3. A general intention to return eventually will not continue a residence (Hanson v. Graham, 82 Cal. 631, 23 Pac. 56, 7 L. R. A. 127; Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82; Weitkamp v. Loehr, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 79; Carden v. Carden, 107 N. C. 214, 12 S. E. 197, 22 Am. St. Rep. 876. But compare Egan v. Lumsden, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 168), and such general intention becomes even less important where the absentee acquires a place of abode in another state (Jenks v. Rounds, 87 Ill. App. 284; Stevens v. Ellsworth, 95 Iowa 231, 63 N. W. 683; Carden v. Carden, 107 N. C. 214, 12 S. E. 197, 22 Am. St. Rep. 876; Wolf v. McGavock, 23 Wis. 516).

An unfulfilled intention to return within a definite time (Eberly v. Rowland, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 312; Nailor v. French, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 241) or soon (Henderson v. Travis, 6 La. Ann. 174) will have no effect toward retaining residence.

Contingent intention to return.—Where the debtor left the state with an intention to return on one contingency and to remain on another, and neither contingency happened, he was held not to have lost his residence. Smith v. Dalton, 1 Cinc. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 150.

Definite intention to return prevented the loss of a residence, although the debtor was absent nearly a year establishing a business which was subsequently to be put in charge of a collector. Hurlbut v. Seeley, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 138, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 507.

Evidence of intention to return is material when alleged non-residence is traversed. Wallace v. Lodge, 5 Ill. App. 507.

4. No definite rule as to exact duration of absence which will render a person a non-resident can be laid down (Johnson v. May, 49 Nebr. 601, 68 N. W. 1032), but a prominent idea involved is whether the absence of the party is of such character and so prolonged that he cannot be served with ordinary process (Morgan v. Nunes, 54 Miss. 308).

W. 809 (where a year's absence in search of work with wife and family residing within the state was held not to make absentee a non-resident). But see Haggart v. Morgan, 5 N. Y. 422, 55 Am. Dec. 350 (where three years' absence made the absentee a non-resident, although he kept house within the jurisdiction); Taylor v. Knox, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 158, 1 L. ed. 80 (where three months' absence, although there was a place of abode within the state, had a like effect).

Absconding debtors for this reason are usually not non-residents (Lindsey v. Dixon, 52 Mo. App. 291; State v. Mills, 57 N. J. L. 570, 31 Atl. 1023; Morrison v. Goldstein, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 399, 16 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 76; Scott v. Hilgert, 14 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 305), though an absconding debtor with fixed abode in another state is a non-resident (Ross v. Clark, 32 Mo. 296).

Absence on account of political agitation lasting only a short time will not make the absentee a non-resident. Clark v. Pratt, 19 La. Ann. 102.

Absence prolonged by sickness will not make the absentee a non-resident. Garlinghouse v. Mulvane, 40 Kan. 428, 19 Pac. 798; Johnson v. May, 49 Nebr. 601, 68 N. W. 1032.

Absence to evade criminal process does not usually make the fugitive a non-resident. New York v. Genet, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 487; Starke v. Scott, 78 Va. 180. But see Burrill v. Jewett, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 701, where the court, held that an absence of two and one half years, while engaged in the navigation of a trading vessel in foreign waters, made the absentee a non-resident.

Dividing time between two states, spending winters in New York and summers in New Jersey, constituted a person a non-resident of New Jersey during the winter months (Stout v. Leonard, 37 N. J. L. 492 [reversing 36 N. J. L. 370]); and on similar facts an attachment issued immediately upon an attempt to rent the New Jersey residence was sustained (Baldwin v. Flagg, 43 N. J. L. 495).

Temporary recurring absences at periodic intervals do not make the absentee a non-resident (Winter Iron Works v. Toy, 12 La. Ann. 200; Burch v. Taylor, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 224, 8 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 130; Raub v. Eakin, 2 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 25); unless the stay within the state is so short in duration that it amounts only to a succession of visits (Southern R. Co. v. McDonald, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 59 S. W. 370).

Volunteer soldiers, therefore, are usually held not to be non-residents (Tibbitts v. Townsend, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 221; Lyon v. Vance, 46 W. Va. 781, 34 S. E. 761. But see Ludlow v. Ramsey, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 581, 20 L. ed. 216, where the contrary was held of a volunteer soldier engaged in hostilities in rebellion against the United States), but joining an army in active service, accompanied by the departure of soldier's family from their usual place of abode, will make the absentee subject to attachment as a non-resident (Tiller v. Abernathy, 37 Mo. 196).

It is not sufficient actual removal that a person has made preparations to leave the state (State v. Mills, 57 N. J. L. 570, 31 Atl. 1023; Smith v. Story, 1 Humphr. (Tenn.) 420), partially executed a plan for removing goods (Kugler v. Shreve, 28 N. J. L. 129), or has started for the state line without actually reaching it (Ballinger v. Lantier, 15 Kan. 608. Contra, State v. Allen, 48 W. Va. 154, 35 S. E. 990, 50 L. R. A. 284).

Where there is actual removal the change is none the less effected by an intention to retain a residence (Robinson v. Morrison, 2 App. Cas. (D. C.) 105), or by a temporary residence of the family at the former domicile (Reed v. Ketch, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 105, 7 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 183).

9. Intention to reside in another state is sufficient. Farrow v. Barker, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 217; Whitehill v. Eicherly, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 593; State v. Allen, 48 W. Va. 154, 35 S. E. 990, 50 L. R. A. 284.

Intention merely to abandon residence has been held sufficient (Ritter v. Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. St. 420; Labe v. Brauss, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 255).

One voting, paying taxes, and having a fixed place of abode in another state is undoubtedly a non-resident. Canda v. Robbins, 5 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 8, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 896, 28 N. Y. St. 96.

Lack of all intention as to permanence has been held not to interfere with the acquiring of a residence. Heidenbach v. Schland, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 477; Burrows v. Miller, 4 How. Pr. (N. Right to attachment in actions on contracts, generally, see infra, VI, B

In action on a certified check, with payment refused, an undenied statement in the affidavit that "the action is brought upon an instrument of writing overdue, and for the direct payment of money," shows a good cause of attachment. Breene v. Merchants', etc., Bank, 11 Colo. 97, 101, 17 Pac. 280.

A written agreement to pay a mortgage given as security for a promissory note is an instrument for the direct payment of money on which an attachment will lie. Stuyvesant v. Western Mortgage, etc., Co., 22 Colo. 28, 43 Pac. 144.

An appeal-bond, conditioned that, if defendant shall duly prosecute his appeal and pay the judgment in case the same shall be affirmed, then the obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall remain in full force, is not a written instrument for the direct payment of money within the meaning of Colo. Code Civ. Proc. § 92, subd. 14. Hurd v. McClellan, 14 Colo. 213, 23 Pac. 792.

15. Applies only to contracts.— Attachment on this ground is authorized only in actions founded on contract. Raver v. Webster, 3 Iowa 502, 66 Am. Dec. 96.

the debt, no attachment will be allowed if the debtor is willing to give reasonable security for the debt, even though the creditor cannot convert such security into cash as quickly as he might desire.[17]

O. Removal and Concealment of Property — 1. In General. Actual or contemplated removal[18] of property[19] from the jurisdiction of the court[20] or the concealment of property and effects[21] is usually made by statute a ground for attachment. Whether the debtor must have an intention to defraud his creditor depends upon the wording of the various state statutes.[22]

2. What Constitutes Removal — a. Actual. To constitute the removal of property within the meaning of the attachment acts the debtor[23] must make an

What a sufficient demand.— Plaintiff, a surety for defendants on a note, requested them, after the maturity of the note, to pay or secure it to the holder. Defendants positively refused so to do. A draft which plaintiff procured the holder to draw upon defendants was returned unpaid, and a letter accompanying it was not answered. Plaintiff then paid the note, and sued out an attachment, on the ground that defendants were about to remove from the county, and that they refused to pay or secure plaintiff. It was held, that the attachment was not defeated because plaintiff made no demand upon defendants for payment or security after he took up the note. Ruthven v. Beckwith, 84 Iowa 715, 45 N. W. 1073, 51 N. W. 153.

17. Drummond v. Stewart, 8 Iowa 341.

What not sufficient security.— The execution of a chattel mortgage by a debtor to a creditor upon property which is subject to prior liens of the same kind, if done by the debtor, without the knowledge or request of the creditor, and if not accepted by him, is not such a giving of property in payment or security for the debt as the law requires in order to preclude an attachment. Burrows v. Lehndorff, 8 Iowa 96.

18. Haslett v. Rodgers, 107 Ga. 239, 33 S. E. 44; Stephens v. Whitehead, 75 Ga. 294; Walker v. Welch, 13 Ill. 674; Pecquet v. Golis, 1 Mart. N. S. (La.) 438. But see Sims v. Charleston Bank, 3 W. Va. 415, to the effect that this was not a ground of attachment under W. Va. Code (1860), c. 151.

Threatened removal by a mortgagor of mortgaged property in his possession furnishes a ground for attachment by the mortgagee. Patton v. Harris, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 607.

Intended removal of property during pendency of action at law furnishes ground for attachment in equity against defendant who contemplates the removal. Isaacks v. Edwards, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 464, 46 Am. Dec. 86; Fisher v. Cummings, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 231.

19. Intangible property such as a patent right cannot be removed so as to afford a ground for attachment. Logan v. Sibley, 67 Ill. App. 579.

Removal of the debtor's person need not accompany the removal of property (Lester v. Cummings, 8 Humphr. (Tenn.) 384); and under a statute allowing an attachment against an administrator or executor who is removing his decedent's property out of any county, the removal of the person of the executor or administrator does not justify an attachment (Holloway v. Chiles, 40 Ga. 346).

20. Steele v. Dodd, 14 Nebr. 496, 16 N. W. 909.

Showing of intent.— An intention to defraud was sufficiently made out in McEntee v. Aris, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 857, 50 N. Y. St. 541; Weiss v. Hobbs, 84 Va. 489, 5 S. E. 367; but not in Bernhard v. Cohen, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 271; Sowers v. Leiby, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. 223; Simpson v. Dall, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 460, 18 L. ed. 265.

23. Only a resident can remove property so as to afford ground for attachment in Louisiana (McClintock v. Cairnes, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 450); but departure of a resident previous to removal will not prevent a ground for attachment from arising (Sloan v. Bangs, 10 Rich. (S. C.) 15).

The withdrawal of individual property by copartners for individual purposes affords a actual physical removal[24] of a material part of his property[25] for more than a temporary period.[26]

b. Intended. To constitute intended removal of property the debtor must be engaged in the act or be near to the performance of the act of "removal,"[27] and if he entertains the purpose and is making preparations to carry it out, the creditor is entitled to attachment.[28]

3. What Constitutes Concealment. To constitute concealment within the meaning of attachment statutes, it is held that there must be a physical[29] hiding ground for attachment (Globe Woolen Co. v. Carhart, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 403), and the removal of firm effects by one partner with the consent of his copartners has the same effect (Bryant v. Simoneau, 51 Ill. 324).

24. Selling the property and pocketing the proceeds is not removal (Monroe v. Cutter, 9 Dana (Ky.) 93), nor is a false denial of the receipt of certain funds (Rohan Bros. Boiler Mfg. Co. v. Latimore, 18 Mo. App. 16); but shipments, although in the regular course of trade, may furnish a ground for attachment (Queen City Mfg. Co. v. Blalack, (Miss. 1896) 18 So. 800; Wilkinson v. Dockery, (Miss. 1893) 12 So. 585; Mack v. McDaniel, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 198, 4 Fed. 294). See also Stock v. Reynolds, 121 Mich. 356, 80 N. W. 289, Grant, C. J., dissenting (where the court held that property passing through the county in the regular course of trade can be attached as property which is being removed); Crow v. Lemon, etc., Co., 69 Miss. 799, 11 So. 110 (where it was held that a debtor who shipped his property to consignee without the state, for the purpose of raising a fund against which he could draw to pay debts due others, was liable to an attachment on the ground that he had removed his property without the state).

Proof of removal.— This ground for attachment was held to be established by evidence that a manufacturing company ceased business, and that part of its manufactured material and machinery had been removed to an unknown place (MacTaggart v. Putnam Corset Co., 5 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 473, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 800, 29 N. Y. St. 552), and by proof that a check given in payment of purchases of gold coin had been dishonored and the gold had mysteriously disappeared (Greenleaf v. Mumford, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 30); but the facts were held not necessarily to raise a presumption of fraudulent removal when it appeared that a man had sent his family away two days previously and closed his store and packed up his goods by night (Mott v. Lawrence, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 196, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 559). See also Brown v. Hawkins, 65 N. C. 645; Miller v. Paine, 2 Kulp (Pa.) 304; Sowers v. Leiby, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. 223.

The burden of proof is on defendant removing property to show that he has other ample visible property within the state to meet the demands of his creditors (Pickard v. Samuels, 64 Miss. 822, 2 So. 250); and it is not sufficient to show that enough property remains to satisfy the attaching creditor's claim (Holliday v. Cohen, 34 Ark. 707).

The value of the property remaining in the state should be reckoned by its fair market value and not upon what it would bring at a forced sale. Foster v. Pitts, 63 Ark. 387, 38 S. W. 1114; Nesbit v. Schwab Clothing Co., 62 Ark. 22, 34 S. W. 79.

Refusing to give peremptory instructions was error when defendant took all his property with him out of the state (Philadelphia Invest. Co. v. Bowling, 72 Miss. 565, 17 So. 231); and the facts showed a material part was removed in Tingle v. Beasley, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 878.

Actual removal soon after the attachment is proof of a previous intention to remove. Freidlander v. Pollock, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 490. But intention to remove was not shown by the evidence in Jaycox v. Wing, 66 Ill. 182; Stow v. Stacey, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 1, 30 N. Y. St. 308.

28. Myers v. Farrell, 47 Miss. 281.

29. Thus an under-estimation of the value of property by a debtor seeking compromise is not concealment (Roach v. Brannon, 57 Miss. 490); nor is a threat by the debtor to have judgment entered against him, which or secreting[30] of property[31] so that it cannot be seized to satisfy creditors' claims.[32]

P. Return of "Not Found" Upon Ordinary Process. As has been remarked heretofore, the principal object of the earlier attachment acts was to compel the appearance of a defendant who could not be reached by ordinary process.[33] Under such statutes, where ordinary process has been issued and returned by the officer "not found,"[34] a so-called "judicial" attachment may issue.[35] would exhaust his property (Stokes v. Schlecht, 14 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 328), or concealment of title by means of fraudulent conveyance or mortgage though the last is a separate ground for attachment; but depositing money in another's name has been held actual concealment (Treadwell v. Lawlor, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 8); as has the allowance of a liquidated mortgage to remain unsatisfied with a view to having it continue apparently a live instrument to cover new stock (Bauer Grocery Co. v. Smith, 61 Mo. App. 665, 74 Mo. App. 419) and a fraudulent assignment of notes (Wilson v. Beadle, 2 Head (Tenn.) 510).

30. The word "secrete," as used in the attachment acts, means to hide, to put where the officer of the law will not be able to find it. Pearre v. Hawkins, 62 Tex. 434.

Concealment was made out by evidence that defendant boasted that he had money in a safe place and would not pay (Ziegler v. Ziegler, 68 Hun (N. Y.) 177, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 812, 51 N. Y. St. 891); and by evidence of a hurried division of property followed by placing it in various different places (McDonald v. Marquardt, 52 Nebr. 820, 73 N. W. 288); and failure to make return of a large cash sale of goods consigned to a debtor by his creditor to sell and account for proceeds (Powell v. Matthews, 10 Mo. 49); or the transmission of money through the post-office (Albuquerque First Nat. Bank v. Lesser, 9 N. M. 604, 58 Pac. 345) tended to show concealment. Failure to keep a cash-book is evidence of concealment in a doubtful case (Lippincott v. Prendergast, 2 Del. Co. (Pa.) 322); and the hiding of books of account is evidence of actual or threatened concealment where it was done with defendant's authority (Fitzgerald v. Belden, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 225). See also Mahner v. Linck, 70 Mo. App. 380.

It is not concealment to fail to deliver property according to contract (Powers v. O'Brien, 44 Mich. 317, 6 N. W. 679), or to deny the possession of money, although the debtor actually has the money in his possession (Keith v. McDonald, 31 Ill. App. 17). See also Roach v. Brannon, 57 Miss. 490, 498, where it was said: "Money is never visible ordinarily, and so long as there is no attempt to secrete it, by clandestine removal or fictitious transfers or otherwise, and so long as it is kept and used as money ordinarily is, no ground of attachment is afforded."

Evidence of the amount of money paid by defendant to plaintiff during their business dealings is inadmissible on the question of fraudulent concealment. Finlay Brewing Co. v. Prost, 111 Mich. 635, 70 N. W. 137. See also Stapleton v. Ewell, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1534, 55 S. W. 917, where the court held that the facts justified an attachment under the statutes allowing the writ to issue when the plaintiff had a future interest in property or lien against it and it appeared that the property was "about to be sold, concealed, or removed from the State."

31. Money is property which may be concealed. Treadwell v. Lawlor, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 8; Terry v. Knoll, 3 Kulp (Pa.) 272.

Title to the concealed property need not be in defendant. Treadwell v. Lawlor, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 8.

A portion only of the debtor's property need be concealed to afford a ground for attachment. Taylor v. Myers, 34 Mo. 81.

32. The ulterior purpose for which the concealment is made is immaterial.— Kleine v. Nie, 88 Ky. 542, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 583, 11 S. W. 590; Mathews v. Loth, 45 Mo. App. 455.

A pretense of returning the secreted property will not prevent a ground for attachment from arising. Kleine v. Nie, 88 Ky. 542, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 583, 11 S. W. 590.

33. See supra, II, B.

34. Return substituted for plaintiff's affidavit.— The return of the sheriff upon the original process is substituted for plaintiff's affidavit to procure an attachment writ. Welch v. Robinson, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 263.

The form of the return by the sheriff should be that "defendant is not to be found within his county" (Welch v. Robinson, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 263, 265; Gray v. Smith, 17 Tex. 389) or that "defendant is not found within his bailiwick" (Craig v. Saven, Hard. (Ky.) 46; Irons v. Allen, Hard. (Ky.) 44). But see Thompson v. Hair, 7 Ala. 313, where the court sustained an attachment although the sheriff's return was not a regular one, or in the precise words of the statute, because its meaning could not be mistaken.

Diligent search and inquiry should be made by the sheriff before he makes his return of "not found" (Welch v. Robinson, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 263); and such return is not justified where defendant was absent temporarily for only two or three days (Robeson v. Hunter, 90 Tenn. 242, 16 S. W. 466). But where defendant cannot be found at his usual place of residence so as to be served with process, the sheriff may make a return of non est inventus (Moore v. Simpson, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 49) even though the impossibility of serving process is due to a bona fide change of residence (James v. Hall, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 297).

VI. ON WHAT DEMANDS REMEDY LIES.

A. In General — 1. ONLY WHERE AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE. To warrant the issue of an attachment there must be a cause of action,[36] and the remedy being purely statutory,[37] it will lie only where the cause of action is of a kind to which the statute is clearly intended to apply.[38] Where the action is not one in which the remedy is authorized by statute the issue and levy of an attachment will give the

A substitute for personal service.— In such cases the attachment is sued out to take the place of personal service and publication is unnecessary. Briggs v. Smith, 13 Tex. 269.

Lies only against residents of state.—Such a judicial attachment lies only against residents (Deaver v. Keith, 61 N. C. 428), and the fact that defendant is a resident must appear of record (Blair v. Cleveland, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 421; Evans v. Saltmarsh, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 43; Wyatt v. Campbell, Minor (Ala.) 390).

Equitable demands.— As to when attachment is authorized in a suit in equity or on an equitable demand see infra, VII, B, 8.

New Jersey — When capias might issue.— Under the New Jersey statutes attachment is maintainable only in actions arising out of contract in which a capias ad respondendum might issue against defendant. Kipp v. Salyer, 64 N. J. L. 160, 44 Atl. 843; Liveright v. Greenhouse, 61 N. J. L. 156, 38 Atl. 697; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Pequonnock Nat. Bank, 58 N. J. Action of debt — Foreign attachment.— In Victor v. Abrams, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 298 (holding that Pancake v. Harris, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 109, was not authority to the contrary) it was held that a foreign attachment would lie in an action of debt.

Action of account.— Under a statute authorizing any creditor to sue out an attachment and not specifying the nature or form of the action in which the writ might issue it was held that the remedy was available in an action of account. Humphreys v. Matthews, 11 Ill. 471.

Scire facias to bring in party.—An attachment may be sued out in aid of a scire facias to make a defendant, not served with process, party to a judgment recovered against his co-defendant, where the action is such that an attachment could have issued in aid thereof as originally instituted. Firebaugh v. Hall, 63 Ill. 81; Ryder v. Glover, 4 Ill. 547.

Real actions.— In New Hampshire a writ of attachment may be used in the commencement of a real action and goods attached to secure the costs. Rand v. Sherman, 6 N. H. 29. But in an early Maine case it was held that no lien could be created by attachment in such an action under the statutes of that state. Holmes v. Fernald, 7 Me. 232.

Limitation as to amount of claim.— Sometimes the statutes limit the right to attachment to claims above a specified amount. Thus, under the Maryland act of 1795, c. 56, attachment would not lie for a debt under the value of twenty dollars (Dix v. Nicholls, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 581, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,926); and under the Iowa statutes (Iowa Code (1897), § 3880) plaintiff's demand must be for not less than five dollars to authorize attachment where the cause arises out of contract (Bradley v. McCall, 2 Greene (Iowa) 214), but this provision is not applicable to demands arising ex delicto (Weller v. Hawes, 49 Iowa 45).

court no jurisdiction,[39] but it has been held that defendant may waive this objection by pleading to the merits.[40]

2. Joining Causes Not Authorizing With Causes Authorizing Attachment. A party holding a claim on which attachment lies cannot join with it another claim on which the remedy will not lie and then obtain an attachment covering both.[41] If he does so the attachment may be dissolved in toto.[42]

B. Demands Arising Ex Contractu — 1. Express Contracts — a. In General. Under some statutes the right to issue attachments is confined to causes of action arising ex contractu,[43] and where this is the case, in order for plaintiff to be entitled to the writ, it is essential that contractual relations exist between him and defendant,[44] or else that the contract be made for his Action for conversion — Joinder of other tortious demands.—Where an attachment can issue only in an action arising on contract for the recovery of money, or in an action for the wrongful conversion of personal property, the writ will be denied where several causes of action for different torts are joined with an action for conversion. Union Consol. Min. Co. v. Raht, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 208.

Fraud in contracting part only of debt.—An attachment sued out on the ground that the debt was fraudulently contracted cannot be sustained where it appears that part only of the debt was so contracted. See supra, V, G, 1.

Joinder of contractual and statutory demands.— If an attachment may be granted only in suits on contract or for the wrongful conversion of personal property, none can issue in an action in which causes of action on an implied contract are joined with one given by statute. Wilson v. Harvey, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 126.

As to right to attachment on statutory liabilities see infra, VI, G.

South Carolina — Joinder of legal and equitable causes.— Under the code practice where the complaint sets out two causes of action, one legal and the other equitable in nature, if the legal cause is sufficient to authorize attachment and judgment could be rendered thereon independently of the equitable relief sought, it is error to set the attachment aside on the ground that the action is one of purely equitable cognizance. Ferst v. Powers, 58 S. C. 398, 36 S. E. 744.

42. Vollmer v. Spencer, (Ida. 1897) 51 Pac. 609.

43. Right to attachment in actions ex delicto see infra, VI, C.

Must be debt within meaning of statute.— In a suit by foreign attachment to subject property of a non-resident it must be shown that the debt on which the proceeding is based is such a one as comes within the meaning of the statute authorizing attachment and not merely such a one as might be established by a suit for the specific performance of a contract, out of which, if enforced, the debt would arise. Barksdale v. Hendree, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 43.

Breach of duty.— Under a statute authorizing the remedy only on demands arising upon contract an attachment is not authorized in an action based solely on a breach of duty, unless it appears that such duty arose by contract. Pope v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 24 Ohio St. 481.

Instituting suit in violation of contract.— An action to recover damages for instituting suit in violation of a contract for the extension of the time of payment upon a note, and wantonly and maliciously attaching plaintiff's property therein, whereby plaintiff's credit was greatly injured, is not an action for "a debt or demand arising upon contract," within the meaning of Ohio Rev. Stat. § 5521. McCracken v. Covington City Nat. Bank, 4 Fed. 602.

Action to adjust partnership accounts.— An action by one partner against his copartner, before the adjustment of partnership accounts, for an accounting and to recover an unascertained balance, is not an action upon a "demand arising upon contract" so as to justify an attachment on the ground of non-residence, under Kan. Gen. Stat. (1899), § 4440, where the cause of action did not arise wholly within the limits of Kansas. Stone v. Boone, 24 Kan. 337 [following Treadway v. Ryan, 3 Kan. 437].

Appeal from justice's judgment.— An action pending in a circuit court on an appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace, where the trial is not de novo, is not an action ex contractu to recover money. Zechman v. Haak, 85 Wis. 656, 56 N. W. 158.

44. Rouss v. Wright, 14 Nebr. 457, 16 N. W. 765, 18 Nebr. 234, 25 N. W. 80, where it was held that an action for failure to deliver goods, brought against the vendor by a stranger to the contract of sale, to whom the purchaser had directed that the goods be shipped, was not an action on contract.

Person entitled to lien by subrogation.— Where a purchaser of property, to protect himself from enforcement of a lien against the premises for an indebtedness created by his vendor, pays the lien, and thus becomes en-benefit.[45] Under such statutes the remedy has been held to be authorized in actions on bonds and undertakings,[46] for breach of warranty,[47] for breach of contract to deliver goods,[48] and in other actions on money demands arising ex contractu.[49] Where the claim grows out of contract its character as such is not titled by subrogation to the lien and debt, an action by him against the vendor is an action arising out of contract, express or implied, within a statutory provision permitting an attachment in such case. Alford v. Cobb, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 22.

Contra under Colorado statute.— Under Mills' Anno. Stat. Colo. § 2700, authorizing an attachment in an action on an "overdue" instrument for the direct payment of money, no attachment can be maintained on an administrator's bond. Such statute applies only to instruments for a definite sum of money payable absolutely at a specified time. People v. Boylan, 25 Fed. 594. For the same reason no attachment will lie in an action on an appeal-bond conditioned that if appellant shall duly prosecute his appeal and pay the judgment, if the same be affirmed, then the obligation shall be void; otherwise it shall remain in full force. See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 13.

Account stated.— The charge that an account had been stated between plaintiff and defendant, and had not been paid, is a sufficient charge of breach of "contract" to entitle plaintiff to attachment, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 636. Johnston v. Ferris, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 302, 12 N. Y. St. 666.

Failure to deliver possession of land.— An action for damages for breach of an agreement to complete a building on certain land and deliver possession not later than a stipulated time is one "arising on contract for the recovery of money only." Coats v. Arthur, 5 S. D. 274, 58 N. W. 675.

Breach of lease.— An action for damages accruing to plaintiff through acts done by defendant in violation of a lease from defendant to plaintiff is one arising on contract. Doblinger v. Dickson, 71 Fed. 635, construing Ohio statute.

Refusal to receive and pay for goods.— An action for failure to receive and pay for goods which plaintiff had promised to sell and defendant had promised to buy is founded on contract and not in tort. Donnelly v. Strueven, 63 Cal. 182.

Refusal to buy bank stock.— An agreement to buy bank stock at not less than a certain price, after notice, is a contract within Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 537, providing that a writ of attachment may issue in an action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money. Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482, 40 Pac. 804.

An action for the price of cattle sold and delivered to defendant is an action on an express contract, within the meaning of the attachment law, although the cattle agreed to be sold were not all delivered, and the amount claimed is consequently less than the consideration expressed in the memorandum of sale. Littlejohn v. Jacobs, 66 Wis. 600, 29 N. W. 545.

An action for a commission for selling real estate, where the owner agreed that plaintiff should have as compen ation all that he could sell it for above a certain sum, but, on plaintiff's procuring an offer above that sum, refused to comply with his agreement, is a demand arising on contract, for which an attachment on the ground of non-residence may be issued. Ammen v. Morris, 7 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 304, 2 Cinc. L. Bul. 94.

affected, so as to preclude an attachment, by the fact that tortious elements are involved.[50]

b. Breach of Promise of Marriage. In some cases it has been held that an action for breach of promise to marry comes within a statute allowing attachment in actions for demands arising on contract;[51] but in other jurisdictions the contrary view is maintained.[52]

c. Contracts Made or Payable Within or Outside State. The question whether the contract out of which the cause of action arose was made or payable within the state, as limiting the right to attach, depends upon the terms of the statutes authorizing attachment.[53] Under a statute limiting the remedy by attachment to contracts made or payable within the state, if the contract be not made in the state there must be an express stipulation that it shall be payable there to warrant an attachment.[54]

2. Implied Contracts — a. In General. Under a statute authorizing attachments in actions arising out of contract an attachment may be maintained on a

Action to recover upon coupons and scrip certificates.— Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 635, authorizing an attachment to be granted "in actions to recover a sum of money only, whether for breach of contract, express or implied, other than a contract of marriage," it was held that an attachment might be issued in an action against a railroad company to recover upon coupons and scrip certificates representing interest payable semi-annually out of the company's net or surplus income. Seeley v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 39 Fed. 252.

Pennsylvania — Foreign attachment.— Under the Pennsylvania statutes a writ of foreign attachment may issue in an action of account render. The remedy lies in all actions sounding in contract where the amount can be definitely ascertained. Strock v. Little, 45 Pa. St. 416.

53. Kansas — Action against non-resident on promissory note.— Under Kan. Gen. Stat. (1899), § 4440, an attachment lies on the ground of non-residence only for debts or demands arising upon contract, judgment, or decree, unless the cause of action arose wholly within the limits of Kansas. Under this statute, where the cause of action is founded on a promissory note, an attachment will lie on the ground of non-residence, although the cause of action arose outside the state. Payne v. Kansas City First Nat. Bank, 16 Kan. 147.

New York — Defendant "indebted within the state."— Under 1 N. Y. Rev. Laws 157, attachment lay only where defendant was indebted within the state, either by reason that the contract was made there or that the creditor resided there. Matter of Marty, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 229; Matter of Fitch, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 298; Ex p. Schroeder, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 603.

Virginia — Contract of bailment made outside state.— In Peter v. Butler, 1 Leigh (Va.) 285, it was held that a claim, arising on a contract of bailment, made out of Virginia, against a non-resident, was a claim for debt, for which foreign attachment in chancery would lie.

Presumption as to place of payment.— Where a contract is made in a foreign state it will be presumed that it will be performed there, and an attachment will not issue within the state in an action thereon, though in a general sense the amount due would be payable anywhere the debtor might be found. Tuller v. Arnold, 93 Cal. 166, 28 Pac. 863.

What not a contract made or payable in state.— The indorsement of the words, "The above balance, fourteen hundred and ninety-three 96–100 dollars, due Ordenstein & Co., is correct. Bones & Spenser," made in Arizona on an open account of goods sold in California, though making an account stated, does not operate to create such a contract as will entitle O. & Co., in a suit on the account against B. & S., to a writ of attachment under Ariz. Comp. Laws, § 2257, providing for the issue of that writ only where plaintiff sues to recover an indebtedness upon a contract, express or implied, made or payable in the territory, for the direct payment of money. Ordenstein v. Bones, (Ariz. 1887) 12 Pac. 614, 615.

demand founded on an implied contract,[55] and the fact that the demand involves tortious elements will not preclude the right to the writ if plaintiff elects to waive the tort and sue on the implied contract.[56]

55. Instances in which attachments allowed.— Attachments have been allowed in the following cases under statutes authorizing attachment on demands arising out of contract:— An action against a common carrier to recover for damage or loss of goods (Bausman v. Smith, 2 Ind. 374; Hunt v. Norris, 4 Mart. (La.) 517. Contra, Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. McLoon, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 27); or for personal injuries to a passenger (Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Peoples, 31 Ohio St. 537). Assumpsit for money embezzled by a clerk. Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Fonda, 65 Mich. 533, 32 N. W. 664. But see Babcock v. Briggs, 52 Cal. 502. Assumpsit for money had and received against a thief to recover stolen money. Gould v. Baker, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 669, 35 S. W. 708. An action to recover money obtained by fraud. But compare Elliott v. Jackson, 3 Wis. 649. An action by a principal against his agent for money received, based on the agent's failure to pay over on demand money intrusted to him by the principal for use in making certain payments, and which was converted by the agent. Nevada Co. v. Farnsworth, 89 Fed. 164. An action against a factor to recover the difference between the price at which goods were sold and that authorized by contract. Hanson v. Watson, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 534. An action for breach of contract for the value of books delivered to be bound and not returned. Turner v. Collins, 1 Mart. N. S. (La.) 369. An action by the United States to recover a sum claimed to be due as duties on imported goods. U. S. v. Graff, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 634, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 304.

Contracts implied in law as well as in fact.— In Nevada Co. v. Farnsworth, 89 Fed. 164, it was held that a statute permitting attachment in an action on a contract should be construed as including contracts implied in law as well as those implied in fact. See also Grevell v. Whiteman, 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 279, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 974.

Where no contract implied by law.— The law implies no contract on the part of a child to pay for necessaries furnished, without his request, to an indigent parent, and therefore attachment will not lie in an action against the child to recover for such necessaries. Wilson v. Harvey, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 126.

Implied promise of principal to indemnify sureties.— There was no default on a bond of a trustee of an estate conditioned to pay an annuity, to pay over the profits of the trust property, and to account therefor to the county court, where the principal absconded after giving the bond and depositing trust funds in a bank which he wrecked, but where no legal proceedings were had to establish a default on the bond, and no demand was made on the trustee; so that there was no liability of sureties on which to found an implied contract as a basis of an action in attachment. Wisconsin.— Barth v. Graf, 101 Wis. 27, 76 N. W. 1100; Western Assur. Co. v. Towle, 65 Wis. 247, 26 N. W. 104. But see Elliott v. Jackson, 3 Wis. 649.

Contra, under Colorado statutes.— Under Colo. Code, § 91, giving writs of attachment in actions on contracts, express or implied, an attachment cannot issue in actions of trespass to mines, involving conversion of ore, even though plaintiff elects to waive the trespass, and sue as for money had and received to his use. Tabor v. Big Pittsburg Consol. Silver Min. Co., 4 McCrary (U. S.) 299, 14 Fed. 636, 15 Reporter (U. S.) 164.

Whenever assumpsit will lie.— In Nethery v. Belden, 66 Miss. 490, 493, 6 So. 464, the court said: "We construe the statute quoted, to mean, as far as implied contracts are concerned, that whenever assumpsit will lie for the breach of an implied contract, attachment may be maintained to recover damages therefor, although the breach of the contract may be tortious."

b. Judgments. Under the statutes of most states an attachment may be maintained in an action on a judgment, either domestic[57] or foreign,[58] even though plaintiff be entitled to execution upon the judgment at the time of issuing the writ.[59] An action on a money judgment is one "arising on contract" whether such judgment were recovered on a contract or for a tort.[60]

3. Necessity For Demand to Be Liquidated. As a general rule no attachment will lie, where the contract itself does not furnish the measure of defendant's liability and the damages claimed are speculative or so uncertain that plaintiff cannot swear with any certainty to the amount that will be found due him.[61]

Where tort not waivable.— Under the Tennessee acts of 1836, c. 43, and 1838, c. 166, an attachment bill will not lie to subject property which has been bought with money stolen from plaintiff, that being a case arising ex delicto, in which the tort cannot be waived, and such suits being only authorized where the relation of debtor and creditor exists. Union Bank v. Baker, 8 Humphr. (Tenn.) 447.

W. 295, where it was held that where a creditor permitted his judgment lien to expire and the time to elapse within which the judgment could be revived by a scire facias, he might bring an action at law on the judgment aided by attachment.

Not allowed pending appeal from judgment. — Where an appeal has been taken and a proper supersedeas bond executed by appellant, further action on the judgment is suspended and consequently an attachment issued thereon is improper. Johnson v. Williams, 82 Ky. 45, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 733.

Where one joint defendant not served with process.— Under a statute allowing attachment in an action on a judgment, the remedy is not available where the original proceeding was against two joint defendants, only one of whom was served with process. The one not served not being bound by such judgment plaintiff has no joint demand against defendants "arising upon a judgment." Oakley v. Aspinwall, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 1.

59. Young v. Cooper, 59 Ill. 121. But see Frellson v. Stewart, 14 La. Ann. 832, where it was held that a judgment creditor had no right to proceed against the property of his debtor by attachment, but must collect his judgment by writ of fieri facias.

As to attachment in aid of execution see Executions.

Debtor having visible property subject to execution.— In an action on a judgment, foreign attachment may issue to secure property of the debtor which cannot be taken by execution, though the debtor has visible property on which execution may be levied. In Canada an attachment will be granted under the absconding debtor's act only for sums certain, where such an affidavit could be made as would enable a plaintiff, without a judge's order, to sue out bailable process. Clock v. Alfield, 5 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 504.

However, the remedy is not confined to cases where a debt, in the technical sense, exists; it extends to every demand arising ex contractu where any fixed standard for determining the amount is supplied by the contract itself or the law acting upon it.[62]

When an accounting is necessary to determine the amount, attachment will not lie. Ackroyd v. Ackroyd, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 93; Hawes v. Clement, 64 Wis. 152, 25 N. W. 21.

Will not lie for a penalty.— When a sum named in a contract is in the nature of a penalty rather than liquidated damages, no attachment will lie in an action therefor. Hough v. Kugler, 36 Md. 186; State v. Beall, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 347; Cheddick v. Marsh, 21 N. J. L. 463.

What demands too uncertain.— In the following cases the amounts claimed were not deemed sufficiently certain to authorize attachments: A claim arising out of the alleged breach of a covenant in certain articles of agreement for the exchange of property, which contained numerous and complicated terms and conditions, embracing many things to be performed by the parties thereto. Hough v. Kugler, 36 Md. 186. Attachment will not lie on demands ex delicto unless it very clearly appears from the language of the statute that the legislature intended to extend the remedy to such cases.[63] When it can be seen from the wording of the statute that it intends to require the relationship of debtor and creditor to exist between the parties, no attachment will lie on demands sounding in tort.[64] If an attachment be issued in such an action without statutory authority, a judgment against the attached property is void and may be collaterally attacked.[65]

Proc. §§ 537, 538, not allowing a writ of attachment where the gravamen is a tort, it will not lie in an action to recover from defendants money which plaintiffs intrusted to their clerk and defendants won from him in gambling. Babcock v. Briggs, 52 Cal. 502.

Iowa — Where defendant refuses to pay or secure debt.— Iowa Code, § 1848, as amended in 1853, providing that an attachment may issue in an action on plaintiff's sworn petition that defendant has property "which he refuses to give either in payment or security of said debt," authorizes attachment, on the ground stated, only in actions founded on contract, and not in tort. Raver v. Webster, 3 Iowa 502, 66 Am. Dec. 96.

2. Where Expressly Authorized by Statute. Under the statutes in many of the states the remedy is now extended to claims sounding in tort.[66] By some statutes it is expressly authorized on certain specified demands arising ex delicto, such as the wrongful conversion of personal property,[67] or injuries to personal

W. 203] (where it was held that the persistent use of the words "debt" and "creditor" in the statute showed that the remedy was not intended to apply to torts).

Under statutes founded on the custom of London, an attachment will lie only on contracts, express or implied, for payment of money, to enforce which debt or indebitatus assumpsit can be maintained. Mills v. Findlay, 14 Ga. 230. See also Hazard v. Jordan, 12 Ala. 180.

Action founded on "any indebtedness."— In Fellows v. Brown, 38 Miss. 541, it was held that a statute confining the remedy by attachment to "actions or demands, founded on any indebtedness, or for the recovery of damages for the breach of any contract, express or implied, and the actions founded on any penal statute," had no application to actions of tort.

Action "for the recovery of money."— Under a former statute in New York authorizing attachment in actions "for the recovery of money," it was held in some cases that the remedy lay on demands arising ex delicto (Ward v. Begg, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 139; Floyd v. Blake, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 349, 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 542; Hernstien v. Matthewson, 5 How. Pr. (N. Meaning of "right of action."— Under a statute authorizing attachment where the person having "the right of action" should make a certain complaint on oath, it was held that the words "right of action" embraced demands ex delicto. Lum v. Steamboat Buckeye, 24 Miss. 564.

Connecticut — Trover.— Remedy by attachment lies in aid of an action of trover. Lewis v. Morse, 20 Conn. 211.

Georgia — Seduction of plaintiff's daughter. — Under Ga. Code, § 4524, authorizing attachments in all cases of "money demands," whether arising ex contractu or ex delicto, a claim for damages for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter is such a "money demand" as entitles plaintiff to sue out an attachment. Graves v. Strozier, 37 Ga. 32.

Oklahoma — Cause arising wholly within territory.— Plaintiff in a civil action for damages arising from tort, where the cause of action arose wholly within the limits of the territory, is entitled to an attachment when defendant is a non-resident of the territory. Kidd v. Seifert, (Okla. 1901) 65 Pac. 931.

What is a wrongful conversion of personal property.— A statute allowing attachment in an action for wrongful conversion of personal property applies to a wrongful detention of personal property (Barry v. Fisher, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 369, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 521); a conversion of money (Arming v. Monteverde, 8 N. Y. St. 812); a conversion by a foreign corporation of its own stock (Condouris v. Imperial Turkish, etc., Co., 3 Misc. (N. Y.) 66, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 695, 51 N. Y. St. 772).

Effect of resort to wrong remedy.— Where, after an executor's accounts had been settled and the balance in his hands ascertained, and property in consequence of negligence, fraud, or other wrongful act;[68] and where this is the case the remedy will not be extended by construction beyond the clear intention of the statute.[69] Under a statute allowing the remedy where defendant's liability[70] was criminally incurred, attachment will lie in an action to recover unliquidated damages for assault and battery,[71] or to recover money lost at gambling,[72] or to recover on a demand arising out of a rape on plaintiff's daughter.[73]

D. Immatured Demands — 1. In Absence of Statutory Provision — a. In General. As a general rule no attachment will lie, in the absence of express statutory authority, to secure a demand which is not due and payable.[74] he had failed to pay over such balance, an action was brought against him for "conversion of personal property," it was held that an attachment was properly granted, being given by statute in such action, and that the fact that plaintiff may have resorted to the wrong remedy did not affect his right to the writ. The court said: "The jurisdiction to grant an attachment does not, we think, involve a preliminary determination by the officer to whom the application for the writ is made, whether in law the case presented by the complaint will entitle the plaintiff to the relief he asks. It is sufficient to authorize him to grant the writ that it appears that the action is brought for one of the causes where attachment may issue, and the other facts are shown which authorize the process to be issued." Van Camp v. Searle, 147 N. Y. 150, 161, 41 N. E. 427, 70 N. Y. St. 878.

68. What is an injury to personal property. — Under a statute authorizing the remedy in an action for an injury to personal property in consequence of negligence, fraud, or other wrongful act, an attachment will lie in an action by one who has been induced to advance money on forged business paper (Bogart v. Dart, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 395), or who has been induced to part with personal property by fraud (Campion Card, etc., Co. v. Searing, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 237; Weiller v. Schreiber, 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 175, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 491. But see Wittner v. Von Minden, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 234); or in an action by a gas company for damages caused by the wrongful breaking by defendant of its gas pipes, which extended from its own land and works under the streets throughout a city, by which wrongful breaking gas was caused to escape (Newbern Gas Light Co. v. Lewis Mercer Constr. Co., 113 N. C. 549, 18 S. E. 693).

What not an injury to personal property. — Under such a provision an attachment will not lie in an action for a false warranty or a deceit in the sale of personal property (Webb v. Bowler, 50 N. C. 362); an action by an administrator to recover for the death of his intestate caused by defendant's negligence (James v. Signell, 60 N. Y. App. Div. 75, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 680); an action by a merchant for damages against a broker, who, having been employed to sell a quantity of goods for plaintiff, reported a sale which plaintiff accepted but afterward repudiated on the ground that defendant was himself the purchaser — the goods remaining all the while in the plaintiff's hands and the damages claimed arising from a fall in the market (Roome v. Jennings, 61 N. Y. Super. Ct. 361, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 825, 46 N. Y. St. 894).

69. South Carolina — Action for slander. — In Addison v. Sujette, (S. C. 1897) 27 S. E. 631, it was held that S. C. Code Civ. Proc. § 248, allowing attachments to issue "in any action for the recovery of money or . . . property, whether real or personal, and for damages for the wrongful conversion and detention of personal property, or an action for the recovery of damages for injury done to either person or property," etc., did not authorize an attachment in a suit for slander.

70. Ohio — "Obligation" equivalent to "liability." — In the Ohio statute allowing attachment where defendant has "fraudulently or criminally contracted the debt, or incurred the obligation" sued on, the word "obligation" is equivalent to "liability." Sturdevant v. Tuttle, 22 Ohio St. 111.

Ct. 202]; Coaks v. White, 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 271, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 295, 39 Leg. Int. b. Where Plaintiff Rescinds Contract. Where a party to a contract not yet matured is guilty of fraud or other conduct entitling the other party to rescind,[75] a cause of action arises in favor of the latter which is immediately enforceable; and if such cause of action, left to plaintiff after rescission, be of a nature to warrant the issue of an attachment,[76] he may resort to that remedy notwithstanding the immaturity of the rescinded contract.[77]

2. Where Expressly Authorized by Statute — a. In General. Provision is quite commonly made by statute for the issue of attachments in certain cases where the demand sued on is not yet due.[78] The statutes usually limit the Void as against creditors.— An attachment issued, without statutory authority, upon a debt not due, is void as against creditors whose rights are injuriously affected by it. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378, 79 Am. Dec. 184.

75. Fraud must be of nature to warrant rescission.— In Meyers v. Rauch, 4 Pa. Dist. 333, it was held that attachment would not lie for a debt not due unless the fraud in contracting the debt was such that the creditor could rescind the contract.

As to rescission of contracts, generally, see Contracts.

76. Demand not authorizing attachment.— Where plaintiff sold on credit, taking notes in extension of the time of payment, it was held that he could not rescind the contract and sue for the contract price, but that his only remedy after such rescission was replevin for the goods or trover for their value, in neither of which actions could attachment be maintained under the Pennsylvania statutes. Jones v. Brown, 167 Pa. St. 395, 31 Atl. 647. In Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659, the court said that where plaintiff, by rescinding an immatured contract for fraud, has acquired a cause of action sounding in tort, he could not, by waiving the tort, transform it back into an implied contract, and by such juggling entitle himself to an attachment as upon a matured contractual obligation. See also Lederer v. Rosenthal, 99 Wis. 235, 74 N. W. 971.

Cannot attach on strength of rescinded contract.— Plaintiff cannot rescind the contract and at the same time maintain his attachment on the strength of it. If he elects to sue on the express contract he must wait until its maturity, in the absence of any statute to the contrary. Johnson v. Buckel, 65 Hun (N. Y.) 601, 20 N. Y. Suppl. 566, 48 N. Y. St. 924. See also Jones v. Brown, 167 Pa. St. 395, 31 Atl. 647.

Inconsistent grounds.— In attachment to recover claims not due, on the grounds of fraudulent contraction of the liability by defendant and of fraudulent disposition of his property, both grounds must be proved, the former to entitle defendant to sue before maturity, and the latter to entitle him to attachment. Hence, if the alleged fraudulent representations are statements of defendant that he owed nothing, and his property was unencumbered, and the alleged fraudulent disposition is a subsequent mortgaging of his property to secure his indebtedness, then plaintiff is not entitled to attachment; since, if the representations were false, and defendant was in fact indebted, then the mortgages to cover such indebtedness were not fraudulent. Constitutionality of statute.—A statute authorizing the commencement of an action by attachment before the maturity of the debt is not in conflict with a constitutional provision that the legislature shall pass no bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts. Mosher v. Bay Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 503, 66 N. W. 384.

Alabama — Equitable attachment — Ala. Code (1886), §§ 3489, 2929, authorize the issue of an equitable attachment for a demand not due. Ware v. Seasongood, 92 Ala. 152, 9 So. 138.

79. Strict construction of statute.— The rule requiring attachment proceedings to be confined strictly within the limits of the statute by which they are authorized is especially applicable to a case where the debt is not yet due. Lederer v. Rosenthal, 99 Wis. 235, 74 N. W. 971.

Contingent liabilities.— A statute allowing attachment for a demand not due does not apply where defendant's liability is contingent only. Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, 22 Fla. 391; Ellis v. Harrison, 104 Mo. 270, 16 S. W. 198.

As to contingent demands, generally, see infra, VI, E.

Alabama — Only in actions for "collection of a debt."— Under Ala. Civ. Code (1896), § 524, attachment will issue before maturity of the obligation only where the action is one to enforce the "collection of a debt;" and consequently the remedy is not available against one who has agreed to deliver cotton at a future date, such demand not being a "debt." Moore v. Dickerson, 44 Ala. 485.

Michigan—Showing reasons for immediate issue.— Under 3 How. Anno. Stat. Mich. § 8016*a*, in order to obtain an attachment on a debt not due, it must be shown to the satisfaction of the judge that reasons exist for the immediate issue of the writ, in addition to the reasons required in cases of debts past due. Nebraska — Order need not appear in writ. — Under the Nebraska statutes, where a writ of attachment is issued on a demand not due, the order allowing such issue need not appear on the face of the writ. Armstrong v. Lynch, 29 Nebr. 87, 45 N. W. 274.

South Carolina — No presumption that clerk was satisfied.— Under the South Carolina act of 1883, attachment is allowed for a debt not due only where it is shown by affidavit to the satisfaction of the judge, clerk, or justice who issues the writ, that a ground for attachment for an immatured demand exists; and under this statute no presumption arises that a clerk was satisfied of the facts authorizing an attachment in such case, where it was not shown to him by the affidavit or the complaint in the action that the debt was not yet due. Iowa — Defendant about to dispose of his property.— Under a statute authorizing attachment before maturity of the debt where defendant is about to dispose of his property to defraud his creditors, or is about to remove ceedings can go no further before maturity than to create a lien, and no final judgment can be rendered until after the maturity of the demand.[81]

b. Joinder of Demands Due and Demands Not Due. Under some statutes a debt not due may be joined with one that is due and an attachment be issued for the aggregate amount, where grounds of attachment applicable to both debts are stated in the affidavit.[82]

E. Contingent Demands. No attachment can be sued out where the indebtedness of defendant to plaintiff depends upon a contingency which may never happen,[83] and the improper issue of an attachment on such a demand is not from the state and refuses to provide for the payment of the debt on its maturity, it was held that the clause regarding the refusal to secure the debt applied only where the ground for the attachment was the intended removal from the state, and not where the ground was the intention to dispose of his property. Danforth v. Carter, 1 Iowa 546; Pitkins v. Boyd, 4 Greene (Iowa) 255.

Louisiana — Construction of statutes.—The Louisiana act of 1826, § 7, allowing an attachment on a debt not due, when the creditor swears to the existence of the debt, and one of the grounds specified in the act, "and, moreover, swears" that the debtor is about to remove his property out of the state before the debt becomes due, was amended by La. Code Prac. art. 244, by substituting "or swears" for "and moreover swears." It was held, that article 244 could not be construed as typographically incorrect, but must be read "or swears;" hence a creditor seeking an attachment for a debt not due need only swear to one of the other grounds, without also swearing that defendant is about to remove his property out of the state. Merchants', etc., Bank v. McKellar, 44 La. Ann. 940, 11 So. 592.

South Dakota — Intent to remove property from state.— It is only when an action is brought on a claim not due that plaintiff is entitled to an attachment on the ground that his debtor is about to remove his property, with the intent to hinder and delay him in the collection of his debt, under S. Tennessee — When ground other than non-residence.— Under Tenn. Code, § 3456, providing that an attachment may be sued out on a debt not due, except when defendant resides out of the state, an attachment may issue as well against a non-resident as against a resident where the debt is not due, if such non-residence is not the only ground laid for such attachment. In New Mexico an attachment on debts not yet due is separate fro- any action at law to recover judgment thereon, and can go no further than to create an attachment lien in advance of the commencement of such action. Staab v. Hersch, 3 N. M. 153, 3 Pac. 248.

Effect of refusal to grant attachment.— The issue of a writ of attachment upon a debt not due because of the fraudulent intent of the debtor is, under the Nebraska statutes, discretionary with the court or judge; and if the order is refused, the action must be dismissed, as it cannot be maintained on a debt not due unless accompanied by the attachment. Cox v. Peoria Mfg. Co., 42 Nebr. 660, 60 N. W. 933.

Where attachment invalid, action abates. — Since the power to attach furnishes the only authority to sue on a demand not due, it follows that where the attachment is invalid the action necessarily abates. Practice in federal court.—Although the decisions and statutes of Kansas require that where an action is brought for demands due in part, and not due in part, separate petitions must be filed, these provisions are not binding upon the federal courts sitting within the state. The petition in an attachment suit was therefore sustained, although claims already due were joined with claims not yet matured. O'Connell v. Reed, 56 Fed. 531, 12 U. S. App. 369, 5 C. C. F. Demands Otherwise Secured. In the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary, the fact that a demand is otherwise secured will not prevent the issue of an attachment upon it;[86] though where a creditor expressly agrees, upon Liability of acceptor to drawer.— The drawer of a bill of exchange cannot support an attachment against the acceptor before the bill has matured, and the drawer's liability thereon has become fixed by its dishonor. Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483, 11 L. ed. 690.

Liability of maker to indorser.— Before a promissory note is due, an indorser thereof cannot attach property of the maker on the ground that the latter is about to remove from the state, and the indorser will have to pay the note. Taylor v. Drane, 13 La. 62. But see Williamson v. Bowie, 6 Munf. (Va.) 176.

Liability of maker to sureties.— The sureties on a promissory note cannot sue the maker by attachment until they have been obliged to pay the note or become primarily liable for the amount. Hearne v. Keith, 63 Mo. 84. But see Moore v. Holt, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 284.

Liability of drawer to holder.—An attachment cannot be maintained against the property of the drawer of a bill of exchange before maturity, although the acceptor has been attached and has become insolvent before the attachment, for until maturity the drawer is not the unconditional debtor of the holder. Natchez First Nat. Bank v. Moss, 41 La. Ann. 227, 6 So. 25; Denegre v. Milne, 10 La. Ann. 324.

Liability of drawer to accommodation acceptor.—An accommodation acceptor has no right of action against the drawer until the maturity of the bill and payment by the acceptor, and therefore cannot maintain attachment before such payment. Todd v. Shouse, 14 La. Ann. 426; Shannon v. Langhorn, 9 La. Ann. 526; Read v. Ware, 2 La. Ann. 498; Henderson v. Thornton, 37 Miss. 448, 75 Am. Liability of sureties.— Suit by attachment against the sureties before the time fixed by their contract for payment cannot be maintained on the theory that the insolvency of the principal debtor matures the debt and authorizes suits and attachments against the sureties. When the code for specific purposes matures the debt of the insolvent debtor, the insolvency contemplated by the code is a cession of property by the debtor. State Nat. Bank v. New Orleans Brewing Assoc., 49 La. Ann. 934, 22 So. 48.

Liability of indorser.—The indorser of a note becomes the debtor of the holder only after compliance with the conditions of presentment at maturity, failure of maker to pay, and due notice given, and until then the demand will not support an attachment against him. Liability of obligors to assignor of note.— Since the assignor of a note is not liable thereon till the assignee has exercised due diligence in prosecuting the obligors, the assignor, before the note matures, is not entitled to an attachment against them under Ky. sufficient consideration, to take no step to collect his debt within a given time, he cannot maintain an attachment thereon within the time specified.[87] In some jurisdictions it is provided by statute that attachment shall not lie where the demand is secured by mortgage, lien, or pledge. Where this is the case the security given must be of the kind contemplated by the statute,[88] and of a fixed, determinate character capable of being enforced with certainty.[89] Where the statute authorizes attachment in case the security has become valueless, without any act of plaintiff or the person to whom such security was given,[90] such provision is not applicable to a case where the security was originally worthless,[91] or has become so through plaintiff's fault.[92]

Shares of stock as collateral security.— Where a creditor has received shares of stock as collateral security for his demand, it must be deemed secured by a lien under the California statute. Beaudry v. Vache, 45 Cal. 3.

Vendor's lien.—Where a vendor of land reserves title in himself until payment of the purchase-price, a lien exists in his favor which will prevent him from suing out an attachment (Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89, 24 Pac. 608, 26 Pac. 789, 13 L. R. A. 187; Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55; Willman v. Freidman, (Ida. 1893) 35 Pac. 37); but where land is conveyed by absolute deed, the vendor has no lien thereon within the contemplation of the statute (Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199); and where the title has not passed no lien exists under an executor's contract for the sale of personalty, so as to preclude an attachment (Eads v. Kessler, 121 Cal. 244, 53 Pac. 656).

What not sufficient security.— Plaintiff's affidavit for attachment alleged that defendant was indebted to him on a certain promissory note made to the order of K, and indorsed by defendant. Defendant's motion to dissolve the attachment alleged that the debt was K's, and that he had died leaving a will by which he made his wife executrix and conferred on her full authority, without any order of court, to pay his just debts, for which purpose he bequeathed her a large estate. It was held that this did not give plaintiff a lien securing his debt, within the meaning of the California attachment law. State Bank v. Boyd, 86 Cal. 386, 25 Pac. 20.

A bond with sureties executed by the debtor is not a "mortgage or lien upon real or personal property or any pledge of personal property" under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 538. Slosson v. Glosser, (Cal. 1896) 46 Pac. 276.

Unaccepted bill of sale.—A creditor making a loan to defendant was informed by his attorney that a bill of sale, which had been drawn up, would afford him no protection, unless he took possession of the goods. The bill of sale was left with the attorney, and plaintiff never went into possession, but authorized the debtor to sell the goods and to make payment on the loan as he could spare the money. Thereafter plaintiff, in a suit on the note, issued an attachment on the goods alleging in his affidavit that the payment of the debt had not been secured by any mortgage, lien, or pledge of property by defendant. It was held, on motion to dissolve attachment, that the evidence showed no acceptance of the bill of sale, so as to render the affidavit false. Rodley v. Lyons, 129 Cal. 681, 62 Pac. 313.

89. Porter v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 199; Watson v. Loewenberg, 34 Oreg. 323, 56 Pac. 289, the latter case holding that the security was not sufficient if its validity was denied by defendant and it could be enforced, if at all, only at the end of a lawsuit.

90. Sale of collateral security.— Collateral security which has been sold in accordance with the conditions of the pledge, and the proceeds applied on the debt, has become valueless, as security, by act or authority of defendant, and the holder of the debt is not debarred from an attachment in an action for the amount remaining due. Williams v. Hahn, 113 Cal. 475, 45 Pac. 815.

Surrender of security.— Under the Idaho and Montana statutes it is held that, after the creditor has surrendered the security given, he may bring attachment for the debt. Wooddy v. Jamieson, (Ida. 1895) 40 Pac. 61; Parberry v. Woodson Sheep Co., 18 Mont. 317, 45 Pac. 278.

It has no reference to a case where there has been no change in valne."

92. Allowing statute of limitations to run. — One cannot have an attachment in a suit on a note on the ground that a mortgage given to secure its payment has become valueless from lapse of time. If defendant does

G. Statutory Liabilities. Where defendant's liability to plaintiff arises purely from statute it is not ordinarily regarded as a demand on which an attachment will lie under a statute authorizing the remedy only on causes arising out of contract, express or implied;[93] but where the demand is regarded as arising on contract as well as by virtue of the statute, attachment will lie.[94] Under a statute authorizing attachment for "any money demand" the remedy will lie on a statutory penalty where the amount is fixed or can be certainly ascertained.[95]

VII. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE.

A. In General. The jurisdiction of attachment proceedings being a special one, it cannot be legitimately exercised unless the attaching creditor pursues substantially the essential requirements of the statute,[96] and the court can act only

The statutory liability of a stockholder for the debts of an insolvent corporation is one that arises out of a contract, or upon contract, as well as by the statute, and an attachment may issue on such demand under a statute limiting the remedy to contractual demands. Action by borough for expense of laying sidewalk.—Under N. J. Pamph. Laws (1891), p. 389, § 2, giving to boroughs a right of action on contract against lot-owners, for the expense of laying sidewalks, such action against a non-resident owner may be properly begun by attachment. The statute is regarded as creating a debt for an ascertained sum of money due from defendant to plaintiff upon the former's implied contract to pay whatever the law ordered him to pay. Order of preparing papers.— No objection can be made to the preparation of all the papers requisite to the writ of attachment before or at the same time the complaint is prepared, so that the undertaking and affidavit be not filed in advance of the complaint, and the writ be not issued before the summons. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203.

Allowance of amount to be attached.— In Iowa the statute provides that, where an attachment issues in an action "founded on contract," the petition must state that something is due, and the amount thus sworn to shall be a guide to the sheriff, but if the action is "not founded on contract," the petition must be presented to some judge, who shall make an allowance thereon of the amount of property that may be attached. These provisions were intended to draw the line between actions ex contractu and ex delicto. Johnson v. Butler, 2 Iowa 535. For cases founded on contract, in which an allowance was not necessary, see Decorah v. Dunston, 34 Iowa 360; McGinn v. Butler, 31 Iowa 160; Swan v. Smith, 26 Iowa 87; Lord v. Gaddis, 6 Iowa 57. Where this writ was is-

B. Jurisdiction and Venue — 1. Jurisdiction in General. The term "jurisdiction," as used in attachment cases, refers both to the power of the court to move in any event by means of this particular process — jurisdiction over the subject-matter[98]— and to the authority to move in the proceeding (conceding the power to adopt the particular form of process), as dependent upon compliance with the formalities prescribed, or the existence of peculiar grounds at the time the remedy is invoked.[99]

2. Strict Control of Statute. Attachment proceedings being in derogation of the common law, jurisdiction thereof is special and limited. Courts, even those of general jurisdiction,[1] cannot proceed by attachment unless the power rests upon express statutory sanction.[2]

3. Necessity of Presence of Property. The court cannot exercise its jurisdiction unless there is something upon which it can operate. There must be personal service upon defendant or property belonging to him must be within the state and a levy made thereupon.[3] The issue of the writ and its levy upon sued in a suit on an unliquidated demand, and the petition was not presented to a court or judge for allowance thereon of the amount in value of property to be attached, it was held that the attachment should be dissolved on motion (Gates v. Reynolds, 13 Iowa 1); but under the statute permitting attachments to be amended at any time when objection is made thereto, if an attachment is issued without such allowance, in a case where the allowance is required, an amendment adding it will be permitted (Magoon v. Gillett, 54 Iowa 54, 6 N. W. 131). The allowance may be made by the judge as well when sitting in term as in vacation (Magoon v. Gillett, 54 Iowa 54, 6 N. W. 131), and his signature need not be certified under the seal of the court (Sherrill v. Fay, 14 Iowa 292).

Fisher v. Curtis, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 660, 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 62. Wisconsin.— Cox v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 82 Wis. 141, 51 N. W. 1130.

Jurisdiction from time of issue of writ.— In New York it was held that in an action against a non-resident the court acquired jurisdiction from the time of the allowance of the warrant of attachment. Treadwell v. Lawlor, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 8; Burkhardt v. Sanford, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 329.

Notice.— As to whether the mere levy is sufficient to confer jurisdiction so that a judgment without further notice would be void, or only voidable, see infra, XVI, A, 1, a.

Attachment by vendee of money paid express company.—Where a vendee in Georgia received goods by express, C. O. D., from New York, paid the charges, then discovered that the goods were not those ordered, immediately tendered the goods back to the express company, and notified the vendor of such action, it was held that attachment would lie in favor of the vendee against the non-resident vendor for the purchase-money paid the express company. Cohen v. Lasky, 102 Ga. 846, 30 S. E. 531.

Corporate stock.— It is held that for the purposes of an attachment, stock in a corporation has its situs where the corporation is located. Winslow v. Fletcher, 53 Conn. 390, 4 Atl. 250, 55 Am. Rep. 122; Reid Ice Cream Co. v. Stephens, 62 Ill. App. 334; New Jersey Sheep, etc., Co. v. Traders Deposit Bank, 104 Ky. 90, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 565, 46 S. W. 677; Pinney v. Nevills, 86 Fed. 97. And stock of a non-resident in a corporation organized under the laws of one state cannot be attached in another state if the stock is not actually or constructively in the latter state, though the business of the corporation is being conducted there. Ireland v. Globe Milling, etc., Co., 19 R. I. 180, 32 Atl. 921, 61 Am. St. Rep. 756, 29 L. R. A. 429. See also Moore v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 375. But stock of a domestic corporation owned by a non-resident may be attached. Gordon v. Baltimore, 5 Gill (Md.) 231.

In Missouri it was held that there was nothing in the statute in that state which limited the right of attachment to shares of domestic corporations; that shares of a foreign corporation which had its principal place of business in that state, kept its stock-books and exercised all its corporate franchises and functions there, were subject to attachment. Smith v. Pilot Min. Co., 47 Mo. App. 409 [distinguishing Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592, infra].

In New York it is held that the statute under which shares of corporate stock owned by a non-resident might be levied on applied only to shares of stock in a domestic corporation (Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592. But see National F. Ins. Co. v. Chambers, 53 N. J. Eq. 468, 32 Atl. 663), and to shares of stock in a foreign corporation the certificates of which are within the state (Simpson v. Jersey City Contracting Co., 165 N. Y. 193, 58 N. E. 896).

County warrants.— County warrants, payable to bearer and capable of transfer without indorsement, may be seized as the res in the state where they are found. Thum v. Pingree, 21 Utah 348, 61 Pac. 18.

Evidence of debt in another state.— Where the statute gives the creditor living within the state the right to attach a debt, it does not matter that the evidence of the debt is held in another state. Olcott v. Guerinck, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. 32 [approving Wilson v. Gifford, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. 597]. Conversely, however, where a debtor absconds an attachment of notes and mortgages received by him as security for the purchase-price of land in another state, the notes being made by residents of such other state, is void, as such notes are merely evidences of the debt. Owen v. Miller, 10 Ohio St. 136, 75 Am. Dec. 502.

courts, jurisdiction is thereby conferred by necessary implication on the former to entertain proceedings by attachment when such jurisdiction is possessed by the courts whose powers furnish the measure of those which the act purports to confer.[6]

5. Relation of Auxiliary Attachment to Principal Action. The special proceeding by attachment must be in the same court as that in which the action is pending and to which the attachment is auxiliary.[7]

6. Jurisdiction of Subject-Matter of Action — a. In General. The jurisdiction over attachment proceedings is not entirely apart from and independent of the jurisdiction which the court may otherwise exercise over the subject-matter of the suit. That is to say, if the cause of action itself is beyond the pale of the court's jurisdiction, such court cannot assume to exercise jurisdiction over the cause simply because the party has invoked it through the process of attachment;

App. 275; Brown v. Bissett, 21 N. J. L. 46; Morrel v. Buckley, 20 N. J. L. 667, in which last case, under the first clause of the act constituting the circuit courts, it was provided that those courts "shall be, and are hereby constituted, courts of original jurisdiction and of record; and be vested with, and have, all the power and authority incident to courts of common law." It was said that these words alone would be sufficient to sustain the objection that the act constituting these courts extended to them only the common-law powers and jurisdiction, but that as the act immediately proceeds to amplify the jurisdiction by adding the words that they shall have "power, authority and jurisdiction, in like manner, and to the like extent, as the Courts of Common Pleas, and Supreme Court of this State now have, to institute, hear, try, and determine all actions and causes," these last words were sufficient to confer jurisdiction to proceed by writs of attachment to the extent that the supreme court and common pleas court possess such jurisdiction.

Contra — Limited jurisdiction increased.— Where the limited jurisdiction of a city court did not include the power to issue attachments, an act enlarging the jurisdiction or declaring that such court should have concurrent jurisdiction with the court of general sessions and common pleas, in all cases of misdemeanors, etc., and in "all civil cases, to the amount of $500," was held to add only to the jurisdiction of the city court in the cases particularly mentioned, and as nothing was said about the process of attachment, the act conferred no jurisdiction in that regard. Tolman v. Thompson, 2 McCord (S. C.) 43; Roddy v. Aitken, Dudley (S. C.) 232.

Power of courts of record conferred.—When a particular court is made a court of record with all the powers and duties of such court, the modes prescribed by the general law of the land for the institution of suits in courts of record being either by summons upon a party, or attachment against his property, the particular court is invested with power to proceed by attachment. Lackey v. Seibert, 23 Mo. 85, referring to the jurisdiction of law commissioners of St. Louis county under such a provision.

Action pending on proceedings in error.— Under a code provision that plaintiff in a civil action for the recovery of money may, at or after the commencement of the action, have an attachment upon certain grounds, and that an order shall be made by the clerk of the court "in which the action is brought," etc., it is held that, upon the filing of an affidavit and bond in the district court, that court has jurisdiction to issue the attachment in the action which was originally brought in the justice's court and is pending in the district court on proceedings in error. Strickler v. Hargis, 34 Nebr. 468, 51 N. W. 1039.

Motion to vacate — Waiver of objection.— Where an attachment issued from a court of chancery as process auxiliary to a case pending in a law court, defendant compelled complainant to elect whether he would proceed at law or in equity, and thereupon complainant dismissed the action at law, it was held that defendant could not afterward object to the jurisdiction of the chancery court, although the attachment should have issued from, and been made returnable to, the court in which the original suit was pending. Isaacks v. Edwards, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 464, 46 Am. Dec. 86.

8. Alabama.— Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Harrison, 122 Ala. 149, 25 So. 697, 82 Am. St. Rep. 68, where, under a statute providing that the affidavit must set out the cause of action, that the complaint must be filed by plaintiff, and the cause tried by the court as in suits commenced by summons and complaint, it was held that the power of the court to decide upon the cause of action as presented by the pleadings must determine the jurisdiction.

Arkansas.— Lemay v. Williams, 32 Ark. 166, holding that the statute which provided for the attachment of mortgaged personal property applied only to circuit courts and that justices of the peace had no jurisdiction under it.

and if under particular circumstances plaintiff may sue out an attachment, while in the absence of such circumstances he could not sue, as where the debt is not due, then, if the attachment is wrongly sued out because of the non-existence of the required condition, the writ and the action must fall together.[9]

b. Amount in Controversy. When the jurisdiction of particular causes, as between different courts, depends upon the amount in controversy, the same consideration will control the power to proceed by attachment.[10]

7. On Transfer of Cause After Levy. If the writ is issued by an inferior court having jurisdiction, but by reason of the character of the levy, as where the levy is made upon land, the proceedings must be transferred to a court of higher jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the latter court is considered original.[11]

8. In Equity — a. In General. Attachment statutes generally provide a special legal remedy.[12] Statutes of various states, however, authorize proceedings by attachment in suits in equity, or in suits of an equitable nature, as well as in actions at law, where the grounds of attachment exist,[13] even where the suit is based upon a purely legal demand,[14] but the jurisdiction depends upon the statute.[15] If the demand is purely legal a bill will not lie where the remedy by attachment at law is adequate,[16] and the doctrine that the court of equity should take jurisdiction in analogy to the proceeding at law can be applied only where the demand is equitable or there is some special ground for equitable interference.[17] If, moreover, there is anything in the provisions relating to attachments which limits the remedy to certain civil actions, such limitations must control, and will exclude it from certain equitable suits where the limitation recognizes the former distinction between suits in equity and actions at law.[18]

Constitutionality.— W. Va. Code (1887), c. 106, § 13, which provides that an attachment may be sued out in equity for the recovery of damages for a wrong, is constitutional. McKinsey v. Squires, 32 W. Va. 41, 9 S. E. 55.

Removal or absconding — Inadequacy of legal remedy.— In Kentucky the legislature allowed a party to proceed against an absent debtor in equity and it was held that this was intended to supply the defect of the legal remedy by reason of the fact that no action in the usual course of the common law could be maintained for want of service of process, because, if defendant removes from the state, a return of non est inventus would not authorize an attachment. Moore v. Simpson, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 49. A creditor may have process of attachment from a court of equity against an absent debtor, though the debtor might have been sued at law before leaving the state, if such debtor has been absent while one term of the circuit court elapsed in the county of his residence. Dudley v. Porter, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 403.

Exclusive jurisdiction.— In Tennessee it was held that although debtor and creditor are non-residents of that state, and both residents of the same state, the chancery courts had jurisdiction, expressly conferred by statute, independently of the attachment laws, to aid such creditor to subject his debtor's "real or personal property" situate in the state to the payment of his debt, where the creditor had exhausted his legal remedy in the state of their common residence; that the statute made the jurisdiction exclusive under those conditions and under no other, and was not repealed or affected by the subsequent modification of the attachment laws, forbidding the issue of original attachment where both creditor and debtor are non-residents of the state and residents of the same state, except upon affidavit that the debtor has fraudulently removed his property to the state of Tennessee to evade process of law in the state of their common residence. 15. Allen v. Montgomery, 48 Miss. 101; Sims v. Charleston Bank, 3 W. Va. 415, the latter case holding that, under the West Virginia code of 1860, unless plaintiff's claim was an equitable one, the only remedy in equity was in a suit against a non-resident debtor.

Jurisdiction of chancery against its own debtors.— In Rutland v. Cummings, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 279, it was held that the chancery court had primary jurisdiction, on general grounds, without any aid by statute, upon a petition under oath by the clerk and master in the case to which the fund belonged, to issue an attachment against a person who was about to remove his property from the state, or otherwise conceal and dispose of it, when indebted by note to the clerk and master for the benefit of a suitor, although suit had been brought upon the note at law and was then pending.

Jurisdiction in rem.— Where the demand is purely legal and the ground of the attachment is the intention of the debtor to remove his property out of the commonwealth, that ground alone gives jurisdiction to a court of equity, and the jurisdiction which it acquires is prescribed by the statute and limited in its operation to the property of the debtor. But where the claim is of an equitable nature the remedy by attachment for the recovery of a legal demand is administered in equity by analogy. Kirkman v. Vanlier, 7 Ala. 217.

Equitable nature of claim not sufficient.— On the other hand, it is held that there must be something more than the mere equitable nature of the demand, where the grounds of the equitable jurisdiction to issue an attachment are prescribed. Graham v. Merrill, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 622.

b. Retention of Jurisdiction For Complete Relief. If the court obtains jurisdiction for the purpose of issuing the attachment it will retain jurisdiction for all purposes.[19]

9. Federal Courts. Federal courts have jurisdiction to issue attachments according to the form and manner of procedure of the state where the court sits, where defendant can be served with process;[20] but where defendant is not a resident of the district, a federal court cannot acquire jurisdiction to entertain an original suit against him by attachment of his property within the district. Jurisdiction of the person by service of process or appearance is necessary,[21] and attachment of property under the statutes of that state was held to be confined to actions at law to recover money due upon contract); Sbiel v. Patrick, 59 Fed. 992, 20 U. S. App. 407, 8 C. C. Where personal money judgment cannot be rendered attachment will not lie under such a statute. Hoover v. Gibson, 24 Ohio St. 389. A surety on commercial paper not yet due, who sues his principal for indemnity on his own behalf, and not on behalf of the payee to enforce payment, will be deemed to be suing for specific relief, and not upon a "debt or demand arising on contract;" hence he cannot issue attachment against defendant on the ground of non-residence. Brannin v. Smith, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 436.

Action to set aside assignment and to enforce plaintiff's debt against his debtor is held to be an action for the "recovery of money," within the code provision authorizing attachment in such actions. National Exch. Bank v. Stelling, 31 S. C. 360, 9 S. E. 1028.

Foreclosure.— Under Kan. Civ. Code, § 190, allowing an attachment in every "civil action for the recovery of money," an order of attachment may properly issue in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien for the amount of money claimed on an account. Gillespie v. Lovell, 7 Kan. 419, which case was followed in Martin v. Holland, 87 Ind. 105, and the principle applied in an action to foreclose a mortgage where plaintiff was entitled to a personal judgme t. See also Reynolds v. Wright, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 1017, 38 S. W. 861, 39 S. W. 424. But in New York it was held that an action to foreclose a mortgage is not an action for the recovery of money only. Van Wyck v. Bauer, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 142; Wallace v. Hitchcock, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 291 note.

Specific relief and recovery of money.— Though the action is for specific relief, if it is also for the recovery of money, an attachment will lie. Goble v. Howard, 12 Ohio St. 165 (holding that one partner in an action, after the dissolution of the firm, against his copartner, to recover a general balance claimed upon an unsettled partnership account between them, may have an order of attachment, as in other cases of civil actions, for the recovery of money); Hendrickson v. Brown, (Okla. 1901) 65 Pac. 935; Bingham v. Keylor, 19 Wash. 555, 53 Pac. 729.

District of Columbia.— In Hard v. Stone, 5 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 503, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,046, it was held that the circuit court of the District of Columbia had jurisdiction of an attachment issued by its clerk on a warrant from a justice of the peace, under Md. Acts (1795), c. 56; that the statute made such warrant and the evidence on which it was granted the basis for an attachment to be issued by the clerk of the general or county court; and that the act of congress of Feb. 27, 1801, continued the Maryland laws in force in the District of Columbia, and gave the circuit court jurisdiction of all cases arising under the adopted laws. The circuit court of the United States has jurisdiction and authority to award an attachment under Md. Acts (1715), c. 40, on the return of two non est to writs of capias ad respondendum sued out, in the name of the United States, against the property of a defendant, whether he be in fact a resident of the state or not. this rule is not changed by the provision of the United States revised statutes which authorizes the practice and modes of procedure and remedies by attachment in the federal courts which are provided for by state laws.[22] If, however, a state court has acquired jurisdiction of the case to the extent of being entitled to enforce its judgment against the property attached, the federal court will not, where the non-resident has voluntarily removed the cause, allow him to dismiss it as to that property, on the sole ground that the latter court could not have acquired original jurisdiction of such property by the issue of an attachment.[23]

Right to transfer.— In Martin v. Thompson, 3 McCord (S. C.) 167, it was held that where a non-resident of the state is proceeded against by attachment of his property, he may procure a transfer of the proceedings to the federal court of the district where the attachment issued, and the lien of the attachment will be maintained to answer the final judgment. So, also, it is held that, although judgment in an action commenced by a foreign attachment in the state court against a non-resident can bind the property only and not the person of defendant, defendant is nevertheless a party in the sense that the action may be removed to the federal circuit court on the ground of diverse citizenship, and the objection to the removal on the ground that the action is in rem is not tenable because, while the judgment can bind only the property, it is nevertheless in form against the person. Construction of clause saving common-law remedy.—The act of congress which conferred on the district courts of the United States exclusive cognizance of all civil causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, but saving to suitors in all cases their common-law remedies, does not preclude a suitor from proceeding by attachment in the state court, although the remedy by attachment is purely statutory. The intention of the act was to confer exclusive admiralty and maritime jurisdiction upon the district courts, at the same time leaving the suitor his option of seeking redress at common law. A bill in chancery to attach the lands of a non-resident must be filed in the county where the land is situated. Change of boundary after levy on land.— When a court has obtained jurisdiction by an attachment of real estate within the county, a change of county lines putting the attached property outside the county does not defeat the jurisdiction of the court. Tyrell v. Roun-debtor is a non-resident of the state the action may be brought in any county where his property may be found.[26]

b. Residence or Place of Performance. Where there is personal service or defendant is not a non-resident, the statutes fixing the venue of actions in the county of defendant's residence or where he may be found, or at the place where the contract is to be performed, are held to control, notwithstanding property subject to seizure may be situated elsewhere,[27] and the fact that property is attached in another county will not give the courts of the latter county jurisdiction, when defendant is served with process.[28] Under other statutes the presence of property in a county furnishes sufficient reason for suing there without regard to the residence of defendant. If grounds for the attachment exist, the seizure of the property gives jurisdiction.[29]

Joint defendants.—An attachment suit against joint defendants must be brought in a county where one of them resides. c. Writ Issued to Another County. A writ cannot be sued out to attach property in a foreign county unless there is an attachment of property within the county where the suit is brought, or personal service on defendant within the county to give the court jurisdiction,[30] or unless where defendant, at the time suit is begun, is removing his property from the county and the officer may pursue it.[31] But if there is property of the non-resident defendant in the county where the action is brought, another writ may at the same time issue to the sheriff of another county where other property may be.[32]

d. Change of Venue. By consent of the parties an attachment suit may be transferred from one county to another;[33] but if the proceedings are brought in the wrong county and the court has no jurisdiction, a change of venue to another county will confer no jurisdiction upon the court there.[34]

12. Objections — a. In General. Where, through some fatal defect or omission in the proceedings, the court has not acquired jurisdiction, the objection may be raised at any stage of the cause,[35] or even collaterally.[36] The jurisdiction is

Transfer of action before attachment.— In Iowa the statute was such that if property was attached in a county other than that of defendant's residence the court had no jurisdiction if defendant appeared and demanded a change of venue. Langworthy v. Root, 10 Iowa 260. If the attachment issues before the action is transferred to the proper county at the instance of defendant, under the statute, it is void. Wasson v. Millsap, 70 Iowa 348, 30 N. W. 612. Judgment of court of sister state.—In Balk v. Harris, 122 N. C. 64, 30 S. E. 318, 45 L. R. A. 257, 260, it was held that where a court of another state, in attachment proceedings against the property of a resident of North Carolina, acquired no jurisdiction by reason of the failure of the affidavit upon which the warrant was issued to state that defendant had property in that state, the judgment of such court could be collaterally attacked in the courts of North Carolina.

placed upon the same footing with that of courts of limited and special jurisdiction, and no presumption is indulged in its favor.[37] On the other hand, where the defects are considered mere irregularities, and the parties are before the court, they must raise the objection at the proper time and in appropriate form,[38] and the lien of the attachment cannot be displaced by showing such irregularities in the process as would have entitled defendant in the writ to abate it on plea.[39]

b. Irregularities in Progress of Action. After compliance with the preliminary steps which lead to the acquirement of jurisdiction by the actual seizure of the property, irregularities in the further progress of the cause will not render the judgment void.[40]

c. Appearance. Although, as already pointed out, consent cannot give jurisdiction over attachment as to the subject-matter,[41] yet, if the court is by law invested with jurisdiction, appearance and pleading to the merits covers all defects in the process and irregularities in the proceedings. It confers jurisdiction over the person and perfects the right to try and determine the controversy.[42]

On the other hand it has been held that, while all the requisites of the law are conditions precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction, yet, when the provisions of the law do not prescribe what shall be deemed evidence that such acts have been done, or direct that their performance shall appear on the record, where the record fails to show compliance with the prerequisites, as the court issuing the attachment had authority under the statute, was a court of general civil jurisdiction, and had ordered sale of the property and confirmed it, this was a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction and could not be collaterally attacked. Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 449, 9 L. ed. 490. See also Hall v. Hall, 12 W. Appearance and pleading to the merits will also operate as a waiver of objection to the venue.[43]

C. Authority to Issue Writ — 1. Dependent Upon Statute. The authority to issue an attachment, like the jurisdiction of the court over such proceedings, must be found in the statute. Unless there is authority in the statute, there is no power to issue the writ, and such authority as the statute confers must be strictly pursued.[44]

2. Delegation of Ministerial Duty. Under some statutes which contain particular requirements as to what shall be stated in the affidavit for attachment, so that the grounds of attachment may be alleged in the language of the statute, the authority to grant the writ is ministerial in its nature and may be delegated to another, as to the clerk,[45] and it may be delegated to the judge of another court or other officer to be returned into the court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter.[46]

Commission.— In Chittenden v. Darden, 2 Woods (U. S.) 437, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,688, it was held that the commissioners of the federal courts could exercise only such powers as were expressly conferred, and as the power to issue process for the circuit court was not expressly included in the powers conferred, they had no power to issue attachment for said courts. In New York a judge or a commissioner had authority to issue a warrant in vacation only, and therefore during the sitting of the supreme court an attachment against a foreign corporation could be obtained only by a motion in open court. Ct. 346, 43 L. ed. 623 [reversing 5 Okla. 396, 49 Pac. 48], holding further that an act of congress empowering the supreme court of a territory or its chief justice to designate any judge to "try" a particular case in any district, where the regular judge is for any reason unable to hold court, does not constitute a prohibition against the conferring by the legislature of authority upon one not a judge of the court in which the main action is pending to perform a ministerial act like that considered;

3. Issue by Clerk — a. In General. Where the court is vested with jurisdiction over attachment proceedings, and the clerk of the court is the person designated by law to issue all process out of the court, it is held that the clerk is sufficiently vested with authority to issue writs of attachment.[47] Sometimes the clerk is expressly authorized,[48] or authorized in specified cases to issue an attachment, in other cases the judge being required to issue the writ.[49]

b. By Deputy. A deputy clerk, acting for his principal, the clerk, may issue the writ ordinarily where the clerk can do so.[50]

4. Issue by One Other Than Before Whom Returnable. Under statutory provisions the power to issue the writ is often conferred upon officers and judges other than those before whom the writ is made returnable,[51] and it does not that a provision of the organic act of Oklahoma conferring on the supreme and district courts "chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction" does not give such courts exclusive jurisdiction to issue attachments so as to render void an act of the legislature authorizing the probate judge to issue attachments.

47. Shillaber v. Waldo, 1 Hawaii 31.

But the mere broadening of the jurisdiction of an inferior court over attachments, to the extent before possessed by a court of superior jurisdiction, will not operate to confer upon the clerk of the former court the organized powers which had before been committed to the clerk of the latter. Power confined to clerk.—In Toby v. Bowen, 3 Ark. 352, it was held that, under the constitution, no writ issuing out of and returnable to a court of record in that state could be issued by any person or officer other than the clerk of such court, that a justice could not issue a writ of attachment returnable to a circuit court, and that a statute authorizing him to do so was void.

Authority restricted to particular county. — Under a statute requiring the clerk "to issue a writ of attachment to be directed to the sheriff of his county," when certain prerequisites were complied with, a counterpart writ running into another county, issued by a clerk, is without authority and can give no jurisdiction of the person or property of the defendant. Smith v. Block, 7 Ark. 358.

49. Atkinson v. James, 96 Ala. 214, 10 So. 846, holding that under Ala. Code, §§ 2929, 2931, providing that any civil action may be commenced by attachment, and authorizing a clerk of the circuit court to issue such attachment for the collection of "any moneyed demand," the amount of which can be certainly ascertained, but that in actions to recover "damages for a breach of contract when the damages are not certain or liquidated," or when "the action sounds in damages merely," only the judge or chancellor can issue the attachment; in an action to recover damages for the removal of cotton on which plaintiff held a landlord's lien for rent and advances, the clerk had authority to issue an attachment.

Same person acting as granting officer.—A writ of attachment is not void because issued by the same person as deputy clerk of the district court who allowed the writ as a court commissioner. The two offices are not incompatible and the one is not subordinate to the other. Kenney v. Goergen, 36 Minn. 190, 31 N. W. 210.

Deputy not under oath.—An attachment issued by a deputy clerk in the performance of the duties of the office under appointment by the clerk is not voidable, nor subject to be abated on plea, because such deputy has never taken the official oath prescribed by law. His official acts, like those of any other de facto officer, have the same force and effect, so far as the public and third persons are concerned, as the acts of an officer de jure. Joseph v. Cawthorn, 74 Ala. 411.

51. Wanet v. Corbet, 13 Ga. 441; Armitage v. Rector, 62 Miss. 600.

One judge vested with power of another.— Where the statute vests the judge of a particular court with all the powers of a circuit court judge, "including the authority to issue writs of injunction, mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and ne exeat," and a judge of the circuit court has authority to issue attachments, returnable to any county in the state, the judge of the first-mentioned court has authority to issue an original attachment, returnable to any county in the state. Bledsoe v. Gary, 95 Ala. 70, 10 So. 502.

Abolition of office which furnished measure of power.— In New York an act of 1827 authorized supreme court commissioners to grant attachments, and a subsequent act of 1830 declared justices of the superior court to be ex officio supreme court commissioners. In May, 1847, a statute was enacted providing that justices of the superior court, whose election was therein provided for, should have the same powers as the justices of that court then had, and in July of the same year the office of the supreme court commissioner was matter that the officer issuing it would not have jurisdiction in his judicial character of the subject-matter of the cause;[52] but the power can be exercised only in the cases expressly provided and under such circumstances as are expressly prescribed.[53]

5. Order For Attachment — a. Necessity. The statute often contemplates or requires an application and an order of allowance by a judge, the latter being of a quasi-judicial character,[54] as where the officer is required to weigh and determine the sufficiency of the proof, and in such cases the clerk of the court cannot in the first instance allow the writ. There must be an order granting it.[55] abolished. It was held that, when the act of May, 1847, was passed, justices of the superior court had power to grant an attachment by reason of their being ex officio commissioners, and that this power was not destroyed by the subsequent act in the same year abolishing the office of supreme court commissioners. 53. Power to issue writ and jurisdiction to hear cause distinguished.— Where a notary public is invested with the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, he has authority to issue an attachment, returnable before himself, for the collection of a demand within a justice's jurisdiction. See supra, VII, B, 4, note 6. But he cannot issue writs of attachment returnable into the circuit court, because such power is a special statutory one conferred upon the justice and is not included under the term "jurisdiction," which means the power to hear and determine causes. Jackson v. Bain, 74 Ala. 328; Nordlinger v. Gordon, 72 Ala. 239; Vann v. Adams, 71 Ala. 475.

Confined to county.— Where a court is confined to the issue of an attachment in the county of its jurisdiction, it has no power to issue an attachment to the sheriff of another county. Neely v. McGrandle, 4 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 327. The general grant of authority to issue the writ is not construed to enlarge the circle of the jurisdiction of the officers upon whom the power is conferred. Caldwell v. Meador, 4 Ala. 755.

Presumption.— Under the code provision in Nebraska for granting an attachment by the judge of the court in which the action is brought, it is held that if the probate judge of the county grants an attachment on a debt not due, and signs the order officially, it will be presumed that he is judge of the county where the order was made and that the judge of the district court was absent from said county. Reed v. Bagley, 24 Nebr. 332, 38 N. W. 827.

54. Webb v. Bailey, 54 N. Y. 164 (holding that the authority of a county judge under the statute to issue an attachment was not restricted to cases in the supreme court to be tried in his county); Farquhar v. Wisconsin Condensed Milk Co., 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 270, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 305 (holding that since N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 769, providing that a motion on notice cannot be made in the first department (New York county) in an action triable elsewhere, does not apply to an ex parte proceeding, an ex parte attachment might properly be obtained in New York county in an action triable in Richmond county).

Warrant of justice.— In Maryland, under the act of 1795, c. 56, a justice of the peace had authority to issue his warrant to the clerk of the county court to issue an attachment but could not issue such warrant to the clerk of the general court. Smith v. Greenleaf, 4 Harr. & M. (Md.) 162. But under Md. Code, art. 9, § 24, on the issue of an attachment, after several returns of non est on successive summons, the order of the judge takes the place of and renders the magistrate's warrant unnecessary. Michigan.— Howell v. Dickerman, 88 Mich. 369, 50 S. W. 308, holding that where the statute requires the order of the judge to be entered on the affidavit, an indorsement on the writ itself, which appeared to have been attached to the affidavit when it was presented to the judge, would not be sufficient.

Tennessee.— Where the statute provides that upon the filing of a bill in particular cases writs of attachment may be granted on complainant's giving bond and security in such sums as the chancellor or judge may order, etc., the clerk has no authority to issue the writ without such order. Dillin v. O'Donnell, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 213; August v. Seeskind, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 166.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 392.

Particular action.—The allowance of a judge is not required in an action for deceit, under an Ohio statute requiring such allow-

Sometimes, however, the judge himself would seem to issue, as well as grant, the writ, in which event he need not spread on his docket the order allowing it.[56] On the other hand, the statute sometimes reposes in the clerk the authority to make an order of attachment, which is said to be a quasi-judicial act on his part,[57] but it has been held under such statutes that the clerk may issue the writ directly, without first granting an order upon himself for its issue.[58]

b. Sufficiency. The order for an attachment should be in writing,[59] but it may, in some states, be informal and in general terms.[60]

6. Nature of Duty to Issue. When the evidence which entitles one to an attachment is presented to the proper officer, he is not concerned with the validity or justice of the cause of action but should issue the writ without reference to such an inquiry.[61] If there are several applications it is the duty of the officer ance when the action is on a claim not due. Perry v. Sharpe, 8 Fed. 15.

New order after amendment.— Where an amended petition is filed to correct an error in defendant's name in the original petition, and there are a new bond and affidavit, but no new order authorizing the writ, the attachment is null. Purdee v. Cocke, 18 La. 482.

Amendment of justice's warrant.—The circuit court has no power to amend a warrant addressed to the clerk of the circuit court directing him to issue a writ of attachment. Halley v. Jackson, 42 Md. 254.

Clerk may issue under order of judge.— If the writ is granted by the judge in a case requiring such allowance, the issue of the writ may be by the clerk under the order as the clerical servant of the judge. Bates v. Shelton, 99 Ga. 164, 25 S. E. 16 [citing Loeb v. Smith, 78 Ga. 504, 3 S. E. 458].

56. Winchell v. McKinzie, 35 Nebr. 813, 53 N. W. 975.

Judicial officer.—A statutory provision authorizing a chancellor to issue a writ of attachment is not in conflict with the statutory requirement that writs shall bear teste and be signed by the respective clerks (Lyle v. Longley, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 286), and, indeed, before this case, it was held, in Morris v. Davis, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 452, that an attachment issued by the clerk of the circuit court in an action of tort upon the fiat of a judge was void, because under the statute attachment in such cases was required to be issued by judges and justices of the peace, and the power had not at that time been conferred upon clerks of the courts.

Bank, etc., Co. v. Batchelder Egg Case Co., 51 Fed. 130, 4 U. S. App. 603, 2 C. C. A. 126 (construing Arkansas statute). But under a statute in Alabama, authorizing the issue of writs of attachment on legal demands in certain cases out of chancery, and providing that chancellors, circuit judges, and registrars of the court in which the bill is filed may make all necessary orders for the issuing of such writs, it was held that, conceding the authority of the registrar to be equal to that of the chancellor or the circuit judge to make such order, yet the making of the order by the registrar or a chancellor or circuit judge was a prerequisite to the issue of the attachment, and that, if it should be issued by the registrar without such order, it would be a nullity. McKenzie v. Bentley, 30 Ala. 139.

59. Loeb v. Smith, 78 Ga. 504, 3 S. E. 458, holding that under Ga. Code, § 3207, if the order is not in writing the affidavit or testimony upon which the attachment is granted is traversable, may be attacked by motion to dismiss or demurrer, and may be collaterally impeached.

60. Howard v. Jenkins, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 176, holding that the order need not contain all the recitals prescribed for a notice by publication.

Designation of amount.—An order for attachment directing it to issue for the amount claimed in the petition is sufficient without specifying such amount. Kleine v. Nie, 88 Ky. 542, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 583, 11 S. W. 590.

Seal, teste, signature.—An order of a clerk granting a writ of attachment need not be under the seal of the court (Seeligson v. Rigmaiden, 37 La. Ann. 722), and so the failure of a judge granting an order to attach thereto the seal of the court does not render the order void (Winchell v. McKinzie, 35 Nebr. 813, 53 N. W. 975). In New York it was held that under the code a formal teste, the signature of the clerk, and the seal are not necessary to a warrant of attachment, which is simply the written order of the judge that the case is one in which an attachment should issue, but that the signature of plaintiff's attorney to the warrant should be required. Genin v. Tompkins, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 265.

Surplusage in warrant.— Words in the address of a warrant for an attachment which are not necessary may be stricken out as surplusage, as where the warrant was addressed "to the clerk of Baltimore county court" and "Mr. Norwood," the clerk of the court of common pleas was directed to issue the writ, there being a court of common pleas but no Baltimore county court. McCoy v. Boyle, 10 Md. 391.

61. Alexander v. Brown, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 395.

The officer has no discretion when the affidavit which the statute prescribes is pre-to issue the writs in the order in which the applications upon proper papers are presented to him.[62] Where the moving papers fairly call for the exercise of judgment on the part of the officer who is to grant the writ, the proceeding will not be void for want of jurisdiction, although the officer err in his judgment upon the weight of the evidence.[63]

7. DISQUALIFICATION OF OFFICER. The clerk usually acts ministerially in the issue of a writ of attachment, and therefore in such a case he may issue that writ in an action on his own behalf;[64] but an officer granting an attachment should not stand in any relation of interest to the party applying,[65] and where the statute prohibits any judicial officer from acting in a cause in which he is pecuniarily interested, or where he has been the counsel for either party, such an officer, who has authority to issue writs of attachment, cannot exercise such authority contrary to the provisions of this statute.[66]

D. Affidavits — 1. NATURE AND OBJECT. The affidavit is a jurisdictional instrument which is the base or foundation of the proceeding,[67] but is no part of the action where the attachment is a mere ancillary remedy.[68] It is not a pleading, to be construed by the rules applicable thereto, nor in some states is the same particularity of statement required.[69] It should, however, be reasonably sented, but he must then issue the writ. Mayhew v. Dudley, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 95.

Sheriff forbidden to fill up process.— In Massachusetts a statute prohibited sheriffs from making or filling up any process and provided that all such acts done by them should be void, and it was held that an attachment and levy on land was defeated as to persons not parties to the action who claimed by an intermediate conveyance by the owner, where the original writ was drawn and issued by the deputy sheriff who served it. Smith v. Saxton, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 483.

65. It is not proper for plaintiff's attorney, acting as supreme court commissioner, to allow the writ to issue. Hurd v. Jarvis, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 475.

Judge related to officer of corporation.— That the judge who granted an attachment was a brother-in-law of the president of plaintiff, a corporation, will not disqualify him nor affect the validity of the attachment. Lansinghurgh Bank v. McKie, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 360.

Dec. 374 (holding that under such a statutory provision an attorney who was a notary public was a judicial officer and had no authority to issue an attachment for his client in a case in which the attorney appeared as such for the client). But the mere fact that a notary public was an employee of a bank in which a member of the firm desiring an attachment was also an employee and stockholder was held not to create such relation between the two as made it improper for the notary to issue the writ. In Colorado the affidavit stands as a pleading, not alone in cases commenced originally by attachment, but where sued out in aid of an attachment, in which case it answers to the complaint in that proceeding; and hence is so far a pleading that it is properly brought up by the record on appeal, without being included in the statement required by the code. specific,[70] as it is intended to be a safeguard against abuse of the right of attachment, and a protection to the debtor against the wrongful employment of that remedy;[71] and it should be so direct and unequivocal that perjury can be assigned for swearing to it falsely.[72]

2. Necessity — a. In General — (i) Rule Stated. In some few instances an affidavit is unnecessary to authorize the grant of an attachment;[73] but if an affidavit, petition, or the like, containing legal evidence of the facts required by statute, is a prerequisite to the issue of an attachment, none can lawfully issue unless such an instrument is presented or filed.[74]

Necessity of separate application.— The affidavit itself is a sufficient application for an order allowing an attachment. Consequently merely filing it is enough. Winchell not necessary that the facts therein stated should be set forth in a separate affidavit.[75]

b. New or Additional Affidavits. In many cases new or additional affidavits are not required,[76] as when writs are issued to different counties,[77] or a second attachment is rendered necessary because of failure to serve the summons within a prescribed time after the first was granted,[78] or after it has been vacated,[79] or upon the revivor of an action by the personal representative of a plaintiff who died before service of the writ.[80] So where several orders of attachment may be issued at the same time, or in succession, a single affidavit will be sufficient,[81] and it in no way affects the validity of the proceedings that a second unnecessary affidavit was presented or filed.[82]

3. Accompanying Pleadings. If it is requisite that plaintiff should file or present a complaint or declaration, or that it should accompany the affidavit, noncompliance with the statutory requirement is fatal.[83] However, in some jurisdictions, an affidavit containing the requisites of both an affidavit and a complaint will dispense with a separate complaint,[84] or the absence of a complaint under such circumstances will be regarded as a mere irregularity curable by amendment;[85] and no declaration or complaint need be presented or filed in the absence of a requirement to that effect.[86]

4. Who May Make — a. In General. Action for use of another.— In an attachment by one party for the use of another the affidavit may be made by the usee. Grand Gulf R., etc., Co. v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 505.

Affidavit as guardian.— An affidavit sworn to by plaintiff as "guardian" will be regarded as the individual oath of the party swearing thereto. Wade v. Roberts, 53 Ga. 26.

An affidavit may be made by two agents: one swearing to the justice of the demand, and the other to the ground for attachment. Lewis v. Stewart, 62 Tex. 352. And there may be more than one affidavit based on different grounds. Miller v. White, 46 W. Va. 67, 33 S. E. 332, 76 Am. St. Rep. 791. But under the Texas statute the facts necessary to authorize the issue of an attachment must appear in one affidavit, and cannot be made piecemeal by the affidavit of different parties to separate facts. Scram v. Duggan, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 1269.

Interest of affiant.— If the common-law rules as to evidence are in full force an interested party may not make the affidavit (Matter of Bliss, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 187); but where persons making affidavits as to the existence of the grounds of attachment do not appear to have any interest in the indebtedness the presumption is that they are disinterested (Van Alstyne v. Erwine, 11 N. Y. 331; Staples v. Fairchild, 3 N. Y. 41).

The affidavit need not state that affiant is a credible person, under a statute permitting the affidavit to be made by any "credible person," as that will be presumed until the contrary appears. Ruhl v. Rogers, 29 W. Va. 779, 2 S. E. 798.

Defendant may demand proof of the agent's authority to make the affidavit. Shewell v. Stone, 12 Mart. (La.) 386.

When authority may be questioned.— The authority of an agent to sign an affidavit to procure an attachment for his principal cannot be collaterally questioned after judgment. Augusta Bank v. Jaudon, 9 La. Ann. 8. See also Rutledge v. Stribling, 26 Ill. App. 353, holding that if the omission of the affidavit to state that affiant is plaintiff's agent is a defect it must be first objected to in the trial court.

The unauthorized insertion by the notary, in the body of the affidavit, of the existence of a ground for attachment will not cure an affidavit defective for the omission to state material facts relative thereto. Hudkins v. Haskins, 22 W. Va. 645.

Want of authority — Ratification.— Where one, as agent of another, makes the affidavit without sufficient authority, the attachment acts,[89] as well as that it is made on behalf of plaintiff,[90] or some reason should be given why the affidavit is not made by plaintiff.[91] It is held, however, in many cases, that, in the absence of any implied necessity that affiant's authority should appear, a statement thereof is unnecessary.[92] One of several plaintiffs is competent to make the affidavit on behalf of all.[93]

b. Plaintiff Disabled or Absent. In some jurisdictions the affidavit may be made by plaintiff's attorney, when, because of the former's disability[94] or absence,[95] must be dissolved, though the agent's acts be subsequently ratified by the principal. Grove v. Harvey, 12 Rob. (La.) 221.

Affidavit by an attorney at law need not state that he is plaintiff's attorney in fact. Austin v. Latham, 19 La. 88.

Affidavit by next friend.— Affidavit alleging that affiant "has commenced an action in said court, as next friend for L, an infant," etc., sufficiently declares an agency, within a statute, requiring an affidavit for attachment to be made by plaintiff, his agent, or attorney. McDowell v. Nims, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 624, 15 Cinc. L. Bul. 359.

Authority appearing from pleading.— Although the affidavit does not show that it was made by any one representing plaintiff yet, if the petition shows that affiant is plaintiff's attorney, the affidavit is sufficient. Bauer Grocery Co. v. Smith, 61 Mo. App. 665, 1 Mo. App. Rep. 439.

Setting out capacity.— Under a requirement that the affidavits shall be made by plaintiff, his agent, or attorney, it need not show by which one of such persons it is made. Sutliff v. Chenango Bank, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 52, 1 West. L. Month. 214.

Attachment void if plaintiff not absent.— An attachment issued upon the affidavit of an attorney when one of the plaintiffs was in the county is void, though the attorney believed that all the plaintiffs were absent from the county and so stated in his affidavit. Harbour-Pitt Shoe Co. v. Dixon, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1169, 60 S. W. 186.

Ratification of unauthorized affidavit.— The Kentucky code contemplates that the affidavit shall be made by an attorney who is such at the time the affidavit is filed; and where suit is begun and the affidavit made by an unauthorized attorney, a subsequent which absence is usually required to be shown by affiant,[96] he cannot make it himself.

c. On Behalf of Copartnership. When the attachment is sought on behalf of a firm, any member thereof may make the required affidavit.[97]

d. On Behalf of Corporation. Affidavits for attachment may be made on behalf of a corporation by its agent, attorney, or any of its duly authorized officers.[98]

5. Who May Take — a. In General. If the statute does not prescribe the officer before whom the affidavit shall be sworn it may be taken before any officer acting within his jurisdiction and invested with the power to administer oaths;[99] but if the statute expressly provides before whom it is to be verified it ratification by plaintiff of all that had been done in the case is insufficient to sustain the writ on a motion to quash. Johnson v. Johnson, 31 Fed. 700.

96. Pool v. Webster, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 278; Westcott v. Sharp, 50 N. J. L. 392, 13 Atl. 243.

Failure to allege plaintiff's absence will render the affidavit irregular, but not void (Westcott v. Sharp, 50 N. J. L. 392, 13 Atl. 243), but if the accompanying petition sufficiently shows the absence, the affidavit will be held sufficient (Clark v. Miller, 88 Ky. 108, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 691, 10 S. W. 277; Farley v. Farior, 6 La. Ann. 725).

Affidavit on behalf of corporation.— In Kentucky when an affidavit is made by an attorney on behalf of a corporation, it must show the attorney's authority and that the officer of the company, who would be required to verify it, was at the time absent, or a nonresident of the county. Affidavit in firm-name.—An affidavit signed in the firm-name is insufficient, for the reason that it cannot be regarded as the oath of the individual members of the firm, or of either of them, and it would be impossible to convict either of them for perjury upon the affidavit alone. Norman v. Horn, 36 Mo. App. 419.

Surplusage.— An affidavit which on its face purports to have been made by one partner is not vitiated by the fact that in affixing his name to it he adds the name of his copartner. Moody v. Alter, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 142.

Who may take affidavits, generally, see 2 Cyc. 9.

Clerk in vacation.— Unless authorized by statute the clerk of the circuit court may not take an affidavit in vacation. Greenvault v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 498.

Clerk of court of another county.—A clerk of a court of a county other than that out of which the writ issues is competent to administer the oath. Wright v. Smith, 66 Ala. 545. Contra, Goldsoll v. Votaw, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 90.

Clerk of a court who is a director and stockholder of the plaintiff corporation is competent to administer the oath to one who makes an affidavit for an attachment on its behalf. Laning v. Iron City Nat. Bank, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 36 S. W. 481.

will be of no avail unless sworn to before such officer,[1] and if sworn to before an officer expressly prohibited by statute it will be a nullity.[2]

b. Officers Without the Jurisdiction. Unless the officer who may take the affidavit is expressly designated, and where the simple administration of an oath is all that is required, affidavits taken before non-resident commissioners of the state, or officers in other jurisdictions having general authority to administer oaths, will be sufficient.[3]

6. Time of Making. When it is required that the affidavit be made prior to or contemporaneously with the issue of the attachment it cannot be made subsequently.[4] In some of the states under statutes providing in effect that when any

Deputy clerk.— A deputy clerk may administer the oath (Kirkman v. Wyer, 10 Mart. (La.) 126; Dorr v. Clark, 7 Mich. 310), even though he be a minor and on that account not eligible to appointment as deputy. Under the circumstances he will be recognized as an officer de facto (Wimberly v. Boland, 72 Miss. 241, 16 So. 905).

De facto officer.— An oath administered by a notary who has failed to comply with all the statutory requirements authorizing him to administer oaths is good against collateral attack, because the act of a de facto officer. Schiff v. Leipziger Bank, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 33, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 513.

Failure of clerk to affix jurat.— If the affidavit is actually sworn to before the clerk before he issues the writ, and he repair his omission to sign and certify it before the return of the writ, the irregularity will not invalidate the proceedings. Farrow v. Hoyes, 31 Mich. 498.

Prior issue of writ.— Where the affidavit must be presented before the issue of the writ, if the writ is delivered to plaintiff's attorneys in blank, and they subsequently fill in the blanks and attach the affidavits thereto the attachment is void. Buckley v. Lowry, 2 Mich. 418.

Presumption.— If the statute requires the affidavit to be made before the warning order, and both are made at the same time, the affidavit will be considered to take effect first (Webster v. Daniel, 47 Ark. 131, 14 S. W. 550); and an affidavit filed on the same day on which the writ issues will be presumed to have been filed before the sealing of the writ (Morrel v. Buckley, 20 N. J. L. 667).

suit is instituted plaintiff may forthwith sue out an attachment against the estate of a non-resident, it is held that the affidavit may be made either before or after the filing of the bill,[5] before abatement of the suit by return of the officer,[6] or before rights have accrued in favor of third persons.[7]

7. Form and Requisites[8] — a. In General. To entitle plaintiff to an attachment the affidavit or affidavits presented or filed must show by legal evidence all the material facts prescribed by the statute, or the court acquires no jurisdiction to issue it.[9] For that purpose, however, it is sufficient to make out a prima facie case;[10] and if the facts and circumstances stated in the affidavit have a legal tendency to make out a good reason for issuing an attachment and fairly call upon the judge or officer to whom it is presented to exercise his judgment on the weight of the evidence, the proceeding is not void for lack of jurisdiction, although the officer may have erred in his estimate as to the weight of the evidence.[11]

Formal requisites of affidavits, generally, see 2 Cyc. 17.

Material facts which affiant is required to state are those which must produce in the minds of the court the conclusion that the ground for the attachment exists. Sandheger v. Hosey, 26 W. Va. 221; Delaplain v. Armstrong, 21 W. Va. 211.

Necessity of averring jurisdiction.— The affidavit need not state that the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the action. Branch v. Frank, 81 N. C. 180.

Omission to comply with a rule of court requiring applicant to show whether or not a previous application had been made is not necessarily fatal. Ross v. Wigg, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 192, 6 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 268 note.

Presumptions.— Where a lost affidavit is collaterally attacked its sufficiency will be presumed (Head v. Daniels, 38 Kan. 1, 15 Pac. 911), and an affidavit sufficient to authorize an attachment under different statutes will be presumed to have been issued under the statute with which the subsequent proceedings are in conformity (Reinmiller v. Skidmore, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 161).

An affidavit for a foreign attachment in equity which shows a purely legal claim which should be enforced in a court of law is insufficient. Sims v. Charleston Bank, 3 W. Va. 415.

Failure to affix internal revenue stamps to the affidavit has been held to render the attachment void. Hoyt v. Benner, 22 La. Ann. 353.

That the affidavit might have been amended does not make an attachment issued on an insufficient affidavit the less void. Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Knapp, 61 Wis. 103, 20 N. W. 651.

W. 190; Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036.

Unnecessary averments.— It is immaterial that an affidavit sufficient in itself also states facts which will entitle plaintiff to proceed by way of garnishment (Fremont Cultivator Co. v. Fulton, 103 Ind. 393, 3 N. E. 135), or includes the requirements of an affidavit for publication (Raymond v. Nix, 5 Okla. 656, 49 Pac. 1110).

The principle established by the New York cases is that to obtain a warrant of attachment there must be presented to the justice granting the attachment competent common-law evidence of the facts upon which the right to the attachment is based. The question is always whether this evidence of affiant in the affidavits presented to the justice granting the attachment would, if introduced upon the trial, justify a verdict for plaintiff, or in other words, upon the facts sworn to by affidavit being testified to by a competent witness before a jury, would the jury be justified in rendering a verdict for plaintiff. An-

b. Affidavit as Separate Paper. While it has been held that an affidavit made on the same paper with the complaint is too indefinite and uncertain to meet the requirements of the statute,[12] it has also been held that an affidavit written upon the original petition by leave of the court after the interposition of an answer was sufficient, though the petition was not refiled.[13]

c. Mode of Allegation — (I) Statutory Language. Unless the statute requires the affidavit to be made by a specified formula no particular language is necessary,[14] and as a rule it is sufficient in this respect if the affidavit either follows or substantially follows, by equivalent words, the language of the statute respecting the nature of the action, the requirement as to the statement of plaintiff's claim, the grounds upon which the attachment is sought, and the like.[15] thony v. Fox, 53 N. Y. App. Div. 200, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 806.

Extent of proof.— The officer must not only be personally satisfied, but must also be satisfied judicially upon legal proof. Mott v. Lawrence, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 196, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 559.

False affidavit.— In states where the affidavit can be controverted, when the attachment is granted upon a statement of alleged facts, part of which are untrue, the whole writ may be quashed upon proof of the falsity of that allegation. Vollmer v. Spencer, (Ida. 1897) 51 Pac. 609.

Language should be unequivocally identical with statutory language.— Where other language than that of the statute is used it should be unequivocally identical in meaning. Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, 22 Fla. 391.

Test of proper use of statutory language.— Though the affidavit is in the exact language of the statute yet it will be deemed insufficient if perjury cannot be assigned upon it. Miller v. Munson, 34 Wis. 579, 17 Am. Rep. 461.

Sufficient prima facie.—An affidavit simply setting forth a ground for the attachment in the language of the statute is prima facie sufficient to authorize its issue, but must be supported by competent proof when challenged by the positive oath of defendant. Hilton v. Ross, 9 Nebr. 406, 2 N. W. 862. In Wyoming where the ground of attachment is

Mere technical defects, verbal inaccuracies, and immaterial departures from the words of the statute may be disregarded if the material requirements of the act are fulfilled.[16]

(II) Affidavits on Knowledge—(A) In General. It is the better practice and always desirable that affiant should state his means of knowledge, notwithstanding positive statements, and this has been held necessary in many cases, especially where the affidavit is by a third party.[17]

(B) Presumptions. Actual knowledge may be presumed, as where from the circumstances it appears that affiant has such knowledge or the circumstances are such that knowledge can be inferred,[18] when the relation of affiant to the parties or to the transactions is such as to warrant an inference of personal knowledge,[19] an assignment of property with intent to defraud creditors a recital in the language of the statute that "affiant has good reason to believe and does believe," etc., without stating specified facts is sufficient. But where the ground is that defendant fraudulently contracted the debt or incurred the obligation sued on, an allegation that "affiant has good reason to believe and does believe," etc., without alleging the facts upon which the affiant bases his belief, is insufficient. Material departure.— A statement that plaintiff "should recover" is not equivalent to a statement that he is "entitled" to recover, the statutory language; and the affidavit is therefore insufficient. Sommers v. Allen, 44 W. Va. 120, 28 S. E. 787. See infra, VII, D, 7, c, (v), (H), (4), (5).

Officer of trading corporation.— No presumption will arise as to the personal knowledge of the president of a trading corpora-or in some states in the absence of a statutory requirement that affiant shall state whether or not the averments of the affidavit are based on direct knowledge, or on information and belief.[20] But unqualified statements of facts will not be sufficient if it is apparent that affiant's relation to the parties or to the transaction is not such as to import personal knowledge or it appears affirmatively, or by fair inference, that they could not have been and were not made on such knowledge.[21]

(III) Affidavits on Information and Belief—(A) In General. Generally, where the ground upon which the attachment is sought is of such a character as to admit of definite statements respecting its existence, the allegations relative thereto must set out such facts and circumstances as may be necessary to establish the ground relied on positively and unequivocally and not simply on information and belief;[22] but if sufficient is shown positively to authorize the issue of an attachment other statements on information and belief may be disregarded as immaterial.[23] In some jurisdictions positive statements as to the ground upon which the affidavit is sought are unnecessary, for the reason that the statute permits the affidavit to be made on information and belief, or upon belief only, or because sanctioned by the practice;[24] but where the statute prescribes the form in which this belief may be stated, unless there is a substantial compliance therewith the affidavit will be insufficient.[25]

(B) As to Intent. Intent to depart, to remove or to dispose of property, or to defraud creditors is not usually the subject of direct or positive proof, but is to be inferred from the acts and conduct of the debtor. Hence to authorize such an inference there must be appropriate allegation of such facts, circumstances, acts, or declarations as will enable the court or officer to judge whether or not such an intent may be implied.[26]

(c) Sources of Information and Grounds of Belief. In an affidavit on information and belief it must, as a general rule, appear that affiant's information was derived from a competent source, that is, the sources of information together with the grounds of the belief must be disclosed in such a manner as to enable the court to decide upon the probable truth of the statements and the authenticity of the jurisdictional facts.[27] Hence, the names of third persons from whom the

"May" depart.— An allegation that plaintiff really believes, and has just grounds to apprehend, that defendant "may" depart from the state, etc., is insufficient. Reding v. Ridge, 14 La. Ann. 36.

Sufficiency.— An affidavit stating that plaintiff believes that defendant has fraudulently conveyed his property to prevent the collection of plaintiff's debt and that defendant has informed affiant that he has sold all his personalty and would pay when he got ready is sufficient. Bowers v. Beck, 2 Nev. 139. Under a statute requiring affiant to declare that he verily believes, etc., an affidavit by plaintiff's attorney that to the best of plaintiff's knowledge and belief the defendants had disposed of part and were about to dispose of the whole of their property with intent, etc., is insufficient. Stadler v. Parmlee, 10 Iowa 23. Information by telephone.— Though an at-alleged information was derived should be given,[28] or their affidavits presented;[29] and, where information is derived from books or papers they should be produced, if practicable, or if not copies or extracts should be furnished with appropriate reference thereto.[30]

(D) Excusing Non-Production of Best Evidence. If the affidavit of the informant or other source of information is not produced, satisfactory reasons

tachment may be granted on an affidavit based on information transmitted by telephone, it must appear that affiant recognized the voice of the sender, or he must identify the informer in some way. Murphy v. Jack, 142 N. Y. 215, 36 N. E. 882, 58 N. Y. St. 458, 40 Am. St. Rep. 590 [reversing 76 Hun (N. Y.) 356, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 802, 58 N. Y. St. 481]. Information derived by telephone from a person whose voice was recognized is not competent where it appears that the statement by the informant was of itself hearsay. Andrews v. Schofield, 27 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 132.

