Catlin House dedicated to Marine hero

By Stacey Byington, Public Affairs Officer

Just seconds before 'Retreat' sounded and Colors were lowered in the fading daylight on Friday, Dec. 1, RDML Harry Harris Jr., CAPT Mark Leary, and Marine Maj. George Nunez, lifted the covering revealing the monument dedicating Quarters M101 to the memory of Marine Brig. Gen. Albertus Wright Catlin. From this day forward the flag quarters at Marine Site will be known as Catlin House.

"We are naming this house today after a man who had a lot to do with Cuba, a lot to do with Guantanamo Bay, and a lot to do with the Marine Corps," said RDML Harris, Commander of Joint Task Force-Guantanamo. "Today is his birthday."

Born in Gowanda, N.Y., on Dec. 1, 1868, A.W. Catlin was appointed to the Naval Academy in May 1886. He captained the football team at Annapolis and played left halfback for three years. He graduated from Annapolis with the Class of 1890. As service in the U.S. Marine Corps seemed to offer the best chance of active service, he applied for a commission in the Corps and was made a Second Lieutenant on July 1, 1892.

Catlin has a significant history with Cuba and Guantanamo Bay.

As a First Lieutenant, he commanded the detachment of Marines on the USS Maine when that ship exploded on Feb. 15, 1898, as it lay at anchor in Havana harbor, the spark that triggered the Spanish-American War. Several months later while serving with Marines aboard the auxiliary cruiser St. Louis, which was part of the blockade at the mouth of the harbor at Santiago de Cuba, he led a group of eight other Marines and 11 volunteer Sailors in an attempt to cut the undersea telegraph linking Cuba with Jamaica.

Promoted to Major in 1905, A.W. Catlin commanded the first battalion of Marines to be permanently assigned to the new naval coaling station at Guantanamo Bay, from 1906 to 1909.

Several years later, as the Fleet Marine Officer of the North Atlantic Fleet, he distinguished himself in combat during the engagement of Vera Cruz, Mexico, on Apr. 22, 1914, and was awarded the Medal of Honor. The citation reads in part, "Was eminent and conspicuous in command of his battalion. He exhibited courage and skill in leading his men through the action and in the final occupation of the city."

At the beginning of World War I, Col. Catlin was placed in charge of the Marine training camp at Quantico, Va., and then went to France, with the newly formed Sixth Regiment of Marines. It was in France that he again distinguished himself, and was a leading figure in the battle of Belleau Wood, in 1918. It was during this battle that Marines earned the nickname "Teufelhunden," which means "Hounds from Hell," or "Devil Dogs."

With Col. Catlin leading the way, Marines of the 6th Regiment saw action on the front lines of the battle from June 1 – 6, advancing on Belleau Wood. It was during some of the fiercest fighting on June 6, that Catlin was shot by a German sniper, and evacuated to a hospital the next day. For his actions he was awarded two French Croix de Guerre, one with palm, and one with gilt star for gallantry in action against the enemy, and the Legion of Honor.

Funding for military family member's education

By Brenda L. Walker, Fleet and Family Support Center

Often we hear and read about the many opportunities for military personnel to fund their education, but little on the unique opportunities afforded to military family members. Whether you are a spouse or child of a service member there are unique scholarships and financial aid opportunities for you.

Spouse Tuition Aid Program (STAP) is available to spouses of active duty Navy and Marine Corps personnel in OCONUS locations pursuing full- or part-time enrollments in vocational certification, undergraduate, or graduate degree programs. (MCCS, http://www.usmc-mccs.org/education/sta.cfm) Eligible family members should contact their local Navy Marine Relief Corp Society.

In addition, family members may consider the VADM E.P. Travers Scholarship and Loan Program that provides financial assistance to spouses and unmarried dependent children of active duty members as well as unmarried dependent children of retired Marine Corps or Navy members

The American Legion Scholarship and Financial Aid Information: The cornerstone of The American Legion's Education Assistance Program is its scholarship and financial aid guide This 152 page booklet, updated annually, is a complete financial aid reference guide for veterans, veterans' dependents and members of The American Legion family.

