he owned several hundred acres, extending into Elk Creek Township.

The first male child was Henry Wood, born about 1798. The first female children were Ruth, daughter of Elihu Crane and wife, and Eliza, daughter of Abiather Crane and wife, who were born in the same house near Lexington, on the same day, April 20, 1799. Ruth Crane married Isaac Pomeroy, and became the mother of two sons—Alden and Jerome—and seven daughters. Her cousin, Eliza, became the wife of James Love, Jr., and moved to Mill Creek. The first recorded death was that of Mrs. Thomas Alexander, who expired in 1801, and was buried "at a point between two runs, about half a mile north of Albion." The oldest lady who has ever lived in the township was Mrs. Thomas Bowman, who died in the fall of 1862 aged nearly ninety-two years.

CREEKS AND BRIDGES.

The chief stream of the township is Conneaut Creek, which rises below Conneautville, in Crawford County, flows in a general northerly course to the Springfield line, then turns abruptly westward, and continues into Ohio. After changing its course, it forms the boundary line between Conneaut and Springfield, the former lying on the south and the latter on the north. In Ohio, it continues westward nine miles to Kingsville, then makes another sudden bend to the east, and comes back eight miles to Conneaut, where it turns again to the north, and after a further course of about a mile empties into the lake a mile and a half from the boundary of Pennsylvania, forming Conneaut Harbor. It is the most crooked of the lake shore streams, the length from head to mouth by its windings being from seventy to seventy five miles, while the distance by an air line is not more than twenty-five miles. The valley of the creek forms the route of the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad through Conneaut Township, and was utilized for the same purpose in laying out the old canal from Albion southward. Its length across the township is fully twelve miles. The West Branch of Conneaut Creek rises in Crawford County, near the Ohio line, runs in a general northeasterly direction through the south part of the township, and unites near Keepville, after a course of between nine and ten miles. The East Branch heads in Crawford County, below the Elk Creek line, runs past Wellsburg and Cranesville, and enters Conneaut Township a mile or so northeast of Albion. It has a length of not far from ten miles. At Wellsburg, it is joined by Frazier's Run, and at Albion by Jackson's Run. The latter takes its rise on the Conneaut and Elk Creek line, near Crawford County, flows north, then northeast, and is from four to six miles long. After receiving Jackson's Run, the East Branch continues about half a mile further, before merging with the main stream. Marsh Run heads in the west, flows eastward, and empties into the Conneaut about a mile from Albion Depot, having a length of four or five miles. The dividing ridge between the waters of the lake and the Allegheny turns to the south in Fairview Township, and follows nearly the line of Conneaut Creek into Crawford County. The frequent streams and their unusual crookedness are a source of heavy expense to the tax-payers, the number of bridges and the cost of keeping them up being undoubtedly greater than in any other township of the county. Not to name those on the branches, there are, on Conneaut Creek alone, the Law, Griffith, Porter, Perry and Salsbury bridges, along the Springfield line, and the Pomeroy, Kennedy, Silverthorn, Keepville and Spaulding within the township proper. These include the public bridges only, besides which the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad Company have two more, known as the Sawdy and Kennedy second. All of the township bridges are built of timber with stone abutments.

The valley of Conneaut Creek from Crawford County to Springfield varies in width from a quarter of a mile to a mile, and consists of a sandy loam, which is very fertile, producing everything that can be raised along the lake shore. West of Lexington, along the Conneaut and Springfield line, there are occasional small spots of bottom land, but generally speaking the hills run almost to the water's edge. A large tract of country, in the southwest, near the Ohio and Crawford County line, still remains in forest, being owned by the Pennsylvania Lumber Company. Fruits of nearly all kinds are grown readily. The price of land varies greatly, being as low as $15 an acre in some localities and as high as $65 in others.

LAND, LITIGATION AND PRE-HISTORIC REMAINS.

John B. Wallace, of Philadelphia, made his home in Meadville at an early day, to act as attorney for the Holland Land Company. In that capacity he located tracts in various places, among them being one of 10,000 acres in the western part of Conneaut Township. This property was sold by Sheriff Wolverton, on an execution against Mr. Wallace, in 1825, and purchased by or in behalf of Stephen Girard, of Philadelphia. It was Mr. Girard's design to make extensive improvements by erecting mills, opening roads, etc., but while his agent was arranging to carry out his plans, news came in January, 1832, of the great millionaire's death. By Mr. Girard's will, the Conneaut lands, with a large quantity of others, were left in trust to the city of Philadelphia as a perpetual fund for the maintenance of a college for orphans. After the death of Mr. Wallace, in 1833, his heirs claimed that the Conneaut lands had been wrongfully sold, because the title was in Mrs. Wallace, instead of her husband. Suit was brought by Judge Thompson and Benjamin Grant in the name of the Wallace heirs to recover the property, when a verdict was rendered for the plaintiffs. The Moravian grant embraced between 400 and 500 acres in the northwestern corner of Conneaut, extending over from Springfield, where the most of the "Hospitality tract" lay.

On the John Pomeroy place, upon the second flat of Conneaut Creek, are the traces of an ancient mound, such as exist in Girard, Springfield, Harbor Creek, Fairview, Wayne, and other townships of the county. It is circular in form, inclosing about three-fourths of an acre. The embankment, when the country was cleared up, was about three feet high by six feet thick at the base, with large trees growing upon it. One of these trees, a mammoth oak, when cut down, indicated by its rings an age of five hundred years. Beneath the tree the skeleton of a human being was taken up which showed to a verity that giants lived in those remote ages. The bones measured eleven feet from head to foot, the jawbone easily covered that of a man who weighed over 200 pounds, and the lower bone of the leg, being compared with that of a person who was six feet four inches in height, was found to be nearly a foot longer. Another circle of a similar character existed on the Taylor farm—now owned by J. L. Strong. On the John Pomeroy place is also a peculiar mound, about 100 feet long, 50 wide and 25 high. It stands on the south side of a small stream, upon flat land, and is wholly detached from the adjacent bluff.

RAILROAD, CANAL AND COMMON ROADS.

The Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, the only one in the township, runs through its whole width from Girard Township on the north to Crawford County on the south. The ridge between Crooked and Conneaut Creeks is overcome by a deep excavation that is usually known as Sawdy's Cut. After that the road follows the valley of the latter stream through the township to its head in Crawford County. The road crosses the creek twice within Conneaut Township, first by the Sawdy bridge, and second by the Kennedy bridge near Albion. The Sawdy bridge has a span of about 100 feet and a fill of about fifty or sixty rods; the one near Albion, a span of equal length, and a trestle work of some twenty rods. Albion depot is the main station of the township. The Pennsylvania-Erie Canal—now one of the things of the past—entered Conneaut from Elk Creek at a point between Cranesville and Albion, and continued south by nearly the same route as the railroad, but at a higher elevation. The once noted Eleven Mile Level, the longest on its line, reached from near Lockport, through Albion, to Spring Corners, Crawford County. North of Albion, the canal crossed the East Branch by a culvert forty-one feet high, with a span of between thirty and forty feet, which still stands and is used as a roadway. The main avenues of the township are the Lexington road, from the latter place to Girard, opened about 1797; the State road across the north part of the township, from Elk Creek to Ohio; the Meadville road, from Lexington into Crawford County; the Albion and Cranesville road; the Albion and Wellsburg road; the road from Albion due west to Conneaut Center; the Albion & Keepville; "Porky street," from Cherry Hill south; and the Creek road from Pomeroy's bridge to Crawford County.

SCHOOLS, MILLS AND BURIAL PLACES.

No record remains of the earliest schools in the township. A winter school was held in a cabin on the farm of Nathaniel Pomeroy, about one and a half miles northwest from Albion about 1822, by Rodolphus Loomis. Anna Randall taught a summer term at the same place. About 1823, a log schoolhouse was built in that neighborhood, at which Mary Randall and John Spaulding were early teachers. A school near the site of Thornton's grist mill in Albion Borough was taught by Sophia Kennedy. Others taught here, and the schoolhouse burned down about 1824. Among other early teachers at Albion, was David Powell, whose parents were residents of Crawford County.

Following is a list of the schools of Conneaut Township: Bowman, on the old State road, in the L; Valley, on the Creek road, near Albion; Bumpus, on the Conneautville road, to the southeast; Keepville; Kidder's Corners; Harrington, on the West Branch; Cherry Hill, a little east of the village; Center, a little south of the Town House; Brown, on the State road, west of Cherry Hill; Brock, on the southwest; and Kimball, on the Ohio line.

The manufacturing establishments of the township are Spalding's saw mill, on the West Branch; Brown's cheese factory, on the State road, east of Cherry Hill (opened May 11, 1874); Kennedy's brick yard and tile factory, near Kennedy's bridge; Robinson's blacksmith shop, and Brewster's and Case's wagon shops, near Kidder's Corners; a blacksmith shop near Albion; and a number of portable saw mills which have no permanent location. The Penn Lumber Company, about two years ago, erected a large saw mill in the extreme southwest corner of the township. The company owns 2,800 acres of land, has built a four-mile railroad track to the E. & P. Railroad, and is extensively engaged in sawing lumber, handles, etc., and shipping them to the market. Tracy is the post office name of the settlement.

There is an old graveyard at Saulsbury's bridge, where a number of the early settlers are buried, and others at Keepville and on the Creek road, near Kennedy's bridge. The oldest man known to have lived in the township was the father of ex-County Commissioner Garner Palmer, who died several years ago, lacking but little of a hundred.

VILLAGES.

The village of Albion Depot is on the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, twenty-six miles from Erie City, and about a mile west from Albion Borough. It embraces, besides the depot building, a grocery and twelve or fifteen houses, most of which are occupied by employes of the railroad. Keepville consists of a post office, store, Methodist Episcopal Church, schoolhouse, cheese factory, shingle mill, and several residences, at the intersection of two roads, near Conneaut Creek, two and a half miles southwest of Albion Borough. It was named after Marsena Keep, Sr., who settled there in 1803. Keepville Wesleyan congregation was organized, with about fourteen members, in 1854, Rev. John L. Moore being the first pastor. The church building was erected the same year, at a cost of $1,500. In 1866 or 1867, a Methodist Episcopal society was organized from the Wesleyan society, and now has for its pastor Rev. Fiddler. The charge belongs to Spring Circuit, most of the appointments of which are in Crawford County. The Wesleyan society still survives, but is quite small. The cheese factory was built in 1873 by Amos K. Keep. H. Stoddard and Josiah J. Pelton, costing $1,500. A Methodist Episcopal Church, schoolhouse, two general stores, a blacksmith shop and twenty to thirty houses constitute the village of Cherry Hill, on the State road, about half a mile south of the Springfield line, and five miles west of Albion. Porter's grist and saw mill, on Conneaut Creek, in Springfield Township, are a little north of the village. Cherry Hill stands on high ground, and the country about the village is cold, hard to work, and not very productive. The church was organized with about fifteen members, by Rev. J. W. Wilson, in 1858, and the building was erected the same year at a cost of $1,250. The society was attached to Albion Circuit till Lockport Circuit was formed, to which it now belongs. When Col. McNair established his agency for the Population Company, in 1797, he laid out a town plat of 1,600 acres, at the big bend of Conneaut Creek, near the present Springfield line, which he expected to become a place of a good deal of importance. At the suggestion of one of his surveyors, who was a Kentuckian, he gave it the title of Lexington. Roads were laid out, and, being the center of the company's operations in the west, Lexington in time became a village of no little pretension. At one period it had a store, schoolhouse, hotel, distillery, and several residences. A post office was established in 1823, with David Sawdy as Postmaster. Not a vestige of Lexington is now left. Its site is covered by the David Sawdy and L. R. Strong farms.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The original line of Conneaut extended westward parallel with the southern line of Girard Township to Ohio, taking in Conneaut Creek and more than a mile of country north of that stream. This threw the whole burden of building and maintaining bridges upon Conneaut, and about 1835 she ceded the territory north of the creek to Springfield, in consideration of the latter township paying one-half of that item of expense. Springfield made a considerable gain of land, and Conneaut relieved herself from burdensome taxation.

Following is a complete list of the citizens of Albion and Conneaut who have been elected to Legislative and county offices: Assembly—David Sawdy, 1838; Humphrey A. Hills, 1853-54 (now residing at East Springfield); Orlando Logan, 1875-76. Commissioner—Abiather Crane, 1803 to 1805; John Salsbury, 1825 to 1828; David Sawdy, 1841 to 1844; Humphrey A. Hills, 1847 to 1850; Garner Palmer, 1862 to 1865, and 1869 to 1872. County Auditor—W. J. Brockway, 1875 to 1878. Mercantile Appraiser, Liberty Salsbury, 1872. Hon. George H. Cutler lived in Conneaut Township for a time, and taught school in Albion. He moved from there to Girard, and served the county as State Senator from 1873 to 1876.

BOROUGH OF ALBION.

The borough of Albion occupies an elevated site at the junction of Jackson's Run with the East Branch, near the Elk Creek line, a mile east of Albion depot, and twenty-seven miles southwest of Erie by the E. & P. Railroad. The first settlers at Albion were Thomas Alexander, Patrick Kennedy, William Paine, Ichabod Baker and Lyman Jackson. Michael Jackson, son of Lyman, who built the first saw mill, did not become a permanent resident until 1815, although he spent a few months there five years earlier. William Sherman settled at Albion in 1827, coming from Herkimer County, N. Y. He died on the 1st of February, 1883, aged seventy-eight years. Thomas Thornton came from England at an early age, and settled in Abion about 1857. Amos King built the first grist mill and Lyman Jackson taught the first school. The town was long known as Jackson's Cross Roads, and the post office name has been successively Jacksonville, Juliet and Albion. It is one mile from Albion to Cranesville and Wellsburg (the three places forming the points of an equilateral triangle), six to East Springfield, eight to Girard, six to Spring and nine to Conneautville. The canal passed through the place, and to the business that grew out of it Albion owed most of its growth. The Denio Fork and Handle Factory was located at Albion until its destruction by fire in 1873, which resulted in the removal of the business to Miles Grove. Of the prominent residents of the place, E. W. Stuntz settled there in 1815, coming from Kingsville, Ohio; Dr. J. S. Skeels, in 1848, from Spring, Crawford County; Dr. P. D. Flower, in 1855, from Harbor Creek; Dr. L. D. Davenport, in 1850, from Ellington Center, N. Y., and Jeduthan Wells, in 1857, from Wellsburg.

Albion was incorporated as a borough in 1861, taking in a section of Conneaut Township exactly a mile square. It then contained 443 inhabitants. The population in 1870 was 452, and 433 in 1880. The first borough officers were elected in March, 1861, Perry Kidder being chosen Burgess. The religious denominations are Methodist Episcopal, Disciple and Catholic.

CHURCHES.

The first Methodist Episcopal Church in this vicinity stood about three-fourths of a mile west of Albion, and was built more than fifty years ago. It was occupied until about 1855, when the society was disbanded and the building removed. At Albion, a society had been formed previous to the dismemberment of the above class. It held services in the academy until about 1855, when the present church was built. It cost $2,000 and was dedicated by Rev. Calvin Kingsley. The society was a part of Springfield Circuit until 1854, when Albion Circuit was formed. It embraces the societies at Albion, Wellsburg, Cranesville and Pageville. The first pastor was I. O. Fisher in 1854-55, and latterly C. W. Foulke, 1881-82. The society now numbers about eighty members.

Catholic services have been held at Albion for many years in McGuire's hall and the Disciple meeting-house. Thirty years ago, the society was an old one. The membership includes about twenty-five families. This charge was supplied at first by priests from Crossingville, but more recently they come from Conneautville, Crawford County.

A Disciple congregation was organized in the spring of 1880 by Rev. Clarence J. Cushman. He remained in charge two years. The class is small but has a frame church edifice in process of construction.

BUSINESS, SCHOOLS AND SOCIETIES.

The business establishments of the borough consist of a hotel—the Sherman House—three dry goods and grocery stores, two confectionery, one drug store, two hardware stores, two shoe shops, two millinery stores, two barber shops, feed store, clothing store and tailor shop, paint shop and two blacksmith shops. The Sherman House was built in 1828 by Benjamin Nois. It passed into the hands of William Sherman some time after, who continued as its proprietor some fifty years. The house is now managed by his son, Mott Sherman.

The borough contains a good two-story school building and a Masonic Hall. Albion Lodge, No. 376, I. O. O. F., was instituted September 14, 1849, with the following eight charter members: Calvin Chaddock, William Sherman, Orsan O. Potter, John Clark, James McKendry, Ira S. Barber, Alonzo Sherman and E. E. Stone. The lodge now has a membership of fifty-two. A fire in 1851 destroyed its hall, charter and books. A second hall was erected, which also burned down on the night of February 10, 1884, together with one store. Meetings are regularly held every Saturday evening.

Western Star Lodge, No. 304, F. & A. M., was chartered December 1, 1856. Its charter members were C. W. Cross, Stephen Munger, William W.

Mathias Staette

Skeels, B. H. Galpin, John Turner, James Cross, Joseph Towner, A. B. Crumb and E. Jackson. It owns the second floor of the building, built in 1874, in which the meetings are held. The lodge now numbers fifty-six members and meets the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Albion Lodge, No. 88, Ancient Order of United Workmen, was instituted March 10, 1875, with about twenty members. Its charter officers were George Nash, P. M. W.; W. J. Brockway, M. W.; George Runyan, G. E.; S. D. Sawdy, E.; E. W. Randall, Recorder; C. C. Carter, Financier; C. S. Young, Receiver; J. M. Sherman, G.; A. H. Wells, I. W.; G. N. Sawdy, O. W. The membership is forty-nine, and regular meetings are held the second and fourth Saturdays of each month.

Albion Union, No. 101, Equitable Aid Union, was chartered with thirty-one members May 27, 1880. Its first officers were Dr. O. Logan, Chancellor; Mrs. Mary A. Sherwood, Advocate; S. A. Sanders, President; Moses Williams, Vice President; H. H. Adams, Auxiliary; B. E. Keep, Secretary; L. H. Salisbury, Treasurer; E. B. Hathaway, Accountant; Mrs. S. S. Keep, Chaplain; J. H. Carpenter, Warden; Edward Froby, Sentinel; C. V. Lick, Watchman; O. P. Mosier, Conductor. The Union now contains ninety members, and meets the first and third Fridays of each month. The two last-named orders are beneficiary in their object.

The school building was erected in 1868, at a cost, inclusive of furniture and apparatus, of $7,000. Previous to that the borough schools were held in the academy, built in 1838.

FACTORIES, NEWSPAPERS, ETC.

The manufacturing establishments are Thornton's grist and woolen mills, Wells' oar factory, and Van Riper's horse rake and wooden ware factory. All of these use steam. The water-power, once quite good, has become unreliable since the clearing up of the country. The flouring mill was built in 1828, by Amos King, and is now owned by Joshua Thornton. The woolen mill was erected by W. H. Gray, in 1840, burned in 1876, and rebuilt in 1880 by Thomas Thornton. Its present owner is William Thornton. Michael Jackson built the rake factory in 1846. It has been completely overhauled and much extended by George Van Riper & Co. The oar factory was built by Henry Salisbury and Reuben McLallen in 1859. It burned down on the 1st of March, 1868, and was rebuilt by Frank Wells the same year. Jeduthan Wells is the present owner.

A newspaper, the Erie County Enterprise, was started June 15, 1877, but failed in 1880 for want of support. Its publishers were J. W. Britton and F. J. Dumars. The Albion Blizzard, a weekly newspaper, was established by two of the young business men of Albion Borough—E. C. Palmer and E. F. Davenport—May 25, 1882. The first four numbers were published as a two-column folio, at which time the Post Office Department refused to allow it to pass as second-class matter. After a week or two of suspension, the Blizzard was enlarged to a quarto, June 29, 1882, and was entered properly in the mails as other newspapers. Near the close of Volume I, the outlook was that the paper must cease to exist, but the publishers made a canvass and received such encouragement that they bought a new cylinder press and enlarged their paper to a seven-column folio, issuing the first number July 12, 1883.

The borough has a general cemetery, which might be made a handsome place of burial. The appraisalment for 1883 showed the following results: Value of real estate, $88,205; cows, fifty-two; value, $1,040; horses and mules, sixty-four; value, $3,825; value of trades and occupations, $6,705; money at interest, $4,997.

CHAPTER XI.

ELK CREEK TOWNSHIP.

THE first settler in Elk Creek Township was Eli Colton, father of George W. Colton, the well-known politician. He was a native of Granby, Conn., and went into the township early in 1797. In the spring of 1798 or 1799 the settlers were George Haybarger and his brother-in-law, John Deitz, from Maryland, who were followed by their families in the succeeding fall, in charge of Arnestes Deitz, father of John. Mr. Colton married a daughter of the elder Deitz in 1800 or 1801. Mr. Haybarger changed to Mill Creek in 1810, where his descendants remain. In 1800, Elihu Crane took up the tract on which Craneville stands, where he remained until his death. He was from Connecticut, and settled in Conneaut Township in the spring of 1798, from which place he changed to Elk Creek. During 1800, or a little before, numerous parties located in the township, among whom were David Randall, Daniel Akers, Mr. Odell and Mr. Harrington. In 1802, David Sherrod arrived from Susquehanna County. James McCammon, with his sons, James and Robert, came from Ireland early in the century, locating first at Philadelphia, then at Meadville, and finally in Elk Creek. A man by the name of Wallace became a resident of the township nearly at the same time. Other early settlers were Jabez Clark, Charles Scott, Maxon Randall and the Shieldses and Spragues. Among the later settlers were the following: In 1815, Daniel Winchester, from Stafford County, Conn., and Samuel Wells, with his sons, Otis, Obed, Franklin, Samuel and Julius, from St. Albans, Vt.; in 1818, Josiah Steward; in 1824, the Stewarts, Rodgerses and Brookses from New York; in 1831, Thomas Bowman; in 1832, Levi and William Joslin, from Oneida County, N. Y.; Edmund Goodenow, from the same county; Sylvester Hubbard, from Tompkins County, N. Y.; Samuel Sherman and family, from Herkimer County, N. Y.; John Warner, from Massachusetts; and Wilson Cole, from Chautauqua County, N. Y.; in 1833, John Stafford, from Augusta, Oneida County, N. Y., and William Vorce, from Chautauqua County, in the same State; in 1834, Orange and Perley Miller; in 1835, Jeremiah Crowley, a native of Ireland, and Noah Almey; in 1836, David Smith, from Vermont; in 1838, Hiram Irish, from Vermont, and Burr L. Pulling, from Saratoga County, N. Y. The growth of the township was slow until 1830, but it filled up rapidly from that date to 1840. Samuel Sherman took up a large body of land, which he divided among his boys. In 1840, Harley Sherman, son of Samuel Sherman, opened a grocery store at Wellsburg, where he lived until his death. The forefathers of the Shermans came to America from England, in 1634, settling in New England, from which section their descendants have spread into every State of the Union.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

The township is one of the original sixteen, and received its title from the stream of Elk Creek, several branches of which rise in its northern portion. It originally extended north to a point parallel with the south line of Fairview, and was then nearly square. In 1832, the north part was sliced off in the formation of Girard, leaving a short handle which now constitutes a part of Franklin. When the latter township was created in 1844, another piece was taken from Elk Creek, reversing the shape of the township, and causing it to stand in its present form, which is exactly that of a gothic L. The original area was 35,840 acres, which has been reduced to 20,696 acres. By the assessment of 1880, the valuation was as follows: Real estate, $464,915; horses, $371; cows, $623; oxen, $40; value of personal property, $34,044; value of trades and occupations, $10,175; money at interest, $25,582.

Elk Creek is bounded on the north by Girard and Franklin, on the east by Franklin and Washington, on the south by Cussewago Township, Crawford County, and on the west by Conneaut. The population was 288 in 1820, 562 in 1830, 1,645 in 1840, 1,535 in 1850, 1,462 in 1870, and 1,564 in 1880, inclusive of Wellsburg. The villages are Wellsburg, Cranesville and Pageville, and the post offices are Lundy's Lane (Wellsburg) and Elk Creek (Cranesville). Elk Creek Township has had but four county officials, viz.: Stephen J. Godfrey, County Commissioner from 1866 to 1869, and Mercantile Appraiser in 1871; C. C. Taylor, County Superintendent of Public Schools from 1869 to 1878; Richard Powell, County Commissioner from 1881 to 1884; and George Manton, County Auditor from 1881 to 1884. George W. Colton, Clerk to the Commissioners from 1852 to November, 1863, and Prothonotary from his resignation of the latter office to 1867, is a native of the township, but removed to Erie before he was chosen to the first position. O. H. Irish, Superintendent of Government Printing at Washington, was also a native of Elk Creek. The latter died in January, 1883, after having been prominent as a public man for many years.

The Elk Creek lands are generally rolling, with a clay soil, except a narrow belt of gravel along the East Branch of Conneaut Creek and its tributaries. The hill lands, which include about two-thirds of the township, are quite flat when the summit is reached, and are well watered, being the sources of numerous small streams. Land ranges in value from $20 to $40, according to its proximity to the villages. The township contains two cheese factories—the one at Wellsburg, and Kingsley's, in the southeast. Much timber remains, but it is fast disappearing. There is no railroad in the township, and the nearest station is that of the Erie & Pittsburgh road at Albion. A mile east of Wellsburg was a deposit of bog iron ore, from which a large share of the stock used in Vincent, Himrod & Co.'s old furnace in Erie was drawn. The ore has been used of late years in making mineral paint, being first applied to that purpose by Winton & Williams. In Glen Frazier is a mineral spring which has become famous over the western part of the county for its medical virtues.

ROADS AND STREAMS.

The main thoroughfares are the road from Albion, through Wellsburg, to Edinboro; the old road from Girard, through Cranesville and Wellsburg, to Meadville; and the Crane road, from Albion, through Cranesville and Franklin Township, to the Edinboro Plank Road. A hack runs several times a day, each direction, between Wellsburg, Cranesville and Albion Station, carrying passengers and the mails. Elk Creek has no large streams, the most important one being the East Branch of Conneaut Creek, which falls into the latter about half a mile west of Albion. The East Branch rises in Crawford County, just across the line. It is joined by Frazier's Run at Wellsburg, by Crane Run near Cranesville, by Mormon Run at Thornton's dam, near Albion, and by Jackson Run within the latter borough. Mormon Run received its name because used as a place of baptism by that sect, who were once quite numerous in the vicinity. The West Branch of Elk Creek has its source near the center, and runs north into Girard, where it connects with the main stream a little below "The Devil's Backbone." In the southeast are the head-waters of the Cussewago, which pursues a southerly course, and, joining French Creek near Meadville, helps to make the Ohio and Mississippi. Forty years or so ago, there were twelve or fifteen saw mills on the East Branch, as well as several on other streams. The water-power was very fine in the early days, on account of the steady flow of water and the heavy fall in the streams.

CHURCHES.

The churches of Elk Creek are a Free-Will Baptist, Methodist Episcopal and Universalist at Wellsburg, Methodist Episcopal at Cranesville, Free-Will Baptist and Methodist at Pageville, United Brethren on the Meadville road between Cranesville and Lockport, and Union United Brethren.

The Little Brick, or Randall United Brethren Church, holds services about a mile north of Cranesville, in a neat brick structure which was formerly a schoolhouse. The society was organized about 1853 by Rev. Michael Oswald. Rev. C. Z. Dilley is at present pastor in charge. The society contains about thirty members. It is embraced in the Erie Circuit, which besides the Randall appointment includes Branchville in McKean Township; Bethel, Fairview Township; Foy Schoolhouse, Franklin Township; Miller, Girard Township; and Union, in the south part of Elk Creek Township. The last named appointment is quite and old class, has about twenty members, and meets in a schoolhouse.

There is a considerable Catholic population in the south part of the township, who worship mainly at the church in Cussewago, Crawford County. They are mainly of Irish nativity or descent.

SCHOOLS.

Probably the first school in the township was taught by Maxon Randall, in his log cabin about a mile north of Cranesville, about 1815. About one and a half miles south of Wellsburg, stood a log schoolhouse, wherein Miss Becky Reese, who was afterward Mrs. William Monroe, taught about 1817. Samuel Clark, the son of an early settler of this township, held a school in the same cabin about 1818, and, following him, David Mathews conducted a term. Immediately south of Wellsburg a Mr. Higgins, an old bachelor, taught about 1820. The Sawdy Schoolhouse, in the northwest corner of the township, was built about 1823, and for many years subserved its educational purposes. Henry Miller, one of the first settlers, taught here. Betsy Colton, who became Mrs. Hiram Bradley, and Zachariah Tolbit were other early instructors at Sawdy. At Cranesville, on the corner now occupied by the post office, was a diminutive log structure in early days, where Matilda Eldridge and John Braddish were among the first teachers. The following is a list of the present schools: Sawdy, two miles north of Cranesville, on the Lockport road; Wellsburg (graded), Cranesville. Bowens, one mile from Cranesville, on the Crane road; Kingsley, a mile and a half south of Wellsburg, on the Meadville road; Union at Cold Spring, three miles south of Wellsburg, on the Meadville road; Pleasant Valley, two miles east of Wellsburg; Pageville, Miller, six miles east of Wellsburg, and an independent school of Elk Creek and Franklin Townships.

WELLSBURG.

The village of Wellsburg, in the narrow valley of the East Branch of Conneaut Creek, is situated at the crossing of the Girard & Meadville by the Albion & Edinboro road. Samuel Wells, after whom it was named, settled at this point with his five sons in 1815, and at an early day his son Franklin built a grist mill and several saw mills. Samuel drilled a salt well about a mile south of Wellsburg, on the Clark farm, and for a considerable period the neighborhood was supplied by him with a home made article. This continued until the opening of the canal, when cheaper salt was furnished from Onondaga, N. Y., by way of Erie, which caused the abandonment of the well. The village, which was laid out by Otis Wells, did not make much progress until some six or ten years ago, when a brisk competition among the merchants led to low prices, a heavy trade from the adjacent country, new manufacturing interests, and a general and most marked spirit of enterprise. Wellsburg is twenty-five miles from Erie, nine miles south of Girard, one each from Cranesville and Albion, and two miles from Albion Station. The mercantile establishments consist of three dry goods stores, one grocery and hardware store and one millinery store. A new schoolhouse was erected about two years ago, at a cost of over $5,000. The McLellan House is a large new hotel. The manufacturing interests of the village are unusually extensive, as will be seen by the following list: Long, Wells & Co's., new steam and flouring mill, the old Spires Grist Mill, Wells & Sons' tannery, Ralph Bowman's steam saw mill, J. R. Snyder's steam furniture and coffin factory, Frank Ziegler's broom factory, the Elk Creek Co-operative Cheese Factory (in operation about eleven years), Emanuel Ziegler's carriage, wagon and blacksmith shop, Purcell Bros'. spring bed factory, one cooper shop and two other blacksmith shops. Its population by the census of 1880 was 256, about half of whom have been added within a few years. Wellsburg has become the principal trading point for most of Elk Creek, a portion of Conneaut, the western portion of Franklin, the southern portion of Girard and even a section of Crawford County. Its post office name is Lundy's Lane. The office was established in 1852, when Gen. Scott was running for President, and named in honor of one of his battles during the last war with Great Britain. A telephone line connecting Wellsburg with Albion Station was put up in 1879. In addition to the salt well of Samuel Wells, another was drilled further up on the East Branch, on the farm now owned by S. A. Deriar. It was known as the White Well, but was never put in operation. On the same tract there had long been a strong show of petroleum. Boring was done to secure the oil, but only a small quantity was obtained. In 1861, during the height of the oil excitement, two wells were drilled on the farm of Harley Sherman, east of Wellburg. A large yield of gas was secured but not enough oil to pay.

The Free-Will Baptist congregation, the largest in the town, was organized on the 5th of May, 1839, Rev. Willard Stickney, of Washington Township, being the first pastor, and Asa Lichfield, clerk. Its later pastors have been Revs. Frank Wells, David Winton, Channey Joslin, E. R. Anderson, Rufus Clark, J. B. Page and Rev. Boynton, the present incumbent. Julius Wells and John W. Prescott were the first and only Deacons. The congregation has a commodious building, surmounted by a steeple and bell tower with a fine bell. A Sabbath school was established over thirty years ago, and has been in continuous operation. The membership of the church is about forty.

The Universalist Church at Wellsburg was organized in June, 1838, with twenty-five members by Rev. Edson Beals, who was the first pastor. The first meetings were held in the academy, which stood in the park on the site of the Universalist Church. The latter was erected in 1855 at a cost of $1,500, and was thoroughly repaired in 1871. Rev. A. J. Patterson, now of Boston, Mass., was pastor at the time of the church erection. After the pastorate of Rev. Beals, the following served as ministers: Revs. Joseph Sargent, Ami Bond, Fowler, A. J. Patterson. Luce and Charles L. Shipman, of Girard. No regular services have been held for two years past. The numerical strength of the church is about sixty.

A Methodist Episcopal society was organized at Wellsburg in very early times. About 1835, it erected a frame meeting house on the summit of the hill between Wellsburg and Cranesville, the lot being the donation of Lyman Jackson. Formerly services had been held in an old blacksmith shop, converted into a schoolhouse and church. The church building became old and unfit for services. In 1875, or shortly before the society divided, a portion going to Cranesville and a portion to Wellsburg, the latter held services for a short time in the schoolhouse; then the Pleasant Valley Church building, several miles south of Wellsburg, was removed to the latter village, and is now used as the house of worship. Pleasant Valley was an old society organized in 1833, by Rev. William Todd. Its church edifice was erected in 1854, at an expense of $1,300. Wellsburg Church is small, containing about twenty members. It formerly was a part of Springfield Circuit, but when Albion Circuit was formed, became and has since remained a part of it.

The Wellsburg Cemetery, an inclosure of about ten acres, on a knoll in the north part of the village, is the principal burying ground of the township. The Shermans have a family burial place of about two acres.

CRANESVILLE.

Cranesville was founded by Fowler Crane, son of Elihu Crane, the first settler on the site, who laid out the village, and put up a hotel, store and ashery. It lies in the valley of the East Branch of Conneaut Creek, a mile north of Wellsburg, and a mile northeast of Albion, at the crossing of the Crane road by the Girard & Meadville road, and almost on the Conneaut line. The valley at Cranesville widens out more than at Wellsburg, and the village stands chiefly on the upland overlooking the stream, in rather a pleasant location. The old Erie Canal passed through the village, and is watered by Crane Run. It entered Elk Creek Township a little south of Lockport, and about half a mile east of the Conneaut Township line, and continued to Cranesville, where it diverged into Conneaut, having had a course of about two and one-half miles in the township. The culvert between Albion and Cranesville, by which the canal crossed the East Branch—an excellent pile of masonry—is now used for a township roadway. After Wellsburg got its start and the canal had been abandoned, Cranesville rather declined, but of late it has commenced to improve. The village embraces a Methodist Episcopal Church, one general store, one grocery, Robert Wait's planing mill, two blacksmith shops, paint shop, schoolhouse, about thirty-five dwellings and perhaps 150 people. The church building was erected at a cost of $2,000, in 1874, Rev. Mr. Williams being the first pastor. About the same time the old church that stood on the hill between Cranesville and Wellsburg was removed to Springfield. Cranesville society was detached from Wellsburg about 1874, and belongs to Albion Circuit. The old hotel was torn down in the summer of 1878, more attractive houses at Wellsburg and Albion having robbed it of its custom. A sandstone quarry was formerly worked between Cranesville and Lockport, near the Population road, from which material was taken for the locks of the canal. The post office name of Cranesville is Elk Creek. Its nearest railroad station is Albion.

PAGEVILLE.

Four miles southeast of Wellsburg, at the forks of the Crossingville road, is the village of Pageville, consisting of a Free-Will Baptist Church, a school-house, a saw mill, and a few scattered dwellings. This remote place was once the scene of extensive manufacturing operations. Being on the edge of a vast forest of ash and oak, E. Page selected it as the site of his oar factory, one of the most extensive in the country. The factory gave employment to some twenty-five men and its wares were sent to all parts of America and Europe. On its suspension the workmen found other homes, and the place declined to an ordinary cross roads collection of houses. The Baptist congregation was organized by Rev. Willard Stickney, the first pastor, in 1839, the same year as the one at Wellsburg. Rev. Carey Rogers preached here for many years, and Rev. Boynton is the present pastor. Services were held in the schoolhouse until 1875, when a church was erected at a cost of about $1,200. Rogers' steam saw mill occupies the site of the old oar factory. A Methodist Episcopal society worships in the Baptist Church. It is small, but quite old, and is attached to Albion Circuit.

CHAPTER XII.

McKEAN TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF MIDDLEBORO.

McKEAN was organized as one of the original townships. Its limits were much larger when the township was established, but were reduced by the taking off of a slice for Franklin in 1844, and another for Summit in 1854. These curtailments of its territory account for the odd and irregular shape of the township. McKean is bounded on the north by Fairview, Mill Creek and Summit, on the east by Summit and Waterford, on the south by Waterford, Washington and Franklin, and on the west by the latter township and Fairview. It has a breadth in the widest part of about eight miles from east to west, and about seven from north to south. The old State line, before the purchase of the Triangle, ran a little north of the center, and cuts the borough limits of Middleboro into two almost exact halves. It also forms the north and south lines of many of the farms, and its location is as familiar to many of the residents as their own homes or the course of the public roads. The township was named in honor of Gen. Thomas McKean, one of Pennsylvania's most distinguished soldiers in the Revolution, and second Governor of the State, after Independence, serving three terms, from 1796 to 1808. The township has given Erie a number of its best known citizens, among whom may be mentioned Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, the four Crouch brothers, the four Minnig brothers, and the Stanciliff brothers. By the United States census, McKean had a population of 440 in 1820, of 984 in 1830, of 1,714 in 1840, of 1,921 in 1850, of 1,600 in 1860, of 1,426 in 1870 and of 1,394 in 1880. The assessment of 1883 gave the following results: Number of acres, 21,517; value of real state, $632,065; number of cows, 932; of oxen, 10; of horses and mules, 526; value of the same, $52,788; value of trades and occupations, $9,480; money at interest, $78,696.

STREAMS AND LANDS.

McKean is wholly watered by Elk Creek and its branches, with the exception of a small district in the south containing the head-waters of Big and Little Conneauttee Creek, which empty into French Creek below Edinboro. Elk Creek rises in Tamarack Swamp, in the western portion of Waterford Township, and flowing nearly through the center of McKean, across the southern portion of Fairview and the northeastern portion of Girard, falls into the lake a short distance north of Miles Grove, having a length of between thirty and thirty-five miles. Its general course is westerly till it reaches the Girard Township line, where it turns to the northwest. A branch of Le Bœuf Creek has its origin in Waterford Township, near the head of Elk Creek, the two streams running in opposite directions, the one to the Gulf of Mexico, the other to the Atlantic Ocean. The South Branch of Elk Creek rises in Washington Township, near the line of McKean, and flowing directly north, unites with the main stream at Middleboro. At one time there were within the township eight saw mills and two grist mills on the chief stream, and two saw mills and one grist mill on the South Branch: now, all that are left are four saw mills and one grist mill on the former and a single grist mill on the latter. Its valley is generally narrow, but it begins to spread out just above Middleboro, near the crossing of the Edinboro road, reaching a breadth of about two miles. Below that it is from a quarter of a mile to half a mile in width.

McKean is one of the elevated townships of the county, and its surface is hilly, with numerous deep gulfs along the streams. The valley lands are first-class, and grain is easily raised. Off of the streams the country is naturally cold and clayey, but cultivation makes it fairly productive. In the southeast portion is a ridge known as South Hill, which is said to attain an altitude of 800 feet above the lake. The township contains two quarries of good stone, one on the place of David Dunn, in the north east section, the other on that of Albert Lampson, in the south part. Land ranges in value from $25 to $75 per acre.

MILLS AND SCHOOLS.

The grist mills of McKean Township are Sterrett & Barron's, on Elk Creek, at Sterrettania, and Wiswell & Hilliker's, at Branchville, on the South Branch. The first named, which is one of the largest in the county, was built by David S. Sterrett, in 1839, and has always done a flourishing business. A mill was built on the site of Hilliker's some thirty-five years ago. It burned down, was twice re-built and each time was destroyed by fire. The last fire occurred early in the morning of October 19, 1882, causing a loss of about $5,000, on which there was no insurance. The miller's house burned down at the same time. The first saw mill in the township was built in the summer of 1812 on Elk Creek, by Oliver Dunn, near where his son, James Dunn, now resides. The mill was operated about twenty years before it was abandoned. The second mill was built by Eber and Lemuel Stancliff on the South Branch of Elk Creek, about a mile south of Middleboro, about 1827; it was operated about twenty-five years, during which time it changed name and ownership repeatedly. The saw mills propelled by water are owned by Edmund Wood, Charles Osborn, August Decker and Sterrett & Barron. There is a steam saw and cider mill near the Plank road, a mile or so north of Middleboro, owned by A. T. Leland's heirs. W. W. Reed, of Erie, owns a cheese factory in the western portion, established about nine years ago, and another owned by William A. Bean, just outside of Middleboro, was started in 1872. There are three tanneries in the township--the Sterrettania, erected by William Potter about 1843; Chisholm's, a mile east of Sterrettania, established in 1864 in a building formerly used as a woolen factory, and Charles Rappold's, at Sterrettania, built in 1858. The township contains five cider mills, owned respectively by A. T. Leland's heirs, Henry Hauck, Henry Smith, William Wiswell and John P. Wagner. Several of these make apple jelly in large quantities.

John Hincaide

The first school in McKean Township was taught during the winter of 1811-12 by Seth Spencer, who hailed from Fredonia, N. Y., and returned thither soon after completing this primal school. Among his pupils were Seth Stancliff, still living at Erie at the age of ninety years, Joseph Weldon, who lives at West Springfield, this county, and who was the first male white child born in McKean Township; Anna Stancliff, living in California, at the age of eighty-eight years; Levi Grant, Eunice Joiner and others. Betsy and Sally Aldrich, sisters, from near Boston, Mass., were two of the earliest teachers. For several years, from about 1820 to 1825, they taught schools in the vicinity of Middleboro. They afterward married and settled in Springfield Township. Hiram Bumphrey taught for five terms at Sterrettania, commencing about 1828. He afterward became editor and proprietor of the Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and was a prominent man. Ansel and Ludim Crouch, who hailed from Peru, N. Y., were early noted pedagogues in the region about Middleboro. Polly Chambers taught at Sterrettania about 1830. Other comparatively early instructors of the township's youth were Frank Lampson, Orrin Reed and David Stancliff. The township schools are thirteen in number, as follows: The Union, in the Marsh neighborhood (used jointly by McKean and Waterford); the Aubrey, in the Grant settlement; the Dunn, in the Dunn neighborhood; the Glazier, on the plank road; the South Hill, on South Hill; the Marsh, in the Stancliff settlement; the Branchville, at the hamlet of the same name; the Harrison, in the Harrison district; the Barron, in the Barron neighborhood; the Sterrettania, in the village of that name; the Roher, in the north part of the township, and the Wagner, on the farm of Alex Wagner.

CHURCHES, CEMETERIES AND ROADS.

There are three church buildings in the township, viz.: United Brethren at Branchville, and Methodist Episcopal at Sterrettania and on South Hill. The South Hill Church was dedicated on December 9, 1880, and cost $1,400. The land on which it stands was donated by O. Reed. Previous to the erection of the church building, the congregation held services in the schoolhouse. It forms a part of the McKean Circuit.

The Sterrettania Methodist Episcopal Church was built in 1842. The society was organized years before, and worshiped in the schoolhouse. Among its earliest ministers were Revs. Aurora and Nathaniel Callender, and Rev. J. Chandler. This charge was attached to the McKean Circuit, until 1880, when it was made a part of Fairview Circuit, which embraces besides this appointment Fairview and Fair Plain. The church building was erected in part by a Presbyterian congregation, which had met previously in the schoolhouse. Soon after the church was built, it became a Congregational society, and a few years later passed out of existence.

The United Brethren Church at Branchville is a neat and modest frame structure, which was built about 1865. The society existed for a number of years previous and met for worship in the schoolhouse. It is now greatly reduced in membership, scarcely a half dozen remaining, but regular services are still maintained. Rev. Lewis is the present pastor, 1882-83.

A cemetery, used by the township in common, has long been established on the Waterford & Girard road, a short distance east of Middleboro; another on the plank road, about a mile south of the same village; one at Sterrettania; one attached to the old Catholic Church north of Middleboro, and a small one on South Hill. The Wiswells, Dunns and others have private burying grounds.

The main roads of McKean are the Erie & Edinboro plank, running through nearly the whole width of the township from north to south, and the Waterford & Girard road, which crosses the township from east to west, following the valley of Elk Creek. The township has a post office at Sterrettania and formerly had one at Branchville. A mail route was established between Erie and Edinboro in the winter of 1835-36, Ansel Crouch being the contractor.

VILLAGES.

The villages of McKean are Sterrettania and Branchville. Sterrettania is on Elk Creek, near the Fairview line, in the extreme western portion of the township, twelve miles from Erie. It received its name from the numerous Sterrett family living in the village and vicinity. Robert Sterrett, the pioneer of the flock, came from Cumberland County and located there in 1804, remaining three years, when he sold out to his brother James. Of the seven sons and two daughters of James, all are dead except Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, of Erie. The village contains a Methodist Episcopal Church, a schoolhouse, a large grist mill, a saw mill, two tanneries, one cider and jelly factory, one wagon shop, one store, one blacksmith shop, one shoe shop and one tailor shop. The private residences number fifteen or twenty, and the population is about eighty. Thomas Sterrett, a resident of Sterrettania, is one of the wealthiest and most influential men in the county. The Sterrettania School was taught at various times by Hon. George H. Cutler and William Benson, afterward two of the leading members of the Erie County bar.

Branchville is a small collection of houses along the plank road, in the south part of the township. It embraces a United Brethren Church, a schoolhouse, a grist mill, a blacksmith shop and about a dozen residences. The South Branch of Elk Creek runs through the hamlet, giving it its name and furnishing water-power to the mill.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first settler within the present limits of McKean was James Talmadge, who came from Genesee County, N. Y., in 1795, and located in the Dunn neighborhood, near the east line, in the valley of Elk Creek. During the season of 1795, Mr. Talmadge ran a sail boat between Buffalo and Erie, which carried passengers and freight; among others, he brought in Col. Seth Reed and family, and Amos Judson, of Waterford. On settling in McKean, his wife and father accompanied him. Mr. Talmadge brought in the first bushel of wheat sown in Erie County. Thomas and Oliver Dunn, who had gone first to Springfield, moved into McKean in the fall of 1797, having been preceded by Stephen Oliver; Lemuel Stancliff, a New Englander, settled a mile south of Middleboro in 1799; Benjamin Grubb, a Lancaster County man, on the John Pepper farm, in 1800; Benjamin Grant, from Connecticut, in what is still known as the Grant neighborhood, in March of the same year; Robert Sterrett, at Sterrettania, in 1804, and James Aubrey about 1806. Eliachim Cook, who accompanied Mr. Grant, located in what is now Summit Township, but removed to Waterford in 1809. In 1807, after Mr. Sterrett sold his McKean property to his brother James, he removed to the bank of the lake, five miles west of Erie. John Evans, father of Robert and Thomas, came from Maryland in 1802, and first took up land on the present Mill Creek and Summit line, but removed to Mill Creek in 1811, to the farm now owned by his son Robert. Among other early settlers were Russell Stancliff, Rufus Trask, Benjamin Collum, David Weldon, Joseph S. Bush and the Dunlaps. The Staffords, a New England family, settled around Middleboro about 1815, and with the Stancliffs laid the foundations of the Methodist society in that village. Ansel Crouch went in from New York, in 1817. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. Hannah, daughter of James Talmadge, was the first white child born in the township. The event occurred in 1798. David Sterrett, son of Robert, settled on the homestead farm. He was the father of Robert W., Thomas, James and Andrew J., and of Mrs. Wright, Norton, Brockway and Hall. James Aubrey's father was a Surgeon in Wolfe's army at the storming of Quebec. Stephen Oliver enlisted in the American Army at the outbreak of the Revolution and served until its close. He died January 14, 1857, aged ninety-seven years.

Lemuel Stancliff, one of the first settlers referred to, was a soldier in Washington's army at the time of Arnold's treason. Among the other early settlers were the following: In 1809, Ira Glazier, from Oneida County, N. Y., and Ezra White; in 1825, the Washburns, from Massachusetts; about 1826, Benjamin F. Morey, of Berkshire, Vt.; in 1831, John Drown, of Lyons, N. Y.; about 1835, the Marshes, from Nova Scotia, and Peter J. Barron, from France; in 1837, Oren Reed, from Otsego County, N. Y.; in 1840, Lorenz, Antony and Daniel Hauck, all from Germany.

PUBLIC OFFICERS.

The State and county officers from McKean Township have been as follows: State Senate, Joseph M. Sterrett, 1837 to 1841. Associate Judge, Joseph M. Sterrett, 1850 to 1856. Assembly, Stephen Skinner, 1840 and 1842. County Commissioners, Joseph M. Sterrett, 1829 to 1831; Stephen Skinner, 1834 to 1837; Thomas Sterrett, 1837 to 1839 (died in office); Thomas Dunn, 1850 to 1853. Clerk to Commissioners, A. J. Sterrett, 1863 to 1881. Directors of the Poor, David Sterrett, 1847 to 1850; John Parmeter, 1852 to 1855; James Dunn, 1874 to 1877; Seymour Washburn, 1877 to 1880. Steward of the Alms-house, Thomas Dunn, 1858 to 1863. Jury Commissioner, William Grant, 1873 to 1876. County Surveyors, Hiram Bumphrey, 1833; Stephen Skinner, 1836 to 1839. County Auditors, Thomas Dunn, 1810 to 1821, 1822 to 1825; Eli Webster, 1829 to 1832; Oren Reed, 1852 to 1855, 1863 to 1865; Elias Brecht, 1857 to 1860. Joseph M. Sterrett left his father's house in McKean when a boy, to learn the printing trade. He founded the Erie Gazette, and ever after resided in Erie. A. J. Sterrett was born in McKean, but left home at an early age.

BOROUGH OF MIDDLEBORO.

Middleboro was incorporated as a borough in 1861, embodying about two-thirds of a mile square. It had a population of 126 in 1870, and 210 in 1880, being the smallest election district in the county in point of numbers. The village is situated on the plank road, nearly in the center of the township (which gave it its name), at the junction of the South Branch with the main stream of Elk Creek, ten miles south of Erie and eight north of Edinboro. Benjamin Cullom built the first house in Middleboro in 1810, on the site of Hartley Lampson's. He died in McKean Township in May, 1883, at the age of ninety-six years. Middleboro contains a Catholic and a Methodist Episcopal Church, a schoolhouse, one hotel, two dry goods stores, one grocery, one drug store, four blacksmith shops, one harness shop, one wagon, carriage and sleigh factory, two wagon shops, one saw mill, one saw, planing and shingle mill, two millinery stores and one shoe-maker shop. The public hall of the village is in the upper story of Peck's Block. W. A. Bean's cheese factory is situated just outside the borough. The post office name of the borough is McKean Corners. A shovel-handle factory was erected at Middleboro by Francis Lampson in 1861, burned in 1868, rebuilt the same year by A. H. Lampson, and moved to Leipsic, Ohio, about 1873.

The McKean Methodist Episcopal Church was organized by Rev. Russell Stancliff in 1819, at the hewed-log house of Lemuel Stancliff, about a half mile south of Middleboro, with the following members: Job Stafford and wife, Lucy Stafford, Polly, May and Deborah Irish. The next fall a revival was held, which added a number of others to the class. The meetings were held in various schoolhouses until 1837, when a substantial frame meeting-house was erected. It was extensively repaired and enlarged in 1869, and still serves the congregation. Among the earliest ministers were Revs. Eddy, Alfred Bronson and Mack. Latterly, Rev. G. W. Staples, 1881-82. The circuit is composed of Middleboro, Lawrence Schoolhouse (Summit Township), South Hill and McLane. Preaching takes place at each point once in two weeks.

St. Francis Catholic Church at Middleboro was built in 1876, at a cost, including bell and furniture, of $3,400. It superseded an old frame building, which stood two miles north of Middleboro, and was dedicated in 1833. The congregation was organized a few years prior to the building of this first church. The earliest Fathers of this congregation were Revs. Steinbaugh, Hartman and Joseph Oberhofer. Edward Hasse is the present priest. The society includes about fifty-four families. Services are conducted in both the English and the German languages.

Bates Post, No 83, G. A. R., was organized at Middleboro, August 21, 1880, with thirty-three members. Its first officers were: N. N. Newell, Com.; J. G. Grimler, S. V. C.; E. W. Davis, J. V. C.; L. W. Eastman, O. D.; William A. Herrick, Chaplain; John Weigel, Q. M.; J. W. Jarvis, Sergt.; P. A. Myers, Adjt. The post now numbers about seventy members and meets each alternate Saturday evening.

Diligent Lodge, No. 183, A. O. U. W., was instituted November 5, 1880, with eleven charter members, as follows: D. R. Waggoner, P. M. W.; G. W. Neyland, M. W.; David Rohrer, F.; F. G. Weigel, O.; John Weigel, Guide; C. F. Schuetz, Fin.; C. M. Morey, Receiver; F. M. Gould, Recorder; Henry Soety, I. W.; George Schuetz, O. W., and George Stancliff. The present membership is forty-two, and the lodge meets every Thursday evening at Weigel's Hall.

CHAPTER XIII.

GREENFIELD TOWNSHIP.

THE township of Greenfield, one of the sixteen established when the county was organized, is bounded on the north by North East, on the east by Chautauqua County, N. Y., on the south by Venango, and on the west by Harbor Creek and Greene. Its boundary lines are all straight, with the exception of a jog of about an eighth of a mile, commencing at the J. C. Prindle place, on the west side, and extending to the T. C. Plumb farm on the south. As originally established, Greenfield was considerably larger than now, a long, wedge-shaped strip having been taken off of its northern part in 1841 and added to North East. The township as thus reduced is about seven miles in length from east to west, about four and three-quarters in breadth from north to south, and embraces 19,723 acres of elevated ridge and table land. The loftiest elevation is at the farm of F. B. Brown, in the southwest, and about half a mile southeast from that, in Venango, is said to be the highest point in the county. By the United States census report, Greenfield had a population of 281 in 1820, 664 in 1830, 862 in 1840, 731 in 1850, 880 in 1860, 1,039 in 1870, and 1,020 in 1880. The assessment of 1880 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $358,977; number of horses, 253; cows, 684; oxen, 6; value of personal property, $24,711; value of trades and occupations, $1,400; money at interest, $200.

The surface of Greenfield Township is mainly hilly, but there are some fine flats along French Creek and upon a tributary of that stream which comes in from New York at the southeast corner. The valley lands range in width from a half mile to a mile and a half. They are mostly of a gravelly loam, and produce corn, oats, some wheat and all kinds of fruit, except peaches, but are much troubled with frosts. The hill lands, which are less affected by the frosts than the valleys, are a clay loam, and yield good crops of corn, oats and potatoes, but are best adapted for grass and grazing. A great many cattle are raised in the township, and many tons of butter are made and sold annually. Land ranges in price from $20 to $40 an acre, according to its location.

BEGINNING THE SETTLEMENT.

Remote as it is at present on account of its distance from a railroad, Greenfield was one of the first townships to be settled. After the restoration of quiet along the border, the Triangle became a favorite field for settlement. Among those who were impressed with its advantages was Judah Colt, a native of Lyme, Conn., who came on in 1795. Believing the country would fill up rapidly, he made the Population Company, which claimed most of the lands in the county, an offer of $1 an acre for thirty thousand acres off of the east end of the Triangle, which they declined. They were so much pleased with his energy and shrewdness, however, that they appointed him their agent for Erie County. Mr. Colt took up a permanent residence in 1797, having been preceded by Elisha and Enoch Marvin (his brothers-in-law), Cyrus Robinson, Henry and Dyer Loomis, Charles Allen, Joseph Berry, John and William Wilson, James Moore, Joseph Webster, Philo Barker, Timothy Tuttle, Silas and William Smith, Joseph Shadduck and John Daggett (each accompanied by his sons), and John Andrews. All of these were hardy and intelligent New England people. Mr. Colt established his headquarters at what came to be known as Colt's Station, around or near which most of the emigrants settled. The same year, Mr. Colt cut a road through from the lake at Freeport to the Station, the first in the county after the old French road, as an avenue for supplies, which were brought by lake from Buffalo. This road was extended in 1798 to French Creek, near what is now "Little Hope," or Greenfield Post Office, where Mr. Bissell had established a landing, and later in the season Mr. Colt and William Miles continued it to the forks of French Creek. The eastern road from North East to Wattsburg was opened about 1800; the one from Colt's Station to Waterford, by way of Phillippsville, in 1804 or 1806; and the Station road, from Wesleyville, by way of Colt's Station to Mayville, in 1813.

Mr. Colt brought his wife on in May, 1798, who remained with him till his removal to Erie. In 1803, James Taylor, with wife and one child, coming from Rockbridge County, Va., settled in the township, locating about two miles northeast of Colt's Station. Here they remained until 1812, when they removed to the State of New York, near the boundary line between that State and Pennsylvania. Henry Taylor, a relative of the above named, settled in the township at the same time. He was a man of family, and several years later purchased land in North East Township, adjoining the borough, upon which he resided for some years. He figured conspicuously in the war of 1812. He was made Captain of the first military company at North East; subsequently removed to Michigan, and there died. The inducement that took Mr. Colt and his colony to Greenfield was the belief then generally disseminated that the hill lands were preferable to those of the lake shore, which were densely wooded, swampy and well-nigh impenetrable. In a short time, Mr. Colt saw his error, and in 1804 he removed to Erie, where he remained the balance of his life. He died suddenly October 11, 1832, aged seventy-one years and three months. Mrs. Colt survived till March 13, 1834, dying at the age of sixty-six. They left no children, and the large estate Mr. Colt had acquired passed into the hands of relatives. On Mr. Colt's departure, the greater portion of the colony left also, scattering in various directions, and most of them making amends for their blunder by taking up some of the choicest lands in the county. Enoch Marvin became the company's agent in the Beaver Valley, where he died and was buried. His brother Elisha was one of the few who remained, and he and his wife both died at Colt's Station, the first in 1829 and the second in 1858. Their son, William E., continued to reside at Colt's Station till the decease of his mother: when he made his home in North East.

OTHER MATTERS.

The first Protestant religious service in Erie County was held at Colt's Station on the 2d of July, 1797, shortly after the arrival of the colony from New England. About thirty persons assembled, from Greenfield, North East and Venango, to whom a sermon was read by Mr. Colt. The old graveyard, on the Erie & Mayville road, a little east of the Station, was the earliest (1801) of which any record has been preserved in the county. Elisha Marvin, was buried there, but his remains were taken up and removed to North East after the death of his wife. The first celebration in Erie County of the Nation's Independence was near Colt's Station, on the 4th of July, 1797. The first military company in Erie County was organized in Greenfield, in 1801. It had eighty members. Elisha Marvin was Captain.

While Mr. Colt remained at the Station, it was a busy place, being the depot of supplies for all the country round. For a year or two, the line of travel from the lake was through Colt's Station to French Creek, and then on to Pittsburgh, which lasted until a good road was opened between Erie and Waterford. After Mr. C.'s departure, the glory of the Station faded. Col. Joseph Selden opened a store there in 1820, which was continued by other parties until a few years ago. Morrow B. Lowry clerked in this store when a boy of sixteen, and B. F. Sloan spent a portion of his youthful years in the locality. A tavern was established about fifty years ago, and kept up till 1860 or 1865. The old tavern has been converted into a farmhouse, and there is nothing there besides but a schoolhouse, a liberty pole and two small dwellings.

STREAMS AND MILLS.

The chief stream of Greenfield is the West Branch of French Creek, which receives many small tributaries in the township. It heads in Findley's Lake or "pond," about two miles from the State line, in Chautauqua County, and running across Greenfield from the northeast to the middle, and through the entire width of Venango from north to south, joins the East Branch in Amity, just below Wattsburg, after a course of eighteen or twenty miles. The headwaters of Six Mile, Twelve Mile, Sixteen Mile and of a branch of Twenty Mile Creek, are all in Greenfield, the first two flowing into the lake in Harbor Creek, and the second two in North East. They have their rise on the ridge north of the West Branch of French Creek, and not more than a mile or two from that stream. Some of the tributaries of the West Branch head within a few rods of the sources of the lake shore creeks.

The first saw mill was built by Leverett Bissell, at or near Little Hope, in 1799, being among the earliest in that county. Another was put up in 1824, by John Whiteside, in the south part of the township. The present manufacturing concerns are two portable saw mills near Shadduck's Corners, in the west portion; another near H. Raymond's, close to the New York line; T. Raymond's saw mill on French Creek, about a mile below Little Hope; a grist mill, saw mill and cheese factory at Little Hope (the mills were established by Whiteside and Messer over a half century ago, and the cheese factory was built by a company about ten years ago); and A. Moseman's cider mill, on the Wellman road, near the Greene line. Formerly there were two grist mills and two saw mills near Raymond's, but all have been abandoned.

VILLAGE AND CHURCHES.

The only settlement in the township which approaches the dignity of a village is Greenfield, on the West Branch of French Creek, just off from the middle road between North East and Wattsburg. The place is better known by its nickname of Little Hope. The site of the place was taken up about 1796, by Leverett Bissell, on a soldier's right of 400 acres. He built a saw mill and a landing on the creek, where batteaux came up loaded with supplies from the lower country. The original settler left the place in 1805 or 1806 in charge of his son Cyril, who located there and died about 1848. The present village embraces a grist mill, saw mill, cheese factory, store, blacksmith shop, schoolhouse and twenty or thirty houses. There is a cemetery just at the outskirts of the village, and a Methodist Church at the corners, not far distant. The old Miller Graveyard, a few rods to the east, is no longer used for burial purposes. Greenfield was long the only post office in the township. Besides the burial ground referred to, there is an old one on the Gilson place, in the eastern part of the township. The Methodist Episcopal Church near Little Hope was organized in 1836, and occupies a commanding position at the junction of the Wildman and Wattsburg roads. It has a parsonage attached, built in 1868. This society was the outgrowth of a class that worshiped at an early day, in what was known as the Campfield Schoolhouse, located about one mile south of the present church building (in Venango Township), and subsequently in the Miller Schoolhouse. The church building was erected about the year 1850. The appointment has been on the North East, Wattsburg and Greenfield and Mina Circuits respectively, the latter being formed in 1868, since which period the pastors of the charge have been as follows: J. K. Mendenhall, J. Allen, W. H. Hoover, L. E. Beardsley, A. Bashline, J. Akers, Z. W. Shadduck, G. Collier, 1882-83. What is known as the Second Greenfield Union Free-Will Baptist Church was organized at the date of the building of their present church edifice, situated in the western part of the township, in 1881. This organization was made up of the two congregations which had previously worshiped, the one at the Union Schoolhouse in North East Township, and the other at Shadduck's Schoolhouse in Greenfield Township, both of which had been in existence a number of years. Among the ministers who have preached for the congregations may be mentioned Revs. Chauncy

Burch, Morton, Losee and J. L. Higby, the latter preaching the dedicatory sermon in the church in the spring of 1882.

The United Brethren Congregation at Shadduck's Schoolhouse was organized with less than a dozen members by Rev. J. W. Clark about eight years ago. It was placed on Harbor Creek Circuit, of which it is now a part.

SCHOOLS.

Among the early schools of the township may be mentioned one that was taught in a schoolhouse which stood about two miles east of the present Miller Schoolhouse, as early as 1816, and at about that time A. Young was the "master." In the eastern part of the township, John Griswold taught an earlier school. In this portion of the township other early teachers were William Leonard, George Selkregg, a Miss Phillips, and Miss Mary A. Platt. There was a log schoolhouse at Colt's Station, in which school was held in the winter of 1820-21, by Porter Rogers. Lorenzo Rogers, a brother to Porter, and Asa Hall, were teachers in this building. Another of the early-built schoolhouses for this section stood in Venango Township.

The present schools are the Wilson, in the southeast, at the crossing of the Findley's Lake and North East & Wattsburg roads; the Davis, in the northeast, on the last-named road; the Miller, at Greenfield Village; the Colt's Station; the Parmenter, near the North East Township line; the Moore, in the south, at the crossing of the Waterford and Wildman roads; the Wildman, in the southwest, near the Greene line; the Prindle, on the road from Hiram Shadduck's to Harbor Creek; and the Shadduck, on the Colt's Station road, a little west of Shadduck's Corners. The township also pays half the expense of the Union School in North East Township, just over the line.

ROADS, ETC.

The main thoroughfares are the east road between North East and Wattsburg, and the middle road, through Colt's Station, between the same points; the Station road from Wesleyville to Mayville; and the road from Greene past the Methodist Episcopal Church and Greenfield Village to Findley's Lake. All of these were laid out on a straight line, but had to diverge in order to surmount the ridges. The township never had a plank road, and the nearest railroad station is at North East. The first marriage in the township was that of Joseph Shadduck to Betsy Willard, and the first child born was their son Ira. Greenfield has furnished but three county officers, viz., County Auditor, Mark Baldwin, 1833 to 1836; County Commissioner, William E. Marvin, 1845 to 1848; William Parker, 1853 to 1856. The first frame barn ever built in Greenfield Township is still standing at Shadduck's Corners. It was built by Joseph Shadduck about 1815. The third oldest man of whom there is any recollection in Erie County, was James Davis, of Greenfield—the very oldest having been Michael Hare, who died at Waterford in 1843, aged over a hundred and fifteen years, and whose remains are interred in the cemetery at that borough. Davis was born in Taunton, Mass., and resided in Greenfield at a huddle of cabins known as Log City, a mile or two toward North East from Colt's Station. When about one hundred years old, he moved to Michigan, where he died in the one hundred and fifth year of his age.

At what is known as Shadduck's Corners, a special post office was established June 15, 1883, with Daniel Hunt as Postmaster. The office is designated Hornby Post Office.

CHAPTER XIV.

GREENE TOWNSHIP.

THIS township—one of the original sixteen—was known as Beaver Dam until 1840, when the present name was adopted in honor of Gen. Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary memory. Its western boundary has been twice changed—first, by adding a piece to McKean, and second, by the erection of Summit in 1854. Greene Township is bounded on the north by Mill Creek and Harbor Creek, on the east by Greenfield and Venango, on the south by Waterford and on the west by Summit and Mill Creek. Its greatest extent is seven miles from north to south, and six from east to west. It has an area of 22,020 acres, and contained 140 inhabitants in 1820, 443 in 1830, 1,081 in 1840, 1,542 in 1850, 1,450 in 1860, 1,395 in 1870, and 1,531 in 1880. By the assessment of 1883, the valuation of real estate was $560,517; the number of horses, 428; of cows, 795, and of oxen, 28; the value of personal property, $40,100; and the amount of money at interest was $19,023.

FIRST SETTLERS.

The earliest settlers in Greene Township were Peter Himebaugh and Conrad Wineman, two Pennsylvania Germans, who took up lands in 1800 along Le Bœuf Creek, and remained there the balance of their lives. About 1802, Jacob and Samuel Brown, Thomas Bunnell, and John and Ambrose Coover settled in the Le Bœuf Valley. In the spring of 1802, Thomas Hinton, with five sons and two daughters, made their homes in the northeast, in what has ever since been known as Wales, from their native country. The Browns built mills on the creek, and for a long period supplied a good portion of the timber used at Erie. In the Welsh settlement, the Hintons were followed by the Joneses, Knoyles, Morgans, Wilkinses and others of their countrymen. From 1804 on, a number of persons went in and left, and the tide of emigration did not commence again until 1816. Between that year and 1818, a colony of New England people located in the township, among whom may be named Cyril Drown and sons, Martin Hayes and sons, Isaac and David Church, Benjamin Gunnison, Roger Root, David Edwards and S. T. Rockwood. Weed's Corners was settled in 1828 by William B. Weed and William Yapple, who went there when the country south of Hayes's to Lake Pleasant was a continuous forest. The first German emigration was in 1833, when the Hirts, Pringles, Kellers and others settled on and near the Wattsburg road. Mr. Kuhl and sons removed from Mill Creek in 1835. The Irish began settling in the township about 1836, mostly on the Kuhl road. Among their number, the Barrys, Gallaghers, Morrisons, McManuses, Cosgroves and McGinnesses were first on the ground. H. L. Pinney bought a farm in Greene in 1843, and moved there the next year. E. O. Pinney first rented a farm in 1843, and purchased in 1846; and Martin Pinney made the township his home in 1851. The first two are cousins of Martin Pinney and his brother Elisha Pinney, of McKean. Their fathers were twins, and looked so much alike that they could scarcely be told apart by their wives. Elijah, the father of H. L. and E. O., located in Harbor Creek in 1835; Elisha, the father of Martin and Elisha, Jr., in McKean in 1836. Griffith Hinton, one of the sons of Thomas, above referred to, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Sumner Bemis, on the 15th of March, 1880, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. The Hinton family came from Wales in 1801, but did not settle in this county till the next year. Griffith Hinton served in the war of 1812. He removed from Greene Township to Harbor Creek in 1834.

LANDS.

Greene is one of the most elevated townships in the county, containing the dividing ridge from which the waters of Mill Creek, Walnut Creek, Four Mile Creek and Six Mile Creek flow into the lake, and of Le Bœuf Creek to the south. The main body of the land is clay and gravel, best for grazing, and great numbers of cattle are raised, and cheese and butter produced. There is a good valley along Le Bœuf Creek, in the southwest, ranging from half a mile to a mile in width, which is somewhat damp, but is rich in its yield of grass. Wheat is raised to some extent, but the valley is rather frosty for corn. Greene Township produces big crops of oats and potatoes, and fruits of all kinds are as certain a yield as in any other section of the county. The value of land is from $30 to $50 an acre. A considerable area of forest land still exists, and the township may be said to be the main supply point of Erie for firewood. The township post offices are West Greene, East Greene, Hamot and Six Mile Creek.

STREAMS AND MILLS.

As before stated, Greene is the fountain-head of no less than five Erie County streams, viz., Le Bœuf Creek, Mill Creek, Walnut Creek, Four Mile Creek and Six Mile Creek. Le Bœuf Creek rises on the south edge of the township, and empties into French Creek below Waterford; a branch of Mill Creek starts on Jacob Lilleman's farm, in the northwest; Four Mile Creek on R. Zimmer's farm, about a mile northeast from St. Boniface; Six Mile Creek, on the farm of Mrs. Sarah Filley, a short distance south of Wales, and Walnut Creek, near the Greene and Summit line, a little northeast of Whiteford's Corners. The great gully of Four Mile Creek begins nearly at the head of the stream, about three and a half miles south of the Harbor Creek line, and continues to the crossing of the Station road, below Cooper's mill. The mills of the township are the saw and feed mill of Miles Brown, on Le Bœuf Creek; Kane's saw mill, near the north boundary, and David Ripley's saw mill, back of St. Boniface Church, both on Four Mile Creek, and two saw mills on Six Mile Creek, north of Wales. The first, last and only grist mill in the township was built by Jacob Brown early in the century, and ran until 1872, when it burned down. Formerly there was another saw mill on Le Bœuf Creek, one near the Lake Pleasant road, a third near John Evans', and a fourth at Bogus Corners, but all have been abandoned.

ROADS AND RAILROAD.

The leading thoroughfares are the Wattsburg Plank Road; the old road to Wattsburg by way of Phillipsville, which branches off from the plank road at the Seigel place; the Lake Pleasant road; the road from Harbor Creek to Waterford, through West Greene: the old Shunpike, from Augustus Graham's, in Summit, to Waterford, and the road from the Shunpike to West Greene. The Wattsburg plank was completed in 1853, and given up as a toll road in the spring of 1865. The Lake Pleasant road was opened from Erie to the Martin Hayes place in the winter of 1821-22, and extended to French Creek in the winter of 1826-27, through what was, for a good part of the way, a dense wilderness. Both of these roads traverse the entire width of the township from northwest to southeast. The Shunpike was laid out in 1827-28 to avoid the Waterford Turnpike, growing out of a quarrel between its owners and the stage company over the rates of toll. The Harbor Creek & Wattsburg road was opened in 1810, and the one which branches off from the Shunpike has been in existence thirty to forty years. The only railroad in Greene is the Philadelphia & Erie, which crosses about a mile of its southwest corner, between Summit and Waterford. It has no station in the township, and the nearest are at Belle Valley, Langdon's and Jackson's. The railroad bridge over Le Bœuf Creek is at the line between Greene and Waterford.

HAMLETS AND CHURCHES.

Greene Township has no incorporated towns, and no settlements that can strictly be called by the name of villages. There are, however, several thickly settled localities which have been honored with special names, such as West Greene, St. Boniface, Wales, Bogus Corners, Weed' Corners and Six Mile Creek. Wales, in the northeast, on the Venango line, derives its name from being first settled by Welsh, of whom the Hinton's were the pioneers. The district known as Wales includes a Presbyterian and Methodist Church, a schoolhouse and a few farmhouses. The Presbyterian congregation was organized in 1849 by Rev. G. W. Cleveland, its first pastor, and erected a building in 1851 at a cost of $800. The succeeding ministers have been Revs. Steele, William H. Adams and John McMaster. The latter is now in charge, and the congregation is weak. The Methodist congregation has been in existence some thirty-five years. Rev. J. O. Osborne was pastor 1881-82. The circuit includes Phillipsville, West Greene and Wales.

St. Boniface is a German settlement on the Wattsburg Plank Road, seven miles from Erie, which derives its name from the Catholic Church there located. The congregation was organized in 1857 by Rev. J. A. Oberhofer, with a congregation of some forty families. Rev. Oberhofer remained in charge of the church until 1867, and again in 1871 became its pastor, and sustained that relation with the congregation until the summer of 1873. Since then, the pastors have been as follows: Fathers Maloney, M. Apple and Edward Hasse, the last of whom is now in charge. The post office name is Hamot.

A church was erected in 1857, which burned down in 1867, and the present elegant building was erected in 1873, at a cost of $4,000. Meantime a separation took place between the German and English speaking members of the congregation, which led to the construction of another edifice by the latter in 1870, at a cost of $400. This building, known as St. Peter's Church, was subsequently removed to Kuhl's Hill. A Catholic school, a parsonage and a graveyard are attached to St. Boniface Church. Both congregations have the same pastor and get along now in harmony. Besides the church buildings, the settlement contains a grocery, wagon shop, blacksmith shop and a few residences. East Greene Post Office and a schoolhouse are situated near Bogus Corners. The Corners are at the intersection of a cross road with the Wattsburg plank, not far from the center of the township. The East Greene Post Office was established about 1829, with N. M. Manly as Postmaster. Half a mile west are a German Lutheran Church and graveyard, a grocery and a saloon. The congregation erected its building in 1857, at a cost of $600. It is known as St. Paul United Lutheran and Presbyterian Church, and was organized several years previous with twenty-two members, by Rev. Michael Kuchler, of Erie, and, until the construction of the church, worshiped in a schoolhouse. At present, a temporary vacancy exists in the pastorate. The membership is about thirty-five. Weed's Corners, at the intersection of the road from West Greene with the Lake

Pleasant road, is nothing more than a few farmhouses. It derives its name from William B. Weed, who was the first settler. West Greene consists of a small collection of buildings at the meeting of two roads in the south part of the township. Besides the post office, there is a Methodist Church, a cheese factory, store, blacksmith shop and schoolhouse. The cheese factory was opened May 12, 1873, and the church building has been up about twenty years.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at West Greene was organized in 1827, by Rev. Knapp, with five members—Nathaniel Brace and wife, John Brace and wife and Mrs. William B. Weed. Originally, this appointment formed a part of North East Circuit, which embraced Erie City, Waterford, Wattsburg, North East, McKean, Russellville and other charges; at present it belongs to Greene Circuit, which includes three charges—Phillipsville, West Greene and Center Chapel—in this township. Rev. J. O. Osborne is the present pastor. The early meetings were held in dwellings and schoolhouses until about 1848, when a large frame church was built at a cost of $800. It was superseded in the autumn of 1883 by a new frame structure, erected on the site of the old church, a short distance north of West Greene, at a cost of $1,500.

About 1848, a church was built at West Greene and occupied for a number of years by a Free-Will Baptist congregation. After the dismemberment of the society, the building was removed to a farm.

In addition to these churches, the United Brethren have one on the Lake Pleasant road, just above the head of the lake, on the line between Greene and Venango, the congregation of which was organized in 1871, by Rev. John A. Thomas. The building was erected in 1872, at a cost of $1,300.

Six Mile Creek, about a mile north of Wales, consists of two or more saw mills and a few houses. There has been a post office at this point for several years. In the northwest part of the township is an old United Brethren society, which has been meeting for twenty-two or twenty-three years at the residence of David Ripley, Sr. Formerly it held services in the Lawrence Schoolhouse. The class forms a part of Harbor Creek Circuit.

PUBLIC MEN.

The public officers furnished by Greene Township are Capt. Thomas Wilkins, Collector of the Port of Erie from 1861 to 1869; Jonas Gunnison, a prominent Erie attorney and a member of the Assembly in 1859; Rodney Cole, County Commissioner from 1851 to 1854; William B. Weed, from 1867 to 1870, and Albert B. Gunnison, from 1875 to 1881; Ora P. Gunnison, Deputy Sheriff for a few months; Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue for a long term; Acting Collector of Internal Revenue from October 8 to November 8, 1875; Mercantile Appraiser in 1879, and Clerk to the County Commissioners, from 1881 to 1883; Horace L. Pinney, Jury Commissioner from 1870 to 1873; E. O. Pinney, Trustee of Erie Academy from 1875 to 1878, and William E. Hayes, County Auditor from 1874 to 1880. Rev. Martin Hayes, for forty years a prominent minister of the Presbyterian denomination, and C. A. Hayes, a lawyer in Chicago, are natives of Greene.

SCHOOLS.

According to William B. Weed, in 1825 no schools were held in what is now Greene Township. Soon after 1825, however, a schoolhouse was built on Lot 184, in the east part of the township. A second was erected about two miles farther south, and a third was built on the farm of William B. Weed. One of the first teachers was Mrs. Brace. She was a pioneer woman of the township, hailing from Connecticut. Below is a list of the school buildings:

Kuhl, on Kuhl Hill; Drown, on Wattsburg road, near Hosea Drown's; Bogus Corners; New, at John Evans, near Wales; Weed, on Lake Pleasant road, near Weed's Corners; Lawrence (the voting place), on Lake Pleasant road, near the center; West Greene; and Brown near LeBœuf Creek, in the southwest. Pleasant Independent District, embracing parts of Greene, Summit and Mill Creek, has a building on the Lake Pleasant road, in the Pinney and Hayes neighborhood. Lake Pleasant Independent District takes in the southwest part of Greene and adjacent corners of Amity, Waterford and Venango.

CHAPTER XV.

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF EDINBORO.

IN the organization of Erie County, the territory now embraced in Washington Township, together with portions of Waterford and Franklin since taken off, was given the title of Conneauttee, after its lake and principal streams. The name was changed to Washington in 1834, to correct the inconvenience caused by two very similar township names in the same county. In 1844, a large slice was cut out of the west side in the formation of Franklin Township, and another reduction was made at a later period by taking a piece from the northeast corner and adding it to Waterford. The original jurisdiction covered 31,360 acres, but the township limits have been reduced to 27,473 acres, with a width from north to south of six and three-fifths miles, and a length from east to west of eight and a half in the widest part. The township is bounded on the north by McKean, Waterford and Franklin, on the east by Waterford and LeBœuf, on the south by Venango, Cussewago and Cambridge Townships, Crawford County, and on the west by Elk Creek and Franklin. It contains three small villages—McLane, McLallen's Corners and Draketown—all of which have post offices except the last named. The population of the township was 438 in 1820, 743 in 1830, 1,551 in 1840, 1,706 in 1850, 1,943 in 1860, 2,744 in 1870, and 1,880 in 1880. The assessment of 1880 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $734,836; number of horses, 473; of cows, 1,133; of oxen, 50; value of the same, $46,763; money at interest, $48,731.

FIRST SETTLERS.

In the year 1796—the whole of Erie County being at the time an unbroken wilderness, excepting trifling settlements at Erie, Waterford, North East, McKean, Harbor Creek, Fairview and Mill Creek—Alex. Hamilton and William Culbertson, both of Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Penn., visited the site of Edinboro and selected lands with the design of establishing a colony. They returned to their home in the fall and spent the winter along the West Branch of the Susquehanna enlisting settlers. In the spring of 1797, they came back, and were soon followed by Job Reeder, Samuel Galloway, Simeon Dunn, John and James Campbell, Mathias Sipps, John McWilliams, Phineas McLenathan, Matthew Hamilton, James, John, Andrew and Samuel Culbertson, Mrs. Jane Campbell (a widow), two of her sons and daughter Hannah, and the wives of Alex. Hamilton and William Culbertson. Other parties arrived later in the season, making about fifty colonists during the year 1797.

The Widow Campbell retraced her way to the Susquehanna in the fall, and returned the next spring, bringing her other three children. She and her family took up over 1,000 acres, embracing the properties now owned by John, Samuel and Moses Reeder, Elias McWilliams, P. Crane and R. B. McLaughrey, building several cabins so as to hold the land. James Culbertson located on the Hardman farm; John on the Lick, Webster and Giles places; Samuel on the old Perry farm, and William on the old Kinter farm. The latter soon changed to the tract now covered by Edinboro, and proved himself to be the most enterprising man of the party. He built the first house in Edinboro and the first grist mill and saw mill on Conneauttee Creek; was Justice of the Peace for forty years. Mr. Culbertson's earliest residence was on the site of F. C. Vunk's house, from which he moved to a building on the site of R. C. McLaughrey's store.

Alexander Hamilton took up 600 acres, including what is now the Martin Pratt farm; Phineas McLenathan settled on the west side of the lake, where his grandson John lives; and Mathias Sipps near the Waterford road, not far from the center of the township. Following are as nearly as can be ascertained the years in which other pioneers settled in the township: In 1798, Peter Kline; 1800, James Graham; 1802, Daniel Sherod; 1805, John Tanner and Davis Pifer; 1814, Simeon Meacham; 1816, Judah Wells; 1817 or 1818, Robert McLallen, James Port and Nathaniel Etheridge; 1819, Isaac Taylor; 1819 or 1820, Nathaniel Gardner; 1825 or 1826, Jesse Lewis; 1827, Henry R. Terry; 1828, Jacob Lefevre; 1832, Sherman Greenfield and L. B. Goodell; 1833, George Sweet, Evi Twichell and Willard Wellman; 1834, J. J. Compton, Benjamin White, Jesse Tarbell, Wanton Slocum, the Hawkinses and M. M. McLaughrey; 1835, John White, the Proudfits and the Potters; 1836, the Shieldses. Mr. Sweet was from Cayuga County, N. Y., and Mr. Compton from Delaware County, N. Y. Dr. J. C. Wilson made his location in 1856, coming from Bucks County, Penn. Among the early settlers in the Little Conneauttee Valley were Zopher Davis and John Sherwood, both of whom located in 1819; Walter Palmer, Henry Drake, Russell Stancliff, Ralph D. Phelps and Theo. Phelps. Jacob LeFevre was the second Justice of the Peace, receiving his appointment from Gov. Wolf in 1832, and serving till 1840. The first marriage was that of Job Reeder to Nancy Campbell, March 1, 1800; the first death that of Mrs. William Culbertson in 1804. Jane Culbertson was the first female child, born in 1799, and John Augustus Culbertson the first male child, born in 1800, though this was disputed by William Boardman, of Union City, who claimed to have first seen the light in the Little Conneauttee Valley in 1796.

There was no road in the county nearer than Waterford, and a dense wilderness extended on both sides from the Allegheny River to the far West, so the early settlers had to travel to Waterford on foot or horseback for their supplies.

ROADS.

The leading highways of Washington Township are the Erie & Edinboro Plank Road, with its extension to Meadville, by way of Venango; the plank road from Waterford to Drake's Mills, Crawford County; the old Waterford road, the road from Cranesville to Waterford, the State road from Lockport through McLane to Waterford, and the Sherrod Hill road from Edinboro to Cussewago. The old Waterford road was established about 1802. The Erie & Edinboro Plank Road Company was formed in 1850, with Judge John Galbraith as President; and in the same year the Edinboro & Meadville Company was organized, with Judge Gaylord Church as President. Both roads were completed in 1852, and simultaneously abandoned about 1868 or 1869. The plank road from Waterford to Drake's Mills, built about the same period, was allowed to fall into the hands of the township authorities when the others were abandoned.

There is no railroad in the township, and the nearest railroad station is at Cambridge, in Crawford County, where most of the freight to and from Edinboro is received and shipped.

STREAMS, LAKE AND LANDS.

Few townships in the county are better watered than Washington is by Conneauttee and Little Conneauttee Creeks and their branches. The East Branch of Conneauttee Creek rises near McLane, and the West Branch in a cranberry marsh in Franklin Township, about two miles from the Washington line. After coursing through the western and central portions of Washington Township from the north, they unite their waters at the head of Conneauttee Lake. Flowing through the lake, the stream continues some eight miles further to a point near Cambridge, where it joins French Creek, after a total length of about fifteen miles. Pratt Creek unites with the East Branch about a mile north of the lake, and Herbert Creek runs into the main stream two miles below the outlet. The Little Conneauttee rises in McKean, perhaps a mile north of the township line, runs across the eastern portion in a southerly course, and empties into the Big Conneauttee a short distance above its mouth, having a length about equal to its more prominent namesake. Besides the above mentioned streams, the north part of the township contains the headwaters of the South Branch of Elk Creek, which joins the main stream at Middleboro. Lake Conneauttee was originally about three-fourths of a mile long by half a mile wide, but was somewhat enlarged by the construction of the dam for Culbertson's mill across the outlet.

The lands of Washington Township will average as well as any of the southern districts of the county. There are no abrupt hills or precipitous gullies, and nearly the whole face of the country is susceptible of cultivation. A broad, fertile valley extends from the McKean line across the entire township, along Big Conneauttee Creek, and the valley of the Little Conneauttee, though narrower, is equally productive. Both valleys are good grain land, but that of the Big Conneauttee is marred by swamps, which are difficult of drainage. A high chestnut ridge, rising gradually from the valleys, lies between the two streams, which produces grain, but is best for dairying. There is another ridge on the west side of the township, extending from Franklin to the Crawford line, which is the exact counterpart of its eastern neighbor. The price of land is from $25 to $50 an acre, averaging perhaps $30.

VILLAGES AND CHURCHES.

The village of McLane lies upon the Erie & Edinboro Plank Road, at the crossing of the State road, on the summit between the headwaters of Big Conneauttee Creek and the South Branch of Elk Creek, fourteen miles south of the city and four miles north of Edinboro. It consists of a Methodist and Baptist Church (both frame), two stores, one blacksmith, wagon and carriage shop, one shoe shop, a schoolhouse, and about a dozen houses. The name was changed from Compton's Corners to McLane, in honor of Gen. John W. McLane, the gallant first Colonel of the Eighty-third Regiment. There is a union cemetery at the village, and a private race course a little south.

The McKean Baptist congregation at McLane, until the erection of their church edifice, held services in McKean Township. James Steadman, Jr., and James Steadman, 3d, Margaret Steadman, Sarah Thompson, Zera Crouch, William Crouch and Phidina Crouch met at the house of Martin Stancliff December 7, 1838, to consider the propriety of organizing a Baptist Church, and on the following Saturday Elders McCumber, Alford and R. Cheney were appointed a council for that purpose. The congregation met at the South Hill and Branchville Schoolhouses until 1866, when the present church building at McLane was erected. It cost about $2,000, and was dedicated January 23, 1867. Rev. Phelps' pastorate closed in 1882, and at present there is no regular minister in charge.

The Methodist Episcopal society at McLane was organized in 1863, with six members, by Rev. L. D. Brooks, its first pastor. The church building was erected in 1867, at an expense of $1,800. The membership is now about thirty. The society is attached to McKean Circuit.

The village of McLallen's Corners is on the Little Conneauttee, at the crossing of the Waterford & Drake's Mills Plank Road by a road leading to Pollock's bridge in Le Bœuf Township. It embraces a Christian Church, a cheese factory, a schoolhouse, a store, a blacksmith shop and several houses. One of the oldest residents of McLallen's Corners was Abel Trow, who died in 1881 at the age of ninety. The Christian Church was organized in the spring of 1828 with six members by Rev. Simeon Bishop. Services were held in the schoolhouse for twenty years; during the pastorate of Rev. Asahel Fish, who had charge of the congregation for about sixteen years, a church was erected, which has now been in use for thirty-five years. Succeeding Rev. Fish, the pastors have been Rev. William Bullock, Elders Jesse E. Church, Gardner Dean, G. W. Sherman, Stephen Washburn, Aaron Cornish, J. S. Johnson, G. W. Sweet, Philip Zeigler, J. H. Carr, A. M. Letts and Joseph Weeks, who now serves this charge. Rev. Eli Halliday came in 1857. The present membership is about 100.

Draketown, on the Little Conneauttee Creek, about two-thirds of a mile south of the State road, is nothing more than a thickly settled farm region. Besides a few houses, there is a Christian Church, a schoolhouse, a store and a blacksmith shop. The Christian Church was organized in January, 1877, by Elder G. W. Sweet, who is still its pastor. The church building, a neat frame, had been erected the previous summer. The membership of the congregation is about seventy.

There is a Methodist building at Ash's Corners, north of Draketown, and another of the same denomination at Sherrod Hill, in the southwestern part of the township. The building at Ash's Corners was erected in 1867, at a cost of $1,600. An old society had previously existed in this locality and met for worship in the Draketown Schoolhouse, the one at Phelps' Corners, one mile east of the present edifice, and the Ash Schoolhouse. The charge is a portion of Waterford Circuit, which besides this and Waterford appointments has a class at Sharp's Schoolhouse. The membership of the Ash congregation is small. Rev. John Graham was first pastor in charge after the new building was erected.

The Methodist Episcopal congregation at Sherrod Hill, several miles west of Edinboro, is in a prosperous condition and owns a substantial frame building. It is attached to the Edinboro Circuit.

The cemetery at Edinboro is the common burial ground for town and township, but there are a number of graveyards scattered about the country. The most prominent are those at McLane and Draketown.

SCHOOLS.

The first school in the township was taught by William Buckley on the west side of the Conneauttee Creek in what was known as the old Plank Schoolhouse. This building was also used for religious services. About 1819, Miss Barna Crosette taught a school in a room in Isaac Taylor's cabin about one and a half miles southeast of Edinboro. Soon after, a log schoolhouse was built on the east line of Mr. Taylor's farm, and besides the Taylor children, the families of Philip Kinter, of Joseph Walker and of John Tanner and others received instruction. Miss Crosette, who afterward married Samuel Perry, and resided near Edinboro, taught also in this log schoolhouse during a summer term or two. Horace Powers, from Massachusetts, was the first to hold sway here during the winter. He died many years after near Edinboro, aged seventy-six. The first schools were held in the southeast portion of the township. The northern part was later settled and held its first schools in the cabins of its pioneers. A large schoolhouse stood in Edinboro in 1821, and had been erected years previous. It was used for both educational and religious purposes. Hiram Powers gave instruction here as early as 1821. Probably a year later, Matthew Simpson presided at the teacher's desk. Amos Bailey, a New Yorker, taught the next winter, and soon after took his departure from the neighborhood. Capt. Samuel Beede, who hailed from New Hampshire, and dwelt at Compton's Corners, was the pedagogue about 1824 and 1825, and was followed by John Hodges, who died recently at the advanced age of over ninety years at his residence about eight miles east of Edinboro. Mr. Fullerton was also an early teacher at Edinboro. A schoolhouse was built in early times on the Perry farm, about a mile east of Edinboro. Following is a list of the school buildings and their locations: Greene, on the Greene road, in the southwest; Sherrod, on Sherrod Hill road, near the west line; White, on same road, two and a half miles from Edinboro; Gibson, on Gibson Hill road, a mile and a half from Edinboro; Wellman, on Greene road, a mile and three-fourths from Edinboro; Swift, at the Wellman cheese factory; Gillaspie, at junction of Erie plank and Crane roads; McLane, in the village of that name; Ash, at Ash's Corners; Macon, on road from Crane road to the State road; Draketown, in that village; Gleeton, on the Waterford road, two miles east of Edinboro; James McLallen, on the same road, half way between Edinboro and Waterford; McLallen's Corners, in that village; Cummings, on the Waterford plank, at the crossing of the Kinter Hill road; Kinter, on the Kinter Hill road, two miles southwest from Edinboro—making sixteen in all. Besides the above, the township is interested in three union schools, viz.: One in Franklin Township, near the west line; and two in Cussewago Township, Crawford County, near the south line.

FACTORIES AND MILLS.

The factories and mills of Washington Township are as follows: Wait & Ensign's steam saw mill and shingle and lath factory, north of McLane; Wellman's cheese factory, steam saw mill, shingle and lath factory, on the Crane road, about two and a half miles northwest of Edinboro; St. John's tannery, in the Conneauttee Valley; a cheese factory and cider mill, near McLallen's Corners; M. G. Gardner's steam saw mill, on the Little Conneauttee, near Draketown; Edwin Beach's saw mill, on the same stream, below McLellan's Corners; Jesse Lewis' carding and fulling mill, and J. F. Wade & Bros.' saw mill and shingle and lath factory, on the Conneauttee, about three-fourths of a mile south of Edinboro; J. F. Wade & Bros.' planing mill, sash and door factory, on the same stream, a short distance below; I. R. Reeder's saw mill, on the same stream, still lower down; N. White's factory, on the Kinter road and Giles Run; Anderson's cider and jelly mill, one and a half miles west of Edinboro.

BOROUGH OF EDINBORO.

The borough of Edinboro was incorporated by act of the Legislature in 1840, and includes some 500 acres of high, gravelly land at the foot of Lake Conneauttee, twenty miles south of Erie, seven miles north of the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad at Cambridge, and two miles north of the Crawford County line. The valley of the Conneauttee is about a mile wide at this point, and the country around the borough is one of the finest sections of Erie County. The corporate limits, which cover a portion of the lake, are about a mile from north to south, and about two-thirds of a mile from east to west. The population was 232 in 1840, 363 in 1850, 474 in 1860, 801 in 1870, and 876 in 1880. The first officers were: Burgess, William Kellison; Council, James Stancliff, L. B. Goodell, Abel Whitney, Daniel Shryock, Simeon Meachem; Assessor, Abel Whitney; Collector, Cornelius Graham. By the assessment of 1880, the valuation of the borough was as follows: Real estate, $193,422; number of horses, 81; of cows, 49; value of the same, $5,510; value of trades and occupations, $16,450; money at interest, $48,225.

The third grist mill in Erie County—one each having been previously built at Union and Walnut Creek—was erected on the outlet of Lake Conneauttee, very nearly on the site of the present mill, in 1801, by William Culbertson, one of the first settlers, who added a saw mill in 1802. The property fell into the hands of Isaac R. Taylor and James Reeder some thirty years ago, who built new mills, which are among the most extensive in the county. The establishment of the mills may be said to have laid the foundation of the town. By degrees quite a number of houses sprung up around them, and Mr. Culbertson finally concluded to survey the site into lots, to which he gave the name of Edinboro.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

Edinboro has four churches, two hotels, one bank, six doctors, one lawyer, one normal school, several halls, societies of the Masons and United Workmen, and a variety of manufactories. Of the latter, the principal are J. T. Reeder & Co.'s grist mill; M. Phelps' cheese factory, established in 1868; Taylor & Reeder's pump factory and planing mill. The village also contains three dry goods stores, five groceries, two drug stores, two hardware stores, two furniture stores, one clothing store, one jewelry store, three boot and shoe stores, three millinery stores, one saloon, two livery stables, four blacksmith shops, one carriage shop, one wagon shop, two harness shops, one tailor shop and one cooper shop. The buildings of the borough are of wood, with the exception of Isaac R. Taylor's fine residence, and Normal Hall, which are balloon frame brick structures, and Dr. Hotchkiss' brick residence. Town lots range in value from $125 to $500, averaging probably $300. The hotels of Edinboro are the Robinson House and the Cutler House. The first named was built in 1843, on the site of one that burned down, and was run by A. Robinson from 1852 to 1883, when he sold it to W. Bennett. The Cutler House is of recent date.

The cemetery of the borough, in a pretty location, on a knoll near the foot of the lake, and overlooking its whole extent, embraces three acres, the gift of William Culbertson for the purpose. It has been in use perhaps seventy years.

CHURCHES.

The religious societies of Edinboro are Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Close Communion Baptist and Advent, all of which have neat frame buildings.

The Presbyterian Church of Edinboro was organized in 1829 by Revs.

Samuel Tait and Pierce Chamberlain. A Presbyterian congregation had been organized here prior to 1819 by Rev. Mathews. From about 1821 to 1824, Rev. Bradford Marcy, of Venango Township, Crawford County, preached at Edinboro once in four weeks. Rev. Chamberlain, after the organization, supplied the church for several years. He resided at Rockville, Crawford County. Rev. Jared Spicer was probably the first resident minister. He came about 1837, and remained only a year. During his pastorate, the congregation separated into New School and Old School branches. The former employed Rev. James F. Reed at first; he remained seven years, and was succeeded by Rev. Ottinger for one year; Rev. E. W. Beebe followed, and remained many years. The Old School division secured the services successively of Alexander Cunningham and J. W. Dickey. In 1865, the two branches re-united, and were served twelve years by Rev. William Grasse. Rev. Bush was pastor from 1878 to 1880, when Rev. R. G. Williams, the present minister, took charge. In 1836, the congregation erected the first church in the village. In 1854, the New School branch erected a new house, and the year following the Old School branch also constructed a new church, which in 1871 was sold to the Baptist Church.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Edinboro was organized about 1829, prior to which date, however, Methodist preaching had been held in the vicinity by Rev. Russell Stancliff and others. Revs. Job Wilson, Mack Callender and Butt Barris were among the first ministers. The second church in the village was built by the Methodists in 1838, and now constitutes the Town House. The present building was erected in 1863.

The Edinboro, formerly Washington, Regular Baptist Church was organized, it is thought, about 1838. Rev. E. C. Rogers was minister in charge about twenty-five years. He was succeeded in 1874 by Rev. H. H. Phelps, who preached to the congregation for five years. Revs. Norman Thomas and J. R. Pendell each maintained the pastoral relation for about a year. In April, 1882, Rev. Phelps was recalled, and now supplies the congregation, which is small. Services were held in the schoolhouse until 1871, when the society purchased the Old School Presbyterian Church.

The Advent Christian Church of God was organized at Edinboro in 1863, with about thirty members, by Rev. H. L. Hastings, of Boston, Mass. Services had been held irregularly for twenty or more years previously by members of this faith who resided here. Rev. J. D. Brown was the first pastor. He came in the autumn of 1864 and remained six years. After a vacancy of four or five years, Rev. G. W. Stetson became pastor, and continued in charge for seven years. A vacancy now exists in the pulpit. The membership is about eighty. The church edifice was erected in 1864 at a cost of $1,200.

SECRET SOCIETIES, NEWSPAPERS AND POST OFFICES.

The charter for Oasis Lodge, No. 417, F. & A. M., was granted March 4, 1868, and in the following autumn the lodge was organized with the following eight charter members: John W. Goodell, Charles Burnham, Martin Cornell, Job Taylor, A. J. Proudfit, George Proud, H. D. Rogers and C. C. Roberts. The present membership is about fifty. The lodge owns the third floor of the Stanford building, which constitutes their hall. It was dedicated October 12, 1875.

Edinboro Lodge, No. 80, A. O. U. W., was chartered September 10, 1877. Its first officers were: W. B. Skelton, P. M. W.; William B. Green, M. W.; T. H. Goodrich, G. F.; W. W. McWilliams, O.; O. H. Durham, Recorder; William P. Burchfield, Financier; E. H. Austin, Receiver; M. V. Cornell, G.; D. Burrows, I. W.; N. T. McLallen, O. W.

In 1855, Edinboro boasted of three newspapers—the Native American, a monthly, and the Gem and Museum, weeklies, of which latter Mr. Lewis was editor. The Native American and Gem died natural deaths in 1856, and the Museum was moved to Waterford, where it led a struggling existence for several years under the name of the Enquirer. Henry Lick established the Express in 1859, which lived until December 29, 1860, when the material was sold to Mr. Clute, and used in establishing a journal at Three Rivers, Mich. The Edinboro Independent was started in February, 1880, by the Cobb brothers. They sold the paper December 1, 1881, to James T. Armstrong. Rev. J. R. Pendell became editor and proprietor in the spring of 1884.

The post route to Erie and the post office at Edinboro were established in 1837. Dr. Stranahan was the first postmaster.

STATE AND COUNTY OFFICERS.

The following is a list of the public officers furnished by Edinboro and Washington Townships: Auditors, Russell Stancliff, 1834 to 1837; James H. Campbell, 1845 to 1848; Samuel Reeder, 1851 to 1853; John W. Campbell, 1856 to 1859. Commissioners, Russell Stancliff, 1840 to 1843; William Campbell, 1846 to 1849; Josiah J. Compton, 1855 to 1858. Treasurer, Mortimer Phelps, 1855 to 1857. Prothonotary, C. P. Rogers, 1866 to 1869. Assemblymen, John W. Campbell, 1859; E. C. Twichell, 1862-63; Chauncey P. Rogers, 1872; E. H. Wilcox, 1873-74. Sealer of Weights and Measures, William P. Butterfield, 1883.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

The most conspicuous institution in Edinboro, and the one which has contributed most to its advancement, is the Normal School. This prosperous seat of learning grew out of an academy which was opened in 1855. The Normal School was built by subscription in 1856, was erected at a cost of $3,200, and was used as an academy in 1857-59. Prof. J. R. Merriman and Prof. Sears were engaged as instructors. Owing to the large attendance of scholars, two additional buildings, now known as the Assembly Hall and the Ladies' Boarding Hall respectively, were erected in 1858, at an outlay of $11,000, also raised by subscription. The State Superintendent, Dr. Hickok, on examining the school, pronounced the accommodation insufficient to justify him in accepting it as a State Normal School. During the winter of 1859-60, $10,000 were raised by subscription, and in 1860 a fourth building was erected, now known as the Gentlemen's Boarding Hall. On January 26, 1861, the institution was formally recognized by the State Superintendent as a State Normal School. The buildings connected with the school are as follows: Literary Hall, the original academy, built in 1857, and rebuilt in 1880; Dormitory, built in 1858; Library, built in 1858, rebuilt in 1880; Normal Hall, built in 1875; Dormitory, built in 1860; Music Hall, built in 1878; Recitation Building, built in 1880. Normal Hall and the Recitation building are brick clad, all the other edifices are wholly of frame. They stand on a tract of twelve acres, on the southeast edge of the borough, which has been planted with trees and laid out with walks. The Normal School has a good scientific apparatus, and the best collection of apparatus for teaching common schools in the State. It owns a library of 4,500 volumes. The teachers number twelve in the Normal department, and four in the Model School. Prof. Cooper, Principal, came to the school in 1861 as an assistant, and was promoted to the general charge in 1863.

CHAPTER XVI.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGH OF ELGIN.

UP to the year 1821, all of Erie County from the eastern boundary of Union and Amity to the Warren County line was known as Brokenstraw Township. In that year, the name was changed from Brokenstraw to Concord. This continued until 1826, when the township was divided, the northern portion receiving the name of Wayne and the southern retaining the old title. The three names, Union, Amity and Concord were all suggested by William Miles. In the act of April 11, 1807, Brokenstraw and Union were constituted one election district, to be known as No. 10, and the house of John Taylor was designated as the election place. This relation continued until 1821, when each township became a separate election district. As constituted in 1826, Concord contained 25,590 acres, but its size has been reduced to 19,624 by the taking off of a slice for Corry Borough in 1863; of another in 1866, when that place was incorporated as a city, and of a third by the creation of Elgin Borough in 1876. Concord is the extreme southeastern township of the county. It is bounded on the north by Wayne and Corry; on the west by Warren County; on the south by Crawford County; and on the east by Union. The assessment of 1873 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $467,119; number of cows, 582; of oxen, 36; of horses and mules, 278; value of same, $30,587; value of trades and occupations, $2,075; money at interest, $26,365. The only settlement within the township that can lay any claim to be styled a village, since Elgin was made a borough, is the small collection of buildings at Lovell's Station, which is also the sole post office. The population of Concord was 53 in 1820, 225 in 1830, 652 in 1840, 882 in 1850, 1,255 in 1860, 1,112 in 1870, and 1,171 in 1880.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

The only county officers Concord has been favored with have been Simeon Stewart, County Commissioner from 1849 to 1852, and David Nash and William H. Belknap, County Auditors—the first from 1858 to 1861, and the second from 1860 to 1863. Mr. Stewart was the Commissioner under whose supervision the present court house at Erie was planned and erected. While the township has been treated so sparingly in the bestowal of official honors, it has evened the matter up, in a certain sense, by turning out more attorneys than any other in the county. Its representatives in the legal profession are A. W. Covell, of Erie; H. W. Blakeslee, late of Erie, but now of Bradford; H. A. Baker, C. L. Baker, C. G. Olmstead and C. L. Covell, of Corry; and F. G. McClintock, of Union. In medicine it claims Frederick Beebe, of Findley's Lake, and Cisco Stewart, of Iowa; and in the editorial fraternity it is represented by F. S. Heath and D. M. Colegrove, of Corry.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first settlers in Concord were William Miles and his brother-in-law, William Cook, who came from the Susquehanna Valley with their families in June, 1795. They first located on what is now called the Wilber Webb farm, just north of the Crawford County line, and secondly a short distance south of the line in Sparta Township. Mr. Miles moved to Union in 1800, and Mr. Cook the year after. No other permanent settlements were made until 1800, when James and Robert McCray, natives of Ireland, took up homes for themselves in the township, and Joseph Hall, a Virginian, who had gone to Beaver Dam in 1797, moved over to the present site of Elgin Borough. From that date, no evidence exists of any additions to the colony until 1822 or 1823, about which time a brisk emigration set in from New York. Among the first of this class of settlers was Elder Jeduthan Gray, a Baptist minister, who, with a family of grown-up children, located on or near the William Gray place. The section was long known as the Gray settlement, and a post office by that title was kept up for a number of years. Deacon Graves went in at the same time or shortly after, and was followed within the period between 1825 and 1835, by Ezekial Lewis, Jesse and Heman Heath, Simeon Stewart, William Bugbee, Abner Lilly, John B. Chase, James Crowell, Russell Darrow, Hiram Cook, Paul Hammond, Stephen Hollis, Buckingham Beebe, Elijah Pond, Oliver D. Pier and others. G. J. Stranahan, founder of the well-known family of that name, settled in Concord in 1836, having formerly resided in Herkimer County, N. Y. His sons, John D. and P. G. Stranahan, moved to Le Boeuf, the former in 1849 and the latter in 1850, from which place, P. G. changed to Union in 1859. Oliver D. Pier, one of the pioneers of the township who is still living, though totally blind, was, in his day, a famous hunter. With a single gun, he claims to have killed 1,322 deer, besides a number of wolves, bears and other wild animals.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

Concord is in general a hilly township, but contains very little waste land. Bordering French Creek, there is a good valley, ranging from eighty rods to half a mile in width, south of Corry, and spreading out to one and two miles between that city and Union. The soil of the valley is much better than that of the high ground, but the farmers are more troubled by the frosts. Corn and oats are produced in all parts of the township, and most of the farmers raise their own wheat. The great industry, however, is dairying, for which the country is better calculated than for grain. All kinds of fruits are raised, except peaches. The value of land varies from $25 to $80 per acre, according to its situation and quality. The loftiest elevation is on the Darius Walton place, where a view is afforded into two States and four counties.

THE STREAMS.

The chief stream is the South Branch of French Creek, which rises on the James Bell farm, in the southeast, runs to the western edge of Corry, then turns abruptly to the west, flows in a westerly direction across the northern part of the township into Union, and joins the main stream a few rods below the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad bridge in Le Boeuf. It has a course of fully fifteen miles in the township, and a total length of about thirty miles. Its valley forms the route of no less than three railroads, the Oil Creek, P. & E., and N. Y., P. & O. The tributaries of the South Branch in Concord Township are Scotch Run, Slaughter Run, Spencer Run, Baskin Run, Spring Brook, Lilly Run and Beaver Dam Run. Scotch Run rises on the J. Aiken place, and unites in the public highway, at the foot of Stewart Hill, on the W. W. Covell place, having a length of over two miles. Spring Brook is made by a number of large springs on the line of Concord and Wayne, and falls into the South Branch on the place of A. Palmer, after a course of perhaps a mile.

The State Fish Hatching Pond, west of Corry, is at the source of this stream. The head of Lilly Run is on the J. D. Hammond place, and it terminates near Elgin, having a course of four miles. Beaver Dam Run takes its rise in the south part of Amity, flows through the southwestern corner of Wayne, and combines with the South Branch near Elgin Borough, through which it passes. Its length is not far from five miles. Slaughter, Spencer and Baskin Runs all come in from Wayne, between Elgin and Corry. In addition to these streams, the township is the starting place of several tributaries of Spring Creek and Oil Creek, which rise on the highlands and flow to the east and south. The head-waters of Oil Creek, French Creek and Spring Creek are all within a few rods of each other, near the summit of the Oil Creek Railroad, in the southeast.

The township has only two bridges of any importance, both at Lovell's. They were built at a cost of $500 to $600.

RAILROADS, COMMON ROADS, ETC.

The N. Y., P. & O. and the P. & E. Railroads run through the northern section of the township from Corry to the Union line, following the valley of the South Branch. From Corry to Lovell's, the tracks run side by side, but at the latter place they diverge somewhat and continue at a short distance apart to Union. Below Union they separate entirely, the N. Y., P. & O. running to the west, and the P. & E. to the lake at Erie. The old Oil Creek Railroad, now the Buffalo, Titusville & Pittsburgh, follows the upper channel of French Creek from Corry to the Summit, crossing the township into Crawford County. This road has no station in Concord, and Lovell's is the only one on the other roads. Of the common roads, the main ones are the Meadville & Columbus—the first opened in the township—the Union & Corry, which passes through Elgin, the Elgin & Sparta, the Corry & Spring Creek, and the Corry & Titusville. Lovell's Station, on the N. Y., P. & O. and P. & E. roads, three miles west of Corry, and thirty-four east of Erie, consists of a few houses only. A water mill was started at this point by James Crowell at an early date, which ran down; a machine shop, a saw mill and a planing mill were built and destroyed by fire. The present saw mill was built by D. J. Crowell about 1879. The village post office supplies a number of the people of Concord and Wayne.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES

The public schools of Concord are as follows, all the buildings being plain wooden structures: Fay, on Ox-bow Hill; Hemlock, near E. J. Ormsby's; McCray, near Lovell's Station; Stewart (1st), near E. A. Hammond's; Hays, near F. S. Heath's; Stewart (2d), near A. H. Bower's; Pine Wood, near E. Hatch's; Lewis, near Samuel Lewis; Moffat, near W. Young's; Chaffee, near Corry; Lindsley, near C. Pier's, and Cook, near the south line. The township is also interested with Sparta Township, Crawford County, in the Harbor School. Daniel Sackett, then of this township, was one of its first pedagogues. He taught, about 1823, in a log schoolhouse, the first in the township, which stood on the site of the present Cook School building. Andrew Aiken and Joseph Gray and wife afterward taught in this primitive schoolhouse.

The church buildings are the Wesleyan and the Methodist Episcopal. The Wesleyan was built on the McCray place, about a mile south of Lovell's Station, about 1840. The class was organized several years before by Rev. John Broadhead, besides whom Revs. J. E. Carroll, Thomas Savage, G. M. Hardy and Rev. Dempsey have been prominent among the ministers. Rev. Thomas Burrows, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now preaches to this congregation, the membership of which is about fifty.

The Methodist Episcopal building, also a frame, was dedicated in July, 1879, soon after this society was formed. It stands near F. S. Heath's. The present membership is about thirty-five. The society is connected with Spartansburg Circuit. Rev. C. M. Coburn was the first minister, succeeded in 1881 by J. B. Darling, and in 1883 by S. W. Douglass.

A graveyard is attached to the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and the Stewart burial place is on the farm of A. Bowers. Most of the interments take place in the cemetery at Corry.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The township is without a grist mill since the incorporation of Elgin Borough. The saw mills are William Young's and David Crowell's. A cheese factory has been in operation for some years near Wilbur Webb's, almost on the Crawford line. Several wells have been put down for oil, but the precious fluid has never been discovered in a profitable quantity. Large quantities of hay are packed and shipped to the oil region.

BOROUGH OF ELGIN.

Elgin Borough was incorporated in the winter of 1876, with territory about a mile square taken out of the western part of Concord Township. A grist and saw mill were established by Joseph Hall, on Beaver Dam Run, at an early day, and as the settlement grew it became known as Hall Town. A grocery was started about 1856, but the village did not amount to much until the opening of the Philadelphia & Erie road, when its name was changed to Concord Station. The title was again altered when it was made a borough, and that of the post office was changed about the same time. Elgin consists of a Methodist Church, a schoolhouse, a barrel factory, a grist mill, a saw mill, two groceries, one general store, a hotel, one blacksmith shop, one wagon shop, one shoe shop and perhaps forty private residences. Its population in 1880 was 154. Beaver Dam Run passes wholly through the town, and the South Branch of French Creek cuts through one corner. Elgin has the advantage of two railroads, the N. Y., P. & O. and the P. & E. The borough possesses a neat cemetery. Elgin gets considerable of its trade from western Wayne and Concord. It is thirty-three miles east of Erie, six east of Union, and five west of Corry, by railroad in each case. A Christian or Disciple Church was erected at Elgin about 1868, largely through the efforts of Mrs. Yost, of Corry, and the contributions of the citizens of Elgin generally. A society of this denomination was shortly before formed at the village, and attained a membership of about sixty. Revs. Walker and Way were its first ministers. The membership soon decreased through removals, and in a few years the society ceased as an organization. A Methodist class was organized at the schoolhouse one mile south of Elgin, in 1854 or 1855, by Rev. Josiah Flower, then of the Wattsburg Circuit, with S. D. Lewis as Class Leader. In 1858, it changed the place of meeting to the Elgin Schoolhouse, and there continued until two years after the Christian Church was built, in which the meetings have since been held. The society was a part of the Wattsburg Circuit until 1877, when it was attached to Spartansburg. The pastors have been J. W. Wilson, 1877; C. M. Coburn, 1878, 1879 and 1880; J. B. Darling, 1881 and 1882; S. W. Douglass, 1883. The membership of the Elgin congregation is fifty.

CHAPTER XVII

CITY OF CORRY.

ON almost the last page of Miss Sanford's history of Erie County, published in 1862, appears the following modest paragraph: "At Junction, in Concord Township, where the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad intersects the Philadelphia & Erie, quite a cluster of buildings has arisen in the woods within the last three months." Few persons at that date could have been made to believe that the humble backwoods settlement thus described would, in less than ten years, become a bustling city of nearly 7,000 inhabitants, the name of which would be as familiar to a large part of the business world as hundreds of places that had been in existence since the beginning of the century. Looking down upon Corry from the high hills which overshadow it, three valleys are seen extending in as many separate directions, the one to the west being that of the South Branch of French Creek, the one to the north that of Hare Creek, and the one to the east, which is the widest and most important, that of the Brokenstraw. The central portion of Corry is built on the summit land between these streams, but the residence and manufacturing sections have spread out east, north and west, until they reach into each of the valleys. The South Branch of French Creek almost touches the southwestern edge of the city, while the Brokenstraw is two or three miles beyond its eastern boundary. Bear Creek—so named from the number of those animals that gathered in the swamp on the northwestern verge of the city—flows through it from west to east, rising in Wayne Township, and emptying in Hare Creek. The latter stream, which cuts across the northeastern corner of the city, was named from Michael Hare, who was one of the pioneers of Wayne Township, and died at Waterford, at the most advanced age attained by any citizen of the county. It rises in French Creek Township, Chautauqua County, N. Y., crosses Wayne Township, and joins the Brokenstraw in Columbus Township, Warren County, about three miles east of the city. Hare Creek was once navigable for rafts as far up as Corry. A smaller stream than any of the above rises on the high land, in the south part of the city, and, flowing through the depot grounds, enters Hare Creek on or near the northeastern boundary.

HOW THE CITY STARTED.

Corry owes its origin and growth to the circumstance of its being adopted as the point of junction for the Philadelphia & Erie, the Atlantic & Great Western, the Oil Creek and the Cross Cut Railroads. The P. & E. road (then Sunbury & Erie) was opened from Erie to this point in 1858, and to Warren in 1859. In June, 1861, the A. & G. W. (now the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio) was completed from Jamestown to the junction, and the next year it was continued through to Ohio. The Oil Creek road, with a broad gauge track to correspond with the A. & G. W., reached Corry from Titusville in 1862, and the Cross-Cut road was built to Brocton in 1867. These two roads have since been consolidated under the name of the Buffalo, Pittsburgh & Western. For awhile, in 1861, the little huddle of shanties that sprung up at the intersection of the P. & E. and A. & G. W. roads was known as "Atlantic & Erie Junction." In October of that year, a piece of land was purchased by the A. & G. W. Railroad Company, from Hiram Corry or Cory, who owned the tract at the junction, and, in consideration of his liberal dealing, Mr. Hill, General Superintendent of the road, changed the name of the station to Corry.

The first building was a small, wedge-shaped ticket office and eating house, directly in the angle between the P. & E. and A. & G. W. Railroads, on the east side. Beginning at this point, the settlement spread out during 1861 along Main street, and to some extent along Cross street. There was little or no improved land in the immediate vicinity, and a good part of the tract since covered by the city was a swamp, covered with immense pine and hemlock trees. A less promising location for a town than Corry was at that time, could not be conceived by the most lively imagination.

RAPID GROWTH.

Although the settlement grew with more than average rapidity in 1861, its era of amazing energy did not fairly commence till 1862. Samuel Downer, a wealthy Boston oil refiner, had conceived the shrewd notion that by erecting a refinery at some point, at or adjacent to the oil fields, and convenient for shipping, he would possess an immense advantage over his rivals, who had to carry the crude oil over hundreds of miles of railroad. With this end in view, W. H. L. Smith was sent from Boston in the summer of 1861, to prospect for a favorable site. His choice fell upon the junction, and he promptly purchased fifty acres from Mr. Corry, for what would now seem a "mere song." This tract he laid out in town lots, and it was cleared under the superintendence of Eugene Wright, of Boston. By fall, a frame building had been put up, as the office of the Downer Oil Company, a post office had been established, with C. S. Harris as first Postmaster, and a small refinery, known as the "Frenchman's," had been put in operation, in the rear of the present Downer works. By this time the Oil Creek road was under contract, and it had dawned upon the minds of a good many people that Corry was destined to become a place of more than ordinary importance. The summer of 1862 witnessed the opening of the Oil Creek road, the erection of the Downer & Kent Oil Works, several other factories, the Boston Hotel and Gilson House, and a large number of store buildings and residences. People from every section flocked in by the thousands, many of them men of uncommon dash and fertility of resource. Money was plenty and real estate sold readily. The founders of the town realized a fortune from the sale of lots, and several parties who owned land adjoining the plot were also made wealthy. From that period on to the panic of 1873, Corry continued to grow at a rate that encouraged its citizens to think that it would some day be a formidable competitor with Erie for the leading position in the Northwest.

The town as laid out by Mr. Smith did not cover more than a third of its present dimensions. Since then, additions have been made which render the city lines about two and a half miles in width from east to west, and nearly three miles in length from north to south. The original owners of the land, besides Mr. Corry, were Amos Heath, H. D. Francis, Mr. Crandall, Anson Johnson, Hollis King, Lorenzo Dow and Mr. Dunham. In laying out the place, a portion was taken from both Wayne and Concord Townships, the straight portion of Smith street marking the old boundary between them. Those who are curious to know something of the history of these townships are referred to the sketches elsewhere.

BOROUGH AND CITY.

Corry was organized as a borough in 1863, and the first election was held on the 18th of August, of that year, a few less than 100 votes being cast. The first borough officers were the following: Burgess, S. A. Bennett; Treasurer, H. N. Ransom; Clerk, S. A. Beavis; High Constable, E. W. R. Baker; Council, Eugene Wright, H. N. Ransom, F. H. Parkman, James Lewis and O. B. Vincent. A city charter was obtained in 1866, which took off an additional area from Concord Township and a strip about a mile wide by two and a quarter in length from Wayne Township, making the Warren County line the eastern boundary of the corporation. Two wards were created by the charter, the dividing line being the track of the A. & G. W. Railroad. The first city election was held in the spring of 1866. The Mayors of the city with terms of service have been as follows: W. H. L. Smith 1866-67; S. A. Bennett, 1867-68; R. H. Palmer, 1868-69; F. S. Barney, 1869-70; M. Crosby, 1870-72; F. A. Phillips, 1872-73; A. F. Kent, 1873-74; B. Ellsworth, 1874-75; T. A. Allen, 1875-79; F. Stanford, 1879-81; J. D. Bentley, 1881-82; T. A. Allen, 1882-83; Isaac Colegrove, 1883-84.

The census of 1870 and 1880 showed the population to be as follows:

First Ward.....	3,559	2,758
Second Ward.....	3,250	2,519
Totals.....	6,809	5,277

The following were the valuations of the two wards in 1883:

	First Ward.	Second Ward.
Real estate.....	$500,740	$538,375
Personal estate.....	5,841	11,115
Trades and occupations.....	36,070	33,010
Money at interest.....	16,200	34,642
	$558,851	$617,142
Total.....		$1,175,993

THE CITY IN GENERAL.

Those who only know Corry by what they see at the depot or by passing through in the cars have no proper conception of the place. Having sprung up in the woods, as if by magic, it has always labored under some disadvantages in appearance, which are not incident to old and regularly developed communities. It is only recently that the main streets were cleared from stumps, and the outside thoroughfares still contain frequent remnants of the forest. Yet it is wonderful how much has been done in the short space of twenty years to build up a snug and progressive city. Many tasty private residences have been erected, and some of the public buildings would be a credit to larger cities. The stores are generally large, well stocked and apparently liberally patronized. A park of three acres has been laid out and planted with trees, which gives promise of being a real ornament. It is true that the sidewalks are still principally of plank and that the streets remain unpaved, but improvement in these regards will come in due season.

As a railroad center and shipping point, Corry has few equals and no superiors among our inland cities. With three great railroads passing through, giving direct connection with the oil regions, the anthracite and bituminous coal fields and the markets east, west, north and south, the city possesses rare advantages as a manufacturing point, and it is not surprising that enterprising men have availed themselves of the fact to a considerable extent. Freight trains go through every few minutes, and twenty-one passenger trains leave daily in the winter and twenty-five in the summer. As long as the railroad system exists, Corry must be an important distributing point and a leading center of business. Property is low compared with other places that are advantageously situated, and choice sites are still to be had on reasonable terms. It is stated in the report of the Board of Trade for 1881 that every manufactory started in Corry has been "eminently successful."

OIL WORKS.

As mentioned before, it was to the establishment of the Downer Oil Works that the city owes its origin. The Downer Oil Works, located between Washington street and the railroads, were erected in 1862. The owners are the Downer Kerosene Oil Company of Boston, the members of the company having remained unchanged since the works were built. W. H. L. Smith was sent out from Boston as manager, which position he held until 1868. C. A. Murdock succeeded, and, in 1872, T. A. Allen, the present manager, was appointed to the position. Until about 1872, all grades of illuminating and lubricating oils were refined from the crude petroleum, but of later years the business has been directed to the production of "heavy ends," which are then shipped to the Boston refinery. The Corry works consist of a number of substantial brick buildings, the main one being 27x313 feet, two stories high, containing office, shops, loading tanks, etc. The still house is 52x200 feet, the pump room, 26x87 feet, the boiler room, 27x76, and other buildings are of various dimensions. Fifteen tanks have a combined capacity of 441,400 gallons, and the distilling capacity is about 60,000 barrels of heavy oils annually. About twenty-five men are employed.

One of the most successful and enterprising business firms of Western Pennsylvania is Clark & Warren, of Corry, manufacturers of all the finer products of petroleum. The members of the firm are R. C. Clark and M. H. Warren. They commenced business as producers and refiners of oil at Grafton, Ohio, in 1875. Two years later, they removed to this State, and became one of the pioneer firms in producing oil in the Bradford field, erecting works at Sawyer City, three miles from Bradford. Not content with the old processes of refining, these energetic men instituted a series of experiments on distillation and refining with the aim of obtaining better results than the old methods afforded. Success crowned their efforts, and, in 1881, they commenced the erection of works at Corry in accordance with their new and improved plans of distillation. The complete success of their operations is attested by the continued enlargement of the capacity of the works. At present the firm use 500 barrels of crude petroleum daily, and arrangements are now being made to increase the capacity to 1,000 barrels per day. The products of the works include all the finer grades of lubricating oils, coal test filtered cylinder oils, filtered cylinder stocks, illuminating oils of 120 degrees, 150 degrees and 300 degrees fire test, fine neutral oils and the various grades of petroleum, formerly known as vasaline, cosmoline, etc. The products of the works are sold through the Pennsylvania Oil Company (limited), of which Mr. Warren is President, and Mr. Clark, Vice President. The products have almost a world-wide reputation, and the sales are largely European. The Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter, in a recent issue editorially, compliments the works of Messrs. Clark & Warren as one of the best appointed oil refineries in the United States, and speaks at length of their painstaking efforts and improved methods to manufacture superior oils. The firm holds patents upon the construction of stills, the heating of stills, the construction of filters, the heating of filters and for renewing bone black, all their own inventions. The extensive works are located in the western part of the city at the junction of the N. Y., P. & O., P. & E. and B., N. Y. & P. Railroads, where employment is given to about sixty men.

OTHER LEADING INDUSTRIES.

The Corry Wooden Ware Manufactory owes its origin to Wilder & Howe, who in 1865-66, built a pail factory on East Main street. It burned down in 1867, and was rebuilt on the present site, the corner of Washington and East Wayne streets, in 1868. In 1869, the Corry Manufacturing and Lumber Company was organized, and operated the works until succeeded by D. H. Wilder. A. M. Kent & Co., the present owners, assumed control in 1878. Lard and butter packages, tubs and pails are manufactured, at the rate of about 2,500 pieces per day. The lumber, mostly pine, is obtained from Warren County, and about 3,000,000 feet are annually consumed. The wares are shipped to all parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, to West Virginia, Maryland and other States. Employment is given to 100 hands.

Harmon, Gibbs & Co., manufacturers of steam engines, erected their shops on the west side of Center street, immediately north of the railroad in 1877. The building is 50x105 feet and three stories high. Steam engines and boilers of from 10 to 150 horse-power are manufactured, besides a general line of machine and foundry work. Their Ajax oil engine is a specialty, and the demand for it equal to the capacity to supply. Employment is given to twenty-five skilled machinists. The firm is composed of C. G. Harmon, L. L. Bliss, C. H. Bagley and the estate of George H. Gibbs.

The Corry City Iron Works were established at the northwest corner of Main and Concord streets in 1880, by P. I. Lynch. Soon after, he admitted G. D. Gilbert into partnership, and the proprietors were successively Lynch & Gilbert, P. I. Lynch and the Corry City Iron Company, of which George N. Barnes is President, P. I. Lynch, Treasurer and manager and C. B. Ely, Secretary. The engine shop is 45x65 feet, two stories high. Boilers only were manufactured until June, 1882, since which date in addition portable and stationary engines for agricultural purposes have also been produced. When running at full force, about seventy-five men are employed.

The Corry Novelty Works, located on East Pleasant street, were erected in 1870 by King, Shafer & Co. The main shop is a two-story brick building, 32x62. Mr. Shafer retired in 1873, and the firm has since been H. King & Sons, succeeded by H. King & Son, present proprietors. For several years, a general machine and repair business was continued, then the manufacture of King's patent portable engine was commenced, and has ever since been continued with success.

An important manufacture, recently started at Corry, is that of the caligraph, by the American Writing Machine Company, of which T. A. Allen is President; C. G. Harmon, Treasurer; G. W. N. Yost, Secretary, and A. A. Aspinwall, Manager. Mr. Yost, having perfected the Remington Type Writer, invented the caligraph. Its manufacture was commenced in New York, but in the spring of 1883 the works were removed to Corry. The instrument is meeting with a wide and extensive sale, and an increase in the capacity of the shops has already been made; about 150 employes are usually at work and sixty-five caligraphs are made per week.

George N. Barnes, in June, 1883, started the Corry Lounge Factory in the basement and first floor of the Opera House building, where he gives employment to from fifteen to eighteen workmen and manufactures about one hundred lounges of various patterns per week.

In the same building Murray M. Raymond in January, 1883, commenced the manufacture of the baby jumper and swing, of which he is the inventor. This novel invention is meeting with wide and favorable reception, and the business of Mr. Murray is increasing. At present 150 jumpers are manufactured weekly.

One of the largest industrial establishments of Corry was the Gibbs & Sterrett Manufacturing Company recently suspended. The manufactures were the Climax mowers and reapers, steam engines and boilers, mill machinery etc. The buildings are large brick structures, and at one time about two hundred men were employed. (These works have since resumed).

The large steam tannery of Emanuel Weisser, on East Wayne street, was erected by C. A. Auer in 1862, and the present owner purchased it in 1871, and has since greatly enlarged the buildings and capacity of the tannery. About thirty men are employed, and 30,000 hides are annually tanned. Mr. Auer in 1872 erected another tannery on Turnpike street, and still operates it.

Other manufactories of the city include a bedstead factory, three planing mills, four carriage shops, one cigar box factory, two cooper shops, one brick yard, one broom factory, one mitten factory, one sucker-rod factory, one oil cup factory, three flouring mills, one sausage factory, two breweries, three bottling works, three patent medicine manufactories, nine cigar factories, one saw and shingle factory, one saw mill, one candy factory, one brush factory, one brush block factory, one handle factory, one cider and vinegar factory, one feed mill, one wood pump factory, one bedspring factory, one drain tile works, one foundry, one meat refrigerator factory, one fruit cooler factory, and one nickel plating works.

GENERAL BUSINESS FEATURES.

A special advantage that Corry possesses is the convenience for procuring coal, lumber and stone. Bituminous coal reaches the city at a low charge by way of the B., T. & W. and the N. Y., P. & O. roads from Mercer and Butler Counties, and the latter road and the P. & E. give it the benefit of competition in securing anthracite from the Eastern Pennsylvania fields. Large bodies of timber still stand near the city, and a good quality of building stone in inexhaustible quantity is found a few miles down the Brokenstraw. There is also plenty of good clay for making brick, and sand for building purposes is found in ample quantities in the vicinity.

The mercantile houses of the city embrace the following different lines of business: Wholesale—Groceries, 2; hardware, 2; confectioneries, 1; tobacco and cigars, 9; oysters and fruits, 3; illuminating oil, 1; pork packing, 1; drugs, 1; carriages, 2. Retail—Groceries, 19; dry goods, 12; clothing, 5; millinery, 6; drugs, 7; meat markets, 7; variety stores, 4; leather, 1; fruits and confectionery, 3; boots and shoes, 7; furniture, 2; merchant tailors, 3; bakery and confectionery, 4; news depots, 3; harness, 3; jewelry, 2; hardware, 5; stoves and tinware, 2; hats, 1; feed stores, 2.

The city has intimate business relations with a wide scope of country, embracing, besides Wayne and Concord Townships in our county, several townships each in Warren, Crawford and Chautauqua Counties. The farming population tributary to Corry is really more extensive than that which helps to sustain Erie. The post office at Corry distributes mail matter over a territory extending perhaps ten miles in every direction, the sale of stamps and stamped envelopes alone amounting during the year 1880 to some $10,000. The financial institutions of the city are the first National Bank and the Corry National Bank, both established in 1864, with a capital in each case of $100,000. A good index to the business of the city is shown in its hotels, which number fourteen, of which four are equal to the average in places of the size.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

The city is governed by a Mayor, and Council of three members for each ward. The latter body is presided over by the Mayor, who also appoints the Committees. The expense for the year 1881 was a little over $17,000. The city tax was thirteen and a half mills on the dollar. The Fire Department consists of a Chief Engineer and two assistants, two engineers and fireman for the two Silsby steamers, three hose companies and a hook and ladder company. The value of the Department property is estimated at $11,840, and the annual expense is between $2,000 and $3,000. For a place that is largely built of wood, there has been a remarkable freedom from fires. The school system is under the control of a Board of Directors, consisting of three members for each ward. The schools are graded, and a superior high school is maintained, which includes in its course a thorough training in book-keeping. Including the Superintendent, there are nineteen teachers. The school term is eight months. The schoolhouses are five in number, three of them being capacious and handsome brick buildings, and two frame buildings.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Directly after Corry was incorporated as a borough, an election was held August 18, 1863, for a School Board, which resulted in the election of the following Directors: For three years, G. H. Coney and R. Morgan; for two years, W. H. Doan and J. L. Hatch; for one year, L. J. Tibbals and L. Rockwood. A schoolhouse which had been erected on Concord street the year previous by the School Board of Concord Township was transferred to the borough, and the first schools under the dispensation of the Borough Board were taught in the winter of 1863 by J. L. Hatch and Miss Mary Doud. Commencing in 1864, the Catholic schools were under the control of the Board for several years. In 1865, the rapidly increasing population necessitated more accommodations. An acre of ground was purchased at the corner of Washington and Essex streets for $1,350, and the schoolhouse thereon was designated the Union Schoolhouse, completed by Henry Drake in March, 1866. Vincent Moses, a theological student from Clymer, N. Y., was its first Principal. In 1865, however, the Board leased a building on East Main street, near the Philadelphia & Erie crossing, where school was held until 1870. When Corry became a city in 1866, the schools were yet ungraded, so rapid had been the increase. In that year the old red schoolhouse on the Columbus pike became city property; it was re-named Wayne School, No. 4, and used until the completion of the Hatch School. In 1869, a course of instruction, compiled by H. J. Manley, then President of the School Board, was adopted, and the schools were regularly graded and classified. The same year a school building was leased on Pleasant street. This school was suddenly burnt down in March, 1869; but a room was engaged on the corner of Main street and Second avenue and the school re-commenced in a few days. It was continued until the completion of the Fairview Schoolhouse. In 1869, a tax was levied to erect a new brick schoolhouse on the corner of Second avenue and Fairview street, the lot having been purchased two years previous. The contract was let to Henry Drake for $14,580. The building was dedicated April 2, 1870. A new frame building was erected in 1869 on Concord street for the accommodation of primary pupils, and lots were purchased between Congress and Bond streets, east of Wright, for the erection of a large brick edifice. The necessary expenditure exceeding the amount that could be levied by tax, a special act of Legislature was obtained in 1870 authorizing an additional tax of seven mills. The contract was awarded to S. L. Leach for $21,500. The building was completed in 1871, and, including heating, seating and furnishing, cost $30,000. It was named in honor of J. L. Hatch, who had been a member of the board since its first organization. The Union Schoolhouse on Washington street was totally destroyed by fire December 12, 1871, having an insurance of $6,000. A temporary structure of three apartments was forthwith constructed, and the schools continued in this building until it was replaced in 1882 by a neat brick edifice of four rooms, at a cost of $6,000.

The school property at present consists of three handsome brick structures, known as the Hatch, Fairview and Washington Street Schools, and two small frame buildings on Concord street. At the Concord Schools are three teachers; at the Washington, three; at the Fairview, four; and at the Hatch, including Superintendent, Principal and Assistant of high school, nine. The schools are divided into primary, secondary intermediate, junior and grammar grades of two years each, and high school of three years. The high school permits the selection from three courses—Latin and English, German and English, and commercial. Ten classes, aggregating 148 members, have completed the course. Frederick Hooker was elected Principal of the schools in 1869; resigning the same year, he was succeeded by James McNaughton, who gave up the charge of the schools in May, 1871, and Miss G. M. Kent was appointed to act as Principal of the High School. A. J. Crandall was elected Principal in 1871. The following year, A. B. Crandall, a member of the board, acted as District Superintendent. In 1873, V. G. Curtis was elected Principal and Superintendent, remaining ten years. His successor, A. D. Colegrove, is now serving his first year.

NEWSPAPERS.

Corry sustains three newspapers, the weekly Telegraph and the daily and weekly Herald. The Telegraph was established in 1865 by Joseph A. Pain, who still owns and edits it. The earliest newspaper venture in the place was by Stebbins & Larkins, who put forth No. 1 of the Corry City News on the 22d of October, 1863. Within less than two years, this journal changed managers four times and names twice, finally appearing as the Telegraph, when it fell into the hands of Mr. Pain. The latter gentleman published a daily edition of the Telegraph for about a year after getting control of the establishment, and again he battled courageously for nine years, but unsuccessfully, in trying to keep up the Daily Blade. The Herald is to a certain extent the successor of the Union Mills Star, first issued in 1863, removed to Corry in November, 1867, and the name changed to the Republican. Its editors and owners have been Horace G. Pratt, Dan Scott, W. B. Gallegher, Henry C. Eddy, Pratt & Gail, S. Colegrove, W. A. Moore, and others. The weekly, which received its present name in 1877, was purchased by F. S. Heath December 1, 1880. The daily edition was started February 5, 1883. Among journals that have died out, after a lingering illness, as the obituary writers say, were the daily and weekly Review, Commercial Advertiser, Democratic Press, Democrat, Daily Itemizer, Daily Whetstone, Temperance Vindicator, Daily Republican, and Enterprise.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Probably no city of the same size in the United States equals Corry in the number of its secret societies. Almost every secret organization in the Union is represented, as will be seen by the following list:

Jonathan Lodge, No. 685, I. O. O. F., was instituted January 19, 1870, with the following nine charter members: H. L. Wyman, A. P. Friesman, J. W. Chipman, S. H. Johnson, Thomas Blackburn, J. H. Armstrong, T. P. Ober, A. O. Watson and E. W. Buss. The present membership is 111. Meetings are held each Wednesday evening.

Corry Encampment, No. 241, I. O. O. F., was instituted July 26, 1873.

James Sill

The charter members were J. E. Stubbs, W. M. Arnold, H. O. Mackres, William Mulkie, H. D. Clemons, H. O. Watson, D. W. Nutting and Charles Stricker. Many others were initiated the evening of institution. The present membership is about forty. The second and fourth Monday evenings of each month are the appointed times for meeting.

Corry Lodge, No. 365, F. & A. M., was chartered March 19, 1866. The membership is now 100, and meetings are held the first Tuesday of each month.

Columbus Chapter, No. 200, R. A. M., was instituted at Columbus, Warren County, May 10, 1866, and removed to Corry January 13, 1870. It has fifty-five members, and meets Thursday evening, on or before the full moon.

Clarence Commandery, No. 51, K. T., was instituted January 22, 1874, with sixteen charter members. Forty-four is the present membership, and the second Tuesday of each month the regular date of meeting.

Corry Union, No. 2, Equitable Aid Union, was organized May 2, 1879, with about eighty members, now reduced to seventy-five. Meetings are held on the first and third Monday evenings of each month.

J. J. Andrews Post, No 70, G. A. R., was instituted in June, 1867, with about twenty-five members. It now numbers 140, and meets every Friday evening.

Corry Grange, No. 55, P. of H., was organized December 23, 1873. It meets the first and third Saturdays of each month, and now has a membership of about 140.

Corry City Lodge, No. 470, K. of P., was instituted October 16, 1880, with forty charter members. The active membership is now ninety, and meetings are held every Tuesday evening.

Lincoln Council, No. 75, Royal Arcanum, was instituted April 10, 1878, with fourteen members. Sixty-one is the present membership, and the first and third Wednesdays of each month the regular evenings for meetings.

Teutonia Lodge, No. 148, D. O. H., was organized August 17, 1867, with twenty members, now reduced to nineteen. Meetings are held each alternate Thursday.

St. Joseph's Branch, No. 4, C. M. B. A., was organized April 24, 1878, with sixteen members. There are now about sixty members, and meetings are held the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

Ahaveth Sholem Lodge, No. 160, B'nai Brith, was organized May 30, 1871, and now has a membership of twenty-nine. Meetings are held each alternate Sunday.

Bliss Council, No. 3, R. T. of T., was instituted in April, 1879, and now has about 200 members. Meetings are held every Wednesday evening.

Hope Council, No. 55, R. T. of T., was instituted March 15, 1880, with about twenty-two members, now increased to fifty. Tuesday evening is the date of meeting.

Ely Lodge No. 45, K. of H., was instituted in November, 1874, and now has a membership of sixty-one; meetings are held the first and third Mondays of each month.

Humboldt Lodge (German), No. 51, K. of H., was instituted in February, 1874, with about twenty members. The membership has not materially increased since. Meetings are held each alternate Tuesday.

Washington Lodge, No. 2, A. O. U. W., was organized in January, 1870, and has 137 members. Meetings are held every Saturday evening.

La Fayette Council, No. 2, Guardian Knights, was instituted December 8, 1879, and now numbers sixteen in membership. The first Tuesday of each month is the date for regular meetings.

Evening Star Lodge, No. 24, K. & L. of H., was instituted in March, 1878. It meets the second and fourth Fridays of each month, and has now a membership of about fifty.

Germania Lodge, No. 26, K. & L. of H., was organized March 26, 1878, with eighteen members. For a time the lodge met with Evening Star Lodge, but it procured the old charter, and meets the first and third Saturdays of each month. The membership is small.

GAS, GAS WELLS, PUBLIC HALLS.

Gas is furnished by a company with a capital of $50,000. Several quite extensive gas wells have been struck in the effort to find oil, but the supply gave out too soon to enable them to be utilized to any extent worth speaking of. There are two public halls, the Academy of Music, with a seating capacity of 1,000, and the Harmon Opera House, estimated to accommodate about 700.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The city is well supplied with churches. They include two Methodist Episcopal, two Catholic, one Presbyterian, one Baptist, one Congregational, one Episcopal, one United Brethren, one German Lutheran and one Jewish. There is a Universalist society, but it has no building.

The first Methodist Episcopal congregation was organized in September, 1862, by Rev. George F. Reeser. The early meetings were held at private houses and at the schoolhouse until the erection at the southeast corner of Concord and Pleasant streets, during the summer of 1865, of a frame meeting house at a cost of $10,000. The building was dedicated October 27, 1865, and is now in use. The pastors at Corry have been as follows: 1864 and 1865, J. W. Wilson and G. W. Staples; 1866 and 1867, J. S. Lytle; 1868-69 and 1870, J. C. Scofield; 1871 and 1872, W. F. Wilson; 1873, W. H. Moseman; 1874 and 1875, A. S. Dobbs; 1876 and 1877, N. Norton; 1878, A. S. Goodrich; 1879, J. W. Wilson; 1880-81 and 1882, A. G. Merchant; 1883, James G. Townsend. The present membership of the church is about 290.

St. Thomas Catholic Church dates its origin back to 1860, in which year Father Thomas Lonnergan came from Warren, Penn., and organized a small society. The early meetings were held at private houses until 1862, when a frame church was built on the southeast corner of Church street and Fourth avenue. It was dedicated in September, 1862, by Bishop Joshua M. Young, and has since been twice enlarged. Father Lonnergan has been the only pastor; his assistants have been Revs. J. Delaroque, J. M. Dunn, B. McGivney, J. Brady, J. Meher and B. Donohue. The present membership includes about 200 families. The congregation has almost completed a handsome brick church structure, the cost of which will exceed $30,000. Its cornerstone was laid in 1872, and five years later the foundation was completed. It was placed under roof in 1883, and will be ready for occupancy it is expected in 1884. The building stands on Washington street near the foot of First avenue.

The first Baptist services at Corry were held in the unfinished second story of a dwelling on the northwest corner of Washington and Wayne streets November 28, 1862. The congregation was organized with seven members October 18, 1863; Rev. J. R. Merriman became pastoral supply, and services were held in a hall on Main street until February, 1865, when the hall was rented to the Disciples. The Baptists were without a place of worship till later in the same spring when their present church edifice on the southwest corner of Second avenue and Pleasant street was built. It was first used April 19, 1865, for the public memorial services of the martyred President, and was dedicated April 26, 1865. Rev. A. D. Bush became pastor in April, 1864; Rev. W. R. Connelly succeeded in August, 1868; Rev. A. C. Williams in October, 1870; Rev. S. K. Boyer in March, 1872, remaining five months. The church was then without a pastor till September, 1873, when Rev. John Trowbridge was elected. He was succeeded in April, 1875, by Rev. J. B. Vrooman, who remained two years. Rev. E. F. Crane then served about two years and his successor, Rev. M. W. Dillingham, the present pastor, has officiated three years. The membership of the church is about 225.

The First Presbyterian Church of Corry was organized January 18, 1864, with the following nine members: Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Osgood, Charles Boyle, Mrs. Martha Boyle, Asel M. Davis, Mrs. Mary A. Davis, Mrs. Ellen M. Bennett, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Gridley and Miss Nancy J. Knight. Rev. J. Odell was engaged as temporary supply and served the church about one year; increasing in the membership to twenty-one. Rev. Hutchens acted as temporary supply for a few months, and in October, 1865, Rev. John C. Taylor became stated supply, remaining until March, 1867; when he left, the church membership was sixty-one. Rev. Alvan Nash then became stated supply, and died at the expiration of one year's service. In November, 1868, Rev. S. G. Hopkins was installed the first pastor, resigning in March, 1876, to accept a call to the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Ohio; Rev. D. V. Mays then served as pastor from June, 1876, to November, 1877, and was succeeded in the following December by Rev. B. M. Kerr, who remained two and a half years. Rev. W. N. Sloan, the present pastor, entered upon his official relations in October, 1880. The first Elders were E. S. Osgood and Charles Boyle; the present ones James Turner, T. A. Allen, Lewis L. Bliss and George H. Humason; the present Deacons are C. H. Bracken and Levi P. Hurd. The membership now numbers about 200. Services were held in the Concord Street Schoolhouse, McKenzie's Hall and Cook's Hall successively, until the winter of 1865-66, when the congregation erected near the corner of Church and Center streets a neat, frame edifice which was enlarged two years later. During the winter of 1883-84, a handsome skeleton brick structure was reared on the southwest corner of Pleasant and Center streets at a cost of $10,000.

The first services of Emanuel Episcopal Church were held July 10, 1864, in McKenzie's Hall. They were conducted by Rev. Calvin C. Parker, a Missionary of the Board of Missions of the Diocese of Pennsylvania. The first Vestrymen were James Foreman, H. L. Wyman, O. S. Reynolds, F. A. Phillips, George H. Coney, S. A. Bennett and E. W. R. Buker. During 1865-66, the church edifice was erected. It was 100x45 feet in size and stands on the southwest corner of Center and Smith streets. The lot cost $500, the building $4,000. When the corner-stone was laid in September, 1865, there were but twenty communicant members. Rev. Parker resigned June 1, 1866. He was succeeded by Rev. John T. Protheroe, who resigned in May, 1871. During that year the church was enlarged by the addition of side aisles, organ chamber, etc., at an additional expense of $5,000. Subsequent rectors have been Rev. Thomas Bell from October, 1871, to August, 1872; Rev. Robert W. Grange, June, 1873, to November 16, 1874; Rev. William G. W. Lewis, April, 1875, to August 31, 1877; Rev. Thomas A. Stevenson, January, 1878, to August, 1881; John L. Taylor, the present rector, who took charge in June, 1882. The present communicant membership is 110. The present Vestrymen are O. C. Holden, Senior Warden; J. B. Davis, Junior Warden; Charles Middleton, Augustus Harrington, Frederick Stanford, R. C. Dawson and E. M. Bonnell.

In 1864, Rev. John W. Clark, preaching on the Bear Circuit, organized a small United Brethren class at the Little Red Schoolhouse, and in 1865 commenced building on the corner of Pleasant and Lemon streets a frame house of worship. The year following, during the pastorate of Rev. J. Hill, the site of the building was changed and the unfinished structure was taken down, removed to the turnpike, and there completed at a cost of about $2,000. This building was destroyed by fire in 1872, and immediately another was erected, at an expense of $2,500, on North Center street, where services are now held. The membership of this society is about fifty. Its pastors since Rev. Clark have been J. Hill, 1865; W. Rittenhouse, 1866; O. Badgley, 1867; W. Cadman, 1868-69; I. Bennehoff, 1870-71; J. Holmes, 1872; H. H. Barber, 1873; J. Hill, 1874; P. Butterfield, 1875; A. Peckham, 1876; S. Evans, 1877; W. Cadman, 1878; N. R. Luce, 1879; J. P. Atkins, 1880; L. L. Hager, 1881-82; D. C. Starkey, 1883. Corry is a mission station.

About forty years ago, a Methodist Episcopal class was organized, and held meeting in a schoolhouse in Wayne Township; in 1860, it erected a meeting-house about one and a half miles north of Corry, and in 1870 the society was re-organized by Rev. J. W. Wilson, with about thirty-five members, and the house of worship was removed to Pike street, Corry, and has since been the home of the North Corry Methodist Episcopal congregation. The society is attached to Columbus, Warren County, Circuit. Among its pastors subsequent to 1870 have been A. A. Horton, A. S. Goodrich, S. S. Burton, William Rice, Rev. Fordon and Rev. Adams; Rev. J. W. Wilson is the present pastor. The membership is about sixty.

The first Congregational Church of Corry was organized in 1874. The early meetings were held in the Christian Church, located on the northeast corner of Fourth avenue and Pleasant street. This handsome building was purchased by the Congregational society in 1878, and it has since remained its place of worship. It is a brick structure, the dimensions of which are about 50x100 feet, its original cost being about $15 000. It was repaired in 1882 at an expense of $4,000. The Christian congregation, now defunct, formerly owned a frame meeting-house on the site of the above brick structure. It was destroyed by fire, and replaced, through the munificence of G. W. N. Yost, by the brick church. The pastors of the Congregational Church have been Rev. Joseph Adams, who remained two years; Rev. J. B. Davidson, three years; Rev. E. A. Squier, eighteen months; a temporary vacancy now exists. The membership is about 100.

St. Elizabeth (German) Catholic Church was established in April, 1875, with about twenty-eight German families who had formerly been connected with St. Thomas' Church. Under the management of a building committee, consisting of H. L. Spiesman, J. Franz, J. Rehrich, Martin Huffman, Frank Rosboch and Henry Heineman, the congregation at once proceeded to the erection on Pleasant street of a fine brick church, which was completed in 1876 at a cost of $7,000. It was consecrated in September, 1876. The society owns a parsonage, school and cemetery. Rev. F. Winters, the first pastor, remained in charge till October, 1883, when Rev. Reck succeeded him. The society numbers about forty families.

The German Lutheran Church, a skeleton brick structure, 26x40 feet in size, located on the northeast corner of Concord and South streets, was erected in 1876-77, at a total cost of $2,140. It was dedicated June 3, 1877. The society was organized several years previous, by Rev. M. Kugler, the first pastor, and services had been held in various places. Rev. Kugler was succeeded in the autumn of 1877 by Prof. Herman Gilbert, of Thiel College, Greenville, who has since conducted services here each alternate Sunday, and is present pastor. The church membership enrolls about fifteen families.

The Hebrew congregation at Corry was organized about ten years ago and has a small membership. Its first rabbi was Rev. Galen, who was succeeded by Rev. Bernstein. Rev. S. Fielchenfield then took charge about seven years ago, and still serves the congregation. Meetings have been held in various buildings. In the autumn of 1883, the congregation purchased the old Presbyterian Church.

The Universalist Church of Corry was organized with thirty-three members March 7, 1877, by Rev. Aaron A. Thayer, who remained in charge about three years. The first officers elected were A. A. Aspinwall, Moderator; W. Ed Marsh, Clerk; C. G. Harmon, Treasurer; L. Hammond, H. A. Baker and G. W. Pardee, Standing Committee. The membership increased to about eighty-five, but for a year past no services have been held. The congregation owned no place of worship, and met last in the Congregational Church.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The city has three cemeteries—Pine Grove, St. Thomas (Catholic) and the Jewish. The first named embraces a tract of ten acres near the northern terminus of Center street, purchased by a corporation of Amos Heath for $2,000 in 1866. About $8,000 have since been expended by the company in improvements. St. Thomas' Cemetery is in the southwestern part of the city, and covers about two acres. The Jewish Cemetery is a small inclosure in Wayne Township, near the north line of the city.

The following is a list of the citizens of Corry who have held elective State and county offices: Associate Judge, Hollis King, November 8, 1866, to November 17, 1871; Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1873, C. O. Bowman; Assembly, C. O. Bowman, 1869; W. W. Brown, 1872 to 1874; Isaac B. Brown, 1881-82, and 1883-84; County Commissioner, W. T. Brown, 1872 to 1875; Mercantile Appraiser, L. E. Guignon, 1875; William T. Brown, 1880; Director of the Poor, S. A. Beavis, 1869 to 1872; Jury Commissioner, D. L. Bracken, 1879 to 1882.

W. W. Brown moved to Bradford, and was elected to Congress from the McKean District in 1882.

The following Corry physicians had registered at the Court House in Erie in 1882: A. S. Bonsteel, Bellevue Hospital and Medical College, N. Y., 1872; C. B. Kibler, University of Buffalo, 1870; H. O. Mackres, University of Buffalo, 1867; M. Pickett, University of Buffalo, 1869; D. Storer, practice of medicine since 1844; G. A. Elston, Medical Department University of New York, 1880; Emma L. Jordan, Eclectic Medical College, Philadelphia, 1879; John B. Chace, American Medical College, Cincinnati, 1855; S. R. Breed, practice of medicine since 1856; D. E. De Ross, Eclectic Medical College, Cincinnati, 1875; J. E. Weeks, Michigan University, Ann Arbor, Mich., 1881; B. H. Phelps, Cleveland Medical College, 1871; H. S. Tanner, Cincinnati Eclectic Medical College, 1859; Mrs. F. H. Stanford, Boston University School of Medicine, 1878.

CHAPTER XVIII.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP.

UP to the year 1821, that section of the county now embraced in Wayne and Concord was known as Brokenstraw Township, a name given to it in the act of organization. In the year stated, the title was changed to Concord, through the influence of William Miles. Wayne was set off from Concord in 1826, and was named after Anthony Wayne. Wayne embraces a portion of the Donation lands. The township of Brokenstraw (of which Wayne formed a part) constituted with Union one election district until 1821, ranking as No. 10 of Erie County.

Wayne is bounded on the north by Chautauqua County, N. Y., on the east by Columbus Township, Warren County, on the south by Corry City and Concord Township, and on the west by Amity and Union. It has been twice reduced in size, first in 1863 by the creation of Corry as a borough, and second in 1866 by the act elevating that place to the dignity of a city. The charters of Corry took off a strip about one mile wide by two and a quarter long, from the southeastern corner, but what the township lost in territory has been more than made up in the increased value given to the balance by the growth of the city. The South line of the township is nearly uniform with the straight portion of Smith street in Corry. Wayne has an average width of about six miles, and a length of about eight, with a perfectly regular line on the north side, two slight jogs on the east and west, and more considerable ones on the Concord and Corry sides. The boundary between Pennsylvania and New York, which forms the north line of the township, was established by Commissioners on the part of the two States in 1785, who completed their work in 1787. They surveyed the entire boundary between the Delaware River and Lake Erie, marking each mile with stones on which figures were cut, showing the distance from the first-named stream. Their report was confirmed by the Legislature in 1789. The eastern boundary of the township was marked out in the act of 1800, incorporating Erie and Warren Counties. Wayne Township contained a population of 197 in 1830, 738 in 1840, 1,122 in 1850, 1,224 in 1860, 1,295 in 1870, and 1,306 in 1880. There is but one post office within its limits, Wayne (at Beaver Dam). Before Corry grew to importance, Beaver Dam and Columbus, Warren County, were the trading places of the township. The assessment of 1883 gave the following results: Number of acres, 22,480; value of real estate $522,048; number of cows, 773; of oxen 26, of horses and mules, 320; value of the same, $35,462; value of trades and occupations, $3,935; money at interest, $21,577.

LANDS AND THEIR VALUE.

In general, Wayne is a hilly township, but it contains some handsome and fertile valleys along the South Branch of French Creek and Hare Creek, and Scioto, Beaver Dam and Spencer Runs. The hills attain an elevation of 200 to 400 feet above the French Creek Valley, and are cut by deep ravines especially in the southern portion, which, however, have generally sloping sides, admitting of easy cultivation. The summits of the ridges are irregular, but there is little waste land in the township. The character of the soil adapts it best for grazing, and butter-making and cattle-raising are the staple industries of the township. It used to be thought that wheat could not be raised to advantage, but of late a considerable amount of that grain has been harvested, and its cultivation is steadily on the increase. The principal timber is beech, maple and hemlock, though considerable tracts of pine, oak and chestnut once existed in the south part of the township. Much of the timber has been cut off, and what remains will soon disappear at the present rate of consumption. Apples bear profitably, pears give a fair yield, a few peaches are raised and fruits of other kind correspond with the average southern townships of the county. The price of land ranges from as low as $20 to as high as $50 per acre, being most valuable for farming purposes in the vicinity of Beaver Dam.

THE STREAMS.

The streams of Wayne Township are Brokenstraw Creek, with its tributary, Hare Creek; Bear Creek, Francis Run and Scioto Run, branches of the latter; and Spencer Run, Baskin Run, Slaughter Run, Beaver Dam Run and Spring Brook, tributaries of the South Branch of French Creek. The latter stream does not enter Wayne at all, but courses along in Concord, a few rods from the south line of the former township, which does not take in more than a third of its valley. It will be seen from the number of these streams that Wayne is a finely watered township. The Brokenstraw heads in Glymer Township, Chautauqua County, N. Y., runs through the northeast corner of Wayne Township into Warren County, and joins the Allegheny River at Irvineton, after a course of fifty to sixty miles, only a small part of which is in Erie County. Hare Creek rises in French Creek Township, Chautauqua County, N. Y., flows across the entire width of Wayne Township, and empties into the Brokenstraw in Columbus Township, Warren County, about three miles east of Corry. It runs through the latter city for a short distance, and has a length of about fifteen miles. Bear Creek and Scioto Run, tributaries of Hare Creek, rise, the first on land of Uriah Benjamin, and the second on the Greeley farm. Bear Creek falls into Hare Creek within the limits of Corry, and Scioto Run on land of D. C. Kennedy, north of that city. Each stream has a length of perhaps five miles. Francis Run rises about three miles northwest of Corry, and empties into Bear Creek within the city limits, after a course of about three miles. Spencer Run heads near Carter Hill, Baskin Run near the New York line, Slaughter Run in the northwest corner of the township, and Beaver Dam Run in the southeast part of Amity, all uniting with the South Branch in Concord, the first named a little west of Corry, the second at Lovell's Station, the third about a mile above Elgin, and the fourth within that borough. The length of these streams is from seven to nine miles. Spring Brook is a sparkling stream formed by a number of fine springs that burst out of the hillsides at the State Fish Hatching Establishment, a short distance west of Corry, near the line of Concord and Wayne. It unites with the South Branch after a course of probably half a mile. Two or three large beaver dams existed in early days a mile or so north of Elgin, which gave name to Beaver Dam run.

VILLAGE OF BEAVER DAM.

The only village in the township is that of Beaver Dam (Wayne Post Office), situated near the extreme southeastern corner, on the run of the same name, at the junction of the Erie and Warren with the Wattsburg and Spartansburg roads, one and a half miles north of Elgin, six west of Corry, twenty-six by common road southeast of Erie, and thirty-four by the railroad. The valley of Beaver Dam Run at this point is broad and beautiful, making one of the finest stretches of country in Erie County. The village is supposed to owe its origin to John Bunker, who started a store and ashery at the cross-roads at an early day. This was followed by another store by Mr. Foot, and the place, about 1840, boasted, in addition, two taverns, one kept by Mr. Crook and the other by Mr. Ellis. The stages between Erie and Warren and Jamestown ran through the village daily. The building of the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, and the growth of Corry and Union, had the effect of drawing all the travel and most of the trade from Beaver Dam; the taverns were abandoned, and only one store is left. The village consists at present, besides the store, of one blacksmith shop, two wagon shops, one undertaker shop, one cheese factory (opened in the spring of 1866, and now owned by Kincaide & Howard), one schoolhouse, three churches (Methodist Episcopal, United Presbyterian and Presbyterian), a public hall, one vacant business stand, and some twenty frame residences, with a population of about 100. All of the buildings are frame. The village cemetery is neatly laid out and contains some fine monuments.

At Beaver Dam is a frame Presbyterian Church, erected in 1867 at a cost of $3,000. An Associate Reform congregation was organized here about 1820, with fifteen members, by Rev. Robert Reid, but in a few years the organization affiliated with the Presbyterian denomination. The earliest meetings were held in dwelling houses; in 1830 a church building was erected on the site of the village cemetery. It was superseded by the present structure. William Gray and William Carson were the Elders when the Presbyterian organization was effected. Rev. Absalom McCready was the first settled pastor, Revs. Stright and Rice followed, and of late years the ministers have been supplies. The society is now small, and no regular services have been held for several years.

The United Presbyterian congregation at Beaver Dam was organized with twelve members by Rev. David Love in 1859. Rev. J. L. Aten was the first regular pastor, and was succeeded successively by Revs. John Jamison, Allen (supply), A. S. Abbey and H. H. McMaster. No regular services have been held during the past year. The membership is twenty-three. The church edifice, a substantial frame edifice, was erected in 1872 at a cost of $3,000.

The first class of the Methodist Episcopal denomination in Wayne Township was formed in Warren Palmer's log cabin in the Donation District in 1832. It consisted of eight members, and had Rev. Hiram Kinsley for pastor. In 1838, a congregation with twenty members was organized at Beaver Dam by Rev. William Patterson, who acted as first pastor. The congregation was without a church building till 1839, when one was erected by voluntary contributions. A new and more imposing edifice was erected in 1872, at a cost of $3,200. The old building still stands. Until 1877, excepting three years when it was connected with Asbury, Union Township, Church, this society was a part of Wattsburg Circuit. It was then annexed to Spartansburg Circuit, the ministers of which have since been: John W. Wilson, 1877; C. M. Coburn, 1878-80; J. B. Darling, 1881-82; S. W. Douglass, 1883. The present membership is thirty-nine.

North of Beaver Dam a short distance is the "Wayne Valley Church of United Brethren," built in 1870 at a cost of $1,500. The congregation was organized the same year, with twenty-one members, having Rev. Daniel Dean for the first pastor. It numbers about forty members, and now has Rev. A. Meeker as minister. It is attached to Wayne Circuit.

The earliest white inhabitants at Beaver Dam were Samuel Smith and William Gray. The latter subsequently removed to Waterford. In the old Abolition times, the village was an important station of the "underground railroad." Mrs. Elizabeth Smith died at the residence of her son-in-law, James D. Smith, in Beaver Dam, on the 6th of August, 1875, in the ninety-ninth year of her age, being one of the oldest women known to have lived within the county. She emigrated to this country from Ireland with her father, John Wilson, and sister, in 1798, the party settling in what is now Union Township. In 1799, she was married to William Smith, of Wayne, their wedding being the first in the county south of the Triangle. About 1816, they removed to Waterford, where Mr. Smith died in 1855, after which she made her home as above. Mrs. Smith was the mother of three sons and eight daughters.

A temperance society was formed at Beaver Dam as early as 1832. No drinking place has ever been maintained in Wayne Township, except in 1840, when one of the hotels of the village received a license. Marl was found near Beaver Dam many years ago, and burned for lime.

CARTER HILL AND HARE CREEK.

Carter Hill consists of a schoolhouse, cheese factory building, Methodist Episcopal Church, and several farmhouses at a cross roads in the northern central part of the township. It derives its name from Elijah Carter, who moved there from Greenfield when the country was still a wilderness. The cheese factory was put up during the flush times of that business, and is not now in operation. The Carter Hill Post Office was abandoned in 1883. About a mile south is the town house of the township. The Carter Hill Methodist society has held meetings in private houses and the schoolhouse for nearly fifty years. During the autumn of 1883, it erected a neat frame house of worship at a cost of $1,000. The membership is about thirty. This appointment has been at different times attached to various circuits, including Beaver Dam, Wattsburg and Columbus. It is now connected with Columbus Circuit, of which Rev. Mr. Wilson is pastor.

Quite a bustling little settlement has sprung up within a few years on Hare Creek, four miles north of Corry. It consists of a Christian Church, Mutual Protective Hall, schoolhouse, saw mill and about a dozen residences. The Christian Church was dedicated in August, 1880. The society was organized several years before, and held its first meeting in the adjoining schoolhouse. Rev. B. Mason was the first minister. His pastoral relation terminated in 1883. The Dutton Graveyard is near the church.

SCHOOLS, MILLS, ETC.

The first educational instruction in Wayne was given by Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, wife of the pioneer William Smith. At her cabin, she taught her own and a few of her neighbors' children for several years, commencing about 1808. A Mr. Kelley, of near Titusville, held a term or two in a cabin at Beaver Dam, then called Brokenstraw, about 1822, and the first schoolhouse was built there several years later. The schools of Wayne are thirteen in number, and the township is interested besides in one union school on the New York line. The buildings are frame, and are located as follows: Beaver Dam, in that village; Donation, near John Whitney's; Hill, near Gordon Betts'; Carter Hill; Spencer, near G. W. Spencer's; Clark, near the New York line, on the Wattsburg & Corry road; Fitch, near O. D. Fitch's; McIntire, opposite the Christian Church; Greeley, on land of Erastus Cleveland; Plank Road, on Columbus & Clymer road; Scioto, on land of J. Brewer; Kincaide, near the P. Miller farm.

The mills and factories not otherwise mentioned, are a woolen factory, saw mill and two shingle mills on the Brokenstraw; two saw mills on Hare Creek, and one shingle mill and one saw mill on Slaughter Run. Other saw mills were in operation years ago, but have either burned down or been abandoned. The only railroad is the Buffalo, Corry & Pittsburgh, better known as the "Cross-cut," which runs wholly across the township in its eastern part from Corry to Brocton, N. Y. The Philadelphia & Erie and New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio (formerly the Atlantic & Great Western) roads extend through Concord almost on the south line of Wayne, but nowhere enter the latter township. The main common roads are the Erie, Waterford & Sugar Grove Turnpike, which passes through Corry, Beaver Dam and Union; the Erie & Warren road, which runs through Carter Hill and Wattsburg; the Corry & French Creek, N. Y., up Hare Creek, and the Corry & Clymer, up Scioto Creek. The township owns two good bridges, one across the Brokenstraw, in the northeast, and one across Hare Creek, just outside the city limits of Corry. All of the rest are ordinary structures. The graveyards not previously named are the old Smith, near G. W. Spencer's, and the Jewish Cemetery of Corry, on the Corry road, near the north line of the city. Most of the burials take place in the cemeteries at Corry and Beaver Dam.

THE STATE FISH HATCHERY.

About a mile west of Corry, on the road leading to Elgin, is the State Fish Hatching Establishment, now, and from the date of its opening, in charge of Seth Weeks. A number of strong springs burst out of the hillside, furnishing a regular supply of cold, pure and healthy water. Several thousand fish of various kinds and sizes may be seen here at all times, swimming about in the little ponds and lakes. The eggs are hatched under the care of Mr. Weeks, and when the young fish attain a proper size they are sent to different parts of the State and put in the streams to which they are adapted. The commonwealth owns nine acres of land at this point, embracing all of the springs that are used for the hatchery.

A little east of north of the fish establishment, on a slight hill upon John Hatch's land, the early settlers found the traces of one of those pre-historic mounds, reference to which has been made in other township sketches. It has been plowed down, and no sign of it is any longer apparent. About half a mile west, on the right hand side of the road from Corry, upon the O'Neill place, is another, the outlines of which are still readily followed. It consists of a circular embankment, with a trench on the outside, from which the dirt was evidently dug, and embraces about three acres, being something like a third larger than the easterly one.

THE PIONEERS.

It has been generally represented that William Smith, who emigrated from Ireland, was the first settler in the township, but this statement is contradicted by an old resident, who says the earliest white inhabitants were Messrs. Hare, Rihue and Call. The first mentioned of these pioneers was Michael Hare, who died in Waterford at the age of one hundred and fifteen years eight months and twenty-two days, and was buried in the cemetery at that place. He and his wife Betty lived in a cabin on the east side of Hare Creek, about a mile north of Corry. It was from him that Hare Creek was named. Hare, Rihue and Call left before the country was cleared up, the former making his home finally at Waterford. Call's location was on the farm owned by Amos Heath, and Rihue's where Mayor Stanford has his brickyard in Corry. During 1797, a man by the name of Prosser went in. Joseph Hall settled at Beaver Dam, in the same year, but afterward changed to Elgin. The settlers in 1798, were William and Samuel Smith and Daniel Findley; in 1800, William Carson and John Kincaide, with his five sons, several of whom were grown; in 1806, William Gray, who changed to Waterford; in 1817, Joseph Grant (a native of New London, Conn.), who moved to Wesleyville late in life: from 1820 to 1824, Daniel Yeager and Messrs. Perkins, Childs and Doud. The Messrs. Smith were followed at an early date by their brothers, James and Robert. Samuel located originally opposite the E. Perkins' place. James in the valley of the South Branch, near the fish establishment, and Robert on the hill near where O. Abbey lives. John Heath, father of Amos, purchased what is now the G. W. Spencer place, in 1827 or 1828, when Amos was a boy of four or five. A Mr. Miller had previously lived on the farm and built a saw mill on the run farther up, which was the first in the township. Matthias Spencer moved to what is known as the Spencer place in March, 1831. He was born in East Haddam, Conn.; changed from there to Columbus, Warren County and then to Wayne Township. In 1865, he went to Erie to live with his son, Dr. H. A. Spencer, where he remained until his death. Isaac Kennedy, father of D. C., settled on the farm where his son resides in 1834. Chauncey G. Ricker-son, a native of Windham, Conn., moved into the township in 1835. Robert Osborne, from Beaver County, located on the farm where L. and E. M. Miller live in 1839, his son R. J. being fourteen years of age at the time. D. W. Howard made his location in 1840, and Philander Miller about the same time. The township did not fill up rapidly till after 1830. John W. Smith, son of William, was the first white child born in the township, the year of his birth being 1800. Joseph Grant commenced in the valley of Beaver Dam Run, near the United Brethren Church, where his son Benjamin, the famous Erie lawyer, was born in a log house, which has been destroyed. E. Perkins went in on foot with a pack and an ax.

PROMINENT MEN.

The citizens of Wayne Township who have been honored by election to State and county offices are few in number, as will be seen by the following list: Director of the Poor, John G. Kincaide, 1876 to 1879; County Commissioner, L. M. Childs, 1865 to 1871; Assembly, Samuel E. Kincaide, in 1876 and 1878, for two years each time. Amos Heath, Dr. Osborne and D. W. Howard have been frequently nominated by the Democrats for county positions, and D. C. Kennedy has served as a delegate to the Democratic State Convention. Four of the sons of Matthias Spencer became professional men, viz.: Two physicians, Dr. H. A. Spencer, of Erie, and Dr. E. V. Spencer, of Mt. Vernon, Ind.; and two attorneys, John W. Spencer, of Rising Sun, Ind., and Elijah M. Spencer, of Mt. Vernon, Ind. Both of the latter have been members of the Indiana Legislature, and John W. was a Judge at the time of his death.

THE GREELEYS.

The most prominent name associated with the history of Wayne Township is that of Horace Greeley, the great editor and politician. Zacheus Greeley, the father of Horace, commenced life as a farmer on a small scale in Vermont. Becoming embarrassed, his farm was sold by the Sheriff, and he worked for a time as a laborer in New Hampshire. In the year 1825, having saved a small sum of money, he started to search out a home in the wilds of Pennsylvania, making his way to Wayne Township, near the New York line, where his brothers, Benjamin and Leonard, had gone some two years before. He there purchased 200 acres of land, to which he afterward added 150 acres more. Returning to New Hampshire, he brought his family on in 1826, the party consisting, besides Mr. and Mrs. Greeley, of Barnes, their oldest son, and their three daughters, Esther, Arminda and Marguerite. Horace, who had apprenticed himself in a printing office at Poultney, Vt., did not accompany the family, although pressed hard to do so. During the ensuing four years, he visited them twice in their wilderness home, walking most of the way, and remaining about a month each time. In 1830, he came on again, and after remaining home awhile, found employment for a short period at Jamestown, and in the Gazette office at Erie. Some time during the summer of 1831 he left Erie, called to see his parents in Wayne for a few days, and then started on foot for New York, where he arrived on the 17th of August, with exactly $10 in his pocket. Years after, when he had made a reputation through the New Yorker, he again paid a visit to the township, remaining for a brief period only. It was during this stay that he wrote one of his best poems, "The Faded Stars," beneath the trees near the home of his parents. Zaccheus Greeley and Mary, his wife, both lived the balance of their years on the farm in Wayne and were buried near by. Mrs. Greeley's death occurred about 1854. The father died in 1867, at the age of eighty-seven. Horace Greeley was born on the 3d of February, 1811, in Amherst, Vt., and died in Pleasantville, N. Y., November 29, 1872. Esther, his sister, married Orestes Cleveland, long a partner in the New York Tribune. Barnes remained on the homestead farm. Arminda was wedded to her cousin Lovell, and Marguerite united herself to a writing master named Bush, from whom she parted.

CHAPTER XIX.

AMITY TOWNSHIP.

THE township of Amity was created out of Union in 1825, and embraces 16,149 acres. Amity had a population of 385 in 1830, 560 in 1840, 739 in 1850, 1,016 in 1860, 924 in 1870, and 1,033 in 1880, of whom all were whites and few if any of foreign birth. The township lines are straight on all sides. Its length from east to west is about six and three-quarter miles, and breadth from north to south about four and one-fourth miles. The township is bounded on the north by Venango, on the east by Wayne, on the south by Union, and on the west by Le Boeuf and Waterford. Its post offices are Hatch Hollow and Lake Pleasant (Milltown). The township has no settlements of any size, the only places that can be called villages, even by courtesy, being Milltown and Hatch Hollow. There is no railroad within the township, and the nearest station is at Union. The main portion of Amity was embraced within the Tenth Donation District. The assessment of 1883 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $365,329. Number of cows, 678; of oxen, 27; of horses and mules, 279; value of the same, $28,252; value of trades and occupations, $2,351; money at interest, $1,660.

STREAMS AND BRIDGES.

The chief stream of Amity Township is French Creek, of which all the others within its limits are tributaries. The East and West Branches unite on the north line, just outside the borough limits of Wattsburg, and the joint stream flows across the township in a southwesterly course into Waterford, leaving a triangular strip of territory on the upper side known to the inhabitants as "Canada." Its total length within the township is nearly seven miles. The most important tributaries on the north side are the outlet of Lake Pleasant, Jones' Creek and Henry Brook; and on the south side the Hubbell Alder Run, the Hatch Hollow Alder Run, Deerlick Run and Duncombe Run. The outlet of Lake Pleasant rises in the lake of that name in the southwest corner of Venango, has a length of about three miles, and empties into French Creek on the farm of L. A. Stow. Jones' Creek heads near the south line of Venango, and falls into the chief stream on the Thomas Ashton place, having a course of about four miles. Henry Brook also takes its rise in Venango, is about two miles long, and joins French Creek on the farm of L. Northrop. The Hubbell Alder Run begins on land of the late J. G. Hubbell, at the Wayne line, flows about five miles and ends near Wattsburg, after a course of some five miles. On the farm of W. C. Maynard it receives Lowe Brook, a small stream which rises in the northeast. The Hatch Hollow Alder Run heads in Union Township, and becomes a part of French Creek on the G. W. Baldwin place, close to the mouth of the outlet of Lake Pleasant. It has a length of about five miles. Duncombe Run takes its rise on the S. W. Hayes farm, directly south of Wattsburg, and falls into French Creek on the place of W. T. Everson. The head of Deer Lick Run is on the north edge of Union, and its length is not far from four miles. It unites with the main stream on the farm of C. E. Duncombe. The only bridge over French Creek proper, within the township, is the iron one at Baldwin's Flats, which has a span of 100 feet and cost $2,340. Another iron bridge, with eighty feet span, crosses one stem of the East Branch near Wattsburg, built at a cost of $1,439. Both of the above are open bridges. Those over the other streams are ordinary in character.

MILLS AND ROADS.

French Creek once gave power to several mills in Amity, but all have been abandoned. Those on the other streams are as follows: On the Hubbell Alder Run, Schoaf's steam saw mill, near the Wayne line; on the Hatch Hollow Alder Run, Doolittle & Chaffee's steam saw mill, and Wheeler's water saw mill; on the outlet at Milltown, Donaldson's steam saw mill and water shingle mill; Richard's water grist mill and saw mill, Cox's steam saw mill. W. R. Palmer has a creamery just south of Wattsburg, which was built in 1872. John Elletorp has a blacksmith shop, and Mr. Williams a wagon shop at Milltown. There is also a blacksmith shop at Hatch Hollow. There is no store in the township. The first saw mill in Amity was put up above Milltown on the stream which runs through the Eaton Gross place and empties into the outlet of Lake Pleasant. The second mill was erected by Capt. James Donaldson on the outlet at Milltown in 1822 or 1823. It was a grist and saw mill combined.

The main roads are the Waterford & Wattsburg, along the south side of French Creek; the Lake Pleasant & Wattsburg, which is merged into the former on Baldwin's Flats; the Union & Wattsburg, passing through Hatch Hollow; the Beaver Dam & Wattsburg; the Cory & Wattsburg; the Lake Pleasant & Union; and the Lake Pleasant, Hatch Hollow & Union. The Erie & Lake Pleasant road terminates at the Stow bridge on French Creek, and is designated above that as the Lake Pleasant & Wattsburg.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The township schools are the Young, in the southeast; Inman, on the Venango line, in the northwest; Hubbell, near the mouth of Lowe Run; Ladd, near Wattsburg; Hayes, on the Union & Beaver Dam road; Hatch Hollow, in that settlement; McGee, on the line between Union and Amity; Hill, near the northwest corner of Wayne Township; Phillips, near Wattsburg, on the line between Venango and Amity; Duncombe, on French Creek, in the southwest; and Baldwin, on Baldwin's Flats. The Ladd building is used as the town house and election place. The McKee School is maintained jointly by Amity and Union, and the Phillips by Amity and Venango. In addition, there is a school at Milltown, belonging to the Lake Pleasant District, which embraces the corners of Amity, Waterford, Greene and Venango. Of the early schools of the township, mention may be made of a log schoolhouse that was built about the year 1825 by the neighborhood, and stood probably one-half of the distance between the residence of J. Chaffee and the borough of Wattsburg. The first teacher in this building was James White, and the next was Margaret Rouse. Some years later, a schoolhouse was built at Hatch Hollow. Polly Berry and Sallie Chaffee were the early teachers in this house. This was the first schoolhouse at Hatch Hollow, the one now located there being the second. In 1835, a small log schoolhouse was standing on Baldwin's Flats, near Alder Run, in which, about this date, a summer school was taught by Mrs. Lucetta Baldwin. She had been preceded by Miss Polly Donald. The winter following the summer school of Mrs. Baldwin, A. Duncombe taught in the building named. Later, this house was burned, and another (of frame) was erected on nearly the same site. Both were built by subscription. Artemus Tracy and Robert Middleton were early teachers in the latter building. This building also burned down after a few years of service. Another was built near Baldwin's soon after, which was used until the erection of the present one there.

LANDS, VILLAGES, ETC.

Amity is in general a hilly township, but there are some magnificent flats along French Creek, the outlet of Lake Pleasant, the Hatch Hollow Alder Run and Deer Lick Run. The valley of French Creek ranges from half a mile to two and a half miles in width, reaching its greatest extent at the outlet of Lake Pleasant. The township as a whole is more suited for grazing than anything else. Great quantities of butter are made, and the raising of cattle is an important industry. It is doubtful whether as much wheat is reaped as the people consume, but oats, corn and potatoes are produced in excess of home needs. Apples thrive vigorously, but other fruits do not succeed so well. Valley lands are held at as high a rate as $75 an acre, but some swampy spots are not valued at more than $20. On the hills, the price of land ranges from $30 to $40. Perhaps one-third of the township is still in a wild state and covered with timber.

Milltown is a place of about thirty buildings, and nearly a hundred people, situated on the outlet, about a mile and a half below Lake Pleasant, and fourteen and a half from Erie. It got its name from the number of mills located there. The settlement possesses a schoolhouse but no church. Its post office title is Lake Pleasant. Half a mile west in Waterford Township, is a Baptist Church, of frame, which was built in the summer of 1877. Until recently, there had been an organization of the United Brethren in Christ, on Baldwin's Flats, which society was formed about the year 1857, by Rev. Michael Oswald, but was disbanded in the summer of 1883.

Hatch Hollow, in the valley of the lower Alder Run, on the Union &

Wattsburg road, is a place of less size than Milltown. In addition to the mills and schoolhouse, there is a Methodist Episcopal Church, a frame structure, which was completed and dedicated in 1859. The congregation was organized some years prior to 1835, and has, excepting a short period, been an appointment on the Wattsburg Circuit, of which it now forms a part. It was for a time connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Union City. Hatch Hollow derived its title from the numerous Hatch family in the neighborhood. It is the post office of the south part of the township.

The cemetery at Hatch Hollow embraces about three acres. It has been in existence about twenty-five years. There is a burying ground of about an acre on the T. Ashton farm, and a number of family graveyards are kept up in various parts of the township.

William Sanborn was elected to the Assembly in 1846 and 1847, and Francis F. Stow, County Auditor in 1867.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first lands taken up in Amity Township were by William Miles, the founder of Wattsburg, who located 1,200 acres on the outlet of Lake Pleasant, in 1796, but made his home in Concord. About the same time John Fagan cleared up a piece of land near Hatch Hollow, and a man named McGahan went in the same year. Fagan remained until 1807, when he changed to Mill Creek. Hazen Sheppard and wife located in the township in 1812; the old lady was still living in 1880, at the age of ninety-two. John Carron is said to have been the first permanent settler, but the year he went in is unknown. In 1816, Benjamin Hinkston settled in Greene Township from Vermont, but changed to Amity in 1818. In 1819, Charles Capron moved in from New Hampshire, and was joined the same year by Seth Shepardson and Timothy Reed. Capron's father and mother accompanied him. James McCullough and Capt. James Donaldson became residents of the township in 1820, the latter locating near Lake Pleasant. Capt. Donaldson was from Cumberland County. He went first to the P. H. Yost place in Venango, where he lived with his family a number of years. From there he moved to Milltown. Other settlers went in as follows: In 1829, Jabez G. Hubbell, of Otsego County, N. Y., with his wife and sons, Hiram and David, Royal D. Mason and Jacob Rouse; in 1830, the Duncombes, Pliny Maynard and Elias Patterson; in 1831, William B. Maynard, son of Pliny; in 1833, George W. Baldwin; in 1847, John Allen, from Otsego County, N. Y.

CHAPTER XX.

GIRARD TOWNSHIP AND BOROUGHES OF GIRARD AND LOCKPORT.

THE township of Girard was carved out of Elk Creek, Fairview and Springfield in 1832, receiving its name from Stephen Girard, the Philadelphia millionaire, who owned a large body of land in the adjoining township of Conneaut, on which he had arranged just before his death to put up mills and make other important improvements which were expected to benefit the whole country around. The old line between Fairview and Springfield ran through the township parallel with the present line dividing Elk Creek and Conneaut.

Girard Township is bounded on the north by Lake Erie, on the east by Fairview and Franklin, on the south by Conneaut and Elk Creek, and on the west by Springfield. In the widest part it is six and a quarter miles from east to west, by seven and three-eighths from north to south. The population was 2,060 in 1840, 2,443 in 1850, 2,453 in 1860, 2,018 in 1870, 2,338 in 1880, inclusive of Miles Grove and West Girard, and 1,732 exclusive of those villages. The only post office is Miles Grove. Most of the trading is done in the latter place and Girard Borough.

The United States census of 1880, Jacob Bender enumerator, gave the following results: With the exception of one person, a mulatto, the population is all white. In sex it is singularly evenly divided, there being 1,168 males against 1,170 females.

The acreage in tilled land is 13,845; permanent meadows, pastures, orchards, etc., 2,920; woodland and forest, 3,582; total, 20,347 acres. The principal crops are wheat, oats, barley, corn, buckwheat and potatoes. Total value of farm productions of all kinds, $217,080, divided among 240 farms.

The appraisement of 1883 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $1,354,587; of personal property, $47,523; money at interest, $51,355.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first settlers within the limits of the township were William Silverthorn and his son, Capt. Abraham Silverthorn, who came in 1798 from Fayette County. About 1799, Robert Brown, of Northumberland County, located at the mouth of Elk Creek, but in 1804 he moved to Weigleville, and from there to Erie. He was the father of William A. Brown and Mrs. George A. Eliot, of Erie City. These parties were followed in 1800 by Robert Porter, Isaac Miller and John Kelley. Mr. Kelley, who was from Mifflin County, moved to West Mill Creek in 1802, and died there the next year. In 1801, Jacob Coffman came from Somerset County, and located on the site of Lockport; and about the same time Patrick Ward settled on the Lake road. Mr. Coffman, who was from Somerset County, was accompanied by his four sons. Conrad, one of the boys, went back to Somerset County about 1814, married there, and did not return until 1836, when his son J. C. was a young man of seventeen. The family were intimate in Somerset County with the famous Judge Jeremiah S. Black. William and Samuel McClelland and William Crane, natives of Ireland, took up lands in the northeast part of the township in 1802; John Miller, from Fayette County, and George Kelley, from Mifflin County, in 1803; Joel Bradish and brothers, from Saratoga County, N. Y., and James Blair, from Fayette County, Penn., in 1804; Martin Taylor, from Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1813; William Webber, from Genesee County, N. Y., in 1814; Cornelius Haggerty, in 1815; Samuel Jenner and his son Peach, from Vermont, Justus Osborn and his son Philip, from Fredonia, N. Y., Abner Boder, from Connecticut, and Scott Keith and wife, from Pittsford, Vt., in 1816; Elijah Drury, from Genesee County, N. Y., in 1817; Ethan Loveridge and Nathan Sherman, from Oneida County, N. Y., in 1818; Joseph Long, from Massachusetts, in 1825; Matthew Anderson, from Chenango County, N. Y., in 1830; George Trant, from Columbia County, N. Y., in 1831; James Miles, from Union Township, and Titus Pettibone, from Wyoming County, N. Y., in 1832; and William Kirkland, in 1833. Among other early settlers, the date of whose arrival is not ascertained, were Messrs. Taggart, Pickett, Badger, Martin, Wells, Clark, Laughlin and Wolverton. The last four were the earliest who located on the site of Girard Borough, Mr. Wells having owned most of the land embraced within the corporate limits. James Silverthorn located among the first, and Thomas Miles about 1801. John Ralph kept a sort of tavern at the mouth of Elk Creek in 1804. John R. Ward was the first male child, and the late Mrs. George A. Eliot, of Erie, the first female child born in the township. The country does not appear to have been cleared up very rapidly, as, according to Mr. Long, there was no road along Elk Creek when he reached there in 1825. The remains of William Miles and those of his wife and oldest son Frederick are interred in the family graveyard, north of Miles Grove. The old gentleman resided with his son James, near the mouth of Elk Creek, from 1841, the year of his wife's death, until his own demise in 1846. Girard Township can claim the honor of having had the second oldest person in the county—Patrick Ward, who died at the age of one hundred and five. When one hundred and three years old, he walked from his residence to Girard (three miles), for the purpose of voting.

Jacob Weschler

LANDS AND ROADS.

It is a common remark that the land between Walnut Creek, in Fairview, and Crooked Creek, in Springfield, is the best along Lake Erie, and of this choice section Girard Township is claimed by its citizens to be the very cream. The lake plain is from three to four miles wide, running back by a succession of steps which give a pleasing variety to the country. Near the lake the soil is sandy, but on the ridge it becomes gravelly, and is very productive. Back of Girard Borough the land continues to rise, is much broken, and, except along Elk and Crooked Creeks, where there are some fine valley farms, is better adapted to grazing than grain, though this is to be stated with some notable exceptions. The whole township is a splendid fruit country, and many acres have been planted to grapes and strawberries. The strawberry crop is to Girard what the grape crop is to North East, vast quantities being raised annually and shipped to all points of the compass. The farm improvements will average better than any other part of the lake shore, and the taste shown in some instances would be creditable to any locality. Land is valued at from $100 to $125 per acre along the Ridge road, from $60 to $100 along the Lake road, and from $35 to $60 in the south part of the township. During the construction of the canal, there was a sandstone quarry—a novelty for Erie County—at Elisha Smith's, east of Girard Borough, from which a quantity of stone was taken for the locks of the canal.

The main thoroughfares of Girard Township are the Lake road, the Ridge road—both running direct to Erie—the two roads between Miles Grove and the borough, the road through Lockport and Cranesville to Meadville, and the Lexington road into Conneaut Township. The Ridge and Lake roads are thickly settled, and the first named especially is unquestionably the finest in the county, having a fine row of shade trees on both sides almost the entire distance from Girard to Fairview. The stage company had extensive stables at West Girard, which were burned in January, 1832, with the loss of fifteen out of sixteen horses. After the opening of the railroad in 1852, few persons cared to travel by coach, and the stage line was soon abandoned.

RAILROADS AND CANAL.

The Lake Shore Railroad traverses the whole township from east to west, crossing Elk Creek a short distance west of Miles Grove. The old wooden viaduct over this stream, built for the use of the railroad in 1852, was 115 feet high and 1,400 feet long. It was replaced in 1858 with a splendid culvert and extensive filling. The only station of this road is at Miles Grove, or Girard Station as it is more generally known to travelers. The Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad intersects the Lake Shore almost a mile west of Miles Grove, and runs southward across the township, parallel to and not far from the Springfield line. Aside from Miles Grove, it has but a single station in the township, the one known as Cross's, at the north end of Crooked Creek bridge, a long and uncomfortable looking piece of trestle work. This station is the depot for the village of East Springfield, from which it is a mile and a half distant. The railroad office is the only building at the station. Judge Cross, of Springfield, from whom it received its name, once lived there, and still owns 800 acres of land in the vicinity. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad traverses the entire width of the township from east to west, crossing the Elk Creek Valley by a splendid iron bridge, within sight from Girard Borough. Its station is between the borough and Miles Grove, a little east of the latter place. The old Erie Canal entered Girard on the east from Fairview, along the foot of the first rise, cut through the ridge to Elk Creek, crossed that stream by an aqueduct ninety-six feet above the water, and 500 long, and followed the valley of the Lockport Branch southward.

STREAMS, ETC.

The chief stream of Girard is Elk Creek, which comes in from Fairview, flows nearly through the center of the township from east to northwest, and empties into the lake about a mile and a quarter beyond Miles Grove, after a length of thirty to thirty-five miles. The West Branch rises in Elk Creek Township, runs north eight or ten miles and unites with the main stream near the Fairview line. Hall's Run flows through Lockport and falls in a little south of Girard Borough. Brandy Run heads in Fairview Township, about a mile further south; and Spring Run west of Miles Grove—each of them being of sufficient size to furnish water-power for one or two mills. The valley of the chief stream is narrow and precipitous in the eastern portion of the township, but further west it widens out, with steep, but beautiful bluffs on both sides. At the junction of the West Branch there is a high peak, resembling part of a Roman profile, with its base at the water's edge, which has received the peculiar title of "The Devil's Nose." A short distance south is the striking natural curiosity, famous over the western portion of the county as "The Devil's Backbone." The West Branch runs along the base of an almost perpendicular hill for a quarter of a mile, then rounds the bluff and comes back to a point opposite the one which it left, forming a sort of a loop. At the narrowest place, the crest or backbone is not more than two feet across, and the height being over a 100 feet, it is a severe test of a person's nerves to walk along the lofty pathway. The spot is a favorite resort of the people for miles around. Not far from the "Devil's Backbone" is the fruit farm of Asa Battles, which contains 6,000 apple, 1,000 peach, 600 or 700 pear and many quince trees, besides fourteen acres of strawberries and five or six of grapes. The other streams of the township are Crooked Creek and several rivulets flowing into the lake in the northeast. Crooked Creek rises near Lockport, runs through the southwestern portion of Girard and the north-eastern of Springfield, and empties into Lake Erie about three-fourths of a mile beyond the village of North Springfield. It has a course of about ten miles and there are some good lands in its valley.

MOUTH OF ELK CREEK.

The mouth of Elk Creek figured extensively in the early plans of internal improvement, as well as in the courts of the county and State. When the canal was under discussion, there was a bitter strife as to the adoption of the eastern route by way of Waterford, or the western one by way of Girard. The Legislature, at length, by recommendation of the chief engineer in charge, adopted the western route. Next came a dispute as to whether the terminus of the canal should be at Erie or at the mouth of Elk Creek, which was finally settled in favor of the former. On the third of March, 1837, pending the discussion of the proper terminus, a contract was entered into between James Miles, of Girard, Thaddens Stevens, then a member of Gov. Ritner's "Kitchen Cabinet," and Charles Ogle, a Congressman from this State, looking to the building of a city at the mouth of the creek. Miles was to dispose of 200 acres of land on both sides of the stream to Stevens and Ogle, in consideration of $5,000, on the 1st of August ensuing, and $95,000 from the sale of lots, while Stevens was to work for the adoption of the site as the terminus of the canal, and Ogle was to obtain an appropriation from Congress for the improvement of the harbor. The project failing, Miles sued Stevens and Ogle for the $5,000. The case was carried to the Supreme Court and decided in favor of the defendants. Some very curious testimony came out in the course of the trial. While the country was being cleared, the mouth of the creek was considerable of a shipping place for staves and lumber. A warehouse formerly stood on the lake shore for the convenience of trade. The water in the creek is probably deep enough at its mouth to float any sailing vessel, but there is a wide bar in the lake, which will effectually prevent its use as a harbor until removed, which can only be done by a heavy expenditure of money. Quite a fishery is maintained there, and hundreds of barrels of fish are put up for shipment. A limekiln has also been maintained for some years, receiving its stone from Kelly's Island.

MILLS AND CHURCHES.

The mills and factories of the township—not naming for the present those of Girard Borough, Lockport and Miles Grove—are as follows: On Elk Creek—Strickland & Nason's grist mill, at the mouth of Spring Run; the West Girard Grist, Saw, Cider and Plaster Mills, and a planing mill at the same place. On Spring Run, T. Thornton's woolen mill and Brown Bros.' hand rake factory and cider mill. A grist mill is said to have been established on this stream by Mr. Silverthorn, as early as 1799, being one of the first in the county. On the West Branch, Pettis' saw mill; on Brandy Run, Rositer's tannery; on one of the lake streams, Herrick's and Godfrey's saw mills. All of the above are run by water, but in some cases steam is also employed in the dry season. Pettibone & Morehouse have a limekiln on the lake road north of Girard. The first mill on Elk Creek, within Girard Township, was built at West Girard in 1814, by Peter Wolverton, and was owned successively by Dr. Rufus Hills, James C. Marshall and his brother-in-law, Addison Weatherbee, George Rowley, L. S. Wright, Loomis & Horton and W. C. Culbertson. During Mr. Rowley's term, the mill burned down and was rebuilt.

The churches of the township are as follows: Methodist Episcopal, at Fair Haven, on the Lexington road, in the southwest part of the township; organized originally, January 7, 1815, at the house of Mr. Webber, and reorganized by Rev. A. Hall in 1860; building erected in 1861, at a cost of $3,000. Prior to its attachment to the Lockport Circuit, this charge was an appointment with the church at Girard. Another of the same denomination at Fairplain, upon the farm of C. Ziesenheim, on the Lake road, organized by Rev. J. H. Whallon, its first pastor, in 1840; building erected in 1841 at a cost of $800. Until quite recently, this congregation was served by the pastors from Girard. It is now connected with Fairview Circuit.