Information from written admissions.—An affidavit by the attorney of a non-resident plaintiff is sufficient if it appears that the statement as to the amount and nature of defendant's indebtedness was made upon information and belief derived from the written admissions of defendant in the possession of affiant. Howell v. Kingsbury, 15 Wis. 272.

Knowledge of informants.— An affidavit is insufficient which fails to show that affiant's informants had knowledge of the facts which they communicated, or where the belief of affiant is founded on the past record of defendant. Nevada Bank v. Cregan, 17 Misc. (N. Y.) 241, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 1065.

Reference to return to writ.— A statement that defendant has left the county to avoid the service of summons as shown by the return of a constable to the writ is sufficient. Webster v. Daniel, 47 Ark. 131, 14 S. W. 550.

Sufficiency.—For cases in which the sources of information stated were held sufficient to support the averment of information and belief see Anthony v. Fox, 53 N. Y. App. Div. 200, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 806; Everitt v. Park, 88 Hun (N. Y.) 368, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 827, 68 N. Y. St. 765, 2 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 205; Mann v. Carter, 71 Hun (N. Y.) 72, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 591, 54 N. Y. Ability to prove matters as alleged.— In Pennsylvania an affidavit upon information and belief must aver an ability to prove the matters as alleged. Simon v. Johnson, 7 Kulp (Pa.) 166; Ross v. Behringer, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 260.

28. Acker v. Saynisch, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 415, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 937.

Date of informants' affidavits.— In Belden v. Wilcox, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 331, a statement by plaintiff's attorney that the sources of affiant's information and the grounds of his belief were affidavits filed more than five weeks previously was held to be insufficient, where no reason was shown for not producing the affidavit of plaintiff and it was not shown that the condition of affairs might not have changed since last filing.

30. Pride v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 4 N. Y. Suppl. 15, 21 N. Y. St. 261.

An affidavit by a receiver containing general statements as to the effect of the books and papers of plaintiff without the disclosure of facts, and which does not state enough of the agreement upon which the action is based to enable the court to determine whether or not defendant is in default is insufficient. McCulloh v. Aeby, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 361, 31 N. Y. St. 125.

Correspondence and telegrams.— An affidavit by a third person on information and belief derived from correspondence and telegrams received from plaintiff is insufficient, where the correspondence is not set out and only copies of some of the telegrams are given (Barrell v. Todd, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 22, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 527; Stewart v. Lyman, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 182, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 936); and an affidavit alleging as a source of information and belief a cablegram received from the correspondent, deponent's firm, which fails to state the contents of the cablegram, is insufficient (Ladenburg v. Commercial Bank, 87 Hun (N. Y.) 269, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 821, 67 N. Y. St. 466 [reversing 84 Hun (N. Y.) 503, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 873, 66 N. Y. St. 153, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 234, and affirmed in 146 N. Y. 406, 42 N. E. 543]).

Extracts from other affidavits.— Plaintiff may embody in his affidavit extracts from an affidavit used in attachment proceedings against the same defendant by other parties, where neither affiant nor the original affidavit can be produced (Levy v. Goldstein, 18 Misc. (N. Y.) 639, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 774), and it is sufficient to refer to affidavits presented on the application and ordered on file (Buell v. Van Camp, 119 N. Y. 160, 23 N. E. 538, 28 N. Y. St. 947). But an affidavit, the material allegations of which are on information and belief, is insufficient where the source of information is in affidavits should be given for the failure so to do.[31] If the inability to procure the testimony of the informant[32] or, although not so stated in terms, the impracticability of producing his affidavit fairly appears from the moving papers, a sufficient excuse is presented.[33]

(IV) Reference to Pleadings or Papers—(A) In General. Copies of, or extracts from, the pleadings, affidavits, or depositions on file may properly be considered where the applicant is unable to procure the affidavits of the persons who made the originals,[34] and in support of the affidavits presented on the application the court may consider affidavits made or filed by other parties at the same time in similar proceedings against the same debtor.[35] However, a mere reference to another affidavit on file is insufficient, unless extracts therefrom bearing upon the facts relied on are set out.[36] So is a reference to affidavits without on file in the court, which are referred to, but are not quoted from, and no part of their contents set out, so that the court may know what facts are stated therein (Selser Bros. Co. v. Potter Produce Co., 77 Hun (N. Y.) 313, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 428, 59 N. Y. St. 826), and when copies of affidavits in other attachment cases against defendant are filed to show the source of information, affiant must also show that he believes the statements in such affidavits (Brewster v. Van Camp, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 588, 28 N. Y. St. 591. Contra, Levy v. Goldstein, 18 Misc. (N. Y.) 639, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 774). It is sufficient to state that the information upon which the belief is based is derived from a statement by the assignor of the claim in the nature of a deposition taken in a foreign state, but which could not be used in the courts of this state. Hawkins v. Pakas, 39 N. Y. App. Div. 506, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 317.

Y.) 415, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 937; Vietor v. Goldberg, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 46, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 1005, 56 N. Y. St. 620; Wentzler v. Ross, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 397.

Informant an employee of defendant.— On a statement that the information as to the non-residence of defendant was derived from the latter's bookkeeper, affiant may be excused from stating that his informant's deposition cannot be obtained (Scott v. Beaudet, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 50, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 409, 41 N. Y. St. 675. See also National Bank of Commerce v. Whiteman Pulp, etc., Co., 21 N. Y. Suppl. 748, 50 N. Y. St. 193 [affirmed in 138 N. Y. 636, 33 N. E. 1084, 51 N. Y. St. 935]); but where it is not shown that any attempt was made to procure the informant's affidavit, a mere statement that such informant was a friend of defendant and would not voluntarily make an affidavit is insufficient (Abrams v. Lavine, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 566, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 881, 70 N. Y. St. 542).

Lack of time.— A statement of inability, from lack of time, to procure the affidavits of plaintiff's informants is not a sufficient excuse. Thomas v. Dickerson, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 436, 33 N. Y. St. 786.

Mere inconvenience in procuring the affidavits of persons from whom information was obtained will not excuse the failure to produce them where it appears that such persons were accessible and no reason is given for the failure to procure their affidavits. Brewster v. Van Camp, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 603, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 588, 28 N. Y. St. 591.

Adoption of bill.— Where the bill sworn to and filed before the attachment is issued contains the necessary allegations for the issue of an attachment, an affidavit adopting the bill, as a part thereof, by reference, is sufficient. Sims v. Tyrer, 96 Va. 5, 26 S. E. 508; Fisher v. March, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 765.

Reference to complaint or petition.— An affidavit may be enlarged by incorporating therein by express reference the allegations of the petition. Stifel v. Cincinnati Nat. Bank, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 700, 16 Cinc. L. Bul. 398. But an affidavit merely alleging that the allegations of the complaint which supply the deficiency are true will not be aided by such allegation, where it is not shown that the complaint, or a copy of the same, was presented to or considered by the judge to whom application was made, and the warrant recites that the facts referred to were made to appear by the affidavit. People v. St. Nicholas Bank, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 313, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 719.

35. Hallock v. Van Camp, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 1, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 588, 28 N. Y. St. 337; Colver v. Van Valen, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 102.

36. Wilmerding v. Cunningham, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 344.

A mere statement that affiant has a certain deposition in his possession is insufficient, where a copy of it is not attached or no reason assigned for the failure to do so. Moore v. Richardson, 3 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 238.

annexing a copy thereof or stating them to be on file,[37] or a mere reference to, without a copy of, a general assignment and inventory made by the debtor which are filed in another court.[38]

(B) To Show Cause or Nature of Action — (1) GENERALLY. If the declaration or complaint is required to be presented or may be considered on the application, the omission of the affidavit to set out the cause of action or to state the nature of the claim, or its insufficiency in that respect, may be supplied or remedied as the case may be,[39] or it will be sufficient to refer to the pleading to show the grounnd upon which the action is brought.[40]

(2) AMOUNT OF CLAIM OR INDEBTEDNESS. If the affidavit lacks precision in stating plaintiff's demand, recourse may be had to the declaration or complaint, and if that pleading is sufficiently specific the proceedings will not be affected by the deficiencies of the affidavit,[41] or the affidavit will be sufficient if the allegations of the complaint in this connection, which are sufficiently made, are incorporated in or annexed to the affidavit or are referred to expressly or by fair implication.[42] In some jurisdictions if the claim or demand is sufficiently stated in the complaint or petition, it is unnecessary again to make the statement in the affidavit,[43] or to repeat it therein with all the detail required in a pleading.[44]

(3) TIME OF MATURITY OF DEBT. It is unnecessary that the affidavit shall state when the debt matured, but it will be sufficient if the petition shows that fact,[45] or if the petition sets forth the contract sued on so that the date of its maturity can be determined.[46]

(C) To Show Grounds of Attachment. If the petition states the non-residence of defendant, an affidavit attesting the truth of all the allegations in the petition is sufficient;[47] and it has been held that on collateral attack reference

Presumption.— In the absence of any showing to the contrary it may be presumed on appeal that a defect in the affidavit was supplied by reference to a sufficient complaint. Hill v. Knickerbocker Electric Light, etc., Co., 14 N. Y. Suppl. 517, 38 N. Y. St. 417, 21 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 141. But if the affidavit fails to show the existence of a cause of action, jurisdiction to issue the warrant will not be deemed to have been acquired, although the verified complaint shows the existence of the cause, if there is no proof that the complaint was considered. People v. St. Nicholas Bank, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 313, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 719, 90 N. Y. St. 719, 30 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 30.

A reference to a complaint on information and belief which is insufficient because failing to state the sources of plaintiff's knowledge or ground of such belief is bad (Hitner v. Boutilier, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 203, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 64, 51 N. Y. St. 518), but if the complaint is sufficient, although upon information and belief, the cause of action is sufficiently stated (Altworth v. Flynn, 27 Misc. (N. An allegation that plaintiff will allege in his complaint herein certain facts, etc., is bad. Axford v. Seguine, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 35.

may be had to the bond and petition to explain an allegation of non-residence contained in the affidavit.[48] But an omission in the affidavit of a statement that the absconding or concealment occurred within a prescribed time after the injury, as required by the statute, cannot be supplied by an allegation sufficient in that respect contained in the declaration.[49]

(D) Producing Evidence of Debt. Though it may be required that at the time of presenting the affidavit the creditor shall produce the bond, account, or other evidence of the debt claimed,[50] it is not necessary that he should produce all the evidence which he relies on to establish his claim at the trial.[51] Under such a provision it has been held necessary to produce the assignment of the claim by the original creditor,[52] and that an attachment may issue upon the record of a foreign attachment[53] or transcript of a judgment rendered in another state,[54] or if plaintiff produce an agreement containing dependent covenants sued upon.[55] Likewise, an attachment may issue against the indorser of a negotiable promissory note on production of the note without proof of its indorsement by the debtor,[56] or on a note written in a foreign language unaccompanied by a translation thereof.[57]

(V) Specific Requisites, Statements, and Allegations—(A) Venue. For the purpose of showing that the oath was administered in the jurisdiction of the officer before whom the affidavit was taken the venue or place of the taking should appear.[58]

The account contemplated must be sufficient to inform defendant as to the real nature and character of the claim. Burk v. Tinsley, 80 Md. 98, 30 Atl. 604. An intelligible account made out in the usual mode adopted by merchants will be sufficient (Stewart v. Katz, 30 Md. 334), and it has been held sufficient to show the aggregate of the amount claimed to be due without itemization (Bartlett v. Wilbur, 53 Md. 485; Cox v. Waters, 34 Md. 460, in which latter case the distinction between an action for money loaned and for goods sold and delivered was drawn and the rule stated to be that while the dates and amounts of several sums loaned need not be set out, but might be stated in the aggregate, an account for goods bargained and sold at sundry times should state the items in detail).

Presumption of filing.— If it appears from the introductory certificate of the record and by the writ that the evidence of the debt sued upon has been filed, that will be deemed to have been the fact, although the clerk in his certificate containing the affidavit fails to certify that the instruments were produced. Howard v. Oppenheimer, 25 Md. 350.

Withdrawing from files.— If good reason is shown the court may allow the evidences of debt filed with the warrant to be withdrawn from the files, on substituting copies therefor without invalidating the attachment proceedings. Franklin Bank v. Matthews, 69 Md. 107, 14 Atl. 703.

If the place of taking appears in the caption of the affidavit, although not in its body, the failure of the officer to designate the name of the county for which he was appointed is immaterial (Smith v. Runnels, 94 Mich. 617, 54 N. W. 375); and if it appears that the oath was administered by an officer of a designated county, the absence of a formal statement of the venue is immaterial (Kesler v. Lapham, 46 W. Va. 293, 33 S. Omission of the letters "ss." is immaterial. McCord, etc., Mercantile Co. v. Glenn, 6 Utah 139, 21 Pac. 500.

Presumption.— The affidavit will be presumed to have been sworn to in the county designated by the venue. Kesler v. Lapham, 46 W. Va. 293, 33 S. E. 289. It will also

(B) Entitling. It has been said to be improper to entitle an affidavit in a cause where the action has not been commenced;[59] or where the affidavit being the foundation of the action, there can be no action pending until the issue of the writ.[60] The general rule, however, is that the affidavit should contain in its caption the title of the cause and should designate the court where the action is pending,[61] although an omission to entitle the affidavit is of no importance, if the court in which the remedy is sought sufficiently appears elsewhere,[62] or the body of the affidavit sufficiently designates the parties.[63]

(C) Identification and Description of Parties — (1) IN GENERAL. The affidavit should show which of the parties named is plaintiff and which defendant;[64] but their identity or relation to each other may be sufficiently shown by a reference to the caption,[65] or by resort to the record or other papers.[66]

(2) PLAINTIFF — (a) IN GENERAL — aa. Rule Stated. The affidavit should identify plaintiff,[67] but if plaintiff is sufficiently identified from other papers in the action the fact that he is not named in the affidavit,[68] or that it contains no direct allegation that affiant is the plaintiff or one of them[69] is immaterial.

bb. Citizenship. Where the fact that plaintiff was a citizen of the state was necessary to be shown to entitle him to an attachment, failure of the affidavit to he presumed that the officer had jurisdiction to administer the oath within the county stated (Englehart-Davidson Mercantile Co. v. Burrell, 66 Mo. App. 117), and that, although the county and state are not definitely set out, the oath was administered within the proper county (Snell v. Eckerson, 81 Iowa 284). Clerical error — Plural for singular.— An affidavit by one of several plaintiffs, alleging that "the plaintiffs aver," etc., is equivalent to a statement that deponent avers. Jamison v. Beecher, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 230.

Identification not necessary.— An affidavit which states that affiant, the plaintiff and appellant, believes, etc., is not defective because of the failure to state who the appellant is. Voorheis v. Eiting, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 161, 22 S. W. 80.

Sufficiency of identification.— If an affidavit is annexed to the writ and bears the same date, plaintiff is sufficiently identified though he is not named in the affidavit. Stringer v. Dean, 61 Mich. 196, 27 N. W. 886.

Representative or individual capacity.—An affidavit which in the title of the action shows that it is brought by plaintiff as receiver, but which thereafter refers to him by name, stating that defendant is indebted to him as plaintiff, sufficiently shows an indebtedness to him in his representative capacity. contain a sufficient allegation of that fact has been held to render it defective,[70] but this allegation seems no longer to be necessary in the jurisdictions in which it was formerly required.[71]

cc. Residence. Where, to authorize an affidavit by a person other than plaintiff, it must appear that he is a non-resident, the affidavit must show that fact;[72] but if a non-resident has the same right to sue out an attachment as a resident, his non-residence need not be shown.[73]

(b) Copartners. Where plaintiffs are copartners, if the firm is sufficiently identified, the fact that the names of the individual partners are not set out will not render the affidavit defective,[74] nor will it be objectionable, because of a reference to the firm as the plaintiff.[75]

(3) Defendant — (a) In General — aa. Rule Stated. Defendant should be sufficiently identified or described,[76] but extreme particularity is not required,[77]

70. Boarman v. Patterson, 1 Gill (Md.) 372; Mandeville v. Jarrett, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 497; Shivers v. Wilson, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 130, 9 Am. Dec. 497.

Citizen of the United States.— An allegation that plaintiff is a citizen of the United States is not equivalent to an allegation that he is a citizen of the state. Yerby v. Lackland, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 446; Shivers v. Wilson, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 130, 9 Am. Dec. 497.

Specification of county.— An affidavit stating plaintiff to be a citizen within the jurisdiction is sufficient without stating that he is a citizen of a particular county therein. Decatur v. Young, 5 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 502, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,722.

Citizenship of several plaintiffs.— If the affidavit alleges citizenship of but one of two plaintiffs the proceedings will be quashed. Wever v. Baltzell, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 335. Where it is necessary that the face of the proceedings show that plaintiff is a citizen of the state, or of some one of the United States, or an inhabitant or resident of the District of Columbia, or of some one of the territories of the United States, that fact must appear with reference to all the plaintiffs, where there are more than one. Baldwin v. Neale, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 274.

71. McCoy v. Boyle, 10 Md. 391 (where it is said that since the passage of the Maryland act of 1834, c. 79, § 1, there may be a total omission of the averment of citizenship, and that undoubtedly an averment that plaintiff is a resident of the United States would be clearly sufficient); Hard v. Stone, 5 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 503, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,046; Kurtz v. Jones, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 433, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,954; Birch v. Butler, 1 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 319, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,425.

Proof of citizenship.— After the Maryland act of 1834 dispensed with the allegation of citizenship it was nevertheless necessary to prove it at the trial. Barr v. Perry, 3 Gill (Md.) 313.

Under the Maryland act of 1825, c. 114, by which the right to attachment was extended to any inhabitant or resident of any part of the United States, whether of one of the states or the District of Columbia, or other territory, who by the existing laws of the state were entitled to sue out mesne process, it was necessary that the affidavit should clearly show to what class the party belonged. Otherwise the court would not acquire jurisdiction. Wever v. Baltzell, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 335.

72. Morrel v. Fearing, 20 N. J. L. 670, holding that an affidavit by an agent that he resides in a city of another state and that plaintiffs are partners doing business there is sufficient prima facie to show that they are non-resident creditors.

73. Jackson v. Stanley, 2 Ala. 326.

74. Stewart v. Katz, 30 Md. 334; Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659; Moody v. Alter, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 142.

Collateral attack.— An affidavit describing plaintiffs by their firm-name but omitting their christian names is erroneous, but it will not render the attachment void, or subject to collateral attack. Barber v. Smith, 41 Mich. 138, 1 N. W. 992.

Presumption.— Where affiant states that he is a member of the plaintiff, a copartnership, and one of the plaintiffs above named, another person and himself being so named, it is a fair presumption that he and such other person constitute the firm. Doctor v. Schnepp, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 144, 2 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 52.

75. Clerical error — Singular for plural.— Where an affidavit for attachment by a partnership stated that defendants are justly indebted to the "said plaintiff," and that "plaintiffs" are likely to lose their debt, the use of the word "plaintiff" was held to be a mere immaterial clerical error. Weis v. Chipman, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 106, 22 S. W. 225.

76. Omission of name.— An affidavit that said ——— resides without the state limits does not state the non-residence of any person. Black v. Scanlon, 48 Ga. 12.

77. Clerical errors.— A mere clerical error in the name of defendant will not vitiate the proceeding (Davidson v. Martin, 33 Miss. 530), and an allegation that plaintiff has a claim against defendant will be construed to mean against the parties defendant (McMahon v. Perkins, 22 R. I. 116, 46 Atl. 405).

Description in caption.— If defendant is and the fact that plaintiff's pleading varies from the affidavit in naming or describing the debtors is immaterial where it is apparent that the same parties are intended.[78]

bb. Citizenship — Residence. If it is required that the citizenship of defendant shall be alleged, in the absence of such an averment the proceedings will be quashed;[79] but if an allegation of defendant's residence is not a prescribed part of the affidavit it is unnecessary,[80] even where a debtor must be sued in the county of his residence.[81] The remedy of defendant in such a case is by plea in abatement.[82]

cc. Showing Defendant to Be an Adult. Notwithstanding a provision in effect prohibiting the issue of an attachment against the property of a minor, it seems that the affidavit need not specifically state that defendant is an adult,[83] but that it will be sufficient if the fact that defendant is an adult appears by implication.[84] And even where such an allegation was held necessary, the court has permitted supplemental proof.[85]

(b) Copartners. While it is more regular to set out the individual names of copartners the omission to do so will not render the attachment void,[86] and the misnomer of defendant in one part of an affidavit may be disregarded where its firm-name is sufficiently stated elsewhere.[87]

(c) Corporations. Unless so required the affidavit need not allege the corporate character of defendant,[88] that the corporation whose property is sought to be named in the caption it is not necessary that he should be named in the body of the affidavit. Boyd v. Lippencott, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 585, 44 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 46.

Identification by reference.—Where defendants have been once named a reference thereafter to them as "the parties aforesaid" is sufficient. Spitz v. Mobr, 86 Wis. 387, 57 N. W. 41.

Naming defendants unconnected with transaction.— That two of the persons named as defendants in the caption were not connected with the transaction out of which the claim arose will not furnish a ground for disturbing the attachment. Cunningham v. Von Pustan, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 255, 31 N. Y. St. 255.

Person acting in representative capacity.— An affidavit stating in effect that a person named as commissioner of a lunatic is indebted, etc., will be regarded as a proceeding against the person so named, no such officer being recognized by the law. Ross v. Edwards, 52 Ga. 24.

78. Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18; Sheffield v. Key, 14 Ga. 537; Clanton v. Laird, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 568; Commercial Bank v. Ullman, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 411. See also U. S. Capsule Co. v. Isaacs, 23 Ind. App. 533, 55 N. E. 832, holding that an affidavit against a corporation stating that the claim is on a judgment against another corporation described in the complaint, which shows that the judgment was rendered against the last-named company, which with others were thereafter consolidated and organized as the defendant company, is sufficient.

79. Boarman v. Patterson, 1 Gill (Md.) 372.

80. Wray v. Gilmore, 1 Miles (Pa.) 75, an affidavit for domestic attachment.

81. Toby v. Bowen, 3 Ark. 352; Primrose v. Roden, 14 Tex. 1. But see Yale v. McDaniel, 69 Miss. 337, 12 So. 556, holding that, where an attachment may issue for a debt not due only in the county where the debtor resides, last resided, or where his property may be found, the affidavit must state his residence, last residence, or the location of the property.

82. Primrose v. Roden, 14 Tex. 1.

83. Hall v. Anderson, 17 Misc. (N. Y.) 270, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 354; Wentzler v. Ross, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 397.

84. Doctor v. Schnepp, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 144, 2 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 52, where an allegation that "a short time ago he (defendant) represented himself to deponent to be a man of means" was held sufficient.

85. American Mills Co. v. Schnitzer, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 150 note, where the affidavit failed to state that defendant was an adult, and on motion to vacate the attachment because of said omission the court stated that it would grant the motion unless within five days plaintiff produced proof of the omitted fact.

86. Johnston v. Smith, 83 Ga. 779, 10 S. E. 354; Blue Grass Canning Co. v. Wardman, 103 Tenn. 179, 52 S. W. 137.

Unknown partners.— An allegation that defendant firm is composed of a person named and certain parties unknown is sufficient to justify the issue of an attachment against the copartnership effects. Hines v. Kimball, 47 Ga. 587.

87. Foran v. Johnson, 58 Md. 144.

88. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Plant, 58 Ga. 167.

The omission of the word "company" from defendant's corporate name will not affect the lien of the attachment, especially where defendant appears without objection and answers in its true name. Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556, 21 Pac. 971.

attached is a domestic corporation,[89] or, where corporations which have complied with certain statutory requisites are exempt from attachment, need it negative the proposition that they have complied with the laws.[90]

(D) Cause or Nature of Action — (1) IN GENERAL. Although there are exceptions to the rule,[91] it is generally required that the cause of action or nature of the claim should be definitely stated in the affidavit, for the reason among others that it may appear that the action is one of those specified as a case in which an attachment may be granted.[92] While extreme particularity is not

United States.— Laughlin v. Queen City Constr. Co., 89 Fed. 482, construing New York statute.

Contra, in New Jersey, where the cause of action need not be specified in the affidavit. Shadduck v. Marsh, 21 N. J. L. 434; Day v. Bennett, 18 N. J. L. 287. But see Brown v. Hoy, 16 N. J. L. 157, which held that an affidavit stating that defendant is indebted to plaintiff in a certain sum, "upon covenant, it being the penalty fixed therein upon breach," is insufficient, because neither stating what the agreement was, nor in what respect, if any, it was broken.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," §§ 263, 273.

Action on joint and several note.—An affidavit which fails to show the execution of a joint and several note by any person except the defendant whose property is sought to be attached is not so defective as to invalidate the order of attachment. Dunlap v. McFarland, 25 Kan. 488.

Aider.— If the affidavit in describing the nature of the demand shows by general terms that it is the same debt for which the action is prosecuted it will be sufficient. Bowers v. London Bank, 3 Utah 417, 4 Pac. 225. See also Goodman v. Sondheim, 3 Kulp (Pa.) 87, holding that the affidavit for attachment under the Pennsylvania act of 1869 may be read in connection with a statement annexed and referred to therein, containing a description of the kind of property, and the date when it was purchased by defendant, so as to furnish a statement of "the nature and amount of such indebtedness," as required by the statute.

Conclusiveness.— The preliminary affidavit of a plaintiff in attachment is not conclusive as to the nature of his claim. Heckscher v. Trotter, 48 N. J. L. 419, 5 Atl. 581; Shadduck v. Marsh, 21 N. J. L. 434; Day v. Bennett, 18 N. J. L. 287.

The statement of the cause of action in the affidavit is a sufficient compliance with a statute requiring the creditor to file a petition or other lawful statement of the cause of action. Holman v. Kerr, 44 Mo. App. 481. See also Chenault v. Chapron, 5 Mo. 438, holding that an ordinary petition in debt is a "lawful statement," etc.

The affidavits were held to sufficiently comply with the statute in this respect in the following cases:

California.— Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482, 40 Pac. 804; Simpson v. McCarty, 78 Cal. 175, 20 Pac. 406, 12 Am. St. Rep. 37; Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640.

Mode of objection.— In an action commenced by attachment, if the affidavit alleges a cause of action as for a trespass to land, and the complaint is for conversion, demurrer will not lie but a summary application to set the declaration aside should be made. Longyear v. Minnesota Lumber Co., 108 Mich. 645, 66 N. W. 567.

There is no variance between a declaration alleging a breach of warranty as a basis of the action and an affidavit alleging as a cause of action "that the defendant fraudulently incurred the debt." Hambrick v. Wil-alleged as will enable the court or officer to judge of the existence of a cause of action in which the issue of an attachment will be warranted;[95] and, where such a showing is essential, it should appear that the cause is one arising or founded on contract, or to recover for a breach of contract, express or implied, or on a judgment, as the case may be.[96] The sufficiency of the allegations in this respect are necessarily governed by the particular facts stated, but generally it may be said that the requirement will be satisfied by any language from which conformity to the statute may be gathered.[97]

kins, 65 Miss. 18, 3 So. 67, 7 Am. St. Rep. 631. Nor is it a ground to affect the attachment that though the complaint separately states several distinct causes of action the affidavit is sufficient as to some of them only. Wilson v. Barbour, 21 Mont. 176, 53 Pac. 315.

(2) Ownership of Claim. It should also appear from the affidavit that plaintiff is a creditor of defendant and that he is entitled as such to recover the claim or demand for which the action is brought.[98]

(E) Pendency of Action — (1) In General. A statute authorizing the issue of an attachment in an action, or requiring the affidavit to show that one of certain specified causes of action exists against defendant does not necessitate a specific showing that the action has been actually commenced or that the summons has been issued or served;[99] but if the commencement or pendency of the action must be alleged, any statement substantially showing its institution or subsequent prosecution will be sufficient.[1]

(2) Identification of Cause. If it is necessary to identify the action in which the auxiliary remedy is sought the affidavit must so describe it as to show unmistakably that it is an adjunct of that particular proceeding.[2] stated that a debt was due upon "express and implied" (Buehler v. De Lemos, 84 Mich. 554, 48 N. W. 42), "upon express contract and implied contract" (Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659), and "upon in part of both an express and implied contract" (Cope v. Upper Missouri Min., etc., Co., 1 Mont. 53) were held to be sufficient, without stating how much was due on each contract.

Action by assignee.— An affidavit by plaintiff stating that he is now the owner and holder of the demand sued on under an assignment by the assignee to whom the original holder had transferred it, together with an affidavit by such original holder stating that he had informed defendant that the claim had been duly assigned to plaintiff, is sufficient to show the latter's ownership of the demand. Hall v. Stryker, 27 N. Y. 596.

Action by receiver.— An affidavit entitled in the action of plaintiff as receiver in which, omitting his official designation, he states that he is plaintiff in the above-entitled action and that defendant is indebted to him, sufficiently shows an indebtedness to him as receiver. O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173, 41 Pac. 465.

Action on promissory note.— An affidavit alleging an indebtedness of defendant to plaintiff on a promissory note made to a third party sufficiently shows ownership of the note by plaintiff, though it is not stated in terms that the note was indorsed to him. State Bank v. Boyd, 86 Cal. 386, 25 Pac. 20. The failure to state that the note sued on is payable to plaintiff will not render the attachment void. Bourne v. Hocker, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 23.

Several plaintiffs.— An affidavit by one of two plaintiffs in which affiant states that he ought to recover is not fatally defective because asserting an indebtedness to him personally. Fairbanks v. Lorig, 4 Ind. App. 451, 29 N. E. 452.

Negativing defense.—Allegations that notes sued on are not paid, and that plaintiff is a holder for value before maturity are immaterial averments which it is not necessary for plaintiff to rebut in the first instance. 1. Thus an affidavit made by the attorney for plaintiff, where he swears "that he is the authorized attorney of the plaintiff in the above entitled action. That he has commenced an action," etc., instead of stating that plaintiff has commenced an action, is not void, where it appears from the whole affidavit that the action was brought by plaintiff. Jansen v. Mundt, 20 Nebr. 320, 30 N. W. 53. And an affidavit which states that an action has been commenced in effect shows the issue of a summons, and is sufficient. Wallace v. Castle, 68 N. Sufficiency of identification.— An affidavit

(F) Claim or Indebtedness — (1) IN GENERAL. The statutes generally require a statement that defendant is indebted to plaintiff, and also a precise or reasonably certain statement of the amount of the indebtedness claimed. This last statement is necessary and material, not only to confer jurisdiction but also to enable the officer to whom the affidavit is presented to determine the amount of property which may be taken under the attachment and thus avoid an excessive levy.[3] A general averment of damage is insufficient and the indebtedness or which corresponds with the petition as to the names of the parties, the amount sued for, and the nature of the action, and is indorsed with the file number of the suit, filed with the papers in the cause, and acted upon by the clerk in issuing the writ, sufficiently identifies the action, though not filed on the same day as the petition. Eilers v. Forbes, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. 709. So an affidavit showing that it was made in a specified cause, and sworn to by the "agent and attorney for plaintiffs," and filed on the same day, in the same court, and with the same file number as the petition and the attachment bond sufficiently identifies the cause in which it was filed. Munzenheimer v. Manhattan Cloak, etc., Co., 79 Tex. 318, 15 S. W. 389.

Failure to use technical language.— An affidavit is not deficient in this respect, because it does not technically state that it is made "in the suit." Altmeyer v. Caulfield, 37 W. Va. 847, 17 S. E. 409.

In Tennessee the affidavit must allege that a suit has been commenced by plaintiff against defendant, the nature thereof, the tribunal in which it is pending, the amount of the damages claimed, and that the cause of action is just. "At the least."— In West Virginia, by the act of Mar. 24, 1882, the affidavit is required to state the amount "at the least," that plaintiff is entitled to recover, and the insertion of that phrase or its equivalent is an absolute necessity. Dulin v. McCaw, 39 W. Va. 721, 20 S. E. 681; Crim v. Harmon, 38 W. Va. 596, 18 S. E. 753; Altmeyer v. Caulfield, 37 W. Va. 847, 17 S. E. 409.

Necessity of stating facts.— An affidavit which adopts a certain measure of damages as the amount of recovery must state the evidence relied on to establish such recovery. Delafield v. J. K. Armsby Co., 62 N. Y. App. Div. 262, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 14.

Third parties who make supporting affidavits as to the non-residence of the debtor need not testify as to the debt. Staples v. Fairchild, 3 N. Y. 41.

Where there are several defendants, the indebtedness of each should be alleged. Britton v. Gregg, 96 Ill. App. 29.

Positive verification.— The verification of a petition to the effect that the allegations contained therein are true as far as they come within the knowledge of affiant, and that so far as derived from the knowledge of others he believes them to be true, which is positive as to the amount of the debt, is sufficient. Meinhard v. Neill, 85 Ga. 265, 11 S. E. 613.

Necessity of restatement in prayer.— If the amount claimed to be due be stated in the body of the petition, it need not be again stated in that portion of the petition which asks for the attachment. Shaffer v. Sundwall, 33 Iowa 579.

The omission of the word "dollars" after a statement of amount is supplied by a correct statement of the amount in the direction to issue an attachment therefor. De Bebian v. Gola, 64 Md. 262, 21 Atl. 275.

In Georgia the debt need not be sworn to with the same positiveness as is required in an allegation as to the grounds. Neal v. Gordon, 60 Ga. 112.

In North Carolina it appears by the early cases to have been sufficient to state that plaintiff had good reason to believe that defendant had damaged him in a sum stated.

indebtedness, caused by miscalculation or inadvertence, will be disregarded, where it is evident that plaintiff has acted in good faith.[5] The recital of an indebtedness is prima facie and not conclusive evidence thereof.[6]

(2) Affidavits by Attorneys or Agents. In some states the rule requiring the amount of the indebtedness to be definitely shown by positive allegations has been relaxed on behalf of attorneys and agents so as to permit them to swear to the same on information and belief,[7] or to swear positively to the indebtedness without disclosing knowledge of the facts on which they base their allegation.[8]

(3) Particulars of Indebtedness. While it is better, and sometimes necessary, that particulars of the debt should be given, or facts should be stated, which will satisfy the officer of the existence of the indebtedness claimed,[9] there are authorities to the effect that the ultimate fact only need be stated, and not the probative facts out of which the indebtedness arose.[10]

(4) Joint Indebtedness. An allegation that two defendants named are indebted to plaintiffs,[11] or that defendants are copartners,[12] sufficiently alleges a

Under the Louisiana code of practice an agent must swear from his own knowledge and not from his belief as was formerly permissible. Hicks v. Duncan, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 314.

An affidavit by an attorney positive in form is insufficient if it proceeds to state that the only knowledge which affiant has on the subject was derived from plaintiff and his agent, since such an affidavit amounts to no more than a mere statement that affiant was told that defendant was indebted in the sum mentioned (Streissguth v. Reigelman, 75 Wis. 212, 43 N. W. 1116), or where it adds that affiant's information is from letters written by plaintiff and a sworn statement of the account in affiant's possession (Trautmann v. Schwalm, 80 Wis. 275, 50 N. W. 99).

joint indebtedness. Where it is sought to attach the property of one joint debtor the affidavit need not state a joint indebtedness or take notice of the other,[13] and if the property of one joint debtor may be attached, an affidavit alleging the indebtedness of both is sufficient to authorize a judgment against one.[14]

(5) Unliquidated Demands. In an action to recover unliquidated damages special facts and circumstances must be set out, so as to enable the court to judge of the probable amount of damages sustained and recoverable, and to determine the amount for which the levy may be made.[15]

(6) Justice of Claim. The omission of the affidavit to conform to a requirement that plaintiff must state that his claim "is just,"[16] that defendant "is justly indebted" to plaintiff,[17] or that affiant believes plaintiff is justly entitled to

Sufficiency.— An affidavit that "the plaintiffs are justly entitled to recover" the sum claimed is sufficient. Gutman v. Virginia Iron Co., 5 W. Va. 22. Omission of "justly."— The mere statement that defendant is indebted has been recover[18] will render it insufficient. However, if an implication of the justice of the demand necessarily arises from the language employed,[19] or if the indebtedness of defendant is clearly and positively stated and sworn to,[20] failure to comply strictly with the statute will not vitiate the affidavit, especially where the substance of the necessary allegation appears by the duly verified declaration in the action.[21]

(7) Variance Between Affidavit and Pleading. Immaterial variance between the affidavit and the declaration or complaint in stating the amount of the indebtedness claimed,[22] or a claim in the pleading of an amount greater[23] or even in some cases less[24] than that alleged in the affidavit will not ordinarily vitiate the proceedings, especially where the sum claimed can be ascertained by computation.[25]

(8) Offsets and Counter-Claims — (a) In General. Absolute compliance with statutory provisions requiring the affidavit to show that defendant is indebted to plaintiff in an amount specified, or that the latter is entitled to recover such an amount, over and above all legal payments, set-offs, or counter-claims is necessary to confer jurisdiction to issue the writ,[26] although inability to

Identification of claim.— A statement that there are no counter-claims to the "cause of action" sufficiently refers to the claim on which the action is brought, although no complaint accompanies the application. Maury v. American Motor Co., 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 657, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 316. And an affidavit in an action on several distinct claims need not specify the exact amount of an offset existing in defendant's favor may excuse an uncertain allegation in respect thereto.[27]

(b) KNOWLEDGE. If it is also required to appear that plaintiff is entitled to recover the sum claimed, over and above all counter-claims known to him, the fact of the non-existence of the counter-claims to his knowledge should be so alleged that the court may see that affiant has personal knowledge of the facts, or that his information on the subject is such as to enable him to form a well-grounded belief on the subject.[28] If the affidavit is not made by plaintiff, a statement that the amount is due over and above all counter-claims known to deponent in New York, at least, is wholly insufficient.[29] There is a class of cases, however, which hold that a bare statement by plaintiff that the amount is due over and above all counterclaims is sufficient, without the addition of a statement as to the knowledge of the non-existence of counter-claims,[30] and in some jurisdictions it is sufficient to specify the amount of the indebtedness, over and above all legal set-offs, "as near as may be," either in the language state the non-existence of counter-claims as to each item. U. S. Net, etc., Co. v. Alexander, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 147 [disapproving Murray v. Hankin, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 37, 3 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 342, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 511].

Necessity of stating facts.— In Farrington v. Root, 10 Misc. (N. Y.) 347, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 126, 63 N. Y. St. 410, it was held to be sufficient to show presumptively the absence of counter-claims; but in Livingston v. Lakwitz, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 119, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 1083, it was held that an affidavit in the language of the statute which failed to state the facts from which the conclusion was drawn was insufficient, and that there should have been an allegation as to whether or not there were any counter-claims, and if so for how much. An affidavit stating that defendant has a counter-claim but failing to state that there is any balance due plaintiff or to show the amount that is due is insufficient, although the gross amount of plaintiff's claim is alleged. Morrison v. Ream, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 244.

"Over and above all discounts" is not the equivalent of the statutory requirement of the statement of an indebtedness "over all payments and set-offs." Solinger v. Patrick, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 408.

Set-offs "or" counter-claims.—A statement of the amount claimed, over and above all set-off "or" counter-claims, substantially complies with the requirement that plaintiff shall show that the amount claimed is due over and above all set-offs "and" counter-claims. O'Conor v. Roark, 108 Cal. 173, 41 Pac. 465.

27. Ignorance of amount of offsets.— An affidavit stating that plaintiff is indebted to defendant in some small amount but that he is ignorant of the exact sum was held to be sufficient. Turner v. McDaniel, 1 McCord (S. C.) 552. And a statement that the indebtedness to plaintiff may be subject to a set-off for an unascertained sum which on final settlement will be due to defendant from plaintiff was held not to be defective for uncertainty. Sufficiency.— An affidavit by plaintiff's agent that a certain sum is due plaintiff from defendant "over and above all offsets and counter-claims known to deponent, or to said plaintiff," is sufficient. Mallary v. Allen, 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 287, 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 338, 1 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 316, in which case it was said that the words "known to him" need not be used to give jurisdiction but may be omitted as they were doubtless intended to be in relief of the conscience of affiant. An allegation by plaintiff that defendants are justly indebted to him in a stated sum "over all set-offs or counter-claims that the said defendants might have against this plaintiff to his knowledge," is a sufficient compliance with the requirement that plaintiff must show that he is entitled to recover a sum stated over and above all counter-claims known to him. of the statute,[31] or by expressions substantially equivalent,[32] unless the statutory language is necessary to the validity of the affidavit.[33]

(c) Affidavit by Assignee of Claim. With respect to assignees of claims who are themselves plaintiffs, it is sufficient for them to state the non-existence of counter-claims as to their knowledge, and it is not necessary to make any statements as to the existence of counter-claims against their assignors.[34]

(d) Affidavit by Attorney or Agent. An affidavit by an attorney or agent must disclose such means of knowledge as will satisfy the court that he is competent to speak upon the subject;[35] and if affiant establishes that he is possessed of sufficient knowledge on the subject, his statement as to the non-existence of counter-claims will be sufficient.[36]

(e) Affidavit on Behalf of Corporation. Statements made by officers of corporations whose official duties presumably afford them adequate means of knowledge, that there are no counter-claims known to plaintiff, or that they know personally that there are no counter-claims in favor of defendant, or like statements, will ordinarily be sufficient.[37]

(f) Affidavit on Behalf of Joint Parties. One joint plaintiff may state that no counter-claims exist to the knowledge of all the plaintiffs,[38] for in such a case it will be presumed that matters positively sworn to were within the personal knowledge of affiant, unless it is apparent that he could not have such knowledge.[39]

(G) Maturity of Debt — (1) DEBT DUE. If the attachment can be issued only where there is a present indebtedness, the affidavit must affirmatively show that the debt upon which the action is brought was actually due at the time the action was commenced, or the affidavit made.[40] This requirement is satisfied by a statement that defendant is indebted,[41] or that the sum claimed is justly due;[42] and it has been held that the statement of a cause of action in the petition showing the right to immediate compensation will control a statement in the affidavit that the debt has not matured.[43] If the debt, although treated as due, has not actually matured it may be shown that it was agreed that it should become due on the happening of a certain contingency, and that the contemplated contingency has occurred.[44]

(2) IMMATURED DEBT. If an attachment is permitted to secure a debt which is not due the affidavit must appropriately show that the demand has not

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 280.

Necessity of positive statement.— That the amount demanded is actually due must be positively stated. Allegations on information and belief are insufficient. Ross v. Steen, 20 Fla. 443. But the maturity of the debt need not be stated in express terms, and it will be sufficient if the affidavit state, "the amount at the least, which, the affiant believes, the plaintiff is justly entitled to recover." Ruhl v. Rogers, 29 W. Va. 779, 2 S. E. 798.

An allegation that an account was stated between plaintiff and defendant and that upon such statement a specified balance was found to be due from defendant to plaintiff sufficiently shows a breach of contract. Johnston v. Ferris, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 302, 12 N. Y. St. 666.

Money loaned — Presumption.— In an action to recover a loan, if no specified period for repayment is stated, the loan will be presumed to have become due at the time the affidavit was sworn to. American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Voisin, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 85.

Sufficiency — Contradictory statements.— If facts showing a present indebtedness are stated the affidavit will not be vitiated by an allegation that defendant will be indebted. McCartney v. Branch Bank, 3 Ala. 709.

Exceptions to rule.— Unless so prescribed it need not be alleged that the demand is due (Mastin v. Kansas City First Nat. Bank, 65 Mo. 16), or when it will become due (Munzenheimer v. Manhattan Cloak, etc., Co., 79 Tex. 318, 15 S. Existence of demand.— Where the statute requires that the affidavit shall state that "the amount of the debt or demand claimed and charged against the opposite party is actually an existing debt or demand," as distinguished from a contingent liability, a statement that defendants are "indebted in the just and full sum," etc., is not sufficient. Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, 22 Fla. 391.

Clerical omission.— An affidavit will not be vitiated for the omission of the word "is," where an intention to allege that defendant is indebted is manifest. Buchanan v. Sterling, 63 Ga. 227.

43. Aultman v. Daggs, 50 Mo. App. 280.

44. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Columbia Spinning Co., 21 N. Y. App. Div. 383, 47 N. Y. Suppl. 442, also holding that an affidavit alleging an agreement that in case of defendant's failure, all claims or demands held by plaintiff against it should, at the option of plaintiff, become due and payable, and also alleging defendant's failure, sufficiently shows that the agreement was in existence on or prior to the date of the affidavit and that it was in effect on that date. It was further held in this case that the agreement being set out in substance, there was no necessity for submitting it to the court for inspection.

Necessity of showing right to treat debt as due.— An affidavit is insufficient if it purports to state a cause of action, based on a breach of the conditions of a bond whereby plaintiff elects to treat the bond as due, unless it is shown that the bond gives such right of election. Livingston v. Lakwitz, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 119, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 1083.

matured,[45] as well as the time of its maturity.[46] The affidavit must also set up the existence of the particular ground or grounds upon which an attachment to secure this class of debts may issue,[47] and must set up facts or allege reasons[48] for the immediate issue of the writ sufficient to satisfy the officer to whom application is made of the propriety of allowing it to issue.[49]

(3) Debts Due and Debts Not Due. An affidavit setting forth matured and immatured debts is not defective for that reason,[50] or for the reason that it discloses that a part of the demand is not yet due.[51] If it is sufficient as to one claim and defective as to the other it may be sustained as to the former and disregarded as to the latter,[52] or the insufficient allegations may be regarded as surplusage.[53] It has been held, however, that the affidavit need not show how much of the debt is due and how much not due.[54]

If the instrument sued on is set forth in the affidavit and shows that the debt will mature in the future it will be sufficient. Panhandle Nat. Bank v. Still, 84 Tex. 339, 19 S. W. 479.

Admissions in the complaint that the debt is not due may be considered in determining the sufficiency of the affidavit. Lederer v. Rosenthal, 99 Wis. 235, 74 N. W. 971.

In Texas it will be sufficient if such allegation is made in the petition. Munzenheimer v. Manhattan Cloak, etc., Co., 79 Tex. 318, 15 S. W. 389 [overruling dictum in Cox v. Reinhardt, 41 Tex. 591]; Bennett v. Rosenthal, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 156. And see Hinzie v. Moody, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 26, 20 S. W. 769.

Removal of self or property.— If an attachment to secure such a debt is permissible where the debtor has removed, or is removing, or about to remove himself or his property without the state or other prescribed territory, such removal or contemplated removal must be sufficiently shown (Shockley v. Bulloch, 18 Ga. 283; Kleinwort v. Klingender, 14 La. Ann. 96; Friedlander v. Myers, 2 La. Ann. 920; Crooke v. Rutherford, 13 La. 479; Millandon v. Foucher, 8 La. 582), and, when so required by statute, it must also be shown that not enough of the debtor's property to satisfy the claim of plaintiff or the claim of other creditors will be left within the state (Hey v. Harding, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 771, 53 S. W. 33; Runyan v. Morgan, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 210). Failure of an affidavit for attachment against partners to state that the individuals have not enough property to satisfy the demand sued on is cured by a judgment sustaining the attachment, where no motion is made during the progress of the action to discharge the attachment on that ground. O'Connor v. Sherley, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 735, 52 S. W. 1056.

Where the debt matures pending the action, an affidavit sufficient to authorize an attachment for an immatured debt may be amended by adding a ground which did not exist when the attachment issued. Hey v. Harding, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 771, 53 S. W. 33.

48. An affidavit which states mere conclusions and fails to allege facts on which the court may base its judgment is insufficient. Mosher v. Bay Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 503, 66 N. W. 384; Howell v. Dickerman, 88 Mich. 361, 50 N. W. 306.

49. Fraud in negotiating immatured notes by the maker and indorser thereof is a sufficient reason for the attachment of their property. Mosher v. Bay Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 503, 66 N. W. 384.

The disposition of property by chattel mortgage and bill of sale which is consistent with an honest purpose to secure just claims will not warrant the issue of an attachment. Pierce v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 125, 53 N. W. 16, 18 L. R. A. 486; Ripon Knitting Works v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 129, 53 N. W. 17. But an affidavit which sets up the surreptitious transfer from defendant's place of business to a private residence of a portion of a stock of goods purchased from plaintiff on credit, the disposition of other stock to personal friends, financially irresponsible, the mortgaging of the stock to its full value, and false representation to other creditors that plaintiff's claim had been paid, is sufficient to authorize the issue of the writ before the maturity of the debt. If attachment on more than one ground is permitted it will be sufficient to allege one separate and distinct ground without stating the existence of elements of the other. Thus where an attachment is authorized where the debtor is about to dispose of his property to defraud his creditors, or is about to remove from the state and refuses to provide for the payment of the debt on its maturity, if the application is based on the former ground, a refusal to secure the debt need not be alleged (Danforth v. Carter, 1 Iowa 546; Pitkins v. Boyd, 4 Greene (Iowa) 255; and if non-residence is sufficiently shown to authorize an attachment, other provisions permitting the issue of the writ, where defendant has departed from the state with the intent to remove his effects therefrom, are inapplicable and need not be stated (Phelps v. Young, 1 Ill. 327).

Joint debtors. — If the ground of attachment is insufficiently stated as to one of two joint debtors an attachment against the property of both is unauthorized. Hamilton v. Knight, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 25.

Not confined to ground stated in petition. — Though the petition states facts authorizing an attachment, plaintiff is not confined to the ground stated, but in his affidavit may rely on other statutory grounds. Houston v. Woolley, 37 Mo. App. 15, where the petition was to recover for a tort authorizing an attachment, and the affidavit relied on non-residence.

Probative facts requisite to establish the ultimate facts required by the statute need not be stated. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203.

Under a statute permitting an attachment on a debt for "necessaries" furnished, an affidavit stating that the claim was for coal sold and delivered to defendant and further stating that it was for necessaries prima facie states a ground for attachment. Collins v. Bingham, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 533.

All the specified grounds need not be set out in an affidavit to procure an attachment under the Pennsylvania act of Mar. 17, 1869. Boyd v. Lippencott, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 585, 44 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 46.

Different grounds as to two defendants. — An affidavit alleging that one defendant was a non-resident and that the other was about set forth cumulatively or conjunctively.[58] Where defendant relies on two or more grounds and some of them are defectively stated, if one ground is properly alleged the affidavit is sufficient to warrant the issue of an attachment.[59]

(b) Inconsistent and Disjunctive Allegations. In stating two or more grounds care must be taken to avoid inconsistency or contradiction which would introduce an element of uncertainty and indefiniteness and render it impossible to determine which ground is relied on.[60] Hence, the statement of two or more grounds disjunctively or in the alternative will as a rule render the affidavit useless for any purpose,[61] even though one of the grounds is insufficiently stated;[62] but two or more phases of the same fact, or different facts of the same nature, which constitute but a single ground for attachment may be stated disjunctively.[63] The incon-to depart the state will authorize an attachment against both. Moeller v. Quarrier, 14 Ill. 280.

sistency is not fatal, however, if one averment does not necessarily negative the other,[64] and an affidavit is not defective because of statements in the disjunctive where it is beyond the power of plaintiff to designate the precise mode, because of doubt as to the purpose or intent of the debtor, or for any other sufficient reason,[65] or where it is evident that defendant could not be surprised or prejudiced by the alternative statement.[66] An objection to the affidavit for a defect of this character should be taken by motion to quash or that plaintiff elect,[67] and it has been held that it cannot be presented for the first time on appeal.[68]

It is insufficient to allege that the debtor "has absconded" where the statute requires it to be shown that the debtor "absconds" (Brown v. McCluskey, 26 Ga. 577; Levy v. Millman, 7 Ga. 167; Selleck v. Twesdall, Dudley (Ga.) 196), or that the debtor is "removing or about to remove from the state" (Selleck v. Twesdall, Dudley (Ga.)

required than that there shall be a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute respecting this ground therefor,[70] by the statement of facts from which the court or officer can determine whether the departure, contemplated departure, or concealment, as the case may be, is sufficiently shown to entitle plaintiff to an attachment.[71] An affidavit made in good faith on belief that defendant absconded from his creditors is sufficient to sustain the attachment, although in fact at the time defendant resided within the state.[72]

(b) Citizenship or Residence of Parties. If it is required that the creditor[73] or the absconding or concealed debtor[74] be a citizen or a resident of the state or some prescribed portion thereof, those facts must appear by appropriate allegations.[75]

196), or to allege that the debtor "hath absconded" or "hath removed" where the statute requires it to be shown that the "debtor is removing out of the county privately or absconds or conceals himself" (Kennedy v. Dillon, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 354; Hopkins v. Suttles, Hard. (Ky.) 95 note). An averment that defendant has absconded "from the county" is not equivalent to the required statement that he has absconded "from the place of his usual abode" (Jewel v. Howe, 3 Watts (Pa.) 144); and an allegation that defendant is absent so that process cannot be served on him does not show a departure with intent to defraud creditors and to avoid the service of a summons (Love v. Young, 69 N. C. 65); nor does an allegation that he has left the state show that he has absconded (Mulherrin v. Hill, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 58). That the debtor is about to remove to avoid the service of process is insufficient to show that he has actually removed or is removing privately (Wallis v. Murphy, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 15), and an allegation that the debtor is about to abscond is not equivalent to stating, as required by statute, that he absconds or conceals himself, or is absconding or concealing himself (Bennett v. Avant, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 151).

Ketchum v. Vidvard, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 138.

Residence within the state will be implied from statements that defendant conceals himself therein (Matter of Warner, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 325; Griffith v. Robinson, 19 Tex. 219) and consequently that he was indebted within the state where an indebtedness is al-

(c) Period of Absence. When it is required to be shown that defendant absconded within a prescribed time after the injury complained of, such fact must be sufficiently averred or appear by fair inference.[76] It is not necessary, however, to state the period of defendant's absence, or that an attempt has been made to conceal his absence, where the residence of the debtor within the state during such period is a matter of defense.[77]

(d) Intent — aa. To Avoid Service of Process. If the creditor relies on the fact or is required to state that the contemplated or actual departure or the concealment is to avoid the service of process, he must allege it in such a manner that the intent can be judicially inferred.[78] If the object of the concealment is alleged to be for the purpose of avoiding the service of summons, an allegation of an intent to defraud creditors is not necessary.[79]

bb. Intent to Injure or Defraud Creditors. An affidavit is not sufficient that fails to charge as prescribed by the statute that defendant's action is to the injury of his creditors,[80] or is with intent to defraud creditors.[81]

(4) Fraud. There are decisions to the effect that a general charge of fraud or that the debt sued on was fraudulently contracted will be sufficient;[82] but the

Efforts to serve.— Proof that plaintiff procured eight alias summonses which he attempted to have served by five different persons and that defendant was aware of such attempts sufficiently shows the existence of an intent to avoid the service of process. Finn v. Mehrbach, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 250, 30 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 242. And a statement that defendant "being an adult and a resident of the city of New York, keeps himself concealed therein with the intent to avoid service of the summons, and that, after proper and diligent effort to ascertain the place of the sojourn of the defendant, same cannot be ascertained" is sufficient. Fraud in incurring liability as ground of attachment see supra, V, G.

Fraudulently contracted or incurred liability.— The use of the disjunctive "or" in an averment in the affidavit in attachment that defendant "fraudulently contracted a debt or incurred the obligation respecting which the suit is brought" will not invalidate the affidavit. Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659.

weight of authority is to the effect that the specific facts relied on to establish the fraud, or from which the court is asked to draw the inference of fraud, must be set out[83] in such a manner as to justify the court or officer in granting the application.[84] If, however, the affidavit charges the fraud in the language of the statute, without setting out the specific fraud complained of, in some states plaintiff will be permitted to take depositions to explain uncertain expressions in the affidavit,[85] to establish the specific acts at the hearing,[86] or to prove the same upon a motion to dissolve.[87] Where it is necessary to show that alleged fraudulent statements were in writing, signed by the debtor or his agent, the statement must be attached to the affidavit or its substance set out.[88]

(5) Fraudulent Disposition, Removal, or Secretion of Property — (a) In General. Although there are exceptions,[89] the general rule is, that an affidavit, based on the disposition, removal, or concealment by a debtor of his property, or his purpose to dispose of or secrete the same, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors in the collection of their just claims, should state such specific facts and circumstances as will justify a conclusion as to the commission of the overt acts charged, and the existence of the fraudulent intent.[90] Although it is the better practice to set out this ground according to the terms of the statute, yet mere informalities or clerical omissions in the statements made are insufficient to defeat the right to the attachment if the requirements are substantially complied with,[91] but the omission of material statements or the failure to state in substance the essential requirements of the statute will render the affidavit insufficient.[92] Allegations not required by the statute need not be made.[93]

Suspicious evidence.— In Frank v. Levie, 5 Rob. (N. (b) INTENT. The fraudulent intent is an essential element and must be averred.[94] It need not, however, be stated positively or be conclusively established by the facts; it is enough if a fair inference of the existence of the intent can be deduced.[95]

(c) PROPERTY REMOVED OR DISPOSED OF. In some jurisdictions it is necessary to describe or designate the property which has been or is about to be disposed of,[96] or the quantity of the property removed.[97]

(6) NON-RESIDENCE — (a) IN GENERAL. If an attachment is sought on the ground of non-residence, the affidavit should state facts and circumstances sufficient to authorize an inference that the debtor is within the terms of the statute,[98]

N. C. 593, 17 S. E. 573, stating that the syllabus paragraph in this connection at Sheldon v. Kivett, 110 N. C. 408, 14 S. E. 970, is misleading and refers to an order of publication); that ordinary process of law cannot be secured (Shockley v. Bulloch, 18 Ga. 283; Wharton v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 510); that defendant is insolvent or a non-resident (George v. Hoskins, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 63, 30 S. W. 406); an intent to defraud creditors (Sherrill v. Fay, 14 Iowa 292; State Branch Bank v. White, 12 Iowa 141); or that the property disposed of was not a part of the debtor's homestead (Grollman v. Lipsitz, 43 S. C. 329, 21 S. E. 272).

Such unnecessary averment will not vitiate the affidavit, however. Thus an affidavit which avers that the debtor is concealing his goods will not be vitiated by containing the reason of the creditor's belief of that fact. Spear v. King, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 276.

An intent to defraud creditors generally need not be shown. Wakefield v. Bruce, 5 Ont. Pr. 77.

An intent to defraud creditors is not charged by a statement that the debtor is about to dispose of his property with intent to prevent plaintiffs and other creditors from collecting their claims. Kerchner v. McCormac, 25 S. C. 461.

If the allegations are as consistent with an honest intent on defendant's part as a dishonest one it will not warrant an attachment. Bernhard v. Cohen, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 271 [affirmed in 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 794, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 363].

Non-residence as ground of attachment see supra, V, L.

Sufficiency of knowledge.— An allegation on personal knowledge that plaintiff knows defendant, that he is a non-resident, and resides in a certain town in an adjoining state, is sufficient to base the inference of satisfactory knowledge of non-residence, although plaintiff was a stranger to the original transaction. Foster v. Rogers, 31 Misc. (N. Y.) 14, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 652.

That "the debtor absconds from his creditors and is not at this time within the state, nor within reach of the process of the state" (Croxall v. Hutchings, 12 N. J. L. 84) or "has left the state," (Mulherrin v. Hill, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 58) is not a sufficient allegation of non-residence. Nor does an allegation "that said ——— resides without the limits of this State" set out a ground for attachment. Black v. Scanlon, 48 Ga. 12.

Residence unknown.— Under a statute declaring that a writ of attachment may issue if the affidavit states that defendant's residence is unknown and cannot be ascertained, a statement that defendant's residence is unknown and cannot be ascertained is sufficient, although the affidavit states that, at a time prior to the issue of the writ, defendant was a resident of the state. Barth v. Burnham, 105 Wis. 548, 81 N. W. 809.

Not residing within the state.— If it is necessary to state that defendant is not a resident of "or residing in, the State," a mere statement that defendant "is not a resident of this State, so that the process of this Court cannot be served upon him" is not sufficient. Lane v. Fellows, 1 Mo. 353.

Absence from state.— A charge that defendant was a non-resident does not sufficiently show he was absent from the state. Bentley v. Clark, 3 Dana (Ky.) 564.

Residence one month prior to affidavit.— The omission of the word "not" from the statutory averment that defendant is a non-resident, and has not resided in this state for one month next preceding the date of the affidavit, renders the affidavit a nullity. Freer v. White, 91 Mich. 74, 51 N. W. 807.

Office within jurisdiction.— Under a stat-although there are many decisions to the effect that a positive statement as to non-residence will suffice, without detailing the facts on which the statement is based.[99] If there is more than one defendant, the affidavit must show that all of them are non-residents.[1]

(b) PLAINTIFF'S RESIDENCE. Where the ground of the application is that defendant is a non-resident, it is sometimes necessary that plaintiff should show that he is a resident of the state, and if this allegation is necessary its absence will invalidate the affidavit.[2]

ute requiring it to be shown that defendant is a non-resident of the city, and has not an office within the city where he regularly transacts business, an affidavit which merely alleges that defendant is a non-resident of the city of New York, without any allegation as to an office in the city, is insufficient. Niagara Falls Paper Co. v. Sterling, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 171, 25 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 251.

Residents and non-residents.— Under a statute providing for attachment against the property of non-residents only, a statement that the proceeding is instituted against a defendant named and others unknown who "are not all residents of the state" is clearly insufficient. Powers v. Hurst, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 229.

Presumption.— Under a statute dispensing with an undertaking where the ground of attachment is non-residence, if no undertaking is mentioned in the affidavit and a summons is returned not found, it will be presumed that the non-residence of defendant was properly alleged. Carper v. Richards, 13 Ohio St. 219.

Under the Maryland statute which requires that the creditor shall make affidavit that he "knows or is credibly informed and verily believes that the ——— is not a citizen of the State, and that he doth not reside therein," it is sufficient to aver that the defendant, not being a citizen of the state and not residing therein, is indebted (Gunby v. Porter, 80 Md. 402, 31 Atl. 324); but where there are several defendants as to whom it is stated that they are not citizens of the state and do not reside therein, it is unnecessary to add that they "are not citizens, nor is either of them a citizen of Maryland, and do not nor does either of them reside therein" (Franklin v. Claflin, 49 Md. 24).

1. Corbit v. Corbit, 50 N. J. L. 363, 13 Atl. 178.

Sufficiency.—Where a partnership is spoken of by its partnership name and said to reside or not to reside in a given place, it will be presumed that the members of the firm reside or do not reside at such place. Chambers v. Sloan, 19 Ga. 84. So, too, an allegation that both defendants in attachment reside in another state and have not resided within the state for three months will be construed to refer to the defendants, and each of them. Dorr v. Clark, 7 Mich. 310.

2. In New York this is necessary in an action against a foreign corporation (Ladenburg v. Commercial Bank, 87 Hun (N. Y.) 269, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 321, 67 N. Y. St. 466 [reversing 84 Hun (N. St. 542), but is unnecessary in an action against an individual (Hawkins v. Pakas, 39 N. Y. App. Div. 506, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 317. See also Matter of Brown, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 316).

In Alabama although no one but a resident is entitled to an attachment against a non-resident, it is not necessary that the affidavit should state that plaintiff is a resident. Peters v. Bower, Minor (Ala.) 69.

Sufficiency of allegation.— A mere recital of plaintiff's residence following his name in the commencement of the application is insufficient, although the verification is to all matters set forth in the application (Payne v. Young, 8 N. Y. 158, Seld. Notes (N. Y.) 74; Staples v. Fairchild, 3 N. Y. 41; People v. Griffith, Lalor (N. Y.) 447), as is an allegation that plaintiff is engaged in business within the state (Ladenburg v. Commercial Bank, 87 Hun (N. Y.) 269, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 821, 67 N. Y. St. 466 [reversing 84 Hun (N. Y.) 503, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 873, 66 N. Y. St. 153, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 234, and affirmed in 146 N. Y. 406, 42 N. E. 543]). But an application showing that plaintiffs carry on business within the state, and that one or more of them is a resident thereof, is sufficient to authorize the issue of the attachment, although one of the plaintiffs is a non-

(c) Defendant's Residence. If required, defendant's place of residence must be alleged,[3] or the affidavit must state that on diligent inquiry it cannot be ascertained.[4]

(d) Cause of Action Arising on Indebtedness Within State. If the attachment cannot issue unless the cause of action arose within the state, the omission of an allegation to that effect is fatal.[5] Where, to authorize the attachment, it should appear that defendant was indebted within the state, that fact may be shown by alleging that the contract was made within the state or that the creditors were residents thereof.[6]

(e) Inability to Serve Process. Where, because of his non-residence, defendant cannot be served with process, the inability so to serve him must especially appear.[7]

(f) Property Within or Without State. Likewise if it is necessary to show that the non-resident debtor has property within the state subject to attachment,[8] as where both parties are non-residents,[9] or that defendant has not sufficient property within the state of his residence[10] to answer the debt, those facts must resident. Renard v. Hargous, 13 N. Y. 259 [affirming 2 Duer (N. Y.) 540].

Remedy of defendant.— If defendant seeks to avail himself of the non-residence of plaintiff, who has alleged residence, he should make his defense by plea. Amos v. Allnutt, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 215.

Affidavit by assignee.— An allegation that plaintiff's assignor was duly authorized to transact business within the state is sufficient without alleging the facts showing such authority. Lumley v. Anatron Chemical Co., 56 N. Y. App. Div. 174, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 663.

3. Cantrell v. Letwinger, 44 Miss. 437.

Ohio — Transference of cause.— In Ohio, where attachment proceedings, commenced before a justice on an affidavit that defendant is not a resident of the county, are transferred to a court in which it is necessary to state that defendant is not a resident of the state, an additional affidavit alleging non-residence within the state is required. Krumm v. Krauss, 26 Ohio St. 529.

The debtor's actual residence need not be shown. James v. Dowell, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 333.

Voluntary residence.—Where the statutory ground was voluntarily remaining within the Confederate lines, the omission of the word "voluntarily" was held to vitiate the affidavit. Bell v. Hall, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 288.

A statement that defendant's residence was at a stated place two years prior to the application, and that he has departed therefrom, is no evidence that his residence was there at the time the affidavit was made. Baldwin v. Ferguson, 35 Ill. App. 393.

Where there are several defendants, the place of residence of each defendant, or that such place cannot be ascertained, should be alleged. Britton v. Gregg, 96 Ill. App. 29.

Sufficiency.—A statement that defendant is an inhabitant of another state will not supply the omission. Thompson v. Chambers, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 488.

7. Wilson v. Outlaw, Minor (Ala.) 196; Thompson v. Chambers, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 488; James v. Dowell, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 333; Page v. Ford, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 266. Contra, Conklin v. Harris, 5 Ala. 213.

A positive allegation made on personal knowledge that defendant is a non-resident, resides at a stated place in another state, is there engaged in business, and that personal service of the summons cannot be made with due diligence within the state is sufficient. Smith v. Mahon, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 40.

Surplusage.— If such an allegation is not required this addition is mere surplusage and not a ground for quashing the attachment. McMahan v. Boardman, 29 Tex. 170.

8. Windley v. Bradway, 77 N. C. 333.

It will be sufficient to show property in any county within the state. Anderson v. Johnson, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 558.

The specific kind of property, or that plaintiff can prove the debtor's ownership, need not be proved. Bates v. Robinson, 8 Iowa 318.

Allegation in bill.— It is sufficient if the bill states the existence of a legal or equitable estate belonging to the debtor within the limits of the state. St. Mary's Bank v. St. Johns, 25 Ala. 566.

9. Ward v. McKenzie, 33 Tex. 297, 7 Am. Rep. 261; Wright v. Ragland, 18 Tex. 289; Ward v. Lathrop, 11 Tex. 287.

10. Cobb v. Miller, 9 Ala. 499; Cobb v. Force, 6 Ala. 468, decided under a statute providing that where an attachment issues at the instance of one non-resident against another, it must be shown that the latter has sufficiently appear. While it has been held that an affidavit for a foreign attachment against the heirs of a judgment debtor must show, where no direct declaration is filed, that there is no personal representative or that there are no personal assets to discharge the debt, it has also been held that in suing out an attachment against the heirs of a non-resident debtor it is not necessary to allege that there are no personal assets within the state.[11]

(g) EXHAUSTION OF LEGAL REMEDIES. Under a statute authorizing the enforcement of a foreign judgment against a non-resident by a bill in equity, where the creditor has exhausted his legal remedies, it must appear that he has resorted to and exhausted such remedies against the debtor in the state of their common residence.[12]

(h) CONCLUSIVENESS. An averment of non-residence is not conclusive between the parties or their privies.[13]

(7) REFUSAL TO PAY OR SECURE DEBT. Under a statute permitting an attachment on the ground that defendant has property which he refuses to give either in payment or security for the debt it is not necessary to state the place where the demand for payment or security was made,[14] or an intent to defraud creditors.[15]

(i) Negation of Improper Motive. In some of the states it is required that the affidavit shall contain a statement that the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of injuring, vexing, or harassing defendant, and in those states the absence of such an allegation will vitiate it.[16]

(j) Danger of Loss of Debt. Where plaintiff must show that there is a probability of losing his debt that fact should appear by a sufficient allegation.[17] not sufficient property to answer the debt within the state, of his residence, not only within the knowledge but within the belief of the party making the affidavit.

12. Attempt to collect claim.— An averment that plaintiff has unsuccessfully attempted to collect his claim does not show that he has reduced the claim to judgment or exhausted his legal remedies within the meaning of such a statute. Brown v. Pace, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 49 S. W. 355.

Refusal to pay or secure debt as ground of attachment see supra, V, N.

Where there are two defendants an allegation that the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of injuring or harassing the defendant is insufficient. Gunst v. Pelham, 74 Tex. 586, 12 S. W. 233; Perrill v. Kaufman, 72 Tex. 214, 12 S. W. 125. So, too, is an allegation that the attachment is not brought to injure or harass defendants. The words "or either of them" should be added. Kildare Lumber Co. v. Atlanta Bank, 91 Tex. 95, 41 S. W. 64.

Sufficiency.—An allegation that the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of "injuring and harassing" defendant does not comply with the requirement that it must be alleged that the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of "injuring or harassing" defendant. Moody v. Levy, 58 Tex. 532.

17. Napper v. Noland, 9 Port. (Ala.) 218; Sheffield v. Gay, 32 Tex. 225; Wright v. Smith, 19 Tex. 297; Messner v. Hutchins, 17 Tex. 597.

Several plaintiffs.— An affidavit in attachment by two plaintiffs which alleges that plaintiff will probably lose his debt is insufficient. Sarrazin v. Hotman, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 40 S. W. 629.

Unliquidated damages.— Under the Connecticut statute prescribing the form of oath to be indorsed upon the writ and requiring a statement that plaintiff is in danger of losing the debt in this writ, an oath that plaintiff is in danger of losing the debt in this writ is sufficient, although the action is on the case for unliquidated damages. Gillett v. Johnson, 30 Conn. 392.

Removal of property.— Such an allegation is unnecessary, where the ground assigned for the attachment is the removal of property. Wright v. Smith, 19 Tex. 297.

The reason for the apprehension or danger of losing the debt should be shown by stating the facts upon which the belief of loss is based. Keigher v. McCormick, 11 Minn. 545.

Attachment on Sunday — Clerical error.— An affidavit, made under a statute permitting an attachment to issue in certain cases on Sunday, which states that it will be too late to acquire a lien upon said writ to wait until a subsequent day is a substantial com-

(K) Indebtedness Unsecured. In some jurisdictions it is required that affiant shall state that the indebtedness for which the action is brought has not been secured by any mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, or any pledge of personal property,[18] or if so secured that the security has become valueless.[19] In these jurisdictions compliance with such requirements is necessary.[20] If the ground of attachment is non-residence,[21] or no statutory requirement exists to that effect,[22] or the debt sued on was incurred prior to the passage of the act,[23] such a statement is unnecessary.

(L) Existence of Attachable Property. Unless a statute expressly or impliedly requires the affidavit to show that defendant has property within the jurisdiction or within the state,[24] or subject to execution within the jurisdiction of the court,[25] such a showing is unnecessary. There are, however, holdings that an affidavit for a foreign attachment must show that defendant is the owner of the property sought to be attached.[26]

(M) Description of Property. If a description of property is necessary to inform the officer as to what property he is authorized to levy upon, there must be an allegation sufficient for that purpose,[27] which must be sworn to positively;[28]

pliance with the statutory requirement that in such cases it must be shown that it will be too late for the purpose of acquiring a lien by said writ, etc. Levy v. Elliott, 14 Nev. 435.

Sufficiency.—An affidavit is sufficient although, after stating that the debt is not secured by mortgage or lien upon real or personal property, it fails to add "or any pledge of personal property." Glidden v. Whittier, 46 Fed. 437. An affidavit stating that defendant agreed to secure the debt by a claim held by him against a copartnership, and the note of said firm, but instead sent a note signed by the individual partners, which plaintiff refused to accept and returned, does not show that the debt was secured. Simmons Hardware Co. v. Alturas Commercial Co., (Ida. 1895) 39 Pac. 550.

Void or voidable.—The failure to comply with this statutory requirement renders the attachment voidable at the instance of the attachment debtor, but not void, so that it may be collaterally attacked by a stranger. Scrivener v. Dietz, 68 Cal. 1, 8 Pac. 609.

Aider by petition.—An affidavit defective because failing to show that one of the notes sued upon was not secured is not aided by an amendment of the petition stating that stock held as collateral security was sold in accordance with the pledge, the proceeds credited on the note, and that a balance stated remained due. Fisk v. French, 114 Cal. 400, 46 Pac. 161.

19. Sufficiency.—An affidavit showing that the indebtedness was secured by mortgage, but stating generally that "said mortgage, without any act of plaintiff, or the person to whom the security was given, became valueless," will justify the issue of an attachment. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174, 24 Pac. 113.

Presumption.—If the affidavit fails to state that the security has become valueless without plaintiff's fault, it will be presumed to remain in the hands of plaintiff and to be of value. Consequently the court has no jurisdiction to issue an attachment, and all proceedings had thereon will be void. Murphy v. Montandon, 2 Ida. 1048, 29 Pac. 851, 35 Am. St. Rep. 279.

20. Alternative statement.—An allegation that the debt has not been secured, or if originally so secured the security has become valueless is bad, because in the alternative. Winters v. Pearson, 72 Cal. 553, 14 Pac. 304; Merced Bank v. Morton, 58 Cal. 360; Wilke v. Cohn, 54 Cal. 212.

Sufficiency of description.—A description of the property to be attached, as a stock of goods in a certain store, enumerating the articles composing the stock, is sufficient where the whole stock is sought to be attached, but if the goods have been mingled with others but under a statute requiring plaintiff to state that defendant has property not exempt from execution which he refuses to give either in security or payment, the affidavit need not describe the exempt property.[29]

(N) Prayer. The petition or affidavit should specifically ask that a writ of attachment be granted.[30]

(O) Signature. According to the better practice the affidavit should be signed or subscribed by the party by whom it purports to be made;[31] but a slight variance in the spelling of affiant's name[32] or the signature of the affidavit in the name of the person designated as affiant and of another not named[33] is immaterial.

(P) Verification — (1) IN GENERAL. The affidavit should show that it was duly sworn to,[34] and this should appear by the jurat or certificate of the officer in the same store they should be identified. Mayer v. Brooks, 74 Ga. 526. But an affidavit stating that defendant was indebted on a bill of particulars thereto annexed in a sum named, and that he was in possession of part or all of aforesaid property does not sufficiently describe the property in defendant's possession. Joseph v. Stein, 52 Ga. 332.

Wages — Negativing exemption. — If the wages of a debtor within a certain amount are exempted the affidavit should contain a statement that the wages of the debtor exceeded the amount which was exempt and that the excess only was sought to be attached. Multifariousness. — A bill seeking an attachment on a single claim is not multifarious because it prays for the issue of the attachment against the property in the hands of various persons and seeks an accounting from such persons for their respective dealings with the debtor. Omission of affiant's name from body of affidavit is immaterial if he subscribed it. Rudolf v. McDonald, 6 Nebr. 163.

Neglect of clerk. — Where the blanks in a printed form of complaint under which an attachment issued were filled in by the clerk at plaintiff's request, but the name of plaintiff's attorney was not signed by the clerk until the next day and after other attachments had issued, it was held that the irregular action of the clerk did not vitiate the complaint. A bill in equity in which an attachment is sought should be sworn to. Webb v. Read, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 119. But see Calk v. Chiles, 9 Dana (Ky.) 265, holding that where land is subject to attachment by a bill in equity, it is unnecessary that the bill be sworn to and accompanied by an affidavit.

Necessity of showing competency of affiant. — The provision of the Iowa code of 1873, that, to compel the verification of subsequent pleadings, the verification of a pleading must show the competency of affiant, does not apply to a verified petition to obtain an attachment. Sioux Valley State Bank v. Kellogg, 81 Iowa 124, 46 N. W. 859.

Signature to oath. — It is not essential for affiant to sign the oath. Bates v. Robinson, 8 Iowa 318.

Sufficiency. — An averment that the "facts" set forth in the affidavit are true is a sufficient allegation that the "matters" therein stated are true. Sherrill v. Fay, 14 Iowa 292. An affidavit indorsed at length on the application, setting forth and affirming in detail each matter of fact set out in the ap-

by whom the oath is administered, signed by him with his official designation.[35] It appears, however, that the omission of the officer to sign and certify the affidavit is not fatal if the oath was administered in fact.[36]

(2) AUTHENTICATION.[37] Where the affidavit is taken without the jurisdiction, or in another state, the authority of the officer to administer the oath must be authenticated in a mode prescribed by the laws of the state where it is proposed to use the affidavit.[38]

Authority of officer.— A certificate signed and sealed by B stating that the affidavit was sworn to in another state before him, commissioner in said state to take affidavits to be used or recorded in the state where the attachment is sought, is insufficient to show the authority of the officer. Draper v. Williams, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 574. So where the officer designates himself as "mayor," without stating of what city or other place, he fails to show his authority to administer the oath. Edmondson v. Carnall, 17 Ark. 284. But, although the officer fail to state his official character, the affidavit will be sufficient if by reference to other papers in the record that character is shown (Singleton v. Wofford, 4 Ill. 576) and the court will take judicial knowledge of the signature of its clerk who has failed to sufficiently identify himself (Simon v. Stetter, 25 Kan. 155).

Identification of officer.— A jurat reciting that affiant personally appeared and "having been duly sworn by me, subscribed to the foregoing affidavit," etc., sufficiently shows that the affidavit was sworn and subscribed by affiant before the officer who took the affidavit. Steinam v. Gahwiler, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 30 S. W. 472.

A certificate by the officer who took the affidavit without the state that he is authorized to administer oaths was held to be sufficient. Mineral Point R. Co. v. Keep, 22 Ill. 9, 74 Am. Dec. 124.

Authentication by governor.— A certificate by the governor that the judge's attestation to the certificate is in due form and made by the proper officer, and that full faith and credit are due to all his official acts is sufficient. Washington v. Hodgskin, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 353.

Judge of court of record.— Where the affidavit recites that it was taken before a judge of a designated court, "being a court of record," an authentication that the judge was at the time an associate law judge of said court is insufficient without a further statement that such court was a court of record. Coward v. Dillinger, 56 Md. 59.

Justice of the peace.—The official character of the justice of the peace of another state sufficiently appears by a certificate of the clerk of the county court of the county where he resides stating that he was then acting as justice and was duly commissioned; such certificate being accompanied by the certificate of two commissioners of the same court stating that the person signing the certificate is clerk, and that his official acts are entitled to credit. by a certificate indorsed thereon, the affidavit should bear a sufficient indorsement by an officer showing his approval thereof.[39]

8. Presentation and Filing — a. In General. If it is necessary to file the affidavit at the time of the issue of the attachment, or within a prescribed time thereafter,[40] failure so to do will invalidate the proceedings.[41]

b. Delay After Making. Since the ground of attachment must exist at the time the warrant is issued, any delay between the making of the affidavit and its presentation or filing, during which a change in condition may have taken place, will render the affidavit ineffectual;[42] but if it is apparent that no substantial change in condition could have taken place[43] or that the delay was caused by the Sufficiency.— An indorsement on an affidavit — "I hereby certify, that I am fully satisfied that the facts and allegations set forth in the above affidavit are true, and that the said affiant is justly entitled to his writ of attachment," sufficiently complies with the statute requiring that an officer shall indorse his satisfaction upon the affidavit. Merrill v. Low, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 221.

Affidavit of belief.— An indorsement that the officer is satisfied that the matters set forth in the affidavit are true is sufficient to authorize the issue of the writ, although the affidavit charges fraud "as the affiant verily believes." Clark v. Gilbert, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 354.

Preliminary examination of plaintiff.— Hurd's Rev. Stat. Ill. c. 11, § 31, providing for the application to and an examination of plaintiff under oath by a judge, respecting the cause of action, and that the judge shall indorse on the application the amount for which the writ shall issue, does not contemplate an examination before a court in session and a record of the proceedings, but where the writ has been ordered it will be presumed that the required examination was had. Jacobs v. Marks, 183 Ill. 533, 56 N. E. 154 [affirming 83 Ill. App. 156].

40. In Virginia the affidavit to procure an attachment against a non-resident or absent debtor need not be filed before the subpœna issues. Moore v. Holt, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 284.

Conflicting requirements.— Where there is an apparent conflict in the statute, one clause thereof requiring the filing of the affidavit at the time of issue of the warrant, and the other requiring the affidavit to be filed within forty-eight hours after such issue, it should be construed to mean that the papers must be filed at the time of issuing the warrant, or within forty-eight hours thereafter. Ferst v. Power, 58 S. C. 398, 36 S. E. 744.

Filing with declaration.—In South Carolina it was held that a statute requiring an affidavit to be made at the time of filing the declaration did not require it to be made at the precise time. Creach v. Delane, 1 Nott & M. (S. C.) 189.

Filing after sale on execution in suit.— Where by statute it is provided that an affidavit must be filed within ten days after commencement of publication, that if not so filed the attachment shall be dismissed, and permitting the court in its discretion to allow it to be filed at any time before the order of dismissal is actually made, it is an abuse of discretion to refuse to allow the affidavit to be filed after the property has been sold under execution on judgment in the action. Bona fides.— The filing of a petition for writ of attachment three days after its verification does not indicate bad faith. Deere v. Bagley, 80 Iowa 197, 45 N. W. 557.

Filing nunc pro tunc.— In Hughes v. Stinnett, 9 Ark. 211, the clerk wrote out the writ on the reverse side of the half sheet on which the affidavit was written and delivered it to the sheriff who kept it until he made his return to the writ. It was held that since plaintiff had complied with the requisites of the statute when he made the affidavit and left it with the clerk it might be filed nunc pro tunc on a motion made by him on the trial.

Collateral attack.— The judgment cannot be collaterally attacked, because the record fails to show that an affidavit was filed. Biggs v. Blue, 5 McLean (U. S.) 148, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,403.

Lost affidavit—Proof of filing.—Where the record shows no finding that the writ was duly issued the court files may be read in evidence to determine whether there was an affidavit or not, and if none appear, parol evidence is admissible to show that some of the files have been lost or destroyed, and on the other hand it may be shown that files alleged to be lost or destroyed never existed. Burnett v. McCluey, 78 Mo. 676.

42. Sydnor v. Chambers, Dall. (Tex.) 601, holding that an affidavit filed a month after it was taken was insufficient.

43. Adams v. Lockwood, 30 Kan. 373, 2 Pac. 626 (where the affidavit was sworn to eighteen days before it was filed, and the ground of attachment was fraudulent contraction of the debts sued on); Hadden v. Linville, 86 Md. 210, 38 Atl. 37, 900 (where fact that affiant resided in a distant jurisdiction,[44] the neglect to promptly present or file the affidavit will not vitiate the proceedings.

c. Laches of Clerk or Officer. If plaintiff has observed the requirements of the statute, the neglect of the clerk or of the officer charged with that duty to place the affidavit on file, as required by law, and to keep it on file, will not affect the validity of the proceedings, where no injury has been caused by such neglect.[45]

9. Objections — a. In General. Mere informalities, defects, or clerical misprisions in affidavits for an attachment which do not prejudice substantial rights may be disregarded;[46] and an insufficient affidavit will not affect the right of recovery in the action in which it was issued,[47] or the rights of other creditors whose proceedings are regular and who have come in under an attachment issued on a defective affidavit.[48] Where, however, the defect is jurisdictional, the attachment and all proceedings subsequent thereto are void.[49] If, by statute, the affidavit is made sufficient evidence of the facts therein stated, its truth cannot be called in question, defendant being confined to his remedy on the bond.[50]

b. Waiver. Defendant may waive an irregularity or defect in the affidavit the affidavits were filed several months before the action was brought, and it was held that a statutory provision that no attachment should issue without an affidavit, and that such affidavit might be made in any state or foreign country did not require it to be made at or near the time of instituting the suit); Kesler v. Lapham, 46 W. Va. 293, 33 S. E. 289 (where the affidavit was made in one county two days before the issue of the attachment in another county). See also Lewis v. Stewart, 62 Tex. 352, where it was held that an attachment was not vitiated by the fact that four days elapsed between the making of two affidavits as to the existence of the causes for which the writ was sought.

44. Wright v. Ragland, 18 Tex. 289, where the affidavit was not filed until twenty-four days after it had been made by a non-resident of the state.

45. Beebe v. Morrell, 76 Mich. 114, 42 N. W. 1119, 15 Am. St. Rep. 288; Augusta Bank v. Conrey, 28 Miss. 667. But see Townsend v. Sparks, 50 S. C. 380, 27 S. E. 801, where the clerk placed no file-mark on the affidavit but delivered it to the sheriff and did not have it in his custody again until after the expiration of the statutory time prescribed for filing, and it was held that the affidavit was not filed within the time provided for by law.

Presumption.— The issue of an attachment creates a presumption that a proper affidavit was duly filed, and the mere fact that an affidavit received by the clerk does not bear his indorsement, and that instead of keeping it in his custody he attached it to the writ, with which it was afterward returned to him, will not affect the validity of the proceedings. to confer jurisdiction may be made at any stage of the proceedings;[62] but if the statute requires defendant to appear and plead before he can except to the sufficiency of the affidavit exceptions taken before he pleads are premature.[63] Ordinarily objections to the affidavit for irregularities cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.[64]

e. Mode of Taking. There is no rule of general application respecting the mode of objecting. Thus in some jurisdictions objection is taken by plea in abatement;[65] in others by a motion to quash,[66] or to dissolve the attachment,[67] or by an appeal;[68] but alleged defects will not be considered on mandamus,[69] nor can the sufficiency of the facts stated be tested by demurrer to a petition containing similar statements.[70]

Where an attachment is merely auxiliary to an existent suit, if it is attempted to set it up as an original suit it can be defeated by a plea in abatement. Hounshell v. Phares, 1 Ala. 580.

Special affidavit.— Under a statute providing that if an attachment be issued to recover damages for a breach of contract, when the damages are not certain or liquidated, affidavit in writing of the special facts and circumstances must be made so as to enable the judge to determine the amount for which a levy must be made. The special affidavit does not perform the office of any part of the pleadings and is not to be construed by the strict rules applicable to pleadings. Its definiteness and sufficiency rest in the discretion of the judge and cannot be tested by plea in abatement or be a subject of revision on appeal. Bozeman v. Rose, 40 Ala. 212.

a defective verification[91] may be amended. If the contents of the affidavit be duly sworn to, but the officer who administered the oath neglects to add his certificate or signature he may be permitted to do so nunc pro tunc;[92] and an insufficient or defective authentication of the certificate of an officer acting without the jurisdiction may be likewise amended,[93] as may an affidavit improperly sworn to before the attorney of record;[94] but an affidavit taken before a person having no authority to administer the oath is an absolute nullity and cannot be validated.[95]

(B) Capacity of Plaintiff. A receiver may amend by adding an allegation respecting his authority to sue,[96] and a corporation may aver its corporate character which it failed to do originally.[97]

(C) Capacity of Affiant. An affidavit by an agent or attorney which fails to disclose his relation to plaintiff may be so amended as to show that fact.[98]

(D) Cause or Nature of Action. There are a number of decisions which accord the right to amend by supplying omitted statements as to the cause of action or the nature of the claim,[99] but it seems that amendment by way of substitution of one cause of action for another is not permissible.[1]

affidavit ambiguous because stating a present or a future indebtedness may be amended by striking out the allegation respecting the maturity of the debt in the future;[3] and such appropriate amendments may be made to an affidavit based on a debt actually due as will authorize an attachment to secure a debt not yet matured[4] or show that the debt is due in part only[5] or that the indebtedness has become absolute pending the action.[6]

(2) Amount of Claim. When inadvertently omitted the amount of the indebtedness claimed may be shown by a subsequent amendment or new affidavit,[7] or the affidavit may be amended where the allegations relative thereto are uncertain and indefinite or contain erroneous statements made through mistake or inadvertence.[8]

(F) Grounds — (1) In General. An affidavit which fails to assign any statutory cause for an attachment cannot be amended in that respect,[9] but an amendment which merely makes the cause of action alleged in the petition more specific,[10] or the filing of a supplemental affidavit as to additional facts which were not known at the time of filing the original affidavit,[11] is permissible to show the ground of attachment. An affidavit which is uncertain and ambiguous because stating separate grounds in the disjunctive is amendable.[12]

(2) Addition of New Grounds. The preponderance of authority seems to hold that a new ground for attachment may be substituted or added by way of amendment.[13] Even where otherwise permissible, however, it has been held that an amendment of this character which may be prejudicial to defendant or to others will not be permitted.[14]

(3) Fraudulent Disposition or Removal of Property. An affidavit charging a belief that defendant is about to remove his property may be amended by further charging a fraudulent intent,[15] or by supplying clerical omissions to state a fraudulent intention to dispose of the property and that the property belonged to the debtor;[16] and an affidavit in the language of the statute alleging fraudulent intent in disposing of property may be amended by setting forth the facts relied on.[17] An amended petition must show the present existence of this ground for attachment.[18]

(4) Removal From Jurisdiction. An affidavit which does not substantially comply with the statutory provisions respecting the removal of defendant from the state or other prescribed place is defective in substance and cannot be amended,[19] although an allegation that the debtor is about to remove from the state may be amended by stating in addition, or other political division within the state.[20]

(5) Non-Residence. While it has been held that an affidavit which insufficiently states the non-residence of defendant cannot be amended,[21] amendments have been permitted to an affidavit alleging non-residence on information and belief [22] and it seems that insufficiency in this respect may be cured by an affidavit read on behalf of defendant on a motion to vacate the attachment;[23] and where plaintiff is required to ascertain the place of defendant's residence if possible an amendment stating the place of residence may be properly made.[24]

(G) Negation of Improper Motive. Failure to state that the attachment is not sued out for the purpose of vexing or harassing defendant is a substantial defect which cannot be supplied by amendment [25]

(H) Justice of Claim. When such an averment is required the omission

When not deemed amended on appeal.— An affidavit will not be considered on appeal as amended to conform to proof of a new ground of attachment not existing at the time the original attachment was sued out, where there was no offer to amend at the trial and the affidavit was not treated as amended. or the insufficiency of an averment that the claim is just may be supplied or remedied.[26]

(I) Danger of Loss of Debt. A failure to aver that plaintiff is in danger of losing his claim unless an attachment issue, or an allegation faulty in that respect is amendable.[27]

(J) Possession of Attachable Goods. A clerical error in stating the possession by the debtor of goods exempt from execution is amendable.[28]

b. Time of Application. In some states the application to amend may be made after a motion to dissolve or quash the attachment,[29] and before the affidavit is adjudged defective,[30] but an amendment will not be permitted after a plea in abatement is sustained.[31] Where on motion to dissolve an attachment for insufficiency of the affidavit the court is required to give plaintiff an opportunity to remedy the defects, it may order the dissolution of the attachment unless a proper affidavit is filed within a designated time,[32] which should be reasonable.[33]

c. Necessity of New Verification. Where an affidavit or petition is amended in a material respect it should be sworn to anew[34] or new affidavits should be filed,[35] but if the amendment is no more than a new statement of the same cause of action the petition need not be resworn to.[36]

d. Effect of Amendment. The general rule deducible from the authorities is that as between the creditor and the debtor the amendment of the affidavit will not affect the lien obtained under the affidavit originally made and filed;[37] but as to subsequent attaching creditors or lienors, if the amendment is one of substance or prejudice will result, liens obtained by them intermediate the original levy and the amendment will be entitled to priority,[38] although where the effect is not jurisdictional it has been held that the amendment will relate back even as to

E. Bond to Procure Attachment — 1. Necessity of — a. In General. The statutes authorizing attachment usually require, as a condition to the issue of the writ, that a bond shall be given to protect defendant from the injury of a wrongful attachment.[41] When so required it is jurisdictional and cannot be dispensed with,[42] and it must precede the issue of the writ, because jurisdiction does not attach until the bond is given.[43] The requirement may, however, be merely directory, in which case a failure of compliance will not avoid the levy,[44] and failure to give an attachment bond has been held a mere irregularity of which defendant alone could take advantage, the attachment being otherwise valid.[45]

b. When Not Required. No bond need be given where none is required, or where it is expressly dispensed with[46] — as in case of a branch writ issued to another county,[47] the substitution of a pauper's oath,[48] a non-resident foreign corporation defendant,[49] an attachment by the state,[50] and in Maryland in case of a claim for liquidated damages.[51]

Under the Wisconsin statute, the giving of a bond is not essential to a valid issue of the writ, but is essential to its execution. Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036.

The writ and bond being of the same date, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that the bond preceded the writ (Reed v. Kentucky Bank, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 227; McKenzie v. Buchan, 1 Nott & M. (S. A discrimination against non-residents is constitutional.— A statute dispensing with a bond for attachment against non-residents and requiring it in case of attachment against residents is not open to the objection that it deprives the non-resident of his property without due process of law, that it denies him the equal protection of the laws, or that it denies equal privileges and immunities to citizens of other states. The statute requiring an attachment bond necessarily describes the kind of bond required in many of its particulars. It should be consulted and closely followed,[53] and a failure to comply with such requirements is fatal to the attachment,[54] unless the omission be only as to requirements which are not jurisdictional or mandatory and therefore constitute mere irregularities that may be cured or waived.[55] is not plainly required need be inserted,[57] although a condition beyond the statutory requirement may not be objectionable.[58]

(II) Irrespective of Statute— (A) In General. Aside from the statutory requirements no particular form of bond need be followed. It is sufficient if the intention to become bound in the manner and to the extent required be adequately expressed.[59] Thus the following have been held not sufficient grounds of objection: interlineations and erasures;[60] writing the condition below the signatures of the obligors;[61] misrecitals of matters of inducement;[62] omitting the date[63] or the place of execution;[64] omitting from body of bond the name of a surety[65] or of the principal[66] or of one of them;[67] omitting to describe the proceedings[68] or the court where they are had;[69] and omitting to describe the property attached.[70]

(B) Fatal Defects. It is otherwise, however, if the terms of the bond be such as not to show an intention to become bound according to the statute and on account of the issue and levy of the particular attachment — as in case of the description of a writ other than the one in question,[71] description of a court other than the one where the proceedings are had,[72] or the description of parties not of the suit pending.[73]

(III) In Action on Bond. In the case of an action on a bond to procure an attachment, it may be upheld as a voluntary common-law obligation, although the statute has not been complied with, and it will be enforced upon condition broken according to its terms, if it be not contrary to an express statute or to public policy or morality, has not been exacted without authority of law, and is not otherwise of such a character or form as to be utterly void.[74] This rule

An action cannot be maintained on a void bond — as where the seal was omitted (State v. Thompson, 49 Mo. 188); the penalty left blank (Copeland v. Cunningham, 63 Ala. 394); the bond taken after dismissal of the attachment (Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251, 56 Am. 76. Leaving the amount blank is fatal to the bond.— Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Lake, 5 Ind. App. 450, 32 N. E. 590; Lehman v. Broussard, 45 La. Ann. 346, 12 So. 504; Boyd v. Boyd, 2 Nott & M. (S. C.) 125.

A portion of the debt not due must be included in fixing the amount of the bond with reference to the amount claimed, where the entire amount is claimed. Allen v. Champlin, 32 La. Ann. 511.

Attorneys' fees included in the amount claimed cannot be omitted in determining the amount of the bond, under a requirement that the amount of the bond shall be fixed with reference to the amount claimed. Panhandle Nat. Bank v. Still, 84 Tex. 339, 19 S. W. 479. Aliter, in case of attorneys' fees which could not be lawfully included and without which the bond would be sufficient. Aultman v. Smyth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 43 S. W. 932.

Interest on the amount claimed need not be provided for in the bond, in compliance with a requirement for security in an amount to be ascertained by reference to the amount claimed by plaintiff (Saulter v. Butler, 10 Ga. 510; Planters' Bank v. Byrne, 3 La. Ann. 687; Pope v. Hunter, 13 La. 306; Driscoll v. Kelly, 4 Ohio Dec. 124, 5 Ohio N. P. 243; Smith v. Pearce, Gilmer (Va.) 34; Smith v. Pearce, 6 Munf. (Ky.) 94; Fellows v. Dickens, 5 La. Ann. 131); and where interest is included in the amount claimed, the fact that the bond would be sufficient if measured by the principal without the interest has been held not a compliance with the statute (Gallagher v. Cogswell, 11 Fla. 127; Graham v. Burckhalter, 2 La. Ann. 415; Erwin v. Vicksburg Commercial, etc., Bank, 12 Rob. (La.) 227).

Converting claim ex contractu into claim ex delicto, so as to make the amount due and thus to evade the statute requiring a bond in a larger amount when the debt claimed is not due, will not be permitted. Lederer v. Rosenthal, 99 Wis. 235, 74 N. W. 971.

The bond need not recite the amount claimed, so as to show that it is given in a sufficient amount with reference to the sum claimed according to the statute (Strong v. Lake Weir Chautauqua, etc., Assoc., 25 Fla. 765, 6 So. 882), and a misrecital of the amount will not invalidate the bond, if the true amount, as alleged in the affidavit, shows the bond to be in the proper amount (Lawrence v. Featherston, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 345).

Amendment.—Where a bond does not comply with the requirement as to amount and the defect is not amendable, the attachment falls, and where amendments are permitted, such amendment must be made by filing a new and sufficient bond. (II) Fixed by Court—(A) Upon Issue of Writ. In case the amount is fixed by statute the court has no power to allow the writ upon a bond for a less sum.[84] In some instances, however, the amount of the bond has been left to the discretion of the court [85] or of the clerk of the court.[86]

(B) As Additional Security. In some jurisdictions the courts are invested with the power to require additional security in their discretion upon proof of the inadequacy of that first given,[87] while in others this power is not conferred.[88] Upon failure to furnish such additional security where the court has exercised its discretion to demand the same, the attachment may be discharged [89] or the levy may be reduced so as to bring the amount attached fairly within the penalty of the bond.[90]

c. The Obligee. Ordinarily the bond should be made payable to the person whose property is sought to be attached, that is, the defendant, and this is usually required by the statute.[91] It may, however, be required to be given to the clerk of the court[92] or to the state for the use of the owners.[93]

d. The Execution — (i) In General — (A) By Plaintiff — (1) GENERALLY. The attachment plaintiff need not himself execute the bond when this is not required by the statute. A bond on the part of plaintiff is a requirement which has been held to render execution of the bond by plaintiff or his duly authorized agent necessary (Wagener v. Booker, 31 S. C. 375, 9 S. E. 1055; National Exch. Bank v. Stelling, 31 S. C. 360, 9 S. In an action on such a bond plaintiff cannot be held liable, nor is he a proper party to the action. He is liable to defendant for the injury occasioned by the attachment but not on the bond. State v. Fortinberry, 54 Miss. 316; Storz v. Finklestein, 50 Nebr. 177, 69 N. W. 856.

One beneficially interested in the subject-matter of the action with plaintiff has been held competent to give a bond in compliance with the requirement that it be given by plaintiff — such as the equitable owner of the chose in action sued on (Tully v. Herrin, 44 Miss. 626); one for whose use the attachment in the name of another is sued out (Grand Gulf R., etc., Co. v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 505); or one of the trustees of a town in whose behalf the attachment is issued (Clanton v. Laird, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 568).

96. The agent's authority need not be under seal. Therefore he may bind plaintiff by

(2) By Agent or Attorney. Some statutes permit the attachment bond to be given in behalf of plaintiff by his agent or attorney. In such case execution by plaintiff is dispensed with and that of the agent or attorney as principal obligor is substituted,[97] but execution by another than plaintiff or his agent will not be a compliance,[98] and authority from plaintiff to act as his agent is necessary when execution by agent is required.[99] Plaintiff may, however, accept and ratify the signing the latter's name to an attachment bond upon the authority of a telegram (Ferst v. Powers, 58 S. C. 398, 36 S. E. 744); or a telephone message (Long v. Goodwin, 5 Pa. Dist. 335). Contra, Forbes v. Porter, 25 Fla. 362, 6 So. 62, holding as a proposition of general law, that authority under seal is necessary to bind the principal.

The issuing officer may demand the agent's authority, and where there is a power of attorney in writing he may file it with the undertaking, but his failure to do this will not invalidate the attachment. Grollman v. Lipsitz, 43 S. C. 329, 21 S. E. 272.

One partner has authority by virtue of the partnership relation to sign the firm-name and bind the partnership to a bond for attachment in an action by the firm (Dow v. Smith, 8 Ga. 551; Churchill v. Fulliam, 8 Iowa 45; Danforth v. Carter, 1 Iowa 546; Claflin v. Hoover, 20 Mo. App. 314; Hall v. Kintz, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 24; Munzesheimer v. Heinze, 74 Tex. 254, 11 S. W. 1094; Gray v. Steedman, 63 Tex. 95. See also Sims v. Jacobson, 51 Ala. 186; Brooks v. Hartman, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 36), and authority from the other partners to bind them may be given by parol (Jeffreys v. Coleman, 20 Fla. 536). A partnership may also make a bond by its several members to procure an attachment sued out by one member for the firm benefit. This is neither an irregularity nor a variance (McCluny v. Jackson, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 96), and a bond signed simply by the individual members of a firm in whose behalf the attachment is issued sufficiently shows execution in the name of plaintiff (Hampton v. Bogan, 55 S. C. 547, 33 S. E. 581).

An attorney at law has no authority as such to bind his client by signing the name of the latter to an attachment bond. He must have special or statutory authority for such purpose the same as any other person. Beardslee v. Morgan, 29 Mo. 471; Harrisburg Boot, etc., Co. v. Johnson, 3 Pa. Dist. 433; Mantz v. Hendley, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 308. Compare Anthanissen v. Brunswick, etc., Steam Towing, etc., Co., 92 Ga. 409, 17 S. E. 951; Craig v. Herring, 80 Ga. 709, 6 S. E. 283; Fulton v. Brown, 10 La. Ann. 350. See infra, VII, E, 2, d, (I), (A), (2); and, generally, Attorney and Client.

Want of authority to bind the principal has been held to be cured by ratification, so that the act, at the time merely that of the agent, subsequently became that of plaintiff in compliance with the statute requiring execution by plaintiff. State v. Fortinberry, 54 Miss. 316; Augusta Bank v. Conrey, 28 Miss. 667. Compare Kellogg v. Miller, 6 Ark. 468, which holds that such ratification may occur before but not after the issue of the writ.

97. Authority to sue out the attachment impliedly authorizes the agent or attorney to do whatever else is necessary to perfect the process, including execution of the bond. Guckenheimer v. Day, 74 Ga. 1; Alexander v. Burns, 6 La. Ann. 704; Dillon v. Watkins, 2 Speers (S. C.) 445. See also supra, VII, E, 2, d, (I), (A), (1).

The principal need not be bound.— A bond binding the agent or attorney personally as such is a sufficient compliance with the statute requiring such bond from plaintiff, his agent, or attorney. Bryan v. Knight, 12 Fla. 165; Simpson v. Knight, 12 Fla. 144; Conklin v. Goldsmith, 5 Fla. 280; Walbridge v. Spalding, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 451; Page v. Ford, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 266; Byne v. Byne, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 438.

A rule of court against an attorney becoming surety is not affected by a statute permitting him to make an attachment bond for his client, as this contemplates his execution as principal and the rule only forbids him to become surety. Simpson v. Knight, 12 Fla. 144.

Form of signature by plaintiff's attorney. — Where plaintiff's name is signed to an attachment bond by his attorney, it should be followed by the words "by his attorney at law," to which should be added the attorney's name. Long v. Hood, 46 Ga. 225. Compare Fulton v. Brown, 10 La. Ann. 350.

98. A bond which does not appear to have been executed by agent cannot be upheld as an agent's bond by evidence that such was the intention, even though such person be described as agent in the attachment affidavit. Work v. Titus, 12 Fla. 628.

99. Assuming to act as agent or attorney is not sufficient if the authority does not in fact exist. Elliott v. Plukart, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 151.

Authority as agent may be presumed where it has been assumed by one in the execution of an attachment bond and has not been denied or questioned by a proper plea to that effect. Alford v. Johnson, 9 Port. (Ala.) 320; Messner v. Lewis, 20 Tex. 221; Messner v. Hutchins, 17 Tex. 597. See also McDonald v. Fist, 53 Mo. 343.

The agent's authority need not accompany the bond. The officer taking the bond will be presumed to have performed his duty by requiring legal authority. Lindner v. Aaron, 5 How. (Miss.) 581. See also Grollman v. Lipsitz, 43 S. C. 329, 21 S. E. 272.

One partner is agent for the partnership, so that he may make a bond in his own name to procure an attachment in behalf of the bond of an unauthorized agent or other person whenever such bond is not jurisdictional.[1] If execution by neither plaintiff nor his agent be required, an attempted execution on behalf of plaintiff which binds only the obligor in his personal capacity with the sureties is sufficient.[2]

(B) By Sureties — (1) WHO MAY BE — (a) NATURAL PERSONS. Any person may be surety on an attachment bond who possesses the capacity to contract and who is not otherwise disqualified from becoming such surety by statute or rule of court[3] or by the fact that he is already bound as principal.[4]

(b) CORPORATIONS AND PARTNERSHIPS. A corporation or partnership cannot become bound as surety through an execution in its name by an agent authorized only to bind it in the ordinary course of business,[5] unless acting as surety is the business of such corporation or partnership.[6] However, the unauthorized agent who attempts to bind the corporation or partnership outside its legitimate business becomes personally bound[7] and the principal may, by ratification or acquiescence, be estopped to plead ultra vires.[8]

(2) SUFFICIENCY OF SURETIES. In order to support an attachment statutory requirements respecting the number and qualifications of sureties on the bond should be complied with[9] — such as a certain number of persons[10] resident within partnership, although the other partners be not bound. Iroquois Furnace Co. v. Wilkin Mfg. Co., 181 Ill. 582, 54 N. E. 987 [reversing 77 Ill. App. 59]; Wallis v. Wallace, 6 How. (Miss.) 254; Sloo v. Powell, Dall. (Tex.) 467; Kyle v. Connelly, 3 Leigh (Va.) 719. See also supra, note 96.

2. One acting as agent without authority may make a good bond where the statute does not require a bond by plaintiff or his agent. Plaintiff's name signed without authority may, in such case, be treated as mere surplusage and disregarded. 3. Attorneys at law may be sureties unless expressly prohibited.— The office of attorney at law is of itself no reason for disqualification. Therefore, although a rule of court prohibits attorneys from becoming sureties on cost and appeal-bonds, there is nothing to prevent their becoming sureties on attachment bonds. If no number of sureties is specified a single surety whose solvency and material the state[11] and possessed of available assets in a sufficient amount to the satisfaction of the statute[12] or of a designated officer.[13]

(II) Sealing. In some states the old common-law rule requiring specialties to be under seal has been dispensed with by statute or judicial construction, and in such states an attachment bond need not be sealed.[14] In others, the old common-law rule is adhered to, and there attachment bonds must be sealed[15] except possessions are satisfactory is sufficient. Church v. Drummond, 7 Ind. 17; Williams v. Barnaman, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 69.

Statutory construction.— The word "sureties," as employed in the Iowa statute concerning attachment bonds, has been construed to mean either singular or plural, thus upholding a bond with only one surety as sufficient. Elliott v. Stevens, 10 Iowa 418.

The bond need not be both joint and several. A joint bond executed by the requisite number is sufficient in the absence of a specific requirement that it shall be also several. Baars v. Gordon, 21 Fla. 25.

Approval cannot cure deficiency in number of sureties, although the sufficiency of the bond is committed to the approving officer and approval is required. Goldmark v. Magnolia Metal Co., 28 N. Y. App. Div. 264, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 68.

11. The object of the requirement as to residence of sureties is that the attachment bond may be enforced by the courts of the state. Therefore the property qualifications of a non-resident surety, however good, are immaterial and cannot fulfil the statute.

The bond need not show the fact of residence although it be essential to its validity. If such is not the fact the proceedings may be abated. Jackson v. Stanley, 2 Ala. 326.

A surety need not reside in the county where the attachment is issued when not so required by the statute. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, 76 Ala. 321.

12. Lockett v. De Neufville, 55 Ga. 454.

A surety need not own real estate, if he be otherwise competent, unless such qualification be required by statute. Austin v. Latham, 19 La. 88.

The actual means of the surety, under the Louisiana statute, not the amount for which, from the nature of the case, he may be ultimately liable, must be considered in ascertaining his sufficiency. Thus, he must be worth the full amount of the attachment bond, notwithstanding he may be fully able to answer for the property actually attached.

Lard v. Strother, 4 Rob. (La.) 95; Jackson v. Warwick, 17 La. 436.

Evidence of insufficiency.—Evidence that a surety returned no property for taxation does not necessarily require an inference that he is without sufficient available property to satisfy the statute. Reid v. Armour Packing Co., 93 Ga. 696, 21 S. E. 131. A failure to show one of the sureties to be insolvent, together with evidence showing that the other is worth many times more than the amount claimed in the suit where the attachment was issued does not show that the sureties are not "good and sufficient." C. B. Cones, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Rosenbaum, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 333.

Each surety need not be good for the entire amount of the bond, unless this is specifically required. The bond will be sufficient if both together, where two are required, are responsible for the required amount. May v. Gamble, 14 Fla. 467.

As to justification of sureties see infra, VII, E, 2, d, (IV).

13. The solvency of sureties is primarily for the approving officer, whose determination is conclusive until properly questioned by defendant before pleading to the merits; but when properly questioned approval is but prima facie evidence of sufficiency. Reid v. Armour Packing Co., 93 Ga. 696, 21 S. E. 131; Gregory v. Clark, 73 Ga. 542; Perry v. Mulligan, 58 Ga. 479; Lockett v. De Neufville, 55 Ga. 454; Blaney v. Findley, 2 Blackf. A bond executed by a corporation stands upon different ground, for a corporation properly acts through its corporate seal, and although a seal be not required of natural persons this exemption does not affect corporations. Tanner, etc., Engine Co. v. Hall, 22 Fla. 391.

15. Lea v. Vail, 3 Ill. 473; Hunter v. Ladd, 2 Ill. 551; State v. Eldridge, 65 Mo. 584; State v. Chamberlin, 54 Mo. 338; State v. Thompson, 49 Mo. 188; Tiffany v. Lord, 65 N. Y. 310.

A sealed power of attorney is necessary to authorize an agent to execute a bond for his principal where the bond itself is required to they be of such a nature as not to come within the definition of a specialty.[16] However, the usual liberality respecting the character of the seal is applicable to attachment bonds. Thus, a mere scroll has been held sufficient,[17] as has the word "[seal]" printed on the bond[18] and the use of one seal or scrawl by two persons.[19]

(III) ATTESTATION. An attachment bond need not be attested unless required by the statute,[20] and, although attestation by a magistrate be required, this need not be by the one issuing the writ.[21]

(IV) JUSTIFICATION. When the sureties are required by statute to justify a failure to comply will be a ground for avoidance of the attachment. In some states justification is required as an element of jurisdiction, in which case a failure to comply cannot be cured;[22] but often the requirement is not mandatory, and a failure to comply is regarded as a mere irregularity which may subsequently be cured.[23]

(V) APPROVAL. The officer issuing the writ is generally required first to approve and accept the bond.[24] The writ may be avoided for failure so to approve,[25] but the bond need not bear the evidence of approval. Existence of the fact is sufficient, and this is evinced by receiving and filing the bond and issuing the writ;[26] and where the statute requires indorsement of the approval be sealed (Forbes v. Porter, 25 Fla. 362, 6 So. 62); and in such case ratification of an unauthorized bond should likewise be under seal (Pollock v. Murray, 38 Fla. 105, 20 So. 815).

Different rules in different courts.—In Missouri, in ordinary attachments before a justice of the peace, the statutory form omits a seal, and in those courts a seal is not necessary. This does not, however, dispense with a seal where the suit is in the circuit court. State v. Chamberlin, 54 Mo. 338.

16. A simple undertaking, although often called a bond, is not a specialty requiring a seal. McLain v. Simington, 37 Ohio St. 484.

In Georgia an attachment bond need not be approved by the magistrate who issues the attachment writ, or in his presence. Smith v. Joiner, 27 Ga. 65. See Cox v. Felder, 36 Ga. 597.

An attorney who is a magistrate has no power to approve and accept an attachment bond for his client in a case in which he appears as attorney, under Ga. Rev. Dec. 374.

Mandamus to compel approval.— Mandamus will lie to compel an officer, required by law to approve an attachment bond, to perform his duty, that is, to pass upon the sufficiency of the bond, but not to control his discretion or require him to approve unless the reason for his refusal is insufficient in law and admits the sufficiency of the bond. the court may, upon determining the fact, direct the indorsement to be made nunc pro tunc.[27]

e. Amendment of Insufficient Bond — (I) Right to Amend. An attachment bond cannot be amended for the purpose of curing any substantial defect without express statutory permission. In such case a sufficient bond is a condition precedent to the attachment,[28] and statutory amendments may properly relate only to such defects as are not jurisdictional and which do not render the bond void;[29] but amendments of any defects may be permitted by statute, and if the permission include jurisdictional defects, they cease to be so when made amendable.[30] Therefore, it is sometimes said that a void bond may be amended under authority of the statute.[31] A void bond, however, is no bond at all, and wherever a bond is requisite to an amendment, a void bond cannot be amended.[32]

(II) Exercise of Right. The method of amendment may be either by correcting some formal irregularity, mistake, or omission[33] or by substituting a new and sufficient bond for a defective one.[34] Where permissible, amendments may be made before discharge of the attachment[35] and an opportunity to amend should be allowed before discharging the attachment on account of an insufficient bond.[36]

(iii) Effect of Amendment. Permitting the correction of an original bond or the substitution of a new one supposes the existence of a bond not defective in a jurisdictional respect or else dispenses with the jurisdictional element as a condition precedent. In any case therefore the effect of a duly authorized amendment is to validate the proceeding from its inception.[37]

f. Waiver of Insufficient Bond. Since an attachment bond is required for the protection of defendant, the want of a sufficient bond may be waived by him,[38] unless the giving of a bond is an element of jurisdiction and the defect is such as to render the writ void.[39] A waiver may be express, as by stipulation,[40] but usually it results from a failure to object until after entry of a general appearance,[41] plea to the merits,[42] judgment,[43] or appeal.[44]

g. Substitution of Sufficient Bond. In order to render a surety competent to testify on behalf of plaintiff, a new bond with a different surety may be substituted therefor and the original canceled prior to the accrual of liability thereupon.[45]

VIII. THE WRIT.

A. Nature and Necessity. The writ of attachment is the process issued at the institution or during the progress of an action commanding the sheriff or other proper officer to attach the property, rights, credits, or effects of defendant to satisfy the demands of plaintiff.[46] The ancillary writ is not a pleading which permits of an answer. It constitutes no part of, and is not embraced in, the pleadings in the action.[47] An attachment without the writ is void, that being the leading and essential process in the proceeding.[48]

B. Issues When — 1. In General — a. Rule Stated. Where the statute fixes a time within which the writ may issue, it must be issued within such prescribed time.[49] In the case of ancillary attachment, the pendency of an action is a prerequisite to the right to the writ, and a writ issued before an action is commenced is void and can give no lien;[50] but the writ may be issued contemporaneously with the commencement of suit[51] or at any time thereafter before final judgment.[52] It can never be issued, however, before the filing of the required affi-

46. Bouvier L. Dict. In Delaplain v. Armstrong, 21 W. Va. 211, 213, the writ is thus defined: "An order of attachment is an execution by anticipation."

Under the code practice a defendant who interposes a counter-claim may enforce the same by attachment. See for example N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 720; State v. Hobson, 6 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 338.

47. Boston v. Wright, 3 Kan. 220; Beck v. Irby, 36 Miss. 188.

Where the suit is commenced by a writ of attachment, it serves as both process and count, and no declaration is necessary. Where this is the case, the above statement does not apply. Moore v. Hawkins, 6 Dana (Ky.) 289; Osgood v. Holyoke, 48 Me. 410; Saco v. Hopkinton, 29 Me. 268; Fairbanks v. Stanley, 18 Me. 296; Brigham v. Este, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 420. b. When Action Deemed Commenced — (I) On Filing Affidavit. In some states the time of filing the affidavit for attachment is made, by statute, for all legal purposes the date of the commencement of the suit, and a præcipe is not required.[55]

(II) On Filing Complaint, Declaration, or Petition. In other states the action is deemed to be commenced when the complaint, declaration, or petition is filed,[56] although in some it is also necessary that a summons be issued thereon with a bona fide intent that it shall be served.[57]

Affidavit and writ dated same day.—Where the affidavit was made the same day the writ issued and purports to be annexed thereto it will be presumed that the writ did not pass from the clerk's hands until the affidavit was made, and it is of no consequence whether the writ was filled out before the making of the affidavit. Hubbardston Lumber Co. v. Covert. 35 Mich. 254.

54. Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182, holding, however, that the intervention of a term before the issue of the attachment is an irregularity which renders the writ voidable and not void.

Texas.— Cordova v. Priestly, 4 Tex. 250; Wooster v. McGee, 1 Tex. 17; Fowler v. Poor, Dall. (Tex.) 401. But while it is irregular and erroneous to issue a writ of attachment before the filing of the petition, yet this would only render the writ voidable and not void, and therefore it would not be subject to collateral attack. Bowers v. Chaney, 21 Tex. 363, distinguishing the foregoing cases on the ground that in them there was a direct attack and the judgments would have been reversed on appeal.

Washington.— Schwabacher v. Abrahams Grocery Co., 14 Wash. 225, 44 Pac. 257; Cosh-Murray Co. v. Tuttich, 10 Wash. 449, 38 Pac. 1134, which hold that the Washington code of civil procedure providing that civil actions shall be commenced by the filing of a complaint is not, so far as it applies to suits in which attachments are issued, repealed by Wash. Laws (1893), p. 407, which declares that civil actions shall be commenced by service of summons, but that for the purpose of issuing writs of attachments the filing of complaint is still to be taken as commencement of an action upon which the clerk is authorized to act.

United States.— People's Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Batchelder Egg Case Co., 51 Fed. 130, 4 U. S. App. 602, 2 C. C. A. 126, construing Arkansas statute.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 397.

(III) On Issue of Summons—(A) Rule Stated. The action, in some states, is deemed to be commenced when the summons is issued,[58] but the suit will be deemed pending for the purposes of the issue of the writ, if the summons and writ issue simultaneously.[59]

(B) What Constitutes Issue of Summons. Summons will be deemed issued when it is made out and placed in the hands of an officer authorized to serve it with a bona fide intent to have it served.[60] It is not necessary, however, that the summons should be actually served by the officer before the issue of the writ of attachment,[61] although in some states it is provided that a personal service of such summons shall be made, or publication thereof commenced, within a specified time after the issue of the same, and if publication has been or is thereafter commenced, that the service must be made complete by the continuance thereof.[62]

New York.— Wallace v. Castle, 68 N. Y. 370. But under the old New York code an attachment against a non-resident debtor, if made before the actual service of the summons, was utterly void (Kerr v. Mount, 28 N. Y. 659; Zerega v. Benoist, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 199, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 129; Fisher v. Curtis, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 660. Compare Webb v. Bailey, 54 N. c. Interval Allowed Between Filing Papers and Issue of Writ. Reasonable time should be allowed within which to transmit the affidavit to the place where it is to be used;[63] but such a delay between the making of the affidavit and the issue of the writ as to cast a suspicion on the verity of the affidavit, or to lead to the suspicion that the grounds stated in the affidavit for asking that the attachment issue had ceased to exist, will warrant the quashing of the attachment.[64]

North Dakota.— Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Keeney, 1 N. D. 411, 48 N. W. 341.

South Dakota.— Iowa State Sav. Bank v. Jacobson, 8 S. D. 292, 66 N. W. 453.

Wisconsin.— Cummings v. Tabor, 61 Wis. 185, 21 N. W. 72; Anderson v. Coburn, 27 Wis. 558.

Appearance of defendant.— Where defendant within thirty days from the time of issuing the attachment appears in person, or by his attorney, who serves a formal notice of appearance in his behalf, it is not necessary to serve the summons upon him either personally or by publication. Tuller v. Beck, 108 N. Y. 355, 15 N. E. 396; Catlin v. Ricketts, 91 N. Y. 668; Pomeroy v. Ricketts, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 242.

Collateral attack.— Omission to serve a summons within thirty days of the allowance of the attachment entitles defendant to avoid all proceedings after the issue thereof, yet it does not render such proceedings void as against third persons. Defendant may waive the effect of such omissions. This is the test of whether the defect shown is a nullity or a mere irregularity. Simpson v. Burch, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 315, 6 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 560; Gere v. Gundlach, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 13.

Death of defendant.— Where a summons issued, attachment was issued upon the summons, and the original defendant died within thirty days after the issue of the summons and attachment, but before service of the summons upon him, the attachment was void, since the service of the summons was a condition necessary to the life of the action. Kelly v. Countryman, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 97. But see More v. Thayer, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 258.

Publication in two newspapers.— Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 638, in order to sustain the attachment a publication of the summons must be commenced in both newspapers directed by the order within thirty days after the granting of the attachment, or the attachment falls. Peetsch v. Sommers, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 255, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 438. See also Taylor v. Troncoso, 76 N. Y. 599.

Service on one defendant.— Where an action was brought against a firm consisting of two members, an attachment was issued, and one of the partners personally served with the summons, but the other was not, nor were proceedings to serve him by publication commenced within the thirty days required by statute, it was held that the attachment ceased to be a lien upon the firm property. Donnell v. Williams, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 216, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 68. But see Orvis v. Goldschmidt, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 71, where it was held that the service of summons upon one of two defendants within thirty days was a sufficient compliance with the provision of the code in that regard.

Substituted service.— It has been held that the requirements of the code as to service of summons are not complied with by an order of substituted service and service thereunder. Bogart v. Swezey, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 463.

63. Foster v. Illinski, 3 Ill. App. 345; Graham v. Bradbury, 7 Mo. 281; Creach v. Delane, 1 Nott & M. (S. C.) 189.

What is a reasonable time is to be judged of by the situation of the parties and the character of the grounds for attachment, whether presumably continuing or transitory. Adams v. Lockwood, 30 Kan. 373, 2 Pac. 626; Avery v. Good, 114 Mo. 290, 21 S. W. 815; O'Neil v. New York, etc., Min. Co., 3 Nev. 141. Thus, where affiant resides in the county in which the suit is brought less time would be considered reasonable than where he resided in a different county, and in the latter case less than where he resided in a different state. Foster v. Illinski, 3 Ill. App. 345. So where the affidavit was made in New York on June 9, for use in Texas, and was not filed and the writ did not issue until July 3 following, such lapse of time was not sufficient ground to warrant quashing the attachment. Wright v. Ragland, 18 Tex. 289.

64. Illinois.— Foster v. Illinski, 3 Ill. App. 345.

2. In Vacation. In the absence of statutory prohibition the writ may issue in a pending action in vacation as well as during a term of court.[65]

3. On Sundays or Holidays. Unless authorized by statute[66] the writ cannot issue on a Sunday or holiday where its issue is a judicial act,[67] although it is otherwise when the issue is a ministerial act.[68]

C. Form and Requisites[69] —1. In General — a. Style of Writ. The writ should run in the name of the state or people;[70] but while, in some jurisdictions

Compare McClanahan v. Brack, 46 Miss. 246, holding that the fact that the affidavit and bond for attachment were dated Nov. 24, 1866, and the writ dated Dec. 12, 1866, did not ipso facto constitute ground for quashing the attachment, and that the propriety of the proceedings ought to be tested by plea in abatement, on the trial of which the question would be whether the attachment was wrongfully sued out at the time of its issue.

In Michigan, under How. Anno. Stat. Mich. § 7887, the intervention of a day between the date of the jurat and the issue of the writ is permitted. Horton v. Monroe, 98 Mich. 195, 57 N. W. 109, holding that such day does not begin to run until the expiration of the day upon which the affidavit is executed, and that the writ may be issued after the expiration of the intervening day. Formerly the writ against a non-resident debtor was required to issue on the day on which the affidavit supporting it was sworn to, and a writ issued subsequent to the date of the affidavit was voidable (Fessenden v. Hill, 6 Mich. 242; Wilson v. Arnold, 5 Mich. 98), the reason being that otherwise defendant might become a resident of the state between the time the affidavit was sworn to and the issue of the writ (Drew v. Dequindre, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 93).

66. Thus under Nev. Comp. Laws, § 955, subs. 50, a writ of attachment may issue and be served on a non-judicial day (for instance Sunday) whenever plaintiff or some person in his behalf will make the necessary affidavit required by such section. Levy v. Elliott, 14 Nev. 435.

Defect not apparent on face of writ.— The issue of a writ on Sunday is, at common law, an irregularity, which, if apparent on the face of the writ, will justify the quashing of it, but if not so apparent the validity of the writ will not be affected, and in such cases the court cannot order the clerk to alter the date of the writ to make it show that it was issued on Sunday and then quash it. Matthews v. Ansley, 31 Ala. 20.

Attachment indorsed on back of summons. — Where on the back of a summons, issued in the name of the commonwealth and signed by the clerk, was an order of attachment, also signed by the clerk, but which when read by itself did not run in the name of the commonwealth, it was held that the summons and indorsement should be read together as forming one writ, and the attachment thus regarded a defect in this respect has been held to be fatal, the writ being regarded as void ab initio,[71] in others, an amendment is allowed.[72]

b. To Whom Directed. The writ should be directed to a particular officer or class of officers authorized by law to levy the same,[73] but an error in this respect has been held to be curable by amendment.[74]

c. Description of Parties. The writ should give the names of the parties to the suit;[75] but amendments supplying the names of parties inadvertently omitted as issuing in the name of the commonwealth, especially as the practice of thus indorsing orders for attachment had for a long time prevailed in many of the courts. Northern Bank v. Hunt, 93 Ky. 67, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 1, 19 S. W. 3. See also Rice v. Dale, 45 Ark. 34.

Surplusage.—While the writ of attachment should run in the name of the state, it has been held to be no objection thereto that the name of the county was added just below that of the state. McMahan v. Boardman, 29 Tex. 170.

73. Alabama.— The proper direction of an attachment returnable to the circuit court is "To any sheriff of the State of Alabama." Herring v. Kelly, 96 Ala. 559, 11 So. 600; Drewry v. Leinkauff, 94 Ala. 486, 10 So. 352; Peebles v. Weir, 60 Ala. 413. But where the writ is addressed to the sheriff of a particular county the defect is fatal only where the attachment is sought to be levied in another county (Blair v. Miller, 42 Ala. 308), and where the writ is directed to any lawful officer such defect is immaterial if the process was in fact executed by a proper officer (Ware v. Todd, 1 Ala. 199). Where, in addition to the proper direction, the writ is directed to the constable of a particular beat, such additional direction will be regarded as an indorsement under Ala. Code, § 2956. Drewry v. Leinkauff, 94 Ala. 486, 10 So. 352.

Colorado.— The writ must be addressed to the sheriff or constable. Archibald v. Thompson, 2 Colo. 388.

Georgia.— Attachments returnable to the superior courts are directed to all and singular the sheriffs and constables of this state (Rogers v. Moore, 40 Ga. 386) and the addition of the words "of said county" has been held to render the writ void (Thomas v. Lavender, 15 Ga. 267).

Iowa.— The writ must be directed to the sheriff, and though the word "sheriff" is extended by statute to include constables, a writ directed to a constable is void. Freeman v. Lind, 112 Iowa 39, 83 N. W. 800.

Nevada.— The writ must be directed to the sheriff of the county where defendant's property is situated. Sadler v. Tatti, 17 Nev. 429, 30 Pac. 1082.

North Carolina.— The writ should be addressed to any sheriff, but where it was in fact issued to the sheriff and duly executed by him, this cures an informality in the direction of the writ "to any constable or other lawful officer." Askew v. Stevenson, 61 N. C. 288.

West Virginia.— Sims v. Charleston Bank, 3 W. Va. 415.

When directed to one specially authorized the conditions and circumstances giving special jurisdiction and authority for such direction should affirmatively appear. Brooks v. Farr, 51 Vt. 396; Dolbear v. Hancock, 19 Vt. 388.

Defect cured by reference to affidavit and bond.— Where the identity of defendant can be ascertained by reference to the affidavit and bond, the writ will not be dismissed because it does not name him. Moore v. Brewer, 94 Ga. 260, 21 S. E. 460.

Describing plaintiff by copartnership name is not sufficient (Barber v. Smith, 41 Mich. 138, 1 N. W. 992), but failure to state the names of the individuals composing the firm will not authorize the dismissal of a levy thereunder or the rejection of the attachment when offered in evidence on trial of a claim growing out of such levy (Gazan v. Royce, 78 Ga. 512, 3 S. E. 753); and the irregularity is unimportant where the full names appear in the declaration and defendant appears (Clayburg v. Ford, 3 Ill. App. 542).

Omission of some of plaintiffs.— An attachment is not absolutely void as against subsequently attaching creditors because the names of some of the parties, who should have been joined as plaintiffs, were omitted. This would be matter of defense and might be waived. Paine v. Tilden, 20 Vt. 554.

Fictitious names for defendants.— It has been held that neither the district courts of the city of New York nor the New York marine court had authority to grant attachments against persons by fictitious names, and that warrants of attachment so issued were absolutely void. Patrick v. Solinger, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 149 (holding this to be the rule even though the evidence showed that the party against whom it was intended to proceed was the owner of the property attached); McCabe v. Doe, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 64; Davenport v. Deady, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 409.

or correcting the names of parties have been liberally allowed by the courts, particularly where the substantial rights of the parties to the suit have not been thereby affected,[76] although where the name of neither party is specified the writ is fatally defective.[77] The writ need not state that plaintiff is a resident of the state[78] or that defendant is an adult.[79]

d. Recital of Proceedings to Procure. In the absence of statutory requirement it is not necessary to recite the filing of the affidavit required by law,[80] the order for the issue of the writ,[81] or the execution or filing of a bond.[82]

e. Recitals as to Cause of Action. The writ must refer to, describe, and identify the suit in aid of which it issues, so as to show unmistakably upon its face that it forms an adjunct to that particular proceeding.[83] It should recite that a suit has been commenced[84] by plaintiff against defendant,[85] the nature thereof,[86]

Hagood v. Hunter, 1 McCord (S. C.) 511.

Unnecessary to annex affidavit to writ.— It was held in Burnside v. Davis, 65 Mich. 74, 31 N. W. 619, that How. Anno. Stat. Mich. § 6839, did not contemplate that the affidavit should be annexed to the writ or a copy served with it.

That action is pending should be stated in the writ (Barber v. Swan, 4 Greene (Iowa) 352, 61 Am. Maine — Attachment of real estate.— In the tribunal in which it is pending,[87] the amount of damages laid,[88] and where required by statute that the cause of action is just.[89] When the amount claimed Maine since Me. Stat. (1838), c. 344 (Smith v. Keen, 26 Me. 411), no attachment of real estate on mesne process creates any lien thereon, unless the nature and amount of the creditor's demand is set forth in proper counts or a specification thereof is annexed to the writ (Everett v. Carleton, 85 Me. 397, 27 Atl. 265; Briggs v. Hodgdon, 78 Me. 514, 7 Atl. 387; Bartlett v. Ware, 74 Me. 292; Belfast Sav. The technical name of the action need not be given where the writ upon its face advises defendant, not only of the nature of the complaint, but also of the precise amount sworn to by plaintiff. Ellis v. Cossitt, 14 Ark. 222 [distinguishing Renner v. Reed, 3 Ark. 339]. See also McCluny v. Jackson, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 96, holding that an attachment is not defective because it does not describe the character of the debt, whether due by bond, note, or account, and that the statute does not require the warrant to describe the claim with the precision of a declaration.

Profert not necessary in writ.— While an attachment should state the demand for which it is brought so explicitly as to make it a good bar in a future action for the same cause, yet, where the action is founded on a note, it is not necessary to make in the writ profert of the note. Monroe v. Castleman, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 399.

Amendment.—Where an amendment in the principal action makes it proper or necessary, the auxiliary writ of attachment may be amended so as to conform to the principal action. Jackson v. Fletcher, Morr. (Iowa) 230, in which case, by clerical error, the writ of summons was issued in assumpsit although the action was in debt.

Indorsement of cause of action in writ.— It has been held that the Alabama act of 1807 which provides that the cause of action shall be indorsed on the writ applies only to initiatory process issued from the courts in which clerks are necessary officers, and does not extend to attachments issued by a judicial officer. Addition of the words "or thereabouts" after the amount of the demand in a writ does not render the proceeding void, on a collateral attack, under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 540, requiring writs of attachment to state the amount of plaintiff's demand. Davis v. Baker, 88 Cal. 106, 25 Pac. 1108.

Statement of aggregate sum.— A writ containing the amount of each of separate causes of action pleaded, based on an affidavit not stating a cause of attachment as to all, was not invalidated because it alleged the amount demanded as the aggregate of all the claims. Wilson v. Barbour, 21 Mont. 176, 53 Pac. 315.

Variance.— A slight discrepancy between the amount stated in the warrant and that contained in the complaint will not affect, in a collateral proceeding, the validity of a lien secured under the attachment (Shaubhut v. Hilton, 7 Minn. 506), and where the amount stated in the writ is less than that demanded in the complaint or summons it affords no ground for setting the attachment aside, for defendant will not be prejudiced thereby (Tibbet v. Sue, 122 Cal. 206, 54 Pac. 741; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407, 52 Pac. 718; Reed v. Kentucky Bank, 5 Blackf. (Md.) 53). So, too, where the writ and complaint corresponded although the amount named in the affidavit was smaller, a motion to quash the writ was properly denied where plaintiff amended his bond to correspond to the larger amount. is omitted or erroneously stated the writ is ordinarily amendable in that respect.[90]

f. Grounds of Attachment. The writ should state one or more of the statutory grounds upon which it is granted,[91] but in the absence of statutory inhibition the court has inherent power to permit the amendment of an inadvertent error in the statement of the grounds,[92] and a defective statement in the writ may be aided by reference to the affidavit.[93]

Waiver of irregularity.— An irregularity in an attachment in reciting that defendant had disposed of its property with intent to defraud its creditors instead of reciting, as the fact was, that it was about to dispose of its property by means of a fraudulent judgment, is not available to defendant, where no reference is made to such irregularity in the notice of motion to vacate the attachment, as required by the rules of practice. Maine — Special attachment.— Although the precept in every writ of attachment is to attach to the amount therein prescribed, yet where a special attachment is not ordered in writing the return of a nominal attachment has been received as a sufficient service, and the amount or value of the property to be attached,[95] but should not designate the particular property to be taken.[96]

(II) As to Summoning Defendant. Where the statute so requires[97] the writ should contain a direction to the officer to summon defendant,[98] and an omission of this direction has been held fatal.[99]

(III) As to Return. The writ should contain proper directions to the officer as to the return of the writ and where required should specify the return-day [1] and by virtue of the statutes, and the settled practice under them, the officer is under no legal obligation to make a special attachment without written directions to this effect from plaintiff, his agent, or attorney. Betts v. Norris, 15 Me. 468. Where the direction on the back of a writ was, "Mr. officer attach suff." it was held sufficient to indicate to the officer the wish of plaintiff that an attachment should be made, and that the officer would be responsible for omitting to attach, if in his power, when so directed (Kimball v. Davis, 19 Me. 310) even though such direction was not signed (Abbott v. Jacobs, 49 Me. 319).

Defective direction.— A warrant of attachment, in an action against an unincorporated association in the name of its president, is defective where it commands the sheriff only to take the property of defendant, as it does not reach the "property belonging to the association, or owned jointly or in common by all the members thereof," which, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1921, is the only property subject to execution in such action. Mertz v. Fenouillet, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 222, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 217.

95. Fairfield v. Baldwin, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 388.

Where the damages are unliquidated the amount for which the attachment will issue is in the discretion of the court. Rouge v. Rouge, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 421, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 836, 70 N. Y. St. 256 [affirmed in 15 Misc. (N. Y.) 36, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 436, 71 N. Y. St. 487]. In such case the writ may be amended, upon application of plaintiff, by reducing the amount stated in the original attachment. Sulzbacher v. Cawthra, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 545, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 8, 70 N. Y. St. 766 [affirmed in 148 N. Y. 755, 43 N. E. 990].

Direction of amount permissive and not peremptory.— It has been held that a direction to attach property to the value of nine hundred dollars could not be deemed to have restricted the operation of attachment to that amount, making it invalid for the excess, and that the direction should be regarded as permissive and not peremptory. Aldrich v. Arnold, 13 R. I. 655.

Excepting articles exempt.—It is not necessary for the writ to except from the command articles exempt from attachment by statute, as the officer who serves the precept must be presumed to know the law in such cases. Cooke v. Gibbs, 3 Mass. 193.

Where issued against devisees the writ should be limited to the land of the devisor held by such devisees. Connelly v. Lerche, 56 N. J. L. 95, 28 Atl. 430.

An unauthorized command in this respect in a writ otherwise sufficient would not affect its validity. Hines v. Chambers, 29 Minn. 7, 11 N. W. 129. See also Raymond v. Nixon, 5 Okla. 656, 49 Pac. 1110, holding that an order of attachment issued from a probate court directing the sheriff to levy on the lands and tenements of defendant and to seize his personal property was not void, even though the lands of defendant might not be attached in an action in the probate court, and that such direction as to lands and tenements would be treated as surplusage.

97. In Arkansas, before the adoption of the civil code, the writ was required to contain a summons clause (Gould's Dig. Ark. c. 17, § 6), but there is no express provision in the present code. It has been held, however, that a summons and an order of attachment may be joined in the same writ. Rice v. Dale, 45 Ark. 34; Weil v. Kittay, 40 Ark. 528.

1. Archibald v. Thompson, 2 Colo. 388; Backalan v. Littlefield, 64 N. C. 233.

No return-day need be specified in the writ (Blair v. Miller, 42 Ala. 308; Westphal v. Sherwood, 69 Iowa 364, 28 N. W. 640; Hiatt v. Simpson, 35 N. C. 72; Raymond v. Nix, 5 Okla. 656, 49 Pac. 1110; Chase v. Hill, 13 Wis. 222), and although it is usual for the writ to direct the sheriff to make a return by the first day of the next term of the court such direction may be regarded as mere surplusage (Westphal v. Sherwood, 69 Iowa 364, 28 N. W. 640). Compare Brooks v. Godwin, 8 Ala. 296, holding that where an attachment is issued in one county, returnable to a court in another county, the objection may be taken on error, although it was not made in the court below, if it has not been waived by appearing and pleading to the merits.

If the return-day named is the proper day, to wit, the first return-day after the issue of the writ, the writ will not be quashed because it is not made returnable "on the first return-day." Hall v. Kintz, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 90.

Omission of the year.— Where a writ of attachment was attested and issued on Feb. 7, 1867, and made returnable on Tuesday, April 2, without expressing the year, it was held that this must be understood as referring to April of the then current year, and such omission did not invalidate the writ. Nash v. Mallory, 17 Mich. 232 [followed in Vinton v. Mead, 17 Mich. 388].

the place of return.[2] An error in naming the return-day has been held to render the writ void;[3] but as a rule it is considered as rendering it only voidable,[4] so that an error in this respect,[5] or in making the writ returnable to the wrong court,[6] may be cured by amendment. An attachment against a foreign corporation must be made returnable in the same manner as process against individuals.[7]

h. Date. While the writ should bear the date upon which it issues this need not appear in any particular place[8] and an error[9] or an omission[10] in this respect may be cured by amendment.

i. Teste. The writ should be tested as required by law,[11] but if not properly tested may be amended.[12]

j. Signature. The writ should be signed by the clerk[13] or by the judge grant-

The fact that the præcipe did not mention the return-day of the writ is immaterial. It is the duty of the prothonotary, in the absence of specific directions, to make the writ returnable according to law. Simon v. Johnson, 7 Kulp (Pa.) 166.

2. Backalan v. Littlefield, 64 N. C. 233.

Returnable to clerk instead of court.— Where the direction in an attachment was that it should be returned to the clerk of the circuit court instead of to the circuit court itself, it was held to be but a formal error, which could not vitiate the process. Bourne v. Hocker, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 23.

The omission of the word "circuit" before the word "court" is immaterial where the attachment in all other particulars is regular. Byrd v. Hopkins, 8 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 441. See also Wharton v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 510.

But in a county where, in accordance with the Pennsylvania act of May 24, 1878, a rule has been adopted concerning return-days the writ will not be set aside because not made returnable on the first return-day after the issue. 8. Indorsement on back of writ.— It has been held that Tenn. Code, § 3474, is directory, and that the date of an attachment not appearing at the foot of the writ, as is proper, but being indorsed on the back thereof is sufficient. Swan v. Roberts, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 153.

Where the chancellor's fiat on the bill shows that an attachment has been granted and issued, the date of issue, and when returnable and the sheriff's indorsement shows the day it was received and the date of the levy, omission of the date of issue in the writ of attachment itself is immaterial, especially where no question is raised as to the exact date of its issue. The clerk need not sign with his own proper hand. It is sufficient if the writ is signed by his name by another under his direction and in his presence. Clark v. Latham, 25 Ark. 16. Where a deputy clerk issued the writ, signing the clerk's name thereto, his failure to sign his own name as deputy does not render the writ void, it being a mere irregularity and amendable under the statute. Wimberly v. Boland, 72 Miss. 241, 16 So. 905. But see Pendleton v. Smith, 1 W. Va. 16, where it was held that the writ was fatally defective, because signed by the deputy as deputy clerk, instead of being signed by the clerk himself, or by the deputy in the clerk's name.

Presumption as to regularity.— A writ of attachment issued out of the circuit court will be intended to have been signed and sealed by the clerk, until the contrary appears. Morrel v. Buckley, 20 N. J. L. 667.

Waiver of objection.—"The objection to the writ, that the signature of the clerk has been taken from a blank summons, cannot be taken advantage of at this stage of the proceedings. Had it been made in season, by a motion to quash the writ, we should have granted it. But it is too late for that motion, after plea, issue, trial and verdict. Signature by name of justice only.—An attachment issued by one of the justices of the peace of the county has been held good, although signed by his name merely, without the words "Justice of the Peace" or the initials "J. P." Henderson v. Pitman, 20 Ga. 735, 65 Am. Dec. 649. See also Dickson v. Thurmond, 57 Ga. 153, holding that where a justice of the peace in issuing an attachment neglects to add to his signature words or letters denoting his office they may be added on motion, after proving that such officer was duly authorized to issue attachments, that he had signed in his official capacity, and had omitted the words of office accidentally.

Omission in copy.— It has been held in New York where the signature of the judge who grants the warrant is indispensable to the validity of the warrant of attachment that the omission of the signature from the copy of the warrant served is immaterial. Y.) 424, holding that omission of the attorney's signature may be remedied by amendment.

There is no presumption, from the absence of an attorney's signature to a writ on which attachment was made, that it was issued in violation of R. I. Gen. Laws, c. 228, § 25, declaring that no justice or clerk of a district court shall sell any blank writ by him officially signed to any person except an attorney, or deliver to any person other than an attorney any such writ with permission to fill up the same, or cause it to be filled; there being three other ways by which a person not an attorney may lawfully obtain and use a writ. Private seal where no court seal exists.— Where the writ was without the court's seal as the law required, and the clerk affixed a private seal or scroll with the statement that no court seal had yet been secured (the county having only been organized within a year, and the courts not having yet been fully organized) it was held that the writ was not void. Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 15 S. Ct. 129, 39 L. ed. 167.

Lost writ — Presumption of regularity.—

however, the seal was not properly affixed it has been held that the error or omission was amendable.[17]

2. VARIANCE BETWEEN WRIT AND OTHER PAPERS. A material variance between the writ, affidavit, and pleadings, either as to grounds,[18] cause of action,[19] or description of parties[20] is fatal, if the objection is properly raised;[21] but an immaterial variance due to clerical oversight will not invalidate the writ.[22]

3. AMENDMENTS. Some states expressly provide by statute for amendment of the writ, where legal grounds for the attachment existed at the time of its issue; and even in the absence of statutes expressly authorizing defects in form to be corrected the courts have been very liberal in granting applications to amend mere clerical errors and omissions.[23] In many jurisdictions, however, amendment

There is a legal presumption in favor of the due execution of the papers emanating from a public office, so that the sufficiency, as to form and seal, of an attachment writ which has been lost, in the absence of any proof impeaching it, will be presumed. W. 975, where the county judge, having made an order granting an attachment in an action to be brought in a district court, failed to attach the seal of the county court to such order, which was filed with the clerk of the district court to issue an attachment thereupon, it was held that the omission of the seal of the county court did not make the order void, but that it was an irregularity available to defendant in attachment only.

Void writ.—Statutes allowing amendments to writs of attachment relate only to such of the writ is not permitted to cut off intermediate rights acquired by third parties,[24] while in others it has been held that the same right exists to amend against creditors attaching after the issue of a defective writ as against the original debtor.[25]

D. Simultaneous Writs. When defendant has property in several counties separate writs may be issued simultaneously to each county.[26]

E. Successive Writs. In some jurisdictions where the first writ fails through some defect, or where an insufficient amount of property is attached thereunder successive writs may issue to the same or different counties[27] without defects as would not render the process absolutely void. Where the writ is void, it is a nullity, and to amend in such a case would be to create a new writ, giving it a retroactive effect. Clawson v. Sutton Gold Min. Co., 3 S. C. 419; Whitney v. Brunette, 15 Wis. 61.

Indorsements on duplicate writs.— It has been held in Mississippi, that it is not necessary that duplicate writs of attachment should have indorsed thereupon that they are such duplicates, where they are in the name of the same plaintiff, against the same defendant, and returnable to the same court and term. Saunders v. Columbus L., etc., Ins. Co., 43 Miss. 583.

Defect in one writ renders both void.— It has been held under the Georgia act of 1836 where one writ of attachment directed to one county was void on account of misdirection to the sheriff that a simultaneous writ directed to another county was likewise void, although the direction to the sheriff in the latter writ was in the language required by the statute. This decision was put upon the ground that, as in cases of this kind the first is manifestly the foundation of the second, if the first is void the second is void too. In Pennsylvania where a writ of attachment has been issued an alias writ issued for the same cause of action without showing the failure to serve or execute the first writ or without having first entered a discontinuance of the original proceeding will be quashed at the cost of plaintiff. Elliott v. Plukart, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 151.

Effect of dissolution of first writ.— Where a writ of attachment has been dissolved by the court after a hearing on the merits of the application, an alias writ, based on substantially the same state of facts, whether applied for to the same or another court, will not be granted (Schlemmer v. Myerstein, 19 How. IX. PROPERTY SUBJECT TO ATTACHMENT.

A. In General — 1. Rule Stated. To render the property[29] of a debtor liable to seizure upon attachment he must not only have some right or title, either legal or equitable therein,[30] but as a general rule it is held that the prop-also Randle v. Mellen, 67 Md. 181, 8 Atl. 573).

Form of alias writ.— The alias writ should refer to the preceding writ, showing its issue and the amount levied under it. Hamill v. Phenicie, 9 Iowa 525.

Leave of court not necessary.—A court out of which a warrant of attachment is issued has the power to vacate the same, and a second attachment can be obtained upon a proper statement of sufficient new facts; no leave to make application therefor is necessary. Selser Bros. Co. v. Potter Produce Co., 80 Hun (N. Y.) 554, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 527, 62 N. Y. St. 408. Compare Graham v. Canton, etc., R. Co., 26 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 203.

Separate attachments based on different grounds.— It has been held that there may be in the same suit more than one affidavit and attachment based on different grounds and the lien of the subsequent attachment does not relate back to the first attachment (Miller v. White, 46 W. Va. 67, 33 S. E. 332, 76 Am. St. Rep. 791), and that a second attachment at the suit of other plaintiffs and for another cause of action may issue pending the first (Duffin v. Wolf, 21 N. J. L. 475; Brown v. Bissett, 21 N. J. L. 46. Contra, Brundred v. Del Hoyo, 20 N. J. L. 328; Cummins v. Blair, 18 N. J. L. 151; Harris v. Linnard, 9 N. J. L. 58).

Where attached property is lost.— Where a creditor caused property of his debtor to be attached sufficient in value to discharge the debt and, pending litigation, the property was lost through the insolvency of the officer in whose custody it was left and his sureties, it was held that the creditor could not afterward enforce his demand by another attachment against the property of the debtor; and that after sequestering a sufficient amount of the assets to pay his debt the estate of such debtor was discharged. Kenrick v. Huff, 71 Mo. 570.

Where sufficient property attached.— It would perhaps be competent to dismiss alias writs or quash the levy thereof where the estate of defendant levied on under the first attachment was unquestionably ample to satisfy the demand sought to be recovered. Brown v. Isbell, 11 Ala. 1009.

In Louisiana one who has obtained an attachment against a debtor and subsequently applies for a second attachment on the ground of insufficiency of property originally attached must show under oath a continued existence of the debt, and the necessity for the further process asked for or the application will be properly rejected. Favrot v. Delle Piane, 4 La. Ann. 584.

In Mississippi a new bond is necessary where the writ, although purporting on its face to be an alias, was not issued upon any of the causes specified in the statute and was an original proceeding founded on a different action. Jeffries v. Dancey, 44 Miss. 693.

Where affidavit is insufficient.— Where the affidavit was discovered to be insufficient after it had been filed and an order for attachment issued thereon and placed in the sheriff's hands, it was held to be valid on the filing of a supplemental affidavit by plaintiff for the clerk to reissue the same order of attachment, after erasing the indorsement thereupon of the time at which it came into the sheriff's hands. Dean v. Garnett, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 408.

Where bond is insufficient.— Where the attachment is set aside for insufficiency of bond, it is not necessary for plaintiff to file a new petition or affidavit, but an alias writ may issue on the filing of a sufficient bond. Harrison v. Poole, 4 Rob. (La.) 193; Panhandle Nat. Bank v. Still, 84 Tex. 339, 19 S. W. 479.

29. What constitutes property.— Bonds of a corporation deposited with their agent to be delivered to such persons as should be willing to loan money to the company and take them as security for its repayment are in no sense property while in the hands of the agent before delivery, and are therefore not attachable. Coddington v. Gilbert, 17 N. Y. 489. Likewise bonds simply issued and delivered to a bank on condition that it will take them in satisfaction of a debt are not, upon the non-acceptance of this condition, property within the meaning of the attachment law. 2. PERSONALTY — a. In General. Subject to the above qualification it may be stated as a general rule that all the goods and chattels of a defendant are subject to attachment for his debts.[32]

b. Commingled Goods. If the goods of a debtor are so intermingled with visions, the title to the property therein mentioned was entirely in the executor, and that the mere fact that another party held possession under the executor would not make it liable to attachment, as the property of the party holding possession.

Massachusetts.— Jones v. Mitchell, 158 Mass. 385, 33 N. E. 609 (where the debtor having no record title to real estate, and the contingency having happened on which he was to reconvey it, it was held that he had no attachable interest in the land); Spring v. Baker, 8 Allen (Mass.) 267; Stevens v. Briggs, 5 Pick. Vermont.— Chase v. Snow, 52 Vt. 525; Gallup v. Josselyn, 7 Vt. 334, the latter case construing a building contract, and holding that under its conditions growing timber which was on the land of B, for whom a barn was to be built, remained the property of B, and could not be attached for the contractor's debts.

Virginia.— Culbertson v. Stevens, 82 Vt. 406, 4 S. E. 607, where it was held that a debtor, having parted with his legal title and equity of redemption, had no attachable interest.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 167.

Right to convey or dispose of, as a test.— Whether or not property which can be conveyed by the owner will be subject to attachment would seem to depend upon the statute of each state. In a recent Rhode Island case (Wood v. Watson, 20 R. I. 223, 37 Atl. 1030) it is said that if an interest can be disposed of by will, contract, or other conveyance under the statute, there would seem to be no valid objection to its attachment. Similar language is found in Fessler v. Haas, 19 Kan. 216, where it was held that one who builds on and occupies lots in a town, the town site of which was public land of the United States, has sufficient interest in the lots to support an attachment, although the probate judge of the county has not proved up on the town site in trust for the occupants thereof since, under the statutes, such party's contract or conveyance of the property would be good. Compare, however, Young v. Young, 89 Va. 675, 17 S. E. 470, 23 L. R. A. 642, where it was held that although a contingent remainder could be assigned or conveyed yet, under the statutes, it was not a subject of attachment.

Compare Thomson v. Baltimore, etc., Steam Co., 33 Md. 312, where it was held that although under 8 Anne, c. 14, the goods and chattels of a lessee of land could not be seized under execution and removed from the land unless plaintiff in execution should tender to the landlord the arrears of rent due him, yet such property could be attached by an officer without complying with this condition, an attachment not being an execution, and therefore not falling within the statute. The landlord is, however, entitled to his rent out of the proceeds of the attachment sale of such property by the sheriff.

32. Arkansas.— State v. Lawson, 7 Ark. 391, 46 Am. Dec. 293, holding that it was the obvious intention of the legislature to subject every species of property to the payment of the debtor's obligation and that treasury notes were subject to levy and seizure by attachment.

those of another that they cannot be distinguished or identified,[33] the whole may be taken by attachment in an action against the debtor. The officer may, however, retain possession of the goods other than the debtor's only until they are identified or pointed out to him.[34]

e. Growing Crops. Annual growing crops which are the product of industry and care have been held to be properly attachable as the personal property of the owner,[35] but in some jurisdictions it would seem that to be attachable such crops should be fit for harvest.[36]

(Tenn.) 30; Lockwood v. Nye, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 515, 58 Am. Dec. 73.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 122.

Property right, and not mere possession, determines liability to attachment.—It seems to have been argued in some of the earlier cases that property, to be subject to attachment, must be in the actual possession of the debtor, but this view was never taken by the courts; and the mere fact that the property is in the possession of a third party does not exempt it from attachment (Hutcheson v. Ross, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 490; Skillman v. Bethany, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 104; Walton v. Deignan, 2 Nott & M. (S. C.) 248), although in some jurisdictions where the property is in the hands of another there must be a specific direction to the officer to attach it, and not a mere direction to attach the "goods and the estate of" the debtor (Deering v. Lord, 45 Me. 293).

The following species of personalty have been held attachable: Bank notes (Ringo v. Biscoe, 13 Ark. 563; Spencer v. Blaisdell, 4 N. H. 198, 17 Am. Dec. 412; Lovejoy v. Lee, 35 Vt. 430. And see Knowlton v. Bartlett, 1 Pick. Dec. 352. Compare dictum in Bond v. Ward, 7 Mass. 123, 5 Am. Dec. 28); merchandise kept in a store for sale (Batchelder v. Frank, 49 Vt. 90); money (Handy v. Dobbin, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 220; Williams v. Rogers, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 163); a wooden boot hung up at the door of a shoemaker's shop as a sign of his trade (Wallace v. Barker, 8 Vt. 440).

Fixtures which a tenant may remove are subject to attachment. Morey v. Hoyt, 62 Conn. 542, 26 Atl. 127, 19 L. R. A. 611. It must be clear, however, that the fixtures are those that the tenant has in fact a right to remove, because the right to attach supposes of course the right to carry out the attachment, which means the right to remove such structures from the soil when the attachment becomes fixed by judgment. Mayhew v. Hathaway, 5 R. I. 283.

Letters and correspondence are not, in the absence of express statutory authority, attachable. Hergman v. Dettlebach, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 46.

Goods in transit.—The mere fact that the goods of an absconding or non-resident debtor were in transit, passing through the state when attached, is no ground for their exemption from this process. Morrel v. Buckley, 20 N. J. L. 667.

Trade-mark.—Whether or not property in a trade-mark is subject to attachment, quære. Milliken v. Dart, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 24; Hegeman v. Hegeman, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 1.

Trunk containing articles exempted from attachment is subject to attachment and may properly be taken by the officer, opportunity being given to the debtor to remove from the trunk the exempted articles. Towns v. Pratt, 33 N. H. 345, 66 Am. Dec. 726.

Attachment of debts due defendant see GARNISHMENT.

33. Necessity of goods being indistinguishable by the officer.—It is essential that the goods shall be so intermingled that they could not upon due inquiry be distinguished by the officer who makes the attachment, and it would also seem that he should request the aid of the owner of the goods in their identification. Walcott v. Keith, 22 N. H. 196. The fact that a part of the goods had been fraudulently obtained will not change the rule if the intermingling was not such that the identity of the goods was lost. App. 923, 50 Pac. 940; Farmers' Bank v. Morris, 79 Ky. 157 (holding also that after an execution at law had been returned "no property" a growing crop was liable to seizure by attachment at once, notwithstanding the statute prohibiting a levy of execution thereon until after the first day of October); Sims v. Jones, 54 Nebr. 769, 75 N. W. 150, 69 Am. St. Rep. 749.

Standing grass is, however, considered as realty by the New Hampshire court, and therefore not subject to attachment as personal property. Rogers v. Elliott, 59 N. H. 201, 47 Am. Rep. 192 [distinguishing Norris v. Watson, 22 N. H. 364, 55 Am. Dec. 160, and holding that while this latter case decided that a growing crop of grass was not attachable, it could not be inferred from it that the grass would have been attachable had it been ripe].

36. Heard v. Fairbank, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 111, 38 Am. Dec. 394 [approving the analogous case of Penhallow v. Dwight, 7 Mass. 34, 5 Am. Dec. 21].

This is an exception to the old rule which forbids the attachment of property that can-

d. Perishable Property. The mere fact that chattels are perishable will not in itself exempt them from attachment. Not only is this true under statutes providing for a sale of such property,[37] but also, it would seem, in jurisdictions where no provision is made for their sale.[38]

e. Rolling Stock of Corporations. The engines or the freight and passenger cars of a railroad corporation are liable to attachment when not in use the same as other personal property.[39]

f. Watercraft. As a general rule[40] there is no discrimination between vessels or steamboats and other species of personal property, when the kind of property subject to attachment is considered.[41]

g. Interests in Personalty — (I) Interest of Mortgagor — (A) In General. At common law the mortgagor of personalty had not such an interest therein that the chattel could be taken by attachment in an action against him;[42] but the liability of such interest to attachment has in many states been affirmed, either by the recognition of a legal, as well as an equitable, right of property in the mort-not be returned in the same plight, the reason of the rule being held not applicable as applied to mature crops. Cheshire Nat. Bank v. Jewett, 119 Mass. 241.

Tobacco stored in barns or hanging on poles in process of curing, although in such condition that it cannot be moved without damage, is attachable within the rule that all annual products when ripe and fit for harvest are subject to attachment. Cheshire Nat. Bank v. Jewett, 119 Mass. 241.

37. Batchelder v. Frank, 49 Vt. 90.

38. Cilley v. Jenness, 2 N. H. 87, 91, where, although there was no statute providing for the sale of such property, the court, resting their opinion partly upon the analogy between the officer's situation and the situation of other bailees, but more particularly between his condition and the practice under like circumstances in courts of admiralty, held that they would not be "wandering into the province of legislation" by holding the officer liable for permitting the debtor to retain and consume such property; his duty being to expose it to public sale and account for the net proceeds. Compare Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407, where it is said that in the absence of such statute perishable goods would not be attachable. Bond v. Ward, 7 Mass. 123, 5 Am. Dec. 28, is cited by the court as authority for this proposition, but this was decided wholly on the ground that certain goods which could not be distrained at common law were not attachable, and it would seem from a dictum in the case that perishable articles were attachable; at least if their destruction was not hastened or they were not injured by the mere attaching and removing of them.

39. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Gilmore, 37 N. H. 410, 72 Am. Dec. 336. See also Buffalo Coal Co. v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 8 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 126, where the rolling stock of a railroad being expressly made liable to attachment by statute, it was held that the mere fact that the corporation was not a resident of the state could not exempt its property from this process.

40. An exception to this rule arises where a creditor seeks to attach the vessel under a statute providing for an attachment when the debtor is about to remove his property out of the state before the debt becomes due. It is very clear that when the obligation is created the creditor must know that, from the very nature of the property, it would be perhaps useless if it were not taken ouside of the state occasionally in the course of commerce, and therefore he is held to contract with that understanding. Appurtenances of a vessel.— It is said that to take a boat, or a cable and anchor from a vessel, when they are actually in use and necessary to the safety of the vessel, would expose the party to damages; but if the vessel were at the wharf and such appurtenances were not in use they may be properly taken under a writ of attachment, like a harness to a carriage. gagor,[43] or by express statutory provisions.[44] The courts are not, however, uniform in determining just what interest the mortgagor must have in the property before it is attachable. While it is usually held liable so long as the mortgagor's interest is coupled with the legal right to possession,[45] in some jurisdictions, possession or a possessory right to the chattel is expressly adjudged to be essential,[46] and the right does not exist after condition broken.[47] In other jurisdictions the statutes seem to authorize the attachment of mere equities of redemption,[48] and the mortgagor's interest would, it has been held, be attachable after condition broken.[49]

Extension of statute by implication.— Under the Michigan statute of 1880, providing that mortgaged chattels might be levied on and sold under execution against the mortgagor, and a subsequent section providing that an attachment should command the officer to take so much of defendant's chattels, etc., "not exempt from execution," it was held that mortgaged chattels might be taken under an attachment against a mortgagor and sold subject to the mortgage, although the latter statute did not, in express terms, refer to attachments. King v. Hubbell, 42 Mich. 597, 4 N. W. 440.

Conflict with federal law.— If the right by virtue of the state statute would conflict with the right of the mortgagee under a United States statute it cannot be exercised. Thus, a vessel upon which the mortgagees have a claim by virtue of a mortgage duly recorded under the shipping laws of the United States cannot be taken by attachment by virtue of the state statute, although it would be clearly within the provision of the latter statute were it not for the existence of the federal law. Chattels subject to deed of trust are subject to attachment, especially when such trust is in favor of plaintiff. The mere fact that plaintiff elected to choose his statutory, and not his conventional, remedy cannot be objected to by defendant. The Richmond v. Cake, 1 App. Cas. (D. C.) 447.

Application of principle to increase of animals.— Inasmuch as the right to possession of colts until weaned follows the dams (see ANIMALS, 2 Cyc. 309, note 30), such colts will not, before that time, be liable to attachment at the suit of a creditor of the mortgagor of the dams; the right of possession in the dams being in the mortgagee (Rogers v. Highland, 69 Iowa 504, 29 N. Rule applicable in deed of trust.— The above rule is applicable where the grantor in a deed of trust as security for the payment of a debt, after default made, remains in possession of personal property conveyed by it, at least where the deed gives the trustee power to sell enough of the property to pay the demand then due. This is true although only a portion of the demand secured is due and unpaid at the time of the levy of the attachment, and the property conveyed greatly exceeds in value the sum due. (B) When in Possession of Mortgagee. If by virtue of the mortgage the mortgagee is in rightful possession of the property, it cannot as a rule be taken in an attachment against the mortgagor,[50] although in some jurisdictions it seems that if the property has not been applied to the satisfaction of the claim it would be attachable when in the possession of the mortgagee.[51]

(II) Interest of Mortgagee. Personal property, while the possession or right of redemption remains in the mortgagor, is not only not liable to attachment in a suit against the mortgagee,[52] but, it would seem, cannot be thus taken, although the mortgagee has possession, and after condition broken, if it has not in fact been applied to the satisfaction of the debt by foreclosure or otherwise.[53]

3. Realty[54] — a. In General — (I) Rule Stated. Inasmuch as the lands of a debtor are now, as a rule, liable to be taken on execution for his debts,[55] it follows that they are usually liable to attachment,[56] unless by the terms of the statute the intention is clearly otherwise.[57] It is essential, however, that the debtor have some beneficial interest in the land. The bare legal title,[58] or instantaneous seizin

51. Prout v. Root, 116 Mass. 410, which seems to say that under the statutes of that state the property would pass into the custody of the officer, and if the amount due the mortgagee be paid his title is ended, and the possession of the attaching officer cannot be interfered with.

If the mortgagee was in possession under a bill of sale the mere fact that the officer did not know that the bill of sale was intended as a mortgage does not render the levy effective. Voorhies v. Hennessy, 7 Wash. 243, 34 Pac. 931.

The interest of mortgagee and mortgagor is not joint, and hence a plaintiff cannot by joining them in a suit upon a joint debt enlarge the statute of attachment and thus make the interest of the mortgagee attachable. Murphy v. Galloupe, 143 Mass. 123, 8 N. E. 894.

54. What constitutes realty under attachment laws.— In determining what shall constitute real estate in the sense of the attachment law the Rhode Island court say: "We hold that to be real estate in the sense of our attachment law, which our law with regard to the conveyance of real estate treats as such, and requires to be conveyed with the solemnities and public notice with which real estate is, according to its policy, to be conveyed; and regard the notice, required in attachments of real estate to be left at the town clerk's office, as congruous with, and suggestive of, this test of discrimination. All estates in lands and tenements of a longer duration than one year, are, according to this standard, real estate, and should be attached as such." Mayhew v. Hathaway, 5 R. I. 283, 285. Manure made upon a farm in the ordinary course of husbandry (Sawyer v. Twiss, 26 N. H. 345), or an iron pier (Harriman v. Rockaway Beach Pier Co., 5 Fed. 461), is realty and not attachable as goods or chattels separate from the land.

55. See Executions.

Prior to 5 Geo. II, c. 7, lands were not liable to be taken on execution, and it was therefore held that they were not attachable under the Maryland act of 1715. Since that statute they have uniformly been held to be subject to attachment in Maryland. Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182; Davidson v. Beatty, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 594.

57. Thus it has been held that real estate was not liable to attachment within the meaning of the domestic attachment acts of South Carolina and Pennsylvania (Continental Nat. Bank v. Draper, 89 Pa. St. 446; In re Miners' Bank, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 370; Boyce v. Owens, 2 McCord (S. C.) 208, 13 Am. Dec. 711; Jamieson v. Brodrick, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 396), although the rule is otherwise as to foreign attachments in Pennsylvania (Graighle v. Notnagle, Pet. C. C. (U. S.) 245, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,679); and under an early statute of Kentucky land was not attachable upon a return of the capias "not found" (Murray v. Hamilton, Hard. (Ky.) 5; Rees v. Bishop, Hard. (Ky.) 95 note).

The mere fact that the real estate is mortgaged can make no difference if under the statute the officer is commanded to attach real estate. So held under the Connecticut attachment act of 1882, which provided for the institution of insolvency proceedings if the attaching officer could not find sufficient property to satisfy the claimant's demand. would be insufficient,[59] at least as against the equitable owners, where the attaching party has, or is bound by law to take, notice of the paramount outstanding equitable title.[60]

(II) As Dependent Upon Seizure of Personalty. In the absence of any positive statutory limitations exempting real estate from attachment until the debtor's personalty is exhausted such lands would be liable to attachment regardless of the amount of personalty the debtor may possess.[61]

b. Interests in Realty — (I) Equitable Interests Generally. While in the absence of statute, equitable interests in realty are not liable to attachment,[62] in most states such interests are attachable.[63] In a few jurisdictions, however, it

What constitutes attachable interests under the statute.—Under the statutes of Texas the right to attach equitable interests in real estate cannot be denied, but the court, in the case of Chase v. York County Sav. Bank, 89 Tex. 316, 36 S. W. 406, 59 Am. St. Rep. 48, 32 L. R. A. 785, say that it does not follow that every equitable interest is attachable and is still necessary to resort to a court of equity to subject such interests to payment of a debt.[64]

(II) Interest of Mortgagee. The interest of the mortgagee in land, while the mortgage is open and subsisting, is not of such nature as to be liable to attachment.[65] Some of the cases, however, seem to be limited to the particular facts before the court, and do not expressly affirm the non-liability of his interests to attachment after entry but before foreclosure;[66] but inasmuch as the inconveniences and difficulties which would result from the attachment before entry would still prevail after entry and before foreclosure,[67] the distinction, if ever made, does not rest upon sound legal principles, and does not, it is believed, now exist.[68]

(III) Mortgagor's Right to Redeem. While, in most states, the mortgagor's equity of redemption was not liable to attachment at common law,[69] the rule is changed by statute.[70]

it was held that where the absolute title to land, the purchase-price for which had been paid by several persons, was conveyed to one person, to be resold by him, and the proceeds divided among those furnishing the purchase-price, the equitable interest of such persons was not attachable. This interest was a mere right in equity to demand an accounting of the proceeds of the sale of the land, and was held not to come within the operation of the statute. But see Maloney v. Bewley, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 642, holding that interest in the enhanced value of land by reason of improvements placed thereon, and because of a small financial outlay expended as interest on the purchase-price constitutes an attachable interest in the land.

In Tennessee an attachment against such interest, although provided for by statute, must be issued from a court of equity (Lane v. Marshall, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 30); and it is necessary to show that it is intended to be attached as an equity, and the holder of the legal title must be made a party (Blackburn v. Clarke, 85 Tenn. 506, 3 S. W. 505; Hillman v. Werner, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 586; Lane v. Marshall, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 30). If issued by a court of law it could not be levied upon equitable interests. Attachment of right of redemption from a tax sale.— Whether or not the right to remove land which has been sold for taxes is attachable is of course dependent directly upon the statute. In Massachusetts (Adams v. Mills, 126 Mass. 278) it is held that this interest is not, under the statute, attachable; but in Tennessee (Herndon v. Pickard, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 702, it was held that it might be reached by an attachment in chancery.

B. Property Fraudulently Conveyed. Inasmuch as a conveyance of property with intent to defraud one's creditors may be treated as a nullity by them,[75] it follows that property which has been thus conveyed may be attached as the property of the grantor by his creditors the same as if no conveyance had been made.[76] To sustain his attachment, however, the creditor must show fraud upon the part of the transferee,[77] or that the deed to him was without consideration and wholly voluntary.[78] In some jurisdictions it has been held that the liability to attachment is confined to the specific property conveyed, and that, if the fraudulent assignee converts it into money or otherwise changes its identity, the proceeds held by him would not be attachable,[79] nor can the property be attached if conveyed by the fraudulent assignee to an innocent third party for a valuable consideration.[80]

United States.— Thompson v. Baker, 141 U. S. 648, 12 S. Ct. 89, 35 L. ed. 889, holding that inasmuch as the laws of Texas declared conveyances in fraud of creditors absolutely void the right of a creditor of a fraudulent transferrer to attach is plain, and a purchaser of the land pendente lite will take it subject to the attachment lien.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 179.

Attempted conveyance.— Since a verbal contract for the sale of land is not enforceable, such land may still be levied on as that of the vendor, he being in possession. Kendall v. Kennedy, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 532.

Fraudulent conveyance may be shown by officer.— The sheriff may justify his attachment of the property of the defendant named in his precept, which has been conveyed to a third party, by showing that such conveyance was fraudulent against creditors. Hall v. Stryker, 27 N. Y. 596. It has been held essential, however, that the officer take the property into his actual possession, and that therefore if the debtor has at the time only an equity in the property which cannot be reached by the attachment, the sheriff cannot assail the transfer as fraudulent. And see Neil v. Tenney, 42 Me. 322, where, although it was agreed that there was no actual fraud on the part of the grantee, it seems that the transfer was made without proper consideration, and it was held that the property was subject to attachment by the creditor.

79. Such proceeds can be reached only by a creditor's suit. Lawrence v. Bank of Republic, 35 N. Y. 320, 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 502; Lanning v. Streeter, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 33; Campbell v. Erie R. Y.) 386. Compare Flake v. Day, 22 Ala. 132, holding that such proceeds may be reached by an attachment in chancery, which is in effect, however, a proceeding by garnishment.

When provision of insolvent law is violated.— It has been said that an attaching creditor cannot avoid a sale and delivery of property simply on the ground that it is made with the intent to prefer another creditor, in violation of a provision of the insolvency law, and that the provisions of the insolvent law for the avoidance of sales, transfers, and attachments which may operate as a preference are designed exclusively for the benefit of those who come in under the assignee to obtain an equal share of the property of the insolvent in the mode provided by law, and cannot be invoked in aid of a person who stands only in the position of a creditor endeavoring to secure his whole debt by means of an attachment. Gardner v. Lane, 9 Allen (Mass.) 492, 85 Am. Dec. 779.

80. Evidence of fraud in purchaser.— The mere fact that a purchaser from a fraudulent vendee takes his title by quitclaim deed is not conclusive evidence that he is not a purchaser in good faith and without notice of the fraud. Mansfield v. Dyer, 131 Mass. 200.

What constitutes notice to purchaser.— In an attachment of land held by a fraudulent grantee, it would seem to be necessary, if the attachment is to operate as a notice to any purchaser of the assignee, that the premises in the attachment return be particularly described, or described to such an extent and in such a way that an inspection of the return would show an intention to attach the particular premises. Therefore a general attachment of all a debtor's interest in a town does not hold land fraudulently conveyed by the debtor by a deed recorded before the attach-

C. Pledged Property. A chattel, pledged upon sufficient consideration,[81] is not liable to attachment in an action against a pledgor[82] without discharging the debt for which the property is held as security.[83] Whether in the absence of statutory authorization,[84] a creditor would have this right upon discharging the debt for which the property is held is a matter of some doubt. In one decision the existence of this right has been intimated,[85] while in another state it was intimated that the statutory authorization was necessary.[86]

D. Property Held by Trustee. Where a defendant holds the title to property merely as a trustee it is not subject to attachment for his debts,[87] notwithstanding the fact that the attaching creditor had no notice of the trust prior to his attachment.[88]

E. Property or Interest Held Under Contract — 1. In General. In determining whether or not a contractual interest relative to property is of such nature as to be attachable each case must be governed by its own facts. It would seem, however, that when a debtor's pecuniary interest in property is dependent upon a mere contingency[89] it is not attachable, and this is apparently ment, and conveyed by a fraudulent grantee after the attachment to an innocent purchaser for value. Ashland Sav. Bank v. Mead, 63 N. H. 435.

What constitutes sufficient consideration. — Where a party had conveyed property in fraud of his creditors and plaintiff had bought it of the assignee, and verbally agreed to pay for it at certain rates in his notes on time, it was held that, before making any payment or giving the notes, the verbal promise to pay was not sufficient to protect the title of the purchaser against the attachment. Dixon v. Hill, 5 Mich. 404.

81. A pledge of personal property to a receiptor to secure him for the liability which he has incurred in procuring the discharge of other property of the debtor which has been attached is sufficient consideration. Thompson v. Stevens, 10 Me. 27.

82. Sabel v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1755, 61 S. W. 367.

The reason being that since the attaching creditor can acquire no greater right in the attached property than the defendant had at the time of the attachment (see infra, XII, B, 1, a), he cannot take possession of the chattel without at least paying the debt for which it was held as security.

The fact that the pledgor would have some interest in the surplus after the payment of the amount secured is immaterial. Leinkauf Banking Co. v. Grell, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 275, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 1083; Neill v. Rogers Bros. Produce Co., 41 W. Va. 37, 23 S. E. 702.

86. Sargent v. Carr, 12 Me. 396, 397, where it is said: "It seems to have been generally regarded as too doubtful and uncertain, to attempt its enforcement at law. The sense of the community rather seems to have been, that to make property of this description accessible to creditors, some interposition was necessary on the part of the legislature."

87. Rodgers v. Hendsley, 2 La. 597; Davis v. Taylor, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 134; Dow v. Sayward, 14 N. H. 9. Compare Carney v. Emmons, 9 Wis. 114, in which case it is not clear whether the trustee had more than the bare legal estate or not, but where the court held that this interest, whatever it was, was taken by the creditor, and that it could not be affected by a suit by the beneficiary against such trustee filed after the execution sale, where neither the attaching creditor nor the purchaser were made parties.

88. And equity will enjoin an attachment in such case (Houghton v. Davenport, 74 Me. 590), or, where the trustee was in equity bound to convey the property to the cestui que trust, will decree a conveyance to the latter from the levying creditor (Hart v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 33 Vt. 252). Compare Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410, from which it seems that if the attaching creditors are bona fide and without notice of the trust, the attachment will hold. And whether notice subsequent to the attachment but before levy would affect the creditors who had attached without notice, quære. This latter point was also suggested by Bennett, J., in Pinney v. Fellows, 15 Vt. 525, but left undecided, as under the facts in that case the attaching creditor was held to have notice.

true even though the debtor be entitled to defend his possession against a wrong-doer or intruder.[90]

2. For Conveyance of Land. In some jurisdictions the right and interest which a person has obtained by virtue of a contract[91] for the conveyance of real estate upon the performance of a condition by him is subject to attachment.[92] The position of the obligee must be such, however, that upon performance of the condition a conveyance could be enforced. Therefore if he has forfeited his right by the non-performance of a condition precedent,[93] or if the contract is conditioned in the alternative, either to convey to, or to purchase property of, the obligee,[94] the interest would not be attachable.

3. Lease. Whether or not property or an interest therein held under a lease is attachable in an action against the lessee is dependent not only upon the statute but upon the terms of the lease as well.[95] Under a statute making only such property attachable as is subject to execution it is held that a leasehold estate is wards, 5 Nev. 84). And see Dickerman v. Ray, 55 Vt. 65.

Interest under building contract.— A contractor who erects a building on the land of another under an agreement that payments shall be made as the work progresses and, after the work has been partly completed and some of the payments made, abandons his work, has no interest in the building attachable at the instance of his creditors who furnished the materials therefor. Sleeper v. Emery, 59 N. H. 374.

90. Vose v. Stickney, 8 Minn. 75. See also Howe v. Keeler, 27 Conn. 538, holding that under the provisions of a contract whereby a party was to take possession of and run a corporation's factory, at the latter's risk and expense until a debt was paid, the possession of the party was coupled with such an interest that the factory was not attachable by a creditor of the corporation, except upon a payment of the claims for the payment of which the factory was being operated.

An assignee of a bill of lading with draft attached takes the contract of the shipper and stands in his shoes with the same rights. Therefore if a party has a cause of action against a shipper, in which an attachment would lie, it may be levied on the property taken by the assignee of the bill of lading and draft. Under parol contract.— The interest of one under a parol contract of conveyance is attachable if the circumstances are such that the contract could be enforced in equity. Johnson v. Bell, 58 N. H. 395.

Contract may be in name of another.—The mere fact that a debtor procures the contract or bond for the conveyance to be executed to a third person, there being no interest in the person except to hold the title for the debtor, will not preclude an attachment of the debtor's interest. Woods v. Scott, 14 Vt. 518.

92. Houston v. Jordan, 35 Me. 520; Whitmore v. Woodward, 28 Me. 392; Whittier v. Vaughan, 27 Me. 301; Wise v. Tripp, 13 Me. 9.

In New York, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 645, which provides that "the real property, which may be levied upon by virtue of a warrant of attachment, includes any interest in real property, either vested or not vested which is capable of being aliened by the defendant," the interest of a party in possession of land under a contract of purchase on which he has made partial payments, and under which he is entitled to a conveyance on completing his payment, may be levied upon in attachment, notwithstanding section 1253 provides that "the interest of a person, holding a contract for the purchase of real property, is not bound by the docketing of a judgment; and cannot be levied upon or sold, by virtue of an execution, issued upon a judgment." Higgins v. McConnell, 130 N. Y. 482, 29 N. E. 978, 42 N. Y. St. 363 [reversing 56 Hun (N. Y.) 277, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 588, 30 N. Y. St. 958, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 322].

94. Dodge v. Beattie, 61 N. H. 101, 105, where the contract with the owner of the land was that the debtor should cut and manufacture the timber on the land at a sawmill erected by the debtor for that purpose, and that the owner of the land should buy the mill, or sell him the land, at his election, after the timber was cut and manufactured. The court, in discussing this contract, say: "Whatever right he had under the contract was not one of the nature of a present interest in real estate. There was no vested interest. It depended upon a double contingency — contingency upon a contingency. It was only a right to acquire the right to compel the owners of the land to make the alternative election to buy his mill or sell to him their land."

95. Tuohy v. Wingfield, 52 Cal. 319; Potter v. Cunningham, 34 Me. 192.

Not attachable.—Thus where, by the terms of the lease of a farm, it was stipulated that "all the hay and straw should be used on said farm," the hay raised thereon by the lessee would be subject to this condition and not liable to attachment or execution by his creditors. Coe v. Wilson, 46 Me. 314.

If the lease is absolutely void, so that the tenant acquires no right under it, the increase of the leased property, if attached as his, may not attachable where it does not give the lessee general power to sub-let.[96] If by the terms of the lease the property or produce is to be held for the rent at the disposal of the lessor, who may enter and take it in case of a default, it would seem that such an agreement, not being accompanied by a delivery of possession, would not hold against the lessee's creditors who could, before such entry, maintain an attachment upon the term demised.[97] On the other hand, if the agreement is such that the property or produce is to remain in the lessor until the payment of the rent, and no entry is required to vest it in him,[98] or if the right of the lessee to the property does not become perfected until a certain part of the contract is performed[99] it would not be attachable as the tenant's.

F. Property Held Jointly[1] — 1. In General. The interest of a party in property held jointly with others is liable to attachment in an action against him, and an officer may take possession of the whole.[2] In New York,[3] if the enforcement of a joint liability is sought the joint property of the debtors may be attached and sold, although summons is served on one of the debtors only.[4]

2. As Tenants in Common. The interest of a tenant in common of property may be attached in an action against him[5] and the property removed, notwith-be taken in trover from the attaching creditor by parties having the legal title thereto. Foster v. Gorton, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 185.

Effect of landlord's waiver of condition as to sub-letting.— A written waiver by the landlord of the conditions of the lease and of the benefit of the statute prohibiting subletting without his consent, delivered to the tenant's creditor prior to the issue of the attachment, renders the leasehold subject to attachment, although the tenant had no knowledge of the landlord's waiver until after the levy. Copeland v. Cooper Grocery Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 886.

Attachment of right to cut timber or grass on state land.—Prior to the Maine act of July 1, 1857, the right to cut and carry away timber or grass from lands sold by the states of Maine and Massachusetts, when the soil thereof was not conveyed, was not subject to attachment. Necessity of serving such notice on at least one of the debtors.— In Stoutenburgh v. Vandenburgh, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 229, it is held that this proceeding is only applicable where an action has been commenced, and that it is essential that process be served upon one or more of the joint debtors before such a judgment can be entered. If the judgment is entered by confession without action it can only be against the parties who signed the confession.

5. Connecticut.— Buddington v. Stewart, 14 Conn. 404, where it was contended that this general rule did not apply in case the property attached was a ship, because it was said that as a majority of the owners of the ship could send her upon a voyage contrary to the will of the minority, an officer who had attached only the interest of the minority could not detain her from the others. But the court held that if the majority in a case like this wished to send the vessel to sea the officer could compel them to give security for the lien acquired by the attachment, and that it would be a breach of his official duty to part with his possession of the ship without such security.

Georgia.— Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18.

North Carolina.— Boylston Ins. Co. v. Davis, 68 N. C. 17, 12 Am. Rep. 624, construing a contract by which a wrecker was to move goods from a wrecked vessel for a standing the stipulations between the parties be thereby impaired,[6] the purchaser thereof becoming a tenant in common with the others in his stead.[7] The officer must, however, sell only the share of the debtor in the property,[8] and the sale of all the property would, it has been held, constitute him a trespasser ab initio.[9]

G. Property Exempt From Attachment[10]— 1. On Ground of Public Policy or of Conflict in Laws — a. Books of Account. Although books of account are often evidences of debt they are not so intimately connected with the demands charged therein as to make their attachment equivalent to the attachment of the debt, or, in the absence of statute,[11] to create any lien thereon.[12] It has also been held that inasmuch as a seizure and sale of such books would be productive of great injury to the debtor, without a corresponding benefit to the creditor, the books themselves would not be attachable.[13]

b. Interest of Preëmptioner of Land. Inasmuch as the interest of a preëmp-certain per cent of the property saved, as constituting the parties tenants in common of the property taken from the vessel and landed on the beach by the wrecker.

Oregon.— Beezley v. Crossen, 14 Oreg. 473, 13 Pac. 306, construing a contract whereby a party was to take care of sheep for a term, and holding that it created a tenancy in common in the wool.

Vermont.— Frost v. Kellogg, 23 Vt. 308, construing an agreement by which a tenant was to work a farm for a year in consideration of half of the crop, half of the natural increase of certain sheep, and a part of the wool produced to constitute the landlord and tenant tenants in common of the wool.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 190.

Application of rule to crops grown on shares.— Where crops are raised under a contract providing for the payment of rent by a share of the crops it would seem that in the absence of an expressed definite intention in the contract the parties should be treated as tenants in common of the crop (Sims v. Jones, 54 Nebr. 769, 75 N. W. 150, 69 Am. St. Rep. 749), and the landlord would thus have an attachable interest in them before their apportionment (Sims v. Jones, 54 Nebr. 769, 75 N. W. 150, 69 Am. St. Rep. 749; Rentfrow v. Lancaster, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 321, 31 S. W. 229). The rule has been held otherwise, however (Howard County v. Kyte, 69 Iowa 307, 28 N. W. 609), although not to the extent of allowing an attachment against the tenant, before the crops are apportioned, to defeat the interest of the landlord (Atkins v. Womeldorf, 53 Iowa 150, 4 N. W. 905).

Property severable in nature.— If property owned by several tenants in common is of such a nature that each tenant may sever and appropriate his share, if it can be determined by measurement or weight, without the consent of the others, and if he can sell or destroy it, without being liable to them in an action for the conversion of the common property, it follows that an attaching creditor of a tenant in common of such property may lawfully seize and sever his debtor's share. Newton v. Howe, 29 Wis. 531, 9 Am. Rep. 616 [citing Tripp v. Riley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 333].

Effect of partition after attachment.— If a creditor who has two demands against the tenants in common attaches upon one of these demands all of his debtor's undivided interest in the land, after which a partition of the land is made, he may upon the other demand attach the debtor's separate share without waiving his attachment of the undivided interest. tioner of land is unassignable before the issue of the patent, such interest is not liable to attachment during that time.[14]

c. Intoxicating Liquors. Since an attachment can be made fully effective only by sale, and since such sale would defeat the right of forfeiture which is often provided for, as well as violate the statute itself, it follows that in those jurisdictions where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited, they are not subject to attachment.[15] In some jurisdictions, however, the attachment has been upheld notwithstanding the statute, apparently upon the ground that such goods do not lose their character of property by being illegally kept for sale.[16]

d. Property in State of Manufacture. When property is in such a state of manufacture that if taken it could not be returned to defendant in the same condition should plaintiff's claim fail,[17] or when it would be rendered nearly or entirely valueless by the arrest of the manufacturing process, and care or skill is required in its completion,[18] it has been held not liable to attachment [19]

e. When Carried or Worn by Person. Property which is being carried or worn by a person in such position or manner that it cannot be taken without an assault or violating his personal security is not liable to attachment.[20]

18. Wilds v. Blanchard, 7 Vt. 138, where the question was whether a log coal-pit was attachable while on fire and partly burned, and the court in their decision cite as other illustrations of the principle baker's dough, the materials in the crucibles in the process of fusion in a glass factory, the burning ware in a potter's oven, a burning brick-kiln, or a burning pit of charcoal.

19. Rule not absolute.— While the court expressly states in Wilds v. Blanchard, 7 Vt. 138, that such property is not subject to attachment, the real gist of the case is that the officer cannot be compelled to attach and take the risk of the property becoming valueless, nor is he required to turn artist and carry forward the process of manufacture. But it is conceived that should the officer be willing to assume this risk he may attach. In the analogous case of Hale v. Huntley, 21 Vt. 147, which fully explains Wilds v. Blanchard, 7 Vt. 138, the officer did attach a charcoal-pit, where, although the coal was fully burned, some labor and skill were still necessary in order to separate and preserve it properly. While the pit was in a much different state in this case than in the former Vermont case, yet it is clear that the real right of the officer to attach existed in both.

Exemption as determined by common-law distress not followed in Vermont.— Inasmuch as the purpose of the common-law distress was to compel the appearance of defendant, while that of attachment is to satisfy a judgment, the court, in Wilds v. Blanchard, 7 Vt. 138, state that they are not confined simply to objects of common-law distress.

Application of distress doctrine as to chattels in actual use.— A stage-coach with horses hitched thereto, and about to start, the passengers for the trip being engaged but not seated, or a coach upon its arrival at its usual stopping-place, although the passengers are not yet distributed, is liable to attachment. While it is true that chattels actually in use could not at common law be distrained for rent, yet this principle was held not to apply to the facts in this case in this advanced state of our jurisprudence. But as to whether or not a stage-coach actually traveling is liable to be stopped and attached, quære. Potter v. Hall, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 368, 15 Am. Dec. 226.

The reason is that the allowance of such procedure would tend to a breach of the peace. There is also a common-law foundation for this holding, inasmuch as at common law chattels in actual use could not, for the same reason, be taken or distrained. Mack v. Parks, 8 Gray (Mass.) 517, 69 Am. Dec. 267.

is paid or secured are held to be not liable to attachment at the hands of a state officer.[21]

g. When Used in Transportation of Mail. The wilful obstruction of the mails being expressly prohibited by congress, any vehicle or vessel which is actually engaged in such service would, during such time, be exempt from attachment.[22]

2. When in Custody of Law — a. Rule Stated. Where property has been taken by judicial process and is held by the court or its officers for a specific purpose, or until the termination of a suit, it is clear that its subsequent attachment would interfere with the jurisdiction and administration of justice of the former court and it is therefore not allowable.[23]

b. Applications of Rule — (i) Property Delivered on Claimant's Bond. Where property is delivered to a claimant upon the execution of a forthcoming or delivery bond, if the bond is conditioned to hold the property subject to the order of the court,[24] or to return the property should claimant fail in his claim,[25] such property would not be attachable. On the other hand, if the bond operates as an absolute discharge of the property and a relinquishment of the lien thereon,[26] it would then be liable to a subsequent attachment.

(ii) Property Held Under Prior Levy. Property which is held by an

The reason is that the United States has a lien on the goods for the payment of duty imposed thereupon, and being entitled to a virtual custody of them from the time of their arrival in port until the duty is paid or secured, any attachment by a state officer is an interference with such lien and right of custody, and, being repugnant to the laws of the United States, is void. officer under a levy of a valid writ of attachment[27] is in the constructive possession of the court and pending such litigation is not subject to attachment by another officer.[28] If, however, the officer unlawfully releases his possession of the property,[29] or fails to take execution upon it within the time prescribed by law,[30] the property would then cease to be within the custody of the law and would therefore be attachable.

Change of Texas statute.— The Texas cases just cited were decided previous to a change of the statutes made in 1887. Doctrine not applicable to surplus.— The principle of custodia legis does not apply to a surplus which the officer has after satisfying the execution; and therefore where the property seized under the attachment greatly exceeds in value the claim under which it is seized, the excess, nothing else being in the way, is liable for the debtor's debts and may be seized under junior attachments. X. LEVY OF ATTACHMENT.

A. In General — 1. NECESSITY OF LEVY — a. To Jurisdiction. In an attachment suit where there is no personal service on defendant a levy is essential to give the court jurisdiction to proceed to judgment.[35]

b. To Creation of Lien. The lien sought to be created by proceedings in attachment is dependent upon the actual levy of such attachment,[36] and an attach-

The reason, as given by Brewer, J., in McKinney v. Purcell, 28 Kan. 446, 448, is that "while, by giving a replevin bond, the plaintiff obtains possession of the goods, this does not change the fact that they are still the subject-matter of litigation, and by legal fiction still to be deemed in the possession of the law. If the replevin action be determined adversely to the plaintiff, he has the right to return the very goods replevied, and the defendant has a corresponding right to enforce such return. It is true, the judgment in replevin actions ordinarily runs in the alternative to guard against an inability to make or compel a delivery of the property; but still the action of replevin is in its nature an action to determine and enforce the rightful possession of specific property; and while that action is pending, the law should not permit the seizure, under execution or attachment, of that property, in such a manner as to prevent the full enforcement of the judgment in the replevin action." The reason, as well stated in the case of Haley v. Reid, 16 Ga. 437, 439, is that "to 'levy' means to seize — to take corporeally. It follows that what cannot be seized — what cannot be taken corporeally — cannot be levied on."

Jurisdiction over property relates to time of levy.— On service of the attachment the property attached immediately comes within the jurisdiction of the court, although service of the summons on defendant is necessary to give jurisdiction of his person. 2. Effect of Levy — a. Upon Title and Possession of Property. An attachment levied upon property does not change the title thereto,[38] although, as in the case of personalty, it may be taken from the possession and control of defendant,[39] but only enables plaintiff to obtain security for an anticipated judgment.[40] The general property remains in defendant, who may alienate such property subject to the lien of the attachment.[41] An attaching creditor acquires no title to the Murphy v. Cochran, 80 Ky. 239.

Filing a bill operates as lis pendens.— Strictly speaking a lien upon the property described is not created by the mere filing of the bill and without a levy of the writ of attachment, but the filing of a bill operates as a lis pendens during which all transfers are void and the property is thus practically secured until the lien of attachment can be made to adhere thereto. property attached by means of his attachment,[42] and even, it has been held, no right of action against a third person, who may take the property from the officer or destroy it.[43] The attaching officer acquires at most only a special property in the articles attached,[44] and by a levy on realty acquires neither right to possession nor special property therein,[45] nor is the interest or possession of the debtor divested by such levy.[46] Such levy merely creates a specific lien upon the property and takes it into the custody of the law to secure it against alienation of the debtor and the judgment of other creditors and to hold it to be levied upon by execution when judgment shall have been obtained.[47]

b. As Satisfaction of Debt or Judgment. A levy of attachment has been held to be a satisfaction of a debt, if the property is of a sufficient amount, even though the property be wasted by the negligence of the officer. If, however, the loss occurs without fault on the officer's part the claim will not be extinguished.[48]

This right of the debtor is founded on the principle lying at the foundation of the right of property, that the general ownership carries with it the full power of disposition, and when such ownership is not taken away, but only limited, as in the case of a lien, the power of disposing still remains subject only to the lien. Attachment equivalent to levy on execution.— Where a debt is secured by deed of trust and the creditor, instead of proceeding under the deed of trust, brings suit by attachment, there is no doubt that an attachment of sufficient property is, like an execution levied, satisfaction of the debt, and may be so pleaded in an action to have the deed of trust canceled. Yourt v. Hopkins, 24 Ill. 326.

According to other decisions, however, the levy of an attachment is not a satisfaction of plaintiff's demand as the levy of an execution would be,[49] and it has been held that the seizure of property, even to the full value of the sum claimed under an order of attachment issued during the pendency of an action, is not necessarily a satisfaction of the judgment afterward obtained, and that it must be shown affirmatively that the property was applied to and satisfied the judgment.[50]

c. Where Obtained by Improper Means. It may be stated as a general rule that where a levy is obtained by any improper means, as for instance by the use of any fraudulent devices to obtain possession of the property, it will be invalid.[51]

B. Who May Levy — 1. In General. It may be stated as a general rule that the writ should be levied by the officer to whom it is directed.[52]

2. Particular Officers — a. Sheriffs and Their Deputies. Attachments may usually be levied by the sheriff of a county,[53] although directed to any constable of the county,[54] and in certain cases, as where the attachment is for more than a certain amount or returnable to certain courts, the sheriff or his deputy alone is authorized to levy.[55] The power of a sheriff to levy an attachment may

Levy by constable — Delivery of property to sheriff.—When an attachment is issued by a justice of the peace returnable to the circuit court, and placed in the hands of a constable to be executed (Ala. Code, § 2956), if the constable delivers property to the sheriff, the latter holds it in his official capacity as sheriff and not as a mere bailee of the constable. Joseph v. Henderson, 95 Ala. 213, 10 So. 843.

55. An attachment for more than fifty dollars returnable to the circuit court can be also be exercised by a properly appointed and authorized deputy of such sheriff.[56]

b. Constables and Their Deputies. Attachments may in certain cases be levied by a constable,[57] but as a rule their power in this respect is confined to attachments issuing from and returnable to certain courts,[58] and to attachments for sums not exceeding a certain amount fixed by statute.[59] A deputy constable levied only by the sheriff. Brinsfield v. Austin, 39 Ala. 227.

Appointment of special deputy held sufficient.—Where an attachment was indorsed as follows: "I do hereby authorize R. Thorn, as my special deputy to execute the within attachment. 10th February, 1841. M. E. Gary, Sheriff S. C.," it was held that the appointment of the special deputy was regular. The court said: "There is no statute in this State which prescribes the manner in which sheriffs shall appoint their deputies, and we cannot conceive of any valid objection to the special deputation which is shown by the record in this case." Miller v. McMillan, 4 Ala. 527, 530.

Necessity for deputy to show his authority.—A person deputed to serve a writ of attachment has all the powers which may be exercised by the sheriff, except that he is not to be recognized or obeyed as a sheriff or known officer, but must show his authority and make known his business if required by the party who is to obey the same. Burton v. Wilkinson, 18 Vt. 186, 46 Am. Dec. 145.

Ratification of levy by unauthorized person.— A sheriff cannot ratify the illegal act of one assuming to act as his deputy and making a levy in his name without his authority. Perkins v. Reed, 14 Ala. 536.

Levy by infant deputy.— In Moore v. Graves, 3 N. H. 408, it was held that an infant under the age of twenty-one years may be legally deputed by the sheriff to serve and return a particular writ of attachment.

Mississippi —Attachment against absconding debtors.— The Mississippi statute which authorizes constables to execute attachments against absconding debtors is enabling in its character and does not embrace the case of non-resident debtors. Constables therefore cannot execute attachments returnable into the circuit courts against non-residents and a bond taken by a constable from a non-resident to replevy property attached is not binding, because taken by an improper officer, and should with the levy be quashed on motion. Lawrence v. Featherston, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 345.

Levy by policeman with powers of constable.—Under a city charter conferring upon policemen appointed by the city council all the powers of a constable in respect to the service of process, and apparently authorizing no appointment of police by any other power, one who testifies that in serving and levying an attachment he was acting as a policeman of such city will be presumed to have been appointed by the city council in the absence of any evidence impeaching his title. Miller v. Fay, 40 Wis. 633.

Power of constable to attach before giving official bond.— Vt. Comp. Stat. p. 116, §§ 27, 28, give town constables when elected the same powers as sheriffs, and provide that before entering on their duties they shall give bonds to the town as the selectmen may require, and on a constable's refusing to give such bond his office shall be considered vacant. A constable, when elected and before a bond had been required of him, could attach property under a writ, and on his failure to deliver the same on execution when demanded the town would be liable. Bowman v. Barnard, 24 Vt. 355.

Levy of attachment issued from circuit court without authority of sheriff void.— The levy of an attachment issued out of the circuit court and delivered to a constable instead of the sheriff to be executed, without any authority therefor being given by the sheriff, is void. Weingardt v. Billings, 51 N. J. L. 354, 20 Atl. 59.

Service by constable of writ directed to sheriff.— Under Iowa Code, § 3934, the word "sheriff" is extended to include constables, when the proceedings are in a justice's court. Freeman v. Lind, 112 Iowa 39, 82 N. W. 800.

59. Sums exceeding fifty dollars.— A constable has no authority to levy or serve an original attachment for a sum exceeding fifty dollars and returnable to the circuit court. Brinsfield v. Austin, 39 Ala. 227; Martin v. Dollar, 32 Ala. 422, in which latter case it was held that the judgment by default based on such void levy is absolutely void.

may, it has been held, execute a domestic attachment, although it is directed to the constable.[60]

c. Coroners. In some jurisdictions it is expressly provided by statute that, in actions where the sheriff is defendant, the service of the attachment shall be made by a coroner, and service in such case by the sheriff's deputy is unauthorized and defective.[61]

d. Elisors. In case there should be neither a sheriff nor a coroner in the county, a writ of attachment may be served by an elisor or special officer appointed by the court.[62]

e. Indifferent Persons Specially Deputed. In some states it is held that a magistrate may appoint an indifferent person to levy an attachment.[63]

f. Town Marshals. A town marshal is not authorized to levy an attachment and hence a levy by him creates no lien, unless he is specially appointed for that purpose.[64]

Where damages sued for do not exceed seventy dollars.— A constable may serve a writ where the sheriff or his deputy is a party, if the damages sued for or recovered do not exceed seventy dollars. Briggs v. Strange, 17 Mass. 405.

Where amount does not exceed amount of constable's bond.— Ala. Code, § 2956, authorizes the levy of an attachment for a sum exceeding final jurisdiction of the justice returnable into the circuit court by a constable, provided the amount shall not exceed the amount of the penalty of the constable's bond. Joseph v. Henderson, 95 Ala. 213, 10 So. 843; Carter v. Ellis, 90 Ala. 138, 7 So. 531. But this statute does not authorize a special constable to levy such an attachment. Carter v. Ellis, 90 Ala. 138, 7 So. 531.

"The sheriff can execute a writ against his deputy, but the deputy cannot execute one against the sheriff. This distinction is obvious. The sheriff acts in his own name, and by virtue of his official authority. The deputy acts in the name of the sheriff, and by virtue of the authority from him derived." Ford v. Dyer, 26 Miss. 243, 244.

Effect of service and return by coroner of writ directed to sheriff.—Where a writ of attachment properly directed to the sheriff was served and returned by the coroner, who had no authority so to do, it was held that this was not ground for dismissing the suit, although it was matter which would excuse defendant from answering. Such an indorsement is a mere nullity imposing no obligation on defendant to appear, and subjecting him to no legal consequences as a default. But having been legally issued and directed to the proper officer the writ cannot be avoided or made void by matter subsequent. Hughes v. Martin, 1 Ark. 386.

62. McFarland v. Tunnel, 51 Mo. 334.

Insufficient showing to authorize appointment of special officer.— The credit to be given to the return of an attachment writ served by one appointed therefor, as allowed by statute, depends on the validity of the appointment, evidence of which must accompany the return. Where the clerk in his appointment certifies that it had been shown to him by affidavit that there was "no sheriff, deputy sheriff, or coroner at the county seat of the county, nor in the county, competent to serve attachment process in the suit, but that they and each of them are absent from the county seat, and that several miles additional travel would be necessary in order to secure the service of the process of attachment aforesaid by the said officers," it was held that the showing was insufficient and the appointment was invalid. Currens v. Ratcliffe, 9 Iowa 309. An appointment of a special officer to serve process in attachment, made by the clerk of the district court, upon an application which did not show that the court was not in session in the county, or that the judge was absent therefrom, and which failed to show that the sheriff and his deputies were interested in the proceeding, out of the county, or in any way disqualified to act, but contained as an only reason that plaintiffs' attorney had looked with diligence for the sheriff or his deputy, but in vain, and that it was important that papers should be served at once, is unauthorized, and a levy thereunder invalid. Dolan v. Topping, 51 Kan. 321, 32 Pac. 1120.

63. Carter v. Clark, 28 Conn. 512; Kelly v. Paris, 10 Vt. 261, 33 Am. Dec. 199. But see State v. Schaffer, 58 N. J. L. 344, 33 Atl. 285, holding that a justice of the peace who issues an attachment in the court for the trial of small causes has no authority to deputize a private citizen to execute and return the same.

Appointment made while writ is blank gives no authority to levy.—A writ of attachment was signed in blank, and on the back thereof was indorsed a written appointment of an indifferent person to execute it. The writ was afterward filled up by the attaching creditor. It was held that the appointment being made while the writ was blank gave no authority to levy. Kelly v. Paris, 10 Vt. 261, 33 Am Dec. 199.

64. Citizens Sav. Bank v. Miller, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 510.

3. DISQUALIFICATION BY INTEREST. Where an officer is interested in a case, he is disqualified from levying an attachment therein,[65] and this disqualification extends to a deputy sheriff, both in cases where his principal is interested and in cases where he is individually interested.[66]

C. Authority to Levy. The authority of the levying officer is derived from and dependent upon the execution and transmission to him of the writ of attachment,[67] and he must be prepared, if his right is challenged, to produce his authority. If he cannot do it he is a trespasser and may be resisted as such.[68] It would seem, however, that the officer need not actually have the writ in his possession at the time of levying, but that it will be sufficient if he has it within his control.[69]

D. Duty to Levy — 1. IN GENERAL. As in the case of other process when a writ of attachment is delivered to the proper officer he is bound to execute it without inquiring into the regularity of the proceeding whereon the writ is grounded.[70]

2. ON PROPERTY SUBSEQUENTLY ACQUIRED OR DISCOVERED. Although defendant may have had no property at one time, yet if he has acquired property subsequently and before the return of the writ, or if further search develops property belonging to him, it is the duty of the officer to attach the same.[71]

3. WHERE BOND GIVEN TO PREVENT LEVY. In some states it is expressly provided by statute that the officer is not bound to levy the attachment where defendant gives a proper undertaking, but may instead take such undertaking,[72]

Waiver of objection to levy by interested party.— If the levy of a judgment returnable to a justice's court was void because made by the son of plaintiff, yet, where defendant entered a plea to the superior court and appeared therein at the first term and filed a plea to the grounds of the attachment, he thereby waived all right of objection to the legality of the levy and could not at a subsequent term either by plea or motion call the same in question. Writ insufficient to confer authority.— When authority is to be given to a person sub modo it is equally necessary that the conditions of the authorization should be strictly observed. Thus it seems that a writ directed "to any sheriff or constable in the State or to George Brooks," without the additional words, "an indifferent person" would confer no authority upon the person named to make service thereof. Brooks v. Farr, 51 Vt. 396.

69. Taylor v. Evans, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 29 S. W. 172 (where it was held that the fact that a writ of attachment is in the possession of a sheriff's deputy twenty miles distant authorizes a levy thereunder by the sheriff); Barney v. Rockwell, 60 Vt. 444, 15 Atl. 163.

Operation as release of property already attached.— In California the giving of such an undertaking not only prevents the sheriff from making any further levy, but also operates to release property already attached by him. Preston v. Hood, 64 Cal. 405, 1 Pac. 487.

Bond not superseded or destroyed by execution of appeal-bond.— An undertaking given under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 540, to prevent the levy of an attachment, will justify the sheriff in refusing to execute a subsequent writ of attachment obtained after an appeal, filing of an appeal-bond, and reversal of the judgment first procured, since the

and in others the practice of giving a release bond to prevent an actual levy exists although not expressly authorized by statute.[73]

E. Time of Levy — 1. In General. In the absence of instructions for an immediate levy[74] the officer has the right to make the same at any time within the period prescribed by law.[75] He must, however, act with reasonable diligence in making the levy,[76] and it must be made before the expiration of the time for the return of the writ,[77] and before judgment has been entered.[78]

2. Seizure Before Service of Summons. The seizure of property on an attachment writ may, it has been held, be made before the service of the summons:[79] proceedings on appeal in nowise affected the validity of the security. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125, 64 Pac. 120.

Service of writ on defendant and opportunity to give bond not required.— The provision of Mont. Code Civ. Proc. § 181, as to attaching property of defendant unless he "give good and sufficient security to secure the payment of said judgment" does not require that the writ be served on defendant and an opportunity be given him to give a bond or make a deposit of money prior to the levy on his property. It is not the intention of the statute that the officer shall, with this extraordinary writ in his hand, await the action of defendant in giving security. Dec. 439, holding that the sheriff has no authority to take a bond from defendant conditioned to save the former harmless for his failure to levy the attachment and to pay the judgment which might be recovered. Such bond being given to indemnify the sheriff against the breach of his official duty is invalid.

74. Direction for immediate service.—When a plaintiff in attachment is desirous of having it served immediately he has the right so to direct the officer when he delivers to him the process; and the officer receiving such instructions is bound to follow them, and on failure is answerable for the consequences. Insufficient showing of levy against corporation before dissolution.— Where the papers relied on to show that an attachment of the property of a domestic corporation in another state was levied before entry of judgment dissolving the corporation, consisted of affidavits stating that a levy was made, but not showing the facts in regard to the levy, two contradictory returns by the sheriff, one being equivocal in its language and evidently false in respect to its date, and a certificate of the sheriff that the levy was made, which is also on its face false as to its date, the court properly refused to find that the levy was made before the judgment of dissolution. One reason for thus holding is that in many

the same being so far in the nature of a proceeding in rem as to be a basis of a subsequent service by publication upon a non-resident.[80] It has been held, however, that if defendant is a non-resident, and has not been served with a summons at the time of a levy upon the property, the court at that time has no jurisdiction, either of the subject-matter or of the person of defendant, the writ of attachment has no validity, and the levy under it is wholly void and unauthorized.[81]

3. When Property Pursued Into Another County. Where by statute the officer is authorized to pursue and attach property in an adjoining county within a certain time after its removal the levy must be made within the specified time therefor.[82]

F. Order of Levy. It is the duty of the officer levying attachments to levy them in the order in which he receives them.[83]

G. Rights and Powers of Levying Officer — 1. To Seize and Hold Property — a. In General. An officer having an attachment in his hands has the right to seize the goods of the debtor and hold them until an inventory and appraisal can be made according to law;[84] but beyond this he has no power to do any other act in relation to the goods seized than simply to keep them safely, subject to the direction of the officer granting the process.[85]

b. To What Property Confined — (I) In General — (A) Property of Defendant. A writ of attachment is no authority to the levying officer to seize or detain goods other than the goods of defendant.[86] Hence the officer is not cases the attachment is issued against a non-resident, and it is evident that if the attachment must wait until service by publication could be completed the remedy would be fruitless. Bell v. Olmsted, 18 Wis. 69. See also Raynolds v. Ray, 12 Colo. 108, 20 Pac. 4.

Warrant valid upon service of summons.— Where an attachment is served before defendant was served with summons, upon the service of the summons the warrant becomes valid and operative, and it cannot be set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction, but only the levy under it and the proceedings under such levy. Zerega v. Benoist, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 199.

82. Thus where the statute provides that "if, after a writ of attachment has been placed in the hands of the sheriff, any property of the defendant is removed from the county, the sheriff may pursue and attach the same in an adjoining county within twenty-four hours after the removal," the legality of the levy depends upon whether it was made within twenty-four hours after the property was removed from the county, and not whether it was made within twenty-four hours after the departure of attachment defendant from the county. bound to levy upon property unless he has probable and reasonable cause to believe that the same belongs to defendant,[87] and may, where he has any reason to doubt that the goods belong to the debtor, insist that the creditor point out property belonging to the debtor and indemnify him against liability.[88] The officer is not required to levy first on personal property.[89]

(B) Commingled Goods. Where the goods of defendant and those of a stranger are commingled it is the duty of the officer, if possible, to distinguish them before attaching,[90] and not to attach the whole of them without making the inquiry.[91] If, however, the officer after making reasonable inquiry is unable to distinguish the goods, he may retain the whole until the owner identifies and points out the articles belonging to him.[92]

(C) Goods in Possession of Third Person. Possession of personal property being presumptive evidence of title, the law makes no presumption in the officer's favor where he makes a levy upon property in the actual possession of a stranger to the suit under a writ running solely against defendant therein.[93] He is bound to take notice of the fact that the property is not in possession of the debtor, and to inquire of those in whose possession he finds the property for whom they hold it,[94] and both he and the creditor are affected by any knowledge that would be gained by such inquiry.[95]

Effect of directions to seize goods claimed by third person.—Where the sheriff is justified by the writ in seizing only the goods of defendant, if the latter directs the seizure of goods claimed by some other person, the proper course in Pennsylvania is for the sheriff either to demand a bond of indemnity or to have an order made upon plaintiff and the claimant of the goods for an interpleader as provided by the act of Jan. 30, 1871. 2. To Break or Enter Buildings. As a rule an officer may not break the outer door of a dwelling-house for the purpose of levying an attachment;[1] but, if the entry is made without force, peaceably and permissibly, he may proceed to levy upon goods within the house.[2] Where, however, goods are within a store, warehouse, or any building other than a dwelling-house, it would seem that the officer may, if necessary, make a forcible entrance in order to levy the writ after admission has been demanded and refused.[3]

3. To Open Receptacles. As an incident of the officer's power and duty to take actual possession of tangible property, it has been held that he has the right to open boxes, safes, etc., containing property of defendant for the purpose of attaching such property.[4]

May not open packages for inspection and appraisal.— In Gaskill v. Glass, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 252, it was held that the sheriff levying an attachment under the attachment law of Pennsylvania had no authority to open packages of goods for inspection and appraisal.

4. To Pursue Property. In some jurisdictions it is expressly provided that an officer to whom a writ of attachment is directed may, if a defendant is in the act of removing any personal property, pursue and take the same in any county in the state and return it to the county from which the writ issued. Under this provision, however, defendant must be in the act of removing the property.[5]

H. Manner of Levy — 1. In General — a. General Rules — (I) Following Statutory Requirements. In some jurisdictions it has been held that an attachment may be levied on the visible, tangible effects of a defendant in his actual or constructive possession, as an execution is levied,[6] and with like effect;[7] but the proceeding by attachment being in derogation of the common law, the officer must comply with the statutes in making the levy,[8] although it has been held that substantial compliance is sufficient.[9] Where the levy is asserted not against the rights of defendant in the writ but against third parties, greater strictness is required than if the rights of defendant were alone concerned,[10] and a levy insufficient against other persons may be sufficient to vest the officer with a special property as against a mere trespasser.[11]

(II) Necessity of Openness and Notoriety. To affect third persons the levy should be open and notorious,[12] and to this end it has sometimes been required that the officer should go to the place where defendant's property was to be found, and there, in the presence of one or more credible witnesses, declare that he attached such property at the suit of plaintiff.[13]

(III) Necessity of Written Notice to Defendant and Party in Possession. When so required by statute the officer making the levy must give written notice thereof to defendant, to the party in possession of the property, or other designated person.[14]

b. On Personalty — (I) In General — (A) Rule Stated. While the cases on the questions of what will constitute a valid levy on personalty are not entirely harmonious,[15] it may be stated as a general test of the sufficiency of the levy that the officer must do such acts as would subject him to an action of trespass but for the protection of the writ,[16] or, as stated in some decisions, the officer must assume officer will become a trespasser.[22] Removal, however, is not always indispensable,[23] as where an actual removal would occasion great and unnecessary expense, would be positively injurious to the parties, or, from the nature of the property, would be exceedingly inconvenient,[24] and other acts of notoriety which may notify creditors that the goods are in the custody of the law may be equivalent thereto,[25] provided the goods are actually put out of the control of the debtor.[26] Where for any of the reasons stated the removal of the property is inadvisable it is the usual practice for the officer to retain the goods in his custody in the place where levied on, through someone selected to take charge thereof for him;[27] and

Whether officer acted reasonably and properly a question for the jury.—An attachment of A's interest in the furniture of a summer hotel upon a small island was made in the winter, when the island was uninhabited, and when it was difficult to remove the property from it. The officer, after attaching the property, left it locked up in the hotel, posting a notice of the attachment on the principal door. He afterward visited the island from time to time to see that the property was safe. Two months afterward defendant attached the interest of B in the property, and took possession of a large portion of it. In trover brought by the first attaching officer, the judge, after instructing the jury as to the necessity of an officer taking and holding possession, left it to them to determine, upon all the evidence, whether plaintiff in the circumstances had acted reasonably and properly in the course he had taken to obtain and hold possession of the property and this was held correct. In the case of tangible property susceptible of manual seizure and delivery, not in the possession of a third person, such property must be actually seized and taken into possession by the levying officer;[29] but while the possession must be actual in the sense that it takes the property from the immediate control of defendant and gives the officer control over it,[30] the officer may take and maintain the actual custody and control of the property without actually touching or handling the same, by such means as will exclude all others from the custody, or will give timely and unequivocal notice of the custody of the attaching officer.[31] It has also been held that seizure of part of a certain thing will bind the whole when it comes to hand,[32] and where a variety of articles are attached and it requires considerable time to complete the process, if the officer, after he has begun it, continues within a day without unnecessary delay until he has secured all the goods, the taking may be treated as one act.[33]

Making an inventory of the goods with a view to the appraisal of the same, as required by statute, will, it has been held, constitute a taking of them in contemplation of law, and from that time the goods will be in the legal custody and possession of the officer under the attachment (Stockley v. Wadman, 1 Houst. (Del.) 350; Corniff v. Cook, 95 Ga. 61, 22 S. E. 47, 51 Am. St. Rep. 55; Cooper v. Newman, 45 N. H. 317).

Levy on timber in river.— Where the property attached consisted of telegraph poles which were placed in a river to be floated down for a distance of twenty miles before being taken out, and the sheriff, upon his arrival with the writ, found twenty-four already taken out which he levied upon and placed in charge of a deputy with orders to take out the other poles as they arrived, it was held that the same was taken, and in the custody within a reasonable time, considering the situation and location of the property, and that the diligence exercised by him was sufficient compliance with the provisions of the statute to create a lien upon the personal property referred to, prior to that created by a chattel mortgage recorded after the sheriff had levied upon twenty-four poles on the bank but before the other poles had been landed, as they floated down the stream. 36. The expression "other instruments for the payment of money" is to be interpreted as referring to instruments of similar character with bonds and promissory notes, such as are evidences of debt and the title to which passes by delivery merely (Naser v. New York City First Nat. Bank, 116 N. Y. 492, 22 N. E. 1077, 27 N. Y. St. 670; Trepagnier v. Rose, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 393, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 397; Kratzenstein v. Lehman, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 600, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 369; Pelham v. Rose, 9 Wall. (U. (N. Y.) 600, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 369; Hankinson v. Page, 12 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 279, 19 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 274, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 422, 31 Fed. 184). Thus a policy of life insurance has been held to belong to the class of contracts strictly unilateral, where the obligation of the company upon the policy has become fixed by the death of the insured (Kratzenstein v. Lehman, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 600, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 369; Hankinson v. Page, 12 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 279, 19 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 274, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 422, 31 Fed. 184). See, however, New York L. Ins. Co. v. Universal L. Ins. Co., 88 N. Y. 424 [overruling Studwell v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 127], where it was held that a life-insurance policy which had matured and become due was not an evidence of debt for the absolute payment of money within the meaning of the code), but such a policy during the life of the insured is not (Kratzenstein v. Lehman, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 600, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 369).

(3) Property Incapable or Difficult of Manual Seizure — (a) In General. Where property is incapable or difficult of manual delivery the officer may not be required to take actual possession thereof,[37] but some notorious act as nearly equivalent to actual seizure as practical must be substituted,[38] and such steps taken as will fasten the property in the hands of the person who has possession or control, to await the judgment in the case, or such person required to place it in the hands of the court.[39] Some statutes prescribe that a levy upon such personalty is to be made by delivering a copy of the writ or order, with a notice specifying the property attached, to the person holding the same or to his authorized agent,[40] while others provide that a certified copy of the writ and of the

Instrument must acknowledge an absolute obligation to pay.— An instrument for the payment of money, within the meaning of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 649, subs. 2, relating to the levy of a warrant of attachment, must be an instrument which acknowledges an absolute obligation to pay, not conditional or contingent, as an existing debt, and such that in an action upon it plaintiff, in order to entitle himself to a recovery, would be required only to offer the instrument in evidence. Goods not "accessible" when in hands of third person claiming right therein.— Under a statute providing that there must be an actual seizure where the property is "accessible" if such property is in the hands of a third person claiming some right therein it is not accessible within the meaning of the statute. Notice to bailee of fraudulent transferee sufficient.— It would seem that where property fraudulently conveyed to a third party for the benefit of defendant is by him deposited with a bailee it is not necessary to give notice of attachment to the former before levying on the property in the bailee's hands. Requisites of notice.—It was formerly held that the notice must describe particularly the property levied on so as to enable the holder to identify it and deliver it to the sheriff when his own claims are satisfied (Kuhlman v. Orser, 5 Duer (N. Such provisions have been held applicable to cord-wood and charcoal in large quantities (Reed v. Howard, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 36; Molm v. Barton, 27 Minn. 530, 8 N. W. 765); glass in plates three or four feet square and from half an inch to an inch in thickness, some of which is boxed in boxes of five or six hundred pounds each, and some of which remains unboxed in the factory, and requires skill to remove it safely, and which cannot be removed except at unreasonable expense and considerable risk (Polley v. Lenox Iron Works, 4 Allen (Mass.) 329); grain or hay (Bucklin v. Crampton, 20 Vt. 261; Putnam v. Clark, 17 Vt. 82; Stanton v. Hodges, 6 Vt. 64; Lowry v. Walker, 4 Vt. 76); machinery (Higgins v. Drennan, 157 Mass. 384, 32 N. E. 354; Fullam v. Stearns, 30 Vt. 443); pig-iron (Scovill v. Root, 10 Allen (Mass.) 414); and railroad cars (Hall v. Carney, 140 Mass. 131, 3 N. E. 14).

Such provisions do not deprive the officer of the right to take actual possession of the property, if reasonably necessary for its preservation, although the possibility of its removal may be very remote. Laughlin v. Reed, 89 Me. 226, 36 Atl. 131.

Construction of statute.— In some states it has been held that such provisions do not change the mode of making an attachment, but merely provide an easier method of preserving it, and that it is still essential to a valid attachment of the articles specified that they should be taken into the possession or placed under the control of the officer (Darling v. Dodge, 36 Me. 370; Bryant v. Osgood, 52 N. H. 182; Scott v. Manchester Print Works, 44 N. H. 507; Chadbourne v. Sumner, 16 N. H. 129, 41 Am. Dec. 720; Huntington v. Blaisdell, 2 N. H. 317; Odiorne v. Colley, 2 N. H. 66, 9 Am. Dec. 39), although it has also been held that the leaving of a copy with the clerk is the act of attachment, taking possession, and notice to all concerned (Putnam v. Clark, 17 Vt. 82).

(b) ANIMALS ON RANGE. Owing to the difficulty in taking possession of range stock, provision is made in some of the states for levy upon such property by filing a copy of the writ with a designated officer, together with a notice thereto appended, containing the number and description of stock, that such property or a portion thereof is attached.[42] In others the levy may be made, in the presence of certain credible witnesses, by designating by reasonable estimate the number of the animals, describing them by their marks and brands, or either, and giving notice thereof in writing to the owner, his herder, or agent, if residing within the county and known to the levying officer.[43] Where so required there must be filed with the recorder a copy of the notice attached to the copy of the writ.[44]

(c) Having Property in View. Although to make a valid levy upon personalty the officer need not always seize or even touch them, it is usually held that he must have them in his view.[45] It has been held, however, that a view of the property is not absolutely necessary, where the officer assumes dominion over the property, having it, at the time, within his power and subject to immediate seizure.[46]

(d) Delivering Copy Warrant and Affidavits to Party in Possession. A provision that the officer levying upon personal property capable of manual delivery shall deliver without delay to the person from whose possession the property is taken, if any, a copy of the warrant and of the affidavits upon which it was granted has been held to be merely directory.[47]

(ii) WHEN MORTGAGED OR PLEDGED — (a) By Seizure Upon Payment or Tender of Amount Due. An attachment upon chattels mortgaged or pledged to a third party may be levied by seizure of the entire property covered by the mortgage or pledge upon payment or tender of the amount due to the mortgagee or pledgee,[48] or upon depositing the amount due with a proper officer for Filing papers after office-hours of last day. — Mont. Code Civ. Proc. c. 6, tit. 7, provides that range stock may be attached between the first day of November and the next succeeding fifteenth day of May, by filing a copy of the process with the recorder of the county. Where the filing was made with the proper officer upon the fourteenth day of May, at ten-thirty P. M., it was held that section 911, fifth division of the compiled statutes, providing that county offices shall be kept open during the business hours of each day, did not prohibit the transaction of official business at other times, and that the service was valid. Effect of assignment to, or purchase by, attaching creditor of chattel mortgage.— Where an attaching creditor purchases a prior chattel mortgage and has the same assigned to him, this is not a payment of the mortgage within the provision of the Iowa statute providing that attaching creditors may take possession of mortgaged chattels upon paying the mortgaged debt. Webster City Grocery Co. v. Losey, 108 Iowa 687, 78 N. W. 75.

Inconvenience of making tender no excuse.— Mere inconvenience in making a tender required by statute before mortgaged property can be attached will not authorize a disregard of the statutory provision. Foster v. Perkins, 42 Me. 168.

Tender after levy insufficient.— In Iowa a tender to the mortgagee of the amount due upon a chattel mortgage, or the deposit of such sum with the clerk of the district court by an attachment creditor after the levy of his attachment upon the mortgaged chattels will not make such valid levy. Blotcky v. O'Neill, 83 Iowa 574, 49 N. W. 1029.

Tender must be of a definite sum and money turned into court.—By Vt. Laws (1854), p 15, it was provided that if personal property was purchased with an agreement that it should belong to the vendor till the price was paid, a creditor of the vendee who attached the property must tender to the vendor the amount of his claim within ten days after the attachment, and a mere statement by the attaching creditor that he was ready to pay the claim, and had the money with him with which to pay, was insufficient, as the tender should have been of a definite sum and the money turned into court. Hefflin v. Bell, 30 Vt. 134.

Tender unnecessary where assignee has no interest in the mortgage.— No tender to an assignee of a mortgage or demand on him for an account of the amount due on the mortgage is necessary by plaintiff claiming the right of redemption under an attachment of the equity, when such assignee had no interest in the mortgage at the time of the attachment. Millett v. Blake, 81 Me. 531, 18 Atl. 293, 10 Am. St. Rep. 275.

Waiver of payment by mortgagee.— No one except the mortgagee can insist that the attaching creditor pay his mortgage or deposit with the clerk a sufficient sum to do so, as provided by statute, and the mortgagee may waive his rights under such statute. Willson v. Felthouse, 90 Iowa 315, 57 N. W. 878; Meeker v. Wilson, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 419, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,392.

No application when mortgagee and attaching creditor are one and the same.— S. D. Comp. Laws, §§ 4388, 4389, requiring that before mortgaged personal property can be taken under attachment the officer so taking must pay or tender to the mortgagee the amount of his debt and interest, or deposit the same with the county treasurer, have no application where the mortgagee and the attaching creditor are one and the same person. Deering v. Warren, 1 S. D. 35, 44 N. W. 1068.

50. Pomeroy v. Smith, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 85.

Attachment in common form voidable at election of mortgagee.— An attachment of goods subject to a mortgage as the property of the mortgagor is not void. It is at most merely voidable at the election of the mortgagee. He may or may not insist on his rights as mortgagee and thus avoid the attachment. Scott v. Whittemore, 27 N. H. 309 [followed in Clement v. Little, 42 N. H. 563; Hill v. Wiggin, 31 N. H. 292].

May not take goods from possession of mortgagee's bailee.— An officer has no right by virtue of a writ against the mortgagee to attach and take goods from the possession of a bailee of the mortgagee without paying or tendering the amount due upon the mortgage. Barker v. Chase, 24 Me. 230.

Right of officer to undisturbed possession as against mortgagee until completion of inventory.— In Michigan the contention that a sheriff who attaches chattel mortgaged property cannot be disturbed in his possession by will be liable to the mortgagee as for a conversion, although he does not move or otherwise disturb the property.[51]

(B) Levy Subject to Mortgage. Mortgaged chattels may be attached also by levying on the right or equity of redemption, subject to the rights of the holder of the mortgage.[52]

c. On Realty — (I) In General — (A) Rule Stated. To constitute a valid levy upon land, the officer must do some act which shows that he has seized the property and exercised dominion over it and that is sufficient to put the owner or his tenant upon notice;[53] but owing to the difficulty of making a seizure of lands the law has invented the fiction of constructive seizure, which may be accomplished in various ways under the statutes of the different states.[54] The tenant is not thereby dispossessed,[55] and in the absence of statute requiring it it is not the mortgagee until an inventory is completed, after which he has the right to fix the character of his levy, and whether in opposition or subject to the mortgage has been settled in the negative. See also GARNISHMENT.

Effect of waiver by mortgagor of right of possession.— The waiver by a mortgagor of his right to the possession of the property until the maturity of the mortgage debt, and his consent that the mortgagee may take immediate possession, cannot affect the rights of an attaching creditor who, if he regards the mortgage as valid, should levy subject to the rights of the mortgagee, and if he claims it to be void as to creditors and succeeds in showing such fact the agreement as to possession will not affect that question. Hyde v. Shank, 77 Mich. 517, 43 N. W. 890.

Levy on property conveyed in trust for specific purpose.— Upon the acceptance of a deed of trust by a creditor secured thereby who did not participate in fraud in its execution it became a valid lien upon the property to secure his claim, and the trustee was entitled to the possession; a subsequent levy of attachment by another creditor, made by seizure instead of by notice as provided by law, was void and created no lien. Record in recorder's office of no effect.— Where it did not appear by the return that any seizure of the lands in question was made, or that any change of possession, real or symbolical, was attempted, it was held that the record of the attachment in the office of the recorder of mortgages had no legal effect. Dispossession unauthorized in absence of express directions.— The statute authorizing attachment and sale of land of non-resident necessary that the officer in levying upon land should take possession of the same,[56] enter upon it,[57] or even, it has been held, have the same in his view.[58]

(B) Particular Modes — (1) Declaration on Premises in Presence of Witnesses. In some states the levy may be made by the officer going to the house and lands of defendant, or to the person or house of the person in whose custody and possession defendant's property or estate may be, and then and there declaring in the presence of credible witnesses that he attaches the lands and tenements of such defendant at the suit of plaintiff.[59]

(2) Indorsement on Writ. In some jurisdictions a levy on real property may, by statute, be made by an indorsement of such levy on the writ,[60] or, as it is and absent debtors for debt, by order of the chancellor, does not authorize the officer levying the same, unless he is so expressly directed, to turn out the defendant or his tenant from the possession, nor is such delivery of possession necessary to give efficacy to the levy of the writ. Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544.

Officer gains no right of property or possession.— Where real estate is attached the officer serving the writ gains no right of property in or possession of the real estate by the levy. Travis v. Topeka Supply Co., 42 Kan. 625, 22 Pac. 991; Scott v. Manchester Print Works, 44 N. H. 507.

Seizure not vitiated by permitting widow of deceased to remain on property.— A seizure of property of a deceased husband by the sheriff, made by his going upon the property, giving notice of the seizure to all the occupants, and appointing one of the tenants as keeper, is not vitiated by the fact that he has permitted the widow to remain on the premises. Omission fatal to validity of levy.— Where plaintiff in ejectment claims title through an attachment, if it appears that the officer to whom it was directed failed to comply with the requirements of Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 542, requiring that a copy of the attachment with a description of the property attached and notice that it is attached be left with the occupant of the property or posted upon it, the omissions are fatal, and plaintiff cannot recover. Effect of failure to post on each of several lots.— When an order is levied upon a large number of adjoining town lots failure to place a copy on each separate lot does not render the service void. Blake v. Rider, 36 Kan. 693, 14 Pac. 280. But see Hall v. Stevenson, 19 Oreg. 153, 23 Pac. 887, 20 Am. St. Rep. 803, holding that posting a copy on one tract will not be sufficient in case of levy on separate and distinct tracts.

Presumption that there was no occupant.— When the officer's return shows that he at a certain time attached certain real estate, and posted a copy of the order in a conspicuous place on the premises, as provided by Kan. Civ. Code, § 198, where there is no occupant, in the absence of anything to the contrary it will be presumed that the officer did his duty and that there was no occupant. Presumption of delivery to proper party.— In support of a writ of attachment, where the return recites that the levy was made on certain lands "by delivering a true copy of the within order of attachment to Bridget Cook, she being the wife of James Cook, who was not found, and a white person over the age of sixteen years old and living on the land described," it will be presumed that Bridget Cook was the occupant of the land. The description of the attached property, while it need not be technically correct in every part, must be sufficient to give notice to a reasonably prudent man as to the identity of the property attached. Acts to be performed in statutory order.— Where land is attached under a statute declaring that the levy shall be made by leaving a copy of the writ with the occupant, or if there be no occupant by posting a copy on the land and filing a copy, with a description of the land attached, in the county recorder's office, the several acts required to complete the service must be done in the order named in the statute. Main v. Tappener, 43 Cal. 206. Compare Raynolds v. Ray, 12 Colo. 108, 20 Pac. 4, holding that an attachment of real estate, by filing a copy of the attachment, with a description of the property attached, in the county recorder's office, creates a valid lien, although no service is had on defendant until afterward.

Effect of mistake in describing land.—

valid levy on real property,[66] while in others they merely provide a method of giving notice of the attachment lien and a compliance therewith is no part of the levy.[67]

(II) Interests in Land. In some jurisdictions the terms "real property" or "land" are held to embrace all titles, legal or equitable, and any interest in land, either legal or equitable, is subject to attachment.[68] Where this is the case, it would seem that in the absence of express provisions as to levy, a levy upon an interest in land may be sufficiently made in the same manner as is prescribed for

Where one lot of land is intended to be levied on by an attachment, but the entry of the officer describes another lot by mistake, there has been in fact no levy made on the right lot and the judgment on the attachment may be set aside. Wardlaw v. Wardlaw, 50 Ga. 544.

Entry on attachment docket.— Ga. Code, § 4532, declares: "In all cases it shall be the duty of the officer levying attachments to levy them in the order in which they came in his hands, and it shall be his duty to enter upon the same the year, month, day of the month, and hour of the day on which he made the levy. Said attachment must be entered on the execution or attachment docket by the clerk of the superior court, in order to be good against third persons, where the levy is upon land." Deveney v. Burton, 110 Ga. 56, 60, 35 S. E. 268.

Requirement satisfied by leaving copy in proper office.— An attachment of real estate is effected by the officer's leaving in the town-clerk's office a copy of the writ with his return of such attachment thereon. The making of the record or entries respecting it, which it is the duty of the town-clerk to make, does not constitute any part of the attachment itself. Braley v. French, 28 Vt. 546.

Notice by record unnecessary to bind parties with knowledge.— Under the general rule that no notice by record is necessary to bind parties who have actual knowledge of facts charging them in law with notice, when, on the trial of a claim to land levied upon under an execution issued from a judgment rendered in an attachment case, it appeared that after the declaration in attachment had been filed claimant, who was the father of defendant in attachment, with knowledge that the attachment had been issued and that the son had no property except that in controversy in the claim case, took from him a deed thereto, it was held error to direct a verdict in claimant's favor, even though the entry respecting the attachment, on the attachment docket, did not embrace a description of the property. Deveney v. Burton, 110 Ga. 56, 35 S. E. 268.

