Where Drums Are Made.

It is not Chicago or New York or London for any other uproarious metropolis that makes the most noise in the world, but the little village of Granville, Massachusetts, which turns Little Points on Introduction.

The custom of withdrawing the glove in handshaking is now a thing of the past. It had its origin in the knight of the olden time taking off his iron gauntlet so as not to limit his lady's hand and has gradually become an obsolete fashion, though. one yet sees a gentleman who considers it only due a hady that he should give her his bare hand.

A young lady told me that she in curred the displeasure of a provincial acquaintance because she merely bowed instead of shaking hands with a group of girls with some of i whom she had but slight acquaintance, when entering a parlor at a country

They called it "putting on airs," when in fact it was their own ignorance of the social necessities of the occasion that was at fault. But the provincial young ladies evidently believed in handshaking as part of the code of manners.

Yet at this same gathering my friend said the young people did not projudice against it; and less some to see any impoliteness in propile are spoken of contemporately whispering or giggling in the room.

Salvation Army Clothes. A certain very stylish young lady, who drives a good deal, got into a horse car in the exclusive suburb where she lives the other day wearing her new coachman, jacket of rather gay red cloth, trimmed effectively with

A man who had heard the story was induced to visit Chili in the hopes of making money in condor hunting, he being an experienced mountain climber and hunter. Five months of persistent hunting and trapping convinced him that he was not smart enough to cope with the big-winged outlaw with the expectation of getting rich on condor bounties; and, further, that if Chili expects to rid itself of the bird every man, woman and child must take up arms against it. Constant contact with man and ersistent persecution have rendered bird so wary and suspicious that is next to impossible to get within enshot of one. Snares are the only dans of taking condors with any degree of certainty, and even these the yulture has learned to avoid.

They have the most wonderful power of vision and flight. Perched among the mountain peaks above the clouds, they watch the trails thousands of feet

If an animal dies and is left in the plain, these monsters see it. Although no human eye can distinguish the presence of a single bird, in a few seconds' time they will be seen dropping from the clouds like thunder bolts.

Formerly the hunter took advantage of this by hiding within gunshot and picking off one or two condors before they could rise out of range. Trabs were also set near dead ani-

But this can rarely be done succonsully now so wary has the condor become. The same wonderful eyes that keep the trailing caravan in new or discover the carcass left the for its use, note also the hunter's iding place or the trapper arranging his mare—and the bird sits quietly on

To shoot it on the wing, unless you are fortunate enough to lie secreted near some lofty peak, when the bird comes sailing through the clouds to seek a perch, is entirely out of the question, for it flies at altitudes such is no other bird attains. This in wait far above the snow ine for a chanco to put a be itl rough a coulor is something the requires more grit and nerve than the average

These birds hatch their young among the snow-covered crags of the Andes sometimes 12,000 feet above the sea. The bird has been seen at an altitude of 20,000 feet. T

Once in a great while a hunter is bold enough to clamber among these in search of nests. The capture the young or the eggs is as table as killing a grown bird, gich finds are few and far There are always two eggs in a nest, and as nothing ventures to make the condor as prey except the hunter, but the very boldest hunter can approach the nesting place. There is no more startling sight than from some snowy rock so high in the mountains that the clouds hile the world from your view, to see one of those immense birds break through the dense vapor below you, and sail upward with the broad sweep of its wings in the haunts where it dwells in solitude. It seems when the bird makes its nest it does so with the certainty that none

like some winged demon daring to seek the realms of the sky. This bird can stand a range of temperature beyond which human existence is impossible. It is at home among the snowy peaks of Chili and Peru as well as upon the burning sands of Bolivia. With a sweep of wing twelve feet in extent, the swiftness of its flight is such that it will sail out of sight. notwithstanding its vast size, within a very few minutes. It may with ease eat its breekfast in the northern Andes and twelve hours later roost among the peaks of the southern seacoast.

If it were possible to get at the nests and eggs of the condor there would be some chance of extermination, but the systematic scaling of icy peaks to the height of from 12,000 to 18,000 feet for the purpose of bird nesting, even at $5 an egg, is not likely to prove profitable.

