let that foul air out

In your April issue Mr. Alan D. Dare has certainly sounded a worth-while note for record collectors who are conscious that ordinary players do wear out valuable records and have a desire to do something about it. Mr. Dare does not go far enough in his article, however-his research obviously does not include other pickups now on the market, and one in particular which far exceeds the General Electric cartridge, not only in frequency response, low harmonic distortion and low response to vertical modulation but also one which will add hundreds of plays to any record. From this statement you may think I am a stockholder in the company who manufactures this pickup—I hasten to assure you that I am not. One of my most avid hobbies has been the construction of high fidelity playback equipment. This has been going on for about twenty-five years and our present group, of which I am chairman, has delved quite deeply into problems similar to that outlined by Mr. Dare.

It is fair to say that the extremely low price of the General Electric cartridge makes it available to more people than would a higher priced cartridge. Its frequency response is tolerably good but there are two qualities, inherent in its construction, that cannot be denied by any engineer if he is sufficiently interested to make a careful test. One of these qualities is distortion in the middle range of frequencies and the other is a too rigid stylus suspension which results in failure of this pickup to track a highly modulated groove without vertical pressure that is deleterious to the record.

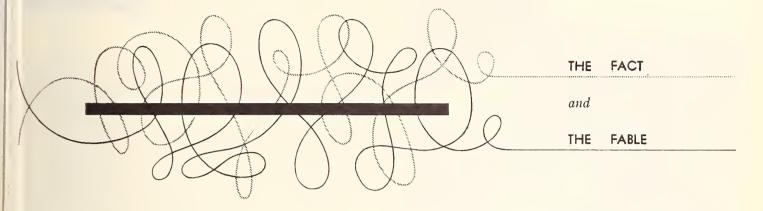

It is difficult to summarize all the factors involved in making a fair comparison be-tween these two cartridges. The weight and suspension of the arm for example-its resonant frequency-and other factors affect results. With an optimum arm, however, suspended on ball bearings throughout, eighteen inches in length and with a resonant frequency of ten cycles per second we have established that the General Electric cartridge requires a vertical pressure of 1.4 ounces in order to properly track a groove of high modulation. The Pickering cartridge, placed in the same arm and played on the same groove requires a vertical pressure of thirteen grams.

The General Electric cartridge begins dropping off badly in frequency response above 10,000 cycles per second. The Pickering cartridge, on the other hand, has a measurable output at 20,000 cycles per second and is practically flat to 15,000 cycles. There is no observable distortion in any of the 20odd Pickering cartridges I have tested.

A recent experience prompts me to write this letter. A record store in which I have by Louis Armstrong, "Shine"/"If I Could Be With You" in duplicate. In two adjacent booths one machine was equipped with a GE cartridge, the other with a Pick-ering. After eight plays, wear on some of the inner grooves at the higher modulations was noticeable on the record played by the GE cartridge. This same degree of wear was noticed on the Pickering cartridge only after thirty-one playings.

KAY C. THOMPSON

Shortcomings in the field of jazz have been remarked upon elsewhere, and this circumstance, as much as anything, prompts me to launch a few apparent heresies on the subject of improvisation, which, if the musical climate were more articulate, would certainly be belated, if not banal.

The precise nature of improvisation is not as fully grasped as it deserves, which is made evident by the misconceptions one encounters at every turn. I am inclined to divide responsibility for this unhappy state of affairs, between jazz musicians of the generation succeeding King Oliver and those jazz critics of a still later period, whose authority all too often has rested upon nothing more substantial than a collection of second-hand records. Depressingly, what both sets of gentry have been unable to perceive is that the issues were resolved for them a long time ago by the very same New Orleans musicians who originated jazz in the first place.

The most common definition of improvisation, the one that has produced the greatest amount of grief, is the dictionary version, characterizing it as "the art of composing extemporaneously." While this may be adequate to depict the product of savages, or of civilized school children caught in the toils of progressive education, by no flight of the liveliest fancy should it be applied to that vastly more sophisticated and complex art that we call jazz. Jazz improvisation does not imply, neither does it sanction, spontaneous creation out of thin air. I stress this aspect in order to nail at the outset the perennial notion that the improvising jazz artist is supposed to devise a new composition of his own, or worse, that he is expected to re-write another man's composition to suit his own pleasure. While it is true that this does occur, it is equally true that such attempts are undertaken only by jazz musicians who do not know what they are doing.

Improvisation, as we meet with it in the finest jazz, in the work of a Dodds, an Armstrong, or a Bechet, is a three-fold activity. It consists of augmenting an existing jazz composition along melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic lines. While based on sound musical knowledge and sound musical precedent, it is performed under the stress of strong emotion. Its worth may be determined by the extent to which it heightens and enriches our musical enjoyment through the power of its originality and the quality of its execution. It is, in short, merely another name for the creative process by which the best, and only the best, jazz musicians personalize musical experience to such a degree that it acquires universal musical significance, and hence warrants serious consideration.

As I have noted, much of the confusion surrounding the subject of improvisation may be traced to false impressions arising with the generation whose initial contact with jazz occurred during the Chicago heyday of King Oliver. Seeing New Orleans musicians playing all night long without using sheet music, many of the younger men concluded, quite erroneously, that jazz was a free and untrammelled brand of music, requiring no special knowledge of the original compositions. However well this sophomoric belief may have fitted in with the emotional patterns of the unregimented 'Twenties, the tragic fact is that it has persisted, in one form or another, to the present day.

What is significant is not that New Orleans musicians played without using sheet music, but their reasons for doing so. In those days it was a common event for every sort of musician to frequent the spots where New Orleans men worked, many of them for the sole purpose of filching new ideas. To meet competitive tactics of this kind, Oliver at first resorted to cutting the titles from the tops of the pages. When this device failed, it was but a step to forsake the use of sheet music entirely. For by that time many of the most popular numbers were those that New Orleans men had played for years; the newer ones were rehearsed in advance, until everyone in the band was fully familiar with them. Later on, to baffle the opposition more completely, the Oliver band took to shuffling the parts of different numbers whenever they spied shirt-cuff copyists in the house.

Ironically, in abandoning the printed page, Oliver and the others paved the way for much of the inferior jazz we hear today. In effect, they set an example that the next generation was not prepared to follow; their musical experience simply had not equipped them to do so. After all, few of the younger musicians had ever heard anything but jazz or were acquainted with any other form of music. It has never been strongly emphasized that New Orleans musicians were not raised wholly on Rags and Blues. They had been obliged to execute a variety of music waltzes, marches, polkas, mazurkas, quadrilles. Thus, they knew the basic music from which all Western music has derived, and they drew upon this raw material, transforming it in the highest creative sense and incorporating the results in their own product. For instance, there is ample precedent in European music for the striding bass that characterizes ragtime piano. The point is, that meet the collector

George Davis of Glendale, California, is certainly a rarity among collectors. He collects the recordings of only one artist: Duke Ellington. George is the proud possessor of what is perhaps the most complete Ellington collection in the world.

One of the astounding things about his collection is the beautiful condition of the records. Such rare items as the Blu-Discs, Gennetts and Victor L series are V condition or better. All the records from the early Brunswicks on are Excellent or New. As George explains it: "I try to get all my records in excellent shape and play them with cactus needles. I collect Ellington because I like his music, not just for the labels, so I want to get the most out of the recordings."

(For those of you who are in the dark, as I was, the Victor L series were made by R. C. A. for radio stations; they are 10 inch shellac records, to be played at 33 1/3 RPM. Three selections were on the record George played for me: East St. Louis Toodle-oo, Lot O' Fingers (piano solo), and Black and Tan Fantasy.)

Davis is best known among California collectors as the discoverer of the "Hemit Cache." A year or so ago, George, who is a salesman for a drug store supply company, was making a run through a sparsely populated district in Southern California. In the town of Hemit he came across a drug store that had sold records many years ago, and had stored the remainder of their stock (five or six thousand records) in glass cases behind the counter. To make a long and suspenseful story short, George was able to control his excitement, and upon looking over the stock found the latest record to be Tommy Dorsey's Song of India, on original label. Needless to say, he took all the Ellingtons—making a great show of his casualness—and on later trips picked up, in an equally off-hand manner, the Mortons, Nobles, Goodmans, and all others of any

Just before being pushed out the front door, after a night of eager listening, I asked George what Ellingtons he liked best. His reply gives the clue to the reason for this one-band collection:

BLIND WILLIE JOHNSON

BILL GRAUER

Jazz, as we know it today, is the product of the fusing of innumerable musical folk expressions. Stemming from the native dances of Europe, the West Indies, Africa, and more sophisticated New Orleans, jazz has evolved through ragtime and the infusion of the blues from these folk roots until even today it is being spiced, for good or for bad, with very definite Cuban rhythms and musical figures.

Little has been written, however, about a constant source of root material which has always had a strong influence upon the music. The Negro people have always been a deeply religious group. They have found great relief from their deprivations in the church. The music of Negro worship has always been extremely rhythmic and highly emotional. That this music is rich in material for study by the student of jazz can easily be recognized if one will simply listen to some of the records made by Sam Morgan's band and the George Lewis-Bunk Johnson groups. They repeatedly draw upon traditional church hymns for some of their most inspiring performances; Just a Closer Walk With Thee and Over in the Glory Land being just two of many typical pieces.

One can get even closer to the personal religious experience which is the driving urge of this side of the culture which produces jazz by listening to the recordings made by Blind Willie Johnson. He is perhaps the most stirring of all hymn shouters. Fingering a guitar, in amazing accompaniment to himself, this gravel throated disciple rocks through original and traditional church choruses with a gusto and fervor that rivals the finest Armstrong vocals. Perhaps no other recording artist, perhaps not even Bessie or Louis, were capable of arousing the deep human emotions, as Blind Willie does with such ease and obvious sincerity.

Little is known about this member of the long line of folk-music Johnsons. His records are not even completely listed in any published work. There follows an incomplete listing of his records, for which we thank G. Wallace Umphrey of Burton, Washington. Those records marked with an asterisk have a soprano voice in evidence, most probably the woman (his wife?) who led him around and sometimes sang along with him

There are probably many other sides not listed. If those of you who may be in possession of them would send along the complete information, the complete listing may be made available at a later date.

ALAN D. DARE | C. S. WOODWORTH IV

In the April issue of the Record Changer we made the statement that, after acquiring an adequate phono-pickup, the fidelity of reproduction is then limited only by the quality of your amplifier and loud-speaker. Let us, now, see what kind of amplifier is necessary to insure that the vibrations picked up by your phono-cartridge are faithfully transmitted to your speaker.

The purpose of the amplifier is to increase the minute voltage developed by the pickup to a sufficient degree to operate the loud-speaker unit. In accomplishing this, the signal delivered to the speaker must dupli-cate what is produced by the pickup in all respects except its magnitude. Any departure from this condition is termed distortion. Distortion may exist in several forms, one of the most common being harmonic distortion; this is characterized by rough or harsh reproduction, particularly in the upper musical range and amounts to the addition of frequencies not among those of the original sound (the "jangling" effects in the loud, or percussive, notes of some piano recordings are the most obvious examples of this).

Frequency distortion is equally common and is simply an inability on the part of the amplifier to amplify the full range of musical frequencies (30 to 15,000 cycles) without discrimination. The "juke-box bass" boom and generally muffled reproduc-tion so prevalent in the average radio and phonograph is a good example of this form of distortion. It is the result of certain bands of frequencies being exaggerated, usually those in the bass-baritone regions around 150 cycles, while others are suppressed or eliminated entirely. This condition is further aggravated by the suppression of frequencies above 4 000 to 5000 pression of frequencies above 4,000 to 5,000 cycles, for, while few musical instruments produce fundamental sounds above this range, they do, nevertheless, produce harmonics or overtones which often reach above 15,000 cycles. Since it is the number of these harmonics and their strength relative to the fundamentals which give, musical instruments their characteristic timbre and brilliance, their suppression reduces or destroys the illusion of their

Several conditions may be the cause of distortion in your amplifier; among them, poor circuit design, the use of inferior structural components (especially trans-formers), the operation of tubes under improper conditions, insufficient power-handling capacity, and the loudspeaker not being properly matched to the amplifier (improper loading). Any material breakdown which does not show up as a complete stoppage of operation may also cause dis-

If wide-range (high fidelity) reproduction is to be fully enjoyed, distortion must be held to an absolute minimum; otherwise it will be only a source of irritation. It is for this reason that amplified performance becomes increasingly important.

For those in search of a good amplifier, it is suggested that they select one that uses broadcast-quality transformers, a balanced

The "push-pull" output stage is an arrangement in which two tubes operate in opposition to each other (or 180 electrical degrees apart) to balance the circuit, thereby reducing hum, harmonic distortion, and delivering, in most cases, more than twice the power available from a single tube of the same type. If other than three-element tubes are used, the circuit should provide a balanced inverse feedback; in this a portion of the output voltage is reintroduced into the amplifier at its input, or at some intermediate point, in such a way as to be in opposition to the original voltage at that point. This reduces much of the harmonic distortion and tends to eliminate frequency distortion throughout the entire musical range as well as reducing or eliminating some types of hum; it also acts as a damper on loudspeaker resonance (one form of bass-boom), for, without it, the speaker membrane will continue to vibrate in diminishing waves after the initial impulse is past—much as a piano string when the damper-pedal is held down, or as an automobile continues to bounce after hitting a bump unless the springs are restrained by a shock absorber.

As a final word to those who desire advice in selecting (or building) an amplifier, it is suggested that they consult a person with experience in this field, such as an engineer of one of the better-class radio broadcast stations. Also, avoid freak circuits, adhere to straightforward design, operate tubes according to the manufacturer's specifications, and you will have safely guided the impulse from your pickup to your loudspeaker with a minimum of distortion. The kind of speaker that is required to complete the job of bringing this impulse faithfully to your ears will be discussed in another article.

NEW ORLEANS

Another pioneer New Orleans jazzman has been taken from us. Word has recently come of the death of George Baquet, one of the long and illustrious line of Afro-Gallic reed-men who first helped impart the beauty and joy of jazz to the world at large.

impart the beauty and joy of jazz to the world at large.

Like Louis Delile, the Tios, and Charlie McCurtis (McCurdy), Baquet was one of those very early starters in the New Orleans orchestras that were being formed around 1895. He was a charter member of John Robichaux' first band, which also included James Williams on cornet, Baptiste Delile on trombone, the still-active guitarist, Bud Scott, drummer DeeDee Chandler, and Henry Kimball on bass.

Before Baquet ventured on the trail-blazing nation-wide vaudeville tour with the Original Creole Band, he played alongside brassmen Emmanuel Perez and George Filhe in the Imperial Band of 1909, where he received the beat from such early drummers as "Ratty John" Vigne and Walter Brundy.

This kindly, portly musician was one of the few sight-readers among the versatile group of New Orleans improvisers of this period. When, in 1911, he joined the Original Creoles, the first jazz "orchestra" to carry the music out of its parent city, he was a tower of strength for its two brass players, Keppard and Venson. Freddie Keppard's cornct variations, especially, were fashioned against the beautifully-paced firm line of the tune as rendered by Baquet, while Venson (whose name has also been spelled Vincon, or Vincent) slid his foundation notes along underneath. Crowds of Chicagoans fell out when the Creoles included the South Side in their tour, and thus an important northern beachhead of hot music was established.

Evidently Baquet tired of the long road tours, for July of 1929 found him recording with a Jelly Roll Morton pickup group at the Victor studios. His records, by the way, are pitifully few. The chances of having the best of his work preserved were spoiled when Keppard, in 1917, refused to have Victor put the original Creoles' numbers on wax, "for everyone to steal." But by 1929, having made his home in Philadelphia, George was just across the river from Victor, with whom Jelly Roll had a recording contract.

Baquet's work on the six Morton Red Hot Peppers sides con-

Baquet's work on the six Morton Red Hot Peppers sides constitutes a substantial thumbnail sketch of the man. Aside from these he must largely be remembered for the fine example he set for his protege, Sidney Bechet.

As for his records: his solitary Bessie Smith accompaniment and the half-dozen Morton sides reveal Baquet to be a musician-intransition—the classical clarinetist with all of the Frenchman's fluid attributes, who has been fascinated by, but who has only partly absorbed the jig-like elisions and syncopations of the Negro player. His low solo on Sweet Aneta Mine still retains the classical musician's politeness of attack, although he executes a few swoops later made into a stock-in-trade by his Creole contemporary, Barney Bigard.

JOE AND CECILE MADISON

Although differences of opinion must naturally arise between countries and their citizens, it is heartening to know that there is one field that is welding rifts almost as quickly as politics can widen them. As the appreciation of jazz becomes more pronounced, men of all countries are finding that there is true brotherhood between them, that here, at last, is a common meeting ground, that Bix's horn and Jelly Roll's piano sound the same in any language. . . .

Our thanks to Hugues Panassie of France for a copy of the Italian bop record, Night in Tunisia/Salt Peanuts on La Voce Del Padrone 2328, by the Gilberto Cuppini Bop Sextet. We liked the Salt Peanuts.

Felix Steinmann of Switzerland sends us Amiga 1152 from Germany, titled Be-Bop? There is no band name or composer, but the bop is not violent and we thoroughly enjoyed it. Backing is St. Louis Blues on which the Helmuth-Zacharias Quartet quite willingly put their name. Since we must have a bop or two around to prove we're "progressive," we prefer Helmy's Be-Bop? We guarantee it will cause no nightmares.

We have just got around to playing a surprising record from Malcolm Hunter of South Africa. Angry, by Sonny's Jazz Revelers is definitely the best record to come out of this country. It's on Singer Gallotone 419. It has tremendous barroom piano, fine banjo, traps and "Redman-era" sax. This groupe really swings and the record is a "must" for your foreign collection.

Here's another stanza of your collectors' department with more facts and questions about jazz records which are not completely documented as yet.

In response to the query in the April column on Steve Washington titles on Vocalion we have the following: Recorded in New York City on November 22, 1933 with Sterling Bose, cornet; Benny Goodman, clarinet; unknown, tenor sax; Matty Malneck, violin; Fulton "Fiji" McGrath, piano; Carl Kress, guitar; Artie Bernstein, bass; unknown, drums; and Steve Washington, vocal. Master numbers are (B14363) for We Were the Best of Friends and (B14364) for Sing A Little Lowdown Tune. Orin Blackstone wrote that Ralph Venables gave him the information and Dan Mahony sent us the same data credited to Venables in the Melody Maker. Charles Lindsley also sent in the master numbers. These data leave only an unknown tenor sax man and a drummer to identify

In last month's column we noted that Cornelius W. Hauck wanted to know whether it was Sterling Bose who played the growl trumpet on Chick Bullock's You Rascal You (10769) on Perfect 15506. The answer seems to be that the one responsible for the solo is Muggsy Spanier. So Mr. Hauck's question is partly answered, with the Dorsey Brothers and Muggsy as part of the personnel. But how about the entire line-up?

Leon Whitley would, like to know the personnel of the Dixie Daisies' Louisville Lou and Choo-Choo. Both titles are on Cameo, the former on Ca 345 and the latter on an issue the number of which Leon doesn't have. He also asks if they are Teagarden items.

Mr. Whitley is of the opinion that both Jack Teagarden and Benny Goodman are on China Boy/Somebody Loves Me by Henry Lange on Brunswick 4478. He also thinks Teagarden and Artie Schutt are on Thank Your Father (495020)/My Hawaiian Isles (495015) on American Parlophone 24012 by Joe Curran. (That elusive label is in

Leon's final question concerns Jack Hylton's Mississippi Melody on HMV 5520. He wants to know who the fine trumpet and trombone are. Can anyone furnish these

Elwood B. Backensto is attempting to compile a complete discography of Red Nichols (Harry Crawford take notice!) and, of course, needs mountains of data. Since he intends to include all the commercial titles as well as the hot jazz, he has to handle much information on sides not listed anywhere at this time. asking anyone interested to help him out with unlisted information, any corrections to published volumes, and references to any sides that sound suspiciously like Red Nichols' work. Mr. Backensto is particularly interested in information about Coon-Sanders Orchestra on Victor, Paul Specht on Columbia, Ross Gorman on Columbia and Harmony, Golden Gate Orchestra on Edison, California Ramblers on Edison, and Savoy

We ran across an old item that ought to be worth some research action. On Van Dyke 81843 the first side is labeled New Orleans Pepsters and the title is The Rackett (sic), with composer credit given to Austin (Lovie Austin perhaps?). The master given on the label is 3843 and in the wax one finds (3843A). The performance features a trumpet, alto and tenor. The overall sound is of the Luis Russell band of 1929 or 1930. Could it be that band or a group from its ranks? Then just the other day we saw a brown-surfaced Madison with this same title, The Rackett, also credited to Austin. The Madison was labeled Levee Syncopaters with a master on the label of (330). However, in the wax was (3843B) which showed it to be the same as the Van Dyke, but pressed from the "B" take instead of the "A" one. The catalog number on the Madison was 6002. The reverse of the latter was of no jazz interest whatsoever but the other side of the Van Dyke certainly was. Marked Bay State Broadcasters, the song was St. James Infirmary, with a master on the label of 3912 and in the wax of (3912C). Very nice trombone and trumpet featured. The trombone could easily be Teagarden, although the matter is definitely open for other opinions. What do you know about these sides and the musicians on Next is Vocalion 15763. The first side needs no further research; the facts are all known. This is labeled the Whoopee known. This is labeled the wnoopee Makers, but is actually the odd title from the Hotsy Totsy Gang's three-title date in New York on October 16, 1928. Title is Dardanella and the master, although not to be found on the record itself, is (E 28356). Personnel for this side is: Jimmy McPartland, cornet; Jack Teagarden, trombone; Benny Goodman, clarinet and alto; Vic Breidis, piano; Dick McPartland, guitar;

The devotee of historical records of great singers and actors often has had occasion to be grateful to William H. Seltsam of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Since 1932, when the International Record Collectors' Club was founded by Mr. Seltsam, he has performed miracles in research and his issues have included examples of the work of artists of the Golden Age who were merely names in legend until he unearthed their super-rare recordings and made them available in repressings or re-recordings at prices which certainly have precluded any monetary gains to himself. Certain IRCC issues, long out of print and perhaps never again to be available, have changed hands at outlandishly high prices. Mr. Seltsam's most recent release of five records brings for the voices of Frances Saville (1902), Agustarello Affre (1902), Adolphe Marechal (1905), Reynaldo Hahn (1910), Eugenia Burzio, Mary Garden (1905) and Rosalia Chalia (1896!). Full details are contained in an interesting bulletin which may be had by writing to Mr. Seltsam at 318 Reservoir Avenue, Bridgeport 6, Conn.

Can't you just imagine a couple of record collectors meeting a century hence: one, eyes a-pop, telling the other, "Cheez, ya know wot? I met a guy t'other day an' y'know wot he got? A fast-playing record!"

Has the Heritage Series gone the way of all flesh? Nothing doing from that angle lately. I've said before and I say again that the series could be a highly successful proposition if issued on regular shellac at a dollar per disc.

I've acquired a priceless Toscanini rehearsal recording in which the old boy excoriates a bassoonist, Doyle by name, kicks over a brace of music-stands and climaxes by dashing a stop-watch to the deck. The donor of this disc reports that the stop-watch was a present to the maestro from the men and came to $500 of their hard-earned money. Sech goin's on!

The acquisition of American rights to the Telefunken catalog by Capitol Records will enrich many a collection over here. Many much-sought pre-war landmarks in recording history will be available in pressings of an excellence comparable to that of the superb Telefunken originals.

Victor album DM-64, Stainer's Crucifixion, is deleted after twenty years of catalog life. Long among my very favorite sets of records, I have laid in two extra sets against breakage. By present-day reproduction standards, you might say that DM-64 is ancient, but the performances may never again be equalled and should you come upon the item on your dealer's shelf, my advice to you is GRAB IT!

A spate of half-price sales around town has deflated my resources for some time to come. The complete Victor sets of Boheme and Tosca with Gigli at his superb best have joined my ranks, as has the Faust with Journet as Mefisto. The latter item is slated for deletion upon the near-future release of the work under Sir Thomas Beecham.

Whereas the Victor 7-inch releases thus far have been dubbed from "regular" discs, many Columbia "regulars" are dubs from LP's. Victor's recent popular records are dubbed from tape-recordings.

Not more than ten years ago Caruso records were shunned by rarity-seekers as being too common to arouse the acquisitive urge. Only music-lovers could be persuaded to listen to them. Today there is practically no such thing as a "common" Caruso item in its originally issued state and among the most difficult to acquire are those issued after the tenor's death, which coincided with the Victrola's first decline. Certain double-faced issues are almost never reported. Tempus fugit!

"Aha! So you admit you've never heard the band either! So how can you contradict my opinion?"

Bud Jacobson's Jungle Kings Laughing at You Clarinet Marmalade

Time has served only to mellow these sides from one of Signature's first sessions, when the company was interested only in azz. It was about as insolvent then as its frequent transfusions of new funds indicate it has been more recently, except that in those days a small matter like ten bucks was a major sum.

The Bud Jacobson session was made as inexpensively as any date of comparable dimensions that I can think of since Local 10 took hold in Chicago. But despite the confining quality that always results from frantic finances, the boys really played, and even on this release (which is a dubbing of the none-too-well-recorded originals) the records are a monument to these half-for-

With the possible exception of Joe Rushton, who has made a considerable number of dates out on the Coast in recent years, none of the men on this disc have recorded enough. All belong to that generation of Chicago musicians who were in the background when the more forward Austin kids were sticking together and getting written up. You'll find Carl Rinker playing remarkably like Natty Dominique, the late Frank Melrose, who eventually came to be known as the best of the rough-and-tumble white pianists of his time, Bud Hunter, whose only records have always seemed to me to be the best tenor sax playing that the Chicago school ever produced (Bud Freeman's fine work notwithstanding), and Earl Wiley, the reformed riverboat drum-

The leader of the group, Bud Jacobson, remains one of the last of the driving Chicago clarinetists. The last twenty years have found him devoting most of his time to playing tenor sax and piano on excursion steamers (Lake Michigan, not Mississippi), and in floor-show joints, of which Chicago has an incredible number, but every once in a while he gets a chance to play clarinet as he once did in the twenties.

Both sides of this Century reissue are Both sides of this Century reissue are loaded with kicks for the sentimental. Laughing at You is a fine pop of the twenties, written by Jacobson and Eddie Condon, and taken at a slow, easy tempo led off by a wonderful intro by Frank Melrose. Rinker shows the way for half a chorus in one of the sweetest-sourest ensembles that was ever played a fraction offsembles that was ever played a fraction off-pitch, Melrose comes back for the release, and the band returns again for the last eight with Rinker continuing into a solo of his own Everybody gets into it before the final ensemble and out. Real smoky stuff.

Clarinet Marmalade features a gag that was built around the "clarinetists' holiday" record that was the subject of much discussion among "Chicago" collectors before UHCA released a dub made from the copy Mezzrow gave Hugues Panassie. You kids who only shaved last week gather 'round while gramps tells you about what a great man Frank Teschemacher was fifteen years ago to us all, and how the story that he had made an unissued record of Jazz Me Blues with just Rod Cless, Mezz Mezzrow, and a rhythm section had us pacing the floors nights. Turned out to be more of a sax party than anything else when the dub was finally made available for all to hear, which may be why this record was made with three guys in the band of six who could play elevine too. play clarinet too.

secutive clarinet solos by Jacobson, Hunter, and Rushton on this old ODJB favorite, but the real stand-outs are Bud Hunter's tenor solo and Rinker's fine lead work at the so nicely on both sides. (Century 4015) finish. Note how Jacobson backs up Hunter

Chicago Rhythm Kings

There'll Be Some Changes Made Song of the Wanderer

Another early Signature date revived by Century. This was one of the first by Art Hodes, who was being discovered by a small and loyal gang of New Yorkers that season, and ditto for Rod Cless. In fact, you might say the same for the rest of the boys (Marty Marsala on cornet, Earl Murphy on

It was a good date, and Song of the Wanderer is one of the fine sides of that period. It gets a good beat going, with Marty Marsala in rare form and the stripped-down rhythm section socking all the way. There are a couple of wonderful, nostalgic moments on this side, too: Art Hodes playing the last eight of the second chorus in that Lemuel Fowler style, backing up Cless so nicely afterward (with the rhythm section really in the barrel on the release), and—best of all—Marty Marsala weaving a hell of a melodic line in the release of the last chorus over Hodes' light piano and Murphy's insistent beat.

Everybody was recording There'll Be Some Changes Made in those days, and the only ones who didn't do it up tempo Clarence Profit and Mildred Bailey. This record leaps, but the absence of a drummer wears the boys down. Hodes and Cless are busy as can be most of the way, filling in the empty spots, and Hodes and Goss end in a fury of beats to build up the rhythm toward the close, but oh how a drummer would have helped! Still—it was and still is a memorable session. (Century 4016) (G. A.)

Mahalia Jackson

In My Home Over There Since the Fire Started Burning In My

By now it should be no news to anyone that I'm a hog about Mahalia Jackson and I'm happy to report that her latest is just as good as the earlier ones. On these two sides she doesn't rock the way she did on some of the others but her voice, for me at least, is really at its best on these slow and deeply sincere churchy numbers. It's the same good accompaniment—piano and organ—though only the organ is listed on the label. Of the two sides my own vote goes for In My Home Over There, which has some of the same emotional impact as what I consider her best number—Even Mei.

There are rumors that Mahalia is soon to be on a national hookup, which would be good news indeed. I've never heard her in person, or on the radio either for that matter, but those who have inform me that when she is singing in front of an audience she is at her very best. Keep your eyes and ears open, and if I hear anything definite I'll report it next month. I've said this before, but I'll say it again; this is the greatest thing to come along since Bessie. (Apollo 205, $1.05) (B. M.)

Fletcher Henderson

Chimes Blues/I Want To

I can't seem to get very steamed up over the current Paramount re-issue. It seems to me that with all the piano music lying around loose, the boys could have come up with something better. Could be that I just don't like Henderson very much (I don't!), but neither side here seems capable of getting me into even a mild sweat. I Want To is a pretty ordinary number to begin with and I can't see that the treatment does anything to lift it out of that class. and though Chimes is one of those things that's supposed to be a natural for anyone, again I couldn't manage more than a polite yawn. There's a pretty conventional boogie pattern running through the whole thing, plus the usual bell effects.

I'm always yelling for more piano records, but they always tell me they don't sell. I very much doubt that this will prove the exception. (Paramount 14005. $1.05)

(B. M.)

Ida Cox/Ollie Powers

Blues For Rampart Street Play That Thing

Last -month, when I was shooting my mouth off about "giving us Edmonia Henderson in order to get a little Tommy Ladnier was doing things the hard way," I didn't know that Bill Russell was listening. In any event, shortly thereafter a batch of his AM Paramounts arrived in the mail to back me up. Not only that, many of them were the very records I was thinking about.

The Ida Cox side is one that has been a favorite of mine for a long, long time. Maybe the lyrics are a little corny but it's the kind of corn I can chew on all night—

"I'm gonna go down to Tom Anderson's Cafe I wants to hear that colored jazz band play The Cadillac, the Red Onion too The Boudoir and the Park's End too You can enjoy yourself, down on Rampart Street-

Jimmy O'Bryant and Tommy Ladnier do some wonderful things in the background and in the middle Ladnier really takes a This may not be the real idiom—the authentic blues-but it sho ain't hard to take.

It sho ain't.

The other side has been around on UHCA. but this is from a different master and really sounds like it, for a change. And a note in passing, which applies to almost every Paramount re-issue I have ever heard: they don't sound like English Parlaphones, even on the originals, so don't expect them to when they are dubbed-the problems are so many that I sometimes wonder how they come out at all, since for one thing some of the masters were dubbed on brown wax that had to be kept on ice or it went to hell between pressing lots! (AM 7, $1.05) (B. M.)

Ma Rainey

Soon This Morning Don't Fish In My Sea

They can hit me with these Ma Rainey's all night long. I've got a bushel basket full of originals but the best of the lot is a P minus, so now I at least know what Ma's been yelling about all these years! Maybe I should say almost know, for the gal was never a very clear enunciator and there was a period when she had a new set of uppers that didn't help out much (I used the lyrics of Counting Those Blues in a recent novel and Sterling Brown, myself, Kenneth Bright and the two or three others who worked on them got no better than two thirds of them) either. But she's my gal.

On one of these sides, as so often happens on Rainey numbers, you will notice a certain similarity to other blues Ma has recorded under another name. Think nothing of it—same tune, different words and title. It's still Ma Rainey, ain't it? Nice Blyth piano on one of them and the Georgia band on the other. I guess it's the Georgia boys—B. T. Wingfield, cornet; Dodds, clarinet; and Cow Cow on the piano, or so the discography says. (AM 5. $1.05) (B. M.)

Ma Rainey

Lucky Rock Blues These Dogs of Mine

This is, for my money, as good a record as the "greatest of them all" ever made. Lucky Rock features some of the most eloquent Ladnier I have ever heard, and it was in backing up a blues singer that Tommy was as good as any of them, and I mean just that. He's on the other side too, but you hardly hear him, the more the pity. But for another reason that side is especially interesting. In all the critical writing about jazz, and especially the blues, there is all too little mention of the part the theatre the old tent shows, or later the TOBA vaudeville circuit—had on the evolution of the blues and jazz. Well, here's one of those numbers and as you listen to it you may, as I did, wish that radio and other assorted forces had not knocked such shows off into the ash can. These four Rainey sides makes this an especially happy month. (AM 6. $1.05) (B. M.)

