A BOLD DASH OR THE TURN OF A MISHAP.

James Fitzadams was thirty years of age; a well-built, dashing sort of fellow; with brains enough, such as they were; and with a most exalted idea of his own personal appearance. Who his parents were we do not know—his most intimate friends did not know. He lived in Wiltonvale, but how he lived was a wonder to many. Only a few miles distant was the watering place of Downey Beach; and most of the warm season, when company was plenty, he spent there. It was whispered by a very few that he was a proficient in the art of card-playing; and that those who played against him generally lost.

James Fitzadams wanted money—wanted more than he could earn in the usual way; and he spoke of his want to his friend, Tom Allen.

Tom had property, left him by wealthy parents; and, though a bachelor, he still kept up the old establishment—a fine house, and a fine stable, and fine horses.

"I am going to get a wife," said Fitzadams.

"A wife?" cried Tom, in surprise.

"Yes."

"What in the world do you want of a wife?"

"Hm! What do you want of the old red mill?"

"It yields me a handsome income."

"And that's just what I want of a wife. Aye—I must have one. I'm bound for it."

"Such wives are hard to find, Fitz."

"No. I have my eye on one now."

"Eh?"

"You remember old Gower?"

"The soap merchant?"

"Yes."

"Aye—I have seen him at the beach."

"Well, he has a daughter—Mathilda, she is called—and she is an only child. The old rascal is worth a hundred thousand dollars in clean bank account, beside all his real estate. Isn't that a plum worth plucking, Tom?"

"Certainly it is, Fitz; but I don't believe you can fetch it."

"Egad, I can try. And say, Tom, my boy,—suppose I should want your help."

Tom shook his head.

"O, I shall not try you hard, old fellow. You shan't be called upon to commit yourself."

"Wait—wait, Fitz. I can't promise you. You're a sad dog, and I must be shy how I enter upon any of your mad schemes."

"I know I can depend upon you, Tom."

"I make no promise."

And no promise was needed. Fitzadams knew all the weak points of the young spendthrift, and he felt sure of his help in the hour of need.

The bathing season opened, and in due time Mr. and Mrs. Gower and Miss Gower were registered at the hotel; and about the same time Mr. James Fitzadams registered his name.

Adolphus Gower was not an intellectual man, but he was a substantial man; and, as far as worldly prosperity was concerned, he had been a most fortunate man. His wife was very far from being intellectual; but she was fashionable, and loved to be flattered.

Mathilda Gower was past thirty, and not at all handsome. Yet she had had several offers of marriage which her father had effectually frowned out of the way. She was large of frame, coarse of feature, and not over and above bright; but she was sole heiress of great wealth, and so received much attention.

Fitzadams had studied the characters of the mother and daughter until he felt sure of winning them over to his cause. For a whole month he worked very carefully, and was finally rewarded with the words, from the lips of the heiress,—

"You may ask papa."

But papa had gone away on business, and would not be back again until the close of the season; so the lover contented himself with playing the agreeable, and when he tired of that he professed to go away on business of his own.

The season closed at length, and as Mr. Gower did not come for his wife and daughter, our hero accompanied them to the city, where he met the old man.

"So you want Mathilda for a wife, do ye?" and the soap merchant scrutinized the applicant narrowly.

"Yes, sir. I have loved her for a long time; and I have the supreme happiness of knowing that she loves me in return. And now, sir, will you not crown that happiness by giving me her hand?"

"Mathilda is old enough to have a husband, and I s'pose she wants one; but, my young man, I must know something more about you before I give my consent to your proposition. I'd like to know what your business is, and how much you are worth."

"Certainly, my dear sir—certainly," said Fitzadams. "I have not spoken much of my worldly wealth, because I conceive that there are other things more necessary to happiness in the marriage state. Yet, sir, it is eminently proper that this thing should be understood. I am not so wealthy as you are; I am not so old; but I have enough."

"How much?" asked Mr. Gower, sentimentally.

Really, my dear sir, I could not give you the exact sum in dollars and cents. I have a very fine property in Wiltonvale, worth some thousands of dollars; and I have some mill property,—perhaps, in all, twenty thousand dollars. But, sir, should I succeed in gaining the hand of your daughter, I shall sell my property and go into business in the city."

"I s'pose you like my daughter because she is handsome?"

"No, sir," replied Fitzadams, promptly. "I do not call her handsome; I should rather call her plain. But I love her because she is good—because she has been kind to me—because love sprang up in my heart of its own accord."

"Pon my soul, Mr. Fitzadams, you talk kind of honest; and I've a great notion to try you."

"You will never repent it, sir."

"Very well. Do you go home to Wiltonvale, and some time next week I will come and see you. I have a notion to see you in your own home. And then, sir, you shall have my answer."

"My dear Mr. Gower, I shall be proud to have you call upon me. Were you ever in Wiltonvale?"

"Never to stop. I have passed through there."

"You know where the meeting house is?"

"Yes."

"And you remember the pond beyond it?"

"Yes."

"And do you remember, near the margin of that pond, upon a gentle eminence, and within the bosom of a maple grove, a beautiful villa?"

"Yes, I remember it well."

"That's my house. Call upon me there."

