RECORD CHANGER

AMATEUR JAZZ BAND

COMPETITION

To discover and focus public attention on the best of the young amateur jazz bands, the Record Changer is sponsoring a jazz record contest.

If jazz is to remain a vital factor in American music, young musicians must be encouraged. Some amateur groups have managed to fight their way to recognition; but the Record Changer is convinced that many other local bands deserve attention—must be recognized if jazz is to continue and grow.

This competition is our effort to seek out these new jazz pioneers and, by issuing their records and publicizing their activities, encourage them, and other Leading jazz critics will pass judgment on the entries-Good Jazz, not the following of a particular style, will be the sole criterion. Any amateur-band is eligible. Your outfit can enter the contest merely by submitting two sides before the November 15 deadline (and by following the other rules given below).

First Prize:

The winning band's two sides will be issued on a special Record Changer label, and given nation-wide distribution. Standard royalty rates will be paid.

A full story on the band's personnel will be featured in the Record Changer.

Second and Third Prizes:

Nation-wide distribution, on Record Changer label, of a record coupling the best sides by the second and third place bands. Plus a feature story in the magazine on these bands, and on the fourth and fifth place bands.

Judges:

George Avakian . . . Charles Edward Smith . . . Bucklin Moon . . . Sidney Finkelstein . . . Rudi Blesh . . . Bill Grauer, Jr. . . Orrin Keepnews . . . Paul Bacon . . . Art Hodes

Rules:

- 1. Only bands the nucleus of whose membership has not been commercially recorded are eligible.
- 2. Two sides of a ten-inch record constitutes an entry. Only two sides may be submitted by any one
- 3. Records may be either studio acetates or of the home recording variety.
- NOTE: If the quality of the recording of any winning entry is not of sufficiently high caliber to permit satisfactory commercial pressing, it will be impossible to award such winner the issuance and distribution described above.
- 4. No entries can be returned to contestants. The Record Changer guarantees, however, that no commercial, or other unauthorized usage will be made by us of any non-winning entry.
- 5. The decisions of the judges as to merit, eligibility, and observance of these rules, will be final.
- 6. All entries must be accompanied by a brief description of band personnel: including age, instrument, experience.
- 7. All entries must be received by November 15, 1949.
- 8. Send entries. to: THE RECORD CHANGER, 125 LaSalle Street, New York 27, N. Y.

LATE NEWS FROM COAST TO COAST

HERE AND THERE

Cleveland College has enlisted Julian Krawcheck, founder ten years ago of the Cleveland Hot Club, to chart a way through the complexities of jazz in a fifteen week lecture course. Records and local jazzmen will be used to illustrate. The Dayton Rhythm Kings opened their own club, the Red Onion, to a full house but police shut them up after only one night. Barrels for tables and candles for illumination were a bit too much for the local constabulary. Watch this crew though, several of their members spent the last six months playing in Paris with Luter and Bolling. In Detroit, a band headed by Frank Gillis is beating out the dixieland and seems to be part of the trend in the East to better Dixie. They just recorded for United.

PORTLAND—Ballou

Change in the line-up of the Castle Band finds George Bruns being replaced by George Phillips who made the trek to L. A. for the Dixieland Jubilee. They seem to be making headway in the area being approached by MGM as well as landing a good weekend spot in the Hy-Mac Club. The place has been redecorated in a New Orleans motif and features creole food. There's a deal cooking back East engineered by RAMPART which may result in the sale of half a million or more copies of an asy yet unreleased master. All hands have fingers crossed.

NEW YORK

Bob Maltz started off his Friday night sessions with a real bang bringing in Wild Bill, Marsala, James P. Johnson, Chippie, and the areat young trombonist recently recorded on Blue Note, Ray Diehl. The place was packed as usual with the inexpensive evening policy was highly sucessful, more so than any bop event ever held in this town. The hip characters who run that spot plan on bringing more moldy bands in to cash in on the apparent upsurge of traditional jazz here in the East. Musically though it was far from great. For once Metronome is right. Louis oughta stop clowning and start playing. The sessions at Rvans have started again; Phil Napoleon is still going strong at Nicks; Condon's is still as tired as ever: and rumors have it that Turk Murphy may head East for a while. We'd welcome him here with open arms. What this tired old town needs is some good new blood and Turk's seems to be the most virile today.

SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA-Oxtot

Jazz adherents were, at this writing, working on a jig-saw puzzle. The loose pieces to be fitted are the wandering musicians who are constantly changing their ties. The same familiar faces still are around, but, in many cases, not with the groups with which they have been identified in the past. The majority of the cases stem from Hambone Kelly's, where Lu Watters is currently displaying a piano-less jazz band. Turk Murphy and Harty Mordecai left in July; Burt Bales and Bob Scobey in September. Bill Dart had been replaced previously.

Beginning with this issue, The Record Changer goes on sale at bookstores on or near several hundred college campuses throughout the country. This is the opening of our campaign to stimulate and increase an interest in jazz on the part of the nation's college students. For the future of jazz depends to a great extent on the awakening of new enthusiasms—the creating of new listeners and collectors—at the college-age level.

That's the reason for this Special College Issue, which features an article on the problems of the serious student of jazz, as well as our regular coverage of the past and present of jazz, and the Record Exchange Section. In future months we'll publish other articles slanted towards the special needs and interests of our new group of readers.

for reasons not divulged (and the band does no marching!), Watters has decided to do without a pianist, hiring an extra banjo instead. Personnel consists of Watters, trumpet; Bob Helm, clary; Joe Zohn, trombone; Dick Lammi, bass; Clancy Hayes and Pat Patton, banjoes; and Bill Dart back again on drums.

Meanwhile, Scobey and Murphy have been playing one nighters around the Bay Area, using similar personnel. Turk has even been doing some drumming on Scobey's dates, alternating on trombone with Jack Buck.

Best solo around can be found at the Paper Doll in S. F., where Paul Lingle hammers the piano out of tune. Another pianist who has been wowing them at Hambone's Sunday Afternoon concerts is Johnny Anderson, relatively unsung blind pianist. Johnny played with Wingy Manone in August and September concerts. Other recent concerts at the El Cerrito mill have featured a couple of reunions by the Frisco Jazz Band and two well-attended dates by Wild Bill Davison. Ralph Sutton and Peanuts Hucko came out West with the wild one, who played to standing room only for a week at Doc Dougherty's Hangover Club in S. F. With Davison, Hucko and Sutton were Warren Smith and local 6'ers Pat Patton, bass; and Gordon Edwards, drums. For a change (take note, innkeepers), this affair was well advertised. Doc showed the scoffers that San Franciscans witl show up at stellar jazz presentations if they KNOW about them.

BOSTON-Parent

A presstime survey of the Boston jazz scene indicates the most active season of recent years locally. The Savoy continues as the dixieland mecca with the Bob Wilber band and the Howie Gadboys trio. Sunday afternoon sessions there feature the Vinal Rhythm Kings as well as the Wilber group. Sunday sessions set to resume at Pelletier's in Lynn late in October with George Poor, Arthur Karl and others. Frankie Newton at the Showboat. Eddie Heywood at the Hi-Hat to be followed Sept. 28th by Sabby Lewis band. A Granz bash at Symphony Sept., 25th featuring Ella Fitzgerald, Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, Flip Phillips, and others. Mary Lou Williams and Lennie Tristano sextet in the first of an expected series at the John Hancock Hall. Billy Eckstine Oct. 23rd and King Cole trio plus Woody Herman Nov. 2nd, both at Symphony Hall.

L. A. & HOLLYWOOD-Lewerke

News headlines for this section should by all means go to the second annual Dixieland Jubilee which was even bigger and better, longer and louder than last year; however, no space here for superlatives, so look for full coverage in a later issue.

The Firehouse Five, red washboard and all, are still packing them in each Monday night at the Beverly Cavern. In fact, it's necessary to arrive early in the evening to be assured of even standing room. The Kid Ory band is still the feature attraction at the Cavern Tuesday through Sunday. Two recent personnel changes find Teddy Buckner replacing Andy Blakney on trumpet and Lloyd Glenn at the piano in place of Buster Wilson. Joe Darensbourg, Ed Garland and Minor Hall still remain, and they, along with Ory, have kept things moving at the Cavern for lo these many months,

lemME take this chorus

The discerning ear of one of jazz-dom's greatest pianists has been added to the panel of judges for the Record Changer's amateur jazz band recording competition. Art Hodes, who has certainly been surpassed by few musicians in aiding and advising young jazz talent, will sit with George Avakian, Bucklin Moon, Rudi Blesh, Charles Edward Smith, Sidney Finkelstein, Paul Bacon, and Changer Editors Grauer and Keepnews to select the top bands among the relatively unknown jazzmen of the country.