Poisoning the bird might be made effectual, but unless some poison can be made so deadly that it will kill the bird as it stands over the carcass that means of extermination cannot be made practical.

The hunter must produce evidence that he has killed a condor before he can secure the bounty. That evidence is the bird's head, which a poisoned bird carries off with him.

The auk and the buffalo can be exterminated, and man is master of the situation with most birds and mammals, but the condor has the quality of self-preservation too admirably developed to make its annihilation ever

The people of the sparsedly settled counties submit to high assessments for the purpose of keep. ing up their county organizations, but in doing so they should not be compelled to pay State taxes on property in San Francisco, which they virtually do. MAY DAY PARTY.

On Monday last a grand May Day Party came off at Justice John Mattly's ranch on . the borders of Mono Lake, and was well attended by the farming community of that section, and by Lundyites. The day was passed with dancing, games, mosic, eating and drinking-but of the latter, nothing, of, course, stronger than Mono Lake water, it being a fine tonic, and very exhibaratingthey may be off the bench; but during the when mixed in the stomach with a glass of milk. There is nothing mean about Judge able cases of contempt of Court, some of Mattly, and his guests had their choice of which cost the county a nice round sum | beverages, milk or Mono Lake straight. In corpus case before him, arising from one of ing the day, it was resolved to "make a these little side-plays before Justice Davi' night of it" so dancing was inaugurated and continued till daylight next morning, A being the "star," as usual, he having been McNabb and W. Valuable Suggestions For Those Who Wish to Maintain or Regain Health.

Most authorities are of opinion that cheese is indigestible, yet even on this point doctors cannot agree.

A distinguished French chemist has suggested that, to make cheese digestible, a quarter of an ounce of potash should be added to every pound of cheese; while a German chemist has experimented upon several kinds of food-such as cheese, meat, milk and eggs-and he boldly declares that cheese is no more indigestible than meat and many other articles of Suppers are usually condemned. Some doctors assert that suppers are not only unnecessary, but positively harmful; that sound sleep cannot be obtained after them, and that three meals a day are sufficient.

On the other hand, others are of opinion that a light supper is necessary to procure sound sleep. After a meal, they say, blood is drawn toward the stomach to supply the juices needed in digestion. Hence the brain receives less blood than during fasting, becomes pale, and the powers become dormant. Sleep, therefore, ensues.

A doctor says that recently he was called at 2 A. A. to a lady who assured him that she was dying. The body was warm, he says, the heart doing honest work. To her indignation he ordered buttered bread to be eaten at once. Obeying, the "dying" woman was soon surprised by a return of life and a desire to sleep.

Milk is generally considered a peculiarly nutritive fluid-indeed, a perfect food—and therefore suitable for persons of all ages when it agrees with than Sir Henry Thomson states tha "for us who have long ago achieved solid food it is altogether superfluous and mostly mischievous a a drink.

DRINKING IN ENGLAND.

Great Progress of the Temperance Cause in the Past Twenty Years.

There is no country, perhaps, in the world that has made more progress on the temperance question during the past twenty years than England, writes a London correspondent of the Boston Advertiser. Heavy drinking, accompanied by brutal and vulgar sports, were not long since common to every class of society. It has not been over half a century when even some of the' churches were used for secular purposes with as much freedom as town halls, while the phrase, "drunk as a lord," found its use through actual experience. this class of people having the reputation of being immoderate in their living. Ministers and laymen, masters and servants, magistrates, judges, nobles, and sovereigns not long since looked upon not only frequent "tippling," but heavy drinking, with the eye of charity.

When I say that the habit of drinking has greatly changed, I do not by any means infer that there is not a tremendous amount of it done in this country. Why, every servant and dressmaker who comes to the house, ash-man, "garbage-chucker," charwoman, and, in fact, every man servant and maid servant, even the porter who brings your luggage to the door, will wait for a mug of beer for his individual services. If you say that you have no beer in the house, he will extend his big dexter hand for twopence to buy the needful article. And it is not only the laboring. the common, or the middle classes of society who are the subjects of regular drinking, but there is not a table in a hundred among the better people but has its beer and two or three kinds of wine, with a little "hard stuff" to wind up with

I will give one or two examples, without mentioning names, which will give a good and interesting illustration of the ancient practice of drinking and the extreme reluctance of these people to give up ancient customs.