Jabbo Williams

Pratt City Blues Jab Blues

I know this one has been around on II, but if you don't have a copy latch on to it fast. Jabbo was one of the best of the real folk pianists and he left pitifully little to remember him by and he was one of the ones worth remembering. Need I say more? Surface sacrificed here for fidelity and I think wisely. (AM 8. $1.05) (B. M.)

Scat Man Crothers

Mabel the Lush Riff's Blues

Have You Got the Gumption Do Something

Some folks will say that this is a shame to the race, but Scat Man Crothers, who has a swell voice for my dough (a clearer Lips Page, you might say, with plenty of Louis Jordan), comes up with two amusing novelties about inebriation of varying sorts. Mabel the Lush is a cute delineation of the progress of same from Sterno and hand lotion to Phillips 66. (For non-Westerners and non-basketball fans, it's high octane.) The other rib-tickler is Have You Got the Gumption to Make the Assumption which recounts the righteous protests of what I prefer to believe is a picked-up tea-hound, although for the sake of propriety (hah!) Crothers keeps referring to liquor instead. Fine thing, when it's considered OK to sing about drunks and not about gage-fiends, but that's how society sees it.

Anyway, both of these numbers are funny as hell, and Crothers does a fine job in front of a band with a good beat. Best of all, Vic Dickenson contributes excellent trombone solos on all four sides. (Capitol 15220,

Tadd Dameron Sextet

Jahbero Ladybird

Progress, or something closely akin, has been made by Tadd in the direction of refinement and restraint, in these sides, which are indicative of his present motif. (He has stated many times that his dream is to own a real full size orchestra—he is one of the ones who believe that bop is only a staging ones who believe that bop is only a staging area for things to come; which can best be handled by bigger and better orchestras. Possibly he feels that there is little in bop which can't be expressed by arrangers and competent musicians. Personally, I don't believe in the validity of so-called "slow ben" or "oretty hop" as a direct appending bop," or "pretty bop" as a direct appendage to the informal music that we think of as bop; I think Sarah Vaughn and Billy Eckstine are great, but I don't think they're bop singers, exactly. Something tells me I'm giving the wrong impression here—what I mean is that Tadd, and others like him, seem to feel that bop has been chiefly useful as a shove away from the stagnation and inventive paralysis which the music of the 'thirties and early 'forties had symptoms of, and that the real stuff is yet to come, in the form of a music which will be palatable to the public, digestible by musicians and inoffensive to cultists-in whose ranks we all are numbered. I say no. Bop is a stopgap, you can bet your behind on it, but what will follow is not necessarily every man's dream. More on that later.)

This record, if you compare it to The Squirrel, is almost reticent in its calm, professional performance. Like the other, it features Fats Navarro, probably the best allaround trumpet man in the business; two of the best tenor men in Wardell Gray and Allen Eager (though Eager is just as likely to leave me cold as not) and, on Jahbero, Chino Pozo, who assumed much of the responsibility of being the best bongo player around when Chano (no relation) was killed. Ladybird is a pretty job that Tadd wrote some time ago, and would be almost instantly recognizable as his even if Scott Joplin were listed as composer. Tadd writes good stuff, and it has an original flavor. Fats has a quiet solo, very expressive and musicianly in his effortless manner, and I'd say that Eager comes off a mite ahead of Wardell on this one. On both sides, as a matter of fact.

Jahbero is not precisely what I'd call Afro-Cubano, being more Cubano-Dameron. It féatures excellent bongo, at an easy tempo, and good Fats; it would be a fine dance record, I may add, and the melody is quite insinuating. (Blue Note 559) (P. B.) For Finest Stock of

Overtime

Victory Ball

On all counts, this is a remarkable job. Last year's was good, too, but this goes well beyond it in every direction, including personnel; for instance, the fantastic trumpet section on Overtime: Dizzy, Fats Navarro and Miles Davis-roughly the same thing as having Louis, George Mitchell and Punch Miller in the same band.

One eyebrow twitched involuntarily when I spotted the name Ernie Caceres in therehe'll probably be pelted with meatballs the next time he sets foot in Julius's—but outside of Ernie, I don't think any all-star group was ever so uniquely of one mind. These guys not only would be a great band, they are a great band; the solos are beautifully coordinated, and they all play together like mad.

Charlie Parker has rarely been better than he is on both sides, though he is generally spectacular on Victory Ball, having to play an exceedingly difficult part with Lennie Tristano and Billy Bauer throughout; his solo on Overtime is a gem. Kai Winding does one of his best jobs there, too, while J. J. Johnson takes care of Victory Ball.

Dizzy has some tasty muted work on that side, and, although it may be Fats, the chorus on Overtime sounds like him, too. Whichever it is, it's topnotch horn.
Well, everybody is good. Victory Ball will wear better, maybe, but both sides add

Lennie Tristano Quintet-Quartet

Subconscious-Lee Judy

Either Tristano is getting better or I'm becoming susceptible, because I'm all for becoming susceptible, because I'm an Ior this, and I used to shrug my shoulders.

Subconscious swings beautifully (the fifth man is drummer Shelley Manne) being at its best when altoist Lee Konitz is playing; Konitz is anything but subconscious—he is the most intent musician I've ever seen on a stand, staring expectantly afar as if awaiting a dispensation from God to use the phrase don't think anybody's playing better alto, these days, either thoughtfully or by accident, and his tone is absolutely peculiar to him—sounds more like a sweet potato than a saxophone. Tristano surprised me with the drive in his piano, as he may other people more accustomed to things like Judy, a slow, engagingly understated piece. This one is mostly Tristano's skillful, introspective modulations—the supple, constantly moving style which is his own. He has remarkable technique, with an ear to match; I'd say that he is even less likely than Monk to make any concessions to anyone, especially the public. It's a shame, but they may easily continue to be unaware of each other. (New Jazz 80.001) (P. B.)

It is also a fact that the higher level passages, especially at the higher frequen-cies, are ruinous to record life when played by a stylus with relatively low horizontal compliance.

I have such great regard for some of my older records that you will have to forgive me if I am a little rabid on the subject. One more point: the composition and polish of the stylus. A good diamond is worth many sapphires. It is not economy to buy a sapphire cartridge or needle. A sapphire stylus, after 200 playings in the average arm, is virtually worthless as a medium to contact a record groove. It not only is productive of very great distortion, but it "engraves" even shellac discs.

in utilizing this conception, ragtime composers were able to adapt and modify it to suit their own needs and purposes.

Unfortunately, these details escaped detection by the younger generation as a whole. They failed to perceive that only finished musicians can play successfully without reference to the original music, and this only after they have thoroughly mastered the compositions they seek to play. Yet to this day, many post-Oliver musicians fondly pride themselves upon the fact that they do not own a stitch of sheet music. To hear them tell it, they play entirely by ear, as if that were some special kind of feat. But these latter-day aural "geniuses" are among the very ones whose fundamental unfamiliarity with the jazz classics becomes more painfully apparent every time they cut another side for one of the better-known independent labels.

If these opinions seem harsh and uncharitable, I suggest that my readers consider that the present generation (and the term embraces our bumper be-bop crop) has yet to demonstrate that it is capable of equaling in quality, much less excelling, what a previous generation could create. I do not know, for example, of any pianist appearing in public today, judging by the acid test of recorded work, who is prepared to play Scott Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag as the composer intended. This piece was first published in 1899. Mark the date well, for it supports my contention that there were giants in those days, who could compose and notate more music than most present-day musicians can read, much less execute, much less improvise.

I wish to make clear that, by speaking in this fashion, I am not proposing that imitation of the past become any kind of new goal, or fetish. On the contrary, I am talking here of that most difficult accomplishment: authentic re-creation as a simple act of musicianship. In defense of present-day pianists, for they are neither better nor worse than other instrumentalists, it ought to be pointed out, I suppose, that Joplin's publisher was reputed to have offered a standing reward to anyone who could commit Maple Leaf to memory and play it correctly, note for note. Whether he had any takers is not important here. The story's significance for us is that it tends to confirm that improvisation was not as marked a feature of earlier jazz as later solo work would have it appear. In those days, a musician was required to know his music before he was allowed to improvise for himself; if he did not, the other members of the band sent him home in disgrace before the evening was two sets old. Furthermore, in those days, the composer incorporated many of the best improvisational features in his published work, which may account for the fact that few of today's performers seem to care to tackle the music in its earlier notated form.

In utilizing Maple Leaf Rag to point up the deficiencies in contemporary jazz, the thought I wish to bring to the surface is that jazz lovers might profitably devote a small portion of the time they now consume in locating recorded relics of yesterday to a more profound consideration of the music itself. I am proposing that they cultivate a more mature interest in the subject they profess to admire so passionately. The experience of music lovers in other fields is that this pursuit is a both enjoyable and rewarding hobby.

Were anything like this to occur, it is quite conceivable that spurious musical production would cease to be greeted with the doting

response it now receives whenever and wherever it is presented. The present generation might no longer be permitted to change, and re-write arduous passages to conform with their own technical limitations, skipping here, and skating there, on the flimsy pretext that "that is the way the 'boys' have always played After all, in subtracting what is difficult instead of adding, they are fooling no one who really knows the music; they are merely gambling on the public's ignorance.

Harry Goodman, bass or tuba; Ben Pollack, drums; plus unknown sax and violin. The reverse side is an entirely different story. This is a version of Wabash Blues played, according to the label, by The Rhythm Makers. The first solo is taken by a horn which could be Jimmy McPartland or Red Nichols. Next there's a good trombone who might be Miff Mole or someone of that who might be Mill Mole or someone of that school. Now comes a nice baritone or bass sax solo over which is superimposed a scat vocal! Finally a brief bit of clarinet can be heard and then an ensemble finishes the record. All in all, this is a disc well worth having in your collection if you like circa-1929 white jazz. But does anyone know anything about the group, its personnel, and anything about the group, its personner, and the recording date?

Still another group needing investigation is Bennett's Swamplanders. We heard their Jet Black Blues (150769) on Columbia 14662-D and found it a better-than-average jazz item. Most obvious are a good trumpet and trombone. Clarinet suffers from a tendency to become a trifle corny in his solo. Composer credit for the tune goes to "Johnson," but with no first name or initial to clarify which of the many Johnsons he might be. The master number would indicate that it was recorded in the Falloof 1930. We need, however, personnel data, exact recording date and place, and other such information to document this one. The reverse, Baby Mine by the New Orleans Wild Cats, also needs looking into. We have no further data on this side at all.
Clarence W. Harris tells us that his band recorded with Lucille Hegamin for the Arto label. Specifically he remembers two titles, Jazz Me Blues and Everybody's Blues which were issued on Arto under Lucille's name, with the band under Harris' name. Personnel for the group as given by Mr. Harris sonnel for the group as given by Mr. Harris was: Wesly Johnson, trumpet; Jan Reevey, trombone; Clarence Harris, sax; Wilson "Peaches" Kyer, piano; Bob Escudero, tuba; and Kaiser Marshall, drums.

Mr. Harris also recalls recording for Brunswick with Wilmouth Houdini in 1934.
The titles were cut for release in the West

Indian and Cuban market and whether any were sold in the United States is unknown. They cut six sides with Clarence Harris on violin, Glyn Pacque on clarinet, and the Duke of Iron (more noted as a calypso Singer) on guitar. Pacque, you will remember, played with King Oliver, Red Allen, Willie Bryant, and Benny Carter on Here's an addition to last month's item on the Rudy Marlow and His Orchestra Dixie Jamboree (100341) on Harmony 1062. We ran into another Marlow item on Velvetone 2063 (which would mean it was also on Harmony 1063). This one is He's So Unusual (100340) and, by the master number, was cut at the same date. One listen will convince anyone that it is the same group, which leads one to wonder if any other titles were cut by them at that date. Solos on the Velvetone include trombone, clarinet, trumpet, guitar, and piano. All the questions asked about the title on Harmony last month apply to this new one on l'elvetone.

For those not acquainted with Columbia's system for releasing titles on Harmony, Velvetone, and Diva, let us mention it here. Harmony was started in 1925 and the first release had a catalog number of 1. In 1926 both Velvetone and Diva were entered into the record market with Velvetone numbers close to 1000 and Diva close to 2000. The system used was the addition of a prefix to the Harmony issue of the same titles. Thus Harmony 511 was issued on Velvetone 1511 and Diva 2511. george baquet

The solo in Down My Way reiterates this polite-sounding phrasing and displays Baquet's mellow tone, common to Picou and Nelson, and also to latter players like Albert Nicholas and Omer Simeon. Collectors will Nicholas and Omer Simeon. Collectors will remember the unique flutter-tongue solo in New Orleans Bump, a minor dirge that could easily pace a funeral party on their way to the burying ground. The straight running melody of Courthouse Bump recalls the classical fastidiousness of execution shared also with Picou and Nelson, indicating a transition period that was transcating a transition period that was transcended by Bechet and Johnny Dodds.

In the late '30s, collectors of the Philadelphia area organized a memorable jazz session in Baquet's honor, held at the May-fair Cafe near Camden, N. J. The occasion re-united Baquet and his celebrated pupil Bechet for some fine clarinet duets, the rest of the stellar group being Sidney deParis, trumpet, and Willie "The Lion" Smith, backed by Wellman Braud's bass and Zutty Singleton's parade drums. At this session 1 was able to meet Baquet—as much of a gentleman as his clarinet-playing had indicated. He told us, I remember, of his pleasure on hearing the Bolden band for the first time, and gave a vocal imitation of Bolden's growl trumpet.

After settling down on Fitzwater Street in Philadelphia, Baquet continued to play, on weekends, as tenor sax in a trio at Wilson's Cafe in West Philadelphia. Whenever his boy Bechet hit town for Jazz Festival Society concerts, George was sure to be on hand, and it must have been most rewarding for him to hear his protege carry on the heritage of delta reed-playing that stemmed from Baquet's own estimable example.

"The Duke and the men in his orchestra have such a wealth of ideas that I never tire of his records. Each record and period in Ellington's recorded history is so different that I can't pick out any one record that I like 'best.' If you want to listen to New Orleans type jazz, listen to the Ellington Gennetts. If you're in the mood for the best in big band swing, listen to the Ellingtons of 1936-38. What other orchestra has such a wide selection for the collector's tastes?"

Α							ł	A	rgentinan	G						 		German
									Australian	1						 		Italian
В									Brazilian	3			 					Japanese
C			 , ,						Canadian	М								Mexican
									English	Ŝ								. Swiss
F						. ,			French	Sd			 					Swedish

In the "For Disposition" section the condition of the record is indicated by these abbreviations:

N (New): Surface noise equal to an unplayed record: no vistble or audible wear perceptible; original finish intact.

E (Excellent): Surface noise low, smooth, unless the surface noise low, s form. Not irregular or crackling. Easily dis-regarded in listening. No perceptible distor-regarded in instelling.

V (Very Good): Surface notse somewhat more prominent; light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting.

slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting.

G (Good): A moderate amount of surface noise; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion; on the whole reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention. Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music.

F. (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music, and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory.

P (Poor): Foreign noises, collectively, are louder than the recorded music; continuous concentration is required, and there is little satisfaction in listening.

Column 4 of the "For Disposition" section shows the method by which each record is to be dis-

"SAL": The record is for sale at the price indicated

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only, If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list, If you have certain records in which he may be tnterested, mention these in your letter. The extreme right column in both the "Wanted" "For Disposition" sections shows the first four letters of the advertiser's name. His address is shown below.

CLOSING DATE FOR BIDS
On all Records advertised for auction in this issue will be JUNE 20, 1949
UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED

NOTE:

All persons using the medium of the Record Changer in the buying, selling or trading of phonograph records, do so subject to these Rules and Regulations:

 A collector or person who solicits and receives advance remittance for a record must send the record within a period of four weeks.

 A collector or person who orders and receives a record prepaid must pay for it within a period of four weeks.

3. A eollector or person who obtains a record in trade must fulfill his end of the trade within a period of four weeks.

4. A collector or person who requests that a record be shipped C.O.D. must accept the shipment unless the shipment is damaged in transit. (A bid on an auction or an order from a sale which states that records will be shipped C.O.D. unless otherwise instructed, is considered a request for C.O.D. shipment.)

The name of the person or collector who violates the above rules will be printed in the Record Changer upon the first violation, and the violation will be described. (Exception: where breakage or over-grading is concerned, the record is to be returned promptly to the shipper. If the parties involved do not arrive at a settlement, the matter is to be referred to the American Record Collectors Board.)

INDEX to JAZZ

Are Still Available

No other publication shows data on more Afro-American jazz and blues recording groups.

INDEX TO JAZZ gives you the dope on jazz records where you can find it. No messing around with secret codes, etc. You turn the page and you see the words. The four volumes of the INDEX contain data on more than 20,000 records.

The price of Vol. No. 3 and No. 4 is $1.00 each. You may order them from:

As Always, Fairest Prices.

Ten years ago, almost to the day as I sit in my easy chair and marvel at what's happened in that short time, there were two albums on the market that any self-respecting jazz fan might have on his shelf—and some of the sterner element would cut that down to one. That one, of course, was the Bessie Smith memorial album issued by the old Columbia company, while it was a subsidiary of the American Recording Corporation. The other was the Victor Bix album.

No record company had ever thought of making an album of new records for the jazz public. In fact, there were precious few records being cut strictly for the jazz fan, and two years earlier you could have said safely that there were none.

safely that there were none.

It was the time of Louis, Bessie, Duke, Bix, the Henderson alumni, and the Chicagoans. A year before, Jelly Roll Morton had been an unfamiliar and amusing name to all but a handful of madmen who seemed to like his old Victor records. King Oliver Okehs were just winning recognition, although hardly anyone had them, and only a few of the rabid knew that Louis was on more than half a dozen Clarence Williams Blue Five's.

I don't think the Chicagoans ever had a wider following than they did then—percentagewise among the jazz fans, at least. Tesch was one of the gods—though not many of today's kids have heard his records at all, it seems to me. Milt Gabler, a strong latter-day friend of the old Chicago crowd, had cut his first Commodore records to give Condon, Freeman, and the boys working at Nick's a great boost.

At that time I spent whole days poring through the marvelous collection of Marshall Stearns at 20 Lake Place, a brisk walk from my campus room in New Haven. In our shman year, Jerry King, an Ellington fiend with more Bix records than I knew existed, was always going there, too. We were at Stearns's for everything but mail, meals, and laundry.

H. Million

Miller

Jerry King came from Youngstown, Ohio, which was also the home of one of the earlier and more rabid Chicagoan addicts, John Treudley, whose untimely death cost the collecting fraternity one of its finest members. It was inevitable that I, who was sold on Tesch shortly after UHCA reissued his records in 1937, should start corresponding with King's friend, Treudley.

Out of these letters, and inspired by the enterprise of the first Commodore records, Treudley got the idea of making up for the lack of adequate documentation on records of what Panassie had dubbed "Chicago style"."

It seemed, in 1939, that the moment was none too soon. We were young then—I was just finishing up my sophomore year, and Treudley couldn't have been more than three years older—and men like Condon, Muggsy,

*Forget about the arguments on this term—anyone with a minimum ability for analysis can hear "Chicago style" neatly isolated on five or six records or less.

a personal history of the decca chicago jazz album

Pee Wee, Wettling, Sullivan, and the Mac-Partlands seemed old to us. They were well into their thirties, and nobody knew for sure in those Bunk Johnson-less days how long jazz musicians could keep playing well. We regarded them in the same light as we did ball-players, and we feared the worst.

Watching them at the bar made us wonder if it was only a matter of months before some of them would be gone. I remember one musician walking down Tenth Street from Nick's to Julius's. He would stagger up against the building on the north side of the sidewalk, stagger across into a parked car, then back against the building. How he found the tiny door to Julius's I don't know, except that instinct must have taken over. Pee Wee Russell was another object of worry, but I found out soon enough that Pee Wee is going to outlast us all, and I'll bet unborn generations of college kids will marvel as we did that Pee Wee is still playing.

Treudley's idea was to give Chicago style one more fling on records before the boys who knew how it was done were too old to show the world. He set it down on paper—three hand-picked bands to record two 10-inch and two 12-inch sides apiece in the old tradition. Chicago style, the most vital music ever played by white musicians, would live again on these sides.

John Treudley was no visionary putting his thoughts into letters just to amuse himself. He sent the plan to Milt Gabler, but it was too expensive for Milt to tackle. A few days after, John was sitting around with his family late one night in Youngstown, having a beer, when There'll Be Some Changes Made came sifting faintly over the radio. Try as he could, John couldn't tune it in loud enough to hear much more than enough to convince him that he was listening to a hell of a great band. Between fades, he caught an announcer's reference to George Brunies, and he realized he was listening to Muggsy Spanier's newly-formed Ragtime Band, broadcasting over a local Chicago station.

The same night Treudley wrote me to try to do something about The Plan with one of the major companies. Muggsy had Brunies and the legendary Rod Cless with him in Chicago, and Bud Freeman was opening at Nick's in New York with a band including Condon and Pee Wee. It was the time at which the most could be accomplished with the least trouble, using these two set groups as a starting point.

I felt that Steve Sholes, a good friend of jazz at Victor (he had worked with Panassie on the Mezzrow records and the Bluebird reissues of that spring) was the man to talk to. Steve liked the idea, and within a few weeks announced that Victor would do a session with each of the two bands on a trial basis, but that was all. There was no chance of making a real Chicago revival out of the dates, but at least the two most promising bands were going to get recorded.

It was good news, but disappointing as well. Treudley and I still wanted to see someone make Chicago style re-creations. I think it was Treudley who came up with the logical solution—that the idea was really an album package, and who better to approach of two or three albums a week?

My letter to Decca brought an invitation from Dave Kapp to come to New York and discuss the plan. It seemed to be fate—I had just been growing a mustache, and I felt a lot more confident about meeting a vicepresident with a mustache to make me look older than my bare 20.

Dave Kapp sized up me and the idea, and turned me over to Bob Stephens for the actual preparation. Bob and I went over the details, and decided to cut first with the bunch at Nick's as a starter, with the other two dates for Chicago.

Victor recorded the Freeman Band early in July, but the results were a lot politer than what I was after. Since it was Condon with whom I had been talking about the Chicago revival idea, Eddie was to act as leader for the Decca album's first session. The band, as has been noted, was under Bud Freeman's nominal direction, although it was actually a co-operative organization. Its sub-title, the Summa Cum Laude Orchestra, was a smart sobriquet dreamed up by manager Ernie Anderson (who felt that the boys were post-graduates in the jazz school), and it gave the group more tone with the college and intellectual crowd that dug it at Nick's and its first Friday Club jazz sessions.

One change was definitely made for the session from the regular line-up: Joe Sullivan, the original pianist of the old Chicago discs, was in town, fresh from a recovery in a Los Angeles sanatorium. A good break for the album developed when Dave Tough came out of temporary retirement to replace Al Sidell, who had played drums on the Bluebird date. So the session was set for late July with Condon, Sullivan, and Tough in the rhythm section, and a front line consisting of Max Kaminsky, Pee Wee Russell, and Bud Freeman. Floyd O'Brien blew into town with Gene Krupa's Band, but before he could be nailed down for the date, Decca had to postpone it to August 11, and Floyd was leaving town by then.

Condon, who had refused to dig out his four-string banjo for this date ("It went out with the mackinaw"), held out for adding Clyde Lombardi on bass and Brad Gowans on trombone in order to fill out the ensemble sound of the group. The tunes were picked and Eddie and I went over the "Chicago" session—the ensemble first endings, the "explosions," the treatment of the piano solos, the final ensembles.

Only one worry remained. Dave Tough was in and out of the band every other night, and no one knew when he might retire again. George Wettling and Zutty Singleton were filling in for him on the job, and it was Zutty who hung around a phone on the day of the date until Dave was actually in the studio and set up to play.

Treudley, who planned his vacation every York, was a happy visitor to the studio that day. I think it was one of the easiest dates I've ever watched. The first three sides were cut just like that—two takes each on Changes Made and Friar's Point Shuffle, and Nobody's Sweetheart was cut once without even a run-through for time. The last side was Some Day Sweetheart, and the first take ran over, so rather than cut anybody's solo out, Eddie got the idea of reducing the opening ensemble to the first four

I have always liked this session, and I guess it's my favorite in this album. Perhaps it's because it was the first of the hundred or so I've handled since. For me, it was a snap—once the boys were there and knew what to do, Bob Stephens took over and I just sat back and enjoyed the date. Dave Tough was never better, and Max Kaminsky, I think, played the best horn he has ever recorded on this session.

How did the boys take to following the "Chicago style" instructions? They didn't mind at all, and as with all the groups in the album, they rather liked it. They seemed pleased and proud of the whole thing.

The next step was to be Muggsy's band, but there was some question as to whether Victor had an option on him after the band cut for Bluebird in Chicago in July. I was planning to drive out to California with Stearns within 10 days after the Condon date, and I intended to work on the idea of recording Muggsy and a hand-picked group recording Muggsy and a hand-picked group under Jimmy MacPartland as I passed through Chicago. The MacPartland band would include his brother Dick, Boyce Brown, Bud Jacobson, Jim Lanigan, and probably Earl Wiley, with Frank Melrose or Dave North on piano. It looked as though Floyd O'Brien, George Wettling, and Jess Stacy might be left out, although we were Stacy might be left out, although we were hoping to get them into the album somehow.

As I write all this, it may sound as though everything was scheduled very neatly, but the plan actually was in constant flux as musicians travelled and changed jobs from day to day. There was even a time when the album was going to pay its respects to Louis Armstrong by including at least a couple of sides cut in Chicago with Louis, Earl Hines, the Dodds brothers, and maybe Preston Jackson, Mancy Cara, and Johnny Lindsay or Suttie Reynard.

That idea was soon sidetracked as a cityby-city series of albums began to develop in the minds of Boh Stephens and myself. The Armstrong date logically turned into plans for a New Orleans album, to be followed by Kansas City and New York albums. The veterans of the Memphis, Five and the Five Pennies were to form the nucleus for the latter set.

In Chicago, Stearns and I stayed at the Hotel Sherman, where Muggsy's band was alternating with Fats Waller's Rhythm. It was a rare treat, and we spent every possible moment at the Panther Room listening to the boys.

Muggsy, it developed, was playing footie with Victor for more recordings, and the sales of the first two records were to determine the future status of the band. So I concentrated on setting up a MacPartland date. That was nice work, since it also involved a Monday night at Squirrel Ashcraft's with the boys.

The MacPartland date went off in Chicago under Bob Stephens while I was back at classes in New Haven in October. O'Brien missed it, so there was no trombone. At the last minute, Jimmy had to fill the piano and drum spots with boys from his own band. It was still a good date, and most of the people commenting on the album to me have said it was the best session of the three.

The last session almost wasn't. Muggsy came to New York for the historic run opposite the Freeman band at Nick's. That was a gay old time for us Village regulars, and the Freeman band, which had gone in heavily for manuscript during the summer,

A few minutes ago I shut my eyes and let my mind carry me back—back to the night of February 29, 1929, when I dropped in at 29th and Dearborn to hear Bessie Smith shouting the blues with Louis Armstrong and his Back O' Town Boys . . .

I had never heard this particular group before, never heard it again in fact, and never will now—now that the Empress and Mr. Jelly Lord are no longer with us. Yes, Jelly-Roll Morton himself was at the piano, making very good his boast of being the boss of the stomps. (The band was just beginning King Porter when I walked in and just finishing Sugar Foot when, four and a half hours later, unable to take any more, I stumbled out again.) This was the only time I ever caught Louis and Jelly together. (Somehow they never made the same record date.) It was a thing beautiful as Pontchartrain, joyous as Milneburg!

Pops Foster was there with his tuba and his big bass viol, blowing and bowing by turns. (Five days afterward he cut his first recording with Armstrong, that Lulu, Mahogany Hall.) The rest of the bunch were all longtime sidekicks of Louis: Bechet on clarinet and soprano, Ory on trombone, Scott on guitar and banjo, Singleton on drums. (Armstrong had made Coal Cart with Sidney in 1925, Muskrat with the Kid in 1926, Wild Man with Bud in 1927, and West End with Zutty in 1928.) Lord, wasn't that a band?

It was like Rampart Street during Mardi Gras; between King Porter and Sugar Foot came an even dozen great numbers greatly performed—about fifteen minutes to each tune, four to a set, with fifteen-minute intermissions. The first group included a spiritual and a sinful song, a march and a rag, unwittingly establishing an ideal foundation for all that was to follow. Armstrong sang the Saints with the whole band responding call-and-answer fashion, then Ory likewise on Eh La Bas. Bechet played twenty choruses of High Society, after which Morton paced them all through Maple Leaf. The second set, opening with Ory's Savoy and closing with Morton's Wolverine, was nothing but the blues. There in all her glory was Bessie, doing Saint Louis and Careless Love just as she had with Louis four years before—but better! The third and last quartet demonstrated, if only unconsciously, the evolution of the dancetwostep, shimmy, charleston, and black bottom. First Jelly sang Ballin' The Jack, then came Louis with his own Sister Kate, then Bud Scott and Don't Forget To Mess Around, finally Black Bottom Stomp. This last represented jazz quintessential, wholly instrumental and utterly improvised—the solos tremendous, the ensembles incredible!

What made it all so incomparable was the fact that every man was then in his prime. Armstrong was still fresh from his Hot Five and Hot Seven days, Scott and Ory from theirs with Oliver. Bechet, ten years earlier the sensation of Paris and twenty years later the toast of New York, was right and ready as ever. Morton had twenty months yet left of his Red Hot Peppers: Foster was to join him that November, Singleton that December. Individually all seven were superb, collectively if possible even better. Their music was truly that of the all-time all-stars of jazz. You never heard anything like it . . .

Certainly I never did, for when I opened my eyes again I came to with a crash like October and my days of depression were upon me. I reached for the Almanac and found that 1929—the end of the golden age —was no leap year at all. It was only a dream!

"But, dear-how can you say you don't like her, when you haven't even heard her!"

DIZZY GILLESPIE

BOB WEINSTOCK

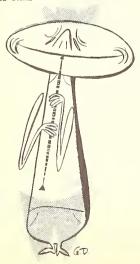

It may come as a surprise to some people that Dizzy has recorded as much as people that Dizzy has recorded as much as this indicates; but he was great before fame overtook him, so now everyone can have a ball finding evidence of what was there all the time, although probably not even Dizzy knew about it. At any rate, here it all is—the itemized progress of bop's Louis Armstrong, and how he grew. It's safe to say that he had at least as much influence on the hands he played with as influence on the bands he played with as they had on him, even before the famous Minton's period.

I don't know whether anyone actually has a complete Gillespie collection or not, but if one is to exist the collector had better start hunting. It's a lot later than you think.

"As far as I am concerned, there are only two kinds of music. One is European music, the white man's classics. The other is ragtime, the Negro's classics."

The speaker was that grand old man of jazz, Sidney "Pops" Bechet, who last month reaped new honors by receiving the annual Newspaper Guild's Award for "truly creative musicianship" in the field of Popular Music.

My acquaintance with Sidney is not a recent one. It dates, in fact, from the days of Nick Rongetti (of "Nick's"), and has survived the vicissitudes to which most musical friendships are subject, including his latest, or Tallulah Bankhead, period. That his opinions on music are not more generally known to the public does not surprise me. Few living jazz musicians have attained as much celebrity having revealed so little personally. This situation results largely from his almost pathological reluctance to discuss Sidney. Not that he has anything to conceal, for he can be exceptionally articulate when the spirit moves him. The truth is, as I have long since concluded, that "Pops" lives so completely in a world of the musical moment that nothing else really matters. This absorption with musical events is best expressed in his frequent statement:

o do is play like myself." ork about ragtime, quoted outgrowth of his comments present-day jazz: or musicians are confused.

"All I want to do is play like myself."

Sidney's remark about ragtime, quoted above, was an outgrowth of his comments on the state of present-day jazz:

"Today, young musicians are confused. When I was young, the problem was much simpler. In those days, there was just one kind of music, and that was ragtime. Today, everyone is trying to promote some brand of his own. Consequently, young musicians who take up jazz hardly know which way to turn.'

These views take on added interest when you consider the fact that Sidney was the discoverer of the great Bessie Smith. It could be argued, I suppose, that no one really discovered Bessie. Literally speaking, she discovered herself, as gifted individuals have always been obliged to do. However, Sidney was the first prominent jazz musician to assist her in winning recognition, and it is clear that he deserves the credit for having "discovered" her in the conventional sense of the word.

Sidney met Bessie for the first time in Washington, while he was on tour with the musical show, "How Come," which he had joined following his return from Europe in 1922. In those days, Bessie was still unknown, and the incident represents a hitherto undisclosed chapter in the famous singer's early life. When the show's engagement ended, Sidney, much impressed with Bessie's burgeoning talents, induced her to return to New York. Sometime afterward, in an effort to secure her a chance to record, he introduced her to his old friend Clarence Williams, then actively engaged in turning out Blue Fives.

As a result of this meeting, Bessie made her first test cutting for Okeh, accompanied by Sidney on clarinet, Clarence on piano, and Buddy Christian on banjo. The number was Sister Kate. As nearly as Sidney can recall, the product of this session was never released. In the words of an Okeh executive (who thereby achieved a dubious, if anonymous, kind of immortality), the company "had too many blues singers already." Here, then, is an item of rare interest to record collectors, if some enterprising soul has the luck to find it. (A note to eager collectors: According to Columbia, there is nothing in the Okeh files to indicate that there ever was such a record date. In all probability, the session was merely an audition, and the "record" made of it has undoubtedly long since been destroyed or thrown away.—Ed.)