Who affected with constructive notice.—An attachment levied on real estate is constructive notice only to such persons as may acquire, from parties or privies to the action, subsequent interests in the attached realty. Travis v. Topeka Supply Co., 42 Kan. 625, 22 Pac. 991. But an entry in the encumbrance book of the fact that an attachment has been levied on land in an action against one not the holder of the legal title does not constitute constructive notice to the purchaser of such title. Notice by recording attachment writ against wife under her maiden name.—Where attached real estate stood on the records in the maiden name of a married woman, and she was sued subsequently to her marriage under that name, recording the attachment was sufficient notice to enable the attaching creditor to prevail over subsequent purchasers of the lands. the levy of an attachment upon lands themselves.[69] In other jurisdictions, however, it is held that an equitable interest in realty can be attached only by bill in equity.[70]

2. On Property Held Jointly — a. By Partners. In an attachment against one or more members of a firm the officer must proceed to levy the same upon property owned by them jointly with others in the same manner that he is required to do under an execution.[71] Partners having a community of interest in every part as well as in the whole of the partnership effects, an effectual seizure can only be made of the undivided interest of a partner by taking possession of the entire property attached for preservation to abide the result of the suit;[72] but this power is to be exercised as far as possible in harmony with the rights of other persons. Therefore, when the sheriff exceeds this limit, and instead of levying on the debtor's interest levies upon and seizes the property as the sole property of the debtor, he is a trespasser.[73]

b. By Tenants in Common — (I) Personalty. An officer in levying upon an interest of a tenant in common in personal property has the right to take possession of the property,[74] but the officer's authority does not extend

Must be levied as in case of tenancy in common.— In Vermont the property of partners is attached as if they were tenants in common. Reed v. Shepardson, 2 Vt. 120, 19 Am. Dec 697, where it was held that the interest of one partner in the goods of the firm cannot be attached to any avail without taking the goods themselves, and that the officer thus attaching is not a trespasser by taking the undivided portion of a separate debtor, though the firm proved to be insolvent.

Must be levied as upon individual property.—A writ of attachment against an individual member of a copartnership can be levied only upon his interest in the partnership property in the same manner as levies are made upon individual property by virtue of such writs. Right to attach partner's interest in specific portion of goods.— A creditor of one partner of a firm may attach such partner's interest in a specific portion of a stock of goods belonging to the firm, and is not required in order to render the attachment regular to take the partner's interest in the entire stock of goods. Fogg v. Lawry, 68 Me. 78, 79, 28 Am. Rep. 19, where the court said: "A private creditor might not be justified in attaching his debtor's interest in an entire stock of goods of a partnership, if the demand is small and the stock large, and the debtor's interest therein much more than necessary to satisfy all claims against it. We see no more necessity of attaching the debtor's interest in the whole of a particular stock, than there would be to attach his interest in all the property of the firm of which he is a member, however extended and situated."

Attachment of entire property subject to paramount claims of firm creditors.— An officer can make an actual attachment of a debtor's interest in the goods of the partnership and hold the entire property in his hands on account of the interest so attached, subject to the paramount claims of the creditors of the firm. In such a case the proper method of levy is by taking possession of defendant's half interest]. See supra, IX, F, 2.

Part owners of a ship are tenants in common and not joint tenants or copartners, and one part owner has an interest in the propto making a division of the property so as to set apart the share of the tenant sued.[75]

(II) Realty. An attachment upon real property of tenants in common should be levied upon the debtor's undivided share in whole or in part.[76]

I. Amount of Property to Be Attached — 1. In General. In levying an attachment, the officer should take so much of the property not exempt as will be sufficient to pay the debt demanded with costs,[77] interest, and incidental expenses,[78] and it has been held that there should also be a proper allowance for the depreciation in value incident to the property seized and to the forced sale.[79] The officer must, however, decide for himself as to the extent and sufficiency of the seizure,[80] exercising a cautious and reasonable discretion such as should influence the conduct of prudent and discreet men in the management of their own affairs.[81]

2. Excessive Levy — a. In General. Although a levying officer may be liable to an action by the party injured,[82] an attachment is not necessarily rendered void by the mere fact of being excessive.[83] The question as to whether or not a levy of an attachment was excessive cannot be raised on a motion to quash,[84] and can be raised only by the parties to the action.[85] The question as to what constitutes an excessive levy is a question of fact and is properly left for the jury.[86]

b. Remedy For. It has been held that where the officer levies upon a larger amount of property than is necessary this will not authorize a release of the property on the ground of excessive levy, but that in such case it is the officer's erty on which an attachment may be levied without the necessity of executing the same, as in case of partnership, by service of summons of garnishment in order to reach his interest. Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18.

76. Brown v. Bailey, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 254, holding that a levy on a specified portion of the estate by metes and bounds is improper, since this would be an encroachment upon the right of the tenant to have partition of the whole tenement; that such levy was not void but voidable only by the other cotenants, and that where the other cotenants release, or if upon a partition their full shares are set off in other parts of the common estate, and the part levied on is assigned to the party whose share has thus been levied on by metes and bounds, such partition operates by way of estoppel and release because no one has any longer a right to contest its validity.

Effect of conflicting evidence as to value of property attached.— Where the amount claimed in the affidavit was one hundred dollars and there is evidence that the property attached was worth twelve hundred dollars, also other evidence which tends to greatly reduce the value thus placed upon the goods by the sheriff, and no question as to the excessiveness of the levy is raised in the court below, the appellate court cannot say that there has been an excessive levy and that the attachment afforded no justification or warrant for seizing the property. Oliver v. Town, 28 Wis. 328.

Facts constituting an excessive levy.— The levy of an attachment for seventy-six dollars and seventy-four cents and the probable cost of the proceeding upon five head of racing horses valued at one thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars was oppressively excessive, and in no event should the attaching creditors have been permitted to retain more than sufficient property to satisfy the debt. Anderson v. Heile, (Ky. 1901) 64 S. W. 849.

Instruction withdrawing certain facts from the jury held not fundamentally erroneous.— An attachment was levied on a stock of merchandise by actual seizure and on cattle and land by notice and indorsement on the writ. A charge that in reckoning whether the levy was excessive the value of the cattle and land was not to be taken into account was held not to be so fundamentally erroneous as to justify reversal. Baines v. Jemison, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 27 S. W. 182.

duty to retain sufficient to satisfy the claim and to discharge the balance.[87] The usual method of obtaining relief is by an application by the debtor, or his successor in interest, to the court from which the attachment issued,[88] which, after investigation as to the value of the property, may discharge the attachment as to so much thereof as is in excess in value of the damages alleged.[89]

J. Inventory and Appraisal — 1. Necessity For. It is commonly required that the officer making a levy must make and return an inventory and an appraisal of the property attached;[90] but where the scheduling and appraising of property

Election by complainant as to property on which he will retain the levy.— In Tennessee the court is authorized, upon the answer or petition of defendants, to reduce an excessive levy of an attachment by a release of property in excess of complainant's demand and costs, complainant being allowed to elect on which property he will retain the levy, and in the absence of such election by proportioning the burden of the debt upon the defendants where there are several claiming in different rights, and each defendant may replevy the property claimed by him, or become the receiver upon proper bond. Appraisal unnecessary except where delivery bond is given.— In Smith v. Coopers, 9 Iowa 376, it was held that an appraisal of property levied on by the sheriff is not essential to make valid the attachment, except where a delivery bond is given.

Essential to valid judgment or sale.— Without an inventory or appraisal no valid judgment in attachment or sale thereunder can be rendered or made. Tomlinson v. Stiles, 28 N. J. L. 201. And see McNamara v. Ellis, 14 Ind. 516.

Lien attaches only to property shown in inventory.— When the return of the sheriff on an order of attachment shows that he levied an order on certain property designated in the inventory and appraisal, and returns the same with the order, and the inventory and appraisal contain only a description of certain articles of personal property, the lien of the attachment does not attach to any other property except such as is shown in the inventory. Harding v. Kansas City Guaranty L. & T. Co., 3 Kan. App. 519, 43 Pac. 835.

Necessity for schedule obviated by specific description in return.— Where the officer in his return to a writ of attachment gives a specific description of the property attached a schedule reiterating the same facts is unnecessary. Pearce v. Baldridge, 7 Ark. 413.

Provision as to appraisal held inapplicable to vessel.— Me. Rev. Stat. c. 114, §§ 53–57, in regard to the appraisal of attached property, does not apply to a vessel all fitted and about starting to sea under contract to carry freight, at the port of the owner's residence. Moulton v. Chadborne, 31 Me. 152.

Value determined by appraisal at time of levy.— Where land subject to attachment is taken on attachment is for the protection and benefit of defendant,[91] if such schedule and appraisal is omitted by order or consent of defendant, no rights of other creditors being involved, he will not be heard to object to such omission,[92] and where the provision requiring the inventory is considered as being for the benefit of a creditor it can only be enforced by him.[93] On attachment against an absconding debtor where there was an appraisal at the time the property was attached, a second appraisal after judgment and before sale is unnecessary.[94]

2. WHO MAY MAKE. The manner of making such inventory and appraisal is dependent upon statutes. In some jurisdictions the officer is required to make the inventory and appraisal with the assistance of a specified number of credible and disinterested householders,[95] who shall be first sworn by the officer.[96] In others he is required to make an inventory in the presence of two witnesses,[97] two residents of the county,[98] or by two disinterested freeholders.[99]

3. TIME OF MAKING. It is not essential to the validity of a levy that the inventory and appraisal should be made immediately,[1] but it will be sufficient if the same is made within a reasonable time.[2] transferred to a trustee, and timber cut therefrom before levy under a judgment recovered, the attachment creditor is not entitled to the proceeds of the timber paid to the trustee, since the value of property attached is determined by appraisal at the time of levy and not as of the time of the service of the attachment. Appraisal by different persons under same writ.— Where different pieces of property are attached under the same writ different persons may be called in to assist in the appraisal thereof. Will v. Whitney, 15 Ind. 194.

Effect of failure of officer to participate in appraisal.— The failure of the under-sheriff to participate with the appraisers in the appraisal of the property is not such an omission in the service of the writ as required the court to quash it or set aside the levy as to all the property. Emerson v. Thatcher, 6 Kan. App. 325, 51 Pac. 50.

Waiver of objection to appraiser.— Where the sheriff's return upon an attachment, showing an appraisal of the property levied on, by disinterested freeholders, duly sworn, as required by statute, is not disputed or assailed in any manner in the attachment suit, the party whose goods were so levied on cannot object, when the attachment proceedings come collaterally in question, that the appraisers were members of his own family, and consequently not disinterested, that they were not freeholders, or were not sworn; he having been personally served, and not shown to have been ignorant of the facts. The statutory requirement of disinterested freeholders as appraisers is for his protection, and it cannot be presumed that members of his family have an interest adverse to his. 4. FORM AND REQUISITES — a. In General. The inventory must be just, true, and minute as to all the property seized, and the estimated value of the several articles of personal property should be stated.[3] It has also been held that such articles as are perishable must be enumerated.[4]

b. Signature. Where so required by statute the inventory or appraisal should be signed by the officer before returning the same,[5] and the appraisement should be signed by the appraisers.[6]

5. SERVICE OF INVENTORY. In some states the officer is required to serve on defendant a copy of the inventory at the same time he serve the latter with a copy of the writ.[7] It has been held, however, that the failure of the officer to serve a copy of the inventory on defendant can be taken advantage of by the latter only and is not available for a subsequent attaching creditor.[8]

6. CONCLUSIVENESS OF APPRAISAL. Upon the question of whether any specific property, real or personal, has been attached, the inventory returned by the officer is conclusive,[9] and the appraised value of such property is prima facie evidence of its real value as against the officer.[10] Where, however, personal property seized by the officer is afterward sold by him at official sale, the value of the goods is not determined solely by the appraisal, but the amount received

Effect of failure to mention indebtedness covered by return and notice.— Inability or inadvertence to mention, in the inventory filed by the sheriff, a debt due to attachment defendant as residuary legatee, will not defeat the lien of the attachment, where the attachment itself and the notice were broad enough to cover such indebtedness, since the court may authorize an amendment of the inventory. Dunn v. Arkenburgh, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 518, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 861 [affirmed in 165 N. Y. 669, 59 N. E. 1122].

Effect of failure to place value on books, etc., seized.— Where books, ledgers, and other accounts of a concern were attached by creditors, but the appraisers placed no value opposite them in the inventory of the property taken, this failure was held not to deprive the creditor of the benefit of his attachment. Consideration of return in connection with appraisal.— Where the appraisals of property seized under a writ of attachment are referred to in, and attached to, the sheriff's return, the latter must be considered in connection with them in determining whether the appraisal was properly made. Omission to certify writ remedied by duly certified inventory.— The fact that the copy of the writ of attachment served was not certified by the officer, where it is in fact a true copy, and is accompanied by a copy of the inventory duly certified, will not render the service invalid, such defect being purely formal, and the certificate of the inventory leaving no doubt as to the character of the proceeding. Leonard v. Woodward, 34 Mich. 514.

Service on president or cashier of bank.— The act providing that service of an attachment shall be made by delivering "to said defendant, or defendants, or one of them, a copy of said attachment with an inventory of the property" is complied with, where defendant is a bank, by making such service upon its president or cashier. by the officer at such sale is competent evidence of value as is also the opinion of persons familiar with the goods and acquainted generally with the value of such goods.[11]

K. Where Property Levied on Under Other Process — 1. Personalty — a. Who May Levy — (I) In General. Since a seizure and taking possession by the officer is essential in case of a levy upon personalty,[12] it has been held in some jurisdictions that where goods are held by an officer under other process, an attachment can be levied thereupon only by such officer,[13] even though the officer holding the property assents to the subsequent so-called levy,[14] or though such officer or his keeper agrees to act also as the keeper of the second officer.[15] According to the decisions in other states, however, if personal property is levied upon under a writ, it may still be subjected to further levies either by the same or another officer, such levy being made subject to the prior levy or levies.[16]

(II) Deputies. In some jurisdictions it is held that a deputy is so far a different officer from his principal as to come within the meaning of the rule forbidding levies on the same property by different officers, and that he is, therefore, unable to levy upon goods already attached by such principal.[17] In other jurisdic-

There can be no joint possession by officers making different attachment.—The constructive or actual possession of the same by the officer making the first attachment excludes the possession of other officers making or attempting to make subsequent attachments. Coffrin v. Smith, 51 Vt. 140.

Rule no longer applies after possession relinquished.—An attachment of personal property by an officer after it had been attached, and while it still remained in the custody of another, would undoubtedly be an unlawful interference with the rights of the latter, and might afford ground for maintaining an action of trover to recover its value. But that is expressly upon the ground that possession is necessary to constitute or to preserve and continue an attachment. When possession is given up, or the property is abandoned or restored to the debtor, the lien created by the attachment is lost. Polley v. Lenox Iron Works, 15 Gray (Mass.) 513. See also Coffrin v. Smith, 51 Vt. 140, holding that when the constructive possession of property acquired by the first attachment ceases its effect upon the second attachment also ceases and the latter attachment, which had been kept in abeyance, became operative and in force.

The possession by a receiptor of property attached has been held to be so far the possession of the sheriff, that the latter, while the receiptor retains actual possession, may make a second attachment upon another writ by making a return to that effect and giving the receiptor notice with direction to hold the property to answer upon the second attachment. Whitney v. Farwell, 10 N. H. 9; Bell v. Shafer, 58 Wis. 223, 16 N. W. 628. But compare Waterman v. Treat, 49 Me. 309, 77 Am. Dec. 261, holding that where an officer delivers attached property to a receiptor, and takes a receipt for its redelivery or the payment of a sum of money, the attachment is thereby dissolved, and a subsequent valid attachment, even by the same officer, cannot be made without a new seizure of the property.

another officer, the possession of the first officer is not to be disturbed, but the levy is made by notifying the officer in possession of the making of it;[21] nor need the return specify or describe the property; it is sufficient to refer to the property as all which is in the custody of the officer in possession.[22]

2. REALTY. Since in the case of levy upon realty, the officer levying acquires neither title, possession, nor special property,[23] there is no reason why an attachment creditor may not acquire a valid lien by the levy of a writ of attachment on land on which another officer has already levied an attachment or execution,[24] subject, of course, to the lien of the prior attachment or execution creditor.[25]

L. Successive Levies Under Same Writ. In the absence of fraud there is no reason which will prevent a second levy upon personal property, under the outstanding writ, where such property has once been taken but afterward surrendered by mistake or otherwise, no other rights intervene, and the legal owner interposes no protest against such second levy.[26] Where an officer attaches property at different times on the same writ copies need not be left in each instance, the leaving of a single copy including a list of all the property attached before the time of service elapses being held, on a plea in abatement, to constitute good service.[27]

M. Defects and Objections — 1. IN GENERAL. As a general rule where a return has been made which is sufficient on its face every reasonable presumption will be made in favor of the validity of the levy.[28] Where the return is good Written notice unnecessary.— Where two or more writs of attachment are served by different officers at different times on the same property, it is incumbent on the officer serving the later writ to give reasonable notice thereof to the officer who served the earlier one, but the law prescribes no form or manner of notice, and neither a copy of the writ and return or any other written notice is necessary. Nothing more is necessary than that the officer should be reasonably informed of the later attachment, so that when the lien of the attachment in his own hands is dissolved he may deliver the estate attached to the rightful claimant. Dolan v. Wilkerson, 57 Kan. 758, 48 Pac. 23 (holding that the fact that the officer in whose hands the writ was placed, after making an ineffectual attempt to levy, relinquishes any claim by reason of such levy, did not prevent him from making another levy under the same writ on property of defendant at any time before the actual return of the writ); Butte First Nat. Bank v. Boyce, 15 Mont. 162, 38 Pac. 829 (where the attachment creditor released the lien of the attachment upon an agreement for an execution by the debtor of an assignment of all his goods and property, making the attachment creditor a preferred creditor, and such assignment was executed. It was held that if such deed of assignment was void by reason of any fraudulent provision therein, the attaching creditor might retake the goods by a second levy under the original writ).

Effect of illegality of first attachment or alteration of writ.— A second attachment of property by the same officer on the same writ is not necessarily wrongful because the first was illegal, or because the writ was altered by the attorney after the same, it not appearing that the first attachment was made for the purpose of making the second, or that the second was effected by means of the first. Gile v. Devens, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 59, where, after the levy, the property attached was found not to belong to the person named in the writ, and thereupon the owner's name was inserted in the writ, and a second levy on the same property made by the same officer on behalf of the same parties under the writ as altered.

W. 109 (where it was presumed that the levy of an attachment was made in the county); Drysdale v. Biloxi Canning Co., 67 Miss. 534, 7 So. 541 (holding that where the indorsement of an officer was a sufficient levy upon land if wild or unoccupied, but insufficient if cultivated or occupied, the supreme court in an action to have the attachment set aside will treat the levy as a valid levy on wild or unoccupied land in the absence of an averment in the debtor's bill that the land was in fact cultivated or occupied); Boyd v. Buckingham, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 433 (holding that where process in attachment was seasonably issued, but it did not appear from the officer's return on what day the attachment was levied, it will be presumed that it was served in due time).

on its face it cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding unless it is void.[29]

2. WHO MAY OBJECT — a. For Failure to File Writ and Return. Where, in order to render an attachment of realty valid against a subsequent purchaser or attaching creditor, the writ and officer's return, or a copy thereof, must be deposited in the clerk's office, omission to comply with this requirement can be taken advantage of only by parties subsequently purchasing or attaching such real estate.[30]

b. For Insufficient Levy on Property Capable of Manual Seizure. Where the levying officer fails to take into his possession such property as is capable of manual seizure, plaintiff may have reason to complain, but defendant is not injured thereby, and such levy will not be set aside on his motion.[31]

c. Where Effected Through Unlawful Detention. Although it is indisputable that where possession of property has been unlawfully obtained for the purpose of levying thereupon, such levy is wrongful and cannot be upheld as against any one who is so situated that he can urge its invalidity, yet such objection is not available to a party whose right also springs solely from a seizure effected through the unlawful detention.[32]

3. TIME TO OBJECT. An objection to the manner of levying an attachment, which is not suggested by answer or upon the hearing below, cannot be taken for the first time on appeal, and will be regarded as waived;[33] but where a levy created no lien on account of an irregular return, it was held immaterial that there was no objection to its validity until after the submission of the case, since the court may disregard such levy at any stage of the proceedings.[34] The question of whether a certain levy made by serving notice on the party claimed to be in possession is valid is properly determinable upon proceedings to enforce the same, and not upon a motion to set it aside and vacate it, since if as made it is invalid there was no valid levy to set aside or vacate.[35]

4. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS. The conduct of defendant may make an otherwise invalid levy good by way of waiver,[36] estoppel, or agreement.[37]

5. EFFECT OF ENTRY OF JUDGMENT. While the entry of judgment may cure some defects in the issue of a writ of attachment such entry will not cure defects in the levy of the writ and make what was no lien a valid one.[38]

Counter-claim as an estoppel to object to want of service of notice.— Where defendants whose property is attached file counter-claims based on a wrongful levy of the attachment, the sheriff takes manual possession, and continues to hold the property until the trial, neither party will be heard to say that there was no valid levy because notice of the attachment was not served. Presumption of return from giving release bond.— Under a statute which permits a bond to release an attachment to be entered into when the sheriff has returned the writ, if such a bond be actually taken by a clerk, the higher court will presume that the writ had been returned although the return-day has not come. D. Time of Making. In the absence of statutory limitation,[48] an attachment return must be made within a reasonable time,[49] but the mere fact that the return was not made until after the return-day of the writ will not defeat the lien.[50] On the other hand if the return shows a substituted service upon defendant it must necessarily not be made before the return-day of the writ.[51]

Length of time which may elapse before return.— The courts are not uniform in determining the length of time that may elapse before a return is made. Thus in a Wisconsin case (Hibbard v. Pettibone, 8 Wis. 270) it was held that where a return should have been made the first Monday in April, and was not in fact made until July 17, the action became discontinued. On the other hand, it has been held in Kentucky (Bourne v. Hocker, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 23) that a failure of three months to make a return could not be considered an abandonment; and in Texas (Riordan v. Britton, 69 Tex. 198, 7 S. W. 50, 5 Am. St. Rep. 37. See also City Nat. Bank v. Cupp, 59 Tex. 268) a return eleven months after the writ was issued was held to be allowable, although in this case due diligence was used to procure the return. See also Westphal v. Sherwood, 69 Iowa 364, 28 N. W. 640, holding that, under Iowa Code, § 3010, the return need not be made by the first day of the first term at which defendant is required to appear, unless the officer has in fact attached sufficient property.

Return not premature.—In Louisiana, if the sheriff knows of no property of defendant and plaintiff's counsel can point none out to him, a return at once is neither premature nor illegal. Guay v. Andrews, 8 La. Ann. 141. See also Hitchcock v. Hahn, 60 Mich. 459, 27 N. W. 600, where an officer in his return to a writ of attachment issued January 18, and returnable February 5, certified to a seizure of property thereunder on January 18, and further returned that he was unable to find defendant in his bailiwick. The writ and the return were filed on the return-day and it was held that the return was not premature; and that the certificate of his inability to find defendant had no reference to the date of the seizure but took effect from the date of the filing.

(Wis.) 226, holding that while it is the duty of the sheriff in such a case to retain the writ until the return-day thereof, yet if he makes a non est inventus return within a day or two after he receives it, and before the return-day, the court is bound to receive it and is justified in proceeding to judgment; and if defendant is injured thereby his remedy is against the sheriff and not by writ of error.

If defendant enters a voluntary appearance in the case a return before the return-day will not invalidate the proceedings. Dunlap v. McFarland, 25 Kan. 488, from which it would seem that a return one day before the return-day is not of itself a fatal irregularity.

(B) Date of Levy. The return to be sufficient should show also the date of the levy.[58]

(C) Description of Property Attached — (1) IN GENERAL — (a) PERSONALTY. Although a total failure of the return to designate or describe attached personalty will render the attachment inoperative,[59] it is difficult to lay down a precise or general rule as to what constitutes a sufficient description.[60] It seems, however, that the property attached should be described with such reasonable certainty as to render it distinguishable,[61] and, while its location should be shown,[62] it statutes. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pennock, 51 Pa. St. 244.

Naming persons in whose presence attachment made.— Under a statute requiring the levy of an attachment to be made in the presence of one or more credible persons of the neighborhood, it has been held that the return must state the names of the persons in whose presence the attachment was made. Cabeen v. Douglass, 1 Mo. 336.

Where both real and personal property were attached a return which does not show what disposition was made of the personalty is defective. Tucker v. Byars, 46 Miss. 549. Likewise, under a statute providing that the personal property of a defendant should be first taken under an attachment, a return showing that real property had been attached, which does not show that an unsuccessful search was made for personal property, or if such property was found that it was taken and was not enough to satisfy the claim, is insufficient. Willets v. Ridgway, 9 Ind. 367.

A mere irregularity in form, which in no way affects the substance of the return, will not invalidate it. Spengler v. O'Shea, 65 Miss. 75, 3 So. 378 (holding that, under a statute providing that a constable, after a levy on land, should hand the writ to the sheriff, who should return it to the circuit clerk, failure of the sheriff to indorse thereon the date of his return is not fatal to a proceeding where the constable's return was regular and properly noted in the sheriff's attachment docket); Hart v. Forbes, 60 Miss. 745; Johnson v. Gilkeson, 81 Mo. 55. See also Dronillard v. Whistler, 29 Ind. 552, holding that the return is not vitiated by the description of an appraiser as a "reputable" instead of a "credible" householder; or by an omission to state that he is a "disinterested" person, if it appears that he was not a party to the suit.

58. Newton v. Strang, 48 Mo. App. 538.

59. Ahern v. Purnell, 62 Conn. 21, 25 Atl. 393; Hunter v. Clarke, 16 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 558. Compare Green v. Pyne, 1 Ala. 235, holding that the failure to specifically describe the property in the return should be remedied by the court compelling the officer to amend his return, and not by quashing the attachment.

Parol evidence is not admissible to show what property was attached where the return does not in some manner designate the property. Sanford v. Pond, 37 Conn. 588.

Reference to other papers in some other court or case for a description of the property is not sufficient (Harding v. Kansas City Guaranty L. & T. Co., 3 Kan. App. 519, 43 Pac. 835); but the return may refer to an appraisement returned with the writ (Grebe v. Jones, 15 Nebr. 312, 18 N. W. 81).

60. Baxter v. Rice, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 197.

61. Hiles Carver Co. v. King, 109 Ga. 180, 34 S. E. 353; Bruce v. Pettengill, 12 N. H. 341; Messner v. Lewis, 20 Tex. 221; Mills v. Waller, Dall. (Tex.) 416; West River Bank v. Gorham, 38 Vt. 649; Rogers v. Fairfield, 36 Vt. 641; Paul v. Burton, 32 Vt. 148; Fullam v. Stearns, 30 Vt. 443; Bucklin v. Crampton, 20 Vt. 261.

Sufficient description.—Returns that the officer had levied upon four horses, describing their color, as the property of defendant (Fleming v. Burge, 6 Ala. 373), on a "certain stock of dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps, trunks, valises, goods, wares, and merchandise in a certain store house on lot number 6 in block 22 in town of Temple," valued at the sum of one thousand dollars, found in the possession of J. S. (Sweetser v. Sparks, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 33, 21 S. W. 724), on "a lot of dry goods, . . . and an iron safe, situated in a store house occupied by Hilliard Brothers" (Hilliard v. Wilson, 76 Tex. 180, 13 S. W. 25), or on "all the wood and coal of the defendant lying on a lot of land belonging to B. H., situate in B." (Reed v. Howard, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 36) have been held sufficient. See also Clement v. Little, 42 N. H. 563; Ela v. Shepard, 32 N. H. 277; Brown v. Hudson, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 605, 38 S. W. 653; Davis v. Dallas Nat. Bank, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 41, 26 S. W. 222; Carothers v. Wilkerson, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 353; Pond v. Baker, 58 Vt. 293, 2 Atl. 164.

Insufficient description.— A return that the attachment was levied on "all the stock and goods in said defendant's store, situated on Main street" does not contain a sufficient description of the property. Ahern v. Purnell, 62 Conn. 21, 25 Atl. 393. Nor does a description of cider as situated "in defendant's cellar" identify it with sufficient certainty when it is in the cellar of another house on the farm occupied by a tenant situated a mile from the house in which defendant lives. Barron v. Smith, 63 Vt. 121, 21 Atl. 269.

Excusable misdescription.— When from the appearance and use of the articles it is clear that they may have been naturally and in good faith misdescribed, as where, for instance, an officer attaches halters, ropes for tying oxen, hame collars, etc., and in his return calls them harnesses, such error will not avoid the attachment. Briggs v. Mason, 31 Vt. 433.

62. Kenîston v. Stevens, 66 Vt. 351, 29 Atl. 312, holding that a return on an attachment levied on cows, which did not describe the has been held that this alone, in the absence of a statement of its quality or kind, is insufficient.[63]

(b) Realty. On attachment of realty the return should describe the land with such precision that it may be readily identified.[64] While there is respectable authority to the effect that the description should be as specific as that required in a deed,[65] and while such a description would no doubt in all cases be sufficient,[66] yet, inasmuch as the object of the attachment is to secure the jurisdiction of the court over the land until plaintiff establishes his claim, it would seem that the same certainty ought not to be required as when the title is divested.[67]

(2) Defendant's Ownership. By the better practice, and in some jurisdictions necessarily, the return should show, either by express statement or necessary cows as situated on any farm or in any place, or in any person's possession, or even as being within the town, was insufficient.

Sufficient description of location.—Where a return enumerated property as "one buggy-wagon, one Prescott organ, 40 bobbin logs, situated on defendant's farm," the expression "on defendant's farm," although there is no comma between it and the word "logs," refers to all the property and not to the logs only. Barron v. Smith, 63 Vt. 121, 21 Atl. 269.

63. Ahern v. Purnell, 62 Conn. 21, 25 Atl. 393, holding, however, that where the only sheep on defendant's farm were in a barn on a part thereof leased to a tenant, the description in a return that they were on defendant's farm was sufficient.

"All the hay and grain in the barns and in stacks" on a certain farm, in an officer's return, may be held to properly include grain in the straw. Briggs v. Taylor, 35 Vt. 57.

A return that all the hay and grain in defendant's barn had been attached is not rendered invalid by the fact that defendant had two barns, one of which contained hay only, since the return related to the hay and grain, and not to the barns, and could have no reference to the barns in which hay only was located. Stanton v. Hodges, 6 Vt. 64.

Shares of stock, being distinguishable from each other only by their respective owners, a description in the return of the attaching officer specifying the number of shares attached and the owner is sufficient. Stamford Bank v. Ferris, 17 Conn. 259. Nor need the sheriff append to his return the certificate shown him by the officer of the corporation when he made the levy. Thompson v. Wells, 57 Ill. App. 436.

Bank v. Cupp, 59 Tex. 268 (where at least as between plaintiff and defendant in attachment, the description of the property was clearly sufficient); Meuley v. Zeigler, 23 Tex. 88; Robertson v. McClay, 19 Tex. All defendant's real estate in a certain town.—A return by an officer that he had attached all the real estate owned by defendant in a certain town constitutes a valid attachment of all of defendant's lands which come within that description. Moore v. Kidder, 55 N. H. 488; Clemons v. Clemons, 69 Vt. 545, 38 Atl. 314 [approving Young v. Judd, Brayt. (Vt.) 151]. (Mass.) 308.

Defendant's homestead farm.—A return that "the homestead farm of the debtor, containing about thirty acres, more or less" had been attached creates a lien on the whole farm, although it in fact contained one hundred and fifty acres. Designating the property as the homestead was a sufficient description of the whole land, and the number of acres being only a part of the description and being inconsistent with the more general description should be rejected as a mistake of the officer or as repugnant. Bacon v. Leonard, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 277.

If an equity of redemption is attached by an officer a description of the property as the debtor's right of redemption in property conveyed by a certain mortgage is sufficient. Wolfe v. Dorr, 24 Me. 104.

Omission to set out the number of feet frontage on a certain street, of certain premises, is not fatal if the description of the property is otherwise definite. Clark v. Empire Lumber Co., 87 Ga. 742, 13 S. E. 826.

W. 346 (where a return "Levied this attachment on one hundred and forty acres of land near Eminence, Henry County, the property of defendants" was held sufficient); Lambard v. Pike, 33 Me. 141; Whitaker v. Sumner, 9 Pick. intendment, that the property was attached as belonging to defendant,[68] or that he had an interest or ownership therein.[69] A failure to so state, however, is a defect which at the proper time may be amended.[70]

(3) VALUE. Although the return in attachment need not, in the absence of statute, contain a valuation of the property attached, yet, inasmuch as it is the officer's duty to seize a sufficient amount to cover the claim sued on, it would Missouri.— Anderson v. Scott, 2 Mo. 15.

New Jersey.— Yardley v. Yardley, 32 N. J. L. 215, holding that if the legal import of the language of the return show the property to be that of defendant it is sufficient.

Civ. App. 698, 25 S. W. 973.

As to presumption that property was defendant's, although not in fact so stated, see infra, XI, E, 2, b, note 84.

Effect of misnomer or misstatement of ownership.— Where an officer, commanded to attach the lands of defendants, late copartners, etc., makes a mistake in stating in his return that the property belongs to one of the parties, it has been held not to destroy the effect of the attachment in respect to the other. Such misstatement may be rejected as a mistake of the officer, or as being repugnant to the levy and more general description of the property in the return. Robertson v. Kinkhead, 26 Wis. 560 [citing Bacon v. Leonard, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 277]. Nor would the mistake in the name of defendant, if the property attached could easily be designated after striking out the name, be fatal to the attachment. Frost v. Paine, 12 Me. 111. On the other hand, it is held that where the writ ran against three defendants, a return that the officer attached "all the rights, title and interest of defendant" is too vague and uncertain to create a lien on the estate of any one of the defendants. Hathaway v. Larrabee, 27 Me. 449.

A prima facie case of ownership in defendant is not made out by a return which states that defendants are not found in the county, and does not state in whose possession the officer found the property attached. Doane v. Glenn, 1 Colo. 495.

A return is sufficient that the officer had attached the property described "as the property of defendant." Cousins v. Alworth, 44 Minn. 505, 47 N. W. 169, 10 L. R. A. 504. See also Wharton v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 510.

Defendant's possession is not negatived by a return stating that the property was seized at a certain railroad depot. Moore v. Brewer, 94 Ga. 260, 21 S. E. 460.

Statement of amount of defendant's interest.—While it is proper for the return to state that all the right, title, or interest of defendant in certain property has been attached (Kendall v. Irving, 42 Me. 339), yet, as the amount of interest which defendant has in the property can more properly be determined by the court than by the officer, the return need not show the exact extent of his interest (Drew v. Bequindre, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 93).

seem not only to be proper but the better practice, that the return show the approximate value of the property taken.[71]

(D) Personal Service or Notice. Under statutes requiring service of personal notice of the attachment upon defendant, if he can be found, the return must affirmatively show that such service was properly made,[72] or that it could not have been upon reasonable effort.[73] Where the statute requires that, upon the inability of the officer to find defendant, he shall leave a copy at his usual place of abode,[74] or with the tenant or party in possession,[75] or that it shall be

71. Barton v. Ferguson, 1 Indian Terr. 263, 37 S. W. 49.

Such statement of value is only prima facie evidence against the officer, and does not estop him from showing the true value, although it casts upon him the burden of proof. Pierce v. Strickland, 2 Story (U. S.) 292, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,147. On the other hand, if there is no other evidence of value than that contained in the return, it will be taken in an action against the officer as the correct value. French v. Stanley, 21 Me. 512.

72. Crary v. Barber, 1 Colo. 172 (holding that, under a statute requiring that the writ shall be read to defendant, or a true copy delivered to him, a return which states that the service was made by reading to defendant the name of plaintiff and the amount claimed and when and where defendant was to answer the complaint is insufficient); Tucker v. Byars, 46 Miss. 549; Watts v. Willett, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 212. See also Talcott v. Rosenberg, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 287; Strickland v. Martin, 23 Vt. 484.

Defect not fatal.—Failure to state that a copy was served is a mere irregularity, if the return otherwise shows the attachment to have been levied. Wagstaff v. Moser, 8 Kan. App. 855, 55 Pac. 554 [citing Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 42 Kan. 176, 22 Pac. 11]; Dunlap v. McFarland, 25 Kan. 488; Schweigel v. L. A. Shakman Co., 78 Minn. 142, 80 N. W. 871, 81 N. W. 529. Return insufficient because of place of service.—An officer's return that he gave defendant a copy at a place out of his precinct is extra-official and is not proper evidence of notice. Arnold v. Tourtellot, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 172.

Sufficient statement that service was made.—A return indorsed by the sheriff on a writ of attachment in the following language: "I served a certified copy of the within writ on Charles L. Dolph, . . . by delivering the same to Charles L. Dolph, and . . . I served a certified copy, together with a copy of the inventory, on C. M. Dingman," is fairly to be interpreted as denoting service of a copy of the writ as well as the inventory upon the last named. Watson v. Dingman, 120 Mich. 443, 79 N. W. 639.

73. Reynolds v. Marquette Cir. Judge, 125 Mich. 445, 84 N. W. 628; Farr v. Kilgour, 117 Mich. 227, 75 N. W. 457; Holden v. Ranney, 45 Mich. 399, 8 N. W. 78 (holding that a return that the officer personally attempted to serve notice on defendant by offering him a copy "but he ran away. I could not deliver a copy to him," is insufficient). See also Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182.

A return showing diligent "search" for defendant, where the statute requires diligent "inquiry," is insufficient. Thomas v. Morasco, 5 Pa. Dist. 133.

It is sufficient that the return shows that the officer made a diligent search for defendant during all the time in which personal service could be made. Davidson v. Fox, 120 Mich. 385, 79 N. W. 1106. The statute does not contemplate a search in the sense that the sheriff must make a tour of the entire county to find defendant. Horton v. Monroe, 98 Mich. 195, 57 N. W. 109 [citing Hitchcock v. Hahn, 60 Mich. 459, 27 N. W. 600]. But a return which merely shows that property was attached and that no personal service was made on any of the defendants but fails to show that they could not be found is insufficient. Cochrane v. Johnson, 95 Mich. 67, 54 N. W. 707. So too a statement in a return that a copy of the attachment was left with defendant's wife because defendant could not be found within the county sufficiently shows that defendant was not personally served, inasmuch as lawful service could only have been made within the county. Williams v. Barnaman, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 69.

Where there is more than one defendant to an attachment suit, a return by the sheriff that he could not find the defendants is equivalent to certifying that neither could be found, and would be false if one was found or could have been served with the process. Hitchcock v. Hahn, 60 Mich. 459, 27 N. W. 600.

74. Adams v. Abram, 38 Mich. 302; Proctor v. Whitcher, 15 N. Y. App. Div. 227, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 190; Watts v. Willett, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 212; Willard v. Sperry, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Sheldon v. Comstock, 3 R. I. 84.

Under the early Vermont statute, the return must not only show that a copy of the writ was left at the last and usual place of abode of the defendant, but it must also state the situation in which such copy was left. Inasmuch, however, as this condition is for the benefit of defendant the attachment is valid as to the subsequent creditors without it. Newton v. Adams, 4 Vt. 437.

75. Anderson v. Moline Plow Co., 101 Iowa 747, 69 N. W. 1028, 63 Am. St. Rep. 424; Williams v. Barnaman, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 69.

Such a condition is not fulfilled by a statement that the property was not, to the sheriff's knowledge, in the possession of any per-posted in some designated or conspicuous place,[76] the return must show that such requirements have been observed.

(II) When Levy Is Made Subject to Other Levies. The return of an officer that he makes the attachment subject to other attachments is evidence of the order in which the writs are served,[77] but is by no means conclusive as to the validity of a former levy.[78] Where the levy is made subject to the levy of an officer who is in possession the return of the latter must show what was done in respect to the subsequent levy.[79]

b. Signature. The officer should of course sign the return.[80] It has been son at the time of its seizure. White v. Prior, 88 Mich. 647, 50 N. W. 655.

In Louisiana the return of a domiciliary service should show the name of the person in possession, and whether or not the property was at, or was kept at, the domicile of defendant. Lehman v. Broussard, 45 La. Ann. 346, 12 So. 504.

Must show that tenant holds under defendant.— Under a statute providing that in the attachment of real estate it is "the duty of the sheriff to leave a copy of the writ with the tenant, or other person in actual possession, holding under the defendant in the attachment," the return must show that the party in possession with whom the copy was left was "holding under the defendant in the attachment." Bryan v. Trout, 90 Pa. St. 492; Hayes v. Gillespie, 35 Pa. St. 155; Falk v. Wurzburger, 3 Kulp (Pa.) 321.

A return which by fair implication states that a copy of the writ and notice was left with the parties in possession is sufficient as against subsequent creditors with notice, although it does not specifically show that the statute has been literally complied with. Sabin v. Mitchell, 27 Oreg. 66, 39 Pac. 635; Thielens v. White, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 194.

76. Wilson v. Ray, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 109; Connell v. Medlock, 24 La. Ann. 512; Jones v. Walker, 15 Gray (Mass.) 353.

Sufficient statutory compliance.— A return by an officer that he attached real estate by "posting" a copy of the writ in a conspicuous place thereon is a sufficient showing of the "leaving" of a copy in such place as to defeat any collateral attack on the proceeding. Colfax Bank v. Richardson, 34 Oreg. 518, 54 Pac. 359, 75 Am. St. Rep. 664. If the return shows that a copy was posted on the premises omission to state that the copy was left in a conspicuous place, although an irregularity, is not a fatal omission (Davis v. Baker, 72 Cal. 494, 14 Pac. 102; Lewis v. Quinker, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 284; Lively v. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 46 W. Va. 180, 33 S. E. 93), and if the return shows that a copy was left in a conspicuous place it need not point out such place (Colfax Bank v. Richardson, 34 Oreg. 518, 54 Pac. 359, 75 Am. St. Rep. 664 [distinguishing Hall v. Stevenson, 19 Oreg. 153, 23 Pac. 887, 20 Am. St. Rep. 803]). So too if a levy of real estate is made by posting a copy of the writ thereon the return need not affirmatively show that the premises were unoccupied at the time, in which case alone a valid levy could be made by posting. Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238, 70 Am. Dec. 775.

Insufficient compliance.— A return showing that a "notice," instead of a copy of the writ, had been posted in the most public part of the property was insufficient to show a valid execution of the writ. Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577.

77. Thurston v. Huntington, 17 N. H. 438.

If he returns that the levies on two writs were contemporaneous when in fact one was precedent to the other an action will lie against him for a false return. State v. Harrington, 28 Mo. App. 287.

78. Therefore the return of an officer making a subsequent levy that it was made on a stock of goods subject to the rights of the first attachment is not equivalent to showing that the first attachment was levied on the entire stock of goods, and it may be shown that there had been no levy made on any of the goods. National Wall-Paper Co. v. Fourth Nat. Bank, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 51 S. W. 1002.

79. Hence, in consequence of such defective return, where the intermediate levy was ignored in the application of the proceeds of the property by the successor in office of the party who was in possession, the latter and his sureties are liable on his official bond. State v. Curran, 45 Mo. App. 142.

Where an officer in possession under attachment attaches under a second writ he need only return that he so attached the right, title, and interest of defendant in the property, such interest being in his possession. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312.

Where the officer has both writs in his possession when he comes upon the property it has been held in an early case that he should return each of them as levied upon the whole property found. Violette v. Tyler, 2 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 200, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,955.

80. Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 28 Kan. 825, 834, where it is said, "the mere fact that a paper is filed containing a recital of certain acts, which paper is unsigned by any one, contains no evidence either that the acts so stated were in fact done, or, if done, by whom they were done. Process, in the nature of an order of attachment, must not only be executed in a certain way, but also by a certain officer, and the signature of the officer is essential to show what was done, and by whom it was done." See also Clymore v. Williams, 77 Ill. 618. Compare Lea v. Maxwell, 1 Head (Tenn.) 365, where, without deciding whether or not the officer could sign after his term of office had expired, it was held, however, that the omission of such signature is a defect which may be corrected by amendment.[81]

2. Aider of Defects — a. By Extrinsic Evidence. Where the return clearly shows that certain property was attached, the performance by the officer of certain acts in connection therewith may be shown by parol evidence,[82] or by facts appearing elsewhere in the proceeding.[83]

b. By Presumption. Since, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, an officer is presumed to have done his duty, the courts in many instances will presume that the statute has been complied with, if the return, although informal in some respects, is set forth in language sufficiently definite to justify an intendment of regularity, and there is no affirmative evidence of an omission.[84] When, how-held that, under the circumstances of the case, the signature was not essential to the validity of the levy.

The necessity of swearing to the return depends upon statute. Under the Pennsylvania act of 1869 it need not be thus verified. Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Miners' Bank, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 515. And see Edmonds v. Buel, 23 Conn. 242, holding that an indifferent person to whom a writ was directed for service need not make oath as to the truth of his return.

Such evidence must be clear and satisfactory, and cannot rest upon presumption. Hence if the witnesses will not testify positively to a performance of one of the necessary acts the testimony is not sufficient. Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462, 22 Pac. 284.

W. 145, where the return recited a levy at a certain date "on the property, a list of which is hereto attached, made a part of this return." There were two lists: one of personalty, on which was a note that it was levied on at the date shown by the return, the other, of realty, was noted as being levied on at a later date. It was held that these lists were admissible in evidence as a part of the return, and would justify a finding that the property was levied on at the time mentioned therein. Compare Kirksey v. Bates, 1 Ala. 303.

ever, the obscurity of the return is such that its import cannot be ascertained with reasonable certainty, the court will not, to make it effective, indulge in mere conjectural construction.[85]

c. By Waiver. By appearing generally,[86] by admitting the fact of levy in his answer,[87] or by reading an amended return in support of his motion to vacate the attachment in the court below,[88] attachment defendant[89] waives any formal defects in the return.[90]

3. AMENDMENT — a. Right to Amend — (1) GENERALLY. While it has been held that an officer has an absolute right to amend his return, to conform to the facts, at any time before the cause is submitted to the jury,[91] the better rule would seem to be that he can amend without leave of the court only before it becomes a part of the record.[92] Such leave will usually be

Virginia.— Thus, as he is without authority to serve the writ outside of his bailiwick, and the presumption of law in the absence of evidence to the contrary is that he executed it legally, the return need not show that the service was in his bailiwick. W. 600] (holding that, where a return was filed on the return-day, February 5, and recited that the property was attached January 12, and that after diligent search the officer had been unable to find defendant, and this statement was dated January 15, no presumption could be invoked that the officer continued to look for defendant from the date of the writ to the date of the filing); Kittredge v. Bellows, 4 N. granted,[93] either upon the application of the officer or of an interested party,[94] but this is true only when the return as amended would show legal service,[95] and then only when there is sufficient on record before the court to enable it to reasonably infer that the amendment is in accord with the facts,[96] and merely affects the evidence, and not the fact, of service.[97] An amendment should not be allowed which would release the property attached and included within the original return.[98]

An amendment may be allowed where an officer, upon receiving a writ with directions to attach certain real estate of the debtor, made a memorandum upon the writ that he attached accordingly, setting out the day and month, but afterward by mistake returned that he attached on the same day of the succeeding month, the memorandum being something to amend by (Haven v. Snow, 14 Pick. (III) After Lapse of Time. The mere fact that a considerable length of time has elapsed,[1] that the suit has been begun,[2] or that a judgment has been rendered,[3] will not in itself preclude an amendment of the return in attachment.

(IV) When Rights of Third Parties Intervene. As a rule, however, an amendment cannot be permitted when the rights of innocent third parties, acquired previous thereto, would be thereby injuriously affected.[4]

b. Notice to Adverse Party. If the desired amendment would affect the jurisdiction, it is essential that notice be given to the parties affected by it.[5]

c. Effect of Amendment. The amended return takes the place of the imperfect one,[6] and with but few exceptions,[7] relates back to the time of the original return.[8]

F. Recording — 1. Necessity of. A statutory provision for the recording of a copy of the writ and descriptive part of the return, in the attachment of realty and bulky personalty, is imperative, and observance thereof is necessary for the preservation of the lien against subsequent purchasers.[9]

By whom the copies must be transmitted.— In the absence of statutory provision the copy may be sent by a servant of the officer in all cases where the precise hour of the day when they are left is not material. Pemigewasset Bank v. Burnham, 5 N. H. 275.

10. Benjamin v. Davis, 73 Iowa 715, 36 N. W. 717 (holding that a recording at a place other than that specified is a nullity); Grant v. Albee, 89 Me. 299, 36 Atl. 397 (holding that, under a statute providing that in an attachment of personalty made in an unincorporated place, a copy should be recorded in the office of the clerk of the oldest "adjoining" town in the county, an attachment made in township 36, and recorded in the clerk's office in W which, though the nearest town to township 36, nowhere adjoins it, is not a compliance with the statute).

What constitutes an "unincorporated place." — Under a statute providing that the recording should take place within the town or corporate place in which the attachment was made, but that if it was made in an unincorporated place, then in the town adjoining, a plantation which is organized and has a clerk's office and other plantation officers, is not an "unincorporated place" within the meaning of the statute. Parker v. Williams, 77 Me. 418, 1 Atl. 138.

11. Cookson v. Parker, 93 Me. 488, 45 Atl. 505, holding that the statute was complied with by filing the copy in the office of the clerk of an acting de facto plantation in which the property was situated, and that the officer was neither required nor allowed to enter upon an investigation to ascertain whether or not some technical irregularity might be found in the proceedings taken for organizing such plantation, which would affect its corporate existence.

14. Lincoln v. Strickland, 51 Me. 321; Arper v. Baze, 9 Minn. 108. Compare French v. De Bow, 38 Mich. 708, where the statute not expressly stating that the recording should constitute constructive notice, it was held that it could not be so construed.

When the constructive notice is complete.— It is sometimes not only the duty of the officer to leave a copy of the writ and return at the clerk's office, but it is also his duty to have it entered in the books. Under such a statute the constructive notice is complete when such copy is entered in the proper book, although the entry is not indexed. Blodgett v. Huiscamp, 64 Iowa 548, 21 N. W. 25. On the other hand, if the statute merely requires him to leave a copy with the clerk, it would seem that the constructive notice is complete when the copy is left by him, even though the clerk should neglect to record it, or should make an insufficient record thereof; the reason being that the clerk is not an agent of plaintiff in the attachment, and therefore, if plaintiff's agent (the officer) fully performs his duty as laid down by the statute, plaintiff ought not suffer for any neglect of the clerk. See Sykes v. Keating, 118 Mass. 517; Braley v. French, 28 Vt. 546.

15. Bryant v. Osgood, 52 N. H. 182; Pond v. Baker, 55 Vt. 400; Fullam v. Stearns, 30 Vt. 443.

Sufficiency of record as to personalty.— A record of the return of an attachment of bulky personal property simply designating it as all of the property of its kind in the town is sufficient to constitute a constructive notice of the attachment. Adams v. Lane, 38 Vt. 640; Paul v. Burton, 32 Vt. 148. Where the record shows an attachment of fifty tons of hay it need not state that the hay was too bulky to be removed, as the court can properly take notice of such fact. Davis v. Leary, 177 Mass. 526, 59 N. E. 191.

Misnomer of owner.— Where real estate was described as belonging to "Augustu," the word "Augustu" being so written as to make it difficult to tell whether it was "Augusta", or "Augustu," it was held insufficient to create a valid lien on the real estate of "Augustus" M, the register being also misled unimportant detail the defect is not fatal,[16] but where it materially varies from the original,[17] or where the copy is such that the original, if like it, would be altogether void,[18] it will not constitute notice. Where the statute requires the officer to file a statement of the sum sued for, a mere statement of the ad damnum of the writ is insufficient,[19] although if the amount claimed exceed the ad damnum, such a statement would, it seems, be sufficient.[20] The copy filed must be duly attested when so required by statute.[21]

G. Operation and Effect of Return — 1. In General — a. As Evidence of Fact and Manner of Levy. The return is competent evidence to prove the fact and manner of the levy[22] and the nature of the property taken thereunder.[23]

b. Conclusiveness as to Facts Stated Therein — (1) Generally. As between the parties and their privies,[24] the return, as to matters necessary to be included therein,[25] is, in the absence of fraud,[26] generally conclusive and cannot be contradicted for the purpose of defeating any rights acquired thereunder.[27] It is not

2. When Defective.[34] A mere misstatement in a return,[35] or a failure to state all the facts connected with the levy[36] will not of itself defeat the legal effect of the levy or affect the jurisdiction of the court; but it has been held that a return defective in omitting a special description of the estate attached, in connection with the usual requisites of a return, will be supplanted by subsequent attachments, the returns of which do comply with the statute.[37]

37. Owen v. Neveau, 128 Mass. 427, where the statute in question (Mass. Stat. (1880), c. 123, § 55) provided that an attachment of real estate which had been fraudulently conveyed by the debtor to a third person should not be valid against subsequent attaching creditors or bona fide purchasers, unless the officer also returned, in addition to his general return, a brief description of the estate attached, and the name or names of the person or persons in whom the record of legal title stands. Compare Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Tel. Cable Co., 55 Fed. 738, holding that while the return was defective in that it contained no inventory of the attached property, yet, under section 322 of the Washington statute, the defect was one that could be amended so as to show that a legal cause for the attachment existed, and that the subsequently attaching creditors were not entitled to priority over defendant, their only remedy being to compel an amendment.

XII. NATURE AND PRIORITY OF ATTACHMENT LIEN.

A. In General — 1. Nature. Although the charge which a creditor obtains against the property of his debtor by levying an attachment thereon is commonly called a lien,[38] it is not, in a strict sense, a fixed lien on property,[39] but only a right to obtain payment out of the property attached in preference to others[40] which is inchoate or contingent[41] until the creditor has obtained final judgment in the attachment suit,[42] and a judgment for defend-

38. Nomenclature.— This right is constantly spoken of as a lien in the books of reports, in the arguments of the bar, and in the opinions of the bench, and although an attachment of real estate does not require a change of possession, that does not make it any the less a lien in the sense attached to that term. Hubbard v. Hamilton Bank, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 340. It has been said also that an attachment places property in the custody of the law (Cordaman v. Malone, 63 Ala. 556; Metzner v. Graham, 57 Mo. 404); that it places property in the custody of the law and creates a lien (Peck v. Webber, 7 How. (Miss.) 658; Brandon Iron Co. v. Gleason, 24 Vt. 228); that it sequesters the property to await the judgment (Davenport v. Lacon, 17 Conn. 278); and that it "operates as a lien" (Ward v. McKenzie, 33 Tex. 297, 7 Am. Rep. 261).

39. Shirk v. Thomas, 121 Ind. 147, 22 N. E. 976, 16 Am. St. Rep. 381; In re Bellows, 3 Story (U. S.) 428, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,278, 7 Law Rep. 119; In re Cheney, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,636, 5 Law Rep. 19. Contra, Ingraham v. Phillips, 1 Day (Conn.) 117, holding that an attachment created a lien within the meaning of the bankruptcy acts of 1800. See also a remark of Story, J., in Ex p. Foster, 2 Story (U. S.) 131, 145, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,960, 5 Law Rep. 55, that "An attachment does not come up to the exact definition, or meaning of a lien, either in the general sense of the common law, or in that of the maritime law, or in that of equity jurisprudence," but usage has perhaps justified the employment of the word "lien" as denoting a charge upon property created by statute.

40. Beck v. Brady, 6 La. Ann. 444; Emerson v. Fox, 3 La. 178.

Nature of right.— The lien acquired by an attaching creditor is not an interest in property and cannot be conveyed or assigned separate from the debt which it secures (Lyon v. Sandford, 5 Conn. 544); but it constitutes a cloud on the legal title (Mullins v. Aikin, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 535); and although arising by operation of law (Harrison v. Trader, 29 Ark. 85), has been held to be as specific as if created by virtue of a voluntary act of the debtor and to stand on as high equitable grounds as a mortgage lien (Carter v. Champion, 8 Conn. 549, 21 Am. Dec. 695; McFadden v. Blocker, 2 Indian Terr. 260, 48 S. W. 1043. Compare Bigelow v. Topliff, 25 Vt. 273, 60 Am. Dec. 264).

Lien as a basis for equitable action.— The right acquired by attaching property is sufficient to justify a creditor in filing a bill in equity to clear the property from adverse claims (Francis v. Lawrence, 48 N. J. Eq. 508, 22 Atl. 259; Cocks v. Varney, 45 N. J. Eq. 72, 17 Atl. 108; Smith v. Muirheid, 34 N. J. Eq. 4; Greenleaf v. Mumford, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 469, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 30; Rinchey v. Stryker, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 75; Matlock v. Babb, 31 Oreg. 516, 49 Pac. 873; Bennett v. Minott, 28 Oreg. 339, 39 Pac. 997, 44 Pac. 288. Contra, Melville v. Brown, 16 N. J. L. 363), or in applying for an injunction against the sale of the attached property under an execution issued on a subsequent judgment (Schuster v. Rader, 13 Colo. 329, 22 Pac. 505); but the lien acquired by attachment of property must be perfected in a court of law before resort can be had to equity to secure the benefits therefrom (Morton v. Grafflin, 68 Md. 545, 13 Atl. 341, 15 Atl. 298; Rhodes v. Amsinck, 38 Md. 345). See also Alley v. Carrol, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 221, where it was held that a bill in equity could properly be filed to preserve the lien of attachment when necessary papers were lost and could not be supplied.

An illustration of the contingent nature of the lien is found in Lee v. Smyser, 96 Ky. 369, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 497, 29 S. W. 27, where it was held that a lien on real estate could be acquired without filing an affidavit that ant on the merits of the suit from which no appeal is taken[43] terminates the lien.[44]

2. Date of Origin. The prevailing doctrine is that the lien dates from the time when the writ of attachment is levied, or, as the proposition is often stated, the title of the purchaser of attached property at an execution sale relates back defendant had no personal property, although such an affidavit was essential before real estate could be sold.

Less binding than judgment lien.—The same binding force does not exist in the case of an attachment lien as in the case of a judgment lien. Reeves v. Johnson, 12 N. J. L. 29.

43. An appeal must be perfected within the statutory time in order to continue the attachment lien (Peterson v. Hays, 85 Iowa 14, 51 N. W. 1143; McCormick Harvesting-Mach. Co. v. Jacobson, 77 Iowa 582, 42 N. W. 499); and some statutes only allow two days within which to perfect an appeal that will continue such lien (Harger v. Spofford, 44 Iowa 369); although the right to appeal in general may continue for a longer period (Munn v. Shannon, 86 Iowa 363, 53 N. W. 263). Compare Meloy v. Orton, 42 Fed. 513, construing Wisconsin statute, where it was held that the lien would not continue pending appeal unless notice was immediately given, a proper bond tendered, and a special order made by the court.

An attachment lien is not continued after judgment for defendant by a writ of review which is sued out by plaintiff (Clap v. Bell, 4 Mass. 99; Johnson v. Edson, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 299); by a writ of error which is subsequently sued out (Sherrod v. Davis, 17 Ala. 312); or by the pendency of a motion for a new trial (Ranft v. Young, 21 Nev. 401, 32 Pac. 490).

When a dismissal of an attachment suit is vacated it has been held that the lien of the attachment continues. Jaffray v. H. B. Claflin Co., 119 Mo. 117, 24 S. W. 761. Contra, O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312. Compare Hubbell v. Kingman, 52 Conn. 17, where a judgment of nonsuit which was set aside at the same term was held not to destroy the attachment lien.

Payment of judgment.— Where an attaching creditor secures a judgment for part of his claim and appeals therefrom defendant is not entitled to have the attachment vacated on paying the amount of the judgment. Wright v. Rowland, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 649, 4 Keyes (N. Y.) 165, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248 [reversing 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 115].

New York — Stay of proceedings pending appeal.— Although N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 3343, subs. 12, declares that an attachment is annulled when final judgment is entered for defendant, a stay of proceedings pending appeal suspends the effect of such annulment and continues the attachment lien, and a motion to vacate the attachment is improper because the warrant stands annulled by operation of law. A nonsuit is such a judgment in favor of defendant that it puts an end to the attachment lien. Brown v. Harris, 2 Greene (Iowa) 505, 52 Am. Dec. 535. But see Dollins v. Pollock, 89 Ala. 351, 7 So. 904, where it was held that a voluntary nonsuit in an attachment case which was immediately set aside by the court did not impair the lien of the attachment.

The reversal of a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an attachment suit, where it is not reversed on a principle which shows that the action in which it was rendered cannot be sustained, will not put an end to the attachment lien. Allen v. Adams, 17 Conn. 67.

The lien is discharged by a judgment for defendant, although the clerk fails to perform the ministerial duty of certifying the judgment to the register of deeds (Meloy v. Orton, 42 Fed. 513, construing Wisconsin statute); or although there has been a judgment for plaintiff on a plea in abatement (Boekhoff v. Gruner, 47 Mo. App. 22).

Effect upon attachment issue.—Although it has been held that a judgment for defendant on the merits will not cure an error respecting the attached property which wrongfully threw costs on plaintiff (Hilton v. Ross, 9 Nebr. 406, 2 N. W. 862), it has been also decided that alleged errors or irregularities at the trial of the attachment issue are immaterial after judgment for defendant on the merits (Bradbury v. Cole, 62 Mo. App. 263), and an appeal from an order of the court refusing to vacate an attachment was refused because such order was a nullity (Ranft v. Young, 21 Nev. 401, 32 Pac. 490).

to the time of levy;[45] but in some jurisdictions the lien is held to arise as soon as the writ is placed in the sheriff's hands for service.[46]

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 525.

In Tennessee the property is bound from the filing of an attachment bill in chancery or the issue of the attachment writ at law, provided the property is described in the bill or writ. Vance v. Cooper, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 93 [reversing 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 497]; Burrough v. Brooks, 3 Head (Tenn.) 392. But see Sharp v. Hunter, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 389, where a purchaser, before the institution of attachment proceedings, whose deed was recorded between the date of filing the bill and the levy, was allowed to prevail over the attaching creditor.

3. DURATION. An attachment lien on real estate continues until judgment in the suit has been entered and docketed[47] when it merges in the judgment lien,[48] and in the absence of statute an attachment lien on personal property will continue for a reasonable time after judgment, to allow the issue and levy of an execution.[49] In New England, however, the duration of the lien after final judgment[50] is regulated by express enactments which usually set the time for its continuance at thirty days in the case of personal property[51] and at a longer period in the case of real estate.[52]

Directions not to levy would prevent an attachment writ from becoming a lien on defendant's property as soon as it was delivered into the sheriff's hands, and a transfer of the property before the officer was directed to execute the writ would have priority over the attachment. Gray v. Patton, 13 Bush (Ky.) 625; Blakely v. Smith, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 109, 26 S. W. 584.

47. Docketing is essential before the attachment lien merges in the judgment lien. Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647, 54 Pac. 254; Emery v. Yount, 7 Colo. 107, 1 Pac. 686; Davis v. Jenkins, 46 Kan. 19, 26 Pac. 459. In Hill v. Baker, 32 Iowa 302, 7 Am. Rep. 193, it was held that when the attachment lien merges in the judgment lien the latter relates back to the beginning of the former.

Where the judgment was not docketed so as to become a lien, the lien of attachment continues for the same length of time that the statute fixes for the life of a judgment lien. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256; Floyd v. Sellers, 7 Colo. App. 498, 44 Pac. 373. But see Campbell v. Atwood, (Tenn. Ch. 1897) 47 S. W. 168, where it was held that failure to sell real estate within a year after judgment was rendered did not defeat an attachment lien, although a judgment lien by statute was limited in duration to one year. Compare Emery v. Yount, 7 Colo. 107, 1 Pac. 686.

48. Riley v. Nance, 97 Cal. 203, 31 Pac. 1126, 32 Pac. 315; Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256; Speelman v. Chaffee, 5 Colo. 247; Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392; Green v. Dougherty, 55 Mo. App. 217.

49. Speelman v. Chaffee, 5 Colo. 247; Avery v. Stephens, 48 Mich. 246, 12 N. W. 211; Bushey v. Raths, 45 Mich. 181, 7 N. W. 802.

Reasonable time.— One year was held to be a reasonable time after judgment within which to issue execution in Speelman v. Chaffee, 5 Colo. 247; and thirty days was regarded as a reasonable period in Geiges v. Greiner, 68 Mich. 153, 36 N. W. 48.

50. By final judgment the statute probably means one from which no appeal is taken, as such judgment is final upon the matters in controversy, whether litigated or upon default (Leighton v. Reed, 28 Me. 87); and a judgment is final in spite of a subsequent review, for a judgment on a review is not intended (Bingham v. Pepoon, 9 Mass. 239); but a judgment in favor of an attaching creditor which is reversed for error not inconsistent with his ultimate recovery is not a final judgment (Allen v. Adams, 17 Conn. 67).

51. Gordon v. Wilkins, 20 Me. 134; Norris v. Bridgham, 14 Me. 429; Stackpole v. Hilton, 121 Mass. 449; Knap v. Sprague, 9 Mass. 258, 6 Am. Dec. 64; Murphy v. Hill, 68 N. H. 544, 44 Atl. 703; Carpenter v. Snell, 37 Vt. 255; Dewey v. Fay, 34 Vt. 138; Blodgett v. Adams, 24 Vt. 23; Goodrich v. Church, 20 Vt. 187; Allen v. Carty, 19 Vt. 65; Clark v. Washburn, 9 Vt. 302. And in Nixon v. Phelps, 29 Vt. 198, it was held that where the lien was lost by failure to take out execution within the proper time, the attaching officer could not maintain a suit in favor of the creditor for a wrongful taking of the property from him.

In Connecticut a lien created by attachment of personal property continues for sixty days after final judgment (Sanford v. Pond, 37 Conn. 588; Beers v. Place, 36 Conn. 578), or, if the goods are encumbered by a prior attachment, for sixty days after such encumbrance is removed (Gates v. Bushnell, 9 Conn. 530); but it is no excuse for failure to demand the goods within sixty days that they have been fraudulently disposed of (Gates v. Bushnell, 9 Conn. 530).

In Rhode Island execution must be issued during the same term that final judgment in the attachment suit is recovered and must be levied on the attached property, whether it be real estate or personalty, before the return-day of the execution. Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131.

52. Duration of attachment lien on land.— In Connecticut an attachment lien on land continues for four months after final judgment (Beers v. Place, 36 Conn. 578); in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island it continues for the same period as in the case of personal property (Brown v. Allen, 92 Me. 378, 42 Atl. 793; Heywood v. Hildreth, 9 Mass. 393; Murphy v. Hill, 68 N. H. 544, 44 Atl. 703; Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131); and in Vermont it continues for five months (Whipple v. Sheldon, 63 Vt. 197, 21 Atl. 271. See also Sowles v. Witters, 55 Fed. 159, where it was held that the right of an attaching creditor to sell real estate after the five months specified by the Vermont statute had elapsed was not affected by an attachment sale under a void judgment rendered by defendant's consent for the purpose of avoiding his obligations).

Computation of time.— In computing time the first of the thirty days is the day after the last day of the term at which judgment is entered (Portland Bank v. Maine Bank, 11

4. EXTENT. As a general rule the lien only covers the property upon which levy was made,[53] but there is some conflict as to whether it is restricted to the amount set forth in the affidavit and writ, or whether it will also include costs recovered in the suits,[54] or a demand which is added by amendment subsequent Mass. 204) or after the rising of the court (Paul v. Burton, 32 Vt. 148, holding furthermore that a temporary adjournment was not a rising of the court); and the day upon which the execution issues is to be excluded (Allen v. Carty, 19 Vt. 65. But see Spencer v. Champion, 13 Conn. 11, looking contra). The time expires with the end of the thirty days, although the last day be Sunday (Alderman v. Phelps, 15 Mass. 225), and if judgment is rendered by consent as of a prior date the time is reckoned from such prior date (Davis v. Blunt, 6 Mass. 487, 4 Am. Dec. 168).

A stay of the issue of execution will continue an attachment lien beyond the period within which levy must usually be made. Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131; Rowan v. Union Arms Co., 36 Vt. 124.

The lien is lost by failure to levy on the attached property within the period which the statutes provide for the continuance of the lien (Leighton v. Reed, 28 Me. 87; Small v. Hutchins, 19 Me. 255; Aiken v. Medex, 15 Me. 157), even though the judgment is by default (Nihan v. Knight, 56 N. H. 167; Haynes v. Thom, 28 N. H. 386), unless the default was suffered by defendant without the knowledge of plaintiff (Rowe v. Page, 54 N. H. 190). Compare Hackett v. Pickering, 5 N. H. 19, where it was held that the attachment lien was not ipso facto dissolved by the lapse of thirty days after the end of the term when defendant was defaulted.

Preservation of lien.— It is not necessary that the officer complete the extent under the execution till after the thirty days have elapsed (Heywood v. Hildreth, 9 Mass. 393), and delivering the execution to the officer within the required period is sufficient to continue the lien (Dewey v. Fay, 34 Vt. 138; Bliss v. Stevens, 4 Vt. 88; Enos v. Brown, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 280), although the attachment was made by the sheriff's deputy (Ayer v. Jameson, 9 Vt. 363); but where an attachment was made by one officer, and the execution delivered to a different one, a demand must be made on the attaching officer within thirty days (Blodgett v. Adams, 24 Vt. 23), and a demand upon the receiptor for attached goods within the thirty days was held sufficient to preserve the lien, although the goods were not delivered till after the expiration of that time (Merrill v. Curtis, 18 Me. 272). But see Morse v. Knowlton, 5 Allen (Mass.) 41, where it was held that an attaching plaintiff in possession of the proceeds of the attached property lost the lien of his attachment by refusing, until after the lapse of thirty days, to deliver them to the officer who held the execution in the attachment suit, or to receipt to him for the property.

53. Goddard-Peck Grocery Co. v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co., 67 Ark. 359, 55 S. W. 136; May v. Buckhannon River Lumber Co., 70 Md. 448, 17 Atl. 274; Gillig v. George C. Treadwell Co., 11 Misc. (N. Y.) 237, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 974, 66 N. Y. St. 459; Learned v. Vandenburgh, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 77; Doersom v. Garber, 2 Del. Co. (Pa.) 267.

Illustrative cases.—Although in Arkansas all a debtor's property is bound from the time when the attachment writ issues, after the writ has been levied the lien only extends to the property taken under the levy (Goddard-Peck Grocery Co. v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co., 67 Ark. 359, 55 S. W. 136), in Tennessee the lien only extends to the property of defendant which is specifically mentioned in the writ of attachment (Lacy v. Moore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 348), and in South Carolina a creditor, after exhausting the property levied on in satisfying his claim, cannot even claim the right to share pro rata with other creditors in the distribution of unattached assets (Renneker v. Davis, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 289). So, where an attachment was instituted by serving the process on a railway company the lien did not extend to property beyond the county at the time of the service (Sutherland v. Peoria Second Nat. Bank, 78 Ky. 250), but where a levy was made on real estate and a sawmill situated thereon, the lien bound removable fixtures within the mill (Newhall v. Kinney, 56 Vt. 591).

Right to after-acquired property.— An attachment on shares of stock includes after-declared dividends (Jacobus v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 35 Fed. 395, construing Pennsylvania statute); but the attaching creditor acquires no interest in insurance subsequently placed on the property by the debtor (Donnell v. Donnell, 86 Me. 518, 30 Atl. 67).

54. Restrictions upon amount of lien.— It has been held that the lien of the attachment upon real estate is restricted to the amount claimed in the writ, because sound policy requires that the extent of the lien shall be known as soon as it exists, in order to preserve the rights of third parties and prevent unnecessary restrictions upon the sale of property. Hubbell v. Kingman, 52 Conn. 17. To same effect see Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392.

Lien includes costs.— On the other hand it has been held that the lien is commensurate with the judgment and costs (Searle v. Preston, 33 Me. 214), on the theory that the interest of the attaching creditor at the time of the levy was not merely a lien for the amount which would have discharged his claim, but was the right to have the property held aud appropriated to the satisfaction of the judgment thereafter obtained (Miller v. James, 86 Iowa 242, 53 N. W. 227, where personal property had been levied on). See also Gilbert v. Merrill, 8 Me. 295, where an equity of re-to the original writ.[55] It seems clear, however, that the attachment lien will bind the surplus proceeds arising from any sale of the attached property.[56]

5. INDESTRUCTIBILITY — a. Generally. The charge against attached property acquired by an attaching creditor, or lien of attachment as it is commonly called, cannot be destroyed or taken away by an intermediate act of the debtor himself[57] demption was attached and an intermediate purchaser attempted to redeem the land by tendering the amount claimed in the attachment, but the court held that the equity of redemption was indivisible and that the sheriff was entitled to have paid over to him the full amount realized by the sale on execution.

55. The amount actually due on plaintiff's demand at the time of the service of the attachment fixes a limit beyond which the lien of an attachment cannot extend. Syracuse City Bank v. Coville, 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385. So judgment by collusion between the debtor and the attaching creditor for a larger amount than the original claim would not affect injuriously the rights of intervening purchasers (Oconto Co. v. Esson, (Wis. 1901) 87 N. W. 855); and adding to the original demand and taking judgment for a larger sum than that claimed in the affidavit with knowledge of an intervening sale has been held to destroy the lien entirely (Tilton v. Cofield, 2 Colo. 392).

In the absence of intervening rights an addition to the amount for which the writ was originally sued out has been sustained. Glendale Fruit Co. v. Hirst, (Ariz. 1899) 59 Pac. 103. See also Suksdorff v. Bingham, 13 Oreg. 369, 12 Pac. 818, where it was held that the lien would extend to an increased amount over the original claim where the increase was necessitated by a merely clerical error.

56. Lien binds surplus proceeds arising from sale on the foreclosure of a mortgage (Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296, 30 Pac. 849; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Caldwell, 141 Mass. 489, 6 N. E. 737; Wiggin v. Heywood, 118 Mass. 514; Carty v. Fenstemaker, 14 Ohio St. 457; De Wolf v. Murphy, 11 R. I. 630; Dahoney v. Allison, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 112. Compare Rice v. O'Keefe, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 638); from a sale by agreement between the owner and the attaching creditor (Kendallville First Nat. Bank v. Stanley, 4 Ind. App. 213, 30 N. E. 799); from a sale under partition proceedings (Western Nat. Bank v. National Union Bank, 91 Md. 613, 46 Atl. 960); or under an order of the surrogate (Tallman v. Hollister, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 508). Compare a remark by Holmes, J., in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Caldwell, 141 Mass. 489, 492, 6 N. E. 737, that "it is true that, as the lien is gone at law by the sale of the res, the substituted claim upon the proceeds has the characteristic infirmities of merely equitable rights."

An attaching creditor has also been allowed to purchase a prior chattel mortgage, to foreclose it, and to apply any surplus to the satisfaction of the judgment in the attachment suit. Webster City Grocery Co. v. Losey, 108 Iowa 687, 78 N. W. 75. See also Thurman v. Blankenship, etc., Co., 79 Tex. 171, 15 S. W. 387, where it is held that when the attached property is sold by the sheriff the proceeds take the place of the property, and the property passes free from the lien which subsequently affects the proceeds only.

Ineffectual attempts by debtor to defeat lien.—It has been held that a debtor cannot defeat a valid lien against himself by claiming a homestead accruing subsequently to an attachment by reason of his marriage, or because of his residence on the attached land (Bullene v. Hiatt, 12 Kan. 98, 20 Kan. 557; Avery v. Stephens, 48 Mich. 246, 12 N. W. 211; Kelly v. Dill, 23 Minn. 435; Bradley v. Wacker, 13 Ohio Cir. Ct. 530; Baird v. Trice, 51 Tex. 555 [overruling Stone v. Darnell, 20 Tex. 11]; Broches v. Carroll, 2 Tex. Unrep. (La.) 395) or personal property which has been released on a receipt (Barnard v. Towne, 70 N. H. 154, 46 Atl. 687); or by selling the property (Clark v. Empire Lumber Co., 87 Ga. 742, 13 S. See also Hunt v. Mansfield, 31 Conn. 488, where it was held that the purchaser of a judgment in an attachment suit could enforce the lien of attachment against a purchaser of the attached property, although the latter paid a valuable consideration and bought without actual knowledge of the attachment.

A purchaser after levy is not a purchaser without notice, even though the land levied on stood in the name of defendant's wife.

by judicial proceedings to which the creditor is not a party,[58] except in the case Leathwhite v. Bennet, (N. J. 1887) 11 Atl. 29.

Agreements regarding exchange of attached property.—Where attaching plaintiff and his debtor agreed that attached property should be exchanged, and that the property received in exchange be held subject to the attachment, the agreement was sufficient to maintain the attachment lien, and the creditor was allowed to recover in an action of trover against a bailee of the substituted property who had wrongfully disposed of it. Paine v. Tilden, 20 Vt. 554. Under an agreement, whereby an attachment defendant agrees that a third person shall have the property attached on payment of the claims of the attaching creditor, the payment of such claim is a condition precedent to the passage of any title to such person as against a subsequently attaching creditor of the defendant. Tomlinson v. Collins, 20 Conn. 364.

Effect of general assignment.—In the absence of statutory provision a general assignment by defendant which includes the attached property will not defeat the lien of a previous attachment (Plume, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Caldwell, 136 Ill. 163, 26 N. E. 599, 29 Am. St. Rep. 305; Dietz v. Sutcliffe, 80 Ky. 650; Kentucky Exch. Bank v. Gillispie, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1317, 43 S. W. 401; Allen v. Wells, 22 Pick. (La.) 88; McKinney v. Baker, 9 Oreg. 74; Tichenor v. Coggins, 8 Oreg. 270), provided the assignment complied with all statutory requirements (O'Connell v. Hansen, 29 Oreg. 173, 44 Pac. 387), or that there are no preferences therein (Noyes v. Johnson, 13 R. See also Josephi v. Furnish, 27 Oreg. 260, 41 Pac. 424, where it was held that a purchaser of attached property who was seeking to replevy it from the sheriff could not set up a subsequent assignment to defeat the justification of the sheriff under the writ.

The appointment of a receiver to take charge of corporate assets does not destroy an attachment lien previously acquired on property of the corporation (Kittredge v. Osgood, 161 Mass. 384, 37 N. E. 369; Hubbard v. Hamilton Bank, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 340; Arnold v. Weimer, 40 Nebr. 216, 58 N. W. 709; Fenton v. Lumberman's Bank, Clarke (N. Y.) 286; Ford v. Lamson, 17 Ohio Cir. Suppl. 467; Hughes v. Dale, 16 Ohio Cir. Ct. 645). Compare New York Rubber Co. v. Gandy Belting Co., 11 Ohio Cir. Ct. 618, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 286. And see Ward v. Connecticut Pipe Mfg. Co., 71 Conn. 345, 41 Atl. 1057, 71 Am. St. Rep. 207, 42 L. R. A. 706, where it was held that the Connecticut statute providing that the appointment of a receiver for a corporation dissolves attachments made within sixty days did not apply to proceedings in other states.

The reference of a case to arbitration will not discharge the lien of an attachment (Seavey v. Beckler, 132 Mass. 203; Hill v. Hunnewell, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 192); but a general submission of all demands between plaintiff and defendant will release the attachment (Clark v. Foxcroft, 7 Me. 348; Mooney v. Kavanagh, 4 Me. 277; Hill v. Hunnewell, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 192). Compare Mosier v. McCan, 3 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 77.

A valid lien acquired by attachment is not affected by proceedings in foreign jurisdictions (Upton v. Hubbard, 28 Conn. 274, 73 Am. Dec. 670); by the claim of attachment defendant's widow that the property by statute is exempt for her (Blake v. Durrell, 103 Ky. 600, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 270, 45 S. W. 883; Brown v. Williams, 31 Me. 403); by a new county line which places part of the attached property beyond the county (Tyrell v. Rountree, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 464, 8 L. ed. 749 [affirming 1 McLean (U. S.) 95, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,313], construing Tennessee statute); by partition proceedings against the attached property (Adkins v. Beane, 42 Ill. App. 366; Argyle v. Dwinel, 29 Me. 29; Crosby v. Allyn, 5 Me. 453; Proctor v. Newhall, 17 Mass. 81); by qualification of trustees, subsequently to the attachment as required by the code, although the property was assigned prior to the attachment (White v. Pittsburgh Nat. Bank of Commerce, 80 Md. 1, 30 Atl. 567); by further unauthorized services of the same writ by the officer making the attachment (Twining v. Foot, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 512; Almy v. Wolcott, 13 Mass. 73); by failure of the sheriff to make a proper return of the writ (Ritter v. Scannell, 11 Cal. 238, 70 Am. Dec. 775; Cousins v. Alworth, 44 Minn. 505, 47 N. W. 169, 10 L. R. A. 504); by the entry and subsequent removal of a void judgment (Hodson v. Tibbetts, 16 Iowa 97; Edison Electric Light Co. v. American Electric Mfg. Co., 26 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 119), although a sale under a void judgment has been held to extinguish the lien (Palmer v. McMaster, 10 Mont. 390, 25 Pac. 1056); of bankruptcy and in some states of proceedings in insolvency,[59] or by legislative interference.[60]

b. Effect of Defendant's Death.[61] In some jurisdictions statutes regarding the disposition of decedents' estates provide that attachments levied before the death of defendant shall not affect the disposition of the estate,[62] but in the absence of statute there seems to be no reason why the attachment lien should not continue after the death of defendant[63] when the principal action survives;[64] and a fortiori this result should follow when judgment is obtained during the lifetime of attachment defendant.[65] or by irregularities in the proceedings prior to the issue of the attachment (Budd v. Long, 13 Fla. 288. See also Kirkman v. Patton, 19 Ala. 32, where it was held that an attachment lien could not be defeated merely by showing irregularities in the process, when defendant had not availed himself of such irregularities by properly pleading in abatement).

See also Bath v. Miller, 51 Me. 341, where it was held that a statute authorizing a city to take possession of property of a railroad company on its failure to pay coupons on scrip issued by the city did not entitled the city to vacate an attachment by thus taking possession.

A vested interest.— The lien of an attaching plaintiff is a vested right or interest of which he cannot be divested without his voluntary act or without having his day in court. McBride v. Harn, 48 Iowa 151. See also State v. Rose, 4 N. D. 319, 58 N. W. 514, 26 L. R. The death of the attaching creditor has been held to destroy the lien of the attachment. Matter of Vargas, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 154.

62. The death of defendant and insolvency of his estate will destroy an attachment lien provided the decree of insolvency is properly entered. Lamar v. Gunter, 39 Ala. 324; Hapgood v. Fisher, 30 Me. 502.

In Massachusetts, although formerly the death of defendant must be attended by the insolvency of his estate to dissolve an attachment (Bullard v. Dame, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 239), the statutes now provide that defendant's death of itself has that effect, provided administration of the estate be granted within a year thereafter (Kingsbury v. Baker, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 429), although it does not prevent the creditor from taking a judgment against the estate of the debtor in the hands of the administrator (Gass v. Smith, 6 Gray (Mass.) 112). The attachment lien is dissolved although the debtor has conveyed the property to another after the levy (Bullard v. Dame, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 239), has mortgaged it subsequently to the attachment (Parsons v. Merrill, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 356), or although insolvency proceedings were instituted during the lifetime of the debtor and the commissioner of insolvency was authorized to continue any attachment lien against his property (Day v. Lamb, 6 Gray (Mass.) 523).

c. Who May Release. The attaching plaintiff or his attorney[66] has the right to release an attachment lien on property[67] without an order of court,[68] and in the case of an attachment on real estate, they alone have the power to make a release;[69] but where chattels are seized by the attaching officer it seems that he has the power,[70] although not the right,[71] to release the attachment.

d. What Constitutes Waiver. Under some circumstances an attaching creditor will be deemed to have waived the lien of his attachment. Thus he may waive by delay, by conduct which indicates an abandonment of his rights,[72] by viving the judgment against the representative of the deceased attachment defendant. Cunningham v. Burk, 45 Ark. 267. Compare Lowenberg v. Tironi, 62 Miss. 19, where plaintiff obtained judgment on a plea in abatement after defendant's death and before the appointment of an administrator, and it was held that he should revive the suit by scire facias against the administrator in order to obtain a general personal judgment.

66. An attorney at law has authority to release an attachment of real or personal estate at any time before judgment in a suit which he is employed to prosecute. Benson v. Carr, 73 Me. 76. See, generally, Attorney and Client.

If plaintiff has not proceeded vexatiously he can abandon an attachment after having obtained a warrant of attachment and order for publication of the summons. Mojarietta v. Saenz, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 505.

Defendant's right to an order vacating an attachment is not defeated by the withdrawal of the attachment by plaintiff. Corn Exch. Bank v. Bossio, 8 N. Y. App. Div. 306, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 994, 75 N. Y. St. 388.

Where the rights of third persons depend on the continuance of an attachment suit under statutes providing for pro rata distribution among attaching creditors, an attachment cannot be released to the detriment of subsequently applying creditors. McLain v. Draper, 109 Ind. 556, 8 N. E. 910; People v. Judges Calhoun Cir. Ct., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 417; Duffin v. Wolf, 21 N. J. L. 475; Cummins v. Blair, 18 N. J. L. 151; Rice v. Baldwin, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,750*a*, 27 Int. Rev. Rec. 130, 11 Reporter 627 (construing Indiana statute). Compare Wells v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 6 Wash. 621, 34 Pac. 160, where a creditor was allowed to release his attachment, although claims had been filed in the suit by laborers under a provision of the statutes.

68. Smith v. Robinson, 64 Cal. 387, 1 Pac. 353.

Mode of release.— Destruction of papers by plaintiff is not a competent method of ending attachment proceedings after the writ has been levied, but the papers should be sent to court and there disposed of (Dean v. Massey, 7 Ala. 601); and the discontinuance of an attachment suit must be filed with the clerk of court in order to be valid (Smith v. Warden, 35 N. J. L. 346).

After trustees had been appointed under the New York statute relative to attachments, the court granted a supersedeas on showing a settlement between the attaching creditor and his debtor, but the trustees' rights were protected. Matter of Bunch, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

69. Barton v. Continental Oil Co., 5 Colo. App. 341, 38 Pac. 432; Braley v. French, 28 Vt. 546.

The reason why an officer has not the power to release the attachment on real estate is because his agency is terminated whenever the duties are performed for which the process was put into his hands. Braley v. French, 28 Vt. 546.

70. Barton v. Continental Oil Co., 5 Colo. App. 341, 38 Pac. 432; Braley v. French, 28 Vt. 546 (where the court states that the attaching officer has a special property in the chattels and therefore the power to release such special property).

Release by reason of officer's failure to retain custody of the attached property see infra, XIII, B, 1, a.

71. Gordon v. Wilkins, 20 Me. 134.

Right of officer to release.— Even though the writ did not specially direct the attachment of the chattels which were taken into custody, the officer cannot rightfully release such attachment after it has been completed (Turner v. Austin, 16 Mass. 181); but by previous authority, or by subsequent ratification, the officer making the levy may be constituted the agent of plaintiff to discharge the attachment (Smith v. Robinson, 64 Cal. 387, 1 Pac. 353; Owen v. Neveau, 128 Mass. 427). The latter may, however, countermand an authority to the officer to release an attachment. Hatch v. Jerrard, 69 Me. 355.

72. Barth v. Loeffelholtz, 108 Wis. 562, 84 N. W. 846.

Burden of proof.— The law does not presume or favor abandonments, and it is incumbent upon the party who asserts an abandonment of the attachment to establish the fact. Wright v. Westheimer, 2 Ida. 962, 28 Pac. 430, 35 Am. St. Rep. 269.

Dismissal of the original action in which an attachment was levied operates to release the attachment lien (Wills Point Bank v. Bates, 76 Tex. 329, 13 S. W. 309; Brandon Iron Co. v. Gleason, 24 Vt. 228); even though the suit is revived during the same term (Union Mfg. Co. v. Pitkin, 14 Conn. 174); and so does a settlement of the suit (Felker v. Emerson, 17 Vt. 101).

The creditor may lose his lien by failing to take any action for a year after the writ has been sued out (Upper Canada Bank v. Spafford, 3 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 78); by failing to prosecute his suit to judgment and execution with all due diligence (Van Loan v. Kline, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 129); by delaying several years without any sufficient cause for such delay (Petree v. Bell, 2 Bush (Ky.) 58); or by failing to enter the writ of attachment at the return-term thereof (Munroe v. St. Germain, 69 N. H. 200, 42 Atl. 900). Compare Nims v. Spurr, 138 Mass. 209, where it was held that the lien was not lost by the failure to return a special precept for attachment until after the return-day thereof.

No presumption of abandonment arises from the circumstance that the attaching creditor takes out a general execution on his judgment in the attachment suit (Liebman v. Ashbacker, 36 Ohio St. 94); by a delay of two years in securing judgment in the suit (Westervelt v. Hagge, 61 Nebr. 647, 85 N. W. 852); by a delay of nine months in levying an execution on the attached real estate (Lant v. Manley, 75 Fed. 627, 43 U. S. App. 623, 21 C. C. A. 457); by delaying eleven months before issuing an alias order of sale after the first order is returned without a sale (Davis v. John V. Farwell Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 49 S. W. 656); by the delay incident to reviving an attachment suit against a personal representative after the death of attachment defendant (Puckett v. Richardson, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 49); or by a stay of execution on attached real estate, although the contrary is true where personal property has been seized (Ensworth v. King, 50 Mo. 477). Compare Greene v. Tims, 16 Ala. 541, where it was held that the facts did not justify the assumption as a conclusion of law that the lien of the attachment was lost.

But a failure to give indemnity to the sheriff when he rightfully demands it operates as an abandonment of the attachment (Cudahy v. Rhinehart, 133 N. Y. 248, 30 N. E. 1004, 44 N. Y. St. 898 [affirming, on this point, 60 Hun (N. Y.) 414, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 514, 39 N. Y. St. 860, 21 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 52]), and allowing the sheriff to return "no property found" on an execution issued in the attachment suit has the same effect (Butler v. White, 25 Minn. 432. Compare Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Greenhood, 16 Mont. 395, 41 Pac. 250, 851, where the sheriff returned "no property found" on an execution issued in the attachment suit, but qualified his return by stating that the attached property was in the hands of an assignee who claimed to have a good title, and it was held that this return did not constitute an abandonment of the attachment lien).

The release of part of attached land will not postpone the attaching creditor to a mortgage made on the balance subsequently to the levy of the attachment, when he is ignorant of the mortgage. Johnson v. Bell, 58 N. H. 395.

Effect of abandonment.—Where attachment has been voluntarily abandoned, all effects of the lien are gone as completely as though the attachment had never been levied. French v. Stanley, 21 Me. 512; Smith v. Whitfield, 67 Tex. 124, 2 S. W. 822.

73. It constitutes an inconsistent claim to benefits for an attaching creditor to prove the claim sued on in the attachment suit in bankruptcy proceedings (Stark v. Curd, 88 Ky. 164, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 740, 10 S. W. 419; Bowley v. Bowley, 41 Me. 542) or against an assignee for the benefit of creditors (F. A. Drew Glass Co. v. Baldwin, 27 Mo. App. 44), but the right of other attaching creditors could not be affected by the action of one in filing his claim against an assignee (Neufelder v. German American Ins. Co., 6 Wash. 336, 33 Pac. 870, 36 Am. St. Rep. 166, 22 L. R. A. 287), accepting the position of assignee under a deed of trust (Ryhiner v. Ruegger, 19 Ill. App. 156), or giving assent to a deed of trust for the benefit of all creditors (Marr v. Washburn, etc., Mfg. Co., 167 Mass. 35, 44 N. E. 1062; Gathercole v. Bedel, 65 N. H. 211, 18 Atl. 319; Rahity v. Stringfellow, 72 N. C. 328). Compare Gathercole v. Bedel, 65 N. H. 211, 18 Atl. 319, where it was provided by statute that assent by an attaching creditor to a subsequent assignment dissolved the attachment.

Bidding at a sale under the mortgage in one state does not estop a creditor from insisting upon his attachment on the property in another state. Chapman v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 26 W. Va. 299.

74. What constitutes inconsistent proceedings.— Arresting the debtor is inconsistent with the continuation of the attachment, and therefore shows that it has been abandoned. Cox v. Watkins, 3 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 629, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,307, construing Maryland statute. For an attaching creditor to consent to a judgment in his own favor before the return-day of the process has the same effect (Gilbert v. Gilbert, 33 Mo. App. 259); but levying a second writ of attachment against the same property as a precautionary measure does not show an abandonment of the first levy (Wright v. Westheimer, 2 Ida. 962, 28 Pac. 430, 35 Am. St. Rep. 269). See also Beall v. Barclay, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 261, where it was held that a creditor who had obtained a lien on real estate by an attachment in chancery did not waive the same by levying an execution thereupon under a judgment which he had subsequently obtained in

B. Priorities — 1. In General — a. Rule Stated. The rights of a creditor to property attached must be determined by the state of the title at the time the attachment was made,[75] and in the absence of fraud and statutory regulations he only obtains the rights which the debtor had in the property at that time[76] for an action at law. Compare Watts v. Stevenson, 169 Mass. 61, 47 N. E. 447, where plaintiff was allowed to maintain an action on a bond given to avoid proposed attachment although attachment defendant had subsequently been arrested, and an action was also begun on a recognizance given to secure his release from arrest.

75. Richardson v. Bailey, 69 N. H. 384, 41 Atl. 263, 76 Am. St. Rep. 176.

After-acquired interest by a debtor in land will not inure to the benefit of an attaching creditor (Crocker v. Pierce, 31 Me. 177); but when an equity of redemption is attached, and the mortgage is subsequently paid off, the creditor can levy his execution in the attachment suit on the legal title as if no mortgage had existed (Whitcomb v. Simpson, 39 Me. 21. Compare Doton v. Russell, 17 Conn. 146, where an equity of redemption was attached, after the attachment the mortgage debt was paid and the legal title conveyed to a third person, and it was held that the attaching creditor only obtained a lien on the equity of redemption since the legal fee did not vest in the mortgagor subsequently to the attachment).

No estoppel arises against a creditor to assert his ownership to property, by reason of his levying an attachment thereupon (Lewis v. Morse, 20 Conn. 211), when he was unaware that the levy was made on goods in which he had an interest (Steele v. Putney, 15 Me. 327).

West Virginia.— Parkersburg First Nat. Bank v. Harkness, 42 W. Va. 156, 24 S. E. 548, 32 L. R. A. 408; Neill v. Rogers Bros. Produce Co., 41 W. Va. 37, 23 S. E. 702.

United States.— U. S. v. Canal Bank, 3 Story (U. S.) 79, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,715, 7 Law Rep. 88 (construing Maine statute); Merrill v. Rinker, Baldw. (U. S.) 528, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,471 (construing Pennsylvania statute and holding that doctrine of reputed ownership did not change general rule).

Equitable interests.— An attachment of property in an action against the legal owner does not affect the rights of the equitable owners of the property (De Celis v. Porter, 59 Cal. 464; Westervelt v. Hagge, 61 Nebr. 647, 85 N. W. 852, in which latter case the legal owner was a fraudulent transferee), or the right of a defrauded cestui que trust to reach property purchased with misapplied trust funds (McLaughlin v. Carter, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 694, 37 S. W. 66). See also Furman v. McMillian, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 121, where it was held that a joint purchaser of land who had paid more than his share of the purchase-the creditor is not in the position of a bona fide purchaser.[77] An attaching creditor does, however, succeed to all the incidental rights to which the debtor was entitled.[78]

b. Applications of Rule — (i) Liens. The rule which has just been stated that an attaching creditor acquires only the rights which the debtor himself had in the attached property applies with equal force where the debtor holds title to the property subject to a valid outstanding charge or lien;[79] and it is held to be immaterial whether this lien arises by agreement between the parties[80] or price was entitled to be fully reimbursed out of the proceeds of the sale of the land before an attaching creditor of his coöwner became entitled to any part of the proceeds.

An outstanding power of sale will not be defeated by an attachment of the property subject to the power in an action against the holder of the legal title. Braman v. Stiles, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 460, 13 Am. Dec. 445; Smyth v. Anderson, 31 Ohio St. 144.

The right of third persons to partition proceedings cannot be defeated by an attachment against the owner of an undivided interest in land (Argyle v. Dwinel, 29 Me. 29), even though it is necessary to sell the land and divide the proceeds (State v. Huxley, 4 Harr. (Del.) 343).

An attaching creditor must exercise a right to redeem property within the time limited for the debtor to redeem (Merrick v. Hutt, 15 Ark. 331), and he must remove fixtures before the time when the debtor's right to remove them has expired (Morey v. Hoyt, 62 Conn. 542, 26 Atl. 127, 19 L. R. A. 611).

An estoppel which is good against the debtor also binds the attaching creditor. Hoffman v. Wilhelm, 68 Iowa 510, 27 N. W. 483; Jamison v. Miller, 27 N. J. Eq. 586; Dupree v. Woodruff, (Tex. 1892) 19 S. W. 469.

A rescission of a contract to convey real estate which binds the vendee is also binding on his attaching creditor. Fleming v. Martin, 2 Head (Tenn.) 43. Compare Neil v. Tenney, 42 Me. 322.

Although a sovereign is usually entitled to priority over ordinary creditors he is not preferred to adverse claimants against the attached property because the sovereign must claim through the debtor, who has no special privilege entitling him to priority. U. S. v. Canal Bank, 3 Story (U. S.) 79, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,715, 7 Law Rep. 88.

77. Schweizer v. Tracy, 76 Ill. 345; Depeyster v. Gould, 3 N. J. Eq. 474, 29 Am. Dec. 723; Dixon v. Barnett, 3 Wash. 645, 29 Pac. 209.

The reason for this rule is that if the levy should fail of its purpose plaintiff would lose nothing and, having parted with no value, would be in no worse position than he was before. Perkins v. Adams, (Colo. App. 1901) 63 Pac. 792; Gates Iron Works v. Cohen, 7 Colo. App. 341, 43 Pac. 667.

78. The creditor is entitled to notice regarding partition proceedings against the attached property (Munroe v. Luke, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 39), or to redeem the property from a previous mortgage when the debtor had a right to do so (Lyon v. Sandford, 5 Conn. 544); and where an equity of redemption was attached a subsequent agreement to extend the time of performance of conditions in the bond for conveyance inured to the benefit of the attaching creditor of the obligee (Whitmore v. Woodward, 28 Me 392).

A personal privilege of a minor on coming of age to disaffirm a previous deed cannot be exercised by an attaching creditor. Kendall v. Lawrence, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 540. Compare Slocomb v. Arkansas Real Estate Bank, 2 Rob. (La.) 92, where it was held that a creditor who attached chattels subsequently to their sale could not avail himself of the debtor's privilege to rescind because the purchase-money was not paid.

Proof of attachment.— In a collateral proceeding a party cannot prove the existence of his attachment lien by means of a copy of the attachment on file in the office of the register of deeds, but must offer the original attachment in evidence. Stanhilber v. Graves, 97 Wis. 515, 73 N. W. 48.

79. Banks v. Rice, 8 Colo. App. 217, 45 Pac. 515; Adoue v. Jemison, 65 Tex. 680.

80. Metcalfe v. Fosdick, 23 Ohio St. 114.

Pledging property confers a valid lien which prevails over the claims of a subsequently attaching creditor of the pledgor (Tuttle v. Robinson, 78 Ill. 332; Skillman v. Bethany, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 104; Canfield v. McLaughlin, 9 Mart. (La.) 303; Coe v. Bicknell, 44 Me. 163; Danforth v. Denny, 25 N. H. 155; Fain v. Jones, 3 Head (Tenn.) 307), and the rights of bona fide pledgees of property are not impaired by an attachment of the property by a creditor of the pledgor (Petitt v. Memphis First Nat. Bank, 4 Bush (Ky.) 334; Parkersburg First Nat. Bank v. Harkness, 42 W. Va. 156, 24 S. E. 548, 32 L. R. A. 408).

Bailment.—As no lien is created by a simple bailment attaching creditors of the bailor may seize the property, although there was an agreement that the bailee should sell it (Rollins v. Watson, 8 La. Ann. 435); but a further agreement that the proceeds of the sale should be applied in satisfaction of the bailee's claim against the bailor would prevent a seizure by the bailor's creditors (Handley v. Pfister, 39 Cal. 283, 2 Am. Rep. 449), and when a bailee of goods has converted them to his own use, an attaching creditor of the bailor cannot seize the goods with which the bailee intended to replace, but has not yet replaced, the original bailed articles (Wood v. Fales, 24 Pa. St. 246, 64 Am. Dec. 655).

Creditors of the bailee cannot attach the bailed property, although the bailee has sold by operation of law,[81] or whether it arises by reason of a prior garnishment proceeding.[82]

(II) MORTGAGES. The charge of a prior mortgage will hold against a subsequent attachment,[83] even though the attachment be for the purchase-price of it to the bailor immediately before the bailment (Redwitz v. Waggaman, 33 La. Ann. 26), or although there was a stipulation that the property should become the property of the bailee at the end of the term of the bailment (Paris v. Vail, 18 Vt. 277). Compare Churchill v. Bailey, 13 Me. 64; and see also Reed v. McIlroy, 44 Ark. 346, where it was held that property in the possession of an agent who acted for an undisclosed principal could not be attached by his creditors, unless the conduct of the parties had misled creditors in giving the agent credit.

A contract for a future lien, although perfected after an attachment without notice, was held not to be prior to that attachment. Bailey v. Warner, 28 Vt. 87.

Validity of lien.— While the lienor must ordinarily retain possession of the property on which he has a lien (Reed v. Ash, 3 Nev. 116), it has been held that his possession is not necessary in the absence of fraud (Caldeway v. Bickel, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 925); but a valid lien may be waived by an inconsistent agreement of the lienor (Fortune v. Smith, 28 Fed. 353), or by the lienor's parting with possession of the property on which he has a lien by reason of a pledge (Whitaker v. Sumner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 399). Even against an invalid lien, however, the party attaching must show that he was a creditor, that his attachment was levied, and that it was sufficient in all respects. Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135. See also Harris v. Dennie, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 292, 7 L. ed. 683, where it was held that a lien on property for duties in favor of the United States could be enforced for duties due on goods previously imported, even though an attachment had been levied and the officer making the levy had offered to give security for payment of the duties on the attached merchandise.

An agreement for a secret trust to secure purchase-money advanced by a third person will not prevail against an attaching creditor of the purchaser, because to give validity to such an agreement would allow an evasion of the laws respecting pledges and mortgages. A mortgage to a trustee to secure the payment of a bona fide indebtedness will prevail over the claims of a subsequently attaching creditor. International Trust Co. v. Davis, etc., Mfg. Co., 70 N. H. 118, 46 Atl. 1054; Clay v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 421; Compton v. Seley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 1077. Compare Bowker Fertilizing Co. v. Spaulding, 93 Me. 96, 44 Atl. 371.

A mortgage executed subsequently to an attachment will prevail over a second attachment which is subsequently levied. Clark v. Austin, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 528. Compare Frankle v. Douglas, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 476.

Where an attachment is levied on property subject to a mortgage a failure to make a deposit to secure the first mortgage as required by statute will not postpone the attachment to a subsequent mortgage. Geiershofer v. Nupuf, 106 Iowa 374, 76 N. W. 745; Haydock v. Patton, 92 Iowa 247, 60 N. W. 533.

Where a mortgagee of personal property purchased a claim secured by an attachment lien on the same property it was held that he acquired an equitable lien as against attachments subsequently levied, although the statutory lien of the prior attachment was technically extinguished by the enforcement of his mortgage. Armstrong v. McAlpin, 18 Ohio St. 184.

the goods so mortgaged and attached;[84] but the mortgage must be a valid instrument or the attachment will prevail.[85]

(III) Property Obtained by Fraud. Where property has been purchased on fraudulent representations, a creditor of the purchaser attaching it acquires only the rights which the purchaser himself has, and the defrauded vendor can enforce his right to have the sale set aside against the attaching creditor as well as he could have enforced it against the fraudulent vendee.[86]

c. Common-Law Exception. The only exception, independent of statute, to this limitation upon the right acquired by an attaching creditor exists in the case where the adverse claimant participates in a fraudulent purpose of the debtor;[87]

Waiver of mortgage by attaching mortgaged property.— By attaching property subject to his mortgage for a claim other than that secured by the mortgage a creditor waives his rights under the mortgage (Haynes v. Sanborn, 45 N. H. 429; Dix v. Smith, 9 Okla. 124, 60 Pac. 303, 50 L. R. A. 714. Compare Ellinwood v. Holt, 60 N. H. 57), so that he is no longer obliged to account to the mortgagor for its value (Libby v. Cushman, 29 Me. 429); but the mortgagee is not estopped from claiming under his mortgage if he had no notice that the property attached was included within the mortgage (Howe v. Wadsworth, 59 N. H. 397), and it has been held that an attaching creditor may lawfully purchase an outstanding mortgage to protect his attachment lien (Lacy v. Gentry, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 949).

Validity of mortgage.— A mortgage is valid, although given to secure the liability of the mortgagee as an indorser on a note of the mortgagor (Rogers v. Abbott, 128 Mass. 102), or although the property was held by a United States marshal for a supposed breach of navigation law at the time when the mortgage was executed (Mitchell v. Cunningham, 29 Me. 376); but an acceptance of a mortgage by a mortgagee because it is beneficial to him cannot be presumed to defeat an attachment levied before an actual ratification (Kuh v. Garvin, 125 Mo. 547, 28 S. W. 847). See also Union Nat. Bank v. Barker, 145 Mo. 356, 46 S. W. 1096, where the attaching creditor was unsucessful in his attempt to prove a prior mortgage invalid.

In New Hampshire a statute authorizing an attaching creditor of mortgaged real estate to demand an account on oath of the mortgagee has the effect of postponing the mortgage when the mortgagee does not render a true account; but the postponement only operates in favor of those creditors who demanded the account. Where the alleged fraud is not made out by sufficient evidence an alleged fraudulent mortgagee will prevail over the claims of an attaching creditor of the mortgagor. Mize v. Turner, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 67, 22 S. W. 83; Dunham v. Stevens, 160 Mo. 95, 60 S. W. 1064. Where all the requisites for creating a valid mortgage have been complied with it devolves upon the attaching creditor to show that the debt secured by the mortgage was not actual and honest (Hasie v. Connor, 53 Kan. 713, 37 Pac. 128), and an attaching creditor's belief that a mortgage is being withheld from record to delay and defraud creditors will not give him priority over the mortgagee (Allen v. McCalla, 25 Iowa 464, 96 Am. Dec. 56). See also Walker v. Collins, 50 Fed. 737, 4 U. S. App. 406, 1 C. C. A. 642, where a defrauded vendor of goods sued for the contract price and attached the goods after they had passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser, and it was held that by suing for the price he affirmed the fraudulent contract, and therefore the purchaser acquired a good title. But see supra, V, G, 1, note 87.

but the creditor may invoke the aid of the rule that a sale of personal property without change of possession is fraudulent and void as to third persons.[88]

Estoppel to set up fraud.— A creditor cannot affirm a sale by garnishing the proceeds and then declare the sale fraudulent and proceed to attach the property sold. Carter v. Smith, 23 Wis. 497. Compare Whitehill v. Basnett, 24 W. Va. 142, where an attaching creditor made an ineffectual attempt to have a vendor's lien on real estate declared fraudulent, although his right to attach was dependent on the fact that the deed reserving the lien passed a valid title.

88. Where no change of possession follows a sale of personalty an attaching creditor of the vendor will prevail over the claims of the vendee.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 570; and, generally, SALES.

The reason of the rule is that, as against a person who was once the owner of the property and all who claim by purchase from him, the continued possession is to be regarded as a sure indicium of continued ownership, and that the possessor would obtain by such continued possession a false credit to the injury of third persons if there was no such rule to protect them. Capron v. Porter, 43 Conn. 383. Compare Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73.

A fortiori a mere contract for sale without transfer of possession would not postpone an attaching creditor of the vendor to the person contemplating the purchase. Smart v. Batchelder, 57 N. H. 140; Taacks v. Schmidt, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 307. And in McCutchin v. Platt, 22 Wis. 561, an attaching creditor prevailed over a purchaser who was ignorant of the sale and who had not yet received a bill of sale which had been mailed to him. Compare Hinckley v. Bridgham, 46 Me. 450.

Conflict of laws.—Where a contract of sale is invalid by the laws of the state where it is made an attaching creditor of the vendor will prevail over the rights of the vendee, although the contract was valid in the jurisdiction where the attachment was made. Bond v. Cummings, 70 Me. 125.

An attaching plaintiff must show that defendant is actually indebted to him before he has any standing to object to a sale as fraudulent. Freiburg v. Foreman, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 473.

Necessity of actual fraud.— In some jurisdictions retention of possession of a chattel by the vendor is only prima facie evidence, and good faith may be shown by the purchaser (Poling v. Flanagan, 41 W. Va. 191, 23 S. E. 685); but it has been held to be very strong if not conclusive evidence of a mere colorable sale (Lucas v. Birdsey, 41 Conn. 357; Blakeslee v. Hatstat, 41 Conn. 301). Compare Gibson v. Stevens, 8 How. (U. S.) 384, 12 L. ed. 1123; and in Bradford v. McLellan, 23 Me. 302, the burden of proof was held to be on the officer who failed to attach property in the possession of the debtor to show that it did not belong to him. See also Smith v. Foster, 18 Vt. 182 (where it was held that on the facts of the case actual fraud must be shown to defeat the purchasers' claims); Page v. Carpenter, 10 N. H. 77 (where it was suggested that an excuse for failure to transfer possession might be shown).

Recording and notice.— When the rights of the attaching creditor depend upon fraud in the sale he is not affected by the fact that the transfer is recorded (Cohen v. Schneider, 70 Conn. 505, 40 Atl. 455), or that he has actual notice of the sale (Perrin v. Reed, 35 Vt. 2; Hart v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 33 Vt. 252); and so a failure to record will not put the purchaser in a worse position (Clark v. Ward, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 440). But see Dixon v. Barnett, 3 Wash. 645, 29 Pac. 209, where it was held that recording a bill of sale was sufficient notice to creditors of the vendor, although he retained possession of the property.

Mortgaged personal property in the mortgagor's possession, after the maturity of the mortgage debt, may be levied on under a writ of attachment, and the lien thus acquired is prior to the claims of the mortgagee. Hewitt v. General Electric Co., 164 Ill. 420, 45 N. E. 725 [reversing 61 Ill. App. 168].

The doctrine has been applied in the case of the sale of chattels situated on leased premises (Carter v. Willard, 19 Pick.

d. Statutory Exceptions From Requirements For Recording Transfers — (I) Personal Property. Where statutes regarding chattel mortgages or conditional sales [89] require that such mortgages or sales must be recorded to be valid against creditors and purchasers for value, in default of such record an attaching creditor of such mortgagor or vendor will acquire a greater right than his debtor had in the property mortgaged or conditionally sold;[90] and it has been held that the knowledge of the attaching creditor regarding the unrecorded mortgage is immaterial.[91]

(Mass.) 1; Flanagan v. Wood, 33 Vt. 332) and in the case of chattels pledged without transfer of possession (Houston v. Howard, 39 Vt. 54); and a delegation of the proceeds of sales of property for the discharge of the debt cannot place the delegated creditor in a better position than would an actual sale (Wilson v. Smith, 12 La. 375); but where two persons jointly owning personal property retained possession of it after a sale, a creditor of one of the joint owners could not by attachment acquire any right in the interest of the coöwner (Partridge v. Wooding, 44 Conn. 277). See also Lucas v. Birdsey, 41 Conn. 357, where the vendor who retained possession was authorized to exchange the property, and it was held that his creditor who attached the property received in exchange could not hold it against the purchaser.

89. In the absence of statute an attaching creditor of a conditional vendee will generally be postponed to the rights of the vendor.

See, generally, Sales.

In Vermont an attaching creditor was given the right by statute to perform the condition of a conditional sale, and thereby acquire a right to hold the property against the vendor (Duncan v. Stone, 45 Vt. 118; Fales v. Roberts, 38 Vt. 503; Armington v. Houston, 38 Vt. 448, 91 Am. Dec. 366), provided part of the purchase-money had already been paid by the conditional vendee (Rowan v. State Bank, 45 Vt. 160); but this act has been superseded by one which requires a conditional sale to be recorded in order to be valid against an attaching creditor (Whitcomb v. Woodworth, 54 Vt. 544).

What not a conditional sale.—Where machinery was delivered to a manufacturing concern, and affixed to the realty under an agreement that if it was satisfactory the company should pay a certain price and acquire title to it, it was held that this was not a conditional sale, and recording was not necessary to protect the property against attaching creditors of the company. Gates Iron Works v. Cohen, 7 Colo. App. 341, 43 Pac. 667. Where a vendee has obtained credit by showing a bill of sale which is absolute on its face, the vendor cannot prove by parol testimony that the sale was only conditional. Sanborn v. Chittenden, 27 Vt. 171. Compare Hunt v. Douglass, 22 Vt. 128.

After a complete rescission of a conditional sale an attachment against the purchaser was not effective against the debtor of the seller. Steen v. Harris, 81 Ga. 681, 8 S. E. 206.

App. 668, where it was held that a mortgagee was entitled to a reasonable time in which to have a chattel mortgage recorded, and that if he did have it recorded within a reasonable time the mortgage would prevail over an attachment levied subsequently to the execution, but before the record, of the mortgage.

Nebraska.— New Home Sewing Mach. Co. v. Beals, 44 Nebr. 816, 62 N. W. 1092; Peterson v. Tufts, 34 Nebr. 8, 51 N. W. 297.

The reason why the rule that an attachment lien is only effective against the debtor's interest does not postpone the creditor is that the law regards the mortgagor as the absolute owner in so far as the creditor is concerned. McFadden v. Blocker, 2 Indian Terr. 260, 48 S. W. 1043.

(II) Real Estate—(A) In General. The phraseology of some statutes regarding the registration of titles to real estate places an attaching creditor on a par with a purchaser, and in those states a creditor levying his attachment without notice of a prior unrecorded deed is entitled to priority over the grantee under the unrecorded deed;[92] but unless aided by statute the general

Evans-Snyder-Buel Co., 9 Okla. 353, 60 Pac. 249; Baxter v. Smith, 2 Wash. Terr. 97, 4 Pac. 35. But see Kern v. Wilson, 82 Iowa 407, 48 N. W. 919, where it was held that an attaching creditor with actual notice of a prior chattel mortgage was bound thereby, although the mortgage had been wrongfully indexed. See, generally, CHATTEL MORTGAGES.

Sufficiency of notice.—It has been held that actual notice to the sheriff levying on property conditionally sold is not sufficient, but that notice must be given to the attaching creditor himself (Thomas v. Richards, 69 Wis. 671, 35 N. W. 42); and that an officer's right to make an attachment is not defeated by his finding the property in the possession of a third person, where it does not appear that he would have learned by inquiry that the property was in the hands of such person under a conditional sale (Whitcomb v. Woodworth, 54 Vt. 544).

Protection of mortgagee's interest.—A mortgagee's interest in chattels will be protected, if the mortgage is filed for record, before the levy of an attachment (Corning v. Rinehart Medicine Co., 46 Mo. App. 16; Moore v. Masterson, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 308, 46 S. W. 855); and the same is true where the mortgage is admittedly postponed to one attachment, and the contest is between the mortgagee and a second attaching creditor (Hurt v. Redd, 64 Ala. 85), or if there is no fraud, and he takes possession before a levy is made (Prouty v. Barlow, 74 Minn. 130, 76 N. W. 946; Petring v. Chrisler, 90 Mo. 649, 3 S. W. 405; Greeley v. Reading, 74 Mo. 309); and where property was already in possession of a receiptor under a prior attachment it was a sufficient taking possession by the mortgagee as against a subsequent attachment for the receiptor to agree to hold the goods as servant of the mortgagee (Wheeler v. Nichols, 32 Me. 233). Sufficient change of possession of the mortgaged property to protect the mortgagee's rights was not made out in Moresi v. Swift, 15 Nev. 215. See also Corbett v. Littlefield, 84 Mich. 30, 47 N. W. 581, 22 Am. St. Rep. 681, where it was held that registration of a chattel mortgage in Nebraska would not protect the mortgagee against an attachment in Michigan, the property having been removed there without his knowledge or consent.

It is a sufficient recording to deposit a deed with the town-clerk with instructions to record it (Bigelow v. Topliff, 25 Vt. 273, 60 Am. Dec. 264), although the register makes an error in description in transcribing the deed on the records (Durgin v. Mitchell, 50 N. H. 586 note).

Presumptions as to time.— A deed recorded about four-thirty in the afternoon will not be presumed to have been executed prior to an attachment levied at ten in the morning of the same day (Bissell v. Nooney, 33 Conn. 411); and where a deed of land was acknowledged before a register of deeds and an attachment levied on the land at the same time the deed was handed to the register the attachment had priority because the deed could not be recorded before a certificate of acknowledgment had been written (Sigourney v. Larned, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 72). See also Taylor v. Emery, 16 N. H. 359, where it was held that an attachment would not be presumed to have been made before five o'clock P. M. as against a deed recorded at that hour on the same day.

Necessity for record title to be in debtor.— The actual interest of a debtor in property may be reached by attachment without regard to the state of the record title (Davenport v. Lacon, 17 Conn. 278; Ealer v. Freret, 11 La. Ann. 455); but where the registry shows no title in debtor the creditor cannot claim the benefits of a fiction to get more than his debtor really owned (Cowley v. McLaughlin, 141 Mass. 181, 4 N. E. 821; Haynes v. Jones, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 292; Hovey v. Blanchard, 13 N. H. 145; Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Lewis, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 509, 28 S. W. 101). See also Slocum v. Catlin, 22 Vt. 137, where the purchaser of the equity of redemption who had paid the mortgage debt, but who had neglected to cause his deed from the mortgagor to be recorded until after a creditor of the mortgagor had attached the equity of redemption, was held to have an equitable lien upon the premises for the amount of the mortgage.

The rule regarding the postponement of unrecorded instruments has been applied in the case of unrecorded leases (Flower v. Pearce, 45 La. Ann. 853, 13 So. 150; Dickey v. Henarie, 15 Oreg. 351, 15 Pac. 464); of unregistered partition proceedings (McMechan v. Griffing, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 537); of an outstanding unrecorded equity (Morrell v. Cawood, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 176; Houston v. McCluney, 8 W. Va. 135); and in the case of unregistered title bonds (Catlin v. Bennatt, 47 Tex. 165). See also Perkins v. Adams, (Colo. App. 1901) 63 Pac. 792, where it was held that an attachment against an executor of property which stood in his name, but which in fact belonged to his decedent, was valid against the claims of the estate, as the attaching creditors would be presumed to know that the executor in his individual capacity had a right to purchase the property.