"I shall do so, sir."

"Soon?"

"Yes."

"My dear Tom, you told me you were going to New York soon."

"Yes—I must."

"Then go next week."

"Why so, Fitz. What's up?"

"I want to use your house."

"Eh?"

"Don't ask any questions. Be a friend to me, and go."

"You are planning for the hand of Miss Gower?"

"Yes."

"You are mad, Fitz. The old man cannot remain long ignorant of the deception."

"I don't care how soon he discovers it after I am married."

"But suppose he should shut up his money-bags?"

"Then he would cut off his own daughter, and give the scandal to the world."

"And suppose he should do just that thing?"

"Why," replied Fitzadams, curling his moustache, "if he does that, my course is plain enough. I'll step out, and leave Mathilda to shift for herself. I cannot be worse off than I am now. It is a bold dash; but I am bound to put it through. Will you be kind enough to go to New York next week?"

"Yes, Fitz. I had planned to go at that time; so I don't do it to please you."

"But you will do one other thing to please me. You will let me stay here next week, and take charge of your premises; and you will instruct your servants to obey me as though I were their master,—you'll do that, Tom?"

"Yes—I'll do it, because I believe, upon my soul, that you'll have the worst of it."

"Leave that to me."

"Now, dear papa, you know what you promised me and mama. You said you would have your whiskers colored before you went away again. O—it would make you look so much younger."

"Ah, Miss Mathilda, you fancy that a young looking papa would make a young looking daughter, eh?"

"O, don't talk so foolish, papa. You make me blush. You know I don't think of myself. But those horrid white whiskers! I can't endure 'em. You know what you said. You said you'd either cut them off, or else have them colored."

"I should catch cold if I cut them off."

"Then do the other thing."

Mr. Gower could not resist the appeal; so he went to the barber's, and had his whiskers colored to a beautiful dark, glossy brown. It may have made him look younger, but it certainly made him look very odd. However, his wife and daughter were pleased, and he was satisfied.

On the following morning Mr Gower started for Wiltonvale. At the urgent solicitation of his wife and child he had donned his best attire; and, to use ma-dam's own expression, he looked as though he "had just come out of the box." He took the cars as far as Downey Corner, and there he had to take a private conveyance. He went to the stable, and hired a horse and chaise; and he flattered himself that he was going to have a comfortable ride. He was not an adept in the art of horsemanship; but then the hostler assured him that the animal he was to drive was very kind, though full of life and rather "nervy."

Away went the soap merchant, over the country road, and he thought how fine it was to breathe the pure fresh air of Autumn among the hills. As he rode thus, with his thoughts wandering, he did not see the commotion in a little ticket by the wayside, but the horse saw it, and also saw a large white ox come rushing out, whereupon he—the horse—leaped quickly out from the road, overturning the chaise, and throwing Mr. Gower into a deep pool of water. But the ill-fated merchant was not clear of danger. He had got caught in the boot, and was dragged a long distance through the mud, and over the stones. He was free at length, however; and when he picked himself up the horse was dashing off at a furious rate. But he thought little of the horse then. He had enough to do to attend to his own case. He shook himself; then moved one leg; then moved the other; then put out his right arm; then his left; and finally he came to the joyful conclusion that he was alive, with no bones broken, and with no serious hurts. But his clothes were in an awful plight. His coat was completely torn off; his vest all bedaubed; his pants tattered and muddy; and his linen wet and soiled. In fact, he looked like a man of mud and rags. But Adolphus Gower was not to be thwarted. He was an enterprising man, and the business in hand was not to be put off. Half a mile ahead he saw a house, and when he reached it, he found that his horse had been stopped there and taken care of. The animal was not injured; but the chaise was a complete wreck.

It was an humble abode where the horse had been cared for, and no other dwelling was in sight. Of course Mr. Gower could not go to Wiltonvale in mud and rags. The poor farmer must exchange clothes with him. The host had no good clothes—nothing but rough coarse homespun.

"Never mind," said the merchant. "Give me the best you have, and I'll pay you well for them."

The garments were produced—blue and gray homespun—but clean and tidy. The peasant was a large-framed man, and his raiment was donned by the merchant without any trouble. Mr. Gower looked at himself after he had made the metamorphosis, and he chuckled at the oddity of his appearance.

"Egad," he muttered, "I don't believe my own wife would know me."

"It does make a difference," said the peasant; "but it is better so than it was before."

"Certainly, certainly. Ha!—what's that?"

"I guess it's a team bound for the village."

"Stop 'em, stop 'em, sir; and see if they won't take me along."

It proved to be a man with a wagon, who readily consented to take a passenger. So the merchant was once more on his way.

The man who owned the wagon stopped at the store in Wiltonvale, and Mr. Gower started to walk the rest of the way. He passed the meeting room, and passed the pond; and soon afterwards turned up into the broad park in front of a handsome villa. It was certainly a beautiful place; though the merchant fancied he could detect signs of decay. However, if the owner thought of selling soon, he probably did not trouble himself about keeping all these little matters looked after. It was towards the middle of the afternoon when Gower walked up to the villa, and he saw Mr. Fitzadams standing upon the piazza, smoking a cigar.

