SEC. 4728. If any officer, warrant or petty officer, seaman, engineer, first, second, or third assistant engineer, fireman or coal-heaver of the Navy or any marine has been disabled prior to the fourth day of March eighteen hundred and sixty-one by reason of any injury received or disease contracted in the service and line of duty, he shall be entitled to receive during the continuance of his disability a pension proportionate to the degree of his disability not exceeding half the monthly pay of his rank as it existed in January eighteen hundred and thirty-five. But the pension of a chief-engineer shall be the same as that of a lieutenant of the Navy; the pension of a first assistant engineer the same as that of a lieutenant of marines; the pension of a second or third assistant engineer the same as that of a forward officer; the pension of a fireman or coal-heaver the same as that of a seaman; but an engineer, fireman or coal-heaver shall not be entitled to any pension by reason of a disability incurred prior to the thirty-first day of August eighteen hundred and forty-two.

SEC. 4729. If any person referred to in the preceding section has died in the service, of injury received or disease contracted under the conditions therein stated, his widow shall be entitled to receive half the monthly pay to which the deceased was entitled at the date of his death; and in case of her death or marriage, the child or children under sixteen years of age shall be entitled to the pension. But the rate of pension herein allowed shall be governed by the pay of the Navy as it existed in January, eighteen hundred and thirty-five; and the pension of the widow of a chief-engineer shall be the same as that of a widow of a lieutenant in the Navy; the pension of the widow of a first assistant engineer shall be the same as that of the widow of a lieutenant of marines; the pension of the widow of a second or third assistant engineer the same as that of the widow of a forward officer; the pension of the widow of a fireman or coal-heaver shall be the same as that of the widow of a seaman. But the rate of pension prescribed by this and the preceding section shall be varied from and after the twenty-fifth day of July eighteen hundred and sixty-six in accordance with the provisions of section four thousand seven hundred and twelve of this Title; and the widow of an engineer, fireman or coal-heaver shall not be entitled to any pension by reason of the death of her husband if his death was prior to the thirty-first day of August eighteen hundred and forty-two.

SEC. 4730. Any officer, non-commissioned officer, musician or private whether of the Regular Army or volunteers disabled by reason of injury received or disease contracted while in the line of duty in actual service in the war with Mexico, or in going to or returning from the same, who received an honorable discharge, shall be entitled to a pension proportionate to his disability, not exceeding for total disability half the pay of his rank at the date at which he received the wound or contracted the disease which resulted in such disability. But no pension shall exceed half the pay of a lieutenant-colonel.

SEC. 4731. If any officer or other person referred to in the preceding section has died or shall hereafter die by reason of any injury received or disease contracted under the circumstances therein set forth, his widow shall be entitled to receive the same pension as the husband would have been entitled to had he been totally disabled; and in case of her death or remarriage, the child or children of such officer or other person referred to in the preceding section, while under the age of sixteen years, shall be entitled to receive the pension. But the rate of pension prescribed by this and the preceding section shall be varied after the twenty-fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six in accordance with the provisions of section four thousand seven hundred and twelve of this Title.

SEC. 4732. The widows and children under sixteen years of age, of the officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates of the regulars, militia, and volunteers of the war of one thousand eight hundred and twelve and the various Indian wars since one thousand seven hundred and ninety who remained at the date of their death in the military service of the United States, or who received an honorable discharge and have died or shall hereafter die of injury received or disease contracted in the service and in the line of duty shall be entitled to receive half the monthly pay to which the deceased was entitled at the time he received the injury or contracted the disease which resulted in his death. But no half-pay pension shall exceed the half-pay of a lieutenant-colonel, and such half-pay pension shall be varied after the twenty-fifth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six in accordance with the provisions of section four thousand seven hundred and twelve of this Title.

SEC. 4733. All pensioners whose names are now on the pension-roll or who are entitled to restoration to the roll under any act of Congress, shall be entitled to the continuance of such pensions under the provisions and limitations of this Title, and to such further increase of pension as is herein provided.

SEC. 4734. The provisions of law which allow the withholding of the compensation of any person who is in arrears shall not be construed to authorize the pension of any pensioner of the United States to be withheld.

SEC. 4735. No pension shall be granted to a widow for the same time that her husband received one.

SEC. 4736. The Secretary of the Interior is directed to place on the pension-roll the names of the surviving officers and enlisted and drafted men, including militia and volunteers, of the military and naval service of the United States, who served sixty days in the war with Great Britain of eighteen hundred and twelve, and were honorably discharged, and such other officers and soldiers as may have been personally named in any resolution of Congress for any specific service in that war, although their term of service may have been less than sixty days, subject, however, to the provisions of section forty-seven hundred and sixteen.

SEC. 4737. Pensions, under the preceding sections, shall be at the rate of eight dollars per month, and shall be paid to the persons entitled thereto for the term of their lives, from and after the fourteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and seventy-one. But that section shall not apply to any person who is receiving a pension at the rate of eight dollars or more per month; nor to any person who is receiving a pension less than eight dollars per month, except for the difference between the pension now received and eight dollars per month.

SEC. 4738. The surviving widows of such persons as are embraced within the provisions of the two preceding sections, shall be allowed, on the conditions and limitations therein expressed, the same pension that such persons themselves would have been entitled to receive thereunder if living on the fourteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and seventy-one: Provided, however, Such widows were married to the husbands, on account of whose services the pension is claimed, prior to the treaty of peace which terminated the war of eighteen hundred and twelve, and have not remarried.

SEC. 4739. Before the name of any person is placed upon the pension-roll under the three preceding sections, proof shall be made, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, that the applicant is entitled to a pension under the provisions of the sections herein cited; and the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be stricken from the pension-roll the name of any person whenever it appears, by proof satisfactory, that such name was put upon such roll through false or fraudulent representations.

SEC. 4740. The loss of a certificate of discharge shall not deprive an applicant of the benefits of sections forty-seven hundred and thirty-six, forty-seven hundred and thirty-seven, and forty-seven hundred and thirty-eight, but other proof of services performed and of an honorable discharge, if deemed satisfactory, shall be sufficient.

SEC. 4741. The officers and seamen of the revenue-cutters of the United States, who have been or may be wounded or disabled in the discharge of their duty while co-operating with the Navy by order of the President, shall be entitled to be placed on the Navy pension-list, at the same rate of pension and under the same regulations and restrictions as are provided by law for the officers and seamen of the Navy.

SEC. 4742. From and after the second day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, no claim for a pension, or for an increase of pension, shall be allowed in favor of the children or other descendants of any person who served in the war of the Revolution, or of the widow of such person, when such person or his widow died without having established a claim to a pension.

SEC. 4743. In all cases where a pension has been granted to any officer or soldier of the Revolution in his life-time, the evidence upon which such pension was granted shall be conclusive of the service of such officer or soldier in the application of any widow, or woman who may have been the widow, of such officer or soldier, for a pension; and upon proof by her that she was married to any such officer or soldier, and that she is a widow, she shall thereupon be placed upon the pension-rolls at the same rate that such officer or soldier received during his life-time.

SEC. 4744. The Commissioner of Pensions is authorized to detail, from time to time, clerks in his office to investigate suspected attempts at fraud on the Government, through and by virtue of the provisions of the pension-laws, and to aid in prosecuting any person so offending, with such additional compensation as is customary in cases of special service; and any person so detailed shall have the power to administer oaths and take affidavits in the course of any such investigation.

SEC. 4745. Any pledge, mortgage, sale, assignment, or transfer of any right, claim, or interest in any pension which has been, or may hereafter be, granted, shall be void and of no effect; and any person acting as attorney to receive and receipt for money for and in behalf of any person entitled to a pension shall, before receiving such money, take and subscribe an oath, to be filed with the pension-agent, and by him to be transmitted, with the vouchers now required by law, to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury, that he has no interest in such money by any pledge, mortgage, sale, assignment, or transfer, and that he does not know or believe that the same has been so disposed of to any person.

SEC. 4746. Every person who knowingly or willfully in anywise procures the making or presentation of any false or fraudulent affidavit concerning any claim for pension, or payment thereof, or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions, or who knowingly or willfully presents or causes to be presented at any pension-agency any power of attorney or other paper required as a voucher in drawing a pension, which paper bears a date subsequent to that on which it was actually signed or executed, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or by both.

SEC. 4747. No sum of money due, or to become due, to any pensioner, shall be liable to attachment, levy, or seizure by or under any legal or equitable process whatever, whether the same remains with the Pension-office, or any officer or agent thereof, or is in course of transmission to the pensioner entitled thereto, but shall inure wholly to the benefit of such pensioner.

SEC. 4748. That the Commissioner of Pensions, on application being made to him in person, or by letter, by any claimant or applicant for pension, bounty-land, or other allowance required by law to be adjusted or paid by the Pension-Office, shall furnish such person, free of all expense, all such printed instructions and forms as may be necessary in establishing and obtaining said claim; and on the issuing of a certificate of pension or of a bounty-land warrant, he shall forthwith notify the claimant or applicant, and also the agent or attorney in the case, if there be one, that such certificate has been issued, or allowance made, and the date and amount thereof.

SEC. 4749. No soldier or sailor shall be taken or held to be a deserter from the Army or Navy who faithfully served according to his enlistment until the nineteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and who, without proper authority or leave first obtained, quit his command or refused to serve after that date; but nothing herein contained shall operate as a remission of any forfeiture incurred by any such soldier or sailor of his pension; but this section shall be construed solely as a removal of any disability such soldier or sailor may have incurred by the loss of his citizenship in consequence of his desertion.

SEC. 4750. The Secretary of the Navy shall be trustee of the Navy pension-fund.

SEC. 4751. All penalties and forfeitures incurred under the provisions of sections twenty-four hundred and sixty-one, twenty-four hundred and sixty-two, and twenty-four hundred and sixty-three, Title, "THE PUBLIC LANDS," shall be sued for, recovered, distributed, and accounted for, under the directions of the Secretary of the Navy, and shall be paid over, one-half to the informers, if any, or captors, where seized, and the other half to the Secretary of the Navy for the use of the Navy pension-fund; and the Secretary is authorized to mitigate, in whole or in part, on such terms and conditions as he deems proper, by an order in writing, any fine, penalty, or forfeiture so incurred.

SEC. 4752. All money accruing or which has already accrued to the United States from the sale of prizes shall be and remain forever a fund for the payment of pensions to the officers, seamen, and marines who may be entitled to receive the same; and if such fund be insufficient for the purpose, the public faith is pledged to make up the deficiency; but if it should be more than sufficient, the surplus shall be applied to the making of further provision for the comfort of the disabled officers, seamen, and marines. [See § 4630.]

SEC. 4753. The Secretary of the Navy, as trustee of the naval pension-fund, is directed to cause to be invested in the registered securities of the United States, on the first day of January and the first day of July of each year, so much of such fund then in the Treasury of the United States as may not be required for the payment of naval pensions for the then current fiscal year; and upon the requisition of the Secretary, so much of the fund as may not be required for such payment of pensions accruing during the current fiscal year shall be held in the Treasury on the days above named in each year, subject to his order, for the purpose of such immediate investment; and the interest payable in coin upon the securities in which the fund may be invested, shall be so paid, when due, to the order of the Secretary of the Navy, and he is authorized and directed to exchange the amount of such interest when paid in coin, for so much of the legal currency of the United States as may be obtained therefor at the current rates of premium on gold, and to deposit the interest so converted in the Treasury to the credit of the naval pension fund; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to interfere with the payment of naval pensions under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, as regulated by law.

SEC. 4754. The interest on the naval pension-fund shall hereafter be at the rate of three per centum per annum in lawful money.

SEC. 4755. Navy pensions shall be paid from the Navy pension-fund, but no payments shall be made therefrom except upon appropriations authorized by Congress.

SEC. 4756. There shall be paid out of the naval pension-fund to every person who, from age or infirmity, is disabled from sea-service, but who has served as an enlisted person in the Navy or Marine Corps for the period of twenty years, and not been discharged for misconduct, in lieu of being provided with a home in the Naval Asylum, Philadelphia, if he so elects, a sum equal to one-half the pay of his rating at the time he was discharged, to be paid to him quarterly, under the direction of the Commissioner of Pensions; and applications for such pension shall be made to the Secretary of the Navy, who, upon being satisfied that the applicant comes within the provisions of this section, shall certify the same to the Commissioner of Pensions, and such certificate shall be his warrant for making payment as herein authorized.

SEC. 4757. Every disabled person who has served in the Navy or Marine Corps as an enlisted man for a period of not less than ten years, and not been discharged for misconduct, may apply to the Secretary of the Navy for aid from the surplus income of the naval pension-fund; and the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to convene a board of not less than three naval officers, one of whom shall be a surgeon, to examine into the condition of the applicant, and to recommend a suitable amount for his relief, and for a specified time, and upon the approval of such recommendation by the Secretary of the Navy, and certificate thereof to the Commissioner of Pensions, the amount shall be paid in the same manner as is provided in the preceding section for the payment to persons disabled by long service in the Navy; but no allowance so made shall exceed the rate of a pension for full disability corresponding to the grade of the applicant, nor, if in addition to a pension, exceed one-fourth the rate of such pension.

SEC. 4758. The Secretary of the Navy shall be trustee of the privateer pension-fund.

SEC. 4759. Two per centum on the net amount, after deducting all charges and expenditures, of the prize-money arising from captured vessels and cargoes, and on the net amount of the salvage of vessels and cargoes recaptured by the private armed vessels of the United States, shall be secured and paid over to the collector or other chief officers of the customs at the port or place in the United States, at which such captured or recaptured vessel may arrive; or to the consul or other public agent of the United States residing at the port or place, not within the United States, at which such captured or recaptured vessels may arrive. And the moneys arising therefrom are pledged by the Government of the United States as a fund for the support and maintenance of the widows and orphans of such persons as may be slain, and for the support and maintenance of such persons as may be wounded and disabled on board of the private armed vessels of the United States, in any engagement with the enemy, to be assigned and distributed in such manner as is or may be provided by law.

SEC. 4760. The two per centum reserved in the hands of the collectors and consuls by the preceding section, shall be paid to the Treasury, under the like regulations provided for other public money, and shall constitute a fund for the purposes provided for by that section.

SEC. 4761. The Secretary of the Interior is required to place on the pension-list, under the like regulations and restrictions as are used in relation to the Navy of the United States, any officer, seaman, or marine, who, on board of any private armed vessel bearing a commission of letter of marque, shall have been wounded or otherwise disabled in any engagement with the enemy, or in the line of their duty as officers, seamen, or marines of such private armed vessel; allowing to the captain a sum not exceeding twenty dollars per month; to lieutenants and sailing-master a sum not exceeding twelve dollars each per month; to marine officer, boatswain, gunner, carpenter, master's mate, and prize-masters, a sum not exceeding ten dollars each per month; to all other officers a sum not exceeding eight dollars each per month, for the highest rate of disability, and so in proportion; and to a seaman, or acting as a marine, the sum of six dollars per month, for the highest rate of disability, and so in proportion; which several pensions shall be paid from moneys appropriated for the payment of pensions.

SEC. 4762. The commanding officer of every vessel having a commission, or letters of marque and reprisal, shall enter in his journal the name and rank of any officer, and the name of any seaman, who, during his cruise, is wounded or disabled, describing the manner and extent, as far as practicable, of such wound or disability.

SEC. 4763. Every collector shall transmit quarterly to the Secretary of the Navy a transcript of such journals as may have been reported to him, so far as it gives a list of the officers and crew, and the description of wounds and disabilities, the better to enable the Secretary to decide on claims for pensions.

SEC. 4764. Within fifteen days immediately preceding the fourth day of March, June, September, and December in each year, the several agents for the payment of pensions shall prepare a quarterly voucher for every person whose pension is payable at his agency, and transmit the same by mail, directed to the address of the pensioner named in such voucher, who, on or after the fourth day of March, June, September, and December next succeeding the date of such voucher, may execute and return the same to the agency at which it was prepared, and at which the pension of such person is due and payable.

SEC. 4765. Upon the receipt of such voucher, properly executed, and the identity of the pensioner being established and proved in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, the agent for the payment of pensions shall immediately draw his check on the proper assistant treasurer or designated depository of the United States for the amount due such pensioner, payable to his order, and transmit the same by mail, directed to the address of the pensioner entitled thereto; but any pensioner may be required, if thought proper by the Commissioner of Pensions, to appear personally and receive his pension.

SEC. 4766. Hereafter no pension shall be paid to any person other than the pensioner entitled thereto, nor otherwise than according to the provisions of this Title, and no warrant, power of attorney, or other paper executed or purporting to be executed by any pensioner to any attorney, claim-agent, broker, or other person, shall be recognized by any agent for the payment of pensions, nor shall any pension be paid thereon. But payment to persons laboring under legal disabilities may be made to the guardians of such persons in the manner herein prescribed; and pensions payable to persons in foreign countries may be made according to the provisions of existing laws.

SEC. 4767. The Secretary of the Interior shall cause suitable blanks for the vouchers mentioned in section forty-seven hundred and sixty-four to be printed and distributed to the agents for the payment of pensions, upon which he shall cause a note to be printed informing pensioners of the fact that hereafter no pension will be paid, except upon the vouchers issued as herein directed.

SEC. 4768. The Commissioner of Pensions shall forward the certificate of [pensions] [pension,] granted in any case, to the agent for paying pensions where such certificate is made payable, and at the same time forward therewith one of the articles of agreement filed in the case and approved by the Commissioner, setting forth the fee agreed upon between the claimant and the attorney or agent, and where no agreement is on file, as hereinbefore provided, he shall direct that a fee of ten dollars only be paid the agent or attorney. [Sec. § 5485.]

SEC. 4769. It shall be the duty of the agent paying such pension to deduct from the amount due the pensioner the amount of fee so agreed upon or directed by the Commissioner to be paid where no agreement is filed and approved, and to forward or cause to be forwarded to the agent or attorney of record named in such agreement, or, in case there is no agreement, to the agent prosecuting the case, the amount of the proper fee, deducting therefrom the sum of thirty cents in payment of his services in forwarding the same.

SEC. 4770. [In place of original checks issued for pensions, when lost, stolen, or destroyed, disbursing officers and agents of the United States are authorized, after the expiration of six months from the date of such checks, to issue duplicate checks, and the Treasurer, assistant treasurers, and designated depositories of the United States are directed to pay such checks, drawn in pursuance of law by such officers or agents, upon notice and proof of the loss of the original checks, under such regulations in regard to their issue and payment, and upon the execution of such bonds, with sureties, to indemnify the United States, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. But this section shall not apply to any check exceeding in amount the sum of five hundred dollars.]

SEC. 4771. In all cases of application for the payment of pensions to invalid pensioners to the fourth day of September of an odd year, the certificate of an examining surgeon duly appointed by the Commissioner of Pensions, or of a surgeon of the Army or Navy, stating the continuance of the disability for which the pension was originally granted, describing it, and the degree of such disability at the time of making the certificate, shall be required to accompany the vouchers, and a duplicate thereof shall be filed in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions; and if in a case of continued disability it shall be stated at a degree below that for which the pension was originally granted, or was last paid, the pensioner shall only be paid for the quarter then due at the rate stated in the certificate. But where the pension was originally granted for a disability in consequence of the loss of a limb, or other essential portion of the body, or for other cause which cannot, either in whole or in part, be removed, or when a disability is certified, by competent examining surgeons, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Pensions, to have become permanent in a degree equal to the whole rate of pension, the above certificate shall not be necessary to entitle the pensioner to payment.

SEC. 4772. Nothing in the preceding section shall be construed to prevent the Commissioner of Pensions from requiring a more frequent examination, if, in his judgment, it is necessary.

SEC. 4773. The biennial certificate of two unappointed civil surgeons shall not be accepted in any case, except upon satisfactory evidence that an examination by a commissioned or duly appointed surgeon is impracticable.

SEC. 4774. The Commissioner of Pensions is authorized to organize, at his discretion, boards of examining surgeons, not to exceed three members, and each member of a board thus organized who is actually present and makes, in connection with other members or member, an ordered or periodical examination, shall be entitled to the fee of one dollar, on the receipt of a proper certificate of such examination by the Commissioner of Pensions.

SEC. 4775. Examining surgeons duly appointed by the Commissioner of Pensions, and such other qualified surgeons as may be employed in the Pension-Office, may be required by him, from time to time, as he deems for the interests of the Government, to make special examinations of pensioners, or applicants for pension, and such examinations shall have precedence over previous examinations, whether special or biennial; but when injustice is alleged to have been done by an examination so ordered, the Commissioner of Pensions may, at his discretion, select a board of three duly appointed examining surgeons, who shall meet at a place to be designated by him, and shall review such cases as may be ordered before them on appeal from any special examination, and the decision of such board shall be final on the question so submitted thereto, provided the Commissioner approve the same. The compensation of each of such surgeons shall be three dollars, and shall be paid out of any appropriations made for the payment of pensions, in the same manner as the ordinary fees of appointed surgeons are or may be authorized to be paid.

SEC. 4776. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appoint a duly qualified surgeon as medical referee who, under the control and direction of the Commissioner of Pensions, shall have charge of the examination and revision of the reports of examining surgeons, and such other duties touching medical and surgical questions in the Pension-Office, as the interests of the service may demand; and his salary shall be two thousand five hundred dollars per annum. And the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized to appoint such qualified surgeons (not exceeding four) as the exigencies of the service may require, who may perform the duties of examining surgeons when so required, and who shall be borne upon the rolls as clerks of the fourth class; but such appointments shall not increase the clerical force of said Bureau.

