

KAISER INSTILLS STRANGE BELIEFS

Washington, D. C., June 27. Stanley Washburn, the war correspondent who is at the present time serving on the staff of the American commission to Russia, headed by Elihu Root, analyzes the attitude of mind of the German soldier and his idea of what he is fighting for...

Ever since he became Emperor, Wilhelm has been instilling his extraordinary beliefs into his army and into his people. Until today we have a psychology in the Teuton Empire which will probably make it possible for the military autocracy to continue the war to a far greater length than would be conceivable in any other country in the world.

The Divine Right. A few years later, in addressing a body of recruits in Potsdam, the Kaiser is reported to have said: "Now that you have donned my uniform it must be your pleasure and your duty to follow my wishes, realizing that I rule Germany by the direct will of God, and you must willingly obey my commands, even though I require you to shoot down your own fathers and brothers in response to my dictates."

With such ideas as these being instilled into the German army and German people year by year, we must not believe that at the first sign of reverse they will forget the teachings of forty years and demand consummation of immediate peace; and we must likewise realize that a revolution in Germany at this time has far less opportunity for success, for there is every probability that the German soldiers would fire upon their own people with the same subservience to their officers that they show in all their military operations.

No Peace Soon. While the military operations in the west are of vast importance to the situation and must unquestionably demoralize the Germans to a certain extent, I see no reason to believe that recent events in France have created a condition from which we may expect any immediate results looking towards peace.

When we read that the French and English took 32,000 prisoners and 300 guns in the month of April, we must, of course, rejoice; but we must at the same time guard against an optimism which leads to the belief that our only duty in this war is financial and economic.

These ideas of the Germans, while encouraging, are necessarily but a drop in the bucket. It might be well to remember that Brusilov, in a little over two months' operation on the southwestern front of Russia during the summer of 1916, took 150,000 prisoners and 196 guns; and yet this has produced but a temporary influence on the world situation.

In order fully to appreciate the Teuton strength, it is necessary to give the Germans the credit which is their due. One must, I think, envisage broadly their whole point of view and realize that the power of the Central Empire, and no one at this time will question its strength, is due to the German virtues and not to the German vices.

Must Not Underestimate. Now that the bitterness against the Germans is so intense, it is difficult to wipe away the prejudices one feels and give them the benefit of the extraordinary values which they have as a people; but if we underestimate these virtues, we fail to understand the causes which have made it possible for the Germans to do what they have done.

Such as I disapprove of the German point of view and of the spirit which has been manifested by the Germans of nearly all classes in this war, I still remain of the opinion that, taken from the internal point of view, our enemies possess almost every virtue which makes for military strength.

Carpentier May Force Jess To Fight Or Give Up Title

By JACK VEOLICK. New York, June 27.—The announcement that Georges Carpentier plans to appear in this country before the summer fades away has stirred up new interest in the boxing game.

The famous Frenchman, an idol in his mother country because of his prowess in the ring and his reckless daring as a member of the French flying corps, will be received with acclaim if his plans do not go awry. He will be accorded the greatest reception ever given a boxer in the world's history, and it is a certainty that his presence on American soil would be the greatest stimulus the game could possibly be given.

Jess Willard's long vacation as a circus performer has put a damper on the heavyweight division. He is no longer popular with the public, and the crop of heavies who are after his crown will probably die of dry rot if they wait for him to defend his sky piece.

That Willard may retire without fighting another battle is the growing belief in boxing circles, and if he would only announce his retirement as the undefeated heavyweight champion the game would look up.

It Will Be Willard's Move. If Carpentier campaigns in the United States, giving exhibitions of flying and engaging in ring contests, the buck will be passed directly to Willard. He will be expected to fight or admit that he is through, and there is nothing that Carpentier would like better than to get the big cowboy into the ring.

Carpentier's chances against Willard have been aired from time to time. The general belief is that he lacks the weight and size to cope with the giant Kan-yan. But he doesn't lack the speed, the science or the punching power, according to latest reports, and there is little doubt that Willard is fast degenerating into a man with the flabbiness that years of idleness bring on.

There are plenty of opponents for Carpentier on this side of the Atlantic. He will find Morris, Moran, Coffey, Weichert, Dillon, Levinsky and Mike among the boxers who will clamor for a bout with him, and with two or three battles against battlers of this class under his belt, he would be ready for the big fellow.

Looking Toward Big Series. There is many a slip twixt the June drive and the finishing tape in the big leagues, but with the sixteen teams in the two major settled down to what appears to be their true level, the dope sheet indicates that the Giants and White Sox will go to the mat in October to decide who's who in the world's series.

The Giants and the Sox have already had their ups and downs. They have both been in and out of the lead, and before the season ends they are liable to find opposition stubborn, but they look like the clubs with the driving power to go through. It is a good bet now that the "big series" will be fought out between them.

For the good of the game an East-West series for the purple and gold gonfalon this fall is badly needed, and despite the war a series this fall between the Eastern and Western teams will probably be a record-breaker in the matter of interest and attendance, especially if it is played between New York and Chicago teams.