"Ah—good day, sir," said Adolphus Gower, in his blunt way. "You are taking comfort, aren't ye?"

"Who in the — are you, you rusty old curmudgeon?" cried Fitzadams disdainfully, using a word which struck Adolphus as being very profane.

A light broke upon the soap merchant. Fitzadams did not recognize him. And no wonder. With his beard so darkly colored, and in that strange garb, his most intimate friend would not have known him. And he concluded not to avow himself in a hurry. He might thus gain an insight into the young man's character which he could not gain otherwise.

"I am a poor traveller; and am tired and hungry," said Mr. Gower.

"Then go to the — and rest yourself," replied Fitzadams, mentioning that profane name again.

"You are not a very kind man," suggested Gower.

"I'll show you that I'm a trump at kicking, if you don't take yourself off out of the way, you confounded old sheep!"

At this juncture a man came around from the yard, and stepped upon the piazza. He was in a working garb, and smelled strong of the stable.

"Bill says you want the Messenger colt saddled, sir," he said, addressing Fitzadams.

"Of course I do," and I am in a hurry, too, for I expect to meet a friend on the road."

"You'd better take some other horse, sir."

"No; I want that one."

"I can't saddle him, sir. Master said he must not be used."

"Didn't Mr. Allen tell you that I was to be your master while he was gone?"

"He said you'd have charge here till he came back."

"Then do as I tell you to. Put the saddle upon the Messenger colt."

"Can't you do it, sir?"

"By the ghost of St. Peter, you will do it."

"No—sir!"

"Then I'll do it myself."

Now the groom knew very well what kind of a man he had to deal with; and, moreover, he had heard his master tell of the bold dash for a wife which the adventurer was making; so his respect for the fellow was very little; and his fear of offending him was still less.

The poor old "coddler" in the darning and patched homespun was not noticed.

"If any horses are to be taken out, I'll take them myself," said the groom; and as he spoke he looked upon Fitzadams rather impudently. "The colt will not come out to day."

"We'll see!" cried Fitzadams, at the same time starting, as though he would go to the stable.

"By the powers, Jim Fitzadams, you touch your hand to that colt, and I'll thrash you as I would a boy!"

"Villain! dog!"

"O—you needn't put on them kind of airs. Because Mr. Allen lets you play master here while you pull the wool over the eyes of a rich old soap-boiler, you mustn't think you can cross my path. Now just try yer hand at saddling the colt—try it, if ye want to."

James Fitzadams was white with passion; but when he gazed upon the burly form of the hard-fisted groom, he concluded not to make any warlike demonstration; and in a little while he so far recovered his senses, as to be able to laugh, and declare that he had meant no harm.

"If Tom expressly ordered that the colt must not come out," he said "you may bring me what you like."

After the groom had gone, Fitzadams turned, and saw the man in homespun poking off towards the road. He went to ride, and when he returned in the evening, he found a note which had been left for him during his absence. He broke the seal and read as follows:

November 18/A 18—
MR. JAMES FITZADAMS—I have called upon you according to agreement, and I have seen all that I could possibly desire. An accident on the road rendered it necessary for me to procure clothing from a poor peasant by the wayside, and hence my garb was not exactly suited to the rank of one in my station. And, it may be that you were not pleased with another little change which had been made in my appearance. I had allowed the barber to dye my whiskers. However, as this was done to please my daughter, I suppose you will find no fault with it.

"And now, as I have made my promised visit, you must call upon me at my office, if you would see me again. Perhaps, when Mr. Tom Allen gets home, he will let you have the 'Messenger colt,' so that you can come in style.

"With deep consideration,
"And wonderful amazement,
"I am understandingly yours
"ADOLPHUS GOWER."

James Fitzadams threw down the letter, and gave utterance to a great many profane words. But what was the use. He had made a bold dash, and had missed the figure; and he must turn his wits in some new direction.

Mr. Gower did not regret the accident that had happened to him on the road; nor did he regret paying the stablekeeper for the broken chaise; for, had he reached Wiltonvale in his own guise he might have been effectually taken in by the wife-hunter.

Mathilda was at first inclined to hysterics when she learned of her lover's perfidy; but she finally overcame her grief; and, before the winter was gone, her feelings towards Fitzadams had so far changed that she read the account of his imprisonment for issuing counterfeit money with real satisfaction.

Laying the Corner Stone. On Saturday last the M. W. Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Hon. Isaac Davis presiding, performed the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the Court House now in process of erection in the town of Woodland, our county seat. The Grand Lodge opened at the Masonic Hall at about 11 o'clock A. M., thence the procession was formed under the supervision of N. Wykoff, Grand Marshal pro tem., with suitable assistants. All the subordinate Lodges in the county being pretty well represented, though we learn that many of the fraternity were unavoidably absent. The procession, preceded by martial music, moved thence to the foundation of what is to be the temple of Justice for our county, where a large concourse of ladies and gentlemen were assembled and where a rostrum and arbor over it and suitable seats had been prepared for the occasion.

