I. DEFINITION AND GENERAL NATURE.

A. Definition. The term assignment, as ordinarily used, signifies the transfer, between living parties,[1] of all kinds of property, real, personal, and mixed, whether in possession or action,[2] and whether made by delivery, indorsement,

1. Between living persons.— Assignments cannot, properly, be said to be made by a dead man. Hight v. Sackett, 34 N. Y. 447, 451 [citing Tomlin L. Dict.].

2. It is most frequently used in referring to a class of acts by which the right or title to something of value is transferred to another before the object of the transfer has be-transfer in writing, or by parol,[3] and includes as well the instrument by which the transfer is made as the transfer itself.[4] The common-law definition of an assignment is the transferring and setting over to another of some right, title, and interest in things in which a third party, not a party to the assignment, has a concern and interest;[5] and, in a more technical sense, it is applied to a transfer of a term of years.[6]

B. At Common Law. By the rules of the common law, property not in possession was incapable of transfer, and, therefore, choses in action were not assignable.[7] come property in possession. Cross v. Sacramento Sav. Bank, 66 Cal. 462, 6 Pac. 94.

As to subject-matter of assignments see infra, II. Compare also infra, I, B, C, D.

3. It is more comprehensive than the terms "indorse," "negotiate," or like words, applied to commercial paper. Bump v. Van Orsdale, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 634; Hicks v. Wirth, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 555.

As to mode and sufficiency of assignments see infra, III.

4. Includes instrument of transfer.— Anderson L. Dict.; Bouvier L. Dict.; and the following cases:

Arkansas.— Edison v. Frazier, 9 Ark. 219.

Illinois.— Ball v. Chadwick, 46 Ill. 28.

Iowa.— Schee v. La Grange, 78 Iowa 101, 42 N. W. 616.

United States.— Philadelphia Seventh Nat. Bank v. Shenandoah Iron Co., 35 Fed. 436.

Compare Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Nebr. 79, wherein it was held that the words "assignment" and "transfer" were inapt to describe a deed of conveyance of the fee simple, under 2 U. S. Stat. at L. p. 456, § 12.

Appointment and setting over right to another.— Garretsie v. Van Ness, 2 N. J. L. 17, 2 Am. Dec. 333.

Corporate rights stand on same footing, as to their assignability, with rights of individuals. Grocers' Nat. Bank v. Clark, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 26. See also Turk v. Cook, 63 Ga. 681; Holmes v. Evans, 129 N. Y. 140, 29 N. E. 233, 41 N. Y. St. 365; Griffey v. New York Cent. Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 417, 3 N. E. 309, 53 Am. Rep. 202; Thacker v. Henderson, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 271; Harlowe v. Hudgins, 84 Tex. 107, 19 S. W. 364, 31 Am. St. Rep. 21; Griffith v. Burlingame, 18 Wash. 429, 51 Pac. 1059; Glasford v. Baker, 1 Wash. Terr. 224.

Includes all personal chattels not in possession. Colonial Bank v. Whinney, 11 App. Cas. 426, 56 L. J. Ch. 43, 55 L. T. Rep. N. S. 362, 3 Morrill 207, 34 Wkly. Rep. 705.

When applied to written instruments implies written assignments, unless otherwise qualified. Enloe v. Reike, 56 Ala. 500; Hardie v. Mills, 20 Ark. 153; Andrews v. Brown, 1 Iowa 154. But see Hutchings v. Low, 13 N. J. L. 246.

As to necessity of written assignment see infra, III, C, 3, b.

5. Cowles v. Rickets, 1 Iowa 582; Brown v. Crookston, etc., Assoc., 34 Minn. 545, 26 N. W. 907 [citing Bouvier L. Dict.]. See also infra, I, B.

6. Ball v. Chadwick, 46 Ill. 28; 2 Bl. Comm. 326.

Distinguished from "lease."—An assignment is, properly, a transfer or making over to another of the right one has in any estate; and it differs from a lease only in this: that by a lease one grants an interest less than his own, reserving to himself a reversion; in assignments he parts with the whole property. Passaic, etc., Bridge Proprietors v. State, 21 N. J. L. 384 [citing 2 Bl. Comm. 317, 326]. But compare Potts v. Trenton Water Power Co., 9 N. J. Eq. 592, as to the effect of an assignment of a lease itself. See also LANDLORD AND TENANT.

7. 2 Bl. Comm. 291; and the following cases:

Alabama.— McNutt v. King, 59 Ala. 597; Johnson v. Martin, 54 Ala. 271.

Connecticut.— Brush v. Curtis, 4 Conn. 312.

Delaware.—Porter v. Morris, 2 Harr. (Del.) 509.

Illinois.— Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Maher, 91 Ill. 312; Hale v. Andrews, 75 Ill. 252; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 66 Ill. 190; Safford v. Miller, 59 Ill. 205; McKinney v. Alvis, 14 Ill. 33.

Indiana.— Moore v. Ireland, 1 Ind. 531.

Iowa.— The doctrine of the common law — that choses in action are not assignable — does not obtain in Iowa. Watson v. Hunkins, 13 Iowa 547.

Kentucky.— Trimble v. Ford, 5 Dana (Ky.) 517; Jarman v. Howard, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 383.

Maryland.— Tradesmen's Nat. Bank v. Green, 57 Md. 602.

Massachusetts.— Coulter v. Haynes, 146 Mass. 458, 16 N. E. 19; Moore v. Spiegel, 143 Mass. 413, 9 N. E. 827; Tucker v. Tucker, 119 Mass. 79; Connor v. Parker, 114 Mass. 331; Foss v. Lowell Five Cents Sav. Bank, 111 Mass. 285; Moore v. Coughlin, 4 Allen (Mass.) 335; Foss v. Nutting, 14 Gray (Mass.) 484; Sigourney v. Severy, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 176; Hodges v. Holland, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 43; Armsby v. Farnam, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 318; Coolidge v. Ruggles, 15 Mass. 387; Skinner v. Somes, 14 Mass. 107; Cutts v. Perkins, 12 Mass. 206; Orr v. Amory, 11 Mass. 25.

Minnesota.— Spencer v. Woodbury, 1 Minn. 105.

New Hampshire.—Edson v. Fuller, 22 N. H. 183.

New Jersey.— Morrow v. Vernon Tp., 35 N. J. L .490; Sergeant v. Stryker, 16 N. J. L.

To this common-law rule, however, there were recognized several well-established exceptions.[8]

C. In Equity. While the transfer of mere litigious rights is not recognized by courts of equity any more than by courts of law, equity has always recognized assignments of choses in action, possibilities, expectancies, things not in esse, and mere contingencies, if made for a valuable consideration, and looked upon the assigneee as the true owner of the chose.[9]

464, 32 Am. Dec. 404; Garrison v. Sandford, 12 N. J. L. 261; Lacey v. Collins, 5 N. J. L. 575; Reed v. Bainbridge, 4 N. J. L. 406; Smock v. Taylor, 1 N. J. L. 206.

New York.— Mann v. Herkimer County Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Hill (N. Y.) 187; Jessel v. Williamsburgh Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 88; Demarest v. Willard, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 206; Greenby v. Wilcocks, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 1, 3 Am. Dec. 379.

South Carolina.— Sims v. Radcliffe, 3 Rich. (S. C.) 287; Ware v. Key, 2 McCord (S. C.) 373.

Texas.— The doctrine of the common law — that choses in action are not assignable — is said not to prevail in Texas. Winn v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co., 12 Tex. Civ. App. 198, 33 S. W. 593.

Vermont.— Read v. Young, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 244.

West Virginia.— Hogue v. Bierne, 4 W. Va. 658.

Canada.— Eakins v. Gawley, 33 U. C. Q. B. 178; Sterling v. McEwan, 18 U. C. Q. B. 466.

As to the subject-matter of assignments see infra, II.

The reason for this rule is stated to have been that, otherwise, pretended titles might be granted to great men, whereby justice might be trodden down and the weak oppressed. 2 Bl. Comm. 290.

Extent of the common-law rule.— The rule was so strictly construed as to apply to the assignment of choses in action, although the original promise was expressed to be made with the promisee and his assigns (Jessel v. Williamsburgh Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 88; Crouch v. Credit Foncier, L. R. 8 Q. B. 374, 42 L. J. Q. B. 183, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259, 21 Wkly. Rep. 946), and so as not to permit any one but the original obligee of a bond to enforce liability thereon against the maker, although the bond was made payable to bearer (Crouch v. Credit Foncier, L. R. 8 Q. B. 374, 42 L. J. Q. B. 183, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259, 21 Wkly. Rep. 946; and see infra, VIII, A), the rule being so far relaxed, however, as to permit the maker to discharge his liability by payment to the bearer (Crouch v. Credit Foncier, L. R. 8 Q. B. 374, 42 L. J. Q. B. 183, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259, 21 Wkly. Rep. 946).

8. As to subject-matter of assignments, generally, see infra, II.

Assignments of annuities were permitted. See ANNUITIES, II, B [2 Cyc. 460]; and Davis v. Marlborough, 1 Swanst. 74.

Bills of exchange, including checks, were recognized by the courts as negotiable, by the general custom of merchants; but promissory notes were not included in the exception. Blanckenhagen v. Blundell, 2 B. & Ald. 417; Kenne v. Beard, 8 C. B. N. S. 372, 6 Jur. N. S. 1248, 29 L. J. C. P. 287, 2 L. T. Rep. N. S. 240, 8 Wkly. Rep. 469, 98 E. C. L. 372; Clerke v. Martin, 2 Ld. Raym. 757; Brown v. Harraden, 4 T. R. 148. See also, generally, BILLS AND NOTES.

Assignments made by and to the king were recognized. Lambert v. Taylor, 4 B. & C. 138, 6 D. & R. 188, 3 L. J. K. B. O. S. 160, 10 E. C. L. 515.

Assignments to or by the United States, or any state, were recognized. U. S. v. Buford, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 12, 7 L. ed. 585; U. S. v. White, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 59, 37 Am. Dec. 374.

The rule was held to have no application to foreign contracts which, if assignable where made, were recognized as assignable, so as to pass the right to sue in the courts of England. Goodwin v. Robarts, 1 App. Cas. 476, 45 L. J. Exch. 748, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 179, 24 Wkly. Rep. 987; Gorgier v. Mieville, 3 B. & C. 45, 2 L. J. K. B. O. S. 206, 27 Rev. Rep. 290, 10 E. C. D. Under Statutes. In England statutes have been passed, from time to time, affecting the assignability of various choses in action.[10] In most of the states of the Union, the doctrine that choses in action are not assignable at law has been greatly modified by statute.[11] In quite a number of the states these Assignee must show some obstacle to proceeding at law. Ross v. Munro, 6 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 431. See also infra, VIII, A, 2.

The validity of these assignments in equity was recognized by the common-law courts for many purposes. Thus, the assignment of a chose in action was considered as a sufficient consideration to support a promise upon which an action at law could be based.

Illinois.— Carlyle v. Carlyle Water, etc., Co., 140 Ill. 445, 29 N. E. 556.

Replevin bonds.— 2 Geo. II, c. 19.

Transferable debentures.— McKean v. Jones, 19 Can. Supreme Ct. 489; Wellington County Municipal Council v. Wilmot Tp. Municipality, 17 U. C. Q. B. 82; 36 & 37 Vict. c. 35.

The Common-Law Procedure Act was passed in 1884, which permitted pleadings on equitable grounds. By this act, assignments of debts might be pleaded in answer to legal rights, and courts of law protected assignees by not permitting collusive releases or payments to the assignor to be pleaded. Legh v. Legh, 1 B. & P. 447.

The Judicature Act made a radical change in England. It provided that any absolute assignment by writing, under the hand of the assignor (not purporting to be by way of charge only), of any debt or other legal chose in action, of which express notice in writing shall have been given to the debtor, trustee, or other person from whom the assignor would have been entitled to receive or claim such debt or chose in action, shall be, and shall be deemed to have been, effectual in law (subject to all equities which would have been entitled to priority over the rights of the assignee if this act had not been passed) to pass or transfer the legal right to such debt or chose in action from the date of such notice, and all legal and other remedies for the same, without the concurrence of the debtor; provided, always, that if the debtor, trustee, or other person liable in respect of such debt or chose in action shall have had notice that such assignment is disputed by the assignor, or any one claiming under him, or of any other opposing or conflicting claim to such debt or chose in action, he shall be entitled, if he thinks fit to call upon the several persons making claim thereto, to interplead concerning the same; or he may, if he think fit, pay the same into the high court of justice, under and in conformity with the provisions of the acts for the relief of trustees. 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, § 25, subd. 6; Exchange Bank v. Stinson, 32 U. C. C. P. 158; Wellington v. Chard, 22 U. C. C. P. 518; Blair v. Ellis, 34 U. C. Q. B. 466. Applies to cause accruing before the passing of the statute. Wallace v. Gilchrist, 24 U. C. C. P. 40. Not applicable where deed of assignment shows assignee was not to have right to sue. Hostrawser v. Robinson, 23 U. C. C. P. 350. Where assignment is absolute in form, action should be brought in name of assignee, although assignor reserved right to part of money to be collected. Ward v. Hughes, 8 Ont. 138. Compare also, generally, infra, VIII, A, B. As to what is sufficient notice to debtor see Grant v. Cameron, 18 Can. Supreme Ct. 716.

11. Alabama.— Brown v. Chambers, 12 Ala. 697 (all contracts in writing for the payment of money or property, or performance of any duty of whatever nature); Withers v. Greene, statutes which modify the common-law rule as to the assignability of choses in 9 How. (U. S.) 213, 13 L. ed. 109 (sealed instrument for payment of money, construing Alabama statute). But a mere request or authority in writing to an attorney to pay money out of a particular fund which he has collected (Waters v. Carleton, 4 Port. (Ala.) 205), or a written instrument directing certain attorneys to pay to one an amount certain and interest, "the demand I have against the estate of David Yarbrough, deceased" (West v. Foreman, 21 Ala. 400, 402), is not within the statute authorizing the assignee to sue upon the instrument in his own name.

Arkansas.— St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Camden Bank, 47 Ark. 541, 1 S. W. 704 (certificate of indebtedness of a railroad company, properly executed); Lafferty v. Rutherford, 5 Ark. 649 (bonds, bills, notes, agreements, or contracts in writing for the payment of money or property); Small v. Strong, 2 Ark. 198; Gamblin v. Walker, 1 Ark. 220 (bonds, bills, notes, agreements, or contracts in writing for the payment of money or property). But memoranda of accounts given by foremen to laborers, not to be paid, but merely intended for the information of superior officers on which to audit accounts of the laborers, are not written instruments which may be assigned. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Camden Bank, 47 Ark. 541, 1 S. W. 704. See also Gwinn v. Roberts, 3 Ark. 72, holding that an order for a certain amount in merchandise is not assignable.

California.— La Rue v. Groezinger, 84 Cal. 281, 24 Pac. 42, 18 Am. St. Rep. 179 (a right arising out of an obligation); Gray v. Garrison, 9 Cal. 325 (a promise by deed to pay A a sum certain in consideration of A's withdrawing his defense to a suit); Ryan v. Maddux, 6 Cal. 247 (contracts for the payment of money or personal property).

Colorado.— The acknowledgment, on the part of an employer, that wages are due and will be paid the next regular pay-day is assignable. Rio Grande Extension Co. v. Coby, 7 Colo. 299, 3 Pac. 481.

Connecticut.— Hoyt v. Ketcham, 54 Conn. 60, 5 Atl. 606; Bixby v. Parsons, 49 Conn. 483, 44 Am. Rep. 246.

West Virginia.—An assignee of a note or draft does not acquire the legal title to a debt, but an equitable right, which, by virtue of the statute, he may assert at law in his own name, or in that of the original payee, for his equity are equally valid at law, so as to permit the assignee thereof to sue thereon in his own name.[12]

II. SUBJECT-MATTER.[13]

A. In General. To make an assignment valid at law, the thing which is the subject of it must have an existence, actual or potential, at the time of such assignment; but courts of equity will support assignments of contingent interests and expectations, and of things which rest in mere possibility only. An assignment of a future interest, though in the form of a conveyance, operates, in equity, by way of present contract merely, to take effect and attach to the thing assigned as soon as it comes into esse, and to be regarded before that time only as an agreement to convey, and after that time as a conveyance.[14] But a mere possibility or assigned;[16] but, if the assignee has an interest in the thing assigned independent of the assignor, and a fraudulent act lies in the way of the attainment of the assignee's independent right, he may acquire the assignor's right to sue to remove the obstacle, and a court of equity will entertain the suit.[17]

B. Particular Rights and Interests—1. Real Estate. Any estate or interest in lands may be assigned;[18] and this is so whether the estate be legal or equitable,[19] vested or contingent.[20] Mere personal licenses to use land are, however, not assignable.[21] But grants, or reservations in deeds, of the right of entering the land and taking therefrom the products of the soil, or the mineral underlying it, confer not merely personal licenses, but such interests in the land as are capable of assignment.[22]

2. Possibilities and Expectancies. Whether the mere naked possibility or expectancy of an heir apparent or heir presumptive can be made the subject of assignment or release has been the subject of controversy; but it is now settled law that such assignment or releases, if made bona fide and for an adequate consideration, will be enforced in equity after the death of the ancestor.[23] The gen-

b. In Anticipation of Future Contract. But, in order that there may be an assignment of future earnings, it is essential that the expectation of such earnings shall be based upon an existing contract of employment; as without such contract there cannot be any valid assignment, either in law or equity, of wages and salary to be earned in future, for the reason that, under such circumstances, future earnings constitute a mere possibility not coupled with an interest.[31]

The reason for this rule has been well stated: "It is easy to see how great abuses would follow if such transfers were permitted. Not only would there exist a constant temptation to anticipate future earnings under the stress of present financial pressure, at usurious rates of discount, but when completed, one of the strongest incentives to industrious exertion — the expectation of pecuniary reward in the near future — would be gone." A. 97, wherein it was said: "There is no fundamental distinction in this respect between public and private trusts, where the statute fixes the compensation and prescribes that it shall not become due and payable until the services have been rendered, or at stated periods during the term of service. It is well settled that a public officer cannot, during his official term, and before his salary or fees become due and payable, make valid assignments of such salary, or fees. . . . The same considerations forbid the recognition of an assignment by an executor of his commissions in advance of the time prescribed by law for their adjustment and payment. When the hope of compensation is gone, a strong incentive to diligence and zeal is wanting, and the temptation to be content with a lax or perfunctory administration of the trust becomes more persuasive."

or unless there exists a prohibitory statute forbidding the assignment of such rights.[40]

(II) Public Contracts. The same rule is applicable to public contracts as to private contracts, except as modified by statute.[41]

b. Exceptions — (I) Contractual Rights Coupled With Liabilities. If the rights arising out of the contract are coupled with a liability thereunder, they cannot be assigned.[42]

(II) Contracts Involving Relations of Personal Confidence. Contracts involving the relation of personal confidence, and such that the party whose agreement conferred those rights must have intended them to be exercised only by him in whom he actually confided, are not transferable.[43]

40. Prohibited by statute.—Way v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 64 Iowa 48, 19 N. W. 828, 52 Am. Rep. 431; Roger Williams Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 43 Mich. 252, 5 N. W. 303.

41. There is nothing in the nature of contracts for public work that forbids their assignment by the contractor. Most laws governing the letting of public contracts provide that the work must be let to the lowest responsible bidder, and the personality of the bidder does not enter into the consideration, it being usually provided that the work shall be done according to a certain plan and subject to the approval of a designated officer.

(III) Contracts For Personal Services. Contracts for personal services are not assignable.[44]

8. Torts — a. In General. In distinguishing between rights, growing out of tortious acts, that are assignable and such as are not assignable, the test most generally applied is that if the right of action arising from the act is in its nature such that it will, upon the death of the party aggrieved, survive to his personal representatives, it is assignable, and that if it will not thus survive it is not assignable.[45] the conditions, but it is assignable in equity after that time. Perkins v. Hadsell, 50 Ill. 216.

Contracts for support and maintenance are not assignable. Thus, a contract for the maintenance of the poor of a county (Burger v. Rice, 3 Ind. 125), contract of son for support of his parents during their lifetime (Clinton v. Fly, 10 Me. 292), or a contract to support parents (Clinton v. Fly, 10 Me. 292; Rollins v. Riley, 44 N. held that, although a right of action for personal torts cannot be assigned, a verdict or judgment to be rendered for such a tort may be assigned.[49]

9. Statutory Rights. There is nothing peculiar to rights conferred upon one by statute that in itself forbids the assignment of such rights. As to such rights, it may be said that the assignability or non-assignability of them depends in each case upon the language of the statute conferring the rights. If the statute forbids the assignment of the right conferred by it, or if the legislative intent, as shown by the act, is to confer a right strictly personal to the person upon whom it is conferred, then such right is not assignable. In the absence of such express or implied prohibition, the assignability or non-assignability of rights conferred by statute is to be governed by the principles governing the assignability or non-assignability of choses in action in general. Statutory rights giving compensation for property loss suffered are, generally, said to be assignable, whereas rights to recover penalties and rights given by statute for the redress of personal wrongs are not assignable.[50]

10. Partial Assignments. Partial assignments of such choses in action as are assignable can be so made as to entitle the assignee to the rights of a co-owner against the assignor.[51] In England and under some of the decisions of the American courts an order given by a creditor to his debtor to pay a third party so much money out of a specific fund or debt is a valid assignment of so much of the fund or debt.[52] But the weight of authority in the United States seems to be that such

52. If the order is upon a valuable consideration, it cannot be revoked by the creditor, and binds the creditor's assignee in bankruptcy. As soon as the assignee gives notice to the debtor, it binds the funds in the hands of the debtor, and he cannot pay the debt to the former creditor without first satisfying the assignee. There is no need for any express acceptance of the order by the holder of the fund; he need not attorn to the assignee or enter into any contract to hold the fund for him in order to give validity to the assignment.

An assignment of a claim for fraud in the hands of a receiver is not made a partial assignment by reason of the fact that the receiver holds the fund subject to costs. Garniss v. San Francisco Super. Ct., 88 Cal. 413, 26 Pac. 351.

for many purposes, and will protect the assignees of such choses whenever they can do so without working a hardship upon the debtor.[54]

III. MODE AND SUFFICIENCY.

A. Parties to the Assignment. An assignment being a contract, there must, of course, be two parties — one, called the assignor, giving, and the other, called the assignee, taking, the assignment.[55]

B. Necessary Elements of Assignment — 1. ACCEPTANCE BY ASSIGNEE. It may be stated as a general proposition that, in order to render an assignment effective, it must be communicated to the assignee, and his acceptance or assent thereto be given.[56]

54. In equity the interests of all parties can be determined in a single suit. The debtor can bring the entire fund into court, and runs no risk of its improper distribution. If he is not at fault costs may be awarded in his favor.

Presumption and burden of proof.— Where an assignment is directly to a party having a beneficial interest under it, the presumption is that he accepts it, and affirmative proof of acceptance is not required; but the party impeaching it must disprove acceptance. 2. Delivery of Subject-Matter.[57] In order to complete an assignment there should be a delivery of the thing assigned.[58] In regard to personal property — that is, choses in possession — it has been held that while, as between the parties, delivery of actual possession thereof is not necessary to the passing of the property therein,[59] it may be necessary in order to bind creditors of, and bona fide purchasers from, the assignor.[60] But, where the actual possession is impossible of delivery, it is sufficient, even as against creditors and purchasers, if there is a symbolical delivery, or if the assignee takes actual possession within a reasonable time after it is possible for him so to do.[61]

3. Consideration[62] — a. Necessity of. Like other personal property, a chose in action may be the subject of a gift;[63] but, in order that the assignment may take

Ann. 689; White v. Kilgore, 77 Me. 571, 1 Atl. 739; Whittle v. Skinner, 23 Vt. 531), it need not be an actual delivery in order to pass the beneficial interest, but it may be constructive (McGee v. Riddlesbarger, 39 Mo. 365; Motz v. Stowe, 83 N. C. 434; Spring v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. effect as a gift as between the parties thereto, it must be fully executed.[64] Except in the case of gifts, a valuable consideration is, of course, necessary to support the assignment as between the assignor and the assignee,[65] and as between the assignee and creditors of the assignor.[66]

b. Sufficiency. As to what is a sufficient consideration to support an assignment, it may be said that the sufficiency of the consideration is to be governed by the rules applicable to other cases of contract.[67] The securing of a preëxisting debt furnishes a valuable consideration for an assignment.[68] Assignments under seal prima facie import a consideration.[69] But such presumption is not a strong one and is easily overcome by evidence to the contrary.[70]

c. Who May Question. As to the obligee in the chose, the rule is sometimes broadly stated to be that the subject of consideration, or want thereof, is not open to him, his obligation being to pay, and it being immaterial to him whether the party to whom he is compelled to pay gave value for the obligation or not, the only interest of the obligee being that he shall be required to pay his debt to but one person.[71] But the better doctrine seems to be to confine the rule to assign-

A judgment, rendered against the debtor of the assignor, upon garnishment at the instance of a creditor of the assignor, was set aside, before any part of the judgment had been paid, at the suit of an assignee, whose assignment antedated the garnishment but who had not given notice thereof. It was there said that a party making an absolute assignment of a chose in action parts with all his interest in the same, and a subsequent attaching creditor or assignee can acquire no interest therein; that if the debtor pays the assignor without notice of the assignment, debtor, it will not bind him so as to deprive him of equities arising between the date of the assignment and the date when he received notice thereof.[77] As to such equities, the assignment takes effect from the time the debtor receives notice and not from the time of the assignment.[78] After the debtor has received notice of the assignment the chose becomes fixed in his hands, within the limitations hereafter stated,[79] and he cannot discharge the liability by payment to any party other than the assignee, or in any way change the rights of the assignee as they stood at the time of the notice,[80] except that he may avail himself of a set-off against the assignor arising thereafter out of the same contract or transaction which gave rise to the debt assigned.[81]

b. By Whom and To Whom Given. The notice must be given by the assignee, or by his procurement,[82] to the debtor or the latter's duly authorized agent.[83] But, the latter will be held to have received the same as trustee for the assignee, and even a judgment obtained against the debtor as garnishee, before payment thereof, will not defeat the rights of the assignee — at least where the facts proved in the action to set aside the judgment disclose superior equities in the assignee. Where assignor places assignee in possession of evidence of indebtedness, a notice, by the assignor to the agent of the board of pub-in case of the death of the debtor, the notice of assignment may be given to his personal representatives.[84]

c. Form and Sufficiency. The notice need not be in any particular form.[85] It is not necessary to exhibit to the debtor either the original or a copy of a written assignment, notice that such assignment is claimed to exist being sufficient.[86] A notice must be sufficiently definite to enable the debtor to identify the subject-matter of the assignment.[87] It has been said that the notice must be direct and positive,[88] and that it is not sufficient that the debtor is notified of facts that would put a reasonable man on inquiry.[89] The legality of a notice is not affected by the fact that it is served on Sunday.[90] What constitutes a sufficient notice is, usually, a question of fact, but when it depends merely on the construction of writings it becomes a question of law.[91]

5. Consent and Acceptance of Debtor. To a valid transfer or assignment of a thing or chose in action of a kind assignable, no consent to or acceptance of the assignment by the debtor is required,[92] except, perhaps in partial assignments, as lic works, not to pay the money to the assignee, but to pay it to him, will not be sufficient, although in writing, to bind the public treasury to the payment to him of the money, the money having been paid out on the report of the agent of the government, although the request not to pay was among the papers delivered by the agent to his successor. 6. Promise of Debtor to Pay. Under the rules of the common law, no action could be brought against the debtor, by the assignee of a debt in his own name, unless there was a promise by the debtor to him to pay him the debt.[95] Since the assignment of a chose in action for a valuable consideration gives the assignee an equitable right to receive payment of the debt from the debtor, and imposes on the latter an obligation, in equity, to pay the debt to the assignee, this right and obligation constitute a sufficient consideration to support a promise of the debtor to pay the debt to the assignee, on which promise the latter can base an action in his own name at law;[96] and, where the debtor makes such a promise, it has been

3. Particular Modes — a. Under Statute. As heretofore stated,[8] in most of the states of the United States and also in England[9] statutes have been enacted authorizing the assignment of choses in action at law, so as to permit the assignee to sue in his own name on the right assigned. In some states statutes exist authorizing actions to be brought in the name of the real party in interest, under which the assignee of a chose in action is classed by the courts;[10] and, in some of the states, it has been held that an assignment sufficient in equity is equally effective in law.[11] In other states, assignments of choses in action are expressly authorized, and assignees authorized to sue thereon in their own names. In some states only assignments in writing are valid at law.[12] Where a statute provides a

An assignment of a claim for money due is not affected by a statute requiring assignments of goods and grants, or assignments of mode of assignment, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, such mode is cumulative and does not prevent other modes of assignment in equity.[13] Where the statutes authorize assignments of choses in action at law, when applied to written instruments, it has been held to mean written assignments.[14] To pass the title to written instruments delivery thereof is not sufficient — the assignment must be in writing in order to authorize suit on the instrument by the assignee in his own name.[15] This rule has been applied to accounts.[16] To constitute a valid written assignment at law, where the statute requires an assignment to be in writing, there must be an assignee who takes, and an assignor who gives, title at the time the assignment is made, and both must be named in the instrument;[17] but in equity, even though the name of the assignee be left blank, the instrument will be upheld as an equitable assignment.[18] And it may be stated, generally, that a written instrument, though it may be insufficient at law, by reason of non-compliance with statutory requirements, to accomplish its purpose, may yet be sufficient in equity to transfer the beneficial interest in the subject-matter of the assignment.[19]

b. In Writing — (i) Instrument Not Under Seal. It has been held that an assignment in writing of an instrument in writing might be made, either by indorsement of the assignment on the instrument assigned[20] or by a separate

20. In many states statutes authorize assignments by indorsement of written obligations for the payment of money or property, so as to authorize suit thereon at law in the name of the assignee.

Alabama.— Flexner v. Dickerson, 65 Ala. 72; Henley v. Bush, 33 Ala. 636. The statutes of Alabama authorize an assignee, by indorsement, of the right of performance of any instrument.[21] But, where the assignment is by a written instrument, simply signing or acknowledging the instrument will not be sufficient to transfer the property, but the instrument must be delivered to the assignee.[22] The mere indorsement of a transfer on an instrument, without proof of the delivery thereof, will not be sufficient to establish the assignment thereof.[23]

(II) SPECIALTIES. In regard to the assignment of instruments under seal it has been the rule, and still is in some of the states, that such instruments can only be assigned at law by an instrument of as high a nature — that is, by an instrument under seal[24] — but this rule no longer prevails in the states where sealed instruments may be assigned by writing, simply.[25] It is sometimes said that, if the assigned instrument is under seal, the assignment thereof must be under seals unless the instrument itself is delivered, in which case an oral assignment is said to be sufficient.[26] The general principle that a specialty must be assigned by instrument under seal has been held not to apply to equitable assignments.[27]

(III) Form of Written Assignment. Where the assignment is in writing no special form of words or language is required to be used, though the operative words of an assignment generally used are "sell, assign, and transfer," or "sell, assign, and set over."[28] It may be in the form of an order on the debtor or holder of the fund assigned to pay the debt or fund to another person.[29] Any language, however informal, if it shows the intention of the owner of the chose in action to transfer it, will be sufficient to vest the property therein in the assignee.[30] The subject-matter of the assignment should be described with such particularity as to identify it,[31] but no greater particularity is required than is actually necessary to do this, with the aid of the attendant and surrounding circumstances.[32]

c. By Parol. As heretofore seen, assignments may be made by parol, so as to vest the equitable title of the chose assigned in the assignee,[33] in the absence of express or implied statutory provision. To constitute such assignment, however, it must be shown that the owner surrendered all control over the chose and made an absolute appropriation of it to the use of the assignee.[34]

d. By Conduct of the Parties. An assignment may be inferred from the conduct of the parties,[35] but a court of equity will not imply an equitable assignment where it is legally incompetent for the parties to make an express contract.[36] There must, however, be an appropriation of the debt or fund, and the assignor must confer the complete right or interest in the subject-matter of the assignment on the assignee and surrender all control over it, even if the circumstances do not permit the assignee to take immediate possession thereof.[37]

f. By Deposit of Title-Deeds. In England, the deposit of the title-deeds to land as a security for a debt has been held, in equity, to be good as an equitable mortgage of the land.[39] This doctrine has been adopted in some of the states of the United States,[40] though, in others, the courts have held such a doctrine to be forbidden by the statute of frauds, and that it is inconsistent with the registry laws enacted in those states.[41]

g. Equitable Assignments[42]—(i) In General. In order to work an equitable assignment there must be an absolute appropriation by the assignor of the debt or fund sought to be assigned to the use of the assignee.[43] The intention of the assignor must be to transfer a present interest in the debt or fund.[44] And the assignor must surrender all control over the debt or fund.[45] Where the transac-

42. An equitable assignment may be defined to be such an assignment as gives the assignee a title which, although not cognizable at law, equity will protect. Such an assignment passes an immediate interest in the subject thereof, although it is not essential to the creation of the interest that it should be immediately enforceable by a suit to recover the interest assigned. Whether, in a given case, the transaction amounts to an equitable assignment depends to a great extent upon the intention. Holmes v. Evans, 129 N. Y. 140, 29 N. E. 233, 41 N. Y. The reason for this rule is that, the debt or fund being a matter not assignable at law or capable of manual possession, an appropriation of it is all that the nature of the case admits of, and, therefore, it is held good in a court of equity. As the assignee is, generally, entitled to all the remedies of the assignor, so he is subject to all the equities between the assignor and his debtor. But, in order to perfect his title against the debtor, it is indispensable that the assignee should immediately give notice to him of the assignment, for otherwise a priority of right may be obtained by subsequent assignees, or the debt may be discharged by payment to the assignor before such notice. ise.[51] Nor will a mere direction by a party to his agent to apply certain funds to the payment of a debt operate as an equitable assignment of such fund.[52] But, where an agreement is made between a debtor and his creditor that the debt of the latter should be paid out of a fund belonging to the debtor in the hands of a third party, and the agreement is communicated to such third party and is assented to by him, this will be effective, in equity, to transfer an interest in such fund to the extent of his debt to the creditor.[53]

or claim.[54] It has been held, however, in a number of cases, that where a client agrees that his attorney, who prosecutes his action, shall have a certain part of the recovery for his services in prosecuting the action, and the attorney performs the services and procures a judgment, he is to be regarded as an equitable assignee of part of the judgment obtained;[55] and this has been held where the action in which the judgment was obtained was on a cause of action for a tort in itself unassignable.[56]

(IV) Checks, Drafts, and Orders—(A) In General. A class of equitable assignments of considerable importance, and one which receives the attention of the courts constantly, is that of drafts, orders, and checks. As is often the case with subjects of great commercial importance where the interests of creditors enter, the law on this subject is by no means uniform. When an order by a creditor on a fund will operate as an assignment thereof, and between and against what parties it will so operate, are matters on which there is much contrariety of opinion among the courts of the different states and England. Several principles, however, meet with almost general approval. Among these is the one that an order or draft drawn on a debtor by his creditor, generally, and not on a particular fund, will not, before acceptance of the draft by the drawee, operate as an assignment of moneys due from the drawee to the drawer.[57] Similarly, checks

It was held, further, that the fact that the compensation was contingent did not alter the case; nor that, at the time when the agreement was entered into, the railroad company had paid the amount into court, to be paid to the person entitled to receive it, and that the parties dealt in ignorance of such payment. Compare Maceuen's Estate, 2 Wkly. Com. v. Cummins, 155 Pa. St. 30, 25 Atl. 996.

Where a payee of a note gave a third party an order for money on his attorney, to be paid out of proceeds of a note in the latter's hands for collection, and the order was ac-been held that such claims are subject to garnishment by the creditors of the drawer.[71]

(v) Powers of Attorney. A power of attorney given to one to collect or receive a debt or fund will, as between the parties thereto, operate as an equitable assignment of the debt or fund authorized to be collected or received, where such power is coupled with an interest in the subject-matter,[72] if made upon a valuable consideration, and where it is the intention of the parties that it should so operate.[73] But, if the power is not made upon a valuable consideration or is a mere naked authority, it will not operate as an equitable assignment.[74]

D. Assignments of Joint Rights of Action or Joint Debts. Where three are several holders of a chose in action or obligees of an instrument, in order to assign the chose in action or instrument at law all the holders or obligees must join in the assignment.[75] In equity, however, one of two or more owners of a cepted by the attorney "to be paid out of the first money collected on the note," and the payee afterward compromised the claim and instructed the attorney to cancel the note, it was held no equitable assignment pro tanto of the note, and that the attorney was not liable to the payee in the order. It was held to be an appropriation of the note and an equitable assignment thereof to the payee in the order which could not be revoked by the drawer, even if there had been no acceptance, and the note was not liable to garnishment for debt of the drawer. An order was shipped to a customer in Massachusetts and, before the account was collected by the agent, the customer was garnished for a debt of the manufacturer. It was held not to be a power coupled with an interest, and no equitable assignment of the debt to the merchant. Hall v. Jackson, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 194.

One joint obligee cannot, by his separate contract or chose in action may assign his share or interest therein,[76] and, in states where the real party in interest is authorized to sue, his assignee may join with the other owners in an action against the obligor or debtor.[77] As a creditor cannot split up his demand against a debtor, so he cannot assign a joint obligation of two debtors as against one merely.[78]

E. Reassignments. Where a written instrument has been assigned by written assignment placed thereon, and is redelivered and surrendered to the assignor, with an understanding that the assignment be considered void, this will operate as a reassignment;[79] or, where the instrument is in possession of the assignor, with the assignment canceled, the assignor may recover on it without formal proof of reassignment to him.[80]

F. Filing and Recording.[81] Except in regard to certain particular classes of choses in action — such as future earnings, which, by the statutes of several states, are required to be recorded with the clerk of the town where the assignor resides[82] — assignments of choses in action are not embraced by the registry acts, act, transfer the legal title even to his interest in an obligation to a stranger so as to authorize him to sue in his own name, or in conjunction with the other obligees.

82. In Maine, by statute, assignments of future wages are required to be in writing and filed in the office of the clerk of the city, town, or plantation where the assignor is commorant while earning such wages, in order to bind others than the immediate parties to the assignment. Gilman v. Inman, 85 Me. 105, 26 Atl. 1049; Pullen v. Monk, 82 Me. 412, 19 Atl. 909; Wright v. Smith, 74 Me. 495. This statute held not to apply to an unorganized town or plantation, and an assignment of future wages by an employee commorant in such unorganized town or plantation, in which there is no recording office, need not be recorded. Woods v. Ronco, 85 Me. 124, 26 Atl. 1056; Wade v. Bessey, 76 Me. 413. In Woods v. Ronco, 85 Me. 124, 26 Atl. 1056, it was held that the statute does not make the recording of such an assignment notice to the employer, but only to the creditors of the employee. The statute does not apply to assignments of wages wholly earned at the time of the assignment. Wright v. Smith, 74 Me. 495. See also Stinson v. Carwell, 71 Me. 510.

and such assignments are valid without filing and recording them.[83] And, where

An assignment of a contract to do certain work, and the earnings thereunder, need not be recorded under this statute. Augur v. Couture, 68 Me. 427.

In Massachusetts assignments of future earnings must be recorded in order to be valid against trustee process or attachment against the employee. Ouimet v. Sirois, 124 Mass. 162; Fuller v. Cunningham, 105 Mass. 442; Knowlton v. Cooley, 102 Mass. 233.

The term "earnings" is broader than the term "wages," and involves the idea of compensation for services rendered and is not limited to gains from merely personal services. Money due from an employer of labor to a third party for board and lodging furnished to his workmen is in the nature of compensation for services rendered to such employer, and the assignment thereof comes within the statute. Jenks v. Dyer, 102 Mass. 235. So, the compensation of one who agreed to furnish labor and materials for a house, to be paid for when the house is completed, is earnings, and its assignment must be recorded. Somers v. Keliher, 115 Mass. 165. Earnings do not cover rents under a lease if no service is to be performed by the lessor. Kendall v. Kingsley, 120 Mass. 94.

The assignment is sufficient if it identifies the fund and the assignor, though there is some obscurity as to the assignee. Ouimet v. Sirois, 124 Mass. 162. A workman's order to "pay to Hezekiah Cooley my wages as fast as they become due, to the amount of $150," accepted in writing by his employer, is not a bill of exchange but an assignment of wages, and must be recorded to be valid under the statute. Knowlton v. Cooley, 102 Mass. 233.

In New Hampshire assignments of future wages are invalid as against creditors of the laborer, unless made in writing, accepted by the employer, and filed in the town-clerk's office. Runnels v. Bosquet, 60 N. H. 38; Thompson v. Smith, 57 N. H. 306. In the latter case it was held that, even though the statute was complied with, if the assignment was not on a valuable consideration it was fraudulent as to creditors.

In Rhode Island assignments of future earnings are required to be in writing and recorded. The term "earnings" in connection with the use of the word "employed" and the context held to mean wages, and not to include the compensation of a contractor to build a house. Abbott v. Davidson, 18 R. I. 91, 25 Atl. 839. A hired B as a workman and, at the time of the hiring, made a verbal promise to C to be responsible for B's purchases of goods up to the amount of the wages to be due B. It was held that the promise of A was not an assignment of B's wages within the statute. Abbott v. Davidson, 18 R. I. 91, 25 Atl. 839. See also Lennon v. Parker, (R. I. 1900) 46 Atl. 44; Garland v. Linskey, (R. I. 1897) 36 Atl. 837; Browning v. Parker, 17 R. I. 183, 20 Atl. 835.

In Texas, under Tex. Rev. Stat. (1895), art. 4647, providing that, on sale of any cause of action, a written transfer thereof shall be recorded, which shall be notice to all parties, an agreement conveying to another one half of whatever sum may be realized out of and collected from a certain defendant in the suit then pending is a sufficient transfer of one half of the cause of action, within the statute. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Vaughan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 1065.

The recording of an assignment of future wages, as provided by statute, is not constructive notice of the assignment to the employer, but only to the creditors of the employee. Corbett v. Fitchburg R. Co., 110 Mass. 204.

The filing for record, in the county clerk's office, of assignments of interests in a contract by parties claiming thereunder does not make the subsequent record in that office of other assignments to other parties of interests in the same contract notice to the first assignees, when they take further subsequent assignments of interests in such contract, if there is no statute providing for such record or making it notice. the statute does not authorize the registry of assignments of choses in action, the filing and recording of them imparts no notice to any one.[84]

IV. VALIDITY.[85]

A. Duress, Fraud, Mistake, Etc.— 1. EFFECT OF. It may be said that fraud, undue influence, mental incapacity in the parties contracting, duress, or mistake, in connection with an assignment, vitiates it to the same extent as in the case of all other contracts.[86]

Compare Marshall v. Fields [cited in Allen v. Bain, 2 Head (Tenn.) 108].

Likewise, equitable assignments have been held not to be within the recording acts. Motz v. Stowe, 83 N. C. 434; Ocoee Bank v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 185; Robinson v. Williams, 3 Head (Tenn.) 540.

Where a title bond is recorded, an assignment thereof for a valuable consideration and bona fide need not be recorded to protect the assignee against creditors of the vendor. Mere reservation by the assignor of an interest in the thing assigned, after the satisfaction of a debt for which it was assigned, will not render the assignment fraudulent as to creditors. Nor does a stipulation that the assignee should complete the article assigned and prepare it for sale render the assignment fraudulent as to creditors. Smith v. Beattie, 31 N. Y. 542; Dunham v. Waterman, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 166.

Mental incapacity.— In Longsdale's Estate, 29 Pa. St. 407, an assignment of a chose in action, without valuable consideration and not delivered until after the assignor became insane, was set aside where it was made for the purpose of defrauding the assignor's wife of a portion of the estate of the assignor conferred on her by law. See also INSANE PERSONS.

Mistake.— Erwin v. U. S., 97 U. S. 392, 24 L. ed. 1065. Where an only heir of the decedent, upon being informed that a certain note constituting the greater part of the estate of his ancestor was without consideration and intended as a legacy to the ancestor by the maker, in case the latter died first, for a small consideration assigned all his interest in the estate of the ancestor to the maker of the note, and, administration being subsequently taken out on the estate of the ancestor and the maker of the note being incompetent to testify in an action on the note by the administrator, judgment was rendered against him on the note, it was held that the mistake of the assignor was one of law merely, that the assignment was not void for fraud, and that the assignee was entitled to the proceeds in the administrator's hands. Hughes' Estate, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 168.

Undue influence.— Leddel v. Starr, 20 N. J. Eq. 274; Colburn v. Van Velzer, 11 Fed. 795.

2. Right of Third Persons to Attack Assignment For. Where an assignment is voidable, at the option of the assignor and his creditors, and not absolutely void, the defect cannot be taken advantage of by the debtor as a defense to an action by the assignee on the debt.[87]

B. Estoppel and Waiver. There is nothing peculiar in the law of estoppel and waiver as applied to assignments. The rule that one who has, by his representations or conduct, led another to believe the existence of certain facts and to act on such belief, will not be permitted to deny the existence of such facts to the prejudice of such other, is applicable to the case of assignments.[88]

C. Motive. It is of no importance to the debtor what motives influenced the assignor in making the assignment.[89] Though an assignment be made for the purpose of enabling the assignor to become a competent witness[90] or to avoid an incapacity of the assignor to bring an action,[91] it is, nevertheless, valid where the transfer is complete.

V. By What Law Governed.

A. As to Validity — 1. Law of Owner's Domicile. As to assignments by acts of the parties, their validity is determined by the law of the owner's domicile,[92] in the absence of a prohibition of such assignments by the statutes[93] or public policy[94] of the state where the property is situated.

2. Law of Place of Performance. But, where the contract is made in one state to be performed in another, the law of the place of performance will control in determining the validity of the assignment.[95]

B. As to Construction. An assignment is to be construed according to the law of the place where made.[96]

C. As to Remedies. The remedy of an assignee is to be determined by the law of the place where suit is brought.[97]

D. As to Recording. If the laws of the situs of personal property require recording of transfers so as to render them valid, and all parties are domiciled in another state, by the laws of which record is not required, the courts of the state in which the property is situated will not recognize the transfer, as against creditors and subsequent purchasers, unless it is recorded.[98]

VI. Operation and Effect.

A. Invalid Assignment. A void assignment is inoperative, and moneys of of a corporation to account and charge him as trustee of assets does not pass to an assignee to whom the debt is assigned for purpose of changing rule of limitation.

B. Valid Assignment — 1. Absolute Assignment. A valid and unqualified assignment of a chose in action, which has a present existence, transfers to the assignee the chose assigned — that is to say, the assignee takes the legal or equitable title to the chose to the same extent to which the assignor had the title.[2] It passes the whole right of the assignor, nothing remaining in him capable of being assigned,[3] and the assignor has no further interest in the subject-matter of the assignment.[4] But, as heretofore seen, when the subject-matter of the assignment is a mere possibility or expectancy, the assignment thereof does not operate to vest any present title thereto in the assignee thereof, but operates merely by way of executory contract, to take effect as an assignment when the interest assigned becomes a vested interest.[5] Such assignments have no validity at law, in the absence of statutes authorizing them, and fail in equity in the event that the expectancy is not realized.[6]

New Jersey.— Bacon v. Kienzel, (N. J. 1891) 21 Atl. 37.

New York.— Assignment made to assignee to collect and apply on debt is prima facie as security, and not absolute. Mulford v. Muller, 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 330, 1 Keyes (N. Y.) 31.

North Carolina.— Where a transfer absolute in terms of all the effects of a firm, consisting of property and choses in action, is made in the firm-name by one partner, without the consent of his copartner, for a certain sum which is the amount of the firm's debts, it will be held to be an assignment for security. High v. Lack, 61 N. C. 175.

Pennsylvania.— Assignment may be shown to be a mortgage even though absolute in form. Fryer v. Rishel, 1 Walk. (Pa.) 470; Price's Estate, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 467.

United States.— A cashier of a bank was called to meet a member of a firm indebted to the bank, and was then informed of the failing condition of the firm, and that it desired to save the bank from loss, and he thereupon took an assignment of the property for an expressed consideration of double the amount of the debt. The bank took possession under the assignment and held the property until it was taken away from it under judicial process, and continued improvements thereon, which it paid with money furnished by the partner making the assignment and by the firm bookkeeper, and collected from persons with whom the firm had dealings. It was alleged that the transfer was in payment and not as security, and that the partner making the transfer was individually given the right to redeem, and that subsequent payments were made with his money. The account on the books of the bank was not closed and no receipt was given. In a suit against the other partner to recover the debt it was held that the transfer was by way of security only. Jarboe v. Templer, 38 Fed. 213.

But if the property is assigned in payment of a debt, the assignee takes a complete title to it as against the assignor and those claiming under him, even if it is worth more than the debt in payment of which it is given (Nathan v. King, 51 Cal. 521); and an assignment originally for security may, by agreement of the parties, be thereafter made absolute (Page v. Burnstine, 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 194).

Under the Judicature Act, an assignment for security, the assignee to receive debts and out of them pay a sum due to him from the assignor, and then pay the surplus to the assignor, is an absolute assignment. Burlinson v. Hall, 12 Q. B. D. 347, 48 J. P. 216, 53 L. J. Q. B. 222, 50 L. T. Rep. N. S. 723, 32 Wkly. Rep. 492; Comfort v. Betts, [1891] 1

ment of property to secure a debt does not constitute an obligation on which suit may be brought against the assignor, although it may constitute such an acknowledgment of the debt as will prevent the running of the statute of limitations.[12]

(II) Rights, Duties, and Liabilities of Parties—(A) Before Debt Paid. To the extent of his interest, the assignee is the owner of the collateral as against the assignor and those claiming under him, or against attaching creditors of the assignor,[13] and may sue thereon in his own name.[14] But, if all the parties in interest are parties to the suit, he can recover only the amount necessary to pay his debt.[15] His ownership of the assigned chose is not such that he can modify the terms thereof,[16] or employ an attorney to collect,[17] or a watchman to protect the same,[18] at the expense of the assignor; nor is he such owner as to make him liable for costs within a statute making a person liable for costs where the cause of action becomes his property by assignment.[19] The interest of the assignor in property assigned as collateral is a valid subject of assignment.[20]

(B) After Debt Paid. Where the debt for which the collateral is given is paid, the right to hold the collateral ceases,[21] and after that time the assignee has

13. Ownership of assignee.— California.— Matter of Phillips, 71 Cal. 285, 12 Pac. 169. Where a mortgage was made to secure a debt and there was a foreclosure thereunder and a decree of sale, and an agreement between the mortgagor and the mortgagee that the order of sale should not issue for a period agreed upon, and that the mortgagee should be at liberty to enter upon the premises and collect the rents therefrom and apply them to a satisfaction of the decree, the agreement amounts to an assignment of the rents to the mortgagee for the period named, unless the decree is sooner satisfied, and a court of equity will not permit the mortgagor to assert his legal title or to disturb the mortgagee in his possession. Massachusetts.— Sullivan v. Sweeney, 111 Mass. 366.

New Jersey.— A assigned a decree to B for which B agreed to pay a specified portion of the sum due on the decree in cash, residue at the end of the year. To secure the last payment it was agreed that A should have a lien upon the decree as fully and as perfectly as if the same had not been assigned, and, in case the last sum was not paid, he should have power to collect the same on the decree, giving B thirty days' notice, and if the sale of the property authorized by the decree should bring more than the last sum, the balance was to be paid to B. It was held that under this assignment B had no authority as attorney of A to collect the money and discharge the decree. Hudson Mfg. Co. v. Elmendorf, 9 N. J. Eq. 478.

21. Right to hold collateral ceases.— Iowa. — Collins v. Jennings, 42 Iowa 447.

Maine.— Hamlin v. European, etc., R. Co., 72 Me. 83.

Massachusetts.— An assignee to whom goods have been assigned as security agreed verbally, in consideration of part payment of the debt and of the deposit of securities for the balance, to give up all goods so assigned, and did actually give up all but a small portion thereof. This portion was in a loft which the assignor had leased to the assignee, and the assignee promised to give up the lease and the key to the premises, but, having failed to do so, the assignor took possession of the property without the assignee's knowledge. It was held that the assignee had no lien on no interest in the collateral that he can transfer to another.[22] The assignee is liable to the assignor and to the creditors of the assignor for any balance realized from the collateral over and above the debt due him.[23]

c. For Collection. When a chose, capable of legal assignment, is assigned absolutely to one, but the assignment is made for purpose of collection, the legal title thereto vests in the assignee, and it is no concern of the debtor that the equitable title is in another.[24] The assignee may prosecute an action thereon in his own name.[25] But an obligation assigned in due form, and in writing reassigned to the assignor by the assignee, stating that he agrees to pay all moneys collected of the assignor, after expenses of collection, does not vest the absolute title in the assignee;[26] and an irrevocable power to collect a debt is not in itself an assignment of the debt.[27] An assignee for collection merely has no power to transfer the assigned chose.[28]

C. Property Passing by Assignment — 1. In General. All property and property rights pass by an assignment that are comprehended by the terms used therein,[29] and, as hereafter seen, such rights and remedies of the assignor as are the goods, the security deposited having turned out to be worthless. Parks v. Hall, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 206.

An assignment by a devisee of real estate of all money then being or thereafter coming into the hands of an executor is sufficient to pass his claim against the executor for return of moneys arising from the sale of real estate by the executor to pay debts and used by him for that purpose, personal property which by will was made chargeable with debts having subsequently been discovered. Couch v. Delaplaine, 2 N. Y. 397. An assignment by a widow of her interest in the residuary estate of her husband, the husband having, by the will of his deceased father, an interest in the residue of his father's estate, vests in the assignee the interest of the widow as a residuary legatee of her husband in the interest of her husband in the estate of his father.

incidents to the assigned property are vested in the assignee by virtue of the assignment.[30] A chose embraced within the terms of an assignment will pass thereby, although, at the time of the assignment, both the assignor and assignee were ignorant of the fact that the assignor had an interest in it.[31] But collateral rights arising out of an assigned contract do not pass by the assignment of the contract.[32]

2. Under General Terms. An assignment of all estate, of whatever nature or kind soever,[33] or of all personal property whatever,[34] will operate to pass to the assignee choses in action of the assignor. But when such general terms are used in connection with other terms customarily used to designate only personal property in possession, they have been held not to include choses in action.[35]

3. Of Moneys Due and to Become Due. The term "moneys due," used in an assignment, has been said to mean moneys payable at the time when the assignment was made.[36] Assignments of amounts due and to become due until a date certain include amounts coming due on that date.[37] If the assignment is of moneys to become due from a particular person under contracts, or for breach of contracts, it will be construed to mean under contracts then existing.[38] An assignment of moneys to be recovered under a contract, or to be paid in settlement thereof, or on account thereof, by compromise or otherwise, includes moneys voluntarily paid for labor done under the contract, the contract having been declared invalid,[39] or moneys paid by a debtor to buy peace.[40] In the absence of stipulation the assignment of profits under contracts or arising out of property

34. All personal property whatever.— Sherman v. Dodge, 28 Vt. 26. An assignment of "all right, title, and interest in and to all property, real and personal, legal and equitable, which I now own or claim to own, or in which I have any interest," is sufficient to transfer the assignor's shares of stock to recover which he has sued, but not to transfer his claim for services to be rendered in that suit subsequently to the assignment. are usually held to mean profits accruing subsequently to the assignment.[41] An assignment of moneys due and to become due under a contract is not an assignment of the contract.[42] But an assignment of moneys due under a contract includes moneys to become due in payment of expenditures as well as for labor.[43]

4. Of Contracts. An assignment of a contract, after the same has been modified by the parties thereto, is an assignment of the contract as modified, and not of the original contract.[44] An assignment of a continuing contract is not an assignment of a cause of action for breach of contract by the other contracting party before the assignment.[45]

5. Of Evidences of Title. An assignment of the evidence of one's title vests the title to the property of which it is the evidence in the assignee. With reference to personal property not in possession of the assignor the title of the assignor thereto becomes vested in the assignee by a transfer of the evidence of title.[46] But an assignment of the evidences of title to real estate vests in the assignee thereof only the equitable title to the land.[47]

6. Incidents to the Chose Assigned — a. Rule Stated — (i) In Absence of Stipulation. In the absence of any stipulation or provision in the contract of assignment concerning the securities or other incidents, an unqualified assignment of a chose in action carries with it, as incident to the chose, all securities held by the assignor as collateral to the claim, and all rights incidental thereto,[48]

The assignment of the right to do work under a partially performed contract does not vest in the assignee the right to recover retained percentage on work already done. Connolly v. Dunbar, 102 Fed. 44.

42. Not an assignment of contract.— Keefe v. Flynn, 116 Mass. 563. An assignment of "all sums of money and demands which at any time between the date hereof and May 1st next may become due to me from A for services as subcontractor, meaning especially to transfer all sums of money falling due to me by said A for work done by me for him in the town of W," is not an assignment of the contract with A for work in W nor of all sums that might at any time become due thereunder, but only of sums earned before May 1st. mortgage will not carry with it, as an incident, the note to secure which the mortgage was given.[58]

(IV) ASSIGNMENT OF NOTE SECURED BY MORTGAGE. But if the holder of a note secured by mortgage assigns the note, without specially assigning the mortgage, it has uniformly been held that the mortgage passes to the assignee of the note as an incident to the assignment of the note.[59] It has been said that, where the assignment of a note is without recourse, the security will not pass as an incident thereto.[60]

(V) ASSIGNMENT OF PURCHASE-MONEY DEBT. A class of cases also frequently occurring, where this doctrine is applied, is that of the lien of the vendor for unpaid purchase-money, whether the lien arises by inference or out of express contract, which is held to pass by an assignment of the purchase-money debt.[61]

may be done without violence to the language used by them, is, as in the case of other contracts, a cardinal rule.[62]

D. Interpretation of Assignment[63] — 1. In General. In the construction of assignments, the intention of the parties is to be sought in the words and language employed, and, if the words are free from ambiguity and express plainly the purpose of the instrument, there is no occasion for interpretation.[64] But surrounding circumstances may be considered in order to more perfectly understand the intention of the parties.[65]

2. Ambiguity. If the contract of assignment is ambiguous or uncertain in its terms, it has been said that the assignment should be construed most strictly against the assignor;[66] that the extent of an interest transferred in general terms should be construed as limited by a special designation of the right or property transferred;[67] that if the general terms used in the contract in describing the subject-matter of the assignment are broad enough to cover both choses which the assignor could validly assign and choses the assignment of which would render it void, the assignment should be considered to include only those choses which the assignor could validly assign;[68] and that when the parties, by their

Extent and limits of rule.— But a mere unexecuted intention to assign cannot operate as an assignment. Harris v. Earle, 4 Harr. & J. (Md.) 274; Patty v. Jones, (Miss. 1893) 13 So. 931; Hopkins v. Gallatin Turnpike Co., 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 402. And if the language employed in an instrument by the parties thereto has a well-ascertained meaning and does not include a chose which the parties intended to convey thereby, the instrument will not operate as an assignment of that chose. 63. As to what law governs in the interpretation of assignments see supra, V, B.

64. Assignments are to be read and understood according to the natural and obvious import of the language employed, without resorting to subtle and forced constructions for the purpose of either limiting or extending their operation. Courts cannot correct suspected errors, omissions, or defects, or, by construction, vary the contract of the parties if the words employed convey a definite meaning, and if there is no contradiction or ambiguity in the different parts of the same instrument, then the apparent meaning must be regarded as the one intended.

acts, have placed a certain construction on their contract, that construction should be given weight.[69]

3. Consisting of Several Writings. Where an assignment consists of several writings, all of such writings should be considered together in order to determine the meaning of the parties.[70]

E. Restrictions and Conditions. With reference to restrictions and conditions in contracts concerning the assignment thereof, it may be said that these are usually construed to be for the benefit of the debtor party thereto, and that if he does not see fit to invoke his rights others cannot complain.[71] Stipulations against assignment are not intended to prevent assignment as collateral.[72] But parties may expressly or impliedly stipulate that an assignment shall make the contract void, and an assignment in violation of such stipulation would not vest any rights in the assignee.[73]

F. Priorities — 1. In General. In determining the priority of assignments the date on which an assignment purports to have been made is prima facie the date on which it was made.[74]

A contractor verbally agreed that if defendants would furnish him money he would turn over to them moneys he was to receive in payment of a certain contract. The defendants thereupon furnished the money to him. Subsequently he assigned in writing to plaintiff the money to be paid to him under the contract, but, upon obtaining a draft for the money, he gave the draft to defendants, who held other security for the money they had advanced to the contractor. It was held that defendants were entitled to the draft and that plaintiff's right to the security held by defendants could not be determined in an action brought by plaintiff to recover the proceeds of the draft from defendants. b. Under Recording Acts. But, where the statutes of a state require the recording of transfers of certain classes of choses in action, an assignee who fails to record his assignment will have no priority over a subsequent assignee who places his assignment of record.[85]

c. Under Stipulations in Contract Out of Which Chose Arises. The parties to the contract out of which the chose arises may, in their contract, provide for the manner of assignment of rights arising thereunder; and, if they do so, an assignee whose assignor complies with the contract provisions concerning assignments of rights thereunder will be preferred to one who claims by prior assignment of such rights, but whose assignment is not made in conformity with the provisions of the contract.[86]

A subsequent assignee of book-accounts and bills receivable, who notifies the debtor of such assignment, has a superior title to that of a prior assignee thereof, who has failed to give such notice, especially where the accounts and bills were left with the assignor for collection, and the second assignee took possession thereof without notice of the prior assignment. Graham Paper Co. v. Pembroke, 124 Cal. 117, 56 Pac. 627, 71 Am. St. Rep. 26, 44 L. R. A. 632.

But the mere fact that the assignor is permitted to remain in possession of land to which the assigned contract relates is not, if made upon a valuable consideration, sufficient to make the assignment fraudulent as against his creditors. Dodge v. Brokaw, 32 N. J. Eq. 154.

89. Laches of prior assignee. — Monticello Sav. Bank v. Stuart, 73 Mo. App. 279. thereto to the same extent as the assignor had it at the date of the assignment, and no more.[90] But the rule is subject to the qualification that, where one places in the hands of another evidences that that other is the absolute owner of a chose, an assignment by the latter will vest in a bona fide assignee of the chose for a valuable consideration the title thereto as against the true owner.[91] The interest of the assignee, whether it is legal or equitable, will be protected by courts of law and courts of equity against all persons having notice thereof;[92] and the remedies open to the assignor for the enforcement of the obligation are open to the assignee.[93] The rights and liabilities of the parties — assignor, assignee, and debtor — are such as would naturally follow from the operation of the rules above stated.[94]

the United States and the foreign government, the latter agreed to pay claims advanced on account of seizure of the goods and made an award to the assured on account thereof, the assured transferring such award to a third person, and after that the United States, under an agreement with the foreign government, agreed to pay such award and confirmed the right of the assignee of the claim, the underwriters all the time not taking any steps to protect their interest, it was held that the assignee was entitled to the amount of the award as against the underwriters. B. Of the Assignor — 1. Rights Against Assignee. As between the assignee and the assignor, the assignee is bound to carry out the provisions of the assigned contract, and in all respects to comply with the terms of the assignment, and the assignor may recover from him the damages he sustains by reason of the failure of the assignee to comply with the contract.[98] Where the assignment is for collection or as security for debt, the assignor may hold the assignee for want of reasonable care in the selection of agents for collecting, or a want of diligence in the collection of, the assigned chose, by reason of which the assignor suffers loss.[99]

2. Obligations to Assignee — a. Express. In assigning a chose the assignor may expressly warrant the willingness and ability of the debtor to meet the obligation.[1]

b. Implied — (I) In General. The assignee of choses in action, not assignable at law, was considered only as the agent or attorney of the assignor to recover the chose, with an equitable lien thereon to reimburse himself for what he had advanced upon the assignment;[2] but where, by statute, the legal title to a chose passes by an assignment of it, it would seem that the rights of the assignee thereof, as against the assignor, should be governed by the rules applicable to transfers of personal property.[3]

(II) As to Validity of Claim Assigned. In the absence of an express warranty, the assignor of a chose in action, for a valuable consideration, impliedly warrants to the assignee that the chose assigned is a valid, subsisting obligation in his favor against the debtor to the extent to which it purports to be such.[4] If the assigned chose is invalid then the warranty is broken as soon as it is made, and the assignee need not wait until the maturity of the chose, but may sue the assignor thereon at once, and need not return the assigned chose.[5] The measure of the assignee's damages for breach of such warranty is, generally, the amount he paid the assignor for the chose.[6]

(III) As to Non-Interference With Thing Assigned. By the mere fact of assignment, the assignor further guarantees that he will not interfere with the chose thereafter, and if he does interfere to the damage of the assignee he renders himself liable to the assignee for any damage resulting from such interference.[7]

modified as to make the assignor impliedly warrant the solvency of the debtor where the assignment is of a bond or other obligation for the payment of money;[9] and the rule may be stated to be that by the mere fact of assignment the assignor impliedly agrees with the assignee that if the assignee will use due diligence in endeavoring to collect the moneys due on the chose from the debtor, and will, without success, exhaust all legal and equitable remedies in his endeavor so to do, the assignor will repay to the assignee the consideration paid to him by the assignee on account of the assigned chose, and the moneys expended by the assignee in his endeavor to collect from the debtor.[10]

In Greene v. Darling, 5 Mason (U. S.) 201, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,765, the rule stated by Story, J., is that the assignee takes the chose in action subject to all the equities existing between the original parties as to that very chose in action; but that is very different from admitting that he takes it subject to all equities subsisting between the parties as to other debts or transactions. The assignment of a chose in action conveys merely the rights which the assignor then possesses to that thing, but it does not, necessarily, draw after it all other equities of an independent nature.