Our conversation with Bechet then gravitated to one of his more recent protégés, Bob Wilber, youthful exponent of Sidney's specialty, the soprano sax. Pressed for an opinion on the reports of Bob's growing independence, Sidney indicated that the young man had not disappointed any of his earlier predictions.

"After all," he observed, "while most people may not know it, Wilber is not the first young person I've influenced. Years ago, Jimmie Noone and others modeled their early styles on mine. The point is, once they really learned to play, they asserted their individuality, developing distinctive styles of their own. I myself learned to play by patterning my work after "Big Eye" Louis Nelson. In fact, Nelson gave me my first formal instruction on the clarinet. After I had learned the rudiments from him. I had to learn the rest for myself. That's what every young person has to do."

At this reference to his musical beginnings, I asked Sidney what early events stood out, in retrospect, most clearly in his mind.

"Well," he answered, "you know, my whole family was musical. My father, who was a shoemaker by trade, used to play trumpet, and my mother, while not a musician herself, did much to encourage our interest in music.

"There were seven of us, five boys and two girls. All my brothers played one or more instruments. When we were still very young, my mother used to take us to the opera. In those days, it was the best classical music available, and my mother wanted us to become acquainted with it."

In view of the provincialism affected by many young musicians today, it should be emphasized that Sidney's early respect for the European classics has not diminished.

Bechet

To this day, whenever he is free to do so, he freely admits, he enjoys attending an opera or a concert. There is nothing inconsistent about this. It is true that the classics were alien in spirit to the music early jazz musicians sought to play. Nevertheless, as Sidney himself has pointed out, there is little question that the classics, by their example, did much to inspire the quality of execution for which New Orleans musicians have long been celebrated.

"The first band I played in was a family group, composed of my brothers and myself. Joseph played guitar; Albert, violin; Homer, bass; Leonard, trombone; and of course, I played clarinet. I also gained experience working with a group of older men headed by Sugar Johnny."

At about this point, it seems, determined efforts were made to induce Sidney to learn some useful trade; at first bricklaying, and then barbering, for in those days, there were few regular jobs for jazz musicians. However, these attempts were doomed to fail. As Sidney puts it:

"My mind was on other things."

Fortunately for "Pops," at about this time there came an invitation from Bunk Johnson to join the Eagle Band, a group made up of members of Buddy Bolden's former organization. In "Jazzmen," Bunk described how the proposition had to be cleared with Mrs. Bechet. Because of her son's extreme youth, her consent was secured only after Bunk agreed to escort Sidney home at the end of each night's engagement.

"I played with the Eagle Band until about 1912. Then my feet began to itch, and for the next few years, I traveled all through the South. I wasn't the first man to leave New Orleans either, although the way some people talk, you'd think we all sat and waited for Storyville to close.

"Of course, during those years, I still played clarinet. How I changed to the so-prano sax is a story you really ought to include. It has been told before, but never correctly. Why, people have even said I invented the soprano by bending an alto by hand!

"The first time that I got interested in the sax was back around 1914, when Clarence Williams and I toured through Texas with Louis Wade. Louis played piano, I played clarinet, and Clarence sang. Much of the time, we plugged early numbers that Clarence had written, numbers that everyone knows today. We played every kind of date, dances, shows, and one-night stands. We even played in ten cent stores to sell sheet music.

"It wasn't until some years later, in the winter of 1918, in Chicago, that I acquired my first sax. Before that, I had, of course, heard an early Brown Brothers' recording featuring the saxophone. Then, one day when I was passing, a pawn-shop, I noticed a battered alto in the window. On an impulse, I bought it—for $20.00."

For the next several months, Sidney explored the possibilities of this instrument.

At last, growing dissatisfied with its tone and lack of carrying power, he repledged it with the pawn-shop proprietor, for $15.00. Sometime later, in a somewhat quixotic moment, he gave the pawn ticket to Darnell Howard, who, so the story goes, lost no time in redeeming it for himself.

"Actually, it wasn't until 1919 that I heard my first soprano sax. That was in London, when I was being featured with William Marion Cooke's band at the Philharmonic."

Pleased with its performance, Sidney promptly bought one. Since that time he has blown out a number of soprano saxes, precisely how many he cannot say. His present horn, the most satisfactory one to date, was obtained from Buster Bailey, and has been in almost constant service for the past dozen years.

It was during this same London engagement that Sidney became acquainted with Ernest Ansermet, the noted Swiss conductor, whose foresighted appraisal of jazz some thirty years ago represents a highwater temperament. Ansermet was also one of the protagonists of modern European music. From 1914 on, he was closely associated with Stravinsky. In the same year that Ansermet met Sidney, Stravinsky composed a piece called "Ragtime," about which he has written:

"Its dimensions are modest, but it is indicative of the passion I felt at that time for jazz, which burst into my life so suddenly when the war ended."

Stravinsky later composed another number: Piano Rag Music. Curiously, Sidney did not hear the latter composition until 1938, when I happened to play for him a recording that Stravinsky had lately made for Columbia. I remember the event, for Sidney had been at work for some time on a jazz concerto of his own, and was much interested in Stravinsky's experiments with the jazz idiom.

Sidney's friendship with Ansermet has endured to the present day. Last fall in Chicago, when Ansermet paid a visit to mark in early jazz criticism. It has not been fully recognized that Ansermet's impressions followed from the fact that he came almost nightly to hear Sidney play, and often visited him backstage between shows. It should be recalled that Sidney was the first important New Orleans jazz musician to venture overseas. Today, of course, such trips have become a commonplace.

Asked about Ansermet, Sidney replied, after considerable thought:

"Ansermet is a musician!"

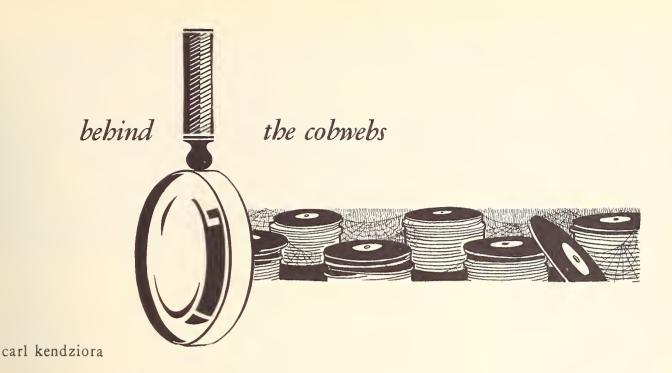

For the benefit of jazz lovers who may not be acquainted with Ansermet's formidable talents, it should be noted that Sidney's opinion is wholeheartedly shared by Toscanini, who is always present whenever Ansermet rehearses the NBC symphony, notwithstanding their obvious differences in Jazz Ltd. to hear "Pops" play, one of the subjects discussed was the possibility of Sidney appearing with Ansermet in a concert at some future date. . . .

In response to a request for further comments on current events in the jazz world, in particular for his views on be-bop, Sidney grew reflective. At last, he spoke:

"Be-bop? Why it's the best thing that ever happened to jazz! I mean that. After all, be-bop has caught the attention of a whole lot of people who never had any previous interest in jazz. When they get tired of be-bop, they'll discover the real jazz for themselves.

"But to my way of thinking, a musician is a fool to take up be-bop. Instead of keeping up with the times, he'd be much better off to keep up with his music!"

The mail is beginning to come in a bit faster now, so let's first cover the information sent in by readers. Here's more on the Operaphone 31161 (Blacksmith Rag—Alabama Jazz Band) which we mentioned in the May column. A card from Robert Mc-Garvey informs us that he has also noted the tailgate on the disc and that, for even better work, he has Slim Trombone by the Jazzaza Jazz Band on Operaphone 31107 which has the best tailgate he ever heard and which, in his opinion, even sounds like early Ory! McGarvey also states that there is a remarkable off beat bass drum in the back which sounds more like a tom tom. Then Bill Stamm also writes about a pair of titles by the Jazzaza Jazz Band on Operaphone 31110. The coupling is At the Jazz Band Ball and Alcoholic Blues. Bill can't give any details about the musical content since he got the data from a sale list and doesn't have the record himself. This brings to mind the idea of trying to investigate the Operaphone catalog with the possibility of turning up an "item" or two. Will anyone with any titles and band names for any other Operaphone issues please send in the data?

Paul B. Sheatsley confirms our suspicion, voiced in the May column, that the Kansas City Five's Dark Gal Blues (31827)/Get It Fixed (31831) on Perfect and Pathe, is also on Ajax. The Ajax number is 17128. Paul agrees with Index to Jazz, which calls these a Bob Fuller group.

Ed Crowder has dumped a controversy right in our laps: one which will put our readers to the test. It seems that Ed and Happy Ruggles have been debating for two years on the identity of the sax soloist on the Arcadian Serenaders' You Gotta Know How (9409)/Angry (9414) on Ok 40517. Ed claims that the sax is Frankie Trumbauer, and he is backed up by Bud Hassler, who played sax in Tram's band at the Arcadia in St. Louis; Carl Karbach, vicepresident of the St. Louis Musicians Union, who played with Tram around St. Louis; band on the road for two years and is one of his closest friends. They all say it is positively Trumbauer, but Tram himself wrote Happy and stated he's not on the record. Mr. Crowder is a close follower of Trumbauer and heard his band around St. Louis (before he became famous) at least three times a week. So Ed has heard plenty of Trumbauer and wants to know who it could be if it isn't Tram. Since the three men backing Ed up were Tram's closest imitators and yet maintain it is Tram and not any of them, he seems to have a case. Can anyone be of help in this matter?

This label was a member of the Paramount pool along with National, Puritan, Claxtonola, Triangle, Broadway etc. The particular one we used last month was Harmograph 2539 which couples The Dark-Town Flapper's Ball (1338) and Triffin' Blues (1339) sung by Gladys Bryant accompanied by Porter Grainger and Bob Ricketts on pianos.

Grainger and Bob Ricketts on pianos.

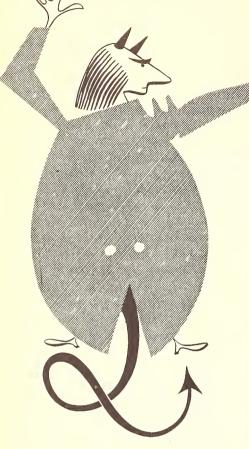

Another possible Whoopee Maker item has turned up. On Cameo 9105 we find Audition Blues (3705) as played by Bob Haring and his Orchestra, with the composer credit going to one George Terry. There are solos on alto, clarinet, and both open and muted trumpet. The open horn could possibly be McPartland and the clarinet, although not sounding particularly like Goodman, is not indisputedly not Benny. Any opinions?

We ran across two fine reissues on the Gothic label the other day and thought they'd be worth mentioning, as they represent some of the best early white jazz. Both are on red vinylite. Gothic 509 couples Wolverine Blues and Weary Blues by the New Orleans Rhythm Kings from Ge 5102, while Gothic 510 couples Dipper Mouth Blues and Panama by Johnnie Miller's New Orleans Boys, with Sharkey Bonano and Sidney Arodin, from Co 1546-D.

Another oddity which is worthy of investigation is Ok 4310 which is by Tim Brynn and his Black Devil Orchestra. One side is Wang Wang Blues and the reverse is a tune which has eluded us so far. The label on this side is identical with the other side and so nothing can be obtained from it. This is interesting early jazz. It's not a great record, but worthy of attention, and there's a good clarinet to be heard on it. A check of the record number on Arnold Stilwell's fine record dating chart gives us 1921 as the approximate date for the item.

In the October 1948 issue of this magazine a Chick Bullock record—I Can't Get Mississippi Off My Mind (10770)/You Rascal You (10769)—Pe 15506—was listed

dear my Lord, is the immediate jewel of their souls:" is indeed a jewel. For the lyric theatre, however, it was the recital of Cassio's Dream, "Era la notte, Cassio dormia, gli stavo accanto" which, as insinuated into the writhing Tamagno's ear by the smirking Maurel, reduced the audience to worshipping jelly and revealed the Star System in its true dimensions.

On two successive Saturdays early this Spring, NBC broadcast and televised Toscanini's Aida. Yes, I said Toscanini's Aida, not Verdi's. If the composer's shade was in attendance it was entirely unwelcome, for the frenzies of boisterous applause were directed not to the singers of the leading roles nor to the chorus nor even to the orchestral players. It could not be for the costumes nor the stage-management, for this was an oratorio setting with the principals bobbing up to declaim their lines and sitting down immediately they were finished a la Punch & Judy. No, the horrible carnival of whooping and hollering was for one solitary little man; the same solitary little man who had throughout the exhibition transfixed and cowed and tortured the pitiful nonentities before him on the stage—having previously dashed them to pieces through endless rehearsals in full voice that he might obscure the ravaged remnants of their utterant powers with his displays of precision in orchestral fortissimo!

To be sure, the world owns better singers than those who underwent this ordeal, but it is reasonable to surmise that, being better singers, they would not jeopardize their resource in the employ of this mighty Myth whose conception of operatic presentation remains the same thing that it was four decades ago: a stone wall of resistance to any personality but his own.

I charge that the Myth is afraid of singers! He lives in terror of everything and everybody concerned with opera, lest one day a job of singing be brought off for what it is and should be, whereupon the Myth will go up in smoke.

There have been and are other achievements; there have been and are other reputations—but, as for the present, the mass mind has been conditioned to accept but one supremity, and he is a pretender. The legerdemain has been carried through with such a degree of success that an atmosphere is created ready-to-hand: an atmosphere which says, "This—is God's Big Brother!"

Yes, the Heritage Series seems to be done for. The interest is there but the price per disc was prohibitive and the promotion left almost everything to be desired. A radio program devoted to records made by vocal giants of the past is carrying on quite successfully and its originator last winter managed to fill a good-sized concert-hall twice, at $2.40 per chair, with good folk who were willing to leave their homes, brave the elements and pay their good money to hear good singing via superannuated recordings. Such is the public's loyalty to its fond memories.

If there are records you wish to obtain and they are available only on importation from Eire, it is nice to know someone who knows someone who flies back and forth; otherwise you'll find yourself with quite a case on your hands.

Thanks to Mr. A. J. Franck of International Records Agency, whose feats are as mystifying as his business methods are eminently honorable, I am in possession of as delectable a parcel of Irish pressings as ever left the auld sod. McCormack? But naturally! A few things that once, briefly, were available under l'ictor labels, others that have become deletions in England during the war, and each a delight to the Soul. The whole truth to tell, Irish pressings, despite their lovely physical sheen, seem to be lacking in the hissless perfection of their British counterparts, but no amount of cavilling will alter this and the hour grows late.

One of the couplings seems to have been especially difficult to procure: that of Panis Angelicus and La Procession. Since the former title is available (?) on domestic Victor, the British HMV issue could not clear the Customs. But the notion of being without La Procession could not be entertained either, since that title is unknown to American catalogs, despite the acclaim which always greeted Mr. McCormack's delivery of the song. At any rate, the record is here now (IRX.26) and mirabile dictu the Panis Angelicus is not the one we know here at all, at all. The European issue is with organ,

Emma Eames' artistic ideals concerning singing and acting in opera were and are of the highest and she was and is firmly convinced that Italian opera requires, as a prime element of its glory, the Star System in casting the principal singing roles. In essaying her reasons for retirement from the Metropolitan roster in 1909, Mme. Eames wrote that Arturo Toscanini's conducting was ". . . a stone wall of resistance to any personality but his own." Others in the company at that time felt much the same way, although they were not so voluble in conviction. One other Star proclaimed herself as such in rehearsal but was silenced by the maestro's dictum that "the stars are in heaven—here we are artists, good or bad—Signorina, you are a bad artist."

In the field of instrumental virtuosity it may be recalled that one of the Titans who

In the field of instrumental virtuosity it may be recalled that one of the Titans who refused to knuckle under and hence made no appearance with Toscanini was Rachmanin-off. The pianist's differences with the conductor were two-fold: as soloist and as performer of his own compositions.

Let us examine the situation further, from the composer's standpoint. Bellini surely conceived his cruelly florid music for Star singers of the most agile attainments. Mozart, in his Italian operas, most certainly did not have vocal ninnies in mind. Puccini asked for three separate climaxes in a single aria, Vissi d'arte, (and thus earned Mme. Eames' opprobrium). And Verdi! Do you for a moment suppose that his lavishly provided arias were written with an eye on the podium? Were his instructions to librettist Boîto such that Shakespeare's Othello was to be glorified, or that the utmost was to be done for the benefit of Francesco Tamagno and Victor Maurel? In the play the speech beginning, "Good name in man and woman,

Castle Jazz Band

Loveless Love Sweet Georgia Brown

The best semi-pro jazz band in the land does it again with four corking sides. Does it again, did I say? Hell, these are better than the last batch!

Granted that Sweet Georgia Brown and maybe Original Dixieland are too fast, it's still a remarkable session. Castle's recording seems to improve as time goes on, too. This batch is up to the standard of any independent.

Where this gang gets its punch, I'm not sure. One suspects that a saliva test might be in order, because seven gents named Jose from Oregon have no business playing jazz like this. It's clean without being too scrubbed, and even though it's derivative as hell—as what good jazz isn't these days—the boys have that wide-eyed quality that helps explain it to some extent. These guys just don't know that they have no business playing jazz, so like the unscientific humming bird, they just go ahead and fly.

high fact, so find the discretifine maintains bird, they just go ahead and fly.

As so often happens, there's one side that's better than the rest. In this case, it's Loveless Love, and if you don't keep this one up on the turntable, then you haven't been a Changer subscriber long enough.

Everything seems to be perfect about this one. The tempo, for instance, is so right that it brings tears to strong men's eyes. One might say, with justice, that almost any tempo is right for this great tune, but here it seems righter than any other time, especially for this gang. The rhythm section shows that it can really get a relaxed beat (something you can't prove by the other titles) and the ensemble work is so superb that if you don't know the cakewalk you'll be a master before the last chorus is half over. There's a very cute and effective coda which is like a master's spotting of a maraschino on the whipped cream. It had to be done perfectly or else, and the boys did it perfectly.

There are no heroes in this band, which is one of the best things about it. Every man is damn good, and the improvement in some of the veterans is very reassuring. Monte Ballou, I assume, sings Sugar Blues (there's no credit on the label), but except on this side you're scarcely aware of soloists as such. And that Loveless Love is just too

I hope that my opening remark about a "semi-pro" band is going to get shoved aside by somebody. What's the band doing now? It should work at least three times a week somewhere, even though the chances are that its fifty faithful followers will go broke in the process.

Well, anyway, you just get that Loveless Love and love it, that's all. (Castle 5, 6)

Tony Parenti's Ragpickers

Cataract Rag The Entertainer's Rag Nonsense Rag Redhead Rag Crawfish Crawl The Lily Rag

This seems to be Ragtime Week at Circle and that's all right with me, for though ragtime certainly fell within the recording era there are, aside from a few piano solos, no pure examples of that almost forgotten art which had such an effect not only on America but on the whole world. Nor was it limited to the piano; it was even introduced to Europe via the old John Philip Sousa band. A while back Circle introduced Tony Parenti and his Ragtime Band, a seven-piece unit which recorded many of the purest examples of that highly original music. But exciting as those records were, they sound pale to me alongside of the closely knit texture of this trio composed of Tony Parenti, Ralph Sutton and George Wettling.

I'm all for this kind of music and I wish we could have more of it. Circle's Ragtime Concert, which I had the misfortune to miss, was really something if my spies are to be trusted, and they usually are. It would be wonderful indeed if that concert could travel to other cities, or broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up, for this is not only wonderful music to listen to but a really important slice of Americana. But barring that, it's good to have albums like this.

GEO.

And I think one of the best things is that these records have no ghosts to haunt them and thus have a real freshness. Ragtime was a separate thing from Jazz, though Jazz borrowed something from ragtime, and now the shoe is on the other foot. In this newest revival much of Jazz is being carried over into ragtime, which is all to the good. Ragtime is gay and happy and what I like about these records is that the players sound as though they were having a hell of ball making these six sides. I think you'll have a ball listening to them. Ralph Sutton: St. Louis Piano

Dill Pickles

St. Louis Blues

Whitewash Man Carolina in the Morning

If there is a better piano player around these parts than Ralph Sutton I have yet to hear him. There may be some who could cut him one time, or others who look flashier to that strange breed of listeners who are so busy watching that they never, somehow, have time to use their ears, but for my money you can have them and I'll take Sutton—now, tomorrow, and from then on. Them's strong words, Buster, but I mean them.

Every now and then we hear the old argument about how the old Jazz is dead and we go on imitating the same old sounds in the same old way but get nowhere because the environment of the player of today is not the same as the environment of the oldtimers, and so on far into the night. Often that is true, but for my money (there isn't much of it the way I'm throwing it around here) this album knocks that theory bassackwards. And it does so for a very good reason. If Sutton wanted to play like Jelly, or Fats, or even your Aunt Ida he could do it and then everyone would say: Gee, ain't that wonderful, he sounds just like him. The only trouble is that Sutton wants to sound like Sutton; in fact I gather he's a little bit stubborn about it, the ungrateful wretch. And yet he always sounds, underneath, as though he had been born under an upright in some East St. Louis honky tonk, where he took on by a sort of lamination process-maybe the way old buildings take on years of cooking odors—everything that had ever been played on a jazz piano.

No, I know the guy couldn't be that good, but listen to these four sides. Play those two fine old rags—Dill Pickles and Whitewash Man—and as that wonderful stuff comes rolling out remember the Cat cartoon in this magazine a few months back where the man at the piano says, What, this old rag? Well, that's the way Sutton affects me; as though he could do it just as well with one hand tied behind his back; or, you say you don't use a walking bass in ragtime?—well Sutton does and he does it right here. And it sounds right, unless you are perhaps mouldier than I am and after all how mouldy can you get?

Or put on St. Louis Blues, and then Carolina in the Morning. This isn't just a sop for those who want to listen to something they know but the exciting proof of what Jazz can do for something that has been nearly killed by sweetness and light. And it's this thing, I think, that Sutton has to perfection, the way Jelly had it. Not only are both transformers, but they also have a change of pace that makes you look silly. Kid Ory has it, too. In simple words you go along until you have them sitting back in their seats and then you give them a nasty smear, or you play pretty until they think this guy sounds like he ought to be playing at the Plaza and then you do something that makes them damn well know you wouldn't be seen dead in that joint so they better pay attention.

And above all, Sutton has not only creative inventiveness but a technique that can keep up with it. In fact I think the guy is terrific, Anybody wanna fight? (Circle S-20, (B.M.)

Uptown there is a tidy little bistro which has long been a favorite spot of mine to drop in for a quiet drink. Though it lacks the usual frantic qualities of the uptown spots, I hasten to add that by this I do not mean that nothing happens there. Someone is usually playing one of the pianos, sometimes the help sings and during the war I seem to remember the best-looking female bartender in New York City. For all I know there may even have been performing seals, too.

What all this is leading up to is that sometimes the owner of the joint—a short, brown complexioned man—would sit down at the piano. His eyes gave him an almost sleepily oriental expression that somehow didn't seem to go with the rest of him, for he was powerfully built and had hands that seemed more fitted to a wrestler.

That man, of course, was the fabulous Lucky Roberts and I used to like to hear him play so well that I haunted the joint. The only trouble was that he would never play the music I wanted to hear. I think I asked him to play his famous Railroad Blues something like 3,675 times, and each 'time he'd be as obliging as hell but somehow it always turned out to be Moonlight Cocktail, another of his compositions which enjoyed a certain success. As a matter of fact I think I own the all-time record for listening to that banal little ditty.

When Circle sent me the almost completed notes which Kenneth Lloyd Bright had left behind him at his death and asked me to edit them they sent along the test pressings of these six wonderful sides, so at last I thought I had Lucky where I wanted him. But it turns out he had the last laugh for the first side I played was Ripples on the Nile. After you play it you will see what I mean

I happen to be a hog about piano music. I also happen to like the way Lucky plays a piano, though I will admit it is possibly, like olives, an acquired taste. For the Eastern Seaboard style is different, subtly different from New Orleans piano or the rugged Chicago rent party school of piano playing. It is, for one thing, nearer to pure ragtime and for another it has a certain sophistication, though I mistrust the word, no doubt due to its different environment. All I can tell you is to play these records over and over until the sounds seem less strange to your ears. When you do I think you will be richly rewarded. Hell, I even got so I liked to hear Moonlight Cocktail, for Lucky is a hell of a technician, and his influence on the whole Harlem school of piano players—

James P. Fats, Willie the Lion and even Duke Ellington—is readily apparent in these records. (Circle S-12. $3.95) (B.M.)

Kenny Clarke and His Clique

Roll 'em Bags You Go fo My Head

It is my contention that one of the most fertile minds in the inusic business belongs to Milt Jackson, in no small way the Lionel Hampton of bop. Like Hamp, he has extended his work on the vibes to include piano, which, again like Hamp, he plays in exactly the same manner—almost as if he were using mallets. Jackson is never dull; his personality strikes me as being a trifle weird, but coherence, apparently omitted from his personal make-up, is one of the strong points in his playing. You Go to My Head is one of the nicest things he's done, featuring him throughout and showing off his excellent taste, beat, and genuine origi-

There is an odd charm about Roll 'em Bags, possibly its relaxation and restraint, possibly the feeling of true nostalgia in the arranged parts; they're short, but they get under your skin. There is also a sense of the mixture of two eras, since, in a couple of places, there is no ostensible mocouple of places, there is no ostensible modernity—only moderate progressiveness, as it were. It's the usual 12-bar blues, jazzed up by the least Cubano conga man in the world, Joe Harris, and by the presence of Julius Watkins on French horn.

We are rapidly approaching the time when some joint will feature a real crazy little combo; clavichord, goathorn, Swiss bells, M'boko hand-clapping, and, for that full sound a Scotty recorder.

sound, a Scotty recorder.

Playing the old-fashioned trumpet on this side is Kenny Durham, who, many people believe, would be the best of them all, if he played more; he sounds pretty good to me. (Century 1501) (P.B.)

Terry Gibbs' New Jazz Stars T and S Terry's Tune

In a manner of speaking, this is almost a Herman unit, with a couple of outlanders thrown in—Shadow Wilson and the ubiquitous Curley Russell. T and S is listed as the A side, but an unfortunate surface spoils it pretty much, despite good work by Gibbs, Earl Swope, and one of my favorite tenor-men, Stan Getz.

Gibbs is, if anything, even more facile than Milt Jackson; I remember being amazed by him one night when he had just joined the Herman band, playing at a speed I would have thought impossible. He doesn't offer the intense feeling that Jackson does, but he is a remarkable musician.

I've always enjoyed Stan Getz's supple and pleasant style, which derives, like so many others, from Lester Young's; Stan is remarkably close to Lester in tone and ease of playing, and his stuff has an ingratiating unpretentiousness about it on this record, especially Terry's Tune.

Some rather mysterious piano by George Wallington (lately something of a celebrity, for his writing and arranging) suggests that solos are not his particular strength, and I don't hear as much of Shadow Wilson as I'd like. (New Jazz 800) (P.B.)

The Howard McGhee Boptet

The Skunk Boperation

It has become difficult to find a record not featuring Curley Russell on bass, so the fact that he's aboard all three of these is almost altogether fitting and proper.

This is the mate to the very successful Double Talk by the same group; the boys were in fine fettle that day, without a doubt, especially trumpeters McGhee and Navarro. By way of casually demonstrating their virtuosity, on Boperation they play a fantastically intricate unison part—toss it off like tically intricate unison part—toss it off like peeling a grape. There's something about the confidence and dash with which these men go about their work that makes me wonder where they're going to be two years from now (I may wonder idly where I'll be two years from now, too, but it's not the same thing), because the possibilities are pretty limited; the fact that, right now, McChee characteristics from the Market of the Market Ghee plays specialties in front of the Machito band may be the handwriting on the wall. Fats took a fling at a big band (Goodman), which was hardly a triumphant experience for him, and he has gone about as far as he can go with what's around him; it must be a bit disconcerting to stand on top of a heap and not find God waiting for you with outstretched hand.

I don't think either one has the instinctive savvy to make a go of his own group, as Dizzy did—neither is salesman enough to do it right. Maybe Bop City will give fel-lowships one of these days.

Back to the record: neither side is as exciting as Double Talk, but it's still a good job; The Skunk offers a really unique piano offort by Milt Jackson, and very cool, melodic solos by the aforementioned Messrs. McGhee and Navarro, who have some delightful breaks on the other side, as well. Just as was the case on Double Talk, it's sometimes hard to tell them apart.

in our Goodman Discography. Cornelius W. Hauck writes that he thought only Jimmy Dorsey was on clarinet and alto in this group, rather than both Benny and Jimmy being present. He backed up his ear with such facts as: he knows of no other instances of Goodhean appearing as a Parlied stances of Goodman appearing on a Bullock record; most of Bullock's recording bands were Dorsey Brothers groups and BG was not in any of their organizations; and Jimmy often sounded more like Benny during this period than any other clarinetist. This caused us to listen to the record exhaustively; we have finally decided that Mr. Hauck is probably right and that this item should be removed from the Goodman Dis-

Tidbits: Word comes our way that a great blues singer on the Okeh label is Mooch Richardson. The report says he is a fine back-country blues singer and that those who like real blues would do well to pick up anything by him.

Joseph Madison sends two interesting items. The first is When My Sugar Walks Down the Street/Jealous on Vo 15800 as played by the Marigold Entertainers, Oscar Westlund, director. Art White does the vocals and Joe is of the opinion that this is definitely a Mole-Nichols item. It is the only copy he has ever seen or heard of, and he has a N copy which he offers as a gift to any Nichols collector who wishes to improve his collection.

Books Noted

WITHOUT MAGNOLIAS, by Bucklin Moon. Doubleday and Co., $3.00.

Winner of the George Washington Carver award, and of a truly overwhelming amount of critical acclaim, Bucklin Moon's fourth book and second novel has very little in it about jazz. That little is purely incidental to a story about Negro life in Florida, a story that manages to avoid the standard novelists' clichés about violence, lynching and miscegenation.

We bring it to the attention of the readers of this specialized magazine partly because Moon is a regular contributor and a noted collector, and even more because it is, in the words of the New York Post's book reviewer: "The best novel about Negroes ever written by either a white or a Negro.

Since the book lies outside the jazz field, and since its author is so closely connected with the Changer, we refrain from a personal review of it, offering instead brief and enthusiastic quotes from probably more impressive sources:

New York Times (Charles Poore): " prize-winning novel in every way."

Chicago Sun: "It is a notable season indeed which sees the publication of a novel on racial relations as thoughtful and engrossing as Without Magnolias.

The New Yorker: "One of the most reasoned and polished works which have so far appeared in the increasing pile of novels about Negro life in America." (Without Magnolias can be ordered directly through the Record Changer.)

got a much-needed shot in the arm from the new competition.

I wanted Muggsy very much for that last date, but now it turned out that Victor was offering Muggsy a regular contract on the basis of the first session's sales. It was something for Muggsy to consider, since the chances were that a Decca date would kill Victor's interest in him. Muggsy dickered with Victor and I twiddled thumbs for a week or so, and then one night decided to get up early the next morning and drive down to Camden to see if I could get Steve Sholes to okay a two-way stretch on Muggsv.

My roommate, Ray Fuller, and I got up at 3 a. m. to make the trip, and the most I got out of it was my first experience with chicken and waffles for breakfast, at a highly inferior diner in western New Jersey. Steve couldn't do anything, but he referred me to Leonard Joy, head of the pop depart-ment, in New York. We drove back to New York as I mulled over the situation that I had partly created with my own eager little hands by bringing Victor and Muggsy together in the first place.

The discussion with Joy was really enjoyable for me. I put up the most convincing and irresistible pleas of my life. Joy, on the ropes, said he'd let me know in a day or two. The magic touch wore off by then, though. Muggsy was grabbed quick by Victor.

It had its good side of source for Victor.

It had its good side, of course, for Victor seemed sufficiently impressed by the interest in Muggsy to run off some quick dates, and good ones, too. Muggsy even cut one of the sides he was to have made for the Decca album—Sister-Kate, except that he speeded it up in order to get in a Brunies vocal without cutting any of the arrangement.

As for the album itself, I was about ready the sixty and have it some out with four to give up and have it come out with four records, although Decca's standard number was six, when along came Christmas and Floyd O'Brien. Stephens and I decided that with O'Brien available again we should build a last date, so with George Wettling as leader we were off again.

as leader we were off again.

The rhythm section fell into place easily—
Jess Stacy and Jack Bland were obvious choices, and Artie Shapiro was a reasonable addition in view of his jobbing of the last few years. The horns were not so easy. For trumpet I thought of Johnny Mendel (then with Jimmy Dorsey's band), Sterling Bose, Wingy Mannone, or Marty Marsala, but none of them were sure to be around. At one point we were going to use Henry Allen, on the strength of his Rhythmakers records, though that in itself was no great recommendation. George came up with the recommendation. George came up with the best solution when he got Charlie . Teagarden, even though the historical justification was none too solid. Joe Marsala was doubtful because of uncertain bookings, and I thought Rod Cless might be the man to play clarmet and double on tenor. On the day of the date, I was surprised to walk in and find Joe there, holding a tenor sax, and Danny Polo playing clarinet. It's interesting to note that Joe wasn't featuring tenor at all those days, and Danny had been playing tenor exclusively in Joe Sullivan's Café Society band, which had a fairly good man doing all the clarinet work—name of Edmond Hall.