Coast Guard Exchange System (CGES) Scholarship Program: Recognizing the value of education and the benefits it brings to the Coast Guard family, the Coast Guard Exchange System (CGES) Scholarship Program is established to provide additional financial resources to Team Coast Guard dependent children embarking on undergraduate college/university studies.

Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation: The Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation is a non-profit, tax exempt corporation of volunteer men and women dedicated to providing financial assistance in the form of scholarships for higher education to deserving sons and daughters of United States Marines and children of former Marines, with particular attention being given to children whose parent was killed or wounded in action.

Army sinks the Navy twice in one night

By MC1 Igo Wordu, Public Affairs Office

While the Naval Academy football team has maintained its dominance over the Army Cadets in the past five years, Navy's football team in Guantanamo Bay has failed to replicate such feet, losing two years in a row to the Army

Navy's latest defeat came on Friday Dec. 1, at Cooper Field, when they lost narrowly to the Army 7-0.

The Army's female football team also beat the Navy 21-0 avenging their loss to the Navy at the Navy Ball Power Puff football game played earlier this

Prior to the game, fans representing the Navy wore Tshirts bearing 'Go Navy! Beat Army!' while their Army counterparts had 'Go Army! Sink Navy!' inscribed on theirs.

The fact that the Navy Midshipmen vs. Army Cadets game was the next day also added to the hype.

Fans cheered as the game kick-off with Army holding first possession. Their drive, seemingly destined for a touchdown, was intercepted deep into the Sailor's territory. The Navy then made a 60-yard drive into the Army's territory but failed put points on the scoreboard.

It was a sea-saw game with Navy dominating much of the game but the Army capitalized on a thrown interception late in the fourth quarter, which resulted in a 70-vard return for a touchdown, advantage Army.

Navy, riding on their support of their fans, with less than 2 minutes left on the clock, made a desperate effort to salvage the game but again, they failed to take the ball to the end

"We played hard, our guys gave it all they had and we left everything on the field," said ENS Haywood Williams, Navy coach for the day. "We made minor mistakes that cost us the game. We just didn't execute as well as I know we could have in the red zone, which allowed them a lucky interception late in the fourth quarter. I won't make excuses about losing but they know as well as everyone who watched the game, if we played them four out of five times we will come out victorious. That night was their night but we'll meet again."

A member of the Navy's female team, MA2 Kate Saxton, commended the Army for playing well but also noted that the Navy can beat them on any given day.

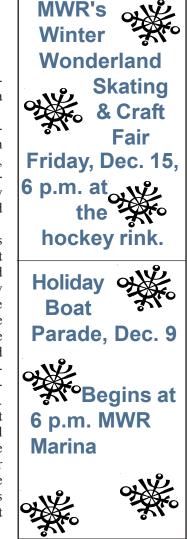

"We played really hard, but it was their day," said Saxton. "My teammates and I are looking forward to playing them again and I guarantee we will settle the score."

This is an annual event that NAVSTA MWR organizes. Bragging rights in GTMO go to the Soldiers here, but the Commander in Chiefs Trophy this year will go to the Midshipmen of the Naval Academy.

Catlin House dedicated ...

George Barnett, Commandant of the Marine Corps, on June 29, 1918, said, "When word came in that Col. Catlin had been wounded, I felt the bottom of the war had dropped out.

"He had such a complete grasp of military situation, was familiar as no one else could have been with what was to be done, and officers and men invariably looked to him, and there seemed no limit to his capacity for work or his ready sympathy with and understanding of his subordinates. The Colonel ... was standing up in a machine gun pit with his glasses up, when a sniper drilled him clean through the right of his chest. It was a clean wound."