Claims after assignment and before notice must be such as arise out of the assigned chose. Terney v. Wilson, 45 N. J. L. 282; Cumberland Bank v. Hann, 18 N. J. A note against the assignor, not due at the time of the assignment, is not a valid offset against the assignee under a statute providing that the assignee may sue on bonds, etc., in the same manner as the original holder the assignor, or between the assignor and third parties.[20] When the legal title is in the assignee he may recover the full amount of the obligation from the debtor, although the assignee holds the chose as security for a debt or upon trust for creditors.[21]

3. Obligations to Third Parties. The assignment of a mere personal contract does not give the other contracting party a right to sue the assignee for a breach thereof.[22] If the assignee expressly promises, in the contract of assignment, upon a valuable consideration, to pay third parties, such third parties may sue him on his promise.[23]

D. Of the Debtor — 1. Rights Against Assignee. Until the debtor receives notice of the assignment, or, as the rule is sometimes stated, until he has knowledge of such facts concerning the same as are sufficient to put him on inquiry,[24]

Assignment of encumbered land does not personally obligate assignee to pay encumbrance. Lavelle v. Gordon, 15 Mont. 515, 39 Pac. 740.

Limitations of rule.— But where a contract is made with the intention that it should be assigned to the assignee, and he takes it upon the express stipulation that he will be bound by the covenants thereof, he will be bound thereby, and may be sued thereon by the other contracting party (Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Mo. 389, 39 Am. Rep. 519); and where an assignee takes property subject to the payment of a debt, and that debt is not a lien on the property conveyed, the assignee will be personally obligated to the holder of the debt to pay the same (Dingeldein v. Third Ave. R. Co., 37 N. Y. 575 [reversing 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 79]).

he may deal with the assignor as if no assignment had been made. He may pay the assignor,[25] even though the debt be not due at the time he makes such payment,[26] or pay a subsequent assignee of whose assignment he has notice,[27] or any person vested with apparent authority to receive payment,[28] or an attaching creditor of the assignor under order of the court,[29] the whole or any part of the debt. The debtor may subject the chose in the hands of the assignee to all equities against the assignor,[30] and all defenses he had against the assignor,[31] prior

Anderson v. Van Alen, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 343 [but see Meghan v. Mills, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 64, where it was said notice must be direct and positive, and not enough to demand payment of debtor without stating in what capacity demand is made]; Tritt v. Colwell, 31 Pa. St. 228. See also supra, III, B, 4.

The mere fact that the original creditor is in possession of the evidences of the chose, which were delivered to him for a special purpose, will not authorize a debtor to pay to one to whom the creditor wrongfully assigned the chose, if the evidences show on their face that the chose had been theretofore assigned to another; and the mere fact that the debtor could not read, or that he had overlooked the assignment, would not discharge him, his duty being to exercise ordinary care. a qualified interest in the chose, the debtor may, even after notice of the assignment, deal with the assignor, subject to the interest of the assignee, and is accountable to the assignee only to the extent of his interest.[34] It has been said that, in order that the debtor should be bound, the debt or fund assigned must be some recognized or definite fund or debt, in the hands of a person who admits the obligation to pay the assignor.[35]

E. Of Successive Assignees. Successive assignees of a chose in action take the same subject to the equities between the original assignor and his assignee,[36] as well as to equities existing between the original assignor and the debtor,[37] especially where the transfer is only of all right, title, and interest of the assignee to the chose.[38]

St. 170]; Mixon v. Jones, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 395; Kendall v. U. S., 7 Wall. (U. S.) 113, 19 L. ed. 85. In Brown v. Rees, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 191, it is said that the law does not countenance assignments of open book-debts which may be liable to errors and disputes, and notice of such assignments is not binding on the debtor, who can discharge himself by settlement with the assignor. The only remedy of the assignee would be a suit against the assignor for breach of contract.

In Iowa the debtor may pay the assignor of open accounts despite notice, but he is not compelled to do so, and may recognize an assignment by the assignor of such accounts, in which event the assignee will be entitled to the same as against garnishing creditors of the assignor. Bailey v. Union Pac. R. Co., 62 Iowa 354, 17 N. W. 567.

Where the release by the assignor is given merely to right a wrong he has done to the debtor by a pretended claim, an assignee of such claim, without consideration and with knowledge of the facts, will not be heard to complain. Atkinson v. Runnells, 60 Me. 440.

the legal interest in a chose in action which is enforced by suit.[40] Where the legal title is in several all must join in an action to enforce it.[41] Since it is the legal interest that is enforced it is no concern of the debtor that the chose in action or debt on which he is sued has been assigned, or that the action is brought for the use of another, his only concern being with the legal title.[42] Though, at common law, an assignee of a chose in action was not recognized as possessing the full title to the chose so as to enable him to assert his rights in his own name,[43] yet his rights as the beneficial owner of the chose came to be recognized in actions brought in a court of law. The equitable title of the assignee was not permitted to affect the remedy or procedure in the enforcement of the chose in action, nor was it regarded in applying rules in regard to parties to actions.[44]

b. Action in Name of Assignor — (i) Necessity of. At common law, the assignee of a chose in action could proceed for the enforcement of the debt or chose assigned only in the name of the assignor.[45] A covenant to pay rent was,

c. Protection of Rights of Assignee. Wherever an assignment of a debt or chose in action is brought to the attention of a court of law in any action or proceeding in any way involving a debt or chose in action which has been assigned, the court will protect the equitable rights acquired by the assignee under the assignment as against all persons who have notice of the assignment.[56] After an assignment of a debt or chose in action is brought to the notice of the debtor, no act of the assignor or of the debtor will be allowed to defeat the equitable rights of the assignee.[57]

d. When Action Must Be Brought in Name of Assignee. Where the statute merely authorizes, but does not require, actions by assignees to be brought in their own names, an assignee of a chose in action may still, as at common law, sue for the enforcement of the chose in the name of the assignor.[65] But, where choses in action are made assignable by statute, the assignment thereof vesting the legal title in the assignee, the action must be brought in the name of the assignee.[66] Where the code provides that actions must be prosecuted by the real parties in interest, an assignee of a chose in action can no longer sue at law in the name of his assignor, but must proceed in his own name on the chose.[67]

b. Where Assignee Sues as Trustee of Express Trust. Though, under the code, an action is to be brought by the real party in interest, if the assignee of a chose holds for the benefit of another, or under an agreement is bound to account to another for the proceeds of the chose, he is, in a number of states, regarded as the trustee of an express trust, and, as such, permitted to sue in his own name without joining his beneficiary.[76]

c. Where Part of Chose Is Assigned. Under code provisions providing that actions may be brought by the real parties in interest, where a partial assignment of a chose in action is made, the assignor may join with the assignee in an action to enforce the chose assigned.[77] Where a debtor consents to the assignment of part of his debt, the assignee may sue him for such part.[78] Where there are several assignees of a debt, all should join in an action to enforce it.[79]

2. In Suits in Equity[81] — a. Assignor — (i) In General. The object of a court of equity being to settle all controversies touching any matter in one action, and that no decree should be made affecting the right of persons without a hearing, in order to avoid multiplicity of suits, it has been said that the person holding the legal title in the subject-matter of a bill must be made a party, either as plaintiff or defendant, although he has no beneficial interest.[82] It has also been said that assignor is a proper party in any case where a bill is filed by his assignee.[83]

(ii) Where Assignment Is Absolute. The weight of authority is to the effect that, where an assignment is absolute and unconditional as to the entire equitable interest, and the extent and validity of the assignment are not doubted or denied and there is no remaining liability in the assignor to be affected by the decree, it is not necessary to make the assignor a party to a bill filed by the assignee.[84]

2. OF PLAINTIFF — a. In General. Where an action is brought by the assignee of a chose in action, he should plead all the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action in him — not only those facts which show a cause of action on the chose in action,[94] but also those facts which show a right in him to maintain the action.[95]

Colorado.— In an action by payee of an order on a particular fund to become due drawer for certain work, accepted by drawee, it is a sufficient averment of liability of drawee, in an action against him, to state that there was due on account of the particular work mentioned in the order more money than was sufficient to pay the order, and the assignee need not allege full compliance by the assignor with the terms of his contract. Welch v. Mayer, 4 Colo. App. 441, 36 Pac. 613.

Indiana.— Plaintiff's petition alleged he had purchased brass checks issued by defendant which represented money due from defendant to his employees, but the petition contained no statement showing the work done by such employees, and gave no reason for not making them parties defendant. 95. Must show right to maintain action.— St. Anthony Mill Co. v. Vandall, 1 Minn. 246. Where a declaration stated an assignment of a bond by one of two assignees thereof on behalf of himself and the other assignee to plaintiff, but did not state the authority of the one assignee to assign on behalf of the other, it was held to be bad. Stevens v. Bowers, 16 N. J. L. 16. The essential fact being the change of interest, it is sufficient to allege that fact, without stating all facts going to make that change effectual. Horner v. Wood, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 371. If it be necessary, in an action brought upon an assigned chose in action, that the interest of the person for whose benefit the suit is brought should appear in the pleadings, it is sufficient if it appear in any part of the pleadings. Canby v. Ridgway, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 496; Moffett v. Bolmer, 2 Pa. St. 712.

Particular allegations held sufficient as showing title in plaintiff as assignee may be found in the following cases:

California.— See Moore v. Waddle, 34 Cal. 145.

Florida.—Jordan v. John Ryan Co., 35 Fla. 259, 17 So. 73.

Kansas.— Polster v. Rucker, 16 Kan. 115.

Kentucky.— It is not sufficient to state that the chose was assigned to plaintiff, or that he is the owner thereof; but it should be alleged by whom it was assigned. Maynard v. Cassady, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 836.

Michigan.— Morrill v. Bissell, 99 Mich. 409, 58 N. W. 324.

Missouri.— Boyer v. Hamilton, 21 Mo. App. 520.

New York.— Crinnian v. Knauth, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 523, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 976; H. C. Miner Lithograph Co. v. Canary, 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 664, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 256; King v. King, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 1089.

Texas.— It is not necessary, however, to aver the evidence of one's right to property, or the manner of acquiring it. Allegations of ownership are sufficient to let in proof of the assignment. Thomas v. Chapman, 62 Tex. 193.

Washington.— Latimer v. Baker, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 899. But compare Seattle Nat. Bank v. School Dist. No. 40, 20 Wash. 368, 55 Pac. 317.

Wisconsin.— River Falls Bank v. German American Ins. Co., 72 Wis. 535, 40 N. W. 506; Burnham v. Milwaukee, 69 Wis. 379, 34 N. W. 389.

Mere conclusions should not be pleaded.[96] A mere statement that plaintiff is the owner or holder of the chose in action sued on is insufficient, being a mere conclusion.[97] The plaintiff suing as assignee of a chose in action must aver an assignment to himself.[98] Where plaintiff sues as a remote assignee of a chose in action, it has been held that he should specially state his title through the intermediate assignees.[99]

b. Particular Averments and Requisites — (I) Pleading Statute. The assignee of a chose in action need not, in his declaration, set out the statute authorizing him to sue in his own name.[1]

(II) Manner of Assignment — (A) In General. Where the right of an assignee to maintain the action in his own name depends on the manner of the assignment to him, it has been held that the manner of the assignment should be alleged.[2]

Canada.— Cousins v. Bullen, 6 Ont. Pr. 71.

Under statute authorizing the assignee of a bond to sue thereon in his own name, styling himself in the writ the assignee of the obligee, the declaration of an assignee of a bond payable to an unmarried woman, who afterward married and, with her husband, assigned the bond to plaintiff, which states that the bond was duly assigned to plaintiff, where plaintiff styles himself in the writ the assignee of the unmarried woman, was held sufficient. Frost v. Croft, 9 Rich. (S. C.) 285. But see Evans v. Secrest, 3 Ind. 541.

96. Mere conclusions should not be pleaded. — Where an assignor promised to reimburse his assignee if, with due diligence, he could not collect the assigned note, it was held not to be sufficient for the assignee to allege due diligence in general terms in his pleading in an action against the assignor, but he was bound to set up facts showing diligence. Leas v. White, 15 Iowa 187.

97. See Stearns v. Martin, 4 Cal. 227. Statement that plaintiff is the legal holder (Smith v. Dean, 19 Mo. 63), is the owner, without alleging an assignment to him (Gallup v. Lichter, 4 Colo. App. 296, 35 Pac. 985), or is the bona fide owner (White v. Brown, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 282) has been held to be insufficient.

Under the code a statement that a note was sold and delivered to plaintiff for value is sufficient to show title in plaintiff. Billings v. Jane, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 620.

98. Assignee must show assignment to himself.— California.— The statement should be of a positive transfer, and the character of it. Stearns v. Martin, 4 Cal. 227.

New Jersey.— A declaration on a bond, in a suit by one not the obligee thereof, which does not state a legal assignment thereof is demurrable even though it recites that plaintiff is an assignee. Lindsay v. McInerney, 62 N. J. L. 524, 41 Atl. 701.

New York.— An assignee suing on an assigned account must state and prove the assignment to him. Buffalo Ice Co. v. Cook, 9 Misc. (N. Y.) 434, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 1057, 61 N. Y. St. 731.

Wisconsin.— Where it is alleged that a claim for insurance was assigned to plaintiff, a valid assignment is held to be meant. River Falls Bank v. German American Ins. Co., 72 Wis. 535, 40 N. W. 506.

United States.— Earhart v. Campbell, Hempst. (U. S.) 48, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,241*a*.

In an action by the assignee of a sealed bill against the maker thereof, it was held that the assignment should be set out. Stroud v. Howell, 3 N. J. L. 229.

99. Suit by remote assignee.— Williams v. Wetherbee, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 233. Contra, Tibbets v. Gerrish, 25 N. H. 41, 57 Am. Dec. 307, holding that a second assignee of a note, the first assignment being in blank, need not aver the several assignments through which he claims.

1. Gano v. Slaughter, Hard. (Ky.) 76.

2. Under a statute permitting assignee by indorsement to sue in his own name, but providing that, where the assignment is not by indorsement, the action must be brought in the name of assignor, an assignee suing in his own name should allege an indorsement to himself. Phillips v. Sellers, 42 Ala. 658; Skinner v. Bedell, 32 Ala. 44. But, where assignee sues in his own name, without alleging an assignment by indorsement, and defendant goes to trial without objection under the general issue, plaintiff can recover without proving the assignment by indorsement. Phillips v. Sellers, 42 Ala. 658.

Under the statute, unless the assignment is in writing indorsed on the instrument, assignor must be made a party defendant in an

(B) Bona Fide Assignment. Though, to entitle an assignee to sue in his own name on an assigned chose in action, the assignment under the statute must have been bona fide, it has been held that the declaration need not allege the assignment to have been bona fide.[3]

(C) Conditional Assignment. Where an assignment is conditional the condition should be set forth.[4]

(D) Written Assignment. Where a written assignment is necessary to vest the legal title in plaintiff, such an assignment should be alleged.[5]

(III) Consideration. In an action by an assignee against the debtor, he need not aver a consideration,[6] nor set out the consideration for the assignment.[7] But, where the assignee of a chose sues his assignor, a consideration for the assignment must be averred.[8]

(IV) Demand on Debtor. In an action by an assignee of an obligation against his assignor, a demand on the maker and notice to the assignor of nonpayment must be averred.[9]

(V) Consent of Debtor. Where the consent of the debtor was necessary to a partial assignment, an assignee of part of a claim suing the debtor must aver such consent.[10]

(VI) Promise of Debtor. Where the assignee of a chose in action is action by assignee; and, where assignee sues in his own name without making assignor a party, he must allege the manner of assignment. Treadway v. Cobb, 18 Ind. 36; Stowe v. Weir, 15 Ind. 341; Barcus v. Evans, 14 Ind. 381; Garrison v. Clark, 11 Ind. 369. But where the legal title could not be transferred by writing, and assignor is made a party, the manner of assignment need not be stated. Buntin v. Weddle, 20 Ind. 449. Where the petition does not allege an assignment by indorsement in writing nor make the assignor a defendant, it is demurrable. Watson v. Conwell, 3 Ind. App. 518, 30 N. E. 5. A petition stating an assignment by agreement in writing is insufficient. Gordon v. Carter, 79 Ind. 386.

A statement that the chose was "duly transferred" is insufficient, as a transfer by parol might be meant; but an averment that the chose in action was "duly assigned" is sufficient, as an assignment properly means a written assignment. Ragland v. Wood, 71 Ala. 145, 46 Am. Rep. 305.

Vermont.— In an action by the assignee of a chose in action on a special promise by the debtor to pay him, it is not necessary to allege a consideration for the assignment to plaintiff, defendant's promise not being affected by the character of the transfer to plaintiff as a gift or otherwise. Smilie v. Stevens, 41 Vt. 321. Compare Roberts v. Smith, 58 Vt. 492, 4 Atl. 709, 56 Am. Rep. 567, as to necessity of alleging consideration for the original obligation.

As to necessity for consideration see supra, III, B, 3.

7. In a statement in a confession of judgment on certain notes given by defendant in payment of the purchase-price of a debt owing by a third person, it was not necessary to the validity of the judgment, as to creditors of defendant, that the consideration of the debt purchased be stated. authorized by statute to sue, he need not allege a promise by the debtor to pay him.[11]

(VII) NON-PAYMENT OR NON-PERFORMANCE. In an action by or against the assignee of a debt or contract, non-payment to or non-performance by the assignor before the assignment should be alleged.[12] The assignee must also aver non-payment or non-performance to himself after the assignment.[13]

(VIII) NOTICE OF ASSIGNMENT. In an action brought in the name of an obligee of an instrument, but for the benefit of his assignee, where defendant pleads payment to the nominal plaintiff, in order to permit plaintiff to show an assignment of the instrument and notice of the assignment to the obligor before such payment to the nominal plaintiff, such assignment and notice should be alleged in the replication.[14]

(IX) SETTING OUT OR FILING COPY OF ASSIGNMENT. The assignment need not be set out in the declaration,[15] nor, except where required by statute,[16] need a copy thereof be filed with the declaration.[17]

c. Amendments. Amendments which do not change the cause of action will be allowed where they do not work injustice.[18]

d. Surplusage. The expressions "for the use of," or "assignee," and kindred phrases in the declaration may sometimes be disregarded as surplusage.[19]

Where, however, defendant alleges in his plea that plaintiff is not the real party in interest, and that he had assigned his claim, plaintiff will not be permitted to amend by alleging a reassignment of the chose in action to him, made after the action was brought. Staunton v. Swann, 10 N. Y. Civ. Pro. 12.

Where an action is improperly brought in the name of the assignee instead of assignor, this may be remedied by amendment. Robertson v. Reed, 47 Pa. St. 115. Contra, Johnson v. Mayrant, 1 McCord (S. C.) 484.

Where an action was brought by an assignee in the name of assignor for the use of assignee, an amendment making assignee plaintiff will be allowed. Heard v. Lockett, 20 Tex. 162.

19. Blankenship v. Cressillas, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 434; Enley v. Nowlin, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 163.

In an action for conversion of goods by an assignee, the addition of the term "assignee" after plaintiff's name in the declaration does not authorize the conclusion that the suit is on a cause of action accruing to the assignor and transferred to the assignee. The term is to be regarded as descriptio personæ merely. Bloom v. Sexton, 33 Mich. 181.

3. Of Defendant — a. In General. The defect in plaintiff's title must be taken advantage of by a proper pleading and in proper time.[20]

b. Demurrer. Thus, demurrer is a proper method of raising the objection of failure to make profert of the assignment,[21] that assignor is not made a party to the action,[22] or that plaintiff's declaration does not refer to a copy of the account, and its assignment.[23]

c. Plea or Answer — (I) Contesting the Assignment. Where a defendant sued by the assignee of a chose in action wishes to contest the fact of the assignment he must, by a proper pleading, raise an issue on the allegation of the assignment.[24] The plea or answer of defendant should specially deny the assignment.[25]

(II) Pleading Payment. Where an action is brought by the assignee of a chose in action against the debtor, the plea of defendant of payment must allege to whom payment was made.[26]

D. Defenses. Where an assignment transfers the legal title, defendant can inquire no further into it.[27] It is no defense to an action by the assignee of a

20. Plea in abatement.—Thus, in an action by the assignee of a bond assigned by one of two executors of the obligee, the failure of the other executor to join in the assignment must be taken advantage of by plea in abatement, or it is waived. Chalfont v. Johnston, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 16.

See also infra, VIII, C, 3, b, c.

21. Objection of failure to make profert of the assignment must be raised by demurrer, and cannot be taken advantage of after judgment by default. So held in an action of debt on an assigned bond. Shields v. Barden, 6 Ark. 459.

22. Objection that assignor is not made a party to the action must be raised by demurrer or motion to bring him in, otherwise it is waived. Sykes v. Canton First Nat. Bank, 2 S. D. 242, 49 N. W. 1058. See also Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423, to the effect that such an objection must be raised by demurrer on the ground that proper parties are not joined, and not on the ground that sufficient facts are not stated.

23. Failure of a declaration to refer to a copy of the account and its assignment cannot be assigned as error on appeal, but should be taken advantage of by demurrer. Lassiter v. Jackman, 88 Ind. 118.

24. A mere averment that plaintiff is not the real party in interest, but that a third person is the owner of the chose, without denying the assignment which is set up by plaintiff, is not sufficient to put the assignment in issue. Fosdick v. Groff, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 158.

A plea that the assignment was not the deed of assignor is not a proper plea, and may be stricken out, where plaintiff, suing upon a bond assigned to him, does not allege any manner of assignment. Richards v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 18 N. J. L. 250.

25. A special plea denying the assignment has been held a good plea where the chose in action sued on was a sealed instrument (Gully v. Remy, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 69; Smith v. Shields, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 328; Smithey v. Edmonson, 3 East 22; Smith v. Broomhead, 7 T. R. 300), though the contrary has been held where the chose was not a specialty (Scribner v. Bullitt, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 112; Kincaid v. Higgins, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 396. But see McConnell v. Morrison, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 206).

A plea of non est factum, payment, and set-off does not put the assignment in issue in an action of debt, by an assignee of the debt, against the debtor. Ragland v. Ragland, 5 Mo. 54.

Where, in a suit on an assigned account, defendant pleads the general issue, he denies plaintiff's right of action but not his capacity to sue. Brown v. Curtis, 128 Cal. 193, 60 Pac. 773.

Verification.—In a number of states, in order to compel the assignee to prove the assignment to him, the denial of the assignment must be by a plea or answer, duly verified.

Alabama.— Bancroft v. Paine, 15 Ala. 834.

Arkansas.— School Dist. No. 7 v. Reeve, 56 Ark. 68, 19 S. W. 106, but the statute only covers assignments in writing.

Kansas.— School Dist. v. Carter, 11 Kan. 445, relating to written assignments.

Kentucky.— Burks v. Howard, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 66, relating to assignments of bonds.

Texas.— Carpenter v. Historical Pub. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 24 S. W. 685, relating to assignments and indorsements of written instruments. But the statute only applies where the action is brought on the instrument assigned, and not where the instrument is used as title in an action of trespass. Park v. Glover, 23 Tex. 469.

See also, generally, Pleading.

26. Thus, where an action was brought by the assignee of a lease against the lessee, a plea that the latter did pay the lessor and the assigns and owner the sum of eight hundred dollars per year quarterly, is not good, as it does not show whether the payment was to the lessor or to his assignee. Willard v. Tillman, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 358. See also, generally, Payment.

When in writing and under seal and duly debt that there was no consideration for the assignment.[28] But it has been held to be a good defense, where the statute requires actions to be brought by the real parties in interest, that plaintiff is not the real party in interest.[29]

E. Issues and Proof — 1. In General. The proof will be confined to the points in issue.[30]

2. Proof Under General Issue. Under a general denial, evidence in regard to the consideration paid for the assignment is inadmissible;[31] and a finding of fraud in an assignment is improper under such a denial, as being outside of the issues.[32]

3. Variance. The proof must support the allegations, and, where there is a material variance between the allegations in regard to an assignment and the proof offered, the action must fail.[33] Where plaintiff's recovery depends on an assignment which has been put in issue, he must prove it.[34]

31. Consideration.— Jacobs v. Mitchell, 2 Colo. App. 456, 31 Pac. 235; Wolff v. Matthews, 39 Mo. App. 376.

32. Finding of fraud.— McKiernan v. Lenzen, 56 Cal. 61.

That assignment was without recourse may be shown by defendant under the general issue, in an action of assumpsit by assignee against assignor. McSmithee v. Feamster, 4 W. Va. 673.

In an action by an assignee against his immediate assignor after failure to recover of the obligor on the assigned obligation, the assignor could not, under the general issue, show that the assignee had given the obligor a new credit under an agreement to accept something else in lieu of a performance of the contract, and had refused to accept performance of the obligation on the day it fell due. Adam v. Hodgen, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 87.

33. Proof must support allegations.—Clark v. Mix, 15 Conn. 152; Hobart v. Andrews, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 526, holding that where a declaration alleges an absolute assignment and the proof shows that there is a condition, the performance of which plaintiff is bound to show, the variance is fatal. See Seeley v. Albrecht, 41 Mich. 525, 2 N. W. 667; Horne v. Hoyle, 28 Fed. 743.

But, where the variance is in an immaterial particular, the variance will not be fatal, as where the allegation was of an assignment, and the proof shows an absolute assignment (McLane v. Riddle, 19 Ala. 180), or where the complaint alleged an assignment by a corporation and the proof showed an assignment by its receivers (Toplitz v. King Bridge Co., 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 576, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 418).

The allegation as to the date of an assignment need not be proved as laid; it is sufficient if the proof shows an assignment before the commencement of the action by assignee. Canfield v. McIlwaine, 32 Md. 94; Haile v. Richardson, 2 Strobh. (S. C.) 114.

F. Evidence[35]—1. Presumptions[36]— a. As to Execution and Delivery. It will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that an assignment was executed and delivered on the day of its date.[37] Where an officer of a corporation assigns an instrument, his authority to do so is presumed until the contrary is shown.[38]

b. As to Consideration. In an action by an assignee of a chose in action assigned to him by the surviving partner of a firm, the assignment will be presumed to have been made on a valid consideration in the course of winding up the partnership affairs.[39] Where an assignment is absolute it will, until the contrary is shown, be presumed to be upon a sufficient consideration.[40]

c. As to Compliance With Condition. Where an instrument was indorsed with a condition, without compliance with which plaintiff would not be entitled to the instrument, it will be presumed, from his possession of the instrument, that the condition was complied with.[41]

2. Burden of Proof — a. In General. The burden of proof on an issue of fraud in a prior assignment raised by a subsequent assignee is upon the subsequent assignee.[42] Where an assignment of a note is admitted, but the competency of the assignor to make it is denied, the burden is on the party alleging the incompetency.[43]

b. To Show Assignment. Where an assignment is put in issue, the party alleging the assignment has the burden of proof to establish it.[44]

c. To Show Notice to Debtor. Where the defense is payment to the assignor, the burden to prove notice to the debtor of the assignment before the payment is upon plaintiff.[45]

d. To Show Promise of Debtor to Pay. The burden of proving a promise of debtor to pay assignee is on the latter.[46]

3. Admissibility. b. To Show Notice of Assignment. In the absence of other proof, commencement of suit is notice of the assignment to plaintiff.[53]

G. Trial[54] — 1. In General. Where the statute requires the assignor to be made a party to answer to his interest, the court may, after verdict, permit assignor to appear and disclaim interest in the chose.[55] Where a chose was so assigned that plaintiff acquired the legal title, but not the beneficial title, the court may, in furtherance of justice, on payment of costs, permit assignee to acquire the beneficial interest and proceed with the action.[56]

2. Questions of Law and Fact. What is a legal transfer is a question of law for the court.[57] Where an assignment depends on writings, the question as to the existence of an assignment is for the court.[58] Where the questions in issue depend on parol evidence the jury are to determine them.[59] Whether an assignment has been abandoned is a question of fact for the jury.[60]

I. DEFINITIONS.

A. In General. An assignment for the benefit of creditors is well defined to be "a transfer[1] by a debtor[2] of some or all of his property[3] to an assignee in trust,[4] to apply the same, or the proceeds thereof, to the payment of some or all of his debts,[5] and to return the surplus, if any, to the debtor."[6]

B. Unintentional or Constructive Assignments. While, under some statutes, it is necessary that there should be an actual intention on the part of the debtor to make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors,[7] under other statutes there results from the doing, or suffering to be done, by debtors in respect to their property, when such debtors are in failing circumstances, a species of conveyance known as a constructive assignment for the benefit of creditors. These conveyances may generally be defined to be assignments, which, resulting from acts not intended to so operate, the law lays hold on and construes to work an assignment for the benefit of creditors of the debtor, who does, or suffers the doing, of said acts.[8] The conveyances and the means whereby particular creditors or confession of judgment, or whether the transfer be absolute in form or otherwise.[9]

II. General Requisites and Validity.

A. Nature of Transfer — 1. Considered as Unilateral Contract. An assignment for the benefit of creditors has been held to be a transaction unilateral in its nature and to which the assent of all parties is presumed.[10]

2. Divestiture of Title and Surrender of Control — a. Absolute Appropriation. There must be an absolute appropriation by the debtor of his property to raise a fund for the payment of his creditors.[11] Hence an assignment for the benefit of creditors cannot be considered as a mere transmission of custody and control over the property assigned,[12] nor as the creation of a lien[13] or Distinguished from judgment.— In Bell v. Goetter, 106 Ala. 462, 472, 17 So. 709, it was held that: "The statutes secure to the judgment debtor, the right to redeem lands which may be sold under execution issuing on the judgment; and a like right is secured to judg-

the giving of security,[14] nor as the making of a power revocable by the grantor.[15]

b. Without Reservation. In such an assignment there can be reserved no right, nor equity of redemption,[16] nor of defeasance, express[17] or implied,[18] remaining in the debtor,[19] or any creditor[20] of his, that may be availed of by any process at law or in equity. It is a complete divesting[21] of title and a surrender ment creditors. . . . A general assignment passes to the assignee an indefeasible title; there remains in the assignor no right, or equity of redemption; . . . We know not any process of reasoning by which it is possible to convert the judgment from its real nature, character and operation, into a general assignment. . . . The two have no common elements or characteristics — they bear to each other no legal relation." See also In re Pauksztis' Estate, 9 Pa. It passes both the legal and the equitable title to the property absolutely beyond the

of all right and control[22] over the property appropriated, with a contingent interest in any surplus that may remain after payment of debts and expense of administering the assigned estate.[23]

3. NECESSITY OF ASSIGNEE AND CREATION OF TRUST. The presence of a trust is one of the essential elements of an assignment for the benefit of creditors. The beneficiaries of a deed of assignment are not ordinarily the immediate grantees, but take through the intervention of a trustee who is usually called an assignee.[24]

4. DISTINGUISHED FROM OTHER TRANSACTIONS. Such being the nature of the contract, the extent of the appropriation of the assignor's property, the divestiture of assignor's title and the surrender of his control thereof, assignments for the benefit of creditors are clearly distinguishable from other transactions and convey-control of the assignor. Martin v. Hausman, 14 Fed. 160. See also infra, X, D, 1.

In Montgomery v. Culton, 18 Tex. 736, it is held that the effect of an ordinary transfer of property from one person to another, with an agreement by the latter to pay the just demands against the former, is to raise a trust for the creditors of the assignor, though the transfer was made without their knowledge, and they may maintain their action against the assignee; and the principle is the same where the property is charged with a trust in favor of third persons, and the assignee contracts to save the assignor harmless against such claims.

Where, however, the transfer may operate as a trust for the benefit of all the creditors it seems that a conveyance directly to one or

New York.— In Tompkins v. Hunter, 149 N. Y. 117, 122, 43 N. E. 532 [affirming 24 N. Y. Suppl. 8], it was said that the right to make an assignment "existed at common law as an incident to the right of property. It was as complete and perfect as the right to acquire and enjoy it. Indeed, it was upon the principle that a person might acquire, enjoy and dispose of his property that his right to make a general assignment rested." And in Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 441, 17 N. E. 354, 16 N. Y. St. 395, it is said of a statute limiting this right, that as this statute changed the common law, as it existed, when it was passed, it will be held to abrogate, only so far as the clear import of the language absolutely requires.

United States.—In Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 608, 614, 8 L. ed. 801, Marshall, C. J., says: "That a general assignment of all a man's property is, per se, fraudulent, has never been alleged in this country. The right to make it results from that absolute ownership which every man claims over that which is his own. . . . Creditors have an equitable claim on all the property of their debtor; and it is his duty, as well as his right, to devote the whole of it to the satisfaction of their claims. The exercise of this right by the honest performance of his duty cannot be deemed a fraud. If transferring every part of his property, separately, to individual creditors in payment of their several debts would be not only fair but laudable, it cannot be fraudulent to transfer the whole to trustees for the benefit of all. In England such an assignment could not be supported, because it is by law an act of bankruptcy, and the law takes possession of a bankrupt's estate and disposes of it."

The only limitation upon the complete exercise of this right to assign was, for a long time, that afforded by the statutes as to fraudulent conveyances and the general equity powers of the courts respecting fraud. Crawford v. Kirksey, 55 Ala. 282, 28 Am. Rep. 704; Tompkins v. Hunter, 149 N. Y. 117, 43 N. E. 532 [affirming 24 N. Y. Suppl. 8].

b. Partnership. Missouri.— Where assets of assignor are several times greater than his liabilities the deed is voidable, as tending to hinder, delay, and defraud creditors. Attleboro First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 10 Mo. App. 7.

New York.— It is fraud in a debtor, having ample property to pay all his debts, to assign all his property to an assignee, and authorize him to employ the proceeds in defending suits to recover debts. Planck v. Schermerhorn, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 644. But if the nominal value of assets exceeds, not very largely, the debts (Livermore v. Northrup, 44 N. Y. 107), or if the property is of uncertain value (Ogden v. Peters, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 560 [affirmed in 21 N. Y. 23, 78 Am. Dec. 122]), the assignment, it seems, may be sustained. Compare also Rokenbaugh v. Hubbell, 5 Law Rep. N. S. (N. Y.) 95 [cited in Ogden v. Peters, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 563].

Under some statutes a solvent debtor is allowed to assign.— Colorado.— Hunter v. Ferguson, 3 Colo. App. 287, 33 Pac. 82.

Iowa.— Savery v. Spaulding, 8 Iowa 239, 74 Am. Dec. 300, sustaining the assignment, where assignor honestly believed himself insolvent, though in fact he was not.

Maryland.— Sangston v. Gaither, 3 Md. 40.

Michigan.— Munson v. Ellis, 58 Mich. 331, 25 N. W. 305 (holding that there is no necessary conclusion that assignment is void simply because assets exceed liabilities); Angell v. Rosenbury, 12 Mich. 241 (in the absence of fraudulent intent).

Minnesota.— Guerin v. Hunt, 8 Minn. 477, to the effect that a mere excess of assets over liabilities will not invalidate assignment.

New York.— Ogden v. Peters, 21 N. Y. 23, 78 Am. Dec. 122, to the effect that assignment is not necessarily void because debtor's assets exceed his liabilities.

Ohio.— Mitchell v. Gazzam, 12 Ohio 315, made by solvent in contemplation of insolvency. In the absence of an express statute, an instrument which transfers property to a trustee in trust for creditors constitutes an assignment for the benefit of creditors, notwithstanding the assignor is solvent. Michigan.— Smith v. Mitchell, 12 Mich. 180.

Mississippi.— Thompson v. Preston, 73 Miss. 587, 19 So. 347, holding that fraudulent acts in disposing of property prior to assignment does not prevent assignment of what remains.

New York.— Wilson v. Forsyth, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 105, 128, holding that a mere failure to "deliver" all the property conveyed does not render the assignment void, the court saying: "There is no case, in which it was ever thought of being held, that an assignor's failing to empty his pockets, (whether of $5, or $500;) or his not delivering his watch, or his breast-pin, or his penknife, made void a general assignment, otherwise good." Should include property levied upon subject to lien of execution. Mumper v. Rushmore, 79 N. Y. 19 [affirming 14 Hun (N. Y.) 591].

Pennsylvania.— Bittenbender v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 40 Pa. St. 269, any property of which assignor has the actual or potential possession.

South Carolina.— Adler v. Cloud, 42 S. C. 272, 20 S. E. 393, holding that assignment is not invalidated where notes taken for property, the sale of which was invalid against creditors, were not embraced in the assignment, but instead the property itself was.

Texas.— Keating v. Vaughn, 61 Tex. 518. Under the statute the entire property passes to assignees whether specifically mentioned or not. Wetzel v. Simon, 87 Tex. 403, 28 S. W. 274, 942; McIlhenny v. Miller, 68 Tex. 356, 4 S. W. 614. But see Eicks v. Copeland, 53 Tex. 581, 37 Am. Rep. 760.

ment, especially if releases are exacted as a condition to participation in the benefits.[41]

D. Debts to Be Included — 1. In General. The creditors for whose benefit an assignment is made are those between whom and the assignor there is any existing liability directly due.[42] Obligations to sureties,[43] obligations to grow due,[44] and debts secured and unsecured,[45] should also be included in the debts to be paid out of the proceeds of the property assigned.

2. In Partnership Assignments. The rule just stated applies to all such debts due by a copartnership; but it is not necessary to include the debts of the partners as individuals,[46] unless the individual property of the partners is assigned.[47]

42. Existing liabilities directly due.—Canal Bank v. Cox, 6 Me. 395; Cushing v. Gore, 15 Mass. 69; Hendricks v. Robinson, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283.

43. A person contingently liable as surety is so far a creditor of his principal as to justify his being named as such. Canal Bank v. Cox, 6 Me. 395; Duvall v. Raisin, 7 Mo. 449; Webb v. Thomas, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 69, 49 N. Y. St. 462 [affirmed in 37 N. E. 564, 60 N. Y. St. 866]; Loeschigk v. Jacobson, 26 How. 44. Obligations to grow due.— A general assignment for creditors is valid for future liabilities, as well as for debts due, if the parties so intend. Silver Creek Bank v. Talcott, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 550; Halsey v. Fairbanks, 4 Mason (U. S.) 206, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,964. But a provision for the payment of debts and liabilities due or to grow due, if intended to secure debts or claims not then in existence but which are afterward to be created, would be void. Brainerd v. Dunning, 30 N. Y. 211. So also a clause to indemnify one who should afterward enter bail for stay of execution in judgments that might be obtained against his assignor makes the assignment bad. Whallon v. Scott, 10 Watts (Pa.) 237.

Future advances and contingent debts may be included, and the only question that properly arises in such case is the bona fides of the transaction. McGavock v. Deery, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 265.

45. Omitting creditors secured by collaterals, or otherwise, has been held to be fatal to validity. Bickham v. Lake, 51 Fed. 892. But it has also been held that an assignment providing for equal distribution among all creditors, except those secured by mortgages or other liens which are to be first paid, does not invalidate. Bryce v. Foot, 25 S. C. 467.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 99.

Note signed by all partners, though not otherwise a partnership debt, may be classed as such in an assignment. Citizens' Bank v. Williams, 128 N. Y. 77, 28 N. E. 33, 38 N. Y. St. 834, 26 Am. St. Rep. 454 [reversing 12 N. Y. Suppl. 678, 35 N. Y. St. 542].

47. Where individual property is included. — Heckman v. Messinger, 49 Pa. St. 465; Andress v. Miller, 15 Pa. St. 316; Hollister v. Loud, 2 Mich. 309, holding, that it cannot be objected to an assignment of copartners, that it provides for private creditors of the individual members of the firm, where the individual property exceeds the amount of each partner's individual debts.

In Missouri assignment is not invalid for benefit of all creditors, instead of partnership creditors alone, as the statute will work out the equities. Hartzler v. Tootle, 85 Mo. 23.

No evasion of the rule to assign partnership assets for the benefit of partnership creditors will be allowed. Thus where one of two insolvent creditors transfers his interest in partnership assets to his copartner, an assignment on the same day by the copartner must be for partnership creditors. Collier v. Hanna, 71 Md. 253, 17 Atl. 1017. And an attempt to convey partnership property for the payment of both firm and individual debts, without providing firm debts shall be paid first, is conclusive proof of the debtor's intent to de-

Under statutes, however, permitting preferences, illegal provisions for the payment of individual debts out of partnership assets may invalidate,[48] though individual property may be appropriated, it is sometimes ruled, to pay partnership debts.[49] It renders void an assignment to provide for the payment of a debt due a partner out of the firm property.[50]

E. Assent or Acceptance by Assignee — 1. Necessity and Presumption of. The general rule of equity is, that a trust shall never fail for want of a trustee,[51] and, therefore, the acceptance by an assignee named in a deed of assignment is not necessary to its validity.[52] Also his assent to the deed of assignment will be fraud. Friend v. Michaelis, 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 354.

48. Where individual assets are sufficient for private debts.— Haggerty v. Granger, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 243; Knauth v. Bassett, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 31, to the effect that such an assignment is not necessarily void, where it purports to assign the individual property, it not appearing that the individual property will be insufficient to pay individual debts; but that if it appears that the individual debts are to be paid directly out of the partnership assets the assignment is absolutely void. See also Schiele v. Healy, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 73. And compare Richardson v. Davis, 70 Miss. 219, 11 So. 790; Eyre v. Beebe, 28 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 333.

As to illegal preferences see infra, IV.

Deed of assignment is per se fraudulent which appropriates partnership property to payment of individual debts. Keith v. Fink, 47 Ill. 272; Fou th Nat. Bank v. Burger, 15 N. Y. St. 101.

Payment of individual debts out of individual property and partnership debts out of partnership property should be directed in an assignment of both partnership and individual property. Field v. Romero, 7 N. M. 630, 41 Pac. 517.

Preferred creditors cannot, however, take advantage of a defect of this character. Scott v. Guthrie, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481; National Bank v. Cohn, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 381.

Firm creditors cannot complain that the individual creditors are to be paid out of firm assets after first paying firm debts. Crook v. Rindskopf, 105 N. Y. 476, 12 N. E. 174.

Assignment of one member of firm conveying all personal effects of the firm for benefit of its creditors is not absolutely void, because debts of individual partner were embraced therein, but this part of the assignment has no effect in the way of interference with payment of firm debts. Lasell v. Tucker, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 33.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 165; and also, generally, Trusts.

As to the effect of acceptance by assignee as consideration to support a deed of assignment see infra, note 95.

Assignee may renounce the trust and re-presumed so that the trust created thereby may begin to have immediate operation.[53]

2. SUFFICIENCY. When, however, assent or acceptance on the part of the assignee is considered necessary, under statutory provision to that effect or otherwise,[54] it seems that it is not essential that the assignee should actually sign the instrument of assignment,[55] or even that he should consent in writing,[56] it being sufficient if, by any act or conduct on his part, the assignee indicates that he has accepted the trust imposed upon him.[57]

F. Assent or Acceptance by Creditors —1. NECESSITY AND PRESUMPTION OF. The English doctrine[58] and the rule as enunciated in many decisions of the American courts is that assent of some character on the part of the creditors is essential[59] to the validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, unless such store the property without becoming individually liable for its value; but such renunciation does not affect the right of a creditor to have the character of the transfer judicially determined and the property administered as a trust for the benefit of all the creditors under the insolvency laws of the state. Robertson v. Desmond, 62 Ohio St. 487, 57 N. E. 335.

53. Assent presumed.—Rowland v. Hewitt, 19 Ill. App. 450; Wilt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 502, 2 Am. Dec. 474; Brevard v. Neely, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 164. See also Gordon v. Coolidge, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 537, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,606, where, after an assignment had been made to a law firm and one member thereof had assented, the assent of the other was presumed.

This presumption may be rebutted, however, by proof showing an actual repudiation of the trust. Jackson v. Bodle, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 184.

56. Consent in writing unnecessary.—Scull v. Reeves, 3 N. J. Eq. 84, 29 Am. Dec. 694.

59. Better American doctrine.— Without regard to the status of voluntary assignments creditors are actual parties to the deed of assignment, or unless, by virtue of the statute under which the assignment is made, such assent becomes unnecessary.

"with preferences," if any distinction in this regard is to be drawn, and independently of statutory provisions, classifying them as assignments requiring assent at the time of making the deed or subsequently, either expressly or by acquiescence, the cases holding assent of the creditors to be necessary are as follows:

in all the cases holding that assent by creditors is necessary, and that the assent of creditors may be presumed, the prevailing doctrine is that this presumption can be indulged only in respect of assignments in trust for the benefit of creditors, which unreservedly devote assigned property to payment of creditors, with or without preferences.[63] And where assent or acceptance by the creditors is considered essential to the taking effect and completion of the assignment the assignment may be revoked at any time prior to such assent or acceptance.[64]

2. By Whom Made — a. Agent, Attorney, or Trustee. It has been held that the necessary assent or acceptance on behalf of the creditors may be made by the agent or attorney of such creditors.[65] So, too, it has been held in some cases that the assent or acceptance by the assignee or trustee on behalf of and for the creditors may suffice.[66]

b. Part Only of Creditors. Under the rule heretofore stated requiring the assent of creditors,[67] in the absence of a statutory provision,[68] or of a provision in the instrument of assignment,[69] or of some controlling circumstances arising from (distributing assets other than as provided by statute); Todd v. Buckman, 11 Me. 41 (stipulating for extension upon payment of dividend upon claim).

Massachusetts.— Compare Widgery v. Haskell, 5 Mass. 144, 4 Am. Dec. 41.

Missouri.— Where a condition of release is imposed. Drake v. Rogers, 6 Mo. 317; Swearingen v. Slicer, 5 Mo. 241.

New Hampshire.— Brown v. Warren 43 N. H. 430 (limiting trustee's responsibility); Fellows v. Greenleaf, 43 N. 68. See list of statutes cited supra, note 6, p. 120.

69. Fellows v. Commercial, etc., Bank, 6 Rob. (La.) 246. But the rights of creditors under a general assignment of the debtor preferring certain creditors are in no way affected by a general recital in the assignment that "the creditors have assented to the terms herein stated," where it does not appear that the nature of the transaction itself,[70] which requires that all the creditors should give their assent,[71] it is not essential to the validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors that each and every one of the creditors should give his assent thereto.[72]

3. SUFFICIENCY. It seems that any act, conduct, or declaration on the part of a creditor, indicating that he has consented to the assignment made for his benefit, will constitute a sufficient acceptance;[73] and it has been repeatedly held that any of the creditors were present at the making of the assignment, or actually assented to its terms. Lehman v. Tallassee Mfg. Co., 64 Ala. 567. See also infra, VII.

Where assignment itself requires that the majority of the creditors shall assent before it takes effect, such assent must be proved affirmatively. Lawrence v. Davis, 3 McLean (U. S.) 177, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,137.

70. Assent of all creditors.—Pitts v. Viley, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 446; Quincy v. Hall, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 357, 11 Am. Dec. 198; Seale v. Vaiden, 4 Woods (U. S.) 659, 10 Fed. 831.

This rule has been applied where assignment is conditional. Williams v. Gartrell, 4 Greene (Iowa) 287. Where assignment is of partnership property, not according to the provisions of the statute. 71. Acceptance by every creditor but one cannot be considered as an acceptance by all the creditors. Naylor v. Fosdick, 4 Day (Conn.) 146, 4 Am. Dec. 187. But such a non-assenting creditor may be estopped to deny his assent to the assignment. Condict v. Flower, 106 Ill. 105. See also Adams v. Blodgett, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 233, 1 Fed. Cas. Partly oral and partly written assent may be sufficient. Adams v. Blodgett, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 233, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 46, 17 Hunt. Mer. Mag. 79, 10 Law Rep. 69.

Suit by a preferred creditor to have a receiver appointed after an assignee refused to qualify is an acceptance of the provisions of the deed of assignment, barring any remedies against the assignor, unless the deed is im-

it is not necessary that he should sign the instrument of assignment,[74] or that his consent should appear upon the face of the assignment,[75] or be otherwise reduced to writing,[76] and the assent of the creditors may, it seems, be conditional or qualified.[77]

4. TIME OF. Under the rule requiring assent[78] it is not necessary to the validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors that the creditors should be technically parties to the deed,[79] or that they should have notice of the execution of the deed,[80] or that their assent should in any manner be given to the assignment at the time of the execution of the deed,[81] provided they afterward assent;[82] and this assent has been held to be sufficient if given before any attach-peached for fraud. Ewing v. Walker, 60 Ark. 503, 31 S. W. 45.

Where three instruments of assignment, alike in all respects, were executed at the same time, and one was retained by the debtor, one by his assignee, and one by their attorney, it was held that the creditors signing the part taken by the attorney as well became parties to the assignment as those executing that in the hands of the assignee. Page v. Weymouth, 47 Me. 238.

Revoking assent.— A creditor who accepts the terms of a conveyance for the benefit of assenting creditors cannot rescind the consent because of danger that non-assenting creditors may cancel the conveyance. 82. Subsequent assent.—McKinley v. Combs, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 105; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 556, 5 L. ed. 522.

Within reasonable time.— The beneficiaries named in a deed of trust are entitled to a reasonable time after its execution to assent ment of the property included in the assignment,[83] or at any time within the period allowed by the deed [84] or by statute, if any, for giving such assent.[85]

5. What Effect Upon Proceedings by Attachment, etc. Where the assent of all creditors is necessary,[86] in the absence of, or prior to, such assent, the property is subject to attachment, execution, or garnishment at the suit of any creditor of the assignor.[87] But, where assent of part only of the creditors is required to validate the assignment,[88] a non-assenting creditor may attach the property under attachment, execution, or garnishment process, and will thereby gain priority over such creditors as subsequently assent or become parties to the assignment,[89] but not over those creditors who have assented or become parties to the assignment prior to the attachment of the property.[90] So under any rule requiring assent, whether of some or of all of the creditors, if an attachment is made or trustee

84. Where a deed provides that creditors may become parties thereto by executing the same within sixty days from its date, or within such further time, if any, as the trustees may allow in writing, the trustees may, in their discretion, make several extensions to enable creditors to come in. National Union Bank v. Copeland, 141 Mass. 257, 4 N. E. 794. But where, in a conveyance for the benefit of creditors, terms are prescribed for their acceptance, but no time is fixed within which they are to accept, if they have never dissented they may at any time accept before the fund is distributed, provided they have not thereby placed other persons in a worse condition than they would have been in if the acceptance had been given earlier. III. INSTRUMENTS OF TRANSFER.

A. The Deed or Conveyance — 1. Form and Execution — a. In General. The phraseology of statutes must be looked to as to form and contents of the deed, as well as to the manner of executing it,[11] but it may be said generally that conformity to the statute in this regard is necessary to validate; in the absence of controlling statutory provisions, the rules relating to the formal requisites of other conveyances of property apply.[12]

But compare St. Nicholas Bank v. De Rivera, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 666, holding that a partner who had retired from the firm before its assignment, though after a debt on which a judgment was obtained against them was contracted, is not a necessary party to the assignment, where the title to the firm property vested in the remaining members on his retirement. In Adee v. Cornell, 93 N. Y. 572, it was held that a deed was sufficient against the objection that it was not signed by an alleged partner, when it appeared that he assented to the assignment and disclaimed any interest in the property assigned.

been held, however, that one partner may assign for the firm if his copartners are non-resident.[16]

d. Description of Liabilities. Debts to be included in the assignment[17] should be described with sufficient certainty for identification and for administration of the estate, as well as to enable beneficiaries to seek the aid of the courts in the enforcement of the trust,[18] and so long as fictitious debts are not included the assignment is not vitiated,[19] even though there may be misdescription from honest mistake,[20] or an omission, not fraudulent, to state the amount.[21]

Where the partners assigned both firm and individual assets, including property of two other firms of which the assignors were also members, separate creditors cannot complain that the deed was not signed by their copartner in the last-mentioned firm. 18. Certainty of description required.— Alabama.— Perry Ins., etc., Co. v. Foster, 58 Ala. 502, 29 Am. Rep. 779 (not vitiated by a wrong description or introduction of debts to which the creditor is not privy, nor by the fact that he has other security not stated therein); England v. Reynolds, 38 Ala. 370 (failing to name all the creditors or the amounts due to each is not void for uncertainty); Robinson v. Rapelye, 2 Stew. St. 121 (where the description was not deemed too indefinite as to the identification of a preferred debt).

Tennessee.—Young v. Gillespie, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 239.

Texas.— Kellogg v. Muller, 68 Tex. 182, 185, 4 S. W. 361 (deed giving list of creditors preferred and unpreferred which adds, "should the said party of the second part have omitted or forgotten any creditor, and his claim is just and correct, he shall share alike with those in schedule B, class 2, not preferred," is sufficient); Nave v. Britton, 61 Tex. 572 (failure to state nature of creditors' claims).

United States.— Sanger v. Flow, 48 Fed. 152, 4 U. S. App. 32, 1 C. C. A. 56 (where deed prefers certain creditors and provides for the remainder to be paid to all remaining creditors pro rata, it is not necessary to give, either in deed or in any schedule attached, the names of the unpreferred creditors, or amounts due them); Halsey v. Fairbanks, 4 Mason (U. S.) 206, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,964 (not fully enumerating all the debts).

19. Error in computation, where no fraud was intended. Barroilhet v. Fisch, 63 Cal. 462. A debt may be saved by the principle of "Id certum est, quod certum reddi potest." Layson v. Rowan, 7 Rob. (La.) 1.

20. As for example a mistake in misdescribing the security, as by naming it a note while it is in fact a bond (Scott v. Bailey, 23 Mo. 140), in describing a liability as absolute where it is only contingent (Bernheimer v. Rindskopf, 116 N. Y. 428, 22 N. E. 1074, 27 N. Y. St. 648, 15 Am. St. Rep. 414). So an assignment executed by a husband and wife and given to secure community debts is valid, though the debts are described as those of the wife. Hayden Saddlery Hardware Co. v. Ramsay, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 185, 36 S. W. 595. In Graham v. Lockhart, 8 Ala. 9, it was held that a deed of assignment including notes was not invalid because it contained a misdescription of the names of the sureties, dates, or sums. See also Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457.

21. Failure to state amount.— Willey v. Reynolds, (Indian Terr. 1899) 51 S. W. 972; Roberts v. Buckley, 145 N. Y. 215, 39 N. E. 966, 64 N. Y. St. 600; Barcroft v. Snodgrass, 1 Coldw. e. Description of Property — (i) In General. A description of property assigned[22] may be very general in the body of the instrument, especially if an inventory of assets is required, and there is not the same particularity as is required in an ordinary deed to realty or in a bill of sale to personalty, where title does not pass by delivery of possession.[23]

719. But see Caton v. Mosely, 25 Tex. 374 (holding that an indebtedness described as being to "sundry persons," specifying no amount and giving assignee the power to hold assigned property and dispose of it to the best advantage of the creditors generally, makes assignment invalid); Young v. Gillespie, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 239 (holding that describing the debts as "all other debts we owe for borrowed money" provided to be paid before the remainder of the estate shall be paid pro rata makes the assignment void).

Parol evidence is admissible to show the true amount of the debts. Platt v. Hedge, 8 Iowa 386; Silsby v. Strong, 38 Oreg. 36, 62 Pac. 633.

22. As to property to be included see supra, II, C.

23. Alabama.— Clark v. Few, 62 Ala. 243 (parol evidence may aid description otherwise insufficient); England v. Reynolds, 38 Ala. 370; Brown v. Lyon, 17 Ala. 659 (failure to specify property may be a circumstance to be considered by the jury in determining the question of fraudulent intent); Tarver v. Roffe, 7 Ala. 873 (imperfect description of some of the chattels conveyed does not invalidate); McCain v. Wood, 4 Ala. 258 (deed assigning all debts due grantor of persons in the state of Alabama for medical services not void for uncertainty); Robinson v. Rapelye, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 86.

Arkansas.— But see Barkman v. Simmons, 23 Ark. 1, holding that where a deed purports to convey all the assignor's property and refers to a schedule as being attached, but which is omitted, parol evidence is not admissible to show what articles were intended to be conveyed. And compare Mansur, etc., Imp. Co. v. Wood, 63 Ark. 362, 38 S. W. 898.

Colorado.— But see Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 Pac. 307, for an insufficient description for failure to designate location of goods assigned. And compare Graham Paper Co. v. Sanderson, 8 Colo. App. 427, 47 Pac. 904.

Kansas.— Walker v. Newlin, 22 Kan. 106.

Maryland.— Keighler v. Nicholson, 4 Md. Ch. 86, should purport to convey all assignor's property, but may be valid on proof that he had no other property.

Massachusetts.— Pingree v. Comstock, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 46 ("all his lands, tenements, and hereditaments," is sufficient); Hatch v. Smith, 5 Mass. 42.

Michigan.— But see Price v. Haynes, 37 Mich. 487, where "goods, chattels, stock, promissory notes, debts, choses in action, evidences of debt, claims, demands, property and effects of every description, . . . wherever the same may be situated, to-wit: all the goods, chattels and property now in the store lately occupied by" the assignor, was held to be insufficient to include real estate, especially as instrument was not acknowledged or witnessed so as to entitle it to be recorded as a conveyance of real property. See also Ryerson v. Eldred, 18 Mich. 12, for description too uncertain.

Missouri.— State v. Cooper, 79 Mo. 464; Attleboro First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 10 Mo. App. 7.

North Carolina.— See Carter v. Cocke, 64 N. C. 239.

Rhode Island.— Nightingale v. Harris, 6 R. I. 321, with preferences conditioned on releases, is not invalid, though it does not purport to convey all of assignor's property not exempt from attachment.

South Carolina.— See also Adler v. Cloud, 42 S. C. 272, 20 S. E. 393, as to variance between deed and inventory.

Tennessee.— But see Powers v. Goins, (Tenn. Ch. 1895) 35 S. W. 902, for insufficient description of notes and accounts. Compare Overton v. Hollinshade, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 683 (as to when a general description may be considered as a badge of fraud); Fonshee v. Willis, 101 Tenn. 450, 47 S. W. 703.

Texas.— McCart v. Maddox, 68 Tex. 456, 5 S. W. 150 (not invalid under act of 1879 because it fails to state specifically that all the debtor's property is thereby conveyed); Nave v. Britton, 61 Tex. 572 (description may be supplemented by parol evidence). But see Baldwin v. Peet, 22 Tex. 708, 75 Am. Dec. 806. And compare Hayden Saddlery Hardware Co. v. Ramsay, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 185, 36 S. United States.— Halsey v. Fairbanks, 4

(II) EXEMPT PROPERTY. The failure to specify exempted property, so as to identify it from the mass of property assigned, does not invalidate the assignment itself,[24] but is rather construed to make void the claim of exemption, unless the law specifically describes the exempt portion,[25] or allows a subsequent selection.[26]

f. Acknowledgment[27]— (I) NECESSITY. Where the statute prescribes that acknowledgment, or affidavit of good faith, shall accompany the execution of the assignment, such provision is generally held to be mandatory,[28] unless it

Wisconsin.— German Bank v. Peterson, 69 Wis. 561, 35 N. W. 47; Bates v. Simmons, 62 Wis. 69, 22 N. W. 335.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 231.

25. An Alabama case, following the statute of Kentucky where a resident of that state made an assignment in Alabama, held that as Kentucky laws exempted only specific classes of property the assignment did not have to specify the property exempt. Southern Suspender Co. v. Van Borries, 91 Ala. 507, 8 So. 367. See also Grinstead v. Richardson, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 798; Moore v. Stege, 93 Ky. 27, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 948, 18 S. W. 1019. See also cases cited supra, note 24.

No exemption against partnership debts.— It was held in Wisconsin, in an assignment by partnership of partnership property, that a clause reserving "such property as is exempt from levy and sale under execution" is inoperative, because a firm, as such, not being entitled to any exemption whatever, the insertion of such a clause had no effect. McNair v. Rewey, 62 Wis. 167, 22 N. W. 339; Goll v. Hubbell, 61 Wis. 293, 20 N. W. 674, 21 N. W. 288; Madison First Nat. Bank v. Hackett, 61 Wis. 335, 21 N. W. 280.

26. Subsequent selection.— In Michigan it is held that where an assignment for the benefit of creditors excepts exempt property without specifying it, a bona fide selection is as practicable as under a levy. Smith v. Mitchell, 12 Mich. 180. See also Richardson v. Marqueze, 59 Miss. 80, 42 Am. Rep. 353. But compare Goll v. Hubbell, 61 Wis. 293, 20 N. W. 674, 21 N. W. 288.

Maryland.— But see Mackintosh v. Comer, 33 Md. 598; Hoopes v. Knell, 31 Md. 550, to the effect that an affidavit by the trustee that the consideration is bona fide need not be appended to the deed.

Minnesota.— Bennett v. Knowles, 66 Minn. 4, 68 N. W. 111.

Missouri.—Rosenthal v. Green, 37 Mo. App. 272, holding, however, that, as between the parties and those having actual notice, the deed may be valid without acknowledgment and record.

New Jersey.— But see Scull v. Reeves, 3 N. J. Eq. 84, 29 Am. Dec. 694, wherein it was held by the court that the deed being signed, sealed, and delivered to one of the assignees named therein and by him accepted, was valid to pass the debtor's estate and vest the same in the assignees, although the deed was not acknowledged by the assignor.

New York.— Rogers v. Pell, 154 N. Y. 518, 49 N. E. 75 [reversing 89 Hun (N. Y.) 159, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 17]; Britton v. Lorenz, 45 N. Y. 51; Hardmann v. Bowen, 39 N. Y. 196, 6 Transcr. App. (N. Y.) 323; Fairchild v. Gwynne, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 23; Smedley v. Smith, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 421, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 100, 28 N. Y. St. 414; Britton v. Lorenz, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 23. But may be where personal property only is assigned and possession is taken by the assignee.[29]

(11) Sufficiency. What is a sufficient acknowledgment depends upon the exigency of the statute,[30] but when it is fatally defective it cannot be cured so as to defeat intervening rights.[31]

g. Attestation and Oath. Also it may be said that strict compliance is necessary where attestation[32] and oath[33] are prescribed, but the form of the oath is not indispensable, if the substance is preserved.[34]

2. Delivery — a. Necessity. To become finally effective and operative there see Randall v. Dusenbury, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 174, stating that under N. Y. Laws (1860), art. 1, § 348, an assignment could not be attacked on the ground that it had not been acknowledged prior to its delivery. Compare, however, Royer Wheel Co. v. Fielding, 101 N. Y. 504, 5 N. E. 431, to the effect that N. Y. Laws (1877), c. 466, § 2, relating to acknowledgments of conveyances, etc., does not apply to assignments of specific property for the benefit of specified creditors.