Hodes has for years been helping to foster the development of young jazz musicians and to increase public knowledge of all jazz—through radio broadcasts, concerts and lectures at schools and colleges, and in the pages of his now-defunct magazine, Jazz Record. For these reasons we feel fortunate in being able to include Art on the panel of judges.

Response to date indicates that we were quite correct in our suspicions that there were a great number of young bands "hidden" throughout the country. By the November 15th deadline we expect to have recordings from several dozen groups. Many inquiries disclose doubts on the part of potential entrants as to whether union membership disqualifies them. The answer is that it most certainly doesn't, that only regular professional recording experience on the part of a majority of the members of a band, or two members of the band's front line, will make your group ineligible.

Another worry seems to be that any music that can be classed as "non-moldy" will not be considered with equal seriousness. In that connection we can only point to the presence on the judging panel of such modernists as Finkelstein and Bacon, and such established neutrals as Grauer and Keepnews, as proof that skill, not a particular style, will be the sole test.

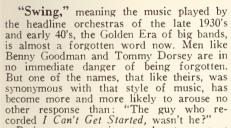

Christmas is hardly right on our heels as yet, but the Christmas shopping season certainly is. Which, if we may say so ourselves, makes the Changer's offer of the album of eight great jazz tunes particularly opportune. The album should make a fine Christmas present.

GIANT OF THE SWING ERA

bruce dexter

Berigan was starting to play trumpet at the very beginning of the swing era. Per-haps if he had been born twenty years sooner you would be mentioning his name in the same breath as Louis and Bix, but that is pure speculation. That he was a creative artist is hardly open to question. With a strong inclination to purer jazz, but with jazz slowly losing ground to the more popular tempos, Berigan applied the "hot"

style to the pop tune.

Bunny has been criticized for his sometime sweet tone, but he cleaned up his tone only where it suited the mood. Would the critics have him play his famous theme, I Can't Get Started, a la Muggsy Spanier? Muggsy is great, but it's just not that kind of tune. Berigan adapted his style to the type of music he was playing. Listen to him on Billie Holiday's Summertime. Dirty enough? And it is also our contention that his playing must be judged as a separate form of jazz; it is unfair to criticize him as anything but a swing trumpeter.

Bunny first began to be heard of in the 1930 Hal Kemp Orchestra. During the rest of his musical career, a brief twelve years, he recorded with over fifty different bands, including Paul Whiteman, the Dorsey Brothers, Frankie Trumbauer, Gene Kardos, Red Norvo, and others. A few of the bands are not too musicianly, and some are more "mickey" than not, but every so often a trumpet rises above them with a solo that could be only Bunny Berigan's. For example, some of his best solos on wax are on the Chick Bullock Melotone records.

How Bunny managed to record with so many different bands is something of a mystery. The most amazing fact is that he recorded with the large majority of them in only seven years, between 1933 and 1940. Quite a few of these recording dates were probably due to Bunny's being a staff musician for Decca. (This can be borne out by checking master numbers or record numbers. Practically all of Berigan's work for Decca was done on record numbers 600 to 900, and is heard with so many different bands and non-jazz types of bands—such as Dick Stabile—that it could be nothing but studio work.)

There are many records that are believed to have Bunny on them, but no one is sure enough to say positively, since he played such entirely different styles with different groups. One of these doubtful records is the Red McKenzie Sweet Lorraine on the Variety label, even though there is a long trumpet solo. Hot Discography lists the trumpet as Dave Wade, but he sounds as much like Bunny as Bunny does. If, how-ever, Dave Wade is a pseudonym, perhaps the "Dave Wade" on four early Artie Shaw Brunswicks is actually Berigan.
Some of the Chick Bullock and Dick

McDonough sides on Melotone are questionable items too, although the master numbers correspond with others that positively feature Bunny.

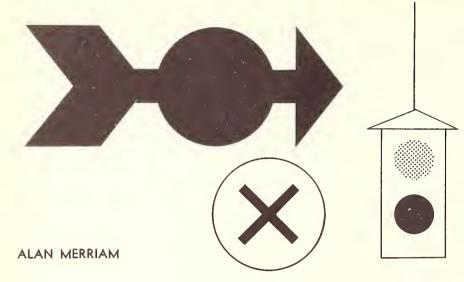

Collecting the records of Bunny Berigan is something like looking for a four-leaf clover in Forrest Lawn, Information is so scanty that no discography lists more than a fifth of the bands he recorded with. Practically the only method of search is to just keep listening to all sorts of records and compare them with what you've got. And don't reject such bands as Freddy Martin, Glenn Miller, or Freddie Fich (their earlier bands of course) as too commercial.