Up to this time the rays of the sun had been unobstructed, and it was becoming uncomfortably warm, but now a canopy of vapor overspread the Heavens and a light sprinkle of rain was permitted to descend which served to cool and add a richness and fragrance to the atmosphere and render the audience quite comfortable during the protracted services. After music by the Choir, prayer by the Chaplain and music by the Band, the Secretary read a list of the articles previously sealed up in the tinbox which was now deposited by the Treasurer in a vault cut out in the solid rock. The solemn and impressive ceremonies of laying the corner stone were then performed by the Grand Master—the stone being four square, plumb and level, true and trusty, and an appropriate admonition to the Architect to see that no unsuitable material be worked into the edifice. These services were followed by an address suited to the occasion and delivered by the Hon. H. H. Hartley, which was listened to with profound attention by the audience as well as the craft. This address we fondly hoped to have the privilege of laying before our readers, but the orator with that degree of modesty which always characterizes worth declined to furnish it to us; but we learn the Lodge appointed a committee to solicit a copy for publication, and hope the author will yield to this formal request. From the scene of these interesting proceedings the procession being re-formed marched back to the Hall, where the Grand Lodge was closed and the craft with their families partook of a sumptuous lunch which was spread in the district school room under the Masonic Hall. This repast was timely and in every sense appropriate; no effort at display, yet everything requisite for the creature comfort was spread out before them and was partaken of in a manner to give satisfaction to both donors and participants.

Such events as the one we have just been noticing forms an epoch in the history of every community where they occur that may be looked back upon with both pleasure and profit.

STATE FAIR.—As the time for the State Fair draws near, active exertions are being made in order that it may open brilliantly and progress successfully till the annual ball of the Society shall be a grand affair and a proper closing scene to a week of gala days. The Fair will open at Agricultural Hall next Friday evening and the arrangements for the same are receiving due attention. At the Stock Grounds, the course is in fine order—perhaps in better order than ever before. The races which will take place over there must draw crowds of people to the city, while the exhibition at the Hall, with the music by the Union Band, will not be without its peculiar attractions, especially on the evening of Fair week.—Bee, 23d.

WHEAT.—Farmers exhibit great disinclination to sell wheat at the low price now offered by exporters ($1 35), and are seeking for cash advances to a large extent.—Some of our best houses are now offering to loan $1 per sack (100 lb) upon warehouse receipts, either stored in city or country, provided the credit of the warehouseman is entirely known and satisfactory to the parties lending the money.—Bulletin.

The Reveille says that numerous contributions of Reese River quartz have been sent to Sacramento, for exhibition at the State Fair, and to remain as part of the cabinet being formed by the State Agricultural Society.

PARTIES visiting Sacramento during the State Fair, can pass away part of their time pleasantly and profitably by examining O'Connell, Ryan & Co.'s fine selection of Ladies' Dry Goods, &c.

THE Tehama County Wagon Road is now open for loaded teams through to Humboldt.

Match Race for $3,000. A Match Race for $3,000 was made last Saturday to be run on the Knight's Landing Course 500 yards on Saturday the 24th day of October, between Adam's black gelding "Chocktaw," sired by Adam's stallion "Oak Jennings," and a bay mare, "Amanda," sired by "Lummux," dam "Whip and Printer." There is no doubt that this will be the fastest race ever run in California since the race of Sim Oldham's gray mare "Comet" and "John Crowder," where not less than $20,000 were staked on the race.

From the indications and confidence of both parties in the respective nags this will be a betting race. Several thousand dollars will change hands on the day of running. Great interest is manifested and already large sums are being staked on the result. The bay mare is just from Oregon, brought by Messrs. Fink, Reed & Whetmore, and a fine looking animal. The black gelding is well known here, and the boys will stick to him to the last.

THE FUTURE OF CALIFORNIA.—The following extract from the New York Sunday Times, is a beautiful and eloquent portrayal of the future of California: California is stretched out by the Almighty as a vast canvas, such as no tribe of men ever received, for the genius and fidelity of its colonists to fill with beauty. One of our own citizens has recently indulged an artist's dream of what the State may look like one hundred years hence. He sees in vision "long ribbons of fields stretched to Fort Tejon, each field a different color; green grapes, brown furrows, emerald vines, fringing hedges, grain growing—cream colored grains, grains aureate and russet; houses dotted along like dew drops in clover fields; houses reaching forth like mosses in the crystal brook, houses clumped, houses grouped; hamlets modest, hamlets blooming and luxuriant like gorgeous creepers; villages with spires, towns with burnished domes golden by the sun and silvered by the moon; cities with tall needle chimneys, pouring up to God the frankincense of labor, terraced foothills laughing with generous villas; sloping forelands alive with herds; swelling mounds nestled in vines; oval knolls crowned with festoons of fruit blossoms, breathing sweet perfume to the sky; mountain gorges rolling out metals, mountain peaks staring at opposite peaks from the bold-faced palaces, mountain rivulets murmuring to trellised, rose hidden cottages, mountain vales creeping away to love God in dreamy repose.