Ohio.— Kingman v. Loyer, 40 Ohio St. 109; Pfeiffer v. Cook, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 290, 12 Cinc. L. Bul. 53.

Texas.— But see Tittle v. Vanleer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 736, holding such a statutory requirement to be merely directory.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 261.

Where a creditor has actual knowledge of the terms of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the assignee is in possession of all the property assigned, the assignment is not void because of lack of acknowledgment. Smith v. Cullen, 18 Wash. 398, 51 Pac. 1040.

29. In case of assignment of personalty.— Meeker v. Sanders, 6 Iowa 60; Kingman v. Loyer, 40 Ohio St. 109.

Separate acknowledgment of schedule annexed to the deed is unnecessary. Scott v. Guthrie, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 408, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481.

must be a delivery of the deed of assignment to the assignee named therein.[35]

b. What Constitutes. What is sufficient delivery largely depends upon the statute,[36] but it may sometimes be presumed where only personal property is assigned.[37] Filing for registration is generally held to constitute delivery.[38]

3. Recording — a. Necessity — (i) In General. Under the provisions of the statutes[39] in some states the instrument of assignment must be registered or recorded in order to make the assignment valid as against creditors;[40] in other

36. Depends largely upon statute.— The following cases show that placing deed of assignment in the hands of another so it is beyond the power of the assignor to demand its return will suffice, though complete delivery may not be effected until registration. states such recording has been held not to be essential to the validity of the assignment.[41]

Nebraska.— Failure to record in time does not ipso facto give a creditor a superior right to that of the assignor. Miller v. Waite, 59 Nebr. 319, 80 N. W. 907. Assignment of personalty, duly filed in the clerk's office as required by law, need not be recorded in the office of the register of deeds. Lancaster County Bank v. Horn, 34 Nebr. 742, 52 N. W. 562.

New York.— It has been held that a general assignment executed as prescribed by N. Y. Laws (1877), c. 466, as amended by N. Y. Laws (1878), c. 318, takes effect so far as property situate in the state is concerned, from the time of its delivery, and not from the time of its record; all requirements subsequent to the delivery are directory merely and an omission to obey any of them does not avoid the assignment. Nicoll v. Spowers, 105 N. Y. 1, 11 N. E. 138; Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 248, 48 Am. Rep. 616 [affirming 30 Hun (N. Y.) 326]. But see McBlane v. Speelman, 6 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 401. In Van Nest v. Yoe, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 4, it was held that recording an assignment in trust for the payment of creditors, when there was no real estate to be affected by it, would not be notice to any one of the assignment.

Ohio.— Betz v. Snyder, 48 Ohio St. 492, 28 N. E. 234, 13 L. R. A. 235, takes effect as to all persons from time of delivery to the probate court of the county of assignor's residence.

Tennessee.— As against subsequent attaching creditor. Mayer v. Pulliam, 2 Head (Tenn.) 346. An assignment in trust of negotiable paper or choses in action need not be registered, under the law relating to the registration of mortgages and trusts of personalty. Duke v. Hall, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 282. See also supra, note 40.

Wisconsin.— Toepfer v. Lampert, 102 Wis. 465, 78 N. W. 779.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 462.

As between the parties thereto an unrecorded assignment is valid. Thompson v. Ellenz, 58 Minn. 301, 59 N. W. 1023.

Who may object.— The statutory requirement being for the benefit of the creditors they must take advantage of a failure to record the deed (Weber v. Samuel, 7 Pa. St. 499; Wharton v. Grant, 5 Pa. St. 39), and persons who deal with the assignee cannot take advantage of a want of record in a collateral proceeding (Maupin v. Everett, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 356). But an unrecorded assignment which is good as against a subsequent voluntary assignment has been held to be void as against execution creditors of the assignor. Huey v. Prince, 7 Pa. Dist. 110. But a creditor may estop himself from raising the objection. Crossman v. Rowland, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 259. So an assignment not filed within the statutory period will not be invalidated where it was agreed that it should only be recorded in case the assignor failed to secure an extension of time. (III) IN CASE OF ACTUAL POSSESSION TAKEN. It has been held that the recording of an assignment of personal property is not essential to its validity where actual possession accompanies the conveyance.[43]

b. Sufficiency — (I) IN GENERAL. While the statutory requirements[44] as to the time and manner of recording assignments should be complied with[45] it seems that strict compliance is not always necessary.[46]

(II) PLACE OF RECORD. The place of record, when recording is necessary, is generally designated by statute;[47] as a rule the deed should be recorded in the Pennsylvania.— Lucas v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 458; Dougherty v. Darrach, 15 Pa. St. 399.

Utah.— Snyder v. Murdock, 20 Utah 407, 59 Pac. 88.

Assignment by an individual, a member of a partnership, need not be recorded in a county where land belonging to the firm is situated, though such assignment carries his interest in the firm. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Pace, 80 Fed. 862, 52 U. S. App. 194, 26 C. C. A. 198.

Assignment of realty must be recorded in the county in which land lies. Stiefel v. Barton, 73 Md. 408, 21 Atl. 63.

Principal place of business of a corporation or partnership making an assignment sometimes controls as to the place of record. Spangler v. West, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 Pac. 905; Coggill v. Botsford, 29 Conn. 439, where partners resided in one district and their principal place of business was in another. But see Lucas v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 458, holding that where the principal office of the assignor is in Philadelphia, and its whole road is in Northumberland county, where all its business is conducted, the proper county for recording the assignment for the benefit of creditors is Northumberland.

Under Colo. Laws (1885), p. 43, § 6, providing that, where a deed of general assignment includes any interest in land, the assignee shall file a notice of the assignment in each county where the real estate is situated, and that the same shall be constructive notice to a purchaser or encumbrancer of the transfer of the property in that county, the mere recording of the deed, without filing the notice required by said act, is not constructive notice of the conveyance. Spangler v. West, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 Pac. 905.

Foreign assignment not recorded in the state where some, or all of the property included is situate, if executed in conformity with the laws of the state where made, will, nevertheless, according to the weight of authority, prevail against attaching creditors suing in the state where the deed is not recorded. Wilson v. Carson, 12 Md. 54; Carter-Battle Grocer Co. v. Jackson, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 353, 45 S. W. 615; Gregg v. Sloan, 76 Va. 497. Contra, Fourth Nat. Bank v. Fleming, 8 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 545, 8 Cinc. L. Bul. 309; Douglas v. Bank of Commerce, 97 Tenn. 133, 36 S. W. 874. And in Connecticut this rule has been applied even in the case of a non-resident attaching creditor. Atwood v. Protection Ins. Co., 14 Conn. 555. But in Pennsylvania a distinction has been made between non-resident attaching creditors and resident attaching creditors, the deed being considered as valid against the former (Bacon v. Horne, 123 Pa. St. 452, 16 Atl. 794, 2 L. R. A. 355 [distinguishing Chemical Nat. Bank v. Tuttle, 17 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 415]), and invalid as against the latter (Steel v. Goodwin, 113 Pa. St. 288, 6 Atl. 49; Philson v. Barnes, 50 Pa. St. 230; Warner's Appeal, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 505). In Kansas an assignment made by a resident of another state is governed as to property located in the former by the laws of that state, prescribing the manner of registration and the effect thereof as notice. schedule of liabilities,[51] either accompanying the deed of assignment, when filed,[52] or to be filed within a given time thereafter.[53] But unless specifically so provided by statute[54] the failure to file such inventory or schedule does not invalidate,[55]

51. Time of execution.— Dana v. U. S. Bank, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 223, holding that schedules referred to in the assignment as bearing even date therewith, but not dated, will be presumed to have been executed at the same time as the assignment.

Delivery.— In re Kimball, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,770, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 188, holding that it is not necessary to the validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors that the schedules should be delivered at the time it was made. See also Pratt v. Stevens, 94 N. Y. 387, as to the proper person to whom the inventory should be delivered.

52. Time of annexation need not be of the date of the execution of deed. Drucker v. Wellhouse, 82 Ga. 129, 8 S. E. 40, 2 L. R. A. 328; Hotop v. Neidig, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Marshall, C. J., in Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 575, 577, 5 L. ed. 522, said: "That a debtor has a right to prefer one creditor to another cannot be denied, and that his private motives for giving this preference, provided the preferred creditor has done nothing improper, cannot annul this right, is equally certain. On the other hand, it will be also admitted that any unlawful consideration moving from the preferred creditor to induce this preference, may avoid the deed which gives it."

Story, J., in Halsey v. Fairbanks, 4 Mason (U. S.) 206, 212, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,964, said: "A creditor may be defeated or delayed in the satisfaction of his debts by a bona fide conveyance of a debtor's property, either on a sale, or by a preference to another creditor. Such a conveyance is not rendered void by such effect, whether it be intentional or not. But there must be other ingredients in the case. There must be a fraudulent intent to defeat or delay creditors. Every conveyance, by which an insolvent debtor conveys his whole property to a few preferred creditors, not being more than sufficient to pay their debts, and they being parties to the deed, necessarily tends to delay and defeat all other creditors; but however strong the intention is, thereby to defeat or delay the latter, still it has never been supposed, that the conveyance was void on that account. The law allows such preference to any one creditor; and I am unable to perceive why it does not equally allow a like preference of the whole creditors to one."

erty at all.[75] In the absence of statutory regulations[76] a corporation[77] or partnership[78] comes within the rule and may, in a general assignment, prefer certain creditors. Likewise where there is only a partial assignment, where such an assignment can be made, a preference of one creditor to the exclusion of others has been upheld.[79] The common-law rule allowing an insolvent debtor to prefer one creditor to the postponement of another has, however, been the subject of severe criticism by the courts generally and has been condemned as repugnant to the principles of justice and equity.[80]

2. UNDER STATUTES — a. Forbidding Preferences — (1) IN GENERAL. The legislatures of many states have enacted laws forbidding such preferences.[81]

75. Correlative right to prevent preferences.— Chandler v. Caldwell, 17 Ind. 256; U. S. Bank v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423. And it has been held that an assignor may deceive a creditor into believing that he does not intend to make an assignment, if he may thereby prevent an attachment from being levied, the creditor proposing to attach, thereby securing a preference. Pike v. Bacon, 21 Me. 280, 38 Am. Dec. 259.

76. Insolvent corporations are forbidden by statutes in some states to make preferences. See list of statutes cited supra, note 6, p. 120; and Rouse v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 46 Ohio St. 493, 22 N. E. 293, 15 Am. St. Rep. 644, 5 L. R. A. 378 [reversing 6 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1237, 14 Am. L. Rec. 425]. In New Jersey an insolvent corporation may make a preference except when effected by means of a confessed judgment. Vail v. Jameson, 41 N. J. Eq. 648, 7 Atl. 520. In Pennsylvania it has been held that an insolvent corporation may prefer particular creditors (Dana v. U. S. Bank, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 223), and a preference by a confession of judgment will be upheld (Lake Shore Banking Co. v. Fuller, 110 Pa. St. 156, 1 Atl. 731).

Limited partnerships have been denied this right in some states. See list of statutes cited supra, note 6, p. 120; and Schwartz v. Soutter, 103 N. Y. 683, 9 N. E. 448.

77. Corporation.— Gottlieb v. Miller, 154 Ill. 44, 39 N. E. 992; Lake Shore Banking Co. v. Fuller, 110 Pa. St. 156, 1 Atl. 731; Dana v. U. S. Bank, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 223; Fogg v. Blair, 133 U. S. 534, 10 S. Ct. 338, 33 L. ed. 721. See also, generally, CORPORATIONS.

Where a foreign corporation is not prohibited by its charter from making a preference of certain creditors, the passage of a general statute forbidding such preferences by the legislature of the state in which it is incorporated can have no extraterritorial effect. Chancellor Kent, in Riggs v. Murray, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 565, 578, said: "I do not question the legality, however I may doubt the policy, of the rule which sanctions such partialities. It has been long established. . . . I mean, however, to be understood, that the application of the rule is always to be watched with jealousy, and that we are not required, by any reasons of expediency or justice, to enlarge the rule by giving it a new and dangerous facility. We ought to require of the insolvent, when he undertakes to make preferences, by assignments in favor of a class of honorary or privileged creditors, that he should do it absolutely and definitively, and not make the assignment to depend upon his future will and pleasure."

Chancellor Walworth, in Boardman v. Halliday, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 223, 229, said: "Many of our most enlightened judges have regretted that the principle of permitting an insolvent to make a voluntary assignment of his property, and to give preferences in any way, should ever have been adopted."

U. S. Rev. Stat. (1878), § 3466, providing

(II) IN INSTRUMENT OF ASSIGNMENT. When the deed or document creating the assignment contains preferences prohibited by law, the rule is that the assignment itself is not invalid, but that the instrument, whatever be its provisions, operates as a general assignment equally for the benefit of all the creditors, the preferences only being considered void and of no effect.[82] But the application of this rule may be limited by statutory provision; thus, where the statute in terms provided that in such cases the assignment itself shall be void, the transfer will be void in toto or at least will be voidable.[83]

(III) PREFERENCES IN SEPARATE INSTRUMENT — (A) Where Also Formal Assignment — (1) IN GENERAL. On the other hand, when the alleged preference is not contained in the instrument of assignment, but in another and separate instrument, the better doctrine seems to be that there is not such a preference made as is prohibited by statute,[84] except when such separate instrument is made for the preference or priority of claims in favor of the United States, has been applied to voluntary assignments by insolvent debtors for the benefit of creditors. McLain v. Rankin, 3 Johns. (N. (2) Time of Making, When Material. The common-law right of a failing debtor to prefer one bona fide creditor to another by an independent conveyance executed in good faith before the assignment,[94] is in nowise affected by the length of time intervening between the execution of such independent conveyance and the execution of the deed of assignment;[95] the date is only of evidential value on the question whether the assignment had been resolved on when the transaction took place or the conveyance was made; and preferences have been upheld as not being made in contemplation of assignment though executed shortly before.[96] Several states, however, have statutes avoiding the assignment was fraudulent and void, and that the judgments were confessed, with intent to defraud the other creditors of the judgment debtor.

Co., 119 Ala. 262, 269, 24 So. 49, McClellan, J., says: "It is the fact that a preference has been attempted and not the knowledge or intent with which it was made or accepted that brings the statute into operation. And all this is as true where the transaction is not in form a general assignment, but involves two or more transfers to different creditors made under such circumstances as that the law holds them to constitute but one act. In such case it is not material what the transferees knew as to the debtor's purposes or what they intended as to the result of his acts, nor whether they combined or colluded one with another to induce the debtor to dispose of or incumber substantially all of his property to them severally. . . . And when it [the debtor's intent to put all of his property into the hands of preferred creditors] does so exist and is so attempted to be carried out, and these facts are made to appear, the statute converts all the conveyances and transfers into a general assignment for the equal benefit of all creditors, however ignorant the grantees or transferees may have been of the debtor's intent or the effect of his acts, and in whatever good faith each one of them may line of authorities which assent to the proposition that a conveyance in contemplation of assignment comes within the rule above referred to deny the application of the principle where there is no formal assignment. Under these latter authorities the debtor is not prohibited from disposing of the bulk of his property as he pleases through confessions of judgment, mortgages, or any other forms, provided no technical assignment is made.[99]

b. "Two Thirds Act" — New York. A New York statute allows debtors in failing circumstances to make preferences to the extent of one third of their assets.[1]

c. Wages of Laborers. Claims for wages of employees and laborers are by statute expressly excepted from forbidden preferences in some states.[2]

3. Where Partnership Assigns — a. Preferring Individual Creditors. In an assignment by a partnership all the property of the firm must be surrendered unconditionally to the payment of firm debts, and a preference in favor of an individual debt of a partner out of the proceeds of the partnership property is fraudulent per se as to firm creditors.[3] And conversely it has been held that, in have accepted the conveyance made to him. . . . If the separate transfers to any number, to the exclusion of other creditors, together cover all his property and they are all made under such circumstances as to show that all are referable to a purpose on his part to so dispose of all his property liable to execution, they fall within the operation of the statute and are to be considered a general assignment to be administered for all creditors alike."

In Nye v. Van Husan, 6 Mich. 329, 74 Am. Dec. 690, it is said that, where there is no actual intent to defraud, a preference of individual debts in a copartnership assignment will not of itself render the assignment void.

Copartners may make an assignment of their respective interests in the partnership property to trustees, giving the preference in payment to the individual creditors of each copartner out of his share of the partnership funds. Kirby v. Schoonmaker, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 46, 49 Am. Dec. 160. But in Heye v. Bolles, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 231, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 266, it was held that an assignment made by a member of a copartnership is fraudulent as to judgment creditors of the firm, where it directs the assignee to pay out of the proceeds of the property assigned debts owing by the assignor individually, instead of applying such proceeds to the payment of the debts of the assignor due the judgment creditors.

One member of a firm may assign his individual property so as to prefer his individual creditors to the creditors of the firm. Lord v. Devendorf, 54 Wis. 491, 11 N. W. 903, 41 Am. Rep. 58; Messersmith v. Devendorf, 54 Wis. 498, 11 N. W. 906. So an insolvent debtor, in making an assignment of all his property, may devote his individual property primarily to the payment of his individual debt in preference to debts of the partnership to which he belongs. Limits of the rule.— An assignment made by a firm is not, in the absence of fraud, invalid because it prefers the indorser and not the holder of a valid, unpaid note, though such indorser is at the time a member of the firm. c. Where Surviving Partner Makes the Assignment. It has been held that a surviving partner of an insolvent firm can make a valid preferential assignment of the firm property for the payment of firm debts[6] and the assent of the personal representatives of the deceased partner is not essential.[7]

B. How Made. No special form of deed is required, but the intention to give such preference must be manifested with reasonable certainty.[8] But it seems that the assignment need not in terms provide for the preference of wages, as the wages are preferred by the force of the statute itself.[9] In some cases it has been 37 N. E. 564, 60 N. Y. St. 867]. In Kennedy v. Wood, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 46, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 758, 22 N. Y. St. 132, it was held that the fact that money which had been loaned to the firm by one of the assignors as administrator of an estate was preferred in the first class did not render the assignment fraudulent, where there was no proof that such assignor had any interest in such estate. So an assignment by a firm, as such and as individuals, is not necessarily void because it prefers the estate of the father of one of the partners who, as his father's heir, had an interest in the estate; the partner can derive no advantage from such preference of his father because the assignment covered his individual assets. Brown v. Halsted, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 197. In Stephens v. Dickinson, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1223, 43 S. W. 212, it was held that the fact that a firm, prior to making an assignment, turned over to one of the partners certain property in payment of a loan made by him to the firm, and it was entered as settled in the books of the firm does not show fraud in the assignment, though it may constitute a preference subject to attack under the statute.

Another firm composed in part of some of the members of the assigning firm may be preferred in an assignment. Peckham v. Mattison, 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 367 note; Friend v. Michaelis, 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 354; Belmont v. Lane, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 365.

Where a member of a partnership had sold out his interest to the remaining partners and took the obligation of the firm in payment thereof and the partnership subsequently assigned, a preference in favor of the retired partner to the amount of his debt will not per se vitiate the assignment. 13. Assignee not cognizant of fraud.— Keteltas v. Wilson, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 298; Emerson v. Senter, 118 U. S. 3, 6 S. Ct. 981, 30 L. ed. 49; Baer v. Rooks, 50 Fed. 898, 4 U. S. App. 399, 2 C. C. A. 76; Sanger v. Flow, 48 Fed. 152, 4 U. S. App. 32, 1 C. C. A. 56. But see Floyd v. Smith, 9 Ohio St. 546 (holding that, under the statute, where a deed was made with fraudulent intent it was void as to preferences, although the fraudulent intent was confined to the assignor); Coblentz v. Driver Mercantile Co., 10 Utah 96, 37 Pac. 242 (holding that a voluntary deed of assignment, in which the assignee is fraudulently preferred to a large amount, is void, though he did not participate in the fraud); Waples-Platter Co. v. Low, 54 Fed. 93, 10 U. S. App. 704, 4 C. C. A. 205 (holding that where the lien of an attaching creditor becomes fixed upon the property of the debtor before the delivery and acceptance of an assignment preferring creditors, made by him with the fraudulent intent to cheat, hinder, or delay his creditors, in the trial of the assignee's right to the property under the assignment as against the lien of the attaching creditor, it is not material whether the assignee was aware of or participated in the debtor's fraud). And compare Shotwell v. Dixon, 163 N. Y. 43, 57 N. E. 178 [affirming 22 N. Y. App. Div. 258, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 984].

App. 62]. In Shufeldt v. Jenkins, 22 Fed. 359, it is held that where an insolvent prefers certain creditors by an assignment of his property for their benefit, in violation of his agreement with other creditors not to give preferences, the latter may, by a suit in equity, avoid the assignment (which had been made prior to the agreement, and had not been recorded) on the ground of fraud, whether the preferred creditors had knowledge of the fraud or not. Compare Wile v. Cauffman, 39 N. Y. App. Div. 206, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 240. See also infra, XIV, B, 4, c, (IV).

Under Hill's Anno. Laws, Oreg. § 3173, where a debtor, in contemplation of making an assignment, confessed judgment in favor of junior attaching creditors in order to give them a preference, and then made an assignment, it was held invalid and did not discharge senior attachments, though the junior attaching creditors were unaware that he contemplated an assignment. The knowledge of a creditor who takes security that his debtor is insolvent, or even that he must fail, does not raise a presumption that he knew the debtor intended to, or would, make an assignment so as to render his security a preference. by the terms of an assignment for the benefit of creditors was paid before delivery of the assignment does not invalidate the assignment, when the assignee was informed of the payment, and the creditors were not prejudiced by the failure to withdraw the item); Renard v. Maydore, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 178 (holding that where an assignment preferred certain creditors who had previously obtained a composition deed providing for the payment of one half of their respective claims and a release of the assignor, the assignment is not for that reason fraudulent and void, if the composition deed and the assignment are separate and distinct transactions).

Co. v. Dinkins, 70 Miss. 835, 12 So. 584, 13 So. 226, it is held that an assignor may prefer a creditor to whom he has agreed to pay a usurious rate of interest, if the preference is only for an amount equal to or less than the principal and the legal rate of interest, thus waiving his privilege to defeat all interest on account of his usurious contract. And in Peyser v. Myers, 135 N. Y. 599, 32 N. E. 699, 48 N. Y. St. 825 [affirming 18 N. Y. Suppl. 736, 45 N. Y. St. 413], it is held that the fact that a preference in an assignment for the benefit of creditors illegally includes compound interest is not ground for setting aside the assignment and requiring the preferred creditor to return the whole amount received by him, in the absence of fraud, and when the creditor had already returned the excess of interest.

23. Claims barred by limitation.— An assignment for benefit of creditors may prefer a debt barred by limitations at the time the assignment was executed. Stoneburner v. Motley, 95 Va. 784, 30 S. E. 364.

held to be bona fide debts which may be preferred in an assignment for the benefit of creditors. It has also been held that provisions may be made in an assignment for the payment of rents, or taxes and assessments.[29] Likewise just and reasonable expenses attending the execution of the trust, including attorney's fees, may be included in the claims to be first paid without thereby vitiating the assignment.[30]

4. Excessive Amount. While a mere mistake as to the amount of the debt preferred will not necessarily invalidate the assignment [32] a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors which contains preferences in excess of the amount allowed by statute is ordinarily invalid to the extent of such excess,[33] although the assignment may be otherwise valid and operative in the absence of fraud or dishonest intent to evade the law.[34]

Evidence of fraud.— The preference by an assignor for the benefit of creditors of one creditor for one thousand five hundred dollars, knowing that he owed such creditor but five hundred dollars, with the intent to subsequently direct the application of the surplus, one thousand dollars, to the payment of another debt, not preferred, is conclusive evidence against the assignor of the fraudulent character of the assignment. B. Of Part of Property — 1. In General. Consent of creditors.— The assignor may make a valid reservation of a power to remove trustees with consent of the creditors. Wright v. Thomas, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 244, 1 Fed. 716.

Appointment of successor.— A provision that if the assignee decline to accept and execute the trust or should a vacancy occur through the death of the assignee or otherwise, the assignor, with the consent of the creditors, shall have power to appoint a successor in his stead is not such a reservation as will render the assignment invalid. 2. Assignment Purporting to Convey All Property Some authorities hold that an assignment which purports to convey all the property of the assignor, but which intentionally withholds part, not exempt from execution, is void.[41] Others hold that this will not invalidate the assignment, since the title is in the assignee and he may in a proper proceeding compel the delivery of the assets withheld.[42]

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 332.

An assignment by partnership which provides that after paying all the firm's creditors in full the surplus, if any, shall be paid to the assignors does not affect the validity of the assignment. Bogert v. Haight, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 297; Hubler v. Waterman, 33 Pa. St. 414; Trumbo v. Hamel, 29 S. C. 520, 8 S. E. 83. Compare Collomb v. Caldwell, 16 N. Y. 484.

Omission of small claims.— The fact that an assignment for benefit of creditors omitted through mistake to provide for certain small claims, while it reserved the surplus to the debtor after payment of the specified debts, will not vitiate the assignment where the omitted creditors do not complain. McFarland v. Birdsall, 14 Ind. 126.

Payment of surplus into court.— An assignment is not invalid because it provides that the surplus, if any, shall be turned over to the debtor instead of being paid into court as provided by statute. Cunningham v. Norton, 125 U. S. 77, 8 S. Ct. 804, 31 L. ed. 624.

Surplus to wife.— Where a debtor conveyed all his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors and reserved the surplus to his wife after the satisfaction of their demands, subsequent creditors could not cause the title to the surplus to be diverted on the surplus for the benefit of the assignor after payment of the consenting or releasing creditors,[50] or after payment of a part only of the creditors,[51] renders an assignment fraudulent and void.

VI. STIPULATIONS OR PROVISIONS AS TO POWERS OF ASSIGNEE.

A. In General. The statutes usually contain particular provisions as to the management of the trust, and to what extent the assignor should or may, in the instrument of assignment, confer or attempt to confer upon the assignee powers in its management has often been before the courts. The granting by deed of excessive powers or immunities, or the restricting the legal liabilities of the assignee, is generally held to render an assignment fraudulent and void.[52] But the assignor is deemed merely nugatory,[54] or the exercise of the granted powers is under the direction of the courts.[55]

B. As to Compromise. As a rule giving the assignee power to compromise with creditors[56] renders the assignment fraudulent and void; but it has been held that he may be empowered to compromise bad or doubtful debts.[57]

Though assignor misapprehended the precise mode and time of making the sale of the property the assignment will be given effect where it appears that the debtor intended to distribute his property among his creditors and made a list thereof and of his property, which he afterward destroyed at the solicitation of certain creditors who promised forbearance. Scull v. Reeves, 3 N. J. Eq. 131, 29 Am. Dec. 703.

Stipulation merely for reasonable delay before selling property does not of itself invalidate the assignment as being a provision on credit is declared fraudulent per se.[61] In others it is not necessarily void,[62] and it has been held that it is not even presumptive evidence of fraud,[63] and that the provision to this effect in the deed is itself merely void.[64] Unless the direction to sell on credit is plainly expressed the rule of construction leans to the saving of the assignment by denying the power of sale.[65]

If insufficient, then the creditors who suffer by the deficiency have a right to be consulted and to determine whether their interest will be better subserved by a smaller sum presently received, or a larger one at a future period. Contra, Rogers v. De Forest, 7 Paige (N. Extent and limits of rule.— But to vest the assignee with power to add omitted names to the schedule of unpreferred creditors does not invalidate. Armstrong v. Guenther, 67 Miss. 698, 7 So. 499. Nor to direct the assignees if they shall deem it necessary to pay the interest on a mortgage, which is a prior lien upon the assigned property, and the principal and interest upon another mortgage if they shall deem it to the interest of the creditors. Whitney v. Krows, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 198. Nor a stipulation in an assignment for a hill of merchandise embraced in the stock to be delivered in specie to a particular class of preferred creditors at prime cost, the value to be settled by the assignee. Bayne v. Wylie, 10 Watts (Pa.) 309. A clause in a deed of trust for the benefit of creditors conveying individual and partnership assets of the grantors in several firms, directing the trustees "to pay in such order and priority, and out of such part of the trust funds, as by law they may be entitled to be paid, all such of the creditors of the parties of the first part, being creditors in any of the copartnership or individual relations aforesaid, as shall, within sixty days" assent to the deed and execute releases, is entirely unobjectionable, as it displays an upright intention to submit all legal questions to the adjudication of the tribunals constituted for that purpose. Maennel v. Murdock, 13 Md. 163, 167. A debtor assigned, preferring two classes of creditors, and directing assignee to advertise the assignment. All creditors who presented their claims to him in a reasonable time and place, excepting the first and second classes, were to constitute the third class, and all others the fourth class. It was held that this assignment was not fraudulent as to creditors. The question was whether the assignment was fraudulent, and not whether the assignee could commit fraud. In Mississippi, where the common law pre-

ing forbearance in the enforcement of creditors' claims,[68] imposing unreasonable terms, such as assent to the assignment under which creditors are to be allowed to participate in the distribution of the trust fund,[69] or tending to coerce the creditors to a compromise or a release of a part of their debts[70] have been held to render the assignment void.

B. As to Release. As a general rule a stipulation or provision in the assignment which exacts a release from creditors to entitle them to share any benefits in the estate of the debtor will render an assignment for the benefit of creditors void.[71] Under some of the decisions, however, provisions of this character have vails, a debtor, though insolvent, may by a trust deed prefer part of his creditors, and having a right to determine which of them shall be paid may dictate the terms of payment. Layson v. Rowan, 7 Rob. (La.) 1.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 151.

The doctrine that assent of creditors cannot be required by a provision in the assignment as a prerequisite to their participation in the trust fund is limited by the application of the rule relating to the necessity of assent to or acceptance of the assignment by the creditors in order to constitute a valid and operative assignment. [See supra, II, F.] Hence it has been held in some jurisdictions that a valid assignment may contain a provision that it shall be for the benefit of such creditors only as shall become parties or assent thereto within a specified time. Finlay v. Dickerson, 29 Ill. 9 (preferential assignment); Pearson v. Rockhill, 4 B. Mon. 70. Coercion of compromise or release.— Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 124, 64 Am. Dec. 637. But where, by an arrangement between a debtor and a portion of his creditors, the former assigned his property to trustees in trust for his creditors generally, and the trustees, in consideration of the assignment and pursuant to the arrangement, personally bound themselves to the debtor to procure for him a release and discharge from all his creditors, except certain ones who were specified, it was held that the assignment was not conditional or partial. VIII. WHAT LAW GOVERNS.

A. In General. In general an assignment for the benefit of creditors has its requisites, validity, and character determined by the law of the state authorizing it in force at the date of the assignment,[74] or in its absence by the common law,[75] or in some parts of the United States by the civil law.[76] This rule holds, not-for the reason that his wife did not join to release her dower. Breitenbach v. Dungan, 5 Pa. L. J. Rep. 236.

South Carolina.—Gadsden v. Carson, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 252, 70 Am. Dec. 207; Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 187.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 160.

An assignment by a partnership containing a stipulation for release must include the firm property and the property of the individuals composing it. Citizens F., etc., Ins. Omission to include an equity of redemption in land, the encumbrances on which were much in excess of its value, will not invalidate it, though it contain a provision requiring a creditor secured to release a part of his claim, as such an omission is no evidence of fraud unless it is of such an amount of property as to indicate an intention of securing to the grantor a substantial benefit. Paul v. Baugh, 85 Va. 955, 9 S. E. 329.

75. By the common law.—Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 242; Pleasant Hill Cemetery v. Davis, 76 Me. 289; Schroder v. Tompkins, 58 Fed. 672. In Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 23 L. ed. 377, it is held that a statute of Ohio not being an insolvent law in any proper sense of the term does not compel, or even in terms authorize, assignments, and that the common law determines the character and validity of the assignment, and the statute enforces the trust created by the assignment.

76. Mexican or civil law determining.—In Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 1 N. M. 34, the validity of an assignment made in December, 1848,

B. In Case of Foreign Assignments — 1. Conflict With Policy — a. In General. Though an assignment, as such, may be recognized abroad as valid it is often held inoperative, as in conflict with the policy of the law, where the rights of citizens of a foreign jurisdiction are affected in relation to property there situated.[79]

b. Rule as to Personalty and Realty. The rule just stated is almost universal with respect to real estate,[80] but the weight of authority is otherwise in regard to personal property.[81]

Assignees of firm in different states.— Where the member of an insolvent firm which made a voluntary assignment in Massachusetts gave a mortgage on land in Maine and assignees were appointed in both states, it was held that inasmuch as the mortgage was valid against the assignee in Maine it could not be avoided by the assignee in Massachusetts, though if the property had been situated in Massachusetts it would have been held by the laws of the latter state invalid. Chipman v. Peabody, 159 Mass. 420, 34 N. E. 563, 38 Am. St. Rep. 437.

Void where made — Valid where property situate.— Where a resident of Rhode Island made an assignment, void under the laws of that state, conveying land thereby in Missouri, it was held effectual to pass title to the land in the latter state, because in conformity with its assignment law. Attleboro First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 10 Mo. App. 7.

80. Realty.— Mason v. Stricker, 37 Ga. 262; Loving v. Pairo, 10 Iowa 282, 77 Am. Dec. 108; Watson v. Holden, 58 Kan. 657, 50 Pac. 883; Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 9 S. Ct. 134, 32 L. ed. 491. See also Keane v. Chamberlain, 14 App. Cas. (D. C.) 84.

Setting aside where made, though property elsewhere.— Notwithstanding that rights relating to disposition of real property are dependent upon the laws of the country where the land lies, nevertheless an instrument purporting to convey land elsewhere is within reach of the law of the state where it is made and may be set aside as in fraud of the citizens of that state, upon the principle that every country has the inherent right to protect its citizens as to a fraud there committed. D'Ivernois v. Leavitt, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 63.

Where a mortgage conveys substantially all of debtor's property it is or is not construed to be a general assignment as may or may not be required by the law of the state where the land is. Danner v. Brewer, 69 Ala. 191.

81. Personalty.—Greene v. A. & W. Sprague Mfg. Co., 52 Conn. 330; Tyler v. Strang, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 198; Russell v. Tunno, 11 Rich. (S. C.) 303; Livermore v. Jenckes, 21 How. (U. S.) 126, 16 L. ed. 55; Wickham v. Dillon, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,612, 2 West. L. Month. 511.

Law of domicile controls as to personalty. —"The general rule of inter-state comity is that the law of the domicile of the owner of personal property and choses in action controls in their disposition by sale, devise, or assignment." Benedict v. Steiglitz, 27 Ohio St. 365; Fuller v. Steiglitz, 27 Ohio St. 355, 22 Am. Rep. 312. But in New Jersey it is held, however, that where the contract sought to be enforced is injurious to the state's own interest, or to that of its citizens, or contravenes its policy, this rule will not be enforced. Varnum v. Camp, 13 N. J. L. 326, 25 Am. Dec. 476. And where Massachusetts creditors attached personal property in that state as belonging to a resident of Rhode Island the attachment was held valid, the court not adverting in its opinion to any distinction between land and personalty. Pierce v. O'Brien, 129 Mass. 314, 37 Am. Rep. 360.

c. Rule as to Choses in Action. As to choses in action and credits belonging to the debtor, some courts uphold the assignment in a foreign jurisdiction notwithstanding that the law in which it is made is in conflict with the policy of the forum,[82] while others, in holding the assignment void, make no distinction as regards this species of personal property.[83]

2. NONCONFORMITY TO LAW OF SITUS. Besides the hindrance to a foreign assignment, because of contravention of policy of law, is that of its being executed and acknowledged not in conformity to the law of the foreign state,[84] or of there being no filing or registration,[85] or of the title to personal property not passing except by actual change of possession,[86] but the fact of the deed of assignment containing no schedule of debts and assets, or of it in other respects not complying with local law as to form, is immaterial.[87]

A like ruling was previously made where the attachment was upon shares of stock in a Massachusetts corporation held by a non-resident assignor. Boyd v. Rockport Steam Cotton Mills, 7 Gray (Mass.) 406. Also where debts were attached under trustee process. Faulkner v. Hyman, 142 Mass. 53, 6 N. E. 846.

Vessel on high seas.— Following the principle stated, an assignment, valid where made, will pass title to a vessel at sea, so that on its subsequent arrival at the port of a state where the assignment statute is in conflict with the policy of the law of that state it will be secure from attachment. Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 610, 21 L. ed. 430.

Voluntary distinguished from involuntary assignments.— It has been held that a transfer of personal property will be upheld everywhere in a voluntary, as contradistinguished from a bankrupt or involuntary, assignment. Princeton Mfg. Co. v. White, 68 Ga. 96; Paine v. Lester, 44 Conn. 196, 26 Am. Rep. 442. See also Egbert v. Baker, 58 Conn. 319, 20 Atl. 466.

82. Debt transferable by law of owner's domicile.— Egbert v. Baker, 58 Conn. 319, 20 Atl. 466; Birdseye v. Underhill, 82 Ga. 142, 7 S. E. 863, 14 Am. St. Rep. 142, 2 L. R. A. 99. See also Fuller v. Steiglitz, 27 Ohio St. 355, 22 Am. Rep. 312. In Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 131, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,500, Grier, J., says: "A debt is a mere incorporeal right. It has no situs, and follows the person of the creditor. A voluntary assignment of it by the creditor, which is valid by the law of his domicil, whether such assignment be called legal or equitable, will operate as a transfer of the debt, which should be regarded in all places. In America, bankrupt or involuntary assignments by operation of law, have not been considered as subject to this rule. But I know of no other established exception to the general rule, that a transfer of personal property, valid by the law of the owner's domicil, is valid everywhere."

Foreign corporation — Situs of debt.— Where a Connecticut insurance company was doing business in New York under a statute, there requiring it to appoint an agent upon whom service might be had sufficient to support a personal judgment, an assignment of a debt due a resident of New York protected the corporation in its state where chartered against attachment. Crouse v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 56 Conn. 176, 14 Atl. 82, 7 Am. St. Rep. 298.

83. Boyd v. Rockport Steam Cotton Mills, 7 Gray (Mass.) 406; Ingraham v. Geyer, 13 Mass. 146, 7 Am. Dec. 132.

84. King v. Glass, 73 Iowa 205, 34 N. W. 820; Houston v. Nowland, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 480.

85. Law of situs as to registration.— An assignment which is valid in the state where it is made will not preclude attachment upon personal property in New York by creditors without notice of the assignment, unless it shall have been recorded in the county in which the property is situated. Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 248, 48 Am. Rep. 616.

Reducing to possession.— Former decisions in the New York courts hold that if the assignee had reduced property to possession he can hold same against subsequent attachments. Ockerman v. Cross, 54 N. Y. 29; Howard Nat. Bank v. King, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 346.

86. Title only on possession taken.— In Vermont it was held that the uniform rule being that title to personal property did not change in the absence of a complete change of possession from seller to buyer, a foreign assignment did not prevent attachment as to property situated in Vermont prior to the assignee taking actual possession. Rice v. Courtis, 32 Vt. 460, 78 Am. Dec. 597.

87. Contract element in assignment.— In Birdseye v. Underhill, 82 Ga. 142, 7 S. E. 863, 14 Am. St. Rep. 142, 2 L. R. A. 99, it was held that failure to attach schedule of debts and assets as required by statute of Georgia and not required by statute of New York was not violative of the policy of the Georgia law, as such was not a contract element in the assignment.

Statutory formalities apply to domestic assignment.— The requirements of New York statute, as to the filing of the schedule, assignee's bond, and the recording of the assignment in the county where the debtor resides have no application to f reign assignments, and they are recognized in New York, though there is no schedule, bond, or registration. IX. WHEN FRAUD WILL VITIATE.

A. In General. It has been held that a fraudulent assignment for the benefit of creditors is a nullity and confers no rights on the assignee or the creditors;[88] this, however, is stating the rule too broadly, for numerous cases hold that under certain circumstances the effect of fraud is only to render the assignment voidable[89] or at most to invalidate it in part, not in toto.[90]

B. What Constitutes Fraud — 1. In General. To render an assignment for the benefit of creditors fraudulent it must have been made with intent to defraud or must contain provisions which will void it, although made with an honest ford v. Paine, 32 Vt. 442, 78 Am. See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 456. See also supra, II, G, 3.

Fraudulent and void assignment is not cured where, pending a suit by the other creditors to set it aside, the assignee offers to give up the property on being paid his own claim. Humphries v. Freeman, 22 Tex. 45. So where a partner assigning the firm property for the benefit of creditors fraudulently transferred firm assets in payment of an individual debt, a subsequent attempt at restoration of the proceeds of sale of such property will not validate the assignment. Friedburgher v. Jaberg, 20 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 279.

Fraudulent assignments are not so absolutely void that the parties may not lose their right of complaint by waiver or acquiescence. Blake v. Hubbard, 45 Mich. 1, 7 N. W. 204. On the other hand all persons attempted to be secured in a deed of trust fraudulent on its face, who claim a benefit under it, become particeps criminis and are precluded from such benefit. Palmer v. Giles, 58 N. C. 75.

The fact that the property can be sold to better advantage under the assignment than on execution does not affect the invalidity of the assignment for fraud. Knight v. Packer, 12 N. J. Eq. 214, 72 Am. Dec. 388.

When, upon the face of an assignment, or by proof aliunde, it appears to have been made with intent to hinder or delay creditors, it affords no protection to the assignee against an execution against the debtor. McConnell v. Sherwood, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 67.

As to creditor or creditors defrauded, a fraudulent assignment is void. Vernon v. Upson, 60 Wis. 418, 19 N. W. 400. And a provision in an assignment for the benefit intent.[91] The fraudulent character of an assignment must be ascertained from the instrument itself or from the circumstances attendant upon the transaction.[92]

2. Assignor's Intent — a. In General. The acts and intention of the party executing the deed give it its character,[93] and whether or not a fraudulent intention existed is to be determined by the intent of the assignor and his contemporaneous fraudulent acts are evidence of such intention.[94]

b. To Compel Compromise. There must be no attempt on the part of the assignor to coerce creditors in a voluntary assignment;[95] hence an assignment will of creditors which defrauds a creditor as to a part of his demand is as fatal as if the fraudulent intent covered the whole debt. Vernon v. Upson, 60 Wis. 418, 19 N. W. 400.

The fraud of one or more of the creditors will not defeat a voluntary assignment, or render it ineffectual as to the other creditors. Hardcastle v. Fisher, 24 Mo. 70.

Where, in a suit to set aside an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the deed appears valid upon its face, but evidence aliunde discloses facts which will operate to hinder and delay creditors, this is sufficient to avoid the deed in toto, without proof of an actual covinous intent. Fraudulent intent in respect to creditors means that the debtor's design was to hinder and delay his creditors and this must be established by satisfactory evidence. Nicholson v. Leavitt, 4 Sandf. The fact that an assignment was executed on the same day that a judgment creditor, seeking to set it aside, recovered his verdict, is not conclusive proof that it was made with the design to defeat the recovery. That an assignment was made in anticipation of an attachment does not of itself show an intent to hinder and delay creditors.

c. To Defraud, Hinder, or Delay Creditors. The intent of the assignor in making a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors must be an honest one and free from suspicion.[99] And an assignment made by a debtor with intent on his part, or in pursuance of an intent on his part,[1] to defraud, hinder, and delay his creditors in the collection of their claims is invalid,[2] whether such

13 Eliz. c. 5, the English statute against fraudulent conveyances, has been reënacted in terms or nearly so by the legislatures of several of the states and has been universally adopted in this country as a basis of our jurisprudence on other subjects. 4 Kent Comm. 510; Story Eq. Jur. § 353. This statute, both in England and in the United States, has always received a liberal construction. Cadogan v. Kennett, 2 Cowp. 432; Platt v. Lock, Plowd. 36; U. S. v. Hooe, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 73, 2 L. ed. 370. It is partly remedial and partly penal but notwithstanding this double quality the two opposite principles of construction have been held to apply. "Statutes against frauds are to be liberally and beneficially expounded. This may seem a contradiction to the last rule [that penal statutes are to be construed strictly]; most statutes against frauds being in their consequences penal. But this difference is here to be taken: where the statute acts upon the offender, and inflicts a penalty, as the pillory or a fine, it is then to be taken strictly; but when the statute acts upon the offence, by setting aside the fraudulent transaction, here it is to be construed liberally." 1 Bl. fraudulent intent is of a primary or secondary character.[3] But the hindrance and delay to creditors in the enforcement of their legal remedies, which results necessarily from the making of an assignment, is not considered to be fraudulent or illegal, and in no way impeaches the bona fides of an assignment.[4] The fact that an assignment to certain preferred creditors may hinder and delay other creditors in the enforcement of their demands will not render the deed fraudulent.[5]

The omission of certain personal property from the inventory and schedules, filed at the time of an assignment for benefit of creditors, is not in itself an evidence of fraud sufficient to warrant setting the assignment aside, in the absence of other evidence of fraudulent intent, where the property was in fact turned over to the assignee. 4. Transactions After Assignment. As has been shown, the fraudulent character of the assignment may depend on the circumstances attendant upon the transaction.[15] But as a general rule this does not apply to acts or transactions after the making of the assignment; for as hitherto stated the bona fide character of an assignment for the benefit of creditors cannot be affected by subsequent acts upon the part of either the assignor or the assignee,[16] such acts being at most merely evidentiary on the question of fraudulent intent.[17] Hence it has been generally held that the mere fact of the assignor being left in possession of the assigned property as the agent of the assignee or that after the date of the assignment he was engaged in assisting in the sale or disposal of the property is not conclusive evidence of fraud.[18] Likewise it has been held that the fact that assignor remains in possession of the property conveyed by the deed of assignment is merely a circumstance from which fraud may be inferred;[19] though in some cases such take was made, will not invalidate the assignment); Cox v. Platt, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 126, 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 121 (holding that where an assignor preferred certain debts, believing he had a right to prefer them, it does not constitute fraud for which the assignment will be wholly set aside, but it may be reformed to protect the rights of creditors).

nor fraudulently transferring property before assignment will invalidate the deed of assignment,[24] unless such transfer be a part of the transaction so as to be considered as part of the assignment itself, or unless such transfer constitutes part of a common scheme to defraud.[25] So the withdrawal or transfer of a substantial portion of the assets of a debtor immediately prior to the filing of a general assignment raises a presumption of fraud,[26] and the assignment is invalidated where the withdrawal and the assignment appear to be parts of a common design to defraud.[27]

In Arkansas it is held that the withdrawal of a large sum by a director of an insolvent corporation immediately before an assignment by the latter will not vitiate the assignment where the assignor has not attempted to conceal the transaction. Worthen v. Griffith, 59 Ark. 562, 28 S. W. 286, 43 Am. St. Rep. 50.

In Missouri it is held that the fact that a grantor sold certain of the assigned property and kept the proceeds is not conclusive evidence of fraudulent intent where the right is not reserved, but the deed merely provides that he shall retain possession and sell certain property and reinvest the proceeds. Thompson v. Foerstel, 10 Mo. App. 290.

Accounting to assignee for proceeds.— In Hyman v. Kapp, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 31, 25 N. Y. St. 1034 [affirmed in 125 N. Y. 700, 26 N. E. 752, 34 N. Y. St. 1012], it is held that where transfers of substantial portions of property have been made immediately prior to assignment the same will not defeat the conveyance where the proceeds have been delivered to the assignee.

C. Evidence of Fraud — 1. Presumptions and Burden of Proof. While the fraudulent nature of an assignment for the benefit of creditors may be presumed from the facts and attendant circumstances[28] this presumption of fraud may be rebutted and explained by other facts or circumstances.[29] The absence of fraud and the existence of good faith are presumed in the execution of an assignment for the benefit of creditors fair upon its face, and the burden of showing the presence of fraud or of fraudulent intent is upon him who assails the assignment;[30] but where from an inspection of the instrument itself the assignment is prima facie fraudulent the burden of proof is upon the assignor to show the validity of the deed.[31]

2. Admissibility — a. In General. Fraud in an instrument of assignment must be determined from an inspection of the instrument itself, without regard to extrinsic facts.[32] Fraud in fact, however, arises from the acts and circumstances in connection with the transaction in question, and an assignment though valid on its face is void as being fraudulent in fact if made with a fraudulent intent to hinder, delay, and defraud creditors and which by its terms may operate in aid of such fraudulent intent.[33] Fraud or fraudulent intent such as will vitiate an assignment for the benefit of creditors must be shown by legal and competent evidence.[34]

Mere continuance of the withdrawal of a regular amount which it has been the custom of the debtor for some time to withdraw will not vitiate the assignment. Estes v. Gunter, 122 U. S. 450, 7 S. Ct. 1275, 30 L. ed. 1228.

The transfer of a deposit before assignment of itself does not justify a presumption of fraud. Shultz v. Hoagland, 85 N. Y. 464.

Fraudulent intent in making an assign-

b. Prior Acts, Declarations, and Transactions. Evidence relative to transactions prior to or in contemplation of assignment is admissible as tending to show the fraudulent intention of the assignor in making it.[35] Thus declarations, promises, or statements of the assignor made prior to the assignment for the benefit of his creditors may be admissible in evidence against him to establish the fraudulent character of the assignment;[36] so, misrepresentations by the assignor as to his circumstances is evidence tending to show that the debt was fraudulently contracted[37] and this taken with other facts may be sufficient to invalidate an assignment.[38]

c. Contemporaneous Facts, Statements, and Transactions. Admissions of the assignor, as well as other facts and circumstances, which are contemporaneous with the making of the assignment, may be admitted in evidence as tending to show whether the assignment was fraudulently made or not.[39]

d. Subsequent Acts, Declarations, and Transactions. As a rule evidence of acts, declarations, and transactions subsequent to the assignment is inadmissible to show its invalidity for fraud;[40] but it has been held that under some circumstances and for some purposes such evidence may be admitted.[41] of fraud[44] it has been held that this will not be sufficient unless the presumption is conclusive.[45]

D. Question of Law or of Fact. Whether or not a deed of assignment is fraudulent as a matter of law is a question which the court must determine from an inspection of the record alone and there must appear some provision or stipulation irreconcilable with an honest intent;[46] but the question of fraud in an assignment for the benefit of creditors, where the same is not apparent on the face of the assignment, but is dependent upon external proofs, must be determined by the jury and not by the court.[47]

Prior assignment invalid.—Where a debtor makes an unrecorded assignment of certain of his property in trust for a single creditor, and afterward makes a general assignment of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors, which is recorded, the prior assignment is void as against all creditors save the one named therein, and the property thereby transferred passes to the assignee named in the second assignment. Dec. 425, holding that one who was not in failing circumstances, but who made an assignment of his property to a trustee to pay off certain debts out of the proceeds of the sale of the same, had the right to revoke the assignment after partial assignor,[10] or by the joint act of the assignor and assignee, or by the court on their application.[11] As against subsequent creditors, however, an assignment may be annulled by the parties and the property reconveyed.[12]

3. ATTACKING ASSIGNMENT — a. Who May Attack. A debtor of the assignor cannot attack an assignment,[13] nor an individual creditor of a partner, a partnership assignment.[14] So an officer must show that he is acting under a valid judgment or attachment, when levying on the property covered by an assignment, before he can attack the assignment.[15]

b. Collateral Attack. An assignment valid on its face cannot be attacked collaterally.[16] execution thereof and sell the remainder of the property to the assignee, as against any of his creditors who had not been paid, and who had no notice of such assignment.

Bankruptcy of grantor.—A fraudulent deed of assignment, if the express assent of the creditors is not shown, is a mere power subject, like other powers, to revocation, and is revoked by the bankruptcy of the grantor. Ashley v. Robinson, 29 Ala. 112, 65 Am. Dec. 387.

Subsequent agreement.— An assignment contemplating merely the sale of the property by the assignees, and an application of the proceeds to the payment of the assignor's debts for which the assignees were liable as indorsers, and the return of the surplus is superseded by a subsequent agreement for a continuation of the business of the assignors by the use of the assigned property, together with advances to be made by the assignees. Renunciation by assignee.—An assignment for creditors, once accepted by the assignee, is vested for the benefit of creditors, and a subsequent renunciation does not affect the validity of the conveyance. Handley v. Pfister, 39 Cal. 283, 2 Am. Rep. 449; Bellamy v. Sheriff, Jackson County, 6 Fla. 62; State v. Grover, 37 N. J. L. 174; Seal v. Duffy, 4 Pa. St. 274, 45 Am. Dec. 691. As to right of creditors to attack assignment see infra, XIV, D.

A defect in the notary's certificate of the acknowledgment of an assignee of his acceptance of an assignment for the benefit of creditors can be of no avail to the assignor's debtor in an action against him by such assignee. Jones v. Howard Ins. Co., 10 N. Y. St. 120.

14. Creditor of partner.—Haynes v. Brooks, 8 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 106.

15. Levying officer.— Dawley v. Sherwin, 5 S. D. 594, 59 N. W. 1027. See also Lawton v. Levy, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 197, holding that a creditor who seeks to impeach an assignment on the ground of fraud must first put himself in a situation to complain by becoming a judgment creditor who has exhausted all legal remedies. But see Lincoln v. Cross, 11 Wis. 91, holding that in an action by an assignee for benefit of creditors against an officer who had taken goods from the assignee under an execution on a judgment against the assignor, the officer cannot question the validity of the assignment.

4. Rights of Creditors Under Void or Voidable Assignment. Under a void or voidable assignment, the creditor who is most diligent in securing a lien or claim on the property assigned will have a priority over the others,[17] but such creditor cannot claim under such assignment and also a subsequent judgment.[18]

5. Rights of Non-Assenting Creditors. A creditor who does not assent to the terms of a general assignment has no authority over the proceeds of the debtor's property in the hands of the assignee, except where a surplus may remain after payment of the claims of assenting creditors and the expense of executing the trust.[19]

6. Rights of Purchaser From Assignee. An innocent purchaser of goods sold by the assignee for the benefit of creditors of the assignor will be protected in his purchase, even if the assignment is invalid.[20]

C. Property Conveyed — 1. In General. A valid general assignment for the benefit of creditors passes all the property, real and personal, which the debtor owned at the time of the assignment.[21] Applying this rule, a chose in Assignee as creditor.— If the assignees are themselves bona fide creditors of the assignor to the amount of the property assigned they cannot be held by the trustee process as his garnishees, at the suit of creditors who are not parties to the assignment, although the assignment be constructively fraudulent. Andrews v. Ludlow, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 28; Beach v. Viles, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 675, 7 L. ed. 559. But if the property exceeds in amount the sum owed to the assignee he is liable under trustee process for the surplus. Merrill v. Englesby, 28 Vt. 150; Bishop v. Catlin, 28 Vt. 71. So an assignment made by one member of a partnership for the purpose of depriving the other partner of all power in the disposition of the property and with a view to dissolving the partnership gives to the trustee no lien or security upon the partnership effects for the payment of a debt due to him. As to sale of assigned property, generally, see infra, XII, E.

Assignment fraudulent on face.— A purchaser, for a full consideration, from a trustee who held the real estate, under a deed of trust for creditors, fraudulent on its face, takes no title. Palmer v. Giles, 58 N. C. 75. See also Ward v. Trotter, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 1, holding that a declaration in a deed of trust for the benefit of creditors that the transfer was made "to prevent a sacrifice of the grantor's property" is, as to creditors, a fraudulent purpose, and invalidates the deed as to them; and purchasers under such deed cannot protect themselves on the ground of want of notice, when their conveyances refer to the deed. But see Okie v. Kelly, 12 Pa. St. 323, holding that a sale by assignees, under a deed voidable for a defect apparent on its face, to a bona fide purchaser for value, cannot be avoided by the insolvent trustee of the assignors, where the sale was made before an election by the assignee to disaffirm the assignment.

Taking subject to lien.— Purchasers from an assignee take subject to any lien, though they have not had notice. Vandoren v. Todd, 3 N. J. Eq. 397. See also McConihe v. Fales, 107 N. Y. 404, 14 N. E. 285.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 512.

The benefit of a covenant of a third person to indemnify a grantor of lands against a mortgage executed by him does not pass to the assignee for creditors of such grantor, especially where there has been no breach before the assignment. Ball v. Tennant, 21 Ont. App. 602.

Goods manufactured but not delivered.— Where one contracts with another for a chattel not in existence, but to be made for him, though he pays the whole price in advance, or from time to time as the work progresses, he acquires no title in the chattel until it is finished and delivered to him, as against an assignee in insolvency of the maker: and this, although the seller induced the buyer to pay the contract-price by falsely representing the chattel to be finished. Shaw v. Smith, 48 Conn. 306, 40 Am. Rep. 170. See also Matter of Adams, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 454.

Transfer of note for collection.— A deed of assignment of "all the bills, drafts, promissory notes, negotiable securities, etc.," does not pass a bill or note transferred to the maker of the deed, by indorsement merely, for purposes of collection. Worthington v. Greer, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 741.

22. Chose in action.— Benner v. Kilpatrick, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 532; McMahon v. Sherman, 14 N. Y. St. 637.

23. Claim against government.— Stanford v. Lockwood, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 291; Maitland v. Newton, 3 Leigh (Va.) 714; Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556, 26 L. ed. 229; Milnor v. Metz, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 221, 10 L. ed. 943; Hunter v. U. S., 5 Pet. (U. S.) 173, 8 L. ed. 86 [affirming 5 Mason (U. S.) 62, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,426]. But see Sibbald's Estate, 18 Pa. St. 249, holding that a claim against the United States for wrongfully preventing the owner of land from cutting and removing timber therefrom will not pass by virtue of an assignment under the insolvent law, because it is neither estate, credits, nor effects.

Claim against foreign government.—Under the words in a trust deed, of "all debts due the grantor," a claim which the grantor has on a foreign government for damages for detention of a ship will pass. Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476.

24. Contingent interest or expectancy.— White v. White, 86 Ky. 602, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 757, 7 S. W. 26; Gardner v. Hooper, 3 Gray (Mass.) 398; Robbins' Estate, 199 Pa. St. 500, 49 Atl. 233; Shuman v. Reigart, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 168; Eckert's Estate, 2 Pa. Dist. 65; Stuckert v. Harvey, 1 Miles (Pa.) 247; Churchman's Estate, 20 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 367; Brooks v. Brooks, 12 S. C. 422. Compare Barker's Estate, 32 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 540.

25. Equity of redemption.—Gimble v. Ferguson, 58 Iowa 414, 10 N. W. 789; Van Keuren v. McLaughlin, 21 N. J. Eq. 163. See also Graves v. McFarlane, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 167. But see Bellamy v. Sheriff, Jackson County, 6 Fla. 62, holding that an assignment for the benefit of creditors, conveying "all the future cotton crops" on mortgaged premises, does not pass the equity of redemption in such premises.

26. Fire insurance policy.— Dube v. Mascoma Mut. F. Ins. Co., 64 N. H. 527, 15 Atl.

an inchoate right to a mechanic's lien,[27] a lease,[28] on the election of the assignee to enter under it,[29] right of action,[30] if such right is not personal to the assignor,[31] or a trade-mark or trade-name not personal in character[32] passes to the assignee.

141, 1 L. R. A. 57; Firth v. Preston, 1 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 517. See also Hatfield's Estate, 2 Pa. Dist. 17, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 251, holding that where a mortgagee holds an insurance policy as collateral security, and the building is burned, and on mortgage sale the proceeds satisfy the debt, the proceeds of the insurance belong to the assignee for creditors of the mortgagor.

Accident insurance policy.— Where an accident policy is renewable yearly so long as the assured pays the specified premium in advance and the insurance company consents to receive it, a new contract arises upon the payment of each premium, and the amount payable under it on the death of the assured in the current year for which a premium has been paid is not affected by an assignment for creditors made in any previous year and not including after-acquired property. Stokell v. Heywood, [1897] 1 Ch. 459.

Life insurance policy.— The question whether a life insurance policy passes under an assignment for the benefit of creditors is to be determined from the language of the deed and the intention of the assignor in the procurement of the policy. Larue v. Larue, 96 Ky. 326, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 641, 28 S. W. 790; Rhode Island Nat. Bank v. Chase, 16 R. I. 37, 12 Atl. 233. See also Shenk v. Franke, 10 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 146, holding that a policy of life insurance, payable to the "heirs, executors, administrators or assignee" of the insured, passes, as a chose in action, to his assignee for the benefit of creditors. But see Barbour v. Larue, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 94, 51 S. W. 5, holding that where a policy of life insurance has no surrender or pecuniary value at the date of the assignment, it does not pass. See also Burnsides v. National Bank, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 880, 64 S. W. 520.

27. Mechanic's lien.— Curtis v. Broadwell, 66 Iowa 662, 24 N. W. 265; German Bank v. Schloth, 59 Iowa 316, 13 N. W. 314; Cody v. Vaughan, 53 Mo. App. 169; Bristol Iron, etc., Co. v. Thomas, 93 Va. 396, 25 S. E. 110.

28. Lease.— Smith v. Ingram, 90 Ala. 529, 8 So. 144; Horwitz v. Davis, 16 Md. 313; Crouse v. Frothingham, 97 N. Y. 105; Astor v. Lent, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 612. See also infra, XII, D, 1.

Rents before sale.—Where land is conveyed in trust for the benefit of creditors, with a power to sell, the rents before sale belong to the grantor, unless the deed otherwise specifies. Litterer v. Berry, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 193.

Right of entry.—An assignment which conveys all the real estate of the grantor in a specified town, and all leases and reservations and rents thereof issuing therefrom, together with all debts due for rents of land in such town, passes to the assignee the covenants, conditions, or right of entry contained in a lease in fee. Main v. Green, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 448.

29. Election of assignee to enter.—Dorrance v. Jones, 27 Ala. 630; Smith v. Goodman, 149 Ill. 75, 36 N. E. 621; Reynolds v. Fuller, 64 Ill. App. 134; Horwitz v. Davis, 16 Md. 313; Carter v. Hammett, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Martin v. Black, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 641, 38 Am. Dec. 574.

30. Right of action.— Iowa.— Rumsey v. Robinson, 58 Iowa 225, 12 N. W. 243.

Wisconsin.— J. S. Keator Lumber Co. v. St. Croix Boom Corp., 72 Wis. 62, 38 N. W. 529, 7 Am. St. Rep. 837.

The rights of action transferred to an assignee are rights of action founded upon beneficial contracts made with the bankrupt, where the pecuniary loss is the substantial and primary cause of action, and for injuries affecting his property, so far as they do not involve a claim for personal damages. Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 343.

A right of action to recover a penalty for usury passes to the assignee. Henderson Nat. Bank v. Alves, 91 Ky. 142, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 722, 15 S. W. 132; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 522. But see Osborn v. Athens First Nat. Bank, 175 Pa. St. 494, 34 Atl. 858, 38 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 341, holding that the right of action for the penalty is personal to the assignor.

31. Right of action personal to assignor. — Connecticut.— Stanly v. Duhurst, 2 Root (Conn.) 52, action founded on tort.

But property acquired by a debtor after making an assignment for the benefit of creditors does not pass.[33]

2. ASSIGNMENT BY PARTNERSHIP OR PARTNER. Whether an assignment by a firm carries only firm property, or includes separate property of the partners, or whether an assignment by an individual includes his interest in the assets of a firm in which he is a partner is a question of intention to be ascertained from the deed itself.[34] holding that a general assignment is inoperative in respect to passing a right to a trade-mark, if the right was not inventoried by the trustee or appraisers and never claimed by the trustee or the creditors of the insolvent, nor in any manner disposed of under the assignment. See also Iowa Seed Co. v. Dorr, 70 Iowa 481, 30 N. W. 866, 59 Am. Rep. 446, holding that a right to the exclusive use of the name of a partnership, consisting of the individual name of one partner, with the addition "& Co.," under which the firm had acquired an extensive business, does not pass by an assignment for creditors. Compare Bellows v. Bellows, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 482, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 853.