Now a little more about the man himself. All right, maybe he drank too much. Perhaps it affected his playing and perhaps it didn't. A certain lack of control is noticeable on some records, but we believe that is due only to Bunny's willingness to try anything on his horn. His playing sounds spontaneous and anything that came into his head he tried to reproduce from the bell of his trumpet. Within the space of a few bars he would jump from low B or A to high E, from a growl to a piercing shake; it always sounded good; you always felt that that was the only kind of solo that would sound right.

Bunny was equally at home in a small or large band. His work with the smaller groups seems to have more life, though. His first recordings for Vocalion, with Artie Shaw and Jack Teagarden as sidemen, show to the best advantage the driving quality his horn could have. Even the larger bands he fronted had a spirited tempo that few others had. It was with these larger bands that Bunny recorded so many jazz standards: Jazz Me Blues, Dixieland Shuffle, Mahogany Hall Stomp, Sobbin' Blues, and many others.

Maybe one reason that Bunny never became a popular favorite is that he was a musician's musician. Louis Armstrong once picked him as his favorite trumpeter, and Muggsy rated him high, too. As is so often the case, recording doesn't do justice to the artist, but talk to any musician who has played with Bunny (such as clarinetist Andy Fitzgerald) and you'll hear nothing but admiring adjectives. He never had what could be called a sparkling stage personality, as he was usually leaning against the piano with half-closed eyes, but the trumpet he played was inspired and full of life.

Berigan's own bands had their ups and downs. In 1936, leaving Benny Goodman and then Freddie Rich, Bunny formed his own group. They were very successful, playing in the best New York niteries until 1939, when illness forced Bunny to disband. This outfit included such top men as Georgie (Continued on Page 26)

It is no secret that, at present, nightclubs which have formerly followed a jazz policy are now employing entertainment units featuring hillbilly and funny-hat routines which have no con-nection whatsoever with jazz. Nor, by the same token, is it a secret that more and more jazz musicians are being shunted into other work in order to be able to play regularly and to make a reasonable living. However, it is either a secret or a tacit agreement of non-recognition which overlooks the fact that many serious young musicians are turning away from jazz and toward other types of music as a lifetime labor.

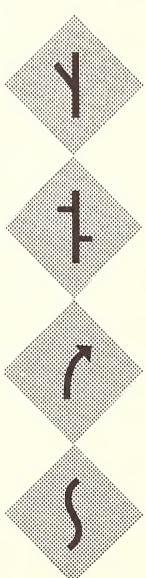

These are the musicians who, having become thoroughly conversant with the techniques of playing jazz, are now anxious to make further study of it along more technical lines—in other words, to investigate jazz thoroughly as an independent musical idiom. It may be argued that these students appear too infrequently to be of significant interest, but this is not valid reasoning, for it is not improbable that there are literally hundreds of young musicians and students in colleges and universities today who have an express desire to study jazz seriously, but who are not doing so.

It may further be argued that since these people would be studying passively, so to speak; that is, not actually creating jazz music, their activity would be of no significance or use to the jazz world. This attitude is based again, however, on an inherently false presumption, for it is precisely these students who can offer through their studies the means of making jazz an accepted part of the legitimate musical curriculum. However, this is not of primary concern here; rather, the problem of why the young musician turns away from jazz is significant.

Let us take, for purpose of illustration, two musicians of my own acquaintance, both of whom have long played jazz, but who are now transferring their interest to other types of music. Both are young men in their early twenties; both are undergraduates in recognized music schools, one in the Chicago area, the other in Montana; one is a violinist, the other an oboist, although the former plays bass in jazz orchestras while the latter is an excellent tenor man. Both have jazz record collections in which they have invested considerable time and money, and both have been playing jazz as professional musicians since their early teens. On the surface, it would seem plausible that their interest in jazz would and should remain keen, yet both have recently indicated a sudden lack of interest in it. What are the reasons for this abandonment of a music which both have sincerely admired and enjoyed? Why the sudden turn away from jazz to other fields of music?