Church of the United Brethren on the State road, near the Elk Creek Township line; organized in 1870 by Rev. D. Sprinkle, its first pastor; building cost $1,700.

The cemetery at Girard is the common burial place of the township, but a number of small graveyards occur in various sections.

SCHOOLS AND MOUNDS.

The schools are fifteen in number, as follows: Fairplain, on Lake road east; Clark's, on Lake road, farther west; Miles' near railroad junction; Cudney, on Ridge road west; Robertson, on Ridge road west; West Girard, in that village; Girard Station, at Miles Grove; Osborne, on Ridge road east; McClelland, two miles southeast of Girard Borough; Porter Bridge, one mile south of West Girard; Anderson, on Lexington road; Fair Haven, on same road further south; Blair, on Creek road three miles south of Girard Borough; Miller, on Old State road near Lockport: South Hill. Besides these there is a Union School on the Franklin Line, occupied jointly by that and Girard Township. Among some of the early schools of the township were the following: A log schoolhouse stood in the southwestern part of the township, in which school was taught in 1819 or 1820 by Miles Bristol. This schoolhouse was destroyed by fire and another erected in the same locality. Fifty years ago, there stood a log schoolhouse about three-quarters of a mile south of the village of Lockport. About 1822, a school was taught in a frame building that stood on the Ridge road at the foot of the Girard Hill, by Nancy Kelly. Another school was held in a private house, situated one mile east of Girard, taught in about 1823 by Desdemona Fuller.

Southeast of Girard Borough, the remains of an ancient mound are or were lately to be seen, which was one of a chain of four, extending in a south-westerly direction through East Springfield toward Conneaut Creek. These mounds are exactly alike, consisting of high, round earthwork inclosing a space of about three-fourths of an acre, with apertures at regular intervals. Similar ruins are to be found in Conneaut, Harbor Creek, Wayne and Concord Townships. On a hill between Girard and Lockport was an Indian burial ground. In 1882, the bones of a mastodon were plowed up on the farm of W. H. Palmer, many of which were in an excellent state of preservation. The size of the animal was estimated to have been fifteen feet long, exclusive of tusks, and about thirteen feet high.

MILES GROVE.

The pretty and growing village of Miles Grove, or Girard Station, as it is known to the traveling public, is situated on the Lake Shore Railroad, a little over a mile east of the intersection of the Erie & Pittsburgh, one and three-quarter miles north of Girard, fifteen and a half west of Erie and eighty east of Cleveland. It is four and a half miles from the depot to Fairview Station, five to Fairview Borough, six to Lockport, five to East Springfield, four to North Springfield, ten to Cranesville, eleven to Wellsburg, eleven and a half to Albion and twelve to Franklin. The population of the village by the census of 1880 was 471. The site of Miles Grove is one of the most suitable for a town in Erie County. The country is extremely fine and closely settled—so close, indeed, between there and Girard that it will not be many years till they are one town. The place was named after Judge Miles, who influenced the erection of the depot, the ground for which was given by Austin H. Seeley, who laid out the lots. It grew slowly for some years, but received a new impetus by the completion of the Erie & Pittsburg road, which caused it to be made a general stopping place for the trains. Another start was given to it by the location of A. Denio's fork and agricultural works, which furnish employment to about seventy persons. These works—now known as the Otsego Fork Mills—were brought to Miles Grove, part in 1874, and the balance in 1876, the citizens subscribing $4,000 to $5,000 to induce their removal. This important industry was established at Albion thirty years ago. The handle department burned down in the year of 1873, when the entire business was transferred to Miles Grove, where a part of it was already in operation. The village contains, besides a good many fine residences, an Episcopal and a Methodist Episcopal Church, a fine schoolhouse, with three teachers, an iron foundry, a hotel—built by A. M. Osborn in the spring of 1865—five or six stores, an express office, two shoe shops and two blacksmith shops. The Methodist Episcopal Church was built in 1867. It is used in part by the Presbyterians, according to a condition in the subscription paper. James Sampson donated the land on which the building stands. The Methodist Episcopal Congregation has belonged to Girard charge ever since its organization.

The Episcopal Church was erected in 1877 (mainly with a sum of money left by Mrs. Bell, a daughter of Judge Miles) on a tract of land donated by J. Robert Hall, agent of the latter's estate. The first services of this congregation were held in 1860, but no regular rector served the church until 1862. Rev. E. D. Irvine has been rector since June, 1877. The Lake Shore Railroad Company has valuable improvements at Miles Grove. These are a fine depot building, with tasteful parks east and west of it, a freight house, two water tanks, an engine house with four stalls, a turn-table and an extensive track yard for shifting freight trains. An enormous business is done in shipping potatoes, in which Girard and Fairview Townships are very fruitful, and great quantities of coal are sold from the line of the E. & P. Railroad. The home of the Miles family, in the hollow of Elk Creek, near its mouth, about a mile north of west from Miles Grove, is a stately brick mansion. When Judge Miles died, he owned 1,600 acres in one body, extending two miles or more along the lake. He was born in Northumberland County February 16, 1792, and died March 27, 1868. For seventy or eighty years there has been an eagle's nest on the farm of Riley Pettibone, half a mile north of Miles Grove. It was there when the country was cleared, and has not changed its position, except that the original trees were blown down, and others near by were chosen. Occasionally young eagles are captured, caged, and preserved as curiosities.

WEST GIRARD.

The ancient village of West Girard is in the valley of Elk Creek, after which it was originally named, mostly on the west bank of the stream, about half a mile from the borough of Girard. It was rather an important place in early days, being the site of one of the stage company's extensive stables, and a changing place for their teams. The village then boasted a number of stores, four taverns, two tanneries, an oil mill, distillery, and several smaller establishments, all of which were allowed to run down. It received its worst blow by the building of the canal on the opposite side of the creek, which caused a transfer of the business to the present borough. Its principal establishments now are a large grist mill, a planing mill and sash and blind factory, a saw mill, a plaster mill and a brickyard. The village contains a schoolhouse, about thirty houses, and 135 inhabitants. An iron bridge over Elk Creek marks the site of two or three wooden structures which have been washed away by the destructive floods of that stream.

BOROUGH OF GIRARD.

In the year 1814, at the close of the war with Great Britain, the site of Girard Borough was partly included in the farm of John Taylor, whose log house was the only building there. At a later date, the land was owned by Daniel Sayre, Sr., who purchased from Mr. Taylor. Mr. Sayre sold to Joseph Wells, who erected the first frame building within the borough limits. The original town was on the other side of the creek, now known as West Girard. When the canal was located on the east side of the stream, several far-seeing parties commenced building on the present site, and it was not long until a town was laid out. The name of Girard was given to it in honor of the township, of which it became—so to speak—the capital and center of trade. The first buildings in the village were near the canal, and the first tavern occupied a site a little west of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1846, the village was incorporated as a borough. Its first officers were: Burgess, Mason Kellogg; Council, John McClure, Jr., Leffert Hart, H. McConnell, George H. Cutler; Clerk, L. S. Jones. The corporation covers 250 acres. The United States census gave Girard a population of 400 in 1850, 616 in 1860, 704 in 1870, and 703 in 1880. The assessment for 1883 gave the following results: Value of real estate, $247,453; cows, 39; value, $1,380; horses and mules, 73; value, $6,110; personal property, $7,490; value of trades and occupations, $60,255; money at interest, $11,377.

Girard occupies a pleasant site along the Ridge road, which constitutes its Main street, on high ground overlooking the lake shore plain and the lovely valley of Elk Creek, sixteen miles west by public road from Erie, ten east from the Ohio line, two and a half south of the lake, and one and three-quarters from the railroad station at Miles Grove, with which it is connected by the old depot road and Rice avenue. The latter thoroughfare, which was projected by Dan Rice while in the height of his prosperity, was opened in the winter of 1867-68, and is well built up, giving a stranger the idea of a continuous town. A charter for a street railroad on this fine avenue was procured some years ago, but the enterprise was never carried to completion. The old road is also rather closely built up, and both thoroughfares are among the most pleasant in the county. The Erie Canal passed through the borough by a deep cut, and two venerable warehouses still stand upon its banks, showing that a large trade was done there through the medium of that improvement. The town occupies the second rise above the lake shore plain, in the midst of one of the most beautiful and productive countries in the Union. It contains every variety of stores incident to a community of the size, has many delightful residences, especially along the east end of the main street, which is finely shaded, and does an extensive trade with the farming region around.

CHURCHES, SCHOOLS, ETC.

The borough numbers among its public institutions Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Catholic, Universalist and German Lutheran Churches. The Methodist Church, which has few superiors in the county for beauty of architecture and elegance of finish, was erected in 1868 at a cost of $30,000. The congregation was organized in 1815, by Rev. Ira Eddy, its first pastor, and built its first edifice in 1828. For many years the appointment was a portion of the Springfield Circuit.

The Presbyterian Church is a substantial brick building erected in 1835, to which an old graveyard is attached. Its congregation was organized May 16, 1835, by Rev. Pierce Chamberlain, the first Elders being Robert Porter and Philip Bristol. It was at first supplied by Rev. Edson Hart, who was stationed at Springfield. The present pastor, Rev. W. R. Moore, assumed the pastorate of the church in 1871.

St. John's Catholic congregation was organized about the year 1853, and soon thereafter put up a church building. The congregation was attended by visiting priests for a number of years. Rev. Father F. Riordy has served this charge in connection with the one at North East since July, 1870.

The Universalist society was organized some years previous to 1852, and in that year erected their present church building; the pastor of this church since 1864 has been Rev. C. L. Shipman; his predecessor was Rev. S. P. Carrolton; Revs. E. Wood and C. B. Lombard had preceded Mr. Carrolton.

St. Johannis congregation of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized in 1866, and subsequently purchased the church building occupied by the Methodist Episcopal society prior to the erection of their present building in 1868. The pulpit of the church was filled for periods by the pastors of the church of this denomination in Erie. For some years past, this congregation and the one in Fairview Township have been under one pastorate. Rev. Gavehling has been pastor of both these charges for the past four years.

The Girard Cemetery, one of the handsomest burial grounds in the county, is a tract of ten acres, neatly inclosed, laid out in walks and containing many costly monuments. The organization was chartered in March, 1861, and the property was laid out the same year.

The Girard Academy was built by subscription in 1850, and opened in 1851, with 150 pupils. It had a students' boarding house attached, and for awhile was very successful. The property was transferred to the school board about twelve years ago, and has since been occupied by the common schools of the borough. These consist of a series of graded schools, managed by a Principal and three assistants. The schools opened in the fall of 1883, with an enrollment of 160 pupils under the superintendency of J. M. Morrison, who had three lady assistants. There are four departments, each of which is in excellent condition. The schools were graded in the winter of 1872-73, by F. W. Knapp. The latter was succeeded by the present Principal, who is now (1883) beginning his fifth school year at Girard.

The first school that was held in Girard Township was taught in what is now Girard Borough, by J. Swan, in the year 1809. He was then in his sixteenth year. The following year (1810) Mr. Swan taught a school in Mill Creek Township.

In 1827, the village school was held in the lower floor of a log building that stood a little to the rear of the site of the drug store of Smith & Lowe on Main street; Tabitha Mashon was teaching about this time (the second floor of the building was used as the Masonic Lodge room).

HOTELS AND FACTORIES.

The hotels of Girard Borough are the Avenue House, finished in 1879, and owned and kept by Peter H. Nellis, and the Martin House, which has been in operation thirty years, and is now kept by Alonzo White. Girard has been rather unfortunate in the matter of hotel buildings, the old Girard House, which occupied the site of the present Avenue House, and the Central House of Joshua Evans, which stood on the east side of the public square, having both been burned. In the days of stage coaching on the Ridge road, the locality was a famous one for taverns, there having been no less than eight, within two miles, in 1835.

The most important manufacturing concern of the borough is the wrench factory. This concern was built by a corporation under the State laws, and erected in 1874, by the Walton Brothers, of Cleveland, Ohio, with a capital of $8,000, the people of Girard subscribing half the stock. It failed in 1875, and at Sheriff's sale was purchased by C. F. Rockwell, W. C. Culbertson, C. F. Webster and R. S. Battles. This company is under a limited partnership, but the business has been carried on successfully under this firm. The concern employ about seventy-five men. In the fall of 1883, a well was sunk near the mill for the purpose of securing gas for lighting purposes. After boring 1,310 feet, and receiving an insufficient supply, the derrick was removed to a different locality and the second well is under operation at this writing. Besides this establishment, H. H. Waitman has a planing mill, and there is a small furniture factory. All of these concerns are run by steam. There is also a small bedspring manufactory owned by H. P. Malick.

SQUARE, MONUMENT, ETC.

The public square of Girard was a gift from Joseph Wells, one of the owners of the land, when the village was laid out. It is surrounded by a number of fine buildings, but its principal objects of interest are the soldiers' monument, and the Dan Rice residence, which occupies, with grounds, a full block on the north side. The monument is a splendid shaft of marble, designed by the celebrated Chicago sculptor, Leonard Volk, inclosed by an iron railing, and dedicated November 1, 1865. It cost $6,000, the whole of which was paid by Dan Rice.

The Dan Rice property embraces two and a half acres, inclosed on three sides by a heavy brick wall, and ornamented with statuary, walks, arbors, and the choicest of trees, shrubbery and flowers. The mansion itself is a large frame building. Within the inclosure is a fine conservatory, and a brick barn which cost $26,000. The cost of the wall around the grounds was $3,000. Dan Rice's first purchase in Girard was in 1853, when he bought a piece of land with building on the northwest side of the square, from Col. John McClure, for $18,000. In 1856 he moved there, and from that date continued to add to his purchase until he had possession of the entire square, at a total cost of about $60,000. Financial embarrassments lost to Dan Rice this estate, and the present owners are the estate of Avery Smith, John Nathans and Dr. G. R. Spalding.

PUBLIC MEN.

Girard Borough and Township have furnished a goodly proportion of the public men of the county. Among the number have been George H. Cutler, State Senator from 1873 to 1875, Speaker of the Senate, then the second highest office in the Commonwealth, from the close of the session in 1874, and President pro tem. during the session of 1875; Theodore Ryman, member of Assembly in 1848; Leffert Hart in 1849; Henry Teller in 1860 and 1861; George P. Rea in 1868 and 1869; H. A. Traut, from 1883 to 1885; Myron Hutchinson, Associate Judge, from 1841 to 1850; James Miles, from 1851 to 1856; S. E. Woodruff, District Attorney, from 1853 to 1856, and United States Register in Bankruptcy for the Congressional District from 1867 to 1879; James C. Marshall, Prothonotary, from January 13, 1839, to November 16, 1839, and Samuel Perley, from 1851 to 1854; Jeremiah Davis, County Treasurer, from December 1, 1856, to December 23, 1858; L. T. Fisk, County Superintendent of Public Schools, from 1866 to 1869; Myron Hutchinson, County Commissioner, from 1828 to 1830, and James Miles, from 1835 to 1838; D. W. Hutchinson, Mercantile Appraiser, in 1877; William Biggers, Jury Commissioner, from

William Brightman

January 1, 1880, to January 1, 1883; George Platt, County Surveyor, from 1872 to date; John Hay, Director of the Poor, from 1853 to 1857; James Miles, County Auditor, from 1840 to 1843, and Philip Osborn, from 1864 to 1867. Senator and Secretary of the Interior Teller, of Colorado, was a resident of Girard Township while a boy. The Girard members of the bar are James C. Marshall, D. W. Hutchinson, S. E. & T. S. Woodruff, George H. Cutler and C. J. Hinds. Mr. Marshall moved to Erie in April, 1844, and the Messrs. Woodruff about 1872. Capt. Hutchinson was Chairman of the Democratic County Committee for several years, was a Delegate to the Democratic National Convention of 1872, and has represented the county frequently in State Conventions. In addition to the above officers, T. C. Wheeler was United States Assistant Assessor, being appointed under President Lincoln, and holding the office nine years. Mr. Osborn was keeper of the Marine Hospital at Erie, a State appointment, for several years, ending in 1883.

NEWSPAPERS AND BANKS.

The first newspaper was the Girard Free Press, started about 1845, by S. D. Carpenter, who took Horace Greeley's advice, went West, and became a prominent politician, issuing a book at the commencement of the war, which furnished the texts for numberless Democratic editorials. The Express, its successor, was purchased by T. C. Wheeler and William S. Finch, November 7, 1854, and the name was changed to the Republican. It bore the novel motto, "Independent on all subjects, rabid on none." In 1855, Samuel Perley moved to Girard from Erie, merged the material of his city office with that of the Republican, and conducted a paper for several years. From that date, several futile efforts were made to establish a paper until 1868, when the Cosmopolite entered the arena, as the successor of the Crisis, which had been founded at Conneautville, by T. G. Fields, under the auspices of Dan Rice, to advocate his election to the Presidency. Charles Stow became editor of the Cosmopolite, and infused such a degree of vigor and ability into it that it got a reputation the country over. After a brief suspension, owing to commercial depression, it was purchased by Jacob Bender & Bro. in the spring of 1872. In the spring of 1873, Charles Bender went out of the concern, but returned in 1876, and in 1880 he purchased the interest of his brother, who moved to Erie.

The first bank organized in Girard was in 1859, under the firm name of Battles & Webster. This firm dissolved in 1876, since which time it has been carried on by R. S. Battles, and C. F. Webster, Cashier. The First National Bank was organized in 1863, by Henry McConnell, James Webster, Henry M. Webster, R. S. Battles, John Gulliford and L. S. Wright. Henry McConnell was elected President, which position he filled to the close of his life, in 1871. James Webster succeeded him to this position, which he filled until the charter expired in June, 1882. R. S. Battles was elected Cashier, and occupied that position during the entire administration of the concern. A. W. Course was elected Assistant Cashier, and held the post till November, 1871. He was succeeded by C. F. Webster, who filled the position to its close. Henry M. Webster was elected Vice President at the retirement of James Webster, and occupied this post until his death. During the panic of 1873, all other banks suspended payment in currency, while the two banks located in Girard paid all its demands in currency on presentation. The First National Bank was in a prosperous condition, and had passed successfully through all the periods of financial distress. The charter having expired prior to the passage of laws by Congress, it was necessarily closed. It paid off its stock-holders 120 cents on the dollar, and all its indebtedness inside of thirty days.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The secret societies of the borough are a Masonic Blue Lodge and Chapter, and two lodges of the United Workmen. A Grange flourished awhile, but has been disbanded. Exodus Lodge, I. O. of G. T., was in existence in 1855; the Girard Lyceum was founded in 1855; a Young Men's Literary Association in 1859; and the Girard Guards, D. W. Hutchinson, Captain, were organized in 1860. The Union Agricultural Society of Girard was instituted as an auxiliary to the county society, July 15, 1856; had a fair that year, and continued to give annual exhibitions till the war. It is now defunct.

The old State line passes through the borough, running within six feet of the northeast corner of the Avenue House.

The adoption of Girard as the residence of Dan Rice had the effect of drawing other caterers to the public amusement there, and in course of time it became known far and wide as a "show town." Among the famous showmen who made it their residence were Dr. James L. Thayer, who started as an employe of Rice's; Charles W. Noyes, one of his pupils; Abe Henderson, Agrippa Martin and Seymour Pease, all at one period owners or part owners of extensive circuses. No less than five shows have been organized in the borough, viz., Dan Rice's, Thayer & Noyes', Rice & Forepaugh's, Anderson & Co.'s and G. R. Spalding & Co.'s. Dan Rice wintered his shows there from 1856 till the spring of 1875. Denman Thompson, the popular comedian, is a native of Girard Township. Frank Drew, Sr., the famous comedian, claims Girard as his home. Charles Stow, the editor and poet, has been a resident of the borough since 1867, and spends each winter there with his family.

BOROUGH OF LOCKPORT.

The post office name of Lockport is Platea. The town started about 1840, during the construction of the canal, and derives its appellation from the fact that there were twenty-eight locks within a distance of two miles. These had an average lift of six and one-half feet, and were used to overcome the rise from the lake shore plain to the valley of Conneaut Creek. The thickly settled portion of the borough is situated in the valley of Hall's Run, a tributary of Elk Creek, about four miles from Girard Borough, three from Cross's Station and five from Albion. The town owes its origin to the enterprise of Silas Pratt, who had the contract for building the locks and who owned the land. Foreseeing that a town must grow up along the locks, he started a store and built a church, hotel and several houses. Mr. Pratt failed in 1848 or 1849, and was prevented from fully carrying out his projects. The canal caused a considerable trade to spring up, and the town was once quite a flourishing place, containing two hotels, two churches, three stores, an oar factory, a tannery, foundry, planing mill, printing office, three blacksmith shops and a harness shop. Ezekiel Page, who invented a way of turning the blade and handle of an oar together, erected a building four stories high and 180 feet long by 80 wide. He became embarrassed about 1855, went South, and was found dead in the woods of Florida, having probably lost his way. The factory building was moved to Erie after the war, and placed on the Anthracite Coal and Iron Company's dock near the land lighthouse. A fire in 1871 swept away the hotel and barn owned by W. B. Andrews; some two years later the foundry was burned, and in 1876 the second and last hotel fell a prey to the same destructive element. These successive conflagrations, joined to the abandonment of the canal, seemed to have prostrated the town forever, but it has taken a fresh start lately, and bids fair yet to become a place of some importance.

Lockport was incorporated as a borough in 1870, taking in about seventeen hundred acres, of which the chief portion is farming land. Its population then was estimated at 500, but had been reduced to 345 in 1880. The territory included in the borough limits was originally a portion of Elk Creek Township, and, after the organization of Girard Township, formed its extreme southern part. The borough covers a space of some three miles from east to west, by one mile and a third from north to south. The farming land is generally clay, with some patches of gravel. Wheat is a sure and good crop, and all kinds of fruit common to the lake shore do well. By the appraisement of 1883, the value of real estate within the borough was $87,189, and of personal property $6,423. The amount of money returned as drawing interest was $7,628. The eleven mile level of the canal commenced at the head of the locks at Lockport, and extended to Spring Corners, in Crawford County. Crooked Creek, which empties into Lake Erie in Springfield Township, rises in Lockport Borough.

The borough contains two churches—the Disciple and the Methodist Episcopal—both built in 1878.

The Disciple Church was organized in the winter of 1877 by Elder Cushman, who became the regular pastor of the congregation and served it some two years. The present pastor is Elder Wright. A Sabbath school, numbering 100 scholars and teachers, is carried on, superintended by J. P. Sherman. Before building their church edifice, the congregation worshiped in Tyler Hall.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized about the year 1843, and soon thereafter a church building was erected about a quarter of a mile west of Lockport. This was torn down and partially removed to the village and used in the construction of the present edifice at that place. Prior to 1865, the charge was connected with Girard. Rev. N. W. Jones was pastor in 1881, 1882 and 1883.

The business institutions are a cheese factory (established in 1876), an oar factory, a tannery, planing mill, saw mill, cider mill, two stores, a wagon shop, three blacksmith shops, two shoe shops and a harness shop. The tannery was started by William Aldrich in 1848, and the oar factory by Mr. Rowley in 1860. There is a public school with two grades and two teachers. The town is unfortunate in its distance from a railroad, the nearest station being Cross's. It has had no hotel since the last fire.

CHAPTER XXI.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

THE township of Franklin was established in 1844 out of portions of McKean, Washington and Elk Creek, and named after the printer patriot of the Revolution on the suggestion of Hon. John H. Walker. J. P. Silverthorn was the main person in circulating petitions and working for its creation. The Viewers were Robert Porter and Elijah Drury, of Girard, and Thomas R. Miller, of Springfield. Franklin is exactly five miles square, and contains 16,896 acres. The population was 686 in 1850, 979 in 1860, 994 in 1870, and 1,020 in 1880. Franklin is bounded on the north by Fairview and McKean, on the east by McKean and Washington, on the south by Washington and Elk Creek, and on the west by Girard and Elk Creek. The only village is Franklin Center, which is also the sole post office. The assessment for 1883 gave the following result: Value of real estate, $364,547; number of cows, 595; value, $16,884; oxen, 62; value, $3,355; horses and mules, 280; value, $21,692; value of trades and occupations, $4,820; money at interest, $25,814.

FIRST SETTLEMENTS.

The remoteness of Franklin Township from the main lines of travel delayed settlements till a later period than in any other portion of the county. A few adventurous parties located on the State road when it was opened, about 1802 or 1803, but they found so little to encourage them and so much that was discouraging that they all left. From that date till 1829, when L. D. Rouse went in from Connecticut, it cannot be learned that any permanent settlement was made, and as late as 1835 the country remained almost an unbroken forest. During 1832, the colonists were William and Levi Francis, from New York; James P. Silverthorn, from Girard Township; Henry Howard, from Grafton, Vt.; and Messrs. Goodban and Longley, from England. To these were added, in 1833, Thomas Spence and Thomas McLaughlin, from Ireland; William Vorse, from Chautauqua County, N. Y.; Allen Mead, from Saratoga County, N. Y.; Ezra Milks and his son Amos, from Rensselaer County, N. Y.; Curtis Cole and father, from Unadilla, N. Y.; and Andrew Proudfit, from York County, Penn. Isaac Fry, from Vermont, and John Tuckey, an Englishman, took up land in 1834; John Loyer, from Eastern Pennsylvania, in 1835; Levi Howard, from Vermont, in 1840; and James B. Robinson, from Pompey, N. Y., in 1844. Levi Silverthorn also went in during 1844, the year the township was created. John Gilbert was born in Somerset County, Penn. His father moved into Waterford Township in 1826. John married Elizabeth Gregory on the 22d of January, 1846, and the young couple immediately settled in Franklin, on the farm where they now live. Among other early settlers were Messrs. Webster, Huff, Gibson and Perry, all from Warsaw, N. Y.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

The whole country is high, rolling land, with few of the ravines and broken ridges which prevail in the other summit townships. The soil is a clay loam, varied by a few patches of gravel. Some grain is raised, but the land is best adapted for grazing and stock-raising, in which regard it is unsurpassed. Apples and some other fruits yield handsomely. But little good timber remains, and that is fast being cut off. Land varies in price from $15 to $40 an acre. The buildings are principally new, and most of the houses are nicely painted. There are several bank barns in the township.

Being on the top of the hills which have their bases in Washington, McKean, Fairview, Girard and Elk Creek, numerous small streams take their rise in Franklin, and flow into the creeks of those townships. Those in the north are all tributary to Elk Creek, and those in the south mainly to the Cussewago, the dividing ground being about a mile and a half south of the center. Falls Run, the most considerable in the township, starts about a mile east of a cranberry marsh southeast of Franklin Center, and empties into Elk Creek, in Fairview. Below the cascade at Howard's quarry, the stream winds between high, steep and romantic banks to its junction with Elk Creek. The West Branch of the Conneauttee heads in the cranberry marsh above mentioned, and, after a short course within the township, crosses the line into Washington. The nearest railroad stations are at Girard and Fairview for the north, at Albion for the west, and at Cambridge for the south and southeast. The chief public thoroughfares are the old State road, extending across the township from Lockport to McLane; the Population road, on the line between Girard, Elk Creek and Franklin; the Crane road, from Cranesville to Edinboro; the Sterrettania road, from that place to Cussewago, Crawford County, and the Quarry road, from Franklin Center to Fairview.

MILLS AND SCHOOLS.

Franklin is without a grist mill, and most of the grain is taken to Sterrettania to be ground. J. R. Steadman built a cheese factory at the Center, which has been in successful operation since May 7, 1874. It is now owned and operated by F. T. Billings. In the southeastern portion, the milk is taken to the Wellman factory, on the Crane road, three-fourths of a mile over the line in Washington. The saw mills are the Mohawk, on the Crane road in the southwest, built by D. Knight, and operated about fifteen years; Sweet & Alden's, on the State road, near the Washington line, built by J. P. Silverthorn, Daniel Munson and Charles Billings in 1854, but suspended about two years ago; Mishler's, on the State road, three fourths of a mile east of the center, about ten years. Harvey Mills has a planing mill across the road from Mishler's, established three or four years ago. Steam is the propelling agent of the above establishments. Lawrence's cooper shop is on the Harrison road, in the southeast.

Franklin Township probably had within its limits none of the primitive subscription schools, for it was yet very thinly settled when the school law went into effect, and many years elapsed before the population was sufficient to divide the township into districts. The first schoolhouse at Franklin Center was built about 1840, or perhaps a year or two earlier. It occupied the site of the present schoolhouse. The schools are the Foy, on the Crane road in the southeast; the Eureka, on the same road, near the Eureka Church; the Silverthorn, on the State road, two miles east of Franklin Center; the Franklin Center (which is used as the voting place and town house); the Howard, at the stone quarry, and the Goodban, on the Sterrettania road. Besides these, there are two joint schools within the township—the Billings, used by Franklin and Washington, and the Francis, by Franklin and Girard. There is also a school in Elk Creek, which is maintained by the independent district, composed of portions of that township and Franklin.

CHURCHES AND GRAVEYARDS.

The religious societies are a Methodist Episcopal and Lutheran at Franklin Center, the Eureka Methodist Episcopal on the Crane road, and the Elk Creek Baptist in the western part of the township. At Franklin Center is a Union Church, erected by the people of that locality in 1868, at a cost of $1,500. It is occupied by the Methodist Episcopal and German Lutheran congregations. The former was organized in 1866, with twenty-six members, by Rev. C. L. Barnhart. The membership is now about seventy-five. The church is connected with the Lockport, Girard Township, Circuit.

The Lutheran congregation was organized in 1871 by Rev. Schaeffer, with ten members. Rev. Zahn succeeded. The membership is yet small, and at present no regular services are held.

The Eureka Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1867, with twenty-six members, by Rev. George Elliott, the first pastor. The church was built two years later, at a cost of $1,800. The class is now in good condition, and has ever since its organization formed a part of Edinboro Circuit, which includes appointments at Eureka, Edinboro and Sherrod Hill, the latter two in Washington Township.

Elk Creek Regular Baptist Church was erected in 1867 or 1868, at a cost of $1,400. It is located at the intersection of the Population and Crane roads, the former here forming the boundary between Franklin and Elk Creek Townships. The society was organized in 1866, with three members, by Rev. William Develin, the first pastor. His successors have been Elders William Hughes, Hovey, Homer Clark, Thomas and Pierce, the last named now having charge. The membership is about thirty.

The Catholics in the southwest attend church at Cussewago, Crawford County.

A graveyard is kept up at the old Christian Church, and some private burial grounds are scattered over the township. The people in the southeast mostly bury at Edinboro, in the southwest at Cussewago, and in the north at Sterrettania and Fairview.

VILLAGE AND QUARRY.

Franklin Center, or Franklin Corners, as it is called in the post office directory, is on the State road, eight miles each from Girard, Fairview and McKean, five from Sterrettania, and seventeen from Erie. The village was founded by Oren G. Wood, who started a store, and induced others to settle around him. John Tuckey, O. G. Wood and John Loyer were the original owners of the land. Franklin Center consists of two stores, a church, school-house, cheese factory, two blacksmith shops, a wagon shop, two shoe shops, about fifteen houses and probably seventy-five people. The village is the voting and meeting place of the township. A mail is received twice a week by gig from Fairview. A grange was started in 1876, but disbanded after an existence of some two years.

So little stone is found in our county that any section better favored than its neighbors in that regard is actually to be envied. LeBœuf, Franklin and Waterford enjoy the distinction of being the only townships that possess important quarries of building material. The Howard Quarry, in Franklin, near the Fairview line, has been worked for thirty years, and furnished the stone for the Court House in Erie. This was for a long period the only quarry in the township, but in recent years others of equal merit have been opened. Oil has been running out of the rocks at Howard's quarry from the earliest settlement, and in former times was gathered to be sold for medicine. Three wells were put down along Falls Run, in confidence that a large deposit of the greasy fluid would be found, but only a trifling amount was got, and the projects were abandoned.

CHAPTER XXII.

SUMMIT TOWNSHIP.

SUMMIT is the smallest township in the county, and was the last one organized. It was formed in 1854, out of the western part of Greene, the eastern part of McKean, and a small portion of Waterford. The name of Summit was given to it because it contains the dividing ridge between the waters of Le Bœuf and Walnut Creeks, the former flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, by way of the Allegheny, Ohio and Mississippi, and the latter into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, by way of the lower lakes and the St. Lawrence River. It has an area of 13,143 acres, and had a population in 1860 of 1,038; in 1870, of 1,047, and in 1880, of 1,047. The township is bounded on the north by Mill Creek, on the east by Greene, on the south by Waterford and on the west by McKean. The north line dividing it from Mill Creek is the only straight one, and has a length of five and a half miles; the east line, including its numerous angles, is over six miles long; the south line three and a half, and the west line about five miles. By the assessment of 1883, the valuation of the township was as follows: Real estate, $397,011; number of cows, 564; of oxen, 26; of horses and mules, 331; value of the same, $37,684; value of trades and occupations, $3,700; money at interest, $1,825.

THE PIONEERS.

The first settler in the township was George W. Reed, a son of Col. Seth Reed, who located about 1796, but in a few years changed to Waterford, where he died in 1847. A tract of land was taken up in the Walnut Creek Valley by Thomas Rees in 1797, but he never resided in the township. Oliver Dunn located in the western portion of the township the same year, but afterward removed to the valley of Elk Creek, within the present bounds of McKean Township. In 1800, James and Ebenezer Graham, with their families, came from Centre County and settled what has since been known as the Graham neighborhood. They were soon followed in the same vicinity by Eli Webster and Abijah Hull. Eli Rockwell went in in 1801, and Daniel Lee in 1802. Among other early residents were Thomas Rees, Jr., and John Way. P. S. Woolley made his location about 1823, and James Jackson in 1825. The latter, who was originally from Herkimer County, N. Y., settled in Erie in 1818, and went from there to Summit. The original settlers were mostly Americans, of the Protestant faith. Within the last twenty years, a large influx of Irish and German Catholics has taken place, and that denomination now numbers fully a fourth of the population. William Dunn, the first child born in the township, in 1798, died on the 14th of April, 1880.

RAILROADS AND COMMON ROADS.

The Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, opened to business between Erie and Warren in 1859, and through to Sunbury in the summer of 1864, runs through the west side of the township almost its entire length from north to south, entering from Mill Creek Township and leaving through Waterford. To reach the township it crosses the summit between Mill Creek and Walnut Creek, by a very heavy grade, passing into the valley of the latter stream at Langdon's Station. From there it follows the Walnut Creek Valley to the main summit at Jackson's, where it enters the valley of Le Bœuf Creek, which it follows to Waterford. The summit of the road at Jackson's is a little over 650 feet above the level of the lake. The distance by railroad to Langdon's is nine, and to Jackson's thirteen miles from the old freight depot at Erie Harbor. These were the only stations in the township in 1882. The main public roads of Summit are the Waterford Turnpike, running over the hills almost through the center of the township; the Waterford Plank Road, on the west side, following the valleys of Walnut and Le Bœuf Creeks, and the Edinboro Plank Road, which passes through its northwestern corner. The old road, by which the French transported goods from Presque Isle to Waterford, and over which the army passed that defeated Braddock near Pittsburgh, in 1755, crossed the township from north to south, and most of it is still used as a public thoroughfare. Summit Township has no villages, and but one post office. A post office was kept at Jackson's Station some years after the opening of the railroad, which was moved to Whiteford's Corners. After a lingering existence, it was abandoned about eight years ago, and again revived under the name of Godard in 1882. Another was maintained for a time at the White Church, on the Edinboro Plank Road, in the northwestern section of the township, but it, too, proved a failure.

STREAMS AND VALLEYS.

The only streams of the township are Walnut Creek and the West Branch of Le Bœuf Creek, with their numerous small tributaries. Walnut Creek rises on the western edge of Greene, a little northeast of Whiteford's Corners, runs diagonally across Summit in a general northwestern direction, and crossing the southwestern portion of Mill Creek, flows through Fairview into the lake at Manchester, after a course of about twenty miles. The West Branch of Le Bœuf Creek has its source on the farm of W. A. Bean, but a few feet from a tributary of Walnut Creek, and, flowing through the township in a general southeastern course, unites with the East Branch in Waterford Township, a little north of Waterford Station. Le Bœuf Creek, measuring from its usually reputed head, on the edge of Greene and Venango, to its mouth at French Creek, has a length of eighteen or twenty miles. The Walnut Creek lands are the cream of the township. The valley has an average width of about three fourths of a mile, and produces everything that can be raised on the lake shore. The Le Bœuf Valley is about a mile and a half wide, and the cultivable land is perhaps equally good with that of the Walnut Creek Valley, but there are numerous swamps. On the hills, the land of the township is best for grazing, and large quantities of butter are produced. The whole township is a good fruit country. The price of land runs from $25 to $60 an acre.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

The church buildings of Summit are one Methodist Episcopal, one Catholic, one United Presbyterian, and one of the Evangelical Association. The Hamlin Methodist Episcopal Church, on the road from Whiteford's Corners to W. A. Bean's, was organized in 1837, and the building was erected in 1852. This charge has always been on McKean Circuit.

The United Presbyterian Church at Five Points was organized in January, 1842, with some twenty-five members. The Ruling Elders were Oliver Dunn, Robert Dunn, Thomas Dunn, John Reid and Alexander Russell. At this time the congregation was designated the Elk Creek Church, and later as McKean.

John Gayley

The Rev. John J. Findley began stated labors with this church and the congregation at Waterford the 1st of January, 1842, preaching at the latter place three-quarters of the time. He was ordained and installed pastor of these congregations May 12, 1842. He remained pastor of the two congregations until November 22, 1853. His successor was Rev. Thomas Love, who was ordained and installed November 15, 1854, his time being divided, as was that of his predecessor. He remained in this connection with the two congregations until May 3, 1864. Subsequent to this period the two appointments were no longer together. This charge grew quite weak and was for a period without a pastor. The congregation was re-established in 1873, and Rev. G. C. Brown installed as pastor. Mr. Brown's death occurred in April, 1874, and the Rev. S. M. Black became his successor. Rev. A. S. Abby the present stated supply commenced his labors with the congregation in 1878. The church building was erected in 1848. United Presbyterian services are also held in the school-house at Whiteford's Corners, every two weeks. The congregation was organized in 1876.

Emanuel's Church of the Evangelical Association had its origin in a manner similar to Salem Church of Fairview Township, but at a little later period (1838). It was originally on Erie Circuit, but is now an appointment on Fairview Circuit. The church building was erected in 1863.

St. Matthew's Catholic Church building, near the Hamlin Methodist Episcopal Church, was erected in 1867, on land deeded to the society by George Reynolds. The congregation was formed at this time, since which it has been connected with the congregation at Beech Woods.

SCHOOL HISTORY.

In the early period of this country's history, vacated cabin houses and barns or stables frequently constituted the temples of learning. We have illustrations of this in Summit Township. Some two miles east of the present dwelling of Squire Webster stood one of these houses, which had been occupied by Abijah Hall and by him vacated, in which was taught a school in 1819 by a Mr. Huff. William Graham probably taught in the same building in 1818. Eli Webster was a resident of the same neighborhood, and his house was located on a cross road which intersected the French road. This dwelling was vacated and school held in it in the winter of 1820-21 by Moses D. Morey. The following summer, school was taught in the same building by Almira Drown. As yet there had been no regular schoolhouse built in what is now Summit Township. The next winter, Eli Webster kept a school in a house formerly occupied by John Highland, which stood on the present site of Hull's Corners. The summer following, Miss Almira Drown taught on Graham Hill in the same neighborhood. In 1822, the neighborhood built a substantial schoolhouse, probably within 100 rods of the former places, which was planked and weather-boarded, and in this house Squire Webster taught in 1833. In the winter of 1841-42, and the following winter school was taught about one mile east of the Webster farm by the venerable Squire before alluded to. The old planked and weather-boarded schoolhouse was attended by scholars probably from a radius of three miles, and for years constituted the schoolhouse for the territory now embraced within the boundaries of Summit Township. The township schoolhouses are at present the Hill, near A. O. Hill's; the Whiteford, at Whiteford's Corners; the Way, in the Way neighborhood; the Stone, near the Catholic and Methodist Churches; the Hamilton, on Walnut Creek; the Robinson, on the turnpike, at the intersection of the cross road from the Lake Pleasant road; the Murphy, on the turnpike, near the Waterford line; the Five Points, in the southwest; and the Hershey, near N. Hershey's—nine in all.

MILLS, QUARRY, ETC.

Summit Township had at one period as many as four saw mills on Walnut Creek, all of which have been abandoned. There are now two saw mills in the township, one near W. A. Bean's, owned by Joseph Topper & Son, and one near Jackson's Station, owned by Mr. Haibach. At Whiteford's Corners there is a grocery, schoolhouse and a neat collection of buildings. Close by is a favorite picnic grove, on the line of the railroad. The township contains two cheese factories, the Excelsior, near the railroad, on the public road from the Lake Pleasant road to the Waterford Plank Road, and Bean's, near the residence of William A. Bean. Both have been in operation about nine years, and do a fine business. The nearest stone quarry to the city of Erie of much account is the one known as Reynold's quarry, near the Catholic Church, now owned by Thompson Lininger. It has been in operation many years, has furnished large quantities of good stone, and an abundance is still left. Many years ago, Col. Norris gathered considerable oil as it exuded from the rocks at the quarry and sold it for medicine. This circumstance led to the drilling of a well on the premises, but, although plenty of gas poured out, oil was never found in paying quantity. In addition to the Reynolds Quarry, William Liddell has a small one near the turnpike. A small brewery has long been run in the north part of the township, near the Mill Creek line.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Summit has furnished but two county officers—both County Auditors—viz.: Eli Webster from 1829 to 1832, and John L. Way from 1849 to 1852, and from 1859 to 1862.

In 1821, James McKee was convicted of murdering a mariner near the brewery, and was sentenced to seven years' solitary confinement in the Philadelphia Penitentiary, but died after a few months' imprisonment. John A. Hans, also at one time a resident of the township, but who removed to Erie, was convicted of causing the death of his wife, at the corner of State and Second streets, in that city. He was sentenced to the Allegheny Penitentiary, served out his term, returned to Erie and died soon after.

PART V.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ERIE AND CORRY.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

CITY OF ERIE.

JOHN ABELL, meat market, 431 State St., Erie, was born in Columbia Co., N. Y. in 1839; when eleven years old, he came here with his people, who settled in Erie City. He began his present occupation with his father when fifteen, and when twenty-four, established himself in his present business, with which he has since been successfully identified. He was united in marriage, in Harbor Creek Township, in 1861, with Josephine, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Appleby, pioneers of Erie County. Mr. and Mrs. Abell have 1 daughter living—Nellie Laura, a literary and classical graduate; and a son and daughter deceased (John Webb and Zillah), who are buried in the Erie Cemetery. Our subject has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for 16 years, and a Knight Templar for 13 years. He and his wife are earnest members of the Presbyterian Church.

F. F. ADAMS, of the firm of The F. F. Adams Co., manufacturers of wringers, step-ladders etc., cor. of 15th and Cherry Sts., Erie, was born August 6, 1830, in Amherst, N. H., son of Levi and Lucy (Farrar) Adams; the former, who was a farmer and merchant, was a native of N. H., the latter of Vt. The father died when our subject was three years of age, lived with his mother till nine years old, and then in the State of Vt.; he was reared on a farm till he was twelve years old, and at eighteen built a steam saw mill in Waterford. For 4 years he was engaged in mercantile business, in Waterford, and this he sold out and moved to Erie in 1860, where he carried on a wholesale grocery concern for 1 year, in company with Johnson & Bro.; was also in bakery business for several years. In 1871, he established the manufacture of wooden articles. His first contract was for 60,000 washing machines. In Dec., 1880, the factory was consumed by fire, but in a short time was replaced by a more substantial structure, and the business became known as the F. F. Adams Co. The productions of the establishment are the Keystone wringers and washing machines, step and extension ladders, and all kinds of household articles; 200 hands are employed. Mr. Adams was married in 1854 to Martha A., daughter of William Lowell, a native of Jamestown, N. Y. To this union have been born three children: C. F., one fifth partner in the firm of The F. F. Adams Co. and Jennie F., at home attending the high school; Frankie, who died when six months old.

DR. CHAS. AICHNER, 1620 Sassafras St., Erie, was born in Switzerland in 1829. After absolving the Gymnasium, he took up medicine when twenty years old, in the University of Basle, graduated in the year 1856, and practiced his profession in his native land until 1860, when he located at Erie, Penn., and has since been very respectably connected with the practice of his profession. He married in Erie, in 1860, Louisa Blass, a native of Bavaria, who has borne him four sons and five daughters—Caroline, Charles, Olga, Emma, Oscar, Eda, Otto, Elma and Gustave.

GEORGE A. ALLEN, attorney at law, Erie, Penn., was born Dec. 31, 1839, near Pulaski, Mercer (now Lawrence) Co., Penn. He is the sole surviving child of Maj. Wm. and Mary (Steel) Allen, the former of whom died June 6, 1881, the latter May 28, 1856. Mr. Allen is of Scotch-Irish lineage, his ancestors settling near Carlisle, Penn., from Ireland in the year 1787. Shortly afterward they removed to Mahoning Co., Ohio, where his father, Maj. Wm. Allen, was born Aug. 21, 1803. After his marriage, in 1828, he moved to Pulaski, Lawrence Co., where he lived about 17 years. In 1843, he sold his farm in Mercer Co., purchasing what was then known as the McGarvey Mills, in the village of Waterloo, Venango Co., Penn., where he lived until the close of his life, excepting a period of about 6 years, during which he lived near Meadville, Penn. George A. Allen's early educational advantages were only such as the common schools of that time and place afforded. In the course of time, however, he spent 2 years at the Clintonville Academy and 1 year at the State Normal School at Edinboro, Penn. He still continued to pursue his classics and mathematics, under the private tutorship of Prof. Wm. Burgwin, a graduate of Allegheny College, and a teacher of rare skill and experience. Having studied law with W.

R. Bole Esq., of Meadville, Penn., he was admitted to the Crawford Co. bar in June, 1868. Shortly afterward he came to Erie, where he has since practiced his profession. In 1870, he was the Democratic candidate for the office of State's Attorney, and in 1872 he was sent as a delegate to the State Convention held at Reading, which nominated Charles R. Buckalew for Governor. In this year he was likewise appointed City Solicitor; he was again a delegate to the Democratic State Convention held in Erie in 1875. In 1878, he was the Democratic candidate for Congress from the Twenty-seventh Congressional District. In 1880, he represented his district as delegate to the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati, when Gen. Hancock was nominated for the Presidency. Mr. Allen was married, July 18, 1865, to Miss Phebe A. Burlingham, of Edinboro, Penn. She died April 1, 1881, leaving her husband with 4 children to mourn her irreparable loss.

WILLIAM P. ATKINSON, business manager of Herald Printing & Publishing Co. (limited), Erie, was born in the county of Durham, England, June 10, 1842, son of James and Ann (Patterson) Atkinson, natives of England; James Atkinson was a miner in his native country, and came to America with his family in 1844. Our subject, who was second in a family of 9 children, received his education in Pottsville, Penn., in which town he learned the trade of printer, and worked for several years on the Pottsville Miners' Journal. He next published the St. Clair Sentinel 2 years. In 1862, Mr. Atkinson enlisted in the 48th P. V. I., Co. G, serving 2 years and 5 months; was engaged in 5 battles, viz., Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chantilly, South Mountain and Antietam; while on detached service, he published a paper called the Kentucky Loyalist for 9 months in Lexington, Ky. On retiring from the service, our subject returned to Philadelphia, resumed his trade, and, in 1867, came to Erie City and took charge of the Dispatch office till 1879, when he purchased the Daily Republican; this he sold out in May, 1870, to J. E. Ashby & Co., in whose employ he remained in charge of the office till Nov., 1880. Mr. Atkinson then purchased the "Economy Printing House," which, in Oct., 1882, merged into the Herald office. Our subject was united in marriage July 17, 1867, with Caroline, daughter of Joseph Jackson, of Philadelphia, who bore him 7 children, 5 now living—Annie C., Harry J., Tillie E., Sarah J. and Josephine. Our subject and wife are members of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of which he has been Treasurer. He has acted 3 years as Select Councilman; is a member of the Masonic order, G. A. R., and A. O. U. W. Since 1872, Mr. Atkinson has published annually a very creditable directory of Erie City.

F. A. AUSTIN, Supervisor No. 1 of the P. & E. R. R., Erie, was born in this city Nov. 11, 1848; son of Augustin Austin, a native of Mass., and a silversmith by occupation. Our subject was reared in Erie and vicinity, and at twenty began merchandising. In the spring of 1872, he took up railroading as clerk in superintendent's office, and as such remained until May, 1881, when he received his present appointment. Mr. Austin was united in marriage in 1873 with Clara A., daughter of Jacob and Sophia Mooney. They are the parents of one son—Herbert D., and a daughter—Edith P. Mr. and Mrs. Austin are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

ELIJAH BABBITT, attorney at law and Member of Congress, was born in Providence, R. I., July 29, 1795; his father was a mariner, and during many years served as captain of sundry merchant vessels engaged in commerce between New England and the West Indies, and subsequently served as Lieutenant in the continental army during the Revolutionary war. Some time after the close of that war, he moved to the State of New York with his family, and there died, leaving his son, Elijah, in his minority. After the decease of his father, our subject went to reside in Northumberland Co., Penn. Having acquired an academic education, he studied law in the office of Samuel Hepburn, Esq., an eminent and leading attorney in the central portion of the State; was admitted in March, 1824, to the bar in Northumberland Co., Penn., and commenced practice there, where, in due time, he obtained a fair and increasing business. But thinking Erie, Penn., in many ways offered inducements more in affinity with his aspiring ambition, our subject moved there with a well-selected law library. By the aid of a spring wagon and team of horses, the journey (a distance of 230 miles), over rough and mountainous roads, was accomplished in nine cold winter days. That was before the advent of railroads. The same journey may now be accomplished in nine hours over the Philadelphia & Erie R. R. Mr. Babbitt arrived at Erie, January 26, 1826. He very soon rented a suitable office on the west side of French street (then the principal business street), near the corner of Fourth street, put his library on the shelves and hung out his law sign. Erie was then a town of about 900 inhabitants. Mr. Babbitt was admitted as an attorney at the first court held in Erie after his arrival, and was admitted at each court next thereafter held in the Sixth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Erie, Warren, Crawford, Venango and Mercer, and in due time raised himself to the position of one of its leading attorneys. On Nov. 28, 1827, our subject was married to Caroline Elizabeth, daughter of John Kelso (deceased), one of Erie County's pioneer settlers. She is still living. Mr. Babbitt was for many years a Trustee of the Erie Academy; also attorney for the borough, and subsequently for the city of Erie, and drew its charter of advancement from a borough to a city. In 1834 and 1835, he was Prosecuting Attorney for the commonwealth; he was a member of the House of Representatives of Penn. in 1835 and 1836, and was elected a member of the Penn. Senate for a term of 3 years in 1844, and while discharging the duties of these offices was largely instrumental in affecting and hastening the completion of the Penn. State Canal to the harbor of Erie. In 1858, the friends of Mr. Babbitt nominated him for Representative in Congress of the Twenty-fifth Congressional District of Penn., composed of the counties of Erie and Crawford; and, after an ardent contest, with an able and popular opponent, he was elected by a majority of over 1,500 votes. In 1860, he was, after a like contest, re-elected to the same office by a majority of about 2,500. Our subject was among the first (after the slaveholders had inaugurated their war for the destruction of the Union) to advocate on the floor of the House, the immediate emancipation of slaves, and their employment as soldiers in the army of the United States. His Congressional record shows him to have been a strict economist in all things, except in those designed for the speedy suppression of the great rebellion, all of which found in him a liberal and constant supporter. Hon. Mr. Babbitt is now in his eighty-ninth year, in good health, but retired from the practice of his profession. He survives every attorney, judge, law officer, physician and clergyman who were living in Erie when he arrived there, over 58 years ago. He is parent to 7 living children and has 8 grandchildren. In 1828, Mr. Babbitt aided in the organization of the parish of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Erie. It was the first organization (with one exception) of a church of that faith in Northwestern Pennsylvania. It gathered about half a dozen members, and a few others who desired to become such. Mr. B. has ever since been among its constant supporters. It now has about 360 communicants. In 1849 and 1850, our subject joined with others in advancing money to secure for burial purposes 75 acres of beautiful forest land adjoining this city, on which the Erie Cemetery is located, and in procuring the charter which dedicates it forever to the purpose for which it was purchased, without distinction of religion, class or color.

FRANCIS P. BAILEY, banker, Erie, was born in Pelham, Mass., Nov. 26, 1820, son of Rev. Winthrop and Martha (Stanwood) Bailey, former a minister of the Unitarian Church, native of Mass., latter of Me. They were parents of 8 children. Our subject received his education in Deerfield Academy, of which his father was Principal at the time of his death in 1835. On leaving school at the age of fifteen, Mr. Bailey was employed for several years as clerk in a general store, and was a partner in the printing business 2 years before coming to Erie in 1850. He was then engaged as book keeper for a foundry firm for a time; he also acted in the same capacity in Williams & Wright's Bank in 1852; in 1853, became a partner in that institution, and the style of firm became C. B. Wright & Co. This terminated in 1858, and Mr. Bailey, in 1860, became a partner of the firm of Vincent, Bailey & Co., which continued 5 years, when the business merged into the Marine National Bank, of which he has since been manager. Mr. Bailey was married, in Jamestown, N. Y., to Caroline Pier, who died in 1859. In 1861, he married Martha E. Pier. He has 3 children living.

ISAAC BAKER, of the firm of Baker, Ostheimer & Co., clothiers and merchant tailors, Erie, was born in Baden, Germany, Aug. 22, 1846. In 1848, he came to America with his parents, Bernhard and Barbara Baker, who first located in Girard, Erie Co., but subsequently settled in this city. Their family consists of Isaac, Henry and Emma, wife of Jacob Ostheimer, of the above firm. The subject of our sketch was reared to his father's business, merchandising, and at seventeen was admitted a member of the firm. Besides engaging actively and profitably in this business, he has also engaged in real estate transactions. He was married in N. Y. City to Bertha Einhorn, also a native of Germany. They have 2 sons and 3 daughters—Clara, Alfred, Bella, Eddie and Florence. The family are members of the Jewish Synagogue. Bauschard, Sr., was a native of Bouxwiller, Alsace, France; he was married, in his native country, to Miss Catherine Anna Hans, by whom he had 7 children, 5 of whom survive, viz.: Frederick, married to Mary Anna, daughter of Jacob Guckes, Esq., of Erie, July 11, 1867, have had the following children—Frederick Edward, Jacob, Catherine Louisa, Emil, George, Philip, Anna, Margaret Mary, deceased, and Anna Mary; George, married Frances Liechteinger, of Erie, Sept. 5, 1878, have 2 children—John George and William; Edward, married, in Erie, June 21, 1883, Elizabeth Leib, have one child—an infant; Charles, married, in Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 16, 1868, Miss Priscilla, daughter of William and Ann Jermin, have 4 children—Clara Anna, Charles Edward; Emma P. and Edward Wilmont; Henry, married, in Erie, April 9, 1874, Miss Mary Anna, daughter of Jacob Newbauer, who died Nov. 19, 1875; he re-married, in Erie, May 2, 1878, Miss Margaret, daughter of John Hartleb, have had 2 children—John Henry and Rudolph H., deceased. F. Bauschard is the recognized head of the firm of F. Bauschard & Bros., and to his supervision and financial ability the success of the concern is mainly due. He has been a member of the City Council, and was elected in 1882 a member of the City School Board, which office he now holds.

GEORGE W. BAXTER, manager of the American District Telegraph Company, Erie, was born in Fort Plain, N. Y. His father, Silvester Baxter, railroad engineer, and prominent in connection with that profession in the West as pioneer, was a native of Mass., and a descendant of the Baxters of that State. The subject of our sketch began life for himself as a telegrapher, which profession he followed for 25 years. He served in the U. S. Mil. Tel. Dept. during the war, and afterward in what is known as the Western Union Extension, and joined Collins' expedition to Siberia, Asia. After many adventures and hardships he returned to Erie in 1868, and assumed a position in the "Western Union," subsequently becoming its manager. This he resigned to assume his present position. In 1874, he was married, in Buffalo, N. Y., to Cornelia A. Hammond, of a pioneer family of New York State. They have one girl—Ruby.

CAPT. JOHN J. BAXTER, inspector of instruments and line repairer of the American Dist. Tel. Co., Erie, a brother of Geo. W. Baxter, was born in Utica, N. Y. He learned and followed blacksmithing until the breaking-out of the war, when he enlisted in Company 1, 28th Mich. Vol. Inf., and served 2 years. After the war he came here and engaged in the carpentering business, which he followed 12 years. He assisted in organizing Company B, 16th Reg. Penn. Nat. Guards, and was subsequently elected its Captain. He married, in Erie, Catherine Quien, of Erie, whose family came from Germany and settled here several years ago. This union has been blessed with 1 daughter and 2 sons—Annie S., Willie H., Gns. A. Mr. Baxter is an active member of the K. of P., and of the G. A. R., Post 67.

PHILIP A. BECKER, grocer and wholesale liquor dealer, Mayor of Erie, was born in Germany, April 10, 1835, son of Jacob and Mary (Bierle) Becker. The former was a high school teacher in Germany. They reared a family of 7 children (of whom Philip A. was the only son), and came to America in 1852. Our subject came in 1851. He received a collegiate education, and upon leaving college engaged as clerk until the fall of 1852, when he embarked in the grocery and wholesale liquor trade. In 1858, he was married to Eugenie L., daughter of Jacob Young, and a native of Germany. This union has been blessed with 2 children—Emil A. and Otto, both clerks in their father's store. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. In politics, Mr. Becker is a Democrat. He has been a member of Erie City Council for 9 years, and in 1883 was elected Mayor by a majority of 1,645 votes. He is a Freemason and member of the I. O. O. F. For several years he held the position of Secretary of the German Banking Institution.

C. R. BEECHLING, agent for Domestic sewing machines, Erie, was born in Hesse-Cassel, Germany, Nov. 7, 1836, and at fourteen learned cabinet-making there. When seventeen years of age, he came to America and located in Erie, engaging in the cabinet business until 1872, when he started in his present industry, with which he has since been successfully connected. Mr. Beechling was married in 1862 to Rebecca, daughter of Amos and

Isabella Nicholson

Mary (Greer) Stone, of North East. She departed this life the following year, and was buried in the cemetery at North East. She left one daughter—Carrie R., who followed her mother to the grave the next year. On Nov. 7, 1866, our subject was married to Mrs. Dollie M. Caldwell, a daughter of Calvin Poole, of Conneaut, Ohio. Three children have blessed this union—Hattie, Callie, and Rosetta (deceased). The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church, in which he has been chorister for 27 years. During the war he did active service in Battery H, Penn. Ind. Art. for one year, and was honorably discharged. He is a member of the K. of P., a Royal Templar and Chaplain of Post 67, G. A. R.

E. SHERLOCK BELKNAP, retired miller and merchant, Erie, was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., Aug. 16, 1822, son of David Belknap, a descendant of a pioneer family of N. Y. State. The subject of our sketch was reared to merchandising, and when twenty-five years of age he came to Fairview and engaged in the drug business, in which he continued for several years. He then was actively engaged in the milling business for several years. Mr. Belknap was united in marriage in 1863 to Adeline Nicholson, daughter of Alex. He married, in Erie, in 1868, Katie Herring, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, Oct. 26, 1847, and came to America with her people, who settled at Warren, Penn., where she was reared and educated. Eight sons were born to this union, viz.: William George, John Frederick and Fred (both deceased), Charles Frederick, Ludwig Rudolf, Arthur Russell, Edward (deceased) and Frank Garfield. Mr. Bier and family are members of the German Evangelical Church. He is an active member of the K. of P. society.

JOHN H. BLISS, Erie City Iron Works, Erie, was born in Fort Howard, Wis., Oct. 4, 1823, son of John Bliss and Letitia M. Ellicott; his ancestry on both sides is English. His father entered as Lieutenant in the regular United States Army in the war of 1812, and reached the rank of Lieutenant Colonel; he was engaged in some of the most severe battles of the war, and was wounded at Lundy's Lane; he died Dec. 22, 1854. Our subject was the only son that grew to manhood; he received his education in Cincinnati, studied civil engineering, and was for two years one of the corps who surveyed the Erie extension of the Penn. Canal; he afterward studied law in Little Falls, N. Y., and Buffalo, N. Y., and also attended one term of lectures at Harvard University; he was admitted to the bar at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1847. In 1855, he came to Erie City, where he has since remained; he formed a partnership with George Selden in bending works, and continued for 3 years. Then commenced with him the manufacture of barrels for the oil regions. In 1864, they bought the Erie City Iron Works. At that time W. J. F. Liddell was a member of the firm. Mr. Liddell has since retired. George D. Selden, nephew of Geo. Selden, since became a member of the firm. They manufacture steam engines, boilers, circular saw mills, etc. The Erie City Iron Works are a monument of which the proprietors and the city may well be proud. Mr. Bliss was married, Oct. 1, 1850, to Ellen, daughter of Dr. Christie, a Surgeon of the United States Navy. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss had four children, three now living—Anna, wife of Rev. S. D. McConnell, of the Episcopal Church at Philadelphia (have two children—Ellicott and Guthrie); Horace John (deceased), Louise, at home; George F., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are members of the Episcopal Church. The former's grandfather, Andrew Ellicott, laid out the city of Washington, D. C.; he also laid out Erie City. In politics, Mr. Bliss is a Democrat.

JACOB BOOTZ, Sec. and Treas. of Erie Manufacturing Co., Erie, was born in Weiler, Germany, April 10, 1828, son of Jacob and Ursheene (Tressler) Bootz, natives of Germany. Our subject was educated in Germany; came to America in 1840, and settled in Erie City, and early in life learned carpentering; he was the first boy acolyte to assist in the celebration of mass in this city, serving as such in both Catholic Churches for several years. Mr. Bootz has always taken an active interest in all that pertains to his religion; was one of the building committee of St. Mary's Church; has attended the Central Societies; been a delegate to the General Assembly; served as Pres. of the St. George and St. Boniface societies, and is Vice Pres. of the U. S. Catholic Society. Our subject spent 13 years on the road selling goods since his coming to Erie. He was united in marriage in Erie with Catherine, daughter of Joseph Geiner, of this city.

MAXIMILIAN BOSCH, drugs, etc., 1026 Parade street, Erie, was born in Schloss Neresheim, Wurtemberg, Germany. In 1856, he came to America with his parents, John and Annie Bosch, who settled here in 1866, and who are both buried in the Lake View Cemetery. After completing his literary education, Mr. Bosch sustained a 9 years' reputable connection as a drug clerk, then established himself in business, and has since been prominently identified with the drug trade of Erie City; he is making a specialty of proprietary medicines, such as his "Wadsworth's Annihilator of Pain." Our subject was united in marriage in April, 1882, with Frances Kiehm, a lady of fine literary attainments, who was born and reared in Milwaukee, Wis. They are both regular communicants in the Roman Catholic Church.

JONAS BOWERS, pier contractor and builder, Erie, was born May 8, 1830, in Erie Co., and is a son of John Bowers (deceased), a carpenter and joiner, who settled here about 1804. Mr. Bowers was reared to his business, and has been successfully connected in the building of the public docks and other city improvements. He was married in 1854 to Helen Dunlap, a daughter of James Dunlap, contractor and pioneer of Erie Co. To this union have been born four children—George, a builder; Frank, a student; Hattie, wife of S. Sullivan, in the dairy business in Erie; Mary, wife of J. Culva, in the oil business here. Our subject is an active member of the A. O. U. W., and has done much toward the development of the city; his father's family consists of Jonas; Isaac, a carpenter; Jane, wife of Martin Mellinger, an engineer on the river at Pittsburgh, Penn.

JOSEPH BOYD, painter, Erie, was born near Newry, County Armagh, Ireland, Feb. 10, 1835, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Bittles) Boyd, who were parents of seven children—Samuel William, Joseph, Maria, Elizabeth, John and Adam. Our subject emigrated to America, and came to Erie City in 1851, where he has followed his trade of painter ever since. Mr. Boyd was married, in March, 1864, to Matilda Kennedy, who bore him eight children, seven of whom are now living—William Kennedy, Robert, Charles, Joseph Pressly, Frank, Samuel Edward (deceased), Harry Wilson and Clara Matilda.

JOHN BOYLE, City Treasurer of Erie, was born in Lancaster Co., Penn., Jan. 23, 1821. At seventeen he engaged as an apprentice to the blacksmithing trade, in Dauphin Co., Penn., but after following this occupation there for a few years, came to Erie and assisted in building the steamer "Michigan," and after its completion engaged upon it as its fireman, doing ship's armor duty, but after a few years retired, and soon after established himself in the blacksmithing business. He subsequently returned to the steamer Michigan, where he remained four years. Later he engaged in railroading on the L. S. & M. S. Ry., but retired from this at the end of seven years, when he carried on the hotel business for 12 years. He was married in Detroit, Mich., in 1846, to Elizabeth Boyle, who has borne him two sons and two daughters—Margaretta G.; Henrietta, wife of Wm. Knoll, an insurance agent; John Edward, a journalist; and Joseph C., a literary student. Mr. and Mrs. Boyle are members of the Roman Catholic Church. The former has always been an active worker in developing the public and social life of this city. He served in the City Council, and has filled his present official position since the spring of 1880.

C. BRANDES, physician and surgeon, office and dwelling 124 and 126 East 8th St., Erie, was born in Germany March 29, 1819, son of F. Brandes. The Doctor acquired his literary education in Germany, and took the degree of A. M. at Brunswick. He also obtained his medical education in Germany, and in 1845 came to America and to this city, where he has since resided. Here the Doctor immediately began the practice of his profession, and has succeeded in establishing himself among the prominent physicians of Erie.

GUSTAV F. BREVILLIER, retailed manufacturer, Erie, was born Sept. 8, 1830, in Lichtenfels, Bavaria, Germany. After attending a common and a high school in Thuringia till 1846, and the Polytechnic Institute at Vienna, Austria, until 1848, he came to this country, where he expected to find ready employment as a draughtsman or civil engineer, but failing in this, he concluded to learn a trade. He worked as an apprentice and as a journeyman soap-boiler, until the autumn of 1852, when, in company with a large number of other young men he came West to seek his fortune. Arriving at Erie he considered the location a good one, and commenced on a very small scale the manufacture of soap and candies, at the corner of Holland and 6th Sts. After about ten years of unremitting labor, the business assumed considerable proportions, and extended over a large territory. In 1871, on account of failing health, Mr. Brevillier retired from business, and, together with his family, made a visit to Europe, and returned after an absence of four years. Mr. Brevillier was among the first manufacturers of Erie to utilize natural gas for heating and illuminating purposes. In 1854, he married Miss Johanna Stuebner, of Gera, Germany; this union has been blessed with nine children, five of whom survive. Mr. Brevillier held, in former years, many honorary offices in different societies, and has acceptably served in the Common Council and City School Board.

C. M. BRIGGS, of the Erie Ice Company, Erie, was born Oct. 13, 1829, in Rome, N. Y., son of Lyman and Asenith (Jefferson) Briggs, natives of Vt., who came to Erie Co. in 1844; the former died there in 1869; his widow still resides in Erie City. They were parents of four children, our subject being the only one now living. He received his education in N. Y. State, and was married, Oct. 9, 1851, to Sarah, daughter of Hiram Slocum, and a native of Penn., born in 1832. To this union were born four children—Anna, wife of F. C. Lewis, have one child—Charles; Harriet A., William S. and Ida H. Our subject is a member of the A. O. U. W., the K. of H., and is a Knight Templar.

WILLIAM A. BROWN, retired merchant, Erie, was born in this county March 20, 1803, son of Robert and Jane (Hayes) Brown, of German and English descent, the latter a native of Penn. Robert Brown was a Virginian, hotel-keeper by occupation, and came to Penn. in 1795, settling near the head of Elk Creek, in Erie Co. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject's maternal grandfather, James Hayes, was a Captain in the Revolutionary war. William A. Brown was educated in the subscription schools of Erie, and for a time clerked in a store. At the age of twenty, he embarked in business for himself, carrying on a general store for several years. He then received his brother-in-law, George A. Elliott, into partnership, which existed until the latter's decease. Mr. Brown has been a resident of Erie City since 1842. Besides his mercantile business, he worked a farm for several years. In 1842, he was united in marriage with Helen Ewing, adopted daughter of Thomas Reese. Mr. Brown has been Township Trustee and City Councilor. He and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church; in politics, he is a Republican.

CONARD BROWN, deceased, was a native of this county, born in 1812, son of Conard Brown, who came to Erie Co. about 1790. He and his father were traders and farmers, and early pioneers of Erie Co. Our subject spent most of his life on a farm in Mill Creek Township (now within the corporation of Erie City), where he died in 1869. He was married to Elizabeth Ann Barr, a lady of Scotch descent. They were parents of eight children—Washington, killed in 1861, during the war; he was Captain of Company I, 145th P. V. I., organized by himself in Erie County; Mary L., at home; Kate, wife of J. B. Cessna, of Bedford Co., Penn.; Elizabeth A., deceased; Conard, Jr., resident of Erie City; M. M., born in Erie Co. in 1852, he graduated from Rochester, N. Y., University in 1878, and at present is engaged in brokerage business in this city; Ella N., at home, and Hattie L., deceased. S. H. BROWN, Erie, was born in this county March 24, 1816, son of Geo. and Margaret (Brewster) Brown, former a native of Penn., of German descent, latter a native of Ireland. Geo. Brown was a farmer, came to Erie Co. in 1803, and resided in Mill Creek Township. He served his country in the war of 1812; was parent of seven children, three still residing in Erie Co. Mr. Brown worked on a farm in his native county until he was twenty-one years old, and then learned the brick-laying trade, which he followed for some time in this city. On Jan. 27, 1857, he married Mary Ann P. R., only daughter of John Rice, of Harbor Creek Township. She was born in Erie Co. Sept. 21, 1824. By this union was born, in Harbor Creek, March 19, 1858, one child—Rees R., a dealer in boots and shoes in this city; he was a graduate of Iron City College in 1877, and then followed book-keeping two years. In 1880, he embarked in the boot and shoe business with I. W. Gensheimer, under firm name—Gensheimer & Brown. Our subject and wife are members of Simpson M. E. Church. In politics he is a Republican.

R. B. BROWN, editor and publisher of the daily and weekly Observer, Erie, was born in Huntingdon Co., Penn., Nov. 9, 1837, son of J. D. and Jane (Porter) Brown, the former, who had been a school teacher, was a native of Ireland; the latter a native of Penn., of Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject acquired a common school education in his native county, and also attended the Cumberland Valley Institute, Penn. Choosing the occupation of printer, he served his apprenticeship in the Globe office, Huntingdon, and then taught school for several years; was for four years editor of the Brownsville, Fayette Co. Times, and in 1863 sold out and bought the Clarion, Penn., Democrat, which he continued to publish until 1877. In 1862, Mr. Brown enlisted in the 153th P. V. I., Co. E, and was promoted to Second Lieutenant; he also served in a Penn. regiment during Morgan's raid. In 1868, he was elected to the Lower House of Legislature from the district composed of Jefferson and Clarion Cos., and was re-elected in 1869. At the commencement of his 2d term, he received his party support for Speaker of the House. In 1873, served as Chairman of the Democratic State Convention; was Presidential Elector in 1876 from his district. Coming to Erie City in 1878, he bought the Weekly Observer, a paper started in 1830; he established the Daily Observer in 1881. Mr. Brown gives his personal attention to every department of the office, and publishes a paper satisfactory to its patrons.

DAVID BROWN, JR., tontorial parlors and bath rooms, Erie, was born in this city, and is a son of David Brown, Sr., who was born and reared in Germany, coming to Erie about 40 years ago. Our subject was reared here, and when sixteen years old commenced his profession, which he followed as a journeyman until 1880, when he established his present business, which he has since conducted very successfully, introducing in the year 1883 the fashionable Langtry bang into Erie City. He was united in marriage, in 1878, with Julia Byrne, who was born in Barrie, Province of Ontario, Canada, but reared here. Three children have been born to this union, viz., James David, Robert Frederick and Catherine Mary. Mr. Brown and wife are members of the Roman Catholic Church; he is a member of the C. M. B. A. Society.

G. W. BRUBAKER, contractor and builder, Erie, was born in Lancaster Co., Penn., Nov. 27, 1821, son of Benjamin Brubaker, who was a weaver and farmer, and settled here about 1829. His family consists of three sons and three daughters—Mary, wife of J. Evans, of Mich.; Levi, a carpenter in Fairview; Anna, wife of Walter J. F. Liddell, a machinist at Charlotte, N. C.; Peter, a carpenter and builder at De Pere, Wis.; Margaret, wife of Josiah Haybarger, of Girard, and G. W. The Brubakers were originally from Germany, and were pioneer settlers of Penn. Our subject was reared and educated in his native place. At nineteen, he began life for himself as a carpenter and builder, and, as specimens of his work, may be mentioned the Seventh Street M. E. Church, Wayne Hall, Academy of Music, Farrar Hall, in Erie, and many other public buildings throughout his county and State. He was married, in North East, May 7, 1846, to Mary Bliss, born in North East, daughter of James L. and Ruth Bliss (deceased). The former was a boot and shoe merchant of that place, and is descended from a N. Y. State pioneer family. Mrs. Brubaker departed this life March 23, 1849, in full communion with the M. E. Church, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery; she left one daughter—Alice. Our subject, Dec. 25, 1849, was married to Abbie H. Bliss, a sister of his first wife, who bore him six sons and three daughters—Edwin E., builder; Eugene Benjamin, commercial traveler; Frank B., commercial traveler; Fred C., butter manufacturer; Mamie E., wife of J. G. Wilds, a merchant tailor, Utica, N. Y.; Laura; Everett E., merchandising; Jennie L. and Willis Grant. They are active members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Brubaker has filled many of the municipal positions of Erie.

J. M. BRYANT, Collector thirteen years for Erie City, born in Franklin Co., N. Y., April 24, 1819, son of Philip and Sophia (Sheppard) Bryant, the former a farmer by occupation and a native of Conn., of Irish descent; the latter a native of Vt. of Scotch extraction. They came to Erie from N. Y. in 1834; were parents of nine children. Our subject, who is 5th in the family, was reared on the farm and educated at the common schools. He chose the trade of carpenter, followed it, with the exception of eight years spent in Ill., from the age of fifteen to fifty. Mr. Bryant was married in 1845, to Mary L. Mackenumber, a well-known school teacher of Erie City and County, who died in 1855, leaving two children, one now living—C. M., conductor of passenger train on the Nickel Plate R. R. Mr. Bryant's second wife was Mary J. Henry, whom he married in 1862. They are members of the First M. E. Church, of which he is Trustee. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the I. O. O. F. of long standing.

DR. J. BRYCE, surgeon and proprietor of Bryce's veterinary surgery on French street, between 4th and 5th streets, Erie, was born and reared near Brantford, Ont. He received a good literary education in the schools of Mt. Pleasant, and engaged in a preliminary apprenticeship of horse-shoeing; then entered upon the study of veterinary surgery and after a 3 years' course, graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College, at Toronto, in 1870. He practiced for one year in the land of his nativity, thence came to Erie, where he has since followed his profession. In 1880, Dr. Bryce enlarged his establishment by adding a livery, and has now as good a stock as there is in the city. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

GEORGE BURTON, wholesale commission merchant, and dealer in produce and fruit, Erie, was born in N. Y. Sept. 24, 1829, son of David S. and Maria S. (Brown) Burton, natives of Conn., of English descent. They were parents of eight children, of whom George is 6th. Our subject came to Erie Co. in 1843, and clerked in the drug store of his brother, John H. (who had come into the county some years before), till 1853, when the latter died. George then took entire charge until 1856, in which year he went to Iowa, where he carried on same business for nine years. Returning to Erie in 1865, he embarked in the grocery business, and in two years founded a wholesale grocery in New York City. This lasted also two years, and Mr. Burton's next venture was a copartnership in the grocery business with George P. Griffith, which terminated at the end of two years. Our subject was also in business with Capt. Ben Wilkins for six years. Subsequently he took up his present business in Erie City. Mr. Burton was married in Erie, in 1852, to Mary J., daughter of Capt. Thomas Wilkins. She died in 1877, leaving 3 children—Richard H., in Chicago, Ill.; George H., in Newark, N. J.; Mary A., wife of W. H. Price, in Chicago. Mr. Burton took for his second spouse, in 1880, Mrs. J. B. Brawley, daughter of Hon. G. J. Ball, of Erie City. Our subject and wife are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in which he has held the office of Warden and is now Vestryman. He is a member of the School Board; in politics, is a Republican.

A. P. BURTON, funeral director and general furnisher, Erie, was born in Erie City Sept. 4, 1836, son of David and Elizabeth (Erwin) Burton, the former of Scotch extraction, the latter a native of Penn., of German descent. David Burton came to Erie about 1810-11, and for many years was a wagon-maker, butcher, extensive dealer in cattle from 1863 to 1869, and was also a prominent coal dealer. He served in the war of 1812, and assisted in building Perry's fleet. Our subject was educated in the common schools and in Erie Academy. At the age of fourteen, he commenced life in the printing business, in which he was occupied seven years previous to engaging in the coal trade with his father in 1863. For two and one-half years he was clerk for Judge Sterrett in the post office at Erie. In 1876, he commenced his present business which he has since carried on with considerable success. Mr. Burton was married in 1857 to Susan M., daughter of George W. Precht, a farmer of Erie Co., of which she is a native. To this union were born six children, five living—Charles H., George D., Lewis E., Harry and William Ramsey. Mr. and Mrs. Burton are members of the First M. E. Church, in which he has been Trustee, Steward and Class Leader. Our subject was at one time a Whig, but is now a Republican. Has been Councilman of Erie City two years.

LEWIS BUSH, meat market, Erie, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, in 1824. He came to America in 1846, locating in New York City, but afterward went to Schuylkill Co., Penn., and carried on a meat market until 1876, when he came here and established his present business. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1851, with Catharine Schneider, who was born and reared in Northumberland Co., Penn. This union has been blessed with four sons and three daughters—Charles F., Aaron F., H. Astor, Elmer Louis, Mollie, Helen and Katie. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church.

JAMES CAMPBELL, proprietor of the Morton House, Erie, was born in Ireland in 1835, and came to America and to Erie City when fifteen years old, with his mother, his father having died in Ireland. He attended school in Ireland, and, on coming to America, those in Erie City. After being employed about the Union Depot for four years, subject embarked in the grocery trade, which he continued for four years. He then entered hotel business, opening on State street, but soon afterward, in 1866, built the Eagle House, which he kept till 1879, when he purchased the Morton House, which he has successfully conducted since. This hotel contains forty-one rooms. In 1857, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage with Mary, daughter of Thomas Shaughnessy, and a native of Ireland. By this union were born ten children—M. F., clerking in his father's hotel; Nellie, wife of Joseph Epley; James, Peter, John, William, Charles, George, Mamie and Libbie. Our subject and wife are members of the Catholic Church. In politics, he is a Democrat.

C. M. CARLSON, owner of the Nickel Plate Hotel, and dealer in groceries, corner 20th and Peach streets, Erie, was born in Sodermanland, Sweden, in 1836, and was raised there to the farming business. In 1873, he came to America, and settled here, and worked at the manufacturing business till 1877, when he engaged in his present business, which he has since successfully conducted. He was married in Sweden, in 1857, to Charlotte Erickson. They have one son and six daughters—Charlotte Amelia (wife of A. Anderson, of Erie), Clara Matilda, August C., Anna, Jennie, Nellie and Ada. Mr. Carson is an active member of the A. O. U. W. and I. O. O. F. societies.

DR. JOHN S. CARTER, druggist and apothecary, opposite West Park, Erie, was born in Gettysburg, Adams Co., Penn., June 13, 1808, son of Samuel and Nancy (Paxton) Carter, natives of Penn., of Irish lineage; the former was a mechanic. Our subject received a common school training, and commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Jackson, of Northumberland Co., Penn., and here he was engaged in the drug business for a time. In 1836, he removed to Erie City and clerked in the drug store of C. F. Perkins one year, when he bought the latter out, and in 1840 moved into the Reed Block, where he remained 19 years. His brother, who died in 1861, was a partner with him till that date. Since then, Dr. Carter has conducted the business in his own name, and has been continuously engaged in trade, probably longer than any other one now in actual business in Erie City. In 1859, he and his brother built a handsome store room, 4 stories in height, on North Park Row, filled with a stock of pure drugs. The Doctor was married in 1836 to Julia E., daughter of Squire John D. Haverstick. Of the children born to this union but two survive—Mary, wife of Hon. E. C. Ingersoll, of Ill. (deceased); and Samuel, a resident of N. Y. City, and Pres. of the Carter Medicine Co. Mrs. Carter dying in 1845, our subject married, in 1852, Ruth, a daughter of Rev. John Ingersoll, and sister of Hon. E. C. and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. This lady died in 1881. The Doctor consciously taking no part in politics, professes to be a Christian of the primitive order, but is connected with no society or organization.

JAMES CASEY, retired R. R. Contractor, Erie, was born in Ireland Dec. 24, 1814, son of Thomas, a farmer, and Joanna (McCarty) Casey, natives of Ireland. They came to Canada with their family in 1821, and there spent the remainder of their days. Our subject, the eldest of seven children, was reared on the farm, and received a good education. His first engagement as Contractor was on the Welland Canal, in Canada; this terminated in 1848, and he then secured a contract for the construction of the N. Y. & Erie R. R., and subsequently contracts on the N. Y. & Buffalo and State Line R. R., G. W. R. R. of Canada, L. S., E. & P., C. & R. I., and C. S. He came to Buffalo, N. Y., in 1835, and to Erie City in 1838. Mr. Casey was married, in Canada in 1835, to Mary, daughter of Richard Delaney, a native of Ireland. To this union were born eight children, five now living—Mary, wife of Richard O'Brien, agent E. & P. R. R., Erie City; Joanna, wife of Dr. Dunningan, of this city; James F., Private Sec. for his father; Very Rev. Father Thomas A. Casey, V. G., and Sister Mary Inez. The family are all members of the Catholic Church.

VERY REV. THOMAS A. CASEY, V. G., Rector St. Patrick's Cathedral, Erie, was born in St. Catharines, Ont., Jan. 1, 1846, seventh in the family of James and Mary (Delaney) Casey, natives of Ireland, the former a wealthy and influential citizen of Erie City, and widely known as a railroad contractor. Our subject received his education at the College, Niagara Falls, from which he graduated in 1868. He was ordained a priest in 1869, and appointed to the charge of the church at Tidouate, Penn., where he remained till 1870, in which year he came to Erie City to fill the position of Rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Rev. Mr. Casey is brother to Sister Mary Inez. All the family are devout members of the Catholic Church, and our subject has well proved himself a bold soldier for the faith, and stands in the highest respect in the whole community.

PROF. A. H. CAUGHEY, of firm of A. H. Caughey & Son, booksellers and stationers, Erie, was born in this county, Nov. 1, 1827; son of Andrew and Martha (Canon) Caughey, natives of Penn., of Scotch-Irish descent. Andrew, who was a farmer, was born in Penn. in 1792, and came to this county in 1803. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1865. His family numbered five children: three reside in this county. Our subject who is the youngest, received his education in Washington (now Washington and Jefferson) College, Penn., where he graduated in 1849. He first studied law in Erie and was admitted to the practice of his profession in 1851, but after a time, not having much inclination for the pursuit of Blackstone and his compeers, he abandoned law, and, entering the field of newspaper enterprise, bought out the office of the Commercial Advertiser, afterward called the Crescent, and latterly the Constitution, which he carried on successfully for five years. From 1855 to 1867, he was Secretary of the Erie Canal Co.; assisted in establishing the book store of Caughey, McCreary & Co. in 1864; was elected Principal of the Erie Academy in 1868, where he remained six years; and was Adjunct Professor of Latin in LaFayette College from 1875 to 1879. In 1880, the Professor re-entered the book business, in company with his son, which he has carried on ever since with much success. Mr. Caughey was united in marriage, in 1851, with Elizabeth, daughter of William W. Reed, Sr., and of English descent. By this union there is one child living, Reed, now married. Mr. Caughey is an Elder in the Presbyterian Church, and his wife a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He was Deputy Collector of Customs in Erie City in 1883. In politics, is a Republican.

CAPT. E. F. CHRISTIAN, of the Anchor Line, Erie, was born in the Isle of Man in 1834, and was reared to a seafaring life. At nine, he engaged in the English Merchant Marine service, remaining till seventeen years old, when he came to America, and went on the lakes. In 1864, he retired from this, and embarked in merchandising as a grocer and ship chandler, and did an extensive business for four years. He then engaged in vessel agency, insurance business, and invested vessel property, in which he continued till 1876, when he took up his present industry, with which he has since been identified. For several years during this time he operated largely in oil lands. Our subject was married, in 1852, to Elizabeth G. Moran, a lady of fine literary attainments, and a native of N. Y. City. To this union have been born four children, viz., Charles E. and Wm. L. S., manufacturers in Dubuque, Iowa; Miranda, wife of Benjamin F. Pierce, a hardware merchant of Erie; and Marion Josephine, a college graduate, now teaching. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Christian is an active member of the Masonic order.

COL. DAVID S. CLARK, retired merchant, Erie, was born near Shippensburg, Cumberland Co., Penn., June 10, 1816; son of George and Anna (Sterrett) Clark, natives of Penn., of Scotch-Irish descent, both deceased. Our subject worked on his father's farm until fifteen years of age. In 1831, he came to Erie City, and lived with his brother, James S. Clark, four years, and then followed mercantile business until 1852, in which year he retired, and soon after occupied himself in the building of the First Presbyterian Church. From 1860 to 1864, he devoted himself to oil refining in partnership with George Seldon and John H. Bliss. For two years following, he operated the oil refinery by himself. In 1840, Mr. Clark was elected Maj. of the 104th Reg. Penn. Militia, and in 1842 was elected by the votes of the regiment, and commissioned by Gov. Porter to the Colonely. Our subject, in 1839, was united in marriage with Jane Ann, daughter of Robert T. Sterrett, a prominent pioneer farmer of this county. The Colonel and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church (he since 1842); he was Pres. of the Board of Trustees three years, and in 1857 was elected Elder; was also Manager of the Erie Cemetery several years. In politics, is a Democrat.

WILLIAM CLARK, Capt. of U. S. Life Saving Service, Erie Station, was born in Denmark Feb. 15, 1838, son of Andrew Clark, a millwright. Our subject was educated in his native land, and, when a boy, was brought to N. Y. by an uncle. At the age of fifteen he went to sea, and was on the ocean fifteen years, eight of which he acted as second officer. In 1867, he came to Erie City, and sailed on the lakes for six years, and in 1877 was appointed to his present position. Capt. Clark has had frequent occasions of displaying his bravery, and that of his crew, in rescuing lives from drowning. In 1880, three vessels were foundering during the same dark night near Erie, and the life-saving crew, headed by their Captain, at imminent risk of their lives, succeeded in saving many nearly perished mariners. For this our subject received many complimentary notices, and a handsome Bible from the President of the Bible Society. Capt. Clark was married in Liverpool, England, in 1869, to Lucy Downing, who bore him two children—Edward William and Dawson. Mrs. Clark is a member of the Catholic Church, and Capt. Clark of the Lutheran Church.

H. V. CLAUS, grocer and wholesale liquor dealer, Erie, was born in Germany, Nov. 6, 1840, son of John and Hedwig (Kuestner) Claus, natives of Germany. The former was a school teacher who came to America in 1852. Our subject was fifth in a family of seven children, and received his education in Germany. He was on a farm for several years after coming to America; clerked six years in Philip A. Becker's grocery, and one year for F. L. Siegel. In 1863, he embarked in business for himself, and by industry and enterprise succeeded in building up a trade amounting to $150,000 per annum. Mr. Claus enlisted in 1865, in Co. K, 98th Reg. P. V. I., and served till the close of the war. He was united in marriage, in 1870, with Frances, daughter of Squire F. Curtze, who bore him the following-named children—Frederick, Adolph, Anna and Herman. Mrs. Claus is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

JOHN CLEMENS, manufacturer, Erie. Prominent among the enterprising men who have metamorphosed this once "sleepy borough" into the brisk, ambitious city of to-day, is John Clemens, Esq., President of the Erie Malleable Iron Works. Like a score of others who are now conspicuous for their identification with the leading business enterprises, his chief capital on starting in life was pluck and a progressive spirit, and his capital he put at the best interest. Mr. Clemens has realized practical results from a practical experience. He remained with his parents upon the farm until he attained his full majority, when he began business on his own account in Fairview as hotel-keeper and country merchant; here he remained eight years; thence he migrated to Girard Township, and engaged in general merchandise for four years, and in 1854 opened up as wholesale grocer in this city, which he continued for fifteen years, after which he became a prominent dealer in lumber, and finally, in 1880, concentrated his capital and energies toward the establishment and building up of the large manufacturing establishment over which he presides. Self-reliance and quiet determination, together with close application and steadiness of purpose, are leading characteristics belonging to Mr. Clemens. Our subject's father, John Clemens, born in 1760, was married, in 1801, to Mary Irwin, who was born in 1782, and died in 1870; he preceded her in 1822. Their family consisted of Letitia, deceased; William I., deceased; Sally; Robert, deceased; Mary Ann, deceased; Elizabeth, Amelia, Sophia R. and John Clemens, Jr., who was born Aug. 16, 1819, and married, in Dec. 1842, Lydia Hutchinson, born Oct. 18, 1822, by whom he had two children—Rinaldo Eugene, born Oct. 9, 1844, and Frances Eliza, died in 1862. Rinaldo Eugene was married, in 1874, to Anna Hayes, by whom he has John Hayes, born Feb. 6, 1875, and Hays Hutchinson, born Jan. 13, 1884.

F. A. CLEMENS, proprietor of the Fulton Market, Erie, was born in Germany Nov. 14, 1847; son of Nicholas Clemens, a weaver by trade. Our subject's parents came to America in 1856; settled in Erie and reared three children. F. A. Clemens, the eldest, received a common school education, and commenced life for himself, first at printing and then in the fruit and oyster trade, then adding groceries to his fruit and oyster trade at his place, 908 State St., Clemens Block. He was married, in Erie, early in 1868, to Eva, daughter of Joel Barnhard, who is connected with the Star Oil Co., and a native of Vt., of English descent, by whom he has one child—Lena. He is doing a successful business, supplying the wants of his many customers at reasonable rates.

WASHINGTON LA FAYETTE (LEVELAND, of the firm of Cleveland & Co., manufacturers of mill and machinery castings, Erie, was born in the State of N. Y. Dec. 21, 1825; son of Israel and Sally (Tuttle) Cleveland, of English descent, the former a native of R. I., the latter of Conn. Our subject was brought up on a farm, and received his early education in the old log schoolhouse. At the age of seventeen he received a certificate enabling him to teach country schools, a vocation he followed for eight winters from the time he was seventeen years old. In the summer months he worked on the farm. At the age of twenty-one he learned the carpenter trade, serving a regular apprenticeship, and worked at it till he was thirty-five years of age. While he was a resident of Steuben Co., N. Y., he acted in the capacity of Deputy Sheriff. When the oil excitement broke out in Penn. our subject started an oil refinery in Erie City, which business he followed six years; he afterward invested in oil lands, with moderate success, and then embarked in his present manufacturing interests. In 1851, Mr. Cleveland was married to Julia, daughter of Jonathan O. Stidd, a native of Penn. To this union were born three children—F. F. (of the firm of Cleveland & Hardwick, Erie City), Della F. and Jennie R. Our subject and wife are members of the Methodist Church, of which he has been Steward, Trustee and Sabbath School Superintendent. In politics, he is a Republican. Residence, corner Peach and 8th.

FRANK F. CLEVELAND, Cleveland & Hardwick, manufacturers, Erie, was born in the State of New York Jan. 11, 1853; son of W. L. and Julia (Stidd) Cleveland, whose sketch appears above. Our subject is the only son, and was reared in Erie City. For a time he acted as clerk in the Marine National Bank, and in 1880 embarked in his present business, under the existing firm name. In 1874, he married Catharine Maus, daughter of Louis Maus, who bore him two children—Gertrude and Robert Henry. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Erie City. He is a member of the K. of H.; is a Knight Templar; in politics, is a Republican.

JOHN COATES, proprietor of the Hydraulic Iron and Engine-repairing Works, Erie, is a native of England, born Jan. 11, 1829, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Beruley) Coates, natives of England, who came to America, settling in Erie Co. in 1832. Benjamin was a mechanic and pattern-maker, and was at one time foreman of Johnson & Sennett's foundry, the first in Erie Co.; and was foreman for Vincent, Himrod & Co. when he died in 1850. He made the first pattern for a casting in this county. They were parents of five children, three living—John, Samuel and Benjamin, all of whom reside in Erie City. Our subject completed his education in this county; is a practical mechanic, and, having devoted his whole life to his trade, thoroughly understands its fullest details. He was in the employment of Vincent, Himrod & Co. fifteen years; also worked for Sennett & Barr for a short time; he founded his present business twenty-five years ago, and has met with reasonable success. Mr. Coates manufactures water motors, and has two patents of his own, employing from four to six men. One of his inventions is "The Little Giant Organ Blower," a most perfect water power for operating the bellows of church organs. Our subject was married in Erie Co., May 28, 1863, to Lucinda, daughter of Joel Weigel, a pioneer farmer of this county. To this union were born five children—Clara, Gertrude Howard, Florence and Della. Mrs. Coates is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church, as also are Clara, Gertrude and Howard.

ROBERT COCHRAN (deceased) son of John and Sarah (Lattimore) Cochran, was born at Milton, Northumberland Co., Penn., Aug. 10, 1798, and removed with his father's family to Erie in 1809, and lived the greater part of his life in Erie and its immediate vicinity. In his youth he was employed as a clerk in the Land Office of the State, when the seat of government was at Lancaster, and, on its removal to Harrisburg, he continued in that position, his father being the head of that office under the administration of Gov. Snyder. He was thus early in life brought in contact with the leading men of the State, and in after life received from them proofs of their appreciation of his capacity and fidelity in public position, by having conferred on him important posts of honor and profit. He was Postmaster at Erie twelve years, being appointed through the friendship and influence of Pres. Buchanan, who, living in the same city with him in his youth, was an early observer of his fitness for public position. Mr. Cochran was a man of decided and honest character, and never encountered meanness and dishonesty without denouncing them in terms consistent with his own honorable impulses; he was a man of more than ordinary clearness of mind and business capacity, and in the various positions held by him—the post office at Erie, and the several useful local offices of his neighborhood—he always proved himself a capable and accommodating officer. He married Eliza Justice, a native of N. J., Oct. 20, 1822, and had nine children—Sarah and Rebecca, twins; Mary, Matilda, Martha, Eliza, John, Harriett and Henrietta; of these, Eliza and Matilda are now deceased. Rebecca married Dr. A. Thayer, and had three children—Frank, Hattie and Jessie (deceased). Martha married Edwin Willis (deceased); has two children—John C. and Edwin B., who married Miss Minnie Welden, of Battle Creek, Mich., and has two children—Jessie Thayer and Vera. Mrs. Cochran died April 19, 1863, and he died Dec. 9, 1869. The Hon. John Cochran was Associate Judge of Erie Co., and built and operated some of the first mills erected in the county; he had, besides our subject, one other son—George Cochran, who was born Feb. 4, 1792, and died on the Erie homestead when about thirty-six years of age.

J. R. COCHRAN, deceased, was among the first bankers of Erie City, Penn.; he was born in N. H. March 30, 1814, son of John and Mary (Butler) Cochran; his parents were both natives of N. H. He came himself in 1840 to Erie, where for a time he was engaged in the marble business; he afterward engaged in banking business in Erie City; he was a successful business man, of great energy and force of character, and was highly respected for his good morals and sound sense. At his death he left many friends and but few, if any, enemies; he took a great interest in schools, and was Director of Erie Academy for many years. For two terms he represented Erie County in the State Legislature, with honor to himself and credit to his constituents; he was in full sympathy with the Union cause in the late war, and after the battle at Gettysburg he left his business for the battle-field to take care of the wounded, to which many Erie soldiers can testify; he succeeded in accumulating a handsome fortune; his religious belief was with the Universalist Church; in politics was a Republican. He was united in marriage, May 5, 1839, to Sophia Curtis, daughter of P. Curtis, and of English descent—an amiable, Christian lady. This union was blessed with a family of five children, all are now living, viz.: Vinne M., wife of Henry D. Young; Laura, wife of James Bliss; Ella M., at home; George R., in the West; and Clara E., at home. Mr. Cochran died in 1878 in Erie City, where his widow still resides.

JUDAH COLT, deceased. This worthy pioneer, one of the 1795 men who ventured to Erie in that year to see what inducements the country offered, cast his anchor and spent the remainder of his life in Erie. Mr. Colt was born in Lynn, Conn., but his early life was spent in central N. Y., where, in 1789, he was engaged as a surveyor. In 1795, he was appointed Sheriff of Ontario Co., on its organization, by Gov. Clinton. In the summer of that year he was so much pleased with Erie Co., that he proposed to purchase a large amount of land in the triangle. The Penn. Population Company selected him as general agent for all their lands in the triangle, and in 1796 he made his location in what is now Greenfield Township. He opened a land office which has ever since been known as "Colt's Station." In following year, he opened a road from Lake Erie at the mouth of Sixteen Mile Creek (now Freeport), to his station, over which to convey supplies for the settlers. In 1802, Mr. Colt removed to Erie, where for thirty years, to the day of his death, he was an active leading spirit in building up the place. At his decease, he was the largest real estate owner of any resident in Erie. He and his worthy lady were earnest supporters of religion. At the organization of the First Presbyterian Church of Erie in 1815, Mr. and Mrs. Colt were among the most vigorous workers in that society. While there was no place of worship, Mr. Colt erected a frame building with a pulpit and pews, which was long known as the Yellow Meeting House, on Sassafras street. He was one of the first elders elected to that church, and this office he filled until his death, which occurred in Oct., 1832, after a residence in this county of thirty-seven years, and a residence in Erie of thirty years.

GEORGE P. COLT, of the firm of Ball & Colt, bankers, No. 720 State St., Erie, was born in Erie City, Penn., March 7, 1834; son of Thomas G. and Catherine A. (Kellogg) Colt, natives of Mass., of English extraction. Thomas G., a merchant, was brought up by Judah Colt, and received a good English education. He reared two children—George, our subject, and Marion E., wife of A. T. Loomis, a brick manufacturer of Erie City. Our subject acquired his education in Erie Academy and private schools. He commenced life as a clerk, in the private bank of Wm. C. Curry, of Erie City, at the age of twenty years, and continued with him four years. He then went to Chicago, Ill., where he was engaged in a bank four years. At the expiration of that time he embarked in the grain business, in Chicago, in which he continued six years. In 1857, he returned to Erie City, and associated himself with P. H. Ball, as the firm of Ball & Colt, bankers. He was married, in 1861, to Nancy I., daughter of Rev. Bennett Glover, formerly rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Erie City. Mrs. Colt was born in Erie City, and of English descent. Mr. Colt has been a member of the School Board six years. He and his wife are members of St. Paul's Church. He is Supt. of Grace Mission Sabbath school. Our subject's father was a prominent man in Erie City, and one of the first settlers. He was the first ruling officer when Erie changed from a borough to a city, and was immediately elected Mayor of Erie City. He was also a member of Council of Erie City many years. He was a regular attendant of the Episcopal Church. He died in Erie, in 1861, honored and respected by all.

GEORGE W. COLTON, Gov. Supt. of Pub. Bldgs., Post Office, Custom House, etc., for Erie City, Erie, Penn., was born in Elk Creek Township, this county, Dec. 3, 1819, son of Eli and Elizabeth (Deitz) Colton. The former, a farmer, was a native of Conn., of English descent; the latter of Maryland, of German lineage. They were parents of fifteen children, twelve of whom are living. Our subject, the eleventh, was reared on a farm, received a good education in the English branches, and followed farming till nearly thirty years old. He was appointed Clerk of County Commissioners, Erie Co., in 1852, remaining as such till 1863, when he was elected Prothonotary of same county; after serving in this capacity three years, he went to Washington, D. C., and clerked in the House of Representatives till 1868, when he was elected Secretary and Treasurer of Erie Dime Saving and Loan Co. (Bank) then went to Harrisburg, Penn., as clerk in the State Treasurer's Office and office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth till 1883, when he was appointed to his present position by President Arthur. Mr. Colton was married, in 1852, in Erie Co., to Mrs. Benedict, whose maiden name was Adelia Shepard. They have a pleasant home in Erie City, where they have been residing since their marriage, until Feb. 8, 1878, when Mrs. Colton died. In early life, Mr. Colton was a Whig, but has voted with the Republican party since its organization.

C. M. CONRAD, brewer and maltster, Erie, was born in Germany, Feb. 26, 1841. His father was at one time a Protestant clergyman in Germany, but concluded to join the Catholic Church. This being distasteful to his wife, a divorce ensued. The latter having a brother for some years a book-keeper in Erie City, came to America and to this city with her two sons in 1849. Our subject at that time was eight years of age. He had but three months' schooling in the common schools of Erie City; learned the brewing business and was engaged the greater part of his life in it. He took possession of the brewery in 1863. (In that year his step-father, Jacob Fuess, died), and since that time the business has been continually increasing, so that he is about to extend the brewery buildings. Mr. Conrad was married in 1867, in this city, to Dora Dieffenbach, a native of Erie City; eight children were born to this union, of whom Kate, Eda, Dora, Flora and Clara are living. Our subject and wife were members of the German St. Paul's Protestant Church. She died Jan. 29, 1882, in her thirty-fourth year, greatly beloved and respected by all who knew her. Mr. Conrad has been a member of Erie City Council; in politics, is a Republican.

JOHN CONSTABLE, retired contractor, Erie, was born in England Jan. 11, 1811, son of Robert and Harriet (Perkins) Constable. He came to America in 1833, remaining in Buffalo, N. Y., four years, and from there went to Fla., where he was engaged in the arsenal. At the expiration of a year, he returned to Buffalo, and in 1840 came to Erie. He at once contracted for the building of the Park Presbyterian Church, and along with Mr. Ramsey built also the "Scott Block." These buildings are among the most prominent of our subject's many contracts. Mr. Constable was twice married, on first occasion, in 1829, to Elizabeth Pettit, by whom he had five children, two now living—Thomas and Washington. George was drowned in the Ohio in 1874. Mrs. Constable dying in 1835, our subject married, in 1838, Mrs. Eliza (Culp) Reinhardt, a widow lady who had, by her first husband, one son named William. To this union were born four children, all living—Edward, Charles, Louise and Herbert. Mr. and Mrs. Constable are members of the Baptist Church, of which he has been Trustee. He was a City Councilor for several years; is the oldest member of the I. O. O. F. and Encampment. He is not at present engaged in active business, but assists his sons who are extensively engaged in their sash, door and blind factory. Mr. Constable had five sons in the late war. Thomas, one year in the navy, then in the 83d P. V. I.; John died from disease contracted in service; William, also in the 83d P. V. I.; Washington, in the 145th P. V. I., was taken prisoner and confined in Libby Prison.

MILTON COURTRIGHT was born in Susquehanna Co., Penn., in 1811. He came to Erie in 1846, with his wife and two children, riding in a carriage the entire distance. He at that time occupied the position of assistant resident engineer of the Erie Extension Canal, then building. After its completion, he occupied the position of its Superintendent, which he filled for several years. About 1850, he formed a partnership with John A. Tracy, and the firm became heavy contractors both in the U. S. and Canada. They built the Erie & North East R. R., and were interested in a number of mammoth enterprises. The firm existed about ten years. Mr. Courtright was one of the original and most active workers in building the Chesapeake & Albemarle Canal, and was for some years consulting engineer of the N. Y. elevated railroads. In 1862, he was the Democratic candidate for Congress, lacking but 500 votes of being elected, the district being at that time about 1,750 Republican. While in Virginia engaged in constructing a railroad from Norfolk to the Atlantic coast, where he contemplated building up a watering place, he was attacked with pneumonia, which resulted in his death Apr. 25, 1883. Mr. Courtright was educated at Gambier College, Ohio, and was by profession a civil engineer, ranking among the best in the country. He was one of the leading and most prominent citizens of Erie for many years, and his name was a synonym for honest integrity and square dealing. Among the older residents of Erie he was a leading spirit and his death caused a deep feeling of regret. The surviving family consists of Mrs. Courtright, Mrs. Eben Brewer and Mrs. Dr. R. K. Valentine, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

A. W. COVELL, attorney at law, Erie, was born in N. Y. Nov. 23, 1847, son of William W. and Ellen E. (Barber) Covell, the former a farmer and carpenter, the latter a native of N. Y. and of English descent. They came to Erie Co. in Jan., 1852, settling in Concord Township. They were parents of eight children, four boys and four girls. Our subject, who was oldest in the family, acquired his education in Westfield College, from which he graduated in 1864. At one time he followed farming pursuits and learned the carpenter trade, but preferring the profession of law, he commenced study with Hon. C. O. Bowman & Baker, Corry, this county. In 1870, he was admitted to the practice of law in Erie Co.; in 1877, to the U. S. Court and the Supreme Court. His examiners were Col. Grant, J. Ross Thompson, C. B. Curtis and Wm. Benson. In 1871, Mr. Covell was married to Mabel H., of English extraction, daughter of J. H. Rathburn, Warden of Erie County Prison. Mrs. Covell is a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church.

MAJ. JOHN CRAINE, wholesale and retail crockery merchant of Erie, was born in County Cork, Ireland, on June 6, 1842; when ten years old he came to America with his people, who settled in Vermont, where he learnt the wood and marble finishing trade. In 1857, he went to Milwaukee, Wis., following the same business there until 1863, when he removed to Chicago, Ill., where he remained until 1871. In consequence of the great fire, the Burdett Organ Co. removed to Erie, and he came with them, and has since been prominently identified with different industries here. In 1880, he ceased working at his trade, and engaged in the crockery business; he has also successfully speculated in real estate, both here and in Chicago. Mr. Craine was united in marriage in Milwaukee, in 1863, with Margarette Hayes, a well-educated lady, born in Limerick, Ireland, but reared in this country. This union has been blessed with a family of four sons and two daughters, viz., C. George, manager of the firm of Hanlon & Craine; William, in mercantile business; Mary Frances, a student at Chestnut Hill College; Julia, John, Jr., and Owen. Mr. and Mrs. Craine are members and regular communicants of the Roman Catholic Church. Since locating here, our subject has been actively engaged in developing the public, social and industrial life of Erie; he has also taken an active part in military affairs, and was commissioned Capt. of the Sheridan Guards by Gov. Hartranft in 1876, serving in that capacity until the Pittsburgh riots, when he was promoted to the position of Major of the Guards.

C. G. CRAINE, of the firm of Hannon & Craine, dealers in china, glassware and cutlery, Erie, was born Dec. 27, 1863, in Milwaukee, Wis.; son of Maj. John and Margaret (Hayes) Craine, natives of Wis., of Irish descent. Our subject received a good English education, and in 1881 embarked in his present business. Mr. Hannon, our subject's partner, has been a resident of Erie for many years; the firm are doing a good trade, and have been successful in business. Mr. Craine is a member of the Catholic Church, and one of the rising young men of the city.

EDWARD CRANCH, M. D., homœopathic physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in New York City, Oct. 16, 1851, son of John and Charlotte (Appleton) Cranch, the former a native of Washington, D. C., the latter of Baltimore, Md., both of English descent. John Cranch was by profession an artist, and his father, William Cranch, was Chief Justice of the District of Columbia for fifty years, having been appointed by his uncle, Pres. John Adams. Our subject, whose parents resided many years in Washington City, obtained his classical education there, and graduated from Columbia University in 1871, with degree of Phil. B.; he also graduated from the Medical Department of Georgetown University in 1873, and was a regular graduate of New York Homœopathic College in 1875. The Doctor commenced the practice of medicine in 1871, and the same year enlisted in the U. S. Army, and was at once appointed Hospital Steward, serving in the Surgeon General's office three years, then for one year he was in charge of the Homœopathic Hospital of New York. In that city he practiced till 1875, when he came to Erie City, where he has since resided. In 1875, our subject was married, at Washington, to Rouette F. Hunt, born near Boston, Mass., of English descent. By this union are three children—Charles E., Arthur G. and Raymond G. Dr. and Mrs. Cranch are members of the New Church (Swedenborgian), of Washington, D. C. In politics, he is a Republican. He is Treasurer of the International Hahnemannian Association, and member of the American Institute of Homœopathy.

CAPT. A. F. CRANE, Inspector of Erie City water works, was born in this county, the 18th of June, 1835, son of Elihu and Nancy (Carlin) Crane, former a native of Mass., of Scotch descent; latter, a native of Penn., of Irish extraction. Elihu Crane, a farmer, came to Erie Co. in 1798; enlisted in the war of 1812; he was parent of seven children; his father, Elihu Crane, served all through the Revolutionary war, and was wounded while Sergeant under Gen. Washington. Our subject, fourth in the family, was educated in the common schools of Erie City. In 1855, he was appointed to superintend the building of the Pittsburgh & Erie R. R.; was married, Jan. 8, 1859, to Laura E. Stearns, daughter of Sidney Stearns, of Fredonia, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. In 1859, was made Supt. for O. O. Ticknor & Co., lumber dealers in Conneautville, Crawford Co., till 1862. He enlisted the 20th of Aug., 1862, at Conneautville, Co. H, 145th P. V. I.; was engaged in the battle of Antietam and other engagements; was wounded on the 20th of Oct., 1862, in right limb at Harper's Ferry, while on picket duty; again wounded on Dec. 12, 1862, in the charge on Mary's Heights, Fredericksburg, and lost his left limb. It was amputated in the field hospital Feb. 16, 1863, and again amputated at Campbell Hospital, D. C.; was discharged from there Feb. 16, 1863; engaged in boating for own account in 1863 and 1864; the spring of 1865 was employed as Supt. of Rawl Richards & Co. line of canal boats for shipping coal and iron. Resided at Sharon, Mercer Co.; was delegate to Republican Co. Convention at Mercer, Penn., in 1866. In 1867, was appointed Supt. of Conneautville and Lockport Divisions of Erie Extension Canal; was a resident of Springboro; remained there till close of canal; 1871, was elected Burgess of Springboro, Crawford Co.; twice chosen delegate to Crawford Co. Convention. In the year 1872, was candidate for Sheriff of Crawford Co. on Republican ticket; was beaten by Orlando Reed by forty-four votes. In 1872, moved to Erie; was foreman of construction of Erie Rolling Mills. The spring of 1873 was appointed Supt. of Rawl Nobles blast furnace at Erie. In 1875, was Inspector of Customs at port of Erie. In 1877, was made inspector of Erie City Water Department, the position he now holds. His wife, Laura E., died Nov. 15, 1880, leaving four children, three sons and one daughter—Gertrude M., wife of L. L. Bruder; Andrew F., Reed and Charles. Capt. Crane is an active Republican.

JAMES P. CRAWFORD, County Treasurer, Erie, was born in North East, Penn., Dec 21, 1837, son of James and Mary (Rogers) Crawford, the former a native of Penn., of Dutch descent, the latter of Vermont, of English lineage. James Crawford, Sr., was a farmer and miller; he was parent of eleven children, five surviving; his father was a soldier in the war of 1812; his mother is now living in North East. Our subject was reared on the farm, and received a good education. At the age of sixteen he went to North East and clerked till 1860, when he came to Erie City and re-engaged as Clerk. In 1861, he enlisted in the 16th Penn. Cav., Company C; was appointed Quartermaster-Sergeant. In 1863, was made Orderly Sergeant, serving as such until Sept., 1864, when he was promoted to Second Lieut.; and Dec. 12, 1864, to First Lieut. He was wounded at Ream's Station Aug. 25, 1864, and was discharged July 24, 1865. Mr. Crawford was married, Sept. 1, 1869, to Helen J., daughter of M. B. Mills, a pioneer farmer of Erie Co. She is a native of N. Y. State, of English descent. To this union were born J. Mills, Allison D., Harry C. and Helen M. Mrs. Crawford is a member of the Methodist Church. Our subject acted as clerk in the Prothonotary's office in Erie City from 1873 till 1880, and was elected to his present position in 1880. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN CRONENBERGER, grocer, Erie, was born in Rhine-Pfalz, Germany, Feb. 8, 1828, and came to America with his people in 1833. His parents, John and Barbara Cronenberger, are buried in the Erie Cemetery. Their children were Jacob, Barbara, Elizabeth, Peter, Cornelius, Charles, Joseph (deceased); Catharine, Andrew and John, Jr., are living. The subject of our sketch learned the trade of molder here, and followed it for 16 years. In 1857, he engaged in merchandising, and has been very successfully connected with it here since. He married here, in 1851, Elizabeth Loesch, also a native of Rhine-Pfalz. They have four sons and six daughters living—George, Mary, Louisa, Emma, Minnie, William, John, Lizzie, Annie and Charles, and have buried their second son—Antony—in Erie Cemetery.

P. CROUCH, of the firm of Crouch Bros., proprietors of Merchant Mills, Erie City, was born in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn., May 31, 1827; son of Ansel and Nancy (May) Crouch, the former born in Vt., the latter in N. H., both of Welsh descent; his father was a teacher in early life, in later life was a farmer; he came from Clinton Co., N. Y., to Erie Co., Penn., in 1820, and raised a family of seven children. Subject was the second child and oldest son; he received a common school education; at the age of fourteen, he had the honor of carrying the first mail bag that passed from Erie to Edinboro, which contained but one letter. When quite young, he learned the trade of miller, which he continued to work at till 1857, when he came to Erie. In 1858, he and his brother, O. E., purchased the Fairmount Mills on Eighth street, between German and Holland, where they continued the business which increased to such an extent that, in 1871, they found it necessary to build, and accordingly erected a merchant mill, corner of R. R. and Holland streets. Our subject and brother are energetic business men, employing on an average about fifteen men. Mr. Crouch served four years as Select Councilman of Erie City, three years of which time he was President of the Board; served for sixteen consecutive years as a member of the School Board of Erie City, of which he was President most of the time. He was married in Ohio, in 1850, to Annie F., daughter of Judson Landon, and of English descent. Mr. and Mrs. Crouch have five daughters—Emma, wife of W. S. Jenkins, an attorney in Buffalo, N. Y.; Julia; Flora and Hattie, both attending the Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., in the senior class, and Mary, a student in the High School, Erie. Mrs. Crouch is a member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Crouch started in business for himself without a dollar, and the first $1,000 he earned, he generously gave to his father, who had failed in business. In politics, he is a Republican.

THOMAS CROWLEY (deceased), late Chief of Police, Erie, was born in East Mill Creek, this county, May 24, 1830; son of Michael and Mary (O'Neal) Crowley, the former a native of Ireland, and the latter of Erie County, N. Y., of Irish extraction. Michael Crowley, who was a farmer, emigrated from Ireland to America, coming to Erie County and settling in Mill Creek Township in 1826; here he died Aug. 28, 1854; he was the parent of two children, of whom Thomas is the oldest. Mary, the youngest, was accidentally killed while riding to school on a wagon with a neighbor. Our subject attended the common schools and Erie Academy; was reared on a farm, and followed that pursuit till 1860, when he went into the oil business for three years. Being elected Chief of Police of Erie City, he served as such from 1863 to 1870; then as private detective from 1870 to 1876, and seven months at the "Centennial" as a detective. In 1877, was re-elected Chief of Police. Mr. Crowley was twice married, and had one child by each wife, viz., Michael, engineer on P. & E. R. R., and Clara Bell, at the graded school, Erie. In politics, our subject was a Democrat.

A. J. CULBERTSON, foreman painter in the E. & P. R. R. shops, Erie, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 24, 1832, son of James and Betsy (Huntley) Culbertson, former a native of Penn., of Scotch descent, latter of Vt. of English lineage. James Culbertson followed the occupation of merchant tailor for many years in Erie City. Our subject came to Erie with his parents in 1841, received his education in Erie Academy and learned his trade, that of painter. He was engaged in mercantile business from 1856 to 1859; went to Colorado in 1861, remaining three years, then to Montana for three years; then commenced work in the E. & P. R. R. shops, this city. He has been now fifteen years so employed, eleven as foreman. Mr. Culbertson was united in marriage, in 1855, with Laura R. Applebee, daughter of Thomas Applebee, of Harbor Creek Township, this county. In politics, our subject is a Republican.

SAMUEL CUMMINS, contractor and builder, Erie, was born April 5, 1819, in this city; son of James and Mary Cummins, natives of Penn., parents of eight children, four now living—George; Mary, wife of J. Lytle (have eight children); Nancy, wife of J. Cronenberg (have four children); and James. The parents came to this county in 1812-13, settling in Erie City, where they died. Our subject was brought up as a mason, contractor and builder, which occupation he followed for many years; was also proprietor of a grocery, from which he is now retired. Mr. Cummins was married, July 14, 1842, to Mary M., daughter of Daniel Hathaway, a native of N. Y. State and carpenter by trade, who came to Erie in 1832, and was the father of the following children: Edward, C. N., Jane (now Mrs. Yager), Mary M. (now Mrs. Cummins) and Sarah (now Mrs. L. Herd). Our subject and wife had a family of four children, all deceased, viz.: Mary M., Eliza J., Josephine L. and Annie M. The last named was the wife of H. G. Warner; she died October 30, 1880, leaving five children—Mattie, Josephine, Eliza M., Henry C. and Samuel G. Mr. Cummins is a member of the Masonic order; has filled the position of Councilman.

WILLIAM C. CURRY was a native of Oil Creek Township, Crawford Co., Penn. He came to Erie when but sixteen years of age and entered the store of his uncle, Mr. Chase, where he remained a short time as clerk. In 1837, he took a position in the branch bank of the U. S. at this place, first as teller and later as cashier, which position he held until the close of the institution. In the year 1840, when the parent institution in Philadelphia failed, he was appointed to settle the affairs of the branch in this city, in which position he remained until the final close of the institution. He then went to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he entered into partnership with Joseph Hill, Esq., in the banking business, in which he remained four years. His success in business there was such that he would perhaps have remained in that city during life, but for the continued ill health of himself and family. Returning to Erie in 1848, he commenced the banking business with M. Courtright, Esq., which they carried on until the passage of the National Banking Law, when with others he organized the Second National Bank of Erie, in which he was principal stockholder and cashier up to the time of his death. He was a courteous, pleasant gentleman, possessing remarkably sound judgment in commercial matters; and through his ability as a financier won for himself a large fortune and secured a wide and enviable reputation. Mr. Curry was married, June 16, 1839, to Miss Jones, of Erie, by whom he had three children—Frances, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of R. W. Russell, of Erie, and Charles, deceased. Mrs. Curry died in Erie in Feb., 1865. Mr. Curry was killed in the accident on the Hudson River R. R. Feb. 6, 1871.

HON. CARLTON B. CURTIS (deceased) was born in Madison Co., N. Y., Dec. 17, 1811. Having received an academic education, his talents and taste led him to select the legal profession, and he entered the office of the late Judge Mullet, of N. Y. Soon after, he moved to Pennsylvania, and there continued his studies with D. C. Barrett, of Erie, until his admission to the bar. In 1834, he settled in Warren, Penn., and engaged in the practice of his profession. In some features of legal knowledge he was almost without superiors, while his reading was so extensive and so carefully conducted that few jurists had a more profound knowledge of the general law. In 1836, then but twenty-five years of age, he was sent to the Legislature, and in 1837, also 1838, he was re-elected to the same position. During his term of service he warmly espoused the cause of common schools. Upon leaving the Legislature, he resumed the practice of his profession, and was thus occupied until 1850, when he was elected to Congress on the Democratic ticket. Upon the repeal of the Missouri Compromise Act, in 1855, he changed his allegiance to his former party, and became a champion of Republican principles. In 1861, when the President issued his call for troops, he disregarded his private interests, and directed his energies to the recruiting of soldiers for the Union. His efforts created the 58th Regt. of Penn. Vols., over which organization he was appointed Colonel. The regiment was soon ordered to the front, and did efficient service in N. C. for a lengthy period. On account of ill-health, in 1863 our subject resigned and returned home. Regaining his health after a time, he resumed practice at the bar with great success and profit. In 1872, he was unanimously nominated and elected to the Forty-third Congress, where he made an honorable record, and served with distinction as a member of the Committee on Territories and war expenditures. He was renominated for the Forty-fourth Congress in the "tidal wave" year of 1874, but was defeated by Dr. A. G. Egbert, by a majority of eleven on a total vote of 20,765. He was one of the founders of the First National Bank of Erie, and one of the chief organizers and builders of the Dunkirk & Venango Railroad, and in all public enterprises he was ready to co-operate. He was married, in 1835, to Sarah Ann Sargent, of Warren, Penn., and died March 17, 1883. His remains were interred in the family lot at Warren, Penn.

JOHN C. CURTIS, train dispatcher for the P. & E. R. R., was born in Detroit, Mich., in 1853, and is a son of Joseph and Maria A. Curtis, who came to this country 50 years ago. Our subject came to Erie with his people in 1857 and was reared to his present occu-patation. At sixteen he engaged with the P. & E. R. R. Co. as a telegraph operator, continuing as such until 1875, when he was appointed to his present position. Mr. Curtis was married, in 1880, to Maria E. Brennan, of Buffalo, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Brennan, natives of Ireland. They have no children. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are members of the Roman Catholic Church. He belongs to the C. M. B. Association.

SQUIRE FREDERICK CURTZE, retired, Erie, was born in the Principality of Waldeck, Germany, March 11, 1813, son of Rev. Ludwig Curtze, for many years a Lutheran clergyman. Our subject was educated in Germany, and is proficient in the Latin and French languages. He also learned the trade of silversmith there. He came to America in 1836, landing in N. Y., where he remained two years. Thence he went to Boston for one year, and from there to Philadelphia. In these cities he worked at his trade. In the spring of 1840, he went to Erie, Penn., and there formed the acquaintance of a manufacturer of oil cloth, and engaged with him to make printing molds. This lasted five years, and our subject then went into the manufacture of oil cloth for his own account. After six years he quitted and bought a farm in Fairview Township, this county, on which he resided six years. In 1858, he moved to Erie City and taught a select school in the English and German languages; he was subsequently elected Justice of the Peace of Erie City, and re-elected at all elections for twenty-five years following. Squire Curtze married, in 1844, Mary A., daughter of Abraham Beckman, a farmer of Fairview Township, this county. She died in 1864, leaving six sons and six daughters, all now living, viz.: Caroline, wife of Louis Allright; Louise, wife of Capt. Jacob Ziegler; Frances, wife of Henry V. Claus; Herman, Charles, Adolphus, Felix, Julius, Oscar, Mary, wife of F. Warnath. Sabine, wife of Frederick Mertens, and Adelaide. The family are all members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

PROF. LORENZO D. DAGGETT, teacher of vocal music, Erie, was born in Girard, this county, July 19, 1845, son of Darius Daggett, a farmer of Girard. His grandfather, Sebra Daggett, was an early settler in Erie Co. The subject of this sketch early developed a marked talent for music. At nineteen he engaged in the manufacture of musical instruments, and has since been prominently identified with this industry here, and has also gained a favorable reputation as a choir leader. Prof. Daggett was married, at Alexandria, Minn., to M. Frank Reynolds, who was born at Grand Rapids, Mich. She is a graduate from the Winona State Normal School of Minn., and is also a musician. To Mr. and Mrs. Daggett have been born four children—Emma, Fred, Lorenzo Dow, Jr., and Aurora. Our subject is an active member of the First M. E. Church; is a member of the K. of H. During the late war he enlisted in the U. S. Navy, but was discharged on account of ill health.

WILLIAM R. DAVENPORT, Erie, was born in 1831 in Schuyler Co., N. Y., near Watkins Glen, son of William and Phylance (Tracy) Davenport. Capt. Davenport, his father, was a native of Conn., and came to Erie City in 1839. He died in 1865, and is well remembered by the older citizens of Erie as a gentleman who bore an unsullied reputation. William R., our subject, in 1846, when fifteen years of age, began his business career in this city, having for his capital a good name, an ordinary education, health, strength and ambition. He first served in a general store for five years, when the C. & E. R. R. Co. appointed him their local agent, which position he relinquished in 1868, in order to give more active attention to his business interests, created some two years previously in the formation of a partnership with John Fairbairn and Hon. Wm. A. Galbraith, for the manufacture of car wheels and railroad castings; also to perfect the organization of the Erie Car Works. Mr. Davenport became the chief executive of the latter company, a position he still maintains. In 1874, he organized the American Fuse Co. (limited), and in 1876 came into existence the firm of Davenport & Co., coal dealers. In 1881, the firm of Davenport, Fairbairn & Co. erected at St. Ignace, Mich., one of the most complete charcoal furnaces in the Union. The pig iron here made is all transported to Erie for manufacture. The wheel works have a capacity of 350 wheels per day; the car works can supply sixteen complete box cars per day, and the two concerns afford employment to nearly 1,000 men. Although our subject applies himself with close assiduity to business, yet he always finds time and means to devote to the formation of schemes having for their object the social and moral elevation of his fellow-man. For ten years he has been President of the Y. M. C. A., and he and his entire family are members of the Central Presbyterian Church. Mr. Davenport was married, in June, 1856, to Elizabeth, daughter of David Shirk, a prominent manufacturer of Erie City. To this union have been born four children—Mary E. (wife of E. W. Sheldon), Charles W., Frank R. (deceased) and Helen L. (now attending La Sell Seminary, Auburndale, Mass.).

WILLIAM H. DEMING, proprietor of planing mill and dealer in lumber, Erie, was born in Unadilla, N. Y., son of Josiah and Acenith (Mudge) Deming, who moved to Warren Co., Penn., in Feb., 1838. They were parents of ten children, of whom eight are now living, viz.: Julia, now Mrs. Presho, in Yankton, Dak. (she was among the Indians during the massacre in 1863, but escaped unharmed); Sally, wife of J. P. Mather, residing in Council Grove, Kan.; Euphemia J., deceased, wife of Mr. Morrison, deceased, many years Sheriff of Warren Co., Penn.; E. L., deceased in 1834, leaving six children; L. L., has one son and one daughter residing in Charleston, Kan.; Frances J., now Mrs. Thompson, also residing in Charleston, Kan., with two children; J. O., residing on the old home farm in Warren Co., with five children; Mary, now Mrs. Donaldson, residing on the Donaldson homestead with two children; A. J., in West Spring Creek, Penn., with three children; and W. H., our subject, who was married, Aug. 28, 1839, to Eleanor C., daughter of Robert Donaldson, born in Spring Creek, Penn., Sept. 26, 1818. Her father was an early settler of the county, and an extensive lumberman on the Broken Straw water; he was a soldier in the war of 1812, under Capt. Bonar. Our subject and his wife are parents of Augusta V., wife of H. Davis, have one son; Glenna W., Elmyra A., and W. W., married to Ella Jones, have three children—Clayton, Lina and Ethel.

MATTHIAS DETZEL, restaurant, was born in Bavaria, Germany, July 25, 1834, son of Adam Detzel, who was a farmer. Our subject was reared on a farm, and received a common school education in his native land. He came to America in 1856, landing at the port of Erie in Dec. of the same year. He first worked on a farm in Girard Township, but in a short time went to Summit Township, where he operated a saw mill for three years; then for five years farmed in Mill Creek, and finally, in 1865, came to Erie City and embarked in the grocery trade, in partnership with a brother-in-law. Mr. Detzel is a thoroughgoing business man, and for years has been identified with the best interest of Erie City. For several years he took contracts for city work, and laid the pavement on Parade street, a number of sewer pipes, besides building several bridges. He served as Superintendent of the First and Second Wards; was for two years City Superintendent. Our subject was married, April 12, 1857, to Adeline Detzel, by whom were twelve children, viz., Mary Ann., deceased; F. G., a merchant in this city; Margaret, wife of Frank Glick; Elizabeth; William, a molder; Joseph, in F. G.'s store; Eugene, a molder; Caroline, at home; John, Adam, Ida and Peter. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church, this city. Politically, Mr. Detzel is a Democrat.

PHILIP DIEFENBACH, Alderman 6th Ward, Erie, was born in Erie City, Nov. 21, 1840; son of Philip Diefenbach, a native of Germany, and a tailor by trade, who immigrated to Erie, where he still resides, in 1838. He has reared five children, our subject being the eldest. He acquired his education in Erie City, and worked with his father, who was manufacturing oil cloth, till 1864, when he embarked in the grocery business, which he conducted until 1878. Mr. Diefenbach was elected Alderman in 1872, which office he still holds; is a prominent member of the German society, Erie City; in politics, is a Republican. His father was leader of the German St. John's, and afterward of the German St. Paul's Church choir.

E. DIEFENDORF, manager of Humboldt Iron Works, Erie, was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., Nov. 13, 1829, son of Abram G. and Mary (Limbeck) Diefendorf, natives of N. Y., of German descent. Abram G. was a Methodist minister for over half a century in the State of New York. Our subject was educated at the common schools of the Empire State; commenced clerking in a dry goods store when sixteen years of age; worked there seven years. In 1856, he embarked in trade for himself, carrying it on till 1866, which year he came to Erie City, and opened in same line of business in the "Reed Block," where he remained till the building was destroyed by fire. He then opened out on State street, and continued for over eight years. For fifteen years, our subject was identified as a prominent business man of this city. In 1882, he took his present position. Mr. Diefendorf was married in the State of N. Y., in 1852, to Lucinda Gross, a native of N. Y. She died in 1872, and our subject then married, in 1876, Emma, daughter of E. Goodrich. By this union are three children—Harry G., Edward and Fred (twins). Mr. and Mrs. Diefendorf are members of the First M. E. Church, of which he is Steward, and for four years was Superintendent of Sabbath school; he was also Trustee of same church fifteen years.

CONRAD DIEHL, merchant tailor, Erie, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, Dec. 5, 1832; he learned tailoring in his native country, and came to America in 1851, and prosecuted same business in Rochester, N. Y., for several years, and in Lockport, same State, for twelve years. Mr. Diehl came to Erie in 1867, and has since been actively engaged as a merchant tailor. He was married at Lockport, N. Y., 1856, to Mary S. Southworth, of Middleport. To this union have been born two sons and three daughters, viz., Mary, wife of Jacob Harr, baker; Emma, wife of John Kwiatkowski, baker; and George A., who is a merchant tailor; and a son and daughter, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Diehl are members of the M. E. Church; he is a member of the Odd Fellows, Encampment (branch), and A. O. U. W.; he is an active member of the City Council; is President and Chairman of the Fire, Health and Hospital Committees, and of the Water and Market Committees.

CAPT. DANIEL DOBBINS, deceased, was born in Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Penn., Jan. 5, 1776, and was married to Miss Mary West, near Cawnonsburg, Penn., April 1, 1800. She was born Oct. 26, 1779. They had eight children—William W., deceased; Jane S., deceased wife of the late John A. Tracy, of Erie; Stephen Decatur, deceased; Mary Ann; David Porter; Leander; Eliza M., wife of the late Capt. John Fleeharty; and Marcus, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins came to Erie on horseback in company with Squire Rees' party of surveyors in the year 1795. Soon after his arrival Capt. D. engaged in the merchant service, and was part owner and master of the schooner Harlequin, which he sailed for some time. In July, 1812, he sailed the schooner Salina, and while he was lying at Mackinac the British landed on the island, took possession of the fort, captured his vessel and took him and his passengers, Rufus S. Reed and Wm. W. Reed, of Erie, prisoners. They were all soon after released on parole, and returned to their homes in Erie. This was their first intimation that war had been declared. Capt. Dobbins' experience in lake navigation, and his thorough knowledge of the harbors on the lake rendering him well qualified for the position, he was appointed by the Government, in 1813, sailing master in the U. S. Navy, and given the superintendency of the construction and equipment of the fleet of war vessels then being built at Erie (an account of which appears in another part of this history), and it was through his efforts and indomitable perseverance that Erie was made the U. S. Navy station. While connected with the navy he was also engaged in the merchant service. He had command of the schooner Washington in 1816, which the same year conveyed troops to Green Bay, and his was the first vessel to enter that harbor, it then being considered a difficult task to navigate it. On his first visit some of the harbors in that locality were named, and still retain the names given them, by Capt. Dobbins and the army officers who accompanied him. In 1826, he was ordered to sea in a vessel fitted out to bring home the remains of Com. Perry, and resigned his commission. In 1827, he was engaged in constructing piers at Ashtabula, Ohio. In 1829, Gen. Jackson appointed him to the command of the revenue cutter Rush, and he was re-appointed in 1845 by President Polk to the command of the revenue cutter Erie. He left active service in the revenue department in 1849. Capt. Dobbins possessed many sterling qualities, and having been a close observer was enabled to relate many interesting and exciting incidents connected with the early navigation of the lakes and life on the frontier. Capt. Dobbins died in Erie, Feb. 29, 1856, aged eighty years. His wife died Jan 27, 1879, in her one hundredth year. The remains of both now lie buried in the Erie Cemetery.

JOHN DOLL, druggist, Erie, is a native of this city, born May 30, 1842, son of Martin and Anna M. (Freshcorn) Doll, natives of Germany, and who were married after emigrating to America. Martin Doll is a shoe-maker by trade, and is now in business in Erie. Our subject, the second of a family of four, received his education in the public schools of his native place. After clerking for some time in a dry goods store in Erie, he commenced a drug business, in 1866, under the firm name of Wilkins & Doll, under which title it remained until 1873, when Mr. Doll disposed of his interest to H. L. Wilkins, his father-in-law, who continued the business until his death in 1881, when our subject again became its proprietor. Mr. Doll was married, Sept. 4, 1866, to Margaret C. E., daughter of H. L. Wilkins. In politics, he is a Republican.

TRUMAN DOWNER, of Downer & Howard, ale brewers, Erie, was born in Bennington, Vt., Jan. 10, 1801, son of Avery and Pattie (Allen) Downer, natives of Vt., of English descent. Our subject received his education in Jefferson Co., N. Y., where his father and mother died; was reared on a farm, and avers that, until he was twenty years of age, he "never saw an Irishman or a Dutchman." Having learned the distilling business, he worked at it in Onondaga Co., N. Y., and invented many improvements that were adopted in the distillery. Our subject was at one time in business in N. Y., in Cleveland, Ohio, and in Chicago during the great fire, by which he lost considerable property; he lost $22,000 also by going security for several parties. Coming to Erie Co. in 1876, he embarked in his present business. Mr. Downer was twice married; on first occasion, in N. Y., to Remember Nye, who bore him three children, one of whom, Martha A., is wife of H. B. Bemis, of Downer, Bemis & Co., Chicago. Mrs. Downer dying, our subject married Mary F. Smith, of Oswego, N. Y. To this union were born the following-named children: Arthur M., in Iowa; William, in Meadville, Penn.; Mary C., wife of E. J. Howard, partner with our subject; and Henrietta C. Mr. Downer has never given testimony or sat on a jury in his life; has never been affiliated with any secret organization.

JEROME FRANCIS DOWNING, youngest member of a family of thirteen brothers and sisters, was born March 24, 1827, in Enfield, Hampshire Co., Mass., to which place his father had moved from Boston in 1804. Like many others who have achieved success in life, he was obliged to experience in his youth the "rough and tumble" incident to fortunes of most poor boys, compelled to struggle with poverty, and dependent upon his own resources and exertions to conquer difficulties. By laboring on the farm, in the factory and in the machine shop, money was earned and saved for the acquirement of a better education than the common district school afforded. To accomplish this was his first and supreme ambition. School days over, he became interested, for a short time, in editing and publishing a weekly newspaper in his native State, and during 1851 served as editor-in-chief of the Troy (N. Y.) Daily Post, taking the place of the regular editor (who was also one of the proprietors of the paper) during his absence that year. Although the editorial profession possessed many attractions, and his friends, among whom were Thurlow Weed and George Dawson, of the Albany Evening Journal, complimented him highly on his success as an editor of a political journal, Mr. Downing determined to carry out the ambitious purpose of his youth and become a lawyer. To this end, he engaged in teaching school for a few years, becoming, in the spring of 1853, the Principal of the Male High School in Carlisle, Penn. He continued in that position two years, studying law in the meantime under the direction of Wm. B. Penrose, Esq., then a leading member of the Carlisle bar. Having been admitted to the bar in Carlisle, Mr. Downing came to Erie in the fall of 1855, to establish himself in the practice of the law. In 1863, he was elected District Attorney for the county of Erie, and was fairly started in his profession. The following year, however, he was offered the position of Gen. Agt. and Manager of the "Insurance Co. of North America," of Philadelphia, for the Western States, which position was finally accepted, but not without some misgivings as to the expediency of the new departure, after having struggled to secure a foothold in the legal profession, and the hardest part of the battle apparently won. As the new undertaking was regarded by Mr. Downing as an experiment, it was agreed that he should make his headquarters at Erie, for the time being, an arrangement that would enable him, in case the duties of his new position should be unsuited to his abilities and experience, to go back to the practice of law in the place where he was acquainted. Nearly all of the prominent fire insurance companies doing an agency business in the Western States and Territories have their Western offices in Chicago; but the "Insurance Co. of North America" forms an exception to the rule in this respect, and for the reason that the Gen. Agt. and Manager, when first employed, had his home in Erie. The Western Department of the company having been established at Erie, under the circumstances above named, it now became a fixture, and one of the important business enterprises of the city. The business done is not exceeded in extent by any branch fire insurance office either in Chicago or elsewhere, and the net earnings of the business have been entirely satisfactory to the company, as well as to their Western Manager. However successful Mr. Downing might have been, had he followed the law, he has certainly developed a special fitness for the profession of fire underwriting, in which he holds a rank second to no one occupying a similar position. In 1872, the "Pennsylvania Fire Insurance Co.," another favorite Philadelphia institution, secured the services of Mr. Downing as their Western manager, and the business of that company has grown to large proportions under his experienced and energetic management. Erie may well be proud of the fact that so popular, so extensively known and so prominent a branch office for fire insurance exists in her midst. But Mr. Downing has not simply been a successful business man: he has always taken an active interest in promoting the growth and prosperity of the city where his home has been for nearly thirty years; investing liberally in manufacturing enterprises, and in the erection of a large number of fine dwellings and other buildings, his new office building, just completed, being one of the finest of the kind in the State. As School Director and member of the City Councils, he has done his share of public duties, but his influence and example, whether in or out of office, are always on the side of progress and improvement. Being a forcible and ready public speaker, his voice has often been heard in earnest advocacy of questions of public interest. Possessed of talents which eminently fit him for legislative halls, he has no ambition for office, and a decided aversion to all office seeking. In politics, he was first a Whig and then a Republican, but is not a strong partisan, holding to no extreme views on any of the leading political questions of the day. Mr. Downing has long been a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and a liberal supporter of that society, as well as of the charitable and benevolent enterprises connected with it. The same may be said of his contributions generally for objects of benevolence of public interest, they have been liberal but unostentatious. In early life, he married Miss Henrietta Bagg, of South Hadley, Mass., and by this union has had seven children, all now living save one daughter.

J. C. M. DRAKE, M. D., 201 West 8th St., Erie, was born in Panama, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and reared in Westfield, same county. His father was Col. J. C. Drake of the 112th N. Y. S. V., and he is a lineal descendant of an ancient family of that name. After receiving a good literary education at Greylock Institute, Mass., he entered Cornell University, taking a thorough literary and scientific course when twenty years of age; after two years he entered Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, graduating in 1880, when twenty-five years of age. After practicing a year at Westfield, in connection with Dr. Geo. W. Seymour, he came here and has since been identified with the practice in this city. He has worked actively for the development of the social life of Erie City.

MARTIN DRIGGS, passenger car conductor of the L. S. & M. S. Ry., Erie, was born in Genesee Co., N. Y., Oct. 14, 1828; son of Anson Driggs, who came from Conn. and located in N. Y. State. The subject of our sketch was reared and educated in Portland, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and in 1860 began train work in the railway business with the L. S. Ry., and has been serving for this line twenty years as a conductor. He was married in 1851, in Westerfield, N. Y., to Caroline E. Thayer, an estimable lady, born and reared in Portland, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Driggs have two children—Chas. T., chief clerk of freight dept., L. S. Ry., Erie; and Ruby E., a graduate of the Erie High School. Mrs. Driggs is a member of the Simpson M. E. Church. Mr. Driggs, since coming here, has taken an active part in developing the social and industrial growth of the city.

JOHN M. DU MARS, architect and builder, Erie, was born and reared in Erie Co. He began the carpentering business when fifteen years old, and early developed a marked talent for architecture. He employed his spare minutes in this study, and became proficient in it, though he has rather retired from it professionally, preferring to devote his time exclusively to the building industry, in which he has taken a prominent part in this city. His grandfather of same name, was an early settler in the county, and carried on farming in Mill Creek Township. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. John R. Du Mars, the father of our subject, has been prominently connected with the building interests of Erie City.

CAPT. JAMES DUNLAP, Erie, was born in Erie Co., Penn., March 17, 1801; son of James and Rebecca (Meach) Dunlap; the former, a carpenter by trade, was born in Ireland; the latter was a native of Dauphin Co., Penn. They were married in the latter county in 1794, and three years later came to Erie County; reared a family of five, of whom our subject is the only survivor; he received his education, necessarily limited, in the old log schoolhouse in this county; then farmed till 1823, since which time he has been a resident of Erie City. The Captain owns a farm of 100 acres, valued at $10,000, which his father received for living on same five years, according to the laws of the State of Pennsylvania. Our subject filled large contracts, building docks, etc., and at one time was worth over $30,000. Though he has lost considerable through his sons' unfortunate investments, he has still a comfortable competence left; he lately gave over $1,000 to the Baptist Church, in which he has been Trustee and Deacon for a number of years. Our subject received his commission of Captain of the Militia, in 1827, from Gov. Porter; was member of City Council for six years; for several years was Harbor Master, Erie City. Capt. Dunlap was married in 1828 to Mary Boyd, and has reared three children—John D., Helen, wife of John Bowers, and James J.

C. H. EADES, grocer and saloon keeper, Erie, was born in the village of Greenfield, Erie Co., Penn., son of William and Betsy (Wallace) Eades, natives of New York; the latter of German descent; the former, a farmer, of English lineage, came to Erie Co. in 1849, settling in Greenfield. Our subject, who was fifth in a family of seven children, was reared on a farm, and attended the common and high schools of his native county; he engaged as book-keeper for a time, but from 1873 to 1883 followed farming. In December of the latter year he embarked in his present business, corner of 18th and Parade streets, and has been very successful. Mr. Eades was married, in 1875, to Annetta J., daughter of William Baybrooks, and of English descent, by whom there is one child—Conydon Byron. Mrs. Eades is a member of the M. E. Church; he is a Republican in politics.

PROF. JOHN ECKERT, teacher of instrumental and vocal music, and composer of music, 420, 7th street, Erie, was born in N. Y. City on July 8, 1847, and at an early age showed marked musical talent, and when only ten years of age took active part in concerts; he continued the study of music in Cincinnati (whither he had removed) until he was sixteen, when he went to Europe and took a thorough musical course at the Leipsic Conservatory, graduating in April, 1868; he then returned to Cincinnati, and was prominently identified with his profession there for some time; he subsequently accepted a position at Ironton, Ohio, in connection with the public schools of that city as music instructor, and, after a reputable engagement there of a short duration, joined the Magill & Strong Concert Troupe, with whom he remained until the summer of 1876, when he located in Westfield, N. Y. Prof. Eckert came here in 1881, having previously been professionally connected here. Since his coming, he has always taken an active interest in the social development of the city; he is an active member of the Masonic order, Royal Arcanum and K. of H. societies. He was married at Westfield, N. Y., in 1881, to H. Blanche Smith, a finely-educated lady, and a daughter of one of the leading business men of the city.

JOHN ELIOT, manager German Savings Bank, Erie, was born March 7, 1825, son of George Augustus Eliot, who died March 2, 1829. The latter was a lawyer in Erie City, Penn.; married Nov. 12, 1818, Sarah, daughter of Robert Brown, of Erie, Penn. She was born March 12, 1800. They were parents of two children—William H., born June 14, 1823, died Oct. 7, 1845, and John, our subject. The father was a native of Conn., of English descent, and the mother a native of Penn., of Scotch-Irish descent. George Augustus Eliot was a graduate of Yale College. He left Conn. for Cincinnati on horseback, but ran short of money, and arriving at Erie City, he remained three years with Robert Brown, his future father-in-law, who practiced law fifty years in Erie City, and died there in 1870. Our subject was educated in Erie Academy, where he graduated in 1845. His father owned a mill, and with an eye to business, sent John to Ashtabula, Ohio, to learn the milling business, which he did, and on his return took charge of his father's mill, running it successfully for twenty years. This mill is now inside the corporation limits of Erie City. Mr. Eliot embarked in the banking business under firm name of John Eliot & Co. This firm existed for fifteen years. He then assumed the position he now holds. Our subject was twice married; on first occasion, May 16, 1854, to Elizabeth Johnston, of Pittsburgh, Penn., who bore him two children—Sarah M., wife of Harry Richards, in Dakota, and Ruth. Mrs. Eliot dying in 1861, Mr. Eliot took for his second spouse, in 1863, the widow of Dr. Trissler. She is a native of Buffalo, N. Y., daughter of Joseph Kelsey. Mr. Eliot traces his genealogy back to the Norman Conquest of England in 1066. In politics, he is a Republican.

MAJOR ANDREW ELLICOTT (deceased). The subject of this sketch devoted a long life to the service of his country, and illustrated in an eminent degree the valuable aid intelligence and learning can render in the settlement and civilization of a new country; he was born in Bucks Co., Penn., Jan. 24, 1754. His attainments in science soon drew public attention to him, and from the Revolution to the day of his death he was employed in the fulfillment of trusts conferred by the General or State Governments. Though belonging to the society of Friends, he commanded a battalion of Maryland Militia in the Revolution. In 1784, he was employed on behalf of Virginia in fixing the boundary line between that State and Penn. In 1786 he was commissioned by the Supreme Executive Council of the State to run the northern boundary line of Penn., and in 1788 he was directed to make a survey of the islands in the rivers Allegheny and Ohio within the bounds of the State. In 1789 he was commissioned by the U. S. Government to locate the western boundary of N. Y. State, and ascertain the validity of the claim of that State to the site upon which Erie now stands. He located the line, after much hardship and trouble, some 20 miles east of Presque Isle; his valuable service in this important and responsible survey seems to have been duly appreciated by Washington, for he writes in the year of its completion: "General Washington has treated me with attention. The Speaker of Congress and the Governor of the State have constantly extended to me most flattering courtesies." Thus we find that this city was laid out or originally surveyed by Maj. Andrew Ellicott. In 1790 he was employed by the U. S. Government to survey and lay out the District of Columbia and Washington City; in 1796, he was appointed by Washington Commissioner to fix the boundary line between the United States and the Spanish possessions. One important trust succeeded another, and for more than 40 years, and up to the time of his death, he was constantly employed in some public capacity. His high character and superior intelligence elevated him without special effort; he had an exalted sense of duty, and a well-sustained conception of personal responsibilities. In March, 1801, he was appointed by Jefferson Surveyor General of the United States, which office he accepted upon conditions imposed by himself. Sept. 1, 1813, he was appointed Professor of Mathematics in the Military Academy at West Point, and removed the same year to that place with his family, and here died, Aug. 28, 1820; he left a widow and nine children. Col. John H. Bliss, of this city, is his grandson. Pres. Hale, in his memoir of Maj. David Bates Douglass, the son-in-law of Andrew Ellicott, says: "The memoirs of the late Andrew Ellicott, when written, will form a valuable addition to the history of our country, taking us away from the beaten ground of battle-fields and Senate Chambers and Cabinets to the services which science can render in the settlement of a new country in a civilized age." Extracts from a sketch of Maj. Andrew Ellicott in Stuart's Civil and Military Engineers of America.

JOSEPH ERHART, No. 710 State street, Erie, jobber in saddlery hardware, harness, trunks, etc., was born in Girard, Erie Co., Penn., Sept. 9, 1841, and is a son of Stephen and Catherine (Hemmerlin) Erhart. Stephen was born in Baden, Germany, Dec. 15, 1817, and his parents, Magnus and Mary Erhart, came with him to the U. S. in 1832, and the following year settled in Erie, where both died. Stephen Erhart learned the harness trade with his brother, Wolfgang, who located in Erie in 1828. On the 6th of Sept., 1840, he married Catherine Hemmerlin, a native of Alsace, France, born April 23, 1822, whose parents, Dominick and Anna Hemmerlin, settled in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn., in 1828, and there died. To this union were born four children—Joseph, Mary J., deceased; Helen A., deceased, and Edward F. M. From 1837 to 1844, Stephen Erhart carried on the harness business at Girard, Erie Co., then returned to Erie, and entered into partnership with his brother Wolfgang. He continued in the successful prosecution of the harness and saddlery business at Erie until 1883, when he sold out to his son Joseph, with whom he had been in partnership since 1866, and retired from active life. Joseph Erhart learned the business with his father, became a partner in 1866, and sole proprietor in 1883. On the 11th of Aug., 1868, he was married to Mary M. Zones, a native of Newark, N. J., born Oct. 12, 1846, and a daughter of Christian and Mary A. (Sterlin) Zones, he a native of Prussia and she of Alsace, France. Mrs. Joseph Erhart is the mother of three children, viz.: Annie M., born May 25, 1869; Mary M., born Aug. 7, 1873, and Aloys J., born Sept. 20, 1878, all of whom are living. Politically, Mr. Erhart is a Democrat, and the whole family are faithful adherents of the Catholic Church.

W. C. EVANS, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., April 13, 1829, son of Col. John Evans of Franklin Co., Penn., for many years editor and publisher of the Venango Herald and High Sheriff of Venango Co. Our subject acquired a literary education in Harrisburg, Penn., read medicine with Dr. B. Gillett and graduated from the Western Reserve Medical College in 1854. He commenced the practice of medicine in the city of Franklin, Penn. In 1862, he came to Erie Co., settling in North East, where he remained five years. Afterward he accepted a professorship in Kansas City College of Physicians and Surgeons. In that city he resided until 1876; during the last two years spent there, he had charge of the City Hospital. The Doctor returned to Erie City in 1876, and has been engaged in the practice of medicine here ever since. In 1849, he was married to Kate C., daughter of Luke Turner, of Penn. By this union were born Arthur, deceased in 1863, and Alfred. Dr. Evans was Lieut. Col. on Gov. Packer's staff, Penn. In politics, he is a Democrat. He is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church; Mrs. Evans of the Episcopal Church.

JOHN FAIRBAIRN, of the firm of Davenport, Fairbairn & Co., manufacturers of car wheels and railroad castings, Erie, was born in England January 21, 1826, son of Stephen Fairbairn, a druggist in England, who reared six children. Our subject, who is the eldest, received a common school education, and early in life learned the iron molder's trade. He came to America in 1846, settling in this city, where he worked at his trade for some time. He has been successful financially; politically, is a Republican. Our subject was married, in 1847, to Elizabeth Hubbard, of English descent, by whom he has six children—Ann, wife of William B. Vance, of Mich.; Frank, superintendent of car wheel shop and foundries; John C., foreman in the foundry; Blanche, wife of Merrick Gunnison, also foreman in foundry; Florence and Oscar at school. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbairn are members of the Chestnut Street Presbyterian Church, in which he is an Elder.

W. T. FARRAR, of The F. F. Adams Co., manufacturers, Erie, was born near Waterford, this county, July 29, 1853, son of E. F. and Maria S. (Warner) Farrar, former born in Vermont in 1821, the latter also a native of that State, of English descent. F. F. Farrar was in the wholesale grocery business in Erie City, in partnership with A. H. Gray for a period of twenty years. In 1869, he entered manufacturing business in Pittsburgh, Penn., and moved to Waterford in 1875; has now retired. He had a family of four children—Ida, born in 1861 (deceased); Charles W., a manufacturer in Dubuque, Iowa; W. T. (our subject); and Minnie, wife of Wm. Arbuckle, of this city. Our subject acquired his education at Erie Academy, and the Academy at Chambersburg, Penn. He superintended his father's acid factory business in Titusville for five years. In 1878, he entered into his present partnership with The F. F. Adams Co. Mr. Farrar was married in Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1876, to Eleanor, daughter of H. Blackstone, and of English descent. Their family numbers three children—Louis, Harry and Marion. Mrs. Farrar is a member of the Christian Church. In politics, our subject is a Republican.

WILLIAM FAULKNER, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born July 4, 1819, son of Dr. Peter, and Rebecca (Merrick) Faulkner, of German descent, the former a native of N. Y., the latter of Md. Our subject's paternal grandfather was a physician and surgeon in the war of 1812, and died while in the service. Dr. Peter Faulkner came to Erie from N. Y., in 1824, resided for a time in Crawford Co., Penn., but returned to Erie Co. in 1844, and died in this city. He was twice married, and had two children by each wife. Morgan L., the eldest, is a physician in Crawford Co., Penn.; subject is the second; Robert, first child by the second wife, is a physician in Erie City; and Sarah, the youngest (deceased), was wife of Col. Grant, an attorney of Erie City. Dr. William Faulkner received the rudiments of his education in Wellsburg Academy. In 1842, he graduated from Geneva Medical College and commenced practice in 1842. After practicing some years, he managed to take, as a recreation from his professional duties, two full courses of lectures in Philadelphia, and when his father moved to Erie from Crawford Co., he went to the latter county, bought his father's property, and there practiced till 1858, when he moved to Waterford, Erie Co., remaining there till 1872, in which year he came to Erie City. When the rebellion broke out, the Doctor joined the 83d P. V. I., as Surgeon, serving one year. He was compelled to resign on account of illness, brought on by exposure. He was twice married, on first occasion, in 1843, to Sarah Kaerns, who bore him five children, all living, viz.: Elizabeth, wife of J. Saxton; Emma, wife of P. D. Smiley; Rebecca, wife of James H. Bosard; William and Peter. Mrs. Faulkner dying in 1865, the Doctor married in 1866 Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel Vincent, of Waterford, Penn., and to this union was born one child—Clay Vincent. They are members of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, the Doctor is a Republican, formerly a Whig.

J. R. FERGUSON, Chief of Police, Erie, was born in the Keystone State Aug. 24, 1817, son of Israel and Hannah (West) Ferguson, natives of New York, of Scotch descent. Our subject was reared on the farm, and early developing a love for the horse, made that animal his study, so that when a mere lad, he was recognized as a good authority on the diseases of horses, and being skilled as a veterinary surgeon he pursued that profession for several years. He was a secret detective also for fifteen years and made so many captures of criminals and others in that time that he became established as a regular detective and is favorably known in that capacity far and wide, both in the Union and in Canada. During the war our subject was engaged on salary by several United States Marshals to arrest deserters, and thereby he sent more men into the army than any one else in the States. In 1884, he was appointed Chief of Police of Erie City by Mayor Becker. Mr. Ferguson was married in 1840 to Elizabeth Walker, a native of Pennsylvania. She died in 1873, leaving five children—William, Frank, Henrietta, Mattie and George.

JOHN FERRIER, Alderman Second Ward, Erie, was born on the Atlantic Ocean, near the banks of Newfoundland, June 24, 1819, son of Robert and Martha (Armstrong) Ferrier, natives of County Derry, Ireland, and who came to Canada in 1819, where they passed the remainder of their lives. Robert Ferrier was a farmer. Of a family of eight children, our subject is the only survivor; he was taught the trade of tailor in Canada. In 1849, came to Erie Co. and taught school for twenty years in both Erie City and the county, occasionally clerking in stores. In 1876, he was elected Alderman of the Second Ward, this city, which position he still occupies. Mr. Ferrier was married in Canada, in 1848, to Catherine O'Brien, of Irish descent. Our subject and wife are members of the Catholic Church.

H. G. FINK, proprietor of the Steam Bending Works, Erie, born in Erie Co., Penn., Sept. 14, 1848, son of John Jacob and Caroline (Leopold) Fink, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1847, settling in Erie County. Our subject was brought up on the farm, and attended school in McKean Township and the State Normal School at Edinboro, after which he underwent a thorough commercial education at Bryant & Stratton's Business College at Albany, N. Y., from which he graduated in 1866. He then bought and sold cattle for eight years (in Eastern and Western States); going to Texas in 1872. Mr. Fink dealt largely in stock there; at one time he drove 8,400 head for 600 miles, requiring a force of 28 cowboys. In 1874, he returned to Erie City, and bought the Erie Steam Bending Works, which he is successfully operating at present date, being now the largest felloe mfg. works in the world; capacity 350 sets of bent felloes per day. Our subject was married in 1876 to Ellen M., daughter of Joseph Statton and a native of England. One child, Alice C., was born to this union. Mrs. Fink is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics Mr. Fink is a Republican.

ADDIS FINNEY, firm of O. C. Thayer & Co., manufacturers of stoneware, sewer pipes, fire brick, etc., Erie, was born in Akron, Ohio, in 1857, only surviving child of W. C. Finney, a native of Me., of Irish descent. Our subject was reared in Ohio, educated in the high school of his native county, and was employed as clerk for five years while a resident of Ohio; he afterward went to Wis., and was employed as P. O. clerk till 1882, when he came to this city. Soon after he formed a copartnership with O. C. Thayer & Co., Erie City Pottery. This firm uses nothing but the finest clay from South Amboy, N. J. Mr. Finney was married in Ohio to Sarah D., daughter of H. B. White. By this union is one child. Our subject's grandfather, Caleb Finney, lived to the patriarchal age of ninety-three, and his grandmother, Susannah Finney, died at the age of eighty-nine. His father, W. C. Finney, who is foreman of the pottery, is fifteenth in a family of sixteen.

CONRAD FLICKINGER, hardware dealer, No. 408, 18th street, Erie, was born in Germany, Feb. 20, 1845; his father, George Flickinger, came to Erie City in 1851 from Germany, brought over his family in 1852, and here worked at his trade (brick-making) for many years. Our subject, who was the eldest of five children, attended the Erie schools, and early in life learned the tinner's trade; he was prudent, and in 1866 started in business for himself on a small scale. At the end of three years, he built a store on Peach street, between 22d and 23d streets, where he remained till 1872, when he moved to his present place of business; he is attached to his business, and well deserves success. Mr. Flickinger was married, in 1867, to Anna Shafers, born in Germany, and a daughter of John Shafers. They are parents of six children—Emma, Hattie, Elizabeth, George, Freddie and Laura. Mr. and Mrs. Flickinger are members of St. John's Protestant Church in Erie City. Our subject is a Republican in politics; has been a member of the Board of Elections a number of years; is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F.; G. A. R.; A. O. U. W. and Select Knight of A. O. U. W., the latter a society just organized in this city, which bids fair to be a success; he has been the principal mover in its organization.

JEREMIAH FOGARTY, blacksmith, Erie, was born on the sea, during the voyage of his parents, Patrick and Mary Fogarty, to this country. They settled in Toronto, Canada, and there our subject learned his trade; he subsequently came to this county, eventually settling here in 1870. Mr. Fogarty has been twice married; on the first occasion to Elizabeth Bolster, of Cork County, Ireland, who bore him two children—Thomas and Elizabeth; she is now deceased. Mr. Fogarty was again married in 1870 to Mary Kelly, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland. No children have been born to this union. They are all members of the Roman Catholic Church. During the late war, our subject did active service in the United States Navy in the South Atlantic Squadron, for nearly four years, and received an honorable discharge.

COL. THOMAS FORSTER, son of John Forster; born near Harrisburg, Penn., May 16, 1762; brought up as a surveyor; served during the Revolution in defense of the frontier; was a Colonel of volunteers during the whisky insurrection; appointed Associate Judge of Dauphin Co. in 1793; member of the Assembly one term; came to Erie Co. as agent of the Harrisburg & Presque Isle Land Company in 1796 or 1797; moved his family to the county in the spring of 1799, settling in Erie; commissioned Collector of the port of Erie March, 1799, a position he filled until his death in 1836; meanwhile acting as Government Agent for the construction of the breakwater in Erie Harbor; serving as Captain and Brigade Inspector in the war of 1812, and holding numerous town and county offices. He married, Oct. 5, 1786, Sarah Pettit, daughter of Rev. Joseph Montgomery, who was a Chaplain in the Revolutionary army, and the first member of Congress from Lancaster Co. under the Constitution of the U. S. She died in Erie July 27, 1808. Among her children were the wives of Gen. E. V. Sumner, Gen. Geo. W. Wright, Col. John Harris, Maj. Herron and Capt. Bailey, U. S. Army. Col. Forster and Rev. Mr. Montgomery were both educated at Princeton College, New Jersey.

THOMAS FORSTER, JR., son of Col. Thos. Forster and Sarah, his wife; born near Harrisburg, Penn., in 1796, came to Erie with his father; carried on a forwarding and commission business at Erie Harbor several years; Captain of a military company, and vestryman of St. Paul's Church; moved to Dunkirk, N. Y., about 1828, from which date he was Government Agent for the construction of breakwaters at the various harbors on Lake Erie, between Erie and Buffalo, until his death; moved to Westfield, N. Y., about 1862, where he died in 1864. He married, in 1821, Juliet M., daughter of Hon. William Bell, of Erie, a settler of 1800, officer in the Revolutionary war, State Senator, Associate Judge, and uncle of Hon. John Bell, candidate for President in 1860. Mrs. Forster died in Westfield in 1866. Their children were as follows: John H. and Sarah P., residents of Michigan; William T.; Theodore M.; Annie M. and E. S., residents of Erie City.

EDWIN SUMNER FORSTER, son of Thomas Forster, Jr.; born in Dunkirk, N. Y., in 1833; educated at Fredonia Academy; learned the printing business in Dunkirk; lived at various times in Dubuque, Iowa.; Janesville, Wis., and the copper regions of Lake Superior. Married, May 14, 1867, Miss Mary E., daughter of Wm. B. and Carrie A. Hays, of Erie; settled in Erie in 1871, engaging in mercantile business. Mr. and Mrs. Forster have had but one child—William Hays Forster, born Jan. 28, 1872.

FREDERICK FRANZ, foreman of the Chicago & Erie Stove Works, Erie, was born Feb. 23, 1839, in Germany, son of Casper and Barbara Franz, who came to America with their family in 1852, settling in Erie City. Our subject was first employed in a foundry in Erie for a few months, and then engaged with the Chicago & Erie Stove Works Company, in whose employment he has been continuously since 1854. Through untiring energy and close application to business, he has gradually grown into such favor and confidence of the firm, that for past ten years he has had charge of the molding department. In 1860, Mr. Franz married Emma, daughter of Philip Schwap. By this union were born eight children—Jacob C., Frederick R., Francis J., Henry J., Kiddon C., Catharine, Theresa and Jennie C.

A. A. FREEMAN, M. D., physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., July 4, 1850, son of Arold Freeman, who came to Crawford Co. in 1816, following farming. His family numbered eight children, seven living. Our subject was raised on the farm, and attended the common schools till he was nineteen years old. In 1872, he graduated from the State Normal School, located at Edinboro, then taught school, and while so employed studied medicine. He afterward read medicine with Dr. Heard, now of North East. Dr. Freeman regularly graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo, N. Y., in 1876, and same year he commenced the practice of his profession in Erie City. This he continued till 1881, when with the view of entering the legal profession he abandoned it. He was elected Alderman of the city in 1881, which office he still holds. The Doctor was married, in this county, in 1876, to Josephine L., daughter of N. L. Finn, now of Saginaw Co., Mich. To this union were born two children—Arold Ray and Robert Todd.

JACOB FRITZ, grocer, Erie, was born in Heimersheim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, Sept. 9, 1841, and came to America when ten years of age with his people, who settled here. He is a son of George John Fritz, who has the following family: Elizabeth, wife of Lawrence Koster, a merchant of this city; John and George, farmers of West Union, Iowa, and Jacob, the subject of this sketch. Jacob, at fourteen, began cabinet-making, which he followed for four years, when he began merchandising, and has since been successfully connected in the grocery trade here. He was united in marriage, in 1865, with Elizabeth Althoff, born in Eringshausen Kreis, Koblenz, Prussia. They have three sons and five daughters—Helen, Martha, Kate, Elizabeth, George, Florence, Jacob, Jr., and Frank Fenner. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr Fritz has always taken an active part in developing the social and industrial life of Erie City.

GEORGE E. FRY, plumber and gas-fitter, Erie, was born and reared in N. Y. City. At seventeen, took up his present business there, and followed it successfully for seventeen years. In 1866, he came to Erie City and established himself in business. He has been prominently identified with that industry in this city and Erie Co., evidences of which remain in many of the public works of the city. He married Miss Elizabeth Mapes, of Springfield, Ohio.

RICHARD GAGGIN, deceased, was born at Bandon, Ireland, in 1803. He was reared to the woolen manufacturing in his native country, and at Leeds, England, whither he went with his father. He came to America in 1836, and for a year carried on business in N. Y. City, and is believed to be the first manufacturer of selette goods in this country. He subsequently came to Erie, and in 1843 took an active part in establishing the Erie Woolen Mills, and was engaged in same as long as they existed. He was a practical chemist, and turned his attention to different industries, establishing the starch manufacturing here in 1850. When petroleum was discovered, he built the first complete refinery, which he carried on during several years. He was employed in the U. S. Internal Revenue service, and was surveyor of distilleries throughout the country for a long period, visiting all parts of the U. S.; he served as County Coroner one term, and filled several minor offices. Mr. Gaggin was the first member of the I. O. O. F. in Northwestern Penn., and was instrumental in establishing the Order in Erie and adjacent counties, and at the time of his death was its oldest member in Penn. He was a man of fine education, and had scientific attainments of a high order. Mr. Gaggin died in 1882 at the home of his daughter, in Conneaut, Ohio, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery.

R. F. GAGGIN, civil engineer, Erie, the eldest son of Richard Gaggin, was born in Leeds, England, in 1832, and came to this country with his parents in 1836. He was educated at Erie Academy and studied his profession under John H. Millar, County Surveyor and Engineer. For a few years he was engaged on the Ohio & Miss. Ry., and in 1856 became chief engineer of the road between St. Louis and Vincennes, Ind., remaining as such until its completion; he subsequently built railways in Mo. and Ill. in connection with Col. Thos. M. Walker, of Erie. Mr. Gaggin returned to Erie in 1860 and was appointed City Engineer, which position he resigned to enter the U. S. Customs service, in which he was Deputy Collector and Collector of Customs for seventeen years. From 1874 to 1877, he was employed in gold and silver mining in Colo. He was married, in 1866, to Gertrude P., daughter of Dr. Jas. L. Hall, of North East, and has a family of three sons and two daughters.

JOHN GALBRAITH. The Penn. Galbraiths came of the Scotch-Irish stock so prominent in the early history of the commonwealth. James Galbraith, the founder of the family in this State, emigrated from the North of Ireland, and settled at Donegal, in what is now Lancaster Co., in 1712; he bought large tracts of land from Wm. Penn, proprietary; his son, James Galbraith, Jr., married, in 1735, Elizabeth Bertram, who, with her father, Rev. William Bertram, came from Edinburgh, Scotland. These people were all Presbyterians in their religious faith, and the old stone church at Donegal, where they worshiped, has in its churchyard the bones of many of the family. Jas. Galbraith, Jr., was elected Sheriff of Lancaster Co. in 1742; he was made Judge of the Common Pleas in 1745, and was for many years a Justice of the Peace; he removed to Cumberland Co. in 1760, and in 1763 was appointed Judge in that county. He took an active part in the French and Indian war in 1755-56, and during the Revolution in 1777, was appointed Colonel for Cumberland Co., being then seventy-three years of age; he was obliged, however, to resign after a twelve-months' service, on account of his advanced years and bodily infirmities. In Egle's history of Penn., the writer says: "The Galbraiths of Cumberland Co. all came from James Galbraith, Jr.; every one of his sons became prominent in the Revolutionary war on the side of the patriots. Bertram Galbraith, First Lieutenant in Lancaster Co., was his son, and did noble service in the cause of his country. Andrew Galbraith, another son, served with distinction as an officer in the Revolution. Chief Justice John Bannister Gibson married one of his daughters. John Galbraith, the youngest son, was a soldier of the Revolution; he was taken prisoner at the battle of Long Island, and, with many others, suffered great hardships in the British prisons in New York City. After the war he removed to Huntingdon Co., and from there to Butler Co., where he resided until his death. In the southwest corner of the old Derry Churchyard, on the line of the Lebanon Valley Railroad, at Derry Station, is a stone slab, bearing the following inscription: 'Here lieth the remains of the Rev. Wm. Bertram, first pastor of this congregation, who departed this life ye 2d Feb., A. D. 1799, aged eighty-five years.' Immediately beside it is another slab with this inscription: 'Here lieth the remains of James Galbraith, who departed this life ye 23d August, 1744, aged seventy-eight years, also James Galbraith, Esq., the younger, on ye 11th June, 1787, aged eighty-three years, who dwelt beloved by all, in rational piety, modest hope and cheerful resignation.'" Andrew Galbraith, brother of James Galbraith, Jr., was the first Coroner of Lancaster Co. In 1730, he was appointed one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, a position he held until 1746. He was created a member of Assembly in 1730, and for eight consecutive sessions thereafter. In 1732, when a candidate for Assembly, he had a most extraordinary canvass; his wife, mounting her mare Nelly, with spurs strapped to her heels, rode out among the Scotch-Irish in Donegal and collected more than 100 voters, at whose head she rode into Lancaster Borough, where the elections were held, and in Penn Square harangued them with such effect that her husband was returned elected by two or three votes. This incident is thus referred to in a biographical sketch of Madame Patterson Bonaparte in Lippincott's Magazine for Sept., 1877. Mrs. Patterson, Madame Bonaparte's mother, being the grand daughter of the successful feminine electioneer. "Mrs. Patterson came of that sturdy, independent Scotch-Irish race that has peopled Penn.'s prosperous valleys. Her grandmother, Mrs. Galbraith, was of considerable force of character, taking a prominent part in Revolutionary stir, and on one occasion traversing on horseback the then almost wilderness, to canvass votes for her husband's election to the Assembly, which she won, whether by robust arguments or in the felicitous way of the beautiful duchess of Devonshire, is not recorded." Robert Galbraith, one of the sons of James Galbraith, Jr., was appointed Prothonotary for Bedford Co. March 21, 1777; he was also Justice for the same county. In 1778, he removed to York, and there practiced law; he was a member of the Assembly from that county, and was appointed agent to sell the confiscated estates of the Tories; he returned to Bedford Co. in 1784, and was in 1788 appointed President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Huntingdon Co.; he was an officer in the Revolution, and served with honor to himself and country. John Galbraith, the immediate subject of this sketch, son of the John Galbraith above referred to, was born at Huntingdon, Penn., in 1794. His father moved to Butler Co., this State, about the beginning of the 19th century, where the son grew up on a farm. Long before he was of age he was in charge of a school, and in due time served an apprenticeship to the printing business in the same office in Butler, where James Thompson, afterward Chief Justice, was employed. Tiring of printing he studied law with Gen. Wm. Ayres, of Butler, and was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-three or twenty-four. Soon after he married Miss Amy Ayres, daughter of Rev. Robert Ayres, an Episcopal minister, long resident at Brownsville, Penn., brother of Gen. Ayres. About the same time he moved to Franklin, Penn., where he rose rapidly, both in his profession and in popular esteem. His first official position was as a member of the Assembly, to which he was elected three times; was elected to Congress as a Democrat in 1832, 1834 and 1838, where he served on important committees and made several striking speeches. In 1837, he moved to Erie, and was ever after a resident of that city. On retiring from Congress he practiced law until the fall of 1851, when he was elected President Judge for Erie, Crawford and Warren Cos., running as Democratic candidate in a district which usually gave about 1,100 Whig majority. His death occurred on the 15th of June, 1860, before the expiration of his term. Judge Galbraith was one of the foremost men in promoting the various public enterprises that gave the first strong impulse to Erie Co.; he was the pioneer in building the railroad from Erie to the Ohio line, was the largest stockholder in the Erie & Edinboro Plank Road, and aided greatly in reviving the long projected railroad from Erie to Sunbury. One of his favorite ideas, the establishment of a reform school for youthful offenders, has been adopted by the State in the institution at Huntingdon and elsewhere. Mrs. Galbraith died in Philadelphia, March 2, 1868. Their children were William A., now President Judge of Erie Co., and Elizabeth Ann, intermarried with William S. Lane, for some time a practicing lawyer in Erie, and now in Philadelphia.

WILLIAM AYRES GALBRAITH, son of Judge John Galbraith and Amy (Ayres) Galbraith, was born in Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., May 9, 1823, and came to Erie with his parents in 1837. He was educated at Allegheny College, Meadville, and at the academy in Erie, and studied law with his father, being admitted to the bar May 9, 1844, on his twenty-first birthday. In September of the same year, he entered Dane Law School of Harvard University, of which Profs. Joseph Story and Simon Greenleaf were the instructors, from which he graduated in 1845. Returning home, he immediately commenced the practice of law in company with his brother-in-law, Wm. S. Lane, opening an office in what is now the Beatty building. On the 25th of May, 1846, he was married to Miss Fanny, daughter of Capt. Wm. Davenport, of Erie. The same year he was appointed Deputy Attorney General for Erie Co. (an office equivalent to the present one of District Attorney) by Judge Kane, then Attorney General of the State, and continued until 1850, under John M. Reed and Benjamin Champneys. His practice grew so large that his health failed, and about 1856, under the advice of his physician to engage in outdoor occupation, he took an interest with Gen. Herman Haupt and other Philadelphia parties in the Hoosac Tunnel, the building of which required his absence for a good share of two years in the State of Mass. Returning in 1858, he was appointed attorney for the Sunbury & Erie R. R., and quickly re-entered upon a large practice. From the beginning he took an active part in politics. He was a Delegate to the Democratic State Convention in 1846, and of numerous others. He was a Delegate in the Democratic National Conventions at Charleston in 1860, and at Chicago in 1864. In 1861, he was nominated as a Union candidate for State Senator, against M. B. Lowry, the regular Republican nominee, and was only defeated by about 100 votes in Erie Co., which had given 3,700 Republican votes the year previous. In 1876, he was elected President Judge of Erie Co., as a people's nominee, though the Republican candidate for President had some 2,600 majority. He was Director of the railroad to the Ohio Line, a Director of the Sunbury & Erie R. R. Co., and active in pushing forward that enterprise, and aided largely in establishing the car works, the car wheel works, and the Burdett Organ Factory. Judge Galbraith and wife have been blessed with four children, one of whom died in infancy; the surviving are Fanny (married to Dr. Arnold P. Gilmore, son of the late Judge Gilmore, of the Washington, Penn., District, who resides in Chicago), John W. and Davenport.

DR. HENRY F. GAREY, oculist and aurist, Erie, was born near St. Louis, Mo., July 22, 1854, son of Henry F. and Edna (Foree) Garey, former a native of Baltimore, Md., of Irish descent, latter a descendant of a Huguenot family, who fled to Va. during the persecutions of that sect. Henry F. Garey, Sr., was a lawyer, and served in the capacity of Supreme Judge in the Baltimore courts from 1867 till 1882; he is now retired, and lives in Baltimore, Md. Our subject, who is the only son, received his education in the common schools and the colleges at Rockhill and Ellicott City, Md. He then attended Washington Medical University at Baltimore City; he was assistant eye and ear surgeon in the hospital where Edgar Allan Poe died. The Doctor remained there three years, then came to Erie City to practice his profession, having graduated in 1876. In 1883, he was elected eye and ear surgeon of the Hamot Hospital, Erie City, which was organized in 1880. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1878, with Clara, daughter of Edmond Uttley, and of English descent. By this union are two children—Edna Foree and Anna E. Dr. and Mrs. Garey are members of the Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a Democrat.

J. P. Farrar

DR. GEO. A. GARRIES, physician and surgeon, East Eleventh, between German and Parade streets, Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1846. When eight years old, he came to America with his people, who settled in Erie. At the age of seventeen, he enlisted in Co. E, 63d P. V. I., and remained in active service until the battle of Spotsylvania Court House; he received four bullet wounds, and remained two days on the field of battle before he was taken to the hospital. After convalescence, he joined the Veteran Corps, and continued in Provost duty until the end of the war. He then prosecuted his literary education at St. Vincent College for three terms, subsequently engaging in the study of medicine, and graduating from the Cleveland Medical College, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1881. The same year he was married to Anna E. Zimserly, a finely educated lady, and located here, where he has since continued in his profession. The Doctor and his wife are active church members. The former is a member of and examining physician for the C. M. B. A. and F. G. F. B. societies, and of Post 67, G. A. R.

JOHN W. GENSHEIMER, firm of Gensheimer & Brown, dealers in boots and shoes, 715 State street, Erie, was born in Fairview Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 12, 1849; son of Joseph and Mary (Brown) Gensheimer; the former, who was a tailor by trade, was a native of Germany; the latter, born in Lancaster Co., Penn., was of German lineage. Our subject acquired an education in common schools and at Iron City College, from which he graduated May 3, 1866. He clerked in a dry goods store from 1870 to 1874, then embarked in the boot and shoe trade, which he has since successfully carried on. He was married, in Defiance, Ohio, to Ida R. Phelps, a native of Ohio. To this union were born eight children, five living—Una I., Karl V., Cora E., Harry P. and Mollie N. Mr. Gensheimer and wife are members of the Simpson M. E. Church, in which he has been Steward, and for four years Clerk of Finance Committee. He is an enterprising citizen, deeply interested in the moral and mental development of this city.

M. V. B. GIFFORD, money order clerk, Erie P. O., was born in Venango Township, this county, July 31, 1837, son of William L. and Sidney (Allison) Gifford; the former, a farmer, was a native of Vt., the latter of Penn., of English descent. They were parents of nine children, six living—all residents of Erie Co. Our subject was seventh child and fifth son; attended common school and Waterford Academy; he was reared on the farm, and in early life taught school till the late war broke out, when he enlisted in the three-months' service, Erie Reg.; he next enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., Co. K, and was soon after appointed Orderly Sergeant; from Sept. 12 to Oct. 1, 1862, he served in that capacity in Co. A; was then promoted to 1st Lieut. and, in 1864, to Capt.; he was in all the engagements his regiment participated in, and was several times wounded, on the first occasion at Fredericksburg. James E., his youngest brother, died from the effects of a wound received at the engagement at Malvern Hill. From 1866 to 1869, our subject was engaged in mercantile business in Erie City, and in 1870 moved to Colo., where he was engaged ten years in farming and stock-raising. Returning to Erie in 1880, he received his appointment to his present position. Capt. Gifford was married in 1866 to Amelia A., daughter of William Allison, farmer, Erie Co. Two children, boys, have been born to this union—Willie Pitt and Pearl Vincent. Our subject and wife are members of the Central Presbyterian Church of Erie. In politics, he is a Republican.

CHARLES GILMORE, yard-master of the P. & E. Ry., Erie, was born in County Antrim, Ireland, Feb. 2, 1831, and came to America in 1849; he located in Pittsburgh, where he engaged in railroading with the Erie Extension until the following spring, when he took up sailing. From this, he retired in a few years, and was employed by the Erie & Northeastern, and then by the L. S. & M. S. R. R. until 1858, when he engaged with the P. & E. R. R. Co., with whom he has since been reputedly connected. Our subject was married in Erie to Anna Jane Carey, of Erie, Penn.; he had seven sons and one daughter—Charles, Jr., Russell, William, John Clayton, Harry, Warren, Alice Jane and one son, deceased. Mrs. Gilmore departed this life in 1878, in full communion with the Protestant Episcopal Church, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery. Our subject subsequently married Mrs. Eliza F. Cotton, a sister of his first wife. There is no issue to this marriage. The family are members of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He is an active member of the K. of H. and A. O. U. W. societies.

JOHN M. GLAZIER, editor and proprietor of the Erie Advertiser, Erie, was born in Clarion, Clarion Co., Penn., Jan. 15, 1842; son of Jacob and Henriette Glazier, who came here in 1847, the former being one of the first merchant tailors in this city. Our subject began life for himself when only ten years old, and at thirteen took up type setting in the office of the Observer, and remained three years. Just before completing his apprenticeship, he accepted and for two years filled the position of manager in the office of the Titusville Reporter, at Titusville. He then for two years engaged in the oil refining business, at the end of this period returning to journalism, and for six or seven years acted as foreman in the office of the Daily Dispatch. He next organized a stock company, and published the Erie Evening Republican. After one year's time he retired from this, and accepted the superintendence of a department in the Government Printing Office, Washington. After a connection of nearly two years, he went to Pittsburgh as manager of the Diamond Ink Co., remaining until its dissolution in 1873, when he came to Erie and established the present journal, which he has since carried on successfully. Our subject was married in 1862, to Lizzie, daughter of Richard and Eliza Gaggin, of Erie, a lady of fine literary attainments. They have two sons living—George Montgomery and Wm. Varien. Mr. Glazier and wife are members of the M. E. Church. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., K. of H. and a Royal Templar; he is at present an efficient member of the School Board of Erie.

EMANUEL GOODRICH, manufacturer of brick, and proprietor of Humboldt Iron Works, was born Oct. 11, 1816, in Otsego Co., N. Y. His parents, Ashbel and Louise (Northrop) Goodrich, were natives of N. Y. State, but of English descent. In early life, the subject of this sketch received the common school education of half a century ago, and at the age of fifteen commenced the battle of life as a laborer in a brickyard in the city of Buffalo, N. Y. The means thus obtained were spent to obtain a liberal education. At the age of twenty, he entered Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., and remained there the greater part of the academic year; he subsequently figures in the role of the school-master, and taught school for three winters in Erie Co., Penn. In 1837, he came to the city of Erie, and became foreman of Daniel Young's brickyard. Three years thereafter, he embarked in the brick-making business as proprietor, and located his yard between what is now 26th and Peach streets, in this city. The business has steadily grown under his management, until now it is run with steam power, and employs a force of 20 men. Mr. Goodrich married in 1843 Nancy, daughter of Joseph Henderson (see sketch). To this union were born two daughters, Emma and Mary. The younger daughter is still living at home; the elder, Emma, is the wife of E. Diefendorf, Manager of Humboldt Iron Works; has three children—Harry G., and the twins, Frederick and Edwin. Mr. Goodrich is emphatically a self-made man, and his business success is based upon the sterling qualities of his character—industry, integrity and executive ability. In politics, he is a Republican.

E. P. GOULD, member of the firm Gould & Gilson, attorneys-at-law, Erie, was born in Springfield Township, this county, March 6, 1834, son of Nathan and Margaret (Nicholas) Gould, natives of N. Y.; former a farmer, of English descent, born in Dec., 1818, died in Erie Co. in 1879; latter born in Dec., 1807, of Welsh extraction. They had seven children, five living, three in this county, two in Minn. Nathan Gould was the eldest son of Judge William Gould, and came to this county in 1815. Our subject was reared on the farm till he was nineteen years old, when he taught school one year. He graduated from Rochester University, N. Y., in 1859, and studied law in that city. In 1861, he enlisted in the 27th N. Y. I., Co. E, and was soon promoted to 2d Lieutenantcy, 1st Lieutenantcy and Captaincy. He was present at the first battle of Bull Run, and received special mention from Gen. Slocum for gallant conduct on the field of action. He also participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged till the expiration of his term of service. From 1863 to 1865, he had charge of the recruiting service in Western N. Y. State. After engaging in business two years in Rochester, N. Y., he resumed his law studies, and having passed examination, practiced his profession in that city until 1872, when he went to Albany, N. Y., and for two years filled the position of Chief Clerk in the office of Sec. of State. In 1875, he came to Erie City, and here established himself as an attorney. Mr. Gould was married, in this city in 1868, to Mary E., only daughter of D. P. Ensign, of Erie City. He and his wife are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

FRANK W. GRANT, attorney at law, and U. S. Commissioner, was born in this city in 1852. He had the advantages of the best schools in Penn., and is a regular graduate of Washington and Jefferson Colleges; he studied law with his father, Col. Benjamin Grant, was admitted to the bar in 1874, and has practiced in Erie City ever since. Col. Benjamin Grant was born April 24, 1822, in Wayne Township, this county, son of Joseph P. Grant, a farmer of that township; he received his education at the Waterford Academy, and taught school for several years to obtain means to enter upon the study of law, which he commenced with Galbraith & Graham in Erie, and having completed his course was admitted to the Erie bar Oct. 28, 1845. In 1849, he formed a partnership with Judge Thompson, which continued until a short time before the latter's election to the Supreme bench. In all his extended and successful professional career in the several Federal and State Courts, Col. Grant's ability as a lawyer, skill as a pleader and fidelity to his clients were conspicuous as well as widely and most favorably known; he had also a strong taste for military matters, and was long one of the most efficient members of the Wayne Guards, and upon the breaking-out of the war of the rebellion he was equally active in association with the late McLane in raising the Erie Reg., of which he was Lieut. Col., and with which he served until it was mustered out of service. On returning from camp, among other literary efforts he prepared the reports known as "Grant's Cases," a standard work among the legal fraternity of Penn. The Colonel was for many years Chairman of the Erie Co. Law Library; was Sec. of Erie Gas Co.; nearly all his active life a vestryman of St. Paul's Church; in politics, a Democrat. He built the block on West Park, near Peach street, and with Mr. Metcalf twice erected the block on French street known as Wayne Hall; he died Nov. 24, 1877, aged fifty-five years seven months; his father was born Feb. 18, 1793, married, March 22, 1821, to Clarissa Loomis; came to Erie City soon after the war of 1812, in which he served as a commissioned officer, and died in 1868. Our subject is a member of the Select Council of the city of Erie, and in politics is a Democrat.

A. H. GRAY, of the Taper Sleeve Pulley Works, Erie, was born in Union Township, this county, Sept. 2, 1828, son of F. B. Gray, whose father, Matthew Gray (deceased in 1814), was an early settler of Union Township, having come with his family 100 miles on horseback in 1792. They were of Scotch-Irish descent, members of the Presbyterian Church, and their new home, by being made a place of worship for those of that denomination in the neighborhood, became the germ of the Presbyterian Church in Union City. Our subject's mother, Jane Gray, was a daughter of William Gray, brother to Matthew. William settled in Beaver Dam in 1806, and had following family: William, Matthew, Robert, John, Sarah, Jane and Anna. Our subject had four sisters, all married, and four brothers, all of whom are dead. He was brought up on the farm and educated in the common schools and the academy at Waterford. When in his senior year, he embarked in mercantile business in Waterford, and there he remained several years. He came to Erie City in 1856, and carried on same business for about sixteen years. He then undertook his present business, which he has since continued. Mr. Gray was twice married, on first occasion, in 1852, to M. S., daughter of R. T. Sterrett. By this union were following children: Lillie J., E. W. and A. H., Jr. She dying in 1865, Mr. Gray married, in 1867, in Erie City, E. C. Trissler. In politics, our subject is a Republican.

T. H. GRAY, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in Beaver Dam, this State, Mar. 21, 1842, son of Mathew and Hester (Smith) Gray, the former a farmer, of English descent, the latter of Irish lineage. Our subject was eighth in a family of eleven children. He received a common school and normal school education in Edinboro. His medical tuition was acquired in the Michigan State University, from which he graduated in 1871. After practicing two years in Lansing, Mich., he came to this city in 1873, where he has followed his profession ever since, with success. In the same year, he was married to Annie, daughter of Melvin Kelso, and grand-daughter of Gen. Kelso. The Doctor was County Physician from 1875 to 1879. He is a member of the County, State and U. S. Medical Societies. In 1864, he served as Commissary Sergeant in the army. In politics, he is a Republican.

G. W. GRAY, foreman Standard Oil Co., Erie, was born in Washington Township, this county, son of Elimuel and Diadame (Gordon) Gray, the former a native of Mass., the latter of N. Y. State. Elimuel Gray was twice married; three children by his first wife are now living; by his second wife were—our subject, Hannah and Perry, both deceased in infancy; Otis, a soldier during the late war under Capt. Stevans, was discharged in 1863, and died in Canada same year; Carson G., married Miss Ray, have two children; Elsinos married, has three children; Ezra, married to Miss Drake, have a family; Leonard, a soldier in the late war, died of a wound received at battle of Gettysburg. George W. Gray, subject of this sketch, was married to Jane A., daughter of James Russell. One son was born to this union—Arthur G., traveling agent for the Standard Oil Co. Our subject is a member of the A. O. U. W. and the I. O. O. F.

GEORGE P. GRIFFITH, attorney, Erie, was born Oct. 29, 1837, in Mayville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., son of Stephen and Susan (Perry) Griffith. The former, who was of Welsh descent, was born in Pomfret, near Fredonia, N. Y., in 1812, and for most of the time resided in Fredonia and Dunkirk until the spring of 1846, when he moved with his family to North East. Here he started a hat factory, erecting for the purpose the building lately occupied by Hammond & Co. Afterward, he was in business with Judge Greer and W. A. Ensign. He was a Justice of the Peace from 1860 to 1865, and was a prominent member of the M. E. Church, and for many years Supt. of the Sunday school. He was married, in 1835, in Fredonia; died of pleuro-pneumonia May 31, 1883, in North East, Erie Co. His widow, and four children—Geo. P., J. W., Mrs. S. R. Remington and Ben. P.—survive him. Our subject was married, Oct. 6, 1864, to Ella C., only daughter of Capt. Thomas Richards, of this city. By this union were born two sons—Geo. P. and Thomas A. R. Mr. Griffith was educated at Fredonia, N. Y., Academy, and commenced the study of law in 1861. He was admitted to the bar in 1864, and formed a partnership in 1870 with S. A. Davenport.

THE GUNNISON FAMILY. The Gunnisons of Erie Co. trace their genealogy to Hugh Gunnison, who came from Sweden some time before 1631, and finally settled in Boston, Mass.; he was born about 1610, and died at Kittery, Me., Sept. 21, 1658. Among his descendants was Wm. Gunnison, who was the immediate progenitor of the Erie Co. Gunnisons. He had two wives, and was the father of twenty-two children. Ebenezer Dearing Gunnison was the eighth child of William by his first wife, Hannah Grant, and was born at Kittery, March 27, 1790. His education was mainly obtained at Salisbury (N. H.) Academy, where he was a fellow pupil with Daniel Webster, Levi Woodbury and John A. Dix. He was trained for a surveyor, but taught school in N. H. several years. On the 14th of Feb., 1815, he married Miss Sophia Baker, and in Oct. of the same year, accompanied by his wife and brother Benjamin, he came to Erie. Here he was employed as a school teacher for ten years, a year and a half of the time as Principal of the Erie Academy. In 1825, he was elected Justice of the Peace, and held that position until 1840; in the meantime, he also did business as a merchant. The financial revolution of 1837 stripped him of most of his earnings. In 1839, he was appointed Register and Recorder by the Governor; in 1840, he was clerk to the engineer on the canal; in 1841-42, was book-keeper for Walker, Williams & Co.; in 1843, he was chosen as confidential business agent for the Reed estate, a place he held during the balance of his long life. He was one of the original members of the First Baptist Church of Erie, and was always one of its leaders. Mr. Gunnison died March 17, 1873; his widow Aug. 15 of the same year. Their children were as follows: Sophia Elizabeth, born July 3, 1816, married Dr. Chas. T. Sage July 30, 1845 (Dr. Sage died Nov. 18, 1874, they had four children—Eugene J., Mary Jane, Eben C. and S. Welsh, Sept. 1, 1852; they have had three children—Emma, Harry and Carrie—Emma married Dr. D. H. Strickland Oct. 16, 1878, have two sons—Clyde C. and Chas. G.—Carrie married Frank T. Kimball, Sept. 8, 1881); Annette Julia, born Dec. 31, 1832, married Gen. David B. McCreary, Sept. 17, 1851; they have had three children—Sophia Gertrude, Annette and Wirt—Sophia Gertrude married Henry Alden Clarke, July 18, 1878, Annette died Oct. 16, 1854, Wirt is a naval cadet at Annapolis. Benjamin Gunnison, brother to Ebenezer, was born at Kittery, Me., May 24, 1796, and came to Erie at the same time. He first settled on one of the Love farms, in Mill Creek Township, but in two years removed to Greene Township, where he continued on the same farm 35 years. He then moved to Erie, but in six years went to Mill Creek; remaining there twelve years, he again returned to Erie, where he died Aug. 18, 1879. He was married July 1, 1819, to Miss Clarinda, daughter of Jonas Parker. Their children were three sons as follows: Ora Parker, born April 27, 1822, married Elmira, daughter of Cyril Drown, of Greene Township, April 30, 1848; they have had no children. Mr. Gunnison has been a farmer, Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue, Deputy Collector and Collector of Internal Revenue, and Clerk to the County Commissioners. Jonas, born Dec. 25, 1824, married Charlotte A. Spafford, May 9, 1847, died July 21, 1871 (their children were—Frank, Nerr, Clara, Mary and Marion—Nerr died Nov. 20, 1851, and Mary, Feb. 24, 1863). Jonas Gunnison was educated at the Erie Academy; studied law with John Galbraith and was very successful in his practice; for a number of years was associated with Gen. D. B. McCreary; served in the Select Council of Erie; was a member of the Legislature in 1860; for many years was Trustee of the Erie Academy; frequently represented Erie Co. in Republican State Conventions, and on the Republican State Committee. Frank, only living son of Jonas, born in Erie, Feb. 2, 1848, married Lila, daughter of Hon. M. B. Lowry, Sept. 5, 1872, by whom he has had two children—M. B. and an infant son; studied law with his father; admitted to practice in 1870; was associated for a time with Gen. McCreary; is a member of the Select Council of Erie, and Trustee of Erie Academy. Albert B., born Sept. 1, 1830, married Olive A. Low May 19, 1853; their children have been May Evelyn, Albert, Merrick Low, Ora C., Paul, Olive Albertine, Mary Edith and Jessie Clarinda. Albert died March 21, 1856, and Paul Jan. 27, 1863. May Evelyn married Charles, son of J. B. Gunnison, March 12, 1878; have two children—Arthur and Carl. Merrick Low married Blanche Fairbairn in April, 1879, have one child—Florence; Ora C. married Mary Loyer in 1883. Mr. Gunnison started in life as a farmer; then commenced the manufacture of wooden pumps and pipes, in which he is still engaged. He has been Road Commissioner and County Commissioner, and has long been prominent in public life. He also deals in lumber, W. W. Love being his partner.

LAWRENCE HAIBACH, of the firm Haibach Bros., meat market, etc., 918 Parade St., Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1850, and came to America with his people, who settled in Erie. When twenty-one years of age, our subject began his present business with his father, taking entire charge of same when twenty-one, and which he has conducted successfully. He was united in marriage, in 1873, with Mary Haas, of Erie, and has one son and four daughters—Lawrence, Jr., Mary, Tillie, Lizzie and Lena: He and wife are members of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church. Besides his extensive meat market and slaughtering business, Mr. Haibach is also interested in milling, carrying on three large factories, with an annual business of over $100,000.

DR. PETER HALL, successor to Hall & Warfel, druggists, 630 State St., Erie, was born in Washington Co., N. Y., Nov. 4, 1820, son of Harvey (a farmer) and Sarah (Hull) Hall, natives of New Haven, Conn., of English extraction, dating back to the landing of the pilgrim fathers. They were parents of fourteen children, twelve of whom grew to maturity, our subject being the youngest. The father came to Crawford Co., Penn., in 1821, remaining a few months, then went to Erie Co., Penn., where he resided till 1831, then moved to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where he resided till 1851, in which latter year he came to Erie City, Penn., where he spent the remainder of his days, dying in 1863, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. His widow died in 1868, at the patriarchal age of ninety-one. Our subject received his education in the Waterford Academy and the Geneva Medical School, N. Y., where he took two full courses. He came to Erie in 1843, where, ever since 1844, he has been actively engaged in the drug business, making him the oldest representative of continuous trade now in actual business in Erie. In 1861, Martin Warfel became associated with him, and until 1882 the firm was known as Hall & Warfel. Since then Dr. Hall has conducted the business in his own name. The Doctor has made a close study of human ailments, which has resulted in his discovering and manufacturing some well known and highly prized remedies, among which may be named Dr. P. Hall's cough remedy, discovered by him in 1848, and Dr. P. Hall's catarrh remedy, in 1876, which reaches the seat of disease by absorption. The Doctor was married, in Erie City, in 1852, to Catharine A., daughter of Martin Warfel, an early settler of this county. To this union were born seven children, three living—Alice, wife of Walter Scott, of Erie City; Edward P. and Charles B., both with their father. Dr. Hall's reputation as a business man is of the most correct type, and his integrity is rigid and of sterling quality.