Letters patent will pass to an assignee though not subject to be seized on execution. Barton v. White, 144 Mass. 281, 10 N. E. 840, 59 Am. Rep. 84.

33. Property subsequently acquired.—Hall v. Gill, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 325; Lorenz v. Orlady, 87 Pa. St. 226. See also Crow v. Colton, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 52, holding that a general assignment for the benefit of creditors does not transfer to the assignee a claim of the assignor for services rendered after the date of the assignment but before its delivery.

Remission of forfeiture.— The owner of property forfeited to the government is divested of title thereto, and if, after he has made an assignment for creditors, part of the property is remitted, it does not pass to the assignee. Ward v. Webster, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 182.

Subsequent judgment.— Where a debtor, pending an action by him, makes an assignment for the benefit of creditors, a judgment subsequently rendered in his favor vests in the assignee. Mitchell v. Magowan, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 685.

Subsequent rents.—Where a landlord makes an assignment it carries with it the right to rents not then accrued. Williamson v. Richardson, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 596; Neal v. Cornwall, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 755.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 548.

Dissolution of partnership.— Where there has been a dissolution of a firm and a division of its property among the partners, an assignment for creditors by either of the former partners individually vests the title to the property, as divided, in his assignee, in the same manner and to the same extent as it would the title to any other individual property covered by the assignment. McKinney v. Baker, 9 Oreg. 74.

Lands bought and paid for by a partnership, the deeds for which, for convenience, were taken in the name of one partner, pass under an assignment by all the partners, for benefit of creditors, of all the copartnership estate, property, assets, and effects, with a schedule of assets attached including such lands. Paxson v. Brown, 61 Fed. 874, 27

3. Check Drawn But Not Presented Till After Assignment. The authorities are in conflict as to the rights of the holder of a check drawn by the assignor before, but not presented for payment until after, the assignment. One line of cases protects such holder.[35] The other line gives him no greater rights than those of a general creditor.[36]

4. Goods Purchased on Credit — a. In General. The title to goods purchased on credit passes to the assignee of the vendee,[37] except where the purchase was induced by fraud. In such case the assignee takes subject to the vendor's right of recovery.[38]

b. Conditional Sale. An assignee for creditors cannot claim possession of

Where a debtor to secure the performance of an agreement by him for an extension by his creditors conveys land, intending thereby to secure present and future creditors, and afterward makes a general assignment, the

6. PROPERTY OF THIRD PERSON — a. In General. Property of a third person in the hands of an assignor,[42] or property held by an assignor in trust for a third person[43] does not pass to an assignee.

b. Consigned Goods. A factor holds goods consigned to him or the proceeds thereof, in trust, and under his assignment for the benefit of creditors they do not pass to his assignee, but when identified may be recovered by the consignor.[44] court, at the instance of one who became a creditor after the execution of the deed, will adjudge the title of the land in the trustee for the benefit of all the creditors. Merwin v. Richardson, 52 Conn. 223.

42. Property of third person.— Alabama. —See Casey v. Pratt, 8 Ala. 238, holding that where certain property was held as collateral security by an assignor and the debt for which the security was held has been paid no interest in the property so held passes to the assignee.

Assignees, having notice of the claim of a third person as the equitable owner of part of property assigned, are liable to account to him for his share of the proceeds thereof. Plumkett v. Carew, 1 Hill Eq. (S. C.) 169.

Assignment by assignee.— A conveyance of all his property to trustees by the trustee named in a voluntary assignment for creditors does not embrace or transfer the property assigned. Ballou's Petition, 11 R. I. 359. And neither his assignee nor his personal representative is entitled to a debt due to the original bankrupt, but it must go to a new assignee of the original bankrupt. Merrick's Estate, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 9. But where an assignee for creditors has converted the trust estate, and then made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and it does not appear that the proceeds of the converted property came into the hands of the last assignee, or that they can be identified in his hands, the beneficiaries of the converted estate are remitted to the rights which belong to general creditors. Lien of factor.— Where by agreement a factor has a lien on goods, he can deliver the lien to his creditors and the goods to his assignee "solely as security to the extent of his lien." Terry v. Bamberger, 44 Conn. 558.

Payment of proceeds.— One who permits an assignee to consider him as an ordinary creditor cannot, after the proceeds of the goods assigned have been paid out in good faith by the assignee in the course of his administration of the trust, claim the right to follow the proceeds on the ground that specific goods were his, and that as to such goods the assignor was a factor. Matter of Kobbe, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 42.

Stoppage in transitu.— When the consignee becomes insolvent, the consignor has the right to stop goods in transitu. Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 467.

7. Property Omitted From Deed or Schedule. Where a debtor assumes on the face of his deed to act under a statute which requires all property to be conveyed, or recites an intention to convey his whole property, all his property passes whether mentioned in the deed or schedule or not.[45]

D. Title Acquired by Assignee — 1. In General. An assignment for the benefit of creditors passes the title, legal and equitable, to the assignee; and as against the assignee and those holding under him the debtor has no interest in the property, legal or equitable, which he can convey or encumber.[46] An assignee See, generally, Recoupment, Set-Off, and Counterclaim; and 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 559.

Assignment giving preference.— Where a surety assents to a deed of trust which gives him a preference over other sureties, he will not be permitted to diminish the fund, which in part consisted of a debt due by himself to the maker of the deed, by setting it off with other liabilities to him, not secured by the deed. Miller v. Cherry, 56 N. C. 24.

The maker of a note to an individual partner cannot, as against an innocent assignee thereof, set off his claim against the firm, though the latter was insolvent before the maker received notice of the assignment, he having accepted a trust deed conveying all the firm property to secure firm debts. Duncan v. Monserratt, 10 B Mon. (Ky.) 93.

Where money is placed by a corporation in the hands of its general manager, as trustee, for safe-keeping, and to be disbursed in its business, such trustee cannot offset a debt due to him by the corporation against the moneys in his hands, after a voluntary assignment by the corporation for the benefit of creditors. Detroit First Nat. Bank v. E. T. Barnum Wire, etc., Works, 58 Mich. 124, 24 N. W. 543, 25 N. W. 202, 55 Am. Rep. 660.

E. Time of Taking Effect. In the absence of statutory regulation,[53] an assignment for the benefit of creditors usually takes effect upon its execution and delivery.[54]

F. Effect on Pending Actions. An assignment for the benefit of creditors by a party to a pending action does not abate such action,[55] nor oust the court of

A claim acquired after the assignment cannot be set off against the assignee. Brown v. Brittain, 84 N. C. 552; Collins v. McKee, (Pa. 1886) 6 Atl. 396; Exchange Bank v. Knox, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 739.

53. In California it has been held that an assignee takes possession of the property by relation from the time of the filing of the schedule and petition. Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47, 73 Am. Dec. 610.

In Kansas a deed of assignment does not become operative until a verified schedule of the assignor's liabilities has been filed with the clerk of the district court. Keith v. Hamblin, 7 Kan. App. 456, 53 Pac. 531.

Me. St. (1836), c. 240, concerning assignments, protects property assigned from attachment from the time when the assignment is made and before notice is given, if notice be afterward given according to the requirements of the statute. Fiske v. Carr, 20 Me. 301.

In Missouri it has been held that an assignment takes effect from the day it is placed on record, although the assignee refuses the trust. Rendlemann v. Willard, 15 Mo. App. 375.

In Ohio a deed of assignment takes effect from the time of its delivery to the probate judge. Eggleston v. Harrison, 61 Ohio St. 397, 55 N. E. 993; Betz v. Snyder, 48 Ohio St. 492, 28 N. See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 572.

Acceptance by creditors.— An assignment for creditors who shall accept its terms and release the assignor is operative from acceptance. Lippincott v. Barker, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 174, 4 Am. Dec. 433.

Delivery by the assignor to his attorney for recording gives the assignment effect as against the assignor and those claiming under him. Wright's Estate, 182 Pa. St. 90, 38 Atl. 151.

Ratification by partner.— Where an assignee of a firm took possession of the property under a general assignment executed by one partner only, and valid only from its ratification by his copartner, his rights are inferior to those of a creditor who, prior to the ratification, attached by garnishment the property in his possession. Mills v. Miller, 109 Iowa 688, 81 N. W. 169.

Subsequent indorsement.— Where a general assignment of property was made, and afterward an agreement was indorsed thereon, with consent of all then concerned, according to the original intention, giving priority to a large debt, the assignment was held to take effect from the first date. Fox v. Adams, 5 Me. 245.

55. Abatement of action.— California.— Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264, 13 Pac. 661, holding that when one of several plaintiffs in an action becomes insolvent his assignee need not be substituted as a party.

Connecticut.—Judson v. Metropolitan Washing Mach. Co., 33 Conn. 467, holding that the trustee should be brought in as a party.

Indiana.— Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Nuzum, 60 Ind. 533.

Kentucky.—Jewel v. Porter, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 162, 11 S. W. 717, holding that the substitution of plaintiff's assignee for benefit of creditors as plaintiff does not require notice to defendant.

Michigan.— Bedford v. Penney, 65 Mich. 667, 32 N. W. 888.

New York.—Lawson v. Woodstock, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 352, holding that where plaintiff, pending the action, makes a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, the action may be continued in plaintiff's name.

Ohio.— See Collier v. Bickley, 33 Ohio St. 523.

Pennsylvania.— Thomson v. Dougherty, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 448.

South Carolina.— Cleverly v. McCullough, 6 Rich. (S. C.) 517, holding that the assignee jurisdiction to proceed to trial and judgment the same as if no assignment had been made.[56]

G. Effect on Proceedings After Assignment — 1. Right to Sue Assignor. The right of a creditor to maintain an action against his debtor to recover a personal judgment is not affected by the latter's voluntary assignment of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors;[57] nor is such creditor's right to proceed to judgment defeated by the fact that he has filed his claim with the debtor's assignee.[58] But the lien of a judgment against an assignor obtained after the trustee took possession under the deed of trust is subsequent to that of creditors under the deed.[59]

2. Right to Levy on Assigned Property. Property in the hands of an assignee under a valid assignment for the benefit of creditors is not subject to attachment, execution, or garnishment at the instance of a creditor of the assignor.[60] The may prosecute the action, but will be required to suggest the assignment on the record and enter into a written consent to pay the costs if the action should fail.

Dec. 608, holding that the lapse of seventeen years without corroborating circumstances is too short a time to raise a legal presumption that the objects of an assignment have either been accomplished or abandoned.

Discontinuance of proceedings.— A statute which provides that proceedings under the assignment law may be discontinued upon the written assent of the debtor and a majority of his creditors, in which case all parties shall be restored to the same rights and duties existing at the date of the assignment, except so far as such estate shall have been already administered and disposed of, does not authorize the court, upon the assent of the debtor and a majority of the creditors, to order the proceedings discontinued, and the estate transferred to a third person absolutely. Stoddard v. Gilbert, 163 Ill. 131, 45 N. E. 542; Terhune v. Kean, 155 Ill. 506, 40 N. E. 481; Howe v. Warren, 154 Ill. 227, 40 N. E. 472.

Discovery of assets after close of estate.— The fact that an assignee closes the estate and is discharged does not reinvest the assignor with the title to assigned property, and the assignee may have the estate opened and administer assets discovered after his discharge as against execution creditors who have levied thereon, or persons to whom the assignor has transferred them. St. George's Church Soc. v. Branch, 120 Mo. 226, 25 S. W. 218.

Reconveyance to assignor.— The assignee cannot reconvey the assigned property to the assignor before the payment of all the debts (Briggs v. Davis, 20 N. Y. 15, 75 Am. Dec. 363; Matter of Leipziger, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 78; Matter of Backer, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 379; Truby's Appeal, (Pa. 1885) 5 Atl. 664) unless authorized by statute (Golden's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 581, 1 Atl. 660) or by order of court with the consent of all the parties (Garver v. Tisinger, 46 Ohio St. 56, 18 N. E. 491).

As to abatement of action by death of party, generally, see Abatement and Revival, III [1 Cyc. 47].

Reassignment after death of assignor.— The assignee of a bankrupt after the death of the latter reassigned the property to the administrator of the bankrupt, by whom it was accepted. It was held that such reassignment discharged the assignee, though in terms it was made to the use of the administrator in his individual capacity. Dawes v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337, 6 Am. Dec. 72.

An attaching creditor is entitled to recover any surplus over the amount of the debts of those creditors who had become parties to the assignment before service on the assignee and thus defeat the claim of a creditor who assented and became a party thereafter. Leeds v. Sayward, 6 N. H. 83.

Burden of showing payment.— Where a creditor issues an attachment against property which has been assigned for the benefit of certain creditors under a valid assignment, and claims that such creditors have been paid, whereby the property has reverted to the assignor, the burden is on the attaching creditor to show such payment before he can establish his attachment as against the assignee. Creditors who have received a percentage of their claim under an assignment made by their debtor may still proceed by action against the assignor, and in a proper case may attach any of his goods which are not transferred by the assignment. Estabrook v. Messersmith, 18 Wis. 545.

A creditor may contest the debtor's right to a homestead attempted to be reserved in a deed of assignment, provided he does so before he has accepted any of the benefits of the assignment. Creager v. Creager, 87 Ky. 449, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 424, 9 S. W. 380. Where creditors refuse to accept the provisions of the assignment and look to the homestead alone, which as to them is not exempt, it is proper to ascertain what the pro rata would have been in the fund arising from the sale of the unexempted property, and after deducting that sum from their debts to subject the homestead to the payment of the balance. Simmons v. Phelps, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 417.

Where an assignee did not claim certain property, but allowed it to remain under the control of the assignor, an order of the court, in supplementary proceedings, authorizing a receiver of the assignor to take possession thereof, was proper. Eastern Nat. Bank v. Hulshizer, 2 N. Y. St. 115.

75. Execution of bond.— Alabama.— Andrews v. Ford, 106 Ala. 173, 17 So. 446.

Connecticut.— Clark v. Mix, 15 Conn. 152.

Michigan.— McCuaig v. City Sav. Bank, 111 Mich. 356, 69 N. W. 500 (holding that the filing of a bond signed by a corporation of another state which has not been authorized to become surety on undertakings does not qualify the assignee to sue for assets of his assignor); Munson v. Ellis, 58 Mich. 331, 25 N. W. 305 (amount of bond).

New Mexico.— Lyndonville Nat. Bank v. Folson, 7 N. M. 611, 38 Pac. 253, amount of bond.

New York.— People v. White, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 289, bond may be joint and several.

Ohio.— Walsh v. Miller, 51 Ohio St. 462, 38 N. E. 381.

filing,[76] and approval of the bond[77] should be complied with, but it seems that substantial compliance may suffice.

2. Failure to Qualify. The failure of the assignee named in an assignment for the benefit of creditors to qualify or to act does not defeat the assignment,[78]

Rhode Island.— Earle v. Millard, 2 R. I. 517, amount of bond.

Wisconsin.— Stannard v. Youmans, 100 Wis. 275, 75 N. W. 1002 (holding that where the penal sum was inadvertently omitted from an assignee's bond, the assignment was void as to creditors, but operated to transfer the title to the property to the assignee as between the parties); Rollins v. Humphrey, 98 Wis. 66, 73 N. W. 331 (holding that the fact that the signature of one of the sureties and his name in the body of the bond had been erased by some unknown and unauthorized person, after the bond had been filed in the clerk's office, did not call for explanation before the bond could be admitted in evidence); John V. Farwell Co. v. Arthur, 93 Wis. 56, 67 N. W. 20; Case v. James, 90 Wis. 320, 63 N. W. 237; McNair v. Reevey, 62 Wis. 167, 22 N. W. 339; Bates v. Simmons, 62 Wis. 69, 22 N. W. 443, 45 Wis. 600; Smith v. McCulloch, 42 Wis. 564; Churchill v. Whipple, 41 Wis. 611 [distinguishing Hutchinson v. Brown, 33 Wis. 465].

United States.— Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Pace, 80 Fed. 862, 52 U. S. App. 194, 26 C. C. A. 198, holding that a bond executed by the principal who becomes liable for the full amount, and by several sureties who become liable in smaller sums aggregating the whole amount of the bond is sufficient.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 678.

Where the affidavit of a surety on the bond of an assignee for the benefit of creditors fails to show that he is a freeholder of the state, as required by statute, the defect cannot be amended so as to validate the assignment as against rights which attach before the amendment is made. Auley v. Osterman, 65 Wis. 118, 25 N. W. 657, 26 N. W. 568.

76. Filing and recording.— Tait v. Carey, (Indian Terr. 1899) 49 S. W. 50 (as to place of filing for record); Stiefel v. Barton, 73 Md. 408, 21 Atl. 63 (as to place of recording); McCuaig v. City Sav. Bank, 111 Mich. 356, 69 N. W. 500 (holding that assignee cannot sue as such unless he has filed a bond within ten days after the assignment, as required by statute); Perkins v. Zarracher, 32 Minn. 71, 19 N. W. 385 (time of filing); Bostwick v. Burnett, 74 N. Y. 317 (time of filing); Produce Bank v. Baldwin, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 277 (place of filing); Hilliard v. Enders, 196 Pa. St. 587, 46 Atl. 839 (as to time of filing and presumptions relating thereto); Heckman v. Messinger, 49 Pa. St. 465 (time of filing); Farwell v. Webster, 71 Wis. 485, 37 N. W. 437 (time of filing).

77. Approval.— The statutes of the several states designate who is to approve the bond. By statute in some states no title passes under the assignment until the bond is approved. People v. Colerick, 67 Mich. 362, 34 N. W. 683; Munson v. Ellis, 58 Mich. 331, 23 N. W. 305; Ingram v. Conway, 36 Minn. 129, 30 N. W. 447; Brahmstadt v. McWhirter, 9 Nebr. 6, 2 N. W. 232, 31 Am. Rep. 396; Thrasher v. Bentley, 59 N. Y. 649, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 39; Hedges v. Bungay, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 594, 6 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 304; In re Robinson, 10 Daly (N. W. 917. But compare Mears v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 223. See also, generally, list of statutes cited supra, note 6, p. 120.

Sufficiency of approval.—Noyes v. Guy, 2 Indian Terr. 205, 48 S. W. 1056 (holding that the acceptance and filing of a bond of an assignee for creditors by the officer whose duty it is to approve it is equivalent to an approval); Miller v. Matthews, 87 Md. 464, 40 Atl. 176 (holding that a statute requiring a trustee for benefit of creditors to give a bond, with "sureties," to be approved by the clerk, is complied with when a company which is authorized by its charter granted by the legislature to become "sole surety" in all cases where by law two or more sureties are required is approved as surety by the proper officer); Thomas Mfg. Co. v. Drew, 69 Minn. 69, 71 N. W. 921 (holding that when the bond of an assignee for the benefit of creditors has been approved by the court, and filed within the period prescribed by statute, it is immaterial, in so far as the assignee's rights are concerned, that the bond had not been approved or filed when an action in replevin is commenced against him as such assignee); Charles Baumbach Co. v. Singer, 86 Wis. 329, 56 N. W. 873; Shakman v. Schlueter, 77 Wis. 402, 46 N. W. 542; Fuhrman v. Jones, 68 Wis. 497, 32 N. W. 547; Lindsay v. Guy, 57 Wis. 200, 15 N. W. 181; Hutchinson v. Brown, 33 Wis. 465; Noyes v. Neel, 100 Fed. 555, 40 C. C. A. 539 (holding that the omission of the clerk of the United States court for the Indian Territory to indorse his approval upon the bond of an assignee under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, as required by Mansf. Dig. Ark. § 305, will not invalidate the assignment, in the absence of a statute making such indorsement the sole evidence of approval, where it appears that the bond has been approved by the judge, and, because of such approval, accepted by the clerk as a good bond, and filed by him).

78. Does not defeat assignment.—Moore v. Goodbar, 66 Ark. 161, 49 S. W. 571; Abbott v. Chaffee, 83 Mich. 256, 47 N. W. 216; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Mosser, 57 Mich. 386, for the court in such a contingency will appoint another person to act in his stead.[79]

C. Death, Resignation, or Removal. The death or resignation of the assignee does not affect the assignment.[80] An assignee for the benefit of creditors (Pa.) 140; Wait v. Zeigler, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 82, 29 S. W. 60. But compare Brennan v. Willson, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 59 [affirmed in 71 N. Y. 502], where one of several assignees refused to qualify.

The assignee may take possession of the assigned property before giving bond. Easton v. Durland's Riding Academy Co., 7 N. Y. App. Div. 288, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 283. But in Arkansas, though the deed of assignment vests the legal title in the assignee, yet by statute, before he is entitled to take possession, sell, or in any way control or manage the property assigned, he is obliged to file a schedule and execute the bond required. Thatcher v. Franklin, 37 Ark. 64. See also supra, note 95, p. 146.

79. Court will appoint another assignee.— Holtoquist v. Clark, 59 Minn. 59, 60 N. W. 1077; Golden's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 581, 1 Atl. 660; Read v. Robinson, 6 Watts & S. S. App. 54, 19 C. C. A. 675.

"The failure to give the bond did not affect the validity of the deed. The execution and delivery of the deed vested the title to the property in the assignee. A failure on the part of the assignor to file an inventory, or a failure to record the deed, renders the assignment void as 'against creditors of the assignor, and against purchasers and encumbrancers in good faith and for value,' and until the inventory and affidavit have been filed, and the assignee has given the required bond, such assignee has no authority to dispose of the estate or convert it to the purposes of the trust. . . . But the title passes as between the assignor and assignee, and the assignment is irrevocable."

Arkansas.— Falconer v. Hunt, 39 Ark. 68; Thatcher v. Franklin, 37 Ark. 64. And see Ex p. Conway, 4 Ark. 302, where some of the assignees failed to qualify.

California.— Wilhoit v. Lyons, 98 Cal. 409, 33 Pac. 325; Bryant v. Langford, 80 Cal. 542, 22 Pac. 219.

Indian Territory.—Where attaching creditors, disputing the validity of their debtor's assignment, agree to the appointment of the assignee named therein as receiver of the attached property, and he is appointed, and gives a bond as receiver, the assignee's bond and inventory need not be filed. Courts have power to appoint a successor though there is no statute expressly authorizing such appointment. Matter of Kingsbury, 51 Mich. 623, 17 N. W. 208; Rogers v. Pell, 166 N. Y. 565, 60 N. E. 265 (under statute authorizing county court to appoint substituted assignee); In re Ballou, 11 R. I. 359; Blum v. Welborne, 58 Tex. 157. See also Birmingham Drug Co. v. Freeman, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 451, 39 S. W. 626. Compare McFerron v. Davis, 70 Ga. 661, holding that where assignee resigns, it is proper to appoint a receiver. In McDougald v. Carey, 38 Ala. 534, the rule in Alabama is explained and distinguished from the common-law rule in reference to the succession of trust estates upon death of sole or surviving trustee.

Acceptance by the court of the resignation of an assignee pending proceedings for his removal upon the application of creditors is in effect a removal, and is proper. State v. Johnson, 105 Wis. 164, 81 N. W. 146, 83 N. W. 320.

Administrator of a deceased assignee does not succeed to the title and duties of the assignee, but succeeds only to his individual estate, since the general assignment statute provides for the appointment of a successor to the assignee. For any of the following causes an assignee may be removed by proper legal proceedings:

Dilatoriness. Tomkins v. Sheehan, 6 N. Y. App. Div. 76, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 466.

Failure to file inventory and schedule. See Barbour v. Everson, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 366; Redecker v. Bowen, 15 R. I. 52, 23 Atl. 62. But compare Drain v. Mickel, 8 Iowa 438; Case v. Mason, 15 R. I. 51, 23 Atl. 48.

Fraud. Matter of Lamoree, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Brown v. Armstrong, 18 R. I. 537, 30 Atl. 461. But an assignee will not be removed at the suit of creditors because he suffered judgment on a valid claim against the estate, where no fraud or fraudulent intent was shown. Markell v. Hill, 34 Misc. (N. Y.) 133, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 537.

Gross misconduct. Clark v. Stanton, 24 Minn. 232; Havens v. Sibbald, (N. J. 1898) 41 Atl. 371. See also In re Mast, 58 Minn. 313, 59 N. W. 1044; In re Mayer, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 143. But the court will not remove an assignee for alleged misconduct resulting from a mere misunderstanding of his duty, where the safety of the property is not imperiled. Putnam v. Timothy Dry-Goods, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 454.

Incompetency. Matter of Cohn, 78 N. Y. 248; Matter of Kaughran, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 526; Weiskettle's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 522.

An assignee cannot litigate the question of his displacement. Campbell v. Miner, 4 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 96.

Proceedings to remove.— The remedy given by Wis. Rev. Stat. § 1702, providing that the circuit court having jurisdiction of a voluntary assignment may on hearing remove any assignee for incompetency or for misapplication of the estate and appoint another in his stead is available only to a person who is a party to the assignment. Such remedy is not exclusive, and a bill in equity will lie to remove an assignee. Morgan v. South Milwaukee Lake View Co., 100 Wis. 465, 76 N. W. 354. Employment of counsel. — Where difficult questions arise an assignee may lawfully employ counsel to advise him in relation to the administration of the estate. Matter of Rauth, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 52.

87. Delegation of power. — Small v. Ludlow, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 189, holding that assignees in trust for the benefit of creditors cannot assign a claim due to them, as trus-

2. Compromise of Claims. An assignee may compromise claims when it is for the best interests of the estate that it should be done, though such power is not specifically given by the instrument of assignment.[88]

B. Supervisory Jurisdiction of Courts. Statutes in most states vest supervisory jurisdiction over assignments in designated courts.[89] Such statutes, however, do not as a rule deprive a court of equity or other court of competent jurisdiction of control over matters relating to the administration of the estate.[90] tees, to a third person to collect the claim, and appropriate the proceeds in accordance with the provisions of the original assignment.

Conveyance by attorney.— An assignee for the benefit of creditors may convey land by attorney, though there be no special authority given in the assignment to delegate his power. Blight v. Schenck, 10 Pa. St. 285, 51 Am. Dec. 478.

88. Mitchell v. Stoddard County Bank, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 721, 58 S. W. 605; Anonymous v. Gelpcke, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 245. See also Matter of Potter, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 133, holding that an assignee for creditors may make a settlement with one of them by paying him a certain percentage, and take an assignment of the balance, where such assignment is taken for the benefit of the original assignor and his estate, and not for the benefit of the assignee. And see Locheimer v. Weil, 113 N. C. 181, 18 S. E. 103, 23 L. R. A. 578.

Consent of beneficiaries.—If the deed of assignment confers no authority on the trustee to compromise the debts he cannot compromise them without the consent of the beneficiaries. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

Consent of court.— An assignee may compromise a claim on consent of court. Coyne v. Weaver, 84 N. Y. 386; Matter of Ransom, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 89. Where an action by an assignee for creditors against a sheriff for property taken on attachment by creditors is pending, leave for the assignee to accept an offer of compromise made by such creditors will be denied where the compromise is opposed generally on the part of preferred creditors, and their testimony will be available for the assignee on the trial of the pending action. Matter of Goldschmidt, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 38. On an application by an assignee for leave to compromise a claim due the estate the court may, in its discretion, require notice to be given the creditors, so that they may be heard. Maine.—Although Me. Rev. Stat. c. 70, § 13, declares that "the supreme judicial court has full equity jurisdiction in all insolvency matters," such jurisdiction is supervisory, rather than concurrent with the insolvent court; and a bill in equity to compel an assignee to order and pay a dividend will not be sustained when an application therefor has not first been made by the creditors to the court having original jurisdiction of the Orders of the court as to the distribution of the assigned property must be obeyed by the assignee.[91]

C. Discovery and Collection of Assets — 1. Right to Possession — a. In General. The assignee is entitled to the possession of the assigned property, and it is his duty to take immediate possession.[92] The personal property must be brought under his actual control, but the real property comes into his possession by the execution and delivery of the assignment.[93]

b. Recovery of Possession. An assignee for the benefit of creditors may sue to recover the assigned property or to release it from an attachment levied at the instance of a creditor.[94] insolvent proceeding. Bird v. Cleveland, 78 Me. 524, 7 Atl. 389.

Mississippi.—Where the assignee takes the steps necessary to invest the court with jurisdiction over the assigned estate, it draws to it jurisdiction of all questions relating to liens thereon, and the rights of attaching creditors must be submitted to its adjudication. D. Custody and Management of Assets — 1. ACCEPTANCE OF LEASE. An assignment of all a lessee's property for the benefit of creditors does not make the assignee an assignee of the lease, unless he expressly accepts it or so acts that his conduct will be treated as an adoption of it.[98] If he continues to occupy the leased premises while administering the estate he is liable for rent.[99]

2. CONTINUANCE OF BUSINESS. As the purpose of an assignment is to convert the assigned estate into cash and divide the same among the creditors, an assignee

Personal liability.— An assignee for the benefit of creditors does not become personally liable for the rent of a building leased to his assignor by continuing in possession in the conduct of the business of his trust. White v. Thomas, 75 Mo. 454; Walton v. Stafford, 14 N. Y. App. Div. 310, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 1049. So an assignee for creditors who takes possession of premises leased by his assignor under an agreement between creditors, in which the owner of the premises joined, by the terms of which rent then due was to be deemed a claim to be paid pro rata under an assignment to be made, is not personally liable for such rent as assignee of the lease, though the assignment made in pursuance of the agreement was afterward set aside. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 75 N. Y. 589. And where a lessee assigned his lease for the benefit of his creditors, and the assignees leased the premises for the best price they could obtain, and promptly paid to the landlord all that they received, which he accepted without any

as a general rule has no right to continue the assignor's business.[1] An assignee may, however, work up the stock on hand, if it is manifest that it will be for the benefit of the creditors, as where the stock is of perishable articles, or where it would be of but little or no value unless worked up and prepared for market.[2]

3. Lease of Assigned Realty. A voluntary assignment does not impose upon the assignee any duty to let the real estate.[3]

E. Sale of Property — 1. Duty to Sell. It is the duty of the assignee to sell the assigned property.[4]

2. Authority to Sell. An assignee may sell the assigned property even though the deed of assignment does not expressly confer on him such authority.[5]

3. Order of Court. It is the usual practice for an assignee to apply to a court having jurisdiction over the assigned estate for permission to sell.[6] A sale of Consent of creditors.— An assignee under a general assignment for benefit of creditors, in order to replenish a stock of merchandise assigned and to sell it to better advantage, with consent of all creditors bought other goods which he commingled with the original stock and the proceeds were applied indiscriminately toward the payment of the debts of the assignor and the expenses of the assignment, including the debts contracted for such new goods. It was held that at least as against the creditors assenting, the goods so purchased became a part of the trust property as fully as that which was assigned. Noyes v. Beaupre, 32 Minn. 496, 21 N. W. 728. See also Hooven, etc., Co. v. Burdette, 51 Ill. App. 115, holding that where the assignee of an insolvent estate continued business under orders of the court, which were known and acquiesced in by all the lienholders and other creditors, the presumption is that the business was continued by the assignee under said orders with their consent and approval.

the assigned property is good, however, though it is made without an order of court.[7]

4. Manner of Sale — a. In General. Unless restricted by the assignment or by statute, an assignee for the benefit of creditors is allowed a liberal discretion as to the manner of sale.[8] He must, however, adopt all reasonable modes of proceeding in order to render the sale most beneficial to the debtor.[9]

b. Public or Private Sale. Where the deed of assignment[10] or statutes[11] specify the manner of sale the assignee must do as directed, otherwise he may sell at public or private sale as directed by the court.[12]

5. Notice of Sale. An assignee should give reasonable notice of a public sale.[13] If the statute prescribes the manner of notice the same must be followed.[14]

Discretion of court.— An order allowing an assignee for creditors to sell real estate which was subject to judgment liens will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. White's Estate, 178 Pa. St. 280, 35 Atl. 985.

Prevention of sale.— Where there is a serious controversy as to the bona fides of an assignment and of the preferred debts and of the reliability of the assignee, an injunction to prevent the selling of the property should be granted. Preiss v. Cohen, 112 N. C. 278, 17 S. E. 520.

In Indiana under 1 Rev. Stat. (1876), p. 144, § 10, as amended, the court may order a private sale of the debtor's real estate. Lawson v. De Bolt, 78 Ind. 563.

Where assigned property consisted in part of real estate, which there was no prospect would rise in value, and the creditors would not agree to allow the assignee to continue his efforts to sell at private sale, it was proper to direct the assignee to sell at auction. Brooks v. Peck, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 519. See also Quidnick Co. v. Chafee, 13 R. I. 367, holding that where a trustee for creditors holds a large estate which can be best sold in bulk — creditors, debtors, and trustee favoring this mode of sale — the court will approve the scheme, and will allow the trustee to fix a time and place to receive competitive offers, and to contract for a sale to the highest bidder.

13. Notice of sale.— Hays v. Doane, 11 N. J. Eq. 84; Hart v. Crane, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 37.

Sufficiency of notice.— A debtor, in his assignment for creditors, included a right to occupy real estate and conduct a school for a certain period, together with a right to certain fixtures, which he was entitled to remove from the premises. Eight days before the sale of the assigned property the assignees, by printed handbills, gave notice that they would sell all the property of the debtor, without describing it, or explaining that only the debtor's equitable interest in the property would be sold. It was held that the notice was insufficient. Hays v. Doane, 11 N. J. Eq. 84.

If the trustee, or one of the creditors, is authorized to prescribe the day of sale and the length of time for which it shall be advertised, the failure to notify any of the creditors of the time and place of sale does not warrant the inference that as to one of the creditors provided for, and who attended the sale and purchased the property, the sale was fraudulent. 14. Statutory requirements.—Teah v. Roth, 39 Ark. 66; Raleigh v. Griffith, 37 Ark. 150;

6. Time of Sale. It is the duty of an assignee to make a sale of the assigned property within a reasonable time.[15] If the statute prescribes a time, the sale must be made within such time.[16]

7. Sale on Credit. Under an assignment in trust to sell as the trustee may deem expedient, and for the interest of all parties, the trustee may sell on credit.[17]

8. Sale by Joint Assignees. Where joint assignees hold property for the benefit of creditors, a sale and conveyance, to be valid, must be made by them jointly.[18]

Discretion of assignee.— A deed of assignment containing a provision that the assignee should, as soon as convenient, sell and dispose of the assigned property does not give the assignee unlimited discretion as to the time in which he should execute the trust. McClung v. Bergfeld, 4 Minn. 148.

Order of court.— A statute providing that all sales by assignees shall be "made at such times and in such manner as shall be ordered and appointed by the court," was intended to apply to public sales, and not to a private sale ordered by the court. Pennsylvania.—Wilmarth v. Mountford, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 124.

Rhode Island.—Where an assignor remains in possession, and sells goods to one who has no knowledge of the assignment, in an action by the assignee to recover the price the purchaser cannot assail the assignment, but should offset against the assignee demands which he expected to offset against the assignor in payment. Warner v. Hedly, 1 R. I. 357.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 786.

Debt of assignee.— An assignee who sells the assigned stock on credit cannot create an offset or payment in reduction of the price by incurring liabilities to his vendee, who knew of the trust, for articles knowingly furnished for his personal use, and not on ac-deem expedient and prudent," does not give him power to bind the estate by express covenant of warranty; nor does such power exist by implication of law.[24]

11. Setting Aside Sale. A creditor of the assignor may maintain an action on his own behalf and on behalf of all others in like situation to set aside a conveyance made by the assignee in fraud of the rights of creditors.[25]

F. Negligence in Management. An assignee for the benefit of creditors is liable for ordinary negligence, or for the want of that degree of diligence which persons of ordinary prudence are accustomed to exercise in their own business.[26]

24. Welsh v. Davis, 3 S. C. 110, 16 Am. Rep. 690.

Personal liability of assignee.— A trustee is personally liable on his general warranty of title to land sold and conveyed by him in conjunction with his assignor to the extent of the sum realized by so warranting the title. Graves v. Mattingly, 6 Bush (Ky.) 361. See also Marshall v. Morgan, 58 Vt. 60, 3 Atl. 465, holding that where accounts sold by an assignee, although appearing upon the inventory, have no legal existence but are fictitious, the assignee is not relieved by reason of the character in which he makes the sale from the obligation which the law generally imposes upon vendors to show that the property existed which constituted the consideration of the sale.

Acts of agent.— Where an assignee for creditors allows the debtor to act as his agent in handling the property, and to retain large sums from the sale thereof as compensation for services, creditors may maintain a bill to hold the assignee personally liable. Redmond v. Wemple, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 221. See also Ward v. Lamson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 358. And a provision in a trust deed that the trustee shall employ such agents as he may deem necessary, and pay them a reasonable compensation for their services out of the trust fund, and not be liable for their omissions or defaults, or for any moneys other than such as shall actually come to his hands in the execution of the trust, does not discharge the trustee from the obligation to select fit agents, and hold them to a strict responsibility for their acts. Gordon v. Cannon, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 387.

Conversion of goods.— Where assignees become warehousemen and convert grain in store that they received of their assignors who were warehousemen and appropriate the money to their own use they are liable to account to the owners for the amount received, with interest from the date of the sale. Dole v. Olmstead, 41 Ill. 344, 89 Am. Dec. 386. But the assignee of a warehouseman who had issued ineffectual receipts is not personally liable to the holders thereof for the conversion of the property named therein. 2. Jurisdiction. Only courts possessing general chancery powers have jurisdiction of an action by an assignee to compel a transfer to him of property conveyed and delivered by the assignor to one of his creditors before the assignment.[30]

3. Conditions Precedent — a. Demand. A demand need not be made to enable an assignee to sue for the recovery of money paid by the assignor to a creditor with the intent of giving a preference.[31]

b. Leave of Court. Leave of court is not as a rule necessary to enable an assignee for the benefit of creditors to sue.[32]

c. Notice of Assignment. Where an assignee of an insolvent debtor sues to recover property of the debtor held by another no notice to the latter of the assignment is necessary.[33]

d. Security For Costs. The court may, in its discretion, compel a non-resident assignee on bringing suit to file security for costs.[34]

4. Parties. In most jurisdictions an assignee for the benefit of creditors may bring suit in regard to the property assigned in his own name,[35] without joining

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 824.

Conversion of assigned property.— In an action by an assignee to recover from the wrongdoer the property assigned, or damages for taking it, the declaration need not state the particulars of the assignee's title. It is sufficient if it allege generally that plaintiff was the owner of the property and entitled to the possession of it. State v. Krug, 82 Ind. 58; Krug v. McGilliard, 76 Ind. 28.

Intervention by foreign assignee.— A foreign assignee has the right to intervene to protect his rights in an attachment proceeding against a non-resident; but his petition should set out the deed of assignment under which he claims with sufficient particularity to enable the court to determine whether, on its face, it is a valid instrument, as against the attachment creditors in the jurisdiction where the attachment is sued out. Matthai v. Conway, 2 App. Cas. (D. C.) 45.

41. Guerin v. Hunt, 8 Minn. 477.

Assignee's right to sue.— Where the record shows the appointment of a trustee, the bringing of suit by such trustee is conclusive evidence of his having accepted the trust, and of his acting as trustee, and prima facie evidence that he was duly qualified. Taylor v. Atwood, 47 Conn. 498. See also Partridge v. Hannum, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 569, holding that the assignment is conclusive evidence of the assignee's authority to sue for any debt due or belonging to the insolvent.

Assignor's insolvency.— The verified inventory of the assets of an assignor and of the amount due each creditor, filed with the clerk of court pursuant to statute, is prima facie evidence of the assignor's insolvency. Ball v. Bowe, 49 Wis. 495, 5 N. W. 909. So in an action by an assignee to recover back property conveyed by the assignor by way of preference, evidence that at the time of the conveyance the assignor was reputed to be insolvent in the town where he resided is competent to prove that defendant had reasonable cause to believe him insolvent. Lee v. Kilburn, 3 Gray (Mass.) 594. See also Southern Suspender Co. v. Von Borries, 91 Ala. 507, 8 So. 367.

Existence of debts.— The deed of trust, the execution of which is proved, is prima facie evidence of the existence of the debts therein specified. Martin-Brown Co. v. Henderson, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 130, 28 S. W. 695.

Ownership of property.— In a contest between the assignee and an attaching creditor, evidence tending to show the ownership of property not included in the assignment, but alleged to belong to the debtor, is admissible. Singer v. Armstrong, 77 Iowa 397, 42 N. W. 332. But an assignee claiming damages for the negligent killing of an animal, covered by the deed, must show that the grantor in the deed owned the animal when the deed was executed. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. Sparkman, 60 Ark. 25, 28 S. W. 509.

42. Excelsior Mfg. Co. v. Owens, 58 Ark. 556, 25 S. W. 868; Glenn v. Grover, 3 Md. 212; Butler v. Breck, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 164, 39 Am. Dec. 768.

Attachment of assigned property.— In an action by an assignee against a creditor who has attached the assigned property, the burden is on defendant to show that he was the only remaining creditor entitled to the money which plaintiff can recover. Nave v. Britton, 61 Tex. 572.

43. Boyden v. Frank, 20 Ill. App. 169.

Property passing by assignment.— In Illinois the county court has jurisdiction to de-

8. Questions For Jury. In an action between an assignee and a creditor to determine the right of possession of goods assigned, the question whether the assignor delivered possession to the assignee is for the jury.[44]

9. Judgment. In an action by an assignee for the conversion of the assigned property, the assignee may recover as damages the value of the stock, and is not limited to the amount of the debt secured by the deed of trust.[45]

10. Costs. An assignee for the benefit of creditors is not personally liable for the costs of a suit brought by him in good faith on behalf of the assigned estate.[46]

XIII. ACCOUNTING, SETTLEMENT, AND DISCHARGE OF ASSIGNEE.

A. In General — 1. Duty to Account. The assignee under an assignment for the benefit of creditors is bound to account.[47] He cannot be discharged without an accounting[48] unless the creditors waive it.[49]

2. Who May Require Account. Any person having a direct interest in the trust can call for an accounting by the assignee.[50] This includes a creditor whose claim is fixed by the assignment or allowed during administration,[51] as also the termine whether property claimed as a homestead passed by the assignment. Holnback v. Wilson, 159 Ill. 148, 42 N. E. 169.

44. Hall v. Wheeler, 13 Ind. 371.

In replevin by a trustee for creditors against a levying officer, it is the province of the court, and not the jury, to pass on the legal effect of a provision in the assignment alleged to be illegal. Sheldon v. Dodge, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 217.

45. Sanger v. Henderson, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 412, 21 S. W. 114.

Personal judgment.— It is error to render judgment against the assignee individually, where he is sued as assignee only. Mattingly v. Willett, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1746, 44 S. W. 376.

46. Cunningham v. McGregor, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 648, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 305; Murry v. Hutcheson, 8 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 423. But an assignee in trust for creditors, suing in his own right, without alluding to his representative character as trustee of an express trust, will not be protected from costs. Murray v. Hendrickson, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 635, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 96.

As to allowance to assignee of costs of litigation see infra, XIII, D, 1, c.

Attorney's fees.— Where creditors execute to the trustee for the benefit of creditors a note to be applied in payment of a judgment secured by another creditor against the trustee, the trustee, if compelled to sue on the note, is entitled to take from the surplus a reasonable attorney's fee. Fetters v. Atkinson, 102 Mich. 485, 60 N. W. 1047.

Intervention by assignee.— Where an assignee of the property attached is allowed to become a party to a trustee suit, as a claimant, and the trustee is afterward discharged, neither the assignee nor plaintiff can recover costs of each other. White Mountain Bank v. West, 46 Me. 15.

Suit before assignment.— Assignees for creditors are not liable for costs of a suit commenced before the assignment and carried on afterward by the assignor as plaintiff and without the knowledge or consent of the assignee, although the assignor was the general agent of the assignee in the settlement of the assigned estate. Snow v. Green, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 216.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1104.

Failure to account.— An assignee, under a voluntary assignment, who has been discharged for malfeasance, and has not settled his account as such assignee in the proper court, and satisfied such court that there was a balance due him from the assigned estate, has no legal or equitable claim which he can enforce against the assigned estate in the hands of the subsequently appointed assignee. Fournier v. Ingraham, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 27.

48. No discharge without accounting.— Matter of Groencke, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 298 note; Matter of Horsfall, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 289. See also infra, XVI, A, 3.

49. Waiver of account.—Matter of Horsfall, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 289.

50. Persons in interest.— Mills v. Husson, 140 N. Y. 99, 35 N. E. 422, 55 N. Y. St. 309; Preston v. Fitch, 137 N. Y. 41, 33 N. E. 77, 50 N. Y. St. 72; Bailey v. Bergen, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 642.

51. Creditors.—Ludington's Petition, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 307; Matter of Herman, 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 377; Tennent v. Davis, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. 251.

A simple contract creditor cannot ordinarily sue to compel an accounting by the assignee. He must first reduce his claim to judgment at law. Willetts v. Vandenburgh, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 424.

A mortgagee who has not proved his claim against the insolvent estate of the mortgagor, assignor,[52] but apart from statute a surety on the assignee's bond has not the right.[53]

3. Who Liable to Account. An assignee, who has acted as such,[54] is liable to account, though he has not given bond.[55] And an assignee is bound to account, though the assignment is void, if it is not so treated by the creditors.[56] So an assignee who, after accepting the trust, voluntarily permits his coassignee to take the entire management of it is equally with him liable to account.[57]

4. Settlement Out of Court. A settlement out of court by an assignee in trust for creditors, if made with the assent of all parties in interest, is as effective as if made by decree of court, except that it must be proved, whereas the judgment is conclusive.[58]

B. Proceedings to Obtain Accounting — 1. Jurisdiction. Proceedings to obtain an accounting must be had in a court of competent jurisdiction.[59] If pro-nor obtained possession of the mortgaged premises, nor intercepted the rent, but remained dormant until after the assignee has collected the rent and distributed it to the general creditors under the orders of the court, and such distribution has been confirmed by the judgment of the court, is in no position to make such assignee account to him as for a misappropriation of the rent. Upson v. Milwaukee Nat. Bank, 57 Wis. 526, 15 N. W. 834.

52. Assignor.— Matter of Townsend, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 76; Tomlinson v. Claywell, 57 N. C. 317; Hunter v. Hubbard, 26 Tex. 537; Carpenter v. Robinson, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 67, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,431.

One of two or more assignors for the benefit of creditors is a "person interested" in the assigned estate, within Minn. Laws (1876), c. 44, § 10, permitting such "person interested" to file a petition for a citation requiring the assignee to file his report. Clark v. Stanton, 24 Minn. 232.

When the assignor is adjudged a bankrupt he can no longer call the assignee to account. His representative in bankruptcy has that right. Bailey v. Smith, 10 R. I. 29.

53. Assignee's surety.—Matter of Castle, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 399. See also Schuehle v. Reiman, 86 N. Y. 270.

54. Assignment superseded by bankruptcy. — The assignee under an assignment for the benefit of creditors is bound to account, notwithstanding a composition in bankruptcy, unless the bankruptcy court orders otherwise, or creditors waive their right to an account. Matter of Straus, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 131. See also Matter of Bieber, 38 N. Y. App. Div. 639, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 118, 59 N. Y. St. 118; Smith v. Tighe, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 270.

A partial assignee is not relieved from the duty to account by having turned the property over to a general assignee. Whitney's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 500.

55. Failure to give bond.— Matter of Farnam, 75 N. Y. 187; Matter of Parker, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 334; Ludington's Petition, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 307; Cunningham v. Freeborn, 1 Edw. (N. Virginia.— Miller v. Holcombe, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 665. But see Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476, holding that a trustee named in a deed to secure debts, who unites in sales necessary in the execution of the trust and other formal acts, but receives none of the trust funds — they being received by his cotrustee — and is guilty of no fraud in relation thereto is not responsible for the misapplication or waste of the funds by his cotrustee.

Court appointing assignee.— Assignees of insolvent debtors' estates appointed by the court, being officers thereof, are subject to be called to account before it. Harth v. Gibbes, 4 McCord (S. C.) 8.

Jurisdictional amount.— The right of a creditor to sue to compel the assignee to account is not dependent upon the amount claimed. McIlhenny Co. v. Todd, 71 Tex. 400, 9 S. W. 445, 10 Am. St. Rep. 753.

Loss of jurisdiction.— On a proceeding to vacate the trust and procure a reconveyance to the assignor of the property assigned, the probate court will not, in rendering a decree that the assignee file his final report and that ceedings are pending in one court another court of equal or concurrent jurisdiction will ordinarily decline to interfere.[60]

2. Laches. An assignee, after a long lapse of time, will not be compelled to account, where the assignor and creditors have slept upon their rights, and no special reason for demanding an account is shown.[61]

3. Parties. To a bill for an accounting all persons in interest should be made parties, either as plaintiffs or defendants.[62]

4. Consolidation of Actions. Where different actions have been brought by creditors, for themselves and other creditors, against an assignee for an accounting, an order that all creditors come in and prove their claims in the action first brought is in the discretion of the court.[63]

C. Account and Proceedings Thereon — 1. Notice. Notice of the accounting to all parties in interest is generally required.[64] the trust be ended by compliance with the terms of the decree, lose its jurisdiction over the person of the assignee for the settlement of his final account. Garver v. Tisinger, 46 Ohio St. 56, 18 N. E. 491.

60. Matter of Cromien, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 41; Matter of Union Banking Co., 12 Phila. (Pa.) 214, 34 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 204. See also Schuehle v. Reiman, 86 N. Y. 270, holding that where two separate suits for an accounting against an assignee have been brought in courts having equal or concurrent jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the court whose interference has been first invoked should continue to be exercised, and the proceedings in the other stayed. But see Matter of Dare, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 220, holding that the fact that actions are pending in another court against an assignor and assignee, to set aside the assignment, is not a bar to a proceeding to compel the assignee to account.

61. Matter of Darrow, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 141; Forster v. Forster, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 275 (holding that a citation for settlement of account will not issue against an assignee for creditors after more than twenty years have elapsed from the date of the assignment); Mellish's Estate, 1 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 482 (holding that equity will not entertain an application to compel an assignee to file an account, as of course, on the application of a creditor, thirty years after the creation of the trust, where no part of plaintiff's proceedings assigns any reason for such delay, and where respondent interposes length of time as an equitable bar to plaintiff's demand for an account). But see Matter of Townsend, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 76, holding that where an assignee has, by agreement with the assignor, secured his own time to account, and an account is sought by the assignor, the assignee cannot defend on the ground of the assignor's delay and laches in seeking the account.

62. Bailey v. Bergen, 67 N. Y. 346; Matter of Betts, 33 N. Y. App. Div. 257, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 721; Johnson v. Snyder, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 498; Mitchell v. Lenox, 2 Paige (N. The assignee and the unpaid creditors are the only necessary parties to a bill for an accounting brought by the assignor after the expiration of the time limited by the deed to file releases and pay claims. Carpenter v. Robinson, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 67, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,431. See also Tomlinson v. Claywell, 57 N. C. 317, holding that creditors secured by an assignment for the benefit of creditors are not necessary parties to an action by the assignor for an account.

Where the creditors are numerous, suit may be brought by one creditor on behalf of all. Brooks v. Peck, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 519. So where a creditor has brought an action to compel the assignee to account, other creditors are properly refused leave to intervene, as the action, without their intervention, is for their benefit. Lewis v. Hake, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 542; Matter of Hill, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 813, 50 N. Y. St. 808.

63. Travis v. Myers, 67 N. Y. 542. See also Houck v. Dunham, 92 Va. 211, 23 S. E. 238, holding that an action for the purpose of settling an estate deeded in trust to be sold to pay certain debts of the grantor becomes one for the benefit of general creditors, by a decree requiring a report of all outstanding debts, and restraining the general creditors from maintaining separate actions.

Defective notice.— Under a statute authorizing the issue of a citation to parties interested, requiring them to "appear in court" on the settlement of an assignee's account, where such citation is defective, as requiring the parties to appear "at chambers," the petition on which it was issued may properly be used as the foundation of a second citation. Matter of Davis, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 31.

Notice by publication.— The accounts of an assignee for creditors will not be referred to an auditor a second time, on a mere allega-

2. Reference — a. In General. By statute, in some states, the court may refer the taking and stating of an account of an assignee to a referee.[65]

b. Matters Determinable by Referee. A referee appointed to adjust and settle the accounts of a voluntary assignee is confined to the account between the assignee and the cestuis que trustent.[66]

c. Report of Referee. The referee must state in his report all the items of the account in order that any party in interest may, if he thinks proper, except to any particular item.[67]

3. Requisites of Account. An assignee's final account must specify amounts.[68]

tion of want of positive notice, when a notice by publication in a legal manner has been given. Coates's Estate, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 258.

Sufficiency of publication.— Publication on six successive Thursdays of an order to show cause why an assignor should not be discharged, the first publication being more than six weeks prior to the day fixed for the hearing, is a publication "for at least six successive weeks prior to the day of the hearing" as required by a statute. Johnson v. Hill, 90 Wis. 19, 62 N. W. 930.

65. Matter of Cleflin, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 636, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 621, 20 N. Y. St. 801; Matter of May, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 24; Wells v. Knox, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 395, 44 N. Y. St. 917; Levy's Accounting, 1 Abb. Costs of reference.—In an action by a judgment creditor to compel an accounting by a general assignee, a provision in the judgment imposing as a condition on which creditors were to be allowed to prove their claims that they should contribute to the expense of a reference of the action is unauthorized. Lewis v. Hake, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

Objections to account.— Where a creditor objects to the final report of an assignee, the court may refer the report and objections to a referee, especially if all the parties consent thereto. In re Murdoch, 129 Mo. 488, 31 S. W. 942. See also Commercial Bank v. McAuliffe, 92 Wis. 242, 66 N. W. 110.

Order of reference.— Where, in an action for an accounting by a general assignee, the pleadings present an issue as to whether or not plaintiff is a creditor, an order of reference to take proof of the matters set forth in the pleadings, and to state the assignee's account, is insufficient. The order should require the hearing and determination of the issues. Wells v. Knox, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 395, 44 N. Y. St. 917.

A referee must be sworn or the oath must be waived. Matter of Vilmar, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 15.

66. Powel's Estate, 163 Pa. St. 349, 35 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 237, 30 Atl. 373, 381; Wylie's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 196; Okie's Appeal, 9 Watts & S. (Pa.) 156.

An assignee cannot be directed to hear and determine matters in controversy appertaining to the assignment. Levy's Accounting, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 177.

A simple contract creditor of an assignor cannot attack a judgment against such assignor, in proceedings before an auditor appointed to distribute a fund in the hands of the assignee. Wenger's Estate, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 203.

Claim against funds.—Where the assignee's account is referred, the referee has no power to consider a claim made against the funds in the assignee's hands on the ground that he has converted goods of the claimants to the use of the estate. Matter of Marklin, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 105.

67. Sharpe v. Eliason, 116 N. C. 665, 21 S. E. 401.

Confirmation of report.— The report of a referee appointed on a final accounting of an assignee for the benefit of creditors may be confirmed on consent of the creditors. Matter of Weinhaus, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 355.

Conformity to reference.— Where the order of reference directs the master to take an account of the expenses of executing the trust, and to ascertain what would be a reasonable compensation to the trustee, should the court decree compensation, and the master reports, as a reasonable compensation, a certain per cent on the amount of the available assets, which are also ascertained and reported under another part of the reference, the report conforms to the reference. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

Proof of notice.— In New York the report of the referee must show proof of the mailing of the notices to creditors to present claims. Matter of Phillips, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 47.

68. Matter of Worthley, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 12.

An assignee's account is misleading where it enters on the debit side sums as monthly receipts which are the proceeds of sales of assets at prices below the appraised value, without any correction on the credit side, thus apparently augmenting the assets. Powel's Estate, 163 Pa. St. 349, 35 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 237, 30 Atl. 373, 381.

Conformity to statute.— In Wisconsin the right of a creditor of an assigned estate to demand that an account filed by the assignee shall be made to conform to the requirements of the statute, before he is required to make special objections to any particular item therein, is absolute, and not discretionary with the court. State v. Johnson, 103 Wis. 591, 79 N. W. 1081, 51 L. R. A. 33.

4. Objections to Account. An objection to items in an assignee's account must be specific, and must sufficiently apprise him of the charge which he has to meet.[69]

5. Order or Decree. A decree on the final accounting of an assignee must specify all amounts to be paid.[70]

6. Appeal. An assignee will not be permitted, as to different creditors of the assigned estate, to take separate appeals from the same decree settling his accounts.[71]

7. Costs. On an accounting by an assignee the costs are ordinarily to be borne by the trust fund.[72]

8. Operation and Effect — a. In General. Under a statute providing that the order entered upon the settlement of an assignee's account "shall be conclusive upon all parties," such order cannot be questioned collaterally.[73]

69. Matter of Mather, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 214, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 13, 40 N. Y. St. 882; Matter of Ripsom, etc., Fur Co., 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 56, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 113; Heywood v. Thacher, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 321, 47 N. Y. St. 1, 29 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 75, holding that a general objection to several items in an assignee's account is insufficient.

As to reference of objections see supra, note 65.

Failure to object before auditor.— Where no demand for a surcharge has been made before the auditor appointed to state an assignee's accounts, the claim therefor cannot be made before the court after all proceedings before the auditor have closed. Sprenkle's Appeal, (Pa. 1885) 1 Atl. 51.

Sufficiency of objection.— A general objection to items of the account for counsel fees and disbursements alleged to have been made in the administration of the estate is sufficient. Dorney v. Thacher, 76 Hun (N. Y.) 361, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 787, 58 N. Y. St. 466.

Who may object.— A creditor of an estate assigned for the benefit of creditors, being entitled to part of the proceeds to be distributed, has a right to file exceptions to the report of the assignee, and to be heard thereon. In re Mansfield, 113 Iowa 104, 84 N. W. 967.

70. Matter of Worthley, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 12. See also Re Murray, 31 Oreg. 173, 49 Pac. 961, holding that an assignee for creditors, having discharged the duties of his trust, is entitled upon filing his final account to have it settled and adjusted, and all objections thereto passed upon and determined separately.

Entry of personal judgment.— Where, on an assignee's final accounting, he is directed to make payments to creditors from a sum adjudged to be in his hands, such creditors cannot, as a matter of course, docket judgments against him personally for the amounts so ordered paid. Matter of Rosenback, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 128; Matter of Jung, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 476.

Performance of decree.— An assignee is not discharged until he has performed the decree entered on his account. Julien v. Lalor, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 164.

Vacation of order.— An order settling the account of an assignee may be vacated on good cause shown. Downey v. May, 19 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 177; Commercial Bank v. McAuliffe, 92 Wis. 242, 66 N. In Indiana it has been held that an appeal does not lie from the refusal of the circuit court to approve the report of an assignee in a voluntary assignment of an insolvent debtor. Cravens v. Chambers, 55 Ind. 5.

Supersedeas.— In California an assignee perfecting an appeal from an order settling his account is entitled to a stay of proceedings in execution of the order appealed from pending the appeal, though the appeal pertains to the disallowance of only one item in the account. Matter of Sharp, 92 Cal. 577, 28 Pac. 783.

72. Matter of Edwards, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 68; Matter of Elmore, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 48.

A stipulation of counsel as to a referee's fees is not binding on the court. Matter of Currier, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 119.

Where the assignment has been set aside for fraud the assignee must pay the fees of the referee and other expenses incurred in the accounting. Mayer v. Hazard, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 222, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 680, 17 N. Y. St. 26.

73. Lawson v. Stacy, 82 Wis. 303, 51 N. W. 961, 52 N. W. 306. See also Weber v. Samuel, 7 Pa. St. 499.

Fraud.— Even after the assignees have settled their accounts, if fraud can be shown in their sale of the property they will be personally liable to the creditors for the loss resulting from such fraud. Hays v. Doane, 11 N. J. Eq. 84. See also Talcott v. Thomas, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 1064, 50 N. Y. St. 621, holding that the fact that an assignee has made a final accounting and is discharged will not excuse him from making a further accounting to a referee appointed for that purpose in an action duly brought to set aside the assignment for fraud.

Recovery of uncollected debts.— An order settling an assignee's accounts, and adjudging that he be released from liability as assignee, does not deprive the assignee of power to sue for uncollected debts which were left in his hands. Grimes v. French, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 398.

b. Partial Account. The partial accounting of an assignee, had on the application of a creditor to obtain payment of the latter's portion of the estate, does not prejudice other creditors.[74]

D. Credits — 1. Expenses — a. In General. The assignee's expenses are allowed on the basis of their necessity for careful and prudent management of the estate.[75] Disbursements are limited, however, to amounts actually paid.[76]

b. Carrying on Business. An assignee who carries on the business of the assignor instead of turning the stock into cash at once does so at the risk of having to bear the expense himself unless he can prove a benefit therefrom to the estate.[77]

74. Levy's Accounting, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 177.

Funds not distributed.— The homologation of the tableau concludes the insolvent's creditors, inter se, as to the funds to be divided, but no further. It does not affect their claim to funds not distributed or afterward received by the syndic. Williams v. Nicholson, 5 La. Ann. 719.

Omitted items.— A partial account of an assignee is not conclusive as to any item omitted by the accountant which he has received or ought to have received. McLellan's Appeal, 76 Pa. St. 231; Truitt's Estate, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 16, 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 84.

Where an assignee on his first account takes credit for commissions and counsel fees to an amount in excess of cash on hand, he cannot on a second account have credit for such excess as though it had been finally adjudicated on the first account. See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1143.

Auctioneer's fees for sale of property.— An assignee cannot claim auctioneer's fees for sale of the property, unless authorized by the court to employ him. Ingham v. Lindemann, 37 Ohio St. 218.

Expenses of procuring bond.— An assignee may be allowed the expense of procuring his official bond, the deed of assignment having been made with an understanding of the parties to that effect. Tustin's Account, 176 Pa. St. 382, 38 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 421, 35 Atl. 199. See also In re Commercial Bank, 4 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 228.

Traveling expenses, unless under extraordinary circumstances, cannot be allowed to an assignee for the benefit of creditors. Troth's Estate, 1 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 89. So where the bulk of an assigned estate consisted of lands in South Carolina, and the assignee and agent for creditors both resided in New York, traveling and living expenses in going to and from their homes are not legitimate items of expense to be charged against the estate. Williams v. Neely, 46 Fed. 450. See also Claflin v. Goebel, 7 Ohio Cir. Ct. 384.

Use of horse.— The assignee cannot charge the estate for the use of his horse in the business of the estate. Matter of Felt, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 60, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 754, 22 N. Y. St. 124; Matter of Bicknell, 31 Misc. (N. Y.) 302, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 360.

As to right of assignee to carry on business see supra, XII, D, 2.

Cultivation of farm.— An assignee is not authorized to pay out the trust funds to cultivate a farm which is a part of the insolvent estate, when there are no growing crops to be preserved. Wynne v. Simmons Hardware Co., 67 Tex. 40, 1 S. W. 568.

Order of court.— Where the assignee of an insolvent estate carries on the business under an order of court, with the acquiescence of the creditors, the court may properly order that the funds in his hands be applied in the first instance to the payment of the assignee's charges, and to indebtedness incurred by the assignee. Hooven, etc., Co. v. Burdette, 51

c. Costs of Litigation. Expenses of litigation are allowed the assignee in matters directly connected with the execution of the trust, such as the collection of assets or the resistance of invalid claims,[78] unless they are plainly unnecessary.[79]

d. Counsel Fees — (1) IN GENERAL. An assignee for the benefit of creditors has the right to employ counsel at the expense of the estate to aid him in protecting and administering the trust.[80] An assignee cannot bind the estate, how-

Attempt to remove assignee.— Where application is made for the removal of an assignee, and there is nothing to show that the application is well founded, such assignee is entitled to a reasonable amount as attorney's ever, by contracts with attorneys for specific compensation.[81] Only reasonable fees will be allowed.[82]

(II) ASSIGNEE AS COUNSEL. An assignee who is an attorney is precluded from applying the trust fund to the payment of himself, or of firms in which he may be a partner, for professional services rendered in administration of the trust.[83]

e. Taxes. An assignee is entitled to be reimbursed for taxes paid by him on the trust estate with funds received from the assignor.[84]

2. ALLOWANCES UNDER VOID OR VOIDABLE ASSIGNMENT. An assignee acting in good faith under a void or voidable assignment will be allowed credit for payments made in pursuance of the terms of the assignment[85] and for necessary fees in resisting the application. Matter of Cadwell's Bank, 89 Iowa 533, 56 N. W. 672. Compare Matter of Carrick, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 181.