The reed men did a fine job; especially, I think, Joe on tenor, and the date went off easily. The album was in the works then, and all that remained was to write the notes and get the artwork done.

During all this time, I didn't bother to talk about getting paid for my idea and services, and all the money I had spent on traveling, phone calls, and buying drinks was entirely out of my pocket. A real patron was entirely out of my pocket. A real patron of the arts, you might say—or a dope, perhaps. After I did the album notes, Bob Stephens suggested that I ought to be paid. I agreed, and let Decca name the price, since they were well aware of what had gone into the making of the album. Well, what it was, except that I had no qualms about accepting a research job from Columbia a few weeks later.

What do I think of the Chicago album now? The album, I think, had its good effects. It focused attention on the historical aspects of good jazz, and encouraged the production of albums aimed directly at jazz collectors. My polite bowing-out did not kill Decca's intention to follow through with similar albums—the New Orleans and Kansas City albums were produced by others, though the New York album never was made, and perhaps all for the best.

At the time, records by such men as Bud

Jacobson, Floyd O'Brien, and Boyce Brown were almost non-existent (four, to be exact, covered all three of them), and many of the others were skimpily recorded for the most part—when it came to good records. The style, I think, is still fine and its present-day neglect is unfortunate. Whether it was successfully recaptured on these records, I hesitate to say, but the Condon date sounds (to my ears at least) quite different from any other by this clique, and the MacPart-land session was a unique sound that no other date has ever produced.

I suspect that what I really feel about the album is that it showed you can't actually go back, but it's good to try when the goal is worthwhile. Ten years later, I am more convinced than ever that jazz is a sociological phenomenon, and that environ-ment is one of its most important ingredi-ents. Artificial effects were imposed in order to produce the performances in this album, and the same sort of thing has been done many times since without as much realiza-tion or announcement of aims, on the part of the directors of the recordings. You can get any kind of a date at any time, but it won't sound quite as it would if the environment of the musicians and the music were natural to the results you want.

cello and piano, against the domestic version with orchestra. Given in somewhat faster tempo, the import requires an adjustment of the listener's conception. This accomplished, the reward is handsome. La Procession is done with piano accompaniment and exerts much the same hold as did the living performance at Carnegie Hall only yesterday, it seems.

Within the week, I have had the unexpected thrill of hearing the original Sharpless sing and act his role in Madama Butless sing and act his role in Madama But-terfly almost a half century after its pre-miere and I'm here to tell you that Giuseppe De Luca, now in his seventy-third year, was the only person on the stage who could be heard clearly throughout the entire per-formance. This ageless Soul remains the personification of what we mean when we say, "Good Theatre." His suave self-pos-session was helpful to an otherwise helpless say, Good Theatre. The stave sett-pos-session was helpful to an otherwise helpless Pinkerton; the Cio Cio San (Miss Al-banese) learned that it is not always possible banese) learned that it is not always possible to maneuver the baritone's back to the audience; and the manner in which he showered indulgences upon the child who impersonated "Trouble" suggests that, when she is an old woman, she may tell her greatgrandchildren, "I made my operatic debut in the arms of the last of The Old Guard." She will be right!

								rgentinan			,							German
								Austratian	- 1									Italian
								Brazilian	J									Japanese
								Canadian										Mexican
								English										. Swiss
F		 						. French	Sd									Swedish

In the "For Disposition" section the condition of the record is indicated by these abbrevia-

N (New): Surface noise equal to an unplayed record; no visible or audible wear perceptible; original finish intact.

E (Excellent): Surface noise low, smooth, uniform. Not irregular or crackling. Easily disregarded in listening. No perceptible distortion

V (Very Good): Surface noise somewhat more prominent; light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting more prominent: light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting.

G (Good): A moderate amount of surface noise; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion: on the whole, reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention. Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music.

F (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory.

P (Poor): Foreign noises, collectively, are louder than the recorded music; continuous concentration is required, and there is little satisfaction in listening.

Column 4 of the "For Disposition" section shows the method by which each record is to be disposed.

"SAL": The record is for sale at the price indicated.

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only. If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list. If you have certain records in which he may be interested, mention these in your letter.

The extreme right column in both the "Wanted" and "For Disposition" sections shows the first four letters of the advertiser's name. His address is shown below.

THE RECORD CHANGER

125 La Salle Street New York 27, N. Y. CLOSING DATE FOR BIDS
On all Records advertised for auction in this issue will be JULY 20, 1949
UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED

NOTE:

All persons using the medium of the Record Changer in the buying, selling or trading of phonograph records, do so subject to these Rules and Regulations:

- 1. A collector or person who solicits and receives advance remittance for a record must send the record within a period of four weeks.
- A collector or person who orders and receives a record prepaid must pay for it within a period of four weeks.
- 3. A collector or person who obtains a record in trade must fulfill his end of the trade within a period of four weeks.
- 4. A collector or person who requests that a record be shipped C.O.D. must accept the shipment unless the shipment is damaged in transit. (A bid on an auction or an order from a sale which states that records will be shipped C.O.D. unless otherwise instructed, is considered a request for C.O.D. shipment.)

The name of the person or collector who violates the above rules will be printed in the Record Changer upon the first violation, and the violation will be described. (Exception: where breakage or over-grading is concerned, the record is to be returned promptly to the shipper. If the parties involved do not arrive at a settlement, the matter is to be referred to the American Record Collectors Board.)

When infractions of these rules occur, contact Jacob S. Schneider, Legal Dept., The Record Changer, 128 West 66th St., New York, N. Y.

WHEN THE SAINTS GO MARCHING IN BASIN STREET BLUES

The success of BLUE NOTE ALBUM 103 ("Hot Jazz at Blue Note." by Art Hodes' Hot Five, with Sidney Bechet) encouraged the recording and issue of the present Album. This Album again features Sidney Bechet, who is in many ways the most unusual of all jazz players.

Sidney Bechet's forty years of activity as a jazz musician cover the music's entire span. Year by year, his contemporaries have disappeared from the musical scene, most of them identified as practitioners of specific styles in a particular era. But Bechet's style, founded and shaped in the New Orleans tradition, is unique rather for its individuality. His style is not New Orleans, as we understand that style of playing today. Although it maintains the lyrical and rhythmical character of the classic tradition of jazz, it is not genre music, and excites no backwardlooking nostalgia. It has always been the evolving expressison of a prodigious creativity, and to the present day, has been developing by leaps. Indeed, it is a fact that his renown is growing even now.

For almost a decade now, BLUE NOTE has been setting down on records, and documenting, as it were, Bechet's developing style. Bechet's BLUE NOTE records, dating from 1939, reveal not only his unfaltering creativity, but his deepening feeling. This is reflected today in his changed quality of tone and his richer sense of sustained line and form. Note in the present records Bechet's exclusive use of the soprano saxophone, which he apparently prefers for the richness of its low overtones; and note, further, his newly concentrated compass, which strikingly sets off his sweeping passagework when it occurs.

The effect of Bechet's playing, however, is assured in this Album by the high musicianship of the ensemble. Art Hodes (piano), "Wild Bill" Davison (cornet) and Fred Moore (drums), who play here, were heard with Bechet in Album 103 mentioned above. As was noted in that Album, "They have a lucid appreciation of the underlying values of their music, and are aware of the fact that they appear at the attenuated end of a musical era . . . The old, expressive, communicative values that have survived three decades of commercialism are their rhetoric and metaphor..." The three other musicians here are masters of style on their respective instruments. They are Walter Page (bass), who played with Bennie Moten and Court Basie: Wilmore "Slick" Jones (drums), who played with the late "Fats" Waller; and Ray Diehl (trombone), a new-comer among BLUE NOTE's distinguished trombonists, who makes his recording debut.

The six standard pieces given here are dramatically conceived, in the sense that their climaxes are usually prepared and achieved with cumulative effect. Also of great interest is the fact that the pieces are scaled generally in the low is the tact that the pieces are scaled generally in the low and middle pitch areas.

While TIN ROOF BLUES has an overall feeling of ensemble predominance, Bechet's saxophone, unrolling phrases of increasing strength, richness and passion, rises above the ensemble for a solo chorus. JAZZ BAND BALL, backing this number, is a work of consistent, rich sonority and close harmonic movement of voices.

TIGER RAG is a refreshing moderately-paced version of a number too often shoddily played. It maintains a closely knit harmonic texture, while its marked stomp accents set in relief the grace and ease of the playing. The saxophone and cornet duet is so effectively close that it is difficult to identify the successive entrances and stops. CAKE WALKING BABIES is fast, but its phrases are pleasingly smooth and legato. Bechet's saxophone introduces furious rhythms and ascending solo passages, which ultimately dominate the Dixieland style (saxophone-cornettrombone) final chorus.

The brief choruses of THE SAINTS GO MARCHING IN are played with no loss of continuity. The piece is a triumph for the ensemble, but no less for Bechet. The resources of the soprano saxophone seem to be newly discovered as Bechet, whether in solo or obligato to the cornet, plays with elation and springiness, with unbridled exuberance and perversity — even taking two choruses in the minor mode.

The final number, BASIN STREET BLUES, is impressive for its straight trombone solo, phrased expressively with rich, sombre tones, while the saxophone echoes the mel-ody's cadences with a chase-like effect. Most of the piece is pitched low, and rises in range only in the saxophone solo before the final ensemble. A saxophone cadenza ends

RESTATEMENT

The following article, which appears also in the July 15 issue of Down Beat, is the second—and we fervently hope the last—blow in a one-two flurry of critical argument. It began with an article in the June 17 Down Beat, in which D. Leon Wolff, while lacing into both be-bop and Louis Armstrong, attacked the Record Changer's policy of steering clear of vitriolic jazz argument.

of steering clear of vitriolic jazz argument. Wolff's point was that we were guilty of deserting our former post as guardians of the "New Orleans is the only jazz" theory; our crime was that we had opened our pages to articles about bop, and other non-mouldy forms, thereby leading to a disintegration of critical standards. We had opened the way to some serious consideration of be-bop, which Wolff doesn't believe warrants serious consideration. According to him, this represented a sad bring-down from the days when everybody loudly leaped at the throats of everyone else at every opportunity. We disagreed violently (thereby being sucked into a fight of the type we deplore, but, we trust, without losing our temper or our balance). Our reply was printed by the Beat, but

Our reply was printed by the Beat, but assuming that the two publications reach, largely, different audiences, and believing that this article is a sound statement of our critical point of view, and of the logic behind it, we also offer it to our readers.

The moth-eaten old doctrine of dog-eat-dog in jazz criticism, the shrill and often meaningless cries that the other fellow's kind of jazz is a dirty fraud, is back to haunt us again. At any rate, Down Beat's front-paging of D. Leon Wolff's blast of two issues ago, definitively headlined: "Bop, Louis Nowhere!" makes it look very much that way.

This particular writer is not overly concerned either with Wolff's demolishing of bop or with his neat trick of knocking off Armstrong in two paragraphs. Others will certainly provide enough angry answers to those attacks. What does rankle very deeply is the revival of the nastiness school of criticism, which many people had reason to hope had gone out of favor for all time; and what is particularly annoying is that glib, at-first-glance impeccable sentence, punched home in italics, which proclaimed: "No controversy means no standards."

Copyright, 1949. Down Beat, Inc. Reprinted by permission.

Specifically, Wolff was socking into the Record Changer for giving "equal attention" to bop, and for allowing bop, and mouldy figs, and "excruciating" big bands all to "pass for jazz" together. It was nice to be called a "gentleman," and on the first page of the Beat at that, and thank you, even if no compliment was intended. But it was a bit of a shock to find that what we at the Record Changer had been thinking of as a minor experiment in furthering jazz by giving all sides a crack at our readers' minds, was in some quarters considered an example of "jazz criticism (at) its lowest ebb." We had always thought the lowest ebb came on the night that a musician and a jazz critic got into a public "cawl at Nick's. We figured that, although acting like nice people on, at least, different decks of the same boat wasn't as sensational as real or fancied muck-raking, it was a great deal more helpful to all concerned.

The suspicion in this corner has always been that most of the good old fights were merely space-filling, circulation grabbing devices whipped up on and for rainy days. Sure, lots of boppers literally hate two-beat; and they tell me Muggsy Spanier says bebop sounds like four Chinamen. But most musicians and fans have some respect for the other guy's opinion, and some desire to know why he thinks that way. This doesn't mean that they don't love their own school. What it means is that jazz is not pure emotion, not pure love-and-hate. It also involves the intellect; to run the risk of getting real corny: education is a fine old democratic stand-by.

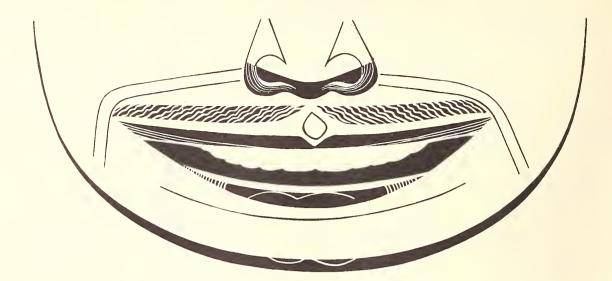

No controversy means no standards, huh? First of all, the aim is not no controversy. The aim is no ignorant sounding-off. No one is enough of a gentleman to like everything, or to claim that no one is crazy. Very personally, I don't care for most bop, except maybe for some Parker, some Miles Davis, some Thelonious Monk. But some people whom I'd swear to be of sound mind are very high on it, and I suspect that if I understood it, which I largely don't, I'd be in a better position to make up my mind about bop. If I ever get to be sure I know what the boppers are trying to do, and how, and find I despise it, I intend to fill the air with shrill cries. But information is a most necessary preliminary; it takes knowledge to determine whether the other fellow is right, or wrong for respectable reasons, or a dollar-seeking, exhibitionist phony. Information is what any responsible jazz writer should be seeking to give; his aim should never be to make his readers gasp with his rhetoric, tell them his side of the story, elbow them down with his obviously superior knowledge of the subject, and finish up as the winner of a mammoth shadow-boxing exhibition. It that's controversy, I'll be a gentleman.

This is not intended as a pitch for the Record Changer; it is, rather, a pitch for "gentlemanliness," but possibly the best way to handle the general point is by being specific. In the past year and a half, the Changer, under Editor Bill Grauer and this writer, has stopped being what Wolff praised as a "haven for reactionaries." We figured that jazz didn't really stop dead the night they closed Storeyville, so why try to kid people.

So what did we do, what awful "armistice" was reached with bop? For one thing, we by-passed the "Man, it's real gone" school of thought. We review new be-bop records, ran an article by Tadd Dameron, are publishing a Gillespie discography. Principally, we've run several fairly technical explanatory articles on bop instrumentation and the ideas behind bop, by Ross Russell, one of which Wolff quotes and is nonplussed enough to call "interesting and perhaps constructive" (Come now, Leon, no armistice!). The whole idea, as this should indicate, is to try giving the mouldy figs, and others, some idea of what the supporters of bop—and also of Dixieland and of nice, loud big bands—claim lies behind their music, and why they want to defend it to the death.

"AND OR"

SINCLAIR HITS THE TRAILL

(Sinclair Traill is an editor of the new British magazine, Jazz Journal, which frequently publishes articles of a satirical and semi-fantastic nature. The following tale of a somewhat unusual record discovery is, however, nothing but the truth.)

If you came across a pile of new Gennetts under a rock in Death Valley, you might think it perhaps a trifle strange. It would, in fact, be a strange discovery, but it would be hardly more astonishing than the odd cache of records that I actually turned up in India back in 1942.

I had landed at a tiny native village, a place by the name of Solan, situated some 8000 feet up in the Himalayas. The terrain is exceedingly wild and mountainous and the village has no claim to fame except that it boasts a tiny brewery which turns out some extremely ill mannered vintage vinegar, which is sold as beer. In those days it was a purely native village in one of India's native states and frankly there was little to recommend it except for its kindly climate, which was a great relief after the broiling heat of the Indian plains. The village of Solan has one street, twelve shops, one taxi, and a local bull (animal). All Indian villages have a sacred bull, who roams around distributing his favors amongst the local cows (animals) with strict impartiality.

The local bull had evidently just passed as I picked my way with some delicacy over, around, and into one of the tiny village shops. I forget now what it was I had wanted to purchase, but this was a typical Indian village store which literally sells everything and anything. Piled high on the counter and overflowing onto the floors was a glorious heterogeneous, higgledypiggledy mass of postage stamps, herbs, crockery of all kinds, hair-nets, custard powders, fire-bricks, and lengths of cloth, plus a nice line of dried manure for fuel purposes. The smell was unique.

As I waited to be served I suddenly spied, partly obscured behind a pile of old boots, an ancient, horn-type phonograph. There was a record on the turntable and I idly reached for the disc, with a normal collector's curiosity. To my great surprise, instead of the Indian recording that I had expected, it was New Call of the Freaks by the Luis Russell Orchestra on Perfect. The record was brand new; I felt more than a little shocked.

"American jazz, sahib," said the man behind the counter. "You like? Very cheap."

I replaced the record on the turntable

I replaced the record on the turntable with some show of nonchalance. "Any others?" I enquired.
"Plenty, sahib." The man nodded and beckoned me to look behind the far end of the counter. There they were, stacked in piles three feet high! Hundreds of Perfects in their original covers!

I picked up one and asked, much too

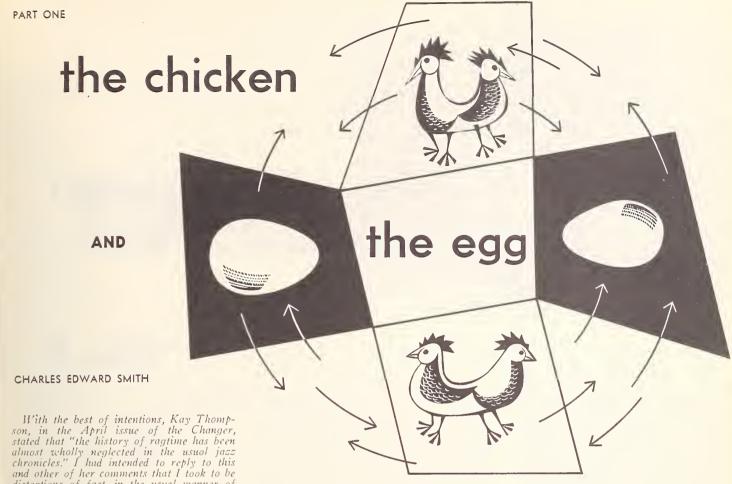

I picked up one and asked, much too quickly, "How much?"
"Very cheap," came the answer. "Only three rupees (approximately one dollar) for real American record."

I laughed, with conviction I hoped, and replaced the records I had been looking at on top of one of the piles. My plan was to (Continued on Page 15) on, in the April issue of the Changer, stated that "the history of ragtime has been almost wholly neglected in the usuol jazz chronicles." I had intended to reply to this and other of her comments that I took to be distortions of fact, in the usual manner of writers whose privilege it is to speak out at the drop of a diaper pin or on osterisk, about their babies and their books. Although occepting her good faith, I wanted to point out that while Jazzmen had little of ragtime history in its pages The Jazz Record Book reflected both the growth of criticol understanding and the knowledge of ragtime pioneers that persistent research had dug up. I should also have stated that o vast amount of other research and writing on ragtime has already appeared in print, the bulk of it in the Changer.

The only real point in all this would have been to correct on impression that Miss Thompson's article might convey as to the significance of ragtime as a factor in jazz development. First of all, though ragtime reached its peak during the formative years of jazz, there is no reason to suppose that the origin of the latter depended on it. However, ragtime, as many writers have pointed out, was a stimulating influence on jazz development. But the explanation got under way and became the article which follows.

(If I moy porenthesize for o moment, Miss Minna Lederman, editor of Modern Music [leogue of composers] informed me, when William Russell and I were writing on article for her some time before the war, that she was very gratified that we had given such musically and historicolly conclusive evidence of the simultoneity of but distinction between, what was essentially a piano style [ragtime] and whot was o vocal and multi-instrumental style [jozz]. Less regional in growth and origin, though St. Louis was unquestionably its queen city, ragtime also leaned more heavily upon popular music in its formative years. These, she insisted, were facts that musicologists could and should understond.)

In the period before 1900, as it has been through the years, blues was the source of jazz style, and while the blues have been documented—though hardly overdocumented—most of us, including veteran writers on the subject, find their convictions deepened with time, are more aware of blues as the core of jazz.

Were one to describe jazz as something that took shape only from the blues, there would be reason to take its historians to task, but other influences have not been neglected. The soil that nourished jazz was not all "down-home-gumbo." Jazz was an urban product, and as such reflected the many facets of its environment. It used brassband instruments, reeds and strings typical of the West Indies, piano styles from honky tonks and sporting houses—yet the essential instrumental style, whether for solo voicing or for group voicing, stemmed directly from the blues. But one has only to read its history in the most cursory fashion to realize this.

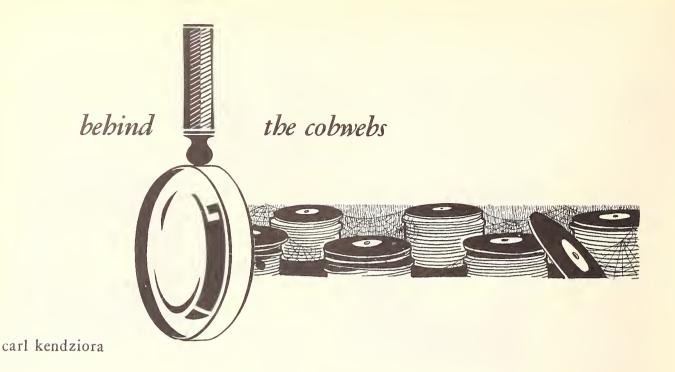

If I draw upon Jazzmen once more it is because its authors went to sources for their evidence of the influence of ragtime on jazz, and to remind Miss Thompson, like the old fuddy-duddies we are, that Jazzmen has been catching shellac dust on collectors' shelves come ten years next October. We said then what Jimmy Noone has said since: that ragtime was not jazz, but that it influenced jazz, and that written ragtime was usually speeded up in tempo as its melodies were adapted for improvised

That the ragtime piano had, perforce, to substitute for, or create its style in the absence of a band is also a matter of record. For example, the influence of Porter King upon Jelly Roll Morton has been told by Jelly himself, both for the New Orleans Memories album and the Library of Congress records. But while Porter King's forte was ragtime, Jelly's was jazz; therefore, his tribute to King is titled King Porter Stomp. Jelly himself remarked how the repetitive treble chords—easily adapt-able because of their harmonic structure had been utilized by many big band arrangers for riffs 2.1d, on the whole, he was quite aware of himself as essentially a jazz, and not a ragtime pianist. His style obviously had more scope, lending to orchestral work fullness and fluidity, and, to his solo style, with its closer relationship to blues piano, more body, a richness and balance that fully warrants the designation of Jelly as the first great pianist of jazz.

Improvisation was important to ragtime development, and must have been even more important to its origin in welding a style that could include such diverse inspiration as blues piano, minstrelsy and music hall material—a style of diamond-faceted brilliance that almost seems to have been created for the keyboard alone. The playing of Louis Chauvin, for example, we know only through the writing of Scott Joplin, who admittedly

In our April column we discussed Dixie Drag (1881), by the Dixie Jazz band on Or 1396 and Je 5446 and Mendello's Dance Orchestra on Ba 6214. Information on this group from Les Webb in England offers the opinion that the trombone is Glenn Miller.

Dick Holbrook has submitted an interesting question: Who were Perry's Hot Dogs? Here's the story as Dick reveals it. From October 1925 through March 1926, a stream of hot jazz appeared on the Regal-Banner-Domino labels with band credit to Perry's Hot Dogs. The details of their records are:

Instrumentation: cornet, trombone, sax, banjo, piano. The cornet shows good tripletongue and the trombone fine open bell-tone. The sax is versatile, with some reed slapping, and the rhythm section backing is solid. Arthur Field's vocals are all straight and the pieces, though all arranged, are full of free solo work. It seems that everybody offers a different guess about them and Dick just doesn't know. Harry Crawford ventures Red Nichols, but Dick reports that it doesn't sound like either Red or Miff. Anyway, their Re-Ba-Do records had the band name Six Hottentots and started early in 1927. John Davis, the English authority, says that Milenberg Joys is by Fred Hall's band. But he used a violin which is absent from the Hot Dogs.

Bill Russell reminds Dick about the fine white pianist and arranger, Bill Perry, who played with many "house bands" for records. Dick had one by Bill Perry's Entertainers but he says it wasn't the Hot Dogs. Finally, Herman Rosenberg is confident that they are Perry Bradford's gang helping plug Clarence Williams tunes on these labels with the white singer useful as a name the public knew and liked. This is a good theory but of the eleven tunes Dick has, only two have a Williams credit on the label. The instruments match up pretty well, except that the Hot Dogs had no clarinet and the cornet bears no resemblance to Johnny Dunn.

Dick was junking in Syracuse recently and picked up a copy of Nobody's Business (6336)/Who (6311) on Ba 1657 as by the Missouri Jazz band. He found the first title to be from the identical master as his Hot Dogs' version of the same tune on Re 9967. He wonders if this is an isolated instance of inaccurate band credit on the label or if perhaps Perry's and the Missouri groups are the same. All his other Missouri Jazz band titles are different ones from his Perry's, but it's an avenue of inquiry.

Any comment on this will be forwarded to Dick; he will shake all the facts down and report his findings to this column.

Joe Madison is an avid collector of Tiger Rag, as readers of the Changer know, and he is most anxious to trace down different masters and take numbers of this tune. Here's what he has in his collection among those on the Mills labels:

Has anyone even seen a Pat-Pe master in the 108000 series for the Whoopee Makers' issue on Perfect and Pathe? And how about additions to the above list?

Walter C. Allen, the King Oliver discographer, sends some real posers. The first is by Fred Hall's Jazz band doing West End Blues (8244-3)/Missouri Squabble (8245-3) on Re 8655 and Do 4214. West End is also on Ba 7248 and as (1821-2) under the name Dixie Jazz band on Or 1371 and Je 5412. Instrumentation includes trumpet, trombone, alto sax, piano, banjo, tuba, drums, and violin. Recording date should be Fall, 1928, as these were 1928 tunes and the Re and Do issues came out at the end of that year. But what is the personnel? Walter has an idea that it might have been a group led by drummer "Tubby" Hall, whose first name was Fred. He was regularly playing with violinist Clarence Blach's orchestra in Chicago at this time, but Walter knows nothing of Blach's personnel at the time.

Next is Carroll Dickerson's Savoy orchestra on Br 3990. Titles are Missouri Squabble and Black Maria, apparently cut also in the Fall of 1928. Walter would like to know the full details for these two titles. He notes that Louis Armstrong opened at the Savoy in Chicago with Dickerson in April, 1928, and was still with him in 1929 in New York. Walter doubts that there are any Louis solos or they would have been spotted by now; but it might be possible that he was buried in the section work on the date. Since Louis had his own•contract with Okeh, it is quite possible that he either deliberately buried himself on this date so

castle band

By HAROLD H, HOLLIS

LARRY DU FRESNE, MONTE BALLOU, AND BOB SHORT

The know-it-all critics who stick out their necks and state that there is no New Orleans music played today because most of the men who played in that idiom have either passed on or passed out of the picture, had better revise their opinions or quit criticizing. In the past few years an everincreasing number of musicians has been attempting to re-create the music of the early Twenties. Some of them have been "successful," going so far as to play out of tune in order to achieve the sound heard on the earlier recordings. Whether this is because of a lack of facility on their various instruments or a deliberate attempt to try to recapture the "flavor" or sound of the now out-of-print recordings, this writer will not offer a guess. I do know, however, of one jazz band that plays in tune, copies no one, and achieves a result that far surpasses the contemporary groups. I refer to the Castle Jazz Band, of Portland, Oregon.

The seven men now in the group organized, primarily, to play their own brand of improvised jazz but felt that the best pattern to follow (not copy) was not Chicago (sic), New York, Kansas City, or Los Angeles (they have their own brand of jazz) but New Orleans. There will be arguments, discussions and many disagreements as to whether the group plays a strict N.O. style, but what is jazz but improvisation? And the structure is surely not progressive in the boppish idiom. No music is used except to learn the melodic line and the chord progression and that's all any real jazz band ever did.

The individual members of the Castle band have varied talents. DON KINCH, trumpeter, is an amazing performer. Never having been previously subjected to New Orleans music, he has a facility with his horn that is remarkable. At times he has a Bixian conception that is a truly natural feeling—he is not an avid record listener and has heard very little of Bix's work. At other times there is an Armstrong sound to the phrases he plays, with a drive that really lifts the band. An excellent reader, he has a tough time remembering the lead to the tunes, but somehow they always come out exactly on the nose. His previous band experience includes Garwood Van, Harry Owens, Sterling Young and others of the "mickey" type.

BOB GILBERT, clarinet, is the youngest member of the band, both in point of experience and in age. He never played with a jazz band until he joined the Castle aggregation and most of the tunes are strange to his ear. However, with more than an unusual amount of ability, his grasp of a true jazz style is far above the average. He also has a career apart from music, with General Electric Supply's advertising department.

GEORGE BRUNS, trombone, is the third member whose jazz experience has been limited. Originally a tuba player, George gravitated to bass fiddle, then to piano, and now to trombone. A schooled musician, he has been music director for Portland's ABC outlet. Six feet, four inches in height, George is happily married to vocalist Jean Porter, whose singing, though not a strict jazz style, is in exceptionally good taste. Another graduate of the hotelswing band school, Bruns is really happiest when filling up the holes left by Kinch and Gilbert.

HOMER WELCH, drummer, is no beginner with jazz drums. A professional musician for a number of years, Homer is production manager for the local NBC station, KGW. Also a piano-playing vocalist with a great histrionic ability, he has been with the same radio station since 1933. Followers of the band aver he is one of the best two-beat drummers in the business. An unobtrusive, steady rhythm, with a terrific beat, flicks off the end of his sticks and never lets the tempo lag. Homer is also president of the Press Club, where the band is concerting Sunday afternoons.

BOB SHORT, tuba, is another non-musical "career" man. Along with Kinch, he puts in eight hours a day building bar fixtures. He's an individualist who says he likes to wear a tuxedo, providing it consists of a sport shirt and slacks. A cornet and a valve trombone are gathering dust in his closet, but the tuba is polished every night. For him, and anyone within ear-shot, there is only one kind of music. Kenton, Dizzy, and the rest of the "progressives" have "gotta go"!!!

MONTE BALLOU, banjo, has charge of the "headache" department. He handles the band's finances, kicks off the tunes, and gripes when things are going stale. A guitarplaying Calypso singer, he has refused to amplify; he plays a lot of gigs where there is no electricity. A well-known collector, Monte is also a familiar figure to night-club patrons of the Northwest. Thinks the Castle Jazz band will be the best in the land.

Piano man LARRY DU FRESNE (dufrain) is up to his ears in Jelly-Roll Morton, but refrains from copying, preferring to develop his own style. Larry has never been exposed to too much recorded jazz. Believes that Zurke was one of the best, plays a terrific beat, has a wonderful ear. The eighth "member" of the band is HARRY FOS-

BOB GILBERT

HOMER WELCH

BURY. Harry is the recording engineer who cuts the masters. He has learned the business the hard way and knows when the "take" is good. Harry is an ex-drummer, who manufacturers model aeroplane kits that are nationally known and has a complete workshop in his basement. Although married, with three children, Harry can always manage to find time to record the band.

In March of this year, Castle Records was incorporated in the state of Oregon to do business in the recording and night-club field. There is a strong possibility that the corporation will have its own club in the very near future. Stock is held by the members of the band and is a closed affair. Fosbury is president of the company; Bruns, vice-president; Short, secretary; and Ballou, treasurer.

The men in the band are all established in the locality. Six of them own their own homes and the seventh is buying a lot to build on soon. It is doubtful whether any of them would be interested in leaving Portland for other engagements, though one-nighters in the immediate vicinity are not turned down. Publicity has been favorable; the records are selling; the men are happy, with no prima donnas in the band and it is hoped they can play the "good-time" music as a solid unit from now on.

EDWARD HILL

I suppose that a certain number of those who habitually turn first to the obituary columns of their morning newspapers were aroused to loving memory on May 11th upon learning of the passing of Emilio de Gogorza. Such New York dailies as mentioned the fact at all were thrifty of details. Here is what The New York Times had to say:

"Emilio de Gogorza, noted baritone and head of the Curtis Institute's vocal department from 1926 to 1940, died yesterday of a heart attack in his studio at 110 West Fiftyfifth Street. He was 76 years old.

"Born in Brooklyn of Spanish parents, he was taken to Europe as an infant. After studying in France and England, he returned to the United States at 21 to assist Mme. Marcella Sembrich in recitals throughout the country.

"He was the first artistic director of the Victor Talking Machine Company. After retiring from a brilliant singing career, he devoted himself to coaching vocalists. Mr. de Gogorza leaves his widow, the former Mme. Emma Eames."

Well, there you have a bare outline which need only be corrected to the extent of asserting that while Mme. Eames remained Mrs. de Gogorza from the time the two were wed in 1914 until her spouse breathed his last, she could never be identified otherwise than by her self-appointed identity, Mme. Emma Eames. (The twain had not existed as a family unit for a score of years.)