Not long since I dined with a very prominent man, occupying a high professional position and an active member of the Cnurch Temperance society. About a dozen guests were seated at his hospitable board. There were three or four different kinds of wine served, and yet the generous host himself "touched not nor tasted not." But he knew it was ancient usage to have it on his table; and a table would not be complete without it; that some of the guests enjoyed a glass of good wine. He furnished it, and did not give any lecture or advice against the usage.

But another, and certainly the most singular, practice came under my observation a few Sundays ago. I was asked to preach that morning in one of the oldest churches in the "old" city of London, and the following was my experience, which illustrates the observance of ancient customs, the little harm there was once supposed to be in wine-drinking, and an American's impression of such old and historic surroundings. As I entered the porch of the charm, I was met by the ocame; yes, he very old beadle as real and impatient as Dickens so frequently and cumningly describes. He was not dressed as the regular church verger, in ; silk gown, and he did not wear that solemn and almost sepuichral expression; but he was dressed in the finest of blue broadcloth, with an elaborate and richly-embroidered profusion of gold lace and cin bittions, and with the pleasantest face and welcoming smiles stately bearing, and yet with the mospoli manners, he ushered me into the vest -room. Then, with a bow and smile he said: "Will you take sherry c port, sir?" On the table, on a salver were two good-sized decanters contain Ity" display, and the beadle, noticing it, said that some two or three hundred years ago there was a good woman of the parish who, dying, left a certain sum for the purchase "of wine and sweet-cakes for the clergy," and since that time "wine and cakes" have been regularly supplied at each service.

half-dozen clergy would care to empty the decanters on these occasions, and the question is how large has this bequest of "the good woman" grown, and is it all spent in sherry and port, and if so, what must be the contents of the wine-cellar?

An old man in Cincinnati makes a living by going round between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning waking people whose employment necessitates rising

The East Indies are overcrowded with goats. There are millions in the islands, and the land from one end to the other smells like an immense stable.

In Chicago there is one doctor to every 548 inhabitants; in St. Louis, one to every 475; in Denver, one to every 260; in Idaho, one to every 51, and in Wyoming Territory, one to every 30.

A farmer's work on wet days includes, according to an agricultural paper, this miscellany: "Mend the tools, oil the harness, pick out the de-cayed fruit and vegetables in the cellar, read, write and visit the school."

"There is nothing very brilliant about our Bremen dentists," said a lady to an individual who practiced the art in Berlin, "but they are obliging." If you wish a tooth extracted with gas they forthwith light the chandelier."

Hygienic pillows are now in vogue. Three form a full equipment for a bed, of which one is filled with hops, a second with pine needles, and a third with marine moss. They are believed to cure sleeplessness and nervous disord-

According to a French scientist the force of storms can be lessened by placing a large number of lightningrods on the telegraph poles along railway lines.

Mme. Patti wrote in a Boston album the other day: "Go to strangers for charity, acquaintances for advice, and relatives for nothing, and you will always have a supply. In the Bank of France there is an invisible studio in a gallery behind the cashiers so that at a signal from one of them any suspected customer will instantly have his picture taken without his knowledge.

accomplishes for everybody exactly what is claimed for it. One of the reasons for the great popularity of the Mustang Liniment is found in its universal applicability. Everybody needs such a medicine
The Lumberman needs it in case of accident. The Housewife needs it for general family use. The Canaler needs it for his teams and his men. The Mechanic needs it always on his work

The Miner needs it in case of emergency.
The Pioneer needs it—can't get along without it. The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard. The Steamboat man or the Boatman needs it in liberal supply affoat and ashore. The Horse-fancier needs it-it is his best friend and safest reliance. The Stock-grower needs it-it will save him thousands of dollars and a world of trouble.

The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers. The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to life, limb and comfort which surround the ploneer.

The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will happen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once