Mismanagement of trust.— Where an accounting by an assignee shows a reckless waste of almost the entire estate, counsel fees, other than those for preparing and attending execution of the assignment, should not be allowed without specification of the character and necessity of the service. Levy's Accounting, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 177. So where the accounts of the assignee are carelessly kept, with false and erroneous entries, he is not entitled to any allowance for attorney's fees in settling the accounts. mingling them with his own funds.[91] In such event he is liable for the legal rate of interest.

2. Losses — a. In General. In the management of the estate the assignee is bound to exercise the care of a prudent man in his own affairs,[92] and is chargeable, on accounting, with losses resulting from the want of such care.[93]

b. Depreciation in Value. A loss on the appraised value of the assets does not constitute a prima facie case against the assignee,[94] nor is he liable for depreciation unless it be shown that he is in some way at fault.[95]

c. Failure to Collect Debts. As it is the duty of an assignee to use all necessary means by action or otherwise to realize the debts, he is personally responsible for the loss of a debt by his neglect of this duty.[96]

d. Failure to Recover Property. An assignee is bound to account, not only for the property which he has received, but for such as might have been recovered by him from the debtor by the use of due diligence.[97]

Indirect benefit.—The fact that an assignee, as member of a private banking firm, with whom he deposits the trust fund as assignee, distinct from his own moneys, and on which he draws no interest, will receive profit from deposits generally does not make him liable for interest on the fund. An assignee who neglects to sell at a favorable and seasonable time should be charged with the estimated value of the goods as if they had been so sold, less the estimated expenses which would have been incurred in so selling. Matter of Rice, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 1. But an assignee who refuses in good faith to offer for sale property in relation to which a writ of estrepement had been served, being advised by counsel that the writ was valid, will not be surcharged for negligence. Where the assignee unnecessarily discounts notes due the estate for less than their face value he is properly chargeable with the face value of the notes. Matter of Felt, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 60, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 754, 22 N. Y. St. 124.

96. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; McCune v. Hartman Steel Co., 87 Ill. App. 162.

Burden of proof.— In order that a trustee may be charged with claims belonging to the trust estate, which at the date of the assignment were reported by the commissioners as "doubtful," the burden is upon the cestui que trust to show that such claims might have been collected by proper diligence. Wimbish v. Blanks, 76 Va. 365.

Failure to prosecute action.—Assignees will not be charged with a loss resulting from their failure to prosecute an action, where it is not clearly shown that they had knowledge of the existence of the cause of action, or that the action would have been successful if prosecuted. Matter of Gerry, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 373.

Sale of accounts.— Where an assignee has collected as many book-accounts as possible himself, then turned them over to his attorney, and put up at public sale all which the latter failed for any reason to recover, the assignee should not be surcharged for what the purchaser was able to collect afterward. Sprenkle's Appeal, (Pa. 1885) 1 Atl. 51.

97. Scudder v. Crocker, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 323; Pingree v. Comstock, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 46.

Property deposited as collateral security.— The assignee is liable for negligently failing to take steps to recover the surplus of property deposited by the assignors as collateral

3. Profits. An assignee is chargeable with all profits that he realizes on funds of the estate in his hands.[98]

F. Compensation of Assignee — 1. Right to Compensation — a. In General. An assignee is entitled to compensation for his services,[99] though no provision therefor is made in the instrument of assignment.[1]

b. Assignment Superseded or Set Aside. An assignee is not entitled to compensation from the assigned estate for his services if the assignment is superseded by bankruptcy proceedings,[2] or is set aside as fraudulent.[3] security for debts. Matter of Carpenter, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 552.

Property not included in inventory.— An assignee will be charged with notes not included in the inventory, and which never came into his hands, unless he shows either that he made diligent efforts to obtain possession of and collect them, or that he had reasonable grounds for believing that they were uncollectible, and that such efforts would be unavailing. In re Fuller, 4 Kulp (Pa.) 479.

98. The fund being held in trust, the assignee is not entitled to make a profit on it himself. Brown v. Silsby, 10 N. H. 521. See also In re Mansfield, 113 Iowa 104, 84 N. W. 967.

Failure to realize profits.— A grantee who accepts a conveyance, agreeing to pay the grantor's debts with the proceeds of the property and return the remainder to him, is guilty of neglect of duty if he allows the grantor to remain in possession and take the profits, and is chargeable at the suit of creditors with the rental value less expenses and the cost of necessary improvements. Ely v. Turpin, 75 Mo. 83. So an assignee who allows creditors to hold, as collateral, securities on which interest is collectible is liable on accounting for such interest. Matter of Carpenter, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 552. But an assignee is not responsible for estimated rents when he has received none (Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476); nor is he liable for the appropriation by the assignor of crops grown on the land assigned, but excepted from the assignment (Creager v. Creager, 87 Ky. 449, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 424, 9 S. W. 380).

99. Right to compensation.—Iowa.—Where a debtor conveyed to his creditor a farm, and authorized him to sell it and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debt and the discharge of prior liens, returning the surplus, in the absence of any proof that the parties contemplated any charge for the transaction the creditor is not entitled to a commission therefore. See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1152.

Assignee as creditor.— The fact that the assignee is himself a creditor does not forfeit his right to compensation. Fahey v. Clarke, 80 Ky. 613; Bloch v. Spruance, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 309, 33 S. W. 1002; Williams v. Neely, 46 Fed. 450. But see Greeley v. Percival, 21 Fla. 535, holding that where the assignee is the first preferred creditor in an assignment giving preferences in the order named, and the assets are insufficient to pay all, he is not entitled to compensation from the fund for his services.

Waiver of compensation.— Where an assignee, after the assignment, agreed with one who had a lien on the goods for advances made, to sell the goods, and pay over the money when received without expense to the lienor, he cannot recover for his services. Moors v. Wyman, 146 Mass. 60, 15 N. E. 104. So where duties usually performed by an assignee personally are delegated to lawyers and agents, who are allowed compensation for their services, he cannot have compensation therefor as though performed by him. XIV. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF CREDITORS.

A. In Aid of Assignment — 1. Attacking Prior Conveyance — a. In General. Creditors may sue to set aside fraudulent conveyances made by the assignor before assignment[7] unless the statute specifically vests the right to avoid such conveyances in the assignee.[8] Creditors may proceed, however, in states where such statutes exist, if the assignee is himself a party to the fraud,[9] or neglects or refuses to institute suit when requested to do so.[10] Where the creditors thus act in place of

An agreement between assignor and assignee for an extra compensation agreed on between them is entitled to no weight in fixing the assignee's compensation. Boegler v. Eppley, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 523. But see Matter of Hulbert, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 452, holding that as between the assignee and the assignor an agreement made by them before acceptance of the assignment as to the amount of compensation in case of a composition is valid.

Moneys not belonging to estate.— An assignee cannot charge a commission on moneys coming into his hands which do not belong to the trust funds. In re Commercial Bank, 4 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 440.

Several sales.—When several sales are made at different times, the commissions of the trustee should be calculated upon each sale separately, and the sales are not to be treated as if made at one time. Goodburn v. Stevens, 1 Md. Ch. 420.

7. Creditors' right to attack.— Alabama.— Creditors cannot maintain a bill to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent, or in the alternative have it declared to constitute a general assignment for the benefit of all creditors. the assignee, whatever is recovered is impressed with the trust for the benefit of all creditors, not merely for those who institute suit.[11]

b. What Creditors May Attack. As a general rule only judgment creditors may sue to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by an assignor.[12] There are decisions, however, supporting the right of a simple contract creditor to maintain such suit.[13]

c. Time to Sue. A creditor's proceeding to attack a transfer by his debtor must be brought within the time limited by statute.[14]

2. ENFORCEMENT OF TRUST — a. In General. A creditor of one who has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors may maintain a suit to have the trusts under the assignment enforced.[15]

b. Parties. A creditor who seeks to carry into effect an assignment in trust for the benefit of creditors and to obtain his share of the trust fund must make all the creditors parties,[16] or he must sue for himself and the other creditors who may come in, and satisfy their demands.[17]

c. Pleading. A creditors' bill filed by the beneficiaries for the settlement of a deed of trust executed by the debtor, which required that the secured creditors should assent to its provisions within a certain time, must allege that complainants assented to the deed.[18]

d. Extent of Relief. Plaintiffs in a bill to carry out the trusts of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, where the bill is not a general creditors' bill, are not entitled to have the interests of a debtor who is not included in the assignment defined.[19] The trust estate, however, will be administered for the best interests of all creditors.[20]

No. 4,006, holding that where a deed of trust to secure creditors with ascertained debts marshaled them into four classes, a bill will lie by one of the fourth class for breach of the trust without making the others parties. To same effect is Patton v. Bencini, 41 N. C. 204. And see Lochte v. Blum, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 385, 30 S. W. 925, holding that in a suit by creditors to have a certain instrument declared a statutory assignment it is sufficient if a representative number of the creditors and the grantee in the instrument are made parties.

Assignee and beneficiaries as parties.— In a suit to enforce a trust for the benefit of creditors the trustees and cestuis que trustent are all necessary parties, except where the trustee has assets sufficient to satisfy all the creditors in full and has paid all but plaintiff. Barrett v. Brown, 86 N. C. 556. See also Hamlen v. Bennett, 52 N. J. Eq. 70, 27 Atl. 651, holding that where a creditor of one who has made an assignment institutes proceedings for the discovery of assets, and succeeds therein, it is proper to bring in the assignee as a party before making a final decree as to distribution of such newly discovered assets.

But see Shyer v. Lockhard, 2 Tenn. Ch. 365, holding that if a bill to enforce a conveyance in trust for creditors state that the trustee qualified as such according to law, demurrer will not lie on the ground that the trust was not accepted by all the creditors.

In an action by creditors against an assignee for conversion, the petition need not allege that the debtor placed the property converted upon the schedule of his property, or that the debtor's estate, exclusive of such property, is insufficient to satisfy the creditors' claims, where it states that the value of such property is much larger than the assignee's bond. Blum v. Wettermark, 56 Tex. 80.

Presentation of claim.— In Rhode Island a bill against an assignee for the benefit of creditors, by a creditor of the assignor, to enforce the trusts under the assignment, which does not allege that complainant presented his claim within the six months is defective. 19. Brooks v. Brooks, 12 S. C. 422. See also Spindle v. Fletcher, 93 Va. 186, 24 S. E. 910, holding that under a bill filed by general contract creditors asking the court to administer the trust created by a general assignment of their debtor for the benefit of creditors the court has no jurisdiction to subject property not included in the assignment and on which plaintiffs have acquired no lien.

20. Keller v. Smalley, 63 Tex. 512. See also Davis v. White, 49 N. J. Eq. 567, 25 Atl. 936, holding that where a bill by a judgment creditor to set aside transfers of his debtor as fraudulent, and also an assignment by him for benefit of creditors, contains a general prayer for relief, it is proper to retain and

3. Examination of Assignor. In some states an assignor, on the application of a party in interest, may be ordered to appear and submit to an examination as to matters relating to the assigned estate.[21]

4. Examination of Books and Witnesses. Provision is also made in some jurisdictions for an examination of witnesses and the production of books and papers relating to the assigned estate.[22]

B. Presentation, Proof, and Payment of Claims — 1. Creditors Entitled to Participate — a. Assenting Creditors. A creditor who does not, within the time limited, assent to an assignment which provides that no creditor shall share in it who does not assent to it within a certain time is not entitled to the benefit of it.[23] But a creditor who, from want of notice or mistake, is unable to comply with the terms within the time limited will be admitted to his share of the fund, if in a reasonable time he signify that such is his desire, and he has done nothing inconsistent with an acceptance of the provision made in his favor.[24]

b. Estoppel of Creditors to Participate. A creditor who repudiates an assignment, or who persists in seeking remedies adverse to it, forfeits the right to claim thereunder.[25] Thus an attack on the assignment has been held to bar all right of allowance in his final account of a claim which would be unauthorized under the assignment. Clark v. Stanton, 24 Minn. 232.

Promise without consideration.— A promise by a husband to pay his wife certain money, being without consideration, cannot be included in the debts of the husband on assignment. Farmers', etc., Nat. Bank v. Jenkins, 65 Md. 245, 3 Atl. 302.

Ultra vires acts of corporation.— The fact that a corporation may not have been authorized to deal in certain goods does not justify an assignee for creditors of the corporation in refusing payment for such goods; the goods themselves, or proceeds therefrom, forming a part of the estate. Re Pendleton Hardware Co., 24 Oreg. 330, 33 Pac. 544.

29. Claims omitted by mistake.— Guittard v. Robinson, 29 Nebr. 400, 45 N. W. 476. See also Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476, holding that a creditor of the grantor in a deed to secure creditors may show that his debt was intended to be secured under a provision made for another creditor.

Mistake in description.— Where a debt intended to be secured by a deed of trust is not correctly described in the deed, the creditor, by identifying it, may recover it of the trust fund, while that remains. Allmand v. Russell, 40 N. C. 183. See also Commercial Bank v. Clapier, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 335.

Payment from surplus.— If there is a surplus the creditors not provided for in the assignment are entitled to payment therefrom. Skipwith v. Cunningham, 8 Leigh (Va.) 271, 31 Am. Dec. 642. See also Price v. Merchants' Bank, 29 Md. 369.

30. Rent due at assignment.—Ex p. Houghton, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 554, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,725.

Damages for breach of lease.— Where an assignee elects not to accept a lease as an asset of an estate, the claim for damages for breach of its terms, while not entitled to priority over other debts of the assignor, may be proven and paid like the other debts. Smith v. Goodman, 149 Ill. 75, 36 N. E. 621.

See also In re Sherry, 101 Wis. 11, 76 N. W. 611, holding that where an assignor for creditors is contingently liable as indorser on commercial paper which is not due at the time of his assignment, but becomes due during the pendency of the assignment proceedings, the creditor may prove such claim when it becomes due and share in all subsequent dividends. But see Farmers' Bank v. Gilpin, 1 Del. Ch. 409, holding that an indorser of a note, though his liability has been fixed by protest, is not entitled as a creditor to a share of the estate of the maker under an assignment for the benefit of creditors.

A surety on a guardian's bond, though he has paid his liability, is not entitled to share in an assignment made by the guardian before breach of the bond. Church's Petition, 16 R. 3. PRESENTATION, CONTEST, AND ALLOWANCE — a. Presentation — (I) NOTICE TO PRESENT. Where the assignee is required to give formal notice to creditors to present claims, claims are not barred until such notice is given in strict compliance with requirements.[35]

(II) MANNER OF PRESENTATION. Statutory requirements as to the manner of presentation of a claim must be observed.[36]

(III) TIME OF PRESENTATION. Creditors must present their claims against the assigned estate within the time prescribed by statute[37] or the instrument of assignment,[38] or be barred from participation in dividends until after payment of all claims presented within such time,[39] unless the time of presentation has been entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the obligee in the bond.

New York.— Ludington's Petition, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 307. See also Matter of Schaller, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 40, holding that a referee's report upon the claims of creditors under an assignment for their benefit cannot be confirmed where no notice to creditors to produce their claims was given as prescribed by rule of court.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 885.

Manner of notice.— In New York, where an accounting in the supreme court is substituted for one under a general assignment act, it is proper that the same rules providing for advertising for claims, and notice to creditors, should be followed. Dickinson v. Earle, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 236, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 615.

Service by mail.— Service of notice to creditors to produce their claims under an assignment for their benefit cannot be made by mail without authority from the court. Matter of Schaller, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 40.

Mailing claim.— In New York sending a claim to an assignee by mail is a sufficient presentation. Matter of Wiltse, 5 Misc. (N. Y.) 105, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 733.

Service on assignee's attorney.— It is competent for an assignee to accept service of a claim on his attorney, and if he does so, and reports the claim to the court, he is estopped to deny the validity of the service. In re Marley, 7 N. J. L. J. 48.

37. Computation of time.— The day on which an assignment is made is to be excluded in computing in what time creditors are to file their claims. Pearpoint v. Graham, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 232, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,877. In Iowa the three months allowed by Iowa Code (1873), §§ 2119, 2126, in which creditors may file claims against an insolvent debtor, begin to run from the first publication of the notice of assignment, and not from the time of mailing notice to the creditor. Scott v. Thomas, 94 Iowa 442, 62 N. W. 790. In New Hampshire the assignment does not take effect until delivered, and a creditor's proof of claim is seasonably made, if filed within six months of the delivery, although the assignment was executed and sworn to before delivery. Hill v. Rolfe, 61 N. H. 351.

Preference of claim.— Though the statute requires the claim to be filed in three months, an application to have a claim duly filed preferred may be made later. Matter of Knapp, 101 Iowa 488, 70 N. W. 626.

38. Time prescribed by deed.—Phenix Bank v. Sullivan, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 410. But see Peck v. Stimpson, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 312, holding that a creditor who became a party to an assignment after the first dividend was paid, but before the second was declared, is entitled to the full amount of the first dividend if the assignees have unappropriated funds enough to enable them to make such payment without disturbing the first dividend paid.

See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 890.

Agreement not to contest.— Where the claim of a creditor is excepted to, such creditor cannot object that the exceptant has no right to so object because, in consideration of a dividend in advance to him by the assignee, he agreed with the assignee to waive his right to except to the claims of other creditors. Lippincott v. Snowden, 48 N. J. Eq. 257, 22 Atl. 194.

Waiver of objections.— After going to trial

Usury will be disallowed even though the point is made by one who is adjudged to have no valid claim.[43]

(II) HEARING AND DETERMINATION. Under a statute which gives each creditor of an insolvent who has made an assignment the right to contest the claims of every other creditor, the validity of a lien given by the debtor in fraud of his creditors may be inquired into in such contest.[44]

c. Allowance of Claims — (I) IN GENERAL. A statutory power given to an assignee to adjust and allow demands against the estate of the assignor is a power to adjust according to law.[45]

(II) DECISION. The decision of the assignee in adjusting claims against the estate is generally made final by statute unless appealed from.[46]

(III) REVIEW. The method pointed out by statute for the review of the decision of the assignee on the allowance or disallowance of a claim must be observed.[47]

4. DISTRIBUTION AND PRIORITIES — a. Proceedings For Distribution — (I) PARTIES. All the creditors must be made parties to a bill for an account to fix the amount of a trust fund for creditors.[48]

In Missouri the assignee's allowance is likened to a judgment in rem (Eppright v. Kauffman, 90 Mo. 25, 1 S. W. 736) and merges the original demand to the extent that suit cannot be brought against the debtor on the original demand after the assignee has allowed it (Elsea v. Pryor, 87 Mo. App. 157; Rice v. McClure, 74 Mo. App. 379; Kendrick v. Guthrie Mfg. Co., 60 Mo. App. 22).

47. In Kansas upon an appeal to the district court from the decision of an assignee the jurisdiction of the district court is appellate only. Kohn v. Hine, 7 Kan. App. 776, 54 Pac. 117.

In Missouri appeals from allowances made by an assignee are governed by the statute relating to appeals from justices of the peace. Hayward v. Graham Book, etc., Co., 59 Mo. App. 453; Board St. Louis Public Schools v. Broadway Sav. Bank, 12 Mo. App. 104; Matter of Joseph Uhrig Brewing Co., 11 Mo. App. 387. On appeal from the action of an assignee the latter cannot testify as to the contents of the claim originally presented before him, as the claim itself should be introduced. Real Estate Sav. Inst. v. Fisher, 9 Mo. App. 593.

In Rhode Island a bill in equity is the proper method to enforce the allowance of a creditor's claim against an assignee, under R. I. Pub. Laws (July 30, 1889), c. 820, §§ 1, 3, providing for suits by creditors against assignees to test the validity of disallowed claims. Osborn v. Colwell, 17 R. I. 196, 21 Atl. 103.

(II) APPEAL. An assignee has no beneficial interest in the funds reported for distribution, and no standing as assignee to appeal from the decree distributing the funds.[49]

b. Allowance of Interest. Where the assignment contains no restriction on the subject interest is paid on the claims if there are sufficient assets.[50]

c. Priorities Between Creditors — (I) IN GENERAL. Where property is held in trust for the benefit of creditors generally, one creditor cannot, to the exclusion of all others, secure the payment of his debt where he can establish no prior lien.[51]

(II) EXPENSES OF ASSIGNMENT. It is proper to place the indebtedness incurred by the assignee, and his proper charges as assignee, paramount to the claims of general creditors.[52]

(III) PARTNERSHIP AND INDIVIDUAL CREDITORS. If there be partnership property, and also separate property of a partner, the partnership debts are to be

His Creditors, 8 La. Ann. 371, holding that all the creditors, both privileged and ordinary, must be made parties to the tableau and notified. A separate tableau of distribution among a particular class of creditors is unlawful.

Cross-bill.— Where the assets to be distributed are the proceeds of sale of the property of an insolvent corporation, conveyed by general assignment, and sold under the order of the court in a suit instituted by the trustees, the creditors having come in and proved their claims, no cross-bill is necessary to enable the court to distribute the money among all the creditors, disregarding the preferences declared by the assignment. A creditor who comes in after a dividend has been declared and receives such dividend is not entitled to interest thereon. Peck v. Stimpson, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 312.

Assignee as creditor.—On sale of real estate by the assignee discharged of liens, under an order of the court, the assignee received the proceeds in trust for the lien creditors; the balance, after payment of the others, to be distributed among the general creditors. It was held that such assignee could not hold the money as assignee after confirmation of the sale, and as creditor recover interest on his debt pending distribution. Wilhelm's Estate, 182 Pa. St. 281, 37 Atl. 819.

Where the assignment is inconsistent with such interest, as where it provides for all debts as cash on the day of assignment, with provision for returning any surplus to the assignor, no interest can be allowed after the assignment. Home Sav. Bank v. Peirce, 156 Mass. 307, 31 N. E. 483.

A creditor at whose suit property is secured for the benefit of all the creditors is entitled, out of the trust fund, to the expenses incurred by him in the suit. Merwin v. Richardson, 52 Conn. 223.

Continuance of business.— When an assignment has been made for the benefit of creditors, and an order is made by the probate court authorizing the assignee to continue the business, a creditor who thereafter sells stock to the assignee to be used and which is used in the prosecution of the business under said order is entitled to be paid out of the funds in the hands of the assignee in full. St. 290, holding that where an assignor prefers several creditors to the extent of one third of his estate, designating the order in which the preferred creditors shall be paid, and such one third proves insufficient to pay them in full, they will take in the order designated and not pro rata.

Mistake in schedule.— The fact that the assignment was made with preferences, and refers to "Schedule A," annexed, as containing the preferences, when in fact the schedule of preferences annexed is called "B," does not entitle plaintiff to an order requiring the assignee to pay the creditors pro rata, instead of by preferences, where there is only one schedule annexed to such assignment. Kleinschmidt v. Steele, 15 Mont. 181, 38 Pac. 827.

Usury in preference.— Though a preference in a general assignment is made up in part of usurious interest, the other creditors are precluded by the assignment from questioning the validity of the preference. Peyser v. Myers, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 175, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 229, 30 N. Y. St. 837.

Waiver of preference.— Where one entitled to have his claim preferred files it with the county judge in the regular way, and it is allowed like that of an ordinary creditor, no preference being given, from which allowance no appeal is taken, and he afterward accepts from the assignee two dividends declared, he waives his right to afterward insist on the payment of his claim in full. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Assoc. v. Morris, 36 Nebr. 31, 53 N. W. 1037. (Mass.) 360, which cases hold that where an insolvent assigns all his property for the benefit of those creditors who become parties to the assignment and thereby release their claims, and a dividend is received by one of the creditors, it must be appropriated ratably to all his claims against the debtor — as well to those upon which other parties are liable or which are otherwise secured as to those which are not so secured. But see Bailey v. Bergen, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 642, wherein it appeared that plaintiff held three notes made by C, and indorsed by B, and falling due at various times. Before either came due, C made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors to plaintiff, in which assignment these notes were preferred. Plaintiff collected, as assignee, enough money to pay the notes in part. It was held that the application of the sum received in payment of the notes first falling due was proper. The assignee was not obliged to apply it upon each note pro rata.

W. 779, holding that where one purchases goods with the fraudulent intent not to pay for them, and afterward makes an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the vendor can replevy them without first making a demand upon the assignee. See also Hall v. Peckham, 8 R. I. 370, hold-

b. Parties. A preferred creditor, in an assignment for benefit of creditors, should be permitted to be joined as a defendant in an action against the assignee to establish a lien which would absorb all the assigned property.[84]

c. Pleading. In an action against an assignee to recover property fraudulently bought of plaintiff by the assignor, and held by defendant under the assignment, it is not necessary to aver any wrongful act on defendant's part in receiving the property.[85]

D. Setting Aside Assignment — 1. In General. Creditors may, in a proper case, maintain a suit to set aside an assignment.[86]

ing that moneys received by an assignee under a voluntary assignment, for goods purchased by the assignor under fraudulent representations, and with intent not to pay therefor, may be recovered of the assignee by the original vendor, in an action for money had and received to his use, even without demand of the goods or moneys, or without tender of the notes taken therefor, provided the notes are produced at the trial, so as to be impounded.

Sufficiency of demand.— Before suit to recover goods fraudulently bought, and included in an assignment, a demand on the person in charge of the goods, together with leaving a written demand to be delivered to the assignee is sufficient. Roome v. McGovern, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 60.

84. Davies v. Fish, 19 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 24. See also Mills v. Swearingen, 67 Tex. 269, 3 S. W. 268, holding that in a suit against assignees under a general assignment, wherein it is sought to establish a claim to priority of payment out of the general fund by virtue of an alleged trust, the general creditors are entitled to intervene.

Assignee as party.— In an action to recover back goods fraudulently purchased, and which have been transferred by the purchaser under a general assignment for benefit of creditors, the assignee may properly be made a defendant. Roome v. McGovern, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 60.

Assignor as party.— Where a bill is filed against an assignee to enforce a lien upon the assigned property, and no relief is prayed against the assignor, the assignor is not a necessary party to the bill. Admissions by failure to answer.— In an action against a debtor and his assignee to set aside a sale to the debtor as procured by his fraud, the assignee has no other rights than the debtor, and, on failure of defendants to answer, the bill will be taken as true. Longdale Iron Co. v. Swift's Iron, etc., Works, 91 Ky. 191, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 848, 15 S. W. 183.

Allegation of demand and refusal.— In an action against an assignee, for goods obtained by his assignor's fraud, of which he had no knowledge when he took possession, complainant must allege a demand of the goods, and a refusal of the assignee to deliver them. Cumiskey v. Lewis, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 466, 15 N. Y. St. 364.

Trover by mortgagee.— Where a mortgagor of chattels assigns the mortgaged property to an assignee, under a general assignment, who disposes of them without redeeming the mortgage, it is not necessary for the mortgagee, in an action of trover against the assignee, to allege and prove the amount due on the secured notes, the destruction of the security, and that the mortgagor is insolvent and unable to pay the secured debt; but the allegation of the mortgagee's special ownership in the property, and facts showing its character and extent, and that the assignee has wrongfully converted it, etc., are sufficient. 2. What Creditors May Attack. The general rule is that only a judgment creditor can attack an assignment.[87] But where the claim is undisputed, or where it would be inequitable to deny a diligent creditor his equitable remedy merely for want of a judgment, it has often been held that judgment at law is not a necessary prerequisite.[88] A creditor must, however, be prejudiced by the assignment to enable him to attack it.[89]

3. Estoppel to Attack. A creditor who assents to an assignment,[90] or with knowledge of all the facts accepts benefits under an assignment,[91] cannot there-

Insanity of assignor.— Creditors sustain such a relation to a debtor as entitles them to maintain a suit to set aside a deed in trust for creditors on the ground that the debtor was at the time a lunatic. Riley v. Carter, 76 Md. 581, 25 Atl. 667, 35 Am. St. Rep. 443, 19 L. R. A. 489.

An intervening creditor, who in his petition of intervention fails to attack an assignment made by the debtor prior to intervener's attempt to attach property covered thereby, is not entitled to an attachment on such property. Butte First Nat. Bank v. Boyce, 15 Mont. 162, 38 Pac. 829.

93. Filing claim with assignee.— Iowa.— The fact that the agents of an insolvent insurance company filed claims for unearned premiums with the assignee, after giving proper credit for the balance due the company by them, does not estop them from contesting the validity of the assignment, as affecting their right of set-off. Franzen v. Hutchinson, 94 Iowa 95, 62 N. W. 698.

Kentucky.— Where attaching creditors are insisting that an assignment is fraudulent and are taking evidence to support their contention they do not estop themselves from continuing the attack on the assignment by presenting their demands in a suit by the assignee for a settlement of the assigned estate. Scott v. Strauss, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 892.

New York.— The mere filing of a judgment creditor's claim with the assignee, under a general assignment by the debtor, is not such a recognition of the assignment as operates to nullify his action to set it aside. Koechl v. Leibinger, etc., Brewing Co., 26 N. Y. App. Div. 573, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 568. So a creditor who attaches notwithstanding the debtor's assignment, charging fraud, cannot be deemed to have ratified the assignment by afterward proving his debt in proceedings thereunder, and moving that the assignee be removed, when he expressly asserts at the time that he does not recognize the validity of the assignment. See 4 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1046.

95. Return of benefits.— Scott v. Edes, 3 Minn. 377.

Surrender of collateral.— A creditor having a pledge for the payment of a debt is not bound, if he assails as fraudulent a subsequent conveyance by the debtor to other creditors, or asserts that it is a general assignment, in the benefits of which he and all the other creditors are entitled to participate, to offer to relinquish the pledge or to bring it in as a contribution to a common fund for the equal benefit of the fraudulent donee and himself. Alabama Warehouse Co. v. Jones, 62 Ala. 550.

4. Actions to Set Aside Assignment — a. Jurisdiction. Unless it is so provided by statute[96] jurisdiction over proceedings to test the validity of an assignment is not limited to the court in which the assignee has filed his bond and inventory, but exists in any court of otherwise competent jurisdiction.[97]

b. Time to Sue. A creditor attempting to nullify a deed of assignment made by his debtor must take action within a reasonable time after the deed is executed.[98]

c. Injunction and Receiver. In a suit to set aside an assignment the appointment of a receiver of the assigned property and the granting of an injunction to restrain the assignee from proceeding under the assignment is within the discretion of the court.[99]

d. Parties. It is generally held that the assignor and assignee are the only necessary defendants to a suit for setting aside a general assignment as fraudulent.[1]

96. In Illinois, where a voluntary deed of assignment is duly executed and recorded in the county court, that court obtains complete and exclusive jurisdiction over the insolvent estate, and the validity of the assignment must be contested in the county court alone. Wilson v. Aaron, 36 Ill. App. 576 [affirmed in 132 Ill. 238, 23 N. E. 1037].

97. Kohn v. Ryan, 31 Fed. 636.

Federal court.— Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors is merely regulated, but not created, by a state law, the legality of the assignment may be contested by a creditor in a federal court. Adler v. Ecker, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 256, 2 Fed. 126.

Probate court.— In Ohio and Oklahoma a probate court is without jurisdiction to set aside an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Standard Home, etc., Co. v. Jones, 64 Ohio St. 147, 59 N. After the trust has been executed it is too late to seek to set aside the assignment on the ground of fraud. Hays v. Doane, 11 N. J. Eq. 84; McLean v. Prentice, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 504. But see Knauth v. Bassett, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 31, holding that an action by a creditor to set aside an assignment may be maintained, so far as concerns any money in the hands of the assignee, though he may have paid away the greater portion of the property assigned.

99. Wood v. Haynes, 92 Ga. 180, 18 S. E. 47; Buena Vista Mfg. Co. v. Chattanooga Door, etc., Co., 87 Ga. 689, 13 S. E. 684; Walker v. Stone, 70 Iowa 103, 30 N. Where the assignee is solvent, honest, and competent, and a case of real danger to the assets in his hands is not made, and where the creditors have the security of ultimate liability, the assignee will not be enjoined at the instance of the creditors from controlling the assets pending a bill to set aside the assignment; and a receiver will not be appointed to supersede the assignee before a final decree. Gresham v. Crossland, 59 Ga. 270. But where, in proceedings on motion for an injunction and the appointment of a receiver, by general creditors of an insolvent, against his assignee and preferred creditors, it appears that a final judgment setting aside the assignment and the preferences is probable, a receiver should be appointed and the injunction granted. Death of assignor.— In a creditors' suit to set aside as fraudulent a general assignment, the assignor, or after his death his personal representative, is a necessary party; and when the assignor, originally a party, has died, and his representative is not brought in, a judgment rendered for plaintiff is fatally defective, though the facts of the assignor's death, the proof of his will, and the qualification of his executrix are pleaded by supplemental complaint, and the executrix is a party in her individual capacity. Amsterdam First Nat. Bank v. Shuler, 153 N. Y. 163, 47 N. E. 262, 60 Am. St. Rep. 601.

But where named creditors are given preferences it has been held that they should be made parties.[2]

e. Pleading — (I) In General. In an action to set aside an assignment as fraudulent against creditors it has been held to be sufficient to aver that the assignment was fraudulent and void, and made and accepted with intent to defraud creditors, without further averring the facts relied on to establish the intent.[3]

(II) Bill of Particulars. In an action to set aside as fraudulent an assignment for the benefit of creditors, plaintiff may be required to furnish a bill of particulars.[4]

f. Evidence — (I) In General. The fraudulent intent of an assignor for the benefit of creditors must be proved by such evidence as is required to establish any other fact — as by his acts and declarations, his circumstances and situation, and the terms and provisions of the instrument.[5]

(II) Burden of Proof. The burden is on a creditor attacking an assign-

Waiver of objections.— The objection that the judgment debtors are not joined as defendants in a creditors' action to set aside their assignment is waived if not taken by demurrer or answer. Hurlbert v. Dean, 2 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 428, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 97.

A. 466, holding that in a suit by creditors to set aside an assignment as fraudulent a preferred creditor is not a necessary party defendant; and if, having been joined as defendant, he dies before trial, it rests in the discretion of the court whether his personal representatives should be made parties, and the trustee under the assignment cannot demand that the trial be delayed until that is done.

In an action to reform an assignment for a fraudulent provision contained therein all the creditors of the assignor must be parties to the action. Garner v. Wright, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 144; Smith v. Howard, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 151.

Gaz. 126, holding that where an assignment is attacked on the ground of fraud a general allegation of fraud is not sufficient, but particular acts must be specified.

Delivery and acceptance of deed.— A creditors' bill against a debtor and his assignees to set aside the assignment as fraudulent need not allege that the assignment was delivered, nor that the assignees accepted the trust. Gasper v. Bennett, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 307.

Fraud of assignee.— In an action to set aside an assignment on the ground of the fraud of the assignor, the complaint is not demurrable because there is no allegation that the assignee was implicated in the fraud. Stevenson v. Matteson, 3 Mont. 108, 32 Pac. 291.

4. Claflin v. Smith, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 205. But see Passavant v. Cantor, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 546, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 574, 16 N. Y. St. 252, 21 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 259, wherein the creditors alleged that the assignor failed to deliver to the assignee all the property owned by him or in which he was interested, and that he had secreted and reserved a large portion of his property with the intent to defraud; that the assignment was a conspiracy on the part of the assignor to fraudulently obtain goods from his creditors with the intention of fraudulently disposing of them, and to reserve them for his own benefit. The books had been turned over to the assignee. It was held that the assignee was not entitled to a bill of particulars specifying the property the assignor failed to turn over, and fraudulently concealed and reserved, and the dates of such transactions, and the parties with whom made, nor a bill specifying from whom goods were fraudulently obtained.

Book entries.— In an action to set aside an assignment of a firm for creditors as fraudulent, the entries in the books of the firm, made in due course of business, prior to the assignment, are admissible to show whether the debts of the firm set out in the assignment are bona fide obligations. Loos v. Wilkinson, 10 N. Y. St. 297.

A judgment recovered after an assignment for benefit of creditors is admissible in an action to set aside the assignment as proof of the validity of the debt mentioned in the assignment, the genuineness of the judgment and the bona fides of the debt being open to contest. Acker v. Leland, 109 N. Y. 5, 15 N. E. 743, 14 N. Y. St. 23. But see Mower v. Hanford, 6 Minn. 535, holding that in an action to set aside as fraudulent an assignment for benefit of creditors, the record of proceedings in another action between other parties, and relating to a different subject-ent for the benefit of preferred creditors to show that the assignment was ıecuted to defraud and delay other creditors.[6]

g. Questions For Jury. The question whether an instrument is fraudulent by ɜ terms is one of law.[7]

h. Judgment. In an action to set aside an assignment for fraud it is error to ›nder judgment against the assignee personally, where there is no finding that ɜ knew of the fraudulent intent of the assignor.[8]

5. Effect of Setting Aside Assignment. Where a deed made for the benefit of ·editors is set aside, creditors are left to enforce their claims as though no such ɜed had been made.[9] The court on setting aside an assignment will so deal ıatter, in which such assignment was adıdged fraudulent, is inadmissible.

Proof of intent.— It is competent to show ıe motives of officers of an insolvent corpoıtion in assigning its assets on an issue as › the validity of such assignment. Covert . Rogers, 38 Mich. 363, 31 Am. Rep. 319. ınd evidence that a deed of assignment, legal n its face, was made in good faith, is admisible in defense of a suit by attachment, laiming that the assignment was made with raudulent intent to hinder and delay creditrs. Fraudulent intent.— In a suit to avoid an ıssignment for the benefit of creditors on the ground of fraud, the question of fraudulent ntent is one of fact, exclusively for the jury. Wynne v. Glidewell, 17 Ind. 446. See also Mower v. Hanford, 6 Minn. 535, holding that vhere several instruments, simultaneously xecuted, are attacked as fraudulent as gainst creditors, the question whether they ›re all so related to each other that the raudulent intention in the execution of one vould avoid all is for the jury.

8. Rouse v. Bowers, 108 N. C. 182, 12 ·. E. 985.

Conclusiveness as to beneficiaries.— In a uit to set aside an assignment for the benefit of creditors the assignee represents all the beneficiaries of the trust; and a judgment against him is binding upon such beneficiaries, though they were not parties to the suit. Rejall v. Greenhood, 92 Fed. 945, 35 C. C. A. 97. See also Russell v. Lasher, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 232, holding that where a suit is brought by a creditor to set aside an assignment, if the assignee acts in good faith, and a decree is fairly obtained declaring the assignment fraudulent and void, preferred creditors of the assigned estate are bound by the decree, even though they were not made parties to the suit.

Matters determinable.— In a suit by creditors to set aside an assignment by which the assignee obtained a preference, the court will not determine the validity of attachments levied in favor of the assignee, as the suit does not affect such attachments. Dudensing v. Jones, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 69, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 178.

Relief under general prayer.—In Kentucky, in an action to set aside a deed of assignment as fraudulent, that relief being denied the trust may be settled under a prayer for general relief, though one fourth of the creditors did not join in the action, the deed having been made before the statute regulating assignments for creditors was passed. Effect on releases.— Where an assignment has been held void at the suit of an attaching creditor, releases filed by creditors who had received dividends do not operate to discharge their claims. Matter of Walker, 37 Minn. 243, 33 N. W. 852, 34 N. W. 591; Weber v. Samuel, 7 Pa. St. 499. See also Lentilhon v. Moffat, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 451, holding that where an assignment for the benefit of creditors is declared fraudulent and void, a creditor who has agreed in writing to accept his share and release the debtor, but who has not executed a release, retains all his rights against the debtor unaltered.

Judgments confessed to assignee.— Where a deed of trust for the benefit of creditors is void, confessions of judgment made to the trustees, which are intended to be used only in case the deed is declared void, are also void. Mackie v. Cairns, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 547, 15 Am. Dec. 477.

Priorities of creditors.— The creditor who first files his bill against the assignees of an insolvent debtor obtains a priority in the dis-with the assets of the assignor as to protect all parties who are interested in his estate.[10]

XV. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF ASSIGNOR.

A. As Against Assignee. When the assignee is acting in bad faith or otherwise failing in his duties, the assignor has an interest which authorizes him to bring a bill against the trustee, to which the creditors are joined as defendants, seeking proper administration of the trust.[11]

B. As Against Third Persons. An assignor may enforce rights such as did not pass by the assignment, or such as revert to him through estoppel against the assignee and beneficiaries of the assignment, who allow him to proceed;[12] but he cannot sue on claims which have regularly passed to the assignee, even though creditors consent.[13]

C. Compositions With Creditors. The fact that a debtor has made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors does not preclude him from settling in good faith with certain creditors by paying a certain per cent of their claims.[14]

A. 466, holding that where in a suit by creditors to reduce their debts to judgment and to set aside a fraudulent assignment the assignment is set aside and a receiver of the property appointed, a preferred creditor who claimed under the assignment and united with the trustee in defending it is not entitled to prove his debt and pro-rate with plaintiffs in the proceeds of the property.

As to right of assignor to accounting by assignee see supra, XIII, A, 2.

Conditions precedent to action.— Where a debtor conveyed his property to a trustee to convert into money and pay the debts, and the trustee fraudulently conveyed the property to his friends and business associates for much less than it was worth, such debtor could not maintain an action at law against the trustee and his grantees for damages, without first bringing a suit in equity for an accounting and closing of the trust. D. Discharge. Apart from statute,[15] the mere assent of a creditor to an assignment does not discharge the debtor.[16]

E. Exemptions — 1. In General. A debtor who makes an assignment for the benefit of creditors is entitled to such exemptions as are allowed by statute.[17] Apart from statute, the assignor is not entitled to exemptions, unless claimed in the assignment.[18]

2. Nature and Amount. The nature and amount of an assignor's exemptions are controlled by statute;[19] and where the reservation[20] is of "such property as is

3. Time and Manner of Claiming. Statutory exemptions must be claimed in the time and manner pointed out by statute, otherwise they are lost.[21] But it seems that an assignment of all property which might be reached or recovered by any of the creditors reserves the statutory exemptions for debtors to the assignor.[22]

4. Waiver or Forfeiture. The assignor may waive or abandon his right to exemptions, as by failing to comply with the statutory requirements relating thereto;[23] or he may be guilty of such fraud[24] or laches[25] as will forfeit his right to exemptions.

The assignee notified the assignor that there was a balance in bank at his order. The assignor allowed the money to remain drawing interest. Upon failure of the bank it was held that the assignee was no longer liable to the assignor. Heckert's Appeal, 69 Pa. St. 264.

XVI. LIABILITY ON ASSIGNEE'S BOND.

A. Nature and Extent of — 1. In General. The nature and extent of the liability is governed by the terms and the conditions of the bond itself, and the giving of the bond being a statutory requirement the liability may also depend upon the provisions of the statute, if any, relating to the contents and sufficiency of the bond.[29]

2. Adjudication Against Assignee Concludes Sureties. In an action on the bond of an assignee in the absence of fraud at least,[30] the sureties are bound by orders and judgments against their principal, the assignee,[31] and this has been would fall to creditors who fail to accept shall revert to the assignor, the assignee must pay the assignor the shares of creditors who do not accept within the prescribed time. Ralston's Appeal, 169 Pa. St. 254, 32 Atl. 454.

27. Vacating attachment.— Winona First Nat. Bank v. Randall, 38 Minn. 382, 37 N. W. 799; Holland v. Atzerodt, 1 Walk. (Pa.) 237. See also Keith v. Armstrong, 65 Wis. 225, 26 N. W. 445, holding that an assignor may traverse the affidavit for an attachment. But see Quebec Bank v. Carroll, 1 S. D. 372, 47 N. W. 397, holding that an assignor is not entitled to ask for the discharge of an attachment on account of the assignment as a means of protecting the property assigned.

The action for damages for wrongful attachment vests in the assignee. The assignor cannot sue therefor. Cleveland Coal Co. v. Sloan, 90 Ky. 308, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 223, 14 S. W. 279; Roby v. Meyer, 84 Tex. 386, 19 S. W. 557; Fechheimer v. Ball, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 766.

28. Setting aside foreclosure sale.— Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Scranton, 34 N. J. Eq. 429. But see Monteith v. Hogg, 17 Oreg. 270, 20 Pac. 327, holding that one who has assigned land subject to a mortgage has no such interest remaining therein as will give force to a contract with the holder of the mortgage that the latter shall bid the land in and hold it as security for his own demand and to pay other debts of the assignor.

P. 146 (where sureties were held not to be liable on account of a confusion of several trusts, their bond being only to enforce performance of one of the trusts); Rhawn v. Com., 102 Pa. St. 450.

As to the necessity and sufficiency of assignee's bond see supra, XI, B.

For liabilities on bonds, generally, see Bonds.

Although the statutory requirements are not complied with, the bond may be binding as a common-law obligation, and as such be enforced. Andrews v. Ford, 106 Ala. 173, 17 So. 446.

Personal acts of assignee outside the assignment and not done in his representative capacity are not within the obligation of his bond. Israel v. Jordan, 12 Misc. (N. Y.) 552, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 21, 67 N. Y. St. 888; Yeaman v. Payne, 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. 192. See also People v. Chalmers, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 683, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 185. But it has been held that the sureties are liable for failure of assignee to pay over the amount allowed on a creditor's claim, which the trustee was employed as attorney to establish, if he was not also employed to collect the same, and made no separation of the fund in his hands. Taylor v. State, 73 Md. 208, 20 Atl. 914, 11 L. R. A. 852.

Sureties on new or additional bond are liable for the fiduciary conduct of the assignee to the extent of the conditions of their bond from the time he first qualified. Thorne v. Megrue, 5 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 131, 3 Am. L. Rec. 140.

The payment of the amount found to be due upon a settlement is within the obligation of his bond, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties as assignee. National Surety Co. v. Arterburn, (Ky. 1901) 62 S.W. 862.

30. In the absence of fraud.— State v. National Surety Co., 76 Mo. App. 227; Walsh v. Miller, 51 Ohio St. 462, 38 N. E. 381; Cook v. Lehmer, 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. 632.

Collusion between a creditor and an assignee, with a fraudulent purpose of recovering a fraudulent claim from the surety, can be defeated by the surety; but the collusive intent of the assignor and the assignee to defraud the former's creditors does not concern the surety, so long as the judgment for the payment of which it is sought to charge the surety is not procured by fraud. State v. National Surety Co., 76 Mo. App. 227.

31. Bound by orders and judgments.— Indiana.— State v. Musser, 4 Ind. App. 407, 30 N. E. 944, order and judgment approving report of assignee at time of his resignation.

Kentucky.— National Surety Co. v. Arterburn, (Ky. 1901) 62 S. W. 862, 864.

Missouri.— State v. National Surety Co., 76 Mo. App. 227.

New York.— In a suit against the sureties to recover an amount which the assignee had been ordered to pay, the order made in the proceedings against him is prima facie, but not conclusive, evidence of the breach of the bond. People v. White, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 289.

held to be true whether the sureties have a right to appeal from such orders or judgments or not.[32]

3. Discharge of Sureties. An assignee and his sureties will be discharged only upon a regular proceeding for an accounting;[33] and this has been held to be true even where the accounting is wholly formal.[34]

4. What Constitutes Breach. A failure on the part of an assignee to properly discharge his duties as such will constitute a breach of his bond.[35] So it has been held that a breach of the bond may result from a failure to make proper payments of money to persons entitled thereto,[36] from the making of improper payments or the misapplication of the assets of the estate,[37] or from a failure to comply with an order of the court.[38]

Compromise with and release of one surety will not discharge the others. Walsh v. Miller, 51 Ohio St. 462, 38 N. E. 381.

Declaring assignment void has been held to terminate the liability of the sureties. People v. Chalmers, 60 N. Y. 154 [affirming 1 Hun (N. Y.) 683, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. On a proceeding to vacate the trust and procure a reconveyance to the assignor, the court will not, in rendering a decree that the assignee file his final report, and that the trust be ended by compliance with the terms of the decree, lose its jurisdiction over the person of the assignee for the settlement of his final account; nor will the sureties on his bond, by such a termination of the trust, be released from liability for the assignee's failure to pay over when ordered by the court a balance found remaining in his hands. Garver v. Tisinger, 46 Ohio St. 56, 18 N. E. 491.

The mere delay of a creditor to proceed against an assignee for the benefit of creditors until he has become insolvent will not relieve the assignee's surety from liability. People v. White, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 289. To the same effect see Taylor v. State, 73 Md. 208, 20 Atl. 914, 11 L. R. A. 852.

Where, on removal of an assignee in insolvency, his account was presented, with no information as to the items thereof, and the court had no opportunity for an investigation thereof, the court will not cancel the assignee's bond and release sureties in the absence of the creditors interested, though the assignment statute provides that on such removal the bond shall be canceled. Matter of Reynolds, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 397, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 515.

35. Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Wayland, (Tenn. Ch. 1896) 43 S. W. 129. Thus an assignee who neglects to use ordinary diligence to procure or to keep up insurance on the assigned property is liable on his official bond for resulting damages. Hill v. American Surety Co., 107 Wis. 19, 81 N. W. 1024, 82 N. W. 691.

After settlement and discharge.— Where an assignee after bringing suit to settle the assigned estate, but before a report of claims was filed, resigns, he is not liable on his bond for failing to make a creditor a party to the suit, for the reason, if for no other, that the creditor had not been damaged when he resigned; it being then still possible for the new trustee to make him a party, and for him to have his claim allowed. Long v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 571, 52 S. W. 822; German Bank v. Haller, 103 Tenn. 73, 52 S. W. 288, holding sureties liable for an item of credit on the assignee's account, which on appeal was held to have been erroneously charged in the final settlement.

36. Failure to make proper payments.— Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Wayland, (Tenn. Ch. 1896) 43 S. W. 129. But this does not apply to usurious claims against the estate. Powers v. Bibee, (Tenn. Ch. 1895) 35 S. W. 448.

37. Improper payments and misapplication of assets.— Foster v. Mix, 20 Conn. 395; Milburn Mfg. Co. v. Wayland, (Tenn. Ch. 1896) 43 S. W. 129; Becker v. Shayne, 77 Tex. 260, 13 S. W. 1027; Maverick v. Skinner, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 640.

There can be no recovery on an assignee's bond for his failure to deliver to the purchaser property sold by such assignee under

B. Actions to Enforce[39]— 1. In General. Unless otherwise authorized by statute[40] it seems that in cases of voluntary assignments the assignee and his sureties cannot be sued on the assignee's bond by a creditor until it has been ascertained by proper proceeding to what part of the trust fund the creditor is entitled.[41]

2. Parties. It has been held that any creditor,[42] any debtor,[43] or any person aggrieved or injured by a breach of the condition of the assignee's bond[44] may sue thereon. It is sometimes proper to bring the action in the name of the state.[45]

3. Pleading. In an action on an assignee's bond it is necessary to allege a breach of the bond and such breach must be well assigned.[46] The plea must not omit material allegations,[47] and must be good as against an objection for uncertainty.[48] an order of court, unless an order of court is first obtained directing a delivery of the property to the purchaser. State v. Scott, 42 Mo. App. 203.

39. For actions on bonds, generally, see Bonds.

40. Under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 1695, authorizing actions on such bonds on conditions broken, such action may be maintained during the pendency of the assignment proceedings. Hill v. American Surety Co., 107 Wis. 19, 81 N. W. 1024, 82 N. W. 691.

Summary proceeding.—See Universal Lock, etc., Co. v. Blake, 84 Mo. App. 478, construing Mo. Rev. Stat. (1899), § 356, as to entry of judgment against a discharged assignee.

41. Necessity of prior proceeding.— Yarbrough v. Colley, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 683, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 121. But see and compare Berryhill v. Peabody, 77 Minn. 59, 79 N. W. 651. See also supra, XIII, XIV.

Waiver by answer on the merits.— Where an assignment is entirely closed, and the property turned over to a receiver appointed by the court, and the latter has disposed of all the property, an objection that an action on the assignee's bond for neglect to procure insurance on the property cannot be brought until after a final settlement of the assignee's accounts is waived by an answer on the merits. Hill v. American Surety Co., 107 Wis. 19, 81 N. W. 1024, 82 N. W. 691.

Where the assignee has been removed (Berryhill v. Peabody, 77 Minn. 59, 79 N. W. 651), or where, after entering upon the discharge of his duties as assignee, he abandons the execution of the trust and removes from the state (Andrews v. Ford, 106 Ala. 173, 17 So. 446), a creditor having rights under the assignment may sue the assignee and his sureties upon the bond.

Seizure of the assigned property by judicial proceedings, whereby the assignee is prevented from realizing anything, is a bar to an action, by a creditor not consenting to the assignment, on the bond of the assignee. Craddock v. Orand, 72 Tex. 36, 12 S. W. 208.

42 Creditor.— Best v. Johnson, 78 Cal. 217, 20 Pac. 415, 12 Am. St. Rep. 41, 3 L. R. A. 168; Prosser v. Hartley, 35 Minn. 340, 29 N. W. 156; Matter of Stockbridge, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 33; German Bank v. Haller, 103 Tenn. 73, 52 S. W. 288.

Any creditor may be granted leave to sue on the assignee's bond, no matter how many actions are thus authorized. Matter of Stockbridge, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 33.

Where a creditor, who has sued to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent, is paid his claim, but is required to give a refunding bond to await final decision, he still has an interest as creditor entitling him to stand as equitable plaintiff in an action on the bond of a trustee under a deed of assignment executed by the debtor. German Bank v. Haller, 103 Tenn. 73, 52 S. W. 288.

43. Debtors.— Best v. Johnson, 78 Cal. 217, 20 Pac. 415, 12 Am. St. Rep. 41, 3 L. R. A. 168.

44. Any person injured.— State v. Boeppler, 63 Mo. App. 151, construing statute providing that any person injured by "breach of the condition" of the bond may sue.

Insolvent corporation is not a necessary party to a suit against the assignee and the sureties on his bond. Andrews v. Ford, 106 Ala. 173, 17 So. 446.

Substituted assignee may sue the former assignee upon his bond for a wrongful disposition of the estate (Prosser v. Hartley, 35 Minn. 340, 29 N. W. 156, construing Minn. Gen. Stat. (1878), c. 41, §§ 25, 30 [but compare State v. Boeppler, 63 Mo. App. 151, construing Mo. Rev. Stat. (1889), § 438]), or for a failure to deliver over the property pursuant to order of court (Phillips v. Ross, 36 Ohio St. 458).

Third persons, it seems, however, are not entitled to sue. Best v. Johnson, 78 Cal. 217, 20 Pac. 415, 12 Am. St. Rep. 41, 3 L. R. A. 168.

45. In name of state.— An action on the bond executed under Ind. Rev. Stat. (1876), p. 142, can only be brought in the name of the state. Jackson v. Rounds, 59 Ind. 116. To the same effect see State v. Boeppler, 63 Mo. App. 151. Compare Prosser v. Hartley, 35 Minn. 340, 29 N. W. 156.

46. Breach must be well assigned.— Mills v. Skinner, 13 Conn. 436 (breach not well assigned); Craddock v. Orand, 72 Tex. 36, 12 S. W. 208 (suit by non-consenting creditor).

47. Plea or answer.—Morrill v. Richardson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 84.

Pleading to the merits may waive the objection that the action cannot be maintained till the breach of the bond has been determined in the assignment proceedings. Hill v. American Surety Co., 107 Wis. 19, 81 N. W. 1024, 82 N. W. 691.

48. Plea bad for uncertainty.— Morrill v. Richardson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 84.

4. EVIDENCE. In respect of presumptions and burden of proof,[49] the admissibility of evidence,[50] the sufficiency of proof,[51] and variance[52] in actions upon bonds of assignees for creditors, the general rules of evidence have been applied.

5. AMOUNT OF RECOVERY. It seems that in an action by a creditor to recover upon the official bond of an assignee for a breach of the condition of the obligation, the proper measure of damages is the amount of the demand allowed by the assignee in favor of plaintiff as creditor of the estate,[53] together with interest[54] and costs.[55]

ASSIGNMENTS OF ERRORS. See APPEAL AND ERROR; CRIMINAL LAW; JUSTICES OF THE PEACE; NEW TRIAL.

ASSIGNS. All those who take, either immediately or remotely, from or under the assignor, whether by conveyance, devise, descent, or act of law;[3] those to whom rights have been transferred by particular title, such as sale, gift, transfer, or cession;[4] a person to whom any property or right is transferred by a deceased person in his lifetime.[5] (See also ASSIGNEE; ASSIGNMENTS; ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; DEEDS; WILLS.)

51. Sufficiency of proof.— Hill v. American Surety Co., 107 Wis. 19, 81 N. W. 1024, 82 N. W. 691.

Where the deed of assignment offered in evidence by the plaintiff purported to have been executed by one of the assignors, by attorney, and the defendants objected that there was no proof of the execution of the power, it was held that the acknowledgment of the deed in the bond extended to everything necessary to prove the due execution of the deed, and superseded the necessity of offering further proof of the power. Clark v. Mix, 15 Conn. 152.

52. Variance.— Clark v. Mix, 15 Conn. 152; State v. McFarland, (Tenn. Ch. 1895) 35 S. W. 1007.

53. Measure of damages.— State v. Hart, 38 Mo. 44. But in Lahm v. Johnston, 32 Ohio St. 590, it is held that in an action by a creditor, for a failure to account for any of the property assigned, the amount of recovery must be controlled by the proportionate amount of such creditor's claims allowed to the whole amount of those claims only which have been presented and allowed pursuant to the statute.

After damages have been assessed the surety cannot have the amount of a creditor's claim deducted therefrom, on the ground that it was not presented to the assignee under oath, where such claim was allowed and included in all of the assignee's accounts, and no creditor objects. In re Stelle, 34 N. 55. Costs.— Boland v. Benson, 50 Wis. 225, 6 N. W. 819. But where a creditor brought suit to establish his claim, making both the assignors and assignee parties, and judgment was entered against the assignee establishing the claim, but without costs, and against the assignors for the amount of the claim and costs, it was held that the creditor was entitled to dividends only upon the claim without costs, but that, the assignee failing to pay dividends upon it, his sureties were liable for the cost of establishing it against them. I. DEFINITION.

The term "writ of assistance" has been applied to three distinct classes of process: (1) It was a writ issuing from the court of exchequer, addressed to the sheriff, commanding him to be in aid of the king's tenants by knight service, or the king's collectors, debtors, or accountants, to enforce payment of their own dues, in order to enable them to pay their dues to the king;[1] (2) a writ issuing out of the exchequer[2] to authorize any person to take a constable, or other public officer, to seize goods or merchandise prohibited and uncustomed, etc.;[3] (3) a writ issuing out of chancery to the sheriff to assist a receiver, sequestrator,[4] or other party to a suit in chancery, to get possession, under a decree of the court, of lands withheld from him by another party to the suit.[5] It is only in the last sense that the writ will be treated at length.

II. NATURE AND PROPRIETY OF WRIT.

A. Original Writ — 1. Issues in What Suits — a. In General. The cases in which writs of assistance are proper are such as determine the question of title to the specific piece of real property involved in that particular case,[6] or in which the interest of defendant has been directed by the judgment or decree to be sold,[7] the writ being part of the process employed in enforcing the judgment itself.[8] The issuance of the writ has been held to rest in the discretion of the

b. Divorce. The writ will issue in an action or suit for divorce to put a party in possession of land which the judgment or decree vested absolutely in him.[12]

c. Establishing Title Under Burnt-Record Act. Where a petitioner, by decree under a burnt-record act, has established his title to land in the adverse possession of defendant, the writ may issue to put the former into possession.[13]

d. Foreclosure. This writ is also the appropriate remedy and is most commonly used for placing in possession the purchaser at a foreclosure sale.[14]

2. Issues in Whose Favor. It has been held that the writ cannot be regularly issued at the instance of one not a party to the cause;[15] but it is now clear that

B. Proceedings to Procure — 1. Application.[38] One seeking a writ of assistance should make application[39] to the proper court or officer,[40] presenting facts showing its necessity,[41] and, according to the better practice, notice of the motion requesting the issuance of the writ should be given to the adverse party.[42]

2. Order For Delivery of Possession. The tendency of the courts is to dispense with other formalities and to immediately issue the writ;[43] but, by the

39. Order for writ inserted in decree.— It has been held that the decree may include a provision that the writ may issue without further notice (Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600, 29 Pac. 220; Bird v. Belz, 33 Kan. 391, 6 Pac. 627); but, on the other hand, a decree which directed the clerk to issue a writ, on application of plaintiff, without further order of the court, was held to be improper (Bruce v. Roney, 18 Ill. 67; Smith v. Brittenham, 3 Ill. App. 62. See also Landon v. Burke, 36 Wis. 378). However, a decree providing "that, in default of surrendering such possession, a writ of assistance may issue in accordance with the practice of the court," gives no right to the writ without further action by the court, and is not a violation of the rule that, before a writ can issue, there must be a judicial investigation ascertaining the facts justifying such writ. Michigan.— Howard v. Bond, 42 Mich. 131, 3 N. W. 289, holding that demand and refusal must be shown.

Wisconsin.— Loomis v. Wheeler, 21 Wis. 271, holding that the affidavits must show a demand made upon a party to the action who has possession, and a refusal to surrender.

Evidence.— On an application for a writ of assistance to place a party in possession of land purchased at a sheriff's sale made under a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, the sheriff's deed is not admissible in evidence without first producing the judgment and execution. People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220.

Waiver.— On motion for an order of possession in the summary proceeding given an execution purchaser by Ark. Rev. Stat. c. 60, § 68, where defendant appears and disclaims he waives his right to notice in writing to appear and show cause why the order should not be made against him. earlier, and what is said to be the better, practice,[44] the court, on examination and after satisfying itself that possession is withheld by someone concluded by the decree, will make a decretal order that the possession be delivered to the purchaser, unless the decree directed that he should be put in possession.[45]

3. ATTACHMENT AND INJUNCTION. According to the old chancery practice, the order for possession, not being complied with, was followed by an attachment, but this was seldom served and could be dispensed with.[46] This was followed by an injunction commanding the party in possession forthwith to deliver it up,[47] after which, a refusal being duly made known, the writ of assistance issued to the sheriff — of course, on motion.[48]

California.— Montgomery v. Byers, 21 Cal. 107; Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103, 81 Am. C. Defenses to Application — 1. In General. On application for a writ of assistance objections must be made in some more formal way than by verbal statement of the claim,[49] and cannot be received to affect the decree determining the rights of defendants.[50]

2. Commencement of Suit. The mere commencement of an action for the recovery of possession by a purchaser at a judicial sale is not, of itself, sufficient to bar the court decreeing such sale from putting him in possession of the property purchased, by a writ of assistance against a party to the decree.[51]

3. Laches. The right to the writ may be lost by laches.[52]

D. Claims of Third Persons. On a petition seeking the aid of the court to place the purchaser of land at judicial sale in possession, a stranger to the record cannot maintain a counter-petition to have the land sold and applied to his debt, on the ground that he had recovered judgment against one holding a mortgage on the land executed prior to the sale, and had garnished the owner in that suit.[53]

E. Appeal. It has been held that an appeal will not lie from an order awarding or denying the writ,[54] and, even though appealable, one not a party to the record cannot take an appeal.[55]

IV. EXECUTION OF WRIT.

The writ must be executed[56] in the time allowed for executing other writs of execution.[57] In the execution of the writ, the sheriff should place the purchaser on foreclosure of a mortgage of an estate in common in possession of every part and parcel of the land jointly with the other tenants in common, but he cannot remove any of the tenants in common who hold under a title independent of him through whom the purchaser claims.[58]

V. VACATING WRIT.

(Md.) 76, holding that the fact that an injunction had been granted, in favor of the tenant, against the issuance of the writ was no bar to the motion after the injunction had been dissolved).