SEC. 4777. The Commissioner of Pensions is empowered to appoint, at his discretion, civil surgeons to make the periodical examinations of pensioners which are or may be required by law, and to examine applicants for pension, where he deems an examination by a surgeon appointed by him necessary; and the fee for such examinations, and the requisite certificates thereof in duplicate, including postage on such as are transmitted to pension-agents, shall be two dollars, which shall be paid by the agent for paying pensions in the district within which the pensioner or claimant resides, out of any money appropriated for the payment of pensions, under such regulations as the Commissioner of pensions may prescribe.

SEC. 4778. The President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, all pension-agents, who shall hold their respective offices for the term of four years, unless sooner removed or suspended, as provided by law, and until their successors are appointed and qualified.

SEC. 4779. All pension-agents shall give bond, with good and sufficient sureties, for such amount and in such form as the Secretary of the Interior may approve.

SEC. 4780. The President is authorized to establish agencies for the payment of pensions wherever, in his judgment, the public interests and the convenience of the pensioners require; but the number of pension-agencies in any State or Territory shall in no case be increased hereafter so as to exceed three, and no such agency shall be established in addition to those now existing in any State or Territory in which the whole amount of pensions paid during the fiscal year next preceding shall not have exceeded the sum of five hundred thousand dollars.

SEC. 4781. Agents for paying pensions shall receive two per centum on all disbursements made by them to pensioners. There shall be allowed, however, over and above such compensation, to every pension-agent disbursing fifty thousand dollars annually, not exceeding five hundred dollars a year for clerk-hire, office-rent, and office-expenses; to every agent disbursing one hundred thousand dollars annually, not exceeding seven hundred and fifty dollars a year; and for every fifty thousand dollars additional, not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars a year, for like purposes. But in no case shall the aggregate amount of compensation to any one agent, paying both Army and Navy pensions, exceed four thousand dollars a year.

SEC. 4782. In addition to the compensation allowed in this Title, each pension agent shall be allowed, as full compensation for all service, including postage required by the provisions of sections forty-seven hundred and sixty-four and forty-seven hundred and sixty-five, the sum of thirty cents, and no more, for each voucher prepared and paid by him, which amount shall be paid by the United States.

SEC. 4783. Every guardian having the charge and custody of the pension of his ward who embezzles the same in violation of his trust, or fraudulently converts the same to his own use, shall be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or imprisonment at hard labor for a term not exceeding five years or both. [See § 5486.]

SEC. 4784. Agents for the payment of pensions, and any clerks appointed by them and designated in writing for that purpose, which designation shall be returned to and filed in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions, are required, without any fee therefor, to take and certify the affidavits of all pensioners and their witnesses who may personally appear before them for that purpose, in which case the check for the pension, when due and payable, shall be given direct to the hand of the party entitled thereto, if desired, and not mailed to his address as required by section forty-seven hundred and sixty-five.

SEC. 4785. No agent or attorney or other person shall demand or receive any other compensation for his services in prosecuting a claim for pension or bounty-land than such as the Commissioner of Pensions shall direct to be paid to him, not exceeding twenty-five dollars.

SEC. 4786. It shall be the duty of the agent or attorney of record in the prosecution of the case to cause to be filed with the Commissioner of Pensions, for his approval, duplicate articles of agreement, without additional cost to the claimant, setting forth the fee agreed upon by the parties, which agreement shall be executed in the presence of and certified by some officer competent to administer oaths. In all cases where application is made for pension or bounty-land, and no agreement is filed with and approved by the Commissioner as herein provided, the fee shall be ten dollars and no more. [See § 4768.]

SEC. 4787. Every officer, soldier, seaman, and marine, who was disabled, during the war for the suppression of the rebellion, in the military or naval service, and in the line of duty, or in consequence of wounds received or disease contracted therein, and who was furnished by the War Department, since the seventeenth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy, with an artificial limb or apparatus for resection, or who was entitled to receive such limb or apparatus since said date, shall be entitled to receive a new limb or apparatus at the expiration of every five years thereafter, under such regulations as have been or may be prescribed by the Surgeon-General of the Army. [The provisions of this section shall apply to all officers, non-commissioned officers, enlisted and hired men of the land and naval forces of the United States, who, in the line of their duty as such, shall have lost limbs or sustained bodily injuries depriving them of the use of any of their limbs, to be determined by the Surgeon-General of the Army; and the term of five years herein specified shall be held to commence in each case with the filing of the application for the benefits of this section. [See § 1176.]

SEC. 4788. Every person entitled to the benefits of the preceding section may, if he so elects, receive, instead of such limb or apparatus, the money value thereof, at the following rates, namely: For artificial legs, seventy-five dollars; for arms, fifty dollars; for feet, fifty dollars; for apparatus for resection, fifty dollars.

SEC. 4789. The Surgeon-General shall certify to the Commissioner of Pensions a list of all soldiers who elect to receive money commutation instead of limbs or apparatus, with the amount due to each, and the Commissioner of Pensions shall cause the same to be paid to such soldiers in the same manner as pensions are paid.

SEC. 4790. Every person in the military or naval service who lost a limb during the war of the rebellion, [or is entitled to the benefits of section forty-seven hundred and eighty-seven,] but from the nature of his injury is not able to use an artificial limb, shall be entitled to the benefits of section forty-seven hundred and eighty-eight, and shall receive money commutation as therein provided.

SEC. 4791. The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to furnish to the persons embraced by the provisions of section forty-seven hundred and eighty-seven, transportation to and from their homes and the place where they may be required to go to obtain artificial limbs provided for them under authority of law. [The transportation allowed for having artificial limbs fitted shall be furnished by the Quartermaster-General of the Army, the cost of which shall be refunded from the appropriations for invalid pensions.]

Be it enacted, &c.

[SECTION 1], That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-rolls the names of the surviving officers and enlisted and drafted men, without regard to color, including militia and volunteers, of the military and naval service of the United States, who served for fourteen days in the war with Great Britain of eighteen hundred and twelve, or who were in any engagement, and were honorably discharged, and the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted and drafted men.

SEC. 2. That this act shall not apply to any person who is receiving a pension at the rate of eight dollars per month or more, nor to any person receiving a pension of less than eight dollars per month except for the difference between the pension now received (if less than eight dollars per month) and eight dollars per month.

Pensions under this act shall be at the rate of eight dollars per month, except as herein provided, and shall be paid to the persons entitled thereto, from and after the passage of this act, for and during their natural lives:

Provided, That the pensions to widows provided for in this act shall cease when they shall marry again.

SEC. 3. That before the name of any person shall be placed upon the pension-rolls under this act, proof shall be made, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Pensions, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, shall prescribe, that the applicant is entitled to a pension under this act. * * *

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to restore to the pension-rolls the names of all persons now surviving heretofore pensioned on account of service in the war of eighteen hundred and twelve against Great Britain, or for service in any of the Indian wars, and whose names were stricken from the rolls in pursuance of the act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to strike from the pension-rolls the names of such persons as have taken up arms against the government, or who have in any manner encouraged the rebels," approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two;

And that the joint resolution (1) entitled "Joint resolution prohibiting payment by any officer of the government to any person not known to have been opposed to the rebellion and in favor of its suppression," approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and section four thousand seven hundred and sixteen of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall not apply to the persons provided for by this act:

Provided, That no money shall be paid to any one on account of pensions for the time during which his name remained stricken from the rolls.

SEC. 6. That the surviving widow of any pensioner of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve where the name of said pensioner was stricken from the pension-rolls in pursuance of the act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to strike from the pension-rolls the names of such persons as have taken up arms against the government, or who have in any manner encouraged the rebels," approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and where, under the existing provisions of law, said pensioner died without his name being restored to the rolls, shall be entitled to make claim for a pension as such widow after the passage of this act:

Provided, That no such arrearages shall be paid for any period prior to the time of the removal of the disability of the pensioner, as provided in section five:

And provided further, That under this act any widow of a Revolutionary soldier who served fourteen days or was in any engagement shall be placed upon the pension-rolls of the United States, and receive a pension at the rate of eight dollars per month.

SEC. 7. That all laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act be, and they are hereby, repealed. [March 9, 1878.]

NOTE.—(1) The joint resolution here referred to of 1867, No. 46 (14 Stat. L., 571), is incorporated into Revised Statutes in § 3480.

An Act Amending the Pension-Law

So as to remove the disability of those who, having participated in the Rebellion, have, since its termination, enlisted in the Army of the United States, and become disabled.

Pensions allowed to disabled soldiers, &c., in certain cases, although they had engaged in rebellion.

Be it enacted, &c., That the law prohibiting the payment of any money on account of pensions to any person, or to the widow, children, or heirs of any deceased person, who, in any manner, engaged in or aided or abetted the late rebellion against the authority of the United States, shall not be construed to apply to such persons as afterward voluntarily enlisted in the Army of the United States, and who, while in such service, incurred disability from a wound or injury received or disease contracted in the line of duty. [March 3, 1877.]

An act making appropriations for the payment of arrears of pensions

Granted by Act of Congress approved January twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and for other purposes.

SECTION

1. Pension agents' fees for services to January 25, 1879. Rate of arrears of invalid pensions to be graded from time to time, &c.
Pensions on account of disabilities, &c., occurring after cessation of hostilities and before mustering out.
2. Commencement of pensions in consequence of death, injuries, &c., since March 4, 1861.
3. Repeal of R. S. § 4709.

Be it enacted, &c. [SECTION 1.]

The pension agents shall receive for their services and expenses in paying the arrears upon pensions allowed previous to January twenty-fifth eighteen hundred and seventy-nine including postage on vouchers and checks sent to the pensioner thirty cents for each payment; and the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the payment of the same.

That the rate at which the arrears of invalid pensions shall be allowed and computed in the cases which have been or shall hereafter be allowed shall be graded according to the degree of the pensioner's disability from time to time and the provisions of the pension laws in force over the period for which the arrears shall be computed.

That section one of the act of January twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, granting arrears of pensions shall be construed to extend to and include pensions on account of soldiers who were enlisted or drafted for the service in the war of the rebellion, but died or incurred disability from a cause originating after the cessation of hostilities; and before being mustered out:

Provided, That in no case shall arrears of pensions be allowed and paid from a time prior to the date of actual disability.

SEC. 2. All pensions which have been, or which may hereafter be, granted in consequence of death occurring from a cause which originated in the service since the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or in consequence of wounds or injuries received or disease contracted since that date shall commence from the death or discharge of the person on whose account the claim has been or is hereafter granted if the disability occurred prior to discharge, and if such disability occurred after the discharge then from the date of actual disability or from the termination of the right of party having prior title to such pension:

Provided, The application for such pension has been or is hereafter filed with the Commissioner of Pensions prior to the first day of July eighteen hundred and eighty, otherwise the pension shall commence from the date of filing the application; but the limitation herein prescribed shall not apply to claims by or in behalf of insane persons and children under sixteen years of age.

SEC. 3. Section forty-seven hundred and nine of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed. [March 3, 1879.]

An act relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases.

SECTION
1. Attorneys, agents, &c., in pension cases not to receive more than $10' fee, and fee-contracts not to be filed, &c.

—fees of not to be deducted and paid to, by pension agent.

2. Repeal.

Be it enacted, &c.

[SECTION 1.] It shall be unlawful for any attorney, agent or other person to demand or receive for his services in a pension case a greater sum than ten dollars.

No fee contract shall hereafter be filed with the Commissioner of Pensions in any case.

In pending cases in which a fee contract has heretofore been filed, if the pension shall be allowed, the Commissioner of Pensions shall approve the same as to the amount of the fee to be paid at the amount specified in the contract.

Sections forty-seven hundred and sixty-eight, forty-seven hundred and sixty-nine and forty-seven hundred and eighty-six of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to any case or claim hereafter filed, nor to any pending claim in which the claimant has not been represented by an agent or attorney prior to the passage of this act.

SEC. 2. Section forty-seven hundred and eighty-five of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed. [June 20, 1878.]

Penalty for agents, attorneys, &c., demanding illegal fees in pension cases.

[Par. 2.] The provisions of section fifty-four hundred and eighty-five of the Revised Statutes shall be applicable to any person who shall violate the provisions of an act entitled "An act relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases," approved June twentieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

* * * * *

An Act to Amend Section Forty-six Hundred and Ninety-five of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Lieutenant commanders' pension.

Be it enacted, &c., That from and after July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two pensions granted to lieutenant-commanders in the Navy for disability, or on account of their death, shall be the same as theretofore provided for lieutenants-commanding. [June 18, 1878.]

An Act for the Payment,

To the Officers and Soldiers of the Mexican War, of the Three Months' extra pay provided for by the Act of July Nineteenth, Eighteen Hundred and Forty-eight.

Three months' extra pay to officers and soldiers of Mexican war.

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the officers and soldiers "engaged in the military service of the United States in the war with Mexico, and who served out the time of their engagement or were honorably discharged", the three months' extra pay provided for by the act of July nineteenth, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and the limitations contained in said act, in all cases, upon the presentation of satisfactory evidence that said extra compensation has not been previously received:

Provided, That the provisions of this act shall include also the officers, petty-officers, seamen, and marines of the United States Navy, the Revenue Marine Service and the officers and soldiers of the United States Army employed in the prosecution of said war. [February 19, 1879.]

An Act to Restore Pensions in certain Cases.

Pensions allowed prior to July 25, 1866, not to be reduced by subsequent acts.
—to be restored if already reduced.

Be it enacted, &c., That section three of an act entitled "An act increasing the pensions of widows and orphans, and for other purposes", approved July twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and section thirteen of an act entitled "An act relating to pensions", approved July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and section forty-seven hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes, shall not operate to reduce the rate of any pension which had actually been allowed to the commissioned, non-commissioned, or petty officers of the Navy or their widows or minor children, prior to the twenty-fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six;

And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to restore all such pensions as have already been so reduced to the rate originally granted and allowed, to take effect from the date of such reduction. [June 9, 1880.]

An Act Relating to Soldiers while in the Civil Service of the United States.

Certain pensioners who lost their pensions by being in the civil service to have same restored.

Be it enacted, &c., That all persons who, under and by virtue of the first section of the act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, were deprived of their pensions during any portion of the time from the third of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to the sixth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, by reason of their being in the civil service of the United States, shall be paid their said pensions, withheld by virtue of said section of the act aforesaid, for and during the said period of time from the third of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to the sixth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six. [March 1, 1879.]

Limiting Prosecution of Claims.

SEC. 3. That section forty-seven hundred and seventeen of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which provides that

"No claim for pension not prosecuted to a successful issue within five years from the date of filing the same shall be admitted without record evidence from the War or Navy Department of the injury or the disease which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim is made: Provided, That in any case in which the limitation prescribed by this section bars the further prosecution of the claim, the claimant may present, through the Pension Office, to the Adjutant-General of the Army or the Surgeon-General of the Navy, evidence that the disease or injury which resulted in the disability or death of the person on whose account the claim is made originated in the service and in the line of duty;

And if such evidence is deemed satisfactory by the officer to whom it may be submitted, he shall cause a record of the fact so proved to be made, and a copy of the same to be transmitted to the Commissioner of Pensions, and the bar to the prosecution of the claim shall thereby be removed", be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 4. No claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for arrears of pension.

SEC. 5. That all acts or parts of acts so far as they may conflict with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed. [January 25, 1870.]

An Act to Increase Pensions in Certain Cases.

SECTIONS

1. Pension of $24 per month allowed to pensioners who have lost arm above elbow, or leg above knee; but no artificial limbs.

2. When act takes effect.

Be it enacted, &c.

[SECTION 1]. That all persons who are now entitled to pensions under existing laws and who have lost either an arm at or above the elbow, or a leg at or above the knee, shall be rated in the second class, and shall receive twenty-four dollars per month:

Provided, That no artificial limbs, or commutation therefor, shall be furnished to such persons as shall be entitled to pensions under this act.

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect from and after the fourth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four. [June 18, 1874.]

An Act for the Relief of Certain Pensioners.

Pension for loss of leg at hip joint.

Be it enacted, &c., That all pensioners now on the pension rolls, or who may hereafter be placed thereon, for amputation of either leg at the hip joint, shall receive a pension at the rate of thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents per month from the date of the approval of this act. [March 3, 1879].

An Act for the Relief of

Soldiers and Sailors Becoming Totally Blind in the Service of the Country.

Pension to soldiers and sailors who become totally blind.

Be it enacted, &c., That the act of June seventeenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, entitled "An act to increase the pensions of certain soldiers and sailors who have lost both their hands or both their feet, or the sight of both eyes, in the service of the country," be so construed as to include all soldiers and sailors who have become totally blind from causes occurring in the service of the United States. [March 3, 1879.]

An Act to Allow a Pension

of Thirty-six Dollars per Month to Soldiers who have Lost both an Arm and a Leg.

Pensions for loss of one hand and one foot in military or naval service.

Be it enacted, &c., That all persons who, while in the military or naval service of the United States, and in the line of duty, shall have lost one hand and one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in both, shall be entitled to a pension for each of such disabilities, and at such a rate as is provided for by the provisions of the existing laws for each disability:

Provided, That this act shall not be so construed as to reduce pensions in any case. [February 28, 1877.]

An Act to Increase the Pensions

of Certain Pensioned Soldiers and Sailors who are Utterly Helpless from Injuries Received or Diseases Contracted while in the United States Service.

SECTION

1. Pensions of persons permanently disabled in military service increased to $72 a month.
2. — to date from June 17, 1878.

Be it enacted, &c.,

[SECTION 1], That all soldiers and sailors who are now receiving a pension of fifty dollars per month, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to increase the pension of soldiers and sailors who have been totally disabled," approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, shall receive, in lieu of all pensions now paid them by the Government of the United States, and there shall be paid them in the same manner as pensions are now paid to such persons, the sum of seventy-two dollars per month.

SEC. 2. All pensioners whose pensions shall be increased by the provisions of this act from fifty dollars per month to seventy-two dollars per month shall be paid the difference between said sums monthly, from June seventeenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, to the time of the taking effect of this act. [June 16, 1880.]

LAW OF NATIONS.*

Origin and Progress of the Law of Nations; the Natural, Customary, and Conventional Laws of Nations, Defined.

The law of nations, in its present improved state, has not long existed. Ancient nations were little governed by the principles of natural justice. Little respect was paid by one nation to the rights of the persons and property of the citizens of another. Robbery on land and sea was not only tolerated, but esteemed honorable; and prisoners of war were either put to death, or reduced to slavery. By this rule of national law, commerce was destroyed, and perpetual enmity kept up between nations.

No essential, permanent improvement in the law of nations seems to have been made until within the last three or four centuries. By the light of science and Christianity, the rights and obligations of nations have come to be better understood, and more generally regarded. Commerce also has done much to improve the law, by showing that the true interests of a nation are promoted by peace and friendly intercourse.

Hence we find the nations of Europe and America recognizing the same rules of international law. And as the light of Christianity shall become more widely diffused, and its principles more generally practiced, the law of nations will undergo still further improvements. And may we not hope, that, as one of these improvements, the practice of settling national disputes by war will be abolished, and one more rational and humane be adopted, that of referring all difficulties which the parties are incapable of adjusting, to some disinterested power for adjudication?

There is, in every nation or state, some acknowledged authority to make laws to protect the rights of the citizens, and courts of justice to try and punish offenders. But there is no tribunal before which one nation can be brought to answer for the violation of the rights of another. Every nation, however small and weak, is independent of every other. Hence, when injuries are committed by one upon another, the offended party, unless it chooses quietly to endure the wrong, must obtain redress, either by appealing to the sense of justice of the party offending, or by a resort to force.

The equality and independence of nations, without respect to their relative strength or extent of territory, is a settled principle of national law. Each has a right to establish such government and tolerate such religion as it thinks proper, and no other nation has a right to interfere with its internal policy. To this general rule, however, writers make an exception. The natural right of every state to provide for its own safety, gives it the right to interfere where its security is seriously endangered by the internal transactions of another state. But it is admitted, that such cases are so very rare, that it would be dangerous to reduce them to a rule. The right of forcible interference is only to be inferred from the circumstances of the special case.

So also cases seldom arise, when one nation has a right to assist the subjects of another in overturning or changing their government. It is generally agreed, that such assistance may be afforded consistently with the law of nations, in extreme cases; as when the tyranny of a government becomes so oppressive as to compel the people to rise in their defense, and call for assistance. It is held that rulers may, by an unwarrantable exercise of power, violate the principles of the social compact, and give their subjects just cause to consider themselves discharged from their allegiance.

When the subjects of any government have carried their revolt so far as to have established a new state, and to give reasonable evidence of their ability to maintain a government, the right of assistance is unquestionable. But it is not clear, that, prior to this state of progress in a revolution, the right to interpose would be justifiable. The assistance given by France to this country, during the war of our revolution, was not a violation of the law of nations. The states having thrown off their allegiance to Great Britain, and established a government of their own, any foreign nation had a right to assist the states in securing their independence.

There is a sense, however, in which nations are not wholly independent. The happiness of mankind, as has been observed, depends upon association. Without the assistance which men in the social state derive from each other, they could scarcely support their own being. Similar to this is the mutual dependence of nations. Although the people of every nation have within themselves the means of maintaining their individual and national existence, their prosperity and happiness are greatly promoted by commerce with other nations. And as laws are necessary to govern the conduct of the individual citizens of a state, so certain rules are necessary to regulate the intercourse of nations.

It has been observed, also, that the law of nature, which is in accordance with the will of the Creator as expressed in his revealed law, is a perfect rule for all moral and social beings, and ought to be universally obeyed; and that its observance conduces to their highest happiness. Equally binding is this law upon nations: nor is the general good of mankind less promoted by its application to the affairs of nations than by its application to the affairs of individual persons. It requires each nation to respect the rights of all others, and to do for them what their necessities demand, and what each is capable of doing, consistently with the duties it owes to itself.