Emilio de Gogorza, like Sidney Homer and Isidore Luckstone and ever so few others of this writer's acquaintance, was what is meant by definition of "gentleman" as a gentle man. During his post-singing life, Mr. de Gogorza was of necessity to his well-being a quiet man, for his robustiousness had failed and his heart would take just so much and no more. He was most pleasant in social intercourse and if he allowed himself a modicum of vanity, that was directed (most justly, I agree) toward his authority as an interpreter of the songs of Claude Debussy.

But let us go back to the years that are gone, those mellow years surrounding the turn of the century when recording was an infant enterprise. The young Spanish baritone, scarcely more than a youth, already had perforce abandoned opera upon his arrival in America circa 1896. (His eyesight had never been good and he required very strong lenses to make his way about safely—hence could not be seen to advantage—in opera.)

By the time de Gogorza had been with us for half a decade, his teaching abilities had received considerable recognition, his gift of diplomacy was marked as "something really special" and he had recorded for four companies under five names and on both cylinders (soft brown wax, no masters) and discs (with and without masters). The recording names he used were, besides his own, Carlos (or Signor or Señor) Francisco, Herbert Goddard, M. Fernand and Edward Franklin.

It is to Emilio de Gogorza's powers of diplomatic persuasion that we owe a substantial portion of the pre-electrical Victor catalog, that galaxy of outstanding vocalists who, wary of what the results of having released recordings of their art for public sale would do to their reputations, needed the gentle reminder that a singing career is a sometime thing, whereas royalties of appreciable emolument might well continue to be forthcoming long after the rose had faded away. Stubborn cases were dealt with thus: "It's not only your reputation I want to preserve; it's my own. Let us make a duet for the Victor and if you go down, I'll be there with you." It always worked!

Meanwhile, Mr. de Gogorza was establishing himself in high favor with critics and audiences as one of the authoritative concert singers of the new century. Reading over the reviews of such unforgiving men as Aldrich, Krehbiel and Henderson, one gathers that rich and rare were the jewels this man imparted to his hearers. His de-livery of Grand Airs from Opera brought forth the highest encomiums and art song was acknowledged to find its highest fulfillment in his custody; nor was he found wanting in drawing-room ballads and even lesser texts, as his lengthy recorded catalog will attest. (De Gogorza probably made more records than any serious singer of his time and each was as nearly perfect as recording and reproductive processes would allow.) In joint recitals with Mme. Sembrich-and later with Mme. Eames, both before and after their marriage, he often was called upon to save the performance, for the ladies' powers were by this time not of the freshest; and here again the baritone's capacity for self-subordination kept smooth waters

And singers came and went and were in turn escorted before the recording horn and were, under gentle guidance, suffered to immemorialize themselves in wax. "We turned out some corking records," he said. "Let me tell you about Plançon. I really had to work plenty on him. He wanted to retire, and eat and drink. I took him to Philadelphia and gave him the full-course treatment; then had to wait around till he revived. When I delivered the bill to Cal Child later, he hit the roof. But we got some of the best records you'll ever hear—if you can find them. The Drum-Major's Air gave us an awful headache. Plançon needed to act it out to get his effects and we spoiled a lot of takes before he handed us one we thought good enough to press up. And at the playback, do you know what he did? He stalked up and down, pulling at his beard. When the record ended, he said, "Gogorza, that is not me—and yet, of course, it must be me—who else could sing it that way?"

That is just one of many, many stories and is by no means the best. The others may never be told for Mr. de Gogorza was adamant in refusing to write his memoirs despite fervent pleas by many who wished to have the benefit of a standard reference work on early phonographic history. He said there was so much that he didn't remember accurately and that he did not want to risk even the slightest departure from cetuality.

Any mention of his unpublished record of Debussy's Voici qui le printemps was the occasion for a scene. This song, electrically recorded in 1928, was his last activity for the Victor Company, and he harbored an abiding resentment that it had not been issued. "Maybe they'll bring it out some day, somehow, if someone can convince them that money-in-a-hurry is not all that matters," he told me. Well, perhaps they will, some day, but I doubt it. The only de Gogorza record in the current Victor catalog is the 1927 coupling of La Paloma and La Golondrina and I advise you to buy it without delay, lest it be absent from the next edition. It is decidedly worth while, for both songs were brought to popularity by this singer, who had previously sung them many times in the old acoustical days on records of various sizes and colors of label.

He had given a lesson on the morning of May 10th and was seeing his pupil to the door. His soul took flight in the twinkling of an eye. On the 13th, they took him back to Brooklyn.

OVERSEAS JAZZ RELEASES

The surprise of the year happened the other day when we received from Sweden our first copy of a recording by the Hep Cats Creole Jazz Band. They were Ballin' the Jack on Finland's Savel 9002. When we played it we thought we had put on a Kid Ory by mistake, but a double check proved it was the Swedish kids, whose ages range from 17 to 22. The disc features no outstanding solos, but the general ensemble work compares very favorably to Ory's recording of this tune in the recent Columbia album.

Other new issues from Sweden:

Gosta Torner Orchestra: Jazz Band Ball/Jazz Me Blues, Artist 3008; 12th St. Rag/G. T.'s Serenade, Artist 3009; Sweet Sue/Exactly Like You, Artist 3010

The most popular Japanese bands these days are the Star Dusters, Victor Gay Quintet, Ernie Pyle Orchestra, and American Club Orchestra. Their principal bill of fare consists of old U. S. populares, with St. Louis Blues, Stardust, and Alexander's Ragtime Band the most popular. The Star Dusters have experienced the greatest success, with an outfit patterned after Tommy Dorsey's band. The average Japanese jazz fan appears to prefer the Glenn Miller and Benny Goodman styles.

Word comes from Switzerland that the fine amateur unit, the Dixie Dandies, which disbanded in 1946 after becoming one of the top European dixie combos, has recently been reorganized.

Just reissued on Swiss HMV: Jelly Roll's Pearls/Beale St. Blues.

New Zealand is shortly to join the list of nations who make and press their own jazz records with their own musicians. Bill Harsnape of Auckland informs us that the fine John McKenzie Trio (piano, bass and guitar) may be expected on New Zealand Tempo label. Arrangements have already been completed to have their version of Darktown Strutters released on Ampersand. For this number the McKenzie Trio combined with four other local musicians to form a Dixieland unit.

New issues from France:

Bernard Peiffer-Bagdad Boogie/Monte Carlo, Sw. 296

Bill Coleman-Don Byas—Blues At Noon/Thing Called Love, Sw. 295

French Gramophone SH 1 has issued Ain't Misbehavin'/Boppin' and Moppin' (from the film, "Stormy Weather"). Bernard Niquet writes that Century records are now available on AFCDJ and JRS; Manor on Blue Star; HRS, Joe Davis, Celebrity, Appollo, Blue Note, Dial, etc., on the new French label, Jazz Selection. Disc, MGM, Savoy, Mercury, Majestic and Clef are also available.

We were wondering if anyone ever read this column until we made a mistake. Now we know that we have at least fourteen readers in Canada. It seems we listed five or six titles as by the Delta Jazz Band which, in reality, were cut by Ken Dean's Hot Seven of Canada. Mr. Dean himself, is a reader.

We also apologize for our reference to the "French clarinetist," Big Boy Goodie. A friend in Switzerland informs us that Mr. Goodie was born in Louisiana. He isn't too mad at us, however, for Big Boy has resided and cut records in France for many, many years.

We are pleased to report a five-star record this month: Ragtime Tuba on Memphis 5 from Australia by the Southern Jazz Group. This top-notch side is backed by a fair version of Smokey Mokes.

Our five-star opinions to date have been captured only by the Graeme Bell Band. However, we felt that the Southern Jazz Group's first releases showed promise of actually surpassing the Bell outfit, and on this recording they have succeeded in at least running a dead heat. With the reciprocal reissue of some fine foreign sides by Bell, Luter, Bolling, etc., by the small U. S. labels, it's a shame that collectors can secure their copies of this one from Australia only.

We have received copies of Australia's newest in jazz: a Rex Green piano solo on Elmar No. 2; John Sangster's Jazz Six on Zenith 101; and Keith Hounslow's Jazz Hounds on Ampersand 17.

Records in from England include Roy Vaughan's Chicagoans: At Sundown/Nobody's Sweetheart, Delta 4, and As Long As I Live/ Take Me for a Buggy Ride, Delta 5; a very poorly recorded John Haim and His Jellyroll Kings, Blues for Johnny/None of This Jellyroll, Delta 6 (the boys are fair but the recording makes it impossible to say more).

Rene Franc (French clarinetist) and his trio: Lonesome Blues/Old Fashioned Love, Delta 2; and Bienville Blues/The Last Time, Delta 3, are also in. All are about "fair."

Humphrey Lyttelton's band on London Jazz 1: The Thin Red Line/Melancholy Blues is the best of the lot received and should be acquired by collectors seeking good representative jazz records trom different countries. After having reviewed several hundred English discs for ourselves over several years, we can sum up our total recommendations as George Webb's South and Billy Jones' Bluin' the Blues, on Decca. It's a pleasure to add The Thin Red Line by Lyttelton to this abbreviated list of what to play for good English jazz.

Kid Shots' New Orleans Band
Uptown Bump
When You and I Were Young, Maggie
In Gloryland
Dumaine Street Drag

That incredible outdoors sound of Bill Russell's New Orleans records has been absent too long, and it's a delight to have four such rollicking examples with us now. The familiar cast is back, one suspects (no doubt Madison's trumpet is supported by George Lewis, clarinet; Jim Robinson, trombone; Lawrence Marrero, banjo; Slow Drag, bass; Baby Dodds, drums)—although, as usual there is no personnel information on the AM labels.

Uptown Bump is a wonderful version of that old standby which is probably best known under the name of I'm Busy and You Can't Come In. A more perfect tune for this tempo would be hard to conceive, and this is the bunch that can do it right.

When You and I Were Young, Maggie, got its first great work-out on records as possibly Tommy Ladnier's greatest performance on wax, and here it gets taken for another fine ride. George Lewis is tops here, and also turns in a wow of a job on Gloryland, which finds Shots alternating between sweet and hot. When a New Orleans man plays sweet, as you should know if you read the Changer regularly, he plays plenty sweet.

The last side of this batch is a blues that will serve as a definition in case any of your friends asks to hear a New Orleans band play the honest-to-Gee lowdown blues. There has been a fallow period in which no new records of this type have been issued, and this makes you wonder if these sides sound so marvelous because it's been too long since the last ones, but no—it's merely that they're awfully, awfully, wonderful.

One reason may be that they're the last

One reason may be that they're the last parts of longer performances—that is, each one sounds as though it's cut in from a lengthier recording made on a large acetate at 33 RPM. This is pure surmise on my part, and may not be so at all, but the way these sides begin—notably the first two—I am pretty sure that my guess is right. Anyway, don't miss 'em. (American Music 529, 530) (G.A.)

Bob Wilber and His Jazz Band

Coal Black Shine Sweet Georgia Brown The Mooche When the Saints Go Marching In Ziz Zag Limehouse Blues

These—the first issued records by the sensational little band which had such a successful run in Boston last year—are long overdue and should be greeted by the faithful with loud howls. How many of these are going to be shouts of joy and how many yowls of anguish I wouldn't know, but I'm pretty certain that the mere fact of this expected divided opinion makes them damned well "got-to-have" items, no matter your reaction.

Personally, I find myself in a sort of unenviable position. I was one of the first to get on the Wilber bandwagon and most of the men on these sides have received from me high praise in the past. Wellstood is one of my favorite pianists and Jimmy Archey, whom I heard that first night he joined the "This Is Jazz" Band on the river boat, is to me the greatest re-discovery of the century. Pops Foster is always the guts of any rhythm section and Tommy Benford teamed with him makes things just twice that gutty. And though Henry Goodwin has never been any great favorite of mine his horn fits in well with the group and he is always three skips and a jump better than adequate. As a unit, then, I ought to join the cheering section.

And I do, though I liked the band better the one night I heard it than I do on these six sides. Part of this may be that I wish there had been a better balance between fast and slow numbers; that listening to them, these tired old bones got bumped along so fast I ain't quite gotten my breath back yet. But I think the truth of the matter is that these records are different enough so that I'm not going to form a real opinion, fer 'em or agin 'em, until I've played them a great many times more than I have thus far had the opportunity.

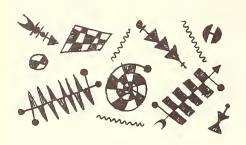

For the one thing about this band is that it does things pretty much the way it wants to and the hell with whose toes get stepped on in the process. There's no doubt that this group has been cradled in the traditional, but baby's a big boy now and he's picked up some habits along the way. There's a lot of Ellington here and some Armstrong, and I mean big band Armstrong at that, and yet the boys haven't forgotten whose baby they are, either.

Fact is, these records are going to make some of the mouldy set, of which I am a charter member, gnash their teeth. For example, along about halfway through the "Saints" you are going to hear I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You, where Archey cuffs the hell out of it with the band backing him up, and the chances are it will set your nerves on edge. But pretty soon you are sheepishly going to realize what you should have known all along, that that is where "Rascal" came from anyway and it is germane to the goings on so stop being so goddam effete and relax. There are other little items along the same line too, and most of them sound right on a second or third hearing.

In other words, I think you'll want these records and I think you'll play them and enjoy them. Maybe they won't take the place of your favorite all-time ten, but even if you don't like them they will give you something to get mad at. Of one thing I'm certain: this band is going to go ahead and play this kind of stuff—having a lot of fun in the process, too, by the way—in spite of what you or I tell them: I'm all for that but I do hope they'll slow down a little on a few sides in the next album. My ticker is still huffing along like Denny Strong's drums! (Circle S-24) (B.M.)

Jelly Roll Morton

Big Fat Ham Muddy River Blues

Although this re-issue of one of the few Jelly Roll Paramounts has been available for some time it's nice to see it around again with that old black and silver label! It's certainly in the authentic Jelly style and, though it may lack some of the brilliance and finish of his later band recordings, it happens to be one of my favorites. Natty Dominique and Roy Palmer are among the personnel and there is a clarinetist named Townes who, though he doesn't play like Rapollo, still has that same sort of haunting sadness in his playing that is very memorable. Jasper Taylor does some wonderful things drumwise as well. All in 'all this is, I think, one of those few records I'd run back after if my house caught on fire. (Paramount 14007) (B.M.)

Addie Williams

Maybe Someday Yesterday

Don't know where they find 'em, but Capitol is developing quite a stable of girls who sing and play the piano. Forget Lutcher, of course, and Julia Lee's in a class by herself, naturally; Addie Williams is different from both, and pretty refreshing.

These sides represent the kind of race record that I thought went out with the middle-period Ethel Waters Columbias. All you've got is a girl who sings straight, in tune, and in a touch higher register than you'd say (at first) was right for her; for accompaniment, you get a piano that's so straight that it's almost shocking, and a rhythm section that practically disappears with unobtrusiveness. James P. Johnson's earliest records weren't straighter than Addie Williams' piano, which manages to capture some of that old, pre-electric (and pre-Waller) Harlem piano style.

The songs are simple love ballads with nothing at all to recommend them except

The songs are simple love ballads with nothing at all to recommend them except as perfect vehicles for the charming Miss Williams. Put this on your changer and relax. It's fine listening and you don't have to dig at all deep. (Capitol 57-70010) (G.A.)

Pee Wee Hunt

Clarinet Marmalade Bessie Couldn't Help It

This is not a follow-up to the now happily defunct Twelfth Street Rag, although the public is going to hope so until it twirls this platter in the demonstration booth. Clarinet Marmalade is nothing more or less than a straightforward reading of a couple of the old time good ones, such as you might have gotten any night at Nick's or allied joints from coast to coast. The one exceptional piece of work is Rosy McHargue's fine clarinet playing, which is well worth the loan of an ear.

Bessie Couldn't Help It was never much of a tune, and it has gotten kicked around plenty, from Armstrong to Hoagy Carmichael and Bix and way, way down the line. Here, at last, is a record which presents the lyrics clearly. The rhythm section's flaws are more apparent on this side (it's a rather labored tune, at best), but Rosy McHargue is back again, as limpid as ever. (Capitol 57-569) (G.A.)

Juanita Jackson

I Have a Friend Somebody Saved Me

Lord Jesus I'll Search Heaven for You

Not the best, but nice. Gospel records often turn out to be better jazz than the better jazz records, and I strongly suggest that some of the more ardent collectors of gospeliana start thinking about helping us duffers in picking the wheat from the chaff. There's a lot of fine stuff around, no doubt, but it's hard to find out about it. and surely there are some real enthusiasts who can turn out a solid, reliable article for the Changer in some future issue.

Miss Jackson hasn't got the big voice that's de rigeur for this sort of thing, and her backgrounds tend to be slightly on the lacy side. One of the sides (Somebody Saved Me) is a waltz of such pronounced Viennese leanings that I have since listened to sacred records more closely, and was amazed to discover that there is a definite three-quarter beat to many of the apparently a rubato records in this style. An in-betweener is Lord Jesus, and Pll Search Heaven for You could be written in three as easily as in two or four. (Capitol 15392, 57-70005) (G.A.)

St. Paul Baptist Church Choir

He's a Friend of Mine Didn't It Rain

This is more my speed. Solid rhythm straight through, and it rocks all the way. Only thing wrong here is that the choir is too well-trained. Congregation records are much more fun. Still, the soprano voice is good, and He's a Friend of Mine is fine. (Capitol 57-70002) (G.A.)

keep him from knowing how much I was interested in what he had to sell. So with a great show of indifference, I made a small purchase of something I didn't want, and made what would have been a dignified exit, had I remembered that the bulls in India make no pretence of being housebroken.

If Gene Deitch's wonderful character, The Cat, ever has a nightmare, I can imagine that he might dream he was gagged and tied to a chair in a record store while he sees hordes of collectors buying Oliver Gennetts at 10c apiece. I felt rather like that for the at 10c apiece. I felt rather like that for the rest of that day and night.

The following day I dropped into the store again. "Sahib want records, real American?" enquired the Indian Shylock.

I tried to look as if I had never even heard of Edison, made a small purchase, and walked out. I turned back on the doorsten and told him that if he wanted to get step and told him that if he wanted to get rid of some of his records, I would try and find time to play them through sometime. He could pack them in boxes and I would send my bearer (Indian servant) down to collect them. Of course his price was simply ridiculous, but perhaps we could use a few of them in the Mess if he made them cheap enough. There was no hurry.; I would send my bearer down sometime, when I had nothing better to do.

He told me that the price was cheap; the He told me that the price was cheap; the records had come thousands of miles; they were all virgin; and English sahibs had plenty money. He grabbed for a record from the top of a pile, dislodging a dozen others with a clatter to the floor as he did so. With tears in his eyes he assured me they were genuine American and so very cheap at the price asked. He smacked the record he held in his hand so hard that it broke in two. He burled the broken parts broke in two. He hurled the broken parts into a corner and said with some show of venom: "Bing Crosby, real American, three rupees!"

I shrugged my shoulders and slowly walked away. I could wait. It was hardly likely that anyone else would find that pile of Perfects. There were no local band boys who would be interested enough to buy them. The only local musicians were a bunch who parked themselves on a rocky prominence near my bungalow each Sunday morning and rent the air with dolorous dissonance. It was possible that some jazzminded person might stop at the shop on their way through; but it was most unlikely.

Eventually I managed to wait a week and by the end of that time the store-keeper's resistance had broken. He agreed to let me have the whole lot on approval, and what is more, I had any that I cared to buy at my

What was in those piles? Well, nearly everything that was issued on the Perfect label: Leadbelly, Luis Russell, Bing Crosby, Mannone, and the like.

But how did those records ever get into that strange little Indian store in that strange little hill village thousands of miles from anywhere? It must be a strange story, but I never found the answer to it; your guess is as good as mine.

Will buy used records any quantity or collections.

that his horn couldn't be recognized, or else didn't play on it. Dickerson's personnel in 1928 was: Armstrong and Hobson, trumpets; Fred Robinson, trombone; Jim Strong, Bert Curry, Crawford Wethington, saxes; Gene Anderson and Earl Hines, pianos; Mancy Cara, banjo; Pete Briggs, tuba; Zutty Singleton, drums.

Allen's last group is Elgar's Creole orchestra on Brunswick and Vocalion. Titles are Café Capers/When Jenny Does Her Lowdown Dance on Vo 15447 and Brotherly Love/Nightmare on Br 3404 and Vo 15478. These are probably Fall, 1926, but Walter wants to know the recording date, instrumentation, masters, and personnel. Elgar, Walter informs us, had a large orchestra of about seventeen pieces, including at this time, Joe Sudler, trumpet; Omer Simeon, clarinet; and Cliff King, sax. Simeon told Allen that he had never recorded with Elgar, but Walter has never heard the records and knows nothing more about Elgar's regular personnel of that period.

The disc shown above is The Snakes' Hips by the St. Louis Syncopaters. Musically, it's early-1920-or-so jazz. It's all ensemble with no solos, but there are a few breaks and a fair tailgate trombone breaking through. But what labels was Olympic tied in with and did the Fletcher Record Company, Inc., of New York, have any connection with Fletcher Henderson? Can anyone tell us anything about the label?

wrote many rags from his improvisations. (We want to be quite clear in stating that ragtime, as musical material, may be played by other instruments, but that stylistically it was created primarily for piano—even in those treble passages to which a clarinet takes like a duck to water.)

But while repeating the fact-it's been said often-that ragtime influenced Jelly, let's not be enticed up the river by it. Jelly was a jazzman, and a New Orleanian, who could function as a blues pianist in a flea-bitten dive or as a player of improvised rags at a St. Louis piano contest. But let's not get it the other way around and put him out of time and out of place.

As with orchestral jazz, the reception and enjoyment of ragtime has undergone definite phases: that of its first musical synthesis, with its audience comprised of the sporting house world, and that of saloons, as well as tent shows, early vaudeville, etc., and finally modern revival of interest in it—marked both by scholarly clambakes and by a renewed, though socially differently- consti-tuted, popular appeal. While such phases are distinguishable, one must stress the fluidity of musical growth and the complexity of historical-environmental relationships. In both ragtime and jazz there are vast discrepancies between cultural genesis and working environment, and we must take both factors into account if we are to de-scribe accurately the precise texture and color of the music.

As this writer has pointed out before, we must also take into account the adaptability of the musical language that speaks now to an audience far removed from that of the wine rooms of St. Louis. We have already noted this adaptability in the discrepancy between cultural genesis and working environment. However, we must be careful not to overemphasize the discrepancies to the point of overlooking the distinct connection between 'genesis" and the earlier forms which gave birth to ragtime and the blues-and the influence of these early forms on the later product. It is about time that we reminded all writers who like their social consciousness "neat," that while blues may be urban or rural, primitive or relatively sophisticated, 12-bar or 16-bar, the blues as such come from the category of "Negro sinful songs"—whether they are about poverty and floods or about the 219 train. The train took the pimp away and the prostitute's loneliness is a real and valid subject for art.

Despite the overwhelming evidence that the immediate jazz environment was of great importance during formative years, some writers have a truly quixotic social consciousness. They wish to play knight in armor to a "virtuous" lady (that whorehouse music) and try to save someone whose virtue has long since been compromised.

Actually, we like a good shrill fight as well as the next man, which is why I sought this opportunity to jump Wolff. To prove the point, we've just come from under a hot battle in which an eclectic French critic and a leading local mouldy traded insults. Reports from the readers were that the whole thing was tasteless and quite avoidable, even though both had clawed at each other's "sham."

There's a lot to be said against any excess of controversy. The late war, and the potential next one, fit that description. Controversy without knowledge leads to Southerners who just plain hate Negroes, to people who can't stand Jews, or unions. Or to people who object to magazines that try to tell you something about a form of music you don't dig. It's tough to make headlines out of tolerance, but that's not necessarily fatal. What can be fatal—fatal to jazz—is for everyone to run into his own corner, close his ears, and stick out his tongue.

In the "For Disposition" section the condition of the record is indicated by these abbrevia-

N (New): Surface noise equal to an unplayed record; no visible or audible wear perceptible; original finish intact.

E (Excellent): Surface noise low, smooth, uniform. Not irregular or crackling, Easily, disorm. Not irregular or crackling. Easily disegarded in listening. No perceptible distor-

V (Very Good): Surface noise somewhat more prominent; light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting.

G (Good): A moderate amount of surface noise; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion; on the whole, reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention, Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music.

F (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music, and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory.

P (Poor): Foreign noises, collectively, relouder than the recorded music; continuous concentration is required, and there is little satisfaction in listening.

Column 4 of the "For Disposition" section shows the method by which each record is to be dis-

"SAL": The record is for sale at the price indicated.

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only. If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list. If you have certain records in which he may be interested mention these in your letter.

The extreme right column in both the "Wented" and "For Disposition" sections shows the first four letters of the advertiser's name. His address is shown below.

THE RECORD CHANGER

125 La Salle Street New York 27, N. Y. CLOSING DATE FOR BIDS
On all Records advertised
for auction in this issue will be AUGUST 20, 1949
UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED

NOTE:

All persons using the medium of the Record Changer in the buying, selling or trading of phonograph records, do so subject to these Rules and Regulations:

 A collector or person who solicits and receives advance remittance for a record must send the record within a period of four weeks.

- 2. A collector or person who orders and receives a record prepaid must pay for it within a period of four weeks.
- 3. A eollector or person who obtains a record in trade must fulfill his end of the trade within a period of four weeks.
- 4. A collector or person who requests that a record be shipped C.O.D. must accept the shipment unless the shipment is damaged in transit. (A bid on an auction or an order from a sale which states that records will be shipped C.O.D. unless otherwise instructed, is considered a request for C.O.D. shipment.)

The name of the person or collector who violates the above rules will be printed in the Record Changer upon the first violation, and the violation will be described. (Exception: where breakage or over-grading is concerned, the record is to be returned promptly to the shipper. If the parties involved do not arrive at a settlement, the matter is to be referred to the American Record Collectors Board.)

When infractions of these rules occur, contact Jacob S. Schneider, Legal Dept., The Record Changer, 128 West 66th St., New York, N. Y.

RECORD CHANGER

COMPETITION

To discover and focus public attention on the best of the young amateur jazz bands, the Record Changer is sponsoring a jazz record contest.

If jazz is to remain a vital factor in American music, young musicians must be encouraged. Some amateur groups have managed to fight their way to recognition; but the Record, Changer is convinced that many other local bands deserve attention—must be recognized if jazz is to continue and grow.

This competition is our effort to seek out these new jazz pioneers and, by issuing their records and publicizing their activities, encourage them, and other young bands.

Leading jazz critics will pass judgment on the entries—Good Jazz, not the following of a particular style, will be the sole criterion. Any amateur band is eligible. Your outfit can enter the contest merely by submitting two sides before the November 15 deadline. (and by following the other rules given below).

First Prize:

The winning band's two sides will be issued on a special Record Changer label, and given nation-wide distribution. Standard royalty rates will be paid.

A full story on the band's personnel will be featured in the Record Changer.

Second and Third Prizes:

Nation-wide distribution, on Record Changer label, of a record coupling the best sides by the second and third place bands. Plus a feature story in the magazine on these bands, and on the fourth and fifth place bands.

Judges:

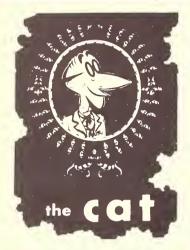

George Avakian . . . Charles Edward Smith . . . Bucklin Moon . . . Sidney Finkelstein . . . Rudi Blesh . . . Bill Grauer, Jr. . . Orrin Keepnews . . . Paul Bacon . . . and others to be announced later, including leading musicians.

Rules:

- 1. Only bands the nucleus of whose membership has not been commercially recorded are eligible.
- 2. Two sides of a ten-inch record constitutes an entry. Only two sides may be submitted by any one group.
- 3. Records may be either studio acetates or of the home recording variety.
- NOTE: If the quality of the recording of any winning entry is not of sufficiently high caliber to permit satisfactory commercial pressing, it will be impossible to award such winner the issuance and distribution described above.
- 4. No entries can be returned to contestants. The Record Changer guarantees, however, that no commercial, or other unauthorized usage will be made by us of any non-winning entry.
- 5. The decisions of the judges as to merit, eligibility, and observance of these rules, will be final.
- 6. All entries must be accompanied by a brief description of band personnel: including age, instrument, experience.
- 7. All entries must be received by November 15, 1949.
- 8. Send entries to: THE RECORD CHANGER, 125 LaSalle Street, New York 27, N. Y.

Editor:

The article on improvisation (Improvisation: the Fact and the Fable—June, 1949) had a good point to make. As one who plays both jazz and European classical music, I can heartily agree that a good jazz musician has to master the art of music itself-in other words, jazz isn't all pure emotion. Most of us younger musicians certainly do need some urging to broaden our musical experience and theory.

But the point was made quite badly. In fact, this article represents the kind of criticism which musicians resent most because of the type of, or lack of, reasoning behind it. It is a possible conclusion with no, or false, premises.

We are asked to believe that the reason paper music was not used in the old days was because one band had to hide its music to prevent theft of arrangements. It seems to be assumed that up to that time music and arrangements were in general use, in the face of much contrary evidence by survivors of that generation.

It is categorically stated that no pianist today, by record evidence (a hell of a way to evaluate living musicians), is able to do Maple Leaf the way Joplin intended. Entirely possible. But then the writer makes the slight omission of what she thinks Joplin intended.

A question or two. Is it meant that musicians should follow the printed music of Joplin? Then it certainly is played as desired. Should the musicians imitate the past exactly? If not, then what standards should be followed?

Another bit of good reasoning from false premises is the writer's idea of improvisation itself. She seems to think of it as interpretation of existing compositions and arrangements, and mistakenly berates our generation of players for tampering with jazz classics, when all that is needed is to berate us justifiably for a persistent lack of technique. Evidence of the dozens of titles, keys, and arrangements on records of the chorus of Sister Kate shows how little respect the early players had for compositions and arrangements. Improvisation as practiced by pre-Beethoven Europeans certainly included actual composition in its technique if we are to believe music historians at all.

Again, the reason this article is bad criticism is that it tells what may be wrong with the way traditional jazz is played today but does not offer specific, constructive suggestions to the musicians, other than to generally widen technique and experience, and for the wrong reasons. The criticism of classical music is accepted generally by musicians and public because its better authorities know enough about music, writing, and thinking to make sense to those who deal with musical problems in practice. Until jazz criticism reaches this level we musicians will read it more for laughs and anger than for help.

lemME take this chorus

We are normally quite peaceable people, and have recently even gone so far as to argue publicly the advantages of peacefulness in jazz criticism (see last month's Record Changer and the July 15th issue of Downbeat). But in the month of July two colleagues of ours indulged in irritating—though quite different—examples of what can only be called foolishness, and we feel compelled to say a few scolding words. We want it clearly understood, however, that all this is not to be any of that "dog-eat-dog" or "nastiness" that we have gone on record as opposing. This is just a matter of our believing that Downbeat and Metronome have stepped a bit out of line.

(1) Metronome first. Editor Barry Ulanov has written, in the July issue, one of those articles that turn up every once in a while: the kind that say that jazz and jazz criticism are really the simplest things in the world, if only you listen to me. In this particular case, Ulanov offers in a nutshell "how to tell good from bad in jazz." He has something good from bad in jazz." He has something described as "the triple critical play," which solves all problems. He claims that people get very "distraught" and actually "resist disciplined thinking and logical procedure" in discussing jazz, whereas "discipline and logic, clarity and orderliness" should be easier to achieve in jazz than in any other than the control of the process of the control o art. To achieve this clarity, Ulanov has three magic words: "freshness, profundity, and skill," and the bulk of his article is a discussion of what he means by these terms.

Even before we got to the business of reading the definitions, we felt pretty per-turbed. It is a firm belief of ours that jazz is not the sort of thing that can be handled in a concrete, semi-mathematical manner, cannot be reduced to some rule of thumb. It's an emotional and subjective matter; certainly there are some standards that are fairly inflexible, but in our opinion it is sound aesthetics and sound jazz criticism, to leave wide areas uncluttered by rules (Ulanov calls this sort of attitude "calculated uncertainty," but that's preferable by far, we feel, to writing a rule-book in which you look on page ing a rule-book in which you look on page 36 to determine whether the record you just heard was "good" or "bad").

As for the triple play: "freshness," which turns out to be another word for "inspiration," is first described as "divine fury or a heavenly gift," which sounds acceptable, if a bit pompous. But it then transpires that you can—says Ulanov—get all of jazz "outlined on paper"; you can list "the common variations on the even commoner themes the rows tions on the even commoner themes, the rows of familiar riffs and the mountains of only slightly different solos"; you can jot down "common sounds" and "basic ideas," and finally come up with "one long curve on a graph"!!! Apparently Barry really does want a rule-book; our previous figure of speech is not just an exaggeration; there should be a mythical page 36, and if you can find listed on that page the musical figure you have just heard, then it just isn't full of freshness. One

The definition of "profundity" turns out to be sort of partisan, since "there has been little if anything in jazz that could be called profound" until the days of "the later Ellington, . . . Charlie Parker and Lennie Tristano." (Tristano is Barry's big favorite now, and when Metronome climbs on a band wagon, they sure ride it hard.) Profundity, it seems, is a matter of portraying "states of being rather than things with the qualities of these states" ("joy rather than a joyful boy, tragedy rather than a tragic event," explains Ulanov). How shortsighted can you get? Does Ulanov mean that because Bessie Smith sings about one flood in one town, that neither the singer nor the listener realizes that the subject of the song is "tragedy," not merely the single event?

Under this heading Ulanov also advances the unique theory that one way to get "pro-fundity" is to "convince jazz musicians that every profound urge and effort they may feel and make should be expressed in their music.'