The writ should not be vacated because of a prior foreclosure entitling the person in possession to such possession, where, being a party, he stood by without apprising the court of the foreclosure or objecting to the writ of assistance, but permitted the court to treat such mortgage as an existing prior lien, the granting of the writ not affecting the validity of such foreclosure (Herr v. Sullivan, 26 Colo. 133, 56 Pac. 175); or, on the application of a mortgagor and his wife, on the ground that they moved upon and occupied the premises as a homestead before the execution of the mortgage by the husband, where it appears that the mortgage was given for the purchase-money of the premises, even though the wife was not a party to the foreclosure (Skinner v. Beatty, 16 Cal. 156).

court can, on summary motion, set it aside,[60] and such motion may be made by a stranger to the record.[61]

I. DEFINITION.

An association may be defined to be a body of persons acting together, without a charter, but upon the methods and forms used by incorporated bodies, for the prosecution of some common enterprise.[1]

II. MEMBERSHIP.

A. Arises When — 1. In General. The rules and by-laws of the association must govern absolutely as to the question of admission to membership, and hence, in determining whether membership exists, reference must be had, in every instance, to the particular circumstances of the case.[2]

1. Black L. Dict.; Ebbinghousen v. Worth Club, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 300.

"It is a generic term, and may indifferently comprehend a voluntary confederacy, which is a partnership dissoluble by the persons who formed it, or a corporate confederacy, deriving its existence from a statute, and dissoluble only by law." Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 104.

Distinguished from "corporation."— While the term "association" is sometimes used as synonymous with the term "corporation" (U. S. v. Trinidad Coal, etc., Co., 137 U. S. 161, 11 S. Ct. 57, 34 L. ed. 640), and has been applied to an organization whose attempted incorporation had been unauthorized and ineffectual (State v. Steele, 37 Minn. 428, 34 N. W. 903. But see Coleman v. Coleman, 78 Ind. 344, in which it was stated that a corporation improperly organized was a partnership pure and simple), yet, as pointed out in Niagara County v. People, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 504, 507, "these institutions differ from corporations in this respect, that the individuals composing the association act by an agency authorized and sanctioned by the law. A 'corporation or body politic' acts in its own person." See also Davison v. Holden, 55 Conn. 103, 10 Atl. 515, 3 Am. St. Rep. 40 (holding that, by association under Conn. Gen. Stat. p. 417, § 7, the associates do not acquire corporate powers); Nightingale v. Barney, 4 Greene (Iowa) 106 (holding that a voluntary unincorporated association is not a person); State v. Steele, 37 Minn. 428, 34 N. W. 903.

Distinguished from "partnership."— Voluntary associations not having any well-defined legal status have, under the pressure of necessity, been treated by learned jurists as partnerships (Pipe v. Bateman, 1 Iowa 369 [except charitable associations]; The Swallow, Olc. Adm. 334; 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,665; Beaumont v. Meredith, 3 Ves. & B. 180), and it has been held that, in their relation to third persons, their members are to be regarded as partners (Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 151, 28 Am. Dec. 650); but, since the death of a member does not, of necessity, work a dissolution of the association and there exists no authority in a single associate to bind the others, whatever may be their relation and liability to third persons, they are not partners inter sese (Burke v. Roper, 79 Ala. 138; White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 318; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 98; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Tenney v. New England Protective Union, 37 Vt. 64). See also Burt v. Lathrop, 52 Mich. 106, 17 N. W. 716 (holding that an association in which the conditions of membership are the payment of an entry-fee and of pro rata assessments, but which does no business involving profit or loss, is not a partnership); Ash v. Guré, 97 Pa. St. 493, 39 Am. Rep. 818 (holding that the members of a Masonic lodge are presumptively not partners).

Synonymous with "company."— The term "association" is often used as synonymous with "company." Lee Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. State, 60 Miss. 395; Mills v. State, 23 Tex. 295.

Use in corporate names.— The term "association" also enters into the names bestowed by the legislature upon many corporations. In this connection, it is used without any very uniform discrimination as to its precise meaning, but seems to be, on the whole, preferred for bodies which are not vested with full and perfect corporate rights and powers; also for organizations formed to promote the improvement, welfare, or advantage of the public as distinguished from those whose object is the improvement of members, for which "society" is preferred, or the making of profits, for which "company" is the better term. Abbott L. Dict.

Membership a question of fact for jury.— Whether parties have performed acts which constitute them members of an association is a question of fact for the jury, the intent and understanding of the parties being a material consideration. Murray v. Walker, 83 Iowa 202, 48 N. W. 1075; Smith v. Hollister, 32 Vt. 695.

Evidence sufficient to show membership.— Evidence that, after the death of the treasurer of an association, in 1868, a person called himself a surviving partner of the treasurer, in an answer to a bill in equity brought by the administrator against the other members and the original member whose interest such

2. SIGNING ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION. While, as a general rule, signing the articles of association is necessary to constitute membership,[3] yet, where it is shown that a person paid in the prescribed amount of money and was treated and considered as a member, he will be so regarded although he never signed the constitution, which provided that any person wishing to become a member should subscribe it on receiving the approval of the board of directors.[4]

B. Power of Court to Compel Admission. Associations have absolute control over their rolls, and no power exists in courts to compel an admission to membership.[5]

C. Termination of Membership — 1. WITHDRAWAL. Associations are of so diverse a character that no definite rule can be laid down as to what will constitute a voluntary withdrawal therefrom. While the transfer of a member's interest will usually be deemed sufficient, regard must be had to the constitution, by-laws, and articles of agreement under which the association was organized, and, in order that a withdrawal may be deemed effectual, it must be accomplished in the manner therein prescribed.[6]

2. EXPULSION — a. Grounds — (1) VIOLATION OF RULES. The right of expulsion may be based upon a violation of such of the established rules of the association as have been subscribed or assented to by the members[7] and expressly person had bought; also that, to raise money for the business, he, with the other members, afterward signed a note, and a power of attorney authorizing the agent to sell real estate, and that he subsequently attended a meeting of the association in 1871, is sufficient to warrant a finding that he was a member thereof in 1875. It is by reason of the action and of the assent of members of the voluntary association that one becomes associated with them in the common undertaking, and not by any outside agency, or by the individual's action. Membership is a privilege, which may be accorded or withheld, and not a right, which can be gained independently and then enforced. So when, as by the plaintiff's own showing, the committee refused to admit him as a member, or to confirm his election, he was remediless against that refusal"); White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Where the articles provided that "any member of the Division by surrendering his certificate (of membership) to the storekeeper, may draw from the store in goods a sum not exceeding fo[u]r dollars, such certificate to be returned when the amount thus drawn shall have been paid, if paid within thirty days," it was held that this provision was designed to furnish a way by which a member could withdraw from the association. Stimson v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 91, 95.

Uniting with another association of a similar character cannot constitute a forfeiture of membership where there is no provision in the constitution forbidding it, although such a provision is contained in the constitution of the second organization. Mere technical and unwitting violation will not justify expulsion where the word "knowingly" is used in the constitution as applied to a contravention of the rules. Worrilow's Appeal, 2 Del. Co. (Pa.) 66; Glover v. Farmers,' etc., Lodge, 1 Del. Co. (Pa.) 317.

Acts not required by rules.— Refusal to do an act not required by the constitution or by-laws and foreign to the objects of the association cannot be made the ground of expulsion. Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531. And where there is nothing in the rules compelling a member to arbitrate, nor authorizing the association to discipline a member for such conduct, an association cannot suspend a member for exercising, in good faith, his statutory right to file a mechanic's lien on the property of an associate member without first seeking to arbitrate. Miller v. New York provide for the expulsion of any members who have been guilty of a violation of such rules.[8]

(II) Violation of Associate Objects. A member may also be expelled for such conduct as clearly violates the fundamental objects of the association, and which, if proceeded in and allowed, would thwart those objects or bring the association into disrepute.[9]

b. Procedure — (I) In General. In order that an expulsion may be deemed justifiable, even though it be for proper cause, notice of the charges and an opportunity to be heard thereon must be given to the delinquent member, and all rules of procedure set forth in the constitution and by-laws, and designed to safeguard his rights, carefully followed;[10] but proceedings under articles of association agreed to by all the members are to be considered without too much regard for technicalities, and substantial justice is to be kept in view rather than mere form.[11]

(II) Waiver of Irregularities. Where a member has appeared and examined witnesses, without objection to the irregularity of the proceedings, he thereby waives formal notice of the charges against him.[12]

(III) Sufficiency of Charges. Charges will be deemed sufficiently specific where they advise the member of their nature, and enable him to prepare for his defense.[13]

(IV) Proof on Default. A society has no right, without proving the charges against a member, to expel him merely because he does not appear. Even though he does not appear, proof of his offense should be required.[14]

D. Reinstatement — 1. In General. Where a member has been regularly tried and expelled, the judicial action of the association is not subject to review, and the courts will look at the proceedings only so far as to see that they are in accordance with the constitution and by-laws, that there has been no abuse of power, and that some evidence exists, however slight, sustaining the charge on Manning v. Klein, 1 Pa. Super. Ct. 210 [affirming 4 Pa. Dist. 599, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 609].

8. Rules must provide for expulsion.— The rules of the association must clearly provide for expulsion, and the refusal of a member to join in a strike when, by the constitution, it is punishable by fine only cannot be made ground for an expulsion. which the expulsion was ordered.[15] Hence, the power of a court of equity to interfere in cases of expulsion is limited to those cases where the expulsion was in bad faith, or was unwarranted by the constitution and by-laws.[16] It has been held in some cases, also, that power of the courts is limited to cases where the association has been shown to possess real or personal property, or to be engaged in some pecuniary enterprise in which the members had an interest, and whereby property rights were necessarily involved.[17]

2. Necessity of Exhausting Remedies in Association. Before applying to the courts for relief, an expelled member must exhaust all remedies of appeal available to him within the association itself,[18] though it has been held that this duty arises only where the association is acting strictly within its powers.[19]

III. Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of Association.

2. TO ADOPT CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS — a. In General. An association being solely a creature of convention between the members, no check exists upon its power to enact such constitution or by-laws as the associates may choose to adopt, so long as they do not provide for the commission of illegal acts,[22] are not in themselves contrary to public policy,[23] or do not affect vested interests.[24] Such constitution and by-laws constitute a contract between the members,[25] and are binding alike on the association and its members.[26] The courts possess no power to pass on the question of the reasonableness of such rules and regulations as are agreed to by the associates for the conducting of their joint affairs.[27] It has selves under the name thereof, an injunction has been granted restraining their use of such name (Rudolph v. Southern Beneficial League, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 135, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 199; McGlynn v. Post, 21 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 97), and an injunction has issued to restrain a corporation from making use of the title of an association where it was alleged that plaintiffs were well known as a dramatic club, and that defendants' wrongful appropriation of the association name had caused and would cause them loss and damage (Aiello v. Montecalfo, 21 R. I. 496, 44 Atl. 931).

Expulsion involving battery.— Thus, a member is not bound by a rule of the society governing expulsion when it involves the commission of a battery. State v. Williams, 75 N. C. 134.

Agricultural purposes and improvement of stock.— Under 1 Ind. Rev. Stat. (1876), p. 923, § 2, concerning voluntary associations, an association is properly organized for the purpose of purchasing suitable grounds for a driving park, for the promotion of agriculture, for the improvement of horses in speed, style, action, and blood, and for the health and recreation of its members. Mullen v. Beech Grove Driving Park, 64 Ind. 202.

Profits dependent on forfeitures of membership.—An investment association, wherein the profits are dependent on the failure of a large number of the members to meet their subscriptions, and thus forfeit their membership, is not illegal. Union Invest. Assoc. v. Lutz, 50 Ill. App. 176.

Surrender of property, with right of survivorship.—An association by which each member surrendered his property into one common stock for the mutual benefit of all, during their joint lives, with the right of survivorship, reserving to each the privilege to secede at any time during his life, was not unlawful. Schriber v. Rapp, 5 Watts (Pa.) 351, 30 Am. Dec. 327.

23. Weatherly v. Montgomery County Medical, etc., Soc., 76 Ala. 567.

Providing method for redressing grievances. — Though a by-law may provide a method for redressing grievances to which members will be compelled to resort before invoking the aid of a court, yet, where it contains a provision submitting matters in controversy to the exclusive cognizance of a body created by the association or prohibiting resort by a member to legal tribunals, it is void as tending to oust the courts of jurisdiction. Bauer v. Samson Lodge, K. P., 102 Ind. 262, 1 N. E. 571; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112, 69 Am. Dec. 665; Sweeney v. Rev. Hugh McLaughlin Beneficial Soc., 14 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 466, 486.

Repair and preservation of canal.—Where a canal was out of repair, and, the trustees being unprepared to make the necessary repairs, a number of persons interested in the navigation of the canal formed an association for the special purpose of advancing the necessary funds and keeping the canal in repair, under a contract with the trustees, delegating the management of the canal and the collection of the tolls to them, there was nothing in the organization or objects of this association, or in its contract with the trustees, which was contrary to public policy. Weaver v. Trustees Wabash, etc., Canal, 28 Ind. 112.

Restraint of trade.—A constitutional provision forbidding members to teach their trade to others without the permission of the association is not contrary to public policy as being in unlawful restraint of trade (Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 179); but a by-law of a liverymen's association which binds the members not to do business with any person who does not patronize its members exclusively, and prevents any of them from letting a hearse to a private party for a funeral where the undertaker in charge is reputed to patronize non-union liveries, or to any person whose family for the occasion patronizes a non-union livery, is unlawful as against public policy (Gatzow v. Buening, 106 Wis. 1, 81 N. W. 1003, 80 Am. St. Rep. 17, 49 L. R. A. 475).

24. Thus, if a member has become entitled to sick benefits or to endowments, no by-law is valid which restricts his right to recovery (Hogan v. Pacific Endowment League, 99 Cal. 248, 33 Pac. 924; People v. McDonough, 8 N. Y. App. Div. 591, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 214, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 1147, 69 N. Y. St. 593; Gundlach v. Germania Mechanics' Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Poultney v. Bachman, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. been uniformly held, however that the courts may, in a proper case, construe and fix their meaning.[28]

b. Amendments. A rule or by-law intended merely to regulate a question of procedure at future meetings is subject to amendment or repeal at any time, at the mere will of a majority of the members present.[29]

3. To Hold Property — a. Realty. Except where so provided by statute,[30] a mere voluntary association is incapable of holding realty in its society name,[31]

Pac. 887; Hammerstein v. Parsons, 38 Mo. App. 332; Hess v. Johnson, 41 N. Y. App. Div. 465, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 983; Kehlenbeck v. Logeman, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 447; Cunniff v. Jamour, 31 Misc. (N. It was at first a matter of some doubt whether the courts would take cognizance of the regulations of unincorporated associations. Thus, in Lloyd v. Loaring, 6 Ves. Jr. 773, which was a suit brought by some of the members of a Masonic lodge to compel the delivery of certain property belonging to it which the defendant had wrongfully taken, Lord Eldon, after quoting a statement by Chancellor Thurlow in Cullen v. Queensberry, 1 Bro. Ch. 101, to the effect that he would convince the parties that they had no laws and constitutions, proceeded to say that he was alarmed at the notion that these voluntary societies should be permitted to state all their laws, forms, and constitutions upon the record, and then to tell the court that they were individuals. See also People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Kentucky Lodge No. 39, I. O. O. F. v. White, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 418. There is now, however, little doubt but that, subject to the exceptions mentioned, courts will enforce all rules and regulations, properly adopted, on the ground that they constitute agreements by the members inter sese.

A rule "that no officer be permitted to occupy his chair while under charges, in any temple of our order" will not be broadly construed so as to exclude him from the performance of all duties of his office, but in its literal meaning and so as merely to prevent his occupying the chair at meetings. But compare Torrey v. Baker, 1 Allen (Mass.) 120, holding that, where it was provided in the articles of association that amendments were valid only when passed by a two-thirds vote, an amendment passed by less than two thirds of the members present is invalid, and this even though, after the meeting is over, enough other members to make up the requisite number request, in writing, to be allowed to record their votes in the affirmative. It must be noted, however, that the question really involved in this case was as to the propriety of dissolving the association.

Right to be cestui que trust.— In German Land Assoc. v. Scholler, 10 Minn. 331, it was held that an unincorporated association of persons could not, in its associate name, be a cestui que trust of real estate; but in Ligand consequently such society has no power to receive real property either by grant[32] or devise.[33]

b. Personalty. There is no legal impediment to the holding of personalty by an association, though the title thereto must perforce vest in the individual members;[34] but an association is disqualified from receiving a legacy bequeathed to it in its organization name.[35]

B. Liabilities. The association will be liable for articles received and used by its agents in its business[36] and for the conversion of property intrusted to its president as such, where it has negligently allowed such president to appropriate the property to his own use.[37]

IV. MEETINGS.

A. In General — 1. By What Governed. If the articles of association, the constitution, or by-laws regulate the time, place, and manner of holding meetings, their provisions must be conformed to in all respects;[38] but if no rules or regulations exist, common parliamentary principles in use by all deliberative assemblies may be resorted to in considering the regularity of the proceedings.[39]

2. NOTICE — a. In General. All the members must be notified of the time and place of a special meeting, and of the particular purpose for which it is called,[40] and, where no length of time is prescribed, reasonable notice must be given.[41]

b. Waiver of Irregularities. If, however, all the members appear at the meeting and, without objection, participate in the proceedings thereof, it will be deemed a waiver of any defect due to insufficiency of notice.[42]

3. SUNDAY MEETINGS. In the absence of a positive statutory prohibition, the mere fact that the meeting is held on Sunday does not invalidate the proceedings thereof.[43]

4. PROCEEDINGS — a. In General. — (I) WHEN RULES EXIST. No definite principle can be laid down, as to the business which may properly be brought before the meeting, further than to say that such only may be transacted thereat as is within the scope permitted by the constitution and by-laws of the association, the decision in each case turning upon a construction of the particular provision involved.[44]

(II) IN ABSENCE OF RULES. An association without articles, constitution, or rules is subject to no check upon its powers, but can make changes at will at any meeting duly held, except that it cannot expel a member without notice, or adopt any measure subversive of the objects for which the association was formed.[45]

b. Voting. A member present at a meeting is under obligation to vote, for if he does not, he will be counted with the majority, such being the general rule of parliamentary assemblies.[46]

B. Adjourned Meetings. In the absence of a prohibitory rule, a meeting may properly be adjourned to a future date by those persons thereat, even though they constitute less than the required quorum, and notice of such adjourned meeting need not be given where the first meeting has been regularly called. At such adjourned meeting all business may be transacted which might have been brought before the original meeting, the former being regarded as a mere continuation of the latter.[47]

V. OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

A. Election. The election of officers is ordinarily regulated by the constitution and by-laws of the association,[48] but in the absence thereof common parliamentary rules control.[49]

B. Power to Bind Association. The powers and authorities of the officers of an association are generally regulated by the constitution and by-laws, in the absence of which regard will be had to the objects of the organization and the manner in which its affairs are conducted, the principles applicable to the question of agency being permitted to govern.[50] Where the officers act under special and limited powers, their acts must be in strict conformity therewith or the association will not be bound thereby.[51]

C. Liability — 1. To Members. An officer is liable to his co-members for all injury caused to the joint interest through unauthorized acts on his part which the society has never ratified,[52] as well as where he refuses to surrender property intrusted to him.[53]

2. To Third Persons. Aside from their general liability as members, it has been held that officers are, as a rule, personally responsible on contracts which they have entered into, on behalf of the association, with third parties,[54] and this

In the absence of all authority on the part of the managers to borrow money or increase the capital, a ratification by them of the purchase of property by the president and other members is not sufficient to bind the association. Crum's Appeal, 66 Pa. St. 474.

Power to incorporate.— The executive board has no power to convert the association into a corporation, in the absence of a provision in the constitution or by-laws giving them authority so to do or of a resolution of the members to that effect. Rudolph v. Southern Beneficial League, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 135, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 199; Southern Steam Packet Co. v. Magrath, McMull. Eq. (S. C.) 98.

Action as a board.—When the constitution provides that certain acts shall be done by and with the authority of the board of directors, the authority of the directors acting as a board is required, and, hence, the assent of the individuals composing it, given separately, is not sufficient. Skinner v. Dayton, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 513, 10 Am. Dec. 286; Pease v. Sandusky Steamboat Co., 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 150, 2 West. L. J. 550. In Miller v. Chance, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 399, the board of directors consisted of eleven members, two of whom were ex officio members, and it was held that the action of five of the appointed members was sufficient to bind the society, under a statute which permitted the board to mortgage the realty of the association.

52. Boody v. Drew, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 69.

Ratification of unauthorized acts.— The directors of a union store will not be held accountable for losses occasioned by permitting sales on credit, selling at too low a figure, depreciation of the stock, or error in estimating current expenses, the subject having been discussed at meetings and all the members, in proportion to their purchases, having shared in the advantage of buying cheaply. Objects of association completed.— Where an association was formed for the purpose of providing a fund out of which to pay each member drafted into the army a certain sum or to furnish him with a substitute, and, no draft having taken place, a resolution of the society directed the treasurer to return to each member the amount contributed by the latter to the original fund, it was held that an action for money had and received might be maintained by a member against the treasurer to recover the amount of a contribution. Koehler v. Brown, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 78. But see Murray v. McHugh, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 158, where, an association having been formed for the purpose of aiding the people of Ireland in their struggle against England, the object of which failed, the plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount of his contribution as money had and received, and, it being shown that there were some incidental charges and expenses, also losses by bad investment, it was held that the proper form of action must be for an accounting.

is true unless the agreement itself clearly indicates an intention to look to the association solely.[55]

D. Removal. In the absence of a definite provision concerning the tenure of office, an officer holds his position merely at the pleasure of the association, and may be removed without either cause or notice,[56] though where such provision exists it is controlling.[57]

VI. RIGHTS, POWERS, AND LIABILITIES OF MEMBERS.

A. Rights in Associate Property. As a voluntary association has no separate entity, its property is deemed to be in the joint ownership of the members, who have, consequently, the right to manage, control, and dispose of it at their pleasure, subject, however, to the provisions and stipulations of the contract under which it is held, as contained in the constitution, by-laws, or other rules and regulations adopted by the society.[58]

B. Power to Bind Association — 1. Single Member. In the absence of authority specially conferred, a single member has no power to bind the association.[59]

2. Majority of Members. A majority of members, however, possess authority to control the action of the association as to all matters within the scope of the objects for which the association was formed, whether such objects are mentioned in the articles of association or are necessarily implied therefrom.[60]

C. Liability of Members — 1. For Debts of Association — a. In General.

The principle is well stated by Paine, J., in Fredendall v. Taylor, 23 Wis. 538, 540, 99 Am. Dec. 203, when he observes: "It is conceded that the State Fireman's Association was not incorporated at this time, and had no legal existence, so that it could contract or be sued as such. And where such is the case, a committee which assumes to contract for services for such an irresponsible, intangible association, must become personally liable, else there is no liability whatever. One professing to act as agent, if he does not bind his principal, binds himself. . . . And it can make no difference that the reason why he does not bind his principal, is because the principal for whom he professes to act has no existence."

56. Ostrom v. Greene, 161 N. Y. 353, 55 N. E. 919.

The action of members will not be sustained where such members, having withdrawn from a regular meeting merely on account of opposition to the duly elected officers, met and passed a resolution expelling the latter from office, and constituting themselves their successors. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav., etc., Soc., 70 Cal. 163, 12 Pac. 114. But, when officers themselves secede, with no intention of further continuing to hold their positions, the remaining members, though a minority of the old association, are at liberty to consider the offices vacant and fill the same by election. Rights of suspended members.—Where, under the constitution and by-laws, all members in good standing had sole control of the funds, an assignment of the property of the association, executed pursuant to a vote at a regular meeting by all the members in good standing, will be sufficient to vest complete title thereto in the assignee. While suspended members who had the right to be reinstated on payment of arrearages of dues may have had a contingent interest in the funds, they were not necessary parties to the assignment. Funds cannot be diverted to foreign use.— A majority of the members of an association formed for the purpose of freeing a city ward from a conscription cannot, after the war has ceased and all danger of a draft removed, devote the surplus left in the treasury to the establishment of a dispensary, the funds not having been contributed for any such purpose. Abels v. McKeen, 18 N. J. Eq. 462.

Each member of an association is liable for the debts thereof[61] incurred during his period of membership,[62] and which have been necessarily contracted for the purpose of carrying out the objects for which the association was formed.[63]

b. Dehors Associate Scope. If the debt is contracted in a transaction entirely dehors the scope of the association, only those members who assent, participate, or ratify, are liable.[64]

Rep. 436, Seevers, J., said: "It is immaterial whether they be so held because they held themselves out as agents for a principal that had no existence, or on the ground that they must, under the contract, be regarded as principals, for the simple reason that there is no other principal in existence."

Intent of members immaterial.— In Lawler v. Murphy, 58 Conn. 294, 313, 20 Atl. 457, 8 L. R. A. 113, Seymour, J., said: "Individual members of an unincorporated association are liable for contracts made in the name of the association, without regard to the question whether they so intended or so understood the law, and even if the other party contracted in form with the association and was ignorant of the names of the individual members composing it." To same effect see Bennett v. Lathrop, 71 Conn. 613, 42 Atl. 634, 71 Am. St. Rep. 222.

Exemption clause in articles.— The eleventh article of an association known as the Union Bank of Georgetown provided that every person dealing with it "disavows having recourse, on any pretence whatever, to the person, or separate property of any present or future member of this company." This, it was held, did not prevent a laborer from recovering against the individual members. Davis v. Beverly, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 35, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,627. So, too, the individual members of an association are personally responsible for the amount of certain promissory notes, illegally issued, containing, in addition to the promise to pay, a stipulation that such notes were to be met from "their joint funds, according to their articles of association," even though such articles contain a provision exempting the members from liability. Hess v. Werts, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 356.

Death or withdrawal of other members.— The death or withdrawal of a member of the association does not affect the liability of those who remain for the debts of the organization when it was not designed that the death or withdrawal should have such an effect, the organization being intended to be perpetual. Troy Iron, etc., Factory v. Corning, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 231; Tenney v. New England Protective Union, 37 Vt. 64. If, however, an association is insolvent, it may refuse to accept the surrender of a certificate of membership and insist that the holder pay his proportion of the loss. Stimson v. Lewis, 36 Vt. 91.

Shipping associations.— Certain shippers on Lake Ontario formed an association with the owners of canal-boats running between Albany and Oswego for the transportation of merchandise between the city of New York and certain ports on the St. Lawrence river and Lake Ontario. Plaintiff shipped certain goods from the city of New York directed to Ogdensburg, and they were lost on the lake passage after leaving Oswego. The members of the association were, it was held, jointly liable for the value of the goods, though the owners of the canal-boats had no interest in the vessels on the lake. 2. FOR TORTS OF ASSOCIATION. A member is responsible for tortious acts committed by the association when it can fairly be assumed that they were within the scope of the purposes for which the organization was formed.[65]

VII. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST ASSOCIATIONS.

A. In General — 1. By Association — a. In General — (I) In Names of Individual Members. An association being only a collection of individuals, it could not, at common law, sue by its own name,[66] and an action brought by such an association was necessarily brought in the names of all the individual members.[67]

(II) By One or More — (A) As Trustees. A modification of the common-law rule, however, introduced by equity in the interest of practical convenience and now generally recognized, allows suits to be brought by one or more members for the use and benefit of all;[68] but it has been held that, in order that a

When such is not the case, consent or ratification must be proved."

Members of a college class voting, or assenting to the vote whereby the publication of a class book was ordered, are personally liable for the expense at the suit of one who prints it under a contract with a member of the class, alleged to be the business manager of the publication. Willcox v. Arnold, 162 Mass. 577, 39 N. E. 414.

Determinate membership necessary.— Members of an association can be held liable to contribution in equity for debts and expenses authorized at meetings of the association only where it appears that the association is one with a determinate membership differentiated from the general public, and that the meetings authorizing the expenditure were limited in participation to such members. Cheney v. Goodwin, 88 Me. 563, 34 Atl. 420.

65. Blacklisting.— Members of a merchants' protective association are responsible in an action for libel on account of its acts in wrongfully publishing plaintiff's name in a blacklist as one who refused to pay his honest debts. Boycotting.—Where an association effects a withdrawal of patronage by means of a coercive by-law imposing a fine or penalty for its violation, the members are liable as for an unlawful conspiracy. Personal injuries.— In Vredenburg v. Behan, 33 La. Ann. 627, it was held that members of an unincorporated rifle club were responsible for keeping a ferocious bear which broke loose and killed plaintiff's husband, and the mere fact that some of them had no knowledge that the bear was kept on the association grounds was insufficient to exempt them from liability.

Death of members pending suit.— It is im-suit may be brought in this form, it must appear that the members of the association have such a common interest that, were they all before the court, they would be entitled to bring the action in their individual names.[69]

(B) As Owner of Res or Person With Whom Contract Was Made. Where the cause of action has vested in one or more of the officers, suit may be brought in the name of the individual holder or holders of the title to the res in controversy, or with whom the agreement sued upon was made.[70]

b. Statutory Regulations. In some of the states, moreover, statutes have been passed providing that actions may be brought by the association, either in its own name[71] or in the name of one or more of its officers.[72] These statutes have been held to apply to foreign associations.[73]

2. Against Association. Similarly, in absence of statutory provisions, suits against associations should be brought against the individual members;[74] but by material that while such suit was pending the number of members was reduced to less than a quorum, as the right of the association to sue in this form must be determined by its status when the action was brought. Lilly v. Tobbein, (Mo. 1890) 13 S. W. 1060; Kuehl v. Meyer, 50 Mo. App. 648.

Action by holder of legal title to realty.— An action to collect a subscription to enable a designated committee to erect one building and repair another was held to be properly brought in the name of the official in whom was vested the title to the real estate sought to be improved by the fund subscribed. Egan v. Bonacum, 38 Nebr. 577, 57 N. W. 288.

Suit by acting treasurer.— The constitution of an association providing that the treasurer should have the custody of its personalty, it was held that an acting treasurer, who had not been elected, was not competent to sue, although the original appointee had gone out of office. Illegal association.— But the above provision does not apply to an association formed for an illegal purpose or for a purpose against public policy. Hence, an organization created for the purpose of controlling the price of brick, in the interest of its members, will not be permitted to sue in the name adopted for the transaction of its business, though an action may be brought by the individual members. Jackson v. Akron Brick Assoc., 53 Ohio St. 303, 41 N. E. 257, 57 Am. St. Rep. 637, 35 L. R. A. 287.

72. Thus, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1919, the president or treasurer of an unincorporated association consisting of seven or more persons is permitted to bring an action or special proceeding "to recover any property or upon any cause of action for or upon which all the associates may maintain such an action or special proceeding by reason of their interest or ownership therein, either jointly or in common." Composition of association.— The statute does not apply to an association composed, not of legal or natural persons, but of other unincorporated societies. Ruhl v. Ware, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 473, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 624, 22 N. Y. St. 423.

Cause of action must vest in association.— In order that the statute may apply the cause of action must vest in the association as such. It is not sufficient that the property sued for belongs severally to the members. Corning v. Greene, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 33.

Situs of action.— Under the foregoing statute, the situs of the action is to be regarded as fixed by the residence of the officer bringing suit. Brooks v. Dinsmore, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 428, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 103, 28 N. Y. St. 421, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 98; Bacon v. Dinsmore, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 368.

statute in some states an association may be sued by its association name,[75] while in others the action may be brought against one or more designated officers.[76]

B. Between Association and Members. As the common law considered an association wholly in the light of a partnership, the organization could neither sue nor be sued at law by a member;[77] but, by statute, such actions are per-

Cal. 531; Van Houten v. Pine, 36 N. J. Eq. 133. But see Davison v. Holden, 55 Conn. 103, 10 Atl. 515, 3 Am. St. Rep. 40, wherein Pardee, J., said: "A suit may be instituted against them [the members] as individuals, as at common law, if the plaintiff will take the risk of naming all and of naming them correctly. If he names only a part of those who should be named, a plea in abatement may be interposed, specifying omitted names; if no such plea is interposed those who are named are properly sued and must submit to judgment."

Members not served.—Where suit was brought against the members of an association and only one was served with process, issue was joined, and trial had at which defendant's subscription to the articles of association was proved, it was held that plaintiff was under no obligation to prove the signatures of the other members. Ridgely v. Dobson, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 118.

Where one of the defendants was defaulted, the remainder appearing and denying liability, and plaintiff proved on the trial that the contract sued upon was made by the association and that the answering defendants were members, it was held not necessary to prove that the defaulting defendant was likewise a member. Downing v. Mann, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 36, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 204.

Delaying suit to determine ultimate liability.— In an action on a promissory note signed by the managing agent of the association, certain defendants filed a cross-complaint against plaintiff and those of the defendants who had held the position of directors, setting up that the goods had been bought on credit, in violation of articles of association, and asking that, if judgment were recovered, execution might be first directed against the property of the directors. The court, however, declined to delay the relief to which plaintiff was entitled pending an inquiry to ascertain which of the defendants, as between themselves, was primarily liable for the debt. Effect of incorporation pending action.— It has been held that where the association has subsequently become incorporated, an amendment will not be permitted substituting the title of the corporation for that of the association. Marsh River Lodge, F. & A. M. v. Brooks, 61 Me. 585. But see Lilly v. Tobbein, (Mo. 1890) 13 S. W. 1060, intimating a contrary rule.

Only designated officers may be sued.— N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1919, permits the maintenance of an action or special proceeding against the president or treasurer of an association composed of seven or more members upon any cause of action for which the plaintiff could have proceeded against all the associates, and suit against the president, secretary, and treasurer is improperly brought. Schmidt v. Gunther, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 452.

Joinder of members not necessary.— It is sufficient to bring the action against the president of the association as such, and it is not necessary to make the members additional parties. New York Bd. Fire Underwriters v. Whipple, 36 N. Y. App. Div. 49, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 188; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92.

Joint liability must be shown.— But the right to sue the officer is merely for the convenience of plaintiff and in order that he may more speedily reach the personal property of the association. In order to recover, he must both allege and prove that all the members are liable for the claim either jointly or severally. McCabe v. Goodfellow, 133 N. Y. 89, 30 N. E. 728, 44 N. Y. St. 253, 17 L. R. A. 204 [reversing 15 N. Y. Suppl. 377, 39 N. Y. St. 941, 21 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 65].

Parol evidence is admissible in an action against the president for the purpose of proving that the association consists of seven or more members when, on notice, defendant fails to produce the constitution and by-laws. Haden v. Clarke, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 291, 32 N. Y. St. 478.

Statutory remedy not exclusive.— The mere fact that the statute gives a right to bring suit against the association by name or against a particular officer thereof will not prevent the maintenance of an action against the individual members. mitted,[78] and a member is not precluded from maintaining an action at law against the committee who ordered certain work to be done by him for the association.[79]

VIII. TERMINATION OF ASSOCIATION.

A. In General. It has been intimated that the existence of a state of facts sufficient to constitute the termination of an ordinary partnership will justify the court in assuming that there has been a dissolution of the association, the same principles applying in both instances,[80] but such a statement is scarcely accurate. Thus, while dissolution may always be had upon the unanimous consent of the members,[81] unlike a partnership, the death of a member will not work the dissolution of an association unless such an intent appears to have existed at the time of its organization,[82] nor will the mere withdrawal of members, ipso facto, be sufficient if it is evident that the association was designed to have a continuing existence.[83] The sole rule which can be laid down appears to be, therefore, that an

But it has been held that the Pennsylvania act of April 14, 1838, section 1, allowing suits to be brought by one firm against another though there are members common to both, does not authorize the bringing of an action by an association against one of its members, the party sued being named both as plaintiff and defendant. 80. Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531.

In case of violent dissensions and irreconcilable differences between the members of a voluntary association, judgment will be rendered at the suit of one or against all the others, dissolving the society (Lafond v. Deems, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 41); but no action will be entertained for such a purpose upon mere proof of differences of opinion, bad temper, the ordinary disputes common to such societies, nor upon proof of injuries or injustice sustained by one through the vote or action of the society, if he have another remedy (Fischer v. Raab, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 87).

Where the association unlawfully expelled a member, it has been held that, while grounds are afforded for subsequent proceedings to compel reinstatement, a court of equity is not justified in decreeing a dissolution. Burke v. Roper, 79 Ala. 138. But a contrary doctrine was enunciated in Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531, where the fact that the association had expelled a member because he refused to take an oath not required by the constitution and by-laws, and foreign to its objects, was held sufficient reason why a dissolution should be decreed. The association afterward rescinded its order of expulsion, whereupon (Gorman v. Russell, 18 Cal. 688) the court took the view that no cause then existed why it should be terminated.

The methods pointed out by the constitution or by-laws must be carefully observed. Hence, where it was provided that no dissolution could be effected while ten members were willing to have the society continue in existence, and a special meeting was held at which less than ten members voted against a dissolution, the court took the view that such dissolution was invalid when the notice of meeting failed to specify the purpose for which it was held. M. v. Jaennichen, 116 Mich. 129, 74 N. W. 458.

Effect of incorporation.— The mere fact that a corporation is formed under the same name, for the same purposes, and by many of the members of the association, will not work a dissolution of the society where each is distinct in meetings, officers, property, and other incidents, even though the association had voted to accept the charter and, in some respects, assumed to be a corporation, provided association is to be regarded as dissolved only when the objects of the society have been entirely abandoned and the power to resume business does not exist.[84]

B. Effect. As long as the association continues in existence and with the purposes for which it was organized unfulfilled, its funds are impressed with a quasi trust, terminable only by unanimous consent of the members; but, upon its dissolution, the property held by it becomes subject to division among the associates in proportion to the amount contributed by each,[85] provided the rights of third parties have not intervened and the association does not partake of the nature of a charity.[86] On the other hand, when assets fail to equal debts, courts will apportion the liabilities among the members.[87]

Effect of provision for holding over of officers.—An association of Free Masons in 1836 disposed of their hall, furniture, and equipment pursuant to a vote of the chapter. For twenty-three years it held no meetings, elected no officers, performed no acts as an association and, in fact, ceased to have any visible existence. I. DEFINITIONS.

A. Assumpsit. Assumpsit is an undertaking, either express or implied, to perform an oral or written agreement.[1]

B. Action of Assumpsit — 1. IN GENERAL. The action of assumpsit is an

1. Assumpsit, in the law of contracts, is a promise or undertaking, either express or implied, made either orally or in writing not under seal. Rapalje & L. L. Dict.

Assumpsit is founded upon an undertaking or promise of defendant not under seal. Hurlock v. Murphy. 2 Houst. (Del.) 550.

Express assumpsit is an undertaking made orally, by writing not under seal, or by matter of record, to perform an act or to pay a sum of money to another. Bouvier L. Dict.

Implied assumpsit is an undertaking presumed in law to have been made by a party from his conduct, though he has not made an express promise. Willenborg v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 11 Ill. App. 298.

action for the recovery of damages for the non-performance of an oral or simple written contract.[2]

2. SPECIAL ASSUMPSIT. Special assumpsit is an action of assumpsit brought upon an express contract or promise.[3]

3. GENERAL ASSUMPSIT OR INDEBITATUS ASSUMPSIT. General assumpsit or indebitatus assumpsit is an action of assumpsit brought upon the promise or contract implied by law in certain cases.[4]

II. NATURE AND SCOPE OF REMEDY.

A. In General. Assumpsit is an action of an equitable character,[5] liberal in form,[6] and greatly favored by the courts as a remedy.[7] Though founded upon contract,[8] it has been held to be a species of the action on the case,[9] as it was, in

Where the remedy afforded by an action of assumpsit is ample and complete, the resort must be to that action and not to a bill in equity. Wolf v. Irons, 8 Ark. 63. Thus, where the transaction is single, without complicated accounts, and there are no debts to be adjusted, a bill in equity is not necessary, but an action of assumpsit will lie. Canfield v. Johnson, 144 Pa. St. 61, 22 Atl. 974. essential to the maintenance of the action that the contract be founded upon a sufficient consideration.[14]

2. PRIVITY OF CONTRACT.[15] On the question of the right of a third person to maintain assumpsit upon a contract which may enure to his benefit, but to which he is not a party, the authorities are very discordant. The English rule requires privity of contract.[16] This rule has been followed in some courts in the United States.[17] The preponderance of American authority, however, is to the effect that a third person may enforce a contract, made by others for his benefit, if it is manifest, from the nature or terms of the contract, that the parties intended to treat him as the person primarily interested.[18]

III. CAUSES AND FORM OF ACTION.

A. Express Contracts[19] — 1. Contracts of Record — a. In General. Where a claim exists only as a matter of record, the action to recover it must be debt, and not assumpsit.[20]

b. Judgments. In the absence of a statute permitting it,[21] assumpsit will not lie to enforce a domestic judgment[22] nor a judgment rendered in a sister state,[23] even though there has been an express promise to pay it.[24] The rule is otherwise, however, in the case of a judgment of a foreign court.[25] proceedings constituting an abandonment or waiver of the provisions of the sealed instrument.[30] It has been held, however, that, if a contract, under seal, is so executed that it will not authorize a party injured by its breach to sue upon it,[31] or if it is not the cause but only the inducement to the action,[32] or if it contains no covenant for payment or performance to the party to be benefited, or to some other person for his use,[33] assumpsit will lie. It has also been held that assumpsit may be maintained, against a principal, on a contract under seal of an agent who was acting under parol authority only.[34] An instrument having both the form and substance of a bond, with the exception of the seals of the parties, may be declared on as a simple contract.[35]

St. 399, 1 Atl. 256, wherein it is held that, where one party to a contract under seal wrongfully refuses to perform his part, and plaintiff rescinds and sues in assumpsit, the sealed contract is admissible in evidence, not as the foundation of the action, but as evidence to exhibit the transaction as it previously existed, and to aid in the assessment of damages.

31. Hitchcock v. Lukens, 8 Port. (Ala.) 333. See also Kent v. Edmondston, 49 N. C. 529, wherein it is held that, where a writing under seal is inoperative for the want of form, an action of assumpsit will lie on the parol contract made at the time of its execution.

Leg. J. (Pa.) 329. See also Excelsior Mfg. Co. v. Wheelock, 6 N. M. 410, 28 Pac. 772, wherein it is held that, as a written guaranty is not required by the common law to be under seal, such an instrument is not converted into a specialty by the addition of a scroll, with the word "Seal" written therein, and an action of assumpsit may be founded thereon.

32. Arnold v. Hickman, 6 Munf. (Va.) 15, holding that where a judgment, assigned by a sealed instrument, is afterward reversed, assumpsit is a proper action against the assignor. See also State v. Harmon, 15 W. Va. 115, wherein it is held that, where a preceding sealed agreement is only inducement to a subsequent parol contract, assumpsit will lie.

recovery can be had partly on a general count and partly on a special.[47] If, however, there is an express contract, not under seal,[48] and, by its terms, it contains nothing more than the law would imply, it is optional with plaintiff to declare in general indebitatus assumpsit, or upon the express contract.[49]

b. Full Performance by Plaintiff. But where an express contract, not under seal,[50] has been fully performed on plaintiff's part, and nothing remains to be done under it but the payment of money by defendant, plaintiff may declare specially on the original contract, or generally in indebitatus assumpsit, at his election.[51]

D. Torts[56]—1. In General. An express promise to pay a certain sum as damages for a tort previously committed will create a contract upon which assumpsit may be maintained.[57] Matters of aggravation set forth in a count in assumpsit do not change it to a count in tort.[58]

2. Misfeasance or Non-Feasance of Public Officer. Assumpsit, as on a promise implied by law, is not an appropriate remedy against a public officer for misfeasance or non-feasance in the execution of his official duties.[59]

3. Waiving Tort[60]— a. Right to Waive — (I) In General. Plaintiff's right to elect between an action of tort and assumpsit cannot be used when it will deprive defendant of a substantial privilege or defense.[61]

69. If the wrong-doer has not sold the property, but still retains it, plaintiff has the right to waive the tort and proceed upon an implied contract of sale to the wrong-doer, and, in such event, he is not charged as for money had and received by him to the use of plaintiff. The contract implied is one to pay the value of the property as if it had been sold to the wrong-doer by the owner.

Administrator.— If one sells the goods of an estate before administration granted, and receives the money therefor, an after-appointed administrator may waive the tort

c. Effect of Waiving. One who elects to waive a tort and sue in assumpsit is bound by his election.[72] He cannot subsequently sue for the tort,[73] even though judgment in the action of assumpsit has gone against him for want of jurisdiction.[74]

IV. DEFENSES.

Assumpsit, being an equitable action,[75] admits almost every defense to which defendant is entitled in equity and good conscience.[76]

V. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

A. Accrual of Cause of Action—1. In General. Assumpsit cannot be maintained on a demand not due at the commencement of the action.[77]

2. Recovery of Instalments. On a contract for the payment of money by instalments assumpsit will lie to recover each instalment as it falls due.[78] and bring assumpsit. Upchurch v. Norsworthy, 15 Ala. 705.

Joint owner.—Where an officer wrongfully sells property, owned jointly by several, on an execution against one only, another of the owners may waive the tort and sue in assumpsit for the money received. Tankersley v. Childers, 23 Ala. 781; Smith v. Wiley, 22 Ala. 396, 58 Am. Dec. 262; Smyth v. Tankersley, 20 Ala. 212, 56 Am. Dec. 193. But see Irwin v. Brown, 35 Pa. St. 331, wherein it is held that where an agent of cotenants of land wrongfully sells timber, appropriating the proceeds to his own use, one of the cotenants cannot waive the tort and sue in assumpsit, it being necessary that all join.

A mortgagee of chattels cannot recover in assumpsit for their value if they are converted. Carpenter v. Graham, 46 Mich. 531, 9 N. W. 841; Carpenter v. Graham, 42 Mich. 191, 3 N. W. 974; Randall v. Higbee, 37 Mich. 40.

See, generally, Election of Remedies.

As to what statute of limitations governs when tort is waived see infra, VII, B.

Joint tort-feasors.— One who has waived a conversion and recovered ex contractu against one tort-feasor cannot sue the others in tort. Terry v. Munger, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 560, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 348, 18 N. Y. St. 506. But see Huffman v. Hughlett, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 549, wherein it is held that the commencement of an action by the injured party against one of a number of joint tort-feasors, upon the implied promise arising from the conversion of personalty, will not be a waiving of his rights against the other tort-feasors. See also Cohn v. Goldman, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 436, wherein it is held that, though a tort is waived as to one joint conspirator by suing him in assumpsit, the others remain jointly and severally liable.

Waiving part of tort.— If a party wishes to waive a tort and avail himself of the equitable action of assumpsit, he must disaffirm the wrong in toto; he cannot sue in assumpsit for one part and in tort for another part. Bedier v. Fuller, 106 Mich. 342, 64 N. W. 331; Finlay v. Bryson, 84 Mo. 664.

Where a plaintiff is entitled to two modes of redress, and elects to bring assumpsit, defendant may urge any defense peculiar to that action, although the same defense could not have been insisted on if the other action had been pursued. Meredith v. Richardson, 10 Ala. 828.

B. Demand. If the promise is made or the undertaking is implied in consequence of a precedent debt or duty, as in the case of the common counts, there is created eo instante the liability to pay or perform, and no demand before action brought is necessary.[79] But if, by the express or implied terms of the agreement, the obligation to pay or perform is to arise only upon request, the request becomes a part of the agreement and is a condition precedent to action.[80]

VI. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.

Reference should be had to the statutes of the particular state to determine the jurisdiction and venue of an action of assumpsit.[81]

VII. LIMITATIONS OF ACTION.

A. In General. Reference should also be had to the statutes of the particular state to determine the statute of limitations applicable to the action.[82]

If one contracts to do several things at several times, an action of assumpsit lies upon every default, for, although the agreement is entire, the performance is several and the contract is divisible in its nature. See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assumpsit, Action of," § 56.

As to demand before action, generally, see ACTIONS, I, N, 3 [1 Cyc. 694].

As to necessity of allegation of demand see infra, IX, A, 8.

Where a bailee converts the thing bailed to his own use, the contract of bailment ceases, and the bailor may maintain an action of assumpsit against him without any previous demand. Smith v. Stewart, 5 Ind. 220; Spencer v. Morgan, 5 Ind. 146. But see Babb v. Babb, 89 Ind. 281, holding that where A, without authority, sells B's property, and the latter ratifies the sale, he cannot maintain a suit for the money received without a previous demand therefor.

80. Bradley v. Farrington, 4 Ark. 532 (holding that, where no time or place of payment is fixed by the contract, a demand for payment is necessary before assumpsit can be brought on the contract); Byrd v. Cummins, 3 Ark. 592; Rose v. Foord, 96 Cal. 152, 30 Pac. 1114; West v. Murph, 3 Hill (S. C.) 284.

Certificates of deposit.— The holder of a certificate of deposit, payable on presentation, cannot maintain an action thereon until special demand has been made. Duncan v. Magette, 25 Tex. 245; Bellows Falls Bank v. Rutland County Bank, 40 Vt. 377. See also Downes v. Phœnix Bank, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 297.

On whom demand made.—Where two persons jointly undertake the custody of goods attached, and promise to deliver them to the sheriff on demand, a demand on one of the bailees is sufficient to maintain assumpsit against both. Griswold v. Plumb, 13 Mass. 298.

81. See the statutes of the several states; and also, generally, COURTS; VENUE.

In New Hampshire an action of assumpsit is properly brought in the county in which plaintiff is an inhabitant, if defendant is a non-resident, though real estate situated in another county is attached therein to preserve a mechanic's lien in favor of plaintiff for the material and labor sued for. Thayer v. Padelford, 69 N. H. 301, 41 Atl. 447.

Jurisdictional amount.— In indebitatus assumpsit jurisdiction generally depends upon the amount demanded as damages in the writ, that being regarded as the matter in demand within the meaning of the statute. But if it appear on the face of the declaration, either as originally drawn or as afterward amended, that plaintiff cannot recover all the damages laid in the ad damnum clause of his writ, then the matter in demand will be the highest sum which plaintiff, on the face of his declaration, appears to be entitled to recover. Grether v. Klock, 39 Conn. 133. But the combining of the claims in several counts will not give jurisdiction where the separate counts are not sufficient for the purpose. Davis v. Seymour, 59 Conn. 531, 21 Atl. 1004, 13 L. R. A. 210.

Wrong venue.— The fact that the venue in a declaration in assumpsit is laid in the wrong county will not support a motion in arrest of judgment. Gilbert v. Nantucket Bank, 5 Mass. 97.

82. See the statutes of the several states and the following cases:

Alabama.— Wooten v. Steele, 98 Ala. 252, 13 So. 563; Wilson v. Calvert, 18 Ala. 274.

California.— Weatherwax v. Cosumnes Valley Mill Co., 17 Cal. 344.

B. In Case of Waiving Tort. On waiving a tort and suing in assumpsit, the action is governed by the statute applicable to assumpsit.[83]

VIII. PARTIES.[84]

A. Plaintiffs — 1. In General. Assumpsit must be brought in the name of the party really interested, except in jurisdictions which hold that plaintiff must be privy to the express or implied promise declared upon. In these jurisdictions, assumpsit must be brought in the name of the party who is privy to the promise declared upon.[85] Non-joinder or misjoinder of parties plaintiff may, in some

United States.— Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 10 S. Ct. 19, 33 L. ed. 231.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assumpsit, Action of," § 72.

See also, generally, Limitations of Actions.

Absence of one defendant.— In assumpsit against several defendants, unless regulated by statute, it is no answer to a plea of the statute of limitations that one of them, within six years from the accruing of the cause of action, departed from the state and remained absent until the commencement of the suit. All the persons liable upon a joint contract must depart from the state in order to arrest the running of the statute. Brown v. Delafield, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 445.

Waiving objections.— In assumpsit, when plaintiff files a replication to the plea of the statute of limitations, and defendant joins issue thereon, any irregularity in time of filing the plea is thereby waived. Stockett v. Sasscer, 8 Md. 374. So, though a plea of the statute of limitations is demurrable, being one of non assumpsit infra sex annos, instead of non accrevit infra sex annos, yet, issue having been joined thereon and the question litigated as though the defense on non accrevit were presented, the plea will be held sufficient to present that defense. Bullard v. Lopez, 7 N. M. 624, 41 Pac. 516.

83. Ivey v. Owens, 28 Ala. 641; Robertson v. Dunn, 87 N. C. 191; McCombs v. Guild, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 81.

Acknowledgment of conversion.—Although a conversion of property will warrant an implication of indebtedness and a promise to pay for which indebitatus assumpsit will lie, yet, if the conversion is beyond the time required for the statute to operate as a bar, a mere admission of the conversion within the period of the bar, but with no admission of indebtedness, will not take the case out of the statute. Ott v. Whitworth, 8 Humphr. (Tenn.) 494.

When statute begins to run.—Where the action is assumpsit for the value of goods converted by a tenant in common, or by a bailee, the cause of action is to be considered as having accrued when defendant ceased to hold consistently with, or in subordination to, plaintiff's title, and plaintiff became aware of it. Harral v. Wright, 57 Ga. 484. See also Ivey v. Owens, 28 Ala. 641.

85. Hill v. Nichols, 50 Ala. 336; Cummins v. James, 4 Ark. 616.

As to right of person not party to contract to maintain action see supra, II, C, 2.

Amendment as to parties.— The right to amend is regulated by statute. Generally, where the action is brought in the name of the wrong party, the writ may be amended at the trial term. Fitch v. Nute, 62 N. H. 700. So, where it appears at the trial that plaintiff, after his cause of action arose, assigned for the benefit of creditors who have not been paid in full, the court may, after verdict, allow the title to be amended by adding the name of plaintiff's assignor. Felty v. Deaven, 166 Pa. St. 640, 31 Atl. 333. And where, in an action brought by two, they fail to prove that they are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the action, the court may allow the name of the one who is not interested therein to be struck out. Winsor v. Lombard, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 57.

Claim of ownership.— Generally, assumpsit jurisdictions, be shown under the general issue. In other jurisdictions the objection must be taken by plea in abatement.[86]

2. Corporations. A corporation may maintain an action of assumpsit the same as an individual.[87]

B. Defendants — 1. In General. Joint promisors should be jointly sued,[88] or a showing made that a promisor not joined is incapable of being sued.[89] Advantage can be taken of the non-joinder of defendants, however, only by a plea in abatement at common law or by answer or demurrer under the code. It cannot be shown under the general issue or the general denial.[90] lies only on a claim of ownership. Randall v. Higbee, 37 Mich. 40. It has, accordingly, been held that a mortgagee of personal property cannot base the action upon his interest as such. Warner v. Beebe, 47 Mich. 435, 11 N. W. 258.

As to right of mortgagee to waive tort and sue in assumpsit see supra, III, D, 3, a, (III), (A).

Joining plaintiffs.— Two incorporated companies may unite to recover a sum of money deposited in a bank in their joint names. New-York, etc., Canal Co. v. Fulton Bank, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 412. And several parties for whose benefit a contract is executed in the name of one of them may be joined in a general indebitatus assumpsit count to recover the money advanced by them under such contract to defendant. Cottingham v. Owens, 71 Ill. 397.

Maine.— Marshall v. Jones, 11 Me. 54, 25 Am. Dec. 260.

Maryland.— Hoffar v. Dement, 5 Gill (Md.) 132, 46 Am. Dec. 628; Mitchell v. Dall, 2 Harr. & G. (Md.) 159.

New Hampshire.—White v. Brooks, 43 N. H. 402, holding that the non-joinder of cotenants in an action of assumpsit for money received from a sale of their common property by a third person can only be taken advantage of by a plea in abatement.

United States.— Coffee v. Eastland, Brunn. Col. Cas. (U. S.) 216, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,945; Carne v. McLane, 1 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 351, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,416, Cooke (Tenn.) 159.

As to recovery against all promisors sued see infra, IX, H, 2, b, (II).

Attachment of seal by one defendant.— Where one of the parties signing an instrument, in form a promissory note, attached his seal, the obligation is several as to him, but joint and several as to the others, and they cannot all be joined in one action thereon under a statute authorizing the joining in one action of claims on contracts existing in favor of the same plaintiff and against the same defendant. Biery v. Haines, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 563.

Intervention.— To an action of assumpsit by a church against its treasurer, the general issue was pleaded, and a special plea that the money claimed belonged to another church. It was held that the latter church could not be admitted on its own petition as a party defendant unless defendant stated his willingness to pay the money to the one found entitled to recover, and prayed for the substitution. Russell v. Pottsville First Presb. Church, 65 Pa. St. 9.

Misjoining defendants.— Plaintiff gave A a sum of money for safe-keeping, and a sum to B for a similar purpose. A never parted with the custody or control of the deposit. It was held, in an action against both to recover the money, that there was no joint liability, and defendants were entitled to a verdict. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 86 Mich. 189, 48 N. W. 871.

Waiving tort.— Joint trespassers may be sued jointly in assumpsit when the tort is waived. Gilmore v. Wilbur, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 120, 22 Am. Dec. 410.

Striking out one defendant.— In assumpsit against two defendants, plaintiff, after a verdict against him upon the ground that a joint promise was not proved, cannot amend by striking out one defendant. Griffin v. Simpson, 45 N. H. 18. See also Redington v. Farrar, 5 Me. 379. But see Robertson v. Thompson, 3 Ind. 190, holding that, where two persons residing in different counties are sued jointly in assumpsit, each having been served with process in his own county, the court may allow plaintiff to amend by striking out the name of one of such persons.

2. Corporations. Assumpsit will lie on an implied promise against a corporation the same as against an individual.[91]

IX. Pleading.[92]

A. Declaration — 1. In General. Generally, it may be said that the declaration must contain all that it is necessary for plaintiff to prove under the plea of the general issue.[93] Surplusage will not vitiate a count containing sufficient averments.[94] One good count will sustain a declaration, as against a general demurrer.[95]

West Virginia.— Rutter v. Sullivan, 25 W. Va. 427.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assumpsit, Action of," § 77.

The reason assigned for this rule is that evidence of a joint contract does not sustain the general issue, inasmuch as defendant in a joint undertaking is liable for the whole amount, although another person is also liable, and, as between themselves, is bound to contribute. Presumption on appeal.— If there is one good paragraph in the complaint, and the record does not show on which paragraph the judgment was based, the court will presume

Statutory requirements as to the manner of setting out the demand must be observed;[96] but a complaint, under the code, in the form of the common counts is good.[97]

2. ALLEGATION OF JURISDICTION. In declaring in a court of limited jurisdiction, the consideration as well as the promise must be averred to have been within the jurisdiction of the court.[98]

3. ALLEGATION OF PROMISE OR AGREEMENT — a. In General. The declaration must show in some form that a promise has been made or will be implied to have been made by defendant.[99] The authorities, however, differ as to the requisites of such allegation. According to one line of decisions it is not necessary to allege, in terms, a promise to pay, but it is sufficient to state the facts upon which the law raises an implied promise.[1] According to another line of decisions an express promise must be alleged.[2] that it was based on the good one. Rochester v. Bowers, (Ind. App. 1899) 52 N. E. 814.

Under the Pennsylvania act of May 25, 1887, section 3, providing that plaintiff's declaration in the action of assumpsit shall consist of a concise statement of plaintiff's demand, accompanied by copies of all notes, etc., a declaration may consist of a count on a note and a separate count on the original consideration for the note. Matter of which a certain court has no jurisdiction is, so far as that court is concerned, immaterial matter. If such matter is incorporated into one of the counts so that it cannot be separated from the matter of which the court has jurisdiction, it will vitiate the count; but, if it is entirely separate and distinct from the other counts, its being included in the declaration with them cannot have that effect. b. Special Agreement. In declaring on a special agreement, the agreement should be set out either in terms or in substance.[3] The agreement need not be repeated, however, in subsequent counts if it is sufficiently stated in the first count.[4]

c. Time of Promise. The time and place of making the promise should be alleged.[5] The precise time, however, is not material,[6] unless it constitutes a material part of the promise declared on, or where the date of a written contract is averred.[7]

4. ALLEGATION OF CONSIDERATION — a. In General. The declaration should contain a statement of facts showing a sufficient consideration to support the alleged promise.[8] In alleging the consideration for a special agreement, the whole of it should be correctly and explicitly stated[9]— an allegation of consideration in addition to the true one creates a fatal variance.[10]

b. Past Consideration. In a declaration upon a promise on a consideration which is past, it is necessary to allege that the act performed or sum paid was performed or paid at the request of defendant,[11] unless where a beneficial consideration and a request are, necessarily, implied from the moral obligation under which defendant was placed.[12]

5. Allegation of Breach. It is a further essential to a declaration that a breach of the assumpsit be assigned.[13] If one breach is well assigned but others are not, defendant may, under the plea of non assumpsit, object on the trial against receiving evidence or assessing damages on the defective breaches.[14]

6. Allegation of Indebtedness. A declaration on the common counts must also allege an indebtedness to plaintiff,[15] together with the facts out of which the indebtedness arises.[16] In declaring, however, on a contract which has been performed and which has resulted in a simple obligation to pay money, it is sufficient to set out the indebtedness without specially stating the contract from which it arises.[17]

7. Allegation of Performance by Plaintiff. Mutual promises, to be performed at the same time, are not mutual conditions, and the party suing need not aver performance on his part;[18] but, if the consideration of the contract is execu-

Aided by verdict.— The omission to allege specially the breach of the agreement, in a declaration in a suit on a special agreement, is cured by verdict. Weigley v. Weir, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 309. And any defect or inaccuracy in assigning the breach is aided by verdict. Thomas v. Roosa, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 461.

Collateral undertaking.—A declaration alleging a contract by defendant to become security for another is defective if it fails to allege non-payment by the principal debtor. Fay v. Hall, 25 Ala. 704.

Manner of alleging breach.— The allegation of the breach should be assigned in the words of the contract. Withers v. Knox, 4 Ala. 138. If there are several counts defendant should be charged with having failed to pay the several sums. Ellis v. Turner, 5 Munf. (Va.) 196. But several breaches of the same contract may be assigned in one count. Smith v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 36 N. H. 458.

Sufficiency of allegation.— It is sufficient to allege that defendant "has not paid said sum," without adding that he has not paid any part of it. Judson v. Eslava, Minor (Ala.) 2.

Sufficiency of allegation.—An averment that defendant received a large sum of money as treasurer for plaintiffs, and that, "though he has been often requested so to do, has failed and refused to account for and pay over said money" to plaintiffs, is a sufficient allegation that defendant is indebted to plaintiffs and that the debt is unpaid. Smythe v. Scott, 124 Ind. 183, 24 N. E. 685.

The time of the accruing of the indebtedness laid in the common counts is immaterial, provided it is of a day prior to the commencement of the suit. Wetmore v. San Francisco, 44 Cal. 294; Dollfus v. Frosch, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 367.

16. Allegation of facts.— Brooks v. Holland, 21 Conn. 388; Bradley v. Davenport, 6 Conn. 1; Brown v. Webber, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 560; Hibbert v. Courthopes, Carth. 276. See also McLeod v. Powe, 12 Ala. 9, holding that it is no objection to a count that it states facts from which the conclusion of indebtedness arises, instead of stating the same conclusion in a common count.

The reason for this rule is that defendant will not otherwise know for what debt plaintiff brings his action, or what defense to make; and that a recovery in such action would not otherwise be a bar to a future action for the same debt, as it would not appear to be the same unless the cause of it were stated. Brooks v. Holland, 21 Conn. 388.

18. Performance need not be alleged.— Dey v. Dox, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 129, 24 Am. Dec. 137; Close v. Miller, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 90; Whitall v. Morse, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 358; Nichols v. Raynbred, Hob. 121; Martindale v. Fisher, 1 Wils. C. P. 88.