The law of nature applied to nations or states as moral persons, is called the natural law of nations. It is also called the necessary law of nations, because nations are morally bound to observe it; and sometimes the internal law of nations, from its being binding on the conscience.

Although, as has been elsewhere remarked, the law of nature, as expressed in the law of revelation, is a correct rule of human conduct; yet, as much of this law consists of general principles from which particular duties can not always be deduced, positive human enactments are necessary to define the law of nature and revelation. So also an important part of the law of nations necessarily consists of positive institutions. Hence, some writers have divided international law under these two principal heads: the natural law of nations, and the positive.

The positive law of nations, is founded on usage or custom and agreement; and may be considered as properly divided into the customary law of nations, and the conventional. The customary law of nations consists of certain maxims, or is founded on customs and usages which have long been observed and tacitly consented to by nations, and which thereby become binding upon all who have adopted them, so far as their observance does not require the violation of the law of nature.

A conventional law of nations is one that has been established by a treaty or league. A convention is an assembly of persons who meet for civil or political purposes. But an agreement or contract between nations, though made without a formal meeting, is deemed conventional. The manner in which treaties are made, has been described.

Thus the rights and interests of nations do not depend for their security entirely upon the law of nature, which is liable to misconstruction. Nor, so far as they are dependent upon positive institutions, do they rest wholly upon the vague and uncertain law of usage or custom. Conventional law, because more definite, has been found to afford far greater security to the rights of commerce. Hence the practice, now common among nations, of regulating their intercourse by negotiation. Treaties of commerce have been formed between most of the principal commercial states in the world. Their utility in regulating trade between states, is no less than that of written agreements between individuals, by which the rights of the contracting parties are placed beyond dispute.

One advantage of treaties of commerce is, that a nation may, if its interests demand, enter into treaties granting special privileges to one or more nations, without giving just cause of offense to others. Such special favors, however, should not be granted without good reasons. It is the duty of every nation to respect the rights of all others, and to cultivate that mutual good will which is the result of liberal, just, and impartial dealing.

It may be said, that, if each nation is independent of every other, and if there is no constituted authority to enforce the fulfillment of treaty stipulations, the rights guaranteed by treaties are still insecure. Few governments, however, are so devoid of a sense of honor, as, by a palpable violation of their treaty obligations, to incur the odium and condemnation of all mankind. Self-respect, and the fear of provoking a war, have generally proved sufficient incentives to the observance of treaties.

The obligations of nations are sometimes called imperfect. A perfect obligation is one that can be enforced—one that exists where there is a right to compel the party on whom the obligation rests to fulfil it. An imperfect obligation gives only the right to demand the fulfillment, leaving the party pledged to judge what his duty requires, and to do as he chooses, without being constrained by another to do otherwise.

The Jurisdiction of Nations; their Mutual Rights and Obligations; the Rights of Ambassadors, Ministers, &c.

The seas are regarded as the common highway of nations. The main ocean, for navigation and fishing, is open to all mankind; and no nation can appropriate it to its own exclusive use. Every state, however, has jurisdiction at sea over its own subjects, in its own public and private vessels. The persons on board such vessels are protected and governed by the laws of the country to which they belong; and they may be punished by these laws for offenses committed on board of its public vessels in foreign ports.

The question how far a nation has jurisdiction over the seas adjoining its lands, is not clearly settled. It appears to be generally conceded, that a nation has the right of exclusive dominion over navigable rivers flowing through its territory; the harbors, bays, gulfs, and arms of the sea; and such extent of sea adjoining its territories as is necessary to the safety of the nation, which is considered by some to be as far as a cannon shot will reach, or about a marine league. Different nations have at times claimed much wider jurisdiction into the sea; but such claim rests upon doubtful authority.

It is the duty of a nation, in time of peace, to allow the people of other states a passage over its lands and waters, so far as it can be permitted without inconvenience, and with safety to its own citizens. Of this the nation is to be its own judge. The right of passage is therefore only an imperfect right, so called, because the obligation to grant the right is an imperfect obligation. Whenever, therefore, the interests and safety of a nation require it, foreigners may be prohibited from coming within its territory.

The right of a state to keep foreigners out of its territory, is incident to, or results from the right of domain. Domain, in a general sense, signifies possession, or estate, and is perhaps more frequently applied to lands. Applied to a state, it means its whole territory, with everything included in it. And with respect to other states, the property of the individuals in the aggregate is to be considered as the property of the nation. The right of domain is unlimited; that is, the state has the sole and exclusive right to the dominion and control of the territory and other property within the state.

In general, it is the duty of a nation to allow foreigners to enter and settle in the country. On being admitted into a state, the state becomes pledged for their protection, and they become subject to its laws while they reside in it; and in consideration of the protection they receive, they are obliged to aid in defending it, and in supporting its government, even before they are admitted to all the rights of citizens.

But when persons who have committed crimes in one state, flee into another for shelter, the state into which they flee is not bound to rescue them from justice. A person charged with crime, can be tried only in the state whose laws he has violated. It is therefore the duty of the government to surrender the fugitive, on demand being made by the proper authorities of the state from which the person has fled, and after due examination by a civil magistrate, if it shall appear to the magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for the charge. The surrender of criminals is often provided for in treaties.

That rule of the law of nations, which makes foreigners amenable to the laws of the state into which they remove, does not apply to ambassadors. They are wholly exempt from all responsibility to the laws of the country to which they are sent, even when guilty of crime. All that can be done is, when their conduct is dangerous to the government and its citizens, either to deprive them of liberty by confinement, or to send them home, and demand their punishment.

As the interests of nations are promoted by intercourse, it is necessary that there should be some means of treating with each other, with the view of maintaining friendly relations. This can be done in no other way so well as through the medium of persons representing their respective governments. Each nation having a right to treat and communicate with every other, it ought not to be deprived of the services of its representative. Hence, by the general consent of nations, the persons and property of ambassadors and other public ministers, are held sacred and inviolable.

Embassadors are, by the laws of nations, entitled to the same protection in the countries through which they pass, in going to, and returning from, the government to which they are sent. And to insure them a safe passage, it has been the practice with some governments to grant passports, to be shown in case they were required. A passport is a written license from the authority of a state, granting permission or safe conduct for one to pass through its territory. Passports, though named in our law, are not known in practice, being deemed unnecessary.

An ambassador is entitled to protection, by the law of nations, on his entering the territory of the nation to which he is sent, and making himself known; though he is not insured the enjoyment of all his rights until he is formally received by the sovereign, and has presented his credentials; which are letters of attorney from his own sovereign, giving him his authority. In this country, ministers from abroad are received by the president.

If a minister at a foreign court treats the sovereign with disrespect, the fact is sometimes communicated to the government that sent him, with a request for his recall. Or, if the offense is a more serious one, the offended sovereign refuses intercourse with him while his master's answer is awaited. Or, if the case is an aggravated one, he expels him from the country. Every government has a right to judge for itself whether the language or conduct of a foreign minister is offensive.

Ministers at foreign governments, in their negotiations or business correspondence with those governments, sometimes consider themselves ill-treated, and their own nation dishonored, and take their leave and return home; or the minister informs his sovereign, who either recalls him, or takes such other measure as he shall think the honor and interest of his nation demand.

The peculiar condition of a country, the nature of the business upon which an ambassador is sent, or the personal character of the ambassador, may be such as to justify a government in refusing to receive such ambassador. But in order to preserve the amicable relations of the two countries, satisfactory explanations ought to be made, or good reasons offered for the refusal.

Ministers have not power to bind their sovereigns to any treaty or agreement. An ordinary credential, or letter of attorney, does not authorize a minister to bind his sovereign conclusively. He could not do so without a special power, containing express authority so to bind his principal. Few governments would act so imprudently. Their ministers act under secret instructions, which they are not bound to disclose. Even the treaties signed by plenipotentiaries, (a word signifying full power;) are, according to present usage, of no force, until ratified by their sovereigns.

We have used the words ambassador and minister without distinction. The different titles applied to representatives at foreign courts, do not indicate any material difference between them as to their powers and privileges, but the different degrees of dignity and respectability which custom has attached to them. They are differently classed by different writers. Perhaps the following is correct: Embassadors. (2) Envoys and ministers plenipotentiary. (3) Ministers resident. (4) Chargés d'affaires. The United States are represented abroad by ministers and chargés d'affaires.

Consuls are not entitled to the privileges enjoyed by ministers; but are subject to the laws of the country in which they reside. The principal duties of consuls have been described. The office of consul has been found to be one of great utility; hence, every trading nation has a consul in every considerable commercial port in the world. Their duties and privileges are generally limited and defined in treaties of commerce, or by the laws of the country which they represent. As in the case of ministers, consuls carry a certificate of their appointment, and must be acknowledged as consuls by the government within whose sovereignty they reside, before they can perform any duties pertaining to their office.

Offensive and Defensive War; Just Causes and objects of War; Reprisals; Alliances in War.

Considering the immense cost of a war; the vast sacrifice of human life, and the misery and sorrow consequent thereon; and its demoralizing effects upon a people; men have formed the conclusion, that all wars are inconsistent with the principles of Christianity, and therefore wrong. But it is not our purpose to discuss the question of the lawfulness of war. The general opinion prevalent among Christian nations will be assumed; namely, that self-preservation, or the right of self-defense, is a part of the law of our nature; and that it is the duty of civil society to protect the lives and property of its members; and further, that such protection is an essential consideration on which they enter into the social compact.

Wars are offensive and defensive. The use of force to obtain justice for injuries done, is offensive war. The making use of force against any power that attacks a nation or its privileges, is defensive war. A war may be defensive in its principles, though offensive in its operation. Thus, one nation is preparing to invade another; but before the threatened invasion takes place, the latter attacks the former as the best mode of repelling the invasion. In this case, the party making the attack would be acting on the defensive. The contending parties are called belligerents. The word belligerent is from the Latin bellum, war, and gero, to wage, or carry on.

Nations that take no part in the contest, are called neutrals.

War ought never to be undertaken without the most cogent reasons. In the first place, there must be aright to make war, and just grounds for making it. Nations have no right to employ force any further than is necessary for their own defense, and for the maintenance of their rights. Secondly, it should be made from proper motives; the good of the state, and the safety and common advantage of the citizens. Hence, there may be just cause for war, when it would be inexpedient or imprudent to involve the nation in such calamity.

The numerous objects of a lawful war may be reduced to these three: (1.) To recover what belongs to us, or to obtain satisfaction for injuries. (2.) To provide for our future safety by punishing the offender. (3.) To defend or protect ourselves from injury by repelling unjust attacks. The first and second are objects of an offensive war; the third is that of a defensive war.

Injury to an individual citizen of a state, by the subjects of another state, is deemed a just cause of war, if the persons offending, or the government of the state to which they belong, do not make reparation for the injury; for every nation is responsible for the good behaviour of its subjects. But, although this would, according to the law of nations, afford justifiable cause of war, neither the honor nor the true interests of a nation, require, that war should always be made for so slight a cause.

The honor and dignity of a nation would, in some cases, be best maintained by its making indemnity to its injured citizens, if satisfaction is refused, and suffer the wrong to pass unredressed. An individual who, though under the sanction of law, should avenge every slight act of violence committed upon his person, by inflicting personal chastisement upon the offender, would forfeit the public esteem. Nor, as we suppose, is it necessary for a nation, in order to retain the respect of civilized nations, to seek redress for every trifling injury, by a resort to war. A just sense of duty would suggest forbearance, at least until remonstrance against the repetition of injuries should be found unavailing.

A government that unnecessarily involves a whole nation in war, assumes a fearful responsibility. Generally the injury sought to be redressed should be serious, and satisfaction be demanded and refused, before recourse is had to arms. And where there is a question of right between the parties, the government making war ought to have no reasonable doubt of the justice of its claim. And even when no such doubt exists, it would be the duty of such government to prevent a war, if possible, by proposals of compromise. And it is believed that, in no case ought war to be made until attempts have been made to effect an adjustment of difficulties by compromise, or by offers to submit them for arbitration.

These sentiments, it is admitted, do not accord with the general practice of nations; probably they will not receive the assent of every reader. But it is believed, that those who are well instructed in the precepts of revealed religion, and draw their ideas of moral obligation from that system of morality, will find in these sentiments nothing to condemn. In this enlightened, Christian age, almost all national controversies might be honorably settled without bloodshed, even when, according to the law of nations, just cause of war exists, if the party aggrieved should faithfully endeavor, by all proper means, to effect a peaceable adjustment.

One of the means by which satisfaction is sought without making war, is that of reprisals. If a nation has taken what belongs to another, or refuses to pay a debt, or to make satisfaction for an injury, the offended nation seizes something belonging to the former or to her citizens, and retains it, or applies it to her own advantage, till she obtains satisfaction: and when there shall be no longer any hope of satisfaction, the effects thus seized are confiscated, and the reprisals are complete. To confiscate is to adjudge property to be forfeited, and to appropriate it to the use and benefit of the state. But as the loss in this case would fall upon unoffending citizens, it is the duty of their government to grant them indemnity.

But to justify reprisals by the law of nations, the grounds upon which they are authorized must be just and well ascertained. If the right of the party demanding satisfaction is doubtful, he must first demand an equitable examination of his claim, and next be able to show that justice has been refused, before he can justly take the matter into his own hands. He has no right to disturb the peace and safety of nations on a doubtful pretension. But if the other party refuses to have the matter brought to the proof, or to accede to any proposition for terminating the dispute in a peaceable manner, reprisals become lawful.

By treaties of alliance, nations sometimes agree to assist each other in case of war with a third power. It is a question not clearly settled, whether the government that is to afford the aid, is bound to do so when it deems the war to be unjust. The reasonable conclusion seems to be, that, in cases simply doubtful, the justice of the war is to be presumed; and the government pledging its aid is bound to fulfill its engagement. The contrary doctrine would furnish a nation with too ready a pretext for violating its pledge. In cases only of the clearest injustice on the part of its ally, can a nation rightfully avoid a positive engagement to afford assistance.

When, however, the object of the war is hopeless, or when the state under such engagement would, by furnishing the assistance, endanger its own safety, it is not bound to render the aid. But the danger must not be slight, remote, or uncertain. None but extreme cases would afford sufficient cause for withholding the promised assistance.

When the alliance is defensive, the treaty binds each party to assist the other only when engaged in a defensive war, and unjustly attacked. By the conventional law of nations, the government that first declares, or actually begins the war, is considered as making offensive war; and though it should not be the first actually to apply force, yet if it first renders the application of force necessary, it is the aggressor; and the other party, though first to apply force, is engaged in a defensive war.

Declaration of War; Its Effect upon the Person and Property of the Enemy's Subjects; Stratagems in War.

When a nation has resolved on making war, it is usual to announce the fact by a public declaration. In monarchical governments, the power to declare war, which of course includes the right of determining the question whether it shall be made, is vested in the king. In our own country, this power is, by the constitution, given to the representatives of the people, for reasons elsewhere stated.

It was the custom of the Romans, first to send a herald to demand satisfaction of the offending nation; and if, within a certain period, (thirty-three days,) a satisfactory answer was not returned, and war was resolved on, the herald was sent back as far as the frontier, where he declared it. It was considered due to the people of the offending nation, that their chief, knowing the consequences of refusing satisfaction, might be induced to do justice, and to preserve the lives and peace of his subjects. War, without such demand and notice, was regarded as unlawful.

Although the practice of all these formalities was not observed by nations in later times, it was usual to make a simple declaration, and communicate it to the enemy. But according to modern practice, war may lawfully exist without a formal declaration to the enemy. Any manifesto or paper from an official source, duly recognized by the government, announcing that the country is in a state of war, is considered sufficient. The act of recalling a minister has alone been regarded as a hostile act, and followed by war, without any other declaration. Such cases, however, have not been frequent. Under ordinary circumstances, the recall of a minister is not an offensive act.

In the war between the United States and Great Britain, declared in 1812, the declaration was not communicated to the British government; but the war was actually commenced on our part immediately after the act of Congress containing the declaration was passed. The purposes of a declaration are answered when due notice of a state of war is given by the government to its own citizens and those of neutral nations, that they may govern themselves accordingly; and the passage of the act of Congress was deemed a formal official notice to all the world.

The government of a state acts for and in behalf of all its citizens; and its acts are binding upon all. Hence, when a war is declared, it is not merely a war between the two governments; all the subjects of the government declaring it, become enemies to all the subjects of that against which it is declared.

The severity of the rules of ancient warfare has been greatly mitigated. On the breaking out of a war in any state, the persons of the enemy found within the state, and their property, became immediately liable to be captured. And it is still held to be the right of a state to confiscate the property of such, and to detain the persons themselves as prisoners of war. Only movable property is thus liable to confiscation. Houses and lands continue to be the enemy's property; the income thereof only being subject to confiscation.

Vattel, however, and some others, maintain, that neither the subjects of an enemy who are in a country when war is declared, nor their effects, can be rightfully detained. Permitting them to enter the state, and to continue therein, is a tacit promise of protection and security of return. They are therefore allowed a reasonable time to retire with their effects. Although this mild construction of the law is supported by high authority and extensive practice, and is consistent, it would seem, with reason and common justice; the question has been settled in this country in favor of the more rigid rule.

By decisions of our national courts, war gives the sovereign power of the nation full right to take the persons and confiscate the property of the enemy wherever they may be found. But while these decisions claimed for Congress the right of confiscation, the confiscation could not be made without a special law of Congress authorizing it. So that, without any statute applying directly to the subject, the property would continue under the protection of the law, and might be claimed by the foreign owner at the restoration of peace.

But whatever may be the true construction of the national law on this subject, the government of every nation may grant such privileges as it thinks proper, to the subject of an enemy. Few civilized nations, at the present day, would, it is believed, deny such persons a reasonable time to retire with their property. It is probably owing, in a great measure, to the conflicting opinions of the writers on public law, that the privilege spoken of is now so generally secured by treaty.

When war is declared, all intercourse between the two countries at once ceases. All trade between the citizens, directly or indirectly, is strictly forbidden; and all contracts with the enemy, made during the war, are void.

Although a state of war makes all the subjects of one nation enemies of all those of the other, all are not allowed, at pleasure, to fall upon the enemy. They cannot lawfully engage in offensive hostilities without permission of their government. If they have no written commission as evidence of such permission, and if they should be taken by the enemy, they would not be entitled to the usual mild treatment which other prisoners of war receive, but might be treated without mercy as lawless robbers and banditti.

The object of a just war is to obtain justice by force when it cannot otherwise be had. When, therefore, a nation has declared war, it has a right to use all necessary means, and no other, for attaining that end. A just war gives us the right to take the life of the enemy; but there are limits to this right. If an enemy submits, and lays down his arms, we cannot justly take his life.

Although all the subjects of a government are to be considered enemies, justice and humanity forbid that women, children, feeble old men and sick persons, who make no resistance, should be maltreated. Prisoners of war are not to be treated with cruelty. They may be confined, and even fettered, if there is reason to apprehend that they will rise against their captors, or make their escape.

Prisoners of war are detained to prevent their returning to join the enemy, or to obtain from their government a just satisfaction as the price of their liberty. Prisoners may be kept till the end of the war. Then, or at any time during the war, the government may exchange them for its own soldiers, taken prisoner by the enemy; or a ransom may be required for their release. It is the duty of the government to procure, at its own expense, the release of its citizens.

Ravaging a country, burning private dwellings, or otherwise wantonly destroying property, is not justifiable, except in cases of absolute necessity. But all fortresses, ramparts, and the like, being appropriated to the purposes of war, may be destroyed.

How far it is right to practice stratagems and deceit to obtain advantage of an enemy, we will not undertake to decide. To some extent they are justified by the law of nations; but in general they are dishonorable and wrong.

Spies are sometimes sent among the enemy, to discover the state of his affairs, to pry into his designs, and carry back information. This is a dishonorable office; and spies, if detected, are condemned to death.

The rights of a nation in war at sea are essentially different from those in war upon land. The object of a maritime war is to destroy the commerce and navigation of the enemy, with a view of weakening his naval power. To this end, the capture or destruction of private property is necessary, and is justified by the law of nations. Hence, for purposes of attack as well as defense, every nation of considerable power or commercial importance keeps a navy, consisting of a number of war vessels, which are kept ready for service.

Besides these national ships of war, there are armed vessels owned by private citizens, which are called privateers. Their owners receive from the government a commission to go on the seas, and to capture any vessel of the enemy, whether it is owned by the government or by private citizens, or whether it is armed or not. And to encourage privateering, the government allows the owner and crew to keep the property captured as their own.

This right being liable to great abuse, the owners are required to give security, that the cruise shall be conducted according to instructions and the usages of war; and that the rights of neutral nations shall not be violated; and that they will bring in the property captured for adjudication. When a prize is brought into port, the captors make a writing, called libel, stating the facts of the capture, and praying that the property may be condemned; and this paper is filed in the proper court.

If it shall be made to appear that the property was taken from the enemy, the court condemns the property as prize, which is then sold, and the proceeds are distributed among the captors. All prizes, whether taken by a public or private armed vessel, primarily belong to the sovereign; and no person has any interest in it except what he receives from the state: and due proof must in all cases be made before the proper court, that the seizure was lawfully made. In this country, prizes are proved and condemned in a district court, which, when sitting for this purpose, is called a prize court.

Rights and Duties of Neutral Nations;

Contraband Goods; Blockade; Rights of Search; Safe Conducts and Passports; Truces; Treaties of Peace, &c.