Necessity for recording before judgment.— The conveyance must be recorded before the attached property is sold on execution (Sappington v. Oeschli, 49 Mo. 244; Reed v. Ownby, 44 Mo. 204; Harral v. Gray, 10 Nebr. 186, 4 N. W. 1040), and if the deed has not been recorded a purchaser in good faith at the execution sale acquires a valid title (Columbia Bank v. Jacobs, 10 Mich. 349, 81 Am. Dec. 792; Chandler v. Bailey, 89 Mo. 641, 1 S. W. 745; Adams v. Buchanan, 49 Mo. 64).

94. What constitutes sufficient notice.— An attaching creditor is chargeable with notice in the same manner as a subsequent purchaser (McLaughlin v. Shepherd, 32 Me. 143, 52 Am. Dec. 646; Matthews v. Demerritt, 22 Me. 312); and although attornment by a tenant in possession to the grantee is not sufficient (Wahrenberger v. Waid, 8 Colo. App. 200, 45 Pac. 518; Veazie v. Parker, 23 Me. 170), an open and notorious possession of land by the grantee is constructive notice of his title (U. S. v. Howgate, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 408; Kent v. Plummer, 7 Me. 464; Davis v. Blunt, 6 Mass. 487, 4 Am. Dec. 168; Farnsworth v. Childs, 4 Mass. 637, 3 Am. Dec. 249; Anonymous, Quincy (Mass.) 370; Galley v. Ward, 60 N. No. 17,373), even, it was held, though the possessor denied that he had title thereto (Hackett v. Callender, 32 Vt. 97). Compare Wooldridge v. Mississippi Valley Bank, 36 Fed. 97, where an absolute deed was in fact a mortgage, and the possession of the premises by the grantor was held insufficient to give attaching creditors of the grantee notice of the real nature of the instrument. It is not notice of an unrecorded deed, however, that a subsequent deed of the same premises by the grantee (Roberts v. Bourne, 23 Me. 165, 39 Am. Dec. 614), a subsequent mortgage (Veazie v. Parker, 23 Me. 170), or an unacknowledged deed (Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423) has been recorded; or that a declaration of trust is filed by a cestui que trust when such a declaration is not a recordable instrument (Clark v. Watson, 141 Mass. 248, 5 N. E. 298); and proof of knowledge of an intended conveyance does not show knowledge of an actual passing of the title (Cushing v. Hurd, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 253, 16 Am. Dec. 335). See also Richardson v. Smith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 134, where the attaching creditor had heard that all his debtor's property had been conveyed for the purpose of paying his debts, and although the alleged grantee did not deny the conveyance it was held that the creditor did not have knowledge thereof as he had searched the records and found no conveyance.

Putting creditor on inquiry.— It has been held enough to show facts sufficient to put the attaching creditor on an inquiry (German Sav. Bank v. Armour Packing Co., (Iowa 1898) 75 N. W. 503; McLaughlin v. Shepherd, 32 Me. 143, 52 Am. Dec. 646; Riddle v. Miller, 19 Oreg. 468, 23 Pac. 807), for he will be affected with notice of everything of which he had the means of obtaining knowledge (McDaniels v. Flower Brook Mfg. Co., 22 Vt. 274); but in other jurisdictions proof of facts sufficient to put a party on inquiry, or to amount to an implied or constructive notice is not sufficient (Parker v. Osgood, 3 Allen (Mass.) 487), for the attaching creditor must be shown to have had actual notice (Sibley v. Leffingwell, 8 Allen (Mass.) 584). Where a tract of land was subject to a mortgage, and a portion of it was conveyed by a recorded deed which recited that the grantee took the title subject to the mortgages, this was notice to the grantee's creditors of an agreement on his part to pay the mortgage debt. Iowa L. & T. Co. v. Mowery, 67 Iowa 113, 24 N. W. 747. In Clark v. Jenkins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 280, a warranty deed from the mortgagor to the mortgagee was recorded, and it was held to be for the jury to determine whether such deed was notice to an attaching creditor of the unrecorded mortgage.

Knowledge of agent.— An attaching creditor is affected by the knowledge of the officer employed to make the attachment (Tucker v. Tilton, 55 N. H. 223. Contra, Stanley v. Perley, 5 Me. 369); but not by the knowledge of an attorney employed merely to draw the writ (Tucker v. Tilton, 55 N. H. 223).

Knowledge of debtor.— Where title of record is in the debtor, an attaching creditor may prevail, although the debtor had knowledge of an unrecorded deed from his grantor which was prior to the one from which the debtor derived his title. Coffin v. Ray, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 212.

95. Subsequent notice of an unrecorded deed between the time of the attachment and the levy of execution will not defeat an attaching creditor's priority. Emerson v. Littlefield, 12 Me. 148; Kent v. Plummer, 7 Me. 464; Stanley v. Perley, 5 Me. 369; Coffin v. Ray, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 212; Stowe v. Meserve, 13 N. always postpone his rights to those of the grantee under the unrecorded deed.[96]

2. BETWEEN SUCCESSIVE ATTACHMENTS — a. Generally. Priority of personal service on defendant.— An attachment subsequently levied has been held to take priority because service was first obtained on defendant. Carney v. Taylor, 4 Kan. 178.

The rule is not affected by the circumstance that a subsequently attaching creditor shows superior diligence in getting a fraudulent conveyance of the property set aside (Patrick v. Montader, 13 Cal. 434; Levy v. Marx, (Miss. 1895) 18 So. 575; State v. Hickman, 150 Mo. 626, 51 S. Hotaling Co., 15 Oreg. 371, 15 Pac. 630); that one of the attaching creditors is a non-resident (Barnett v. Kinney, 2 Ida. 706, 23 Pac. 922, 24 Pac. 624), even though the non-resident begins his suit in a federal court (Bates v. Days, 5 McCrary (U. St. Rep. 299; Fox v. Arkansas Industrial Co., 52 Ark. 450, 12 S. W. 875; Straus v. Rothan, 102 Mo. 261, 14 S. W. 940 [affirming 41 Mo. App. 602, and suit;[99] but the first attaching creditor is held to strict compliance with overruling Boyd v. J. M. Ward Furniture, etc., Co., 38 Mo. App. 210; Bolckow Milling Co. v. Turner, 23 Mo. App. 103]); that the property is a fund in the hands of the attaching creditor which belongs to attachment defendant (Arledge v. White, 1 Head (Tenn.) 241); or that the earlier attaching creditor secured his priority by falsely telling his competitor that the earlier attachment had already been levied (Bardwell v. Perry, 19 Vt. 292, 47 Am. Dec. 687), by falsely telling his competitor that the debtor is solvent, and that he does not intend to press his claim against him (Glaser v. Ft. Smith First Nat. Bank, 62 Ark. 171, 34 S. W. 1061, 35 L. R. A. 765), or by concealing the debtor's property until he could perfect his process and levy under it (Dooley v. Hadden, 179 U. S. 646, 21 S. Ct. 259, 45 L. ed. 357 [reversing 92 Fed. 274, 63 U. S. App. 173, 34 C. C. A. 338, 93 Fed. 728, 35 C. C. A. 554], construing New York statute). But see Bull v. Loveland, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 9, where it was held that after a creditor had agreed to place his demand in the hands of assignee he must notify other creditors of his intention to attach before he could secure priority by levying an attachment.

An attachment under the log lien act takes precedence over a general attachment which is prior in time. Halpin v. Hall, 42 Wis. 176.

A distress for rent takes priority over an attachment served simultaneously with it, even though the court had erroneously taken jurisdiction over the distress (Canterberry v. Jordan, 27 Miss. 96), because the right of a landlord to distrain for rent is not affected by attachment proceedings (Acker v. Witherell, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 112); but an attachment on property off the rented premises is preferred to a distress for rent, because distress can only be had against property situated on the premises (Mosby v. Leeds, 3 Call (Va.) 439).

Simultaneous attachments.— Attachments made at the same instant stand upon an equal footing and the attaching creditors share equally in the proceeds arising from the sale of the attached property (Lee v. Hinman, 6 Conn. 165; Fairfield v. Paine, 23 Me. 498, 41 Am. Dec. 357; Durant v. Johnson, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 544; Thurston v. Huntington, 17 N. H. 438; Stone v. Abbott, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 319; Wilson v. Blake, 53 Vt. 305); but when the claim of one creditor can be satisfied with less than half the proceeds the remainder goes to satisfy the other attachment (Blaisdell v. Pray, 68 Me. 269; Sigourney v. Eaton, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 414, 25 Am. Dec. 414). See also Thurston v. Huntington, 17 N. H. 438, where it was held that the simultaneously attaching creditors shared equally in the proceeds, although one of the officers making the levy had levied several writs and returned them in a particular order and subject to each other. Attachments have been held to be simultaneous when one officer attached one minute after a certain hour, and the other attached "immediately" after the same hour (Shove v. Dow, 13 Mass. 529); and where two creditors executed bonds of indemnity on the same day and one obtained the first order from the chancellor, but the other had ten minutes priority in having his process served (Dyer v. Mears, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 528).

Attachments on the same day.—Although as a general rule the hour of the day at which an attachment is levied is considered in determining its claim to priority (Brainard v. Bushnell, 11 Conn. 16; Gomila v. Milliken, 41 La. Ann. 116, 5 So. 548; Fairfield v. Paine, 23 Me. 498, 41 Am. Dec. 357; Western Nat. Bank v. National Union Bank, 91 Md. 613, 46 Atl. 960; Ginsberg v. Pohl, 35 Md. 505), it has been held that there is no priority between attachments levied on the same day (Yelverton v. Burton, 26 Pa. St. 351; Long's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 297), either by an express provision of statute (Steffens v. Wanbocker, 17 S. C. 475), or on the theory that the law disregarded fractions of a day (Stone v. Abbott, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 319). But see Davis v. Chadwick, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 540, where it was held that a sheriff must return goods taken on an attachment writ to a constable who had levied another writ on the same goods earlier in the day.

Directions not to levy.— A creditor is postponed to a subsequent attachment when he directs the officer receiving the writ not to levy it (Moore v. Fitz, 15 Ind. 43); or not to levy it unless another attachment issues (Florsheim Dry Goods Co. v. George Taylor Commission Co., 59 Ark. 307, 27 S. W. 79). See also Remington v. Weber, 11 Utah 181, 39 Pac. 822, where it was held that a subsequent attachment would prevail against a prior one when the first was not accompanied with instructions as to service, and did not specify debtors of the attachment defendant on whom the writ should be served.

Marshaling.—Where the first attachment is levied on two stocks of goods and a second is levied on but one of them, the second attaching creditor may require the first to exhaust the other stock before resorting to that upon which the second levy was made. This rule was enforced although a third attaching creditor had levied on the stock which was not covered by the second attachment. Heye v. Moody, 67 Tex. 615, 4 S. W. 242. Compare Silvers v. Edwards, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 945, 7 S. W. 619, where the principle of marshaling was applied when the claim against one parcel of the attached land was made by a third person other than a subsequently attaching creditor.

the law, and must take all the steps necessary to subject the attached property to sale under execution in satisfaction of his claim.[1]

b. How Time Is Reckoned. In conformity with the rule that the lien of attachment dates from the levy[2] the prevailing doctrine makes the moment of levy the material point of time in determining which of two or more attachments is senior to the others.[3] When successive writs are delivered to the same officer for service, statutes directing the levy of writs in the order in which the officer

A sale under a junior attachment will not affect the rights of the senior attaching creditor (Beck v. Brady, 7 La. Ann. 1; De Wolf v. Murphy, 11 R. I. 630; Caperton v. McCorkle, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 177); but the junior attaching creditor must protect himself by asserting his claim to the surplus at the sale under the first attachment (De Wolf v. Murphy, 11 R. I. 630), unless the prior attaching creditors join in the motion and the order of sale recognizes the prior attachment (McConnell v. Kaufman, 5 Wash. 686, 32 Pac. 782). In Barnard v. Fisher, 7 Mass. 71, it was held that the second attaching creditor should delay his proceedings in court until the suit in which the prior attachment had been made was concluded. See also Riordan v. Britton, 69 Tex. 198, 7 S. W. 50, 5 Am. St. Rep. 37, where it was held that the purchaser under a junior attachment was not a bona fide purchaser against one claiming under the prior attachment.

A prior attachment was postponed when the first creditor abandoned his attachment and accepted a deed of the attached property from defendant which was not delivered till after judgment on the second attachment suit. Cook v. Love, 33 Tex. 487. See also Hayford v. Rust, 81 Me. 97, 16 Atl. 372, where it was held that a failure to record an officer's deed given on the sale under a prior attachment judgment postponed the first attaching creditor to a subsequent attachment.

No postponement of a prior attachment was caused by a release of a portion of the attached property (Doggett, etc., Co. v. Wimer, 54 Mo. App. 125); by giving a check in payment of the attaching creditor's claim when the check is returned to the drawer on the former's learning of a subsequent attachment against the same property (Barton v. Hunter, 59 Mo. App. 610); by an agreement for a sale of the attached property, and payment of the proceeds to a clerk of court to hold subject to the rights of the parties (Cressy v. Katz-Nevens-Rees Mfg. Co., 91 Iowa 444, 59 N. W. 63); or by a fraudulent agreement by the prior attaching creditor not to bid at a sale of the attached real estate, since real estate was not sold at auction by the sheriff, but a portion was set off to the creditor (Spencer v. Champion, 13 Conn. 11).

The usual practice in equity is to allow attachment claims in the order in which they are levied. Ohio Brass Co. v. Clark, 86 Md. 344, 37 Atl. 899.

When the first attachment has been set aside the priority of junior attaching creditors is not governed by the date of the filing of their bills, but by the time when their re-receives them coupled with a presumption of performance of official duty has led some courts to look to the time when the writ was placed in the officer's hands rather than to the time of levy.[4]

e. Pro Rata Sharing. Statutes providing for pro rata distribution among attaching creditors are of extremely rare occurrence,[5] but where there is express spective attachments were levied. Bamberger v. Voorhees, 99 Ala. 292, 13 So. 305.

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 538.

Delivery of writ to deputy sheriff.— It has been held that delivery of successive attachment writs to deputy sheriffs is the same as delivering them to the sheriff himself (State v. Harrington, 28 Mo. App. 287); but a writ first served by a deputy has been given priority over one previously placed in the hands of the sheriff (E. C. Meacham Arms Co. v. Strong, 3 Wash. Terr. 61, 13 Pac. 245).

Delivery of a copy of a writ of attachment to the sheriff is not equivalent to a delivery to him of the writ itself even though the original was retained by the judge. Niagara Grape Market Co. v. Wygant, 1 N. Y. App. Div. 588, 37 N. Y. Suppl. 486, 73 N. Y. St. 110.

Establishing priority.— An officer's return is evidence of the order in which he received and served writs (Thurston v. Huntington, 17 N. H. 438); and statements in the return are binding upon the officer and his privies (Jaffray's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 583). Where the return is silent parol evidence is admissible to show the time of the levy (Brainard v. Bushnell, 11 Conn. 16), and where there is nothing in the return or on the face of the proceedings to show the time of service of two writs it may be presumed that they were served at the same time (Ginsberg v. Pohl, 35 Md. 505); but a levy made at twelve o'clock noon will be considered prior in point of time to an attachment made the same day where no particular time of service is specified (Fairfield v. Paine, 23 Me. 498, 41 Am. Dec. 357); and where two officers attached at almost the same time, an agreement to settle their dispute by a division of the property precluded them from afterward raising the question of priority (Lyman v. Dow, 25 Vt. 405).

5. Colorado.—Pro rata distribution is made among creditors whose attachments are returnable to the same term of court and among creditors who obtained judgment in civil actions in the same term to which writs of attachment are returnable (Brady v. Farwell, 8 Colo. 97, 5 Pac. 808); but a creditor is preferred who obtains judgment prior to the issue of an attachment writ, although at the same term (Brady v. Farwell, 8 Colo. 97, 5 Pac. 808), who has previously redeemed property from a prior attachment (Maloney v. Grimes, 1 Colo. 111), or, where individual property of partners is attached, who has a claim good against individual property, while his competitor has a claim which is good only against the partnership (Rouss v. Wallace, 10 Colo. App. 93, 50 Pac. 366). The circumstance that the attached property is sold under execution issued in one suit only will not prevent pro rata distribution. Claflin v. Doggett, 3 Colo. 413. But see Baum v. Gosline, 4 McCrary (U. S.) 317, 15 Fed. 220, where it is held that the Colorado statute regarding pro rata distribution is inoperative because in that state attachments are not made returnable to any specified terms of court.

Delaware.— Property seized by attachment becomes liable for the claims of all other creditors of defendant who come in and make proof of their debts before the auditor (Plunkett v. Moore, 4 Harr. (Del.) 379); but the attaching creditor is entitled to a double share or dividend if such shall not exceed his debt (Del. Rev. Code (1893), c. 104, § 11), and therefore although, after the attaching creditor has been paid under an arrangement collateral to the attachment proceedings, the proceedings will not be arrested, another creditor will not be substituted in his stead, for that would entitle the substituted creditor to a double share (Stone v. Jones, 4 Harr. (Del.) 255).

Florida.— There was formerly no priority between successive attachments. If judgments were obtained at the same term the attaching creditors shared pro rata in the proceeds Post v. Carpenter, 3 Fla. 1), and judgments entered on the same rule-day were judgments obtained at the same term (Smith v. Bowden, statutory provision for such distribution it is held that all creditors coming within 23 Fla. 150, 1 So. 314). The present statute regarding attachment liens reads that "levies upon the same property under successive attachments shall have precedence as liens in the order in which they are made." Fla. Rev. Stat. (1892), § 1651.

Illinois.— Two or more creditors beginning attachment suits which are returnable to the same term of court share pro rata, although judgments are obtained at different terms (Pollack v. Slack, 92 Ill. 221; Jones v. Jones, 16 Ill. 117; Warren v. Iscarian Community, 16 Ill. 114), even where the action is commenced within ten days of the term (Mechanics' Sav. Inst. v. Givens, 82 Ill. 157); and all creditors who obtain judgments in any sort of suit at the term when the attachment is returnable or at the term when judgment is obtained in the attachment suit share pro rata (Pollack v. Slack, 92 Ill. 221; McCoy v. Schnellbacker, 2 Ill. App. 582), without regard to the court in which the proceedings were instituted (MacVeagh v. Roysten, 172 Ill. 515, 50 N. E. 153 [affirming 71 Ill. App. 617]). The right to share pro rata is not lost by levying an attachment on real estate and then suspending the levy, but where two judgments are recovered for the same debt, the amount of one only can be used in estimating the creditor's pro rata share in the proceeds of attached property. Everingham v. National City Bank, 124 Ill. 527, 17 N. E. 26 [affirming 25 Ill. App. 637]. No pro rata distribution is made where the other suits are continued, although the attachment suit is also continued (Jones v. Jones, 16 Ill. 117; Rucker v. Fuller, 11 Ill. 223); where superior diligence on the part of one creditor secures property of the debtor (MacVeagh v. Roysten, 172 Ill. 515, 50 N. E. 153 [affirming 71 Ill. App. 617]; Pierson v. Robb, 4 Ill. 139); where the first attachment suit is not prosecuted to judgment (Paltzer v. National Bank, 145 Ill. 177, 34 N. E. 54 [affirming 41 Ill. App. 443]); where a judgment by confession is obtained, for that is not a suit commenced by summons, capias, or attachment (Brewster v. Riley, 19 Ill. App. 581); where a third person sues the first attaching creditor, and makes out a good title to the attached property (Locke v. Duncan, 53 Ill. App. 373); where the second attaching creditor acquires the debtor's right to the attached property and these two rights merge (Donk v. Alexander, 117 Ill. 330, 7 N. E. 672); or where a mortgage intervenes between the two attachments (Jones v. Jones, 16 Ill. 117).

Indiana.— Other creditors may file their claims in an attachment suit and after costs have been paid all the creditors are entitled to share in the proceeds in proportion to the amount of their several claims. Compton v. Crone, 58 Ind. 106; Shirk v. Wilson, 13 Ind. 129; Henderson v. Bliss, 8 Ind. 100; Gibson v. Stevens, 3 McLean (U. S.) 551, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,401 [reversed, on another point, in 8 How. (U. S.) 384, 12 L. ed. 1123]. Claims may be filed under the original attachment at any time while the same is pending (Henderson v. Bliss, 8 Ind. 100); even though the claim upon which the attachment proceeding was commenced has been satisfied (Ziegenhager v. Doe, 1 Ind. 296); or is based upon a decree for alimony in favor of the wife of attachment defendant (Farr v. Buckner, 32 Ind. 382); and there is no final adjustment until all pending claims have been settled by judgment and a sale of the property ordered (Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Ford Plate Glass Co., 84 Ind. 516 [distinguishing Cooper v. Metzger, 74 Ind. 544]). Where there is anything in the record indicating that the creditor filing a complaint, affidavit, and undertaking intends to file the same under the original proceeding, he will be held to become a party to the original action (Ryan v. Burkam, 42 Ind. 507), and no new summons need be issued against defendant (Schmidt v. Colley, 29 Ind. 120); for the original writ is sufficient (Taylor v. Elliott, 51 Ind. 375). Although a creditor omitting to file his claim under the original proceedings cannot acquire a prior lien against the property (Fee v. Moore, 74 Ind. 319), the execution of a bond by the attachment defendant for the release of the attached property has been held not to preclude subsequently applying creditors (Taylor v. Elliott, 51 Ind. 375; Rugg v. Johnson, 13 Ind. 437. Contra, Scott v. McDonald, 27 Ind. 33, where the attachment of a steamboat had been released by giving bond under section 661 of the code, and it was held that other creditors could not subsequently file their claims in the suit).

New Jersey.—An attachment operates as a lien on the property of defendant within the county in favor of all attaching creditors who come in under the attachment proceedings (Phœnix Iron Co. v. New York Wrought Iron R. Chair Co., 27 N. J. L. 484) before defendant has entered an appearance (Devlan v. Wells, 65 N. J. L. 213, 17 Atl. 467; Blatchford v. Conover, 40 N. J. Eq. 205, 1 Atl. 16, 7 Atl. 354), even though defendant dies before the other creditors enter their rule to be admitted (Smith v. Warden, 35 N. J. L. 346); but before other creditors apply the original attaching creditor may discontinue the suit if he acts in good faith (Duffin v. Wolf, 21 N. J. L. 475) and the discontinuance is effected by motion in open court, and not by a secret agreement (Cummins v. Blair, 18 N. J. L. 151). Although misstatement of the amount of an applying creditor's claim does not prevent him from obtaining judgment for a larger amount, because there is no requirement that such creditor should state the amount of his claim (Hanness v. Smith, 21 N. J. L. 495), the validity of the claims filed may be contested by other creditors (Stewart v. Walters, 38 N. J. L. 274); but an attaching creditor was allowed to share pro rata with other creditors in the distribution of the proceeds of the attached property, although he had collateral security for his claim (Benedict v. Benedict, 15 N. J. Eq.

d. Postponement of Prior Attachment — (1) Basis of Junior Creditor's Right to Attack. As a mere stranger having no interest in an attachment suit cannot contest the validity of the attachment, a subsequently attaching creditor must show that his attachment is valid[7] and that a binding levy was made on 150), and an attachment by one creditor does not bar a subsequent attachment by another creditor against the same defendant, and in the same county (Duffin v. Wolf, 21 N. J. L. 475; Brown v. Bissett, 21 N. J. L. 46 [overruling Cummins v. Blair, 18 N. J. L. 151]. Compare Brundred v. Del Hoyo, 20 N. J. L. 328). But see Blatchford v. Conover, 40 N. J. Eq. 205, 1 Atl. 16, 7 Atl. 354, where after an attachment was made other creditors came in by filing claims, and defendant subsequently opened up a default against himself and had judgment in the original attachment suit reversed. It was held that a grantee from defendant who received his deed after the levy of the original attachment prevailed over the rights of the applying creditors because their liens only dated from the time when judgment was entered on their claims.

Procedure by subsequent creditors.— If after creditors have filed their claims in an attachment the defendant appears and gives bond, the creditors must file declarations and their claim will be contested; but if the trial results in favor of the creditors they may recover costs although their judgment be for less than fifty dollars. Reed v. Chegaray, 20 N. J. L. 616.

Pro rata distribution was made when attachments were abandoned, and all the creditors accepted a trust fund, arising from a sale of the attached property (Claiborne v. Stewart, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 206), and where several attachments issued on a ground not controverted but the record showed no right to an attachment in any of the attaching creditors (Bright v. Blakemore, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 56). See also Stamper v. Hibbs, 94 Ky. 358, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 174, 22 S. W. 607, where it was held that when a debtor in failing circumstances makes a conveyance which is constructively fraudulent, all his creditors share pro rata in his property by statute, but where a creditor sues out an attachment on the ground of a fraudulent conveyance and establishes actual fraud he has a prior lien, and other creditors have subordinate liens dating from the time of filing their petition.

The position of a subsequently attaching creditor is one of attack and not of defense, and he must set up his claim in some affirmative shape so that it may be met and controverted before he can ask to have brought under consideration the claim of another with which he may have no concern. Ward v. Howard, 12 Ohio St. 158. To same effect see Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455, 35 Pac. 1023, where it is held that a complaint by a subsequently attaching creditor must set out facts from which the nature of his alleged lien can be determined, and must state that his claim is a just one. Compare Parker v. Perkins, 53 N. H. 607, where the subsequently attaching creditor was let in to defend the prior attachment suit on giving bond according to the state practice, and it was held that he must establish the validity of his own claim before attacking the claim for which the prior attachment was brought. See also Taylor v. Frost, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 214, for form of petition by an intervener seeking to be deemed an attaching creditor.

Where attachments are equally defective the second creditor has no standing to attack a prior attachment. Ladenburg v. Commercial Bank, 148 N. Y. 202, 42 N. E. 587; Central Nat. Bank v. Ft. Ann Woolen Co., 143 N. Y. 624, 37 N. E. 827, 60 N. Y. St. 873 [affirming 57 N. Y. St. 316]; Corn Exch. Bank v. Marckwald, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 458, 28 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 412; Williams v. Kulla, 11 N. Y. St. 283.

Sufficiency of proof.— The existence of a valid junior attachment may be established by affidavit, but an affidavit is insufficient when it is based on information and belief (Knudson v. Matuska, etc., Furniture Co., 7 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 86, 1 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 152), especially when no excuse is the same property that was seized under the prior writ[8] before he acquires any standing in court to raise the objections open to him.

(II) Grounds For Postponement.[9] Although mere irregularities in a prior attachment which defendant has not taken advantage of will not postpone it to the claims of subsequently attaching creditors,[10] a defect which takes away the given for not obtaining affidavits based upon personal knowledge (National Broadway Bank v. Barker, 128 N. Y. 603, 27 N. E. 1029, 38 N. Y. St. 920 [affirming 14 N. Y. Suppl. 529, 38 N. Y. Proc. 341]), or where the sources of his information are not alleged by affiant (Everitt v. Everitt Mfg. Co., 11 N. Y. Suppl. 508, 33 N. Y. St. 996). Compare Pitts v. Scribner, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 519, 46 N. Y. St. 726, where it is held that a sufficient prima facie showing of interest is made out by a subsequently attaching creditor if he annexes a copy of the warrant of the subsequent attachment to the moving affidavit, although the complaint, affidavits, and undertaking on which the attachment is alleged to have been issued are not presented.

Only prima facie proof of the debt of the junior attaching creditor is necessary to entitle him to intervene in the prior attachment suit. H. B. Claflin Co. v. Feibelman, 44 La. Ann. 518, 10 So. 862.

Irregularities insufficient to postpone.— A prior attachment cannot be defeated at the instance of a junior attaching creditor on account of irregularity in the attachment bond (Austin v. Goodbar Shoe Co., 60 Ark. 444, 30 S. W. 888; Fridenberg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152, 79 Am. Dec. 162; Van Arsdale v. Krum, 9 Mo. 397) or service of summons on defendant (Darby v. Shannon, 19 S. But see Rome Bank v. Haselton, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 216, where it was held that the failure of the prior attaching creditor to take oath that the debtor had fraudulently transferred his property was a fatal defect and could be taken advantage of by a subsequently attaching creditor); or because the affidavit was false when there has been no collusion between the prior attaching creditor and the debtor (Mallette v. Ft. Worth Pharmacy Co., 21 Tex. Civ. App. 267, 51 S. W. 859), or the attaching creditor honestly believed that the allegations in the affidavit were true, and had probable ground for such belief (Orr, etc., Shoe Co. v. Harris, 82 Tex. 273, 18 S. W. 308). See also Putney v. Wolberg, 127 Ala. 124, 28 So. 741 (where it was held that a subsequently attaching creditor could not enjoin a prior attachment because no statutory grounds for it existed); Rice v. Wolff, 65 Wis. 1, 26 N. W. 181 (where it was held that a subsequently attaching creditor could not in a bill in equity filed several months after the seizure of the property deny the existence of grounds for a prior attachment).

After judgment in an attachment suit a jurisdiction of the court and renders the proceeding void will do so;[11] and it has been held that a second attaching creditor may secure priority by showing that the earlier attachment was fraudulent,[12] or was based on an invalid[13] claim.

Waiver of exemption.—Where an attachment defendant had a right to claim exemption against a first attachment, but not against one subsequently levied, and he waived his right of exemption as to the first attachment, it was held that the lien of the first was superior to that of the second. Wallace v. Swan, 6 Dak. 220, 50 N. W. 624.

South Carolina.— Ferguson v. Gilbert, 17 S. C. 26. Compare Gardner v. Hust, 2 Rich. (S. C.) 601. where it was held that an illegal and void service could not be waived by defendant to the prejudice of subsequently attaching creditors.

Invalid attachments.— An attachment will be postponed when it is based on a claim for which the law does not provide the remedy of attachment (Rice v. Dorrian, 57 Ark. 541, 22 S. W. 213; Ward v. Howard, 12 Ohio St. 158); where the writ, contrary to statutory provisions, was issued before the main action was commenced (Seibert v. Switzer, 35 Ohio St. 661); where the suit by attachment was brought without plaintiff's knowledge (Caruth-Byrnes Hardware Co. v. Deere, 53 Ark. 140, 13 S. W. 517, 7 L. R. A. 405); or where an attachment is based on grounds known to be false, although as between the attaching creditor and defendant the truth of the alleged grounds is immaterial (Kollette v. Seibel, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 260, 26 S. W. 863. Contra, Glaser v. Ft. Smith First Nat. Bank, 62 Ark. 171, 34 S. W. 1061, 35 L. R. A. 765).

Jurisdiction obtained by consent of parties does not relate back and a second attachment levied before a consent which gives the court jurisdiction over a prior attachment will constitute a first lien on the property. Shaw v. Carrick, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 653.

Omitting the name of the defendant whose property is attached from an attachment bill is a defect which will postpone the lien of the attachment to that of another creditor whose levy was subsequently made. Lillard v. Porter, 2 Head (Tenn.) 176. And see Lorie v. Abernathy, 63 Mo. St. 502, where it was held that a second attaching creditor could not move to vacate a prior attachment on the ground that it was based on a claim void by the laws of defendants' domicile, because such grounds involve the merits of the action.

South Carolina.—Walker v. Roberts, 4 Rich. (S. C.) 561.

Texas.— Bateman v. Ramsey, 74 Tex. 589, 12 S. W. 235.

Insolvency of the debtor need not be alleged by a subsequently attaching creditor who seeks to intervene in a prior attachment on the ground that plaintiff's demand is fictitious. Johnson v. Heidenheimer, 65 Tex. 263. But see, contra, Grabenheimer v. Rindskoff, 64 Tex. 49, which is distinguished on the ground that the contest for priority was between partnership and individual creditors.

Evidence of validity of claim.— A prior attaching creditor may prove the validity of his claim against a subsequent creditor who has been let in to defend the suit by a confession of defendant (Strong v. Wheeler, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 410), even though such confession is made after the defense has been undertaken by the subsequently attaching creditor (Lambert v. Craig, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 199).

It is not a ground for postponing a prior attachment that the debtor consents to a judgment against himself for a bona fide debt (Shea v. Johnson, 101 Cal. 455, 35 Pac. 1023; Eastman v. Eveleth, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 137; Goodbar v. Sulphur Springs City Nat. Bank, 78 Tex. 461, 14 S. W. 851. See also Schloss v. State Bank, 4 Wash. 726, 31 Pac. 23), even though the creditor pays a money consideration for such consent (Doggett, etc., Co. v. Wimer, 54 Mo. App. 125; Adler v. Anderson, 42 Mo. App. 189); that plaintiff paid defendant cash for withdrawing a plea in abatement traversing the grounds of attachment (Meridian First Nat. Bank v. Cochran, 71 Miss. 175, 14 So. 439); that a colorable assignment of a just cause of action has been made to enable the assignee to sue in a certain state (Hadden v. Dooley, 92 Fed. 274, 63 U. S. App. 173, 34 C. C. A. 338, 93 Fed. 728, 35 C. C. A. 554 [reversing 84 Fed. 80], construing New York statute); or that defendant is notoriously insolvent (Harrison v. Harwood, 31 Tex. 650).

The entire claim was postponed to a second attaching creditor when the first creditor joined a fraudulent with an honest claim (Fairfield v. Baldwin, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 388; Craig v. California Vineyard Co., 30 Oreg. 43, 46 Pac. 421; Freiberg v. Freiberg, 74 Tex. 122, 11 S. W. 1123; Harding v. Harding, 25 Vt. 487); where demands were added to the claim originally sued (Fairbanks v. Stanley, 18 Me. 296; Clark v. Foxcroft, 7 Me. 348); and where judgment by default was taken for the whole claim without deducting payments, for the judgment was void in toto (Peirce v. Partridge, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 44). Compare Laighton v. Lord, 29 N. The entire attachment will not fail because postponed claims were included in the attachment suit (Schneider v. Roe, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 58); or because the suit was brought for a greater amount than the sum actually due, the mistake being an honest one (Coghill v. Marks, 29 Cal. 673; Mendes v. Freiters, 16 Nev. 388); and a lack of consideration for part of the claim sued for will postpone that part only to a subsequent attachment (Ayres v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504).

Where special grounds were necessary to justify an attachment upon immature claims, a subsequently attaching creditor was allowed to intervene and traverse the existence of the special grounds necessary to authorize the first attachment. Where mature and immature claims are joined by the first attaching creditor by reason of an innocent mistake he has priority the proceedings by which a junior attaching creditor may attack a previous attachment vary according to state statutes, the two modes in general use are for the second creditor to file a petition of intervention in the original suit[15] or to

to the extent of the matured claims (Hinchman v. Town, 10 Mich. 508); but not where the claims are joined in bad faith and with full knowledge of all the circumstances (Peiffer v. Wheeler, 76 Hun (N. The right of intervention is specially guaranteed by statute in some states, but in the absence of a prescribed mode of procedure it must be recognized that the attachment is a proceeding ancillary to the principal action. With this principal action strangers to it have no concern. In the attachment, however, strangers having an interest in the property or a lien thereon may be vitally interested, and they may be permitted in a proper manner to assert their claim to the property affected by the attachment itself. Deere v. Eagle Mfg. Co., 49 Nebr. 385, 68 N. W. 504.

Parties to intervention.— On intervention by an attaching creditor to vacate a judgment in a prior attachment suit on the ground of fraud all subsequently attaching creditors have been held to be necessary parties. Cook v. Pollard, 70 Tex. 723, 8 S. W. 512.

Time for intervention.— The subsequently attaching creditor must file his petition for intervention while both attachment suits are pending. Smart v. Smart, 64 Me. 317.

The practice of letting a junior attaching creditor defend the prior attachment suit prevails to a limited extent (Jump v. McClurg, 35 Mo. 193, 86 Am. St. Rep. 791. Contra, Hale v. Chandler, 3 Mich. 531; Goble v. Howard, 12 Ohio St. 165; Ward v. Howard, 12 Ohio St. 158), as when it is shown that defendant himself will not appear and defend (Lytle v. Lytle, 37 Ind. 281) and that there is a valid defense (U. S. Express Co. v. Lucas, 36 Ind. 361), or in another state upon condition that the attaching creditor gives security to pay costs if plaintiff prevail (Buckman v. Buckman, 4 N. H. 319). Compare a remark of Allen, J., in McCluny v. Jackson, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 96, 105, that a defense to an attachment suit "may be made without a personal appearance; and I can perceive no good reason why a third person claiming a right to have his debt satisfied out of the attached property, should not be permitted to make it, either in the name of the debtor or in his own name." It has been held, however, that this is not an absolute right, but one which lies within the discretion of the court (Reynolds v. Damrell, 19 N. H. 394); that the subsequently attaching creditor can only raise substantial objections (Clough v. Curtis, 62 N. H. 409; Kimball v. Wellington, 20 N. H. 439); and that the leave granted by the court in such cases does not confer a right to review (Pike v. Pike, 24 N. H. 384). But see Wallace v. Berry, 51 Vt. 602, where it was held that the attaching creditor could make defenses to defeat fraud on the part of previous attachments which the debtor himself would not be allowed to raise.

The time for pleading which is allowed to a subsequently attaching creditor who comes in and defends a prior attachment is the same as that allowed to defendant himself. Jump v. McClurg, 35 Mo. 193, 86 Am. Dec. 146.

Defenses open to creditors who are let in to defend.— It has been held that after the petition of a junior attaching creditor to be allowed to defend a prior suit had been granted he could set up the statute of limitations as a defense. Sawyer v. Sawyer, 74 move to vacate the earlier attachment;[16] and such a motion may be made at any time before the proceeds are turned over to the prior attaching creditor.[17] Where the subsequently attaching creditor is denied the right to intervene[18] or to move for discharge,[19] resort can be had to equity to enforce his rights against the prior attaching creditor.[20]

Me. 579. And in Miller v. White, 46 W. Va. 67, 33 S. E. 332, 76 Am. St. Rep. 791, a second attaching creditor who intervened in the prior suit was allowed to file a plea in abatement denying the grounds on which the prior attachment was issued. See also Lee v. Lamprey, 43 N. H. 13, for a discussion of the admissibility of evidence offered in defense by a subsequently attaching creditor.

In Massachusetts by statute a subsequently attaching creditor is allowed to defend the attachment suit on any ground which defeats the cause of action, but he is precluded from taking advantage of technical defenses (Baird v. Williams, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 381), and in case his defense fails, the subsequent creditor will be liable for costs (Whitwell v. Burnside, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 39), unless a judgment for costs is entered against the original defendant (Guild v. Guild, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 229); but the intervening creditor will not be liable for interest accruing on plaintiff's claim during a delay which was caused by attachment defendant (Guild v. Guild, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 229). Compare Adams v. Paige, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 542, where it was held that the right of a subsequently attaching creditor to intervene does not prevent him from asserting his rights in a separate action at common law.

The Missouri statute authorizing the court to determine controversies between attaching creditors has been held to limit the power of the court to a determination of controversies relating to the priority, good faith, and effect of different attachments as they relate to the property attached, and not to permit it to determine all controversies that may arise between different attachment creditors growing out of the manner of the creation of the debts or claims on which the attachments are based. Stephenson v. Parker Stationery Co., 142 Mo. 13, 43 S. W. 380.

Burden of proof.— Where attachments had been levied on land in separate suits against a husband and wife individually, and there was a contest as to whether the land belonged to the husband or to the wife, it was held that the burden was on the second attaching creditor to show that the property belonged to the defendant in his suit. Not an absolute right.— It has been held that a proceeding to determine priority of successive attachment liens cannot be claimed as an absolute right, but that the matter is addressed to the discretion of the equity side of the court. Espenhain v. Meyer, 74 Wis. 379, 43 N. W. 157.

In the absence of any motion by a party to the suit it has been held that a court may fix the priority of different attaching creditors and distribute the funds accordingly. Clinton First Nat. Bank v. Brenneisen, 97 Mo. 145, 10 S. W. 884.

Notice of the motion must be given to all interested parties. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570; Chandler v. Mullanphy, 7 Ill. 464. See also State v. Hickman, 150 Mo. 626, 51 S. W. 680, where it was held that in a suit by subsequently attaching creditors to establish the priority of their lien the court could not decide that prior attaching creditors, not parties to the suit, had lost their lien.

Form of judgment.—Where a subsequently attaching creditor succeeds in having his claim preferred to that of the earlier attachment the judgment should not set aside the first attachment entirely, but should only postpone it to the subsequent one. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280, 81 Am. Dec. 157.

Time for motion.—A motion of a junior attaching creditor to defeat a prior attachment on account of defects must be made before judgment in the prior attachment suit. Rudolf v. McDonald, 6 Nebr. 163.

Appeals.—While an appeal will lie from the decision of the circuit court on a motion to determine the priority of attaching creditors (Lane v. White, 64 Mo. (B) In What Tribunal. Ordinarily the court which has jurisdiction over the earliest attachment writ decides questions of priority,[21] and state law governs[22] even though the suit is pending in a federal court;[23] but as the rights of rival attaching creditors must be passed upon by the court, a sheriff who assumes to distribute the proceeds in his hands does so at his peril.[24]

Protection of officer.— Where a subsequently attaching creditor has appeared to contest a prior attachment and judgment has been rendered against him, the officer is justified in applying the property as the judgment directs and his conduct in so doing cannot be questioned in a subsequent proceeding. Wallace v. Berry, 51 Vt. 602. In Philbrick v. Shaw, 63 N. H. 81, it was held that a deputy sheriff was not bound to defend an action brought against the sheriff to determine a controversy between two attaching creditors, but that the creditor who had executed a bond of indemnity to the sheriff was the sole defendant in interest.

25. For time when judgment becomes a lien see JUDGMENTS.

26. Necessity for actual levy of execution. — Mere delivery of an execution to the sheriff will not entitle the judgment creditor to priority over a subsequently attaching creditor (Robertson v. Lawton, 91 Hun (N. Y.) 67, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 175, 71 N. Y. St. 87); but an attachment levied before the execution levy has priority (Moore v. Fitz, 15 Ind. 43; Eddy v. Weaver, 37 Kan. 540, 15 Pac. 492; Field v. Milburn, 9 Mo. 492; R. Wallace, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Sharick, 15 Wash. 643, 47 Pac. 20), because after the attachment is levied an execution cannot be levied on the same property even though it issues from a court of coördinate jurisdiction (Metzner v. Graham, 57 Mo. 404). It has been held, however, that an execution of older tests will prevail, although levied subsequently to the attachment writ. Peck v. Robinson, 3 Head (Tenn.) 437. Compare Rice v. Walinszius, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 329, where the lien created by placing a writ of attachment in the sheriff's hands was held not to be disturbed by subsequently lodging a writ of fieri facias for the sale of the property with the same officer.

Custody of property.— Where the sheriff failed to take possession under the execution, the lien of the judgment is waived against a subsequent attachment. Hanson v. Taper Sleeve Pulley Incorporation, 72 Iowa 622, 34 N. W. 448. See also Burrows v. Wright, 19 Vt. 510, where it was held that an officer levying attachment writs and an execution on property was entitled to retain possession of the property, although the executions issued on judgments in the attachment suits were subsequently delivered to another officer.

Determining prior levy.— A sheriff's return on a fieri facias that the levy thereon was made subject to a former seizure of the same property under an attachment writ is conclusive on the execution creditor (Prather v. Chase, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 206); but where there was an agreement that the sheriff should indorse an execution as first coming to his hands, the attaching creditor cannot claim priority because the sheriff levied the execution subject to the attachment levy (Connolley v. Eisman, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1247, 60 S. W. 372).

Invalid judgment.— Where a judgment by confession is invalid for want of compliance with statutory requirements the judgment creditor will be postponed to a subsequently attaching creditor without regard to the bona fides of the debt for which judgment was confessed (Puget Sound Nat. Bank v. Levy, 10 Wash. 499, 39 Pac. 142, 45 Am. St. Rep. 803); but mere irregularities in an earlier execution will not entitle a subsequently attaching creditor to priority (Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 401).

Where fraudulently conveyed property is attached by a creditor of the grantor the attaching creditor will prevail over one who subsequently files a bill in equity to have the conveyance set aside, although a decree is obtained before judgment in the attachment suit. McClellan v. Solomon, 23 Fla. 437, 2 So. 825, 11 Am. St. Rep. 381; McKinney v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 104 Ill. 180.

In Georgia a contest for priority between attaching creditors and other creditors is determined by the time when they obtain judgments irrespective of the time when the attachment was levied. Kilgo v. Castleberry, 38 Ga. 512, 95 Am. Dec. 406; Erwin v. Moore, 15 Ga. 361; Willis v. Parsons, 13 Ga. 335; Lichton v. McDougald, 5 Ga. 176; McDougald v. Barnard, 3 Ga. 169. This doctrine led to the anomaly that fraudulent collusion on the part of the debtor enabled him to prefer a creditor by splitting up his demand into small notes, and thus enabling him to obtain judgment first, although his suit was instituted subsequently to the attachment suit (Andrews v. Kaufmans, 60 Ga. 669), and was modified by a statute providing that the suit without attachment must not have been begun subsequently to the attachment suit (Silvey v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 94 Ga. 609, 21 S. E. 607, where it is held that a suit without attachment begun on the same day the attachment writ is levied, and first prosecuted to judgment, will prevail over the attachment lien).

In the province of Ontario a person commencing suit against an absconding debtor previous to the suing out of a writ of attachment against him could formerly proceed to judgment, and his execution was entitled to be satisfied first out of the assets seized under the writ (Daniel v. Fitzell, 17 U. C. Q. B. 369; Bank of British North America v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. Q. B. 182; Hughes v. Field, 9 Ont. Pr. 127); but process must have been actually served on the debtor, and a judgment by confession was unavailing (Upper Canada Bank v. Glass, 21 U. C. Q. B. 39; Bird v. Folger, 17 U. C. Q. B. 536). It had to be shown that process was served before the writ of attachment was levied (Daniel v. Fitzell, 17 U. C. Q. B. 369), and the court had power in its discretion to pay the costs of the attaching creditor before satisfying the execution entitled to priority (Hughes v. Field, 9 Ont. Pr. 127). But this has been altered by the creditors' relief act of 1880 (cited as "The Creditors' Relief Act," R. S. O. 1887, c. 65), which provides for pro rata distribution in such cases. Macfie v. Pearson, 8 Ont. 745.

Divorce proceedings.—An attaching creditor will prevail over the claims of a wife suing for divorce when the attachment is levied before the institution of the divorce suit (Jennings v. Montague, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 350); and when the attachment is levied before a decree is made in the divorce suit (Spencer v. Spencer, 9 R. I. 150).

The Pennsylvania statute authorizing the guardians of the poor to seize the property of an absconding husband and apply it to the support of his wife and children was not intended to interfere with the rights of creditors, and therefore an attaching creditor may seize the property even after trustees have been appointed to hold the property for the benefit of the wife and children. B. Rights and Duties of Attaching Officer — 1. Duty to Take and Keep — Abandonment — a. Rule Stated. In order to preserve an attachment when made, the officer must, either by himself or by his agent, retain his control over, and the power of taking immediate possession of, the attached property, in all those cases in which the property is capable of being taken into actual possession, unless it is released in some mode prescribed by statute.[31] If he does not do this the attachment will be regarded as abandoned and dissolved,[32] and if the sheriff or his appointed keeper thus abandons the possession of the property and it comes Necessity of taking possession to valid levy see supra, X, H, 1, b, (I), (B).

Officer is not an insurer, and is not responsible beyond reasonable watchfulness, caution, and the employment of proper means to security, but he should be held to greater care than owners usually take of their property, because goods so held are more liable to be molested than if not under seizure. Fletcher v. Aldrich, 81 Mich. 186, 45 N. W. 641. See also Cresswell v. Burt, 61 Iowa 590, 16 N. W. 730.

The element of expense cannot be considered by the officer in relation to his duty to preserve and keep attached property. Sewall v. Mattoon, 9 Mass. 535; Newman v. Kane, 9 Nev. 234. Nor will mere inconvenience in the removal of property excuse the officer from his liability. Chadbourne v. Sumner, 16 N. H. 129, 41 Am. Dec. 720.

Threshing grain.— If it is necessary for the preservation of grain and straw which has been attached that it be threshed it is the duty of the attaching officer to thresh the same. Briggs v. Taylor, 35 Vt. 57.

After discontinuance of an attachment proceeding the officer holds the property until notified, or until he learns that the suit has been discontinued. Vanneter v. Crossman, 39 Mich. 610.

After judgment an officer is not bound to deliver goods attached to the judgment creditor that he may levy his execution on them, for the officer is accountable to the debtor no less than to the creditor. Blake v. Shaw, 7 Mass. 505.

Seizure of replevied property on junior writ. — Where a sheriff seizes property under a junior attachment taking it from the possession of the sureties on the replevin bond in the first attachment, thereby discharging them from their liability on the bond, it is his duty to keep the property safe so that it may be forthcoming to answer the first writ which constitutes the prior lien. Scarborough v. Malone, 67 Ala. 570.

Levy by constable — Turning property over to sheriff.— Under Ala. Civ. Code, § 2956, providing that, in case of an attachment issued by a justice of the peace for an amount exceeding his jurisdiction, and not more than the amount of the penalty of the constable's bond, the justice may direct that it be executed by the constable, who shall return the same to the court to which it is returnable; section 2958, providing for the sale of property levied on by order of the court, and that the proceeds of the sale shall be retained by the sheriff; and section 2959, authorizing the sheriff to sell property under certain conditions without an order of the court — property levied on by a constable, and delivered to the sheriff, is in the latter's possession as sheriff, and not as mere bailee of the constable, although the statute does not expressly direct the constable to turn the property over to the sheriff. Joseph v. Henderson, 95 Ala. 213, 10 So. 843.

Permitting reasonable use by debtor.— Where, from motives of compassion for the debtor's family, articles of necessity, such as household furniture without which the family cannot subsist, are used by them by permission of the officer, the attachment may continue in force notwithstanding. Train v. Wellington, 12 Mass. 495. But on the other hand it is held that in such cases there should be a keeper immediately representing the attaching officer, who should be in possession and control of the property, and that the use should be under the immediate supervision of such keeper. W. 1053, where it was held that after a levy upon animals on a range the owner was still in control for the purpose of attending to the stock and, if negligent in this regard, neither the officer nor plaintiff in attachment was liable for the resulting damage, although the original writ might be void.

difficulty, depending upon a variety of circumstances, having respect to the nature and situation of the property and the purposes for which custody and vigilance are required.[34]

(B) Articles of Bulk. Where an officer makes a constructive levy upon property, which by reason of its bulk or for other cause cannot be immediately removed, he does not thereby deprive himself of the right to regain actual possession of the attached property whenever necessary for its preservation. His liability to have such property forthcoming that it may be taken on execution is the same as if it had been taken into his actual possession.[35] The property is regarded as constructively in his possession and he must use ordinary care and diligence for its preservation and safe-keeping.[36]

(II) Continuous Presence. The continued presence with the property attached of an attaching officer, by himself or agent, is not necessary. It is sufficient if he exercise due diligence to prevent its going out of his control.[37]

(III) Delivery to Keeper, Servant, or Agent.[38] An attaching officer need not retain personal possession of the attached property, but may deliver it to a keeper, servant, or agent, whose possession will be regarded as the possession of the officer.[39]

34. Sanderson v. Edwards, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 144; Hemmenway v. Wheeler, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 408, 25 Am. Dec. 411; Roberts v. Scales, 23 N. Abandonment question of fact.— Whether there has been in any given case an abandonment of an existing attachment is ordinarily a question of fact to be submitted to the jury with proper instructions. Com. v. Brigham, 123 Mass. 248.

Confusion of goods.— If an officer mixes goods attached by him with other goods of the same kind previously attached by another officer, on a writ against the same defendant, so that the former goods cannot be identified, the lien of the last attachment is lost. Gordon v. Jenney, 16 Mass. 465.

Liability of officer for care of property constructively attached.— Where an officer attached bales of hay lying near a railroad depot by leaving a copy of the writ and return in the town-clerk's office, and did not take personal possession of the same or put any one in charge thereof, and the hay was not forthcoming to be applied on an execution, it was held that he did not use due care and diligence in the custody and preservation of the same. Dec. 688 (holding that where a keeper of wood and lumber on a wharf left his wharf on Sunday morning, fastening the gates as usual on such days, and returned in the afternoon the attachment was not dissolved); Wolf v. Taylor, 68 Tex. 660, 5 S. W. 855.

Wrongful dispossession of the officer does not have the effect of releasing the attachment lien (Clow v. Gilbert, 54 Ill. App. 134; Butterfield v. Clemence, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 269; Beech v. Abbott, 6 Vt. 586), and it is not necessary, in order to maintain a lien, that the keeper should be at all times able to resist fraud or violence in retaining his actual possession (Harriman v. Gray, 108 Mass. 229, holding that the temporary exclusion of a keeper by fraud or violence raises no presumption of abandonment).

(iv) Delivery to Claimant. Where a third party claims to be the owner of attached goods, the officer may in his discretion release the same to him; but he does so at his peril, and the burden is upon him to establish that such property did not belong to attachment defendant.[40]

(v) Return to Debtor. If the attaching officer, or any person to whom he may deliver the goods for safe-keeping, permits them to return to the possession of the debtor, the attachment is, with respect to other creditors, ipso facto dissolved;[41] and it has been held that if the dissolution of an attachment is effected by the delivery of the property by the officer into the possession of the debtor, the attachment cannot be revived by a redelivery by the debtor to the officer.[42]

c. Place of Custody — (i) In General. Where property is taken under attachment it is immaterial in what place it is kept by the officer.[43]

(ii) Removal From State. The removal by the attaching officer or his bailee of attached goods from the state in which the attachment issued will not discharge the attaching officer's special property therein.[44]

the owner after the attachment, depends upon the reality of the sheriff's possession under the attachment, and if plaintiff in attachment was himself the keeper and suffered the property to be taken out of his possession and carried to a distant parish, where it was sold, without any steps being taken to regain the possession, he cannot disturb the title of the purchaser. Agreement of parties.— An attachment creditor waives his lien by allowing a debtor to take charge of attached property, under an agreement to make quarterly payments, with the proviso that if any other creditor should undertake to subject the property it should revert to the original attaching creditor. Such an agreement is a fraud upon other creditors. Morton v. Allen, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 601. Where a steamboat was attached, but by agreement between plaintiff and the master the boat was to proceed on its voyage to be delivered to the sheriff upon its return, it was held that the lien was not extinguished as between the parties to the suit. Conn v. Caldwell, 6 Ill. 531. An officer having attached cattle of a debtor allowed them to remain in the debtor's possession upon the understanding between himself and the debtor that the attachment should still subsist, and it was held that the attachment was not thereby dissolved as against the debtor or any one having notice of these facts. d. Extent of Officer's Interest — (I) In General. An officer has only such special interest in attached property in his possession as the lien of the attachment creates,[45] and it is measured by the amount necessary to pay the debt for which the property has been attached.[46]

(II) Effect of Close of Official Term. It is the duty of the officer levying an attachment to keep the property and have it forthcoming on demand, although not demanded until after the close of his official term.[47]

(III) Property Jointly Owned. Where personal property owned by tenants in common is attached in a suit against one of them, the officer is entitled to the possession and control of the whole,[48] but although the whole may be seized, yet it is only an undivided interest which can be held and sold. The officer has no power to make a division, either with or without the consent of the cotenant, or to attach a specific parcel as the property of the debtor.[49]

e. Payment Into Court. The attaching officer may pay into court[50] money, the proceeds of attached property, or itself attached, and when so paid into court it is still subject to the lien of attachment to the same extent and effect as if retained in the hands of the attaching officer.[51]

f. Examination of Books and Papers. It has been held that an attaching officer is not bound to permit parties whose books and papers are in his custody by virtue of a levy under a writ of attachment to examine them;[52]

he has as much authority in the one place as he has in the other); Utley v. Smith, 7 Vt. 154, 29 Am. Dec. 152. See also Dick v. Bailey, 2 La. Ann. 974, 46 Am. Dec. 561, where, although approving the decision in Brownell v. Manchester, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 232, it was held, that where the sheriff removed the attached property from the state for an unlawful purpose, he became, by such abuse of his authority and violation of his official duty, a trespasser ab initio, and the property became subject to the claims of other creditors.

But see Stockton v. Hyde, 5 La. Ann. 300, where it was held that the sheriff holds property seized under attachment for the benefit of whom it may concern; that if the attaching creditor succeeds, the rents and profits during the attachment belong to him to the extent of his claim; and that if not paid to the sheriff he may recover them in a direct action against the tenant.

50. Payment without order of court.— Where a sheriff is garnished in respect to money officially held by him, if he pays it to the clerk of the court, although without an order of court, this is a payment into court under the provision of the statute that in the case of money attached in the hands of officers of court, "it must be paid into court, to abide the result of the suit, unless the court otherwise direct." Warren v. Matthews, 96 Ala. 183, 11 So. 285.

but while he is not bound to permit such an examination an order of court may be obtained for that purpose.[53]

2. ACTION FOR VIOLATION OF POSSESSION — a. Who May Sue. Possession of attached property vests in the officer until the property is disposed of and his title is not only sufficient to support an action for a violation of such possession,[54] but the right of action lies with him exclusively and the attaching creditor, as a rule, acquires no such interest in the attached property as to give him a right of action for a violation of the officer's possession.[55]

Ground of officer's right of action.—An officer who has attached property can only maintain an action for it upon the ground of his liability to the attaching creditor, or to the owner for its return to him. Collins v. Smith, 16 Vt. 9.

Action in another state.— The special title of the officer is sufficient to permit him to assert his title in another state to which the property has been taken, and it is held that such an action by the officer cannot be considered as an attempt to execute the process of attachment of the state in which the attachment issues within the borders of the state where the action for possession by the sheriff is prosecuted. Rhoads v. Woods, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 471.

Conversion — Demand.—Where attached hay was left with defendant, whose servant destroyed the same by feeding it to cattle, it was held that in an action by the officer against the servant for the conversion of the hay a demand for its return was not necessary, the property having been destroyed by defendant's own wrongful act. Davis v. Leary, 177 Mass. 526, 59 N. E. 191.

Where possession violated by fellow deputy. — Where a deputy sheriff's possession is violated by another deputy of the same sheriff, the former may maintain an action either against the sheriff (Walker v. Foxcroft, 2 Me. 270) or against such other deputy (Gordon v. Jenney, 16 Mass. 465).

Effect of release at instance of creditor.— A sheriff who released a levy of attachment at the instance of the attaching creditor cannot recover for the conversion of the attached property from the person who afterward obtains possession of it. In New York, under Code Civ. Proc. § 708, subs. 3, which gives double damages "at the suit of the party aggrieved," the attaching creditor may sue for a wilful withholding from the sheriff of the property attached, where it does not appear that the sheriff afterward regained possession. Scott v. Morgan, 94 N. Y. 508.

Joint action by sheriff and attaching creditor.—Where personal property held by a sheriff under a writ of attachment is taken by a stranger, the attaching creditors cannot, by virtue of their rights in the attachment suit, maintain a joint action with the sheriff to recover damages for such taking. Schaeffer v. Marienthal, 17 Ohio St. 183.

Suit by creditor as bailee of sheriff.—Where a sheriff by virtue of an attachment seized goods and delivered them to plaintiff in attachment to be taken out of the district and sold, it was held that, although the delivery to plaintiff was irregular, yet he might maintain trover against a wrong-doer, who took the action maintained by an attaching officer for a violation of the possession of the attached property may be either replevin, trespass, or trover.[56]

(II) Contempt Proceedings. A stranger to a pending suit may be proceeded against as for contempt for interfering with property attached therein.[57]

c. Defenses — Evidence. In an action for the conversion by defendant to his own use of property alleged to have been held by plaintiff officer under an attachment, any evidence is admissible which tends directly to show that the averment of this fact is not true.[58]

d. Damages. In an action by an attaching officer for the violation of his possession of the property attached the value of the goods is the measure of damages.[59] If, however, the attaching creditor has failed to perfect his lien by taking out execution within the statutory period only nominal damages can be recovered by the officer.[60] Where there has been no conversion by defendant to his own use, the measure of damages is the injury caused by the removal, not the value of the property.[61]

Lowry v. Walker, 5 Vt. 181.

Informality or irregularity in the attachment proceedings may be set up in defense to an action by the attaching officer for a violation of his possession. Marshall v. Marshall, 2 Houst. (Del.) 125.

Failure to levy execution after destruction of property.— In trover by the officer against the servant of defendant in the attachment, for destroying hay levied upon by feeding it to cattle, it is no defense to say that the attachment had been lost because no attempt had been made to levy an execution within thirty days from the rendition of the judgment, the property having been destroyed before the judgment was rendered. The right to sue was perfected by the mere issue of the execution and placing it in the attaching officer's hands for service before the expiration of thirty days after entry of judgment. keeping is coeval with the practice of making attachments. It is, in its nature, a simple deposit, a delivery of the property to be kept by the depositary, without compensation, until called for by the attaching officer. In general a simple receipt, admitting that the articles enumerated have been delivered by the officer to the receiptor for safe-keeping, to be returned on demand, is sufficient evidence of the attachment and bailment.[62]

2. Power of Officer to Take Receipt — a. In General. An attaching officer may in his discretion and at his own risk deliver attached property to a bailee or receiptor for safe-keeping. The law, however, does not require him to take a receipt for such property, and his taking one is not strictly an official act.[63]

Treated as a contract.—A receipt for attached property is treated as a contract, in that it is made conclusive evidence of the attachment of such property as is described therein, and the receiptor cannot be allowed to prove the contrary. Brown v. Gleed, 33 Vt. 147. See also Soule v. Austin, 35 Vt. 515. The delivery by an officer of goods under an attachment is sufficient consideration for the contract of a receiptor, making him responsible thereby for the amount of the debt and damages claimed in the writ (Savage v. Robinson, 93 Me. 262, 44 Atl. 926. See also Foss v. Norris, 70 Me. 117), and a written promise to pay to plaintiff in the attachment the amount which may be recovered therein, in consideration of the delivery by the officer to the promisor of the property attached, may be enforced by the promisee, although the contract was made without the request or knowledge of attachment defendant, the attached property did not belong to him, was not in his possession, and perished before the recovery of judgment in the action. Hayes v. Kyle, 8 Allen (Mass.) 300.

The legal meaning of the contract is that the receiptor shall have the property attached forthcoming upon the demand made for the same by the officer, to respond to the execution that may issue upon the judgment obtained in the suit in which the property is attached. Dewey v. Fay, 34 Vt. 138.

Contingent in effect.—A receipt given to an officer for property attached, although absolute in its terms, is contingent by operation of law. The officer can recover upon it only on the ground of his accountability for the property, either to the attaching creditor or to the owner; and where this accountability has ceased he has no right to recover, and it makes no difference whether the receipt is under seal or not. Dayton v. Merritt, 33 Conn. 184. See also Fowler v. Bishop, 31 Conn. 560.

Favored by law.— The contract of suretyship contained in an officer's receipt is favored in law, and is an essential and mitigating incident of the system of attachment on mesne process. Fowler v. Bishop, 31 Conn. 560.

Liability to general owner.— A bailee of goods attached, while he remains liable to the officer on his receipt, is not liable to the general owner. Perley v. Brown, 18 N. H. 404. But if the officer places such receipt in the hands of creditor's attorney to be prosecuted for his benefit it is an equitable assignment of the contract for which his liability to the creditor forms a sufficient consideration. Clark v. Clough, 3 Me. 357.

The taking of a promissory note is regarded as no different in principle from taking a receipt, which is in no wise inconsistent with, even if not a part of, the officer's duty. Foster v. Clark, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 329.

Relation between officer and receiptor.— A receiptor is not regarded as the mere servant of the officer, but his undertaking is a security for the debt to the extent of the value of the property. So long as the receiptor retains possession the officer may reclaim it for the purpose of sale to satisfy the execution, because he is not satisfied with the responsibility of the receiptor, or with a view to restoring it to the owner; but the receiptor, if he choose, may lawfully restore the property to the debtor and permit him to dispose of it, and thereby deprive himself of the power to return it according to the terms of his engagement. In such case, upon a lawful demand by the officer, he becomes entitled to recover the value of the property from the receiptor. Kendallville First Nat. Bank v. Stanley, 4 Ind. App. 213, 30 N. b. Effect of Direction and Approval by Creditor. Where the attaching creditor, or his attorney, consents to the officer's taking a receipt for the attached property, and approves of the receiptor, the officer is relieved from all liability for losses not occasioned by his neglect or misfeasance.[64]

3. Who May Be Receiptor. Any person sui juris whether plaintiff,[65] defendant,[66] claimant,[67] or an indifferent person,[68] may receipt for attached property.

Receipting assimilated to bailing.—A sheriff is authorized to take a receipt, and where the property is receipted the case has been assimilated to the case of bail. Lovell v. Sabin, 15 N. H. 29.

Necessity of retaining control.—When an officer attaches goods and takes a receipt for the redelivery of them on demand, or payment therefor, and leaves them without removal, in order to preserve the attachment he must retain control of the property in himself or by his servant, or have the power of taking immediate possession, and if the possession is abandoned the attachment is dissolved. Austin v. Burlington, 34 Vt. 506. The creditor's approval of the receiptor does not exonerate the officer from an effort to find the property, that it may be sold on the execution, or from the duty of bringing a suit upon the receipt. Tyler v. Winslow, 46 Me. 348.

Right of debtor to compensation.— In Aliger v. Keeler, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 125, it was held that where a constable committed attached property to defendant's custody to hold as receiptor, the latter acquired a valid lien upon the property for his just and lawful charges.

written evidence of the contract of bailment entered into by the officer and receiptor, its form is a matter of voluntary agreement between them, and the rights and liabilities of the parties to it must be determined by a fair construction of the writing itself.[70] It should, however, specify the articles attached.[71]

5. Effect of Receipt — a. Upon Attachment Lien. The acceptance by an officer of a receipt for attached property does not as a rule affect the attachment lien, but the goods are regarded as still under the officer's control, and he may reclaim them at pleasure.[72] Where, however, the receipt is in the alternative to pay a fixed sum or redeliver the property, the receiptor has the right to elect which he will do, and the attachment is dissolved.[73]

b. Upon Valuation of Property. The valuation fixed by the receiptor and officer is conclusive as between themselves, whether such valuation be more or less than the actual value of the property; and parol evidence is not admissible to show that the value is different from that expressed in the receipt, in an action by the officer against the receiptor.[74]

Action for injury to property — Effect of valuation.— Where the receiptor of property delivers it up in an injured condition and is sued by the officer for the injury, the receipt is only prima facie evidence of the value of the property, and parol evidence is admissible to show its true value. Bancroft v. Parker, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 192.

c. Upon Right of Receiptor to Assert Title or Lien — (I) In General. In an action upon a simple accountable receipt, in which there is a mere promise to redeliver the property to the attaching officer, with no direct admission of defendant's title, the receiptor may, in defense, assert his own title to, or lien on, the property, or that of another to whom he has returned it.[75]

(II) Estoppel — (A) In Action on Receipt. A receiptor may, however, estop himself to deny, in an action on his receipt, the debtor's title to the attached property. Thus, after an express admission of such title, with a promise to return the goods, or pay the judgment, not to exceed the stipulated valuation of the property;[76] after conduct on the part of the receiptor, who himself owns, or has a lien upon, the goods which induces the officer to believe that they belong to the debtor;[77] where the contract is a mere substitute for the security by attachment, and is, in effect, but an agreement to indemnify the officer for not making an attachment;[78] or where, although the property was not in fact attachable, the officer is still liable, either to plaintiff, defendant, or the true owner,[79] the receiptor is estopped to deny the title of the debtor.

Reservation of right to assert lien.—Where goods were attached in the hands of one who had a lien on them, who receipted therefor, under an agreement that he should continue to retain for his lien, and afterward they were attached at his own suit, and he receipted for them, still asserting his lien, it was held that his lien was not discharged. Townsend v. Newell, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 332. See also Wilson v. Ladd, 49 Me. 73.

Assertion of partnership title.— Where a sheriff attaching partnership goods as the property of a member of the firm takes a receipt for them from another member and leaves them in possession of the firm, the paramount partnership title is a defense in an action on the receipt. Tucker v. Adams, 63 N. H. 361.

Assertion of title in mortgagee — Demand. — A receiptor for property attached cannot justify non-delivery thereof on demand, by showing that the same was mortgaged, if the mortgagee has made no demand upon him for the property. Scott v. Whittemore, 27 N. H. 309.

Burden of proof.— In an action by an attaching officer against a receiptor the burden of proof that the property did not belong to the person as whose it was attached is upon defendant. Burt v. Perkins, 9 Gray (Mass.) 317.

In an action on a receipt under seal, where the receiptor agreed that the goods attached as the property of defendant were defendant's property, and that on demand he would return them to the attaching officer, or pay him the amount of the debt and costs recovered in the suit, evidence that some of the goods were not the property of defendant at the time of the attachment, and that the others were not attachable was held inadmissible in defense. Admission of ownership by defendant receiptor.—Where goods were levied on as the property of defendant who gave a receipt for them to the sheriff admitting they were his, and that they were of a certain value, it was held that the sheriff having acted on the faith of such receipt, defendant was estopped to deny that he had no leviable interest in the property. (B) In Action by Receiptor For Wrongful Attachment. A receiptor is not estopped to set up title to attached property in himself, in an action brought by him for the wrongful attachment.[80]

6. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities of Receiptor — a. In General. A receiptor's liability upon his undertaking is dependent upon its terms,[81] but it may be stated generally that such liability is limited by that of the attaching officer; and when that is discharged the receiptor can no longer be held.[82]

b. Conversion of Property. The receiptor of attached property is treated as only the temporary bailee thereof, and is liable at any time to be called to account, if guilty of converting the property by any abuse, wrongful use, or refusal to deliver on demand;[83] but mere negligence or non-feasance of the receiptor in

Where several receipts are given at the same time, by the same receiptor for the same property, attached on several different writs, whether they are to be regarded as one contract, or as each standing upon its own ground, as if it were the sole receipt given, will depend upon the language of the contracts and the intent of the party signing them. Where attached property has perished without the officer's fault he is not liable, nor is a receiptor of such property liable on his receipt, when it has perished without his fault. Ide v. Fassett, 45 Vt. 68.

Liability on receipt for partnership property.—A receiptor for property belonging to a firm, attached for the debt of one of the partners, cannot be charged by the sheriff, if he suffered it to remain in possession of the partners, since the sheriff could not take the property and was under no liability to the owners. Hill v. Wiggin, 31 N. H. 292.

Liability under void attachment.—A receiptor of goods unlawfully attached, who has redelivered them to the debtor, is not liable therefor on his receipt, stipulating to pay a certain amount or redeliver the property. Harmon v. Moore, 59 Me. 428.

Allowing attachment of receipted goods.— Where a receiptor of property attached in a suit in Massachusetts, having taken the property to his residence in a neighboring state, there pointed it out to an officer, and permitted it to be attached and taken from him on a writ sued out by plaintiff in the first action, returnable to the courts of the latter state, it was held that the receiptor was not liable in trover to defendant on plaintiff's abandoning the suit in Massachusetts. The second attachment being legal and rightful, the act of defendant in pointing out the property to the officer and permitting him to attach and take it was not wrongful and did not amount to a conversion for which the ac-

e. Indemnity or Reimbursement of Receiptor. A receiptor cannot claim reimbursement for money paid out by him on an execution against an attachment debtor where the execution has already been satisfied by an extent on the debtor's lands;[85] but where he has received a bond to indemnify him for having given a receipt to an officer for attached goods, he is damnified by an attachment of his property in a suit on his receipt, and may thereupon bring an action on his bond.[86]

d. Redelivery of Property — (I) In General — (A) Duty to Redeliver on Demand. The attaching officer has a right, at any time, to reclaim the attached property, either from his bailee or from defendant,[87] if the bailee has allowed it to go back into the latter's possession;[88] and it is the duty of the bailee or receiptor, upon demand, to redeliver the identical property.[89]

(B) Right to Redeliver Before Demand. One who signs a receipt for goods

tion would lie. Chase v. Andrews, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 114.

Purchase by receiptor.—A receiptor of attached goods may purchase them from the debtor after delivery to the latter and will succeed to all his rights. Weston v. Dorr, 25 Me. 176, 43 Am. Dec. 259.

Waiver by sheriff.— If the sheriff to whom a receipt for property is given assent to the conversion of the same by the receiptor to pay the receiptor's debt he thereby waives his claim upon the receipt. Stevens v. Eames, 22 N. H. 568.

After expiration of attachment lien.— Where property attached has been delivered by the officer to a receiptor on his promise to redeliver it on demand, and the lien of the attachment has expired, the receiptor is still bound to deliver the property on demand to the officer, unless he is himself the owner of it, has already delivered it to the owner, or has authority from the latter to hold possession of the same. Fitch v. Chapman, 28 Conn. 257.

Sufficiency of offer to deliver.— Certain cumbrous articles of machinery were attached by an officer in a shop where they were used, and bailed to defendant with the understanding that such use should continue. In trover for the property it appeared that the officer, in the street and near the shop, demanded the articles of defendant who offered to go at once to the shop and deliver them, but the officer failed to go there or to designate another place of delivery. It was held that the shop was the proper place for delivery and that there was no proof of a conversion. Durgin v. Gage, 40 N. H. 302.

Effect of discharge of officer.— If the attaching officer's liability has been discharged the bailee will be accountable for the goods to some other party, and is not bound to deliver them to the officer, or to account for them to him in any other way. Holt v. Burbank, 47 N. H. 164.

attached, agreeing to redeliver them to the attaching officer, or his order, on demand, cannot discharge himself by an offer to redeliver them before demand, unless expressly authorized so to do by the terms of his receipt,[90] but in case of a second attachment upon the receipted property, he may return the property to the custody of the officer, if he is unwilling to incur any further responsibility by reason of such attachment.[91]

(11) To Debtor. When property attached is receipted for and redelivered to the debtor the receiptor is liable therefor to the officer, whether by the receipt and redelivery he becomes a bailee and servant of the officer to keep the goods as in the custody of the law, or an original contractor, bound at his peril to have the goods forthcoming according to the terms of the receipt.[92]

7. Release and Discharge of Receiptor — a. Who May Release. As a rule, the attaching officer[93] may release the receiptor from liability, but where he has made an equitable assignment of the receipt to the creditor he is no longer competent to do so.[94] So too the attaching creditor may release the receiptor from liability by releasing his judgment against the debtor; but it has been said that he cannot do so while he retains such judgment, and has taken the necessary steps to perfect his lien under his attachment.[95]

b. What Matters Will Release or Discharge — (1) Death of Live Stock. Where live stock which has been attached and receipted for dies without the receiptor's fault, before the time limited for its delivery, he is released from liability.[96]

The law recognizes the receiptor's right to redeliver to the debtor, and then considers his receipt as in effect a contract to pay the demand upon which the property was attached, as he is in such case liable only to that extent. If plaintiff fails to recover a judgment, the receiptor is discharged. Whitney v. Farwell, 10 N. H. 9. See also Webster v. Harper, 7 N. H. 594.

Effect on attachment lien —As between the officer and the debtor, an attachment is not dissolved by taking a receipt and allowing the property to pass back into the hands of the debtor; as to third persons, without notice, the attachment is dissolved. Mitchell v. Gooch, 60 Me. 110; Small v. Hutchins, 19 Me. 255; Robinson v. Mansfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 139; Buzzell v. Hardy, 58 N. H. 331; Rowe v. Page, 54 N. Badge of fraud.—Where plaintiff receiptor delivered the property to a minor son of defendant to keep and care for, and the son immediately put them back upon the farm of the father visibly in the same situation as they were when attached, it was held that this constituted a badge of fraud in relation to a subsequent creditor of the father and would be conclusive evidence of fraud, unless explained by most satisfactory reasons. Burrows v. Stoddard, 3 Conn. 160.

Competency of receiptor as witness.— Where personal property was attached by a deputy sheriff, and at the request of defendant a third person receipted therefor, who agreed to indemnify the officer against the consequences of intrusting the property to him, and the property was delivered by the receiptor to defendant, it was held that the receiptor was interested in the event of the suit, and was therefore incompetent as a witness for defendant. Pollard v. Graves, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 86.

93. Release by sheriff of receiptor to deputy.—Where personal property was attached by a deputy sheriff, and, at the request of defendant, a third person receipted therefor and agreed to indemnify the officer against the consequences of intrusting the property to him, the property was delivered by the receiptor to defendant and the sheriff released the receiptor and discharged the attachment, it was held that the receiptor was not made a competent witness in the suit thereby, for the lien of the attachment having been discharged by the redelivery of the property to defendant, the receiptor became personally responsible on his obligation to the deputy sheriff, which responsibility the release of the sheriff did not affect. Pollard v. Graves, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 86 [distinguishing Baker v. Fuller, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 318, on the ground that in the latter case the property had been delivered by the deputy sheriff to defendant for safe-keeping only, and the attachment had not been discharged].

(II) Discharge of Officer. Where the officer's liability for attached property has been discharged, the receiptor is not bound to deliver it to him or to account to him therefor in any way.[97]

(III) Dissolution of Attachment. Upon the dissolution of the attachment the receiptor is relieved of his liability, if the attached property has gone back into the hands of the owner.[98]

(IV) Execution Against Body of Debtor. The liability of a receiptor for goods attached which have not been delivered up by him upon seasonable demand is not discharged by the subsequent commitment of the debtor on the execution.[99]

(V) Forbearance to Enforce Receipt. An agreement between plaintiff and defendant in an action in which the property has been attached and receipted for to the officer by a third person, that plaintiff shall not enforce the receipt until after a specified time, and a forbearance to enforce it accordingly, will not discharge the receiptor from his liability to the officer, although the agreement is made without his consent or authority.[1]

(VI) Increase of Liability. A receiptor of attached property is not discharged from liability upon his receipt by any proceedings in the action in which the receipt is given which do not increase his liability or modify, to his prejudice, his contract, as expressed in the receipt.[2]

(VII) Insolvency or Bankruptcy of Debtor. Where an attachment has been dissolved by the insolvency or bankruptcy of the debtor a receiptor for the attached property is discharged from liability upon his undertaking, if the property has gone back into the hands of the debtor, or if he delivers it to the assignee,[3] unless there is an order of court continuing the attachment for the benefit of the latter.[4]

Commitment before reasonable time for delivery.— But in Jameson v. Ware, 6 Vt. 610, it was held that if after demand and before a reasonable time for delivery the debtor be committed on the execution and no alias is taken out the receiptor is excused from any delivery on that demand.

Amendment of writ.— The amendment of an action originally brought against two, by striking out the name of one of them, does not tend to increase the liability of the receiptor and will not discharge him from his responsibility. Smith v. Brown, 14 N. H. 67. See also Miller v. Clark, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 412, where the amendment was by filing a new count for the same cause of action contained in the original writ, and it was held that this did not discharge the receiptor.

See, generally, BANKRUPTCY; INSOLVENCY.

Effect of fraud.—Where a debtor's goods have been attached and delivered to a receiptor prior to the debtor's discharge in bankruptcy, which, on being pleaded in bar of the suit, is declared void for fraud, the receiptor is liable to the officer on the receipt for the goods. Ives v. Sturgis, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 462.

Rights of trustee.—The purpose of the Connecticut act of 1860 (Conn. Gen. Stat. (1888) § 524) was to provide for the delivery to the trustee of the property actually taken, and that only, or its actual value, not to transfer to him any rights of the attaching creditor. Therefore a receiptor is not liable except so far as the property or its value has come into his hands. Fowler v. Bishop, 31 Conn. 560.

4. Parker v. Warren, 2 Allen (Mass.) 187.

(VIII) PAYMENT OF JUDGMENT. The payment of the judgment obtained in the action discharges a receiptor from liability upon his undertaking.[5]

(IX) REDELIVERY OF PROPERTY TO OFFICER. The redelivery of the receipted property to the officer, upon demand, discharges the receiptor from liability.[6]

(X) SALE BY CONSENT OF PARTIES. A sale of attached property by mutual consent of the officer, the attaching creditor, debtor, and receiptor, is an implied rescission of the contract evidenced by the receipt.[7]

(XI) SUBSEQUENT ATTACHMENT. A receiptor is discharged by the officer's taking the property into his own hands on a second attachment,[8] or by the levy of a subsequent attachment and sale upon execution, at the instance of plaintiff, or his attorney, after the first attachment.[9]

8. ACTION TO PROTECT POSSESSION. Although it has been held to the contrary,[10] the weight of authority is to the effect that a receiptor has such a special property in the goods receipted for by him that he may maintain an action against a person unlawfully interfering with his possession,[11] or that of his agent or servant.[12] Such an action may also be brought by the attaching officer.[13]

9. ACTION ON RECEIPT — a. In Whose Name Brought. An action against a receiptor of attached property for failure to redeliver on demand or to pay the stipulated amount should ordinarily be brought by the officer to whom the receipt was given,[14] or in his name for the benefit of the creditor or owner;[15] but where a receipt is taken by a deputy he may himself sue,[16] or suit may be brought by Payment pending suit on receipt.— Payment of the judgment by the debtor pending the action on the receipt cannot be set up in bar. Such payment is properly considered in the question of damages, but beyond that can have no legitimate effect to defeat a cause of action existing at its commencement. Stewart v. Platts, 20 N. H. 476.

Relief in equity.—Where a judgment is obtained against one who has given a receipt for attached property for the full amount of the creditor's claim, equity will relieve him from payment on the judgment of such amounts as may have been paid by the attachment defendant prior to its rendition. Property retained by debtor upon given security.— If property attached is allowed to remain in the possession of the debtor on security being given under the Maine statute of 1821, c. 60, § 34 (providing for the retention by the debtor of horses, neat cattle, etc., which have been attached, upon his giving security to the attaching officer) and they are afterward attached by another officer on another writ and removed, the owner cannot, either as bailee of the first attaching officer or as receiptor to him for the property, support an action of replevin for the property against the second attaching officer or his bailee. The first attaching officer may maintain a suit for the removal if prejudiced thereby. Brown v. Crockett, 22 Me. 537.

A person specially authorized to serve a writ, who serves the same by attaching property and delivers the property to a receiptor, may maintain an action upon the receipt against such receiptor in his own name, if the receiptor, after due demand by a legal officer, refuse to deliver the property to be disposed of upon the execution. Maxfield v. Scott, 17 Vt. 634.

his principal.[17] The attaching creditor acquires no such interest in the property as to give him a right of action against the receiptor.[18]

b. Form of Action. If the officer's liability for the goods continues, and the bailee refuses to deliver them on demand, or has converted them before demand, he is liable to the officer in assumpsit on his undertaking to keep the goods and deliver them on demand, or in trover for the conversion.[19] An action on the case will also lie against a receiptor for failure to redeliver the attached property.[20]

c. Demand — (I) Necessity of — (A) Upon Receiptor. The necessity of a demand upon the receiptor for the redelivery of attached property, in order to fix his liability to the officer, is dependent upon the terms of the undertaking. Where the contract is simply to return the property upon demand,[21] a demand is a condition precedent to a right of action;[22] but where the promise is in the alternative, to redeliver on demand, or, if no demand be made, to do so within a specified time — usually within the life of the execution that may issue — no demand is necessary after the expiration of such period.[23] A demand is unnecessary where the receiptor has put it out of his power to return the property.[24]

(B) Upon Attaching Officer. The liability of the receiptor being measured by that of the officer,[25] a failure on the part of the officer holding the execution to make due demand upon the attaching officer, whereby he is released from liability, will discharge the receiptor.[26]

deputy sheriff bailed goods that he had attached, the sheriff's term of office and, of course, that of the deputy, expired before judgment was recovered, and the new sheriff seasonably demanded the goods of the deputy, it was held that he, being liable to the attaching creditor, might maintain an action for the property against the bailee. Stevens v. Eames, 22 N. H. 568. But trover cannot be sustained by an attaching officer against the receiptors of attached property where the property becomes materially damaged or lessened in value through their negligence merely, such negligence not being regarded as equivalent to a conversion. (II) Sufficiency[27]—(A) In General. A "legal demand" means a demand properly made as to form, time, and place, by a person lawfully authorized, and may be made before or after judgment in the suit in which the property has been attached.[28]

(B) By Whom Made. A demand on a receiptor for the redelivery of attached property is regularly made by the officer to whom the receipt was given, or by his duly authorized agent;[29] but it may be made by any officer holding the execution and receipt, upon showing his authority,[30] and offering to return the receipt upon the redelivery of the property.[31]

(C) Upon Whom Made. A personal demand should be made upon the receiptor himself,[32] or, if he be dead, upon his personal representative,[33] although an unsuccessful demand made upon the wife of a receiptor, at his dwelling-house, during his absence from the state, has been held sufficient to charge him.[34] In the case of joint receiptors a demand upon one will be sufficient to charge all, in an action ex contractu,[35] but not in an action ex delicto.[36]

(D) Time of Demand. A demand may be made upon a receiptor for the return of attached property at any time within the life of the attachment lien. If not made within the statutory time within which execution must issue in order to the preservation of the lien, the receiptor is discharged upon the return of the property into the hands of the owner.[37]

Allen v. Carty, 19 Vt. 65, where it was held that if the execution is delivered to another officer and the property is demanded of the attaching officer in season to charge him, it is not necessary that it should also be demanded of the receiptor within thirty days after judgment.

Effect of equitable assignment.—Where an officer takes a receipt for property he has attached, and returns it with the writ to the attorney, who after judgment delivers the execution and receipt to another officer who makes demand upon the receiptor within thirty days after judgment, this will be sufficient to hold the receiptor without any demand upon the officer who attached the property. Cross v. Brown, 41 N. H. 283.

Reasonable demand.— The legal construction of a contract to deliver property on demand is that a reasonable demand is to be made. Higgins v. Emmons, 5 Conn. 76, 13 Am. Dec. 41.

Sufficiency of demand on officer.—As maturing the attaching officer's right of action against a receiptor, a demand of property attached, in whatever words made, upon the attaching officer, is sufficient if it inform him that the sheriff having the execution desires to obtain it from him. Hapgood v. Hill, 20 Me. 372.

29. Demand by deputy.—It is no valid objection to a demand for the return of attached property in the hands of a receiptor, that the sheriff's deputy called upon the receiptor to redeliver the article or, in default thereof, to pay according to his alternative stipulation. Foss v. Norris, 70 Me. 117.

30. Showing of authority.— Where an officer has attached property and delivered it to a receiptor, another officer on making demand upon the receiptor for such property must state by what authority he makes it. Phelps v. Gilchrist, 28 N. H. 266. See also Walbridge v. Smith, Brayt. (Vt.) 173.

Waiver.— Where an attaching officer takes a receipt for the return of the property to "his order," the authority of another officer to whom he has given the receipt and execution, to demand the property of the receiptor, if not questioned at the time of the demand, may be considered as admitted. Computation of time.— In computing the time within which demand must be made

(E) Place of Demand. The receiptor's dwelling-house has been held to be the proper place at which to make demand,[38] and if made elsewhere he is entitled to a reasonable time within which to make delivery.[39] The demand need not of necessity be made at the place where the property must be received.[40]

d. Declaration or Complaint. A declaration or complaint on a receipt taken by an officer for property attached on mesne process should contain sufficient averments to show the attachment, the preservation of the attachment lien, and a sufficient demand upon the receiptor, where such demand is necessary to fix his liability, together with his neglect or refusal to redeliver the property.[41] It need not set out the writ and after proceedings,[42] that the officer who served the original writ was therein commanded to attach any certain amount,[43] or that judgment or execution had been obtained against attachment defendant.[44]

e. Defenses and Estoppel — (I) In General. A receiptor to an officer in attachment can avoid liability only by showing that the officer is free of all liability to the debtor, or owner of the property, as well as to the attaching creditor.[45]

(II) Amendment of Writ. The amendment of the writ upon which property has been attached is not a defense in an action against the receiptor for such property, unless it has the effect of increasing his liability.[46]

(III) Application of Goods on Debt. It is no defense to an action on a receipt that the receiptor was the attaching creditor, and that the goods have been applied to the debt.[47] upon execution in order to the preservation of the attachment lien, the day upon which judgment is recovered is to be excluded. Thus, where judgment was recovered on April 16, it was held that a demand of the property bailed was seasonable where it was made on May 16 following. Stewart v. Platts, 20 N. H. 476.

40. Facts showing reasonable demand.— In Higgins v. Emmons, 5 Conn. 76, 13 Am. Dec. 41, where the demand was made at a place other than the dwelling-house of the receiptor, it was held that any facts which show a demand to be reasonable prove necessarily that it was made at the proper place.

41. Jones v. Gilbert, 13 Conn. 507; Baker v. Fuller, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 318; Cooper v. Cree, 4 Vt. 289.

Assignment of breach.—Where the declaration stated the promise on the part of defendant in the receipt to be a promise to deliver the goods to plaintiff, or some other proper officer, and the breach assigned was the neglect of defendant to deliver them to plaintiff, and the declaration showed that the execution for the satisfaction of which the goods were taken was in fact in plaintiff's hands, it was held that the assignment was sufficient especially after verdict. Jones v. Gilbert, 13 Conn. 507. Where the promise stated was to deliver the goods or pay the damages, and the breach assigned was that defendant neglected to deliver and pay, it was held that it was well assigned. Jones v. Gilbert, 13 Conn. 507.

Averment of demand.—Where goods attached by a deputy sheriff, having been deposited in the hands of a keeper to be forthcoming on demand, were subsequently delivered by the keeper to the assignee of the debtor, who had a right to them subject only to a prior attachment, and the sheriff, after the expiration of thirty days from the rendition of judgment, brought an action against the keeper for the goods, it was held that the declaration should aver that a demand of the goods had been made upon the execution of the attaching creditor within thirty days. (iv) Death of Debtor. Unless his estate has been represented insolvent in the probate court, the death of the debtor more than thirty days after judgment in the suit in which the attachment was made is no defense to an action brought by an attaching officer against a receiptor upon his receipt for the attached property.[48]

(v) Denial of Attachment and Receipt of Goods — Estoppel. The receiptor of attached property is estopped by his receipt to set up in defense to an action against him on his undertaking the insufficiency of the attachment,[49] or to deny his receipt of all the goods set forth in the contract.[50]

(vi) Error in Names of Parties. It is no defense to an action by an officer on a receipt given to him for property attached that the name of one of the parties was miscalled in the receipt, where it appears that the error was due to the carelessness of the receiptor.[51]

(vii) Excessive Levy. It is no defense to an action by an officer on a receipt that he has attached property to an amount greater than the writ directed.[52]

(viii) Exemption of Property. The fact that the property receipted for was exempt from attachment is no defense in an action on the receipt,[53] unless the debtor's possession has not been disturbed, or the property has returned to his hands.[54]

(ix) Failure to Levy Execution. Where the levy of an execution upon attached property has been prevented by the refusal of the receiptor to deliver up the property he is estopped to set up such omission as a defense to his liability upon the receipt.[55]

(x) Fraud on Receiptor. Actual fraud practised on a receiptor of attached property is a good defense to an action on his receipt.[56]

(xi) Insufficiency of Return. In an action against the receiptor for the value of goods attached on mesne process, he cannot defend on the ground of the insufficiency of the officer's return as to the description of the property attached.[57]

Mistake.— It is no defense in an action by an officer on a receipt for attached property that one of the receiptors supposed the suit was against Robert C. Wood, the son, when it was really against Robert C. Wood, the father, and an amendment of the writ by leave of court by adding the word "senior" to defendant's name was held not to discharge the receiptors. Hunter v. Peaks, 74 Me. 363.

(XIII) QUALIFICATION OF OFFICER. It is no defense to an action on a receipt to show that the attaching officer was not properly qualified, unless it appears that the suit is prosecuted solely for his benefit, and not for the benefit of the creditor in the suit upon which the attachment was made.[59]

(XIV) SET-OFF OF DEBTOR AGAINST CREDITOR. It is no defense in an action on a receipt for attached goods that defendant in the attachment suit has recovered judgment against the attachment creditor sufficient to satisfy the claim on which the goods were attached. Whatever the debtor's rights may be in such a case, the receiptor is not to be considered his agent, and cannot undertake to exercise them.[60]

(XV) TENDER. Where a specific valuation is affixed to each article attached the tender of the agreed amount by the receiptor is a good defense to an action on his receipt.[61]

f. Evidence and Burden of Proof. A receiptor will ordinarily be presumed to have done his duty in the care of the property and the burden of proof in an action on the receipt will rest upon plaintiff to show such a condition as will operate as a breach of the undertaking,[62] by such evidence as is competent, by reason of the relation and duties of the parties, according to the general rules of evidence.[63] Plaintiff's right to recover must depend upon the tenor of the receipt, and therefore where the receipt is lost and its contents are not shown, judgment must be rendered for defendant.[64] Defendant cannot, by parol evidence, alter or vary the terms of a written receipt,[65] but evidence on his behalf to show a release from liability is admissible.[66]

But see Crosby v. Leavitt, 4 Allen (Mass.) 410, where it was held that a judgment rendered against the estate of a person who had died pending a personal action against him, on summons served on an administrator appointed by a judgment of probate, while acting without jurisdiction, would not authorize an action upon an accountable receipt to the officer for the property attached on the writ.

62. Misfeasance — Destruction of property. — Plaintiff has the burden of showing that the property was destroyed through the misfeasance of the receiptor. Cross v. Brown, 41 N. H. 283, where the receiptor defended on the ground that the horses receipted for were dead at the time of the demand upon him, and it was held that the burden of showing the cause of their death was not upon him.

63. Proof of attachment. — The receipt itself is appropriate and proper evidence to prove the attachment and it is not necessary to produce the writ and the officer's return thereon. Potter v. Sewall, 54 Me. 142; Stimson v. Ward, 47 Vt. 624; Lowry v. Cady, 4 Vt. 504, 24 Am. Dec. 628.

Proof of demand. — In a suit by an officer upon a receipt given him for property attached, the officer's return upon the execution that he seasonably made a demand upon the receiptor is not an act required in his official duty and therefore is not evidence of a demand. Bicknell v. Hill, 33 Me. 297; Green v. Holmes [cited in Davis v. Miller, 1 Vt. 9, 12]. But the written acknowledgment of a receiptor upon the receipt, admitting a demand upon him at a certain date, is sufficient evidence thereof. Cargill v. Webb, 10 N. H. 199. See also Fowles v. Pindar, 19 Me. 420, where it was held that an admission of the receiptors on the back of the receipt of a "due and legal demand" was not sufficient proof of the continuance of the lien upon the property, or that the demand was made within thirty days from the rendition of judgment.

Proof of issue of execution. — Return. — The return of the officer upon the execution issued upon the judgment recovered in the suit in which the attachment was made is admissible in evidence to show the timely issue of the execution and an attempted levy on the property. Parker v. Warren, 2 Allen (Mass.) 187, where the officer was allowed to amend his return so as to make it show the necessary facts, and introduce it as so amended in evidence, after he had rested his case.

g. Measure of Damages — (I) In General. The measure of damages in an action on a receipt is the value of the goods receipted for, or the stipulated sum agreed to be paid in case of default.[67] Interest is recoverable from the time of demand.[68]

(II) When Part of Goods Seized Under Superior Title. In New Hampshire, where a part of the goods have been seized by one having a superior claim thereto, the measure of damages in an action against the receiptor for failure to return the balance of the attached goods is the difference between the value of those taken by him claiming the superior title, and the value stated in the receipt, without regard to the actual value of the goods withheld by the receiptor;[69] but where the goods retained by the receiptor, being the property of the debtor, are worth more than the sum stated in the receipt, and the debt secured by the attachment is greater than the same sum, that sum is the measure of damages for the receiptor's neglect to redeliver the debtor's property to the sheriff on demand.[70] In Vermont, in such a case, damages are to be determined by assuming the value of the whole property receipted to be the same specified in the receipt, and ascertaining the just proportion, at that assumed value, which the property retained by the receiptor would bear to the property for which he is not liable.[71]

(III) When Property Is Returned to Debtor. When the receiptor allows the property attached to remain in the possession of the debtor, the ordinary rule of damages in an action by the officer is the amount of the judgment and interest, and his fees and poundage, if the value of the property exceeds that amount; but if the value of the property stated in the receipt be less than the amount of the judgment, the costs, and fees, then the rule of damages is the value of the property as fixed in the receipt.[72] Where, however, the action is still pending against the debtor, upon the refusal of the receiptor to deliver the property attached, the officer may recover of him the full value of the property with interest from the time of demand made.[73]

D. Release by Direction of Parties. An attaching officer is justified in releasing from custody the attached property where the parties so direct.[74] The Competency of debtor as witness.—A debtor whose property is attached and who has again obtained possession of it, with the consent of the person to whom it has been intrusted by the attaching officer, is not under the common law a competent witness for defendant in an action brought by the officer against such bailee for not delivering the property. Davis v. Miller, 1 Vt. 9. Compare Fitch v. Chapman, 28 Conn. 257, where the attachment debtor was held a competent witness to show a sale by him to the receiptor previous to the attachment.

Nominal damages.— If there was a good cause of action against a receiptor at the time of the commencement of a suit upon his receipt, but this is lost by a failure to preserve the attachment lien, by judgment for defendant and a return of the goods to him, or by reason of a seizure of the goods under a paramount title, nominal damages may nevertheless be recovered. Valuation of specific articles.—Where property attached by a sheriff was delivered to a person for safe-keeping, each article being separately valued in the receipt given by the bailee, and the agent of the bailee had sold a portion of them, and tendered the residue to the sheriff who refused to accept them, it was held that plaintiff was entitled to recover only the estimated value of the articles sold. direction of the creditor or his attorney has also been held to justify the attaching officer in making such a release.[75]

E. Release on Security —1. Discretion of Officer Independently of Statute. Independently of statutory authority it is held that an attaching officer may, in his discretion, release attached property upon such security as he may deem sufficient.[76]

2. Bail. When the practice of requiring special bail was in vogue defendant might discharge an attachment by appearing and entering special bail to the action;[77] but the office of the process of attachment was to enforce defendant's appearance, for which purpose defendant was required to surrender himself into custody or file special bail.[78] The modern statutes governing attachments do not,

Foreign attachment is but a process by which to commence a personal action and it seizes property to compel an appearance. It can be dissolved upon entering bail and when dissolved the judgment is in personam. Albany City Ins. Co. v. Whitney, 70 Pa. St. 248.

78. Ferguson v. Ryder, 2 Ohio St. 493, under the statute relating to attachments against absconding debtors, holding that defendant must elect to have his property remain in custody, file special bail, or surrender himself before he could regularly plead. So in Alabama it was held, under the act of 1870, replevy of attached property could be effected only by giving special bail to the action as though defendant were taken under capias ad respondendum. Cummins v. Gray, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 397. See infra, XVI, B, 2.

Time to put in bail.— In Smith v. Pearce, 6 Munf. (Va.) 585, it was held that in an attachment against an absconding debtor defendant may put in special bail at the term when the attachment is returned and before judgment rendered, although he has been previously defaulted. And in Williams v. Haselden, 10 Rich. (S. C.) 55, it was held that defendant against whom, at the expiration of the usual rule to appear and plead, an interlocutory order for judgment has been entered, may, by putting in special bail to the action, before the next term after the entry of the order, entitle himself to an order to have the attachment dissolved and for leave to plead.

Under Md. Stat. (1715), c. 40, it was held that defendant had a right to come in at any time during the term at which the attachment was returnable, by giving bail and appearance under the capias to dissolve the attachment and plead to the action (Walters v. Munroe, 17 Md. 501), and a defendant in foreign attachment was held to have the whole of the second term to put in special bail to dissolve an attachment (Blaney v. Randel, 3 Harr. (Del.) 546). But under the Maryland statute of 1834, providing that an attachment against a non-resident should not however, contemplate the mere enforcement of appearance,[79] and special bail and imprisonment for debt are now generally abolished, but the release of attached property and the dissolution and discharge of the attachment is effected by statutory bonds, substituted for special bail.[80]

3. Effect of Appearance as Discharge of Attachment. Where defendant may discharge an attachment by the entry of special bail,[81] the mere abolition of special bail is held to leave the law in such condition that appearance alone is sufficient to discharge the attachment.[82] Where, however, the attachment is not merely for the enforcement of appearance, under the modern statutes, which require the giving of a particular bond in order to effect the dissolution of an attachment, or the release of the property, appearance and pleading to the action will not discharge the attachment,[83] notwithstanding special bail to the action is not required.[84]

4. Forthcoming, Replevy, or Dissolution Bonds — a. In General. Under the various statutes there are usually two ways, by either of which defendant in attachment may secure to himself possession of the property seized: (1) by the execution of a forthcoming or delivery bond, conditioned for the forthcoming of the property to respond to the judgment, or for the payment of the penalty of the bond to be discharged by the satisfaction of such judgment, or by the payment of the value of the property; (2) by the execution of a bond for the discharge of the attachment conditioned for, and binding the obligors to, the payment of the judgment which may be recovered against defendant in the action.[85] be dissolved unless defendant execute a bond, etc., it was held that this provision simply required the additional security of defendant's bond, but did not extend the time within which he must appear and did not permit him to appear at the second term and have judgment by default set aside and the attachment dissolved upon giving bond. Walters v. Munroe, 17 Md. 501.

79. See supra, II, B.

80. See Dunn v. Crocker, 22 Ind. 324 (where it was said that the attachment law at that time was much broader than formerly; that it authorized such proceedings against resident defendants in certain cases, and thus brought into existence a great number of causes where defendant actually appeared to the attachment suit); Lambden v. Bowie, 2 Md. 334; Boyd v. Buckingham, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 433.

A delivery bond is not special bail. Ramsey v. Coolbaugh, 13 Iowa 164. And in Indiana defendant, under the statute, might have executed a redelivery bond or he might have had an attachment discharged by executing an undertaking to the effect that he would appear in the action and perform the judgment of the court, and the two bonds were held distinct, so that one could not by averment be brought under the statute providing for the other. Smith v. Scott, 86 Ind. 346.

81. See supra, XIII, E, 2.

82. Garrett v. Tinnen, 7 How. (Miss.) 465. But later in Mississippi a forthcoming bond was required instead of the old bail-bond, to enable defendant to retain possession of the property and have it forthcoming to satisfy any judgment that might be rendered, under a statute which was enacted for the purpose of rendering efficient the process of attachment which had been reduced to little or no value by reason of the abolition of bail upon civil process. Gray v. Perkins, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 622.

83. Martin v. Dryden, 6 Ill. 187; Conn v. Caldwell, 6 Ill. 531; Lambden v. Bowie, 2 Md. 334. If defendant appears and pleads without giving security to release the property, the lien is not discharged, judgment for plaintiff binds the property (Littell v. Scranton Gas, etc., Co., 42 Pa. St. 500), and such judgment authorizes a sale of the property attached (Davis v. Megroz, 55 N. J. L. 427, 26 Atl. 1009).

A bond to appear and answer in the suit is not sufficient to entitle defendant to a release of attachment. He must give bond either that the property be forthcoming, or conditioned to pay any judgment recovered in the suit. People v. Cameron, 7 Ill. 468.

Phillips-Butorff Mfg. Co. v. Williams, (Tenn. 1900) 63 S. W. 185. And while defendant in attachment has the option to execute either one of the two bonds mentioned, it is held to be the better practice for the clerk to take the bond either in one form or the other, and not to insert both conditions. Richards v. Craig, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 457.

For whole or part of property.— Defendant may give a redelivery bond for the whole or a part of the property attached (Keith v. Moore, 3 Ohio Cir. Ct. 432, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 245); or he may apply for the discharge of the attachment as to the whole or a part of the property (Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9).

Substitution of bond for money.— Money deposited in court under a stipulation to abide the issue to discharge an attachment cannot be withdrawn and a bond substituted therefor. U. S. v. Hutton, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,435, 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 305, 8 Reporter 37. To same effect see State v. Young, 40 La. Ann. 203, 3 So. 722.

Duty of officer.— If an officer after having attached property is tendered the proper statutory security he is bound to surrender the property, and inasmuch as it is his imperative duty to do so the performance of such duty cannot be a breach of his official bond, if he performs it honestly and with due diligence to protect the rights of plaintiff. Wheeler v. McDill, 51 Wis. 356, 8 N. W. 169. See also Kohn v. Hinshaw, 17 Oreg. 308, 20 Pac. 629, where it was held that the word "may" in section 154 of Hill's code, providing that the sheriff "may" deliver property attached to defendant on his giving a bond, etc., is equivalent to the word "must," and when a sufficient undertaking is tendered to the sheriff under said section it is his duty to accept it and to release the property to the obligor.

Perishable goods or goods expensive to keep.— Articles attached which are liable to perish, to waste, or to be greatly reduced in value by keeping, or which cannot be kept without great expense, may be restored to the debtor, upon his giving bond to account for the appraised value thereof. Snow v. Cun-

constitute a sufficient consideration for an undertaking or bond executed to obtain such release.[86]

c. Time to Execute. A statute which provides for a bond to secure the judgment that may be recovered in the action and which allows the bond to be given at any time before final judgment must be construed to contemplate a bond given while the suit is in the stage which will admit of a prosecution to such final judgment.[87]

Real estate.— A forthcoming bond cannot be taken to release an attachment on real estate. Barton v. Continental Oil Co., 5 Colo. App. 341, 38 Pac. 432.

Bond in separate suits.— Where defendant in two separate suits appears to give bond, regularly he should give a separate bond in each suit. Hanness v. Smith, 22 N. J. L. 332, where the bond, under the circumstances of the case, was considered valid. In Walton v. Daly, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 601, however, it was held that under the provisions of the code there was no authority for accepting one undertaking in two actions for the purpose of discharging the attachment issued in each action. But in Irvin v. Howard, 37 Ga. 18, it was held that where several attachments were levied and but one bond given to replevy the property, judgment could be rendered against defendant and his sureties for the amount of the judgment in each case. See also Irish v. Wright, 12 Rob. (La.) 563. And under certain statutes which make the property of an insolvent debtor a fund available to all his creditors who may come in and prove their claims, a bond to discharge the attachment stands as security for all such creditors. Gray v. Sharp, 62 N. J. L. 102, 40 Atl. 771; Stanley v. Chamberlain, 43 N. J. L. 102; Pearce v. Hitchcock, 2 N. Y. 388.

In chancery.— Where personal property is attached under a bill in chancery, a defendant may replevy by giving the statutory bond. Richards v. Craig, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 457.

Construction.— Recitals in a statutory undertaking, conditioned for the redelivery of attached property, have the same effect and ought to be construed in the same way as bonds containing similar recitals, and are to be given the same construction as other writings obligatory. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339. But such a bond should be construed and enforced according to the language used, because a mistake on the part of the person executing the bond as to its legal effect cannot avail to avoid that construction of the instrument which the rules of law, as applied to the language used, requires. Moorman v. Collier, 32 Iowa 138; McCormack v. Henderson, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 541.

After return-day of writ.— The statute in Illinois contemplates the execution of a forthcoming bond at any time before final judgment, and such bond may be taken after the return-day of the writ and returned into court after the first day of the term at which the writ is returnable. Smith v. Packard, 98 Fed. 793, 39 C. C. A. 294.

After discharge in bankruptcy and special judgment for plaintiff.— An attachment made four months before proceedings under the bankruptcy act cannot be dissolved by a bond under the statute to secure such judgment as may be rendered against defendant after he has pleaded his discharge and a special judgment has been ordered for plaintiff to be enforced against the attached property. Johnson v. Collins, 117 Mass. 343.

Error to federal circuit court.— In Russia Cement Co. v. Le Page Co., 174 Mass. 349, 55 N. E. 70, it was held that a judgment by a circuit court of the United States in favor of plaintiff, which is superseded by proceedings in error in the circuit court of appeals, and by such court held erroneous and in accordance with its mandate set aside by the circuit court, is not a final judgment in the action within the meaning of the attachment statute which terminates the right of defendant to dissolve an attachment therein; that a bond given by defendant for that purpose after the entry of such judgment and during the pendency of the proceedings in error is operative to discharge the attachment and constitutes a valid obligation.

and sufficiency of a bond given thereunder for the release of attached property, and a substantial non-compliance with the statute will invalidate the bond, at least for the purposes of the particular statutory remedy thereon,[89] or for the purpose of accomplishing the release of the property or the discharge of the attachment.[90]

(II) Substantial Sufficiency — Imperfect Recital or Clerical Error. An imperfect recital of preliminary facts, the suit being accurately described and the condition stated with substantial accuracy, or a mere clerical mistake, as by the transposition or substitution of the names of the parties, will not invalidate the bond.[91] Substantial compliance with the statute is all that is required.[92]

Condition.—The bond must express the condition required by the statute. Lowenstein v. McCadden, 54 Ark. 13, 14 S. W. 1095; Moody v. Morgan, 25 Ga. 381; Allerton v. Eldridge, 56 Iowa 709, 10 N. W. 252; Morange v. Edwards, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 414.

Consideration.— Release of attached property is sufficient consideration for the bond, if any is necessary, and no consideration need be inserted therein. Bildersee v. Aden, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 175. See also Lightle v. Berning, 15 Nev. 389.

Matters admitted by execution of bond need not be recited. Thus where the statute permits defendant, or other person in whose possession the property is found and attached, to give a forthcoming bond, a bond is sufficient although it does not show that the property was found in the possession of the obligor. Hoshaw v. Gullett, 53 Mo. 208.

Revenue stamp.— A bond to discharge an attachment does not require a stamp under the revenue laws. Sampson v. Barnard, 98 Mass. 359; Bowers v. Beck, 2 Nev. 139.

90. A bond to appear will not release the attachment, where the statute requires a bond that the property be forthcoming or conditioned to pay the judgment to be recovered. People v. Cameron, 7 Ill. 468.

91. Hewes v. Cooper, 115 Mass. 42; Leonard v. Speidel, 104 Mass. 356; Hudson v. Lamar, 74 Mo. App. 238, which last case held that it is immaterial that the real owner of the property is designated as the surety and the surety is designated as the principal, as the bond is the bond of each and both are equally bound.

Mistaken recital as to court.—A misrecital as to the court in which the action is pending will not relieve the sureties from their obligation on a bond for the release of attached property. Ripley v. Gear, 58 Iowa 460, 12 N. W. 480.

Mistaken recital as to process levied.— The validity of a forthcoming bond, under Ala. Code (1886), § 2523, is not affected by the fact that it erroneously recites the levy of an execution, when the levy in question was that of an attachment, where it shows on its face that it was given for the forthcoming of certain property "levied on," and claimed as exempt, identifying the contest respecting the pendency of which it was given, and showing that the obligors bound themselves to the forthcoming of particular property involved in such contest. Troy v. Rogers, 116 Ala. 255, 22 So. 486, 67 Am. St. Rep. 110.

Misnomer.—It is error to quash a forthcoming bond on motion, simply because the name of the obligee therein has been misspelled, or so written as to make it doubtful as to the person intended. Ambach v. Armstrong, 29 W. Va. 744, 3 S. E. 44 [citing State v. Halida, 28 W. Va. 499].

92. Hoshaw v. Gullett, 53 Mo. 208.

Surplusage will not defeat the effect of an instrument as a statutory bond. A bond conditioned to perform the judgment in the action "touching the attachment herein," was held to be in effect a good statutory bond, and the words above quoted not being in the statute were regarded as surplusage. Endress v. Ent, 18 Kan. 236.

Language expressing what the law implies. — It is no material departure from the statute permitting defendant to enter into a recognizance to pay the judgment, with sureties, that the condition is that the principal, the defendant in attachment, as well as the sureties, shall pay whatever judgment may be rendered in the attachment case, as this expresses no more than what is legally implied. Eimer v. Richards, 25 Ill. 289.

Instrument must furnish evidence of inadvertence.— Where a bond is bad as a statutory obligation the suggestion that the omis-

(III) VALIDITY AS COMMON-LAW OBLIGATION.[93] A voluntary obligation for the release of attached property is a valid common-law obligation,[94] and although an undertaking may be defective as a statutory bond or for the purposes of the statutory remedy, yet if voluntarily entered into and supported by sufficient consideration it is good as a common-law obligation and may be enforced as such.[95]

(IV) EXECUTION — WHO MAY MAKE. Who may execute a bond for the redelivery of attached property is usually fixed by the statutory provisions relating to such bond, which provisions often contemplate the giving of a bond by defendant, his attorney, or agent, or even by a stranger or person in whose possession the property may be found.[96] An undertaking signed by the surety

sion of a statutory word was inadvertent is not tenable where there is nothing in the instrument to support such an inference, and a statement in the beginning of the bond that defendant desired to discharge the attachment on giving security, according to a particular section of a statute, designating the page, will not avoid the difficulty where no authorized edition of code or statute contains any provision for the giving of security at the page and section mentioned. Texas.— Colorado City Nat. Bank v. Lester, 73 Tex. 542, 11 S. W. 626, holding that if the property is replevied under a bond which is in a sum less than the law requires, the obligors are nevertheless liable to the extent of the value of the property in an action on the bond.

But see Moody v. Morgan, 25 Ga. 381 (where the surety moved to be discharged from a bond "for the amount of the judgment and all costs that he may recover in said case in the event said boat is not delivered on the day of sale," and the action of the trial court in overruling the motion was reversed, because the statutory bond which the officer was required to take was for the payment to plaintiff of the amount of the judgment and costs that he might recover absolutely, without any condition, whereas the obligation taken was for the forthcoming of the property on the day of sale); Morange v. Edwards, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 414 (where it was held that a bond to discharge an attachment in the marine court, under the statute then prevailing, not conditioned for the appearance of defendant or for the production of the attached property, to answer an execution, but for the payment by the obligee of any judgment which might be obtained in the action, was unauthorized by law and void; that it was not a voluntary undertaking, but was taken colore officii).

Construction according to intent of statute. —Although a bond is not strictly an undertaking such as is contemplated by the statute, in an action on the bond it will be construed in the same manner as a bond under the statute and will be read in the light thereof and interpreted according to the meaning and intention of the parties. Heynemann v. Eder, 17 Cal. 433.

96. One of two defendants.— If a defendant desires to release his own property only alone has been held to be the act of defendant under the statute requiring defendant to give an undertaking for the discharge of the attachment.[97]

(v) Obligee in Bond. Whether the officer levying an attachment or plaintiff in attachment should be named as the obligee in a bond to discharge the attachment, or to have the property forthcoming, depends entirely upon the statute. The bond must conform to the statutory requirement in this regard, else it will be bad as a statutory bond, notwithstanding if voluntarily entered into it may be good as a common-law undertaking.[98]

from attachment and escape liability for the judgment that may be rendered against his co-defendant he may give a bond simply to secure such judgment as may be recovered against himself. Central Mills Co. v. Stewart, 133 Mass. 461. But upon the attachment of the effects of each of two joint debtors it is held that bail will not be received if one only could discharge his separate goods. Magee v. Callan, 4 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 251, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,942.

Defendant, agent, or attorney.— Cummins v. Gray, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 397, construed the particular statute to permit goods taken in attachment for sums exceeding the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to be replevied only by defendant in attachment, his attorney, agent, or factor.

Joint owner.— Under Mass. Rev. Stat. c. 90, §§ 73, 74, an officer who has attached joint property in an action against one of two tenants in common is required to deliver the property to the other part owner, upon his request, and upon his giving to the officer a sufficient bond to restore the same, or pay the appraised value thereof, or to satisfy any judgment that might be recovered in the suit in which said property is attached. Reed v. Howard, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 36.

Stranger.— Replevy under statute by stranger in the absence of defendant, the former acting for the benefit and becoming the bailee of the latter to whom the property must be delivered upon demand. Rhodes v. Smith, 66 Ala. 174; Kirk v. Morris, 40 Ala. 225; Kinney v. Mallory, 3 Ala. 626.

Where two or more strangers offer to replevy goods taken under an attachment the sheriff necessarily has a discretion in choosing between them but should in every instance consult the interest of defendant. Kirk v. Morris, 40 Ala. 225.

Discharge of attachment.— A stranger to the suit cannot procure the discharge of the attachment, although he has an interest in the attached property, but an order discharging the attachment upon motion of the stranger is voidable only and discharges plaintiff's lien until it is vacated. Kling v. Childs, 30 Minn. 366, 15 N. W. 673.

Ratification of unauthorized act of agent.— One sued on an undertaking for the release of an attachment may be liable by reason of his ratification of the unauthorized act of an agent in executing the bond, and a parol ratification will bind defendant, although the instrument was executed under seal where the seal was not necessary. Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103, 54 Pac. 634.

(Ala.) 493; Adkins v. Allen, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 130 (both holding that a replevy bond conditioned for the return of the property, or for the payment of such judgment as should be rendered, should run to the officer).

Colorado.— Stevenson v. Palmer, 14 Colo. 565, 24 Pac. 5, 20 Am. St. Rep. 295, under statute requiring a bond to deliver property to the officer or to pay its value, to run to plaintiff.

Iowa.— Delivery bond payable to plaintiff in attachment. Jones v. Peasley, 3 Greene (Iowa) 52.

Kansas.— Johnson v. Weatherwax, 9 Kan. 75, holding that a forthcoming bond running to the officer instead of to plaintiff, as required by the statute, cannot be supported as a statutory bond, but may be good nevertheless as a common-law obligation.

Michigan.— Forrest v. O'Donnell, 42 Mich. 556, 4 N. W. 259, forthcoming bond to officer.

Mississippi.— Phillips v. Harvey, 50 Miss. 489, under statute requiring replevy bond, conditioned to have the property forthcoming, or in default thereof to pay and satisfy the judgment to the extent of the value of the property, to be payable to plaintiff.

Nebraska.— Dewey v. Kavanaugh, 45 Nebr. 233, 63 N. W. 396, forthcoming bond to plaintiff, conditioned to have forthcoming the property or its appraised value to answer the judgment of the court.

New York.— Morange v. Edwards, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 414, under statute requiring a bond to discharge an attachment in the marine court, to be payable to the officer.

