THE ELECTION.

Although a week has elapsed since our State Election, the result as to its being decisively ascertained, can hardly yet be more than guessed at. It is very certain that this has been the closest contest ever witnessed in Louisiana. For Governor it is a neck and neck race, and we should not be at all surprised if the majority on either side does not exceed 200 votes. In the subjoined table the reader will find the vote for Governor of 28 parishes, compared with the vote four years ago, when Davezac and Johnson were the candidates. In the column of the parish is included in this list, [illegible], and entirely worthy of credit—[illegible] a Democratic majority, it will be seen, is [illegible] a Democratic majority in 1845 of [illegible] Now it was 1,836. As Johnson's [illegible] in the whole State was 2,379, it follows that 22 parishes not heard from, Dr. [illegible] must make a further gain of 811 votes, to offset the Locofoco majority. We are perfectly safe in the acknowledgment of our opponents that he will fall to do it. Most of the remaining Parishes are strongly Locofoco, and a large proportion of them are situated in the Red River country, where WALKER is personally popular, and where White gains are comparatively unfeasible. Conceding to the Democrats all they claim in the Democratic parishes, and to the Whigs all they calculate on in the Whig parishes, we are yet of opinion that WALKER is chosen Governor by a majority of [illegible] to [illegible] 200 and 500.

It is possible we may be mistaken, since it may [illegible] Natchitoches, Caddo and [illegible] has been pinched very close indeed, [illegible] Democratic majority in 1845 was [illegible] Whig gain 1,836. As Johnson's majority in the whole State was 2,379, it follows that the 22 parishes not heard from, Dr. [illegible] must make a further gain of 811 votes, to offset the Locofoco majority. We are perfectly safe in the acknowledgment of our opponents that he will fail