INTERNAL REVENUE.—According to a decision recently made, it was determined that "The jurat of an affidavit taken before a Justice of the Peace, Notary Public, or other officer duly authorized to take affidavits, is held to be a certificate, and as such is subject to a stamp duty of five cents. Acknowledgments of deeds or other instruments are exempt." By Collector Clark we have been furnished with the following important portion of a recent legal enactment. It is interesting: In Sec. 27 of the Act of March 3d, it is enacted "that any person who shall offer for sale, after the 30th day of September, 1863, any of the articles named in schedule C of the Act to which this Act is an amendment, whether the articles so offered are imported or are of foreign or domestic manufacture, shall be deemed the manufacturer thereof, and subjected to all the duties, liabilities and penalties in said Act imposed, in regard to the sale of such articles without the use of the proper stamp or stamps, as in said Act required." Druggists and vendors of articles requiring proprietary stamps will therefore consult their own interest by taking notice of this.—Bee.

PACIFIC RAILROAD PROSPECTS.—A Virginia letter to the Bulletin says: To illustrate the amount of goods coming over the mountains and the growing necessity for a mountain railroad, we have the fact that the freight bills of some half dozen houses in this city will this year reach well nigh the sum of $500,000. Kelly, Moth & Co., a large hardware firm, will alone pay out for this purpose $150,000. In two years, by the time we hope to have railroad communication completed with San Francisco, the business between Washoe and California will be more than doubled, insuring such profits as no similar enterprise will ever before have realized. The limit of freight offering both ways will simply be the carrying capacity of the road.

SEVERE ON IMMIGRANTS.—A party of immigrants camping in the other range, asked an observing Pah Utah, what wages men got for working in the mines. He took a look over the crowd, and with a most complacent glance at his questioner, replied: "White men get four dollar day; Injun get two dollar; immigrant get one dollar." The heavy part of the yoke is, the Indian's statement was just about correct.—Humboldt Register.

RICH quartz lodes have been found at Boise mines, Idaho. It is believed that quartz mining will be the principal feature of mining operations in the Boise country, and that another year will develop the untold richness of these lodes.

SOMETHING ABOUT CHEESE AND ONIONS.—Cheese and onions are two articles of so extremely plebeian a character that they are apt to be unjustly depreciated; and yet so high is their nutritive value that we have no hesitation in saying that they, more than anything else, stand between the low paid agricultural laborer of some districts and the kind of chronic starvation which ensues on a diet quantitatively not very much more scanty than that which now keeps him in pretty good health. Both these are highly nutritious. With regard to onions, their value is in the list of rations they are considered equivalent in nutritive value to four times their weight of any other kind of vegetable except their congeners, the leeks; while with regard to cheese, we may state that in nutritive value it equals or exceeds any single article of diet which it is possible to make. The one objection to cheese is that it is frequently slow of digestion; but this defect may be overcome, as Dr. Brinton well remarks, by "minute division, cooking, careful mastication," and "by a proper admixture of vegetable food." Whence it follows that the cheese macaroni, with which many persons carelessly finish an already copious dinner, is by no means a mere alimentary trifle that may be thrown in without due account taken; and that large masses of savory Portuguese onions, however tempting, are not the thing to add to a meal without making serious compensating reductions.—Cornhill Magazine.

THE NEW ATLANTIC CABLE.—Recent dispatches state that a contract has been concluded in England for the laying of a new Atlantic telegraph cable, next summer, from Ireland to New Foundland.

THE new mines of Mendocino are attracting great attention, and new discoveries, says the Herald, are being made every day, presenting rich appearances of gold, silver, and copper.

SPECIAL NOTICES

Dr. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. The stomach is the fountain head of scores of diseases which infest the human system. Indigestion, bad enough per se, generates diarrhoea, dysentery, faintness, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, general debility, &c. Get rid of it, then, at once, by going through a course of Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

A palatable and refreshing preparation, which as surely relieves all complaints of the stomach and its dependencies, as the sunshine melts the snow. A course of the medicine may not be necessary. One bottle frequently accomplishes a complete cure.—Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere. HOSTETTER, SMITH & DEAN, Sole Agents, San Francisco. s12-1m

IN CALLING ATTENTION TO DOCTOR GUYSSO'S Improved Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, we feel confident that we are doing a service to all who are afflicted with Scrofulous and other disorders, originating in hereditary taint, or from impurity of the blood. We have known instances, within the sphere of our acquaintance, where the most formidable distempers have been cured by the use of Guyssot's Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla alone.

It is one of the few advertised medicines that cannot be stigmatized with quackery, for the "Yellow Dock" and the "Sarsaparilla" are well known to be the most efficient, (and at the same time, innoxious) agents in the whole Materia Medica, and by far the best and purest preparation of them is Dr. Guyssot's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. See advertisement. HOSTETTER, SMITH & DEAN, Sole Agents, San Francisco. s12-1m

A WORD TO THE AGED.—In the decline of life the loss of vital force consequent upon physical decay, can only be safely supplied by some vivifying preparation which recruits the strength and spirits, without entailing the exhaustion which is always the final effect of ordinary stimulants. We tender to the aged Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters

As an invigorant and restorative, immediate in its beneficial action and permanent in its effect. It tones the stomach, improves the appetite, acts like a charm upon the spirits. For dyspepsia, oppression after eating, bilious cholera, wind cholera, spasms of the stomach, sick or nervous head-ache, chills and fever, tremens, prostration, and all the complaints special to the feeble sex, the Bitters are earnestly recommended by thousands who have witnessed their superior efficacy in such cases. BY OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.