Bond payable to assignee of claim.—A bond by a debtor under a statute relating to absconding, concealed, and non-resident debtors is good, although payable to the assignee on the demand in suit, he having instituted the proceeding by attachment in his own name. Besley v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 482.

Bail-bond.— Where the statute authorizes the defendant to replevy by giving a bail-bond, without prescribing that the bond shall be payable to the sheriff, as a bail-bond must be payable to the sheriff, a bond under the statute, payable to plaintiff, conditioned for the appearance of defendant, is not sufficient to entitle the latter to appear and plead to the action. Barry v. Sinclair, 61 N. C. 7.

e. Approval of Bond — Order of Discharge — (i) In General. The statutes which fix the method of obtaining the release of attached property also fix the manner in which the bond for that purpose shall be approved. Thus the officer is authorized or required to relinquish possession of the attached property upon the execution of a bond to be approved by him,[99] or the discharge of the attachment is procured by the execution of a bond, to be approved by the court or judge, upon which an order of discharge or dissolution is entered.[1] If the bond is not approved as required by the statute it is not a stat-

Defect cured by pleading.—Where an undertaking was defective because not made payable to plaintiff, and a copy of the instrument was set out and made a part of the complaint, it was held under the statute in Indiana that the defect was cured. Moore v. Jackson, 35 Ind. 360.

99. Dewey v. Kavanaugh, 45 Nebr. 233, 63 N. W. 396 (holding that a forthcoming bond must be approved by such officer and that the clerk is not authorized under the statute to perform this function); Cortelyou v. Maben, 40 Nebr. 512, 59 N. W. 94 (holding that while a forthcoming bond must be approved by the officer such approval need not be indorsed on the bond); Phillips v. Harvey, 50 Miss. 489 (forthcoming bond); Upton v. Philips, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 215 (replevy bond, payable to plaintiff, conditioned to pay the debt, etc., or the value of the property, etc.).

Before or after return — By sheriff or clerk.—Where nothing appears but that the bond was taken by the clerk the court will presume that the writ had been returned to his office, or the return-day of the writ had not arrived. Morrison v. Alphin, 23 Ark. 136.

Acceptance by sheriff who is plaintiff.—Where a constable executes an attachment and the sheriff, who is plaintiff, accepts the bond given to discharge the attachment, this will not vitiate it, defendant having received the property; and such acceptance is not against the rule prohibiting an officer from executing process in his own case. Forbes v. Navra, 63 Miss. 1.

Number of sureties.— Under a statute requiring a bond for the release of attached property to be executed by such sureties as may be approved by the officer a bond executed by one surety is sufficient. Ward v. Whitney, 8 N. Y. 442.

Qualification of surety for benefit of sheriff. — Where the particular qualification of a surety is for the benefit of the sheriff, as that the surety shall be a freeholder, the liability of the sureties on the release bond taken by the sheriff is not affected by the fact that a cosurety is not a freeholder. Gibbs v. Johnson, 63 Mich. 671, 30 N. W. 343.

Remedy on bond as indicating qualification of sureties.— A statute giving to the creditor a remedy by scire facias or debt on a bond to release an attachment, either of which would be imperfect if the sureties were nonresidents, it was held that they must be residents of the state. Choate v. Stark, 18 N. H. 131.

Louisiana.—McCloskey v. Wingfield, 32 La. Ann. 38. When a judge has granted an order authorizing defendant to release writs of attachment and sequestration on bond, which order has not been executed, he may order the suspension of its execution until hearing of the parties, when he discovers reason to believe that it was improvidently granted. Lallande v. Crandell, 38 La. Ann. 192.

Massachusetts.— See Sampson v. Barnard, 98 Mass. 359. Under Mass. Pub. Stat. (1882), c. 161, §§ 122, 126, a bond to dissolve an attachment was to be approved by plaintiff, his attorney, a master in chancery, a justice of a court of record, a police justice, a municipal court, or commissioner of insolvency when the attachment was made within the jurisdiction of such justice or commissioner. It was held that the bond to dissolve an attachment may be approved by plaintiff or his attorney after the obligor has called upon a magistrate and has failed to secure his approval of the bond. Daley v. Carney, 117 Mass. 288.

Minnesota.— Rachelman v. Skinner, 46 Minn. 196, 48 N. W. 776. The judge may excuse compliance with the rule of court requiring a bond to be acknowledged by the sureties, and an order discharging an attachment is appealable. Gale v. Seifert, 39 Minn. 171, 39 N. W. 69.

In term-time or vacation.— Under some statutes the bond is to be approved by the court in term-time, or if in vacation and before return, by the sheriff, or if in vacation and after return, by the clerk. See Budd v. Durall, 36 Iowa 315; Hartwell v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 200; Shelden v. Sharpless, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1, 1 West. L. Month. 42.

If a written application for the approval of the bond is required it is not necessary that such application should be signed by the parties. Com. v. Costello, 120 Mass. 358.

The order discharging an attachment should utory bond,[2] although the obligors may bind themselves by entering into a voluntary undertaking, without the procurement of a discharge by order of court,[3] and they may be bound as at common law in the absence of approval, as required by statute.[4]

(11) Substitution or Addition of Sureties. It has been held that for the purpose of substitution courts of general jurisdiction have complete power to require change of sureties in a delivery bond,[5] and the court may compel defendant to furnish further sureties upon a bond to discharge the attachment.[6]

f. Effect — (1) On Lien of Attachment — (A) Forthcoming Bonds. A bond conditioned for the forthcoming or delivery of the property to satisfy any judgment that may be rendered does not affect or discharge the attachment,[7] or withdraw the property from the custody of the law so as to destroy the lien of the attachment, but the lien is preserved as if the property remained in the care state whether it applies to the whole or a part of the property, and if to a part, what part. Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9. Where the statute provides for the dissolution of an attachment, upon the approval and filing of a particular bond, the dissolution is effected by such approval and filing without any order of the court. O'Hare v. Downing, 130 Mass. 16.

Amount.— The law fixes the amount of the penalty of the bond. McCloskey v. Wingfield, 32 La. Ann. 38 (holding that it is the duty of the court to fix the bond with reference to the value of the property to be released). The court has no power to discharge an attachment upon nominal security, the statute requiring such security to be in double the amount of plaintiff's claim, or if the claim be greater than the value of the property, in double the amount of the appraised value of the property. Foley v. Virtue, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 407. And the court may require the undertaking, which is in a penalty equal to plaintiff's demand, to be increased so as to secure interest and costs, in the event plaintiff shall obtain a judgment, the statute requiring an undertaking to discharge an attachment to provide that defendant will pay plaintiff the amount of any judgment which may be recovered, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, with interest, etc. Morewood v. Curtis, 13 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 218. But where the undertaking is for the total amount claimed by plaintiff, the court is not bound to increase such amount in the absence of evidence showing that plaintiff would be prejudiced by its refusal to do so. Waeber v. Talbot, 81 Hun (N. Y.) 595, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 37, 63 N. Y. St. 426.

Waiver of right to justify sureties.—Under the statute in New York plaintiff had a right within a certain time after notice of filing of the undertaking, to give notice to the sheriff that he excepted to the sufficiency of the sureties, whereupon the sheriff could retain possession until objections were waived or the undertaking approved. It was held that plaintiff's attorney could not verbally consent to the entry of an order discharging the attachment, so as to waive plaintiff's right to require the sureties to justify. Moses v. Waterbury Button Co., 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 205, 46 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 528.

Affidavit of justification.— The rule excluding from consideration affidavits taken before the attorney of the party in the action applies to the affidavits of justification of sureties on a bond to discharge an attachment. Such affidavits are made in the action within the above rule. Bliss v. Molter, 8 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 241, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 112.

2. Louisville City R. Co. v. Masonic Sav. Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 416 (holding that such a bond cannot be enforced by rule of court); Fogel v. Dussault, 141 Mass. 154, 7 N. E. 17; Dewey v. Kavanaugh, 45 Nebr. 233, 63 N. W. 396; Shelden v. Sharpless, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1, 1 West. L. Month. 42.

In New Jersey the statute provides that the attachment debtor, on giving bond with surety to protect attachment creditors and entering his appearance to their actions, may on order of a court or judge thereof, in term-time or vacation, if it appear just to do so, have the attachment released, but liability of the obligors on such a bond does not depend upon the action of the court or judge in setting aside or refusing to set aside the lien of the attachment. 4. Williams v. Coleman, 49 Mo. 325; Shelden v. Sharpless, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1, 1 West. L. Month. 42.

5. Ramsey v. Coolbaugh, 13 Iowa 164, as to the power of the state court, upon granting an application for removal of the cause to the federal court, to require a new delivery bond in lieu of that given in the state court and to discharge the sureties thereon.

6. See McCloskey v. Wingfield, 32 La. Ann. 38; Jewett v. Crane, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 208.

Insolvency of surety.— The court has no power to order additional sureties where one of the sureties becomes insolvent. Dudley v. Goodrich, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 189.

of the officer.[8] The bond serves merely to insure the safe-keeping and faithful return of the property and substitutes the responsibility of the obligors in this respect for that of the officer.[9]

(B) Bond to Secure Judgment. A bond under the statute for the discharge of an attachment, not merely to have the property forthcoming, but conditioned to perform the judgment which may be rendered, dissolves the attachment and discharges the property from the custody of the law.[10]

See 5 Cent. Dig. tit. "Attachment," § 931.

Contra.—In Iowa a bond under the statute, conditioned for the return of the property or its value, was held to release the property from custody and take the place of the attachment lien. Austin v. Burgett, 10 Iowa 302; Jones v. Peasley, 3 Greene (Iowa) 52. And so under a statute providing for the procurement of the discharge of an attachment by the execution of such a bond the effect of the bond is to discharge the attachment. See Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240, 55 Pac. 804; Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47, 50 Pac. 1066; Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341; Schuyler v. Sylvester, 28 N. J. Property so released is subject to disposition under the lien, although after surrender it is seized under another attachment. Gray v. Perkins, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 622. But if, in the meantime, it is removed beyond the jurisdiction of the officer who issues the attachment and is there seized on another attachment it is held that the lien is destroyed. Bell v. Western River Imp., etc., Co., 3 Metc. (Ky.) 558.

Louisiana.— In Love v. Voorhies, 13 La. Ann. 549, defendant gave a bond under the statute, conditioned to "satisfy such judgment, to the value of the property attached, as may be rendered against him," etc., and it was held that although it might be different if the attachment is quashed by judicial order, the mere bonding of the property released only the seizure. But under a Mississippi statute which permitted a defendant in attachment brought for a debt not due to give a bond to pay the debt at maturity, after bond[13] or a bond conditioned to have the property forthcoming[14] is sufficient to operate as an appearance.

(II) APPEARANCE. As in the case of the entry of special bail,[11] where attachment defendant gives a bond for the dissolution or discharge of the attachment, or for the performance of the judgment, it operates as an appearance, so that thereafter the action proceeds in personam, and a personal judgment is rendered as in ordinary cases.[12] So, too, it has been held that the giving of a replevy

Cas. 100, the court in distinguishing between the vacation of an attachment and the discharge of an attachment by giving an undertaking under the statute said that the effect of a judgment vacating an attachment is an adjudication that the property is illegally seized, while if the attachment is discharged by the giving of an undertaking the attachment still lives, the undertaking being substituted in the place of the levy.

(III) Upon Right to Question Attachment. A bond for the redelivery or forthcoming of the property or which does not dissolve or discharge the attachment will not prevent defendant from moving thereafter to discharge the same.[15] So where the bond, without judicial order to quash it, operates only to release the seizure, defendant is not precluded by such bond from moving to dismiss,[16] and a replevy bond does not preclude defendant from traversing the truth of the grounds of attachment,[17] or from moving to dismiss the attachment.[18] A dissolution or discharge bond, or a bond conditioned to perform the judgment, operates to discharge the attachment altogether, rendering immaterial the validity of the grounds thereof[19] and making the obligors unconditionally liable.[20] The giving of such a bond is held to constitute a waiver on the part of attachment defendant of his right to move for a dissolution of the attachment thereafter,

United States.— Barry v. Foyles, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 311, 7 L. ed. 157, construing Maryland statute.

Void attachment.— In Planters' Loan, etc., Bank v. Berry, 91 Ga. 264, 18 S. E. 137, it was held that a bond given to dissolve an attachment on property of a national bank seized before final judgment is void under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5242, and therefore is not such an appearance as to render a judgment on the bond valid.

Necessity to prove joint ownership.— In Swift v. Tatner, 89 Ga. 660, 15 S. E. 842, 32 Am. St. Rep. 101, it was held that in order to obtain a verdict against all the defendants in an attachment, sued out against several as joint owners, plaintiff must establish the joint ownership as alleged, notwithstanding defendants have replevied the vessel after its seizure; that the right to replevy being given by statute, irrespective of the ownership of the parties, the replevin was no admission by them of plaintiff's demand or of their ownership.

18. Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18 (holding, however, that defendant after replevying the property can move to dismiss a void attachment, but not an irregular or erroneous one); Bruce v. Conyers, 54 Ga. 678 (which involved a motion on the ground of a defective affidavit, and where it appeared that the remedy was available although ordinarily a replevy bond dissolved the attachment, there being no other way but by giving the bond for defendant to retain the possession of the property).

In Morrison v. Alphin, 23 Ark. 136, it was held that after a bond to discharge the attachment there is no levy to quash, and a motion for that purpose made upon the ground that the property is not liable to attachment is demurrable.

Michigan.— Paddock v. Matthews, 3 Mich. 18. But a bond conditioned to release attached property, to pay any judgment that might be rendered, or to have the property ready to satisfy it, was held not a recognition of the title of defendants, and could have no force as a ratification of an unauthorized purchase by another. Woods v. Robertson, 31 Mich. 64. And in a proceeding to enforce the lien a bond conditioned to pay such sum as may be found to be a lien on the property, not to pay any judgment that may be rendered against the principal, is not a waiver of defects in the service of the writ. Payment of fees and charges.— Where a defendant whose live stock has been attached filed a proper delivery bond which was accepted, he was entitled to possession without payment of charges already incurred for keeping. Milburn v. Marlow, 4 Greene (Iowa) 17. In New York where an attachment is discharged by the giving of an undertaking which does not provide in terms for the payment of the sheriff's fees, defendant must pay them before he is entitled to a return of the property. Lawlor v. Magnolia Metal Co., 2 N. Y. App. Div. 552, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 36, 74 N. Y. St. 465, 3 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 100; Union Square Bank v. Reichman, 3 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 103 note. But it seems that if the fees are provided for in the undertaking defendant is entitled to a return of the property without their payment. Lawlor v. Magnolia Metal Co., 2 N. Y. App. Div. 552, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 36, 74 N. Y. St. 465, 3 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 100.

(B) Duty and Necessity to Redeliver to Defendant. When a bond in conformity with the statute is executed by defendant it is the duty of the officer levying the attachment to deliver to the former the property so levied upon,[23] and it is held that the bond is inoperative and that no liability attaches to the sureties unless the property is redelivered into the hands of defendant or his agent.[24]

g. Appeal, Supersedeas, or Stay Bonds. In the absence of statutory provision it is held that an appeal undertaking cannot be given the force of a forthcoming bond or be permitted to otherwise alter the status of the attached property,[25] the lien of the attachment, or the liability of the obligors on a delivery bond;[26] but, on the other hand, it has been held that a supersedeas bond which must be given to secure whatever judgment is rendered in a court of error is a substitute for plaintiff's security by attachment or by bond given by defendant to dissolve an attachment.[27]

The order discharging an attachment should state whether it applies to the whole or a part of the property, and if the latter, to what part, but it need not ordinarily contain directions as to the manner of redelivery. Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9.

23. Rogers v. Moore, 40 Ga. 386.

Return to place of removal.— An officer who has attached chattels and removed them for safe-keeping is not bound, on receiving the bond provided for in the statute, to return them to the place from whence he removed them. Clark v. Wilson, 14 R. I. 13.

Subsequent attachment of property surrendered to sheriff.— Where all creditors attaching during the pendency of the first suit acquire an interest in the forthcoming bond, the sureties on such bond are not liable for the value of the goods not surrendered to the sheriff when subsequent creditors only attach the property actually surrendered to him. Rutledge v. Corbin, 10 Ohio St. 478.

24. Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500; Eddy v. Moore, 23 Kan. 113 (holding that the fact of the release of the property and its seizure and sale on an execution does not change the rule); Couse v. Phelps, 12 Kan. 353; McGonigle v. Gordon, 11 Kan. 167; Cortelyou v. Maben, 40 Nebr. 512, 59 N. W. 94 (holding that if a forthcoming bond is objected to, the sureties are not estopped to show that the principal never received the property, that a physical redelivery is not necessary, and that if the officer points out the property and offers to surrender it, it is sufficient).

Release from attachment, not from officer. — On the other hand, where the practice under the statute requires an order discharging the attachment upon the execution of the proper bond, it is held that if the condition of the undertaking is for the release of the property from the attachment and not from the possession of the officer, the condition is complied with by an order discharging the attachment, and it is immaterial whether the property was redelivered to defendant or not. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367, 24 Pac. 1072; McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339. See also Adler v. Baltzer, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 514.

25. Collins v. Burns, 16 Colo. 7, 26 Pac. 145. In Spencer v. Rogers Locomotive Works, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 180, upon holding that, after judgment for plaintiff, defendant has no right to have the property released upon giving an undertaking, even though the proceedings have been stayed by an appeal, it was said that there was no such thing known in law as the redelivery of property levied upon when an appeal stays further proceedings upon the levy.

26. State v. McGlothlin, 61 Iowa 312, 16 N. W. 137 (holding that where a delivery bond is given for the release of attached property, judgment is rendered against attachment defendant, and he appeals and gives a supersedeas bond with the same sureties as in the delivery bond, the sureties are liable on both bonds, but their total liability cannot exceed the amount for which the principal is in default upon the judgment rendered against him); Williams v. Robison, 21 Iowa 498. See also Chrisman v. Jones, 34 Ark. 73. In Magill v. Sauer, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 540, it was held that a discharge of the lien of an attachment could only be accomplished by giving a bond in conformity to the provision of the statute for that purpose to perform the judgment or decree of the court: that the condition of an appeal-bond that appellant shall perform and satisfy the decree of the court "should the same be confirmed, or the appeal and supersedeas be dismissed," does not discharge the lien of the attachment. In this case the decree was reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings, and it was held that the appeal-bond had discharged its functions.

27. Russia Cement Co. v. Le Page Co., 174 Mass. 349, 358, 55 N. E. 70, where it was held, however, that if the amount of such a bond is to be fixed upon the theory that the security which defendant already has is to continue and that the supersedeas bond is merely to supplement such security, the supersedeas bond is not a substitute for the attachment or previous security, and does not dissolve the attachment or discharge the previous dissolution bond. This was under a construction of a federal court rule, requiring, in relation to supersedeas bonds, that "such indemnity, where the judgment or decree is for the recovery of money not otherwise secured, must be for the whole amount of the judgment or decree; . . . but in all suits where the property in controversy neces-

h. Liability and Discharge of Obligors — (i) In General. The liability of obligors on a bond to release attached property depends upon the purpose of the bond and the nature of the condition thereof. If the bond is for the payment of the judgment so that defendant in attachment cannot move independently of the bond for a dissolution, the obligors are liable for the judgment irrespective of what is done with the attachment.[28] If, however, the bond merely takes the place of the property, without affecting the attachment, then the subsequent dissolution of the attachment discharges the obligors on the bond.[29]

(ii) Conditions Precedent to Breach — (a) Delivery by Officer to Defendant. Where it is the duty of the officer to deliver to defendant in attachment the property released by bond, a failure so to deliver will discharge the sureties on the bond.[30]

(b) Judgment Requiring Satisfaction — (1) In General. There must be a disposition of the cause requiring payment of judgment, some claim adjusted for the satisfaction of which the property is required, or some order of court under which the production of the property becomes a duty, before liability under a forthcoming or dissolution bond can arise.[31] sarily follows the event of the suit, . . . or where the property is in the custody of the marshal; . . . or where the proceeds thereof, or a bond for the value thereof, is in the custody or control of the court, indemnity in all such cases is only required in an amount sufficient to secure the sum recovered for the use and detention of the property," as applied to supersedeas bonds upon the allowance of a writ of error to a circuit court by the circuit court of appeals, upon a judgment in the former for the recovery of money, secured by an attachment and by a dissolution bond.

Certiorari by defendant to review a justice's judgment in attachment, and a statutory bond for the payment of any judgment that may be rendered in the circuit court, dissolves the attachment (Vanderhoof v. Prendergast, 94 Mich. 18, 53 N. W. 792), and an appeal-bond conditioned substantially as a certiorari bond releases the property from the lien of attachment (Bushey v. Raths, 45 Mich. 181, 7 N. W. 802).

Where a bond is given for the performance of the judgment of the court and defendant in attachment waived objection to an order erroneously requiring the property to be produced, under which order he produced the property and allowed it to be sold as a mode of paying the judgment, the sureties on the bond cannot complain. Pennsylvania.— Borden v. American Surety Co., 2 Pa. Dist. 245, holding that where a foreign attachment is dissolved by entering bond after default judgment, the giving of a bond rendered such judgment a nullity, and liability on the bond could not accrue until a personal judgment was rendered.

Tennessee.— Morning v. Alexander, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606.

Conditioned to deliver if ordered on particular date.— Where the undertaking was for the delivery of property levied on "if so ordered by the court on the 16th of August, 1878," it was held that the object of the agreement was to secure the return of the property when it should be needed to satisfy any attachment which might be rendered in the cause, and that the fact that the judgment was rendered on a day subsequent to that named in the agreement is unimportant. Turner v. Armstrong, 9 Ill. App. 24.

Where other creditors may apply, under the statute, and have their claims adjusted, a bond, although conditioned for the return of the goods should judgment be rendered for plaintiff, is for the benefit of all such creditors and will be construed to refer to any plaintiff who, as applying creditor, has filed a declaration and recovered judgment. Hanness v. Smith, 22 N. J. L. 332.

Bond to pay debt at maturity.— In Church v. Henry, 17 La. 70, it was held, construing a Mississippi statute which authorized the giving of a bond to pay the debt at maturity, that after the execution of such bond the creditor could not proceed to judgment; that the dismissal of the suit did not avoid the bond, but that action could be brought thereon in case the debt be not paid at maturity.

(2) Character of Judgment — (a) In General. The judgment to secure the performance or satisfaction of which a bond is executed is ordinarily the final judgment under which plaintiff is entitled to be paid or defendant to be discharged.[32]

(b) Personal Judgment and Direction as to Attachment. Whether there must be a judgment or direction as to the attachment depends upon the condition of the bond. On the one hand a mere personal judgment is held insufficient upon which to predicate the breach of a bond to have the property forthcoming, or pay its value to the extent of any judgment which may be rendered,[33] and a condition to return the property if so directed renders an order of court for such delivery necessary.[34] On the other hand, if the redelivery bond releases the property

Nunc pro tunc entry of judgment.— A dissolution bond, conditioned for the payment of final judgment, is not rendered invalid by the fact that the final judgment is rendered nunc pro tunc as of a previous term. Russia Cement Co. v. Le Page Co., 174 Mass. 349, 55 N. E. 70.

Removal of a cause from a state to the federal court after the execution of a delivery bond does not so change or enlarge the liability of the sureties as to discharge them. The undertaking to have the property forthcoming to answer "the judgment of the court in said suit" does not mean the court in which the action was then pending, alone, but the court having jurisdiction which finally renders judgment. Ramsey v. Coolbaugh, 13 Iowa 164.

A reference, by rule of court, to arbitration, by consent of parties, is not a discharge of the sureties on a dissolution bond, as after such rule the cause remains in court subject to its power, and a judgment must be entered by the court. Seavey v. Beckler, 132 Mass. 203.

Judgment for plaintiff less damages on defendant's counter-claim.—Where, after execution of a delivery bond, defendant files a counter-claim for damages for wrongful attachment, and the jury assess damages therefor, but find plaintiff's claim to be just and render a verdict for him less defendant's damages, the property will not be discharged from the attachment, as the scope and spirit of the attachment laws appear to deny any dissolution of attachment after a trial and finding that plaintiff is entitled to judgment. Cole v. Smith, 83 Iowa 579, 50 N. W. 54.

Appeal by plaintiff without excepting to discharge.—Where defendant has judgment, the attachment is dissolved, the sureties discharged, and plaintiff appeals generally, without excepting to the order discharging the sureties, it is held that their liability is ended, notwithstanding plaintiff recovers on his appeal, especially where, upon the faith of their discharge, the sureties had given up indemnity furnished them by defendant. Barton v. Thompson, 66 Iowa 526, 24 N. W. 25.

Order quashing writ set aside.— Where an order quashing a writ of attachment was set aside at the same term it was held the surety on a forthcoming bond was not discharged. Hubbard v. Moss, 65 Mo. 647.

Non prosequitur set aside.— Under a bond conditioned to return the property if judgment is given for plaintiff, where judgment of non prosequitur ordered in the original suit was subsequently set aside and plaintiff finally recovered judgment the sureties were bound. Stanley v. Chamberlain, 43 N. J. L. 102. But in California it was held, construing the statute, that the sureties on a bond to discharge the attachment were relieved from liability, notwithstanding a judgment of nonsuit was set aside and plaintiff finally recovered judgment in the action. Hamilton v. Bell, 123 Cal. 93, 55 Pac. 758.

After vacation of original judgment.— In Massachusetts a bond given to dissolve an attachment does not bind the obligors to satisfy a judgment rendered after the original judgment has been vacated upon petition, under the statute which provides that no attachment made, or bail taken, shall be liable to satisfy such judgment, another provision of which requires a bond covering all that the original security covers before the first judgment is vacated. Dresser v. Cutter, 161 Mass. 301, 37 N. E. 176; Bush v. Hovey, 124 Mass. 217.

33. A judgment for sale of the property is necessary (Adams v. Jacoway, 34 Ark. 542; Wright v. Manns, 111 Ind. 422, 12 N. E. 160; Smith v. Scott, 86 Ind. 346; Fisher v. Haxtun, 26 Kan. 155); and where on the faith of a mere personal judgment against defendant the sureties on the delivery bond surrender any indemnity held by them, the subsequent entry nunc pro tunc of a judgment for the sale of the property will not revive their liability (Wright v. Manns, 111 Ind. 422, 12 N. E. 160). See also King v. Snow, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 73.

34. Brotherton v. Thomson, 11 Mo. 94.

Sufficiency of order.— The time and place to be fixed by the court in a judgment for the redelivery of property held by defendant under a forthcoming bond should be reasonable, and the court should not prescribe an impossible delivery as to time and place in order to compel a forfeiture of the bond. Dunlap v. Dillard, 77 Va. 847. In Wagner v. Romero, 3 N. M. 131, 3 Pac. 50, it was held that an

from the custody of the law or definitely fixes the liability of the surety, there need be no order of sale,[35] and the judgment need not recite that the attachment is affirmed;[36] and a bond conditioned to pay the judgment, which dissolves the attachment, renders the obligors unconditionally liable for the payment of any personal judgment that may be rendered against defendant in the action.[37]

(3) AGAINST WHOM — (a) IN GENERAL. A judgment against one other than the party named in a bond, for the satisfaction of the judgment against whom the bond is executed, is not sufficient to fix the liability on the sureties on the bond.[38]

(b) AGAINST ONE OF SEVERAL DEFENDANTS — aa. In General. The obligors are liable on a bond for the discharge of an attachment, conditioned for the payment of the judgment which may be recovered against defendants, although judgment is recovered against a part of the defendants only.[39]

bb. Bond by One of Several Defendants. Where the property of one of two defendants is seized, a dissolution bond which binds the owner to pay the final judgment in the action will render the obligors liable not only for a judgment against both order to deliver the property "at Las Vegas, New Mexico, at the court-house of San Miguel county," followed by an amendment on the original order, "it is furtner considered that the property attached in this cause be forthwith delivered to the sheriff of San Miguel county, and that the same be sold," sufficiently complied with the provisions of the statute. But it has also been held that where such bond is given the order of the court directing defendant to deliver the property need not specify any place of delivery. Weed v. Dills, 34 Mo. 483.

Conditioned to deliver if attachment is not dissolved.— If a bond be conditioned for redelivery if plaintiff recover judgment and the attachment be not dissolved, the obligors are not liable unless the attachment be not dissolved. Creswell v. Woodside, 8 Colo. App. 514, 46 Pac. 842.

Condition for recovery against assignee as garnishee.—An attachment was sued out after an assignment, levied upon the property, and the assignee summoned as garnishee. To obtain a surrender of property to himself the assignee executed a bond conditioned that if plaintiff in attachment should fail to sustain the attachment suit, or if he should sustain "his said suit so commenced by attachment" and obtain judgment against the assignee as garnishee, and the assignee should pay the amount of such judgment, the obligation should be void. A clause was added that by the term "judgment" was meant final judgment, and that the assignee would, in fulfilment of the condition, pay any judgment which might be rendered in the "attachment suit aforesaid" against the assignor, or against the assignee as garnishee. It was held that the contingency provided for in the condition was a failure on the part of the assignee to pay such judgment in the attachment suit as would reach the property attached, or in other words a judgment against himself and not merely a general judgment against defendant in the attachment suit. Hardcastle v. Hickman, 26 Mo. 475.

38. Caldwell v. Healey, 121 Mass. 549 (where property was attached in the hands of trustees, and a bond was given conditioned for payment of any judgment which plaintiffs shall recover "against or from the said . . . trustees," and a judgment was recovered against defendant, but the trustees were discharged. In an action on the bond, plaintiffs contended that the words "against or from the said . . . trustees" were senseless, and should be rejected as surplusage, but it was held that no recovery could be had upon the bond); Dale v. Heffner, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 217. See also infra, XIII, E, 4, h, (III), (D); XIII, E, 4, h, (III), (F).

Judgment not against obligors in form is sufficient to bind them to the extent of the judgment in favor of plaintiff, on a bond conditioned for the payment of such judgment as shall be rendered in plaintiff's favor against the obligors. Hunter v. McCraw, 32 Ala. 518.

On appeal by one defendant.—Where an attachment is issued against several defendants, judgment is rendered in favor of plaintiff against all, and, on appeal by one, judgment is rendered in his favor but against the other defendants by default, the right to sue on the appeal-bond becomes perfect. Pritz v. Drake, 6 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1127, 10 Am. L. Rec. 565.

defendants, but for judgment against the defendant alone who was not the owner of the property.[40]

(c) Execution. Where plaintiff obtains judgment and execution is issued and returned unsatisfied, the condition of the undertaking to discharge the attachment[41] or to have the property forthcoming to abide the final order of the court[42] is broken and the liability of the sureties attaches. Where special judgment against property released on a forthcoming bond is required, special execution demanding the sale of the property is necessary.[43] Where the bond is con-

Bond to prevent levy.— Sureties on a bond to prevent the levy of an attachment in a suit against several are liable, although judgment is rendered against one only. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37, 2 Pac. 727.

40. Way v. Murphy, 168 Mass. 472, 47 N. E. 500; Prior v. Pye, 164 Mass. 316, 41 N. E. 353. But where the property of one was attached and he gave a dissolution bond for the payment of the amount of plaintiff's recovery, which bond referred to the action as being against two defendants, it was held that the liability on the bond did not extend to a judgment recovered against the other defendant alone. Eveleth v. Burnham, 108 Mass. 374.

Where one of two joint owners of attached property gives a bond for the dissolution of the attachment, and judgment is recovered against the other by default, but the one who gives the bond successfully defends as to himself, the condition of the bond being to pay the judgment recovered by plaintiff, an action may be maintained against the obligors on the bond. Campbell v. Brown, 121 Mass. 516.

Where distinct causes of action against two defendants are joined under statutory authority in separate counts, and one of them gives a bond to dissolve an attachment on his property, conditioned to pay the amount that plaintiff should recover, the liability of the obligors does not extend to a separate judgment against the other defendant. Walker v. Dresser, 110 Mass. 350.

Discontinuance.— In Dalton v. Barnard, 150 Mass. 473, 23 N. E. 218, it was held that discontinuance as to one of several defendants in attachment would not discharge a dissolution bond given by them jointly. And in Inbusch v. Farwell, 1 Black (U. S.) 566, 17 L. ed. 188, it was held that sureties on a bond to dissolve an attachment in a suit against partners could recover from the firm the amount paid by them on such bond, although the suit had been discontinued against some of the partners for want of jurisdiction. But in Andre v. Fitzhugh, 18 Mich. 93, and Harris v. Taylor, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 536, 67 Am. Dec. 576, it was held that a discontinuance as to some of the defendants would discharge the sureties from liability on a bond given to prevent the removal of the property. And so it is held in Massachusetts that where plaintiff discontinues as to one of the defendants and summons in a new defendant without notice to the surety, the surety is discharged (Tucker v. White, 5 Allen (Mass.) 322), although defendant as to whom the action was discontinued was not a party to the bond (Richards v. Storer, 114 Mass. 101).

The usual mode of showing satisfaction of judgment where the bond is conditioned to satisfy such judgment as may be rendered is by the return of the officer on the execution. Huntress v. Burbank, 111 Mass. 213.

Delayed execution.— Sureties are not discharged by delayed execution, the liability being fixed by the judgment. Duer v. Morrill, 20 Ill. App. 355. And stay of execution by consent of the parties to the suit will not discharge the sureties. Preston v. Hood, 64 Cal. 405, 1 Pac. 487. See also Seawell v. Cohn, 2 Nev. 308.

42. Collins v. Mitchell, 3 Fla. 4. See also Stewart v. Lacoume, 30 La. Ann. 157.

Sufficiency of return.— A return showing that the officer could not, after diligent search and inquiry, find the principal or any of his property is sufficient to justify recourse to the release bond. McCloskey v. Wingfield, 32 La. Ann. 38. And where the return shows "no property found after demand of the parties" a surety on a release bond will be liable, although his witnesses testified that he notified plaintiff and sheriff that the property was in the court's jurisdiction, requested its seizure, and informed the officer where it was, the return showing that the sheriff, notwithstanding the information, could not find the property. Walden v. Philips, 11 Rob. (La.) 123.

By statute it is sometimes provided that upon the discharge of an attachment under the release or redelivery bond, a remedy against the sureties is available only after execution returned unsatisfied against attachment defendant. Brownlee v. Riffenburg, 95 Cal. 447, 30 Pac. 587. Such provision does not require the issue of an execution against a defendant who has made an assignment under an insolvency act before suit on the bond (Rosenthal v. Perkins, 123 Cal. 240, 55 Pac. 804), and does not apply to a bond good only as a common-law obligation for the payment of the judgment, not conforming to the statute (Smith v. Fargo, 57 Cal. 157; Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553).

43. Wright v. Manns, 111 Ind. 422, 12 N. E. 160.

Security in the nature of special bail.— Where security given to replevy property attached is considered in the nature of special bail, it is held that a plea that capias ad satisfaciendum did not issue against defendant in attachment should prevail. Gillaspie ditioned to pay the judgment, the liability of the sureties attaches upon the rendition of the judgment against defendant and the issue of execution is not a condition to the right to resort to the bond.[44]

(D) Demand. Where the undertaking is for the redelivery of property and expressly makes such delivery dependent upon demand, the obligee will have no right of action in the absence of a demand,[45] and sometimes the condition of the bond prescribed by the statute requires a demand of performance before a breach can be assigned.[46]

(III) DISCHARGE—(A) Surrender of Property or Payment—(1) IN GEN-

v. Clark, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 2. But where the statute provides for the surrender of the property by the officer, upon the execution of a bond in double the value of the property, or in the penal sum of the amount of damages laid in the writ, conditioned that the bond shall be void if at any time after final judgment in the action, upon request therefor, the value of the property shall be paid, or the goods surrendered to the officer who shall be charged with the service of the execution issued upon the judgment, it is held that, in so far as the validity of the demand made by the officer for the return of the property is concerned, it is immaterial that no valid execution has been then issued on the judgment. 45. Smith v. Jewell, 14 Gray (Mass.) 222, where the bond was for the delivery after judgment on demand. See also Foss v. Norris, 70 Me. 117, holding that where the officer delivers property upon a contract to pay a specified sum, or to redeliver it on demand, an action may be maintained on the contract either before or after rendition of judgment in the suit in which the property was attached, after a legal demand made for the redelivery, so long as he is under liability to the debtor or creditor for the property.

A surety upon a delivery bond, conditioned to deliver the property when and where the court may direct, is not entitled to have demand made upon him for delivery. Weed v. Dills, 34 Mo. 483.

46. Upon whom made.— Where a release bond is joint and several it is sufficient to make the demand upon the sureties alone, the principal not being sued on the bond. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47, 50 Pac. 1066. See also Smith v. Jewell, 14 Gray (Mass.) 222. But in Murray v. Ginsberg, 10 Colo. App. 63, 48 Pac. 968, it was held that demand must be made upon the principal defendant.

Coowner not joining in bond.— Where one of two joint owners of attached property gives a bond for the dissolution of the attachment, conditioned to pay the judgment which plaintiff may recover, and the defendant who gives the bond successfully defends as to himself, but judgment by default is taken against the other defendant, it is not necessary in order to maintain an action on the bond that execution should issue and demand be made on the defendant who did not join therein within thirty days after judgment was recovered against him. Campbell v. Brown, 121 Mass. 516.

Proper person to make demand.—Where the undertaking must be conditioned to deliver the attached property on demand to the proper officer, etc., the officer to whom the undertaking is given is the proper person to make the demand. Driggs v. Harrington, 2 Mont. 30. But if plaintiff recovers judgment and makes a demand for the return of the attached property under the condition of a bond that defendant will, on demand, redeliver such property, an action will lie on the bond without demand of the sheriff for the return of the property. Brownlee v. Riffenburg, 95 Cal. 447, 30 Pac. 587.

After removal of property from jurisdiction.— No demand is required for the redelivery of property which has been attached, where it has been removed from the jurisdiction by an insolvent defendant in the action who has left the jurisdiction. Driggs v. Harrington, 2 Mont. 30.

Levy of execution as sufficient demand.— Where, after the execution of a release bond conditioned to redeliver the property to the sheriff upon demand, the property is mortgaged, and after obtaining judgment plaintiff issues an execution, but the sheriff releases the levy and returns the execution unsatisfied, because the debtor and the mortgagee refuse to deliver the property, the levy of the execution is a sufficient demand. Mullaly v. Townsend, (Cal. 1900) 61 Pac. 950. See also Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556, 21 Pac. 971.

Refusal of payment — Immediate liability. —Where the undertaking for the release of an attachment is for defendant's payment of the judgment upon demand, the sureties being liable immediately on default of their principal under the statute, without demand or notice, plaintiff may sue them without waiting for the expiration of the day on which payment is demanded of, and refused by, defendant. Gardner v. Donnelly, 86 Cal. 367, 24 Pac. 1072.

ERAL. The obligors on a delivery bond may satisfy the condition thereof by delivering the property,[47] or if the condition is to perform the judgment and also to return the property if plaintiff should recover judgment,[48] or that defendant shall perform the judgment or the obligors will have the property or its value forthcoming,[49] it may be satisfied at the option of the obligors by the performance of either alternative condition, and payment or proper tender of the amount of plaintiff's demand and costs made by defendant will discharge the obligors on a bond given to discharge the attachment.[50]

(2) NECESSITY FOR REDELIVERY OR PAYMENT — (a) IN GENERAL. But a bond for the delivery up of property attached, in case of judgment against defendant, can be discharged after judgment against defendant, only by delivery of the property,[51] in whole,[52] and in the same condition as when surrendered to defendant;[53] or by the performance of the alternative condition to pay the debt

47. Guay v. Andrews, 8 La. Ann. 141; Reagan v. Kitchen, 3 Mart. (La.) 418.

48. Easton v. Ormsby, 18 R. I. 309, 27 Atl. 216, holding that such a bond under two separate sections of the statute might be satisfied by the performance of either condition.

49. Adams v. Jacoway, 34 Ark. 542; Kuhn v. Spellacy, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 278. The selection of the alternative lies with defendant and cannot be made by the court. Jones v. Stewart, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 61 S. W. 105.

50. Curiac v. Packard, 29 Cal. 194, holding that for the purpose of discharging the surety it was not necessary that the tender should be kept good.

Tender of judgment by surety.— So the surety is discharged if he tenders the amount due under the judgment recovered against the principal in the bond if the obligee refuses to accept the tender. Hayes v. Josephi, 26 Cal. 535.

Defendant charged as trustee for plaintiff. —Where in an action on a dissolution bond it appeared that defendants had paid a certain amount on an execution issued upon a judgment rendered in favor of another party against plaintiffs wherein defendants were summoned as trustees, which action was begun after that by plaintiff on the dissolution bond, it was held that defendants in the last action were not chargeable with interest during the pendency of the suit in which they were charged as trustees of the plaintiff. Huntress v. Burbank, 111 Mass. 213.

Levy on sufficient property to satisfy judgment.— Where the levy of an attachment is discharged by bond to perform the judgment, plaintiff may look to the surety without issuing execution on the judgment; but if the execution is issued and levied on sufficient property to satisfy the judgment, the voluntary release of the lien by plaintiff will discharge the surety. Reid v. Farmers, etc., Tobacco Warehouse, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1939, 44 S. W. 124.

51. Alabama.— Cooper v. Peck, 22 Ala. 406.

Arkansas.— Chapline v. Robertson, 44 Ark. 202, holding that such a bond can be satisfied only by delivery or offer to deliver the property by bringing it forward, pointing it out, and tendering it to the officer, and that to tell him where it is and to go and get it is not sufficient.

Colorado.— Edwards v. Pomeroy, 8 Colo. 254, 6 Pac. 829.

Iowa.— Jones v. Peasley, 3 Greene (Iowa) 52.

Oregon.— Norton v. Winter, 1 Oreg. 97.

Right to recover property to have it forthcoming.— If an attachment defendant holds the property under a forthcoming bond when it is seized on execution against him, he should replevy the property so as to be able to perform the conditions of the bond. Roberts v. Dunn, 71 Ill. 46. But as defendant alone is entitled to the possession the sureties cannot maintain replevin to recover the property if that right of possession is interfered with. Stevenson v. Palmer, 14 Colo. 565, 24 Pac. 5, 20 Am. St. Rep. 295.

Seizure under special execution.— If the property is seized and sold under a special execution issued and a judgment is recovered in the proceeding, the condition of a bond to have the property forthcoming for double the amount for which the warrant issued is satisfied, and the obligor in the bond has nothing to do with the question whether the property was subject to levy and sale. Hogan v. Shutler, 53 Ill. 487.

52. Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341; Bland v. Creger, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 509.

Judgment by one of several creditors.— Where, under the statute, upon the execution of a forthcoming bond defendant retains possession of the property, to be redelivered if any of the creditors applying to have their claims adjusted recovers judgment, the condition is broken if any one of such creditors recovers judgment and the property is not returned; and it is no defense that enough of the goods attached was returned to and levied upon by the officer to whom a fieri facias had been issued upon such judgment. Hanness v. Bonnell, 23 N. J. L. 159.

Substituted property.— The condition of a forthcoming bond cannot be satisfied by a return of substituted property. Pearce v. Maguire, 17 R. I. 61, 20 Atl. 98.

53. Creswell v. Woodside, (Colo. App. 1900) 63 Pac. 330 [reversing 8 Colo. App. 514, 46 Pac. 842] (holding that the return of property in a depreciated condition will ren-or value of the property.[54] If the bond is in discharge of the attachment, creating an unconditional obligation to pay a certain amount, the obligors can discharge themselves only by such payment when the necessary contingency arises.[55]

(b) WHERE CONDITION BECOMES ILLEGAL OR IMPOSSIBLE OF PERFORMANCE — aa. In General.— Where the condition of a forthcoming bond subsequently becomes illegal or impossible of performance the sureties are discharged from liability.[56]

bb. Impossibility of Performance Through Act of Plaintiff. Where plaintiff by his own act prevents the obligors from delivering the property and is thus himself the cause of the forfeiture, he cannot take advantage of it, and the obligors will be discharged to the extent that they are thus prevented from making delivery.[57]

(B) Levy of Subsequent Attachment. Where a delivery bond removes the der the obligors liable for the amount of the depreciated value); Smith v. Packard, 98 Fed. 793, 39 C. C. A. 294 (holding that it is not error to exclude evidence in behalf of defendant to show the diminished value of the property since giving the bond, no offer being made to show that the depreciation was not caused by any act of negligence by the principals in the bond who had the custody of the property). See also Schuyler v. Sylvester, 28 N. J. L. 487. But see otherwise, Jones v. Jones, 38 Mo. 429.

Encumbrance after execution of bond.— Plaintiff in attachment is not bound to take the property burdened with a lien placed upon it after the release of the attachment. Mullaly v. Townsend, (Cal. 1900) 61 Pac. 950.

54. Edwards v. Pomeroy, 8 Colo. 254, 6 Pac. 829; Hanness v. Bonnell, 23 N. J. L. 159.

Property sold under prior execution.— In an action on a bond, conditioned that defendant should surrender the property or pay the debt if judgment should be recovered, it is no defense that the creditor gained nothing by the attachment and lost nothing by its dissolution, because the goods at the time of the attachment were in the custody of the sheriff under a levy on a prior execution on which they were sold. Com. v. Litzvitz, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 278.

55. Perry v. Post, 45 Conn. 354, distinguishing the liability of an obligor on a receipt, in that he has the privilege of returning the property, while the obligor in a bond to discharge the attachment has no such privilege.

Acceptance of dividend from assignee.— Plaintiff in attachment does not lose his recourse against a bond given for the release of attached property by accepting a dividend from the assignee for the benefit of the creditors of defendant in attachment. Easton v. Ormsby, 18 R. I. 309, 27 Atl. 216.

Payment of execution for costs by sureties on a bond to dissolve an attachment is payment of the judgment pro tanto only and does not relieve them from liability to pay the remainder. Wood v. Mann, 125 Mass. 319.

Defendant in attachment charged as trustee of plaintiff.—Where, pending the original action, after bond given to dissolve the attachment, after verdict, and before judgment, defendant is summoned as trustee in an action brought against plaintiff, and charged as such upon default, this is no defense to an action by plaintiff in the first suit, on the bond to dissolve the attachment, it appearing that defendant has paid nothing in consequence of his having been charged as trustee in the action against plaintiff, although it would have been otherwise if defendant had paid such judgment against him as trustee and had caused the fact of such payment to be duly entered of record in the attachment suit according to the provisions of the statute, in which event plaintiff in attachment would be entitled to judgment against defendant for costs and such part of damages only as remained unpaid. Wood v. Mann, 125 Mass. 319.

56. See Jones v. Peasley, 3 Greene (Iowa) 52. But in Doggett v. Black, 40 Fed. 439, it was held that the accidental destruction of property by fire was no defense to an action on such a bond. In Woolfolk v. Ingram, 53 Ala. 11, it appears that there was a statute in that state providing that if property replevied under a bond making the obligors liable for its return or for payment of the judgment which might be recovered died or was destroyed without fault of the obligors, they might tender the value thereof in discharge of the bond.

Emancipation or death of slaves before forfeiture discharged the condition of a forthcoming bond. Glover v. Taylor, 41 Ala. 124; Phillipi v. Capell, 38 Ala. 575 [citing Falls v. Weissinger, 11 Ala. 801]. But where the bond was given to dissolve an attachment levied upon negroes it was held that the subsequent emancipation of the negroes did not release the obligors from liability to pay the amount of the judgment recovered. Irvin v. Howard, 37 Ga. 18. In Tennessee, under the statute providing for a bond which discharged the lien of attachment, but which might be satisfied by a delivery of the property, it was held that death or destruction of the property without fault of defendant was no defense to liability on the bond (Barry v. Frayser, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 206); but where the bond was not under the statute, but conditioned for the forthcoming of property, it was held that the death of slaves before forfeiture discharged the bond (Guthrie v. Brown, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 380. See also Green v. Lanier, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 662).

57. Dunlap v. Clements, 18 Ala. 778;

lien from the property and leaves it subject to future levies, the subsequent levies of attachments will not satisfy the conditions of the bond,[58] but if, after the execution thereof, the officer levies another attachment before a delivery is necessary to discharge the condition of the bond, such subsequent seizure will amount to a delivery and discharge the same.[59]

(c) Requiring Further Sureties or Execution of New Bond. The refusal to approve a dissolution bond until strengthened by the addition of another surety will not, after it is so strengthened and approved, exonerate the sureties who signed it originally;[60] and if a bond is canceled and the execution of another bond is ordered the sureties on the latter are liable, without reference to the former.[61]

(d) Amendments. Sureties on a forthcoming bond,[62] or bond conditioned to pay the judgment,[63] are not discharged by proper amendment of the attachment affidavit, or of the declaration or writ, the identity of the action not being changed.[64] So, too, such a bond is not discharged by an amendment in the name

Jæger v. Stœlting, 30 Ind. 341 (where, after release of the property, an execution in favor of a stranger to the attachment was levied thereupon by the consent and direction of attachment plaintiff, under which levy the property was taken and sold).

Sale under subsequent attachment.—Where attached goods released on a forthcoming bond are subsequently attached by another creditor and sold by consent of both attaching creditors, the surety in the forthcoming bond is discharged. Bell v. Pearce, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 73.

59. Scarborough v. Malone, 67 Ala. 570; Cordaman v. Malone, 63 Ala. 556 (holding that plaintiffs in the first attachment may have their remedy against the sheriff for his unauthorized act in taking the property under the junior attachment and possibly may maintain an action for money had and received against plaintiffs in that attachment); Schneider v. Wallingford, 4 Colo. App. 150, 34 Pac. 1109; Duncan v. Thomas, 1 Oreg. 314.

Levy by successor of first officer.— Where the second writ was levied by the successor of the officer who levied the first, it was held that the former would not be presumed to know that the property was in custody of the law, that it was the duty of defendant in the first attachment to replevy the property in such case, and that if he failed to do so the obligors on the bond were liable. Roberts v. Dunn, 71 Ill. 46.

60. Sampson v. Barnard, 98 Mass. 359. A motion to compel defendant to furnish further sureties is not an exception to the sufficiency of the sureties furnished; and the sureties on the bond are not released if in default of compliance with the rule judgment is rendered against defendant. Jewett v. Crane, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 208.

61. McCloskey v. Wingfield, 32 La. Ann. 38, holding that the binding effect of a second bond is not impaired by the fact that the first had another surety and had been canceled on account of this insufficiency.

Bond to procure stay.— If in the progress of the cause the party may procure a stay for particular purposes upon such terms as in the discretion of the judge may seem just, a bond to procure the stay, reciting that it is executed to secure the judgment and release and discharge the sureties in the bond previously given to discharge the attachment, voluntarily entered into, is good as a common-law undertaking and will bind the sureties therein. Dennis v. Nelson, 55 Minn. 144, 56 N. W. 589.

62. Hobson v. Hall, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 635 [affirmed in (Ky. 1890) 14 S. W. 958], as to amendment of affidavit necessary to sustain the attachment, holding that the obligors cannot acquire a bona fide claim in the sense of the statutory provision that the amendment shall not affect previous bona fide claims.

E. 593 (holding that the change in the ad damnum of the writ will not discharge the surety on a dissolution bond); Doran v. Cohen, 147 Mass. 342, 17 N. E. 647; Cutter v. Richardson, 125 Mass. 72 (holding that the allowance of an amendment on a count to merely state the cause of action more in detail does not discharge such sureties); Jayne v. Platt, 47 Ohio St. 262, 24 N. E. 262, 21 Am. St. Rep. 810.

Amendment of one of two counts.— The amendment of one count in a writ did not discharge the surety from liability for the sum sued for in the other counts originally inserted in the writ, and not affected by the amendment. Warren v. Lord, 131 Mass. 560.

Alteration before entry of writ.— If the parties without the consent of the surety alter the return time of the writ from a date when there was no term of court so as to make it returnable to a proper date, and the dissolution bond recited that the writ was returnable on the first date, the surety is discharged. Simeon v. Cramm, 121 Mass. 492.

of a party,[65] by bringing in a defendant,[66] or, by substituting for plaintiff in attachment, his assignee, under an assignment for the benefit of creditors made after execution of the bond.[67]

(E) Release of Indemnity. The mere release by a surety of indemnity held by him before his liability has been discharged by a proper determination of the cause will not relieve him from liability,[68] but if, by reason of the conduct or representations of the obligee, the surety has surrendered such indemnity, he will be discharged from liability to the extent of the value of the indemnity so surrendered.[69]

(F) Death of Defendant in Attachment. Where the cause of action survives and the death of attachment defendant does not operate as a dissolution of the attachment, judgment against his personal representative will perfect the liability of the sureties on a forthcoming,[70] or dissolution bond;[71] but, on the other hand, it is held that where the death of defendant in attachment dissolves it, attachment plaintiff has no further claim on the property and cannot recover on the bond.[72]

(G) Arrest on Execution. The arrest of a debtor on execution in the principal action will not discharge the sureties upon a bond previously given for the dissolution of the attachment.[73]

65. Distinction between substitution and amendment.—Where a suit is brought against one in a wrong name, a bond is given to secure some action on his part, describing him by the same name, and there is no doubt of the identity, the bond is for the action of defendant, and the insertion of the true name by the court in the subsequent proceedings against the same individual is proper and the change cannot affect the liability of the obligors. But where the persons are actually distinct, a bond given for the conduct of one cannot by substitution of names in the proceedings be made to stand good for the action of the other. The test is the person had in view by the obligors in executing the bond. Adams v. Jacoway, 34 Ark. 542.

66. Christal v. Kelly, 88 N. Y. 285, where, after a bond conditioned to pay the judgment which should be rendered against defendant in favor of plaintiff, a member of the firm was made a party, it was held that the sureties were bound after judgment rendered against defendants, as the undertaking was substituted for the property and that would not have been affected by the amendment had the bond not been given.

68. Hubbard v. Moss, 65 Mo. 647.

69. Rowley v. Jewett, 56 Iowa 492, 9 N. W. 353, holding that it is incumbent upon the surety to establish the extent to which he has been so discharged. See also Ramsey v. Coolbaugh, 13 Iowa 164.

70. Woolfolk v. Ingram, 53 Ala. 11.

71. Tapley v. Goodsell, 122 Mass. 176, holding that where defendant dies after verdict for plaintiff, a judgment nunc pro tunc as of the term when the verdict was rendered is sufficient, in the absence of fraud, to fix the liability of a surety on the bond given to dissolve the attachment.

Death of one joint defendant.—Where a bond to discharge an attachment is conditioned to pay the amount of the judgment which may be recovered against two defendants, it is not discharged by the death of one of the defendants, if the action continues and the cause of action survives against the survivor. Cockroft v. Claflin, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 464 [affirmed in 53 N. Y. 618]. But in McCloskey v. Wingfield, 29 La. Ann. 141, it was held that a judgment against a commercial partnership binds the parties in solido; that after death of one of the partners no judgment could be rendered against the partnership without making his representative a party, and until such judgment the surety in the release bond is not liable.

Death after recognizance.— If a defendant in attachment dies after entering in open court into recognizance with sureties to dissolve an attachment, the proceeding thereafter is in personam, and if defendant dies before judgment and his administrator is brought in, failure to pay judgment rendered against the administrator is a breach of the recognizance. Sharpe v. Morgan, 144 Ill. 382, 33 N. E. 22.

72. Green v. Barker, 14 Conn. 431; Upham v. Dodge, 11 R. I. 621, in which latter case it is held that at common law the death of defendant would have abated the suit which would thereupon have been dismissed completely out of court, and that the statute went no farther than to prevent the dismissal and allow the action to proceed against the executor or administrator, as if it had been commenced against him. See also ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL, 1 Cyc. 53.

73. Moore v. Loring, 106 Mass. 455 (holding that plaintiff is not confined to his remedy upon the bond but has a right to the arrest of defendant upon the unsatisfied execution, and that when the recognizance is broken by defendant's failure to submit himself for examination the bond and recognizance are cumulative securities for the same debt); Murray v. Shearer, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 333.

(iv) Concurrent Liability With That of Sureties on Appeal-Bond. Although a defendant in an attachment appeals unsuccessfully, plaintiff may sue the sureties on the bond given to release the attached property without resorting to his remedy against the sureties on the appeal-bond, although the latter may be primarily liable.[74]

(v) Enforcement of Liability — (a) Statutory Remedies — (1) Scire Facias, Rule, Motion, or Entry of Judgment. Where the statute permits defendant to retain possession of attached property by entering into recognizance with sureties the remedy on the recognizance may be by scire facias as in other cases.[75] Under statutes of various states sureties on bonds for the release of attached property may be subjected by rule or motion;[76] upon the entry of judgment for plaintiff in the main action, which fixes the liability of the sureties in the bond, judgment is entered at once against the principal and sureties in the bond;[77] or upon failure to redeliver property after judgment against defendant, and a return by the officer of the bond forfeited on account of such failure, such return is given the force and effect of a judgment and authorizes the clerk to issue execution against all the obligors.[78]

(2) Compliance With Statute. Statutes authorizing summary remedies on

Rule before return-day.— A rule against a surety, if taken after the actual return of the execution against the principal, is regular, although taken before the return-day named in the execution. Doane v. New Orleans, etc., Tel. Co., 11 La. Ann. 504.

The chancellor may by rule require the obligors in a forthcoming bond to produce the property or decree against them the payment of its value, or he may remit the party to his remedy at law on the bond. Hansford v. Perrin, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 595; Page v. Long, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 121.

Statute prospective.— A statute giving a right to proceed on such bonds by motion is entirely prospective and applies only to bonds executed after the passage of the act. Thompson v. Smith, 8 Mo. 723.

Jurisdiction of justice with reference to penalty.—A justice of the peace has jurisdiction on such motion in an attachment commenced before him, although the penalty of the bond exceeds his jurisdiction in a direct suit upon the bond. McDowell v. Morgan, 33 Mo. 555.

Mississippi.— Forbes v. Navra, 63 Miss. 1, holding that if the verdict is for plaintiff on the trial of the issue in chief, it will be presumed that the court directed a proper judgment to be entered and that the failure to do so was occasioned by the clerical omission of the clerk, and that in such cases the judgment may be amended after the lapse of the term at which it was rendered so as to make it conform to that directed to be entered by the court.

Tennessee.— Richards v. Craig, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 457; Upton v. Philips, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 215; Barry v. Frayser, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 206. A judgment which purports to be rendered against defendant and his sureties on the delivery bond, and which is the only judgment in the case, is unauthorized. A judgment against sureties on such a bond rendered before judgment against defendant upon the main cause of action is void. Morning v. Alexander, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606.

Texas.— Vogt v. Dorsey, 85 Tex. 90, 19 S. W. 1033; Shirley v. Byrnes, 34 Tex. 625. Where the court refuses to enter judgment against the sureties an appeal will lie. Kennedy v. Morrison, 31 Tex. 207.

such bonds must be strictly complied with,[79] and there must be a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute in respect of all things to be done in order to make the statutory remedy available.[80]

(B) Cumulative Remedies. An action on a bond for the forthcoming of property or discharge of attachment is not excluded by other and summary remedies provided for the enforcement of such liabilities.[81]

(C) Defenses and Estoppel—(1) IN GENERAL. Sureties cannot defeat a recovery against them by objections to proceedings in the attachment suit or on account of irregularities therein.[82] If the principals are bound, the sureties are

79. Woolfolk v. Ingram, 53 Ala. 11, holding, however, that a strict construction of the statute must not exclude cases within the legitimate meaning of the word and spirit thereof, and that under this qualification a statutory execution may issue against a surety on a forthcoming bond after judgment against the personal representative of the principal obligor who died pending suit, although the statute in general terms declared that execution must issue against the obligors.

The character of the bond upon which relief may be had by motion depends upon the statute, and if such relief can be had on a replevy bond described by the statute as one for the payment of a recovery and not for the production of the property, the remedy is not available on a bond conditioned alone for the forthcoming of property. Clary v. Haines, 61 Ga. 520.

Assessment of value.— Where attachment plaintiff does not demand an assessment of the property retained by defendant as provided by the statute, the bond cannot be enforced summarily in the same proceeding (Lowenstein v. McCadden, 54 Ark. 13, 14 S. W. 1095; Young v. Pickens, 45 Miss. 553; Richard v. Mooney, 39 Miss. 357), but the failure to assess such value will not preclude the court from issuing a writ of inquiry to make the assessment, to another jury, at the same term (Merrill v. Melchior, 30 Miss. 516).

Notice.— Judgment cannot be rendered on such motion (Roach v. Burnes, 33 Mo. 319) or rule (Thompson v. Arnett, (Ky. 1901) 64 S. W. 735) without notice; but it is held that it is unnecessary to show written notice of the order of delivery (Dodd v. Butler, 7 Mo. App. 583).

Trial by jury.— A rule against sureties on a bond for the release of attached property was, under the statute in Louisiana, to be tried summarily without a jury, unless defendant alleged under oath that the signature was not genuine and that judgment had been satisfied. Beal v. Alexander, 1 Rob. (La.) 277.

Appeal.—A rule against a surety on a bond to perform the judgment of the court to show cause why he should not be compelled to perform is not a final order upon which an appeal will lie to the court of appeals. Inman v. Strattan, 4 Bush (Ky.) 445.

Iowa.— New Haven Lumber Co. v. Raymond, 76 Iowa 225, 40 N. W. 820, failure to file delivery bond. So an appraisement upon the execution of a delivery bond is necessary only in order to determine the amount of delivery if the parties do not agree as to the value of the property. Woodward v. Adams, 9 Iowa 474.

Louisiana.— McRae v. Austin, 9 La. Ann. 361.

Massachusetts.—Where the court has power to permit a late entry of a writ of attachment on the consent of defendant without motion and order for that purpose, if such consent is given, a failure of plaintiff to enter the writ on the return-day will not operate to discharge the surety on a bond given by defendant to dissolve the attachment. Lee v. James, 150 Mass. 475, 23 N. E. 226.

Michigan.— Goebel v. Stevenson, 35 Mich. 172, as to irregularities in affidavit waived by defendant in the action who was personally served.

Minnesota.— Scanlan v. O'Brien, 21 Minn. 434, holding that under the statute requiring a bond with sureties, it is no defense on the part of the obligors that the bond is executed by all the obligors therein as principals, although plaintiff in the attachment might have complained of the officer for taking a bond without sureties.

New York.— Jewett v. Crane, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 208. Sureties on a bond to discharge an attachment cannot defend upon the ground that the undertaking was not approved as required by the code, as the approval of such a bond is for the benefit of attachment plaintiff and the waiver of such approval can be injurious to no one but him. Bennett v.

likewise bound, and cannot it is held set up any defenses which are not available to their principals.[83]

(2) In Summary Proceedings. The statute providing a summary remedy against the obligors in a bond does not prohibit or impair the effect of any legal defense.[84]

(3) Estoppel by Recitals in Bond. Ordinarily the obligors in a forthcoming or discharge bond are concluded by the recitals made in the undertaking.[85]

(4) Denial of Levy. Sureties on a delivery bond cannot set up that a valid levy of the attachment was not made.[86]

(5) Denial of Liability of Property to Seizure. So the sureties on a bond for the release of attached property are generally estopped thereby to contest the liability of the property to seizure under the writ.[87]

Issue and levy of attachment.— Although the statute authorizing attachments contemplates that the giving of an undertaking to discharge it shall be preceded by the issue of an attachment, an undertaking reciting that the attachment had issued, whereas in fact this was not true, but defendant procured the execution of the obligation, a recital in the undertaking precludes the obligors from showing that the obligation was given to avoid the issue and levy of the attachment. Alabama.— Sartin v. Weir, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 421.

California.— Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538.

Colorado.— The sureties cannot set up that at the time of the levy and the execution of the bond the property belonged to them and not to attachment defendant. Klippel v. Oppenstein, 8 Colo. App. 187, 45 Pac. 224.

(6) Inquiry Into Grounds of Attachment. In a proceeding to enforce liability on a bond for the release of attached property, the truth of the grounds of attachment cannot be inquired into.[88]

(7) Fraud or Mistake. A surety on a release bond is bound to ascertain his principal, and if by mistake he signs for one instead of for another he will not be allowed thus to defeat the levy and then set up his own act as a defense;[89] and so it has been held that the sureties cannot set up fraud on the part of the officer in inducing them to execute the bond.[90]

(8) As to Judgment in Original Action. In an action on a bond given for the release of attached property it cannot be shown that no valid judgment was rendered in the original suit.[91] The sureties are precluded by such judgment from inquiring into its correctness,[92] and if the judgment is valid as

But see Bauer v. Antoine, 22 La. Ann. 145; Quine v. Mayes, 2 Rob. (La.) 510, which cases held otherwise on a rule in the principal action, against the obligors, although in Beal v. Alexander, 1 Rob. (La.) 277, it is held that where property is attached in the hands of persons summoned as garnishees and they bond it, this operates as a dissolution of the attachment and the question of ownership of such property cannot afterward be considered. And in Iowa it is expressly provided (Iowa Code (1897), § 3911) that in an action on a forthcoming bond it shall be a sufficient defense that property at the time of the levy did not belong to the defendant against whom the attachment was issued. Ayres, etc., Co. v. Dorsey Produce Co., 101 Iowa 141, 70 N. W. 111, 63 Am. St. Rep. 376.

Exemption.— A judgment sustaining an attachment is conclusive until reversed or vacated and when sued on the forthcoming bond attachment defendant cannot avail himself of the fact that the property was exempt at the time of its seizure. Lane Implement Co. v. Lowder, (Okla. 1901) 65 Pac. 926.

88. Ferguson v. Glidewell, 48 Ark. 195, 2 S. W. 711; Bildersee v. Aden, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 175. The court having refused to dissolve the attachment, such questions are settled against the sureties. Com. v. Sisler, 196 Pa. St. 147, 46 Atl. 420. But see Murphy v. Montandon, 2 Ida. 1048, 29 Pac. 851, 35 Am. St. Rep. 279 (holding that where an attachment was procured upon affidavit, stating that payment of plaintiff's debt had not been secured by mortgage, loan, etc., under the statute, the obligors in a bond given to release the attachment may resist an action against them thereon by showing the falsity of the affidavit, on the theory that without a true affidavit in compliance with the statute there was no jurisdiction to issue the writ); Quine v. Mayes, 2 Rob. (La.) 510 (holding that where a judgment is absolutely void, any one having the least interest in opposing its effect may have such nullity pronounced by applying this principle to the denial of the truth of the grounds of the attachment or the interest of defendant in the attached property).

Non-residence of attachment defendant cannot be disputed in an action against the sureties on a release bond. Haggart v. Morgan, 5 N. Y. 422, 55 Am. Dec. 350 [affirming 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 198]; Higgins v. Healy, 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 207 [affirmed in 89 N. Y. 636].

89. Doane v. New Orleans, etc., Tel. Co., 11 La. Ann. 504.

90. Misrepresentation as to character of bond.—Where a bond is conditioned for the performance of the judgment of the court, it is held that the liability of the obligors was not affected by the fact that the sheriff induced them to believe that it was a forthcoming bond. McCormack v. Henderson, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 541. See also Brand v. Craig, 84 Ga. 12, 10 S. E. 369.

Misrepresentation as to levy — Delivery bond.— But in Connell v. Scott, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 595, it was held that it being necessary to constitute a valid levy that the property be present and within the control of the officer, a levy made from a list of property and from information given by the debtor, but none of the property being present and within sight of the officer, was not valid and a bill may be maintained by the surety in the delivery bond to be released therefrom on the ground that his signature was obtained by the false representations of the officer as to the levy of the attachment.

91. Moore v. Mott, (Cal. 1893) 34 Pac. 345 (holding that the record of the attachment suit showing the recovery of judgment precludes a finding that judgment was not rendered); Fogel v. Dussault, 141 Mass. 154, 7 N. E. 17.

92. Reid v. Farmers, etc., Tobacco Warehouse, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1939, 44 S. W. 124 (where it was held that it was no defense by the sureties on a bond conditioned to perform judgment that the judgment was by fraud or mistake for a larger amount than the pleadings authorized); Jayne v. Platt, 47 Ohio St. 262, 24 N. E. 262, 21 Am. St. Rep. 810 (holding that in the absence of fraud, collusion, or manifest mistake, the sureties will not be heard to question the correctness against attachment defendant it will not avail the obligors that it contains other provisions, which although void, do not affect defendant.[93]

(9) Jurisdictional Objections. Where the objections on behalf of the surety on a bond to release attached property go to the jurisdiction of the court in the attachment suit to issue the attachment they are available to defeat liability on the bond.[94]

(v) Parties — (1) Plaintiff — (a) In General. Plaintiff in attachment to whom a bond is given may sue on it,[95] although where the bond is given to the officer as obligee proceedings for its enforcement are properly brought in his name.[96]

(b) Assignment — aa. By Officer. Where the bond given by attachment defendant is made to the officer as obligee the latter may assign it to plaintiff in the attachment.[97] Moreover, in the absence of a statutory modification of the rule of such judgment or inquire into the action of the court, either on the preliminary motion or on final judgment).

Amount.— The sureties on a bond to discharge an attachment cannot set up objections to the amount of the judgment in the original action. Morange v. Edwards, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 414.

93. Provision in original judgment void as to sureties.— Where judgment cannot be rendered in the main suit against the sureties on the bond given for the release of attached property, a judgment so rendered is void only as to the sureties and not as to defendant, and in an action on the bond itself the mistake in the rendition of the judgment is not available as a defense to the sureties. Cheek v. Pugh, 19 Ark. 574.

94. Georgia.— English v. Reed, 97 Ga. 477, 25 S. E. 325, attachment procured without giving the statutory bond.

Louisiana.— Quine v. Mayes, 2 Rob. (La.) 510.

Maryland.— Clark v. Bryan, 16 Md. 171, that the record in an attachment case shows that attachment defendant was a non-resident and that judgment by default was given against him, although he was never summoned or otherwise had notice of the proceedings against him, and never appeared.

New York.— Cadwell v. Colgate, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Homan v. Brinckerhoff, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 184 (attachment procured without giving the statutory bond).

Wisconsin.— Shevlin v. Whelen, 41 Wis. 88.

United States.— Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, 124 U. S. 721, 8 S. Ct. 718, 31 L. ed. 567, holding that if the attachment which the bond was given to dissolve is void, because under the law the property of a national bank was not attachable, the dissolution bond was void.

95. Plaintiff not in possession.— It is no ground to abate a suit on a bond to dissolve an attachment, brought by the party for whose benefit it was made, that the bond was in the custody of the clerk of the court when the suit was commenced. If plaintiff is the legal owner of the bond and can produce it at the trial, that is enough. Bowers v. Beck, 2 Nev. 139.

96. Young v. Campbell, 10 Ill. 80; Wagner v. Romero, 3 N. M. 131, 3 Pac. 50 (under the practice act); Wilson v. Donnelly, 19 R. I. 113, 31 Atl. 966.

By successor in office.— A bond to dissolve an attachment given to one as marshal and his successor in office may be sued in the name of the former after he has been succeeded in office by another. Huff v. Hutchinson, 14 How. (U. S.) 586, 14 L. ed. 553.

Indemnity to sheriff.— Where a party in interest in a forthcoming bond caused suit to be brought thereon in the name of the sheriff to whom the bond was executed he was required to indemnify the sheriff against all costs. Young v. Campbell, 9 Ill. 156.

97. Adkins v. Allen, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 130; Tooley v. Culbertson, 5 How. (Miss.) 267; Morange v. Edwards, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 414 (holding that such assignment may be without special authority). Where the statute expressly makes a forthcoming bond assignable and another section of the statute authorizes the party to give a bond for the payment of the judgment to be recovered, instead of a forthcoming bond, it is held that a bond for the payment of the judgment may be assigned to plaintiff in attachment. Carpenter v. Hoyt, 17 Ill. 529. And where, after a statute under which replevy can be effected only by special bail, an act provided that in case of an absconding debtor, replevy could be effected only by bond, conditioned to return the property or pay and satisfy the judgment, without describing a mode of proceeding upon such bond in case of forfeiture, it was held that the provisions of the first act relating to the procedure on bail-bonds applied to the last act, and that plaintiff in attachment might sue as assignee of the sheriff on a replevy bond under such last act. Sartin v. Weir, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 421 [cited in Cummins v. Gray, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 397].

Assignment as of right.— Plaintiff in attachment may require an assignment by the sheriff to him. Dorr v. Clark, 7 Mich. 310. And in Jones v. Jones, 38 Mo. 429, it was held that the sheriff has no right to institute proceedings on a forthcoming bond but must, under the order of the court, assign a bond to plaintiff in attachment.

Sufficiency of assignment.— The assignment is valid as signed by the sheriff, although it has been held that the latter cannot sue on such bond, unless it has been so assigned.[98]

bb. By Attachment Plaintiff. An attaching plaintiff to whom a release bond is executed may assign it,[99] and where plaintiff as the real party in interest may sue on the bond made to the sheriff, his assignee may maintain an action on such a bond.[1]

(c) Real Party in Interest. Under statute, however, the real party in interest, or the party intended to be secured by the bond, may maintain an action on the bond in his own name, notwithstanding it is executed to the officer.[2]

(d) Joint and Several Parties. Where, upon the execution of a forthcoming bond, all creditors who attach during the pendency of the first suit acquire an interest in the bond, they are properly joined as parties plaintiff and may sue to enforce liability on the bond.[3] But where under the statute the bond is held for the benefit of all creditors and may be prosecuted by them jointly or by any one of them separately in respect to his separate demand, an action on the statutory bond conditioned to pay each creditor the amount due him may be maintained by a single creditor in his own name.[4] not in his name of office. Dorr v. Clark, 7 Mich. 310.

98. Sartin v. Weir, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 421; Forrest v. O'Donnell, 42 Mich. 556, 4 N. W. 259; McDowell v. Morgan, 33 Mo. 555 (where it appears that the statute required an assignment of a forthcoming bond).

Summary execution.— Under the statute which gives the officer's return of a forfeited bond the effect of a judgment upon which execution may issue against the obligors on the bond, an assignment of the bond to plaintiff is not necessary in order to entitle him to the issue of an execution on the return of the forfeited bond. Shute v. McMahon, 10 Ala. 76.

99. George v. Tate, 102 U. S. 564, 26 L. ed. 232.

Assignment of judgment by an instrument which does not mention the bond is held to be a mere assignment of the judgment, and will not authorize the assignee to maintain an action on the bond in his own name. Forrest v. O'Donnell, 42 Mich. 556, 4 N. W. 259.

Assignee for the benefit of creditors.— Where the release bond is in favor of attachment plaintiff, specifically named as obligee, conditioned that if "said plaintiff" recover judgment in the action, etc., such bond may pass to the assignee for the benefit of plaintiff's creditors and he may be substituted for the latter in an action on the bond. Slosson v. Ferguson, 31 Minn. 448, 18 N. W. 281.

Bond not conforming to statute.— But where the statute requires a replevy bond payable to attachment plaintiff, a bond payable to the officer is not a statutory bond, and an action upon such bond can be prosecuted only as an action at common law. The action cannot be maintained in the name of attachment plaintiff, and as the statute which allows suits to be prosecuted in the name of the party really interested is confined to actions on contracts for the payment of money it has no application to a bond of this character. Agnew v. Leath, 63 Ala. 345.

3. Rutledge v. Corbin, 10 Ohio St. 478.

In Indiana, under the statute permitting several creditors to file their complaints and become parties to the original action, it was held that in a suit upon an undertaking given for the delivery of attached property to the sheriff all such creditors who had been adjudged entitled to participate in the proceeds of the property should be made parties plaintiff, or if they refused to join as such, the facts should be stated in the complaint and they should be made defendants. Moore v. Jackson, 35 Ind. 360.

In New Jersey the statute directed that in case of the breach of the condition of a forthcoming bond it should, on application of plaintiff or any applying creditor, be assigned to such person as the court should direct and be prosecuted for the benefit of plaintiff in attachment and such applying creditors. Whenever creditors come in, the bond is for their protection and can be prosecuted by any of them as well as by attachment plaintiff. It is not necessary that it should appear what creditors had applied to have their claims adjusted, as the appropriation of the amount recovered in the suit on the bond is a matter for a subsequent proceeding, on the application of the creditors entitled thereto. Hanness v. Bonnell, 23 N. J. L. 159; Hanness v. Smith, 22 N. J. L. 332.

Joint bond — Action by survivor.— An action on a bond to several obligees jointly is properly brought by the survivors after the death of some of them. Donnell v. Manson, 109 Mass. 576.

One bond in two distinct suits.— In Irish

(2) DEFENDANT. Plaintiff may sue any one or more of the obligors in a joint and several bond for the release of attached property.[5]

(E) Pleading — (1) DECLARATION OR COMPLAINT[6] — (a) CONDITION AND BREACH. The declaration or complaint in an action on such a bond should set out the condition of the bond,[7] and allege the facts which constitute a breach of such condition,[8] as that the attachment was released or discharged, where the consideration of the bond is such release or discharge,[9] the recovery of judgment in the attachment suit,[10] that the attachment was not dissolved,[11] the issue of execution,[12] or

v. Wright, 12 Rob. (La.) 563, it was held that where in two distinct suits the property is released on a single bond containing distinct obligations in favor of different obligees each obligee has a distinct remedy on the bond for the satisfaction of any judgment in his suit.

7. Albin v. Talbott, 46 Ill. 424, forthcoming bond.

Condition not prerequisite to liability.— A declaration on a bond given for the release of attached property need not set up any conditions, the existence of which are not necessary to fix liability of the obligors on the bond. Gray v. Sharp, 62 N. J. L. 102, 40 Atl. 771.

Variance on account of clerical error.— A dissolution bond may be declared on in form as it was intended to be written, and a variance occasioned by reason of a mere clerical error in the condition of the bond will not be material in such a case. Leonard v. Speidel, 104 Mass. 356.

8. Sufficiency of allegation.— A declaration on a forthcoming bond which alleges that defendants did not have the property forthcoming according to the condition of the bond, but wholly failed and refused to do so, sufficiently shows a breach of the condition. Young v. Campbell, 10 Ill. 80. And in an action upon an undertaking conditioned that defendant shall perform the judgment of the court in the attachment suit, the breach was held to be sufficiently pleaded by an averment of the rendition of judgment in favor of plaintiff against defendant in the attachment, the amount of the judgment, and the fact that it remained unpaid in whole or in part. Winton v. Myers, 8 Okla. 421, 58 Pac. 634.

Breach in words of condition.— A breach is sufficiently set forth if it is laid in the words of the condition of the bond. Hanness v. Smith, 22 N. J. L. 332.

Objection.— In an action on a bond to dissolve an attachment, objection that the declaration did not allege the breach of the bond should be taken by demurrer, and cannot be raised for the first time at the trial under a general denial. Huntress v. Burbank, 111 Mass. 213. But see the cases cited infra, next note.

Judgment on pleadings.— An action on a dissolution bond conditioned to satisfy judgment comes within the statute authorizing plaintiff to take judgment at the first day of the term, on filing an affidavit stating the true amount of defendant's indebtedness and the writing or account by which defendant is indebted, unless defendant has filed a verified plea containing a good defense (McAllister v. Eichengreen, 34 Md. 54); or authorizing judgment on the pleadings if the facts in the complaint are insufficiently denied or substantially admitted (Fitzgibbon v. Calvert, 39 Cal. 261); or authorizing judgment in an action on an instrument for the payment of money only, for the sum claimed in the complaint, upon striking out as frivolous a demurrer to the complaint (Coe v. Straus, 11 Wis. 72).

9. Release or discharge of attachment.— Williamson v. Blattan, 9 Cal. 500 (holding that the failure to make such allegation renders the complaint bad on general demurrer); Palmer v. Melvin, 6 Cal. 651. But see otherwise, Bennett v. Mulry, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 304, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 790, 58 N. Y. St. 147, where such an allegation was regarded as an effort to anticipate a possible defense.

Complaint on bond to prevent levy.— In an action on an undertaking given to prevent levying an attachment, the complaint is defective if it does not aver that the sheriff did not complete the levy, or if it avers that the sheriff proceeded to levy, without showing that he went no farther. Coburn v. Pearson, 57 Cal. 306.

To open default judgment and discharge attachment.— If the bond is not given until after judgment by default in the action, and it is executed for the purpose of setting aside the default and to discharge the attachment, both the setting aside of the default and the discharge of the attachment should be alleged. Jenner v. Stroh, 52 Cal. 504.

10. Adams v. Jacoway, 34 Ark. 542; Creswell v. Woodside, 8 Colo. App. 518, 46 Pac. 842.

Bond to prevent levy.— In an action on a bond given to prevent levy, an averment that judgment was recovered, entered, and docketed is sufficient. McCutcheon v. Weston, 65 Cal. 37, 2 Pac. 727.

11. Creswell v. Woodside, 8 Colo. App. 514, 46 Pac. 842.

12. A special execution being a prerequisite to liability on a bond conditioned to deliver the property to the sheriff on demand, or demand for redelivery or for payment,[13] where the liability under the bond is conditioned upon these things.

(b) Facts Concluded by Recitals in or Execution of Bond. In an action on an undertaking for the release of attached property, the complaint need not aver or set out facts which the obligor in the bond is estopped to deny by the recitals in the bond or by the execution of it.[14]

(c) To Recover For Diminution in Value. In an action on a redelivery bond to recover for diminution in value of property returned by defendant, an allegation that the property was injured by usage and neglect sufficiently charges that defendant was in fault.[15]

(2) Plea or Answer. In debt on a bond given to discharge an attachment the action is on the specialty, and a plea of nil debet is not appropriate,[16] and under a general denial only the material allegations of the complaint are put in issue and need be proved.[17] upon failure so to do to pay the value of the property to the extent of any judgment which may be recovered, a complaint on such a bond must allege that such execution duly issued and a demand on the obligors by virtue thereof. Wright v. Manns, 111 Ind. 422, 12 N. E. 160.

13. Mullally v. Townsend, 119 Cal. 47, 50 Pac. 1066 (holding that under a statute providing for the release of an attachment on the execution of a bond conditioned to redeliver the property on demand, or to pay the value thereof on demand, an allegation that plaintiff demanded of defendants "that they pay the plaintiff the said judgment, and demanded of them the fulfillment of the obligation as expressed in said undertaking," was sufficient on demurrer to show that the demand was made as required by the statute, where the value of the property exceeded the amount of the judgment); Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538; Murray v. Ginsberg, 10 Colo. App. 63, 48 Pac. 968.

14. Bowers v. Beck, 2 Nev. 139.

Issue of attachment.—It is not necessary to aver that the warrant of attachment duly issued. Coe v. Straus, 11 Wis. 72.

Facts which authorize the issue of the attachment need not be pleaded. McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339. The warrant is a judicial determination that the writ should issue. Cruyt v. Phillips, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 120.

Non-residence of debtor.— It is not necessary for plaintiff to allege or prove the non-residence of the debtor where the bond is in form good at common law and independent of the statute. Kanouse v. Dormedy, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 567.

15. Creswell v. Woodside, 8 Colo. App. 514, 46 Pac. 842, upon the principle that for such diminution in value the obligors would be liable, and as the property was delivered to defendant upon the execution of the redelivery bond the presumption was that such possession continued, and therefore the allegation of damage from usage or neglect sufficiently charged that the usage and neglect was that of defendant.

16. Blydenburgh v. Carpenter, Lalor (N. Y.) 169, holding that nil debet was not an appropriate plea under the early statute in New York, which provided for the giving of a bond in discharge of an attachment to operate for the benefit of all creditors who might come in, and conditioned to pay the amount justly due and owing to each, provided it is established by proof on the trial that the debt was due and owing at the time plaintiff became an attaching creditor.

17. Bennett v. Mulry, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 304, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 790, 58 N. Y. St. 147, holding that if, after an undertaking to discharge an attachment, its object is defeated, such fact, if it be a defense, must be set up in the answer. So if, upon separate answers, sureties might by plea and proof avail themselves of any invalidity of the judgment against the principal, they cannot do so under an answer which is a simple denial of the existence of the judgment. Fogel v. Dussault, 141 Mass. 154, 7 N. E. 17.

Instrument not sealed — Non est factum.— Objection to the introduction of the bond in evidence on the ground that it is not sealed will not be considered unless the execution of the instrument is denied in an answer under oath. State v. Chamberlin, 54 Mo. 338.

Sufficiency of pleas in bar.— In Iowa, where the defense that property levied upon did not belong to attachment defendant was available to the obligors on the bond given to discharge the property from the attachment or for its redelivery, it was held that defendants must show by their pleading in whom the title was, under the rule requiring a plea to be definite and specific, and further, because this is new matter introduced by defendants which requires them to tender an affirmative issue. Blatchley v. Adair, 5 Iowa 545. So in order to raise the defense that the attachment issued without the necessary accompanying bond, the surety should distinctly and unequivocally aver in his plea that no attachment bond had been executed before the issue and levy of the attachment. English v. Reed, 97 Ga. 477, 25 S. E. 325. But a plea in bar that the property after judgment was taken and sold under special execution is good without averment as to the liability of the property for levy and sale, because the obligors in the bond can have no concern with such question. Hogan v. Shutler, 53 Ill. 487.

(F) Evidence — (1) In General. Plaintiff in an action to enforce liability on a bond for the release of attached property should show the execution of such a bond as that under which he seeks to recover,[18] as well as a compliance with the conditions of the bond which are prerequisite to liability;[19] but in an action on a forthcoming or discharge bond which recites the attachment and levy it is not necessary to introduce in evidence the attachment,[20] or the judgment in attachment, when the fieri facias issued thereon, with a nulla bona return, and showing the amount of the judgment is introduced.[21]

(2) Value of Property or Interest. Where liability on the bond is confined to attachment defendant's interest in the property it will be presumed that such interest was the amount ordered to be attached by the writ.[22] So a recital

Notice of special matter with non est factum.— In an action on a dissolution bond the plea of non est factum with notice of special matter that an appeal had been taken and allowed to the supreme court was held not to show a defense, because there was no allegation that the appeal was still pending. Poteet v. Boyd, 10 Mo. 160.

18. Execution by one of several obligors.— Where the case stands as if originally brought against one only of the obligors on a joint and several forthcoming bond, proof of execution by the other obligors is not necessary. Smith v. Packard, 98 Fed. 793, 39 C. C. A. 294, as to such proof when a dismissal had been entered before trial as to all but one obligor.

Execution by agent — Pleading and proof. — Where the ultimate fact is pleaded that the instrument sued on was executed by defendant, evidence that another had acted under an antecedent authority on his behalf, or that he had subsequently ratified an unauthorized act in that respect, is competent to establish the ultimate fact of execution by defendant as alleged. Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103, 54 Pac. 634.

Lost bond.—Where a bond has been properly filed and afterward lost, a copy preserved among plaintiff's papers may be admitted in evidence. Wagner v. Romero, 3 N. M. 131, 3 Pac. 50. And so an entry upon the appearance docket made by the court "bond to be substituted for attachment filed January 9, 1875," followed by the names of the obligors, may be given in evidence in an action on the lost undertaking, where a complete record of the action was not made. Chapman v. Seely, 8 Ohio Cir. Ct. 179, 4 Ohio Cir. Dec. 395.

Presumption.— An objection to the failure to show that a forthcoming bond has been filed will yield to the presumption that the officer did his duty in this respect. New Haven Lumber Co. v. Raymond, 76 Iowa 225, 40 N. W. 820, holding further that the statute as to the filing of a forthcoming bond was merely directory. So where the statute provided that a bond should be approved by the court or the judge, but that it might in vacation be executed in the presence of the sheriff having the writ in his hands, or after the return of the writ before the clerk, over an objection that it did not appear that the bond was executed or approved by the court or judge, it was held that as there was nothing in the record to show that the writ had not been returned, or that the clerk was not authorized to take and approve the bond, the appellate court would not presume that such facts did not exist. Budd v. Durall, 36 Iowa 315.

Parol evidence will not be admitted for the purpose of showing that a bond plainly coming under the provisions of one statute was designed to operate under the provisions of an entirely different one (Smith v. Scott, 86 Ind. 346), although such evidence is admissible to explain a mistake in the recital of a bond (Palmer v. Vance, 13 Cal. 553).

19. Variance.—Where it is alleged that defendant in an attachment suit died before judgment, that his administrator was made defendant, and judgment was rendered against such administrator, a transcript of the justice showing judgment against defendant in his individual capacity will not sustain the declaration. Butler v. Wilson, 10 Ark. 313.

20. Doyal v. Johns, 90 Ga. 188, 15 S. E. 776; Christal v. Kelly, 88 N. Y. 285.

21. Doyal v. Johns, 90 Ga. 188, 15 S. E. 776.

Necessity for judgment and execution see supra, XIII, E, 4, h, (II), (B); XIII, E, 4, h, (II), (C).

Justice's transcript.— In an action on a bond to release property on an attachment issued by a justice of the peace, the justice's transcript must show all legal prerequisites to the issue of the attachment in order to make such transcript competent evidence. Butler v. Wilson, 10 Ark. 313.

Proof of original claim.— Under an early statute in New York, in an action on a bond given to discharge a foreign attachment, the condition of which bond was to pay the attaching creditor the amount justly due and owing by the debtor at the time the former became an attaching creditor, on account of any sum so claimed and sworn to by him, the creditor was required to establish his demand in the same manner as in an action against the debtor. Oakley v. Aspinwall, 4 N. Y. 513; Thompson v. Dickerson, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 108.

22. Birdsall v. Wheeler, 58 Conn. 429, 20 Atl. 607, where the statute relating to the execution of a bond for the dissolution of an attachment provided that when defendant in an action against an obligor shall claim that the interest of the principal in the bond at the time of the execution of the bond was of in the bond of the value of property is evidence of such value against the obligors,[23] and it has been held that where the liability of the obligors is for the decrease in the value of goods between the date of their release and the date of their redelivery the sum for which the property is sold at sheriff's sale is conclusive of its value.[24]

(3) Effect of Official Return in Attachment Suit. The official return of the sheriff on the process in an attachment suit is evidence of his official acts as against both principal and surety in a forthcoming or dissolution bond.[25]

(G) Measure of Recovery — (1) In General. The measure of recovery on a bond for the release of attached property depends upon the terms and conditions of the instrument,[26] or of the statute by which such liability is fixed.[27]

(2) Amount of Judgment, Claim, or Value of Property. Thus a bond conditioned for the return of property in case judgment is rendered for plaintiff subjects the obligors to liability for the amount of the judgment with costs,[28] or the value of the property, if that is less than the amount of the judgment.[29] less value than the amount ordered to be attached the burden of proving the actual value of such interest is on defendant.

Value found in action for conversion.— In an action for conversion, attachment of the property was dissolved by bond. Thereafter a portion of the property was returned to plaintiff, who subsequently recovered a judgment made up of amounts representing the value of the property returned, which was fixed, and damages to the property not returned, estimated at a particular sum. In an action on the bond to recover the value of the property not returned it was held that the report of the committee in the original suit was not admissible against the obligors, except for the purpose of showing the fact of judgment, and not for the purpose of showing the value of the property at the time of the attachment, because the report found the value at the time of the conversion only, which was four months before the attachment, and defendants in the action on the bond were not parties to the action for the conversion. Trubee v. Wheeler, 53 Conn. 458, 2 Atl. 319.

23. Prima facie or conclusive.— Recitals in the bond of value are prima facie evidence of such value. Weed v. Dills, 34 Mo. 483; Ward v. Kent, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 128. And it is held that a recital that the value of the property "does not exceed" the sum named, while conclusive against the assertion of a larger value, establishes no particular value. Smith v. Packard, 98 Fed. 793, 39 C. C. A. 294. But in Klippel v. Oppenstein, 8 Colo. App. 187, 45 Pac. 224, the recital of value was held to be conclusive.

24. Creswell v. Woodside, (Colo. App. 1900) 63 Pac. 330.

25. Dodd v. Butler, 7 Mo. App. 583, as to return on attachment. So the proper and legal mode of showing whether a judgment is satisfied in an action on a bond conditioned to pay the judgment is the return of the officer on the execution. Huntress v. Burbank, 111 Mass. 213.

Conclusive effect.— In an action against sureties on a delivery bond for failure after judgment to deliver the attached property, the officer's return of the failure to deliver, indorsed on a special execution, is conclusive and cannot be controverted by defendant. Chapline v. Robertson, 44 Ark. 202. But on a petition to supersede an execution issued against the petitioner as surety on a forfeited delivery bond, he may show that the sheriff's return that the bond was forfeited was false. Anderson v. Rhea, 7 Ala. 104.

26. Mason v. Whipple, 31 Vt. 473.

27. Dunlap v. Clements, 18 Ala. 778.

28. Dunlap v. Clements, 18 Ala. 778 (where the amount to be paid by the obligors when the bond is returned forfeited is fixed by the statute as the sum recovered in an attachment suit and the costs of that suit); Schuyler v. Sylvester, 28 N. J. L. 487 (holding that the lien of the writ while it remained on the property was only to the extent of the money due to plaintiff; that if the property had been rendered according to the condition of the bond, that is all which he could have made out of it, and that such amount, with costs, is therefore the measure of damages).

The whole of the penalty of the bond may be recovered if any part of the property is not delivered, notwithstanding a part of the property has been delivered. Bland v. Creager, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 509.

29. Turner v. Armstrong, 9 Ill. App. 24, under an instrument in which the party simply contracts to deliver specified property. So in Rhode Island, where the condition of a bond was that it should be void if the goods should be returned after judgment to satisfy the execution thereon, "or if" the judgment should be paid, and the statute under which the bond was given provided that the bond should be in double the value of the goods conditioned to be void if the goods be returned "unless" the judgment be paid, it was held that the value of the goods being less than the amount of the judgment the liability was only for the value of the goods. Pearce v. Maguire, 17 R. I. 61, 20 Atl. 98.

Bond not under statute.— In Adler v. Potter, 57 Ala. 571, it was held that a statutory bond imposed liability only for the amount of the judgment in the attachment suit; that this obligation resulted from the ex-

Where a bond to dissolve an attachment is conditioned to satisfy any judgment that may be recovered against defendant, the judgment recovered in the attachment suit fixes the amount to be paid under the bond,[30] up to the amount of the penalty of the bond.[31] But where the undertaking is conditioned for the payment of the value of the property, not exceeding a certain sum, the liability is limited to the value of the property and cannot be extended to the sum named, or to include the liability of defendant in the suit.[32]

(3) DETERMINATION OF VALUE. When the value of the property furnishes the rule of damages, the value is that at the time of the seizure under the attach-press terms of the statute; that if the statute was silent in this respect the extent of the obligation would be the damages that plaintiff had sustained, that is, the value of the property, if that did not exceed the amount of the judgment, and where a bond is not valid under the statute, but only as a common-law obligation, the measure of recovery is the value of the property.

Debt or value of property.—Where, under the statute, defendant, at his option, may give a bond in double the amount of plaintiff's demand, or in double the value of the property, conditioned to pay the debt on the one hand, or the value of the property on the other, the judgment in the one case is for the penalty to be satisfied on payment of the debt, and in the other to be satisfied by the return of the property or the payment of its value. Kuhn v. Spellacy, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 278; Barry v. Frayser, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 206. But if the bond is in the penalty of double the debt, and is conditioned for the payment of the debt, or the value of the property in the alternative, the sureties are not entitled to have the judgment restricted to the value of the property but must pay the debt. Bond v. Greenwald, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 453.

Nominal damages.— In Hayman v. Hallam, 79 Ky. 389, it was held that the obligors in a forthcoming bond are liable for nominal damages only on failure to produce property attached which was not more than sufficient to satisfy prior liens upon it.

30. California.— March v. Barnet, 121 Cal. 419, 51 Pac. 20, 53 Pac. 933; Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556, 21 Pac. 971, in which latter case the measure is the amount of recovery with interest thereon to the date of judgment in the action on the bond.

Maryland.— McAllister v. Eichengreen, 34 Md. 54.

Massachusetts.— Murray v. Shearer, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 333.

Michigan.— Where a party may, at his option, execute a bond either for the payment of the judgment or for the production of the property to satisfy the execution and he chooses to execute the first kind, the obligors are liable for the full amount of the judgment, irrespective of the value of the property, and notwithstanding another section of the statute provides that in case of failure to perform the condition of any such bond, plaintiff shall be entitled to recover thereon the full value of the property attached, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the judgment. This last section provides the rule of damages for both kinds of bonds and the reference to the value of the property attached applies to the bond for the production of the property. Phansteihl v. Vanderhoof, 22 Mich. 296. And if the party execute a bond for the production of the property, or in default thereof, for payment of judgment, the measure of damages will be the amount of the judgment and not simply the appraised value of the goods seized. Goebel v. Stevenson, 35 Mich. 172.

Oklahoma.— Winton v. Myers, 8 Okla. 421, 58 Pac. 634.

31. Fetterman v. Hopkins, 5 Watts (Pa.) 539; Billingsley v. Harris, 79 Wis. 103, 48 N. W. 108, in which latter case it is held that where the bond is in a fixed penalty for payment of judgment, together with costs "not exceeding $250, with interest," this last clause is a limitation applicable to the costs only, and not to the liability of the obligors for the judgment.

Defendant's interest.— Under Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 929–935, the obligation given to dissolve an attachment was conditioned to pay the actual value of defendant's interest, not exceeding the amount of the recognizance. Birdsall v. Wheeler, 58 Conn. 429, 20 Atl. 607.

32. Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620, 52 Pac. 1077.

Sale of part of property.— In an action on a bond for the release of the property and discharge of the attachment, conditioned for the redelivery of the property, or the payment of the full value thereof, not exceeding a certain sum, if a portion of the attached property is levied upon and sold by the sheriff under an execution upon the judgment in the action, the measure of damages is the full value of the property attached, less the amount of the proceeds of the sale. Metrovich v. Jovovich, 58 Cal. 341.

Expenses previous to surrender.— Where under several writs a bond is executed for the payment of appraised value of the property and indemnity from all damages and costs "which may accrue to him, if such payment is not made to meet such executions," and only one of the suits results in judgment, which the sureties satisfy, they cannot be held liable for expenses incurred in keeping and appraising the property previous to surrender, under the terms of the instrument. Mason v. Whipple, 31 Vt. 473.

ment, or at the time at which the property should have been delivered under the condition of the bond,[33] or that which is fixed by the recitals of the bond itself.[34]

F. Sale and Disposition of Property or Proceeds — 1. Sale Before Judgment — a. In General. Ordinarily, in the absence of statute, an attachment is no justification to the officer in selling the property unless sold under execution issued upon judgment.[35]

b. Property Perishable, Depreciable, or Expensive to Keep. But under various statutory provisions after the levy of an attachment the court is authorized, in advance of final judgment, to order the sale of the property levied on when it is perishable,[36] or when, by reason of the expense of keeping it, or its

33. Adler v. Potter, 57 Ala. 571. Where the bond is conditioned that the property "should be forthcoming to abide the final order of the court," the measure of damages is the value of the property at the time of the return on the execution, when the liability of the sureties begins. Collins v. Mitchell, 3 Fla. 4.

Value at the time of giving bond.— In Connecticut, under a statute providing for a bond as a substitute for the property attached, conditioned to pay the judgment or the actual value of defendant's interest in the attached property, in assessing damages the value at the time the bond was given, and not at the time of judgment or demand, will control. Perry v. Post, 45 Conn. 354. See also Trubee v. Wheeler, 53 Conn. 458, 2 Atl. 319.

Assessment or finding of value.— Summary judgment entered against sureties must be for the value of the property as found by the court or jury trying the case. Fletcher v. Menken, 37 Ark. 206 (holding that the appraisal required by statute is for the purpose of enabling the officer to fix the amount of the bond); Young v. Pickens, 45 Miss. 553.

Depreciation in value.—Where the property when returned by defendant is of less value than when received by him, by reason of use or neglect on his part, plaintiff in the action may recover of the obligors the difference between the value at the time of the redelivery and at the time it was released from the attachment. Creswell v. Woodside, (Colo. App. 1900) 63 Pac. 330.

Finding on conflicting evidence.— A judgment based on a finding made on conflicting evidence as to the value of the attached property will not be revised. Curtin v. Harvey, 120 Cal. 620, 52 Pac. 1077.

34. See supra, XIII, E, 4, h, (v), (F), (2).

After sale of property as perishable.— Where the bond was conditioned that defendant should pay the debt, etc., or the value of the property, or should deliver the property when so ordered, and the court decreed a return and sale of the property pending the suit, because of its perishable nature, after the property had been used by defendant, it was held that the sureties were not liable for any difference between the amount realized at the sale and the valuation of the property fixed in the bond. Richards v. Craig, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 457.

Before service of writ completed.— Property attached on mesne process may be sold before service of the writ is completed by the delivery of a copy to defendant. Marshall v. Town, 28 Vt. 14.

Effect of order of sale as consolidation.— Where two attachments were levied on the same property, and an order was taken to sell it as perishable property expensive to keep, this did not operate as a consolidation of the cases. Epstin v. Levenson, 79 Ga. 718, 4 S. E. 328.

Order after death of plaintiff.— An attachment proceeding does not abate on plaintiff's death (see Abatement and Revival, 1 Cyc. 53), but continues a pending cause, and an order for sale of the property as perishable may be made after plaintiff's death, and before the expiration of the time permitted defendants to show cause why the action shall not be revived. Buller v. Woods, 43 Mo. App. 494.

An attorney under a general employment may procure an order of sale of the property without any special direction by his clients, and the latter will be liable for his act in so doing. Vaughn v. Fisher, 32 Mo. App. 29. See, generally, Attorney and Client.

Where the trustees may sell the goods at a certain time, and that time has arrived, the court will not make an order for the sale of the goods as perishable. Henisler v. Friedman, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 290, 9 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 11, 5 Pa. L. J. Rep. 147, 4 Am. L. J. 355.

Action to enforce lien.— In proceedings to enforce a lien the property attached cannot be appraised and sold during the pendency of proceedings under the provision in the general attachment law in reference to the sale of goods liable to perish or waste, or which cannot be kept without great expense. Coburn v. Clark, 3 Allen (Mass.) 207, Bryan v. The Steamer Enterprise, 53 N. C. 260.

Encumbered property.— The statute in Massachusetts did not limit the right to sell to cases of unencumbered property. Jackson v. Colcord, 114 Mass. 60.

liability to great depreciation in value, the interests of the parties require that it be thus converted,[37] or the officer may sell such property when a proper case is made according to the requirements of the statute.[38]

c. Effect of Determination of Necessity of Sale. Ordinarily the correctness of an order for the sale of attached property before judgment, or determining the propriety of such sale will not be reviewed, nothing appearing affirmatively to impeach it, but the propriety thereof will be presumed.[39]

Interpretation of statute.— In order to authorize the sale of property as perishable, or to justify the resort to the statutory remedy, the property should come within the contemplation of the statute. The statutes, however, have not always been given the same construction in their application. Thus it is held that the term "perishable property" applies only to property which is necessarily subject to immediate decay (Newman v. Kane, 9 Nev. 234; Fisk v. Spring, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 367, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 510) or which is, in its own nature, perishable, and not such as by extraordinary exposure may be liable to loss or destruction, if so situated that its safety can be provided for by the attaching officer (Oneida Nat. Bank v. Paldi, 2 Mich. N. P. 221). Thus lumber and shingles (Mosher v. Bay Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 579, 66 N. W. 478), wines and liquors (Henisler v. Friedman, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 290, 9 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 11, 5 Pa. L. J. Rep. 147, 4 Am. L. J. 355), railroad cross-ties (Goodman v. Moss, 64 Miss. 303, 1 So. 241), a leasehold interest in land (Birmingham First Nat. Bank v. Consolidated Electric Light Co., 97 Ala. 465, 12 So. 71), and cotton ginned and baled (Weis v. Basket, 71 Miss. 771, 15 So. 659) are not perishable within the meaning of such statutes. But on the other hand it is held that the term "perishable" should receive a liberal rather than a narrow construction, and will embrace property, the keeping of which may render them of no value in the end to satisfy the claims, and in this sense any property subject to attachment may be ordered sold as perishable (McCreery v. Berney Nat. Bank, 116 Ala. 224, 22 So. 577, 67 Am. St. Rep. 105; Young v. Davis, 30 Ala. 213; Millard v. Hall, 24 Ala. 209); goods, the styles in which change every season, and which are liable to become hard and unsuitable for use, and moth-eaten and injured by dust and dirt (Schumann v. Davis, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 575, 34 N. Y. St. 698, 19 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 348, 26 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 125 [disapproving Fisk v. Spring, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 367, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 510, supra]); live animals which are liable to perish, waste, or to be greatly reduced in value by keeping, or which cannot be kept but with great and disproportionate expense (Zimmerman v. Fischer, 13 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 224; Baker v. Baker, 28 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 300; Southern R. Co. v. Sheppard, 42 S. C. 543, 20 S. E. 481); a horse and chaise (Anonymous, 18 N. J. L. 26). The statute sometimes expressly provides that "when any of the property taken in attachment shall consist of animals or perishable property" the court may order it to be sold. Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407; Mosher v. Bay Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 579, 66 N. W. 478.

After error and supersedeas.— After writ of error and supersedeas from a final judgment dissolving an attachment and dismissing the suit have been perfected the property attached and still remaining in the sheriff's hands may be sold. The officer may sell the same and hold the proceeds to abide the judgment. State v. Hull, 37 Fla. 579, 20 So. 762.

38. Appraisers may be appointed at request of party to determine whether or not the property is perishable, liable to waste, etc. Kennedy v. Pike, 43 Me. 423; Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407.

Determination of freeholders.— Sometimes under the statute the sale takes place only on the sworn certificate of a certain number of freeholders as to the nature of the property and its danger to immediate waste or decay. Culver v. Dumsey, 6 Ill. App. 598; Kirby v. Coldwell, 26 Miss. 103.

For form of request for a sale of attached property see Eastman v. Eveleth, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 137.

Truth or falsity of affidavits.— Under the statute in Wisconsin, authorizing the court to sell the attached property when likely to perish or depreciate in value during the pendency of the action, an order of sale based on affidavits showing the requisite facts will not be set aside on motion made after the proceedings thereunder are practically concluded, whether the affidavits were true or false. Shakman v. Koch, 93 Wis. 595, 67 N. W. 925.

Conclusiveness of appraisement.— An appraisment of chattels is conclusive evidence, as against the parties to the suit, of the authority of the officer to sell, and of the value for which defendant in that suit may give security as a substitute for the property (Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407), but it is not competent evidence of the value of the chattels as against a party

d. Nature and Effect of Sale. The object of the statutes providing for the sale of attached property in limine or before final judgment is not to alter the rights of the parties, but to substitute in the possession of the court or officer imperishable money requiring no expense to keep, for perishable property or property expensive to keep.[40]

2. After Replevy or Dissolution of Attachment. An order of sale of attached property after it has been replevied or the attachment dissolved is improper.[41]

3. Sale by Consent. A sale of attached property may be made by the officer by consent of the parties interested.[42] The sale will be the official act of the officer and the proceeds are held under the attachment, in the place of the property.[43] whose property could not lawfully be attached in the suit, who has no part in the appointment of the appraisers, and who does not claim title under either of the original parties (Adams v. Wheeler, 97 Mass. 67).

Missouri.— Franke v. Eby, 50 Mo. App. 579.

Texas.— Pace v. Smith, 57 Tex. 555, holding that the proceeds should be retained by the clerk of court until the attachment is disposed of.

Vermont.— Richmond v. Collamer, 38 Vt. 68.

Right to give bond.—The proceeds take the place of the property and continue subject to the right of defendant to have it delivered to him on giving bond, unless he has waived the right by an agreement that the proceeds shall remain in hands of the sheriff, subject to the rights of the attaching creditors, until the further order of the court. State v. Judge Civil Dist. Ct., 44 La. Ann. 87, 10 So. 405; State v. Young, 40 La. Ann. 203, 3 So. 722; State v. Judge Twenty-first Judicial Dist., 37 La. Ann. 253. See also Pollard v. Baker, 101 Mass. 259.

Effect upon other liens.— The sale does not interfere with prior liens, and the sheriff is not liable to the prior attaching creditor for failing to take proper care of property in his custody. Taylor v. Thurman, (Tex. 1889) 12 S. W. 614. Where mortgaged perishable property is sold under an attachment the lien is released from the property and transferred to its proceeds. Welsh v. Lewis, 71 Ga. 387.

Attachment by officer of funds in his hands. — A sale of attached property is not vitiated by the fact that the officer illegally attaches the funds in his hands on a writ in favor of another creditor. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247.

41. Weathers v. Mudd, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 112; Ah Lep v. Gong Choy, 13 Oreg. 205, 9 Pac. 483.

Dissolution as to part of property.—Where, after an appraisal of attached property, the officer dissolves the attachment on one of the articles before the sale, this does not render the sale of the remaining articles illegal if the debtor did not offer to deposit the money or give the bond permitted by the statute to prevent such sale. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247.

Agreement by part of creditors.— Where there are several attachments on the same goods, all the creditors take judgment and execution, all but the last attacher agree to a sale before judgment, and the proceeds are not sufficient to satisfy the first attacher's debt, the officer is not liable to the last for any of the property. Munger v. Fletcher, 2 Vt. 524.

Consent by subsequently attaching creditors.— Where subsequently attaching creditors forbid the officer to pay the proceeds of sale to the first attaching creditors who consented to sale, but orally consent that he may proceed in the sale, they cannot be permitted, in a suit against the officer for not paying to them the proceeds of such property, to allege that such sale was made without the consent of the debtor and of all the attaching creditors. Eastman v. Eveleth, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 137.

Objections by strangers.— Where, on application and consent of all creditors who have sued out attachments, and with the consent of the debtors and their assignee, the attached effects have been sold by order of the court, and the proceeds paid pursuant to that order to the clerk, creditors who did not obtain judgments until after such order was made have no such rights in the property as entitle them to object to the manner in which the writ was executed. Walter v. Bickham, 122 U. S. 320, 7 S. Ct. 1197, 30 L. ed. 1185.

Auctioneer agent of sheriff.— An order obtained by consent of the parties interested in an attachment proceeding, that, by an auctioneer named, the sheriff sell the seized property, "and hold the proceeds thereof in the same manner as the property sold subject to the existing rights of all parties therein," constitutes the auctioneer the sher-

4. Duty of Officer to Sell. Where the order is regularly issued the officer must sell and the order is a complete protection to him.[44] The object of the statute permitting sale of perishable property before judgment is to confide a power to be used for the benefit of both parties. The officer cannot be held liable in trover as for a conversion.[45] Such order protects the officer, although it will not affect the legality of the original seizure.[46]

5. Validity of Proceedings — a. In General. The proceedings upon the sale of attached property should be in strict compliance with the statute governing the matter.[47]

b. Order of Sale. An order of sale may be made at the next term after plaintiff recovers judgment in the action,[48] but when the statute permits the sale of property before judgment, by order of court, the sheriff has no right to sell without such order.[49]

c. Notice of Appraisal and Sale. Notice of appraisal and sale should be given as required by the statute, otherwise the sale will be illegal,[50] and it is held iff's agent, and renders the sheriff responsible for moneys coming into the auctioneer's hands. Griffin v. Helmbold, 72 N. Y. 437.

Consent by claimant.— An agreement by plaintiff that goods which he claims, and for the taking of which by defendant, a deputy sheriff, upon attachment against a third person, he has brought his action, may be sold, and the proceeds retained in place of the goods, is not a release of the cause of action or conclusive against plaintiff's right to maintain the same. Sartwell v. Moses, 62 N. H. 355.

Determination on appraisal that property should be sold is conclusive on the officer and he is bound to sell. Kennedy v. Pike, 43 Me. 423.

Liability for failure to sell.— In Cilley v. Jenness, 2 N. H. 87, it was held that if the property attached be perishable the officer is liable for the net market value thereof, for he ought to sell it at auction before he suffers injury. See, generally, Sheriffs and Constables.

46. Sterling v. Ripley, 3 Pinn. (Wis.) 155.

47. Kirby v. Coldwell, 26 Miss. 103 (holding that a sale of perishable property without a strict compliance with the statute does not bind the owner); Walker v. Wilmarth, 37 Vt. 289.

Rules applicable to executions.—Sometimes the same rules govern as when the property is taken under execution. Thus in Nebraska it is held that the sale of attached lands under an order of court is under the statute governed by the same restrictions and regulations as if the land had been levied on by execution. Helmer v. Rehm, 14 Nebr. 219, 15 N. W. 344. See, generally, Executions.

Inventory and appraisal.— An attachment under Mass. Gen. Stat. c. 123, § 77, is not invalidated by the fact that the appraisers did not state in their certificate the separate value of each article in the schedule prepared by the officer, but appraised the whole property at a round sum. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247.

48. Cozine v. Hatch, 17 Nebr. 694, 24 N. W. 389.

49. Work v. Kinney, (Ida. 1898) 51 Pac. 745.

Authority of officer issuing writ.— A justice of the peace who has issued an attachment returnable to a court in his county, which has been levied by the sheriff of another county on perishable property, has authority to make an order for the sale of such property. Young v. Davis, 30 Ala. 213. So if two attachments issue out of different courts at different times, the court from which the last writ issues may order a sale of the property, but has no power to interfere with the rights of the first attaching creditor in the proceeds. Weaver v. Wood, 49 Cal. 297.

Sufficiency of order.— The order need not show the facts which authorize the sale or making of the order. Moore v. Smith, 96 Ga. 763, 22 S. E. 297; Wilson v. Garrick, 72 Ga. 660.

50. Stoat v. Brown, 64 Ark. 312, 42 S. W. 415; Sawyer v. Wilson, 61 Me. 529 (where it is held that an officer who sells attached property on mesne process without giving the notice required by law is a trespasser ab initio); Kirby v. Coldwell, 26 Miss. 103; Walker v. Wilmarth, 37 Vt. 289 (which holds that a sale of attached property on the application of the creditor, made under statute without the written notice thereby required to be given to the owner of the property by the officer, is illegal, although the owner has verbal notice, is present at the appraisal and sale, and makes no objection); Gassett v. Sargeant, 26 Vt. 424.

Waiver by second attaching creditor.—A second attaching creditor, who signs as attorney of the first attaching creditor a written request to have the property appraised and sold under the first attachment, thereby waives the notice required by statute to be that a sale of property which is subject to a valid mortgage should not be made without a previous warning order to the mortgagee.[51]

d. Time of Sale. The sale of attached property should not be made at a time other than that prescribed by the statute,[52] or ordered by the court;[53] but a general law fixing a certain day of the month for all sheriff sales is held to apply to sales of personalty ordered pending an attachment.[54]

e. Private Sale. Where under the terms of the statute the sale must be public, a private sale will be entirely unauthorized.[55]

f. Terms of Sale. When the terms of sale of attached property do not conform to the statutory rules regarding the time for which credit may be given the sale should be set aside,[56] and when an officer sells goods he becomes liable from the time of the sale for the price at which they are sold, and cannot set up in defense to an action for it that he never received the money or its equivalent, when he has no right to sell for anything but money.[57]

g. Sale of Real Estate. A sale of real estate which has been attached cannot be ordered until all the personal property attached has been sold.[58]

h. Indemnity Bond. Where an order of sale is regularly issued, the officer is bound to sell, although title to the property is disputed; and he cannot refuse to given by the officer. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247.

Notice to all parties.—If an officer attaches property of two tenants in common, on writs against both, in selling upon the writs he must commonly notify all the parties of the appraisal, and it will be the same as no appraisal in respect of the party not notified. Gassett v. Sargeant, 26 Vt. 424.

Aider of notice by postponement.—A notice of sale of attached property, defective for want of sufficient time, cannot be cured by a postponement of the sale, on the day appointed therefor, to a day remote enough to satisfy the statutory requirement as to notice. Sawyer v. Wilson, 61 Me. 529.

Sufficiency of service.—Notice to defendant that plaintiff has applied to the officer to make sale of goods attached on mesne process, under Mass. Stat. (1822), c. 93, and that defendant may appoint one of the appraisers, may be given by leaving a written notification at defendant's usual place of abode. Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407.

51. Simper v. Stein-Vogeler Drug Co., 18 Ky. L. Rep. 565, 37 S. W. 258, holding that a sale of property as perishable, no warning order having been issued to the mortgagee until the day of sale, could be set aside at the instance of the latter and the attaching creditor made to account for the proceeds, he having purchased the property at the sale for an inadequate price and subsequently sold them at a large advance. But see Jackson v. Colcord, 114 Mass. 60.

52. After appraisal.— Under the Maine statute, where property attached was appraised it could not be sold before four days from the appraisal and if so sold the officer became a trespasser ab initio. Knight v. Herrin, 48 Me. 533.

The time is to be reckoned, under such a statute, from the time of seizure, and not from the date of the certificate of the examiners. Sumner v. Crawford, 45 N. H. 416.

53. Parties cannot control officer.— The sheriff is not under the control of either party and neither can order the sale to be stopped. If the officer neglects to sell at the time ordered by the court he does so at his peril. Oeters v. Aehle, 31 Mo. 380.

54. Bayly v. Weil, 28 La. Ann. 264.

55. Culver v. Rumsey, 6 Ill. App. 598, holding that such private sale will postpone the lien of the creditor effecting it to those of subsequently attaching creditors.

56. Dunn v. Salter, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 342.

57. Appleton v. Bancroft, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 231.

Confederate notes.— In a forced sale of an absentee's property under an attachment process, in 1862, while Confederate notes were a circulating medium, the absentee was presumed not to have consented to the sale of his property for such unlawful currency; and where it was subsequently determined that the absentee should receive the price of the sale, the sheriff who made the sale and received the price was not permitted to set up in defense to its payment that the sale was made for, and the price received in, Confederate notes, and that he, the sheriff, could not be compelled to pay any other than such currency as he had received. Spalding v. Walden, 23 La. Ann. 474.

The giving of credit to the purchaser of the goods will not invalidate a sale, under the statute authorizing the immediate sale of attached property liable to depreciate in value by keeping, or which cannot be kept without great and disproportionate expense. Crocker v. Baker, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 407.