A NEUTRAL nation is bound to observe a strict impartiality toward the parties at war. If she should aid one party to the injury of the other, she would be liable to be herself treated as an enemy. A loan of money to one of the belligerent parties, or supplying him with other means of carrying on a war, if done with the view of aiding such party in the war, would be a violation of neutrality. But an engagement made in time of peace to furnish a nation a certain number of ships, or troops, or other articles of war, may afterward, in time of war, be fulfilled.

A nation is not bound, on the occurrence of a war, to change its customary trade, and to cease supplying a belligerent with any articles of trade which such belligerent was wont to receive from her, although the goods may afford him the means of carrying on the war. This rule applies also to the loaning of money. If a nation has been accustomed to lend money to another for the sake of interest, and the latter should become engaged in a war with a third power, the neutral nation would not break her neutrality if she should continue so to lend her money. The wrong in any case lies in the intention of aiding one to the detriment of the other.

Vattel, however, in laying down this rule, supposes the case of a belligerent going himself to a neutral country to make his purchases. But in the case of a neutral nation carrying goods to the enemy of another, he does not appear to allow the same liberty. A nation in a just war, has a right to deprive her enemy of the means of resisting or injuring her, and therefore may lawfully intercept every thing of a warlike nature which a neutral is carrying to such enemy.

A neutral nation's being permitted to continue her commerce with belligerent nations, and at the same time to furnish them with the means of war, renders it difficult sometimes to determine how far freedom of trade is consistent with the laws of war. In determining this question, it is necessary to distinguish correctly between goods that do not subserve the purposes of war, and those that do; for nations should enjoy full liberty to trade in the former. To attempt to stop this trade would be a violation of the rights of neutral nations.

Articles which are particularly useful in war, are those which a neutral is not allowed to carry to an enemy. The goods thus prohibited are called contraband goods. What these are, it is impossible to say with precision, as some articles may in certain cases be lawfully carried, which would be justly prohibited under other circumstances. Among the articles usually contraband, are arms, ammunition, materials for ship-building, naval stores, horses, and sometimes even provisions.

Contraband goods, when ascertained to be such, are confiscated to the captors as lawful prize. Formerly the vessel also was liable to be condemned and confiscated; but the modern practice, it is said, exempts the ship, unless it belongs to the owner of the contraband articles, or the carrying of them is connected with aggravating circumstances.

One of the rights of a belligerent nation, and one which a neutral is bound to regard, is the right of blockade. Blockade is a blocking up. A war blockade is the stationing of ships of war at the entrance of an enemy's ports, to prevent all vessels from coming out or going in. The object of a blockade is to hinder supplies of arms, ammunition and provisions from entering, with a view to compel a surrender by hunger and want, without an attack. A neutral vessel attempting to enter or depart, becomes liable to be seized and condemned. Towns and fortresses also may be shut up by posting troops at the avenues.

A simple decree or order declaring a certain coast or country in a state of blockade does not constitute a lawful blockade. A force must be stationed there, competent to maintain the blockade, and to make it dangerous to enter. And it is necessary, also, that the neutral should have due notice of the blockade in order to subject his property to condemnation and forfeiture. According to modern usage, if a place is blockaded by sea only commerce with it by a neutral may be carried on by inland communication. Also, a neutral vessel, loaded before the blockade was established, has a right to leave the port with her cargo.

To prevent the conveyance of contraband goods, the law of nations gives a belligerent nation the right of search; that is, the right, in time of war, to search neutral vessels, to ascertain their character, and what articles are on board. A neutral vessel refusing to be searched by a lawful cruiser, would thereby render herself liable to condemnation as a prize. Private merchant vessels only are subject to search; the right does not extend to public ships of war.

To prove the neutral character of a vessel, she must be furnished with the necessary documents. The papers required are, sea-letters or passports, describing the name, property, and burden of the ship; the name and residence of the commander; and certificates containing the particulars of the cargo, and place whence the ship sailed, signed by the officers of the port. In a time of universal peace the register of the vessel has been deemed sufficient.

The property of an enemy found on board of a neutral vessel, may be seized, if the vessel is beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the nation to which she belongs; but the vessel is not confiscated; and the master is moreover entitled to freight for the carriage of the goods. The property of neutrals found in an enemy's vessels, is to be restored to the owners.

A neutral is forbidden, by the law and practice of nations, to permit a belligerent to arm and equip vessels of war within her ports. And our own government has, in conformity with the law of nations, declared it to be a misdemeanor for any of our citizens to fit out any vessel within the United States, or to accept or exercise a commission, or to enlist, or hire another to enlist, to go beyond the limits of the United States, to assist any people in war against another with whom we are at peace.

It has been observed, that, in time of peace, the people of one nation are entitled to an innocent passage over the lands and waters of another. It is held that this right extends to troops of war. But he who desires to march his troops through a neutral country must apply to the government of the neutral nation for permission; for it rests with the sovereign authority to judge whether the passage would be innocent. Such passage can scarcely be made without damage.

If a passage is granted to the troops of one belligerent, the other has no just ground of complaint against the neutral state. But if a neutral nation grants or refuses a passage to one of the parties at war, she ought also to grant or refuse it to the other, unless she was previously bound to the former by treaty; in which case a passage can be justly claimed under the provisions of the treaty.

It is sometimes agreed to suspend hostilities for a time. If the agreement is only for a short period, for the purpose of burying the dead after battle, or for a parley between the hostile generals, or if it regards only some particular place, it is called a cessation or suspension of arms. If for a considerable time, and especially if general, it is called a truce. By a partial truce, hostilities are suspended in certain places, as between a town and the general besieging it; and generals have power to make such truces. By a general truce, hostilities are to cease generally, and in all places, and are made by the governments or sovereigns. Such truces afford opportunities for nations to settle their disputes by negotiation.

A truce binds the contracting parties from the time it is made; but individuals of the nation are not responsible for its violation before they have had due notice of it. And for all prizes taken after the time of its commencement, the government is bound to make restitution. During the cessation of hostilities, each party may, within his own territories, continue his preparations for war, without being chargeable with a breach of good faith.

Safe conducts and passports are written licenses insuring safety to persons in passing and repassing, or insuring a safe passage of property. The right to grant safe conducts rests in the supreme authority of a state; but the right is either expressly delegated to subordinate officers, or they derive it from the nature of their trust. If a person suffers damage by a violation of his passport, he is entitled to indemnity from him who promised security.

War is generally terminated, and peace secured, by treaties, called treaties of peace. The manner of making treaties has been described. A treaty of peace puts an end to the war, and leaves the contracting parties no right to take up arms again for the same cause. Hence, the parties agree to preserve "perpetual peace," which, however, relates only to the war which the treaty terminates; but does not bind either party never to make war on the other for any cause that may thereafter arise.

The contracting parties to a treaty of peace are bound by it from the time of its conclusion, which is the day on which it is signed; but, as in the case of a truce, persons are not held responsible for any hostile acts committed before the treaty was known; and their government is bound to order and to enforce the restitution of property captured subsequently to the conclusion of the treaty.

War is sometimes terminated by mediation. A friend to both parties, desirous of stopping the destruction of human life, kindly endeavors to reconcile the parties. The friendly sovereign who thus interposes, is called mediator. Many desolating wars might have been early arrested in this way, had there always been among friendly powers generally a disposition to reconcile contending nations.

Governmental Duties.

The Federal Government is the central authority of the United States. It was organized in 1789, in accordance with the provisions of the Federal constitution. The instrument provides for a legislative, a judicial, and an executive department.

The Legislative Department consists of Congress, which is a body of men representing the people and acting in the place of them. This body meets yearly in the Capitol at Washington, on the first Monday in December. The regular sessions of Congress begin at this time, and close by custom, at twelve o'clock at night, on the third of the following March. The President can call an extra session whenever circumstances demand it. A Congress is said to exist two years, because the larger number of those who compose that body are elected for that time. ["To determine the years covered by a given Congress, double the number of the Congress and add the product to 1789; the result will be the year in which the Congress closed. To find the number of a Congress sitting in any given year, subtract 1789 from the year; if the result is an even number, half that number will give the Congress, of which the year in question will be the closing year. If the result is an odd number, add one to it, and half the result will give the Congress, of which the year in question will be the first year."—Am. Almanac.] Congress enacts laws, and consists of the Senate and the House of Representatives. These bodies, when acting in a legislative capacity, have the same duties and powers. Laws are passed by the concurrent action of both houses.

The Senate is composed of two members from each state, chosen for six years by the legislatures thereof. Over this body the Vice-President presides. Without the concurrence of the House, the Senate aids as a high court to try cases of impeachment; authorizes the President to make treaties; and rejects or confirms the President's nominations to office.

The House of Representatives is composed of members chosen for two years by the people. The number of representatives changes with the increase of population. The House has the exclusive power of originating bills for raising revenues and providing for trials by impeachment.

The Judicial Department determines the meaning of the laws, and consists of the Supreme Court and Inferior Courts.

The Supreme Court, the highest judicial tribunal in the Union, is composed of the Chief Justice and nine associates. It is held annually at Washington city, commencing its sessions on the first Monday in December. Most of its labors are confined to hearing and determining appeals from Inferior Courts. The decisions of the Supreme Court are regularly reported, and furnish authority for all judicial tribunals in the Union. The reports, extending to more than seventy-nine volumes, are highly valued in foreign countries, especially in cases where the laws of the nations and of the sea are involved.

The Inferior Courts are Circuit Courts, District Courts, the Court of Claims, Local Courts in the District of Columbia, and Territorial Courts. Circuit Courts are held within nine circuits, which include the states of the Union. The District Courts are held in judicial districts, and the Court of Claims, at Washington.

The Executive Department executes the laws, and consists of the President, aided by the heads of departments with their under-officials. Attached to this branch of the government are the Departments of State, Treasury, War, Navy, Post-Office, Justice, and Interior. The seven officials who head these departments constitute the cabinet, a name given to the body of men whom the President appoints as his executive officers and advisers.

DEPARTMENT DUTIES.

Department of State.*

THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

The Secretary of State is charged, under the direction of the President, with the duties appertaining to correspondence with the public ministers and consuls of the United States, and with the representatives of foreign powers accredited to the United States; and to negotiations of whatever character relating to the foreign affairs of the United States. He is also the medium of correspondence between the President and the chief executive of the several States of the United States; he has the custody of the great seal of the United States, and countersigns and affixes such seal to all executive proclamations, to various commissions, and to warrants for pardon, and the extradition of fugitives from justice. He is regarded as the first in rank among the members of the Cabinet. He is also the custodian of the treaties made with foreign states, and of the laws of the United States. He grants and issues passports, and exequaturs to foreign consuls in the United States are issued through his office. He publishes the laws and resolutions of Congress, amendments to the Constitution, and proclamations declaring the admission of new States into the Union. He is also charged with certain annual reports to Congress relating to commercial information received from diplomatic and consular officers of the United States.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE

Becomes the Acting Secretary of State, in the absence of the Secretary. Under the organization of the Department the Assistant Secretary, Second Assistant Secretary, and Third Assistant Secretary are respectively charged with the immediate supervision of all correspondence with the diplomatic and consular officers in the countries named in Division A, B, and C, of those bureaus, and of the miscellaneous correspondence relating thereto, and, in general, they are entrusted with the preparation of the correspondence upon any question arising in the course of the public business that may be assigned to them by the Secretary.

THE CHIEF CLERK.

The Chief Clerk has the general supervision of the clerks and employees and of the business of the Department.

BUREAU OF INDEXES AND ARCHIVES.

The duty of opening the mails; preparing, registering, and indexing daily all correspondence to and from the Department, both by subjects and persons; the preservation of the archives; answering calls of the Secretary, Assistant Secretaries, Chief Clerk, and chiefs of bureaus for correspondence, &c.

DIPLOMATIC BUREAU.

Diplomatic correspondence and miscellaneous correspondence relating thereto.

Division A.—Correspondence with France, Germany, and Great Britain, and miscellaneous correspondence relating to those countries.

Division B.—Correspondence with Argentine Republic, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Chili, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Netherlands, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Russia, and Uruguay, and miscellaneous correspondence relating to those countries.

Division C.—Correspondence with Barbary States, Bolivia; Central America, Columbia, China, Ecuador, Egypt, Fiji Islands, Friendly and Navigator's Islands, Hawaiian Islands, Hayti, Japan, Liberia, Madagascar, Mexico, Muscat, San Domingo, Siam, Society Islands, Turkey, Venezuela, and other countries, not assigned, and miscellaneous correspondence relating to those countries.

*From Ben Perley Poore's Congressional Directory.

CONSULAR BUREAU.

Correspondence with consulates, and miscellaneous correspondence relating thereto.

There are three divisions, A, B, and C, with certain countries allotted to each, as in the Diplomatic Bureau.

BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS.

Custody and disbursement of appropriations under direction of the Department; charged with custody of indemnity funds and bonds; care of the building and property of the Department.

ROLLS AND LIBRARY.

Custody of the rolls, treaties, &c. : promulgation of the laws, &c. ; care and superintendence of the library and public documents; care of the revolutionary archives, and of papers relating to international commissions.

STATISTICS.

Preparation of the reports on Commercial Relations.

EXAMINER OF CLAIMS.

From the Department of Justice.]

The examination of questions of law and other matters submitted by the Secretary or the Assistant Secretary, and of all claims.

The Treasury Department.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

The Secretary of the Treasury has charge of the national finances. He digests and prepares plans for the improvement and management of the revenue and support of the public credit; he superintends the collection of the revenue, and prescribes the forms of keeping and rendering all public accounts, and making returns; grants all warrants for money to be issued from the Treasury in pursuance of appropriations by law; makes report and gives information to either branch of Congress, as may be required, respecting all matters referred to him by the Senate or House of Representatives, and generally performs all such services relative to the finances as he is directed to perform; controls the erection of public buildings, the coinage and printing of money, the collection of commercial statistics, the marine hospitals, the revenue-cutter service, the life-saving service. Under his superintendence the Light-House Board discharges the duties relative to the construction, illumination, inspection, and superintendence of light-houses, light-vessels, beacons, buoys, sea-marks and their appendages; makes provision for the payment of the public debt under enactment of Congress, and publishes statements concerning it, and submits to Congress, at the commencement of each session, estimates of the probable receipts, and of the required expenditures, for the ensuing fiscal year.

The routine work of the Secretary's office is transacted in the following offices: Division of Appointments; Division of Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations; Division of Public Moneys; Division of Customs; Division of Internal Revenue and Navigation; Division of Loans and Currency; Division of Revenue Marine; Division of Stationery, Printing, and Blanks; Division of Special Agents; and two disbursing-clerks pay the salaries and compensation of the officers and employés of the Department, and disburse, upon the orders of the Secretary, such moneys as have been appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Department.

ASSISTANT SECRETARIES OF THE TREASURY.

One of the two Assistant Secretaries (now Hon. J. K. Upton) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Appointments, Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations, Public Moneys, Stationery, Printing and Blanks, Loans and Currency, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and office of the Director of the Mint; the signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions and bureau, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

The other Assistant Secretary (now Hon. H. F. French) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Customs, Special Agents, Revenue Marine, Internal Revenue and Navigation, and to the offices of Supervising Architect, General Superintendent Life-Saving Service, Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, Bureau of Statistics, and Supervising Inspector-General of Steamboats; the signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

THE FIRST COMPTROLLER.

The First Comptroller countersigns all warrants issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, covering the public revenues into the Treasury, and authorizing payments therefrom. All accounts examined by the First Auditor, except those which go to the Commissioner of Customs, and all examined by the Fifth Auditor, and accounts and examined by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, are re-examined and revised in the First Comptroller's Office. Here, also, are examined and reported on the drafts for salaries and expenses drawn by ministers and consuls abroad, and the requisition for advances drawn by marshals, collectors of internal revenue, secretaries of the Territories, and other disbursing-officers. Powers of attorney for the collection of drafts on the Treasury are examined; and many other duties, having reference to the adjustment of claims against the United States, pertain to the office, but are of too varied a character to be enumerated.

THE SECOND COMPTROLLER.

Accounts received from the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors against the United States are examined, revised, and certified to, viz: Reported by the Second Auditor—for organizing volunteers, recruiting, pay of the Army, special military accounts, Army ordnance, the Indian service, the Army Medical Department, contingent military expenses, bounty to soldiers, the Soldiers' Home, and the National Home for Disabled Volunteers. Reported by the Third Auditor—disbursements by the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Engineer Department, Army pensions, property taken by military authority for the use of the Army, and miscellaneous war-claims. Reported by the Fourth Auditor—disbursements for the Marine Corps, by the Navy paymasters for pay and rations, by the paymasters at the navy-yards, for Navy pensions at foreign stations, and the financial agent at London.

These accounts are examined in Divisions, devoted respectively to the affairs of Army Paymasters, Army Quartermasters, Navy Paymasters and the Marine Corps, Army Pensions, Miscellaneous Claims, and Indian Affairs.

THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS.

The Commissioner of Customs revises and certifies the accounts of revenue collected from duties on imports and tonnage; of moneys received on account of the marine-hospital fund, fines, penalties, and forfeitures under the customs and navigation laws; steamboat inspection; licenses to pilots, engineers, &c.; and from miscellaneous sources connected with customs matters, accounts of the importation, withdrawal, transportation, and exportation of goods under the warehouse system; for disbursements for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, revenue-cutter service, construction and maintenance of lights, marine hospitals, debentures, excess of deposits for unascertained duties, refund of duties exacted in excess, life-saving service, construction of custom-houses and marine hospitals; fuel, light, water, &c., for custom-houses, &c.; approves and files the official bonds given by customs officers, and transmits their commissions; files the oaths of office of the persons paid in the accounts certified by him; and prepares for the use of the law-officers of the Department the accounts of those in arrears under the heads above mentioned.

The office is organized in four Divisions, viz: Customs, Book-keeper's, Bond, and Miscellaneous.

THE FIRST AUDITOR.

It is the duty of the First Auditor to receive all accounts accruing in the Treasury Department (except those arising under the internal-revenue laws), and, after examination, to certify the balance, and transmit the accounts, with the vouchers and certificate, to the First Comptroller or to the Commissioner of Customs, having respectively the revision thereof. The subordinate Divisions of his office are—

Customs Division.—Receipts and expenditures of the customs service, including fines, emoluments, forfeitures, debentures, drawbacks, marine-hospital service, revenue-cutter service, &c.

Judiciary Division.—Salaries of United States marshals, district attorneys, commissioners and clerks; rent of court-houses, support of prisoners, &c.

Public Debt Division.—Redemption of the public debt, including principal, premium, and interest; payment of interest; redemption of certificates of deposit; notes destroyed.

Warehouse and Bond Division.—Examination of accounts received from custom-houses.

Miscellaneous Division.—Accounts of mints and assay offices; Territories; Coast Survey; salaries and contingent expenses of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the Government; construction, repair, and preservation of public buildings; Treasurer of the United States for general receipts and expenditures.

THE SECOND AUDITOR.

The Second Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller all accounts relating to bounties, the recruiting service, the pay and clothing of the Army, the subsistence of officers, medical and hospital accounts, the pay of private physicians, and the expenses of the War Department, contingent disbursements of the Army, and all accounts relating to Indian Affairs. The Divisions are—

Paymasters' Division.—Army paymasters' accounts and payments to the Soldiers' Home and the National Home for Disabled Volunteers.

Miscellaneous Claims Division.—Accounts of the Ordnance and Medical Departments of the Army, contingent expenses, Army Medical Museum and publications, regular and volunteer recruiting, freemen's bounty and pay.

Indian Affairs Division.—Disbursements for the Indians, money accounts and property returns of Indian agents, and claims for goods supplied and services rendered.

Pay and Bounty Division.—Examination and adjustment of claims of white and colored soldiers and their legal heirs for pay and bounty.

Investigation of Frauds Division.—Investigation of alleged cases of forgery, fraud, over-payments, unlawful withholding of money, &c., in the payment of white and colored soldiers.

Book-keeper's Division.—Accounts of the numerous requisitions drawn by the Secretaries of War and Interior, examined and charged to various appropriations.

THE THIRD AUDITOR.

The Third Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller all accounts relating to the Quartermaster-General's Department, the Engineer Corps, and the Commissary-General's Department of the Army; claims for lost horses, accounts of unpaid pensions, State war-claims, and the claims of States for organizing, arming, and equipping volunteers after 1861. The Divisions of the Third Auditor's Office are—

Book-keeper's Division.—Accounts of the numerous requisitions drawn by the Secretary of War and of the Interior, examined and charged to various appropriations.

Quartermaster's Division.—Accounts of disbursements for barracks and quarters, hospitals, offices, stables, and transportation of supplies; the purchase of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, horses, fuel, forage, straw, bedding, and stationery; payments of hired men and of extra-duty men; expenses incurred in the apprehension of deserters; for the burial of officers and soldiers; for hired escorts, expresses, interpreters, spies, and guides; for veterinary surgeons and medicines for horses; for supplying posts with water; and for all other authorized outlays connected with the movements of the Army not expressly assigned.

Subsistence and Engineer Division.—Accounts of all commissaries and acting commissaries in the Army, whose duties are to purchase the provisions and stores necessary for its subsistence, and to see to their proper distribution; also, accounts of officers of the Corps of Engineers who disburse money for the expenses of the Military Academy, the improvement of rivers and harbors, the construction and preservation of fortifications, the surveys on the coasts, the surveys of lakes and rivers, and the construction and repair of breakwaters.