The following dispatches are from the Sacramento Union:

Headquarters Army of the Cumberland, September 19th.—A desperate engagement commenced this morning at 11 o'clock. The rebels made a heavy attack on the corps of General Thomas, forming the left wing of our army, and at the same time they attacked the right wing, which was thought to be a feint. Gen. McCook's and General Crittenden's troops were thrown into the engagement as convenience offered, the main portion of their forces being on the march at the time. The fight on the left wing was of a very desperate character. The enemy was repulsed, but on being reinforced regained their position, from which they were subsequently driven, after a severe engagement of an hour and a half. Gen. Thomas' forces then charged, driving the rebels for nearly a mile and a half, and punishing them severely. About two o'clock in the afternoon the rebels made a fierce dash on our center, consisting of Van Cleve's and Reynolds' divisions. Van Cleve's division was struck on the right flank, and being vigorously pushed by the rebels, fell back. General Carter's line was broken and the troops became much scattered. General Thomas on the left, and General Davis on the right, then pushed their forces vigorously forward towards the gap, and after a hard fight recovered the ground which had been lost on the extreme right. The fight disclosed the intention of the rebels, which evidently was to get between us and Chattanooga. The general engagement, which commenced at 11 A. M., ended about 6 P. M. Gen. Palmer, who had gathered together our scattered forces, and Gen. Negley, who had been sent from the right to fill the center, pushed forward and established our lines as they had been before the battle began along the Chickamanga creek. The country where the battle was fought is level, but has a thick undergrowth of small timber and brushwood, and is very unfavorable for the use of artillery, very little of which was used. The casualties in wounded were heavy, but extremely light in killed for so heavy a musketry engagement. The fight on the left was one continuous roll of musketry for an hour or more. No general officer was injured. Col. Bradley, Heg, Jones and Carroll were wounded. The battle will probably be renewed to-morrow. Rebel prisoners taken represent that the corps of D. H. Hill, Polk, Johnston and Longstreet were in the engagement. Our men are in the best spirits.

Chattanooga, September 21st.—The battle of the 19th resulted well for us, as we held our line as established on the left and center. Our forces on Sunday morning, September 20th, held a hand some line, with the right on a ridge of hills and the left protected by works of logs thrown up during the night. The left rested on the east side of the Rossville and Lafayette road, four miles south of Rossville. In the fight of the 19th we lost about 600 killed and 2000 wounded, and were ahead three pieces of artillery.

The engagement was resumed at nine A. M. on the 20th, by an attempt of the rebels to storm Thomas' left and front. Several times they were severely repulsed with heavy loss to them and very little to us. This fight lasted an hour and a half and was one of the most terrific of the war—a continuous fire of musketry and artillery being kept up with deadly effect during this time. The right and center were not engaged, but their skirmishers kept up a rattling fire. The enemy, finding their assaults in vain, maneuvered to the left, with the intention of throwing a force on the Rossville road and attacking Thomas on the left flank. At this juncture, Thomas ordered Brannon, who had one Brigade in reserve and who, with Reynolds, was holding the key of the position which was on Thomas' right, to move to the left of the line to protect the flank. General Rosecranz, at the same time, sent General Davis and Van Cleve from the right and center to support Brannon in an effort to hold the line and protect Thomas' left flank. On perceiving the withdrawal of the skirmishers from the front on the right and center the enemy made a vigorous attack on that part of the line, piercing the center, cutting off Davis and Sheridan from the left, and driving the center into the mountains, both right and center being much scattered, without any serious loss in killed and wounded. The right and center being gone, Thomas' right became opposed to a most terrific flank attack, and Reynolds and Brannon on the right of Thomas were swung around to his extreme left, as at first. These divisions also fell back a short distance on the Rossville road. Parts of the center were gathered up and reported to Thomas, who made several stands, but was unable to check the rebel advance until the arrival of reinforcements. At one o'clock Gen. Granger, with one division of reserves, came up, and these were thrown into the center, driving the enemy handsomely from his position on a strong ridge, and with heavy loss—the fire from one of Granger's batteries literally mowing them down. This fight only lasted a half hour, with slight loss to us.

After this bloody repulse the enemy remained quiet until about four P. M., persisting, however, in maneuvering on both flanks, their full and correct knowledge of the country enabling them to do so with great facility. Having got again on our flanks, the enemy made a vigorous attack, and a fight ensued which has no parallel in the history of this army. Col. Harker's brigade, Wood's division, and the remnant of Johnston's division, holding the left, covered themselves with glory; and on the right and center, Brannon, Baird, Reynolds and Palmer, with parts of their divisions, fought most gallantly; while Steadman and Granger, with the reserve, drove the enemy at every point where they went in. At five o'clock Thomas was still triumphant, and on his left held his line of the morning. Two lines of retreat were open to him to Chattanooga, on one of which he fell back to Rossville during the night.