58. Davidson v. Simmons, 11 Bush (Ky.) 330; Camden v. Haymond, 9 W. Va. 680.

Affidavit.—Under the Kentucky code plaintiff was required to file an affidavit that there was not enough personal property to satisfy his claim. Payne v. Witherspoon, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 217. It seems, however, that a failure to file an affidavit that defendant has no personalty before the judgment for proceed because plaintiff does not give an indemnity bond.[59] Some statutes, however, require an indemnity bond before sale in cases against non-residents, or where defendant has been constructively summoned and has not appeared, in order to secure him if he should appear and successfully defend within a certain time.[60] A sale without such bond having been executed is invalid and will be set aside.[61]

i. Sale of Part of Property. It is the duty of the sheriff on the final process to sell no more of the property than may be required to pay the amount due, including the costs,[62] and where the levy is upon a particular interest only, that interest alone should be sold;[63] but a sale after appraisal is not illegal by reason of the fact that more than enough to realize the amount called for by the precept is sold, where the last article sold was indivisible and previous to its sale the necessary amount had not been realized.[64]

j. Return and Confirmation. If a sale of attached property is not reported and confirmed as required it is not complete,[65] and may be set aside.[66]

6. Rights and Title of Purchaser. The title of a purchaser at a sale in an sale of realty is rendered does not render the judgment void, or in any way operate to annul the lien. Fremd v. Ireland, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1140, 33 S. W. 89.

Return of officer instead of affidavit.— An affidavit of the non-existence of personal property, as required by the statute, before an order will be made for the sale of land is not necessary where the officer's return shows an attachment of land because no personalty could be found. Webster v. Daniel, 47 Ark. 131, 14 S. W. 550.

The security need not be given before execution issues, and if defendant dies after judgment plaintiff must give security to the personal representatives of deceased. Fitch v. Ross, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 557.

In Maryland, under the act of 1715, providing that the court "shall and may condemn said goods, &c., . . . and award execution thereof to be had and made . . . as in other judgments," etc., upon plaintiff giving security, etc., it was held that at the time judgment is rendered plaintiff is entitled to judgment of condemnation, with the right of execution on giving the security (Dawson v. Contee, 22 Md. 27; Walters v. Munroe, 17 Md. 501), and plaintiff need not give security to defendant after the lapse of a year and a day from the granting of the attachment (Wallace v. Forrest, 2 Harr. & M. (Md.) 261).

61. Bush v. Visant, 40 Ark. 124 (holding that a sale without the required bond having been given is void, although the court appointed attorneys, who, without authority, entered a general denial for defendant, and demanded a jury trial); Calk v. Francis, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 42 (holding that where real estate of a non-resident is attached an indemnity bond must be given to authorize sale, and if not given in proper time, the defect cannot be subsequently cured); Hiller v. Lamkin, 54 Miss. 14 (holding the failure to give the bond renders the sale void); Hall v. Lowther, 22 W. Va. 570.

62. Dronillard v. Whistler, 29 Ind. 552.

Debt due by instalments.—On a bill against an absent debtor to subject his lands to the satisfaction of a debt due by instalments, some of which are not payable at the time of the decree, a sale to satisfy such as have become payable should be ordered, and the attachment preserved to secure such as are to become afterward payable. Watts v. Kinney, 3 Leigh (Va.) 272, 23 Am. Dec. 266.

63. Thompson v. Baker, 74 Me. 48.

Return aided by parol evidence.— When an officer's return of the sale of attached property, sold by request of the creditor, does not state specifically that notice required by statute was given to the debtor, parol evidence is admissible to prove that such notice was given. Bentley v. White, 54 Vt. 564.

Return on original writ.— Where attached property was sold before judgment, it was not essential to the validity of the sale or the preservation of the attachment, that a return of the sale should be made on the original writ. The statute contemplated a sale either before or after the return of the writ. It was obvious that a sale after such return-day could not be made a part of the return on the original writ, and no provision was made for such return to be indorsed on the writ if the sale should be made before the return-day. Eastman v. Eveleth, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 137. But the certificate of appraisers of property attached on mesne process, on the back of the writ, and adopted by the officer as part of his return, is, together with the return, competent evidence of the disposition of the property. Kennedy v. Pike, 43 Me. 423.

Sale pending appeal.— Where, pending an appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace, the officer sells the attached property, under the statute, at the request of a party, the return is properly made to the court where the cause is pending. Bentley v. White, 54 Vt. 564.

66. Greer v. Powell, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 124.

attachment proceeding relates back to the date of the levy.[67] Unless he can bring himself within the protection afforded a bona fide purchaser without notice, a purchaser at a sheriff's sale in an attachment proceeding can acquire only defendant's interest in the attached property;[68] but a mere purchaser who does nothing more than purchase is not responsible in trespass for the wrongful act of the sheriff in levying on and selling the goods.[69] An order of sale of property as perishable, and sale under such order, however, will confer a good title on the purchaser,[70] without regard to the title or interest of defendant in attachment and notwithstanding the property may have belonged to another or may have been burdened with other claims.[71]

7. Disposition of Proceeds or Property[72]— a. In General. The officer should continue his custody of the attached property until the formal disposition of the attachment suit.[73] The proceeds of a sale of such property when the sale thereof is made before judgment are to be held to be disposed of in like manner as the property would have been held and disposed of if it had remained unsold,[74] and

68. Plea of bona fide purchaser is not available where before sale defendant has transferred the legal title to the equitable owner and the deed has been duly recorded. Byers v. Wackman, 16 Ohio St. 440.

Express notice of prior lien.—One who buys at an attachment sale with express notice of a prior attachment is not an innocent purchaser as against the prior attaching creditor. Riordan v. Britton, 69 Tex. 198, 7 S. W. 50, 5 Am. St. Rep. 37.

Interest acquired after levy.— An attachment sale passes all of defendant's interest, that which he held at the date of the levy as well as that subsequently acquired. Willis v. Pounds, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 512, 25 S. W. 715.

69. Talmadge v. Scudder, 38 Pa. St. 517, holding, however, that where the purchaser takes possession he is liable in trespass if defendant in attachment had no title, the wrong being, not the illegal seizure by the sheriff but the subsequent act of the purchaser in taking and removing the property.

App. 297; McConnell v. Kaufman, 5 Wash. 686, 32 Pac. 782 (holding that the sale of property at the instance of several attaching creditors will confer a good title on the purchaser, notwithstanding one of the attaching creditors claimed under a levy made subsequently to the sale of the property by the attachment debtor, and notwithstanding mere excessiveness of a levy).

Collateral attack.— The order directing attached property to be sold cannot be collaterally attacked for the purpose of defeating the title of the purchaser at the sale. McCreery v. Berney Nat. Bank, 116 Ala. 224, 22 So. 577, 67 Am. St. Rep. 105; Buller v. Woods, 43 Mo. App. 494.

Protection to sheriff.— The sheriff, as defendant in an action of trespass by the real owner, cannot justify the taking of goods on the ground that by this peculiar rule of law the title of his vendee was validated. State v. Hadlock, 52 Mo. App. 297; Megee v. Beirne, 39 Pa. St. 50.

Sale free from other liens.— The title acquired by a purchaser of attached goods sold as perishable, by order of court, while in its custody, is superior to a lawful lien thereon for taxes (Parlin, etc., Co. v. Howard, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 52 S. W. 631); and to a prior landlord's lien (Betterton v. Eppstein, 78 Tex. 443, 14 S. W. 861).

73. Livingston v. Smith, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 90, 8 L. ed. 57.

Sale of part of property.— A sale under mesne process of only a part of the property attached, but for an amount exceeding both plaintiff's claim and the amount the officer was commanded to attach, does not dissolve the attachment, as to the balance or impair plaintiff's lien on it. Marshall v. Town, 28 Vt. 14.

The attaching officer cannot be charged as a wrong-doer for retaining possession until satisfactory evidence be given him that the attachment has been vacated, although the debt may have in fact been paid and the attachment thereby discharged. Wheeler v. Nichols, 32 Me. 233.

Writ issued without authority.— Where an officer, after attaching property, discovers within the time limited for making his return that the writ was issued without plaintiff's authority, he must return the property and make a true return of all the facts. Williams v. Ives, 25 Conn. 568.

should not it has been held be distributed before judgment and order for such distribution.[75]

b. Notice. It is proper that defendant should have notice of an order of distribution.[76]

c. Release of Property Under Excessive Levy. Where there is an excessive levy, the error should be corrected by procuring a release of the property in excess of what is sufficient to satisfy the writ and not by discharging the attachment altogether.[77]

d. According to Priority of Lien. The proceeds of the sale of attached property should be applied according to the priority of the attachment liens.[78] bution and to the time of his death retain the money as a trust fund, separate and apart from his own money, he is guilty of no breach of his official bond for which his securities could be made liable. But if he converted the money in his lifetime or so mingled it with his own that his administrator cannot distinguish the one from the other it constitutes a conversion and a breach of his official bond. State v. Roberts, 21 Ark. 260.

75. Right to sue for proceeds.— A sheriff cannot be sued by attachment plaintiff for the proceeds of perishable property taken and sold by him by order of the court, until the court shall make an order upon him after final judgment in the attachment suit to pay the money to plaintiff. Yell v. Lawson, 7 Ark. 352; State v. Hickman, 150 Mo. 626, 51 S. W. 680; State v. Finn, 98 Mo. 532, 11 S. W. 994, 14 Am. St. Rep. 654.

Before determination of ownership of attached property the court should not order the proceeds to be paid to plaintiff. Simmons Clothing Co. v. Davis, (Indian Terr. 1900) 58 S. W. 655.

After interplea in several attachments.— Where several separate attachment suits are begun against an insolvent debtor and a creditor files an interplea in each case, claiming the attached property, which by consent of all plaintiffs is sold, the proceeds to be paid into court to await the order of the court, no disposition can be made of them until all the suits are disposed of. State v. Hockaday, 132 Mo. 227, 33 S. W. 812.

When assessment unnecessary.— Under a statute providing that the court shall direct the clerk to make an assessment of the amount each attaching creditor is entitled to out of the property attached, no order is necessary where the judge of the court is ex officio clerk thereof. Rawles v. People, 2 Colo. App. 501, 31 Pac. 941.

76. Morrow v. Smith, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 99.

Sheriff's duty.— As between different attaching creditors, a subsequent one may move that the sheriff be required to pay over to him the proceeds of the goods attached by all, and it is the sheriff's duty to notify the other creditors if he would have the decision on the motion binding upon them. Dixey v. Pollock, 8 Cal. 570.

Debtor party to rule against sheriff.— The debtor may become a party to a money rule against the sheriff by an attaching creditor, and may plead that said creditor has no valid lien upon the fund in the sheriff's hands, being the proceeds of the sale of his goods. Wynne v. Millers, 61 Ga. 343.

77. Moses v. Arnold, 43 Iowa 187, 22 Am. Rep. 239, holding that when causes of action authorizing attachment are united with others not authorizing such remedy, the error should be corrected by reducing the amount of property held until it is sufficient to cover only the causes of action authorizing attachment. See also McConnell v. Kaufman, 5 Wash. 686, 32 Pac. 782.

Release of property not in mortgage.— If a chattel mortgage held by an attaching creditor who has caused attachment to be levied upon the same and other property is ample security for the debt with interest and costs, the court may, upon proper application, discharge so much of the property not covered by the mortgage as is not necessary to satisfy the claim. Clyde State Bank v. Mottin, 47 Kan. 455, 28 Pac. 200.

78. Priorities of attachment lien, generally, see supra, XII, B.

Effect of recovery of damages for wrongful attachment.— Where property was sold subject to liens of two attachments and the proceeds paid into court and defendant recovered damages, on his answer, alleging that the first attachment was wrongful, it was held that the proper disposition of the proceeds was as follows: The amount recovered by defendant as damages should be deducted from the recovery of the first attaching creditor on the merits of his claim; the balance of his claim to be satisfied from the proceeds of sale, and what remained of these proceeds should be applied to the claim of the second attaching creditor. Blum v. Stein, 68 Tex. 608, 5 S. W. 454.

Joinder of creditors in common suits.— Where an attachment is held void as to subsequently attaching creditors who have proved their claim and joined in a common suit for their mutual benefit, it is held that the court may distribute the fund among them pro rata instead of in the order of the liens of their respective attachments. Craig v. California Vineyard Co., 30 Oreg. 43, 46 Pac. 421.

Laches in moving for distribution of proceeds cannot be imputed to one attaching creditor whereby another may acquire priority over him. State v. Hickman, 150 Mo. 626, 51 S. W. 680.

Where an attachment is dissolved plain-

e. Upon Release or Payment. Where plaintiff voluntarily releases an attachment,[79] or where he succeeds and defendant pays the judgment[80] the officer should return to defendant the property held.

f. Application of Surplus. A creditor under whose writ property could not be seized because it was held by an officer of another jurisdiction, under another writ, may intervene in the latter suit and share in the distribution of the proceeds,[81] and a mortgage lien perfected before the levy of a second attachment will be entitled to satisfaction out of the surplus proceeds of sale under a prior attachment.[82] The sale of property as perishable does not affect the right of subsequently attaching creditors to participate in the proceeds.[83]

g. Purchase by Creditor. If, under a sale by consent of all the parties, a creditor purchases a part of the property, in amount less than his debt, to satisfaction of which he is entitled under the agreement, the officer cannot maintain an action against him for the purchase-price.[84]

h. Payment to Plaintiff. If the purchaser at a sale of property under mesne process pays the price to the creditor whose recovery is sufficient to absorb the whole of such proceeds the purchaser will be discharged unless the officer holds paramount claims upon such proceeds.[85]

tiff's relation to a fund realized by sheriff's sale of the property is that of any other simple contract creditor, and he is not interested in such a way as to entitle him to demand an issue in a matter of the distribution. In re Jones, 2 Kulp (Pa.) 126.

80. Neely v. Munnich, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 507, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 316.

A mere deposit with the clerk of the court, by a defendant in an attachment suit, of the amount of the judgment rendered against him in the suit is not such a payment of the judgment as to entitle him to a release of the property attached in the suit. Sagely v. Livermore, 45 Cal. 613.

81. In state and federal court.— Where property has been seized by an officer under an attachment in a suit in a state court, who prevents the United States marshal from taking possession under a subsequent writ in a suit in the federal court, the creditor in the latter suit may intervene in the former and have the residue of the proceeds after satisfying the first writ applied upon his claim. Goodbar v. Brooks, 57 Ark. 450, 22 S. W. 96. So where in attachment in a state court the sheriff cannot seize the property because it is in possession of the United States marshal under an attachment from the federal court, the creditor in the first writ, although residing in the same state with defendant, may, on service of notice of his claim on the marshal, intervene in the federal court and, on showing a properly adjudicated claim, share in his proper order in the proceeds of the sale. Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 8 S. Ct. 379, 31 L. ed. 374.

82. Hurt v. Redd, 64 Ala. 85.

Assignment of equity of redemption.— Where a mortgagor assigns his equity of redemption after it is attached, and the officer afterward sells it upon the attaching creditor's execution, which is satisfied by a part of the proceeds, and having no notice of the assignment applies the surplus in satisfaction of another attachment execution against the mortgagor, he is not answerable to the assignee for such surplus. Bacon v. Leonard, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 277 [distinguishing Clark v. Austin, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 528, where the sheriff had notice of the right of the assignee to the equity of redemption, and paid over the surplus to him, the assignee's right being precedent to the right under the other execution].

83. Donk v. Alexander, 117 Ill. 330, 7 N. E. 672. If two attachments issue from different district courts at different times and the sheriff levies on personal property by virtue of both, the court from which the second attachment issues may make an order for the sale of the property, but it has no power to dispose of the fund arising from the sale, other than the surplus remaining after the claim of the first attaching creditor is satisfied. Weaver v. Wood, 49 Cal. 297.

84. Ball v. Divoll, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 143.

Effect of agreement creating secret trust. — Upon the sale of attached property attaching plaintiff agreed with defendant to buy the property, satisfy his debt out of the proceeds thereof, and return the balance to the debtor, and it was held that this constituted a secret trust in favor of the debtor, and that attaching plaintiff was liable to other creditors of defendant for the surplus of the proceeds over the amount necessary to satisfy the attaching creditor's claim. Ries v. Rowland, 4 McCrary (U. S.) 85, 11 Fed. 657.

85. Barker v. Barker, 47 N. H. 341.

Payment to plaintiff under order of sale. — Where one creditor only obtains judgment in a suit commenced by writ of attachment, it is not necessary that the order of sale of the property attached, authorized by the statute, should require the money arising from the sale to be paid into court; but, if it require the same to be paid to plaintiff, this will not vitiate either the order or the proceedings under it. People v. Judges Calhoun Cir. Ct., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 417.

i. Liability of Officer For Interest on Proceeds. Where attached property becomes changed into money in the officer's hands and is invested by him so as to produce interest, such interest belongs to the party entitled to the money and not to the officer.[86]

G. Proceedings by Trustees or Auditors — 1. In General. Some of the attachment acts contemplate a proceeding somewhat analogous to proceeedings in involuntary bankruptcy. Auditors or trustees are appointed to administer the debtor's estate,[87] and adjust the claims of all the creditors who come in under the attachment.[88]

2. Powers and Duties. It is the duty of the trustees or auditors to ascertain and adjust the demands of all creditors of defendant who come in under the writ.[89]

Pennsylvania — All must qualify but majority may act. — Under the Pennsylvania act of 1807 three trustees must be appointed and must qualify before any can act; but if they all qualify the acts of a majority will bind. Thus, where all the trustees have qualified and one afterward dies the other two may sue in the name of all. McCready v. Guardians of Poor, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 94, 11 Am. Dec. 667.

Compensation. — Under the former New York absconding debtor's act the trustees were entitled to reasonable counsel fees, to costs accrued in the prosecution of a certiorari, although the commissioner's decision was confirmed by the court, and to commissions on such sum as, on compromise, was paid by the debtor to attachment creditor, although the money did not come to their hands. Claim by state — Dividend made before notice. — Where auditors made a dividend before notice of a debt due to the commonwealth, which accrued previously to issuing the attachment, it was held that the commonwealth was entitled to no preference. Hollinsworth v. Hamelin, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 151, 1 L. ed. 77.

Applying creditor cannot attack attachment. — An applying creditor cannot claim the benefit of a writ of attachment by entering a rule for his admission and presenting his demand to the auditor, and afterward attack its validity on exception to the auditor's report. Westcott v. Sharp, 50 N. J. L. 392, 13 Atl. 243.

89. New Jersey — Functions same as common-law auditors. — In New Jersey the statute does not prescribe with particularity the powers and duties of such officers, but it is held that their functions are the same, and that they are to be governed by the same rules, as common-law auditors. Contesting judgment offered in evidence by plaintiff. — The creditors may contest a judgment in cognovit entered in favor of attachment plaintiff in another court, when it is offered in evidence before the auditors. Stewart v. Walters, 38 N. J. L. 274.

Relief against fraudulent claim. — In the case of attachment, where plaintiff imposes a fictitious or satisfied claim upon the auditors, or conceals from them any fact tending to show that his claim is not valid, he commits a fraud upon the absent defendant, against which equity will relieve. Tomkins v. Tomkins, 11 N. J. Eq. 512.

A statutory exemption claimed by debtor's wife cannot be considered by the auditor, his duty being merely to ascertain the claims of plaintiff and other applying creditors and to report on them. Westcott v. Sharp, 50 N. J. L. 392, 13 Atl. 243.

Discovery of property. — In New Jersey, after defendant has entered his appearance without giving bond, the auditor has no power to proceed for the discovery of other property of defendant. Jackson v. Johnson, 51 N. J. L. 457, 17 Atl. 959.

If a demand be unliquidated the trustees may assess and determine the damages in like manner as a jury. Matter of Negus, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 499.

Preference — Claim against debtor as executor. — A claim against the debtor as exec-

Upon their appointment all the estate of the debtor vests in them,[90] and they may sell so much thereof as is sufficient to pay defendant's debts,[91] restoring to the debtor the surplus left after such payment.[92] They may sue for and recover property fraudulently transferred by the debtor before the issue of the writ,[93] and may maintain an action against the sheriff for loss of the attached goods through negligence.[94]

3. LIABILITIES. The powers of the trustees are not of a purely ministerial nature, and where they have acted in good faith they cannot be held responsible for an error of judgment or a mistake of law.[95] They can be compelled to account either by a creditor or by the debtor,[96] but no action by a creditor will lie against them until they have been called before the court which appointed them to settle their accounts.[97]

4. ACCEPTANCE OR REJECTION OF REPORT BY COURT. The report must be returned to the court for final judgment within the time specified by the statute.[98] The

A bill will not lie by a judgment creditor after the appointment of trustees to reach property of the debtor alleged to be holden by third persons in trust for him. Whitmarsh v. Campbell, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 67.

Where property sold on execution.—Where the absconding debtor's property attached in domestic attachment was sold on execution, the trustees are entitled to the residue of money in the sheriff's hands after satisfaction of the execution, although they did not show that they had advertised for the creditors to come in. Ebert v. Spangler, 3 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 389.

Equity will set aside a sale of land by auditors where such sale is infected with fraud (Bellows v. Wilson, 29 N. J. Eq. 124; Hodgson v. Farrell, 15 N. J. Eq. 88), or where the auditors sold in one parcel several distinct tracts of land which might reasonably and conveniently have been sold separately and the sale of a part would have been sufficient to pay all the claims under the attachment (Johnson v. Garrett, 16 N. J. Eq. 31).

Eviction of purchaser — Liability of trustees.— Where the trustees of an absconding debtor, appointed under the statute, sell the debtor's lands, and give a deed conveying all his right and title they are not liable to refund on the purchaser's being evicted. Check received before notice of attachment. — Where the debtor transferred to a third person before the latter had notice of the attachment a check for the payment of money which he applied to the payment of a debt for which he was security for the attachment debtor, it was held that an action for money had and received would not lie by the trustees against such third person to recover the amount of the check. An action for money had and received admits that defendant received the money fairly; and the check having been given before such third party had notice of the attachment the title to the money transferred did not vest in the trustees at the time of the attachment. May plead statute of limitations.— Trustees under the absconding debtor's act, when sued by a creditor, may avail themselves of the statute of limitations to the same extent as the debtor might in an action against him. Peck v. Randall, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 165.

98. New Jersey — When judgment may be rendered.— Under the New Jersey statutes judgment cannot be rendered on the report until it has been on file for ten days and has been approved by the court or a judge. Plum v. Lugar, 49 N. J. L. 557, 9 Atl. 779.

Extension of time.— In New Jersey the court out of which the attachment issues has court may inquire into the merits of the controversy and may, in a proper case,[99] set the report aside and refer the matter back to the auditors;[1] or, if the evidence given before them be sent with the report, the court may supersede the finding of the auditors and itself render the proper judgment.[2]

H. Charges For Care and Preservation of Property — 1. Right to — a. In General. As it is the duty of an officer, under a writ of attachment, to take and retain possession of the property levied upon, at his peril, the law does not deny him a reimbursement of actually necessary and reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of this duty.[3]

b. Necessity of Expenses Incurred. Such additional compensation cannot be allowed unless the officer is put to trouble and incurs expenses in taking or preserving attached property,[4] and the charges must be reasonable, necessary for the purposes for which they are incurred,[5] and in the proper exercise of the duty to take and retain possession.[6]

2. Liability — a. Of Debtor — (1) In General. The expense of keeping property attached is eventually upon the debtor, because the officer, if he prepays that expense, may deduct it from the proceeds before turning them over to the creditor and therefore so much of the debt will be paid,[7] and a defendant is power to extend the time within which the auditors may make their report. Taylor v. Woodward, 10 N. J. L. 1.

Expense of retaking.— Where property held by an officer under an attachment is wrongfully taken out of his hands, it is held that a reasonable sum for the expense of regaining possession will follow the officer's lien as an incident to the performance of his duty. Rhoads v. Woods, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 471.

The sheriff is not bound to put a keeper in charge of attached property unless plaintiff, for whose benefit he acts, shall advance the necessary funds. Hawley v. Dawson, 16 Oreg. 344, 18 Pac. 592.

If not fixed by statute the officer will be entitled to the just and equitable expenses incurred in the proper care and keeping of the property while in his custody. Leadville City Bank v. Tucker, 7 Colo. 220, 3 Pac. 217.

If fixed by statute the sheriff can recover for expenses incurred in the keeping and custody of property under attachment no greater amount than that which the statute specifies, and if cases arise where his expenses are a little more than he is allowed to claim under the statute, he cannot bring an action against defendant for such expenses. This is one of the chances that the officer must take in the performance of his duty. Mathers v. Ramsey, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 334.

4. Calhoun v. Lee, 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1.

Necessity of taking possession.— Compensation for trouble and expense in taking possession of and preserving property applies only to cases where the sheriff has taken actual possession and has preserved the property attached. Ridlon v. Flanigan, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 115; Ringgold v. Lewis, 3 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 367, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,847.

Mere personal attention by officer.—In this connection it has been held that the sheriff is not entitled to compensation for a mere personal care of attached property, the statute providing for no such compensation. King v. Shepherd, 68 Iowa 215, 26 N. W. 82. But on the other hand, in Addington v. Sexton, 17 Wis. 327, 84 Am. Dec. 745, under a statute providing that the sheriff shall be entitled to receive all such necessary expenses incurred in taking possession of and preserving goods and chattels, as shall be just and reasonable in the opinion of the court, it was held that the sheriff was entitled to the reasonable value of his services just as he would have been entitled to such amount as it would have been necessary for him to expend to employ a clerk to care for the property and prevent it from spoiling.

5. McConnell v. McCormick, 2 Ida. 957, 28 Pac. 421; Seeman v. Tiedeman, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 615, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 401, in which latter case it is held that where the property attached was of the value of six hundred and fifty dollars, a charge by the sheriff for the employment of six persons as watchmen at a cost of one hundred and eighty dollars was unjustifiable and should not be allowed, no reason being suggested why one watchman would not have been sufficient.

6. Cutter v. Howe, 122 Mass. 541, holding that the permanent stationing of a watchman over property left on defendant's premises is not warranted by law, and that a charge therefor cannot be included in the taxable costs of the action.

liable on his contract to pay the expenses of keeping attached property and the officer is not bound to credit the sum so received on his legal charges.[8]

(II) Support of Live Stock. If live stock is attached and defendant does not have it released on bond he is bound to support it and is responsible for such expense if judgment is entered against him.[9]

b. Of Creditor. If an attachment suit is dismissed, the attachment discharged, or defendant prevails on the final determination of the cause, the expenses of keeping the property must be paid by plaintiff, and the officer has no lien on the property or its proceeds as against defendant.[10]

c. Of Sheriff to Custodian. Ordinarily, when the sheriff appoints a custodian to keep and care for the attached property, he is liable, either under his express contract or for a reasonable compensation, and the custodian cannot look to plaintiff

Sale under agreement between assignor, assignee, and creditor.— Expenses incurred in preserving and selling attached property should be paid out of the proceeds of the property, where, by a written contract between attachment creditor, the assignee, and assignor, the property was delivered to the assignee to be converted by him into money, the proceeds to be held to await the event of the attachment suit, the attachment suit terminating in favor of the attaching creditor. Use of property by officer.— If an officer use a horse which he has attached and the use is sufficient to pay for the keeping he cannot sustain an action for the pay of such keeping. Dean v. Bailey, 12 Vt. 142.

Dissolution by bankruptcy.— In Zeiber v. Hill, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 268, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,206, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 239, it was held that, where the dissolution of an attachment was brought about by subsequent bankruptcy of defendant, while the officer who levied the attachment must look to the party or attorney who employed him, he is entitled to compensation for keeping the live stock seized until it is claimed and received by the assignee, and for this purpose the officer may be considered as a bailee, entitled to compensation as any other agistor or feeder of cattle.

Massachusetts.— Phelps v. Campbell, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 59. But where an officer sells perishable property pursuant to the statute, and pays over the proceeds, less expenses of sale, to attachment defendant, upon his giving bond to procure a dissolution, he is not liable to an action by defendant, after he has prevailed in the attachment suit, to recover the amount deducted from the proceeds of the sale for expenses. Defendant in attachment may procure a release of the property by giving a bond. If he does not do this, and the property is perishable, a sale is as much for his interest as for that of the creditor. Nebraska.— Deering v. Wisherd, 46 Nebr. 720, 65 N. W. 788.

New Hampshire.— York v. Sanhorn, 47 N. North Carolina.— Stein v. Cozart, 122 N. C. 280, 30 S. E. 340; Haywood v. Hardie, 76 N. C. 384, which hold that a sheriff, who in attachment proceedings wrongfully seizes and sells property, which is subsequently adjudged to belong to an intervener, cannot retain the costs of the seizure and sale.

Oregon.— Mitchell v. Downing, 23 Oreg. 448, 32 Pac. 394.

Illegal seizure.— If the possession of property is illegally acquired under color of an attachment the officer cannot charge attachment defendant for keeping the same. Gardner v. Hust, 2 Rich. (S. C.) 601. And where the officer seizes property which he has no right to attach he cannot retain it for the purpose of reimbursement of money expended by him in discharge of a prior lien upon the property. Morton v. Hodgdon, 32 Me. 127.

By direction to dismiss the suit plaintiff cannot relieve himself from costs incurred in preserving the property after such direction and until the cause is regularly dismissed, where the sheriff could not deliver the property to the owner after plaintiff had directed the clerk to enter the dismissal and before the suit is in fact dismissed. Roberts v. Randolph, 17 Ark. 435. But where a plaintiff who agrees to release the levy on attached property and to give an order to the sheriff for its restoration to defendant, or for the delivery of the proceeds if any of the property has been sold, performs his agreement in these respects, he does not guarantee the good conduct of the sheriff and is not liable for the expenses incurred in taking care of the property. McPherson v. Harris, 59 Ala. 620.

in the action,[11] and in such an action against the officer it is no defense that he has no claim against another for the performance of such services.[12]

3. Allowance and Enforcement — a. In General. It seems that if attachment plaintiff is liable for the expenses incurred by reason of his order to the sheriff to levy the writ, the latter may recover them in an action against attachment plaintiff.[13] Ordinarily charges for keeping and preserving attached property are not taxable costs embraced in the ordinary fees for executing process,[14] or costs which abide the event of the suit.[15] Generally the compensation is such an amount as the officer who issues the writ[16] or the court[17] may fix or allow. It is

11. Hurd v. Ladner, 110 Iowa 263, 81 N. W. 470; Rowley v. Painter, 60 Iowa 432, 29 N. W. 401 (where it is held that under the statute in Iowa the sheriff is allowed the expenses incurred in keeping attached property which is to be paid by plaintiff and taxed as costs). But in Oregon in an action by the custodian against attachment plaintiff, under an alleged express contract, it was held that the sheriff by employing a keeper did not make himself personally responsible to such keeper, unless he had done so expressly, and that the sheriff might refuse to put a keeper in charge, unless plaintiff in whose behalf he acted should advance the necessary funds. Hawley v. Dawson, 16 Oreg. 344, 18 Pac. 592, where the custodian recovered against attachment plaintiff on a contract.

Employment by deputy sheriff.—In Dooley v. Root, 13 Gray (Mass.) 303, it was held that the sheriff was not liable for the services of a person employed by his deputy to keep property attached by the latter. But see Jones v. Thomas, 14 Ind. 474.

As against plaintiff the keeper cannot maintain an action unless the services were rendered at the instance or request of the attaching creditor. Baker v. Campbell, 2 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 143, 3 Ohio N. P. 297. Plaintiff's attorney in an attachment is not authorized by virtue of his employment as attorney to contract for putting a lock on a door to secure attached property. Glenn v. Savage, 14 Oreg. 567, 13 Pac. 442.

Recovery of amount allowed to sheriff.—In Jones v. Thomas, 14 Ind. 474, it was held that, where a sheriff's deputy told the bailee that his compensation would be what the law allowed, the latter was entitled to recover of the sheriff all that the court allowed to him.

Storage.— An officer who attaches chattels in the possession of a person other than the owner and appoints a keeper of them is liable for storage if he continues to keep them on the premises of the original bailee, although no agreement to that effect has been made, and he has had no notice to remove them. In such a case the officer's return of the writ in which he adds to his fees a claim (of plaintiff in the action against him) for storage, is admissible, not for the purpose of proving the amount due, but for the purpose of showing that the officer was aware of the claim and admitted it. The action being by a railroad company for the storage of freight cars attached, agents of other railroads are competent witnesses to the proper charge for such storage, and evidence is inadmissible to show that in similar cases no charge for storage had ever been made. held that where the statute provides the method of determining the compensation, as by allowance by the court, such method must be pursued.[18]

b. Lien — Deduction From Proceeds. Charges of an officer for keeping attached property are held to constitute a lien upon the same which must be satisfied before the proceeds of the sale of the property are applied upon the execution;[19] and it is not necessary in order to preserve this lien that a charge should be taxed as costs and included in the execution.[20]

XIV. CLAIMS OF THIRD PERSONS.

Wisconsin.— Addington v. Sexton, 17 Wis. 327, 84 Am. Dec. 745.

Review of discretion in allowing.— An appellate court will not review the discretion of the lower court in making the allowance (Irvin v. Real Estate Bank, 5 Ark. 30), notwithstanding it may seem to the former that some of the items indicate that the supply of help called in by the officer was very liberal (Toledo Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 90 Iowa 749, 57 N. W. 622).

Proof.— In the absence of proof compensation is not allowable to the sheriff for trouble and expense in taking and preserving property. Haase v. Levering, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 432, 1 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 404.

Notice of motion.— Before an allowance is made for the keeping of property attached the parties should be notified by rule or otherwise so that they may contest it. Harris v. Hill, 11 B. Mon. If an ex-sheriff has any valid charges as custodian, which are not statutory fees, he should apply to the court for such allowance upon motion and notice to the parties interested. He has no right arbitrarily to fix his own price and retain the property until paid. Fletcher v. Morrell, 78 Mich. 176, 44 N. W. 133.

18. Edinger v. Thomas, 9 Colo. App. 151, 47 Pac. 847, holding that the sheriff cannot safely contract for the payment of any specific sum.

Where the allowance is made as costs by the court or judge it is proper to tax these charges as a part of the costs. Leadville City Bank v. Tucker, 7 Colo. 220, 3 Pac. 217. And where the statute authorizes the sheriff to demand a sum sufficient to defray the expenses incurred in taking possession of and safely keeping the property it logically follows that the officer may return as costs in an attachment suit all necessary and reasonable charges. Deering v. Wisherd, 46 Nebr. 720, 65 N. W. 788. So, such expenses, when allowed by the court, are to be paid by plaintiff and taxed in the costs (Hurd v. Ladner, 110 Iowa 263, 81 N. W. 470; Rowley v. Painter, 69 Iowa 432, 29 N. W. 401; Mitchell v. Downing, 23 Oreg. 448, 32 Pac. 394; Hawley v. Dawson, 16 Oreg. 344, 18 Pac. 592); and if a plaintiff voluntarily dismisses his suit the court will render judgment against him for the amount of the sheriff's proper charges (Mitchell v. Downing, 23 Oreg. 448, 32 Pac. 394).

Application before justice at chambers.— Under the code provision requiring expenses incurred by the officer in preserving property to be settled by the officer issuing the attachment, an application for that purpose may be made before the justice issuing the attachment, while holding a special term at chambers. German American Bank v. Pittston, etc., Coal Co., 9 Hun (N. Y.) 205.

Lien confined to avails of property attached. — This lien is held to extend only to the avails of the property itself and not to money received from one who recognized to plaintiff for costs and who makes payment in satisfaction of the liability under such recognizance. McNeil v. Bean, 32 Vt. 429.

Settlement after sale.— A satisfaction of an attachment lien by payment by the debtor will not deprive the officer of his right to retain the expenses of keeping. Gleason v. Briggs, 28 Vt. 135.

Settlement before sale.— If the debtor settles the debt with the creditor, so that no execution comes into the officer's hands upon which to make sale, the officer may sustain an action against the debtor for the keeping. Dean v. Bailey, 12 Vt. 142. Where the statute expressly provides that the sheriff shall not be required to release attached property until his expenses for keepers' fees are refunded, a defendant who settles the suit after a keeper has been put in charge and receives from plaintiff an order directing a release of the levy on payment of the sheriff's fees cannot obtain possession of the property until he has paid the sheriff the keeper's fees. Robinett v. Connolly, 76 Cal. 56, 18 Pac. 130.

20. Baldwin v. Hatch, 54 Me. 167; McNeil v. Bean, 32 Vt. 429. Even where the costs are taxed and the amount is allowed for the officer in plaintiff's bill of costs the officer may deduct an additional amount for keeping the property. Twombly v. Hunewell, 2 Me. 221.

quietly and peaceably take possession of the property he may retain such possession, and the officer will not be justified in using forceable means to regain possession.[21] Where attachment is auxiliary to the principal action a claimant of attached property, having no interest in the action or whose rights will be unaffected by its determination, is not, in some jurisdictions, entitled to become a party to it, or to intervene therein for the purpose of asserting his title, but must resort to the common-law remedies or the statutory substitutes therefor.[22] In the greater number of states, however, interpleader, intervention in the action, or a resort to proceedings to try and determine the title to the property in dispute is permissible;[23] but notwithstanding intervention is permissible, a claimant is not, unless so required by statute, bound to intervene, but may have recourse to his other remedies.[24]

invoke.[39] On the intervention, the intervener becomes plaintiff, and plaintiff in attachment defendant, and the action must be tried and determined separately from the issue in attachment and on its own facts.[40]

4. Time of Intervening — a. In General. Claimant may present his petition after the issues between plaintiff and defendant in attachment have been settled,[41] but it should properly be interposed before their trial.[42] It has been held, however, that claimant may intervene at any time before final judgment,[43] but it is a general rule that after rendition of such judgment intervention is not permissible,[44] although it has been held proper on appeal from a justice before whom claimant failed to interplead.[45] Notice of filing an interplea should be made within the time prescribed; but a failure so to do does not authorize a dismissal of the interplea where no special injury or inconvenience follows.[46]

b. Where Property Ordered Sold. An order of sale of attached property before judgment, the proceeds to be held subject to the ultimate decision of the cause, does not prevent a claimant from appearing and asserting his claim;[47] and under some statutes claimant may file his petition at any time before the disposition of the proceeds of the sale.[48]

5. Estoppel to Assert Claim. A creditor, by attaching property belonging to his debtor, is estopped to afterward assert title in himself upon an interplea;[49] and the same has been held to be true where a party in possession of property executes a forthcoming bond conditioned for the delivery of the same if judgment is delivered against attachment defendant.[50] The true owner may also be estopped by his own declaration or by conniving at a statement respecting the ownership made by another.[51]

Execution of a bond to dissolve an attachment issued on mesne process does not estop a surety who claims the property from asserting his own title thereto against a subsequent attachment by the obligee. Rogers v. Bishop, 9 Gray (Mass.) 225. Nor would a purchaser of property be precluded from asserting his ownership by signing the bond given in the attachment suit by defendant to release the property attached. If a party has replevied the property attached he cannot, after the rendition of judgment against defendant and a demand of the property on his bond, interpose a claim to it under the statute, without having first surrendered it to the sheriff according to the conditions of his bond. Braley v. Clark, 22 Ala. 361.

The giving of an indemnity bond by attaching creditor to the officer does not preclude claimant from filing his claim. The bond is executed for the benefit of the sheriff and not for claimant, who, it is held, cannot maintain an action thereon. Hence the giving of such bond can in no way affect the claimant's right to intervene. Gevedon v. Branham, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 791, 47 S. W. 589.

51. Estoppel by declaration of attachment debtor.—Where a bailee in possession of property of another, for purposes of sale, represents to one of his creditors that he has bought the property, upon which the creditor attaches it, the real owner is estopped to set up the title in himself against the attaching creditor if he agreed that the bailee might hold it out as his own in order to effect a sale more readily, even though the bailee informs the attaching officer at the time of attachment that the property belongs to the person who claims it. Drew v. Kimball, 43 N. H. 282, 80 Am. Dec. 163. See also Kirkendall v. Davis, 41 Nebr. 285, 59 N. W. 915, construing statements made by claimant as an estoppel against his subsequent maintenance of an action of replevin. But where an attorney and officer for the attaching creditor asked plaintiff who owned a certain boat, giving him no intimation that they intended to attach, and he replied that A owned it, whereupon they immediately attached it as the property of A, but before they had taken actual possession plaintiff demanded the boat as his, it was held that he was not estopped from showing title in himself. Fountain v. Whelpley, 77 Me. 132.

Validity of statute requiring notice.— A statute protecting the officer from liability for levying on property of a person other than the debtor, unless he shall receive a notice in writing under oath from such person, his agent, or attorney, that such property belongs to him, etc., is not unconstitutional because authorizing the taking of property without due process of law. Such a statute does not deprive the person whose property is seized of his right of action on account thereof, but merely requires such notice as a condition precedent to his right of action. Cheadle v. Guittar, 68 Iowa 680, 28 N. W. 14.

Demand by consignee of pledgee.— A consignee to whom, with the pledgor's consent, the goods are consigned for sale may demand of the attaching officer, in his own name, payment of the amount for which they are pledged. Clark v. Dearborn, 103 Mass. 335.

Necessity of knowledge by creditor.— An attaching creditor is not affected by notice given to the sheriff before levy, but not communicated to the creditor, that the personal property about to be levied on has been sold by the debtor to a third person, although yet in defendant's possession. McKee v. Garcelon, 60 Me. 165, 11 Am. Rep 200.

Waiver of notice.— The notice cannot be waived by the levying officer without the creditor's consent. Campbell v. Eastman, 170 Mass. 523, 49 N. E. 914.

Security for contingent liability.—Where personal property mortgaged as security against future and contingent liability, and not for the payment of money, is attached, the mortgagee, instead of demanding payment of the money due him and stating an account for the purpose, as provided in Mass. Rev. Stat. c. 90, §§ 78, 79, may protect his interests under the mortgage by giving the officer notice of its existence with a schedule of the property embraced in it, and an intimation that he claims to hold the property pursuant to the mortgage. Codman v. Freeman, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 306.

Demand of United States marshal.— The Massachusetts statutes requiring notice and demand by a mortgagee of the amount due him before suing an attaching officer do not apply to an attachment by a United States marshal. Howe v. Freeman, 14 Gray (Mass.) 566.

55. If notice served is affixed to return on attachment it is an admission of timely service. Crawford v. Nolan, 72 Iowa 673, 34 N. W. 754.

In New Jersey a creditor applying to the court to come in under an attachment is intended,[56] or the sufficiency in this respect will be determined by the circumstances of the case.[57] Thus notice has been held sufficient when given after judgment in the principal action,[58] after judgment against another claimant for a return of the property replevied,[59] or before[60] or after[61] a sale of the attached property before payment of the proceeds.[62]

c. Sufficiency of[63]—(i) In General. Actual notice to an officer about to levy an attachment has been held sufficient to bind him,[64] and where no precise form is required it has been held enough if the demand give the officer or the attaching creditor notice of the existence of the claim and such information as to its nature and amount as will enable him to act understandingly in reference to it.[65] Where the notice given is sufficiently explicit and accurate to answer these purposes[66] it has been held that it will not be vitiated by mere informalities,

What is reasonable time is a question of law. Brackett v. Bullard, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 308. But where goods attached were replevied by the first mortgagee, against whom judgment was rendered for return of the goods to the attaching officer, a demand and statement made ten days after the judgment was held to be within a reasonable time, although more than two years after the goods were attached. Housatonic Bank v. Martin, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 294.

57. Four months after sale.— Where mortgaged goods were sold by consent of parties, within a week after they were attached, and before the sale the mortgagee gave notice of his claim to the officer and forbade the sale, the officer replying that he had seen the record of the mortgage and knew all about it, it was held that a demand four months afterward of the officer and creditor and the delivery to them of a written account of his debt was sufficient. Legate v. Potter, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 325.

More than three years after levy.— A motion by a claimant to dismiss the levy is not within a statute requiring a motion to set aside a judgment to be made within three years from the rendition of the judgment, and hence may be made in a proper case after the expiration of such period. (II) Claimant's Interest. An improper statement of the nature and extent of claimant's interest in the attached property will not invalidate the notice where the true interest is determinable by the pleadings and proof in the action.[68]

(III) Description of Property—(A) In General. The property claimed, or upon which a mortgage lien is asserted, should be particularly described.[69]

(B) Commingled Goods. Where goods claimed are intermingled with goods of attachment debtor, if claimant fails to assert his ownership and designate the particular goods claimed by him, the whole is liable to seizure and sale.[70] A demand of mortgaged goods, however, need not specify what part of the attached property is included in the mortgage,[71] and is not defective because describing all the attached property as included in the mortgage.[72]

A description of the property by schedule and as the whole or part of the attached property in a particular house will be sufficient, provided the officer does not call upon the mortgagee to select and identify the articles more particularly, but persists in holding them as the property of the mortgagor. Codman v. Freeman, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 306.

Mortgaged and pledged chattels.— A demand by the mortgagee of certain chattels and pledgee of others to secure the same notes that "the chattels attached by you are liable and mortgaged to me, and possession taken for the security of the following notes" is a sufficient demand of both the mortgaged and the pledged property. Rowley v. Rice, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 7.

Mortgage on stock to be replaced.—The rule that requires the owner of chattels which he suffers to be mixed with those of another to point out his own and demand them of an officer who seizes the whole as the property of the debtor, before he can sue the officer, does not apply to the holder of a mortgage of all the personal property on certain premises with a provision that it shall also cover all other personal property which the mortgagor may put on the premises in the place of such as he should sell and deliver. 73. Date of note.— A description of the note as bearing date prior to that of the mortgage is sufficient, for no presumption is raised thereby that the mortgage was not made to secure the note. Hibbard v. Zenor, 82 Iowa 505, 49 N. W. 63.

Time of maturity or rate of interest of note.—A notice which omits to state the time of maturity or the rate of interest of the note secured is insufficient. Wilson v. Crooker, 145 Mass. 571, 14 N. E. 798.

of accident or mistake.[76] A mortgage under which the claim and demand is made must be designated with sufficient particularity to enable the officer to ascertain the title of demandant.[77]

d. Service of Notice. If the mode of service is not prescribed it will be sufficient if it appears that the proper person received the notice in fact.[78]

7. Account — a. Demand For.[79] Under provisions requiring a mortgagee of attached property to render an account of the amount due at the time of the attachment on demand of the creditor or attaching officer,[80] the demand must specify the time of the attachment.[81] Where no more is required than a demand of an account of the mortgage debt, a demand by the officer in his own name and official capacity is sufficient without designating the creditor, the claim sued, the nature of the suit, or the court to which the writ is returnable;[82] but the demand must disclose the authority of the creditor to make it by setting forth the fact of a levy or attachment and a right to redeem from the mortgage.[83] If the mortgaged premises are described correctly it is immaterial that the description in the mortgage is not followed.[84]

b. Necessity of. After demand of an account of the amount due, made on a mortgagee of the attached property by the creditor or officer, if it is not rendered, or a false one is given, the interest of the mortgagee in realty attached ceases as against the attachment.[85] If personalty is attached, it is discharged from the mortgage.[86] So where, to protect his rights or procure payment of his debt,

The date of a mortgage will be deemed to be sufficiently stated, if although undated in fact, the date referred to is indorsed on the mortgage as the date thereof but is really the date of delivery. Folsom v. Clemence, 111 Mass. 273.

Name of mortgagor — Place of record.— A demand which does not state when or by whom the property was mortgaged or where the mortgage or record of it may be found is insufficient. Campbell v. Eastman, 170 Mass. 523, 49 N. E. 914.

Reference to the town records, without giving the date of, or parties to, the mortgage is insufficient. Wilson v. Crooker, 145 Mass. 571, 14 N. E. 798.

Claim under one of several mortgages.— Where personal property, three mortgages of which, of different dates, have been given to one person, is attached on a writ against the mortgagor, a demand specifying a claim under one mortgage only will not support a claim under either of the others. Witham v. Butterfield, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

Notice of mortgage made subsequently to attachment.— Where an equity of redemption has been attached, is afterward mortgaged a second time, the mortgage recorded, and the equity sold on the first execution, a notice to the officer by the second mortgagee that he had a mortgage on the premises and that it was recorded, without exhibiting the mortgage or any evidence of title, is insufficient to require the officer to pay over the balance to him, but is sufficient to make it the duty of the officer to retain the money to enable the mortgagee to exhibit title. claimant is required after notice of attachment to serve with his notice or demand[87] a statement or account of the amount due, or of the debt or demand for which the property is liable to him, the failure to observe the statutory requirement will have the like result.[88]

c. Sufficiency of[89]— (I) False Account. Any material misstatement in the account rendered which tends to mislead or in any way to injure the attaching creditor renders the demand of payment inoperative to dissolve the attachment and defeats the right of the mortgagee to maintain an action against the attaching officer.[90]

(II) Inaccuracies and Omissions. Innocent inaccuracies or errors in the account rendered by a mortgagee of attached property to the attaching officer or creditor, resulting from accident or mistake, and which do not mislead or injuriously affect the attaching creditor, will not invalidate the demand of payment of his debt or defeat the mortgagee's right to enforce his lien.[91]

(III) Statement of Amount Due. The amount due is the amount due at the time of the demand,[92] which will be sufficiently stated if it can be ascertained by computation.[93] Where a balance of the original indebtedness remains unpaid the account may state the sum actually due,[94] but where several demands are secured a statement of the aggregate is not sufficient.[95] Where distinct demands are separately secured, separate accounts should be rendered stating the amount due upon each, and not the aggregate due upon both,[96] and where one mortgage secures a gross sum to two persons the account may set forth the gross sum due to each,[97] although it has been held that the account need not contain a detailed statement of every item of a series of charges, which are covered by a mortgage for future advances, if the particular items are not requested.[98] A statement that the mortgage was given to secure a note given for a loan which is unpaid is sufficient,[99] but a mere statement of what the mortgage was given for is not a

8. ACTION OR PROCEEDING — a. Form of Remedy — (i) In General. In some jurisdictions it is incumbent upon a claimant to prosecute his claim by an independent action.[4] In the greater number of jurisdictions, however, he may either institute an independent action, or interplead in the attachment suit at his option,[5] or, if the rights of the parties will not be prejudiced, may proceed by rule.[6] In still other jurisdictions a claimant may have his rights determined on a motion to discharge the attachment.[7] Where resort to an independent action is had claimant may usually maintain case, trespass, replevin, or trover.[8]

(II) Election. As the different remedies available to claimants are but different modes of determining the ownership of the property, it follows that if a claimant elects to pursue one remedy he may be estopped to resort to another.[9] A mere failure, however, to avail himself of one statutory remedy does not preclude him from resorting to another action,[10] nor would the fact that claimant fails to interplead after having obtained leave to do so,[11] that he withdraws his claim from a sheriff's jury before a trial to test it is had,[12] or that he is prosecuting another suit in the same court for the same cause.[13] So the appearance and participation of a purchaser of property in an unsuccessful motion to discharge an attachment issued against his vendor on the ground that the conveyance was fraudulent does not preclude him from bringing subsequently an action to recover the property.[14]

b. Jurisdiction — (I) In General. In an action begun by attachment, the court has jurisdiction by reason of the writ and service thereof. Consequently if there is no writ in existence or it has not been levied or served, the court has no jurisdiction of the issue raised between the parties or by an interpleader.[15] Where the jurisdiction depends upon statute it is variously held that the trial of the right to the property must be had in the same court in which the attachment proceedings were instituted,[16] in a court which acquires jurisdiction of the persons of attachment plaintiff and claimant,[17] or where the writ is issued in a county other than that in which the property is seized, in the county where seizure was made.[18] The right to the property must be tried in a court which has jurisdiction of an

9. There is an estoppel where claimant interpleads in the attachment suit (Richardson v. Watson, 23 Mo. 34), institutes the statutory proceeding for trial of right of property (Bray v. Saaman, 13 Nebr. 518, 14 N. amount at which the attached property is valued,[19] but where the amount originally sued for is within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, he will have jurisdiction although the value of the property attached is in excess of the jurisdictional amount.[20] The jurisdiction of a designated court to try title to attached property is not affected by a statute authorizing the trial in another court of rights of property in general.[21] A court having common-law jurisdiction may try an issue where claimant alleges the legal title to land and the attaching creditor asserts the title to be equitable by way of mortgage.[22]

(II) Removal of Controversy. The trial of a claim to property levied on under final process of a state court is not removable to the United States court; but where the attachment is removed on the ground of diverse citizenship of the parties and claimant is a citizen of the same state as defendants, the claim may be removed with the attachment proceeding, as an incident thereto.[23]

c. Conditions Precedent — (I) Affidavit — (A) Necessity of. If claimant is required to present an affidavit of ownership, or make oath to his claim, his omission in that respect will preclude him,[24] since title or claim to property or an interest therein cannot be asserted by a simple unsworn statement.[25]

(B) Sufficiency of. An affidavit of ownership should name the claimants,[26] and, where such an averment is necessary to the validity of the affidavit, it should set out the nature of the claim.[27] A substantial compliance with the statute is sufficient, however, especially where it is so treated by the parties,[28] and if claimant has made oath in fact, the accidental absence of a jurat to the affidavit may be disregarded,[29] nor will it be deemed material that the oath was defective, where it is acted on, an indemnity bond given by plaintiff, and no prejudice has resulted.[30]

(II) Bond — (A) Right to Execute. Unless authorized by statute, claimant of attached property cannot obtain its release by giving a bond therefor,[31] and an instrument given by an intervener, in the absence of statutory authorization, is not a judicial bond and cannot be recovered on as such.[32]

(B) Necessity of. The statutes in general provide for the giving of a bond by claimant and, when this is the case, such provision must be observed,[33] or the court will have no jurisdiction to try the issue, even though the parties to the action consent thereto.[34]

(C) Form and Requisites[35] — (1) In General. As the form of a claimant's bond is usually determined by the provisions of the statute no general rules can be laid down as to when irregularities therein will be immaterial or fatal.[36] If the bond has been improperly framed the court may give leave to amend it before entering upon the trial,[37] or if insufficient under statute, the bond may be construed and enforced as a common-law obligation.[38] While the mere statement in a bond that it is intended as a delivery bond will not, if the prescribed statutory conditions of such a bond are omitted, entitle a claimant to possession of the property,[39] a failure of the bond to comply strictly with

Under a statute allowing only defendant the right to set aside an attachment by giving bond, an intervener, having possession of the property at the time of attachment and claiming to be its owner, should be allowed so to do. Letchford v. Jacobs, 17 La. Ann. 79. A claimant, however, was afterward allowed, by the Louisiana act of 1876, No. 51, to secure the possession of property by executing a bond. Meyer v. Fletcher, 35 La. Ann. 878.

32. Meyer v. Johnson, 28 La. Ann. 244; Dawson v. Morton, 22 La. Ann. 535, in which latter case it was said that such a bond could be recovered upon, if at all, as a simple conventional bond.

The denial of the right to bond the property does not mean, however, that the intervention should be dismissed. Claimant should be allowed to have his rights adjudicated, although his application to bond the property be dismissed. Letchford v. Jacobs, 17 La. Ann. 79.

See also Clarinda Valley Bank v. Wolf, 101 Iowa 51, 69 N. the statute cannot be taken advantage of by the obligors after having obtained possession.[40]

(2) The Amount. The amount of the bond, while dependent wholly upon statute, is perhaps usually double the appraised value of the property,[41] and a bond for a less amount would be insufficient, although it be for more than double the amount of the debt for which the attachment was issued.[42]

(3) The Obligee. Whether the bond should be made payable to the officer or to attaching plaintiff depends upon the statutes. In one state at any rate the bond should be made payable to plaintiff in attachment if the claim is interposed pendente lite, but to the attaching officer if interposed after judgment.[43] Where the statutes provide for a bond payable to plaintiff, and the property is seized under several attachments the bond may be payable to all the plaintiffs jointly and severally,[44] or to all jointly instead of jointly and severally.[45]

(d) Filing Bond. In one state, at least, claimant must see that the bond has been duly filed and is in the proper court;[46] but, where the officer is as much the agent of attachment plaintiff as of claimant, a failure to file the bond until some months after its delivery to the officer does not affect claimant's right to the property.[47]

(e) Operation and Effect—(1) Presumption That Property Is Held by Virtue of. The giving of a bond raises the presumption that claimant holds the property under the bond and not as a custodian or receiptor at common law.[48]

(2) On Attachment Lien. Execution of a delivery bond by a claimant does not as a rule discharge the lien created by the levy,[49] and, under some statutes, claimant must make himself a party to the attachment action or be concluded by the judgment therein.[50]

(3) On Subsequent Claims. Execution of a bond by an intervener does not bar the interposition of other claims;[51] and if claimant would retain the property against a subsequently attaching creditor he must give another forthcoming bond to the latter.[52]

d. Parties—(1) Necessary Parties. The original defendant is not a made in an appeal-bond, but the court held that it could have no further or greater effect than a mere appeal-bond and did not entitle claimant to the possession of the property.

necessary party to an intervention by one asserting ownership;[53] nor is one having no interest in or claim to the property attached a necessary party to a controversy respecting its ownership.[54] Where claimant dies pending proceedings to try right to the attached property his heirs or legal representatives should be made parties.[55]

(II) Proper Parties. Attaching creditors may be made parties to an action of replevin by claimant against the attaching officer for the purpose of defeating the claim.[56] So if an interplea is improperly interposed by the beneficiary of a trust the trustee may be substituted in his stead by amendment.[57]

e. Defenses. Where the interpleader claims under a mortgage or sale, plaintiff in attachment may answer that the conveyance was made to hinder, delay, and defraud the creditors of attachment defendant, and is therefore void;[58] and a defense that the proceeds of property attached in the possession of defendant, but claimed by a third party, had been passed to the credit of the interveners in the books of attachment defendant is sufficient.[59] It is not a defense, however, where mortgaged chattels are attached in the possession of the mortgagee to say that he is the equitable and not the legal owner.[60]

f. Issues Triable. One claiming title to or ownership of attached property is generally concerned only with the establishment of that right. Accordingly, the issue triable is whether the property levied on is that of attachment defendant, or that of claimant, or whether the latter is entitled to its possession or has a lien thereon; and claimant cannot as a rule urge irregularities in or the invalidity of the attachment proceedings.[61] Thus it has been held that he cannot urge a defense

53. attached property to deny in his complaint, interplea, or petition the claim of attachment plaintiff.[78]

(2) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY. A sufficient description of attached property should be given,[79] and the value of the property claimed should be averred.[80]

(c) Amendments. An amendment to the intervening petition setting up new issues and new causes of action must be made in due season.[81]

(II) ANSWER OR PLEA. Where the petition is filed in the attachment suit to which claimant has thereby become a party, the petition is taken as his answer, and unless replied to by plaintiff is an admission of what is alleged therein.[82] Where statutes require all pleadings to be in writing an answer to an interplea must be in writing,[83] and should sufficiently tender an issue.[84] Where claimants are permitted to deny the validity of the levy, the defect must be pointed out in the answer or plea.[85]

h. Evidence — (I) BURDEN OF PROOF. Where a party interpleads, or institutes an independent action, claiming a right in the property superior to that of the attaching creditor, the burden is, as a rule,[86] upon him to establish the validity of his claim.[87] By statute, however, if claimant is in possession at the time of the levy, the burden has been placed upon the attaching party;[88] and in some states the statutes impose upon the attaching creditor the duty of introducing evidence showing prima facie ownership of property in the debtor and that it was subject to levy, whereupon the burden of proof shifts to claimant to establish his claim.[89] If, however, the transfer of the property to the interpleader is admitted and fraud is alleged, to avoid such conveyance the burden of proof is upon the party so alleging.[90]

Sufficient possession to warrant presumption.— Evidence that cattle were waybilled as belonging to the interpleader and that he went with them to the place of their consignment where they were attached for the debt of the shipper while still on the cars shows such actual possession of the interpleader as to warrant the presumption of his ownership, although the carrier had possession for the purpose of carriage. As dependent upon grounds of claimant's motion.— In some jurisdictions the determination of whether the burden of proof shall be on attachment plaintiff or claimant seems to be dependent upon the grounds upon which claimant places his claim. If the interplea is a denial of plaintiff's right to hold the property because of some vice or defect in the judgment proceedings, the burden is upon attachment plaintiff to show the levy of a valid process and prima facie ownership in attachment defendant, before it is necessary for claimant to introduce any evidence; but where the interpleader does not assail any irregularity or validity of the attachment proceedings, but simply asserts his claim of ownership to the property, the burden is on him as to all facts essential to his cause of action. (II) Admissibility — (A) In General — (1) Rule Stated. Inasmuch as the proper procedure of the interpleading claimant is determined largely by the statutes of each jurisdiction, no general rules concerning the admissibility of evidence therein can be laid down. The claimant must, however, establish his title,[91] and can recover only on the strength thereof.[92] Hence, if he bases his claim on an assignment as payment of the prior debt proof of the debt is essential to his recovery.[93] He may, however, on framing the proper issue, show that the judgment obtained by the attaching creditor against the debtor was obtained by collusion and fraud.[94] On the part of the attaching creditor it would seem that any facts disproving or tending to avoid such title[95] can be shown under the denial contained in the general replication.[96] He cannot, however, show that other persons have an interest in conjunction with the interpleader, or that the interest of the interpleader is subject to the claims of a stranger.[97]

(2) Acts, Admissions, or Declarations of Parties — (a) Of Attachment Defendant. The acts or declarations of attachment defendant while in possession, tending to indicate or explain the character of his possession, are admissible,[98] it would seem, as a part of the res gestæ;[99] but declarations of defendant after he

Testimony relating to the transaction between plaintiff and attachment defendant is competent and admissible to prove a sale of the property to claimant. Frank v. Levi, 110 Iowa 267, 81 N. W. 459.

Admissibility of judgment to show interest of intervener in property.— A judgment obtained by a subsequently attaching creditor is admissible in evidence in favor of an assignee thereof, when the latter intervenes in a suit between the prior attaching creditor and the debtor for the purpose of showing that the relation of creditor and debtor existed between his assignor and the debtor, and that he has succeeded to the former's rights by the assignment. When claimant is the wife of attachment defendant and derives title to the property under bills of sale, or other written instruments, from third persons, plaintiff may prove in rebuttal acts of ownership on the part of the husband, with the knowledge and consent of the wife, subsequent to the date of such written instrument and prior to the levy. has parted with his possession,[1] or subsequently to the levy and interposition of claimant's claim,[2] are inadmissible against him.[3]

(b) Of Claimant. Declarations of a claimant tending to prove the validity of his title to property in controversy are inadmissible;[4] but his admissions or declarations derogatory to his claim are admissible in evidence against him.[5]

(c) Of Party in Possession. The testimony of a witness that he held possession of the goods for claimant but not for attachment defendant is admissible when the title of the latter is not well established.[6]

(3) Affidavit and Bond of Claimant. The affidavit[7] and bond given by claimant for the redelivery of the property[8] are admissible for plaintiff to prove the levy.

(4) Proceedings in Attachment — (a) Writ. In a statutory trial of the right of property the writ of attachment is admissible in evidence against claimant,[9] and, if lost, may be proved by secondary evidence.[10]

(b) Judgment. Inasmuch as the validity or invalidity of attachment plaintiff's claim against defendant does not arise on the trial of the right of property, it has been held that a judgment in an attachment suit would be inadmissible as evidence against claimant in a trial of the right of property.[11]

What constitutes an admission.— A claimant, by admitting that land levied upon under an execution on a judgment in attachment against a non-resident was prima facie subject to that execution, does not thereby admit that attachment defendant was in possession when the attachment was levied, or that the levy was legal. New England Mortg. Security Co. v. Watson, 99 Ga. 733, 27 S. E. 160. An admission by claimant that attachment defendant was in possession at the time of the levy would, however, place upon him the burden of proof, and it would be incumbent upon him to show that such possession was not inconsistent with his own claim. As the validity of the writ should not be contested except by a special plea pointing out the grounds relied on for its invalidity, a failure to introduce the writ in evidence, where claimant pleads a general denial, is no ground for reversing a judgment in favor of the attaching party (Ft. Worth Pub. Co. v. Hitson, 80 Tex. 216, 14 S. W. 843, 16 S. W. 551), and if not attacked by special plea the writ itself is sufficient evidence of its validity (Yarborough v. Weaver, (Tex. Civ. of one of the attachment defendants is inadmissible as against the intervener.[13]

(B) To Contradict Officer's Return. An interpleader is not a party to the suit in the sense that the officer's return is conclusive against him, and evidence contradictory thereof is admissible on his behalf.[14]

(C) To Show Fraud in Defendant's Acquisition of Property. If claimant alleges that attachment defendant obtained the goods from him through fraud, collections made and disposition of assets by defendant prior to the levy are competent and admissible.[15] He may likewise testify to statements made by defendant to obtain such credit from him.[16]

(D) To Show Fraudulent Transfer to Claimant. Evidence tending to show that the title of the interpleader was fraudulently acquired is admissible,[17] although in some jurisdictions attaching plaintiff must prove defendant's indebtedness to him before he can attack the bona fides of the transfer.[18] If attachment defendant has, by default, admitted the fraud, it is only necessary to connect the interpleader with it to show knowledge in himself or agent;[19] but such judgment is not prima facie evidence that the sale to claimant was fraudulent.[20] This fraud must, however, be proved by evidence other than the affidavit for attachment, which in some jurisdictions is held inadmissible for that purpose.[21] On the other hand, claimant cannot in rebuttal introduce his petition filed in an action against his debtor in a suit to which attaching creditor was not a party showing the consideration paid for the property.[22]

Where the validity of the sale is the only issue, evidence that claimant, who had purchased the property only twelve days before the levy, was in possession at the time of the levy is not admissible as showing the title in him. (F) To Prove Title in Third Party. As an intervening claimant of property must recover on the strength of his own title,[24] any evidence tending to show title in a third person not connected with the suit is inadmissible,[25] unless claimant in some proper way connects himself with such outstanding title.[26]

(G) To Prove Value of Property. Evidence of the value of the property in a suit between claimant and the attaching creditor is relevant and admissible,[27] and may be offered by either party.[28] If attachment plaintiff fails to recover judgment the exclusion of such evidence would not be an error for which he could complain;[29] although if the validity of the conveyance to claimant is assailed its exclusion would be reversible error.[30] As tending to prove such value it has been held that the inventory or appraisal made by the attaching officer is admissible at the instance of the attaching creditor.[31]

(III) Weight and Sufficiency — (A) On Part of Attaching Creditor — (1) In General. In a suit between a claimant and a plaintiff in attachment the latter makes out a prima facie case when he shows his judgment and that the property attached was in the possession of defendant at the time the levy was made;[32] although in some jurisdictions he must also prove that the property in controversy belonged to attachment defendant at the time of the levy.[33] It is not

Should be allowed to show removal of defects to title.— Where it appears that a claimant has received an absolute bill of sale of property, but that after its execution it was modified by a subsequent agreement so as to make it invalid as to attaching creditors, claimant should be allowed to show that before the levy of the attachment the second agreement had been abrogated by the parties; and it is error to refuse to allow him to thus show a good title. Rule does not preclude claimant from showing source of title in third party.— An intervener may show in the prosecution of his claim that before the attachment issued defendant had sold the property to persons from whom claimant purchased it. In such case he does not claim the property as that of a third person. His object in producing the evidence is simply to show that defendant had parted with his interest before the issue of attachment. It is necessary for the intervener to show his claim of title, but there is no good reason why he should be precluded from showing that the property had ceased to belong to defendant and was owned by persons from whom the intervener derived his title. necessary for attaching plaintiff to show that he is a creditor in good faith until his bona fides is questioned.[34]

(2) Proof of Debt. In a controversy between an attaching creditor and the claimant of the property the creditor must show that attachment defendant owed the debt or some part thereof.[35] In some jurisdictions the attachment proceedings are sufficient proof of this indebtedness,[36] while in others they are only so when attachment defendant is in possession of the property, and if it was taken from the possession of a claimant a judgment or other proof is required.[37]

(B) On Part of Claimant. The claimant of attached property need not prove his title beyond a reasonable doubt,[38] and although his evidence is such that a demurrer might be sustained thereto yet, if the introduction of the creditor's evidence shows for him a prima facie case of ownership,[39] the judgment must be in his favor.[40] It is incumbent upon claimant, however, to show that he acquired his title prior to the interposition of his claim.[41] If he claims as a trustee for the benefit of creditors he must show that there are other creditors than attachment plaintiff;[42] if he alleges fraud on the part of the attachment debtor, evidence of a general nature and founded largely upon supposition will be insufficient on his part;[43] and where there is evidence that claimant acquired his title fraudulently it is error for the court to direct a verdict in his favor.[44]

hurst, 103 Ala. 260, 15 So. 611, where plaintiff introduced evidence which tended to show that the property belonged to defendant debtor, and also introduced claimant's affidavit and bond, which recited the levy of the attachment on the property at the suit of plaintiff against defendant, it was held that plaintiff had made out a prima facie case, and that it was unnecessary for him to introduce additional evidence to show the levy of the attachment; the recitals of the claimant's affidavit and bond estopping him from denying the levy. A judgment condemning property to be sold is prima facie evidence but not conclusive in a suit between attachment plaintiff and an interpleader that the title to the property is in attachment defendant. When introduction of such record unnecessary.— If claimants in the progress of the trial admit that the attached property and that which they claim is one and the same, it is not necessary for the attaching creditor to offer in evidence the record in the attachment suit to show that he has secured a lien on the property. i. Trial — (I) Order of Trying Principal Action and Right to Attached Property. In some jurisdictions the right to the attached property is required to be tried prior to the determination of the rights of the parties to the original action,[45] while in others it may not be tried until the attachment suit has been prosecuted to judgment.[46]

(II) Consolidation of Claims Under Several Attachments. Where different parties levy attachments on the same property, the causes for a trial of the right of property may be consolidated, although claimant has given separate bonds to the creditors, but the failure to consolidate is not available as error if no injury resulted.[47]

(III) Province of Court and Jury. All questions of fact must as a general rule be submitted to the jury,[48] and its finding either way should not be disturbed.[49] Thus the bona fides of claimant's claim is always a question for the jury,[50] as is the question of the attaching creditor's knowledge that a third party owned the property.[51] In like manner the jury should determine whether there is such a depreciation if the attached property is at the time of attachment subject to a mortgage providing that the mortgagee may take the property into his possession in the event of an unreasonable depreciation in its value.[52] Where, however, it is apparent from the evidence that claimant has no cause of action, the court may properly direct a verdict to be returned in favor of attaching creditor or the officer attaching the property.[53]

The mere showing of admissions of defendant in favor of claimant's title and a surrender of possession to claimant a few hours before the levy does not overcome the prima facie case which the possession by attachment defendant on the date of the levy and for some time previous, and the use of the property apparently as his own, makes against claimant. (iv) Instructions. On the trial of the right to the attached property the instructions given by the court should not in any manner invade the province of the jury by withdrawing from its consideration any question of fact,[54] must not be conflicting,[55] misleading,[56] or in any way prejudicial to either party;[57] and must correctly state the law upon the evidence before the jury.[58] Moreover, an instruction in such case should not hypothesize a state of facts, and upon their existence direct a verdict, unless all facts are hypothesized that are necessary to sustain one.[59] So, the instructions should define to the jury the issues that are for its consideration,[60] and should confine its attention to the issues made by the pleadings.[61]

Where the question of burden of proof is ignored and no instruction thereon requested, and the only question is whether claimant purchased from defendant in attachment in good faith, an instruction that claimant must show by preponderance of evidence that he is owner, and that if a purchase from defendant in attachment and payment to him for the property were in good faith the sale was valid but otherwise invalid does not appear to be erroneous as casting on claimant the burden of proof. A finding of the value of the property and that claimant has failed to establish a right to it is sufficient. Floege v. Wiedner, 77 Tex. 311, 14 S. W. 132.

Where the property is found subject to attachment the verdict need not specify why it was subject to attachment, whether there be one or several issues. Daniel v. Frost, 62 Ga. 697.

Insufficiency of general finding.— Where the evidence shows that attachment defendant had an interest in the property attached it is error for the jury to find in general terms for claimant. Columbia Bank v. Spring, 55 N. J. L. 545, 26 Atl. 711.

A verdict that "the jury find the issue for the claimant" is sufficient to support a judgment thereon. Beck v. Wisely, 63 Mo. App. 239.

A verdict in favor of claimant for money is not responsive to an issue whether the property is that of claimant. Hewson v. Tootle, 72 Mo. 632; Rindskoff v. Rogers, 34 Mo. App. 126. See also Plano Mfg. Co. v. Cunningham, 73 Mo. App. 376. But where the property has been sold by order of court and the proceeds converted into money and brought into court, a verdict for delivery of possession of the specific property is not necessary, and a money verdict is sufficient, even though the law provides that the verdict may be for return of the property, or for a judgment for its value where it cannot be returned. Ranney-Alton Mercantile Co. v. Hanes, 9 Okla. 471, 60 Pac. 284.

Triable issues see supra, XIV, A, 8, f.

65. Ranney-Alton Mercantile Co. v. Hanes, 9 Okla. 471, 60 Pac. 284; Halff v. Goldfrank, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 49 S. W. 1095; Linz v. Atchison, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 647, 38 S. W. 640, 47 S. W. 542.

Where the verdict is for attachment plaintiff claimant cannot object that the jury did not understand the issue, because they found the value of the property attached to be much less than the proof indicated. Halff v. Goldfrank, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 49 S. W. 1095.

66. Heidenheimer v. Johnson, 76 Tex. 200, 13 S. W. 46, holding where the court instructs the jury as to the form of verdict in the event of a finding in favor of claimant, and the verdict returned is in a different form, that it is sufficient to support a judgissue submitted to the jury.[67] In cases of special ownership or partial interest in the property or its proceeds, where there is a privity of title between claimant and attachment defendant, the jury should make a finding as to the extent of claimant's interest therein if they have found that the attached property belongs to him.[68]

(B) Assessing Value of Property. It is not necessary to assess the value of the property claimed,[69] unless so required by statute.[70]

(C) Setting Aside Verdict. Where the verdict is neither responsive to the issues nor supported by the evidence it will be set aside.[71]

(D) Amending Verdict. Where the verdict as returned by the jury is responsive to the issue which has been tried, and the intent of the jury is clear, the court may, and should, correct it in matters of form and detail, but it must not amend it in such a manner as to change its meaning or effect.[72]

j. Judgment — (I) In General. There must be a valid judgment,[73]

ment thereon, provided it is responsive to the issues presented, and its meaning is definite and clear. Heidenheimer v. Johnson, 76 Tex. 200, 13 S. W. 46.

Where several chattels are attached.— In Alabama, under statute, the jury must, when practicable, assess the value of several articles claimed separately. Jordan v. Collins, 107 Ala. 572, 18 So. 137. Failure to assess value separately is not ground for motion in arrest of judgment, under a statute requiring an assessment in this manner when practicable, since where a record fails to show that it was done the presumption is that it was not practicable. Jordan v. Collins, 107 Ala. 572, 18 So. 137.

When writ of inquiry necessary.— Where the jury fails to assess the value of the property, and there is nothing in the return of the officer who made the attachment indicating what the value is, a writ of inquiry should be prosecuted to determine the value. Clarke v. Parker, 63 Miss. 549. Where the value of the property is not assessed, and there is a judgment for plaintiff in attachment, he may elect to take the value of the property as assessed by the officer at the time of the levy of the attachment. Irion v. Hume, 50 Miss. 419.

Effect of insufficient verdict.— The fact that a verdict is insufficient does not entitle interpleader to file a second interplea, nor after such a verdict and a judgment thereon in his favor can his name be struck from the docket without his consent. State Bank v. Byrd, 8 Ark. 152.

72. Swofford Bros. Dry-Goods Co. v. Smith-McCord Dry-Goods Co., 85 Fed. 417, 56 U. S. App. 355, 29 C. C. A. 239 [affirming 1 Indian Terr. 314, 37 S. W. 103].

Time of amendment.— Amendment may be made after the jury has been discharged. Swofford Bros. Dry-Goods Co. v. Smith-McCord Dry-Goods Co., 85 Fed. 417, 56 U. S. App. 355, 29 C. C. A. 239 [affirming 1 Indian Terr. 314, 37 S. W. 103].

Verdict prepared by court.— Where the jury return an informal verdict the court may ask whether the jury intends to find for plaintiff in attachment, and upon a reply in the affirmative may order the jury to return a verdict prepared by the court, provided the court does not in any manner direct the jury or indicate in any degree through the medium of a form what the character of the verdict should be. Floege v. Wiedner, 77 Tex. 311, 14 S. W. 132.

73. State v. Silverstein, 77 Mo. App. 304, holding that a verdict merely cannot be substituted for both verdict and judgment.

A judgment in favor of claimant for the property attached, "costs of suit taxed against the plaintiff," is sufficient to support an appeal. Sloan v. Hudson, 119 Ala. 27, 24 So. 458.

Where claimant has not complied with jurisdictional requirements as to the making of an affidavit of claim to property levied on, and as to execution of a bond conditioned and payable in the manner and amount prescribed by statute, no judgment can be rendered, except perhaps for costs against claimant. Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Teague, 78 Ala. 147.

Where the claim of an intervener is not adjudicated upon in the attachment suit, and founded upon a regular and valid verdict, to which the judgment must conform.[74] Moreover, it should be in accordance with any statutory provision.[75] Where sureties have intervened and defended claimant's rights judgment may be rendered in their behalf, although it inures to the benefit of claimant.[76] Where claimant fails to appear and join issue judgment by default may be had against him like any other defendant.[77] In event of a clerical misprision, the judgment may be amended on motion,[78] or, where necessary, it may be reformed.[79]

(II) Assessment of Value of Property. The judgment need not contain an assessment of the value of the property,[80] unless statutes provide otherwise.[81]

(III) In Favor of Claimant. Where judgment is in favor of claimant and the goods claimed have been sold under attachment, the proceeds of the sale being in the hands of the proper officer, judgment should be that claimant have and recover the proceeds arising from the sale of the goods by such officer, who should be ordered to pay the proceeds to claimant;[82] and it does not appear that it was abandoned or that the intervener has any knowledge of a judgment rendered against defendant in attachment the rights of intervener are unaffected, and he may retain possession if he has it. Levy v. Weber, 8 La. Ann. 439.

74. Clarke v. Parker, 63 Miss. 549; Hewson v. Tootle, 72 Mo. 632; Mills v. Thomson, 61 Mo. 415; Hagardine-McKittric Dry Goods Co. v. Carnahan, 83 Mo. App. 318; Nelson Distilling Co. v. Hubbard, 53 Mo. App. 23. Where a verdict was rendered finding the claimant owner of the goods seized and giving damages judgment was entered thereon which, in addition, decreed that possession be delivered to the intervener. This was held pursuant to the verdict. Bach v. Leopold, 8 La. Ann. 386. Where claimant received a portion of his claim upon a sale of the property, in accordance with an agreement under which he permitted a sale thereof, a judgment based upon a finding that his claim was invalid should contain a provision establishing his right to the money he received from the sale, as against the other parties where an advantage was secured to them by reason of the sale. Bryant v. Fink, 75 Iowa 516, 39 N. W. 820.

A special finding controls where inconsistent with a general verdict: thus, where there is a general verdict against claimants, and a special finding that they had some interest in the property at the time of attachment, and claimants do not ask for an order protecting their interests after the special finding is returned a judgment on the general verdict should not be disturbed. Moffitt v. Albert, 97 Iowa 213, 66 N. W. 162.

Joint judgment.—Under Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 4843, a judgment in favor of several plaintiffs should not be a joint one, but it should establish the rights and priorities. Ft. Worth Pub. Co. v. Hitson, 80 Tex. 216, 14 S. W. 843, 16 S. W. 551.

In Texas judgment against claimant may be satisfied by return of the property to the attaching creditor under Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 4845. Where claimant has only a partial interest in the property the proceeds of sale should be awarded to him according to his interest therein as ascertained by the verdict. Nelson Distilling Co. v. Hubbard, 53 Mo. App. 23.

Where all the property was sold as perishable and an interplea is sustained as to a portion thereof, the amount realized on the sale of the property adjudged to the interpleader may be ascertained by the court, and it is erroneous to enter judgment for value of the property against plaintiff in attachment.[83]

(IV) AGAINST CLAIMANT. Where the issue is found against claimant, the judgment should, under some statutes, condemn the property to the satisfaction of the judgment in the attachment which has been or may be obtained,[84] it being erroneous to render a money judgment against him,[85] to direct that claimant and his sureties in the claim bond pay plaintiff in attachment the value of the property as assessed by the jury and the costs of suit,[86] or to order the issue of an execution against claimant in advance of the return of the claim bond forfeited.[87] Under other statutes, judgment may be rendered against claimant and his sureties on the bond, in the event of its forfeiture or breach of condition,[88] payment thereof ordered to be made to the interpleader. If the attaching creditor appeals from the order he cannot complain that the amount ordered to be paid is excessive, unless he calls the attention of the trial court thereto. St. Louis Brewing Assoc. v. Drulinger, 62 Mo. App. 485.

Where the property has previously been sold by order of court judgment for recovery and restitution of the property is improper. The defect, however, is not a ground for reversal, as the court has power to make judgments conform to the issues tried in the cause. Scott-Force Hat Co. v. Hombs, 127 Mo. 392, 30 S. W. 183.

Where there are separate attachments and a claim to the property filed by the same person in each, claimant cannot, upon obtaining judgment for recovery and restitution in one case, have possession of the proceeds of the property if sold, till all the suits have been determined. State v. Hockaday, 132 Mo. 227, 33 S. W. 812.

Where an appeal from a justice of the peace is taken to a circuit court, such court has the same power to order the proceeds of the sale of attached property to be turned over as if the proceedings originated in it. Springfield Engine, etc., Co. v. Glazier, 65 Mo. App. 616.

83. Williams v. Braden, 57 Mo. App. 317.

On a finding that the property belongs to one claiming as trustee under a mortgage, judgment should not give the attaching creditor a lien on the surplus beyond the amount required to satisfy the debts secured by the mortgage. This would give a levy by seizure the effect of service of a writ of garnishment. Linz v. Atchison, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 647, 38 S. W. 640, 47 S. W. 542.

Upon a finding that the property was subject to a valid mortgage, a judgment in favor of claimant should not discharge the attachment lien, but should direct that the mortgagee retain possession until the mortgage is discharged, but that the attaching creditor may sell subject to the mortgage, in the manner provided by Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 2296. Lapowski v. Taylor, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 624, 35 S. W. 934.

An attaching creditor who proves his debt may have a personal decree against attachment defendant, even if the property attached is awarded to another claimant. Schofield v. Cox, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 533.

Attachment lien enforced in judgment against claimant.— An express vendor's lien on personal property attached in an action for the purchase-money may be foreclosed if the attaching creditor gets judgment but does not foreclose his lien, and enforced in a judgment subsequently rendered against claimant in a trial of right to the property, notwithstanding that the attachment debtor is not a party to such action. 88. In Arkansas the judgment does not accrue unless the appraisal of the property is made and shown by the officer's return, and not then until the officer shows by his return, on a fieri facias issued against defendant in the original suit, the failure of the obligors on the bond to deliver the property according to its conditions. Turner v. Collier, 37 Ark. 528.

In Kentucky it is error to render a personal judgment for the value of the attached property against the principal obligor without permitting him to deliver the property or show its value. Connor v. Williams, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 73, 30 S. W. 401.

In Mississippi under Anno. Code, § 167, if and where judgment may thus be entered against claimant and his sureties attachment plaintiff may have execution issue thereon.[89]

(v) Effect of Judgment. A judgment on the interplea does not affect the attachment suit,[90] the title of the property as between attachment defendant and claimant, or the rights of third parties;[91] but as between attachment plaintiff and claimant the judgment is conclusive that the property is or is not the property of the latter.[92] Such judgment is also held to bind the sureties on claimant's bond the value of the property equal the amount found due to plaintiff, judgment must be entered against claimant and his sureties on the bond for the amount of said value, and if the value be less than the amount found due, judgment must be entered against claimant for amount of the verdict, and against sureties in the bond for the value of the property. If judgment by default is entered against defendant, an inquiry must be awarded to assess the value of the property claimed, and on execution thereupon judgment shall be entered as above provided. Compare Irion v. Hume, 50 Miss. 419, decided under an earlier statute.

In Texas, upon failure of claimant to establish a right to the property, judgment should, under Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 4843, be entered up on the bond. Floege v. Wiedner, 77 Tex. 311, 14 S. W. 132. See also Mardis v. Johnson, 43 Tex. 225. A surety upon a statutory bond for a trial of the right of property becomes a party to the litigation, and the court can render judgment against him without having him served with citation or otherwise notified. Johnson v. Blum, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 260, 42 S. W. 791.

When a claim suit is removed by certiorari from a justice court to the circuit court, where the property is condemned, the judgment in the circuit court should be certified with a procedendo to the justice who issues execution, and on failure of defendant to deliver the property the officer should indorse such failure on the bond filed with the justice, and execution should issue thereupon for the assessed value of the property as fixed by the circuit court against the principal and surety if such value does not exceed the amount of the judgment in attachment and costs, and if exceeding that amount then for the judgment and costs. In Arkansas, under the provisions of the act of Jan. 19, 1861, plaintiff in attachment may have execution against the property, and if the same is not delivered to the sheriff on demand execution shall issue on a return of the facts in a fieri facias on the bond for such a sum as will be sufficient to satisfy the damages and costs. But see Ansley v. Tearson, 8 Ala. 431, which was a bill in equity where complainant, who had been claimant in a trial of the right of property, alleged that the validity of a mortgage under which he claimed was not controverted by plaintiff in attachment, and that the mortgage was rejected by the trial court as evidence, not because it was objectionable as a security, but on the ground that it did not tend to prove the issue on the part of claimant, which was whether defendant in attachment had an interest in the property subject to the attachment, and the court held that complainant should be allowed to show what transpired at the trial of the right of property, since the matter, although involved in the trial, was not essential to the finding of a verdict that the property was liable to attachment. Under Nebr. Comp. Stat. §§ 996–998, judgment in favor of claimant is not conclusive as to ownership of the property; and the attachment creditor may still contest his right to the same. Accordingly mandamus will not lie against the officer who seized the property to compel him to return it to the person adjudged to be the owner, as his refusal so to do is not a failure to discharge an official duty. State v. Gillespie, 9 Nebr. 505, 4 N. W. 239.

Opposition to sale under attachment.— Where a third party opposes a sale of attached property on the ground that it is his, and the opposition is sustained, purchasers of the property at the sale are affected with notice of the opposition, and must restore possession to the party making the same. Claimant partially successful may be liable for all costs.— A person who claims under two mortgages is liable for all costs if upon trial the claim is allowed only as to one. Stewart v. Outhwaite, 141 Mo. 562, 44 S. W. 326. So under a statute making costs discretionary with the court all costs may be awarded against one who claims all the property, but only has judgment for a small portion thereof which was purchased by him after the time of attachment. In Alabama, under Rev. Code, § 3343, authorizing the award of damages against claimant, if it appears that claim was interposed for delay, a claimant in attachment is not liable for damages since the statute by its terms applies only to cases of execution. Murphy v. Butler, 75 Ala. 381.

Measure of claimant's damages after reversal of judgment against him.— Where a judgment for plaintiff in attachment is reversed on appeal, and on a new trial judgment is rendered for claimant, the measure of his damages is the true value of the property taken, together with the damages and costs he was obliged to pay under the former judgment. Cleveland v. Tufts, 69 Tex. 580, 7 S. W. 72.

In Colorado, under section 103 of the code, the measure of damages is the value of the property with interest from the date of attachment. Cornforth v. Maguire, 12 Colo. 432, 21 Pac. 191; Brasher v. Holtz, 12 Colo. 201, 20 Pac. 616.

l. Appeal and Error — (I) Right of Review. The parties to a proceeding to establish or determine a third party's claim to attached property have the same right of appeal as in actions commenced in an ordinary way.[97]

(II) To What Court. The appeal must of course be taken to a court having proper jurisdiction; thus, where a question involving the title to land is in issue, appeal must be taken to that court alone which has jurisdiction as to such question;[98] and so where the jurisdiction of the appellate court is dependent upon the amount in controversy.[99]

(III) Parties. Where there is judgment against the intervener and defendant in attachment, the intervener must himself appeal.[1]

(IV) Time For Taking and Perfecting. The proceeding must be taken and perfected within the prescribed statutory time.[2]

(V) Supersedeas or Stay of Proceedings. Where a bond is given by claimant the pendency of the appeal operates as a supersedeas.[3] reasonable market value of mortgaged property at the time of attachment is the measure of damages, provided the value does not exceed the mortgage debt, and if the value does exceed the debt then the amount of the debt is the measure of damages. State v. Crowder, 40 Mo. App. 536.

Attorney's fees cannot be allowed as damages in a case where a mortgagee of chattels intervenes in an attachment thereof, unless there is a statutory provision therefor. Joslin v. McGee, 5 Colo. App. 531, 39 Pac. 349. See also Hopkins v. Pratt, 7 La. Ann. 336, where it was said that counsel fees could not be recovered where attaching creditor in good faith prosecuted a right which he considered legal.

Storage fees of mortgaged goods stored by mortgagee.—Where an intervening mortgagee is successful, and the property was attached while in possession of one with whom they were stored by the mortgagee but were not removed, the costs of storage, from time of demand on the attaching officer for the goods, cannot be recovered unless the mortgagee notified his desire to remove them, or incurred additional costs owing to the attachment. Joslin v. McGee, 5 Colo. App. 531, 39 Pac. 349.

A right of appeal is not lost because the statute giving a right to interplead does not expressly grant an appeal. Mitchell v. Woods, 11 Ark. 180.

Nature of proceeding on appeal.— A proceeding by intervention in attachment under Iowa Code, § 3016, is not necessarily equitable, and when not so treated by the trial court will not be so regarded on appeal. Clinton Nat. Bank v. Studemann, 74 Iowa 104, 37 N. W. 112.

Intervener is bound on appeal by a position voluntarily assumed by him on trial. Stewart v. Outhwaite, 141 Mo. 562, 44 S. W. 326, holding that if he accepts the burden of proof on trial he must retain it on appeal.

Effect of statutory certiorari.—A statutory certiorari to a judgment rendered in favor of plaintiff in attachment condemning the property of claimant for payment of the attachment debt has the effect of an appeal, in that where the action would on appeal be tried de novo the cause stands for trial anew in the court issuing the certiorari. Cofer v. Reinschmidt, 121 Ala. 252, 25 So. 769. Where, subsequent to certiorari to review a judgment of a justice condemning the property to payment of plaintiff's claim, defendant in attachment dies and plaintiff fails to revive the action within the statutory time, claimant may interpose a defense that the action had abated against him because of such failure on the trial of the certiorari. Cofer v. Reinschmidt, 121 Ala. 252, 25 So. 769.

99. On appeal from judgment in interpleader the amount involved is the value of the property attached, and not the amount of the claim sued upon, since the issue is as to the ownership of the property and not as to the indebtedness of attachment debtor. Martin v. Duncan, 156 Ill. 274, 41 N. E. 43 [reversing 47 Ill. App. 84].

2. Ryan v. Heenan, 76 Iowa 589, 41 N. W. 367 (where an appeal must, under Iowa Code (1873), § 3019, in order to retain the attachment lien, be perfected within two days from an order discharging it); Pfiefer v. Hartman, 60 Miss. 505.

Where intervener's petition is dismissed before an interlocutory decree in the attachment suit, directing a sale of the attached property, intervener may appeal after such interlocutory decree. Brawshaw v. Georgia L. & T. Co., (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 59 S. W. 785.

3. State v. Ranson, 86 Mo. 327.

(VI) Record. The record on appeal must be kept distinct from the record of the proceedings in attachment,[4] and must show that an issue was made up between claimant and attaching creditor.[5]

(VII) Scope and Extent of Review. Where no objection was raised below to trial without a jury of a claim to attached property, and the parties agreed to a trial by the court, the objection cannot be raised on appeal.[6] So, an appellate court will not interfere with the discretion of the trial court in refusing permission to interplead after the time for interpleading has passed,[7] nor will the court review conflicting evidence to determine its weight.[8] Again, the court will not look into the attachment suit for the purpose of finding error in the claim suit, unless the record of the former is introduced in some legitimate way into the latter;[9] and where the question in issue on trial was the right to the attached property the appellate court can pass on that question only.[10]

B. Liability on Claimant's Bond — 1. In General — a. Liability of Claimant. The liability of a claimant on his bond is analogous to that of an attachment defendant on a forthcoming bond, and hence is fixed by a final judgment against him.[11] If the bond is conditioned for the payment of the judgment or a return of the property for the satisfaction thereof, a claimant establishing his claim is liable, in event of plaintiff's recovery against defendant, only to the extent of defendant's interest, if any, in the property.[12]

Where an appeal operates as a supersedeas the attaching officer is not liable for failure to levy an execution issued against the property interpleaded. State v. Ranson, 86 Mo. 327.

5. Tupper v. Cassell, 45 Miss. 352, holding that a recital of the clerk to that effect is not sufficient.

Partnership claim.— Where a claim is interposed by one partner in the name of his firm, subsequent proceedings are properly conducted against the partnership as claimant, notwithstanding the bond is given by each partner individually, and recites that he "has filed a claim." Accordingly, a recital in the judgment entry that the one interposing the claim is a member of the partnership is sufficient on error to sustain a default against the partnership as claimant. Pace v. Lee, 49 Ala. 571.

Any question of fact determined by the jury will be considered eliminated from the case by an appellate court. McDonald v. Cash, 57 Mo. App. 536.

11. Wright v. Oakey, 16 La. Ann. 125.

Unavoidable loss and destruction of property pending claimant's suit.— Whether or not claimant, in the event of an unsuccessful prosecution of his claim, will be held liable for the value of the property if lost or destroyed without his fault depends upon whether he gave the bond in good faith to obtain possession of the property, or whether it was given wrongfully to obtain such property. Dear v. Brannon, 4 Bush (Ky.) 471, 478, where it is said: "These cases clearly distinguish between a bond rightfully given, to retain possession until litigation is ended, and one given wrongfully, to get a possession the party is not legally entitled to." In the latter case the party is to be regarded as a bailee in his own wrong, liable for all accidents and taking all hazards. See also Atkinson v. Fox[illegible]rth, 53 Miss. 741.

Death of one of attachment defendants before rendition of judgment.— Under a statute providing that persons associated as partners, transacting business under a common name, may be sued thereunder and the summons being served on one or more of such partners, the judgment shall bind the "joint property," it is held that where an attachment was levied upon partnership property which was delivered to a claimant who failed to redeliver same within thirty days after judgment, the fact that one of the partners against whom judgment was rendered in the attachment suit died before its rendition does not invalidate the claim bond and is not a ground for a supersedeas in an execution on the bond against claimant. Comer v. Reid, 93 Ala. 391, 9 So. 620.

12. Halbert v. McCulloch, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 456, 79 Am. Dec. 556 [approved in Bell v. Western River Imp., etc., Co., 3 Metc. (Ky.) 558].

It is error to quash the bond where claimant shows that all but a small portion of the property belongs to him, as his liability to deliver that which does not belong to him still continues. Bowling v. Davis, 103 Ky. 187, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1859, 44 S. W. 643, 45 S. W. 77.

b. Liability of Sureties — (i) Generally. The liability of the surety does not become fixed or enforceable until a liability can be shown to be due on the part of his principal.[13] A liability, however, is created and a proceeding against the surety authorized on a failure of claimant to deliver the property in accordance with a condition of the bond,[14] or the dismissal of the claim because of a failure to comply with the statutory procedure.[15]

(ii) Discharge of. The sureties will not be discharged by the neglect of claimant to take advantage of the failure of attachment plaintiff to make up the issue to try the right of property,[16] by an agreement between attachment plaintiff and several claimants whereby suits are tried together,[17] or by an agreement that the verdict and judgment in one of several suits to be actually tried shall be the verdict and judgment in all.[18] Nor will a payment by the sureties on one of claimant's bonds of a judgment for a greater amount than the value of the property release them from their obligation on a bond given to a subsequently attaching creditor of the same property.[19]

2. Enforcement of Liability — a. Form of Procedure. In one state at least the liability may be enforced either by rule or by action on the bond;[20] and, in many states, a judgment on the bond may be entered in the claim suit against claimant and his sureties.[21]

b. When Action Accrues. The time at which an action accrues depends upon the nature of the bond given by claimant. If it is conditioned to satisfy any judgment which may be rendered against attachment defendant, action lies after rendition of judgment notwithstanding the intervention be undisposed of.[22] If, however, the bond is conditioned to satisfy only such judgment as may be rendered against claimant himself, no action lies until after rendition of such judgment.[23]

c. Who May Sue. Where the bond is payable to plaintiff his right to main-

Liability of claimant to sureties.— A surety against whom, together with claimant, judgment for damages and costs has been rendered, and who has paid a fieri facias issued thereon was entitled, under early statutes of Georgia, to control the fieri facias for the purpose of reimbursing himself out of the effects of claimant. 19. Conway v. Backus, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 266. And see Armour v. Tabor, 7 Pa. Dist. 462, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 425, holding that sureties cannot be released from liability upon application therefor by representing that claimant is about to leave the country and permit an issue framed to go by default. The release of sureties in such case would destroy vested rights of attachment plaintiff.

20. Wright v. Oakey, 16 La. Ann. 125.

Usual procedure by action.—Where attaching creditor assails a conveyance of his debtor on the ground of fraud, he may both attach the property in the hands of the vendee and at the same time institute an action to cancel the sale. Under these circumstances, if the fraudulent transferee bonds the property and then transfers it to a bona fide purchaser, attaching creditor, if successful in both of his actions, is not confined to his remedy on the bond, but, by reason of his revocatory action, can also proceed against the property in the hands of the bona fide purchaser. Ranlett v. Constance, 15 La. Ann. 423.

22. Clarinda Valley Bank v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 109 Iowa 43, 79 N. W. 391, where intervener executed a delivery bond for delivery of the property or its value to satisfy any judgment obtained against defendant within twenty days after its rendition, as provided by statute, and it was held that action would lie at expiration of the twenty days notwithstanding the intervention was undisposed of and the judgment did not condemn the attached property.

23. Yale v. Hoopes, 16 La. Ann. 311.

If the intervention is dismissed without trial on the merits, because claimant's bond tain the action is clear;[24] and, under some statutes, inasmuch as plaintiff is the real party in interest, action may be maintained in his name although the bond was payable to the attaching officer.[25]

d. Defenses. Defendant can set up no defense that would permit him to prove the very issue that it was incumbent upon him to prove in a trial of his claim,[26] nor can he assign errors in the attachment proceedings between the creditor and his debtor,[27] or that the officer, bringing the action and to whom the bond was given, has no interest in the property.[28] Payment by claimant of the judgment obtained against attachment defendant is a sufficient defense to an action on the claim bond;[29] as is a defense of the statute of limitations[30] or that the officer accepting the bond had no authority so to do.[31]

e. Pleadings — Declaration. If plaintiff proceeds by a common-law action on the bond it is only necessary to set out a breach of its conditions,[32] and inasmuch as the parties are bound to notice the determination of the claim suit, no averment of notice to them of determination is necessary.[33]

f. Evidence. Evidence showing refusal of claimant to deliver the property after the failure of his claim is sufficient to fix his liability.[34] So where claimant was not filed in time, and there is a judgment for costs for attaching creditor, an action lies on the bond if claimant makes no further effort to establish his right to the property, and the property is not returned by him. Wallace v. Terry, (Tex. App. 1889) 15 S. W. 35.

24. Kohn v. Hinshaw, 17 Oreg. 308, 20 Pac. 629.

25. Wright v. Oakey, 16 La. Ann. 125, holding that the assignment of the bond to plaintiff is not essential to maintain the suit. See also Lomme v. Sweeney, 1 Mont. 584, holding that an action for damages against the sureties on a replevin undertaking can be maintained in the name of the creditor who caused the officer to attach, notwithstanding the bond is in the name of the officer.

26. Ormsbee v. Davis, 16 Conn. 567, holding that in an action on a claimant's bond, given in replevin, the question was not whether claimant in fact had title to the property, but whether he made out such title on the trial of his claim suit, a judgment against him in that suit being conclusive against him in an action on his claim bond.

That the property was not liable to attachment is not a good plea. Higdon v. Vaughn, 58 Miss. 572.

27. Goodman v. Allen, 11 La. Ann. 246, holding that the validity of the attachment could not be drawn into question collaterally except in cases where there was an entire want of citation.

Claimant is bound by the judgment in the principal suit unless that judgment be void. Atkinson v. Foxworth, 53 Miss. 741.

28. Morgan v. Furst, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 116, 16 Am. Dec. 166; Spears v. Robinson, 71 Miss. 774, 15 So. 111, the latter case holding that, although the statute required a special deputy to deliver the property seized therewith to the regular officer, a claimant who had gained possession from such deputy by giving a delivery bond could not deny liability thereon, because the deputy had no right to take it.

Execution after delivery as defense.— Where claimant's bond is quashed and another substituted, the sureties on the latter cannot escape liability because their bond was executed after the delivery of the property. Bull v. Jones, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 47 S. W. 474.

29. Wheaton v. Thompson, 20 Minn. 196, the reason being that notwithstanding the absolute engagement expressed by the literal terms of the bond, the purpose of the law under which it is executed is sufficiently satisfied when that which the law regards as legal indemnity of the obligee is accomplished.

30. Where claimant gives a delivery bond conditioned for delivery of the property or its value to satisfy any judgment, which may be obtained against defendant, within twenty days after its rendition, the statute of limitation begins to run from the expiration of twenty days after the rendition of such judgment, notwithstanding the fact of the intervention being not decided until long thereafter. Clarinda Valley Bank v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 109 Iowa 43, 79 N. W. 391.

31. If claimants have been enjoined from taking attached property under claimant's title, the officer having the custody of such property would have no authority to take a bond from them and deliver the property to them, and hence no recovery could be had on such bond. Thixton v. Goff, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 765.

Allegation as to execution of bond.— A declaration alleging that the bond was executed by the principal through his agent is sufficient. Gilmer v. Allen, 9 Ga. 208.

For sufficiency of declaration on a replevin bond for the forthcoming of property see Clark v. Norton, 6 Minn. 412.

34. Stinson v. Hall, 54 Ga. 676, where it was held that attaching creditor need not prove that the property had been advertised for sale pursuant to the statute, as the re-failed to establish his claim, a return of nulla bona on an execution against attachment defendant is sufficient to render sureties on the bond liable.[35]

g. Damages. As a rule the damages which may be recovered on claimant's bond are limited to the value of the property delivered to him, with interest,[36] regardless of the amount of the judgment recovered in the attachment suit,[37] or of the fact that there are several attaching creditors.[38] Again, where the value of the property taken exceeds the amount of the creditor's claim, the damages should be limited to the amount of the claim,[39] and a sum which claimant has paid to attachment debtor in lieu of the latter's exemption cannot be considered in fixing the amount of the liability on his bond.[40]

C. Recovering Damages For Dispossession — 1. Right of Action. Where property has been attached which does not belong to attachment defendant the claimant of the ownership and right of possession thereof[41] has a right of action fusal to deliver the property was a forfeiture of the bond.

Right of obligors to equitable adjustment of claims.— Where several attachments in favor of different creditors have been levied successively on the same property and a claimant has interposed his claim in each case, and his claim suits are decided against him, if the aggregate of the debts of the several attaching creditors when reduced to judgment is largely in excess of the value of the property, the sureties on the claim bond can maintain a bill in equity to adjust the priorities of the judgment creditors and to settle their liabilities in the several cases, and need not pay each separate judgment, the aggregate of which greatly exceeds the value of the property. Jaffray v. Smith, 106 Ala. 112, 17 So. 218 [followed in Cottingham v. Bamberger, 121 Ala. 527, 25 So. 771]. But if the execution issued against the surety is irregular in form and for an amount exceeding the penalty of the bond, the surety has a plain and complete remedy in the court of law from which the execution issued, and hence cannot invoke the interposition of equity. Triest v. Enslen, 106 Ala. 180, 17 So. 356.

39. Wallace v. Terry, (Tex. App. 1889) 15 S. W. 35.

Recovery of attorney's fees.—Where claimant's bond is conditioned to pay plaintiff all damages he may sustain if claimants fail to establish their title to the property, it is held that, if intervener's claim was a reasonable one, the attaching creditor may only recover interest for detention of the property, and that attorney's fees are not a natural result of the bond and not recoverable. Eichoff v. Tidball, 61 Tex. 421.

Recovery for use of property.— Where property is delivered to claimant, upon execution by him of a forthcoming bond, and is afterward adjudged to attaching creditor, the curators of the debtor's estate can recover the hire of such property during the time it was in claimant's possession as well as the value of any part of the property which he fails to deliver. Botts v. Nichols, 7 La. Ann. 263.

Damages for deterioration of property.— The statutes of Georgia make the claimants of property, when attached, liable to pay attachment plaintiff not only damages for the hire and use of the property but for its deterioration in value while in claimants' possession after the levy of the attachment. Under these statutes it is held that, where the property is delivered by a claimant upon plaintiff's recovery in judgment sustaining the attachment and sold for less than the judgment, no action can be maintained against the sureties on claimant's bond for the use and deterioration thereof while in his possession unless the advertisement of the sale was in strict compliance with the statute; and where such statute required the advertisement to be made "weekly for four weeks" and it was shown that there were four publications, but only twenty-seven days had elapsed between the first publication and the date of the sale, it was held that no recovery could be had. Frost v. Gibson, 59 Ga. 600.

Recovery of costs.— In Texas the statutes expressly provide that the sureties on claimant's bond shall be liable for all costs awarded against claimant. Ft. Worth Pub. Co. v. Hitson, 80 Tex. 216, 14 S. W. 843, 16 S. W. 551. It has also been held that on a bond conditioned that claimant shall have the property forthcoming and "pay such costs and damages as may be recovered for putting in said claim for delay," the sureties are bound for the costs, although the claim be not put in for delay. McElrath v. Whetstone, 89 Ala. 623, 8 So. 7 [following Robertson v. Patterson, 17 Ala. 407].

40. Jaffray v. Smith, 106 Ala. 112, 17 So. 218.

41. Necessity of claimant having interest in property.— It is essential that a claimant of property, to prosecute successfully his claim, have some actual interest in the property. Hence, if by a proper construction of the contract or lease under which the property is held, he has no property interest therein he cannot maintain his action (Upham v. Dodd, 24 Ark. 545; Newman v. Woodson Nat. Bank, 38 Kan. 456, 16 Pac. 823; Turner v. Bachelder, 17 Me. 257), and an assignee of property who has not taken possession of it or had the assignment recorded cannot maintain his claim against a subsequently attaching creditor (Yates v. Dodge, 23 Ill. App. 338). Compare Carter v. Wilson, 61 Ala. 434; Lewis v. Birdsey, 19 Oreg. 164, 26 Pac. 623; Bradshaw v. Georgia L. & T. Co., (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 59 S. W. 785, where, upon a judicial construction of the facts of each case, it was held that claimant had such right or title as would entitle him to interpose his claim.

at once, either for the reclamation of the property, or to recover damages,[42] it not being material that the property was sold subsequently to the wrongful levy,[43]

A cestui que trust may come in as claimant of the property, for if he is precluded from bringing his suit, and the trustee will not permit his name to be used, he will then stand in the attitude of a party having an undeniable right but no remedy — a thing which the law will not endure. Assignee under invalid assignment.— An assignee, who receives goods under an assignment valid between the parties but void as to creditors, has a right of action against a party levying an attachment which, on account of the insufficiency of the levy, creates no lien, and could render the attaching parties mere wrong-doers. Ahern v. Purnell, 62 Conn. 21, 25 Atl. 393.

Waiver of right to recover damages.—A resort to a statutory remedy to try the right to attached property waives a right to recover for damages caused by unlawful seizure. Lera v. Freiberg, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 22 S. W. 236.

When right accrues.— A statute of limitations begins to run against an action for wrongful attachment from the time of attachment, or at any rate from the time the property was sold in the attachment suit, and not from the time of final judgment in said suit against plaintiff. Sale under order of court.— The right to sue is not divested because the property was sold as perishable by order of court. Bibb v. Jones, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 605.

Acceptance of proceeds of sale of perishable property.— If a party's property is attached as belonging to another and sold by order of the court as perishable, an acceptance of the proceeds by claimant does not prevent his recovering for damages sustained by the attachment. In such case the privilege of the true owner to elect his remedy is not complete, for he cannot elect to replevy or take back the property. The doctrine of election is made only when full freedom of choice exists, and in the absence of such freedom should not be applied. Franke v. Eby, 50 Mo. App. 579.

Failure to prosecute claim after giving forthcoming bond.— An owner who retains possession of goods wrongfully attached by giving a forthcoming bond for them, but who is not a party to the attachment suit and declines to become such, is estopped after they have been condemned to sale under the attachment to maintain an independent action against attachment plaintiff for the value of the goods thus wrongfully converted, but if, in satisfaction of the judgment claimed, other goods than those attached were seized under the execution he may maintain an action for these. McCadden v. Lowenstein, 92 Tenn. 614, 22 S. W. 426.

2. PERSONS LIABLE — a. In General. Where an officer levies a writ of attachment on the property of a stranger, attachment plaintiff is liable to the claimant of the ownership and right of possession thereof not only when he directed the wrongful levy,[46] but also when he subsequently adopts or ratifies the officer's acts,[47] independently of any bond,[48] and jointly with the attaching officer.[49]

Plaintiff in attachment, although acting bona fide, is liable for a wrongful sale. Goodwin v. Pinnell, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 140.

What constitutes ratification.— Refusal to release the property on demand constitutes ratification (Cole v. Edwards, 52 Nebr. 711, 72 N. W. 1045), and, although not personally present when the writ is served, attachment plaintiff and his attorney are liable on such refusal to release (Cook v. Hopper, 23 Mich. 511). So, the act of the officer is ratified where the property is sold and attachment plaintiff receives proceeds of sale (H. D. Lee Mercantile Co. v. Chapman, 9 Kan. App. 374, 58 Pac. 125; Omaha Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 56 Nebr. 590, 77 N. W. 73; Cole v. Edwards, 52 Nebr. 711, 72 N. W. 1045; Brainerd v. Dunning, 30 N. W. 475 [citing Perrin v. Claflin, 11 Mo. 13]; Herrman v. Gilbert, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 253); and when attachment plaintiff gives an indemnity bond to the officer (Lesher v. Getman, 30 Minn. 321, 15 N. W. 309). The fact that defendant's attorney appeared after the levy and procured an adjournment, by stipulation to give a bond of indemnity, and received a part of the proceeds of the sale, establishes an interference with the property sufficient to render the defendant liable if no want of authority in the attorney is shown. Where, however, attachment plaintiff takes no part in the levy it is held that he is not liable.[50]

b. Sureties on Attachment Bond. It seems that a surety on an attachment bond who undertakes to pay all damages which may be sustained by defendant is not liable for a trespass committed to the property of a third party.[51]

3. Joinder of Parties. Since the attaching creditor is jointly and severally liable with the attaching officer, it is not requisite to join the officer in an action against the creditor;[52] so where there were several attaching creditors plaintiff may sue one without joining the others,[53] or may sue all.[54]

4. Defenses. It is a defense to an attaching creditor that plaintiff's claim is invalid and rests upon a fraudulent transfer of the property by the debtor,[55] unless the vacating of the attachment has precluded the defendant from justifying under it.[56] Where attachment defendant pleads in recoupment and recovers therefor, attachment plaintiff cannot, in an action by a third person for wrongful attachment, plead in justification that a sale to plaintiff was in fraud of creditors.[57] The fact that defendant had reason to believe that the property belonged to his debtor instead of plaintiff is not a defense to an action to recover the value of the property;[58] and it is not a defense that plaintiff might have given a claim bond and have had a trial of the right of property in the goods attached, since plaintiff had a right to allow the property to be carried away, and if the levy should be wrongful to bring an action for damages.[59]

5. PLEADINGS — a. Complaint, Declaration, or Petition. In an action to recover damages for depriving a third party of the possession and use of his property it is sufficient to aver that the attachment and levy thereof was wrongful;[60] it not being necessary to allege that the attachment was malicious and without probable cause,[61] or the time when the levy was made.[62] There must, however, be an averment that the property taken was the property of plaintiff,[63] and where the latter desires to recover special damages he must plead them.[64]

b. Answer or Plea. A defendant who was plaintiff in attachment need not, when justifying, aver the ground on which the attachment was issued, or set out the return of the writ,[65] although the latter allegation is requisite if defendant be the officer who attached,[66] and in such case he must allege all facts necessary to support the writ, and also the existence of a debt due to attaching plaintiff from defendant in attachment.[67] Moreover, he must allege that the property was, at the time of the seizure, that of defendant in attachment,[68] and must deny that such property was that of plaintiff.[69]

6. EVIDENCE — a. Plaintiff's. In an action by a claimant of goods against an officer of the attaching creditor, evidence that they had notice of the former's claim is admissible,[70] and where the good faith of such claim is attacked plaintiff may show that the claim was bona fide,[71] and generally may give evidence Sufficient statement of cause of action.— A count claiming damages by reason of defendant's wrongful attachment of plaintiff's property, at the time of attachment in possession of an officer under a prior attachment sued out by others, and alleging that by reason of such levy plaintiff was wholly deprived of his property, states a good cause of action. And for this purpose evidence of bills of goods sold to claimant by the attaching creditors for the purpose of replenishing the stock which he had purchased from the attaching debtor is admissible, as tending to show that claimant had taken steps to apprise the public, and especially the attaching creditors, of his title and possession. Leeser v. Boekhoff, 33 Mo. App. 223.

Proof that defendant gave attaching officer an indemnifying bond at the time of attachment presumptively establishes defendant's liability for the officer's wrongful act. Dyett v. Hyman, 129 N. Y. 351, 29 N. E. 261, 41 N. Y. St. 644, 26 Am. St. Rep. 533 [affirming 13 N. Y. Suppl. 895, 37 N. Y. St. 251].

St. 955], holding that plaintiff may show that after a mortgage under which he based his claim in the attachment proceedings was made mortgagor directed that the property, which he retained in his possession, was not to be sold. Such evidence is admissible as part of the res gestæ, and as tending to show that the transaction was valid and bona fide.

as to damage,[72] and the identity of the goods attached with those claimed by him.[73]

b. Defendant's. Under the general issue defendant may show that the goods did not belong to plaintiff but belonged to attachment defendant,[74] and, under proper allegations, may show fraud affecting the attachment creditor,[75] or that it was not defendant's intention to make an excessive levy;[76] but no evidence relating to the merits of the attachment suit[77] or as to the regularity of the proceedings therein[78] is admissible. In mitigation of damages defendant may show that the property wrongfully attached has been returned, or has been applied for the benefit or advantage of plaintiff with his consent, express or implied, or through legal proceedings instituted by third persons.[79]

7. Trial — Instructions. The instructions given must duly state the law upon the evidence submitted to the jury.[80] Thus where the evidence is substantially conclusive that plaintiff gave notice of his claim to the property and demanded it, an instruction that defendant took the property bona fide and plaintiff intentionally neglected to give sufficient notice of his claim, thereby permitting the property to be sold, is improper.[81] An instruction is also improper which misleads the jury with respect to matter that may be considered by it in measuring the damages sustained by plaintiff.[82]

72. Damages.—The cost price of the property, while not conclusive as to its value at the time of its conversion by defendant, is admissible to aid in arriving at the value at the time of the alleged conversion. Bunting v. Salz, (Cal. 1889) 22 Pac. 1132. The finding of the jury in the claim suit cannot be given in evidence for the purpose of increasing the damages. Batchellor v. Schuyler, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 386.

An affidavit made by plaintiff in replevin as to the worth of the property replevied is not admissible against him in a subsequent action by him for wrongful attachment, for the purpose of showing that he was not damaged because part of the goods were converted. Walker v. Collins, 59 Fed. 70, 19 U. S. App. 307, 8 C. C. A. 1.

73. The sheriff's return on the attachment proceedings is not conclusive as to the identity of the goods attached, and plaintiff may show aliunde that the goods attached were the same as those described in a mortgage on which his claim is based. Crawford v. Nolan, 72 Iowa 673, 34 N. W. 754.

Sufficient averment.— An averment that the property was at time of seizure that of attachment defendant, allows evidence showing that a sale under which plaintiff claims was fraudulent as to an attachment creditor. Adler v. Cole, 12 Wis. 188.

No presumption of fraud from failure to call debtor.— The failure of the attaching creditor, after having testified to the bona fides of his claim and the consideration paid therefor, to introduce the debtors who are present in court as witnesses is not a suspicious circumstance against the validity of the transaction, and does not authorize any presumption against him. Pollak v. Harmon, 94 Ala. 420, 10 So. 156.

76. Pollak v. Searcy, 84 Ala. 259, 4 So. 137.

77. Evidence of the indebtedness of defendant in attachment to plaintiff in that suit is not relevant to any issue that can arise in an action arising out of the wrongful attachment of a third person's property. Edinger v. Heuchler, 8 Iowa 513. See also Moffett v. Boydstum, 4 Kan. App. 406, 46 Pac. 24. Compare Cook v. Hopper, 23 Mich. 511.

Evidence of levy and sale under the writ of attachment is not material, where the officer does not plead a justification. Snell v. Crowe, 3 Utah 26, 5 Pac. 522.

79. Grisham v. Bodman, 111 Ala. 194, 20 So. 514, holding that this evidence is admissible, even if plaintiff claimed the property attached under a sale fraudulent and void as against creditors of attachment defendant, and that it may be also shown that the property attached or a part of it had been seized under a second attachment debtor and applied to payment of their debts.

80. The attachment of an undivided interest in the property of a stranger is pro tanto trespass. Therefore an instruction to find for defendant in the event of plaintiff having an undivided interest in the property at the time of levy is erroneous. 82. Simmons Clothing Co. v. Davis, (Indian Terr. 1900) 58 S. W. 655.