JACOB HALLER, merchant, Erie, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1845, and came to America in 1856 with his mother, Magdalena Haller, who settled in Canada, and is now buried in Roseville Cemetery, near Paris, Ontario. Our subject, when fifteen years old, came to Erie Co. and followed farming for three years. He then took up merchandising, and for nine years was a clerk in a wholesale business. He subsequently established himself in the business which he has since successfully conducted. Mr. Haller was united in marriage, in Erie, in 1867, with Mary Eberhardt, who departed this life in 1870, leaving no issue, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery. Our subject's second marriage in Oct., 1871, was with Sophia P. Schiller, of Erie Co., who dying Nov. 20, 1880, left three sons—Chas. J., Frank A. and Eddie. He was then united in matrimony in Canada with Mary Otto, of Waterloo, Ontario, who has borne him one daughter—Cora A. The family are members of the German Evangelical Church. He is an active member of the K. of H. society.

P. S. V. HAMOT, deceased, was born in Paris, France, November 28, 1784. His father was a Captain in the French Army and a Royalist, and left France for Russia, where he resided during the "reign of terror." Returning to France, after the establishment of the "Republic," he offered to procure for his son a Lieutenancy in the army, but such a position not being in accordance with his tastes, his attention having been turned to the New Republic of the west, he preferred to come to America and try his fortune in a new and strange land. His father consenting, he came to Philadelphia, in 1802, with the French Consul, as "L'Homme de Confiance," as expressed in his passport. The Consul died soon after his arrival, leaving Mr. Hamot, a friendless youth, and among a people in whose language he was little versed. His self-reliance, peculiarly a trait of his character, did not allow him to despond. A mercantile situation offering, he started for the West, as the clerk of a French house, in charge of a stock of merchandise. The vessel on the route was wrecked on Lake Ontario, but, with the goods recovered, he opened a store at Niagara, Canada, and from thence removed to Lewistown, and in 1805 to Erie. In 1810, he formed a partnership with Messrs. E. & D. Alvord, of Salina, who dealt largely in salt. This business connection continued many years. He was also engaged in general mercantile business on his own account, and was one of the first and most successful merchants of the place. Mr. Hamot held responsible and honorable offices under the Government; being at one time Canal Commissioner of the State, and at another, Superintendent of U. S. Public Works at Erie. He was the first Cashier of the Erie Bank, and one of the principal Stockholders. As a business man he was fortunate and noted for his activity and energy in the prosecution of his plans, and for sound judgment. He engaged warmly in politics, his sympathies and feelings being with the Democratic party, being one of the founders and principal stock-holders in the Erie Observer. His politeness and hearty hospitality won for him many attached friends. Mr. Hamot was twice married; to Adeline Woodruff of Lewiston, N. Y., in 1818, who died in 1821; and to Elizabeth Coltrin, widow of Dr. Asa Coltrin and daughter of George Keefer of Thorold, Canada, in 1825. Mr. Hamot died in Erie, Oct. 17, 1846.

JOHN HANLEY, foreman of Erie Gas Works, Erie, was born in Cork, Ireland, May 1, 1830, and reared and educated there. At twenty-three he came to America, and, after spending two years in N. Y. State, came here in 1855, engaging in railroading for a year. He then obtained his present position where he has been ever since. He was married in Buffalo in 1856, to Mary Lane, born in 1837, and reared in Ireland. To this marriage have been born 14 children—Julia; Minnie, wife of Jno. Burgoyne, of Erie Co.; James, Asst.

Ticket Agt. L. S. Ry.; Daniel, Wm. (deceased); Kate, wife of J. Dillon, a machinist of this city; Rose, John (a plumber); Joseph, Daniel, Eddie, Jennie, Nellie, Aggie and Clara. Mr. and Mrs. Hanley are members of the Roman Catholic Church. Since his coming, Mr. Hanley has always been interested in the social and industrial life of Erie.

THOMAS HANLON, City Clerk, Erie, born in Otonabee, Peterborough Co., Canada, June 2, 1844; son of Michael and Margaret (Sullivan) Hanlon, natives of Ireland. They were pioneer settlers of Peterborough, Ontario, arriving there in 1825, and experiencing all the hardships and privations incident to forest life; his mother, brother and sister are still residing there. The Hanlon family has, from the beginning, been identified with all the important public improvements of that now prosperous city, and their history embraces the history of Peterborough. Our subject had a common and separate (Catholic) school education in Canada, and a commercial college training in this city. In Canada, he was salesman in a grocery store in 1865 and 1866. On coming to Erie, he embarked in the grocery business in company with his brother, which was carried on till the death of the latter, in 1874, and subsequently until 1876. He was elected City Clerk in 1871, which office he creditably fills up to the present time, having been elected fourteen times in succession. He has been a Notary Public for eight years. In 1876, Mr. Hanlon married, in Erie City, Jennie A., daughter of J. E. Hawk, and a native of Canada; her parents were of American and Irish descent. To this union were born Loretta, Beatrice and Mary Mabel. Mr. and Mrs. Hanlon are members of the Catholic Church.

WILLIAM HARDWICK, of the firm Cleveland & Hardwick, Erie Engine Works, Erie, was born in England, Dec. 1, 1847; son of John and Ann Hardwick, natives of England, who emigrated to America in 1852. Our subject acquired a common school education, and chose the trade of machinist, which he commenced to learn at eleven years of age. At one time he had charge of the Bay State Iron Works, and was for nine years foreman of the shop. In 1879, he inaugurated his present business in Erie City. The firm employ about sixty hands, and are doing a successful business. Our subject is a thoroughly practical and experienced mechanic, and is eminently qualified to fill his position as superintendent of the Engine Works. Mr. Hardwick was married in West Mill Creek, to Mary A., daughter of John H. Carter, a farmer of West Mill Creek Township. Two children were born to this union—John W. and Luanna May. Our subject and wife are members of the First M. E. Church, of which he has held the office of Steward, and is Trustee. He has been a member of Erie City Common and Select Council four years. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN HARLOW, dealer in fish, etc., Erie, is a native of Ireland, born in County Wicklow, Nov. 9, 1832, and came to America with his parents—James and Catherine Harlow (the former a painter) who settled here in 1837. They had five children, viz., James and Wm. in Erie; Edward, out West; a daughter and John, our subject. Our subject started in life at an early day as a sailor, which occupation he followed for several years; he then embarked in merchandising here, in which he has continued to the present. Mr. Harlow was united in marriage in 1874 to Helena Allen, one of the Allens of Erie County. This union has been blessed with one son and two daughters—E. John, Mabel and Edith. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Harlow is a member of the A. O. U. W. and K. of P. societies.

MATHIAS HARTLEB, merchant. Among Erie's most respected citizens is Mathias Hartleb, Esq.; he was born in Albig, Germany, Dec. 4, 1823. While in Germany, he mastered his trade (shoemaker), and married Magdalena Fisher, his present wife. At twenty-four years of age, he had crossed the ocean, and located at Erie. With youth, and health and a determined purpose to push him along, he at once engaged at his trade, and for six years pegged away on his march toward success; he accumulated enough to open a store, and for more than thirty years Mr. Hartleb's credit and standing in commercial circles has been in the highest degree reputable; he was the senior member of Hartleb, Metz & Co., the firm that established the Steam Bending Works, and operated them with success for seven years, when the interest was disposed of to H. G. Fink, Esq., the present proprietor. Our subject early manifested an intelligent interest in American politics; he has always been a Republican of the Fremont school; his first suffrage was cast with that party, and he has persistently allied himself with it to this day. In the war of the rebellion, he served the country of his adoption by sending to the front a substitute in arms. This was simply an act of patriotism, as Mr. H. had not been drafted; he has had many evidences that he is held in high esteem by his fellow citizens. For twelve years, he was a member of the City Council, and while a member of that body most of the important public improvements of Erie have been made; he was conspicuously identified with the erection of the magnificent reservoir that supplies the city with its water. From 1865 to 1868, he was Auditor of the County, and four years, from 1876 to 1880, was the custodian of the city's funds. Mr. Hartleb's immediate predecessor in the Treasury was a defaulter for a large amount, and his successor likewise abused his trust. Under Mr. H., the office was administered with fidelity and ability. He was also for considerable time an active member of the School Board, and in many other capacities has been, and is at this writing, an active, reliable, useful and progressive citizen; his life presents a record which conclusively shows that success is surely achieved by unceasing application, and undeviating integrity. Daniel Hartleb, the only child of our subject, was born in Erie Nov. 17, 1848; he is well prepared by education and practical home training to succeed his father in usefulness; he is a graduate of Iron City College, Pittsburgh, also of the Union Business College, Philadelphia; he kept books at the Erie Dime Savings Bank seven years before embarking in business on his own account. At present, he is one of the leading grocers of the city; he was married, Sept. 9, 1873, to Elizabeth Guckes, daughter of Philip Guckes, Esq., of Philadelphia. They have one child, Elizabeth Margerette, born Aug. 12, 1882. Like his father, Daniel is respected for his sagacity, integrity, energy, and under all circumstances his gentlemanly demeanor.

C. H. HARVEY, Doctor of dental surgery, Erie, was born in Ames, Montgomery Co., N. Y., Oct. 17, 1849; son of Rev. C. H. Harvey, a prominent minister in the Baptist Church in Penn. The subject of this sketch early developed a talent for dentistry, beginning its study when ten years old; he obtained a good literary education at Maysville Academy, Chautauqua Co., N. Y.; he subsequently graduated from the Penn. College of Dental Surgery at Philadelphia. After practicing in Sharon for a time, he located here, and has since followed his profession. Mr. Harvey, since coming here, has taken an active part in developing the social, industrial and musical interests of the city. During the war, he served as a drummer boy in the 36th N. Y. Reg. He has obtained a reputable prominence here as a cornet soloist, and is connected with the Governor's Guard Band, and with other musical interests of Erie. Mr. Harvey has also taken part in athletic amusements, and his many well earned medals testify as to his skill as an oarsman. He was united in marriage in 1872, in Erie, with Alliene V., daughter of Capt. James Dunlap, of Erie. She departed this life in 1879, and is buried in Erie Cemetery. She left one daughter—Lulu. Our subject next married Jan. 1, 1883, Georgia Strauss, of Meadville. He is an active member of the A. O. U. W., and of the State Dental Association.

IRA G. HATCH, tallow oil refiner, Erie, was born in Oswego Co., N. Y., in 1820, and is descended from a Conn. pioneer family; he began life for himself at seventeen, engaging in woolen manufacturing until 1845; he then, until 1859, distilled liquors in Wayne Co., N. Y.; then came to Penn., and in 1860 located here, and has been principally in the oil business since, establishing his present business in 1881. Mr. Hatch was married in Seneca Co., N. Y., in 1842, to Mary C. Stewart, a descendant of one of the pioneer families of her native State. Of their family, the following children are living—Albert, in the oil business; Frances, wife of David Kennedy, in Erie; Horace, a telegraph operator and stenographer. Catherine E., wife of Moses Parsons, is deceased; her daughter—Winifred—is residing with her grandparents. Mrs. Hatch is a member of the Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM E. HAYES, of the firm of Patterson & Hayes, merchants, Erie, was born in Greene Township, Erie Co., Penn., April 22, 1846; son of Lester and Mary (Graham) Hayes; the former, a farmer, a native of Conn.; the latter of Erie Co., Penn. They were the parents of eight children, of whom Wm. E. is the youngest. Lester Hayes was born in 1800, and in 1815 walked from Conn. to Erie Co. Our subject received his education in this county, and followed farming pursuits till 1879, when he came to Erie City and embarked in his present business. He was married in 1870 to Adella, daughter of Thomas Perrin, for many years a lake captain. To this union were born Clemmie B., Arba W. and Gertie A. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes are members of the Central Presbyterian Church. He has been Justice of the Peace five years, and auditor of Erie County several years.

VALENTINE HEIDT, undertaker, No. 1711 Peach St., Erie, Penn., was born in Germany, Oct. 30, 1830; son of Francis and Maria E. (Malthaner) Heidt, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1851, settling in Erie. The former was a lumber dealer, and reared five children. Our subject, who was the fourth, acquired his education in his native land, and learned cabinet making, at which he worked from 1847 till 1852. In the latter year he came to this city, where he has since carried on his trade in connection with undertaking; being also, at one time engaged in the manufacture of oil cloth. Mr. Heidt was married March 30, 1854, to Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Stritzinger. They have five children—Anna C., Francis J., Frederick W., Katie and Julia. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

JOSEPH HENDERSON (deceased), was born near what was long known as "Brad-dock," in Allegheny Co., Penn., near the Monongahela River, in 1798. His father moved to Erie Co. early in the commencement of this century, and resided some years at Waterford, where Joseph went to school. They then returned to Allegheny Co., where Joseph learned the carpenter trade, of which he became a master. He returned to Erie Co., and was married in the spring of 1821. For a number of years he was the leading carpenter and joiner of Erie. In 1823, after the Court House was burnt, the contract to rebuild it was let to Mehaffey & Henderson, and a most excellent job they made of it, creditable to themselves and to the county. He had charge of the public works at the piers, at this place, at Cleveland and other points on the lake, for the U. S. Government. Mr. Henderson was strictly honest in every sense of the word, and always did his duty conscientiously toward God and man. No one ever lost a dollar by him, for "strict justice" was his motto. In politics, he was a Whig and Republican, always ready to give reasons therefor and always ready to cast his vote for what he thought right. He was elected County Commissioner in 1842, and again in 1859, creditably filling the office for six years. For over thirty years, he resided in the Walnut Creek Valley, where Kearsarge is now located, and there he died in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He reared a family of eight children—viz., Nancy, wife of E. Goodrich, Esq.; Wm., residing on the homestead; George (deceased); Charles (deceased); Anna, wife of H. C. Dunn; Joseph, Jane and James. Three of them reside in Erie City. Joseph, the fifth child, was born in Erie City, Oct. 31, 1837, and there received his education. He was in the employ of the Lake Shore R. R. for ten years; was in the American Express Co. also. In June, 1879, he was elected as one of the Directors of the Poor, which office he still fills. He was united in marriage in Erie Co., with Catherine, daughter of Cyrus and Mary Wolf, the former a farmer in Mill Creek Township. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson have four children—Edgar, plumber in Erie City; Ross Clinton, learning plumbing trade; George William and Margie Irinee. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson are members of the Chestnut St. Presbyterian Church. He has been, and is at present Trustee of that denomination.

PROF. ROBERT HENKLER, teacher of vocal and instrumental music and harmony, Erie, was born in Dantzic, Germany, Jan. 8, 1852. When nine years old, he showed evidence of musical talent, and made a study of music. When eighteen years old, he entered the military service of his country in the Franco-Prussian war, and continued in reputable connection with it for fourteen months; he then retired, and after recuperating his health, which had been depleted by constant study and war service, entered the Berlin Conservatory of Music when twenty-one. After a year of hard study, he came to America, locating in New York, and took an active part in the musical profession there for two years. In 1877 Mr. Henkler came to Erie in the interests of a music journal, and subsequently engaged in his profession. He is the present leader of the Erie "Liedertafel" and of the "Teutonia Maennerchor," and is also actively engaged in class-teaching.

P. HENRICHS, of Henrichs & Churchhill Exhibition Show Case Co., Erie, was born in Prussia, Germany, Feb. 16, 1839, son of Joseph and Margaret (Armbruster) Henrichs, natives of Germany, who were parents of five children. They came to America in 1845, and located for three years in Cincinnati, Ohio, thence moved to Covington, Ky. Our subject, their eldest child, acquired his education in these two towns, and in 1852 came to Erie City, and was engaged as salesman for six years. He then, together with Mr. Jacob Gabel, embarked in the dry goods business. After six years, he bought out his partner, and continued the business successfully until 1872, when he patented a combination baby chair, formed a company for its manufacture, to which he subsequently sold his interest, and who are manufacturing it, paying him a royalty; then for two years Mr. Henrichs manufactured cloaks. In 1877, he patented the exhibition and sectional show case, and embarked in its manufacture in this city. In politics, he is a Republican. Our subject was married, Jan. 12, 1860, to Catherine Preuss, a native of Prussia, by whom he had ten children, nine living—Edward N., Amelia, Rosa, Cornelia, Virginia, William, Eugene and Nora (twins), Katie and Edith. They are members of the Catholic Church.

JOHN S. HENRY, division operator and assistant train master Penn. Ry. Co., Philadelphia & Erie Div., Erie, was born in York Co., Penn., Jan. 31, 1850, his ancestors being pioneers of the same. At thirteen, he took up telegraphing at Hanover Junction, on the N. C. Ry., and completed learning his profession there, and subsequently joined a literary class at York Academy. He came here when seventeen years old, and accepted a position as telegraph operator for two years; was then promoted to train dispatcher, holding same reputation for twelve years; was then appointed to his present incumbency. Mr. Henry was married in Erie, Sept. 9, 1879, to Ella J. Hughes, a daughter of Thomas and Caroline Hughes, pioneers of Erie Co.

BENJAMIN HERSHEY was born in Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., June 15, 1827, and is a son of John and Salome Hershey, natives of Eastern Penn., and of Swiss descent, their ancestry having come to this country about 1700. Our subject grew up and received his education in Erie Co., subsequently following farming; he also studied and practiced medicine a short time. "Just enough," says Mr. Hershey, "to know that exercise, good nursing and cheerfulness of disposition are far more efficacious than medicines of any sort." Since giving up practice, he has carried a fair share of the burdens common to inventors, and in that field has work enough laid out to last him the remainder of his days. He says: "In choosing Mary J., youngest daughter of Jacob and Mary Miller, for a wife, I did one of the few sensible acts of my life, as she has been a true helpmeet in the walk and work of life." Mrs. Hershey is a native of Erie Co., and was married April 10, 1852; three daughters—Celestia J., Susan I. and Mary A. are the fruits of this union. Mr. Hershey says: "Theologically, we are Christians; denominationally, Methodists; and politically, Republicans; and do not care to change them for anything not so good."

PETER C. HEYDRICK, oil dealer, Erie, born Sept. 12, 1834, in the Keystone State; son of Charles H. and Mary (Adams) Heydrick. The first of this family to take up his home on American soil was Balthasar Heydrick, who came from Silesia, Germany, in 1734, and settled in Penn. One son—Abraham, was a merchant in Chestnut Hill, now a part of

Mr. S. Stinson

Philadelphia. Another son (the eldest) named Christopher, was a doctor, and his son—Charles H., was our subject's father. Peter C. Heydrick received his education in Allegheny College, and early in life entered the oil business; he lived in Oil City five years, and in 1866 bought a farm in Crawford Co., Penn., where he resided until 1874, in which year he came to Erie City. He has been engaged in the oil business uninterruptedly, and is now owner of several productive wells. Mr. Heydrick was married in Meadville, Penn., to Margaret A., daughter of James Doughty, and a native of Crawford Co., Penn., of English descent. To this union were born three children—Charles, studying law, James D. and Kate E. at school. Our subject and wife are members of the Episcopal Church. He has served two years as member of Erie City Council; in politics, is an extreme Democrat of the Jefferson school.

CAPT. JOHN C. HILTON, Register and Recorder, Erie, was born in Erie Co., Dec. 5, 1840; son of A. C. and Abbie (Cook) Hilton. The former a native of Albany, N. Y., died in Erie years ago; the latter, a native of this county, is living with Capt. Hilton in her eighty-fourth year. She has been a member of the Presbyterian Church in Erie 45 years; her father, E. Cook, came from Conn. to Erie Co. in 1795; settled in Waterford, and followed farming. Our subject's father was an early settler of Erie, filling several offices of trust; was three years Deputy Sheriff of Erie County, afterward Collector of Port, Erie City. Our subject is the fourth of a family of five children, and acquired his education in Erie Academy. At the age of fourteen, he learned the printing trade, working at it until 1861, when he enlisted in the 145th P. V. I., Co. K. After a short service, was promoted to Second Lieutenant, then First Lieutenant, and finally Captain; he was wounded Dec. 13, 1862, at the battle of Fredericksburg, and lost his leg at the battle of Gettysburg, July 3, 1863; was honorably discharged, after being promoted to Major. On his return home, our subject engaged in the coal business with E. W. Reed for eight years; then chief clerk in Erie City Post Office four years, and in 1879 was elected to his present position. The Capt. was married to Ellen, daughter of M. R. Barr, at one time Collector of Port in Erie City, and now Indian Inspector. By this union are three children—Abbie (deceased), Ruth and Louise.

EDWARD F. G. E. HITZE, watchmaker and jeweler, Erie, was born in Prussia, Germany, Feb. 3, 1844, son of Edward Hitzte, a Doctor of Theology and a Government Sec., Prussia. Our subject attended Posen College, and early in life learned the watchmaker's trade, at which he served a regular apprenticeship; came from Germany to America in 1870, and settled in Erie City, and was employed by Messrs. Jarickis; after remaining with them five years, he embarked in business for himself as watchmaker and jeweler, in which he has since continued; he is a good business man, and has made what he has by his own exertions. Mr. Hitzte was married, in this city in 1881, to Theresa, daughter of Andrew Wiesbauer, and a native of Erie City, of German descent, by whom he has one son, Edward Charles. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN J. HOGAN, contractor and builder, Erie, was born in Schoharie Co., N. Y., Oct. 25, 1843, son of Isaac and Polly Ann (Finch) Hogan, the former a contractor and builder in Schoharie Co., N. Y., and a descendant of the Hogans, who were early pioneers of N. Y. State, and the latter a native of Greene Co., N. Y. They were parents of twelve children, all living. Our subject was brought up to his present business, and at twenty-two years of age came to Corry, this county, where he spent two years, then came to this city and engaged at once in the business, with which he has since been prominently identified; he has also, in the meantime, done considerable business in his line throughout N. Y., Penn. and Ohio in connection with public buildings, and also operated extensively in connection with the Nickel Plate R. R. Depot Building. He married, in Erie City, Dec. 23, 1868, Minnie S. daughter of Darius Lovell (deceased), late of Crawford Co., Penn. To this union were born two sons and two daughters: Bertice P., born Feb. 26, 1871; Ada Kate, Dec. 18, 1872; Effa M., Aug. 24, 1874; and Jay J., May 12, 1879. Our subject is a Knight Templar and a member of the K. of H.; he has served several years in the Common Council of the city, and one term (1875) in Select Council.

SAMUEL V. HOLLIDAY, prothonotary, Erie, was born Oct. 20, 1841, in Springfield, this county, son of William and Fannie E. (Post) Holliday, former a native of this county, latter of Conn. Our subject's grandfather, Samuel Holliday, came to Erie Co. in 1795, was a farmer and owner of mills in Springfield Township. These mills were burnt down in 1836. Our subject's great-grandfather, James Holliday, was murdered by Indians in the early settlement of Penn. Subject's father had four children—Samuel V., Eliza J. (wife of D. M. Richardson), James C. and William P. Our subject attended the academies in Erie Co. from 1853 to 1858, entered third class in college in 1859, and graduated in 1861. From that year, he was engaged in farming till 1864, when he was appointed additional Paymaster U. S. A., Washington, D. C. In 1865, was ordered to Fort Monroe, Va., and afterward to Norfolk and Richmond, Va.; same year was appointed Lieut. Col. of Vols., by Brevet, and on Dec. 1 was mustered out of service. In 1866, Mr. Holliday was engaged in farming and stock-raising, a business he continued in till 1882. On Nov. 10, 1864, he married Margaret S. Gould, of Springfield, Penn. To this union were born William Morris, Anna G., Evan Lee and Fanny L. Our subject was elected prothonotary of Erie Co.

in 1881; he is P. E. C. of Cache Commandery, No. 27, K. T., Conneaut, Ohio. In politics, he is a Republican.

W. S. HOSKINS, dealer in choice groceries, canned goods a specialty, Erie, was born in Jefferson, Ohio, Dec. 24, 1859; son of S. D. and Mary D. (Webster) Hoskins, of English descent. The latter a native of Ohio. The former born in N. Y., is a carpenter and contractor, now in the lumber trade, Erie. They have 3 children living, viz.: Olive, wife of L. G. McNutt, of Warren Co., Penn.; W. S., and May I. Our subject was educated in Warren Co., and coming to Erie City in 1877, clerked in a store till 1883, when he bought out S. Cummins' grocery store, 4th and Chestnut streets; he is an enterprising young man, and is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church of this city.

HENRY J. HOWE, of the firm Howe, McClure & Co., Wooden-ware Works, Erie, was born in Vt., Nov. 20, 1832, son of Rufus and Susan D. (Stuart) Howe, the former a carpenter and joiner, of English descent, the latter of Scotch lineage. They had a family of four boys and four girls. Our subject, who was the second son, was raised in Mass. by his uncle, Reuben Stimson, of that State, and received a common school training till fourteen years of age. In 1861, he enlisted in the 10th P. R. V. C., Co. I, and was promoted twice for gallant conduct in the field, on the occasion of the battle of the Wilderness to Brevet Major, and was wounded at the battle of South Mountain; he retired from the army with rank of Brevet Major. Four days after his discharge he was appointed manager of the pail factory in Pittsburgh, where he remained from 1864 to 1873, when he came to Erie City and engaged in his present business. In 1856, Mr. Howe married Georgiana Holden, of English descent. Three children, Edward, Mead and Grace, were born to this union. Mrs. Howe is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church. Our subject has been a member of the Erie City Council; is Commander of G. A. R. Post of the city; in politics, a Republican.

BERNARD HUBLEY, retired coppersmith, Erie, was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., Jan. 7, 1811; son of Samuel and Jane (McCord) Hubley, the former of German descent and whose ancestors came to America before the Revolutionary war, settling in Pittsburgh, Penn., where our subject received his education, and learned the trade of his father, that of coppersmith. Mr. Hubley was twice married, on first occasion in 1834, to Margaret McCullough, by whom were five children, three now living. She dying in 1843, our subject chose for his second wife, in 1847, Mary W. Wasson, born March 4, 1814, in Crawford Co., Penn., daughter of David and Elizabeth (White) Wasson, natives of Penn., of German and Irish descent, and who came to Erie Co. in 1815, settling on a farm which is now inside the corporation of Erie City. Mrs. Hubley is the only member of her family now living. She is the mother of three children—Elizabeth J., deceased in 1872, wife of John C. Zeller (had one child—Mary H.); Sarah S., teacher in Erie City Graded Schools, and David, engaged in the oil business in Oil City, Penn. Mrs. Hubley's father died in Erie City at the patriarchal age of ninety-six. Her mother died in 1840. The family are members of the United Presbyterian Church of Erie City.

THOMAS HUGHES was born in Ireland in 1766, and there grew to manhood; immigrated to the U. S. when about twenty-one years of age, and located in Pittsburgh, where he followed his trade of brick layer and stone mason. In 1795, he came to Erie with the troops to assist in erecting the garrison and fort at this point. In 1796, Gen. Anthony Wayne on his way East stopped off at Erie, and remained sick at the garrison until his death in Dec. of that year. During his illness he was much annoyed by a smoky chimney, and one day becoming very angry, inquired who built it. On being informed that it was Mr. Hughes, he sent at once for that gentleman, and asked him if he had built the smoky chimney, and on his replying in the affirmative, "Mad Anthony" ordered him under arrest at once, exclaiming "I'll have you shot, sir!" Some of the officers interfered in Mr. Hughes' behalf, and the death of Wayne soon after ended the affair, Mr. Hughes assisting in digging the General's grave. After the death of Gen. Wayne, Mr. Hughes went back to Pittsburgh, and about 1800 again returned to Erie. In Jan., 1804, he married Martha Richards, a resident of Union Township, Erie Co. Penn.; she was a native of Lancaster Co., Penn., of Irish descent, and bore him nine sons and one daughter, viz., John, James, Jane, Alexander, Thomas, Robert, William, George W., Perry and David R. Of these Jane and George W. are the only survivors. Thomas was married and leaves a widow and one child, a daughter, Mrs. J. S. Henry, who resides in Erie. Robert was lost on the steamboat Erie, which was burned on lake Erie, on the 9th of Aug., 1841, when over 200 lives were lost. His body was recovered and brought to Erie and interred. Mr. Hughes owned half the block lying between State and Peach and Seventh and Eighth streets. His first residence was a small log cabin on Seventh street, but he subsequently erected the first brick house built in Erie. He also assisted in erecting the first court house in Erie Co., and when the building was nearly completed, he met with an accident that broke his wrist, which never fully regained its former strength. In 1810, he built a carding and fulling mill on the west bank of Mill Creek, close to its mouth, which he operated until 1824, when it was burned down. During a portion of this time he was also engaged in the manufacture of brick and lime. Upon the destruction of his mill he removed to a farm, previously purchased, in McKean Township, where he resided nine years; thence in 1833 returned to Erie, and died March 14, 1837, in the seventy-first year of his age. Mr.

Hughes possessed a vigorous constitution, but during the latter part of his life suffered much from a painful cancerous affliction, which he always endured with meekness and Christian resignation. Both he and wife were members of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church of Erie, of which he was an Elder from its organization until his death. His widow survived him some ten years, dying Aug. 18, 1847, aged sixty-one years. Mr. Hughes and family were closely identified with the growth and prosperity of Erie, and he always supported the character of an honest Christian man.

GEORGE W. HUGHES, retired merchant, was the eighth in the family of ten children of Thomas and Martha Hughes, and was born in Erie, Aug. 24, 1821. He was educated in the Erie Academy, and soon after reaching manhood engaged in the dry goods business. For many years he has lived retired from the active duties of life, solely attending to the private affairs of the family. He and his sister Jane reside on West Eighth street, Erie, in a comfortable home, enjoying life in a quiet, unostentatious way, yet satisfied and contented with their choice.

JAMES HUGHES was born in Erie, Penn., Dec., 13, 1806, and was a son of Thomas and Martha (Richards) Hughes, pioneers of this county. Our subject soon after reaching manhood became Postmaster of Erie and subsequently entered mercantile trade which he followed successfully until about 1859, when he retired from business, and henceforth devoted his attention to his private affairs. On the 31st of Jan., 1833, he married Emily Carmack, eldest in a family of three children of Jacob and Ann (Cummins) Carmack, the former of whom was a Captain in the war of 1812-15. John Cummins, father of Mrs. Jacob Carmack, served as a Captain in the Revolutionary war. To Mr. and Mrs. James Hughes were born eight children—Anna, wife of O. C. Thayer, of Erie; Martha J., deceased; Emily, wife of R. H. Thayer, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Robert K., deceased; James C., deceased; William, deceased; Thomas, who resides with his mother, and one who died in infancy. Mr. Hughes died at his handsome residence on west Eighth street March 4, 1875, after a useful life of nearly seventy years spent in the city of his nativity.

F. A. JACOBS, proprietor of livery and feed stables rear of Morton House, Erie, was born and reared in Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Our subject, in 1862, enlisted in 12th Penn. Cav., and did active service until the close of the war. He then located and carried on livery business on the Schaffer farm, Venango Co., Penn., for a short time. He became identified with the oil refining until 1873, when he went into the hotel business in West-field and in 1874 came to Erie. He is an active member of the I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. and G. A. R. societies.

CHARLES W. JARECKI (deceased), was born in Prussia, Germany, received a common school education there and early in life learned the jeweler's trade. He was married in his native land, and was parent of ten children, seven sons and three daughters. Our subject came from Germany to Erie in 1852, and worked at his trade, with one of his sons (three sons preceded him, settled in Erie and embarked in the jewelry business). Mr. Jarecki was a Republican in politics, and with wife a member of the German Lutheran Church. He departed this life in 1878. His widow still survives him. Charles Jarecki, Jr., the eighth in this family, is a member, also treasurer and secretary of the extensive manufacturing firm of Henry and Charles Jarecki (a description of their business will be found elsewhere in this volume). He obtained his education in Germany and when very young commenced to learn the trade of a machinist. He came to America, and in 1863 embarked in his present business; is a first class workman and a successful business manager. In politics, is a Republican. Mr. Jarecki was married in Erie City to a daughter of Jacob Becker, of German descent. They are parents of two children, viz.: Alexander and Freddie C.

GUSTAV JARECKI, President of the Humboldt Safe Deposit and Trust Co., Erie, established July 14, 1869, was born in Prussia, Oct. 21, 1829, son of Charles W. Jarecki, a life-long jeweler, who emigrated to America with his family in 1853, and settled in Erie Co. Charles W. was the parent of ten children, seven boys and three girls, who grew to maturity and now reside in Erie. The sons are all married and doing well. Our subject received his education in Prussia, both in the common and military schools, graduating from the latter. He served in the artillery three years as acting 2d Lieut. As an occupation he chose the jewelry trade, and embarked in that business in Erie City in 1857, continuing until 1869. Mr. Jarecki was elected to the Legislature from Erie City in 1878, serving two years. He was appointed U. S. Consul for Bavaria during Grant's administration in 1869, serving four years. He has been a member of the School Board eleven years. He organized and drilled an artillery company (known as Perry Artillery), during the rebellion, in 1861, but on account of ill health he was detained at home. He is President of the Jarecki Chemical Works, in Erie City, established in 1881; in 1869, he inaugurated the bank of which he is a charter member. Mr. Jarecki was married, in 1852, to Miss D. Engelhard, who has borne him six children—Alfred K., a chemist; Eddie, book-keeper in the bank; Clara, Flora, Gustav, Jr., Emma. In politics, our subject is a Republican.

JOHN F. JEFFERS, restaurant, Erie, was born in the State of N. Y., July 15, 1849, son of Michael and Bridget (Welsh) Jeffers, the former a laborer of Irish descent, the latter of English lineage. Our subject, who was the eldest in a family of five children, and acquired his education at Utica, Assumption Academy, from which he graduated in 1866.

He then accepted the position of clerk in a hotel, where he remained till 1875. Then, till 1878, he clerked in the Depot Hotel, Erie City, and since then has engaged in his present business. Mr. Jeffers was married, in 1879, to Hannah Ledwith, who is of Irish origin. They are members of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Jeffers is politically a Republican.

JOHN JERGE, proprietor of the Central House, Erie, was born in Erie Co., N. Y., in the year 1846, and in 1873 came to Erie, this county, and has since been connected with his present business. He was united in marriage, in 1862, in his native county, with Dorothea Herold, who was born in Germany, and reared in Erie Co., N. Y. This union has been blessed with six sons and two daughters, viz., John, Jacob, Joseph, Mary, Charles, Philip and Michel. Mr. Jerge and wife are regular communicants of the Roman Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A. Society.

R. M. JOHNSON, proprietor of livery stable, French and Seventh streets, Erie, was born June 20, 1842, in this city, son of John and Matilda (Burton) Johnson, natives of Pennsylvania, originally of Connecticut stock, who came to this county about the year 1808, settling in Erie City, where they lived a few years, and finally went on a farm in Summit Township. They were parents of the following children: William, who died in the West; Hannah, widow of Horace Olds; Charlotte; Henrietta, wife of Albert W. Graham; and our subject, who was married, in Sept., 1866, to Mary B., daughter of William Buss, and a native of England. To this union were born two children—Willie F. and Florence May, who died at four years of age. Mr. Johnson located in Erie City about 1866, and embarked in the livery business. He is the proprietor of a commodious brick stable, located on the corner of French and Seventh streets, and keeps up a first-class stock. He is courteous and accommodating, and is very attentive to his business interests.

D. M. JOHNSON, proprietor of the Reed House, also the Union Depot Hotel, Erie, was born in N. Y., June 23, 1845, son of James and Cyrene (Huffman) Johnson, former, hotel keeper and farmer, a native of Conn., of English descent, latter a native of N. Y., of German extraction. Our subject received his education at the academy of Johnstown, N. Y. After assisting in his father's hotel for a time, he was engaged as clerk in a dry goods store in New York three years, and then in the Congress Hall Hotel, Albany, N. Y. Following that he became manager of the Manhattan Democrat Club. Being induced by Com. Vanderbilt to open a restaurant at one of his railroad stations, our subject started the Butterfield House at Utica, N. Y. This he sold out in 1875, and removed to this city, occupying the Union Depot Hotel, and in 1883 taking charge of the Reed Hotel, the latter of which has been refitted at an expense of about $40,000. Mr. Johnson was married to Fannie, daughter of A. L. Woodruff, of New York. By this union are three children—William, Tom and D. M., Jr. Mrs. Johnson is a member of the Episcopal Church.

JOSEPH JOHNSON, a native of Ireland, came to this country with his father's family in 1793 and located at Milesburg, Centre Co. this State. He located in Erie Co. on a farm in Summit Township, where he settled with his brother James. He was married about 1814 to Miss Fanny Graham, who died about 1860. They raised a large family; James died in Michigan; John died at Mobile, Ala.; Robert died at Louisville, Ky.; William residing in Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Hugh Rutherford, of Erie; Joseph, Jr.; Orville died at Erie in 1873; James died in Summit, and G. N. who was District Attorney, and died Feb., 1857. Joseph, Sr., re-married in 1864, Mrs. George Gallagher, who survives. He was of great energy and industry, cleared and worked a large farm, and for many years carried on the transportation business between Erie and Pittsburgh and Bellefonte. About twenty years since he relinquished the active duties of farming and removed to Erie where he quietly passed the evening of his life. He was an active Whig and Republican; a member of the First Presbyterian Church and a devoted friend of his old pastor, Dr. Lyon. Joseph Johnson was born in Summit Township May 8, 1822. He remained with his father's family until 1853, when he removed with his wife to Erie where he entered the grocery business with his brother Orville, as partner under firm name, Johnson & Bro. About 1862, F. Brevillier was admitted into partnership when the style of the firm became Johnson & Brevillier. At the death of Orville Johnson in 1873, the remaining partners, Jas. Johnson and F. Brevillier, purchased his interest, the firm continuing, and are now doing business under the old name. About 1858, their store was destroyed by fire, but they immediately resumed business in the same line, which was continued for about twelve months in the Reed House, when the retail branch was dropped upon the removal to the Rindernecht Block on State street, where they continued in the wholesale business three years, then removed to French street, a few doors from their present premises. After remaining there about eight years, they moved to 105 and 107 French street. In 1865, Mr. Johnson purchased his lot on the corner of Fourth and Peach streets, and erected his beautiful residence, which is heated and illuminated with natural gas. Mr. Johnson served as Select Councilman eighteen years. In 1884, was chosen as delegate to the National Republican Convention at Chicago from the Twenty-seventh Congressional District. This race was very exciting, but Mr. Johnson's friends complimented him by a large and unexpected majority. He was married in Le Bœuf Township, Oct. 17, 1850, to Margerett, daughter of Robert Robinson, Esq. They have no children of their own, but have raised four, three girls and one boy, viz.: Anna, wife of E. S. Rice, Esq., of Chicago (have two children, Freddie and Margerett); Emma died at twenty years of age; Jennie at home, and Charles Funk, residing in Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Johnson and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church; he has always voted the Republican ticket, and has always been extremely successful both in public and private life.

DAVID T. JONES, manager of the Union Oil Co., Erie, was born in Marion Co., Ohio, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Thomas) Jones, natives of Wales, who came to America in 1807, settling in Penn. Thomas Jones was a manufacturer during his lifetime. Our subject attended the Ohio Wesleyan University, Del., took a scientific course of three years, and graduated in 1847. Subsequently, he entered the hardware business in Champaign Co., Ohio, carrying it on from 1848 till 1860, in which latter year he came to Erie City, and built the first oil refinery here, corner of French and Sixteenth streets. The firm was then known as W. P. Murray & Co., of which Mr. Jones was manager for thirteen years. At another time the style of the firm was O. C. Thayer & Co., our subject being manager four years; afterward merged into the present Star Oil Company. Mr. Jones was married, in 1847, to Mary, daughter of George Millice, a native of Virginia, and of French and German descent. To this union has been born one child—Cassius E. Mr. Jones is member and Sunday School Superintendent of St. John's Episcopal Church, of which he has been Vestryman seventeen years. He served two terms as Mayor of Erie City, and was Mayor of Mechanicsburg, Ohio, four years. Has been a member of the Masonic order since he was twenty-one years of age, and is a Knight Templar. In politics, he is a Republican.

HUGH JONES, carpenter and contractor and builder, dealer in real estate, Erie, was born in North Wales Feb. 15, 1812, son of John Hughes, a native of Wales. Our subject received his education in his native land, and chose the occupation of carpenter and house builder. In 1832, he was married to Eleanor Hughes, and same year emigrated with his young wife to America, remaining for some years in N. Y., where he worked at his trade until 1836, when they moved to Erie City, staying in Buffalo on their way. Our subject worked in the latter city and Erie as ship joiner, and finally set up as contractor and builder. He also operated a planing mill from 1848 till 1875. Mr. Jones has proved himself a successful mechanic and business man; is owner of about 50 dwelling houses in Erie City. He has been a member of Erie City Council; in politics, is a Republican. Our subject and wife are parents of three children—Elizabeth, wife of Charles W. Griest; Ellen, wife of George W. Slocum; and Hugh Jones, Jr., dealer in sash, doors and blinds.

HENRY S. JONES, Superintendent of Schools, etc., Erie, was born in Rochester, N. Y., July 9, 1832. His parents, Smith and Nancy (McGinley) Jones, were natives of the same State, and in their genealogy represented on the father's side Welch and Pilgrim stock, and on the mother's, Irish and German. They had seven children—Webster H., Sarah M., Henry S., Celeste A., Arthur T., Homer C. and Emma E., four of whom (Webster, Henry, Celeste and Emma) at this writing are living. Homer fell before Atlanta in the war for the Union. In 1834, the family moved to Michigan, the father engaging in mercantile pursuits and farming. Formerly a teacher, as was his father, he took a great interest in the education of his children and the development of the educational system of the State, serving on Boards of Education, as Town Clerk, and as School Inspector or Examiner of Teachers and Schools, for a number of years. Hence, at an early age, the attention of the subject of this sketch was often turned toward educational questions concerning school systems, qualifications of teachers, etc., and after passing through the best schools of his own vicinity, and teaching district school two terms, he entered the Michigan Normal School, and began the work of studying teaching as a profession. Besides the advantages of the professional and the classical course of the institution, Mr. Jones in his student days enjoyed the instruction and lectures of Dr. Bugbee, an English naturalist and microscopist of considerable note; Dr. Zoelger, a Prussian refugee, celebrated as well for his rare scholarship in the history of the growth of nations as for his prominence in opposing despotic measures of the rulers of the fatherland; and Dr. Charles Davie, the well-known author, and the leading teacher of mathematics at West Point for over twenty years. After serving as Principal of the Schools of Three Rivers, Mich., for nearly two years, and of Dowagiac, of the same State, for one year, he was called in July, 1858, to take charge of the West Ward Schools of Erie. This position he filled until July, 1865, when he was chosen as principal teacher of the East Ward and the West Ward Schools, embracing the whole city. In 1867, under the new law enabling board of school directors in cities of 10,000 inhabitants or over to elect a Supt. of Schools, Mr. Jones was elected as Supt., and duly commissioned by the State Dept. This office he has held continuously, making twenty-six years of service up to July, 1884, as an educator in the schools of Erie. Our subject is known throughout the State as an educational lecturer of force and originality. He has served as Pres. of the State Teachers' Association; as Sec. for several years of the National Association of Supts.; and is a member of the U. S. Council of Education, a society composed of the leading educators of the country. In 1881, Mr. Jones received from La Fayette College, Penn., the degree Ph. D. Mr. Jones is connected with the Park Presbyterian Church, having been a member of its session for a number of years. He has been an active member of the Young Men's Christian Association from the time of its organization, serving as Supt. of its Mission Schools, and has held the office of Librarian of the City Library for sixteen years. He was one of the organizers of the Natural Historical Society, and is one of its working members. In Aug., 1862, he married one of his teachers, Miss Caroline A. Ames, daughter of Enos J. and Jane Ames, of Erie. This union has been blessed with ten children, eight of whom are living, viz., Jessie Lincoln, Byra Belle, Bertha Celeste, Ruby Jane, Mary Ames, Emma Mansfield, Arthur Kelley and Esther Abbott.

JACOB KALTENBACH, proprietor of Farmer's Restaurant, Erie, was born in Erie March 23, 1849. His parents, Egnetz and Catharine Kaltenbach, settled here about forty years ago. The former was a native of Baden, and the latter of Prussia. They were married here and reared a family of three daughters and one son—Barbara, wife of Joseph Einhillig, a tinsmith of Erie; Elizabeth, wife of Louis Mack, a blacksmith and farmer at Geneva, Ohio (both Barbara and Elizabeth were children of his first wife); Jacob, and Mary, wife of John Siegrist, of Erie. The subject of our sketch learned harness-making when fourteen, and followed this occupation for twenty-one years, when he retired from it and took up his present business. He was married in 1876 to Barbara Schloss, who was born and reared in Bavaria, Germany. They have two sons and two daughters—Rosa, Anna, Frank and George. They are members and regular communicants of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Kaltenbach is at present a member of the City Council, and has filled other official positions.

JOHN M. KALVELAGE, manager of the Eagle Brewery, Erie, was born in Erie City Dec. 17, 1858, and is a son of J. H. and Josephine (Felix) Kalvelage, natives of Germany, who were married in New York, whence they came to Erie City in 1846, and were parents of ten children, seven of whom are living. J. H. Kalvelage is a prominent citizen of this city. For many years after coming to America he sold goods for a New York firm. He has been a member of the City Council for several years, and member of St. Joseph's Society, Reform Association, Sangerbund and Erie Maennerchor, and National Brewing Association. Our subject was educated at St. Benedict Academy, Erie, and was married in 1878 to Rosalea, daughter of Michael Oberkirch, and of German descent, by whom there are three children—George J., Robert J. and Bertha. Mr. and Mrs. Kalvelage are members of St. Joseph's Church, and the former is a member of St. Alphonsius and C. M. B. A. societies; is a Democrat in politics; was a delegate to the County Convention in 1881; is a member of the City Executive Committee, Judge of Elections in Sixth Ward, and was Collector of taxes in Second Ward in 1880. Adam B. Kalvelage, brother of our subject, was educated in Canacius College, Buffalo; was book-keeper to brewery for one year, and then took charge of the brewery as foreman. In Jan., 1881, he was taken ill with quick consumption, and died the following March.

JOSIAH KELLOGG (deceased) was born in Troy, N. Y., Dec. 16, 1792, son of Josiah and Affia (Holcomb) Kellogg, the former of whom departed this life in 1808, aged forty-five; the latter, who was born in 1767, died aged ninety years. Our subject was born while Washington was serving his first term as President, and had therefore lived under the administration of every President of the U. S. He remembered when there was not a canal, no steam power (therefore no steamboats or railroads), telegraphs, telephones, electric lights or oil used in this country, and also when Napoleon Bonaparte was defeated at Waterloo. Our subject spent his early life as clerk in N. Y. City; was drafted during the latter part of the war of 1812, but as his mother and sister were dependent on him, a companion went as his substitute. Mr. Kellogg came to Erie in 1818, embarked in mercantile trade, in which he was very successful; his competitors in this business were Seth Reed and P. S. V. Hamot. He was married, May 10, 1832, to Catherine Ramsey, by whom he had four children, viz., Josiah H., a resident of Chicago, Ill., who was a graduate of West Point, Col. 17th Reg. P. V. I., now on the retired list; Albert R., with J. B. Lyon & Co., grain dealers in Chicago; and Wainwright, a Lieut. in the U. S. Navy; William R., the oldest, departed this life in 1843, and Mrs. Kellogg in 1875; she was a member of the Presbyterian Church, as is also our subject. Josiah Kellogg, our subject, died March 21, 1884, in full possession of his faculties.

SIDNEY M. KELLOGG, Assistant Postmaster, Erie, was born in Sheffield, Mass., July 29, 1820, son of George and Cynthia (Merrill) Kellogg, the latter a native of Mass. of English descent. George Kellogg was a merchant, and came to Erie Co. with his family in 1827. Our subject is one of eight children, five of whom are still living, George H. Kellogg and Charles W. Kellogg in San Francisco, Cal.; Mrs. C. H. De Forest and Emily A. Kellogg in Birmingham, Conn. He was educated in Erie Academy, worked on a farm four years; afterward clerked in a store in Erie City, where he remained several years; he was in the South two years, and served as salesman in a warehouse in Mich. two years. Returning to Erie City, he was employed in the post office in 1849 as clerk, and appointed Assistant Postmaster in 1850; he has been under Postmasters Robert Cochran, Sill, Sloan, Judge Sterrett, I. B. Gara, Thomas Walker, Isaac Moorhead and E. W. Read. Mr. Kellogg was married in Erie City to Rachel McCarter, by whom are three children: Nellie, wife of David P. Jones, Engineer in the U. S. Army; Sidney, a salesman, and Harry. Mrs. Kellogg died in 1871; she was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

GEN. JOHN KELSO, deceased, was born in Cumberland Co., Penn., in 1766, son of William Kelso, of the same county. He was reared on a farm, attended the common schools of his native county, and came to Erie Co. in 1798, settling in Erie about 1800. He was a land agent, and for many years Associate Judge; also occupied the position of Prothonotary of Erie Co. During the war of 1812, he was Brigadier General and officer in charge at Erie. The General was married in Dauphin Co., Penn., to Sarah Willis Carson, born in 1776, died in Fairview, Erie Co., in 1842. To this union were born seven children, three now living—Albert J., a farmer in Mill Creek Township, this county; Caroline E., wife of Hon. Elijah Babbitt, of Erie, and William C., an influential Attorney-at-law in Erie. The General, who died in 1819, left a name truly honored and highly respected. He was free and upright in all his duties, and bore a character well worthy of emulation.

E. J. KELSO, deceased, second son of Gen. Kelso, was born April 10, 1800, in Fairview Township, this county. He was brought to Erie a boy, and as his father was in the discharge of public trusts, he was early instructed in the modes and duties of official routine. It was with experience thus in advance acquired, that he accepted the position of Prothonotary and Register and Recorder, to which he was appointed by Gov. Shultze in 1824, upon the death of Thos. Wilson. These duties were ably and satisfactorily performed for about twelve years, when relieved by a change of administration in 1835. In 1836, he was appointed by President Jackson Collector of the port at Erie, to succeed Col. Thomas Forster, who then died, after filling the position of Collector for thirty-five years. Mr. Kelso thus made the second Collector of the port, and having been re-appointed by President Van Buren, held the office till 1841, when displaced by a change of parties. Since then he has held no office. For some years he was engaged in the forwarding business at Erie, wherein his large and early acquaintance was utilized. Mr. Kelso was married, in 1828, to Miss Malvina Atkins, of Buffalo, whose elegant tastes and genial manners, as evinced in her surroundings, will be kindly remembered by our readers. Mrs. Kelso died in 1871. The inheritor of a large landed property in and near Erie, and connected, as we have stated, with its public business, prominent as a citizen, and a leading politician, Mr. Kelso became widely known and was largely trusted. He was an earnest and conspicuous member of the Democratic party, shared in its triumphs, yet was as loyal to its teachings under adversity, as in its palmier days. To have filled his public positions satisfactorily, to the appointing power and to the people, to have been faithful to all these trusts; and to have laid down his functions without a stain upon his record, was the pleasing contemplation of Mr. Kelso during the evening of his life. He died Feb. 10, 1879, leaving two daughters—Emma S., married in 1865 to C. C. Eddy, a resident of Erie Co., Penn., they live on the old homestead; and Mary, at home, an intelligent young lady, and out of respect to her father and grandfather, this volume finds a place in her library. C. C. Eddy, Emma's husband, was born in R. I., Jan. 27, 1829, son of Sylvester and Thamer H. (Luther) Eddy, natives of R. I., of English extraction. Mr. Eddy enlisted in the U. S. Navy in N. Y. in 1862, and in the same year was appointed Second Lieut. He served five years and six months on the U. S. steamer Michigan during the civil war. In 1878, he resigned his position, and embarked in the lumber business; is a Democrat in politics.

ELI KENDIG, commercial traveler, Erie, was born in Lancaster, Penn., Feb. 12, 1831, son of Henry and Sarah (White) Kendig, natives of Penn., of German descent, and parents of ten children. Henry Kendig was a farmer and came to Erie Co. with his family in 1831, dying in 1882. Our subject was brought up on a farm, receiving a common school education, and at the age of nineteen commenced the milling business, which he followed eight years. Subsequently he entered the wholesale grocery business in company with C. Siegel & Co., in which he remained three years, chiefly in the capacity of traveler for the firm. He was also engaged in the retail trade for several years in Erie. He was married in Erie, in 1860, to Mary L., daughter of G. W. Colton of this city. By this union were born—George C., Anna G., J. F. and F. W. Mrs. Kendig is a member of the Universalist Church, he of the I. O. O. F. and Knights of Pythias.

S. B. KENNEDY, Depot Master, Erie, was born in Fayette Co., Penn., Feb. 8, 1837, son of Hugh and Harriet (Bell) Kennedy, natives of Penn. The former a steamboat captain, was of Irish descent, the latter of Scotch extraction. Our subject received his education in Brownsville, Penn., and at the age of sixteen, entered the service of the Penn.; R. R. Co., in capacity of brakeman, one year; freight train conductor, three years; passenger train conductor, one year; afterward promoted to yard master at Pittsburgh, Penn. was train master for the Cumberland Valley R. R. Co. in 1862, and subsequently train master of the Mountain Division P. R. R., where he remained till 1863, when he was appointed by Thomas A. Scott to take charge of a prospecting party in the West. This terminated in 1865, in which year he was appointed yard master for the P. & E. and Oil Creek R. R. at Corry, Penn. In Oct., of same year, he was assigned to the position of depot master of the Union Station, Erie. And in addition to these duties was appointed general yard master at Erie, Penn., in 1879, which position he is now filling for the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co. Mr. Kennedy was united in marriage, Feb. 12, 1856, with Martha, daughter of Daniel Eicher, merchant of Pittsburgh, Penn. To this union were born: William, Samuel B. and Kate Luella. Our subject and wife are members of the first Methodist Episcopal Church of Erie, of which he has been Trustee ten years. Mr. Kennedy has been U. S. Mail Agent at this point since 1870.

BALTHASAR KERN, saloon and restaurant, 2420 Peach street, Erie, was born in Rhinefalz, Germany, June 2, 1829, and learned weaving there. He came to America in 1856, locating here and engaging in merchandising until 1862, when he went to Ohio, and continued in the same business until 1870. He then returned to Erie and established his present occupation, which he has carried on successfully. He was united in marriage, Oct. 19, 1861, with Lovina Brown, of Summit Co., Ohio, whose parents were natives of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Kern have a family of four sons and three daughters living, viz.: John Henry, Mary S., Ida, Frank, Clara, Michael and Frederick. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

CHRISTIAN KESSLER, grocer, wholesale liquor dealer and ship chandler, 401 and 403, corner State and 4th sts., Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, Nov. 21, 1842; son of Henry and Elizabeth (Backfish) Kessler, natives of Germany. Henry was engaged in the stone quarries in Germany. On coming to this country was a farmer. He was father of six children, four living and residents of Erie Co. Our subject, the youngest, obtained his education in Germany, and in Greene Township, Erie County; then for six years clerked here; subsequently engaging in the grocery business, in which he has since continued very successfully. Mr. Kessler was married here, in 1863 to Helen Bloeser, a native of Erie City; he had eight children, seven surviving, viz., Elizabeth, Helen D., Anna K., Mary J., Clara L., Christian H. and Florence E. Mrs. Kessler was a member of the Lutheran Church; she died May 4, 1883. Our subject belongs to the same denomination; is a Democrat in politics; has served two years in Common Council; and for four years was a member of the Select Council of Erie City; also on License Board in 1875, the only liquor man ever appointed in the City of Erie.

HENRY KESSLER, grocer, W. 18th street, Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, Aug. 12, 1856; son of Henry Kessler, a stone cutter by trade, and father of six children. Our subject, who was the eldest, came to America in 1872; he acquired his education in his native land, and at the Erie High School; he then clerked for C. Kessler in the grocery business till 1878, when he entered into partnership with his employer. This continued till 1882, since which time he has been alone. Our subject married in Erie City, in 1880, Juditha, daughter of Martin Riedinger. Mr. and Mrs. Kessler are members of St. John's German Evangelical Lutheran and Reformed Church, 23d and Peach street. Mr. Kessler has been remarkably successful, and by his own unaided efforts has made all he now possesses; he is a Republican in politics.

L. KESTER, liveryman, Erie, was born in Erie Co., N. Y. In 1851, when twenty-one years old, he left his native place and went to Meadville, Penn., where he engaged in the dry goods business; he then for eleven years was connected with the N. Y. Central R. R., and subsequently with the L. S. & M. S. R. R. at Erie. He retired from railroading in 1881, and engaged in his present business, which he had previously established. Mr. Kester was married at Meadville in 1854, to Betsy E. Sharp, who has borne him two sons and two daughters—F. J., Clara E., Minnie and Charles.

CAPT. ROBERT KING (deceased), grandfather of Alfred King, whose sketch follows this, was one of the early pioneers, and the first actual settler of Erie Co., Penn., having come here in July, 1794, by way of the West branch of the Susquehanna and over the mountains, nearly on the route of the P. & E. R. R. to the Tionesta River, near Sheffield, in Warren Co. The following is taken from Mr. B. Whitman's History of Le Bœuf Township, Erie, Penn. "First land was selected in Le Bœuf, in 1794, by Capt. Robert King, who took up 400 acres at the present Ford Bridge." "Capt. King retiring to his home in Lycoming Co., he brought his family along in the spring of 1795." * * * * * "Capt. Robert King, the pioneer of the township, had been an officer in the Revolutionary war, and also rendered the State important service in securing treaties with the Indians; as a reward for which the Legislature of Penn. voted him 400 acres of land, west of the Allegheny River. It was to take advantage of this bounty that he first visited the township. In company with his hired man he crossed the mountains from Lycoming Co. through an almost impenetrable forest to the present site of Sheffield, Warren Co., Penn., where he built a canoe in which they descended the Tionesta and Allegheny, to where Franklin now stands. From there, they poled the canoe up French Creek 80 miles, to the site of the Captain's future home. On returning to Lycoming Co., they took a different route eastward from the Allegheny, and when they came back with Capt. King's family, of five sons and six daughters, it was by way of Pittsburgh." He and his family arrived at their new home May 15, 1795, and here the grand old patriot and soldier remained until the day of his death, which occurred about 1826. The Captain was a brave and accomplished soldier and officer, and served his country with honor and credit throughout the Revolutionary war. He was personally acquainted with Gen. La Fayette. "When La Fayette," says Mr. Whitman in his History of Le Bœuf Township, "returned to visit this county, and was at Waterford, the Captain, who had a personal acquaintance with him, during the struggles and hardships of the Revolutionary war, called to pay his respects to the eminent and patriotic Frenchman. Gen. La Fayette saw him when several rods away, and speaking out said: 'There comes Capt. King,' and advanced eagerly to meet the veteran."

ALFRED KING, U. S. Customs, Erie, was born in Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., son of Thos. King, of same township, and a grandson of Capt. Robert King, of Revolutionary war fame, and one of the early settlers of Erie Co. Our subject was educated at the Academies of Waterford and Erie, graduating from the latter. He then taught for a few years, in the meantime reading law with a view of adopting that profession. Subsequently he was appointed Deputy Prothonotary and Clerk of the courts of the county, and remained as such for six years; he was then elected Treasurer of the county, and filled that office for three years; after this was elected Mayor, and served two consecutive terms. During his last term was elected Prothonotary and Clerk of the Courts, filling this incumbency three years. During his public life he engaged extensively in manufacturing here, and also dealt largely in grain (particularly in barley), and was instrumental in giving Erie a prominence as a grain depot. His connection with the above industries has extended over thirty-five years. He has also been interested in real estate, both here and in the West, evidences of which can be seen in the place known as King Town, which he planted and has built up. He is a Royal Arch Mason, and has been connected with the order for over thirty years, and is also an active member of the K. of P. society. He married in Livingston Co., N. Y., in 1845, Mary Kenedy, a lady of fine literary attainments, a sister of the Hon. Archabald Kenedy, of that county. They have three sons—Kenedy, in railway business at Minneapolis, Minn.; Josiah Holdship, First Lieut. in the Eighth U. S. Cav.; and A. H., commission merchant of Erie. The family are members of the U. P. Church.

MOSES KOCH (deceased), born in the Palatinate of Bavaria, Dec., 1811. At twenty years of age he came to America, learning the language of his adopted country very quickly. He engaged in mercantile pursuits immediately on his arrival, living in Pine Grove, Schuylkill Co. March 9, 1837, Mr. Koch was married at Philadelphia to Miss Matilda Ulman, eldest daughter of Simon Ulman. The young couple settled in Rome, Lancaster Co., Penn., where Mr. K. first embarked in business on his own account. After residing there about a year, they went to Pittsburgh, living with Mrs. Koch's parents a short time, but finding the smoky atmosphere of that city detrimental to his health, he subsequently located in Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., remaining three years. Mr. Koch was one of the principal merchants there; was a great favorite, and his departure was universally regretted. In 1842 he came to Erie, bringing his wife and young son with him; he opened a dry goods store in the Hughe's Block. Later he occupied a store in the Reed House Block for a short time, after which he purchased the property on the southeast corner of Fifth and French streets, erecting thereon a large and substantial brick block, in which he carried on an extensive business for many years. The building burned down several years ago, and was never rebuilt. It had formerly been the site of Col. Forster's family mansion during the war of 1812. The original building, a log house, was standing at the time Mr. Koch purchased the property, and in tearing it down numerous letters and relics were found. Mr. K. also erected several other substantial buildings, he always taking a great interest in the general development of the city. Immediately on his arrival he took a leading place in business and social circles, and his cheerful disposition made him many warm friends, who clung to him during life. Jan., 1865, Mr. Koch removed with his family to Philadelphia, but not liking city life, returned to Erie, April, 1871, and resumed business. He retired from active pursuits in the year 1878, his health having failed in the meantime, and died Sept. 2, 1881, after an illness of four days' duration. Mr. Koch was the pioneer Israelite of Erie, and one of the founders of the Jewish synagogue; he was also one of the corporators and most liberal subscribers to a fund for purchasing land for the Jewish Cemetery, in which his remains are deposited. His was the leading spirit of the Jewish Church, and to his energy and perseverance it owes its present growth and prosperity. He was an active member of the Masonic fraternity, served several consecutive terms in the councils of the city. In politics, he was a staunch Democrat, voting that ticket to the day of his death. As a man, Mr. Koch was kind hearted, generous to a fault and extremely charitable. He was conspicuous for his enterprise, perseverance, excellent judgment and strict honor and integrity in business dealings. Possessed of a vigorous constitution, with an active mind and body, he earnestly engaged in extensive business undertakings, leaving many monuments to testify to his usefulness and worth. As a husband, he was attentive and affectionate, as a father, kind and indulgent, as a neighbor, generous and sympathizing, as a citizen, active, honest and true. In short, in all the relations of life, whether as a friend, neighbor or citizen, he exhibited a commendable spirit of interest in the welfare alike of his people, family and city. Mr. Koch leaves a family consisting of his esteemed widow, four sons and two daughters and two grand-daughters—Simon C., broker in Calcutta, India; Jacob and Cauffman, of Erie, and Mark, also a broker in Calcutta; Lillie, now Mrs. Albert Doebelin, of Philadelphia, and Emma Augusta, residing at home. Herman, second son, is buried with his father in the cemetery at Erie. The children of Mrs. Albert Doebelin consist of two daughters—Eva and Matilda.

JOSEPH KOHLMILLER (deceased), was born in Germany in 1827, and there learned his trade, that of a dyer. In 1854, he was united in marriage with Walberga Christel, a native of Germany, born in the year 1828. Of the family born to them, three sons and three daughters are living, viz., Walberga, wife of Frank Boelte; Elijah, a dyer, was married in Detroit, in 1880, to Minnie St. Amour, who was born and reared in Detroit (she departed this life June, 1882, leaving a son Frank; her remains lie in Erie Cemetery); Theresa, wife of Henry Runzer, a carpenter; Julius and Henry, also dyers, and Louisa. Mr. Kohlmeier, Sr., came to America about 29 years ago, and departed this life May 9, 1883, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery.

C. KOLB, retired, Erie, was born in Frankenthal, Germany, May 17, 1816, son of Casper Kolb, a Government officer in Germany. Our subject received a good education, and learned the comb-making and hairdressing trades in his native land. Immigrating to Buffalo, N. Y., in 1835, he came to Erie City in 1838, on Sept. 1st of which year he was married in Erie Co. to Elizabeth Zwibf. To this union were born nine children, eight now living, viz., Elizabeth M., widow of John B. Suerken; Josephine; Frederick (accidentally killed at a fire in Erie City in 1879); Henry; John, proprietor of the city bottling establishment (who was born in this city, received his schooling here and at the business college, Buffalo, N. Y.; established his present business in Erie in 1875; employs four thoroughly practical men, has four wagons on the road, and his trade is constantly on the increase); Charles C., Sophia, Fredericka Caroline and Helen, a teacher in the public schools, organist and leader of the choir in St. Paul's German Evangelical Church. Our subject was one of the first to found that church, and has been a member of the choir ever since it was organized, in 1848; he has been an Elder many years, and was Secretary and Treasurer when the church was built; has been a member of Erie City School Board ten years, and of Erie City Council two years; was the principal mover in organizing the first brass band in Erie City in 1839. In politics, he is a Democrat.

LAURENCE KOSTER, merchant, Erie, was born in Luxemburg, in Europe, Oct. 27, 1827; son of Matthias and Lena (Demoling) Koster, natives of Germany; the former a farmer. Our subject was reared on the farm, received his schooling in his native land, and there learned wagon-making; he came from thence to Erie in 1847, and for the first three years was a ship carpenter on the ship Michigan; he subsequently engaged in this occupation for ten years, when he came to Erie City and worked at his trade for three years, when he embarked in the dry goods business, in which he continued successfully for fifteen years, when he gradually drifted into the carpet, wall papering and window curtain trade. Mr. Koster was married in Erie City, 1849, to Elizabeth, daughter of George Fritz, and of German descent. To this union have been born ten children—Lena, John, Elizabeth, Maggie, Daniel, Mary, Katie, Annie, Minnie (deceased) and Clara. Mrs. Koster and the family are Protestants; Mr. Koster is a Catholic; in politics, he is a Republican, and has been a member of the Erie City Council.

JOHN PHILIP KRAFT, grocer, Erie, was born in Niederhausen, Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, May 1, 1834, and was reared to sash making there. At nineteen, he came to America and located here, following carpentering for sixteen years; he had in the meantime engaged in the grocery business. Mr. Kraft was married in Erie, Sept. 15, 1857, by the Rev. Mr. Farber, of St. Paul's Church, to Justina Sendlinger, who was born in Metzingen, Germany, June 14, 1832, and came to this county about 1850. Two children have been born to this union—Margaret Katharine, wife of Wm. Flickinger, insurance agent, Erie; and Chas. Frederick, a machinist. The family are members of St. Paul's Church. Mr. Kraft is an active member of the Odd Fellows, being a member of the Encampment, and of the A. O. U. W. He is at present Inspector of Elections in this city, which office he has held for fifteen years; he has also filled minor official positions, one of which was that of Census Enumerator in the Fourth Ward.

CHARLES AUGUST LANG, grocer, Erie, was born in Erie in 1849. His parents, William and Maria Lang came here from Saxony in 1846, William Lang having been one of the pioneer book-binders of this city. The subject of this sketch, when thirteen, began the molding business, but after two years abandoned it and took up merchandising, as a clerk. In 1871, he established himself in business, and has since carried it on successfully. He was married in 1870 to Louisa Schaeffer, of Buffalo, whose ancestors came from Wurtemberg, Germany. Two sons have blessed this union—George William and Charles August, Jr. The family are members of St. John Evangelical Church. Mr. Lang is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In 1880, he served as District Deputy Grand Master of the District of Erie Co.; also served three terms as representative to the Grand Lodge of Penn., and is at present Sec. of Erie City Lodge No. 871.

J. P. LEAHEY, proprietor of the Bon Ton Restaurant, Erie, was born in Ireland, August 22, 1852; son of John M. Leahey, a miller by trade, who came with his family to America, in 1854, to Erie City, and was in the employ of the Michigan and Lake Shore Railroad, till his death, which occurred March 20, 1871. John P. Leahey, who was the youngest in a family of six children, acquired his education in Erie City and at a college in Illinois. He then learned printing, serving four years, and followed this occupation from 1865 to 1874; then worked for one year in the Burdett Organ Factory; since then has been engaged in his present business. Our subject was married, August 22, 1876, to Ellen E., daughter of Michael Crowley, an early settler and a prominent farmer of Erie Co. Mr. Leahey and wife are members of the Roman Catholic Church. The former, in politics, is a Democrat, has been a member of the Executive Committee, Clerk of Sheridan Guard, has been President for two years. Mr. Leahey is a fluent writer, was appointed Recording and Corresponding Secretary for the Reform Association, and drew up its constitution and by-laws.

• ADDISON LEECH, farmer and real estate dealer, Erie, was born in Butler Co., Penn., Feb. 20, 1824, son of David and Rhoda (Findley) Leech, who were natives of York Co., Penn., and of Ireland respectively, and of English descent. The father accumulated a large fortune in the transportation business, being a pioneer of this industry in this part of the country, residing at Leechburg of which town he was the founder. Addison Leech received his education at Allegheny College, Penn., and early in life engaged in the transportation business with his father, with whom he remained till his death, which occurred in 1858; then continued in the same employment with an elder brother who died in 1862. Since then our subject has not actively engaged in this business, though he still retains an interest in extensive lake investments. Mr. Leech is largely interested in real estate. Going to Dakota in 1881, he bought 35,000 acres of land, which he has put into the hands of his sons, but resides in Erie, Penn. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity; in politics is a Republican. Mr. Leech was united in marriage at St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 3, 1852, with Mary I., daughter of John S. Watson, by whom he had nine children, eight living, viz., John W., W. Findley, Addison, Jr., Mary (at home), Isadore (wife of Chester Bliss, of Boston, Mass.), Isabella (at home) Ella and Louise. Harry L. died 1880, aged ten years. Mrs. Leech is a member of the Episcopal Church.

MICHAEL LIEBEL, Water Commissioner, was born in Germany, June 17, 1843; son of John and Barbara (Hammer) Liebel; latter a native of Germany. Our subject received his education mainly in the common schools. He came to America when he was about fourteen years of age and learned shoe-making in Erie City. He embarked for himself in the boot and shoe-making business in 1862, carrying it on five years. Since then he has been in business of various descriptions. He was married in Erie City in 1865, to Clara, daughter of John Uhr, by whom he has three sons—Eugene, clerk in hardware store in Erie City; Frederick W. and M. at school. Mr. Liebel and wife are members of the Catholic Church. In politics is a Democrat. Mr. Liebel was a Councilman in Erie City for seven years, and for a time President of the Select and Common Council, was elected Water Commissioner seven years ago last May; served one year as President. He has been sufficiently successful in business to enable him to accumulate a comfortable income. He has been engaged in various speculations in Erie City.

WILLIAM LOESCH, real estate dealer, stock dealer and butcher, Erie, was born in Erie City, Penn., Aug. 17, 1837; son of Laurence and Margaret (Doub) Loesch, natives of Germany, who came to Erie from there in 1836. The former, a butcher, was in business here from 1840 till his death, which occurred in 1865. He reared a family of seven children. Our subject, the youngest, was educated in Erie schools and naturally learned his father's trade. In 1867, he started an omnibus route, which was subsequently merged into the street car line; then for a time, he conducted and owned an extensive livery stable here; in 1874, he built a large packing house in Erie, and met with a heavy loss by its being blown down during a storm. Mr. Loesch was married in this city, 1857, to Margaret, daughter of Peter Simons, a native of Germany. She was born on the ocean, during her parents' voyage to America. To this union have been born Joseph, in butchering business in Erie City; Ida, wife of Fred Miller, plumber in Erie City; Edward with his father; and Mary A., wife of Harry Ross, an employe of the P. & E. R. R. Mrs. Loesch is a member of the Protestant Lutheran Church; he is a Democrat in politics; has been a member of the Council, Erie City, for seven years.

A. T. LOOMIS, manufacturer of bricks, and real estate agent, Erie, was born in North East, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 4, 1837, son of Rufus and Sarah (Tuttle) Loomis, natives of Penn., of English descent, the former a builder and contractor. They were married in Erie Co., and reared three children—A. T., John J. and Ella May. The mother and children are still living in North East, the father died in 1873. Our subject was educated in North East Academy. For eight years he clerked in a store, and then came to Erie City, where he was a partner in Brown's Hotel for three years; he next engaged in the manufacture of bricks, which he carried on successfully for ten years; he at present deals in real estate. In 1868, he married Marion E. Colt, a native of Erie City, of English descent, and daughter of Thomas G. Colt, first Mayor of Erie City. To this union were born two children—George Colt and Mabel T. Mrs. Loomis is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics, Mr. Loomis is a Republican.

JOHN P. LOREI, firm of Lorei & Eflley, dry goods, Erie, was born March 28, 1853, at Erie, son of Michael, a blacksmith, and Amelia (Walter) Lorei, natives of Germany, who came to Erie City about 1839, were parents of nine children, all reared in this city. Our subject, the second in this family, attended Erie High School from the time he was able to go to school till 1870, when he became salesman in a dry goods store. In 1878, he embarked in the dry goods business on his own account in company with his present partner; he possesses good business qualifications, and has been very successful. Is, politically, a Democrat.

ARTHUR S. LOVETT, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born June 9, 1849, at Clymer, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., son of Joseph and Sarah Ann (Dutton) Lovett, the latter a native of N. Y., and of English extraction. Joseph Lovett, who was a native of Me., and of Scotch descent, was a merchant tailor by trade, but in early life was connected with the Thespian art as an actor of some repute; he and Wilkes Booth were students together for dramatic life under the father of J. W. Booth. When twenty-six years of age he retired from the stage and married. Our subject, the second in a family of six children, received a liberal education, and began reading medicine with Dr. G. Thiekstun, of Wattsburg, Erie Co., Penn.; he afterward attended a course of lectures at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, N. Y. City, and also the State Medical University, Mich., from which he graduated March 29, 1871, and in May he commenced the practice of his profession in Waterford, Erie Co., Penn. In May, 1872, he moved to the city of Erie. On June 1, 1876, the Doctor married Fannie E., daughter of John J. Zimmerman, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Lovett are members of the Central Presbyterian Church; he is a member of the A. O. U. W.; was elected Recording Secretary of Erie Co. Medical Society July 6, 1875; re-elected in 1876, 1877 and 1878; represented that society in the American Medical Association in 1876, and Aug. 1877, was appointed member of the Board of Pension Examining Surgeons. Jan. 1, 1881, he was appointed Physician and Surgeon of Erie Co. Alms House, and re-appointed in 1882, 1883 and 1884. In 1881, he was elected Councilman, and re-elected in 1882. While experimenting with antiseptic gases and electricity in 1882, Dr. Lovett discovered a process for embalming, by the use of which human bodies may be kept free from putrefaction, and with natural appearance for a long time—he at present (June, 1884) having a subject in his office that died in Aug. 1882. Investigations which led to this discovery were conducted upon the germ theory of putrefaction advocated so ably by Louis Pasteur, of Paris, and Dr. Lovett considers the remarkable results obtained by himself in this direction as another proof that the germ theory of putrefaction is the correct one.

WILLIAM H. LUCE, proprietor Erie Furniture Co., Erie, was born in N. Y. July 21, 1830, son of Hiram and Maria (Saeger) Luce, natives of Mass., of English extraction. The former was a Methodist clergyman, and traveled through the State of Penn. on horseback and afoot to meet his appointments. They were parents of five children, our subject being the only one in this county. He was educated at Meadville, Penn., came to Erie Co. in 1853, and choosing the profession of dentistry opened an office in Erie City in that year, and practiced until 1862. Subsequently he was in the employment of the railroad company in Erie City as agent for six years; he then engaged in the furniture business with his father-in-law under the firm name Ayres & Luce. This partnership was discontinued in 1874, when our subject went to California for two years. On his return he again embarked in the furniture industry, this time for his own account. Mr. Luce was married, in Erie City, in 1860, to Carrie C., daughter of J. W. Ayres, and a native of this city. To this union were born Wilson A., with Mt. Hickory Iron Co.; Kate, Carrie and Helen.

REV. GEORGE ARMSTRONG LYON, D. D., was born in Baltimore, Md., March 3, 1806. He was the son of Samuel and Betty W. (Brown) Lyon, daughter of the Hon. Jacob Brown, of Philadelphia. His ancestors came originally from Scotland and England, but his grandfather, William Lyon, emigrated to Pennsylvania from the North of Ireland, and in connection with Gen. Armstrong, whose sister he married, surveyed and laid out the town of Carlisle. Dr. Lyon was early left an orphan, and made his home with his uncle, George A. Lyon, for whom he was named, a prominent citizen and lawyer of Carlisle. He was educated at Dickinson College, where he graduated in 1824, at the age of eighteen. He then entered the theological seminary at Princeton, and after finishing his course of study, was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Carlisle, on the 9th of April, 1828. During the summer he crossed the Alleghany Mountains on horseback, and spent the following winter between Fredonia, N. Y., and Erie, Penn. Receiving a call from the Presbyterian Church in each place, for reasons unknown to the writer, he decided to accept the one to Erie, and on Sept. 9, 1829, was ordained by the Presbytery of Erie, and installed pastor of the church there. In this capacity he remained the balance of his life, a period of over 41 years, his death having occurred March 24, 1871, at the age of sixty-five. "He was brought into the ministry just before the great spiritual harvest time of 1830 to 1832, and entered in as a vigorous and earnest and prayerful reaper, and came forth rejoicing, bringing many sheaves with him. The church was greatly edified, and other churches sprang from its roots and grew from its richness." He was a wise and zealous minister, and his undivided time and talents, as well as his own private means, were cheerfully given to advance the purposes and institutions of the Gospel in the county and elsewhere. As a preacher, he was distinguished for the grave, affectionate and instructive nature of his sermons, for his logical force, a clear perception of the truth, clearness in stating it, and pungency in applying it. He was also distinguished for the aptness of his prayers, as all who remember them will testify, and for his ready sympathy for his parishioners and friends when in sorrow or trouble. His warm and practical charity was manifested repeatedly in both public and private actions; his whole soul was in his work, and he loved to preach the great central truths of the Gospel; at the same time he kept his heart close to the throbbing pulses of humanity, and his interest in all local and national questions which involved the everlasting principles of truth and equity was always keen and strong. He died at Avon Springs, N. Y., whither he had gone hoping to recuperate his failing health. On Tuesday, March 28, 1871, his funeral services, which were very solemn and impressive, were held in the church in which he had so long ministered, and his body was consigned to the tomb in the Erie Cemetery. The funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Richard Craighead, of Meadville, formerly of Carlisle, Penn., though in the services many of his brother ministers of various churches in the city participated.

JAMES LYTLE (deceased) was born in Waterford, this county, Feb. 17, 1808; son of John and Sally (Anderson) Lytle, natives of Penn., former of French, latter of English descent. John Lytle was a farmer for many years and a member of the Legislature from this county. Our subject was reared on the farm, and in early life learned the tailor trade. He was married, in Erie City, Sept. 19, 1830, to Kezia Dunn, born in N. Y. Dec. 12, 1809, daughter of James and Sarah (Harned) Dunn, latter a member of the Friends' Society or Quakers. To this union were born ten children, seven of whom grew to maturity, viz.: Lucinda, wife of Spencer Booth, Chicago; Sarah, widow of Sidney Booth; Susan, widow of Henry Sherman, in Wis.; John, deceased; Clayton, who rose from private to Colonel of 17th P. V. I. during the war of the rebellion, he was a prisoner about a year, died in Erie Sept. 26, 1876; Martha K., wife of Daniel Jones, a commercial traveler, and Viola V. H., wife of Samuel Jacobs, in employ of railroad company in Ill. Mr. Lytle was at one time Collector of Port of Erie City; was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of which he was Elder for many years. He died in Erie March 31, 1876. Mrs. Lytle, his widow, still resides in Erie City.

W. W. LYLE, contractor, Erie, was born in Montgomery Co., Penn., June 1, 1839, son of Francis and Louise (Bruner) Lyle, natives of Penn., the latter of German descent, the former of Scotch-Irish lineage. A house plasterer by trade, was at one time a merchant, but in later life a hotel keeper. He reared seven children. Our subject, who was the eldest, was educated in the seminary, Montgomery Co., Penn. He was united in marriage, in Erie City, with Elizabeth, daughter of L. L. Lamb. To this union have been born five children, viz.: Kittie, Lyman L., Walter W., George M. and Francis. Mr. Lyle has followed various occupations through life, and accomplishes whatever he undertakes. He is a member of the Erie City School Board; in politics, he is a Democrat.

JOSEPH McCARTER, President Second National Bank, Erie City, was born in Franklin Co., N. Y., March 20, 1829. He is the son of Joseph and Isabella McCarter, both natives of N. Y., and of Irish descent. At the age of ten our subject began to battle with life's realities as a store clerk in Erie, in which service he remained until 1852, when he opened a grocery store on his own account, and conducted it with success for eight years. In 1860, he entered into partnership with W. J. Little, in the establishment of the iron works, which in 1864 were disposed of to Selden & Bliss, the present proprietors. In the same year he built the Erie car works—manipulated his interest with profit for two years, when he sold out to the Pittsburgh & Erie R. R. Co. With others, he, in 1867, erected the Erie City elevator, a structure of great value to the city. In 1869, this property passed into the hands of the Penn. R. R. Co. by purchase. In 1870, he served as Vice President and general manager of the Second National Bank, and eleven years later was elected to the Presidency, which position he still holds. From 1881 to 1883 he acceptably filled the office of Mayor of the city. In politics, Mr. McCarter identifies himself with the Democratic party. He was married, April 15, 1857, to Eliza J. Morehead, by whom he has had two children—Cora, wife of Lieut. John M. Bowyer, of the U. S. Navy, and Wm. J.

R. T. McCCLURE, of the firm Howe, McClure & Co., proprietors of Wooden Ware Works, Erie, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., in 1842, son of Robert and Elizabeth McClure, natives of Penn., of Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject received a common school education in his native county, and followed the profession of accountant from 1856 till 1873. In latter year he came to Erie City, and embarked in his present business. Mr. McClure was married, in 1881, in Pittsburgh, Penn., to Jenette Brankston, a native of Pittsburgh, and a member of the United Presbyterian Church. The business of the firm Howe, McClure & Co., is well conducted; the two partners named have charge of the manufacturing department, and the third partner, T. W. Shacklett, has full charge of the office, books, and the buying and selling. Our subject graduated from the Iron City Commercial College in 1858. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN C. McCREA, pork-packer, Erie, was born in N. Y. in 1850, son of James McCrea and brother of E. J. and James McCrea, well known pork-packers of Cleveland, Ohio. The greater part of his early educational training was acquired in his business experience. His grandfather and father having been in the pork-packing industry, our subject followed their footsteps, and at the age of twenty-one embarked in business with his brothers, under firm name McCrea Bros., pork-packers, Cleveland, Ohio, remaining there till 1880, when he came to Erie City, and opened business on his own account. From seven to fourteen men are employed during the season, and the business transacted is large and steadily increasing. Mr. McCrea is also proprietor of three delivery wagons that do business through the city. His facilities and business connections enable him to carry on a flourishing trade.

GEN. D. B. McCREARY, attorney-at-law, Erie City. There will always attach an interest to the pioneer families, which will never probably belong to others who came at a later date, as they have laid the foundations of our social and material status, and coming generations can only modify and develop that which they, by their energy and perseverance, established. By their strong arms were the forests felled, the undergrowth cleared away, and the sod broken; by them were the primitive cabin, the log schoolhouse and the church erected. Later inhabitants make further and higher advancement in all these, and proceed to further develop the embryo foundations of the pioneer. To the latter class belongs the subject of this sketch, born Feb. 27, 1826, in Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., to Joseph F. and Lydia (Swan) McCreary, natives of Penn., and the parents of nine children, viz.: Samuel S., Richard S., Selina C., John J., Mary E., Jackson, D. B., Lydia A., Martha S. The father came to Mill Creek Township in 1800, from Lancaster Co., Penn., and was a farmer during his life. Gen. D. B. McCreary was brought up subject to the duties of the farmer's life; when a mere lad his tastes inclined to science and literature, which has increased with his years. In his boyhood days he made the best use of such educational advantages as the public schools of his native township afforded, and the limited means of his family would allow. He also attended the "Erie Academy" and the Washington, Penn., College; afterward taught school at Erie; was principal of the Winchester, Ky., Seminary from 1851 to 1853. While teaching at Erie, he read law with Judge John and W. A. Galbraith, and in 1853 began practicing law, forming a partnership with J. B. Johnson. In 1855, was appointed aid to Gov. Pollock with the rank of Lieut. Col. His connection with Mr. Johnson closed in two years, when he joined Jonas Gunnison and continued until the breaking out of the rebellion, when he was attached as 1st Lieut. of Co. B, in what was known as the Erie Regt. He was prominent in the organization of the 145 Regt. Penn. Vols., of which he was appointed Lieut. Col., and subsequently was commissioned to the rank of Colonel, and later breveted Brig. Gen., and held the position until the close of the war. He was confined in Libby, Macon, Charleston and Columbia Prisons for ten months. On his return from the war he resumed the practice of law, and, like all who love their profession, has been successful. In 1866, as a token of the esteem in which he was held by the many friends of his resident district, he was elected to the Legislature, and served with credit to himself and his constituents for two terms. In 1867, he was appointed Adj. Gen. under Gov. Geary, and served three years. In 1870, he was returned to the Legislature. He served six years as a State Manager of the Dixmont Asylum. It is a pleasure to record him as a gentleman of fine natural endowments and acquired abilities, enviable reputation, professional and social. He adheres strictly to the principles of the Republican party, and his eloquence, as a political speaker, is sought in various parts of his resident State. He is one of the founders of the Park Presbyterian Church of Erie; was married, in 1851, to Annette Gunnison, daughter of E. D. Gunnison, one of the early settlers of this county. This union has resulted in two children, viz.: Sophia, wife of Henry A. Clark, a prominent attorney of Fall River, Mass., and Wirt, who graduated, June, 1884, with honor as Cadet Midshipman at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

JOHN McMAHON, lake engineer, Erie, was born in Erie City, March 27, 1857, son of M. and Mary (Lehan) McMahon, natives of Ireland; the former, a sea-faring man, came to America in 1854, and here followed R. R. contracting for several years. He reared a family of six children, viz.: Bridget, John (our subject), Daniel, an Alderman, Fourth Ward, this city; P. H., a Captain, sailing on Lake Erie; Katie and Mary. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1878, with Anna Bowers, a native of Erie City, and a daughter of Isaac Bowers. This union has been blessed with two children: Josephine and John. Mr. McMahon is a Democrat in politics.

DANIEL McMAHON, Alderman of the Fourth Ward, Erie, was born at Jackson Station, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 10, 1859, son of Michael McMahon, who came to America from Kilrush, Limerick, Ireland, about 1851, when twenty-one years old, and settled here about 1854. He married Mary Lehan, of Bantry, Ireland, who came to this country about 1852, at eighteen years of age. Their family consists of three sons and three daughters—Bridget, John, a lake engineer; Daniel, our subject; Patrick, a lake captain; Catherine Agnes and Mary Frances. Our subject began life for himself, when thirteen, as a cabin boy on a lake steamer, and after three years shipped as a sailor, and at twenty-one became a licensed pilot, and as such remained until the present year, when he engaged in the study of law. He is an active enterprising citizen, taking much interest in the social and industrial development of this city.

CLARK McSPARREN (deceased), was born in Erie, Penn., July 2, 1810, second son of Archibald and Margaret (McKay) McSparren, of Scotch-Irish descent. Archibald McSparren came to Erie Co., in 1802, and for years carried on his business, that of a merchant tailor in Erie. He was here during the war of 1812, and made some of the uniforms for the officers of Perry's fleet. Our subject received his education in Erie and at the Waterford Academy, from which he graduated in 1829. He then clerked for three years in dry goods store. In 1833, he was appointed Cashier of Erie Bank, which position he retained as long as the institution existed. He, with a brother, then built the Eric City Mills; he subsequently bought his brother's interest and continued the milling business alone till 1859, when he rented the mill. He was considered a good judge of real estate, and dealt in it extensively with more than average success. He married, Sept. 10, 1835, Mary Ann, daughter of Chester and Sarah (Steel) Jones, of English descent, and a native of Conn. Her family moved in a wagon, drawn by an ox team and one horse, from Conn. to Penn. in 1816. Five of the children born to this union are living—Albert J., a book-keeper; Frank, with Stearns Manufacturing Co.; William Clark, with Union Oil Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Charles; Archibald, Secretary and Treasurer of Art Novelty Co. (limited); Mary Emma (Locke). Mrs. Clark McSparren is a member of the Universalist Church of Erie. Mr. McSparren departed this life April 18, 1875, in Erie. He was a Republican in politics, and for nine years was a member of Erie City Council.

JAMES C. MARSHALL, retired attorney, Erie, was born July 27, 1799, in Franklin Co., Penn. His parents moved to a farm in Weathersfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, in the spring of 1805. Our subject attended a country school until March, 1813, then went to select school taught by Elias Grover, until May, 1816. Mr. Grover and he went to Winchester, Frederick Co., Va., and there jointly engaged in teaching school for one year. Mr. Grover desiring to return to Mass., his native State, Mr. Marshall took a school alone and continued in that profession until the spring of 1820, in which year he returned to Ohio, and soon after entered the academy in Warren, Trumbull Co., Ohio, remaining in that institution four years. In April, 1824, he entered the office of Hon. Thomas D. Webb, and commenced the study of law; was admitted to the bar in that town, June 15, 1826. Soon after his admission he entered into partnership in the practice of law, with Hon. Rufus P. Spalding, late one of the Supreme Judges of the State of Ohio. At that time there were four counties in one circuit—Trumbull, Portage, Geauga and Ashtabula, and Mr. Marshall was a regular attendant on them all. One winter he met Don Carlos Barrett at court in Ashtabula Co., who proposed to him to go to Erie and form a partnership with him. Mr. Barrett was a gentleman of fine address, and a fluent speaker, so Mr. Marshall concluded to try it for a year. Consequently, on the 1st of May, 1828, he planted himself in the borough of Erie, Penn., entered into articles of copartnership with Don Carlos Barrett for the term of one year; when the year expired he declined to renew the partnership. He then opened an office on his own hook. In Nov., 1829, our subject married Eliza Weatherbee, niece of Judge Freeman, of Warren, Ohio, and at once brought his young wife to Erie, settling down permanently. In the winter of 1830, James C. Marshall, Jonathan Weatherbee and Alexander Wilson bought out a mercantile establishment, together with the lease of a flouring mill and distillery. Mr. Marshall then moved from Erie to Girard to take charge of the financial part of the business, Weatherbee and Wilson being experienced merchants. In the winter of 1832, our subject sustained a severe compound fracture of the leg, and Mr. Weatherbee died. Mr. Marshall soon afterward sold out his interest to Mr. Wilson, and devoted his time and attention to the practice of law. About Jan. 1, 1839, he was appointed Prothonotary and Clerk of several Courts of Erie Co. by Governor Porter, but owing to certain disputes as to the validity of David R. Porter's election for Governor, Mr. Marshall did not obtain the keys of office till May 1, that year. He was appointed Postmaster at Girard under President Van Buren's administration, an office he held until after the election of Gen. Harrison. He remained in Girard until April 1, 1844, when he removed to Erie and entered into partnership in the practice of law with the late Chief Justice James Thompson. When the latter was elected to Congress in the fall of 1844 or 1845, the partnership was mutually dissolved. Mr. Marshall was appointed Revenue Commissioner in the spring of 1848, to represent Erie, Crawford and Warren Cos., serving the term required by law. A partnership in the practice of the law by the Hon. John P. Vincent and James C. Marshall, May 1, 1849, for the term of five years was mutually dissolved at the expiration of that period. A partnership was then entered into between James C. Marshall and his son Francis F. Jan. 1, 1861, which continued until the former gave up the practice in the spring of 1881. Our subject has held the office of President of the Erie Co. Mutual Insurance Co. since March, 1859; was elected President of the Marine National Bank of Erie on Jan. 19, 1867, and has been re-elected every year since; was one of the Trustees of the Erie Academy from 1847 to 1856. Mr. Marshall's father and grandfather (James Marshall) died in Trumbull Co., Ohio, each in his eighty-fifth year; his mother died aged eighty-seven. Our subject has four children, two sons and two daughters. His oldest son, James, is a fruit grower in the county of Solona, Cal.; Mary W. is the widow of Commander James W. Shirk, U. S. Navy (she has three children, all living in Philadelphia); Francis F., a lawyer living in Erie (has a wife and three daughters), and Laura O., wife of S. E. Norris, of Philadelphia (they have no children, having lost two).

F. F. MARSHALL, attorney at law, Erie, was born in Girard, this county, May 21, 1835; son of James C. and Eliza (Weatherbee) Marshall, the former of whom was a prominent lawyer of Erie City. Our subject received his education at the Erie Academy, and Yale College—was a member of the class of 1856. He commenced the study of law with his father in 1855, and was admitted to practice his profession in 1856. The Committee of Examination before whom he passed were Chief-Justice Thompson, Judge Galbraith, E.

Babbitt and John H. Walker. In 1864, Mr. Marshall was admitted to the United States' and Supreme Courts. He was appointed United States Commissioner under Pres. Lincoln's first administration in 1861. Mr. Marshall was married, in 1862, to Fannie, daughter of Col. Camp, civil engineer, Erie City. Their children are Florence C., Laura and Mary. Mrs. Marshall is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; in politics he is a Democrat.

ELISHA MARVIN, eldest son of Elisha Marvin and Elizabeth Selden, his wife, was born at Lyme, Conn., Nov. 22, 1768; brought up on a farm. About 1792, in company with his brother-in-law, Judah Colt, and his brother Enoch, he settled in Canandaigua, N. Y. In 1796, Mr. Colt having been appointed agent for the Population Company, both brothers removed with him to Erie Co., and settled at Colt's Station, in Greenfield Township, where Elisha bought a large tract of land. He was Justice of the Peace in Greenfield for many years, and long one of the most prominent surveyors and farmers in the county. He married Minerva Prendergast, of Jamestown, N. Y., May 13, 1812; died Sept. 29, 1829. Mrs. Marvin, who was a woman of more than usual culture, died April 1, 1858. Their children were William E., born March 21, 1814; and Elizabeth Susan, born Nov. 29, 1818, died in the fall of 1873.

Enoch Marvin, brother of Elisha, was born in Lyme, Oct. 19, 1774; after spending a number of years at Greenfield and Erie, he went to Beaver Co., Penn., as agent of a land company, where he died March 31, 1840, leaving a large estate, much of which was in Erie Co. He married Eliza Hull in 1820. She survived him a number of years. They had one child which died in infancy.

Elihu Marvin, youngest brother of Elisha and Enoch Marvin above named, was born at Lyme, Conn., Aug. 1, 1791. He early developed a taste for business pursuits, and became associated with Gen. David Humphreys, of Derby, Conn., in the woolen manufacture. Sept. 10, 1813, he married Ann Humphreys, a niece of the General. After several years of active prosecution of the woolen business, his health failed and he withdrew from the concern. About 1823, he moved to Ripley, N. Y., where he purchased a farm and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. In 1842, changed to Erie, living for a number of years on a farm which included the site of Marvintown. About 1854 or 1856, he laid out part of his farm in town lots, and sold off a large number. About 1864, he built a residence on Tenth street, where he resided until death. He was influential wherever he lived, but had a great repugnance for holding office; was an enthusiast in favor of schools and as a fruit grower; a liberal giver to the Presbyterian Church, with which he early associated himself. Mrs. Marvin died April 30, 1875. Mr. Marvin died Aug. 29, 1878, having acquired an extensive property. They had two children—Susan, born in 1816, died in 1834; Sarah, born Jan. 29, 1820, married Rev. L. G. Olmstead Dec. 20, 1838, died May 25, 1843, leaving an only child—Sarah L., born May 18, 1840, who married Matthew Griswold, Jan. 8, 1866, and died Feb., 1871, leaving two sons, viz., Matthew Griswold, Jr., and Elihu Marvin Griswold.

SELDEN MARVIN, City Recorder and Attorney, Erie, only child of Dudley and Mary (Whalley) Marvin, (brother of Elisha, Enoch and Elihu) was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., June 9, 1819, named after his grandmother, who was of the Connecticut family of Seldens; received his education mainly at Canandaigua Academy, and at Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, Penn.; spent one year in printing office in Boston. Parents moved to New York City in the summer of 1837, where he read law until 1841 in the office of his father, who was one of the most distinguished attorneys in the State, and for eight years a member of Congress. In 1841, removed to Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where he was exclusively engaged in farming until 1846; in the latter year entered upon the practice of law at Jamestown. In 1847, was married to Miss Sarah Wilson Dinsmore, of Ripley, and returned to the farm. A year or so later formed a connection with Hon. Geo. W. Parker, now of the city of New York, and resumed the legal profession at Westfield, N. Y.; in the fall of 1852, was elected Special County Judge, and in 1855 County Judge of Chautauqua County, serving in the latter position until Jan. 1, 1860; moved to Erie in June, 1860; became a member of the firm of Spencer & Marvin, and practiced law until 1877. Was the Democratic candidate for Assembly in 1862; Democratic nominee for Congress in 1870, coming within 500 votes of an election; Democratic candidate for Elector at Large in 1872; Mayor of Erie City in 1877; the same year elected City Recorder for five years which office, by re-election in 1882, he still holds. The marriage of Judge Marvin and his wife has been blessed with five children, three of whom survive, viz.: Charles Dinsmore Marvin, engaged in the banking business in the city of New York; Anna Humphreys, wife of William D. Lewis, and Elizabeth Selden Marvin, wife of Robert W. Neff, of Boston, Mass.

MART MAUER, wholesale confectioner, Erie, was born in Germany Sept. 13, 1849, son of Jacob Mauer, a farmer. Our subject was reared on the farm until 1867, when he came to America, settling in Erie City. Here he clerked in a grocery store till 1869, in which year he entered on his present enterprise, and with the increase of facilities in making confectionery by steam power, the business, which has a bakery in connection, is steadily increasing, and he is soliciting trade all over the United States, as Mr. Mauer fully understands the wants of his customers, and the necessity of keeping in stock, of his own manufacture only, a class of goods fresh and pure. He was married to Annie Mary Von Busich, a native of Erie, Penn., who bore him four children—Frederick W. J., Laura, Ella and Charles A. Our subject and wife are members of the Protestant Church.

GEORGE V. MAUS, general agent Penn. R. R. Co., and President of the Board of Trade, Erie City, was born in Pennsylvania July 29, 1841, son of Lewis H. and Elizabeth (Vance) Maus, natives of Pennsylvania. L. H. Maus in early life was a manufacturer, but latterly a farmer, and is now a resident of Harbor Creek Township, this county. Our subject received the rudiments of his education in Columbia Co., Penn., and completed his tuition in Philadelphia. In early life he embarked in the commercial business, which he carried on for some years, and in 1862 accepted a position with the Penn. R. R. Co. in Philadelphia. Since 1870, Mr. Maus has been general agent for that company in Erie, Penn. At the commencement of the late war he was in Georgia, and there drafted into the Confederate army, but managing to get North, was drafted into the Federal army, and fought the South by proxy. In 1862, our subject was married to Harriet M., daughter of Reuben Marcy, and by this union were born Frank G., Annie W., Bessie V., Robert S. and Clara L. Mr. and Mrs. Maus are members of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Erie City, of which he has been Vestryman for several years. He holds other offices in connection with benevolent societies, etc. He has taken 32^d in Masonry; is a member of the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania. He owns valuable property in Erie City, and several farms in Erie Co., and is an admirer of and interested in raising valuable blooded horses and cattle.

DR. GEO. J. MEAD, dentist, 728 State street, Erie, was born in Chesterfield, New Hampshire, in 1844. At the age of seventeen he began the study of his profession in the office of Drs. A. A. and G. L. Cooke, able dental practitioners at Milford, Mass., where he continued until 1864, when he enlisted in the 4th Mass. Cavalry, with which he served until the close of the war. He subsequently located at Meadville, Penn., but came to Erie in 1867, where he has since been in the practice of his profession. In 1871, he was united in marriage with Anna M. Wilhelm, of Mishawaka, Ind. Of three children born to them only one survives—Edwin Bradley, born in 1875.

FRED C. MEISER, meat market, Erie, was born in Prussia, Germany, July 9, 1849; son of Charles and Elizabeth (Rhode) Meiser, who were also natives of Germany. Our subject naturally following the occupation of his father, grandfather and great-grandfather, became a butcher. He came to America, landing in Erie City, in 1865. For the first six months he just managed to make his board, then after working for four and a half years by the day and month, he and a brother joined and started a butcher shop, which he has conducted successfully since. For a time Mr. Meiser ran two places of business, but gave up one, preferring to keep the business so that he could attend to the minutest details personally. He was married in Erie City to Sophia Bach. Of the five children born to this union, four are living, viz.: Henrietta, Augusta, Martha and Alfred. Mr. and Mrs. Meiser are members of St. Paul's Church, this city; the former is a member of the A. O. U. W., and of the D. O. H. societies.

PRESCOTT METCALF. Prominent among the self-made men of Erie who have taken an active part in the development of the city is Prescott Metcalf, Esq. No one individuality is more indelibly stamped upon the community. He is the son of the late Joseph Metcalf, the evening of whose life was spent in Erie, and was born in Putney, Windham Co., Vt., Jan. 25, 1813; he was one of thirteen children, and at the age of eight years commenced to provide for himself by his own labor, being employed by an uncle, with whom he remained for a number of years. During this period, he attended for three months in the year, through three years, the common schools of the neighborhood, at that time of the commonest sort. At the age of twenty-two, he came to Erie and engaged with his brother-in-law, Ira W. Hart, as manager of the livery business on 5th street, east of French street, where he remained five years. While thus employed, he attracted the favorable notice of Rufus S. Reed, the leading business man and capitalist of Erie—then in the zenith of his career—whose intuitive judgment of the character and capacity of men was seldom at fault. Mr. Reed engaged him to take charge of a particular branch of his immense business. Soon afterward, the position of steamboat agent at Erie became vacant, which by the request of his employer was added to Mr. Metcalf's other duties. Having for some years successfully performed these double duties, he was then entrusted with the general management of their entire shipping and vessel interests at Erie. These trusts were discharged with fidelity, and to the satisfaction of his employer. This was so manifest, and his services so indispensable to his employer, that when another situation with increase of salary was offered to Mr. Metcalf, Gen. Reed candidly admitted that it was out of the question to dispense with his services, that he could make his salary whatever he might choose to. Mr. Metcalf drew for years $2,500 per annum, a sum more than equivalent to $5,000 at the present day. He remained in Gen. Reed's employ for twenty-two years, from 1840 to 1862. This embraced the closing years of Rufus S. Reed's career, and the most important part of Gen. C. M. Reed's. In these years, their steamers and sailing vessels ran on all the lakes from Buffalo to Chicago, all to be built, equipped, provisioned and overseen, their cargoes to furnish, and all to be kept afloat and made to pay. Steamers of national repute, as the Pennsylvania, Jefferson, Madison, Erie, Buffalo, Missouri, Niagara, Ohio, Louisiana, Keystone State and Queen City, with the brigs Clarion, America, Susquehanna, St. Paul, St. Anthony, etc., all of which were run in the course of this period, and nearly all built by the Reeds in those years. It will be remembered that there were no railroads in operation to Erie until January, 1852. The canal, left unfinished by the State from Erie to Beaver, was taken up and completed, Mr. Reed being President, and Gen. Reed contractor, and when completed he entered upon an active business, in which the building, equipment and running of boats became necessary; the railroad from Erie to New York State line, in the building of which Gen. Reed was President, and contractor for the ironing of the whole, the Erie Bank, with numerous farms, and mill, and all the details of a business unequalled by any one in this region. In 1843, Gen. Reed was elected to Congress, which made his absence necessary. While absent, the health of his father, R. S. Reed, forbade his active participation in business, so that Mr. Metcalf was required to take active supervision of the whole. Though, in 1862, Mr. Metcalf went into the coal business for himself and left Gen. Reed's employ, yet for years he was consulted by him constantly on matters of importance. During and since his connection with the Reeds, he has been identified with many important enterprises, both in and out of the city. Of these we may name the running of a line of stages between Erie and Pittsburgh from 1840 to 1843; the construction of the Northern Canada Railroad, in which he was associated with Gen. Reed and Milton Courtright; the Erie Extension Canal; the Erie & North East Railroad, in which he was a Director for some years; the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, of which for many years he was a Director; a corporator and one of the originators of the Erie Cemetery, in the purchase of the grounds for which he, with others, gave his personal guarantee. To him, as one of the principal projectors of the Erie Gas Works, in which he has always been a large stockholder, is the city mainly indebted for the Gas Works, carrying the stock when it paid but one per cent on the investment. He was manager for the oil shipments for various railroads during the early years of that trade. He was one of the organizers of the Dime Savings Bank, Trustee of Erie Academy, Director of Public Schools, and Mayor of the city from 1862 to 1865; and an organizer, Trustee and liberal contributor to the Park Church. Among other of his enterprises, was the erection of the Burdett Organ Factory, begun Jan. 2, 1872, and in ninety days occupied by 120 mechanics in the manufacture of organs. Since its erection, 3,000 of its instruments have been completed and shipped, to the value of millions of dollars. In 1880, associated with John Clemens as equal partner, he built the Malleable Iron Works, giving employment to over 180 mechanics. With Col. Benjamin Grant, he built Wayne Block, in 1860, on Front street, and rebuilt it after its destruction by fire in 1868. In 1872, he built the block on the west side of State, between 7th and 8th streets, and in 1866 his elegant residence corner Sassafras and 9th—his home for the last eighteen years; also purchased residences for his sons on adjacent lots, and other residences in the city and on his several farms. His domestic surroundings have been exceptionally happy. He was married, June 9, 1846, to Miss Abigail R. Wilder, a schoolmate, from Putney, Vt. They have had five children—Joseph P., William Wilder (deceased), Frederic W., Nellie (deceased) and George R. His father, for about twenty years, made his home with his son where, in 1868, at the age of ninety-four, he died, being then reputed to be the oldest Mason in the United States, his body having been taken to Vermont for interment. This venerable man, a type in habit and deportment of the old school, was a link connecting us with the past, for he remembered distinctly some of the events of Shay's insurrection in 1794. In politics Mr. Metcalf acted with the Whig party during its existence, and then with the Republican. Into his party associations, he brought all of his characteristic force and energy. While never a candidate for other than a municipal office, he has exerted a marked influence, bringing to the support of his favorite candidate all of his intensity of purpose and energy of action. The war, with its large levies of men for the army and navy, furnished him full scope for the exercise of his versatile abilities. Here his zeal was manifested, and the large reinforcements sent forward from Erie during his occupancy of the Mayor's office were much augmented by his ceaseless efforts. He had three brothers who were in business in Erie—Samuel H., who died some fourteen years since; Charles, long in mercantile and banking business, now in Toledo, Ohio, and James, deceased. He had also three sisters, Eliza, wife of Ira W. Hart who died in 1839, Lucy (Mrs. Hart) who died in 1842 and Mary, the esteemed widow of Joseph D. Clark, deceased, who resides in Erie with her family. Of all these, he has been the counselor and firm friend, and has managed with success numerous trusts confided to his charge. Such has been the career, such the record of a busy, active and successful life. If to do the work of five men could be called busy, then it may be so denominated; and if to acquire wealth and to know how to use it for the enjoyment of himself and the happiness and employment of others, and to lend a helping hand to all those enterprises which in church or State may merit assistance, and having projected to aid them through, then Mr. Metcalf's life may indeed be called a success; and now in the fruition of all these objects, surrounded by a family of prominence and usefulness, and in a community which appreciates his services and worth, Mr. Metcalf, still active and useful, is enjoying the evening of a life, old in years, but still erect, vigorous and active, apparently good for a score of years of labor, usefulness and success.

JOSEPH P. METCALF, manufacturer, Erie. Prominent among Erie City's business men is the gentleman whose name heads this sketch. He was born and reared here; son of Prescott and Abigail R. (Wilder) Metcalf, natives of Vermont, and of English extraction. Our subject received a good English education at Erie Academy, Erie City, and dwelt in the place of his nativity till 1870, when he emigrated to the West, and after engaging in the banking business at Nebraska City for two years returned to Erie City and was in business with his father until 1880. Since that time he has been a member of the firm of Erie Malleable Iron Co., limited, occupying the position of Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Metcalf is an intelligent, energetic business man; was married in the State of New Jersey, in 1877, to Celia Fletcher, a native of New York, of English descent, by whom he has had three children, two surviving—Frances and Mary. Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf are members of St Paul's Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Republican. He is a member of the Council of Erie.

P. A. MEYER, of the late firm Marks & Meyer, merchant tailors, Erie, was born in Germany, Oct. 5, 1844; son of Ludwig Meyer, a leading medical practitioner of Posen, in Prussia, where he died. Our subject was partly educated in his native land, and on coming to New York State in 1858, attended school there for a time. He then clerked in a merchant tailor's establishment in Schenectady, N. Y., eight years. In 1856, he came to Erie and formed a partnership with Charles S. Marks. Marks & Meyer carried on business for seventeen years at the same stand on State street. March 15, 1884, the firm dissolved, Mr. Meyer at that time starting for himself in the manufacturing and sale of clothing. Our subject was married, in this city, in 1870, to Louise, daughter of Christian Sexauer. To this union were born Emma, Aida, Ludwig Garfield and Otis Blaine.

GEORGE R. MILLER, assistant engineer Erie City Water Works, Erie, was born near Hamilton, Ontario, in 1853, where he was reared until thirteen years old, when he came to this country with his people. His father, William H. Miller, a farmer, settled at North East. Our subject, when eighteen, engaged in railroading and took charge of the Harbor Creek Depot for two years, when he engaged in his present business here, with which he has since been reputedly identified. Mr. Miller was married in 1876 to Nellie Connells, of Canandaigua, N. Y. Two sons and one daughter have blessed this union: George C., Elgin and Marietta Mand. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are active members of the Baptist Church. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.

GOTTLIEB MISCHLER, grocer, No. 518 Fourth street, Erie, was born in Switzerland, March 1, 1844, son of John and Elizabeth (Walden) Mischler, natives of Switzerland, who came to America and settled in Erie in 1855. Our subject is a self-made man beginning with a quarter of a dollar capital. He first cleaned fish, gradually working himself into a successful fish trade which he carried on for ten years, and in 1863, embarked in the grocery business, in which he has since continued. He was married here to Kate Berry, a native of this city, and a daughter of Jacob Berry, who is a railroad engineer. To this union have been born six children, viz.: Edward, Etta, Charles, Arthur, Lillie and Katie. Mr. and Mrs. Mischler are members of the Lutheran Church.

DAN MITCHELL, Captain of Police, Erie, was born in Jamestown, N. Y., March 23, 1841, son of Harlow and Louise (Bidwell) Mitchell, natives of Vermont, the latter of English-French extraction. The former, who was a miller, and in later life a farmer, was of Scotch-German lineage. He came to Pennsylvania in 1850, and died at "Mitchell's Corners" in Erie Co. in 1871. Our subject is the third in a family of four sons and one daughter, latter deceased. He obtained a good school training, and choosing the occupation of engineer, when quite young, ran an engine for fifteen years. In 1861, he enlisted in Co. C, 83d P. V. I., serving for a time as wagon-master. June 30, 1862, he was taken prisoner, sent to Libby Prison till exchanged, and was discharged in 1863 for disability. From 1872 to 1875, he served on Erie City police force, and for five years was County Detective. In 1881, Mr. Mitchell was appointed to the Erie City police force, and in 1882, was elected Captain. Our subject was married in March 16, 1875 to Jennie A., daughter of Robert Hamilton, of Meadville, Penn. Their family numbers three—Jessie, Dean and May. In politics Mr. Mitchell is Republican.

CHARLES JENKINS MITCHELL, Mate of the steamer Schuylkill, Anchor line, Erie, was born in Padstow, Cornwall, England in 1845. He was reared a sailor, serving in the English Merchant Marine until 1861, when he joined the United States Navy under Capt. C. H. Wells, of Admiral Farragut's fleet, Gulf Squadron, and after a year's service was honorably discharged. He afterward re-enlisted in the Navy, serving principally in the transport service till the end of the war when he was honorably discharged. He subsequently engaged in the American Merchant Marine where he continued until 1872, when he took up lake service. He was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 6, 1876, to Mary Ann, daughter of George B. and Mary Marshall Jones, natives of England. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell belong to the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the K. of P. society.

R. S. MOFFETT, dealer in crockery and glassware, Erie, was born in the Empire State, Aug. 14, 1844; son of Jairus and Almira (Brainard) Moffett. The former, who had been a merchant in early life and afterward Sheriff of Wyoming Co., N. Y., was a native of New York State, where he died in 1879. The latter was a native of Vermont, of Scotch descent. They were parents of two children, our subject being the youngest. He was educated in the academy at Perry and for seven years served as clerk in a dry goods store, afterward, in 1862, launching out in the same business for himself in Perry, N. Y., in which he continued till 1869, when he came to Erie City and opened an extensive wholesale and retail crockery, china and glassware room, which is 38x155 feet in dimensions. Mr. Moffett was married in Perry, N. Y., to Ruth, a native of Perry, N. Y., of Scotch descent, and daughter of Josiah Andrews. To this union was born one child—Allen, at school. Our subject and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN MOORE, retired sailor and business man, Erie, was born in Waterford Township, Erie County, Penn., Nov. 20, 1812; son of John Moore, a hotel keeper, who came to this county in 1798 and carried on business at Waterford; he was a soldier in the war of 1812, and reared five children. Our subject obtained his education in the common schools, when eleven years old going as a sailor on Lake Erie, where he continued most of the time till 1850; was for years clerk on a boat. During this period he also engaged in business in Erie City.

R. S. MOORHEAD, Clerk of Erie County Courts, was born in Moorheadville, Harbor Creek Township, this county, June 3, 1844; son of Joseph M. and Harriet E. (Scott) Moorhead, the former a farmer; they were natives of Pennsylvania, and both of Irish descent. Our subject was brought up on the farm and educated in the common schools. In 1862, he enlisted in the 145th Reg. P. V. I. Co. D, serving as Regimental Postmaster until 1865, when he was discharged. On his return home he followed farming until 1873, in which year he was appointed Inspector of Customs, which position he held until 1879, when he was elected Clerk of the Erie County Courts. In 1879, Mr. Moorhead married Mary Carroll, who bore him two children—Florence B. and Emma M. Mr. and Mrs. Moorhead are attendants of the Presbyterian Church. His grandfather, Col. James M. Moorhead, was with Perry on the occasion of his victory on Lake Erie.

W. A. MORAND, photographer and artist, Erie, was born Sept. 29, 1842, in New York City, and is a son of the late George H. Morand, who was the first photographer in that city. He attended school in his native city, and early in his boyhood days showed a decided talent and taste for painting, and his father enabled him to obtain a thorough art education in the studios of the most noted artists of the day in New York. For over twenty years his mind and hand have been active in the profession he loves so well, and the result of his untiring efforts is his competency to cope with the best artists of this country. He makes portraits in oil and crayon a specialty, and finishes pictures in India ink and paints miniatures in water colors. Mr. Morand is a photographer and artist not only in name but in education, one who understands the rules of art and chiaroscuro, and the application of art principles in lighting, and posing his subjects, for herein lie the true merits of a photographic portrait. Many of the engravings that appear in this work were copied from photographs taken by him. He came to Erie in 1877, and merited a large patronage; was married, in 1862, to Marie Antoinette George, of Watertown, N. Y.; the result of this union has been two children, viz., W. A. (deceased) and Inez E.

JOHN A. MOSER, Chief Engineer of Fire Department, Erie, was born in the Borough of Hœrdt, Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 15, 1838; son of George Moser, a hotel-keeper in Hœrdt. Our subject received his education in his native land, and came to America in 1851, settling in Erie City, where he served a regular apprenticeship as a molder three years; subsequently as a carpenter, at which occupation he worked for seventeen years. On May 15, 1877, he was elected Chief of the Fire Department, Erie City; is also Fire Inspector and Superintendent of the Fire Alarm. Mr. Moser married, in 1862, Maria Magdalena Hemmerlie, whose father was a soldier under Napoleon Bonaparte, and, on coming to America in 1832, was one of the first settlers of Erie Co., where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Moser are the parents of six children, all living. Our subject was a member of Erie City Council in 1874 and 1875; also a member of the License Board in 1877.

F. W. MULLER, contractor and builder, Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, April 27, 1829. His father, a government officer, followed Lafayette and served under him in this country in the war of Independence. He however returned to his native land, was engaged in the Government service, and is buried there. The subject of our sketch learned cabinet-making in his native land and at eighteen came to America. After spending two years in Ohio he came here and worked at his trade for a few years, but eventually took up building business, with which he has since been prominently identified. He was married, here, in 1851, to Barbara Speiser, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1829. To this union have been born four sons and seven daughters—Frederick William, a contractor and builder; Minnie, wife of John Sapper, a tinsmith of Erie; Mary; John, a carpenter; Joana, wife of Edward Mehl, a merchant of Erie; Henry, a carpenter; Emma; Chas., a carpenter; Elizabeth; Louisa and Katherine. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. He is a member of the Oddfellows and Harugari societies.

D. T. MURRAY, manager for the W. U. Tel. Co., and L. S. & M. S. Ry., Union Depot, Erie, is a native of Erie and a son of Thomas and Bridget (Foley) Murray, the former of whom was born and reared in County Tipperary, Ireland, and came here about 1850, among the pioneer railway people who settled here. The mother was also a native of Ireland, born in County Waterford. Four of their sons and two daughters are living—D. T. J. C., Thomas, Jr., Mary, Daniel and Josephine. The subject of this sketch was reared to railroading, and when seventeen became a telegrapher, and when eighteen years old took charge of an office with same telegraph line, and in 1874 located here and has since been reputedly connected with same line of business. He was married, in 1883, to Ellen Frances Hannon, a native of Erie Co. They are both members of the Roman Catholic Church and regular communicants. Mr. Murray is an active member and President of Branch 20 of the C. M. B. Association, and the Y. M. C. Lyceum, and he is President of the Board of Directors of that association; also a Common Councilman of the Municipal Government.

HENRY NEUBAUER, of the firm of H. Neubauer & Son, Arcade Hotel, Erie, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany in 1825, and there learned shoe-making. He came to America in 1850, and located in Erie, where he carried on this business very successfully until 1860, when he engaged in merchandising, continuing in the same until 1878, when he took up his present business, having previously (1870) built his handsome hotel. He was united in marriage in 1851, with Elizabeth Lederer, of Bavaria. This union has been blessed with four sons and one daughter—John A., merchant, Frank, a member of the firm, Edward, Alfred and Anna. Mr. Neubauer is a member of the Erie City Benefit Association, Harugari and the Odd Fellows societies.

JOHN F. NEUBAUER, retail liquor dealer, Erie, was born in Erie City, Penn., Sept. 30, 1847, son of Jacob and Barbara (Fisher) Neubauer, natives of Germany, who came from thence to Erie in 1846. They were parents of ten children, five boys and five girls, all but two of whom are living. Our subject received his education in Erie City, then for a time worked at upholstering, but, on account of weak eyes, was compelled to give up his chosen avocation. He then clerked in a furniture store. In 1881 Mr. Neubauer embarked in his present business, in which he has since continued. He is a member of the Lutheran Church; is a Republican in politics, and is a prominent member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, Erie City.

WILLIAM NICHOLSON, retired farmer, Erie, was born April 7, 1800, in Fairview Township (then Allegheny Co.), now Erie Co.; son of George and Jane (McKee) Nicholson, natives of Ireland, who came to this county in 1783, and purchased 200 acres of land of Survey 315, surveyed by Thomas Reese. The land is now held by Mr. Marcus Lewis on a life lease, and eventually falls back to the Nicholson heirs. William Nicholson is the only one of his father's family now living. He is one of several lads who boarded one of the ships built for Commodore Perry's fleet, the Lawrence or the Niagara, the day they were launched, he being about twelve years of age. He remembers having heard Gen. La Fayette make a speech in Erie, June 4, 1825, and Maria C. Ball, she that was afterward Mrs. William Nicholson, was taken by the General and kissed, and this she remembers. She also well remembers many a time sitting on the knee of Red Jacket, the great Indian Chief, in her father's jewelry shop in Buffalo. William Nicholson's parents were among the earliest settlers of the county. He is the oldest man born in the county now living, while his only son is now twenty-seven years of age. Mr. Nicholson is a remarkable man for his years—eighty-four. He has been a thorough business man in his day, and has accumulated much property and wealth. He is possessed of all his faculties, and can read very fine print without spectacles, and has the history of the county well fixed in his mind. He was married, Aug. 27, 1849, to Maria C., daughter of the late Sheldon Ball. They had three children, of whom only one son is now living—Walter V., who is at home with his parents, and is a promising young man. William Nicholson is said to resemble Gen. Jackson by all who have seen the General's portrait. His wife's father was one of the first jewelers and engravers in the city, some of his work surpassing anything of later day engraving.

WILLIAM F. NICK, druggist, Erie, was born in Germany, Sept. 6, 1845, son of G. F. W. and Louise (Teubner) Nick. Mr. Nick, Sr., also a druggist while in Germany, was honored with a visit from Horace Greeley, when the latter was traveling in Europe, and was induced to emigrate to America in 1848. He came to Erie City in 1849, and is still actively engaged in business on State Street. Our subject has been in business in Erie City since 1859. His premises, which are in the Scott Block, the finest building in the city, occupy a floor space of 20x165 feet, with an L frontage on Tenth street, of 20x40 feet. This, with a cellar under the entire building used for storing surplus stock, makes the largest drug store in the city of Erie. The business was established in 1862, and the firm was formerly composed of W. F. and H. C. Nick, but is now, since 1882, carried on by our subject, who graduated in pharmacy in New York. He was married, in 1868, to Matilda K. C., daughter of Frederick Von Buseck, a resident of Erie Co. To this union were born Ida, Louise, William and Rachel.

ORANGE NOBLE, founder and President of the Keystone National Bank, Erie, was born April 27, 1817, at Whitehall, N. Y.; son of Salmon and Betsy (Delamater) Noble. The former, who had been a farmer, was a native of Massachusetts, but in early life moved to Washington Co., N. Y.; the latter was a native of New York. They were parents of seven children—Orange, Laura, Horace W., Mary Ann, Helen C., Amelia and Carissa. Our subject remained on the farm with his father till he was twenty-three years of age, and was educated at the common schools and the Academy in Washington Co., N. Y. Jan. 1, 1840 he married Minerva Reed, who bore him two children—Theodore F. and George H. Early in 1853 Mr. Noble moved to Crawford Co., this State, when he entered into partnership with his relative, G. B. Delamater, in merchandising and farming, as well as oil prospecting, and by 1863 they had made their fortune. In that year, the "Noble well"—the noblest in the world—yielded more than 2,000 barrels per day. In 1864 Mr. Noble became a resident capitalist of Erie City. In 1865 he purchased the Bay State Iron Works, and is to-day its chief owner. At a cost of $135,000, he erected the Noble Block in this city, and in 1867 he and others erected the first elevator at this harbor, and in 1869 he became a large owner in the Blast Furnace. He was the original stockholder in the Burdett Organ Factory, the Dime Savings Bank and the Second National Bank, sole proprietor of the Noble Sewing Machine Company, and connected with many minor enterprises. He was founder of the Keystone National Bank and has been President of same for twenty years. Mr. Noble has been twice elected to the Mayoralty of Erie City, and once to a seat in the General Assembly. In politics he is a strong Republican.

LYSANDER STERRETT NORTON, attorney at law, Erie, was born in Forestville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Jan. 26, 1845. His paternal ancestry settled in Connecticut in 1640; the branch from which he sprung removed to New York State about 1780, finally locating in Pennsylvania in 1830. His father, Rev. Niram Norton, devoted more than forty years to the ministry, and was a prominent divine among the Methodist clergy of his day. His mother, Ann M. Sterrett, was a niece of Judge Joseph M. Sterrett, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume. Our subject acquired his education in various schools and academies, including Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., where he graduated at the age of nineteen in the class of 1864. He also graduated in the law department of Harvard University, class of 1868. Having acquired a thorough literary and legal education, he was admitted to the bar at Meadville in Oct., 1868. He immediately entered upon the active practice of his profession at Erie, where he has since resided. In 1873 he formed a law co-partnership with Col. C. B. Curtis, which was continued until the latter's death in the spring of 1883. Mr. Norton enjoys a fine practice, and is regarded as one of the leading attorneys at the bar. He was married, June 12, 1873, to Miss Mattie L. Curtis, youngest daughter of Col. C. B. Curtis, by whom he has one child—Carlton Curtis, born July 20, 1876.

RICHARD O'BRIEN, agent Pennsylvania Company operating Erie & P. R. R., Erie, was born Feb. 25, 1825, at Dromig, County Cork, Ireland, son of Richard and Ellen (Ambrose) O'Brien. He emigrated to Quebec, Canada, in 1847, and moved to Erie, Penn., the same year, where he acted as Clerk and book-keeper in the commercial and commission business at the harbor for nineteen years. When the E. & P. R. R. was completed in 1866 to the harbor, he was appointed its agent, a position he has since continued to fill in an efficient manner. During the last thirty-seven years, from 1847 to 1884, he has been intimately associated with the lake business and the commerce of the harbor as employe, employer, vessel-owner and railroad agent. He was married in Philadelphia in 1852, to Margaret, daughter of Denis McCarthy, who also emigrated from Ireland and was his companion from childhood. To this union were born four children—Catharine Annie, Joseph P. (an attorney at law), Ellen I. and Fannie. His first wife dying in 1868, Mr. O'Brien married in 1873, Mary, daughter of James Casey, of Erie. By this union were born two children—Agnes Annie and Mary. Mr. O'Brien is a member of the Catholic Church.

ARTHUR O'DONNELL, livery and feed stables, on French between Fourth and Fifth streets, Erie, was born in 1846 in County Cavan, Ireland, and came to America in 1862, locating at Norwalk, Ohio, where he remained several years; thence came to Erie in 1871, and subsequently engaged in his present business. He was married here, Oct. 8, 1878, by Rev. Thomas Casey, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, to Ellen Sarah, daughter of William and Johana Delaney, natives of Ireland. Mrs. O'Donnell was born in Erie Co.; on Dec. 1, 1881, she departed this life in full communion with the Roman Catholic Church, and is buried in Trinity Cemetery beside her two infant daughters—Mary Frances and Johana, who had preceded her.

JOHN O'HAGAN, chief clerk of the P. & E. Ry. Shops, Erie, was born in Newry, Blair Co., Penn., June 24, 1844; son of Peter O'Hagan, a native of Ireland, who came to this country about 1823, and settled in this State. He was a merchant, and our subject was reared to the same industry, but at twenty-two took up railroading with which he has been since connected in this State. He came here in 1867 as a clerk for the P. & E. R. R. Our subject was married in 1872, in his native place, to Maggie Mahoney, born in Blair Co., Penn., who has borne him three daughters—Lulu, Mary and Kate. She is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and a regular communicant. Mr. O'Hagan is an efficient member of the School Board of this city, and has always been interested in the development of its social and industrial life.

LEWIS W. OLDS, proprietor of the Wood Pump and Pump Log Factory, Erie, was born in East Mill Creek, Erie Co., Penn., July 21, 1822, son of Asa Gilbert Olds, a native of Alstead, N. H., born Nov. 15, 1793, and who when a child was taken to Williamstown, Vt., where he resided until the spring of 1816, when he came to East Mill Creek, this county. Here he died Dec. 8, 1871. He married, April 17, 1821, Lucy Church, a native of Winchester, Conn., who bore him five children, all now living, viz.: Lewis W., our subject; Nelson, married and living in Greene Township, this county; Erskine, married and residing on the old homestead in East Mill Creek; Clarissa E., married to Isaac Keeler May 2, 1882 (they together publish a monthly religious paper, called the Banner of Love, now at Washington, D. C.), and Emily J., teacher in the public schools, Erie City. John Church, father of Lucy (Church) Olds, enlisted when eighteen years of age during the Revolutionary war, at Saybrook, Conn., and went with Arnold to the Siege of Quebec in 1776. He was present at the battle of Saratoga, and assisted Arnold off his horse when there wounded. Our subject received a part of his early education in a small log school-house in the country, with a slab bench for a seat. He finished his academic course at the Erie Academy, and was married in Erie City, May 9, 1848, to Louisa E. Ackerly, born in Middletown, N. Y., March 11, 1826. To this union were born Inez L., married to Eugene M. Tayntor, now live in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Clark, who graduated from the University of Michigan in 1870 after a four years' course, and when under twenty years of age; for several years he was in the United States Topographical Corps of Engineers, engaged in a survey of the upper lakes; having resigned, he went to Germauy, and studied for a time at Leipsic University, and on his return to Erie he studied law, and is now practicing at the Erie bar; he married, Dec. 13, 1876, at Cortland, N. Y., Elizabeth L. Keator (have one son—Romeyne K. Olds); Nettie, an artist by profession, and now attending the Cooper Institute, New York; Phila, a graduate of Erie High School, at present at home; William C., married in Spence Creek Valley, Huntingdon Co., Penn., Jan. 9, 1884, to Mary Porter Brown, live in Erie, Penn.; Florence, now at home, and Charlotte Marion, also at home. Mr. Olds commenced the manufacture of pumps in East Mill Creek in 1844, and moved his pump works to Erie in 1853, and was the first man in the United States, and probably in the world, to reduce the old log pump to an article of commerce, and has stood in the front ranks of manufacturers ever since. His pumps have had an extensive sale in all parts of the country.

WM. O'LONE, First Assistant Engineer Water Works, Erie, was born in Quebec Oct., 1843. He remained in his native land until thirteen years old, when he went to New Orleans, and began life for himself as a fireman on a steamboat, and as such continued until the breaking out of the war, when he came North, and located in Erie. He then became a local engineer for the E. & P. Ry., where he continued until 1876, when he was appointed to his present position. Our subject was married, Dec. 27, 1865, in Jamestown, Mercer Co., Penn., to Joan Conway, born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1848, and who came to this country with her parents, Michael and Mary Conway, of Jamestown, Penn. Nine children have blessed this union—Michael, Thomas, William F., John Henry, Mary Catherine, Letitia G., Nellie C., Josephine, Maggie and Agnes. Mr. and Mrs. O'Lone are members and regular communicants of the Roman Catholic Church. Since coming here, our subject has served as a member of City Council; has been a member of the Executive Committee for several years, and has occupied minor offices.

JACOB OSTHEIMER, of the firm of Baker, Ostheimer & Co., merchant tailors, Erie, was born Jan. 22, 1839, in Baden, Germany. He came to America when sixteen, and followed mercantile business in New York and Pennsylvania until 1860, when he located here, and engaged in merchandising, with which he has since been identified. He was united in marriage, March 8, 1860, with Sarah, daughter of P. Baker, of Erie. She was born in Germany, and departed this life here in 1872, leaving one son and a daughter—Isaac and Clara. She is buried in the Erie Cemetery. Mr. Ostheimer subsequently married a sister of his wife, Emma Baker, who has borne him a son and a daughter—Mortimer and Mamie. Mr. and Mrs. Ostheimer are members of the Synagogue. The former has served in the City Council and minor offices.

CAPT. DOUGLASS OTTINGER. This gallant gentleman, now four score years of age, and Senior Captain (now retired) of the U. S. Revenue Marine Service, was born in Germantown, Penn., Dec. 11, 1804. His father was an officer in the Revolution, on the side of the patriots. Capt. Ottinger was educated at the common schools of Philadelphia, and when but a boy, entered the Commercial Marine Service, being rapidly raised to the command of a trading vessel. When the Revenue Marine Service was reorganized in 1832, he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant of a revenue cutter, by Andrew Jackson, and did service first on the cutter "Benjamin Rush" and twelve months afterward was transferred to the cutter "Erie." As he early gave considerable attention to the invention of life-saving appliances, for the use and rescue of ocean travelers, he was appointed by the Government, in 1848, to establish and equip the first life-saving station built on our coast, and in a short time there were established, under his direct supervision, eight of these stations on the New Jersey coast. At the petition of a commercial organization of gentlemen, he was granted by the Government in 1849, a furlough, without pay, and he entered the service of the company, his first duty being to navigate their ship to the Gate City, on the Pacific coast. Reaching California, he was employed by the company to explore the coast, and while so engaged, he discovered and named Humboldt Bay, promptly apprising the U. S. Government of the fact. He remained in the employ of this company only a few months; about two years as commander on the Pacific mail line of steamers, between the Isthmus of Panama and San Francisco. This was a highly lucrative position, which he relinquished at the request of the Government, to take command of the revenue cutter "Lawrence," at a salary of $1,200 per annum. He proposed to resign his commission, but was informed by the Secretary of the Treasury that it was his services, not his resignation that the Government desired. Patriot that he was, he obeyed the request, and from 1851 to 1853, he commanded the cutter "Frolic," his duty being to patrol the Pacific coast, in the interest of the revenue, from Oregon to San Diego, and also to act as police protector to the harbor of San Francisco, his being the only authority efficient to protect the shipping, some 400 vessels, and city from the general disposition to lawlessness that was at that time so prevalent on the Western coast. From 1853 to 1856 he was stationed in the Gulf of Mexico, and afterward ordered to Lake Erie. When hostilities between the North and South began, he successfully navigated the revenue fleet of five vessels, from the lakes down the St. Lawrence, and around to Boston. This occurred in mid-winter, and in no part of Capt. Ottinger's experience were the qualities of an intelligent commander put to a severer test. In 1862 he commanded the revenue fleet off North Carolina. In 1864 he was directed to construct, according to his own model, a vessel for the revenue service. As a result, he gave to the department the "Commodore Perry," a vessel of uncommon speed and sea-worthiness. In 1870 he was made one of the commissioners to decide on the class of vessels best adapted to this branch of the service. Subsequently, he commanded the "Commodore Perry," on Lake Erie. Capt. Ottinger is made historical on account of his invention of the life car, a peculiar appliance to rescue persons from stranded vessels in storms where lifeboats would be swamped. Through its use, on its first trial, it was the means of saving from the British ship "Ayrshire," stranded on the New Jersey coast Jan., 1850, 201 lives, and shortly afterward, through its use on the same coast, during a fearful gale, there were rescued from the ship "Georgia" 271 passengers; and thousands of lives have been saved by its use on our own shores and in Europe, and the apparatus he put at the first life-saving stations of the United States; he gave it free of tax for patent. The whole world and all are free to manufacture and use this car. Capt. Ottinger receives no royalty except the consciousness of having created an implement that has already brought life and joy to thousands of his fellows, and bids fair to be employed in humane work so long as storms prevail upon the ocean. The Congress of 1858 recognized the value of this invention by voting to Capt. Ottinger the sum of $10,000. In 1883 Capt. Ottinger visited Europe, and while in England he received many testimonials of respect. In 1830 Capt. Ottinger married Emily, daughter of Rev. Watkinson, of Pemberton, N. Y.; their relations were most happy for the fifty years or more of their married life. He was bereft of her Jan., 1883. Capt. Ottinger has no children. He is a genial gentleman, well preserved and very popular. He is a veteran sailor, and emphatically a Christian, being for many years Senior Warden of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Erie, Penn. We present a fine steel portrait of Capt. Ottinger in this work.

N. C. OUTWAIT, painter, Erie, was born in Boston, Mass., in 1833, son of Daniel Outwait, who was a ship-carpenter. Our subject was reared on the island of St. Thomas, West Indies, but at eleven went to sea, and followed the same for eleven years, when he took service on lake vessels for six years. Retiring from a sailor's life, he engaged in his present vocation, subsequently locating here, and has since been identified with the building interests of the city. He was united in marriage, in 1858, with Victoria, daughter of Benjamin and Rachel Morgan, who came from Wales and settled here over forty-five years ago. To Mr. and Mrs. Outwait have been born a family of four sons and four daughters—Ellabelle L., Benjamin A., S. Roger, N. C., Jr., Rachel B. and Sara I.; also Effort S. and Nannie M., now deceased. The family are members of the Central Presbyterian Church. Mr. Outwait is an active member in the Masonic, Odd-fellows and K. of P. societies.

THOMAS PASKETT, proprietor of stone quarry, residence Erie City, was born in London, England, Sept. 29, 1841, son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Booth) Paskett, natives of the same; the former a butcher. Our subject acquired his education and learned his father's business in his native land; there married, in 1863, Keziah, daughter of James and Mary Booth, natives of England. To this union have been born four children—Fannie J., Ada, Anna Elizabeth and Frederick C. Mr. and Mrs. Paskett are members of the Episcopal Church. Soon after their marriage (same year) they embarked for America, and after remaining in New York two years, came to Erie City, where he embarked in the butchering trade, in which he has been very successful; is owner of valuable property in Erie City, and of stone and sand quarries in Le Bœuf Township, this county. He is a Republican in politics; served two terms in the Common Council and one in the Select Council of Erie City, and has been a delegate to the Erie County Convention.

JOSEPH E. PATTERSON, of the firm of Patterson & Hayes, merchants, Erie, was born in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., July 25, 1841, son of Robert and Louise

Henry C. Stafford

(Ellis) Patterson. The former a farmer, was a native of this county, of Irish extraction; the latter of Mass., of English descent. They were the parents of two children—William S., deceased in 1878, and Joseph E. Our subject was educated in the common schools and Springfield Academy. In about 1860, he entered mercantile business with his brother in Springfield, this county, carrying it on for five years; in 1866, removed to Erie, and remained for two years further in same line of trade. Since then our subject has been engaged in the manufacture of galvanized ornaments, for beautifying the outside of buildings. This business is so extensive as to furnish employment for ten clerks. Mr. Patterson was married to Mattie M. Dyke, sister of Logan J. Dyke, who once served as Treasurer Erie Co. To this union were born—Georgia and Clyde. Our subject and wife are members of the Central Presbyterian Church.

SETH TODD PERLEY, attorney at law and claim agent, Erie, was born in Erie City in 1840, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (McCartney) Perley, the former a native of Massachusetts, of English lineage, the latter a native of near Dublin, Ireland. They moved from New York to Erie City in 1840. Samuel Perley being a newspaper editor and publisher, brought printing material with him and established the Erie Chronicle, which he continued until 1855, in which year he handed the paper over to his oldest son, Capt. James Perley, now in the Treasury Department, Washington, in which city Samuel Perley died in 1881. Samuel Perley was elected Prothonotary of Erie County in 1851, serving three years, but declined re-election. Of Samuel Perley's ten children, seven grew to maturity. Our subject, the only one of the family residing in Erie County, was educated in Erie and Girard Academies, and studied law under Col. Benjamin Grant and Hon. Edgar Cowan, the latter a United States Senator from Pennsylvania. Our subject has held several responsible positions in Washington; for four years he was in the Treasury Department. On his return to Erie, in 1865, he immediately engaged in his profession, and has pursued it ever since.

THOMAS PICKERING, liveryman, Erie, was born at East Islington, Yorkshire, England, in 1843. He removed with his people to Oakville, Canada, where he was reared and educated. At twenty years of age, he came to this county, locating in this city, but subsequently engaged in oil operations in this State. He retired from this, and subsequently started in his present business, which he has since successfully conducted. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1865, in Erie, with Kittie Knoll, who is a fine musician. This union has been blessed with one son—Hutsey. Mr. Pickering is an active member of the A. O. U. W. society.

W. W. PIERCE, of the firm of W. W. Pierce & Co., hardware, No. 719 State street, Erie, one of Erie's successful business men, was born Oct. 27, 1842, in the Empire State; son of Seneca and Lucy (Pitcher) Pierce, natives of New York and of English descent. Seneca was a tanner, and reared six boys and six girls. Our subject received a district school education, and at eighteen commenced clerking in a hardware store. In 1863 he embarked in business at North East, this county, and in 1864 came to Erie, where he has since continued in the same business, with more than average success. His business house, one of the finest in the county, is a four-story structure, 100x24 feet, and is well stocked. Mr. Pierce was married, in 1867, at North East, to Josephine, daughter of J. H. Haynes, a prominent man of that place. They have four children—William B., Louise H., George S. and Howard H. Our subject is a Democrat in politics; has served as member of the City Council; is a member of the School Board, Knights of Honor, and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

HORACE L. PINNEY, deceased, was born in Connecticut in 1815, son of Elijah and Mahala (Grant) Pinney, the latter of Scotch extraction. The former came to Erie County about 1838, settling in Mill Creek Township with his father, who was a farmer. Our subject taught school for sixteen winters in early life, in this county, but by occupation was a farmer through life. In 1844 he moved to Greene Township, this county, where he was a Justice of the Peace twenty-five years. Our subject married, in 1842, Mrs. Sarah Shannon, daughter of William Saltsman. To this union were born six children, five now living: A. S. and E. H., twins, the latter a resident of Michigan, dealer in real estate, owner of 982 acres of valuable land; A. M., a farmer in Mill Creek Township; Rose E., at home; Kate M., wife of Dr. W. K. Byron, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio. A. S. Pinney is a dealer in hardware, farming implements, wagons, carriages, etc., etc., on Peach street, Erie. He was born in Erie County, March 23, 1845, and acquired his education in the Belle Valley School and Erie Academy. His first occupation was clerking, and he is now proprietor of a first-class hardware store, which he is estimably well calculated to manage, having a practical knowledge of all its details. A. S. Pinney was married, in Erie City, in 1869, to Minnie Morse, born in New York State, daughter of A. A. Morse, a resident of Wisconsin. To this union there is one child—Nellie, born April 23, 1871. In politics Mr. Pinney is a Democrat. Our subject, Horace Pinney, died Feb. 20, 1878. In politics he was a Democrat. His widow is yet living in Erie County, now in her seventy-third year. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

S. T. POLLOCK, Tax Collector, Second Ward, Erie, was born Jan. 31, 1825, son of Matthew and Hannah (McClure) Pollock, natives of the north of Ireland, of Scotch-Irish extraction. They came to America in 1817, remaining for a few years in Lycoming Co., Penn., and in 1824 moved to Erie County, settling in Mill Creek Township. They were both born in the month of February, and both died in April, 1863, within a few days of each other. Matthew Pollock had been a farmer all his life. They were parents of Margaret, died in 1865, wife of M. Reed, had one son, W. J. Reed; D. C., a farmer; H. J.; John, died in 1849; Alexandria, died in 1837; M. G., Mary C. and S. T. Our subject is now owner of the home place and a residence in Erie City. He is unmarried, and has his two sisters residing with him. After receiving a good education, Mr. Pollock farmed until 1873, when he came to Erie City. In 1881 he was appointed Tax Collector for the Second Ward. The family are all members of the U. P. Church, of which their father had been a Deacon, and our subject is an Elder. Mr. Pollock and his brothers are Republicans in politics.

REV. JOSEPH H. PRESSLY, D. D., deceased, was born April 15, 1817, in South Carolina, son of John T. and Jane (Herst) Pressly, natives of South Carolina, of Irish descent. Our subject acquired his education in Washington and Jefferson College, where he took his degree of D. D. His father was Professor of the Theological Seminary in Allegheny City, where our subject remained five years. After finishing his course in theology, Dr. Pressly came to Erie City in 1845, to take charge of the United Presbyterian Church there, of which he was pastor twenty-nine years. Our subject was married, in 1847, to Anna E. Smith, daughter of Thomas and Margaret H. (Stewart) Smith, former a native of Ireland, latter of Pennsylvania, and of Scotch-Irish descent. To this union were born nine children—John T., a farmer in Erie County; Joseph H., at Saginaw, Mich., in the employ of F. F. Adams & Co. (he married Hattie Waters, of Warren; their family consists of two children—Joseph H. and Ralph McDermit); Robert S., a farmer; Jennie, at home; William W., Maggie L., Mary M., Harry S. and Sarah Belle. Five of the children are members of the church. Rev. J. H. Pressly at first intended to pursue the study of medicine, but a quotation from the Bible, which his father used in a letter to him while at school caused him to devote his life to the ministry. He died Nov. 3, 1874, in Erie City, Penn. He was President of the School Board and Trustee of Erie Academy. In politics, he was a Republican.

GILES D. PRICE, Clerk in County Commissioner's office, Erie, was born in North East, this county, Aug. 23, 1838, son of Erastus and Jane (Cosper) Price; the father a native of New York, of English descent, died when our subject was one year old. The mother was a native of Erie Co., of Dutch descent. Our subject received a common school training, and chose the occupation of salesman, which he followed from the age of sixteen to twenty-two. He then went to Pike's Peak and worked in the gold regions four and one-half years, when he returned to Erie Co. and engaged in the milling business in Venango Township, Erie Co., ten years. In 1875 he was elected Prothonotary of Erie Co., and re-elected in 1878, serving in that capacity till January 1, 1882, and in 1883 was appointed to his present position. In October, 1866, he was married to Augusta, daughter of Henry O. Chase, of North East, Erie Co., whose family history dates back 200 years. To this union were born Harriet Jane, Olive Cosper, Mabel Gertrude and Eleanor Carr. Mrs. Price is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject was a Justice of the Peace while a resident of Venango Township. In politics he is a Republican.

W. J. QUINN, embalmer and funeral director, Erie, was born in Ireland, July 30, 1847, son of John and Mary Quinn, the former of whom died when W. J. was a child. In 1855 our subject came with his mother to America, settling in Newport, R. I., where he learned the carpenter's trade. In 1861 he enlisted in the 1st R. I. Cav., Com. A, serving three years and participating in about twenty battles. Mr. Quinn was married, in New York City in April, 1883, to Sarah McMahon, of Irish descent, whose father was an officer in the Confederate army. Mr. and Mrs. Quinn are members of the Catholic Church. Our subject has been in business since 1878.

CHRISTIAN RABE, Sr., wholesale wines and liquors and retail groceries and provisions, Erie, was born in Frcienhagen, Waldeck, Germany, Aug. 1, 1830. He there learned the cooperage and brewing business. In 1857 he came to America, and subsequently went to work in the brewing business in New York State. In 1861 he came to Pennsylvania, and there followed coopering. In 1862 he came to this city, and carried on a cooperage establishment, doing a nice business. In 1864 he was drafted into military service, but on account of his young family he gave up all his hard earned accumulations in business for the purchase of a substitute, and continued at work. He subsequently, however, left off coopering and took up merchandising, and has by dint of steady and persistent industry secured a very handsome competence, and is carrying on a well paying business. He married, in New York State, Euphrosyne Mayer, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and came to this country about 1856. They have a family of four sons—Christian, Jr., William, Henry and Louis. Mr. Rabe is an active member of the Odd-fellows and Harugari societies.

HUGH RAMSEY, contractor, builder and manufacturer, Erie, was born in Scotland, Jan. 9, 1829; son of Thomas Ramsey, who was a farmer all his life. Our subject was reared on the farm, and educated in the common schools of his native land. When eighteen years old he commenced learning the trade of a carpenter, at which he served four years. He emigrated to New Brunswick in 1863; after a year went to Canada, where he worked at his trade till 1865, when he came to Erie City. After working at the same occupation here for two years he formed a partnership with a Mr. Constable at manufacturing and building. This was not a success, and Mr. Ramsey lost $17,000. He then engaged in contracting and building on his own account, and is now doing a prosperous business, employing on an average twenty men; is also engaged in manufacturing the Cap Sheaf feed mill, which bids fair to prove a success. In 1858 our subject was married at Ardrossan, Ayrshire, Scotland, to Margaret Alexandra, by whom he has the following children: Thomas, William (both assisting their father, the latter as a book-keeper), Nellie, Lillie, Hugh, Jr., and Florence. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey are members of the Park Presbyterian Church.

DR. A. Z. RANDALL, Coroner of Erie Co., Erie, was born at Cold Creek, Allegany Co., N. Y., Oct. 12, 1840; son of Dr. Thomas Jefferson Randall, a physician in that county, and a graduate of Fairfield College, Herkimer Co., N. Y. In 1844 the family located in Edinboro, this county, where Dr. T. J. Randall remained prominently identified with his profession until his death, which occurred Jan. 25, 1873. The subject of this sketch received his literary education in the State Normal School at Edinboro, and after completing a long course of studies there he commenced the study of medicine with his father as preceptor, after which he attended two full courses of lectures at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor during the years 1862, 1863 and 1864, and finally graduating honorably at that institution on the 30th day of March, 1864. He then located at Wattsburg, where he practiced two years, thence came here, and, with the exception of nearly five years practice in Crawford Co., two years at Union City and nearly two years at Edinboro, has since been reputedly connected with the medical profession here. He was appointed Health Inspector of the borough of South Erie in 1866, and Examining Surgeon of Pensioners in 1867, filling this important office until 1873. During 1867 and 1868 he was Surgeon for the P. & E. Railway, and was appointed Vaccinating Physician of the city in 1882. He was previously elected Coroner of the county in Nov., 1881, to serve three years, receiving a very flattering vote from his constituents. April 29, 1863, he married Ellen Lucy Congleton, of Edinboro, a lady of fine literary attainments, and has three sons—Thomas Carlyle, Elmer Ellsworth and Grant Almont. Dr. Randall is an active member and Examining Physician of Garfield Lodge, No. 197, of the A. O. U. W., as well as a member of the Red Men, No. 252, Erie Tribe, and Examining Physician for the same. He has for years been a prominent member of the Erie County Medical Society, having held various offices in it while connected with the same, being at the present time one of the Censors. Politically he has always been a staunch Republican.

GEORGE D. REAVLEY, druggist, 916 Parade Street, Erie, was born near Alnwick, Northumberland, England, in 1841, where he was educated to his present business. When twenty years old he came to America, and settled in Erie in 1873, where he has since been prominently identified with the drug trade. He was united in marriage, in 1873, with Emma McKenney, who departed this life in 1877, leaving a daughter, Mabel, and is buried in the Youngsville Cemetery. Our subject was again married, in Oct., 1880, to Mrs. Jennie M. (Carlin) Zurn, who has a daughter—May. During the late war, Mr. Reavley did active service on the U. S. steamer "Curlew," of the Gulf Squadron, from which he was honorably discharged at the close of the rebellion. He is a member in the following societies: Odd-fellows, United Workmen, Sons of St. George and of the G. A. R.

THE REED FAMILY.—A history of Erie Co. would be "like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet out," unless some account were given of the Reed family, who may be said to have been the pioneers in its development. Col. Seth Reed, the founder of the family fortune, was a physician at Uxbridge, Mass. When the Revolution broke out, he was given command of a regiment, and fought at Bunker Hill. At what date he removed is not known, but we next hear of him in Ontario Co., N. Y., where he became possessed of a tract of land eighteen miles in extent by a trade with the Indians. Becoming impressed in some way with the favorable location of the new town of Erie, and believing that it would grow to be an important place, he sold out his Ontario Co. estate, and, with his wife and sons—Charles John and Manning—left for the frontier. At Buffalo he fell in with James Talmadge, who had fitted out a sail boat to run between that place and Erie, with whom a contract was made to bring the party and the few goods they had along to their destination. They reached the harbor of Erie on the evening of the last day of June or first day of July, 1795, and camped on the peninsula for fear of the Indians. Thos. Rees and a company of State militia under the command of Capt. John Grubb, with some friendly Indians, were quartered upon the Garrison ground. On seeing the fire in Mr. Reed's camp they were greatly alarmed, thinking a hostile band had landed there preliminary to an attack. Sentinels were kept on watch all night, and the troops were ordered to be ready at any moment to meet the expected foe. In the morning a boat, with men well armed, carrying a flag of truce, and accompanied by a canoe-load of friendly Indians, was sent over to the peninsula to ascertain the cause of alarm. On landing, which they did with extreme caution, they were surprised to find a white man and his family, who were, if possible, worse scared than themselves. Mutual explanations ensued, and both parties were agreeably disappointed to find that those they had mistaken for foes were in reality friends. Soon after his arrival Col. Reed proceeded to the erection of a place of shelter for his family. This, the first building on the site of Erie, was a one-story log cabin, covered with bark, and located at the mouth of Mill Creek. It had no floor, and strips of bark were used for carpets. Col. Reed concluded to open a public house, and labeled his cabin the "Presque Isle Hotel." Martin Strong, who visited Erie about this time, says the house was provided "with plenty of good refreshment for all itinerants that chose to call." In Sept., Col. Reed's sons—Rufus S. and George—came on by way of Pittsburgh, with Mrs. Thos. Rees and Mrs. J. Fairbanks. The Colonel remained at the mouth of Mill Creek until the ensuing season, when, after putting up another and better building, which he placed in charge of Rufus, he moved to a farm that he had located on the flats of Walnut Creek, on the present site of Kearsarge. Here he remained, in a rough cabin, until his death on the 19th of March, 1797, at the age of fifty-three. His house was about forty rods west of the Waterford road, in the rear of Capt. Zimmerly's brick residence. The body of Col. Reed was buried on the farm at Walnut Creek, there being no regular place of interment in the county. The remains were removed three times—first to the United Presbyterian graveyard, at the corner of 8th and Peach streets; second, to the Episcopal graveyard, and lastly, to the family lot in the Erie Cemetery. Hannah, his wife, died Dec. 8, 1821, in her seventy-fourth year. Chas. J. Reed went with his father to Walnut Creek, and occupied the farm after his death. He was joined in wedlock to Rachel Miller on the 27th of Dec., 1797. The event is notable as the first marriage in the county. The ceremony was performed in Erie by Thomas Rees, who had received a justice's commission, and the young couple rode to their Walnut Creek home in a plain sled kept at the fort. Mr. Reed died in 1830, and Mrs. Reed in 1851. George W. Reed, another of the sons, went two miles further up the creek, in Summit Township, and located a farm. From there he moved to Waterford and opened a public house. In 1826 he changed to Erie, where he continued in the hotel business a number of years; he returned to Waterford in 1844, and died there in 1847. Rufus S. Reed, the most prosperous and best known of the sons, always remained in Erie. He was born at Uxbridge, Mass., on the 11th of Oct., 1775. While the rest of the family took to farming, his taste was altogether for business, in which he was extraordinarily successful. He started a store in 1796, which did a big trade with the Indians, the soldiers and the settlers. In 1797 he began an extensive fur trade with the Indians, which proved to be very profitable. His boats were running constantly on the lake, loaded with store goods one way and furs the other. He secured large Government contracts for supplying the western posts with beef, pork, flour and whisky. His business becoming too large for him to conduct alone, he associated Giles Sanford in the mercantile branch, and the partnership continued many years. In 1817-18, he erected a grist mill and distillery on Parade Street, near Fifth. Seven years later he built another distillery on his farm, near the corner of Parade Street and the Buffalo road. He purchased large bodies of land and fed many cattle, which he either killed or drove to the Eastern market. He became an extensive owner of lake vessels, and was the foremost man in enterprise in the whole lake country. As a specimen of his genius, it may be stated that the law forbade the sale of ardent spirits to the Indians by the gill, quart or barrel. Mr. Reed evaded the statute, and preserved the peace of his conscience by having a hollow stick made, and selling the liquid by the yard. Rufus S. Reed was married twice, his first wife being Dolly, daughter of Jonathan Oaks, of Palmyra, N. Y. The ceremony was characteristic of the man. In 1798, he left Buffalo by lake with a lot of goods in small boats. The party stopped in the evening at the mouth of Smoke's Creek (now Hamburg, N. Y.), where Mr. Reed informed the men that he had a matter of business to attend to some three miles back in the country. He was gone all night, and returned in the morning accompanied by his wife. She died the same year, and was buried by the side of Col. Seth Reed, at Walnut Creek. In 1801 he married Agnes, daughter of Gen. William Irvine, who bore him one son, the well-known Gen. Charles M. Reed. The marriage ceremony was performed by Thos. Robinson, a Justice of the Peace at North East. Rufus S. Reed died at the age of seventy, on the 1st of June, 1846, leaving the largest fortune that had been accumulated up to that time in the lake shore region. Gen. Charles M. Reed, the only child of Rufus S. Reed, inherited his father's great business abilities. He was born in Erie in 1803; after receiving the best education the schools of the time afforded, he was sent to college at Washington, Penn., and from there went to Philadelphia, where he read law, and was admitted to the bar in 1821. Returning to Erie, he almost immediately engaged in business with his father, and developed such aptitude for money making that it was a question which was the more skillful of the two. He early foresaw the advantage of steam in navigation, and became the largest owner of steamboats on the lakes. Some of his boats were fitted up magnificently, equaling the finest of the present day. While the canal was at the height of its prosperity, he realized all the benefits of that enterprise, and when the time came for building railroads, he quickly grasped their importance. In his early years he was fond of military display, and became a Brigadier General of militia. He served a year in the State Legislature and a term in Congress. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican. He died in the mansion at the corner of West Sixth Street and the park, on the 18th of Dec., 1871, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. His fortune at the time of his death was variously estimated at from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000. None but the family and a few intimate friends know the exact amount, but it was certainly not less than the sum first named. Gen. Reed was married, in 1836, to Miss Harriet Gilson, of Watertown, N. Y., who is still living. They had a number of children, of whom only two sons, Charles N. and Lloyd G., survive; Hattie, one of the daughters, married Hon. Henry Rawle, and at her death left two children, who are heirs to their mother's portion of the large estate. It will be seen from the above that Charles M. and Lloyd G. are the fourth generation of the Reeds in Erie. All of the members of Col. Seth Reed's family are buried in the Reed lot in the Erie Cemetery.

W. W. REED, civil engineer and railway contractor, was born in Ashtabula, Ohio, April, 1824. His father, W. W. Reed, was the first white child born within the limits of Erie City, the date being Feb. 20, 1797. His mother, Elizabeth J. Reed, now in her eighty-seventh year, resides with her son. To this couple were born eight children, W. W. being the second in order of birth. The other surviving children are: Elizabeth, wife of Prof. A. H. Caughy; E. W., the present Postmaster of the city, and Sarah A., at home. William W. Reed, Sr., for a number of years was a prominent and successful merchant in Ashtabula, but meeting with financial reverses, the subject of our notice was forced to leave school at an early age and commence work. He shipped as cook on a schooner, and by strict attention to duty gained rapid promotion, and in two years held the position of first mate, and made several trips with a vessel as acting master, before he was twenty years of age. Quitting the water he accepted a clerkship in a general store in Mercer Co., where he remained until the spring of 1849, when he obtained employment as civil engineer on the Erie & North East Railroad, which position he held for two years, when he accepted the appointment of resident engineer on the Northern Railroad in Canada. In 1859 he was elected General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania & Erie Canal, and served in that capacity until the canal was abandoned. In 1867 he was chosen President of the Board of Water Commissioners, of Erie City, and served twelve years. In 1876, 1878 and 1880, Mr. Reed was supported by a large majority of the Republicans of Erie Co. for the Republican nomination for Congress, in the Twenty-seventh Congressional District of Pennsylvania, but having incurred the hostility of the other counties in the district by his fight against the Pennsylvania system of giving all counties, large and small, the same number of delegates in a Congressional convention, he always failed to get the District nomination. Mr. Reed is an active, successful business man, and generally conducts his projects to a successful issue. He is unostentatious, but very liberal in dispensing charity. He has never married, but his attachment to his father's family is strong and beautiful; few are so faithful in the discharge of filial trusts. Though past three score years of age, Mr. Reed appears to be still in the prime of life.

EDMUND W. REED, Postmaster of Erie City, was born at Ashtabula, Ohio, Sept. 8, 1833, son of William W. and Elizabeth I. (Smith) Reed. Our subject acquired his education in Ashtabula High School and Erie Academy. Early in life he learned telegraphy and was an operator for three years. He also studied civil engineering and was employed with his brother, W. W. Reed, at this business for ten years. At the breaking out of the war, he promptly enlisted and was elected Second Lieutenant of Company K, 83d Reg., P. V. I. During the seven days' battle at Gaines' Mill, he was wounded in the breast, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. He was discharged in 1863, on account of disability. For the first two years after his return home he was unable to do anything. Later he engaged in the coal business, which he still continues. He was appointed Postmaster of Erie City, July 1, 1881, by James A. Garfield, and took charge of the office July 18, 1881, and this position he still occupies. Mr. Reed was married, in Erie City in 1868, to Abbie P. Hilton, daughter of Maj. A. C. Hilton. To this union have been born four children—W. W., Archie Hilton (deceased), Rufus S. and Marion Winifred. Mr. and Mrs. Reed are members of St. Paul's Church, of Erie City.

THOMAS REES, deceased. The subject of this sketch was a native of Northumberland Co., Penn., and though he did not bring his family to Erie as early as some of the other pioneers, still he was the first to begin business in the lake region. Mr. Rees, after taking an active share in the stirring events of the Revolution, was appointed Deputy State Surveyor as soon as the northwest was thrown open to settlement. The commission was dated May 16, 1792. He opened an office in Northumberland Co., and in following year struck out through the forest and reached an Indian village on the banks of Lake Erie, a site now occupied by the city of Buffalo. In 1794 he visited Presque Isle, and made a survey on about four hundred warrants issued to him for survey. In the spring of following year, Mr. Rees went to his district with surveyors and others, who wanted to take up land. Mr. Rees was then agent for the Pennsylvania Population Company, and the first sales were all articted by him. He had a tent on the bank of the bay, which was the first real estate office ever established in Erie, and eighty-six years before J. W. Shannon opened one on State Street in the Reed Block. Mr. Rees was the first Justice of the Peace appointed in Erie Co. In 1802 he removed from Erie to his property in Harbor Creek, discontinued the real estate agency, and laid out his lands into separate farms, which have ever since been known as the "Rees Reserve," on which he lived until his death, which occurred in May, 1848.

DAVIS REES, General Freight Agent, P. & E. R. R., Erie, was born in Lewis Co., N. Y., Sept., 1843, son of Richard and Mary (Davis) Rees, former a native of New York of Welsh descent, latter a native of New Jersey, of Scotch lineage. Our subject's grandfather, William Rees, came from Wales to America in 1800, settling in Lewis Co., N. Y., and his great-grandfather, by his mother's side, Thomas Gordon, came to New York in 1740. Richard Rees was a merchant up to the time of his decease in 1862. He came to Erie City in 1852; was at one time in business in Brooklyn, N. Y. His wife was a sister of Judge Gordon, and Peter Styker, late President First National Bank of Philadelphia, was connected with her family. Our subject is the only member residing in Erie Co., of a family of six children, one deceased. He acquired his education in his native county, at Lewis University, N. Y., and in Erie City he graduated in 1860 from Lewis University. Choosing the vocation of clerk, he worked for his father in the dry goods business until 1863, since which date he has been in the employment of the R. R. Co., one year excepted. Mr. Rees is a Knight Templar.

WILLIAM F. RINDERNECHT, merchant. Prominent among the business men of Erie Co. is the senior member of the firm of William F. & J. J. Rindernecht, dealers in hats, caps and furnishing goods, 502 State Street; groceries and ship chandlery, 504 State Street, Erie. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, January 8, 1818; son of F. B. Rindernecht, a weaver by trade, who emigrated with his family to America in 1832. His wife died when William F. was a small boy. They were parents of four children. Our subject received his education in the High School of his native place, and having studied Latin and Greek, is a proficient scholar. He graduated the same year he came to America (1832). On his arrival in the United States, he followed various occupations, worked on a farm two years, then on a canal ten months. He next came to Eagle Village, now known as South Erie, where he clerked in a general store for Jacob Hanson for three years. Mr. Rindernecht served as Constable of Erie City from 1841 to 1843. He then embarked in the grocery business, which he continued in from 1843 to 1866, with good success. In 1866 he formed a partnership with John Eliot in a private banking concern which existed four years, and our subject is now in the furnishing and grocery trade. Mr. Rindernecht was married in 1846 to Mary Eliza Justice, a native of this city, daughter of Capt. John Justice, an early settler of this county, by trade a carpenter and ship builder. To this union were born two boys, both deceased when young. Our subject and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church. He has been School Director for several terms and a member of Erie City Council four terms. In politics he is a Republican.

C. F. ROOS, groceries and provisions, corner Eighth and Myrtle Streets, Erie, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1829. When fourteen years old, he came to America with his people, who settled in McKean Township this county, where his father followed farming. The subject of this sketch learned carpentering, which he followed for nearly thirty years, when he retired from it, and, in 1883, engaged in his present business. He was united in marriage, in 1855, with Rachael Hershey, of Erie Co., by whom he has had two sons and three daughters: Florence Eve (deceased); Henry F., in business with his father; Anna Amelia; Charles E. (in business with his father) and Calvin. The family are members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Roos has always taken a prominent part toward building up this city, and specimens of his workmanship can be found in many of the handsome residences and business houses of Erie.

LOUIS ROSENZWEIG, of the firm Allen & Rosenzweig, attorneys at law, office Dime Block, Erie, was born in Macon, Ga., April 25, 1844; son of Isaac and Bena (Backer) Rosenzweig, natives of Germany, and who came to America when children. Isaac Rosenzweig was a general merchant and came to Erie City in 1845 or 1846. Our subject is a self-made man, having had his schooling at Erie City Public Schools prior to the age of fourteen. He clerked in his father's store till he attained his fifteenth year, when he took full charge of the business. Resolving to follow a professional career, he selected that of law and immediately entered on its study, devoting his evenings to it. In 1870 he entered the law office of E. Camphausen, Erie City, and was called to the bar of Erie Co. in 1872. July 23, 1874, he was admitted to the United States Courts and to the Superior Court of Pennsylvania in 1878; was appointed Notary Public and elected Alderman in 1871, and a member of the Erie City School Board in 1880. In Jan., 1876, he formed the present law partnership with George A. Allen. Mr. Rosenzweig was married Oct. 19, 1864, to Minnie, daughter of Jacob Newburger, and of German descent. By this union were born four children—Grant, Etta, Hattie and Bert. Our subject and wife are of the Jewish faith. In politics he is a Democrat.

FREDERICK A. ROTH, Chief Engineer of Erie City Water Works, Erie, was born in Rhine Bavaria, Germany, May 5, 1843, and at fourteen learned his trade, that of a machinist. In Jan., 1860, he came to America and located here. The following year he enlisted in Co. G, 6th U. S. Cav., and after three years' active service was honorably discharged. He soon after visited his native country, but at the expiration of a year and a half returned here and engaged with the Humboldt Iron Works, where he remained for several years. In 1875 and 1876, he served as Assistant Engineer of the Water Works of Erie City, and in 1880 was appointed to his present position, which he has held since. Our subject was united in marriage here in 1866, with Lizzie Lochner, of same nativity as himself. This union has been blessed with three sons and two daughters—Louisa, Frederick, Jr., Otto, August and Clara. Mr. and Mrs. Rcth are members of the Lutheran Church. He is also an active member of the A. O. U. W.

JOHN W. RYAN, farmer, Erie, is a native of this city, born Nov. 13, 1813; son of John, a hotel-keeper, and Lydia (Stewart) Ryan, natives of Dauphin Co., Penn. They were married in 1808, and came to Erie City in 1809; were parents of two children—John W. and Eliza Jane; latter married, in 1834, to Anthony Saltsman. Our subject acquired a school training in Mill Creek Township, and chose farming as a vocation. Being only four months old when his father died, he was left entirely on his own resources to make his way through the world. He is owner of a valuable farm inside Erie City corporation, with a handsome brick residence thereon. Mr. Ryan was married, in 1844, to Eliza A., daughter of John and Betsey (Harmon) Dodge, former a school teacher, native of Conn., latter of Maine. They are parents of five children, three now living—Charles W., dealer in agricultural implements, Toledo, Ohio; William, also dealer in agricultural implements, and Mary K., an artist. Alice, the youngest, is deceased. Edwin D., the eldest, who died in 1865, completed a thorough course at Yale College, graduating with honors. Mrs. Ryan is a member of the Universalist Church.

GILES SANFORD (deceased), was born in Norwich Farms, now Franklin, New London Co., Conn., Sept. 18, 1783. He was descended from John Sanford, President of Rhode Island in 1655, and who had been disarmed in 1637 for his sympathy with Wheel-right. These with Coddington, Hutchinson and other eminent colonial men, had purchased Rhode Island, and resided at Portsmouth. On the maternal side he was descended from Richard Edgerton, who, in 1655, was one of the thirty-eight original proprietors of Norwich, Conn. Mr. Sanford came to Erie in 1810, and for many years was a partner of the prominent and successful business man R. S. Reed, Esq. They were the only merchants in this region during the war of 1812, Erie being then a naval station and the depot for supplies for the Upper Lakes. Great business talent and energy were requisite to provide for the construction of Perry's fleet, with the country sparsely settled, the market for supplies distant, roads miserable and badly equipped, and almost no facilities for transportation by water. The mercantile firm in his name, in 1823, had subsistence contracts with the Government for Fort Dearborn (Chicago), Mackinaw, Fort Howard (Green Bay) and St. Mary. Chicago had not even a name sixty years ago, providing sustenance for only 100 men, and this was sent all the way from Erie! In 1824, when a delegate at the Canal Convention which met at Harrisburg, Mr. Sanford was instrumental in giving initiatory impetus to internal improvements, and was ever a generous and disinterested friend of all enterprises for the public good. He assisted substantially in the promotion of local agricultural and horticultural interests, and may truly be termed the father of our Natural History Society. Having been favored by the acquaintance and friendship of Hon. Henry R. Schoolcraft, and aiding him in one of his explorations in the mineral fields of the Northwest, an agreeable acquaintance and correspondence on literary subjects ensued, which continued for some years. Though not a professor of religion until middle age he was among the foremost in contributing to charitable and Christian objects. In consequence of his business connections, habits of observation and general information, he rendered valuable assistance in an excellent history of Erie Co., published by his daughter, Laura G. Sanford, in 1862, and from which our historian has derived much data. Mr. Sanford was married, at Aurelius, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Oct. 6, 1816, to Laura Goodwin, a lady of the first standing in every respect. He died Feb. 13, 1866. His immediate descendants are Lavinia S., the wife of J. C. Spencer, President of the First National Bank, Erie; Laura G. and Myron Sanford, the latter for many years a private banker and for ten years Cashier of the First National Bank, Erie, one of the first National banks (No. 12) organized, which bank he established with the co-operation of Messrs. J. C. Spencer, the late Gen. Chas. M. Reed and others, in 1863.

WILLIAM SALTSMAN (deceased) was born in Pennsylvania in 1777, came to Erie Co. in 1796 with Squire Rees, and assisted in surveying this county. His father, Anthony Saltsman, was killed by the Indians on the Susquehanna. He, with two other men, was on the ice on the river when they discovered they were pursued by the Indians. The others wore moccasins, and thereby escaped, but Mr. Saltsman had on a pair of new boots which prevented him from getting away, and so he met his death. William, our subject, was married in 1800 to Jane Stephenson. They had ten children, only two living—Sarah, who married Samuel D. Shannon, and re-married to Horace Piney (deceased), now resides in Belle Valley, Erie Co.; and Jane, the youngest daughter, also a widow. She married Andrew Scott, whose sketch appears in this volume. Mr. Saltsman received his education in the subscription school in Center Co. He permanently settled in Erie Co. in 1800 near Wesleyville, where he built a saw-mill and afterward a grist mill, which is still standing.

He was successful in his pursuits; in politics was a Democrat. He died in Mill Creek Township in 1829.

R. J. SALTSMAN was born in Erie Co., April 24, 1842, son of Jesse Saltsman (deceased), who was born in Erie Co., Jan. 6, 1814, son of William Saltsman. Jesse was a farmer and miller for many years in Erie Co., where he died in 1876 on his farm. His wife, whose maiden name was Polly A. Shaddock, is still living. They had two children, R. J. and Rose J. Our subject was educated in Erie Academy, and also in Allegheny College. He was connected with the Lake Shore Railroad from 1862 to 1865. He then engaged in the coal trade, which he has since continued with success. He was married, in Erie City, April 25, 1865, to Anna A., daughter of Thomas M. Austin, whose great-grandfather, also his father, were officers in the Revolutionary war.

DAVID SCHLOSSER, of the firm Schlosser & Pethiem, dealers in lumber of all kinds, Erie, is a native of Germany, born Dec., 1844, and son of Michael and Barbara (Copp) Schlosser. Our subject emigrated to America in 1865, settling in Erie Co., where he embarked in mercantile and lumber trade. At the end of five years he abandoned the mercantile branch, and has since pursued the lumber business in partnership with Mr. Pethiem. Mr. Schlosser was married in 1869 to Hannah, daughter of Henry Davis, deceased. Two children have been born to this union, Harry and Bennie. Our subject is a member of the Masonic order, and of the trade union.

VALENTINE SCHULTZ, dealer in groceries and provisions, Erie City, was born in Germany Nov. 11, 1827, son of Valentine and Margaretta (Adams) Schultz, natives of Germany. They came to America in 1846, remaining for a time in Connecticut, and in 1847 came to Erie City. Our subject was educated in his mother country. When he was nineteen years old, he commenced to learn the trade of molder, which he worked at most of the time until 1857, in which year he embarked in his present business, which he has conducted ever since at the present stand. He is one of the oldest business men of Erie City, and by close attention to business, honesty in his dealings with his customers, he has become successful, and is well regarded as a merchant. He was married in 1852 to Mary Bootz, a sister of Jacob Bootz. They have the following children: William F. (in store with his father), Jacob, Frank D., George, Joseph. Mr. and Mrs. Schultz are members of the Catholic Church in Erie. He was Township Treasurer from 1862 to 1863; was one of the first members in South Erie Council; was a member three years. One of his sons was elected a member of the council of 1883, when he was not yet twenty-three years old, being the youngest Councilman in Erie City. Mr. Schultz has given his children the advantage of a good education, and most of them attended the business college at Buffalo, N. Y.

FRED W. SCHUTTE, Constable, carpenter and contractor, Erie, was born Dec. 26, 1836, in Germany; son of Christian Schutte, who died in 1849. Our subject came to Erie from his native land, and after receiving a common school education, learned carpentering, in which he has successfully continued since. He was united in marriage in Erie City, in 1858, with Melvina Sanders, of German lineage, who died here in 1877. By this union were nine children, seven of whom survive. Mr. Schutte was next married in 1882, and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church. He has made all he possesses by his own exertions; is a Republican in politics; has been a member of the Common Council, and is at present serving as Constable in the Fourth Ward, Erie City.

JOSEPH S. SCOBELL, Train-master of the Western Div. of the P. & E. Ry., Erie, was born in Kingston, Canada, Feb. 1, 1850. At fifteen he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and took up telegraphing, but after a year returned to Canada, following the same occupation at Belleville and Brantford with the Provincial Telegraph Company. He subsequently came to Erie City, employed by the P. & E. Ry. In 1880 he was appointed to his present position. Mr. Scobell was married in Erie to Sarah C., daughter of Charles E. Midlam, of Erie. This union has been blessed by one daughter—Helen S. Our subject is an active member of the Masonic order. He is a Knight Templar; member of the Royal Arcanum; and is also a member of the A. O. U. W., and the Telegraphers' Association. Mr. Scobell is a stockholder in the American District Telegraph Company, and is acting as its President.

ANDREW SCOTT (deceased) was born in Harbor Creek, this county, May 27, 1811, and became a resident of Erie City when fourteen years of age. Here he continued to reside, prospering with advancing years, but always aiding with liberal hand and hearty effort anything calculated to enhance the public welfare. His private benevolence was as unostentatious as widespread; the poor and suffering appealed to no one oftener, and never in vain; as a companion, his genial nature and racy humor were proverbial. He was High Sheriff of Erie Co. from 1838 to 1841, and Postmaster of Erie from 1841 to 1845; afterward and until his death he was actively engaged in commercial business at the harbor. He died Sept. 25, 1868, leaving his widow Jane (daughter of William Saltsman) two sons—Walter and John R. and three daughters—Isabel, Mary and Hattie. His remains lie in Erie Cemetery. His funeral was one of the largest and most profound and impressive demonstrations of public as well as private grief which has ever been witnessed in the city of Erie. In politics he was an old line Whig until the formation of the Republican party when he united with it. His father, Robert Scott, came as an early pioneer in 1800, and settled in Harbor Creek Township, this county. By occupation he was a farmer all his life.

J. H. Staples

WALTER SCOTT, Secretary and Treasurer of the Erie Gas Company, and a member of the firm of Scott & Arbuckle, insurance agents, office No. 36, North Park Row, Opera House Block, Erie, was born in this city July 21, 1846; son of Andrew and Jane (Saltzman) Scott, natives of this county. He attended the graded schools and the Academy in Erie. He first engaged in the coal business with his father, in which he remained until 1864, and then embarked in the wholesale grocery trade. This he carried on four years. After his father's death he took charge of the deceased's business until 1873, when he abandoned it, and entered the insurance business with Mr. Arbuckle. This firm, Scott & Arbuckle, represent fifteen good companies, fire, marine and accident. Mr. Scott was elected Cashier of Erie City Gas Works in 1879, and Secretary and Treasurer in 1883, which position he still holds. He was united in marriage, in 1880, with Alice, daughter of P. Hall, druggist in this city, and a native of Erie, Penn. This union was blessed with two children—Winfield Hall and Carl Andrew. Mr. Scott has been a member of the Council of Erie for four years; was for one year Chairman of Common Branch, and now a member and Chairman of the Select Council. In politics he is a Republican.

WILLIAM L. SCOTT was born in Virginia in July, 1828, being the son of Maj. Robert L. Scott, U. S. A.; the father dying when his son was but seven years old, left the family in straitened circumstances; at an early age William was appointed a Page in Congress; while serving in that capacity he attracted the favorable attention of Gen. C. M. Reed, who induced him to locate in Erie in 1848; was employed by that gentleman as a clerk for two years; in 1850 engaged in the coal and shipping trade at Erie Harbor; first in partnership with M. B. Lowry and afterward with John Hearn; in 1861 he contracted to build that portion of the Erie & Pittsburgh R. R., which extends from Jamestown to New Castle, on the completion of which he built the link from the latter place to the Fort Wayne Road, becoming the principal owner of the same; soon after he was elected President of the Erie & Pittsburgh Company, a position he has held ever since; he also built the coal docks and established the coal depot at the mouth of Cascade Run. During the late war, Mr. Scott gave liberally to the Union cause, and rendered much service in the enlistment of troops; he is engaged in many of the most extensive railroad and other enterprises of the day, and is widely known as one of the wealthiest and most energetic men of the country. For some fifteen years past he has taken a prominent part in politics. He has twice filled the office of Mayor of Erie, first in 1866 and next in 1871. As one of the first Water Commissioners of Erie he aided in establishing the city water works. Mr. Scott was the Democratic nominee for Congress in 1866 and again in 1876. In 1876 and 1880 he was a delegate to the Democratic National Conventions, on the last occasion being one of the four delegates-at-large from the State. He was also a member of the Democratic National Committee from 1876 to 1884, and a frequent delegate to the Democratic State Conventions. He is also a liberal contributor to the campaign funds of his party. Mr. Scott married Miss Mary Matilda, daughter of John A. Tracy, of Erie; their children are: Minnie T., intermarried with Richard H. Townsend, of Philadelphia, and Anna Wainright, intermarried with Charles H. Strong, of Erie.

WILLIAM SCULLER, retired farmer, Erie, was born in Scotland Aug. 8, 1811, son of James and Mary (Beard) Scouler. James, a miller, came to America in 1832, where he farmed most of the time till his death; he reared a family consisting of three sons and three daughters, and departed this life in 1858. Our subject received his schooling in Scotland, and has been a tiller of the soil. He was united in marriage, in Mill Creek Township, with Sarah Davison, who was born and reared in this township. They are both members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Scouler is a Republican in politics.

GEORGE SEABROOK, Master Mechanic and Foreman of the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Shops, Erie, was born and reared in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1829. When eighteen years old, he began the trade of a machinist in the railway shops, and after a few years took charge of a locomotive as an engineer, and followed that pursuit for twenty-four years, during which time he lost his left leg while on duty. He retired from this position to take the one he has since reputedly occupied. He was married, in Erie Co., N. Y., to Helen M. McDonald, of that county. They have three sons and one daughter; William George, in railway business; Charles H., a machinist; George A. and Helen E. Mrs. Seabrook is an active member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Seabrook and his oldest son, William G., are members of the Masonic order.

GEORGE SELDEN was born in Hadlyme, New London Co., Conn., Sept. 28, 1790. When about fifteen years of age, he went to reside at Troy, N. Y., with his uncles, Charles and Joseph D. Selden, who were engaged in mercantile pursuits—the business he followed until his death, which occurred at Erie, Penn., May 23, 1857. In an address delivered at the Semi-Centennial Celebration of the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, we find the following tribute to his memory; "He was tall, slender and dignified in his appearance, and always commanded the respect of the community. He was mild and reticent in his manners, and, while an active business man, had always time to attend to the business of the church, and was always found in his place at the prayer meetings and other public services. Mr. Selden always impressed one as being a very good man, with a great wealth of sterling good qualities covered up beneath his modesty and retiring disposition. He was a valuable counselor. His judgment could always be relied on, not only in the interests of the church but in that of his friends. No doubt he was greatly missed when he passed away." He was elected Elder of the church Dec. 29, 1832, which position he held until his death. Mr. S. descended from good old Revolutionary stock. His grandfather raised the first company of volunteers in New London Co., Conn., and was elected Colonel of the regiment. He was taken prisoner and died in New York a short time before the city was evacuated, from a wound he received while in the service. The family settled in Hadlyme, Conn., in 1650; some of the descendants still reside on land the title of which has never been out of the family name. George Selden was married, Oct. 14, 1813, to Miss Elizabeth Grace Card, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Card, of Troy, N. Y. About the year 1819 he removed to Erie with his family, which then consisted of wife and two children. Mrs. Selden died Sept. 26, 1827, leaving five surviving children—Joseph, Samuel, Elizabeth, John C. and George. His second wife was Miss Emily Marvin, to whom he was married June 12, 1833. Children: Charles Townsend (deceased) and Joseph (deceased), who came with their parents to Erie. Joseph married Joanna L. Sill, daughter of Thomas H. Sill, Esq. They had four children, three of whom survive—Joanna Sill, George Dudley and Emma J. Joseph became associated with his father in business under the name of George Selden & Son in 1840, which copartnership continued until his death. Samuel (deceased) married Caroline Perkins, daughter of Dr. C. F. Perkins, of Erie; they had five children—Mary L., Edward P., Caroline E., Charles C. and Samuel F. Samuel when a young man resided for several years in the Island of Cuba. On his return to his native land he married Miss Caroline Perkins, daughter of Dr. C. F. Perkins, and settled in the western part of the county and engaged in farming. In 1865 he removed to Erie; was elected Elder in the First Presbyterian Church Jan., 1866. He embarked in business with his brother, John C., and Matthew Griswold under the name of the Selden & Griswold Manufacturing Company, and built up a large and successful trade in the iron business. Elizabeth M. married Samuel M. Fellows, of Troy, N. Y. Both deceased. John C. married Lydia M. Griswold, daughter of Matthew Griswold, of Lyme, Conn. They had two children—Marion (deceased) and Grace Card. George married Anna M. Lawton, deceased, daughter of Charles Lawton, of Pottsville, Penn. John C. Selden in early life went as a clerk in a store in Troy, N. Y., where he remained until 1830, when he joined his brother George in California. After undergoing the various vicissitudes of early settlers in California, he returned to Erie in 1853, soon after which he became associated with his father in a general merchandise business on French Street, which was then the principal business street of Erie. This partnership continued a short time when he purchased his father's interest and changed to hardware business, in which he remained until 1872, when he retired. Since his withdrawal from regular business he has been more or less identified with various manufacturing interests in the city, and has always maintained an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity. George Selden when a mere boy manifested a desire to see the world. He went to New York City where he shipped on a merchant vessel with Capt. Griswold for the East Indies and China. He continued his sea life until he became of age, soon after which he returned to Erie. He remained at home but a short time when he left for California to join the searchers for gold, and like the majority of the pioneers of 1848 and 1849, he had his ups and downs. Returning to Erie in 1853 he then engaged in manufacturing, and soon became associated with his present partner, John H. Bliss, in the manufacture of barrels for petroleum, which they continued until 1861 or 1862, when they purchased the Erie City Iron Works, which they have since enlarged to an immense capacity. Mr. Selden is a man of great energy and perseverance, and would be uninfluenced by obstacles which would discourage an ordinary business man. He has patented many improvements in engines and mill machinery, and mainly through his ability as an inventor, the products of the works have attained a world-wide celebrity. He, like all other members of the family, is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

J. T. SEVEN, of the firm of J. T. Seven & Son, art gallery and picture frame manufactory, Erie, was born in Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 28, 1812, son of Frederick Seven, a school teacher. Our subject was educated in Germany and became a proficient scholar in Latin and French. After serving a four years' apprenticeship to the general turner trade, he came to America in 1845, and to Erie City Sept. 15, 1849, where he worked at his trade ten years, and then embarked in his present business. The art gallery is under his own immediate supervision, and the picture frame manufactory is conducted by his son, Theodore. Mr. Seven was married, in Germany, to Catharine, daughter of Andrew Albright, a cloth manufacturer in Germany. To this union were born seven children, viz.: Erencine, wife of Ernest Walclm; Elisit, at home; Caroline, wife of Jacob Erchorn, merchant tailor; Margaret, wife of Charles Wunschel; Lottie, wife of William Sherwood; Theodore and Henry.

HENRY SHATTUCK, retired farmer, Erie, was born in Erie Co., Penn., March 4, 1818, son of Spencer and Sally (Burton) Shattuck, natives of Connecticut, the former of English descent, and the latter of Irish lineage. They were parents of five children, four of whom now reside in Erie City. Mr. and Mrs. Shattuck are both deceased, the former, a Universalist in belief, dying in 1852; the latter, who was a member of the M. E. Church, departed this life in 1874. Our subject, who was the eldest child, wisely chose farming, his father's occupation; he at one time owned a grist mill in Mill Creek Township; has dealt extensively in live stock, and is owner of 369½ acres of land in Mill Creek Township, part of which is inside the corporation of Erie City. Mr. Shattuck has been twice married, on the first occasion, to Emily Parker, who bore him five children—Irene, wife of Henry Russell, a son of Capt. Willard Russell; William S., farming in Mill Creek; Austin and J. H., in the West, where they own a cattle ranch, and John who died in 1852. Mrs. Shattuck died in 1852, and our subject, in 1860, married Phebe, daughter of John Coover, by whom he has Lemuel, Elbridge and John.

SAMUEL A. SHERMAN, shipping clerk for the American Fusee Co., Erie, was born in Wellsburg, Erie Co., Penn., Oct. 21, 1851, son of Charles and Olive (Powell) Sherman, both natives of New York, and of English descent, and a grandson of Samuel Sherman, one of the old pioneers of Erie Co., Penn. Charles Sherman, a farmer, and an early settler of this county, was parent of eight children, five of whom are residents of Erie Co. Our subject, the fifth in this family, was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in Wellsburg, and at Edinboro Normal School; for a time he acted in capacity of traveling salesman for the Wellsburg Spring Bed Co., but since 1874 has filled his present position.

G. W. F. SHERWIN, Civil Engineer and Water Commissioner, Erie, was born July 12, 1831, near Harbor Creek. His father, Dr. Ira Sherwin, physician, was a native of Windsor Co., Vt., a graduate of Castleton Medical College, same State, and came to Harbor Creek Township at an early day, purchasing land in the forest known as Irvine's Reserve. Here he farmed, followed his profession, and for two or three terms taught in the first school-house built in the township. He married, Aug. 10, 1826, Sarah Wilson, born in Erie Co. Aug. 10, 1800, daughter of Wm. and Sarah (Barr) Wilson, natives of Mifflin Co., Penn., who bore him seven children, six living, viz.: Harriet E., wife of A. H. Tracy, of Monmouth, Ill. (have six children—Josephine F., Wilson S., Rodliffe Z., George A., Joseph P. and Harriet N.); John O., married to Elizabeth Anderson, resides in Nebraska (have five children—John O., Jr., Fred, McDowell, Sarah A. and Lucy); Sarah A., wife of S. N. West, of Tracer, Iowa (have four children—John S., George M., William W. and Royal A.); Josephine B., at home, has been Postmistress of Harbor Creek for eighteen years; Mary F., at home with the mother. Dr. Sherwin died in the fall of 1859. His widow resides in Harbor Creek; she has a wonderful memory, and clearly remembers when Perry and some of his force stopped at her father's house. G. W. F. Sherwin was reared on the farm, and attended the Erie Academy, and Keysville Academy, Ohio; there took a mathematical course, and at once launched into civil engineering. He began his profession in 1846, working at same during the summers and teaching during the winters. He then went to St. Louis, and surveyed for the North Missouri R. R., and later for the Belleville & Alton; was then chosen engineer in charge of Alton & St. Louis R. R., and made the first soundings for the bridge over the Mississippi River. In 1854 he was promoted Assistant Superintendent and Paymaster on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, which he resigned in 1855; then went up the Missouri, and laid out Sioux City, Iowa, and Niobrara, Neb., in which were 2,000 Indians at the time. He was chosen one of the original eleven Trustees of the Iowa Agricultural College, and was honorably appointed to deliver the dedicatory address, but was unable to attend the ceremony. Mr. Sherwin was twice elected County Judge of Cherokee Co., Iowa. His father requested that on his death he should return to Erie and settle up his estate, which he did. He then served in this county three years as County Surveyor; five years as City Engineer; four as Water Commissioner, and is now President of the Board. Mr. Sherwin was married, Jan. 30, 1861, to Sarah J., daughter of Col. Jas. M. Moorehead, of Harbor Creek Township, by whom he has had five children: Josephine M., Anna F. and James M.; two died in infancy. Our subject was one of the charter members of the Central Presbyterian Church of Erie, then numbering but forty-six, but which has now 500 members, and has been Elder in same since 1873, and is also an earnest worker in the Sabbath-school.

CHARLES C. SHIRK, of the Chicago & Erie Stove Co., Erie, is a native of Waterford, this county, born Sept. 1, 1841, son of David and Mary (Whitehill) Shirk, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of German, the latter of English extraction. David Shirk was a tanner by trade, born in Lancaster Co., Penn., in 1806. He came to Waterford, Erie Co., in 1838, where he carried on a tannery business until 1842, in which year he moved to Erie City. Here he engaged in the foundry business for thirty-three years. He was a member and for many years an Elder of the Presbyterian Church. In politics was a Democrat. His family numbered four children: James W., deceased in 1873, served in the United States Navy, entering as a cadet in 1849; his first active service was during the war of the rebellion, on gunboats; was promoted to a Captaincy in the fleet plying the Tennessee River; Elizabeth, wife of W. R. Davenport, whose biographical sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; Charles C. and Kate, at home. Our subject received his education in Erie City Academy. He embarked in business when a young man, and has been eminently successful, much being due to his strict integrity and close attention to his affairs. He is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church, of which he has been an Elder for seven years. Mr. Shirk was married to Louise, daughter of E. F. Wilson, and of English descent. To this union have been born Randolph, Margaret, Mary, Stewart and Davenport. Mrs. Shirk, who is a much esteemed lady, is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church of Erie City.

HON. THOMAS H. SILL, lawyer and legislator, son of Capt. Richard L. Sill, of the Revolutionary war, was born at Windsor, Conn., Oct. 11, 1783. He graduated from Brown University, Rhode Island, in 1804. After studying law with Hon. Jacob Burnet, of Cincinnati, Ohio, he began practice in 1809 at Lebanon, Ohio. Failing health soon induced him to relinquish business temporarily; and, after traveling for a year he resumed law practice, opening an office at Erie, Penn., in 1813, being then the only resident attorney at that place, where he remained for life. Erie was then but a hamlet, the war being in progress, and the brigs of Perry's fleet under construction in the harbor, so that upon his arrival he joined the "Minute Men," who guarded the place in momentary expectation of an attack from the British, an apprehension happily dispelled by Perry's victory on the following 10th of September. This service, with a subsequent term on the staff of Gen. Wallace, completed his military service. From 1816 till 1818 he was Deputy United States Marshal, and in 1819 Deputy Attorney-General, as such assisting at the first court in Warren Co. In 1823 he was elected to the Legislature, and in 1826 to Congress. In 1828 he was again elected, being the only anti-Jackson member from Pennsylvania, which indicated his personal influence with his constituency. He declined nomination for the following term, and in 1837 was made President of the United States Branch Bank at Erie, holding the position during the existence of the Institution. He served repeatedly as Burgess of Erie. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention to revise the Constitution in 1837 and 1838, where among the able men who composed that body he maintained a marked influence. In 1848 as Presidential Elector he voted for Taylor and Fillmore. From 1849 to 1853 he was Postmaster at Erie. He was an able and eloquent advocate, a careful and trusted counselor. Among contemporaries of the most respectable positions, he was a man of note and influence. While the qualities of his mind commanded the respect of all, the amiability of his disposition won for him their affection. He took a lively interest in public matters, especially projects of public improvements, and the cause of education, serving as School Director, and for more than thirty years as Trustee of Erie Academy. To no one during his career was the public eye oftener turned at public meetings and associations for the promotion of reform; while as the representative of his fellow citizens, old residents yet remember as models of composition and good taste his address at the reception of ex-Presidents Adams and Van Buren, and his eulogy upon President Taylor. While his style was chaste, his bearing combined dignity with modesty. As a forensic advocate, he excelled, especially in his calm and logical addresses to juries, and in this respect he had few if any superiors in the circuit of his practice. An early Republican and Whig, he had much to do in shaping the politics of this district. He lived to witness the dawn of Republican supremacy, for which he had labored, and the prosperity of a city in whose early struggles he had been so active. He died on the 7th of Feb., 1856, "full of honors and of years." Court was then sitting, his contemporary and old friend Judge John Galbraith upon the bench. The announcement of his death by Geo. A. Elliott, Esq., and the addresses of Messrs. Walker, Marshall and Kelso, with the resolutions adopted, and the feeling response of Judge Galbraith, made an impressive scene long to be remembered. Mr. Sill was married in 1816 to Joanna Boyleston, daughter of Rev. Amos and Joanna (Lanman) Chase. She was a native of Litchfield Co., Conn., and still survives, and resides in Erie. He had six children—Richard, who resides at Erie, Joanna Lanman, who married Joseph Selden (both are deceased; of their children, Elizabeth G. died in 1864; George D., of the Erie City Iron Works, Joanna S. and Emma J. survive). Sarah Hale married Matthew Taylor, who died in 1854; (their son, Rev. Frank M. S. Taylor, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Alton, Ill., is Archdeacon of the Diocese of Southern Illinois). Thomas Sill died unmarried; Joseph Sill resides at Union City, and James Sill, attorney at law and Senator, a notice of whom appears elsewhere.