More than 1,800 Marines lost their lives at Belleau Wood, the greatest loss in a single battle the Corps had ever sustained up to that time, but it is estimated that more than 8,000 German troops were killed during the battle, and another 1,600 taken prisoner. It was a decisive victory for the Allies, with the Marines proving the German troops were not invincible, as thought at the time by weary troops.

Col. Albertus W. Catlin, USMC, 1911.

Marine Gen. Michael Hagee, current Commandant of the Marine Corps, said in a 2006 ceremony in France commemorating the 88th anniversary of the battle, said, "I had read about that 880-yard advance, but I never fully appreciated how difficult it must have been until I walked it myself. The enemy had every square inch of that field covered with interlocking machine gun and artillery fire. The Marines paid dearly with every step they took."

Following the action in France, Catlin was promoted to Brigadier General. In November 1918, he sailed for Haiti, where he assumed command of the First Brigade of Marines. Catlin remained in Haiti until September 1919, and then retired from the Marine Corps in December 1919.

In ill health because of his wound for the rest of his life, Brig. Gen. Catlin died in 1933, and is buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

"I believe you've got to know your history in order to know where you are going," said RDML Harris during the short dedication ceremony. "This was a man who had a lot to do with what we are all about here in Guantanamo Bay."

Navy program encourages Sailors to "ACT" to prevent suicide

By Chief Mass Communication Specialist Teresa J. Frith, Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

Beginning next year, a new Navy suicide prevention campaign asks Sailors to "ACT" now to save a life.

ACT is a three-step process designed to help determine if someone is suicidal and to prevent them from hurting themselves. It stands for: Ask- ask the person if they are thinking of hurting themselves, Carelisten and let the person know they are not alone, and Treatment-get your shipmate to help as quickly as possible; such as the duty officer, chaplain, friend, medical personnel, or others who can help.

Suicide is ranked as the 11th leading cause of death nation-wide. For the past 10 years, it has also been the second or third leading cause of death among active duty Sailors.

Studies have shown there are about four suicides each month in the Navy.

These unnecessary deaths have an impact on the entire armed forces, as suicide can decrease morale and combat readiness of Sailors everywhere

Because of this, it is important that everyone is aware of the signs that someone may be considering taking their own life

OPNAVINST 1720.4 requires that all commands conduct regular suicide prevention training.

There are also other resources available to both assist Sailors at risk and help train people to recognize the signs of possible suicidal tendencies, most of which are as close as the Fleet and Family Support Center.

HIV Infection and AIDS

Story by MC1 Robert Lamb, Public Affairs Office

World AIDS Day, Dec.1, is an opportunity for people worldwide to unite in the fight against HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) and AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome). The purpose is to stop the spread of HIV, end prejudice and to educate people on the facts about HIV infection and AIDS

At the end of 2003, an estimated 1,039,000 to 1,185,000 people in the United States were living with HIV/AIDS, with 24-27 percent undiagnosed and unaware of their HIV infection.

In March of 2004 the Navy Environmental Health Center published that nearly 5,000 active duty American Sailors and Marines had become infected with HIV, while more than 895,000 American citizens had been diagnosed with AIDS, and 501,669 had died of AIDS. An estimated 800,000 - 900,000 Americans are living with HIV infection.

Currently there is no cure to rid the body of HIV infection. There are medical treatments that can slow down the rate at which HIV weakens the immune system. There are other treatments that can prevent or cure some of the illnesses associated with AIDS, though these treatments do not eliminate the HIV infection itself. As with other diseases, early detection offers more options for treatment and prevention health care.

Your medical care provider should be consulted if you think you may have been exposed to any sexually transmitted disease.

For the most up-to-date information in international HIV and AIDS statistics, visit the Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS.

For current statistics on the number of reported AIDS cases in North, Central, and South America, please contact the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) which is the regional office for the Americas of the World Health Organization at 525 23rd Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, telephone: 202-861-4346.