In an action on an attachment bond the jury may be instructed that if they believe the claim of plaintiff was bona fide, and that a sale to him by attachment defendant was made solely for the payment of a debt, and that after plaintiff took open possession of

8. Damages — a. In General. All actual damages resulting from the wrongful seizure are recoverable from plaintiff in attachment,[83] and in such damages may be included necessary expenses incurred in a suit to recover the property.[84] Where the attachment was malicious or wilful punitive damages may be recovered,[85] if specially pleaded.[86]

b. Measure of Damages. Where plaintiff was totally deprived of his property the measure of damages is the value of the property taken[87] at the time of the property he retained it until the attachment was levied, the reasonable market value of the property, not exceeding the amount of the indebtedness, as of the date of the levy, may be the recoverable damage. State v. Crowder, 40 Mo. App. 536.

Damages for unlawful levy on realty.— In a case where land is attached, if no actual injury has been done thereto, plaintiff can recover nominal damages only (Spear v. Hubbard, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 143), and mesne rents and profits are never recoverable, because the levy does not entitle the attaching creditor to possession (Heathman v. Million, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 421, 31 S. W. 473). The levy of an attachment upon and in which the debtor has no interest does not constitute a cloud on the owner's title, and hence gives him no right of action for the damages against attachment plaintiff. Duncan v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 237, 45 S. W. 774.

Injury or deterioration to the property may increase the amount of damages recoverable. Witascheck v. Glass, 46 Mo. App. 209.

Plaintiff may recover further damages actually sustained by him by reason of the seizure. Comly v. Fisher, Taney (U. S.) 121, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,053.

The amount of recovery may be reduced where plaintiff has received any of the proceeds from a sale of the property. Straub v. Wooten, 45 Ark. 112; Corner v. Mackintosh, 48 Md. 374.

Injury to credit is too remote as a ground for damages. Cunningham v. Sugar, 9 N. M. 105, 49 Pac. 910.

Recovery for lost profits on goods attached is not proper for any time after that when plaintiff could reasonably have had his stock replenished. Cunningham v. Sugar, 9 N. M. 105, 49 Pac. 910.

Counsel fees paid in defending the property in the attachment proceedings are not recoverable. Farmers, etc., Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Gibbons, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1348, 55 S. W. 2; Corner v. Mackintosh, 48 Md. 374. But see State v. Silverstein, 77 Mo. App. 304, where, in an action on an attachment bond, it was held that a successful interpleader was entitled to damages as broad as would be allowed a defendant who defeated an attachment; and that therefore attorney's fees might be recovered. And see Roberts v. Heim, 27 Ala. 678, where the jury were permitted to consider counsel fees, paid by plaintiff in a suit brought to try the right of property, in assessing his damages in a subsequent action therefor. Under a statute making an attachment bond stand as an indemnity to an interpleader, as well as to defendant, reasonable attorney's fees may be recovered. State v. East Joplin Lumber Co., 70 Mo. App. 663.

seizure,[88] with interest from the date of the levy up to the time of trial;[89] but where the property was only detained for a time, the measure of damages is the value of the use during such time.[90] Where plaintiff had only a partial interest in the property the damages recoverable must be measured by the extent of his interest.[91]

XV. DISSOLUTION, QUASHING, AND VACATING.

A. Causes For Dissolution[92]— 1. GENERALLY.[93] Since special proceeding[94] and particular grounds[95] are necessary to authorize an attachment of property, defendant may raise issues regarding the validity of the attachment without touching upon the merits of the claim[96] upon which plaintiff's cause of action is Diminution of damages.— Damages cannot be diminished by allowance for the costs of an unlawful sale. Perkins v. Ewan, 66 Ark. 175, 49 S. W. 569.

92. Void and voidable attachment distinguished.— Even though a writ could be quashed because of defective counts therein, it is not an absolute nullity and will serve as a justification for the officer holding the property. Ela v. Shepard, 32 N. H. 277.

93. The expiration of the term of office of a judge of the supreme court does not affect the validity of an attachment issued by him because he acts in his judicial capacity in issuing the writ, and not as a supreme court commissioner. Davis v. Ainsworth, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 346.

A writ of error from the supreme court of the United States, to reverse a judgment of a state court before execution, ipso facto dissolves an attachment made at the commencement of the suit, because such a writ of error cannot be taken without giving security which replaces the security of the attachment. A rule on plaintiff to file an affidavit of claim or have the attachment dissolved has been granted on the application of a defendant in foreign attachment. Hartman v. Wallach, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 88.

Where the cause of action will not support an attachment, defendant may move on this ground to have the attachment quashed (Holmes v. Barclay, 4 La. Ann. 63, 64; Elliott v. Jackson, 3 Wis. 649); and where part of a cause of action would not support an attachment because plaintiff had security therefor, it has been held that the entire attachment must be vacated (Vollmer v. Spencer, (Ida. 1897) 51 Pac. 609. Compare Boarman v. Patterson, 1 Gill (Md.) 372, where an attachment suit embraced several causes of action, some of which would not support founded;[97] and the facts which are ordinarily relied on for this purpose are either defects in the proceeding to obtain attachment[98] or the falsity of the matter alleged in the affidavit,[99] although in some jurisdictions the truth of the affidavit attachment, and it was held that the attachment should be dissolved as to these but allowed to stand for the remainder).

The immaturity of a valid indebtedness does not of itself furnish a ground to dissolve an attachment issued in a suit in an action brought on such indebtedness. Read v. Ware, 2 La. Ann. 498. Compare Gowan v. Hanson, 55 Wis. 341, 13 N. W. 238, where an attachment on a debt not due was dissolved because the affidavit did not state that the debt was to become due, and a bond was not given for three times the amount demanded as required by statute.

Where a defense to the principal cause of action has been waived, defendant cannot assert such a defense to defeat the attachment proceedings. Pennsylvania v. Peoples, 31 Ohio St. 537.

The pendency of a suit in another court for the same cause of action is not sufficient to justify a dissolution of the attachment (Netter v. Harding, 6 Pa. Dist. 169, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 353; Seeley v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 39 Fed. 252, the latter case construing New York statute); although it has been held that when an order of attachment was issued in the earlier proceeding the attachment in the subsequent action will be dissolved (Smith-Frazer Boot, etc., Co. v. Derse, 41 Kan. 150, 21 Pac. 167). Compare Davidson v. Owens, 5 Minn. 69, where it was held to be no ground for vacating a writ of attachment that plaintiff's claim had been decided adversely to him in an action in a federal court. See also Johnson v. Stockham, 89 Md. 368, 43 Atl. 943.

The existence of a counter-claim against plaintiff or plaintiff's assignor is no ground for dissolving the attachment in the suit, if defendant is prevented from pleading and taking advantage of his counter-claim. Dolbeer v. Stout, 60 N. Y. Super. Ct. 276, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 186, 42 N. Y. St. 693.

The failure to attach a copy of the instrument sued on is not a ground for dissolving the attachment, but such an objection must be taken advantage of by a demurrer (McCarn v. Rivers, 7 Iowa 404); or by a properly directed motion (Olmstead v. Rivers, 9 Nebr. 234, 2 N. W. 366).

South Dakota.— Deering v. Warren, 1 S. D. 35, 44 N. W. 1068.

Irregularity and improvidence in issue of writ distinguished.— An attachment is irregularly issued where the facts or allegations contained in the affidavit upon which it is founded are insufficient; in other words where, even admitting them to be true, they do not constitute a legal ground for the warrant. It is improvidently issued where the allegations, if true, would be sufficient, yet it satisfactorily appears that they are not true. The first ground may be determined upon an inspection of the affidavit; the second upon affidavits pro and con. Kerchner v. McCormac, 25 S. C. 461.

The legal sufficiency of the steps taken to procure the writ is a matter for adjudication by the court. Mayhew v. Dudley, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 95.

A bond will not be required when the warrant in attachment "on its face appears to have been issued irregularly, or for a cause insufficient in law, or false in fact." Knight v. Hatfield, 129 N. C. 191, 194, 39 S. E. 807.

cannot be put in issue on the trial of the attachment suit, and defendant must resort to his action on the attachment bond.[1] It has also been held that fraud in procuring a levy on the property is sufficient to justify an application to have the attachment set aside.[2]

2. Defects in Proceeding. Not every defect or slight irregularity in attachment proceedings will justify a quashing of the attachment,[3] for the mistake must (Wis.) 244, holding the truth of the affidavit may be examined, although the officer before whom it is made indorses his satisfaction of the facts alleged therein. Compare a dictum to the contrary in Mayhew v. Dudley, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 95, from which Dunn, C. J., dissented.

2. Kizer v. George, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 218, 19 Cinc. L. Bul. 257; Powell v. McKee, 4 La. Ann. 108. Compare Rainey v. Jefferson Iron Works, 8 Ohio Cir. Ct. 674, where it was held that plaintiff's asking a garnishee to buy defendant's property which was subsequently attached was not such a fraud in procuring the levy as would justify the court in setting aside the attachment.

Collusive attachment vacated.— Where a debtor, in collusion with some of his creditors, permits all of his property to be attached, with a view to giving such creditors a preference over other creditors, the attachment will be held to be an assignment with preferences, and will be vacated (Meinhard v. Youngblood, 41 S. C. 312, 19 S. E. 675); and where a partnership creditor levied an attachment on firm property for the purpose of preventing individual creditors from getting satisfaction from their claims and took no further steps for four months the attachment was set aside as fraudulent (Reed v. Ennis, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 393).

3. Defects not justifying dissolution.— It has been held that an attachment will not be quashed because the clerk made an error in dating the bond and affidavit (Henderson v. Drace, 30 Mo. 358) or neglected to advertise until the second term after the writ issued (Cory v. Lewis, 5 N. J. L. 994); because the summons failed to state the county where plaintiff desired the trial as required by the code (Thomson v. Tilden, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 513, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 920); because of a slight inconsistency between the date of the summons and the date of the sheriff's return (Cureton v. Dargan, 12 S. C. 122), of a clerical error in the body of the affidavit (Citizens' Bank v. Hancock, 35 La. Ann. 41), or of failure to affix the affidavit to the writ when the writ was served on defendant (Simpson v. Oldham, 2 Pinn. (Wis.) 461, 2 Chandl. (Wis.) 129); because of an abortive attempt to serve process on a non-resident defendant (Kennard v. Hollenbeck, 17 Nebr. 362, 22 N. W. 771), or of a wrongful levy on real estate as well as upon personalty when the real estate could not properly be attached (Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Miners' Bank, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 515); because there was a misstatement in the writ regarding the judicial district from which it issued (Standard Cotton Seed Oil Co. v. Mathison, 47 La. Ann. 710, 17 So. 251), regarding the time when (Dandridge v. Stevens, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 723), or the court to which (Carter v. O'Bryan, 105 Ala. 305, 16 So. 894), it was returnable; because the first names of defendants were omitted from the writ (Laws v. McCarty, 1 Handy (Ohio) 191, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 96); or because the attachment bond mentioned the sum due without including interest (Smith v. Pearce, Gilmer (Va.) 34). Compare Dawson v. Brown, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 53, where it was held that an irregularity in issuing a writ for a greater amount than that claimed in the affidavit and account was not a ground for dissolving the attachment.

By statute in Mississippi attachments cannot be vacated for want of form if essential matters are expressed. Bosbyshell v. Emanuel, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 63.

Irregularities in superfluous proceedings will not justify a dissolution of the attachment; such as defects in an unnecessary affidavit (Thorn v. Alvord, 54 N. Y. App. Div. 638, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 1147 [affirmed in 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 456, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 587]); failure of the petition to state what part of the account sued on was due, since such a statement was not required (Tootle v. Alexander, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 615, 35 S. W. 821), or irregularity in the return of an unnecessary alias citation (Walker v. Birdwell, 21 Tex. 92).

The improper joinder of a defendant in attachment is no ground for dissolving the attachment (Albers v. Bedell, 87 Mo. 183); and a discontinuance against a garnishee does not dissolve an attachment on the land which the garnishee is alleged to have purchased by fraud (Hand v. Fritsch, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 439).

Irregularities in obtaining a judgment are no cause for dissolving an attachment (Mur-be a material one;[4] and, although irregularities which warrant a dissolution of the writ will usually appear on the face of the affidavit or undertaking to procure attachment, or by comparison with the summons and complaint,[5] such is not the invariable rule and other defects may be shown.[6]

3. Falsity of Affidavit — a. Non-Existence of Alleged Grounds For Attachment.[7] The falsity of an affidavit for attachment is shown with sufficient certainty to justify a quashing of the writ by evidence that an alleged non-resident does in fact reside within the state,[8] that an alleged absconder had not in fact dock v. Steiner, 45 Pa. St. 349); and the failure of the journal entries regarding the calling and default of defendant to state the special capacity in which plaintiff sued seems to be a defect of this nature (Drew v. Dequindre, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 93). Compare Johnson v. Stockham, 89 Md. 368, 43 Atl. 943, where the docket entries disclosed the fact that by leave of the court two notes were withdrawn and copies left in their place, and it was held that the failure of the clerk to send a transcript of them along with the record is no ground for holding that the attachment was properly quashed, when it is plain that the only ground upon which it was in fact quashed was wholly different.

A void service is not a ground for quashing an attachment, where defendant has entered an appearance in the suit, but the levy and return alone should be quashed. Lawrence v. Featherston, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 345.

4. Irregularities in the proceedings have been held sufficient to justify a dissolution of the attachment when the affidavit was defective in matter of substance (Hall v. Brazelton, 46 Ala. 359; Simon v. Kugler Syndicate, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 1128), even though the affidavit is only required to be made before the writ is "executed" (Bowen v. Slocum, 17 Wis. 181), as where it failed to state any ground for the attachment (Miller v. Brinkerhoff, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 118, 47 Am. Dec. 242), or showed on its face that the alleged grounds for the attachment were insufficient in law or in fact (Bear v. Cohen, 65 N. C. 511); where it failed to set out a good cause of action (Thomas v. Pendleton, 1 S. D. 150, 46 N. W. 180, 36 Am. St. Rep. 726), or was based on information and on belief merely (Meinhard v. Neill, 85 Ga. 265, 11 S. E. 613; Clowser v. Hall, 80 Va. 864); where the bond recited that the suit was brought in a non-existing court (Bonner v. Brown, 10 La. Ann. 334), or was otherwise defective, although such defect did not affect the principal cause of action (Elliott v. Mitchell, 3 Greene (Iowa) 237); when the clerk failed to sign the writ (Smith v. Hackley, 44 Mo. App. 614); where there was no order directing the writ to issue (Blackwell v. Compton, 107 Ga. 764, 33 S. E. 672); where there was no clause for a summons in the writ (Bland v. Schott, 5 Mo. 213); when the service of the writ was defective (Coughlin v. Angell, 68 N. H. 352, 44 Atl. 525), or service by publication was not begun within the time prescribed by statute (Blossom v. Estes, 84 N. Y. 614; Mojarrieta v. Saenz, 80 N. Y. 547; Taylor v. Troncoso, 76 N. Y. 599). Compare Crowns v. Vail, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 204, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 324, 21 N. Y. St. 208, where an affidavit in an action by an assignee of claims stated that plaintiff was entitled to recover a specified sum over and above all counter-claims known to "him," and it was held that this defect was a sufficient basis for a motion to vacate the attachment.

6. A defect in the short note required by statute as a substitute for the declaration, which would be fatal on demurrer, is a good ground for quashing the attachment. Hirsh v. Thurber, 54 Md. 210.

An illegal interchange of trial justices has been held to furnish a ground for quashing the attachment. Wells v. Mansur, 52 Vt. 239.

The unauthorized substitution of another defendant in place of the original one would justify a quashing of the writ. Milledgeville Mfg. Co. v. Rives, 44 Ga. 479.

A writ of attachment against executors commanding a sheriff to attach the defendants by "their" goods and chattels, lands, etc., is defective and will be quashed. Haight v. Bergh, 15 N. J. L. 183. Compare Connelly v. Lerche, 56 N. J. L. 95, 28 Atl. 430, where it is held that a writ of attachment will not lie against executors, because to allow attachment would be an unwarranted interference with the distribution of the assets of the decedent's estate. And see supra, IV, E, 1.

It is not an improper renewal of an action, contrary to the statutory provision which forbids a plaintiff upon dismissing a suit to renew it at the same term of court, where plaintiff brought a suit by attachment for a different amount, and there is nothing in the record to show that the cause of action was the same as in the suit which had been dismissed. Baldwin v. Conger, 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 516.

Confession of error.—Where plaintiff had levied two attachments, a statement by his counsel that he claims nothing under the second writ is a confession of error, and it was properly held that the writ should be discharged. Kuehn v. Paroni, 20 Nev. 203, 19 Pac. 273.

absconded,[9] or that defendant lacked a fraudulent intent in making an alleged fraudulent transfer or concealment of property;[10] and as it is usually not enough that a creditor have reasonable cause for believing that a ground for attachment exists, proof of reasonable grounds for such belief will not defeat a proceeding to vacate an attachment.[11]

Eq. 441; Kauffman v. Musin, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 414; Blake v. Hawkes, 2 Hill (S. C.) 631 (holding that the court would not interfere in a doubtful case); Degnans v. Wheeler, 2 Nott & M. (S. C.) 323. But see Easton v. Malavazi, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 147, where it was held that an attachment could not be vacated for want of jurisdiction even if the evidence supporting the matter in the affidavit was insufficient, provided the statements in the affidavit were such that they fairly called for an exercise of judgment by the officer issuing the writ.

The return of a non-resident after the issue of the writ is not a ground for dissolving an attachment, for it does not prove the allegations in the affidavit to be false. Larimer v. Kelley, 10 Kan. 298; Simons v. Jacobs, 15 La. Ann. 425; Offutt v. Edwards, 9 Rob. (La.) 90; Reeves v. Comly, 3 Rob. (La.) 363; New Orleans Canal, etc., Co. v. Comly, 1 Rob. (La.) 231.

Estoppel to allege non-residence.—Where plaintiff falsely alleged that defendant was a citizen of the state in order to obtain possession of goods by an attachment issued in a federal court, he was held to be estopped from stating the non-residence of defendant as a ground for attachment in an action brought simultaneously in the state court, and the attachment was properly quashed. Suppl. 124.

Sufficiency of proof.—Although it has been held that facts must be clearly established showing that defendant was about to convert his property into money with intent to defraud his creditor to prevent a dissolution of the attachment (Bussey v. Rothschilds, 26 La. Ann. 258), a fair preponderance of evidence showing the existence of alleged grounds for attachment would ordinarily be sufficient to defeat an attempt to have the attachment vacated (Walton v. Chadwick, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 293, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 789, 58 N. Y. St. 145), even where the evidence was in the form of a defective affidavit (Matter of Aycinena, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 690); and evidence of equal weight on the other side would justify a dissolution of the attachment on motion (Flannagan v. Newberg, 1 Ida. 78); so that evidence was held insufficient to justify a reversal of an order dismissing an attachment in Noonan v. Pomeroy, 14 Wis. 568. Compare Koenig v. Huck, 51 La. Ann. 1368, 26 So. 543, where it was held that an attachment based on a fraudulent transfer must be dissolved without regard to the question of motive, when proof of the validity of the transfer was offered and plaintiff withdrew his averment of fraudulent intent.

Partial failure of grounds for attachment. — Although where no grounds for attachment existed for part of the debt sued for it has been held that the entire attachment must be dissolved (Meyer v. Evans, 27 Nebr. 367, 43 N. W. 109; Mayer v. Zingre, 18 Nebr. 458, 25 N. W. 727; Strasburger v. Bachrach, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 538, 36 N. Y. St. 1006); it has also been decided that an attachment will be sustained by proof of one of two alleged grounds for the issue of the writ (Tucker v. Frederick, 28 Mo. 574, 75 Am. Dec. 139); by proof of one of three alleged grounds (Strauss v. Abrahams, 32 Fed. 310, construing Missouri statute); or by proof of one of several alleged grounds (Cole Mfg. Co. v. Jenkins, 47 Mo. App. 664); although proof of a ground for attachment not alleged in the affidavit will not sustain the attachment (Dumay v. Sanchez, 71 Md. 508, 18 Atl. 890); and that where one defendant in an attachment against several parties denied the alleged non-residence of his co-defendant, such denial afforded no cause for quashing the writ (Warren v. Winterstein, 114 Mich. 647, 72 N. W. 600; Curran v. William Kendall Boot, etc., Co., 8 N. M. 417, 45 Pac. 1120. Compare Rosenberg v. Burnstein, 60 Minn. 18, 61 N. W. 684. Contra, Converse v. Steamer Lucy Robinson, 15 La. Ann. 433, where it was held that an attachment on the ground of non-residence which was bad against some of the owners of the attached property, because they were residents of the state, must be set aside in toto).

An offer to return property, the concealment of which was the ground for attachment, is not a sufficient cause for dissolving the attachment. Jackson v. White, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 294, 39 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 42.

b. Variance From Allegations as to Amount of Claim. Although it is ordinarily required that the affidavit to procure an attachment shall state the amount of attaching plaintiff's claim,[12] it is not a ground for quashing the writ that a verdict for a smaller amount is recovered on a trial of the action;[13] and while it has been held that variance as to the amount claimed between the writ of attachment and the affidavit is a fatal defect,[14] it is not a ground for quashing an attachment that the petition claimed a greater amount than that for which the writ of attachment is issued[15] for plaintiff is not bound to attach for the full amount of his claim.[16]

4. Insufficient Circumstances[17] — a. Appearance in Suit.[18] The early theory of foreign attachment made its purpose to compel an appearance and, taken in conjunction with the obsolete practice of requiring bail to complete an appearance, this gave some weight to the argument that appearance dissolved an attachment;[19]

N. J. L. 328; Weber v. Weitling, 18 N. J. Eq. 441; Lesage v. Schmitt, 10 N. J. L. J. 10; Matter of Warner, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 424. Contra, Claflin v. Steenbock, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 842; Scott v. Mitchell, 8 Ont. Pr. 518.

Suppl. 1147], the principle of the contra case was recognized, but the court held that plaintiff had not claimed more in his affidavit than he was entitled to recover.

Pro tanto quashing.—Although it has been held that where an attachment could not properly issue for part of a claim it should be quashed as to that part (Gross v. Goldsmith, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 126; Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036), this principle has been denied, and the court has refused to quash any portion of the attachment (Sackett v. Partridge, 4 Iowa 416; Grotte v. Nagle, 50 Nebr. 363, 69 N. W. 973). Compare Delmas v. Morrison, 61 Miss. 314, where an attachment in the circuit court was discharged, because the grounds for attachment were only sustained as to one count, and that count was within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace.

Variance in proof.— Where an attachment is issued to recover a joint indebtedness and the evidence disproves that the indebtedness was joint, the proceedings must necessarily be quashed. Cox v. Henry, 113 Ga. 259, 38 S. E. 856; Boyd v. Wolff, 88 Md. 341, 41 Atl. 897.

App. 460, where it was held that defendant could not take advantage of a variance between the amount of damages stated in the declaration and the affidavit, unless the declaration counts upon a different cause of action.

There was held to be no variance between an affidavit claiming a certain amount for rent of land, and a declaration on a bond executed by defendant when it did not appear but that the bond was for the payment of rent. Perkerson v. Snodgrass, 85 Ala. 137, 4 So. 752.

16. Dwyer v. Testard, 65 Tex. 432.

17. Existence of concurrent remedies.— That a proceeding is pending to foreclose a chattel mortgage securing the claim is no ground for dissolving an attachment in an action brought concurrently to recover the claim (Pech Mfg. Co. v. Groves, 6 S. D. 504, 62 N. W. 109); and an attachment will not be dissolved, because in the same proceeding plaintiff seeks to foreclose a lien on property held as security for the claim, provided the security is insufficient (Shedd v. McConnell, 18 Kan. 594).

18. Effect of appearance on liability of sureties on dissolution bond see supra, XIII, E, 3.

19. Attachment dissolved by appearance.— Under the Revised Statutes of Virginia of 1819, providing that a non-resident defendant could have an attachment discharged by appearing and giving security, the attachment was dissolved when such defendant was allowed to appear and file his answer without giving the usual security. Tiernans v. Schley, 2 Leigh (Va.) 25. Compare Ferguson v. Ryder, 2 Ohio St. 493, where a defendant appeared and surrendered his body in order to dissolve an attachment, but it was held that he failed to accomplish this purpose because the act regarding imprisonment had been repealed and the surrender was a nullity or, in case it was held the act regarding the imprisonment had not been repealed, because he did not plead while in actual custody.

but the universal rule to-day is that appearance has not such an effect[20] for a defendant can appear without giving bail.[21]

b. Lack of Interest in Attached Property. As seizure of property which he does not own can do an attachment defendant no possible injury, it naturally follows that courts have refused to allow defendant to move to quash on the ground that he has no interest in the attached property;[22] but although the reason applies with equal force to foreign attachments, a non-resident defendant has been allowed to show lack of interest in the attached property to oust the court of jurisdiction.[23]

But see McLaren v. Hall, 26 Iowa 297, where it was suggested that exemption of the attached property would be a sufficient ground for dissolving the attachment, although in the case at bar the facts showing the property to be exempt were not sufficient to justify dissolution.

The existence of a mortgage on the attached property is no ground for the dissolution of an attachment, but merely entitles the mortgagee to intervene. Bear v. Cohen, 65 N. C. 511.

25. An assignee is entitled to move to vacate an attachment on his assignor's property (Sims v. Jacobson, 51 Ala. 186; Von Roun v. San Francisco Super. Ct., 58 Cal. 358; Ringen Stove Co. v. Bowers, 109 Iowa 175, 80 N. W. 318; Palmer v. Hughes, 84 Md. 652, 36 Atl. 431; Merriam v. Wood, etc., Lithographing Co., 19 N. Y. App. Div. 329, 46 N. Y. St. 456); but he waives this right by suing the sheriff for the value of the property seized (Marx v. Ciancimino, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 570, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 672), or by entering into a binding agreement for the disposition of the proceeds arising from a sale of the attached property (National Park Bank v. Whitmore, 7 N. Y. St. 456), and cannot move where similar motions made by defendant, his assignor, have been denied (Strauss v. Vogt, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 483, 53 N. Y. St. 588, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 251).

Some courts have denied the assignee's right to file a motion to discharge the attachment (Stichtenoth v. Sowles Lumber Co., 1 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 352, 7 Ohio N. P. 235), to move to dissolve an attachment for irregularities [26] or to traverse the grounds for the attachment.[27] On the other hand where the attachment is fraudulent so that some remedy in a court of equity [28] would be open to an interested to traverse the facts alleged in the affidavit as a ground for the attachment (Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659; Gott v. Hoschna, 57 Mich. 413, 24 N. Ct. 413); and it has been held that under the Missouri law defendant's assignee could not move to quash an attachment, but must intervene in the attachment suit (Boltz v. Eagon, 34 Fed. 445). Compare Teweles v. Lins, 98 Wis. 453, 74 N. W. 122, where both assignee and assignor were allowed to join in a traverse of the matter alleged in the affidavit.

Y. 331, where trustees appointed under attachment proceedings brought trover against a judgment creditor of the attachment debtor who had seized property on his execution, and it was held that defendant could show want of jurisdiction of the court over the attachment proceedings.

Motion by amicus curiæ.— Although the doctrine of allowing a motion to dissolve an attachment to be made by an amicus curiæ has been suggested in an early case (Planters', etc., Bank v. Andrews, 8 Port. (Ala.) 404), no doctrine of this sort is recognized by later cases (Sanborn v. Elizabethport Mfg. Co., 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 106, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 432), even though the person appearing as an amicus curiæ has an interest in the attached property (Cockrell v. McGraw, 33 Ala. 526). See, generally, AMICUS CURIÆ, 2 Cyc. 281.

App. 266, 18 C. C. A. 15 (construing Arkansas statute).

28. Relief in equity.— Where a prior attachment was based on an invalid claim, a judgment creditor who filed a bill in equity setting out the circumstances of the prior attachment was held to be entitled to an injunction restraining the prior creditor from enforcing his judgment (Norton v. Hickok, third party,[29] the more convenient practice of determining such controversies in the original suit[30] is often provided for by statute or by local practice rules, 25 Conn. 356); and an assignee in insolvency could properly file a bill in equity to dissolve an attachment which had been levied upon the insolvent's land (Emerson v. Detroit Steel, etc., Co., 100 Mich. 127, 58 N. W. 659; Gott v. Hoschna, 57 Mich. 413, 24 N. W. 123), where there was no remedy at law (Turner v. Hatch, 100 Mich. 65, 58 N. W. 605) and the proceedings were brought within the time prescribed for asking equitable relief (Zeman v. Steinberg, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1152, 54 S. W. 178); but the absence of grounds for an attachment would not furnish a basis for equity to interfere (Putney v. Wolberg, 127 Ala. 124, 28 So. 741). See also Ramash v. Scheuer, 81 Wis. 269, 51 N. W. 330, where a vendor of land filed a bill to have a prior attachment annulled on the ground that it was fraudulent and collusive, and it was held that he was entitled to the relief prayed for.

May enjoin attachment although invoked for another purpose.— If a bill primarily seeking the correction of mistake in the description of lands shows that after the execution of the deed an alleged creditor of the grantor levied a writ of attachment upon the property, the court, after acquiring jurisdiction to reform the deed, can retain the bill and grant the complainant full relief in accordance with his prayer by enjoining the attachment proceedings and annulling the writ and levy as a cloud upon the title to such lands. Bieler v. Dreher, (Ala. 1901) 30 So. 22.

Although the property has been sold under the fraudulent attachment, a court of equity may order that the constructive trust on the proceeds in favor of applying creditors be properly administered. Henderson v. J. B. Brown Co., 125 Ala. 566, 28 So. 79.

Admissibility of evidence to sustain bill.— Where a bill is filed by creditors of an insolvent debtor to set aside an attachment sued out by other creditors of the common debtor, on the ground that the claims of the attaching creditors were false and simulated and that the attachments were issued by collusion for the purpose of defrauding complainants and other creditors, evidence, that after the filing of the bill the goods were sold under an order of the court and were bought in the name of a third person who in fact purchased for one of the attaching creditors, and paid for them with the money of the debtor, is competent and admissible as explanatory and confirmatory of other facts which, when proved, sustain an averment of the bill, and tend very strongly to show collusion. Rice v. Less, 105 Ala. 298, 16 So. 719.

29. The interest of the third person claiming to have acquired a lien upon attached property can be disputed by the attaching creditor, and if the facts are decided against the moving party his motion must fail. Delmore v. Owen, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 296 [affirmed in 110 N. Y. 679, 18 N. E. 482, 18 N. Y. St. 1030]. Compare Williams v. Stewart, 56 Ga. 663, where it was held that a person not a party to an attachment suit could not have it enjoined without showing that it was necessary for the protection of his rights.

Determining validity of adverse claim.— It has been held that after a claimant has presented his petition to the court, and has been made a party to the suit, a jury should be impaneled to determine the justice of his claim. Schwein v. Sims, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 209.

Proof of the interest of a third person is sufficiently made out by showing that a judgment-roll was filed although the clerk of court neglects to enter the judgment (Steuben County Bank v. Alberger, 78 N. Y. 252); but affidavits averring, on affiant's own knowledge, matter which entitles a third person to move are insufficient when no facts are stated showing affiant had personal knowledge of the matter alleged in the affidavit (Belmont v. Sigua Iron Co., 12 N. Y. App. Div. 441, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 122), and an affidavit by a subsequent judgment creditor whose judgment was recovered in a court of inferior jurisdiction must show that such court had jurisdiction both of the subject-matter and of the nerson of defendant (Hamerschlag v. Cathoscope Electrical Co., 16 N. Y. App. Div. 185, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 668). See also Ruppert v. Hang, 87 N. Y. 141, where the affidavit regarding the interest of an intervening judgment creditor was held to be sufficient, since no inference could be drawn therefrom other than that the attachment and the execution were levied upon the same property and that the levy of the execution was subsequent.

30. Alabama.— When an equitable attachment had been sued out by a surety against the principal debtor before payment of the claim secured, it was held that the creditor might intervene and prosecute the suit to a decree in his own favor. Peevey v. Cabaniss, 70 Ala. 253.

California.— It has been held that judgment creditors may seek relief against an attachment issued in a suit prematurely brought. Davis v. Eppinger, 18 Cal. 378, 79 Am. Dec. 184.

Colorado.— It has been held that a subsequent judgment creditor cannot, by petition of intervention, attack the sufficiency of an affidavit for attachment. Leppel v. Beck, 2 Colo. App. 390, 31 Pac. 185.

Connecticut.—A statute provides that other creditors of an attachment defendant may intervene in the attachment suit and set up defenses or impeach the judgment recovered therein. Norton v. Hickok, 25 Conn. 356.

District of Columbia.—An intervener in attachment proceedings has been allowed to move to quash the attachment on other grounds than his ownership of the attached property (Wallace v. Maroney, 6 Mackey (D. C.) 221); and although a failure to allege that defendant has no other property than that attached on which interveners may levy execution is not a jurisdictional defect it renders the petition demurrable (Daniels v. Solomon, 11 App. Cas. (D. C.) 163).

Georgia.—A claimant of the attached property may move to dismiss the attachment for a defect in the affidavit (Krutina v. Culpepper, 75 Ga. 602; Hines v. Kimball, 47 Ga. 587); but this motion cannot be made before the trial of the issues raised by his claim (Gazan v. Royce, 78 Ga. 512, 3 S. E. 753).

Illinois.— A judgment creditor has been allowed to interplead in an attachment suit and have a default judgment therein set aside on the ground that it was based on a debt not due. Schilling v. Deane, 36 Ill. App. 513.

Iowa.—A creditor who has not reduced his claim to judgment or otherwise secured a lien therefor on the property of the debtor cannot attack an attachment levied on the property of his debtor. Smith v. Sioux City Nursery, etc., Co., 109 Iowa 51, 79 N. W. 457.

Kentucky.—It has been held that any creditor who is affected by an attachment against his debtor's property may make a motion to have the attachment discharged (Farmers' Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 451), such as creditors claiming under a deed of trust of the attached property who have been allowed to controvert the attachment proceedings (Bamberger v. Halberg, 78 Ky. 376); and collusion between the debtor and the attaching creditor is sufficient ground for setting an attachment aside upon the application of other creditors (Moore v. Stege, 93 Ky. 27, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 469, 18 S. W. 1019); but a general creditor having no junior lien cannot controvert the ground of an attachment (Brewer v. Spalding, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 307).

Louisiana.— Creditors cannot have a previous attachment dissolved on the ground that it was collusively obtained when the debt upon which the attachment suit was based was a just one (John Henry Shoe Co. v. Gilkerson-Sloss Commission Co., 47 La. Ann. 860, 17 So. 340); and in a suit by a creditor to annul a judgment sustaining an attachment, he is restricted to showing fraud between the attaching creditor and the debtor, and he cannot object to defects in the affidavit for such defenses are personal to attachment defendant (Claflin v. Benjamin, 47 La. Ann. 1447, 17 So. 864). See also Rawlins v. Pratt, 45 La. Ann. 58, 12 So. 197, where judgment creditors of defendant attacked a prior attachment and it was held that consent by the debtor would not of itself invalidate the attachment. Compare New Orleans Canal, etc., Co. v. Beard, 16 La. Ann. 345, 79 Am. Dec. 582, where the intervener was allowed to plead description as a defense to the attachment when defendant was insolvent.

Maine.— It has been held that Me. Rev. Stat. c. 82, § 19, which provides that "grantees may appear and defend in suits against their grantors in which the real estate is attached" is not applicable to a grantee whose conveyance was prior to the attachment in question, since his rights were not affected. Sprague v. A. & W. Sprague Mfg. Co., 76 Me. 417.

Maryland.— A subsequent judgment creditor can intervene in a previous attachment and have the attachment dissolved because it was issued improvidently by reason of a fatal defect in the affidavit (Clarke v. Meixsell, 29 Md. 221); and it has been held generally that any third person claiming an interest in the property attached may have an attachment set aside for defects apparent on the face of the proceeding (Clarke v. Meixsell, 29 Md. 221; Lambden v. Bowie, 2 Md. 334; Stone v. Magruder, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 383, 32 Am. Dec. 177; Campbell v. Morris, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 535). Compare Wever v. Baltzell, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 335, where it was held that want of jurisdiction in the attachment proceeding could be taken advantage of at the trial either by defendant or a claimant of the property.

Massachusetts.—The statute providing that any subsequent lienor may dispute the validity and effect of a prior attachment by filing a petition in the attachment suit does not authorize the holder of a mortgage which is prior to the attachment to file such a petition (Peirce v. Richardson, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 69); but a subsequent lienor has been allowed to set up defenses which were not open to debtor, such as collusion between debtor and plaintiff (Carter v. Gregory, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 165).

Mississippi.— Under Miss. Acts (1884), p. 76, § 2, providing that a creditor of attachment defendant may intervene and contest the grounds of the attachment, an intervening creditor must file an affidavit that the claim sued on was fictitious in order to be entitled to raise that issue, but such an affidavit is unnecessary when he sets up fraud and collusion between the attaching plaintiff and defendant. Lowenstein v. Aaron, 69 Miss. 341, 12 So. 269. Compare Desmond v. Levy, (Miss. 1893) 12 So. 481, where it was held that intervening general creditors could not show that the debt on which the proceedings were based was fictitious, presumably because they had not filed a proper affidavit.

Nebraska.— It has been held that a mortgagee of chattels on which an order of attachment had been levied could not question the grounds for the issue of the writ. Meyer v. Keefer, 58 Nebr. 220, 78 N. W. 506.

New Jersey.—A subsequent judgment creditor has been allowed to contest a prior attachment because the non-residence of defendant which was alleged as a ground for the attachment did not in fact exist. National

2. Circumstances Affecting Defendant's Right to Move[31]— a. Ownership of Attached Property. The general right of an attachment defendant to move for the dissolution of the attachment made in an action against himself[32] cannot be defeated by showing that he had no interest in the attached property at the time of the levy under the writ,[33] for the attaching plaintiff is estopped to raise this Papeterie Co. v. Kinsey, 54 N. J. L. 29, 23 Atl. 275.

New York.—Any person who has acquired an interest in the property attached may move to have the attachment set aside for insufficiency of the affidavits on which it was granted (Steuben County Bank v. Alberger, 78 N. Y. 252; Smith v. Davis, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 306, 3 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 74); or on additional affidavits denying the grounds for the attachment (Thalheimer v. Hays, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 93); for such an attack is a direct and not a collateral one (Acker v. Saynisch, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 415, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 937); but the interest must be acquired subsequently to the levy of the attachment to entitle the interested party to move (Key West Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Key West Bank, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 390, 45 N. Y. St. 152; Allen v. Key West Bank, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 391, 45 N. Y. St. 152; Brown v. Guthrie, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 29). Compare Gere v. Gundlach, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 13, for the earlier practice by which defendant alone could object to defects in the proceedings; although even then want of jurisdiction could be taken advantage of by a third party (Decker v. Bryant, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 182). A purchaser of part of the property attached acquires an interest therein within the meaning of the code (Trow's Printing, etc., Co. v. Hart, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 413); and so does a judgment creditor, provided he produces proper evidence of his judgment (Sill Stove Works v. Scott, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 566, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 181).

Oklahoma.— Where an attachment was levied after defendant had made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, it was held that all the creditors of the assignor could interplead in the attachment action to have the proceeds administered in equity as a trust fund for their benefit. Hockaday v. Drye, 7 Okla. 288, 54 Pac. 475.

Pennsylvania.— A subsequent judgment creditor has been allowed to contest the fact of non-residence alleged as a ground for a prior attachment (Reed's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 378) and to show the illegality of a prior attachment proceeding (Matter of Dillon, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 182); and a claimant of the attached property has been allowed to have the attachment dissolved for defects in the affidavit (National Bank of Republic v. Tasker, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. 173). Compare Frost v. Holmes, 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 442, where a scire facias was brought to revive a judgment in an attachment suit, and it was held that an adverse claimant of the attached property would prevail on showing that attachment defendant was not a non-resident, because an attachment upon insufficient grounds created no lien.

South Dakota.— The statute (S. D. Comp. Laws, § 5011) providing that a subsequent lienor may move to discharge an attachment, authorizes a motion for insufficiency or irregularity of the affidavit and this right is irrespective of his right to move as an intervener. Citizens' Bank v. Corkings, 9 S. D. 614, 70 N. W. 1059, 62 Am. St. Rep. 891.

Texas.— Sureties on a bond given to replevy attached property have been allowed to intervene and set up a defect in the affidavit (Burch v. Watts, 37 Tex. 135), although a claimant of the attached property could not raise this objection (Slade v. Le Page, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 403, 27 S. W. 952); and a judgment creditor has been allowed to have a prior attachment set aside for fraud (Murphy v. Nash, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 944). But see Saunders v. Ireland, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 880, where it was held that one claiming property against an attaching creditor could not inquire into the validity of the claim upon which the attachment suit was brought.

West Virginia.—An interested person, after filing his petition in the attachment suit, may attack the validity of an attachment for defects in the affidavit or by controverting the facts set forth as a ground for attachment (Capehart v. Dowery, 10 W. Va. 130); but mere creditors at large are not "interested persons" within the meaning of the code (Crim v. Harmon, 38 W. Va. 596, 18 S. E. 753). Compare Tappan v. Pease, 7 W. Va. 682, where it was held that a mortgagee who sought to attack an attachment on the land covered by the mortgage for a defect in the attachment affidavit must file a petition and give security for costs.

31. Effect of giving a bond to dissolve the attachment on defendant's right to move see supra, XIII, E, 4, f, (III).

32. Defendant may move although he is the only one of several co-defendants (Walts v. Nichols, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 276; Windt v. Banniza, 2 Wash. 147, 26 Pac. 189), trustees have been appointed in pursuance of the act relative to absconding debtors (Matter of Faulkner, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 598), or the attachment has become inoperative because of failure to serve the summons within the time limited by statute (Betzemann v. Brooks, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 271); and the application may be to have the attachment vacated as to the whole or as to any part of the property seized (Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9).

In Rhode Island defendant cannot impeach the attachment for improvidence, but can only apply to the court to reduce the amount attached when the levy has been excessive. Wood v. Watson, 20 R. I. 223, 37 Atl. 1030.

objection,[34] but there is no estoppel to show that defendant has subsequently parted with his interest in the attached property and, in some jurisdictions, a transfer of his entire interest[35] has been held to preclude defendant from moving to dissolve the attachment.[36]

United States.—Salmon v. Mills, 49 Fed. 333, 4 U. S. App. 101, 1 C. C. A. 278, construing Arkansas statute.

Contra, Powell v. Rankin, 80 Ala. 316; Macumber v. Beam, 22 Mich. 395; Price v. Reed, 20 Mich. 72; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409, the Michigan cases being based on the theory that the evil intended to be remedied by the statute was depriving defendant of the possession of his property, and hence he could not move to have the attachment dissolved, unless he had a right to have the property restored to him.

What amounts to a lack of interest.—Although it was formerly held that the levy of a subsequent execution upon attached property terminated defendant's interest therein so that he was precluded from moving to vacate the attachment (Johnson v. De Witt, 36 Mich. 95), the court has repudiated this doctrine (Drs. K. & K. U. S. Medical, etc., Assoc. v. Post, etc., Printing Co., 58 Mich. 487, 25 N. W. 477), and it has always been the law that the levy of a subsequent attachment on the property previously attached does not affect defendant's right to move (Sheldon v. Stewart, 43 Mich. 574, 5 N. W. 1067; Schall v. Bly, 43 Mich. 401, 5 N. W. 651). See also Ripon Knitting Works v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 129, 53 N. W. 17; Pierce v. Johnson, 93 Mich. 125, 53 N. W. 16, 18 L. R. A. 486, where it was held that defendant was not precluded from moving to quash the writ by the fact that the attached property was in the possession of a third party who obtained a release thereof by giving bond. Compare Patterson v. Goodrich, 31 Mich. 225, where land belonging to a wife and used as a homestead by the family was attached in an action against the husband, and it was held that he had sufficient interest as head of the family to move for a dissolution of the attachment.

Presumption of right to possession from allegation of ownership.— An allegation of present ownership of attached property is enough to give jurisdiction to hear a petition for the dissolution of the attachment, although it does not distinctly allege that petitioner is entitled to the possession of the property. Zook v. Blough, 42 Mich. 487, 4 N. W. 219; Macumber v. Beam, 22 Mich. 395.

35. An assignor's interest in the surplus after making a general assignment for the benefit of creditors is sufficient to entitle him to move for the dissolution of an attachment upon the property assigned (Winona First Nat. Bank v. Randall, 38 Minn. 382, 37 N. W. 799; Richards v. White, 7 Minn. 345; Rowles v. Hoare, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 266; Gasherie v. Apple, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 64; Brewer v. Tucker, 13 Abb. Pr. W. 479; McCord, etc., Co. v. Krause, 36 Nebr. 764, 55 N. W. 215). Compare Blossom v. Estes, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 381, where a motion made nominally by defendant was held proper, although the real purpose was to assist defendant's assignees.

A reason for allowing defendant to move after an assignment is that if he succeeds costs are allowed to him and damages for the wrongful seizure of his property. Keith v. Armstrong, 65 Wis. 225, 26 N. W. 445.

cludes defendant from insisting on a dissolution of the writ,[37] requesting a suspension of legal proceedings has been held not to estop him from moving to vacate for plaintiff's failure to publish within the time prescribed by statute.[38]

C. To Whom Application Made.[39] Attachment, especially when a suit is pending, is of the nature of a process of the court over which the court has the inherent power of control,[40] and as a general rule an application to vacate or set aside an attachment should be made to the court or judge trying the same.[41] In some jurisdictions, however, it is expressly provided that the application for relief from an attachment may be made to a designated officer of the court, such as a court commissioner or the clerk.[42]

New York — Motion founded on papers.— A motion to dissolve an attachment founded on the papers on which it is granted, which N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 683, provides may be heard with or without notice, is not a "litigated motion", which rule 1 of the appellate division rules requires to be heard in part I of the court, but is within rule 5, providing that application for all court orders ex parte — "where notice is not required must be made to the special term for the transaction of ex parte business." Sturz v. Fischer, 15 Misc. (N. Y.) 410, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 893, 72 N. Y. St. 252, 25 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 202, 2 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 365.

Pennsylvania — Jurisdiction not confined to courts of common pleas.—Under the Pennsylvania act of 1869, giving jurisdiction to the court of common pleas of the county to dissolve an attachment, it has been held that such jurisdiction is not confined to the courts of common pleas, but extends to the district and nisi prius courts. 2. By Motion or Rule to Show Cause — a. In General — (i) Defects Apparent of Record. Where the defects are apparent on the face of the proceedings[44] a motion to quash the writ or dissolve the attachment is proper.[45]

(ii) Defects Not Apparent of Record. In some jurisdictions, where the defects are not apparent on the face of the proceedings but defendant has a good defense upon evidence dehors the record, an application for the dissolution of the attachment may be made by motion or rule to show cause why the attach-

Discharge of equitable attachment upon motion or demurrer.— Where no sufficient cause of attachment is alleged in an attachment bill, such attachment may be discharged upon objection taken either by motion or demurrer. Bittick v. Wilkins, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 307.

Defendant may move to discharge as to whole or part of the property attached. Kentucky Northern Bank v. Nash, 1 Handy (Ohio) 153, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 75.

Motion to modify attachment.— Where an attachment was issued for a debt, part of which only was due, defendant is confined to a motion for a modification of the writ, under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 2744, on that ground, and a release of the property from the attachment as to the debt not due, because of failure to give a proper bond. Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036.

46. Alabama.— Drakford v. Turk, 75 Ala. 339, holding that when an attachment is sued out for a cause of action upon which the statutes do not authorize its issue, the irregularity cannot be reached by a plea in abatement or by a motion to quash it. The proper method of reaching the objection, where the writ will not lie for the enforcement of the action, is a rule upon plaintiff to show cause against the dissolution of the writ and its levy; and the motion must precede a plea to the merits.

Louisiana.— Read v. Ware, 2 La. Ann. 498, holding that where a defendant seeks to dissolve an attachment on the ground of the falsehood of the affidavit made to obtain it he may do so summarily, by a rule to show cause, and it is not necessary that such a defense should be set up by plea or exception. Under La. Code Prac. art. 258, however, a writ of attachment can be dissolved by exception as well as by rule to show cause. Poutz v. Reggio, 26 La. Ann. 305.

Maryland.— The truth of the statements of the affidavit may be inquired into upon a motion to quash. Johnson v. Stockham, 89 Md. 368, 43 Atl. 943; Ferrall v. Farnen, 67 Md. 76, 8 Atl. 819; Clarke v. Meixsell, 29 Md. 221; Gover v. Barnes, 15 Md. 576.

New York.— Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 683, a motion to vacate may be founded upon proof by affidavit on the part of defendant. Thalheimer v. Hays, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 93; National Park Bank v. Whitmore, 7 N. Y. St. 456.

South Carolina.— Attachment may be dissolved or defeated upon two grounds: (1) where some irregularities of fatal character appear on the face of the proceedings; (2) where the allegations upon which it issued are untrue. The dissolution in either case may be had upon motion — the first being made upon papers and the second upon affidavits as to matters dehors the record. Bates v. Killian, 17 S. C. 553. And see Kerchner v. McCormac, 25 S. C. 461.

47. Supporting affidavits see infra, XV, D, 2, f.

48. Affidavits or oral evidence.— The motion to vacate may, in some jurisdictions, be supported either by affidavits or by oral evidence. Carnahan v. Gustine, 2 Okla. 399, 37 Pac. 594; Wearne v. France, 3 Wyo. 273, 21 Pac. 703. It is not, however, contemplated by such statutes that defendant may support his motion to discharge both by affidavits and oral testimony, and where a defendant has made his motion for a discharge upon affidavit he has no right to depart from that mode of proof and introduce oral testimony in support of his motion. Hansen v. Doherty, 1 Wash. 461, 25 Pac. 297.

Depositions.— In some states it is expressly provided that upon trial of a motion to dissolve an attachment depositions may properly be introduced in evidence. Hanna v. Barrett, 39 Kan. 446, 18 Pac. 497 (even though taken upon insufficient notice); Newton v. West, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 24. See also Gibson v. McLaughlin, 1 Browne (Pa.) 292, where it was held that the depositions of the creditors were properly admitted, although taken after the writ issued. But the deposition of plaintiff taken ex parte after the writ issued has been held not admissible. Coulon v. De Lisle, 1 Browne (Pa.) 291.

Oral evidence.— Unless expressly provided that the trial shall be upon affidavits and counter-affidavits it would seem that upon motion to dissolve an attachment for defects

b. Necessity For General Appearance in Action. In some jurisdictions defendant may move to vacate an attachment without appearing generally in the action.[49] In others, however, such motion cannot be made without full appearance to the action.[50]

c. Time to Move. As soon as defendant is before the court he may move to quash an attachment issued in the action against him,[51] but owing to varying provisions of practice acts and of local practice rules in different states there is a great diversity of holdings as to the time after which defendant cannot move. Thus while it is required in some jurisdictions that defendant move to quash at the very outset,[52] and waives his right to make such a motion by pleading in bar not apparent of record, oral evidence is admissible to support or disprove the grounds alleged in the motion. Holliday v. Cohen, 34 Ark. 707; Newton v. West, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 24. Compare Kountze v. Scott, 52 Nebr. 460, 72 N. W. 585, holding that whether or not oral evidence should be admitted on the hearing of a motion for discharging the attachment rested in the discretion of the court, and that such right was not conferred by statute. In some cases oral evidence in addition to affidavits is proper. Robinson v. Morrison, 2 App. Cas. (D. C.) 105; Tyler v. Sufford, 24 Kan. 580; Lambden v. Bowie, 2 Md. 334; State v. Quick, 45 N. J. L. 308 [following Baldwin v. Flagg, 43 N. J. L. 495]. See also Shadduck v. Marsh, 21 N. J. L. 434.

Production of books and papers.— In Schwartz v. Atkin, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 373, it was held that upon a rule to dissolve, taken on defendant's motion, plaintiff may, upon motion, have an order on defendant to appear with his books and papers as for cross-examination.

Suppression of affidavit on failure to produce affiant.— Under Ark. Code Proc. § 661, which provides that where a provisional remedy is granted upon an affidavit, and a motion is made to discharge or vacate it, the party against whom it is granted may require the production of affiant for cross-examination, and "if the affiant is not produced his affidavit shall be suppressed, and if produced he may be examined by either party," it is held that it is only where the affidavit might be used as evidence that it can be suppressed; and that if an attachment be issued on an affidavit, and the grounds of attachment be controverted, the affidavit cannot be used as evidence, and should not be suppressed because of plaintiff's failure to produce affiant for cross-examination. Churchill v. Hill, 59 Ark. 54, 26 S. W. 378.

Bank v. Randall, 38 Minn. 382, 37 N. W. 799; Andrews v. Schofield, 27 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 132); and he need not wait until he files an answer (Quinlan v. Danford, 28 Kan. 507); or until the return-term of the writ (Wilson v. Louis Cook Mfg. Co., 88 N. C. 5). Compare De Leon v. Heller, 77 Ga. 740, where it was held that a demurrer to an affidavit could be decided at the first term, although plaintiff has the whole of that term during which to file his declaration.

Motion premature before report by commissioner.— It has been held that the supreme court would not entertain a motion in respect to the regularity of the proceedings of a commissioner under the act concerning absent, concealed, or absconding debtors, until after report made by the commissioner. The jurisdiction of the court to review the proceedings is acquired only by report made by certiorari returned. Matter of Gilbert, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 490.

(Pa.) 389, where it was held that an application in the case of an attachment brought to the July term was in time, if made in the December term following, where the July term being held for one day only was not regarded as strictly speaking a term.

Time fixed with reference to other proceedings.— It has been held that defendant must make his motion to quash within the time prescribed for pleading in abatement (De Bardeleben v. Crosby, 53 Ala. 363; Steamboat Farmer v. McCraw, 31 Ala. 659; Hazard v. Jordan, 12 Ala. 180), or within the time for answer (Merritt v. St. Paul, 11 Minn. 223), and the time will not be extended by calling the motion a substituted motion (Magee v. Fogerty, 6 Mont. 237, 11 Pac. 668), or by an order denying the motion without prejudice to its renewal before another court to which the case is removed (Wallace v. Lewis, 9 Mont. 399, 24 Pac. 22). Compare Reg. v. Stewart, 8 Ont. Pr. 297, where defendant in attachment accepted service of the writ with knowledge of all the irregularities in the proceedings, and it was held he could not move to set aside the attachment after the time for pleading had expired.

Where the period for opening a default is fixed by statute at twelve months, this refers to the application by defendant, and if the application is made in due time defendant is not prejudiced by the failure of the court to pass upon his rights within the time limited. Bledsoe v. Wright, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 471.

Motion on merits not defeated by laches.— The general rule that a motion to discharge an attachment for irregularity must be made promptly or excuse given for the laches does not apply to a motion made on the merits (Thalheimer v. Hayes, 14 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 232; Swezey v. Bartlett, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 444; Lawrence v. Jones, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 110); and mere lapse of time within the limits provided by the statutes, before levy, is no objection to the ground of the motion (Andrews v. Schofield, 27 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 132).

Affidavit sufficiently answering charge of laches.—Laches charged against the assignee of the attachment debtors in making a motion to set aside the attachment is fully answered by his affidavit, alleging that had the estate realized the amount for which it had been sold by the assignors, prior to the assignment, there would have been sufficient to pay all creditors, and that afterward he was obliged to rescind the sale and resell the goods for less than their worth, being barely enough to pay plaintiffs, and that he served the motion papers the day of the sale. (Ind.) 594, where a motion to quash a writ of attachment made on the calling of the cause at the term at which the writ was returnable and on the first appearance of defendant was held to be in time, although he had previously entered special bail in vacation. Compare Collins v. Nichols, 7 Ind. 447, where a motion to quash was held to be too late after appearance entered, continuance, and trial.

Contra, Dulin v. McCaw, 39 W. Va. 721, 20 S. E. 681, where it was held that defendant by appearing and pleading to the principal action did not waive his right to contest the validity of the attachment, but merely waived the right to take objection to the service by publication. Compare Horton v. Fancher, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 172, where motion to quash was disallowed and defendant pleaded to merits, but was held not to have waived his right to insist on his motion on an appeal.

Where proceedings were instituted under a state law not adopted by congress the right to raise objection to jurisdiction of the court was held not to be waived by pleading to the merits. Binns v. Williams, 4 McLean (U. S.) 580, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,423, construing Michigan statute.

Dist. 433. Compare Stoddard v. Miller, 29 Ill. 291, where it was held that the right to make a motion to dismiss the suit because the declaration was not filed in time was not waived by pleading in abatement to an attachment writ.

Simultaneous motion to quash and plea in abatement.— In Arkansas defendant may file a motion to vacate and plead in abatement at the same time, and the court will postpone action on the motion until the issue of fact is determined, and then decide the motion in the light of the result reached upon that issue. Salmon v. Mills, 49 Fed. 333, 4 U. S. App. 101, 1 C. C. A. 278.

motion to quash at any time before final judgment[55] or even after judgment,[56] provided the proceeds of the attached property have not been applied in satisfaction of the judgment.[57]

d. Notice of Application — (i) Necessity For. As a general rule, notice should be given to plaintiff of a motion to dissolve or discharge an attachment,[58]

Ohio.— Egan v. Lumsden, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 168; Ross v. Miller Merchant Tailoring Co., 7 Ohio Cir. Ct. 51.

Wyoming.— Cheyenne First Nat. Bank v. Swan, 3 Wyo. 356, 23 Pac. 743.

A motion to quash must be submitted to the court as well as filed before judgment in order to be seasonable (Herman v. Hayes, 58 Nebr. 54, 78 N. W. 365 [overruling on this point Stutzner v. Printz, 43 Nebr. 306, 61 N. W. 620]); but where the motion has been heard before trial, the court may rule upon it after judgment (Moline, etc., Co. v. Curtis, 38 Nebr. 520, 57 N. W. 161 [distinguishing Rudolf v. McDonald, 6 Nebr. 163]).

Defendant may move to quash after announcement of ready for trial (Osborn v. Schiffer, 37 Tex. 434); or at any time when the answer stands undisposed of, although it may be insufficient (Winona First Nat. Bank v. Randall, 38 Minn. 382, 37 N. W. 799).

A garnishee may move to quash after having appeared and confessed assets and expressed willingness to abide by order of the court in the premises. Cromwell v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 49 Md. 366, 33 Am. Rep. 258. Compare Noyes v. Canada, 30 Fed. 665, construing Kansas statute, where it was held that even if appearance waived defendant's right to object to the invalidity of attachment proceedings, it would not preclude garnishees summoned in the suit from contesting the validity of the attachment.

Minnesota.— McDonald v. Clark, 53 Minn. 230, 54 N. W. 1118.

Pennsylvania.— Whiteside v. Oakman, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 294, 1 L. ed. 143. Compare Keegan v. Sutton, 12 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 292, where it was held that a judgment rendered for want of an appearance in foreign attachment may be opened and the attachment quashed, where it is shown that defendant is in fact a resident of the state.

West Virginia.— Camden v. McCoy, 48 W. Va. 377, 37 S. E. 637.

Wisconsin.— Jarvis v. Barrett, 14 Wis. 591.

Although the debtor has previously applied for and had a hearing pursuant to the statute in any proceedings under the absconding debtors' act, he will not be precluded from questioning the sufficiency of the evidence to give jurisdiction to the officer issuing the attachment. Matter of Faulkner, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 598.

Order of motions.— After a judgment of condemnation has been rendered in attachment, if the defendant desire to move to quash a writ he should first move to strike out the judgment and then make his motion. Boarman v. Patterson, 1 Gill (Md.) 372.

After judgment has been affirmed on appeal it is too late to move to quash an attachment. Bassett v. Hughes, 48 Wis. 23, 3 N. W. 770.

57. Andrews v. Schofield, 27 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 132; Parsons v. Sprague, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 19, 3 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 290, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 151; Thompson v. Culver, 38 Barb. (N. An actual and real application of the property or its proceeds is intended and a mere levy under an execution will not be regarded as such an actual application as will bar the right of the subsequent lienor to move it. Woodmansee v. Rogers, 82 N. Y. 88, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 402.

Where the writ is void a court may vacate the attachment at any time when its attention is called to the fact (Black v. Scanlon, 48 Ga. 12; Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Knapp, 61 Wis. 103, 20 N. W. 651); and the same rule has been applied to motions based on defects which go to the question of jurisdiction (Evesson v. Selby, 32 Md. 340; Barr v. Perry, 3 Gill (Md.) 313; Stone v. Magruder, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 383, 32 Am. Dec. 177; Bruce v. Cook, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 345). Compare Merritt v. St. Paul, 11 Minn. 223, where the writ was void and the court held there was no waiver by failure to move to quash for there was nothing to be vacated.

58. California.— Freeborn v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 337.

but such notice is unnecessary where the motion is founded upon plaintiff's application and proofs.[59]

(II) FORM AND SUFFICIENCY — (A) In General. In some states the manner[60] and time[61] of notice are prescribed while in others provision is made only for "reasonable" notice.[62] In such case the reasonableness of the notice will be determined by the circumstances and conditions existing at the time the matter was to be presented.[63]

(B) Specifying Grounds. In some jurisdictions the notice of motion to vacate an attachment for irregularity must specify the irregularity complained of,[64] but it has been held that this rule does not apply where the defect is not a mere irregularity.[65]

e. Requisites of Motion or Application[66] — (I) ENTITLING. A motion to quash or vacate should be entitled as in the original cause except in a special proceeding.[67]

(II) PARTICULAR AVERMENTS — (A) Specifying Grounds of Application. A motion for the dissolution of an attachment must state the grounds relied on,

Louisiana.— Claflin v. Lisso, 31 La. Ann. 171, holding that a judge has no authority to release an attachment of property claimed to be exempt from seizure on the ex parte application of defendant, but that plaintiff must be duly notified and given an opportunity to be heard.

Minnesota.— Blake v. Sherman, 12 Minn. 420.

Montana.— Omaha Upholstering Co. v. Chauvin-Fant Furniture Co., 18 Mont. 468, 45 Pac. 1087.

Nebraska.—Herman v. Hayes, 58 Nebr. 54, 78 N. W. 365; Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Hough, 49 Nebr. 618, 68 N. W. 1019.

59. Thalheimer v. Hays, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 93.

60. Upon whom served.— Service of citation is to be made upon plaintiff in the attachment, if found within the county, and if not, then upon his agent or attorney. Cleland v. Clark, 111 Mich. 336, 69 N. W. 652, holding that service upon attorney was sufficient, although both plaintiff and attorney were non-residents, and the latter was within the county only for the purposes of the attachment.

Manner of service.— Service of citation is by reading the same to the party upon whom it is intended to be served. Cleland v. Clark, 111 Mich. 336, 60 N. W. 652, holding that service upon an attorney without reading the citation to him was insufficient.

Intention to use affidavit.— Plaintiff is entitled to notice that an affidavit is to be used upon the hearing of a motion. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Malm, 47 Kan. 762, 28 Pac. 1011.

61. Thus in Michigan, in proceedings to dissolve an attachment, the citation is to be served at least three days before the return-day (Cleland v. Clark, 111 Mich. 336, 69 N. W. 652), exclusive of Sunday (St. Ignace First Nat. Bank v. Williams Milling Co., 110 Mich. 15, 67 N. W. 976).

62. Guest v. Ramsey, 50 Kan. 709, 33 Pac. 17; Quinlan v. Danford, 28 Kan. 507; Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Hough, 49 Nebr. 618, 68 N. W. 1019.

63. Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Hough, 49 Nebr. 618, 68 N. W. 1019.

Notice one day after levy.— Where a defendant intends to make a motion to discharge an attachment, if he gives plaintiff notice of his intended motion a day after the attachment was levied, which is of course before judgment, such notice is reasonable within the meaning of the statute requiring it. Kirk v. Stevenson, 59 Ohio St. 556, 53 N. E. 49.

Ten days' notice of motion to vacate attachment where there is no statute regulating such rule is sufficient. Blake v. Sherman, 12 Minn. 420.

Notice held sufficiently certain.— Where a notice of a motion to vacate a writ of attachment recited the hearing for the "next special or adjourned term" of the district court of Olmstead county, "to be held, etc., on the 28th day of January, 1867," it was not void for uncertainty. and should specify and point out explicitly the defects complained of;[68] but an attachment may be vacated for a jurisdictional defect in the original affidavit, although the motion specifies no irregularity[69] or assigns erroneous reasons.[70]

(B) Denying Grounds Alleged in Affidavit For Attachment. A petition in support of an application for the dissolution of an attachment based upon the falsity of the grounds upon which such attachment was issued must deny the existence of the facts alleged in the affidavit.[71] Where the facts stated in the affidavit before a circuit court commissioner, need not be entitled in the original cause.

Objection that the moving papers were improperly entitled cannot be taken for the first time on appeal. Walts v. Nichols, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 276.

Montana.— Omaha Upholstering Co. v. Chauvin-Fant Furniture Co., 18 Mont. 468, 45 Pac. 1087, holding that it was not enough to state that the motion would be made on the ground that the writ was improperly issued, or to refer for the grounds to the affidavits filed.

Washington.— Windt v. Banniza, 2 Wash. 147, 26 Pac. 189.

Wisconsin.— Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036.

Reason for rule.— A motion to dismiss founded on any defects that might be amended should specify the grounds so that the plaintiff may have an opportunity to amend. Ferguson v. Smith, 10 Kan. 396; Waggoner v. St. John, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 503.

Amendment of rule to show cause by adding new ground.— A motion to amend a rule to show cause why an attachment should not be dissolved, by adding a new ground, may be allowed even after the trial of the rule has commenced, where no issue has been joined in the case and where the additional ground is based on matter apparent on the face of the petition, and its allowance is not calculated to delay the trial of the rule or to take the other parties by surprise. Brinegar v. Griffin, 2 La. Ann. 154.

Effect of failure to distinguish where part of debt not due.— A motion to quash an attachment is in the nature of a general demurrer, and the rule is that where a pleader attempts to state two causes of action and fails as to one, the general demurrer to the whole complaint must be overruled. Hence, if a motion to quash does not distinguish between that part of the debt due and the part not due, the motion as to the whole will properly be denied, if the writ on its face is sufficient. Hubbard v. Haley, 96 Wis. 578, 71 N. W. 1036.

Effect of urging non-jurisdictional reason. — Where defendant in a foreign attachment moves to quash on the ground that he was resident, but also cites in his petition to quash a reason not going to the jurisdiction of the court, he is not precluded by urging such non-jurisdictional reason from claiming a dissolution. Turner v. Larkin, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 284, 7 Del. Co. (Pa.) 543.

Right to set up insufficiency and falsity of affidavit in same motion.— Under S. D. Comp. Laws, § 5011, a defendant may unite in the same motion as a ground for discharging an attachment that the affidavit is insufficient in form or substance, and is in fact untrue. Wilcox v. Smith, 4 S. D. 125, 55 N. W. 1107.

Waiver of objections not raised on motion. — When an attorney appears and moves to quash an attachment, he must urge all the objections he intends to make in support of his motion, and he will be considered as having waived other objections at least for technical errors. Norton v. Dow, 10 Ill. 459. See also Walts v. Nichols, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 276.

Objection for failure to specify too late on appeal.— Objections to a motion to vacate on the ground that the moving papers do not show that the moving creditors had obtained any valid attachment, and that the particular irregularity in the attachment is not specified therein, cannot be made for the first time in an appellate court. MacDonald v. Kieferdorf, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 763, 46 N. Y. St. 176, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 105.

Where it appears that grounds assigned in the motion were bad, and it does not appear on what ground the quashing took place, an order quashing the attachment is erroneous. Dawson v. Miller, 20 Tex. 171, 70 Am. Dec. 380.

Denial in the alternative.— In a petition to dissolve an attachment a denial that de-upon which the attachment was granted are prima facie sufficient to justify the issue thereof, and defendant fails to make any explanation of the same in his motion to vacate, the attachment will not be disturbed.[72]

(c) Description of Property Attached. An application for the dissolution of an attachment should show that defendant's property was attached, the jurisdiction of the officer depending on such facts;[73] and should describe the same,[74] since the sufficiency of description goes to the question of the court's jurisdiction, and no order respecting the property could be made unless the same be known.[75]

(III) Request For Restoration. Upon application to dissolve an attachment, it has been held that it is not necessary that the petitioner ask for restoration of the property.[76]

(IV) Verification. Verification of a motion has been held to be unnecessary[77] although proper.[78]

f. Supporting Affidavits — (1) In General. Where the application to vacate is based on evidence dehors the record it is usually supported by affidavits.[79] fendant has assigned, disposed of, or concealed his property is not demurrable. Ionia First Nat. Bank v. Steele, 81 Mich. 93, 45 N. W. 579.

Denial in conjunctive.— A petition by defendant denying "that he has assigned, disposed of, and that he is about to assign, dispose of, and conceal, his property, with intent to defraud his creditors, or that he has made any fraudulent disposition whatever of his property with said intent" is bad as being in the conjunctive. Motion without affidavit insufficient.— A verified motion on information and belief, without any affidavit for the dissolution of an attachment, the affidavit for which is a positive declaration under oath of the facts therein alleged, is insufficient; and it is not erroneous to exclude parol testimony offered by defendant in support of the motion. Barnhart v. Foley, 11 Utah 191, 39 Pac. 823. See also Powell v. Cummins, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 361, holding that unless the ground for an attachment is controverted by the affidavit of defendant entered of record, no proof is necessary to show the ground.

Verified answer may be used as affidavit so far as its contents are pertinent. Nelson v. Munch, 23 Minn. 229.

Effect of failure to file affidavits.—Where the facts with reference to the allegations of the affidavit are within the knowledge of a defendant, and he does not present any counter-affidavits in support of his motion to vacate, but rests upon that upon which the attachment was granted, plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of all legitimate inferences from the facts shown. Stewart v. Lyman, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 182, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 936 [following Globe Yarn Mills v. Bilbrough, 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 100, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 2, 49 N. Y. St. 702].

Denials should be as direct and positive as if the affidavit were in answer to a complaint for an ordinary action, and must be tested by the same rules of pleading. To allege that defendant is not about to assign, secrete, and dispose of any property with intent to delay and defraud his creditors is in effect to admit that he is about to do any one of the acts mentioned, but not all of them conjointly. Such a denial raises no issue, and the attachment should be sustained on the grounds set forth in that portion of plaintiff's affidavit thus attempted to be traversed. Hanson v. Doherty, 1 Wash. 461, 25 Pac. 297.

Affidavit sufficiently traversing indebtedness.— An affidavit by a defendant denying that he was at the time of the filing of the attachment affidavit indebted to plaintiff to the amount named, or any part thereof, sufficiently traverses the affidavit for attachment as to the amount demanded. Weston v. Jones, 41 Fla. 188, 25 So. 888.

81. Lawson v. Lawson, 12 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 437.

Aider of affidavit for attachment by defendant's affidavit.— On motion to dissolve an attachment against an absconding debtor, affidavits put in by defendant on his motion and are insufficient if they contain merely defendant's conclusion of law drawn therefrom.[82]

(II) Traversing, Explaining, or Avoiding Plaintiff's Evidence. After plaintiff has filed his affidavit or other evidence to sustain the averment made by him to obtain the issue of the attachment writ, defendant may in some jurisdictions file such affidavits or other evidence as he desires or relies upon to traverse, explain, or avoid the case made by plaintiff's evidence.[83]

g. Opposing Affidavits[84] — (I) In General. Where an application to discharge or vacate an attachment may be made upon motion supported by affidavit, plaintiff is allowed to file affidavits in opposition to such motion and in support of his attachment,[85] but such course is not permissible where the motion to vacate is may be considered by the court to supply a defect in the affidavit for attachment. Thus an objection that the attachment affidavit did not show positively whether defendant was concealed or had absconded was held to be met by defendant's affidavits from which it appeared that he had in fact absconded. Reg. v. Stewart, 8 Ont. Pr. 297.

In Kentucky the code formerly authorized affidavits to be used in opposition to the motion to discharge an attachment when such motion was based upon affidavits. Talbot v. Pierce, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 158. The code as amended, however, does not contain any provision which authorizes the use of affidavits as evidence on the trial of attachment. Newton v. West, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 24.

In New Jersey, upon defendant obtaining a rule to show cause why an attachment should not be quashed, leave may be given to both parties to take affidavits. Moore v. Richardson, (N. J. 1900) 47 Atl. 424.

Where plaintiff fails to avail himself of the opportunity to file an affidavit contradicting the statements of defendant's affidavit, or stating other facts, it is generally held that defendant's affidavit must be taken as establishing the truth of what it contains. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174, 24 Pac. 113. It has been held, however, that the affidavit by defendant in support of his motion to vacate being the evidence of a party in interest, the court may refuse to credit it, although it is denied in general terms and not specifically by the opposing affidavit of plaintiff. Dietlin v. Egan, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 392, 22 N. Y.

made upon the original papers.[86] The new proof which plaintiff is allowed to use in opposition to such motion is, as a rule, limited to affidavits tending to sustain any of the grounds for the attachment, and no other,[87] except where defendant relies upon a discharge in bankruptcy, or a discharge or exoneration in insolvency proceedings, in which cases plaintiff cannot deny the discharge, but can only present matter in avoidance of it.[88] In opposition to a motion to vacate attachment plaintiff may read counter-affidavits to contradict or explain the moving papers,

Civ. Proc. 398. Where defendants move to vacate an attachment on the ground that plaintiff has no cause of action, it is not necessary that plaintiff should file rebutting affidavits in order to have the benefit of the rule that the court will not on such motion vacate the attachment unless the facts are undisputed. He may rely upon the allegations of the complaint for that purpose. Brown v. Wigton, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 490, 45 N. Y. St. 135.

Affidavit identifying affidavits on which attachment granted.— It is proper to permit an affidavit to be read upon a motion to dissolve identifying the affidavits on which the attachment was granted. Hallock v. Van Camp, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 1, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 588, 28 N. Y. St. 337.

Effect of affidavit by lienor showing existence of lien.— Where motion to vacate an attachment is made upon the original papers by a party having a lien upon property attached, an affidavit by such lienor, simply showing the existence of his lien, does not make the motion one "founded upon proof by affidavit" so as to allow the attachment creditor to support his affidavits by new proof. The lienor's affidavit merely establishes a preliminary fact necessary to be shown to give jurisdiction, and the motion to vacate is founded on the papers on which the attachment was granted. Steuben County Bank v. Alberger, 75 N. Y. 179, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 345.

Effect of affidavit excusing delay and showing right to move.— Where the affidavits of an assignee of property moving to dissolve an attachment thereon are confined simply to showing his right to move, and excusing delay in moving, affidavits in support of the attachment cannot be read. Trow's Printing, etc., Co. v. Hart, 85 N. Y. 500 [affirming 9 Daly (N. Y.) 413, and following Steuben County Bank v. Alberger, 75 N. Y. 179, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 345].

Where an attachment debtor delays moving to vacate the attachment for over eighteen months it is not substantial error for the court to permit plaintiff to read opposing affidavits as to occurrences in the action since the granting of the attachment. Assignment for benefit of creditors.— Although opposing affidavits to support an attachment by aiding the original papers on which the attachment was granted are inadmissible, yet affidavits in opposition will be allowed where there has been a change in the relation or condition of the party since the original application was made, such as a general assignment for the benefit of creditors.

but he cannot read such affidavits to remedy defects in the papers on which the attachment was granted.[89]

(II) In Rebuttal. Where defendant is required to file affidavits explaining or avoiding the case made by plaintiff's evidence, the latter is usually required to file in a reasonable time thereafter such affidavits or other evidence as is applicable in rebuttal.[90]

(III) Of Cause of Action—(A) In General. In some jurisdictions a defendant, upon filing an affidavit denying some material allegation of the attachment affidavit,[91] may compel plaintiff by rule to file an affidavit showing his cause of action,[92] or the attachment will be dissolved.[93] Such affidavit should be explicit and should state with due particularity the facts constituting the ground of action.[94]

(B) Amending or Filing Supplementary Affidavit. According to some decisions where plaintiff is ruled to show his cause of action and his affidavit is insufficient to sustain the attachment he cannot amend[95] or file supplementary affidavits;[96] but in others it has been held that it is within the discretion of the court to allow an amendment[97] or the filing of a supplementary affidavit.[98]

Failure to object to new proof introduced by plaintiff is a waiver thereof. Chambers, etc., Glass Co. v. Roberts, 4 N. Y. App. Div. 20, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 301, 73 N. Y. St. 668; Kibbe v. Wetmore, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 424.

Waiver by accepting costs.— In Fisher v. Dougherty, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 167, on a motion to set aside a warrant of attachment, the court made an order permitting plaintiff to amend his proceeding, or file new affidavits nunc pro tunc, upon paying costs to defendant, which costs were paid and accepted. It was held that defendant having accepted the costs could not be heard on appeal to complain of the action of the court below.

Discharge of rule upon return of no property.—A rule to show cause why an attachment should not be dissolved was obtained before the sheriff returned the writ. Before the hearing the sheriff made return that defendant had no property which the sheriff could attach. It was held that the rule should be discharged, since the court need not dissolve an attachment which had no lien, and did not affect defendant's rights. Goldstein v. Sondheim, 3 Kulp (Pa.) 212.

Statement of transaction upon which suit founded and designation of property.— In a foreign attachment on real estate an affidavit to show cause, which fails to state fully the transaction upon which the suit is founded and to designate particularly the land alleged to be owned by defendant, is insufficient. Blair v. Osborne, 5 Pa. Dist. 278, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 545.

Specification of amount of credits "as near as he can ascertain."— In an action by foreign attachment on a quantum meruit for service rendered, when plaintiff specifies in his affidavit of cause the exact sum earned by him, and avers that he cannot state the precise credits on the account because the evidences of them are in the possession of defendants, but gives the amount "as near as he can ascertain," the attachment will not be dissolved for this reason. 98. When court bound to consider second affidavit.— Where plaintiff in a foreign attachment files an affidavit of cause of action, which is defective in not stating jurisdictional facts as to non-residence of defendant, and after the rule has been once on the argument list and continued without a hearing,

h. Hearing and Determination — (i) Form of Trial — (a) By Court or Jury. It is the usual practice for the court or officer to whom a motion to vacate an attachment is made to hear the same without a jury, whether the motion is based on the original papers or on defects not apparent,[99] and in some jurisdictions such trial is, it seems, the only proper method.[1] In some jurisdictions, however, the court may for its better information and satisfaction frame and submit proper issues to the jury,[2] and there are cases in which it ought so to do.[3]

(b) By Reference.[4] The court may order a reference to determine the facts in some cases, as where a defendant in attachment, on the ground of non-residence, moves for a discharge on the ground of being a resident;[5] where the plaintiff files a second affidavit of cause of action identical with the first with the exception of an additional averment as to non-residence of defendant, the court is bound to consider the second affidavit, and it is not within its discretionary power to dissolve the attachment because of the insufficiency of the first affidavit. Hallowell v. Tenney Canning Co., 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 60 [reversing James v. Tenney Co., 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 400, 6 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 153].

Practice does not conflict with constitutional right to jury trial.— In Wearne v. France, 3 Wyo. 273, 21 Pac. 703, it was held that neither the provision in the United States constitution for a jury trial "in suits at common law" nor Wyo. Rev. Stat. § 2517, providing that issues of fact in actions for the recovery of money only or specific real or personal property shall be tried by jury entitles a defendant to a trial by jury of a motion to discharge an attachment.

See also Claflin v. Steenbock, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 842, where it was held that if, on a motion to abate an attachment, plaintiff refuses to express any desire as to whether the issues of fact should be tried by a jury, and defendant desires the issues tried by the court, it is the duty of the court to hear and decide the motion without a jury.

Right to demand jury.— In Florida, upon the tender of a written oath by defendant denying the allegations of plaintiff's affidavit and upon demand of either party a jury shall be summoned from the body of the county to try the issue joined. Weston v. Jones, 41 Fla. 188, 25 So. 888. See also Stringer v. Dean, 61 Mich. 196, 27 N. W. 886 (holding that in the case of affidavits supporting a motion to vacate, if plaintiff desires to contest the facts relied upon by defendant as shown in such affidavits, he has the right to frame an issue unless waived, and to try the same before a jury); Moore v. Richardson, (N. J. 1900) 47 Atl. 424 (holding that if there is a question of fact as to existence of a claim for which attachment will lie, plaintiff is entitled to go to a jury upon it, and the lien will not be vacated).

Where question one of doubt.— In Shrewsbury v. Pearson, 1 McCord (S. C.) 331, a motion to set aside a foreign attachment was based on affidavits that defendant returned on the day and before the attachment issued; and the court in its discretion, considering the question one of doubt, denied the motion. It was held that under such circumstances the issues should be tried by a jury.

4. Order of reference on overruling motion on papers improper.— It is erroneous for an order overruling a motion to vacate an attachment upon the papers with leave to renew to provide for a reference of all the papers and affidavits to a referee, giving each party the right to examine their clients and introduce other testimony, the same to be reported back by the referee with his opinion thereon, since there is no motion pending and no question of fact referred. question of the validity of an assignment is involved;[6] or where the depositions taken under a rule to show cause are voluminous.[7]

(II) Issues Determinable. Upon the hearing of a motion to dissolve an attachment, based upon a denial of the grounds alleged in the affidavit therefor, the question presented for consideration is whether or not the attachment ought to have been issued, and this must be determined from the evidence in support of or opposed thereto,[8] and the court upon the hearing of such motion will not, as a rule, inquire into the merits of the action.[9]

(III) Right to Open and Close. The order of argument follows the burden of proof[10] and accordingly attachment plaintiff is entitled to open and close.[11]

(IV) Evidence — (A) Burden of Proof. Although there are some decisions to the effect that after an affidavit has been made for an attachment some prima facie proof must be made by defendant that the facts sworn to are untrue in order to throw the burden of proving their truth on plaintiff,[12] yet the general rule is to the effect that the burden is upon attachment plaintiff to support the grounds of the attachment, where the same are properly denied by defendant,[13]

The court will not go behind the facts of the papers themselves unless the objection embrace some feature connected with the execution or filing of the affidavit. Deering v. Warren, 1 S. D. 35, 44 N. W. 1068.

What papers admissible.— On the trial of a motion to quash a writ of attachment on the ground that it was improperly issued, by reason of being made returnable to a court in another county than the one in which it was issued, the affidavit, bond, and writ of attachment, the affidavit of claim to the property levied on and the claim bond, the pleas of defendant in the attachment suit and an agreement of all the parties in interest as to the manner in which the writ was levied, tending to show that the writ was made so returnable through a clerical mistake and that the defect had been waived, are admissible in evidence. Carter v. O'Bryan, 105 Ala. 305, 16 So. 894.

and the fair inferences to be drawn therefrom, to be true for the purposes of the motion.[18]

(2) Motion Based on Evidence Dehors Record. On the hearing of a motion to dissolve or vacate an attachment based upon other than the original papers, both parties are entitled to present all the facts to enable the court to decide whether the ground upon which the warrant was issued in fact existed.[19] Defendant may introduce any evidence tending to show an improper issue of the writ,[20] and plaintiff may introduce any evidence tending to sustain grounds originally alleged for the issue of the attachment, but his evidence, whether by affidavit or otherwise, is limited to such grounds.[21]

(v) Continuances. It is within the discretion of the judge or court hearing an application for the dissolution of an attachment to grant or refuse an application for a continuance of such hearing.[22]

No intendment prejudicial to plaintiff can be made upon a motion to quash for a defective or insufficient affidavit. Calhoun v. Cozzens, 3 Ala. 21.

Presumption that credit has not expired.— A motion upon the papers to vacate an attachment in an action for the price of goods sold on credit will not be granted on the ground that the term for which credit was given has not yet expired in the absence of an affirmative showing of that fact. No presumption that such credit has not expired will be indulged. Steele v. Raphael, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 664, 37 N. Y. St. 623.

Showing nature and character of demand. — On the hearing of a rule to show cause why an attachment, alleged to have been issued on a cause of action for which the issue of the process was not authorized by law, should not be dissolved, the court should receive facts showing the real nature and character of the demand sought to be enforced in support of or for the discharge of the rule. Rich v. Thornton, 69 Ala. 473.

Omission of acts required to validate assignment for benefit of creditors.—The omission to do any of the acts required by the statute which render valid an assignment for the benefit of creditors is not available, upon motion to sustain an attachment as against the assignment except so far as such circumstances bear upon the question of fraudulent intent. Place v. Miller, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 178.

20. Burgess v. Clark, 3 Ind. 250 (evidence that party is a resident of another territory admissible in defense of attachment proceedings sued out under domestic attachment laws); Thomas v. Dundas, 31 La. Ann. 184 (evidence that affidavit on which writ issued is false); Carver v. Chapell, 70 Mich. 49, 37 N. W. 879 (evidence that property alleged to have been secreted with intent to defraud was exempt from execution, or that it did not belong to defendant); Bown v. Blanchard, 39 Mich. 790 (defendant may be examined as to his intentions, and evidence is admissible to show that plaintiff in attachment had been secured by collaterals); Hyde v. Nelson, 11 Mich. 353 (testimony of defendant that at the time of the attachment he did not know that he was owing any one held admissible as bearing upon an intent to defraud); Union Rolling Mill Co. v. Packard, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 46 (attachment debtor may testify as to intention in conveying his property).

Plaintiff's attempt to settle or compromise claim.— In Finlay Brewing Co. v. Prost, 111 Mich. 635, 70 N. W. 137, it was held that the fact that plaintiff's cause was based on the fraudulent conduct of defendant does not render admissible evidence of an attempt by plaintiff to settle or compromise his claim.

Evidence held irrelevant but not prejudicial to plaintiff.— On motion to dissolve an attachment issued on the grounds that defendant had disposed of property with intent to defraud creditors, and that the debt to plaintiff was fraudulently contracted, the admission of evidence that land levied on under the attachment was defendant's homestead, although irrelevant, is not prejudicial to plaintiff. Carver v. Chapell, 70 Mich. 49, 37 N. W. 879.

21. Limitation of new proof in affidavits in opposition to motion see supra, XV, D, 2, g.

Proof of specific act of immorality of defendant not admissible to impeach his credibility.—Where an attachment was issued on the ground that defendant was about to convert his property into money with intent to defraud his creditors, it was held that, on motion to dissolve, the fact that defendant once dealt, or was supposed to have dealt, in counterfeit money should not be considered. Ball v. Lignoski, 24 La. Ann. 484.

22. Hanna v. Barrett, 39 Kan. 446, 18 Pac. 497; Wells v. Danford, 28 Kan. 487; Carson v. Getchell, 23 Minn. 571.

Even after commencing his decision a judge can continue the hearing of a motion to dissolve an attachment upon the application of a party against whom the decision was made. Hanna v. Barrett, 39 Kan. 446, 18 Pac. 497.

(VI) Order Granting or Denying Application.[23] In a proper case the order may vacate an attachment in part and sustain it in part,[24] and an order vacating the attachment may impose terms.[25] In an order vacating an attachment it is unnecessary to insert directions as to the manner of redelivery, unless such directions are called for by special circumstances.[26] The necessity of setting out findings[27] or reciting affidavits employed on the hearing[28] is dependent on circumstances.

i. Rehearing. After an order for the discharge of an attachment the judge making the same may, upon proper application of plaintiff and showing that such order was obtained by perjury and fraud, grant a rehearing upon such motion to ascertain whether the former ruling was induced by such unlawful means, and if he shall so determine, he may rescind his order dissolving the attachment and overrule the motion therefor;[29] but a reargument will not be Continuance proper to enable plaintiff to prove mistake in date of attachment. Snelling v. Bryce, 41 Ga. 513.

23. For forms of orders dissolving an attachment see West v. Woolfolk, 21 Fla. 189; Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9.

24. Portion of debt due.— Upon a rule for the dissolution of an attachment upon the ground that the whole of the debt sued for was not due at the time of the issue of the writ, it has been held that the attachment should be sustained as to the portion of the debt then due. Lewis v. Lehman, 5 Pa. Dist. 364.

Where moving party has interest in part only of property.—Where a motion to vacate is made by one who has acquired an interest in a part only of the property attached, the relief should be limited to vacating the attachment as to such part. Trow's Printing, etc., Co. v. Hart, 85 N. Y. 500.

Where defendant's remedy is confined to the discharge of the attachment or to the release of the property attached, it has been held that such attachment cannot be released or discharged as to a portion of the attached property. Royal Ins. Co. v. Noble, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 54.

25. Where apparent grounds existed.— It has been held that upon dissolving an attachment issued on the ground of fraud, the condition may be imposed that defendant will bring no action on the bond where apparent grounds existed justifying the application for such attachment by plaintiff (Nyack, etc., Gas-Light Co. v. Tappan Zee Hotel Co., 2 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 564, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 113, 24 N. Y. St. 723; Rigney v. Tallmadge, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 556; Quay v. Robbins, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 154. And see Bruce v. Coleman, 1 Handy (Ohio) 515, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 265), and such attachment was made in good faith (Quay v. Robbins, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 154).

Defendant not non-resident.— When a foreign attachment is quashed upon its appearing by deposition that defendants therein were in the county when the writ issued, although not staying, no terms should be imposed as to appearance or acceptance of service of summons by them. Burns v. Bowers, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 64.

Insufficiency of affidavit.— Where attachment creditors who have caused their executions to be levied by the same sheriff on goods subject to a prior attachment move for its vacation on the ground of the insufficiency of the affidavit, it is error to insert as a condition upon vacating the same that the sheriff's fees in such attachment be paid by the applicants. Union Distilling Co. v. Union Pharmaceutical Co., 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 417, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 539.

26. Ellsworth v. Scott, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 9.

Presumption as to operation of dissolution where two writs levied on same property.— Where two writs of attachment issued in the same action are levied on the same property, an order of dissolution will be held to have dissolved both attachments, in the absence of proof that it was intended to be limited to one writ only. Pennsylvania Mortg. Invest. Co. v. Gilbert, 18 Wash. 667, 52 Pac. 246.

27. Necessity of setting out findings.— It is unnecessary for the lower court to set forth in its judgment on a motion to vacate an attachment the findings of fact on which it based its judgment, unless it be claimed that the court erred in applying the law to the facts as found, in which case it is the court's duty to set out the findings of fact. Millhiser v. Balsley, 106 N. C. 433, 11 S. E. 314.

Special findings after dissolution on the merits.— After an attachment has been dissolved upon a full hearing on the merits, there is no necessity that upon request, sustained by affidavits, additional special findings should be made, and it is not error to strike such affidavits from the files on motion. Standard Stamping Co. v. Hetzel, 44 Nebr. 105, 62 N. W. 247.

28. It is proper to refuse to recite replying affidavits in an order denying a motion to vacate an attachment where no leave to submit such affidavits has been asked for or granted, since the submission of such affidavits without leave is improper. Ferguson v. Commonwealth Rubber Co., 38 N. Y. Suppl. 375, 74 N. Y. St. 31.

29. Guernsey v. Cherryvale First Nat. Bank, (Kan. 1901) 65 Pac. 250. See also Love v. Young, 69 N. C. 65.

granted merely upon the ground that certain subsequent acts of defendant tend to show the alleged fraud.[30]

j. Second Motion. The right to make a second motion where the first has been denied[31] or withdrawn[32] ordinarily rests in the discretion of the court, but in New York a motion may be made, without leave of court, to dismiss an attachment upon affidavits, although a motion to vacate the attachment founded upon the original papers has been made and denied.[33]

3. By Plea in Abatement — a. In General. An application for the dissolution of an attachment upon grounds other than those apparent of record is usually made by a plea in abatement, or by a plea in the nature of a plea in abatement.[34]

30. Webb v. Groom, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 532.

31. Adams v. Lockwood, 30 Kan. 373, 2 Pac. 626, where it was said that such motions are rarely granted.

Motion by assignee after overruling of similar motion by defendant.— The right of a defendant or his assignee to lawfully move to vacate an attachment against defendant's property will not, it is held, allow such a motion by the assignee, similar motions already made by defendant having been denied. Strauss v. Vogt, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 483, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 251.

Effect of overruling motion by assignee upon right of successor to move.—Where the statutory assignee of a defendant in attachment has moved to dissolve the same, and such motion has been overruled, a similar motion by his successor without leave of court may properly be stricken from the files. Hillyer v. Biglow, 47 Kan. 473, 28 Pac. 150.

Where party proceeds upon distinct property interest and right.— It has been held in some jurisdictions that the doctrine that a motion once denied cannot be renewed as a matter of right and without leave of court, except upon facts arising subsequently to the decision, does not apply to a case where a party proceeds in a second motion upon a distinct property interest and right from that involved in the first motion, and the fact that a party has made a prior motion to vacate an attachment upon the ground that it is an obstruction to the enforcement of a judgment and execution and was defeated thereon does not preclude a second motion to vacate the attachment on the ground that it was a cloud upon the alleged title to realty of the moving party, and this although such party might have proceeded on the first motion upon this ground also. b. Effect of Failure to File Plea. Where defendant in an attachment suit makes no plea to the affidavit, he thereby confesses the matters stated therein.[36]

c. Time of Filing. With regard to the time of filing a plea in abatement or traverse, it may be stated generally that in the absence of express provision the usual rule[37] as to filing of dilatory pleas applies,[38] and such plea or traverse should be filed at the earliest opportunity, usually the first or return-term,[39] and before an answer or plea to the merits,[40] but it has been held that plead-

In Illinois a plea to the affidavit for an attachment of a dilatory character should be interposed at the first term, providing the declaration is filed at least ten days before the commencement of such term. Archer v. Claflin, 31 Ill. 306; Crandall v. Birge, 61 Ill. App. 234.

In Missouri, where a suit in attachment is brought upon a demand not yet due, a plea in abatement to the affidavit must be filed within the first two or the first six days of the return-term as the case may be. Hamilton v. McClelland, 33 Mo. 315.

Wis. Stat. § 2745, gives the right of traverse to defendant if he exercises it within ten days after notice of the issue of a writ of attachment against his property, or within a time in which he may answer the complaint in the action. Braunsdorf v. Fellner, 69 Wis. 334, 34 N. W. 121.

After continuance.— A general imparlance being nothing more than a continuance, a plea in abatement denying the facts stated in the affidavit, being for matter which existed before the continuance, comes too late after such imparlance. Archer v. Claflin, 31 Ill. 306.

Upon appearance and replevy of property. — In Chambers v. Haley, Peck (Tenn.) 159, it was held that defendant in an action commenced by attachment is entitled to his plea in abatement upon his appearing and replevying the attached property.

St. 24, where it was held that the alleged grounds for attachment could not be traversed by a plea in abatement after an ineffectual motion to quash, and an appearance in the suit.

An application to remove a cause to the federal court is not such an appearance as will debar defendants of the right to put in issue the grounds of the attachment. Freidlander v. Pollock, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 490. Compare Corbitt v. Delaware Farmers' Bank, 114 Fed. 602, where the court, in administering the attachment law of Virginia, held that the removal of a cause from the state to the federal court did not prevent defendant from moving to abate the attachment.

After an affidavit has been amended, defendant should be given an opportunity to plead in abatement to it. Archer v. Claflin, 31 Ill. 306.

Necessity for filing pleas at rules before right to plead in abatement is lost.— If defendant desires to avail himself of the provision of W. Va. Code, c. 125, § 21, which permits a plea in abatement and in bar at the same time, he must file his pleas at rules before his right to plead in abatement is lost, and he cannot plead in abatement under said statute or the general law after he has pleaded in bar, or after an office judgment has been confirmed against him. Delaplain v. Armstrong, 21 W. Va. 211.

Waiver dependent upon order of filing pleas.— In Rhode Island a plea in abatement is not waived by filing at the same time, but subsequently in order, a plea to the merits or an affidavit of merits in compliance with

d. Requisites and Sufficiency of Plea — (i) In General. A plea in abatement of an attachment should be framed with accuracy and precision and be certain to every intent.[42] It should put in issue all the material allegations of the affidavit,[43] and specify the defects complained of.[44] It should also pray that the attachment be quashed.[45]

(ii) Verification — (A) Necessity. In some jurisdictions the plea or answer denying the grounds of attachment as set forth in the affidavit must be verified by proper oath.[46] In other jurisdictions, however, it is held not necessary that the

W. 267, where it was held that a plea in abatement denying the fact of non-residence was not waived by appearance and defense on the merits.

When a plea in abatement is overruled on demurrer or stricken out, it is no waiver of the benefit of such plea to plead to the merits. Chambers v. Haley, Peck (Tenn.) 159.

42. Clark v. Latham, 25 Ark. 16, where it was held that a plea in abatement denying that the bond was approved by the clerk before it was issued was not sufficient, but that it should have described the bond as the attachment bond.

Craving oyer of attachment, affidavit, or bond.— In Alabama it has been held that a plea in abatement to an attachment, and to the affidavit or bond on which it is founded, must crave oyer of them and set them out (Richards v. Bestor, 90 Ala. 352, 8 So. 30; Tommey v. Gamble, 66 Ala. 469; Garner v. Johnson, 22 Ala. 494; Goldsticker v. Stetson, 21 Ala. 404; Banks v. Lewis, 4 Ala. 599; Findlay v. Pruitt, 9 Port. Need not deny specifically and separately each statement of affidavit.—An answer traversing plaintiff's affidavit need not deny specifically and separately each fact stated by plaintiff's affidavit, but a general denial in the usual form will be sufficient. Armstrong v. Blodgett, 33 Wis. 284, where it was held that an answer saying that each and every allegation of the affidavit is untrue and was untrue at the time said affidavit was made, and denying the existence at the time the affidavit was made of any or all material facts stated therein, is good.

In Arkansas a plea in abatement in a suit begun by attachment is not bad on demurrer because it prays judgment both of the declaration and writ, the matter set up in the plea being to the entire proceedings and not to so much only as is a proceeding in rem. Edmondson v. Carnall, 17 Ark. 284.

Where the declaration is a necessary part of the writ, a plea in abatement may conclude with a prayer of judgment of the writ. Brigham v. Este, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 420 [citing Ilsley v. Stubbs, 5 Mass. 280].

traverse to the truth of the affidavit which is the foundation of the attachment should be sworn to.[47]

(B) Requisites and Sufficiency. An affidavit verifying a plea in abatement must be positive as to the truth of the facts contained in the plea, and should leave nothing to be concluded by inference or intendment.[48]

e. Amendment of Plea. A plea in abatement may be amended in matter of form after it is filed.[49]

f. Withdrawal of Plea. Where a plea in abatement entered to an action commenced by attachment is withdrawn after return of process duly served, such withdrawal will not vitiate the lien of the attachment.[50]

g. Similiter or Replication to Plea. If the ground of the attachment is denied by a negative plea, plaintiff has the right, although it may not be his duty, to signify his acceptance of the issue tendered by the plea, and this acceptance may be signified at law by a similiter and in equity by a replication in the nature of a similiter.[51]

h. Hearing and Determination — (I) Time of Hearing. Where an issue is formed upon a plea or answer traversing the attachment affidavit, such issue, according to some decisions, may be tried before the trial on the merits;[52] accord-

Unnecessary to set out knowledge of the facts or means of knowledge.—A verification to a plea in abatement of an attachment in the following language: "This affiant, attorney for the defendant, upon his oath, says that the allegations contained in the foregoing plea are true," is sufficient. It is not necessary for affiant to set out and show that he has a knowledge of the facts stated or the means of his knowledge. Irwin v. Evans, 92 Mo. 472, 4 S. W. 693. See also Braunsdorf v. Fellner, 69 Wis. 334, 34 N. Where a motion to dissolve on account of the insufficiency of the attachment bond, and issues on the traverse, to be decided by a ing to other decisions it may be tried either before or with the main case.[53] Still other decisions hold that such issue should be tried with the issues in the principal cause.[54]

(II) Matters Determinable. Upon a plea traversing the grounds of the attachment, the sole issue to be decided is as to the existence of the facts asserted by plaintiff's affidavit as grounds of attachment, and denied by defendant.[55] The merits of plaintiff's case are not the subject of inquiry.[56]

(III) Evidence—(A) Burden of Proof. Where the facts set out in the attachment affidavit are properly put in issue the burden of proof rests upon plaintiff to prove the existence of the facts as alleged[57] by a preponderance of evidence.[58]

(B) Admissibility. Upon the trial of the issue formed by a plea in abatement or traverse of the grounds of the attachment, the evidence admissible is confined on the part of defendant to sustaining the allegations of his plea or traverse and on the part of plaintiff to sustaining the grounds originally alleged in his affidavit for the issue of such attachment.[59]

(iv) Trial by Jury. The issue on a plea in abatement or traverse of the grounds of the attachment should be tried by jury unless such trial be waived by the parties.[60]

(v) Verdict. Upon trial of an issue of an attachment resulting in favor of defendant the jury should render a formal verdict for defendant before the court quashes the attachment.[61]

(vi) Judgment. Where the plea in abatement is sustained the proper judgment would seem to be that the suit abate, and that defendant recover costs.[62]

E. Effect of Dissolution — 1. In General. A dissolution of an attachment is a final adjudication of all questions arising in the attachment proceedings unless an appeal therefrom is taken in due time,[63] and as regards the property attached the parties are put in the same position as if no attachment had issued.[64]

2. On Main Action — a. Where Attachment Is Ancillary. Where an attachment is merely ancillary, the dissolution thereof does not terminate the main action which may proceed to judgment, notwithstanding the dissolution, provided the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the person of defendant.[65]

It has been held, however, that in an attachment on the ground of fraudulent conveyance or assignment to hinder and delay creditors, the declarations accompanying the making of a deed alleged to be fraudulent are admissible as explanatory of the character and motive of the act, and where plaintiff gave the deed in evidence it could not be objected that plaintiff was making his own declarations evidence for himself. Right to trial by jury on filing plea after dismissing motion. — A garnishee and claimant, who has elected to try his case before the court upon a motion to quash an attachment, has the right after the evidence has been partly taken to dismiss his motion and by filing a plea to try the same question before a jury. b. Where Attachment Is Basis of Jurisdiction — (I) In General. Where, however, a suit is commenced by attachment, and the attachment is essential to the jurisdiction of the court, the dissolution of the attachment will carry with it the main suit.[66]

(II) Debt Not Due. Where an attachment sued out for a debt not yet due is dissolved, this will ordinarily operate as a termination of the whole proceedings;[67] although it has been held that if the attachment is dissolved merely for a technical defect, the court should exercise a sound discretion as to whether the action should be dismissed or not;[68] and, that if not dismissed, plaintiff should be required to immediately correct, by amendment or otherwise, the defects in the

Effect of failure of clerk to forward notice of dissolution.— If a statutory provision, which requires the clerk of the court in which a suit is pending to forward to the register of deeds a certificate that an attachment of real estate in a certain county has been dissolved, where it appears of record that such attachment has been dissolved, applies to the case of an attachment made before the act took effect and dissolved afterward, the failure of the clerk to forward such certificate to the register does not continue the attachment in force in favor of the attaching creditor, no third person having acquired any rights under it. O'Hare v. Downing, 130 Mass. 16.

Effect of commencement of garnishee proceedings.— Where a traverse has been sustained to an affidavit for attachment on a debt not yet due, the fact that garnishee proceedings have been instituted does not affect the rule that the dissolution of the attachment in such case terminates the whole proceeding. Gowan v. Hanson, 55 Wis. 341, 13 N. W. 238.

Where part of claim is due.—Where an attachment is commenced on notes, some of which are not due, and the plea in abatement is sustained, if the petition states a good cause of action on the matured notes, the suit may be dismissed in the appellate court as to the notes not due and judgment rendered on the notes due when suit was brought, where the findings upon the different notes are separate and distinct. attachment proceedings, so as to make them correspond with the law governing actions and attachment proceedings instituted on claims not yet due.[69] It has also been held that when a suit is brought with an attachment upon a debt not due, and upon the maturity thereof an amendment is filed showing the facts and that the debt is overdue, the main suit should not be dismissed merely because attachment was quashed.[70]

c. Where Jurisdiction of Person Is Acquired Otherwise Than by Attachment. Where a party makes a general appearance in the action,[71] or where summons is duly served on him,[72] the dismissal of the attachment will not carry the main cause with it, but if service of process is relied on to prevent the dismissal, it must appear that there was a valid service.[73]

d. Where Writ Is Quashed by Agreement. Where suit is brought by attachment, and the writ is quashed by agreement that the cause shall be tried upon its merits, and the same is so tried, the suit should not be dismissed.[74]

e. Under Special Statutory Provisions. A personal judgment may be rendered against defendant in attachment, notwithstanding the dismissal thereof, if service is had or notice given, in accordance with the provisions of a statute which authorizes the trial of the main action, notwithstanding the dismissal of the attachment, when notice of the attachment is served personally on defendant at least ten days before final judgment.[75] So, the dissolution or quashing of the attachment will not carry with it the main action, if it is expressly provided by statute that the suit shall proceed as if commenced by summons,[76] or, where a statute provides that in case defendant resides in the county the court shall proceed in the case as if there had been a summons regularly served, notwithstanding the dismissal of the attachment, provided defendant resides in the county.[77]

3. In Respect to Attached Property — a. Effect on Lien. Where an attachment is dissolved the lien on the property seized thereunder is vacated[78] and if by judicial sale a fund has been substituted in place of the property the lien on the fund is thereby discharged.[79]

b. Return of Property — (i) Necessity For. Ordinarily on the dissolution of an attachment all property attached should be returned to defendant, whether the dissolution be by operatien of a final judgment in defendant's favor or by special proceedings for the purpose of obtaining an order of dissolution had in advance of a trial on the merits,[80] and if it has been sold defendant is entitled to the proceeds arising therefrom.[81] The rule applies, although the attachment is

Property conveyed pending proceeding.— The rule requiring the return of property to the attachment debtor on dissolution of attachment has no application where he has conveyed the property pending the attachment. The property should be delivered to the rightful owner. State v. Fitzpatrick, 64 Mo. 185; Jackson v. Burnett, 119 N. C. 195, 25 S. E. 868.

Where suit pending against officer for conversion.— An order will not be granted directing the sheriff to deliver attached property to defendant, where an action is pending to recover the value of the property from the sheriff, for a conversion thereof in refusing to deliver it until his fees and charges were paid. Hall v. U. S. Reflector Co., 4 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 148.

Where title to property disputed.— Although an attachment was properly discharged as to one of two defendants, on the ground that he was not liable for the debt sued on, yet, as his claim to be the sole owner was traversed, and a separate issue thus made, he was not entitled to take possession of the goods until that issue was tried. Berry v. Callahan, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 539. So the rule cannot be invoked where goods sold are attached by creditors and replevied by the seller, and an agreement entered into between the attaching creditors, the defendant in attachment, the sheriff, and the intervener, that all their several rights should be adjudicated in the replevin suit, and where judgment was rendered in the sheriff's favor. Camp v. Schuster, 51 Mo. App. 403.

Redelivery not necessary.— Where a mortgagee of chattels had them attached, and then arranged with the officer to hold the property by virtue of the mortgage as well as under the attachment, the property, upon the discharge of the attachment, was, in legal contemplation, in the possession of the mortgagee, who might sue a trespasser for meddling therewith. Hackett v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 85. It has also been held that if defendant's assignee for the benefit of creditors had before dissolution of the attachment replevied the property from the officer, the possession of the assignee would constitute a defense to any action brought by the defendant against the officer for non-delivery. The court has no right to direct the proceeds to be paid on the judgment of attaching plaintiff recovered in the main action. Petty v. Lang, 81 Tex. 238, 16 S. W. 999.

Effect of special agreement between defendant and attaching officer.— Where an officer who had made an attachment of bank bills refused to return them to the owner upon dissolution of the attachment, unless the owner would agree that he might retain a part of them, as a pretended reward for quashed for defects in the affidavit and bond,[82] and in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary, it is the duty of the officer to return the property to attachment defendant. notwithstanding an appeal is taken or other proceedings in error instituted.[83]

(II) Order For Redelivery. An order for redelivery of the property on dissolution of the attachment need not recite directions as to the manner of redelivery, unless this is called for by special circumstances.[84]

(III) Time and Manner of Making Return. Where an attachment has been dissolved, the officer holding the property should return the same promptly.[85] A mere notice of the relinquishment of the attachment does not amount to a return.[86] If property attached belongs to two cotenants, the return to either will be sufficient.[87]

(IV) Effect of Second Attachment Where Property Is Not Returned. If on the dissolution of an attachment the attaching creditor does not make a formal delivery of the property to the attachment debtor, a second attachment will not revive the lien created by the first attachment.[88]

4. On Rights of Other Attaching Creditors, Interveners, or Execution Creditors. In some of the states the attachment is for the benefit of all creditors who file claims thereunder, who thus acquire liens relating back to the reception of the writ by the officer,[89] and under such provisions their rights will be unaffected by the dismissal of the original attachment because of defects in the papers,[90] or by a discontinuance by agreement out of court by the attaching creditor and the debtor.[91] The dismissal of an attachment suit operates as a release of the prop-finding them, it was held that such agreement was the result of duress and was not binding, and that the owner might recover the money so retained. Lovejoy v. Lee, 35 Vt. 430.

Payment without order of court.—While it is safer for the clerk upon the dissolution of an attachment to have an order of court made, directing the disposition of moneys placed in his hands by the sheriff as the proceeds of the sale of the property attached, yet he does not render himself liable to plaintiff by a payment without such an order, to attachment defendant if such payment is made in good faith and without notice of plaintiff's intention to appeal and continue his attachment lien by supersedeas. In Minnesota plaintiff, by appealing from the order dissolving the writ and giving bond for a stay, may suspend the operation of the order, and such suspension will relate back to the date thereof, so that if the officer still has the property his right to hold it is restored. Nevertheless, upon the dissolution of the writ the officer is not to retain the property to enable plaintiff to appeal from the order dissolving it and give a stay bond. Ryan Drug Co. v. Peacock, 40 Minn. 470, 42 N. W. 298.

In Nebraska the act of Feb. 17, 1873, provides that when an order discharging an attachment is made, and any party affected thereby shall except thereto, the court or judge shall fix the number of days, not to exceed twenty, in which such party may file a petition in error, during which time the property attached shall be held by the sheriff or other officer. Under this statute, if no undertaking is given within the required period, the officer must deliver the property to the person entitled thereto. Adams County Bank v. Morgan, 26 Nebr. 148, 41 N. Failure to show intention to proceed independently.— Where a creditor files a complaint, affidavit, and undertaking, and there is anything in the record which shows an intention to file under the original proceeding, and not commence an independent action, the creditor will be held to have become a party to the original action. erty claimed by an intervener and if he wishes to be quieted in his title he must have recourse to a direct action.[92] It does not, however, affect the lien of an execution in favor of a third person upon the same property.[93]

5. On Liability on Release or Forthcoming Bonds. According to the weight of authority, the dissolution of an attachment does not impair the liability on a release or forthcoming bond.[94]

6. On Right to Maintain Subsequent Proceedings. Where a suit is commenced by attachment, the effect of a judgment of nonsuit is nothing more than a quashing of the attachment, and leaves the party at liberty to commence de novo. It does not bar further proceedings.[95] So if the creditor at the same time sues his debtor in different courts on separate debts, alleging the same grounds for attachment in each case, a discharge of the attachment in one case does not bar the attachment in the other, although the evidence in the two cases be exactly the same,[96] and where an attachment has been quashed because the court out of which it was issued had no jurisdiction to issue it, that decision can in no way preclude some other court from sustaining a similar attachment, whether antecedently or subsequently issued.[97] But where an attachment has been dissolved on the ground of insufficiency of the affidavits, no subsequent proceedings based on such affidavits can be had.[98]

F. Effect of Refusal to Dissolve Attachment. The refusal of a motion to vacate an attachment conclusively establishes the truth of the allegations on which the attachment issued.[99] The question whether there was ground for issuing the attachment is settled, and cannot be reviewed by a jury, either on the trial of the issue to determine whether the debt is due or in a separate proceeding,[1] nor can the court again enter upon the question of its dissolution after making an order denying the motion to dissolve the attachment.[2] Nevertheless, a judgment refusing to dissolve an attachment does not determine the status of the property, or in other words it does not determine whether or not the property was exempt from attachment, the only issue involved being whether or not the grounds stated in the affidavit for attachment are true.[3]

G. Appeal — 1. Right of Appeal. Reference should be had to the statutes of the particular state to determine the appealability of an order dissolving or refusing to dissolve an attachment. In some states such an order is not reviewable on appeal,[4] at least until final judgment has been rendered in the main

10. Insufficient grounds for vacating order of dissolution.—The fact that defendant confessed judgments to corporations in which its officers were interested and immediately on the dissolution of plaintiff's attachment gave a mortgage security to creditors, in which it refused to include plaintiff, is no ground for vacating the order of dissolution, it not appearing that defendant was insolvent or contemplated an assignment for creditors. doing so, and thereby reinstate the same at the same term at which it was rendered,[11] or even when final judgment is rendered;[12] and on appeal the higher court may, upon a proper record, review the actions of the trial court, and if need be direct the latter to set aside an order quashing the writ and reinstate the attachment.[13]

2. EFFECT OF. Where an attachment after dissolution is reinstated, the lien thereof is of the same force and effect as if there had been no order of dissolution,[14] subject to the restriction that the property has not been sold in the meantime and the proceeds distributed.[15]

Amendment of judgment on merits by reinstating attachment.— Where a suit commenced by attachment was dissolved on motion, no appeal taken therefrom by plaintiff, and a judgment subsequently rendered in his favor on the merits in which no mention was made of the attachment, it was held that such judgment could not be amended by reinstating the attachment. Givens v. Caudle, 34 La. Ann. 1025.

See, however, Eikel v. Hanscom, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 473, where the court of appeals held that it was without authority to reinstate the attachment although the same was erroneously quashed.

Procedure on reversal of order quashing the attachment.—Where an order quashing an attachment was reversed, it was held that the cause should be remanded with instructions to render a judgment foreclosing the attachment lien as if the original motion to quash had been overruled. Evans v. Lawson, 64 Tex. 199.

Proof of reinstatement of lien by removal of dissolution proceedings to supreme court.—An alleged copy of a writ of certiorari issued to review proceedings resulting in the dissolution of an attachment, which is not attested by any public officer, is not of itself competent proof of the reinstatement of the attachment lien by the removal of the dissolution proceedings to the supreme court. Effect of reversal of decree after two years.—In Harrow v. Lyon, 3 Greene (Iowa) 157, it is held that a reversal of a decree dissolving an attachment after it has been allowed to rest for two years will not revive the attachment lien.

Trial of right of property after order to quash set aside.— On the trial of the right of property on which creditors had levied an attachment, claimant answered joining issue on the merits and filed the necessary bond. An order quashing the attachment was made in the original action, but on appeal the order was reversed and after the mandate of the supreme court reinstating the attachment and foreclosing the lien secured thereby had been received by the court which made the order quashing the attachment, claimant filed a plea in abatement setting up that the attachment had been quashed, that this replevin bond had been thereby discharged, and that therefore the action to try the right to the property should be dismissed. It was held that it was error to sustain the plea, since the parties were in the same position as if no order quashing the attachment had been made. Carpenter v. Decatur First Nat. Bank, (Tex. 1892) 20 S. W. 130 [distinguishing Blum v. Addington, (Tex. 1888) 9 S. W. 82].

XVI. PROCEEDINGS IN THE MAIN ACTION.

A. Notice — 1. Necessity For — a. To Authorize Judgment Against Property — (I) In General. It is a principle of natural justice that a man must have notice of some sort before his property shall be bound by a judicial sentence.[16] Therefore it is essential to the jurisdiction of the court in attachment proceedings that defendant be served with notice, either personally or by some other mode given by law in lieu of personal service.[17]

(II) Seizure of Property as Constructive Notice. Under some statutes no provision is made for actual notice to defendant, the seizure of the property being deemed sufficient notice to all parties interested therein to come forward and assert their rights. Where this is the case the seizure stands in place of personal service and authorizes a judgment against the property without any other notice;[18] but it is essential that the seizure be legal, otherwise the proceeding

Effect of failure to give prescribed notice where there has been a valid seizure of property see infra, XVI, A, 1, a, (III).

Notice as an essential part of a valid levy see supra, X, H, 1, a, (III).

Ancillary attachment — Service in main action.—Where the attachment is merely ancillary to an action, the levy thereof gives no jurisdiction to render judgment without a service of summons sufficient to give jurisdiction in the main action. Boorum v. Ray, 72 Ind. 151; Barber v. Morris, 37 Minn. 194, 33 N. W. 559, 5 Am. St. Rep. 836; Heffner v. Gunz, 29 Minn. 108, 12 N. W. 342; Walker v. Cottrell, 6 Baxt. Where service in main action.— Where an attachment writ is sued out in aid of an action of assumpsit, further service thereof on defendant is not necessary, if there was personal service in the original suit. Bailey v. Valley Nat. Bank, 127 Ill. 332, 19 N. E. 695; Rutledge v. Stribling, 26 Ill. App. 353; Cleland v. Tavernier, 11 Minn. 194.

Where a second writ issues in the same suit it is not necessary that any additional notice be given. Brose v. Doe, 2 Ind. 666.

After remand of cause.—Where a defendant in an attachment suit has appeared and had a judgment against him reversed and remanded, no additional notice to him of the proceedings is necessary. Reaugh v. McConnel, 36 Ill. 373.

After material amendment of petition.— Where an amendment is made to the petition materially changing the cause of action, a new notice of publication must be given, and a judgment rendered without new notice is void. Stewart v. Anderson, 70 Tex. 588, 8 S. W. 295.

Tennessee — Original attachment.—Under the Tennessee act of 1871, c. 134, providing that in cases commenced by original attachment, a summons might also issue on application of plaintiff, if such summons issued it became the leading process and the levy became merely an ancillary attachment; but if the summons were not served and the attachment were levied on the property the case proceeded as in other cases of original attachment. Bivins v. Matthews, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 256.