JAMES SILL, lawyer and legislator, Erie, is a son of Thomas H. and Joanna B. Sill, and a native of Erie. After a course of study at the Erie Academy and in his father's law office, he graduated at the New York State and National Law School, and was admitted to the Erie bar, where he has since practiced. He was in 1857 elected District Attorney of Erie Co., serving three years; was presidential Elector in 1868, voting for Grant and Colfax, and City Solicitor of Erie in 1871 and 1872. In 1870, with Judge Greer and others, he organized the People's Savings Institution at North East; having secured the charter of the Union & Titusville Railroad, in conjunction with Titusville and Union parties, organized the same as it was afterward constructed. He obtained the charter for and with others organized and for many years was a Director of the Humboldt Savings Bank, now one of the strongest institutions in northwestern Pennsylvania; elected to the State Senate in 1880 for four years. At the session of 1881, under instructions from the Republican primaries, he supported G. A. Grow, and in doing so co-operated with the fifty-six independent Republicans. He served in that session on the Apportionment and General Judiciary committees and as Chairman of the Library Committee, and introduced and advocated a bill which became a law abolishing all distinction in color in schools; also an amendment to the Constitution relative to representatives in the House, and a bill tendering the marine hospital to the General Government for a soldiers' and sailors' home, which ultimately passed the Legislature of 1883. At the latter session he served on the Judiciary and Appropriation committees, and among the most important bills introduced by him at the latter session, there was enacted one to perfect the title to real estate of decedents, a bill to which he devoted much care, one of much importance to titles. In the extra session of 1883, he was active in his efforts to obtain apportionment bills; his last speech on this subject having been extensively circulated through the State, his resolutions for the restoration of the land light-house, adopted by the Legislature, were generally approved by his constituents. His bill providing for the probate of wills during the life of testator, passed the Senate but was lost in House. He collated the first published history of Erie City, and delivered numerous historical and political addresses, and for many years contributed freely to public journals. Senator Sill has been an active party worker, having voted with the Whig party while it existed; he represented Erie Co. in the last Whig State Convention in 1855. Joining the Republican party in 1856, he was elected delegate to the Republican State Conventions of 1859, 1863, 1866, 1868 and 1878, several times a member of State Committee, and Chairman of Republican County Committees of 1861 and 1867, and of the city committees of 1866 and 1876, all attended with much labor and success. He declined the tendered appointment under President Lincoln of Provost Marshal for Nineteenth District in 1863. As member of the bar, much of the time with a large practice, he was in 1875 President of the Erie Law Association, and as member of the Library Committee in 1871, initiated and carried out the placing of portraits of ex-Judges and deceased attorneys in the court room. As member of the City Council in 1857-58, upon a special committee, he proposed a number of reforms which were enacted in the charter for the classification and elongation of terms of councilmen, regulation of an increase of the power of the Mayor, etc., until the adoption of the Wallace Act. Upon his return from Harrisburg, Mr. Sill resumed practice at the bar.

JAMES E. SILLIMAN, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in North East, this county, June 10, 1844, son of John and Minerva (Chapman) Silliman, natives of Pennsylvania. John Silliman's father was a farmer, born in Ireland, who emigrated to America, settling in Erie Co., in 1800. John Silliman was also a farmer; he was parent of seven children, four now living, of whom Mrs. Dr. Griffin of North East is one. Our subject acquired his education in Allegheny College, Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1871, with degree of A. B.; three years after he obtained the degree of A. M. He afterward graduated from Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, in 1874, in the regular course, and commenced practice in Erie City same year. He studied medicine under Dr. J. L. Stewart of this city. In 1878 the Doctor was married to Hattie J., daughter of Hugh P. Mehaffey and a native of Erie Co., of German and Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject enlisted in 1865, in the 102d P. V. I., Company E, serving till close of the war. He is Assistant Surgeon of the 16th P. N. G. In 1875 he was elected Coroner, and served till 1881; was appointed Secretary of the Board of Examining Surgeons of Pensions in 1877. He is a member of the Erie County Medical Society, and of the State Medical Society. Dr. Silliman and wife are members of the M. E. Church, of which he has been Steward and Sabbath-school teacher eight years. In politics he is a Republican.

BENJAMIN F. SLOAN, youngest child of William A. and Esther (Crandall) Sloan, was born in Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., March 27, 1819, and moved with his parents to Fairview Township, Erie Co., Penn., about 1821. He attended the country schools until he was seventeen. Entered the office of the Erie Gazette in 1836 as an apprentice and served four years. Visited the Southern States in 1841 and 1842, and worked in various offices in New Orleans and Louisville. Part of the latter year was connected with the Louisville Daily Gazette as night editor. In connection with A. P. Durlin, Esq., purchased the Erie Observer, and edited it till Jan. 1, 1861, when he sold the office and became a member of the grocery firm of Sloan, Booth & McCreary. Was engaged in the business of oil refining from 1863 to 1868. From 1868 to 1875 was editor of the Erie Daily Republican and the Titusville Daily Courier. Was Clerk of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House of Representatives during the 44th and the extra session of the 45th Congress. Was appointed Secretary and Treasurer of the Erie Water Department Jan. 1, 1879, in which position he still continues. Mr. Sloan was married, March 27, 1845, to Miss Elizabeth M. Barr. They have had five children, of whom two are living—Clara Virginia (intermarried with H. D. McNaughton, of Rochester, N. Y.), and Charles H. Sloan, of Erie.

JOHN M. SMITH, Master Carpenter of the Western Division of the P. & E. Railway, Erie, was born Sept. 27, 1828, in Ontario, Wayne Co., N. Y. At eighteen he engaged as a sailor in the whaling service, but after an eventful experience of a few years retired from it and engaged in sailing on the lakes till 1865. He held the position of vessel master for several years. He next assumed the duties of a foreman carpenter in connection with railroading, and has been reputably connected with the same since. He married, in the place of his nativity, Nancy Jane Decker. There are no children. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the M. E. Church, and he is an active member of the K. of H.

W. T. SMITH, Master Mechanic of the P. & E. R. R. shops, Erie, is a native of Pennsylvania, born Oct. 10, 1838, son of H. L. and M. M. Smith; the former a pattern-maker by trade, was of German descent, the latter of Scotch-Irish. They were parents of three children. H. L. Smith came to Erie City in 1873, where he worked at his trade, and died in 1883. Our subject, who is second in a family of three children, received a common school training, and at the age of seventeen commenced the trade of machinist in Altoona, Penn., at which he continued till 1860; between 1860 and 1866, he was in the employ of the P., Ft. W. & C. R. R. and G. V. R. R. in Pittsburgh, and in 1866 he was appointed foreman of the lathe department of the N. Y. P. & O. R. R. shops at Meadville, Penn., where he remained till February, 1867, when he received an appointment to his present position. Mr. Smith was married, in 1857, to M. M. Runyen, a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent. To this union were born Carrie A., Harry L., George, Minot and Otis. Our subject has been a member of Erie City Select Council eight years and President of the same two years. In politics he is a Democrat.

SAMUEL SOBEL, merchant, Erie, was born in Germany in 1835; son of Solomon Sobel. He received his education in his native land, and there learned tailoring. On attaining his majority he embarked for America, locating for three years in New York City; thence went to the oil regions of Pennsylvania, where he remained three years. Mr. Sobel came to Erie City in 1873, launching into the dry goods trade, in which he has since continued with more than average success. The firm is now S. Sobel & Sons, and is doing a wholesale and retail business. Our subject was married in New York to Cecelia Kine, also a native of Germany. To this union were born nine children—Elias (clerking in his father's store), Isidor and Abraham (members of the firm), Ida (wife of David Shear, member of the firm of Shear & Bro., merchants, Warren Co., Penn.), Henry (clerk in the store), Theresa (at home), Lazarus (at school), Jacob and Joseph (at school). The family are members of the Jewish Synagogue. Mr. Sobel is a Democrat in politics; is a member of the Knights of Pythias; I. O. F. of I. German society; also of the K. S. B.

HENRY SOUTHER, ex-Judge and attorney at law, Erie, was born in Charlestown, Mass., March 5, 1826, son of Joseph and Hepsie (Armisted) Souther, both of English ancestry. Joseph Souther was a manufacturer of morocco and kid leather, and died in Charlestown in 1866. Our subject attended the schools of that place and an academy at Walpole, N. H. In 1836 he was sent to an academy at Fryeburg, Me., where he remained till 1840, receiving there a classical education preparatory to a collegiate course; he then returned to Charlestown, where he attended a private school, and also at Boston, Mass., for nearly two years. In October, 1842, he came to Ridgway, in that part of Elk Co., Penn., taken from Jefferson Co., to learn the lumber business, his father having there made an investment in that industry. This lumber venture proving unsuccessful, our subject's father sold out his interest in 1845. Henry Souther remained at Ridgway, it having been made the county seat of Elk Co., and entered his name as a student at law with the late Hon. C. B. Curtis, then of Warren, Penn., teaching school and pursuing his legal studies. In the fall of 1847 he was elected County Treasurer of Elk Co., holding the office two years. In Jan., 1848, he was admitted to the bar of Elk Co., where he continued in practice over twenty years. He served as Deputy Attorney General and District Attorney of Elk Co. by appointment and election from 1848 to 1855, when he resigned. In 1855 he was elected State Senator as a Republican in the district composed of the counties of Tioga, Potter, McKean, Elk, Jefferson, Clearfield and Forest. In 1860 he was a member of the National Convention at Chicago which nominated Lincoln and Hamlin. On Dec. 27, 1861, was appointed by Gov. Curtin Surveyor General of the State in place of Hon. W. H. Keim, filling the unexpired term ending May, 1863. In 1868 was a delegate to the National Convention at Chicago which nominated Grant and Colfax. Feb. 17, 1871, was appointed by Gov. Geary additional Law Judge of Schuylkill Co., Penn., which office he held till the following December. Immediately upon his appointment he moved from Ridgway to Schuylkill Co., where he resided till 1872, in which year he moved to Erie, where he has since resided. Judge Souther was married in May, 1850, to Letitia, daughter of John Patterson, formerly of Warren Co., Penn.

JUDAH COLT SPENCER, Pres. First National Bank, Erie, was born July 1, 1813, in Hadlyme, New London Co., Conn., son of William and Deborah (Selden) Spencer; he married Lavinia Stanley Sanford. To this union were born William, married to Mary Richards Du Puy, of Philadelphia, have one daughter, Maude, and one son, Judah Colt; Lavinia D., wife of Bishop Spaulding, now residing in Colorado; Frances L.; Catharine, wife of Rev. Robert S. Van Cleve, a Presbyterian Minister now residing in Sewickley, this State. Mr. Spencer is the nephew and namesake of Judah Colt, one of the pioneers of Erie, of whom mention is made in other portions of this volume. When fifteen years of age (1829), Mr. Spencer, then residing with his parents in Connecticut, received and accepted an invitation to join his uncle, and from this date begins his citizenship in Erie. He supplemented the schooling he had received in Connecticut by an attendance of one year at the Erie Academy, when his uncle deemed him fit to enter upon his business career, so he was inducted into the office and field work devolving upon the agency of the Pennsylvania Population Company. Upon the death of Mr. Colt in 1832, the entire management of the affairs of this company devolved upon Mr. Spencer. Other pursuits engaged him for a while, and in 1852 he began banking (from about this date, until its consolidation with the Buffalo & State Line road, he filled the office of Secretary and Treasurer of the Erie & North East R. R.). He was among the first to apply for privileges under the law authorizing National Banks, and the First National Bank of Erie, over which he has presided since its foundation, was the twelfth bank incorporated under the new legislation. Mr. Spencer was an original stockholder in many other of Erie's reputable enterprises. For twenty consecutive years he has served as President of the Erie Cemetery Co., and for years he was Treasurer of the Agricultural Association of the county. Mr. Spencer early took the stand of a Christian, and for more than two decades has been a member of the Board of Trustees of the Park Presbyterian Church, and was one of the Building Committee of that edifice when it was in course of construction. His son inherits the leading characteristics of his father, and acceptably fills the chief place of trust in the banking institution over which Mr. Spencer has so long presided.

H. A. SPENCER, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in Warren Co., Penn., Aug. 29, 1828; son of Rev. Matthias and Harriet (Smith) Spencer, the former a native of Connecticut, died May 1, 1882, aged about eighty-seven years, the latter a native of New York State, and both of English descent. Rev. Matthias Spencer was a Methodist Clergyman, and followed farming, removing from New York State in 1825, to Warren Co., Penn.; he remained there till 1830, when he came to this county, settling in Wayne Township. Our subject is the fifth in a family of eight sons, who all grew to manhood. He was brought up on a farm till fifteen years of age, when he attended the common schools and the Waterford, Penn., Academy, also Allegheny College, at Meadville, Penn., two years, and elected medicine and surgery as his profession. In 1848 he went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he studied at the medical college from which he graduated in 1851. He commenced to practice in Waterford, Penn., remaining there till 1864, in which year he came to Erie City, where he has resided ever since. The Doctor organized the corps of surgeons on the P. & E. R. R. in 1864, of which he has been Surgeon-in-chief between Erie and Sunbury, since that time. In 1861 he was appointed Pension Examiner, and was Medical Superintendent of the Erie County Infirmary for five years. He is a member of the State and County Medical Society. Dr. Spencer was married, in 1855, to Julia, daughter of J. L. Cook, a railroad contractor and a native of Waterford, Penn. To this union were born six children: Lena; Mary L., wife of F. H. Thompson; Boyd; Harry; deceased; Tereah and Roy. The Doctor is now Physician in Charge of Hamot Hospital at Erie.

E. SPRAGUE, of the firm of Sprague & Son, proprietors of the Liebel House, State Street, Erie, was born in Crawford Co., Ohio, July 13, 1835, son of John and Harriet (Lord) Sprague, the former a miller and farmer, native of Vermont, latter a native of New York. Our subject was reared on a farm, and received a good English education. In early life he worked on the Penn. & Erie Canal for twenty-eight years, and by industry and economy finally became owner of two boats. Subsequently he entered hotel business, kept the Reed House, Louisville, Crawford Co., Penn., for three years, then a hotel in Jamestown, Mercer Co., Penn. one year, and in 1873 bought the Powers House, now known as the Liebel House, Erie, where the traveling public are accommodated at $1.50 per day. The capacity of the hotel is thirty-seven furnished rooms. Mr. Sprague was married, in Crawford County, Penn., to Lucy Ransom, a native of this county. Her father, Robert Ransom, was a farmer and early settler in Erie Co.; he was one of the builders of the wharves in Erie City. By this union were four children, three now living: Florence Belle, O. M., hotel-keeper at Conneautville, Crawford Co., Penn., and R. C., with his father. Our subject is a member of the Universalist Church, in politics a Democrat. When he was a resident of Crawford Co. he held the office of Constable and Deputy Sheriff of that county.

DANIEL SPRICKMAN, son of Conrad and Wilhelmena (Faber) Sprickman of Werxheim, Hessen-Homburg, Germany, where our subject was born April 3, 1830. He came to this country when but nineteen years of age, first stopping in Buffalo, N. Y., where he remained a few months, after which he went to Dubuque, Iowa, where he worked in a barrel manufactory for six months. The climate not agreeing with him he returned to Buffalo, N. Y., and entered the employ of Messrs. Evans, proprietors of a line of steamers on the lakes, where he remained fifteen years. Finding him a reliable man, the Messrs. Evans then sent him to this city to take charge of loading and coaling their boats, in which capacity he served two years with so much satisfaction to all concerned that they appointed him agent for their line of steamers, which important position he held until they sold their boats to the Anchor line. He continued in the employ of the new management up to the time of his death, which occurred on the ninth day of Oct., 1878. Mr. Sprick-man was married in Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 16, 1860, to Miss Susanna, daughter of Jacob and Katharine (Kah) Schwarz, of Limburg-on-the-Lahn, Germany. Their children were Henry Daniel, born Oct. 28, 1860 (deceased); Daniel Henry, born March 30, 1863; Henry Frederick, born Sept. 15, 1864; Charles Philip, born May 26, 1866 (deceased); Frank M., born Jan. 29, 1868; John Louis, born Aug. 26, 1870; Christina Louisa, born Nov. 23, 1872. Mr. Sprickman was of a generous disposition and made many friends. One of the most upright and careful of men, he enjoyed the implicit confidence of his employers and of the parties with whom his business brought him in contact.

HENRY C. STAFFORD, Collector U. S. Customs, Port of Erie, was born in Waterford Township, Jan. 29, 1842. He was brought up on his father's farm and received the benefits of the tuition at the Waterford Academy. Healthy, patriotic and enthusiastic, he promptly responded to the country's call for volunteers to suppress the rebellion, and at twenty years of age he enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., which was quickly dispatched to the front and quickly brought to battle with the foe. At the second battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862, between sunrise and sunset, our subject received five gunshot wounds, the last perforating his left lung. He was left prostrate on the field, and so remained unattended for three days and nights. He fell into the hands of the enemy, but was immediately paroled on the field, and carried to Alexandria. He remained for a while in the hospital there, afterward being removed to Washington City. He bore the pains of his slowly healing wounds with much fortitude. Jan. 29, 1863, he received his discharge from the army and returned home; his avoirdupois at this time, including his ordinary wearing apparel, was just eighty pounds. He recuperated in health, and served until near the close of the war in the Provost Marshal's office at Waterford. The war ended, he returned to his farm; subsequently became Constable, Tax Collector, Deputy Sheriff, and Warden of Erie County Prison, and, by election in 1879, High Sheriff, and July, 1883, was appointed by the General Government Collector of the Port at Erie, which position he now holds. Mr. S. was married, Jan. 5, 1865, to Miss Effie R. Judson, daughter of P. P. Judson, Esq., of Waterford, Penn. To this union have been born seven children, five of whom survive: Fehie E., Peter P., William C., Margaretha M. and James Garfield. Mr. S. is fond of home and family, and while a positive character, is popular in his manners, and has hosts of warm friends throughout the county.

FRANK E. STAPLES, High Sheriff of Erie County, was born in Clymer, N. Y., March 14, 1842, son of Scammel and Minerva (Mead) Staples, natives of Massachusetts. His grandfather, Isaac Staples, was a soldier in the Revolution, and the father of the subject of this sketch was named after Col. Scammel, the Colonel under whom he served. Scammel Staples was for several years one of the keepers of the State Penitentiary at Auburn, N. Y. but his health failing, he retired to farm life. For more than half a century he was widely known as a local minister of the M. E. Church. Frank E. Staples, the subject of this sketch, spent his early years working during the summer, by the day and month, as a farm laborer, and attending school in winter. In 1860 he located in Corry, Penn., engaged in railroading, and for twelve years held various positions as a railroad employe. He also served the city of Corry as one of its first police officers, High Constable, Fire Warden, and member of the Council. In 1871 he moved to Union City; was elected Constable, and appointed Special Deputy Sheriff, and also engaged in commercial business. Jan. 1, 1880, he was appointed Warden of Erie County Jail, and in May following Deputy Sheriff, and Deputy U. S. Marshal, and in Nov., 1882, was elected Sheriff of Erie Co. He is widely known as a capable and efficient officer. Mr. Staples was married, in 1860, to Myra A., daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Green, of Ellington, N. Y., and they have three children: George L., Hattie E. and Hawley S.

J. L. STERNBERG, Cashier First National Bank, Erie, was born in Schoharie Co., N. Y., in 1845, son of Abraham and Anna (Wormuth) Sternberg, natives of the Empire State, of German descent; the former, who is a farmer, lives in the house in which he was born in 1808. Our subject was reared on the farm, and received a common school and Union College (N. Y.) training; was clerk in a bank in New York for a short time; then came to Erie City in 1865, and after six months acting in the capacity of clerk in the Keystone Bank, was appointed Teller of the First National Bank, and in 1872 was elected Cashier. Mr. Sternberg was married, in 1868, to Jessie, daughter of L. L. Lamb. To this union were born seven children: Robert, Jerome, Jr., Sue, Jessie, James H., Abraham and Edna. Mrs. Sternberg is a member of the Park Presbyterian Church. Our subject is President of the Erie City School Board; in politics is Democratic.

JAMES M. STERRETT (deceased), second son of James Sterrett, was born in Cumberland Co., Penn., in 1784, and removed to Erie with his father's family in 1807. Soon after reaching his majority he engaged in the tannery business, and in a few years succeeded in building up the largest tannery in Northern Pennsylvania. Later in life he engaged extensively in the purchase and sale of real estate. He took an active interest in the improvements of the city, and was appreciated for his excellent judgment and high moral character. He married Miss Jane, daughter of Michael Spersard, of Washington Co., Md., in 1815, and moved his family to Erie in 1819, the mode of traveling being on horseback and the "old Penn wagon," as there were no stage coaches at that date. The result of this union was nine sons and four daughters. Mr. Sterrett died Sept. 13, 1852, and was interred in the Erie Cemetery. He left a fine estate. Mrs. Sterrett survived her husband until February 11, 1869. Four of Mr. Sterrett's brothers were in the war of 1812, serving until its close.

HON. JOSEPH M. STERRETT, retired editor. More than ordinary interest attaches to a journalistic life, covering nearly one-half the present century. Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, now living in quiet retirement in Erie City, possesses this rare distinction. Widely known, personally and highly esteemed, his sun-setting days are serenely passing away in the midst of a devoted family. Mr. Sterrett was born near Shippensburg, Cumberland Co., Penn., on the 19th of February, 1800. At an early age he removed with his parents, brothers and sisters to McKean Township, Erie Co., and after acquiring a common education entered as an apprentice the office of the Northern Sentinel, published at Erie by Robert I. Curtis. The place of publication of this paper being changed to another State, Mr. Sterrett took a similar position in the office of the Western Press at Mercer. Remaining only a short time, he passed to Hagerstown, Md., working on the Torchlight, and subsequently for a longer period on the Star of Federalism in Frederick. He also found employment in the offices of the Baltimore American and Carlisle Volunteer, and returned to Erie in 1819. Prompted by a desire to engage in business for himself, he purchased a portion of the materials of the Erie Patriot and commenced the publication of the Erie Gazette, issuing the first number January 15, 1820. The Gazette was of medium size, and Mr. Sterrett performed all the labor upon it single-handed, working night and day until the following April, when an apprentice was procured. The Gazette was independent up to the breaking out of the anti-Masonic excitement in 1827. Mr. Sterrett's convictions led him to espouse the anti-Masonic cause, and the Gazette became the organ of the party formed to represent that cause, and courageously and effectively fought for its principles. This was a peculiarly exciting period in the history of the Gazette. Rancorous feeling and personal estrangements resulted from the bitter discussions by the alleged enormities of the Masonic order. Under the vigorous leadership of the Gazette the opposition elements rapidly grew into a powerful and successful organization. Backed by a decided popular majority, it filled all the offices and exercised control over all the affairs of the county. To an equally marked extent the Gazette subsequently served the Whig and Republican parties. It likewise gave special attention to local questions, and always favored a line of action calculated to build up home interests. So complete was the confidence reposed in its judgment that it had but to advocate a measure to make it popular. With a brief interruption, Mr. Sterrett's connection with the Gazette continued to May, 1865, comprising a period of forty-five years and four months. Mr. Sterrett never exhibited a disposition to exert his admitted personal and political influence for selfish ends. Offices he held without seeking them. He was County Commissioner in 1829; in 1837 he represented the Whig party in the State Senate. This body at that period contained many men whose names are conspicuous in Pennsylvania's history. In 1849 Gov. William E. Johnson conferred upon Mr. Sterrett the appointment of Associate Judge of Erie Co., and when his term of service expired he was elected to the same position by the popular vote and continued to serve for a period of five years. In addition to the Revenue Commissioner for the Erie Judicial District, honors were given him in the Borough of Erie beyond the measure of his wishes. The last public position he held, and the only one affording remunerative compensation was Postmaster of Erie from 1861 to 1869. Such is a brief review of the life of the oldest living Pennsylvania journalist. It is due to Mr. Sterrett to say that he met the requirements of his day and generation in a manner evincive of high resolves, patriotic aims and conscientious regard for the greatest number. Often engaged in heated controversy, frequently obliged to antagonize even personal friends, and sometimes forced by a sense of duty to adopt a course inviting criticism, the purity of his motives and justness of his motives were never yet questioned. Carrying upon his shoulders of eighty odd years the consequent growing bodily infirmities, he is by common consent, looked upon as adding to a long career of marked usefulness the fairly achieved reputation of "an honest man."—*From newspaper sketch by I. A. J. STERRETT (deceased). The following from the Erie Gazette of Feb. 20, 1881, written by a life-long acquaintance of the subject whose name heads these notes, mentions some of the varied scenes that made up his useful life: "It is with deep regret we announce the death of one of our best known, most valued and estimable citizens, Andrew Jackson Sterrett, who expired at his residence on Holland Street, in this city, on Wednesday evening last, after a short but painful illness; his disease was pneumonia. Connected as he had been for many years with the affairs of Erie Co., and identified with the administration of the County Commissioner's office, with an acquaintance through the county probably unequalled by that of any other citizen, our readers will be interested in some of the particulars of his life. He was born Oct. 5, 1826, in McKean Township, Erie Co. He was a son of David Sterrett, who was himself one of the oldest and best known citizens of the county. At about the age of fifteen he entered the office of the Gazette to learn the art of printing with his Uncle, Hon. Joseph M. Sterrett, the veteran publisher of that paper. Gen. Hiram L. Brown, Sidney Kelsey, Joseph R. Sterrett, and George W. Riblet were among his associates during the period of his connection with that office. Desiring more active business, upon the completion of his term in the office, and having acquired the art, he engaged in the milling business at Sterrettania, where he continued for some time. In view of the great inducements presented in the State of Iowa, he removed to Fort Dodge about the year 1854, embarking in the land business and investing considerably in the lands then open for settlement in that locality, the movement in which he was augmented by the Bounty Land Act of March 3, 1855. The closing of the land offices, which speedily followed the passage of the railroad grants of 1856, as announced by proclamation in May of that year, and the failure of some business ventures, caused him to abandon his intention of remaining there, and he returned to Erie Co. During this period his health had been precarious, and his strength, not always equal to the exactions of business for which his abilities and attainments so well fitted him. It was in the midst of the war of the rebellion, when the long clerkship of Mr. Colton in the Commissioner's office had terminated by his election as Prothonotary, that the Commissioners, Messrs. Washburn, Palmer and Boyd, staggering under the heavy load caused by the effort to fill one quota by the payment of county bounties, and supplying the need of a local currency by the issue of what was known as county scrip, and after a trial of one or two others, persuaded Mr. Sterrett to accept the position of Clerk, the duties of which, under the exigencies of the war, had become thus complicated and onerous. Accepting the office thus conferred he entered upon the discharge of his duties, mastering all their details, and performed them with credit to himself and acceptability to the people, and for seventeen years remained in the position to the satisfaction of everyone. Our readers need not to be reminded of the manner in which his duties were performed. Familiar with all the details and routine of the office, studious of the county's interest, courteous to all who had business in the office, it might be said that he had become a part of it, and as we write it is difficult to understand how the vacancy so suddenly made can be supplied. There was a method in his business; a patience and affability in official intercourse; an unobtrusive civility and endurance of labor; a courtesy of manner, and tenacity of memory, accuracy in figures and neatness of penmanship, and a vigilant interest in the public weal which were strikingly manifest, which especially fitted him for this position. All of our readers who have during the last seventeen years done business at the Commissioner's office, will corroborate us in our estimate of the ability with which his duties were performed during his extended term. In no way was his tact and fitness for the position better evinced than in his entire abstention from interference in any of the contests for official position, with which, in the distribution of the county patronage, those attached to the office are so apt to be connected." He was married, 1865, to Helen M. Brecht, and the result was eight children, viz., Ralph B., Reid G., Scott S., Lee Norton, Carl M., Andrew J., Thomas G. and Ruth A. Such is a brief notice of one whose demise will be sincerely deplored, while his exemplary career will long cause his name to be respected by those who for the last quarter of a century have known and respected the subject of this sketch.

JAMES L. STEWART, physician and surgeon, office and house 610 Peach Street, Erie City, was born near Pittsburgh, Aug. 1, 1825; he is of Scotch-Irish extraction. He was a graduate of the medical department of University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, graduating in 1848. He commenced the practice of his profession in Waterford, Penn., where he remained until 1850, when he removed to Erie City, where he has since remained, with the exception of four years' service during the war of the rebellion, as Surgeon of Volunteers, having charge a portion of the time of one of the large hospitals in the vicinity of Washington. His specialty is surgery; he is a bold and successful operator, and has made many operations requiring great skill and courage, amongst the most noticeable and difficult of which was the removal of four inches of the median nerve from a patient who had been suffering intense pain for six years from a gunshot wound. The operation was completely successful, pain ceasing immediately after, without return. For note of this case see "A Century of American Medicine," page 198; the operation is also noted by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, in his work on "Nerve Injuries," as one of the most successful operations in surgery. The Doctor performed the operation of removal of lower jaw three different times during the year of 1882-83. From January, 1883, to July, in the same year, he made seventeen capital operations. As an evidence of his skill and ability as an operator, is the fact that during the many years he has practiced his profession, he has never had a patient die upon the table, or within forty-eight hours after the operation, nor has a patient ever expired under an anæsthetic administered by him. He has been connected with the Erie County Medical Society since 1849, acting successively as Secretary and Treasurer, and repeatedly as President; was Vice President of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society in 1867-68, and President 1878-79, and for six years senior member of the Judicial Council of the Medical Society, State of Pennsylvania, member of the American Medical Association, member of the Executive Council of the International Medical Congress, which met in Philadelphia in 1876. He also held the position of Examining Surgeon for the Pension-Bureau from 1865 to 1876, and for seven years of that time was President of the Board of Examining Surgeons. He was Attending Physician to Erie County Almshouse from Oct., 1850, to Jan., 1859, and Physician to Erie County Jail the greater portion of the time from 1851 to 1876, and has been Surgeon-in-chief of St. Vincent's Hospital since its opening in 1875. He is also Medical Referee for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. In June, 1849, he married Anna D., daughter of Augustine Bartholomew, Esq., of Philadelphia. Their only son, Reid T. Stewart, graduated at the Military Academy at West Point, in the class of 1871 (standing eighth in a class of thirty-nine), was assigned as Second Lieutenant to Co. G, 5th U. S. Cav., and was murdered by the Apache Indians, near Tucson, Arizona Territory, Aug. 27, 1872.

JACOB STRAUS, of Straus Bro. & Beck, merchant tailors, Erie City, was born in Germany, Dec., 1837, son of A. Straus, who was a merchant, and reared a family of six children. Our subject, who was the eldest, received a common school education, and at an early age learned tailoring in his native land. Coming to America in 1854, he settled in Erie City, and after clerking for four years, went South, but after a year returned to Erie; clerked in a clothing store for two years, then embarked in business, in which he has since successfully continued. During this time he has had different partners, the name of the firm being changed several times. Mr. Straus was married, in 1865, to Miss L. Straus, a native of France, but of German descent. To this union were born six children: Albert (a clerk), Tillie, Gustave, Minnie, Eddie and Emil. Mr. and Mrs. Straus are members of the Jewish Synagogue; he is a Republican in politics.

ALEX. L. STRAUS, manager of the Erie Malting Co., corner of Eighteenth and Parade Streets, Erie, was born in Baltimore, Md., Feb. 3, 1858, son of Levi Straus, an extensive maltster in Baltimore, Md. Our subject graduated from college in 1876, and in 1878 came here and took charge of the Erie branch of the Baltimore house. Mr. Straus was married, in 1883, to Clara, daughter of Jacob Ostheimer, of the firm Ostheimer & Baker.

WILLIAM STRICKER, grocer, corner of Twenty-first and French streets, Erie, was born in Germany, Sept. 24, 1821, whose parents were natives of Germany, who came to America in 1841, and after living eight years in New York, came to Erie City in 1849. They had two children. Our subject, the younger, acquired his education in Germany, and learned the baker's trade; is one of Erie's old business men, having been here since 1841. He was married, in 1844, to Catherine C. Scherer, a native of Germany, by whom he has had five children: J. W., late Deputy Sheriff of Erie Co., died May 17, 1880; Minnie, wife of George Hull, farmer of this county; Charles P., member of fire department, this city; Henry H., in store with his father; and Joseph M., attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Stricker are members of the Lutheran Church. The former is a member of the Common Council of Erie; in politics he is a Republican.

WM. F. STRIEBEL, senior member of the firm of Striebel & Wallhouser, importers and dealers in bottled and keg beer, Erie, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, July 26, 1845. He learned the barber's trade in his native country, and followed this occupation there until 1873, when he came to America. He located in New York City for a year, then came to Erie City, and followed his trade for nine years. He subsequently engaged in the wholesale beer business, which he has since conducted successfully. Mr. Striebel was married in Switzerland, in 1873, to Lizette Betahman, a native of same, who has borne him one son—Daniel. Our subject is an active member in the A. O. U. W. society.

MARTIN STRONG, born in East Windsor, Conn., in the year 1770, having for that day received a good common school education, and full of energy, left his native place early in the spring of 1795 to seek and make a home for himself for life. His outfit was a compass and chain, being determined to be ready for a new country in any capacity, and on foot he first directed his course to the Wyoming Valley, on the North Branch of the Susquehanna, in this State, where his native State at that time claimed a large amount of territory; but not being satisfied with the prospects of surveying or procuring land there, he resolved to foot it to Presque Isle, and got to the Indian village at the mouth of Buffalo Creek (where the city of Buffalo now stands) in July, 1795. But one white man was then living there, and nothing inviting him to remain, he pushed on, and arrived at Presque Isle the last of July, 1795. On his arrival here, he found Thomas Rees, Esq., land agent, and Col. Seth Reed and family, living here in self-made habitations. Those two tents were the only habitations. A company of United States troops were cutting down the forest on Garrison Hill to build a stockade fort, under Capt. Russell Bissell. Gens. Elliott and Irvine, with a corps of surveyors and engineers, were here to lay out the town of Erie, escorted and protected by a company of State militia commanded by Capt. John Grubb.

The Rutledges having been shot but a few days before, by the Indians, as was alleged, it was deemed unsafe to be out much except when prepared for defense. Mr. Strong hired out at once to one of the residents at 50 cents a day, and was set at work to go into the woods to cut and hew planks (punchions they were then called) to make a floor for a house, which he continued at several days until finished, and then found he must pay for his board, which was 75 cents per day, leaving him in debt 25 cents per day! He refused to pay the difference, and his compass and chain were taken and secreted until he would pay his bill, which soon brought him to terms, and he redeemed them. He then changed to the Holland Land Co.'s surveys, south of the old State Line, since known as the "triangle line," where he soon got into employment as a surveyor. A misunderstanding existed between the population and the Holland Company as to their rights adjoining the said line. He was assured by Maj. Alden that to locate a tract in that district would be safe (which proved correct). He located there for life, made a rude habitation, and became a resident on the Summit, 840 feet above the level of Lake Erie, ten miles south of Presque Isle. There were not half a dozen families then living in what is now Erie County, and none near his location. He determined not to winter there alone. In the month of November, he left his rude home and started in a log canoe, made by himself at LeBeuf Creek (now Waterford), and went down with the current to French Creek, and down that to the Allegheny to Pittsburgh, and, nothing offering to suit him, he offered himself at auction to the highest bidder to work faithfully, and he assured them he knew how to work, and asked who would give him the highest wages and board him? A good, honest yeoman was declared the highest bidder, at $3 per month and board for three months, which he cheerfully accepted, and served so well that his employer kindly offered him 50 cents a month more to remain six months longer. But he declined the advance in wages, and returned by the way he had gone to his rude hut, where, in the spring of 1796, he commenced his pioneer life again, and in surveying and clearing land was unceasing in his efforts to procure a home for himself. In 1810, he purchased the tract north of him adjoining, and removed on to that, where he spent the remainder of his life.

Mr. Huidekoper, the agent of the Holland Land Company, always employed Capt. Strong to survey, subdivide and set off, or designate old lines among their lands in this county as long as he was able to attend to it, and ever to his death had entire confidence in his ability and judgment and knowledge of the original lines and surveys. The early opening of the salt trade, and vast amount of hauling and travel incident thereto, made his location a sort of depot on the Summit, which made a public house of entertainment desirable and necessary. The locating and making the Erie & Waterford Turnpike past his door greatly added to the business, and during the war of 1812 his location had a successful amount of business there. His never-tiring industry and unceasing energy extended his domains, and cleared land far ahead of all others. His intelligence and social qualities made him friends with all who had intercourse with him. Such industry and management are always rewarded, and as early as 1830 he had some 800 acres of land paid for, with a very large improvement, good buildings, and more money at interest than any other farmer in Erie Co.

When the First Presbyterian Church of Erie was built, Capt. Strong was the only man in Erie Co. that could lend the necessary money, $800.

Capt. Strong was married to a Miss Trask in 1805, who died a few years after, leaving one daughter, who lived until May, 1823. He again married, and at his death left three sons and two daughters, all married and settled in life—Mrs. B. B. Vincent, Mrs. T. B. Vincent, Martin Strong, F. D. Strong and Landaff Strong. He was always a great reader, and always ready to impart from his well-stored mind in conversation. He had a regular system of industry, economy and leisure in their proper places, and though his body long suffered and became impaired, the mind continued clear, bright and undisturbed to the end. After a residence of sixty-three years on the same farm where he located when there were not ten families living in this county, he died March 24, 1858, in his eighty-eighth year. He had lived to see the population increase to over 50,000 inhabitants, and all prosperous, and died respected and esteemed by a very large and extensive circle of friends and acquaintances.

Capt. Strong, in conversation in a circle of friends ten years before his death remarked: "That any person would think him a fool to make the selection he did, when the whole county was open to him." He said, "That was a mistake; he was not a fool, but he mis-judged in his selection, like many others, and spent the prime of his life in making him a home, and he thought it folly at that time of life to pull up and begin anew somewhere else."

J. C. STURGEON, attorney at law, Erie, was born in Fairview Township, in 1841. After receiving a good common school education he entered Allegheny College at nineteen years of age, and took a literary course. In 1863 he left college and enlisted in the U. S. Navy, where he remained in active duty until the end of the war when he was honorably discharged, and subsequently in 1876, Allegheny College conferred upon him the degree of A. M. honoris causa. After the war he attended Harvard Law School, where he graduated in 1868. Having been admitted to the bar he located here (in 1868) and practiced his profession. He was soon after elected to the office of District Attorney of Erie Co., and was actively engaged in his profession until 1877, when, becoming interested in the oil business, he removed to Bradford, McKean Co., Penn., remaining there until 1881, when he returned to Erie. He has always engaged in public life, and in 1880 was a candidate before the Republican Convention of McKean Co., Penn., for the State Senate. He is a Knight Templar, and has always been an active member of the Republican party.

ABRAHAM SULLIVAN, dairyman and general farmer, P. O. box 358, Erie, was born Feb. 3, 1831, in New York State; son of Noah and Harriet (Charlock) Sullivan, natives of New York. Noah located in Erie Co. about 1842, on the farm where our subject now lives. He was a clergyman in the Methodist Church, and until thirty-five years of age was active in the ministry, but after locating in this county applied himself to farming, quitting active preaching on account of failing health. He first located and resided several years on the farm upon which Abraham Sullivan now lives. He afterward removed to Harbor Creek Township. Throughout life he was an industrious, honest and popular man; he was earnest and conscientious, and until his death remained true to his Christian faith; always taking an active interest in religious affairs, occasionally filling the pulpit until the time of his death, which occurred in April, 1880. Mr. Sullivan had a large circle of acquaintances and with all people was a welcome visitor. He had seven children: John J., deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Catherine, widow of Isaiah Carter, of Harbor Creek; Mary, wife of Archibald Stewart, in Iowa; Samuel B., deceased; James, residing at Scranton, Penn.; Abraham, our subject, and William Henry, deceased. Abraham Sullivan remained with his father until he was married, March 1, 1853, to Miss Jane, daughter of John Dodsworth, Esq., a native of England. Mr. Sullivan has continually resided upon the present premises for about thirty-six years, devoting himself to general and dairy farming. He is, like his father, a man of popular manners, and capable of forming warm attachments among his fellow men. To himself and wife have been born the following children: Samuel C., born March 4, 1854, at home; Elizabeth, born Dec. 28, 1855, married to John Hay, residing in Erie; Jennie L., born June 28, 1859, at home; Harriet B., born Nov. 5, 1861, at home; Frederick W., born Sept. 13, 1865, at home; Ettie B., deceased, born Feb. 14, 1867; Jessie M., born March 9, 1873, at home.

JOHN P. SULLIVAN, county detective, Erie, was born in Erie City, Sept. 7, 1845, son of John and Bridget (Mahoney) Sullivan, natives of Cork, Ireland, and parents of six children of whom John P. is the fifth. John Sullivan Sr. came from Canada to Erie in 1837, where he died in 1856. He was at one time in the United States Navy. Our subject was educated in Erie City. In early life he served on the lakes and was subsequently a contractor for submarine blasting. From 1878 to 1883 he was a member of the police force of the city of Erie, and in the latter year was appointed county detective. He was married in 1879, to Margaret Shanahan, a native of County Galway, Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan are members of the Catholic Church.

JOHN SULTER, Car Inspector and Wreck Master of the L. S. & M. S. Ry., Erie, was born near Strasburg, France (now Germany) Aug. 19, 1835. He was reared in Bavaria where he learned the carpenter's trade. In 1853 he came to America with his parents, John and Eva Sulter, who settled here and are buried in Erie. Our subject continued in his work here, soon engaging as a bridge builder in connection with railroading. This he followed successfully for nine years when he was appointed to his present position. He was united in marriage, in Erie, in May, 1859, with Marie Anna, daughter of Boniface and Mary Brandt, who came from Alsace, Germany, and settled here about forty-five years ago. To this union have been born two sons and six daughters: Mary, John, Jr., Anna, Emma, Minnie, Frank, Kittie and Harry. He and his family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. He is an active member of the German Benevolent Association and of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Sulter served for seven years in Common Council, two years as President, for one year as License Commissioner, and has filled minor offices.

MATTHEW H. TAYLOR, Secretary and Treasurer Youghiogheny River Coal Company, was born in Huntington, Penn., May 2, 1847, son of George Taylor, late presiding Judge of the Twenty-fourth Judicial District of Pennsylvania. Our subject acquired his school training in Huntingdon Academy, Penn., and followed railroad life in various capacities from 1864 till 1882. On the organization of the coal company our subject received the appointment of Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Taylor was married in Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1872, to Clara A., daughter of John H. Burton. To this union were born George B., attending Erie Academy, and Clara M. Mrs. Taylor is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. In politics Mr. Taylor is a Republican.

JOHN TEEL second, son of John Teel first, who died in Erie early in the century at the age of ninety-seven; was born near Hartford, Conn., March 3, 1779; came to Erie in 1796; carried on the business of carpenter and joiner all of his life; located about 1798, at the corner of Ninth and Peach streets, where he built a house, which, with additions, continued his home ever after; married Esther, daughter of Geo. Moore, in 1807; served a short time in the war of 1812; accumulated considerable property; raised a large family; died April 21, 1872, aged ninety-three, leaving an enviable reputation for honesty, industry and skill as a builder.

ALVIN THAYER, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born in Erie City, Oct. 1, 1823; son of Albert and Almira (Glazier) Thayer, natives of Vermont and of Scotch descent; the former a physician of great repute. Our subject was married, June 5, 1852, to Rebecca, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Cochran. Their children are: Frank, studying medicine with his father; Hattie and Jessie (deceased wife of William Rix). Our subject can trace his family genealogy back to 1540. In Scotland one of his ancestors was physician to Mary, Queen of Scots; several were generals in the American army, and many of the family connections are professional men holding eminent positions. Dr. Thayer, our subject, attended lectures in New Orleans, and in 1840 commenced the practice of his profession in Erie City, which he has continued with marked success. He has occupied the position of physician on the Lake Shore Railroad ten years; was Acting Surgeon of the 145th Reg. P. V. I., and volunteered as an "Independent" at the battle of Antietam. He is a member of the State Medical Society, and served in capacity of President of Erie County Medical Society; is a member of the United States Medical Association. He is a Master Mason; in politics, a Democrat.

V. M. THOMPSON, commission and grain merchant, Erie, was born in Madison Co., N. Y., Aug. 7, 1829; son of Joseph S. and Rachel (Case) Thompson; the former a native of Vermont, of Irish descent; the latter of Massachusetts, of Scotch lineage. Our subject's grandfather, with two brothers, sailed from Ireland for America in 1790, but were all lost at sea. Joseph S. Thompson was a farmer, and came to Erie City in 1832; died in 1837. There our subject received his education, and at the age of fourteen commenced to earn his living, besides help to support his mother, which he continued to do till her death. His first start in life was peddling Yankee notions; then he manufactured wash-boards till he was nineteen years old, when he sold out and bought a canal-boat which he sailed for three years, by which time he had accumulated $1,000 in cash. He then attended school for one year; and following that opened a coal yard in both Erie City and Meadville. In the first year he cleared $2,000. Our subject next ran the Thompson line of canal boats till 1855, in which year he formed a partnership in the coal trade with P. Arbuckle. At this time he was owner of sixteen boats, worth $14,000. In 1858 fortune did not smile so favorably on him; but in 1861, nothing daunted, Mr. Thompson again launched into business, and in the following year turned his attention to the oil transportation trade, in which he made, first year $7,000; bought then an interest in the Woodford Well, which returned him $500,000. Our subject married in Erie Co., Penn., Rebecca, daughter of John and Esther (Gillespie) Glenn, and of Irish descent. By this union are three children: C. L., Victor P. and Clara R. Mrs. Thompson is a member of Park Presbyterian Church.

J. ROSS THOMPSON, attorney at law, Erie, was born in Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., Dec. 6, 1832, son of Chief Justice James Thompson, born in Butler Co., Penn., in 1805, who in early life was a printer, and in 1832 was elected to the State Legislature, serving six years. In 1834 he was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives. He was also nominated for Congress from Erie Co., serving three terms. In 1854 he was again elected, and for several terms represented his district in the Pennsylvania Legislature. In 1857 he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court, in which capacity he served fifteen years, and for five years was Chief Justice, previous to which he was Circuit Judge for a number of years. After his election Chief Justice Thompson removed to Philadelphia, Penn. In politics he was a Democrat. He had a family of six children, five now living—J. Ross (our subject); Sarah, wife of Samuel Robb, a prominent attorney in Philadelphia; Clara, also residing in Philadelphia with her mother, who is eighty-three years of age; Samuel Gustine, a prominent attorney in Philadelphia; and William E., a stock operator. Our subject was educated in Erie Academy and Princeton College, from which he graduated in 1854. He immediately commenced the study of law; was admitted to the bar in 1858, and has continued the practice of law in Erie Co. ever since. In 1859 our subject was admitted to the Supreme Court, and in 1860 to the United States Court. In 1860 he was engaged as attorney to the Penn. R. R. Co., and since 1870 has held a similar position with the Penn. Co. During Gov. Packer's administration he served as his aide-de-camp, which gave him the military rank of Lieut. Col.; he was subsequently Colonel of the 16th Reg. Militia. Col. Thompson was a delegate to the National Convention in 1876; also a member of the Democratic Electoral College in 1880. He has been a resident of Erie City since 1843. Our subject was married in 1858 to Josephine Mayer, a daughter of M. Mayer; she died in 1877, leaving a family of seven children.

J. P. THOMPSON, proprietor of Sailors' Home, Erie, was born in the northern part of Sweden, 68 degrees north latitude, on the Bay of Bothnia, May 10, 1834. At nine he adopted his father's calling, that of a sailor, and after two years came to America, engaging with the American Merchant Marine. At nineteen he was Captain of an American mail packet sailing the Southern waters. Two years later he came North and entered the American Merchant Marine here, where he remained till the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted as Gunner's Mate, in the U. S. Navy, steamer "Penguin," June 19, 1861, and at the end of a year's active service was honorably discharged. He then enlisted as a private, and was afterward promoted to Sergeant in Co. E, 155th N. Y. V. I., but in seventeen months was transferred to the U. S. steamer "Princeton" and soon promoted to the position of master's mate, and ordered to the U. S. steamer "Laburnum" to do service off Charleston, S. C., under Admiral Dahlgren. Here he was appointed Ensign and ordered to steamer "Catalpa" doing picket duty. When Charleston was evacuated, he secured the original manuscript containing the Constitution of the Confederacy, and delivered it to Capt. Noyes who delivered it to Admiral Dahlgren. Mr. Thompson subsequently did duty on the man of war "Calypso" and on Admiral Dahlgren's flag ship "Philadelphia." On Sept. 30, 1865, he went to Washington and there received an honorable discharge, as Ensign. He then engaged in merchant service on salt water till 1866, when he went on the lakes for several years. He retired from this in 1871, and has since engaged in his present business. Our subject was married April, 1852, in New York, to Anna Yetterberg, of his native country, who departed this life May 15, 1865, leaving a daughter, Anna, wife of Steven A. Thompson, of the U. S. steamer, "Richmond;" they have a son and daughter, George Peter and Alice Mary. Mr. Thompson was married again, Feb. 4, 1866, to Elizabeth Warrener of Derbyshire, England. They have a bright, intelligent family, consisting of three children: John Harvey, Mary Elizabeth (Lillie), George Thomas. The family are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Thompson belongs to the I. O. O. F. (being a member of the Encampment), A. O. U. W., Select Knights, G. A. R. and of many benevolent associations.

CHARLES M. TIBBALS (deceased), late merchant and manufacturer, was born in New York, May 6, 1811, son of Daniel and Mary (Marvin) Tibbals, natives of Connecticut and of English descent. He came to Erie City, from New York, in 1836, and embarked in business here. He was united in marriage with Delia, daughter of Dr. Otto Lyman of New York, and of English descent. He died in 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Tibbals were parents of four children: Charles M., Jr.; Eliza, wife of William H. Whitehead, member of Erie Rubber Co.; Catherine (deceased), and Martha A. Charles M., Jr., was born Aug. 28, 1840; acquired his education in Erie Academy and became engaged, in 1860, with his father in the industry now known as the Chicago & Erie Stove Co. On the death of his father, Charles continued the manufacture of stoves for a time. He also clerked in Erie City several years; is now Government Inspector under Maj. Adams. He was married in Worcester, Mass., to Fannie, daughter of Frederick Hancock, and of English descent. Mr. Tibbals and his wife are members of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. In politics he is Independent.

BESTER TOWN, deceased, one of the old pioneer stock of Erie Co., was born in Granville, Washington Co., N. Y., Aug. 20, 1794. He was married, Sept. 22, 1816, to Betsey M. Martin, a native of the State of Vt., of English and French extraction. They reared a family of 8 children. In 1824, they moved to Erie Co., Penn., and bought 100 acres of land where the village of North East now stands. Mr. Town successfully engaged in many enterprises, and was for years associated with his sons in mercantile business. In 1846, he invested in Western lands, from which he realized large profits. In 1864, he united with Hon. Orange Noble and others in establishing the Keystone National Bank of Erie, of which he was one of the Directors, from date of the first election up to the time of his death, Dec. 2, 1870, his business experience adding largely to the success of the institution. Mr. Town was in early life taught the first principles of real success in life, to wit, virtue and honesty; he was prompt, energetic and persevering in all his business engagements, decided, fearless and outspoken in his political views. He was opposed to slavery, and was a member of the first Anti-slavery Society, and was a warm and active supporter of the Government during the whole period of the rebellion.

JOSEPH I. TOWN, cashier of the Keystone National Bank of Erie, seventh son of Bester Town, was born in Erie Co., Penn., April 15, 1831. After acquiring an education, he in early life entered the mercantile business, engaging in it until 1854, when he took his initiative step in banking at Elgin, Ill. Then went to Iowa and engaged in the milling business. When the Keystone National Bank was organized he returned to Erie and has been connected with said bank nearly ever since. In 1854 our subject was married to Ruth M. Andrews, who died in 1862 leaving one son, John S., a merchant and one of Erie City's enterprising business men. He was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 26, 1858, received his education in Erie Co., graduated from a business college in 1874, for four years was engaged in the Keystone National Bank, and since 1881 has carried on a successful grocery business on State Street, Erie, Penn.; he was married, in 1879, to Alice S., daughter of James Hampson of North East and of English extraction; they have one child: Ruth M. In politics Mr. Town is a Republican.

JOHN A. TRACY was born at Scipio, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Feb. 16, 1798. His father, Capt. John Tracy, was a descendant of Lieut. Thomas Tracy, who came to Salem, Mass. from Tewkesbury, England, in the year 1636. Capt. John Tracy, with his family, removed to Little Conneautee, now Washington Township, Erie Co., in 1799, and thence in 1801 to Waterford. Here John A. Tracy attended school for a few years, under the Rev. Russell Stancliff. He commenced as a boy in the active business of teaming for his father between the head of navigation on French Creek and Erie. This business was active in 1812, 1813 and 1814, during the war, as army and navy stores for Gen. Harrison's army and Commodore Perry's fleet were carried on this route from Pittsburgh to Erie, and he thus took his first lesson in inland transportation, with ox teams, over stump roads cut through the woods. Mr. Tracy came to Erie when eighteen years of age, as clerk in a store, on the southeast corner of French and Sixth Sts. He afterward became a partner of P. S. V. Hamot for several years, and afterward with Jonas Harrison, in a general mercantile business. He was one of the Directors of the U. S. Branch Bank, of Erie, and also of the old Erie Bank. He took an active interest in the Erie Extension Canal, from the Ohio River to Erie, and was a contractor in building the Walnut Creek Aqueduct, and was subsequently a director for many years. Mr. Tracy was one of the contractors on the New York & Erie Railroad, in the early efforts to build it, and again about the year 1848, when the efforts to resume and finish it from New York to Dunkirk were successful. He was among the first and active workers to start the Erie & Northeast Railroad, the first railroad built to the City of Erie, and was one of the contractors in its construction in 1850 and 1851. When completed he continued to be a Director until 1853, when he was elected President of the company, and so continued until the company was consolidated with the Buffalo and State Line Company, under the name of the Buffalo & Erie Co., and when this company was consolidated with the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Company, and making one corporation from Buffalo to Chicago, he became a Director, and continued in that office until his death. He was also a Director of the Erie & Pittsburgh R. Co. After the conclusion of his more active duties of railway construction, he gave much attention to farming; his large farms in West Mill Creek and Fairview were models in their thorough cultivation. He married Susan Jane Dobbins, daughter of Capt. Daniel Dobbins, in 1826. She died in 1867. Mr. Tracy died at his residence in Erie, Feb. 26, 1875, leaving seven children, viz.: John F. Tracy, Mrs. Mary M. Scott, wife of Hon. W. L. Scott; Mrs. Anna M. McCullum, wife of Mr. J. V. McCullum; Chas. Tracy, Mrs. Eliza T. Griswold, wife of Wm. A. Griswold; Daniel D. Tracy and Wm. A. Tracy. Mr. Tracy controlled men by the gentle force of his nature and the strong forces of the right and the true. Though mild in his manners, he was inflexible when it was proposed to drive him from the right. Plain and unpretending, he disliked shams and false pretences. Social, friendly and extensively acquainted, he continued a favorite until the day of his death. His remains and those of his wife rest side by side in the cemetery at Erie.

JOHN F. TRACY (deceased) was born in the City of Erie, Jan. 7, 1827. He was a son of John A. Tracy, whose history appears above. He received his education at the Erie Academy. His father built the aqueduct of the Erie & Pittsburg Canal at Walnut Creek, and in this work John F. Tracy first developed his capacity for the superintendence of large enterprises of this kind. Subsequently he was engaged in the construction of the New York & Erie Railroad, of which his father was a contractor. After the completion of that road, he was still more actively engaged in the construction of that portion of the Buffalo & State Line Railroad west of Dunkirk, and of the Erie & North East Railroad to Erie, and though not yet twenty-five years of age, almost the entire practical management of these enterprises was confided to his care. Very shortly after the completion of the latter road, he was appointed its Superintendent, where he did his full share in originating the plans for the practical operating of railroads. When, in 1853, it was decided to change the gauge of this road and make it a part of a through line—a determination which was violently opposed by a large portion of the citizens of Erie, and which brought on the trouble known as the Erie Railroad War—Mr. Tracy held his post with firmness and courageous devotion to the interests of his road, and never for a moment yielded to the pressure of the mistaken popular sentiment which sought to maintain a break in the continuous line of what was destined to become a great continental highway. Mr. Tracy completed this change of gauge determined on by his company in 1854, and then accepted the office of Assistant Superintendent of the Chicago & Rock Island road, which road was then in progress of construction. He was soon promoted to the office of General Superintendent, subsequently was made Vice President and finally President of the road, which office he held for many years, and until compelled by reason of ill health to resign in the year 1877. Under Mr. Tracy's management the Chicago & Rock Island road was extended through Iowa to the Missouri River and across Iowa and Missouri to Leavenworth, Kan. He built for his road the first railroad bridge across the Mississippi River, which brought on a protracted and bitter controversy as to the right to build railway bridges over navigable rivers—the river interests opposing violently, even to the destruction of spans of the bridge by fire—but in this great effort to establish an uninterrupted highway, a counterpart of the "Erie Railroad War," he persisted until success was attained. At first opposed by Federal Court decisions, in the end the United States Government became joint owners with his road in a first-class, iron bridge. In 1870, while maintaining his position as President of his favorite corporation, the Rock Island, he secured the control of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, its active competitor, and became its President, which office he held till 1875, when he resigned by reason of failing health. Mr. Tracy was the first capitalist that fully recognized the importance of the New York rapid transit movement, and liberally aided it, and in conjunction with his brother-in-law, Hon. W. L. Scott, fought the battle of rapid transit through years of legislative, legal and popular antagonism, until every point in dispute was settled, and the problem solved. Mr. Tracy was the equal, if not the superior of any man in the country in his expert and invariably successful management of railroad combinations. He was reticent, determined, and above all self-reliant. One of his marked traits was the great tenacity with which he adhered to any opinion he had formed after mature consideration, and the resolute manner in which he championed and executed his favorite projects in defiance of all difficulties and opposition. In his private life he was one of the least ostentatious and most kind-hearted of men. His large wealth was bestowed generously in the direction of public and private charity. Mr. Tracy's health began to fail at the age of fifty years by reason of his very active life, but he had done his work well and lived long enough to make himself one of the fathers of the "American Railway System." Mr.

Tracy remained unmarried and died at the residence of his brother-in-law, Hon. W. L. Scott, in Erie, Feb. 13, 1878. His remains rest by the side of his father and mother in the Erie Cemetery.

PROF. D. C. TUBBS, of Tubbs' Business College, Erie, was born in Wesleyville, Erie Co., Penn., Aug. 23, 1849. After receiving a good education in the public schools of his birth-place, he entered the Erie High School when eighteen years of age, where he remained for fifteen months, when he attended the Erie Commercial College, graduating from it when twenty-one. He then went for fifteen months to the Lake Shore Seminary, and subsequently practiced his profession throughout the State. He then came here and accepted a position as Commercial Instructor in Erie Academy, which he filled reputably for five years. Retiring from this, he taught penmanship and book-keeping in the city until 1880, when he established the present college, and has successfully carried it on ever since. He has been an interested worker in support of educational measures in the city. He is an active member of the Y. M. C. A.

THOMAS B. TURRILL, grocer, Erie, was born at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1837. He graduated from Nunda Academy, that State, and began to read law with the view of making it his profession, but was compelled to abandon it on account of ill health; came here in 1859 and engaged in merchandising, but in 1861 returned to Nunda, N. Y. Enlisted in Co. F, 33d N. Y. V. I., and did active and honorable service for two years. He participated in thirteen pitched battles and in many skirmishes. In June, 1863, he was honorably discharged. Mr. Turrill returned to Erie in 1865, and has since been engaged in the mercantile trade. (He spent one year during this time in merchandising at Jefferson, Iowa.) Our subject was united in marriage, Jan. 26, 1869, with Georgietta A. Zimmerly, of Erie. Is a graduate of Painesville Academy, Ohio. Mr. Turrill is an active member in the following societies: A. F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., K. of P., A. O. U. W. and G. A. R., Post, 67.

DR. GEORGE ULRICH, physician and druggist, Erie, was born in Berlin, Europe, April 19, 1830, son of Dr. Henry Ulrich. He was educated in his native country, and graduated from one of the leading Germania colleges in Europe in 1860, and the same year came to America, settling in Milwaukee, Wis., where he practiced medicine for twelve years. He then came to Erie City, and has since pursued his profession. Our subject has made a specialty of chronic diseases, and, in December, 1883, he obtained a patent for his well-known "Mirabilia" or blood purifier. The Doctor has met with much success and encouragement in his profession.

STRONG VINCENT was born in Waterford, Erie Co., June 17, 1837. He was the oldest son of Bethuel B. Vincent, and a grandson of Judge John Vincent, of this county, both of whom are elsewhere referred to in this work. His mother was Sarah Ann (Strong) Vincent, a daughter of Capt. Martin Strong, of Summit Township, one of the earliest pioneers, and in his day one of the foremost citizens of the county. In 1843, his parents removed to the city of Erie. His school days were passed chiefly at the old Erie Academy. Here he formed many boyish friendships, which, notwithstanding his long absences afterward from his native town, were warmly cherished by him as long as he lived. When he was about fourteen years old, he thought that he had had schooling enough. But his father would have no one idle about him, so the boy was put to work in his father's iron foundry. For six months he worked as a day laborer. He was then taken into the office of the concern, and given partial oversight of the books and of the hands in the foundry. After being thus occupied for a year and more, he thought that he would become a more successful iron-founder if he had a scientific education. With this idea, he left home and entered the scientific school at Hartford, Conn. He soon began to desire a full collegiate education, and shortly entered Trinity College. But he was not yet content. The reputation of Harvard College had a great charm for him, and he finally persuaded his father to allow him to enter it, which he did as a sophomore in the class of 1859. A college friend, afterward an intimate army friend (Maj. W. W. Swan) thus speaks in the "Harvard Memorial Biographies" of his college career: "Vincent was a man of mark in his class, and in the college. His personal appearance was in his favor. There was not a student from sophomore to senior who did not on first seeing him seek to learn who he was. Physically he seemed fully developed. Of rather above medium height, he had a well-formed, powerful frame, and his face was remarkably striking and handsome. He looked many years older than he really was, and in every respect his mind corresponded with his body. One would have said on hearing him converse that he was twenty-five years old. He was not a hard student. And yet when the class of 1859 graduated, if the professors had been asked to name those whom the college would afterward delight to count among her children, Vincent would have been high on the list."

While in Harvard, he determined to follow a professional life, and much of his reading at this time was with this view. Graduating in 1859, he immediately returned to Erie, and began the study of law in the office of William S. Lane, Esq. In fifteen months he had been creditably admitted to the bar, and become Mr. Lane's partner; was taking an active interest in the public affairs of the city and county, and stood high in the estimation of his fellow-citizens. He took special interest in the political campaign of 1860, in favor of Mr. Lincoln.

He had been for some time a member of the local militia company, "The Wayne Guards." In 1861, on the day after the President's first call for volunteers, he enlisted as a private with his company in the "Erie Regiment" of three-months men. As his Harvard biographer says: "His motive was pure patriotism. The dreams that every boy has of a soldier's life, of course, came back to him; but at his age, he could count the cost of military honors. Other honors such as had for him a still higher value, he was sure to obtain in paths of peace. * * * At the bar and in the Senate, he would have sought his laurels. * * * Manhood and patriotism made him a soldier."

He was at once married to a lady to whom he had been some time engaged—Miss Elizabeth H. Carter, of Newark, N. J.

Vincent had been elected the 2d Lieut. of his Company (A) before the regiment left Erie. He was soon afterward appointed the Adjutant of his regiment. On arrival at Pittsburgh, where several regiments of these three-months men were stationed, Col. McLane of the Erie regiment became Post Commander, and Vincent Post Adjutant. It was in his efficient discharge of the duties of this position that his soldierly qualities first began to attract attention.

On return to Erie, and in mustering out of the three-months men, he at once re-enlisted in the 83d Reg. P. V. for three years; was again appointed Acting Adjutant during the formation of the new regiment, and was elected its Maj. before leaving Erie. On its arrival at Hall's Hill Camp near Washington, he was elected and commissioned its Lieut. Colonel.

Just after leaving home, he wrote to his wife: "Surely the right will prevail. If I live, we will rejoice over our country's success. If I fall, remember that you have given your husband a sacrifice to the most righteous cause that ever widowed a woman."

On reaching Washington, the 83d Reg. was assigned to Butterfield's brig., of Maj. Gen. Fitz-John Porter's division, and during that fall and winter (1861-62) Vincent rendered frequent service as a Brig. Inspector. Before Yorktown he was necessarily in the saddle, in charge of working parties in the trenches. He made the siege a constant study, and knew the position and importance of every work and gun along our lines. His first battle was that of Hanover Court House. Shortly after this he was prostrated by the poisonous air of the Chickahominy Swamps, so that his life was despaired of. While in this condition, the terrible battle of Gaines' Mill took place, in which over one-half of his regiment were either killed or wounded. The Colonel and Major were both killed. The news was kept from him as long as possible. But the preparations for the retreat of our army revealed the truth. Sick as he was, he realized the desperate loss to the regiment in the death of its gallant commander, McLane. He forced his attendants to let him go, and mounting his horse led his regiment until he fell helpless from the saddle. Carried for a long distance on the back of his faithful servant, John Hickey, he knew nothing more until he found himself on board a sick-transport on the James River. He was met by his wife and father in N. Y., and taken home, where he remained until Oct. 1, when he returned to his regiment. During his absence he had been chosen and commissioned its Colonel.

In Dec., this brigade took part in the battle of Fredericksburg. Here he gained the enthusiastic and lasting confidence of his men and fellow-officers. Lying on their faces a whole day under the fire of the enemy so near that it was death to rise from the ground, he cheered them by his own example of personal bravery; and the command of the brigade falling temporarily to him, he proved his generalship when ordered to fall back, by rescuing his troops from their perilous position under the momentary cover of a passing cloud on a full moonlit night.

Socially, he was an unusually attractive man, and his quarters at Aequia Creek during the following winter were always a popular resort. Maj. Swan's article says of him: "As a general thing, his companions were older than himself; for though Vincent was but twenty-five years old, his decisive countenance and confident address made him seem the compeer of men of forty. Among his associates were officers of the highest rank. He could adapt himself to all; could talk with the politicians on questions of history, with a general officer on military evolutions, or with a sporting man on the merits of horses, and all respected his opinion." An extract from one of his letters about this time will show his decided opinions. "It reminds us," says his Harvard biographer "of Gen. Grant's instructions to Gen. Sheridan far later in the war: 'We must fight them more vindictively. We must desolate the country as we pass through it, and not leave the trace of a doubtful friend or foe behind us; make them believe that we are in earnest, terribly in earnest; that to break this land in twain is monstrous and impossible; that the life of every man, woman and child in the entire South is of no value whatever, compared with the integrity of the Union.'"

For several weeks Vincent was President of a Court Martial, and later was offered the position of Judge Advocate General of the Army of the Potomac. This he declined. "I enlisted to fight," he said laughingly, when urged to take the staff position.

In April, 1863, he was regularly appointed as ranking Colonel, to the command of the brigade. Shortly after this, he rendered signal service with it, in support of Gen. Pleasanton's cavalry at the battle of Aldie. He there received the special thanks and commendations of the Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Meade.

From Aldie his brigade marched to Gettysburg. Crossing the Pennsylvania line his excitement became intense. "As we rode slowly through the town (Hanover) Vincent had the torn colors of the old 83d unrolled, and brought to the front of the brigade. As they rustled in the moonlight before him, he reverently bared his head, and said to one of his staff in tones that will never be forgotten: 'What death more glorious can any man desire, than to die on the soil of old Pennsylvania, fighting for that flag!'" The battle of Gettysburg began on the 1st of July. The 5th Corps (Gen. Sykes), to which Vincent's command was attached, arrived with the main body of our army on the second. He realized and yet spoke hopefully of the terrible struggle now fairly begun. As his command lay quietly awaiting orders, he said: "To-day will either bring me my stars, or finish my career as a soldier." (Who would have thought it would do both?) On the afternoon of the second, orders arrived for a brigade of their division to move to the support of Gen. Sickles' Third Corps. Vincent (so says an eye-witness) in the absence of his superior officer, took the responsibility of taking his own brigade to the front, and posting them so as to hold "Little Round Top" Mountain. This was the real key, as it afterward appeared, to the position of our army in that day's fight, and the rebels strove desperately all that afternoon to take it, in order to turn our flank, and so drive us certainly from our position. This hill, since known as Vincent's Spur (and now marked by a marble slab erected by "Strong Vincent Post" G. A. R., of Erie), was held by this brigade, though at fearful loss. The disposition of these troops upon it was afterward cited in the class room at West Point as one of the most signal instances in the war of first-class military strategy by a volunteer officer. But it cost Vincent his life. While standing on a conspicuous rock, encouraging his troops, he was shot by a sharp-shooter, and died five days afterward. The appointment of Brigadier General was sent him the day after he was wounded, but it reached him too late. The gallant young soldier had sunk into his last sleep. He was buried at Erie with military honors. A little girl was born to him three months after his death. She lived only a year and then was buried in the same grave with "The hero of Little Round Top."

BETHUEL BOYD VINCENT. The earliest ancestor of the Vincent family in this country, was a French Huguenot of the name, who fled from religious persecution in France in the latter part of the 17th century, and settled near Newark, N. J. In 1772, part of his descendants removed and settled near what is now Milton, Penn., on the West Branch of the Susquehanna. During the Revolutionary war they suffered greatly from attacks by the Indians and British, some being killed and others carried as prisoners of war to Quebec. Other families afterward settling in Erie Co. (the Himrods, Mileses, Boyds, Lytles, etc.) had a like experience at the same time and place. Three relatives of the name—John, William and Daniel—removed to Waterford, in this county, at different times, about the year 1800. Among the children of William are the Hon. John P. Vincent, lawyer and ex-County Judge, of Erie, and Miss Sarah Vincent, present Postmistress at Waterford; and of Daniel, T. B. Vincent and Elizabeth (Mrs. Dr. William Faulkner), of Erie.

JOHN VINCENT came to Erie Co. in 1797, and settled at Fort Le Bœuf (now Waterford) when the region was still a howling wilderness. He was a man of strong natural intellect, sound common sense, and inflexible integrity. These qualities, though he had but a limited education, procured his appointment as Justice of the Peace in 1803, and in 1805 as Associate Judge of Erie Co. This latter position he filled with entire satisfaction to the public for forty years. He married twice (first Nancy Boyd and afterward Nancy Anderson), and his children were Bethuel Boyd, John A. (now of Cleveland, Ohio), Phebe W. (Mrs. John Wood), Henry R., Cornelius H. and James P. He died in Feb., 1860, at the old homestead in Waterford.

Bethuel Boyd Vincent was the oldest son of the Judge, and was born in Waterford Aug. 4, 1803. During his youth he helped his father on the farm and in the salt trade, picking up such education as he could between times at a country schoolhouse. Later, he studied surveying at the Waterford Academy. In June, 1826, he was employed as assistant to Col. James Kearney, U. S. A., in making surveys for a Government canal from the Ohio to the lakes at Erie. He was afterward some seven years in the State service at Meadville, as civil engineer. In 1834, he returned, and lived as a merchant at Waterford until 1843. He then removed to Erie, where he had previously formed a partnership (Vincent, Himrod & Co.) with William and David Himrod and William H. Johnston, in the business of an iron foundry and machine shop. In 1860, he retired from this firm and formed, with others, the banking house of Vincent, Bailey & Co.; and when this was converted, in 1865, into the Marine National Bank of Erie, he became its first President. In 1866, he joined in building "The National" Grain Elevator, of Chicago (burned in the great fire of 1871—rebuilt, 1873), and was a partner in this concern at the time of his death July 21, 1876.

Mr. Vincent was, like his father and other of his ancestors, a man of marked individuality of character. He had a clear, vigorous, well informed mind; an indomitable, almost imperious will; thorough independence, and unwearied energy of spirit; yet, withal, a tenderly affectionate, and hearty social disposition, amounting at times to joviality. As a business man, he was active and successful; as a citizen, public-spirited and benevolent; as a Christian, conscientious, exemplary, most devoted, yet without a particle of cant. There was a wholesome, whole-souled, courageous manliness about him in this last respect, as there was in all else he was and did. Such qualities naturally made him a man of mark and influence among his fellow-citizens.

All these traits were most apparent, perhaps, in his activity in the church of his choice. From his earliest residence in Erie, he was connected with St. Paul's (Prot. Epis.) Church as a vestryman and warden, and was for thirty years the Superintendent of its Sunday school. He had a great fondness for children, and a great faculty for winning their confidence and affection. He was always ready to be useful anywhere in the Lord's work, from reading public service to pumping an organ. His means, like his strength, were generously given to the same cause. Much of both went into the building of the present beautiful St. Paul's Church, and of its four chapels. He was almost always, too, a representative of this parish, both in the diocesan and general councils of the Church. A beautiful memorial tablet in St. Paul's testifies to the active blessedness of Mr. Vincent's Christian life, and to the gratitude of those whom he helped to teach and lead in the same way.

Mrs. Vincent was a daughter (Sarah A.) of Capt Martin Strong, of this county, and still lives (1884) with her only surviving children—Rev. Boyd Vincent, Ward Vincent, and Mrs. Geo. A. Lyon, in the city of Pittsburgh. Three daughters—Blanche, Belle and Kate—died in early life, and two sons—Strong (Gen. Vincent) and Reed—in early manhood.

JOHN P. VINCENT, ex-President Judge of Erie Co., Penn., and attorney at law, Erie, was born in Waterford, this county, Dec. 2, 1817, son of William Vincent. Our subject received his education in Waterford Academy, and chose the profession of law. He came to Erie City in 1839, and having been regularly admitted to the bar in 1841, commenced practicing in that year in Erie, and has so continued ever since, excepting such time as he was acting as Judge. From 1849 to 1854, Judge Vincent was associated in partnership with James C. Marshall. Our subject has been a Republican in politics since the organization of that party, previous to which he was a Whig. He was elected to the Legislature from Erie Co. in 1862-63, and in the latter year was the Republican candidate for Speaker of the House. He then resumed his profession, and continued it till Dec., 1866, when he took his seat as Additional Law Judge of the Sixth District of Pennsylvania, then composed of Crawford, Warren and Erie Cos. This seat the Judge occupied till the adoption of the Constitution in 1874, which made Erie Co. a separate district, and he then served Erie Co. as President Judge till 1877. Since that year he has continued in law practice without intermission.

ALBERT VOSBURGH, barber, and dealer in real estate, Erie, is a native of this city, son of Robert and Abigail (Tisdale) Vosburgh, the former of Dutch descent, a native of Kinderhook, N. Y., a barber, the latter of French and English descent, of Taunton, Mass. They came to Erie in 1818, and were parents of nine children, eight sons and one daughter, Mrs. Susan Dickson, wife of W. H. Dickson. Our subject and sister are the only members of the family in Erie City. He received a common school training, and on the death of his father, in 1846, he and his brother F. J. continued the business for a time. Mr. Vosburgh has speculated in real estate in Erie City, and at present owns, besides the lot he lives on and where he was born, six houses and ten valuable lots in Erie City. While never an aspirant for office, he is influential in molding sentiment in the recognition and enactment of established facts. He is one of the most active and zealous Republicans of Erie. For many years he has most successfully co-operated with William D. Forten, of Philadelphia, William Nesbitt of Altoona, Robert Stuart, of New Castle, and others, in securing to all classes equality before the law; and no one regards with more intense satisfaction the great changes wrought in the fabric of society. Of ample means, he has traveled extensively, and few are better posted in current and local history. He is unmarried, and resides with his sister in the family mansion. Of his brothers, Robert has for thirty-five years filled a position in the New York Custom House; George at the L. S. R. depot at Cleveland; Henry and Israel perished in the destruction of the steamer "Erie" in July, 1841; Fitz died at Oakland, Cal., and Charles at Erie in 1880.

CARL HENRY WALBRIDGE, lumber dealer, Erie, son of John S. and Jane C. (Maloy) Walbridge, was born in Erie, May 1, 1846. His father was born at Sharon, Vt., Sept. 10, 1815, and died at Springfield, Penn., May 3, 1859. His mother was a native of Argyle, N. Y., born Aug. 15, 1818; died at Springfield, Penn., Jan. 22, 1872. John S. Walbridge was the father of eight children, all of whom are now living, viz.: Emma J., now Mrs. J. W. Moore, born Nov. 30, 1840; Charles P., born Aug. 25, 1842, married; Florence H., now Mrs. L. L. Jordon, born May 12, 1844; Carl Henry, born May 1, 1846; Andrew M., born March 29, 1848, married to Kitty O. Strickland; Ann Eliza, born Sept. 3, 1850, married to Lelas Morgan; Frank L., born June 11, 1854, married to Ida M. Smith; Ida Maria, born Aug. 25, 1858, married to Charles F. Church. Our subject passed his youth with his parents, but at eighteen years of age, when the country wanted brave and true men to come forward in its defense, he promptly offered his services, and entered the U. S. Navy in Dec. 1862; but March 31, following year, he was enrolled as a volunteer in the 63d P. V. I., in which he continued to serve until the close of hostilities. At Petersburg, June 16, 1864, he received a wound that resulted in the loss of his left leg. He received his discharge from the army June 8, 1865. Upon his return home Mr. Walbridge applied himself with energy to business pursuits.

JOHN H. WALKER was born of Scotch-Irish parentage on his father's farm in Cumberland Co., Penn., near Harrisburg, Feb. 9, 1800. In 1817 his father moved to Washington Co., Penn., where the son completed his education, graduating from Washington College in 1821. Soon after he entered upon the study of law with an uncle in Pittsburgh, where he was admitted to the bar. He came to Erie in 1824, and entered upon a good legal practice almost from the start, becoming one of the acknowledged leaders of the bar, a position he held for more than half a century. In 1831 he was married to Miss Catharine D. Kelly, of Erie. Entering into politics, Mr. Walker became a zealous anti-Mason, and was elected by that party to the Assembly in 1832, 1833 and 1834. In 1849 he was chosen State Senator for the district composed of Erie and Crawford Cos., serving three years, the last of which he was Speaker of the body. He was the Whig candidate for Congress in 1850, and defeated by only 206 votes, the district comprising Erie, Clarion, Jefferson, Warren, Potter, Elk and McKean Cos., being usually Democratic, by a considerable majority. In 1862 he received the endorsement of Erie Co. for the same position, but failed to receive the district nomination. In 1872 he was chosen a Delegate-at-large to the Constitutional Convention, and on the 16th of September, 1873, upon the death of William M. Meredith, succeeded him as President of that assemblage. Mr. Walker did much to promote the building of the first railroad along the lake shore, and was active in encouraging the several plank roads that extended out of Erie. During the famous railroad war he took the side of the railroad company, and suffered many annoyances on account of his position. He returned from the Constitutional Convention in bad health, and failed rapidly from that time till his death, which occurred on the 25th of January, 1875. His wife died in 1860, having borne him nine children, of whom five survive, as follows: John W. Walker (intermarried with Annie V., daughter of Hon. S. S. Harrison, of Kittanning, Penn., formerly a member of Congress), Captain of Volunteers, and Paymaster during the war for the Union, Democratic nominee for State Senator in 1876 and 1880, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee in 1881, elected to the Assembly from Erie City in 1882; Thomas M. Walker (intermarried with Agnes, daughter of William M. Caughey, of Erie City), Colonel of the 111th Penn. Regt. during the war, elected Sheriff of Erie Co. in 1870, Chairman of the Republican County Committee for two years, Postmaster of Erie from 1876 to 1879; Catharine D. Walker, intermarried with Samuel A. Davenport, of Erie; Isabella M. Walker, intermarried with H. N. Armstrong, now a resident of Missouri; Mary K. Walker, intermarried with Mr. Beemer, of Missouri.

DR. JOHN C. WALLACE (deceased) was the first resident physician in Erie Co., and was the only one until within a short time before his death. He was born in Dauphin Co., Penn., Feb. 14, 1771, and died in Erie, Dec. 8, 1827. He graduated at Philadelphia under Dr. Rush and other celebrated medical men. He was appointed Surgeon in the United States army, and in 1794 accompanied Gen. Wayne in the Indian war. During the war he visited Erie for a short time. Some years later he resigned his position in the army, and after residing in Franklin, Penn., for three years, came to Erie with his family in 1803. Professionally he was identified with the entire county, in fact, his professional calls often took him far beyond its bounds. In 1806 he was elected the first Burgess of Erie and also held the offices of Justice of the Peace, County Commissioner and Coroner. At the beginning of the war of 1812, he commanded an Erie Co. regiment, and after the battle on Lake Erie assisted Dr. Parsons, of the navy, in attending the wounded. Dr. Wallace was married in Franklin, in 1801, to Miss Margaret Heron, daughter of Capt. James Heron of the army. They had seven children: Eleanor, Benjamin, Elizabeth, Gordon, Jane, Mary Ann and William Perry, of whom only two are now living. Gordon Wallace lives in Missouri, Mo., and Jane (now a widow), who married Capt. Wheeler, late of the army, lives in Troy, Mo. The only one who remained in Erie Co. was Elizabeth, who married Charles Pollock, March 8, 1831. They had nine children: John, Wheeler, Charles, Benjamin, James, Robert, Jane, Elizabeth and Ellen. Five are still living: Wheeler, Charles, James, Robert and Elizabeth. Wheeler has three children: Burt, Josephine and Winnie. Charles has two children: Annie and Robert. A grand-daughter and a great-grandson are the only descendants of Dr. Wallace now living in the county.

IRVINE M. WALLACE is the son of William Wallace, a lawyer of prominence who came to Erie from Harrisburg, Penn., in 1795, as the attorney for the Pennsylvania Population Company, and afterward practiced law in the Erie County Courts. His mother was the daughter of Hon. William Maclay, of Franklin Co., Penn., and grand-daughter of John Harris, the founder of the city of Harrisburg, Penn. William Wallace had three sons and one daughter: Benjamin, a Presbyterian clergyman, deceased; William M., physician, deceased; Mary, wife of Dr. DeWitt, of Philadelphia, deceased; and Irvine, lawyer, now residing in Erie, all of whom have attained a high rank in their professions.

The Wallace family came of good stock, the father an eminent lawyer, and the mother a daughter of the Hon. William Maclay. Mr. Maclay was a member of the State Legislature of Pennsylvania in 1781, and in Sept., 1788 was the first United States Senator elected from Pennsylvania. After the expiration of his term in the Senate, he was elected member of the House of Representatives, of Pennsylvania, and was again elected in 1803. He was Presidential elector in 1796, and in 1801-2-3, was one of the Judges in Dauphin Co., Penn., and was also one of the committee which arranged for the purchase of the land that gave Pennsylvania a frontage on Lake Erie. During Mr. Maclay's term as Senator, it was proposed by Mr. Adams to give the President the title of "His Highness," etc., when Mr. M. said, "It is impossible for any title to add to the respect entertained for Gen. Washington." * * * "There are none who can enter the lists of true glory with him." Mr. M. died in Harrisburg in the year 1804.

CHAS. WALLHAUSER, of the firm of Striebel & Wallhauser, importers and dealers in bottled and keg beer, Erie, is a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, born Feb. 7, 1851, a son of Philip and Christine Wallhauser (deceased), who were the parents of three sons and a daughter: George, a beer dealer in Olean, N. Y.; Chas., our subject; Elizabeth, wife of Ernest Hagner, a carpenter and joiner, died leaving three sons and three daughters; Jacob, a mechanic in Chicago. Our subject at seventeen came to America with his people, who settled here. He engaged for twelve years in the oil districts of Pennsylvania, and then came here and started in his present business. He is an active member and officer in the K. of H. lodge. In 1873 Mr. Wallhauser was united in marriage, at Collins, N. Y., with Margaret, daughter of Matthias and Margaret Smith, natives of Germany, who settled here about fifteen years ago. Four daughters have blessed this union: May, Eda, Josie and Wilhelmina.

JACOB F. WALTHER, Collector of Internal Revenue of the Nineteenth District, Erie, Penn., was born in Alsace, France (since the French-German war of 1870 and 1871 Alsace has been annexed to the German Empire), Nov. 22, 1832; is the oldest son of Jacob Walther, who came to America with his family in 1847, settling in Erie City, where he now resides. Our subject attended common and high school in Alsace and the Erie Academy in this country. Having clerked for ten years in dry goods stores in Erie City and Milwaukee, he, in 1857, embarked in business for himself in Erie, which he carried on till his appointment June 25, 1883, to the office of Inland Revenue Collector. Mr. Walther was united in marriage, in 1863, with Frederica Streuber, by whom there were four children: Leonie, Emil J. J., Ida and Cora. Mr. and Mrs. Walther are members of the Protestant Evangelical Church. He has been member of the School Board and of the City Council, also Notary Public five terms. He is a Sir Knight; politically a Republican.

MARTIN WARFEL, of firm Swalley & Warfel, manufacturers of soap, Erie, was born in Lancaster Co., Penn., Aug. 21, 1829, son of Martin and Anna (Shenk) Warfel, both natives of Lancaster Co., Penn., of German descent. Martin Warfel was a farmer, and came to Erie Co. in 1831, settling on a farm in Mill Creek Township. This farm is now within the corporation limits of Erie City. Our subject was brought up on the farm, and received a common school training. He first commenced in life for himself by clerking in a drug store. In 1854 he entered the drug store of Dr. P. Hall, remaining as clerk until 1860, in which year he and Dr. Hall formed a partnership, lasting twenty-two years. In 1883 Mr. Warfel engaged, in company with J. W. Swalley, in the manufacture of soap. They erected an extensive building on Peach Street, Erie City, for the purpose, three stories high, and 45x100 feet long, with a large addition. Here the firm manufacture fine, laundry and other soaps. Mr. Warfel was twice married; on first occasion, in 1860, to Anna Dumars, who died in Sept., 1862. He then, in 1876, married Jessie Craig, who bore him three children—Helen Bliss, Jessie Alice and Rudolph Shenk. Mr. Warfel is a member of the Universalist Church, of which he was Trustee and Treasurer; has also been a City Councilor; in politics is a Democrat.

JACOB WARFEL, farmer, and dealer in farming implements, buggies and carriages, Erie City, was born in Erie City on the farm where he now resides. He is a son of Martin and Anna (Shank) Warfel, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn., of German descent. The father came to Erie Co. in 1831, and raised four children. Jacob was reared on the farm, and received a common school education. He was married, in 1863, to Phebe, daughter of John Burton: she is of English descent. Mr. and Mrs. Warfel have one child—Anna. Mrs. Warfel has been an invalid for years. Our subject is a Democrat in politics; he has been a member of the Erie City Council four years, and School Director eleven years. While Director in Mill Creek Township, he was the prime mover in establishing the long-term system in the schools, and in abolishing the teachers boarding round. He has always been a strong advocate of Township Superintendents.

CAPT. W. B. WARNER, firm W. B. Warner & Co., general fire, life and accident insurance agents, Erie, was born in Fairview, Erie Co., Penn., July 31, 1841; son of Walter W. and Minerva (Bird) Warner, natives of New York; former a hotel-keeper and drover, of English descent, latter of Scotch. Our subject left home when young, and was educated in Erie City. He first learned the shoemaker trade, which he worked at till April 14, 1861, when he enlisted in the Erie Regiment (three months), then in the 111th P. V.

V., Co. B, of which he was elected Second Lieutenant, serving as such till Sept. 17, 1862, when he was promoted to First Lieutenant, which rank he held till the following January when he was promoted to a Captaincy. After serving with his regiment through all the engagements participated in, he was discharged Nov. 19, 1864. On his return home the Captain acted as traveling salesman for thirteen years. In 1879 he came to Erie City and betook himself to insurance business. The firm represents eleven fire, life and accident insurance companies, showing a total amount of resources $46,173,763. Our subject was married, in Erie City, in 1866, to Minerva, daughter of Rudolph Pettit, a resident of Fairview. To this union was born one child—Nina. Mr. and Mrs. Warner are members of the Central Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Republican. He was elected Commander of Strong Vincent Post, No. 67, Dept. of Penn., G. A. R., on Jan. 1, 1884.

WARNER BROS. The firm of Warner Bros., dry goods merchants, Erie, is composed of E. L., W. S. and S. D. Warner, natives of Oneida Co., N. Y. Their father, Austin Warner, was a native of New York, of English extraction. E. L., the senior brother, came to Erie Co. in 1857, and in 1862 embarked in mercantile business established along with a Mr. Bell, under firm name Bell & Warner. This continued till 1866, when Mr. Bell withdrew, and the firm assumed the title of Warner Bros., the other two brothers having arrived from New York, where they were engaged in mercantile business. These gentlemen have one of the most attractive dry goods stores in Erie City, and are recognized as men of sterling business qualities, and as public-spirited citizens.

A. WAXELBAUM, merchant tailor, Erie, was born in Germany Dec. 15, 1832; son of David Waxelbaum, a merchant there. Our subject attended school in his native land, and at the age of eleven commenced tailoring, serving four years. He worked at his trade in Germany till 1849, when he came to America. Then he engaged for eleven years as cutter and fitter in a popular house in New York. On the first call for volunteers, in 1861, Mr. Waxelbaum enlisted in the 2d N. H. L.; after ninety days re-enlisted in Co. H, 48th Regt. N. Y. V. I., serving two years. He was then employed in New York till 1865, when he came to Erie City, engaging for three years as cutter and fitter at a salary of $1,800 per year. He then followed same occupation, at same salary, in Corry, but in a year returned to Erie, where he has since continued. Though Mr. Waxelbaum has once failed, he has succeeded in regaining what he lost. In addition to merchant tailoring, he is actively engaged in oil business, and owns seven oil wells in Warren Co., Penn. The town of Clarendon is greatly indebted to his enterprise and energy, he having built two large blocks and several dwelling houses there, which he still owns, besides twenty-five acres of land. His real estate there is valued at $40,000. He is also owner of a good store and dwelling in Erie. Our subject was married, in Erie City, in 1865, to Fannie Bluff, and to this union four children were born—Tillie, Maximilian, Annie and Solomon. Mr. Waxelbaum and wife are members of the Jewish Synagogue. He is a Republican in politics; is a prominent member of several secret societies, and for two years has been Grand Lodge Representative, Garfield Lodge, Erie City.

DANIEL WEEKS, gunsmith, Erie, was born in Orange Co., N. Y., in 1810. When fourteen he went to Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., and learned the trade of a gunsmith, which he followed in his native State until 1849, when he came to Erie, where he has since followed his business. Our subject was united in marriage in 1835 in Webster, N. Y., with E. C. Hughes. They have an adopted daughter Rosamond, wife of H. W. Dagget, who is in the insurance business.

JOHN WEINHEIMER, furniture dealer, 1304 State Street, Erie, was born in Germany, May 19, 1841, son of Martin and Barbara (Decker) Weinheimer, the former a farmer all his life. Our subject acquired his education in his native land, and learned upholstering in this country, coming to Erie City in 1859. Here he worked at his trade till 1863, when he embarked in business on his own account. He was married the same year to Kate, daughter of Valentine Stein, and of German descent. This union was blessed with six children, among whom there is one son: John A., now a young man, assisting his father in the store. Mrs. Weinheimer died in 1881. She was a member of St. Paul's Church, as are the other members of the family. Mr. Weinheimer has made all he now possesses by his own unaided efforts; is owner of a neat, substantial residence on Twenty-second Street, between Holland and German streets, and of several other pieces of property.

FRANK L. WEISS, proprietor of the Sonntagsgast, Erie, was born in Berlin, capital of Germany, in 1846, and came to America in 1863; enlisted in the 14th N. Y. Cav., served to the close of the war, and then came to Erie City. Here our subject found no little difficulty in finding a channel adapted to one of his superior education and culture, and the pickax and shovel had often to be wielded instead of the pen, but as mind must ultimately triumph over matter, Mr. Weiss, in January, 1879, obtained the editorial chair of the Leuchthurm, a German paper published in Erie. This position he resigned, however, in the spring of 1881, and on May 15 of that year, founded the Sonntagsgast, a German Sunday paper devoted to humorous and other sketches, poetry, local jokes and all sorts of entertaining matter. The Sonntagsgast is non-political and has a total circulation of over 2,000. The father of our subject, who still lives, is an eminent musician and composer, and is proprietor of a music store in Berlin, Germany.

D. C. WELLER, hardware merchant, and dealer in agricultural and farming implements, wagons, carriages, etc., Erie, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., Dec. 15, 1844, son of Moses and Mary Ann (Braymer) Weller, natives of Pennsylvania. The former, a farmer, was of English descent; the latter of German lineage. Our subject was reared on a farm, where he remained till 1869; then came to Erie City, and engaged in sewing machine business for seven years. Mr. Weller is a self-made man, pushing his way through the world since he was twelve years old. He embarked in his present business in 1876, which he has conducted very successfully. He was married in Erie City, 1873, to Ada, daughter of John Robinson, and a native of Erie Co., of German descent. They have two children living, viz., Harry Parker and Mabel. Mrs. Weller belongs to the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. He is a member of the K. of H.; is in politics a Democrat.

JOHN L. WELLS, Erie County Treasurer, was born in Harbor Creek Township, this county, in 1841: son of Jarvis and Polly (Chambers) Wells, also natives of Erie Co. Jarvis Wells was twice married, on the first occasion to Polly Chambers, who bore him four children—James Madison and Thomas Jefferson (twins), John L. and R. Eliza. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Wells married Emily Knapp, and two children, both deceased, were the fruits of this union. James Madison Wells was a soldier during the late war, enlisting for three months at the first call, leaving just before graduating from Allegheny College, and served for nearly four years in the 111th P. V. I., and at the close of the war he finished his education and graduated. He was principal of the Erie High School for six years, of the Rochester Free Academy for twelve years. He began the study of law at Rochester, and will be admitted this year. Our subject also served during the war of the rebellion, enlisting in 1861 in the 111th P. V. I., serving eighteen months under Cols. Schlaudecker, Cobham, Walker, and under Capt. Braden. He was commissioned as Lieutenant of his company, and was transferred to the command of another company, which he commanded until the end of the war. He participated in all the important engagements, among others second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wauhatchie, Lookout Mountain, and all of Gen. Sherman's engagements during his memorable march to the sea. Being captured, he was placed in Andersonville, but almost miraculously escaped. He earned the rank of Lieut. Col. by acting as scout on one occasion and discovering the position of the enemy, thereby saving his entire Division; but his being captured and detained as a prisoner for several months near the close of hostilities, at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, prevented him from bearing his well-earned promotion. He received from Gen. and Gov. Geary a special commission as a souvenir of his daring act at the battle of Lost Mountain, Ga. He was discharged in 1865. Capt. Wells married, in Feb., 1867, Adele S., daughter of Stewart Chambers, an early settler of this county. Three children were born to this union, two now living: Herbert M. and Raymond R. Our subject was elected to the office of County Treasurer in 1883 by the very flattering majority of 1,500.

JOHN H. WELSH, retired wholesale merchant, Erie, was born in Ireland in December, 1839, son of Patrick and Bridget (Sullivan) Welsh, natives of Ireland. In 1847 they moved to Wales, and in 1848 emigrated to America, settling in Erie Co., Penn. Their family numbered seven children, four boys and three girls. Our subject, who is the youngest, received a common school education, and enlisted in the United States Navy, commencing as cabin boy. He rose so rapidly that, when the war of the rebellion broke out, he was master of a schooner. In 1864 Mr. Welsh was ordered aboard the U. S. Ship "Undine," then an Acting Ensign, to take the position of executive officer, in which capacity he exhibited marked ability and skill. His gentlemanly bearing and uniform courtesy to superiors and inferiors very soon won for himself the confidence and respect of every one with whom he came in contact. The "Undine" was kept constantly on active duty, which called into play all the executive ability of our subject. To him belongs the honor of being the organizer of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in Erie. In 1860 Mr. Welsh married Mary Sheahan, a native of Ireland, by whom were six children, five living—Thomas P., Libbie, James E., Bettie and Effie. Mr. and Mrs. Welsh are members of the R. C. Church.

CHARLES H. WELSHMAN, dealer in tobacco, cigars, stationery and confectionery, was born in New Jersey, and came to Erie with his parents, Edward R. and Sarah Welshman, his father being among the pioneer cigar manufacturers here; he departed this life April 9, 1876, and is buried in the Erie Cemetery. He left a widow, one son—Charles H.—and two daughters—Ida, wife of William F. Rindernecht, and Hattie, who is unmarried. After his father's decease, Charles H. took charge of the business, which he has carried on steadily since. He was united in marriage, in Erie, in 1881, with Carrie Burger, a native of the same, her parents being early settlers of Erie, coming from Germany.

JACOB WESCHLER was born in Bavaria in the year 1828. In 1852 he married, in Erie, Miss Barbara Hauck, daughter of Lawrence Hauck, Esq., farmer, by whom he had two children: Daniel D., married Sophia M. Warfel, 1878, they have two children: Bertena M. and George D.; Julia (deceased). Married again 1857, to Miss Frances, daughter of Andrew Siedle, farmer, of Erie, by whom he has had six children: Bena, married to Frank J. Larey and residing in Erie (have one child: William); Leo B., married Pauline Kimmith in 1876 (have four children: Robert E., Charles L., James S. and Frank); Jacob (deceased); Francis, at home; James J. and Philip Andrew. Mr. Weschler came to this county when but nineteen years of age, landing in New York City in 1847, with but 25 cents in his pocket. He first engaged with a farmer in Flushing, N. Y., at $8 per month, where he remained two months, when he took passage on a canal boat for Buffalo and from there to this city by steamboat, where he arrived thirty-seven years ago. Soon after arriving in Erie he engaged with George Fry, to work in his brewery for one year, after which he worked for another year as foreman in Dietz's brewery. He had then saved sufficient means to start in a small way for himself, and with that sturdy self-reliance which has always characterized him in his commercial career, he began the business which has to-day grown into such magnificent proportions. After renting for three years, he bought a brewery and made lager and ale and did his own malting; in 1864 he built a new brewery, selling it the same year, when he purchased the old malt house on the present site of the Lake City Malt House, and has devoted his attention ever since exclusively to malting. The constantly increasing demand for his fine quality of malt compelled him, in 1873, to build additions to his malt house, and in 1879 he removed the old building and doubled his capacity. Jacob Weschler is now fifty-six years of age as appears by date of his birth, but from personal appearance would not be judged over forty. He personally superintends the details of his immense business, as well as the malting operations, assisted by two of his sons. The eldest son, Daniel D., attends to the financial affairs, including the purchase of barley; and the quality of the barley used, and the success of the concern attests his fitness for the responsible position to which he is assigned. To meet the vast requirements of his constantly increasing malting business Mr. Weschler found it necessary to again enlarge his capacity, which he did by erecting the large and substantial building at the corner of Parade and Sixteenth Streets on Lake Shore & Penn. R. R., from which he has tracks into the building. The walls are of brick and iron with slate roofs, and the entire building is made as nearly fire-proof as possible. The malting floors: The northern portion of the building is occupied by the floors and kilns. There are five spacious floors, occupying as many stories, with a capacity of 1,000 bushels each. These floors are of cement, built in the most durable manner, and fitted with the latest improvements for regulating the temperature. The grain is introduced on the floors at the west end and swept into the kilns by a large trimmer, all work being done by machinery whenever possible. The elevator bins are in the south half of the building and are eighteen in number, with a capacity of 100,000 bushels. United States Bonded Warehouse: These bins are secured above and below by custom house locks, as they are all bonded by the U. S. Government for the storage of barley from Canada. Mr. Weschler has for many years been a heavy importer of Canadian barley, which he has not only used for his own malting, but has also shipped in large quantities to other points. There not being sufficient storage capacity always available in the dock elevators, and Mr. Weschler needing all of the room in his Lake Shore malt house for his local business, the erection of the new building just completed became necessary to accommodate his fast increasing trade. The elevator bins' capacity of 100,000 bushels makes a considerable addition to the storage of the port. Mr. Weschler made applications to have the elevator bonded under the warehouse laws of the United States, which was granted him after examination of the property. This gives Mr. Weschler valuable privileges in the barley and malt trade, which his ample means and large business experience will make available. The elevator building is 100x70 feet on the ground and 75 in height.

J. W. WETMORE, attorney, Erie City, was born in Warren Co., Penn., May 1, 1820; son of Lansing and Caroline (Ditmars) Wetmore, the former a grandson of Amos Wetmore and Hugh White, of Whitestown, N. Y. and the latter coming with her parents from Long Island. Lansing Wetmore was Prothonotary, Clerk of the Courts and Register and Recorder at the organization of Warren Co., afterward practiced law, and was Associate Judge, retiring in the last years of his life to a farm near Warren. Our subject received his education at Warren Academy and Union College, N. Y., and afterward engaged in teaching. He was principal of Warren Academy for one and a half years, and in 1846 removed to Erie City, where he taught in the academy for two years. He commenced the practice of law in Erie City in 1849, which profession he continues to follow. In business Mr. Wetmore has been successful. In politics he is a Republican.

REV. JAMES H. WHALLON (deceased) was born in Argyle, Washington Co., N. Y., July 20, 1808. At the age of seventeen he was converted, joined the Methodist Church at Rochester, N. Y., studied for the ministry, and in 1830 was ordained and became a member of the Genesee Conference. His first appointment was at Lewiston. Our subject married, in 1829, Miss Kelso, who bore him ten children, only two surviving: Melvin S., an industrious and thoroughly Christian young man, with the Lovell Manufacturing Co., and Isabella, residing in Erie. J. H. Whallon, LL.D., was transferred in 1837 to the Erie Conference, his first charge being in Waterford. He came to Erie City in 1843, and though moving from place to place, the custom of the ministry of his denomination, ever considered this his home. In 1857 the Doctor, then pastor of the Erie Street Church, Cleveland, became a delegate to the General Conference held in Boston, subsequently filling the position of Elder, Fredonia District, four years, then for six years in the Jamestown District, then for three years in Erie; this he resigned to accept the United States Consulate to Port Mahon, Spain. At the expiration of three years, Dr. Whallon returned home, went to Dayton, Catawagus Co., N. Y., and served till his death. Our subject, up to the time of the war, in 1861, was a Democrat in politics; but he then became a staunch Republican, and frequently spoke words of loyalty to his country from the stump. Though he was often spoken of as a good subject for Congressional honors, he never became a delegate. The Doctor was identified with many public spirited-enterprises of Erie City. His property on the west side is well known to-day, and the remains of his docks, now owned by the Anthracite Coal & Iron Company, serve as a reminder to the older settlers of his project to utilize the water front of the city east of Ash Lane. Our subject departed this life highly respected by all.

E. A. WHITE was born in Chenango Co., N. Y., Feb., 1839. Came with his family to Erie, in 1842. His youth was passed in this city, and at the age of twenty-three, he enlisted in the United States Navy, and served through the war of the rebellion. He was married Dec. 26, 1865, to Miss Mary E. Bryant, of his native county. They have had three children, two of whom survive, viz., Minnie, at home, and Edward A. Mr. White is a painter and grainer by trade, and does a good business. His residence is 358 W. 5th Street, this city.

B. B. WHITLEY.—In 1814, Wm. Whitley removed from Dauphin Co. to this county and purchased reserve tract No. 47, now joining the city limits on the east side. His family consisted of himself, wife and three sons. His wife died in 1828. He died in 1843, leaving his farm to his son, B. B. Whitley, who came from Dauphin Co. with him. B. B. Whitley married Jane Holliday, of Springfield Township, this county, in 1831, by whom he had five children. He died in 1849 and his widow in 1871. The children of B. B. Whitley, the present County Commissioner, who married Isadore Burton, in 1865, are the fourth generation of Whitleys on that tract, still in possession of the family. There are only two other cases of the same kind in Mill Creek.

BENJAMIN WHITMAN, Erie, eldest son of George F. and Mary (Hemperley) Whitman, born in Middletown, Dauphin Co., Penn., Jan. 28, 1840; attended the public schools of his native town until twelve years of age, when he left home to live with an uncle in Bradford Co., Penn.; commenced the printing trade in the office of the Harrisburg Telegraph when about fifteen; became partner and editor of the Middletown Journal soon after he was eighteen; sold out the Journal at the end of six months, and did editorial work in Harrisburg and Lancaster for a time; taught school in Middletown, in the winter of 1859-60, and part of that of 1860-61, for the purpose of improving his education; came to Erie Co. in January, 1861, as assistant editor of the Observer, then owned by Andrew Hopkins, became part owner and editor of the paper in Jan., 1862, and sole owner in April, 1864; continued to own and edit the Observer until Dec. 1, 1878, since which time he has mainly given his time and attention to business and literary work; though actively engaged in State and county politics for upward of twenty years, and frequently named for prominent offices, he has always declined to be a candidate for nomination. The only official position he has ever held is that of Water Commissioner, of the City of Erie, an honorary position, voluntarily conferred by the Court of Erie Co. He was Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, for ten years, has often been a delegate to Democratic State Conventions, and a member of the Democratic State Committee, and was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, of 1884. Mr. Whitman was married May 30, 1870, to Miss Mary Emma, daughter of Silas E. and Julia A. Teel, of Erie City.

CAPT. E. L. WHITTELSEY, attorney at law, Erie, was born in Litchfield Co., Conn., Oct. 5, 1841, son of Henry R. and Mary A. (Parmlee) Whittelsey, the former a farmer and merchant, and both natives of Connecticut, of English descent. Our subject was brought up on the farm till he attained his eighth year, and then attended school till he was nineteen. On July 29, 1861, he enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., Co. E, and obtained regular promotion from private to Captain. He served throughout the war; was wounded at the battle of Bull's Run, and was discharged June 28, 1865. On his return home he was elected, in 1869, as Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas of Erie Co.; being re-elected, he served till January, 1876. At this time he continued the study of law (which he had commenced before joining the army), with Benson & Brainerd, where he remained one year. He was admitted to the bar in 1877. Our subject was married to Charlotte, daughter of Henry Hunt, formerly a farmer, now deceased. To this union were born six children, four living—Maud, Ruth, Mary and Kate. Mr. and Mrs. Whittelsey are members of the Central Presbyterian Church, in which he is also Sunday-school teacher. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JAMES R. WILLARD, editor and proprietor of Erie Morning Dispatch, Erie, was born at Madison, Ohio, Sept. 24, 1844. In 1853 he moved to Michigan with his parents, who are still residents of Olivet, that State. Our subject graduated from Dartmouth College, New Hampshire, in 1867, and attended law lectures at the University of Michigan in 1867-68. In the spring of the latter year he entered the law office of Judges Worden and Morris, Fort Wayne, Ind., and a few months later became associated with Hon. Isaac Jenkinson in the publication of the daily Gazette of that city, from which Mr.

Willard retired at the end of a year. He then bought an interest in the Erie Dispatch, with which he has been since connected. Our subject was bearer of dispatches to Denmark for the U. S. Government in the spring of 1873. In Feb., 1874, he was appointed Collector of Customs of the Port of Erie, which office he held for a term of four years. Mr. Willard is a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, and does a grain and commission business at Erie.

SAMUEL E. WOODRUFF was born in North Coventry, Conn., March 31, 1817, and died at his residence in Erie City April 15, 1881. His father, Rev. Ephraim T. Woodruff, was a Presbyterian Minister, and a nephew of Gov. Treadwell, through whose kind offices he received his collegiate training at Yale and Andover Seminaries. His mother, Sally Alden, was a lineal descendant of Capt. John Alden. He removed from Connecticut with his parents to Trumbull Co., Ohio, where he remained until sixteen, when he entered Hamilton College, New York. He subsequently studied law in Cincinnati, and was admitted to practice in 1841 by an Examining Committee, of which Hon. S. P. Chase and Judge Walker were members. Locating at Girard, Erie Co., Penn., in 1844, he applied himself to the practice of his profession, making sure advances in the direction of the success he afterward attained in so large a degree. In 1847 he was married to Miss Eliza Sterrett. His election as District Attorney in 1850, afforded an opportunity in a wider field for the display of his legal talents, and enhanced his reputation at the bar. In 1867, upon nomination of Chief Justice Chase, he received the appointment of Register in Bankruptcy, which position he held until the repeal of the bankrupt law. In 1870 he was the unanimous nominee of his party in Erie Co. at the primary election for President Judge of the Sixth Judicial District. In 1872 he changed his residence from Girard to Erie, and thereafter gave special attention to the increasing demands of his profession, but by no means ignored social claims and questions affecting the general welfare. He was an active member of the First Presbyterian Church. Useful objects, of every nature had his cordial co-operation. In politics he was a thorough Republican, and actively participated in contests between the two great parties. Among his professional brethren he was highly esteemed; entire sincerity distinguished his career; positive, courteous, firm, yet tolerant, uncompromisingly opposed to all wrong, were elements of his character that made him a strong, influential and useful citizen. Mr. Woodruff's surviving family consists of his widow and two daughters—Mary and Sarah, who occupy the family residence on State Street, this city—and his son—Thomas S., located at Fargo, Dak., in the practice of law.

DR. MARY A. B. WOODS, physician and surgeon, Erie, was born and reared in Crawford Co., Penn. Her father, Isaac Brooks, was a son of Samuel Brooks, who was an early pioneer farmer of Crawford Co., and a descendant of a pioneer family of the State. The subject of this sketch early manifested marked intellectual talents, and at fifteen, after receiving a good education, began teaching in her native county. She was very reputedly connected with this profession until, at the age of twenty-three, she was married to James R. Woods, a merchant of Linesville. In 1864 they removed to Erie, where he continued in mercantile interests until his death, which occurred March 20, 1876. He was buried by the A. O. U. W. and K. of P. societies, of which he had been an active member for several years. In 1860 Mrs. Woods began to study medicine, and in 1861 entered the Western Homeopathic College at Cleveland, from which institution she graduated very creditably in 1864. After her location here she began to practice her profession, specializing the treatment and cure of diseases of women and children. She has by dint of persistent industry secured for herself a well-acknowledged prominence in her profession here. She has a family of two sons and a daughter: Arthur A., physician and surgeon, Erie; Frank E., on the reportorial staff of the Daily Observer; and Carrie J., now Mrs. E. P. Bush, of Chicago.

CHARLES B. WUENSCHER, book-keeper and clerk, Erie, was born in this city in 1858, and educated at Erie Academy. His parents were Simon and Elizabeth (Heidt) Wuenschel, natives of Bavaria, Germany, the former of whom was a cooper by trade; he came to Erie City in 1847, and acted as agent for an oil cloth factory till his death, which occurred in 1870. His widow is still living in Erie City. Our subject was married, in 1879, to Maggie B., daughter of J. T. Sevin, who was a teacher in Erie schools for nine years before her marriage. To this union were born two children—Flora E. and Charlotte M.

JOHN YOUNGS, brickmaker and farmer, Erie, was born in Mill Creek Township, this county, July 2, 1832, only son of Daniel Youngs, a native of New York, the mother a native of Ohio, and both of English descent. Daniel Youngs came to Erie Co. in 1828, where he followed his trade, that of brickmaking. He died in Erie City in 1865. Our subject commenced the manufacture of bricks in this city in 1858. He also owns a farm within the city limits. Mr. Youngs has been a member of the Council Select Committee two terms, and Assistant Assessor. He is a member of the Universalist Church.

RECEIVED TOO LATE FOR INSERTION IN PROPER PLACE.

HON. SAMUEL M. BRAINERD was born in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., Nov. 13, 1842; son of Samuel and Olive L. Brainerd. Samuel M., our subject, was born and reared on a farm, where he remained until twenty-one years of age. Up to this period his advantages for education had been limited, having only attended the common schools in his neighborhood. Being anxious to secure a better education, he removed to Edinboro, Penn., and engaged in other business, having to rely on his own exertions to pay the expenses of a course of instruction which he took in the State Normal School at that place. After leaving that institution, he commenced reading law with the Hon. Geo. H. Cutler, of Girard, Penn., finishing his reading with Wm. Benson, in Erie. He was admitted to the bar of Erie Co. in 1869, since which time he has devoted his energies to the practice of his profession with marked success. He was elected to the office of District Attorney for Erie Co. in the fall of 1872, in which capacity he served for the full term of three years. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and has always taken an active part in all the political contests in the county; was chairman of the Republican County Committee during the year 1880. In 1882 he received the Republican nomination for Congress in the 27th Congressional District of Pennsylvania, composed of the counties of Erie, Warren and Venango, and was elected by a majority of about 1,000 votes. As an evidence of his personal popularity, it can be said that while the Democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. Pattison, carried Erie Co. by over 500 majority, Mr. Brainerd had a majority of over 800 at the same election. He took his seat in Congress in Dec., 1883, and during his first session accomplished more than all other members for the past fifteen years. Notably: an appropriation of $50,000 for Erie Harbor, a favorable report from Committee for $150,000 additional for our public building; restored the land light-house, and secured an appropriation for the re-purchase of the property on which it stands; introduced a bill for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, which was favorably reported by the House Committee on Military Affairs; introduced a bill to equalize compensation for letter carriers and officers of the first and second class; also a bill for the payment of unpaid bounties to veterans who were promoted after the last enlistment; besides a large number of private bills for securing soldiers their pensions and back pay. He gave the interests of disabled soldiers his personal attention, and many cases were determined successfully which had been pending for several years, and abandoned as hopeless by the parties interested. Mainly through his efforts the discordant elements in the Republican party were so successfully united that he received the unanimous vote of the party in Erie Co. for his re-nomination for Congress. He represented the district in so satisfactory and successful a manner that many in the opposite party would have been greatly pleased had he been returned for another term.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

CITY OF CORRY.

D. R. ALEXANDER, St. Nicholas Hotel, Corry, was born May 9, 1828, near Franklin, Venango Co., Penn., where he also received his education. He learned the rolling mill business, in which he engaged seven years. In 1849, he was a member of the engineer corps which surveyed the Lake Shore Railroad. Our subject has been engaged in the hotel business for upward of thirty years. He was located in Milwaukee, Wis.; Pittsfield, Warren Co., Penn., where he also sold groceries. From the year 1852 to 1861, he engaged in lumbering. During the late war, he acted as Sergeant in Company I, Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, serving from 1862 to 1865. He has also been interested in the oil business, and was for several years at Irvinton; has besides sunk wells in different localities. He was located at one time at Tidioute, Penn., as manager of a grocery store. He was steward of the Riddell House, Bradford, Penn., one season. He returned to Corry June 27, 1883, and now runs the St. Nicholas. D. R. Alexander was united in marriage with Mary R., youngest daughter of M. C. Dalrymple, first Sheriff of Warren County. She departed this life in 1859. Our subject married his second wife in 1868. She was Miss D. M. Anderson, of Columbus, Penn., and has been the accountant of No. 1 Lodge, Equitable Aid Union, since its organization in 1879. This marriage has resulted in the birth of four children, two boys and two girls.

T. A. ALLEN, President Corry National Bank, manager Corry Kerosene Works, Corry, was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., December 15, 1836, son of Chauncy and Orissa (Newton) Allen, natives of the Empire State; the former of English-Welsh, and the latter of English descent. Our subject was reared on a farm until fourteen, receiving his education in the common schools of his native county. He was then for several years employed as a clerk in a country store; then embarked in business on his own account and carried on a general store for three years. In 1862, he enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and was elected First Lieutenant, but before engaged in actual service, was appointed Quartermaster of the regiment, in which capacity he served until his resignation, which occurred in 1864. He returned home and resumed the citizen's garb. On his return, he was appointed Deputy Clerk of Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and served until January 1, 1865, when he came to Corry as an employe of Wright & Co., in the lumber business, as book-keeper. Was with that company until 1869, when he was employed by the Corry Kerosene Works as general manager, which position he has since occupied, employing about twenty-five men the year round. Mr. Allen has served his city six years as member of the School Board, five terms as Mayor of Corry, and has been a delegate to County and Congressional Conventions. He is President of the Corry National Bank, and has been for one year President of the American Writing Machine Company. In 1858, Mr. Allen married Leanore, daughter of Thomas T. Wasson, a farmer, lumberman and prominent citizen of New York. To this union have been born—Archie M., a high school graduate and book-keeper in Corry National Bank; Louise, in school; and Josephine. Mr. Allen, with wife, is a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which he has been an Elder. He is a Master Mason, member of the G. A. R., and in politics, a Republican.

C. G. ANDREWS, manager of Moses Starbird's carriage and buggy factory, was born July 4, 1822, in Paris, Oxford Co., Me. He was the fourth child in the family, and has two brothers and three sisters. Until fifteen years of age, he was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the district school. In 1848, our subject bought out an ore reducing business in Luzerne County, Penn. He engaged in business for five years for himself in Allegany County, N. Y.; thence went to Albion, Erie Co., Penn., in 1861, for four years, employing as high as twenty-five men. Mr. Andrews came to Corry in 1873, where he manufactured three years, then engaged in manufacturing buggies three years more. Our subject was Captain in the Squirrel Hunters during the war, and also First Lieutenant in the Sixty-fourth New York Regiment from 1861 to 1863. When twenty-two years of age, he was united in marriage with Ruth Hilton, same age. Three children blessed this union, only one surviving—Oscar, book-keeper in the National Bank, Corry. Mr. Andrews served as member of the City Council at Albion. He has also been a member of the School Board. He belongs to Star Lodge, No. 304.

C. A. AUER, Jr., with C. A. Auer, Sr., tanner and currier, Corry, was born February 10, 1856, and is a son of C. A. Auer, Sr., who has been established in business in Corry since 1863, now on Pike street, but formerly (till 1870) located on East Wayne street. Our subject attended, with his brother, the German High School, Philadelphia. He learned tanning, in which he has been engaged twelve years with his father, and learned the trade of currier with C. Killeburger, a prominent man near Akron, Summit Co., Ohio, by whom he was employed two years. Mr. Auer was united in marriage, February 3, 1880, with Mary Waters, of Cuyahoga Falls, Summit Co., Ohio. One child, Louis, born November 17, 1881, has blessed this union. His brothers, G. A. and F. P., are also interested in the above business.

F. P. AUER, with C. A. Auer, Sr., tanner and currier, Corry, was born May 13, 1860, and is a son of C. A. Auer, who has been established in above business in Corry, since 1863. Our subject attended the German High School, Philadelphia, with his brother, C. A. Auer, Jr., and learned the trade of his father. Two brothers, C. A. and G. A., are also connected with the same business.

CHARLES BALSER, meat market, Corry, was born November 25, 1848, in Darmstadt, Germauy, where he received his education. He emigrated to America in 1863, and learned his trade with John Lecuer, in Dunkirk, N. Y. Our subject was united in marriage March 26, 1878, with Maria Fuller, born March 22, 1859, in Buffalo, N. Y. They are the parents of three children, viz.: Charles, born January 11, 1879; Frank, February 3, 1880, and Katie, March 3, 1883. Mr. Balsler came to Corry in 1870, where he butchered for Spence Myers seven years, and for himself six.

GEORGE N. BARNES, proprietor of lounge factory, Corry, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., August 2, 1841, and is a son of Joshua and Susan (Null) Barnes, both natives of New Jersey, and of English extraction. He was educated at the common and central schools, and for some time assisted his father in the butchering business. He came to Corry in March, 1864, and carried on a grocery business for about ten years. He then engaged in the oil industry for two years, when he sold out to the Standard Oil Company, for whom he acted as traveling agent for six years. In May, 1883, he established his present business. His factory has a capacity for turning out 200 lounges per week, and employs twenty-five hands. Corry being central, Mr. Barnes is enabled to ship to all points, and sells only to dealers. Our subject was married in June, 1864, to Delia Bristol, born in Sand Lake, N. Y., April 1, 1844. To this union have been born two children—Emma D. and Alice. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes are members of the Baptist Church.

GEORGE BLAIR, firm of George Blair & Son, drugs, Corry, was born July 9, 1832, in Cortland, Cortland Co., N. Y., son of S. and Nancy (Lyman) Blair. The former was a merchant of Cortland, N. Y., of Scotch descent, and died about 1835; the latter a native of Tioga County, and of English lineage, departed this life in 1869. Our subject was reared in town, and attended the district and high schools, finishing his education in Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. George Blair was united in marriage, February, 1855, with Emily C. Farnham, born July, 1831, in Wayne Township, Erie County, daughter of John and Irene Farnham, of English extraction, the former a farmer by occupation. To this union have been born Carrie R., wife of Mr. Pardee, Teller in Corry National Bank; and John S., who was educated in Warren County, attended the Meadville College one year (1875-76), and married Mary Yates, of Columbus, Penn., by whom he has had one daughter, Mollie G. He has been engaged in the drug business eight years; with his father, as above, for four years. While in Columbus, George Blair engaged for twenty years in mercantile business, and in the drug business twelve years. He has been residing in Corry four years, owns his dwelling, and is engaged as druggist there.

LEO BODMER, grocer, Corry, was born June 27, 1854, in Wurtemberg, Germany, and was brought up on a farm and educated in the public school. Our subject emigrated to America when seventeen years of age, and learned to make cigars in Erie County with Albert Fette. He followed this occupation for about ten years, five of which were for himself. Mr. Bodmer came to Corry in 1870, where he learned a trade, working two years here as journeyman, and three years in various places. He commenced in the grocery business with his brother in August, 1882, in which they have been successful. Mr. Bodmer was united in marriage, in 1879, with Katie Steinhauser, born in Kentucky in 1857. Two children have been born to this union, viz., George, aged three years, and Jennie, aged fifteen months. Our subject is a member of C. M. B. A., St. Joseph Benevolent Society, and of St. Elizabeth Church.

ROMAN BODMER, grocer, Corry, was born September 10, 1856, in Wurtemberg, Germany. He was raised in the country, followed the occupation of a farmer, and educated at the public schools. He emigrated to America in 1873, and worked at the baker's business three years in Pittsburgh; has also been a cigar-maker, tanner and salesman. He has been very successful in the grocery business, which he commenced in April, 1882. Mr. Bodmer was married, June 12, 1883, in Utica, N. Y., to Mary Kebreer, born March 7, 1863, in Grand Island, N. Y. He and his wife are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Bodmer is Band Master of the Corry Band.

A. F. BOLE, attorney-at-law, Corry.

E. N. BONNELL, firm of Bonnell & Lambing, Corry, was born May 17, 1846, in Harbor Creek, Erie Co., Penn. His parents were natives of Harbor Creek, of German and Irish descent, and were the parents of six children, our subject being the youngest. His father died June, 1881, aged seventy-six, and his mother in 1854, aged about forty-six. Mr. Bonnell was brought up on a farm, and received his education in the district school.

In 1870, when about twenty-four years of age, he went to Venango, where he worked for two years in the oil business; thence to Clarion County, as producer for about eight years, where he was successful; and thence to Corry, where he engaged in manufacturing bed springs. Mr. Bonnell was united in marriage, December 19, 1873, with Josephine, daughter of Charles Biley, a farmer of Harbor Creek. Mr. and Mrs. Bonnell are the parents of two children, viz.: Gertrude Mary, born February 7, 1876, near St. Petersburg, Penn.; and George, born May 9, 1882, died August 17, 1882.

A. S. BONSTEEL, physician and surgeon, Corry, was born in Ellicottsville, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., July 17, 1838, where he was reared and educated. He is a graduate of Randolph Academy. His medical studies were obtained at Plymouth and Paw Paw, Mich., with his brother, attending also lectures at the University of Michigan. In 1872, he graduated from Bellevue Hospital, N. Y. Immediately after attending lectures, the Doctor was admitted to practice medicine by the Cattaraugus County Medical Society (commencing in that county) and subsequently in Corry. Dr. Bonsteel was married in December, 1865, to Mrs. Emma M. (Eaton), daughter of Charles W. Greenleaf, and a native of Boston. By this union there are four children, viz., Ray L., Lottie M., Morris C. and Mary E. Mrs. Bonsteel had one child by her first husband, named Louis S. The Doctor is a member of the State, County and American Medical Associations, and has acted as President of Erie County Medical Society, Chairman of Board of District Censors of State Medical Society, six years, and delegate two terms to latter, and was twice elected a delegate to the American Medical Association by the State Medical Society.

C. O. BOWMAN, attorney, Corry, was born in Brookfield Township, Tioga Co., Penn., March 6, 1825, son of Godfrey Bowman, who received a silver medal from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in testimony of his bravery in the naval engagement on Lake Erie, September 10, 1813. Until the age of nineteen, our subject attended the district schools, and finished his education at the Lima Seminary. He commenced reading law in 1845, with R. G. White, and was admitted to the bar in 1852, from which time he practiced in Tioga County until October, 1865, when he came to Corry, where he has since resided. On November 6, 1865, he was admitted to the bar of Erie County; was elected to the Legislature from Tioga County, Penn., in 1862, and from Erie County in 1869; in 1872, was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania; was twice elected to the Common Council of the city of Corry. Mr. Bowman was twice married, first December 19, 1850, to Jane A. Monro, who died June 10, 1877, leaving one child—Eva, wife of William Bruner. His second marriage took place May 4, 1878, with Lizzette Smith, by whom he had two children—Jessie and Carroll O.

D. L. BRACKEN, of the firm of Bracken Bros., groceries and produce, Corry (established in 1872, as Miner & Bracken, but as above since 1874). Our subject is a son of George W. Bracken, born on the Bracken farm, Erie County, Penn., but now residing three miles east of Corry. He settled in Warren County, Penn., about forty-five years ago; was by occupation an undertaker. He reared a family of eight children. Our subject, previous to engaging in his present business, clerked six years, three with Horton & Wilcox. From 1879 to 1883, he held the office of County Jury Commissioner. He and his brother are enterprising young men, working themselves from a small beginning into a successful business.

J. A. BRADT, foreman in Corry Woodenware Factory, Corry. Our subject learned the carpenter's trade at Jamestown, N. Y., and has worked as carpenter and joiner some twenty years. He has been connected with the present firm since 1877. Previously, was contractor and builder at different points. Mr. Bradt came here about eighteen years ago, and helped to erect a number of buildings, among which was Corry's first good building, put up in 1873. Our subject was united in marriage with Olive F. Livingstone, of Columbus, Penn., daughter of Henry W. and Mary B. Livingstone, and granddaughter of Dr. Frank Burroughs, a pioneer of Union, Penn. Her father was by trade a blacksmith, and was one of the early settlers. He died in July, 1882, aged sixty-three; his widow, a native of Ludlow, Vt., is now a resident of Corry, and is in her sixty-sixth year. Three children have blessed this union, the eldest born in Jamestown and the others in Corry, Penn. Their names are William Henry, Clyde Milford and Mabel Gertrude.

J. R. BRIGHAM, in firm of C. J. Swift & Co., hardware, Corry, was born June 3, 1843, in Youngsville, Penn., and is a son of Wesley H. and Harriet N. Brigham, of English parentage. Wesley H. Brigham and family moved to Fredonia, N. Y., in 1848, where our subject lived and attended school until 1856. After leaving Fredonia, our subject engaged in the mining business in the Curlew Coal Mine, Ky., until 1861. He had to leave there on account of the war, and was taken prisoner at the Fort Pillow massacre. In 1865 and 1866, Mr. Brigham engaged in raising cotton, about fifty miles from New Orleans. He was united in marriage in 1868 with Miss Alice M. Stearn, of Fredonia, N. Y., daughter of Sidney and Mary Stearn, of English parentage. Two sons have blessed this union, viz., Eugene B., aged eleven years, and Walter S., aged seven years. Mr. Brigham commenced to work for Mr. Swift, of the above firm, as salesman and book-keeper in 1868, and continued in this capacity until August, 1881, when he purchased a one-third interest in same, which he still retains.

SAMUEL B. BROOKS, attorney, Corry, was born May 18, 1823, in Lansing, Tompkins County, N. Y. His parents, of Irish and English extraction, had a family of nine children, eight of whom are now living. Our subject was the second child and oldest son in this family. His brothers Abram W., Chairman of Board of Supervisors of Cayuga County, N. Y.; J. Calvin, is a dentist in Lakewood, Mich.; Marcus H., an attorney, residing at Hart, Mich., and M. Hargen, clerk in railroad office at Newcastle, Penn. Our subject was reared on a farm, and obtained his early education in the common schools, subsequently attended the academy at Groton, N. Y., and read law at Lawrenceville, Tioga Co., Penn., with John W. Ryan. He was admitted to the bar in 1854, at Wellsboro, where he practiced until 1868, when he came to Corry, where he has since successfully followed his profession. Mr. Brooks was united in marriage, April 1, 1843, with Sarah E. Miller, of American-German ancestry, born in Colchester, N. Y., March 5, 1825. They have had a family of nine children—Charles B., born June 14, 1844, residing in Corry; Sophia E., born July 4, 1846, dying April, 1882; she was the wife of Charles R. Saunders, an attorney at Cleveland; Gasherie D. and Sarah M. (dying in infancy), Stella, wife of Norman W. Allen, of Oil City, Penn.; Ida B., wife of L. B. Shave, a machinist, residing in Corry; Julia Florence; Mark H. and Isaac Horton, residing in Corry. Mr. Brooks served as Justice of the Peace five years at Lawrenceville, Tioga Co., Penn. He also served as Justice of the Peace ten years, and Alderman five years in Corry, and re-elected February, 1884, for five years more. Mr. Brooks was subordinate officer in the State Legislature four years, and one year Clerk in the State Treasury Department, Harrisburg, Penn.

T. H. BROWN, gunsmith, Corry, is a native of Cleveland, Ohio, and the only child that was born to Thomas (deceased) and Sarah Brown. His mother was born in England in 1828, and came to Pennsylvania in an early day. She was twice married, her second husband being Thomas Appleby. Our subject came with his stepfather to Erie County in 1848, when this settlement was a wilderness. He was educated in the district schools, and in 1870 chose the occupation of gunsmith, learning the trade of A. M. Cone, now a popular gunsmith of Warren. During the late war, he enlisted in Company E, Thirty-first Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served two years. He participated in Gen. Sherman's celebrated march to the sea. Mr. Brown was united in marriage with Laura Parker, of Panama, N. Y. One child blessed this union—Louie E., born here October 22, 1876. Our subject is a keen, successful huntsman, and has killed a large number of wild game. He is a member of the G. A. R.

ISAAC B. BROWN, attorney, Corry, was born February 20, 1848, in Rasselas, Penn., son of Rasselas W. (after whom the place was named) and Mary P. (Brownell) Brown, natives of New York. They were parents of six children, who received a good Christian training, with a common school education, sufficient to enable all of them to teach winters and attend the higher schools in summer. The family are—Jefferson, a civil engineer, lumberman and banker, at Wilcox, Elk County, Penn. (during the war of the rebellion he was a member of the One Hundred and Eighty-fifth Regiment New York Volunteers. He is now a Democratic member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, having served two terms); William Wallace, an attorney in Bradford, McKean Co., Penn. (he served during the late war in the Twenty-third New York Regiment, and afterward in the Pennsylvania "Bucktails," is a Representative of the Sixteenth District in Congress, having formerly served two terms in the Pennsylvania Legislature; in politics he is a Republican); Olive J., wife of S. Moyer, a school teacher; Mary A., wife of George R. Allen, of the firm of Allen & Loomis, canning business in Syracuse, N. Y.; Eunice, wife of William E. Hewitt, a farmer, and Isaac B., our subject, who received his early education at Smithport Academy. When sixteen years of age, he enlisted, in 1864, in Company C, Two Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; was present at the battles of Bermuda Hundred, Thatcher's Run, Fort Steadman and Petersburg, and was under constant fire for five months of his service. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged, and resumed his studies in the University of Alfred, from which he graduated in 1869. In 1870, our subject was married to Hannah, daughter of Richard Partington, of Providence, R. I. Two children have been born to this union—Lillian and Sarah M. Mr. Brown finished his law studies under Crosby & Brown, and was admitted to the bar of Erie City, this county, in 1877. He was elected to the legislature in the Second District of Erie County on the Republican ticket in 1880, re-elected in 1882 by the largest majority of any district candidate, has been City Clerk, is a member of the Royal Arcanum, the I. O. O. F. and Royal Templars; has been an officer in the National Guard since 1874. In politics Mr. Brown is a Republican.

J. BUNVILL, dealer in carriages, buggies, etc., Corry, was born in 1824, near Wattsburg, Venango Township, Penn., and is a son of Lewis Bunvill, a native of France, and an early settler here. He participated in the war of 1812, with Hull; his grandparents settled in Erie County in 1812. Our subject learned carpentering and contracting. He is an energetic, successful, self-made man, and has engaged in the following industries through life: From 1860 to 1881, he was in Rouseville, Venango County, and at one time operated four grocery stores, taking much pride in them; he also engaged in other enterprises, in French Creek, Chautauqua County, N. Y., for about twenty-five years, interested in lumbering, milling, grist, saw and shingle mills; he was also successful as an oil producer, engaging in same eighteen years; he was doing a general merchandising business in Corry for two or three years previous to present business, which has been established since 1880. Mr. Bunvill was united in marriage with Polly M. Phelps, who has borne him the following children: Julia, wife of William Foster, of Westfield, N. Y.; Phebe R., widow of Benjamin Barnes; Justice J., married to a Miss Berd, of Westfield; Rhoda, wife of B. W. Stennett, of Corry, and Charles Walker, born in 1869.

GEORGE CAMPBELL, proprietor of Phoenix Hotel, Corry, was born and educated in Canada; his mother's name was Hannah Campbell; his father, while going to California, died on the Isthmus of Panama, when our subject, who is the only child living, was an infant. Mrs. Hannah Campbell and her sister, Mrs. Minnie Gooch, widow of John Gooch, late merchant tailor of Biddeford, Me., are landladies of above named hotel. Our subject commenced business in Nevada, on the frontiers, and spent several years in different pursuits in the Far West. He came to Corry in 1882, and bought his present hotel, which is doing a flourishing business. Mr. Campbell has been very successful in life, and is well provided with this world's goods.

MAX CAMERON, member of the City Council, in which body he is now serving his eighth year, was born May 6, 1833, in Hornellsville, Steuben County, N. Y., son of Dugald and Ann (Taylor) Cameron; the former had been an extensive lumber dealer for years, and his father was land agent of the Poultney estate, and State Senator at an early day. Subject's mother was a native of the city of Glasgow, Scotland, and his father was born near Fort William, Scotland, and came to America soon after the war of 1812. Our subject is the youngest son living of a family of nine children, viz.: Dugald, farmer and resident of Hammondsport, N. Y., Ewing Charles (deceased), Jane (deceased), James (deceased), at one time member of the Pennsylvania and New York Legislatures; Ann (widow of Everett Chadwick); Lydia (wife of Hiram Hagadorn, of Hornellsville), and Elizabeth, also a resident of Hornellsville; our subject was educated at the common school of his native town, the high school at Crooked Lake and Friendship Academy. He married Permelia in 1856, born in New York, daughter of Charles Simons, a farmer in Allegany County, N. Y.; by this union three children have been born—Dugald Stuart (deceased), Agnes M. and Jennie Maxwell. Max Cameron was at one time engaged with the New York & Erie Railway Company as clerk, five or six years; was with a transportation company in New York City for six years; was engaged about three years in the dry goods and grocery business; has acted as Collector for the city several years; one year as Police Justice, and for the last three triennial assessments was a member of the Board of Assessors. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., Washington Lodge, No. 2. Member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been a Class Leader and teacher. In politics he is a Democrat; voted for Lincoln and Gen. Grant at his first election.

THOMAS CARROLL, shipping clerk for the N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R., Corry, was born in Dublin, Ireland, and emigrated to America when eleven years old. He has always been a railroad employe. He was section boss and watchman for the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad. Mr. Carroll has been a resident of Corry, since 1866, and as above since 1868. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the I. O. O. F.

J. P. CASPERSON, member of the Corry Bedstead Works, Corry, was born in 1851, in Denmark. He is a son of H. P. Casperson, a ship carpenter. Our subject received his education in his native land, where he has one brother and two sisters. He emigrated to America in 1870, locating at Titusville, Penn., where he completed learning the cabinet-making trade, which he had begun in Denmark. He worked as journeyman eleven years. Mr. Casperson came to Corry in 1873, and has been in business since 1882. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.

J. B. CHACE, physician and surgeon, Corry, was born September 14, 1828, in Rochester, N. Y., and is of English and Dutch descent. He is the third child and second son in a family of eleven children. One of his brothers is a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject obtained his education in the public schools of Chautauqua; read medicine with S. Brownson, of Northville, Erie County, and graduated in 1855, from the American Medical College, Cincinnati. He is also a botanist and chemist; has manufactured pharmaceutical preparations and has been for about five years in the drug business in Corry. Dr. Chace has successfully practiced his profession in Wyandot County, Ohio, five years; in Chautauqua County, N. Y., six years, and in Corry since 1862. He was married in 1852, to Sarah Ann Winslow, born in Livingston County, N. Y., in 1832, and of English and Dutch extraction. Four children have blessed this union, viz.: Francis M. (deceased), Ellen M., James W., and Emma G., who died aged seven years.

JOHN F. CHRISTIE, grocer and produce dealer, Center street, Corry, was born near Hamilton, Ontario, and is a son of John and Eliza (Mulvane) Christie, natives of Canada. The former was a carpenter by trade, working at same a number of years. He was reared in a family of thirteen children and was a member of the Episcopal Church; he died in Canada in 1861, aged thirty-eight years. Mrs. Christie came to Corry in 1865, with our subject, who was then about five years of age. Her parents settled in Canada about 1825, and reared a family of eleven children. Her father died October 14, 1858, aged seventy-four, and her mother in 1855, aged seventy-seven years. Our subject is a member of the Episcopal Church, and of the I. O. O. F., which he joined in Canada in 1879. His mother is residing with him, though she is not dependent on him, as she possesses considerable property of her own. She assists him by her experience and in helping him in the store. They keep on hand a first-class stock, and give general satisfaction to their customers.

J. A. CLARK, Corry, was born April 16, 1832, in South Ridge, near Conneaut, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, son of Abner Bradley Clark and Elvira Clark; the latter a native of Ohio, is a resident of Ashtabula, aged seventy-five, and the former died aged fifty-five, August 22, 1860. They were the parents of three boys and four girls. Two of the former and three of the latter are living. One son, a prominent merchant in Corry; died December 15, 1879. Our subject remained on his native place until eighteen years of age, when he removed to Conneautville, Penn., and learned to make the wood-work of carriages, with his father, who was an extensive manufacturer in Conneaut. He followed his trade until he located in Corry, Penn., in 1877, since which time he has engaged in mercantile pursuits. He served as Tax Collector in Conneautville one year, where he married, December 30, 1858, Maggie Rupert, born in Conneautville, Penn., May 24, 1839. Two children have blessed this union—Edwin R., engaged in the fruit business in Canada, and Lottie Clark, sixteen years old and at home.

H. CLOUGH, wagon-maker, Corry, was born April 3, 1822, in Susquehanna County, Penn. He is a son of John and Deborah Clough, both deceased. John Clough was a farmer, and died in 1855, seventy-one or seventy-two years of age. They were the parents of ten children—six boys and four girls, seven surviving. Our subject was the third son. He was reared and received his education in Wayne County, where he also learned his trade under George Warner. He worked as journeyman for a short time. In 1843, he started in business in Wyoming County, where he remained fourteen years. Mr. Clough came to Corry in 1865, where he has successfully carried on his present business. Our subject was united in marriage with Pauline Stanton, now deceased. They were the parents of two children—Elmina A., wife of William Harner, and William Decator, who died at the age of thirty-three. Mr. Clough married, for his second wife, I. F. Maynard. This union has resulted in the birth of six children. Their names are as follows: Della A., died February 20, 1884; B. F., T. M., Walter, John and Blanche, and a boy and another girl deceased. Subject and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ISAAC COLEGROVE, Mayor of Corry and farmer. The Colegrove family is descended from an ancient English ancestry. Isaac, the father of our subject, was born in Berkshire County, Mass., and married Sarah Keith, a native of Worcester County, the same State. They removed to Pennsylvania in 1835, settling on the line between Warren and Erie Counties. Here the father purchased 200 acres of land, but little improved, and, with his sons, set to work to eradicate the forests and cultivate the soil. Notwithstanding the adverse circumstances, privations and hardships that fell to the lot of almost every pioneer family, they made rapid progress, and subsequently added to their worldly possessions until a beautiful farm of about five hundred acres was theirs. The father hired a substitute for the war of 1812; was at his death, 1863, a prominent member of the Baptist Church. His union with Sarah Keith, deceased in 1863, resulted in fourteen children, all of whom grew up save one, viz.: Levisa, Ziba, Percees, Amy, Rev. Mager, Anna, Isaac, son deceased in infancy, Lawrence, Delia, Stephen, Washington, Andrew J. and Sarah. Isaac, our subject, attended the country schools about three months during the year, until fourteen years old, when his school days were no more. Until reaching his majority, he was subject to the duties required of him by his indulgent parents; not among the most irksome were his trips to mill on horseback, a distance of several miles. It was a common occurrence for the bag of corn to tip by being struck against a sapling, and force him to the ground. On one occasion the faithful farm dog accompanied Isaac on a milling trip, and accidentally discovered a "woodchuck" in a hollow tree, and the young lad, at once forgetting his errand, alighted from the horse, to assist in capturing the little animal that "Bowser" had quarantined. On his return to the horse, he found that the sack had fallen to the ground, and he, being too small to replace it, must wait until some one chanced to pass along. In about one hour a good neighbor relieved the young man from the terrible suspense, and he went on his way rejoicing. He took considerable interest in hunting, and slew quantities of wild game over the present site of Corry. At the age of twenty-one, he engaged in a saw mill at Jamestown, for Henry Baker, and at the end of four years he withdrew and continued the same at Columbus, Penn., with Luther Mather. January 11, 1846, he married Levene Tillotson, of Columbus, and at once entered actively in the improvement of 100 acres, now within the present limit of Corry, a portion of which he has sold and laid off in lots. His wife died May 29, 1882, and the only child blessing their marriage died at the age of three years. January 22, 1884, he celebrated his birthday by marrying Mrs. Winifred M. Davis a daughter of George and Margaret Adams, who removed from her native State, Kentucky, to Brown County, Illinois, when she was quite young. Here she grew up and married Moses W. Davis, who was Captain of Company D, Eighty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; he was also in the Mexican war, and participated in the great battle of Buena Vista. He was killed in the late war, and Thomas D. Adams, a brother of the present Mrs. Colegrove, was commissioned and served as Captain of the above company until he was shot at the battle of Chickamauga. Capt. Adams was a man of the most unflinching integrity and sterling worth, of purest morals and most inflexible courage. He was admired and beloved by the whole regiment, and his fall was more lamented than almost any of the noble ones who breathed their last at this ever memorable struggle. A letter bearing date February 11, 1863, to Mrs. M. W. Davis, from L. H. Waters, Colonel of the Eighty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, speaks of Capt. Davis in high commendation, saying: "No man stood higher with the entire command than did he, and we will not soon forget his many virtues. True to his Christian profession under all circumstances, uniformly kind and brave, all were his friends and none his enemies. In the terrific battle of the 31st of December, he was at his post, cheering and encouraging his men, until he was wounded and carried to the rear. Badly wounded as he was, he could not forbear visiting the regiment the next day, and was received with cheers from all." Mrs. Colegrove removed to Corry in 1865, with her two children, George and Maggie; the latter is well known as an efficient school teacher, now engaged at Bradford, Penn., and the former is engaged in the shingle business in this county. Mrs. C. is a member of the Baptist Church, and is Superintendent of the State Evangelical work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. The official positions of Isaac Colegrove have been as varied as might be expected from a man of his abilities, his extended and somewhat varied experiences, and the numerous vicissitudes of a long and active life. In addition to the position as a member of the first Council of Corry, in which capacity he has served for nine years, he has officiated as Assessor of the First Ward of Corry in 1873, 1881 and 1882, and Mayor, 1883, and is the present incumbent; his careful attention to business, showing his good natural abilities, good common sense, and careful observation and self-reliance, having merited his re-election in 1884, with no opposition. He and first wife were long connected with the Methodist Church, but at her demise held letters in the same, and he is now a Baptist. In all the varied experiences of the life of our subject he has been peculiarly fortunate, especially in possessing a well-balanced mind; of great vigor and fine physical organization and excellent health; benevolent and charitable to the extent of his means. In politics he is a Republican.

REV. MAGER COLEGROVE, farmer, Corry, was born February 15, 1818, in Otsego County, N. Y. He was reared in his native place, and came to Corry in 1835. Mr. Colegrove began teaching when only sixteen years old, which occupation he subsequently followed for a number of years. He devoted fifteen years of his life to the ministry, beginning in the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1857. Our subject was united in marriage in July, 1840, in Oswego County, with Huldah Colegrove, born in same county, November 25, 1822. They had a family of five children, two dying in infancy. Those surviving are Derias M., Arthur D. and Albert Ernest (twins). (See sketches.) Mr. M. Colegrove owns 170 acres of land, on which he has always resided. He is highly respected by all who know him, and is a valuable citizen and a kind parent. Mr. Colegrove is temperate in all things.

D. N. COLEGROVE, residing on the old homestead, Corry, was born in Concord Township (now city of Corry), April 3, 1848, and is a son of Rev. Mager and Huldah (Colegrove) Colegrove (see sketch above). Our subject was educated in the common school, and in 1864 began to learn printing. He was united in marriage, in 1866, with Laura, born May 21, 1845, the eldest daughter of William Dunham, of Corry. Two children have been born to this union—Everett Ransom, born in Titusville, October 26, 1872, and Bertha May, born in Corry, March 6, 1877. During the years 1869 and 1870, Mr. Colegrove published the Pleasantville, Venango County, Evening News; subsequently was city editor of the Corry Daily Republican; Titusville Sunday News; and of the Titusville Morning Herald. He published the Corry Local News in 1876, and was afterward city editor of Corry Herald, and also of the Corry Evening Press. Mr. Colegrove for the last three years has been engaged in farming. He is better known throughout the oil regions as "Coley," author of "Coley's Encyclopedia and Dictionary of Corry."

A. D. COLEGROVE, twin brother of A. E. Colegrove, was born December 9, 1855, in Concord, Erie County, within present boundary of Corry, Penn., and is a son of Rev. Mager and Huldah (Colegrove) Colegrove (see sketch). Our subject attended the country school and worked on a farm until sixteen years of age; then attended high school in Corry, from which he graduated in 1876, and from the Allegheny College in 1881. He taught two years in the high school, after graduation from college, and one year previous (1878-79). He took an active part in the Independent movement of 1882, and was President of the Independent Republican organization of Corry. June 7, 1883, Mr. Colegrove was elected City Superintendent of schools to fill the unexpired term of V. H. Curtis:

A. E. COLEGROVE, twin brother of subject of above sketch, was born December 9, 1855, and is a son of Rev. Mager and Huldah (Colegrove) Colegrove. Like his brother, he attended the country school and worked on a farm until sixteen years of age. Our subject graduated from the high school in 1876, and from the Allegheny College in 1880. He taught school in Dickenson Seminary, Williamsport, Penn.; preached about one year, and was a member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church. August, 1883, he accepted the position he now holds, of Principal of the Emlenton Academy, Emlenton, Penn. Mr. Colegrove was united in marriage in December, 1881, with Margaret McCullough, of Clearfield, Penn. This union has been blessed with one son—Arthur Chreighton.

WILLIAM COULTER, dealer in tin and glass ware (established in May, 1883), Corry, was born in Darlington, county of Durham, England, where he was educated. He left his native place when sixteen years old, and learned the trade of tanner and currier, at which he has worked at various places very successfully. He commenced in his present business (working for another party three years), then came to Corry, and is now running, in connection with the above, six peddling wagons. Mr. Coulter was united in marriage with Maggie Crawford, of Waterloo, Canada. Seven children have been born to this union, viz., Anna Jane, Ella May, Minnie, Willie, Beatrice, Harry and Eddie.

C. L. COVELL, attorney at law, Corry, was born March 3, 1849, in Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. His father was of English, Scotch and Irish, and his mother of English extraction. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and attended the district schools from six to fifteen years of age, and then attended school at Corry for eighteen months, finishing his education at Westfield Academy, Westfield, N. Y., where he remained about one year. Mr. Covell read law in Corry with Hon. C. O. Bowman, commencing in January, 1871, and was admitted to the bar March 27, 1873, at Erie City, since which time he has been successfully practicing his profession in Corry. On March 19, 1873, Mr. Covell was married, at Eden Center, Erie Co., N. Y., to Louisa Rathburn, born of English parentage, July 9, 1849, at Buffalo, N. Y. To this union have been born two children, viz., Alvah W., born at Corry, June 14, 1874, and Flora E., born also in Corry, August 6, 1877. Our subject was one of the founders of Corry City Iron Works, established in 1879; he is one of the charter members of the Northwestern Oil Company, established in 1881; is also an extensive real estate owner.

MANLEY CROSBY, attorney at law, office on Center street, Corry, was born in Franklinville, N. Y., March 12, 1834, son of Alanson and Cornelia (Wright) Crosby, both of English descent, the latter a native of Connecticut; the former born in New York, was an architect and house builder, but in later life a farmer. Our subject obtained his education in New York, in 1854 graduating from the State Normal School, Albany, N. Y. He then attended John W. Fowler's Law School, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., graduating in 1858; then was a year in the office of Judge David H. Bolles, of Ellicottville, N. Y. He was admitted to the bar in Buffalo, N. Y., May, 1859; became partner of Judge Bolles, with whom he remained until 1864. In 1865, he came to Corry as solicitor for the Oil Creek Railroad, and served as such for fifteen years. In 1870, Hon. W. W. Brown became his partner, continuing such for eight years. Mr. Brown is now a Member of Congress from McKean County District, Penn., elected by the Republican vote. Mr. Crosby has been Mayor of the city of Corry two terms. He was united in marriage in 1863 with Frances S. Clarke, youngest daughter of Staley N. Clarke, of Ellicottville, who was agent for the Holland Land Company for many years, was a Member of Congress one term in 1840; he departed this life in 1860. To this union have been born Clarke (deceased in 1876, in his thirteenth year), Walter Hull and Willie G., both members of the senior class, high school; Theodore S. and Alanson. Mrs. Crosby is a consistent member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Crosby is Past Master in the Masonic order, is also a member of the K. of H., United Workmen and Royal Arcanum societies. His grandfather participated in Hull's surrender in the war of 1812.

P. N. CROSS, grocer, Corry, was born September 24, 1840, in Panama, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and was reared and educated in his native county. He started in Venango County, Penn., in the grocery business in 1862, where he remained till 1877, when he engaged in farming about three years; he then came to Corry and carried on the wholesale and retail crockery business for two years, since which time he has been engaged in groceries. His partner, the first four years, was William Hooker, and then for five years the firm was Cross & Case. Mr. Cross was united in marriage October 11, 1865, with Lucy A. Case, born August 29, 1837, in French Creek, N. Y. They have been the parents of two children, both deceased, viz., Mary Z., born in 1866, died June 6, 1869; and Fred H., born March 27, 1871, and died August 17, 1871. Our subject and wife are members of the Baptist Church; the former is a member of the I. O. O. F., and also of the A. O. U. W.

E. D. DALTON, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Cloneen, County Kilkenny, Ireland, July 13, 1826; son of Peter and Anna (Durney) Dalton, the former of whom died in Ireland in 1837, aged fifty-two years, and the latter in Pennsylvania in 1871, aged seventy-three years. A brother of our subject died at the age of thirteen. E. D. was educated in Ireland, and came to America at the age of twenty-four. He was married in Ireland in 1846 to Ellen Grant, born there January 1, 1819, daughter of James and Joanna (Grant) Grant, both deceased, the former in 1870 and the latter in 1853. They were the parents of twelve children, six living. Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Dalton are the parents of six children—Anna, widow of Thomas Bates; Joanna, wife of Addison Patterson; Peter (deceased), Stachie, Mary (deceased), and James, married to Estella Kennedy, of Wayne.

Our subject owns ninety-two and a half acres of land within the city limits. He makes a specialty of blooded stock. In politics, he is a Republican.

H. A. DART, clerk in the freight office of New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad at Corry, was born in Columbus, Chenango Co., N. Y., moving when three years old to Hamilton, N. Y. He obtained his education at the Hubbardsville Academy and at the Madison University. Mr. Dart has been employed as above nineteen years; previously was in baggage room and ticket office from August, 1864, during which time he was also acting as baggage master for the N. & O. Railroad. In 1870, Mr. Dart was united in marriage with M. A. Cook, born in St. Clairville, N. Y., daughter of T. B. Cook, a prominent business man, who built the first theater in Corry in the year 1865. Mrs. Dart departed this life in 1870.

J. B. DAVIS, insurance agent, Corry, was born at Youngsville, Warren Co., Penn., January 21, 1846, and, in addition to his early education at the common schools, received a thorough commercial training at Bryant & Stratton's Mercantile College. For six years our subject was engaged as drug clerk at Warren, Penn., for F. H. Randall; then one year in Corry in drug business with W. A. Roe (now deceased); after this, engaged in insurance business for sixteen years; one year in grocery business, a member of the firm of Miller & Davis. Mr. Davis was twice married, first to Sarah A., daughter of John Edsall, of Newark, N. J. By this union there was one child—Foster E. Davis. The mother is deceased. Mr. Davis next married Mattie A. Turbett, born in 1852. He and his wife are members of the Emanuel Episcopal Church, in which Mr. Davis has taken a very active interest, and has held the position of Junior Warden for several years; he is also a well-advanced Mason, and has held several important positions. He was also instrumental in helping form the Board of Trade of Corry, and has held the position of Director and Vice President in said board.

D. E. DE ROSS, physician and surgeon, Corry, was born in Crawford County, Penn., June 2, 1845, son of Alexandria De Ross, a surgeon of Philadelphia, Penn., a native of Paris, who came to Crawford County, Penn., in the year 1826, dying March 20, 1864, from the effects of an injury received from a runaway team; he was the seventh son in his family, of whom six brothers and his father died of the yellow fever in 1805. Our subject is also the seventh son in his family, in which there was only one girl; five of his brothers served in different regiments in the army, one of whom was killed at Hatcher's Run in 1865. D. E. De Ross was reared on a farm, where he remained until he was sixteen years of age, attending the district school. From then until his eighteenth year he was in Meadville College, graduating in 1863. In March of the same year, he became Superintendent of a female college in Johnson County, Mo., at the same time acting as First Lieutenant of the Home Guards; in July (same year), he became Surgeon in the Fifth Missouri Cavalry. At the expiration of a year, he became Hospital Steward of the Second Missouri Light Artillery, which position he filled from April, 1864, to November 28, 1865. In July of the latter year, he became Surgeon of a brigade in an expedition against the Indians. Going from Elkhorn, Neb., through the West, they were attacked by a large party of Indians, and lost several hundred men, besides suffering from hunger and thirst. They were forty-two days on Powder River and Yellowstone, during which time they subsisted on mule meat; they went to Salt Lake, Denver, Colo., and finally to St. Louis, where they were mustered out. Our subject again taught school for three months. He then returned home, and attended the university at Philadelphia one winter; he then went to the United States Medical College in New York for a year, graduating in 1869. The following year he spent in the South, still in pursuit of knowledge. He was in the medical field from 1870 to 1873. Mr. De Ross was married, June 19, 1873, to M. M. Royal, of Kinsman, Trumbull Co., Ohio, who was born May 26, 1848. This union has resulted in two children—M. La Roy, born June 17, 1876, in Corry, Penn., and Lura E., born in Corry, Penn., January 20, 1882, died April 2, 1883. Our subject was at one time a resident of Cincinnati, practicing his profession, and also graduating in the Eclectic Medical College January 26, 1875. He came to Corry, Penn., April 26, 1875, and has since been actively engaged in his profession. He is President of the State Eclectic Medical Association of Pennsylvania, and Secretary of the Northwestern Eclectic Medical Association.

M. WARREN DILLINGHAM, minister, Corry, was born in Boston, Mass., September 18, 1836, and is a son of Moses and Eliza Dillingham; the former, a sea captain, was of English parentage, and the latter was a native of Massachusetts, of Scotch and English lineage. Our subject was partly educated in Boston, and graduated from the Lawrence Academy, Massachusetts. Mr. Dillingham read theology with E. F. Crane, studied Latin and Greek languages at Little Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y., and elocation in 1879 in Boston. He was ordained to the ministry in 1875, at Stratford, N. Y., where he spent two years; he was converted at the age of thirty-eight years. He followed his profession two years at Northville, Fulton Co., N. Y., one year in Boston, and in 1880 came to Corry, where he succeeded Dr. Crane, since which time he has been actively engaged here. Mr. Dillingham was united in marriage by Rev. Father Taylor, in Boston, with Julia A. Ross, a native of New Hampshire, born September 26, 1838. Four children have been born to this union—Mary E., Warren Edson, Carrie A. and Anna L.

ED. DILLINGHAM, of the firm of Dillingham & Fisher, fruits, canned goods and oysters, wholesale and retail, corner Center and South streets, Corry, was born in Boston, Mass., and is a son of the Rev. W. Dillingham, of the First Baptist Church. Our subject was educated in Amsterdam, N. Y., where he lived about six years. He spent one year teaching, and was book-keeper for A. B. Long, retail grocer, Boston. Subsequently he spent three or four years in Corry as salesman with Nathaniel Stone, Cross & Case, and Sullivan & Jones. He engaged in business for himself in November, 1881, taking a third interest in the firm of Conner, White & Dillingham, and since September, 1882, as above. Mr. Dillingham was secretly united in marriage, April 14, 1882, with Viola L., daughter of John Beebe, of Corry, Penn. After their marriage they remained in their respective homes for a year, but are now happily united. This clandestine match was the source of much sensational newspaper notice at the time.

E. H. DIVER, bakery, established 1865, Corry, was born in Albany, where he was reared and partly learned his trade, which he afterward completed in New York. He followed this trade in N. Y. State, Albany and Brockford. Mr. Diver was a pioneer of Corry, coming here eighteen years ago, when it was covered with forests, and has witnessed its transformation into a thriving city, with a population of 6,000 souls. He has been very successful, and, by close attention to his business and good financiering, has accumulated a comfortable competency. Mr. Diver married, in Monroe County, N. Y., Prudence Griffiths, by whom he had six children, four deceased; the surviving are Walter Stephen and Sarah Jane. Mr. Diver is a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance and of the Foresters.

CAPT. EDWARD DOW, retired seaman, Corry, was born March 19, 1804, near Portsmouth, N. H., and is a son of Benjamin Dow, a tanner by trade. Our subject began when sixteen years of age to lead a seafaring life, engaging in codfishing two-thirds of the year for about twenty years. Capt. Dow farmed from 1852 to 1855 in New York State. He came to Corry twenty-nine years ago, when it was a swamp. Our subject has been twice married, his first wife being Miss Thompson. His second marriage occurred twenty-eight years ago, March 22, 1856, with Harriet Wyatt, born October 13, 1829, in England, and came to America when twenty-six years of age. Two children were born to this union—Mary and Dora.

PETER DREYER, member of the Corry Bed Manufacturing Company, Corry, was born February 4, 1848, in Denmark, where he was raised and learned the cabinet-making trade. He came to America in 1867, locating in New York for a short time; thence went to Jamestown, N. Y., and has been in Corry nine years. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1876, with Anna Hintze. They are the parents of four children, viz.: Maggie, Charles, Abiha and Robert.

G. A. ELSTON, physician and surgeon, Corry, son of M. W. Elston, and fourth of a family of eight children, was born at Mount Salem, Sussex Co., N. J., April 12, 1855, and was reared on his father's farm, attending the district school for his primary education, and afterward the high school at Deckertown, N. J. In 1875, the Doctor commenced the study of medicine with Dr. E. Potts at home, continuing with him for two years; he then attended the University College, New York, in 1878-79, and in 1880 received his diploma. After this he spent one year at Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., and commenced the practice of his profession in August, 1881.

B. ELLSWORTH, City Surveyor, Corry, is a son of Jeremiah Ellsworth, at one time Mayor of Corry, also City Councilman, and who died in 1880, when nearly eighty years old. Three of his sons have held Government offices. Our subject, B. Ellsworth, in addition to above business, is also Government Gauger; previously, for three and a half years, he was Secretary of the School Board, when only twenty-seven years of age. He was Assistant Doorkeeper, then Sergeant-at-Arms, and in 1853-54 was an officer in the Legislature. While in Chautauqua County, N. Y., he served as Recording Clerk nine years and County Treasurer three; then was engaged as Assistant Treasurer of Cross-Cut Railroad. Mr. Ellsworth has been a resident of Corry since 1862.

C. B. ELY, book-keeper, Corry City Iron Works, Corry, was born in Stockton, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. He was reared in his native place, attending district school, and Jamestown Academy for one winter. Mr. Ely first clerked for a few years; then commenced the grocery business in Corry as Ely & Allis, at which he continued six years; was also in the dry goods business two years, firm of Clark & Ely. He has been with the present company one year. Mr. Ely was united in marriage with Grace G. Horton, of Stockton, N. Y., daughter of Samuel G. Horton, a prominent farmer of Corry. To this union was born, April, 1883, in Corry, one child, Ralph Ormes, a namesake of subject's deceased half brother, Ralph Ely, who was a Brigadier General during the late war of the rebellion, and who also held other positions of trust.

J. A. FARNHAM, of the firm of J. A. Farnham & Co., proprietors of planing mill, and dealers in all kinds of building material, Corry, was born in Wayne Township, Erie Co., Penn., September 22, 1841, son of Walter and Rhoda (Turner) Farnham, of English descent. The former was one of the early settlers in this section, and is still living at the patriarchal age of ninety-two. When our subject was six months old, he moved with his parents to French Creek, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where he was reared to farming life and educated at the log schoolhouse. In 1862, he enlisted, serving throughout the rebellion. He was wounded three times, at Gettysburg, Dug's Gap and on the Altona Mountains during Sherman's march through Atlanta. Our subject, on being discharged, settled in Corry, and followed his trade as contractor and builder until 1880, when he embarked in his present business. In April, 1866, Mr. Farnham married Louise E. Hall, born in Addison County, Vt., September, 1842. By this union there are two children—Nellie and George H. T.

WILLIAM S. FOX, Smith street, Manager of Western Union Telegraph office, Corry, was born May 11, 1850, at Cold Spring, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and is a son of George A. and Margaret Fox, who moved to Randolph, N. Y., in 1852. Our subject attended the Randolph Academy until fifteen years old, then learned telegraphy, and was employed by the N. Y., P. & A. R. R. Company at Randolph, Salamanca, Jamestown and other points until his eighteenth year, when he came to Corry for the same company. In 1879, he was appointed to his present position. Mr. Fox was united in marriage, September, 1876, with Rose, daughter of John Page, of Ramsgate, England. Two children have been born to this union—Georgia Newport and Margaret.

W. A. FRANK, general detective for railroad companies, Corry, was born in Woodstock, Ulster Co., N. Y., son of Luther and Margaret (Desmond) Frank, the former a native of Germany, the latter born in Baltimore, Md.; both are now deceased. Our subject was reared and educated in Fredonia, and lived with his father until twenty-five years of age. He has been a detective twenty years, and in Corry since 1869, where for six or seven years he was Chief of the police force. He is now altogether employed by the railroad companies, and spends his whole time traveling from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh and Erie on the P. & E. R. R., and on the N. Y., L. E. & W. from Corry to Salamanca and Bradford, thence west to transfer. He at one time had an agency, with men under him stationed at several points in New York and Pennsylvania. Mr. Frank was married, at Pomfret, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., April 15, 1851, to Desire M. Tarbox. Four children have been born to this union—Louisa M., married to William Rhodes, of Corry, June 10, 1880, died May 18, 1883, aged thirty-one years; Edward P., born in Pomfret, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and died November 29, 1856, aged two and a half years; Henry A., farrier in Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y.; and Ellen J., residing at home.

DANIEL D. FRANKLIN, M. D., Corry, was born April 4, 1813, in Chili Township, Monroe Co., N. Y. His father, Asa Franklin (descended from Dr. Benjamin Franklin), was a distinguished cavalryman in the war of 1812—one of the brave men who lay in the trenches at the blowing up of Fort Erie, Canada, while the British were storming it. His mother, now in her ninetieth year, was the daughter of Uriah Chapman, a soldier in the revolutionary war, who, though shot by the Indians, managed to escape by chewing leaves and plugging the ball hole, which ball he carried through a long life. Daniel D. Franklin is the elder brother of the late Col. F. E. Franklin, of Tiffin, Ohio, who served all through the late war, at the close of which he located at Yazoo, Miss., where he became Probate and Circuit Judge, and finally Speaker of the House of Representatives for his adopted State, at the close of which he died of congestive chills. In 1820, Dr. Franklin's father removed to Cattaraugus County, N. Y., which was then a wilderness. Up to 1831, our subject's education was limited to the district school. He was self-supported and educated, struggling with the realities of life as best he could. In 1840, he married Perthena Adams, a daughter of Morris Adams, of Fredonia, N. Y., and descended from the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. Our subject's health failing from too close attention to business, in 1846, he began the study of medicine, to which he earnestly applied himself until 1849, when he entered the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio. After two terms, he graduated in 1850, and removed to Tiffin, Ohio, where he commenced to practice as an eclectic and homœopathic physician. Believing the latter to be the most rational theory, he uses it almost exclusively in his practice. While at Tiffin, where he practiced three years, he removed the largest ovarian tumor known to the medical world; weight, fifty-three pounds eight ounces, and in circumference, three and one-half and four and one-half feet. He left this field to his brother, F. E. Franklin, of whom mention has been made, and who studied medicine with the subject of this sketch. The latter returned to Fredonia, N. Y., built a water cure, and ran it for three years in connection with homœopathy. He sold it and migrated with his family to Iowa, where he helped to build the city of Northwood, and lived in it for four years. Removing to Ohio, thence to Illinois, he remained for several years in the miasmatic districts bordering on the prairie streams, treating fevers of all types with great success. In 1864, he was appointed delegate by the Christian Commission, and sent to Washington, D. C., where he was assigned to duty in the old Armory Hospital, and went thence to City Point, Va., where he was engaged as contract physician in the general hospital until he was compelled to leave on account of sickness brought on by overwork in the hot month of August. In 1870, he came to Corry, where he, with his wife and son, S. J., now resides. Dr. Franklin is (1883) seventy years of age, but as active and vigorous as ever, which can be attributed to his being strictly temperate in all things, and has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church over fifty years. His practice is large, lucrative and successful. He is the inventor and manufacturer of Dr. Franklin's Catarrh Balm, which has a wide reputation and extensive sale, solely upon its merits. Dr. D. D. Franklin was the father of seven children, all dying in infancy excepting his son, S. J., Superintendent and Acting Treasurer of Corry Gas & Water Company.

S. J. FRANKLIN, Superintendent Corry Gas & Water Company, Corry, Penn., also General Manager of Warren Gas Light Company, Warren, Penn., was born in 1854, in Fredonia, N. Y., and is a son of Dr. D. D. and Perthena (Adams) Franklin (see sketch of former). Our subject moved from his native place to Iowa, subsequently to Ohio, Illinois and finally to Pennsylvania, coming to Corry in 1870, and graduated from the high school in 1873. He built up a fine trade in gas fixtures, fittings, and the hot water system of heating houses, etc., successfully demonstrating the feasibility of the same at the Corry National Bank, Washington Street School, M. Manville's residence, and in his own, which are all heated in this manner. He has the entire control of Corry Gas Works and Warren Gas Light Company; has been Superintendent of the former nine years, and of the latter four. Our subject was but twenty years of age when he married a daughter of Ira S. Murray, and after three years of happiness lost his wife and a bright little daughter. Three years later Mr. Franklin was again united in marriage, this time to Miss Carrie Stevens, a niece of Mrs. S. W. Steward. Mr. Franklin, while yet (1883) less than thirty years of age, has been a very energetic and successful business man.

JACOB FRÄNZ, dealer in furniture, carpets, wall papers and window curtains, also undertaker, Corry, was born October 16, 1840, in Lampertheim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, son of Casper and Barbara (Alberstadt) Franz, former of whom, a merchant tailor, died March 3, 1843. Our subject came to Erie County, Penn., in 1852, residing in Erie City ten years, and there he went to school and learned the mason's and plasterer's trades with his uncle, D. Shiely. Abandoning this, he then entered the molding department of a stove foundry, which, owing to the financial crash of 1857, was closed up for three years. This caused our subject to make another change. He next served a three years' apprenticeship to the cabinet-maker's trade with J. H. Riblet, Erie City; then worked for a short time for Mr. Chamberlin, Union City, this county, and again with Mr. Riblet for a brief period. In the fall of 1862, Mr. Franz went to Titusville, Crawford County, Penn., and worked for Mr. Allen, cabinet-maker. On December 18, same year, he moved to Corry and embarked in the furniture trade in partnership with D. Shiely. This partnership was dissolved in 1870, and our subject continued the business alone, associating with it that of undertaker. Mr. Franz has now a handsome establishment, which represents the most extensive of his line of business in the county. The building is 30x80 feet area, three stories and a basement, all of which is occupied with the immense stock carried. Though a native of Germany, Mr. Franz has been identified with Corry almost since its birth, and is one of the pioneers of trade. He was married, October 11, 1870, to a daughter of Valentine and Margaret (Haburn) Barron, of McKean Township, this county, where they settled in 1836, former a native of Germany, latter of Scotland.

REV. ALONZO FRINK, Corry, was born in Springfield, Mass., in 1799, and reared to manhood in Madison County, N. Y.; at seventeen, he commenced teaching, and at thirty-two entered the ministry. Mr. Frink is now eighty-five years old; has been a resident of Corry for twelve years, and is well acquainted with all the details of its early settlement, and remembers when it was a swamp. Mr. Frink says "the building of Corry resulted from its being the central point of the railroads, giving it advantages of transportation, east, west, north and south, and it is destined to be a large town if rightly managed."

F. H. GAY, dealer in fine groceries and jobber in butter, cheese and eggs, corner of First avenue and Pleasantstreet, Corry, Penn., was born in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., August 23, 1837. Reared on his father's farm, and educated at Erie City Academy and finished his education at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1862. Mr. Gay was baggage agent for the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad at Corry from 1863 to 1874. During the same period served as city official (Police Justice) five years, High Constable two years. In 1875, bought out a meat market on First avenue, which he ran for six years successfully, during some of which time he bought and shipped to Philadelphia market stock to a large amount. After which he was one year in the grocery business. Has been elected to the City Council for four successive years. Mr. Gay was married in 1860. His children are Frank H. Gay, Jr., and Bell Gay. He was married again in 1873 to his present wife.

LEWIS R. GEER, of the firm of Geer & Co., Corry, was born in Warren, Warren Co., Penn., February 25, 1818, and is a son of John Geer, born in Susquehanna County March 8, 1791, and who came to Warren County in 1808. He was a farmer, lumberman and pilot on the Allegheny River. He died near Warren, aged ninety-one years and one day, one of the most honest, industrious and peaceable men that ever lived in Warren County. Although a lumberman on the river, he was an exceedingly strong man, but never had a fight. He was the father of seven children, five surviving. Our subject is by trade a harness-maker, which occupation he commenced in 1834 and followed for about eighteen years; subsequently was about five years in mercantile business at Warren, Penn., and farmed five years. He followed the Allegheny River as pilot from Warren to Pittsburgh. Mr. Geer has been a resident of Corry since 1864, devoting about seven years to the harness business at St. Petersburg, and was three years in Bradford. In 1879, Geer & Co. began to manufacture cigars under present firm name, succeeding J. M. Turner. The business was established in 1873. The firm employ about twenty-five hands, and are manufacturing over a million cigars annually. Our subject was twice married, first to Nancy Nesmith, sister of the banker Nesmith, of Warren, who died in Warren, July, 1843. Two children were born to this union—J. B., of Corry, and J. W., of Warren, Penn. Mr. Geer's second wife is Lura A. Cogswell, of Warren, Penn. Two children have blessed this union—Capt. E. N., who is in the firm with his father, and travels through Pennsylvania and New York State (see sketch); and Hattie M., wife of C. Porter, proprietor of the Railroad Dining Hall, Corry, Penn. Our subject is a strictly moral and temperate man, not known from childhood to have used a profane curse or oath, nor to have taken one drink of spirituous liquor, nor ever gambled in any way, nor ever had a fight, although very athletic, more so than the common run of men. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church about forty years, also a member of a Lodge of I. O. O. F.

CAPT. E. N. GEER, of the firm of Geer & Co., Corry, was born January 9, 1846, in Warren, Warren County, Penn., and is a son of Lewis R. and Lura A. (Cogswell) Geer. Our subject came to Corry from Warren, September, 1864. He learned the harness trade from his father, L. R. Geer. He engaged in harness business for himself in 1869, continuing in same until the fall of 1873, when he disposed of his stock and engaged with Dr. J. M. Davies in the insurance business as managers for the State of Pennsylvania, for Protection Life Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill. He discontinued his connection with Davies in the fall of 1874, and commenced traveling, selling cigars for J. M. Turner, Corry, Penn., until the death of the latter, January, 1879, when, in connection with his father, he purchased the cigar manufactory of J. M. Turner, deceased, from the administrator, F. A. Allen, and has since continued doing a successful business. In June, 1871, he organized the Huydekoper Rifles, and was commissioned Captain by Gov. John W. Geary, served under Maj. Gen. H. S. Huydekoper, headquarters Meadville, Penn. Business so interfered with the Captain's military service that he concluded for the good of the service to resign in the spring of 1874. While in command, his company was recognized as one of the best disciplined in the division. October 15, 1880, the Captain organized Corry City Lodge, No. 470, Knights of Pythias. He was elected Past Chancellor, and Representative to the Grand Lodge, Pennsylvania. His valued services have been so appreciated by Corry City Lodge that he has been unanimously re-elected every year since its organization. Our subject married, April 9, 1868, Fannie, daughter of Thomas and Lausia Blackburn, the former a prominent jeweler in Frankford, Penn. Mrs. Geer was born October 24, 1850. By this union there has been one son—Lynford E., born February 17, 1869.

EDWARD N. GIFFORD, dentist, Corry, was born in North Collins, Erie Co., N. Y., September 1, 1838, son of Giles and Anise (Reynolds) Gifford, the former of English, the latter of Scotch descent. Our subject was reared on a farm, brought up to the Quaker persuasion, and educated at the common and high schools of Collins and Gowanda, N. Y. There he learned his profession with Dr. McMillan, and practiced in Eden, N. Y., and North Collins for about three years, coming to Corry June 1, 1864. He also taught school four years. Mr. Gifford was married, October 8, 1862, to Maria Wilson, born May 24, 1838, daughter of Joseph Wilson. To this union have been born two children—Blanche and Grace. Mr. Gifford is a member of Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery; has acted two years as Master and five years as High Priest.

GEORGE D. GILBERT, of Corry City Iron Works, Corry, was born July 23, 1848, in Pomfret, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. where he spent the first ten years of his life. His grandparents on his mother's side were early settlers of Erie County, Penn., coming here from Vermont in 1825, and on his father's side, his grandparents settled in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1810, coming from Connecticut, all being farmers, and of the whole family our subject is the only one who has chosen a profession. Mr. G. D. Gilbert well remembers the first locomotive that went to Dunkirk, N. Y., as it led to his being a mechanical engineer. He continued the study of this profession five years, beginning when fourteen years of age. He obtained his education in the district school of Chautauqua, which he attended six years; in the district school of Concord, where he was one year; in Erie County, Penn., where he was another year, and in the public schools of Corry, Penn., which he attended seven years, finishing when eighteen years old. He spent two years civil engineering in Middle Tennessee, a portion of his time in Erie, Crawford, Warren and McKean Counties. In 1873, he became a member of present firm, with P. I. Lynch, and erected the first boiler shops. In 1882, the capital of the company was increased by admitting C. L. Covell and D. A. Cypher. During the summer of 1882, Mr. Gilbert invented and put into use the first Gladiator agricultural engine and boiler, to which he had devoted about four months, and which he claims to be superior to anything of the kind in use, being from one-third to one-half lighter. In the summer of 1883, he made sixteen, which are in use in different localities. Our subject was married in Corry, Penn., April 4, 1877, to Cora M. Gates, born in Silver Creek, N. Y., November 13, 1860. Two children have resulted from this union—Velma E., born June 19, 1879, and Mattie M., born January 13, 1882. Mr. Gilbert spent two months in the fall of 1880 in the West, working successfully in the interests of the Novelty Iron Works. He is a member of the Board of Trade, which he joined in the fall of 1881, a few weeks after its organization.

O. E. GLEASON, Postmaster, Corry, Penn., was born February 4, 1838, in West Haven, Vt.; until fourteen years of age, he was brought up on his father's farm, and attended the district school. About 1854, he moved to Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, and farmed for a number of years; thence to Girard, Erie Co., Penn., where he continued the same occupation, and was united in marriage, November, 1859, with M. A., daughter of S. F. Stone, of Girard. Our subject came to Corry, October, 1863, and has since occupied different positions on the Oil Creek Railroad. He served fourteen years as conductor, engaging at the same time in other enterprises, outside of railroading. He was connected with the Corry Furniture Factory from the time it was first founded up to the time it was burned some three years ago, and was one of the stockholders in the handle factory, being instrumental in its starting. Mr. Gleason helped to build the Crosby Block, which was burned in 1874. He has been a member of the City Council, and is at present Postmaster, which position he has held for the past seven years.

W. P. HALL, grocer, on West Wayne and Smith streets, Corry, established September, 1882. Our subject was born in Warren County in 1843, and is a son of Erastus (deceased) and Mary (Wheeler) Hall, a resident of Corry, Penn. W. P. Hall was a member of Company A, Fourteenth Michigan Regiment, enlisting in 1861 and serving until the close of the war. He was shot in the ankle by a minie ball at Jonesboro, Ga. He was wounded about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and remained until 10 on the battle-field, then was hauled in a wagon to Atlanta, where he remained about a week; thence to Chattanooga. Mr. Hall had to walk with the aid of crutches for nine months, and is still lame from this wound, and for which he receives a pension. His half-brother, Edwin Akin, and his brother Wheeler, were with our subject during the war, but all came through safely. Mr. Hall, July 4, 1866, married Jennie Love, born in Warren County, December 1, 1848. Two children were born to this union—Freddie, born April 27, 1875, and Pearl, a sweet, promising child, born March 15, 1879, died December 12, 1881. During the oil excitement in 1865, our subject spent seven years in Pit Hole and Edinboro, then farmed about ten years in Waterford, Erie Co., Penn. Mr. Hall owns the property in which he has his business; he is a self-made man, possessing good business qualifications. He is a member of the G. A. R.

E. A. HAMMOND, farmer, P. O. Corry, was born October 10, 1827, in Monroe County, N. Y., son of Paul and Abigail (Spear) Hammond. He was educated at the common schools and selected farming for a life occupation. Mr. Hammond was married, July 5, 1852, to Emeline S., daughter of Elisha and Mary C. (Brown) Clark. To this union were born two children—Ernest W. and Clark E. Mr. Hammond has been School Director, Assessor (three terms) and is now a Road Commissioner; was at one time a K. of H.; in politics, is an Independent. He is owner of seventy-two acres of land, all well improved by his own labor.

C. G. HARMON, Cashier Corry National Bank, was born in Ellicottsville, N. Y., March 24, 1838, and is a son of E. Harmon and Caroline (Goodspeed) Harmon, the latter of Olean, N. Y., the former, of English extraction, a lawyer of Ellicottsville. Our subject was reared on a farm, and received an ordinary education in the district school. He chose banking as an occupation, and in 1856 commenced with Harmon, Chamberlain & Co., Ellicottsville, and remained until July, 1857, when he became assistant in the Cuba State Bank, Judge B. Chamberlain, of Randolph, N. Y., President. In 1858, Mr. Harmon went to Allegany and engaged in merchandising with his father, firm name E. Harmon & Son. He engaged as book-keeper with Stowell, Chamberlain & Co., bankers of Olean, N. Y., from 1859 to 1861. In December, 1862, he joined as First Lieutenant, Company H, Thirty-seventh New York Regiment. In the fall of 1863, Mr. Harmon returned to the Cuba Bank, where he was employed as book-keeper until April, 1864, thence to Elmira, N. Y., where he was paying teller in the First National Bank. Our subject came to Corry, and was instrumental in organizing the Corry National Bank, November 4, 1864, of which he has since been cashier. Mr. Harmon was united in marriage, August 1, 1868, at Corry, with Mary Patterson, born 1843 at Sugar Grove, Warren Co., Penn. She is a daughter of James and Mary C. Patterson, of English-Scotch and Irish lineage respectively. Two children have blessed this union—Mary P., born August 15, 1869, and C. G. Harmon, Jr., November 12, 1882. Mr. Harmon has served as City Treasurer seven years, School Treasurer six years, and has been Treasurer of Phoenix Mill Company since its organization; is Treasurer of the American Writing Machine Company, and also a member of the firm of Harmon, Gibbs & Co., manufacturers of engines, established about 1876. Mr. Harmon is connected with a number of societies. He is a charter member and Treasurer of Clarence Commandery, No. 51; is Treasurer of the Knights of Honor and of the Columbus Chapter, No. 200. He is also connected with the United Workmen; Southern Tier Masonic Association, Elmira, N. Y.; Equitable Association, Columbus, Penn.; and N. W. Aid Association, Chicago; United States Mutual Accident Association.

JOHN L. HATCH, farmer and dealer in stock and real estate, Corry, was born in Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., December 14, 1831, and is a son of Elisha and Sylvia (Edson) Hatch, both deceased. They came to Wayne Township, in this county, in 1841, and were the parents of seven children—Mary E., Fidelia, Edwin, Charles, Sylvia, John L. and Harriet. Fidelia married A. I. Kennedy in Columbus, Penn. Harriet married James Kershaw in Sherburn, N. Y. The boys only are now living. Our subject came to Corry May 8, 1862, and has been twice married, first, on August 28, 1861, to Lucina Mead, daughter of Darius and Bridget Mead, of Corry. She was born June 3, 1838, and lived a most exemplary member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and died April 28, 1869. Three children blessed this union, the elder, Minnie G., wife of W. H. Bowman, now at Allentown, N. Y.; the two younger died in infancy. The second marriage was Aug. 3, 1871, to Mary Chapin, daughter of Adna and Fanny Chapin, of Seville, Ohio. She was born March 7, 1844, and is a member of the Baptist Church. Six children have been born to this union, viz., Louis, Fanny, Mary, John, Hallie and Elbert. Mr. Hatch is the owner of about twenty-five acres of land in Wayne Township, and six acres in Corry, where he now lives. He is an official member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was one of the eight members present at its organization in 1862, that being the first Protestant denomination organized in Corry. He served also as Secretary of the Corry School Board of Directors during the first eight years of its existence, and was on the building committee for three of the largest schoolhouses in the place, one of which, the Central High School, has been named in his honor the "Hatch School." He has been a member of the City Council a number of times. In politics, is a Republican.

A. W. HECKER (deceased). It is the purpose of this personal sketch to note the prominent characteristics of the individual to which we refer, and to hand down to the future him who stood prominent as a citizen of Erie County, and was a representative man. To describe the character of the individual whose name is at the head of these notes, our first impress is set forth briefly in three words, to wit: "An honest man." He was born in Maiden Creek, Berks Co., Penn., September 29, 1827, and at the age of five years removed with his parents to Seagerstown, Crawford Co., Penn., where he had the advantage of the district schools until 1841, when the family located at Meadville, where his school days subsequently ended, and he entered upon the duties of life as a clerk for J. R. Deck & Co., dry goods merchants. Later, he engaged in the firm of Hollis, White & Co., bankers at Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, and as the company part was its cashier until 1865, when he withdrew and returned to Meadville, and soon after made his final settlement in Corry, and engaged in the First National Bank, being its only cashier from the organization until his illness, which terminated in his demise June 12, 1882. He was married to Martha L. Steele, of Painesville, Ohio, daughter of Horace, once a noted editor of a Paynesville paper, the result being one child, Martha W. Mrs. Hecker died, and February 28, 1871, he was married to Harriet D., a daughter of John and Eliza (Williams) Miller. Her father was born in Yorkshire, England, 1808, emigrated to Meadville, Penn., in 1828, and engaged in the jewelry business, and afterward in farming, which he continued until death, in 1865. Eliza was a daughter of Isaac Williams, an early shoe merchant of Meadville. Her union with M. Miller blessed her with five children, who grew up, viz., R. W. (deceased), Margaret, Mary (deceased), Harriet D. and Ella C. John Miller was County Commissioner, and held several small offices. He and his consort were devoted Christians, his faith being in the Episcopal and hers in the Presbyterian organizations. A. W. Hecker's last marriage gave him two children, viz.: Anthony Wayne, born March 9, 1872; Helen Louise, November 9, 1874. Mr. Hecker and first wife were active members of the Episcopal Church, to which organization his surviving widow, Harriet D., has long been attached. He was the organizer and Superintendent of the first Sunday school by the Episcopalians of Corry. Politically he was a Republican, active and energetic in the interests of that great party. He served the city as Treasurer for a number of terms. At a meeting of the City Council of Corry, Penn., held in their chamber June 19, 1882, the Mayor appointed three members to draft resolutions expressing the esteem and respect held for the late City Treasurer by the Council, and their sincere regret at his sudden death, and the following is the result: "WHEREAS, The Almighty has suddenly sent death into this community, and taken from its midst our esteemed fellow-citizen, Mr. A. W. Hecker; and, WHEREAS, he departed was the trusted Treasurer of the city at the time of his death, and had served with fidelity in the same capacity for several terms; THEREFORE, be it Resolved, That while we strive to bow with becoming reverence in this sad affliction, we do so with unfeigned regret. Resolved, That by the death of Mr. Hecker our city has lost a public-spirited, sincere, intelligent and honest man. Resolved, That this Council extend to the family of the deceased its heartfelt sympathy, and that the City Clerk be requested to furnish them with a copy of these resolutions. Resolved, That these resolutions be published in all of the city papers, and that the Clerk spread them for a memorial upon the journal of the City Council. Mr. Hecker was a member in high standing of the Royal Arcanum, and a memorial page was inserted in the proceedings of the Grand Council of Pennsylvania Royal Arcanum, held at Harrisburg March 13 and 14, 1883, he being the first Past Regent in that organization since its erection. The following from the Corry Telegraph, published June 15, 1882, tells something edifying of the worthy subject of this sketch: "Mr. Hecker was an early resident of this city, having come from Meadville to Corry to take the position in the First National Bank he filled at his death. During the first years of his sojourn here, his house was noted as the center of everything in public matters which women had anything to do with, his noble wife being ably seconded by him in all public enterprises. Within the past few years, Mr. Hecker has won more esteem from those he has come in contact with than ever he before possessed, his disposition having evidently changed, and he became attractive to those around him, and a man of sociability in business. As a banker, he was firm yet accommodating, honest to a fault, and honorable in all his dealings, strictly attentive to business, and of untiring determination to conduct the interests confided to him in a manner to show a clean record, and a profit to all interested. The bank has sustained a great loss, the community feels heavily his taking away, and all with one accord sympathize with the family and his business associates in the irreparable calamity."

JAMES HENDERSON, agent of the American and Adams Express Companies, Corry, was born in Erie City, Penn., August 28, 1843. He received his education in his native county. During the late war, he served as a member of McLane's Regiment three months, then joined the Eighty-third Regiment, under McLane, where he served three years, participating in the battles of Gaines' Mill, Malvern Hill, Fredericksburg, Second Bull Run, Wilderness, and in front of Petersburg and Gettysburg. Our subject was married in 1873 to Miss M. E., daughter of John Dunn, of Girard, Penn. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson have one child, nine years old. The former began the express business in the spring of 1867, in the employ of the American and Adams Express Companies, and has been at Foxbury, Penn., East Brady, Penn., Girard, Penn., Olean, N. Y., and was also messenger on the W. & F. R. R., O. C. R. R., O. V. R. R., E. & P. R. R., O. B. & W. R. R. and the K. & E. R. R.

MILTON HILL, harness-maker, Corry, was born in Saratoga, Saratoga Co., N. Y., and is a son of Aaron and Betsey (Perry) Hill, of Massachusetts. The former by occupation was a farmer. They were the parents of three children—Harvey, Milton and Abbie J.; both died in Orleans County, N. Y., the former in 1875, aged seventy-seven, the latter in 1876, aged seventy-six. Our subject was partly educated in his native place, which he left when ten years of age, going to Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., where he completed his education and learned his trade with Hammond & Short. He followed his trade in Evans, Erie Co., N. Y., where he remained nine years, and in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., nine years. Mr. Hill came to Corry and established his present business in 1873. He was united in marriage with Harriet Hurd, of North Evans, N. Y., a native of Vermont. Four children have been born to them, three surviving—Lorin, of Corry; Cloys, of Buffalo, and Abbie, wife of Charles Chapman, a resident of Corry. Our subject has been a successful, self-made man, and owns a house and lot on Pleasant street, worth $2,600. He has been a member of the Baptist Church nearly twenty years. Mrs. Hill is a member of the Congregational Church.

J. B. HOCKENBURG, horseshoeing and blacksmithing, Corry, was born March 7, 1840, forty miles north of Pittsburgh, Penn., son of Robert and Mary (Tipper) Hockenburger, of English and German ancestry; the former deceased, the latter now a resident of Butler County, Penn. They were the parents of eight children; our subject was the seventh child and fourth son, and has three brothers and one sister living. J. B. Hockenburger was raised on a farm and attended district school until thirteen years old, when he left home and commenced blacksmithing in Tidioute, Penn., under D. N. Richardson, with whom he remained two years; thence went to Youngsville, same county, for two years; then worked in Pittsfield, Warren County, twelve years; returning to Youngsville, remaining twelve years; thence to Parker for a year, and finally to Corry in 1878, where he has since continued with success. He married while in Warren County, in the fall of 1869, Lucinda, daughter of Benjamin Smith, a Methodist minister; she was born April, 1840. Three children have blessed this union, viz., Flora, wife of J. W. Shatto, train dispatcher, Erie, Penn.; Ella and Harry (deceased, nine years old). Mr. Hockenburger is a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which his wife also belongs. He is also a charterman of the K. of P. In politics, is Republican.

PHILIP HOFFMAN, shoe-maker, Corry, was born in 1821, and is a son of Paul and Dorcas A. (Andrews) Hoffman, natives of Pennsylvania, who had a family of eleven children, in which our subject was the fourth child and son. Mr. Hoffman learned shoe-making at Pittsfield, Warren County, with John Woodel, and worked as journeyman twelve years in various places—Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and also in Canada West. He served through the war of the rebellion, and in 1852-54 engaged in mining in California. He has been manufacturing boots and shoes for the past twenty-five years. He ran a drug store in Corry for two years. He has been a resident here fifteen years, and has built himself a nice three-story house. Mr. Hoffman was united in marriage February 23, 1851, with Samantha H. Bills, born 1829, in Warren County, Penn. One child (deceased) was born to this union. Mrs. Hoffman departed this life May 13, 1862.

J. B. HORTON, retired grocer, Corry, Penn., was born in Royalton, Windsor Co., Vt., March 5, 1822, son of Darius and Nancy Horton, who removed to Rehoboth, Bristol Co., Mass., in 1831. He lived on a farm until he was twenty years of age; then removed to Cortland County, N. Y.; carried on the tanning business eight years; also the boot and shoe business fifteen years; then removed to Corry, Penn., in 1865, where he now resides. Store on First avenue and residence on Centre street. In politics, he is a Republican.

ANSON S. JOHNSON (deceased), late farmer, was born February 9, 1811, in New York State. He was raised in Onondaga County, removing to Chautauqua County, same State, when twenty-one years of age. When twenty years old he was married to Olive B. Allen, a native of Connecticut, born June 9, 1814, and who moved to Marseilles when young. Ten children were born to this union, viz.: Laura (deceased); Calista M.; Porter; Polly, whose first husband, Calvin Northrop, a Christian, and a soldier in the late war, died soon after being liberated from Libby Prison (she married, for her second husband, Orange Hammond, also a soldier); W. H.; Eunice; David; Nancy H. (deceased); Cyrus and Hattie, wife of Jay S. Hurd, married June 28, 1874; he was born July 1, 1851, in New York State, and is a son of S. A. and Mary H. Hurd. The subject of this sketch moved to Erie County thirty-six years ago, and was among the early settlers of Corry. He built the third house, and acted as School Director in the first school organized in Corry. Mr. Johnson was an enterprising business man; he departed this life December 15, 1865.

A. M. KENT, of the Corry Woodenware Manufacturing Company, established 1867, succeeding David H. Wilder in 1879. Our subject was born in Vermont in 1840; he was united in marriage with Mrs. Wetmore, daughter of Chapin Hall, and widow of C. C. Wetmore, by whom she had two children—Chapin H., partner in the Woodenware Manufacturing Company, Corry, and Charles D. Chapin Hall died in 1879; he was proprietor of a manufacturing and lumbering business, which business is now managed by his son-in-law, A. M. Kent. Mr. and Mrs. Kent have had one child—Morgan. Mr. Kent came to Corry in 1865; was first with Wetmore, Hutchinson & Dudley; then bought and ran for a few years the Kent Oil Works. He is President of the Jamestown, N. Y., Water-works, built in 1882, and also President and principal owner of the Warren, Penn., works, built by himself and brother in 1873. Our subject was interested in lumbering and manufacturing pails before the war. His present works afford employment for 100 men; they turn out daily 2,000 pails, 500 washtubs and 300 butter tubs, consuming 3,000,000 feet of timber annually. In addition to the above industries, Mr. Kent is principal owner of the Corry Gas and Water Works, he and his brother being the principal promoters in establishing the same in 1867. He has also an interest in a log saw mill at Salamanca, on the Allegheny River, and in a large sash and door factory, established in Newark, N. J., in 1872.

H. O. LAKIN, President of the First National Bank, Corry, was born in Portland (now Westfield), Chautauqua County, N. Y., September 30, 1826. He is a graduate of Allegheny University; chose law for a profession; was admitted to the bar in Buffalo in 1852, and has practiced ever since. He has also served as County Judge; has an interest at the present time in a lumbering tract comprising 2,200 acres in Elk and Forest Counties, Penn. Mr. Larkin was married in 1850 to Elizabeth Steward, born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in July, 1826. To this union has been born one child—Luther Steward (see biography of S. W. Steward, deceased, elsewhere in this work).

J. W. LEACH, Chief of Police and Constable, Corry, was born June 20, 1824, in Sheffield, Lorain Co., Ohio. He was reared on a farm and educated at home and in the district school. Our subject from the age of sixteen to twenty-five chopped and cleared the timber from fifty-five acres of heavily timbered land, splitting rails and fencing the same. From twenty-five to thirty he was employed as pilot on the Allegheny and Ohio Rivers; then farmed for eight years. He was one of four men who pulled and burned stumps of 450 acres of pine timber lands near Jamestown, which they also fenced. He learned the trade of a stone-mason, which he has worked at about eight years. Mr. Leach came to Corry about 1862, where he made glass for ten years. The first year he worked 411 half days and cultivated three gardens, traveling going to and coming from his meals 1,600 miles. Mr. Leach was united in marriage July 2, 1850, with Artemesia Southwick, born January 1, 1833, in Genesee County N. Y., of English and German extraction. Four children have been born to this union—Isabel, Frank E., Edith and Archer. Our subject, in fulfilling the duties of his present position, has had many hair-breadth escapes.

ISAAC LEMON, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Canada, February 7, 1823. He is the sixth child of James and Jane (Vansickle) Lemon, both deceased. They had a family of nine children, eight living. Our subject was reared on his father's farm and attended the common schools. He was united in marriage, January 24, 1845, in Burford Township, district of Brock (now in the county of Brant), Canada, with Diana Cathern Hainer, who was a native of the same place, born May 27, 1827. They had a family of nine children—Mary Ann (deceased), wife of William H. Johnson; Margaret Lovina (deceased); John Alexander; Joseph Benjamin; Amanda Lucretia, wife of W. H. Johnson; James Clinton; Melissa Rosella, wife of Mr. Bridgeland; Mertilla Ethel, wife of John Sperry, and Minnie Alice, at home. There are ten grandchildren. Mrs. Lemon and her daughter, Minnie Alice, are members of the Baptist Church. When twenty-one, Mr. Lemon left home. He is a carpenter, joiner and wheelwright by trade, of which last he makes a specialty, having worked at it twelve years. He came to this township in 1850. He owns forty-one acres of land within the city limits. He is somewhat of a hunter, spending some part of each year in this sport. He has collected quite a number of curiosities. Mr. Lemon served for two years as a member of the City Council, and two years as School Director of Concord Township. He is a Greenbacker in politics.