Army Pension Division.—The duties of this division embrace the settlement of all accounts which pertain to the payment of Army pensions throughout the United States. An account is kept with each pension agent, charging him with all moneys advanced for payment to pensioners, under the proper bond and fiscal year. At the end of each month the agent forwards his vouchers, abstract of payments, and money statement direct to this office, where a preliminary examination is made to see if the money advanced is properly accounted for. The receipt of the account is then acknowledged, and the account filed for audit. Each voucher is subsequently examined, and the payment entered on the roll-book opposite the pensioner's name. The agent's account, when audited, is reported to the Second Comptroller for his revision, and a copy of the statement of errors, if any, sent to the agent for his information and explanation. The account, when revised, it returned by the Second Comptroller to this office and placed in the settled files, where it permanently remains.

State War and Horse Claims Division.—The settlement of all claims of the several States and Territories for the expenses incurred by them for enrolling, subsisting, clothing, arming, paying, and transporting their troops while employed by the Government in aiding to suppress the recent insurrection against the United States; also, the settlement of claims for the loss of horses and equipages sustained by officers and enlisted men while in the military service, and for horses, mules, &c., lost while in service by impressment or contract.

Miscellaneous Claims Division.—The adjustment of claims for the appropriation of stores, the purchase of vessels, railroad stock, horses, and other means of transportation; the occupation of real estate, court-martial fees, traveling expenses, &c.; claims for compensation for vessels, cars, engines, &c., lost in the military service; claims growing out of the Oregon and Washington war of 1855 and 1856, and other Indian wars; claims of various descriptions under special acts of Congress, and claims not otherwise assigned for adjudication.

Collection Division.—Prepares accounts for suits against defaulting officers; answers all calls for information from the files of the office; examines all claims for bounty-land and pensions granted to the soldiers of 1812, and certifies them to the Commissioner of Pensions.

THE FOURTH AUDITOR.

The Fourth Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller all accounts concerning the pay, expenditures, pensions, and prize-money of the Navy and the accounts of the Navy Department. The subordinate Divisions of the Bureau are—

Record Prize Division.—Adjusts the prize-money accounts and prepares tabulated statements called for by Congress.

Navy-Agents' Division.—Examines the accounts of the disbursements by the navy-agents at Portsmouth, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and San Francisco.

Paymasters' Division.—Examines the accounts of paymasters, including mechanics' rolls.

THE FIFTH AUDITOR.

The Fifth Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the First Comptroller the diplomatic and consular accounts, the expenditures of the Department of State and the Bureau of Internal Revenue. There are two Divisions:

Diplomatic and Consular Division.—Adjustment is made of the expenses of all missions abroad for salaries, contingencies, and loss by exchange; consular fees, salaries, and emoluments; consular courts and prisons; the relief of American seamen; the return of American seamen charged with crime; the expenses of claims, commissions, boundary-surveys, &c.

Internal-Revenue Division.—Accounts for assessing and of collecting the internal revenue, including the salaries, commissions, and allowances of the assessors and collectors, their contingent expenses, &c.; the cost of revenue-stamps; the accounts for salaries and expenses of supervisors, agents, and surveyors of distilleries; the fees and expenses of gaugers; counsel-fees, and taxes refunded.

THE SIXTH AUDITOR.

The Sixth Auditor examines and adjusts all accounts relating to the postal service, and his decisions on these are final, unless an appeal be taken in twelve months to the First Comptroller. He superintends the collection of all debts due the Post-Office Department, and all penalties imposed on postmasters and mail-contractors; directs suits and legal proceedings, civil and criminal, and takes all such measures as may be authorized by law to enforce the payment of moneys due to the Department. There are eight subordinate divisions, viz:

Collecting Division.—The collection of balances due from all postmasters, late postmasters, and contractors; also the payment of all balances due to late and present postmasters, and the adjustment and final settlement of postal accounts.

Stating Division.—The general postal accounts of postmasters and those of late postmasters, until fully stated, are in charge of this division.

Examining Division.—Receives and audits the quarterly accounts-current of all post-offices in the United States. It is divided into four subdivisions, viz, the opening-room, the stamp-rooms, the examining corps proper, and the error-rooms.

Money-Order Division.—Accounts of money-orders paid and received are examined, assorted, checked, and filed; remittances are registered and checked; errors corrected.

Foreign Mail Division.—Has charge of the postal accounts with foreign governments, and the accounts with steamship companies for ocean transportation of the mails.

Registering Division.—Receives from the examining division the quarterly accounts-current of all the post-offices in the United States, re-examines and registers them, and exhibits in the register ending June 30 of each year the total amount of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year.

Pay Division.—The adjustment and payment of all accounts for the transportation of the mails, whether carried by ocean-steamers, railroads, steamboats, or any mail-carrier; the accounts of the railway postal-service, railway postal clerks, route-agents, and local agents, mail depredations, special agents, free-delivery system, postage-stamps, postal-cards, envelopes, stamps, maps, wrapping-paper, twine, mail-bags, mail-locks and keys, advertising, fees in suits on postal matters, and miscellaneous accounts.

Book-keeping Division.—The duty of keeping the ledger-accounts of the Department, embracing postmasters, late postmasters, contractors, late contractors, and accounts of a general, special, and miscellaneous character.

THE TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Treasurer of the United States is charged with the custody of all public moneys received into the Treasury at Washington, or in the sub-treasuries at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and San Francisco, or in the depositories and depository banks; disburses all public moneys upon the warrants of the Secretary of the Treasury, and upon the warrants of the Postmaster-General; issues and redeems Treasury notes; is agent for the redemption of the circulating notes of national banks, is trustee of the bonds held for the security of the circulating notes of national banks, and of bonds held as security for public deposits; is custodian of Indian trust funds; is agent for paying the interest on the public debt, and for paying the salaries of the members of the House of Representatives. The subordinate divisions of the Treasury are—

Issue Division.—Issues are made of legal-tender notes, currency, coin-certificates, &c.

Redemption Division.—Coin-certificates, national bank notes, fractional currency, &c., are redeemed, and generally destroyed by maceration.

Loan Division.—Bonds are issued, purchased, retired, cancelled, or converted.

Accounts Division.—The accounts of the Treasury, the sub-treasuries, and the national banks used as depositories are kept.

National-Bank Division.—Bonds held as security for national-bank circulation are examined, notes issued, redeemed, and cancelled.

National-Bank Redemption Agency.—Notes of banks are redeemed and accounted for.

THE REGISTER OF THE TREASURY.

The Register of the Treasury has charge of the great account-books of the United States, which show every receipt and disbursement, and from which statements are annually made for transmission to Congress. He signs and issues all bonds, Treasury notes, and other securities; registers all warrants drawn by the Secretary upon the Treasurer; transmits statements of balances due to individuals after their settlement by the First Comptroller, on which payment is made; issues ships' registers, licenses, and enrolments; prepares annual reports of all vessels built, lost, or destroyed; and also prepares statements of the tonnage of vessels in which importations and exportations are made, with the various articles and their values. These duties are attended to in five divisions, viz:

Coupon and Note Division.—Bonds, interest-coupons, gold-certificates, certificates of deposit and of indebtedness are examined, registered, and issued or redeemed.

Note and Fractional Currency Division.—Treasury notes, notes of national banks which have gone into liquidation, and mutilated fractional currency are examined, cancelled, and destroyed.

Loan Division.—Registered and coupon bonds are issued, embracing the transfer of all registered bonds; the conversion of coupon into registered; the ledger accounts with holders of registered bonds, and schedules made out upon which interest on same is paid.

Receipts and Expenditures Division.—The ledgers of the United States are kept, showing the civil, diplomatic, internal-revenue, miscellaneous, and public-debt receipts and expenditures; also, statements of the warrants and drafts registered.

Tonnage Division.—Accounts are kept showing the registered, and the enrolled and licensed tonnage, divided into different classes, and exhibiting what is annually built and what is engaged in the fisheries of different kinds.

THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.

The Comptroller of the Currency has, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, the control of the national banks. The Divisions of this Bureau are—

Issue Division.—The preparation and issue of national-bank circulation.

Redemption Division.—The redemption and destruction of notes issued by national banks.

Reports Division.—Examination and consolidation of the reports of national banks.

Organization Division.—The organization of national banks.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE MINT.

The Director of the Mint has general supervision of all mints and assay offices, reports their operations and condition to the Secretary of the Treasury, and prepares and lays before him the annual estimates for their support.

He prescribes regulations, approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the transaction of business at the mints and assay offices, the distribution of silver coin, and the charges to be collected of depositors. He receives for adjustment the monthly and quarterly accounts of superintendents and officers in charge of mints and assay offices, superintends their expenditures, and the annual settlements of the operative officers, and makes such special examinations as may be deemed necessary. All appointments, removals, and changes of clerks, assistants, and workmen in the mints and assay offices are submitted for his approval. The purchase of silver bullion, and allotment of its coinage at the mints are made through the office of the Director, and transfers of public moneys in the mints and assay offices, and advances from appropriations for the mint service, are made at his request.

The monthly coinage of mints is tested, and ores, bullions and coins are assayed, at the Assay Laboratory under his charge. The values of the standard coins of foreign countries are annually estimated by the Director, and the collection of the statistics of the annual production of precious metals in the United States is assigned to him.

THE SOLICITOR.

The Solicitor of the Treasury is an officer in the Department of Justice, having a seal, and is required by law to take cognizance, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, of all frauds or attempted frauds upon the revenue, and exercises a general supervision over all legal measures for their prevention and detection; also to establish regulations, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the observance of collectors of the customs; and, with the approbation of the Attorney-General, for the observance of United States attorneys, marshals and clerks respecting suits in which the United States is a party or interested. He is also empowered and directed to instruct the district attorneys, marshals, and clerks of the circuit and district courts in all matters and proceedings appertaining to suits in which the United States is interested, except those arising under the internal-revenue laws.

He is required to examine reports of collectors and district attorneys upon bonds delivered for suit: to inform the President of false reports of bonds delivered for suit, and supervise statements from district attorneys concerning suits, and those from marshals relating to proceedings on execution; also reports from clerks as to judgments and decrees; and is charged by the Attorney-General with all post-office litigation.

He also has charge of the secret-service employés engaged in the detection of persons counterfeiting the coin, currency, and public securities of the United States, and all other frauds on the Government. In addition to the duties prescribed by law, the Secretary of the Treasury refers to the Solicitor for opinion a very large number of cases arising in his Department relating to duties, remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures, navigation and registry laws, steamboat-inspection acts, claims, &c.

THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue makes all assessments and superintends the collection of all taxes; preparation of instructions for special-tax stamps, (formerly licenses,) forms and stamps of all kinds; and pays into the Treasury, daily, all moneys received by him.

The business of the bureau is transacted in seven divisions, viz:

Appointment Division.—Is charged with all matters pertaining to issuing of commissions, leaves of absence, office-discipline, assorting and disposition of the mail, registry and copying of all letters, with the care of the general files; and all matters relating to messengers, laborers, office-stationery, printing, advertising, blanks, and blank books for the bureau.

Law Division.—It is charged with all questions (except as hereinafter stated) relating to seizures, suits, abatement, and refunding claims, and those relating to special taxes, documentary stamp-taxes, taxes on incomes, legacies, and successions, and on dividends, &c.; also lands purchased for the United States on distraint, and the extension of time on distraints.

Tobacco Division.—Is charged with all matters (including special taxes) relating to tobacco, snuff, and cigars not in suit or in bond, stamp-tax on medicines and preparations.

Division of Accounts.—Has charge of the examination and reference of the revenue and disbursing accounts, the estimates of collectors and of their applications for special allowances, and other matters relative to advertising and the purchase of blank books, newspapers, and stationery for collectors, revenue-agents, &c.; also has charge of the examination and reference of the monthly bills of revenue-agents, gaugers, and distillery-surveyors, and of all miscellaneous claims presented to this bureau arising under any appropriation made for carrying into effect the various internal-revenue laws, (excepting claims for abatement, refunding, and drawback,) and the preparation of estimates for appropriations by Congress, together with the preparation of the statistical records of the bureau.

Division of Distilled Spirits.—This division is charged with the supervision of all matters pertaining to distilleries, distilled spirits, fermented liquors, wines, rectification, gaugers' fees and instruments, approval of bonded warehouses, and the assignment of storekeepers.

Stamp Division.—This division is charged with the supervision of the preparation, safe-keeping, issue, and redemption of stamps for distilled spirits, tobacco, snuff, and cigars, fermented liquors, special taxes, documentary and proprietary stamps, and the keeping of all accounts pertaining thereto, also the supervision of all business with Adams Express Company, and the preparation, custody, and issue of steel dies for cancelling stamps.

Division of Assessments.—Is charged with the preparation of the assessment-lists, with the consideration of all reports and returns, except those received from distillers, rectifiers, and brewers, affording data from which assessments may be made; also, with keeping the bonded account, and with the consideration of claims for the allowance of drawback.

Division of Revenue Agents.—Is charged with general supervision, under the direction of the Commissioner, of the work of revenue agents throughout the country, examination of their reports and accounts, and the measures taken for the discovery and suppression of violations of internal-revenue law.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey is charged with the survey of the coasts of the United States and rivers emptying into the Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, and with the interior triangulation of the country, including that of connecting the surveys of the Eastern and Western coasts, determining geographical positions in latitude and longitude, and furnishing points of reference for State surveys.

Besides the annual reports to Congress the Survey publishes maps and charts of our coasts and harbors, books of sailing directions, and annual tide tables, computed in advance, for all ports of the United States.

SUPERVISING SURGEON-GENERAL, U. S., (Mercantile, Marine-Hospital Service.)

The Supervising Surgeon-General is charged with the supervision of "all matters connected with the Marine-Hospital Service and with the disbursement of the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen" employed on the vessels of the mercantile marine of the oceans, lakes, and rivers, and of the Revenue-Cutter Service, the general superintendence of the Marine Hospitals, and purveying of supplies, the orders, details and assignment of medical officers, and the examination of the property returns.

SUPERVISING INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF STEAM-VESSELS.

The Supervising Inspector-general superintends the administration of the steamboat inspection laws, presides at the meetings of the Board of Supervising Inspectors, receives all reports, and examines all accounts of inspectors.

The Board of Supervising Inspectors meets in Washington annually, on the third Wednesday in January, to establish regulations for carrying out the provisions of the steamboat inspection laws.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LIFE-SAVING SERVICE.

It is the duty of the General Superintendent to supervise the organization and government of the employés of the service; to prepare and revise regulations therefor as may be necessary; to fix the number and compensation of surfmen to be employed at the several stations within the provisions of law; to supervise the expenditure of all appropriations made for the support and maintenance of the Life-Saving Service; to examine the accounts of disbursements of the district superintendents, and to certify the same to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department; to examine the property returns of the keepers of the several stations, and see that all public property thereto belonging is properly accounted for; to acquaint himself, as far as practicable, with all means employed in foreign countries which may seem to advantageously affect the interest of the service, and to cause to be properly investigated all plans, devices, and inventions for the improvement of life-saving apparatus for use at the stations, which may appear to be meritorious and available; to exercise supervision over the selection of sites for new stations the establishment of which may be authorized by law, or for old ones the removal of which may be made necessary by the encroachment of the sea or by other causes; to prepare and submit to the Secretary of the Treasury estimates for the support of the service; to collect and compile the statistics of marine disasters contemplated by the act of June twentieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and to submit to the Secretary of the Treasury, for the transmission to Congress, an annual report of the expenditures of the moneys appropriated for the maintenance of the Life-Saving Service, and of the operations of said service during the year.

The War Department.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

The Secretary of War performs such duties as the President of the United States, who is Commander-in-Chief, may enjoin upon him concerning the military service, and has the superintendence of the purchase of Army supplies, transportation, &c.

The Chief Clerk receives in the Secretary's Office the public mail and correspondence; distributes, records, and answers it; keeps the accounts of appropriations and estimates; is the medium of communication between the Secretary and officers of the Department, and has the general superintendence of the Department.

MILITARY BUREAUS OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

The chiefs of the military bureaus of the War Department are officers of the Regular Army of the United States, and a part of the military establishment, viz:

The Adjutant-General promulgates the orders of the President and the General commanding the Army, and conducts correspondence between the General and the Army, receives reports, issues commissions and resignations, superintends recruiting and the military prison at Leavenworth, has charge of the papers concerning the enlistment and drafting of volunteers, receives all muster-rolls, and furnishes consolidated reports of the entire Army, and has charge, under the General, of details affecting the discipline of the Army.

The Inspector-General, with his assistants, inspect and report upon the personnel and the matériel of the Army, at all posts, stations, and depots, and give instruction relative to the correct interpretation of doubtful points of law, regulations, and orders, and upon other mooted questions regarding the proper performance of military duties; and they also inspect the money accounts of all disbursing officers of the Army.

The Quartermaster-General, aided by assistants, provides quarters and transportation for the Army, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, horses and mules, forage, wagons, stoves, stationery, fuel, lights, straw, hospitals, and medicines; he pays the expenses of guides, spies, and interpreters, and veterinary surgeons; pays the funeral expenses of officers and men, and is in charge of the national cemeteries.

The Commissary-General has administrative control of the Subsistence Department—of the disbursement of its appropriations; the providing of rations and their issue to the Army; the purchase and distribution of articles authorized to be kept for sale to officers and enlisted men; and the adjustment of accounts and returns for subsistence funds and supplies, preliminary to their settlement by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury.

The Surgeon-General, under the immediate direction of the Secretary of War, is charged with the administrative duties of the Medical Department; the designation of the stations of medical officers, and the issuing of all orders and instructions relating to their professional duties. He directs as to the selection, purchase, and distribution of the medical supplies of the Army. The Army Medical Museum and the official publications of the Surgeon-General's Office are also under his direct control.

The Paymaster-General and his assistants pay the Army, also Second Auditor's Treasury certificates, and keep a record of said payments.

The Chief of Engineers commands the Corps of Engineers, which is charged with all duties relating to fortifications, whether permanent or temporary; with torpedoes for coast defence; with all works for the attack and defence of places; with all military bridges, and with such surveys as may be required for these objects, or the movement of armies in the field. It is also charged with the harbor and river improvements; with military and geographical explorations and surveys; with the survey of the lakes; and with any other engineer work specially assigned to the Corps by acts of Congress or orders of the President.

The Chief of Ordnance commands the Ordnance Department, the duties of which consist in providing, preserving, distributing, and accounting for every description of artillery, small-arms, and all the munitions of war which may be required for the fortresses of the country, the armies in the field, and for the whole body of the militia of the Union. In these duties are comprised that of determining the general principles of construction and of prescribing in details the models and forms of all military weapons employed in war. They comprise also the duty of prescribing the regulations for the proof and inspection of all these weapons, for maintaining uniformity and economy in their fabrication, for insuring their good quality, and for their preservation and distribution; and for carrying into effect the general purposes here stated large annual appropriations are made, and in order to fulfil the purposes, extensive operations are conducted at the national armories, arsenals, and ordnance depots.

The Judge-Advocate General and his assistants receive, review, and have recorded the proceedings of the courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions of the Armies of the United States, and furnish reports and opinions on such questions of law and other matters as may be referred to the Bureau of Military Justice by the Secretary of War.

The Chief Signal Officer superintends the instruction of officers and men in signal duties, supervises the preparation of maps and charts, and has the reports from the numerous stations received at Washington consolidated and published.

The Navy Department.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

The Secretary of the Navy performs such duties as the President of the United States, who is Commander-in-Chief, may assign him, and has the general superintendence of construction, manning, armament, equipment, and employment of vessels of war.

COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS.

The Commissioner of Patents is charged with the administration of the patent-laws, and supervises all matters relating to the issue of letters-patent for new and useful discoveries, inventions, and improvements. He is aided by an Assistant Commissioner, three Examiners-in-Chief, an Examiner of Interferences, an Examiner of Trade-marks, and twenty-five Principal Examiners.

COMMISSIONER OF PENSIONS.

The Commissioner of Pensions supervises the examination and adjudication of all claims arising under laws passed by Congress granting bounty-land or pension on account of service in the Army or Navy during the Revolutionary War and all subsequent wars in which the United States has been engaged. He is aided by two Deputy Commissioners and a Medical Referee.

COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND-OFFICE.

The Commissioner of Public Lands is charged with the survey, management, and sale of the public domain, and the issuing of titles therefor, whether derived from confirmations of grants made by former governments, by sales, donations, or grants for schools, railroads, military bounties, or public improvements. The Land-Office audits its own accounts. The divisions of the office are: the Chief Clerk's, Recorder's, Public Lands, Private Land-Claims, Surveys, Railroad-Lands, Pre-emption Claims, Swamp-Lands, Drafting, Accounts, Mineral Claims, and Timber Depredations.

COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has charge of the several tribes of Indians in the States and Territories. He issues instructions to, and receives reports from, Agents, Special Agents, and Traders; superintends the purchase, transportation, and distribution of presents and annuities; and reports, annually, the relations of the Government with each tribe.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

The duties of the Commissioner of Education are to collect such statistics and facts as shall show the condition and progress of education in the several States and Territories, and to diffuse such information respecting the organization and management of schools and school systems, and methods of teaching, as shall aid the people of the United States in the establishment and maintenance of efficient school systems, and otherwise promote the cause of education throughout the country.

COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS.

The Commissioner of Railroads is charged with prescribing a system of reports to be rendered to him by the railroad companies, whose roads are in whole or in part west, north, or south of the Missouri River, and to which the United States have granted any loan of credit or subsidy in lands or bonds; to examine the books, accounts, and property of said companies; to see that the laws relating to said companies are enforced; and to assist the Government Directors of any of said railroad companies in all matters which come under their cognizance, whenever they may officially request such assistance.

DIRECTOR OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The Director of the Geological Survey has charge of the classification of the public lands, and examination of the geological structure, mineral resources, and products of the national domain.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CENSUS.

The Superintendent of the Census supervises the taking of the census of the United States every tenth year, and the subsequent arrangement, compilation, and publication of the statistics collected.