This, we're afraid, is nothing more than pretentious clap-trap. Of course whatever a sincere musician plays stems from his "urges and efforts" (i.e., his musical thoughts, ideas, and emotions). But the idea that someone—presumably a critic, presumably Barry Ulanov—should bring some undefined sort of pressure to bear to "convince" a musician to hurry up and set down his "profound" feelings, is as meaningless as it is unfeasible. We submit that either a musician plays largely by instinct, without much conscious rationalization about whether he's "fresh," or "profound," or else he himself sits down and worries over his work in an effort to make it more articulate, more self-expressive. But in neither case is there likely to be any consciousness of what constitutes "profundity," and a good thing, too, for any musician consciously striving to be "pro-found" is more likely to produce something as self-conscious and pretentious as, say, this Metronome article

A rather ridiculous picture comes to mind (and we'll admit it's fortunately an impossible scene): A musician is sitting down to lunch; with him is an erudite critic who has "convinced" this previously hit-or-miss player that every time he feels profound he'd better do something about it. Suddenly the musician leaps to his feet and yelps: "Man, I just felt profound; hand me my licorice stick." From under the table the logical critic produces his portable recording unit, and music marches on. As for the musician who has never "reached the important conclusion that exaltation is greater than ecstasy, just never going to pass the test and will never, alas, be profound. Two out.

"Skill" is treated more quickly and more emptily, since it is "the easiest standard to . . recognize." Ulanov merely notes that the "abundant technical skill" of such men as Eldridge, Hodges, Parker, Tatum, Shavers, Hawkins, Goodman, etc. is "beyond argument." But what is needed is not mere technical skill, which leads to "mechanical" playing, but rather skill-plus-"spontaneity." Spontaneity turns out to be a combination of freshness and profundity, and we "recognize" it when we hear Lester Young, Parker, Tristano, et al. How all this is supposed to help one tell "good from bad," Ulanov doesn't say. Three out, all out.

Our purpose in this dissection of Ulanov's high-sounding critical flight is not just to be unpleasant. We do feel that much of what he has to say is, bluntly, nonsense. But more importantly, his article is a striking example (Continued on Page 20)

(The Firehouse Five Plus Two is one of the most exciting, flag-wavingest, happiest bands we have ever heard on records. The music has to be heard to be appreciated. But the story of the band, and the colorful way in which it has captured the hearts of all who have heard it in person, can be presented by means of the printed word and photographs. If you get the impression that Bob Greene likes this mad mob, you're absolutely correct. We do, too. And for still more enthusiasm about them, note George Avakian's review, in this issue, of their first issued recordings .- Ed.)

Now all this is about a jazz band, among other things, but to talk about them we're going to have to begin by talking about a woman. Her name is Betty Kimball, and she well may take her place in the history books along with Helen of Troy, St. Joan, and some others. You see, jazz bands have to get their names somehow, as well as their inspiration, and for this dual purpose Betty Kimball stepped gracefully into the scene about a year ago. And she did it by uttering a sentence that well may take its place in the jazz legend. "Ward," she said to her husband, "don't you think we ought to add a little more color to the affair?'

The musical significance of this will come out later, but at that point Ward Kimball's face must have made quite a picture. The "affair" was only a 250 mile outing of antique automobiles, fifty or sixty cars all brilliantly painted, their drivers wearing old

And then the silly beginnings of a grin must have spread itself over his face. And Betty must have been grinning too, because somehow both of them blurted out the answer together. Of course! It was the only logical thing! It was perfectly obvious! An ancient Fire Engine! A bright red crazy old Fire Engine, with the band hanging all over it, stomping along right in the middle of the caravan!

And with the dawning of the light, a double yelp of glee must have descended ginning to wonder what all this had to do with what you came for when he slaps you on the back and says, "Say, have you seen my new 1881 Baldwin No. 2 Locomotive. It's right in my back yard! And it runs, too!"

Chances are that, at this point, you might duck for the nearest exit and start hollering for a guy with a white jacket. But it's too late! Gently Kimball leads you into a little room filled with drawing boards, crayons, paints, and with aportrait of Snow White up on the wall. You swallow, and look up at Snow White for strength. She smiles at you. She understands. She's been all through dusters, chugging through lower California to San Diego and back! Horns blowing, motorcycle escorts, picnics, cocktails . . . all this in 1948! Old Chevrolets, Regal Underslungs, Maxwells, Locomobiles and other venerable cars that were old when Wilson was elected president . . . all this, including a Kimball antique, and now Betty Kimball suggests that they add more color!

'Ancient automobile collector Ward Kimball must have gasped something or other, but it was probably intelligible. However, the wife knew her husband. She merely waited until he was through sputtering, and then repeated her question.

"Don't you think, dear, we ought to add a little more color to the affair? You have a jazz band-this is an outing of the Horseless Carriage Club. Why not combine the two?"

Ward Kimball must have raised his eyes very slowly and looked at her. And very slowly something inside him must have begun to laugh. What in Heaven's name could they ride in?

upon the citizens of San Cabriel, California. Enter . . . THE FIRE HOUSE FIVE!

Let's shift our scene a bit. No, not down to New Orleans, or any place nearly that conventional. Let's shift it to the Walt Disney Studios in Hollywood, there to meet a cast of characters as zany as any who ever appeared in those wonderful Disney cartoons. The men behind the scenes, the men behind the wag of Pluto's tail, Mickey's laugh, and Donald's exasperated quack. The men who think up, animate, create the sound effects for those loveable quiet people, and who certainly must have more than a touch of Pluto, Mickey, and Donald in them to do so. And approaching down the hall, brush and palette in his hand, is a fellow you might recognize.

Re-enter, Ward Kimball!

At this point you're allowed a double take that would do justice to Donald Duck, For it's the same guy who, when we last met him, was scheming with his wife about buying an old fire engine! And you're just beday of the week, your address, and your telephone. You smile. You remember them. There's still hope.

"Look, Mr. Kimball," you say, "I'm trying to find out about a band out here called the Firehouse Five. I'm told the leader of the band is a trombonist named Ward Kimball. It's a musician I'm looking for. Not a cartoonist at Disney's or an automobile collector or a guy with a R. R. in his back yard. Perhaps you know him. Apparently his name is the same as yours."

Ward smiles. "I'm the guy," he says. "I play trombone.'

And so the story begins to unfold! Cartoonist, painter, antique auto collector, railroad-in-his-back-yard-Kimball, trombonist, photographer, leader of the Firehouse Five: all these are one and the same guy. It's all quite a story, and gradually the background of the Firehouse Five begins to take shape.

You start with a question: "What has this movie studio got to do with jazz? I thought Disney made cartoons."

Ward smiles. "It just so happens that we had a New Orleans band working here without our knowing about it! Frank Thomas, our piano, is an animation director here. Ed Penner, our bass sax man, is a writer. Jim MacDonald, the drummer, is in charge of sound effects."

"You mean," you gulp, "when Mickey falls down the stairs ..."

Kimball nods. "That's right. Those sounds you hear are Jim's. And Clarke Mallery, the clarinet, is also an animator."

"All these guys," you say, "actually work at something else?"

"That's right," Kimball says. "That's why it's Good Time Jazz. We play for the fun of it."

How did these guys ever find one another, you wonder out loud. "It all had to do with record collecting," Ward replies. About 1944 he found that there were some other record collectors at Disney. They were all artists who liked jazz because it was fun to listen to. And some of them played or had played an instrument at one time. "So," said Ward, "we used to get together for record sessions, at which the guys would take out their horns and accompany the pros on wax. One day

"I learnt trombone as a kid," Ward went on, "but gave it up in '34 when I came to Disney. Guess he gave me the job 'cause he figured I was just as screwy as the characters in his cartoons," he adds dryly.

"For how long did you quit playing?" you ask.

"Fifteen years," is the answer. "I was busy getting married, having three kids, collecting old autos, and taking care of a train that wangled its way into my back yard . . . and making cartoons."

"What are you doing now?"

"Working on the mad tea party in 'Alice in Wonderland'!"

"Typical!" you breathe.

The leader of the Fire House Five tells you that Clarke Mallery, of the animation department, used to be an Artie Shaw devotee.

"He used to take Artie's choruses and learn them note for note," Ward said sadly.

"But finally he saw the 'truth.' He threw Shaw overboard and began from the beginning. He's really one hell of a clarinet player now . . . has that good New Orleans tone, and plugs up every piece of daylight he can find."

Along with Clarke and some others, Ward began to have record sessions, at which the guys would take out their horns and accompany the pros on wax. "One day," Ward tells you, "the phonograph broke down, and someone had the startling notion to play without it. To our surprise it sounded better than when we played with the record!" And pouring you another drink, he adds, "I know it sounds corny, but it's true. And from then on we went on playing in our own strictly 'no style' style."

And then, in 1945, they went to a big Halloween party, "It was a pretty complicated jam session," Ward admits. "But out of the uproar, Clarke and I found one guy with whom we could really play. Johnny Lucas." You discover that Lucas, a Pasadena lad who had graduated from Stanford and was doing some writing and newspaper work, really loved jazz. "He plays easy and warm," Ward says admiringly. "Incidentally, Johnny had polio when he was sixteen, which crippled him so that he couldn't walk." He gets about now, you learn, in a light wheel chair, but he cannot bend his arm at the elbow, and therefore has devised a trumpet with a long neck. "While he gets around in his own car, and plays a great many dates in town, you can imagine that it isn't easy for him," Ward says, "He's a great guy . . . charming, quick witted, with a dry humor that is never at rest."

The three of them, Mallery, Lucas and Ward, then began getting together in Ward's large living room. "Acoustically perfect by some freak chance," he says, not without pride. "We tried out various guitar and bass and piano players. But it wasn't until Frank' we hada regular pianist." Ward tells you: we hada regular pianist." Ward tells you: "Frank's got a hell of a responsible job as an animation director here at Disney, He's the guy in charge of a unit working on specific characters of a sequence in a film. In 1945," Ward continued, "Frank was what I call a 'Ten Cent Store Pianist.' Everything straight from the sheet music." "And you got him right?" you ask. Ward puts his feet on the desk. "Gave him the Barrelhouse Piano album, the Brunswick reissue," he replies. "And that got him started. Frank and the album got together, and we had our piano player. Right now," he added, "he's working out some wonderful rags, and sometimes during intermissions, he, Harper and myself get together on piano, banjo and washboard and really go."

name," Ward says, "but we were just starting, and he was a brave man!" The band didn't have a name and so they dreamed up the San Gabriel Blue Blowers. "San Gabriel is the little town near Pasadena where I live," Ward adds. "So if it didn't turn out, the boys figured they'd let them come after me!"

"But it went off O.K. and pretty soon we began to feel like musicians. Albert Nicholas, Joe Darensberg, Ram Hall and Zutie Singleton used to come over to the house to play with us. They taught us a great deal . . . especially Nicholas. He gave us an awful lot of the do's and dont's."

"Then we had a crisis. Betty got tired of those bass players who dug holes in her beautiful hardwood floors." "What did you do?" you ask. "Back to Disney of course!" Ward chuckles. "Found a writer here named Ed Penner who offered to play bass sax." Resourceful place, this Disney's, you think!

Penner, you learn, had a union card twenty years before, and was the only one of the band with any professional experience. "When he joined originally," Ward said, "he wanted to play tenor, but the boys told him that a tenor was out if he was going to play in their jazz band, and he'd have to be happy with the bass!"

During this time they'd had several drummers, but again Disney came to the rescue. Buried deep down in the sound effects department was Jim MacDonald, head of the whole works! What better than a sound effects man for a drummer! "MacDonald is the inventive fellow," Ward tells you, "who has to figure out how to make the fantastic sounds you hear in Disney pictures." All of which, apparently, shows what the parents of Donald and Pluto do in their spare time for amusement! Join Kimballs jazz band!

This mild-mannered, modest owner-proprietor of the Grizzly Flats R. R. says that "Originally, most of these people knew me only as 'that fellow who has a full-sized railroad in his back yard.' But," he continues, "I found that a railroad comes in pretty handy when you're trying to find yourself a good banjo player. And we needed one pretty badly." You learn that during an excursion of railroad enthusiasts aboard an old train on the Denver & Rio Grande narrow gauge system in Colorado he ran into a fellow named Harper Goff. "We were having a pretty gay time, singing the old songs, and this chap Goff, whom I'd never seen before, just happened to have his guitar with him." Ward admits that he just happened to have his harmonica and washboard with him. And that was the start of a beautiful friendship. "Goff turned out to be a highly successful commercial artist," Ward tells you, "and he was the guy who had to be the banjo for the Firehouse Five. He bought a beautiful long necked Plectrum banjo," Ward adds, "which he plays by ear. It's got a singing tone, much richer than the usual tenor banjo you hear."

And this is where the Blue Blowers became the F. H. 5. "After that night when proudly, "date back fifty or sixty years and we restored them and repainted them." It seems that, in addition to playing the music, the band polishes the brass, are trained in using the equipment, all of which is in perfectly usable shape, "and if we had to, the boys could really put out a fire!" "And since there are seven of us," says Ward, "what else to do but call ourselves the Fire House Five Plus Two."

You begin to wonder about that outing of the Horseless Carriage Club during which the band and the old engine made their grand entrance. "Yes, the engine was finished in time," Ward says, "and it was really quite a ball." And from some clippings he shows

The Band Today with Mountjoy and Alguire

Betty and I first got the idea of an old fire wagon we couldn't let go of it," says Ward. "So . . . we began getting information on old fire engines." According to the rules of the Horseless Carriage Club, you learn, it couldn't be newer than 1914! "As luck would have it," he adds, "we managed to find a 1914 American La France which we could buy from the City of Venice (California). She was in awful shape." He paid $225 for it as junk, and then spent the next six months taking it apart and putting it together again, so that "now it looks exactly as it did the day it left the factory." "And naturally," he continues," if we were going to ride on it we would have to dress as firemen." He had to work like the devil to get authentic hats ("just ordinary ones wouldn't do"), and finally obtained them by running ads in the firemen's magazines, stating that the Grizzly Flats Fire Dept. needed them.

The drive was down to the San Diego auto show and back as part of the General Petroleum caravan of old vehicles. The boys made the 250 mile round trip in the firetruck, played in the streets, serenaded firehouses en route, stopped at school yards and disrupted classrooms as the kids poured out to listen to them. People danced in the street, cheered, and snarled traffic. Parading through Laguna, the motorcade passed the local fire stations, When the ancient Kimball La France sighted the smoke eaters, she veered out of line (Ward claims) and halted, perhaps nostalgically, in the doorway. What else to do but to blast forth with "Wait till the fire glows, Nellie!" And when it was over, the old firehouse sashayed back into line and the parade continued. Shades of The Saints!

adds Ward, "and I must say she made a pretty good looking fireman's wife!" Perked up with a straw hat, red and white striped shirt and blue skirt which she made herself, she wasn't the sort to miss a show like that! What did she contribute to the engine? The feminine touch of a bouquet of flowers, which she deftly arranged in the fire-wagon's cuspidor!

Ward says that they have some guest stars who play with them from time to time. They have their own red shirts, suspenders, and hats. Two of these guests are Nappy La Mare and Zutie Singleton. Nappy is the guy who's been substituting for Goff during the time Harper is working on the International Harvester Calendar, which he does each year.

And of course, the fire idea had to work into the music, too. The siren and alarm bell heard in Firehouse Stomp are always on the bandstand. "Not for corn," Ward says, "but for fun and for what it adds to the music."

The Firehouse Five Recording

Warming Up Before the Cavalcade

Tambourine, Washboard, and Siren (on piano)

The boys are always on the lookout to use other old instruments, such as the tambourine you hear behind Lucas' solo in San, or behind the vocal in Blues My Naughty Sweetie.

"And don't forget," Ward adds, "a fellow who's been with us on a lot of our experiences. He's Danny Alguire, a wonderful New Orleans cornet player. He was out of town when we recorded, but will be in on the next session. He's had his baptism under fire," Ward says proudly. "He rode the engine with us to San Diego!"

The band, you might gather by now, loves to play for the fun of it, and often turn down high-paying jobs in favor of minimum-scale jobs where they think they'll have a better time. They've played various dances, a couple of jazz band balls, some college and high school affairs, and even a chiropractors' convention . . . anywhere people want to have a good time listening to them. At the Beverly Caverns, where they play on Monday nights, the crowds overflow the joint, to the gratification of the owner, who can't believe what he sees and hears. "But we quit the Caverns for a time," Ward says, "because it knocked hell out of us Tuesdays at the studio, and also because our wives, like most wives, would like to see us once in a while."

After listening to Ward, you get the idea that the boys' wives are the only ones holding them back. It's a selfish motive, but a commendable one! After all, Betty Kimball and the rest are only human and they get tired of being lonely. But can you imagine what would happen without their restraining influence? Jazz might benefit, but Pluto would never wag his tail, International Harvester would have to do without a calendar, Pasadena would be minus one reporter, and Donald Duck would certainly have much less sound and fury. Maybe it's better this way.

Ward says he's worked out a series of hand signals which lets the band know what is coming. "A nervous shake of my right hand," he demonstrates, "lets the rhythm section know that on the next chorus the banjo and piano will tremolo and the drums will add a rhythmically steady roll behind the solo. Swells," here he uses his hands as if he were holding a trombone, "are indicated by slowly lifting my slide. After beats by a jerking of my elbow," he says with a grin. But now his face grows serious for a minute. "Don't get the idea from all this," he says, "that this is a one man affair. You've been getting the story from me, but the band exists as a unit, and no man is any more important than any other one." He looks at you long and hard, and you know he feels very deeply about this.

There's an eighth member of the Fire House Five who, even if he doesn't actually appear on the records and on the bandstand in red suspenders, has an awful lot to do with them. He is Lester Koenig, the same chap who helped start the Jazzman label in 1941, and together with Dave Stuart made the original Watters records. Today he's the proud father of the Good Time Jazz label on which the F. H. 5 appears. But for him, too, this is only a part time affair. Les is a screen writer with Paramount, and right now he's hard at work on the preparation of Dreiser's "Sister Carrie" and Thomas Wolfe's "Look Homeward Angel."

Actually, there's a strong coincidental parallel to be drawn between Koenig's present screenplays and his work with the Firehouse Five. The work of writers like Dreiser and Wolfe is Americana—an examination and interpretation of American life—and in a different but no less valid way, the things to which Ward Kimball has devoted himself: his New Orleans band, his old cars, his authentic old firemen's helmets, his railroad, are an effort to recapture part of America and give it expression. These things are fun in themselves, but they also constitute a reaching back to the roots of American culture and tradition. On one level, the Firehouse Five and Koenig, Dreiser and Wolfe, are all different faces of the same thing.

Serenading the Laguna Fire Department

The Grizzly Flats Railroad

"What about that railroad of yours?" you ask Kimball. "It might be good Americana now, but what was it in the beginning?"

"I thought an old Railway car would make a good bar," replies the happy leader of the F. H. 5. "And then when I got that, Betty said, 'Why not do it up right? You've got the coach—now just add a locomotive and you'll have a complete train!' Once we started with that we had to restore 'em! you might as well do it right."

Maybe he drives you out to his place. Maybe you think you're heading straight for an 1875 railway station, but soon you find it's the Kimballestate, and there it is! A full sized Baldwin No. 2 (2-6-0) locomotive, with tender and car attached. She's painted as bright and clean as the day she was new, "And she runs too," adds Kimball. Gold leaf trim, polished brass, vermillion, carmine red . . . a World's Fair of color sitting on 650 feet of track!

All this, and three kids, ancient automobiles, Disney cartoons, and the roaringest, happiest, most hell-bent-for-the-last-chorus band in California.

About all you can say is: "This is the damndest, most delightful, screwiest set-up I've ever seen in all my life."

And beside you, Ward Kimball, with a little laugh and a little pride hidden in his voice, would probably agree: "Crazy, isn't it?"

(The vagaries of the band business seem to have lightly touched even the Firehouse Five. At the present writing, Danny Alguire has replaced Johnny Lucas on trumpet. Alguire, who reportedly gives the band more power and drive, is completely in keeping with the completely unbelievable atmosphere surrounding the Firehouse crew. Danny makes his living playing with T. Texas Tyler's hillbilly-type band, but is actually a fingerprint expert, and is shortly to return to the Los Angeles Police Department! Monte Mountjoy, a discovery of Alguire's (who has been raving to Kimball for years about this "wonderful two-beat drummer"), is currently filling in for Jim McDonald, whose heavy duties as head of the Disney sound effects department have forced him to beg off from band work, much as it hurts him to leave the Firehousers.)

LAST OF THE OLYMPIANS

Bunk Johnson is dead. A musical career verging in some aspects on the fabulous has come to a close as the international jazz public hears with sorrow of the great trumpeter's passing at New Iberia, Louisiana.

It was not by accident that the name of Bunk Johnson came latterly to be virtually synonymous with New Orleans jazz as its most classic, for his musical life was inextricably interwoven with the early development of the music that originated in his native New Orleans.

William Gary Johnson was born on December 20, 1879 in Laurel Street, a fact recorded, he recently stated, in the Johnson family Bible. He began to study music at the age of seven, and took up the cornet one year later. In 1894 at the age of fifteen, he played in the Adam Oliver Band and, when barely sixteen and still in short trousers, he joined the Bolden Band as second cornetist to Buddy. After several years with Bolden, Bunk went on the road with a minstrel company visiting New York in 1903 and San Francisco in 1905. During these years, he also played with a theatre band in Dallas, Texas.

Returning to New Orleans, he played with a number of bands and his greatest local fame and influence came during the years 1911-1914, when he played with the Eagle Band, which was the name of Bolden's Band in its continuation after the leader's forced

After 1914, Bunk was constantly on tour but ironically never reached Chicago where in the years of World War I, with jazz first reaching a Northern audience, he might have achieved national fame. It was in 1931 that his cornet was destroyed, and beginning to have trouble with his teeth, he retired to the western Louisiana town of New Iberia, working in the rice fields, hauling sugar cane, and teaching music in the public schools whenever opportunity offered.

It was late in the 1930's, after a tip from Louis Armstrong, that Frederic Ramsey, Jr., and William Russell finally located him through a letter sent in care of the New Iberia postmaster. Funds were raised for Doctor Leonard Bechet to provide him with new dentures and to supply him with a trumpet. He promptly amazed all who heard him by the vigor, freshness, and creative power of his playing.

He was soon to make his first phonograph records. In June, 1942, Dave Stuart recorded his playing on the Jazz Man label in a series of discs which served also to bring George Lewis and Jim Robinson to the attention of the jazz world. Another New Orleans session under the auspices of Gene Williams followed shortly and was released on the Jazz Information label.

In the Spring of 1943, during a series of Jazz lectures which I was giving at the San Francisco Museum of Art, money was raised to bring Bunk to the Pacific Coast and he appeared with the pianist, Bertha Gonsoulin on the last lecture. Several weeks later, the Museum sponsored a concert at the Geary Theatre in San Francisco featuring Bunk with Mutt Carey, Kid Ory, and other New Orléans players. Part of this concert was broadcast by the NBC Network and was rebroadcast by the OWI by shortwave to American soldiers all over the world.

For a year thereafter Bunk appeared weekly with a band of local white jazzmen including Ellis Horne, Turk Murphy, and Burt Bales at the CIO Hall in San Francisco, returning at the end of this period to New Iberia.

During 1944 and part of 1945, William Russell recorded the American Music series with Bunk in New Orleans, with such great players as George Lewis, Jim Robinson and Baby Dodds. In September of the latter year, Russell and Williams brought Bunk and this band to New York to open an engagement at the Stuyvesant Casino. A sensational national success was finally achieved by Bunk through this engagement which lasted into January, 1946, a second one in the Spring of the same year, and a still later stay with a different band. It was during the second engagement that V-Discs were cut by Bunk and the Band at the Stuyvesant. Two appearances at Town Hall and recording dates with Victor and Decca consolidated a fame that, through important newspaper and magazine publicity, had brought Bunk to the attention of the general American public.

Those who heard Bunk in San Francisco or New York will never forget his personal charm, the tightly curled silver hair crowning a perpetually boyish face, his quick, graceful movements. Nor will they ever forget the pure, delicate, yet imperious tones of his trumpet, the clarity and logic of his phrasing, the range and subtle inventiveness of his musical thought. The most casual listener could not fail to be impressed that in Bunk they were hearing, not a copy of anyone else, but one of the great originals of

It is sad to record that the last two years saw Bunk sliding back into obscurity. Living once more at his New Iberia home, he suffered a stroke several months ago and since then his health had failed rapidly.

Bunk Johnson's mark is ineffaceably on jazz music. His direct influence on younger players like Tommy Ladnier and Louis Armstrong continued to shape the jazz trumpet lead as he, in the formative years of the music, had himself shaped it. The success of Bunk and the great band of the first two Stuyvesant engagements, coming coincidentally with a strong revival of New Orleans jazz, made a lasting impression on the scores of young bands that were then forming in America, France, England and Australia. So Bunk Johnson, although dead, is more than a memory of a great and gifted man and one beloved by hundreds of friends. He is a positive force and will continue to operate in the music he loved and helped to create.

part two of "the chicken and the egg"

The function of ragtime in the immediate and environmental sense came to an end coincident with the earliest departures of New Orleans jazzmen and bands-circa 1900-1910. Within this period, certainly, the art of Ragtime improvisation, in the strict confines of this genre, declined, and an important decade of published ragtime was about ready for the historical dust-bin. One might go so far as to say that the so-called "Daddy" of ragtime, Irving Berlin, an un-' of ragtime, Irving Berlin, an uncomplicate melodist of the keyboard with an admittedly low I-Q at the mechanics of composition, wrote one of the greatest ragtime piano pieces in 1911, at the wake of a music he knew-at best-at second hand. Meanwhile an era of pianistic ragtime had ended; it was to exist thereafter mainly as a subsidiary influence upon jazz and popular music.

I have already stressed the fact that Jelly Roll Morton's musical background was that of a New Orleans jazzman and that his concept of Jazz grew out of improvised techniques mainly, rather than knowledge of written music. The more one knew of his methods the more one realized that he was not a skilled paper man and yet was undoubtedly a very great composer (like Ellington, prolific, with his works stamped with individuality). And he was also a great orchestrator, who set styles in orchestral coloring (timbre) that in turn had much to do with the orchestral trend that nurtured the impressive talent of Duke Ellington. In years to come, the written arrangement was to supersede the orchestration that was, so to speak, merely arrived at. Ergo, Duke Ellington was voted time after time, and properly so, one of the great arrangers of jazz, yet he was not, by his own admission, one to work on paper originally. He depended rather upon a technique of arranging that allowed for the utmost utilization of the talented im-provisers in the group, blending and smoothing contours so that the ultimate products were as individual as his compositions.

The quality of uniqueness also distinguishes Jelly's band and Trio output, but where Ellington was at first very clumsy with small groups and, like so many northern outfits, not finding a very good balance—partly because most northern musicians were still awkward themselves and groping clumsily for style—Jelly's groups had the ease of long acquaintance with jazz and could embark upon daringly original use of the different instrumental voices in ensemble passages. Not only could Jelly be sure of his men, he was himself already a master of New Orleans style. But while his knowledge of harmony and tone color was to make his use of groupings exciting, harmony as such was never the dominating factor.

A younger man than Jelly, and product of another jazz environment (one that already depended less on improvisation), Duke became a proficient writer of arrangements, while Jelly's notions about them came to a dead end at a time when he had hardly begun to explore the potential orchestral worth of the three sections in a big band—brass, reeds and rhythm. Great as Jelly's part in small-band jazz was, his ideas were not limited by the five or six-piece band. What he recognized consistently was the primary importance of instrumental style and the relegation of harmony to its New Orleans function of orchestral color and emphasis. . . . In other words, harmony, great as it was, was not an end in itself, and the meaningless bleatings to which riffs ultimately descended were not for him—not even in his days of illness and poverty, when he tried desperately to be commercial.

Jelly's talent had the quality of genius in that it seemed to have no limitations. In other words he was blocked where all that he had created pointed to no barrier. His return to the center of the jazz stage in later years was to find him creating with the freshness and vigor that originally characterized him, but this time his subject matter was reminiscence.

The precise reasons for this "blocking" of his talent have not yet been fully studied, but one may concede them to have been complex, and personal, as well as musical. Musically alone the issue was already drawn, with commercial dance music taking to the field in all its tinsel trappings. By the late 1920's it really looked as though true jazz was fighting a losing battle. Its fairly wide acceptance was by groups still isolated from each other. Big-band jazz was at an awkward age, small-band jazz was heading for the cellars as a salable product, and the perspective for jazz was not a matter of interest to music magazines. It is rather amazing, but jazz had practically no critical support during the 1920's.

In the early 20's, and previous to that time, jazz had little musical standing. What a laughing stock it was, to all except a handful of Negro papers and an even lesser handful of prophets, many of whom had come upon jazz quite by accident! One has only to study old magazines and newspapers to see that jazz was regarded as a sideshow rather than a menace.

The section work of popular bands that ventured into such jazzy stuff as the foxtrot reduced to a simple absurdity the harmonic formulas so carefully treasured in the minor salons of Western European Musical Culture; their adaptation of jazz' 4/4 time was related only remotely to the jazz use of this tempo! The mechanical fact of section work was neither novel nor new and where it followed the path of its own inertia it showed not an iota of true originality.

Yet in 1920 this was the music in the ascendancy, to which jazz was to be a stepchild, just as the group that had most to do with its creation—the Negroes—had long been the stepchild of our cultural life. In England and in Europe critics took jazz seriously, but usually not without a slap at America's crude originality (Ansermet was the exception in his awareness of Bechet's creative talent and that of jazz). To London in 1919 it was raucous, it was original, it was musical anarchy. As Dominick James LaRocca racily divulged, "It's revolution in 4/4 time!"

This revolution, as we are now aware, found its most significant expression in the music described above, a music of parts, a somewhat polyphonic small-band music in which the very old concept of voices, rather than harmony, was preeminent. But in its entirety the original concept, as we know, was even more sweeping. Though lacking the pure scalar structure of the blues, it took its main inspiration from them and from the blues style derived its own rhythmic balance

In retrospect, jazz had much to offer the uninspired schmaltz of American dance music, but the latter had so successfully taken in the public that its defenders could hardly foresee a time when a new and original music could win popular imagination to any dangerous extent. Nor has this conquest been quite the complete thing some of us once hoped it might be. The corollary to the common cold in our culture is a peculiar bourgeois virus, a middle class complacency by reason of which a little knowledge, that dangerous stuff, affords hypocritical camouflage to an immense and stifling ignorance. Good jazz, like good folk music, must experience the contractions and expansions of democratic tastes in music, and those with the virus we have mentioned are unaware that they are suffering from a species of cultural malnutrition.

Competent bop also has a limited audience, though with a fairly large fad following at the moment. Most serious bop listeners seem to be drawn by its technically sophisticated patterns. Even when its discernible content is decadence and disillusion one feels that much of its attraction is to the intellect rather than more directly to the emotions. It is therefore incumbent in its very structure to adhere to the conventions, and where these have been strikingly original has not been in the techniques as such (which are not in themselves new to concert music), but in an application of jazz principles to the already established formulae of that diverse and often intriguing music called "modern."

The younger and most literate of those jazz musicians who have helped to develop bop have recognized how insipid were previous attempts, from the jazz side, to be "classical." They were aware that one could not project jazz ideas successfully either in imitation of shallow symphonic pretensions or by way of the variously exhausted styles of conventional section work. Their inevitable path, whether consciously or not, would be along the lines of modern concert notions of scales, harmonics, and, to some extent, rhythmic manipulation. All this, of course, a long way from the jiggery-pokery of the leading enfants-terrible of the concert world, and all this within the narrower technical scope of modern jazz, its tempi, etc. (This does not imply that jazz rhythm is monotonous. On the contrary, within these limits, it is diverse and often strikingly original.)

What was new in section work that had not previously been identified with popular and European-inspired dance music, was borrowed from jazz. The question as to what orchestra had first borrowed jazz ideas for the sections that were to remain more or less standard for twenty years, was only of importance commercially in about the year 1920, and in itself added nothing to the development of jazz. For the truth was that the Hickmans of the twenties were the Lombardos or Schmaltz-Senders of that era; they went the Sanka people one better and sold the public an empty pot.

One development exploited by Hickman (and his hotel palace dance orchestra of San Francisco), and others, was the painless application of jazz ideas to one of the first instruments to corn up the jazz scene, the saxophone. This instrument, which was around for many years before it was fit for human companionship, lent itself admirably in groups of two, three, or even six or seven (Let's not forget the Brown brothers) to the spreading of Schmaltz—a music that, like caffein-less coffee, lets you sleep nights. But then, so does warm milk. Another "development" was an exploitation of the novelty that jazz itself had borrowed from minstrels and music hall. About the only good that ever came of this was a recording date on which Benny Goodman burlesqued the godawful caterwauling of Ted Lewis.

The utilization by real jazzmen of section work was quite another matter and, thanks to recordings, is a development that may be followed from the crude early efforts of the Henderson band to the most intricate arrangements of bop. Few New Orleaneans led big bands that added to the continuously changing styles in section work, yet New Orleans music was the prime mover, the motivating force, and New Orleans musicians were key men in all orchestras that pioneered its development.

The gradual welding of jazz to the set-up of the large dance orchestra took in many bands but the transition may be studied with enjoyment in the recorded music of Fletcher Henderson's Orchestra, particularly in that period from 1923-1928 when the temptation was to succumb to what was thought to be popular taste. Dance bands of the 1920's had to play commercially—as it was then called—and the shift from sweet to hot style left most orchestras hopelessly muddled. But the Henderson band could shift from a meaning-less pop tune to real jazz in a way that gave those who understood the music the least bit a tremendous lift.