R. G. LINDSLEY, druggist, Corry, was born in Cherry Valley, Ashtabula County, Ohio, August 28, 1837, and is of English extraction; he was reared on a farm and received his early education at the district schools, finishing at Kingsville Academy. He then taught school for a time, and subsequently entered mercantile business at Kinsman, Trumbull County, Ohio, with P. G. Gee, as partner. In 1869-70, he studied medicine with Dr. F. A. Tuttle, Jefferson, Ohio, and in 1871 commenced his present business in Corry, which he has since carried on with success. He is owner of the premises on First avenue, where his business is located. Our subject was twice married, first October 10, 1861, to Abbie, daughter of Henry Krum, of Cherry Valley, Ashtabula County, Ohio, born February 4, 1844, by whom he had one child—Lutie E. Mr. Krum was a prominent farmer and politician, holding the office of Justice of the Peace for many years, and was elected several terms to the State Legislature. On his wife's decease, Mr. Lindsley married in September, 1874, Julia A., born January 9, 1847, in Wayne Township, Erie County, daughter of Jesse Lyons (deceased). A prominent farmer and lumberman. Mr. Lindsley is a regular attendant of the Presbyterian Church, of which his family are members.

JOEL LINSKOTT, contractor and builder, Corry, Penn., was born in York, York County, Me., July 14, 1828. When aged eighteen years, he moved from his native place to Boston, Mass., where he learned the trade of carpenter, of Samuel Newell, of Boston. He has since followed said trade with the exception of one year (1854), which he spent in California. He came from Boston to Corry in 1861, with Samuel Downer and others, and assisted in building "The Downer Oil Works" in what was, at that time, a wilderness. He removed his family two years later (1863). Mr. Linscott was married, March 8, 1855, in Boston, to Miss Mary A. Chadburn, of Sanford, York County, Me., three children being born to this union, two boys and a girl. Mr. Linscott, wife and children are all church members.

JOHN LONG, contractor and builder, Corry, was born in Hamilton (now Fulton) County, N. Y., and is a son of Fred Long, a carpenter. Our subject moved with his parents to New Jersey; thence to Chautauqua County, N. Y., about 1850, and obtained his education, and learned a trade with his father in Westfield. He has worked at his trade in different localities, in all thirty years, from 1859 to 1863, in Ohio. Mr. Long was united in marriage with Hettie A. Pool, of Springfield, Ohio, and has the following children: John R., working with his father; Bertha E., Nina, Emma and Fred R.

REV. THOMAS LONNERGAN, Corry, was born in New Inn, County Tipperary, Ireland, in March, 1820, and is the third son of the five children (three now living) of Michael Lonnergan, a farmer, who died about 1871, aged seventy-five years. Our subject was reared on the farm and educated at Carlow, County Clare, Ireland. Coming to America, he studied theology at Emittsburg, Md., for four years, and was ordained at Erie, Penn., by Right Rev. Joshua M. Young; was established at Corry in 1860, and has since remained here. Father Lonnergan has accomplished marked changes in his pastorate from the time he took charge. The first school and church of the Catholic denomination in Corry were built by him on his arrival in the city, at which time there were only 100 Catholics. The original church proving too small, the Catholic population having increased to 2,000, a handsome church is being built at a cost of $25,000. Our subject has also under his supervision the parochial school in connection with the church; a benevolent association; a temperance society; young ladies' sodality; St. Aloysius Society of boys, and the catechism class with an attendance of 400.

P. I. LYNCH, Manager and Treasurer of Corry City Iron Works, was born in Greenock, Scotland, August 15, 1845; was reared there, and educated at the high schools. He is a son of Peter and Ann (McCormick) Lynch; the former, a cutler, died while our subject was an infant. P. I. Lynch is a boiler-maker and iron-ship builder by trade, commencing at fifteen years of age. In 1847, he came to New York City, working there and in Hoboken. From there he moved to Titusville and to the oil regions; thence, in 1876, to Butler County. Here he engaged in boiler-making with his brother for two years; then for himself until 1880, in which year he came to Corry, where for one year he was a member of the firm of Lynch & Gilbert; then one year as P. I. Lynch, and subsequently in the Corry City Iron Works. This latter enterprise employs from fifty to seventy-five men. Mr. Lynch was also engaged in the boiler department of Washington navy-yard in 1874-75. Our subject married, in Syracuse, N. Y., Margaret Dunn, born in Syracuse in 1851, daughter of Patrick and Bridget Dunn. By this union three children have been born—Morgan Peter, Francis Patrick and Charles Henry. Mr. Lynch and his family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. He is a member of the C. M. B. A.

ANDREW McFARLAND, proprietor of St. James Hotel, Corry, was born in Montgomery County, N. Y., where he was reared and educated in the public schools. Our subject was united in marriage in 1876 with Allie Loomer, Little Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y., who is a grand-daughter of Mr. Snell, of St. Johnsville, Penn. During the late war, Mr. McFarland enlisted in the Nineteenth Pennsylvania Regiment, serving two and a half years as First Sergeant, Company A, Nineteenth Cavalry. Mr. McFarland established his present business in Corry in February, 1882; was previously landlord of the "Occidental," Meadville, Penn., and of a hotel in Little Falls, N. Y., three years. He is a member of the Union League, Philadelphia; a K. of P., Lodge 470; K. of L., Lodge No. 1, and of the Soldiers and Sailors.

JOHN McINTOSH (deceased), late hotel-keeper, Corry, was born near Edinburgh, Scotland, October 20, 1813. When ten years old, he, with his mother, emigrated to this country, his father having preceded them by about four months. He was the youngest in a family of seven, and was partly educated in his native land. After coming to America, he spent a few years in Catskill, and for sixteen summers was engaged in lumbering in the South. He also farmed for twelve or fourteen years. In 1835, Mr. McIntosh located in Sugar Grove, Warren County, remaining there until 1856, when he moved to Concord Township. In 1862, he built the McIntosh House in Corry which he ran until his decease. He was familiarly known as "Uncle John." Our subject married, April 15, 1846, Emeline Freleigh, born May 31, 1828, in Ulster County, N. Y. Three children were born to this union—George D., Alice S. and Yena. Mr. McIntosh was also engaged extensively in auctioneering, attending nearly all the sales. He was a popular hotel-keeper, a kind husband and father, and a useful citizen. He departed this life May 5, 1879, mourned by all. The funeral services were conducted by Revs. B. M. Keer and Crane. His remains were interred in the Sugar Creek Cemetery.

H. O. MACKRES, physician and surgeon, office Center street, Corry, was born in Calais, Vt., December 16, 1824, son of Joshua and Esther Cummings Mackres, both natives of New Hampshire. The former was a farmer of Scotch descent, and the latter of Irish lineage. Our subject was reared on a farm, and received his education in the common and select schools of New York State. His medical education was obtained in Randolph, N. Y., and Cleveland, Ohio, where he attended a course of lectures and graduated in 1849. He also received a diploma in 1867 from the Buffalo Medical College. He commenced to practice his profession in the State of New York in 1849, where he continued until 1867, when he came to Corry, opened an office in partnership with Dr. B. E. Phelps, with whom he continued a year and a half. He then moved his office to Center street (in 1872) with Dr. Bonsteel, which partnership lasted until 1882. He took a practitioner's course in Cleveland and in the Rush Medical College in Chicago in 1881 and 1882. In the latter year he began to practice alone, and has one of the finest offices in the State of Pennsylvania, and is a successful physician. He was united in marriage in 1850 with Artemitia, daughter of Jabes Johnson, an early settler of Warren County, Penn. To this union have been born Estella, wife of F. F. Root, a merchant in Kinsman, Ohio; Mary E., wife of William E. Lewis, a resident of Corry; James H., locomotive engineer on the Baltimore, New York & Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Mackres, while in New York, was Postmaster for some years. Mrs. Mackres is a member of the Universalist Church. Our subject is a member of the Masonic Order, No. 365, Corry Lodge; also a member of the United Workmen, and has been an influential member of the I. O. O. F. since 1847; also member of the Encampment. In politics, he is a Democrat.

W. ED MARSH, attorney, Corry, was born in Farmington, Warren Co., Penn., January 15, 1851, and is a son of William S. and Rosaville (Knapp) Marsh. He received a part of his education in Warren County, but completed the same in Jamestown, N. Y. In 1875, Mr. Marsh read law with Crosby & Brown, Corry, Penn., and in 1878 was admitted to the bar in Erie City. He has been practicing since in Corry. Our subject was married in Farmington, Warren Co., Penn., October 1, 1874, to Miss Mary L., only daughter of Dr. S. W. Brown. W. E. Marsh was elected Justice of the Peace in Broken Straw Township, Warren County, Penn., in the year 1873, and for about six years has been serving as Notary, and Police Attorney here since 1881. He is also a member of the Republican State and County Committees. He is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. in Erie County, being a member and for several years the Secretary and Representative to the Grand Lodge of Jonathan Lodge, No. 685, I. O. O. F. He is also a member of Corry Encampment, No. 241, I. O. O. F. He is at present the District Deputy in both branches of the order in Erie County. During the railroad riots in 1877, Mr. Marsh left his music store, which he was then running, and which cost him $25 per month rent, enlisted in the Vincent Guard, then Company A, Seventeenth Regiment N. G. P., now Company A, Sixteenth Regiment, and carried a musket as a private for $13 a month, and with the company marched from Corry to Franklin, Penn. In October, 1878, Mr. Marsh was elected Second Lieutenant, and December 9, 1881, he was elected First Lieutenant of the Vincent Guard. Both Mr. Marsh and his wife are prominent musicians, his wife being one of Corry's finest pianists. Mr. M. is a baritone or bass singer, and for several years has been in charge of the Presbyterian choir in Corry. He is very fond of field sport, and is a member of the Corry Rifle Club and its Secretary, and is considered a fine shot. Fred S. Marsh, a brother of our subject, is a graduate of the Jamestown Union School and Collegiate Institute. His father's people are related to the Sherman family through the maternal line of the family.

D. J. MEAD, farmer and dealer in ice, Corry, was born in Youngsville, Warren Co., and is a son of one of the early settlers. Our subject has been twice married, first to Miss Alexander, now deceased. One child—Sell J.—blessed this union. His second wife was Miss Dora J. Drown, of Corry, formerly a resident of Iowa. Mr. Mead followed lumbering twenty years. He served during the late rebellion two years in the Eighty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Company I, Col. Brown. He has acted as City Councilman and Assessor. Mr. Mead has been a resident of Corry thirty-nine years, and established in his present occupation several years. He owns fifty acres of land on the old turnpike, and a fine property in the Bish Block, center of the city, valued at $8,000. His brother, O. Mead, was associated with our subject in the ice business for about fifteen years, and on his decease, January 2, 1881, Mr. D. J. Mead assumed the sole control.

MAX MICHELIS, dealer in clothing, etc., Corry, was born on the Rhine, in Germany. He received a limited education in his Fatherland, and emigrated to America when twelve years of age. When thirteen years of age he learned tailoring and cigar-making (which he followed five years) in New York. Our subject moved to Corry in 1865, where he first engaged with Siegel & Co., but for the past four years has been doing a successful business for himself. Mr. Michels has been twice married, first to Herenietta Siegel, with whom he lived eighteen years, and whose death occurred in 1871. One child Max, Jr.—is now living. In 1881, Mr. Michels was united in marriage with Rosa Goldsmith, of New York, and one child—Augusta—has blessed this union.

F. E. MILLER, liveryman, Corry, was born in Dauphin County, Penn., and is a son of Jacob and Polly Miller, residents of Dauphin, and parents of eight children. Mr. Miller (our subject) has recently leased a place of business from Mr. Taylor, by whom he was previously employed. He is an energetic young man of good habits, deserving of the highest praise for the scrupulous care he takes of his stock.

A. R. MORGAN, furniture dealer, Corry, was born September 9, 1859, in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and is a son of R. Morgan, formerly manufacturing at Jamestown, but now at Council Bluffs. Our subject left his native place when but three years of age, and obtained his education in Dunkirk and Corry. On January 20, 1880, he married Estella Dean, born June 20, 1860, in Chautauqua County, N. Y. Mr. Morgan has always followed his present business. He is now associated with his father-in-law, a pioneer of Chautauqua County. Mr. Morgan is a young man possessing good business qualifications, and has full control of the business.

H. MORRIS, brewer, Corry, was born in the northeast part of Essex County, Vt., May 22, 1836. He remained in his native place until twenty years of age, when he moved to Randolph, N. Y., and there learned his business, and manufactured two years. He established his present business in Corry in the year 1863, but was burned out in 1873, and lost $18,000. He rebuilt in 1873-74 on three acres of land, located on the corner of West Wayne and Smith streets. He employs ten or twelve men, and has made $15,000. He is also conducting business in Ashtabula (since 1879), in Conneaut and Mayville. Mr. Morris claims that he has done more for the temperance cause than all the preachers and temperance men combined. Our subject was married in 1860, at Randolph, to Lucinda M. Bemis, born 1841 in New Hampshire. Two children have been born to this union—James Edwin, working with his father, and Frank Bertram, who died January 14, 1870. Hiram and Lucinda M. Morris have an adopted daughter—Susie E., wife of M. E. Davis. Mr. Morris has been a successful business man, and has seen Corry change from a swamp to a city.

WILLIAM MOUNT, contractor and builder, Corry, was born in Ames, Montgomery Co., N. Y., October 3, 1829, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Chamberlin) Mount, who were the parents of fifteen children, nine sons and six daughters, ten surviving, our subject being the youngest. The father, by occupation a farmer, died in 1881, aged ninety-nine years eight months and twenty days; the mother's decease occurred in 1850, at the age of seventy. Our subject was educated in the district school, and learned his trade with his brother. He then followed farming from 1853 to 1860 in Chautauqua County. He was employed by the A. & G. W., now N. Y., P. & O. R. R., commencing as carpenter; then was foreman for six years, then for three years was superintendent of the carpenter department on the Fourth Division. Mr. Mount came to Corry in 1870, through which he had passed when it was a swamp. From 1871 to 1881 he worked as journeyman. He contracted and built the Michel & Lippman Block, on the corner of Main and Spring streets, and also many other buildings. Mr. Mount was united in marriage, October 24, 1851, with Mary Frost, of Chautauqua County, born in 1830. Three children compose their family, viz., Aretas, a carpenter; Emeline, wife of George Morris, and Ritta.

WILLIAM W. MUIR, superintendent of Clark & Warren's oil refinery at Corry, was born at Carbondale, Lackawanna Co., Penn., April, 1851, and is a son of John and Caroline (Smith) Muir, the former by trade a carpenter; is a resident of Carbondale, where he settled in 1832. His wife is deceased; they were the parents of five children, all now living. Our subject, the eldest, was reared in Carbondale, and educated in the common school. He learned the trade of a marble-cutter, at which he served three years and three months. He is also a carpenter and builder, working at same seven years. He has also spent the same time as a refiner of oil. Mr. Muir married, March 14, 1872, Martha Fuller, of Carbondale, Penn., where she was born May 11, 1854, and is a daughter of A. K. and Nancy Fuller, the former a machinist, his wife now deceased. Four children were born to this union—Harry (deceased), George, Carrie and Edward. Mr. Muir settled in Corry in May, 1881. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Subordinate and Encampment at Carbondale, Olive Leaf Lodge, No. 156, Lackawanna Encampment, No. 58. He owns a residence on North Wyoming street, Carbondale, also one on Washington street, Corry. Politically, he is a Republican.

SILAS MORE, pumping engineer for water station, Corry, was born in New Buffalo, Orleans Co., N. Y., January 24, 1831. He was reared on a farm, where he remained until his twenty-first year, when he went to Dunkirk, N. Y., obtaining the position of fireman on the N. Y. & E., now N. Y. L. E. & W. R. R., remaining three years; he then ran as witch engine for about five years; then for two years following he acted as engineer on the Allegheny River at Corden, Penn.; for three years more he was stationary engineer. Our subject served in the late war in the Eleventh Pennsylvania Battery three years. Mr. Moore came to Corry in 1865, to his present position. He was united in marriage, in 1867, to Anora Gunado, a native of New York City. This union has resulted in two children, viz., Mary and Anora, the former fifteen and the latter eleven years of age.

WILLIAM MULKIE, manufacturer of cedar and whitewood cigar boxes, Corry, established in 1870, was born near East Otto, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., October 24, 1840, and is a son of John and Catherine Mulkie, natives of Ireland and Canada respectively. They were the parents of four boys and two girls. Mr. and Mrs. John Mulkie are both deceased. Our subject, who is by trade a cooper, is now doing a successful business, which he is conducting on an economical plan, and employs a large number of men, boys and girls. He was united in marriage, in July, 1858, at Little Valley, N. Y., with Mary Mullen, of Poland, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. She was born May 6, 1841, and is a daughter of Peter Mullen, now deceased. One child, Charles Byron, born April 23, 1868, has blessed this union. Mr. Mulkie served three years during the late rebellion, in the Forty-ninth New York Infantry, enlisting in 1862. He came to Corry in 1865, where he owns property. He has filled several township offices, and is a prominent member of the G. A. R., I. O. O. F., and K. of P. societies.

F. E. MULKIE, Cashier First National Bank, Corry, was born January 24, 1846, in Little Valley, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and in 1851 moved to Kennedy, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., with his parents. Here he was educated at the common school, choosing the dry goods business for an occupation. He commenced with D. F. Weld, with whom he remained seven years, when he opened on his own account in 1869, and carried on business till 1875, coming to Corry in 1864. In 1875, he was burnt out, with a loss of about $12,000. In that year he entered the bank as book-keeper, and in 1882 was promoted to the cashier's desk, where he is now engaged; is also a Director and the Treasurer of the Board of Trade; is a charter member of the Royal Arcanum. On September 17, 1868, he was married to Miss D. M. Steward, daughter of S. W. Steward. To this union was born, in 1870, one child—Frank S.

R. H. MURDOCK, agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Buffalo, New York & Pennsylvania Railroad, Corry, was born in Milton, Northumberland Co., Penn., November 10, 1837. He was reared in his native county, where, after obtaining his education, he clerked in a store. He then became clerk in a railroad office at Lock Haven; thence went to Lewisburg as agent, and afterward occupied the same position in Northumberland, and finally came to Corry in February, 1865. He was for three years agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, then had charge for same road of passenger and freight, and also the Oil Creek Railroad. Mr. Murdock was united in marriage, December 25, 1861, with Miss Anna Kepler. Two children have resulted from this union.

S. C. MYER (deceased) was born in North Bay, N. Y., June 16, 1838, reared on a farm, and educated at the common schools. During the rebellion, our subject served First Lieutenant, and was twice wounded; first time in the head by a shell, in June, 1864, at Petersburg; second time, in left arm by a shell, September 29, same year, at Chapin's farm, Va., on both occasions while gallantly charging the enemy. Mr. Myer came to Corry in 1865, and carried on the business of wholesale and retail butcher and sausage manufacturer, also wholesale dealer in live stock, and proprietor of Oneida Market, Corry, up to his decease, which occurred December 4, 1883. He was married at North Bay, January 8, 1869, to Angie T. Van Zandt, born in 1844, adopted daughter of D. G. Van Zandt, a farmer of North Bay. To this union have been born three children, viz., Howard C., Fannie M. and Tina Glenn.

W. G. NANTES, member of firm of Nantes & Son, dealers in groceries and produce. Corry, was born in Prince Edward Island, where he was educated in select schools and clerked for five years. He spent two years in reading law and writing. He commenced mercantile business in Harbor Creek, seven miles from Erie City, Erie Co., Penn., where he remained until 1862. He then came to Corry, where he carried a general stock for seven years, and ran the first store in the city. Mr. Nantes spent eleven years in the South, Garrisonville, Va., where he kept a general store, and was Postmaster. He returned to Corry in 1881, since which time he has been in present business. The subject of this sketch was united in marriage, in 1859, in London, Canada, to Susanna Kendall, also a native of Prince Edward Island. They have been the parents of four children, viz., John O. H., a partner in the above business; William Henry, who is also interested in same; George A., a graduate of Corry High School, now reading law with Bole, reporter for the Herald; and Charles Frederick.

JOSEPH A. PAIN, editor of the Corry Telegraph, Corry, was born in Bristol, England, April 2, 1828. His father was a medical practitioner and educational professor at one time, and in the latter years of his life kept a stationery store and printing office in Dartford, County of Kent, England. Our subject received a first-class education, finishing at Westminster College. Being frustrated by his father in his desire to become a sailor, Mr. Pain left home in 1848, and came to Quebec, Canada. After a few months, he went to Erie County, N. Y., a penniless lad. Desiring to return to England, he started at once for New York, afoot, but at Auburn, N. Y., he found work in the Auburn Daily Advertiser office, where he obtained a thorough knowledge of the practical part of the printer's business. From Auburn, he went to Wolcott, Wayne Co., N. Y., and published the Banner. Thence he found his way to Clyde, N. Y., with $3.05 in his pocket (all his worldly possessions), and took the material of a defunct paper and published a weekly paper, commencing March, 1850. On April 29, that year, Mr. Pain married Emily M. Smith, of Auburn, N. Y., who was a true helpmate to him, sharing his fortunes till May 30, 1883, when she departed this life, leaving behind four children. In 1865, our subject sold out his establishment in Clyde, and being attracted to the oil regions, bought a half interest in the Corry Telegraph, which had broken down under five different owners, and has continued its publication nineteen successive years. The Corry Telegraph was a daily and weekly sheet when Mr. Pain purchased his interest. After a few months he bought out his partner, and in 1866 stopped the daily and continued the weekly until the fall of 1868, when he again started a daily, the Corry Daily Blade, commencing it small but continuing to enlarge till it became a seven-column four-page paper. In 1872, commercial depression compelled the stoppage of the Daily Blade, and Mr. Pain thereafter has given his entire attention to the Weekly Telegraph and his large job printing establishment. Our subject is now in his fifty-sixth year, active and energetic. He was Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue for over a year; was elected a member of the Common Council of the city of Corry in 1867, School Director in 1878, and City Clerk for one term. He is an inveterate worker, liberal in his opinions, a forcible writer and a staunch friend. Is P. G. in the I. O. O. F.; P. M. W. in the A. O. U. W.; first P. G. D. of Pennsylvania of the K. of H. and an ex-member of the Supreme Lodge of the same order; P. H. C. R. of I. O. F.; P. G. P. and member of the committee on secret work of the Supreme Lodge of the K. and L. of H.; P. S. of I. O. R. M. By many of these Mr. Pain has been presented with badges and regalia of value, among which is a $100 gold medal by the K. of H., commemorating his fiftieth birthday, and a beautiful gold-headed cane by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania K. of H. In politics, Mr. Pain is a Republican, and has taken a part in all the campaigns. In the Greeley campaign, he saved the Corry district to the Republican party.

G. W. PARDEE, carriage dealer, Corry, was born, July, 1828, in Russia, Herkimer Co., N. Y., and when six years of age moved with his parents to Chautauqua County, same State, where he was reared on a farm, on which he remained until thirty-five years of age, paying considerable attention to stock-raising, particularly the imported varieties. Mr. Pardee was united in marriage with Mary L. Wheeler, a native of Lockport, N. Y. Three children blessed this union—Merrit, Teller in Corry National Bank; Clifton (deceased), and Curtis S., clerk for the Star Oil Company. Mr. Pardee has been a resident of Corry eleven years, owns a residence here, and has spent several years in above business, selling by the wholesale and retail, and has had several partners. Previously, for six years, was a traveling salesman, three years for J. F. Leiberling & Co., Akron, Ohio. He sold in one season, in Corry, forty-five machines, of which he was the General Agent, Corry being his headquarters, and employed seventy-five sub-agents, principally in New York State. Mr. Pardee also engaged in the hardware business at Columbus, Penn., for seven years, making a specialty of cross-cut saws, selling 1,500 in one year. Grant, of Corry, Penn., who was born in Portland, N. Y., March 11, 1860. She lived from a small child with her aunt in Portland (Miss Ann Grant). She obtained her education at Beaver College, Penn., vocal music being her greatest accomplishment.

J. C. WILSON, baggage-master P. R. R., and B., N. Y. & P. Railroad, Corry, was born December 10, 1839, in Northumberland County. He moved to Center County, Penn., in 1848, where he received a part of his education, but graduated from the Bellefonte Academy. He clerked in a store in the same place for about two years. In September, 1862, our subject enlisted in the Anderson Cavalry, where he served as non-commissioned officer until the close of the war. Mr. Wilson came to Corry December, 1865, clerking one year, then became yard-master, extra freight conductor, and in October, 1874, obtained his present position. He was united in marriage with Fannie Gordon, a native of Clyde, Wayne County, N. Y. Three children resulted from this union, viz., Anna M., Bessie and Agnes. Mr. Wilson has acted as Police Justice, and was a candidate for Mayor in 1883. His wife is a member of the Episcopal Church. He is an active member of the Royal Arcanum and G. A. R.

P. R. WOODRING, dry goods merchant, Corry, was born September 25, 1831, in Crawford County, Penn., and is a son of Daniel and Anna (Rudy) Woodring, who were the parents of ten children, eight of whom are now living. Our subject is the ninth child and second son in the family. Daniel Woodring was a shoe-dealer, a native of Lehigh County, Penn. He died fifteen years ago at the age of seventy-three, and his wife departed this life thirty years ago, when fifty-six years old. She was a native of Germany. Our subject, until twenty-one, remained on his father's farm in Crawford County, near Sagerstown, of which he was a pioneer. Mr. Woodring was educated in the district school. He engaged in the dry goods business in Newcastle, Penn., five years for himself, and eight years as a salesman for Hoyt Bros., and R. W. Clendenin, in New Castle, Penn. He is a member of the firm of Woodring & Co., Corry, established September, 1883.

G. W. N. YOST, the inventor of the Caligraph, was born April 15, 1851, in Starkey, Yates Co., N. Y. He received a common school education, and prepared for college at Starkey Seminary, with a full expectation of obtaining a thorough education, but owing to the misfortune of having inflammation in the eyes, which prevented him from studying for some years, this was reluctantly abandoned. During his boyhood, and until his nineteenth year, he attended school and worked with his father on the farm. For some years thereafter he traveled extensively in the West and South, and in March, 1855, his first patent was obtained for a cotton plow and scraper, with which one hand and a mule could do the work of two hands and two mules during the busiest part of the cotton-growing season. From 1855 to 1873 (except some five years while engaged in the oil business), he devoted his time to inventing, patenting and manufacturing agricultural implements. Some fourteen years ago, he was invited by Mr. James Densmore to go to New York, and see the type-writer, a machine to write with type, instead of the pen. After seeing it, Mr. Yost expressed the opinion that the idea was a good one, but the machine was not invented yet; that there was no commercial value in it, and the machine was returned to Milwaukee for the purpose of having it "invented." December, 1872, Mr. Yost was invited to Milwaukee to see the invented type-writer. After a very careful examination of the machine, as then made, he became interested in it. February, 1873, he made a contract with the Remington Armory, at Ilion, N. Y., and up to 1877, nearly 4,000 were made and sold mainly through his energy. In 1879, Mr. Yost, not satisfied with his previous efforts, set to work in earnest to invent what he termed the ideal writing machine, and the Caligraph is the result. He has a factory in Corry manufacturing the caligraph in which 125 hands are employed, turning out seventy-five machines per week. Mr. Yost, for the past year or two, has been actively associated with Dr. Virgil W. Blanchard, of New York, in the financial management and development of his system of inventions, embracing furnace, boiler, engine, electric light, etc. While engaged in the oil business our subject was one of the largest shippers in the oil country, having from two to five agents buying for him, handling thousands of dollars per day. After retiring from the oil business he built the shops called the Corry Machine Shops, now known as the Gibbs, Sterrett Mfg. Co., at a cost of over $200,000, employing 500 men. To the personal efforts of Mr. Yost more than to any other ten men, Corry is what it is to-day.

AMITY TOWNSHIP.

WELLINGTON ALFORD, farmer, P. O. Lake Pleasant, was born March 31, 1837, in Chautauqua County, N. Y., a son of Martin and Sallie (Adams) Alford, of the same county. They lived in Erie County ten or fifteen years, chiefly on the borders of the lake. After a married life of fifty-nine years, Mr. Alford died, August 23, 1883, in Chautauqua County, where his widow still resides. Our subject was united in marriage May 6, 1861, with Sylvia D. Long, of Wattsburg, born May 6, 1841, daughter of Peter Long. After marriage, they bought Mr. Long's farm of 200 acres of well-improved land, where they now reside. Their children are Martin S., Chloe, Minnie, Dexter M., Corrington, Oliver and Frank L. Mr. Alford, with wife, is a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church. They have built up their fine estate entirely by their own exertions and good management, and have reared an intelligent, respectable family. Mr. Alford is a Republican in politics, and a citizen of much influence and usefulness in the township.

JOHN ALLEN, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born November 22, 1831, in Delaware County, N. Y. He came to this township with his father's family when he was about seventeen years old. He worked at his trade, that of a carpenter and joiner, in this and adjoining townships in this county. He was united in marriage, December 30, 1858, with Julia Stowe, by whom he has had five children—Marion D., Eliza J., Minnie C. (deceased at eleven years), Nathaniel J. and Floyd C. Marion D. has been a teacher in this community for the past five terms. She is now engaged at Baldwin Flatts School, and has the reputation of being a thorough and successful instructor. Mr. Allen bought his present place about 1863, and has about 180 acres of well-improved land on Alder Run. Mr. Allen is a staunch Democrat. He has served as Constable four terms, and as School Director ten years, discharging his duties faithfully, and to the satisfaction of his constituents.

JULIUS M. APPLEBEE, farmer, P. O. Lake Pleasant, was born November 22, 1839, in Venango Township, Erie Co., Penn. He was united in marriage, February 24, 1860, with Jane Drake. To this union have been born the following children: Wellington, Mary, Emma (now Mrs. Titus), Jay B., Flora and Frank. Mr. and Mrs. Applebee bought and moved on their present farm in 1867. They were industrious and successful in life, relying on their own resources. They have acquired by economical management a farm of 102 acres of well-improved land, with good buildings, and have reared a family who have done them credit. Mr. Applebee has acceptably filled several local and township offices, and is an influential citizen.

WELLS W. BACON, farmer, P. O. Hatch Hollow, was born January 13, 1826, in Plymouth, Chenango Co., N. Y., son of Henry and Roxy (Scott) Bacon. The children born to this union were Mrs. Louisa Phelps (deceased), Daniel S., Chester W., Horace S. (deceased) and Wells W. Mrs. Bacon died in Chenango County in 1828. Mr. Bacon subsequently married Mrs. Chloe Avery. Children—Ramson, Jane, now Mrs. Brown; Marion, now Mrs. Drake; and Angeline, afterward Mrs. Chapin, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Bacon came to Erie County, settling in Union Township, where the latter died about the year 1843. Mr. Bacon then married Mrs. Tillison, who also died, when he was again united in marriage with Mrs. Losina Slocum. To this union was born Harriet, now Mrs. Scott. Mr. Bacon departed this life April 15, 1862. His widow survived until April 30, 1874. Our subject was reared in Union Township. He was united in marriage, July 4, 1854, with Juliet Chaffee. They moved to Amity Township, where they have since resided, with the exception of two years (1881-83) spent in Wattsburg. Mr. Bacon was a member of the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Regiment, in which he served from March 6 to June 23, 1865. After returning, he devoted his attention to farming, and has been very industrious and successful. He has here a fine farm of seventy acres, another tract of eighty acres in this township, and one of seventy in Union Township. To Mr. and Mrs. Bacon have been born two children, George H. and Gertie Elnora. Mr. and Mrs. Bacon are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the former is a Republican in politics. Mr. Bacon and his worthy wife take great interest in the educational cause, and are people of much usefulness and influence in the community.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BALDWIN, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born in 1810, in Cambridge, Washington Co., N. Y., son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Towers) Baldwin, who were the parents of eight children, four surviving, viz., Ambrose (of Kansas), George Washington, Hiram W. and Mrs. Elizabeth Lawrence (P. O. Lundy's Lane, Penn.). Mr. E. Baldwin was a native of Massachusetts, and in 1835, came with his family to this township, traveling in a covered wagon, and settled in French Creek Valley, in the locality which was afterward called Baldwin's Flats. His first wife dying, Mr. Baldwin married Theresa Murray, who bore him David M. and Ebenezer Hibbard. He died in 1839; his widow survived until 1863. Our subject came with his father to this township; he was united in marriage December 5, 1833, with Luzette M. Brooks, of Whitehall, N. Y., by whom he had ten children, five reaching maturity, viz.: Mrs. Mary Mulvin, died February 7, 1881; Mrs. Josephine Shepardson, of Greene County, Iowa; Mrs. Abigail Mulvin; James and William P., of Meadville, Penn. Mr. Baldwin offered his services to his country in 1861, but they were declined on account of his age. He has been an industrious and successful farmer, and has acquired a farm of 220 acres of very fertile and well-improved land in French Creek Valley. He was the first Road Commissioner of Amity Township. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have just celebrated their golden wedding with their children and grandchildren. They have reared an intelligent family, and are themselves useful and influential citizens.

JOHN CALVIN BALDWIN was born May 13, 1816, in Whitehall, Washington County, N. Y. He was a son of Ebenezer Baldwin, and came to this township when about nineteen years of age, living a pioneer's life in French Creek Valley. He married, February 22, 1840, Marcia L. Field, born May 29, 1820, in Watchfield, Washington Co., Vt., daughter of Bennett and Losina Field, who came to Erie County, in 1839, settling near the Union and Amity Township line, where they died. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin settled on the present family homestead on the Wattsburg & Waterford road. They were the parents of eleven children—Mary Losina (dying in her twenty-third year, October 3, 1863), George W. (dying July 14, 1845, in his third year), Mrs. Axcie Gross of Page County, Iowa), William L., Mrs. Amelia Wood (of Chautauqua County, N. Y.), Mrs. Sylvia A. Madison (of Bradford, Penn.), John B. (of Johnson County, Neb.), George Franklin (married to Viola A. Titus, deceased), Ettie S., Eva E. and Addie L. Mr. Baldwin departed this life January 15, 1862. Mrs. Baldwin kept her young family together, rearing them successfully, and still lives with them on the homestead. She is a member of the United Brethren Church, and is a lady of more than ordinary energy and ability.

WILLIAM L. BALDWIN was born April 5, 1847. He was reared on his father's farm and attended the home schools. Our subject, in 1870, purchased a fine farm of 120 acres of well-improved land, opposite the home farm. He is a young man of good business ability, and is making a success of life.

JOSEPH C. BISBE (deceased) was born at Black River. He was united in marriage while on a visit to Madison County, N. Y., with Sally Ann Morey, born in Plainfield, Conn., in 1806, a daughter of Giddison and Tamsen (Modock) Morey, who moved to Madison County, where they both died, the latter aged ninety-three. Mr. and Mrs. Bisbe lived in Madison County until 1857, when they moved to Crawford County, Penn., where they remained about six months, when they located in Amity Township, Erie County, November, 1857, moving on a new farm which they cleared and improved. They were the parents of ten children—Albert and Chene, residents of Wattsburg; Mrs. Ruth A. Reynolds, of Chautauqua County, N. Y.; Curtis C., of Amity Township; Ephraim, of Wayne Township; Mrs. Susan Cottrell, of Venango Township; Charles, of Amity Township; Mrs. Olive Daniels, of Eastland County, Tex.; Mrs. Harriet Daniels (deceased) and George, of Chautauqua County, N. Y. Mr. Bisbe departed this life December 24, 1873; his widow still resides on the old homestead. Curtis C. is living with her and taking care of the home place. He also owns a farm of 150 acres. Curtis enlisted August, 1862, in the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was severely wounded in the left leg at the battle of Antietam, Md., September 17, 1862; on account of same was discharged January 19, 1863, and, although he tried to re-enlist, was not accepted on the same account. He was a brave, faithful soldier, and is now an influential citizen, enjoying the respect of the entire community.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAPRON, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born December 10, 1818, in Windsor County, Vt. In 1842, he moved to Washington County, N. Y., where he worked two years at tailoring, and there married Vila Williams. They came to Wattsburg, Erie County, Penn., in 1844, via Erie Canal to Buffalo, thence by steamboat to Erie. After working four years at his trade, Mr. Capron bought a farm in Amity Township, moving on it the following year. His parents, Eli and Phebe Capron, came to Erie County in 1852, residing in Lowville, where the former died in 1870 at the age of eighty-eight, and the latter in 1878 at the same age. Christopher C. owns a farm of 108 acres in Amity Township, and by his first marriage had a family of ten children; seven still survive—Julius A., of Corry; Cortland B., Stephen B., of Corry; Charles N., in the United States Army, Wyoming Territory; Edwin W., Florence C., Kan.; Mrs. Nettie A. Olden, Kenosha County, Wis., and Ida May. Mrs. Capron departed this life July 4, 1867. Mr. Capron afterward married Mary W. Clark March 4, 1868. Mr. Capron is a Republican, politically; is a man of much mental and physical activity, and a respected citizen.

IRA CHAFFEE, farmer, P. O. Watsburg, was born January, 1809, in Cayuga County, N. Y.; son of Crean B. and Polly (Bennett) Chaffee, who brought their family to North East, this county, in December, 1811. In 1819, they moved to Venango Township, where they lived two years, and then moved to Amity Township when the county was wild and unsettled. Mr. Chaffee took up a State tract of 400 acres on the road from Watsburg, and there died January, 1848. His widow survived until November, 1878. They were the parents of Mrs. Sally Hatch (deceased); Ira; Horace, in Sarpy County, Neb.; Mrs. Caroline Hill, of Kansas; Nelson; Mrs. Nancy Hayes, and John B. Ira married, in 1831, Hannah, daughter of Amos and Leona Norton. She was born June 15, 1810, in Delaware County, N. Y., and came to this county in 1830. Her mother died here in 1856. Her father moved to and died in Iowa. To Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee have been born twelve children—Ezra, deceased; Mrs. Susan Rouse, Mrs. Juliet Bacon, Mrs. Nancy Hatch, Mrs. Delia Colburn, Porter, Louisa, Steward, Warren, James, Horace, Mrs. Mariett Doolittle and Mrs. Nora Crook. Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee have been industrious and successful, besides rearing their large family, they have bought and improved 100 acres of the Chaffee homestead tract. Mrs. Chaffee is a consistent member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Chaffee is a supporter of the Democratic party, and has filled various township offices. He is one of the leading pioneers of this township, and is enjoying a hearty old age.

JOHN B. CHAFFEE, farmer, P. O. Watsburg, was born April 19, 1821, in Amity Township, Erie County, a son of Crean B. Chaffee. He was reared here on his father's farm, enduring all the hardships of the life of a pioneer's son, and did not leave the paternal roof until he was of age. He was united in marriage, November 10, 1847, with Mary Phelps, also a native of this township, and a daughter of John Phelps. To this union were born Mrs. Kate Munsee, Mrs. Polly Davis, Mrs. Ella Sears, Edith (deceased) and William, residing in Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee always lived in Amity, with the exception of eighteen months, 1856-57, when they resided in Illinois. Mrs. Chaffee departed this life November 10, 1859. October 15, 1865, Mr. Chaffee married his second wife—Mrs. Eliza Drake, born March 2, 1815, in Waterford Township, a daughter of David and Phebe Middleton. She married Dena Drake, by whom she had the following children—Jane Applebee and Mrs. Emily Inman. Mr. Drake died in 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee have a farm of 160 acres near Watsburg, besides a tract of 110 acres near Hatch Hollow. They have reared a good family, are an upright, industrious pioneer people, respected by the community.

Our subject was drafted March 4, 1865, and served in the One Hundred and Second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; he was discharged July, 1865. He was united in marriage, January 1, 1866, with Nellie C. Pond, born February 11, 1842, daughter of Seth and Electa Pond, of Concord Township, natives of Chenango County, N. Y., who came to Erie County in 1855. Mr. Pond died in Concord Township October 29, 1882. His widow is still a resident there. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee lived for two years at Lowville, where he operated the Lowville Mills, and superintended a Sunday school; then for six months he carried on a shingle mill at Hatch Hollow, where he met with a serious accident and nearly lost his left arm. He then bought a farm in Wayne Township, on which he lived five years; thence moved to Amity Township, where they have since resided. In 1881, they came to their present place, and now have a farm of seventy acres of well-improved land. To Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee have been born four children—Willis L., Jessie M., Frank W. and Lulu Belle. Mr. Chaffee is a supporter of the Republican party, acting several times as County Committeeman. He has held various local and township offices—Road Commissioner, School Director in Wayne; has been School Director, Township Assessor, Constable, is now Auditor of Amity Township. He has always discharged his duties faithfully, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the people. Mr. Chaffee, with wife, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been Class Leader about eight years, and Superintendent of Hatch Hollow Sunday School for the past three years.

ALMOND DUNCOMBE, deceased. Among the early ancestry of this gentleman was Sir Charles Duncombe, who emigrated from England to Boston in 1730, married in that city and reared a family of four sons and one daughter. Charles, the oldest son, was born May 5, 1747; married Mary Treadwell and moved to Connecticut. Their family consisted of five sons and one daughter. David, the third son of Charles, was born in Connecticut March 13, 1777, amid the living events of the Revolution. After the war, his parents moved with him and some of his brothers to Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y., from Connecticut. David was married, in Stamford, in 1802, to Phebe Nichols, of that place. To them were born three sons—Eli, Almond and Charles H. David Duncombe and wife emigrated from Delaware County, N. Y., with their three sons, and settled in this township on French Creek Flats, in May, 1830. Here they died, Mrs. Duncombe January 28, and Mr. Duncombe, February 11, 1836. Our subject, Almond Duncombe, was born April 16, 1807, in Delaware County, N. Y. He was married, January 13, 1830, to Frances Evaline Grant, of the same county, born December 22, 1808, daughter of Sweeton Grant, and here on French Creek Flats they developed their farm. To this union were born: Charles Edward and Mrs. C. W. Carter, of Union City. Mr. Duncombe was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he was actively interested in local affairs, serving as School Director, Road Commissioner, Township Treasurer, fourteen years, and as Justice of the Peace, one term. Mr. Duncombe departed this life April 21, 1883. His widow is living with her son, Charles Edward, who was born August 4, 1832. Edward received his education at the district schools and the academy at Waterford; he is interested in the educational cause and township affairs; has served as Township Clerk, School Director, Auditor, and as Justice of the Peace, ten years. Mr. Duncombe is a man of sterling integrity, a Democrat in politics, and has won the respect and confidence of the community.

SAMUEL ESTES, farmer, P. O. Lake Pleasant, was born July 4, 1829, in Broome County, N. Y., son of Dr. Elijah Estes, who came with his family to this county about 1835. Our subject was reared in this township, where he attended the common schools. He was united in marriage, October 6, 1859, with Sarah White, of this township, born July 26, 1828, daughter of Ebenezer and Anna White, natives of Vermont, who settled in this county at an early date. Mr. White died August 28, 1855, his widow in December, 1867. They left a family of six children—Mrs. Estes, Mrs. Lavilla Brown, Mrs. Salina Hedly, Mrs. Annis Richards, Mrs. Joanna Brown and Justus. Mr. and Mrs. Estes have occupied their present farm since their marriage, relying only on their own resources. They have now a fine, well-improved farm of 140 acres, with good buildings. The children born to them are Mrs. Jane Bisbee, Mrs. Lavina Hawly, Elijah J., Mrs. Ida Chaffee, Samatha, Callie, Irene, Sophia and Frank. Elijah Estes married Martha Orton, daughter of William P. Orton, who died February 15, 1882. They are earnest friends of the cause of education, and have given their children literary and musical advantages. Mr. Estes is a Democrat, politically; he is a man strong in physical and mental qualities with firm principles, and has the respect of the community.

EATON GROSS, farmer, P. O. Lake Pleasant, was born July 13, 1837, in Columbus, Warren Co., Penn., son of Gilbert, a native of Chautauqua County, and Sallie (Abels) Gross, who came to Amity Township, Erie County, about 1845, and settled near Lake Pleasant. The children born to this union are Eaton, Ethan, Mrs. Henriette Strong, Burton (of Iowa) and Byron. Mr. Gross died May 5, 1873, and Mrs. Gross, on May 23, 1873. Our subject was united in marriage, January 31, 1864, with Salina, daughter of Hiram and Susan Baldwin. He soon afterward enlisted in the Ninety-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, serving in the Virginia campaign; he was out about three months and a half. After his return he settled on his farm near Lake Pleasant. Mr. and Mrs. Gross are the parents of five children—Gilbert, Alice, Susan, Eva and Ward. They are both members of the Free-Will Baptist Church, in which Mr. Gross is a Deacon. He is a supporter of the Prohibition party, his being the first vote in Amity Township. He is a man of strict integrity, and enjoys the respect and confidence of the community.

SAMUEL W. HAYES, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born April 27, 1823, near the Green Mountains, Vt., son of Robert and Philinda (Evans) Hayes, who came to North East, this county, in 1827. They were the parents of the following children: Oliver E., deceased November 13, 1883; Walter, deceased September 29, 1883; Samuel W., Henry and Franklin, all residents of this township. R. Hayes was frozen to death while hauling logs to North East about 1829. Mrs. Hayes afterward married David Lillibridge, by whom she had Mary, now Mrs. Albridge, and Betsy, now Mrs. Conant. After the death of her second husband, Mrs. Lillibridge married Thomas Conant. She died in November, 1878. Our subject came to this township when eight years old. He was united in marriage, November 10, 1847, with Nancy Chaffee. They are the parents of two children living—Edgar and Mrs. Sophronia Baldwin. They settled on their present place in July, 1848, and have 205 acres of well-improved land. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Hayes is a Democrat in politics. He is a citizen of influence and usefulness in the community.

SAMUEL R. HAYES, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born April 8, 1842, in Amity Township, this county. He was reared on the farm of his father, Oliver E. Hayes, and educated at the home schools. He enlisted September, 1864, in the Two Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and at once went to the front, serving under Gen. Butler in the Army of the James. He afterward served under Gen. Meade in the Army of the Potomac. He participated in the engagements at Bermuda Hundred, Fort Steadman and Petersburg, besides numerous skirmishes. He was a brave soldier and received an honorable discharge June 1865. Mr. R. Hayes was united in marriage, December 25, 1865, with Ellen F., daughter of Hiram Baldwin. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes settled in the spring of 1866 on their present farm, which was then wild, but by industry and good management they have now a fine place of 190 acres, notwithstanding their misfortune in having the house and contents burned April 11, 1877. To this union have been born five children—Sarah Elizabeth, Nanie L., Myrtle G., Phillip S. and Zachariah M. Mr. Hayes is a Republican in politics. He has held various local offices, and is now School Director of Amity Township, and Treasurer of the board.

Y., respectively, who reared a family of thirteen children, and died in Madison County. Our subject was united in marriage, January 17, 1833, with Betsy D., daughter of Warren and Betsy Palmer, who settled in Wayne Township, Erie County, in 1833. They reared a family of six children, four surviving—Mrs. Betsy Hill, Warren, Neb.; Henry B., of Elgin, this county, and Mrs. Hulda Hill, of Meadville, Penn. Mr. and Mrs. Hill lived in Madison County for four years after their marriage, coming to Erie County in 1837. They resided in Wayne Township five years, then moved to present place in Amity Township in 1843. They have been industrious and successful, and have cleared and improved their farm, which now consists of 100 acres of well-improved land. They reared four children—Eunice Hill, Bertha Jeannette Palmer, Myron A. Palmer and Louis Palmer. Mr. and Mrs. Hill are pious members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The former has been a life-long Democrat, and has held the offices of Justice of the Peace, Constable, two terms, and Collector, two terms. He is a man of strict integrity, and enjoys the respect of the community.

JABEZ G. HUBBELL (deceased) was born in Weston, Conn., November 19, 1794, son of Ebenezer Hubbell. About 1809, his parents moved to Otsego County, N. Y. There our subject married, about 1822, Maria Benedict. They came to Erie County, and settled in Amity Township in 1828. They and their goods were brought the entire distance—three hundred miles—by a yoke of oxen. Mr. Hubbell bought 100 acres of wild land, which he cleared and added to until he had acquired over 400 acres. Mrs. Hubbell departed this life April 11, 1851. Their children are: Hiram, of Amity Township; David, of Union Township; Mrs. Eliza Clark, of Minnesota. Mr. Hubbell married Mrs. Harriet M. Ballard, August 31, 1853. She was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., November 22, 1818, a daughter of Thomas Baker. She married Edward Ballard, February 4, 1845, who died March 15, 1851. Their children are Mrs. H. L. Smiley, Mellie L., Terry and Judson (deceased). M., an attorney of Lancaster, N. H.; Mrs. Mary Abbott, of Vermont; Mrs. Lucy Stratton, of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Kate G. Smith, of Erie, Penn. Mrs. Ladd died May 11, 1858. Mr. Ladd subsequently married Mrs. Sarah Allen, and came to this township in 1877, and died from the effects of a fall November 28, 1877. His widow still survives. Our subject visited Montgomery County, N. Y., while a young man, and there married Martha Sammons, September 19, 1855. In 1858, they came to Erie County, and located in Venango Township, but in 1864 they moved to their present farm in Amity Township, which comprises 270 acres of finely improved land. To this union have been born five children, two surviving, viz., Anna A. and Mary A. Squire Ladd was an old-time Democrat, but now advocates prohibition. He has held various township offices, and was Justice of the Peace ten years, and Secretary of school board seven years. He, with his family, is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He is a supporter of all mental and moral improvements in the community.

JAMES A. McCULLOUGH, farmer and Justice of the Peace, P. O. Wattsburg, was born February 4, 1827, on the farm he now occupies in Amity Township. His father, James McCullough, a native of Fulton County, N. Y., was reared in Chenango County, N. Y. He was a son of James McCullough, a Lieutenant in the Revolutionary war, who served under Washington, and was one of the defenders of Bunker Hill. He married Rebecca, a daughter of Judge Casper M. Rouse, who moved to this county with family in 1819. They reared a family of seven children—Mrs. Emily Johnson, of Grundy County, Ill.; James A., Mrs. Phebe Hubbell, Caspar, John P., Henry A. and Mary (deceased). Mrs. McCullough departed this life April, 1875, and Mr. McCullough March 13, 1879. They were a strong-hearted, courageous people. James A. McCullough, our subject, was reared in this township, attending the schools of Wattsburg and the home district. He married, in 1854, Frances A., daughter of Col. J. H. Bennett, by whom he had two children—Mariett (deceased) and Mary Jane. Mrs. McCullough died December 12, 1867. November 25, 1874, Mr. McCullough married Catherine Drown, of Greene Township. Mr.

McCullough is an influential and successful citizen, liberal in his religious views, and a friend of the cause of education. He bought the homestead farm of 100 acres, to which he has added eighty-five acres. Influenced by his grandfather Rouse, who was President Judge of Chenango, and Justice of the Peace of this county, he early interested himself in the laws of his State and country. He is a Democrat in politics, and in February, 1877, was elected Justice of the Peace, re-elected in 1882, which position he has filled with honor to himself and satisfaction to his constituents.

JOHN P. McCULLOUGH, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born December 7, 1838; son of James and Rebecca McCullough. Our subject was reared in this township, and attended the academies at Wattsburg and Waterford. He purchased a tract of seventy acres, part of same lot as the homestead, and also owns fifty acres on the Beaver Dam road. Mr. McCullough spent the years from 1860 to 1873 in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. He strongly supports all educational enterprises; is a Democrat politically.

HENRY A. McCULLOUGH, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born February 11, 1841, in Waterford Township, son of James and Rebecca McCullough. He was united in marriage, February 15, 1863, with Louisa Bush, of Amity Township, but a native of Oneida County, N. Y. One son, Henry Albert, has blessed this union. Mr. McCullough has now a farm of eighty acres of well-improved land near Hatch Hollow. He is a supporter of the Democratic party. Both our subject and his brother, above mentioned, are worthy representatives of one of the oldest families of Erie County, and are citizens of enterprise and much usefulness in this community.

WILLIAM B. MAYNARD, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born June 29, 1810, in Brookfield, N. Y., son of Pliny and Julia (Stone) Maynard, natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively, who came to this county in 1831. They moved to Columbus, Warren County, about 1845, where they remained until their death. Our subject married Lois Carnahan in 1836, and settled, together with Pliny, on the State lot of 500 acres, which the latter had taken up in 1830. They lost this on account of a dispute as to the validity of their title to same. Mr. Maynard has since located on a farm of fifty-five acres, which he owns. Mrs. Maynard died April 18, 1837, leaving one child—W. C. In 1840, Mr. Maynard married his wife's sister, Lucy Carnahan, who bore him Perry, Seth, Edwin, Herbert and Fred, and five others now deceased. Mrs. Maynard is a member of the United Brethren Church. Our subject has been a lifelong Democrat, casting his first vote for Andrew Jackson. He is an upright man, enjoying the respect and esteem of the whole community.

WILLIAM CHARLES MAYNARD, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born February 4, 1837, in Amity Township, Erie County, son of William B. Maynard. At sixteen years of age, he went to Madison, Lake Co., Ohio, remaining four years, and finished his education at the Middle Ridge Academy. He started West when twenty years of age, spending some time in Minnesota and Iowa; he came to Erie County on a visit, and here married Salome Brown, August 12, 1860. They went to his property in Minnesota. Mr. Maynard enlisted August 20, 1861, in the Fifth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry, and acted in frontier service against the Indians. In February, 1862, he was honorably discharged on account of physical disabilities. Mr. Maynard sold his place in Minnesota, and settled permanently on present place, consisting of 225 acres of well-improved land. Mr. and Mrs. Maynard have been the parents of six daughters, viz., Lois J. (deceased), Carrie E., Minnie M., Ruby M., Leafy L. and Dora E. Mr. Maynard, with his wife and two daughters, is a member of the United Brethren Church. He is a Democrat in politics, strongly in favor of prohibition. He has filled various township offices, and is now Assessor of Amity Township. The family takes great interest in the development of this township.

MRS. MARY M. PARKER was born in 1818 in Onondaga County, N. Y. Her father, Samuel Winchester, was born in 1753. He traces his genealogy back through four generations to the pilgrims of the Mayflower. The family has been distinguished for men of ability in the different professions, who have sprung from its line of descendants in the United States. Our subject was united in marriage in 1836 with Ezekiel Parker, a native of Otsego County, N. Y., both having moved to Chautauqua County in their childhood. They then located in the town of Ellery in that county. In 1853, they moved to Columbus, Warren Co., Penn.; thence, in 1855, to Concord, Erie County, where they remained until 1865, when they went to Wayne Township, where they lived until 1866, when they moved to the place they now occupy near Wattsburg. To them were born nine children, four surviving—Mrs. Theresa A. Cooper, Cephas W., who served eighteen months in the Federal army, Clark M., and La Fayette C., a resident of Ashland, Neb. Mr. Parker was a soldier in the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; he died in January, 1872. Clark M. Parker was educated principally at the academy at Wattsburg and the State Normal School, Edinboro. He was married, September 7, 1882, to Ida A. Card, of Clymer, N. Y. He adopted the profession of teaching at twenty-one; he taught at Clymer and Ellery, N. Y., Sioux Falls, Dak., and is now the popular teacher of the Sammons School, south of Wattsburg. He enjoys the reputation of being a well-educated, faithful and efficient teacher, and is a successful educator. He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Wattsburg, and while at Sioux Falls, Dak., was licensed as a local preacher, and rendered efficient service in the Gospel cause. Since his father's death, he has purchased the home place of fifty-four acres, near Wattsburg. Mr. Parker is respected by the entire community as a citizen of integrity and influence.

HUNTINGTON PERSONS, farmer, P. O. Wayne, was born December 9, 1810, in Sandisfield, Berkshire Co., Mass., son of Elihu and Polly Persons, natives of New England, who reared a family of nine children, three, besides Huntington, surviving—Timothy, in Connecticut; Mrs. Esther Doty, Iowa; and Mrs. Catherine Roberts, of Berkshire County, Mass. Our subject was educated in the home schools, and married, October 11, 1837, Thedy Ann, a daughter of Joseph and Phebe Dowd, of Tyringham, Mass. They moved to Gauga County, Ohio, where they lived four years; they then spent eleven years in Connecticut, after which they came to Amity Township, Erie County, and settled where they now live in 1852. Here they bought, improved and increased their farm, until they are now the possessors of 110 acres of finely-improved land. Their children are Huntington D., of Union City; Annette; Mrs. Delia A. Carter, who died in 1877, leaving two children—Anna J. and William H.; and Hiram M., whose decease occurred April 16, 1870. Mr. Persons is a man of strong constitution and active mind; he is an upright citizen, and enjoys the respect of all who know him.

EDWIN READ, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born September 6, 1840. His father, Timothy Read, born in Granville, Mass., July 14, 1796, was one of the early settlers of this township, coming in 1819. He was married, January, 1821, to Elizabeth Carson. They took up their residence on a State lot of 500 acres of land, where A. F. Tanner now lives. The surviving children born to this union are—Rachel; George C., of Clinton, Iowa; Rev. Philander Read, of Augusta, Kan.; Timothy, New Jersey; West, at Harmonsburg, Crawford Co., Penn. (he enlisted in the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and at the battle of Antietam was severely wounded, losing his left leg); and Edwin. Philander, while attending a theological seminary at Auburn, N. Y., enlisted in a New York regiment, and was soon appointed Chaplain. Mrs. Read departed this life, February 22, 1854; subsequently, Mr. Read married Eliza Van Curen, of Waterford Township; he died June 14, 1879; he was for a long time a Deacon in the Presbyterian Church at Wattsburg, was a strong-hearted, energetic pioneer citizen, highly respected by his large circle of acquaintances. Our subject, Edwin, was united in marriage, April 22, 1863, with Carrie Carson, by whom he has one daughter—Effie. In the spring of 1865, Mr. Read entered the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Regiment, and returned home the latter part of June. He owns a farm of seventy-seven acres of well-improved land; he, with his wife and daughter, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Read, formerly a Republican, now supports prohibition principles; he is a man of sterling integrity, and an influential citizen.

GEORGE SAMMONS, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born January 10, 1832, in Sharon, N. Y., and is a son of Benjamin J. and Anna (Hess) Sammons, natives of Ulster County and Montgomery County, respectively, who lived in Schoharie County until 1845, in Montgomery County until 1855, when they located near Wattsburg, Amity Township, Erie County. Their children are—Cornelius, of Monroe County, N. Y.; Mrs. Martha Ladd, this township; George, Rev. I. D. Sammons, of Spring Creek, Warren County, Penn., and Thomas. Mrs. Sammons died February 20, 1875; Mr. Sammons, February 9, 1880. Our subject married, March 31, 1858, Fannie A. Harrington, who was born September 2, 1835, a daughter of Rev. Fordyce and Cynthia (Boutelle) Harrington, natives of Massachusetts. Their children are—Sarah E. D., Mrs. Fannie A. Sammons and Mrs. Cynthia B. Owen. Mrs. Harrington died January 24, 1881; her husband still survives. To Mr. and Mrs. Sammons have been born the following children: William H., Fannie Boutelle, Martha L., Georgiana, De Witt B. and Fordyce F. Mr. Sammons has a finely-improved farm of 200 acres, where he has resided since marriage. Mr. Sammons and several members of his family are connected with the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in politics, and has held the positions of Township Assessor, Treasurer, Commissioner and other offices, with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. He liberally supports all enterprises conducive to the improvement of the community.

THOMAS B. SAMMONS, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born January 19, 1843, in Schoharie County, N. Y.; his parents moved to Montgomery County in 1845, where they remained until 1855, when they came to Amity Township, near Wattsburg, this county. Here our subject was reared on his father's farm, attending the Academy at Wattsburg. He was united in marriage February 22, 1872, with Lucretia Maxwell, born November 17, 1840, in Lowville, Erie County; her father, Edward B. Maxwell, came to Venango Township, when about sixteen years old (in 1835), with his father's family, and was united in marriage with Eveline, a daughter of Burrell Tracy, who bore him the following children: Chester T., of Spencer; Edith A., resident of Charles City, and Elmer B., of Rockwell, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell moved to Charles City, Iowa, in 1855, and are still residing there. Mr. and Mrs. Sammons have had three children—Freddie and an infant son (both deceased) and Eva A. After their marriage, they settled on a part of the B. J. Sammon's estate, and have 200 acres of well-improved land. They are members of the Presbyterian Church.

CHARLES F. STEWART, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born June, 1828, in Amity Township, Erie County, Penn., on the place he now occupies. He is a son of James and Laura (Comstock) Stewart, natives of Monroe County, N. Y., who came to Concord Township this county, about 1824, but settled in Amity Township in 1826. Their children are—Mrs. Sarah A. Hubbell, Mrs. Cordelia Culbertson, of Meadville, Penn.; Mrs. Luana Church, of Bradford; E. R. Stewart, of Corry; Charles; Mrs. Mariett Long, of Iowa (deceased); Hamilton (deceased), and Angeline Palmer, of Elgin. CURTIS GRATE, farmer and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Keepville, was born March 18, 1844, in Portage County, Ohio. In August, 1878, Mr. Grate came to Erie County, Penn., bringing with him a steam saw mill, and engaged in the lumber business, in which he has since continued in the same neighborhood. His mill, which has a capacity of 10,000 feet per day, is kept running constantly. He purchases all the logs he can procure, and is also owner of timber lands from which he uses the lumber; he has also a shingle mill in connection, and makes large quantities of shingles; his lumber is sold in Conneaut, Ohio, and large quantities are shipped from Albion, Penn., to other points; he uses hemlock, beech, cucumber and soft maple lumber. Mr. Grate was united in marriage, November 1, 1866, with Miss Jeanette, daughter of Michael Houck, of Ohio. Two children have been born to this union, viz., Caddie M. and Clyde M. Mr. Grate owns 160 acres of land. Our subject enlisted August 12, 1862, in the One Hundred and Fourth Ohio Infantry, serving under Gens. Burnside and Sherman with the Army of the Cumberland, and took part in the siege of Knoxville, battles of Cumberland Gap, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, siege of Atlanta, battles of Wilmington, N. C., Franklin and Nashville, Tenn., and was with Sherman in his celebrated march to the sea, and in several other engagements. He was honorably discharged in June, 1865. Mr. Grate is a member of the G. A. R.

WILLIAM M. GRIFFEY, farmer and dairyman, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born in Conneaut Township, on the place he now occupies, March 5, 1819, and is a son of George Griffey, Sr., who came to Erie County about 1797, settling on our subject's farm, Conneaut Township, in 1802; he was a native of Wales; he raised a family of eight children, four of whom are now living; he was a soldier of the war of 1812, and departed this life in 1843. Our subject was united in marriage, February 13, 1843, with his first wife, Maria Sartwell, a native of Vermont. Two children were born to this union, viz., Sarah L., wife of Mode Brown, and Elvira, wife of George Putney. His wife died March 7, 1845, and May 24, 1846, he married his second wife, Ann M. Baird, daughter of Stephen G. Baird, of Vermont. Seven children have crowned this union, one dying in infancy. The names of those now living are William H., Ida O., Herbert L., John J., Elmer E. and Morton B. Our subject has about 250 acres of well-improved land, over and above a great amount he has given his children; he also owns a cheese factory in West Springfield, which his son Elmer is now running; he is a Republican in politics.

JASPER O. GRIFFIN (deceased) was born April 5, 1799, in Addison County, Vt., son of James Griffin. Our subject came to Erie County December 2, 1835. Mr. Griffin was united in marriage, February 14, 1833, with Miss Margaret, daughter of Daniel Anderson, a native of Maine; his mother came from New Hampshire. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin have raised four children, three now surviving. Mary died when aged twenty-three. The others are John A., Washington I. and Maria L., wife of William Loomis. John A. was a soldier in the late war; enlisted in the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served under Gen. Greig in the Army of the Potomac; he participated in the siege of Petersburg, the engagement at Thatcher's Run and in the capture of Lee's army; he was honorably discharged August, 1865; he is a member of the G. A. R., Washington; served in the United States Navy one year during the war. Jasper O. Griffin was the owner of fifty acres of fine land; he was a member of the F. A. M. and a member of a Chapter of R. A. M., of which he had been a member since 1823; he served as Justice of the Peace ten years; he died September 27, 1883, and was buried with Masonic honors September 30.

M. A. HARRINGTON. The Harrington family, according to the best information, are lineal descendants of one of two brothers who came to America from England about 1549. Israel Harrington was of the third generation, and was born in Rhode Island February 11, 1734. Mehittebel, his wife, was born March 11, 1739. They had two daughters—Mary, born August 31, 1762, and Lucretia, born March 5, 1767. They moved to Danby Township, Rutland Co., Vt., in 1770, where two sons were born—Israel, October 16, 1774, and Matthews, April 17, 1782. Mehittebel died in Vermont March 9, 1798. Israel, Sr., was a soldier in the Revolution, and died in Sandusky County, Ohio, September 10, 1825. Mary married a Mr. Harrington in Vermont, and died in that State. Lucretia married Nathaniel Harrington, who was born in Vermont April 2, 1774; they moved to Michigan, and reared a large family near Lansing. Lucretia died June 27, 1854, and Nathaniel died August 22, 1855. Israel, Jr., married and moved to Sandusky County, Ohio; raised a large family, kept hotel, was a Judge of the courts for many years, and died at Elmore, in that county. Matthews, the youngest, settled in Springfield Township in the year 1799, and soon moved to Conneaut Township. In 1802, he married Elizabeth Spry, born near Chesapeake Bay November 26, 1786. Elizabeth, his wife, died April 16, 1845. They reared a family of ten children—William, born March 22, 1805; Sally, April 18, 1807; Lucretia, July 9, 1809; Catharine, September 9, 1811; Mary, March 6, 1814; Daniel, April 11, 1816; Israel, May 20, 1818; Ira S., May 26, 1822; Lorretta, August 13, 1824; and Moses A., April 2, 1828. William married Jane Porter. They raised a family of six children—Ira P., Mary, John, Milton, Margaret and Judd. William died January 31, 1881. Sally married James Morse, and settled in Sandusky County, Ohio; they raised a family of six children—Harriet, Israel, Vashiti, Josephine, Sarah and Nathan. Sally died February 11, 1869; James died June 11, 1870. Lucretia lived and died in Conneaut Township September 19, 1858. Catherine married William B. DeWolf, a farmer of Conneaut Township; they raised a family of eight daughters—Elenor, Melissa, Sarah, Loretta, Mary, Matilda, Estella and Izora. Catherine died February 16, 1876; William B. died November 11, 1883. Mary married William C. Devereaux, a farmer of Conneaut; raised three children—Ralph, Emily and Jane. Mary died March 3, 1843; William C. died in December, 1879. Daniel married Margaret Porter, and had two daughters—Loretta and Louisa. Daniel died in Columbus, Ohio, in 1844; Margaret died about the year 1876. Israel married Matilda Barney; had eight children—Barney, Lucy, Chester, Cassius, Elizabeth, Smith, Mattie and Jay. Ira S. married Amarilla Case, who died September 9, 1855; had three children—Milo, Lizzie and Sarah. Ira's second wife is Mary J. Patterson, married March 5, 1857; had two children—Fannie and George. Ira was a Sheriff in Taylor County, Iowa, also United States Marshal, and Lieutenant in the rebellion. Loretta married Benjamin F. Barney; they had three children—Harriet, Henry and Lottie. Benjamin died May 27, 1882. Loretta married for her second husband Abner Scott, of Conneaut, Ohio. Moses A. married Harriet S. Patterson; they raised three children—Rose De Albertie, Inez M. and George Lee. Moses A. commenced business at Cherry Hill as farmer and store-keeper. In 1862 and 1863, was a Lieutenant in the State service, and in the fall of the latter year moved to Iowa, where he engaged in mercantile business until his return to Pennsylvania in 1865. Matthews Harrington, who was born, as before stated, in the State of Vermont April 17, 1782, left his native State at the age of sixteen years, and worked by the month on a farm in the State of New York for two years. Subsequently, after many adventures, he bought a claim in Springfield, which he afterward sold, and bought land of H. J. Huidekuper, where Cherry Hill now stands. Besides this, he bought from time to time in other localities and States about 1,500 acres of land. Mr. M. Harrington's first regular house was made of logs, with puncheon floor, and, in the absence of nails, was covered with shakes held fast by weight poles. About the year 1820, he built a large frame barn now standing at Cherry Hill, the timbers of which are very large, and in 1829, he built a large frame house, which was burned in 1841. He was a soldier of the war of 1812. He married for his second wife Mrs. Ruth Pomeroy, formerly Miss Ruth Crane, daughter of Elihu Crane. She was the first white female child born in the township. She died about the year 1875. Matthews Harrington died April 1, 1864.

IRA P. HARRINGTON, farmer and dealer in agricultural implements, P. O. Albion, was born August 30, 1830, in this township, son of William Harrington, a native of same township, born March 22, 1805, died January 29, 1881; his remains are buried at Keepville, this county. Our subject's grandfather, a native of Vermont, came to this county about 1800, and here spent the remainder of his days, being one of the very first settlers. Mr. Harrington was united in marriage, September 10, 1855, with Mahaley Bently, a daughter of Martin Bently; she was born in New York July 13, 1833. But one child blessed this union, dying in infancy. Mr. Harrington is now the owner of forty-three acres of well-improved land, situated near Albion Station; he deals extensively in agricultural implements, selling a great number of the Rawson Mowers and Reapers, of which he makes a specialty. Both Mr. Harrington and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The former is a member of the order of Freemasons. He enlisted August 22, 1862, in Company A, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served with the Army of the Potomac; he engaged in the battle of Fredericksburg, and was afterward appointed Commissary Sergeant of the brigade, serving as such sixteen months; then as Commissary of the division until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged May 5, 1865. After the war, he engaged in mercantile business at Keepville, Penn.; was also Postmaster. In the winter of 1879-80, he was an officer in the House of Representatives; he is a Republican in politics.

JOHN HARRINGTON, farmer, P. O. Keepville, was born September 6, 1835, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., son of William Harrington, also a native of Erie County, dying January 31, 1881. Our subject is a brother of Ira P. Harrington, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. John Harrington was united in marriage, October 23, 1859, to Miss Mary, daughter of William Kinney, formerly of Crawford County, Penn. Seven children have crowned this union, viz., Alice A., Mark W., Maggie, Millie, Josie, Frankie and John, R. Mr. Harrington enlisted during the late war, August, 1861, in Company A, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the Second Army Corps under Gen. Hancock, with the Army of the Potomac. After serving about a year, he was honorably discharged on account of disability, caused by disease contracted in the army. He is the owner of about one hundred acres of fine land, with nice buildings. He is a Republican in politics, and is one of the substantial men of Conneaut Township, in which he has served as Township Auditor one term, and now as Road Commissioner. His grandfather, Harrington, was a soldier of the war of 1812, and assisted in getting Perry's fleet over the bar at Erie.

MRS. LUCY J. HEDDEN, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born March 31, 1835, in New York. She is a daughter of John Rose, who came to Erie County in 1832, settled near Albion, and died in 1868. Our subject was married, August 24, 1847, to Ephraim C. Hedden, born June 30, 1811, died April 3, 1882, at the age of seventy-one. All that knew him hold his memory in deepest respect. He left his widow in possession of his entire estate, upon a portion of which, in Cherry Hill, she is now residing. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hedden, both living, viz., John G. and Charles R. The former is a blacksmith and carriage manufacturer, Cherry Hill; he was united in marriage, June 11, 1872, with Miss Martha Barrett, of Ohio. They are the parents of one child—Lena M., born February 8, 1879. They belong to the E. A. U. Mr. Hedden is a Republican in politics.

IRA HOGLE, farmer, P. O. Clark's Corners, Ohio, was born September 10, 1818, in the State of New York, and is a son of William Hogle, who came to Erie County when our subject was a small boy. He settled in Springfield Township, and was one of the prominent men of the county. He raised a family of ten children, and died about 1848. Ira Hogle was united in marriage, February 22, 1844, with Miss Pattie Pope, who died March 18, 1880. Six children were born to this union, two of whom died in infancy. The survivors are Flora (wife of Henry C. Dow), Wallace W., Ida E., Guy S. Mr. Hogle married for his second wife, December 13, 1880, Mrs. Elizabeth Bennett, widow of Oren Bennett, and daughter of Russell Bulfum, of Ashtabula County, Ohio. She was the mother of seven children by her first husband, viz., Mary A. (wife of Alfred Zimmerman), Joseph R., Olive E. (now the wife of E. Randall), Charles D., Emma J. (now the wife of Frank Washburn), William A. and John. Mr. Hogle has 153 acres of finely improved land. During the war he held the office of Town Commissioner. Three of his brothers engaged in the war—Manvill was killed at the battle of Lookout Mountain, but Horace and Hosea returned home after the conflict; both are now living in Ohio. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and during the war aided the Union by his able administration as Commissioner.

SAMUEL E. HUNTLEY, farmer, P. O. Clark's Corners, was born February 26, 1827, on the farm where he now resides, in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn.; he is a son of Orin Huntley, who came from Pierpont, Ohio, in 1826; he was a native of the State of New York, and his wife of Connecticut. S. E. Huntley was united in marriage November 31, 1852, with Miss Charlotte H., daughter of John Woodard, of Crawford County, Penn.; her mother was a Foster, and is descended from the first family that ever settled in Beaver Township, Crawford County. Mrs. Huntley was born April 26, 1824. Five children, all now living, were born to this union—Lois J., wife of Oscar B. Wait; Mary J., wife of Perry Hayward; Lamira I., wife of L. L. Lewis; Caroline C., wife of Burt H. Fuller, and Florence A. Mr. Huntley owns 204 acres of well-improved land. All his children are living near him; he is a strong Republican, has held the office of Township Treasurer; he has been in the dairy business eighteen years, and his wife has made $10,400 worth of butter and cheese in twelve years, besides what was consumed on the farm; at an early day, the Indians boiled salt on the farm now occupied by our subject; there is a salt spring on it, and a large chestnut tree grown over the cinders of the Indians' fire.

SAMUEL HURST, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born April 16, 1815, in England, son of Daniel Hurst, a native of Manchester, England. Samuel Hurst emigrated to America in 1838, returned to England in 1839, where he remained three years, and buried his parents; he returned to this country, settling in Erie County, Penn., in the year 1842; became naturalized five years after arriving, and with the exception of the time spent in the army has always resided in this county; he married his first wife in England, where she died, leaving one child, a resident of that country. Mr. Hurst was united in marriage, November 30, 1845, with his second wife, Ann, daughter of Thomas Beaumont, an Englishman. To this union have been born five children, all dying in infancy, with the exception of Thomas, who survives, born May 23, 1847. Our subject enlisted September 1861, in Company C, First Regiment Ohio Artillery; he served in the Army of the Cumberland, under Buell; he participated in the battle of Mill Spring and in several skirmishes. While in the army, he contracted rheumatism and chronic diarrhoea, from which he has never recovered, and for which he receives a pension; he was discharged for disability in June, 1862; he was then about forty-six years of age; he loves the country which he helped to defend as much as any native born citizen. Mr. Hurst is the owner of eighty acres of well-improved land near Albion; he is a member of the G. A. R.

LYSANDER P. JACKSON, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born in Elk Creek Township, Erie County, Penn., January 5, 1823, son of Lyman Jackson, a native of Vermont, who came to Erie County in 1805, with his father, and settled in what is now known as Albion, but at that time called Jacksonville, after the grandfather of our subject. This grandfather was a soldier of the Revolution; he raised a family of thirteen children, ten boys and three girls; seven of the former were soldiers in the war of 1812, and their father at the same time; but one of these uncles is now living, Abner, residing near Wellsville, Ohio. Our subject's father died in Wisconsin January 11, 1879; he was a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church for fifty years; he held the office of Justice of the Peace for a number of years, and was a very prominent man, and a devoted Christian. Lysander P. Jackson was united in marriage, May 21, 1846, with Miss Elizabeth, a daughter of Robert McKee, and sister of James McKee, whose biography appears in this volume. They have one child, Sadie E., born July 29, 1852. L. P. Jackson has been in the saw mill business, was in the oil regions, and has also worked at the carpenter's trade; he was at one time in mercantile business, also Postmaster; he is now a very successful farmer, owning fifty-five acres of well-improved land; he is a Democrat in politics. Mrs. Jackson's brothers, William B. and Thomas J., make their home with them.

ABNER N. KEEP, farmer, P. O. Keepville, was born October 3, 1824, in Conneaut, Erie Co., Penn., on a farm located within half a mile of the one on which he now lives. He is a son of Marsena Keep, Jr., a native of New York, who came to this county with his father in 1803. Abner N. Keep's father lived in Conneaut all his life. The township was then all woods, infested with a great number of wolves, bears and deer; he caught many wolves for which a bounty was offered. He was married, in 1823, to Polly Hewitt, and they raised a family of eleven children, our subject being the eldest. He married, October 12, 1848, Miss Maranda, daughter of Elijah Amidon, of Crawford County, Penn. This union has resulted in the birth of nine children, all surviving, viz., Zachary T., born October 10, 1849; Ellen L., born August 9, 1851; Emma, born February 28, 1853; Frank E., born September 8, 1855; Polly E., born October 28, 1857; Sallie L., born August 18, 1860; George A., born January 29, 1863; Marsena L., born December 14, 1864, and Hiram A., born February 2, 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Keep are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the former's father was one of the founders of the church at Keepville, where he is now buried. Mr. Keep owns 105 acres of well-improved land. He is a staunch Republican, was at one time a Whig; he and wife are members of the E. A. U.

PROSPER M. KEEP, farmer, P. O. Keepville, was born April 21, 1829, in Keepville, Penn., and is a son of Marsena Keep, Jr., who came to Erie County with his father when only about one year old. His father, our subject's grandfather, Marsena Keep, Sr., was a native of New York, and one of the earliest settlers of Erie County; he was a soldier in the war of 1812; he died in the fall of 1851, and is buried on the old homestead near Keepville. The father of our subject was one of the principal founders of the Wesleyan Methodist Church at Keepville, giving the ground on which the church stands, besides large subscriptions, and was very much interested in church matters; he died in 1877. Prosper M. Keep was united in marriage April 17, 1851, with Miss Mary C., daughter of William Harrington, who was born in 1805 in this county; he was one of the first men in this section, raised a family of six children (Ira P. Harrington, whose sketch appears in this work, was one of his children), and died in January, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Keep have been the parents of nine children, five of whom died in infancy; the survivors are: Clara A., wife of Dr. J. J. Little, of Ohio; Marshall M., Willie O., and Glennie W. Both Mr. and Mrs. Keep are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church; the former is a Republican in politics; the latter's grandfather, Porter, was an Abolitionist in an early day. He was instrumental in running slaves through the Underground Railroad to Canada. The subject of this sketch owns eighty-five acres of land, and is a prosperous farmer. His son, Marshall, is a dentist, and resides in Darke County, Ohio.

BRADFORD E. KEEP, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born September 27, 1830, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., son of Matthew Keep, who was also born in same township, and is now living with our subject. The latter married May 6, 1855, Miss Salome S. Bumpus, daughter of Isaac Bumpus, who moved to Erie County about the year 1839. B. E. Keep enlisted January 5, 1864, in the One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the Army of the Cumberland about fifteen months. He had the typhoid fever while at Camp Copeland, Pittsburgh, from the effects of which he never recovered, and for which he has applied for a pension. He was discharged on account of disability, February, 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Keep are the parents of two children, viz., Josie and Frank. Our subject, wife and daughter are members of the Universalist Church. The former is a F. & A. M., a member of the G. A. R. and E. A. U. He is quite prosperous in business, and the owner of seventy five acres of land. In politics, he is a Republican.

SYLVESTER L. KENNEDY, farmer and manufacturer of tile and pressed brick, P. O. Albion, was born July 22, 1830, in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of Royal Kennedy, a soldier of 1812, who came to Erie County in 1797; he was a native of Connecticut. The grandfather of our subject was among the very first settlers here, and possessed about 400 acres of land. Sylvester L. Kennedy was united in marriage with Adaline M., daughter of Samuel Wells, of Elk Creek Township, born February 24, 1831. To this union were born four children—Frank Z., born September 7, 1856, died April, 1863; Sylvia E., born July 16, 1859, wife of J. L. Taylor; Frederick S., born December 28, 1865, and Lola M., born October 19, 1871. Our subject and wife have but one grandson—James Robert Taylor, born January 30, 1882. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy are members of the Christian Church. The former is also a member of the Equitable Aid Society; he possesses eighty-two acres of land, on which he manufactures tile and pressed brick, he being the only manufacturer of the kind within seven miles; he ships large quantities to other points.

WILLIAM KINNEY, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born May 20, 1812, in Madison County, N. Y., son of Saul Kinney, a native of Vermont; his wife, our subject's mother, was a native of Rhode Island. William Kinney came to Erie County, Penn., in 1844, finally settling here in 1858. On November 1, 1838, he married for his first wife, Miss Annie Little. Four children were born to this union—Mary E., wife of John Harrington;

Porter A.; Eunice E., died in 1880, and Florence M., wife of D. R. Spauldin. Mrs. Annie Kinney died November 12, 1855. Our subject, August 14, 1856, married his second wife, Annie E. Smith, widow, who died September 17, 1856; he then married, November 15, 1857, Miss Susan Torry, of Edinboro, who died June 6, 1878. Mr. Kinney is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is owner of eighty-two acres of improved land, and a house and lot at Cherry Hill; he has been prosperous in business; his children are all settled in this township.

PORTER A. KINNEY, farmer and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born October 10, 1849, in Crawford County, Penn., son of William Kenney, a resident of Erie County, who came to this county with our subject about the year 1844. The latter was united in marriage, October 2, 1854, with Miss Harriet L., daughter of Benjamin F. Barney, and sister of Henry A. Barney, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Kinney was born January 2, 1844. Two children have been born to this union—Bertie E., born March 21, 1868, and Ina M., born October 10, 1876. Mrs. Kinney is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and owns seventy acres of nice land, with good buildings thereon. Mr. Kinney has always taken much interest in educational matters, and has served as School Director; he is one of the owners of a saw mill, situated half a mile south of the farm, which has a capacity of about 3,000 feet per day, and which is kept generally running. He has been quite successful in business; is a strong Republican in politics.

WILLIAM LEYNTZ, farmer, P. O. Clark's Corners, Ohio, was born January 31, 1833, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., and is a son of James Leyntz, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Erie County about 1830; was an early settler, helping to clear the country, which at that time was covered with woods. He took quite an interest in church matters, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died August, 1879. His wife was also a native of Pennsylvania. She died June 2, 1859. Our subject was united in marriage July 1, 1860, with Miss Lucy Taylor, also a descendant of one of the early settlers. Two children have blessed this union, viz., Frederick W. and Clara, wife of Elmer Griffey, of Springfield. Mr. Leyntz is a member of the Grange, and owner of 195 acres of fine land in this township, and of a small place in Ohio. He is owner of 100 sheep, 20 head of cattle, and eight horses. He raises from 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of grain a year. Mr. Leyntz takes quite an interest in all educational matters, and has served as School Director for six years. He is a Republican in politics. Mrs. Leyntz's brother Frederick was a soldier in the late war, and was with Sherman in his celebrated march to the sea. Mr. Leyntz was one of the minute men that responded to Gov. Curtin's call when Lee made his raid on Pennsylvania.

DR. ORLANDO LOGAN, physician and surgeon, P. O. Albion, was born August 15, 1829, in the State of New York. He is a son of Lemuel Logan, who came about 1836 with his family to this county, where he remained chiefly until his death, which occurred September 8, 1869. The subject of this sketch read medicine at Kingsville, Ohio, and attended three courses of lectures. He holds two diplomas. He commenced practicing in 1856 in Titusville, Penn., then practiced two years in Wattsburg, and since in Albion, Penn. He was married, in 1849, to Miss Mary A. McCray, of Concord. Five children were born to this union, the first two dying in infancy; their third child, Martha E., was born March 20, 1852, married to J. A. Robinson. Ettie F., wife of N. H. Samrey, was born December 14, 1856, and Robert O., born August 28, 1860. Our subject entered the army in March, 1865, serving in the Medical Department, Wilmington, N. C., under Gen. Hawley, and returned home in August of the same year. Mrs. Logan died April 20, 1882. Dr. Logan was married in March, 1883, to Miss Nellie C., daughter of the Rev. J. B. Page, of Wellsburg, Penn. The Doctor is a P. M. of a lodge of F. & A. M., a member of the I. O. O. F. and the G. A. R. He is a very prominent man in the community, is a Republican, and represented Erie County two years in the State Legislature.

Tracy, was born January 16, 1812, in New York, son of Rhodolphus Loomis, who came to Erie County, Penn., with his family in 1820, settled in Conneaut Township, and raised a family of twelve children, seven of whom survive. Both father and mother were natives of Connecticut; the former was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He departed this life in about 1844, and is buried in the Randall Graveyard, near Albion. Our subject was united in marriage in 1837, to Miss Sally, a daughter of John Taylor, who came to Erie, Penn., about the same time as Rhodolphus Loomis. Albert Loomis and wife were the parents of two children, viz., Malissa and Marilla; the latter died in 1866. Mrs. Loomis' death occurred in 1841. In 1844, Mr. Loomis married Miss Elizabeth Carr, daughter of Benjamin Carr, of Conneaut, who came to Erie County in 1811. Mr. and Mrs. Loomis are the parents of eight children, all surviving, viz.: Lucy, wife of Burdett Seely; Harriet, wife of Augustus Whitbeck; Weltha, wife of Frank Doner; Julia, wife of A. B. Cheeney; James, George, William and Wilbert. Our subject is a self-made man, and owns 100 acres of well-improved land. He is a Republican in politics.

JAMES L. McKEE, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born July 30, 1828, on the farm where he is now residing, son of Robert McKee, Jr., who came from Carlisle, Penn., to Erie with his father in 1801, when it was a perfect wilderness; his father brought with him a yoke of oxen, and was six weeks on the road; he hauled salt from Pittsburgh, after coming West; he was a very strict religious man, taking much interest in church matters; his son, Robert, Jr., the father of our subject, raised a family of four children, all prominent citizens of this township; his widow is now living in Conneaut, Ohio, and is the wife of Edwin Dorman. James L. McKee was united in marriage, April 24, 1853, with Miss Eliza J. Moe, of Monroe, Ohio. They had a family of four children, three of whom survive—Edward, George V. and Mary A. The other child, Charles R., departed this life April 9, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. McKee are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the former is owner of 127 acres of fine, improved land, part of his grandfather's old homestead; he has served the township as Assessor two terms, Treasurer one term, School Director two terms and Collector one term; he is a Republican in politics, and is a representative man of this section.

IRA A. MARCY, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born December 4, 1827, in Ashtabula County, Ohio, son of Adolphus Marcy (deceased), who came to Erie County in 1838, and settled in Conneaut Township, in September, 1852. Our subject was united in marriage, August 14, 1852, with Eliza, daughter of Richard R. Robinson. Five children were born to this union, all living at present time. Their names are Edie C., Frank E., Harry K., Josephine S. and Carl R. Mrs. Marcy departed this life, September, 1867. Mr. Marcy married January 14, 1868, his second wife, Mrs. Harriet Howard, widow of Capt. Charles Howard; she is a member of the Christian Church, and is owner of 120 acres of first-class land, well improved. Mr. Marcy was a School Director ten years, Road Commissioner three years, Collector and Constable one year, and Assistant Assessor one year; is a straight Republican in politics.

GEORGE C. MILLS, farmer and horse dealer, P. O. Platea, was born November 25, 1839, in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of Jesse and Harriett Mills (married in 1817), who came to this county from New York State about 1830. They reared a family of five girls and four boys, the latter the only ones now living, two of whom reside in Erie County. Jesse Mills taught school to some extent in an early day, and was one of the prominent men of this section, particularly in the Christian Church; his decease occurred May 2, 1881. His widow is now living, in good health, in her eighty-sixth year. During the late war, Mr. George C. Mills enlisted August 20, 1861, in Company H, in the Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, the first regiment to leave Erie County, Penn., which was connected with the Third Brigade, Fifth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the siege of Yorktown, and battles of Hanover Court House, Chickahominy, Gaines' Mill, Malvern Hill (where he received a wound in his right hand), Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, Rappahannock Station and Mine Run. He also took part in the battle of the Wilderness, Laurel Hill, and in the entire siege of Petersburg; was at the front and on duty with the exception of six weeks in hospital owing to a wound, serving thirty-seven months; he received an honorable discharge, September 20, 1864; he returned home, and in 1865, married Miss Nettie M., a daughter of A. J. Fullerton, of Crawford County, Penn. Three children have crowned this union—Arthur D., aged sixteen; Norah H., thirteen, and Homer A., six months, all surviving at the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Mills are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The former is Sunday School Superintendent; a member of the G. A. R.; he is the owner of a good farm, consisting of eighty acres, with fine buildings. He deals to some extent in fine horses; is a life-long Republican in politics.

RILEY MORRISON, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born March 25, 1800, in Delaware County, N. Y., son of James Morrison, who came to Erie County in 1840. Out of his family of eleven children, nine growing to be men and women, only two are surviving; James departed this life in 1853. Our subject, was united in marriage, in 1829, with Miss Sarah, daughter of John Randall. Four children blessed this union—John R. (deceased), Rosella L. (died of consumption in 1859), Hannah L., living, and Julia D., who died in 1872. John R. enlisted January 1, 1864, in the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry; served eight months and contracted diseases which afterward caused his death. While home on a furlough, August, 1852, he was united in marriage with Mary, daughter of Aaron Brown, of Springfield Township. Three children crowned this union—Sarah A., Edward R. and Rosella L., who died, aged eleven. His widow receives a pension and has her two children living with her; her son owns seventy-three acres and she has thirty-six acres of fine land. She and her father-in-law are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Riley Morrison's wife departed this life in 1869. Our subject is eighty-four years of age, and has been a representative man. In early days he was a Whig in politics, but is now a staunch Republican.

JONATHAN R. ORTON, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born March 27, 1813, in Warren Co., N. Y., of which his father, John Orton, was also a native. The subject of this sketch came to Erie Co., Penn., with his wife and 3 sons in 1846. He started a blacksmith's shop in Albion, Penn., at which point he continued in this business for over 20 years. Mr. Orton was united in marriage with Elida Canfield, a native of New York, who died leaving 5 children. He then took for his wife Frances, sister of Hon. S. M. Brainerd, Member of Congress, which union resulted in 2 children. This wife dying Dec.

25, 1863, our subject married Mrs. Harriet Orton, widow of his brother, J. W. Orton; no children were born to this union. After her decease, which occurred in 1874, Mr. Orton married Jane De Wolf, widow of Lorán De Wolf, and after her death married Mrs. Mary Eaton, widow of Albert Eaton, with whom he is now living. The names of his children are Edward, born April 17, 1839; Reuben, born Dec. 1, 1840; Mason A., born Dec. 24, 1842; Mary A., born March 14, 1848 (wife of Harrison Irish, of Albion); Avery C., born July 28, 1850; Emma J., born Sept. 20, 1852 (wife of E. F. Davenport, of Albion); and George M., born Dec. 16, 1860. In 1864, Mr. Orton moved on his present farm, consisting of 148 acres of highly improved land, well adapted to raise all kinds of grain and grass. This he intends to sell and buy a little home in which to spend the balance of his days. He is energetic in business and has accumulated a nice fortune. He has a small dairy, and his principal farm stock is sheep. Mr. Orton is a Republican in politics.

GARNER PALMER, farmer and ex-County Commissioner, P. O. Albion, was born April 30, 1821, in Columbus Center, Chenango Co., N. Y., son of Elias Palmer, a native of Connecticut, who brought our subject to Erie in 1832. Elias died in 1878, aged ninety-eight, and his wife in 1876, at the age of ninety-four. Garner Palmer was united in marriage, May, 1848, with Polly, daughter of David Matthews. She was born in May, 1822. Seven children have been born to this union, viz., Albert H., James, Josephine J. (wife of George W. Spaulding), John, Emmos C., Clara B. (wife of Dr. F. H. Lawrence, of Union City) and Chancy C. Albert H. enlisted in the war of the rebellion in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, serving three years. He was engaged in the battles of Gettysburg, Wilderness, siege of Petersburg; received a wound in his leg, and was honorably discharged in 1865. Garner Palmer served, at the commencement of the war, two terms as County Commissioner. He and wife are members of the Universalist Church. He owns a nice little farm of twenty-five acres, situated near Albion Station. In politics, our subject is a Republican.

WILLIAM PAUL, Albion, was born in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., October 24, 1808, son of William Paul, Sr., who came to Erie County with Messrs. Colt & Marvin, surveyors. He raised a family of twelve children, eight girls and four boys, seven of whom are now living in Erie County. Our subject is the eldest child living. He was united in marriage, in 1837, with Miss Mary, daughter of Robert Ranson, of New York State, who came here about 1830. Mr. and Mrs. William Paul have been blessed with nine children, three of whom survive, viz., Elizabeth (wife of Milo A. Smith), Mary E. and Winfield S. Their oldest son, Hiram R., lost his life in the defense of his country at Fredericksburg. He was a member of the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. Mr. M. A. Smith is the owner of twenty-six acres of improved land whereon the family live, and our subject has a life lease of it. Mr. Paul is a straight Republican in politics. He has spent his whole life in Conneaut, except while traveling.

ISAIAH PELTON, retired farmer, Albion, was born February 15, 1820, in the State of New York, son of Johnson and Eunice Pelton. He came to Erie County, Penn., with his parents, and learned the miller's trade while young, but on account of ill health quit it and went to farming. He was united in marriage, January 1, 1843, with Miss Caroline Elsworth, born July 4, 1823. This union has resulted in three children, viz.: Mary E., born November 13, 1843; James G., born January 27, 1848; and Hugh M., born April 26, 1853, died May 30, 1874. Mr. Pelton enlisted February 26, 1864, in the One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the Army of the Cumberland till the close of the war. He participated in the battles at Resaca, Kingston, Rocky Face Ridge, Dallas, and many skirmishes. He is drawing a pension for disability, caused by rheumatism, which he contracted while in the army. He is a member of the G. A. R. Mrs. Pelton has been totally blind for over thirty years, but her general health is good, though she weighs only eighty-five pounds. Mr. Pelton is the owner of a residence and 100 acres of land in the township, also a residence in the borough of Albion. He is a Republican in politics.

ALDEN POMEROY, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born April 14, 1819, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., son of Isaac and Ruth (Crane) Pomeroy. The former came to this county in 1816, died in Conneaut Township, July 9, 1842, and was buried in the Randall Graveyard near Albion; the latter and her cousin were born in the same house, April 20, 1799, and are supposed to be the first white children born in the western part of Erie County; she died June 28, 1874. Our subject was united in marriage, December 22, 1853, with Miss Rhoda, daughter of Luther Leavens, who came to this county from the State of New York in 1819. Mrs. Pomeroy was born July 27, 1830. They have never had any children of their own, although they have cared for many. Both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Pomeroy's health is somewhat impaired; he served seven years as Captain of the State militia, receiving commission from Gov. Porter; he is a prosperous farmer, owning 169 acres of land; he is and always has been a Democrat in politics.

WILLIAM S. RANDALL, farmer, and minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, P. O. Keepville, was born September 19, 1824, in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of William S. Randall, formerly of New York State. Our subject commenced preaching about 1843, and has followed this profession, in addition to his other duties, for over thirty years; for the last few years he has been regularly located at Keepville. He married his first wife in August, 1846. She was Miss Jane M., daughter of John N. Hewitt, of New York State. Seven children were born to this union, all now living, viz., Newell W., Flora A., Addie M., Lillian C., Mina J., Carrie S. and Olive R. Mrs. Randall, who was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, departed this life July 4, 1860, and our subject was united in marriage in 1862 with Mrs. Esther Davenport, widow of Marcus Davenport. One child has blessed this union—Bertha L., born July 12, 1875. Mr. Randall has twenty-five grandchildren, nine of whom are living with him, and of whom he is taking care. He has been Justice of the Peace for eight years in Conneaut Township; is owner of about 100 acres of finely-improved land. Our subject, who is a pleasing gentleman, advocates prohibition. Mrs. Randall is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

EDWARD W. RANDALL, farmer, P. O. Keepville, was born in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., June 17, 1831, son of William S. Randall, who came to Erie County in 1801, when only eighteen years of age; he and his father came from New York State, driving stock through the woods, the latter, with family, coasting along the lake; both arrived where the city of Erie now stands, the same day and only a few hours apart. William S. Randall raised a family of nine children, three of whom are now living in Conneaut Township, and was one of the first men of his section in an early day; much of his time was passed in teaching. He served in several township offices, departing this life in the spring of 1848. Our subject is a brother of Rev. W. S. Randall, whose sketch is also in this work. Edward W. Randall was united in marriage, December 30, 1852, with Louisa, daughter of John Spaulding, and granddaughter of Jonathan Spaulding, one of the very first settlers of this section. Mrs. Randall was born July 27, 1835. Four children, all now surviving, were born to this union, viz.: Clarence E., May L. (wife of Augustus Creamer), Emma C. (wife of Charles D. Marlow) and Helen A. With the exception of the youngest, the entire family are members of the Universalist Church. Mr. Randall is the owner of thirty acres of finely-improved land. In politics, he is Independent. Since the above was put in type, Mr. Randall has sold his farm and moved to Wellsburg, same county, and is one of the leading merchants. Clarence E., with Mr. Marlow, is also in the same town as Randall & Marlow, harness and saddlery.

ALONZO R. REYNOLDS, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born April 21, 1821, in Brookfield, N. Y., son of Ransom N. Reynolds, now living in New York State. When a boy, Alonzo went on a vessel on the lakes, and worked himself up to the position of mate, which he held for fifteen years, when he was promoted to master, acting as such five years. When thirteen years of age, he came with his parents to Springfield Township. He was united in marriage, in 1848, with Amanda, daughter of Asa Callender, who came to Erie many years previous to this union. One child, Herbert A., was born to them, but when eight years old he died. Mr. Reynolds is the owner of 100 acres of fine land, lying south of Cherry Hill. It was one of the first farms settled in this section, and is well improved. He is a Republican in politics. At one time, Mr. Reynolds was Treasurer of Springfield Township.

DANIEL ROSITER, farmer, P. O. Cherry Hill, was born August 17, 1835, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., and is a son of Daniel and Sarah Rositer. The former, a native of Vermont, was a soldier in the war of 1812, for which he drew a pension; he died February 19, 1884, in his ninetieth year. The latter, a native of Connecticut, was born June 1, 1792. This patriarchal couple lived together in Erie County over sixty-nine years. They were the parents of eleven children, four of whom are living in Erie County. Our subject was the youngest child. He was united in marriage to his first wife, Jane Furgison, of Springfield, July 4, 1853; she was a daughter of William Furgison. Seven children were born to this union, viz., Addie, wife of Samuel Randall; William H., George N., Silvey V., Nathan A., two children died in infancy. Mrs. Rositer departed this life April 3, 1880. On December 25, 1880, Mr. Rositer was united with his second wife, Huldey Dexter, a widow, daughter of James Lilley. Two children have crowned this union, the first dying when an infant; Junnie E. is now living. Mr. Rositer enlisted in 1862, in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Second Corps under Hancock, with the Army of the Potomac, and participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Culpepper Wilderness, at the siege of Petersburg, and finally in the capture of Lee's army. While at Cold Harbor, he received a wound in his left leg. He served nearly three years, and at the close of the war was honorably discharged. He owns ninety-seven and a half acres of well-improved land. Mr. Rositer is a Democrat in politics; a member of the G. A. R.

GEORGE RUNYAN, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born March 5, 1835, in the State of New York, son of Henry and Emily Runyan, who came from New York to Erie County, in 1836. They were the first settlers in Elk Creek Township, where they lived for about a year, then settled on the farm where the subject of this sketch now lives. The father died in 1863, and his widow in 1880. George Runyan was married in October, 1865, to Miss Arrilla, daughter of Lindsay Anderson. Her parents were old settlers of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Runyan have had three children born to them, viz., Homer E., born August 13, 1863; Ida M., died in infancy, and Byron G., born January, 1872. Mrs. Runyan is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Her husband is an A. O. U. W. Mr. Runyan nearly lost his life in 1880, by a bank barn falling, while he and others were trying to underpin the same; he is the owner of a nice farm of sixty-five-acres, situated near the station. Mr. Runyan is a Democrat in politics.

LIBERTY SALSBUURY, farmer, P. O. Albion, was born March 28, 1822, in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of John Salsbury, who came to this county from Vermont about 1800. He lived, died (February 10, 1834) and was buried on the homestead, where our subject now resides. Mr. L. Salsbury was united in marriage June 18, 1842, with Miss Anner, daughter of John S. Sherman, an old settler here. She was born August 9, 1821. Mr. and Mrs. Salsbury have been the parents of sixteen children, three of whom died in infancy. The survivors are: Sarah E., born April 13, 1843, now the wife of Henry Johnson; John S., born May 16, 1844; Polly A., wife of Henry Weed, born September 7, 1845; Alonzo L., born October 14, 1847; Albert D., July 13, 1849; Susan A., born November 16, 1850, wife of William Joslin; Mary A., January 5, 1852, wife of Adelbert Marsh; Effie L., December 15, 1853; Martha M., March 31, 1855; Josephine J., December 31, 1857, wife of Clarence Borker; Vina B., December 15, 1858; Thomas C., July 21, 1860, and Lola A., August 23, 1865. Mr. Salsbury is an A. F. & A. M., and a member of the I. O. O. F., also L. S. R. A. He is a Republican in the fullest sense of the word. He is the owner of ninety-three acres of land. His father set out the first orchard in Conneaut Township.

ABNER P. SALSBUURY, Justice of the Peace and farmer, P. O. Albion, was born September 2, 1825, in Timmouth, Rutland Co., Vt., of English descent. Nathan Salsbury, his grandfather and two brothers—John and Howard—came to America before the Revolutionary war. The latter two settled in Virginia and Delaware respectively, the former settled permanently in Vermont, locating in Danby, Rutland County, where he raised a large family, among whom was Howard, the father of the subject of this sketch. Howard Salsbury came to Conneaut, Erie Co., Penn., about the year 1800, settling on the piece of ground now occupied by his son. He was united in marriage, March 8, 1819, with Rebecca Pratt, daughter of Abner Pratt, of Timmouth, Vt. They were the parents of two children—John, the eldest, born January 10, 1821, in Timmouth, Vt., who came to Conneaut in 1845, a farmer by occupation. He removed to Bedford, Taylor Co., Iowa, a short time before the rebellion. He was a member of the Twenty-ninth Regiment Iowa Volunteers, losing his life in the Red River expedition May 6, 1863, and is buried on a battlefield at Helena, Ark. Howard Salsbury served in the war of 1812, under Perry, was school teacher of the early settlement, and Justice of the Peace for many years in this township; his office, a log building, was located a few feet east of our subject's present residence. He died about the year 1827, and is buried in the Springfield Cemetery, Erie County, Penn. His wife, born November 11, 1795, died November 16, 1881, in Timmouth, Vt., lies there. Abner P. Salsbury spent the most of his life until twenty-five years of age in Timmouth and Poultney, Rutland Co., Vt. He was a teacher in the common schools of Granville and Hampton, Washington Co., N. Y., for a number of years, coming West first in the spring of 1847, returning to Vermont the same year. October 6, 1851, he returned to Conneaut and settled permanently where he now resides. He was united in marriage, April 17, 1853, with Betsey E., daughter of Henry Wood, an early settler in the township. She was born August 13, 1831. Mr. and Mrs. Salsbury have been the parents of two daughters—the eldest, Emma J., born October 1, 1854, is now at home with her father; Eunice Lillian, born December 3, 1868, died January 3, 1875, and is buried in the Springfield Cemetery, Erie County, Penn. Our subject is a farmer by occupation. He is a Republican in Politics, formerly a Whig. He has served as Town Clerk for ten years, and held the office of Justice of the Peace for eighteen consecutive years on the same spot of land on which his father's office was located. He owns fifty acres of well improved land, on which he resides, and thirty-two acres of woodland in Springfield. Mr. Salsbury's present family are all members of the church.

CAPT. DAVID SAWDEY, third son of Samuel and Elizabeth Sawdey, was born in Providence, R. I.; his parents were of Scotch-Irish descent. When David was a mere child, his father moved to New Bedford, Mass. At the age of sixteen, he was apprenticed to a blacksmith, but soon afterward bought his time and embarked on a whaling voyage. He next engaged in mercantile trade with the East Indies, making several voyages; he gradually rose to the rank of Captain, and became half owner of the ship and cargo. On one of his return voyages, during the French and English war, he was taken prisoner by the English, his ship and cargo confiscated, and himself and crew thrown in prison; he was soon afterward released through the intercession of the United States Government, and returning to this country, opened a dry goods store at Paris, N. Y., and shortly afterward married Zerviah Smith, daughter of an eminent Quaker of New Bedford, Mass. In 1818, he sold out his interest in the dry goods trade to his partner, and bought a farm in Conneaut Township (where he settled in 1819), which is now known as the Sawdey farm, but at that time and long afterward known by the early settlers as Lexington, a town of 1,600 acres, laid out in town lots by Col. Dunning McNair, in 1797. He opened a store in 1820, and for several years thereafter supplied the wants of the early settlers. In 1823, he was appointed Postmaster and held the office until it was moved to Pomeroy's Corners, and thence to Albion. David Sawdey, Samuel Bradish and Matthew Harrington were the first Commissioners of Conneaut Township. In 1837, he was elected to the Legislature along with Gen. Reed, and in 1841, County Commissioner, which office he held for three years. His first wife died in 1847, and in 1849, he married Eliza A. Bond, of Fredonia, N. Y., who still survives him; he died December 5, 1857. By his last marriage, he had two children, a daughter, who died when a child, and a son, D. A. Sawdey, who is now a practicing Attorney at Erie, Penn. The latter received an academic education at Fredonia, N. Y., and graduated from the literary department of the University of Michigan, in 1876; was a candidate for Clerk of the Courts, in 1879, and admitted to the Erie County bar as attorney December 1, 1881.

GEORGE L. SEARS, farmer and proprietor of a creamery, P. O. Albion, was born February 22, 1845, in Massachusetts, son of Layman Sears. Our subject, at the age of eighteen, went to Chautauque County, N. Y., where he was engaged in manufacturing butter for about eight years. In 1871, Mr. Sears came to Erie County; he is now running the only regular creamery in Erie, situated about half a mile north of Albion, where he manufactures about 250 pounds of butter per day, which consumes the milk of about 300 cows. The milk is placed in large vats, that stand in running water, and hold about 3,000 pounds of milk. The cream is churned in large quantities. Mr. Sears was united in marriage, December 13, 1865, with Miss Laura Heminger, who was born in 1849 in the State of New York. Five children have been born to this union—Wilson O., born May, 1867; Minnie, born May, 1870; Bertha, born June, 1877; Edgar H., born December, 1878; Frank M., born July, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Sears are members of the E. A. U. Society. The former is a Greenbacker in politics.

JOSEPH P. SMITH, merchant, Cherry Hill, was born September 18, 1843, in Ashtabula County, Ohio, son of Parker Smith, a resident of Cherry Hill. During the late rebellion our subject enlisted September, 1862, in Company I, Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, serving under Gen. Avrell, in the Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Winchester, White Sulphur Springs, Fredericksburg, Droop Mountains, Chambersburg, and in other engagements. He contracted typhoid fever in the winter of 1863-64, but served until his time expired, receiving his discharge at the close of the war. Mr. Smith was united in marriage, February 26, 1867, with Miss Julie, daughter of Rasell Chapman, of Erie County, one of the old settlers of this section. Two children have been born to this union, the first dying in infancy; the surviving child is Clifford W., born August 1, 1873. Our subject is carrying a heavy stock of merchandise at Cherry Hill, where he has been in business since April, 1879. He is competing with the surrounding towns, and is doing a good trade. His goods are shipped via the Nickle Plate Railroad to Springfield. He is a member of the G. A. R. and E. A. U., and is a sociable, business man.

MARTHA I. SPAULDING, Postmistress and merchant, Keepville, was born December 8, 1830, in Erie County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Frederick Houghton, who came here from New York about 1832. She was united in marriage in 1848, with Dexter Spaulding, who was a son of David Spaulding, born in Erie County, Penn., in 1802. To this union were born five children—Dexter R., born August 29, 1849; Louis A., born February 2, 1852; Ellen, born January 2, 1854, died January 22, 1872, and Allie, born November 22, 1859; Martha J., born January 21, 1864, died February 24, 1882. Mr. Spaulding departed this life February 14, 1882, in Hancock County, Ohio, and is buried at Keepville, Penn. Our subject has been engaged in mercantile business at Keepville, since her husband's death, carrying a nice little stock of general merchandise, supporting her family very nicely. In addition to the store, she has twenty acres of fine land, and is proving herself to be a better business manager than many of the opposite sex.

JONATHAN SPAULDING, farmer, P. O. Keepville, was born December 23, 1834, in Conneaut Township, Erie County, Penn., and is a son of David Spaulding, also a native of same township, and probably the first male child born therein. Our subject's grandfather, Spaulding, was a native of Vermont, and came to Erie County, Penn., in 1795. He married Margaret Stontz, and raised a family of eight children, many of whose descendants are living in this county; he was a soldier of the war of 1812; died in 1855, aged eighty-three years, and is buried at Keepville. Our subject's father is still living in Conneaut Township, and has raised a family of ten boys, six of whom are living; he has been one of the substantial men of his section for many years. Jonathan Spaulding was united in marriage March 2, 1856, with Miss Loanda, daughter of Matt. Bently. This union has been blessed with two children—Nora B. and David E. Mr. Spaulding enlisted, August 2, 1862, in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served in the Second Army Corps under Hancock. He was connected with the Army of the Potomac during the war, and participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, and in the siege of Petersburg, and finally in the capture of Lee's army. He also took part in several minor engagements; he was honorably discharged in May, 1865, and returned home. He is a member of the G. A. R.; is the owner of 250 acres of fine land. He has served his township as Collector, Justice of the Peace and Assessor four different times, and has held several other township offices. In politics, he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE (deceased). The ancestry of the Lawrence family can be traced in England from 1191, when Sir Robert Lawrence, of Ashton Hall, Lancashire, England, accompanied King Richard (called Cœur de Lion) to Palestine, was at the siege of Ste. Jeanne d'Arc, and was the first to plant the banner of the cross on the battlements of that town, and there received his knighthood. His grandson, Sir James Lawrence, married Matilda Washington. There were four brothers, lineal descendants from him. The eldest, Henry, went twice to Holland. John and William were born at Great St. Albans, Hertfordshire, England; they emigrated to America, arriving at Plymouth, Mass., in the winter of 1635, in the ship Planter. William married twice, had ten children and died in 1686. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Smith, of Smithville, Long Island. She married, the second time, Sir Philip Carteret, and on her death left her property on Little Neck Bay (afterward known as Lawrence's neck), in the township of Flushing, Long Island, to her son Joseph Lawrence, who married a daughter of Sir Richard Townly, and a sister of Lady Effingham. John married and had nine children; his first son's name was Richard Lawrence, who married and had a son, William, who married Charity Carnell, and he became the possessor of Lawrence's Neck, Long Island. This union was blessed with seven children, three girls and four boys; Richard, the second son by this union, was taken prisoner by the British in the Revolutionary war, and was held in confinement seven years. The seventh child, Olivar, was born in 1758, and served in the American Army for independence; he married Patty Wait and had eleven children, and died in Crawford County, Penn. (This genealogy is recorded on the county record in Queens County, Long Island, to this date. See Surrogate's office, New York City, A. D. 1680, Library No. 22, page 24.) Olivar's second son, Joseph Lawrence, was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., December 25, 1782, and married Jerusha Austin January 1, 1804; with his family and two yoke of oxen he moved from the town of Berne, Albany Co., N. Y.; he had eight children by his first wife, Jerusha; he died in Crawford County, Penn., March 17, 1875; he was the father of the subject of our sketch. William Lawrence was born in Berne, Albany Co., N. Y., September 8, 1811, and was united in marriage August 27, 1846, with Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Ebenezer Baldwin, who moved from Whitehall, Washington Co., N. Y. State, to this county in 1836. This union has been blessed with five children, two dying in infancy. The survivors are Thirza J., William J. and Selina S., wife of Franklin Main. Our subject lived with his father until he was nineteen; then took a piece of land for himself in Greene Township, right in the woods where deer abounded, and endured all the hardships of a pioneer life; he was a self-made man in every respect; he moved to Elk Creek Township in 1865, where he owned 112 acres of fine, improved land. Mr. Lawrence and his wife were members of the church; he was a Republican in politics; he held several town offices in Greene; he gave the land for the first schoolhouse in his vicinity in Greene, and it is now known as the Lawrence Schoolhouse. He got his first start in life by working six months at $10 per month, and saving all his wages. He died of consumption February 1, 1884, aged seventy-two years, four months and twenty-three days; his body was interred in the Spring Cemetery, Crawford County, Penn.

GEORGE MANTON, farmer and ex-County Auditor, P. O. Elk Creek, was born in Orleans County, N. Y., August 15, 1838, son of James Manton, who came to Erie County with his family in 1859, but is now living in Michigan. Our subject, married, December 6, 1863, Martha, second daughter of Horace Hall, Esq., a native of Connecticut, who came to Erie County in a very early day. He was a man of considerable influence and held the office of Justice of the Peace many years. He died in 1881; his widow is living with her youngest son in this township. This union has been blessed with one child—Ida A., born October 24, 1864. Mrs. Manton is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Cranesville. Mr. Manton was elected Auditor of Erie County in 1881, on the Democratic ticket, and has filled said office with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the public. He also held the office of Town Clerk for some years. Mr. Manton owns thirty-five acres of fine land situated next to the village of Cranesville. He is a Past Master of the Masonic fraternity.

FRANKLIN MARTIN, farmer, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born January 18, 1822, in Genesee County, N. Y., son of Dan Martin, a native of New Hampshire, who, with his family, came to Erie County in 1836. He raised ten children, six now living, two residing in Erie County. He departed this life in 1870. Our subject, the second son in this family, married March 4, 1847, Miss Ann Morse, born in England and daughter of John Morse, of Huron County Ohio. This union has been blessed by the birth of four children, viz.: Mary A., wife of Thomas Hurst; Eugene L., Fanny and Frank. Mr. Martin, with his family, moved to Erie County about 1852, settling in Elk Creek Township. He owns a well-improved piece of land, consisting of eighty-seven acres. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically he is a Republican.

THOMAS OSBORN, JR., merchant and Postmaster, Lundy's Lane, was born in England October 12, 1846, and is a son of Thomas Osborn, Sr., of McKean Township, Erie County. About 1847, he came to Erie County with his family, and has resided here ever since. He has raised a family of five children, four of whom are now living in this county. Our subject enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, August 11, 1862, and served under Gen. Hancock, in the Second Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg (where he was wounded in the left leg), Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, Cold Harbor, where he was wounded by a ball passing between the jugular vein and wind pipe, coming out at the back of his neck, and also was wounded in his left arm and shoulder about the same time. He was then transferred to the Veteran Corps, and mustered out as Captain, Sixteenth Veteran Reserve Corps, in 1865. In 1871, Mr. Osborn married Miss Mary E., daughter of Alpheus Bates, and a native of Erie County. He was at that time proprietor of the Sterrettania Woolen Factory, in Erie County. This union has been blessed with one child—Thomas A. Our subject came to Wellsburg in 1872, where he was Principal of the public schools the first winter; after which he engaged in mercantile business in which he has since remained, having increased his capacity and is now carrying an immense stock of goods of all kinds, including agricultural implements, and is doing an extensive business. He has been Postmaster since 1872. He is Commander of the Col. Lyttle Post G. A. R., No. 240, is now Chief Mustering Officer of Pennsylvania, and has held the position since the same was instituted. Mr. Osborn has been a delegate to the State Convention several times. He is politically a staunch Republican.

REV. JOHN B. PAGE, Justice of the Peace and minister of the Free-Will Baptist Church, Lundy's Lane, was born in East Alton, Strafford County, N. H., July 6, 1819, and is a son of Rev. John Page, who died in 1832, and whose father (also John Page) was a Colonel in the Revolutionary War, a native of New Hampshire, and who at one time owned the township of Wentworth same State. Our subject commenced the ministry, when twenty years of age, in New Hampshire. After his marriage he moved to Oneida County, preaching there for about two years, and then to Oswego County, N. Y., for two years more. In 1849, Mr. Page moved to Erie County where he has since been preaching. Mr. Page was united in marriage, January 5, 1842, with Miss Ruth Lombard, whose father was a sea captain. This union has been blessed with seven children; the surviving are Nellie C., wife of Dr. O. Logan (see his biography); Emma, wife of A. B. Snow; and John, who is unmarried and lives in Wellsburg, on his farm with his father. Mr. Page has served as Justice of the Peace at Wellsburg, for four years. He is a pleasant, sociable gentleman; a member of the Masonic fraternity; politically a staunch Republican.

ISAAC POWELL, farmer and dealer in agricultural implements, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in the State of New York, January 1, 1818, a son of James Powell, who came to Erie County in March, 1837, with his family. He had eleven children, five of whom are now living in Erie County. James Powell was a prominent man, and held the offices of Justice of the Peace and Poormaster in New York; he was a Captain in the war of 1812, and died in August, 1860. Our subject married, September 29, 1840, Miss Susan M. Winchester, born November 26, 1822, daughter of Daniel Winchester, one of the first settlers of Elk Creek Township, and a native of Vermont. This union has been blessed with six children, two of whom died in infancy; the living are—Alonzo W., Edgar C., Adelbert (who runs his father's farm), and Helen, wife of George Baird. Mr. and Mrs. Powell are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The former is owner of 175 acres of well-improved land and a very nice village property. He has been engaged three years in his present business; deals in the New Buckeye Mower and Reaper and other farming implements, and is doing a fine business. Mr. Wells has served as Township Commissioner and School Director; is a Republican in politics.

RICHARD POWELL, farmer and County Commissioner, Wellsburg, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., March 22, 1827; son of James Powell, a soldier of the war of 1812, who came to Erie County in 1836, and had a family of eleven children, five of whom reside in Erie County. Our subject is a brother of Isaac Powell, whose sketch appears above. Richard Powell married, in 1852, Miss Nancy L., daughter of I. T. Stitt, a native of New York State, who came to Erie County in an early day. Three children have been born to this union, the eldest dying in infancy. Those now living are: George Jay and Fred S., both residing with their parents. Mr. Powell owns about two hundred and twenty-four acres of well-improved land in Elk Creek Township. He is now filling satisfactorily the office of County Commissioner, to which he was elected in 1881. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and is a leading Republican.

EDWARD W. RANDALL, merchant, Wellsburg, was born in Conneaut Township, Erie Co., Penn., June 17, 1831, son of William S. Randall, who came to Erie County in 1801, when only eighteen years of age; he and his father came from New York State, driving stock through the woods, the latter, with family, coasting along the lake. Both arrived where the city of Erie now stands the same day, and only a few hours apart. William S. Randall raised a family of nine children, three of whom are now living in Conneaut Township, and was one of the first men in his section in an early day; much of his time was passed in teaching. He served in several township offices, departing this life in the spring of 1848. Our subject is a brother of Rev. W. S. Randall, whose sketch is also in this work. Edward W. Randall was united in marriage, December 30, 1852, with Louisa, daughter of John Spaulding, and grand-daughter of Jonathan Spaulding, one of the very first settlers of this section. Mrs. Randall was born July 27, 1835. Four children, all now surviving, were born to this union, viz.: Clarence E., of the firm Randall & Marlow, harness and saddlery, Wellsburg; May L., wife of Augustus Creamer; Emma C., wife of Charles D. Marlow; Helen A. With the exception of the youngest, the entire family are members of the Universalist Church. Mr. Randall moved lately from Coneaut Township, where he owned thirty acres of finely-improved land. This farm he sold, and he is now one of the leading merchants of Wellsburg. In politics, Mr. Randall is Independent.

GEORGE H. RANDALL, farmer, P. O. Elk Creek, was born in Elk Creek Township, Erie County, Penn., November 6, 1839, and is a son of Ira G. Randall, also a native of Erie County, and still living here. Our subject was united in marriage, January 1, 1863, with Sylvia L. Wells, born March 22, 1839, daughter of Samuel Wells. Two children have blessed this union, viz., Lois E. and Kay E., both now living. Mr. and Mrs. Randall are members of the E. A. U.; the former is owner of forty acres of well-improved land. This couple are descended from two of Erie County's oldest families. Mr. Randall is independent in politics.

HARRISON RAYMOND, farmer, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in Knox County, Ohio, September 16, 1840; son of Nehemiah Raymond, a native of Massachusetts, who came with his family to Erie County about 1820, but afterward removed to Ohio. He departed this life September 16, 1860. Our subject enlisted, August 20, 1861, in the Eighty-third Regiment P. V. I., Company H, serving with the Fifth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the siege of Yorktown, Peninsula campaign, second battle of Bull Run, Antietam, Nine Mile Run, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg (where he was wounded in the head); after his recovery, he rejoined and took part in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House (where he was wounded in the left side, some of the shot still remaining in his body), siege of Petersburg and at the surrender of Lee's army. He was in every rank from Eighth Corporal to First Lieutenant. He was honorably discharged, July 22, 1865, having served nearly four years. Mr. Raymond was married, April 30, 1871, to Miss Lucy West, born September 8, 1849, daughter of Benjamin West, now living in Elk Creek Township, of which he was an old settler. This union has been blessed with two children—Alice and Harry. Our subject is, with his wife, a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church. He owns a house and four acres of good land; he has held the office of Auditor of his township; is a member of the A. O. U. W., and a Republican in politics.

LYMAN SEARS, farmer, and dealer in phosphates, P. O. Cranesville, was born in Colerain, Franklin Co., Mass., October 19, 1818, son of Enos Sears, a native of Dennis, Mass., whose father, John Sears, was the fourth generation from Richard Sears, who was one of the pilgrims that landed at Plymouth in the year 1620, and whose descendants are scattered all over the United States. Our subject possesses a very cleverly-drawn genealogical tree, tracing the descendants of the old pilgrim. Lyman Sears was united in marriage, April 5, 1843, with Miss Annie Pierpoint, born in Massachusetts, daughter of Isaac Pierpoint, a native of Connecticut, who also comes from an old family, among the first to settle in the United States. To this union have been born George (whose biography appears elsewhere in this work), Ann E. (wife of Edward Hawks), Henry, Alice (wife of Newel Wilcox) and Nancy (deceased, aged five years). Mr. Sears brought his family from Gerry, N. Y., to Erie County in 1876, where he has since been extensively engaged in selling phosphates, and such is the demand for this article that he sells 150 tons annually. He also farms to some extent, having twelve acres of fine land adjoining the village of Cranesville, where he raises large quantities of fruit and garden truck. Mr. and Mrs. Sears are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church, in which the former is a Deacon and active Sunday school worker; he is a member of the E. A. U.

GEORGE J. SHERMAN, sewing machine agent, village of Wellsburg, P. O. Lundy's Lane; born in Elk Creek Township, Erie Co., July 10, 1855; is a son of Charles Sherman, a native of New York State, a prominent farmer, and collector of the tax during the war; he was also at one time Captain of the militia. He died July 5, 1876; his widow still survives, and was keeping house for our subject in Wellsburg. They were both members of the Universalist Church. Our subject was raised on a farm, and learned the broom-making trade, working at same seven years, when he engaged in mercantile business with O. W. Irish, at Wellsburg, Penn., for about two years; he then bought out Mr. Irish's interest, running the business by himself for little more than a year, when he sold out again the entire business to Mr. Irish. He then became book-keeper for the above firm—William Boynton & Co., broom manufacturing—for nearly four years; a portion of the time was also traveling salesman for the same company. He then clerked a season in Erie, Penn. About 1881, he commenced his present business, and is now successfully handling the Noble Machine (manufactory in Erie), competing favorably with the best, and leading all others. He is a Democratic in politics. Later, October, 1883, he married Miss Minnie Keely, teacher in music, and is now living happily with his bride in rooms taken in the Stockdale Block, Wellsburg, Penn.

IRA SMITH, farmer, P. O. Platea, was born in Girard Township, Erie County, May 18, 1838, son of Hymenens Smith, a native of New York State, who came to Erie County in 1837, and was quite a prominent farmer of that section in an early day. He had a family of three children, all now living in Erie County. He died in August, 1867; his widow, the mother of our subject, is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Seth Stevens, on the old homestead. Ira Smith was united in marriage, May 18, 1858, with Miss Hannah, daughter of J. Tollman, a soldier in the war of 1812, and an old settler of Erie County. To this union have been born two children—William E. and Frank. Our subject is a self-made man, working hard for all he now owns. For twenty-one years, in an early day, he worked on the canal, whose bed runs by the site of his present farm. He owns ninety acres of very fine land, with splendid buildings erected on same. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.; has been School Director for the last two terms. Mr. Smith in politics is a Republican.

JOHN R. SNYDER, proprietor of planing mill and manufacturer of furniture, Wellsburg, was born in Switzerland October 24, 1847, son of Benjamin Snyder. In 1870, our subject began manufacturing furniture on a small scale in Wellsburg, Penn. He has been gradually increasing the same, until he is now doing a fine business both in this industry and in his planing mill, which he started in connection with the furniture in 1876; he is also an undertaker. Mr. Snyder keeps a well-assorted stock of furniture (not all his own manufacture) on hand; his establishment is one of the most enterprising in the village of Wellsburg. Our subject married, May 7, 1871, Miss Hattie, daughter of Eli Colton, a native of Erie County, Penn., still residing in Elk Creek Township. This union has resulted in three children, viz., Jennie M., George W. and Mable G. Mr. Snyder is, politically, a staunch Republican.

J. W. STEVES, farmer, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in Rome, N. Y., October 31, 1845; son of Joshua Steves, a native of New York. Our subject came to Erie County October 26, 1836, and married October 29, 1837, Louisa, daughter of Samuel and Mercy Sherman, who came here from New York in 1831. Seven children have been born to this union, five of whom are now living in Erie County. Their names are as follows: Sally, wife of C. G. Ames; Mercy, wife of E. F. Taylor; Harriet R., wife of P. B. Roberts; Mary, living at home; Nancy, deceased, and Perry J. Mrs. Steves died July 4, 1860, and Mr. Steves married March 27, 1865, Miss Huldy, daughter of Lemuel and Elizabeth Stewart, formerly of New York, coming to Erie County in about 1823. Mrs. Steves is a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church, and a Democrat in politics.

REV. ANDREW R. WARD, minister of Zion Church, Wellsburg, was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., December 16, 1828, and is a son of Thomas P. Ward, who came with his family to Erie County, Penn., in 1838. He has six children, all living. Our subject married in 1851 Lois, a daughter of Augustus Mills, of Oneida County, N. Y. Two children have blessed this union—Orlando H. and Will A., both residents of Erie County. Mr. Ward has been preaching for about thirty years; for the last fourteen in Zion Church, of which his wife and eldest son are members, and which he was instrumental in organizing. It is situated one and a half miles east of Cranesville. Our subject enlisted August 3, 1861, in the Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry (Porter's Corps), Army of the Potomac. He participated in the Peninsular campaign; was Chaplain (by vote) four months, and was wounded in the leg and head at Savage Station. He received his discharge for disability December, 1862, and receives a pension. Mr. Ward is owner of twenty-three acres of land, mostly in the village of Wellsburg, where he has lived for the last thirty-five years, with the exception of the time spent in the army. He has on his property, besides his residence, a grist and saw mill, now known as the Wellsburg Water Mill, and a threshing machine, and is doing as good a business as any in Erie County. He also carries on blacksmithing, in which he has engaged for eighteen years. Mr. Ward is temperate in all things. In politics, he is a Republican.

HENRY WEED, wagon-maker, Wellsburg, was born in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., July 4, 1836; son of William Weed, who came to Erie County from Warren County, N. Y., in 1829. He had a family of thirteen children, five residents of Erie County. He died May 6, 1872. Our subject enlisted, January 5, 1864, in the Independent Battery of Erie, and was with the Army of Tennessee. He participated in the battles of Buzzard's Roost, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Pine Mountain, New Hope Church, Kennesaw Mountain, Chattahoochie, and siege of Atlanta, Jonesboro, Columbus, Spring Hill, Franklin, and Nashville, Tenn. He was honorably discharged in Texas October 12, 1865. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1867, with Miss Pollie, daughter of Liberty Salsbury. This union has been blessed with four children, one dying in infancy. The others are William L., Maurice and Orie. Mr. Weed is engaged in manufacturing and repairing wagons and buggies, and is doing quite an extensive business. He is part owner in the broom factory in Wellsburg. Mrs. Weed is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Weed is a good business man, a member of the I. O. O. F. and G. A. R. Post 240, Pennsylvania.

JULIUS E. WELLS, tanner, Wellsburg, was born in Franklin County, Vt., October 14, 1812, and is a son of Samuel Wells, a native of Massachusetts, who came to Erie County with his family in 1815. He manufactured salt about a mile south of Wellsburg, and as his was the only industry of the kind between here and Pittsburgh, he found a ready sale for all he made, which was about five bushels per day. He departed this life in 1825. He was quite a prominent man in an early day. His eldest son, Otis, about 1831, laid out Wellsburg, which bears his name, and was its principal business man for many years. He raised quite a large family, most of whom are living West. Our subject married, in 1835, Miss Louisa, born February 26, 1812, daughter of Wilson Cole, formerly of Washington County, N. Y., who came to Erie County in 1832, where he was a very prominent farmer. Ten children have been born to this union. Those surviving, are Franklin P., Mittie (wife of Robert McNamara), Julius C., Jr., A. Judson, Addie (wife of James Luttet). Mr. Wells was in mercantile business for several years, but since 1835 has engaged in tanning on an extensive scale, employing six men, fifty vats, and using steam. He built his tannery, which is one of the prominent enterprises of Wellsburg. He also built a fine grist mill in 1878, which is now owned by Mr. Stell. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church, in which he has been a Deacon for the last thirty-five years. He has six acres of fine land on the boundaries of Wellsburg, on which is a fine residence. Though formerly a Whig, he now supports the Republican principles.

JAMES M. WOODRUFF, farmer, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in Pike County, Penn., March 18, 1823, and came to Erie County with his parents, in the spring of 1837, settling in Elk Creek Township. His father raised a family consisting of three sons and two daughters, three of whom are now living; he departed this life in 1838. Our subject married, March 20, 1853, Miss Phebe Wells, born April 23, 1830, daughter of Obea Wells, and a niece of J. E. Wells, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. She is a native of Crawford County, Penn. Their union has been blessed with five children—John W., E. Lodicie, Henry K. (deceased June, 1876), Row O., and one deceased in infancy. After his marriage, Mr. Woodruff settled on his present farm, then a perfect wilderness, which, thanks to his industry, now consists of 150 acres of well-improved land. He makes his dairy a specialty. While in the South, before the war, Mr. Woodruff nearly lost his life by being stabbed in the back by an intoxicated man. He is a self-made man; politically, a Republican.

EMANUEL M. ZIEGLER, blacksmith and carriage-maker, P. O. Lundy's Lane, was born in Waterloo County, Upper Canada, March 5, 1820, son of Ditman Ziegler, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Erie County, Penn., in 1836, and raised a family of six children, four living; he died in Canada in 1858. Our subject has been twice married, first in 1842, to Miss Matilda, daughter of Joseph Zinn, of Erie County, Penn. Five sons and four daughters were born to this union, eight now living, viz.: Emma (wife of Julius Wells); Lavina (wife of Marsh Maxwell); Lucinda (wife of Webster Winchester); Catharine (wife of Frank Fellows); Franklin, George, William and Webster. Mrs. Ziegler died in 1863, and our subject married Miss Margret Jones, of Girard. One child, Ulysses G. has crowned their union. Our subject was engaged in selling lightning rods for sixteen years. About seven years ago he commenced blacksmithing in Wellsburg, and has since been doing an extensive business. He has now the leading shop; also irons carriages and wagons. He and his wife are members of the Universalist Church. He owns some property in Wellsburg. Politically, he is a Republican.

FAIRVIEW TOWNSHIP.

REUBEN BAER, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born May 31, 1831, in Fairview Township, son of Daniel and Leah (Stotler) Baer, natives of Lancaster County and Pittsburgh respectively. They had nine children—Martha (deceased), Fanny, Eliza, Reuben, Mary, Levi (a soldier in the late war), Harriet, Joseph and Martin. Daniel Baer purchased wild land, in an early day, in Erie County. He was a carpenter, and built and owned the first grist mill on Baer Creek, subsequently replaced by a larger and more substantial structure, which he operated until his death. He was for many years Road Commissioner and School Director. He was also a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he was Steward and Trustee for a long period. He died November 22, 1865; his widow still survives. Reuben Baer married, June 16, 1853, Matilda H., daughter of Curtis and Eve (Kauffman) Heidler, born in Fairview Township, October 11, 1836. Eight children have been born to this union—Perry A., Susan J. (deceased), Seth H., Myron C., Alice V., Carrie G., Albert G. and Scotta D. (deceased.) Mr. Baer has cleared a good farm of 120 acres, on which he has fine farm buildings, within three miles of Fairview. He was elected Road Commissioner in 1870. He is an adherent of the Methodist Episcopal Church; in politics, a Republican.

ISRAEL W. BARD, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born in Lancaster County, May 20, 1827, son of John and Elizabeth (Weidler) Bard. The latter was a daughter of Samuel and Fanny (Binkley) Weidler, natives of Lancaster County, who had a family of eight children, viz.: William (served in the late war), Israel W., Fanny, Samuel, Catherine, Susanna (deceased), Elizabeth and Isaac. John Bard, Sr., was a farmer of Leacock, Lancaster Co., Penn., where he died in 1867. Israel W. Bard was united in marriage, May 29, 1856, with Mary Kendig, born September 17, 1833, daughter of Henry and Sarah (White) Kendig, natives of Lancaster County, Penn., who had a family of twelve children—Samuel, Eli, Mary, Cyrus (deceased), Matilda, Henry, Daniel (who served in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry during the whole war), Sarah, John and Barbara surviving. Henry Kendig, Sr., settled in Mill Creek Township, Erie County, in 1831. He was an active citizen; a Republican in politics; died November 11, 1881. His widow is now living. To Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Bard were born six children, viz.: Elizabeth (deceased), Clara, Addie J., John H., Daniel W. and George A. Mr. Bard's farm, comprising seventy-one acres of land under a good state of cultivation, with good farm buildings, is situated three miles from Fairview. He is a member of the G. A. R., Post 359, Fairview; in politics, a Democrat.

JOSEPH BARDSLEY, contractor, Fairview, was born in Yorkshire, England, March 23, 1835, coming to America in 1862, and to Erie County in 1863. He is a son of Joseph and Sally (Whiteley) Bardsley, natives of Yorkshire, England, who had a family of four children—John and Joseph surviving. Joseph, Sr., was a son of John Bardsley, also a native of Yorkshire, and both died in England. Our subject was educated for the ministry of the Church of England, at the Lyceum of Oldham, England, and holds certificates for proficiency in geometry, algebra, grammar, arithmetic and mensuration from the Mechanic's Institutes. The presentations were made by Lords Stanley, Disraeli and Brougham. He also holds a certificate for general knowledge from the Analytic Institute of Oldham. The late Prince Consort was President and Patron of the above Institute. Mr. Bardsley knows five languages. In 1862, he relinquished his position as teacher in the Greenacres Grammar School to come to this country. Mr. Bardsley married, in 1856, Mary Whiteley, born August 25, 1831, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Holmes) Whiteley, all natives of Yorkshire. Their children were William, James and Sarah, who all died in England. Mr. Bardsley visited his native land in 1864, returning to this country in 1867, and has since engaged in various pursuits in different localities. He settled in Fairview in 1871. Mrs. Bardsley died September 7, 1881. Mr. Bardsley is a member of the Royal Templars. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Politically, he is a Republican.

EPHRAIM BOYER, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born in Berks County, Penn., December 21, 1819, son of Charles Boyer, born June 14, 1785, married to Elizabeth, daughter of James and Harriet Delaplane, all natives of Berks County. They had a family of ten children—Solomon, Lewis, Anthony, William, Silas, Mahlon and Mary A. (deceased), only Ephraim, Thomas and Sarah A. survive. Charles Boyer, a soldier of the war of 1812, was a son of Charles and Mary (Moudy) Boyer, the former a native of Virginia, served all through the Revolutionary war; was paid in Continental money, which became worthless while he was visiting Montgomery County, obliging him to remain there. His wife was a native of the latter county. His son Charles, father of our subject, came to Erie County in 1837, purchasing 392 acres in Le Boeuf Township. After cultivating about seventy-five acres, he sold this property in 1852, and purchased 111 acres in Fairview Township, where he died March 9, 1858, his wife following him July 27, 1864. In November, same year, he was elected First Lieutenant and breveted Captain in the spring of 1864. He was wounded three times, receiving a rifle shot in the lungs at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, Ga. He received his discharge in April, 1865. Capt. Sexauer owns the popular summer resort on the lake shore, adding yearly to its many natural attractions. The Captain is a member of the G. A. R.; in politics is a Republican.

JOHN STERRETT, farmer, P. O. Sterrettania, was born in Mill Creek Township, December 25, 1814, and is a son of William and Elizabeth (Marron) Sterrett, natives of Pennsylvania; the former was a son of Robert Stearrett, born in Ireland. They had a family of eight children; the surviving are Robert, Eliza J. and Margaret A. (twins) and John. Mr. Sterrett dying about the year 1816, his widow married Zachias Joiner. This union was blessed by a son—Sherman M., now residing in Springfield Township. Mrs. Sterrett died May 12, 1852. John, our subject, married, September 27, 1849, Eunice O'Donnell, born in Erie County, March 6, 1729, daughter of Cornelius and Eleanor (McFetridge) O'Donnell, natives of Ireland. To this union were born Henry (deceased), Mary B. and John W. Mrs. Sterrett departed this life August 2, 1859, and on the 12th of November, 1861, Mr. Sterrett was united in marriage with Rosanna Spence, born July 14, 1831, a daughter of John and Esther (Mooney) Spence, all natives of this State. By this union there are five children, viz.: Elizabeth L., William S., Sherman M., Hettie M. and Sarah J. Mr. Sterrett has a well-stocked farm of 131 acres, four miles from Fairview. In politics he is a Republican.

SAMUEL M. STURGEON, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born June 4, 1851, in Fairview, son of Samuel C. and Martha (Eaton) Sturgeon. The latter born May 12, 1813, was a daughter of Rev. Johnston and Elizabeth (Canon) Eaton. They were the parents of eight children, six of whom are living—Nancy C., Elizabeth I., Lucy A., Johnston I., Samuel M. and Theodore F. Samuel C. Sturgeon, born in 1801, in Dauphin County, came to Erie County with his father, Jeremiah Sturgeon, who was one of Fairview's earliest pioneers. S. C. Sturgeon was a carpenter as well as a farmer, and erected a number of buildings in this township, among which, are the Sturgeon homestead and the Monitor House. He filled several township offices, and was the first Burgess of Fairview. He died May 21, 1877; his widow February 24, 1883. Our subject married, December 11, 1872, Jane A. Johnson, born October 5, 1853, daughter of John and Fanny (Fargo) Johnson, natives of Dauphin County, Penn., and New York State respectively. Mr. Sturgeon chiefly followed farming until 1882, when he formed a partnership with Pressley McCreary. They are purchasing grain, paying highest market quotations for barley, etc., and also do a large trade in middlings, phosphates and hard and soft coal. The firm name is McCreary & Sturgeon. They do a general forwarding and commission business; have superior business connections and facilities for shipping, and consignors will find it advantageous to patronize this firm.

JOHN J. SWAN (deceased), was born in Harrisburg, Penn., March 14, 1793, and was a son of Capt. Richard Swan. Our subject married, June, 1825, Eunice A. White, born in Sherburne, N. Y., May 15, 1805, daughter of Ezra and Lydia (Evans) White. By this union there were twelve children, of whom Charles J., Andrew F., Adelaide M. and Henry H. are deceased. The surviving are Lucinda, Eliza C., Harriet, Lavinia, Henry C., Josephine, Eugene B. and Clayton K. Andrew F. and Eugene B. were soldiers in the late war. Charles J. was in Mississippi when the war broke out. He escaped rebel conscription, but was imprisoned on account of his Union sentiments and taken to Atlanta, Georgia, from whence he made his escape, traveling on foot at night back to Vicksburg, arriving there after the city had surrendered to Gen. Grant, where he fell dangerously sick, and was in the United States Hospital for several weeks. He came North in 1868, broken in health, and was appointed Postmaster at Bullion, Penn., but his commission arrived only the night before his death, which occurred June 18, 1877. At the age of sixteen, John J. Swan taught the first school in Girard Borough. He afterward taught in Mill Creek Township, and in Erie, in the log schoolhouse, where the high school now stands. In 1812, he assisted in the survey of the "Triangle" and also responded to the calls for service in the war of that year. From 1815 to 1818, he was in the employ of P. S. V. Hamot, of Erie, in mercantile business, and was a partner with him in a branch store at Conneaut, Ohio, in 1818 and 1819. During 1821-22, he kept a store at Green Bay, Mich. Returning to Erie in 1823, he took up land, and established a homestead. For a number of years he farmed and kept a hotel, but for twenty-six years before his death he devoted himself entirely to farming. He was County Auditor in 1831, 1832, 1833. In politics he was a Whig, and afterward a Republican. He was an honest and patriotic citizen. He died July 22, 1878. His wife preceded him October 22, 1855.

LIEUT. COL. ANDREW F. SWAN (deceased), formerly Sheriff of Erie County, was born in Fairview Township, October 16, 1832, and was a son of the late John J. Swan, a native of Harrisburg, Penn. He enlisted as private in the Sixth Regiment United States Regular Cavalry, July 19, 1861; was promoted eventually to the rank of Major, and Lieutenant Colonel by brevet; his first promotion was to the rank of First Sergeant of Company G, Sixth Cavalry. Col. Swan was in 101 battles and skirmishes; he had his horse shot under him at Shepherdstown, Va., and was wounded in a charge on Fort Magruder, Williamsburg, Va. He was commissioned Captain of Company C, Sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, March 8, 1863, and at Hawes Shop (battle of Cold Harbor), May 28, 1864, was wounded through the left elbow by a minie ball, from which he suffered intensely for several years; he was then promoted Major of the same regiment. At the battle of Stony Creek, December 1, 1864, he commanded the Sixteenth Cavalry in person. His first brevet of Lieutenant Colonel March 13, 1865, was for "gallant and meritorious services during the war;" he was compelled by his wounds to resign toward the close of the war. In 1867, Col. Swan was elected Sheriff of Erie County; he died April 18, 1876, his death being indirectly hastened by his previous years of suffering. In character, he was frank and outspoken, and a brave and intrepid soldier.

RICHARD SWAN, farmer, P. O. Swanville, was born in Middle Paxtang Township, Dauphin County, Penn., December 4, 1796, son of Capt. Richard Swan, born March 14, 1758, in same county. He was a soldier in Capt. Cowdin's company during the Revolutionary war, a Lieutenant in the whisky insurrection, then rose to the rank of Captain. He was a son of Moses and Margaret (Barnett) Swan. The former was born in 1713, son of Richard Swan, who came from the north of Ireland in the last century. Moses settled in Dauphin County in 1730, and died about 1785. Capt. Richard Swan married Catharine Boggs, born in Dauphin County, in 1762, by whom he had seven children—Lydia, William B., John J., William (?), Richard, Moses and Andrew. Richard is the only one now living. Capt. Swan came to Erie County in 1797, and purchased 200 acres of land of the Penn Population Company in Fairview Township. Shortly afterward, he became manager of the Presque Isle Company's Mills, at the mouth of Walnut Creek. In October, 1801, he left Dauphin County in a four-horse wagon, crossing the mountains and arriving at McKeesport while it was still pleasant "Indian summer" weather. They were obliged, however, to winter at McKeesport on account of low water, reaching their destination in May, 1802. Capt. Swan sold his first property to John Kelso, buying 400 acres on the lake shore in West Mill Creek for $1,200, half of which was recently bought by Hon. William L. Scott for $33,000. He died April, 1808, and his widow in March, 1844. Our subject, Richard Swan, married January 12, 1826, Margaret B., daughter of Jeremiah and Jane (Moorhead) Sturgeon, natives of Dauphin County. She was born in Fairview Township September 3, 1803. They were parents of eight children—William B. (a soldier in the late war), Jane S., Edwin, Emily, Sophia, Rosanna (deceased), Mary and Byron W. Mr. Swan has served twice as Supervisor of Fairview Township (1822-1836); School Director and Secretary in 1839, and as Triennial Assessor in 1864. He is a Presbyterian; politically, a Republican.

They had nine children—Daniel (a soldier in the late war), Samuel S., Anna A., Catharine A. and Mary A., surviving. Daniel Weidler, Sr., came to Erie County in 1839, and carried on the business of a saddler many years in Fairview, where he was also Postmaster a long period. He died September 3, 1874, his wife having preceded him May 19, 1855. Samuel S. volunteered September 19, 1861, in Company C, One Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He was color-bearer one year, and followed the fortunes of his regiment in the armies of the Potomac and Tennessee. He was made an orderly sergeant in 1862. In December, 1863, he re-enlisted; at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, Ga., was taken prisoner and sent to Andersonville, where he remained three months; he was with Gen. Sherman's army when Johnson surrendered; was honorably discharged July 19, 1865. Mr. Weidler was united in marriage March 26, 1868, with Hattie S., a daughter of Daniel and Leah (Stotler) Baer, born March 26, 1838. Their children are Frank E. and Harry C. Mr. Weidler is now serving his second term as Road Commissioner of Fairview Township. He is a skillful veterinary surgeon. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and G. A. R., Post 359, Fairview. FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

ELMER A. ALLEN, blacksmith, Franklin Center, was born in Northeast Township, July 19, 1862, and is a son of Austin A. and Mary (Bird) Allen, mentioned in S. C. Allen's biography. Mr. Allen learned his trade principally in his father's shop, and is an excellent workman. He married, August 24, 1882, Jennie Hayford, born September 7, 1863, daughter of Daniel and Esther (Boice) Hayford, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Allen is carrying on a prosperous business at Franklin Center, and is an enterprising citizen of this township.

EDWIN BALDWIN, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., December 28, 1831, and, with his father, immigrated to Crawford County, Penn., about 1840. In 1865, he came to Erie County, and settled on the farm he now occupies, in Franklin Township in 1867. He is a son of Aaron and Permelia (Chamberlain) Baldwin. On October 9, 1859, he married Lucy A. Banister, born June 15, 1842, daughter of William and Priscilla (Steward) Banister. By this union there were five children, as follows: Addie M. (deceased), Carrie J. (deceased), Maude C., Edith J. and Carl W. Mr. Baldwin volunteered September 12, 1862, in Capt. John W. Phillips' Company B, Eighteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, serving as Corporal. While at Fairfax Court House, Va., on picket duty, he was taken prisoner by the rebel Gen. Mosby, in person, but was soon paroled. The first important battle he engaged in was at Hanover, Penn., June 30, 1863; the next at Gettysburg. At Hagarstown, Md., July 6, he was captured again, and exchanged in September following at Belle Isle Prison; he also participated in Kilpatrick's raid on Richmond, March 1, 1864; he next participated in Sheridan's raid; Mine Run, Va., May 5; Spottsylvania Court House, May 8; North Ann, Va., May 10, and was wounded (in sight of Richmond) in the leg May 12 by a piece of shell. After remaining in the hospital until the fall, he returned home on furlough. He was at Harper's Ferry when Gen. Lee surrendered. Mr. Baldwin now resides on his farm, four miles from Franklin Centre. It comprises 100 acres, is well stocked, and his residence is the finest in the township. He and his family are adherents of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a Republican. William Banister was born in Vermont, September 12, 1804, and married Priscilla Steward, born August 12, 1808, daughter of John and Lucy (Howe) Steward, all natives of Vermont. Their family numbers five children—Daniel W., Harriet J., Mary A., John S. and Lucy A.

HIRAM BALDWIN, farmer, P. O. McLane, was born in Crawford County, Penn., November 5, 1842; son of Aaron Baldwin, born February 1, 1800, who married, March 11, 1827, Permelia Chamberland, born March 15, 1807, and had a family of ten children, of whom Henry, Edwin, Ansel, Eliza, Hiram, Ozro J. and Olive are now living. Aaron Baldwin and his wife were natives of New York State. The latter died July 3, 1873, and in 1875 the former migrated to this county, where he died April 19, 1881. He was a son of Julius Baldwin, a soldier of the Revolutionary war. Our subject married, January 1, 1867, Lucina Oaks, born June 11, 1843, daughter of Joel and Naomi (Spring) Oaks, natives of Massachusetts, the former born February 22, 1807, and the latter December 29, 1812. By this union there are six children—Myrtie E., Gertie L., Homer A., Wilber J., Duff V. and Nelson W. Mr. Baldwin is a prosperous farmer, residing on the eastern township line of Franklin. On the 19th of August, 1861, he enlisted in Company F, Eighty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, which formed part of the Third Brigade, First Division, Fifth Corps (Gen. Butterfield), Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Hanover Court House, Williamsburg, Gaines' Mill, where he was taken prisoner, sent to Libby and Belle Isle prisons; was prisoner thirty-nine days, then exchanged; returned to his regiment, and took part in the second battle of Bull Run, first and second Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; was discharged December 26, 1863, but immediately re-enlisted for three years, or during the war. On the Wilderness battle-field he was made Sergeant; was in the battle of Laurel Hill; at the affair of Bethesda Church, June 1, 1864, he was wounded, sent to the hospital, and did not return to the army until December 1, 1864. Subsequently, he took part in the siege of and many of the engagements around Petersburg and Richmond, and when Gen. Lee surrendered was at Appomattox Court House, Va. He receives a pension. Politically, Mr. Baldwin is a Republican.

FRANK T. BILLING, cheese manufacturer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Washington, Erie County, August 3, 1856, son of Charles and Elizabeth (Proudfit) Billing, married May 9, 1853. The latter was a daughter of Andrew and Isabella (Smith) Proudfit, natives of Vermont, who had four children—Vernon, Frank T., Archie and Hugh. Charles Billing came to Washington, early. He was born at Castile, N. Y., August 23, 1822, and is a son of Israel and Ida (Mauross) Billing, natives of Vermont, who migrated first to Castile, N. JAMES B. RICHARDS, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Somersetshire, England, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Dunstone) Richards, natives of same place, who had a family of eight children. Benjamin Richards is by trade a stone-mason, and with his family a member of the Church of England. He still resides in England. Our subject went from his native land, in April, 1846, to Jamaica, W. I., for the English Government, to build barracks at Newcastle, and from Jamaica came to America in 1848, landing in New Orleans. In 1871, he came to and settled in Franklin Township. He married, July 24, 1853, Eveline Thomas, born October 23, 1828, daughter of Truman and Mary (Morely) Thomas, natives of Crawford County, Penn., the former of whom was born May 5, 1802; the latter in October, 1803, and died September 4, 1869. The rest of the family are L. D. Thomas, married Mary Deland in the fall of 1850; Lydia, married John Durvee, July, 1850; Rhoda, married Hiram Ward, April, 1851, and died in the fall of 1868; Rovilla, married Frank Stewart, August 4, 1845, and died May 3, 1880; Julia, married George Robins, August 14, 1854, and died January 10, 1866. George N. Thomas was born June 17, 1824, married to Rovilla Fisk, August 26, 1845, who died in May, 1847, and October 31, 1847, he married Emily Eaton, born November 11, 1824. He died July 15, 1865. Our subject and wife have no family. Mr. Richards is a prosperous farmer owning a well-stocked farm of sixty-one and a half acres, two and a half miles from Franklin Center. His farm buildings are excellent. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN ROBINSON, farmer, P. O. Elk Creek, was born in Franklin County, Ohio, January 5, 1811, and settled in Franklin Township in 1842. He is the son of John H. and Jemima (Edgar) Robinson, the former a native of New York, the latter is a daughter of John Edgar of Westmoreland County, Penn.; they had eight children, of whom the surviving are John, Emma (of Missouri), and William (of Illinois). John Robinson (the elder), migrated to Ohio early in the present century, and was a prominent pioneer in that State; he was a soldier in the Indian wars of the Northwestern frontiers, and in the war of 1812-13. He died in 1867, his wife having long preceded him. Our subject married, in 1835, Martha Sells of Columbus, who bore him two children—John M. and Russell Bigalo. In 1837, he married Elizabeth A. Gail, born in Erie County, N. Y., January 7, 1821, daughter of the Rev. Samuel and Hannah (Brown) Gail, natives of Stamford, Conn., the former born January 13, 1789; the latter September 1, 1788. By this marriage there were ten children—

Alfred S., Martha E., Carrie P., Benjamin E., Emma B., Albert S., Mary H., Samuel S., Harriet M., Charles O., Russell Bigalo, and Albert Sherman (deceased). Mr. Robinson was an early settler in Franklin Township, and still resides on the homestead on which he first located. He was once elected Justice of the Peace but declined the honor. He and his wife are members of the Christian denomination. In politics he is a Republican.

DANIEL B. ROBINSON, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Otisco Township, Onondaga County, N. Y., July 23, 1823; son of Daniel B. Robinson, born May 26, 1787, who married Elizabeth Benedict, born March 12, 1793, daughter of Jonathan and Hulda (Seeley) Benedict, who had six children, of whom James B., Daniel B., John B. and Thomas are surviving. Daniel B. Robinson, the elder, and his wife were natives of New York State. He was for many years County Surveyor, a Commissioner of Deeds, Magistrate and a school teacher. He came to this county in the spring of 1844, and settled in Franklin Township, where he died April 2, 1852, his widow following him March 11, 1870. He was a son of John and Eunice (Wilcox) Robinson, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of New York State. Jonathan Benedict was a son of Nathaniel Benedict, a native of England. Our subject was married, October 1, 1849, to Mary Crosby, born in the township of Wales, Erie County, N. Y., December 17, 1822, daughter of Calvin and Hulda (Connell) Crosby, natives of New York State. By this union there is one son—Marquis D., born October 21, 1851, now an oil operator in Titusville, Penn. Mr. Robinson, at the age of eleven, accidentally injured his knee, which crippled him for life. He prepared himself for teaching, and followed this occupation when of age. He has taught principally in Elk Creek and Franklin for over twenty years. He no longer teaches, but now farms twenty-five acres of excellent land, of which he is owner, at Mohawk. At various periods, for a number of years, he has filled the offices of School Inspector of Franklin Township and Director in the Independent School District, and also Clerk, Treasurer and Collector. He is a member of the First Regular Baptist Church, Elk Creek; in politics, is a Republican.

MATTHEW A. SEELYE, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Warren County, N. Y., December 31, 1832; son of William (born November 22, 1799) and Irene (Holcomb) Seelye, the latter a daughter of Asa and Lucinda (Miller) Holcomb, born in 1800. They had a family of seven children, of whom Caroline, William E. and Matthew A. are now living. William Seelye, the elder, is by trade a blacksmith. He migrated to Crawford County, this State, in 1832, where he still resides. He followed his trade in conjunction with farming until recent years. His wife is deceased. He is a son of Justus Seelye, who married Betsy Fuller, both natives of New York State. Out of their family of fifteen, only Ebenezer, William and Ansel survive. Justus Seelye's father lived until he was ninety-six years old. Our subject married Electra, daughter of Justus and Amelia (Morris) Ross, the former of Scotch descent. By this marriage there were two children—Cora May and George Rudolph, both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Seelye have since adopted Franklin Thomas and Nellie Grant. Our subject is a wagon-maker by trade, but has chosen farming as his future avocation. He was a soldier in the late rebellion; enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, August 19, 1862. His regiment formed a part of the Second Corps, which was under the command of Gen. Meade at the battle of Antietam; subsequently participating in the battle of Gettysburg. Private Seelye was on detached duty, and was seriously disabled by an accident at the battle of Culpepper, Va. He was taken to Warrenton, from there sent to Washington, where he entered Campbell hospital; was eventually transferred to the Invalid Corps, where he filled the arduous office of Wardmaster until his discharge from service at the close of the war. He now farms fifty acres of fine land, within a half mile of Franklin Centre. In politics, Mr. Seelye is a Republican.

JOHN H. STAFFORD, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in McKean Township March 16, 1844; son of Rowland Stafford, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Stafford married, September 7, 1871, Helen A., daughter of Orrin and Susan (Barnard) Wood, natives of New York. Having no family of their own, they have adopted a niece, daughter of David E. and Harriette (Wood) Quay. Mr. Stafford's farm comprises 100 acres, situated a mile and a half from Franklin Centre; it is well stocked, and has excellent farm buildings. He has taken an active part in the affairs of Franklin, having been elected Constable two terms, collector two terms and Assessor one term. Mr. Stafford is a Mason; in politics, a Republican.

JOHN N. TARBELL, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Edinboro January 31, 1843, son of John and Paulina (Greenfield) Tarbell. The latter is a daughter of Sherman and Nancy Greenfield, all natives of New York State. They had a family of three children—Sherman G., Mary and John M. His wife Paulina died, and John Tarbell Sr., next married Hannah, daughter of W. Slocum of Washington Township. She bore him three children—Jesse, Sarah J. and William. Mr. Tarbell was one of the earliest settlers in Washington Township; by trade a blacksmith, which he followed along with farming. He died in 1871. Our subject married, February 29, 1866, Mary, born December 26, 1841, daughter of William and Maria (Vanleet) McCammon, the former a native of Philadelphia, the latter of New York State. By this marriage there are three children—Minnie E., Harry N. and John R. Mr. Tarbell resides near Eureka Church. He owns a well-stocked farm of 125 acres. In September, 1864, he enlisted in Company F, Two Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. His first engagement took place at Point of Rocks, and his first regular battle was the assault and capture of Fort Steadman, where he captured and brought in three prisoners. He was in many of the principal engagements in the vicinity of Petersburg and Richmond, and when Gen. Lee surrendered was with his regiment at Burksville. He was discharged in June, 1865. Mr. Tarbell is a Mason; in politics, is a Democrat.

MARK M. VAN BUSKIRK, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Franklin Township, February 24, 1835, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Hucklebore) Van Buskirk, the former born in New York State, March 18, 1808, and the latter in Vermont, July 18, 1812. Their family consisted of John J. (deceased) Lucinda, Mark M., Otis H., Winfield and Eliza. John J. was a soldier in the war of the rebellion; he enlisted August, 1861, in the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at the battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862. Henry Van Buskirk was by trade a carpenter and joiner. In 1824, he came to this township, but eventually removed to Lockport Borough, of which he was Burgess two terms. He died March 11, 1880. His widow still resides in Lockport. Our subject married, September 9, 1858, Lydia A., daughter of Jabez and Catharine (Adams) Luther. The former was born in Rhode Island, January 8, 1800, and the latter in Oswego County, N. Y., January 14, 1800, died March 14, 1864. By the above marriage there are four children—Jabez H., Katie E., Frank J. and Nan Bell. Mr. Van Buskirk owns a well-stocked farm of eighty acres in Franklin Township. In March, 1865, he enlisted in the Ninety-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Sixth Corps, Army of the Potomac, and was at Danville, Va., when the Confederate Gen. Johnston surrendered to Gen. Sherman. He has filled the offices of School Director one term, and Road Commissioner of his township two terms; he is at the present time Collector. Mr. Van Buskirk is a member of the A. O. U. W., and Colonel Lytle Post, No. 240, G. A. R. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church. Politically, he is a Republican.

DAVID H. WALKER, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Crawford County, Penn., July 1, 1840; son of Peter Walker, born in Maine in 1803, who married Rachel Ball, a widow, daughter of David Skinner, a native of New York State, and had a family of eleven children, of whom Frederick C. A., Louisa F., David H., Lucinda F., Sarah J., and Willis W. and William (twins) are living. Peter Walker came to Erie County in 1848; he died in Chautauqua County, N. Y., October 17, 1878. (Crate) Vandervoost, the former born in New York State in 1802, and the latter in this State in 1812. By this union there are three children—Frank F., Sarah A. and Mary R. Mr. Walker settled in Franklin Township in 1873, and is a successful farmer. His well-stocked farm comprises seventy-five acres, situated about three miles from Edinboro. Politically, Mr. Walker is a Democrat.

REV. STEPHEN WASHBURN, Christian minister, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Otsego County, N. Y., April 10, 1812, and came to Franklin and settled on the farm he now occupies, March 1857. He is a son of Stephen Washburn, born August 1, 1775, who married Janette Terry, born March 6, 1877, both of whom were natives of Massachusetts, and had a family of seven children; of this family—Isaac T., Betsy H., Polly and Cyrene are deceased; Stephen, Seymour and Julia still survive. Stephen Washburn, the elder, was by trade a carpenter; he came to Erie County with his family in 1824; located in McKean, and was one of the pioneers of that township. His wife died March 2, 1853, and he followed her July 19, 1866. Stephen was a son of Bazalcel Washburn, of Welsh descent, who was a Colonial soldier in the old French war, at the close of which he was pressed into the British Naval Service; while his ship was in port in Quebec, he managed to escape to a French vessel and was carried to the West Indies. After several years of wanderings and many vicissitudes, he returned to his native land, and subsequently became a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Our subject married, July 2, 1834, Elsie Ann Hopkins, born April 6, 1814, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Luther) Hopkins, all natives of Rhode Island; the former born July 31, 1783, died in 1857; the latter born August 26, 1782, died April 6, 1843. By this marriage there are three children—Samuel H., Esek D. and Jane Ann. Rev. Stephen Washburn is a minister of the Christian denomination, commencing to preach in 1847. He was regularly ordained October 6, 1850, and has labored earnestly in the cause of Christianity since that date, principally in Erie and Crawford Counties. He is a pioneer of religion in Franklin Township, and will be long remembered for his zeal and usefulness. His farm is situated three miles from Franklin Centre and comprises 188 acres. Mr. Washburn is politically a Republican.

SAMUEL A. WHEELER, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in this township June 18, 1839, son of Philander and Maria (Hildum) Wheeler; the former was born June, 1808; the latter is a daughter of Samuel S. Hildum, all natives of New York State. They had a family of five children, viz.: Cynthia A., Martha E., Samuel A., Chloe L. and Mary E. Philander Wheeler came to Erie County about the year 1842, and settled in Franklin Township. He was a farmer, and died suddenly in the field while at work, in June, 1879.

His widow still resides in Fairview Township. Our subject married, June 2, 1866, Maria Wright, born July 16, 1841, daughter of George and Esther (Trask) Wright, of Girard Township. By this union there are three children—Eben L., Lilly M. and Ety L. Mr. Wheeler is owner of an eighty-seven-acre farm in Franklin Township. He was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion. On the first call for troops in 1861, he volunteered in a regiment of three months' men, and in the fall of 1861, re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and saw service in the Twentieth Corps, Army of the Potomac, under Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker, in the battles of Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. In the fall of 1863, the Twentieth Corps was transferred to the Army of the Tennessee, where, under Gen. Sherman, Private Wheeler took part in the battles of Look-out Mountain, Mission Ridge, Ringgold, siege of Atlanta and in Sherman's march to the sea, the siege and capture of Savannah, and the subsequent march of the army northward through the Carolinas. Mr. Wheeler is a member of Col. Lytle Post No. 240, G. A. R. In politics he is a Republican.

CHARLES WRIGHT, farmer, P. O. Franklin Corners, was born in Delaware County, N. Y., March 9, 1815, and came to Erie County in 1835, located in Girard Township, but removed to Franklin Township in 1848, settling on the farm he now occupies. He is a son of Johnson Wright, born June 15, 1792, in the State of New York, who married March 9, 1814, Mary Bliss, born July 30, 1795, in Rhode Island, daughter of Clark and Abigail (Spooner) Bliss, natives of Rhode Island, who had a family of eleven children, of whom Mary A., Eliza A., Phebe A., John J. and Johnson G. are now deceased, and Charles, George, Marietta, Henry B., Clark A. and James S. are living. Johnson Wright, Sr., was by trade a tanner; he died June 11, 1861, and his wife November 4, 1874. He was a son of Alpheus and Rachel (Williams) Wright, natives of the State of New York, the former of whom died April 3, 1832, and the latter January 3, 1845. Alpheus was a son of James and Sarah (Purdy) Wright. James, with two of his brothers, Ichabod and Alpheus, came to America from England. They were the sons of Isaac and Elizabeth (Bennett) Wright, the former being a son of James and Betsy (Hammond) Wright, all of whom died in England. Charles Wright, the subject of this biography, married December 25, 1837, Harriet M. Woolsey, born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, July 13, 1820, daughter of Joseph and Mehitabel (Brown) Woolsey, natives of the State of New York; the former of whom was born May 16, 1785, and the latter May 30, 1800. Franklin Corners, was born in Girard Township April 23, 1839, son of Charles and Harriet (Woolsey) Wright, whose biography appears above, married December 24, 1866, Martha M. Miller, born March 15, 1843, daughter of Orange and Matilda (Smith) Miller, natives of the State of New York. By this union there are three children, as follows, Ernest E., Charles J., and Carl C. In 1869, Dr. Wright commenced the study of medicine and surgery under the advice and direction of Dr. H. H. Baxter, Professor of Materia Medica, Cleveland Homoeopathic Hospital College. He attended the lecture course at that institution in the years 1870, 1871 and 1872, graduating and obtaining his diploma in the latter year. The Hahnemann Medical Society of Cleveland has also conferred a degree upon the Doctor. He commenced to practice his profession in Franklin Township in 1873, and has established a lucrative business. He is physician for the poor in Franklin Township, having received the appointment from the Directors of the Poor for Erie County. Dr. Wright also holds a diploma for business profession from Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, of Buffalo, N. Y. He is the owner of a fine farm comprising eighty-eight acres, two and one-half miles from Franklin Centre. The farm is well stocked and under an excellent state of cultivation. Politically, the Doctor is Democratic.

GIRARD TOWNSHIP.

WILLIAM ALDRICH, Justice of the Peace, P. O. Platea, was born in Cheshire County, N. H., in 1808, and is a son of Amasa and Hannah (Payne) Aldrich, both natives of Massachusetts. They were the parents of fifteen children, our subject the only one surviving. Amasa was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and died when William was five years old. The latter married, in 1835, Mary Preston, who, dying, left two children, both now deceased. The youngest, Mary, was the wife of Jefferson Rouse, and left one child, Mary, who married Edwin Wright, by whom she had twins. Mr. Aldrich's second marriage was with Elizabeth Sawdy, who died without issue. He then was united to Sarah Hatton, of Chautauqua, N. Y. Mr. Aldrich came to Erie County in 1833, making the journey via the Schenectady & Albany Railroad, the first railroad line in the United States. He engaged in farming, subsequently erecting a tannery, which he carried on successfully many years, but closed on account of other business and his desire to retire from active pursuits. He was commissioned as Justice of the Peace in 1881 for five years. He was previously engaged in manufacturing boots and shoes at Lockport, and has always felt an interest in building and improving the place. He is now living in his fine residence in the borough of Lockport, and as a citizen and pioneer is highly esteemed.

DR. EDWIN R. ALLEN, Girard, a descendant of the distinguished Ethen Allen, of Ticonderoga fame, was born in Girard Township, Erie Co., Penn., September 1, 1825, and is a son of Ira and Phebe (Comstock) Allen, who came to this county in 1818, and entered 100 acres of land at Cross Station, where they passed their lives. They reared a family of seven children, five living—Emily, Nancy, Roana, Almira and Edwin R. The latter remained on the homestead until seventeen years of age, when he engaged on a vessel, and followed a seafaring life several years. He began the study of dentistry in 1856, the following year going to Cass County, Mich., where he practiced his profession four years. He then engaged in farming four years in Girard, subsequently resumed his profession in same, and has now an established business, and is the oldest practitioner in Girard. Dr. Allen's marriage occurred in 1852 in this township, with Helen M. Anderson, a native of Girard. Two children blessed this union—Clarence Emir, a teacher at Salt Lake City, married to Corinne Tuckerman, of Austinburg, Ohio, and Cyrus A., dentist at Buffalo. Dr. Allen is among the oldest born settlers. He is universally respected, and is an honored officer of Masons.

A. S. ANDERSON, retired farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., November 17, 1821, and is a grandson of George Anderson, a native of Massachusetts, who settled in this county in 1831, coming from Ann Arbor, Mich. He engaged in lumbering, and built a saw mill in Girard Township, which he ran a few years, then sold out and moved to Matthew Anderson's, where he died at the age of ninety-eight years. He was a pioneer of Chenango County, N. Y., taking up 400 acres of land there. His wife was Elizabeth Steward, by whom he had fourteen children. The father of our subject, Matthew, was born in Chenango County in 1799. He, with his brother Allen, came to this county, article 100 acres of land, and returned to the East. This land was subsequently lost. He was a carpenter by trade, working at the same for years, and accumulated considerable property. His widow, still surviving, was Emily Maynard, born in Colerain, Mass., in 1796. They were the parents of four children, all now surviving, viz.: A. S.; Amos W., a resident of McHenry County, Ill., the father of Edwin V. and May, wife of Mr. Hungiford; William M., of Grass Valley, Cal., also has two children—Clarence R., residing on the homestead with grandmother, and Emma, widow of S. E. Brindle; and Helen, wife of Dr. E. R. Allen. Our subject was brought up on the homestead farm in this township, of which he is the oldest resident. He married, April 8, 1847, Adaline A., daughter of Elijah Drury, of a pioneer family, and a native of this county. Of the three children born to this union two are now living—Leslie M., married to Ida Bunnell, and Carl M., married to Mattie Drury. After marriage, Mr. Anderson settled on his present place, retiring from the active pursuits of life in 1876. He has lived to see all his children comfortably settled.

HENRY BALL, Justice of the Peace, Girard, is the only living son of Henry and Betsey (Halsted) Ball, and was born in 1810, in Galway, N. Y. His father, after emigrating to this country from England, settled in Saratoga County, N. Y., where he was salesman some years, engaged in farming, and at one time served as Constable. He and his wife died within a year of each other, leaving Henry and Laura, a widow, and mother of Martha, wife of Theodore Allen, residing on the old homestead. Our subject located in Girard Township, and began, in connection with farming, in the commission and forwarding business. In 1846, he was elected Justice of the Peace, serving five years. He was re-elected in 1857, and has since filled this office. He has also served as School Director eighteen years, Secretary and Treasurer of the Council many years, and as Treasurer of the School Board, and Secretary of the Cemetery Company, in all capacities with satisfaction to his constituents and credit to himself. He was married to Martha Chesebro, a native of Saratoga County, N. Y. Three children blessed this union, one surviving, Jennie, widow of Fenton Daggett, by whom she has one child, Fenta.

W. C. BATCHELER, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, in 1833, son of Elijah and Johanna (Taft) Batcheler, natives of New Hampshire and New York respectively. Amos Batcheler, the grandfather, of English descent, was born in New Hampshire, and served in the Revolutionary war. In 1811, he entered a large tract of land in what is now Kingsville, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, built a log cabin assisted by the pioneers from three townships, raised a large family and passed his life. In 1856, Elijah moved from Ashtabula to Erie County, settling in Albion Township, where he died in 1863. He was the parent of five children, all living, viz., Angeline, widow of E. Denio; Lucinda, wife of H. P. Sullivan; W. C.; Amos, a resident of Fargo, Dak., and George. Our subject was thoroughly educated in Ashtabula and Erie Counties, read medicine, and followed his profession until his health failed, when he moved to Conneaut Township, Erie County, in October, 1861. In 1862, he joined the Union army as Hospital Steward, in which capacity he served until August, 1863. For a few years, he followed mercantile trade, but his poor health compelled him to abandon this, and for the past few years he has been farming. He moved to Girard in 1873, and in 1881 occupied his present farm, consisting of seventy-five acres. He has held various township offices, and is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Batcheler was united in marriage, in this county, in 1859, with Annie E., daughter of Henry Skinner, of Erie County: three children blessed this union, two living—Henry E. and Mary A.

ASA BATTLES, fruit culturist, Girard, was born in 1827 in this township, and is a son of Asa and Elizabeth Battles, both natives of Vermont. The first record we find of this name in America is from Savage's Genealogical Dictionary. Thomas Battles, a Puritan emigrant, settled in Dedham, Mass., in 1642, married Mary Fisher, and raised a family of children, dying in 1706. It is said one of his sons settled in Bridgewater, Mass., from whom descended John Battles, the great-grandfather of our subject, who married a Curtis November 16, 1749, and had several children, the oldest named John, the grandfather of our subject, who married Lydia Spear, his first wife, and had five children, the fifth being Asa, Sr., the father of the present Asa; also, by his second wife, five children. Asa Battles, Sr., was born 1786, and married Elizabeth Brown, November 22, 1814, the daughter of Abraham Brown, who was well known as a writer of sacred poetry; many of his hymns are now retained in the popular collections of the day. They had the following children, all living: Rosina, born June 27, 1815, married L. I. Baldwin; George W., born June 15, 1816, married a Miss Bartlett; Alsina, born July 22, 1820; Lucina, born January 16, 1824; Asa, born September 21, 1827, married a Miss Hinds; Rush S., born April 24, 1833, married a Webster. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. In 1814, he settled in Western New York, but in 1825 he removed to Girard, Penn., residing until he died May 10, 1848, aged sixty-two years. His widow survived him till October 10, 1868, aged eighty-one years. Asa Battles (our subject), at the early age of twenty years, engaged in mercantile business, conducting one of the largest stores in the place. At twenty-one, he was appointed Postmaster, holding the office four years, when he engaged in mail contracting, on quite a large scale, with the Post Office Department, having, at the commencement of the war of the rebellion, contracts in all the Middle and Western and several of the Southern States. Owing to the unsettling of values, the war about destroyed this business. He then turned his attention to the mercantile trade, opening a wholesale store in Milwaukee, Wis., and, soon after, another in Chicago; was also proprietor of a large hotel in Chicago previous to the great fire, after which he had one in St. Louis a few years. Although exempt from military duty, he hired a substitute, and kept him in the service during the war. When Pennsylvania was unable to fill her quota in the army without resorting to a draft, he accepted a commission from the Governor to proceed to the Gulf States and obtain colored recruits, in which he was quite successful. He was also largely engaged in the oil business, owning many producing wells, and a large refinery on Oil Creek. He was married, December 27, 1849, to Sarah M., daughter of Perley Hinds, one of the early pioneers of this county. Six children have been born to them, five of whom are now living: Clarence Perley, born October 16, 1853, graduated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and is now a practicing physician; Raymond Willis, born July 31, 1856, graduated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and is practicing medicine at Ripley, N. Y.; was married to Teresa, daughter of Hon. L. W. Thickstun, and have one son, Donald R.; Wilton Lamar, born September 21, 1860, graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, and is now practicing dental surgery; Leland Asa, born June 8, 1867; Cora Gertrude, born January 18, 1871. Asa Battles has now retired from all his business operations, and devotes himself entirely to horticultural pursuits, having, it is said, the finest and most extensive fruit plantation in the State of Pennsylvania.

R. S. BATTLES, banker, Girard, is a native of Girard, born April, 1833, son of Asa and Elizabeth (Brown) Battles, the former a native of Stoughton, Mass., the latter of Guilford, Vt., who settled, lived and died on 250 acres of land in this township. They reared a family of six children, all surviving—Rosina, wife of L. I. Baldwin, Conneaut, Ohio; George W., of Santa Barbara County, Cal.; Alsina, Lucina, Asa and Rush S. Our subject acquired a primary education in the schools of Girard, where he began to read law with S. E. Woodruff. In 1853, he entered the National Law School of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., graduating in the class of 1854, and was admitted, the same year, to the bar of Erie County, and became associated with his former preceptor in the practice of law in this village. Years later they dissolved, and he devoted his time to farming until 1859, when the bank was organized, under the firm name of Battles & Webster. The latter retired in 1876, and Mr. Battles has since conducted the business alone. He has also an interest in and is Secretary and Treasurer of the Wrench Factory. Mr. Battles was married, in 1861, to Charlotte M., daughter of James Webster, of Girard. Of their three children, one, C. Elizabeth, survives. The family reside on the old homestead, and are highly esteemed citizens.

HENRY BECKER, merchant tailor, Girard, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1830, emigrating to the United States in 1851, and coming to Girard the following year, where he opened a clothing store, which he has since successfully carried on. He is the oldest merchant tailor in the city, and also carries a full line of clothing, hats, caps, notions, etc. He married in this county in 1854, Katrina B., daughter of Christian Breckle, a native of Wittenberg, Germany, who settled in Mill Creek Township in 1843. To this union eleven children have been born, viz.: Henry, Charles (deceased at New Washington, Ohio); Katrina, wife of R. Warner; Edward in San Francisco, Cal.; Annie; Helen, in San Francisco, Cal.; Christian, a barber in Girard; Martha, Gustav, Ida and Caroline. Mr. Becker for nine years has been a member of the City Council, and holds a Lieutenant's and Captain's commission in the militia, in which he served nine years. He purchased the Lutheran Church, named in his honor the Becker Church, and has been its President fifteen years.

DAVID P. BLAIR, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born on the homestead in this township in 1818, and is a son of James and Mary (Wallace) Blair, who located their home in the thickly wooded heights of Elk Creek Township, in 1803. They came from Fayette County, floating their household effects to Meadville, from whence they were brought on horseback. They paid $50 for 400 acres of land, and, after paying taxes on it seven years, abandoned it. Mr. Blair subsequently made a purchase which includes property now occupied by our subject, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are now living—James, Joseph, David P. and Samuel. Mr. Blair died in March, 1855; his widow survived until June 9, 1873, dying in her ninety-fourth year. David P. was married March 5, 1874, to Caroline, daughter of Robert and Sabina Wallace, a native of Washington County, Penn. One son, Robert W., born to this union, is now living. The family erected a fine residence near the old home, a portion of which is the old log cabin, which is still standing. The original homestead consisted of 100 acres, but David P. Blair has made subsequent purchases of 200 acres. The family are widely and favorably known. Their home is situated on a belt of land that stretches out 150 feet above the bend of Elk Creek, and affords one of the finest views in that section.

JAMES R. BLAIR, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born on the homestead in this township, May 7, 1838, and is a son of John W. and Candace (Strong) Blair, the former a native of Erie County, born February 15, 1807, and the latter born May 7, 1809, in Vermont. John W. was a son of James Blair, who settled in this township in 1803, and died in 1879. His widow still survives. The subject of this sketch has a farm of eighty acres and has always followed farming. He is one of our oldest pioneers and is highly respected.

R. C. BROMLEY, retired farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in 1817 in Rutland County, Vt., son of Smith and Phebe M. (Wescott) Bromley, natives of Vermont, and who came to this county in 1837, settling in Springfield Township. Our subject, their only child, came with them. His father bought a farm of fifty-four acres, on which he lived until the death of his wife in 1847. Some two years afterward, the father returned to Vermont, where he died, leaving our subject the farm. R. C. Bromley was married in 1843, to Cina A. Cross, youngest child of Oliver Cross, a pioneer of this county, from Vermont. To this union were born three daughters—Mary Jane, married to Samuel R. Carroll, had three children—John B., Lida I., and Ella R., died June 2, 1873; Laura A., married to Norman L. Pratt, has one daughter—Adah Pearl, now residing in Omaha, Neb.; and Flora D., married to J. Harley Silverthorn, has three children—Lora F., Leo G. and Roa C., now living on our subject's farm in this township. In 1853, Mr. Bromley moved to Crawford County, Penn., where he resided twelve years. Here he was an acting Justice of the Peace one term, besides holding other township offices. In 1865, he bought a farm in Girard Township, this county, to which he at once moved. Here he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace one term (five years, as fixed by the law of Pennsylvania). Our subject being compelled, owing to severe attacks of rheumatism, to retire from active labor in 1882, purchased a house and lot near Girard depot, where he now resides.

A. M. CLARK, grocer, Girard, was born in Torrington, Conn., in 1837, and is a son of Converse and Almira (Burr) Clark, natives of Connecticut, the former born February 29, 1800; the latter April 23, 1803. They came to this county in 1837, and settled on a farm in Greene Township, Erie County. In 1849, Mr. Clark, Sr., removed to Springfield, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying December 29, 1853. He was at one time an active militiaman in Connecticut, and served as an officer in his native State and after coming West. His widow is residing with a daughter in Earlville, Ill., in the eighty-second year of her age. She is the mother of six children, viz.: George Russell, Chester B., Jane Lucina, Flora Almira J., Almon M. and Mills C. The latter served as Captain of I. F. V., was wounded at Champion Hills, but served to the close of the war. Our subject followed farming until 1866, when he entered into a copartnership with George P. Rea, groceries and dry goods. He sold his interest to Mr. Rea four years later, establishing himself in the grocery business, which he has since followed, occupying his present premises in the fall of 1871, where he carries a large stock of groceries, crockery, etc., doing a constantly increasing and successful trade. He married at Springfield, Penn., November 23, 1859, Matilda H. Ferguson, born March 25, 1839, daughter of Hance Ferguson. She died January 18, 1883. They have an adopted daughter, Bertha A. Mr. Clark is one of the active men and esteemed citizens of the township, in which he has held various offices of trust.

WILLIS COFFMAN, farmer, P. O. Platea, was born on the homestead farm in Girard Township in 1859, and is a son of Conrad and Barbara (Eaton) Coffman, who were among the pioneers of 1803, and erected a cabin in the wilderness of Elk Creek, where they lived to the close of their lives. They reared a family of nine children, four of whom are living—Willis, Ellen, Dorcas and Rush. The children have the homestead farm, consisting of sixty acres.

D. R. CROOKS, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Groveland, N. Y., in 1814, and is the youngest child of David and J. (Buskirk) Crooks, the former a native of Northumberland County, Penn., and the latter of New Jersey. They settled on the farm now occupied by our subject in 1829, which then consisted of 132 acres. They reared a family of seven children, all growing to manhood and womanhood, but now all deceased except two—Hannah and D. R. David Crooks died at the age of eighty-eight, and his wife when eighty-two years of age. Hannah Crooks married Samuel Buckley, and resides in Southwestern Missouri. They have a family of eight children, viz., Thomas, David, Edwin, Jane, Catherine, Margaret (who resides on the homestead with our subject), Fannie and Emily. Mr. Crooks has always lived on the homestead farm, enjoying his parents' society till the last. He leads a quiet, monotonous life, and is highly esteemed by his neighbors as an old settler and citizen.

W. C. CULBERTSON, lumber merchant, Girard, is a native of Edinboro, Erie Co., Penn., born November 27, 1825. His father, Andrew C., born in Westmoreland County, Penn., June 20, 1795. When two years of age, he came with his father William, who took up a large tract of land, and was one of the early settlers of Edinboro, where he died. Andrew married, in 1820, Margaret Alexander, born in Washington County, N. Y., October 31, 1797, and reared a family of eight children all now living—Margaret J., Mary C., William C., James A., Rebecca, John, Alexander and Charles W. In 1846, W. C. Culbertson engaged in lumbering on the Allegheny River and in Kentucky, subsequently continuing the same in Jefferson County. He at present has branches established at several points in the South and West. The oldest branch, in Covington, Ky., in which his eldest son—James A.—is interested, is known as J. A. Culbertson & Co. The Girard Lumber Company has mills at Menominee, Mich.; a lumber yard in Chicago is under the name of W. C. Culbertson & Son. He is connected with the Penn Mill at Albion, the business conducted under the firm name of Penn Lumber Co. He owns extensive timber lands in Northern Michigan and in the yellow pine timber districts of Missouri, a wheat farm in the Red River Valley, Minn., smaller farms in Kentucky, Allegheny Springs, Warren Co., Penn.; Edinboro, Erie Co., Penn., and the home estate near Girard. He is proprietor of the Girard Flouring Mills, and President of the Girard Wrench Factory, in which he has an interest. He was married in Warren County, Penn., to Margaret Alexander, by whom he has had eight children—seven now living. Mr. Culbertson is a modest, unassuming gentleman, loved by all who know him.

GEORGE H. CUTLER, attorney, Girard. The Cutler family are of English origin, New-England stock, and noted for their longevity. Thomas Cutler, our subject's grandfather, born in Massachusetts in 1736, a soldier in the French war, died in 1835. George H. Cutler was born in Guilford, Vt., in 1809, and is a son of Nahum and Martha (Robbins) Cutler, both deceased, natives of Windham County, Vt., and Hartford, Conn., respectively. George H. received a common school education, having a private tutor for the higher branches. He read law with Hon. Judge Ross, of Cortland, N. Y. In 1835, he located in Girard, Erie County; two years later entered the office of Judge Galbraith, of Erie, being admitted to the bar in 1840. He is the oldest practitioner in Erie County. Mr. Cutler was the Democratic candidate for Congress in 1852. In 1872, he was elected to the State Senate, and was elected Speaker in May, 1874, and President pro tem. in January, 1875. He was the last Speaker under the old and first President pro tem. under the new constitution, presiding in the absence of the Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Cutler married, in Cayuga County, N. Y., in 1830, Louisa Stewart, a native of Cambridge, N. Y. Six children (two deceased) blessed this union—Marcus N.; George A., who is a prominent member of the bar at Leland, Mich.; Mary, wife of Irvin P. Hinds, of Hinsdale, Ill., and Louisa. The law firm of Cutler & Hinds, which came into existence in 1861, still continues.

AUSTIN DAGGETT, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Greenfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., May, 1805, and is the eldest son living of Sebree and Annis (Peet) Daggett, the former born in Coventry, Conn., in 1775, the latter a native of Vermont. The father of Sebree, John Daggett, in the cold winter of 1799, came to this county, following an Indian trail through the woods. On December 24, 1802, going from Erie to Colt's Station, while crossing a stream on a log, he fell into the water and had his feet so terribly frozen that when he reached his destination he made a saw out of a case knife, and cut the frozen parts away, saving the very bones. No doctors in those days. He was a Revolutionary soldier, was married five times, and reared seven children, fruits of his first union. He made a small payment on 300 acres of land in Greenfield, on which his son Sebree Daggett and family, coming from Vermont, settled in 1799. They cleared about twenty acres of this tract, and in 1814 entered the land now occupied by Hiram Daggett, which consisted of 125 acres, 100 of which were cleared by Sebree and our subject. John departed this life in 1837, when eighty-four years old. Sebree reared a family of six sons and four daughters. The surviving are Laura (widow of Lewis Wildman), Austin, Darius, Reuben, Elner (widow of J. B. Williams), Hiram, John D. Austin married, in Conneaut, Ohio, June 3, 1830, Elvira, daughter of Joab Greene, a native of Herkimer County, N. Y., where she was born June 9, 1808, who has borne him ten children, six surviving, viz.: Julius A.; Annis R., wife of J. C. Zahn; Helen M., wife of Welcome J. Weeks; Melissa, wife of Richard Tuckey, of Coldwater, Mich.; Florence, wife of William M. Anderson, residing at home; and Josephine H., wife of James Tuckey. In August, 1830, Mr. Daggett settled on his portion of the farm, consisting of ninety-five acres of woodland. He has endured all the privations and hardships of pioneer life, clearing away the timber, building a cabin, etc. He served in the militia for over twenty years, and had a Captain's commission at that time. He has been a member of the Universalist Church many years.

ELIJAH DRURY, deceased, the father of Roswell C. and Oliver P. Drury, was the youngest child in a family of eight, born to Ebenezer and Mariam Drury, and the third child born in Litchfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y. (born September 19, 1792), after its settlement by the whites. By the will of his father, he was given the choice of living with his eldest brother, who had inherited the farm, receiving $100 when of age, or having his own time; he was then sixteen years of age. The latter was his choice, and, without a dollar, or adequate clothing, he started out in the winter's cold to make his way. He began digging stone at $10 per month, and clothed himself for the winter. He then went a distance of 100 miles in a cutter, to the Black River country, with a newly married sister, and attended school the remainder of the winter. He then worked for $10 per month, and saved $300, with which he purchased fifty acres of wild land in Genesee County, N. Y. He then worked for $12 per month, and hauled cannon for the Government after the close of the war of 1812. He married, in the fall of 1815, Abigail C. Cheney, born in Walpole, N. H., May 15, 1792. He walked to this county, and bought on credit 100 acres in Girard, a part of the farm on which Oliver P. now resides. He returned for his wife, and with oxen and horse started for their new home. They erected a small house and began the struggles of pioneer life. Success crowned his efforts, and he died surrounded by his family, and having large accumulations of landed property. He departed this life July 25, 1880, and his wife February 22, 1875. Their honored remains were interred in the family cemetery, near their home.

R. C. DRURY, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Girard Township November 3, 1817, and is a son of Elijah and Abigail (Cheney) Drury; the former born September 19, 1792, dying July 25, 1880; the latter born May 15, 1792, departed this life February 22, 1875. They were the parents of six children, four now living—Roswell C., Oliver P., Adaline A. and Marilda M. The records of this family show them to be of English stock. Obed Drury, of London, England, with the father of Hugh Drury, came to the Colonies with Gov. John Winthrop in 1635, to found a colony at the mouth of Kane River, Mass., and from them sprang the succeeding generations in America. Our subject married, in Girard Township, Mary J. Kennedy, who died without issue. He next married Uranah A. Haven, who dying left three children, viz.: Byron, married to Viola Sykes, and has four children—Harry, Clara, Leland and Ivy; R. Carmi, married F. Silverthorn, and has one child, Ethel; Mary, wife of C. M. Anderson. Mr. Drury again married, this time to Dorcas A. Coffman, by whom he has one child, Elijah, who married K. Wood, and has one child, Carl M. Mr. Drury settled on his present farm of 117 acres in 1851.

OLIVER P. DRURY, farmer, P. O. Girard, is a son of Elijah and Abigail C. (Cheney) Drury, born on the homestead farm in this township, August 13, 1819. He was united in marriage at Warsaw, N. Y., April 22, 1841, with Sarah, daughter of Eli Dibble. She was born at Granville, N. Y., July 22, 1817, and dying January 15, 1864, left four children, viz.:

Walter E., married to Gettie Whitcomb; they are residing in Nebraska, and have two children, Clarence and Francis; Roswell C., married to Mary Rhodes, parents of Karl and Ralph; Annie E., wife of F. A. Hadsell, residents of Cass County, Mich.; and Jessie, married to Inez F. Warner, reside on the homestead. Mr. Drury's second marriage took place November 17, 1868, with Mary E. Platt, a native of Crawford County, Pennsylvania. Mr. Drury disposed of his farm in this township and went to Cass County, Mich., where he resided until 1875, when, on account of the failing health of his aged father, he returned to the homestead, so he could care for and fulfill his last duties toward his honored sire. The generation is of pioneer stock, and the children inherit the qualities of their ancestors, all of whom were representatives of character, honesty and sobriety.

A. G. ELY, physician, Girard, was born in Middlefield, Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1820, and is a son of Sumner and Hannah (Gilbert) Ely, the former a native of Lyme, Conn., and the latter of Otsego County, N. Y. Sumner Ely was educated at Yale, where he graduated in the class of 1804, and was a prominent physician at Clarksville (Middlefield), Otsego Co., N. Y. He was President of the New York State Medical Society, and a member of the Assembly and Senate of that State. Our subject received his education at Hamilton College, N. Y., and was a graduate of the Geneva Medical College in 1841. He studied medicine with his father and Dr. R. G. Frary, of Hudson, N. Y., and after acting one year as assistant physician in Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., began the practice of his profession in his native county. In 1845, he located in Girard, where he has had a large practice, and is now gradually retiring from the field, leaving it for younger aspirants.

GEORGE C. GALLOWHUR (deceased) was born on the homestead farm, near Girard, in 1839, and was a son of George Gallowhur, a native of Mifflin County, Penn., who settled in Manchester, near Walnut Creek, Erie County, in 1818. Five years later he removed to the present home of the family, then consisting of eighty-five acres, all of which he cleared. He was one of the founders, and for many years Elder of the Presbyterian Church at Girard. He married, July 18, 1819, Eliza, a daughter of Andrew Lowry, a distinguished pioneer, who took up land under the Corporation Act, and was soon after dispossessed by the Indians. He subsequently settled in Mill Creek Township, and passed his later years at Girard. He was a native of Ireland, and married Mary Barr. George and Eliza Gallowhur had born to them eleven children, two surviving—Mary A., widow of Amos Stowe; and Sarah, widow of Oliver Easterbrook, who was a son of Benjamin Easterbrook, of Connecticut, a pioneer of Erie County. He was a lumber dealer, and was lost in the Allegheny River while floating a raft. Oliver died in November, 1872, leaving two children—Susie and Benjamin F. The subject of this sketch married, in 1870, Sarah E. Powell, a native of Crawford County, a daughter of Hon. Howell Powell, and granddaughter of Watkin Powell, a distinguished pioneer family of Crawford. Mr. Gallowhur died August 23, 1883, leaving a widow and one child, William Gibson, to mourn his loss.

L. W. GREEN, proprietor of billiard parlor, Girard, was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, in 1846, and is a son of Silas and Phebe Green, the former a native of Harbor Creek, Erie Co., Penn., and the latter of New York State. The grandparent, Joab Green, was among the earliest pioneers of Harbor Creek Township, settling prior to the war of 1812, after which he removed to Conneaut, Ohio, and remained till the close of life. The parents are both residents of Ohio. They reared two children, both living—Flora, wife of Calvin Richardson, of Willoughby, Ohio, and our subject. L. W. Green was reared on a farm, and in 1873 came to Girard; following year opened a market, which he conducted until 1877, when he sold out and removed to Bradford, Penn., where he opened a billiard parlor. This he conducted until 1879, when he returned to Girard and established a billiard room in the Avenue House, in which he remained until he removed to his present quarters. This hall has two tables of the latest design, and the necessary equipments for the game are of the best. It is supported and patronized by all lovers of the game, and no liquors are sold. Mr. Green was married on Christmas Day, 1867, to Lola, daughter of Dexter Marsh, of Pierpont, Ohio. This union has been blessed with two children—Bennie and Jessie.

JOHN GULLIFORD & CO., hardware, Girard. John Gulliford, one of our oldest native residents, was born in Girard, in 1814, and is a son of Samuel, who, with his father, John Gulliford, settled on the Lexington road, near Ball Church in 1801. The great-grandfather, William, of English birth, was the first Gulliford to locate in the colonies. John Gulliford, Sr., took up 200 acres, reared a large family and died on the homestead. Samuel married Catherine Ball, whose parents settled here the same year. They reared a family of eleven children, all living—Daniel, John, Levi, David, Samuel, Cornelius, Allen, Sally (wife of S. K. Talmage), Lorenzo, Mary A. and Lydia. Our subject was reared on a farm, attending a rude log school for his education, and was apprenticed, when twelve years old, to a tinner in Erie. He followed this trade until 1839, when he established himself in business, which has grown into the large establishment under firm name of Gulliford & Co. He was married in this township in 1839, to Catherine, the daughter of John Hay, a native of Fairview Township. All the seven children born to this union are living, viz., John H., George S., Samuel H., Mary (wife of L. D. Hart), Emma, Lizzie (wife of G. W. Badger) and Hattie (wife of C. Fargo). Mr. Gulliford has filled various township offices, and is the oldest merchant in business here at the present time.

JAMES J. HALSTEAD, farmer, P. O. Platea, was born in Galway, Saratoga Co., N. Y., April 29, 1810, son of Samuel and Patience (Jones) Halstead. The latter is a native of Jonesville, N. Y., and a daughter of Samuel Jones, after whom the place was named. The former was a native of Delaware County, N. Y. Their children were as follows: Washington, Platt, Elizabeth, Theodorus, Samuel, Fannie, Nancy, Samuel (second), Henry B. and James J. Our subject was married, June 22, 1831, to Lovina Conkling, a native of Saratoga, N. Y., and a connection of the distinguished Roscoe Conkling, of that State. Four children have been born to this union, all living—Alvah, George, Charles W. and William. Mr. Halstead lost his wife by death, August 17, 1867, and he married Susan Waldo, a native of Starkey, Yates Co., N. Y., where she was born in 1835. Mr. Halstead came to this county in 1839, and settled on a farm east of Lockport, but in 1852 located in the village, where he was engaged in mercantile business some years. By trade he is a tanner and shoe-maker. He owns 148 acres in Girard Township.