Under these circumstances it is the most natural thing in the world that the collegians should fall back upon their athletics for their recreation. At nearly all these camps the athletes have organized and conducted meets. And some of their performances on Memorial day were of such a high standard that they would have passed muster at an intercollegiate championship meet.

LIBERTY BOND FOR $39; TRADING STAMPS USED. New York, June 27.—The career of J. Rufus Wallingford has nothing on that of Hyman Brodsky since his arrival here from Galicia, three years ago. The day after his arrival he dropped into a cigar store and was given a coupon with his purchase, with the explanation that merchandise might be secured with it.

Since then Brodsky has amassed $100,000 juggling coupons. He told detectives that he bought thousands of cigarettes from the stores on bargain days, sold the cigarettes below the retail price, but at a profit, exchanged the coupons for safety razors and other articles, which he disposed of at the usual prices.

"Recently a company," said Brodsky, "offered liberty bonds for so many trading stamps and I worked out a scheme whereby I was able to buy a bond for $30. I've bought six." Representatives of the cigar store company said Brodsky would be an unwelcome visitor hereafter, but before he left Brodsky sold one of the detectives $12 worth of razor blades for $6 and promised to return with more.

TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HYDROPLANE

New Orleans is building a "fool proof" hydroplane. It will be finished about July 15, and a demonstration will take place on Lake Pontchartrain. It will be the third machine turned out by the Richardson Aeroplane Corporation, Inc., which recently was established in the city near the lake.

Work on the new factory will begin some time this week. The factory will be 50 by 200 feet, and immediately upon its completion work will start on ten new machines. The plant is the first of its kind to be established in the South. It is the plan of the company to present the new machine to the navy department in return to suggestions made by it to the company which have resulted in greatly improving the machine.

Officers of the company are: F. T. Richardson, president; W. H. Cope, vice president and treasurer, and A. D. Cloyd, secretary. Fred L. Fox, an experienced aeroplane maker, is superintendent of the plant.

ESPOSITO FUNERAL. Funeral services will be held this morning from the late residence of Raphael Esposito, 66, fruit merchant of the Poydras market, who died yesterday morning at his home, 1211 Perdido street.

TRAINING CAMPS AID ATHLETICS

By International News Service. Philadelphia, June 27.—The extent to which all forms of athletic sports are being fostered in the various army training camps should be a sufficient answer to those pessimists who think that the war will set athletics back a period of ten years. All of the officers' training camps now include a great many college athletes.

In fact, if the statistics were available, it is likely that we would find a majority in each camp to be composed of college men with the pick of the athletes of the intercollegiate world.

Under these circumstances it is the most natural thing in the world that the collegians should fall back upon their athletics for their recreation. At nearly all these camps the athletes have organized and conducted meets. And some of their performances on Memorial day were of such a high standard that they would have passed muster at an intercollegiate championship meet.

If this is true in the camps designed especially for training officers it may be taken for granted that it also will hold true when the first army is assembled. It all means that this fall all forms of athletic sports will be popular; that the soldiers and officers in training will be high class athletes themselves, and that their example will result in a more general participation in athletic sports among all the recruits.

In the end, after the war is over, it is fair to assume that many of our leading athletes will have been claimed by death or badly crippled, claimed by death or badly crippled, just as they have been in England, France and Germany, but the impetus which the war department has given to athletic sports by providing coaches and otherwise encouraging sports is certain to have a splendid result. In the end, therefore, we are likely to take up our athletic development just where we left off.

ZEBROID THE NEW MOTIVE POWER

By International News Service. Mount Vernon, Ind., June 27.—The zebroid may succeed the mule as a beast of burden, as the result of experiments conducted by Dr. W. E. Hastings for five years, at a cost of $10,000.

Believing that a hybrid of an American mare and a zebra would be far superior to the mule, Dr. Hastings went to Hamburg, Germany, and purchased two fine specimens of the grey zebra from the Hagenbecks. The female died, but the male grew rapidly and now weighs 4,000 pounds. Dr. Hastings imported twenty fine young Arabian mares as mates for the zebra, but the first foal to arrive has as its dam a flea-bitten, sodate old gray American mare. To this humble creature was born the first of a breed that may supersede the mule.

The zebroid is a beautiful animal. The colt stood forty inches at foaling time as compared with thirty-six inches for the average mule colt and has a grace that can be compared only to the gazelle. Its color is a soft chocolate brown with stripes of a lighter brown marking its coat. Later these stripes will become white, after the fashion of its sire.

Dr. Hastings believes the zebra will give a bigger bone to its offspring, the foal will be less subject to sickness, its tough skin will resist the attack of flies and its average age will be doubled. A mule lives to be twenty-five years old, but zebras have been known to attain the age of seventy-five.

The government experimented the cross of the zebra and the American mare several years ago and produced one zebroid, but discontinued the experiment.

MCCALL STOCK FARM TO LOCATE IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans is to get one of the largest hog farms in the South. Announcement was made yesterday that Evan J. McCall, pioneer breeder of pure-bred Durocs in Louisiana, has made arrangements to move his stock from McCall Station, on the Texas and Pacific, to the property of the Lakeshore Land company, New Orleans. His herd is between 300 and 400 head, and when it is combined with the Lakeshore herd it will be one of the largest in the South.