Our losses have necessarily been heavy, but the list of killed is surprisingly light, and in the two days engagement we have not suffered more in men than the enemy. In the charge by Thomas on the first day the enemy lost as many as killed as we did during the whole day. The loss in prisoners and material we can not now state. Our killed will reach twelve hundred, and the wounded seven thousand, most of them having slight wounds. Among general officers killed are Gen. Little, Col. Key and Col. King, commanding brigades, and Col. Bartlett, of the One Hundred and first Illinois. Among the wounded are General Morton, of Rosecranz' staff, and several Colonels and Majors—the majority of them only slightly. General John H. King is reported wounded and a prisoner. We have captured Gen. Wirt Adams, of Texas, and 1,300 of his men.

New York, September 22.—The Tribune's special dispatch says: The general summing up of the battle in Northern Georgia is, that after two days severe fighting, in which Rosecranz, with greatly inferior forces, bore the shock of 140,000 rebels, comprising the armies of Bragg and Johnston, half of Lee's and all of Pemberton's scattered troops that could be gathered together, he deemed it prudent to fall back on Chattanooga, which he did in good order. At last accounts he had established communication with the cavalry of Burnside, who is severely censured for not having arrived earlier.

Two of Rosecranz' divisions are reported to have not behaved well. It is believed that Rosecranz will be put in a position to enable him to resume the offensive. In the meantime he is thought to be strong enough to hold his position.

There is reason to believe that the attention of what remains of Lee's army will soon be occupied. A movement of the Army of the Potomac has been made so far as to send forward Buford's cavalry across the Rapidan. The crossing was effected without opposition. It is probable that but a small force of rebels intervenes between Meade and Richmond. Commanders who have doubted the accumulated evidence of the many detachments from Lee's army southward now seem inclined to admit the fact, since the news of the Chattanooga battle, that Rosecranz was fighting the whole Southern Confederacy.

Chattanooga, September 23d. No attack has been made by the rebels, though one is confidently expected to day. Our position has been vastly strengthened by additional works, commanding the approaches from the south, while the flanks and communications are amply cared for. The only demonstration to-day was by a heavy column of infantry and artillery on the left, which crossed Mission Ridge toward Ringgold, without replying to our artillery. It is believed this column is intended to intercept Burnside.

DEATH OF "MONEY KING."—Abraham J. King, generally styled "Money King" died this morning in the City Hospital. He had just had breakfast, when he was seized with an apoplectic fit from which he died. King was taken a few days ago to the hospital at his own request. He deposited previously with the Major some property, among which were $6,000 in New Orleans city bonds, $500 in San Francisco city and county bonds, a large number of old notes and pawnbrokers' receipts. He was generally believed to be possessed of large amounts of property, but the above is all that is known at the present time. King is said to have a sister living in New York, who will be his heir. A complete miser, he has on several occasions shown freaks of extravagance or foolishness not consistent with his general character. On one occasion, being taunted with being a miser and loving money more than anything else, he challenged his opponent to throw a $5-piece into the bay for every $20-piece thrown by him (King). The challenge was accepted, and King threw some $200 into the bay, when the other man "weakened." At the time of the Atlantic Cable celebration, King had the finest turn out of horses and carriage in the procession. Being an Israelite the congregation of Sherith Israel have taken charge of his body, and will inter it in their cemetery of Sibooth Olam, or Hills of Eternity, at the Mission Dolores. —Bulletin.

DURING the month of August, two hundred and sixty four mining companies filed certificates of incorporation with the County Clerk of San Francisco. The aggregate of capital proposed to be represented by these companies is only one hundred and thirty million dollars! Since the first of January there have been 2,854 companies incorporated, the average capital claimed being about $500,000 or a total of $1,432,000,000. Being one thousand three hundred million (1,300,000,000) more than the total value of property, real and personal, in California.

A GENTLEMAN, one evening, was seated near a lovely woman, when the company around were proposing conundrums to each other. Turning to his companion, he said:

"Why is a lady unlike a mirror?"
She gave it up.
"Because," said the rude fellow, "a mirror reflects without speaking—a lady speaks without reflecting."
"Very good," said she. "Now answer me. Why is a man unlike a mirror?"
"I cannot tell you."
"Because the mirror is polished, and man is not!"

A GENIUS down East intends applying for a patent for a machine which, he says, when wound up and set in motion, will chase a hog over a ten-acre lot, catch, yoke and ring him; or, by a slight change of gearing, it will chop him into sausages, work his bristles into shoe brushes, and manufacture his tail into a cork screw.

AN ARCHITECT proposes to build a "Bachelors Hall," which will differ from most houses in having no Eves.

WHAT did Lot do when his wife was turned into salt? He got a fresh one.

DR. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

THE OPERATION OF THIS PALATABLE remedy upon the stomach, liver and excretory organs is singularly soothing and conservative. It regulates, recruits and purifies them. Dyspepsia in all its forms yields to its control and invigorating properties.

Invigorate the System.
Vigorous digestion and pure bile produce nutritious blood, and nutritious blood a healthy frame. Does the victim of a dyspeptic stomach and a disordered liver desire to know how the digestion may be improved, the bile and other fluids of the body purified?

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters Will accomplish this desirable revolution in the system, regulating the secretions and excretions, giving tone to the animal juices which dissolve the food, strengthen every relaxed nerve, muscle and fibre, and brings the whole machinery of vitality into vigorous and healthful play.