L. D. HART, clothing merchant, Girard, was born in this township in 1839, and is a son of Leffert and Nancy (Woodford) Hart, both natives of Connecticut, who settled in this city in 1838. Leffert was a contractor and builder, and helped to build the canal here. He with Judge Miles built ten miles of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad, including the aqueduct at Elk Creek. He also constructed six miles of the Pittsburgh road from Girard depot to Cross' Station, and filled a contract on a road near Akron, Ohio. He was a man of active business qualification, and represented this county in the Legislature. He was the father of fourteen children by two marriages; his second wife was Eliza, a sister of Richard Dimpsey, of this county. Our subject first engaged as a salesman, then dealt extensively in oil. He was drafted in 1862, and served nine months in Company G, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Infantry State Guards. In 1866, he established himself in his present business in Girard, in which he has been very successful. He has a custom department connected with his store, and carries a stock worth $10,000. He married in this county, in 1868, Mary E. Gulliford, a native of Girard. He is one of the enterprising citizens of this city, and is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, which he joined in 1864.

CALVIN J. HINDS, attorney, Girard, second son of Perley and Sarah (Lawrence) Hinds, was born in Girard Township December 29, 1832. His parents, natives of Cheshire County, N. H., settled in this township with the pioneers of 1831. His mother, who bore five children, three surviving—Sarah, Ervin P. and Calvin J.—died in 1839. His father was remarried to Polly (Kent) Smith, of Chautauqua County, N. Y., who bore him five children, three living—William W., Clarisa L. and Marion S. Our subject was reared on a farm, attending the district school, Kingsville Academy, Ohio, Girard Academy and Cleveland Commercial College. He then engaged for three years in the insurance business at Philadelphia, Penn., and afterward for three years in mercantile and lumber business at Phillipsburg, Penn. He read law with George H. Cutler, was admitted to the Erie County Bar in 1860, and formed a copartnership with his preceptor, which firm still continues. During Lincoln's administration, Mr. Hinds served four years as Postmaster of Girard, but has since avoided political life. He conducted the telegraph and express business some years, and has always been identified with the growth and development of his native township. In 1856, he was married to Elvira M. Cutler, a native of this county, who was the mother of three children—Lawrence C., Paymaster for the contractors of the Northern Pacific Railroad, of Billings, Mont.; Bertha E., wife of F. J. French, and Elvira C. His wife died in 1864. Mr. Hinds' second wife was Frank A. Stewart, of Syracuse, N. Y. This union has been blessed with five children—Fannie S., Harry, Belle, Calvin J., Jr., and J. Donald.

F. C. KEELER, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Mexico, Oswego County, N. Y., in 1820, and is a son of Isajah W. and Lucinda Keeler, both natives of New York State. They located in North East Township in 1830, and were among its earliest pioneers. Two years later they moved to Elk Creek, near Wellsburg, but died at Lockport, Girard Township. They were the parents of nine children, four living—Joseph, F. C., Nathan and Albert. Our subject was married, in 1842, to Caroline Pierce, a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., which union has been blessed with four children, all living—Cynthia F., wife of F. Randall, by whom she has two children—Leslie and Alice; Alice J., Melissa R., widow of A. Lewis, and the mother of Oliver K., Carl W., Frank C. and Grace A.; and Emma, wife of David Wood, by whom she has two children—M. Glenn and Carrie L. At the time of his marriage, Mr. Keeler was living on the piece of land first mentioned, and went to work in the paper mill some three years after. The land was situated in Greenfield Township, four miles south of North East. He made a small payment on a piece of land, which he afterward sold to advantage. In 1851, he settled on his present farm, consisting of sixty acres. He began life empty-handed, and attributes much of his success to the assistance of his good wife, who shared in his struggles, and now with him enjoys all their present comforts.

WILLIAM S. KELLEY, farmer, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born on the homestead farm, in Girard Township, February 12, 1829, and is a son of John Kelley, whose record appears in this work. He was married in this township October 4, 1860, to Eliza J., daughter of John Murray, a pioneer, who was a marine in the war of 1812, and settler of this township. To this union two children have been born, both now living—Addie M. and Belle J. Mr. Kelley occupies seventy-five acres of the homestead farm, where he has resided since his birth. He has been serving as School Director for nine years. He is a man widely and favorably known, and is connected with the A. O. U. W.

J. D. KELLEY, farmer, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born on the homestead, on which he has always resided, in 1831, and is the third son of John Kelley. He resides on fifty acres, a portion of the homestead farm settled by his father. He was married in this county, in 1859, to Rebecca A. Emrich, a native of Ohio. Their only child, Charles J., born October 18, 1855, who was employed in the office at Girard Station, was killed on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad April 16, 1878. He was a young man of high moral worth, and his death was a great loss to his parents. Mrs. Kelley dying, August 1, 1880, Mr. Kelley married Anna L. Case, a native of Pierpont, Ohio. Mr. Kelley is descended from an old pioneer, is highly respected, and has served as Assessor two years, being elected Assistant Assessor in 1876, succeeding J. C. Miller, who died, and in 1877, was re-elected. He has also filled the office of Collector for one year, and previously was Constable of Girard Township and Borough.

LAZARUS S. KELLEY, farmer, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born on the homestead farm, on the Lake road, March 26, 1835, and is the youngest son of John Kelley, who was born April 28, 1793, in Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Penn., and came to this county in 1803, when but ten years old, with his father, George Kelley. The latter purchased a tract of land, consisting of 200 acres (now occupied by his three sons), of Robert Brown, with allowance of 6 per cent. He and his wife, Fanny Dickson, born in Derrytown, Mifflin Co., Penn., came on horseback to this farm, then an unbroken wilderness, cleared ten acres, and erected a cabin, near the site of our subject's present residence, where they lived and died. He was succeeded on this farm by his son, John, who married Margaret Steeley, a native of Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Penn., born August 8, 1794. They were the parents of eleven children, seven now living—Cartus E., widow of George Webb; Susannah, wife of Constant Hicks, residing in Hancock County, Ill.; John S., of Quincy, Ill.; William S.; James D., our subject, and Mary J., wife of Clark Barlow. John Kelley was a widely and favorably known pioneer, and soldier of the war of 1812. His wife died in May, 1865, and he followed her in March, 1879, aged eighty-six. Lazarus S. Kelley, the subject of this sketch, married in this township, Sarah Jane, daughter of Asa and Sarah (Coats) McConnell, who settled in this township in 1829, and purchased the land on which the Herrick family now reside, where Mrs. Kelley was born. Her parents raised a family of seven children, three now living—Amanda, widow of William McQuilkin, residing in this township, and Frederick, a resident of Danville, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley have no children.

JOHN KESSEL, Jr., restaurant, Girard, was born in this township February 7, 1857, and is a son of John and Phillipina (Epple) Kessel, both natives of Germany, and parents of eight children, seven now living—John (our subject), Frank, Bertha, Minnie, Charles, Henry and Carrie. John Kessel, Sr., was born in Hesse-Darmstadt in 1835; crossed the ocean in 1854; came direct to Girard, and established himself in business; was subsequently burned out. He lived here till the close of his life, dying, however, at Waukesha, Wis., July 2, 1883, whence he had gone in search of health, and was interred in Girard Cemetery. He was very successful, financially, though he began life as a barber, with no capital but his ambition and perseverance. He was a Democrat in politics, a member of the Lutheran Church. Many knew from experience that he was kind-hearted and liberal. He was a prominent member of the A. O. U. W., I. O. O. F., and several other societies. Our subject engaged in the barber business at Mayville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., from 1876 until the death of his father, when he returned to Girard and took charge of the business, which he has since continued. He was married, on November 4, 1879, at Mayville, to Hattie E. Van Valkenbergh, a native of the same. Two children blessed this union, one surviving—Margaret. Mr. Kessel inherits his father's attributes, is a successful business man, and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

RANSOM KIDDER, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1823, and is a son of Thomas and Lucy (Holt) Kidder, who were among the pioneers to settle on Elk Creek in that township, located on 200 acres of land, where they both died. They were the parents of seven children, four now living, viz., Putnam, Perry, Betsy (wife of D. Ward), and Ransom. Our subject was married in this county to Susan, daughter of Elijah Drury, who, dying, left three children—Charles, Elijah and Passmore W. Mr. Kidder's second wife was Bulah Cronch, who also died, and left two children—Ida and Frank. He then married Emma T., daughter of John P. Lyman, and a native of this county. Three children, all living, have blessed this union, viz., Belle, Rush, and one not named. Mr. Kidder settled on his present estate, consisting of 175 acres, in 1856. He has served as School Director eight or nine years, and is an old and highly-respected citizen.

F. X. LOMMER, proprietor of the Lommer House, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1839, and is a son of John Lommer, who emigrated to the United States in 1837, settling and dying in Buffalo. Since boyhood, when he began as bell boy in the old Phoenix House, F. X. Lommer has been in the hotel business, soon winning for himself an enviable reputation. In 1869, he became proprietor of the Jones House, at Westfield, N. Y., which he conducted successfully until he purchased the Osborn House, which stood upon the site of his present edifice; it has accommodation for about twenty transient guests. It is the only hotel at the Grove, and first-class in all its appointments. He married, in Buffalo, in 1860, Mary E. Laux, a native of same city. Their living children are Julia, William and Harry. Frank J., who was clerking with his father, an estimable young man, beloved by a large circle of friends, died September 11, 1883, in his twenty-first year. Mr. Lommer is connected with Lodge 44, A. O. U. W., of Erie. He is possessed of a genial disposition, and as a landlord has a well-merited reputation, and strangers ever find a cordial welcome to his house.

LEVI LOVERIDGE, accountant, Girard, son of Ethan and Caroline (Gunn) Loveridge, was born in this township October 6, 1820. His parents, natives of Massachusetts, came to this township with their family in 1818, entering 300 acres of land, upon which they resided until the close of their lives. They reared a family of seven children, five surviving—Henry H., Levi, Delia, James M. and Lucy. Levi remained on the farm until twenty-one, acquiring an education in the schools in Girard and Erie City, and engaging in teaching four or five years. For the past twenty-five years, however, he has been in mercantile trade in Girard, conducting at one time an extensive dry goods trade. In 1881, Mr. Loveridge, with his son, established on Main street the largest grocery house in this city, and they carry a complete line of groceries, crockery, etc. He has filled various township offices with credit to himself, and is one of our oldest and most respected settlers. He was united in marriage with Adaline C. Freeman, a native of Rushford, N. Y. Three children have been born to this union, two living—Olcott D., married to Lettie B. Van Dyke, of Delavan, Wis., and has two children (twins)—Addie M. and Millie B.; and Fred F., married to Ella Dinsmore, of Mercer County, Penn. Mr. Loveridge, with family, is a member of the Presbyterian congregation, in which he is a Trustee. He has acted as accountant for the Girard Wrench Manufacturing Company for the past eight years.

O. D. LOVERIDGE, miller, Girard, was born in Waukegan, Ill., August, 1846, and is a son of Levi Loveridge, whose sketch appears in this work. O. D. Loveridge engaged for ten years in lumbering on the Chippewa and Mississippi Rivers, then carried on milling at Alma, Wis. In October, 1879, he took possession of his present mill, one of the oldest in this portion of the country. Its original capacity was twenty barrels per day, but he is now (October, 1883) improving it, putting in four buhrs, and running it by steam, so that its capacity will be doubled. J. H. Rogers, the miller in charge, is undoubtedly one of the best in the county. Mr. Loveridge is going to experiment with stone, believing, from observation and experiments, that a better grade of flour can be produced than by the roller method. The mill is in a good locality, and has always done a successful trade. Mr. Loveridge was married in Walworth County, Wis., to Lettie Van Dyke, a native of Lansing, Mich. The two children blessing this union, Addie M. and Millie B., are twins. He is one of Girard's active business men, and a member of the A. O. U. W.

C. G. LUCE, Girard, is the senior partner in the firm of Luce & Thompson, and was born at Kingsville, Ohio, in 1849. He is a son of E. G. and Caroline Luce, residents of Washington, D. C. Our subject was educated at York, Penn., and served twelve years as a page in the capitol; subsequently was Assistant Superintendent of the Senate folding room, and was supported by Hon. Ben Wade, and afterward by Senator Stewart. From the folding room, he went into Board of Audit, Treasury Department, resigning in 1875, when he came to this city. He was engaged two years with C. F. Rockwell, and in March, 1880, was admitted as a partner. The firm of C. F. Rockwell & Co. was succeeded by Luce & Thompson in February, 1882, who have since been successfully conducting the business. They have the largest establishment of the kind in Girard, and carry a full line of dry goods, carpets, oil cloths, etc. Mr. Luce was married in Girard, in 1874, to Emma, daughter of C. F. Rockwell, a native of this city. He is a member of Columbia Lodge, No. 3, F. & A. M., of Washington, D. C. Mr. Luce is one of the active merchants of Girard.

HENRY MCCONNELL (deceased) was born in Rutland, Vt., February 29, 1804, and was a son of William McConnell, of that place. He was married at Hebron, N. Y., in 1827, to Charlotte, daughter of James Webster, Sr., of that place. In 1827, he, with James Webster, Jr., came to Girard Village, and soon established the firm of McConnell & Webster, which partnership was one of the happiest associations. They opened the first mercantile house in Girard, Erie County, and for twenty-five years carried on an extensive business in this village and in various parts of the county. They were very successful, both in amassing wealth and earning for themselves highly honorable reputations. When Mr. McConnell's decease occurred in 1871, he was serving as President of the First National Bank; he was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church here, and an Elder in same for upward of forty years. He was a man of quiet, unostentatious habits, and was widely known and beloved by all. His estimable widow followed him in 1881. The only survivor of their family of children is Mrs. Rebecca Rice, who is residing on the homestead in Girard Village.

H. P. MALICK, manufacturer, Girard, was born in Mill Creek Township August 22, 1837, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Musselman) Malick, the former a native of Northumberland Co., Penn., born in 1797, and the latter born in 1800 in Genesee County, N. Y. They were married at the home of the maternal grandparent, Jacob, in this county. The Musselman family settled in this State prior to the Revolutionary war, in which the great-grandfather was a soldier. In 1802, Henry Malick came to this county with his father, who settled and died in North East, and was one of its earliest pioneers. Henry, the son, subsequently settled in Mill Creek, and reared a family of four children, two surviving—Wesley and H. P. (our subject). He died December 26, 1875, at the home of his son, H. P., in Girard, to which place he had come four years previously, soon after the death of his wife, which occurred October 9, 1871. H. P. Malick was reared on the homestead farm until eighteen, when he attended school at Girard and Waterford Academies, and Allegheny College, Meadville, after which he engaged in teaching as a profession for some time, and was so engaged at North East at the time of his marriage, December 24, 1861, to Lucy, daughter of Ethan Loveridge, a native of Girard Township. Three children blessed this union, all surviving—Carrie E., Grace A. and Herbert P. For some years after his marriage, Mr. Malick was traveling salesman for Tucker & Dorsey, hardware merchants, of Indianapolis, Ind. More recently he has been manufacturing bed-springs and attending to his farming lands on each side of the borough. For years he was a Republican, but subsequently has taken a strong stand with the Prohibitionists, being one of the State Executive Committee of this party, on whose ticket he was nominated for legislative honors. He and his family are connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of this borough, in which he was a class leader many years.

AGRIPPA D. MARTIN, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Rome, Oneida Co., N. Y., January 1, 1810, a son of Agrippa and Anna (Jefferson) Martin, natives of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., and Deerfield, Vt., respectively, who moved from Fredonia, N. Y., to Girard, in 1818, where Agrippa artilced the piece of land now occupied by David Crooks, but subsequently settled on the Reed farm, where he died in November, 1828. They reared a family of eleven children, four surviving—Ephraim, Nancy (widow of J. Palmer), Agrippa, and Justus, of Union City, Mich. Our subject was brought up on a farm, receiving but a limited education. In early life he drove a stage for R. S. Reed, between Erie and Conneaut, but subsequently engaging to travel with a caravan, he gave what little money he had to his mother, and became an adept trainer, giving exhibitions of his daring in the cages of wild animals. He also trained and performed the well-known elephant Hannibal. After traveling seven years, he returned home and purchased and rebuilt the old Picket House of Girard, which he called the Mansion House, and ran successfully a hotel in the village upward of thirty-two years. He was a very popular landlord. In 1838, he retired to his farm of 100 acres, a part of which he purchased in 1838. Mr. Martin married in this county, February 4, 1840, Mary C. Gregor, a native of Chambersburg, Penn. Seven children, all living, were born to this union—Helen M., wife of Dr. J. L. Thayer, of La Fay, ette, Ind.; Antoinette E., wife of C. W. Noyes; George C.; Adella P., wife of C. W. Sykes, of Carroll County, Md.; Frank A., Adrial E. and Libbie A. Mrs. Martin dying November 27, 1866, he married, January 16, 1867, Eliza C., daughter of Lucius Peck, and widow of Linus Webb, of Warren, Ohio. She is a native of Monroe County, N. Y. During Mr. Martin's long and eventful career he has never taken a chew of tobacco, smoked, or drank a glass of liquor, which can be said of very few landlords. Beginning in life with nothing but a good constitution and perseverance, he has amassed wealth.

HENRY MILLER, farmer, P. O. Platea, was born on the homestead farm in Girard Township, Erie County, in 1819. His grandfather, Jacob Coffman, settled on this farm in 1801, and the original log house remains at this writing (1883) a monument of his pioneer spirit. Henry, our subject, was married in this county, in 1850, to Eliza Dodge, a native of Erie County. Two children, both now living, have been born to this union—Adelaide, wife of D. W. Dunnehi, and Josephine, wife of T. E. Bradish. Mr. Miller has always resided on the homestead, now consisting of fifty-four acres, and numbers among our old and respected pioneers.

PETER H. NELLIS, proprietor Avenue House, Girard, was born in 1843, in Alsace, Germany. His father, Mathias, emigrated to America in 1848, locating at Erie City, where he yet resides. The subject of this sketch began life a poor boy, first gardening, then came to Girard in 1861, and learned shoe-making, at which he worked several years. In 1864, he entered as a landsman in the navy, was assigned to the steamer Gen. Thomas (then at Bridgeport, Ala.), participating in Hood's engagement and in several skirmishes, serving until the close of the war. On his return he went to the oil country, came back to Girard and located in an old building on the canal called Saw Dust Hall, then in operation, where he worked at his trade, sold merchandise, accommodated travelers, and kept a stable. In 1876, he bought and repaired the Old Guard House, which burned in 1879, and on which was but a small insurance. He immediately began erecting the Avenue House, opening it in the following June. It is a modern brick structure and cost about $9,000, and has accommodations for a large number of guests. He married, in Girard, Kate Croft, a native of Canada. Two children, both living, blessed this union—Daniel and Kitty.

Mr. Nellis is a popular landlord, and keeps a first class, reliable house, which commands the trade of the traveling public.

RILEY PETTIBONE, farmer, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., in 1825, son of Titus and Cynthia (Gridley) Pettibone, both natives of Litchfield, Conn., who settled in this township in the spring of 1832. Titus purchased 220 acres of land, covered with woods, and cleared 150. They reared seven sons, five now living—Henry, residing in Michigan; William, in Council Bluffs, Iowa; James E., Riley, and Charles, who resides on the homestead. Our subject has been twice married, first in 1843, to Mary Hall, a native of this county; she was a daughter of Ben Hall, an early pioneer, and dying in 1866, left six children, four of whom survive, viz.: Alice, Sarah (wife of G. Moorehouse), George and Anna. Mrs. Moorehouse has two children—Ethel and Susie. His second wife, whom he married in 1867, was Mary Cook, a native of this county, and a daughter of Albert Cook. Two children, both now living, blessed this union—Minnie and Gertrude. Mr. Pettibone settled on his present farm, consisting of sixty-seven acres, in 1850. He is serving as Road Commissioner, previously was for five years School Director. He is connected with the Methodist Episcopal denomination at Girard Station.

GEORGE PLATT, county engineer, Girard, was born in Litchfield County, Conn., in 1825, and is a son of William and Polly (Allen) Platt, father a native of Dutchess County, N. Y.; mother of Fairfield County, Conn. They came to Erie County in 1855, and settled in Girard, where they died. They reared a family of five children, four now living—Charles, George, Jane M. (wife of M. Mallin, now an invalid on the homestead), who is the mother of Lela D., William P. and Julia W. Our subject, having acquired a common school and academic education, was engaged in the Special Service Coast Survey; subsequently, when about thirty-six years of age, was a teacher of mathematics, surveying and navigation at Eagleswood Military Academy, Perth Amboy, N. J. At the breaking-out of the rebellion, he was placed in command of the mercantile school-ship Ocean Eagle, where for one year or more he transported troops. He then was placed in charge of the fractional interest, in Registrar's office, Treasury department, Washington, and while there produced a fractional interest table of no use now. He assisted in signing the Government bonds of 1861, also the loan of 1863 and 1864. In 1865, he resigned, and became interested in an iron mine in West Virginia. In 1867, he took command of a propeller lying between Albany and New Haven. His father dying in 1868, he came to Girard to reside; in 1872 he was appointed County Engineer. Mr. Platt is well-traveled, and a thoroughly educated gentleman.

M. R. PRIME, farmer, P. O. Platea, was born in Cheshire County, N. H., in 1814, and is a son of Josiah and Sophia (Lawrence) Prime, early settlers of that county. They came to Erie County in 1833, and settled on the present farm, at that time consisting of 113 acres, where they passed the remainder of their lives. They reared a family of seven, two of whom are now living—M. R., and Emily H., wife of Mr. Sawyer, of Boston, Mass. Our subject married in Erie County, in 1850, Polly Jane, daughter of John and Polly Smith, and a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y. Four children have been born to this union, three now living—Florence S., wife of A. Benedict; Frank M., married to Ella Washburn, and Burton L., married to Emma L. Rice. Mr. Prime has served his township as Assistant Assessor and Assessor, School Director, and has been otherwise identified with its growth. He is highly respected by all who know him.

MAXSON RANDALL, retired, Girard, is descended from one of the oldest pioneer families. He was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1798, and is a son of John and Lydia (Odell) Randall, natives of Vermont, who remained in Buffalo, N. Y., while our subject's grandfather, David Randall, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and his brother Stephen pushed their way through the wilderness, locating in Elk Creek Township, Erie Co., in June, 1801. John subsequently settled in Conneaut, taking up 270 acres of land, and lived here until eighty-one years old. He reared a family of eight children, four living—Mary, Maxson, Francis and Lydia. Maxson passed thirty years on the homestead, then moved to a farm of 125 acres in Girard Township in 1832, where he remained until he retired from active pursuits, and occupied present residence in Girard. Maxson Randall was married in this county in 1819, to Hannah Pomeroy, a native of New York State, who died leaving six children, four now living—Elias, Francis, James and Sarah. His second wife was Sarah Miller, of Girard, a daughter of Isaac and Nancy Miller, a pioneer family. Of eight children born to this union, seven survive—Franklin, Calvin, Maxson, Jr., Welcome, Dallas, Celesta (wife of M. Evans, occupying the homestead), and Nellie. Two brothers of our subject were soldiers in the war of 1812. Mr. Randall has filled various township offices of trust, and, although well advanced in age, is active and attends to his farming interests. He is highly esteemed as a pioneer and a citizen.

C. L. RANDALL, ex-Postmaster, Girard, was born in Girard Township in 1841, and is a son of Maxson Randall, of this borough. He was reared on a farm, and received his education here. He enlisted for three years in the Union army, in 1861, in Company H, Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, as Orderly Sergeant. He participated in the battles of Hanover Court House, Gaines' Mill, Savage Station, Malvern Hill, where he was wounded in the knee, in which he has still the bullet, June 28, 1862. He was confined in the Philadelphia and Germantown Hospitals, being discharged on account of disability, from the latter, January, 1863. Returning to peaceful pursuits, he was appointed Postmaster in 1864, under President Lincoln. For the past two years, he has been engaged as a traveling salesman for John H. Gause & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Randall has been manager of the telegraph system at this point and Girard Station for the past eighteen years. He was married in Crawford County in 1864 to Alma M. Fansler, a native of same county. To this union have been born three children, one living—Harry B. He is a member of the Masonic order.

JOHNSTON REA, retired, Girard, was born in Conneaut Township, Erie County, August 2, 1805, son of Samuel and Margaret (Eaton) Rea, natives of Franklin County, Penn. Samuel entered 250 acres of land in the wilderness, living with a neighbor until a hut was erected. Samuel Rea resided on the farm (which is now one of the most productive in the county) until his death. Of their family of nine children, two survive—Johnston, and Eliza, wife of Joseph Ware, residing on a portion of the homestead. Johnston was reared on the homestead, and married in Girard, February, 1827, Susannah, daughter of Robert Porter, a native of this county. This union was blessed by five sons, four attaining their majority—John; George P., married to Julia Anderson, had three children living; Jennie and William. George P. lived to the age of fifty years, engaging in mercantile pursuits; he was elected to the Legislature, serving through the sessions 1867–68, and re-elected to the same position, serving with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents; he failed to be elected to the third term by a majority of two votes against him, S. Newel and Theodore. Mr. Rea retired in 1860, occupying his commodious residence in Girard, though retaining control of the farm in the town-ship. He has been an Elder of the Presbyterian Church for forty years, and was one of its founders. Mr. Rea is held in high esteem by all his friends: he served as Township Assessor, and in various other township offices.

C. H. RILLING, farmer, P. O. Fairview, was born in Mill Creek Township in 1851, and is a son of Christopher and Elizabeth (Ackerman) Rilling, the former born in February, 1819, in Wittenberg, Germany, emigrated with his father, Stephen, to this country, who settled in Mill Creek, where he lived the remainder of his days, dying when eighty-three years old, in December, 1864. Christopher is a carpenter by trade, and resides on the homestead farm. He was the father of thirteen children, one deceased. Our subject, married in this county in 1875, Cassie, daughter of Elin Wolfe, and a native of this county. Three children have been born to this union, viz., Hattie E., Harvey C. and Irvin. C. H. Rilling, Jr., and C. H. Heidler are joint owners of the present farm, consisting of 100 acres, which was formerly Converse Clark's farm.

JOHN ROBERTSON, deceased, was born in Delaware County, N. Y., August 4, 1805, and was a son of Wheeler and Debora (Barlow) Robertson, natives of Hartford, Conn., and Nova Scotia respectively. They settled in Wyoming County, N. Y., in 1815, where they both died. They reared a family of twelve children, seven of whom are living. The subject of this sketch was married in Allegany County, N. Y., in 1834, to Ruth Rich, a native of same county. Six children have been born to this union, five living—America, wife of J. W. Robinson; Belva, wife of J. M. Fales; Isabel, wife of A. V. Slusser; Wheeler, unmarried, and J. Lee, who married Christina Yeager. Mr. Robertson came to this county in 1847, and settled on the farm he subsequently occupied, consisting of sixty acres, a small portion of which was cleared. He died February 4, 1884. He was one of the esteemed citizens and pioneers of Erie County.

JONATHAN B. ROBERTSON, farmer, Girard, was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., in 1823, and is a son of Wheeler and Debora (Barlow) Robertson, the former a native of Connecticut, and the latter of Nova Scotia. Both are deceased. Jonathan B. came to this county in 1847, and settled on a farm, consisting of fifty acres, in 1849, on the Lake road, where he has since resided. He was united in marriage in Wyoming County, N. Y., October 8, 1857, with Elizabeth Phelps, a native of said county. Three children blessed this union, two now living—Charles C. and Katie M. Mr. Robertson is a well and favorably known pioneer of this county.

JOSIAH W. ROBINSON, farmer, P. O. Girard. The Robinson family are of Scotch-Irish origin, the first of the name settling in Lancaster County, Penn., in 1722. George Robinson, of Sherman Valley, and a son Jonathan, who received a Captain's commission from the Executive Council at Philadelphia, were distinguished for the active part they took in the struggle for American Independence. In the spring of 1797, Joseph McCord and Thomas Robinson located their claims, cleared same, and erected their cabins for their families in the forests of Erie County. That fall they returned to civilization, returning the following spring (1798) with a small company. Their goods were sent on boats up the Allegheny to French Creek, and thence to Le Beuf, the site of the old fort, now Waterford. Thomas Robinson was a man of strictest integrity and piety. He served for years as Justice of the Peace, and was an Elder of the Presbyterian Church at North East at the time of its organization. His descendants are scattered over the Central and Western States. Our subject was born in North East Township May 25, 1829, and is a son of George W. and Matilda (Willis) Robinson. The former, a son of Thomas and Mary (McCord) Robinson, was born in Erie County, June 12, 1801. He held many township offices during his life. They were the parents of four children, three now living—Joseph W. and Josiah (twins) Elwin E. Mrs. Robinson departed this life December 19, 1876, and Mr. Robinson January 4, 1877, both in Girard Township. Our subject married, December 23, 1858, N. Jane Ferguson, a native of Springfield Township, this county. Two children were born to this union, one living—Mary M. Mr. Robinson followed farming until 1883, when he located in Girard, and retired from the active pursuits of life. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

C. F. ROCKWELL, manufacturer, Girard, was born in 1826, at Wilton, Conn., and is a son of Philander and Elizabeth (Fitch) Rockwell, natives of Connecticut, where they passed their lives and reared a family of nine children, six surviving. In 1844, our subject left home, and clerked in New York until 1852, when he moved to this borough, and established himself in mercantile business, in which he has continued thirty years. He has been interested in the wrench factory since its organization and is now one of the partners in the concern. Mr. Rockwell was married in New York City in 1849, to Eliza J. Bessey, a native of Connecticut. Of the four children born to this union, three survive—Emma L., wife of C. G. Luce; Ida, wife of W. W. Hart, of Fremont, Ohio; and Libbie, wife of Dr. J. M. Bessey, of Washington, D. C. The eldest son, William F. (deceased), was associated with his father in business, and died when but twenty-five years of age. He was an estimable young man, esteemed and loved by all who knew him. C. F. Rockwell is one of the most prominent business men of Girard, who has always borne an active part in building up its enterprises.

S. Y. ROSSITER, tanner, Girard, Penn., is a native of ²Norristown, Montgomery County, Penn., born in 1835. He is a son of Lindley and Margaret (Pennypacker) Rossiter, natives of Chester County, Penn. Lindley was a tanner and currier, and carried on business for over forty years in Norristown. On his decease our subject succeeded to the business. He subsequently moved to St. Marys, Elk County, where he was in business two years. He came to Girard in 1871, and succeeded L. C. England. Since his purchasing this tannery he has improved and increased its capacity two-thirds, and conducts a large and successful business. He was united in marriage in 1857, with Mary B. Johnson, a native of Norristown. Eleven children have been born to this union, five surviving, viz., Uriah, Eugene, Elizabeth, Joseph and Margaret A. Mr. Rossiter is the only surviving child of his parents, and is a well and favorably known citizen and man of business. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W. societies.

HENRY SCHULTZ, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Lancaster County, Penn., in 1823, and is a son of Henry and Christina C. (Myers) Schultz, both natives of Germany, who settled in Lancaster County, where Henry was drafted in the war of 1812. They settled in Girard Township in 1831; were the parents of four children, three surviving, viz.: Henry, Godfrey, and Regina, wife of Philip Bliholder, residing in Winnebago County, Wis. Both parents died in the township. Henry Shultz married in this county, in 1865, Sarah W., daughter of Robert Alton, a native of England, who came to this country in 1835, and settled in Allegheny City. To this union two children were born, both now living—Clarence H. and Albert C. Mr. Schultz in 1865, settled on his present farm of 165 acres, where he has since made his home.

GODFREY SCHULTZ, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Lancaster County, Penn., in 1824, and is a son of Henry and Christina C. (Myers) Schultz, both natives of Germany, who settled in Girard Township in 1832. Godfrey obtained a good common school education, and was married in this township in 1853 to Harriet Beck, who, dying in 1872, left three children, viz.: Regina C., Martha J. and Esther E. Mr. Schultz married, for his second wife, Mary Beck (a cousin), born in Lancaster, Penn. Three children have blessed this union, all living—Rosa B., Annie M. and Sarah E. Mr. Schultz settled on his present estate, consisting of 230 acres, in 1852. He is connected with the Lutheran Church. The Schultz family is a well-known pioneer family.

W. A. SEELEY, agent Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway, Girard Station, was born in Fairview Township March 18, 1824, and is a son of Austin H. and Phebe R. (Allen) Seeley, natives of Arlington, Vt., and Amsterdam, N. Y., respectively. They came to this county, settling in Fairview Township in 1823, where Austin H. bought a farm, and erected a saw mill. In 1831, he purchased a farm of 100 acres in the woods of Girard Township which he subsequently sold, buying 100 acres, the site of the present village of Girard Station. After completion of the railway through the same, he gave the company five acres of land, now occupied by their buildings, tracks and yard. He was appointed and remained their first agent one year, when he resigned and G. H. McIntire succeeded him, who in turn (after fourteen years' service) resigned, and E. D. Nettleton took the office for three and half years. At the expiration of this time our subject, W. A. Seeley, became agent in December, 1870, and is giving satisfaction. Austin H., his father, had resigned on account of ill health, and twelve years afterward died. He reared a family of six children, three still surviving—W. A., Irwin (of Onarga, Iroquois County, Ill.), Lucy A. (wife of G. H. McIntire of Stoneboro, Penn.). W. A. Seeley was married in Crawford County, Penn., to Charlotte Lawrence, a native of same. One child blessed this union—Eugene A., dying when fifteen years of age. Mr. Seeley lost his first wife by death and married Mrs. Meriva A. Howard, a native of Wyoming County, N. Y. The Seeleys number among our first and most esteemed pioneers.

WILLIAM SILVERTHORN, deceased, one of our respected pioneers, was born on the homestead farm in Girard in 1817. He was a son of Isaac and a grandson of William Silverthorn, who took up a large tract of land in this township. Our subject inherited an honored name, and lived on a part of the homestead all his life. He was a zealous, earnest, hard-working man, quiet and unostentatious in his habits, and beloved by all. He was married in Springfield Township in 1849, to Rhoda M., daughter of Thomas and Anna McKee, and grand-daughter of Robert McKee, who settled in Conneaut Township in 1802. The five children born to this union are living—Arvilla, wife of A. Brown, Thomas, Fred, Willie and Agnes. Mrs. Silverthorn's mother is residing with her, and is in her eightieth year. Mr. Silverthorn, at the time of his death, 1880, was serving as Commissioner.

JOHN W. SILVERTHORN, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Girard Township, Erie County, in 1819, and is a son of Isaac and Margaret (Miller) Silverthorn, the latter a native of Stanton, Penn., the former born in Red Stone, Va., with his father, William and three brothers, settled in this township in 1797, and were among the earliest settlers. The father took up 300 acres, formed a home in the wilderness and passed his life. Isaac's and his wife's history may be found in this work. Our subject, the eldest of their sons now living, was married in this county in 1843, to Margaret Alexander, a native of Londonderry, Ireland. Four children of the seven born to this union are living, viz.: Delmort, married to F. Davenport; Harley, married to Florence Bromley; Clarence, and Maggie, wife of W. W. Salisbury. Mrs. Silverthorn died March, 1861. He settled on his present farm in 1851, consisting of eighty acres of land, and has since made it his home. Mr. Silverthorn married, for his second wife, Martha Cole, a native of this county.

J. MADISON SILVERTHORN, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born December 10, 1831, in this township, and is a son of Isaac and Margaret (Miller) Silverthorn. The latter was a native of Stanton, Penn., the former born in Red Stone, Va. Came to Girard Township with his father, William, and three brothers, in 1797, and were among the earliest pioneers. William took 300 acres of land, on which he founded his home and built a grist mill, which he ran for years, he and his wife dying here. Isaac was a Captain in the war of 1812; he, too, erected a grist mill on the site of his father's mill; they were the first millers in Erie County. He married, July 22, 1813, and was the parent of eleven children, six living, viz.: Nancy, wife of James Silsby; John W.; Elizabeth, wife of I. N. Miller; Lucinda, wife of J. B. Wadsworth; J. Madison; and Isaac N., resident of Cleveland, Ohio. Isaac died September, 1846, in his fifty-ninth year, and his widow survived until 1874. Our subject was united in marriage in this township October 6, 1858, with Mary A., daughter of William R. Miller, and a native of Erie County. Two children, both living, blessed this union—Carl R. and Frank M. In 1856, Mr. Silverthorn settled on present farm, consisting of ninety-three acres, most of which he has cleared, and has erected a dwelling, and is improving the estate. He has served as School Director three terms, eight years, and in 1882 served as Township Assessor. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This family are of English descent; they number among Erie County's oldest pioneers, whose record may be found in the general history of this township.

J. T. SIMMONS, saddler, established business in Girard in 1850, succeeded George A. Hicks. He is a native of Mount Morris, N. Y., born in 1827, and is a son of George and Polly (Tobias) Simmons, of Cayuga County, N. Y., who with their family came West in 1829, settling in Springfield Township, where the former took up a claim of fifty acres, and where they both died. They reared a family of four children, two now surviving—our subject and a sister, Eunice, residing on the homestead. Mr. Simmons was united in marriage, in 1852, at Conneaut, Ohio, with Celestia M. Carter, a native of same. Mr. Simmons learned his trade at Conneaut, Ohio, subsequently working at it in various parts of the country until he came to Girard, where he has established a good sound business. He had a family of two children, one surviving—Emma J., wife of E. H. Hiler, of Conneaut, Ohio. Mr. Simmons has filled several offices of trust in the borough, and is now serving his second term as a member of the School Board. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees in the Methodist Episcopal Church. As a business man, he is favorably known; as a citizen, esteemed.

SAMUEL STARK, farmer, P. O. Miles' Grove, was born in McKean Township in 1830, and is a son of George and Elizabeth (Kenago) Stark, both natives of Lancaster, Penn., who settled in McKean Township in 1829, where Mr. Stark purchased eighty acres of land, which he cleared. In 1841, they moved to the farm now occupied by their son, which was then 100 acres, and is now 140. They reared two children, both now living—Jones, a resident of Erie, and Samuel. They died on the homestead. Samuel was united in marriage, in this county, in 1858, with Martha Bixler, a native of the same place, daughter of Jacob Bixler, and descended from a pioneer family. Four children, all living, blessed this union, viz.: Frank; Osborne P., married to Mamie Hall, in this township, and Lula and Rolla.

CHARLES STOW, Girard, the eldest son of Hon. Horatio J. Stow, a Judge and lawyer of distinguished ability and integrity, was born at Buffalo, N. Y., July 8, 1838. He was admitted to the bar in 1859, but having a preference for journalism, became city editor of the Buffalo Morning Express in 1861. His eye-sight failing, he was compelled to retire in 1865, and in 1867 came to Girard. In 1868, he assumed the editorial management of the Girard Cosmopolite, and remained on that paper until the spring of 1872. During that period the Cosmopolite reached a circulation of over 5,000, and wielded a powerful influence; its sturdy independence and unswerving loyalty to the people gaining for it general confidence and respect. Mr. Stow signalized his advent into the field of Pennsylvania journalism by unearthing a heavy defalcation in the County Treasurer's office, and gross mismanagement of public affairs by the officials comprising the "court house ring," and from that time the Cosmopolite became a terror to all dishonest office-holders. Although Mr. Stow has always declined to be a candidate for office, he has been prominently identified with the Democratic party, both as a writer and a speaker. He is now one of the leading representatives of the great Barnum and London Show.

J. F. STRICKLAND, miller. P. O. Miles Grove, is a native of Genesee County, N. Y., born in 1846, and is a son of William and Betsy (Wadsworth) Strickland. The latter coming from an extensive family of New York State, is connected with Gen. Wadsworth, an officer in the late rebellion. Mr. and Mrs. Strickland settled in Springfield Township in 1849, where they passed the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of five children, all now living. William Strickland was a native of Yorkshire, England; he had three children by his first wife, Sarah Penington, of Yorkshire, England. Our subject was married in North East Township, in 1871, to Sara, a daughter of Northrop Nason, a settler of Ripley Township, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. J. F. Strickland resided on the homestead farm until 1873, when he occupied his present residence, and in 1874, erected a grist mill, 30x40, with wing attached, 16x31, on Elk Creek; it runs two buhrs, and has a capacity of 150 to 200 bushels per day. He also has a saw mill adjoining same. He has been conducting a successful business.

THOMAS H. STURGEON, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in Erie County, N. Y., in 1809, son of Andrew and Jane (Finney) Sturgeon. They came to this county in 1830 and settled in this township, where they both died. They were the parents of seven children, Thomas H. only surviving. He bought his present farm of fifty-two acres soon after his parents settled here. He married, in this county, in 1841, Elizabeth, daughter of David Phillip, a native of this county. Her decease occurred March 26, 1881. She left two children—Seth, married to Ida Godfrey, a native of this county, and daughter of Orange Godfrey, a pioneer, and has two children—Clara M. and Mary B.—residing on the homestead; and Laverna, wife of Clayton Hervick, by whom she has two children—Lotta L. and Frank. They are all descended from old, esteemed pioneers, and are well established families.

J. N. TAYLOR, Girard. The Taylor family are of New England stock, descending from a branch of the Leelands, a representative family of New England. Our subject was born in Erie County, Penn., October 21, 1838, and is a son of Isaac R. Taylor, born in Northampton, Mass., who was the only son of Isaac, who came to this county in 1818, settling on 200 acres of land in Washington Township, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was an officer in the war of 1812, and was an honored pioneer. Isaac R. married Eleanor Reader, whose parents, natives of Susquehanna County, Penn., were of a representative family of Pennsylvania. This union produced nine children, four living—Isaac N., George, Joseph and Effie A., wife of F. Wade. Isaac R. Taylor is a resident of Edinboro, and served several terms as Justice of the Peace. He has always engaged in farming, milling, and taken an active interest in educational matters. Our subject remained on the farm until eighteen years of age, acquiring a primary education at Edinboro and Waterford Academy, and graduated from Allegheny College in 1860, and the same year entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he was at the breaking-out of the war. In 1862, he enlisted as Hospital Steward, but was subsequently promoted to Assistant Surgeon of the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and assigned to the Second Corps of the Army of the Potomac. He served until the close of the war, when he completed his studies at the University of Pennsylvania. He came to Girard in 1866, and has built up a large practice. He was married in Crawford County, Penn., in 1866, to N. M. Thickstun, of same county. This marriage has been blessed with four children, all now living—Millie V., George T., Carl J. and Robins N.

HENRY TELLER, retired, Girard, was born in Albany, N. Y., January 1, 1802, and is the only survivor of the thirteen children born to Henry and Catherine (McDaniel) Teller, natives of New York City and Baltimore respectively. Mr. Teller, Sr., and our subject came through the wilderness of Ohio in 1816 on horseback, but returned to Livingston County, N. Y., where the former purchased land and passed his life. Henry, Jr., returned to this county in 1825, taking up land, and followed farming until the spring of 1828, when he retired to the comforts of his commodious home in Girard. He married, in 1826, Rosalind, daughter of Andrew Porter, of this county. She died in 1843, the mother of seven children—Isaac, Jasper, Louisa, Samuel, Henry, John and Mary. John enlisted in 1861 in the Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at Savage Station in the seven days' fight before Richmond. Mr. Teller's second marriage was with Jane Cross, of Springfield Township, Erie County, who, dying, left a daughter, Maggie.

He was again united in matrimony, this time to Delia Patterson, of Aurora, N. Y. Mr. Teller has been an adherent of the Republican party since its organization, and during the sessions of 1859-60 represented this district in the Legislature, being elected, though strongly contested, by a majority of 3,700 votes. He belongs to no religious association, but has always given liberally to all denominations.

J. C. THOMPSON, carpenter and joiner, P. O. Girard, is a son of Jesse and Uranah (Aldrich) Thompson, and was born in Swansea, Cheshire Co., N. H., in 1821. His parents, now deceased, were born—his father in Vermont, and his mother in New Hampshire. They were the parents of twelve children, eight now surviving, viz.: Polly, a widow, resides at Spring Prairie, Wis.; Rhoda, at Keene, N. H.; Rachel, wife of Mr. Smith, of Saxons River, Vt.; our subject; Angeline, wife of M. B. Babbitt; David, of Spring Prairie, Wis.; Emily, of New York City; and Lysander, of Boston, Mass. Mr. Thompson has followed his trade the most of his time since coming to Erie County in 1856, locating in Girard until he purchased his present residence (which he has rebuilt and beautified), on the old road between the borough and Miles' Grove. Since 1880, he has been foreman of the handle room in the wrench factory. Mr. Thompson married, in 1844, at Worcester, Mass., Caroline Thompson, a native of Keene, N. H. Seven children, five living, have blessed this union—Mary A. (wife of M. S. Cutler), Henry A. (married to Emma Fletcher), Ella, Addis J. and Ada C. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Equitable Aid Union; he is a highly esteemed citizen.

A. J. THOMPSON, firm of Luce & Thompson, merchants, Girard, was born in Keene, N. H., in 1863, and is a son of J. C. Thompson. He was brought up in this county, and engaged as a salesman with Trask & Prescott, of Erie; E. M. McGillin & Co., at Cleveland, with whom he continued until he formed the present copartnership, succeeding C. F. Rockwell, dry goods, of which they carry a large stock, also carpets, boots, shoes, etc. They control the bulk of trade in Girard and the surrounding country. Mr. Thompson is an enterprising, active business man. He married in Corry, Penn., August, 1881, Mary E. Gardner, a native of that place. One child has blessed this union—Nellie B. Mr. Thompson is a member of the City Council, and of the Equitable Aid Union.

THOMAS THORNTON, proprietor of woolen mills, Girard, was born in Leeds, Yorkshire, England, in 1841, and is a son of Jowett and Elizabeth Thornton, who crossed the ocean to Mexico in 1848, where the former started and ran the first woolen mill until 1854, when they moved to Crawford County for three years, thence coming to this township, where Mr. Thornton bought a mill of Cass & Whitfield, who had purchased it of T. Thornton. It was originally built by the Boughton Brothers. He carried on this mill until his death, and was very successful. Our subject, his eldest son, was married in Crawford County, Penn., August, 1858, to Helen White, a native of Harbor Creek Township, this county. Four children have been born to them—George H., Ida A., Elmer J. and Lizzie B. He is the proprietor of the Girard Woolen Mills, which consume 2,000 pounds of wool per month, and run ten months in the year. Its principal product is yarn. His father had a family of four children, three of whom are living—Thomas, Benjamin F. (of Pennsylvania) and Mary A. (wife of C. C. Sherman). Mr. Thornton has occupied various township offices, among which Tax Collector, School Director and Auditor. He is an old, well-established business man, much esteemed; a member of the A. O. U. W., K. of H., and the Equitable Aid Union.

H. A. TRAUB, merchant, Girard, was born in this township in 1830, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Royer) Traub, natives of Bucks and Montgomery Counties, Penn., respectively. They first located in Waterford, remaining two years; then settled in Girard Township, where Samuel erected a saw mill, and engaged in lumbering and farming for years. They reared a family of eight children, seven now living—Lydia, Reuben R., William, Henry A., Jessie H., Samuel R. and Margaret. Our subject spent his early days working on the farm and in the mill. He went to Philadelphia in 1848, where he was employed as a salesman for three years; subsequently, for eleven and a half years, he was in the lumber business at New Orleans. In 1852, he went to California, where he met with fair success prospecting. In 1858, he went to Pike's Peak, Colo., but returned the following year. Mr. Traub was united in marriage, in 1860, in this county, with Catharine Buckbee, a native of Erie County. The only child to this union, Minnie, died when five years old. Subsequent to his marriage, he purchased a farm in this county, and engaged in lumbering in Warren County, Penn. After a few years his health failed, and he opened his present place of business, where he has a complete stock of books, jewelry, notions, etc. Mr. Traub is one of the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has filled many township offices of trust, serving as a member of the Legislature from this district, to which he was elected in November, 1882, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents.

WILLIAM TYLER, merchant, Lockport, was born in Troy, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., in 1815, and is a son of Jerry and Mary (Vannata) Tyler, who removed to this county in 1842, thence to Valparaiso, Ind., where they both died. Our subject opened a small store in this borough in 1842. He was originally a Yankee-notion peddler, and sold the famous horse-whips from Westfield, Mass. He has since engaged in mercantile trade at Lockport, where he was appointed Postmaster, under President Buchanan, and has since acceptably filled this office. Mr. Tyler was united in marriage at Hoosick Corners, N. Y., with Delia Breese, a native of that place, who died in 1875, leaving one son, Wilbur A., who still survives, and is married to Julia Jewell, by whom he has three children—Merrill, Lizzie and Roy. Mr. Tyler was remarried, this time to Eliza Mallory, daughter of Maj. A. Mallory, of Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn. The family are highly esteemed and well connected.

F. J. WAGNER, livery, Girard, was born in 1860 in Germany, and is a son of Joseph and Emma F. (Shaynberger) Wagner, who, with their family, emigrated to America in 1853, and settled in Erie. Joseph Wagner at one time had a large estate in Germany, which he lost previous to coming here. Though a miller by trade, he worked at coopering in Erie until he purchased a farm in Harbor Creek Township, where he is now living. Of their family of six children, two are living—F. J. (our subject) and Gustav. F. J. Wagner succeeded W. W. Ellison in the livery business at North East in December, 1882, disposing of this stock in March, 1883, and retiring to his home, where he remained until the purchase of the present livery at Girard, succeeding G. W. Evans. This is the only livery in Girard, and is well furnished with the best appointments in horses, buggies and carriages. He is doing a profitable business, and is an active, enterprising young man, worthy of patronage. Mr. Wagner was united in marriage in this county, July 10, 1883, with Mary A., daughter of Burgett Strobb, a native of Erie County.

JAMES WEBSTER (deceased) was born in Hebron, N. Y., in 1803. His parents were James and Rebecca (Henderson) Webster, and his grandfather was Alexander Webster, of Scottish birth, who migrated to the colonies in 1772, settling on a large tract of land in Hebron, N. Y. He was a Colonel in the Revolutionary war, during which his family fled to Albany to escape the Indians. At the close of the struggle, he returned home, where he died in 1810. The subject of this sketch was reared on a farm, securing a common school education. In May, 1827, he came to Girard and opened the first mercantile house, under the firm name of McConnell and Webster, carrying on an extensive business for twenty-five years, having branches in Crawford County and in Whitewater, Wis. They also opened in 1863 and successfully carried on the First National Bank. In 1882, Mr. Webster retired from active business. His copartner died October, 1871. Mr. Webster was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Girard fifty-two years, and was one of its founders. He was married in Girard in 1832, to Mary A. Leffingwell, a native of Berkshire, Mass. Four children blessed this union—Charlotte M., wife of R. S. Battles; Henry M., who died March 13, 1877; James A., married to Jane Allen, and Charles F., married to Nellie E. Jones. Mr. Webster died April 24, 1884.

ROBERTSON WILLCOX, manufacturer, Girard, was born at New London, Conn., in 1811, and is a son of Robert and Debora (Brown) Willcox, his father dying before his birth, leaving his widow and seven children, of whom are still living Nathaniel and Robert. The widow married Benjamin Willcox, by whom she had the following children, viz.: Benjamin, Sarah (wife of John Rockwell), and Susan. Robertson, when eighteen years of age, went to Chautauqua and worked at coopering. He had but a good common school education, and his ambition. In 1833 or 1834, he made his way to Girard, worked at his trade, and did a large business. For three years during the war, he ran the Girard Mills, rebuilt the saw mills adjoining same, and subsequently sold out. He and a brother-in-law, T. M. Godfrey, purchased a spring factory at Hammond, Ind., and are doing an extensive business. Included in this purchase was a large tract of land, which they are selling in lots very advantageously. They have erected a first-class opera house on the corner of Halsted and Jackson streets, Chicago, where their salesrooms will be located. The lot cost them $32,000. The Willcox House of Erie, Penn., a leading hotel, is another of his enterprises. He has largely invested in real estate in Erie and Chicago. Mr. Willcox was married in Erie County, Penn., in 1844, to Sophronia Godfrey, a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y. Though they have no children of their own, they have had living with them a number of girls, now married. He contributed largely toward the erection of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Girard, in which he is a trustee.

GEORGE WRIGHT, physician, Lockport, was born in Otsego County, N. Y., in 1817, son of Johnson and Mary (Bliss) Wright, natives of Dutchess County, N. Y., and Rhode Island respectively. They reared eight children to maturity, following living—Charles; George; Henry B., a physician in San Francisco; Maryette; Clark A., resident physician of Howard Lake, Minn.; and James S.; John J. was a practicing physician, and introduced homœopathy in Little Rock, Ark., where he died. Our subject, a tanner and currier by trade, came to Erie County in 1837, and erected a tannery at Gudgeonville, on Elk Creek, which he carried on some years. He subsequently abandoned his trade, and began the study of medicine, and graduated from the Homœopathic Hospital College of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1871. He practiced his profession in Girard until his removal to Lockport in 1876. He has been very successful, and has a large practice. The Doctor was married in Chenango County, N. Y., in 1837, to Esther Trask, a native of Otsego County, N. Y. Ten children have blessed this union, eight surviving, viz., Mary A., Eunice M., Lafayette J., Emma C., Henry F., Louisa M., Lyda and Willis E.

CHRISTIAN ZIESENHEIM, farmer, P. O. Girard, was born in the principality of Waldeck, Prussia, October 22, 1834, and is a son of Christian and Christina Ziesenheim, both deceased. He came to the United States November 22, 1854, locating in Fairview Township, coming the following year to Girard Township. He married in 1858 the widow of Mathew Riley, a native of Ireland. Two children born to this union are Mary, educated at St. Benedict's Academy, Erie, Penn., and Fred, attending Bichtel College, Akron, Ohio. Mr. Ziesenheim purchased at different times portions of his farm, now consisting of 200 acres, thirty in Fairview Township, which, lying on the Lake shore road, is one of the most productive and well cultivated farms in the township. Mr. Ziesenheim has filled the office of Road Commissioner six years, was Clerk for the same four years, and is now one of the Township Auditors. Though beginning life with nothing, he has accumulated a fine estate, and having only the advantages of a common school education, he is a good penman in both the German and English languages.

GREENE TOWNSHIP.

SIMON APPELMANN (deceased) was born July 22, 1813, in Magenheim, Germany, son of George and Sophia Appelmänn. Our subject emigrated to America when a young man, and for several years was assistant engineer on three steamboats of the great lakes. March 24, 1845, Mr. Appelmänn was united in marriage with Elizabeth Weber, born in Germany, May 28, 1824, daughter of Anna M. and George Weber. She came with her parents, to Erie County, Penn., when ten years of age. Five children have been born to this union—Helen, Eliza, Caroline, Samuel J. and George. Mr. Appelmänn, with his family, settled in the northern part of Greene Township in the autumn of 1853, on a farm of sixty-three acres, on which his widow, a conscientious, industrious lady, still resides. Mr. Appelmänn was very hospitable, always ready to extend a helping hand to the needy, donating liberally to all enterprises, beneficial to society, and when he departed this life, by an accident, January 9, 1878, his family lost an indulgent father and husband, and Greene Township a worthy citizen.

GARRY COLUMBUS BARNEY, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born May 8, 1820, in Chittenden County, Vt., son of Erastus and Polly, (Spencer) Barney, of the same county. They moved to St. Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1822, where Mrs. Barney died in 1832. Mr. Barney afterward married Keziah Closson, who died in the same county. In 1866, he came to this county with his son, where he died November 25, 1874, in his ninety-second year. His children were—Mrs. Marietta Morse (deceased); William (deceased); Jacob and Henry, still in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.; Lorenzo, in Wisconsin; Mrs. Persis M. Gearing, of Iowa; G. Columbus, Mrs. Betsy Hodge, of Traverse City, Mich.; Mrs. Amilla Meyers (deceased) and George, in Nebraska. Our subject was reared principally in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., spending from 1837 to 1838 in Upper Canada. He came to this county in 1842. On October 17, 1848, he was married to Nancy M. Allen, born August 29, 1832, daughter of Henry and Sallie (Barney) Allen. The latter died February 3, 1884. Mr. Barney followed lumbering in Warren County for about three and a half years, and spent a year in the oil regions. To Mr. and Mrs. Barney were born five children, three living, viz., Herbert M., in Karns City, Butler Co., Penn.; Frank W. and Mrs. Emma Hinton, of Forest County, Penn. Our subject is a life-long Democrat, and has held nearly all the township offices, including that of Justice of the Peace. He is a useful, influential citizen.

NATHAN CORTEZ BARNEY, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born May 22, 1830, in St. Lawrence County, N. Y. His father, John Barney, a native of Chittenden County, Vt., was a son of Jonathan Barney, a soldier in the war of 1812. His great-grandfather, Joseph Barney, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war. He was a man of large stature and powerful strength, and at one time of considerable wealth, which he lost by the depreciation in value of the continental money. The family was originally of Scotch-Irish descent. John Barney married Clarissa Manly, and moved to this county in 1832. They bought their farm in Greene Township of Mr. Hewitt, which they cleared. Their children are—Mrs. Jane Chapin, Franklin M., in this township; Simeon, who died of the yellow fever at Grand Gulf, Miss., September 23, 1855, aged thirty; and Nathan C. Mrs. Barney departed this life June 29, 1869, aged eighty years. Mr. Barney March 3, 1876, aged eighty-two. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject was married June 8, 1851, to Mary Ann, daughter of William and Hannah (Fretwell) Newsham, of this township. They settled on a part of the Barney homestead, where they still reside. They were the parents of six children, viz., Mrs. Clara Orton, Jean M., Mrs. Alda A. Raymond, Ida M. (deceased), Ada Ann and Mary D. Mr. Barney enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment, September, 1863, but was rejected on account of physical disability, and was afterward accepted in the One Hundred and Second Regiment, going out April, and returning June 29, 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Barney are friends of the cause of education, and gave their children good advantages; their daughter, Ada, has been teaching five terms. Mr. Barney is a Republican in politics.

AMOS CHURCH, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born June 3, 1812, in Connecticut; son of John and Lucy Church. His paternal ancestors came from England, probably, as early as the colonial times. Mr. Church was reared on a farm, with opportunities for receiving but a rudimentary education. He was united in marriage November 29, 1837, with Sarah E., daughter of Bethuel and Martha Roberts, natives of New England. Nine children were born to this union, viz., Samuel J., Seth, Amos R., Lillie, Timothy; the deceased are, Homer, Henry, Martha and Charles H., who enlisted in the war of the rebellion, in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He participated in many hard-fought battles, a few of which were Antietam, Gettysburg, Wilderness and at Petersburg, where he was captured by the Confederates, and confined in the Andersonville Prison. He there eked out a miserable existence, owing to neglect and starvation, until death came to his relief. In the autumn of 1839, Mr. Church, with his family, came to Erie County, settling in Greene Township (where he now resides), in the spring of 1840. He is the owner of ninety-three acres of land, acquired by industry and self-denial. Mr. Church is a liberal contributor to all enterprises beneficial to the public. He is a respected member of society.

LEWIS DAWLEY, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., December 15, 1838, son of Alonzo and Emily Dawley, both natives of the Empire State, latter deceased. Our subject received a fair English education, and from his youth has engaged in agricultural pursuits. On December 17, 1863, Mr. Dawley was united in marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth Parry, of Oneida County, N. Y. Mr. Dawley is owner of eighty-five acres of land in a good state of cultivation. He and his estimable wife are highly esteemed by the community. In politics, he is a Republican.

EZRA DROWN, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in Erie County, Penn., March 31, 1831, son of Cyril and Catherine Drown, natives of New England and Lebanon, Penn., respectively, and a brother of Hosea Drown. Ezra, like his brother, was reared to man's estate on a farm. On February 21, 1856, Mr. Drown was united in marriage, with Laura L., daughter of Eli and Mary Wood, of Mill Creek Township. Of their children, only Hattie survived. Mrs. Drown died November 14, 1873. Mr. Drown subsequently married Amanda, daughter of Jacob and Sophia Charles, and widow of James Rooney of Greene Township. Mr. Drown has a farm of forty-eight acres in the northwestern part of Greene Township. He has served as Road Commissioner, and as Treasurer of Greene Township. He is an esteemed member of society.

HOSEA DROWN, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born July 13, 1833, in Erie County, Penn., son of Cyril Drown, who came to Greene Township in 1818. Shortly after his arrival he married Catherine Zimmerman, by whom he had six children who grew to maturity, viz., Frederick, Almira, Anstrus, Catherine, Ezra and Hosea. Cyril Drown endured the hardships of a pioneer's life; was prominently connected with Greene Township, serving with nearly every official position in his day. He departed this life in 1869, after a life of usefulness, and was survived by his consort only a few years. Hosea, our subject, received a fair English education, and taught school four terms. On September 11, 1873, he was united in marriage with Melvina M. Hilborn, born in Greene Township, March 31, 1848, daughter of Samuel (deceased) and Roxy A. Hilborn. Three children have blessed this union—Myron C., Samuel H. and Arthur L. Mr. Drown served as Auditor of Greene Township, and at present officiates as Town Clerk. He has also been for three years Justice of the Peace. Mr. Drown is the owner of 130 acres of land. He is recognized as one of Greene Township's prominent citizens.

MRS. SARAH FILLEY, East Greene, was born December 18, 1822, in Harbor Creek Township, this county, a daughter of Ebenezer and Mary (Henton) Evans, natives of Wales, who came to America, and to Erie County about 1818. Mr. Evans died in 1843, and his widow afterward married Thomas Jones. She died May 20, 1882. Of their children—John and Mrs. Sarah Filley live in this township; Thomas and Ebenezer reside in Cleveland, Ohio. Our subject married, February 3, 1839, Nathan W. Filley. He was born in 1810, in Oneida County, N. Y., a son of Hezekiah and Esther Filley. After their marriage they lived in Chautauqua County, N. Y., about three years; thence went to Erie County. Mr. Filley's trade, that of a stone cutter, compelled him to change his location frequently. After living at various places in Ohio and this county, they settled in 1853, permanently in this township, buying a farm of 100 acres. The children born to this union are Mrs. Eliza Bennett, Sarah, Matthew, Frances, Mary, Mrs. Anna Banuister, Emma, Nathan and Charles. Mr. Filley departed this life, February 2, 1864. He was a kind husband and father, and a useful and influential citizen. His large intelligent family now occupy the old homestead.

WILLIAM HARTMAN, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born in Hanover, Germany, November 15, 1818, son of Ernest and Catharine Hartman. He had no opportunity to acquire other than a rudimentary German education, and from his youth up has engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1846, Mr. Hartman was united in marriage with Caroline Rehn, who bore him three children, only one surviving—Frederick W., who was born May 8, 1855, in Erie County, Penn., and is an industrious, steady young man. Our subject, with family, in 1854, emigrated to America, landing in New York; thence coming to Erie, where he remained for about two years, when he located in Greene Township. Mr. Hartman is industrious and enterprising, and owns eighty-three acres of land located in the northern part of Greene Township, which he is working to the best advantage. He is a member of the German Reformed Church.

SAMUEL HILBORN (deceased) was born October 5, 1802, in Bucks County, Penn. When a young man he moved to New York State, subsequently going to Ohio. In 1835, Mr. Hilborn came to Erie County, Penn., settling in the northern part of Greene Township. He was united in marriage, October, 1837, with Roxy A., daughter of Martin and Mary Hayes, natives of New England. Ten children were born to this union, three surviving—Mary A., Melvina M. and William M. Harley J., the oldest son, died in Washington Hospital January 2, 1862, of wounds received in the battle of Fredericksburg. Mr. Hilborn was a respected member of the Presbyterian Church. He departed this life February 25, 1877.

WILLIAM M. HILBORN, P. O. Belle Valley, a son of Samuel and Roxy A. (Hayes) Hilborn, was born in Erie County, Penn., July 29, 1855. He received a fair English education, and taught two terms. On February 26, 1880, he was united in marriage, with Rose E., daughter of Robert S. and Martha Davison, of Mill Creek Township. Two children have blessed this union, viz.: Flora M., born February 10, 1881, and Howard D., born October 21, 1882. Mr. Hilborn owns 100 acres of land. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

FRED HIRT, P. O. East Greene, was born July 25, 1843, in Greene Township, Erie County, Penn., son of F. J. Hirt, a native of the same township. He was reared here on his father's farm, and received his education in the home schools. He learned the carpenter's trade, with his brother, Frank. Our subject was united in marriage December 13, 1868, with Adeline Hintz, a native of Mill Creek Township, this county. They settled where they now live, and by their own exertions have built up a comfortable home. Six children blessed this union, viz.: Fred J., William N., Frances Matilda, Rosa H., Bertha F. and Mary Ida. Mr. Hirt is a Democrat in politics. He was elected Road Commissioner of Greene Township in February, 1881, and is discharging his duties satisfactorily. Mr. and Mrs. Hirt are warm friends of the cause of education, and give their children good advantages. They are both members of the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Hirt is an enterprising business man, and a citizen of much influence in the community.

FREDERICK KUHLMER, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born February, 1843, in Erie County, Penn., a son of Peter Kuhl, who was born in 1801, in the eastern part of Pennsylvania. He came to Erie County in 1825, and was married in 1829, to Susannah Fry, of Lancaster County, Penn. Ten children were born to this union, viz.: Sarah, Barbary, Eliza, Adam, Peter, Hiram, Susannah, Mary A., Frederick and Samuel. The condition of the property left to his heirs indicates his perseverance and thrift. He reached the ripe age of seventy-six years, seven months and six days, departing this life July 22, 1878. He was a man of good standing in the German Lutheran Church. Samuel Kuhl, brother of our subject, was born November, 1831, in Erie County, Penn. He was married in May, 1857, to Mary, daughter of David and Anna Ripley, of Greene Township. He is engaged on his farm, adjoining his brother. He has served as Treasurer of this township. Frederick Kuhl, early in life, devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, in which he has been very successful. He was united in marriage, February, 1875, with Annie Detrick, by whom he has one child—Earl P., born December 10, 1875. Mr. Kuhl is the owner of a pleasant farm of seventy-five acres, and is a respected member of society.

NATHAN MORITZ, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born January 28, 1848, in New York State. Nathan, when about six months' old, was brought to Erie County by his parents, Joseph and Barbary Moritz, natives of Germany, who settled in Greene Township. Of their family of ten children, seven survive—John, Michael, Martin, George, Mary, Dorethea and Nathan. Mr. Moritz died in March, 1880; his widow in November of the following year. Our subject's boyhood days were passed on a farm, while he acquired his education in the district schools. On June 3, 1871, he was united in marriage with Elizabeth Hirt, born in Greene Township August 25, 1845, a daughter of Francis J. and Mary Hirt, the former born December 19, 1816, in Alsace, Germany, a son of Michael and Brigitta Hirt. His mother dying when he was nine years old, his father emigrated to America, landing in New York, subsequently coming to Erie County. He settled in Greene Township, on the farm now occupied by our subject. To Mr. and Mrs. Hirt were born five children, all but one living—Frank, Mary, Frederick and Elizabeth. He has served as Judge of Elections, and at present, with his wife, is living with Mr. and Mrs. Moritz. To our subject and wife were born Joseph M., John P. and Frank. Mr. Moritz is the owner of ninety-one acres of good land. He is now serving as School Director, and with his wife is a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

LYMAN MORSE, retired farmer, P. O. West Greene, was born March 17, 1802, near Troy, N. Y. When he was two years old, his parents, Joseph and Zelpha (Pratt) Morse, natives of New Hampshire and Brattleboro, Vt. respectively, moved to Chittenden County, Vt. (where our subject was principally reared), and there they both died. Lyman Morse moved to St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and was there united in marriage, October, 1824, with Susan M. Barney, by whom he had two children—Lyman (dying in infancy) and Henry B. Mr. and Mrs. Morse came to Greene Township, Erie County, in 1832, settling on a farm in the woods, which they cleared, where the latter died March 12, 1879, and where the former now resides, respected by all who know him. Politically, he is a Democrat.

HENRY B. MORSE, farmer, P. O. West Greene, was born June 25, 1826, in St. Lawrence County, N. Y. He was reared principally on his father's farm in this township, attending the district schools and the academy at Waterford. He married, August 1, 1853, Demaries A., daughter of William and Zebiah Rugg. She was born July 31, 1836, in Oswego County, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Morse spent from 1864 to 1869 in the oil regions of Venango County, thence moved to Brodhead, Wis.; returning to this county in 1873, they have since resided on a farm in this township. Five children were born to this union—Mrs. Florence I. Miller, of Erie; Mrs. Addie E. Yapple; Carrie L., Nettie and Harry L. Mr. and Mrs. Morse have given their children good educational advantages, and they have each taught in turn in this and surrounding townships. They are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Morse is a useful, influential citizen. He is a Republican in politics.

ELIJAH O. PINNEY, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in Litchfield County, Conn., March 2, 1813; son of Elijah and Mahala Pinney, of English descent. Of the five children born to this union, Elijah, only, survives. Our subject, when twenty-two years of age, with his parents and brother, Milo, came to Erie County, locating at Wesleyville, Harbor Creek Township, for about six years. He was united in marriage, January 10, 1837, with Mary E. Pendleton, born July 16, 1815, in New England, a daughter of Ethan and Esther Pendleton, also of English descent. To them were born ten children—Ethan O., Pinette, Sarah A., Charles O., Mary E., Ralza P., Ward H., Mary U., Leroy A. and Dotha I. The last three are deceased. After leaving Wesleyville, Mr. Pinney, with family, moved to Ohio, locating for a short period in Portage and Trumbull Counties. In the spring of 1843, he returned to Erie County, Penn., and settled in Greene Township, where he has a fine farm of over 200 acres, and a commodious residence, beautifully situated, affording a picturesque view of the lake and surrounding country. Much of Mr. Pinney's success is due to his industry and determination to succeed. He has served his township as Justice of the Peace, Assessor and Treasurer (two years). He has also acted as a Director of Erie Academy.

WARREN F. ROOT, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in what is now known as Summit Township, Erie Co., Penn., on October 7, 1839, and is a son of Harry O. and Eliza Root, the former a native of Connecticut; the latter (now deceased) was born in Erie County, Penn. Mr. Root, from his youth up, has lived on a farm. He received a fair English education. Our subject, January 5, 1869, was united in marriage with Aurora O., daughter of William and Mary Stuyvesant, natives of New York State. This union has been blessed with two children, viz., George B. and Verna E. Mr. Root takes his stand with the Republican party of our Government. He has served as Collector of Greene Township. Our subject is of a modest, unassuming nature, and is meeting with marked success.

ISAAC G. THORNTON, farmer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, was born November 8, 1835, in Richmond, Mass. His parents, Isaac M. and Rachel Thornton, moved to Ashtabula County, Ohio, in 1839, where the latter still resides. There our subject was reared on his father's farm, with but limited educational advantages on account of his being the eldest son of an invalid father. The family moved to Venango Township, Erie County, in 1854, where Mr. Thornton died October 19, 1855. Our subject was married, January 1, 1855, to Minerva Brace, born May 9, 1838, in Greene Township, a daughter of Stephen J. and Evaline (Gardner) Brace, who came here from Oswego County, N. Y., in 1834. Isaac G. Thornton enlisted August, 1862, in Company C, Sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and served in the Army of the Potomac through the Virginia campaign. He was a brave soldier, and received an honorable discharge in June, 1865. His four brothers also saw service, viz.: Charles, who died at Helena, Ark., in 1863; Daniel, Hiram and Buel, now living—Hiram in Michigan, Buel in Pennsylvania. Mr. Thornton has since devoted himself to the management of his farm and the care of his family. By industry he has acquired a farm of 100 acres of well-improved land. His children are Loretta, Henry, Jerome I., Mrs. Hattie Evans, Charles, Sarah, Ida, Alice and Leroy. Mr. and Mrs. Thornton, with their oldest children, are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he is a Steward. Mr. Thornton is a Republican in politics; has held the office of School Director in Greene Township. He is a member of the G. A. R., of the K. of H., and of the Patrons of Husbandry.

JOSHUA URCH, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born February 20, 1832, in Wilmington, Del. His father, John Urch, a native of England, married Mary Hyatt. They came to Venango Township, Erie County, in 1835. There they reared their children, five now living—Joshua, William H., George, Lewis and Mrs. Sarah McDonnell. Mr. John Urch died February 23, 1870; his widow is still living. Our subject married, June 7, 1850, Jnae, daughter of Richard and Catherine (Jones) Williams; the former was a native of Wales. They came to this county in 1830. Mr. Williams was scalded to death in the explosion of the steamer Louisiana, on Lake Erie, in 1849. Mrs. Williams died in 1853. Their children are Mrs. Jane Urch; Mrs. Ann Urch, of Chautauqua County, N. Y., Mrs. Mary Carr and John. Mr. and Mrs. Urch have a farm of seventy-five acres of well-improved land, acquired by industry and good management. Their children are Richard, Charles H., Effort (in Nebraska), Andrew C. (of Nebraska), William L., Mary J., Marion and Frank. Mr. and Mrs. Urch are giving their children good educational advantages. They have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church thirty years. Our subject is a staunch Republican, and is one of the useful and influential citizens of Greene Township.

WILLIAM H. URCH, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born March 25, 1834, in Wilmington, Del. His father, John Urch, settled in Venango Township, this county, just north of Lake Pleasant, in 1835. Here our subject was brought up, attending the schools of the home district. He was united in marriage, January 4, 1859, with Sarah Ripley, a native of Summit Township, born March 5, 1840, daughter of David Ripley. Mr. and Mrs. Urch settled in the woods, from which they developed a farm of sixty-nine and a half acres of well-improved land. The children born to this union are: Mrs. Adella M. Coburn, of Union City, Penn., and Sarah. They have lost by death Levi H., Melvin W. and Anna M. Mr. Urch served three months as a soldier in the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Regiment. He and his wife have been members of the United Brethren Church for twenty-eight years. He is Trustee in the Lake Pleasant Church. Mr. Urch is a man of strict integrity, possessing the respect and confidence of the community. In politics is a Republican.

WILLIAM B. WEED, retired farmer, P. O. West Greene, was born in Walton, N. Y., May 23, 1803; son of James and Docy (Hoyt) Weed. The latter's father was Colonel of a Connecticut regiment in the Revolutionary war. James Weed, above mentioned, was a Captain under him and served also in the war of 1812. They were natives of the New England States. James Weed died at Plattsburg in 1819; his wife died in the city of Hudson, in 1813. Owing to a weakness of the eyes in his boyhood days, caused by the measles, our subject was unable to avail himself of any educational advantages. During the war of 1812-15, he had full charge of a farm, the property of one Zolmon Beman, who was absent from home on military duty. With Beman, Mr. Weed remained till he was twenty-one years of age. On February 9, 1824, he was married to Nellie Zuple, of Delaware County, N. Y., born March 17, 1799, daughter of Christian and Annie (Demond) Zuple. To this union were born nine children—Eliza A., Angeline, Clarissa, Minerva A., William W., James H., Sally Lorena, Lyman and Marietta. William W. was twice married: on the first occasion to Dyantha Done, a native of the State of New York, who bore him two children—Alice and William. On her death, he married Lydia E. Babcock, also a native of New York State, now deceased, leaving two children—Thurlow W. and Vesta L. Sally Lorena, who remains at the old home with her parents to comfort them in their old age, married Charles A. Cutter, December 25, 1856; their family are Perry F., Nellie W. and Guy F. Mr. Weed came to this county, settling on the spot where he now lives, March 7, 1825, with $12.50 in cash, a horse and wagon and but scanty household goods. He was among the first Supervisors of the township (1827-28); and this dates, and he says, the commencement of his education, for he was forced into it, as it were, finding he could not hold office without knowing how to write, etc. He was elected County Commissioner in the fall of 1869, serving three years. He has from a very early day been harnessed with minor township and other offices: was School Director, Road Commissioner, etc., for several years. He assisted in building several schoolhouses of the township and erected the first bridge across the Le Bœuf Creek in this township. He has been a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; in politics is a strong Republican. Mrs. Weed has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for fifty-nine years. Coming into the woods at an early day, her services as midwife were generally in request, and even now, "Aunt Nellie," as she is affectionately called, is in frequent demand. Our subject and wife have celebrated their sixtieth wedding day, on which occasion there was a large attendance at the homestead of relatives and friends from far and near. They are held in the highest esteem in their neighborhood and are justly respected for their piety and amiability.

ANSON H. YAPLE, farmer, P. O. West Green, was born October, 1829, in Erie County, Penn., son of David and Ruth M. Yaple, who settled in Greene Township in 1826. Our subject was reared on a farm, obtaining a fair English education. On June 10, 1851, he was united in marriage with Laura A. Streeter, a native of New York State. This union has been blessed with six children, viz., Candace R., Henry W., Eddie L., Clinton F., Addie E. and Anson J. About 1856, Mr. Yaple, with his wife and three children, removed to Wisconsin. He enlisted in the Thirtieth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, and served seven months. He was honorably discharged March, 1863. His wife died July, 1864. He returned to Erie County, Penn., January, 1865, locating for a year in Greene Township, on his father's farm. Our subject then settled on his present farm, and married Louisa M., daughter of Luther D. Jackson, of Delaware County, N. Y. By this wife he had four children—Arthur L., Louise E., Kate I. and Martha L. Mr. Yaple owns 100 acres of land. He is an esteemed citizen, a Republican politically.

NOBLE V. YAPLE, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born November 26, 1830, in Greene Township, Erie County, son of David and Maria (Fuller) Yaple. When fifteen years old, he began learning the trade of shoe-maker and tanner, with A. Jessup, at Harbor Creek, Erie County. He married December 24, 1856, Hannah Newsham, who was born February 3, 1834, daughter of William and Hannah (Fretwell) Newsham: the former born in Yorkshire, England, March 9, 1806, married March 9, 1831, and came to America the same year. They lived in Pittsburgh, Penn., until 1838, when they settled in Greene Township, where Mrs. Newsham died February 1, 1844. The children born to this union are—Mrs. Mary A. Barney, Mrs. E. Brace (deceased), Mrs. Hannah Yaple, William, Mrs. Eliza Robinson, Mrs. Sarah Comstock (deceased), and Thomas. Mr. Newsham again married August 16, 1846, Mrs. Henrietta Wood, by whom he has Mrs. O. Wilkins, Mrs. Emma Bruce and Mrs. Lavina Main. He was an earnest member and exhorter of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died August 13, 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Yaple lived at West Greene, where he carried on his trade, but in 1878 he abandoned it and began farming. To them have been born Wellie W., Evert S., married to Jane Gross, and Eva L. Mr. and Mrs. Yaple have given their children good educational advantages. Wellie has engaged in teaching four terms in this county, and Eva L., two terms. Mr. and Mrs. Yaple are highly esteemed, the former being a man of strict integrity and of much influence in this community.

GREENFIELD TOWNSHIP.

A. E. BEEMAN, farmer, P. O. Hornby, was born in Tompkins County, N. Y., March 12, 1821, son of S. A. and Rachel (Smith) Beeman, natives of Connecticut and Pennsylvania respectively, and who had seven children—George, in Michigan; Henry, deceased in 1835; William, married to a Miss Rockwell, a resident of Ohio; Mrs. D. Switzer, a widow with five children; Mrs. Lucy Schnyler, also a widow, has three daughters, and had one son who was killed by the cars; Mrs. Martha Katcham, has four sons and two daughters, and A. E., our subject. Mr. Beeman, Sr., came to this county in 1841. The subject of this sketch was married, February 28, 1843, to Mary A. Wade, who bore him two sons and two daughters—Rachel Ann, wife of E. Luce, have three sons—Frank, George and Martin; Edward, married to B. Pierce, have two children—John and Mary; Martin, married to Lorinda Burch, have three children—Elbert and Eva (twins), and Ella; Sarah, deceased, aged three and one-half years. Mr. Beeman settled in Greenfield Township, Erie County, in 1841. His wife died March 17, 1876, and he is now living with another family, and rents his farm, comprising 132 acres, of which eighty are well improved. He has been an influential citizen, serving as School Director, Assessor, Collector, Commissioner, and is a member of the Board of Education.

SMITH J. BEMISS, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in French Creek, N. Y., in September, 1832, son of Thomas and Salinda (Babcock) Bemiss, natives of Connecticut, who came to Erie County in 1851, locating in Greenfield Township until the death of the latter, when Mr. Bemiss moved to Ashville, N. Y., and there died. Those surviving of their family of twelve children are: Alvy, residing near Erie City; Silas, in Kansas; Mrs. J. Marsh, has one child—Chester; Polly, wife of M. Thompson, in New York State, near the old home, have four children—Henry, William, Salinda and Chester; Phoebe, wife of A. Wilkinson, have four children—Sarah, Lutie, Eva and John; Caroline, wife of George Staley, was the widow of Martin Tarr, have five children—Frank, George, Grant, Mary and William; and Smith J., the subject of this sketch, who was married, March 10, 1856, to Eliza Smith, a widow with two children—Emma and Sarah. To them have been born—George, married to Annie, daughter of Joseph Hartley, and Thomas, married to Melissa Crawford, have one child—Margery M. Mr. Bemiss is one of the oldest residents of this township, and is living on his father's old homestead, which is well improved. He keeps fourteen cows, and is making a specialty of dairying.

REV. GEORGE W. CLEAVELAND, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Harbor Creek, was born December 21, 1815, in Salem, Mass., a son of John and Rebecca (Woodbury) Cleaveland. He joined the church when seventeen years old. He attended Dummer Academy, Byfield, Mass., and graduated from Bowdoin College in 1837, and from the Theological Seminary, Andover, Mass., in 1841. During the greater part of the following year he supplied the pulpit of the First Church at Marblehead, Mass. He was ordained September 27, 1843, in Orleans, Mass., and united in marriage, the same evening.

with K. S., daughter of Capt. Seth and Abigail Doane, of Orleans. Of the seven children born to them, the following survive: George C.; Abbie D.; Edward P., a professor in Adelbert College; Heman D., a civil engineer, and R. M., a teacher. From October, 1842, to August 26, 1849, excepting a part of 1843, he ministered in the Presbyterian Church in Waterford. From the latter date he has preached in the Presbyterian Church at Harbor Creek, of which he is still pastor (1884). He states, that by the favor of God, during his entire ministry, extending over forty-two years, he has never been unable to fill his pulpit through illness, except July 2, 1865, when he was suffering from the effects of a stroke of lightning received the day previous. The electricity also left a leaf-like impression on two large gilt picture frames. On the fortieth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Cleaveland were surprised by the parishioners and many admirers, who presented them with baskets of choice viands, costly furniture, and a purse containing gold and silver.

NATHANIEL COBURN, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in Lewis, Essex Co., N. Y., August 9, 1811, son of Jonathan and Martha (Hopkins) Coburn, who were the parents of the following-named children: Cyrus, died in August, 1877; Laura, died in February, 1868; Stephen W.; Lewis, in Lansing, Mich.; Martin, in Wyoming County, N. Y.; Sylvanus, died 1850; James H., at Sugar Grove, Penn.; Abel, married, has two children; Wilber, married to Ida Coons, has a daughter, Lottie; Warren, married to Eva Stone, has one child, Alice; Sally, widow of M. Mansice, with five children. Nathaniel, the subject of this sketch, who was married, in 1837, to Annie L., daughter of Stephen and Annie (Millard) Thayer, who were the parents of nine children, seven deceased, viz., Annie, Willard, Diana, Charlana, Alanson, Sallie and Thomas. The surviving are Stephen O. and Mrs. Annie L. Coburn. To our subject and wife have been born a family of eight—Fidelia A., deceased wife of Mr. Bogard, had two children—Walter A. and Clayton W.; Eleanor A., died in 1850; Thomas E., died in 1852; Willard A., died October 13, 1853; Lucy L., died October 13, 1853; Ludelia, died August 27, 1862; Gertrude C., died August 1, 1862, and Annie E., who married Frank B. Pratt, a son of Harrison and Sallie (Bissel) Pratt, and have one child, Lena Bell. Mr. Coburn has forty-seven acres of land pleasantly located, and adjoining the forty acres of his sons-in-law, which they farmed together. Mr. and Mrs. Coburn are an hospitable old couple, both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLARD FARNSWORTH, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in this township April 26, 1838, son of Manander and Elizabeth A. (Johnson) Farnsworth; the former was born May 5, 1801, in Addison County, Vt., and was one of the early settlers in this township; the latter a native of Northumberland, Penn., was born June 8, 1799. They were married February 10, 1823. Eight children were born to them—Betsy A., Henry, Martha, Mary, Jane, Hannah, Willard, and Oliver M., who died in the service of the United States. The subject of this sketch was married, October 12, 1868, to Mary C., daughter of Charles Johnson, and a native of Kalamazoo County, Mich., by whom he had the following children: Oliver G., Lola C., Ida May and Ada Bell (twins), and Eva E. Mr. Farnsworth has two well-improved farms, one comprising eighty and the other fifty acres. He has been filling the office of Township Clerk for several years.

F. E. FENTON, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in this township in November, 1850, son of Daniel T. and Amanda (Rouse) Fenton, natives of Pennsylvania, who had six children, three of whom are living—Fanny A., wife of L. V. Babcock, has one child, Louie; Chauncy I., married to Clara Douglas, has two children, Roy and Grace Ethel. Our subject was married February 29, 1876, to Aggie, daughter of Darius Addkins, who has borne him two children—Harry Leon and Earl Clayton. Mr. Fenton owns a fine farm of 239 acres of land near Colt's Station, which is well-improved and watered. He served his township as Auditor when twenty-one years old; has since been Judge of elections, Inspector, Clerk of Election, Collector and Justice of the Peace, and Assessor by election in spring of 1884.

JAMES M. FINN, P. O. Findley's Lake, Chautauqua County, N. Y., was born November 7, 1823, in Orange County, N. Y., son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth (Lawrence) Finn, natives of same county, who came to Erie and engaged in dairying, sending their butter to New York, being the first ever shipped from Erie or Chautauqua Counties; the churns were turned by sheep. They settled in Greenfield Township in the spring of 1834, where the former died in 1859, and his widow in 1863. They were the parents of the following children: Louisa, deceased; Betsy, deceased wife of A. D. Smith, left two children—Mrs. Sarah E. Wheat and Charles D.; Sarah, wife of A. Darrow, have two children—Mary A. and Louisa; N. L., in Michigan, married to Lucena Wever, have eight children—John A., Elizabeth, Thaddeus, Sarah L., Josephine, Agnes and Charles. John A. died young, and James M. Our subject was married, November 2, 1853, to Helen A., daughter of Philo S. Hawley, a native of Essex County, N. Y., and an early settler of French Creek Township, N. Y. To Mr. and Mrs. Finn have been born seven children—Imogene, educated at Edinboro, wife of Lyman S. Brown, residing at Clymer, N. Y., has three children—Jesse L., Todd Finn and Helen Blanch; Nehemiah, Carrie A.; William A., a civil engineer in Dakota; James J., who was educated at Edinboro, Erie High School and at Oberlin College; he is now at Madison University, N. Y.; Mary, attending school at Edinboro, and Robert Lee.

The second daughter was educated in the Cooper Academy, and taught for several years. Mr. Finn has engaged extensively in dairying, he has now thirty cows, but has kept fifty. He is now in the stock business; he is one of the leading men of the township in which he has served as Justice of the Peace for six years; Road Commissioner six years; School Director for twelve years; Town Collector; Treasurer and as member of the Board of Education.

JOHN McCLUNE, farmer and Miller, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Chester County, Penn., May 9, 1805, son of John and Nancy (Reed) McClune, who were the parents of six children—Charles, had one son, Thomas R., and died in Columbia County, Penn., aged seventy-seven; Mrs. Hannah Reeves, deceased, had five children; James, dying, left a son, Cyrus; Ann, deceased, wife of George McGee, left eight children; Charles Reed, Sr., residing at Clarion County, Penn., and John, the subject of this sketch. He was married, September 12, 1826, to Nancy McGee, born in 1809, daughter of John and Jane McGee. By this union were eight children—Eliza J., wife of Charles Kendrick, have four children—William, deceased, April 9, 1882, Edith, Mary and Jane; Charles Reed, Jr., resident of Indiana, has five children; Maria L., wife of Thomas Smart, of Mill Creek Township, have seven children—Joanna, Thomas R., Mary E., Maud, John, Charles and Annie; George W., John Jr., Alexander, married to Elizabeth Handy, have one child living, Edith S., Mary A. and Adella R. Mr. McClune is a fine old gentleman, he was one of the early settlers in this township, having come to Erie in 1827, and for many years ran the flour mill of Judge John Cochran; he then engaged in farming. Our subject was one of the first subscribers for the Observer, edited by Thomas Barnum, an uncle of the celebrated showman.

WILLIAM R. MILLER, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in the State of New York July 3, 1808, son of William and Mary Denton Miller. They were the parents of eleven children, seven of whom are living—Balsora, widow of Orlin Colburn, have two children—Orlin and James M.; Esther, widow of George W. Addison, has seven children; Deborah, widow of Henry Berrey, has three children; George P. Miller, has one child; James Miller has one child—Denton; Hannah, wife of M. M. Ravlin, have two children—Mary and Almira; Preston, deceased, leaving two children—Ella and Balsora. The other three children died in infancy. William R. Miller, our subject, was married, September 29, 1834, to Martha Berrey, who was born in Greenfield Township December 2, 1811. Mr. Miller has no children, but has an adopted son, Edward Isaac Miller, who is married. Mrs. William R. Miller was a daughter of Joseph and Polly (Thompson) Berrey, the former of whom was Collector in this township in 1817. Mrs. Miller had eleven sisters and brothers, only one of whom is living—Mrs. E. Allen, a resident of Kansas. The father of our subject came to Erie County in 1820, buying land of Judy Colt, near the station of same name, where his son William now resides, which farm comprises 150 acres of well watered and improved land. He died when fifty-five years old. William R. Miller has served as Collector, Assessor, Road Commissioner and, under the old system, was School Director.

CHARLES MORGAN, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, is a native of England, born in the County of Kent January 13, 1815; son of William and Mary (Burgess) Morgan, who had eleven children, viz., Mary, William, Ann, Sarah, Thomas, James, Gabriel, John, Charlotte, Jane and Charles, our subject. Two of his sons came to America in 1818, the rest of the family, six members, came two years later, and settled in Mina, N. Y., where Mr. Morgan died in his eighty-seventh year, and Mrs. Morgan in her eighty-fourth year. Charles, our subject, was married in January, 1835, to Ann, daughter of William Boyd, a native of Ireland, who came to this county in 1819. He was married by Gen. John Phillips, Paymaster in the war of 1812, and was a prominent man, coming to this county in 1829, and locating in Venango Township, but is now a resident of Greenfield Township. To Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have been born eight children—Charles, Jr., married to C. Perry, now residing on the old homestead; William T., married to Martha Luce; Mary E. (deceased), wife of A. Orton; Ann, wife of James Marts; James S., who has charge of the homestead farm; John G. (deceased); Sarah, wife of T. F. Burgess; George B., in mercantile business in this township at home. Mr. Morgan has 228 acres of good land, mostly improved. He has served in various local offices, such as Assessor, School Director, Auditor and Inspector of Elections.

ANTHONY H. MOSEMAN, farmer and manufacturer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, was born in Saxony, Germany, February 4, 1838, son of Jacob and Ernestine (Neidscheitz) Moseman. The latter, with a brother and her son, Anthony, came to America, landing in New York October 13, 1847, and subsequently to this township. This uncle, our subject states, cruelly abused him, knocking him down and stamping on him if a lesson in Greek or Latin was unlearned, or when unable to lift a weight beyond his strength. The estate of Mrs. Moseman and her brother was sold for $18,000 in gold, each having half. The brother took Mrs. Moseman's share, and, as she could not speak English, they would have starved had it not been for the kindness of the neighbors, some of whom are living yet. Mr. Moseman has prospered in life, and owns a fine farm in this township, and is engaged in manufacturing the best hemlock shingles, cider and apple jelly. He was united in marriage November 18, 1861, with Maria Anna, daughter of Francis Hedderick, of Greene Township, Erie Co., Penn., by whom he has had seven children—Barbara, wife of A. Orton; Henry, married to Ella, daughter of John and Elizabeth Williams (have one child—Flora); Sophia, wife of B. Orton (have one child—Nora); Ella, Rosa, Mary and Charles. Mr. Moseman is a well-educated, pleasant business man.

GEORGE C. PARKER, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in Mill Creek Township, this county, March 17, 1826, son of William and Emily (Talmadge) Parker, who were natives of Vermont and Pennsylvania respectively, and parents of two children—George, our subject, and Henry. Mrs. Emily Parker died September 25, 1828. William Parker married his deceased wife's sister, Elizabeth, who bore him two children—D. J., dying in Ohio, and Emily, the wife of A. Prindle (has four children). Our subject, George C., was joined in matrimony April 12, 1849, to Eliza, daughter of Stephen Coburn, four children resulting—A. J., married to Eva Burden; Frank D., married to Effie, daughter of Charles Jones (had one child—Lynn); Mrs. Effie Parker died February 5, 1844; Eldora D., wife of Frank Searls and Burt C. Mr. Parker has for many years been a leading citizen of Greenfield Township, filling many of the local offices, such as Road Commissioner, Judge and Inspector of Elections, School Director, and for a number of terms acted as Assistant Assessor. His farm of 200 acres, well watered and improved, is finely located in the northwest corner of this township. He is a clever gentleman, a member of the A. O. U. W., No. 5, Perry Lodge.

JESSE R. PRINDLE, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Harbor Creek Township March 8, 1810, son of Amasa and Tryphena (Miller) Prindle, one of the pioneer families of Harbor Creek Township, and the parents of ten daughters and three sons, all lived to have families excepting two. Their names were Almyra, Sarah, Rhoda, Eliza, Tryphena, Charles M., died March 19, 1884, was married to Polly Tickner, Rebecca, Cornelia, Jane, Chaney, Nancy (deceased), Samantha (deceased) and Jesse R. Our subject married Delaney, daughter of Christian Balsler, of Athens County, Ohio. Eight children blessed this union—Adolphus, married to Emily Parker (has seven children—George, May, Ell, Orpha, Elpha, Nellie and Frank); Ollie, deceased; Jesse, deceased; William, married to Mary Peck (has one daughter—Bell); Samantha, wife of Davis Parker (has three children—Derwent, Dolly, deceased, and Jesse); Chaney, a soldier in the navy during the late war, died on the United States gunboat "Brilliant," and was buried at Ft. Henry; Adolphus also enlisted in the war, and participated in the 100-mile march from Burk Station to Danville, when he and most of the men were ill from fatigue and insufficient rations (his family consisted of five—Ell, Elpha and Orpha, deceased, and George, married to Viola Lathrop (has two children—Bertha M. and Lee), and Mary, wife of Robert Dodge); Adolphus has been School Director and Judge of Elections. Jesse R. Prindle is an intelligent old gentleman, and has been an influential citizen of this township, serving as School Director for nine years, Commissioner six years, Justice of the Peace ten years.

CHANCY PRINDLE, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Harbor Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., in April, 1819; son of Amasa and Tryphena (Miller) Prindle, natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively. The former settled in Harbor Creek Valley in 1795, buying land at 20 cents per acre, and working there three years, preparing for his family, whom he brought from Buffalo over the frozen lake. It is stated that once he raised 500 bushels of wheat, and, on trying to dispose of it to parties at Erie City, was hooted for his pains, and was asked "what on earth they could do with it." He subsequently sold this farm and bought another of Judy Colt, further up the hills. Through the destruction of the records, when the Erie Court House was burned, he was compelled to pay twice for the same property. He had thirteen children—Almyra, wife of Z. Wright; Sarah, the first white female child born in the township, wife of Mr. Orton; Rhoda, widow of D. S. Brown (has seven children); Eliza, wife of Silas Walker, residing in California (has four children); Tryphena (deceased in 1878), wife of William Preble (had five children); Charles M., died March 19, 1884; Jesse R.; Cornelia (deceased); Jane, widow of James Philips (has five children); Chaney, our subject; Nancy and Samatha, deceased. Chaney, the subject of this sketch, was married February 4, 1847, to Thyrza, daughter of William A. Pierce and Thankful Irish. Five children have resulted—Lyman M., married to Elizabeth Smith (has two children, William and Myron); Ellen, wife of George Darling (has two children, Emory and Charles); Ransom A., married to Mary Loomis, has one son, Charles L.; and Chaney, Jr. Mr. Prindle has a well improved and watered farm of 150 acres. He has served his township as Road Commissioner, and is now School Director. He is a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

HIRAM SHADDUCK, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in Greenfield Township, this county, January 14, 1826; son of Joseph and Betsy (Willard) Shadduck, who had eighteen children. Those surviving are George, Henry, Esther, Nancy, Hannah, Polly, Ann, Lester and Hiram, our subject. Joseph Shadduck had been previously married to Harriet Cass, who bore him Ira, now eighty-four years old, the first white male child born in the county; Betsy (deceased), David, and Matilda, who was killed on her way to church by a horse, in Corry. Joseph had in all twenty-two children and 306 grandchildren. He came to Erie County in 1783, and was one of the first settlers in Greenfield Township; took up 460 acres of Government land at $1.25 per acre, and bought 100 acres more near North East. He suffered all the hardships of a pioneer's life, first clearing away one acre on which he lived. He baked his bread (composed of flour and water only) and meat by roasting them in the fire on the end of a stick. He had to build his hog-pens high and strong to keep out bears and other wild animals. One day he found a bear eating his dinner; seizing his gun, he soon dispatched Bruin, and so supplied his larder with fresh meat. He departed this life in 1849, and his personal property brought the large sum of $16,000. Hiram, our subject, was married at Colt's Station, this township, by Squire Mervin, and has eleven children living and one dead, viz.: Mary E., wife of E. Bower (has five children—May, Davy, Jennie, Edney and Mark); Eliza, wife of Wm. Keeler (has an adopted child, Arthur); Josephine, wife of W. Wellington (has one daughter, Blanche); Polly, wife of F. Moore (has one child, Arthur); John J., Lincoln, Fred L., Ethalina, wife of J. Lathrop (has one child, Ellen); Charles, Maud and Mertie, the youngest, who has kept the family record. As an instance of what unselfish devotion will accomplish, we record the following: When Joseph Shaddock was lying ill, in the depth of one winter, with the snow six feet deep, his wife, Betsy, had to crawl on her hands and knees a distance of half a mile to procure potatoes sufficient to keep the family from starving. She had a large stock of cattle to attend to, and had to crawl to the creek to get them watered.

JOHN T. TOWER, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in 1838, son of F. A. and Elmira M. (Taylor) Tower, who were natives of the State of New York, and came to Erie Co., Penn., in 1853, settling on the farm now occupied by their son, where they passed the remainder of their days. Of the four children born to them, only two survive—Emerett, wife of A. Raymond, residing in Harbor Creek (has one child, Lottie); and J. T., the subject of this sketch, who was united in marriage in Dec., 1862, with Sylvia M., daughter of John Towsey. Eight children blessed this union, viz.: Alton, Arthur M., Gertrude, Sarah A., Edith and Alma. Two are deceased. Mr. Tower has a nicely-located and well-improved farm of seventy-five acres in the northern part of Greenfield Township. He is a good farmer and a pleasant gentleman.

WILLIAM H. WAKELEY, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., May 2, 1828, son of Thomas and Amanda (Raymond) Wakeley, who had seven children—Hiram; Jane, wife of Nathaniel Johnson, who died, leaving one child—Hiram; Eliza died, leaving one son—Henry; Seth has six children—Amanda, August, Betsy, William, Charles and Jane; Silas, enlisted during the late war in the One Hundred and Forty-fifth Penn. Vol. Infantry, was wounded, and died leaving no issue; Thomas, a resident of Michigan, has three children; and William H., the subject of this sketch. Thomas Wakeley's first wife dying, he subsequently married Betsy McArthur, who bore him four children—B. J., Ella, Marion, and Jane (deceased). He came from Chautauqua Co., N. Y., to Erie Co., Penn., settling in this township in 1865. He departed this life on the farm now owned by William H., the subject of this sketch, who was married in 1847 to Ann Eliza, a daughter of Henry Raymond. One son blessed this union—Charles A., married to Mary, daughter of Lafayette Blakesley, by whom he has one child—W. L. Mr. Wakeley was one of the best shoe-makers in this township, but now turns his attention to agricultural pursuits. He owns 106 acres of well-improved land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

SETH WAKELEY, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in Auburn, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1830, son of Thomas and Amanda (Raymond) Wakeley, who moved to Mina, N. Y., in the fall of 1839, and soon after came to Erie, settling in this township. They were the parents of seven children—Hiram, Jane, Elezer, William, Seth, Silas and Thomas. Mrs. Wakeley dying, he married Betsy McArthur, who bore him Barnum, Ella, Jane and Marvin. Seth, the subject of this sketch, was married, October 6, 1859, to Laura A. Burnham, born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., daughter of Ashel and Luania Burnham, by whom he had eight children—Amanda (wife of Oliver Markham, have one child, Floyd), Elbert (dying May 30, 1865), Augusta D., Grace N. (deceased Apr. 22, 1875), Willis A., Bessie L., Charles O. and Mary Jane. Mr. Wakeley owns 102 acres of land, which is well watered and improved, and his wife 50 acres of timber. They have several fine buildings. They are members of the Baptist Church.

WILLIS T. WILDMAN, farmer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, was born March 28, 1832, son of Lewis and Laura (Daggot) Wildman, who were natives of New York. The former came with his father to this county in 1818, locating in Fairview Township, but subsequently moved to Greenfield in 1828, settling on some land entered by S. and J. Daggot, where Mrs. Lewis Wildman still resides. She was the mother of the following children: Sebra (deceased), Amanda, Henry D. (dying, left a daughter, Martha), Lucinda (widow with 4 children, Lewis, George, Walter and Laura), Philander (widower with no children), Albert (widower with 3 children—Fred, Adelbert and Laura), Annice (a widow with 6 children—Willis M., Lewis, Frank, Oliver, Ira and Bradford); and Willis T., our subject. He was married Apr. 23, 1856, to Phoebe, daughter of Ezra W. Nason. Her parents were natives of Vermont, and had 6 children—Mary, Keziah, Betsy, Wm., Harriett and Phoebe. To Mr. and Mrs. Wildman have been given Harriett L. (wife of O. Cordott, by whom she has 2 children—Charles W. and Clayton F.), Bert W., and an infant (deceased). Mr. Wildman paid for the farm on which he lives by chopping wood for his father and grandfather, at 20 cents per cord, and working by the month at $12 a month. He has 112 acres of land, with good improvements, and makes a specialty of dairying. He has good stock, and employs a large, heavy dog to turn the wheel of the butter churn. He has served his township as School Director, and is a member of the Equitable Aid Society, No. 384.

JAMES H. WILSON, farmer, P. O. Greenfield, was born in this township August 12, 1820, son of John and Hannah (Smith) Wilson. John Wilson came with his parents, William and Elizabeth (Hunter) Wilson, to Greenfield Aug. 9, 1798, from Northumberland Co., Penn. James, brother of John, was born March 14, 1800. James H. had three brothers. Wm. married Hettie Smith, residing at Blackberry Station, Ill., had family of 4, all dying young; Wm. died in 1868; Thomas S. is a resident of Columbus, Penn., has 3 sons—Edgar Eugene and Edwin Leroy (twins) and Ara L., all in Dakota; Thom I., in Chicago, has a family of 4, 2 sons and 2 daughters. James H. the subject of this sketch, was married, Jan. 30, 1844, to Elizabeth A., daughter of M. Farnsworth, who had a family of 8, viz., Henry, Martha A., Mary E., Jane E., Hannah A., Willard, Elizabeth A., and Oliver (a soldier in the 111th P. V., Co. A.; enlisted in February, 1864; fell sick, and has not been heard from since May 8, 1864). The union of Mr. Wilson and wife has been blessed with one daughter, Sarah M., who died when ten years and eleven months old. Mr. Wilson owns a nice, well-watered farm near the village of Greenfield. He has in his possession a letter obtained by his great-grandfather Hunter from the Presbyterian Church in Ireland over 100 years ago. This old Mr. Hunter and family came to Greenfield a few years after his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Wilson, settled in this (then a wilderness) town of Greenfield, and died here Sept. 28, 1825, aged ninety-three years eight months and twenty-four days. Elizabeth Hunter died Aug. 7, 1831, aged eighty-eight years nine months and twenty-four days. Mr. Wilson's grandmother, Elizabeth (Hunter) Wilson, died Oct. 1, 1865, in the ninety-third year of her age.

HARBOR CREEK TOWNSHIP.

TIMOTHY BACKUS, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born July 2, 1805, in Harbor Creek Township, son of Joseph and Martha (Millikin) Backus. The parents of the former were Joseph and Sarah (Cleveland) Backus, natives of England. The father of Timothy was one of the pioneers of Erie County and located on land west of the village of Harbor Creek, where he built the first cabin. He had eleven children; of these the surviving are Mary, widow of Capt. Thomas Wilkins (has one child—Ann, wife of John Sterrett); Anna, widow of Capt. B. Wilkins (has seven children—Joseph, Thomas, Park, Clara, Jennie, William and Sarah), and is living in Erie County, Penn.; Martha, widow of Peter Halderman (has one child—Olive); Orilla, wife of Mr. Goodwin (has one child—Mrs. Essie Christian); Thomas, living in Jo Daviess County, Ill.; Elizabeth, living in Iowa; and Timothy, our subject. He was married, September 15, 1836, to Sarah, daughter of A. and Sarah McDowell. The children born to them are Miranda, wife of D. Videto (has four children—George, Charles, Andrew and Alice). Andrew M. Backus, a soldier in the late war, was married to Mary E., daughter of J. M. Moorhead, by whom he has had four children—Charles M., Andrew S., Harriet A., Louisa B.); Cordelia A. (died July 9, 1863); Mary E. widow of William A. McCord (also served in late rebellion) by whom she had four children—Frederick (deceased) Florence E., Arthur M. (deceased), William A. (deceased in infancy), Emma at home. From 1844-48, our subject served as Postmaster at Backus Corners. He owns a farm on the Buffalo road and lives in his residence near Moorheadville, to which he moved in 1877 from Greenfield Township, where he had resided for a time. He is descended from one of the oldest settlers in this township.

JOHN BACKUS, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Sept. 2, 1810, son of Myron and Hannah (Patterson) Backus, natives of New York State and Ireland respectively, and who came to Erie Co. in 1800, settling on 200 acres of land where John Backus now lives. Of their four children, only two survive—Ebenezer in Kansas and John, the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage in 1842 with Lydia R., daughter of Ezekiel and Rebecca (Stewart) Chambers, one of the oldest families of this county. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Backus resulted in the following children: Hannah R., wife of A. Smith (have seven children—Perry A., Ellen L., Myra, Eddie, Lee B., Celia M. and Ada R., who are living at Brighton); Perry C., married to Eleanora Noles (have three children—Ola, Hollis J. and Perry N.); Nancy, wife of John Churchill (had three children—Perry, Arthur and Robbie, who died young); Myron (deceased aged twenty years); Frances M., wife of M. Chambers (no issue); John S., married to Emma Vance (have an only son—Perry M.); George, married to Olive Van Roberts (have a son—Everett R.); and Fremont (deceased in infancy). Mr. Backus has been a resident of this township since his birth and is one of its most substantial farmers. He has served as School Director for many years and was Collector a number of terms. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Politically, he is a Republican.

WM. M. BARTON, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born at Brownville, Jefferson Co., N. Y.; son of Thomas and Rhoda (Calkins) Barton, also natives of New York State. They came to Erie Co. in 1853, settling in Greene Township. Twelve children were born to them, viz.: George (married to Margaret Orr, who dying left 3 children; he subsequently married her sister and had 4 children by her); Jane, wife of A. Frazier (have 6 children); John, married Nancy Smith (have 3 children); Sarah, wife of Chas. Newsham (have 5 children); Ellen; Thomas P., married to Carry Brace (have 2 children); Chas. T., married May, daughter of Chauncy and Alpha E. Thayer (had one child); Roy (deceased); Emma J., wife of J. C. Bryner, a teacher in the high school at Clarion (they have 3 sons—Guy, Earl and Wm. Morris); Benjamin C. at home; and Charles Henry, who died in Michigan, aged twenty years, Mr. Barton is an enterprising, successful, self-made man. For 43 years he has resided in this township, and has served as School Director for 6 years and also as Road Commissioner. He is a member of the Equitable Aid Union, No. 385; has always been a Republican in politics.

J. G. BECK, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Philadelphia in the year 1830, son of J. G. and Regina (Myers) Beck, who were the parents of the following children: Frederick; David R.; Lucy, wife of L. Otto; Elizabeth, wife of Geo. Bowers; Henry; Harriet (deceased), wife of G. Shultz, and J. G., the subject of this sketch. He was married in 1853 to Mary Crape. Five children blessed this union, viz., Geo., Albert, R. M., Amanda and Frank. Mr. Beck settled in Harbor Creek Township in 1878, and is living on a farm near Harbor Creek.

HIRAM A. BELL, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in 1836 in this township, son of Levi and Amelia (Bell) Bell; though of the same name they were not connected; former a native of New York State, latter of Pennsylvania. Parents of three children, two now living—Matilda, wife of Thomas, son of Walter Greenwood, and Hiram A. Our subject married, in 1863, Emeline McGill, by whom he had three children—Francis McGill, Levi Audley and Wm. Augustus. Mr. Bell lives two miles south of the village, in the beautiful valley of Harbor Creek. His farm consists of 134 acres of well watered and improved land.

DR. JOHN L. BENNETT, farmer and physician, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in 1821 in Yates County, N. Y., son of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Hall) Bennett, the former a native of New York State, the latter from Connecticut. They were parents of ten children, five now living, viz., James, Lucians, Daniel, George and our subject. Nicholas Bennett was called out during the war of 1812, but was not in active service. He died in Chautauqua County, N. Y. His widow still lives near Chautauqua Lake with her son James. Our subject's grandfather Bennett drew a pension for services rendered in the war of the Revolution. Dr. Bennett came to this State from New York State in 1841, took up a wild farm of 175 acres, and made all improvements himself, besides studying and practicing medicine. He studied medicine under Dr. Chaffee, of Wattsburg, this county, and has met with every success in his profession. During his practice, he has subdued some long-standing and obstinate chronic cases. He was married, March 17, 1856, to Eliza A. Filley, of Greene Township, this county. To this union were born three children, viz.: Ada C., wife of Frank Cox; William M., and Lulu M. The Doctor resides on a farm of seventy acres in Harbor Creek Township. He has also a farm in Greene Township, where his wife resides with their son William.

MISS LOVISA BONNELL, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in this township in 1837, daughter of John and Cynthia (Wadsworth) Bonnell, one of the early families of Harbor Creek Township, who came here when the country was new. There were nine children in this family, viz.: Richard, married to Sarah J. Henry (had three children—Willis, Adelbert, deceased, and Frank); Alfred; Sarah, wife of Z. Wilson (have 2 children, Nora and Chester); Mrs. Caroline Thompson (has 5 children—Arthur, Casper, William, Addie and Cora); and Lovisa, the subject of this sketch. The other children died in infancy, their names being Adaline, Ann Eliza, Mary and John. Mr. Bonnell began life a poor man, but when he departed this life, in 1881, left his family in very comfortable circumstances. Miss Bonnell is a worthy lady of sterling qualities, and is living with a brother on the farm left her by her father.

MOSES BOWEN, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born November 10, 1822, son of John and Margaret (McClain) Bowen, who were the parents of ten children, of whom the following are now living: Thomas, in Dubuque, Iowa; Rachel, wife of R. Nesbit; Daniel, in Washington Township; Joseph, at Strong's Prairie, Adams Co., Wis.; Mary, wife of Samuel Ensign, in Washington Township, and Moses, the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage, Dec. 4, 1845, with Rebecca Vannatta. Ten children have been born to them, Adams, who is living in Pennsylvania, and has 5 children—Albert, Moses, Harley, George E., Lena. Mr. Bowen's farm of 45 acres has a beautiful view of the lake on whose shores it is located. Mr. Bowen possesses a family Bible which has been in the family over 100 years. For a number of years he has served as School Director in this township.

P. D. BRYANT, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Franklin Co. N. Y., Nov. 5, 1813, son of Philip and Sophia (Shepard) Bryant, parents of 4 sons and 5 daughters—Caroline, wife of Luther H. Droinnell, now deceased, leaving a large family scattered in the West; Sophia, wife of James Skinner, of Erie; Jennette, married to Sam'l Merrett, long since deceased (had 2 daughters, now living, and 1 son deceased); Clarinda, wife of Chas. Miller, of Erie City (have 3 children); Aruny S., in New York State; J. M., in Erie; Daniel B.; Philip D., our subject, and Sarah, wife of Henry Bennett, residing in Boone Co., Ill. (has 3 sons and a daughter deceased). This family came here at an early date, our subject not coming to Erie until Apr. 23, 1835. There is preserved in the Bryant family a curious wooden barrel over 100 years old, used by one of their ancestors to bring his wine over the sea. The subject of this sketch was married, Nov. 5, 1839, to Sarah P., daughter of Luther and Cloe (Manley) Searls, natives of Massachusetts and Vermont respectively. Three of the 7 children born to this union survive—R. S., wife of Peter R. Runser (had 2 children, James Bryant and Paulina Runser); F. H., married to Caroline, daughter of Lyman and Eliza Kingsbury, and resides at Atchison, Kan.; Charles M., Pension Agent at Washington, D. C., married Amandy, daughter of Wm. and Doreus Camp; James B., the oldest son, during the late war enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., under Col. McClain, and fell in the battle of Spottsylvania, a sacrifice for his country. Mr. Bryant is an intelligent old gentleman, residing on his father-in-law's homestead, near Harbor Creek. He has filled the various township offices, and has been Road Commissioner, Auditor, Collector, School Director, for a number of years was Judge of Elections, and is now Town Treasurer.

ISAAC M. BUTT, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in this township, and is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Guist) Butt. They were the parents of seven children—John A. (dying when young), Daniel E., Charles; Lovina, wife of Charles Busick, have two children—Oscar and Lizzie; and Isaac M., the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage, January 13, 1880, with Alice, daughter of John Gorman. Three children have blessed this union, viz., Sadie, Mary and Earl M. Mr. Butt resides on his farm, comprising fifty acres, on the Lake road.

T. P. CARR, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born in Lycoming Co., Penn., in the year 1821, son of Joseph and Susan (Paterson) Carr, the former of whom emigrated from England in 1811, the latter a native of Pennsylvania. They were parents of six children, two now living—Mary W. Carr and T. P. Carr, our subject. The latter was married, in 1855, to Adelia Scott, daughter of William Scott, Esq., who has borne him seven children—Mary B., Joseph, Susie A., William G., Grant U., Thomas P. and Adelia C., all at home. Mr. Carr is a leading farmer of this township; has fine stock and improved agricultural implements. His farm is well-watered, and is near the lake.

JOHN L. CARTER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born July 21, 1857, in Mill Creek Township, son of John H. Carter, who came from Norwich, England, to Erie Co., about 1833 or 1834, and was the parent of six children—Mary, wife of Wm. Hardwick; Geo. W., Edward, Alfred M.; Luella, at home; and John L., the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage, Nov. 15, 1881, with Jennie Rudd, and has one son—John H., born April 27, 1883. Mr. Carter is an enterprising young farmer, living on a farm owned by his father, located on the shore of Lake Erie, a half mile from Harbor Creek Village.

EDWARD CASS, farmer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, now proprietor of the Harbor Creek Woolen and Carding Mills, located on Six Mile Creek, was born in 1826, son of John and Hannah (Pratt) Cass, natives of England, who emigrated to America, arriving at Erie City Sept. 6, 1842. There they remained for a year or two, while the woolen mills were building. In 1844, Mr. Cass entered into a partnership with John Thorton and Thos. Rhoads. Later he bought out their interests and ran the mills until his death, July 25, 1874, when they were closed for two years. Edward, his son, then purchased them, and has since successfully carried on the business. This mill was considered one of the county's best improvements. In those early times the greater portion of the inhabitants depended on them for their yarns and clothing, though cash transactions were so rare that the first year all the money obtained by the company was but $1,500. Edward was united in marriage, in Beaver Co., Nov. 6, 1849, with Elizabeth, daughter of Ephraim Smith, also of English birth. Three children have blessed this union—Ephraim E., married to Carrie, daughter of John Neff (have one child—Edward J.); George, married to Lienella, daughter of S. S. Cole (have one daughter—Elizabeth), and Mary E. Mr. Cass is politically a Republican.

JAMES CHAMBERS, farmer and Justice of the Peace, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Mill Creek Township, March 10, 1805, son of Ezeziel and Rebecca (Stewart) Chambers. They were natives of Chambersburg, Franklin County, Penn., which was named after an ancestor. They had twelve children, six living—Benjamin J., Stewart; Ann, widow of Mr. Horton; Lydia R., wife of J. Backus; Maria J., wife of Mr. Walker, and James. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers came to Erie Co. in the fall of 1804, and were among its earliest settlers. They lived in Mill Creek Township until arrangements were completed for moving to the farm now occupied by James. Mr. Chambers and a brother obtained 400 acres from the Population Company. Our subject married Adelia, daughter of Thomas George. Five children blessed this union, three living—James H., a merchant of Wesleyville, married to Miss Brawley; R. O., in the Custom House at Erie, and married to Clara M. Funson, of Syracuse, N. Y. (have two children—Warren H. and Adelia G.), and Mrs. James C. Russel, a widow. Mr. Chambers is a well-to-do citizen, living on the old homestead near Wesleyville. He has been one of the county's leading citizens, and has filled nearly every office in Erie Co. and Harbor Creek Township. He is now Justice of the Peace, which position he has occupied for forty years, and is the oldest Justice in the county, obtaining his commission from the State.

HARRISON CHAMBERS, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born January 21, 1840, in Harbor Creek Township, son of Samuel and Harriet (Wadsworth) Chambers, the former a native of Harbor Creek, Erie Co., Penn., the latter of New York State. They were among the early settlers of this township, and were the parents of seven children—Milton, married to Irene Backus (have one daughter—Jennie); Grace, wife of Ben. Ribler; Seneca (he contracted a disease whilst in the army, during the late war, and his father went to bring him home, but they both died of the same disease within a short time of each other. Seneca in 1862); Emmons, married to Fianah Gordon (have two daughters—Maud and Gertrude); Mrs. Lusina Webster (has one son—Herbert); and Harrison, the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage in 1882 with Arabella, daughter of Marshall Bonnell. This union has been crowned by the birth of a daughter, Hattie, named after her grandmother. Mr. Chambers fell from an apple tree in 1873, breaking both arms, which laid him up for some months. He is a good farmer, residing on the old homestead farm, which is in a good location on the Buffalo road, Harbor Creek Township. His mother lives with him.

P. B. CHAPIN, farmer and builder, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Ontario Co., N. Y., Dec. 31, 1811. His parents were natives of Mass. and Conn. respectively; they moved to Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1815; thence to Venango Township, Erie Co., in 1827; they had a family of twelve, five now living—Pliney, residing on the old homestead, near Wattsburg; Orilla, wife of J. Williams, and has four children; Hannah, wife of Wm. M. Howard, residing in Warren Co., Penn., and P. B., the subject of this sketch. He was united in marriage on Sept. 5, 1839, with Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Harper; the fruit of this union are two children—R. Our subject was married, on the first occasion, 57 years ago, to Mariah Wheeler (deceased), who had 1 child—Anna M., now Mrs. Harper. Mr. Clark married, on the second occasion, Adah Blakesley, who died 17 years after. She was the mother of several children, 6 of whom are now living—Lucius; Vernon, who was badly burned in a railway car; Edward, who was a broker in Toledo; Esther and Clara, now residing in Illinois, and J. W., Jr., who lives in Toledo, Ohio. Rev. J. W. Clark was married to his third wife June 11, 1845. She was a Miss Dorcas Clark (same name, but not related), a native of the State of New York, and whose father came to Erie Co. at an early day. To this union were born 9 children, now living, viz., Adah, Velonia, Whitfield, Alice, Willis, Dora, Susie, Morvin and Lizzie. Rev. John W. Clark has been an itinerant minister for over 30 years, and is still able to hold protracted meetings, preaching every night in the week, and 3 times on the Sabbath. He has been connected with the U. B. Conference 29 years, and has never failed, in all that time, to answer his name when called.

ALBERT CLARK, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born on September 7, 1834, in Harbor Creek Township, Erie County, son of James and Sophia (Wagner) Clark, natives of Massachusetts and New York State respectively, the former of whom was born in 1797. Grandfather Timothy Clark's family (excepting Mary) came to Erie Co. in 1818. The children were Timothy, James, Harriet, Mary and Eliza. James, father of our subject, settled in Harbor Creek Township when there was but little clearing done. With his own hand he chopped and cleared over 100 acres of land. He was a member of the M. E. Church; died in 1866. The mother of our subject, Sophia (Wagner) Clark, was born in 1804, and came to Erie Co. in 1829. She was a member of the Baptist Church; died in 1859. Of the other 2 children, Henry G. died at the age of thirty years, in 1878, leaving one little boy—George A.; and Tryphena (Davis) Parker died at the age of twenty-eight years, in 1879. The father died in 1881. He was an Elder in the Presbyterian Church in Greene Township. He left his son the farm on which the latter now resides. Our subject was married to Sarah A. Davison, of Venango Co., who has borne him 4 children, viz., Arthur W., Mary E., Fanny M. and Bertha B.

WM. W. DAVISON, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., Aug. 10, 1815, son of Arthur and Elizabeth (Wilson) Davison, natives of Pennsylvania. Of the 11 children born to this union, only Wm. W. survives. Arthur Davison was a resolute man; he captured the Yankee who had committed robberies in all the surrounding States. He was one of the early settlers in this county, and related to Col. Wilson, of historic note. Our subject was married, June 29, 1841, to Miss Nancy Shaddock, of Erie, who bore him 7 children, 5 now living—Wm. R., Chas. T., Corning A., Floyd and Elizabeth. Mr. Davison is one of our leading farmers, and owns several farms in this township; has everything in good style, and is engaged in buying and selling the best grades of stock. He is a staunch Democrat.

JESSE EBERSOLE, retired farmer, Harbor Creek, was born in Mill Creek Township, Oct. 3, 1817, son of Joseph and Catherine (Wagner) Ebersole, natives of Pennsylvania and Virginia respectively. They were parents of four children—Betsey, who died at home in 1848; Mary, living on the homestead, wife of S. H. Brindle (had four children, two living, viz., Della, wife of Dr. A. Wood, of Erie, is a doctress, and John), Samuel E., another son, died in Girard Township, leaving three children—Catharine, Jessie and Clarence; Joseph J. deceased in Sept., 1831, and Jesse, our subject. Christian Ebersole, Joseph's father, was a pioneer of Erie Co., coming from Lancaster Co., in 1801, with his wife and 8 children. He first rented land of Squire Rees and subsequently bought a farm in Mill Creek Township, three miles east of Erie. The present house is located near the site of his old cabin, and the farm is now owned by his grandson, Jesse. He brought a pear seed from Lancaster Co., which he planted in 1801, on the farm now owned by our subject. This seed became a tree, which was grafted seven years later, and since it commenced to bear fruit has never failed. The old tree has been known to yield 60 bushels in one season; in 1872, it bore 28 bushels, in 1873, 26 bushels. Christian Ebersole died in his eightieth year, and his son, Joseph (father of our subject), died in his ninetieth year. Jesse Ebersole was married, Feb. 27, 1849, to Barbara, daughter of John Bargin, an old citizen. No children have been born to this union. Our subject has acted as Assessor and Assistant Assessor for several years, also County Auditor and Road Commissioner, and is at present filling the office of Township Auditor. He is an Elder in the Presbyterian Church and took a prominent part in the building of the new church edifice. He is a man of much influence and strict business habits, a pleasant, quiet citizen, who holds a substantial preference in the community.

MRS. ELIZABETH EBERSOLE, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in this township Sept. 14, 1830. She is a daughter of Frederick and Anna Mary (Kuhl) Ohlwiler, natives of Pennsylvania. They came to Erie Co. in 1827, and settled on the farm where Mrs. Ohlwiler now resides; she was the mother of 13 children, 10 surviving—Elizabeth, Jacob, Henry, Mary A., Isaac, John Q., Elias H., David, Frederick P. and Chas. The subject of this sketch was united in marriage, Mch. 11, 1858, with Joseph J., son of Joseph and Catherine Ebersole. No children were born to this union. Mr. Ebersole was an influential farmer and highly respected citizen of Harbor Creek. He was a member of the M. E. Church, Class Leader and Sabbath School Superintendent for about fifteen years, and served his township as School Director a number of years. He departed this life Sept. 30, 1881, leaving his widow in comfortable circumstances. She now resides on the farm near Moorheadville.

W. P. EDWARDS, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Oct. 27, 1842, at No. 27 Orchard street, New York City. He is a son of W. P., Sr., and Elizabeth (Charlock) Edwards, the former of whom was born in Connecticut Aug. 12, 1810, came to Erie Co. in 1837, and settled in Harbor Creek. There were 2 sons and 2 daughters in this family—Hannah M.; John C., who was a gunner on the flag ship Moose, died in Smithland, Ky., and is buried in the soldiers' cemetery in Indianapolis; Alice E., deceased in infancy, and Wm. P., the subject of this sketch. Mr. Edwards, Sr., departed this life Mch. 22, 1877. His widow died Oct. 25, 1883, at North East. W. P., Jr., was married, Mch. 27, 1872, to Ellen R., daughter of Adna and Elizabeth (Hinkley) Steele, natives of Tolland, Conn., and the parents of 2 daughters and 4 sons. Mr. Steele was born Nov. 5, 1818; came to this county in 1838, and settled on a farm 3 miles southwest of Harbor Creek, where our subject now resides. There is an old heirloom in this family, an ancient Bible printed in old type, containing the family record of the Edwards family, now one hundred and twelve years old. Mr. Edwards, though comparatively a young man, is one of the leading men of this township, in which he has served as Assessor, Judge of the Election, and is now County Auditor. He is a member of the Masonic order and K. of H. In politics, a Republican.

THOMAS ELLIOTT (deceased) was born in 1817, in Harbor Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., and was one of a family of 9 children. His father, who was a native of Ireland, came to this county in 1797, and settled in Harbor Creek Township. The subject of this sketch was united in marriage in 1843, with Maria C., a daughter of Ira and Grace (Douglass) Torray; 8 children blessed this union, viz., Jennett, wife of Wm. Gray, resides at Boston; Andrew, married to Abbie D., daughter of the Rev. G. W. Cleveland, of Harbor Creek (have two children—Ralph W. and Carroll C., in St. Paul, Minn.); Mary M., at home; Chas. M., died in 1879; Henry T., married to Sina Bristol (have one daughter, Grace); Thomas, Jr., who is in charge of the Nickel Plate Railroad Depot in this township; George M., at home; Grant, dying Jan. 28, 1870. Thomas Elliott, Sr., was a thriving farmer and a good citizen; he departed this life Nov. 9, 1864. His widow, a kind mother, still resides on the old homestead farm, which comprises 175 acres of ground pleasantly located on the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate Railroads.

JAMES FIRMAN, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Canada March 4, 1834, and was the youngest in the family consisting of Robert, Rebecca, Jane and himself. He came, when quite young, with his parents to the United States, locating at Erie. He was united in marriage March 10, 1859, with Mary M., daughter of Walter and Letitia Glenn, natives of Ireland. Seven children have been given them—Ida S. L., James L., Mary A., Anna M., Rebecca J., Henry W. and Robert J. Mr. Firman is now engaged in farming, having moved from Erie to his present place near Harbor Creek, which consists of 150 acres of land, located in a fertile part of this township. He is a thrifty farmer.

JOHN GITTING, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Berks County, Penn., in 1810, son of John and Elizabeth (Myers) Gitting, who reared a large family, viz.: Catherine (wife of A. Wenn, residing in Luzerne County), Henry (deceased, lived in Crawford County, Ind.), Mary (wife of J. Andrews, in Luzerne County), Mrs. Elizabeth Boliard (deceased), Henry, Anna (wife of G. Avery, of Waterford), Polly (wife of D. Kuhl, in Fairview Township), Peggy (a resident of Hillsdale, Mich.), Powell (married to Polly, daughter of Thomas Miller, Mill Creek, Erie Co., Penn.), Timothy (who was living in Michigan at the breaking-out of the war, enlisted, and died in the army), Sarah (wife of H. Mooney, a resident near Girard), and John (our subject). He was married, in 1833, to Susanah, daughter of Yost and Elizabeth (Orth) Kuhl. Following children have been born to this union—Caroline (wife of J. Neff, has seven children), Emeline (wife of A. Clark) and Josiah J. (who was born August 18, 1837, and married, in 1867, to Jennie Roland, and lives on the farm with his father, which is three and a half miles from Harbor Creek, and is well-watered and improved). They are thrifty farmers.

LEVI GORDON, retired farmer and blacksmith, Wesleyville, was born February 28, 1813, son of Solomon and Catherine (Swartzlenner) Gordon, natives of Scotland and Germany respectively, and the parents of six children—Peggie, wife of H. Wear, residing in Mahoning County, Ohio; Jesse, deceased, his widow lives near Meadville, Penn.; William, a resident of Austin Town, Ohio; Catherine, a widow; Samuel, resides in Crawford County, Penn.; Levi, the subject of this sketch; and Solomon, who died in Maryland in 1881. Levi was united in marriage, August, 1838, in Mill Creek Township, with Catharine, daughter of John Zook, both natives of Pennsylvania. A family of three children has blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Gordon—John S., married to Martha, daughter of David Chambers; Lucinda, wife of Joseph McDaniel, resides near Erie; and Fian-na, wife of Emmons Chambers, a son of Samuel Chambers, who resides at Moorheadville. Mr. Gordon has two farms, which are conducted by his son, and lives at Wesleyville.

JOHN W. HARDY, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born June 15, 1815, in Middlesex County, Mass., son of John and Mary (Clark) Hardy, who were the parents of 8 children. Their names are as follows: Sarah, wife of Henry Keek; Mary, deceased wife of Jonas Clark; Nancy, widow of Guy Loomis; P. F., a resident of Erie; Albert A., in Valparaiso, South America; John W., Parker F., also Clark. The subject of this sketch was married, November 11, 1845, to C. M., daughter of Abner and Martha Curtis. Three children have blessed this union—Roan C. (wife of William Kendle, has four children, Carrie, Albert, Melvin and John), Mark W. (married a Miss Tibbins, has two children, Charley and Blanche) George A. (married to Agnes Finn, has one child, Nettie). Mr. Hardy owns fifty-six acres of land, and lives on his father's old homestead, and is a well-to-do farmer.

ADAM HARMAN, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., in 1854, son of Christian and Agnes (Dick) Harman, who were parents of a family of eight, viz., Peter, married to Josephine Jones, have four children—Charles, Richard, Frank and Carrie; Charles, married to Barbara Jones, have five children—Agnes, Jacob, Joseph, George and Rosa; Christina, wife of B. Hines, have five children—Benjamin, Rosa, George, Jacob and Toney; George, married to Maggie Dicee, have two children—Annie and Michael; Eve, deceased, was Mrs. Moffatt, had one daughter, now living—Ella; Carrie, wife of C. Flatt, had three children, only one—Ella—surviving; Chrisanda, at home; and Adam, the subject of our sketch. He was united in marriage in 1878 with Julia Mutch, which union has resulted in three children—Clara J. (died young), Elbert and Carrie. Mr. Harman owns a good farm near Harbor Creek.

WILLIAM HENRY, son of Robert and Sarah Henry, and grandson of Robert M. Henry, was born on the banks of the river Bann, near Coleraine, county of Londonderry, Ireland, June 16, 1773. He had 5 brothers and 1 sister, whose name was Mary. The brothers were named respectively, Joseph, James, John, Robert and Jacob. Owing to the death of his father, the care of the family fell on William in early manhood. In 1799 or 1800, he came to America with his widowed mother and her children, and settled in the unbroken wilderness. Their first location was in East Mill Creek, on Tract No. 340, now owned by John Burton. After a few years, William sold this place and purchased a farm on reserve Tract No. 69, near the old Elliott farm and Cochran's (now Dinsmore's) Mills, and near the present southern limits of the city of Erie. In 1810, he sold this land, and purchased 300 acres in West Mill Creek, part of which has been known for many years as the Thomas H. Mohr farm. February 9, 1814, William Henry married a Miss Rebecca Humphrey, who died April 23, 1843, aged fifty-one years. In 1827, his mother died and was buried by the side of her daughter Mary, on the bank of Walnut Creek, on the farm of her fourth son, Robert Henry. Henry Halderman now owns the farm, and the graves remain undisturbed. In 1828, William sold the farm in West Mill Creek, and purchased 200 acres near Wesleyville, in Harbor Creek Township. In 1829, he moved onto this farm, and remained there until the date of his death, which occurred Sept. 27, 1846. William and Rebecca Henry were the parents of 7 children, 4 sons and 3 daughters, all of whom are now dead except Rebecca Jane, the youngest daughter, who married Phineas D. Flower, M. D., Dec. 8, 1853; for many years he has been a successful physician of Albion, Erie Co., Penn. Jane is the mother of 1 child, a daughter, named Macie, and one son. The names, ages and date of death of William Henry's children are as follows: Thomas, died March 4, 1842, aged eighteen years; Sarah, married Stephen Stuntz, and died in Fairview, Erie Co., Penn., Dec. 26, 1841; John, died March 25, 1841, aged twenty-three years; Mary, died July 17, 1842, aged eighteen years; William G. Henry, died Aug. 11, 1847; William Henry, died Sept. 27, 1846, aged sixty-three years, and was buried by the side of his wife and 5 children in the old burying-ground in Wesleyville.

ROBERT H. HENRY, the subject of this sketch, was born in West Mill Creek in 1816, and died in Erie, Penn., May 3, 1879. In early life, he acquired a good business education. He taught school for several years in the State of Kentucky, and afterward in his native county. Dec. 7, 1848, he was united in marriage with Miss Fanny, daughter of Thomas and Sibby Sterritt, of McKean, Erie Co., Penn. By this union 2 children, a son and daughter, were born. Clarence H. Henry, the son, was born Oct. 19, 1849; and Anna, the daughter, was born Dec. 30, 1854. After his marriage, Mr. Henry lived on the old homestead for a number of years, and ranked among the most intelligent and successful farmers in the county. He was one of the incorporators of the Harbor Creek Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and served as Secretary and Treasurer of the company continuously until a few months previous to his death. In 1855, he removed to Erie, and engaged extensively in the boot and shoe business for several years. He afterward engaged in the oil refining business, and later in the lime and cement business. At the time of his death, Mr. Henry owned a large interest in the Erie Lime & Cement Company. He was also at one time a member of the firm of Sheppard, Henry & Co., who owned a line of the finest and largest steam and sail vessels on the lakes. Mr. Henry and wife were members of the First Presbyterian Church in Erie for many years. He commenced life in humble circumstances, and was the architect of his own fortune. By industry and economy, he accumulated an ample estate. He was a man of the strictest integrity, and his urbane manners and genial disposition won him a large circle of friends. Clarence H. Henry was born in Harbor Creek, and educated in the Erie High School and the Erie Academy. Having acquired a good business education, he began business with his father in the Lime & Cement Company in 1873. He was also engaged as a clerk in office of the Erie County Mutual Insurance Company, of which his father was Secretary. He owns the old homestead in Harbor Creek, one of the largest and finest farms in the county. Like his father, he has always been identified with the Republican party. In 1873, Anna married John Little, and lives in the old city home on West Tenth street, Erie.

FRANK HENRY, for many years keeper of Presque Isle Beacon Range Light Station on the Channel Piers, at entrance of Erie Harbor, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Harbor Creek Township, Feb. 15, 1838, son of Robert and Susan (Hess) Henry, who were married in 1837. The former, of Scotch descent, was born in Colerain, County Londonderry, Ireland; came to America in 1798 or 1799, and lived continuously in Erie County until his death, which occurred Feb., 1847, in Harbor Creek, where his widow, who is a native of Lancaster Co., Penn., still resides. She is a Government pensioner, her husband having served in the war of 1812. Three children blessed this union, viz.: Mary, wife of Mandaville Wager, who have 3 children (Clara, Charles and Cora) and reside at Belle Valley; Frank, our subject; and Jane, wife of Richard Miller Bonnell, residing on the old Bonnell homestead on Gospel Hill, and have 2 children living—Willis M. and Frank Henry. Bertie is deceased. Our subject has been twice married, first in Oct., 1859, to Martha R. Long, of West Mill Creek, who bore him one son—Gerrett Smith, living with his grandmother; he is married and has a son, Robert, making the fourth generation who have lived on the old homestead since its purchase in 1825. His second marriage, Nov. 30, 1867, was with Elvira, daughter of Rev. George Frazier, of Girard, Trumbull Co., Ohio. They have 8 children, all living—Paul and Edith (twins), John Brown, Mary, Melvin and Mabel (twins) and Robert and Nellie (also twins). Mr. Henry's family home is in Wesleyville. He was a radical Abolitionist, and an active worker in the "Underground Railroad." Some of his U. G. R. sketches have been published from time to time in the county papers, and he has data enough on hand to fill a large volume. In 1859, he made arrangements to go with two others, A. May and A. Rolson, of Harbor Creek, and join John Brown in the invasion of Virginia. They were prevented from taking part in this famous raid by Capt. Brown striking at Harper's Ferry five days earlier than the time first agreed upon, otherwise their lives would have been sacrificed with Brown's little company on that eventful occasion.

W. H. HYKE, superintendent of the McCarter Stock Farm, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Canada in 1852, son of Cornelius and Elizabeth (Valier) Hyke, who had the following children: W. H. (our subject), Jerrad and Charles. Our subject received his early education in Canada, from whence his parents migrated to Erie Co., in 1865, settling in Erie City. He was united in marriage in April, 1879, with Anna Koehler, whose parents were natives of Holland and Lancaster Co., Penn. This union has been blessed with 3 daughters—Cora, Mabel and Agnes. Mr. Hyke is managing the McCarter Stock Farm, noted for its long ranges of finely appointed stables, the most complete in the country, and its fine breed of horses.

JAMES KILPATRICK, JR., farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born Sept. 3, 1823, son of James and Mary (McElheron) Kilpatrick, natives of the North of Ireland, who came to America in 1819, locating on the Wallace farm in Mill Creek Township; thence came to Harbor Creek, where he entered and cleared a farm on the Lake road, near Wesleyville, where he lived many years. Children—Mary, Sarah, Jane and James, Jr. Mr. Kilpatrick was a farmer, and a member of the Presbyterian Church at Erie. He departed this life in 1838, his widow following him in 1863. James, the subject of this sketch, is a single man. He has bought the Flowers estate, on which he has built a substantial residence, and where he and his two sisters reside.

EDWARD S. KOCHER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, is a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Shaner) Kocher, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1830, and settled in Jackson Township, Butler Co., Penn., where our subject was born June 3, 1858. There were 5 children born to Henry and Elizabeth (Shaner) Kocher, of whom our subject was the eldest. His mother dying, his father remarried, and had 4 children more; he is still a resident of Butler Co. Edward S., our subject, was united in marriage, Apr. 11, 1882, with Ellen, daughter of Hiram Picket, who bore him 1 child—Alice. Mr. Kocher engaged in teaching many years. He then learned practical surveying, which he has followed for the last 2 years. He intends to continue in this business either in this township or in any place where his services are needed. He resides on a pleasantly-located farm of 50 acres, about 2 miles from Harbor Creek, which was formerly the property of Wm. Althop.

CALVIN LEETE, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born in 1819 on the spot where his present farm now is, son of Simeon and Hannah (Neely) Leete, natives of Guilford, Conn., and Herkimer Co., N. Y., respectively. Simeon Leete came to this county in the fall of 1812, and bought the farm now owned by his son, which borders on the lake. From this point could have been seen during the war of 1812-15, the British ships watching the building of Perry's fleet in the harbor of Erie, hoping to destroy it in its passage out to the lake; the channel was so shallow that the British commander anticipated Perry would find much difficulty in getting his fleet through. Mr. Leete brought with him to this farm the apple seeds from which sprang a splendid orchard, the first grafted orchard in the county. Of his 6 children, 5 are still living—Amanda, wife of Jos. McCord; Alfred N., married to Harriet S. Hampson; Calvin, our subject; Susan; and Matilda, wife of James R. Moorhead; Ann, deceased, was married to P. Elliott. Mr. Simeon Leete departed this life aged seventy-five years. Calvin Leete married, in 1844, Eleanor Elliott, by whom he has had 5 children—Clara M. (wife of J. C. Moorhead), Georgiana E. (wife of T. S. Wagner), Calvin E., Lizzie S. and J. Neely. Mrs. Leete died in 1867, and our subject afterward married Emily, daughter of Thomas Moorhead. One child, Rebecca M., has blessed this union. Mr. Leete is one of the leading farmers in his township and county, growing choice farm seeds and breeding Jersey cattle and Shropshire Down sheep. He has a vineyard of choice fruit, also ponds supplied with German carp. He has served his township as School Director and in various other offices.

NATHANIEL D. LOWERY, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born May 17, 1799, in Erie Co., Penn., son of Wm. and Elizabeth (Dickey) Lowery, natives of Ireland and Pennsylvania respectively. They were the parents of 6 sons and 2 daughters, N. D. the only one living. Wm. Lowery was one of the pioneers of this county, coming in 1794. He located near North East, and was one of the sufferers of the Population Company, who caused so much litigation among the early settlers. He died in Westfield Township, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Our subject married, in 1836, Sally Slover. All the children born to this union are deceased. Mr. Lowery is now in his eighty-fifth year, and is the oldest citizen in this township. His wife died when seventy-five years old. He is a good neighbor, and has been an influential citizen in his day, serving for 15 years as Magistrate, and as School Director and Inspector in New York State.

WILLIAM MCGILL, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Chester Co., Penn., in 1822, son of Audley and Hannah (Eachus) McGill, also natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of 11 children, 7 now living—Audley; Malcomb; Owen; Thomas; Emeline, wife of A. Bell; Thurzy, and Wm., our subject. He was married in Jan., 1871, to Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew and Ruth (Cole) Camp. They have no children living near Harbor Creek. Mr. McGill owns 120 acres of land near Harbor Creek, finely located and well watered. He is one of the best citizens here; has served several terms as Township Auditor; is now acting as Road Commissioner.

W. W. MARKS, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in New York State May 24, 1827, son of Richard and Anna (Bristol) Marks, natives of the same State. They were the parents of 11 children, 4 now living—L. D., A. J., Lucretia and W. W. The last mentioned, subject of this sketch, was united in marriage, Jan. 1, 1852, with Mercy E., daughter of Uriah and Betsy (King) Root, also natives of the State of New York. Three children have blessed this union—Francis Wilbur, married to Jennie, daughter of Jerry Stelle (have 3 children); Louisa, wife of W. L. Cowden (have 2 children), and Wm. W., Jr. Mr. Marks lives on a good farm of well-improved land, consisting of 85 acres, half a mile from Harbor Creek. He is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry.

J. D. MEAD, farmer, P. O., Wesleyville was born in Warren Co., Penn., Oct. 14, 1832, son of David and Elizabeth (Bunnell) Mead, who were the parents of 3 children—Willis, living in Howard Co., Iowa (has 6 children, James E., Wm. W., Jehu E., Chas. A., Alice L. and Jane); J. D., the subject of this sketch, was united in marriage in 1854, with Eliza, daughter of Peter Kuhl, and a native of York Co., Penn. The result of this marriage has been 7 children, 5 surviving—Willis, Lewis, Rose, David and Daisy J. The paternal grandfather of our subject was an early settler in this county, locating in Greene Township in 1803. J. D. Mead is a practical farmer, owning 100 acres of land, and farming 160 more on shares. This is well stocked, and located in the northern part of Harbor Creek Township. He is a member of the Equitable Aid Society.

O. MILLER, Postmaster of Moorheadville, was born Apr. 14, 1814, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y. His parents were natives of Connecticut and Vermont respectively, and came to Pennsylvania in 1822, locating in Waterford for a short time, then settling in Mill Creek Township, near Erie. Three of their 9 children are living, namely: Viola, now Mrs. Nichols.

in Milwaukee, Wis.; Lydia, wife of H. O. Talmage, and O. Miller, the subject of our sketch. He was married in 1836 to Eunice A. Delmadge, of Canada, who bore him 4 children—Chas. W., who enlisted in the 145th P. V. I., serving to the end of the war; Hamlet J., who enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., and died during the late war; James enlisted in the navy, died in Memphis, Tenn.; Emily, wife of J. Dunn, of Erie. Mrs. Miller, departed this life in 1847. Our subject was next united in marriage, Dec. 28, 1848, with Laura L., daughter of Henry Wadsworth, and had 8 children, 6 living—Frank E., Amanda (dying in infancy); Rollo O. (died when twelve years old); Anna Maria, wife of J. B. Sawtelle (has 1 child, Bertha); Clary W., wife of David R. Sawtelle (has 1 child, Ralph Wadsworth); Edward R., an operator for the U. P. R. R. in Idaho; Eva, wife of Geo. B. Wallace; Laura B., at home. For a number of years he carried on the boot and shoe business at Erie, but came to Harbor Creek in 1873, where he has since remained. He and his family are members of the M. E. Church.

CHAS. G. MILLER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, fifth child in the family of Michael Miller, was born in 1830, in Germany, and came to America in 1848, settling in Erie, where he resided until 1851, when he went to Sherman, N. Y. He received his naturalization papers Oct., 1856, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and came to Harbor Creek. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1858, with Livonia M., daughter of Ella and Polly (Green) Cowden. She has borne him 4 children—Earl C., Wm. E., Columbia L. and Chas. G., Jr., all residing at home. Mr. Miller is a shoe-maker by trade, and worked at this occupation until 1879, when he commenced farming. He is one of the substantial citizens of the township, and has served as School Director 3 years; Treasurer of the Board; and as Tax Collector 1 year. He is a fine old German gentleman, a Spiritualist in belief, a Republican in politics.

DR. MARK MILTON MOORE. The subject of this sketch, the eldest of 10 children, 9 sons and 1 daughter, was born in Mantua, Portage Co., Ohio, Sept. 29, 1818. On the father's side he is of Scottish descent, his paternal ancestor being one of three brothers who came to America at an early period of its colonial history, for mining purposes, and settled in Connecticut. The mining business was unsuccessful, and the brothers separated, one remaining in Connecticut, one going to New Hampshire, and the other to Pennsylvania. His great-grandfather, Joseph Moore, was a Revolutionary soldier, and as a prisoner of war died before the struggle closed, on board of a British prison-ship in New York Harbor. Among the ancient family names are Joseph, Eli, Roger, Dwight, Benjamin, John and Samuel. His maternal grandmother, on the father's side, was also of Scottish descent, and her name was Gillett. On his mother's side, his great-grandfather, Keyes, was born in Plymouth, Mass.; his grandfather, Amaziah, in Boston, and his mother, Betsy, in Ontario Co., N. Y. His grandmother's name was Crafts. His grandfather, Samuel, came to Mantua, Portage Co., Ohio, in 1806; his father, Samuel, Jr., being at the time thirteen years of age. Northern Ohio was then an almost unbroken forest, filled with savage beasts and still more savage men. At the age of fourteen, Samuel, Jr., became an expert at hunting deer and wild turkeys, and often his mother's larder was well supplied by his skill, from the forest, which otherwise would be empty and the family have gone hungry to bed. Schools were unknown, and yet he managed to obtain the rudiments of a good education, and by the use of a circulating library became an ardent reader of history. In the war of 1812, he entered the army and served till peace was declared, spending most of the time in the Maumee country and in the vicinity of Cleveland. In 1816, he first met at a neighbor's, Miss Betsey Keyse, who, as a matter of neighborly kindness had come from Auburn to care for the sick, and early in 1817 they were married. Of the 10 children born to them, all grew up to years of maturity, and 7 of the number yet live. Homer H., the second in the order of their birth, after completing an academic course of study and teaching in a Kentucky high school for two years, was received into the Erie conference of the M. E. Church in 1846; was transferred to Kansas in 1857, in the midst of the border war, that he might aid in securing that territory to freedom, and in 1861 entered the army as Chaplain of the Third Kansas Regiment; as War Correspondent of the New York Tribune, Philadelphia Press, and other papers; as Superintendent of education for Florida; and as editor of the Jacksonville Herald. During the period of reconstruction, he was in the midst of some thrilling scenes. At his own request he was discharged from the service in 1865, and entered the ministry in the Erie conference. He was the first to move in the matter of securing a site on Chautauqua Lake for camp meeting purposes, and the place selected has become of world-wide fame as the Assembly Grounds. As a trustee, lecturer, pastor, and editor for 10 years on the Herald staff, and reporter, he has ever been closely identified with all its interests. Dr. Amaziah, after finishing an academic course of study, entered the office of Dr. Trask, of Hiram, Ohio, as a student of medicine; graduated from the Cleveland Medical College, and engaged in the successful practice of medicine. In 1862, he entered the army as Captain, and with broken health as the result of exposure and hard service, was mustered out with honor in 1864. The daughter, Elizabeth, is the wife of Rev. Geo. Fairbanks, the successful pastor of the Congregational Church at Parkman, Ohio. Samuel died at the age of twenty-two, but he lived long enough to give evidence that he possessed elocutionary powers of a high order. Probably no other member of the family equaled him in mental ability, and he was the very soul of purity, truth and honor. Halsey Gillett, whose bent of mind was the business of farming, died of a liver difficulty when a little past twenty-one. Oliver Francis, at the age of twenty-four died of typhoid fever in Kansas. Dr. Mortimer G., besides being a thoroughly well read and skillful physician, possesses fine powers as an orator. On the temperance platform he has proved himself to be a ready and eloquent advocate. His reading and scholarship have taken a wide range, and speculative philosophy is a favorite study. He commenced the successful practice of medicine in Trumbull Co., Ohio, but for some years past has had his office in Cleveland. Horace L., after some years of study in the Hiram College, under President Garfield, went to Kansas and commenced, in 1860, the study of law in the office of Gen. J. H. Lane; in 1861, he joined the Kansas Second Regiment, and went to the front. He was in the bloody battle of Wilson Creek, but escaped unhurt. Promoted to a Colonelcy for gallant conduct, he was mustered out of the service in 1865. He has since commanded a regiment of Kansas troops under Gen. Sheridan, in Indian warfare. In business matters since the war, he has been very successful; has dabbled some in politics, as a matter of recreation, and as a stump speaker is very effective, his addresses being characterized by the fullness of the information they give. Walter W. occupies the old homestead and observes the steady sober ways of a farmer, much respected for his integrity and honor. We now return to Mark Milton Moore, the subject of this sketch. He enjoyed but limited educational advantages, except such as the poor common school of those early times afforded. Clearing heavily timbered land, cultivating the stumpy soil and gathering the harvests was the business of those days for boys, and especially so for the eldest of a group of 10. At school exhibitions, as an easy and graceful declaimer he had no equal, but there was no one present that could see in him the elements of the natural orator he is. Among the poor farmers, with large families, the great question was bread for the children, and not the graces of an education. It is not likely that the thought entered that neighborhood for at least a quarter of a century, that stalwart boys were made for any purpose except to handle the ax, the spade and the scythe. But he was often at his uncle's (Dr. Jason Moore), and from his conversation he early imbibed a taste for the study of medicine. Also, when eighteen, he became a pronounced Christian, and his gifts and zeal brought him prominently before the public, and every one said he was destined for the pulpit. But he finished learning his trade, married Mary, daughter of Simeon Sheldon, whose wife, the daughter of Judge Elias Harmon, was the first white child born in Mantua, Portage Co. This wife died Aug. 10, 1847, leaving a son—Sheldon M. At the early age of sixteen he entered the army, in 1861, as a private in the 11th Penn. Reg., and after seeing much service under McClellan, in Virginia; in Tennessee, under Hooker, and marching to the sea under Sherman, he was put into the veteran corps and mustered out of service late in 1865. For the past fifteen years he has been engineer of the P. & E. R. R., and is regarded as one of the boldest and most careful engineers on the road. It was soon after the death of his first wife that Dr. M. M. Moore returned to his first love, the study of medicine, and married Miss Mary, daughter of Wait Bassett, of Connecticut. Mary, wife of John Chambers, of Bradford; Lucretia, deceased, and Emery, a train dispatcher on the N. & E. R. R., were the issue of this marriage. The second Mrs. Moore died May 26, 1864, and he was subsequently married to Julia A., the daughter of Chauncey Wood, a native of Vermont, and for many years a resident of Garrettsville, Ohio, where he died in 1865. She died suddenly Nov. 19, 1883, and our subject was left alone and in sorrow, with not much of life remaining but his wonted courage and fortitude. Dr. Moore is richly endowed with all the elements that qualify a man for public life; nowhere more than in the sick room is he at home; there his presence, his words of good cheer, his sympathetic bearing, inspire confidence and hope. Between himself and the families he visits, there generally exists the ties of the strongest friendship. As a practitioner he has been very successful. His library of medical works, pamphlets and periodicals, is large and richly furnished. As much as ever in life he continues a hard and unremitting study, and whatever he learns from reading or from his practice, his strong memory retains. Some 25 years ago he became a resident of Wesleyville, and has ever taken a lively interest in all that would promote its welfare. He acted for many years as Postmaster (his daughter, Mary, doing the business), and School Director, and in no capacity has he failed in the discharge of duty. He has never had a law suit, and, as a physician, has never failed in his attentions to the poor and friendless. Though thrice married, he was either skillful in his selection of a wife, or fortunate, for all were excellent women. The following resolutions refer to the last deceased wife:

Erie City Dispatch, Nov. 20, 1883, contained this notice:

DEATH OF MRS. DR. MOORE.—Mrs. Julia A., wife of Dr. M. M. Moore, died very suddenly of heart disease at her home in Wesleyville at a late hour Sunday night. The evening was passed in cheerful conversation with some friends and in her usual health. Some hours after retiring, her husband was awakened by her heavy breathing, and at once called for assistance, but Mrs. Moore was then unconscious and died a few moments afterward. Her maiden name was Wood and she was a native of Garrettsville, Portage Co., Ohio, where she has brothers and sisters now living. She was a faithful wife, a devoted friend and a kind neighbor. She was for many years a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and a beneficiary member of the Wesleyville Equitable Aid Union. The funeral services will be conducted according to the impressive usages of that order.

Erie City Dispatch, Nov. 23, 1883, contained this notice:

LAI D TO REST—THE BURIAL OF MRS. DR. MOORE AT WESLEYVILLE.—The funeral rites over the remains of the wife of Dr. M. M. Moore were witnessed Tuesday by one of the largest concourses of people that ever assembled at Wesleyville, the Doctor's residence overflowing with friends who came to pay a last tribute of respect to her whom they knew and esteemed during her residence in that community. Rev. Mr. Collier, pastor of the Wesleyville M. E. Church, Rev. Geo. W. Cleaveland, of the Harbor Creek Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the Erie Simpson M. E. Church, all spoke sympathetic words, calculated to comfort those whom Mrs. Moore's unexpected death bereaved, referring to the record of a life-time spent in doing good, the memory of which will grow more sacred as time passes on. The services, conducted according to the Equitable Aid Union's ritual, were very impressive, and as the casket disappeared from view all left the Wesleyville churchyard feeling that one of earth's noblest daughters had been taken away.

Others than Erie County families mourn Mrs. Moore's death. As Miss Julia Wood she lived in Garrettsville, Ohio, in early life, and also in Cleveland. She was widely known through a large section of Ohio, and many relatives are now residents of that State.

DEATH OF SISTER JULIA A. MOORE.—At a regular meeting of the Wesleyville Union, No. 385, E. A. U., held Nov. 26, 1883, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Great Architect of the universe to rend the mystic chain which, since our birth, has bound us together, and to remove one golden link in the person of Sister and Vice President Julia A. Moore, and

WHEREAS, It is but just that a fitting recognition of her many virtues be had, therefore be it

Resolved, By Wesleyville Union, No. 385, E. A. U.; that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for the beloved sister who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of Julia A. Moore, this Union laments the loss of a sister who was ever ready to proffer the hand of aid and the voice of sympathy to the needy and distressed of this fraternity; an active member of this Union, whose utmost endeavors were exerted for its welfare and prosperity; a friend and companion who was dear to us all; a lady whose upright and noble life was a standard of emulation to her fellow-beings.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Union be extended to her family in their affliction.

Resolved, That in token of respect for the family of our deceased sister, the chair of the Vice President be draped in mourning during the remainder of her unexpired term.

Resolved, That the Union chamber be draped for the period of 30 days.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of this Union, and a copy thereof transmitted to the family of our deceased sister, to the E. A. U. Advocate, and to three of the English newspapers of Erie.

JOSEPH M. MOORHEAD, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Nov., 1816, in this township. He is a son of Col. and Eliza (McCord) Moorhead, who were among the pioneers of this township, and were the parents of 7 children—Joseph, our subject; Catherine A., Thomas, Wm., Elizabeth, Jane and James. Joseph the oldest in this family was married in 1843, to Harriet, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Scott, and has had the following children—Robert S., Clerk of the court at Erie; Mary, wife of A. Bachus (have 4 children, Chas., Scott, Hattie N. and Louisa); Bell, wife of E. J. Dodge (have 3 children, Mary, Allise and Anna, twins); Charles, married to Miss Johnson; one son, Harry, is a clerk in the Pacific & Atlantic Railroad office at Albuquerque, N. M.; and Annah. Mr. Moorhead is one of the successful farmers of this township and is living on the Lake road 2½ miles east of Harbor Creek.

THOMAS MOORHEAD, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born in Moorheadville, this township, June 28, 1819, son of James and Eliza (McCord) Moorhead. They were the parents of 7 children—Joseph M., Catherine, wife of Joseph McCord, a builder, and formerly a Director in the college at Oxford, Ohio; Elizabeth, wife of Lucius Couse (have 2 children, Mary and Norman); Jane, wife of G. W. F. Sherwin (have 4 children) Thomas, Wm. M., and James A., living on the old homestead, married to Julia E. Baldwin, Sept. 18, 1862 (have five children—Fred B., Rose E., McCord B., Helen S. and Mabel J.). Our subject married on Apr. 2, 1851, S. Maria, daughter of Noah and Sarah (Clark) Dada, of Northampton, Mass. The children born to this union are 5—Frank, Elizabeth, wife of Chas. Leet, has one daughter, and resides on the East road; Florence; Harriet a teacher at Erie; Edward T. at home and Alice. Mr. Moorhead owns a fine farm of well-improved land on the Buffalo road.

JAMES R. MOORHEAD, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born Apr. 27, 1820, in Harbor Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn. He is a son of Robert and Jane (McCreary) Moorhead. Robert Moorhead was born in Sept., 1787, in Lancaster Co., Penn. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was at Erie. He came to Erie Co. in 1805, along with his father 4 brothers and 3 sisters, and settled upon land bought by his father in 1800, and where our subject, his only son, now lives. James R. Moorhead was united in marriage, Oct. 4, 1842, with Matilda, daughter of S. Leet; she was born in this township on Nov. 13, 1823; her father came to Erie Co. in 1812; 4 children blessed their union—R. Simeon (deceased), Jane Mc., married Sept. 20, 1883; Dwight C. Shaver, a telegrapher, residing at Westfield, N. Y.; Adella N. and Susan Leet. Mr. Moorhead has served as Road Commissioner several terms, and is one of the leading farmers in this township. He owns a fine, well-watered farm with good buildings. He is descended from one of the five Moorhead brothers, who came from Lancaster Co., Penn., and settled in an early day in this township. He is a Mason, Lodge No. 399, of N. E., is also connected with the Presbyterian Church of Harbor Creek.

WM. M. MOORHEAD, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born June 25, 1826, in this township, the third son in the family of 7 children born to James and Eliza (McCord) Moorhead. The father of the former was a pioneer, often shot at by the Indians with their bows and arrows. He and his wife died when over ninety years of age. James Moorhead was a teamster in the war of 1812, and also helped to get Perry's fleet out of port. He received a pension. Our subject was married, Aug. 30, 1852, to Sarah Frances, daughter of Chas. and Sarah (Buckle) Kendrick, natives of England. The latter, aged eighty-six, now resides with our subject; 4 children were born to this union—Wm. K., Edith Sarah, Ralph E. and James Miller, all at home. Mr. Moorhead, in boring for oil, struck a well of gas which he has been burning 12 years; it is one of the best interests in the township. He is a thrifty farmer and resides on one of the first cleared farms in the county. This is probably the site of an Indian's old encampment, as he has turned up skeletons and vessels of pottery. Our subject has served as School Director and Treasurer of the township. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN D. and SAMUEL T. MOORHEAD, farmers, P. O. Moorheadville, were born in this township, and are sons of John and Eleanor (Laughhead) Moorhead, of Lancaster, Penn., who came to Erie Co., Oct., 1805, settling in Harbor Creek. There were several families of Moorheads, part of whom came here in 1800. They were the parents of 6 children, 3 surviving—Samuel T., John D. and Eliza A. Samuel T. married, in 1863, his first wife, Margaret M., daughter of Joseph Y. Moorhead, Sr., who was a son of Thomas Moorhead, an early pioneer in this county. His second wife was Eliza, daughter of Joseph McCord. No children were born to either union. John D. Moorhead, born Aug. 24, 1829, was married, in 1866, to Mary R., daughter of Joseph Y. Moorhead, Sr.; one child, Joseph Y., Jr., born in 1873, has blessed this union. The brothers, Samuel and John, are practical farmers, residing on their father's old homestead in the eastern part of Harbor Creek. This is a fine tract of land, well watered and improved. Their homes are beautiful, ornamental mansions, separated by no fences, shaded by trees, and having a grand view. Nature furnishes them with their light and fuel by a natural gas well. They also own 100 acres of land in North East Township, Erie Co., Penn.

JOHN NEFF, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in 1827, in the State of New York, a son of John Frederick and Phebe (Rust) Neff, to whom were born 9 children, 6 living—Jacob and Samuel, in Erie; Frederick, in Lancaster Co., Penn.; Fanny now Mrs. Richard, in Erie; Mary, now Mrs. Gilbert, in Madison Co., Ohio; and John, the subject of this sketch. He was married in 1856 to Caroline, daughter of John Gitting. They have 7 children—Caroline, wife of E. Cass; Edward J., Wm. A., Etta, Lewis F., Cora S. and Anna—all at home. Mr. Neff is a good farmer, and owns 196 acres of land 10 miles east of Erie. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

ANNA MARY OHLWILER, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in July, 1811, in York Co., Penn., daughter of Yost and Elizabeth Kuhl, who were the parents of the following children: Peter (deceased), Daniel (deceased); Catharine, now Mrs. Stover, residing in Fairview; Peggy (deceased), wife of Mr. Beeringer, and the mother of 5 children; Betsey, Susannah Getting (deceased) and Anna Mary. Our subject married, Oct. 22, 1829, in Erie Co., Frederick Ohlwiler, of Lancaster Co., Penn., who was born in the year 1796, died March 13, 1877, and had 13 children, viz.: Elizabeth, now Mrs. Ebersole; Jacob, in Colorado; Henry, who has 6 children—John, Chas. F., Mary D., May J., Sarah and Eliza J.; Mary A., widow of D. M. Chambers, has 3 children—Elizabeth (deceased), Frederick and Edith; Isaac, in Colorado; William (deceased), Homer (deceased), an infant (deceased); John, married to Margaret Love, have 2 children—Edith and Nellie; Elias H., in Erie, married to Catherine Fair, have 1 son—Frederick J.; David, married Amelia Her, have 2 sons—Lawrence and Ralph—they live in Bradford, Penn.; Frederick P., also living in the same place, married to Sarah Kennocott; Charles, also in Bradford. Mrs. Ohlwiler came here with her husband at an early day. She is an intelligent old lady, who had the misfortune to lose her eyesight soon after her husband's death. She is owner of quite a handsome property, MRS. SARAH ORTON, P. O. Wesleyville, born in 1799, is the first white child born in Harbor Creek Township, daughter of Amasa and Tryphena Prindle, natives of Connecticut and Massachusetts respectively, who had 13 children, 6 living—Eliza, now Mrs. Walker, in California; Charles; Jesse; Jane, now Mrs. Philip, a widow, in Illinois; Chauncey and Mrs. Sarah Orton, our subject. Mr. Prindle was by trade a shoe-maker and carrier, but mainly followed farming. He was a highly esteemed pioneer of Erie Co., settling in Harbor Creek in 1777, when it was covered with forest. The first school was kept by a Mr. Patterson, near Moorheadville. Sarah, our subject, attended school kept by a Miss Clarissa Cain, but there were but few children to go to school in those days. She married Mr. Orton in 1818, and commenced married life on the farm where she yet resides, which was then a wilderness. Three children were born to this union—Bronson, Miranda E. and Miranda D.—all deceased. Mr. Orton was a private in the war of 1812, and a pioneer of this county. In 1845, when in the prime of life, he was killed at a "log-rolling," one of the occupations of the early settlers. Mrs. Orton, though now in her eighty-fifth year, is wonderfully well-preserved in mind and body, and bids fair to live many years yet. Her farm was conducted by Jonathan Pierce, who married her daughter, Miranda. After her decease, he was again married, this time, Feb. 13, 1877, to Lucinda, daughter of Zebina and Almema (Bindle) Wright, by whom he has 2 children—Theron A. and Emeline.

H. H. PARKER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Mill Creek Township, Jan., 1841, son of Dean and Mary A. (Shottuck) Parker, the former of whom was a native of Vermont, and the latter of Pennsylvania. They were the parents of 8 children, 6 now living—Sarah A., now Mrs. E. Dunham; James A.; Frank D.; Mary S., deceased, aged fourteen years; Major B.; Emily E., wife of Eugene Hill; James A., deceased, aged twenty-one, and H. H., our subject. He was united in marriage, Oct. 5, 1876, with Tillie, daughter of Perry and Mary (Ewing) Foote. They have no children. Mr. Parker now owns the farm formerly belonging to Gideon Wagoner, comprising 120 acres of well-improved and watered land, located on the Buffalo road. He is a man of taste as well as a good farmer, and uses improved agricultural implements, and has fine stock.

W. E. PHERRIN, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Nov. 12, 1824; son of Wm. and Mary (Love) Pherrin, who had 4 children, viz., Margaret, now Mrs. McCreary; Mariah, wife of Simeon Hymier; Mrs. Sarah Jane McCulley (deceased); and W. E., the subject of this sketch. He was married in 1853 to Eliza Bohner. To this union were born 5 children, viz., Caroline, wife of Frank Fagan (has three children, Lizzie, John and Mable); Maggie P., wife of John Whipple; R. B., married to Alice McDaniel; W. E., Jr., married to Annie A. Burke of Buffalo, N. Y., and Emma at home. Mr. Pherrin has 125 acres of tillable land in a good location. He is one of Harbor Creek's best farmers and has lived in Erie Co. since 1832.

C. W. RAYMOND, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in Warsaw, Genesee (now Wyoming) Co., N. Y.; son of Paul and Maryett (Williams) Raymond; natives of New York State. They had 5 children—C. W., N. L., A. T., F. D., and P. The subject of this sketch was united in marriage in 1857, with Urana, daughter of Erastus Ramsdell, natives of Connecticut of English descent. Four children were born to this union—Arthur N., Emily E., Mate L. and Katy B. After marriage, Mr. Raymond located at North East, then went to Laona, N. Y., where he began the trade of a millwright, which occupation he has since followed. His next move was to Venango and from there to Harbor Creek Township, where he has been engaged in farming. Mr. Raymond began with nothing, but he now owns a neat, well-regulated farm and has a comfortable competency. He is a good citizen. In politics, a Republican.

FREDERICK M. REICHERT, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, is a native of Germany, born in 1819. His parents—Jacob and Mary Reichert came to America in 1847, landing in New York on the 1st of May, and came to this county via canal-boat and steamer. Our subject was united in marriage in 1850 with Amelia Bush, and has 4 children—Julius married to Catherine Stewart (have 2 children—Mary and Jessie); Albert, married to Letitia Glenn (have 1 child—John Edward); Joseph and Matilda. Mr. Reichert has a good farm of 63 acres, located in this township on the Lake road about 12 miles east of Erie.

WM. A. ROBERTS, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Aug. 10, 1826, son of Edward and Mary Ann (Skinner) Roberts, natives of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively. The former was born in 1797, and does not seem more than sixty years of age, his eyesight is good and he is a lively, entertaining conversationalist. He came to Erie, half frozen, Jan. 4, 1840; he has had 11 children, 7 of whom are living—Charles Hiram; Wm.; Henry; Oliver; Diana, wife of J. Adams (have 3 children); Emeline, wife of C. Ward (have 2 children); and Wm. A., our subject. He was united in marriage, Feb. 13, 1851, with Lucy, daughter of Joseph and Ann Bailey, of Ohio. Three children blessed this union—John E., married to Ella A. Nichols; Addo, married to Anna G. Dunn; and Olive, wife of Geo. Bachus who is a son of John Backus. Mr. Roberts is one of our prominent farmers; he has 320 acres of splendid land located 3 miles from Harbor Creek railroad station. He served in the late war as a wagoner in the 11th Regt., and was honorably discharged in November, 1862.

JOHN ROUYER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, is a native of France, born in the year 1820, and was the only one of the nine children born to John and Catherine (Simonen) Rouyer, who came to America. He arrived in this country in 1849, and for about seven years remained at Utica, N. Y. He was married, in 1856, to Ellen, daughter of Nicholas and Marien Gregoire, by whom he had four children—John N., who is agent for L. S. & M. S. R. R. at Moorheads, Erie Co., Penn.; Mary A., wife of Ira Chellis; Sarah E. and Oscar F. Mr. Rouyer learned wagon-making in his native land, which business he followed here. He is a well-read man, and has an intelligent family. Mr. Rouyer is a good citizen, and has been engaged in farming in this township for nine years, in which time he has doubled the value of his property.

CHRISTIAN SCHULTZ, farmer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, is a native of Germany, born in 1821, and was married there to Sophia Zachach, who bore him six children—Edward, married to Amanda Davidson, have one child—Mary; Lewis, married to Dora Goodwin; Ella, wife of L. Bartlett, have two children—Edward and Nellie. The deceased are Charles, Hettie and Mary, who died in America. Our subject came to America in 1846. He was by trade a cloth manufacturer, and after coming to this county, worked for six months for Mabaffy & Brewster, then for eight years in Cass' Woolen Factory. He was drafted during the late war, and served nine months in Company F, One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia. He is a fine old German gentleman, leading a retired life, and living now with his son-in-law near Cass' factory, having sold his farm to him. His sons, farmers, live near him.

L. P. SEARLS, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Vermont, February 11, 1814, and came with his parents to Erie County in 1828. They bought some land of Jacob S. Turner near Harbor Creek Station, and there passed the remainder of their lives. Mr. Searls, Sr., was a farmer by occupation; he was an eye-witness of the battle of Plattsburg during the war of 1812, though not a participant. He and his wife departed this life aged ninety-six and ninety-five respectively. They were parents of the following children: Almada, deceased, wife of J. Powell; Owella, deceased, wife of E. Owne, had two children—Ellen and Wallace; Lavonia, deceased, wife of H. Chipman, had six children—Alonzo, Webster, Mary, John, Victoria and Emily, deceased; Alonzo, died previous to the removal of the family to Erie; Abigail, twice married, first to Francis Dustin, by whom she had two children—Almada and Francis—who are residing in St. Louis; then to Mr. Ellis, by whom she has three children—Helen, at St. Joseph, Mich., Ulalia, White Water, Mich., and Edgar, at Rochester, N. Y.; Mary, deceased, wife of J. Wright, had one son—Charles; Paulina, deceased, wife of P. D. Bryant, had three children; and L. P., the subject of this sketch. He was married, in 1836, to Sarah, daughter of Solomon Ellis, and has three children—Royal B., married to Adelaide Stuyvesant, a relative of the Stuyvesants of New York, has four children—Myrtle, Ettie, Mary A. and William, married to Alice Ross; and Frank D., married to Dora Parker. Mrs. L. P. Searls departed this life May 17, 1882. Our subject now resides with a married son, who looks after the farm. He engaged in steamboating for about three years, most of the time on the "Erie," and had several hairbreadth escapes from death. Once, in a collision with the old "Dan Webster," and another time by fire, when he and the wheelman, Augustus Tiller, launched a boat, and, though it capsized, managed to save nine lives. He has served as Tax Collector; is a member of the Baptist Church.

F. E. SEWELL, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, is a son of Robert and Caroline (Baker) Sewell, who were married in 1846; the former a son of Ebenezer Sewell, born in 1779, died in 1870, leaving a family Bible over seventy-five years old, a cane and a curiously carved powder-horn over 100 years old. Mrs. Caroline (Baker) Sewell was a daughter of Septimus and Polly (Baldwin) Baker, natives of Connecticut, and the parents of seven children, viz.: Caroline; Juliette, wife of J. Olds; Mrs. Lydia A. Cole; Samuel Baker, Mary Beers and Lucius are deceased, and Carrie. Robert Sewell departed this life November 27, 1868, leaving a family of seven—Marshall D., who, while hunting buffaloes near Double Mountains, Texas, was killed by the Apaches Indians February 16, 1877; Mary L., at home; Charles B.; Francis E., our subject; Emmer S., and Albert F., living. Willis G. died in infancy. Mr. Sewell was a valuable citizen, and left his family well provided for. His widow and children live on a fine farm near Wesleyville, managed by Francis E. They are an intelligent family. Two of the sons belong to the Equitable Aid Society, and another to the A. O. U. W.

W. L. SHAWK, physician and surgeon, Harbor Creek, was born at New Lisbon, Ohio, December 2, 1861, son of George W. and Eunis (Wetmore) Shawk, natives of Ohio and New York States respectively. The former is a practical mechanic, living at Cleveland, and has two children—Pet and William. Our subject, who was educated at Cleveland, graduating from the Central High School, began the study of medicine in 1879 under Dr. Thayer; took a course in the Medical College at Cleveland, where he received his diploma. He had his diploma registered and acknowledged at Philadelphia. He passed a competitors' examination, and stood highest as house physician. He also passed a strict board examination. The Doctor commenced to practice his profession with Dr. Herd, of North East, but seeing an opening at Harbor Creek, he started in an office by himself. He has spared no time nor money in preparing himself for his work, and is a promising young man of much ability. His office is in the Hunes' Building, Harbor Creek.

WM. W. SMITH, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Sept. 14, 1814, son of Peter and Sophia (Egner) Smith, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn., who were parents of 1 son and 3 daughters. Peter Smith died in 1818, and in 1821 his widow was married to Jacob Charles, by whom she had 6 daughters, all living but 1. She came to Erie Co. in 1829, settled in Harbor Creek, and died in 1880, at the home of her son, Wm. W. Smith. W. W. has been twice married; on the first occasion, to Eliza, daughter of John Riblet, who died in 1873, without issue. Our subject is a farmer by occupation, but he left his farm, having built a fine residence at Harbor Creek the year previous to the death of his wife. He has been Constable of Harbor Creek many years, and still occupies the same position. He was subsequently united in marriage with Mrs. Cornelia (Steele) Clark, a widow with 2 children—Flora D., wife of L. W. Smith, a native of Pennsylvania, engaged in the manufacture of dynamite at Toronto, Canada, and J. F. Clark, a book-keeper. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of James and Naomi (Davis) Stelle, the latter of whom, a native of Pennsylvania, died in 1867; the former, a fine looking old gentleman of eighty years of age, is a resident of Edinboro. He was a tanner and currier by trade, but followed farming for many years. Four of his 6 children are living—Cornelia, now Mrs. John Applebee; Maria, Jeremiah and Albert. Mr. James Stelle is a kind parent, and a man genial in his manner, who gave his children an advantage of education, a worthy old gentleman.

IRVING N. STARK, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Oct. 16, 1851, in Pennsylvania, son of C. N. and Dora (Turner) Stark, who had a family of 7 children, 4 now living—Edwin E., at Cedar Falls, Iowa (2 children, Walter and Etma); Rosamon E., wife of V. Fouts (have 1 child, Mary); Stuckley, in Nebraska, and Irving N. He was married Feb. 13, 1876, to Mary E., daughter of Thomas and Maria Smart. This union has been blessed with 1 child—Thomas N. Mr. Stark resides near the M. E. Church, 2 miles from the village of Harbor Creek.

WM. STARK STINSON, farmer and blacksmith, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born at North East, Erie Co., Penn., Feb. 27, 1819, son of James Stinson, who married Melissa Curtis, and had 5 children, viz., Wm. Stark, Erastus S., Mary Jane, Jeremiah P. and Charilla. Mary Jane died in her youth; Erastus S. married Ann Walker, moved to Wisconsin, and died, leaving 2 children, a son—Frank—and Clara, wife of B. Morris, and mother of 1 girl, Maud; Jeremiah P. married Irene Whitney, resides at Westfield, Wis. (have 2 children, Mary and Clara. James Stinson was a native of New Hampshire, his wife a native of New York State. They came to Harbor Creek in 1819, where Melissa, his wife, died. He then married Mary, daughter of Thomas Greenwood, who bore him 2 children, a daughter—Sarah—and Joseph G., who married Catharine Tupper (have 4 children, Mary G., Albert E., Margarette S. and Fred). Mr. James Stinson was a carpenter and joiner by trade, which occupation he followed several years in this township, to which he came in 1815, and where he spent the balance of his life, dying April 29, 1845. Wm. Stark, our subject, has never married. He acquired a good education and learned the blacksmith's trade of Levi Bell, at which he worked many years. He is now leading a retired life with his sisters on his father's old homestead. They attend the Presbyterian Church. He is politically a Democrat. The following article, taken from an old newspaper, serves to tell something of the grandmother of our subject: "Died—In Dunbarton, Dec. 10, 1843, Mrs. Jennett Stinson in her ninety-third year. She was a daughter of Samuel Allison, one of the Scotch emigrants of 1720. She was born in Londonderry, and married James Stinson, also a Scotch-Irish descendant, and with him made a location in Dunbarton or Stark's Town, about 1775. Her husband died at the age of eighty-two, in 1828. He was an industrious husbandman, and sustained through life the character of an honest man, a good neighbor and citizen. Mrs. Stinson survived him nearly 16 years, and received a pension for his Revolutionary services. He was one of Stark's regiment at Bunker Hill. She was a very strong-minded, sensible woman, had a powerful memory, and her conversation respecting the early events of her long life were very interesting, and she retained her mind to the last. Her death was occasioned by one of the colds which have visited our region for the past season with such fatal effect. She maintained a character for kindness and hospitality, which will be long remembered by a numerous circle of mourning relatives."

James Stinson, the father of our subject, was, on Aug. 20, 1821, commissioned by Gov. George Gregg, of Pennsylvania, as Captain of the 5th Company, 104th Reg. Penn. Militia.

JOHN STRUCKER, farmer, P. O. Erie, is a native of Switzerland, born in the year 1829. There he was united in marriage in 1853, and came to America in 1862, locating first at Sterrettania, thence coming to Harbor Creek Township, where he bought a farm. He rents a farm of 125 acres of fine land. To Mr. and Mrs. Strucker has been born a family of 11 children, viz., John, Samuel, Godfrey, Frederick, Frank, William, Charles, Rose, Mary and Alice. One child, Annie, died in infancy.

EDWARD E. TOMPKINS, seaman, P. O. Wesleyville, was born Nov. 27, 1852, in Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of Capt. E. H. and Emily A. (Wells) Tompkins, natives of Delaware and Allegany Co's., N. Y., respectively. They were married Dec. 23, 1847, and had 5 children, 2 living, viz., Frank H., a teacher, born Mar. 21, 1866, and married to Elizabeth Butler, by whom he has a son, Fred; and Edward E., the subject of our sketch, a fine young man, spending the most of his life at sea, and following the example set by his father, Capt. E. H. Tompkins, who came to Erie Co. with his parents when fifteen years of age. Early in life he adopted a seafaring vocation, engaging first on a whaler; he then lived for awhile in the Sandwich Islands; subsequently entered the merchants' service, and during the 7 years so employed sailed around the globe 2 or 3 times. He then returned to his family (who, not hearing from him, had supposed him dead), and taught for a time. Afterward, he engaged in steamboating, first as a wheelsman, but was promoted rapidly to mate, and finally to be Captain, a position of much honor in those days. He was as successful as well as an honorable man, educating his sailors, and performing many deeds of valor on the high seas. One bitter cold winter, about 20 years ago, the inhabitants of Superior City, who had no railroad connections, and were many miles from civilization, were reduced to the verge of starvation; when the dispatches describing their condition were brought by an Indian, Capt. Tompkins, then in command of the Lady Elgin, volunteered to go to their assistance. He successfully performed this deed of mercy, and was subsequently presented by the grateful citizens with a valuable gold watch, chain and anchor. He was warmly interested, and did much for the educational cause; was an honored member of a Masonic Lodge and of the P. of H., and his virtues will long be remembered by those with whom he had any dealings.

AARON M. TWITCHELL, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born Feb., 1840, in Harbor Creek Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of Aaron and Elvira (Townsend) Twitchell, who were the parents of 2 children—Aaron M., our subject, and Joshua, who died Mar. 8, 1849, aged fifteen. Mr. Twitchell, Sr., came to Erie Co. in an early day, settling in Harbor Creek Township, where he cleared the farm on which his widow and son now reside. He departed this life Mar. 2, 1871. The subject of this sketch was married, in 1874, to Rachel Lyons, and has 2 children—Rachel Elvira and Franklin Aaron. Mr. Twitchell has charge of the homestead farm, located on the Lake Shore & Buffalo road. He is now an invalid, suffering from a nervous disorder.

H. N. WADSWORTH, farmer and wagon-maker, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born June 29, 1840, in this township, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Noble) Wadsworth. The latter, one of 6 children born to her parents—Catharine, Paul, Huldy J., Wm. S., Maryett and Elizabeth. She was born in New York State in 1807, and has been thrice married. On the first occasion to Salmon Jones Allen, who left no issue; then to the father of our subject, by whom she had 4 children—William A., deceased; James W., during the late war enlisted in the 41st Ohio Reg., dying in the hospital at Nashville, Tenn., a sacrifice for his country; Horace N., our subject; and Elizabeth Jane, deceased. Mrs. Wadsworth, now Mrs. Clark, a healthy looking old lady, strong constitutionally and mentally, resides near her son. H. N., our subject, was married, April 15, 1873, to Sarah N., daughter of John and Clarissa (Griffin) Slade (the former familiarly known as Deacon Slade), who were natives of New York. They had a family of 10 children. Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth have been the parents of 3 children—Elizabeth C., Nellie L. and James W. Mr. Wadsworth served during the late rebellion, enlisting in 1864, in the navy under Capt. M. W. Caldwell, on the U. S. Steamer R. R. Cuyler. He participated in the siege of Fort Fisher, and was mustered out at the close of the war, July 1, 1865, received an honorable discharge and returned to his home. He has served as Assessor and Assistant Assessor for two years in Harbor Creek Township.

C. C. WALKER, farmer, P. O. Harbor Creek, was born in 1823 in Harbor Creek Township, son of Samuel and Sarah (Case) Walker, natives of New York, who located in this township in 1820, and were among the early settlers of Erie Co. Of their 4 children, 2 lived to maturity, but our subject is now the only one surviving. He has been twice married; on the first occasion to Mary Clark. There was no issue to this union. His second marriage was in 1860 with Elizabeth, daughter of Jesse and Mary (Cummings) Wheelock, by whom he has had 4 children—May L. (wife of F. J. Walker, of the firm of Walker & Gallagher, printers, Erie), Homer O., Samuel J. and Willie Grant, who are at home. Mr. Walker resides on the homestead farm. He owns 130 acres of valuable land, with a nice wood lot, on the lake shore. He is a quiet, self-sustaining old gentleman, independent in religion and politics.

LE BŒUF TOWNSHIP.

HIRAM BEAMAN (deceased) was born July 1, 1812, at Westminster, Mass. He was united in marriage, June 20, 1840, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., with Polly Mack, born Jan. 12, 1820, in Antwerp, Jefferson Co., N. Y., daughter of Charmis and Patty (McCloud) Mack. They were the parents of 9 children, 7 living. To Mr. and Mrs. Beaman have been born Cassius C. (deceased), Agnes and Eugene. Mr. Beaman came to Erie Co., and reclaimed from the wilderness 130 acres of land. He was a Republican in politics, and departed this life May 21, 1883.

Mill Village, of Scotch-Irish descent, was born in Ireland Sept. 29, 1834, son of James and Mary (Finch) Boyd, also natives of Ireland, the former born Dec., 1796, and the latter in 1808. Mrs. Boyd died in 1878. Mr. Boyd, Sr., is a farmer and mechanic, and the most of his life worked for Ool. Close, at Drumbarnard Castle, and now in his eighty-sixth year enjoys good health, but is not required to work, receiving his salary from the Colonel as in former years. Our subject emigrated to America in the year 1859, settling in LeBœuf Township, where, Aug. 3, 1860, he was married to Isabella Patten, who came to this county with her parents, settling in this township. Nine children have been given to this union, 4 boys and 5 girls, viz., Sarah A., William J., Mary, Letitia, Thomas, John, Maria, David and Alice. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, by perseverance, industry and economy, have acquired an ordinarily cultivated farm of 77 acres. Mr. Boyd is a Democrat in politics, but at town meetings tries to vote for the best man. He has held the office of School Director for 3 years, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife was formerly a member of the United Presbyterian denomination.

S. B. BROOKS, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Union City, was born Aug. 26, 1833, near Panama, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., son of James and Rhoda (Williams) Brooks, who came to this county in 1856. Our subject married, in 1838, Cynthia Taylor, born in Warren Co., Penn., in 1819, by whom he had the following children: Sydney, Dolly J. (wife of L. S. Gillette), and Gibson, twins; Charles (deceased) and Cynthia, wife of Dr. L. J. King, of Michigan (also twins); A. T.; Carrie M., wife of S. J. Fisher, of N. Y., and an infant (deceased). Mr. Stranahan, by trade, is a shoe-maker and tanner, and has worked at the same a number of years. Mrs. Stranahan departed this life June 13, 1876. Mr. Stranahan's oldest son, Sydney B., was born April 1, 1841. He is also a mechanic, and was married to Margaret E. Avery, born Jan. 6, 1847, by whom he has had 4 children—Perry G., Benjamin J., Leonard A. and Dolly M. Our subject owns 120 acres of land, and he and son pride themselves on their good stock and fine facilities for dairying, which they make a specialty.

A. L. TILDEN, County Commissioner and farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Aug. 21, 1834, at Nelson, Ohio, the oldest son of Charles and Adeline (King) Tilden; the former a native of Herkimer Co., N. Y., of English descent; the latter was born in Berkshire Co., Mass., of German lineage. Our subject acquired his education in the common schools of Portage Co., and at Nelson Academy and Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn. When eighteen years old, he started in life for himself; traveled through the lumber regions of Michigan, being employed at various points in the erection of mills and manufacturing of lumber, etc. Mr. Tilden came to Erie Co. in 1863, and 2 years later embarked in the lumber trade, in which he continued until 1857, when all he had accumulated was swept away in the panic of that year. He next accepted a position in the oil regions as manager for C. A. Dean & Co. and the Cleveland and Oil Creek Co. While in their employ he had by speculation made $5,000, which in 1862 he invested in oil, which he shipped, but it was consumed by fire before it reached its destination, and for the third time he had to start afresh, almost penniless. Our subject was then employed as fuel agent by the A. & G. W. R. R. Co. until 1866, when he bought his present farm in LeBœuf, which consists of 140 acres of well-improved land. July 3, 1861, he married Mary C., daughter of William and Florilla (Baker) Wheeler, of English origin, and a native of New York. To this union have been born W. W., Charles A. (attending the Waterford Academy) and Mary C. Mr. Tilden is Democratic in politics; was elected County Commissioner in 1879, and re-elected in 1881, and is now serving his sixth year; is a member of the K. of H.; is a prominent member of the Grange. His grandfather, Daniel S. Tilden, was among the first settlers of Portage Co., Ohio, and at one time owned one-third of Hiram.

JOSEPH WALDRON, farmer, P. O. Mill Village, was born Oct. 7, 1821, in Bloomfield Township, Crawford Co. Penn., and is the eldest son born to Levi B. and Isabel Alexander Waldron, natives of York State and Ireland respectively. They had a family of 6 children (5 surviving) and were early settlers of this county. Our subject was married in LeBœuf Township, in 1856, to Maria, daughter of John and Sallie (Webster) Willey. She was born in this township in 1830; she was the mother of 5 children—H. L., a farmer; W. S., teaching; Ada K., E. J., and Bert, at home. Mrs. Waldron died Oct. 18, 1881. Mr. Waldron is a successful self made man, and owns 286 acres of well-improved land, and makes raising fine stock a specialty; he has filled various township offices, such as Auditor, Assessor, Inspector of Elections and School Director. Politically, he is a Democrat.

J. L. WATERHOUSE, farmer and lumberman, P. O. Mill Village, was born July 12, 1822, in Armstrong, now Clarion Co., Penn., son of William and Rebecca (Isherwood) Waterhouse, natives of England and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father of the latter was a sea Captain; they settled in LeBœuf, Erie Co., in 1832, and were the parents of 11 children, 4 surviving. Our subject was united in marriage, Feb., 1852, with Lydia M. Rhodes, born June 23, 1823, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Young) Rhodes. Five children have been born to this union—T. W.; Alice, widow of Harry Porter; Amy L.; J. H., and Emma R., who is teaching school in this township. Mr. Waterhouse owns 225 acres of well-improved land; his wife 13 acres in Crawford Co., Penn. Our subject followed lumbering 15 years, making frequent trips to Pittsburgh, by water. He has held many local offices; was for 10 years Justice of the Peace; 6 years Road Commissioner; 4 years School Director; 3 years Constable, and Collector from 1862 to 1864. Mr. Waterhouse is politically a Republican.

T. W. WATERHOUSE, lumberman, P. O. Mill Village, was born Feb. 24, 1853, son of J. L. and Lydia M. (Rhodes) Waterhouse. He was united in marriage, Oct. 23, 1873, with

L. E. Maxwell, born Aug. 3, 1854, a daughter of Frank and Rachel Williams, early settlers of Erie County. One daughter, Georgia, has blessed this union. Mr. Waterhouse is engaged in lumbering, and has a steam saw and shingle mill in LeBœuf Township. He is also a manufacturer of bee hives.

CHARLES M. WHEELER, lumberman and farmer, P. O. LeBœuf, was born at New Ipswich, Hillsboro Co., N. H., Jan. 29, 1826, a son of Stephen and Hannah (Stratton) Wheeler, whose ancestry were from Scotland. C. M. Wheeler came to LeBœuf Township in 1852, and settled on what was then called the Moravian Grant. He was united in marriage, Dec. 6, 1854, with Sarah J. Clark, born July 9, 1835, at Townsend, Middlesex Co., Mass., daughter of Eben and Betsy (Bills) Clark; 6 sons have been born to this union, 5 now living—Edward E., Walter S., Orton H., Fred C. and Arthur C. Mrs. Wheeler's great-grandfather Clark served as Captain in the Revolutionary war, and at one time was one of Washington's body guards. Her brother, Charles Clark is an extensive contractor, residing at Boston, Mass. Mr. Wheeler is a large land holder in this county, and owns a large tract in Marshall Co., Minn. He has held several offices in his own town; is politically a Republican. His father served several terms in the New Hampshire Legislature; politically a Whig; and his grandfather, Seth Wheeler, held a commission and served in the war of the Revolution.

ERASTUS V. ALLEN, minister, United Brethren, P. O. McKean, was born in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., July 8, 1812, son of Abram Allen; born in 1768, who married Mary McComber, born in 1777, both natives of Vermont, and who had a family of 11 children, of whom Trueman, Erastus V., Martin, Austin A., Abram, Solomon and Mary are now living; Mrs. Abram Allen died in 1830. By his second wife Abram Allen was the parent of 4 children, those now living being Mary, Chauncey and William. Abram Allen served in the war of 1812, on the New York frontier; about the year 1814 he came to Erie Co., and located in Mill Creek Township, removing to McKean in 1820, where he took up 50 acres of wild land. He died in 1859, his wife having preceded him by six years. Our subject married Sarah Dodge, born June 20, 1812, daughter of Tyler and Esther (Graves) Dodge, all natives of New York State. By this marriage there were 8 children, of whom Erastus A., Lorenzo S. and Rufus S. are deceased, and Esther A., Mary A., Nathan T., Rufus A. and John W. are living. Of this family Erastus A., Nathan T., Rufus A. and John W. were soldiers in the war of the rebellion; Erastus was Corporal in Co. I, 145th P. V. I., and being mortally wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, July 2, 1863, died on the 4th. Nathan and Rufus enlisted in the 11th P. V. I., and John in the 192d, all served from 1862-63, till the close of the war. Our subject's first wife died July 28, 1869, and Mr. Allen married Mrs. Maria Wiswell, a widow, born March 18, 1820; she is daughter of Christopher and Maria (Horn) Fronce, all natives of New York State. There is no family by this last union. Mr. Allen read law in 1828, in the office of John Riddell, Erie; in 1858, he entered the ministry of the United Brethren denomination, and is now connected with the Western Reserve Conference. He enlisted August 15, 1862, in Co. K, 145th Reg. P. V. I., and took part in the battles of Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. In a skirmish at Coffee Hill, Va., he was injured by a shell, and sent to the hospital at Philadelphia, where he received his discharge March 4, 1864. Mr. Allen is by trade a carpenter. In politics, he is a Greenbacker.

SYLVESTER B. ALLEN, blacksmith, Middleboro, was born in North East Tp. Dec. 25, 1841; son of Austin A. and May (Bird) Allen, the former born June 4, 1817, and the latter on Sept. 25, 1820, a daughter of Josh and Amy (Law) Bird, who had a family of 8 children—Sylvester G., Mary L., Lucy A., Ellen F., Ida S. and Elmer A., still surviving. Austin A. Allen is a blacksmith by trade; he was elected Burgess of Middleboro in 1883; he is a son of Abram Allen, mentioned in E. V. Allen's sketch. Our subject married, October 21, 1861, Helen Smith, born Feb., 1843, daughter of Alfred and Mary A. (Agling) Smith. By this union there is 1 child—Alfred S., born July 8, 1864. Mr. Allen is a member of the Town Council of Middleboro. In April, 1861, he volunteered in Reed's Guards, Col. McLane, for three months, but saw no service. The following September, he re-enlisted in Co. I, 9th N. Y. Cavalry, Army of the Potomac. He was but a short time in the service, when he rose to the rank of Second Lieutenant. He participated in the siege of Yorktown, and battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; he received his discharge October, 1863. Mr. Allen in politics is a Republican; he is an adherent of the M. E. Church, and is Superintendent of the Sabbath school at Middleboro.

SQUIRE C. BEAN, cheese manufacturer, Middleboro, was born in Summit Township, Erie Co., May 16, 1860, and is a son of William A. and Hulda C. (Norris) Bean, the former born Dec. 2, 1817, and the latter in 1829; natives of Nashville, Tenn., and Lawrenceburg, Ind., respectively; they were the parents of 11 children—W. Pierce and Royal W., deceased, and Byron B., Erie A., Helen L., Reginald F., Kittie R., Squire C., Ellsworth M., Alfaretta C. and Leoni L., living. William A. Bean is a farmer residing in Summit Township, and is the owner of two valuable farms, comprising 170 acres. The home farm contains 110, is well stocked and has superior farm buildings erected thereon. Mr. Bean has been Justice of the Peace for five years, and a School Director of Summit Township for many years; in politics, he is a Democrat. Our subject commenced the manufacture of cheese in 1879 at Middleboro Steam Cheese Factory, with 22 patrons, and turned out 50,000 lbs. of cheese that year. His patrons now number 30, and the products for the season, Nov., 1883, were 80,000 lbs. The business is prospering, the factory is turning out a superior brand.