The Post-Office Department.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Postmaster-General has the direction and management of the Post-Office Department. He appoints all officers and employes of the Department, except the three Assistant Postmasters-General, who are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; appoints all postmasters whose compensation does not exceed one thousand dollars; makes postal treaties with foreign governments, by and with the advice and consent of the President, awards and executes contracts, and directs the management of the domestic and foreign mail service.

THE FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The First Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Appointment Office, which includes five Divisions, viz.:

Appointment Division.—The duty of preparing all cases for the establishment, discontinuance, and change of name or site of post-offices, and for the appointment of all postmasters, agents, postal clerks, mail-messengers, and Department employes, and attending to all correspondence consequent thereto.

Bond Division.—The duty of receiving and recording appointments; sending out papers for postmasters and their assistants to qualify; receiving, entering, and filing their bonds and oaths; and issuing the commissions for postmasters.

Salary and Allowance Division.—The duty of readjusting the salaries of postmasters and the consideration of allowances for rent, fuel, lights, clerk-hire and other expenditures.

Free Delivery.—The duty of preparing cases for the inauguration of the system in cities, the appointment of letter-carriers, and the general supervision of the system.

Blank-Agency Division.—The duty of sending out the blanks, wrapping-paper, and twine, letter-balances, and canceling-stamps, to offices entitled to receive the same.

SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Second Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Contract Office, mail equipments, &c., including the following three Divisions:

Contract Division.—The arrangement of the mail service of the United States, and placing the same under contract, embracing all correspondence and proceedings respecting the frequency of trips, mode of conveyance, and times of departures and arrivals on all the routes, the course of the mails between the different sections of the country, the points of mail distribution, and the regulations for the government of the domestic mail service. It prepares the advertisements for mail proposals, receives the bids, and has charge of the annual and occasional mail lettings, and the adjustment and execution of the contracts. All applications for the establishment or alteration of mail arrangements and for mail messengers should be sent to this office. All claims should be submitted to it for transportation service not under contract.

From this office all postmasters at the end of routes receive the statement of mail arrangements prescribed for the respective routes. It reports weekly to the Auditor all contracts executed, and all orders affecting the accounts for mail transportation; prepares the statistical exhibits of the mail service, and the reports to Congress of the mail lettings, giving a statement of each bid; also of the contracts made, the new service originated, the curtailments ordered, and the additional allowances granted within the year.

Inspection Division.—The duty of receiving and examining the registers of the arrivals and departures of the mails, certificates of the service of route-agents, and reports of mail failures; noting the delinquencies of contractors, and preparing cases thereon for the action of the Postmaster-General, furnishing blanks for mail registers, reports of mail failures, and other duties which may be necessary to secure a faithful and exact performance of all mail service.

Mail-Equipment Division.—The issuing of mail locks and keys, mail pouches and sacks, and the construction of mail-bag catchers.

THIRD ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Third Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Finance Office, &c., embracing the following four Divisions:

Division of Finance.—The duty of issuing drafts and warrants in payment of balances reported by the Auditor to be due to mail contractors or other persons; the superintendence of the collection of revenue at depository, draft, and depositing offices, and the accounts between the Department and the Treasurer and Assistant Treasurers and special designated depositories of the United States. This Division receives all accounts, monthly or quarterly, of the depository and draft offices, and certificates of deposit from depositing offices.

Division of Postage-Stamps and Stamped Envelopes.—The issuing of postage-stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper-wrappers and postal cards; also the supplying of postmasters with envelopes for their official use, and registered-package envelopes and seals.

Division of Registered Letters.—The duty of preparing instructions for the guidance of postmasters relative to registered letters, and all correspondence connected therewith; also, the compilation of statistics as to the transactions of the business.

Division of Dead Letters.—The examination and return to the writers of dead letters, and all correspondence relating thereto.

The Superintendent of Foreign Mails has charge of all foreign postal arrangements, and the supervision of the ocean mail-steamship service.

The Superintendent of the Money-Order System has the general supervision and control of the postal money-order system throughout the United States, and the supervision of the international money-order correspondence with foreign countries.

Department of Justice.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The Attorney-General is the head of the Department of Justice, and the chief law officer of the Government. He represents the United States in matters involving legal questions; he gives his advice and opinion on questions of law when they are required by the President, or by the heads of the other Executive Departments on questions of law arising upon the administration of their respective departments; he exercises a general superintendence and direction over United States Attorneys and Marshals in all judicial districts in the States and Territories; and he provides special counsel for the United States whenever required by any Department of the Government.

He is assisted by a Chief Clerk and other clerks and employes in the executive management of the business of the Department.

The Law Clerk, who is also an Examiner of Titles, assists the Attorney-General in the investigation of legal questions and in the preparation of opinions.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Solicitor-General assists the Attorney-General in the performance of his general duties, and by special provision of law in the case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney-General, or in his absence, exercises all these duties. Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General conduct and argue all cases in the Supreme Court, and in the Court of Claims, in which the United States are interested; and, when the Attorney-General so directs, any such case in any Court of the United States may be conducted and argued by the Solicitor-General; and in the same way the Solicitor-General may be sent by the Attorney-General to attend to the interests of the United States in any State Court, or elsewhere.

THE ASSISTANT ATTORNEYS-GENERAL.

Two Assistant Attorneys-General assist the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General in the performance of their duties. One assists in the argument of causes in the Supreme Court and in the preparation of legal opinions; the other is charged with the conduct of the defense of the United States in the Court of Claims.

Under the act of 1870 the different law-officers of the Executive Departments exercise their functions under the supervision and control of the Attorney-General. They are: the Assistant Attorney-General for the Department of the Interior; the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post Office Department; the Solicitor of the Treasury, and the Solicitor of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department; the Naval Solicitor, Navy Department; and the Examiner of Claims, State Department.

The Department of Agriculture.

THE COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE.

The Commissioner of Agriculture is required to collect and diffuse useful information on subjects connected with agriculture. He is to acquire and preserve in his office all information he can obtain concerning agriculture by means of books and correspondence, and by practical and scientific experiments, the collection of statistics, and other appropriate means; to collect new and valuable seeds and plants; to learn by actual cultivation such of them as may require such tests; to propagate such as may be worthy of propagation, and to distribute them among agriculturists.

The Statistician.—He collects reliable information as to the condition, prospects, and results of the cereal, cotton, and other crops, by the instrumentality of four correspondents in each county of every State; this information is gathered at stated periods of each month, carefully studied, estimated, tabulated, and published.

The Entomologist.—He obtains information with regard to insects injurious to vegetation; investigates the character of insects sent him, to point out their modes of infliction and the means by which their depredations may be avoided; and arranges specimens of their injuries and nest architecture.

The Botanist.—He receives botanical contributions, and after making desirable selections for the National Herbarium, distributes the duplicate plants among foreign and domestic scientific societies, institutions of learning, and botanists; and answers inquiries of a botanico-agricultural character.

The Chemist.—He makes analyses of natural fertilizers, vegetable products, and other materials which pertain to the interests of agriculture. Applications are constantly made from all portions of the country for the analysis of soils, minerals, liquids, and manures.

The Microscopist.—He makes original investigations, mostly relating to the habits of parasitic fungoid plants, which are frequently found on living plants and animals, producing sickly growth and in many cases premature death.

The Propagating Garden.—Large numbers of exotic, utilizable, and economic plants are propagated and distributed. The orange family is particularly valuable, and the best commercial varieties are propagated and distributed to the greatest practicable extent.

The Seed Division.—Seeds are purchased in this and foreign countries of reliable firms, whose guarantee of good quality and genuineness cannot be questioned; they are packed at the Department, and distributed to applicants in all parts of the country.

The Library.—Exchanges are made, by which the library receives reports of the leading agricultural, pomological, and meteorological societies of the world.

[For salaries of clerks and other employees of both the Senate and House, see the New Act in Book V. of Existing Laws, this volume.] They are appointed by their respective chiefs, pursuant to the recommendations of majority Senators or Representatives, and with some regard to an equal division among the States. During the Senate Sessions of 1882, the minor offices remained in the hands of the Democrats, owing to a tie vote, President Davis refusing to remove them by his vote; but the Republicans have the majority of the Committees, and each Chairman has on these the appointment of a clerk, at a compensation fixed by the Appropriation Bill.

The committees of the Senate are appointed by the caucuses of their respective parties, and previous rank is as closely observed as party lines will permit. Those of the House are appointed by the Speaker. It is the rule in all parliamentary bodies to give the majority party, in addition to the Chairmanship, a majority on the committees, whether special or standing committees. Exceptions are rare and usually unimportant.

The Library of Congress.

Librarian of Congress.—Ainsworth R. Spofford, 1621 Massachusetts avenue, N. W., salary $4000.

Assistants.—Charles W. Hoffman, 332 Indiana avenue, salary $2500.

Louis Solyom, Montgomery County, Maryland, salary $2500.

And 15 additional clerks. These range from $1200 to $1400.

The Library of Congress occupies the entire western projection of the central Capitol building. The original library was commenced in 1800, but was destroyed with the Capitol in 1814 during the war with England. It was afterwards replenished by the purchase of the library belonging to Ex-President Jefferson, by Congress, embracing about 7,000 volumes. In 1851 it contained 55,000 volumes, and by an accidental fire in that year the whole collection was destroyed, except 20,000 volumes. It was rebuilt in 1852, when $75,000 was appropriated in one sum to replenish the collection. The new library halls, three in number, are fitted up with ornamental iron cases and iron ceiling, the whole being perfectly fire-proof. The library is recruited by regular appropriations made by Congress, which average about $11,000 per annum; also by additions received by copyright, and from the Smithsonian Institution. The library of the Smithsonian Institution has now been deposited in the Library of Congress, where it is secured against loss by fire. This collection is especially rich in scientific works, embracing the largest assemblage of the transactions of learned societies which exist in the country. The library of copyright books was removed here from the Patent Office in 1870, and all copyrights issued in the United States are now recorded in the books deposited in the office of the Librarian of Congress. The present number of volumes in the whole library, including law books, which are kept in a separate library room under the Supreme Court, is over 400,000, besides about 150,000 pamphlets. A new building to contain its overflowing stores of learning and to afford room for their proper arrangement has become a necessity. This collection is very rich in history, political science, jurisprudence, and in books, pamphlets, and periodicals of American publication, or relating in any way to America. At the same time the library is a universal one in its range no department of literature or science being unrepresented. The public are privileged to use the books in the library, while members of Congress and about thirty official members of the government only can take away books. The library is open every day (Sunday excepted) during the session of Congress from 9 a. m. to the hour of adjournment. In the recess of Congress it is open between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except Saturdays, when the hour of closing is 3 p. m.

[All employees appointed on recommendation of members of Congress.]

Ministers are appointed from the dominant party, and are in the main appointed as far as may be among the States, but regard is shown to the high abilities of the man. They are not directly applied for, but Congressional delegations press their claims. Consuls and Commercial Agents are appointed at the solicitation frequently, of business interests, but mainly at the request of Senators and Representatives. Commercial Agents frequently pay better than salaried Consulates, this pay depending on the fees, and in some instances on the liberty of the Agent to transact business. All applicants, for the convenience of the Department, should prepare briefs of their applications, backed by their letters and petitions. A well-arranged brief is in itself a business recommendation. Familiarity with foreign tongues where it exists, should be stated.

- All officers on retired list receive 75 or 50 per cent. of their sea pay, according as they are retired for long and faithful service or for other causes.

The navy ration is commuted at 30 cents per day. The navy spirit ration was totally abolished July 1, 1870.

Navy officers are retired after 40 years' service, on their own application; and they are retired in any case after 62 years of age, with some exceptions. The compensation of retired officers is 75 per cent. of the active pay of the same rank, or 50 per cent. (according to the causes of retirement.)

Admissions to West Point and the Naval Academy are only received where vacancies occur in the State or section entitled. The appointments are apportioned among the Senators and Representatives, some being reserved to the President. In many Congressional Districts, to avoid favoritism, and to make sure of admission when appointed, local boards of examiners are appointed, and those who pass best in the English branches are given the first trial. The fortunate applicant must pass another and still more rigid examination at the Academy, and must do this without serious failure in each and every year. Those who pass are entitled, in the Army, to a Second Lieutenantcy; in the Navy, to a Past Midshipman's rank. Those who fail can under an Act of Congress, be appointed to the lower grade of vacancies in the Army after all who pass are provided for. At either Academy the student receives sufficient allowance from the government.

United States Military Academy at West Point.

The United States Military Academy at West Point was founded by act of March 16, 1802, constituting the corps of engineers of the army, a military academy with fifty students or cadets, who were to receive instructions under the senior engineer officer as superintendent. Later acts established professorships of mathematics, engineering, philosophy, etc., and made the academy a military body, subject to the rules and articles of war. In 1815, a permanent superintendent was appointed, and a year later an annual board of visitors was provided for, to be named by the President, the Speaker of the House, and the President of the Senate. In 1843 the present system of the appointment of cadets was instituted, which assigns one cadet to each Congressional district and Territory in the Union, to be named by the Representative in Congress for the time being, and ten appointments at large, specially conferred by the President of the United States. The number of students is thus limited to 312. A large proportion of those appointed fail to pass the examination, and many others to complete the course, the proportion being stated at fully one half hitherto.

The course of instruction requires four years, and is largely mathematical and professional. The discipline is very strict, even more so than in the army, and the enforcement of penalties for offences is inflexible rather than severe. The whole number of graduates from 1802 to 1877 was about 2,700, of whom 1,200 are deceased and about 1,500 living. Of those surviving, 800 are still in the army, and about 700 out of service.

Appointees to the Military Academy must be between 17 and 22 years of age, at least five feet in height, and free from infirmity, and able to pass a careful examination in various branches of knowledge. Each cadet admitted must bind himself to serve the United States eight years from the time of admission to the academy. The pay of cadets, formerly fifty dollars per month and rations, was fixed at $540 per year, with no allowance for rations, by the act of 1876. The aggregate amount of money appropriated by the United States for the Military Academy from 1802 to 1877 inclusive, was $11,396,128, being an average of about $149,949 annually. The number of actual members of the academy, by the official register of June, 1879, was 212.

United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The United States Naval Academy was opened October 10, 1845, and the credit of its foundation is attributed to Hon. George Bancroft, then Secretary of the Navy under President Polk. The course of instruction, designed to train midshipmen for the navy, at first occupied five years, of which three were passed at sea. Various changes have been made in the course of instruction, which was made seven years in 1850, four years in 1851, and six years, (the two last of which are spent at sea,) March 3, 1873, where it now remains, under the direct care and supervision of the Navy Department. There are to be allowed in the academy one cadet-midshipman for every member or delegate in the House of Representatives, appointed at his nomination, one for the District of Columbia, and ten appointed at large by the President. The number of appointments which can be made is limited by law to twenty-five each year, named by the Secretary of the Navy after competitive examinations, the cadets being from fourteen to eighteen years of age. The successful candidates become students of the academy, and receive the pay of cadet-midshipmen, $500 per annum. Besides the cadet-midshipmen, 25 cadet-engineers may be appointed each year, from 16 to 20 years of age, on competitive examination involving a higher standard of knowledge. The course for cadet-engineers is 4 years at the academy, and 2 additional years at sea. All cadets who graduate are appointed assistant-engineers in the navy as fast as vacancies occur. The course of instruction is thorough, involving a close pursuit of mathematics, steam engineering, physics, mechanics, seamanship, ordnance, history, law, etc. The whole number of students, cadet-midshipmen, 204; cadet-engineers, 80; total, 284.

The salaries of Internal Revenue Collectors are graduated annually in proportion to the amount of revenue collected by each—the maximum salary being limited to $4,500 by law.

The number of the collection districts are those retained when the districts in various States were consolidated by law, and those bearing the intervening numbers were abolished.

[While some collectors have fixed salaries, other officers are paid, in whole or in part, by fees or commissions, to which the law fixes a maximum limit.]

OTHER DEPARTMENT OFFICES, THE PAY AND HOW OBTAINED.*State Department.

In addition to the principal and consular officers previously named there are employed in the State Department about 50 clerks, watchmen, engineers, etc. The clerks are graded, the lowest class receiving $900, the next $1,000, then $1,200, $1,400, $1,600 and $1,800. The proof-reader gets $1,300, lithographer $1,200, chief-engineer $1,200, assistant engineer $1,000, messenger $840, assistant messenger $720, superintendent of watch $1,000, six watchmen $600 each, conductor for elevator $720, eight laborers $600 each, six firemen $720 each.

Treasury Department.

This is regarded as the leading department in the value of its patronage, though the Postmaster General has more appointments if we include in his list all the Postmasters throughout the land.

In the Treasury Department, besides the principal officers enumerated, there are over twelve thousand officers. The salaries of the clerks range from $900 to $2,400, the latter for head clerks in bureaus or branches; female clerks, as a rule, $900. The chief messengers get $840, assistant messengers $720, laborers $660, and some female laborers $1 per day; female messengers $1.50 per day, female counters and laborers $2 per day. There are great numbers of clerical and minor officers in all branches of the Department. Some of the male messengers are paid $4 per day, and some of the female laborers get $660 a year there being no uniform system, the appointments being pursuant to laws passed at different periods, and in many instances at the discretion of the Secretary. He has more discretion under the law than any other officer of the government.

The Special Agents, employed in different cities of the Union, as a rule, get $8 per day, and while Treasury Agents in distant territories and possessions get salaries, ranging from $2,190 to $2,650 per annum, with an allowance of $600 for traveling expenses.

In the Divisions of the Secretary's office about 600 persons, male and female, are employed at sums ranging from $1 per day, for the simplest forms of labor, to $2,500 per annum for high clerical duties.

In the Bureau of the Mint, eleven persons, male and female, get from $660 to $2,300—the examiner the larger figures; the clerks from $1,000 to $2,000, translator $1,200, copyist $900.

In the Bureau of Statistics, about forty persons, male and female, are employed, at salaries graded from laborer to chief clerk as follows: $480, $660, $720, $900, $1,000, $1,200, $1,400, $1,600, $1,800, $2,000 and $2,400.

In the office of the Life-Saving Service about fifteen persons, male and female, are employed, at similar salaries to the above, the Superintendent getting $4,000, Assistant General Superintendent $2,500.

In the office of the Light-House Board, nearly sixty persons, male and female, are employed, the female laborers getting $45 and $60 per month; male laborers $2 per day; custodian of light-house laboratory $75 per month; clerk of committee on engineering $50 per month; superintendent of repairs $150 per month; superintendents of construction from $5 per day to $175 per month; draughtsmen from $100 to $150 per month; assistant chief engineer $200 per month; about 30 writers from $600 to $1,400 each per year.

In the Supervising Surgeon General's Office about fifteen persons, male and female, are employed, the Supervising Surgeon General getting $4,000, chief clerk $2,000, other clerks from $1,000 to $1,600, copyists $900, laborers $25 per month.

In the Bureau of Engraving and Printing nearly fifteen hundred persons, male and female, are employed. These comprise the chief clerk at $4,500, assistant chief $2,250, accountant $2,000, stenographer $1,600, seven other clerks at from $1,000 to $1,600, a lady getting in this instance the highest figure, three female copyists at $900 each, two assistant messengers at $720, four laborers at $660. In the Engraving Division the Superintendent gets $12 per day, clerk $3 per day, engravers from $5 to $8.75 per day, die sinkers $3.50 per day, transferers from $3.50 to $7, provers $5, plate cleaners $4.50, machinist $3, trimmer $1.50, helpers, $2 and $2.50, apprentices $1.25 to $2. There are many other Divisions, all employing skilled and unskilled, male and female, labor. These comprise a custodian of plates, writing division, printing division, surface branch, examining division, binding, numbering and machine divisions, macerators, watch, vault, cleaning, chance employes and miscellaneous. The skilled laborers are principally paid by the piece, their assistants, generally female, by the day at $1.125, $1.50 and $2.

In the Supervising Architect's Office many civil engineers, draughtsmen, computers, modelers, moulders, photographers, phonographers, copyists (all females) and others skilled in mechanical sciences are employed, at from $1 to $9 per day, according to the skill required, the clerks being on the usual salaries. Nearly 500 persons are thus employed.

There are First and Second Comptroller's Offices, each employing from 60 to 100 persons, males and females. The Comptrollers get $5,000, the Deputies $2,700, Chief of Division $2,100, clerks from $900 to $1,800, messengers, watchmen, laborers, etc., same as in other branches.

In the office of the Commissioner of Customs about 40 persons, all males, are employed. The Commissioner gets $4,000, Deputy 2,500, clerks from $1,000 to $2,100, messengers $720, laborer $660.

There are six Auditor's offices, which vary in the number employed from 50 to 100. The Auditor gets $3,600, Deputy $2,250, chiefs of Divisions $2,000, clerks, both male and females, from $900 to $1,800, messengers, laborers, etc., the usual amount.

In the Treasurer's office about 300 are employed, more than half of the clerks being females. The Treasurer gets $6,000, Assistant $3,600, Cashier $3,600, Assistant $3,200, Supt. National Bank Redemption Division $3,500, Chief Clerk, $2,500, five Chiefs of Division each $2,500, two principal book-keepers each $2,500, two assistants each $2,400, four tellers each $2,500, four assistants from $2,000, to $2,250, clerks from $900 to $1,800, laborers, messengers, watchmen, etc., same as usual.

In the Register's office about 200 persons, male and female, are employed. The Register gets $4,000; Assistant, $2,250; Disbursing Clerk, $2,000; Chief Clerk, $2,000; other clerks, from $900 to $1,800; Counters, $900; Laborers, $660.