Disaffirmance of contract.—Where an action of assumpsit is in affirmance of a contract, an offer of readiness to perform is material; but, where the action is in disaffirmance thereof and to recover back the price paid, and plaintiff has complied with the contract up to the time of electing to rescind, a tender or offer of the money which would have been due on completion is not essential. Crossgrove v. Himmelrich, 54 Pa. St. 203.

If plaintiff's agreement to perform a subsequent act is the consideration it must be stated, although it is unnecessary to aver performance. Brenan v. Shelton, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 152.

Part of consideration.—Where a promise

tory or its performance depends upon some act to be done or forborne by plaintiff, or on some other event, plaintiff must aver performance or show excuse for non-performance.[19]

8. Allegation of Demand or Request. If a demand is a condition precedent to action it must be specially alleged in the declaration. In such case the general averment of "Often requested" is not enough.[20] If, however, the promise is made or the undertaking is implied in consequence of a precedent debt or duty, as in the case of the common counts, the "Often requested" in a declaration is, generally, sufficient.[21]

9. Allegation of Tort, and Waiving Thereof. A declaration in assumpsit on waiving a tort need not allege the tort or the waiving thereof.[22] It is not, however, improper to allege the facts which constitute the tort.[23]

10. Joining of Counts[24]— a. In General. At common law the rule is that a count in assumpsit cannot be joined in the same action with a count in debt[25] goes only to part of the consideration, and a breach thereof may be paid for in damages, it is an independent promise, and an action may be maintained for the breach of it, without averring performance or readiness to perform. Striking out count.—A joining of debt and assumpsit not being allowed, a party will not, in event of such joining, upon a motion in ar-

nor with a count in tort.[26] It is also improper for plaintiff to join a claim in his private right with a claim in his capacity as executor.[27] In like manner, a count against defendant as executor cannot be joined with a count against him in his individual capacity.[28]

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Assumpsit, Action of," § 94.

Originally, the practice in framing declarations in assumpsit was to make each demand to which the indebitatus count was applicable the subject of a separate indebitatus count. Subsequently, the mode was adopted of combining several of such demands in one such count and treating them all as forming the consideration of a single promise, and no objection appears to have been made to this course. In Rock v. Rock, Cro. Jac. 245, Yelv. 175, which was decided in the reign of James I, the declaration was of this description, excepting that it stated the aggregate amounts of the debts which constituted the consideration for the promise, but not the amount of each of them in particular. The only objection taken to such declaration was that the amount of each should have been shown. This objection was overruled. In Webber v. Tivill, 2 Saund. 121*b*, decided in the reign of Charles II, the declaration was like that in Rock v. Rock, Cro. Jac. 245, Yelv. 175. In fact, no objection appears to have been made to this declaration until 1809, when, in Bailey v. Freeman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 280, the objection was made, but overruled. Under the new rules of pleading adopted by the courts in England (Regula Generalis, (Trin. T. 1 Wm. IV), 7 Bing. 774, 20 E. C. L.

11. Amendment.[31] The declaration may be amended so as to increase the amount of damages claimed,[32] or by the addition of a count,[33] provided no new cause of action is thereby introduced.[34] An amendment changing the form of the action cannot be made, however,[35] in the absence of a statute permitting it.[36]

12. Aided by Verdict. All mere technical defects in a declaration, which might have been reached by demurrer, are cured by a verdict;[37] but a declaration which does not state a cause of action is not so cured.[38]

Amendment of bill.— On objection to a bill of particulars for want of precision, the court may require it to be amended before trial. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Knapp, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 541, 9 L. ed. 222. See also George Campbell Co. v. Angus, 91 Va. 438, 22 S. E. 167, holding that, where a sufficient bill of particulars is not filed, the proper practice is to apply to the court to require plaintiff to file an amended and sufficient account of his claim; and, if he fail to do so, to move the court to exclude evidence of any matter not described sufficiently to give defendant notice of its nature and character. And see Grether v. Klock, 39 Conn. 133, holding that, where the amount of damages laid in the ad damnum clause was sufficient to confer jurisdiction, but the bill of particulars filed showed that the balance due plaintiffs was less than the jurisdictional amount, the court may permit plaintiff to amend his bill of particulars by striking out items of credit, leaving the amount sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, when the court is satisfied that it was so drawn by inadvertence or mistake of counsel.

Defects in a bill of particulars cannot be taken advantage of on a demurrer to the declaration (George Campbell Co. v. Angus, 91 Va. 438, 22 S. E. 167), nor on objection urged after pleading to the merits (Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Price, 88 Md. 155, 41 Atl. 53, 42 L. R. A. 206).

Form of bill of particulars is set out in Bishop v. Perkins, 19 Conn. 300; Wright v. Dickinson, 67 Mich. 580, 35 N. W. 164, 11 Am. St. Rep. 602; Nugent v. Teachout, 67 Mich. 571, 35 N. W. 254.

poses to litigate, and limits him to the items of the bill, unless leave of court is obtained to add to them.[45]

C. Demurrer. To a count assigning several breaches, defendant cannot demur to one breach and plead to the others. He must plead or demur to the whole count.[46]

D. Plea or Answer — 1. In General. The plea should be an answer to all that portion of plaintiff's declaration which it assumes to answer.[47] Accordingly, a plea which professes to answer the whole declaration, but which, in fact, answers only a special count, is bad.[48]

2. The General Issue. The plea of non assumpsit is the general issue in assumpsit.[49] Such plea admits plaintiff's capacity to sue,[50] and that the character

Part of pleading.—A bill of particulars is never, in strictness, a component of the pleading. Cicotte v. Wayne County, 59 Mich. 509, 26 N. W. 686. Compare Moses v. Taylor, 6 Mackey (D. C.) 255, holding that a bill of particulars when filed becomes a part of the declaration. See also Wright v. Smith, 81 Va. 777.

The pleadings are not amended by the service of a bill of particulars, nor is the issue changed by amending the bill. A plea or demurrer to a bill is not permissible. Cicotte v. Wayne County, 44 Mich. 173, 6 N. W. 236. See also Butler v. Millett, 47 Me. 492.

Admissions by demurrer.—A demurrer to special counts will not admit facts stated only in the consolidated common counts. Rose v. Jackson, 40 Mich. 29.

A demurrer and a plea of the general issue are inconsistent, as the first admits what the latter denies. Cicotte v. Wayne County, 44 Mich. 173, 6 N. W. 236.

47. Boyd v. Weeks, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 393; Dibble v. Kempshall, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 124; Britton v. Bishop, 11 Vt. 70.

Denial of indebtedness.—An answer to a complaint which denies the indebtedness merely, without denying the facts which show the existence of the indebtedness, is but a denial of a conclusion of law, and raises no issue. Wells v. McPike, 21 Cal. 215. See also Higgins v. Germaine, 1 Mont. 230.

Denial of promise.—After an admission of the indebtedness charged in a complaint, a denial of the alleged promise to pay is immaterial. The indebtedness being admitted, the law implies a promise to pay, and proof of an express promise is not required on the part of plaintiff. Levinson v. Schwartz, 22 Cal. 229.

48. Answering only special count.—Werth v. Montgomery Land, etc., Co., 89 Ala. 373, 7 So. 198; Gebbie v. Mooney, 121 Ill. 255, 12 N. E. 472; Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490, 83 Am. Dec. 240; Anonymous, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 226.

A plea in bar to the whole action, when the matter set forth bars only a part, is bad. Farquhar v. Collins, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 31.

49. Non assumpsit.— State v. Harmon, 15 W. Va. 115.

As to matters admissible under plea see infra, IX, H, 1.

Non assumpsit to the whole declaration, and a tender to part, cannot be pleaded together. Chew v. Close, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 211, 31 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 204.

Omission of word "undertake."—A plea of the general issue that defendant did not "promise in manner or form," omitting the words "undertake or," is good. The words "undertake" and "promise" are equivalent, and the use of either of them constitutes as effectually a traverse of the declaration as would the use of both. Eastman v. Anthony, 93 Ill. 590; Sbufeldt v. Fidelity Sav. Bank, 93 Ill. 597. See also Tomlinson v. Hoyt, 1 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 515, holding that it is not necessary that the plea follow the usual form. It is sufficient if the substance be there.

A plea that defendant is not indebted is not a plea of the general issue when it proceeds to set forth specially certain facts as constituting the reason why he is not indebted. Dendy v. Gamble, 59 Ga. 434.

50. Admits capacity to sue.— Swift River, etc., Imp. Co. v. Brown, 77 Me. 40; Penobscot in which he sues is such as is set out in the declaration,[51] but denies all other facts necessary to sustain the action.[52]

3. Nil Debet, Non Est Factum, or Not Guilty. Pleas of nil debet,[53] non est factum,[54] or not guilty[55] are not appropriate in an action of assumpsit.

4. Special Pleas — a. In General. Though a special plea which amounts merely to the general issue, or which sets up matter which may be given in evidence under the general issue, is bad,[56] defendant is at liberty to plead specially any matter which admits that, in fact, a contract was made as alleged in the

R. Co. v. Mayo, 60 Me. 306. See also Peck v. Thompson, 23 Miss. 367. But see Nabors v. Shippey, 15 Ala. 293, holding that, where an agent declares in the common counts on a promise made to him for the benefit of his principal, the plea of non assumpsit puts in issue the right of the agent to maintain the action in his own name.

Implied admissions by plea.— By pleading the general issue defendant impliedly admits the legal sufficiency of the declaration and the right of plaintiff to recover upon proof of the facts therein alleged. Wrought Iron Bridge Co. v. Highway Com'rs, 101 Ill. 518. See also Tillman v. Ailles, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 373, 43 Am. Dec. 520, holding that, where a party is sued in assumpsit as indorser of a note and pleads the general issue, he thereby admits the character of indorser in which he is sued.

No. 5,730. Compare Burckhart v. Watkins, 4 Mo. 72.

Notice of special matter.—Where matter is proper as a defense under the general issue, a notice of special matter will not restrict defendant. If he fails to sustain his notice he may still take the general ground allowed by the issue. The notice may, in such case, be totally disregarded. Smith v. Gregory, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 114.

b. Denial of Performance of Condition Precedent. In assumpsit on a special agreement, where the right of action depends upon a condition precedent, performance of which is alleged in the declaration, defendant may, instead of pleading the general issue, deny the alleged performance of the condition.[70]

5. Severance in Plea. Defendants sued on a joint promise should not sever in their pleas,[71] unless to set up a defense which goes to the personal discharge of one of them, such as infancy, bankruptcy, ne unques executor, and the like.[72] And if one defendant has matter of defense personal to himself, which matter is admissible under the general issue, he may avail himself of that defense even though he has joined with the other defendants in pleading the general issue.[73]

6. Amendment. Defendant may be permitted, in the discretion of the court, to alter or change his plea.[74]

E. Affidavit of Defense. An affidavit of defense, in jurisdictions where such an affidavit is required, must be direct and certain.[75] Judgment will not be rendered for plaintiff, however, because of the insufficiency of the affidavit, if the statement of plaintiff's claim is not in the concise form required by statute.[76]

Amendment directed by court.— Under a statute giving the court power to amend and perfect pleas, the court may strike out defective pleas and order a plea of non assumpsit to be substituted. Aldridge v. Grider, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 281.

Payment of costs.— The declaration contained a special count on a note, and the common counts. A rule of court required all pleas to be filed at the first term, and provided that all cases in which it was not done should be regarded as standing on the statutory general issue, without notice. No plea was filed at the first term. Upon the trial at a later term, the note was filed as a bill of particulars under the common counts. It was held that the filing of the note under the common counts was not such an amendment of the declaration as allowed defendant to amend the plea without cost. Monson v. Beecher, 45 Conn. 299.

In Pennsylvania the actions of assumpsit for which judgment may be asked for want of an affidavit of defense are limited to such as are founded on contract alone, and do not include one in which the cause of action is ex delicto, or of a mixed character of contract and tort. F. Replication — 1. Necessity. The cause should not be tried without a replication to a good special plea.[77]

2. Requisites and Sufficiency. The replication must answer so much of the plea as it professes to answer.[78] If a conclusion to the country is proper, it must deny in express words the allegations of the plea.[79] It is bad if it contains a departure from the declaration,[80] or is double.[81]

G. Rejoinder. A rejoinder must answer material allegations of the replication by stating material facts.[82] It must not contain a departure from the plea,[83] nor be double.[84]

H. Pleading and Proof[85] — 1. Matters Admissible Under General Issue —

moned in account render, and appears, but, before issue is joined, the form of the action is changed to assumpsit by amendment, a copy of which is served on defendant's counsel, plaintiff is in the same position as if a summons in assumpsit had been originally issued in the case, and affidavit of defense should be filed within fifteen days after service of plaintiff's statement. Wright v. Hopkins, 3 Pa. Dist. 240.

77. Miles v. Rose, Hempst. (U. S.) 37, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,544*a*.

Admissions by replication.— Traversible matter in the plea that is not traversed in the replication is admitted. Capital City Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Detwiler, 23 Ill. App. 656. Where defendant pleads non assumpsit within three years, and plaintiff replies a new promise in writing within that time, the replication admits that the original undertaking was not within three years, and the issue is whether defendant made the new promise. Taylor v. Spears, 6 Ark. 381, 44 Am. Dec. 519.

Plea of set-off.— Plaintiff may meet defendant's plea of set-off by a general replication that the subject-matter of the set-off is a partnership asset between them. Bennett v. Pulliam, 3 Ill. App. 185.

78. Satterlee v. Sterling, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 233; Bradner v. Demick, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 404.

Excuse for non-performance.—Where the defense is an excuse for not performing the promise which defendant has, in fact, made, however many the parts or facts of that excuse may be, the replication may be de injuria — that is, that defendant of his own wrong, and without the cause by him in his plea alleged, broke his promise. Iron Clad Dryer Co. v. Chicago Trust, etc., Bank, 50 Ill. App. 461; Isaac v. Farrar, 1 M. & W. 65.

Identification of plea.— If it is plain from the nature of the pleadings which plea the replication is intended to answer, it is certain enough without expressly pointing out the plea intended by its numerical order, or in any other way. Carey v. Hanchet, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 154.

Plea of payment.— In assumpsit on a promise of defendant's intestate, a replication, to a plea of payment by defendant's intestate, that defendant did not pay is bad. Barickman v. Kuykendall, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 21.

Form of replication is set out in Carey v. Hanchet, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 154.

79. Austin v. Walker, 26 N. H. 456.

In Vermont, by statute, a replication denying all the allegations of the plea in the same words in which they are pleaded is good. Austin v. Chittenden, 33 Vt. 553.

80. Departure.—Allen v. Mayson, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 207, holding that a reply of fraud to a plea of the statute of limitations is a departure.

New promise after discharge in insolvency. — A replication of a new promise to a plea of discharge in insolvency is not a departure. Wait v. Morris, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 394; Shippey v. Henderson, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 178, 7 Am. Dec. 458. If, however, the new promise is conditional it must be alleged in the replication as conditional and not as an absolute promise. Wait v. Morris, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 394.

Waiving departure.— Although a replication is a departure from the complaint, yet defendant cannot avail himself of such defect on error if he did not raise the question by demurrer or by motion, but went to trial upon the issues as made up. Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 345, 13 S. Ct. 617, 37 L. ed. 475.

81. Double replication.—Wadleigh v. Pillsbury, 14 N. H. 373, wherein defendant pleaded in abatement the pendency of a prior action, in which he was summoned as trustee of plaintiff, who was there made defendant. Plaintiff replied that he sued out his writ on the day before the trustee process was served, and also averred that the trustee process was not pending when defendant's plea was filed, and that he was then no longer liable on the trustee process. It was held, on demurrer, that the replication was double.

After a verdict finding both true, double replications constitute no ground of error. Richmond v. Patterson, 3 Ohio 368.

82. Satterlee v. Sterling, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 233.

Admissions by rejoinder.—A traversible allegation in a replication that is not denied in the rejoinder must be taken as true. Hinchy v. Foster, 3 McCord (S. C.) 428.

A rejoinder averring a suit brought in the county court, and dismissal of the same, but which fails to allege that such court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, is obnoxious to a demurrer. Herring v. Poritz, 6 Ill. App. 208.

83. Departure from plea.— Sterns v. Patterson, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 132.

84. Double rejoinder.— Satterlee v. Sterling, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 233.

85. As to sufficiency of proof see infra, X.

a. In General. The plea of non assumpsit is broad and comprehensive in its capacity.[86] Under it defendant is entitled to show almost every defense which tends to prove that no debt was due at the time when the action was commenced, whether such defense arises from an inherent defect in the original promise, or from a subsequent extinguishment of the liability after it was incurred.[87] Applying this rule, defendant may generally give in evidence, under the plea of non assumpsit, accord and satisfaction,[88] coverture,[89] drunkenness,[90] foreign attachment or garnishment,[91] a former recovery for the same cause of action,[92]

2. VARIANCE — a. In General. The pleading and the proof must correspond.[8] Plaintiff, however, is not bound to prove all the causes of action set out in the common counts,[9] nor the precise sum claimed thereby.[10]

b. In Promise or Agreement — (i) IN GENERAL. If the declaration be upon a special contract, the contract offered in evidence must correspond in substance and in terms with the one laid in the declaration. Variance in this respect is fatal, if insisted on.[11] So, a party who bases his right of recovery solely upon the breach of a special contract cannot recover upon proof of the breach of an implied one.[12] It has been held, however, that, if plaintiff declares on a special contract and fails in his right to recover on it, he may recover on a general count, if the aver and prove performance of both, for the assumpsit on the part of defendant is presumed to be founded on both, taken together.[17]

X. EVIDENCE.

Plaintiff must prove defendant's promise as charged in the declaration by direct proof, or show by the evidence a state of facts from which the law will imply such promise.[18]

XI. TRIAL.

A. Election Between Counts. Plaintiff who has declared upon the common counts and also upon special counts cannot be compelled, on the trial, to elect upon which count he will proceed.[19]

B. Questions For Jury. The question whether there is a contract, express or implied, between the parties is one for the jury.[20]

C. Trial by Jury. Defendant in an action of assumpsit is entitled to a trial by jury, unless a jury is waived in the manner provided by statute.[21]

XII. VERDICT.

A verdict for plaintiff should assess the amount of damages to which he is entitled. A mere finding for him is not a sufficient foundation for a judgment.[22]

(Mass.) 403, holding that, on the trial of an action of assumpsit containing the usual money counts, a count upon an account annexed, and a special count upon a contract, defendant, after the testimony is closed and his counsel is arguing, cannot require plaintiff to elect a single count upon which to rest his case. And see Carland v. Western Union Tel. Co., 118 Mich. 369, 76 N. W. 762, 74 Am. St. Rep. 394, 43 L. R. A. 280, holding that, where the common counts are not supported by any evidence and the special count is the only one relied on, it is unnecessary to compel the election of counts.

Waiving tort.— Election between counts need not be required where, in assumpsit for money obtained by defendant through fraud, the common counts are joined to a special count waiving the tort. Tregent v. Maybee, 54 Mich. 226, 19 N. W. 962.

Amount of compensation.— In an action for the board of defendant's employees, when there was no agreement how long plaintiff was to furnish board, and extra services were rendered to them, the amount of compensation is for the jury. Clowe v. Imperial Pine Product Co., 114 N. C. 304, 19 S. E. 153.

Performance of special contract.— The question whether plaintiff has fully performed his part so as to enable him to sue on the common counts is one of fact for the jury. Shepard v. Mills, 173 Ill. 223, 50 N. E. 709.

A general verdict will be upheld where there are several counts, if any one of the counts is good.[23]

XIII. JUDGMENT.

A. Form and Requisites. Judgment should be for the sum due as damages, and not for the debt and damages.[24]

B. By Default. In the absence of special regulation by statute or of established practice of court, a jury should be called to assess damages on default on a declaration containing the common counts.[25] Upon the assessment of damages, a defense which goes to the right of recovery cannot be made.[26]

(Ohio) 577. But see Frye v. Hinkley, 18 Me. 320, wherein it is held that the fact that the jury failed to assess damages on the trial of an issue on a plea of misnomer is not ground for setting aside the verdict, as the damages may be assessed by the court as in case of a default.

As to aiding declaration by verdict see supra, IX, A, 12.

Alternative counts.— In assumpsit under the code, if plaintiff declares in the common counts for money paid out and expended, with a prayer indicating that they are in the alternative, a finding for plaintiff on the first count is a finding against him on the others. Leeke v. Hancock, 76 Cal. 127, 17 Pac. 937.

Findings by court.— A formal finding is not necessary where the whole matter is submitted by the parties to the court. Smith v. Smith, Morr. (Iowa) 300.

Sufficiency of verdict.—A verdict "that the jurors find for plaintiff and fix the judgment at five hundred dollars in his favor" is sufficient in substance. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Vanduzor, 49 Ill. 489.

Verdict for defendant—Where defendant in assumpsit pleaded the general issue, so much of a verdict for defendant as awards him damages must be rejected as surplusage. Neely v. Sensenig, 150 Pa. St. 520, 24 Atl. 748.

23. Bulkley v. Andrews, 39 Conn. 523. See also Jones v. Cooke, 14 N. C. 104, holding that where a plaintiff declares in two counts, and the attention of the jury is directed by the court to one of them only, a general verdict found by them is presumed to be on that count.

Responsiveness to issues.— Under the pleas of non assumpsit, accord and satisfaction, and payment, a verdict that defendant did undertake and promise, as alleged in the declaration, and assessing plaintiff's damages, covers all the issues. Martin v. Williams, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 220. See also Sapp v. Laughead, 6 Ohio St. 174; Carter v. Graves, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 446.

24. Jones v. Robinson, 8 Ark. 484; Lyon v. Barney, 2 Ill. 387.

As the code has abolished the common-law distinction between the actions of debt and assumpsit, the same form of judgment may be rendered in either action. Knapp v. Kingsbury, 51 Ala. 563.

Sufficiency of judgment.—A judgment that "the said plaintiff, have and recover of the said defendant herein, the sum of one hundred and eight dollars and fifty cents debt, together with his costs" (Foster v. Jared, 12 Ill. 451, 456), or that "the plaintiffs, have and recover from the said defendants, the sum of three hundred and forty-two dollars and eighty-seven cents, as aforesaid, likewise their costs and charges by them in this behalf expended" (Henrichsen v. Mudd, 33 Ill. 476), is good.

As to judgments by default, generally, see JUDGMENTS.

In Virginia it is necessary, in order to warrant a judgment by default without a writ of inquiry upon the common counts, under Va. Code (1873), c. 167, § 44, that defendant should be served with a copy of the account, stating the items of the plaintiff's claim in said counts. Burwell v. Burgess, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 472.

Default of one defendant.—Where the action is against several and one of them pleads, and the default of the others is entered, it is error to take final judgment against them until the issue as to the defendant who pleads is disposed of. Russell v. Hogan, 2 Ill. 552. See also Ridgely v. Dobson, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 118.

Entry of default.— It is error to impanel a jury and assess damages without default first taken and entered. Lehr v. Vandeveer, 48 Ill. App. 511; Strong v. Catlin, 3 Pinn. (Wis.) 121, 3 Chandl. (Wis.) 130.

See also Sweet v. McDaniels, 39 Vt. 272, holding that where plaintiff files a specification describing certain promissory notes, and defendant, without filing any plea, has submitted to judgment, he cannot, upon the assessment of damages, be allowed to show that the consideration of the notes was money won from him at cards.

No evidence has been held to be necessary, upon the assessment of damages on default, if the suit is upon an instrument for a definite sum of money. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kellogg, 82 Ill. 614. See also Harris v. Ray, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 628, holding that, where an account is exhibited and the amount claimed is specifically alleged as due, no proof is necessary to enable the court to

C. On Demurrer. In like manner, it has been held that, on the overruling of a demurrer to a declaration containing the common counts, final judgment cannot be rendered without a writ of inquiry to ascertain the damages.[27] It has also been held that final judgment cannot be taken, on the overruling of a demurrer to a count of the declaration, if defendant has interposed a plea to another count, and the issue raised by such plea has not been disposed of.[28]

XIV. AMOUNT OF RECOVERY.

A. In General. Where the nature of the contract or agreement sued on furnishes the standard of assessment of damages, the jury cannot allow arbitrary damages.[29]

B. Allowance of Interest. It has been held that interest is due after a default to pay upon demand made, or, if no demand is made, from the commencement of the suit.[30]

C. Limitation by Amount Laid in Declaration. Plaintiff may recover less,[31] but not more,[32] damages than are laid in the declaration.

In Michigan, on overruling a demurrer to a declaration upon promissory notes, it is not regular to give final judgment at once for a given sum in damages, but, if the case be not a proper one for pleading over, the correct practice is to award judgment interlocutory, with a reference to the clerk to assess, upon notice, the damages under the statute. 28. Ewing v. Codding, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 433.

Nominal damages.— If issue is joined on a plea of payment, and no evidence is given at the trial by either party, plaintiff is entitled to nominal damages. New-York Dry Dock Co. v. McIntosh, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 290. So, where the declaration contains general counts for work done and a special count on an alleged contract by defendant to pay plaintiff a stated sum for his services, if plaintiff proves services rendered, but fails to prove their value, and fails to recover on his special count, he is entitled to nominal damages. I. DEFINITION.

"Asylum" is defined as "a sanctuary or place of refuge and protection where criminals and debtors found shelter, and from which they could not be taken without sacrilege;[1] an institution for the protection and relief of unfortunates."[2]

1. State v. Bacon, 6 Nebr. 286, 291. See also In re Stupp, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 124, 155, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,562, holding that, in extradition treaties, "'Asylum' means a place where the matter may not be tried."

History of asylums.—"Under the Mosaic Dispensation cities of refuge were set apart to which the slayer might flee so that innocent blood should not be shed, in case the person was not worthy of death — that is, in case the act was accidental and not malicious. But among the ancients, outside of the Jews, it seems that temples, statues to the gods, and altars particularly consecrated for such purposes, constituted such places of refuge for persons generally, and it was deemed an act of impiety to remove forcibly one who had fled to such an asylum for protection. However, Tiberius abolished all asylums except the temples of Juno and Æsculapius. These asylums finally passed over to the Christian world, and under Constantine the Great, all Christian Churches were made asylums for all those who were pursued by officers of justice or the violence of their enemies, and the younger Theodosius, in the year 431, extended these privileges to all courts, gardens, walks, and houses belonging to the church. In the year 631 the Synod of Toledo extended the limits of asylums thirty paces from every church, and this privilege afterward prevailed in Catholic countries: and it is said to have been a strong armor of defense against the wild spirit of the middle ages, and not without good consequences at the time when force often prevailed against justice. But in later periods of time as other and better systems of procedure in the administration of justice became adopted, asylums were abolished in most countries." II. ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE.

A. In General. Where a commission is appointed by a legislature to locate an asylum, they should fix the site[3] and condemn land, but cannot, in the absence of statutory authority,[4] purchase at private sale.[5] If an act for the purchase of real estate and erection of an asylum provides for control by a private corporation, such corporation has a mere license, revocable by the state.[6]

B. Regulations. The legislative authority may make regulations for the construction and maintenance of asylums, public or private, but these are binding only so far as they are reasonable,[7] and institutions established by the United States are not subject to control of the state governments as to internal regulations.[8] The trustees of an asylum may also make reasonable rules to govern the inmates thereof, provided such rules are not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States and of the state where located.[9]

C. Officers — 1. APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL. In case of appointment for a fixed term and until a successor is qualified, the rule applicable to other officials applies to those of an asylum,[10] but, where the statute provides for appointment by a given authority and is silent as to removal, the power of removal is incident to the power of appointment, and the appointing authority may remove at will.[11] Where an officer is removable by trustees only for stated causes, the responsibility rests with them, and the courts cannot set aside a judgment which appears to be within the causes for removal established by statute.[12]

2. POWERS. Officers may disburse moneys appropriated for the improvement of the grounds or buildings of an asylum, and may exercise their discretion as to shelter." Lawrence v. Leidigh, 58 Kan. 594, 598, 50 Pac. 600, 62 Am. St. Rep. 631.

"A refuge; sanctuary; a charitable institution." Cromie v. Louisville Orphans' Home Soc., 3 Bush (Ky.) 365, 391.

Asylums may be either public or private, but mere incidental profit, from an asylum founded, under a statute, by certain parishes, arising from the board of outsiders or from the labor of inmates and employees, does not make the institution any less a public asylum. Reg. v. Fulbourn, 6 B. & S. 451, 11 Jur. N. S. 620, 34 L. J. M. C. 106, 12 L. T. Rep. N. S. 344, 13 Wkly. Rep. 713, 118 E. C. L. 451. An asylum established under state authority by a county, though a public institution, is not a state institution within the meaning of the Ohio constitution. Chalfant v. State, 37 Ohio St. 60.

Denomination as "asylum" not essential. — That is to be classified as an asylum which is so used, even though not so denominated. Reg. v. Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259, 14 Cox C. C. 404, 44 J. P. 330, 49 L. J. M. C. 45, 42 L. T. Rep. N. S. 240, 28 Wkly. Rep. 475 (so holding where a private person took insane persons into her house, not believing them to be such); Reg. v. Shaw, 11 Cox C. C. 109, 37 L. J. M. C. 112, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 583, 16 Wkly. Rep. 913 (so holding where a person actually insane was delivered to a physician as an invalid and not as insane, and the physician was held liable for keeping an unlicensed asylum).

3. Until the precise tract or parcel of ground is selected upon which the asylum should be located, the location is incomplete and the commission has power to reconsider any partial or tentative action which it has taken upon the subject. State v. Bondy, 66 Minn. 240, 68 N. W. 1075.

4. Power to reject bids. — The commissioners to erect an asylum, authorized to adopt and reject bids which are not reasonable and satisfactory, but directed to take the lowest responsible bid, may be compelled to act by mandamus; but, in determining what is the lowest responsible bid, they act judicially and, therefore, their decision cannot be controlled by mandamus. the nature and character of such improvements,[13] and may secure expert assistants.[14] They may also be given the right prima facie to determine to what county an insane person shall be charged.[15] They have no authority, however, to borrow money without express sanction, and will be personally liable for money received by them and used otherwise than in regular ways.[16] Nor does power given to a committee of visitation to examine witnesses under oath carry the power to commit for contempt.[17] The regular authorities will be presumed to retain their power except in so far as those powers are expressly withdrawn.[18]

D. Maintenance — 1. Right to Government Aid. It has been held that a corporation organized to maintain a charitable asylum, over which the state has no control, cannot receive moneys from the state or any municipal corporation for the care of inebriates who might otherwise be sent to the bridewell, where the constitution forbids donations by municipal corporations to private corporations;[19] and that a constitutional provision forbidding the payment of money to any institution controlled by sectarian authority was violated by an act providing for the commitment of dependent girls to a corporation, and the payment of their tuition bills by the county, where such corporation was actually a school controlled by a certain church.[20] So, the state constitution, providing for distribution of certain moneys belonging to the school fund among the common schools, forbade any payments therefrom to any private asylums; but funds raised by taxation for school purposes might be so distributed,[21] provided the asylum had complied with the regulations relating to public schools.[22] On the other hand, it has been held by numerous authorities that constitutional provisions forbidding the payment of money to private corporations of sectarian character are not violated by payments on account of children committed to individual schools, or for patients sent to private hospitals, or the like, since such payments are to be considered simply as payments for services rendered.[23]

2. Warrants — How Drawn. Where the statute allows the auditor of state to issue warrants for only the amount of debts and liabilities existing, a warrant can legally be issued only after the expense or liability is actually incurred;[24] but, in case of some special provision, the auditor should draw his warrant for the whole appropriation, and need not take any responsibility as to payments.[25] If the appropriation is to be diminished by an unexpended balance, the auditor may determine by any means, either by reports of officers or otherwise, what the balance is.[26]

III. STATUS OF INMATES.[27]

A. In General. It has been held that admission to an asylum does not create any valuable vested right, and that a person so admitted may be expelled on the ground of insubordination without notice or hearing,[28] but, where the right of entry is made dependent upon residence, it depends upon residence at the time of commitment, and a child duly committed cannot be discharged merely because his parents remove from the state.[29]

B. When Voluntarily Entered. In case of a voluntary entry to an asylum, on a written agreement to remain for a year, it has been held that no man could, by agreement, lose his liberty, and that the managers of an asylum could not compel compliance with the agreement.[30]

IV. LIABILITIES.

An asylum is an agency of the state, and may be sued with the consent of the legislature, express or implied.[31] It is liable for agreements of officers strictly within the authority given, and for work actually done under contract, but not otherwise,[32] and for trespasses on property.[33] It is not liable for personal injuries inflicted through the misconduct of an employee.[34]

AT. A word of somewhat indefinite meaning,[1] whose significance is generally controlled by the context and attending circumstances denoting the precise sense in which it is used.[2] Used in reference to place it often means "in"[3]

I. DEFINITION.

The word "attachment" has been defined as "taking into the custody of the law the person or property of one already before the court, or of one whom it is sought to bring before it; a writ issued at the institution or during the progress of an action, commanding the sheriff or other proper officer to attach the property, rights, credits, or effects of the defendant to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff."[1]

II. NATURE AND PURPOSE OF REMEDY.

A. Nature — 1. IN GENERAL. Attachments may be used for two purposes:

1. Bouvier L. Dict. [quoted in Beardsley v. Beecher, 47 Conn. 408, 414]. See also Lowry v. Cady, 4 Vt. 504, 24 Am. Dec. 628; ATTACH.

Attachment of the person is not included within the scope of this article. As to that see CONTEMPT; WITNESSES.

Distinguished from execution.— An attachment has but few of the attributes of an execution, execution being a judicial process for obtaining debt or damages recovered by judgment, and final in its character, while the attachment is but mesne process, liable at any time to be dissolved and the judgment upon which may or may not affect the property seized. Thomson v. Baltimore, etc., Steam Co., 33 Md. 312. See also Johnson v. Foran, 58 Md. 148.

Judicial attachment defined.— "Judicial," as distinguished from other attachments in Texas, includes those cases where, after an unsuccessful attempt to obtain personal service upon defendant, an attachment is sued out to take the place of personal service. Briggs v. Smith, 13 Tex. 269. See infra, V, P.

(1) To compel the appearance of a defendant; (2) to seize and hold his property for the payment of the debt to collect which suit is brought. For the first purpose, it was a common-law writ called attachment or pone from its language, "pone per vadium et salvos plegios,"—put by gage and safe pledges A. B. the defendant, etc. This was a writ, not issuing out of chancery, but out of the court of common pleas, being grounded on the non-appearance of defendant at the return of the original writ; and thereby the sheriff was commanded to attach him, by taking gage, that is, certain of his goods, which he was to forfeit if he did not appear; or by making him find safe pledges or sureties, who were to be amerced in case of his non-appearance. This was the second process in an ordinary suit, then following the summons, and the first process in actions of trespass vi et armis or for other trespasses against the peace such as deceit or conspiracy where the violence of the wrong required a more speedy remedy. The second kind of attachment is a proceeding unknown to the common law. It had its origin in the civil law, and first arose in England in the form of a local custom of London merchants, out of which, as modified and extended by statute, has grown the modern law of attachment.[2] The proceeding as it exists in the United States to-day is deemed to be a summary and extraordinary remedy in derogation of the common law and has been said to owe its existence entirely to statutory enactment.[3]

2. Common-law attachment or pone.— 3 Bl. Comm. 280.

Modern attachment.— Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Crane, 102 Ill. 249, 40 Am. Rep. 581; Turner v. Lytle, 59 Md. 199; Goldmark v. Magnolia Metal Co., 65 N. J. L. 341, 47 Atl. 720; Schenck v. Griffin, 38 N. J. L. 462; Tolman v. Thompson, 2 McCord (S. C.) 43. See also Haber v. Nassitts, 12 Fla. 589, 608 (where the court said: "No such process was known at common law, and the proceeding is traced to a custom of London whereby 'if a plaint was affirmed and returned nihil,' the plaintiff had a garnishment against debtors of the defendant, and after certain proceedings was entitled to judgment. Under these proceedings, without personal service upon the defendant, debts due the defendant, which were not subjects that could be reached by a fi. fa. at law, were subjected to his claim"); Woolsey Attachm. 23, 24 (where it is said: "The process of attachment seems therefore, in its origin, to have been originally intended merely to compel the appearance of the defendant by sufficient sureties to answer the plaintiff's demand upon him. It was justly considered that the merchants of a great mercantile city would have debtors resident in foreign countries, with no means (unless by their property here) of rendering them amenable to our courts of justice. The process of attachment was therefore probably devised; and hence, in our common law books, it is styled Foreign Attachment. But it may be remarked, that, in the language of the city courts, all non-freemen are styled foreigners"); 1 Rolle Abr. tit. Customs of London, K, 13; Locke Foreign Attachm. 1; and infra, II, B.

Georgia — Statutes construed according to custom of London.— In Mills v. Findlay, 14 Ga. 230, it was held that the Georgia attachment laws were founded upon the custom of London, and, where they did not contain contrary provisions, were to be construed according to the practice and decisions under that custom.

As compared with imprisonment for debt attachment is not deemed to be in derogation of the common law, but rather in mitigation of its severity. Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182.

Constitutionality of statute.— In White v. Thielens, 106 Pa. St. 173, 175, it was held that the Pennsylvania act of March 17, 1869, relating to the commencement of actions by attachment against fraudulent debtors, was constitutional. The court said: "It works no denial of a trial by jury for the ascertainment of the alleged indebtedness. If the alleged fraud is not sustained the attachment may be dissolved. Yet if there has been a service on the defendant the suit goes on. . . . If just cause existed for the attachment of the property it is because it would be liable to execution after the judgment is obtained. The debtor gets all the benefit of a trial by jury in determining the question of his indebtedness, and is not therefore deprived of the benefit of the laws exempting property from execution issued on the judgment."

jurisdiction is obtained over the debtor's person the remedy partakes of the nature of a proceeding in rem, in that it proceeds against the property in the custody of the court and the judgment binds such property only;[6] but where jurisdiction of the debtor's person is obtained, either by personal service or appearance, the proceeding is ordinarily in personam and a personal judgment is rendered.[7]

3. Original or Auxiliary Process. Under the statutes of some states an attachment is an original process for the commencement of a suit,[8] but now, under the statutes of most states, it is not a writ or process by which an action is commenced, but a mere provisional remedy, ancillary to an action commenced at or before the time when the attachment is sued out.[9] Where it is thus ancillary to a

See also Sale v. French, 61 Miss. 170, 174, where the court said: "As to the property seized, these proceedings have frequently been styled proceedings in rem, and it is not altogether incorrect so to designate them, since the property is in custodia legis, and is specifically subjected to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand; but such suits are also proceedings in personam, since it is the personal obligation of the defendant owner which is the foundation of the suit, and it is not necessary that the property seized should have had any sort of connection with the contract sued on. The property seized is not the debtor to the plaintiff, but stands in the suit in which it is attached as the representative of its owner, the defendant. The right to attach is simply the right to seize the property of the debtor and to deal with it as his representative. By the seizure of the thing the right becomes initiate and is consummated by the recovery of the judgment against the owner. If the defendant is served with process or appears and defends, a general judgment may be rendered against him, upon which a general execution may issue. If the court fails to obtain jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, a general judgment is rendered, but its execution is restricted to the property seized."

Is an "action" so far as relates to justice's fees.— An attachment, while it is not an independent action, and while it is auxiliary and ancillary to the main action in which it may be obtained, is, nevertheless, an "action" or "cause" within the meaning of such words as used in a statute allowing a justice to charge fees upon the trial of a cause. Affidavit not a pleading in action.— Neither the affidavit for an attachment nor the order of attachment is any part of the pleadings in the action. Bundrem v. Denn, 25 Kan. 430.

Orders in proceeding do not affect the merits.— The attachment proceeding being ancillary to the main action, any order made with reference to the attached property does not affect the progress of the case upon the merits. Miller v. Dixon, 2 Kan. App. 445, 42 Pac. 1014.

4. Construction of Statutes — a. In General. Attachment being an extraordinary and summary remedy in derogation of the common law,[12] the courts will usually, in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary,[13] construe the statutes strictly in favor of those against whom the proceeding is employed, both as to the subject-matter of the attachment and the method of enforcing the remedy, and will exact of plaintiff a strict compliance with all the statutory requirements.[14] The remedy must be closely confined within the limits assigned by the legislature and cannot be extended by implication beyond the terms of the statute creating it;[15] but the court will not push the strict construction so far as to nullify the beneficial intent of the statute and leave the creditor remediless.[16] The rule requiring strict construction does not extend to a statute providing means for resisting the attachment.[17]

19. Illinois.— It is held that in view of the liberal nature of the attachment laws, the case, however, a person seeking the benefit of this summary remedy must bring himself clearly within the material provisions of the statute.[20]

c. Conflict of Laws. Remedies are governed exclusively by the laws of the place where they are prosecuted; and therefore the validity and effect of attachment proceedings must be determined by the laws of the state in which they are brought, provided that the property attached is within the jurisdiction of such state.[21]

d. Retrospective Operation of Statutes. It has been held in some cases that a statute giving the remedy by attachment in cases where it had not previously existed may operate retrospectively so as to embrace acts committed before its passage;[22] but when the statute is not intended to be retroactive it will have no effect upon proceedings commenced previous to its going into operation.[23]

e. Effect of Repeal on Pending Proceedings. It has been held that the repeal of an act authorizing attachment, pending proceedings thereunder but before the attachment lien has been perfected by judgment, will operate to divest the lien in the absence of any saving clause excepting pending attachments;[24] but where the lien of the attachment has been perfected by judgment it becomes a vested right which cannot be taken away by subsequent legislation.[25]

f. Construction of State Statutes by Federal Courts. In the circuit and district courts of the United States, after jurisdiction has been obtained of the person of defendant,[26] plaintiff is entitled to an attachment in the cases pro-evident intention of the legislature would be defeated by adopting a strict construction. Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Crane, 102 Ill. 249, 40 Am. Rep. 581. In the earlier cases a strict construction was considered necessary. May v. Baker, 15 Ill. 89; Moore v. Hamilton, 7 Ill. 429.

vided by the statutes in force on June 1, 1872, in the state where such federal court is held and by such subsequent statutes of that state as have been adopted by the general rule of the federal court.[27] The federal courts follow the decisions of the supreme court of the state upon the construction of the state attachment law,[28] and they follow the state practice "as near as may be." [29]

B. Purpose. Originally the purpose of the attachment laws seems to have been simply to compel the appearance of a debtor over whose person jurisdiction could not be obtained by ordinary process,[30] but at an early date the remedy was generally extended by statute so as to serve the double purpose of compelling defendant's appearance and securing to plaintiff the benefit of such judgment as he might recover;[31] and under the present statutes in most jurisdictions the chief purpose served by the remedy is to secure a contingent lien on defendant's

A. 248, where the court said: "The process of attachment, as it existed under the common law, differed in its nature and object from the provisional remedy now known by that name. Its original purpose was to acquire jurisdiction of the defendant by compelling him to appear in court through the seizure of his property, which he forfeited if he did not appear, or furnish sureties for his appearance. (3 Bl. Comm. 280; 1 Rolle Abr. tit. Customs of London K, 13; Kneeland Attach. 6; Drake Attach. § 5; Ashley Attach. 11; Locke Foreign Attach. 12.) It was part of the service of process in a civil action through a species of distress, in which the goods attached were the ancient vadii or pledges."

New Hampshire — Attachment of land.— In New Hampshire an attachment of land is a species of lien created by statute, by which the land is held to respond to the debt or damage and cost which a plaintiff may recover in the suit. Kittredge v. Bellows, 7 N. H. 399.

New Jersey — To bind property for benefit of all creditors.— The intent of the statute allowing attachment against an absent or absconding debtor is to bind by summary proceeding in rem the debtor's estate for the equal benefit of all his creditors. Cummins v. Blair, 18 N. J. L. 151.

Pennsylvania — Foreign attachment.— The purpose of the Pennsylvania statutes providing for foreign attachments is twofold: to compel the appearance of the debtor, and to render his effects within the state subject to the demands of creditors. C. Attachment and Arrest as Concurrent Remedies. Attachment lies against defendant's property although he has been previously arrested on process issued in the same cause;[33] but defendant's property cannot be attached and his body taken on the same writ.[34]

Tennessee — Distinction between original and ancillary attachment.— In Tennessee where an attachment is issued as original process it serves the double purpose of compelling the appearance and answer of defendant and of subjecting his property to the satisfaction of the expected recovery. Chattanooga Third Nat. Bank v. Foster, 90 Tenn. 735, 18 S. W. 267; Walker v. Cottrell, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 257; Harris v. Taylor, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 536, 67 Am. Lien of the attachment see infra, XII.

Attachment is a sort of sequestration of property, for the eventual security of the attaching creditor. The property thus taken is to remain in the custody of the law, to await the determination of the suit in which it is attached. Wallace v. Barker, 8 Vt. 440.

Mississippi — To give lien on debtor's real estate.— The process of attachment is a branch of that system which charges the real estate of the debtor with the payment of his debts, and its object is to give to the creditor, upon the institution of a suit, a lien on the real estate of his debtor. Saunders v. Columbus L., etc., Ins. Co., 43 Miss. 583.

New Hampshire — To caution the public and the debtor.— The object of an attachment is not, as in the case of extents, to pass the title, but is merely to caution the public and the debtor that the land attached is intended to be considered by the creditor as eventual security for his debt. Howard v. Daniels, 2 N. H. 137.

Pennsylvania — Domestic attachment.—The Pennsylvania statutes providing for domestic attachments — as distinguished from those authorizing foreign attachments which are designed to compel the appearance of defendant — are intended to give plaintiff a lien upon the property attached to satisfy any judgment which may be recovered. III. IN WHOSE FAVOR AVAILABLE.

A. In General. The right to process of attachment is ordinarily given to creditors alone.[35] As a rule, however, when proper statutory grounds for the issue of an attachment exist[36] any creditor[37] is held to be entitled to the remedy.[38]

Release of body before attachment of property.— Where a writ of attachment was served by arresting the debtor's body but before return was made, the creditor, on discovering goods belonging to the debtor, released the latter's body and caused the goods to be attached by the same writ, it was held that the attachment was legal. Scott v. Crane, 1 Conn. 255.

Where a writ is against two defendants one of them may be arrested and the property of the other attached. Connor v. Madden, 57 Me. 410.

"Creditor or other person entitled to sue." — Under the Tennessee act of 1843, c. 29, § 1, the attachment may issue in favor of "any creditor, or other person entitled to sue." Runyan v. Morgan, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 210.

A party without right to prosecute the action cannot maintain an attachment (Cocks v. Varney, 45 N. J. Eq. 72, 17 Atl. 108; Landauer v. Espenhain, 95 Wis. 169, 70 N. W. 287), the remedy being merely ancillary to the action (see supra, II, A, 3), and the right cannot be invoked by a creditor whose debtor offers to pay all that he owes (Feld v. Portwood, (Miss. 1890) 7 So. 492).

36. Grounds for attachment see infra, V.

37. A depositary sued for a deposit by the owner cannot plead as off set or counter-claim a debt due him from such owner and cannot accomplish the same object in a different way by suing for his debt immediately after paying a judgment against him for the deposit, and then issuing an attachment on the money so paid while still in the hands of the sheriff under execution. Purvis v. Breed, 7 La. Ann. 636.

A judgment creditor has no right to proceed against the property of a debtor by process of attachment; his remedy is by writ of fieri facias for the collection of his judgment. Frellson v. Stewart, 14 La. Ann. 832.

38. Gould v. Statesboro Bank, 105 Ga. 373, 31 S. E. 548.

A board of county supervisors can give bond and maintain an attachment in behalf of the county. State v. Fortinberry, 54 Miss. 316.

A clerk and master in chancery, who, as such, holds notes executed for the benefit of creditors on which suits have been instituted in the circuit court, may file his bill in the court in which such notes were taken for the purpose of attaching the property of the debtors who are about to remove such property. Rutland v. Cummings, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 279.

A corporation that is a creditor is a person within the meaning of the attachment laws, and as such is entitled to this remedy (Planters', etc., Bank v. Andrews, 8 Port. (Ala.) 404; Kentucky Jeans Clothing Co. v. Bohn, 104 Ky. 387, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 612, 47 S. W. 250; Union Bank v. U. S. Bank, 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 369; State v. Nashville University, 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 156, 166 [citing Alabama Bank v. Berry, 2 Humphr. (Tenn.) 442, where this was assumed]) and a foreign corporation, which brings an action by attachment, without having complied with the domestic statutes, but which complies before the return-day of the process, can maintain the action (Carson-Rand Co. v. Stern, 129 Mo. 381, 31 S. W. 772, 32 L. R. A. 420). See, generally, CORPORATIONS.

A married woman may have an attachment against the property of her husband, where, by force of statute, marriage does not extinguish existing debts. Keyser v. Keyser, 1 N. Y. City Ct. 405.

An administrator (McCoy v. Swan, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 344), or administrator with the will annexed (Dunlap v. McFarland, 25 Kan. 488 [foreign administrator]; Van Camp v. Searle, 79 Hun (N. Y.) 134, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 757, 61 N. Y. St. 349, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 16 [affirmed in 147 N. Y. 150, 41 N. E. 427, 70 N. Y. St. 878]) may sue out an order of attachment.

A stockholder, who is also a creditor of a corporation, may sue out an attachment against the property of the corporation (Pioneer Sav., etc., Co. v. Peck, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 111, 49 S. W. 160) even though, by virtue of statute, he may be personally liable to satisfy other judgments against the corporation (Peirce v. Partridge, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 44).

A partner having elected, under the wrongful acts of his copartner, to dissolve the partnership, has a right as a creditor to collect a debt against the latter in California. Strong v. Stapp, 74 Cal. 280, 15 Pac. 835.

Holders of certificates in a beneficial society become, upon the maturity thereof, such creditors that they may maintain an attachment against the funds of the order if it becomes insolvent. Failey v. Fee, 83 Md. 83, 34 Atl. 839, 55 Am. St. Rep. 326, 32 L. R. A. 311.

Separate members of a mercantile firm are each of them creditors upon a debt due to the copartnership. Renard v. Hargous, 13 N. Y. 259.

The attorney-general for the state is, in Alabama, authorized by statute to sue out an attachment at the direction of the governor. Wolffe v. State, 79 Ala. 201, 58 Am. Rep. 590, holding that an objection that such direction was not given should be taken by motion to dissolve the attachment before joining issue.

Where proper grounds exist and any creditor is entitled to the remedy it is immaterial whether he be the original creditor or not.[39]

B. Foreigners and Non-Residents. The right to proceed by process of attachment has been limited by the statutes of some of the states to a citizen of the state or to a citizen of some other of the United States.[40] As a rule, however, at the present time this right is not ordinarily affected by the question of citizenship,[41] and it is generally immaterial that the attaching creditor is a non-resident.[42]

The Crown may have an attachment against the property of an absconding debtor. Reg. v. Stewart, 8 Ont. Pr. 297.

The United States, when plaintiff in a civil action, is entitled to the writ of attachment in the District of Columbia. U. S. v. Ottman, 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 73. See also U. S. v. Murdock, 18 La. Ann. 305, 89 Am. Dec. 651.

But the assignee of a debt fraudulently contracted is not entitled to an attachment against the debtor under Minn. Laws (1867), c. 66, § 1, as fraud in the inception of a debt is personal to the contracting parties, and does not follow the assignment. Cheshire Provident Inst. v. Johnston, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,659.

Any equitable owner of a chose in action is as much entitled to a writ of attachment as he who combines both interests, but in declaring upon the cause of action in Mississippi he must put upon the record the party in whom is the legal title. Tully v. Herrin, 44 Miss. 626.

Presumption as to bona fides of transfer. — Where a resident of another state indorses a note to a citizen, the law will presume, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the indorsee is the equitable as well as the legal owner thereof; and he will therefore be entitled to sue thereon by attachment, under the statute extending that right to residents only. Fuller v. Smith, 58 N. C. 192.

40. This was true in Maryland under the act of 1795, c. 56 (Stockbridge v. Fahnestock, 87 Md. 127, 39 Atl. 95; Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82; Hepburn's Case, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 95; Yerby v. Lackland, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 446; Shivers v. Wilson, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 130, 9 Am. Dec. 497; Burk v. McClain, 1 Harr. & M. But process of attachment by one non-resident against another will lie only for causes of action on which debt or indebitatus assumpsit could be brought (Hazard v. Jordan, 12 Ala. 180), and a non-resident cannot sue out an attachment against the property of a deceased non-resident debtor (Hemingway v. Moore, 11 Ala. 645).

Suppl. 771, 32 N. Y. St. 542). 2 N. Y. Rev. Stat. pt. 1, c. 5, tit. 1, relating to attachments against absconding, concealed, or non-resident debtors, did not allow non-residents to initiate the proceedings, though it allowed them to share in the distribution (Matter of Coates, 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 231, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 344), and though one temporarily resident might avail himself of the remedy (Matter of Marty, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 436, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 208, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 454 [affirmed in 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 229]).

The general rule as to the immateriality of citizenship is, however, subject to exceptions in some states.[43]

C. Debtor Against Himself. In some states, in the absence of fraud, a debtor may attach his own property for the benefit of a creditor, where authority has been given him so to do, or where there has been a subsequent ratification of his act by the creditor,[44] and such attachment is binding on subsequently attaching creditors.[45]

IV. AGAINST WHOM AVAILABLE.

A. In General. The remedy can only be enforced against the property of persons natural or artificial,[46] and, as a general rule, the party against whom an attachment is available must stand in the relation of debtor to the plaintiff in the action.[47] If a statute authorizing attachment limits the remedy to cases where

In Tennessee it was formerly necessary that one of the parties should be a resident of the state (Decatur Bank v. Berry, 3 Humphr. (Tenn.) 590; Webb v. Lee, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 472; Shugart v. Orr, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 191; Kincaid v. Francis, Cooke (Tenn.) 49), but under the act of 1852, c. 177, § 2, attachments would lie both at law and in equity though both parties were non-residents (Hills v. Lazelle, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 363). By the act of 1871, c. 122, § 1, however, where a debtor and creditor are both non-residents of Tennessee, and residents of the same state, a creditor shall not have attachment against the property of his debtor unless he swears that the property of the debtor has been fraudulently removed to Tennessee to evade the process of law in the state of their domicile or residence. Sufficient evidence of ratification.— Where a debtor, having agreed that in case of difficulty he would secure his creditor, attaches his own property for benefit of such creditor to secure him, on hearing which the latter said that if the debtor did not secure him he was a rascal, evidence of this was held to be sufficient to show a ratification and to make the attachment binding upon subsequently attaching creditors. But compare Runyan v. Morgan, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 210, in which the only requirement of the statute is that the party be a defendant.

Liability to give bail a test.— Under statutes allowing certain persons, either on account of sex or previous services rendered, the right to claim an exemption from the liability to give bail, it is held that, as against them, an attachment will not lie. Walker v. Anderson, 18 N. J. L. 217 [criticizing the doctrine, but acquiescing to the principle as laid down in Pullinger v. Van Emburgh, 16 N. J. L. 457]. defendant is beyond the reach of ordinary process it will not lie against a debtor who can be personally served;[48] but the fact that it becomes practicable after issue and service of the writ to give personal notice to defendant will not deprive plaintiff of his remedy by attachment.[49]

B. Women.[50] In the absence of an express provision making the attachment law applicable to women it has been held that they are exempt from its operation in a jurisdiction in which they cannot be held to bail and where a defendant in attachment cannot defend without putting in special bail.[51]

C. Joint Debtors or Co-Defendants[52] — 1. In General. While the statutes regulating attachments against joint obligors are not uniform, it is usually permissible to pursue the remedy against a part, without including all,[53] where the ground for attachment exists as to some, but not as to others,[54] or where it is to the creditor's interest to proceed against one or a part of the debtors only.[55]

2. Effect of Solvency of Co-Debtor. The mere fact that defendant's coöbligors are solvent does not affect plaintiff's right to proceed against the former by attachment.[56]

D. Persons Under Disability[57] — 1. Infants. In the absence of a provi-

In Kentucky, where the ground for attachment is that the debtor has made, or is about to make, a fraudulent disposition of his property, the attachment will lie, regardless of the solvency of coöbligors (Perkins v. Scott, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 589); but where the ground is that defendant has not property sufficient to pay his debts, it must be shown that the other obligors are unable to pay the demand, and that plaintiff's claim would be endangered by delay (Dunn v. McAlpin, 90 Ky. 78, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 884, 13 S. W. 363).

sion to the contrary an attachment may be had against the property of an infant.[58]

2. Lunatics. Inasmuch as a personal suit at law can be maintained against a lunatic, there is no reason why an attachment may not, in a proper case, be issued against him;[59] but when the ground for the attachment necessitates a certain mental attitude it is a defense to show that defendant was insane, and therefore incapable of such attitude.[60]

E. Persons in Fiduciary Capacity — 1. Executors and Administrators. The remedy of a creditor by attachment being obviously inconsistent with the usual administration of the assets of an estate, it is not, in the absence of express[61] statutory authorization,[62] available against an executor or administrator as such.[63]

2. Guardians. As a guardian holds the property of his ward in a representative capacity, he is not, as a general rule, liable to be proceeded against as such by attachment.[64]

62. In Alabama, by virtue of Clay's Dig. p. 58, § 14, an attachment lies against an executor or administrator only where the debtor was living out of the limits of the state and had property within the state at the time of his decease; and then the attachment must be levied before such property had been reduced to the possession of the foreign executor and became assets in his hands. Loomis v. Allen, 7 Ala. 706. It would not lie against a domestic executor or administrator. Taliaferro v. Lane, 23 Ala. 369. Neither could it be revived by scire facias against a foreign executor or administrator where it had been sued out against the non-resident debtor himself while living, unless it appeared that he was a non-resident at the time of his death. Mobile Branch Bank v. McDonald, 22 Ala. 474.

In Georgia the code provides that the attachment may issue against an executor or administrator when he shall be actually removing or about to remove the property of his deceased testator or intestate without the limits of any county of the state. Holloway v. Chiles, 40 Ga. 346; Cox v. Felder, 36 Ga. 597. V. Grounds of Attachment.

A. In General. Attachment, being a purely statutory remedy, is available only where one or more of the grounds enumerated in the statute exist[66] at the time the writ is sued out,[67] and if issued without statutory authority no valid lien is created, even though the proceedings be sufficient in form and substance and properly levied.[68] Thus the mere fact that a debtor is insolvent will not justify a resort to the proceeding where insolvency is not one of the specified grounds.[69]

Arkansas — Grounds cumulative.—Ark. Dig. p. 172, § 1, authorizes an attachment in all cases against absent and absconding debtors having property in the state; and section 3 provides that the attaching creditor shall file an affidavit stating the amount of his debt, and also that defendant is a non-resident of the state, or that he is about to remove out of the state, or that he is about to remove his goods and effects out of this state, or that he so secretes himself that ordinary process of law cannot be served on him. It has been held that the grounds specified in section 3 were cumulative of, and not limited by, those of section 1, and that it was not necessary for a defendant subject to attachment under section 3 to be also "absent" and "absconding," as provided by section 1. Mandel v. Peet, 18 Ark. 236.

Mississippi — Selling or giving away liquor. — Miss. Code, § 1590, in providing that a civil suit may be commenced by attachment without bond to recover the penalty therein provided for the "selling or giving away by any person at his place of business, unlawfully, of liquors," or the "allowing" the same to be done, creates a new ground of attachment for the particular purpose of the section, distinct from those provided in Miss. Code, c. 9, providing for attachments against debtors. Adams v. Johnson, 72 Miss. 896, 17 So. 682. See also Adams v. Evans, (Miss. 1896) 19 So. 834.

74. Mere absence from the state does not amount to absconding (Mandel v. Peet, 18 Ark. 236; State v. Morris, 50 Iowa 203; McMorran v. Moore, 113 Mich. 101, 71 N. W. 505; Branson v. Shinn, 13 N. J. L. 250; New York City Bank v. Merrit, 13 N. J. L. 131. See also Kingsland v. Worsham, 15 Mo. 657 [followed in Ellington v. Moore, 17 Mo. 424], where the court said that mere casual and temporary absence of a debtor from his usual place of abode was not a legal ground for issuing an attachment against his property; but that the absence must be such as to prevent service of ordinary process upon him); but under some statutes it has been made a distinct ground for attachment where the absence from the state has lasted for a certain time (Spalding v. Simms, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 285, holding that under the statute allowing attachment where defendant has been absent from the state for four months, such time begins to run when the debtor leaves home for another state, although an unlooked-for delay prevents his actual passing beyond the state line until some days later. See also Dudley v. Donaldson, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 151; Dudley v. Porter, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 403).

Leaving the state for business purposes alone is not sufficient to constitute absconding. Pitts v. Burroughs, 6 Ala. 733; Fitch v. Waite, 5 Conn. 117; Rust v. Stuart, 2 N. Y. City Ct. 295; Coulon v. De Lisle, 1 Browne (Pa.) 256; Loesh v. Rivers, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 83, 19 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 141. See also Schorten v. Davis, 21 La. Ann. 173, where it was held that the absconder must intend to leave the state permanently.

Open and notorious departure usually negatives the intention necessary to make the absentee an absconder. Castellanos v. Jones, 5 N. Y. 164; Swezey v. Bartlett, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 444; Dunn v. Myres, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 413. See also F. A. Ringler Co. v. Newman, 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 653, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 871 (where the court said of a departure considered by itself that neither by fact nor inference was this ground of attachment disclosed); Robinson v. Crowder, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 185 (holding, under a statute providing that a debtor about to depart from the state may, by giving notice of his intended departure and offering to answer any suit brought against him, prevent an attachment, that an announcement by the resident member of a firm will prevent an attachment against the partnership property). Compare Morgan v. Avery, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 656, 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 91 [affirmed in 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 121], holding that departure need not be secret.

Remarks of an alleged absconding debtor at the time and place of departure are admissible on an issue of his intent as part of the res gestæ. Oliver v. Wilson, 29 Ga. 642.

75. Smith v. Johnson, 43 Nebr. 754, 62 N. W. 217; Gandy v. Jolly, 34 Nebr. 536, 52 N. W. 376. But see Tiller v. Abernathy, 37 Mo. 196, to the effect that in Missouri both the debtor and his family must be absent from their usual place of abode in order that attachment will lie against him as an absconder; for as long as the family remain the process against the debtor may be delivered to a member of his family.

An intention to avoid service of process is ordinarily essential (Winkler v. Barthel, 6 Ill. App. 111; Crayne v. Wells, 2 Ill. App. 574; Johnson v. Kaufman, 104 Ky. 494, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 684, 47 S. W. 324; Dunn v. Salter, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 342; Barnard v. Sebre, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 151; Morgan v. Avery, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 656, 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 91; Smith v. Fogarty, 6 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 360; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Evans, 95 Tenn. 702, 34 S. W. 2); but an intention to avoid inquiry by creditors has been held sufficient (Bank of Commerce v. Payne, 86 Ky. 446, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 43, 8 S. W. 856), and avoiding process sued out by one creditor gives a second creditor ground for attachment (Sherrill v. Bench, 37 Ark. 560).

An intention to avoid criminal process is, in some jurisdictions, equally effective in making the absentee an absconder. Malone v. Handley, 81 Ala. 117, 8 So. 189; Bank of Commerce v. Payne, 86 Ky. 446, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 43, 8 S. W. 856; Starke v. Scott, 78 Va. 180; Reg. v. Stewart, 8 Ont. An intent to injure his creditors is not essential where the debtor has absconded. Hawes v. Clement, 64 Wis. 152, 25 N. W. 21. Compare Scott v. Mitchell, 8 Ont. Pr. 518, holding that where the debtor departs with an intention to defraud his creditors he will be deemed an absconding debtor.