JOHN H. BLOUNT, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Erie City May 28, 1843, son of James and Elizabeth (Paul) Blount, the former born Aug. 19, 1821; the latter is a daughter of William Paul, all natives of Derbyshire, England. They had a family of 8 children, of whom John H., Thomas A., Ellen J. and Emmanuel survive. Of this family, John H. and Thomas A. were in the U. S. Navy during the war of the rebellion. James Blount came to America in 1840, first locating in the city of Erie. In 1857, his wife died, and he next married Elizabeth Garland. By this union there were 3 children—Lavina and James now living. Mr. Blount is by trade a blacksmith, and resides in McKean Tp. He is a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Taylor) Blount, also natives of Derbyshire, England, where the former still resides. John H. Blount, our subject, married Sept. 10, 1867, Elizabeth Smith, born Nov. 28, 1844, daughter of Conrad and Christine (Knodel) Smith, the former born Dec. 5, 1805, in Hesse-Cassel, died Feb. 26, 1879, in McKean Township, and the latter, born May 5, 1822, in Wurtemberg, Germany; by this union there were 6 children—Reinhardt, born Sept. 10, 1868; Henrietta, Sept. 18, 1870; Clarence L., Dec. 23, 1871; Henry C., November 27, 1873; Archie, Nov. 21, 1878, died January 18, 1879, and Arthur Garfield, born Dec. 5, 1880. In early life, Mr. Blount was a sailor on the lakes. and Aug. 28, 1863, he volunteered in the navy, was rated a first-class seaman, and appointed to the gunboat Silver Lake (Capt. Coyle) of the Gulf Squadron, under Commodore Fitch. His vessel operated chiefly on the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers, and took part in the repulse of Hood from Nashville and Clarksville, Tenn. In Dec., 1863, he was transferred to the hospital-ship Fitch, and served until the close of the war as Hospital Steward. Mr. Blount is by trade a worker in tin, copper and sheet iron, and plies his trade in connection with his farming. His well-stocked farm is situated four miles from Middleboro, and comprises sixty-three acres. He is an Odd Fellow; in politics, an Independent Republican.

THOMAS A. BLOUNT, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Erie City, Sept. 11, 1845, son of James and Elizabeth (Paul) Blount, mentioned in John H. Blount's biography. Thomas A. Blount married, May 25, 1867, Anna E. Irvine, born June 7, 1844, daughter of William and Dorothy (Wallace) Irvine, the former born in Tyrone Co., Ireland, Dec. 9, 1804; came to America in 1808; the latter was a native of New York State. Of this family, Albert was a soldier in the war of the rebellion. In Aug., 1862, he enlisted in Co. B, 145th Reg. P. V. I.; served as Corporal, and was wounded at the battle of Cold Harbor, Va. He went to the Philadelphia Hospital, and upon his return to the army he was made Sergeant, and was commissioned as Second Lieutenant at the close of the war. He is now a merchant at Tidioute, Penn. Robert G. Dunn has held several of the most honorable township offices. He is a prominent member of the U. P. Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

JAMES DUNN, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in McKean Township July 28, 1819, son of Oliver and Anna (Gray) Dunn, mentioned in Robert G. Dunn's biography. James Dunn married, February 18, 1851, Sarah Gray, born December 2, 1824, daughter of Francis, B. and Jane (Gray) Gray, all natives of this State. By this union there are 2 children—George L., born July 9, 1860, and Lee J., born Dec. 4, 1861. The former is a merchant in Erie, and the latter engaged in business in Fair Co., Neb., where he owns land. James Dunn is a prominent citizen of McKean. In 1852, he was elected Road Commissioner; has been re-elected at various periods since that date, and still holds the office. He was elected Justice of the Peace in 1868, and served 10 years. Upon his re-election for a third term, he resigned. He has served 3 terms as School Director, and has been Auditor, Inspector and Judge of Elections. In 1873, he was elected County Director of the Poor, and served 1 term. Mr. Dunn was a delegate to the first Republican Convention ever held in the county, which was in 1858. He and his wife are adherents of the U. P. Church.

MARY S. DUNN, P. O. McKean, was born in Westmoreland Co., this State, Feb. 8, 1828, and is a daughter of William and Mary (Reed) Stewart, natives of Franklin Co., Penn., who had a family of 10 children, viz., Andrew, John, Elizabeth, Jane, Eliza, Reed and Robert, deceased; and James L., William and Mary S. now living. William Stewart, the elder, died May 15, 1850, his wife preceding him April 22, 1844. He was a son of William Laud and Jane (Burns) Stewart, natives of Ireland and Pennsylvania respectively. Mary Reed was a daughter of Andrew and Mary Reed, the former a native of Ireland. Our subject was married, June 2, 1851, to David Dunn, born July 11, 1824, son of Oliver and Anna (Gray) Dunn, mentioned in the biography of R. G. Dunn. Four children were born to this union, viz., Reed S., Emma L., Edwin L. and Blanche L. David Dunn was a prominent citizen of McKean Township, and filled some of its offices, among which were Road Commissioner and School Director. He was a member of the U. P. Church, of which he was for some time a Trustee. He died Nov. 7, 1870.

LEVI W. EASTMAN, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Addison Co., Vt., May 6, 1842, son of Levi Eastman, born on the estate of Gen. Ethan Allen, Vermont, Dec. 14, 1802, who married Martha Bailey (née Warner), a widow, born May 16, 1798, and had a family of 7 children, of whom Sarah, Ruby, Ezra T., Dameron, Elizabeth and Levi W. are now living. Ruby married Dr. George Carnahan, who was a Surgeon in the Union army. They resided in Missouri during the war. Dr. Carnahan is now dead. Levi Eastman, the elder, came to Erie Co. in 1858, and settled in Elk Creek Township; he now resides with his son, Levi W.; Martha Bailey, his wife, died Dec. 21, 1872. Levi W. Eastman, our subject, married, April 9, 1866, Elizabeth Phillips, born Dec. 6, 1845, daughter of James and Emily (Kimble) Phillips, mentioned in Wm. W. Phillips' biography. By this union there were 7 children, viz., Claude W., born Feb. 8, 1867; Clarence B., Nov. 5, 1869; Minnie E., May 15, 1870; Leonora, Sept. 18, 1872; Archie B., July 21, 1875; Ella L., Jan. 5, 1879, and Roy, Feb. 16, 1884. Mr. Eastman volunteered Jan. 6, 1863, in Co. I, 14th Penn. Cavalry as private. This regiment was in the 2d Brigade, 1st Division under Maj. Gen. W. B. Averell, and operated in the Department of Southwestern Virginia. Private Eastman took part in the following engagements, from May 10, 1864: Wytheville, Newmarket, Lynchburg, Liberty, Salem and Bunker Hill, Va., Point of Rocks, Md., Snicker's Gap, Newtown and Martinsburg, Va., Clear Spring, Md., Moorfield and Cedar Creek, Va. He was promoted to the rank of Sergeant, Feb. 5, 1865, his last engagement being at Ashley's Gap, Feb. 19. Mr. Eastman now owns a fine farm, comprising 95 acres, situated 2 miles from Middleboro on the Erie & Edinboro road. In politics, he is a Republican.

DANIEL HARRISON, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Chenango Co., N. Y., Feb. 22, 1818, son of Thomas Harrison, born May 14, 1787, and married, May 7, 1807, to Annie Clark, born Aug. 11, 1788, both natives of New York State. They had a family of 11 children—Daniel, Lucy E. and Mary being now the only survivors. Thomas Harrison came to Erie Co. about the year 1823, and settled in McKean Township when it was a wilderness and wild animals abounded. The number of antlers in his son's possession bear ample testimony of his skill as a marksman. He died Oct. 17, 1861, his widow following him April 28, 1869. During the stirring days of the war of 1812, Mr. Harrison sacrificed his property in Canada rather than fight with the British against his native country. He returned to New York State, where he remained until he came to this county. Daniel Harrison, our subject, was united in marriage, Dec. 29, 1853, with Laura, daughter of Jonas and Amy (Slater) Stafford, natives of New York State. She was born May 19, 1836, and died Dec. 22, 1875. By this marriage there were 6 children, viz., William H., born March 24, 1855, died November 11, 1865; Malvina, died April 28, 1857; Lillian, born February 2, died June 11, 1859; Sidney, born Aug. 15, 1860; Nellie V., born April 28, 1863; Clifton D., born Oct. 11, 1869. Nellie Viola married, Feb. 15, 1881, Thomas McArdle, born in Crawford Co. Aug. 16, 1857. They have a son—Daniel A., born March 16, 1882. Sidney married, Aug. 23, 1882, Mary Henbeck, born Jan. 10, 1864. Mr. Harrison now owns the paternal homestead of 225 acres. Originally the farm contained 174 acres, which Daniel assisted his father to reclaim from the wilderness. It is situated within 2 miles of Middleboro; has excellent farm buildings and is well stocked. Politically, Mr. Harrison is a Republican.

SAMUEL W. HAUCK, merchant and Postmaster, Sterrettania, was born in McKean Township March 3, 1844, son of Laurence and Margaret (Strouce) Hauck, the former born Aug. 17, 1805, and the latter born June 5, 1806, both natives of Germany. They were the parents of 10 children; those living are Julia, John, Charles, Catharine, Celina, Mary, Samuel W. and Joseph. John was a private in the 145th Reg. P. V. I. Mrs. Margaret Hauck died Sept. 30, 1850. Laurence Hauck married his second wife, Mrs. Laura Harrison, a widow, and daughter of Ransom Jenkins; one daughter, Louisa, has resulted from this union. Mr. L. Hauck came to America in 1833, and took up 130 acres of land in McKean Township, which he cleared and converted into a comfortable homestead. He died Oct. 18, 1864; his widow still survives. Our subject, Samuel W. Hauck, was united in marriage, Dec. 26, 1872, with Cecelia L., daughter of Lewis and Mary (Perry) Moore, natives of Detroit, Mich., the former born in 1785, and the latter in 1808. Mrs. Hauck was born in Ohio, Nov. 27, 1850; 6 children have resulted from this union—Jennie G., born Jan. 12, 1874; Harry C., born May 12, 1875; Frank J., born Feb. 28, 1877; Matilda J., born April 15, 1879; Albert E., born March 13, 1881, and Mary May, born June 13, 1883. Mr. Hauck was appointed Postmaster in 1879; he has a well-patronized store, stocked with a choice assortment of general merchandise, the only one on the west side of the township. In religion, he is a Roman Catholic; in politics, a Republican.

JOSEPH H. HAUCK, carpenter and joiner and cheese manufacturer, Sterrettania, was born in McKean Township March 17, 1851, son of Laurence and Margaret (Strouce) Hauck (mentioned in the biography of S. W. Hauck). On Nov. 13, 1877, Mr. Hauck married Lizzie Lang, born July 14, 1857, daughter of Joseph and Barbara (Corell) Lang, of Sterrettania. By this union, there are 2 children—George H., born March 14, 1879, and Charles L., born May 1, 1883. In 1881, Mr. Hauck erected the Sterrettania Steam Cheese Factory, and commenced the manufacture of cheese in May. The business is steadily increasing, the factory numbering about twenty patrons and producing 350 pounds of prime merchantable cheese daily. The vats are of the most approved pattern, and the machinery of excellent description. The main building is 24x80, two stories high, with boiler and engine room, 20x24, and contains, in addition to the cheese department, one of the finest cider mills in Erie Co. This mill in ordinary seasons is capable of producing 75 barrels of cider per day. The whole enterprise is a decided acquisition to Sterrettania and creditable to its proprietor. Mr. Hauck erected a great many extensive buildings in this township.

DANIEL HAYFORD, JR., farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Maine Jan. 19, 1826, and is a son of Daniel and Ruth (Drown) Hayford, the latter a daughter of John and Sarah (Ayres) Drown, all natives of New Hampshire. They were the parents of 3 children, viz., Sarah (deceased), Daniel and John H. The latter was a soldier in the Mexican war, and subsequently served in the U. S. Navy. Daniel Hayford, Sr., died Feb. 21, 1840. Our subject came to Erie Co. in 1860, and had previously married Esther Boice, born Sept. 29, 1828, daughter of Robert and Esther Boice, all natives of this State. By this union there were 11 children, viz., Lynn (deceased), Olive, George, John, Daniel, Sophronia, Sarah, Jennie, Lincoln, Madison and Minnie. Mrs. Esther Hayford died Oct. 7, 1882, and Mr. Hayford was united in marriage with Mrs. Elizabeth Vorse, born Jan. 29, 1821, daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth (Hatch) Drown (mentioned in John Drown's biography), and widow of Asa M. Vorse, a native of New York State, born June 4, 1814, died Apr. 10, 1881. His children were Mercy E. and Mary J., both deceased. Daniel Hayford resides in Middleboro, adjoining to which he owns farm property. He has taken some part in township affairs; is Republican in politics.

SIDNEY W. JARVIS, by occupation a farmer, and who now resides in McKean Township, was born in Kingsville, Ohio, July 12, 1840, and is a son of Sidney S. and Clarrisa (Boyington) Jarvis, the former born in New York State Dec. 17, 1808, and the latter born in Vermont in 1815. They were the parents of 3 children—Sophronia E., Sidney W. and John W. The eldest, Sophronia E., is the wife of William Shepard and resides at Kingsville, Ohio; Sidney W. and John W. were soldiers in the war of the rebellion. The former served as a member of Co. K, 98th Reg., P. V. I., of the 6th Corps, Army of the Potomac. The latter, John W., enlisted in the 145th P. V. I. 2d Corps, Army of the Potomac. Shortly after the battle of Fredricksburg, Va., he was by sickness incapacitated from further service. Sidney S. Jarvis came to Erie Co. in the spring of 1842, and purchased 100 acres of land, mostly in forest, near the Waterford line, in McKean Township, which, with the aid of his sons, he cleared and converted into a fine homestead. He left his home in McKean in 1872, and went to reside in Kingsville, Ohio, where he died Jan. 1, 1874. His widow now lives in the home which they purchased there. Sidney W. Jarvis engaged in school teaching in 1857, and continued at that occupation at various periods until 1877. On March 19, 1873, Mr. Jarvis, the subject of this sketch, married Miss Celia A. Webb, born at Johnstonville, Ohio, July 9, 1838, daughter of John L. and Julia (Alling) Webb, the former born in Ohio, June 7, 1816, and the latter in Connecticut in 1809. By this union there are 4 children—Clara L., born July 31, 1874; Celia A., born Sept. 23, 1876; Linnie E., born Nov. 14, 1878; and Bertha M., born May 11, 1880. Mr. Jarvis now owns and resides on 52 acres of the home farm. In politics, he is a Republican.

CHESTER H. LILLIE, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Conneaut Township Oct. 19, 1842, son of Benjamin and Betsy A. (Preston) Lillie, both natives of New York State, and the parents of 9 children; the surviving are Sylvester, Chester H., Lucinda, Betsy A., Alzada, Amanda and Alonzo. Franklin, Sylvester and Chester were soldiers during the late war. Franklin volunteered as a private in Co. B, 145th Reg. P. V. I., and at the battle of Spottsylvania Court House, Va., was captured and taken to Libby Prison, Richmond, and eventually sent to the prison pen at Andersonville, Ga., where he died in the fall of 1864. Sylvester served three years in the 8d Reg. Penn. Cav., Army of the Potomac, re-enlisting in March, 1865. Benjamin Lillie died Jan. 18, 1866, and his widow May 12, 1881. Chester H. Lillie, our subject, was married April 12, 1866, to Sallie Newell, born March 23, 1840, daughter of William and Mary A. (Pollock) Newell, natives of this State; 7 children were born to this union—Franklin B., born Jan. 7, 1867, died Aug. 9, 1869; Carrie A., March 6, died May 4, 1869; Mary L., Aug. 1, 1870; Orville C., Sept. 16, 1872; Matilda F., Oct. 20, 1874; William H., Nov. 25, 1876, and Emma, born December 12, 1879, died Dec. 4, 1880. Mr. Lillie enlisted Aug. 15, 1862, in Co. B, 145th Reg., P. V. I., and served in the 2d Corps, Army of the Potomac, until the close of the war. At the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862, he was severely wounded by a rifle shot in the breast, which incapacitated him from further service until the fall of 1863, when, returning to his regiment, he took part in Gen. Grant's Wilderness campaigns and siege of and battles around Petersburg and Richmond, in which he was taken prisoner. He was sent to Andersonville, remaining there four months, when he was transferred to Camp Newton, Ga.; was then returned to Andersonville, where he was confined until discharged at Jackson, Miss., March, 1865. Mr. Lillie is a member of the A. O. U. W., G. A. R., Post No. 83, McKean; is a Republican in politics.

MICHAEL McLAUGHLIN, farmer, P. O. Sterrettania, was born in McKean Township, Feb. 5, 1842, and is a son of Thomas and Honora (Fagan) McLaughlin, the former born March 28, 1796, died March 5, 1880, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland, and the latter born in Mill Creek Township July 8, 1807. They were married Oct. 2, 1825, and had a family of 10 children—John, Mary J., Elizabeth, Charles, Rosanna, Michael, Hannah and Edward survive. Of this family, Charles was a soldier in the late war. Thomas McLaughlin, the elder, came to America in 1821, locating in Erie City Jan. 28, 1824; in 1830 removed to McKean Township. For a number of years he was Supervisor of this township, and for 21 years Auditor. His wife died Sept. 4, 1858, and he followed her Feb. 26, 1880. Our subject married, Nov. 17, 1862, Honora McCarty, born Jan., 1842, daughter of Michael and Margaret (McCarty) McCarty, natives of County Cork, Ireland; 6 children were born to this union, viz., Thomas J., born June 7, 1870; Charles J., born Nov. 22, 1872; Frank W., born Aug. 24, 1874; Mary H., born July 30, 1876; Margaret J., born March 12, 1878, and Richard H., born Oct. 15, 1880. Mr. McLaughlin is a prosperous farmer residing upon and cultivating the estate of C. J. Sterrett, near Sterrettania. He is owner of 25 acres adjoining the Sterrett estate, also a good farm of 75 acres in McKean Township. Mr. McLaughlin and family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN MARSH, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Nova Scotia Sept. 19, 1822, son of James Marsh, born in 1794, and married to Jane Thompson, born in 1792, daughter of Andrew and Jane (Marsh) Thompson, all natives of Nova Scotia. They were the parents of 10 children, of whom Andrew T., John, Rachel, Mary, Theodore H. and Wilson are now living. Of this family, Andrew and Wilson were soldiers in the war of the rebellion. James Marsh came from Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1835, took up land in McKean Township and cleared for himself and family some 66 acres. He died Oct. 22, 1857, his widow following him April 3, 1872. He was a son of John Marsh, a native of England, who was a sailor and shipwright, and who emigrated to Nova Scotia at the close of the French and English war. John Marsh, our subject, married, Jan. 6, 1850, Mary A. Brimhall, born Dec. 22, 1825, daughter of Aaron and Sabry (Bull) Brimhall, the former born Oct. 9, 1795, in Connecticut, and the latter July 16, 1799, in Clinton Co., N. Y. By this union there were 8 children, as follows: Arthur J., Oct. 13, 1850, died July 19, 1881; Judson A., born March 28, 1852, died July 22, 1860; Fletcher C., born April 20, 1854, died July 22, 1860; Jenny J., born Jan. 4, 1856, died July 28, 1860; Carlton C., born Nov. 17, 1860; Hattie H., born March 19, 1863; Rufus W., Aug. 1, 1868; and Mary E., born Sept. 26, 1871. Arthur J. married, Sept. 16, 1874, Nettie Stanclift, and had one child—Linnie E., born Dec. 9, 1877. He was killed by a fall from a loft in his barn. John Marsh, in early life, was for 16 years a sailor on the lakes, eight of which he was Captain of his vessel. He now resides in the paternal residence, which he owns. His fine stock of young cattle are half-breed Holsteins.

DANIEL MARSH, farmer, P. O. McLane, was born in Colchester Co., Nova Scotia, Dec. 28, 1825, son of Patrick H. Marsh, born June 20, 1793, who married Susan McLaughlin, born Oct. 19, 1806, native of Nova Scotia, daughter of Henry and Jane (Wilson) McLaughlin, natives of Massachusetts, and had a family of 11 children, of whom Daniel, John W., James, Andrew R., Thomas, Patrick H. and Marilla are now living. Of this family, Daniel, John, Patrick and Joseph saw service in the war of the rebellion, John in the U. S. Navy and Patrick in the 6th Reg., Mo. I. The latter volunteered as private, served the full term of the war, was wounded at the battle of Shiloh, April 11, 1862, and was promoted to the rank of Lieut. Col. of the 11th Ind. Joseph enlisted in the 145th P. V. I., Sept., 1862, and was killed at Gettysburg July 3, 1863. Patrick H. Marsh, the elder, came to Erie Co. in 1837, and settled in McKean Township. His wife died April 21, 1847, and he followed her Aug. 9, 1863. He was a son of John and Eleanor (Corbett) Marsh, natives of Massachusetts. John was a son of Elijah Marsh, a native of Massachusetts, who was a colonial soldier, and went to Nova Scotia during the French War, where he remained. Elijah was a son of Samuel Marsh, a native of England, who came to the Colonies in the 17th century, where he died. Daniel Marsh, our subject, married Oct. 12, 1851, Frances M.

Owen, daughter of David W. and Jane (Wycoff) Owen, mentioned elsewhere in this work. By this union there were 9 children, as follows: Frederick D., born July 12, 1852, died June 18, 1881; Herbert G., born Nov. 29, 1853; Clarence A., born Jan. 9, 1857; Sidney O., born Aug. 23, 1859; Margaret J., born Dec. 12, 1861; Gertrude L., born April 21, 1864; Joseph W., born Sept. 7, 1866; Florence M., born Feb. 28, 1870; and Edith B., born March 20, 1873. Mr. Marsh was drafted April 2, 1865, into the 102d Reg., P. V. I., and was on his way to the front when Gen. Lee surrendered. He was with his regiment at Danville, Va., when the surrender of Gen. J. E. Johnston took place. He received his discharge June 23, 1865. In politics, Mr. Marsh is an Independent.

WILLIAM MARSH, farmer, and Justice of the Peace, P. O. McLane, was born in the Province of Nova Scotia Feb. 26, 1826, son of Wilson and Margaret (Miller) Marsh, mentioned in the biography of Joshua A. Marsh. At the age of fourteen, he left home to work on his own account. He improved his educational advantages, and became a teacher, working on a farm during the summer months. At the age of twenty-one, Mr. Marsh became a partner of F. D. Strong in the manufacture of cheese, and was among the first to introduce the steam-heating vat in the cheese factory. In 1852, he was appointed Deputy Sheriff by Thomas Vincent, and upon the latter's retiring from the office, engaged with J. C. Seldon, hardware merchant, Erie, as traveling salesman and accountant, remaining in that capacity 7 years. During 1861-62, he became associated with J. C. and G. Selden, J. H. Bliss and Samuel Vail, under the style and firm of W. Marsh & Co., in the oil enterprise at Buchanan Flats, Venango Co., Penn. From 1864 to 1867, he was a partner in the Erie Carbou Oil Works Company, and also the Presque Isle Iron Works at Erie. He was Superintendent and accountant at the latter from 1866 to 1868. On the 27th of May, 1863, Mr. Marsh married Dellie Cooper, born April 4, 1841, daughter of Aaron and Lydia (Beardsley) Cooper, all natives of New York State. Three children were born to this union—Elmer W., born Aug. 18, 1865; Wilber C., Nov. 23, 1871; and Dana S., Aug. 5, 1877. In 1868, Mr. Marsh moved to Waterford, and remained until 1876. During the intervening period, he was administrator, and settled the estates of S. C. Stanford, amounting to $40,000, and subsequently engaged in the manufacture of butter firkins, tubs, etc. Returning to McKean Township, he was elected Road Commissioner in 1880 (re-elected in 1883), and in 1881 Justice of the Peace. Our subject is still engaged in business enterprises; has a cheese factory on his farm, and owns the McLane and Draketown factories. He is Secretary, Treasurer and traveling salesman of the three. His dairy farm is situated 3 miles from Middleboro, and comprises 435 acres. His stock of cattle numbers 90 head, 60 being milch cows. He is improving the breeds by crossing native with pure Holsteins. Besides his fine dwelling in this township, our subject owns city property in Erie and Hastings, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh are members of the Christian Advent Church, Edinboro. Mr. Marsh is a Granger, and in politics a Republican.

JOSHUA A. MARSH, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Economy Co., Nova Scotia, March 16, 1829, son of Wilson Marsh, born Apr. 21, 1788, who married, Dec. 20, 1820, Margaret Miller, born Dec. 21, 1799, both natives of Nova Scotia, and had a family of 11 children, of whom Betsy M., Robert, Sarah and Cyrenius are now dead, and William, Margaret, Joshua A., Samuel, Mary, Nancy and Seth still survive. Of this family, Cyrenius volunteered, and was elected Sergeant of Co. G, 111th Reg. P. V. I., 20th Corps, Army of the Potomac, under Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker. In the fall of 1863, the 20th Corps having been transferred to the Army of the Tennessee, Cyrenius was killed in the battle of Washatchie Nov. 3, the night before the battle of Lookout Mountain. Wilson Marsh migrated to Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1829, and in 1837 came to Erie Co., and purchased the farm upon which Joshua A. now resides. He died June 19, 1868, and his widow Jan. 9, 1882. The latter was a daughter of William Miller, of Scotch descent. Wilson was a son of Joshua Marsh, a native of Massachusetts, who migrated to Nova Scotia prior to the war of the Revolution. Joshua A. Marsh, subject of this sketch, married, Oct. 28, 1863, Keziah B. Reed, daughter of Harris and Fanny (Bull) Reed, natives of New York State. Three children were born to this union, viz., Serena F., born Nov. 6, 1864; Lizzie H., born July 18, 1866, died Dec. 14, 1878; and William A., born Apr. 30, died May 26, 1871. Keziah Reed died May 2, 1871, and Mr. Marsh married, Nov. 6, 1872, Sophronia A. Ryan, born Sept. 17, 1842, daughter of John and Miranda (Crow) Ryan, the former a native of Wexford, Ireland, and the latter of Connecticut. By this union there are 5 children, viz., Charles A., born Sept. 6, 1873; Sarah E., Aug. 21, 1875; Dellie P., Sept. 5, 1877; George L., Sept. 21, 1879; and Wilson, March 23, 1882. Mr. Marsh's farm comprises 100 acres, well stocked. He is a Granger, and, with his wife, a member of the Christian denomination. In politics, is a Greenbacker, believing that industry ought not to be taxed to support capital in idleness.

GIDEON MEEKER, farmer, P. O. Sterrettania, was born in McKean Township, son of John O. Meeker, who was born in New Jersey May 14, 1785, and was married, Oct. 26, 1813, to Jerusha Wilcox, born in Massachusetts July 30, 1797. They were the parents of 11 children, viz., William C., born September 30, 1814, died March 4, 1871; Sarah A., born July 13, 1816, died March 17, 1878; Gideon, born May 23, 1818; Lois S., born Oct. 20, 1820, died Jan. 11, 1879; Lucinda, born May 28, 1823, died March 30, 1880; Charles A., born

Aug. 14, 1825; John, born Feb. 25, 1827, died Nov. 18, 1833; Isaac Newton, born June 24, 1830, died Nov. 30, 1833; Clarinda J., born Nov. 15, 1832, died Jan. 15, 1834; Mary R., born June 22, 1825, died March 7, 1852; Isaac N., born Sept. 29, 1837; Louisa E., born July 6, 1841, died Oct. 13, 1871. Of this family, Charles A. and Isaac N. were soldiers in the war of the rebellion; the former was a private in the 83d Reg. P. V. I.; was wounded, and died in hospital Oct. 4, 1862; the latter was in an Ohio regiment, but his last year was in the marine service on the Alabama River. John Oliver Meeker was a soldier in the war of 1812-14, and was stationed at Erie under Capt. Foster; he was one of McKean Township's earliest pioneer settlers, and died March 30, 1854. His wife died Jan. 10, 1849. Gideon Meeker, of whom we write, married, Apr. 15, 1852, Fanny Rhodes, born March 10, 1830, daughter of Jacob and Annie (Rhorer) Rhodes, natives of this State. D. C. F. STAFFORD, hotel-keeper and farmer, Middleboro Village, was born Dec. 10, 1824, on the old homestead farm 2 miles from the village, where his father, Job Stafford, settled in Nov., 1817. Here he remained helping to carry on the farm until he was twenty-seven years of age. He was married, Jan. 29, 1849, to Miss Sarah Thomas, of Waterford Township, by whom he had 3 children—Carrie A., Jenny L. and Maud H. In 1852, he left the old home farm and removed to Waterford, and farmed for 7 years. Here his wife died Dec. 15, 1858. Mr. Stafford was again married Jan. 10, 1860, to Miss Sarah L., daughter of Stewart R. and Catherine (Foster) Chellis. She was born Aug. 3, 1841, in Harbor Creek Township, this county. To this union 2 children were born—Fayette Adelle, Feb. 7, 1863, and Burt A., Feb. 3, 1866, both born in Middleboro. Fayette Adelle graduated from the State Normal Musical Conservatory at Edinboro, Penn., under Prof. E. P. Russell, who has since founded a conservatory of music at Cambridge, Penn., Miss Stafford assisting as a teacher of voice culture, piano-forte and organ. Burt A., graduated from Clark's Business Commercial College at Erie, Penn. In the spring of 1861 (April 1), Mr. Stafford purchased the hotel property in which he now resides in Middleboro Village and which he has run in connection with farming ever since. His father, Job Stafford, was born March 9, 1796, in Vermont; at the age of about two years, he moved with his parents to the village of Peru, Clinton Co., N. Y.; at the age of nineteen, Nov. 14, 1814, he was married to Miss Phebe Arthur of the same place, and a native of Long Island, N. Y. The fruit of this union was P. A. Stafford, born April 12, 1819, who died Dec. 4, 1862, leaving a wife and 4 children—Caroline T., born Aug. 3, 1821, married C. L. Johnson and moved to Ashtabula County, Ohio, where they now reside, they have 1 son—Henry, and one daughter—Emma. Mr. Stafford was among the first to build his log cabin in this township. For several weeks after arriving here they had nothing to eat but johnny-cake, baked on a board before the fire, and some dried pumpkins, which they brought with them, and which, when stewed, served as butter, sauce, etc. Mr. Stafford and wife were 2 of the 6 who organized the M. E. Church in this neighborhood; he was in the war of 1812; for a number of years held the office of Justice of the Peace; was quite a prominent dealer in cattle, driving them over the mountains, Philadelphia being the principal market; he followed this occupation 18 or 20 years; he and his wife departed this life at the residence of their son, D. C. F., in Middleboro. Our subject's grandfather, Jonathan Stafford, was born in Vermont July 15, 1771, and followed lumbering business, rafting, etc., together with farming until the war of 1812, when he entered the army and served till the close of the war. He came to McKean Township in 1817, settling on Elk Creek. His children grew up, married and settled around him, and the town should have been called Staffordville; he had married Aug. 25, 1792, Sarah Anthony, born March 29, 1778, by whom he had the following children: Jonas, Job, Rhoby, Stuteley, Plynna, Stephen M. and Hannah. Mr. Stafford was Justice of the Peace for a number of years; was appointed Postmaster of this place, and died at his post while distributing the mail, June 17, 1843, aged seventy-two years, and is buried in the Stafford Burying Ground, as is also the father, mother, brother, and an uncle and aunt of the subject of this sketch. The great-grandfather, John Stafford, was born in England, and with two brothers came to this county at an early day. The date of their coming is not known. They probably settled in Vermont, and from these 3 brothers sprang the whole Stafford race of this country.

STEPHEN K. TALLMADGE, farmer. P. O. McKean, was born in McKean Township June 15, 1814; son of James Tallmadge, born in Dutchess Co., N. Y., Dec. 22, 1773; married Sept. 12, 1797, Rachel Kinsey, born in Bucks County May 6, 1777, natives of New York State; they had a family of 10 children. The deceased are Hannah, Betsey, Emily, Matthias, Maria, Matilda and Lydia, and the surviving are James G., George and Stephen K.; Hannah was born Aug. 23, 1798, the first female child born in McKean Township. James Tallmadge, the elder, was a pioneer of Erie Co.; he came here from Buffalo about the year 1795, and afterward permanently located in this county; he remained about a year in Erie City; purchased 200 acres in what is now Summit Township. This he subsequently changed for 200 acres on the Elk Creek Flats, McKean Township, which he cleared and converted into one of the finest homesteads in the county. James Tallmadge, about the beginning of the present century, made a trip to and from Buffalo and Erie in an open boat, bringing with him Seth Reed and 2 others to Erie; he brought the first 2 bushels of seed wheat into the county; he died March 24, 1855, his aged widow following Jan. 24, 1866; he was a soldier in the war of 1812-14, and helped build the old block-house at Erie, where Gen. Wayne died; he was a son of Elisha and Maria (Brazee) Tallmadge; the former came from England with his brothers Joel, Ezra and Nathaniel; Elisha was by trade a blacksmith, and came to Erie City about 1798, working at his trade several years, dying Jan. 2, 1814, his widow, Maria, dying March 25, 1825. Rachel Kinsey's father emigrated to Canada about the year 1789, locating near Niagara Falls; he subsequently returned to New York State. Our subject married, Dec. 12, 1843, Sally Guliford, born Feb. 26, 1826, daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Ball) Guliford, the former born Dec. 8, 1783, died Sept. 8, 1845, the latter born June 10, 1794, died Sept. 19, 1873, both natives of this State; by this union there were 5 children—Bailey K., born Nov. 15, 1844, died Nov. 2, 1863; Thomas W., born Nov. 3, 1847; Samuel G., born Aug. 26, 1849, died Oct. 27, 1863; John J., born Sept. 1, 1851, died Oct. 1, 1863, and Frank S., born Feb. 12, 1853; Mr. Tallmadge's well-stocked farm is located 2 miles from Middleboro, and comprises 243 acres. He and his wife are members of the M. E. Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

TAYLOR TOME, miller, P. O. Sterrettania, was born in Summit Township May 26, 1850, son of Samuel and Mary (Frye) Tome, the former born in 1809 and the latter in 1814, daughter of Adam Frye, a native of Lancaster Co., Penn. They were parents of 8 children, of whom Fanny, Benjamin, Catharine, Henry, Isaac and Taylor are now living. Of this family, Henry was a soldier in the late war from March 6 to June 23, 1865. Samuel Tome was a pioneer of Summit Township. At the time he settled there, it was a part of McKean (1838), and that section a wilderness. Mr. Tome cut the first acre of bush land in his neighborhood, and eventually cleared for himself and family a comfortable homestead. He died April 1, 1876; his widow died Feb. 1, 1884. Our subject married, March 10, 1870, Elizabeth Eck, born June 23, 1851, daughter of William and Anna (Feldie) Eck, natives of Germany. By this union there are 6 children, viz.: Fanny, born Aug. 25, 1870; Curtis, May 27, 1872; Harry, Sept. 10, 1874; Clarence, March 22, 1876; Birdie, March 4, 1878; and Clyde, Aug. 27, 1880. Mr. Tome, in 1880, leased the Sterrettania grist and flour mill. He is a practical miller by trade. Politically, he is a Democrat, as his ancestors were before him—true Jeffersonian Democrats.

SEYMOUR WASHBURN, farmer, P. O. Sterrettania, was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., June 12, 1816, son of Stephen and Janet (Terry) Washburn, whose biography appears in that of Stephen Washburn. Seymour was married in 1835 to Lydia B. Hopkins, who was born Oct. 12, 1819, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Luther) Hopkins, also mentioned in S. Washburn's biography. By this marriage there were 12 children, as follows: Betsy J., born May 29, 1836; Josephus, June 10, 1838, died Jan. 29, 1841; Polly, Sept. 19, 1840; Henrietta, June 29, 1843; Lydia, April 29, died May 22, 1846; Lester C., April 17, 1848; Nancy, Sept. 26, 1850; Elsie A., May 14, 1854; Henry L., March 1, 1856; Stephen A., April 10, died Oct. 14, 1858; Seymour J., born Nov. 5, died Nov. 6, 1862, and Iva L., Nov. 25, 1865. Of this family, Lester C. was a soldier in a N. Y. regiment during the last year of the war of the rebellion. Mrs. Lydia B. Washburn died Sept. 11, 1875, and Mr. Washburn married, Feb. 2, 1877, Martha Rockwell, widow of Simeon S. Rockwell, of Summit Township, daughter of William and Martha (Kenyan) Luther, natives of Rhode Island. No children were born to this union. Seymour Washburn is a prominent pioneer settler in Erie Co., coming to McKean Township in 1824. He has served as Road Commissioner 1 term (1847-50); School Director, 12; Auditor, 7, and Justice of the Peace 10 years, since 1852. In 1861, he was elected County Commissioner, and in 1867 County Director of the Poor. Mr. and Mrs. Washburn are members of the Christian denomination. In politics, he is a Republican.

JOHN WEIGEL, merchant, Middleboro, was born in McKean Township Feb. 22, 1842, son of Nicholas and Margaret (Eiswert) Weigel, natives of Bavaria, who had a family of 13 children, of whom John, Jacob, Louisa, George, Frank, Michael, Catherine and Martha survive. John and Jacob were soldiers in the late war. Nicholas Weigel came to America in 1837, settling in McKean, where he purchased 50 acres of land. His wife died in July, 1868; he is still living. Our subject enlisted Aug., 1863, in the 76th Reg. P. V. I., 2d Brigade, 2d Division, 10th Corps, Maj. Gen. B. F. Butler, Army of the James. He participated in the following engagements: Chester Heights, Proctor's Creek, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Strawberry Plains, Bermuda Hundred, Chapin's Farm, Darbytown Pike, Va., and at Ft. Fisher, Jan. 15, 1863, where he was wounded, and went to the hospital at Ft. Schuyler, N. Y., and was discharged in June, 1865. Mr. Weigel married, May 7, 1868, Lizzie Miller, born Dec. 22, 1843, daughter of Nicholas and Mary (Briec) Miller, natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. By this union there are two children—Louisa, born Feb. 8, 1869, and Lillie, born Dec. 27, 1878. After the war, Mr. Weigel engaged as salesman for Borger & Fuess, Erie, and in 1878 commenced business at Middleboro. His store is well stocked, and the business prospering. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.; in politics, a Republican.

EZRA WHITE, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in New York State March 4, 1800, son of Ezra and Lydia (Evans) White, former a native of Vt., latter a daughter of Henry Evans, and a native of the State of New York. They had a family of 10 children, of whom Ezra, William, Sally, Laura, Lucinda, Eliza and De Villo are now living. Ezra White, the elder, came to Erie Co. and purchased 50 acres of land in McKean Township. Lydia Evans, his wife, died in 1835, and he moved to Michigan about the year 1839. Eventually he went to Marengo, Ill., where he died in 1850. Our subject married, March 5, 1823, Polly Pollock, born March 6, 1805, daughter of David and Ann (Roland) Pollock, natives of Maryland. By this marriage there were 9 children, of whom Lucinda, Plympton A., Olympia, Johnson and John are deceased. Lydia A., David, Martha and Sarah are now living. David and Plympton A. were soldiers in the war of the rebellion, David serving 3 months. Plympton A. was 2d Lieut. of Co. D, 83d Reg. P. V. I. He volunteered in 1861, and was subsequently made a signal officer. While on duty at Georgetown, Va., he was taken prisoner, and sent to Libby Prison, Richmond. Eventually he was transferred to a prison at Charleston, S. C., where he died Sept. 13, 1864, after being 16 months in captivity. Our subject's wife dying Dec. 20, 1854, he married, Aug. 20, 1857, Mrs. Leonora A. Cobb, born May 4, 1818, daughter of Ezekiel and Theodocia (Bates) Noble, and widow of Zenas Cobb, of Genesee, N. Y., their family numbering 4 children, viz., Nelson (deceased), Myra, Fanny and Noel. Zenas Cobb died Aug. 26, 1846. By his second marriage, Mr. White's children are Frank D. F., Maud M. and Jessie M. Mr. White is one of the pioneers of McKean Township; by trade a carpenter. His farm comprises 37 acres. With his wife, he is a member of the M. E. Church. In politics, a Republican.

WILLIAM WISWELL, farmer, P. O. McKean, was born in Cheshire Co., N. H., Jan. 2, 1811, son of William Wiswell, born Mch. 6, 1787, who married Mercy Woodward, born Aug. 1, 1788, a native of Massachusetts, and had a family of 9 children, of whom William only is now living. William Wiswell, the elder, came to Erie Co., and located in Washington Township in 1817, where he resided 7 years, moving to McKean Township in 1824; he articulated 65 acres of land, and cleared for himself and family a fine farm; he was elected Supervisor for 1 term, and at various periods for many years was Constable of the township. Mercy Woodward, his wife, died June 20, 1848, he following her Dec. 31, 1852. He was a son of John Wiswell, a native of Massachusetts. John Wiswell's father was a native of Wales. William Wiswell, subject of this sketch, married, April 17, 1834, Ruth M., born Mch. 23, 1811, daughter of Moses and Martha (Stanley) Gleeton, all natives of Vermont. By this union there were 4 children, as follows: Ruth A., born May 15, 1836, died Apr. 16, 1845; Alma, born Nov. 2, 1839; Albin, born Sept. 19, 1843, died Apr. 26, 1845, and Mary C., born Sept. 18, 1847. Mr. Wiswell resides on the original homestead, 1½ miles from Middleboro, which now comprises 140 acres, well stocked with superior grades of cattle; a thoroughbred Ayreshire bull, two years old, bred by Fairweather, of Washington Township, has lately been added to his herd. This fine animal has won prizes at various county and State fairs, as follows: Erie Co., Erie, 1st prize, 1881; Ohio State, Toledo, 2d prize, 1882; Michigan State, Jackson, 1st prize, 1882.

EDSON WOODS, lumber manufacturer, Kearsarge, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Dec. 20, 1840, son of Lathrop and Lavina (Skiff) Woods, natives of New York State, who had a family of 7 children, of whom Lawson, Jason, Ira, Edson, Watson T. and Judson W., are now living. Lathrop Woods came to Erie Co. in 1875, and settled in McKean Township. His wife died in Aug., 1880. Edson Woods, our subject, married, Feb. 14, 1867, Helen A. Fuller, of Edinboro, born Apr. 23, 1845, daughter of Alva and Susan (Drury) Fuller, natives of the State of New York. By this union there were 4 children—Carrie, born Dec. 23, 1868; Freddy, born March 23, 1870; Eddie, born Sept. 14, 1873, died July 14, 1881, and Roy, born July 8, 1881. Mr. Woods owns a fine water-power saw mill, situated on the North Branch of Elk Creek, about 4 miles from Waterford and 5 from Middleboro. He manufactures lumber and laths, turning out 3,000 feet of the latter per day. The mill is mostly hauled to Erie for shipment; machinery for grinding feed is another feature of this mill, its patronage by the farmers in the vicinity being quite extensive; this mill was erected in 1880. Mr. Woods owns a well-stocked and cultivated farm of 92 acres. In politics, he is a Democrat.

MILL CREEK TOWNSHIP.

J. G. ARBUCKLE, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Oct. 12, 1807, in Erie, Penn., son of Joseph and Catherine (Guy) Ar buckle, natives of Maryland, who came to Fairview Township, this county, in 1800. They reared a family of 5 children, of whom 2 are now living—Joseph F., in De Kalb Co., Ill., with 4 children; and our subject, who has resided on the old home farm 76 years. He was married, Jan. 25, 1835, to Emily, daughter of Spencer Shattuck. By this union were born 5 children, 4 now living, viz.: S. S.; Mary A., wife of Geo. McCreary, have 3 children, and reside near Battle Creek, Mich.; Margaret M., wife of R. Pilkington, residing near Bradford, Penn., have 2 children; and J. P. Mrs. J. G. Ar buckle's father came to Erie Co. at an early day; he died Aug. 15, 1852, leaving a family of 5 children, 2 now living. Our subject's 2 sons are members of the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W., and F. & A. M.

B. P. ARBUCKLE, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born August 12, 1835, in this township, son of William and Annis (Shattuck) Ar buckle, natives, the former of Connecticut, the latter of Maryland. William Ar buckle came to Erie Co. in 1802, and was then ten years old. He was married, Sept. 28, 1820, to Annis Shattuck, who bore him 7 children, viz.: Caroline, wife of R. T. Davison, have 13 children, 11 now living; Sophronia, wife of J. F. Allen, 2 children; Burkle, deceased; Alrene, deceased; Joseph, in Dakota; Wm. S., married to Ann Throne, now deceased, resides in Erie with 2 children; Cornelius S., deceased; Hannah, deceased; and our subject, who was married, Nov. 4, 1858, to Barbara, daughter of Walter and Eleanor Maus. By this union are 5 children—Eleanor, deceased; Jennie M., wife of Chas. S. Manley; Wm. E., Chas. E., and Ada, deceased. Mr. Ar buckle is a member of A. O. U. W. Lodge 44, Erie. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church of Belle Valley.

RICHARD H. ARBUCKLE, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Oct. 14, 1835, in Erie, Penn., son of William G. and Catharine (Bowers) Ar buckle, natives of Pennsylvania, parents of 6 children, viz.: George W.; Mary E., wife of J. W. Humphrey, of New York;

Louisa G., wife of J. K. Hallock, of Erie; Frank P., Superintendent American District Telegraph, Denver, Colo.; John, deceased; and our subject, who was married, Jan. 6, 1859, to J. Antoinette, daughter of John and Charlotte E. Burton, of Mill Creek Township. To this union were born 6 children, viz., Jeannie H., John Burton, Katie Eliza (deceased), Charlotte Barnes, William Irwin and Richard Cranch. Mr. Arbuckle has held the office of County Commissioner, Mercantile Appraiser of the county, and many of the offices in his township.

GEORGE W. BARR, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born July 4, 1822, in Harbor Creek Township, Penn., son of James and Polly R. (Kelly) Barr, natives of Penn., latter born in Mifflin, now Juniata Co., in March, 1793. She was married to James Barr, Jr., in 1812. He died in 1835, and his widow in 1880, at the ripe age of eighty-seven years and thirteen days. Grandfather Kelly came to Erie Co. in 1800, and Grandfather Barr in 1802. The first glimpse Grandfather Kelly ever had of his future wife, Mary Robinson, was when crossing some mountains during the war of 1776, along with other soldiers, he overtook a maiden driving some sheep, gallantly assisted her over a part of the rugged hills, and subsequently married her. James Barr, father of our subject, who was a soldier in the war of 1812, was married, Nov. 14, 1812, to Polly Kelly, who bore him 10 children—John, deceased in infancy; Elizabeth A., wife of Conrad Brown, both deceased; Matthew R., Indian Agent, Idaho; Louisa A., now Mrs. R. M. McCreary; George W., our subject; Harriet M., wife of L. Wright, of Michigan, both deceased; Mary K., widow of Frederick N. Bond; Martha R., wife of J. C. Munn; Ellen, deceased; James M., deceased when young. Our subject was married, Jan. 4, 1860, to Julia A. Wilder, of Vermont. They had 2 children—Alice, wife of Hamon C. Myles, a native of Canada, and 1 died in infancy. Mr. Barr was at one time a railroad builder or contractor on the L. S. P. & E. R. R., N. Y. & E., and Iron Mountain, Lake Superior.

WILHELM BERKENKAMP, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in 1832 in Prussia, and emigrated to America Dec. 23, 1853, landing in New York. From there he came to Utica, N. Y., where he remained for a few months; thence he came to Buffalo, N. Y., and after sojourning there a few months came to Erie, this county, July 4, 1854. Here he engaged with Mr. Trace, with whom he stayed about 8 years. In 1857, he married Miss Vogle, then moved to Franklin Township, this county, residing there for a few years. In 1871, our subject came with his family to the farm they now occupy. To Mr. and Mrs. Berkenkamp have been born the following-named children: William, Charles (deceased in infancy), John and George (twins, latter deceased), and Frank (deceased in infancy). Our subject is a member of the G. A. R.

JOHN BLACKWOOD, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in February, 1810, in Ireland, and came with his parents, James and Martha (Boyd) Blackwood, to America in 1819, settling in Erie, this county, where they resided 7 years, after which they moved to the farm in Mill Creek Township, where our subject now lives, and there ended their days. They were parents of 5 children, 3 now living—John, Robert, in Wesleyville, and Martha, now Mrs. Boggs, in Lawrence Co., Penn. Our subject, the eldest son and third in the family, was married, June 30, 1848, to Nancy, daughter of David Kennedy, a native of Ireland; and who never came to America. Mrs. Blackwood was second in a family of 10 children. Our subject and wife were parents of 3 children—Jane, deceased when young; Martha B., wife of J. E. Lapsley, in Mill Creek Township; and James Thomas. Mr. Blackwood lives on a farm in Mill Creek Township (half a mile from Erie City), given him by his father 40 years ago, and which is under the charge of his son Thomas. He is a member of the U. P. Church.

JOSEPH BLETZ, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Jan. 1, 1824, in Bavaria, Germany; son of Joseph and Lena Bletz, parents of 6 children, of whom 2 are now living—Lena, wife of A. Blabeck, have 3 children; and our subject, who was the only member of the family to come to America. He arrived in June, 1851, and after a short time employed in Erie, this county, moved to the farm he now owns and occupies. He was married, in 1847, in Germany, and has a family of 8 children—Melchior, married to Martha Weigel, daughter of Nicholas Weigel, have 2 children, Ida and Frank; Hermon; Mary, wife of F. Vogt, have 6 children; Catharine, now Mrs. Mealer, have 3 children; Josephine; Annie, wife of F. Horn, have 2 children, Bertha and Frank; Lewis; and John at home with his father. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Bletz, besides farming, takes considerable interest in stock, of which he has some fine specimens, including a Durham bull.

SAMUEL M. BROWN (deceased) whose portrait appears in this book, was born July 30, 1807, in Erie Co., Penn., son of Conrad and Catharine (Matzebach) Brown. The former was born June 2, 1773, in Berks Co., Penn.; came to Erie Co. in 1802, and subsequently engaged in mercantile business in Erie City, with George Spang, and later, followed farming until a few years prior to his decease, which occurred Dec. 13, 1859. Catharine, his wife, was born Nov. 12, 1786, in Berks Co., Penn., died July 30, 1821. They had 11 children, all of whom are deceased except Mrs. Stohlmann, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Samuel M., our subject, obtained a fair education in Mill Creek Township and Erie City. He was married in Erie, Penn., in 1834, to Eve Stough, born Feb. 7, 1811, in Erie Co., daughter of Martin and Sarah (Zimmerman) Stough, natives of Dauphin Co., Penn. This union resulted in 7 children—John T., Sarah C., Samuel C., William M., Mary U., George W., Charles F. E. (deceased). Mr. Brown served the people of his township as Assessor, Road Commissioner and School Director; was in an early day Lieutenant of the State Militia, serving in a creditable manner. He was an active element among the Whigs and later bent his efforts with the Republican party. He was early identified with the Lutheran Church, and died in full triumph of the same. The history of his life can be told in three words, "an honest man." His grandfather, John G. Brown, son of Philip Brown, was born March 14, 1731, and married Sept. 7, 1756, Anna B. Heckadorn, born Jan. 7, 1735.

WM. M. BROWN, Superintendent of Erie Co., Penn., Almshouse, Erie, was born Dec. 12, 1840, in this township, son of Samuel M. and Eve (Stough) Brown, who were parents of 7 children—John P., Sarah C., Samuel C., William M., Mary U., George W. and Charles F. E. (deceased). The father died Jan. 9, 1863. His widow, a lady now of seventy-four years, resides with her son Samuel C., who has charge of the home farm, located on the Ridge road, this township, on a delightful eminence $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Erie. Our subject received his education in Erie County, and followed agricultural pursuits till Aug., 1862, when he enlisted in Co. I, 145th Reg. P. V. I., serving at the front till July 2, 1863, when he was wounded in the right thigh at the battle of Gettysburg, Penn., and from its effects was unfitted for duty till some time the following fall. On Feb. 1, 1864, he received a commission in the Veteran Reserve Corps, and was ordered to Columbus, Ohio, where he was placed in military command of the U. S. Seminary Hospital; here he remained until the fall, when he returned home, and on Nov. 23, 1864, he was married to Rosanna, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Love, one of the pioneer families of this county. He was then ordered to Washington, D. C., on recruiting service, where he remained nearly 2 months; from thence to Elmira, N. Y., where he was assigned to duty in prison camp. Here he and his wife remained till after the close of the war. In June, 1866, he was discharged from the U. S. service, when he retired to his farm in Mill Creek Township, and followed farming up to the spring of 1880, when he received his present position as Superintendent of Almshouse.

GEORGE W. BROWN, farmer, P. O. West Mill Creek, was born July 1, 1845, in this township; son of Samuel M. and Eve (Stough) Brown, and grandson of Conrad Brown, who came to this county in 1802, and was among the first saddlers and merchants of Erie City. See his biography. Our subject, the sixth in a family of 7, was married Jan. 28, 1869, to Henrietta, daughter of Frederick Fehr, a native of Hesse-Cassel, Germany. To this union were born 5 children—Edward C., Samuel M., deceased in 1881, Frederick C., Lillie L., deceased in infancy, and Nettie M. Mr. Brown resides on a farm pleasantly situated in a valley on the west line of Mill Creek Township.

JOHN BURTON, farmer, P. O. Erie, whose portrait appears in this work, was born Oct. 15, 1809, in Winsted, Litchfield Co., Conn. His father, John Burton was born in Old Stratford, Conn., and came to Erie Co. in 1811, settling on the farm now owned and occupied by his son John. While in Connecticut, he was engaged in shoe-making and cattle dealing. The breaking-out of the war of 1812, made shipping almost an impossibility, and Mr. Burton lost heavily on a herd of cattle. He was consequently a poor man when he settled in the wilds of Mill Creek Township, this county. He was married to Phoebe Wooster of Conn. The result of this union was Sallie, married to Spencer Shattuck, they lived in Mill Creek Township till death separated them; Silas, married to Lucretia Miller, he died in Buffalo; David was first coal dealer in Erie; Polly married Calvin Foot, and died in Mill Creek Township. Mrs. Phoebe Burton was a member of the Methodist Church, and her two brothers Daniel and James were local ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church. On her demise, our subject married Hannah Miller, born in Torrington, Litchfield Co., Conn., in 1774, and died in 1850. To this union were born William, John, Phoebe, Matilda and Lewis. The former attended the county schools, became able to teach and with the means thus obtained, secured text-books, and recited his lessons to Rev. Robert Reed, of Erie, subsequently graduated from the Wesleyan University of Middletown, Conn., and soon after engaged in the Allegheny College, of Meadville, Penn., as teacher of languages and mathematics, and in the meantime occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church. Later, he prepared himself for the Protestant Episcopal Church, and took charge of St. John's Church of Cleveland, Ohio, and afterward was transferred to Tecumseh, Mich., where he died in 1856. Lewis attended the country schools, and, through means furnished principally by his father, graduated at Meadville, and then preached in the Methodist Episcopal organization at Allegheny City, after having had charge of a similar church at New Castle, Penn. He finally joined the Protestant Episcopal Church, and succeeded his brother in St. John's Church, Cleveland. Here he established 2 strong branches, known as "St. Marks" and "All Saints," and now has charge of the former; his son Lewis is pastor of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Richmond, Va.; Phoebe Burton, married J. B. Stevens, of Harbor Creek; they both died in Illinois; Matilda, deceased, married J. Johnson; John Burton and his consorts were active members of the Methodist Church. Our subject attended the country schools as much as was convenient, aside from the duties required of him by his indulgent parents. He was married in 1834 to Charlotte E., daughter of Thomas and Huldah Barnes, natives of Columbia Co., N. Y. This union resulted in 4 children—Julia; Phœbe J., wife of Jacob Warfel; Lydia M., wife of Heman Sprague, of Toledo; Laura E., deceased, when seven years old. His wife dying in 1870, Mr. Burton married, Oct. 8, 1876, Mrs. Margaret McNair, widow of William McNair, and daughter of Jeremiah and Jane Montgomery Burford, natives, the former of Fayette Co., the latter of Chester Co., Penn. Mrs. Burton had 6 children by her first marriage, 2 now living—Margaret J. and James E. She is a Presbyterian, while her present husband is an energetic Methodist, to which organization he has been attached 50 years. He cast his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson, and still clings to the Democratic "household of faith." Has served as School Director, Road Commissioner, and his full share of other small offices, where pay is not considered. Mr. Burton is the possessor of quite a little fortune, which he alone mainly accumulated by dealings in real estate and stock, together with farming.

J. E. BURTON, farmer and dairyman, P. O. Erie, was born in 1848 in the city of Erie, this county, son of Peter and Sarah (Parker) Burton. Peter Burton, a native of this township, was at one time Deputy Sheriff and afterward, by election, Sheriff of Erie County, serving 2 terms. He moved subsequently to the farm, where he carried on a dairy in connection. His father David, a native of Connecticut, was a resident of Erie City for several years. Peter Burton and wife were parents of 8 children, 5 now living—D. H. Burton (married to Mrs. Whitley, a widow), Isadore (wife of B. B. Whitley; have 5 children—Jennie, Morrison, Alice, Ray R. and Benjamin B.), Alice (wife of C. P. Diefenbach; have 3 children—Bessie, Sarah and Harry), Elizabeth (wife of C. D. Riblet; have 2 children—Ruth and Burton), and our subject, who was married, in 1880, to Ella, daughter of N. W. Russell. To this union were born 2 children—Florence Edna and Sarah Edith. Mr. Burton keeps 16 cows and supplies a portion of Erie City with dairy produce. His farm is located on the Buffalo road in this township. He is a member of the K. of H.

JULIUS V. BUSECK, farmer, P. O. West Mill Creek, was born in Fairview Township, this county, son of Lewis and Caroline (Stohlmann) Buseck, natives of Germany, former of whom came to this country with his father and brother in 1832, the remainder of the family following in 1834. They remained in Pittsburgh, Penn., 1 year, then moved to this county and worked on different farms until they purchased the one on which the father of our subject now lives, on the lake road, about 3 miles west of Erie City. Mr. Lewis Von Buseck has proved himself a most successful farmer; beginning life with but little, he now owns 4 large farms in this township. He married Caroline Stohlmann, who bore him 12 children, 9 now living—Augusta, wife of Joachim Knobloch; Charles, married to Lavina Butt; Amile, married to Mary Fickinger; Emma, wife of William Evans; Julius, Lewis, Albert, William and Caroline. Julius, our subject, manages one of his father's farms in the west part of this township. He is an energetic young man, keenly alive to the agricultural interests of the county.

JOHN H. CARTER, retired farmer, P. O. West Mill Creek, was born Feb. 24, 1821, in the county of Norfolk, England, son of John and Mary (High) Carter, who came to this township in 1837, bringing with them 5 children, 4 of whom are now living. The family record is now Mary A., now Mrs. Ling, in England; John H.; Sarah A., now Mrs. Shank, in Illinois; Mrs. Henrietta Fassett, deceased in this township; William, a farmer in Illinois, and our subject, who was married, in April, 1838, to Anna Heidlebaugh, whose parents were very early settlers of this county. To this union were born Mary A., wife of William Hardwick, proprietor of Erie Engine Works, have 2 children, Wesley and Luanna; George W., at home; Edward D., married to Clara Robinson; have one child, Maud; Alfred M., proprietor of livery stable in Erie City; Rosa E., deceased; Luella J., at home; and John Lewis, married to Jane Rudd, have 1 child, John. John H. was induced once to take up his residence in Erie City, but unfortunately losing $5,000, he returned to the country and has since been very successful. His wife is a native of Lancaster Co., the second child of three in her family. Our subject came to this county in 1840. He has now sold the farm on which he had so long resided to William L. Scott for $39,000, and has rented a farm owned by Mr. Riblet. The family are members of the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

S. H. CAUGHEY, farmer, P. O. West Mill Creek, was born March 18, 1836, in this township; son of Samuel and Susan (Fluke) Caughey, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn., who came to this county in 1800, where they ended their days. They were parents of following children: John F., residing on the old home farm on the Ridge road; Lewis, in Fairview Township, this county; and our subject, who was married, March 17, 1864, to Eliza M., daughter of James Love. To this union were born 3 children—Susan L., who has attended the State Normal School, this county, at Edinboro; J. Bert and Edwin. The family receive all the advantages of a home as well as a school and collegiate education. Mr. Caughey resides in the western part of the township, where he has an excellent farm, well provided with all essentials, including a spacious barn.

MRS. MARGARET CHURCH, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born in May, 1794, in Ireland, and came to America in 1801 with her parents. She is the oldest lady in the county, and one of the pioneers of Mill Creek Township. With well-preserved perceptive faculties, excellent memory and strong physical frame, Mrs. Church is certainly a remarkable old lady. She was twice married, on first occasion, March 17, 1812, to Andrew Martin, a soldier in the war of 1812; born in 1780, he died in 1823, from the effects of a fall. By this union were born 4 children—Mary, now Mrs. Wood, residing in Chicago; Nancy, deceased; Emily, now Mrs. Parker, and Amas C. Mrs. Church's second marriage occurred Feb. 22, 1825, with David Church; 6 children were born to this union—Jane, deceased; David, in Iowa, married to Harriett Shattuck, have 2 children; Jane, deceased in 1845; Seldon, died in 1864; Margaret, died in 1849; John died in 1835, and Helen M., who was married Jan. 30, 1868, to D. P. Tate, who was born March 15, 1832, in Summit Township, this county, son of R. M. C. Tate. They are parents of 3 children—Maggie F., Bertha A. and Seldon C. Mr. and Mrs. Tate and family reside along with our subject on one of her farms.

J. S. CONRAD, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Aug. 1, 1817, in this township, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (McCoy) Conrad, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn., and who came to Erie Co. in 1801, settling on the farm on which our subject now resides. They were parents of 9 children, of whom 4 are now living—Elizabeth, wife of A. Judd; Sarah A. wife of S. Wood; John M., living now on the old home farm with Jacob S. Our subject was twice married; on the first occasion to Sarah J., daughter of Freeman Patterson, who bore him 6 children, 3 of whom are living—William W., James M. and J. Lester. She dying April 6, 1874, Mr. Conrad married Emily Patterson, a sister of his first wife, Nov. 4, 1875. By this union there are no children. Mrs. Conrad is a member of the Patterson family of Girard Township, this county; is one of 11 children, 8 of whom are living.

JOHN COOK, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born Aug. 3, 1798, in Hartford Co., Conn., son of Eliakim and Lucy (Hurlburt) Cook. His grandfather's name was Benjamin, and that of his great-grandfather Eliakim. His maternal grandfather's name was John Hurlburt. Our subject's father came with his family to this county in 1800 (leaving a fine estate on the Connecticut River, on which the fifth generation of the Cook family is now residing) from Buffalo, over the ice, on which they had to spend a whole night, though Mrs. Cook had 2 small children under her care. Here he took up a claim or assumed a lease of 300 acres of land of the Holland Co., and then moved to Waterford, this county, where he died in the course of 10 years thereafter. The requirements of the case with the Holland Co. not being fulfilled, owing to possession being taken by actual settlers, the claim was lost, save 100 acres. In addition to that, Mr. Cook bought 75 acres in another part of the township. He built the tavern known as Cook's Hotel, which he kept for many years. He had a family of 5 children, 3 now living—Mrs. Hilton, of Erie City, a widow with 4 children—William, Sarah, John and Abbie; May, afterward Mrs. Zimmerly, deceased, leaving 4 daughters—Anna, Mary, Gerorgette and Frances; and our subject, who has witnessed the rise of the county from its untutored savage state. He was married, Jan. 1, 1840, to Mary E., daughter of Giles Russell. By this union were born Louisa, wife of C. Wood, who died leaving 1 son, Walter; Giles Russell, a soldier in the late rebellion, and who died of his wounds; John E., also a soldier, deceased, leaving a widow and son, Eddie H.; and Mary E., living with her father. Mr. Cook has been a most prominent man in the township; he has been a deacon in the Presbyterian Church for 50 years. His wife died June 21, 1883.

JAMES W. COOPER, farmer, P. O. Wesleyville, was born in Oct., 1833, in Coopers-town, Penn., son of William and Susan (Hope) Cooper, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to this county in 1814, and were the first settlers of Venango Township. The father of William gave his name to Cooperstown, mentioned above. William Cooper and wife were parents of 11 children, 6 now living, viz.: William (married to Elmira Gates), Albert, Zachariah, married to Kate Riblet; Mary, wife of George A. Brown; Rachel, wife of Orlin Foote; and our subject, who was married in 1867 to Susan M., daughter of George Brown, a very early settler of this township. To this union were born Cora, deceased in infancy; John L., deceased at the age of eleven; and Harry Brown at home. Mr. Cooper has been School Director for six years; is a member of the K. of H. Lodge, 99; in politics, is a Democrat.

R. S. DAVISON, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born Jan. 15, 1816, in Venango Township, this county, son of Robert and Sarah (Smith) Davison, who came from Ireland in 1797, settling where our subject was born. They were parents of 11 children, 7 now living, viz.: our subject; Elizabeth, wife of John McFarland, of Lawrence Co., Penn.; Rosanna, wife of J. McFarland, of Centralia, Ill.; Jane, wife of A. Kirkpatrick, of Corry, Erie Co., Penn.; Sarah, wife of William Schooler, residing near Erie City, Penn.; Emily, wife of N. W. Russell; Margaret, residing with our subject. R. S. was married March 27, 1855, to Martha, daughter of Samuel Love, an early settler of this county, and who had a family of 12 children. To this union were born 3 children, viz.: Rosella, wife of William Hilborn (have 2 children, Flora M. and Howard D.); Alfred and Dewitt, who assist their father in carrying on the farm of 100 acres. Mr. Davison is a member of the Belle Valley Presbyterian Church.

GEORGE DOLL, farmer, P. O. Erie, is a native of this township, born Sept. 18, 1839, son of Casper and Barbara (Drushal) Doll, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1837, settling in this township, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were parents of 4 children—Margaret, wife of Presley Waidley; Barbara, wife of Frederick Diehl; George and Casper, who married Charlotte Rusterholtz. Our subject was married, Apr. 28, 1864, to Eliza E., daughter of Nathan and Mary Foglebaugh, parents of 9 children, 8 now living, Mrs. Doll being the 4th. Having no children of their own, Mr. and Mrs. Doll adopted a girl named Lena G. when 9 years of age; she is now 15, a bright and fair young lady, in whom her foster-parents place great store. Our subject occupies the old home farm, situated in the western part of the township, 9 miles from Erie City. Mr. Doll's grandfather, Casper Doll, Sr., lived with his son Casper till he was ninety-two years of age. He died in 1866, his widow in 1881.

JOHN B. EVANS, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Sept. 3, 1835, in this township, son of James and Catharine (Brown) Evans, the former of whom was born July 13, 1806, in McKean Township, this county, son of John and Nancy (Porter) Evans, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn. John Evans, Sr. came to Erie Co. in 1802, and took up land, to pay which he borrowed money from Seth Reed without security. On returning the money to Mr. Reed some time afterward, Mr. Evans asked him how he came to trust him so far. "Because you have an honest face," replied Mr. Reed. John Evans was a marine in the war of 1812, and a great hunter in his day. He possessed a gun which he named "Jimmy." This gun he sold to James McKee, who, having a dispute with a Mr. Severlin, took "Jimmy" in his hand and shot him. James Evans was married, Dec. 1, 1834, to Catharine, daughter of Conrad and Catharine (Murcybaugh) Brown, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn. By this union were born John B., George A., Conrad B., William E., E. J. and P. A. Our subject was married, Feb. 20, 1862, to Sophia, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Love, who came to Erie Co. in 1802, settling in McKean Township. Mrs. Evans is the 6th child in a family of 12, of whom 7 are now living. Our subject is a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church in this township. His farm is nicely located on the Ridge road.

CAPT. GEORGE A. EVANS, farmer, P. O. West Mill Creek, was born Oct. 29, 1836, son of James and Catherine (Brown) Evans, early settlers of this county (see their biography). Our subject enlisted in Co. I, 145th P. V. I., Aug. 14, 1862, during the rebellion, and served to the close of the war. He participated in the most severe battles fought, such as Antietam, Fredericksburg (in which the regiment lost 250 men out of about 500 engaged), Chancellorsville, Gettysburg (in which the greater part of the regiment was cut to pieces in charging through the wheat field on the evening of July 3, all the officers being killed or wounded in his company except our subject), Mine Run, Auburn Heights, Bristow Station, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, and many other engagements. He passed through them all unscathed, with exception of a slight wound received at Petersburg. He was then placed on detached duty in October, 1864, and acted as Adjutant till the close of the war. On June 1, 1865, he was mustered out, and returned home, and on Dec. 26, same year, was married to Sophia J., daughter of R. G. Dunn. By this union are 3 children, 2 now living—Kate D. and Scott B. Mr. Evans owns a fine farm in the western part of Mill Creek Township. He has acted as School Director 5 years and Juror Commissioner 3 years.

CONRAD B. EVANS, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born Aug. 22, 1838, in Mill Creek Township, on the farm he now occupies; the 3d son of James and Catharine (Brown) Evans, former born in McKean Township, this county and State, whither his parents migrated at the end of the last century from Cecil Co., Md.; the latter near Erie, her parents having come from Berks Co., this State. Ancestors on the father's side were Scotch-Irish or Welsh, on the mother's of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. His father was a farmer; her father was a merchant in the city of Erie, and owner of large tracts of land. The brothers are John B.; Capt. Geo. A., of Co. I, 145th P. V. I.; Conrad B. Evans; Wm. E., in Fairview Township; E. James, in North East Township; Presley A., at home; the 5th in order of the brothers died in infancy. The subject of this article was married, Feb. 12, 1867, to Charlotte E., youngest daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Reed) Love. To this union were born 8 children, viz., Mary Gertrude, Frank Reed and Harry Grant (twins, Frank died in infancy), Frances Adelaide, James A., Charlotte E., Sophie L. and Ruth M. He enlisted during the war of the rebellion, Jan. 1, 1864; joined Co. A, of the 111th P. V. V. I., at Pittsburgh, Capt. Marcellus Todd in command of company. He was sent to the convalescent camp at Ringgold, Ga.; detailed while there, and soon after arriving to duty, in the Commissary Department. Being sent by imperative order to the front just before the battle of Peach Tree Creek, he entered the engagement, and was taken prisoner with many others of the right of the regiment, Col. Cobham being killed. Was sent to Andersonville Prison, where he remained until Sept. 20 following. Under Gen. Sherman's special cartel for exchange, he rejoined his regiment at Atlanta, and marched with the advancing column to the sea. After the siege of Savannah, he went with the army to Washington. He was detailed for a time at the division headquarters of Gen. Geary as a clerk to the Judge Advocate General. Was discharged in July, 1865, as Commissary Sergeant of the regiment. Being married, he has occupied the old home farm ever since, situated about 1½ miles south from the city of Erie, and added thereunto. Mr. Evans has filled several offices of trust in his town and county. He is a brother of the A. O. U. W., and comrade of the Strong Vincent Post, No. 67. Is a Republican from principle, and by birth and education as he was a soldier from pure patriotism, which he stoutly asseverated to his comrades by the camp fire. Is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Erie, and one of its session, and earnestly believes in its doctrines and creed.

JOHN FAGAN, deceased, was born in 1812 in this township, son of John and Mary (Logan) Fagan, natives of York Co., Penn., and who came to this county in 1800-02, settling in Mill Creek Township. During the war of 1812 they kept house for a Mr. Brown, who was afraid, owing to the troublous times, to live alone. Their family numbered 5 children—James, Hugh, Honor, Judah and John, none of whom are now living. Our subject was married, June 7, 1838, to Abigail, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Hadley) Moore. To this union were born 10 children, 7 now living, viz., John C., married to Ada Stedman, he is a member of the G. A. R.; William, in Chicago, he was a soldier in the late war; Charles, in San Francisco, Cal.; Frank, married to Carrie, daughter of Erue and Eliza Pherri, have 3 children—Elizabeth, John and Mabel; Richard married to Melissa Silvers of Kan., have one child—Ethel; Mary, wife of Joseph Helterline, have 1 child—George J.; and James, at present attending the Allegany College, N. Y.; John, who is in Erie City, Penn., was a soldier in the late war; Thomas was also a soldier, and died while in the service, his body was exhumed, brought home and re-interred. John Fagan, the subject of this sketch, was Constable and Assessor for this township. He died Dec. 1, 1882. Mrs. Fagan was a native of New York State. Her mother, who came to this county in 1838, having lost her first husband, married Mr. Robert Condon, who settled in Elk Creek Township, this county, where he died.

JACOB FARVER, deceased, was born in Little York, Penn., March 10, 1810; came to this county and settled in Weigleville, a village named after his wife's father, in 1826. Nicholson was the eldest of a family of 8 children. He was married in 1828, the year his father died, to Nancy, daughter of William Dogherty. Five children were born to this union, viz., Eliza J.; John, who was an Assistant Surgeon during the late war, and died while in the service; Martha, residing on the old homestead of her father; George, and Wm. D., living on a piece of land which was at one time owned by his grandfather John Nicholson. Mrs. Nicholson dying in 1838, our subject married in 1839, Margaret J., daughter of Patrick Brooks, a native of Ireland, of Scotch descent, who came to America in a very early day. There is no issue by this marriage. Mr. Nicholson died June 1, 1864. Mrs. Margaret J. Nicholson occupies the home farm in the south part of Mill Creek Township.

ANDREW NICHOLSON (deceased) was born May 13, 1812, in Erie Co., and died Oct. 14, 1865. His father, John, was born in County Donegal, Ireland; came to Fayette Co., Penn., in 1797, and to Erie Co. in 1800. He married Isabel Nicholson, a distant relative, by which union were born 8 children, viz., John E., Jane, Isabell, Matilda, Rebecca, Andrew, Eliza and George, the 2 latter now living. The father died Sept. 18, 1828, and Isabell, his widow, whose portrait appears in this work, died Dec. 25, 1866, at the patriarchal age of ninety-three years. She maintained her mental faculties till within a few days of her demise. Our subject attended the district schools, and worked on his father's farm. He was married, Feb. 11, 1846, to Eliza Brindle, daughter of Matthias and Elizabeth Brindle, natives of Franklin Co., Penn., and who came to Erie Co. in 1803, settling in Springfield Township. To this union were born 4 children—John E. (born Dec. 1, 1847, married Dec. 9, 1874, to Maria Hadley, in Crawford Co., Penn., have two children—Nellie E. and John E.), Perry M., Della I. and George W. John E. was in the U. S. gunboat service for one year on Silver Lake. He and George W. run the old homestead. Their sister, Della I., married S. H. Willis. Andrew Nicholson's parents were members of the Presbyterian Church; he attended the Methodist organization; was a staunch Republican. He died and was buried on the farm on which he was born. Further particulars of the Nicholson family will be found in another part of this work.

PETER E. NORCROSS, farmer, P. O. Belle Valley, was born May 25, 1821, in Mill Creek Township, this county, son of Andrew and Sarah (Erwin) Norcross, natives of N. J. Andrew Norcross came to Venango Township, this county, in 1802, purchased land, and returned to N. J. soon after. He then married, and moved with his family to Venango Township, and from there, in 1812, to this township, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were parents of 10 children, those now living are—William, in Mo.; Hannah, wife of E. Curtis, both deceased; Nancy, wife of E. Bennett, of Erie City; Jane, now Mrs. Wyatt, a widow residing in Wis.; Andrew F., who resides in Austin, Minn; and Peter E. John E., Elsie and Sarah A. are deceased. Our subject was married, Jan. 1, 1867, to Mary, daughter of Chas. M. Parry, and a native of N. Y. State. Her parents were born in England, came to N. Y. State in 1832-33, and settled in Oneida Co., where the father died and the mother still resides. They were parents of 9 children—John, deceased; William, Emma, deceased wife of Joseph Young; Charles, Harriet, wife of T. Smith; Elizabeth, wife of Lewis Dowley; Jane, deceased wife of J. Grant; Sarah, late Mrs. Limebeck; and Mrs. Norcross, wife of our subject, who had 2 children, Addie and Parry E., both at home. Mr. Norcross has an excellent farm, situated about 3 miles from Erie City.

JONAS A. PARKER (deceased) was born May 15, 1821, in this township, son of Jonas Parker, who came to Erie Co., Penn., in an early day, settling in Mill Creek Township, where he cleared a farm. He was twice married; had 6 children by his first wife, 8 by his second. Our subject was the seventh child by the last marriage. He was married, Jan 23, 1845, to Celia P., daughter of Col. Benjamin F. Norris, of New Hampshire. She was a native of Indiana, to which State her father moved and resided in for a few years. The family then came to Erie Co., settling in McKean, now Summit, Township, in 1824. Col. Norris spent his last days with his daughter, Mrs. Celia P. Parker, but died in Summit Township, and was buried on his own farm, his wife having preceded him several years. Col. and Mrs. Norris had a family of 6 children, viz.: Cornelia H., wife of W. A. Bean; Calista P., now Mrs. Graham; Cordelia A., wife of D. A. Taylor; Clinton; Franklin; Helen V., wife of William Liddell; and Celia P., wife of our subject. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker were born 10 children—Ashbell F., in Erie, has 1 child, Clare, in Nebraska, has 1 child, Olive Celia; Charlie A., in Erie, has 3 children—Maud, Clyde and George; W. S., deceased in New Mexico; Effie L.; Ella R., wife of Wm. Arbuckle, have 1 child, Scott G.; Edgar B.; Cora E., now Mrs. Valentine; Clinton N. and Bertha A. Mr. Parker died June 7, 1883, aged sixty-two years. He was a member of the Equitable Aid Society. His widow resides on the home farm, which is well stocked, with a dairy in connection.

GEORGE REED, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born May 20, 1840, in this county, son of Joseph and Jane (Grubb) Reed, who were married in 1837, former a son of Geo. Reed, who came to this county in 1800, settling in Mill Creek Township, where Joseph was born Nov. 17, 1805. Joseph died Sept. 17, 1844, leaving a widow and 3 children, viz.: John, married to Eliza Blair; Mary A., wife of C. A. Keyse, of Binghamton, N. Y.; and our subject, who was married, Nov. 7, 1867, to Sarah E., daughter of Jonathan Calvin, of Mercer Co., Penn. Nine children were born to this union, 5 now living—Calvin E., William G., Alice J., Lizzie A. and George. The deceased are Ida, Mary, Elda, Hattie and Emma. Our subject's mother was a daughter of Hon. John Grubb, who was born June 8, 1767, in Lancaster Co., Penn. He was first commissioned as Captain in the 7th Battalion Lancaster Co., Penn., militia, Oct. 12, 1792, and Sept. 11, 1794, was commissioned as Captain in the 2d Reg. Lancaster Brigade. In the spring of 1795, he came to this county in charge of a company, remaining until about 1798, in which year he went to York Co., Penn., and married Alicia, daughter of Thomas Cooper. Returning with his young wife, they settled in this township on the farm now occupied by his grandson, George Reed, our subject, where he died June 8, 1845. His family numbered 7 children, 2 sons and 5 daughters, all buried—father, mother and children—under a pine tree planted by Mrs. Grubb on the old farm, when they lost their first child. Hon. John Grubb was commissioned Major in the State militia Dec. 26, 1798; Justice of the Peace, April 15, 1797, and again May 16, 1801; County Commissioner, 1813 to 1815, and County Associate Judge Jan. 8, 1820, which last office he held till March 13, 1841. His wife was born in 1770, died Aug. 18, 1844. Benjamin Grubb, brother of the above, was born in March, 1777, married in June, 1800, and moved in that year to this county, settling in McKean Township on the farm now owned by John Pfeffer, where he died in 1845. His widow, who was 2 years younger, moved to Mercer Co., Penn., in 1856. She died at the age of eighty-six. George and John G. Reed, of Mill Creek Township, are the only descendants of Judge Grubb now remaining in this county. Mr. Reed, the subject of this sketch, is a member of the Central Presbyterian Church of Erie, in which he has held an eldership for 10 years.

CHRISTOPHER RILLING, of Mill Creek Township, Erie Co., was born Feb. 7, 1820, in Southern Germany. He was a son of Stephen and Mary (Young) Rilling, who came to America with their family in 1834, and settled in this township. Stephen Rilling, by trade, was a millwright, he died March 12, 1864; his wife died in 1843. They were parents of 12 children, 5 of whom are dead and 7 now living—Jacob and Christina, of Waterloo, Mo.; Barbara, wife of S. Speidle, and Mary, wife of H. Sherman, both of Richland, Wis.; Catharine, wife of J. Welmer, and George, both of this township, and our subject, who was married, in 1846, to Elizabeth, daughter of Valentine Ackerman. He worked for some time with his father as a millwright, but he soon abandoned his trade to engage in the manufacturing of oil cloths, which business he carried on quite extensively for a long time, but finally abandoned to become a farmer.

CHRISTIAN RIPLEY, merchant, Belle Valley, was born in 1842 in Summit Township, this county, son of David and Annie Ripley, who came to this county from Lancaster Co., Penn., in 1833, settling in Summit Township. They were parents of 10 children—David, in Greene Township, married to Mary A. Kuhl, have 7 children; Jacob in Erie City, married to Julia Barton, have 4 children; Sarah, wife of William Urch, of Greene Township, had 5 children, 3 deceased; Isaac, married to Elizabeth Robinson, have 2 children; Mary, wife of S. Kuhl; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Shields, of Greene Township, have 5 children; Abraham; John, in Erie City, married to Elizabeth Smith, have 2 children; Anna, wife of Charles Graham, have 6 children; and the subject of this sketch, who was married, in 1867, to Elizabeth, daughter of William Whiteford. To this union were born 6 children, 5 now living—Berdella J., William D., Edward C., Hattie E. and Minerva M. Mr. Ripley came to this township in 1881, locating on a piece of land in 1883. He has recently erected a commodious store in Belle Valley, which he has stocked with every article requisite for a general country store, and in exchange for which he takes all kinds of produce.

NATHANIEL WILLARD RUSSELL, the first-born of Hamlin and Sarah (Norcross) Russell, was born in Erie Co. March 11, 1812. His father came to this county from Connecticut in 1802, and was married here in 1811. Our subject had very limited educational opportunities, and did not attend school after he was fifteen. He remained with his father (his mother having died when he was nineteen years old) until March 10, 1833, when he began to earn money for himself by working on a neighboring farm and teaching school. His first purchase of land was 40 acres from his father at $10 per acre. Oct. 19, 1836, he left for Harrisburg, Penn., where he had obtained a position as clerk and bar-keeper in Buehler's Hotel. In April, 1836, by the aid of Gen. Simeon Cameron, he was appointed a conductor on the railroad between Harrisburg and Philadelphia, and in June following was promoted to U. S. Mail Agent at an increased salary. During the winter of 1838, he was induced to return to Buehler's Hotel and given general charge of the house. This was during the period known as "the buckshot war," one of the most eventful in Penn.'s history. March 23, 1839, Mr. Russell was made Capt. of the packet boat, Thomas Jefferson, of the fast passenger line between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, a position he held for 4 seasons. During the entire term of his residence in the East, he made annual visits to his parents of a few days each. The winter of 1840-41, he spent with his relatives in Erie Co., and during this period was married to Miss Eleanor S. Osborn, of Erie. The date of this interesting event was Jan. 14, 1841. March 1 he resumed his place on the canal, Mrs. Russell accompanying him to the State capital, and spending the summers with Mrs. Buehler. While in Harrisburg she was seized with bilious fever, which terminated in quick consumption, and Mr. Russell was obliged to bring her back to Erie, where she died on the 6th of January, 1842. In November of the same year he resigned his place on the canal and returned permanently to his old home. Soon after he purchased a farm of 90 acres within 3 miles of Erie. Sept. 1, 1843, he was married to Miss Frances A. Hubbell, of Troy, N. Y., and they went to housekeeping immediately after. A son was born in July, 1844, to whom the name of Henry Buehler was given. Mrs. Russell died on the 30th of January, 1849, and in January, 1851, Mr. Russell was married (for the third time) to Miss Emily Davison, of Mill Creek. Their only child is a daughter born May, 1853, who was named Ella Frances Russell. In April, 1855, Mr. Russell purchased and moved on the tract of land where he was born, and on which he still resides. The post office at Belle Valley was mainly established through his efforts. In 1849, he was appointed Aid-de-Camp to Gov. Johnston, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and, in 1868, he was elected Justice of the Peace, an office he has held continuously ever since. Mr. Russell is known in every part of Erie Co. as one of its wealthiest farmers and most intelligent citizens. He is remarkable for his wonderful memory, and is the standard authority on all matters connected with the early settlement of Erie Co.

J. C. RUSSELL (deceased) was born May 12, 1827, in Belle Valley, this county, son of Hamlin and Sarah (Noreross) Russell, who were among the pioneer families of the county. Our subject, in his youth, united with the Presbyterian Church of Erie City, Rev. Dr. Lyons being then pastor. Beginning life with a purpose, he lived an upright, useful and influential citizen. Mr. Russell married, in Feb., 1856, Miss O. A., daughter of James Chambers (see his biography). To this union were born 3 children, 2 now living—Albert L. and Ruth A. Our subject died Nov. 9, 1874, deeply lamented. He was a leading business man, and held the offices of Collector and Assessor, also School Director. Mrs. Russell occupies the home farm, which is well regulated and nicely located.

URAS SCHLURAFF, farmer, P. O. Erie, was born in Switzerland Nov. 18, 1818, son of Joseph and Maria (Stech) Schluraff, also natives of Switzerland, who had a family of 7 children—Catharine, Mary Ann, May and Uras surviving. Joseph came to America in 1833, settling in McKean Township, where he purchased 310 acres of land, and died in 1840. His widow removed to Waukesha, Wis., where she died about 1853. Uras Schluraff, our subject, was married, Jan. 30, 1844, to Rosannah, daughter of George and Fanny Waidley, natives of Lancaster Co., Penn.; 5 children were born to this union—Levi W., Sarah J., Louisa D. (deceased), George R. and Franklin S. Mrs. Schluraff was born Aug. 24, 1824, and died March 16, 1878. Mr. Schluraff, who is by trade a carpenter, worked at the same at intervals for 25 years. On the death of his father, he became owner of the home farm, which he sold in 1859, removing in 1860 to West Mill Creek, where he purchased his present farm of 75 acres, 8 miles from Erie, which is well stocked and has excellent farm buildings. Mr. Schluraff served as Road Commissioner of McKean Township 1 term, and of Mill Creek Township 3 terms; he was also School Director of the former and Assessor and Auditor of the latter. For some time he was President of the Humboldt Trust & Deposit Co. of Erie. In politics he is a Democrat. Levi W., residing on the home farm with his father, was married, April 17, 1867, to Polly A., daughter of John and Hannah (Burr) Buys, natives of N. Y. State and Penn. respectively. She was born July 20, 1846, and was the mother of Minnie I., Osie R., Maggie U. (deceased), Burr U., Orr L. and Wade Winfield. Levi W. Schluraff owns a farm of 63 acres in Crawford Co. He has held the office of School Director 3 terms and Assessor of Mill Creek one term. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.; in politics is a Democrat.

JACOB SHUE (deceased) was born Dec. 25, 1812, in York Co., Penn., and came to this county with his uncle, Mr. Hinkle, in 1828. He married, in 1842, Anna, daughter of Jacob Rhoades, who bore him 4 children—William H.; John, married to Margaret Waidley; Jacob C., deceased; and Tillie, deceased. Our subject died in 1877. He was a successful farmer of Mill Creek Township and had accumulated an excellent property, located in the central portion of the township, on which the surviving members of the family now reside. His widow has in her possession a German Bible over 100 years old, which she prizes very highly, the property at one time of her great-grandfather.

Isaac Zimmerly moved to Ohio, remaining in New Lisbon, and from there came to Pittsburgh, Penn., and in 1828 to Erie Co., settling on the farm on which Daniel Tracy now resides. From there he again moved to Pittsburgh, where he died in the fall of 1836. Our subject was educated in Erie, and in 1830 entered service on board the revenue cutter "Erie" on which vessel he remained 8 months. Afterward sailed on merchant vessels on the lakes until 1836, when he went on the Ohio River. In 1837, he went to sea on the barque James Anderson, trading between the Rio Grande, New Orleans, Cuba, Philadelphia, etc.; following that, again went on the Revenue Cutter for two years. In 1844, he was appointed

Captain of the schooner R. C. Mead, which he sailed 3 years; then took charge of the Effort, 3 years; the Colt, 4 years; the Signal, 3 years, and lost her; subsequently built the Arrow, and sailed her 6 years. His last vessel was the barque Excelsior. In 1871, our subject retired from seafaring life, and settled on his present farm. Capt. Zimmerly was married, Dec. 8, 1845, to Susanna, daughter of Jacob Gintz. By this union were 4 children—Susan C., deceased; Samuel J.; Annie E., wife of Dr. Garries; and Mary L., wife of Frank Shirk.

He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and the Equitable Aid Union.

REV. F. BRIODY, present priest of the Catholic Church, North East, was born in 1851, in Ireland, son of John and Ann (Lynch) Briody. He came to America alone, in the interests of his church only, leaving father, mother and friends behind, and entered St. Bonaventure College, State of New York, from which he graduated, and in which he was ordained priest. From there our subject came to Erie, and was shortly assigned by the Bishop to the charge of the church at North East, which is composed of 50 families, chiefly farmers. The church is in a prosperous condition, and the flock a quiet and contented people.

TRISTRAM H. BROWN, farmer, P. O. North East, was born April 19, 1824, on the farm he now resides on, son of Lyman (born in 1800), and Lavina (Shaddock) Brown, natives of Connecticut. His grandfather came to Erie in 1778, and took up land at 50 cents per acre, the same land on which the family now reside, and where he lived and died. Lyman Brown had 12 children, viz., Betsy, Lyman, Sewel, Lavina, Harriet and Henry (twins), Maria, Lydia, Eunice, David, Mary, and our subject, who was married, in 1847, to Rebecca, daughter of Joseph Dippo. To this union were born 6 children—Harvey L., married Sept. 25, 1872, to Kate Killhane, have 3 children—Katie, Annie and Hattie; Barnett W., married, in 1878, to Josephine Ennis, have 2 children living—Bertie and May E.; Mary E., at home; Horace T., married June 4, 1881, has 1 child—Maude A.; Joseph D., married, June 27, 1876, Carrie Geibel, have 3 children—Lillie P., Carrie R. and Rosa T.; and Hattie S., a most estimable young lady, killed by the cars at the crossing in North East Township. Mrs. Brown died in 1879. Mr. Brown's brother, David, served during the rebellion, in Capt. Dyer Loomis' company.

AMOS BURCH, farmer, P. O. Moorheadville, was born in 1826 in Fort Ann, Washington Co., N. Y., son of Benjamin and Phebe (Newman) Burch, parents of 5 sons—Clark, deceased; Henry, deceased; Reuben, deceased; Benjamin, and Amos, our subject, and 3 daughters—Clarissa, wife of Thomas Miles, deceased; Emeline, wife of Charles Moore, deceased, and Sarah, wife of Samuel Miles. Benjamin Burch, Sr., died in 1828. Our subject was married, Nov. 6, 1853, to Permelia, daughter of John and Sarah (Hammond) Jones, natives of England. To this union were born—Frances, married to Clinton Shaddock, have 2 children—Jessie and Tamott; Emory, and Sarah, wife of Prof. Adison Chatley, have 2 children—Estella and Bertha. Mr. Burch served in the navy during the war of the rebellion, and was discharged on account of sickness. He is a member of a free Baptist Church; is owner of 300 acres of land. For a long time after he and his mother, brothers and sisters moved to this section, the only guide to their home through the woods was marked trees. Maple sugar was made in the frying-pan, tea kettle or other such vessel, and sold for 6 cents per pound. The nearest store was 7 miles distant; their mansion a rude log-house with a roof of bark, and floor of something like split rails. Two of our subject's cousins, Peter and Eli, sons of Ellet Burch, went into the woods one wintry November day to hunt up the cattle, and they wandered about until the younger died. His brother then buried him in the snow, leaving his handkerchief to mark the spot, and going a little further on laid down and died, no doubt of a broken heart, as, when found, his body was not frozen. Mr. Burch can relate many incidents of the many trials he had to undergo in his boyhood days, when he had to go miles to the nearest school without coat or shoes, and of the determination he made to be some day equal at least to those who sneered then at his poverty.

CHAUNCEY CAMPBELL, retired farmer, P. O. North East, was born in 1803, in Benson, Rutland Co., Vt., son of John and Abigail (Barlow) Campbell, natives of Massachusetts, and who came to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where they died. They are natives of Connecticut, Leverett being a direct descendant from the Pilgrims who landed from the Mayflower at Plymouth Rock.

EDWIN C. CUSTARD, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in Nov., 1833, on the farm on which he now resides, son of Robert and Vashti (Phillips) Custard, natives of Pennsylvania. Our subject's grandfather, Abraham Custard, who was of German descent, came to this county in 1796, and moved his family the following year, when there was but one cabin where the city of Erie now stands. He had a family of 7 children—Jesse, who served in the war of 1812; William, Polly, Sarah, Benjamin, Robert and Jane. Robert was born in 1797; was married to Vashti Phillips, by whom were 6 children—Dimmis, Elsie A., Abram, Sarah, Martha J. and Edwin C., our subject, who was married, in 1867, to Sarah E., daughter of F. B. Skinner. The old homestead on which he now resides was purchased of the Government by his grandfather.

ALEXANDER DAVIDSON, farmer, P. O. North East, was born Nov. 4, 1808, in Pompey, Onondaga Co., N. Y., son of Andrew and Hannah (Hine) Davidson, parents of 6 children, of whom 2 survive—Mrs. Betsey Atkins (has 4 sons, who were all in the army during the rebellion, and 4 daughters), and our subject. Andrew Davidson was engaged in the war of 1812, during which he died of fever. The widow then, in 1816, moved with her 5 children from Buffalo, N. Y., to Erie Co. They came on the ice in a large sleigh drawn by 2 yoke of oxen, bringing with them also 5 cows. Mrs. Davidson then bought 200 acres of woodland, and in the course of time, by industry and thrift, acquired a good property. Alexander Davidson, her youngest son and the subject of this sketch, was married, Feb. 4, 1831, to Mary A. Andrews, who died in 1837, leaving no issue. Mr. Davidson then married Marrilla Curtis, by whom were 2 children—Augusta, married to Wm. P. Taylor, of Buffalo; and Roscoe, station agent at North East depot. W. A. ENSIGN, President of the First National Bank, North East, was born June 7, 1827, in that borough, son of Harmon and Sally (Hall) Ensign, natives of Litchfield, Conn., the former of whom came to Erie Co. in 1815 on foot, with a pack on his back, but in a short time returned to Connecticut. On peace being declared with Great Britain, he again came to Erie Co. where he spent the remainder of his days, dying in March, 1875. He left 2 children—Mrs. Sarah A. Belnap and our subject, who was married Oct. 14, 1856, to Miss J. Y., daughter of John McCord, and a native of Pennsylvania. To this union was born Charles A., now Cashier First National Bank, North East.

OREN O. FARNSWORTH, farmer, P. O. Northville, was born in 1815 in the village of Greenfield, son of John and Sarah (Whitney) Farnsworth, natives of New York, and who came to Erie County in 1814, settling in Greenfield Township, where they died, the former in 1834, the latter in 1858. Their children were Josiah, Thomas, John, Zuba, Polly, Hiram, David, Titus, Lucetta, Eliza, Manander, and our subject, who was married in 1846 to Sarah, daughter of William and Mary P. (Brown) Ackles, natives of the North of Ireland. To this union were born Mary (wife of George Taylor, have three children—Frederick, Bertie and May), Sarah A. (wife of Eugene Dudley, have four children—Victor, Clyde, Charles and Lee), Emma (at home), Carrie, Nat and George. Mary was a school teacher seven terms; Sarah taught music. The family have all received good education with instruction in music. Mr. Farnsworth has a farm of 50 acres on the line of New York State, in a fine location and with every improvement.

ISAAC R. FITHIAN, merchant, Buffalo, N. Y., is a son of Benjamin and Mary E. (Judd) Fithian, the former a native of New Jersey, the latter of Connecticut, who came to Erie Co. in 1800, settling on the Lake Shore road, where Thomas Crawford now resides in North East Township. They remained there till 1837, when they sold their farm and moved to Lockport, N. Y. Mr. Eastman, who bought the Judd farm, and Capt. Freeman Judd, Mr. Fithian's godfather, were founders of the paper mill now owned and managed by D. A. Swaney. Freeman Judd, Sr., came to Erie Co. in 1800, and died of cholera in North East in 1834. His daughter, Mrs. Haywood, has 3 children living—Alfred A., Stephen, and Margaret, wife of Thomas Youngs. Capt. Freeman Judd was a seaman, and he along with Benjamin Fithian bought the iron of the vessel sunk by Com. Perry in Lake Erie, and used it in the construction of the "Swiftsure," a trading ship plying between Buffalo and New York. Capt. Judd also built the "Navigator." Freeman Judd, Sr., was a Revolutionary soldier of 7 years' service. He and his 3 sons built the old block-house near Erie. His brother Philo, who was a Government Surveyor of lands in Michigan, contracted fever there, died and was buried in North East. Benjamin Fithian had 4 children—F. J. (attorney-at-law and Judge of the Court, New York), Harriet (who died in Erie), Maria (wife of R. M. Skeels) and Isaac R., who was married, in 1851, to Caroline Winchester, of Lockport, N. Y. To this union were born Frank (married in California), Kate (wife of William Martin, Buffalo, N. Y.), and Clara (at home). Mr. Fithian has for many years been engaged in mercantile business at 162 Virginia street, Buffalo, N. Y.

WILLIAM and FRANK FROMYER, carriage-makers, North East. Their father, who was a tanner by trade, came with his family to America in 1851, remaining in Buffalo one year, and from there went to Versailles, N. Y., thence to Silver Creek, N. Y., and finally to North East. William and Frank came to North East in 1873, and bought the shop then owned by Sampson Short, and formerly carried on by French & Sons, and also by a Mr. Randall. Messrs. Fromyer are doing a successful trade, turning out the very best of work at remarkably low figures. They are credited with making the finest sleighs in the county. They are attentive to their business and popular in the community in which they reside.

E. N. FULLER, retired farmer, P. O. North East, was born in 1809 in Madison Co., N. Y., son of Elisha and Rachel (Brainard) Fuller, natives of Connecticut, and parents of 6 children, of whom the only survivor is our subject. He was married in 1835 to Louisa Yeomans, a native of New York State. He came to Erie Co., settling in North East Township on a farm now owned by Mrs. Griffith, on which he set out one of the finest vineyards in the township. He remained on the farm till 1859, when his business called him into the borough of North East, where he has an elegant residence near the Lake Shore R. R. His children are: Mrs. Sophia Fuller (has 2 children, Lytle and Ella, now Mrs. Weaver, with one daughter, Mabel); Mrs. Melvinia Boice (has 2 sons, William and Lee); Elisha, married to Miss Shanklin (have 1 child living, William Newell); Leander Sparrow, married to Miss Betty Bennett (have 4 children, Carrie, Lulu, Newell T., Ella M.); Jenette, wife of G. W. Butt, deceased in 1872, leaving 1 daughter, Nellie. Mr. Fuller taught the first school in the township after the new laws came in force, and was School Director for many years. He is a Universalist in religious belief, and is anxious that the creeds of the Evangelical Churches should be revised. Universalism is not known in Evangelical Churches.

I. R. GAY, miller, P. O. Northville, was born of parents Henry and Clarissa Gay, of Herkimer Co., N. Y. State, in 1830. His parents moved to Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1832, where he resided until 1858, when he removed to a farm in North East Township, Erie Co., Penn.; he removed from there to Washington Hollow in 1876, where he still resides. This is a deep ravine surrounded by an amphitheater, in the eastern part of the county; here in company with his brother-in-law, he ran 2 mills, a saw and grist mill. The site is the oldest in Erie Co., the mill having stood there 90 years. Our subject was married to Diana, daughter of Hezekiah and Rosanna (Rich) Mason, by whom were 3 children—Edith, wife of J. Bartlett, who has 2 children, Fannie E. and Allen P.; Bertha R., wife of M. H. Smith, deceased, have 3 children, Jay G., Ira R., Guy M.; and Cassius M. Mr. Gay has held the office of Road Commissioner; is a member of the Equitable Aid Society of Ripley, N. Y., A. O. U. W. in Ripley, also Royal Arcanum society.

J. L. GREEN, Justice of the Peace, North East, was born in Brockport, Monroe Co., N. Y., son of Lewis and Mary (Tew) Green, the former a native of New York State, the latter of Connecticut. They were the parents of 2 children—Martha A., wife of David

Pease, of North East, had 7 children, viz.: L. E., in Iron Works, Erie; James A., died in California; Mrs. May Bentley, also died in California; Lillie, in North East; Mrs. Martha W. Graham, in California; Nellie, deceased, and Eddie, at home; and our subject. He was married in 1861, to Mary, daughter of Seneca and Matilda Downer. To this union were born 2 children—one died in infancy, and George A., at home. Mr. Green came to North East in his tenth year. He holds the office of Justice of the Peace, and has been Clerk of the town several years. He is a member of the Masonic order.

GEORGE HALL, farmer, P. O. Northville, was born Jan. 19, 1808, in New Haven, Conn., son of Harvey and Sarah (Hull) Hall, natives of Connecticut, and who came to Erie Co. from Washington Co., N. Y., in 1821. They cleared land and lived near the village of Waterford. In the spring of 1831, they moved to Ripley, N. Y., where they remained until 1851. They then removed to Erie City, where they died, the former March 2, 1863, aged eighty-three, and the latter in 1868, aged ninety. They were parents of 12 children, 7 now living—Mrs. Hannah Hood and Mrs. Olive Hood, widows; Harvey, Samuel, Luther, Peter, and our subject, who was married, May 4, 1834, to Rachel, daughter of Abijah Hull. To this union were born 4 children—Delilah L., Mary E. (deceased), Huldah M. (deceased), and Ottilia A. (wife of D. C. Bostwick). Mr. Hall has a well-regulated farm situated on the eastern line of the township and county, where he first settled in 1834. He well remembers in 1814, standing on a bench to help saddle the horse for his father, who was called out at a moment's warning to meet the "Britishers" at Plattsburg.

A. E. HALL, retired farmer, P. O. North East, born Dec. 26, 1812, in Litchfield, Conn., son of William and Therina (Vaugh) Hall, natives of Connecticut, who came to North East, then Burgettstown, in 1815. William Hall, one of the first merchants of North East, took up 400 acres north of the village, and also 10 acres within the same, on a portion of which he built the North East House (Brawley House). William Hall died while returning from Cuba, accompanied by his son, A. E., at Grand Gulf, Miss., March 6, 1833, aged forty-eight; his widow died August 24, 1873. They had 9 children—Wm. L., born 1809, died 1883; Elizabeth, born 1810, died 1845, married N. A. Lowry; Augustus E.; Sally S., born 1815, died 1819; Susan, born 1818, married Joel Loomis; Lydia A., born 1821; Mary, born 1823, married Chas. Metcalf; Samuel W., born 1825, died 1866; Sarah L., born 1828, married William Ross. A. E. Hall married Nancy B., surviving daughter of John and Mary (Harkness) McCord, Dec. 12, 1839; they have 1 child—William A., married to Burga Fry, have 3 children, John Mc., Mary E., Nancy B. John McCord came to North East in 1800, and took up 400 acres, a portion of which is now the farm of Sampson Short. Mrs. Hall's 2 sisters, Peggy and Griselda, were burned to death when their father's house was destroyed by fire in 1819. A. E. Hall was Postmaster at North East from 1834 to 1842.

L. G. HALL, physician, North East, was born in Saratoga Co., N. Y., June 6, 1820; son of Justus and Rachel (Gibbs) Hall, who moved from Saratoga Co. to Genesee Co., N. Y., about 1825 or 1826. They remained in Genesee Co. till the winter of 1834, at which time they moved into Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; very much of this county was at this time a wilderness. Our subject remained with his parents 6 years, helping them to clear the farm, enduring the hardships and privations incident to pioneer life. At the age of twenty years, he left home and went to Lodi, now Gowanda, a village located partly in Cattaraugus, and partly in Erie Co., N. Y. Most of the following 3 years were spent in attending school summers, and teaching school winters. The Doctor commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Seth Fields in Gowanda, N. Y., in 1843, remaining in office one year. In 1844, he entered the office of S. G. Ellis, M. D., as a student, and attended for a time medical lectures at Geneva, N. Y. In the term of 1845-46, he attended a full course of lectures at Willoughby, Ohio. On May 14, 1846, our subject commenced the practice of medicine and surgery in Tidioute, Warren Co., Penn., where he remained till the fall of 1849, and then went to the university of Buffalo (medical department) where he graduated in Feb., 1850. In the spring of that year, Dr. Hall located in the city of Meadville, Penn., remaining till fall, when he removed to Wattsburg, where he practiced his profession for 10 years. Then moved to North East, where he has since remained, save a few years during and following the war of the rebellion, when he was in the city of Dunkirk, N. Y. Our subject was married, Sept. 13, 1848, to Miss Mary Ann Graves, daughter of Lester and Sophia (Ransford) Graves, of Perrysburg, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. To this union were born 3 daughters and 1 son. The second daughter is married to J. J. Graham, farmer, North East, Penn., and the son is a graduate of Baltimore College of Physicians and Surgeons.

JAMES H. HAYNES, retired merchant, North East, was born Aug. 4, 1804, in Pawling, Dutchess Co., N. Y., son of Sanford and Hannah (Gould) Haynes, who were natives of Connecticut, and also parents of Mrs. Rachel Bently, Mrs. Sophia Webb, Mrs. Lucy Harper, Mrs. Rebecca Ingersoll, Hiram, Huron and Samuel—all deceased. The winter of 1812, our subject removed with his parents to a farm near Westfield, N. Y. At the age of fourteen years, he was left a homeless orphan, and engaged as an apprentice in a carriage manufactory. Success attended his efforts, and he remained working at his trade at the above-mentioned place, where, in 1825, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Bently. To this union were born 6 children, viz., Harriet M., wife of J. M. Mills, North East, Penn.; Anna, deceased 1863, wife of Burton Campbell, Baltimore, Md.; James S.; Charles B., who was in Government employ in Denver, Colo. In 1861, went to Mexico, was robbed by Spaniards; then returned to Denver, where he was appointed Quartermaster, and served during the rebellion; was elected to the Lower House, and next to the Senate of Colorado. He was drowned by the great flood of Cherry Creek in 1864; Byron, was clerk in his brother-in-law's store, and died in 1873; Josephine, wife of W. W. Pierce, hardware merchant of Erie, Penn. His first wife dying Nov. 15, 1869, Mr. Haynes married, Jan. 12, 1871, Mrs. Eunice Welsh, of Plymouth, Ind. She had one child—Eva, wife of George Sterrett, Erie, Penn. Mr. H. came to Erie Co. in May, 1829, and settled in North East, where he built a flouring mill, to which he subsequently attached the first smut machine used in this county. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits for 27 years, retiring in favor of his son, James S., in 1862, who still continues the business. The large hotel on the corner of Main and Lake streets, known as the Haynes House, was built by him in 1853. He also built the Methodist Church, of which he has been an honored member for 55 years. About the building up of North East as a town are many enduring testimonials of the energy, perseverance, self-reliance and enterprising spirit which was ever characteristic of Mr. Haynes in all his undertakings. Life's battles he has bravely fought, and now, resting in the satisfaction of acquired wealth, the once penniless boy is scarcely to be recognized in the faltering step and gray-haired pilgrim of nearly eighty years.

THADDEUS HISTED, farmer, P. O. North East, was born Oct. 8, 1833, in North East Township, son of J. S. and Alzina (Perkins) Histed, natives of New York, and parents of 8 children, 3 now living, viz., Esther E., wife of C. O. Smith (have 3 children—Jay, Ellie and Berzilla); Henry E., has 2 children; and our subject, who was married, April 18, 1866, to Emma J., daughter of Jeremy and Amy Bird. To this union were born 4 children—Flora M., Nettie B., John E. and Charles B. Mr. Histed enlisted Sept. 10, 1861, in Co. I, 9th N. Y. Cav.; went into camp at Westfield, N. Y., drilled for a few weeks; then went to Albany Barracks; from there to Washington, and went into camp, drilling all winter. In the spring of 1862, he went to Yorktown, thence back to Washington, where they were mounted and equipped for active service; crossed the Potomac; was in some slight skirmishes and at the second battle of Bull Run. In the winter of 1862, our subject was detailed at Brigade Headquarters at Hall's Hill, Va., to carry the mail to and from Washington. In the spring of 1863, he was detailed as Forage Master for the regiment, and did duty in that capacity until May 7, 1864. When his train lay at Chancellorsville, Mr. Histed found his regiment near Todd's Tavern, Va. On the skirmish line, he asked the Colonel when he should come with the forage; his answer was, "God only knows." He remained with the regiment but a short time, before they were ordered to the left to support a battery near the Wilderness. When they arrived at the battery, the orders were to prepare to fight on foot, count off by fours, every fourth man to hold four horses. Our subject had no weapon except a Colt's revolver, so he asked a comrade, William Shad-duck, for his carbine and cartridges, and went into the fight. They drove the enemy back to their breastworks in the woods. While loading his carbine, Mr. Histed received a musket ball through his right arm below the elbow, breaking the arm in splinters. His carbine fell to the ground, and in stooping to pick it up, received an explosive ball in the left hand, badly lacerating the flesh. Before he had time to move, he received a charge of fine shot in the right hand, a revolver ball in the left arm near the shoulder, breaking the bone. He carried the ball in his arm 13 months before it was extracted. He had also a very bad shell wound in the left breast; a slight wound in the neck; had his watch struck with buck and ball, which badly demoralized the gearing; was taken prisoner, but re-captured next day; was then sent to Washington, thence to Philadelphia, thence home, where he staid until Dec., and then went back to Philadelphia, thence to Washington, where he remained till Sept. 1, 1865. Mr. Histed was discharged, and returned home a mere wreck of his former self as to health and strength.

CHARLES A. HITCHCOCK, attorney at law, North East, was born Aug. 9, 1836, in New Haven, N. Y., son of Miron and Sarah A. (Wright) Hitchcock, natives of New York State, the former of whom came to Harbor Creek Township, and died in May, 1869, in Greenfield Township; the latter died March 10, 1877, in North East Township. They had 10 children, viz., Mrs. Helen Watson; Esther; Milton, a widower; Newton, married to Ellen Lewis; Mary, wife of William Addison; Sarah, wife of S. E. Mitchell; Annie, wife of William Burnley; Alice, wife of J. Spofford; Ida, deceased; and our subject. He was married, Oct. 13, 1859, to Hannah, daughter of Wm. P. and Elizabeth (Charlock) Edwards, former a native of Connecticut, latter of New York City. To this union were born Alice, deceased Jan. 9, 1863; Frederick E., deceased May 22, 1864; Emma I., deceased April 5, 1869; Josie L., deceased March 20, 1877; E. C.; Sarah, married in 1869 to S. A. Mitchell, have 3 children—Anna M., Charles A. and Alice S. Mrs. Edwards, mother of Mrs. Charles A. Hitchcock, died Oct. 25, 1883, in the village of North East, Penn. Our subject was a Justice of the Peace 2 terms, and was twice elected Assemblyman. He was appointed Internal Revenue Collector, but resigned in order to give his time to an invention for separating gold dust in the mines, and he is now in California operating the same.

CLARK D. JAMESON, cabinet-maker, dealer in furniture, and undertaker, North East, was born April 5, 1823, in Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., son of Hugh and Susanna (Moore) Jameson, the former of whom was twice married. His first wife was the mother of 7 children, three of whom survive—William W., in Genesee Co., N. Y., has four children; Helen J., unmarried; and our subject. His second wife was Mrs. Mahala Clark, a widow, who had four children—Susannah, Herrick, Ruth and Henry. Our subject was also twice married. On the first occasion, Sept. 7, 1848, to Eliza Henshaw, by whom he had 2 children—Grace A., wife of J. P. Goodrich, of Sherman, N. Y., has one child—Lorenny G.; and Lillie A., at home. Mr. Jameson's second marriage occurred Dec. 11, 1862, with Mrs. Lorency Stull, a widow with one child—James B., now at college. Mr. Jameson learned his trade in 1841, of Chappell & Perkstaff, of North East. He is a highly-skilled and competent workman, as his work will testify in his shop in North East, which is stocked with everything connected with his trade.

HORACE JANES, farmer, P. O. Northville, was born Aug. 23, 1825, in North East Township, son of Oliver and Emily (Lee) Janes, the former a relative of the eminent Dr. Janes, and the latter a sister of the well-known Elder Lee, natives of Vermont; came to Erie Co. in 1816 with his father, Humphrey Janes, a soldier in the war of 1812, and a farmer of good standing. Oliver Janes had ten children, of whom are now living Mrs. Betsy Goodrich; Oliver, married to Ellen Philip; Hannah, married first to Moses Barnett, afterward to Mr. La Rue; Hiram, married to A. Tidd; Seth O., and our subject, who was married March 27, 1860, to Mary, daughter of Harry and Polly (Crawford) Rogers, the latter a daughter of Thomas Crawford, an old settler on the lake shore. To this union were born 6 children, viz.: Emma L., born July 17, 1861, died Jan. 10, 1880; Addie M., born Jan. 29, 1863; Arthur H., born Jan. 9, 1865, died Sept. 1, 1883; Frank C., born May 9, 1868, died Jan. 10, 1869; Wm. H., born Nov. 13, 1869; Mary E., born Sept. 7, 1871. The deceased are Frank, Emma and Arthur. Mr. Janes is a strongly-built man, at one time weighing 267 pounds. He once lifted a 43 gallon pipe of liquor from the floor to the top of the counter and back again to the floor.

JAMES S. JOHNSON, retired farmer and paper manufacturer, North East, was born in 1813, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., son of Uriah L. and Mahitabel (Sprague) Johnson, early settlers of Chautauqua Co., where they died. Their family numbered 8 children, 4 now living—William in Omar, N. Y.; Parl, in Laona, N. Y.; Marilla, wife of Joel Day, of Springfield, Penn., and our subject. He was married in May, 1840, to Nancy B., daughter of Theodore Childs, who built the first carding mill in Erie Co. To this union were born 6 children, viz.: Caroline C.; C. U., one of the proprietors of the Dispatch, Erie, married to a daughter of Mr. Mills, of North East, have one child—Maud Haynes; Hattie F., wife of Frank P. Taylor, West Liberty, Ohio, have 2 children—Ralph and Sprague; Helen May, wife of J. B. Parker; N. T., wife of Frank Mills, of Erie; and Lulu, wife of Eugene T. Funk. Mr. Johnson was foreman of a paper mill for 40 years, and is a practical paper manufacturer of 55 years' experience. He commenced the trade when a boy, first making paper by hand. On coming to Erie he engaged as journeyman with Wm. L. Hall, and in 1852 bought the mill from John Scouller, and ran it till 1883, when he sold to Cochran & Young, of Erie City. In politics, he is a Republican; his first vote was cast for Andrew Jackson.

A. F. JONES, merchant, North East, was born in 1833, in Allegany Co., N. Y., son of Reuben and Celia M. (Partridge) Jones, natives of Connecticut, and who came to Erie Co. in 1835, settling on Walnut Creek, 9 miles north of Erie; the former died in 1842, the latter in Feb., 1881, aged eighty-four years. They had 4 children—Bradford, in Minnesota; Sarah, deceased; Sophia; and our subject, who was married, in 1872, to Nellie, daughter of Joseph B. Moorhead. By this union were 5 children, 4 living—Frank H., Corinne M., Paul P. (died in infancy), Walter B. and Ruth M. (twins). Mr. Jones has been engaged in mercantile business for 30 years in Erie Co., chiefly in North East. He is now located in the Webb Block. He has served as Councilman; is a member of the K. of H.

HENRY KENDALL, son of Abel Kendall, was born at Royalton July 19, 1816. He came to North East with his father, and settled on the farm which is now the old homestead, and which comprises 100 acres of well watered and highly cultivated land. Our subject married Susan McCann Apr. 4, 1839. To this union were born 7 children—Mary S., born March 25, 1840, married M. C. Putnam March 14, 1860, and had 4 children—Lizzie, Jennie, Eddie, Grace; Calista S., born Apr. 28, 1842, married D. of Edinboro (she died in 1876, leaving 1 child—Anna); and E. H. Our subject was married in 1862 to Jennie, daughter of R. S. and Rebecca (Greer) Browley. To this union was born 1 son, William B., at home with his father. E. H. Kennicott has been engaged in merchandising for twenty years, and probably carries the largest stock of any merchant in the borough. In 1879, Mr. Samson Short, and the firm of Short, Blaine & Co., succeeded to an interest in the business, and the firm became as now known. The capital is ample, and they are enabled to purchase goods on the lowest cash basis. Their stock embraces almost everything in the way of dry goods, notions, hosiery, underwear, groceries, provisions, flour and feed, and a considerable assortment of hardware, cutlery, glassware, etc., aggregating in value from $10,000 to $12,000. These goods are all sold at prices which cannot be discounted. Mr. Kennicott is a thorough merchant, and a good judge of what will best suit the demands of his trade. He enjoys in an unusual degree the confidence and respect of his neighbors, and occupies a prominent position among the business men of the town.

ZENUS M. KING, blacksmith and wagon-maker, North East, was born in 1825 in North East, son of Earl and Persina (Brown) King (latter a daughter of Dr. Tristram Brown), who came from Rhode Island in 1798. By this union were 3 children—Mary E., deceased; Joseph W., on the homestead; and George Lamartine, deceased. He formed a company of volunteers in 1862, of which he was Captain. His son, J. W., enlisted in Co. F, 111th Reg., in his nineteenth year. George Lamartine enlisted in Co. C, 145th Reg., his father's command, in his eighteenth year; he contracted the typhoid fever at Harper's Ferry, and died 4 weeks after being brought home, in Nov., 1862; his sister, who nursed him, took the same fever and died the following month. Mrs. Dyer Loomis died Nov. 30, 1867. He was taken prisoner at the battle at Chancellorsville, and imprisoned in Libby Prison; was discharged from the service in Sept., 1863. He was elected a Justice of the Peace in 1845, and continued in office 35 years; is now a Notary Public. Was elected an Elder in the Presbyterian Church in 1849, and still retains the office. His father and mother, Dyer and Nancy (Wood) Loomis, came to Erie Co. in 1796-97, the former a native of Connecticut, and the latter of Rhode Island, and settled on the farm occupied by our subject. He was the first Constable and Deputy Sheriff in what was then known as Upper and Lower Greenfield. Dyer Loomis, Sr., died in 1842, leaving 12 children from a family of 15, 6 of whom are now living—Sally, a maiden lady in North East; Nancy, a widow in Batavia, Ill.; Eliza Gilman, in North East; Mary Glidden, Kansas; William, in Pullman, Ill., and our subject.

R. S. LOOMIS (deceased) was born Jan. 20, 1811, in North East, Penn. He received his early education in the place of his nativity, and at the age of fifteen left home to seek some pursuit in which to engage through life. He chose the trade of carpenter, and after an apprenticeship and some time occupied as journeyman, he became a master workman. In 1828, he came to Erie Co., and carried on his trade in North East Village till 1830. He afterward purchased a farm, which he cultivated until his death. He was there appointed Chorister in the Presbyterian Church, a position he held for 30 years. He was married in 1833 to Sarah, daughter of Amos Tuttle. To this union were born the following children: Sarah A. and Susan A., twins, both deceased; A. T., married to Marion Colt, have 2 children—George C. and Mabel T.; John J. and Ella May, at home with their mother; Mary Louise, deceased; Francis A., deceased. The subject of this sketch was a man much respected in the community in which he lived, and was greatly missed at his death, which occurred Aug. 12, 1873. He was a member and Trustee of the Presbyterian Church for many years. Mrs. Loomis, her daughter and 1 son reside on the old homestead built by Mr. Loomis many years ago.

JOEL LOOMIS, Jr., farmer, P. O. North East, was born in 1813 in North East, son of Joel and Susannah (Baird) Loomis, natives of Massachusetts. From that State the latter moved to New York State, and from there to Erie Co. in 1798, bought land, and returned to New York State, where he married. In 1800, he and his wife came to Erie Co., settling on the land bought. They had 9 children, 3 of whom survive, viz., Jedediah, John, and Joel. Our subject was married in 1841 to Susan, daughter of Wm. and Therina Hall, of Connecticut, who came to Erie Co. in 1816, settling in North East Township. To this union were born 5 children—Mrs. Mary Loomis, Mrs. Anna Buckle, Charles M. (married to Ida Smith, have 2 children—Harriet E. and Catherine S.), Cora and Georgina. Mr. Loomis was a teacher in his earlier days. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

D. D. LOOP, physician and surgeon, North East, was born in Sherman, N. Y., in 1827, son of Peter and Sena Loop, natives of New York, latter a daughter of Rev. Orange Spencer. Peter Loop came with his family to Sherman, N. Y., in 1827, and in 1830 moved to Erie Co., settling 2 miles southeast of North East Village, where he died in 1855. His widow died in 1880, at the residence of her son, aged eighty years. Our subject received his early education at North East, commenced the study of medicine when eighteen years of age, and after attending 1 course of lectures at Buffalo, temporarily abandoned reading owing to ill-health. He began the practice of medicine in 1853, for that reason, and by the advice of Prof. Austin Flint. In 1864, in which year he graduated, he renewed study at Buffalo, and at the end of the course was appointed Assistant Surgeon to the 145th Reg., but was prevented from serving owing to an attack of acute rheumatism. He was elected a curator of Buffalo Medical College, which position he still retains. He was married in 1850 to Rebecca, daughter of Cyrus Dolph, and a native of New York. To this union were born 2 children—Alice A., wife of A. Husted, Buffalo, and Carrie, at home. The Doctor has practiced medicine in North East for over 30 years, and is recognized as one of the leading physicians of the county.

WILLIAM McCORD, Sr. (deceased), was born in Paxton, Penn., July 29, 1797, and was brought to Erie Co. by his parents, Joseph and Elizabeth McCord, in 1798, settling on the farm now occupied by the widow of our subject. He was twice married, on first occasion to Jane, daughter of Thomas and Jane Moorhead, by whom were 5 children—Thomas M., married to Adella Durst (have 4 children—W. C., H. D., Fred M. and Helen A.); Kate E., at home with her stepmother; Joseph, deceased; William A., formerly a soldier during the rebellion, was married to Mary E. Backus, and had 4 children (he died in 1876); and Isaac, deceased in 1872. His first wife dying, our subject married Mrs. Sarah Cowles, by whom there was 1 son—Montgomery C., deceased. At the time of her marriage with Mr. McCord, she (Mrs. Cowles) had an adopted son, afterward drowned in Lake Michigan. Our subject died April 24, 1883, aged eighty-six. He was one of the first settlers of the township, and lived on the same farm for 84 years.

W. F. McCORD, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in North East Township in 1856, son of John and Catherine A. (Dada) McCord. John McCord was a son of Joseph and Elizabeth McCord, pioneers of Erie Co., coming here in 1798, and settling on the Lake Shore, where he died, aged forty-seven. The father of our subject was twice married, and by his first marriage had 4 children, viz.: Jane Y., wife of W. A. Ensign, have 1 son, Charles A.; James M., deceased; John C., married to Lizzie Downer, of Chicago (have 2 sons—Downer and John C.); Joseph T., married to Mary Blane, have 2 daughters—Florence and Ruth. John McCord was married, on the second occasion, in 1853, to Miss Catherine A., daughter of Nora and Sarah (Clark) Dada. The latter, who came to Erie Co. from New York, a widow, is a remarkable lady, and, though ninety-two years of age, still retains her mental faculties. Her family consisted of 5 children, viz.: Noah C., has 1 son, Winford E. Dada; William B., in Nebraska, married Laura Lyon, has a son, Arthur H.; Edward P., married Rose Taggart, have 2 daughters—Lillian E. and Valma R.; S. Maria, now Mrs. Thomas Moorhead, and Mrs. Catherine A. McCord, who is also a widow, her husband dying April 9, 1871, leaving 2 children—W. F. McCord, our subject, who married Miss Florence E., daughter of Dr. E. M. Bemus; and Caroline, at home.

JOSEPH McCORD, farmer, P. O. North East, was born May 19, 1810, in North East Township, son of Joseph and Elizabeth McCord, natives of Dauphin Co., Penn., and came to Erie Co. in 1798, settling in North East Township. They came across the Alleghany Mountains on horseback with their 2 children, Eliza and William. There were afterward 5 children born to them in this county—Sarah, James, John, Nancy and Joseph, the subject of this sketch, who still occupies the old homestead on the bank of Lake Erie. Our subject was married, Sept. 6, 1838, to Amanda, daughter of Simeon and Hannah (Neeley) Leet. To this union were born 9 children, viz.: Hannah E., wife of George Selkregg, their children now living are Chassie, Mary and Anna; Simeon, married to Nancy M. Loomis, by whom he has 6 children—Margaret A., Ella, Joseph L., Frank H., Alice and

Our subject, who was a civil engineer in his native country, emigrated with his family to America in 1848, soon after locating near Rochester, N. Y. In 1863, they removed to Erie Co., settling in North East Township on a farm formerly owned by a Mr. Warner, one of the first settlers of the county. Our subject married Margaret Brogan, a native of Ireland, who bore him 9 children, viz., James, George, Mary J. (wife of D. McGaughey, of North East), Catherine, Margaret E. (wife of Patrick Hough), Robert F., Lillie, John J. and Effia. Mr. Scandlon has been an extensive and successful contractor on various railroads in the States, and has accumulated a fine property, located in the eastern part of the township.

EZRA SCOLLER, miller, North East, was born in 1839, son of John and Sarah (Andrews) Scouller, the former a native of Scotland, the latter of Pennsylvania. Their family consisted of three sons and one daughter, three now living—John B., Mary L. (wife of C. F. Ellis, of Erie), and Ezra. Our subject was married in 1862 to Joanna E., daughter of John Webb, a native of Pennsylvania. To this union were born 4 children—John W., Annie B., William and Esther. Mr. Scouller is proprietor of the mill his father built, having some time previously bought the mill built by John Scouller in 1844, and rebuilt in 1867 and 1883.

M. L. SELKREGG, dealer in groceries and hardware, North East, was born in November, 1834, in North East Township; son of Osee and Harriet (Robinson) Selkregg. He was married, Oct. 20, 1865, to Carrie, daughter of B. T. Spooner, and to this union were born 5 children—Mary L., Clara H., Jennie B., Edward M. and Fanny P. Mr. Selkregg's extensive business was founded by himself in 1858, and has ever since been under his able management. The salesrooms are the largest in town, occupying 2 floors and basement, each 40x50, and are filled with a very desirable stock of hardware, in shelf, heavy and novelty goods. A full line of stoves is carried, besides a large assortment of farming tools and agricultural implements. In the grocery department he carries a complete line of such goods as are required to meet the wants of an extensive trade. A part of the second floor is set apart as a tin shop, and one skilled workman is engaged in supplying the wants of the customers in this direction.

CAPT. GEORGE SELKREGG, farmer, P. O. North East, was born in North East in 1838; son of Osee and Harriet (Robinson) Selkregg, natives of Connecticut and early settlers in North East Township. Osee Selkregg took up land near the village of North East. He died in 1883. Our subject was married, Oct. 30, 1866, to Hannah, daughter of Joseph McCord. To this union were born 4 children—Chassie, Mary, Annie and Laura. Capt. Selkregg enlisted in 1861 under Col. Schlaudecker in the 111th P. V. I. Among the principal battles he was engaged in were Cedar Mountain, South Mountain, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and Savannah. From a private he rose to be Captain, and had charge of a company till his discharge at the close of the war in 1865. He is a member of the School Board, of which he has been Secretary four years; is a member and Trustee of the Presbyterian Church. The Captain resides on the old homestead situated a short distance from North East Village.

SAMPSON SHORT, son of John Short, was born at Chatham Valley, Tioga Co. Penn. He left home for Potter County, Penn., when sixteen years of age. He had few advantages of education, total attendance being 2 terms of district school. Early in life he turned his attention to lumbering, which has been his principal business. Moved to Horton Township, Elk Co., Penn., in 1860, and to North East, Erie Co., in 1867. Our subject married Olive Sherman, daughter of Geo. W. and Artmisa Sherman, of Sharon Township, Potter Co., Penn. They had 2 children, 1 boy, who only lived a short time, and Alfred, born Jan. 1, 1847, who now resides in North East. His wife dying, Mr. Short was married to Lucinda Wilcox, daughter of Simeon Wilcox, of Independence, N. Y. Only 1 child was born to this union, named Frank (deceased). His second wife dying, our subject was married again to Cate Nissell, daughter of Sebastian Nissell, of St. Marys, Elk County, Penn. Three children were born to this union—Anna, died in 1880; Geo. Sampson, born in May, 1875, and Mary Catherine, born in 1883. Mr. Short is present President of the North East Canning Co., limited, one of the largest stock-holders of the People's Savings Institution of Erie Co. He built the Palace hotel, which he now owns; is part owner with Alfred Short of the Handle and Heading Factory and Planing Mill and Lumber Yard in North East; owns a lumber yard at Pittsburgh, Penn., several fine farms about North East; is interested in several oil and lumber projects and timber lands in Michigan and Missouri. Y., Feb. 17, 1807, son of Thomas Spofford, who was born in 1775, married Bulah Ransom. Our subject was married in 1829, to Polly Rundell, daughter of H. Rundell. To this union were born 3 children—John K., Phebe and Helen. His first wife dying in Feb., 1843, Mr. Spofford married his second wife, Eliza Lamberson, Feb. 28, 1844, daughter of James Lamberson, Herkimer Co., N. Y. By this union was born 1 son, James L., who married Alice Hitchcock (have 3 children—Edith, Calvin, James). Our subject's other grandchildren are Jay M., John D., Charles C., Gertrude, Cassia and Mary. Calvin Spofford settled in Mina, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1829, and moved to North East, Erie Co., Penn., in 1831, and is now living on the farm that he now occupies. He had been a teacher many years; is a member of the M. E. Church.

THOMAS W. STEWART, farmer, P. O., North East, was born Aug. 5, 1830, in Erie City, Penn., son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Ovington) Stewart, natives of New Hampshire, married in Erie in 1819. The former was born Feb. 3, 1794, in the house in which Horace Greeley afterward first saw light. Mrs. Stewart died in 1862. At the age of eight years, Thomas Stewart was left an orphan by the death of his father, and he had to be content with such education as circumstances afforded him. He learned the trade of builder in Albany, N. Y., a business in which he met with much success, and in which he excelled. After putting up extensive buildings in Ohio, he went to Erie in 1819, when he married. He then moved to Pittsburgh in 1820, and there erected the Allegheny Bridge Penitentiary and other county buildings. He died April 20, 1878. He was elected Burgess; was several times Assessor; was for 10 years a Poor House Director, and was among the founders and builders of the First Baptist Church in Erie. GEORGE B. STOCKTON, jeweler, North East, was born March 10, 1855, in Dunkirk, N. Y., son of Dr. G. B. and Catherine (Vassault) Stockton, who came to Erie Co. in 1860, settling in the village of North East. The former, a prominent physician, was a son of Dr. R. W. Stockton, an old settler of the county. Dr. G. B. Stockton died July 4, 1880, leaving 2 children—Julia and George B.; another son, Charles, died in infancy. Our subject was married, Oct. 5, 1882, to Hattie, daughter of Silas and Eliza (McLane) Kendig, of North East. He commenced the trade of jeweler with a Mr. Inglis, formerly proprietor of the store which our subject now owns exclusively. He first purchased Mr. Dinsdale's half-interest and finally the entire stock. He has now a first-class stock of everything in his line, amounting to about $8,000, and enjoys a good patronage.

D. A. SWANEY, proprietor of the Lakeside Paper Mill, North East, was born in 1846 in Allegheny Co., Penn., son of John and Matilda (McCully) Swaney, former a native of Pennsylvania, latter of Maryland. John Swaney went to California, when his son, our subject, was a young lad, and was never seen by him after. In 1862, D. A. enlisted in the 6th Penn. Art., serving 2 years. In 1865, he was mustered out, returned home and entered the Duff Business College at Pittsburgh. He commenced learning the art of paper-making with C. P. Markle & Sons and continued with them 3 years, after which he went to Mumford Falls, Ohio, and was with the Cleveland Paper Co. for 1 year. From there he returned to Markle & Sons' warerooms in Pittsburgh, remaining 5 years. For some time afterward he traveled for that firm as salesman until he entered the new paper mill of Mannis Beer & Co., Garland Springs, Penn.; he next engaged as paper broker in the office of P. Duff & Co., Pittsburgh. A few years afterward he entered into partnership with a Mr. West, as paper dealers. On Jan. 1, 1883, they received into the firm Mr. A. A. Jackson, of the Pittsburgh Chronicle. Mr. West and Mr. Jackson soon after withdrawing from the firm, Mr. Swaney took the mill into his own hands Aug. 1, 1883, and is now sole proprietor. The capacity of the mill is 4,000 pounds of paper (chiefly manilla) per day. Our subject was married, in 1866, to Annie, daughter of John Henderson, of Westmoreland Co., Penn., by whom he had 2 children—Robert and Corey (deceased).

DANIEL R. TAYLOR, retired farmer, P. O. North East, was born in 1812, in Greenfield Township, Erie Co., son of James and Anna (Reed) Taylor, natives of Virginia, and who came to Erie Co. in 1803, settling in Greenfield Township. In 1812, they removed close to the State line where they died, Mrs. Taylor in 1836, and Mr. Taylor in 1840. They had 6 children, 2 now living—Mary A., wife of Isaac Morey, have 3 children—James O., Milton and Eunice, now Mrs. Hopper; and D. R. Taylor began life by peddling apples, which he carried in a basket, to the passengers on the L. S. R. R. This he continued until he was employed, at the age of fifteen, as telegraph operator at the State line. Promotion quickly followed, first to train dispatcher, then to Division Superintendent on the L. S. R. R., and finally to the position of General Manager, Canada Southern R. R., but has now abandoned railroad business and gone South for the benefit of his health. Our subject has acted as Assessor, Collector and School Director under the new law. In 1843, he moved to New York State, where he remained until 1875, in the spring of which year he returned to North East. He is a Democrat in politics.

B. C. TOWN, of North East, Penn., was born June 16, 1820, in Grandville, Washington Co., N. Y., son of Bester and Betsy M. (Martin) Town, the former a native of New York, the latter of Vermont, who came to this county in 1824, settling in North East Township. They were parents of 8 children, 6 now living—M. C., B. C., B. F., John J., Joseph J. and Mary T., deceased, Wm. Martin and Geo. W. The father died Dec. 2, 1870, aged seventy-six, the mother in following year, aged seventy-seven, having faithfully fulfilled their mission on earth, leaving an honored name and highly respected family. Mr. Bester Town, during his time, was engaged in farming, hatting (though not a hatter by trade), hotel keeping and general merchandising, all being carried on successfully at the same time, each department serving as a help to the other. Being a man of sterling qualities and of strict business habits, he held a leading position in mercantile trade. Miss Mary T. Town, a maiden lady, occupies the old homestead of her parents. B. C. Town, our subject, was married, Aug. 7, 1841, to Juliette, daughter of Wm. D. Burdick, and to this union were born Rollin H., Warren C., Geo. E., B. D. and Dennison, all of whom are now living except Rollin H., who died in infancy. Warren C. married Adda Ferris; Geo. E., Eliza Emtka; B. D., Ella M. Scott; Dennison remaining in single blessedness. Our subject has been connected with mercantile business since he became a young man. In 1843, he entered into partnership with his father and brother, M. C., in North East and Watsburg, under firm name of B. Town & Sons. After a time, M. C. withdrawing, the firm name was changed to B. C. Town & Co., who continued business both at Watsburg and North East for 7 years, when the partnership closed, and our subject took a season of rustication in collecting, farming, milling, and finally landed on the beautiful shores of Maryland, where he spent five years. Grim death taking away his father, recalled him to North East, where he is now engaged in the business harness.

P. M. BRINDLE, retired farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born Nov. 19, 1820, in this township, twelfth child of Matthias and Elizabeth Brindle, natives of Franklin Co., Penn., who came thence to Erie Co. in 1801, driving a span of horses. They settled on the farm now owned by P. M., then a wilderness. Matthias was a soldier in the war of 1812, a prominent farmer, and held some of the township offices. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church and the first cemetery in East Springfield. Mrs. Brindle went back to Franklin Co., a distance of 390 miles, traveling on horseback, with a neighbor, Sam'l Holliday, carrying her baby. Mr. and Mrs. Brindle were the parents of 13 children, 11 living to be men and women. She died July 20, 1840, and Mr. Brindle Oct. 10, 1845. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1846, with Janet, daughter of Sela and Elizabeth Walbridge, who came to this county from Vt. in 1828; she is a native of Vt. Three children were born to this union, 2 surviving—Adelbert H., and Charlotte E., wife of A. W. Walker, of Erie. Mr. and Mrs. Brindle have been members of the Christian Church for over 30 years. He owns 100 acres of fine land, the original old homestead; is a member of the E. A. U.; in politics, a Republican.

WM. CROSS, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in this township July 12, 1806, and is the eldest child of Oliver and Margaret Cross, natives of Vt. and Washington Co., Penn., respectively. Oliver Cross came to Erie Co. in 1797, driving a yoke of 4-year-old steers from Genesee Co., N. Y. Margaret, his wife, was a daughter of Wm. Porter. They reared a family of 7 children, 5 of whom are now living. One of the sons served in the war of 1812, Mr. Cross providing a substitute for himself. He was a prominent farmer. He departed this life in 1833, his widow following him in 1868. Our subject was reared in this county, with but few opportunities for acquiring an education. He was united in marriage, in 1842, with Emily, daughter of Ira Allen, who came to Erie Co. about 1830. Two children blessed this union, both dying in infancy. Mr. Cross owns over 1,000 acres of improved land, most of which lies on each side of the Ridge road, in probably the finest part of the county. He is an extensive grain-grower, and buys and feeds cattle extensively. He is a self-made man, acquiring his property solely by hard work. During the late war, he went out in answer to Gov. Curtin's call for minutemen and also contributed liberally to the Union. He gives liberally to the Presbyterian Church, of which his wife is a member, and is one of the founders of the beautiful cemetery at East Springfield, which will remain a lasting monument to his memory. Mr. Cross is a prominent man of this township. In his day he filled all his offices of trust, and has also acted as Associate Judge. He is a Republican in politics.

JOEL DAY, East Springfield, was born in Bradford, Vt., June 22, 1810, and is the 4th child of Elifert and Louisa Day, both natives of Conn. Our subject was united in marriage, Apr. 9, 1835, with Marilla L. Johnson, a native of N. Y. State, and daughter of Uriah and Mehitable Johnson, natives of R. I.; the former was a soldier in the war of 1812. This union has been blessed with 3 children, viz., Oscar R. (deceased), Alice A. and Albert R. Alice was married, July 24, 1866, to T. B. Fickinger, who was a soldier in Battery B, Independent Artillery, and served 3 years in the Army of the Cumberland; he was honorably discharged at the close of the war. Two children were born to this union, both deceased. Mr. Fickinger is now a conductor on the Canada Southern Railroad; is a member of O. R. Conductor's Association; was a brave soldier, and is a good citizen. Mr. Day purchased his farm of 114 acres over 30 years ago, and is one of the prominent farmers in his section. Mrs. Day is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Day is a Republican in principle, as are all his children.

OSCAR C. DE GROODT, miller, East Springfield, was born Nov. 15, 1842, in East Springfield Township, second son of Peter and Clarissa De Groodt, natives of Madison Co., N. Y., and Mass. respectively. They came to this county in 1841, but in 1855 moved to Iowa; after a year, they went to Minn., where they now reside. They reared 2 sons. Our subject served nearly 3 years during the late war, enlisting in 1863, in Brackett's Minn. Cav., doing duty in the West. He participated in several skirmishes with the Indians, and was honorably discharged in May, 1866, and returned to Minn. He was united in marriage, in Sept., 1868, with Laura V. Hurd, a native of this township, and daughter of Morris Hurd, a resident and one of the oldest settlers of Springfield Township. This union has been blessed with 4 children, viz., Reuben H., Linnie L., Cortland M. and Myron B. The last mentioned was but an infant when Mrs. De Groodt died, Oct. 30, 1883. Mr. De Groodt owns 4 acres of land and a beautiful residence at Springfield. He has been engaged in milling for the past 18 years, most of the time in the Springfield Mills. He is a member of the E. A. U., P. M. of a lodge of F. & A. M., and a member of the Commandery at Conneaut, Ohio; also a member of G. A. R., Post No. 42, at Wellsburg, Penn.

PERRY DEVORE, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 5, 1816, seventh child born to John and Elizabeth Devore, natives of Bedford Co., Penn., who came thence to this county in 1796, and reared a family of 14 children, 7 now living. John Devore was a prominent farmer in his day; he built the first frame barn, and filled most of the township offices. He was a man of strict honesty, and a consistent member of the Old-School Presbyterian Church. During the war of 1812, he was Quartermaster of the minutemen at Erie. He departed this life in Oct., 1838, his widow in 1866. Perry, the subject of this sketch, married, Oct. 20, 1837, Marsha Walbridge, born in Vt., daughter of Selah Walbridge, who came to Erie Co. in 1827. She is a member of the Baptist Church. Mr. Devore owns 125 acres of improved land, one of the finest grain farms in the county, located on the Ridge road. He also does a large business in his general collection and loan office. He is a generous, upright man, who during the late war contributed liberally to the support of the Union army. He is a representative man of this section; in politics, he is a Republican.

THOS. J. DEVORE, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born on the farm he now occupies in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., Sept. 6, 1827, thirteenth child of John and Elizabeth Devore, natives of Bedford Co., Penn., and a brother of Perry Devore (see his sketch). Our subject had fine educational advantages for his day. He married, Feb. 24, 1864, Emily C., daughter of Zacariah Thomas, an early settler and prominent man in this township, in which his daughter was born. To Mr. and Mrs. Devore has been born 1 daughter—Louisa E. Mr. Devore owns about 200 acres of improved land, and a fine residence near the village of East Springfield, besides other property. He has served as County Treasurer 1 term. He raises a large amount of grain, and buys and feeds stock extensively.

HOSEA DEWOLF, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born at Luzerne, Washington Co., N. Y., Aug. 26, 1808, son of Steven and Diobery DeWolf, who emigrated to Erie Co., Penn., in 1819, reared 6 children, only Hosea and a sister now surviving. Steven DeWolf was a son of a soldier of the war of 1776. He was a prominent farmer, and a professor of religion. His wife departed this life in 1840, he following her in the year 1842. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1836, with Eleanor Taylor, a native of Hadley, N. Y., and a daughter of John and Orella Taylor, who settled in this county in 1824. This union was blessed with 5 children, only 1 surviving—Louisa. Mr. DeWolf is the owner of 78 acres of well-improved land, a part of which was his father's old homestead. Politically, he is a Democrat.

JOHN EAGLEY, farmer, P. O. North Springfield, was born on his present farm in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., Dec. 7, 1805, second son of Abraham and Cather ine Eagley, natives of Dauphin Co., Penn., who came to Erie Co., Penn., in Oct., 1803, taking up 325 acres of land, which he and his sons cleared and improved, and which is now one of the best farms here. He reared a family of 8 children, 4 now living. His wife died Dec. 26, 1842, aged seventy years and twenty-one days. He departed this life June 8, 1851, aged seventy-eight years two months and four days. He was a prominent farmer, holding several township offices. Our subject's educational advantages were limited to what could be obtained in a new country. He was united in marriage, in 1842, with Iantha May, of Kingsville, Ohio, who departed this life June 21, 1851. On March 3, 1852, Mr. Eagley married Nancy F. Anderson, a native of Crawford Co., Penn. This union has been blessed with one son, John, born April 2, 1854. Mrs. Eagley is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Eagley's grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was in active service during the Jersey campaign of 1776 and 1777. Our subject owns 280 acres of well-improved land, part of which was his father's homestead. He is a Republican in politics; was elected County Auditor in 1848, and has filled various township offices.

ABRAHAM EAGLEY, farmer, P. O. North Springfield, was born in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., April 8, 1809, sixth child of Abraham and Catherine Eagley, natives of Penn., who came to this county from Dauphin Co., Penn., in 1803, and settled on 325 acres of land, part of which he cleared and gave to four of his sons. He had a family of 8 children, 4 deceased. Mr. Eagley, Sr., was a prominent farmer, and held some of the township offices. His wife departed this life Dec. 26, 1842; he died in June, 1851, aged seventy-eight years. Our subject was united in marriage, Nov. 14, 1843, with Sarah A. Gerred, a native of Vt., by whom he had 3 children—Henry C., Catherine, and Eunice, wife of Henry Weis. Mrs. Eagley departed this life Nov. 4, 1850. Mr. Eagley was again married, Jan. 9, 1858, to Christiana S. Smith, a native of Ohio. This union was blessed with 8 children, 7 now living—Casper A., George, Millard, Frank, Jessie C., Charles R. and Smith J. Mrs. Eagley went to her rest May 14, 1879. Mr. Eagley owns 144 acres of well-improved land. He is a man of integrity; a staunch Republican in politics.

DANIEL EAGLEY, farmer and apiarian, P. O. North Springfield, was born Nov. 5, 1815, in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., and is a son of Abraham and Catharine Eagley, and brother of John and Abraham Eagley, whose sketches appear above. Our subject married in 1842 Jane Guthrie, born in same township, daughter of William C. and Mary Guthrie. William C. Guthrie was a soldier of the war 1812; he came to Erie that year and took up 100 acres of land, and reared a family of 9 children. He died in 1834, his widow surviving until 1857. Lawrence, the only child by this union, served over 2 years in the U. S. Navy during the late rebellion. He returned home, and in 1867 was drowned in Lake Erie, near Dunkirk, N. Y. Mr. Eagley worked at blacksmithing until a few years ago, carrying on his business near his present residence. He keeps from 30 to 50 swarms of bees, and sells bees and has home demand for honey. He owns a fine brick residence, and 22 acres of land, part of his father's homestead, situated on the banks of Lake Erie. Here he keeps boats for the accommodation of the public. He has a fine dining hall, with 2 rows of tables, and kitchen attached; in the grove near by, there are speakers' and band stands, swings, etc. He has a register for guests to record their names, and keeps a plentiful supply of ice, etc. This is an excellent summer resort, which will increase in popularity from year to year. Mr. Eagley is a member of the Universalist Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

GEORGE ELLIS, physician and surgeon, East Springfield, was born in Ashfield, Franklin Co., Mass., and is the third child of David and Ruannah Ellis, and a grandson of David Ellis, Sr., who on May 28, 1794, was appointed Ensign in the 5th Reg., 2d Brig., 4th Div., of the Mass. Mil., and on September 4, 1795, was promoted Lieutenant of the same. He served in the Revolutionary war, and was a grandson of Richard Ellis, who came from Dublin to America in 1641. In 1823, the father of our subject brought his family in an ox-team from Mass. to Erie Co., Penn., making the trip in just six weeks. He reared 9 children, 7 of whom are still living. Peter Ellis, whose sketch appears in this work, is one of his sons. He was a prominent farmer, and died Feb. 1, 1866, his widow surviving until May 18, 1869. East Springfield, was born in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn., April 16, 1828, son of Zaccheus and Elizabeth Joiner, natives of Vt. and Penn. respectively, and who came to Erie Co. about 1820. Zaccheus, who was a prominent farmer, died in 1854, his wife having preceded him in 1852. Our subject, the only son of this couple, emigrated to the West in 1852. During the gold excitement of 1858, he went to Cal., where he met with moderate success. He returned to Penn. in 1864, and was united in marriage, in 1865, with Susan Wheeler, a native of Erie Co., and a daughter of James Wheeler, a prominent farmer, who came to this county in 1819, and who, with his wife, was a native of Washington Co., N. Y. They reared a family of 9 children, 7 now living. He died in 1869, his widow in 1871. Mr. and Mrs. Joiner are the parents of 1 son—Wells. Our subject, in the spring of 1866, moved on his present farm of 62 acres, which he had purchased. He sustained a loss of $500 in 1878, by having his barn and contents destroyed by fire. He and wife are worthy descendants of Erie's earliest settlers. Mr. Joiner is a Republican in politics.

HENRY KEITH, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Girard Township, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 30, 1817, only son of Scott and Susan Keith, who moved from Mass. to this county in 1816, driving a yoke of cattle and a team of horses before them. They reared three children, all now living. Scott Keith was a prominent man in his day, and by strict integrity won the respect of all. For nearly 50 years, he kept the Keith House at East Springfield. The passengers by the stages running through from Cleveland to Buffalo always stopped there for their meals. His wife departed this life in 1875, he following her in 1877, aged eighty-five. Henry, our subject, was married, in 1850, to Diana Silverthorn, a native of Erie Co., by whom he had 1 child—Henry T., now residing in Neb. She died in 1856, and is interred in the beautiful cemetery at East Springfield. Mr. Keith was again united in marriage, in 1865, with Lottie McKee, also a native of this county, by whom he had 1 child that died in infancy. Mr. Keith owns over 70 acres of well-improved land. For many years, he has been one of the proprietors of the grist and saw mills here, and has also done a very large distillery business. He was Capt. of the State police many years; for nearly half his life he has acted as Constable, and in his time has probably arrested more horse-thieves than any other man in this county. He is a staunch Republican in politics.

H. V. LINE, proprietor of Keystone Roller Mills, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Linesville, Crawford Co., Penn., May 23, 1833, eldest son of Smith and Mary Line, both natives of N. J., and of Quaker descent. Amos Line, after whom Linesville, Penn., is named, was the founder of that village. The father of our subject, who has always followed milling, still resides there, and is one of its prominent business men. H. V. Line was in mercantile business for about 7 years, has also followed surveying to some extent. He has been engaged in milling since 1856. He moved to East Springfield in 1876, and purchased the Keystone Mill, built in 1873, which was converted into a roller mill in the spring of 1883; it is now run by steam and water, has a capacity of about 70 barrels of flour per day, and is the only roller mill, except in Corry and Erie City, in the county. Our subject was married, in 1856, to Mary L. Manning, of N. J., by whom he has one child—A. M., now a partner with his father in the mill. Mrs. Line died in April, 1865. Mr. Line was subsequently united in marriage with Helen E. Smith, a native of this township. They had five children, four now living—Charles S., James W., Fred A. and W. Raymond. Mr. Lines owns, besides his mill, 18 acres of fine land in Linesville, and a residence on same. He is, politically, a Republican.

EVERETT W. LOVERIDGE, station agent, North Springfield, born in Concord, Erie Co. N. Y., Sept. 18, 1828, is a son of Amasa and Eunice Loveridge, natives of Conn. and N. H. respectively. Our subject went to Cal. in 1852, during the gold excitement, remaining 2½ years. Whilst there, his left arm was disabled from the effects of a blast. He came to Erie Co. April, 1855, and was a salesman for a year; he then entered his present position as agent for the L. S. & M. S. R. R., which he has acceptably filled. He was united in marriage, in 1857, with Ellen C. Gwin, also a native of N. Y. State, and daughter of Thomas Gwin, who was a soldier in the war of 1812; one child—Melvin E., has blessed this union. Mrs. Loveridge is a member of the Universalist Church at West Springfield. Mr. Loveridge is a sociable, genial gentleman. He is a Republican in politics.

ANDREW J. MCKEE, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born Dec. 21, 1831, in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., eldest son of Thomas and Anna McKee, natives of Perry Co., Penn., and N. Y. respectively, who reared a family of 8 children, all now living. Thomas McKee, when thirteen years old, came with his parents to this county. He became a prominent farmer, and served in the war of 1812. He departed this life April 25, 1857. His widow draws a pension, and now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Silverthorn; her father was a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject taught school a term in Kentucky before the war. On April 20, 1861, he enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., serving in the 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac, and participated in the following engagements: Seven Days' Fight, 2d Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Beverly Ford, Mine Run, Wilderness (where he was wounded in the head by a shell), siege of Petersburg and capture of Lee's army. He occupied every position, non-commissioned and commissioned, from private to Capt. He received an honorable discharge July 5, 1865, and returned home. In June, 1868, Mr. McKee married Mary, daughter of William and Cecelia Cudney. She and her mother are natives of Erie Co., Penn. Her father, born in N. Y., came to Erie Co. with his parents at an early day. Her grandfather built the first frame house here. This union has been blessed with one child—T. Cordello. Mr. and Mrs. McKee are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is also a member of the G. A. R., Wellsburg, Penn.; owns 92 acres of fine land. In politics is a Republican.

EDWARD F. MALLORY, farmer, P. O. West Springfield, was born on the homestead in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 12, 1846, and is the youngest child of Harry and Emily Mallory, natives of Conn. and Vt. respectively. Harry Mallory came to this county about 1822, finally settling on the farm now owned by our subject, in 1822. He reared 4 children; served as Justice of the Peace 11 years, and as Constable for at least 2 years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was an earnest, constant member of the Baptist Church at West Springfield, in which he was Trustee for many years. His wife died in 1869; he died in 1883, aged nearly eighty-five years. Our subject was united in marriage, Dec. 13, 1870, with Ellen Bump, daughter of Heman and Ann (Mallory) Bump, the former a native of New York, the latter a daughter, the second child in the family of 10, of Andrew Mallory, who came to this county in 1819; she was born in 1820. Andrew Mallory was a soldier of the war of 1812, a Maj. in the State Militia, and was a very prominent man, dying April, 1877, in his eighty-sixth year. Mr. and Mrs. Bump reared 2 children, and were both prominent members of the Baptist Church. He died in Feb., 1868. Our subject and wife have 2 children—Edith E. and Harry H. They are both members of the West Springfield Baptist Church. Mr. Mallory owns 80 acres of well-improved land, a part of his father's old homestead. He has filled the office of Township Clerk; is a Democrat in politics.

I. NEWTON MILLER, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born April 19, 1820, on his present farm, which was settled by his parents, Thomas R. and Margaret Miller, of Franklin Co., Penn., who came to Erie Co. in 1802, and reared a family of 7 children, 5 of whom are now living. Thomas R. Miller was a prominent farmer; he served in the war of 1812; held nearly every township office; was Director of the Poor, County Commissioner, and served for this county in the House of Representatives. His wife departed this life in 1835. He survived until 1866. Our subject married, in 1843, Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Silverthorn, an early settler of Erie Co., in which she was born. This union has been blessed with one child—Florence D., who died Jan., 1872. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a representative man of this township; owns 53 acres of land in the most fertile part of Springfield, and has taken great interest in laying out the beautiful little cemetery at East Springfield. He has served as Justice of the Peace for 12 years, and was one term, in 1870, in the State Legislature. Mr. Miller taught school for 9 or 10 years between 1840 and 1850.

FINDLEY MILLER, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born on the homestead in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., July 8, 1824, and is the youngest child of Thomas R. and Margaret Miller, natives of Franklin Co., Penn., who came to this county at an early date. They reared a family of 7 children, two deceased. Thomas R. Miller was a soldier in the war of 1812; was in the State Legislature in 1836-37; served as Justice of the Peace and Commissioner, each 2 terms, and held other township offices. He was an earnest Christian member of the U. P. Church, and departed this life in 1866. His wife died in 1835. Our subject married, Sept. 22, 1852, Emily, daughter of Isaac Silverthorn, one of the first settlers of Girard Township, where she was born. Five children have blessed this union, 3 now living—Charles F., Elmer S. and Effie E. Mrs. Miller died in March, 1877. Mr. Miller owns 130 acres of well-improved land, part of which was the old homestead. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he is a Republican.

NORTON D. MOON, hotel keeper and farmer, West Springfield, was born at Hanover, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Sept. 28, 1828, and is a son of Daniel G. and Octavia A. Moon, natives of N. Y., who came to this county in 1832; they reared a family of 5 children, all living. Daniel G. Moon worked at his trade (carpenter), and filled several township offices. He departed this life Dec. 16, 1869. His widow still resides in the village of West Springfield. Norton, their oldest child, married, in 1852, Elizabeth J. McKee, a native of Springfield, daughter of Thomas McKee, and sister of A. J. McKee (see his sketch). This union has been blessed with 5 children—Frances E.; Stella A.; Effie A., wife of DeForest Smith; Katie L. and Jay G. Mr. and Mrs. Moon are members of the E. A. U. Our subject took possession of the West Springfield House in Sept., 1876, and enjoys the confidence of the traveling public, and keeps a neat and home-like hotel. He owns 100 acres of fine improved land, his father's old homestead. He is a Republican in politics.

EBEN MOORE, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Tompkins Co., N. Y., Apr. 8, 1819, son of Elijah and Jane Moore, both natives of N. Y. State. They reared a family of 7 children, of whom our subject was sixth. Mr. Moore was a prominent farmer and a member of the M. E. Church. He and his wife are buried at Chautauqua, N. Y. Eben spent the most of his life on a farm; also engaged in milling, owning at one time 2 mills which he sold. He married, Sept. 1, 1839, Margaret Conner, a native of N. Y. State, by whom he has no children living. She died July, 1873. On Jan. 9, 1874, Mr. Moore married Abbie Chase, also a native of N. Y. State, which union has been blessed with 2 children—Edna L. and Edith M. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are members of the M. E. Church at West Springfield. Our subject is owner of 40 acres of fine land in the most fertile part of the township. He reared a boy, who is prospering in Indiana. Mr. Moore is a sociable, intelligent gentleman. Politically, he is a Republican.

CHARLES N. MOORE, physician, surgeon, and proprietor of drug store, East Springfield, was born in Madison Co., N. Y., Sept. 30, 1842, and is a son of Henry L. and Emeline Moore, natives of N. Y., who came to Erie Co. in 1878. The former in an early day was a member of the State Militia. He was a stone and brick mason, and at one time an extensive contractor. He died in East Springfield in 1881. His widow now resides with her son, Charles N. Our subject graduated in 1864 from the N. Y. Therapeutic College, and commenced to practice medicine in Vineland, N. J., where he remained a year, then spent a year at Grand Rapids, Mich., thence came to East Springfield, where he has followed his profession for over 14 years. Dr. Moore was married, in 1871, to Elizabeth Owen, a native of Oneida Co., N. Y. They are both members of the M. E. Church, and of the E. A. U., and enjoy the respect of all. Dr. Moore is the proprietor of the only drug store in East Springfield; he also owns some nice property in the village. He is a sociable gentleman, has a good practice; a member of the A. O. U. W. In politics, is a Democrat.

SAMUEL REA, the subject of this sketch, was born in Washington, Penn., Oct. 27, 1792. He, with his father's family, moved to Springfield, Penn., in 1804, and on April 12, that year, settled on the farm on which he lived until the time of his death, Sept. 8, 1883. He was of Scotch-Irish descent, and he inherited many of their marked traits of character. He was strictly temperate in the broad sense of the word, and adhered closely to rules of justice, right and truth. Although deprived of a father's counsel in quite early life, yet these innate principles were so truly his own, that he never yielded, however great the temptation. It seemed very necessary that he should be just what he was. Settling here in the then dense forest, it required strength, determination, frugality, and all that is noble in man to assist in building up a home for his parents, and finally for himself. He served in the war of 1812, in recompense for which he for several years received a pension. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church in Springfield, and united with it in early manhood, and ever endeavored to live a consistent Christian life. In 1818, he married Elizabeth Ferguson, who in every way proved herself a true wife, counselor and Christian mother. She died in 1855, leaving her husband and 8 children to mourn their great loss. It can readily be seen that had the subject of this sketch lived until the 27th of Oct., 1883, he would have been ninety-one years of age. Thus lived and died one of the early settlers of Springfield, Erie Co., Penn.

JOHN RUDD (deceased), moved to Erie Co., Penn., in Aug., 1805, from Otsego Co., N. Y., with a large family, his son John having preceded him several years and commenced a distillery. He took up about 350 acres of land along the lake front, on the Moravian tract. John Rudd, Sr., died in 1830, aged eighty-two. His widow and her children becoming infatuated with the Mormon cause, about the year 1839 joined the sect and went West. Thus ended one of Erie's pioneer families.

LUTHER W. SAVAGE, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born Oct. 4, 1817, in Granville, Washington Co., N. Y., and is the only child of Nathan and Hannah Savage, both natives of Conn. The former died when Luther was only one year old; the latter in 1871. Our subject graduated at Williams College, Mass., in 1843. He moved in 1844 to Conneaut, Ohio, and taught in the academy one year; thence moved to East Springfield in 1845. In 1845, Mr. Savage was married to Miss Harriet Keith, daughter of Scott Keith, one of the early settlers of Erie Co. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Savage were born 2 children—Walter S., dying when four years and ten months old, and Susan K., wife of James B. Cross. Our subject has served as Justice of the Peace 5 years, and County Superintendent of Schools 3 years (1860-63).

ZER. L. SHERMAN, farmer and Tax Collector, East Springfield, was born Jan. 25, 1819, in Luzerne, Warren Co., N. Y., and is the eldest child of John S. and Polly Sherman, natives of Vermont and Connecticut respectively, who came to Erie Co. in 1821. They were the parents of 16 children, 11 now living, and were consistent members of the Christian Church. John S. Sherman, a prominent farmer, and who held several township offices, was a son of a soldier in the war of 1812; he departed this life Aug. 15, 1877. His widow is now living with her daughter, Mrs. L. Salisbury. Our subject married, in 1839, Elizabeth Leavens, a native of this township, and daughter of Luther and Olive Leavens, who came from New York State to Erie Co. in 1820. To Mr. and Mrs. Sherman have been born 9 children, 7 now living—Eunice, wife of Rev. Allan Allen; Melvin Z., who enlisted during the late war in the 2d Penn. Bat., served about 22 months with the Army of Tennessee, and was honorably discharged at the close of the rebellion; Winfield S.; Olive L.; Mahala M., wife of O. M. Ellis; J. Leonard and Alta B. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, with the whole family, are members of the Christian Church. Mr. Sherman owns 125 acres of well-improved land, and is a prosperous farmer, dealing extensively in phosphates, and to some extent in agricultural implements. He has held several township offices; is now serving as Township Commissioner and Tax Collector.

JESSE E. SHERMAN, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born on his present farm in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 9, 1842, son of John S. and Polly Sherman, natives of Vt., and brother of Zer, Sherman (see his sketch). Our subject was 14 months in the U. S. Navy, enlisting in 1862, and serving in the Miss. Squadron under Adm. Porter; he was honorably discharged in 1863, and returned to his home. He married, in 1865, Ruth Raymond, a native of Erie Co., Penn., and daughter of Nehemiah Raymond, an old settler of this county. Four children have blessed this union—Addie May, John S., Lavern M. and Harry R. Mr. Sherman owns his father's old homestead, comprising 70 acres of well-improved land, and is engaged in farming. He is a member of the G. A. R., Wellsburg, Penn. Politically, he is a Republican.

ALBERT H. SMITH, P. O. North Springfield, was born Oct. 9, 1824, in Springfield, second son of Lyman and Maria Smith, the former a native of N. Y., and the latter of Mass. Lyman came to this county with his father and mother when he was 2 years old. They came up on Lake Erie in a little rowboat from Buffalo, N. Y., and landed at what was called the Rud Landing; it was in June, 1800. His father settled on 200 acres of land here. He owned a boat, and transported salt from Buffalo. He raised a family of 11 children, our subject's father being second son. He was Deacon and one of the founders of the Christian Church at East Springfield; he died Sept. 3, 1875; his widow died Sept. 21, the same year. Albert H. Smith was married, April 22, 1847, to Albertine C. Brockway, a native of N. Y., and daughter of Hiram and Sarah Brockway, who came from East Chatham, N. Y., during the Asiatic cholera excitement in 1832. They raised a family of 7 children—Elias and William F., who enlisted in the 145th P. V. I. (the former, after serving 21 months, was made 1st Lieut.; the latter, after his death, was promoted to 1st Lieut.; was wounded at Gettysburg and Fredericksburg, and on this account was discharged in 1864, dying from the effects of the same in 1868); Albertine C.; Charles D.; Julia E.; Alvah and Sarah C., wife of C. A. Sherman. Mr. Brockway is a miller by trade, at which he has worked the most of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of 6 children—Fletcher B.; Florence E., wife of A. H. White; Agnes B., wife of H. E. Crouch; Eddie A.; Eva M., wife of G. E. Ormsbe, and Clara A. They are all members of the Christian Church. Mr. Smith was appointed Deacon on the death of his father. He is descended from one of the old pioneer families; is owner of 75 acres of land, part of his father's homestead. He is a Republican in politics, and a farmer.

JAMES O. SMITH, farmer, and dealer in fruit trees, P. O. East Springfield, was born on the farm he now occupies in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., July 22, 1847, and is the youngest child of Charles F. and Emily Smith, natives of Erie Co., Penn., and Vt., respectively. The father of Charles F. Smith came to Erie Co. from N. H. in 1801, and reared a family of 10 children, only 2 now living. Chas. F. has also reared a family of 10 children, 7 of whom survive. He is a prominent man of West Springfield, and a consistent member of the Universalist Church. James O., the subject of this sketch, married in 1873 Sarah Pettis, a native of Elk Creek, this county, and a daughter of John W. Pettis. Four children have blessed this union—Grace G., Addie G., Dallas A. and an infant. Mr. Smith now owns the old homestead, purchased by his father when it was covered with woods. He cleared it himself. Our subject has been engaged in selling fruit trees, having 2,500 on his farm. He is a prominent farmer, and has 170 acres of well-improved land in the eastern part of the township. He, too, is a member of the Universalist Church. He is well known and respected in this section, and is a candidate for Co. Commissioner of Erie Co. He and his father have always been staunch Republicans.

J. M. STRONG, miller, dealer in lumber, and farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Southampton, Mass., April 3, 1834, son of Job S. and Betsey H. Strong, also natives of Mass., who came to this county in 1838, and reared 2 children, J. M. only surviving. They were both earnest members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Strong departed this life in 1859, his widow following him in 1868, aged seventy-nine years. Our subject married, in 1859, Louise M. Webster, a native of Springfield Township, and a daughter of Thos. Webster, an early settler in this county; his widow is now residing with Mr. Strong. Of the children born to this union, only Charles C., now twelve years old, survives. Mr. Strong owns 160 acres of well-improved land. He has been operating the Springfield Mills since about 1861, which were built by his father-in-law in 1842. He has overhauled them, putting in all modern improvements. The mills have now 4 run of buhrs, with excellent water-power aided by steam, and a capacity of 75 barrels per day. He finds a ready sale for his flour in the smaller towns south, and ships also to the East and West. Mr. Strong also deals extensively in lumber, doing custom sawing and shipping large quantities. He is probably transacting the largest business of any man in this township, and is energetic and enterprising. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Strong is also a K. T., and a member of the E. A. U.; politically, a Republican.

HERMAM K. SUMNER, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Addison Co., Vt., Dec. 29, 1839, son of Herman K. and Sophrona Sumner, natives of Vt.; the former died when our subject was an infant; the latter is living with her daughter in N. Y. State. H. K. Sumner, Jr., came to Erie Co. in 1860, and Aug. 18, 1862, enlisted in Co. I, 145th P. V. I., 2d Corps, under Gen. Hancock, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Wilderness. At the siege of Petersburg, while his command was capturing the Weldon Railroad, he was captured and remained a prisoner 10 months and 6 days at the Libby and Andersonville Prisons. At the close of the war, he was honorably discharged at Jacksonville, Fla., and returned home physically a wreck, and has never entirely recovered from the effects of his imprisonment. He married in 1868, Alvenia March, a native of Mass., and daughter of Andrew March, of Wellsburg, by whom he had 1 child—Frank H. Mr. Sumner owns 106 acres of well-improved land, with fine buildings. He is a member of the G. A. R., Wellsburg; is a Republican in politics. He was a good soldier and is a good citizen.

LORAN THAYER, farmer, P. O. Conneaut, Ohio, born in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 11, 1839, is a son of Luke and Hannah Thayer, both natives of Mass., and who came to Erie Co. in 1812 with 1 child. Luke Thayer took up 420 acres of land. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He was a stone mason by trade, and built and ran the State Line House for about 15 years. He was the parent of 8 children, 5 now living; took great interest in church matters, being a member and one of the founders of the M. E. Church at West Springfield. He departed this life July 17, 1866, his widow in Nov. following. Our subject, the youngest child of this pioneer couple, married June 17, 1861, Mary Mervin, a native of the State of N. Y., which union was blessed with 4 children, 3 living—Martha, Sherman E. and Emma. Mrs. Thayer departed this life Aug. 22, 1871. In Jan., 1872, Mr. Thayer married Abigail Forsyth, a native of Ashtabula Co., Ohio, and daughter of Steven and Mary Forsyth, the former of whom died Nov. 24, 1867; the latter is now residing in Springfield. One child, Luke, has blessed this union. Mr. Thayer owns 110 acres of fine land, his father's old homestead. He is a staunch Republican.

ZACHARIAH THOMAS, farmer, and manufacturer of tile, P. O. West Springfield, was born Oct. 20, 1828, in West Springfield, Erie Co., Penn., the eldest child of Zachariah and Cynthia Thomas, natives of Vt. and State of N. Y. respectively. The former came a poor man to this section of Erie Co. in 1813, where he accumulated a large fortune. Here he reared his family of 8 children, 4 now deceased; built the hotel at West Springfield, and was its proprietor for many years; he was also an extensive farmer and cattle-dealer. He departed this life in 1864, his widow surviving until Feb., 1873. Our subject married, March 19, 1857, Louisa Rea, a native of Springfield Township, Erie Co., and daughter of Samuel Rea, one of its early and prominent settlers, a soldier in the war of 1812, and father of 11 children, 7 now living; he died in Oct., 1883, his wife preceded him in 1855. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have been born 3 children—Jay W., Carl N. and Maggie R. Mr. Thomas owns 700 acres of land mostly improved. He and his brother are extensively manufacturing drain tile, running the only factory of the kind between here and Albion. Our subject has held several township offices. He is a Republican in politics.

A. JUDSON THOMAS, farmer and stock-dealer, P. O. West Springfield, was born Oct. 19, 1839, in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of Zachariah (deceased Dec. 12, 1864), and Cynthia Thomas, early settlers in this county, a brother of Zachariah and Mrs. T. J. Devore (see their sketches). Our subject married, April 9, 1868, Mary L. Cross, a native of this county, and a daughter of James and Louisa Cross, also early settlers; her father was a brother of Wm. Cross. Three children have blessed this union—Emily L., James C., and Raymond W. Mr. Thomas owns about 700 acres of well-improved land, on the most of which he has tenants. He is now living on a part of his father's old homestead in West Springfield, and follows farming. He has dealt quite extensively in stock, and during the winter months feeds cattle. Previously, for about 4 years, he engaged in mercantile business at West Springfield. He is a Republican in politics.

JOHN M. VAN CAMP, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born Dec. 28, 1836, in Fairview Township, Erie Co., Penn., and is the eldest child of Garrett and Julia Van Camp, natives of N. Y. State, who came to Erie Co., at an early day. Garrett Van Camp is a prominent farmer, residing on his farm in Girard Township; he is the father of 7 children now living. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1859, with Hannah, daughter of Thomas Thorton, and sister of Joshua and Thomas Thorton, Jr., of Albion. Four children, all living, have blessed this union—Ida M., Clara L., Charles G., and Millie A. Mr. Van Camp purchased his farm of 166 acres of land in Springfield Township in 1872. In politics, he is a Republican.

ANDREW M. WALBRIDGE, farmer and hay-dealer, P. O. East Springfield, was born on the homestead farm, which he now owns, in Springfield Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 29, 1849. His parents, John S. and Jane Walbridge, natives of Vt. and State of N. Y. respectively, came to this county in 1829, and reared a family of 8 children, all now living. John S. was a prominent farmer, and filled some of the township offices at an early day. He departed this life in 1859, his widow following him in 1872. Our subject, who was the 5th child, married, in 1872, Kittie, born in N. Y. State, daughter of William and Betsey Strickland. Four sons have been born to this union—John J., Carl S., Ralph H. and Lee N. Mrs. Walbridge is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject owns 50 acres of fine land, with beautiful buildings, on the Ridge road, his father's old homestead, on which his grandfather settled, and where his grandmother died. He is also the owner of two hay-presses, and has done an extensive business since 1878. He moves his machines from farm to farm, pressing the hay, which is shipped principally to the coal mines in the center of the State. Mr. Walbridge is also a contractor and one of the most enterprising business men of Springfield Township; is one of the largest growers of strawberries in this locality.

JOSEPH WELDON, farmer, P. O. West Springfield, was born in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn., July 20, 1803, and is the youngest child of David and Mary Weldon, natives of this State, who came to Erie Co. in 1802, from Mifflin Co. David Weldon was a tailor by trade, but cleared his farm. He reared 5 children, 2 now living. He was one of the first settlers of McKean Township, and was a prominent man; he died in 1833; his widow followed him in 1848. Our subject married, Nov. 15, 1826, Betsy H. Washburn, a native of the State of N. Y., by whom he had 4 sons, all now deceased. She died May 10, 1836; his second marriage was with Margaret A. Sterrett, a native of Erie Co., and daughter of William and Elizabeth Sterrett, who were among the earliest settlers in the county, coming here in 1803. This union has been blessed with 4 children, only 2 surviving—Joseph P., and Mary E., wife of Seymour D. Ware. Mr. Weldon owns nearly 100 acres of well-improved land, and in his early days was an extensive cattle-dealer, driving them to the Eastern market. Mr. and Mrs. Weldon are members of the M. E. Church. He was one of the founders of the church at Sterrettania, Erie Co. He and his sons are Republican in politics.

WM. W. WHEELER, farmer and sawyer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn., May 1, 1838, and is the youngest child of James and Bathsheba Wheeler, natives of Vt. and N. Y. States respectively, and who came to Erie Co. in 1819. They reared a family of 9 children, 7 of whom are living. Mr. Wheeler was a prominent farmer, and took up and cleared 100 acres of land. He departed this life Feb. 19, 1871, his wife having preceded him July 4, 1869. Wm. W., our subject, was married in 1866 to Mary A. Prosser, born in Ashtabula Co., Ohio, only daughter of Rev. John Prosser, who was born at Edmondson, N. Y., Apr., 1868. His father and 3 brothers were ministers. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church when he was eighteen years old, and soon studied for the ministry. Receiving his license to preach in 1832, he was ordained Deacon in 1837, and Elder in 1839. Mr. Prosser and family settled at East Springfield in 1864, and for the last 20 years of his life was on the superannuated list. He died of pneumonia at his residence in East Springfield Dec. 22, 1882; his funeral sermon was preached to the largest congregation ever assembled in the East Springfield M. E. Church. His remains were interred in the cemetery at that place. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler are the parents of 1 child—John H. They own 68 acres of well-improved land, part of which was the homestead of Rev. J. Prosser. Mrs. Wheeler is a consistent member of the M. E. Church. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., and of the State police.

RUEL WHITCOMB, farmer, P. O. East Springfield, was born in Greene Co., N. Y., Apr. 21, 1830, the youngest child born to Ira and Clarissa Whitcomb, natives of Conn.; the former was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject was united in marriage, Dec., 1855, with Mary P. Burr, a native of Delaware Co., N. Y., and a daughter of Cyrus and Sallie Burr, who came to this county with Mr. Whitcomb, with whom they resided. Cyrus Burr departed this life in 1871; his widow, aged ninety-one, is now living with our subject. Four children have been born to this union, 2 surviving—William B. and Washington. Mr. Whitcomb is a sociable, intelligent gentleman, owner of 98 acres of land. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church at East Springfield. He is a member of the F. & A. M. at Albion, Penn.; politically, a Democrat.

IRA O. WILKINSON, farmer, P. O. North Springfield, was born in Amity Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 17, 1855, and is a son of Ira and Delaney Wilkinson, who were natives of N. Y. State, and came to Erie Co. at an early date. They reared a family of 7 children, 5 of whom are now living. Ira was a prominent farmer, and departed this life Oct., 1854. His widow now resides with her children; her father was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject was married, June 8, 1880, to Sophia C. Beckman, of Fairview Township, Erie Co., Penn., born Feb. 15, 1858, and daughter of Louis and Maggie Beckman, natives of Germany, and early settlers here. One child, dying in infancy, has blessed this union. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in principle.

His grandfather, James Graham, settled in what is now Summit Township in 1801, moving his family and household goods on horseback from Bellefonte, Centre Co., Penn. Wm. Graham, the father of Jackson J., died in Aug., 1882, aged eighty-seven years. In 1864, our subject was united in marriage with Lavina Robinson, of Mill Creek Township. One child has been born to this union—Emma E. Mr. Graham is now serving his second term as Commissioner of Summit Township. Politically, he is a Democrat.

AN OLD SETTLER GONE.

William Graham, one of the earliest settlers in Erie County, died yesterday morning at his home in Summit Township, at the advanced age of eighty-six years and nine months. Mr. Graham was born in Bellefonte, Centre Co., Penn., Nov. 21, 1795, coming to Erie County with his parents in 1801. They located about six miles south of the city of Erie, in what was then Crawford Co. He lived with his parents until 1818, when he purchased the farm he ever after lived on from George W. Reed. Mr. Graham endured all the hardships incident to clearing and cultivating a new country. He came all the way from Centre County on horseback through dense and boundless forests, only broken here and there with a narrow path, only to be followed by the blazed trees along them. He was the oldest of a family of seven children, all of whom have died in years gone by. Mr. Graham was a soldier of the war of 1812, in which he served with great credit, although scarcely seventeen years of age when war was declared. He was a man of sterling honesty and uprightness, admired and respected by his neighbors. In all his unusually long life, he never was in any court as either plaintiff or defendant in a law suit, a fact that speaks volumes of his undeviating integrity and honorable dealings with his fellow-men. For 20 years he acted as Justice of the Peace, conducting the affairs of his district in so successful a manner that it was rarely ever heard of in court. Mr. Graham leaves one son—Jackson—and one daughter—Mrs. Clark Ewing—both of whom live on their father's farm. He was one of the first subscribers of the Weekly Observer when it was started, and he has taken it without a break from that time to the present.

Erie Observer, Aug. 25, 1882.

Dr. Abbey is a member of the Presbyterian Church; is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity; and the K. of H.

CHESTER W. BACON, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., in 1822. His mother, Roxy Bacon, died in Chenango Co., N. Y., Feb., 1828. His father, Henry C., was a native of Whately, Mass., and a son of Jonathan Bacon, a pioneer of Genesee and Chenango Cos., a soldier of the Revolutionary war, who died in Genesee Co. in 1833. Henry C. Bacon settled on the present farm of his son in 1840, where he lived till his decease in 1862, in his 72d year. He was a soldier of the war of 1812. Of his children, 3 are now living—Daniel S., Chester W. and Wells W. Chester W. married, in 1849, Rosannah Hale, a native of Chenango Co., N. Y., by whom he has had 2 children, both living—Charles H. and Jennie L. Mr. Bacon has always lived on the homestead farm, and is well and favorably known among the citizens and pioneers.

L. G. BARNES, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born on the homestead in this township in 1835. His father, Rev. Levi Barnes, was born February 25, 1796, in North Canaan, Conn., and in 1818 was married to Susan Capron, and in 1820 with his wife and one child took up the farm occupied by our subject in Erie Co. The journey from Utica, N. Y., was made in a sleigh. He was converted when eighteen, and licensed to exhort in 1822; was ordained a Deacon in 1853, and an Elder in 1863. The pioneer preachers always found a warm welcome at his home. He spent 57 years in this county, enduring many hardships. He took an active part in establishing schools, churches, etc., and in 1834 was elected and for several years served as Capt. of a company of militia. His son preserves his sword. Mrs. Barnes after a lingering illness died in the faith May 10, 1877; he followed her May 19, 1877. The church lost a pillar, and the people a worthy citizen. Their children now living are Charles G., John Vincent, Harriet, Hannah E., Alpheus, L. G. and Susan A. Nathan S. died 1½ years after his parents' deaths. Our subject married in 1857 Mary M. Shelmadine, of this county, who has borne him 6 children, 5 living—Olive A. (wife of J. M. Carroll), Alice N. (wife of F. S. Carroll), May R., Emma A. and Jennie L. Mr. Barnes has always resided on the homestead. He has served as School Director some years, and is a consistent member of the M. E. Church.

WILLIAM P. BILES, Jr., physician, Union City, born in 1850 in Greenwood Township, Crawford Co., Penn., is a son of William P. and Martha Anna (Murdick) Biles, natives of Washington Co., and Lawrence, Penn., respectively. The former, now engaged in stock-raising, has been a resident of Crawford Co. 50 years, and though a prominent man, never accepted office. Four of his children are living—John C., residing at Chanute, Kan.; Mary C., wife of Wm. Aunorer, of Crawford Co.; James W. and Wm. P., Jr. Andrew enlisted in Co. F, 38th P. V. I. in 1861, and received his death wound in the seven days' fight before Richmond. Our subject received his medical education at the Eclectic Institute at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he graduated in 1879. Soon after receiving his degree, he practiced his profession at Mill Village, Erie Co. June, 1883, the Doctor came to Union City, and opened an office, and is doing a large and lucrative practice, being unusually successful with all cases brought to him. He married in Mercer Co., Penn., in 1874, Sarah E. Dilley. The surviving children born to this union are Bertha M. and William E. The family are members of the M. E. Church. Dr. Biles is a member of the State Medical Association of Penn., and President of the Northwestern Medical Association. He was for years a member of the Penn. State Police, and he is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H. and R. T. of T.

W. O. BLACK, Postmaster, Union City, was born in Meadville, Penn., in 1823, and is the 3d child of William and Phebe (Jones) Black. The mother, a native of Meadville, was a daughter of Robert Jones, of Scotch descent, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and who had 3 sons in the war of 1812, one of whom now resides in Crawford Co., Penn. William Black, born near Pittsburgh, was a son of John Black, who, with his brother, James, emigrated to America, from Ireland, at an early date. James went South, and his whereabouts are not known. John settled in Penn., served in the war of 1812, and resided at Meadville until his death. William Black in early life farmed, and traveled on horseback from Pittsburgh to Warren, Penn., carrying the mail. Later, he engaged in mercantile trade at Meadville. In 1859, he moved to Union City, where he lived in retirement until he was accidentally killed while walking on the rail of the P. & E. road, in 1870. His wife and mother died in Ill., but are interred here. Five of their children survive—Caroline, Margaret, Katie, John D. and our subject. W. O. Black, though reared on a farm in early life, was a salesman in Meadville and in Erie City, to which he came in 1844. In 1847, he opened a stock of goods for a Buffalo house, running a grist mill and saw mill in connection. He then farmed for 8 years in this township. In 1866, he sold this farm, and manufactured oil barrels. He also largely engaged in stock-dealing until 1880, when he was appointed Postmaster. Mr. Black took an active part during the late war, assisting to raise the 83d, 111th and the 145th Regs., and also served as a Surgeon, doing active work at Fredericksburg and Gettysburg, where his brother John was pierced by 3 bullets. Mr. Black married, in this county, Elizabeth R., daughter of Judge M. Sterrett, of Erie City, by whom he has the following-named children: Ada, Emma, Mary, Jessie, Nettie and William. Mr. Black served as County Treasurer (in 1859), in the City Council, as Commissioner and in various local offices, always giving satisfaction to his constituents.

G. W. BRAKEMAN, dry goods, boots, shoes and carpets, Union City, was born in Venango Co., Penn., in 1847, son of Lorenzo and Sarah (Thompson) Brakeman, natives of the same State. They moved from Mercer Co., Penn., to York Co., Neb., in 1870, where Mrs. Brakeman died. Our subject came to this city in 1870, engaging as a salesman until the spring of 1882, when he opened his present place of business in the Gillett Block. Possessing good business qualifications and carrying a good stock, he does a large and increasing business. Mr. Brakeman married, in Mercer Co., Penn., in 1870, Almira C. McCutcheon, a native of same. Three children blessed this union, all living, viz., James D., Frank E. and William. Our subject is connected with the M. E. Church, and is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H. and Royal Templars. He is a highly esteemed business man of Union City.

CHARLES W. BRÉED, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Hawley, Franklin Co., Mass., in 1822, son of John and Catherine (Fish) Breed, the former a native of Conn., the latter of Vt. They migrated to Crawford Co., Penn., in 1834, but after a year's residence there moved to Union Township, Erie Co., Penn. He was one of the pioneers in the wilderness, entering 100 acres of land in Crawford Co., and 60 in Wayne, where they passed the remainder of their lives. They reared a family of 11 children, 6 now living—Maria, John, Eunice S., Charles W., Catherine and Henry. Our subject was married, in this county, June 17, 1847, to Emma, daughter of Jacob Shepard, a distinguished pioneer of this county, where she was born. Six children were born to this union, but one surviving—Alta, wife of Willis Hubbell, who resides on the homestead. Mr. Breed settled on his present farm of 100 acres in 1849, which at that time was an unbroken wilderness, but which he has cleared and improved. He erected a commodious, substantial residence, and is living a quiet, unostentatious life. Mr. Breed is a member of the M. E. Church.

FERDINAND CARROLL was born in the North of Ireland in 1757, and spent his boyhood days with his widowed mother. He served a 7-years' apprenticeship at the weaver's trade, and when twenty-four married Isabella Johnson, who bore him 12 children. In the spring of 1801, he, with his wife and 10 children, set sail in an old war vessel for N. Y. After a stormy voyage of 8 weeks (during which his daughter Isabella died and was buried), he landed at New Castle, Del. Their destination was Chillicothe, Ohio, but, on arriving at Pittsburgh and hearing of the inducements offered by the Holland Land Co., Mr. Carroll, with his sons Samuel and George, came to Erie Co., where he purchased for $30 in gold, a Dutch pioneer's claim to Land Tract No. 159, on which was a rude hut, and brought the family on pack-horses from Pittsburgh. He departed this life, Feb. 1, 1831, his wife Sept. 30, 1830. He bequeathed his estate to William, his youngest son. William married Hannah Slauson in 1820, by whom he had 10 children. She died in 1872. Wm. Carroll died in 1882, leaving the greater part of the homestead to George W., who, by additional purchases, has now 167 acres of land. He married, in 1863, Susan A., daughter of Levi Barnes, a pioneer of Union Township. She is a lady of rare energy and business capacity. In 1871, Mr. Carroll erected a cheese factory, which he is conducting successfully, and is making annually over 50 tons of cheese. Mr. Carroll and wife are descended from pioneer stock. They are intelligent, progressive and highly esteemed citizens.

H. C. CHENEY, of Cheney & Lowry, chair manufacturers, Union City, was born in Cheshire Co., N. H., in 1836, and learned chair-making at Ashburnham, Mass. At the breaking-out of the war, our subject, in 1861, enlisted in Co. G, 21st Mass. V. I. He was wounded in the arm in the battle at Camden, N. C., in April, 1862, and returned home on furlough. He rejoined his regiment in Aug., and participated in the 2d battle of Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Spottsylvania, and was with Burnside at Roanoke, through the battle of the Wilderness with Grant, and was again wounded at the mine explosion before Petersburg, Va., in July, 1864. He was mustered out Sept., 1864, at Worcester, Mass. Mr. Cheney, in 1870, contracted for chair-making at Jamestown, N. Y. Two years later, he became proprietor of a hotel at Canisteo, N. Y., but 4 years after returned to Jamestown. In 1881, he came to this city and organized this firm, of which he is the manager. They purchased the old factory of Wheeler and rebuilt it, but it was destroyed by fire the same year. The present edifice is 40x150 feet. The engine, boiler and dry-kiln room 36x64, and a new addition to the main 30x60. It is the largest manufactory in the city, employing from 50 to 60 men. Mr. Cheney married at Fitchburg, Mass., in 1861, Ellen P. Burgess, a native of the same, who bore him 2 sons—Harry C. and Louis I. Our subject is a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., and A. O. U. W.

H. L. CHURCH, of the firm of H. L. Church & Sons, millers, Union City, was born in Haddam, Middlesex Co., Conn., in 1811. His father, Thomas Church, a native of Haddam, and his mother, Sallie N. (Parmelee) Church, born in Killingworth, moved to this township in 1855, where Thomas passed the remainder of his life. Mrs. Church, an estimable lady, died aged ninety-four years one month and seventeen days. Three of their children are living—H. L., Russell S. and Thomas R. Mr. Church entered mercantile trade in Union City in 1855, under the firm name of Summerton & Church, erecting and conducting the Union City Mills, until 1864, when they dissolved. Mr. Church retained his interest, and Charles H. and R. S., his sons, are now associated with him. The mill has 4 run of buhrs, with a capacity of 25 barrels per day, besides an extensive run of custom work. A saw mill, rebuilt in 1855, is also run in connection with the same. The water-power is supplied by a dam erected in 1800. Mr. Church married in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1838, to E. M. J., daughter of Henry Whitney, a native of Oneida Co., N. Y.; of the children born to this union, 4 are living—Charles, R. S. second, Horatio L. and Carrie E. Mr. Church served as Treasurer of Warren Co., Penn., one term and has filled various offices of trust in this township. He is one of the active business workers of this city.

W. E. CLARKE, produce dealer, Union City. The Clarke family are of English stock. John Clarke, from whom the later generations sprang, was the founder of Rhode Island. Our subject was born in Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., Dec. 22, 1838, and is a son of Isaac D. and Sophia (Taft) Clarke, who came to the West in 1847, and settled in Wattsburg, Erie Co., where the latter died in 1865. John, who has attained the age of eighty years, is the father of 4 children—Artemus N. and Henry T., residents of Omaha; W. E. and Augustus W., of Papillion, Neb. Mr. Clarke has been dealing in produce since 1861, and is no doubt the most extensive butter buyer in Erie Co. His business averages $100,000 per annum in produce. He is also largely engaged in real estate, bonds and mortgages. Mr. Clarke was married at Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., in 1877, to Mary A., daughter of S. G. Brotherton. Three children have been born to this union—Ward B. Louis S. and Edith H.

L. S. CLOUGH, wholesale lumber dealer, Union City, is a grandson of Levi Clough, a native of the State of N. Y., where he was reared, educated and married. In early life, he worked at the trade of carpenter and joiner, and afterward followed farming. When about eighteen years of age, he settled in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where he married and resided many years. For several years previous to his death, he resided with his son in Crawford Co., Penn., and there retired from active business, and enjoyed the fruits of his past labors and the loving care of his children and friends. Walter R. Clough, his son, and father of our subject, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1826. He remained at home assisting to till the home farm and receiving an education, until he was twenty-one years of age. He then began farming on his own account, and in 1854 came to Penn., and settled in Sparta, Crawford Co., where he remained until 1874, and then removed to Dover, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, where he now resides, engaged in fruit farming. His wife, Melissa H. (Smith) Clough, is a native of N. Y. State, born about 10 miles east of Lockport. She is a daughter of Levi Smith, of R. I., a participant of the war of 1812, who died in Conneaut, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, after a long and useful life. Mrs. Clough is the mother of 7 children, viz., L. S., Emma A., Kate A., George W., Alton A., Eugene D. and Charles L. Levi Smith Clough, the subject of this sketch, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Feb. 11, 1848. At eighteen years of age, he left home and engaged in working at the trade of car-penyer and joiner, and thereby earned the means which enabled him to buy books and secure an education. After about 2 years' experience at the carpenter's trade, he began contracting, and 8 years later engaged in the wholesale lumber business. Since 1876, he has been residing in Union City, where he has built up a large and increasing business. When he opened his business here, it was on the small capital of $4,500, but by perseverance, honesty and industry, he has met with success, and now carries an average stock of $15,000, and besides is engaged in manufacturing in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and Crawford Co., Penn. His residence, a model of refinement and neatness, shows its owner to be a wide-awake and public-spirited citizen. In July, 1876, he married Miss Sarah M., daughter of Perry G. Stranahan, whose portrait and biography appear elsewhere in this volume. Mr. Clough is an active member of the order A., F. & A. M., and though yet young, is looked upon as one of the leading and enterprising men of Union City.

JOHN S. COE, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1815, son of Samuel and Sally Coe., the former of Conn. and the latter of Madison Co., N. Y., a daughter of John Stockholm, a native of Newport, England. They came to Erie Co. in 1837, and, excepting a short residence at Mayville, lived here till their deaths. They reared 9 children, 8 now living. Our subject, John S., came to Erie Co. in 1836, empty handed. He worked for $10 per month, but by perseverance and frugality was enabled to purchase 100 acres of land, which he has, by additional purchases, increased to 256 acres. He was united in marriage, Nov. 4, 1841, with Eliza Louthier, now deceased, a native of this county; she was the mother of 3 children—Mary E., George W. and Martha J. George W. enlisted Oct. 16, 1864, in the 145th Reg. P. V. I.; was taken prisoner and died at Andersonville. Mr. Coe's second union was with Lucy Utter, a native of Allegany Co. N. Y.; 3 children have blessed this marriage, viz., John E., Charles S. and Ella E. Mr. Coe is descended from one of the esteemed pioneer families of this county.

ELI DUNCOMBE, deceased. Among the early ancestry of this gentleman, was Sir Charles Duncombe, who emigrated from England to Boston in 1730, married in that city, and reared a family of 4 sons and 1 daughter. Charles, the eldest son, was born in 1747; married Mary Treadwell, and moved to Conn. Their family consisted of 5 sons and 1 daughter. David, the 3d son of Charles, was born in Conn. in 1777, amid the living events of the Revolution. After the war, his parents moved with him and some of his brothers from Conn. to Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y. David was married, in Stamford, in 1802, to Phebe Nickols, of that place. To them were born 3 sons—Eli, Almond and Charles H. Eli Duncombe, the subject of this sketch was born in Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y., in 1804. His early days were spent at the farm home of his father, he receiving such school training as could be imparted in those early days. At the age of twenty, he entered the study and practice of medicine with his cousin, Dr. C. H. Duncombe, of St. Thomas, Can. In 1827, he married Selina Champlain, of Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y. In the spring of 1830, in company with his parents and their family, they moved to the then "far West," and located in Amity Township, Erie Co., Penn., on French Creek, 2 miles below Wattsburg. Here in the unbroken forest he formed the nucleus of his new home, and by the assistance of a frugal and industrious wife they soon found themselves surrounded by a very pleasant home. To them were born 4 sons and 2 daughters, 2 of whom died in infancy. To these he gave the best educational advantages the country afforded, fitting them to occupy the most worthy position of citizenship. His counsel was sought on all subjects of public note, and where arbitration could prevent litigation, few if any equalled him in adjusting difficulties. He served his township in various official capacities, not from choice, but in obedience to the demands of its citizens. His study was laden with the most practical, historical and progressive literature of the day, of which he was a close student. He was zealously attached to the interests of the church in his home town of Wattsburg, and very few can be found who contributed more or labored more assiduously in advancing its usefulness. He died, of congestion of the lungs, in the spring of 1877, aged seventy-three years. Mrs. Duncombe is still living (1884) with her daughter, Mrs. W. T. Everson, in Union City, in her eighty-first year.