It does not seem to me that the best powerhouse jazz of the late 1930's and early 1940's ever had quite the guts of the greatest Henderson stuff. And guts is a very apt word here, for many much-touted arrangements of the early or halcyon days of the Kenton and the new Woody Herman band (even when it played house with Igor Stavinsky) lacked body, and many a Gillespie band arrangement provided a proscenium, backdrops and lighting effects for the beret,

Properly speaking, these groups represented the emergence from powerhouse jazz into a music less bumptious and more bop. In the construction of this new music or new development one sees the selection and musical refinement of certain elements of Henderson's gutty stuff as well as of diverse and musically erudite Ellingtonia. For bop has its antecedents not only in its own vested priesthood but in the Lunceford and Basie bands, for example, and in the work of individual soloists. Its reminiscences-of-a-nailfile-scratching-a-garden-stone trend may bewilder some listeners and lead to erroneous conclusions, but that is inevitable in this game of tag between one style and another (It might properly be illustrated above a caption: "Mouldy Fig Tree Bears Strange caption: Fruit!").

The musical discoveries utilized by bop are not in themselves dangerous, but the uses to which they are put might lead to a cul-de-sac of un-creative sterility. They need the human and vaudeville humor of Slam

We're loaded with data and comments this month, so our only question is an item sent in by 'Joe Madison, which was squeezed out of the July column by lack of space. It is Kaintucky (105187-2)/No -Means Yes (105178-1) by M. LoScalzo and his Instrumental Quartet. Joe has this coupling on Pathe Actuelle 036066, while Harry Crawford has it on Pe 14247, with take No. 2 on both titles. Joe says this is of interest because, outside of the Black & White 12" sides cut in 1945, he doesn't believe anything was ever credited directly to LoScalzo. He would like to know who the four musicians are who make up this group. They are trumpet, sax and clarinet, banjo, and piano. Naturally if this M. LoScalzo is the same Mike LoScalzo who made the Black & White sides, the piano would be Mike. Does anyone have any dope on this foursome?

Dan Mahony relays some data on the Sextette From Hunger transcriptions mentioned in the May column. Bert Whyatt sent it to him after having gotten it from a 1946 issue of the Melody Maker. Personnel is: Andy Secrest, trumpet; Joe Yukl, trombone; Jack Mayhew, clarinet; Charlie LaVere, piano; Don Hopkins, bass; Earl Hatch, drums; and Eddie Skrivanek, guitar and leader. This personnel given in the Melody Maker was for some U. S. Armed Forces Radio Transcriptions, while those Harry Crawford has (mentioned in May), are C. P. Mac Gregor radio transcriptions. However we can assume they are the same ones. This answers everything but the question as to who plays sax and vibes on a few of the titles.

Harry Crawford reports on a recent talk with Pete Peliizi, a long-time member of the Original Indiana Five. According to Pete, the personnel of this group was quite constant from 1923 to about 1928 and included: Tony Tortomas, trumpet; Pete Pellizi, trombone; Nick Vitalo, clarinet; Harry Ford, piano; Tommy Morton, drums (he acted as leader after Johnny Sylvester, former leader, quit); and Joe Tarto, bass (on late recordings only). Pete has an idea, only in the "dream" stage at present, about a revival of the old Original Indiana Five with at least two of the old original members and, considering the current success of Phil. Napoleon's similar revival of the Original Memphis Five, perhaps it would work!

Charles Lindsay offers his comments on Leon Whitley's questions in June, the opinions being strictly observations upon listening to the discs in question. Charles is certain that neither BG nor Tea. is on the Henry Lange Br 4478. He is of the opinion that the Dixie Daisies item on Ca 345 is of the 1923-4 period, as indicated by the catalog number, and that it is hardly likely that Teagarden is on it. The Joe Curran American Parlophone is definitely Teagarden, as Leon supposed.

C. Hilding Bergquist adds the following to our little condensed bit on the Columbia, Harmony, Diva, Velvetone picture in the June issue. Harmony, Velvetone, and Diva ran parallel to around 1930, when Diva was apparently replaced by the 5000 Clarion series. The Velvetone 7000 series also appeared at about this time. Harmony continued to around 1430, attained in May 1932.

Gus V.uhlman suggests that Hangin' On The Garden Gate (149985)/Gone (149986)

by Sam Lanin & his Orchestra on Ha 1107 may be a BG-Tea, item. On the latter side, there is a lot of nice work by a trumpet he can't identify, a trombone that could easily be Teagarden, and a clarinet which is quite possibly Goodman, plus a little bit of good alto sax. The first title is very obviously the same gang, but only the trumpet takes a solo. We haven't heard the disc but from the master number are fairly certain that it's too early to have Benny in the personnel.

Label of the month: Supertone, marketed

by Straus & Schram, Chicago, Ill. The one pictured has a red label with gold printing and is Supertone 25204 coupling I Can't Believe That You're In Love With Me and I Know That You Know by Cliff Edwards. The master numbers do not appear anywhere on the label or record surface but they are obviously drawn from Pathe-Perfect. We have an earlier Supertone which seems to be tied in with the Grey Gull group. It is on red wax with a 3½" label instead of 3½ one. The label is robin's egg blue with gold lettering except the title, band, catalog number, and master number, which are in black. Other data (Straus & Schram, Chicagoelectrically recorded—75 cents) are the same as on the later issue. The disc we have is Pals (3563B)/Always (3802B2) the first title by the Raymond Dewitt High Society Seven and the other labeled "Saxophone effects by Senella, vocal chorus." Catalog number is 1331—and it has no jazz value at all

Leonard A. Chiacchia reports further on the Rudy Marlow business in the June column. He has listened to Dixie Jamboree (100341) on Ha 1062 and is inclined to agree with the views we expressed. He also has Take Everything But You (100338) by Rudy Marlow on Di 3064 (and then also on Ha 1064 and Ve 2064) with four short breaks by muted trumpet, trombone, piano, and open trumpet.

Leonard wonders if the Blacksmith Rag he has on an old vertically cut Pathe (Sapphire record) by the Synco Jazz Band could be the same as the one by the Alabama Jazz Band on Operaphone. The record he has is (Continued on Page 20)

A friend in Spain writes us that to him one of the most tragic episodes of the civil war there, ten years ago, was the demolition of his jazz collection. Buildings can be rebuilt in a short time, he tells us, but jazz collections are the labor of years.

Putting records ahead of buildings is but one symptom of the avid collector. One correspondent tells us of an operation she had to undergo. While under a local anesthetic, and as the doctor sawed away at her wrist, the two of them discussed the relative value of the discs they each possessed.

Although we have listened to some thirty records from Spain, we have been unable to suggest any one disc as a good example of Spanish jazz. Therefore, it was a distinct pleasure last week to receive two releases which we can definitely recommend for your collection:

Struttin' With Some Barbecue Jose Moro Orch. Co. R14607 It Is Never No Lament (Ya No Voy Por

Jazz music is on the upswing in Japan. A three hour concert of jazz records was recently held by the Victor Company in Mainichi Hall, Tokyo. It was well attended, as were the concerts of the Hot Club of Japan and Victor's second jazz concert at Yomiuri Hall, Tokyo.

In line with the growing Japanese jazz feeling, Victor has commenced issuance of a monthly "Jazz Book." An album, "Victor Swing Club No. 1" is due to appear at any time and will include Glen Miller's Stardust, Hampton, Ellington, etc.

Our Japanese contact also sends word that he has some Crosby's on Lucky label. All we have to do is wait for someone to get them out of Japan.

We have been indirectly informed by the President of the Hot Club of Portugal that jazz records are available. This brings us to add album, No. 34 to our shelves of representative jazz from foreign countries by their own musicians. After we add another four albums, we will be trading records for carpenter work.

Zephyr, a new Canadian label featuring two records by Bert Niosi and two by Cliff McKay Orch., has made its appearance in Canada. Bert Niosi is known for his "Goodman-like" quintet, while McKay was featured clarinetist of the Happy Gang.

Word comes from Czechoslovakia that Word comes from Czechoslovakia that their jazz record program has been stepped up with issuance of some twenty jazz discs by local musicians. Once again we shall have to acquire a few before we can make suggestions. Our original experience showed us that Czech records were either very good or very poor.

Should you acquire a contact in Czecho-slovakia, please remember to be as cordial as possible. Your contact practically has to write a book to ship five records out, and the discs run from $2 to $4 each.

Switzerland is joining the parade of reissuing discs of the small U. S. companies. Latest label is Tell, which plans to use some B & W, Keynote, Cupol, and Modern Music masters.

New Issues from Sweden:

Expressen Star Band—Indiana 1 & 2, Sonora 7433.

All the Things You Are, Sonora 7434 R. Svensson (piano)—How Deep Is The Ocean/Got My Love, Artist 3018

Gosta Torner Orch.—Blue Skies/Indian Summer, Artist 3017

For those of you who enjoyed Sonny's Jazz Revelers version of Angry on South Africa's Singer label, there is their version of In The Mood, on the same label. These are their only exceptions to a policy of recording only Africanese music.

Latest South African release is Don Barrigo Swing Octet: Teatime With Trutone/Tru Tone Boogie, Trutone 171. Don Barrigo used to play tenor with Ambrose British Orch. and now has his own small group in Johannesburg. He was previously featured tenor on the four sides made by Venuti's Blue Four on Regal Zonophone.

The Dutch Swing College is out with two new records. Panama/Jazz Me Blues, Dutch De. M32583; Jazz Band Ball/Margie, Dutch De. M32610. The fine jazz accordionist,

Firehouse Five Plus Two

Blues My Naughty Sweetie Gives to Me Firehouse Stomp

San Fireman's Lament

What the hell goes on on the West Coast? The happiest band I have heard in a long, long time has turned up on these surprising records, which I'm told are inhabited largely by Disney cartoon animators. This is as crazy as the idea of starting a record off with fire bells and then a banjo solo, or of having the band sing a chorus all together with the trumpet player answering between phrases.

The sanest thing about the outfit (aside from the fact that the music makes an awful lot of sense) is its name. Am I kidding? Well, it seems that aside from being an amateur expert on almost anything else, trombonist Ward Kimball is an antique auto enthusiast, and the band's first jobs were playing at auto-collector's outings from the back of a 1900-something LaFrance fire engine. Naturally, it was called the Fire-house Five, and when the band grew to seven, what was more natural than what you see at the top of this column?

It makes sense to me!

The music fits the beautifully scrolled label. There's a cocky beat and carefree sound on every groove, and if you don't feel like laughing just out of happiness when you hear these sides, then you've never enjoyed a silent movie or W. C. Fields, or 15 ounces of bock beer at the Old Heidelberg (any old Heidelberg).

Jazz lives.

No sense telling you about this part and that, because the four sides are a unified whole, and you'll love every bit of it. If anybody rates kudos, it's probably Kimball, the daying rooms are about 15 in the daying rooms. the daring young man on the sliding trom-bone, and Johnny Lucas, who plays a rare batch of trumpet. And this is probably as good a place as any to mention a guy who won't get his share of comment: Les Koenig, the fellow who wouldn't listen to sound advice and recorded the band anyway. Les was the first man to sit me down in front of Armstrong Okehs, and I've never regretted it, although at the time I was rather surprised at the amateurish sounds that came out of the phonograph.

I won't keep you any longer. I know you're already pulling on your shoes to go get copies of these. (Good Time Jazz 1, 2)

(G. A.)

Doc Eyan's Dixieland Five

Eight good dixieland sides by the popular mid-west cornetist and a band consisting largely of unfamiliar figures. Surprise of the date is the piano-playing of Joyce Mac-Donald, who plays like Joe Sullivan in his Fats Waller mood. The band, though, is a little too polite all the way through, and the recording balance, which favors Evans and ignores the rhythm section, doesn't help in adding real meat to the ensembles. And when you've got that situation with only piano and drums in said r. s., you've automatically cut down on the date's guts.

Throughout, there's no end of Gaston and Alphonse; the lightly arranged passages are neat, slick, and reminiscent of the small-group Red Nichols records of 20-odd years ago. The level of musicianship is high, but except for Doc's own horn the band never really gets its hair ruffled and gives. It would be my guess that there will be a lot of people who prefer this, and will take these records over the rougher and tougher fare that this corner would prefer. One suspects a worried engineer behind the underplaying of the rhythm, particularly the almost-

Clarinetist Johnny MacDonald pianist's husband) does a neat, clean performance on Eccentric, which has been the downfall of many a more heated clarinetist. Basin Street Blues responds best to the light touch of this group. The selections, by the way, are so picked that each represents a different facet of jazz: here you'll find a blues, a rag, a spiritual, a march, and so on throughout the set. John Lucas, who arranged the session, writes interesting album notes which bring out these points.

The album is being distributed by the Art-Floral Record Shop in Northfield, Minn., which is as surprising a bit of daring as it is gratifying. They've got their feet wet; hope they don't get their fingers burnt, though! (AFRS-1) (G.A.)

Southern Jazz Group

Canal Street Blues Tiger Rag

There's not much on this pairing cut in Australia that hasn't been heard better on American records. The disc is apparently pressed from dubs of rather poorly recorded originals, which means that there's a large degree of difficulty encountered in listening to what goes on. Sounds like a pirated Oliver reissue, as far as tone goes.

The playing is plenty spirited, and Bruce Gray has a nasty, dirty clarinet tone that also can change to nice purity. Bill Munro plays good cornet, too, and, all in all, the musicianship is of a reasonably high level.

Still, out of the welter of derivative New Orleans records that have come along in the past eight years, there have been so many better ones that this doesn't have much chance. Top spot: a nice cornet-trombone duet on Canal Street, following a rough clarinet duet which nevertheless has its heart in the right place.

No question about it—the music that went into this record was good, but this kind of reproduction didn't help the Oliver band any, either. (Jazz Corner 3) (G. A.)

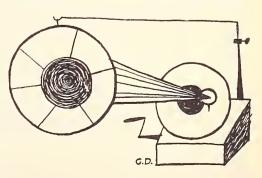

Sidney Bechet and His Blue Note Jazzmen

Tin Roof Blues At the Jazz Band Ball Tiger Rag Cake Walking Babies When the Saints Go Marching In

Basin Street Blues

I don't claim that these are the greatest records ever made, or even the best that lists Sidney Bechet on the personnel. What I do claim, however, is that they are beautifully conceived and carry a deep emotional impact. I've never heard Pops make a bad one, but if he never makes another these six sides could well stand as a fitting memorial to one of the greatest hearts in all of jazz. And that is something I can't say of most Blue Note albums, which is high praise of this one, rather than a backhand sweep at the others.

Bechet, of course, is one of the immortals of Jazz, and if any proof were needed of this just listen to how every one who plays with him usually plays way over his head. I have heard Wild Bill Davison do some wonderful things—barring the showpiece kind of thing, which always makes me want to head for the nearest porthole-but I have never heard him play as well with anyone as he teams up here with Bechet. The only regret I have is that there is no trombone on half of these sides and those on which Ray Diehl does appear are notable more for their solo work than for any three part ensemble work. This is the first time I have heard Diehl, by the way, and I wish I had heard him more, rather than more of him. Do I make myself clear?

There was a time not so long ago, when everyone, young and old, was playing the old numbers and everyone was objecting because everybody was trying to play like Johnny Dodds, King Oliver or, if you'll pardon the expression, like Sidney Bechet. It became the thing to say, in praise, that here was a young band that had gotten itself out of the rut—if you listen closely you'll hear a little Ellington, a little of what the big bands do right and nothing they do wrong, and even, God help us, a wee soupçon of be-bop; that here was progressive jazz, but with a strong foundation in the traditional vein.

That's fine and I'm all for it, but may I mention here that this album is something so old it's really new? For here, wonder of wonders, is Sidney Bechet sounding like Sidney Bechet and also playing six of the most wonderful tunes in the jazz repertoire. I'd like to go on record as saying that I think the protection of the say in the say of the say in the say of the say I'd like to go on record as saying that I think this is pretty wonderful stuff and I'd rather be caught on Times Square minus my britches than not to have this album on my shelves. All right, I know, I've got some Bechet around I wouldn't trade for these, and yet I've never heard Bechet play better than he does here. Add this to see the state of the seed of the se than he does here. Add this to some pretty damned fine Wild Bill and Art Hodes and what do you want for your money? It's amazing how much Bechet has progressed (no, I don't mean he's better, I merely mean that here's one of the old timers who plays with his heart in '49 without forgetting what happened in '29) through the years, that he's always himself, but looking forward and not backwards.

There are some things here I don't like, but what I don't like is so overshadowed by what I do like, that I don't hesitate to urge you to latch on to this one, but quick. (Blue Note 105) (B. M.)

James P. Johnson and Fletcher Hender-

The Harlem Strut Unknown Blues

This month's Paramount re-issue is one of those good old piano goodies, though for my money they might just as well have made two sides of Harlem Strut so when I wore out one I could switch over to the other. Not that I mean to slight the Fletcher Henderson number, which is plenty good in itself, but merely that the James P happens to make me want to get up and yell. I never was an Eastern Seaboard man, myself, but the more I hear of it the better I like it. And James P—now the dean of the Harlem pianists—was trying to carve one out for himself on this one, rather than showing the boys that he still had it. The acknowledged debt of Fats Waller is pretty apparent here, by the way, and all I can say about this kind of thing is you can hit me with it all night long. To get back to the Henderson side, it's in the mechanical piano vein and mighty fine too. What more can I say? (Paramount 14009) (B.M.)

Graeme Bell

I'm a Little Blackbird The Aztec Princess Big Bad Banksia Man JENNY'S BALL

I could never get really excited about Graeme Bell and yet he hands out a better brand of Dixieland than I've heard around New York in many a year. In fact his gang sound a little like the boys in those two spots below 14th Street if someone were to sneak up behind them and hit them over the side of the head with a sock full of fresh air. If this is a distinction that eludes you, let me try to put it a better way—Graeme Bell and his lads always sound as though they hadn't played the number they are recording for at least forty-eight hours, while the boys below the street mentioned above always sound to me as though they had played it six times in the last fourteen minutes, and God how they hated to play it

Be that as it may, this stuff is all right. The Blackbird side is pretty familiar to most of you from the old Eva Taylor vocal with Clarence Williams and his Blue Five, along with a young cornet player name of L. Armstrong. The Aztec Princess and Big Bad Banksia sides are originals by Roger Bell, who plays horn in the band. The latter is a quartet number, a grouping I like, by the way, better than the full band, and the reverse, that old Jenny's Ball number that Mamie Smith did so well, really made me sit up and take notice. Play it in good spirit. (Rampart 9 & 10) (B.M.)

THE SIX HOTTENTOTS

Melancholy Charlie Hurricane

No Red Nichols fan he—the he being me—still, every now and then they sound pretty good. This, for me at least, is one of the better ones, though not the best, and there are a few familiar names listed among the personnel. And if Mr. Nichols plays all the breaks of another man, and pretty much as though he had sat up nights late in front of a mirror and practiced them, that other guy was a pretty good man with a horn. Let's be frank about all this, pal. If you are a Nichols fan you will eat these up without cream or sugar. If you aren't, you won't want any part of them. If you are neither, I would suggest you play them and make un your own mind, which really isn't bad advice on any record. If you want to go on my recommendation I'd say B-plus Nichols and B-minus for the general run, which isn't bad. (Mouldye-Fygge 103) (B.M.)

Blue Rhythm Orchestra & Nashville Jazzers

Hold 'Er Deacon St. Louis Blues

I sometimes think that Mouldie-Fygge puts out records like this just to run people like me crazy. However, just as soon as I get this review written the family—all five of us—are going to grab the first thing rolling in search of a cooler clime and something erroneously referred to as a vacation. I am listening to a double header by the Dodgers with my other ear, so, if anyone thinks I am going to decipher this booby trap loosely referred to as "unknown personnel they got another think coming. The Blue Rhythm Orchestra is not the Blue Rhythm band, I know that much, and I guess it to be the same band that put out sides for the dime the same band that put out sides for the dime store trade in the twenties. This is a pretty good free swinging bunch and I like the record. The other side has me baffled and I hope it will have you baffled too. I can't recall hearing anything quite like it, though there are men on it I know I have heard before. Who? Unh unh, Buster, you figure that out and if you want to tell me don't bother, because I'll be off somewhere in Wisconsin fishing (Mouldie Eyang 102) consin fishing. (Mouldie Fygge 102)

Stewart's bass as well as the nebulous nowheres achieved by the high men of the trumpet team. I cannot see how the most extreme of this music can get across its own aridly patterned Sahara to the mirage over there behind the anchorites in the clump of withered palm trees. The old prospectors, more grizzled in their wisdom, carried bread and water. At any rate, it is a mistake to think that bop, with its musical know-how, is the only direction for jazz to take. For this is not necessarily so. Jelly Roll's music was on the verge of discoveries that might have helped get jazzmen off the section gang. Not Jelly, for we have already noted how his road was blocked, but the New Orleans ensemble approach to jazz may hold the answer.

It is like the old preacher said: we need to be regenerated. It is time for Buddy Bolden to be "Callin' his chillun home."

Jack Wood, of England, divulges two interesting tidbits. Regarding the New Orleans Wildcats mentioned in June, Jack informs us that this is an Eddie Edinborough group which also recorded as Eddie Edin-borough Washboard Band, and Bobby Jeeson's Need-More Band. The only names he can put forward for the New Orleans Wildcats' Columbia version of Baby Mine are Jeeson on guitar and Edinborough, vocals.

Jack also answers another of Leon Whitley's questions, as he says that the trumpet and trombone on Jack Hylton's Mississippi Melody are most probably Jack Jackson and Lew Davis, respectively. Jackson is now Britain's leading disc jockey and until recently had his own weekly Saturday night show, "Record Round-Up." Lew Davis has a firmly-established musical instrument store in London.

More on Rudy Marlow: V. S. Thomas Mariow: V. S. Thomas lists the following further titles by this group: The Shepherd's Serenade (100346), Ha 1073; Leave It That Way (100397), Ha 1175 & Ve 2175; Beside An Open Fireplace (100347), Ha 1074; Dream Lover (100325)/My Love Parade (100324), Ha 1027; and Sunny Side Up (100322), Special Record. Dan Mahony indicates that the recording date which produced masters (100338-100342.) was probably November 15, 1929. Ozzie M. Shellum also reports on Rudy Marlow He has He's So Unusual (100340-1) on Ve 2063 and Dixie Jamboree (100341-1) on Di 3062. He says that they have a Red Nichols "sound" to him and perhaps they are one of his various combinations, but this we

The deadline's here again and the rest of Ozzie's data will have to be pushed off until next time. Remember to send your answers, questions, comments, etc. to me at 74 South Road, Harrison, New York or c/o the Record Changer.

of two fallacies in jazz criticism which we deplore and feel the necessity of deploring out loud. One is the assumption, made mostly by the "modernists," that jazz is a logical matter, subject to "discipline" and strict order and enumeration. The other is the feeling that jazz must be considered Art (with a capital A) and that the only way to achieve this end is to deliver high-sounding, pontifical lectures designed as Criticism (with a capital C.) Our answer to this is in the words of a late college professor of ours, a massive and rather diabolical fellow who would listen while students went on at great length, in impressively resounding phrases, delivering thunderously obvious critiques of some great literary work. When they finished, the professor would fix them with a freezing glare, and slowly ask:

"Having said that, what have you said?" (2) Downbeat's foible can be dispensed with much more quickly and in much less detail. Their July 15th issue announces, in a full-page advertisement and a full-length editorial, $1,000 in cash (only $500 if you aren't a subscriber) to the person who "coins a new word" that best describes all music "from Dixieland through Bop." Jazz, it appears, is an "outdated" word. We would be the last to deny that jazz is one of the most abused words in the language, that it is well-nigh impossible to tell exactly what someone means when he says "jazz." We have often been confused by the fact that this word, depending upon who uses it, can conceivably be intended to describe anything from Morton Gould to Buddy Bolden. But, we submit, it is an amazingly childish thing to produce a word via a contest, and to expect anyone other than the Downbeat staff (and the prize-winner) to use the word. In any case, did the Beat stop to think that any new word would immediately be subject to the same abuses, mis-uses and over-uses that have rendered the original word "obsolete"?

But we don't want to decry this contest completely. As a matter of fact we intend to compete. We don't want to win, you understand; it's just that Downbeat has gone into this thing wholeheartedly, in the good old American spirit of the quiz shows that offer the State of Rhode Island to anyone who can whistle Dixie. We're partly interested in coming in second or third, to win one night's use of either "a complete name band" or a "name combo." But what we really want is to produce the fourth, fifth, or sixth best word. For this will get us transported to New York, Chicago, or Hollywood (unless we "reside there already") for—hold on to your hats!—"an evening's date with a name male or girl vocalist, depending on the winner's sex." This would mean a free dinner in a "famous restaurant" and an evening at "the most popular night spot in town," the hell with that. We know what our sex is, and we want Doris Day.

Johnny Meyer, has made Parfum Roses/Matrozendans, Dutch De. M32382

From Australia comes word that the Bell band has waxed Shabby Gal Rag/Chicken and Almonds; Broom Angle/Czechoslovak Journey; Free Man's Blues/Is That The Way. These will be released on Australian Payloblane Parlophone.

Several of these tunes were previously waxed in England, France, or Czecho-slovakia on the Bell Band barnstorming tour, but there has always been difficulty in acquiring them, so most collectors will be glad of this opportunity of hearing them for the first time.

The Hot Club of Berlin, under the able leadership of Hans Bluthner, recently featured a jazz jamboree at the Corso Theater in Berlin. Considerable jazz interest exists in Germany, which gives promise of a possible renaissance of New Orleans style, such as recently took place in Australia.

Too many interesting jazz records are currently being produced in Germany at present to permit us to list them. We will obtain copies of the recommended sides and pass along our reaction in later columns. Lifting of the "blockade" has now made it possible to trade without undue difficulty.

Odeon has released a series of US re-issues which feature Bessie Smith: Lady Luck Blues/Y.odling Blues; Frankie Trum-bauer: Mississippi Mud/Take Your Tomorrow; Fats Waller: Crazy Bout My Baby/ Draggin My Heavy Around; and Louie Armstrong's Savoyagers Stomp are among the most interesting sides.

We would like to thank our many friends and readers for the wonderful response to our requests for letters and cards. We had no idea so many people read and enjoyed our column. Thanks, too, for the various suggestions.

								Argentinan						,			German
								Australian	- 1								Italiar
								Brazilian									Japanese
								Canadian									Mexicar
								English									Swiss
F			٠					. French	Sd								Swedish

In the "For Disposition" section the condition of the record is indicated by these abbreviations:

N (New): Surface noise equal to an unplayed record; no visible or audible wear perceptible; original finish intact.

E (Excellent): Surface noise low, smooth, uniform, Not irregular or crackling. Easily disregarded in listening. No perceptible distortion

V (Very Good): Surface noise somewhat more prominent: light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously

distraction, it any; noises not seriously distracting.

G (Good): A moderate amount of surface noise; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion; on the whole, reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention. Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music.

F (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music, and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory.

P (Poor): Foreign noises, collectively, are louder than the recorded music; continuous concentration is required, and there is little satisfaction in listening.

Column 4 of the "For Disposition" section shows the method by which each record is to be disposed.

"SAL": The record is for sale at the price indicated.

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only. If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list. If you have certain records in which he may be interested, mention these in your letter.

NOTE:

All persons using the medium of the Record Changer in the buying, selling or trading of phonograph records, do so subject to these Rules and Regulations:

1. A collector or person who solicits and receives advance remittance for a record must send the record within a period of four weeks.

2. A collector or person who orders and receives a record prepaid must pay for it within a period of four weeks.

3. A collector or person who obtains a record in trade must fulfill his end of the trade within a period of four weeks.

4. A collector or person who requests that a record be shipped C.O.D. must accept the shipment unless the shipment is damaged in transit. (A bid on an auction or an order from a sale which states that records will be shipped C.O.D. unless otherwise instructed, is considered a request for C.O.D. shipment.)

The name of the person or collector who violates the above rules will be printed in the Record Changer upon the first violation, and the violation will be described. (Exception: where breakage or over-grading is concerned, the record is to be returned promptly to the shipper. RECORD CHANGER

COMPETITION

To discover and focus public attention on the best of the young amateur jazz bands, the Record Changer is sponsoring a jazz record contest.

If jazz is to remain a vital factor in American music, young musicians must be encouraged. Some amateur groups have managed to fight their way to recognition; but the Record Changer is convinced that many other local bands deserve attention—must be recognized if jazz is to continue and grow.

This competition is our effort to seek out these new jazz pioneers and, by issuing their records and publicizing their activities, encourage them, and other young bands.

Leading jazz critics will pass judgment on the entries—Good Jazz, not the following of a particular style, will be the sole criterion. Any amateur band is eligible. Your outfit can enter the contest merely by submitting two sides before the November 15 deadline (and by following the other rules given below).

First Prize:

The winning band's two sides will be issued on a special Record Changer label, and given nation-wide distribution. Standard royalty rates will be paid.

A full story on the band's personnel will be featured in the Record Changer.

Second and Third Prizes:

Nation-wide distribution, on Record Changer label, of a record coupling the best sides by the second and third place bands. Plus a feature story in the magazine on these bands, and on the fourth and fifth place bands.

Judges:

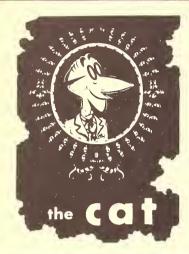

George Avakian . . . Charles Edward Smith . . . Bucklin Moon . . . Sidney Finkelstein . . . Rudi Blesh . . . Bill Grauer, Jr. . . Orrin Keepnews . . . Paul Bacon . . . and others to be announced later, including leading musicians.

Rules:

- 1. Only bands the nucleus of whose membership has not been commercially recorded are eligible.
- 2. Two sides of a ten-inch record constitutes an entry. Only two sides may be submitted by any one group.
- 3. Records may be either studio acetates or of the home recording variety.
- NOTE: If the quality of the recording of any winning entry is not of sufficiently high caliber to permit satisfactory commercial pressing, it will be impossible to award such winner the issuance and distribution described above.
- 4. No entries can be returned to contestants. The Record Changer guarantees, however, that no commercial, or other unauthorized usage will be made by us of any non-winning entry.
- 5. The decisions of the judges as to merit, eligibility, and observance of these rules, will be final.
- 6. All entries must be accompanied by a brief description of band personnel: including age, instrument, experience.
- 7. All entries must be received by November 15, 1949.
- 8. Send entries to: THE RECORD CHANGER, 125 LaSalle Street, New York 27, N. Y.

RECORD DATING CHART _

the answer to every record collector's dreem. The chert, 17" x 22", will toll you at a glance the approximate recording end issuance date of eny racord appearing on more than 100 labels issued before 1930.

an example of how the chart works

Lat us suppose you pick up a copy of Richard Hitter's Blue Knights on the Gennett Labal, Racord Number 3149, Mester Number 9725, playing "Stomp Off Lat's Go." Knowing little about the record and being unable to locate it in any of the standard reference boots you can go to your record dating chart and at-e-glanca tell that the record was made about June 1925 and released August 1925.

just a few of the labels

there are explanatory notes on most of the labels trecing their inter-relationships and releasing systems.

AMATEUR JAZZ BAND RECORD COMPETI-TION: First reports of interest and enthusiasm over this Record Changer contest have begun to come in.

Several would-be contestants, however, seem worried as to exactly what we mean by the competition's first rule. The exact wording is: "Only bands the nucleus of whose membership has not been commercially recorded are eligible." The question that arises, as we might have expected, is: precisely what makes up a "nucleus"? That's a point we'd like to clear up right now, to avoid having to disqualify any entries, and even more importantly to avoid frightening off any eligible band whose personnel may include one or two experienced professionals.

In general, the purpose of the competition should indicate our meaning. The whole idea is to publicize and encourage local amateur groups, so naturally any band largely made up of old recording pros, with an amateur or two included, is not what we're after.

But as far as we're concerned, recordings are the only way in which a jazz group gets to be well-known. So, union membership alone will not disqualify anyone. Similarly, if your band has been playing for pay at local bars or dances, you are still amateurs as far as a nation-wide audience is concerned, and still very eligible for this competition.

We're trying to fair, lenient, and commonsense about the whole thing, so if your clarinet player had made one or two sides for a small record company, or as an unheard section-man for a Mickey-Mouse orchestra, that won't count against him (But tell us about all such experience anyway, in conformity with Rule 6).

To be, quite specific: in our opinion, the front line of the band-particularly the trumpet and trombone—is the key. If more than one of your front line men must be considered professional recording artists, then the group is ineligible. Otherwise, only if a majority of the members of the outfit are non-amateur (in our special meaning of the word "amateur") will we rule you ineligible. (In the rather unlikely borderline case of a band whose four-man rhythm section must be termed pro, but all of whose three front-line men are strictly eligible, we'd be inclined to call that a band with an amateur "nucleus" and count it eligible.)

We hope everything is quite clear now. In principle, we're looking for bands whose 'sound' is largely created by musicians who are unrecorded and nationally unknown. But if you still have a doubt about your particular case, we'd be very glad to send a prompt answer to any specific query.