In the first place, in order to stimulate a continual appreciation of any music one must be in constant touch with it through live performances by excellent musicians. In this respect, phonograph records make but a poor substitute, since the material presented therein is all too often carefully selected, both for its commercial value and for its avoidance of controversial material.

avoidance of controversial material.

Here, of course, the Montanan is at a considerable disadvantage, for it is only infrequently that a top-flight jazz band is available in the interior Pacific Northwest. Thus, he is forced to turn almost exclusively either to phonograph records or to his own playing, and since his own musicianship is generally of a higher calibre than those with whom he plays, inspirational listening to live music is at a minimum. to live music is at a minimum.

On the other hand, the Chicagoan is at a distinct advantage, since in Chicago at present there is advantage, since in Chicago at a great deal of excellent jazz being played regularly. However, even here, due to living costs and the expenses of going to school and supporting a family, the Chicagoan is unable to afford the nightclubs except on comparatively rare occasions. Thus, it may be seen that neither of these young men whom we are using as illustrations has the opportunity to hear enough live music to entertain an unflagging interest in what is going on in Directly stemming from this reliance on phonograph records is a second reason for the declining interest in jazz—namely, the preeminence of bc. This is not to be construed as an attack on, or a denial of the merits of this particular develop-ment in jazz, for to deny those merits would be a categorical refutation of an exciting musical idiom. However, it cannot be denied that, thus far, the vast majority of bop records which have been issued have not demonstrated a topflight calibre of musicianship. Small recording companies have seized upon the opportunity for quick turnover by exploiting the sensational aspects of this particular music, and as a result a great many of the per-formances are slipshod and inadequate.

In addition, bop requires tremendous technical ability, both instrumentally and harmonically, and this in turn compounds poor and strictly imitative recordings by inferior musicians who are riding the popularity bandwagon. It is not so surprising then, that bop should have a negative influence on the local musician who must become acquainted with it almost exclusively through phonograph records, and this, coupled with the fact mentioned above—that a jazz band, be it Dixie or bop, is never as exciting on records as it is in personcan and does act as a strong agent in negating an interest in jazz music. The effects are by far more serious on the Montanan, into whose orbit a refreshing and exciting band such as that of Dizzy Gillespie has not yet penetrated in person.

A third, and even stronger reason for the movement away from jazz is to be found in the fact that both of the young men in question are attending legitimate music schools in which three out-standing factors are operative. In the first place, no matter what two conflicting fields are striving for supremacy in the mind, the one which is con-(Continued on Page 27)

THE INIMITABLE MR. MONK

paul bacon

Even the worst enemies of the man known as the "High Priest of Bebop" are forced to admit that he is, after all, a remarkable fellow. It has become fashionable to think him a greatly overrated musician, something of a charlatan, a mystic whose very mysticism is calculated to conceal a rather prosaic flaw: poor musicianship. That is utter nonsense.

There is no doubt that Monk is a man without conventional scope, without the sense of the opportune, devoid entirely of the deft imagination which Dizzy Gillespie turned into an even more valuable property than his talent, by capitalizing on the physical oddities of the bop school, with great good will and ingratiating theatrics. Lack of that perception, and elan, is serious in the music business. It leads to other lacks which, though they aren't aesthetically noticeable, are not conducive to health and happiness: lack of things like money.

I don't pretend to hold any brief for the things Thelonious has done to, and for, himself, nor do I intend to demonstrate that he is in reality a mild, virtuous and misunderstood man. People have knocked themselves out in his behalf, time and again, without producing any permanent good, not because of any maliciousness on Monk's part, but because the chasm separating their senses of value from his is too great. It is better to be an amateur admirer than a promoter, in Monk's case.

I have a choice here between writing about Monk as he is, or as he seems to be, and is generally thought to be. There isn't any great difficulty about it, because both sides are fertile ground; the stories merely differ in plausibility. The trick to making a genuine legend out of an artist is quite simple—you need only to describe him in comparison with so-called "normal" people, if he is slightly eccentric, and, if he is not, describe his remarkable normality in comparison with the weird behavior of other artists. Thus, in Thelonious' case, staying up for 72 hours at a stretch and then sleeping for 48 may well be considered unusual (if he did it continually, which he doesn't, he could rest on those laurels alone), like many other things he does, unless you remember that he is a musician, that his personal life is that of a musician and not a bank clerk.