In the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, about 100 are employed. The Comptroller gets $5,000; Deputy, $2,800; Chiefs of Division, $2,200; Bond Clerk, $2,000; Superintendent, $2,000; Teller, $2,000; Book Keeper and Assistant, each, $2,000; Stenographer, $1,600; about 700 clerks, more than half of them females, from $900 to $1,800—the smaller sum, as a rule, being paid to the females; messengers, watchmen, laborers, same as heretofore.

In the office of Internal Revenue, about 250 persons, male and female, are employed. The Commissioner gets $6,000; Deputy, $3,200; Heads of Divisions from $2,250 to $2,500; Stenographer, $1,800; nearly 200 clerks, half of them females, from $900 to $1,800—the females, as a rule, getting the smaller sum, though some of them run as high as $1,600; messengers, $720; ten laborers, $660.

INTERNAL REVENUE AGENTS.

Internal-Revenue Gaugers.

There are Internal Revenue Gaugers appointed by the Treasury Department, on the recommendation of the Internal Revenue Collectors, in all of the States, though their duties are not always at the same points or districts, as the Deputy Collectors are paid by fees, and they earn from $200 to $1,800 a year.

Internal-Revenue Storekeepers.

These officers number nearly two thousand, and are appointed on the recommendation of Internal Revenue Collectors at every important point where liquors are distilled or stored. They are paid $4 per day. Like the Gaugers and Deputy Collectors, they are appointed in Revenue Districts.

Internal Revenue Inspectors of Tobacco are also appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, on the recommendation of Internal Revenue Collectors, at all points where tobacco is raised and stored to any extent. They are paid by fees, and can earn from $400 to $1800.

Sub-Treasuries.

Sub-Treasuries of the United States are located at Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia, St. Louis, and San Francisco. They each employ an assistant treasurer at $4,500, cashier, $2,500; clerks and book-keepers at from $1,200 to $1,800, messengers at $840, watchmen $720, and detectives (at the more important points) at from $1,400 to $1,800. These sub-treasuries employ both males and females. The Assistant Treasurer is appointed by the Secretary with the approval of the President, and this chief officer recommends all subordinates.

U. S. Mints.

There are United States Mints at Carson City, Nevada, Denver, Col., New Orleans, Philadelphia and San Francisco. The Superintendents get from $3,000 to $4,500 according to location. They are appointed by the President, and recommend all subordinates to the Secretary of the Treasury. These several Mints employ about 1,000 persons in all, many of them skilled. That at Philadelphia, which employs about 250 persons, is a good guide to the compensation, and we give herewith a partial list from which all can be readily determined:

U. S. Assay Offices.

There are Assay Offices at Boise City, Idaho; Charlotte, N. C.; Helena, Montana, and New York City. At Boise City the assayer in charge gets $2,000 a year, one clerk, $1,000; one workman. At Charlotte the assayer in charge gets $1,500, one clerk $1,000, one laborer $16 a month. At Helena the assayer gets $2,500, melter $2,000, chief clerk $1,200, and nine other assistants from $2.50 to $3.25 a day. At New York the Superintendent gets from $4,000 to $5,000, the assayer $3,000, melter and refiner $3,000, chief clerk $2,500, weigh clerk $2,000, and 56 other employees from $3 per day to $2,150 a year.

The Customs Service.

The Customs Service include all officers and employees under the direction of Collectors of the Ports, Appraisers, Surveyors of Ports, etc. They employ nearly 4,000 officers throughout the country. The President appoints all the heads, and these recommend minor officers to the Secretary of the Treasury. Appointments are not confined to either the States or cities in which the Custom House is located. The pay varies somewhat at each Port, New York being the highest. Boston will give a good idea of the character of the positions and compensation. We therefore quote from it:

U. S. Coast Survey.

About 250 skilled persons employed. The Superintendent gets $6,000, consulting geometer $4,000, assistant in charge of office $4,200, about fifty assistants from $1,200 up to $3,830, aids $75 per month, acting aids $35 per month, ten computers from $45 per month to $1,740 a year, drawing division from $3 per day to $2,350 a year, clerks $1,200, mechanics from $2.50 to $5 per day, female copyists $30 to $60 a month.

Light-House Service.

This has grown to immense proportions, and now employs nearly 200 persons. The Secretary of the Treasury is President of the Board, and controls the appointments, only the leading details and appointment being submitted to the President.

It is provided by section 9 of the act approved March 3, 1851, and there shall be detailed from the Engineer Corps of the Army such officers as may be necessary to superintend the construction and renovation of light-houses; also, by section 12 of the act approved August 31, 1852, that an officer of the Army or Navy, shall be assigned to each district as a light-house inspector, subject to the orders of the Light-House Board, who shall receive for such service the same pay and emoluments that he would be entitled to by law for the performance of duty in the regular line of his profession, and no other, except the legal allowance per mile when traveling under orders connected with his duties.

The following are the light-house districts in the United States:

- | DIST. | LIMITS OF DISTRICT.   |
|-------|---|
| 1     | Extends from the north-eastern boundary of the United States (Maine) to and including Hampton Harbor, New Hampshire, and includes all aids to navigation on the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire.  |
| 2     | Extends from Hampton Harbor, New Hampshire, to include Gooseberry Point, entrance to Buzzard's Bay, and embraces all the aids to navigation on the coast of Massachusetts.  |
| 3     | Extends from Gooseberry Point, Massachusetts, to include Squan Inlet, New Jersey, and embraces all the aids to navigation on the sea and sound coasts of Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York; Narragansett and New York Bays, Providence and Hudson Rivers, Whitehall Narrows, and Lake Champlain. |
| 4     | Extends from Squan Inlet, New Jersey, to and including Metomkin Inlet, Virginia. It includes the sea-coast of New Jersey below the Highlands of Navesink, the bay-coasts of New Jersey and Delaware, the sea-coasts of Delaware and Maryland, and part of the sea-coast of Virginia.                  |
| 5     | Extends from Metomkin Inlet, Virginia, to include New River Inlet, North Carolina, and embraces part of the sea-coast of Virginia and North Carolina, Chesapeake Bay, the sounds of North Carolina, and the James and Potomac Rivers.   |
| 6     | Extends from New River Inlet, North Carolina, to and including Cape Canaveral light-house, Florida, and embraces part of the coast of North Carolina, the coasts of South Carolina and Georgia, and part of the coast of Florida.   |

- 7 Extends from Cape Canaveral, on the eastern coast of Florida, to the Perdido River, on the Gulf Coast, and embraces all the aids to navigation within those limits.
- 8 Extends from the Perdido River, Florida, to the Rio Grande, Texas, and embraces the coasts of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas.
- 10 Extends from the mouth of Saint Regis River, New York, to include Grassy Island lighthouse, Detroit River, Michigan, and embraces all the aids to navigation on the American shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario and Saint Lawrence River.
- 11 Embraces all aids to navigation on the northern and north-western lakes above Grassy Island light-station, Detroit River, and includes Lakes Saint Clair, Huron, Michigan, and Superior, and the straits connecting them.
- 12 Embraces all aids to navigation on the Pacific coast of the United States, between the Mexican frontier and the southern boundary of Oregon, and includes the coast of California.
- 13 Embraces all aids to navigation on the Pacific coast of the United States north of the southern boundary of Oregon. It extends from the forty-first parallel of latitude to British Columbia, and includes the coasts of Oregon and Washington Territory.
- 14 Extends from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to Cairo, Illinois, and embraces all the aids to navigation on the Ohio River.
- 15 Extends on the Mississippi River from the head of navigation to New Orleans, and on the Missouri River from the head of navigation to its mouth, and embraces all the aids to navigation within these limits.

The pay of light-house keepers varies from $160 to $1000 a year, the average being about $700. The monthly compensation of the other officers: Clerks, $125; masters, $100; engineers, $60 to $75; messengers, $50.

Employees in Public Buildings.

These number about 400, appointed by the heads of Departments. The janitors get from $450 to $1200 a year; engineers, $3.50 to $5.00 per day; firemen, $2.00; elevator tenders, watchmen, cleaners, etc., $2 per day.

War Department.

The pay here for clerical service is about the same as in the Treasury, both males and females being employed in almost as great proportion. The popular idea that only the Treasury employs females must disappear before the fact that they are rapidly invading all of the Departments. In the office of the Secretary, about 100 clerks, messengers, watchmen, laborers, etc., are employed, all appointed by the Secretary. In the Adjutant General's office, about 300 are employed, all males, the clerks numbering about 200, at salaries from $1000 to $2000. Other officers about same pay as in Treasury. In the Quartermaster-General's office about 150 males and females are employed at same rates of pay. Though under the Quartermaster-General, who is detailed from the army, they are appointed by the Secretary of War. There are about 400 employees in the Quartermaster's Department-at-Large, and these are paid salaries varying from that of a teamster, $540, to clerks at $1800.

The Medical Department proper employs about 200, the great majority male clerks, pay same as usual; here are twelve laborers at $660 a year and twelve watchmen same pay. The Medical Department at large employs about 200 persons at various fortifications and stations, but these are detailed from the army or navy. The Pay Department employs about 150, the Paymaster's clerks being located and paid by the month as follows:

Post-Office Department.

The Postmaster-General has more appointments than any other officer, if we include the Postmasters throughout the country. All getting over $1000 annual salary must be confirmed by the Senate, and as a rule the President appoints those at important points. The U. S. Senators control these appointments in minority districts, as a rule, and the Representatives those in home districts representing the party to which they belong. This has long been the custom, and President Arthur recently confirmed it by the selection of the Wilkesbarre postmaster, supported by Representative Scranton, after a contest in which the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania was against him.

In the general office or Department, fully 600 persons are employed, many of the clerks being females—in fact all of those in the Dead-Letter office—some 70 in number, at salaries of $900. The salaries of the male clerks, messengers, watchmen, laborers, etc., are about the same as in the Treasury. The First, Second, and Third Assistant Postmasters-General get $3500, and the higher clerical places vary from $1800 to $2500, the Superintendents of mail service getting $3000; the Division Superintendents, nine in number, $2500 each; about 250 male clerks from $900 to $1800; about 40 laborers at $660 each; messengers, watchmen, etc., from $480 to $720.

The Railway Mail Service.

This is a very important branch of the mail service, from the standpoint of official political patronage. It employs over 3000 men, at what are generally accepted as good salaries. They are appointed on the recommendation of Senators and Representatives in Congress, and are appointed with some show of fairness to the Congressional districts. Under a Republican administration, as in other cases, the Republican Representative names appointees from his district; in districts represented in the House by Democrats, the Republican United States Senators are presumed to have the appointee. This rule has many exceptions, but it has long been known as the rule of the caucus.

The General Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service is paid $3,500; his assistant, $1,600; nine Division Superintendents, $2,500 each; four assistants, $1,200 and $1,600.

There are about 700 Railway Post Office Clerks employed on the routes, at salaries varying from $900 to $1,400. Like the Route Agents, their pay is changeable, depending largely upon the increasing or decreasing importance of the routes; one of the objects being to make the Post Office Department as nearly self-supporting as possible.

There are more than 2,000 Route Agents, paid, as a rule, annually, $900, $920, $940, $960, or $1,000, according to the length of service or importance of the route. There are about 300 Mail Route Messengers, paid from $100 per annum up to $800, according to the importance of the service. Also 160 local agents, who get from $200 to $1,300.

There are about 8,000 Mail Contractors, besides the corporations which take contracts, and all are paid accordingly as they bid, the lowest and best being accepted. The letting of these routes is advertised by the Department, and bids must be accompanied by a bond for the faithful performance of the contract. There is also what is known as a special mail service, where contracts are made with Postmasters or others at comparatively unimportant Post Offices, for the carrying of the mails, and much the same rule applies to a large number of Mail Messengers, who are a grade or two higher in point of compensation. All of these are bid for, the Department exercising the discretion of saying what shall be paid for merely local and new postal routes.

Postmasters.

The number of Postmasters are legions. They are appointed as a rule by Congressional influence, the same as described above, though the more important places are named by the President instead of the Postmaster-General, and he accepts the recommendation of the Representatives or Senators interested and supporting his administration. Women are often appointed to the minor places, and latterly to some of very considerable importance. Applications are generally accompanied by petitions or letter, and these are sent through Congressmen to the head of the Department, or the President. In the smaller offices the pay is based upon the number of stamps sold annually; in others the pay is regulated either by the Department or by law. All receiving $1,000 a year or more must be confirmed by the United States Senate, and of course the higher appointments must be acceptable to the Republican Senators of the State, if there be such, and when these agree, objection is rarely made.

Postmasters can be appointed from any portion of the State or nation, as can all Federal officers, the law only requiring them to be citizens; but they are usually selected from the places in which the duties are performed. The same rule applies to clerks, carriers, messengers, etc.

Letter Carriers.

These are appointed, as are the clerks, on the recommendation of the Postmaster on the recommendation of the Postmaster-General. The influences are as a rule Congressional, and this in turn is frequently obtained with the aid of members of the State Legislature, and others having influence in their district. In large cities, those selected from the city, are distributed among the wards, but their appointment, as stated, is not confined to the city.

Interior Department.

This is a large Department, employing fully four thousand persons, nearly all appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, on the recommendation, as a rule, of Senators and Representatives. The President, as in all other cases, actually selects or approves the appointees for the more important positions, and he is reached by the same influences. Where special skill is required, less weight is attached to political influence, though few Federal or other offices are wholly independent of it, whatever may be the profession of the parties in or out. It has ever been so, and it is not likely that there will be any material change, even under professions to enforce the civil service rules.

In the Secretary's office of the Interior Department there are about 140 officers. The assistant secretary gets $3,500, chief clerk $2,500, chiefs of division $2000, male clerks from $1,200 to $1,800, one getting $2,250, male copyists $900, female copyists $900, messengers $960, assistant messengers $720, laborers $660, captain of watch $1,000, watchmen $660, firemen $720.

The Patent Office employs about 450 persons. The Commissioner of Patents receives $4,500, assistant $3,000, chief clerk $2,250, three examiners-in-chief $3,000, one examiner of interferences $2,500, twenty-two principal examiners $2,400 each, one examiner of trade-marks $2,400, financial clerk $2,000, librarian $2,000, twenty-two first assistant examiners $1,800 each, twenty-two second assistant examiners $1,600 each, twenty-two third assistant examiners $1,400 each, two clerks $1,800, five clerks $1,600, eight clerks $1,400, thirty-two clerks at $1,200 each, twenty-two clerks $1,000, seventy-five female copyists at $900 each, Machinist $1,600 skilled draughtsmen $1,200 each, skilled laborer $1,200, nine model attendants $800 each, about ninety laborers almost equally divided as to sex, $660 each, fifteen male and female clerks employed on the Official Gazette from $480 to $1800, temporary draughtsmen, male and female, from $480 to $1000 each.

In the Pension Office the Commissioner receives $3,600, chief clerk $2000. In the chief clerk's division there are seventeen male and female clerks, at salaries ranging from $1000 to $1800, the latter for males, the females $1,000 to $1400; fifteen copyists, all females, at $900 each, save one, who gets $840; engineers $1,200, assistant engineer $1,000, four messengers $840 each, seven assistant messengers $720 each, two watchmen $660 each, twelve laborers $660. There are several other divisions—the medical referee's, records and accounts, special service, invalid, widows', navy, old war and county-land division, arrears division—all employing clerks, copyists, and messengers at the salaries given above.

Indian Agencies.

Indian Agents are appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, and the latter selects on the Agent's recommendation his physicians, engineers, storekeepers, farmers, clerks, interpreters, police, blacksmiths, teamsters, teachers, herders, cooks, adobe-moulders, captains of police, sergeants of police, privates of police, mail carriers, millers and sawyers, carpenters, harness makers, apprentices, and laborers. The Agents get from $720 to $1,500, according to the importance of the agency; the physicians 1,200, engineers $900, farmers $900 to $1,000, clerks $900, adobe-moulders $1 per day, captains of police $8 per month, sergeants of police $5 per month, privates of police $5 per month (small pay, surely, but they are otherwise employed or selected from the Indians) cooks $360 a year, blacksmith $1,000 down to $800, butcher $40 per month, mail carriers from $300 to $500, miller and sawyer $840, carpenters $700, teachers $720, herders $600, clerks $50 per month, teamsters $480, etc. There are agencies in all the Territories, wherever there are tribes of Indians on reservations.

Bureau of Education.

This is a branch of the Interior Department employing twenty-two persons. The commissioner receives $3,000, chief clerk $1,800, statistician $1,800, translator $1,600, male and female clerks from $900 to $1,600, male and female collectors of statistics from $360 to $2,400.

The office of the Auditor of Railroad Accounts employs about sixty persons, male and female. The Auditor receives $5,000, the book-keeper $2,400, assistant $2,000, male and female clerks and copyists from $720 to $1,800, ten special agents of statistics $6 per day each.

Both the Governors and Secretaries of the Territories are appointed by the President, usually on the recommendation of Congressional delegations.

Department of Justice.

The Attorney General is in charge here, in the Washington Department employs less than 100 persons. His next in rank, the Solicitor General, gets a salary of $7,000, two Assistant Attorneys General $5,000 each, the chief clerk $2,200, law clerk and examiner of titles $2,700, stenographic clerk $1,800, twenty-two other clerks from $1,200 to $2,000, telegraphic operator $1,000, copyists $900, messenger $840, assistant messengers $720, watchmen $720, laborers $660.

Three assistants to the Attorney General in the preparation of cases for the Court of Claims get $3,000 each, the Solicitor of the Treasury $4,500, Assistant Solicitor $3,000, Assistant Attorney General in the Department of the Interior $5,000, Solicitor of Internal Revenue $4,500, Examiner of Claims $3,500, Assistant Attorney General in the Post Office Department $4,500. All of these leading places are appointed by the President; the others on the recommendation of the Attorney General. Besides the above there are many persons employed in the Government Hospital for the Insane, the Freedmen's Hospital, the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum, the United States Capitol, Extension and Improvement of Grounds, the various Surveys of the Territories, the Entomological Commission, National Museum, Department of Justice, Commissioners of Deeds for District of Columbia, Reform School, United States Jail and Government Printing Office, all in the District of Columbia, but selections are made from any part of the Union, the chiefs appointing minor officers, or workmen or workwomen on the recommendation of the President, Cabinet, Department officers, or Congressmen. Selections are of course made with a view to fitness, and the pay except for higher positions is by the month or day—good of course, for the United States Government is liberal to its employees.

Department of Agriculture

Employs about 80 persons. Commissioner $3,000, male and female clerks from $900 to $1,800, female copyists $720 to $1,000, mechanics $720, laborers $660, male and female employees in seed division from $1.25 per day to $1,000 a year, employees in experimental garden from $1 per day to $900 a year.

National Board of Health,

Located at Washington, President, members of the Board and Sanitary Inspectors $10 per day clerks same as in Departments.

Government Printing Office and Bindery

Employs about 1,600 persons, mostly skilled at printing or binding, and these are paid from 23 to 40 cents per hour, or by piecework, the Washington Union rates. The Public Printer gets $3,600, chief clerk $2,000, other clerks from 1,200 to $1,800, foreman of printing $2,100, assistants $5.75 per day, compositors, etc., piecework.

Government of the District of Columbia.

The District of Columbia is governed by Congress, the chief officers being three Commissioners, two at $5,000 each, the other his rank in the army, from which he is selected. The appointees are all from the District, at least they credit themselves there after appointment. About 300 Metropolitan Police get from $75 a month to $1,000 a year.

Judicial.

Among the first pages of this book we have given the United States Circuit Judges with their salaries. The Attorney General, usually on the recommendation of these have the appointment of many Commissioners and other officers in their respective States and Territories, all of whom are paid by fees. They are usually attorneys at the points where the duties are performed. The Circuit Judges get $6,000 a year, District Judges $3,500, the United States District Attorneys $200 a month and fees, which are usually heavy; Marshals $200 a month and fees. All of these leading officers are appointed by the President and subject to confirmation by the United States Senate.

We have thus completed a careful summary of the United States Official Register, and shown the influences by which Federal offices are obtained, by whom appointed, etc. Of course, only rules can be given, and applicants will in many cases have to depend on their own command of facilities for acquiring the needed attention and influence. Any action under the civil service rules has been so spasmodic that it would be misleading to attempt to point out where examinations are requisite, if indeed they are now requisite anywhere. Proof of fitness through letters and Congressional recommendations are honored, while the civil service rules are "more honored in the breach than the observance."

* In the amount here stated as the outstanding principal of the public debt are included the certificates of deposit outstanding on the 30th of June, issued under act of June 8, 1872, for which a like amount in United States notes was on special deposit in the Treasury for their redemption, and added to the cash balance in the Treasury. These certificates, as a matter of accounts, are treated as a part of the public debt, but, being offset by notes held on deposit for their redemption, should properly be deducted from the principal of the public debt in making comparison with former years.