W. T. EVERSON, Union City, Penn., was born in 1827, in Moravia, N. Y. His parents, Wm. and Catherine (Thompson) Everson, were natives of N. J.; his school education was completed at the Homer Academy at the age of eighteen years, when he engaged in teaching school in the counties of Onondaga and Cayuga, N. Y., for 6 years. In 1851, he taught school in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. In 1853, he located in Wattsburg, Erie Co., where he carried on wagon manufacturing for a number of years. In 1857, he married Phebe J., only surviving daughter of Eli and Selina Duncombe, of Amity, Erie Co., but natives of Delaware Co., N. Y. (See biography of Eli Duncombe.) Mr. Everson's family consists of 3 children—Wm. E. and 2 adopted children, J. F. Duncombe, orphan and nephew of Mrs. E. and Mary C., adopted from the Home in N. Y. Mr. E. engaged in producing and refining petroleum oils in 1862, and was actively engaged for 6 years, when he returned to Amity, Erie Co., and engaged in farming. With former experience and practical life, he soon became a noted agriculturist, and his counsels were sought after by patrons of husbandry throughout the entire State. He was the Prohibition candidate for Congress in fall of 1882, receiving a very complimentary vote for the infant cause in which he is zealously engaged. Mr. Everson is at present Director and Vice President in the Farmers' Trust Co., a banking institution organized in Union City in 1883. He is highly esteemed and respected by all who know him. He is a member of the M. E. Church, in which he has acted in the capacity of Class Leader and Sunday School Superintendent a large portion of his life.

A. O. GILLETT, furniture dealer and undertaker, Gillett Block, Union City, second child and only son born to William A. and Julia A. (Organ) Gillett, natives of Geauga Co., Ohio, and Putnam Co., N. Y., respectively. They moved on a farm in Union Township, Erie Co., Penn. They now reside in Union City. Our subject was born in 1841, in Steuben Co., N. Y. He remained on the homestead farm until eighteen years of age. He was second to respond to the first call for troops in this place, and served 3 months in Co. H, 83d P. V. I. After his return, he engaged in various mercantile pursuits, and established the first furniture store in this city, in Brooklyn Block, which was destroyed by fire in 1878. Recovering from this severe loss, he erected the Gillett Block, cor. Main and Market streets, which is a monument to his enterprise; it has a frontage of 41 ft., depth 102 ft., also a frontage of 21x61 ft. on Market street. His furniture store and undertaking establishment is the largest business house in the city, and he carries an average stock of $6,000. He has a large trade, getting the bulk of this class of business. He is a member of the School Board, and has served 3 years in the City Council; is also a member of the K. of H. and I. O. O. F. Mr. Gillett married in this city, in 1867, Caroline, daughter of Alex. Whitney, of Chautauqua Co., N. Y., who bore him 3 children—Willie H., Maud E. and Martha J.

OSCAR GLEZEN, blacksmith, Union City, is a native of Broome Co., N. Y., born in 1827. He is a son of Marcellus and Abigail (Howland) Glezen, who were the parents of 2 children—Ezra F., of Tompkins Co., N. Y., and Oscar. Mrs. Glezen was a native of Delaware Co., and Mr. Glezen of Berkshire Co., Mass., and died at the age of eighty-five at New Jersey. Our subject, with the family moved to Tioga when a boy, and there he learned his trade. Mr. Glezen remained at home until his marriage, in 1850, with Sarah S. Cross, a native of Berkshire Co., Mass. They came to this city in 1869, and Mr. Glezen opened a shop which was destroyed by fire Aug. 8, 1875. In March, 1883, he opened his present shop, where he does a large and increasing trade, employing 3 men continually. His eldest son—James L., was connected with him in business until his death in 1877. Oscar B., his second son, is a resident of Tioga County. Mr. Glezen served as Justice of the Peace in Tioga Co. 9 years, Justice of the Sessions 1 year, and as Assistant Revenue Assessor 5 years. He was one of the City Council for a term, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church, the I. O. O. F., and E. A. U.

C. N. GOUCHER, physician, Union City, was born in Trumbull Co., Ohio, in 1845, son of William S. and Deborah (Webb) Goucher, natives of Ohio and residents of Greenville, Penn., where he is Justice of the Peace. Of their 5 children, only C. N. survives. Our subject acquired his education in the schools of Hartford, Ohio, and graduated at the Henniston Institute, in Cleveland, in 1863. Then for 4 years he applied himself to the study of medicine with Dr. Allen Jones, of Kinsman, Ohio, completing same at the Cleveland Medical College, graduating in the class of 1869. In 1870, he began to practice in Girard, Ohio, remaining 4 years, when he moved to Mercer Co., Penn.; thence to this city in 1881, where he has since very successfully followed his profession. Dr. Goucher was married in Girard, in 1871, to Emma Kincaide, a native of same, and a daughter of Joseph Kincaide; 1 son—Willie, has blessed this union. Mrs. Goucher died in 1872. Mr. Goucher subsequently remarried in Mercer Co., Penn., Louisa, daughter of Geo. Battiger, a native of same county; 2 children have been born to this union, viz., Addie B. and Curtis N. The Doctor is connected with the Presbyterian Church, and is a member of the I. O. O. F.

HENRY N. HALL, proprietor of market on Main St., Union City, one of our active business men, is the only son of Noah Hall, who was born in Warren Co., Ohio. In 1836, he married, in Orleans Co., N. Y., Evaline Drake, a native of same, and soon after moved to Burton, Ohio, where he engaged in mercantile trade until 1843, when he returned to Orleans Co., dealing in stock, which he drove over the mountains to Philadelphia. Leaving his family enjoying the comforts of his home, he returned, in 1847, to Burton on business; from thence journeyed to Shiloh, Richland Co., Ohio, where he was murdered in cold blood by R. G. M. Ward, with whom he was boarding, in March, 1852, and who escaped the law, but afterward was sentenced to be hung for murdering a woman, and, before execution, confessed to the murder of Mr. Hall and an unknown peddler. His widow subsequently purchased a farm and hotel in Riceville, Penn., where she settled with her family and passed the remainder of her life. Our subject was born in Burton, Ohio, in 1839. He assumed the proprietorship of the hotel at Riceville, Penn., for several years. After 1861, he entered the mercantile trade and manufactured barrels; 7 years later he disposed of his interest and came to this city, where he conducted a market several years. From 1877 to 1880, he ran a wholesale and retail flour and feed store at Tarport, McKean Co., Penn. At the expiration of this time he returned to this city and opened his present place of business. He employs 2 men, and with the assistance of his son attends to his large and increasing trade. During the late war he was drafted in 1862 and 1863 for the Union army, and furnished 2 substitutes. Mr. Hall has about 400 acres of land in Crawford Co., where he carried on the lumber trade for a short time. He served as a member of the Council at Riceville, and is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, and the K. of H. His marriage to Mary E. Mallery, of Jamestown, N. Y., occurred at Riceville in 1863. She was a daughter of Wm. Mallery, an early settler of Riceville, where she was reared and educated. She died in 1880, leaving one son—J. Park. Mr. Hall was again married, on this occasion Sept. 5, 1883, to Abbie V. Burchfield, of Edinboro, Penn.

EDWIN W. HATCH, broom manufacturer, Union City, was born in Amity Township, Erie Co., in 1835. He is a grandson of Roswell (a soldier in 1812, a prominent character, founder of the M. E. Church at Hatch Hollow, where he passed his life), and son of Jason C. Hatch, born in Herkimer Co. in 1806, and who married Maryann King; she died in 1838, and he afterward married her younger sister, Elizabeth, daughter of Levi King, born in Vt. in 1784, who with his father, Adinijah, born in 1857, settled in Waterford Township in 1815. Adinijah, familiarly known as the Yankee King, died at Waterford. Levi purchased our subject's estate, but moved to Amity, where he died. To Jason C. were born 15 children, 10 surviving—Edwin, Daniel W., George, Arvilla, Julia, Scott, Edwin, Wilson, Eugene and Fred. Daniel W., George and Cyrus served in the late war; the latter was killed in the second battle of Fredericksburg. The family settled in Amity Township in 1825. Jason and William, his older brothers, entered 2 tracts of 200 acres each, and erected the first saw mill in the township, which was operated by the Hatch family until 1872. Jason was extensively engaged in farming, and at the time of his death in 1865 owned over 600 acres of land. Our subject married, in Amity Township, in 1856, Nancy, daughter of Ira Chaffe, one of the pioneer settlers of Amity Township, Erie Co. Their children are Leon W., Frank P., P. Luther and Augustus E. Mr. Hatch came to Union City in 1872, engaging in business. He purchased and improved a tract of land known as the Hatch Hill, on which he erected his residence. Our subject made staves until 1875, when his place was burned. In 1876, he, with his brother George, erected the broom factory, with a capacity of 10 dozen brooms per day. George withdrew in 1879, and he admitted his sons, Leon W. and Frank, as partners, and increased the capacity to 30 dozen per day. Mr. H. has been connected with the M. E. Church for the past 26 years, and was Superintendent of Sabbath school 15 years.

J. P. HEARN, photographer, Union City, is a native of Devonshire, England, born in 1846. He immigrated with his brother John in 1872, locating in Ottawa, Canada, 1 year; thence to St. Catharines, Ontario, where he was a pupil of G. F. Maitland, with whom he remained 1 year in St. Catharines, and 2 years in Buffalo, N. Y. In the spring of 1875 he came to this city, built and opened a photograph gallery, which was destroyed in the "Brooklyn Fire" in 1879; he lost his entire stock. By pluck and perseverance he again established himself in business, over the post office, where he has fitted a gallery with all modern improvements, and has built up a large trade. He is a fine artist, and specimens of his handiwork not only attest to his skill, but to the progress of photography. Mr. Hearn was united in marriage, Sept., 1878, with Annie McClelland, a native of St. Catharines, Ontario. Their eldest child, Robert Raleigh, was born Sept. 19, 1880; George Leland was born Oct. 21, 1882, died Jan. 14, 1883; Lulu Alice was born Feb. 27, 1884. Our subject is a member of the M. E. Church, in which he is chorister and a teacher in the Sabbath school. He is also an honored member of the I. O. F. society.

D. B. HITCHCOCK, farmer, contractor and builder, P. O. Union City, was born in Schoharie Co., N. Y., in 1830, son of Darius and Elizabeth (Bailey) Hitchcock, both residents of that place. Our subject came to Erie Co. in 1853, and located in Amity Township, where he remained until 1870, when he sold this farm and went to Kan. and was engaged in stock-raising and farming 10 years. In 1880, he returned to Erie Co. and purchased in Union Township his present farm of 140 acres, well known as the Smith farm. This he has greatly improved, and has erected a fine, commodious, residence. Mr. Hitchcock was united in marriage, in 1855, with Elsie E., daughter of Sylvester Inman, of this county. The children now living born to this union are Adelaide A., Devillo B., Esther E., Mortimer B., Minnie M., Elsie E. and Melvin D. In 1870, Mr. Hitchcock resigned the office of Commissioner. On going West he served as Justice of the Peace during his residence in Kan., and has held other offices of trust. He is a man of enterprise.

Church, well known in Crawford and Erie Cos.; the latter a native of Mass. Our subject began the study of medicine in 1875 with Dr. S. H. Benton, of Oil City, where he remained 2 years. He went to Cleveland in 1877, and for 2 years was a private student under Dr. A. C. Miller, Professor of Medical Department Wooster University, that city, and graduated from there in 1879. Dr. Hollister then followed his profession for a year in Sharpville, Mercer Co., Penn.; in 1881, locating at Cambridge, Crawford Co., where, with the exception of 8 months, which he spent in traveling, visiting California and other resorts for the benefit of his health. He was in active practice until the spring of 1884, when he located in Union City. Dr. Hollister is a gentleman of culture and refinement, and, though a young man, has an extensive and lucrative practice. He was married, Dec. 28, 1882, to Mrs. Frances S. Gill, widow of W. R. Gill, and daughter of Evans W. and Catherine Y. (McElwee) Shippen, a prominent family of Meadville, Penn.

DAVID HUBBELL, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1827, son of Jabus and Maria (Benedict) Hubbell, both natives of Otsego Co., where they were married. Jabus came to Erie in 1830 and settled upon 250 acres of land in Amity Township, where they lived till the close of their lives. They reared a family of 3 children, all now living, viz., Hiram, David and Eliza (she married Maj. Geo. H. Clark, of Mankato, Minn). The second wife of Jabus was Maria Peck, who bore him 3 children, all now living—Mary, Burtis and Eva. Our subject was married in Amity Township in 1851 to Phebe C., daughter of James McCullough, a pioneer family. Charles A. and Willis N. are the living issue of this union. Mr. Hubbell settled in 1856 on his present farm in Union Township, consisting of 125 acres. He also owns a farm of 50 acres in this township. Mr. Hubbell comes of pioneer stock, and for many years has been an officer and supporter of the M. E. Church, of which he is also one of the Trustees, and is widely and favorably known.

GARRETT B. JOHNSON, proprietor of the Johnson House, Union City, was born in Federal Hill, Madison Co., N. Y., Dec. 24, 1822. His father, a native of Holland, entered the navy as a cabin boy when fifteen years old, rose to the rank of Captain and fought in the war of 1812. He subsequently became agent for an East India tobacco house. He married Sally Bingham in Madison Co., N. Y., who bore him 8 children, of whom are now living—Catherine, widow of Chas. Clark; Garrett B.; John; and Sarah M., wife of Thomas Woods. They removed to Oneida Co., N. Y., where they both died. Our subject was married in 1847 to Charlotte E., daughter of Orange Hopkins; their surviving children are Garrett W. and C. Edith. Mr. Johnson was Postmaster 12 years, and in mercantile trade 9 years at Prospect, N. Y. Thence he came to Union City in 1863, and established himself in business. He was succeeded in his store by his son Garrett W. and Smiley. In 1881, Charles E. Hunter was admitted as a partner in the concern, which is one of the most active in this city. In 1870, Mr. Johnson purchased the lots and erected the Johnson House, at a cost of $25,000. This hotel, the largest in the county, outside of Erie, has 4 stories and a basement, with modern improvements, and has 30 rooms, finely furnished throughout. As a landlord, Mr. Johnson bears an enviable reputation. He has served many years as a member of the Council of Union City.

JOHN LANDSRATH, hardware, Union City, was born in 1822 in Wiesbaden, Germany, and in 1847, with his brother, Henry, emigrated to America. During the Mexican war, John enlisted at Philadelphia, under Lieut. Pleaston, seeing active service under Gen. Taylor. Returning in 1848, he worked at his trade, tinner, at Dunkirk, N. Y.; there, in 1852, he married Lydia H. Burnham, of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. He then went to Jamestown, where he remained until 1853, when he came to Union City: of their children, E. B. only survives, and is with his father in business. The deceased are John A., the eldest son who died Feb. 24, 1880, a promising young man, married only a few months to Mary Hill; Clement and Grace. Mr. Landsrath worked at his trade till 1860, when he opened the first hardware store here, and by perseverance and frugality, he has increased in wealth with the growth of the city. In 1861, he aided in raising, and was made Captain of, Co. H, McLane's Reg. V. I., which went to Pittsburgh, and remained inactive till the expiration of its time. Our subject purchased half an acre of land on Main street, from which he sold 2 lots, retaining the remainder on which he built. In 1868, he erected his present commodious place of business, the largest store of the kind in Union City. He carries a stock valued at $10,000, and is doing a large trade. Mr. L. was one of the building committee and raised funds to build the Presbyterian Church in 1873. He is a member of the Masonic order.

F. H. LAWRENCE, dentist, Union City, was born in Greene Township, Erie Co., Penn., in 1851; son of Erastus and Jane R. (Hilborn) Lawrence, residents of this county. His grandfather, Joseph Lawrence, was one of the distinguished pioneers of the county and lived to be ninety-eight years of age. Our subject began the study of dentistry in 1871, under the instructions of Dr. C. H. Hawey, of Erie; two years later he entered the Philadelphia Dental College and there completed his studies. He then took charge of Dr. Fisher's dental office, of Warren, Penn., and in 1874 opened dental rooms at Albion, Erie Co. Dr. Lawrence came to this city in 1881, where he has since conducted a large and lucrative business. From a long study of dentistry, he has attained a thorough knowledge of his profession and has the reputation of being a skillful and superior operator. Our subject was married at Albion, Feb. 25, 1874, to Clara Belle Palmer, of this county. This union has been blessed by the birth of Lille M. and Gena M.

A. J. LILLEY, farmer, P. O. Union City, is of Scotch descent. The first of the family to settle in this country was his grandfather Phenias, a native of Scotland, and a soldier in the war of 1812, who settled in Sandy Creek, Oswego Co., N. Y., where he died. The family have since become numerous there. His children who survive are Abner, Alford, Olive and Diantha. Abner was among the pioneers of 1833 to locate in Concord Township, Erie Co., where he erected the Lilley Mill, which he successfully conducted 35 years. In 1859, he sold his farm and moved to Va., but returned at the breaking-out of the rebellion, as he was a strong Union man. His wife, Lorene Porter, died in 1849 the mother of 8 children, 5 now living—Jane, Polly, William, Cynthia and our subject. Mr. Lilley then married Mrs. Olive Pratt, who bore him the following children: Abner, Viney, Henry, Fred, Walter, Morris and Charles. He subsequently moved to near Westfield, N. Y. and is in the seventy-eight year of his age. A. J. Lilley was born in Oswego Co., N. Y., in 1833. He married in this county, in 1858, Cynthia Reynolds, who died in 1877, leaving 3 children—Volley, Minnie and Morris. He then married Mary Perry. In 1868, he settled on his present farm, consisting of 102½ acres. Mr. Lilley has held various township offices; he is a descendant of pioneer stock.

GEORGE McLEAN, one of Erie Co.'s most respected pioneers, was born in Lancaster Co., Penn., March 7, 1793; at an early age, he removed to Prattsburg, Steuben Co., N. Y., and after a residence there for a number of years, he came to Waterford, this county, and passed here the remainder of his life, his demise occurring March 17, 1872. By earnest toil and unremitting industry he accumulated quite a competency. He was ever a man of sound, upright principle, and one of Erie's best citizens. His family consisted of Joan Whitney, D. S. McLean, W. E. McLean, George McLean, Jr., L. H. McLean, J. S. McLean, C. N. McLean, A. P. McLean, Deborah Moore, Drusilla Fullerton and Jane Boyd.

F. E. & J. C. McLEAN, proprietors of Union City Times, and sons of Lewis McLean, are natives of Erie Co., and although, owing to the circumstances of their family, they were not able to secure educational advantages over the common school, they have made such use of their opportunities that they take a high rank with men of education. They early selected the printing business as their life vocation, acquiring a knowledge of the trade in Union City. In 1878, F. E., the senior member of the firm, undertook the duties of editor and business manager of the Times. In the following year, he purchased an interest in the paper, and in 1882, in association with his brother J. C., he purchased the office, and they have conducted the business since under the firm name of McLean Bros. Politically, F. E. McLean is a Democrat, and has taken a leading and active part in the party progress and workings since he arrived at his majority. He was once the party nominee for the Prothonotary's office, and in 1882 was one of the candidates for the Assembly, but the county being strongly Republican, he was defeated, but made a strong run. J. C. McLean, the junior member of the firm, is a Republican, takes a leading part in the workings of the party, and, although a young man, has bright prospects before him.

C. N. McLEAN, Union City, is a native of Steuben Co., N. Y., born in 1833, son of George and Elizabeth (Sebring) McLean, natives of N. Y. State and Tioga Co., Penn., respectively, and who settled on a farm in Le Boeuf Township in 1848, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They reared a family of 11 children, 8 now living. Our subject resided on the homestead until 1859, when he came to this city, establishing himself in the grocery trade, which he pursued successfully 20 years. In 1875, Mr. McLean opened his present place of business on Main street, and has realized a fair and prosperous trade. He served as Constable 4 years and 1 term in the City Council. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the I. O. O. F., and is a reliable business man of this city. Mr. McLean was united in marriage, in 1867, in this county, with Demaria Wescott, a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Newman C. is the only issue of this union, now living.

F. M. McCLINTOCK, attorney, Union City, was born at Beaver Dam, Erie Co., Penn., in 1853; son of James and Mary (Hays) McClintock, natives of Penn.; of their children, 7 are living—Annie, Henry C., John H., Milton H., William L., Charles and Frank M. Our subject's great-grandfather, Hays, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war; one of his sons served in the war of 1812, and his widow still lives in Venango Township, Erie Co. Frank M. acquired his education at the State Normal School at Edinboro, Erie Co.; taught school 3 years in Crawford Co.; then read law in the office of J. W. Sproul, of Union City. He was admitted to the Erie Co. bar, May 11, 1878; to the Superior Court at Pittsburgh, in 1880; to the U. S. Courts in 1881. Our subject was united in marriage in 1881, in Venango Co., Penn., with Ada C., daughter of Samuel Cross, of Venango Co. One child, Jessie L., now living, was born to this union. Mr. McClintock began to practice in this city, where he has since been very successful. His only living sister, Annie, was a most successful teacher in the county of Crawford for 8 years. Henry C. McClintock is a very prominent physician in the city of Cumberland, Md. J. H. studied law but has continued the practice of teaching for 11 years, and is now the Principal of Schools of Columbus, Warren Co., Penn. The minds of the children like the parents run to education and literary attainments. The grandfather on the father's side was from Ireland, and the grandparents on the side of the mother were natives of Penn.

ERASTUS D. MATTESON, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born at Edmeston, Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1827. His parents were Abel and Keziah (Rudd) Matteson, former a native of the State of N. Y., latter of Vt.; they were among the pioneers of 1836, who settled in Amity Township, Erie Co., Penn. Abel purchased 64 acres of land, upon which he lived 7 years, when he moved on the farm now occupied by our subject. The last purchase was 125 acres, mostly cleared by Wm. Bracken. Mrs. Matteson died in 1844, leaving 1 son, E. D. Abel again married, this time to Melvina Blodget, who bore him 1 daughter

Keziah, now wife of Seth Rowley, of Youngsville. Erastus D. was married in Union Township, in 1853, to Miranda Davis, a native of Vt. Flora is the only child born to this union, and resides at home. Mr. Matteson purchased 50 acres more, and, in 1875, erected a large and commodious dwelling, where he lives a quiet, unostentatious life, respected by all. The family are members of the M. E. Church.

F. T. MOSES, proprietor of St. Charles Hotel, Union City, successor to L. Agnew, from whom, in Feb., 1883, he purchased the hotel and livery attached. The following summer he added 26x36 feet, and refurnished it throughout. He made an outlay of about $2,000. The hotel has 20 rooms, is very complete, and he intends making it the leading house in Union City. He runs a free bus to and from the trains, and is a genial, hospitable landlord. Mr. Moses is a native of Cuba, Allegany Co., N. Y., born in 1849, son of Samuel and Lucietta Moses, natives of that State, and residents of Cuba. Our subject located in this city in 1880, conducting a billiard room which he sold prior to purchasing the hotel. He married in his native county, in 1870, Lavonia Wilkinson, a native of the same county, where Mr. Moses served as Constable 5 years, Deputy Sheriff 3 years, and was employed by the State as contractor on the canals. He has always been a public character, and has also engaged in railroading; was with the Washington & Philadelphia Railroad and on other shorter lines. He has proven himself to be an active, successful business man.

DANIEL B. NORTHOP, farmer, P. O. Union City. The Northop family are of English descent. The records show that three brothers, emigrated to America, who spell their names each different from the other—Northrop, Northrup and Northrip. One was Gideon, another Joseph, who subsequently moved to Oneida Co., thence to Warren Co., Penn., in 1808, where the family became numerous, when Levitt, the father of our subject, was a young man. They were among that county's earliest pioneers. Levitt was born in 1794 in Conn., and married in Busti Co., N. Y., Lusina Bushnell, of Herkimer Co., N. Y. Of their family, 4 are living. Daniel B. is a native of Warren Co., Penn., and married, at Ashville, N. Y., in 1842, Matilda Pierce, a native of that State. Of their children, Niram, the eldest son, enlisted in 1862 in the 145th P. V. I.; was taken prisoner at Chancellorsville, and died in Douglas Hospital, Washington, D. C., Nov. 28, 1863, from the effects of his confinement; Levitt married Esther Spencer; Perry married Charity Debutts; Darius and Abraham. In 1850, Mr. Northop, our subject, came to Union Township and built his house and barn in the woods, settling on his present farm of 200 acres, to which he has made additional purchases. He has held various offices of trust, and has been a consistent member of the M. E. Church for 47 years.

HUNTINGTON D. PERSONS, Union City, manager for D. Appleton & Co., N. Y., was born in Geauga Co., Ohio, May 26, 1839, the eldest son of Huntington and Theda A. (Dowd) Persons, natives of Berkshire Co., Mass. H. Persons, Sr., was for years engaged in the tanning business at Colebrook River, Conn. In 1846-47, he served a term in the State Legislature. In 1852, he sold his farm near Hartford, Conn., and came to Amity Township, Erie Co. Our subject was reared on a farm, acquiring a common school education, and attending the Waterford Academy for 3 years. He has taught in the common schools of Amity, Concord, Greenfield, Venango and Waterford Townships, and several terms of select school, and was highly esteemed by his pupils and their parents. He married, Aug. 12, 1863, Martha M. Dewey, of Waterford, and has 5 children. In 1864, he was elected Principal of the graded schools at Saegertown, Crawford Co., resigning in 1866 to assume the duties of Supt. of Schools in that county. At the close of the term (3 years), he was re-elected by a majority of 3 to 1 over the combined vote of 3 competitors. Feb., 1872, he was seriously injured, and declined to be a candidate for another term. Aug., 1872, he was chosen professor of the Normal department, Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio, but resigned at the end of the 1st year on account of ill health. Sept., 1873, he purchased, and for nearly 5 years ran the printing office of the Union City Times. His ability as an editor and the popularity of the paper under his administration is well known in this county. In 1878, he engaged in the subscription book business, and has been employed as manager of the American Cyclopaedia and other publications of D. Appleton & Co. for Western Penn. and N. Y. since Jan. 1, 1880.

JAMES D. PHILLIPS, retired, Union City, the only living representative of the Phillips family in this county, is a son of James and grandson of Thomas Phillips, Sr. The latter with his family came to Erie Co. in 1797, took up large tracts of land, and performed an active part in its history. One of his sons, John, took up 1,400 acres, served as Paymaster in the war of 1812; was the first Representative sent by Erie Co. to the State Legislature at Lancaster; Canal Commissioner and Justice of the Peace several years. He died in the fall of 1846. In 1829, the first post office was established at Phillipsburg, and James, the father of our subject, was appointed Postmaster. He was married to Catharine Fink, and died in 1846, aged seventy-five. The living children born to this union are Ann, widow of James Phillips, a resident of La Salle, Ill.; Thomas J., of Kendall Co., Ill., and James D. The latter reared in the wilderness, has cleared land, erected and ran saw-mills, etc., etc. Our subject, in Sept., 1842, was commissioned Captain of a company of volunteers, a part of the 2d Penn. Mil., and the same year was promoted Major of the 2d Bat., 112th Reg. In Dec., 1846, he was appointed Postmaster of Phillipsburg, which position he resigned. In 1852, he was elected Justice of the Peace, which he also resigned, and went to Iowa, where he became Captain of the first company raised for the militia in that State, July, 1858. Mr. Phillips was commissioned County Auctioneer in 1868-73; was elected, and served 3 years as Jury Commissioner of Erie Co., and has held other township offices. He married, in Amity Township, in 1846, Fidelia A., daughter of Charles Capron, one of a pioneer family of Erie. Two sons were born to this union—Abner, who enlisted in the 12th Penn. Cav. in 1864, and was accidentally shot at Hancock, Md.; and Arthur, a resident of Chippewa Falls, who became totally blind when a young man. This family settled in Union City in 1869. Mr. Phillips is widely and favorably known as a pioneer, and highly esteemed as a citizen.

WILLIAM PUTNAM, R. R. and express agent and real estate dealer, Union City, whose portrait appears in this work as one of the representative men of Union City, is a descendant of John Putnam, a native of Buckinghamshire, England, born in 1582, who, in 1634, emigrated to America and settled in Salem, Mass., where he died in 1662. The grandfather of our subject, Ezra Putnam, a son of Holyhel, was born in Sutton, Mass., on the 6th of Nov., 1751. He moved to Bethel, Vt., in 1787, and there died in 1842. His son, and father of our subject, was Wm. W. Putnam, a native of Bethel, Vt., born Aug. 3, 1796, and died May 13, 1848. In 1818, he married Philana Buck, a native of Williamstown, Vt., born in 1799. She is the mother of 10 children, of whom 6 are now living. She resides now in Iowa. William Putnam, our subject, was born in Bethel, Vt., on the 13th of May, 1822. In 1834, he came with his parents to Erie County, N. Y., and March, 1839, to Union Township, Erie Co., Penn. His early life was spent at home assisting to till the soil of the home farm, learning the carpenter's trade, and receiving a limited common school education. When he was twenty-two years of age, he left his home and embarked upon his career in life, working at his trade. He continued the same until 1859, and became an efficient workman. For some time previous to abandoning his trade, he began investing and dealing in real estate, at which he still continues. In 1857, he was elected County Commissioner, and served 3 years. When he was twenty-seven years of age, he was elected Justice of the Peace; he served one year and resigned. In 1859, when the Pennsylvania R. R. was completed as far as Union, Mr. Putnam was appointed agent of the company, and has since held the position, with the confidence and esteem of the company, and to the general satisfaction of the people. He is also agent of the Adams Express Company, and of the B., N. Y. & P. R. R. since 1876. In connection with the duties of the railroad and real estate business, he has, since 1868, been carrying on a general lime and coal business at Union City, and besides is extensively engaged in farming, having a fine farm of 100 acres, well stocked, etc. On the 13th of Nov., 1845, he was married to Miss Nancy C., daughter of Dr. Alanson C. Burroughs. Dr. Burroughs was a native of Alsted, N. H., came to this county in 1843, and carried on a large and lucrative medical practice to the time of his death, which occurred July 10, 1846. Mrs. Putnam is a native of Windham, Vt., born May 17, 1823. Mr. Putnam is one of the self-made men of Erie Co. Beginning life a poor boy, with a meager education, he has, through perseverance, honesty, industry and economy, succeeded in accumulating a good property, and a worthy name and reputation. He has served the people and county in many of its offices, and is often solicited to become a candidate to the higher State offices. Politically, he is a Republican, having been so since the organization of the party, and is always active in its management.

States respectively, and both descended from the early pilgrims that settled near Eagle Valley, Center Co., Penn. Jacob came to this county in 1820, bringing his widowed mother and 2 unmarried sisters, and settled in Union Township. His children now living are Wilson, Palmer, McArthur, Lorenzo, Rhoda, Amy, Mary A. Jacob entered 160 acres of land, and lived to be ninety-two years old. Our subject, who has always lived on the homestead, was married in 1842 to Louisa J., daughter of Absalom and Mary Harris, and a native of Erie County. Seven children blessed this union, 4 now living—Mary A., wife of W. Johnson, of Crawford Co.; Edgar, married to Mrs. La Varne; Royal D., married to Louise Johnson, of Crawford Co.; and Addie L., residing at home. Mr. Shepard has cleared his farm, which was wooded when he settled on it, and passed through the privations incident to a pioneer's life. Though advanced in years, he is strong and vigorous. The family are well and favorably known, and are respected members of the Baptist Church.

A. C. SHERWOOD, physician, Union City, is the eldest child of Frederick W. and Evaline (Trow) Sherwood, the former a native of Erie Co., Penn., and the latter of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Dr. Sherwood acquired his primary education at the district schools; then entered the Edinboro Normal School, and soon after read medicine with Dr. H. R. Terry, of this city. Four years later, he entered the University of Penn., where he graduated in the class of 1873. Forming a partnership with his preceptor, he began to practice his profession in this city. This relationship dissolved two years later, and the Doctor has since been practicing alone. Prior to graduation, he was appointed Physician of the County, which position he has continuously filled. He has been surgeon for the P. & E. R. R. during his residence in this city, and is one of the most active and successful physicians in the county. Dr. Sherwood was married at Meadville, Penn., in 1876, to Emma, daughter of Andrew Jackson, of that county. Three children born to this union are all living—Daisy M., Andrew J. and Belle E. The family are connected with the Presbyterian Church. The Doctor is an honored member of the I. O. O. F., K. of H. and Royal Arcanum.

THOMAS B. SHREVE, produce dealer, is a grandson of Richard and Margaret (Newbold) Shreve, the former born Sept. 22, 1760, at Burlington, N. J.; had charge of the Washington Mills, Fayette Co.; he, with family, in 1798, settled near the head of Oil Creek Lake, this county. To them were born—William, Brazillar, Thomas, Nancy, Israel, Charlotte, Richard 2d, Caleb, Benjamin, Charles, Isaac, Sarah and Margaret. Mr. Shreve was Captain of the militia, and served as Justice of the Peace. He died Sept. 12, 1822, aged sixty-two years; his widow on Oct. 9, 1852, aged eighty-six years. They were both descended from the English nobility. Israel, the father of our subject, was born in 1794, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Bloomfield, a Revolutionary soldier, and who in 1798 was a pioneer companion of Richard Shreve. Israel reared a family of 8 children, 7 now living, viz., Caleb, Cyrus, Thomas, Darius, Caroline, Elizabeth and Margaret. Israel died in 1866, his wife aged eighty-three, in 1880. Our subject was born at Bloomfield, Crawford Co., Penn., in 1831, remaining on the homestead until the death of his father, when he came to Union City and engaged in mercantile trade. He subsequently went into real estate business, in which he has been very successful. He married, in Crawford Co., in 1857, Mary Richards, born in Mass., daughter of Squire Richards, a prominent man of that county. Mr. Shreve has filled various offices of trust, and is one of Union City's solid business men.

JOSIAH SHREVE, farmer and stock-dealer, P. O. Union City, was born on the homestead farm, in Union Township, Erie Co., Penn., Dec. 22, 1822, son of Richard and Margaret Shreve. He was married in Union City, Jan. 6, 1848, to Belle, daughter of Thomas Carroll, of LeBoeuf Township, where she was born Oct. 18, 1824. This union has been blessed with 3 children—Sidna A., wife of J. P. Wilkins; Almida E., wife of O. B. Sherwood, and Geo. R., deceased. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Shreve settled on their present farm, then a wilderness, which comprises 80 acres. For some years he ran a dairy, but now deals principally in stock, making sheep a specialty. He is an officer, and was the President for 2 years of the Central Agricultural Society; is a Director of the Farmers' Co-operative Trust Co. Mr. Shreve is descended from one of the most extensive pioneer families of Erie Co. For the last 25 years, he has been Steward in the M. E. Church.

MILTON SHREVE, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Union Township, on the homestead farm, in 1831. He is the youngest living son of Richard Shreve, who was born in 1796, and married Margaret, daughter of Peter Kepler, whose wife is said to have cooked the first meal in Wattsburg. Richard, was a son of Richard and Margaret (Newbold) Shreve. Richard 2d, and a brother-in-law, Jacob Kepler, entered 400 acres of an unbroken wilderness, which land is now occupied, all but 100 acres, by his descendants, who number among the best families of Union Township, Erie Co. Richard, the father of our subject, reared 11 children, 5 sons and 5 daughters now living—Josiah, James, John K., Solomon, Milton, Eliza, Emily, Matilda, Mary J. and Melissa. Mr. Shreve died in 1872, aged 76; his widow lived to attain 81 years. Our subject, Milton, married in Corry, Penn., April, 1869, Christine Cross, a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. The children born to this union are all living—Florence M., Ralph P. and Clyde M. The family are members of the Baptist Church.

G. GARY SMITH, grocer, Union City, was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1837; son of Alpheus and Cynthia (Osborn) Smith, natives of Oneida and Herkimer Cos., N. Y., respectively, and who came to this county in 1847, settling on a farm in Union Township, where Mr. Smith died in 1857. His widow still survives and is in her 73d year. They were the parents of 3 sons and 1 daughter, all now living—Gerrett G., Hawley G., Ellen A., wife of G. Hoyt, of Ashtabula, Ohio, and G. G. Smith. Our subject was reared on the farm; in 1864, was employed as a salesman in this city. In this capacity, he served 8 years at Erie and Philadelphia. In 1876, he established himself in his present business which he has conducted successfully. He carries a stock valued at $4,000, and has a good trade. G. G. Smith married in 1857, in this county, Nancy A. Stewart, a native of same; 4 children have been born to this union, 3 living—George A., Charles G. and Lena E. Mr. Smith filled the office of Burgess of Union City 4 successive terms, a longer period than any Mayor preceding him. He is now serving his first term as member of the Council. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and I. O. O. F., and one of the active merchants of Union City.

GERRETT G. SMITH, of Smith & Warden, produce dealers, Union City, was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1838, and is a son of Alpheus and Cynthia (Osborn) Smith, natives of Oneida and Herkimer Cos. N. Y., respectively, and who settled in this county in 1846. Our subject, reared on a farm, followed farming until 1865, when he embarked in mercantile trade in this city. In 1879, the firm of Smith & Warden was formed, and the business carried on in a warehouse on the Atlantic and P. & E. roads. Their present establishment, 20x100 feet, is situated on Crooked street; 60 feet will shortly be added to its length. The firm do a large trade in hay, straw, wool, butter and all kinds of produce. Mr. Smith was married in this county in 1858, to Maria Sherwood, a native of this county. Our subject served one term as Burgess of this city, and is an active business man; is now Jury Commissioner.

HAWLEY G. SMITH, grocer, Union City, is a son of Alpheus and Cynthia (Osborn) Smith, natives of Oneida and Herkimer Cos., N. Y., respectively, and was born in the former county in 1840. At the age of seven, he came with his parents to this county, where he was reared on a farm. In 1863, Hawley entered the naval service, serving before the mast. He rose to the command of the merchant vessel "Highland Chief." He followed the sea 8 years, visiting various foreign countries. In 1871, he returned to this county, and opened a glass and crockery establishment in 1871, which he disposed of the following year. He then was engaged as salesman for houses in Erie, N. Y. and Penn. In 1881, he opened his present place of business. Mr. Smith was married in this county in 1875 to Roxanna Green, of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Our subject is a member of the M. E. Church. He is a mason, having taken all the degrees in a Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, an I. O. O. F., Encampment, subordinate, and a Knight of Honor, and a Royal Templar, in all of which orders he is in good standing. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for 12 years.

J. W. SPROUL, attorney, Union City, was born in Summerhill Township, Crawford Co., Penn., in 1849, son of John and Jane (Woods) Sproul, both of Scotch-Irish descent. John Sproul entered land, and was a distinguished pioneer of Crawford Co., where he resided till the close of life. His widow, now in her seventieth year, resides on the homestead. Five of their children are living—Catherine, William, Mary, Jennie and J. W. Our subject acquired his education in the State Normal School at Edinboro, Erie Co., and his mercantile knowledge with Bryant & Stratton, Meadville. He then, for a year, engaged in teaching school. He entered the Allegheny College at Meadville, Penn., in 1870, and the following year read law with H. L. Richmond & Son, of Meadville. Nov., 1873, he was admitted to the bar, and the same year began practicing his profession in that city. In 1874, he settled in Union City, Penn., where he has since been practicing. He has twice been a delegate to the Republican State Convention, and is at present serving as City Attorney. Mr. Sproul was united in marriage in 1874, in this county, with Ida, daughter of Ezra Cooper, of this city. They are both members of the M. E. Church.

PERRY G. STRANAHAN, farmer and stock-raiser, Union City, is a grandson of John Stranahan, a native of Scituate, R. I., born in 1737, and died March 23, 1798. In Sept., 1763, previous to the Revolution, he married Lucy Buck and settled in Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y. He was a man of intelligence and wealth, and lived to see his numerous family settled and prosperous. Gibson J. Stranahan, the father of our subject, was born in Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1786. He married Miss Dolly Devendorf, of Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1807. He was a resident of Herkimer Co. for many years, and there followed the occupation of a farmer. In 1836, he, with his family, came West, and settled in what is now Concord Township, Erie Co., Penn. He entered a large tract of land, and imported 450 fine-wool sheep. He became one of the largest stock-raisers of Erie Co. He died in 1869. His wife was born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., and died at the residence of our subject in 1862 or 1863, aged seventy-three years. She was a daughter of John Devendorf, a native of Herkimer Co., N. Y., where he was born May 28, 1764, and died March 4, 1813. He was one of the wealthiest farmers in his county. The parents of our subject had the following children: Daniel V., a prominent physician, who died in Warren, Penn., in 1874; Hon. John D., a farmer; James, a farmer; Perry G.; Franklin B., a farmer; and Margaret E., wife of William A. Mead, a surveyor and farmer of Youngsville, Penn. Perry G. Stranahan, the subject of this sketch, whose portrait appears elsewhere in this volume, was born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., on the 12th of July, 1820. He devoted his early life to work on the farm and in teaching school, winters. In 1843, he was married to Miss Louisa, only daughter of P. K. Webber, of Columbus, Warren Co., Penn., who was one of the earliest pioneers of that place, and cut away the pines where the village now stands. He and his estimable wife, Annie, reside with Mr. Stranahan, and have reached the respective ages of eighty-one and seventy-nine years. Mr. Stranahan studied law with Horace Hawes, of Erie, who was afterward appointed U. S. Consul to the Society Islands. On account of failing health, Mr. Stranahan was compelled to abandon the law. He then came to Le Bœuf, bought a farm on French Creek, built and kept the Moravian Hotel for a number of years. In 1859, when the P. & E. and A. & G. W. Railways were being built, Mr. Stranahan saw the opportunity for advancement and purchased nearly all of the old Miles estate, consisting of several hundred acres of land, upon which a large part of the borough of Union City is now built. He immediately laid it out in village lots, established a real estate agency, and in connection with farming and stock-raising amassed considerable means, and became one of the enterprising and solid men of Union City. He was always foremost in any enterprise which promised the advancement of Union City. He was liberal with his means, and assisted the worthy in building up industries of the place. He lost large sums of money in the stove and barrel works of Union City, and as one of the projectors of the Union & Titusville Railroad he lost thousands of dollars. His name was a tower of financial strength, but the great losses sustained in these calamities almost overwhelmed him. In 1871, he, with others, started the Casement Savings Bank, which did a successful business until 1778, when it succumbed to the general depression of business. A large credit had been loaned the bank, and the obligations could not be met. It may be said to the credit of Mr. Stranahan that he turned over his individual property, and the bank matters were honorably and satisfactorily settled, and without a law suit. He was the only man in the community that helped in the erection of the A. & G. W. Ry.; and with this corporation he has been largely and prominently identified. Mr. Stranahan has held town and county offices, and is now in the autumn years of his life, and occupies his time in farming and stock-raising, his attention being mostly directed to Percheron horse-breeding, in which he has been very successful. In his intercourse he is pleasing, benevolent and cheerful, and inflects the philanthropy which is an innate characteristic of the man. He is happiest when doing good, and always has the interest of the city and locality at heart. He makes friends without attempting so to do; is bold and outspoken in his likes and dislikes, and never has a malicious feeling toward an enemy. A self-made man, he has earned the fruitage of his years by his own industry and perseverance; his integrity has never been impeached. He has been blessed with children, viz., Sarah M., wife of L. S. Clough, a large lumber dealer; Ellen, wife of E. G. Stranahan, of Cleveland, Ohio; Maggie L., wife of A. F. Bole, a prominent lawyer of Corry, Penn.; Belle L., youngest daughter; and William P., book-keeper, an adopted son, though as dear to Mr. and Mrs. Stranahan as their own children, as he has lived with them since he was a child, and has thus unconsciously, by his uprightness, made himself as one of their own children.

A. H. SUMMERTON, deceased, was born Oct. 28, 1815, in N. Y., and married, Aug. 25, 1840, to Amanda M. French, of Warren, Penn., by whom he had 1 son, Thomas, who died at the age of 3 years, and 1 daughter, Ellen, wife of Wm. Blanchard, of Union City, Penn., and mother of 4 children—Eva Belle, Gertrude, Charlie and Lottie, the first 2 of whom are dead. They adopted James H., now a resident of Tex. Mrs. Summerton died May 11, 1857. Mr. Summerton came from Ithaca, N. Y.; was one of the pioneer merchants, and built the first store in Warren, Penn. In 1853, he came to Union City, bringing a stock of goods, and opened in mercantile trade; also did a prosperous milling business. Mr. Summerton purchased and laid out in lots the tract on the southern boundaries of this city, called Brooklyn, now the most populous and wealthy portion of the Union. He was ever ready to assist public and private enterprises conducive to the public good; gave largely toward advancing church and educational interests. He donated the lot on which the Catholic Church is built. Mr. Summerton married, for his second wife, Amanda M., daughter of James and Rhoda Brooks, pioneers of Chautauqua Co., who settled here in 1855; had a family of 11 children, and died at a ripe old age. Mr. and Mrs. Summerton adopted 1 daughter, Jennie B., who still resides with Mrs. Summerton in this city. By Mr. Summerton's death, Sept. 14, 1864, Union lost an estimable citizen and a public benefactor.

A. C. TAYLOR, farmer, P. O. Union City, was born in Cuba, Allegany Co., N. Y., in 1834, son of Chauncy and Rachael Taylor, both natives of Mass. Chauncy died in March, 1883, aged eighty-two years. Our subject went from his native county to the oil regions, and sunk the first well at Rixford, McKean Co., Penn., also at Tarport and Sawyer. Two years later he disposed of his interest and purchased his present farm of 80 acres, where he has since made his home. Though comparatively a stranger, he has a neat, well-kept farm, and shows an active enterprising spirit. He was married, in his native county, in 1855, to Mary Dewey, who was born in Allegany Co., N. Y., and died leaving 3 children, viz., Willis A., Henry B. and Fred A. Mr. Taylor then married Lena Hibner, a native of Cuba, N. Y., Sept., 1873. He has filled various township offices, and the family attend the M. E. Church.

ANDREW THOMPSON, farmer, P. O. Union City, is a grandson of Andrew and Martha Thompson, who were among the pioneers of 1778 to Union Township. Andrew purchased 200 acres of the Holland Land Co., which has remained a homestead to his descendants. He engaged in milling, and died in 1823. John, the father of our subject, was reared on the farm, and married Sarah Braeken, of Washington Co., Penn. The children now living born to this union are William, Andrew and James. Andrew was born on the homestead in 1813, and married, in 1833, Sarah Smith, who died in 1843, leaving 3 children—Lovina, wife of Levi Proctor; James S.; and Jane S., wife of T. Watson. He then married Sarah Berry, of this county, who died in 1857. Three children born to this union survive, viz.: Louis B.; Emma A., wife of C. M. Terrell; and William B. Mr. Thompson's 3d marriage was with Lydia Boyce, of Washington Co., N. Y., by whom he has had 2 children—Lucretia, wife of Edward Wise, and Charles J. Mr. Thompson served as Assessor and Collector many years, also as Justice of the Peace. He is a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church—a member of the session. The family are among the old and esteemed pioneers.

JOHN W. THOMPSON, farmer, P. O. Drake's Mills, Crawford Co., was born in Union Township Nov. 9, 1826, son of Joel and Mary (Mulvin) Thompson, and grandson of Abel Thompson, who settled in Union Township in 1797, locating on the farm now owned by Andrew Agnew, which he cleared and improved. He came from Fayette Co., Penn., though a native of N. J., of English descent. Mary Mulvin, wife of Joel, was a daughter of Wm. Mulvin, an early settler of Le Boeuf Township, and a native of Ireland. Joel was thrice married; his first wife was Margaret Smith, by whom he had 1 child, Nancy, now Mrs. Daniel Bunting. His second wife was Mary Mulvin, by whom he had 8 children—William, Margaret (deceased), Samuel, Jane J. (wife of David Coe), Caleb (deceased), John W., Lucilla (deceased, wife of Thomas J. Wilson) and Charles (died of diarrhoea contracted in the army); and his third wife was Elizabeth Wilson, who now survives him. Joel died Aug. 21, 1868, at the age of eighty-four, and his wife Mary, mother of our subject, died Dec., 1868, at the age of sixty-six. The subject of this sketch was married, Dec. 25, 1855, to Mary J., daughter of Job and Mary (Annis) Tobey, by whom he has had 8 children—Dudley (deceased), Mary (wife of Orson P. Scott), Frederick, Abraham L., Gertrude N., Samuel G., William (deceased) and Cassius. Mr. Thompson was raised on a farm, and has always followed that occupation. He located in Venango Township, Crawford Co., Penn., in 1871, where he has since resided. He was drafted during the war of the rebellion, and went out in Co. F, 163d Penn. Regt., and after 8 months' service was honorably discharged on account of disability. In politics, Mr. Thompson is a staunch Republican. Both he and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

J. S. THOMPSON, druggist, Union City, is a native of Union Township, born on the homestead of his ancestors in 1838, son of Andrew and Sarah (Smith) Thompson. He comes of a pioneer family; his great-grandfather, Andrew Thompson, was of Scotch-Irish extraction, but the time he located in the colonies is not known. Our subject was reared on a farm, remaining until twenty-four years of age, when he engaged as a salesman in the hardware trade. In 1869, the firm of Thompson & Wilkins was formed in the drug trade, continuing until 1871, when Mr. Thompson purchased Wilkins' interest, since which he has conducted the business alone. This is the oldest drug house in the city, and has a large, well-established trade. Mr. Thompson carries a complete stock of drugs, stationery, toilet articles, etc. Our subject married, May, 1864, Josephine, daughter of John R. Smith, of this county, and a member of a pioneer family of Wattsburg. Two children have blessed this union, viz., Harley S. and J. Herbert. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Presbyterian Church; also of the I. O. O. F. and K. of H. He is an active business man, and has a well-established reputation.

THERESIA WAGER, proprietress of Union City Brewery, which establishment is managed by John and Michael, sons of Protasius and our subject, all natives of Germany.

The family came to America in 1865, locating in Steuben Co., N. Y., and came to this county soon after. Mr. Wager purchased a brewery in Corry, which he operated 2 years; then farmed in Tiffin, Ohio, until 1872. Returning to this county, he erected a small brewery on the site of the present building, which he conducted until his death in 1875. His sons rebuilt the edifice in 1881. The main building is 27x50, with ice-house attached 30x30, and 16 feet high, of frame and brick. The bottling house is 16x24. The brewery is run by steam, has all the modern improvements, and has a capacity of over 500 barrels. Their business exceeding this amount last year, they were taxed $100 more. It is built on one of the most beautiful locations in the vicinity, and has a spring of water from which they use 15 or 20 barrels per day. John, the oldest son, born in Wittenberg, Germany, May 26, 1847, married in 1876 Caroline Stiefel, a native of same place. Their children now living are Amelia, Louis, Julius, John and Charles. His brothers and sisters are Josephine, Cornelia, Francis, Gebhardt, Michael, Hubert and Emphemia.

WILLIAM WARDEEN, of Smith & Warden, produce dealers, Union City, is a native of Ashtabula Co., Ohio, born April, 1839, a son of Jonathan and Mary (Lovell) Warden, natives of England, who emigrated to this country in 1832, and were pioneers of this county. Jonathan was a wagon-maker by trade, but farmed after coming to Crawford, Penn. He settled in this township in 1855, lived on a farm 2 years and then moved to Union City, where he died in 1864. Six of the 9 children born to this union are now living, viz., Jonathan, Elizabeth, Joseph, Thomas, Amelia and William. Our subject was reared on the homestead until seventeen years of age, when he entered the store of Woods & Johnson as a salesman. In 1862, he secured a position in the office of the Atlantic R. R. Co., upon the opening of that line. After 2 years he returned to his former position, and in 1865 was admitted a partner under the firm name of Woods, Johnson & Co., which ran 2 years, when Woods & Johnson sold out to C. W. Dabney; then it was Dabney & Warden 2 years, when J. F. Laubender was admitted to the firm and then was Dabney, Warden & Laubender till Jan. 17, 1879, when Warden sold out; then in Sept., 1879, the firm of Smith & Warden was formed. Mr. Warden married in this county, in 1876, Ellen M. Gibbs, a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. In 1878, he was elected to fill an unexpired term in the City Council, and was re-elected in 1880, and again in 1883, and he is still serving. Mr. Warden was also Assessor 3 years, then re-elected in 1882. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and is one of the active, enterprising merchants of this community.

DAVID WILSON, farmer, P. O. Union City, one of Erie Co.'s oldest native residents, was born on the homestead in Union Township March 30, 1812, a son of Hugh Wilson, who was born Oct. 16, 1773, at Gray Abbey, Co. Down, Ireland, landing at Wilmington, Del., in 1792. Two years later he joined Gen. Washington on his way to quell the whisky rebellion at Pittsburgh. He was married to Hannah Frampton, born July 22, 1774, at Kishacoquillas, Mifflin Co., Penn. Mr. Wilson settled in Erie Co., legally acquiring 200 acres from the Holland Land Co., and 400 acres of State lands. In 1798, he brought his wife 200 miles through the wilderness to her new home in Union Township. She was the mother of the first white child born in this township. They were the parents of 9 children, three now living—Nathaniel, married to Catherine Wethington, residing in Madison Co., Ohio; David; and Rachel, wife of John Smiley, this county. Mrs. Wilson died Feb., 1852, aged seventy-eight. Soon after locating here, Mr. Wilson was commissioned Justice of the Peace of the entire southeastern portions of Erie Co. He resigned in 1817. He helped to protect the building of Perry's fleet at Erie in 1813. He joined the Presbyterian Church under Amos Chase in 1820. Mr. Wilson was a well-read man, and died in the summer of 1851. Our subject, reared in the wilderness, with no advantages of education, began to study surveying. In 1838, he obtained a practical knowledge of his profession as axman with the surveyors of the P. & E. R. R. He was employed subsequently by the Holland Land Co., surveying in this county. By teaching through the winters, he earned enough to pay for his present farm, at $2.50 an acre, which he cleared and on which he has lived since 1839. Nov. 21, 1839, he married Eliza Jane Thompson, born at St. Charles, Mo., Feb. 23, 1821. Their children are Hugh, married to Rosabel Cross; Sarah, wife of J. N. Smith; Hannah, wife of B. F. Holden, and Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were members of the Presbyterian Church, in which the former has been Elder since 1854. Mrs. Wilson died March 18, 1876. Mr. Wilson surveyed and built plank roads through Erie and Crawford Cos.; was also assistant engineer in constructing the Erie & Waterford road. In 1850, he was elected and served for three years as County Surveyor. He surveyed and laid out the Evergreen Cemetery, near Union City. His health failing, he retired in the summer of 1865, and his sons now possess his instruments and follow his profession. Mr. Wilson has held various offices of trust, and for upward of twenty years has been Auditor and Justice of the Peace of Union Township.

VENANGO TOWNSHIP.

DANIEL B. ALLEN, druggist, Wattsburg, was born Jan. 6, 1830, in Delaware Co., N. Y. His parents, John and Phebe Allen, were natives of same county. In 1848, they moved with their family to Erie Co., Penn., locating on a farm. John Allen departed this life April 24, 1872. His widow resides in Amity Township. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, attending home schools, the Academy at New Berlin, N. Y., and in Waterford, Erie Co. He taught, during the winter terms, for about 15 years in this county. In 1868, he established his present business, and is running the only drug store in Wattsburg. In addition to drugs, medicines and toilet articles, he keeps a full line of books, stationery and notions. He was united in marriage, April 20, 1875, with Julia Buell, of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. They have 2 children living—Clarence and Arthur. Mr. Allen is an influential, public-spirited citizen of this community.

WILLIAM ALLISON, farmer, P. O. West Greene, was born Jan. 18, 1808, on his present farm, and is a son of William and Nancy (Gilchrist) Allison, who entered land about 1797, which has always been in the family name. Children's names—James, deceased; Mrs. Sidney Gifford, deceased; Robert G., deceased; Mrs. Margaret Van Curon, deceased; John, deceased; Mrs. Eleanor Sturgeon, William, Mary Ann and Elizabeth. Mr. Allison died Nov. 5, 1825, Mrs. Allison March 27, 1846. Our subject was married, Sept. 24, 1835, to Harriet H., daughter of John and Rachel (White) Carson, both now deceased. John Carson came from Lancaster Co., Penn., in 1797, and moved his family in 1801 or 1802. A copper tea-kettle carried by Mrs. Carson on the horn of her saddle is still preserved in the family. He came from Scotland when six years of age. His father came to America some years after, and settled in Perry Co., but died in Erie Co. at the age of ninety-seven. Both are deceased. Our subject, with wife, settled on the old homestead. Of their 6 children, 3 are living—Mrs. Amelia A. Gifford, Mrs. Rachel R. Gifford and James W. Mr. and Mrs. Allison are now enjoying the quiet of a peaceful old age, and are upright, Christian pioneer people, respected by all.

WILLIAM B. APPLEBEE, farmer, P. O. Lake Pleasant, was born April 12, 1834. His father, a native of N. J., came to Erie Co. about 1827, and was married to Mary D. Peck, of Harbor Creek. They came to Venango Township about 1828. Here they cleared a farm and reared 6 children—Mrs. Elsie Bradish, of Michigan; Mrs. Rosetta Austin, of Kan.; Mrs. Nancy Johnson, deceased; William B.; John, in Erie; and Julius, in Amity Township. Mr. Applebee was an honest pioneer citizen; he departed this life April 18, 1873. His widow, aged eighty-eight, is residing with our subject. William B. was reared on his father's farm, and attended the district schools. He was united in marriage, Feb. 24, 1857, with Melissa Edwards, a native of Wayne Co., N. Y. Five children have been born to this union—Mrs. Ella Bradish, living at Fairfield, Mich.; Elsie, living at home; Mrs. Ida Curtis, living at Lake Pleasant, Penn.; Alice and Charles, living at home. Our subject and wife are living on the old homestead, and are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

REV. E. H. BALDWIN, minister and farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born Jan. 24, 1826, in Washington Co., N. Y., and is a son of Ebenezer and Thirza (Murray) Baldwin, natives of Mass. and N. Y. respectively. In 1836, they moved to Amity Township, this county, where they both died—Mr. Baldwin in Oct., 1839, and Mrs. Baldwin April 4, 1864. Five of their 10 children still survive, viz.: Washington, Hiram and David, of Amity Township; Mrs. Elizabeth Lawrence, of Elk Creek Township, and Ebenezer Hibbard. Our subject was united in marriage, Feb. 12, 1862, with Clarissa A. Platt, who bore him 5 children, viz.: Cheney L.; Thirza M., married to Charles M. Freligh, and died June 21, 1883; Attie May; Ivy M.; and Archie R. Mrs. Baldwin died March 15, 1879. She was a true wife, a kind and faithful mother, and was respected by all who knew her. Mr. Baldwin joined the Free-Will Baptist Church in 1861, and was ordained minister June 1, 1873. He is a conscientious and thorough worker, and has done much good in the church. He has a farm of 100 acres, and has been very successful as a farmer. He is a Republican in politics. Mr. Baldwin is a reliable, influential citizen in this township.

J. V. BALDWIN, manufacturer, Wattsburg, was born Nov. 24, 1836, in Washington Co., N. Y. His parents, H. W. and S. E. Baldwin, reside in Amity Township, this county, where they moved in 1837. Our subject was brought up on the farm, receiving his education in the home schools and at the Waterford Academy. March 6, 1865, he enlisted in the 102d Penn. Reg. He offered himself previously, and was twice refused. He served in the Army of the Potomac, receiving his discharge June 28, 1865. Mr. Baldwin was united in marriage, Nov. 28, 1865, with Phebe Nichols, of Waterford. They are the parents of 3 children—Kitty, Joseph and Ward. They are giving their children good advantages. After his marriage, for 2 years he was a contractor in Union City, Erie Co. He then formed a partnership with George Cowden, for the manufacture of shingles. In 1871, he established the manufactory of what is known as the "D" handles, for shovels, forks, scoops, etc., in partnership with Joseph Deamer, whose interest he bought out in 1879. He has since carried on the business alone, and has the reputation of making a first-class article, and has a large trade, extending from the New England States to St. Louis. He sent the first order that went west of the Mississippi River. Mr. Baldwin is a Democrat in politics, and is one of the influential business men of his township.

SETH M. BALDWIN, manufacturer, Wattsburg, was born February 11, 1856, in Amity Township, Erie Co., where his parents still reside, and where he was brought up, receiving his education in the district schools. When nineteen years of age, he engaged with his brother, J. V. Baldwin, in the handle factory at Wattsburg. He was united in marriage, Jan. 1, 1878, with Sophronia, daughter of Samuel Hayes, of Amity Township. Three children have been born to this union, viz., Earl, Ross and Bret. They have a neat little home on the corner of Main and Jamestown Sts. Dec., 1879, Mr. Baldwin engaged in partnership with Messrs. Gross & Patterson, establishing a shingle and handle factory in the town. Nov. 1, 1883, Mr. Baldwin, in partnership with his brother, R. W. Baldwin, purchased the interest of Gross & Patterson in said factory, and is now doing business under the firm name of Baldwin Brothers. They have a first-class establishment, and are making pine and hemlock shingles, broom and fork handles, rake teeth and lath. They have a large trade, extending into the surrounding States, but they ship mostly to Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Mr. Baldwin is a Republican in politics, a member of the E. A. U. He is a business man of energy and perseverance, and an upright, reliable citizen.

JOSHUA BANNISTER, Sr., farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born July 18, 1820, in Derby, England, where he learned and worked at the trade of pattern maker in iron mills. He married May, 1843, Mary Smithard. They came to America in 1847, stopping a few months at Brooklyn, N. Y., and at Pittsburgh, Penn. They finally located in Erie, where Mr. Bannister worked at his trade several years. In 1855, they purchased a farm of 145 acres in this township, where they now reside; 5 children have been born to this union—Hugh G., Mrs. Elizabeth M. Brace, Mrs. Emma J. Barney, William J. and Joshua J. Mr. Bannister, on March, 27, 1881, lost the use of his left side by a stroke of paralysis. He is an upright citizen, who has the respect of the community. He is a Republican in politics.

HUGH G. BANNISTER, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born Nov. 27, 1846, in Bolton, England, and when five months old was brought to America by his parents, Joshua and Mary (Smithard) Bannister. He was reared principally in Erie; then came with parents to their farm in this township, where he remained until his marriage, April 9, 1872, with Annie Pilley, of Greene Township. They have 2 daughters—Frances E. and Sarah A. Mr. Bannister purchased 45 acres, where he has lived since 1876; is an enterprising, industrious young farmer; politically, is a Republican.

SUMNER BEMIS, farmer, P. O. Six Mile Creek, was born March 20, 1823, in Chenango Co., N. Y., a son of Jotham and Fannie (Billings) Bemis, natives of Mass., and Chenango Co., N. Y., respectively. The children born to this union were—Henry, who dying, left a son, Charles G., and Mrs. Lydia A. Hinton, of Lowville. Mrs. Bemis died in the spring of 1828, and subsequently Mr. Bemis married Martha Kingsley. In 1837, they located in the northwestern part of this township, and cleared a farm, but, in 1853, they moved West, remaining in Iowa 4 and in Kan. 20 years, finally settling in Richardson Co., Neb., where the family still reside, and where Mr. Bemis died in 1881. Our subject was reared on a farm and attended the limited schools. He was united in marriage, June 29, 1848, with Eleanor, a daughter of Griffith Hinton, a native of Wales, whose parents, with a large family, located in Erie Co. in the year 1800. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died at his daughter's house, March 15, 1881, aged ninety-six. Mr. and Mrs. Bemis settled on the homestead, taken up by the former's father, which has never been out of the family, where they expect to pass the remainder of their days. They have 200 acres under good cultivation. The children born to this union are Fannie, who died Feb. 13, 1870, in her 20th year; Seth, married to Lida Fritts; Sumner, Jr., Ella, Elmer E., Henry and Geary. Mrs. Bemis is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Bemis was School Director 12 years, and has held various township offices, and supports all public-spirited enterprises, and has been a life-long Republican.

Y., and came with his father, Jotham Bemis, to this township about the year 1840. Here he was married, Nov. 20, 1845, to Rachel, a daughter of Griffith Hinton, born April 4, 1819. They were the parents of 3 children—Charles G. died in childhood; Rachel Ann died in childhood, and Charles G., our subject. Mrs. Bemis, departed this life Jan. 8, 1859, and Mr. Bemis July 9, 1863. Our subject was reared on his father's farm, and attended the district schools. He was united in marriage, April 30, 1873, with Emma Henderson, who departed this life May 8, 1880. Mr. Bemis subsequently married her sister, Ella Henderson, Nov.

29, 1881, by whom he has 1 son—Glenn Henry. Mr. Bemis now lives on his father's old homestead. He is a Republican in politics.

COL. JOHN H. BENNETT, farmer and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Wattsburg, was born July 8, 1808, in Delaware Co., N. Y., and is a son of John and Betsey (Harley) Bennett, natives of Conn., who came to Erie Co. in 1829, and settled where our subject now lives. They passed long and useful lives, and died, Mr. Bennett Dec. 28, 1851, in his seventy-eighth year, and Mrs. Bennett in 1864, aged over eighty-three years. Our subject came to Erie in 1828, a year before the family, and was one of the early settlers of this township. He located on a farm, and in 1829, he and his father purchased the saw mill of Nimes & Ball, located on the East Branch of French Creek. He was united in marriage in Jan., 1833, with Mary Etta Foote. Of their family of 7, 2 children are now living—Victor H. and John. Mrs. Bennett departed this life April, 1851. Our subject has been industrious and successful, and has acquired a farm of 417 acres of finely-improved land, situated on French Creek, within 1 mile of Wattsburg. Besides this property, he owns a first-class saw mill and cider mill, run by steam. He manufactures lumber, shingles, etc. The Colonel is a Democrat in politics, and has served as Commissioner of Venango Township. He is the oldest pioneer resident, and is regarded by the whole community as a useful and influential citizen.

VICTOR H. BENNETT, farmer, P. O. Wattsburg, was born Feb. 15, 1843, in Venango Township. He was reared on the farm of his father, Col. John H. Bennett (see sketch), and was educated in the township schools and in the select schools of Wattsburg. He then assisted his father in the saw mill. He was united in marriage, Oct. 15, 1867, with Mariett Bingham, a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y., but resident of North East Township, this county. Her father, Jonathan Bingham, was also a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y., but is now a resident of Vineland, N. J.; her mother died at North East, Penn., in 1872; 4 children have been born to this union—Lucia M., Nellie (deceased), John H. F. and Minetta A. They moved to their present farm, consisting of 100 acres, adjoining the borough of Wattsburg. It was one of the first settled farms in the township, once owned by the well-known pioneer, Nathan Jones. Mr. Bennett has made valuable improvements, almost entirely cleared it of stumps, and there is no farm in the township under better cultivation. Besides this farm he owns 26 acres of land near Lowville. He is a Democrat in politics; has served as School Director of Venango Township 3 years; is a member of the K. of H., Lodge No. 539 Wattsburg. Our subject has given his children good educational advantages. He is much interested in geology and archaeology, and possesses many interesting relics. In 1878, he was employed as a State detective, and was very successful in his 3 years' engagement. He is a worthy representative of one of the oldest families in the county.

DANIEL D. T. BENNETT, M. D., Wattsburg, was born April 28, 1810, in Harpersfield, Delaware Co., N. Y., and is a son of John and Betsey Bennett. He received his education in the schools of his native county, and in Aug., 1829, moved with his father's family to Erie Co., Penn. In Oct., 1830, he returned to Delaware Co., and was married, in the latter part of Dec. of same year, to Mary A. Butler, a native of same county. In May, they moved to Erie Co., and settled where they have since resided; having prepared himself for the medical profession, Dr. Bennett began practice in the spring of 1844. He built up a large practice for several years, till ill health and other business interests lessened it for some years, the Doctor attending only such families as urged him. July 4, 1876, he became a member of the Eclectic association of Penn., receiving the honorary degree of M. D., at Franklin, Penn. Besides attending to his large practice, the Doctor has managed an estate of 273 acres of finely-improved land, on French Creek, near Wattsburg. To the Doctor and Mrs. Bennett have been born 8 children, 4 surviving—Phebe, Elizabeth; Augusta, wife of T. W. Stewart, of North East, Penn., have 2 sons, Bennett A. and Charles T.; and Daniel W., married to Anna E. Seeburn, of Mercer, Mercer Co., Penn., have 5 children, Frank M., Celestia A., Mary S., Myra A. and Daniel D. T. Mrs. Bennett departed this life Jan. 22, 1883. She was a member of the M. E. Church, and was a devoted wife and mother. Her death was a loss to the entire community. Dr. Bennett is, in politics, a Republican. He has a thorough knowledge of his profession, in which he has been a successful and popular practitioner; has reared an intelligent family, and is one of the useful and intelligent citizens of Venango Township.

DANIEL R. BOVEE, farmer and mechanic, P. O. Lowville, was born Feb. 10, 1841, in Gibsonville, Genesee Co., N. Y. His father, William R. Bovee, a native of Mass., moved to N. Y., and there married Maria Quakenbush. They moved to Titusville, Crawford Co., Penn., in 1850, where Mr. Bovee died Jan. 18, 1857. Mrs. Bovee married Andrew Hays in 1861, and moved to Erie Co. Our subject enlisted September 2, 1861, in the 111th Reg. P. V. I. He served in the Army of Virginia under Gen. Pope, and was honorably discharged for disability Feb. 11, 1863. He was married, July 3, 1864, to Lucina Raymond, of Greenfield Township, this county. They have 3 children—Ada C., June R. and Irl C. In 1877, Mr. Bovee settled on his present farm, near Lowville, which comprises 27 acres. He is politically a Republican; a member of the F. & A. M., G. A. R., and member of the Grand Lodge of the K. of H. He possesses the respect and confidence of the entire community.

H. W. BOYD, dealer in boots and shoes, Lowville, was born Aug. 14, 1809, in County Down, Ireland. His parents, William and Elizabeth Boyd, came to Union County, Penn., in 1820. They moved, in 1829, to Greenfield Township, Erie Co., and afterward settled in Venango Township, where they purchased a farm. Here Mrs. Boyd died July 30, 1844, and Mr. Boyd Oct. 5, 1847. Our subject was brought up on a farm, and received his education in the limited schools of those early days. He was engaged in working on public works in Ohio for about a year, and subsequently was employed in various public enterprises, and in working at the carpenter's trade. He was united in marriage, Nov. 1, 1833, with Sallie Ann Robbins. They settled on a farm in this township, and were the parents of 12 children, of whom are now living—Julia Ann, wife of D. Kaut, of Mich.; Mrs. Mary E. Vandenburg; John, now in Erie; William S., Mrs. Emma J. Blackmore, Sylvester H., George A. and Mrs. Vashti Patterson. In 1879, Mr. Boyd moved to Lowville, and opened a boot and shoe store. His wife died Dec. 22, 1880. She had been a devoted and kind companion, and an indulgent mother, loved and respected by the whole community. Mr. Boyd, afterward, in May, 1881, married Mrs. Nancy Dibble, who died Aug., 1883. Mr. Boyd is now keeping store in Lowville. He is a Democrat in politics; an honest respected pioneer citizen of this township.

HENRY BROOKS, farmer, P. O. East Greene, was born in Birmingham, England, Apr. 21, 1846, son of Josiah and Ann Brooks, who came to America in 1848, and located in the city of Erie where the former plied his trade, that of a scale-maker and gunsmith. About 1859, they purchased a farm in this township and moved on it. This place was purchased in 1880 by our subject, and his father now resides in Wesleyville. Henry Brooks was united in marriage, Oct. 27, 1870, with Marilla Brace, who has borne him 2 children—Ona Belle and Edmund Josiah. They were pious Christians, and brought up their children in the fear of the Lord.

JAMES JANES, Jr., farmer, P. O. Philipsville, was born in Oxford, Upper Canada, March 19, 1815. His father died when he was but fifteen, and he was left the main support of his mother and 6 younger children. The little farm of 56 acres was involved to nearly its whole value by liabilities and indorsements contracted by his father, as well as other debts, but James determined to keep the family together. Times were hard, but he farmed, looked well after the stock, worked out by the day, and before he was twenty-one had the satisfaction of paying the old debts, and freeing the homestead which he left to his brothers and sisters on his marriage in 1836. He paid his marriage fee by taking oats to North East and selling them for 18 cents per bushel, and had but 18 cents remaining. He went in debt for a farm of 100 acres, with 12 acres cleared. He was prospered and now owns a large estate, besides much personal property. Of his children, James H. died in infancy, and James Lucius, a soldier in the 199th Reg., P. V. I., died in the hospital at Point of Rocks, Va., Dec. 17, 1864. Mr. Janes is descended from a line of Puritans, which gave to the world Bishop E. S. Janes of the M. E. Church. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church; one of the original supporters of the Republican party.

MARVIN E. JANES, farmer, P. O. Lowville, was born June 15, 1837. He was united in marriage in 1858 with Geraldine Stafford. Two children were born to this union—Mrs. Annie Dipbo and James H. Our subject enlisted in 1862 in the 111th Reg. P. V. I. He served a year in the Army of the Potomac; then was transferred to Sherman's army, and participated in his celebrated march to the sea. Mr. Janes married, Aug. 25, 1868, Maria Louisa Shipman, who died June 22, 1869. He subsequently was united in marriage in 1871 with Alice Delia Allen, who has borne him 2 children—Heman Lucious and Maria Louisa. Mr. Janes has led an active, industrious life, and has now a farm of 118 acres, cleared entirely by his own labor. He is a member of the G. A. R., and a Republican in politics.

ALVA and ELI E. JENKINS, lumbermen and manufacturers, P. O. Wattsburg, are the sons of Henry L. Jenkins, who was born July 27, 1821, in Delaware Co., N. Y. He is a son of Solomon and Margaret (Morse) Jenkins, of Conn., both dying in Erie Co., Penn., the former June 2, 1877, and the latter May 14, 1857. Henry L. Jenkins married, in 1850, Penina Herington, who died about 6 weeks after. July 7, 1852, he married Mary Church, by whom he had 4 children—Alva, Mrs. Elizabeth Eads, Eli E., and Mrs. Nina J. More, who had 1 child—Bertie R. Mr. Jenkins spent 2 years driving a stage from Cleveland to Strongsville, Ohio, and some 11 years as conductor on the C. & E. R. R. Mr. Matteson's present wife was Delinda, daughter of Calvin and Lavinia (Reed) Woodard, to whom he was married Dec. 9, 1860. Two children have blessed this union—Emery S. and Emma. Mr. and Mrs. Matteson are members of the Christian Church. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. His father was a soldier in the war of 1812.

JOAN MCGAHEN (deceased), was a native of Canada, and was a son of John and Rachel McGahen, who resided near Toronto. Our subject settled in this township about 1815, and was united in marriage, in 1816, with Lydia, daughter of Peter and Catharine Kline, who settled here about 1800. Of the twelve children born to this union, the following survive: John; Kate, wife of Henry Smith; Susan, wife of Henry Gross; Silas, an old bachelor, resides on the homestead; Lydia, wife of Jeremiah Colvin; and Ezra, who married Clarissa, daughter of Philip and Betsey (Rogers) Kline; he has five children—Winfield, John, Clyde, Murney and Edith; his brother, John, who is also a bachelor, resides with him. Ezra was in the war of the rebellion, being drafted in 1862 in Co. F, 169th Penn. Reg.; was quartered opposite Yorktown, Va., and was honorably discharged after nine months' service. The McGahens are all Republican in their politics. John McGahen, the subject of this sketch, departed this life in the year 1839.

ROBERT B. McCLAUGHRY, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Washington Co., N. Y., Nov. 23, 1833, a son of Matthew M. and Martha (Beattie) McClaughry, who settled in this township in 1834. Matthew was a tanner by trade, and worked at that business some ten or twelve years, when he purchased a farm, which he carried on for a time, and followed mercantile business for twenty years at Edinboro. He was the father of seven children, all deceased but Robert B. and Margaret E., wife of Prof. J. W. Cannon, residing at Sharon, Penn. He died in March, 1882, aged seventy-three years. Our subject bought his present farm in 1861, and was married, Feb. 17, 1862, in Oakland, Livingston Co., N. Y., to Mary, daughter of Rev. Pliny and Julia A. (Caulkins) Twichell, by whom he has had three children—Morgan M., Robert G. and Samuel H.

DAVIS McLALLEN, farmer, P. O. McLallen's Corners, was born Dec. 27, 1827, a son of William and Philena (Davis) McLallen, who settled here about 1815, and were the parents of eleven children, viz., Davis, Charles, Tunis, Marvin, Zilpha, Lucinda, Norman, Asenath, William, Aurelia and Celestia. The subject of this sketch was married, Oct., 1849, to Lucina C., daughter of Daniel and Adeline (Irons) Williams. They had seven children, five living: Harrison M., married Eva A. Hotchkiss, and has five children—Minnie M., Stella Z., Loretta, Abbie and Anna; Marvin T., married Deda Colvin, and has one child—Bertha; Frances A., wife of Durant Crow, has one child—Lee; Evà A., wife of Barney L. Crow, one child—Murney; and Clyde O. D. Mr. and Mrs. McLallen are members of the Christian Church. He secured the mail privileges at McLallen's Corners in 1869, being a special route from that point to Mill Village and return, and was its Postmaster for twelve years. The year 1873, he erected a fine building which is now occupied as general store and post office.

CHARLES McLALLEN, farmer, P. O. McLallen's Corners, was born Nov. 19, 1829, a son of William and Philena (Davis) McLallen, and grandson of Robert McLallen, an early settler in this township. His grandfather, Zopher Davis, settled here in 1816. Mr. McLallen was united in marriage, April 8, 1852, with Betsy, daughter of Alfred and Relief (Carter) Trow, who settled in this township about 1836 or 1837. Nine children have been born to this union, six living—Winfield M., who married Ida Fellows, of this township; Eugene, married to Eva Port; Horatio N., married to Phena Trask; Lillie, wife of Thomas C. Clafferty; Alta and Glennie. Mrs. McLallen has been a member of the Christian Church upward of thirty years. Mr. McLallen owns the farm first settled by his grandfather, Zopher Davis.

MARVIN McLALLEN, farmer, P. O. McLallen's Corners, was born March 24, 1834, in this township. He is a son of William and Philena (Davis) McLallen, early settlers of this township. Our subject married, Oct. 31, 1855, Mary, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Osborn) Austin, who were natives of Devonshire, England, and settled in McKean Township in 1871. Of the four children who blessed this union, two survive—William N. and Ida B. William N. married Sarah A., daughter of Martin and Georgianna (Taylor) Gil-laspie. of this township, who has borne him two children, viz., Mary N. and Bernice. Ida B. was married, Feb. 21, 1884, to Horace S., son of Martin and Georgianna Gillaspie. Mr. McLallen resides on the farm owned by his father, on which he settled in 1834. He has been School Director of this township one term, but has never been an office seeker, preferring to let those who crave official honors have the positions.

NORMAN T. McLALLEN, farmer, P. O. McLallen's Corners, was born in Washington Township, Erie Co., Penn., Oct. 31, 1840, a son of William and Phylla (Davis) McLallen, early settlers of this township. Our subject was united in marriage, Nov. 2, 1862, with Jane, daughter of Robert and Jennie (Dodds) Morrison, who settled in this township about 1833-34. Three children have blessed this union—John B., Jane E. and Cora B. Mr. McLallen has a fine farm, under a high state of cultivation, comprising 213 acres of land, a part of which was originally settled by John Culbertson. He has served his township as Road Commissioner, School Director and Collector. He is a Republican in politics.

ELIAS McWILLIAMS, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, son of John and Hannah (Campbell) McWilliams, was born Oct. 30, 1812, on the farm in this township where he now resides. John was a native of Ireland, and one of the first settlers of this township, coming here about 1800. His wife was a daughter of Jean Campbell, a pioneer of Washington Township, settling here in 1798. To this union were born eleven children, viz., James, Jane, William, Rhuanna, Elias, Nancy, John, Robert, Job, Hugh and Joseph. The surviving of this family are John, residing in Edinboro; Job, in Oshkosh, Wis.; Hugh, in Le Boeuf Township, and Jane and Elias, in this township. Hugh, a resident of Edinboro, and Joseph E., who is living in Eau Claire, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams have been members of the Presbyterian Church upward of twenty-five years.

DANIEL F. MILSPA W, retired, Edinboro, was born at Scipio, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Aug. 8, 1806, a son of Jeremiah and Margaret (Waggoner) Milspaw. The former was born at Schenectady, N. Y., and the latter, a daughter of George Waggoner, was a native of New Jersey. Mr. Milspaw located in this county about 1850, living on a farm two miles southwest of Edinboro until 1877, when he moved to the village, where he has since resided; he has been twice married, first to Charity, daughter of John and Eunice Merchant, of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. This occurred in 1831. Three children were born to this union, viz.: Ann, deceased; Austin, married Mary Woodward; and Freeman M., married Anna Culbertson, both reside in this township. On Sept. 1, 1870, Mr. Milspaw married Elizabeth, widow of William McLallen, and daughter of Washington and Sarah (Green) Halsted, the former a son of Samuel Halsted, and a native of Saratoga Co., N. Y., and the latter a daughter of Benjamin Green, a native of Rhode Island, who lived many years in Luzerne Co., Penn., where he died. Mrs. Milspaw is a member of the Methodist Church. He has been Road Commissioner. He is politically a Republican.

FREEMAN M. MILLSPA W, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Sept. 18, 1833, a son of Daniel F. and Charity (Merchant) Milspaw. He settled in this township in 1849, and was united in marriage, May 4, 1857, with Anna, daughter of William D. and Mary J. (Graham) Culbertson; the former was a son of John Culbertson, who settled in this township in the year 1800. The latter was born in this township, a daughter of James Graham, who was a native of Ireland. Mr. Millspaw has two children, Lillie B., the wife of David B. Pulling, of this township, married Oct. 2, 1883, and Willie D. He has lived on his present farm twenty years, and has been School Director.

JOHN MORRISON, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in this township May 25, 1842, a son of Robert and Jane (Dodds) Morrison. Robert Morrison was a native of Ireland, coming to Erie in 1832, and settling in this township in 1834. He was the father of eight children, six living: Ann, wife of Wm. Chase; Margaret, wife of Henry Austin; Jane, married to Norman T. McLallen; John; Walter, married Belva Ethridge; and James, who is Principal of the Girard High School. Robert Morrison departed this life in 1845; his widow still resides on the old homestead. The subject of this sketch was in the late rebellion, enlisting Sept. 11, 1864, in Co. H, 199th P. V. I. He was wounded in both legs at the battle of Petersburg April 2, 1865, and was honorably discharged Oct. 11 of the same year.

GILBERT O. PERRY, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in this township July 28, 1824, a son of Samuel and Parney (Crossett) Perry. Samuel was a native of Massachusetts; settled in this township in 1817. The subject of this sketch was married, March 24, 1852, to Ann R., daughter of William and Sophia (Marvin) Curtis. Four children were born to this union—Elwin P., Willis F., Emma A. and Sophia J. Emma is the wife of James P. Philp. Mrs. Perry departed this life Aug. 10, 1879; she was an active member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Perry has held the position of School Director several years. In politics, he was formerly a Republican, but is now Independent, and states that he will vote for no man for President or Congress, who is not in favor of paying the National debt at once. He is in favor of greenbacks for our National money as against National bank shin-plaster money, and is an advocate of free trade as a principle, and no tariff for special parties as a National policy.

ALONZO PERRY, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in this township March 18, 1827, a son of Samuel and Parnely (Crossett) Perry. Samuel was a son of Eli and Eunice (Hunt) Perry, and with his brother Samson settled in this township in 1817. He married Parnely, daughter of Israel and Martha (Hamilton) Crossett, all of Salem, Mass. By this marriage, there were twelve children, viz., Stillman H., Gilbert O., Sarah, Alonzo, Martha, Eleanor, Darius, Hamilton, Mary, Harriet J., Horatio (deceased) and Eunice. Horatio was in the late war, enlisting in 1861 in the three months' service in the 83d P. V. I. He served his time, and re-enlisted in same regiment in 1863, and was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg the same year. Our subject was married, Feb. 20, 1849, to Eunice A., daughter of Horace and Flora (Taylor) Powers, and had four children, viz., Willis, deceased; Warren, married Ella O. RICHARD PHILP, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Cornwall, England, Feb. 24, 1819, a son of John and Grace (Cullis) Philp. Our subject settled in Darlington, Ont., in 1843; coming to Washington Township in 1848, where he married, Oct. 17, 1850, Jane, daughter of James and Lydia (McLallen) Port, who were among the early settlers of this township. Five children were born to this union, viz., John (deceased), Emeline, James, Mary J. (deceased) and Lavonia (wife of Wm. Kinter). Mrs. Philp departed this life Feb. 18, 1879, aged fifty-seven. Mr. Philp joined the Methodist Church at the age of sixteen, and has been an active member since. He settled on the farm on which he now resides in 1853, coming into the woods, which he cleared. By industry, he has acquired a fine property, comprising 150 acres.

WILLARD F. PIFER, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in this township, June 5, 1855, a son of Davis and Elizabeth (Kline) Pifer. Davis Pifer was a native of Lancaster Co., Penn., and settled in this township about 1815, first locating on the farm now owned by G. O. Perry; then lived on the farm owned by Alonzo Perry, and finally settled on the farm now owned by his son Willard, which he cleared, as well as portions of the other farms. He died April, 1882, at the age of eighty-two; he was twice married, and the father of ten children, six now surviving—William, Carrie, Mary, Alma, John and Willard F. Our subject was united in marriage Oct. 25, 1873, with Kate, daughter of Dryas and Eunice (Herick) Rockwell, of Crawford Co., Penn.; one child has blessed this union—Dora. Mrs. Pifer is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

JAMES PORT, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Johnstown, N. Y., May 20, 1819, a son of James and Lydia (McLallen) Port. James Port was a native of Ireland; came to America when very young; he settled in this township in the year 1821, first clearing a farm of fifty acres, to which he added until he had acquired a farm of 170 acres; he was the father of eleven children, viz., William, who is residing with his mother on the homestead; James, Jr., Jane, Henry, John, Margaret, George, Israel, Lavina, Lydia A. and Irwin. Of the six who survive, all reside in this county but Israel, who is in Kansas. James, Jr., the subject of this sketch, was united in marriage Feb. 18, 1845, with Alice, daughter of Samuel and Laura (Gibbs) Jewett, early settlers of Waterford Township; four children have blessed this union—Adella M., wife of Fernando F. McLallen; Adelbert J. married Ida Kinter; Irwin W. and Alfred E. Mr. Port has never held or sought office; he was a Democrat in politics until 1860, when he changed his views and voted for Abraham Lincoln for President, and has been a staunch Republican since; with the exception of the years which he spent in Wisconsin—going in the spring of 1845, and returning in the fall of 1854—Mr. Port has resided in this township, settling on his present farm in 1868.

MARTIN H. PRATT, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Crawford County, May 28, 1829; a son of John and Lydia (Herrington) Pratt, who settled in Crawford County about 1810. Mr. Pratt came to this township in 1845, and has lived on his present farm since 1852, which was first settled by Alexander Hamilton. He was married on May 6, 1851, to Hettie A., daughter of James and Polly (Taylor) Reeder, and grand-daughter of Job Reeder, who settled in Washington Township in 1798. Seven children have been born to this union, viz., Rose A., wife of W. H. McClure; Mary, wife of Edgar Hotchkiss; Winnie, Grace, Isaac, Emma and Martha. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt and the four eldest daughters are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JAMES REEDER (deceased), was born in Washington Township, Erie Co., Penn., Nov. 17, 1804; his father, Job Reeder, came from Central Pennsylvania and settled in Erie County in 1798, and March 10, 1800, married Nancy Campbell, by whom he had twelve children—Joseph, James, Polly, Dorothy, Jane, Mary, Job, Eleanor, John C., Samuel, Hannah and Moses. The subject of this sketch was married Nov. 9, 1825, to Polly, daughter of Isaac and Hettie (Gay) Taylor, by whom he had twelve children, viz., James O., Job D., Isaac T., Isaac R., Hettie A., John T., Mary J., Flora L., Sally D., Fanny Q., Polly A. and Eleanor J.; of these the surviving are—Hettie, wife of Martin Pratt; Isaac R., married Sarah T., daughter of Joseph and Tyle Giles, and has two children living—Charles J. and Anna G.; Flora L., wife of Charles Dale, of Franklin; Polly A., wife of James Martin, of Newcastle, and Ella J. Mr. and Mrs. Reeder were members of the Presbyterian Church; the former died in 1860, aged fifty-six years, and the latter is still living at the ripe age of seventy-seven. Isaac, the only surviving son of this union, resides in Edinboro, and is engaged in farming, and manufacturing wood and chain pumps; he is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is one of the leading enterprising citizens of Edinboro.

SAMUEL G. REEDER, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, was born in Washington Township, Sept. 14, 1821, and is a son of Job and Nancy (Campbell) Reeder, who settled in this township in 1798. Job was a son of Joseph Reeder, a native of Bucks Co., Penn., Joseph was a son of Charles Reeder, a native of England, who came to America in 1734, settling in Bucks Co., Penn., where he reared a family of fourteen children, twelve growing to manhood and womanhood, married, and had large families, who are scattered all over the Union. James Campbell, the maternal grandfather, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, was taken prisoner by the British, and after three months of hardship and suffering was exchanged. The subject of this sketch married, Jan. 5, 1843, Lydia A., daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Gillespie) Graham, by whom he has had eight children, five living—George H., a merchant, residing at Big Rapids, Mich.; Job P., a farmer in Elk Creek Township; James G., attorney-at-law, at Columbus, Neb.; Lizzie and Milton, living at home. George H. served in the late war, enlisting Aug. 1862, at the age of eighteen, in Co. B, 145th P. V. I., and participated in the battles of Antietam and Fredericksburg, and was discharged on account of disability in 1863. Samuel G. Reeder has served as County Auditor one term, and Trustee of the Normal School four terms. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and reside on a part of the old homestead farm, on which his father settled. A sister of Jane Campbell (mother of Nancy Campbell Reeder) married the grandfather of Abraham Lincoln, in Bucks Co., Penn., went to Virginia, and afterward to Kentucky. Her descendants, the Reeders, Campbells, Lewises and McWilliamses are therefore second cousins of the late President Lincoln. Mr. Reeder is politically a Republican. The Reeders, Taylors, McWilliamses, Campbells, Twichells, Clarks, Lewises and Austins, are the principal founders of the Northwestern Normal School at Edinboro.

MOSES REEDER, farmer, P. O. Edinboro, born April 19, 1826, the youngest son of Job and Nancy (Campbell) Reeder, who settled in this township in 1798. He and his wife are members of the F. W. Baptist Church. He is a Republican in principle; a P. M. of the Grange; also a member of the I. O. O. F.

CHARLES C. BOYD, Assistant Postmaster, Waterford, was born in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., Sept. 16, 1808, son of John Boyd, a native of Maryland, who brought his wife and three children on horseback from Northumberland Co., Penn., in 1802. He raised a family of ten children, two of the three still surviving are residing in Erie Co., and one living in Titusville, Crawford Co., Penn. Mr. Boyd was a farmer, and served as Justice of the Peace for about thirty years, and County Commissioner for one term. He died in 1854; his wife preceded him six years. Our subject is the fourth son of this family. His educational advantages were only such as a new country afforded; he was married in 1839 to Miss Louisa, daughter of Elijah Hitchcock, of New York State. This union not being blessed with children, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd adopted a baby girl, who is still living with them. Mr. Boyd was one of the contractors, for about three years, when the first railroad was built through Erie Co. He has also engaged for about ten years in the mercantile business at Waterford, and farmed about the same length of time in the same township. He served as County Commissioner three years during the war, when the position was an important one, for arrangements had to be made, in order to pay bounties, that Erie Co. might keep to the front. He was found equal to the occasion, and retired from office with honor to himself and satisfaction to others. He is now acting as Assistant Postmaster. Mr. Boyd has been a strong supporter of the Republican party since the breaking out of the war.

HARVEY BOYD, farmer and dealer in lumber, P. O. Waterford, was born Feb. 21, 1815, on his present farm in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn. Wilson; James P., a soldier in the late war, serving about six months and receiving an honorable discharge at the close of the war; Lois M., wife of Frank Thomas; Eliza, wife of Barton Gardner; Edward and Harriet J., wife of Elmer Thomas. Mr. Briggs now owns 150 acres of well-improved land, which he has obtained by his own industry. In 1875, his barn was burned, and he sustained a loss of about $500. He is a member of the Advent Church. In politics, an Independent.

EDWIN BRIGGS, farmer and insurance agent, also local preacher, P. O. Waterford, Penn., was born in Stephentown, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., May 16, 1813; third son of Francis and Betsey Briggs, natives of New York State, who had a family of nine children, five now living. Mr. Briggs was a prominent farmer; he took much interest in the Baptist Church. He died Nov. 26, 1844, aged sixty years; his widow died Jan. 21, 1867, aged seventy-nine years. Our subject was united in marriage, April 19, 1842, with Miss Harriet H. Hill, born in Vermont, daughter of John and Laura Hill. This union has been blessed with eight children, viz.: John F., a soldier in the 145th P. V. I. (at the battle of Fredericksburg he received a wound in the leg which never healed; he returned home after his discharge in 1863, and died March 12, 1868); Theron, was also a soldier in the same regiment, and after the battle of Spottsylvania he was reported missing, and has never since been heard from; Myron F.; Laura E.; Ellen L., wife of William Nesbitt; Charles C.; Mary H., and Delia C., who died Dec. 19, 1870. Mr. Briggs is greatly interested in the M. E. Church, in which he has preached since his ordination in 1849, and to which his wife and children (excepting Myron F.) also belong. He owns 112 acres of well-improved land on which he settled when he came to this county in 1851. He is Independent in politics, but never votes Democratic.

SAMUEL G. BROTHERTON, banker, Waterford, was born in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., March 14, 1817; son of Robert and Dorothea Brotherton, natives of Franklin County, Penn. Robert Brotherton, who was born Dec. 25, 1760, came to Erie County in 1797, and settled in Waterford Township, where he built the Brotherton Grist and Saw Mills; he reared a family of five children, of whom Samuel G. is the only one living; he was a prominent man in Pittsburgh, and died Nov. 20, 1844. Our subject married Mary R., daughter of John Marvin, a prominent business man in Waterford and Erie County from 1826 to 1863. This union has been blessed with five children, viz., Henry W., in Denver, Colo.; Mary A., wife of W. E. Clark, of Union City; J. Rawle, an attorney at law; Blanche H. and Robert L., who is operating his father's saw-mill and factory, manufacturing butter tubs, etc. Mr. Brotherton formed a partnership in 1874, under the firm name of Benson & Brotherton. Theirs is the only bank in Waterford, and is doing a flourishing business. Our subject owns 300 acres of land, on which Waterford Station is erected. He is a sociable, influential gentleman.

SAMUEL R. BRYANT, dentist, was born in Washington Co., N. Y., Jan. 22, 1837; son of A. C. Bryant, a native of Massachusetts, and a cousin of Wm. C. Bryant, the poet. A. C. Bryant came to Erie County from New York State with his family in 1847; he carried on the carriage making business in Waterford until his death, which occurred in 1863; his widow followed him in 1872. Our subject, who is the youngest child, learned dentistry in 1868, and has since practiced the same in Waterford; he, however, is naturally an inventor, and has made a success as such. Dr. Bryant married, in 1874, Miss Alice G., daughter of David Boyd, one of the first settlers in the county. This union has been blessed with one child—Florence. Mrs. Bryant is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Bryant met with reverses in the oil regions in 1865 and 1866, but since then has been gradually gaining financially, and has been successful in business; he is a very moral man, a strong advocate of prohibition.

MATTHEW CAMPBELL, farmer, Waterford, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., Dec. 8, 1828; third son of James Campbell, a native of Pennsylvania, a tanner by trade, and a soldier of the war of 1812; he raised a family of eight children, four now living; he departed this life Jan. 8, 1846. Our subject came to Erie in 1853, and married, in 1856, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Moore, an old settler of Waterford, and now living. This union has been blessed with four children, viz., Martha E.; Bertha J., wife of Marshal Hood; James M. and George W. Mrs. Campbell and two daughters are members of the U. P. Church. Mr. Campbell is a self-made man, having accumulated 130 acres of well-improved land, with good buildings, by hard work; he keeps a small dairy, and sends his milk to the Waterford cheese factory. Mr. Campbell is a member of the A. O. U. W.; a true Republican in politics.

F. L. CLEMENS, physician and surgeon, Waterford, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., March 13, 1856, second child of A. A. Clemens, a native of Erie Co., Penn., who is now living with his wife in Crawford Co., Penn. Our subject obtained his education in the Crawford Co. schools and at Waterford Academy. In 1877, he commenced to study medicine with J. W. Bowman, M. D., Waterford, and graduated in the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Penn., March, 1881. Since his graduation he has been successfully following his profession in Waterford, where he enjoys the confidence and patronage of the general public. He is also a member of the firm of Clemens & Patten, successors of Bowman & Smith. They have a nice drug store, and do a good business. Although young, Dr. Clemens has a bright prospect before him. He is a member of Mt. Olivet Commandery No. 20, of Erie, also of the I. O. O. F., of Waterford.

WILLIAM O. COLT, proprietor of bus line and livery stable, Waterford, was born Sept. 25, 1832, in the village of Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., son of Henry Colt, Jr., a native of Pennsylvania, who carried on blacksmithing and wagon-making in Waterford many years, and died about 1842. Our subject enlisted, April, 1861, in Company E, the old Erie regiment, and served three months. In July, 1861, he re-enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., and soon received the appointment of Second Lieutenant. This regiment was in the 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac, and was as distinguished as any during the war. Its first Colonel, McLane, was killed at Gaines' Mill; S. Vincent, its second Colonel, lost his life at Gettysburg; then Col. O. S. Woodward took command; he lost a leg in the battle of the Wilderness; after which the regiment was re-organized, and C. P. Rodgers was appointed Colonel, and our subject Lieutenant Colonel. He commanded the regiment at Hatcher's Run, and passed through all the battles in which his regiment engaged during the war, and filled every rank from Second Lieutenant to Lieutenant Colonel. He had charge of the 16th Mich. Regt. at Boydtown Road, where he repulsed the enemy; he commanded the same regiment the day before the battle of Grand Forks. The chief in command of the corps knew Col. Colt was a man to be depended on, and placed him where there was the hardest fighting, and always found him equal to the occasion. He received a wound in his head at Malvern Hill, and at Bethesda Church was again wounded in the same place. He held the extreme right of the entire line, with the 16th Mich. Regt.; at the battle of Five Forks repulsed three charges of the rebels, and captured a regiment of the enemy's infantry. He returned home as Lieutenant Colonel, and was honorably discharged July, 1865, when he settled down as a peaceable citizen in Waterford.

J. L. COOK, builder and retired farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born Jan. 28, 1811, in Buffalo, N. Y., son of Robert and Lodima Cook, natives of New England. Robert Cook was accidentally shot in 1811, while sitting in a hotel in Buffalo. His widow moved to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and bought a farm; she was subsequently married to Samuel Trusdel; she died in 1827. Our subject, until he was twelve years of age, remained with his mother; he then lived with a Capt. John Tracy one year, and was afterward ostler at H. G. Davie's hotel. Being an orphan, he was literally kicked from post to pillar, until he learnt the cabinet-making of John Boyd, at which he served five years. He married Belinda, daughter of John Boyd, and a sister of Charles E. Boyd, by whom he had following named children: Laura M., wife of John Brian; Ella, wife of D. V. Minor; Julia, wife of Dr. H. A. Spencer, of Erie, and Edwin; Lee died, aged nineteen, and Boyd when two years old. Mrs. Cook departed this life Sept. 1, 1877. Our subject kept the Cook's Hotel for about fifteen years; at the same time was engaged in the carpenter's and joiner's business, employing from three to five men most of the time. He was one of a company who constructed the Lake Shore Railroad from New York State line to North East, including the building of a bridge over Twenty-Mile Creek, 580 feet long and 300 feet high, and the railroad buildings at North East. He then engaged in building three miles of plank road from Waterford to Marvin's Mills; piers and abutments across the Wabash at Vincennes, Ind.; graded about twelve miles on the O. & M. R. R., and about twenty on the N. M., in Maryland, and erected twenty buildings. He then returned to Waterford, bought the Eagle Hotel, which he conducted two years; then sold out and went to Cameron, Penn., and opened the "Biddle House," which he ran in connection with his trade for about four years. He then erected, himself, a large hotel, a block of buildings and a fine residence, which he presented to his daughter Laura. In fact, he built the greater part of the town of Emporium, and was probably worth at that time $180,000. But reverses came, and his buildings burned down, which were worth over $80,000. He then engaged in the hotel business in the oil regions; was burned out, and returned to Waterford, where he erected the Park Place Hotel, located in the beautiful park, in which he had set out most of the trees twenty years previously. Mr. Cook now owns a well-improved farm of about seventy acres. Though over seventy years old, he is a healthy, energetic man. He served as Commissioner in Cameron County, and as Postmaster for four years in Waterford. He is a Republican in politics.

JOHN R. CROSS, farmer and stone mason, P. O. Waterford, was born Nov. 17, 1818, in County Tyrone, Ireland, and emigrated to this country in 1846, bringing his wife and five children. He worked at his trade, that of stone mason, to support his family and buy his farm. He married, in Ireland, Nov. 28, 1837, Miss Ann Hayse, a native of same place, who bore him nine children, five now living—Eliza A., wife of James D. Gourley; James H., a soldier in the late rebellion, serving his country three months; Richard, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work; Thomas D. and Alfred. Mr. Cross is one of the prominent farmers of Waterford. He owns 180 acres of well improved land, with nice buildings on same, and makes his dairy a specialty. He and his wife are members of the M. E. Church.

RICHARD CROSS, carpenter and farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., April 26, 1848, son of John R. Cross, a native of Ireland, born in 1818, who came with his family to Erie in 1847. He reared five children, our subject being third child, all now living. One son served three months in the late rebellion. Richard Cross was united in marriage, in 1878, with Lillie Rice, a native of Erie Co., and a daughter of William Rice. This union has been blessed with two children—Clyde D. and William L. Mr. Cross works principally at his trade, that of carpenter, and is well skilled. He is owner of thirty-five acres of improved land. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.; politically, is a Democrat.

WILLIAM DAVIS, retired farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Rutland Co., Vt., Nov. 27, 1812, son of Zophar Davis, a native of Long Island, and who came to Erie Co., Penn., with his family in 1816, and died June, 1858. He was a soldier of the war of 1812. Our subject was the fourth son in the family. He married March 16, 1837, Miss Louisa, sister of Joseph Thomas, whose biography appears in this work. This union has been blessed with eight children, seven now living, viz., Thomas M., Minor M., Stoton W., Montillo W., Oscar P., Anna M., wife of Otis Trow, and Louie L., wife of Harvey Clute. Mr. Davis began with nothing, but by hard work has accumulated 100 acres of fine land, besides giving much to his children; each of his sons received $1,000 from him. He has held the office of Constable; has always been a Democrat.

ELIPHALET G. DAVIS, cheese manufacturer, McLain, Erie Co., was born in New York Aug. 31, 1841, youngest child of Henry and Mary Davis, the former a native of New York State, the latter of Massachusetts. They reared a family of four children. Our subject enlisted, in 1862, in Bat. A, 1st N. Y. Lt. Art., and served on the borders of Maryland. He was in the battle of Chambersburgh, Penn. After serving two years and ten months, he was honorably discharged in 1865, and returned home. Mr. Davis married, in 1866, Emily J. Burrows, a native of New York State. This union has been blessed with two children—Edith and Bertram. Mr. Davis made cheese four seasons in New York State; came to Erie Co. in the fall of 1881, and worked the first season in the Draketown Cheese Factory, in Washington Township. In the spring of 1883, he was employed in the Sharp's Corners factory, located in Waterford Township, which he now operates alone. That the factory is well patronized is proved from the fact, that though running in competition with another factory of the same kind only half a mile distant, in one season, the first, the milk of 200 cows was consumed. Mr. Davis is a Democrat in politics; was a good soldier, and is a good citizen.

F. F. FARRAR, retired, P. O. Waterford. The gentleman, whose name heads this biography, is not among the oldest settlers of Erie County, but one whose talents and ability have prominently identified him in the business interests of the county. He is a native of Vermont, born Aug. 24, 1822; his father, Oliver, was a native of Massachusetts, and his mother, Polly, of New Hampshire. The father was engaged many years of his life in the milling business; was for several terms a member of the Legislature of Vermont, chosen by the Democrats; he also served the people of his resident county in Vermont as a Justice of the Peace. F. F., Franklin and A. W. are the only survivors of his thirteen children. Our subject was brought up in his father's mills and upon the farm. His educational advantages were good, being the common schools and the Hancock Academy in New Hampshire; he taught one successful term of school about the time of reaching his majority. In 1843, he removed to Waterford, this county, and with his brother, A. J., conducted a mercantile business until 1853, when he withdrew and engaged in farming and the hotel business at Forest Home, Erie Co., continuing nearly four years with good success; he then entered a partnership with L. Phelps in the grocery line at Waterford. In one year he sold out and engaged under the firm name of Gray & Farrar in the wholesale grocery business at Erie with his usual good luck, up to 1867 or 1868, when he sold and turned his entire attention to the restoration of sulphuric acid at Pittsburg, in which enterprise he had invested prior to this time; he subsequently took the principal management of the branch business at Titusville and was very successful. At a period during his busy life, he was compelled to lay away his first consort, the mother of four children, three of whom are living, viz., Charles W., W. T. and Mrs. Minnie Ar buckle; he was again married to Mrs. Mary Day, the result being Joe; his estimable wife is a member of the Episcopal Church, while he is a worthy element in the A. F. & A. M. fraternity. During the war he was Mayor of Erie, and discharged the duties of that office with efficiency and satisfaction; he was ardently attached to the cause of the Union, was ever opposed to slavery, and is to-day an enthusiastic Republican. Socially, we find him a genial, pleasant gentleman. He is the artificer of his own little fortune, and is indeed fortunate beyond the common lot of humanity, in being surrounded by all that makes life pleasant, yet now, in his declining years, is somewhat troubled with the asthma.

REV. P. W. FREE, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, Waterford, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., in 1839; son of Richard Free, a native of same county. Our subject enlisted in 1862, in the 145th Reg. P. V. I., and served in Hancock's Corps, Army of the Potomac; he participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, where he was taken prisoner, but exchanged at the end of four months, returned to his regiment and was through the battles of the Wilderness and in the siege of Petersburg; he was honorably discharged as Captain at the close of the war. Our subject was united in marriage, June 16, 1870, with Sarah, daughter of Jacob Rodgers, of Crawford Co., Penn., who has borne him four children, viz.: J. Clark, who died May 13, 1879; Ina S.; George G. and Lytte R. Mr. Free commenced his ministry in the United Presbyterian denomination in 1870, and has since been located in a congregation in Waterford, organized in 1812, whose first pastor, the Rev. Robert Reid, remained until June 1, 1841, when the Rev. John J. Findlay took charge until Nov., 1853; the next was Rev. Thomas Love, who was succeeded May 3, 1864, by the Rev. H. P. Jackson, who was released Sept., 1869. The congregation is in a flourishing condition, the church property worth probably $10,000, with a membership of 140 persons, among whom are some of the wealthiest residents of Waterford. Our subject is the owner of a fine residence in Waterford.

GEORGE FRITTS, retired farmer and stock-dealer, Waterford, was born in Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Apr. 3, 1811; son of Peter Fritts, a native of New York State, who came to Erie Co. with his family in the spring of 1825 and located in Waterford Township; he raised a family consisting of eleven children (our subject being second child) four now living. He died, aged eighty-one, in 1871; his widow died in 1880, aged ninety-five. Our subject married in 1832 Miss Lucy Ann, daughter of Lewis Thomas and sister of Josephus Thomas, whose biography appears in this work. This union has been blessed with four children, viz.: Darius P., Clinton G., Isadore (deceased in infancy) and Delia I., wife of W. L. Brown. Mr. Fritts has lived on a farm the greater part of his life, and has accumulated a nice property by honesty and hard work. He sold a farm of 250 acres and moved to Waterford in 1874, where he has lived a retired life. He has dealt quite extensively in cattle for many years, and during the war shipped a great many head of stock from Canada. He has served as Director of the Poor one term. In politics is a Republican.

JAMES D. GOURLAY, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born Sept. 19, 1836, on the farm he now occupies in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., and is the youngest child of John and Elizabeth Gourlay, natives of Scotland, where the former manufactured linen and cotton goods. He came to Erie Co. in 1832, and engaged in farming. He was a member of the Presbyterian denomination, and took great interest in all that concerned the church. After being an invalid fifteen years, he died Jan. 2, 1855. His widow, aged eighty-nine, is living with her daughter, Mrs. William Lee. Our subject served three months in McLane's Erie Regiment. After his return he was drafted, and served as 2d Lieut. of the 169th P. V. I., where he remained ten months. He came home again, and later was commissioned as Captain, and appointed recruiting officer in 1864. He raised 144 men in Waterford and joined the 211th P. V. I., where he received the command of Co. F, attached to the Ninth Corps of the Army of the James. He participated in the battle of Fort Steadman, and in the capture of Petersburg, where he was wounded in the head. After an honorable discharge June 2, 1865, he returned to his home. July 3, 1866, he married Miss Eliza A., daughter of John Cross, whose biography is in this work. Five children, three living, have blessed this union—Steen F., May J., Mary (died March 23, 1884), Lee W. and Margret H. Mr. Gourlay is one of the proprietors of the cheese factory located at Davis' Corners. This factory, which has been opened one season, consumes about 5,000 pounds of milk per day, is well patronized and gives perfect satisfaction. Our subject owns 151 acres of well improved land. He is a member of the F. & A. M. and of the Republican party.

DAVID C. GRAY, tanner, Waterford, was born in Crawford Co., Penn., Nov. 28, 1842; second child of John and Hannah Gray, natives of New York State. John Gray was a miller by trade, at which he worked nearly all his life. He raised a family of four children, three now living. He departed this life Sept., 1850; his widow died June, 1877. David C. Gray enlisted Aug. 10, 1861, in the 83d Reg. P. V. I., Co. E, Fifth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He took part in the siege of Yorktown, seven days' fight on the Peninsula, Gaines' Mill, Malvern Hill, second Bull Run, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, and in the siege of Petersburg, including some very hard fighting in capturing the Weldon Railroad, and finally in the capture of Lee's army, besides many minor engagements. At the battle of Gaines' Mill he lost his knapsack, and, in 1866, a bible, given him by his mother, was returned to him by the rebel who had secured the knapsack, and in which he had found the bible. Mr. Gray now prizes this book as a sacred relic. He served his country nearly four years, and was honorably discharged June 28, 1865, and returned home. He is now employed in the tannery business. He is a Republican in politics, and cast his first presidential vote for A. Lincoln. Is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W. societies.

CORNELIUS HALEY, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in 1830 in County Cork, Ireland. He emigrated to America in 1849. Mr. Haley worked four or five years on the railroad, and accumulated enough money to buy a farm of ninety-five acres, which he now owns in Waterford Township. He bought the farm cheap, but has improved it and made it into a splendid home. Our subject married, in 1850, in St. Patrick's Church, Erie, Miss Nora Austin, a native of County Clare, Ireland. This union has been blessed with four children, two dying young. Those now living are Daniel (married and living in Dallas City) and a daughter, Maria (residing with her parents). The entire family are members of the Roman Catholic Church at Waterford Station. Mr. Haley has been a hard worker, and has now a nice property.

JAMES HARE, farmer, P. O. LeBœuf, was born Oct. 22, 1815, in LeBœuf Township, Erie Co., Penn., second son of John Hare, a native of Pennsylvania, who must have come to Erie Co. about 1800, and whose father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and also served in the French war. He witnessed the defeat of Braddock, and shouldered his musket to go forth in the war of 1812, when over eighty years of age; he died in 1843 at the patriarchal age of nearly one hundred and sixteen years. John Hare reared a family of thirteen children, five now living; he died in 1854. Our subject married, in 1835, Harriet Preston, a native of New York State, and a daughter of Jeremiah Preston. To them have been born seven children—Amos W.; Stephen W., who served twenty-one months in the late war, and was honorably discharged; Silas H., a soldier in the 83d P. V. I., and died in the hospital at Alexandria in 1862; Martin E., a soldier in the 83d P. V. I., was missing at the battle of the Wilderness and never since heard from; Mary J., widow of David Cottrell; Lydia A., wife of S. B. Stoke, and Aaron L. Mr. Hare is descended from one of the oldest and most respected families of the county. He owns eighty acres of improved land—a part of the old homestead. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church. In politics he is a Republican.

AARON M. HIMROD, farmer and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Waterford, was born in Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 23, 1823, son of Moses and Nancy (Lattimore) Himrod, the latter a daughter of James Lattimore, a native of Northumberland Co., Penn., a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and one of the first pioneers of this section. Moses Himrod was also a native of Northumberland Co., Pa., and came to Erie Co. in 1800; his father, our subject's grandfather, was also a soldier in the Revolutionary war, participating in the battles of Princeton and Trenton, besides other engagements; he received a pension in his latter days. Moses Himrod reared a family of eight children, seven now living. He was a Captain in the war of 1812. He was a prominent farmer, held nearly all the township offices, and died in 1865. Our subject married, in 1853, Miss Mary J., daughter of David Cook, of Venango Co., Penn. They were parents of seven children, viz.: M. L., a promising young man, married but nine months to Miss Mary Mitchell, when he died; Eva A.; Alfred C., died at the age of twenty-one; Lee, Frank H., Belle and Carl. Mr. Himrod owns 120 acres of well-improved land, which he has mostly cleared himself, and on which is his saw mill, which is operated nearly all the time, and doing a good business. Mr. and Mrs. Himrod are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in politics.

MRS. NANCY HIMROD, widow of Aaron Himrod, Waterford, was born in Erie Co., Penn., Aug. 21, 1834, second daughter of George Smith, a native of Erie Co., now living in Waterford. Our subject married, Dec. 31, 1861, Aaron Himrod, eldest son of Simon Himrod, a native of Pennsylvania, and one of the early settlers of Erie Co. He raised a family of eight children, only one now living, viz., Martha, wife of Alfred Lamb, of Pleasantville, Penn. Mr. and Mrs. Himrod were blessed with two children, viz., Reid S., born Jan. 20, 1863, and S. Steele, born April 22, 1864; both sons reside with their mother. Mr. Himrod was a farmer, but during the last two years of his life was engaged in the grocery business. He accumulated a nice little property, which he left to his widow. He and his wife were members of the U. P. Church, to which the latter still belongs. He took quite an interest in church matters. He departed this life Feb. 15, 1873. Mrs. Nancy Himrod owns a fine residence on Third street, Waterford. She is descended from one of the oldest and best families in the township.

GEORGE HIPPLE, miller, Waterford, was born in Perry Co., Penn., in 1831, and came to Erie Co., Penn., in 1854, where he engaged as miller in the old mill at Waterford, located on the spot of his present place of business. After remaining about five years, he moved to Erie City, where he worked fifteen years, when the old Waterford mill burned down, and he moved back and built the present mill on Le Bœuf Creek, about a half mile south of Waterford. He was then associated with T. P. Judson, whose interest is now owned by his son, T. N. Judson. This is one of the best mills in Waterford Township; has four sets of buhrs and a set of rollers, run by water and steam, and has a capacity of 100 bushels of wheat per day. It is under the immediate control of our subject, and is doing a first-class business. Mr. Hipple married, in 1854, Miss Julia, sister of David Kinaman, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Three children were born to this union, viz., Ida, wife of Marshal Moore, Anna and Sadie. Mr. Hipple is a member of the A. O. U. W.; an Anti-Monopolist in politics.

OSCAR J. HITCHCOCK, harness maker, Waterford, was born in Erie, Erie Co., Penn., May 14, 1841, son of Julius Hitchcock. Our subject enlisted, in 1862, in Co. E, 83d P. V. I., 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac. After serving about one month, and while on the march from Falmouth to Warrenton Junction, in crossing a stream on a log he was so severely wounded that he received his discharge at Harrisburg for disability, and is now a pensioner. Mr. Hitchcock married, in 1881, Miss Sarah A., daughter of Robert Johnson, a native of Ireland. This union has been blessed with one child—Merril L. Mr. Hitchcock has worked at harness-making, principally, since the war. He was a good soldier, and is a good citizen; politically, he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM HOOD, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born Oct. 25, 1828, in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of George and Hannah Hood. The former was an early settler of Erie Co., coming in 1800 with his father, who received a large tract of land from the Government for services rendered as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The father of our subject raised a family of seven children, all living. He departed this life in 1874. Mr. William Hood, Jr., married Miss Dorcas King, a native of Erie Co., daughter of Robert King. This union has been blessed with three girls—Mary, wife of Charles Burns; Emma J., wife of Jacob Schlosser (whose biography appears in this work), and Harriet L., wife of John Smalley. Mr. Hood owns fifty acres of fine land near the station at Waterford, a part of the old homestead. He is descended from one of the first pioneers of Erie Co.; is Democratic in politics.

ADAM H. HOVIS, blacksmith, Waterford, was born in Venango Co., Pa., Feb. 27, 1821, son of Ernest Hovis, also a native of Pennsylvania, and a soldier of the war of 1812; he died in 1866; his widow, aged ninety-one, is still living. Our subject came to Erie Co. in 1859 with his family. He married, in 1843, Miss Polly Suttly. This union has been blessed with four children, viz.: Horace D.; Emma J., wife of C. J. Borah; Margret, widow of William Jurdan; and Mary E., wife of M. J. Blackwell. This wife dying, our subject married, in March, 1856, Miss Susan A. Wheeler, a native of New York. Mr. Hovis enlisted Oct. 1, 1862, in the 14th Penn. Cav., Co. I, and served in the Army of Western Virginia. He was captured by Mosely's guerrillas at Bolivar's Heights June 29, 1863, and remained prisoner over four months in Libby Prison. He acted as company blacksmith during his service, and was honorably discharged Oct. 1, 1865, having served three years. He is a member of the F. & A. M., G. A. R. and of the Andersonville Associative Survivors, of Chicago, Ill. He has worked at his trade forty-five years, and has accumulated some property. Politically, he is a Republican. His son, Horace D., enlisted in 1861 in the 111th P. V. I., 12th Corps, in the Shenandoah Valley; then the 11th and 12th Corps were consolidated, and called the 20th, by Gen. Hooker principally, and attached to the Western Army. Horace D. was in the battles of Cedar Mountain, White Sulphur Springs, second Bull Run, where he was injured by a wagon running over him; he went to the hospital, and after recovering joined his regiment at Harper's Ferry, where he was taken ill, and if he had not been cared for by an old lady (Mrs. Kennedy) would have died. He was discharged at Chester, Penn., on account of physical disability, but, in 1863, re-enlisted at Waterford in the same regiment and company, and participated in the battles of Resaca, Dallas, Pine Knob, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek and in Sherman's march to the sea. His regiment and the Sixtieth New York were the first to enter Atlanta. In June, 1865, he returned home, where he has since been chiefly engaged in blacksmithing. He married, in the fall of 1868, Miss Lucy O. Luke, a native of Ohio. This union has been blessed with six children, viz., Mary M., Alice H., Laura O., George A., Bertha and an infant. He is a member of the G. A. R. and I. O. O. F. He is a moral, upright citizen, and a first-class mechanic.

FRANCIS A. HOWE, carriage-maker, Waterford, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Sept. 14, 1838; son of G. A. H. Howe, also a native of New York State, who came to Erie Co. with his family in 1840, and has been manufacturing wagons since in Waterford. He has a family of three sons, all now living, our subject being the second child. He enlisted July 29, 1861, in the 83d P. V. I., serving in the 12th Corps, and was wounded in the battle of Gaines' Mill by a ball passing through his arm. It lodged in a testament he carried directly over his heart. He has the book and ball still in his possession. He was in the army eighteen months, and was discharged for physical disability in Dec., 1862. Mr. Howe married, Nov. 19, 1869, Miss Rebecca, daughter of P. E. Judson, of the Eagle Hotel, Waterford, Penn. One child, Florence, has blessed this union. Mrs. Howe is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Howe has worked at carriage-making for the past ten years; he owns a nice little home in Waterford. He is a pensioner, a member of the A. O. U. W., and G. A. R.; in politics, a Republican.

JULIUS A. HULL, farmer, contractor and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Waterford, was born in Summit Township, Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 2, 1841, eldest son of Lucians A. and Margret Hull, the latter a native of England. Lucians A. Hull, a prominent farmer, was born in Summit Township, Erie Co., Penn. where he reared a family of eight children. One of his sons, William M., enlisted in the 145th P. V. I., was wounded in the leg, and died during the war. Mr. Hull, Sr., died in 1880. Our subject was united in marriage, in 1862, with Sophia M., a native of Erie Co. and a daughter of Eli Osborn. Two children have blessed this union, viz., William H. and George J. Mr. Hull learned the carpenter's trade while young, and has worked more or less at it ever since. He moved to Waterford Township about 1860, and engaged in the saw mill business; has also been building extensively. He erected several of the township schools and a number of private residences. He attached a planing machine to his saw mill in 1871, and does quite an amount of custom work. He is the owner of ten acres of well-improved land, on which stands his residence and saw mill. He is a Democrat in politics.

DANIEL W. HUNT, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born March 12, 1834, on the farm he now lives on in Waterford Borough, son of Simeon and Aseneth (Tracy) Hunt. The latter is a daughter of Capt. John Tracy. Simeon Hunt, who was a native of Vermont, came to Erie Co. about 1814, and built and operated Waterford's only distillery. He was a prominent farmer; bought the farm now occupied by our subject from old Gen. Martin. He served as County Auditor several terms. He reared a family of six children, four now living; he departed this life April 2, 1874, his wife having preceded him in 1854. Our subject was married, Dec. 14, 1876, to Adeline, youngest daughter of Squire T. Trask, who was a native of Massachusetts, born in 1797, and when only two years old came to Erie Co. with his parents. He was a prominent farmer, and died Oct. 9, 1866. His widow resided with Mr. Hunt the last four years of her life and died Nov. 19, 1883. This union has been blessed with one child—Reed Tracy, born Feb. 6, 1880. During the late rebellion, our subject responded to Gov. Curtin's call for minute men. He owns 195 acres of fine land, well improved. He possesses one of the finest bred stallions, "Trifle," in this section of the country. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.; in politics, a Republican.

WASHINGTON JAMES, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Oswego Co., N. Y., Feb. 7, 1834, son of Able James, a native of Vermont, who came to Erie Co., where he was a prominent farmer, when our subject was about three years old. He raised a family of nine children, all now living. He died in 1872, aged eighty years. Washington James enlisted in 1861, in the 9th N. Y. Cavalry, serving in the Army of the Potomac under Buford. He participated in the siege of Yorktown, battles of Cedar Mountain, White Sulphur Springs, second Bull Run, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg and in several minor engagements. Whilst making a charge in 1863, he was hurt by a horse falling on him, from which injuries he has never fully recovered. He served three years; was engaged in over twenty conflicts with the enemy, and honorably discharged in the fall of 1864, and returned home. Mr. James married, October 17, 1872, Miss Clara, daughter of Sidna and Elizabeth Doe, natives of Erie Co., Penn., the former a manufacturer of oars, was a prominent man. They were parents of nine children, seven still living. Mr. Doe died in April, 1882; his widow resides in West Springfield, Erie Co., Penn. Mr. James owns a well-improved farm of fifty-eight acres. He is a member of the M. E. Church, is P. G. in the I. O. O. F., and is Officer of the Day, G. A. R. Politically he is a Republican.

WILLIAM JUDSON, retired merchant, Waterford, was born in Woodbury, Litchfield Co., Conn., Sept. 7, 1807; son of Seth Judson, who came with his family to Erie Co. in 1823; reared four children and departed this life in 1856, his widow following him in 1858. Our subject, who was the second child in this family, married, February 12, 1839, Clarissa King, daughter of Thomas and grand-daughter of Robert King, a prominent man and one of the first settlers in Waterford; he and a Mr. Black being probably the first to bring their families to Erie Co. Mr. King received from the Government, for making certain favorable negotiations with the Indians, 400 acres of land located in Waterford, known as King's Flats, now in Le Bouf Township. Mr. and Mrs. Judson have had five children, viz.: Mary, wife of S. Gustine Snowden, M. D., Franklin, Penn.; Alice F., wife of Charles Himrod, of Chicago; George D., who enlisted in Co. E, 88d Reg. P. V. I.; after a month's service, he lost his life in the second battle of Bull Run; Alfred, died in infancy; and Jessie K., wife of Robert Lambertson, Esq., of Franklin, Penn. Mrs. Judson and her daughters are members of the Episcopal Church. Our subject has served as Burgess of Waterford several terms; Trustee of the Waterford Academy since 1847; is owner of 480 acres and a fine residence in Waterford. Politically is a Republican.

WALTER L. KELLEY, druggist and Burgess, Waterford, born in Crawford Co., Penn., Dec. 5, 1855, son of J. L. Kelley, a native of Crawford Co. also. Our subject came to Waterford in 1879, where he engaged in the produce business two years, with M. H. Terry, when he became partner for one year. In 1880, he commenced business for himself, but in 1881, went into partnership with Dr. Barton in the drug business. This firm have built a fine brick block, on the corner of High and Third streets, Waterford, which is an honor to the township. They use the first floor for their large drug store, and a stock of boots and shoes. The Park Opera Hall occupies the second floor. Mr. Kelley married, April 5, 1879, Miss Hellen, daughter of Dr. I. Barton, and sister of our subject's partner. This union has been blessed with one child—Theodora, a bright little girl born October 29, 1881. Mr. Kelley is now serving his second term as Burgess of the village of Waterford. He is a member of the F. & A. M. also I. O. O. F.; he is one of the most enterprising young business men in this section.

DAVID KINAMAN, miller, P. O. Waterford, was born in Trumbull Co., Ohio, Sept. 21, 1846; son of David Kinaman, a native of Pennsylvania. Our subject enlisted in the U. S. Navy in 1864, and served on the gunboat Benton, on the Red and Mississippi Rivers, for fifteen months. He participated in the siege of Vicksburg, battle of Grand Gulf and in several other engagements. He held the position of Quarter Gunner; he was honorably discharged in 1865, and returned to Waterford, where he has since been engaged in the business of miller. He has been employed by Dewey & Williams as first miller for nearly seven years. Mr. Kinaman was united in marriage, in 1866, with Miss Mary M., daughter of P. E. Judson, both natives of Erie Co., Penn. This union has been blessed with one child—Grace. Mrs. Kinaman is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Kinaman is a sociable gentleman; a member of the G. A. R. and the A. O. U. W. Politically, a Republican.

ROBT. F. LATTIMORE, farmer and proprietor of saw mill, P. O. Waterford, Penn., was born on his present farm in Waterford Township, Erie Co., June 13, 1850; son of John and Hannah (Fretwell) Lattimore. The former was also born on subject's farm, Oct. 27, 1819, where he married March 4, 1847. John and Hannah reared a family of seven children (Robt. F. being second child), all now living. He died June 21, 1880, his wife preceding him on May 2, 1879. His grandfather Fretwell enlisted during the war of the rebellion, was taken prisoner at Shiloh, and died in the rebel prison at Macon, Ga., and was buried there in 1863. Our subject's great-grandfather, James Lattimore, came from Northumberland Co., this State, at an early date (about the year 1800) and he and family settled upon above farm, and were among the first to build a flouring and saw mill here. Robt. F. Lattimore received his education in the academy at Waterford. He was united in marriage, June 5, 1883, with Nell W. Kingsley, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Ann Kingsley, the latter a native of Connecticut; the former was born in Massachusetts. Mr. Lattimore owns a fine farm of 160 acres, part of the old homestead known as the Wexford Tract. He is of the fourth generation of Lattimores living on same farm; he is a Republican in politics.

W. G. LE FEVRE, editor, Waterford, was born Nov. 17, 1861, in Erie Co., Penn.; son of Jacob and Hettie A. (Given) Le Fevre, who were early residents of this county. He was permitted to attend the county schools and at Cambridgeboro, Crawford Co., until sixteen years old, when he began learning the printer's trade with D. P. Robbins, editor of the Cambridgeboro Index. Some time subsequent Mr. Robbins bought the Union City Times, and Mr. Le Fevre continued in his employ. Later he served a period with the Economy Printing Co., of Erie. He owned one-third interest in the Union City Times before April, 1883, when he bought the Waterford Leader, now a six column quarto 44x33 inches, with a circulation of 700, which he edits with marked ability for a young man of his age. He is well equipped for doing all kinds of job work on short notice. He is independent in politics, and devotes the columns of his worthy publication to the local news of his borough and surrounding country. He was married, Sept. 26, 1882, to Miss Jennie Shreve, the result being one child—Mary S.

LUCIUS LOCKWOOD, retired farmer, P. O. Waterford, Penn., was born in Springfield, Addison Co., Vt., June 1, 1817; eldest son of Henry Lockwood, whose father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Henry Lockwood died in 1861. Our subject was united in marriage Jan. 2, 1842, with Louisa Wattenpugh, a native of New York State. To this union have been born eleven children, viz.: Celestia, wife of Wm. Anderson; George R., a soldier in the 142d P. V. I. (lost his life at the battle of Gettysburg); John H.; Plumy E., wife of Benj. Anderson; Levi A.; Emeline V., wife of George Spaw; Luella M. (deceased); Lucretia D., wife of Jerome Post; Mary L., wife of Jeff. Post; George R. and Lucius B. Mrs. Lockwood died March 5, 1879, and our subject married for his second wife, Dec. 1, 1881, Miss Aurelia H. Boyd, a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Lockwood has long been a prominent farmer of Erie Co., to which he came in 1869; he owns 112 acres of fine land. In politics is a Republican.

ISAAC Y. LUNGER, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Montgomery Co., Penn., Jan. 5, 1822; youngest son of Jacob and Elizabeth Lunger, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Erie Co. in the fall of 1822. They raised a family of eleven children, seven now living. Jacob Lunger was a shoemaker by trade, and in those early days went from one farm house to another, making all the shoes the families wore; he accumulated enough in this way to buy a farm in Waterford Township. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Jacob died in 1858, his wife having preceded him in 1855. Our subject has been twice married; first, in 1843, to Elizabeth Burger, a native of Erie Co.; eight children were born to this union. Mrs. Lunger died in 1880, and in the fall of 1881, Mr. Lunger lost his oldest son—Charles—a promising boy, who died of congestion of the bowels. In 1881 Mr. Lunger married his second wife, Mrs. Anna Miller, widow of Greekson Miller. In 1857 Michael Daugler was convicted on charge of setting fire to Mr. Lunger's three barns, by which the latter lost $2,000; at the same time, a barn belonging to Adam Boyd, another to a Mr. Clark, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Mill Village, and a big pile of hemlock bark, the property of Wm. Bryans, of Le Bœuf, were destroyed by fire, evidence pointing to the same incendiary. Mr. Lunger now makes a specialty of raising shorthorn cattle, and is the owner of the celebrated bull "Senator," bred by George Barnett; is also owner of a well-improved farm of 170 acres; he educated all his children in the Waterford Academy; he is a representative man of his section; in politics is a Democrat.

HENRY LYTLE, grocer, Waterford, was born in Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 11, 1842; son of Andrew Lytle, also a native of Erie County, a tanner by trade, who engaged in farming and operated a tannery on his place for about thirty years; he was a prominent man in his day; he cleared a farm of 150 acres; he departed this life in the fall of 1876; his father was a soldier of the war of 1812, and his grandfather a captain in the Revolutionary war. Our subject enlisted in 1862 in Co. E, 83d P. V., and served in the 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac; he participated in the battles of second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, and was wounded in the right leg at the siege of Petersburg, Sept. 30, 1864; he received an honorable discharge July, 1865, at the close of the war. Since 1876 he has engaged in the grocery business at Waterford, Penn.; he was a good soldier, and is a good citizen.

JOHN MCGONNELL, apiarian, P. O. Waterford, was born in Sunbury, Penn., March 8, 1837, son of Patrick McGonnell, a native of Ireland, who came with his family to Erie Co., Penn., in 1838. He died in Illinois in 1857. His widow, a native of Crawford Co., Penn., is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Susan Sanny, at the ripe old age of seventy-seven. In 1863 our subject started an apiary. He manufactures and sells a large number of bee-hives, of his own invention, which have proved a success. He makes the raising of the Italian bee a specialty, and ships queen bees and large quantities of honey all over the United States. He is an expert apiarian, doing more to advance the bee culture by inventions, etc., than any man in Erie Co. Mr. McGonnell married, in the fall of 1873, Miss Emma, a daughter of Marvin St. John, an old settler of Erie Co. This union has been blessed with three children, two sons and a daughter. Mrs. McGonnell is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. McGonnell had a brother, Samuel, killed in 1862, in Virginia. He was a member of the 8th Ill. Cav. Our subject is a man of some property and ample means. Politically he is a Democrat.

TRUMAN MALLORY, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born April 23, 1825, in Le Bœuf Township, Erie Co., Penn., son of John and Annie Mallory, the latter a native of Erie Co., N. Y.; John Mallory was born in Erie Co., Penn. His father came to Erie as early as 1795; was a soldier of the Revolutionary war and one of the first settlers of the county. The father and mother of our subject are probably the oldest married couple of Erie Co. They are residing in Le Bœuf Township. Truman Mallory married, Dec. 31, 1846, Miss Lydia C. Phelps, a native of Waterford and a daughter of Theodore Phelps, one of the first settlers of Erie Co.; they have six children, viz.: Lewis E., Frederick E., Emma J., wife of S. D. Chase; John F., Sydney T. and Lydia A. Mr. and Mrs. Mallory are members of the Christian Church at Draketown. He owns a fine farm of about eighty acres. In 1852 his house and its contents were burned, by which he lost about $500. The fire was supposed to be the work of an enemy. In politics he is a staunch Republican.

THEODORE H. MARSH, lumber manufacturer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., March 14, 1835, son of James and Jane (Thompson) Marsh, mentioned in the biography of John Marsh. Mr. Marsh married, Feb. 2, 1862, Almena born April 21, 1835, daughter of Hiram and Julia (Grant) Sedgwick, of Waterford Township. By this union there are five children, viz.: Archie C., Julia J., Ernest A., Effie L. and Henry H. Archie married, Jan. 16, 1883, Emma Davis, born May 1, 1863, daughter of Robert and Sally (Colvin) Davis, of McKean Township. Mr. Marsh has a proprietary interest with Mr. William Marsh, of McKean Township, in an excellent steam saw mill, located on the McKean Township line, on the former's property, and which turns out large quantities of lumber, laths and shingles. They make a specialty of bill stuff, which is hauled to Waterford for shipment to Eastern markets. They have also a good trade in hemlock building lumber, which is hauled to Erie to order of builders in that city. Their custom sawing is large, the business is in a flourishing condition, and highly creditable to its enterprising proprietors. Mr. Marsh also engages in farming. He owns three fine properties in Waterford Township, two well improved and one timber lot, aggregating 181 acres. The home farm consists of sixty-eight acres, well stocked and with fine buildings thereon; it is a dairy farm, situated on the McKean Township line. His cattle are cross-bred with pure Holstein. Mr. Marsh is a Granger, and politically a Greenbacker.

JAMES M. MIDDLETON, retired farmer, Waterford, was born in County Down, Ireland, June 10, 1803, son of Samuel Middleton, who came to America about 1835, money being sent for the purpose by our subject and his brother John, who had emigrated to this country in 1828. Samuel Middleton died about 1838, and is buried in the Waterford Cemetery. James M. worked first in an iron ore bed in New York State, after coming to this country; then went to the lake shore and dug ore during summer seasons, and worked in the furnace during winters. Finally he came to Erie Co. and married, about 1833, Miss Mary A. Middleton. This union was blessed with one child, Samuel Robert, who lived until about seventeen years of age, when he was accidentally shot one 4th of July. Mrs. Middleton died in 1866, and Mr. Middleton married Miss Amanda Hannery, a native of Waterford. Our subject spent many years on a farm after coming to Erie Co., and amassed quite a fortune by hard work and economy. He sold his farm and moved to Waterford, where he has since lived a retired life. Mrs. Middleton is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Middleton is a liberal man, having paid much money toward the support of the church; he gave his brother John at one time fifty acres of excellent land; he has done much toward clearing and making Erie Co. what it is. Politically he is a Republican.

MRS. NANCY MOORE was born in Erie Co., Penn., April 29, 1806, daughter of David and Jane Boyd, natives of Pennsylvania, and a cousin of Charles C. Boyd. David Boyd was one of the first settlers of Erie Co., and a prominent farmer in his day. In 1824 our subject was married to John Moore, a native of Ireland, eldest child of James and Elizabeth Moore. They raised a family of ten children, viz.: George, William B., James B., Robert G., Wilson, Jane (wife of Henry Putnam), Eliza S., Nancy, Hannah G. (wife of J. W. Willard) and Mary E. (wife of S. E. Dewey). Nearly all the family are located near Waterford. Mr. Moore was a devoted Christian, a member of the U. P. Church. He departed this life Oct. 2, 1882, at the ripe old age of nearly eighty. He left a nice farm of 115 acres and a fine residence to his heirs. His widow is living in the residence with her married children and one grand-daughter, Sadie E. Moore. Mrs. Moore is a member of the U. P. Church. Her father was a soldier of the war of 1812, and a son served about nine months in Co. F, 169th P. V. I. in the late war of the rebellion.

THOMAS MOORE, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Ireland April 3, 1813, fourth son of James and Elizabeth Moore, who came to America with ten children in 1821. They were the parents of twelve children, six now living. James Moore and wife were earnest Christian Church members; the former was a prominent member of the U. P. Church at Waterford. He settled on a farm, on part of which the subject of this sketch now lives, cleared and paid for same, with the aid of his sons, and at his death left it to his children. He died in 1842, his widow following in 1845. Thomas Moore has been twice married, first to Martha, a native of Erie Co., and a daughter of Aaron Himrod, one of the early settlers of this county. To this union were born five children, two living—Ralph, who served in the 83d P. V. I. three years and three months, passing through all the hardships with his glorious regiment, and receiving an honorable discharge; and Sarah, wife of Mathew Campbell, whose sketch appears in this work. Pressly, who died in 1883, also served in the 83d P. V. I. Mrs. Moore departed this life Feb., 1869, and in Sept., 1863, Mr. Moore married Isabell Powell, a native of Crawford Co., Penn., and a daughter of Thomas Powell. Three children blessed this union, one dying in infancy. The surviving are Albert L. and Anna E. These, with Mr. and Mrs. Moore, are members of the U. P. Church. Mr. Moore owns 205 acres of fine land, part of the old homestead. All his children have attended the academy at Waterford. He is a prominent man of this section; a Republican in politics.

JAMES A. MOORE, proprietor of livery stable, Waterford, was born in Canada, May 8, 1838, and is a son of William Moore, who came to Erie Co., Penn., with his family about 1860, and is still a resident of Waterford Township. Our subject served nearly three years during the late war, enlisting in 1862 in the 83d P. V. I., 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Antietam, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Wilderness, the siege of Petersburg and in several other engagements of minor importance. He received an honorable discharge as First Lieutenant. Mr. Moore has been engaged in the livery business for about seven years; is now conducting the principal stable in Waterford, and has the mail route between Waterford and Mill Village, running a hack daily. He was married, June, 1879, to Margaret Irwine, a native of Centre Co., Penn., by whom there is one child—Alice E. Our subject is a member of the A. O. U. Y., July 22, 1812; son of John and Lucy Ross; the former born in Vermont, was a soldier in the war of 1812; the latter was a native of Connecticut. They died in Erie City about 1845. Our subject married in 1836, Sarah Ann Wilson, of Whitehall, N. Y. They had a family of six children, five now living. Mr. Ross came to Erie Co., Penn., in 1838. Mrs. Ross died in 1865, and in 1868 Mr. Ross married Miss Rachel, daughter of John Alcon, both natives of Venango Co., Penn. Mr. Ross has always engaged in farming, is a self-made man, and has accumulated what he has by industry and economy. He was Captain in the militia in an early day, and has served as Collector one term. He received a sun-stroke in June, 1873, from the effects of which he has never recovered entirely; he is an honest, intelligent citizen. In politics he is a Republican. L. M. Ross, our subject's oldest son, was born Sept. 2, 1841, in McKean Township, Erie Co., Penn. He married Jan. 13, 1863, Miss Nancy J., daughter of Isaac Y. Lunger, a native of Pennsylvania, and one of the old settlers of Erie Co. This union has been blessed with two children, viz.: Hattie E. and Fred E. Mr. Ross is the owner of seventy-five acres of well-improved land; is connected with George H. Barnett, and doing an extensive business in hay pressing and threshing; he and his wife are members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Ross has served as School Director six years, and Assessor one term. Is a member of the A. O. U. W. He believes strongly in prohibition, and always votes the Republican ticket.

JACOB SCHLOSSER, barber and tobacco dealer, Waterford, was born in Syracuse, N. Y., May 7, 1853; second son of Charles and Kate Schlosser, natives of Germany, who have lived in this country about forty years. They raised a family of five sons, all living. Our subject came to Erie Co., in May, 1875, and settled in Waterford Township May 1, 1876, where he has since engaged in business. Mr. Schlosser married Oct. 2, 1879, Miss Emma J., daughter of William Hood, an old settler of Erie Co. This union has been blessed with two children—Walter H. and Charles W. Mr. Schlosser not only runs a first-class barber shop, but keeps in connection with same a cigar store, where he sells the best tobacco and cigars manufactured; he is a fine workman and gives satisfaction to all; his wife is a member of the Episcopal Church; he is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W.; in politics is Independent.

HIRAM SEDGWICK, retired farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Rensselaer Co., N. Y., July 16, 1803; eldest son of Aaron and Betsy Sedgwick, former a native of Massachusetts and brother of Louis Sedgwick, whose biography appears in this work. Our subject came to Erie Co. with his parents in 1825; he married Jan. 28, 1830, Miss Julia A., eighth child of Benjamin Grant, a native of Connecticut, who came to Erie Co. in 1800.

with his wife and three children; he worked at an early day at blacksmithing and reared a family of ten children, five now living; he served one term as Poor Director. Two of his sons, Benjamin and William C. were soldiers in the war of 1812; he died in 1849, aged eighty years. Seven children were born to this union, five now living, viz.: Solymn, who received an honorable discharge, after serving nine months in the Army of the Potomac, during the late war; Almena, wife of Hardin Marsh; Bertram, Louisa, Effie; Arthur died in his eighteenth year. Mr. and Mrs. Sedgwick are among the landmarks of the county, having lived together more than fifty years. The latter has been for over ten years an invalid. The former spends many hours of his old age fishing, a recreation he is very fond of; he is the owner of his father's homestead, consisting of 108 acres of well-improved land.

LEWIS SEDGWICK, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Aug. 28, 1813; son of Aaron Sedgwick, a native of Massachusetts, who came to Erie Co. with his family in 1825; he raised ten children, six now living; was a prominent farmer and an honest man; he died in Waterford Township, in 1854. Our subject married, Aug. 15, 1839, Emily H., born in Erie Co., and daughter of Reuben Sharp, a soldier of the war of 1812, a native of England, and an old settler of Erie County. This union has been blessed with four children, three surviving, viz., Elmira M., wife of Wilson Marsh; Eugene V., who lost his life at the battle of Cedar Mountain (he was Second Sergeant in the 111th P. V. I.); Jermaine B. and Claude D. Waterford, was born Oct. 19, 1850, on the farm he now occupies in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn.; son of John and Louisa (Rockwell) Sedgwick, latter a daughter of Jonathan Rockwell, one of the first settlers of Erie Co. Jonathan Rockwell was a prominent farmer, an early settler of Waterford Township. He died March 4, 1875. Louisa Sedgwick died March 17, 1884. Our subject was married Dec. 21, 1876, to Miss Ella M. Smith, a native of Waterford, and daughter of Charles Smith. This union has been blessed with three children, viz.: Bessie, Wilmer C. and Roy. Mrs. Sedgwick departed this life Oct. 28, 1881. Mr. Sedgwick is an enterprising young man. Owns 140 acres of well improved land, a half mile from Waterford, and one of the finest residences in the township. Is a member of the F. & A. M.; Republican in politics.

REUBEN SHARPE, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born July 16, 1822, on his present farm in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn.; second son of Reuben and Louisa Sharpe, the latter a native of Vermont. Reuben Sharpe, Sr., an early settler of Erie Co., was born in North Walsham, Eng.; was in the U. S. Navy in the war of 1812 under Com. McDonough, and was wounded at the battle of Plattsburg. In early life he was a sailor; he settled on the farm now occupied by his son in 1816, and reared a family of five children. He died in 1851, his widow following him in 1875. Our subject enlisted, first for three months' service in McLane's Regiment of Erie; then, in Aug., 1861, he re-enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., Co. E, and served in the 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac. He took part in the seven days' fight at Yorktown, Sharpsburg, Gettysburg, and in a skirmish at North Ann River was wounded in the right foot. He also participated in the battles of the Wilderness, Chancellorsville, and many minor engagements. He was honorably discharged in 1865 at the close of the war. Our subject married, in 1866, Mrs. Emma A., widow of Richard Cross, who was a Captain in the 111th P. V. I., served about one year, and died in the fall of 1865. Mrs. Sharpe has two children by her first husband—Louis G. and Katie B. Mr. Sharpe owns forty acres of well-improved land, a part of his father's old homestead. He is a member of the F. & A. M., and the G. A. R.; he receives a pension from the Government.

GEORGE SMITH, retired farmer, Waterford, was born in Erie Co., Penn., Nov. 21, 1807; son of James Smith, a native of Ireland, who came here about 1803. He raised a family of eight children, our subject being the fourth child, three now surviving. He took great interest in church matters; was instrumental in establishing a U. P. Church in Waterford, of which he was a member. He died about 1829; his widow survived him nineteen years. Our subject married, in 1831, Miss Mary, daughter of John Barnes, of Luzerne Co., Penn. This union has been blessed with seven children, viz.: Robert R., who enlisted in the 83d P. V. I., and lost his life at the battle of Gaines' Mill, June 27, 1862; Sidney, wife of John Lytle; Nancy, widow of Aaron Himrod (whose biography appears elsewhere in this volume); Elizabeth, wife of Robert Lytle; James N.; Mary, wife of William Moore; and George A. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the U. P. Church. The former in early life worked at the carpenter's trade, but later was a farmer. He accumulated a nice property, and moved to Waterford about 1873, where he has since lived a retired life. He is one of the oldest and most respected citizens born in Waterford now living. Politically he is a Republican.

WILLIAM STANCLIFF, farmer and painter, P. O. Waterford, was born in Erie Co., N. Y., March 12, 1821; third son of Timothy Stancliff, who drove his team and brought his family here in 1836. Timothy was drafted by the British in the war of 1812. He reared a family of twelve children, nine now living; he was a prominent farmer, and died when ninety-three years of age. His father was a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject married, Dec. 31, 1843, Miss Delia Whitney, a native of Clinton Co., N. Y., daughter of Leonard Whitney. Eleven children were born to this union, six now living—Leonard T., Winfield W., Olan D., Eva A. (wife of Harry S. Crandle), George E. and Mertie E. Mr. Stancliff has worked at painting for over forty-five years. He has a well-improved farm of forty-five acres; is a member of the I. O. O. F.; in politics, a Republican.

ALDEN STANCLIFF, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Collins, Erie Co., N. Y., Aug. 30, 1823, third child of Thomas and Mary P. Stancliff, the former of whom, a native of Canada, came with his family to Erie Co. in 1835. They were the parents of six children, five now living. Thomas Stancliff was a prominent farmer. He was a member of the M. E. Church, and took a great interest in church matters. His father was a soldier of the Revolutionary war. Thomas Stancliff died in May, 1848; his widow, aged eighty-six, is living with her daughter, Lorina Stancliff. Our subject is a painter by trade and also worked for many years manufacturing handles. He married, in 1846, Miss Emily Brooks, a native of Collins, Erie Co., N. Y., and daughter of Enoch Brooks. This union has been blessed with four children, three now living—Emma A., wife of M. B. Vancese; Jackson, and Minnie M., wife of H. C. Stackhouse. Mr. Stancliff owns twenty acres of well-improved land. He has been Road Commissioner and School Director. Politically he is a Republican.

AMOS S. STAFFORD, farmer and cooper, P. O. Waterford, was born in Peru, Clinton Co., N. Y., June 6, 1811, son of Edward Stafford, a cooper by trade, and a soldier in the war of 1812, who came with his family to Erie Co. in 1835. Four of his eleven children are living. He belonged to the M. E. Church, in which he took special interest; he died March 3, 1861. Our subject married, in the fall of 1833, Miss Martha M., daughter of Aaron Sedgwick, a pioneer of this county, and a sister of Lewis Sedgwick, whose biography appears in this volume. This union has been blessed by the birth of Andrew W. and Clara, wife of O. D. Rider. Andrew W. enlisted in the 111th P. V. I. and served three years and three months in the Army of the Potomac, participating in the battles of Cedar Mountain, South Mountain, second Bull Run, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg and several minor engagements. He was honorably discharged at the close of the war, and returned home. Mr. Stafford is politically a Republican.

FRANKLIN STOUT, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born February 25, 1839, at White Haven, Penn., son of Thomas Stout, a native of Easton, Penn., and a nephew of the celebrated Dr. Gross, of Philadelphia; he died in 1869. Our subject at an early date engaged in lumbering. He enlisted Sept., 1861, in the 67th P. V. I., serving in the Sixth Corps, Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Opequan, Cedar Creek, Fisher's Hill, Winchester (where he was taken prisoner, remaining forty days in Belle Isle, when he was exchanged), Wilderness, Petersburg and capture of Lee's army. After nearly four years' service, he was honorably discharged in Aug., 1865. In 1867 he married Miss Helen S., daughter of Chaney Moore, now deceased. Mr. Stout owns 140 acres of improved land, and keeps good stock, and has in connection a small dairy. Mr. Stout is a member of the A. O. U. W.; in politics, a Republican.

FRANCIS D. STRONG, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born on his present farm in Waterford Township, Erie Co., Penn., April 4, 1814, and is first son of Martin and Sarah Strong, both natives of Connecticut. Martin Strong, a surveyor, came on foot and alone from Connecticut in 1795, bringing his instruments with him. He was a Captain in the State militia, and worked at his profession the greater part of his life. He surveyed much of the land southeast of the Susquehanna River, also for the Holland & Population Co., besides doing a good local business in same line. He was twice married, first to Miss Hannah Trask; they reared one daughter only to die when eighteen years of age. His second marriage, in 1811, was with Miss Sarah, daughter of Francis Drake; she was a native of Connecticut. This union was blessed with five children, three now living—Sarah Ann, widow of B. B. Vincent (deceased); Francis D. and Martin, who occupy the old farm. The deceased are Lydia Webb, wife of Col. T. B. Vincent; Dr. Laudaff. Mr. Strong accumulated a large property; he died March 24, 1858; his widow survived him until January, 1867.

JOHN TAYLOR, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, Feb. 24, 1831, and is a son of John Taylor, Sr. His parents died when he was small. Our subject came to America July 4, 1852; he earned the money and brought three of his sisters and a brother to America. He first worked on public works and then on a farm for seven years, then bought a farm for himself, and as the results of his hard labor and economy has now 111 acres of fine improved land. Mr. Taylor married in 1857, Miss Sarah, daughter of John Gillespie. She was also a native of County Armagh, Ireland. Five children have been born to this union, viz.: Lizzie M., John Jr., Triphena L., Samuel and Clyde. Mr. Taylor and his wife attend the M. E. Church. John Taylor entered the service in 1865 in the 98th P. V. I., serving under Gen. Wright, 6th Corps, Army of the Potomac, and remained until the capture of Lee's army. He was honorably discharged June 22, 1865. He is an adherent of the Democratic party.

C. C. TAYLOR, Waterford, was born near Cooperstown, Otsego Co., N. Y., July 9, 1832, and moved to Erie Co., Penn., with his parents in 1835; his father, John C. Taylor, was a blacksmith by trade; he took a deep interest in church matters, and in the latter part of his life was a preacher in the M. E. Church. He died at Waterford in July, 1864, and Mercy Taylor, his widow and mother of C. C., followed him in 1866. The subject of this brief sketch was thrown upon his own resources in early life, and his opportunities for acquiring an education were limited. He, however, acquired an academic course. In 1851, he married Miss Lovina J. McGee, daughter of John J. McGee, one of the early settlers of Elk Creek Township, moved to Mt. Pleasant, Penn., and commenced teaching school. Subsequent to this he attended Mt. Pleasant College, and graduated at Iron City College in 1859. He taught in Mt. Pleasant until 1864, when he returned to Erie Co., and engaged in mercantile business. In 1867 he took charge of the Wellsburg schools, and in 1869 was elected Superintendent of the public schools of Erie Co., and served three consecutive terms, or nine years in that capacity. Since voluntarily resigning the Superintendency in 1878, Mr. Taylor has been engaged in the introduction of school and college text books. He has succeeded in acquiring a very pleasant home. He now owns one of the best farms in Waterford Township, and his residence is perhaps not excelled in the county.

JOSEPH THOMAS, retired farmer and Collector of Taxes, Waterford, was born in Erie Co., N. Y., July 20, 1812, son of Lewis Thomas also a native of New York State, who moved to Erie Co., Penn., in 1818. He raised a family of eleven children, nine now living. Our subject was the oldest child, and married in 1834, Miss Mary, daughter of Aaron Sedgwick, an old settler of Erie Co. Seven children have been born to this union, viz.: Helen, wife of William Sharp; Charles A.; Cynthia, wife of Josiah P. Osburna; Franceua, wife of Ervin Port; Betsy, widow of Frank Gardner; Ella M., wife of George Comer, and Maggie, wife of Hanford B. Skinner. All are living near their parents, who have eighteen grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Mr. Thomas when a young man worked at carpentering, but settled down to farming, in which he has been successful. He moved to Waterford in 1873, where he owns a fine residence and other village property. He is a self-made man, has educated all his children well and accumulated a large property. He has served his township as Assessor, and is now Tax Collector of the Borough of Waterford. Politically he is a Republican.

E. M. THURBER, proprietor of cheese factory, Waterford, was born in Franklinville, N. Y., Oct. 22, 1855; son of David and Adaline Thurber. In early life our subject taught school, but in 1876 moved to Waterford, where he bought an interest in a cheese factory, established in 1868, now the largest in the township, and one of the largest and best in Erie Co. The milk of 500 cows is consumed, and as the cheese is a superior article, the factory is well patronized, and its products bring the highest market values. It is under the immediate supervision of Mr. Thurber. Our subject married, March, 1876, Miss Rebecca McAfee, a native of Canada. Three children have been born to this union, viz.: Ray, Edith and Addie. Mr. Thurber owns a nice residence in Waterford. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W.; in politics a Republican. His grandfather was a soldier in the war of 1812.

WILLIAM VAN ANDEN, farmer, P. O. Waterford, was born in Schaghticoke Valley, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Jan. 2, 1828, son of Barney and Clarisa Van Anden, natives of Vermont. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1837; the latter departed this life in 1868. Our subject came to Erie Co., in 1852, and engaged in mercantile business; was also postmaster at Wattsburg for about eight years. He married for his first wife, Sept. 27, 1854, Miss Mary J., daughter of D. D. White, of Wattsburg. This union was blessed with three children, all now deceased. His wife died May 4, 1874, and Nov. 21, 1876, Mr. Van Anden married Mrs. Maryett, widow of Philip Akerly (who was raised in Erie Co. but died in Ohio), and daughter of John L. Way. Both grandparents were among the first settlers of Erie Co. Mr. Van Anden owns a splendid farm of ninety acres, with fine buildings. He is raising the Holstein grade of cattle, of which he intends to make a specialty; was Adjuster for the Lycoming Insurance Co., Muncy, Penn., for many years. Is a member of the K. of H. In politics is a staunch Republican.

HENRY R. VINCENT, retired farmer, Waterford, was born Jan. 28, 1811, in the Village of Waterford, Erie Co., Penn.; son of the Hon. John Vincent, who was born in Essex Co. N. J., in 1772. The latter was a son of Cornelius Vincent, a native of New Jersey, born April 15, 1737, and grandson of John Vincent, also a native of New Jersey, born Jan. 26, 1709, and great-grandson of Levi Vincent, who was born in France, April 10, 1676. The Hon. John Vincent came to Erie Co. about the 1st of June, 1797, and married Miss Nancy Boyd, in 1802. One child blessed this union—B. B. Vincent, a prominent business man in Erie for several years, now deceased. Mrs. (Boyd) Vincent died March, 1806, and Feb. 1, 1807, Mr. Vincent married Miss Nancy Anderson. Five children were born to this union, viz.: John A., Pheba W., Henry R., Cornelius H. and James P. He came to Erie Co. from Northumberland Co., Penn., on foot, in company with Wilson Smith, both carrying knapsacks on their backs all the way. He was appointed one of the Associate Judges in 1805, by Thomas McKean, then Governor of Pennsylvania, and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Vincent served with distinction for about thirty-three years, until change of State Constitution in 1838. As a singular coincidence, his companion, Wilson Smith, was appointed to a like position, and served until 1819, when he was elected to State Senate. The father of our subject, a prominent man of Erie in his day, departed this life Feb., 1860.

JAMES WALKER, Waterford, was born in New London, Conn., Oct. 25, 1795, came to Erie Co., Penn., in 1816, and settled in Waterford Township the year following. In 1826, he married Sarah Ross of Meadville, Penn. This couple were the parents of eight children, six of whom are still living. Three of these, Joseph, Judson and Nancy M. reside in Waterford Township. In about 1850, a plank road was built from Waterford to Erie and he constructed over a mile of the work. During the construction of the P. & E. R. R., he and his sons built about three miles of said road. He was a son of Revolutionary stock, his father, Joseph Walker, having served in that memorable war, on the staff of Gen. La Fayette, and assisted in carrying that officer from the field when wounded at the battle of Brandywine. He was himself a soldier in the war of 1812, for which he received a pension. He was the oldest man in Waterford Township at the time of his death, which occurred Dec. 30, 1883, in his eighty-ninth year. He was a member of the Christian Church for over sixty-five years. His wife was also connected with the same until her death, which occurred March 30, 1866. They were among the pioneers of the county, and suffered all the hardships and privations incident to the settling of a new and densely wooded country. Politically, the family are all Republicans.

CELIA WAY, widow of John L. Way, Waterford, was born June 13, 1811, in Connecticut, daughter of Jason and Submit Phelps, natives of the New England States. The former brought his wife and two children, and drove a yoke of oxen and a horse from Connecticut, in 1815; he reared three children, two now living; he died in 1858. Our subject married in 1833, John L. Way, a native of Erie Co., Penn., and son of John Way, one of the first settlers of Erie Co. They had born to them eight children, five now living: Maryette, wife of William Van Anden, whose biography appears in this work; Jason P.; Annette C., wife of Joseph Lander; Locke J. and True D. Mr. Way was a prominent business man and accumulated considerable property. He held the office of Justice of the Peace; died June 22, 1880. Our subject is living in Waterford with her youngest son.

ISAAC M. WHITE, Jeweler, Borough Clerk and Treasurer, Waterford borough, was born in Dummerston, Windham Co., Vt., Nov. 25, 1802; fourth son of Asa White, who was a native of Massachusetts, and came with his family of ten children to Erie in 1823. Only two of this family are now living. Asa White and wife lived with our subject the last fifteen years of their lives, both dying in this county; the former in 1855, at the age of eighty-five, the latter in 1857 at the age of eighty-seven. Isaac M. White learned the jewelry trade in New Hampshire and came to Waterford in 1822, and engaged in the business which he has since continued, and he has now the leading jewelry store here. After remaining a year in Waterford, he returned to Vermont for his parents and the remainder of the family. He rode on horseback the entire distance, 600 miles, returning with the family with a team in Feb., 1823. He was united in marriage, Nov. 2, 1824, with Rosauna, daughter of John Lenox, a native of Ireland, who settled here in 1796. Of the children born to this union, Horace L. and William C. survive. Besides rearing their own family this couple have raised and educated five girls, all married but one. Mrs. White is a member of the United Presbyterian Church. Our subject owns twelve acres of land near the borough and a residence and jewelry store in Waterford. There is only one person living here now that was married when he came, the mother of the Hon. Judge Vincent, of Erie. Mr. White is one of the borough's prominent citizens, and is noted for his liberality and honesty. He served as Justice of the Peace from 1845 to 1850; forty-three consecutive years as Borough Clerk and Treasurer; was one of the first Councilmen; for twelve years, Trustee of the Academy which was built the year he came here, and since 1865 has been Secretary and Treasurer of Waterford Cemetery Association. He is a member of the F. & A. M., and P. G. in the I. O. O. F. He is a Democrat in politics and cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson.

HENRY R. WHITTELEY, Waterford, was born April 26, 1816, in Litchfield, Litchfield Co., Conn.; was married July 6, 1837, to Mary A. Parmelee of Bethlehem, Conn. (Her mother was a sister to Amos Judson, one of the earliest settlers in Waterford, Erie Co., Penn.) They were the parents of eight children, of whom Ann Maria, married to A. W. Tracy, residing in Kansas; Edward L., a lawyer, residing in Erie, Penn. (married); Henrietta, married to Hiram Rice, Waterford, Penn., were born in Bethlehem, Conn.; Edith, Wilbur, Lincoln and Alice were born in Waterford, Penn., and still reside there (except Lincoln who is in Florence, Neb., at this date, Oct., 1883). Henry R. was the son of Henry Whittelsey, who was born in Litchfield, Conn., May 18, 1790, married July 20, 1815, to Abby Rea, who was born Dec. 6, 1790, and died in New York, Nov. 1, 1860. Henry died in New York, April 26, 1879. His father was Roger N. Whittelsey, who was a resident of Litchfield, Conn., and a direct descendant of John Whittelsey, the only person of the name who ever emigrated to the United States. He came from Cambridgeshire, England, about 1650, and settled in Saybrook, Conn., and died April 15, 1704. Henry R. Whittelsey came from Bethlehem, Conn., to Waterford, Erie Co., April 4, 1850; in 1858 he was elected Justice of the Peace, which office he held ten years; he served as Town Clerk and Treasurer during the war, was Assessor of the town; Mercantile Appraiser of the county; School Director six years; Township Auditor six years; and frequently on the Election Board of the town. At present, 1883, he resides about two miles north of Waterford borough on a farm.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP.

R. H. ABBEY, farmer, stock raising a specialty, P. O. Corry, was born on the homestead farm where he now resides Sept. 17, 1840, son of Herman and Jane (Smith) Abbey. The latter, a daughter of Robert Smith, an early pioneer of this county, was born in 1812 in Erie Co., and was of Irish extraction. Herman Abbey, of Welsh descent, was born in 1804 in Chenango Co., N. Y.; came to Warren Co. in 1828, and settled in this township in 1830, clearing his land. He had eight children, seven living, viz., Rev. Alexander S., Jane A. (wife of Dr. Humphrey), A. E. (wife of J. H. Carr), Dr. O. L., R. H., Josephine E. (wife of G. W. Spencer), Helen M. and E. Blanche G. (deceased). Mr. Abbey departed this life in March, 1871; his wife in April, 1879, each in their sixty-seventh year. Our subject owns 150 acres of land on the old turnpike, running from Sugar Grove to Waterford, three miles northwest of Corry. His sister H. M. is his housekeeper, and they have always resided on the homestead. Mr. Abbey is a staunch Democrat in politics.

WILLIAM BRIGHTMAN, farmer and carpenter, P. O. Corry, was born in Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., July 12, 1826, to William and Hannah (Lamb) Brightman, natives the former of Rhode Island, the latter of Connecticut. The father was born April 8, 1785; emigrated to Madison Co., N. Y., in 1807, and to Erie Co., Penn., in 1832, settling where William Brightman, the son, now lives. Here he experienced many hardships, that must necessarily fall upon the settlers of that day, but they were, perhaps, not so irksome to him as many others, owing to his general pleasant manners and general disposition to be content with his surroundings. He made two round trips from Madison Co., N. Y., to Erie Co. before moving his family, his mode of travel being horseback. A certificate of membership to the Baptist Church, dated 1807, now in possession of his son, William, tells his early religious proclivities. In 1821, he was licensed to exhort in the M. E. Church, and in 1832 was licensed to preach. This he continued as long as age and health would permit. He worked during the week, and on Sundays preached and taught in the Sunday schools in various parts of the country. In all his transactions he never forgot his pledge to the Ruler of the universe, and died in the full triumph of his faith, and the good he did will only be known in that day when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed. He was the father of eight children—Henry, Silence, Erastus, Hannah, Sallie, Polly, William, and one deceased in infancy. He died Aug. 10, 1867, and his home, which was a rendezvous for preachers and church people, will not soon be forgotten. His wife died Aug. 7, 1861. In this volume can be found a portrait of that noble-hearted soul, William Brightman. Our subject was brought up on the farm, and his education consisted not only of mental but spiritual training. He was married, March 2, 1853, to Cornelia A. Steadman, born March 18, 1833, in Pennsylvania, and died March 10, 1863, the result being two children, deceased. Was again married to Rosina A. Carson, born Sept. 20, 1840, in Wayne Township, this county, and by this union have William McClellan and Louisa A., to both of whom they have given a good education. Mr. Brightman is the owner of 180 acres of finely-improved land, and is making a specialty of growing grapes. He has been for over forty years an active member of the M. E. Church, having been at times of no short duration Steward and Recording Steward, and at present is Class Leader in the First M. E. Church of Corry.

JAMES CARSON, retired farmer, P. O. Wayne, was born in this township July 21, 1813; son of William and Jane (Kincaide) Carson, who settled in this township in 1800, and reared eleven of their family of thirteen children; the only members of this family now living are James, the eighth, and Absalom, the youngest, who is a resident of Waterford. Our subject has been twice married; on the first occasion to Marina Turner, who is deceased. His second marriage was with Mrs. Holmes, widow of Reuben Holmes, and a daughter of William and Sidney (Ellison) Gifford. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford had a family of eleven children, eight growing to manhood and womanhood, and of whom five are now living. Of this family, Martin V. and James E. participated in the late war. The former was an officer, and served three years and three months; the latter served two years; was wounded, and died from the effects. Another son fitted himself for the ministry in the M. E. Church. Mr. Carson has been invalided by consumption since 1842. He is a member of the M. E. Church, in which he has been Trustee; his wife is connected with the Presbyterian denomination.

R. T. CLINGENSMITH, farmer, P. O. Corry, was born June 17, 1843, in Mercer Co., Penn., son of R. T., Sr., and Jane (Carr) Clingensmith. Our subject was united in marriage, Dec. 27, 1868, with Elizabeth Mitchell, born Dec. 17, 1833, in Peterhead, Scotland, daughter of William and Isabel (Thom) Mitchell. William Thom was born in 1792; was a sailor for thirty years, and was twice shipwrecked, once off the coast of Ireland and another time off Greenland. His wife was born in 1797, died in 1883; he died in 1876; they came to this county in 1840. They were the parents of five children, three now living—Catherine Ann, wife of Philo Patterson; Jane, wife of L. D. Clark, and Elizabeth. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Clingensmith was born one child, now living—Jennie Belle. They own seventy-eight acres of land in this township where they have resided for ten years. Mrs. Clingensmith is a member of the M. E. Church as were her parents before her. Mr. Clingensmith is a Republican in politics.

HIRAM CROWELL, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Hamilton, Madison Co., N. Y., May 9, 1819, a son of Abraham and Betsy (Wheeler) Crowell, who were the parents of thirteen children, six living. Abraham Crowell was born in 1789, and died in 1852; his widow died in 1880, aged eighty years. Our subject was the fourth in this family; he was married, in 1844, to Esther Eagles, born in Columbus, Chenango Co., N. Y., May 9, 1819. Her father, Francis Eagles, born in 1778, had a family of eleven children, three living; his wife, Mary (Low) Eagles, died April, 1851, aged sixty-seven. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Crowell has been blessed by the birth of one child—Rensler J., born in 1851, married to Retta (McCray), by whom he has had two children—twin girls—Mertie and Maud, born March 31, 1879. Our subject and wife have made all they now own by industry and frugality; they began with only one horse and a cow, and now have 100 acres of land. They make a specialty of grape culture and have over 1,000 vines. Mr. Crowell was a cooper by trade, his wife a tailoress. They have been members of the M. E. Church thirty years, and he has been Steward and a Class Leader. He is a Republican, politically.

CALVIN DUTTON, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Columbus, Penn., was born in New Hampshire, Dec. 22, 1802; son of Richard and Sarah (Grant) Dutton, the former of whom was twice married, having nine children (two surviving) by his first wife, and five by his second. Our subject was married, Dec. 26, 1832, in Sherburne, N. Y., to Lucina Babcock, born in Sherburne, March 17, 1808, daughter of John R. and Mercy Whitford Babcock. To this union were born three children—Hiram E., Frank and Hollis W. In 1832 our subject moved with his family to Erie Co., Penn., having purchased 300 acres of land there. Hiram E. and Hollis W. have owned a shingle mill located on the farm since 1872, and manufacture from 15,000 to 20,000 shingles per day. Hiram E. was married in Columbus, Penn., Oct. 24, 1860, to Anna L. Day, born in Genesee Co., Mich., March 23, 1841, daughter of Henry M. and Sallie C. (Abbey) Day (deceased), natives of New York State. Our subject owns 120 acres in Erie Co., and thirty-five acres in Warren Co., Penn. He has acted as School Director three terms, Road Commissioner and Pathmaster six years. In politics he is a Democrat.

NATHAN B. GREELEY, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Amherst, N. H., June 12, 1812, son of Zaccheus and Mary (Woodburn) Greeley (both deceased), also natives of Amherst and of English extraction. They settled in this township nearly sixty years ago, and took up 400 acres of land, which our subject now owns and resides on. Nathan B. was twice married—on first occasion, in 1838, to Sallie Ann Hines born in 1816, died in 1856. By this union were born seven children—Victoria, wife of George King; Mary (deceased), wife of M. Wickwin; Esther, wife of Peter S. Lewis; Horace, Woodburn, Oscar and Clarence D. The second union was in Dec., 1856, with Rhuemmy Conn, born in Freehold, Penn., March 31, 1836, daughter of John and Miriam (Pierce) Conn, and by this union were born Eugenia, wife of Sanford Dibble; Edward Burt, married, Aug. 25, 1883, to Emma Drake; Carrie Lewis, Ina May, Jane Sylvania.

H. D. HILLS, farmer, carpenter and joiner, P. O. Corry, was born in Erie Co., Penn., Jan. 11, 1843; son of a local minister. Our subject was twice married; on the first occasion to Malvina A. Hills, who departed this life July 30, 1874; his second marriage was with Mary Van Campin, a native of Alleghany Co. N. Y.; she departed this life Nov. 30, 1877, leaving one daughter—Mary F. Mr. Hills served two years and nine months in the late war, and was confined in the Andersonville Prison for four months. He is a member of the G. A. R. Our subject owns 100 acres of land in Wayne Township, and has served as Assessor and Tax Collector for two years. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Patrons of Husbandry and of the Republican party.

ALFRED JENNINGS, farming and dairying, P. O. Corry, was born Feb. 27, 1833, at Walsgrave, Warwickshire, England; son of Josiah (deceased) and Arrabella (Bradbury) Jennings, the former of whom was born Oct. 26, 1808, and the latter Nov. 19, 1813; they were married in 1831; had three children—Alfred, John (deceased) and Elizabeth (deceased). Mrs. Elizabeth (Wickstead) Jennings was our subject's grandmother. Alfred Jennings was married, in England, Sept. 3, 1860, to Mary Collis, born there March 16, 1833; daughter of John and Sarah (Liggins) Collis (both deceased), the former of whom was born on Feb. 16, 1806, died in 1869; the latter was a daughter of J. and Ann (Bunney) Liggins, born Feb. 21, 1806, and died April 25, 1873. Two children were born to this union—Benjamin Collis, dying Sept. 16, 1882, and Mary Collis. Mr. Jennings emigrated to Canada in 1863, and came from thence to this county in 1865. He owns a well-improved farm located about a mile and a half north of Corry. He has made all he owns by hard work and economy, and is a representative man of Wayne Township.

HARRIS JOHNSON, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Columbus, Chenango Co., N. Y., Dec. 25, 1821, son of Jabez and Margaret (Richards) Johnson, both deceased, natives of New York State, and who settled in Columbus, Warren Co., in 1823. Our subject settled in Erie Co. in 1846 on his present farm, and was married to Edna Baker, born in Columbus, Penn., March 6, 1830, and daughter of Tilly and Phœbe (Marble) Baker (former deceased), pioneers of Warren Co. over sixty years ago. To this union were born three children: D. E.; Eva M., wife of Jackson Raymond; and Eunitia, deceased. Our subject is owner of 100 acres of land in Wayne Township, his son D. E. being in partnership. D. E. married, Feb. 22, 1869, Helen, daughter of Lucian Stowell, by whom he has two boys, Harris and Guy C. Harris Johnson has served as School Director and Township Commissioner; is a member of the Grange and Relief Association; in politics is Independent.

D. C. KENNEDY, farmer, P. O. Corry, born in Columbus Township, Chenango Co., N. Y., Dec. 28, 1827, to Isaac and Catharine (Rightor) Kennedy, natives of the same State; the father was born of parents not in affluent circumstances, and consequently had his own "blossoms" to bloom and battles to fight. While quite young, he was employed as foreman of a glass factory near Utica, N. Y., and at the end of several years he had saved some money from his salary, which, added to means his wife had secured by keeping boarders, enabled him to purchase considerable land. The proprietor of the glass factory was unfortunate (by its burning up), and Mr. Kennedy began farming in Chenango Co. He made several trips to Erie and Warren Cos. on horseback, and bought land at the treasurer's sales prior to the year 1835, when he moved his family to Columbus, Warren Co., Penn., and in less than two years they settled on the farm now owned by D. C. Kennedy; he bought land to the amount of 6,000 acres, and gave to each of his children a farm, whose names were Sydney, Charles H. (physician living near Toledo), Betsy, Madison, Catharine, Polly E., Austin, Julia A. and D. C. Our subject was brought up on a farm, and received a common school education; was married June 19, 1845, to Phœbe Russell, born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Nov. 30, 1827, and is a daughter of Adin and Roxanna (Wilcox) Russell, natives of Black River Co., N. Y., which union has blessed him with nine children, viz., Mary E., Isaac, Rosaline, Franklin, Charles, Darwin, Louisa, Estella E., wife of James Dalton, and Sydney. Mr. Kennedy was the founder of the Grange in his neighborhood, and he has organized about forty subordinate Granges, and held an important position in the Penn. State Grange for the past ten years, which was organized Sept. 18, 1873, at Reading, Penn.; was commissioned a Justice of the Peace in 1870, and is the present incumbent; is president of the Farmers' Exchange, of Corry, and is a worthy member of the F. & A. M. fraternity at Corry. He brought the first Durham stock into his community, and deals somewhat in the same on his 400 acres of finely-improved land. He is independent in his political proclivities, and is recognized as a substantial, upright, industrious and worthy citizen. Nicholas Rightor, the father of D. C. Kennedy's mother, is of German parentage, a thorough representative of that nationality to which the United States is indebted for many of her most prosperous citizens and substantial men of worth and merit; he married Catharine, daughter of Abram Cook, a worthy Englishman, and Mary Cook, of Irish descent. Mr. Cook was among the unfortunate in the memorable Cherry Valley massacre during the year 1778, the leading commanders of the atrocious crime being Walter N. Butler and an Indian chief named Joseph Brant, the former of whom was killed in 1778, while attempting to escape from the American troops. Aunt Molly, as she was familiarly known, some time subsequent to the death of her husband, Abram Cook, married an Irishman named Alexander McCollum, and with him passed her latter days with their youngest son, David McCollum. Andrew, a descendant of the McCollum family, became recognized as a talented attorney in Ogdensburg, on the St. Lawrence River, and in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.; and his brother, Reuben McCollum, was a merchant, at one time very wealthy, but went under through careless habits and dissipation, and a portion of his property was bought by his father and brother David—being land, the present site of Middlefield, N. Y. One Dan McCollum was stolen by Indians when quite young, and was governed by them for twenty-three years. About two days prior to the Cherry Valley massacre, the Indians had a war dance, and some killing occurred among their own tribe, on account of an Indian squaw refusing to dance with one of the participants, and the fracas was brought to a climax in the ending of the massacre. A number of women and children were taken prisoners, among whom was Catharine Cook,* who was forced to dry the scalps of the victims of this horrible deed for the Indians, for thirty or more days. She suspected one scalp to be that of her mother, and manifested emotions of grief, whereupon the Indian chief, Brant, noticing her condition, drew his tomahawk and threatened her life if she did not suppress even the thoughts of its identification. A conversation occurred between her and the chief, in which he learned that her father was the Abram Cook whom he had known as so "good a white man" at Schenectady College. Possessed with this knowledge, the chief saved her life when the prisoners were finally destroyed. Miss Cook was an eye witness of the torture and final killing of the belle of Cherry Valley, the means of destruction being on the first day to cut off her ears; the second day, her nose and mouth from ear to ear; and on the third, they cut her throat and filled the incision with hot embers. After the slaughter was ended, soldiers were detailed to bury the dead, and Nicholas Rightor performed a part of the labor, and here is where he became acquainted with Catharine Cook, the union with whom blessed him with Catharine, Nicholas, Dolly, Jane, Abram, Menda, Sarah, Joannah and Henry. The second, Nicholas, early learned the art of surveying, and left his father's home in 1814 for the Brokenstraw Country of Warren Co., Penn. Failing to obtain employment as a surveyor, he traced his course along the Brokenstraw Creek to the Allegheny River, thence down the "river sides" to New Orleans. Early on his journey to the Allegheny, he fell in with an Indian, whom he allowed to ride his horse for ten miles, and this kind act was subsequently rewarded. On his arrival at New Orleans, Nicholas sought services with the Surveyor General of Louisiana, whose name was Nicholas Rightor, a German, who agreed to claim relationship, thus assuring his employment and the immediate charge of a surveying "squad," and subsequently his appointment by President James Madison to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of his predecessor, Nicholas Rightor, which position he held until death. While on a surveying trip, he and assistants were taken prisoners by the Indians, and, after a week of privations, with only horse and dog flesh for food, it was arranged to execute them on a certain evening; and here came the reward for allowing the Indian to ride his horse along the Brokenstraw Creek, for the same identical red man turned them loose and led them to a place of safety, before the time came to kill them. Dolly married Richard Graham; Jane married John Van Tyle, a brother-in-law of John Whitney, famous by the fine of $2,000 on the "William Morgan trouble"—reflecting on the secrets of Freemasonry, in 1826; Abram, after assisting his brother, Nicholas, was, in 1823, appointed Surveyor-General of Tennessee by James Monroe; Menda died young; Sarah married Dr. Parchall; Joannah married a wealthy merchant, and Henry became very wealthy, and died in New Orleans of yellow fever. Henry Kennedy, the father of Isaac and grandfather of our subject, D. C., was the son of Samuel, a powerful man, who at various times stood astride the hub of a wagon wheel, which he lifted with twelve men sitting on the rim of the wheel. Henry Kennedy married Esther Fuller, whose brother, Isaac Fuller, helped to bury the dead of the Cherry Valley massacre, and often talked over the sad affair with sorrowful expressions. To Henry and Esther were born—Samuel, Henry, Isaac, Esther, James, Polly, Robert and Abram. The vicissitudes of the Kennedy family in early times were many, and not the most irksome was their having to sleep in the woods at night, to be out of danger of the Indians, who often murdered the inmates of the log cabins.

WILLIAM KINCAIDE, farmer, P. O. Wayne, was born in Erie Co., Penn., March 5, 1821, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Kincaide. He was united in marriage, Oct. 3, 1840, with Jane Smith, who was born in Erie Co., Penn., May 1, 1823, daughter of John Smith, a pioneer. Two children blessed this union: J. S., a minister of the U. B. Church, located at the Macedonia Mission, Venango Township; and Ida E., wife of Frank Olver-son. Mr. Kincaide owns 100 acres of land, and is also interested in the cheese factory with his brothers.

J. G. KINCAIDE, farmer and stock-raiser, and cheese manufacturer, P. O. Wayne, was born on the farm where he now lives Feb. 4, 1835, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Kincaide, the former born in Westmoreland Co., Penn., March 25, 1791, the latter a native of Wayne, Penn., born March 29, 1799. They were married Feb. 28, 1816, and had a family of six children—Jane (deceased, wife of Mr. Lyons), William, Margaret (now Mrs. Thomas), John G., S. E., and Henry (deceased). Mr. Kincaide was a surgeon in the war of 1812, and departed this life Feb. 2, 1874; his widow followed him Sept. 30, 1879. Our subject, who bears his grandfather's as well as his father's name, was married at Erie, Jan. 15, 1861, to Mary Ann Dunn, born in Erie Co., Penn., Feb. 17, 1840, daughter of Oliver Dunn. To this union have been born four children: Charles M., Allen S., May E. and Francis J. Mr. Kincaide is an enterprising and industrious man, and is highly esteemed by his neighbors. He has filled many local offices: was Director of the Poor of Erie Co. for three years (1876-79); Constable one year, and Notary Public six years. He and wife are members of the U. P. Church, in which he has been Treasurer, Deacon, Sunday School Superintendent and Elder for about fifteen years. He is a Republican in politics. Elizabeth Dunn, the mother of Mrs. J. G. Kincaide, was born Dec. 25, 1803, in Mill Creek Township, this county. Is a daughter of James and Margaret (Robison) Dumars, who came from Ireland to Mill Creek Township about 1801, and there died. They were the parents of eight children, viz., Elizabeth, Nancy, John, Thomas, Claudius, Rebecca, Alexander, and Margaret Jane Dumars. In 1825, she married Oliver Dunn, now deceased, born in McKean Township, Erie Co., in 1803, son of Thomas Dunn, whose children were: Oliver, John, Robert, Thomas and Harvey, all deceased. Mrs. Dunn is still living; she is the mother of thirteen children, six of whom are living—Margaret, Allen, Frank, Mary, Finley and Matilda J.

SAMUEL E. KINCAIDE, farmer, stock-raiser, and engaged in dairying and manufacturing cheese, P. O. Wayne, was born in Wayne Township, Erie Co., July 16, 1837, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Kincaide. He was reared on the farm and received a common school education. He was twice married, on the first occasion to Anna, daughter of John and Lucinda (Riley) Yager; she departed this life Dec. 25, 1868. His second marriage in Erie City, Aug. 17, 1870, was with Dora, daughter of Ira and Deland (Combs) Wilkison. To this union have been born four children—Elmer Lincoln, Gery Thaddeus, Samuel Blaine, and Cora, deceased in infancy. Mr. Kincaide has an interest with his brother in a cheese factory, in which he has been salesman fourteen years. This is a well managed, profitable enterprise, and is located on their land convenient to the railroad. He owns 1,000 acres of land, two farms in Wayne, 250 acres in Union, seventy in Elgin, ninety in Concord. Three-fourths of this is well improved and stocked. Mr. Kincaide is a prominent man, and is always interested in every enterprise conducive to the public prosperity. When twenty-one he served as Constable for one year; during the war was Town Commissioner; has been Justice of the Peace two terms, Assessor one year; was elected to the Legislature in 1876, re-elected in 1878, and is now serving as President of the School Board. During 1882 he was Vice President of the N. W. Agricultural society, and in 1883 he was President of the same. The good order of the well kept cemetery is due to the labors of the board in which he is Secretary.

G. H. LEACH, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born near Findley's Lake, N. Y., Jan. 12, 1857; son of Zebulon and Abba H. (Jackson) Leach; the former, a farmer, was born in 1824, the latter in 1826, and were both residents of Findley's Lake. Our subject was married there, Nov. 5, 1879, to Alice E. Rockwell, born in Greenfield, Erie Co., Penn., March 25, 1861, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Cloud) Rockwell, who reside with our subject. Mr. Leach came to Erie Co. with his wife in March, 1880. He owns 150 acres of land, in an excellent state of cultivation; is a member of the E. A. U., North Wayne Union, No. 218, at Hare Creek; in politics, is a Republican.

WILLIAM McINTIER, farmer and stock raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Connecticut, Sept. 30, 1814; son of Isaiah and Polly (Eaton) McIntier (both deceased), natives of Connecticut, and who came to Erie Co. in 1833. Our subject was married in Columbus, Penn., Nov. 2, 1837, to Harriet L. Davis, born in Madison Co., N. Y., March 17, 1821, daughter of Oliver and Temperance (Vincent) Davis, natives of Rhode Island. By this union were born ten children—Francis E., Rev. Edgar O., Temperance L., Mary R. and Viola L. (all deceased), Andrew A., Louisa T., Calista O., Emma D. and Fred D. (all married except Fred D.). Mr. McIntier owns 100 acres of land, and has been a resident on same for twenty-three years, and of the county fifty years. He and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church in which he has acted as Trustee, Steward and Treasurer. He has also served as School Director and Treasurer of School Board; has also served as Highway Commissioner. In politics is a Republican.

DAVID MARTS, farmer and stock raiser, also engaged in the furniture and undertaking business at Wattsburg, P. O. Wattsburg, was born in Venango Township, this county, son of Samuel and Pelina (Gregory) Marts, natives of New York State, and early settlers of Venango Township, Erie Co., Penn. Our subject married, Feb. 9, 1864, in Erie City, Mary Ann Henderson, born in Venango Township, May 4, 1840, daughter of Samuel and Jane (Weir) Henderson, the former of whom was a native of Venango Township, the latter of Ireland. They had seven children, and reside in Lowville. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Marts have been born four children: Loren T., Jessie J., Della May, Rillie Jane. Mr. Marts owns 210 acres of land in this township, and twenty-four at Wattsburg, where he carries on the furniture and undertaking business. During the late war he enlisted in the 111th P. V. I., and served three and a half years. He was wounded at the battle of Resaca in 1864, and in the thigh, at Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862. He and wife are members of the Grange, and also of the Methodist Church. He is a Republican in politics.

PHILANDER MILLER (deceased) was born in the State of New York Sept. 17, 1807; was married Jan. 8, 1835, to Tamzin Marsh, born in Hawley, Franklin Co., Mass., June 28, 1812, daughter of Elijah and Tamzin Marsh, natives of Vermont, who settled in Massachusetts at an early day. Philander Miller departed this life Feb. 28, 1877.

GEORGE F. OLIVER, farmer and stock-raiser, Box 228, P. O. Corry, was born at Seven Oaks, county of Kent, England, Jan. 8, 1830, the only issue of Stephen and Elizabeth (Forward) Oliver (both deceased), natives of the county of Sussex, England. Our subject emigrated to America in 1848, and lived from 1856 to 1862 in Cook Co., Ill. In 1865, he came to Erie Co., but was absent from it for an interval of seven years. He married, July 9, 1852, at Mount Upton, N. Y., Dorcas W. Madison, born in 1828 in Pittsfield, Otsego Co., N. Y. To this union were born Josephine (deceased), Edwin F., Mary F. and Charles. Mr. Oliver enlisted Aug. 8, 1862, in the 88th I. V. I. Co. K, and served two years and ten months, and now enjoys a pension for injuries received in the service. He owns thirty-three acres of land; is a member of the A. O. U. W.; in politics is a Republican.

C. W. PARKER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Aug. 1, 1841, son of E. Parker, who came to Erie Co. in 1855. He was a farmer by occupation, and the parent of nine children. Our subject was the fourth child in this family. He enlisted during the late war (in 1863), in the 1st Penn. Bat. Lt. Art., and was discharged at the close of the war. Mr. Parker was united in marriage, Dec. 31, 1868, in Wayne Township, with Julia Adams, a native of same township, born May 19, 1844. Four children blessed this union—Harley W., Carrie, Gertie and an infant. He is a successful self-made man, and owns ninety acres of land on which he has resided for eighteen years. He and wife are members of the M. E. Church, in which he is Steward. His first cousin, Phillip Phillips, is a singing pilgrim. Our subject is a member of the G. A. R., No. 70, Andrew Post. He is politically a Republican.

WILLIAM B. PIER, lumberer and farmer, Corry, was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Jan. 26, 1814, son of Oliver and Betsy (Carpenter) Pier (deceased), natives of New York State and of English descent. Nine children were born to this union—William B., Malinda Bracey, Newell, Levi, Calvin, Anna Switzer, Chauncy, Oliver and an infant deceased. Oliver Pier, Sr., is upwards of ninety years of age, and is the third oldest resident of the city of Corry. He has a rifle with which he claims he killed over 1,300 deer. He lost his eyesight over twenty years ago. Our subject was first married, in Harmony, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Jan. 5, 1834, to Adah Carpenter, born Aug. 27, 1813. They came to this county Jan. 26, 1834, and were the parents of three children—William A., married to Lydia L., daughter of Andrew J. Ford (deceased Feb. 8, 1880); Edwin B. (deceased July 12, 1862, from the effects of a wound received during the late war); Calvin, who was also killed in the rebellion, dying at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862. The grandchildren of this family are Adah, wife of William H. Austin (have two children—Clara Belle and Frank Guy); Mary L., Eliza and Edna. Our subject is a successful, self-made man, and owns 144 acres of land, partly in the city limits. His wife is now deceased, but his son's widow and some of the grandchildren live with him. He has served as Road Commissioner, Judge of elections, Auditor, Inspector, School Director and as Justice of the Peace for ten years; also served as Councilman two years. Mr. Pier is a member of the M. E. Church in which he has served as Steward and Trustee. He was formerly a Whig in politics, but is now a Republican.

FRANCIS RAYMOND, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Sherburne, Chenango Co., N. Y., March 16, 1819, son of Seth S. and Caroline (Eagle) Raymond, who settled in Warren Co., Penn., fifty-five years ago, where they died. Our subject came to this county in 1872, and was twice married; on first occasion to Delia Colegrove, born Nov. 9, 1823, in Edmeston, Otsego Co., N. Y., by which union there were five children, viz.: Murray M., Byron, Enoch F. (deceased), Jackson, Oscar (deceased.) The second marriage was at Findley's Lake, June 14, 1873, with Mrs. Eunitia O. Y., Nov. 27, 1822, son of Lewis and Martha (Howard) Raymond (both deceased), former a native of Vermont, latter of Rhode Island, and who came to Wayne Township in 1851. Our subject came to this locality in 1847, and was married, May 9, 1850, to Angeline Doane, born in Sherburne, N. Y., March 13, 1829, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Tillotson) Doane, former a native of Massachusetts, who settled in Warren Co., Penn., in 1830. By this union were born five children—Celia, wife of Wesley Mickle; Stella, wife of Miles Mickle; Mott, married to Bettie Van Campen; Will, Frank, married, Nov. 22, 1833, to Jennie Rickerson. The children of Miles Mickle and wife are Pearl and Maud. The children of Mott Raymond and wife are Blanche and Flossie. Our subject is the owner of 227 acres of well-improved land.

G. W. SIMMONS, farming and dairying, P. O. Corry, was born at Columbus, Warren Co., Penn., April 10, 1838; son of David and Elmina (Skinner) Simmons, natives of the Eastern States, who settled in Warren Co. in 1834. Our subject was united in marriage, April 10, 1864, with Maria Root, born Oct. 15, 1843. She bore him one child—Elbert D.; she died June 30, 1870. His second marriage occurred March 12, 1871, with Melissa A. Williams, born Feb. 11, 1847, daughter of Elijah and Sallie (Coy) Williams, who settled in Erie Co. May, 1859. One child has blessed this union—Elton L. Our subject is a representative man of his township. He lives two and a half miles northeast of Corry, and owns 200 acres of land in a good state of cultivation. One of his brothers was through the late war; he has died since. Mr. Simmons has served for three years as School Director. He and his wife are members of the Grange. In politics, he is a staunch Democrat.

JAMES D. SMITH, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Wayne, was born in Union, now Wayne, Township, this county, September 29, 1817. His parents, Samuel and Jane (Dickey) Smith, were natives of Ireland, born, the former June 16, 1774, and died Sept. 4, 1859, and the latter born June 12, 1777, and died Nov. 17, 1862; they emigrated to America in 1796, and resided for a short time near Philadelphia, and in the spring of 1797 they came to what is now Wayne Township, carrying all their worldly goods on horseback. They bought 400 acres, which is now owned by R. Abbey, M. Gray's heirs, et al., and lived there until 1818, when they settled on the farm, where our subject, their youngest son, lives. Samuel Smith experienced many hardships during his early residence in the county. Soon after erecting shelters for themselves and domestic animals, he thought to add to their comfort by making maple sugar and molasses, and after arranging to "tap" a "sugar bush," he carried kettles from Franklin, a long distance, on the back of an ox. Salt could not be obtained nearer than Waterford, and Mr. Smith often carried the necessary article on his shoulders. Wolves were numerous when they first located in the almost unbroken forest, and they were compelled to pen their sheep and small animals of nights. Deer were none the less plentiful, and constituted a portion of their food. On a certain occasion, Mrs. Smith was digging some potatoes, and a little deer that had accompanied the cows from the forests, and thought to feast upon the potato vines, jumped over the fence, unconscious of Mrs. Smith's presence behind a large stump, but was soon after ready for the bake oven, the woman having sprung from her secluded place, intending to scare it; the deer happened to land, however, with its neck encased by her strong arms, after which there was only a short tussle before she had its throat cut with a knife brought by her daughter, the deceased mother of Samuel and J. D. Kincaide. Samuel Smith was appointed Captain in the war of 1812, but the making up of companies fell short, and William Smith, a relative, assumed command. He was Postmaster at Beaver Dam for many years, and was a Democrat until the organization of the Republican party, when he allied himself with it. He was a Presbyterian in Ireland and died in the full faith of that persuasion. He was the father of twelve children, eleven of whom grew up and became church members, viz.: John, Elizabeth, William, Esther, Jane, Mary, Levina, Samuel, Nancy, Sallie, Sophia and James D. The latter was educated in the country schools, and married, December 24, 1839, Emeline Smith, born May 1, 1819, in Erie County, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Wilson) Smith (relatives of our subject). Her father came to Erie Co. in 1796, and her mother in 1799; the latter lived to be ninety-nine years old, and retained her memory to the last. Our subject's union has given him twelve children, six of whom are living—Julia (wife of H. W. Renner), Lizzie J., Annetta C. (wife of Silas W. Tenney), M. Estella (widow of Sewell W. Tenney), Melvin J., Sylvia B. Mr. Smith was commissioned Postmaster at Beaver Dam August 16, 1840, and served ten years, during which term the name of the office was changed to Wayne. He was Justice of the Peace for ten years, School Director, Auditor and Assessor his full share. Is a Prohibitionist in politics. He and wife are Presbyterians, to which religious sect he has been attached for over fifty years; has been Superintendent of Sabbath schools and for forty years an Elder. He owns 315 acres of finely improved land, principally the fruit of his own labors. Out of respect for his deceased father, our subject has caused the insertion of his portrait in this work.

D. S. SPENCER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Corry, was born in Columbus, Chango Co., N. Y., April 5, 1820; son of Mathias and Harriet (Smith) Spencer (both deceased). After living ten years in Columbus, they came to Erie Co. over fifty-five years ago, settling in Wayne. Our subject has been thrice married, on the first occasion, in 1844, to Charity Yager (deceased), who bore him four children; his second marriage, in 1872, was with Lucinda E. Eldredge (also deceased). In 1833, Mr. Spencer was again united in matrimony, this time to Almeda (a widow), daughter of Jeddiah Vaughn. Our subject owns 104 acres of well-improved land in this county and eighty acres in Monroe Co., Mich., where he previously farmed some eighteen years.

GEORGE E. WATROUS, farmer and stock-raiser, also carpenter, P. O. Corry, was born in Freetown, Cortland Co., N. Y., Nov. 21, 1841, son of George W. and Jemima (Travis) Watrous, early settlers in La Fayette Hill, Penn., the latter of whom died in Freetown, Cortland Co., N. Y., early in 1843. Our subject was married in Bradford, McKean Co., to Anna Bathurst, born in Mount Eagle, May 15, 1861, daughter of James and Nancy Bathurst. By this union were born two children—Alfred L. and Harris E. Our subject came to this county in 1881. He enlisted in the 76th N. Y. V., Co. D., Aug. 14, 1861, discharged in 1865. Was wounded at Second Bull Run Aug. 28, 1862, captured by the enemy and released in nine days; was also wounded at Laurel Hill May 8, 1864, for which he receives a pension. Mr. Watrous owns forty acres of land. In politics he is a Republican.