Strengthen the System.
The best means of imparting vigor to the broken-down frame and shattered constitution, which has yet been invented or discovered, is proffered to the feeble of both sexes and all ages in

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.
Debility, from whatever cause arising, may be cured; strength, in whatever manner it may have been wanted, may be restored by the use of this powerful and healthful invigorant. For indigestion and all its painful effects, bodily and mental, they are a positive specific.

A Word to the Aged.
In the decline of life the loss of vital force consequent upon physical decay can only be safely supplied by some vivifying preparation which recruits the strength and spirits, without entailing the exhaustion which is always the final effect of ordinary stimulants. We tender to the aged

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters As an invigorant and restorative, immediate in its beneficial action and permanent in its effects. It tones the stomach, improves the appetite, and acts like a charm upon the spirits.
For Females.
Thousands of ladies resort to it as a remedy for hysteria, fluttering of the heart, nervous headache, vertigo, general debility, and all peculiar disturbances & derangements to which, as a sex, they are subject. It cheers and enlightens the oppressed mental powers, as well as strengthens the body, and its use is never followed by any reaction.

Beware of Counterfeits. Purchase only of reliable dealers, Sold everywhere.

Dr. Guysott's Improved
Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla
Will Cure without Fail

Scrofula or King's Evil, Cancers, Tumors, Eruptions of the skin, Erysipelas, Chronic Sore Eyes, Ringworm or Tetter, Scald Head, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones and Joints, Old Sores and Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Diseases of the Kidneys, Loss of Appetite, Disease arising from the use of Mercury, Pain in the Side and Shoulder, General Debility, Dropsy, Jaundice, Lumbago, &c.

Dr. Guysott's Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla put up in the largest sized bottles, contains more of the Honduras Sarsaparilla than any other preparation extant, which is combined with the extract of Yellow Dock, the extract of Wild Cherry and the Balsam of Fir, thus making the remedy more thoroughly efficient than any other Sarsaparilla before the public. At the same time it is perfectly free from ALL mineral poisons, which can not be said of any other of the Sarsaparilla compounds. The Invalid should beware of poisons. Mercury, Iron, Quinine, Potash, Iodine, Sulphur, Arsenic, and many other mineral and metallic poisons enter into and form the active basis of most of the sarsaparilla and panacea of the day. Guysott's Compound Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla does not contain a particle of the substances; as any one can ascertain by applying the necessary tests.

These poisons may occasionally remove disease, but they so vitiate the blood and impregnate the whole system with their baneful effects, that the first cold or the first attack of disease, prostrates the patient's strength and subjects him or her to the most excruciating torture, and renders another cure almost impossible and hopeless. Let all poisonous sarsaparilla preparations alone, and use Guysott's Improved Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, which is thoroughly efficacious, perfectly harmless and purely vegetable. All kinds of diseases yield to its genial influence.

Caution.—Beware of counterfeits. All genuine Dr. Guysott's Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla has the name of JOHN D. PARK, Present Proprietor, Cincinnati, O., on the label.
Remember this fact when buying, all without the name of "JOHN D. PARK, Cincinnati, Ohio," on the label are counterfeits.
Sold by all Druggists.

BAKER & HAMILTON, IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN Farming Implements & Machines,

J STREET, BETWEEN FRONT AND 2D, Sacramento.

VIZ: Thrashing, reaping and mowing machines; horse hoes, cast and steel plows, plow castings, cultivators, harrows, harrow teeth, churns, cheese presses, grain cradles, seed sowers, corn planters, corn shellers, hoes, horse hoes, shovels, spades and trowels, garden shears, reels and lines, garden rakes, straw cutters, sugar mills, fan mills, hay and manure forks, hay knives, axes, hatchets, ax-handles, sickles, scythes, snathes, bush scythes, road scrapers, grind stones, wheel barrows, sausage cutters and stuffers, ox yokes and bows, patent bow pins, binding and pruning knives, well wheels and buckets, etc., etc.

PATENT COMBINED GANG PLOW, SEED SOWER AND HARROW.

We have purchased the right this great labor-saving implement for the State of California, and are having a number made in the Atlantic States for this market.

With this combined Machine one man, with six horses, can do the work of three twelve inch plows, besides sowing the grain, and harrowing it in as he proceeds, thus finishing his work in the best manner possible, without being obliged to travel over the plowed ground. This Machine was very thoroughly tested by the farmers of Santa Clara county, where some eighty are now in use; also, by the Messrs. Hensel & Kethley, of this county, and Messrs. Hoppin Brothers, near Cacheville, Yolo county. It is made very substantial; is not liable to get out of order, and being on large truck wheels, the Gang Plow, Seed Sower and Harrow, runs lighter than three plows would, cutting the same amount of land.

We are desirous of having these plows generally introduced throughout the State, and are therefore prepared to offer very favorable inducements to farmers and the trade. The following are some of the names of our customers who have used them for the past two seasons:

Sacramento county—Hensel & Kethley.
Yolo county—Hoppin Brothers, L M Curtis, Caleb Davis, C Travers, A J Scroggins.
Sutter county—M Boulware, A L Chandler.