Departure under suspicious circumstances will often justify an inference that debtor is absconding. Wilkins v. Hillman, 8 App. Cas. (D. C.) 469; McCollem v. White, 23 Ind. 43; Buell v. Van Camp, 3 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 598, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 207, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 739, where the court held the evidence insufficient to show an absconding.

not necessary that he leave the limits of the state,[76] or where the statute makes removal out of the state ground for attachment that he has determined upon a new residence or home elsewhere.[77]

C. Death of Non-Resident Debtor Leaving Property in State. An attachment is sometimes authorized where any person liable for any debt or demand, residing out of the state, dies, leaving property in the state.[78]

D. Demand Not Otherwise Secured. In some states it is a ground of attachment that plaintiff's claim is not otherwise secured, or that the security given by defendant has, without plaintiff's fault, become valueless.[79] Under such a provision it is held that a surrender by the creditor of the security given for the debt entitles him to sue out an attachment.[80]

E. Failure to Pay For Labor on Performance. Where it is made a ground for attachment that the debt was for work and labor performed, which the debtor should have paid at the time of the performance,[81] an attachment cannot be maintained when the whole transaction shows a mutual account, consisting of debits and credits.[82] The burden is upon attachment plaintiff to show, as against defendant's traverse, the terms of the contract and the time when the services were to be paid for.[83]

F. Failure to Pay on Delivery. Under a statute making it ground for attachment " that the defendant has failed or refused to pay the price or value of any article or thing delivered to him, which he should have paid for on the

Where the conduct of a debtor induces the belief that he is absconding, the attachment on this ground may be sustained. Lesage v. Schmitt, 10 N. J. L. J. 10.

Where the intended removal was conditional and the condition upon which it was to take place had not occurred, the ground for attachment was not made out. Bamberger v. Merchants' Bank, 73 Miss. 572, 19 So. 296.

Continuance of absconding.— It was held error to charge that if a debtor is once shown to be absconding he continues so until his creditors get notice of his new residence. Oliver v. Wilson, 29 Ga. 642.

Lack of fraudulent intention necessary to make a departing person an absconder was shown by the circumstance that he was merely traveling through the country (Dudley v. Staples, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 196); that he was absent as a soldier at the seat of war (Haynes v. Powell, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 347); that he was absent for the purpose of visiting (Walcott v. Hendrick, 6 Tex. 406); or that he was returning to the country of his home (Taylor v. Nicholl, 1 U. C. Q. B. 416).

The return of debtor after six days' absence rebutted any inference that he left with intent to defraud his creditors. Island Coal Co. v. Rehling, 22 Ind. App. 305, 53 N. E. 777.

The reservation of title to real estate in the vendor was held to create such a lien in his favor as to debar him from invoking the remedy by attachment under such statute. Willman v. Freidman, (Ida. 1893) 35 Pac. 37.

Waiver of right.— Where a statute provides, among other things, that an attachment may issue, if the party applying for the same is not secured by mortgage, lien, or pledge upon real or personal property, a creditor of an insolvent, after consenting to an assignment by him of all his property for the benefit of creditors under which he is certain to receive his proportion of property assigned, cannot, without attacking the assignment for fraud or otherwise, procure an attachment against the insolvent's property. 81. Mills' Anno. Stat. Colo. § 2700, subs. 8.

Action for wages by day laborer.— In an action for wages, in which an attachment was issued against the property of defendant on this ground, the proofs showed that plaintiff was working for defendant by the day; that there was no stipulated time for payment of his wages, which were paid from time to time, on his demand; that either party might terminate the contract, as defendant did, at any time; and that when so discharged plaintiff demanded the wages then due and unpaid. It was held that such services entitled plaintiff, after demand of the amount due, to maintain such attachment. De Lappe v. Sullivan, 7 Colo. 182, 2 Pac. 926.

delivery thereof," to justify an attachment plaintiff must show an unconditional contract to pay on delivery,[84] and a demand for such payment.[85] If credit is given, or intended to be given, no attachment can be sustained on this ground.[86]

G. Fraud in Incurring Liability — 1. In General. Fraud on the part of the debtor in contracting a debt[87] is generally made by statute[88] a ground for attachment in an action on the obligation thus fraudulently created.[89]

A contract to pay upon delivery, if demanded, is not a contract to pay upon delivery within the meaning of the statute. St. Louis Type Foundry v. Union Printing, etc., Co., 3 Mo. App. 142.

Waiver of right.— Kan. Civ. Code, § 190, subs. 11, authorizing an attachment "when the debtor has failed to pay the price or value of any article or thing delivered, which by contract he was bound to pay upon delivery," does not apply if the contract to pay upon delivery has been modified by the vendor, or if, by subsequent dealings with defendant, he has waived the right to demand payment upon delivery. Young v. Lynch, 30 Kan. 205, 1 Pac. 503.

Right belongs to seller alone.— The right to an attachment on this ground belongs to the seller alone; and an express company, which has rendered itself liable to a seller by delivering goods to the purchaser without requiring payment, cannot sue out an attachment in an action against such purchaser. Richardson's Missouri Express Co. v. Cunningham, 25 Mo. 396.

85. Miller v. Godfrey, 1 Colo. App. 177, 27 Pac. 1016.

86. Harlow v. Sass, 38 Mo. 34, where a promise to give a note payable at a future date was held not to be a stipulation to pay on delivery. But see Aultman v. Daggs, 50 Mo. App. 280, where it was held that a stipulation by a purchaser to execute his note, secured by mortgage, on receipt of the goods, amounted to a promise to pay on delivery, where such note was intended as payment.

(Pa.) 255 (where the court held that persons who were induced by fraudulent representations to sell their stock in trade to a corporation could not sue in an action of debt to collect payment and issue an attachment. If they desired to take advantage of the fraud the action should have been for damages and for rescission of the contract); Walker v. Collins, 50 Fed. 737, 4 U. S. App. 406, 1 C. C. A. 642.

After a revision of the laws of South Dakota in 1895, it was held that fraud in contracting an obligation still remained as a ground for attachment in actions on either matured or immatured debts. Finch v. Armstrong, 9 S. D. 255, 68 N. W. 740, Hanley, J., dissenting as to matured debts.

Compare Teweles v. Lins, 98 Wis. 453, 74 N. ing the disposition of the property[91] makes the debt one which is fraudulently contracted;[92] but such fraud is not shown by mere failure to pay at maturity.[93] The kind of fraud[94] which gives a ground for attachment is not present in an action for malicious prosecution,[95] in an action against a professional man for negligence in the performance of his duties,[96] or in one for the conversion of property.[97]

b. False Representations — (i) In General. Securing property[98] or credit[99] by false representations regarding existing ascertainable facts[1] constitutes fraud.

The debt is not one which has been fraudulently contracted by reason of the breach of a bona fide promise to give security (Johnson v. Stockham, 89 Md. 358, 43 Atl. 920. Contra, McGuire v. Louis Snider Paper Co., 6 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 392, 4 Ohio N. Boiler Mfg. Co. v. Latimore, 18 Mo. App. 16); or by reason of failure to keep a promise to apply money to the satisfaction of a certain debt (Geneva Nat. Bank v. Bailor, 48 Nebr. 866, 67 N. Giving a bad check in payment at or before delivery of the purchased goods is such a fraud as will justify attachment (Easton Nat. Bank v. Wilson, 12 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 336. But see Burke v. Halloway, 18 Phila. (Pa.) 271, 43 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 280); but neglect to provide for a post-dated check is not (Cluff v. Gunnis, 16 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 65).

94. To constitute fraud within the meaning of the attachment acts, it must be shown that the debtor had the purpose to deceive and defraud the creditor. The false representations[2] must be made to plaintiff[3] by defendant[4] with an intention to deceive,[5] and they must be relied on by plaintiff in giving credit.[6]

(II) As to Financial Condition. Failure to disclose insolvency, which is not hopelessly irremediable,[7] at the time the debt was created does not of itself[8] constitute fraud; but a false allegation of solvency[9] or a false statement regarding the ownership[10] or value[11] of property generally warrants an attachment.

2. In Illinois the fraudulent statement must be reduced to writing and signed. Fisher v. Secrist, 48 Fed. 264.

3. Representations to a third person are not sufficient (Long v. West, 31 Kan. 298, 1 Pac. 545; Winter v. Davis, 48 La. Ann. 260, 19 So. 263); but false statements to a commercial agency for the express purpose of securing credit stand on a different basis (Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659). See also Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Co. v. McPheely, 37 Nebr. 800, 56 N. Honest belief in the truth of false representations prevents an attachment. Wright v. Ewen, 24 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 111, 19 Phila. (Pa.) 312, 46 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 179. But see Cox v. Buckly, 19 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 291, where the court held that one making false representations without reasonable and probable ground for believing them true acted at his peril.

6. Penoyar v. Kelsey, 150 N. Y. 77, 44 N. E. 788, 34 L. R. A. 248; Gray v. Steedman, 63 Tex. 95; Curtis v. Hoxie, 88 Wis. 41, 59 N. W. 581; Cheyenne First Nat. Bank v. Swan, 3 Wyo. 356, 23 Pac. 743.

So a ground for attachment is not made out when the false representations were made after the credit was given (Marqueze v. Sontheimer, 59 Miss. 430; Mayer v. Zingre, 18 Nebr. 458, 25 N. W. 727); or when the false representations were made long before (Meyers v. Rauch, 4 Pa. Dist. 333. But see Lewis v. Pratt, 11 Minn. 57, holding representations made five months previously were still effective in inducing plaintiff to give credit).

Procuring renewal notes by fraudulent representations furnishes a ground for attachment, although the original indebtedness which was renewed by the notes was contracted without fraud (Stevens Point First Nat. Bank v. Rosenfeld, 66 Wis. 292, 28 N. W. 370; Wachter v. Famachon, 62 Wis. 117, 22 N. W. 160); but inducing the creditor to accept a note for the debt by false representations has been held not to have a like effect (Mayer v. Zingre, 18 Nebr. 458, 25 N. W. 727).

Negligence on the part of plaintiff in failing to discover the truth will not prevent an attachment. Richards v. Harrison, 71 Mo. App. 224.

8. Immediate delivery of goods to a third party to whom they have been sold is not a sufficient additional circumstance to show fraud (McGlensey v. Landis, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. Statements regarding financial condition need only be approximately true to rebut an inference of fraud (Mack v. Jones, 31 Fed. 189); and too much weight should not be given to discrepancies between a report made to a financial agency and the actual condition of a defendant's affairs (Dieckerhoff v. Brown, (Md. 1886) 2 Atl. 723). But see Rosenthal v. Wehe, 58 Wis. 621, 17 N. W. 318, where the court held a statement that indebtedness was far less than it really was constituted fraud.

The fraudulent transfer[12] or disposition[13] of property[14] is usually made by statute[15] a ground for attachment against the debtor making[16] the transfer.[17]

2. What Constitutes Transfer. To constitute a transfer[18] within the meaning of attachment acts there must be a voluntary[19] alienation of title[20] by defend-a failure to state that a stock of goods was not readily salable, did not constitute fraud.

12. Distinguished from other grounds.— Fraudulently transferring property is a ground distinct from secreting property (Culbertson v. Cabeen, 29 Tex. 247; Garner v. Burleson, 26 Tex. 348; Hopkins v. Nichols, 22 Tex. 206), or from an intention to fraudulently transfer it (Dunnenbaum v. Schram, 59 Tex. 281), but the first and last are not inconsistent (Kendall v. Kennedy, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 532).

13. The word "disposition" has a broad signification and includes all fraudulent transfers of property (Howard v. Caperon, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 313); though in Missouri the word "disposed" is used to cover only alienations of property which may be effected by mere delivery without a written instrument (Bullene v. Smith, 73 Mo. 151).

Duty of trial court to define term.— It has been held error for a trial judge to refuse to define the meaning of the phrase "to fraudulently dispose of property." Matthews v. Boydstun, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. 814.

14. A chose in action (Bibb v. Smith, 1 Dana (Ky.) 580; Wilson v. Beadle, 2 Head (Tenn.) 510) or a judgment (Gribble v. Ford, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 52 S. W. 1007) may be fraudulently transferred.

Property without the state may be fraudulently transferred so as to afford a ground for attachment. Kibbe v. Wetmore, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 424.

Fraudulent transfer of land is not a ground for attachment in Pennsylvania. Continental Nat. Bank v. Draper, 89 Pa. St. 446; Kline v. O'Donnell, 1 Pa. Dist. 741, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 38.

15. Cooley v. Abbey, 111 Ga. 439, 36 S. E. 786; Hobbs v. Greenfield, 103 Ga. 1, 30 S. E. 257; Dewey v. Eckert, 62 Ill. 218; Archer v. Strachan, (Mich. 1901) 88 N. W. 465.

The purpose of the legislature in making fraudulent transfer of property a ground for attachment was to afford creditors a remedy effectual against debtors who may be disposed to be dishonest without requiring such creditors to swear to a fixed state of facts. Dawley v. Sherwin, 5 S. D. 594, 59 N. W. 1027.

16. The fraudulent receipt of property is not a ground for attachment. Bangs Milling Co. v. Burns, 152 Mo. 350, 53 S. W. 923; Howland v. Marshall, 127 N. C. 427, 37 S. E. 462.

17. Injury to the particular attaching creditor by reason of the transfer must be shown (Zeigler v. Cox, 63 Ill. 48; Sheffield v. Gay, 32 Tex. 225); but the debtor need not be insolvent (Hoffman v. Henderson, 145 Ind. 613, 44 N. E. 629; Flannagan v. Donaldson, 85 Ind. 517; Rock Island Nat. Bank v. Powers, 134 Mo. 432, 34 S. W. 869, 35 S. W. 1132; Elkhart Bank v. Western Lumber Co., 59 Mo. App. 317), in which case, however, a material portion of the debtor's property must be shown to have passed (Parrott v. Mayer, 31 Misc. (N. Y.) 50, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 649). See also Keith v. McDonald, 31 Ill. App. 17, where the court held that besides actual fraudulent intention the effect of the transfer must be to hinder and delay creditors.

18. Necessity of transfer.— The hindering and delaying of the creditor in the collection of his debt must, to authorize or uphold an attachment, be in some manner connected with the disposition or transfer of the debtor's property (Hosea v. McClure, 42 Kan. 403, 22 Pac. 317; Brown v. Morris, 10 S. C. 467); and it is not sufficient that the conveyance would be voidable in equity, but it must be utterly void as to creditors so as to create a resulting trust in their favor, and to constitute the grantee in the deed a trustee for their benefit (Forster v. Mullanphy Planing Mill Co., 16 Mo. App. 150).

19. McMorran v. Moore, 113 Mich. 101, 71 N. W. 505.

Confession of judgment by a debtor is usually regarded as a voluntary transfer. Field v. Liverman, 17 Mo. 218; Rubinsky v. Ullman, 4 Pa. Dist. 126; Simon v. Johnson, 7 Kulp (Pa.) 166; Terry v. Knoll, 3 Kulp (Pa.) 272; Ditchburn v. Jermyn, etc., Co-operative Assoc., 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 1; Johnson v. Heidenheimer, 65 Tex. 263.

Giving a judgment note has been held to be a conveyance of property. Ross v. Roth, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 14. But see Lennig v. Senior, 21 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 379, where the court said that technically it was not defendant who was disposing of his property by confessing a judgment, but it was the law which was disposing of it for him.

20. Division of firm property by partners among themselves is a sufficient conveyance to justify attachment if done with a fraudulent intent (Cox v. Peoria Mfg. Co., 42 Nebr. 660, 60 N. W. 933); and the withdrawal of partnership property for his own use by the manager of the partnership has been held a fraudulent disposition of it (Winner v. Kuehn, 97 Wis. 394, 72 N. W. 227).

Hazarding money or credit in speculation is not a sufficient conveyance of property to justify an attachment. Chicago Union Nat. Bank v. Mead Mercantile Co., 151 Mo. 149, 52 S. W. 196.

Mere deposit of property by the debtor for safe-keeping is not sufficient transfer. Couldren v. Caughey, 29 Wis. 317.

Securing goods on credit for one firm and selling by another.— Where a purchaser secured goods on credit, by representing that he was "behind" certain firms, and the goods when shipped were received and placed on sale by other firms, this was held to be a ant[21] of a material portion[22] of his own property[23] either under an apparently absolute conveyance or by way of mortgage.[24] The conveyance must be made after plaintiff's claim was in existence,[25] but how shortly before the beginning of the attachment suit is not definitely settled.[26]

3. Intent, Motive, or Purpose — a. Generally. As a general rule fraud in law transfer of the goods justifying an attachment by the creditor. Kirkendall v. Shorey, 28 Nebr. 631, 44 N. W. 992.

21. Transfer by one partner is not sufficient where the alleged ground is a transfer by the firm. Albuquerque First Nat. Bank v. Lesser, 9 N. M. 604, 58 Pac. 345.

22. A transfer of all the debtor's property need not be shown. Johnson v. Laughlin, 7 Kan. 359; Dixon Nat. Bank v. Western Lumber Co., 68 Mo. App. 81; Wildman v. Van Gelder, 60 Hun (N. Y.) 443, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 914, 39 N. Y. St. 162, 21 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 143; Weiller v. Schreiber, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 491.

23. Title in the debtor of the property transferred is essential. Empire Warehouse Co. v. Mallett, 84 Hun (N. Y.) 561, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 861, 66 N. Y. St. 313; Troy Cent. Nat. Bank v. Ft. Ann Woolen Co., 24 N. Y. Suppl. 640; Allen v. Herschorn, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 80; German Bank v. Dash, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 124.

Pledged property.— In German Bank v. Meyer, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 86, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 205, 30 N. Y. St. 278, defendant transferred property which he had pledged to another by depositing warehouse receipts, and the court held that he had sufficient title to make a transfer of the property as his own. To same effect see Bank of Commerce v. Payne, 86 Ky. 446, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 43, 8 S. W. 856.

An executor who has left the state may be sued and his property attached on the ground that he has wrongfully and unlawfully disposed of and converted the property of the estate. Van Camp v. Searle, 147 N. Y. 150, 41 N. E. 427, 70 N. Y. St. 878 [affirming 79 Hun (N. Y.) 134, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 757, 61 N. Y. St. 349, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 16].

24. An assignment for the benefit of creditors is a sufficient conveyance (Louisville Banking Co. v. Etheridge Mfg. Co., 19 Ky. L. Rep. 908, 43 S. W. 169; Dawson v. Coffey, 12 Oreg. 513, 8 Pac. 838); but an assignment inoperative for want of authority in the person executing it is not a transfer justifying an attachment (Bull v. Harris, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 195).

A mortgage by a debtor on his stock of goods which, after condition broken, divests him of the title and vests it in the mortgagees is such a transfer of his property as authorizes attachment. Tabb, etc., Hardware Co. v. Gelzer, 43 S. C. 342, 21 S. E. 261. The mortgage alleged to be the transfer must have taken effect (McCrosky v. Leach, 63 Ill. 61; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Eason, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 496; Pierce v. White, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 552, 22 Cinc. L. Bul. 98); but it need not be a valid instrument (Kingman First Nat. Bank v. Gerson, 50 Kan. 589, 32 Pac. 908; Leser v. Glaser, 32 Kan. 546, 4 Pac. 1026). See also Joseph Bowling Co. v. Colvin, 49 La. Ann. 1340, 22 So. 374, where the court held that the confession of judgments by an insolvent debtor in favor of some creditors, which were docketed and created a lien on his property, and the refusing of the same to others, constituted a conveyance by way of mortgage and justified an attachment.

25. Hobbs v. Greenfield, 103 Ga. 1, 30 S. E. 257; Prunk v. Williams, 28 Ind. 523; Bauer Grocery Co. v. Smith, 74 Mo. App. 419; Trebilcock v. Big Missouri Min. Co., 9 S. D. 206, 68 N. W. 330. But an admittedly fraudulent transfer need not be shown by plaintiff to have been made prior to suing out the attachment; that will be presumed in his favor. Nebraska Moline Plow Co. v. Fuehring, 52 Nebr. 541, 72 N. W. 1003.

Acceptance of new notes in settlement of an open account is a creation of a new debt, and a fraudulent transfer made prior thereto affords no ground for attachment. Hershfield v. Lowenthal, 35 Kan. 407, 11 Pac. 173.

A previous transfer would only be sufficient where the debtor intended at the time thereof to contract the particular debt and defraud the creditor (Bergson v. Dunham, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 17); and so in a case where a mortgage was put on record a year before the debt was contracted and there was no concealment or misrepresentation no ground for attachment existed (Allen v. Fuget, 42 Kan. 672, 22 Pac. 725). A previous transfer that was concealed might be a ground for attachment upon the ground of fraud in incurring the liability. See supra, V, G.

26. Two years is the period fixed in Illinois by statute during which an attachment may be brought for the fraudulent transfer. Nelson v. Leiter, 190 Ill. 44, 60 N. E. 851, 83 Am. St. Rep. 142 [affirming 93 Ill. App. 176]; Hanford v. Richart, 66 Ill. App. 443; Strauss Bros. Co. v. White, 61 Ill. App. 171. In Allen v. Herschorn, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 80, an attachment on the ground of a fraudulent conveyance made nearly four years previously was not allowed because the creditor did not show a satisfactory reason for his delay; and in Loveland v. Kearney, 14 Colo. App. 463, 60 Pac. 584, a delay of eight years in making the attachment suit was held to bar the ground for attachment.

Continuing fraud.— A conveyance to trustees on a secret trust is a continuing fraud and will afford a ground for attachment in an action based on debts contracted subsequent to the transfer. Bostwick v. Blake, 145 Ill. 85, 34 N. E. 38.

Rescinding a fraudulent sale has been held not to defeat a creditor's right to attach. Smith-McCord Dry-Goods Co. v. Perry, (Indian Terr. 1900) 54 S. W. 812.

or constructive fraud in making the conveyance is not sufficient to constitute the same a fraudulent transfer and the debtor must be actuated by actual fraudulent purpose or intent,[27] but the motive or ulterior purpose of the debtor is immaterial;[28] and the rule can be invoked that a person is presumed to intend the necessary and natural consequences of his voluntary acts.[29]

The question is one of fact and its decision should be left to the jury. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Belt, 74 Ill. App. 581; Roach v. Brannon, 57 Miss. 490. But see Swofford Bros. Dry-Goods Co. v. Zeigler, 2 Kan. Acts and declarations before or at the time of an alleged fraudulent sale are admissible. Buckingham v. Tyler, 74 Mich. 101, 41 N. W. 868; Angell v. Pickard, 61 Mich. 561, 28 N. W. 680; Cooney v. Whitfield, 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 6.

Acts and declarations subsequent to the fraudulent disposition are also admissible (McMorran v. Moore, 113 Mich. 101, 71 N. W. 505; Minck v. Levey, 17 Misc. (N. Y.) 315, 40 N. Y. W. 867, where the court held that in the collateral proceeding the declarations of an alleged fraudulent vendor were not admissible in derogation of the rights of the vendee), and may be sufficient to show fraudulent intent (Blake v. Sherman, 12 Minn. 420). But declarations by a mortgagee, to whom an alleged fraudulent mortgage had been made, to the effect that the mortgage was fraudulent are not sufficient to prove an intent to defraud on the debtor's part (Salzberg v. Mandelbaum, 89 Hun (N. Y.) 497, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 1014, 70 N. Y. St. 763).

Account-books of defendant cannot be used to prove intent on the trial of an issue of fraudulent conveyance (Wolfstein v. Steinharter, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 635), but are competent to show the amount of indebtedness (Meridian Fertilizer Factory v. Bush, 77 Miss. 697, 27 So. 645); and a failure to keep systematic books of account tends to show fraud (Senour Mfg. Co. v. Clarke, 96 Wis. 469, 71 N. W. 883).

An assignment previously made is admissible as bearing on the question of intent. German Bank v. Folds, 9 S. D. 447, 69 N. W. 823.

Failure to disclose the whereabouts of part of his property does not show fraudulent intention in defendant when the property was held for an honest purpose. Iosco County Sav. Bank v. Barnes, 100 Mich. 1, 58 N. W. 606.

False or contradictory statements tend to show fraudulent intent when made by the debtor (Hardie v. Colvin, 43 La. Ann. 851, 9 So. 745; Boyd v. Miller, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 1026, 69 N. Y. St. 2; Johnston v. Ferris, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 302, 12 N. Y. St. 666; Lewis v. Bragg, 47 W. Va. 707, 35 S. E. 943) or by his transferee (Wessinger v. Mausur, etc., Implement Co., 75 Miss. 64, 21 So. 757); but where it is charged that defendant's money was used in making a purchase, the failure of the purchaser to explain how he obtained the purchase-money does not show a fraudulent transfer, in the absence of all evidence to connect the debtor with the transaction (Howard v. Carpenter, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 735).

Withholding of a mortgage from record is also competent evidence. Rabb v. White, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 850.

It is competent to ask defendant at the trial whether she intended by a conveyance to put her property beyond the reach of her creditors (Pierce v. White, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 552, 22 Cinc. L. Bul. 98), and to question a third person as to the purpose for which he looked over defendant's property when the alleged purpose was to receive it by way of fraudulent conveyance (Parker v. Luce, 14 Mich. 9); but a question asked defendant's salesman as to his instructions regarding his duties was held irrelevant and immaterial (John V. Farwell Co. v. McGraw, 13 Colo. App. 467, 59 Pac. 231).

33. McNeil, etc., Co. v. Plows, 83 Ill. App. 186; Seckendorf v. Ketcham, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 526.

Financial condition of debtor. — The insolvency of a debtor is a material circumstance tending to prove fraudulent intent (Adams v. Kellogg, 63 Mich. 105, 29 N. W. 679; Parmer v. Keith, 16 Nebr. 91, 20 N. W. 103); but defendant's rating or want of rating with certain commercial agencies is properly excluded (Lowenstein v. Aaron, 69 Miss. 341, 12 So. 269).

Mere decrease in the debtor's assets will not of itself justify the conclusion that he has made a fraudulent conveyance (Thompson v. Dater, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 316, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 613, 32 N. Y. St. 361; Stamp v. Herpich, 8 N. Y. St. 446) unless the decrease is sudden and to a very considerable amount (Tannenbaum v. Gottlieb, 14 N. Y. App. Div. 105, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 469; Strauss v. Vogt, 4 Misc. (N. Y.) 612, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 801, 54 N. Y. St. 142; Talcott v. Rosenberg, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 287).

A fraudulent intent is not shown by defendant's previous bad record (Hegwer v. Kiff, 31 Kan. 440, 2 Pac. 553); by a mere breach of contract (Powers v. O'Brien, 44 Mich. 317, 6 N. W. 679); by the fact that one partner made an application for a receiver for the firm at an unusual hour (Wadsworth v. Laurie, 164 Ill. 42, 45 N. E. 435 [affirming 61 Ill. App. 156]), that the debtor purchased worthless mining stock (Thurber v. Sexauer, 15 Nebr. 541, 19 N. W. 493), that he included debts in an assignment which he had not disclosed to plaintiff (Freeman v. Campbell, 1 N. Y. St. 728), that he made a conveyance within sixty days prior to assignment (Wachter v. Famachon, 62 Wis. 117, 22 N. W. 160), or that he sold a few articles cheaply in a new store to attract customers (Mack v. Jones, 31 Fed. 189. Compare Wando Phosphate Co. v. Rosenberg, 31 S. C. 301, 9 S. E. 969); by the mere transfer of property by debtor (Winter v. Davis, 48 La. Ann. 260, 19 So. 263; Troy Cent. Nat. Bank v. Ft. Ann. Woolen Co., 27 N. Y. Suppl. 1114, 57 N. Y. St. 316 [affirming 24 N. Y. Suppl. 640]; Union Rolling Mill Co. v. Packard, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 76, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 46; Beitman v. MacKenzie, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 241, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 272), particularly where the debt sued for is very ancient (Kipp v. Salyer, 64 N. J. L. 160, 44 Atl. 843); by depositing money as security with the obligor on a bail-bond (Howland v. Marshall, 127 N. C. 427, 37 S. E. 462); or by the facts in Alexander v. Dulaney, (Miss. 1894) 16 So. 203; Reed v. Bagley, 24 Nebr. 332, 38 N. W. 827; Walters v. Brown, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 46 S. The validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors is immaterial in determining whether it affords a ground for attachment as a fraudulent conveyance (McPike v. Atwell, 34 Kan. 142, 8 Pac. 118; German Bank v. Folds, 9 S. D. 295, 68 N. W. 747), and an assignment may furnish a ground for attachment, even though valid on its face (Skinner v. Oettinger, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 109) or though it passes a valid title to the trustee in favor of some of the creditors secured (Enders v. Richards, 33 Mo. 598; Stewart v. Cabanne, 16 Mo. App. 517; Wilson v. Eifler, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 31).

35. It is not rendered fraudulent by the additional circumstance that it was attempted therein to create an invalid preference (Cooper v. Clark, 44 Kan. 358, 24 Pac. 422; McPike v. Atwell, 34 Kan. 142, 8 Pac. 118; Rose v. Renton, 13 N. Y.) 491); that the assignee is authorized to sell on credit (C. J. L. Meyer, etc., Co. v. Black, 4 N. M. 190, 16 Pac. 620); or by reason of an omission to annex a schedule of liabilities (Cooper v. Clark, 44 Kan. 358, 24 Pac. 422. Contra, Powers v. Goins, (Tenn. Ch. 1895) 35 S. W. 902).

assignment is fraudulent, however, if it reserves benefits to the assignor,[37] includes fictitious claims,[38] or allows the assignor to retain possession of the assigned property,[39] but a creditor accepting benefits under the assignment cannot avail himself of it as a ground for attachment.[40]

(B) Mortgage. Although the execution of a mortgage is not in itself[41] sufficient to satisfy the statute as a ground for attachment,[42] one very much in excess of the amount secured[43] is usually fraudulent,[44] and to permit a mortgagor to retain possession of the mortgaged property and sell it tends to show such bad faith and fraud as will sustain an attachment.[45]

37. Whedbee v. Stewart, 40 Md. 414.

A partnership assignment which reserves benefits to individual partners furnishes a ground for attachment (Ryhiner v. Ruegger, 19 Ill. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 354).

38. Bickham v. Lake, 51 Fed. 892.

An honest mistake which caused an accommodation note to be included among the indebtedness did not justify an attachment. Chicago Union Nat. Bank v. Mead Mercantile Co., 151 Mo. 149, 52 S. W. 196.

Waiver.— A creditor by accepting a position as assignee jointly with others, and by consenting to the elimination of the fraudulent part of an assignment, thereby waives a ground for attachment which the assignment would otherwise have afforded him. Ryhiner v. Ruegger, 19 Ill. App. 156. But no waiver is established by showing that the creditor sold goods to his debtor subsequent to the fraudulent transfer (Ryan Drug Co. v. Hvambsahl, 89 Wis. 61, 61 N. W. 299), or by the creditor's acceptance of unsecured notes which were given under false representations (Johnston v. Ferris, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 302, 12 N. Y. St. 666).

41. A mortgage is not fraudulent by reason of the fact that the mortgage note bears usurious interest (Adler, etc., Clothing Co. v. Corl, 155 Mo. 149, 55 S. W. 1017), or because the mortgage secures an accommodation indorser (Godbe-Pitts Drug Co. v. Allen, 8 Utah 117, 29 Pac. 881), or is made void by statute as to plaintiff's claim (Lord v. Wirt, 96 Mich. 415, 56 N. (c) Sale. Sales of goods by a debtor in the ordinary course of trade are usually not fraudulent,[46] and the application of the proceeds to pay debts rebuts any inference of fraud.[47] A fraudulent disposition of the proceeds, however, has the opposite effect,[48] as does a marked inadequacy of consideration;[49] but the convey-

Filing such a mortgage for record might have the effect of disproving fraud (Lukens Iron, etc., Co. v. Payne, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 11, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 376; Ryan Drug Co. v. Hvambsahl, 89 Wis. 61, 61 N. W. 299); but failure to record a mortgage would not justify an inference against defendant when it was not withheld at his request (Burruss v. Trant, 88 Va. 980, 14 S. E. 845).

Mere delay in taking possession by mortgagee is not of itself a badge of fraud. Ripon Knitting Works v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 129, 53 N. W. 17; Pierce v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 125, 53 N. W. 16, 18 L. R. A. 486.

Monthly accounting by the mortgagor according to provisions in the mortgage would not prevent the inference of fraud. Joseph v. Levi, 58 Miss. 843.

Mere inferences as to debtor's insolvency drawn mainly from the fact that his stock of goods is reduced are insufficient to prove that a mortgage made by him was fraudulent. Bray Clothing Co. v. Shealy, 53 S. C. 12, 30 S. E. 620.

Release of a fraudulent mortgage will not prevent an attachment where the mortgaged property is immediately remortgaged to other parties. Buford, etc., Implement Co. v. McWhorter, 41 Kan. 262, 21 Pac. 86.

Effect of fraud subsequent to making mortgage.— Fraudulent collusion between a mortgagor and mortgagee to sell mortgaged property and prevent any surplus proceedings from arising constitutes a fraudulent conveyance authorizing attachment (Laflin v. Central Pub. House, 52 Ill. 432); and misappropriation of the proceeds of mortgaged chattels by the mortgagor has the same effect (Semmes v. Underwood, 64 Ark. 415, 42 S. W. 1069); but the contrary is true of a sale of mortgaged property by a mortgagor without the mortgagee's knowledge or consent (Hopkins v. Hastings, 21 Mo. App. 263).

Sale of mortgaged property.—The fact that the mortgagor is selling the mortgaged stock of goods as contemplated, but not applying the proceeds to the debt, does not authorize a specific attachment. Schnabel v. Jacobs, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1596, 49 S. W. 774; Locke v. Boles, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 573.

Secret sales will usually justify an inference of fraud. Harbour-Pitt Shoe Co. v. Dixon, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1169, 60 S. W. 186.

Selling goods cheaply in the regular course of trade does not afford a ground for attachment (Wando Phosphate Co. v. Rosenberg, 31 S. C. 301, 9 S. E. 969. Compare Mack v. Jones, 31 Fed. 189), even though the sale is accompanied by declarations of defendant that he is going to beat plaintiff if he can (Thames v. Sharbrough, (Miss. 1900) 27 So. 834), and particularly when the sales were made by an agent without the principal's authority (Myers v. Whiteheart, 24 S. C. 196). See also Todd v. Kratz, 13 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 209, where the court held that a sale of property was not fraudulent, although made after a conditional offer to apply the property in settlement of a debt for a larger amount than that realized from the sale.

Shipment in unusual quantities does not alter the rule (Shuler v. Birdsall, etc., Mfg. Co., 17 N. Y. App. Div. 228, 45 N. Y. Conveyance in consideration of services to be rendered in the future may be fraudulent for want of valuable consideration. Shellabarger v. Mottin, 47 Kan. 451, 28 Pac. 199, 27 Am. St. Rep. 306; Winfield Nat. Bank v. Croco, 46 Kan. 629, 26 Pac. 942.

Y. Suppl. 284, 38 N. Y. St. 191 (reaching the same conclusion on similar facts where, however, the parties to the sale were husband and wife).

51. "Unfair" preferences.— In construing a statute which made an "unfair" preference to creditors a ground for attachment, it was held that the word "unfair" was surplusage because no preference can be unfair which is legal, and to be illegal it must be fraudulent. Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 1 S. Ct. 369, 27 L. ed. 211. In Louisiana a similar statute has been held not to make all preferences a ground for attachment. Seeligson v. Rigmaiden, 37 La. Ann. 722; Lehman v. McFarland, 35 La. Ann. 624. See also Stevens v. Helpman, 29 La. Ann. 635, holding that a preference by a debtor, whose conduct showed that he had been deceiving creditors and attempting to evade the payment of his debts, was unfair and justified an attachment.

An agreement to prefer a creditor by a purchaser of goods on credit is not fraudulent so as to afford a ground for attachment (New York Nat. Park Bank v. Whitmore, 104 N. Y. 297, 10 N. E. 524); but a debtor cannot delegate authority to another to make a preference in his behalf (Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Carnahan, 79 Mo. App. 219).

An inference of fraud would be justified from the fact that the judgment allowed to be confessed was based on accommodation notes (Marietta First Nat. Bank v. Brunswick Chemical Works, 3 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 61, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 318, 25 N. Y. St. 830, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 229 [affirmed in 119 N. Y. 645, 23 N. E. 1149, 29 N. Y. St. 993]); that defendant had greatly increased his stock of goods just before it was sold to satisfy the confessed judgment (Rubinsky v. Walenk, 4 Pa. Dist. 611, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 401); from an entire lack of consideration (Meyers v. Rauch, 4 Pa. No inference of fraud is justified from the fact taken by itself that a debtor confesses judgment (Nelson Distilling Co. v. Lock, 59 Mo. App. 637; Thomas v. Dickerson, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 436, 33 N. Y. St. 786; Kline v. O'Donnell, 11 Pa. Co. Y. Suppl. 538, 36 N. Y. St. 1006); from an informality in the confession of judgment making the judgment invalid (Rainwater v. Faconesowich, 29 Mo. Attendant circumstances not making preference fraudulent.— A preference will not be fraudulent from the circumstance that all the debtor's property was included in it (Abernathy Furniture Co. v. Armstrong, 46 Kan. 270, 26 Pac. 693); by reason of false representations made at the time of the transfer as to the debtor's condition and intentions (Chouteau v. Sherman, 11 Mo. 385); by reason of the fact that the preferred person is the debtor's wife and the debt could not be enforced at law in the state where they resided (Loveland v. Kearney, 14 Colo. App. 463, 60 Pac. 584); or by reason of the fact that the preference is made to the officers of the corporation making the transfer (Lexow v. St. Lawrence Marble Co., 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 133, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 831.

Inconsistent allegations of fraud.— Where, in an action on a note not due, plaintiff, to justify the bringing of the action, alleged that defendant made false representations regarding his indebtedness, and, to support the attachment, also alleged a fraudulent disposal of his property by mortgage to secure fictitious debts, it was held that the attachment could not be sustained as the debts secured were not fictitious if the representations of plaintiff regarding his indebtedness were fraudulent. Composition agreements.— Where creditors of a debtor have entered into a composition agreement extending the time of payment for their claims there is an implied stipulation of good faith on the debtor's part, and if he fraudulently transfers property the agreement is at an end and the creditors would be allowed to attach. Hill v. Wertheimer-Swarts Shoe Co., 150 Mo. 483, 51 S. W. 702. Where a debtor, by paying two unsecured creditors in full, obtained money for a composition, the creditors accepting his offer, with knowledge of the source from which the money came, cannot later object that they have been defrauded. Proc. 147, 152, where it was held that as defendants had lulled their creditors into security by promising a settlement without preferences, their subsequent confession of judgment in favor of preferred creditors, though made upon bona fide claims, was void and afforded grounds for attachment.

Preferring creditors with partnership property.—The appropriation of partnership property to pay individual debts of the partner is prima facie fraudulent and, unless the fraud is rebutted, furnishes good ground for attachment. Keith v. Fink, 47 Ill. 272; Keith v. Armstrong, 65 Wis. 225, 26 N. W. 445. But see Vahlberg v. Birnbaum, 64 Ark. 207, 41 S. W. 581 (where it was held that a preference in the partnership assignment to a creditor secured by mortgage of an individual partner's property was not fraudulent and did not justify an attachment); Casola v. Vanquez, 147 N. Y. 258, 41 N. E. 517, 69 N. Y. St. 540 [reversing 85 Hun (N. Y.) 314, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 1140, 65 N. Y. St. 870] (where bona fide preferences by the partner-

(B) Relative. The circumstance that relationship exists between the parties to an alleged fraudulent conveyance does not of itself show fraud,[56] but where the good faith of a transfer is in question the relationship of the parties is a fact for the consideration of the jury.[57]

(IV) As Affected by Property Transferred. As exempt property is beyond the reach of creditors, no disposition of it which the debtor chooses to make will be fraudulent.[58]

I. Insufficient Property in State to Satisfy Demand. In Kentucky an attachment is authorized in an action for the recovery of money due upon a contract, judgment, or award,[59] if defendant have no property in the state subject to execution or not enough thereof to satisfy plaintiff's demand, and the collection of the demand will be endangered by delay in obtaining judgment or a return of no property found.[60] Under this statute it is not alone sufficient to Under-valuation of the property transferred by way of preference tends to show such an intention on the debtor's part. Dyer v. Rosenthal, 45 Mich. 588, 8 N. W. 560; Potter v. McDowell, 31 Mo. 62.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 97.

Allowing wife to retain separate earnings. — Where a husband does not exercise his right to obtain possession of his wife's earnings, but allows her to retain them, this is not a fraudulent conveyance of property justifying attachment. Beach v. Baldwin, 14 Mo. 597.

Building a house on wife's land is not necessarily a fraudulent conveyance by the debtor (Grauman v. Davis, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 590); and a reconveyance by the husband to his wife of land purchased with the wife's money furnishes no ground for attachment (Cooper v. Standley, 40 Mo. App. 138).

Presumption of fraud is raised by secret sales to relatives (Lustig v. McCullouch, 10 Colo. App. 41, 50 Pac. 48); by a voluntary conveyance by an insolvent debtor to his wife (Islin v. Goldberg, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 603, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 79, 56 N. Y. St. 622; Vietor v. Goldberg, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 46, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 1005, 56 N. Y. St. 620; Gribble v. Ford, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 52 S. W. 1007); by a conveyance to defendant's mother to pay a debt which did not appear on his account-books (Lowenstein v. Powell, 68 Miss. 73, 8 So. 269); or by general evidence of defendant's financial worthlessness at the time he made the conveyance (Keigher v. McCormick, 11 Minn. 545). But see Tennis v. Barnes, 11 Colo. App. 196, 52 Pac. 1038, where a husband, under power of attorney from his wife, conveyed real property to himself and subsequently conveyed to his wife's creditor in payment of a bona fide debt, and the court held that an allegation of fraud in the conveyance to himself raised an immaterial issue, owing to the subsequent deed.

Acquiring exempt property.— It is not a fraudulent transfer of property for an insolvent debtor to use money to pay off a mortgage on his homestead (Palmer v. Hawes, 80 Wis. 474, 50 N. W. 341) or to exchange for stock which will be exempt (Long v. Hopper, 54 Kan. 572, 38 Pac. 809). See also Vahlberg v. Birnbaum, 64 Ark. 207, 41 S. W. 581, where it was held not to be a fraudulent transfer for partners to divide firm property and take a wagon and horses as individual property which were then claimed to be exempt.

59. Not applicable to demand sounding in tort.— No attachment can be granted on this ground in an action for the recovery of money obtained by fraud, though in form ex contractu for money had and received. U. S. v. Lilly, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 582.

Right to attach before maturity of demand see infra, VI, D.

Creditors cannot combine claims.— Several creditors cannot assign the naked legal right to their claims to one of their number, still remaining the equitable owners thereof, and thus create in the assignee a demand large enough to entitle him to sue out an attachment on the ground that defendant has not enough property subject to execution to sat-authorize an attachment that the debtor is insolvent,[61] or has not enough property in the state to satisfy the demand.[62] Plaintiff must show that the collection of his demand will be endangered unless the attachment issues,[63] but no intent on the isfy plaintiff's demand. Warren v. Richardson, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 629.

Separate claim of plaintiff's wife included. — An attachment granted on the ground that defendant had not enough property to satisfy plaintiff's demand cannot be sustained as to the whole demand, where it appears that this includes money loaned to defendant by plaintiff's wife, and that the money was her separate estate. Reisert v. Vancleve, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 401.

Enough property to satisfy any one debt. — Attachments were issued against two defendants jointly on debts contracted by them. One of the grounds of each attachment was that defendants did not have property enough subject to execution to satisfy the debts. The defendants together owned enough property to satisfy any one of the debts. It was held that on this ground the attachments could not be sustained against either defendant. Peak v. Weller, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 153.

Estimating value of property.— The basis of valuation of defendant's property is what it would sell for at the place where it was when the attachment issued (Gray v. Robinson, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 765; Haynes v. Viley, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 606, 2 S. W. 681; Ackerman v. Bohm, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 893), deducting valid prior liens (Stucky v. Brown, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 404; Ackerman v. Bohm, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 893) and statutory exemptions (Gray v. Robinson, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 765). Debts due to plaintiff or others which cannot be enforced by attachment are not to be considered. Wolfstein v. Steinharter, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 635. Evidence of what defendant's property sold for at public sale is competent, as tending to show its value at the time the attachment was sued out, but it is not conclusive. Johnson v. Myers, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 969; Grant v. Grant, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 813.

Insolvency as evidence of danger of delay. — An undenied allegation that the debtor is insolvent furnishes prima facie evidence of the danger of delay. Steitler v. Helenbush, (Ky. 1901) 61 S. W. 701; Owensboro Deposit Bank v. Smith, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 808, 58 S. W. 792; Johnson v. Louisville City Nat. Bank, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 118, 56 S. W. 710.

Burden of proof on plaintiff.—Where an attachment is issued on the ground that the debtor has not enough property in the state to satisfy plaintiff's demand, plaintiff has the burden of proof. McFarland v. McNutt, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 903. But see Draddy v. Heile, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1182, 33 S. W. 1107, where it was said that, while the debtor was not required to prove he had sufficient property to satisfy the claim, yet, if he elected to go on the stand as a witness, he must show this to defeat the attachment.

Nothing presumed in favor of creditor.— Ackerman v. Bohm, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 893.

Sufficient showing to sustain attachment.— An attachment of mortgaged realty, before judgment and return of "No property found," on the ground that the debt will be lost by delay, will be sustained, where the personal property seized is insufficient to satisfy the debt, the evidence is conflicting as to whether the value of the land is sufficient to pay the mortgage and plaintiff's debt, after an allotment of homestead, and there is evidence that defendant drinks to excess and gambles. Smith v. Kennedy, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 272, 36 S. W. 18.

Insufficient showing.— Though a merchant whose stock of goods has just been destroyed by fire have not property subject to execution sufficient to satisfy the demand sued on, yet the fact that the insurance and other debts due him greatly exceed his indebtedness, and that he is a man of established business integrity, is sufficient to rebut the presumption that the collection of plaintiff's demand will be endangered by delay, and an attachment on that ground cannot be sustained. Downs v. Ringgold, 101 Ky. 392, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 639, 41 S. W. 317. A few days before the attachment was issued, defendant's storehouse and stock of goods were burned, he at the time carrying twelve hundred dollars insurance thereon. He also owned in cash and accounts one thousand dollars, and always had good credit, being a man of established integrity. Plaintiff alleged as ground for attachment that defendant had not enough property subject to execution to satisfy his demand of two hundred and twenty-eight dollars, and that its collection would be endangered by delay. It was held that the attachment could not be sustained. Robinson v. McInteer, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 128.

Where other persons jointly liable.— If plaintiff could recover his demand by suing persons jointly liable with defendant, the danger contemplated by the statute does not exist and no attachment will be allowed. Francis v. Burnett, 84 Ky. 23, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 715; Dunn v. McAlpin, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 874.

[V, I]

part of the debtor to defraud his creditors is necessary when an attachment is sought on this ground.[64]

J. Intent to Dispose of Property Fraudulently — 1. In General. For a debtor to be about to dispose of his property for the purpose of defrauding his creditors is generally made by statute[65] a ground for an attachment to issue against his property.[66]

2. What Constitutes Being "About" to Dispose of Property. A debtor who has formed a design to dispose[67] of his property and is soon to carry it out is "about" to dispose of his property,[68] and an actual transfer is not necessary.[69]

3. Fraudulent Intent — a. Generally. To furnish a ground for attachment the fraudulent intent of a debtor contemplating a disposal of his property must be in all respects similar to the intent which actuates a debtor making an actual fraudulent transfer of his property.[70]

b. Proof of Intent — (1) In General. Although the fraudulent intent of a debtor may be inferred from his acts and conduct,[71] the events relied on must not

65. Abrams v. Teague, 24 La. Ann. 567; Brown v. Morris, 10 S. C. 467; Johnson v. Rankin, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 59 S. W. 638. Contra, in Alabama in 1848. Reynolds v. Culbreath, 14 Ala. 581.

Residence of the debtor within the state is not required. Bray Clothing Co. v. Shealy, 53 S. C. 12, 30 S. E. 620.

66. Intention to fraudulently transfer property and actual transfer are distinct grounds for attachment (Dunnenbaum v. Schram, 59 Tex. 281), and an attachment on the ground that a debtor is about to dispose of his property fraudulently cannot be supported by proof of an actual disposition (Yarborough v. Hudson, 19 Ala. 653).

Efficiency of this ground.— An attachment on the ground that defendant is about to dispose of his property is as valid and effective as an attachment issued on any other ground and will prevail over a subsequent attachment by another creditor on the ground that the debtor has left the state. Boyd v. Labranche, 35 La. Ann. 285.

67. The mode of disposition contemplated is immaterial. Parsons v. Stockbridge, 42 Ind. 121.

68. Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. Young, 155 Ill. 226, 40 N. E. 582 [affirming 54 Ill. App. 383].

Proof of contemplated disposition.— While it has been held that an overt act on the part of the debtor is not necessary (Hardee v. Langford, 6 Fla. 13), yet mere fragmentary declarations of the debtor are insufficient to show a design to dispose of the property (Brown v. Carpenter, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 120), and the mere opinion of plaintiff that defendant contemplates a fraudulent act is not enough (Brown v. Crenshaw, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 584). The facts must be sufficient to justify a reasonable conviction on the part of the creditor (Lewis v. Kennedy, 3 Greene (Iowa) 57; Hurd v. Jarvis, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 475), although in trying the issue of reasonable belief the evidence is not restricted to the knowledge which plaintiff had at the time of suing out the attachment (Zinn v. Dzialynski, 13 Fla. 597). See also Chaffe v. Mackenzie, 43 La. Ann. 1062, 10 So. 369; Haulenbeck v. Coenen, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 1, 34 N. Y. St. 689, 20 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 6 (where it was held not a sufficient intent to transfer that defendants "thought" they might have to turn over their business).

The debtor must contemplate a transfer at the time the attachment issues in order to justify it. Scudder v. Payton, 65 Mo. App. 314; Bickham v. Lake, 51 Fed. 892.

69. Ditchburn v. Jermyn, etc., Co-operative Assoc., 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 1; Waples-Platter Co. v. Low, 54 Fed. 93, 10 U. S. App. 704, 4 C. C. A. 205.

Intention to dispose of concealed property. — The grounds for attachment that defendant is concealing property and is about to dispose of property are not inconsistent where it appears that he had temporarily concealed the real title in preparation for making a fraudulent transfer of it. Jurgens v. Tum Suden, 32 N. Y. App. Div. 1, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 662.

70. Reason for requiring actual fraudulent intent.— The intent must actually exist and cannot be merely inferred from the consequence of the act because the effect, if that were done, would prevent any sale by a debtor, however advantageous it might be to himself and to his creditors. Seidentopf v. Annabil, 6 Nebr. 524.

Fraudulent intent against plaintiff alone is sufficient and it will not prevent an attachment that the debtor entertained an honest purpose toward the rest of his creditors. Correy v. Lake, Deady (U. S.) 469, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,253.

71. Meinhard v. Lilienthal, 17 Fla. 501; Scott v. Simmons, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 66.

Consideration for intended transfer.— No inference of fraudulent intent is justified when the contemplated transfer is to be made for an adequate consideration (Eaton v. Wells, 18 Minn. 410; Pierce v. White, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 552, 22 Cinc. L. Bul. 98); but the contrary is true where the transfer is to be gratuitous (Clark v. Smith, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 273; Askwith v. Allen, 33 Nebr. 418, 50 N. W. 267; Johnson v. Rankin, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 59 S. W. 638) or for an in-have transpired at so remote a period as to prevent their becoming a part of the res gestæ,[72] and the burden is on plaintiff to show that such an intent existed.[73]

(11) Threatened Assignment. Fraudulent intent is not necessarily shown from the fact that a debtor threatens to make an assignment,[74] even though preferences are contemplated therein,[75] for an intention to prefer is legitisignificant price (Boyd v. Labranche, 35 La. Ann. 285); and an actual gratuitous conveyance is proof of a prior fraudulent purpose (Washburn v. McGuire, 19 Nebr. 98, 26 N. W. 709), although such proof is not always conclusive (Blass v. Lee, 55 Ark. 329, 18 S. W. 186). See also Marietta First Nat. Bank v. Brunswick Chemical Works, 3 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 61, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 318, 25 N. Y. St. 830, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 229 [affirming 5 N. Y. Suppl. 824, and affirmed in 119 N. Y. 645, 23 N. E. 1149, 29 N. Y. St. 993], where it was held that for defendant to allow judgment to be recovered against him on accommodation notes by the person for whose accommodation the notes had been given proved a fraudulent intent and a contemplated disposal of property.

Threats not to pay.— Fraudulent intent on the debtor's part may be established by his threats not to pay if sued (Hanks v. Andrews, 53 Ark. 327, 13 S. E. 1102; Newman v. Kraim, 34 La. Ann. 910; Livermore v. Rhodes, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 626); but not if the threat is accompanied by a promise to pay if no suit is brought (Kerchner v. McCormac, 25 S. C. 461) or if made under excitement (Walker v. Hagerty, 20 Nebr. 482, 30 N. W. 556; Quay v. Robbins, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 154).

Fraudulent intent is not shown by evidence that the debtor attempted to borrow money with which to speculate (Galligan v. Groten, 18 Misc. (N. Y.) 428, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 22, 26 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 78); that he refused to carry out a previous promise to give security (Parsons v. Stockbridge, 42 Ind. 121); that he has not paid an admitted debt frequently demanded and has offered to sell part of his personal property for cash (Meyers v. Boyd, 37 Mo. App. 532); by his making a promise to pay which he has no reasonable expectation of being able to keep (Parsons v. Stockbridge, 42 Ind. 121); by an offer on his part to secure a bona fide creditor by mortgage (C. D. Smith Drug Co. v. Casper Drug Co., 5 Wyo. 510, 40 Pac. 979, 42 Pac. 213); by a refusal to secure a creditor (Ellison v. Bernstein, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 145); or by his statement that the holder of a judgment against him will not issue execution except to protect him from his other creditors (Liveright v. Greenhouse, 61 N. J. L. 156, 38 Atl. 697). See also Armstrong v. Cook, 95 Mich. 257, 54 N. W. 873.

72. Hardee v. Langford, 6 Fla. 13.

Admissibility of evidence.— In determining the question of defendant's fraudulent intent, it is competent for him to show that plaintiff was secured by collaterals (Brown v. Blanchard, 39 Mich. 790), and to show his own lack of knowledge regarding his indebtedness (Hyde v. Nelson, 11 Mich. 353), or that his purpose to dispose was generally known in the neighborhood (Lister v. Campbell, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 876); but proof of subsequent payment of debts should not be allowed (Lister v. Campbell, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 876). See also Lewis v. Kennedy, 3 Greene (Iowa) 57, where it was held that evidence that debtor was financially embarrassed ten years previously and had then transferred property in fraud of his creditors was not competent to show that he was about to dispose of his property with intent to defraud creditors.

The facts were held sufficient to justify an attachment on the ground that defendant contemplated a fraudulent transfer of his property in the following cases:

Kentucky.— Rice v. Tolbert, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 674, 47 S. W. 323.

Louisiana.— Standard Cotton Seed Oil Co. v. Matheson, 48 La. Ann. 1321, 20 So. 713.

Where the circumstances stated by plaintiff are positively denied by defendant the attachment should not be allowed to stand (Morton v. Sterrett, 3 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 173, 4 Wkly. L. Gaz. 132), unless plaintiff's statements were corroborated in other ways (Chaffee v. Runkel, 11 S. D. 333, 77 N. W. 583).

An application for a receiver by an insolvent corporation does not justify an inference of an intended fraudulent transfer. Shuler v. Birdsall, etc., Mfg. Co., 17 N. Y. App. Div. 228, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 725.

75. Atlas Furniture Co. v. Freeman, 70 Hun (N. Y.) 13, 23 N. Y. Suppl. 1131, 53 N. Y. St. 284; Evans v. Warner, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 574; Wilson v. Britton, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 562, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 97 [reversing 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 331]; Harroway v. Flint, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 411, 44 N. Y. Suppl.

mate;[76] but the circumstances under which the threat is made may justify an inference of fraud.[77]

K. Liability Criminally Incurred. Under statutes making it a ground of attachment that the liability was criminally incurred,[78] an attachment has been allowed in an action by the surety in a fidelity bond against the principal to recover the amount paid by the former on account of an embezzlement by the latter;[79] and such a provision has reference to injuries to property as well as to the person.[80]

L. Non-Residence — 1. When Ground For Attachment — a. In General. Non-residence of the debtor within the state[81] where the action is instituted is a usual statutory ground for attachment.[82] Aside from the fact that the debt is

A fraudulent purpose is shown by ability to pay in connection with a threat to assign (White v. Leszynsky, 14 Cal. 165); and a reservation of benefits to the debtor in the assignment has the same effect (Campbell v. Hopkins, 87 Ala. 179, 6 So. 76).

Intent directed against a particular creditor and a desire to prevent him from securing his claim would cause a contemplated assignment made for such purpose to furnish a valid ground for attachment. 81. Non-residence in a county does not warrant an attachment. Dickenson v. Cowley, 15 Kan. 269. Compare Fielding v. Lucas, 87 N. Y. 197, to the effect that, prior to N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 3169, the marine court of New York city could issue an attachment for a debt, not exceeding two thousand dollars, against a non-resident of New York county, although he had a place of business in the city where he regularly transacted business in person and was a resident of the state.

If the parties be in fact residents the remedy is not available. Barr v. Perry, 3 Gill (Md.) 313; Lincoln German Nat. Bank v. Kautler, 55 Nebr. 103, 75 N. W. 566, 70 Am. Action by United States where property is located.— An attachment may be brought by the United States in a state court against a debtor residing in another state, and the objection is not tenable that attachments are designed to aid creditors whose debtors are absent and cannot be cited, and that therefore the United States cannot resort to the proceeding because the debtor is a citizen of the United States and subject to citation in the state where he resides. U. S. v. Murdock, 18 La. Ann. 305, 89 Am. Dec. 651.

Former residence immaterial.—Under these statutes it is immaterial whether or not the non-resident has ever been within the state. Toby v. Brown, 3 Ark. 352; Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182; Redwood v. Consequa, 2 Browne (Pa.) 62. See also Jones v. Buzzard, 2 Ark. 415.

That the non-resident was an alien enemy is immaterial. Hepburn's Case, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 95. See, generally, Aliens, 2 Cyc. 105, note 70.

82. The theory of foreign attachment is that the court cannot obtain jurisdiction over the person of defendant, and his creditors would be without remedy unless jurisdiction could be acquired over his property. The attachment is to compel defendant to come forward and allow his indebtedness to be litigated. Blair v. Winston, 84 Md. 356, 35 Atl. 1101; Herbert v. Herbert, 49 N. J. Eq. 70, 22 Atl. 789; Munroe v. Williams, 37 S. C. 81, 16 S. E. 533, 19 L. R. A. 665.

Although omitted as a distinct ground on a revision of the Ohio statute (Ohio Rev. Stat. (1900), §§ 5521–5523, 5048, subs. 3) the court has held that by implication the legislature intended to continue non-residence as a ground for attachment. Gorham v. Steinau, 10 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 131 [approving Auerbach v. Swadner, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. 435]. See also Moore v. Williams, 44 Miss. 61, 63, where it was held that, under the Mississippi act of 1852, attachments

b. In Case of Joint Debtors.[87] An attachment on the ground of non-residence will not issue against the joint property[88] of co-debtors where only one of them resides without the state.[89] against non-residents shall be "subject to the same rules, regulations, and restrictions" that apply to attachments against absconding debtors.

In Tennessee the act of 1794, c. 1, § 23, applied only to non-residents who were the owners of property within the state. James v. Hall, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 297.

In West Virginia, under W. Va. Code (1860), c. 51, § 11, it was held that, unless plaintiff's claim was an equitable one, non-residence was the sole ground for attachment in equity (Sims v. Charleston Bank, 3 W. Va. 415), but this rule has been altered by statute.

An attachment on this ground will not lie against a trustee in Georgia (Cox v. Henry, 113 Ga. 259, 38 S. E. 856; Smith v. Riley, 32 Ga. 356), or against an alleged homestead as such (Burns v. Lewis, 86 Ga. 591, 13 S. E. 123).

Provision for attachment against non-resident debtor constitutional.—The law of Georgia providing for the issue of an attachment against a non-resident debtor has been held to be not in conflict with section 2, article 4, of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states nor with the fourteenth amendment of that constitution. If non-residence is disputed the question is one of fact, to be determined by the circumstances of the particular case (Krone v. Cooper, 43 Ark. 547; Ritter v. Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 32 Kan. 504, 4 Pac. 1032; Stratton v. Brigham, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 420), and where the question is doubtful the decision should be rendered to best secure the rights of all parties involved (Keith v. Stetter, 25 Kan. 100; Hatch v. Smith, 6 Kan. App. 645, 49 Pac. 698).

Prima facie evidence of non-residence.—The return of the writ of capias or summons without service is prima facie evidence of non-residence as is an affidavit of non-residence by plaintiff or some credible person. Smith v. Armour, 1 Pennew. (Del.) 361, 40 Atl. 720.

But see Pullian v. Nelson, 28 Ill. 112, where it was held that an affidavit alleging non-residence at the time the affidavit was made stated a sufficient ground for attachment, because the issue of the affidavit was practically the commencement of the suit.

Proof of previous residence in the state some time before the writ issued does not prevent an attachment. Barth v. Burnham, 105 Wis. 548, 81 N. W. 809.

2. WHAT CONSTITUTES — a. In General — (I) "RESIDENCE" DEFINED. Residence is a place of abode,[90] a dwelling, a habitation, the act of abiding or dwelling in a place for some continuance of time; to have a permanent abode for the time being as contra-distinguished from a mere temporary locality of existence.[91]

(II) "RESIDENCE" AND "DOMICILE" DISTINGUISHED. "Domicile" is sometimes used as synonymous with "non-residence," [92] but to constitute domicile, two things must concur — the fact of residence and an intention to remain.[93] Attachment statutes contemplate actual residence without regard to domicile,[94] and a person may have his domicile in one state and his residence in another.[95]

(III) "PLACE OF BUSINESS" AND "ACTUAL RESIDENCE" DISTINGUISHED. A person may be a non-resident within the attachment laws, although he has a regular place of business within the state;[96] and a debtor is not liable to attach-

The place of residence of a man's family is prima facie his residence (Keith v. Stetter, 25 Kan. 100; Hatch v. Smith, 6 Kan. App. 645, 49 Pac. 698. But see St. Louis Exch. Bank v. Cooper, 40 Mo. 169, where the court held that the mere fact that a person's family resided without the state was insufficient to constitute him a non-resident), and resorting to actual place of abode on Sundays and holidays only does not affect the doctrine of business domicile (Chaine v. Wilson, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 78, Pierrepont, J., dissenting. Contra, Towner v. Church, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 299). Compare Barron v. Burke, 82 Ill. App. 116; Long v. Ryan, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 718, both to the effect that a person might have a residence in two states at the same time. Contra, Robinson v. Morrison, 2 App. Cas. (D. C.) 105

Failure of court to find whether defendant's wife and family remain settled in the country is not error on a default against a non-resident defendant in an attachment suit, for that is a matter of defense. Dronillard v. Whistler, 29 Ind. 552.

97. Brundred v. Del Hoyo, 20 N. J. L. 328.

The place of business of a firm at which its operations are carried on and where the partners are either continually or at times to manage the business is the residence of each of the partners for the purpose of attachment proceedings. McKinlay v. Fowler, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 388.

1. Ten years' absence without communication of any sort will justify an attachment. Walker v. Barrelli, 32 La. 467.

Nature of absentee's business or employment may be looked to in determining the probable duration of his absence. Burrill v. Jewett, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 701; Wheeler v. Cobb, 75 N. C. 21.

2. Witbeck v. Marshall-Wells Hardware Co., 188 Ill. 154, 58 N. E. 929 [affirming 88 Ill. App. 101]; Wood v. Hamilton, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 41, 1 N. Y. St. 779; Pech Mfg. Co. v. Groves, 6 S. D. 504, 62 N. W. 109.

Leasing one's dwelling and departure with intention to travel for two years has been held to make the absentee a non-resident. Leathers v. Cannon, 27 La. Ann. 522.