Acts of March 3, 1865 (13 Statutes, 468), and April 12, 1866 (14 Statutes, 31); CONSOLS OF 1867. Acts of March 3, 1865 (13 Statutes, 468), and April 12, 1866 (14 Statutes, 31). CONSOLS OF 1868. THREE-PER-CENT. CERTIFICATES. Acts of March 2, 1867 (14 Statutes, 558), and July 25, 1868 (15 Statutes, 183). FIVE PER CENT. LOAN OF 1881. (FOR SILVER). The act of January 14, 1875 (18 Statutes, 296), authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to use any surplus revenues from time to time in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to issue, sell, dispose of, at not less than par, in coin, either of the description of bonds of the United States described in the act of July 14, 1870 (16 Statutes, 272), to the extent necessary for the redemption of fractional currency in silver coins of the denomination of ten, twenty-five, and fifty cents of standard value. FIVE-PER-CENT. LOAN OF 1881. (TO PAY J. B. EADS). The act on March 3, 1875 (18 Statutes, 466), directs the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds of the character and description set out in the act of July 14, 1870 (16 Statutes, 272) to James B. Eads or his legal representatives in payment at par of the warrants of the Secretary of War for the construction of jetties and auxiliary works to maintain a wide and deep channel between the South Pass of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico, unless Congress shall have previously provided for the payment of the same by the necessary appropriation of money. FIVE-PER CENT. LOAN OF 1881. (REFUNDING). The act of July 14, 1870 (16 Statutes, 272), authorizes the issue of $200,000,000 at 5 per centum, principal and interest payable in coin of the present standard value, at the pleasure of the United States Government, after ten years; these bonds to be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by any State, municipal, or local authority. Bonds and coupons payable at the Treasury of the United States. This act not to authorize an increase of the bonded debt of the United States. Bonds to be sold at not less than par in coin, and the proceeds to be applied to the redemption of outstanding 5-20s, or to be exchanged for said 5-20s, par for par. Payment of the 5s bonds, when due, to be made in order of dates and numbers, beginning with each class last dated and numbered. Interest to cease at the end of three months from notice of intention to redeem. The act of January 20, 1871 (16 Statutes, 389), increases the amount of 5 per cent bonds to $500,000,000, provided the total amount of bonds issued shall not exceed the amount originally authorized, and authorizes the interest on any of these bonds to be paid quarterly. The act of December 17, 1873 (18 Statutes, 1), authorized the issue of an equal amount of the bonds of the loan of 1858, which the holders thereof may, on or before February 1, 1874, elect to exchange for the bonds of this loan.	5 or 20 years. FOUR-PER-CENT. LOAN OF 1907. (RESUMPTION).

The act of January 14, 1875 (18 Statutes, 296) authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to use any surplus revenues from time to time in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to issue, sell, dispose of, or not less than par, in coin, either of the description of bonds of the United States described in the act of July 14, 1870 (16 Statutes, 272) for the purpose of redeeming, on and after January 1, 1879, in coin, at the office of the assistant treasurer of the United States in New York, the outstanding United States legal-tender notes when presented in sums of not less than fifty dollars.

CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT.

The act of June 8, 1872 (17 Statutes, 336), authorizes the deposit of United States notes without interest by banking associations in sums not less than $10,000, and the issue of certificates therefor in denominations of not less than $5,000; which certificates shall be payable on demand in United States notes at the place where the deposits were made. It provides that the notes deposited in the Treasury shall not be counted as a part of the legal reserve, but that the certificates issued therefor may be held and counted by the national banks as part of their legal reserve, and may be accepted in the settlement of clearing-house balances at the places where the deposits therefor were made, and that the United States notes for which such certificates were issued, or other United States notes of like amount, shall be held as special deposits in the Treasury, and used only for the redemption of such certificates.

SILVER CERTIFICATES.

The act of February 28, 1878 (20 Statutes, 26, sec. 3), provides that any holder of the coin authorized by this act may deposit the same with the Treasurer or any assistant treasurer of the United States in sums not less than ten dollars, and receive therefor certificates of not less than ten dollars each, corresponding with the denomination of the United States notes. The coin deposited for or representing the certificates shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and, when so received, may be reissued.

REFUNDING CERTIFICATES.

The act of February 26, 1879 (20 Statutes, 321), authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue, in exchange for lawful money of the United States, certificates of deposit, of the denomination of ten dollars, bearing interest at the rate of 4 per centum per annum, and convertible at any time, with accrued interest, into the four per centum bonds described in the refunding act; the money so received to be applied only to the payment of the bonds bearing interest at a rate not less than five per centum, in the mode prescribed by said act.

The estimates of this Department are submitted as made up by the officers in charge of the public duties to which they respectively pertain, and while exceeding those of 1881 by the sum of $1,699,332.69, they are in excess of the appropriations made for the Department at the last session of Congress only to the extent of $608.55.

CUSTOMS.

The revenue from customs for the past fiscal year was $198,159 676.02, an increase of $11,637,611.42 over that of the preceding year.

Of the amount collected, $138,908,562.39 was collected at the port of New York, leaving $59,251,113.63 as the amount collected at all the other ports of the country.

Of the total amount, $47,977,137.63 was collected on sugar, melado, and molasses; $27,285,624.78 on wool and its manufactures; $21,462,534.34 on iron and steel, and manufactures thereof, $19,038,665.81 on manufactures of silk; $10,825,115.21 on manufactures of cotton; and $6,469,643.04 on wines and spirits; making a total revenue from the articles specified, of $133,058,720.81.

The expenses of collection for the past year were $6,419,345.20, an increase over the preceding year of $387,410.04. While there was an increase in the revenue from customs over the preceding year of over eleven and a half millions of dollars, the gross value of the imports, including free goods, decreased over twenty-five millions of dollars. The most marked decrease was in the value of unmanufactured wool, $14,023,682, and in that of scrap and pig-iron, $12,810,671. There was, on the other hand, an increase in the value of sugar imported of $7,427,474; on steel rails, of $4,345,521; on barley, $2,154,204; and on steel in ingots, bars, &c., $1,620,046.

The exports, as contrasted with the imports during the last fiscal year, (1881), are as follows:

Exports of domestic merchandise . . . . .	$883,925,947 00
Exports of foreign merchandise . . . . .	18,451,399 00
Total . . . . .	902,377,346 00
Imports of merchandise . . . . .	642,664,628 00
Excess of exports over imports of merchandise . . . . .	259,712,718 00
Aggregate of exports and imports . . . . .	1,545,041,974 00

Compared with the previous year, there was an increase of $66,738,688 in the value of exports of merchandise, and a decrease of $25,290,118 in the value of imports. The annual average of the excess of imports of merchandise over exports thereof, for ten years previous to June 30, 1873, was $104,706,922; but for the last six years there has been an excess of exports over imports of merchandise amounting to $1,180,668,105—an annual average of $196,778,017. The specie value of the exports of domestic merchandise has increased from $376,616,473 in 1870, to $883,925,947 in 1881, an increase of $507,309,474, or 135 per cent. The imports of merchandise have increased from $435,958,408 in 1870, to $642,664,628 in 1881, an increase of $206,706,220, or 47 per cent.

During each year from 1862 to 1879, inclusive, the exports of specie exceeded the imports thereof. The largest excess of such exports over imports was reached during the year 1864, when it amounted to $92,280,929. But during the year ended June 30, 1880, the imports of coin and bullion exceeded the exports thereof by $75,891,391; and during the last fiscal year the excess of imports over exports was $91,168,650.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

From the various sources of taxation under the internal-revenue laws, the receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1881, were as follows:

From spirits . . . . .	$67,153,974 88
From Tobacco . . . . .	42,854,991 31
From fermented liquors . . . . .	13,700,241 21
From banks and bankers . . . . .	3,762,208 07
From adhesive stamps . . . . .	7,375,255 72
From penalties . . . . .	231,078 21
From collections not otherwise provided for . . . . .	152,162 90

[On the 19th and 20th of January and the 10th and 11th of February two ballots were taken on each day. On every other business day but one was taken. An election was made February 23. Messrs. Oliver and Grow withdrew after the 21st ballot.]

About the middle of February a Committee of Conference, composed of twenty-four persons, of whom twelve were named by each caucus of the two diverse interests, was appointed for the purpose, if possible, of agreeing upon a candidate upon whom all Republicans could unite. They met on February 17 and succeeding days, and had many ballots and much discussion. Finally, on the night of the 22d of February, the Committee unanimously adopted Mr. Mitchell, R., who was nominated at a full caucus the next morning, and elected in convention on that day.

Ohio.

1881, January 18—Hon. John Sherman was chosen for six years from March 3, 1881, to succeed Hon. Allen G. Thurman, D. [This is the term for which President Garfield was chosen, and which he declined January 5th, 1881.] The vote was:

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

At the Extra Session of the Senate, called in October, by President Arthur, Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware, was, on the first day, elected President, he receiving the vote of all the Democrats present, prior to the swearing in of the two new Senators from New York, Messrs. Lapham and Miller, who were elected to fill the vacancies occasioned by the resignation of Messrs. Conkling and Platt. Mr. Bayard had two majority, Mr. Davis, the only Independent in the body, not voting. On the following day the New York Senators were sworn in. A Republican caucus quickly followed, and it was there resolved to present the name of David Davis, Independent. This was done in open Senate, and he was elected by one majority, neither he nor Mr. Bayard voting for themselves. The majority of the Committees being Republican, were left unchanged, and by agreement possibly and certainly, because of a declaration by Mr. Davis, who opposed a change of the minor offices, they remained in the hands of the Democrats, both at the Extra Session, and in the regular one, beginning with December 3, 1881.

CIVIL OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The following table is made up from the official statements of the heads of the various Departments of the Government, sent to Congress in August, 1876, in response to a Senate resolution, showing the number of civil officers employed by each Department from 1859 to 1875.

Department of State .....	1850.	1875.
Treasury Department.....	367	430
War Department.....	3,778	12,482
Navy Department.....	339	1,489
Post Office Department.....	90	131
Interior Department.....	30,817	41,897
Department of Justice.....	1,081	2,475
	5	523
	36,307	62,427

NOTE.—It is to be understood that the above includes all officers and employees of the Government at Washington and throughout the country, except those in the military and naval service. The number has since been somewhat decreased by a reduction of revenue officers—the precise figures not being officially reported.

* Resigned.

† Presided one term of the court; appointment not confirmed by the Senate.

‡ The Supreme Court, at its first session in 1790, consisted of a Chief Justice and five Associates. The number of Associate Justices was increased to six in 1807 by the appointment of Thomas Todd; increased to eight in 1837 by the appointments of John Catron and John McKinley; increased to nine in 1863 by the appointment of Stephen J. Field; decreased to eight on the death of John Catron in 1865; decreased to seven on the death of James M. Wayne in 1867; and again increased to eight in 1870, with a view to get the legal tender decision—a policy for such precedents are found in the governments of England and France.

JUDICIARY SUPREME COURT.—E. H. English, Chief Justice, 8 years from Oct. 1880. W. M. Harrison, 8 years from Oct. 1874, John R. Eakin, 8 years from Oct. 1878. Associate Justices. Elected by the people. Salary, $3,500 each. Clerk, Luke E. Barber.
 Amount of State Debt, Oct. 1, 1880: Funded, $2,813,500; unfunded, $2,232,905, (being amount of interest due on foregoing bonded debt); total, $5,046,405.
 The above is exclusive of $1,986,773 Levee Bonds, $5,350,000 Railroad Aid Bonds, and of $3,694,644 other disputed debt. The Supreme Court of Arkansas in 1878 decided that all the Levee bonds are unconstitutional and invalid. All of the Railroad Aid bonds have been declared by the Supreme Court to have been illegally issued. Amendment to the State Constitution, virtually repudiating a large part of the State debt, was defeated at the election of Nov. 2, 1880, by vote of 64,497 in its favor, to 41,049 against it. As it required a full majority of all the votes cast at an election to amend the Constitution, and there were 132,985 votes cast, it lacked 3,991 votes of a majority.

Salary, Chief Justice and Chancellor, $2,500 each; Associate Justices, $2,000. Clerk, John D. Burton.
Amount of State Debt, July 1st, 1881, $715,000, all funded.

The State holds interest-paying securities (railroad, etc.) to the amount of $1,120,799, and is virtually out of debt. The annual receipts were about $155,000, and the annual expenditures $105,000. Of the tax receipts, no less than $49,590 was from licenses, $33,812 from tax on railroads and passengers, and only $30,956 from taxes on real and personal property, in the whole State. Delaware is the least taxed community in the Union, so far as the expenses of State government are concerned. Local taxes are also low.

JUDICIARY, SUPREME COURT.—Chief Justice, Pinkney H. Walker; Associate Justices, Alfred M. Craig, John Scholfield, T. Lyle Dickcy, John M. Scott, John H. Mulkey, Benjamin R. Sheldon. Term 9 years each; elected by the people; salary, $5,000 each.

Illinois has no State debt.
State expenditures for two years, $6,365,344.73. Amount raised by taxation, $2,140,000.

Amount of taxable property as assessed—real, $623,979,369; personal, $175,534,197; total, $799,513,566. Rate of State tax, 48 cents on $100.

The State taxation forms but a small part of the aggregate amount raised by tax. The county taxes were about $6,000,000; city taxes, $7,000,000, and town and district taxes, $11,500,000.

The State constitution now prohibits cities or counties from subscribing to railroad or other corporations, and limits municipal debts to 5 per cent. on aggregate taxable property.

JUDICIARY, SUPREME COURT.—Chief-Just., R. S. Gould, Associate Justices, J. W. Stayton, M. H. Bonner; term, 4 years; elected by the people; salary, $3,500 each. Amount of State Debt September 1, 1881, $4,491,100, in State bonds, bearing 6 and 7 per cent. interest, except loan of April 21, 1874, which draws 10 per cent. interest.

State Receipts for year 1881, $1,962,911. State Expenditures for year, $1,769,879. Amount raised by Taxation, $1,396,470. Amount of Taxable Property as assessed: Real and personal, $303,202,424. Rate of State Tax, 5 mills on each dollar.

In addition to the tax of one-half of one per cent. on property, there was levied a poll tax of $2 on every male between 21 and 60 years, one-half of which, together with the fourth of the ad valorem tax, is expended for school purposes.

The State has further laid the foundation for an ample school fund, by devoting to that object all the alternate sections of land reserved out of its heavy railroad grants, and also one-half the public domain of the State, with all money that may come to the State from the sale of such moiety.

The public domain of Texas (which alone of all the States retained control and ownership of its public lands upon admission into the Union), still embraces more than 67,000,000 acres, or a territory larger than the entire surface of any State in the Union, except California and Nevada. The annual immigration into Texas is reckoned at 250,000.

West Virginia has no debt (unless the share of that State in the ante-bellum State debt of Virginia is reckoned such), the State Constitution having prohibited the creation of any debt by the Legislature, except in an emergency, like rebellion or invasion. After the admission of the State, in 1863, Virginia claimed that one-third of her State debt of $45,000,000 should be paid by West Virginia, and left out $15,239,371 in the adjustment of her debt. West Virginia claims that a very much smaller sum is her share, and the matter remains unadjusted.

State receipts, about $700,000.

State expenditures, $570,000.

Amount of Taxable Property, as assessed—real, $95,079,808; personal, $33,480,119. Total, $128,559,927. Rate of State Tax, 30 cents on each $100.

<sup>2</sup> In Ohio and a few other States, where the Legislative sessions are biennial, the Legislature holds "Adjourned Sessions," practically amounting to annual meetings.

<sup>3</sup> The Rhode Island Legislature is required to meet annually the last Tuesday in May, at Newport, and an adjourned session to be holden annually in Providence.

<sup>4</sup> Wisconsin has changed the sessions of the Legislature from annual to biennial, to commence after the session of 1882.

By Act of Congress, March 1, 1792, amended in 1845, a uniform day of election for Electors of President and Vice-President is fixed for all the States—being the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, every fourth year after a President has been elected.

*Ainsworth R. Spofford in American Almanac for 1872.

1 The State of Maryland held $1,235,713 in interest-paying securities of corporations, besides $24,360,682 in unproductive securities.

2 Massachusetts held $13,050,192 in sinking fund, January 1, 1881.

3 Mississippi's debt was due the school fund to the amount of $1,818,145, on which interest only is payable, leaving net debt, less cash in treasury, $386,253.

4 New York held in sinking fund, October 1, 1881, $2,054,480.

5 Pennsylvania held, December 1, 1880, $845,705 in sinking fund; in stocks of incorporated companies, interest-paying, $7,300,000; net debt, $14,297,003.

6 California holds in trust for her own school and university funds, $2,700,000 of her bonded debt, on which interest only is payable, reducing the net debt to $606,500.

7 Delaware has no State tax on property, and therefore no State valuation of taxable property.

The next distributes the total number of periodicals among the States and Territories according to their character and frequency of publication. It will be observed that column six giving the number of publications devoted to news, politics and family reading (8,816), contains the actual number of Newspapers published in the census year. The remainder of the publications (2,587) are more properly described as periodicals, although a very large proportion of them discharge the functions of a newspaper;

A census table shows the number of inhabitants to each daily paper published in twenty-six principal cities of the United States. The average number of inhabitants to each daily paper printed in these twenty-six cities, taken together, was 4,067; and accepting this average for any city of 50,000, the aggregate circulation of all its daily papers would be but 12,310. The fact that seventeen of these cities show a larger ratio of circulation to population is simply evidence that these seventeen have superior facilities over the other nine for outside circulation, and the ratio is increased accordingly. Washington, which is an isolated city, averages one copy printed daily for every 4.27 inhabitants, which is an extraordinary average for a city thus situated, and with so large a colored population. The following table shows the eleven cities which stood first in the ratio of circulation to population:

CITIES.	No. of Daily Papers.	Circulation of Daily Papers.	Population.	No. of Inhabitants to each Copy Issued.
Pittsburgh.....	11	111,001	156,381	1.41
New York.....	29	765,743	1,206,590	1.57
San Francisco.....	22	143,232	233,956	1.63
Boston.....	11	221,315	362,535	1.64
Springfield.....	3	18,464	33,340	1.81
St. Paul.....	6	19,893	41,498	2.09
Indianapolis.....	4	35,587	75,074	2.11
Cincinnati.....	11	117,549	255,708	2.18
Chicago.....	18	220,577	503,304	2.28
Philadelphia.....	24	363,286	846,984	2.33
Baltimore.....	9	128,643	332,190	2.58
At the bottom of the twenty-six cities are:
Charleston.....	2	6,300	49,999	7.94
Brooklyn.....	4	48,537	566,980	11.77

Nevertheless, it is certain that there is no city in the Union whose people are greater newspaper readers than those of Brooklyn. The above simply shows that the majority of the papers read there were published in New York city.

UNITED STATES POSTAL REGULATIONS.

[AS REVISED UNDER ACT OF MARCH 3, 1879.]

First Class Mail Matter.

LETTERS.—This class includes letters, postal cards, and any thing sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, or any thing containing writing not allowed as an accompaniment to printed matter, under class three.

Postage, 3 cents each half ounce or fraction thereof.

On local or drop letters, at free delivery offices, 2 cents. At offices where no free delivery by carrier, 1 cent.

Prepayment by stamps invariably required.

Postal cards, 1 cent.

Registered letters, 10 cents in addition to the proper postage.

The Post-Office Department or its revenue is not by law liable for the loss of any registered mail matter.

Second Class.

REGULAR PUBLICATIONS.—This class includes all newspapers, periodicals, or matter exclusively in print and regularly issued at stated intervals as frequently as four times a year, from a known office of publication or news agency. Postage, 2 cents a pound or fraction thereof, prepaid by special stamps. Publications designed primarily for advertising or free circulation, or not having a legitimate list of subscribers, are excluded from the pound rate, and pay third class rates.

Third Class.

Mail matter of the third class includes books, transient newspapers and periodicals, circulars, and other matter wholly in print, legal and commercial papers filled out in writing, proof-sheets, corrected proof-sheets, and manuscript copy accompanying the same.

MS. unaccompanied by proof-sheets, letter rates.

Limit of weight, 4 pounds each package, except single books—weight not limited.

Postage, 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fractional part thereof, invariably prepaid by stamps.

Fourth Class.

Embraces merchandise and all matter not included in the first, second or third class, which is not liable to injure the mail matter. Limit of weight, four pounds.

Postage, 1 cent each ounce or fraction thereof, prepaid.

All packages of matter of the third or fourth class must be so wrapped or enveloped that their contents may be examined by postmasters without destroying the wrappers.

Matter of the second, third, or fourth class containing any writing, except as here specified, or except bills and receipts for periodicals, or printed commercial papers filled out in writing, as deeds, bills, etc., will be charged with letter postage; but the sender of any book may write names or addresses therein, or on the outside, with the word "from" preceding the same, or may write briefly on any package the number and names of the articles enclosed.

Postal Money Orders.

An order may be issued for any amount, from one cent to fifty dollars, inclusive, but fractional parts of a cent cannot be included.

The fees for orders are:—

On orders not exceeding $15.....	10 cents.
“ “ over $15 & not exceeding $30..	15 “
“ “ over $30 “ “	$40.. 20 “
“ “ over $40 “ “	$50.. 25 “

When a larger sum than fifty dollars is required, additional orders must be obtained; but no more than three orders will be issued in one day from the same post-office to the same remitter in favor of the same payee.

Free Delivery.

The free delivery of mail matter at the residences of the people desiring it is required by law in every city of 50,000 or more population, and may be established at every place containing not less than 20,000 inhabitants. The present number of free delivery offices is ninety.

The franking privilege was abolished July 1, 1873, but the following mail matter may be sent free by legislative saving clauses, viz.:

1. All public documents printed by order of Congress, the Congressional Record and speeches contained therein, franked by members of Congress or the Secretary of the Senate, or Clerk of the House.
2. Seeds transmitted by the Commissioner of Agriculture, or by any member of Congress, procured from that department.
3. All periodicals sent to subscribers within the county where printed.
4. Letters and packages relating exclusively to the business of the Government of the United States, mailed only by officers of the same, publications required to be mailed to the Librarian of Congress by the copyright law, and letters and parcels mailed by the Smithsonian Institution. All these must be covered by specially printed "penalty" envelopes or labels.

All communications to Government officers, and to or from members of Congress, are required to be prepaid by stamps.

RATES OF FOREIGN POSTAGE.

From the United States Official Postal Guide.

The Standard Single Rate is ½ Ounce Avoirdupois.