Brassmen like the ones pictured on these pages are, in effect, just about the mainstay of traditional white jazz. Despite the excellence of musicians on other instruments, it is the trumpet who—for better or for worse—holds the spotlight. Carrying the melodic line and the burden of the most rhythmic solo work, it is the horn who inevitably attracts, or fails to attract, the attention of the average listener who takes in his jazz at a night-club table. And in this commercial world it is the guy who buys the beer, and where he buys it, that determines, as much as anything else, which styles of music hold prominence, and which jazzmen manage to make a living wage.

There is no denying the fact that things could be better these days for the jazzmen who play in the vein that you can call Dixieland, or White Chicago, or White New York, or Nicksieland, or Condonhouse-band-style. (Whatever you call it, you'll be somewhat wrong and somewhat right, but the key-word for most of them is, undoubtedly Chicago.)

In New York, two established clubs feature fairly permanent bands; Wild Bill Davison's following goes to Eddie Condon's saloon, and Billy Butterfield only recently finished a lengthy stint at Nick's (a Phil Napoleon outfit is there now). Central Plaza's weekly stands will attract whoever else is jobbing around town: Kaminsky, Hackett, Yank Lawson, Muggsy Spanier. In and out of the various Chicago spots move just about the same personnel, plus such regular residents of the Windy City as Jimmy McPartland and Doc Evans. The West Coast horns are a fairly special group, pretty well rooted to the area and their home-town fans: Wingie Mannone, Red Nichols, Pete Daily, and a pair whose inspiration is closer to the New Orleans

Around most of these men hangs an aura of the Roaring Twenties. The more pliable pop tunes of that era remain in their repertoire; that was the time when they were really young and exuberant, when there was really no other kind of jazz but theirs—the only question being whether the public preferred these young Chicagoans or the somewhat more mature New Orleans Negroes. Much of their following of those days is, undoubtedly, no longer doing much barvisiting, and other, more "modern" forms of jazz have taken over their old position as "the new music" and encroach on the younger audience.

But despite time and musical tides, these men retain a great deal of vitality and importance. Their music still attracts many a customer, and probably as large a number of enthusiastic collectors and students of jazz as ever. Rabid modernists may claim they are anachronisms, playing music that doesn't express the feeling of 1949. But if that's the case, you can't prove it by those of us who still get a good feeling from their work. Listeners at Condon's, or Jazz, Ltd., probably don't know from anachronisms.

They do know a sharp, punchy Kaminsky chorus, a Lawson blues, a driving Davison solo, the Spanier mute, or Red Nichols on a night when he is recapturing the old Five Pennies spirit, and they know that such music grips them and moves them. It is very much alive to them, and if a club-owner puts one of the names on these pages out front, they'll go in and listen, and buy a few beers, or maybe a ryeand-water.

Rumor has it that Spencer Crilly of Hollywood has found a P-copy of King Oliver's (start drooling!) Workingman's Blues/Zulu's Ball on Gennett! That's news, because, as far as is generally known, Monte Ballou of the Castle Jazz Band is the only other owner of a copy of this fabulous Gennett.

Certainly less scarce but still quite uncommon is Boar Hog Blues/Squeeze Me by Hightower's Night Hawks on Black Patti 8045. Don Billingsly of Pasadena reports the acquisition of this item.

In the May column Mr. Settell posed a question concerning the identity of Dude Skiles And His Vine Street Boys on Variety, venturing the opinion that they were Whoopee Makers sides with BG, Tea, McPartland et al. R. H. Grainger of Uniontown, Pa., wrote that Dude Skiles played trumpet with Johnny Green on the radio during the late thirties and was featured in a band-within-a-band called the "Groove Group." But Mr. Settell is proven wrong and the complete dope has been furnished us by Dude Skiles himself! Mr. Skiles is an account executive at KTSA in San Antonio and was sent a copy of the May issue of this magazine by a friend in California who noticed Dude's name in our column. Mr. Skiles tells us that these four sides were cut at one date in late 1936 or early 1937 and the band consisted of Dude Skilcs, trumpet; Bobby Blair, trombone; Andy Kelly, clarinet; Johnny Black, piano; Jack Skiles (Dude's brother), guitar; Al Graham, drums; and one of three men on bass: Leroy Holmes, Harlan Queish, or George White—he can't remember which one.

Some questions and opinions from Ben Kaplan of Brooklyn; who wants further information on the following discs: It Takes A Two Time Papa/Come On Buddy by Mamie Harris and the Choo Choo Jazzers on Pe 106. Ben notes trumpet and piano accompaniment. Gone Down To The Levee (1441)/I'll Go To My Grave With The Blues (1431) by Monette Moore on Para 12046. The first side has Clarence Jones on piano and the second Clarence Jones and the Paramount Trio, which Ben reports as trumpet, clarinet, and piano and ventures as probably Ladnier, O'Bryant, and Jones. Fannie Johnson doing Papa If You Can't Do Better (2220B2)/I'm Savin' It All For You (2219C2) on Ca 1066. Here there's cornet and piano accompaniment and Ben wonders if the cornet is Ladnier. I'll Be Rested/Woke Up This Morning by Roosevelt Graves & Brother on Pe 6-11-74 with guitar and tambourine accompaniment.

Ben also seeks information on My Lovin' Blues (15764A) / Weary Heart Blues (15765A) by James Wiggins on Para 12878 with piano accompaniment by Blind Leroy Garrett. St. Louis Blues (227) by the Chicago DeLux Orchestra and Mobile Blues (228) by Boyd Senter on Para 20341. Although labelled otherwise these are both by Senter on clarinet, with piano and guitar accompaniment. Finally Ben wants information about the short-lived and obscure Perfect "race" series which started at 100 or 101. He comments rightly that there is some great stuff on this Perfect 100 series, which corresponds to the Pathe 7500 series.

Label of the month: Starck, marketed by the P. A. Starck Piano Company, New York and Chicago. The eminent discographers of the Jazz Journal, John Davis and Gray Clarke, in their June column, commented on our use of the Operaphone label in May and suggested that a scuffle for ancient labels may be in the offing. So they rushed in with the rather obscure Starck label. We would like to augment their discussion of this uncommon label, since our accompanying cut is of the very disc they mention in their column. This disc is Starck 159 by Cliff Edwards and his Hot Combination. The side shown is Say, Who Is That Baby Doll? (106316-3) the reverse being Oh Lovey, Be Mine (106315-2). Will on Raytime

In common with most of the world's best loved music, ragtime evolved from dancing. Unlike the early folk blues, which were a vocal music deriving from work songs and spirituals, ragtime was an instrumental art of a complex sort. Before the end of the 19th century, it had achieved an advanced state of notation. Furthermore, unlike the early folk blues, which expressed the inevitable reactions of an oppressed and sensitive people, ragtime was by no means a music of social protest. On the contrary, it was music of an altogether opposite mood intended to be enjoyed in and for itself. I stress this aspect to call attention to the fact that the Afro-American, who invented both types of music, is emotionally elastic and, like the rest of us, capable of experiencing

In evolving ragtime, the Afro-American utilized older European dance material to suit his own needs and purposes. In proceeding in this fashion, he acted in the highest creative sense. Moreover, he conducted himself in the best Western musical tradition, of which he was fast becoming a part. The point deserves comment, for the Afro-American bears little or no relation, ethnologically or culturally, to the diverse peoples of the African continent, past or present. He is a product of our national melting pot as completely as any Anglo-American, Franco-American, or Italo-American. The same holds true of his music, and it should be added that this conclusion can be supported on musical grounds alone, without relying on involved theories borrowed from anthropology, sociology, or any of the other inexact sciences.

The dance material which the Afro-American adapted and transformed came from many different sources: quadrilles, waltzes, marches, polkas, mazurkas, and the like. The presence of imported European dance material may be accounted for quite readily. We had a heterogeneous population, and had not had time to originate native steps of our own. In many instances, the early derivations left their imprint upon many later rags. Portions of Maple Leaf Rag suggest the unmistakable traces of the polka; portions of King Porter Stomp (and stomp is merely a latter-day name for rag) suggest the stately graces of the minuet. Unfortunately, we rarely hear these numbers played correctly, or the truth of this statement would be more widely accepted.

KAY C. THOMPSON

The same point may be demonstrated by other evidence. Most rags were composed of several strains related through similarity or contrast. This use of several strains had formal precedents in a number of the 18th and early 19th century European dances, such as the quadrille, which commonly consisted of no less than five different figures.

As soon as the Afro-American undertook to transform earlier European dance material, newer and more appropriate dance steps commenced to make their appearance. Thus, in the 1880's, early rags were often called cakewalks. They were so named after an Afro-American dance step of somewhat mixed origins. In its earliest reported form, the cakewalk was an intricately executed walking step. It was danced some years be-fore the Civil War. Couples formed a square, the men placing themselves on the inside. The music was played in a moderate march tempo, while the dancers strutted along, performing neat manoeuvres at each of the corners. One or more judges passed upon the talents of the competing couples, eliminating them by turn, until the remaining pair of entrants were declared to be the winners, in recognition of which they were awarded a large and impressive cake. Obviously, the dance acquired its name from this fact. Following the Civil War, a number of variations were devised, all of which were called cakewalks. While we are on the subject, it is fitting to mention that the word "ragtime" is simply a shortened form of raggedy time, or ragged tempo, a term meaning syncopated. This abbreviated form appears to have come into general use as a means of distinguishing cakewalks from other dance compositions in which syncopation was not as prominent a feature.

From the foregoing, it should be plain that early ragtime had a lengthy history, the first cakewalks having been danced perhaps a hundred years ago. The existence of a well-defined Afro-American dance step at that remote date is not as remarkable as it might seem. It has been estimated, for example, that as much as two-thirds of all Southern dance music was furnished by Afro-American musicians in the years just before the Civil War. This implies a rather considerable body of early dance musicians about whom little or nothing has been written in books dealing with jazz history. Musically, they must have been reasonably proficient, for it may be surmised that they came into being to provide music of a conventional sort for social affairs attended by members of the Southern aristocracy, whose tastes would have been fairly sophisticated. Consequently, if, when, and as these early musicians indulged their cakewalk instincts, they probably did so at functions of their own. The latter possibility is entirely, in keeping with the view that the early cakewalk was an involved step calling for music executed with more than rudimentary skill.

Not much is known regarding the dance steps that preceded the first cakewalk. While the cakewalk combined features common to several European dances, it seems reasonable to suppose that it also retained some of the characteristics of the early plantation dances of the 18th century. Plainly enough, these dances antedated the spirituals and the early folk blues. It is significant, too, that these same plantation dances are believed to have inspired the Afro-American to invent the banjo, often called our only national instrument. This belief is based upon the fact that the banjo existed some years before 1800, and would have provided precisely the sort of rhythmic accompaniment that dancers would have required to perform steps of a simple kind.

In remarking upon the banjo, I am mindful that cakewalk history furnishes a striking example of the manner in which musical instruments, dance steps, and suitable music evolve, one contained within the others. I realize, of course, that the banjo has lost favor in recent years. Nevertheless, it exerted a decided influence on early jazz, and its influence persisted until a relatively late date. The orchestral conception of ragtime piano, for instance, resulted to a considerable extent from an attempt to score several banjo parts for an instrument of large proportions. In view of this, it is not at all surprising to find that early player pianos were sometimes equipped with banjo effects that could be used at will. Corny as such devices might sound to modern ears, they must have pleased the purists of an earlier day.

The peak period of ragtime composition came in the 1890's, carrying over into the 1900's. It is noteworthy that ragtime writers anticipated many of the most pleasing musical elements that we meet with in the best jazz of the 1920's. They freely utilized the essential features that we encounter in the later music of Oliver, Dodds, Armstrong, Morton, Bechet and others. To mention just a few: syncopation, the use of added or passing notes, breaks, stop choruses, anticipated chords and complicated progressions, complex counter-rhythmic patterns, the ensemble conception, together with the same clean, precise, staccato manner of execution. The presence of marked similarities cannot be dismissed as coincidence, for as everyone knows, the New Orleans repertoire included a large number of rags. In fact, according to Jelly Roll Morton, Buddy Bolden's Band was really a ragtime outfit. My authority for this statement is none other than R. J. Carew, a profound student of ragtime and an intimate acquaintance of Jelly.

If any of my readers care to pursue the matter of musical resemblances at greater length, I suggest that they ask a friendly pianist to run over some of the compositions of Joplin, Turpin, or Scott. Of course, it should be clearly understood that these numbers must be played exactly as the composers wrote them, otherwise the experiment will serve no useful purpose. While they are at it, let them conclude with Liszt's Hun-garian Rhapsody No. 2. Assuming that the pianist in question can cope with it, they will experience some new surprises when they hear the striding bass passages, the grace notes, dotted eighths, thirds, and offbeat accents in the right hand. This particular classical composition is not unique. The point is, early ragtime composers knew their music. Some, like Turpin, had received previous classical training; Joplin had composed conventional waltzes before he turned to ragtime. This aspect of the matter has not been sufficiently emphasized, else the notion, notorious in the 1920's, that early jazz musicians were musical illiterates, would never have gained acceptance.

It should now be clear that ragtime followed a course of development independent of that of the early folk blues. In short, the two types of music were evolved under different sets of circumstances in response to entirely different needs. I offer this in refutation of the long-standing notion that jazz evolved from the folk blues and that ragtime was an offshoot of no consequence. As we have already seen, ragtime had a great deal in common with later jazz. It was, in short, the fundamental factor in the evolution of later jazz, linking the cakewalk of pre-Civil War days with the dance music following World War I. Furthermore, it can readily be demonstrated, solely on the evidence of published sheet music, that the early folk blues did not exert any appreciable influence on jazz until the beginning of the post-rag-time period, in about 1905. The folk blues were introduced at this time—on the premise that they were valid material, the musical possibilities of which had not been fully explored in dance terms, which deserved to be considered by a newer generation of composers on an equal basis with previously used material from other sources.

Seen in this light, it should be apparent that the jazz blues of Handy, Williams, et al., were merely adapted folk blues material incorporated within a framework of earlier ragtime conceptions. Moreover, it should be noted that the union of ragtime and the folk blues was not an unmixed blessing. Frequently, it was exploited with musically disastrous results, the best features of both becoming lost in the shuffle. However, plenty of good music did result from the fusion of elements described. In fact, by the 1920's, they had become so thoroughly intermingled that it is no coincidence that Dippermouth Blues and Sugar Foot Stomp are titles equally applicable to the same number.

The influence of the folk blues upon a firmly established ragtime tradition was felt principally along literary lines. They supplied a story, a tale, or a ballad that evoked a particular mood or setting. Understandably, the sentimental character of the subject matter had a more immediate appeal than the relatively severe and uncompromising principles that governed ragtime composition. After all, most of us are incurable romantics at heart. Home On the Range or Careless Love can move us equally, provided we judge them impartially. Musically speaking, the influence of the folk blues on ragtime conceptions is discernible chiefly in attempts to introduce departures from the diatonic, or European, scale. These deviations, usually called blue notes, were tones sounded between flat and natural. They occurred most frequently in the case of tonic thirds and sevenths, and were used in various chord formations in accordance with a fixed harmonic plan limited originally to twelve bars and later modified to suit dance conventions of a later period.

The prevalence of blue notes in the early folk blues and their absence in ragtime can be explained quite easily. Deviations of this kind are not peculiar to the folk blues. They are to be encountered in many kinds of folk music that are the product of untrained human voices. Ragtime, on the other hand, was an instrumental development. In later phases, it was closely identified with the piano. The piano is a fixed tone instrument; instruments of this type do not allow for deviations from the diatonic scale, and therefore ragtime composers were obliged to observe existing musical conventions. The same situation does not arise, of course, in the case of instruments that lack a fixed tone, such as the clarinet, or trumpet, and thus the latter may be used to simulate blue notes in a reasonably authentic manner.

At this point, it would be appropriate to consider a phenomenon that seems to have eluded the notice of some of our better known jazz historians, although it is public property. I am referring here to the fact that ragtime, seemingly the first dance music to be called "swing," precipitated the national dance craze that swept this country in 1912. Up until then, most popular dancing had continued to be a decadent expression of forms originating in the 18th and early 19th centuries. However, as a result of the impetus provided by ragtime, more than a (Continued on Page 14)

TONE CONTROLS

(This is the third in a series of articles on the properties of phono equipment. The first, "The Relation of Phono-Pickups to Record Wear," appeared in the April, 1949, issue. "The Relation of the Amplifier to Good Reproduction" was published in the June issue.)

There is one more step through which the impulse originally picked up by your phonocartridge must pass before it can be delivered to your loud-speaker; that step is the "tone control," which is correctly called an equalizer when it is properly applied. While this apparatus is not located (electrically speaking) between the amplifier and the loud-speaker, being actually, in most cases, a part of the amplifier itself, it is of such importance that separate consideration seems necessary.

These controls are commonly the most ill-designed and misused of the various components that comprise a sound-reproducing system. So let us see, first, why this is

The most common type of control is merely a device for progressively reducing the high-frequency (treble) response of the system. Often it is erroneously marked "bass" at one extreme of its adjustment and "treble" at the other. In the treble position, the control does nothing, allowing the signal to pass as though the control did not exist, while in the bass position, the higher frequencies are so obliterated that little is left except bass, thereby creating the illusion of an increased bass response. The bass is not actually increased, but merely appears so because of the suppression of the treble frequencies. This sort of condition can scarcely be called an improvement, and a control of this sort cannot truthfully be termed an equalizer.

Its only value lies in its use for the reduction of noise from records with poor surface characteristics. In this case the reduction of higher frequencies may be tolerated

In some cases (which we shall discuss later), some reduction of the higher frequencies is proper, but not in the class of equipment that employs the above described control, since it is usually of the low-priced variety, with none-too-good characteristics at best.

Another common type of tone-control is the three position type labelled "music - speech - normal." In this, the "normal" position amounts to having the control out of the circuit entirely (as with the "treble" position described above) allowing the amplifier to do its best. The "speech" position reduces the bass to a considerable degree, thereby getting rid of much of the "bassboom" described in our last article (Record Changer, June, 1949), which is such a detriment to speech intelligibility. The "music" position causes a reduction in the treble, just as the previously described control in the bass position.

So far the controls discussed have served merely to reduce rather than increase the response and range of the system; obviously there is room for improvement, for actually there is more need for correction of deficiencies than for reduction of excesses, especially on the high-frequency end of the spectrum. Not all of us can afford wide-range speaker systems, so it is desirable that we get the most out of what we have.

Our ears play strange tricks on us: We hear the full range of frequencies only when the intensity of the reproduced sound is as great as the original; as the intensity is reduced, the response of the ear falls off more rapidly at the extremities of the spectrum than in the middle. If we were to draw a graph of this condition the "curve" for normal intensity would be an almost straight line, while for moderate intensities it would droop at the ends, becoming an almost half-circle when the very low volumes were reached. Other factors, such as differences in record characteristics, make it obvious that a very flexible system is required.

that a very flexible system is required.

The equalizer is so called because its function is to equalize the deficiencies and excesses of the system so that the net result is a uniform response throughout the entire audible range.

First of all, let it be emphasized that only two controls are really required to 'do the job properly, and they should be of the continuously variable rotating type, the same as a volume control. The "step" and multiple "push-button" types should be avoided. The electrical characteristics of the controls should be such that there is absolutely no overlapping between the two. They should be designed to have a neutral position, with the minimum position at counterclockwise and the maximum at the extreme of the clockwise rotation, so that the mode of oper-

Ma Rainey
Deep Moaning Blues

When the Paramount re-issue program got under way I received the year's supply of records in one lump with the instructions to review one of them each month. This was not always easy because there was one record, along in the middle, that I wanted to blow my top about. I'm glad to report that the time has come, pal, so hold on to your hats. I haven't always been too kind to some of the series (or maybe too kind because I always was thinking about this one) but now all is forgiven.

By now my stand has been pretty well taken. I like New Orleans Jazz and I'm a hog about blues. I was the founder of the "More Banjos and Tubas in Jazz Bands Marching and Chowder Society" and I fairly drool when I hear a jug band. And anyone with any sense knows that Ma was the greatest of them all. What happens when the symplosy mix all this up together?

Well, you get a record like Traveling Blues, which is almost my favorite of all Rainey sides forgetting maybe Hellish Rag. First take the accompaniment. It's a jug band with a prominent banjo and though there isn't any tuba the man on the big jug knows what he's doing. The blues itself is one of those plaintive ones which becomes almost a fantasy in lines like "ticket agent said your train should stop here, but it keeps on passing by." The depth of Ma's voice on an electrically recorded record is so much richer that it seems almost another voice.

On the other side is Deep Moaning Blues which is well up on the list of the best of the Rainey's and again the jug band backs up in able style. But here the whole background is different—in the opening, in the middle, and at the end the band hums along with Ma in what is really barbershop harmony. And again we find the greatest of them all in as good voice as I have ever heard her.

I'm pretty sold on this one, as you may gather, so get with me. I don't see how you can go wrong. (Paramount 14011) (B. M.)

Fidgety Feet

Tiger Rag Absent Minded Blues

I've shot off my mouth so often in these columns about the high grade of American Jazz being turned out across the water that I now find myself sort of in the position of the guy who has already shot his wad. In other words I'd have to come up with those seven midgets from Estonia I romanced about a while back, or else be able to tell you that now I had found somebody who not only sounded like one of the legendary greats, but actually was better.

I've done neither this month, I hasten to add, but here is some pretty good B plus material in the usual vein and I think you ought to like it. Maybe it ain't the best in town, but it's gonna be the best till the best comes around. And from what I hear every big company in the country is going to be even tighter about their real jazz program (yeah, a couple of them once had one, honest!) for what looks like a long, long time, if not forever. So in the meantime stuff like this looks like your best bet.

I like all four sides here. I think I mentioned before that too often white groups, especially foreign ones, seem to be less successful with the blues than with straight stuff—the reason being that blues are something you got to feel down in the toes of your shoes and sometimes that isn't too easy because you don't just read it out of a book. And of these four sides I think that Absent Minded Blues is perhaps the least successful. Panama Rag and Fidgety Feet are my favorites; they are played with very little frosting and the band really rocks.

There are two clarinets on these sides and one of them is so much better than the other that I wonder if this isn't one of these deals that used to happen when we were kids. You know, there was always the guy who was pretty lousy but you always had to let him play because he owned the only ball in

By the by, you may get a bang out of some of the names on the label. (Summit 1002 and 1003) (B. M.)

Errol Garner
All the Things You Are (two parts)
The Fighting Cocks
A Lick and a Promise

A full half minute of All the Things You Are went by before I was sure that Errol was actually playing a piano; there is a spooky clashing about the whole thing, making it sound like a cross between a piano and a harpsichord. Another thing—where the hell did that organ come from? I jive thee not, there is an organ in there, on side two—one chord, like a multiple tuning-fork; also, on Fighting Cocks, there is a mysterious "squich" noise. I admit I'm carping, but the querulousness is born more of curiosity than spleen. These are good records, on the whole.

The best side for me is most typically Garner. A Lick and a Promise, which is characterized by the amazing vitality inherent in all of his best stuff, notes in showers, the boisterous élan which no one else but Waller has ever had. Garner has occasional inclinations to play like Cy Walter and Stan Freeman; I think he can hold his own with them, but production show tunes require from the listener either a strong devotion to Youmans, Rodgers, Gershwin and Kern, or enough cocktails to make the music recede into the background.

Not the least interesting part of these records is the name of Timmie Rosencrantz on the label; about the only names in jazz in the same league are a few you'll find in the Madisons' column this month. The last I heard from the Barrelhouse Baron, he was a pretty moldy tomato—I guess times have changed, or something. (Century 1503-1504) (P. B.)

OVERSEAS JAZZ RELEASES

The fancy USSR labels arrived recently and it was with bated breath that we placed our first authentic Russian jazz on the turntable. However, we were in for a disappointment, for the only part of the discs that remotely resembled jazz was the printing on the outside. The music is soft, sweet and not too well played.

The Czechoslovakian late releases are not much better and can be rated only "fair" with the same emphasis on the word as when grading condition.

News from India has been rather discouraging. Although there have been occasional jazz releases in the past, the only present news is that York de Sousa, former pianist with Benny Carter's Band in Paris (1938) is now playing solo at the Tajmahal Hotel in Bombay. Jehangir Dalal of Bombay is making every effort to get de Sousa on Indian wax.

The coal strike in Australia has served to force the absolute shutdown of all record production of any sort. The Southern Jazz Group has scheduled eight fine sides for release on the new Wilco label as soon as the ban is lifted. A few copies of their first disc on this label: Red Hot Henry Brown! Smokey Mokes, have been received. This is one of their better efforts.

The record review for this month finds Mexico coming up with an interesting big band treatment of Streamliner by Hermanos Marques Orchestra on Mexican Peerless 2319. This rates about three stars and is worthy of a place in your "world-wide" collection. Backing is Trombone Boogie, featuring a solo by Ramon Marquez.

The Band of the Dutch Swing College

waxing of O. D. One-Step on Tempo 21. There is a distinct possibility that the Lyttelton Band will return the visit by showing up in Holland sometime in October.

hundred new dance steps were introduced in the three year period following 1912. This simple statistic is cited to dispel the impression that ragtime was confined to the precincts of Storyville. This environmental phase of early New Orleans music has engaged the fancy of our musical Boswells to far too great an extent. Consequently, it is still news to most of us that in those days ragtime was played at church dances up North, the chief complaint being that ragtime was too difficult for most musicians to play, not that it was immoral, or indecent.

On the strength of the dance craze inspired by ragtime, the Vernon Castles rose to fame and fortune as the nation's dancing teachers. The Castles are entitled to at least a footnote of damnation, for this couple paved the way for the symphonized horrors of Whiteman, Gershwin, and Grofe a decade later. They were the villains, who, before World War I, mind you, sought to decontaminate early jazz dance steps, such as the Turkey Trot, Bunny Hug, and Grizzly Bear, in order to breathe new life into outmoded and exhausted forms of polite ballroom dancing. Their apparent success in this direction was, of course, the feature that prompted others to "purify" the music. Obviously, the motives of all concerned were commercial, rather than pious, for all of the early jazz dance steps, like the music itself, had evolved from eminently respectable origins, the Camel Walk, for instance, having derived quite frankly from the early 19th century schottische.

and is very closely allied with Pathe-Perfect. It seems to have drawn its masters entirely from them and even used for its catalog numbers the last three digits of the Pathe issue of the same coupling. Thus the Starck 159 shown is on Pathe 25159, and this number (25159) is clearly imprinted in the wax between the label and grooves. Thus confusion could very easily result, as Starck seems to have drawn indiscriminately from various Pathe series and it is quite possible that there may be two different Starck issues with the same catalog number.

We shall discuss the key numbers between Pathe and Perfect issues of the same couplings in a future column; this is an intriguing subject, for, given the number of either the Pathe or Perfect issue, one can easily determine that of the other by the addition or subtraction of the appropriate key number. Can anyone supply an instance of two different Starck issues with the same catalog number? Also, any further data on the label and its issues will be welcome.

Al McVitty, Jr., has a query on Br. 4048 by Jesse Stafford and his Orchestra. Titles are Shine/Cinderella Blues and Al would like to know something about it. He believes it to be a Negro group of about 7 or 8 men featuring good clarinet, trumpet, and trombone (or, more likely, mellophone). If Al will drop us a line and give his address in Falmouth, Mass., we'll be glad to furnish him with the other data he requested.

Finally, we have some questions from one of the female members of the collecting fraternity. Cecilia Stuckey of Laclede, Mo., is interested in information on the following: Catherine Henderson doing Keep It To Yourself (149984-1) and Margaret Webster in How Can I Get It (149982-3), coupled on Ve 7066-V. Both singers are backed by a very good trio, whose identity Cecilia would like to have. Then there's Lizzie Washington on Herwin 92013, Working Man Blues/ East Coast Blues with piano accompaniment on the first side and piano and violin on the second. The pianist is Cécilia's interest here. She also has Herwin 92012, Goofer Dust Blues (9099)/Stompin' Around (10000) by Trilby Hargens. As to year of issue, we consulted Arnold Stilwell's excellent Record Dating Chart, and see that he has placed the Herwin 90000 series in 1924. We'll get to Miss Stucky's other questions past time as Miss Stucky's other questions next time, as space is running out.

Keep the answers, questions, comments, etc., coming at us either to 74 South Road, Harrison, New York, or care the RECORD

ation is essentially the same as with a volume control (each control being, in effect, a "volume control" within its particular range).

The bass control should begin to take effect in the neighborhood of 200 c.p.s. (cycles per second), with the maximum effect occurring at about 40 to 50. The treble control should begin its effect in the 3,000 to 5,000 cycle region with maximum effectiveness occurring at 10,000 to 12,000 c.p.s. (For those interested in the mathematical aspects of the problem, a range of plus-orminus 18-db at the two extremes of frequency seems to be about optimum.) Care should be exercised in the design, so that the response is in the form of a smooth slope, free from peaks or troughs which might have bad effects, such as bass-boom or "onenote bass," or a shrillness and excessive surface noise, according to the end of the spectrum at which the trouble appears.

Once the control system is designed and installed, some thought must be given to its proper operation if its maximum value is to be realized. One of the factors that will determine the proper control settings is the type of loud-speaker in use. Also records which have pre-emphasized high-frequency characteristics (and some local F.M. broadcasts) often require treble de-emphasis and bass emphasis with the extremely widerange speaker systems. The Columbia L/P records fall into this category, and these characteristics are employed to increase the ratio of wanted sounds to unwanted noise and to partially compensate for the inferior response of much of the reproducing equipment in the hands of the public. On most of the older types of recordings (and on A.M. broadcasts), it will be found that an increase in the treble and a reduction of the bass effects a notable improvement; in the realm of radio broadcasts, this seems to be especially true of programs which have been transcribed for rebroadcast. With the ordinary commercial type of speaker system it is often found that the treble control can be used near the maximum with most types of program material assuming, of course, reasonably quiet record surfaces or, in the case of the radio, reasonably clear reception.

Let it be noted here that the reduction of record surface noise by the use of equalizers or suppressors will always result in a corresponding reduction of the high-frequency musical component, regardless of the manufacturers' claims to the contrary. Surface noise in a record is the function of the ratio between the size of the granular structure of the record surface material and the size of the stylus point. The individual grains of material may be roughly compared to the bumps on a road: The larger and more irregular they are, the rougher the ride becomes. The obvious answer is to smooth the road; in other words, use a surface material with an extremely fine and uniform granular structure. The L/P records could not have been made as they are without the availability of such a material; the use of a groove, as on the L/P records, one-third the standard size means a stylus point of correspondingly finer dimensions and would mean a three-to-one increase in surface noise (theoretically) if the older types of material were used. This would, in turn, mean that the higher frequencies (whose wavelengths are very small especially at the slower 33 1/3 r.p.m. speed) would be completely submerged in the noise.

It should also be noted that to extend thehigh frequency range does not necessarily mean an increase in the audible surface noise, since most of this noise exists below 5,000 to 6,000 cycles, and a system whose response terminates at this point is only mediocre

Fixed equalizers are used where necessary to offset certain inherent characteristics of some types of equipment. For exemple: It is fairly well known that records are cut in such a way that the least displacement of the stylus occurs at the highest frequencies. This is done in order to have the stylus move at a constant velocity regardless of the frequency being reproduced; these are called constant velocity recordings. The actual velocity of the stylus point as it moves from side to side under the influence of the groove variations averages about 4.8 centimeters-per-second. Obviously, then, as the frequency decreases, the lateral movement of the stylus becomes greater until a point is finally reached that one groove may cut over into the adjacent ones. Accordingly, the recording characteristics are modified so that below about 250 or 300 cycles the displacement becomes uniform with frequency, which also means that the velocity will fall off as the frequency decreases below this "turnover point."

Knowing these facts, we must now take into consideration the type of pickup to be used. These fall roughly into two classes: the crystal and the magnetic, and the characteristics of the two are opposite. The magnetic pickup has a response which is proportional to the velocity of the stylus; this means that it will give a uniform response above the "turnover point," but will drop off below that point, therefore fixed equalizers are used with magnetic pickups to bring the bass response up to a uniform level with the rest of the spectrum. The output of a crystal pickup is proportional to the amount of stylus deflection (lateral movement), so that it falls off as the frequency increases. A high frequency equalizer to bring up the treble is therefore necessary to give uniform response. This is, however, often omitted in practice because of the popularity of the bass-emphasized type of reproduction (the so called "mello tone" popularized by popularized by, so many radio-phonograph manufacturers) among much of the public who are often unfamiliar with the sound of actual "live" music.

Of course, if it were not for the great variations in program material, and if a greater standardization of recording techniques were adopted by the record manufacturers, the use of variable equalizers could be largely dispensed with, since the characteristics of the ear can be automatically compensated for by special volume controls.

sound, to approach as nearly as possible the illusion that we are actually in the presence of the performers; it has been conclusively proven that high frequency suppression is very detrimental to this illusion, therefore the maximum response in this region (consistent with the quality of the available program material) seems desirable if good reproduction is to be enjoyed. Excessive bass response is also obviously unnatural; a little close listening to live music will reveal that the bass components are actually rather subtle. In many systems too the bass needs to be suppressed in order to give good speech intelligibility, particularly if speaker is a man. Measurements have shown that the pitch of an average male speaking voice is around 130 to 150 cycles, and many systems have an exaggerated response in this region.

Thus we may say that the widest possible range-consistent with program quality, of course—is the end to strive for and should be achieved without exaggeration in any portion of the audible spectrum.

G (Good): A moderate amount of surface nolse; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion; on the whole, reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention. Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music.

F (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music, and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory.

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only. If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list. If you have certain records in which he may be interested, mention these in your letter.