Nonetheless, there are aspects of Monk's personality which no amount of logic can solve. He is undoubtedly a very selfish man (this quality, too, is not at all unique among artists), and the business of having the world revolve around him has caused him to see things in a remarkably direct fashion -very much in the manner of a child. The process of becoming mature requires a hell of a lot of concessions, usually called "adjustments," and he has never made many. In this way, the formality of wearing clothes is inexplicable to a child just as the formality of musical structure is inexplicable to Monk. I think that some subtle facet of his mind realizes that he has this quality, and that he cherishes it.

A self-absorption as profound as Thelonious' produces some wonderful anecdotes, many of which have been printed over and over; my favorite is an incident I was spectator to, and which has never been recounted, as far as I know.

There is, in Harlem, a monstrous barn of a dance-hall called the "Golden Gate"; quite a number of affairs are produced there every year, and the usual system is to have two alternating bands working—in the last few years the two bands have been one bop group and one Calypso band. (There are a couple of remarkable Calypso bands in New York, playing a real powerhouse music which is closer to Harlem in 1928 than Trinidad in any year.) The occasion I'm thinking of took place there in 1947, almost exactly two years ago. Macbeth's calypso contingent shared the stand with a bop sextet fronted by Monk; the boppers were second in line, so, after a long set by Macbeth, Monk's band wandered desultorily to the stand.

Photos by Francis Wolff

Monk fussed with the piano, discovering that it was a pretty venerable instrument (when he sits at a piano there is a dead key on it—no matter how recently the thing was in perfect condition. He accepts this as one of the penalties of genius) and making faces at it as he sounded notes at the other musicians' request. Close examination showed him that the pedal post was shakily attached; he jiggled the whole piano apprehensively, then shrugged his shoulders and concentrated on some music left behind by Macbeth's pianist.

A little later, I became aware that Thelonious was doing something extraordinary-either tying his shoe or waving to somebody under the piano; as I watched, mesmerized, I saw that he was yanking at the pedal post with all his might (first he kept up with the band by reaching up with his right hand to strike an occasional chord, but he had to apply himself to the attack on the post with both hands, and get his back into it, too). There was a slight crack, a ripping sound, and off came the whole works, to be flung aside as Monk calmly resumed playing. He never looked at it again, but when Macbeth's man came back on the stand he stopped short, stunned. It was obvious that here was a new experience, something outside the ken of a rational man; for the rest of the evening he looked upon Thelonious with a new respect.

It is generally something much like the above bit of business which causes people to look on Monk with a new respect; nothing is quite so arresting as a man who actually doesn't give a damn, even if you think he is acting, and how do you prove that?

Take off Thelonious' famous glasses and you will look hard to find your eccentric High Priest of Bebop; they are his armor and his shield. Most people are shocked to discover that he does, after all, have eyes like their own-it's so easy to think of him as a man with a gold-plated brow and two-inch black discs for eyes. There isn't anything fragile about him, mentally or physically, as his reputation for being able to take care of himself will attest. A necessarily iron constitution is supported by a six-foot, 175-pound frame, which he drapes in double-breasted suits exclusively, most of the time with the coat unbuttoned. He moves slowly, very slowly, under any conditions; at his initial concert, in New York's Town Hall, he had to walk approximately fifty feet to the piano, after being announced; he emerged from the wings with a deliberate, measured step, taking an age to reach the Steinway. Before he had completed the necessary ceremony of benchadjusting, pedal-testing, and coattail-draping, the audience was in a state of prostration. This was not a matter of stage presence, or lack of it; only a perfect sample of the deportment of Thelonious Monk.

As he puts it, "you have to be yourself if you try to be different, you might miss your cues."

At any rate, this man, unmalleable, exasperating, sometimes perverse to the point of justfiable homicide, is the man who casually formed the nucleus of the group which surprised itself by changing, at least temporarily, the direction of jazz. That was ten years ago.

Minton's Playhouse, on Harlem's 118th Street, is like many another birthplace of famous people and events-it doesn't look like much. Inside, though, there is an atmosphere hard to find anyplace else in New York; an ease, a lack of the professional gimlet-eyed nightclub bandits, whose only salable commodity is an obsequiousness available to one and all, for a small consideration. There have also been, at various times, a dapper waiter named Romeo, who was as likely to dance for the customers as bring them drinks, and many young musicians working for a living; in 1939 they included Kenny Clarke and Thelonious Monk.

I might add here that Monk's part in the whole history of bebop began long before 1939. In fact, as he tells it, he was playing essentially the same way he does now in 1932, when he was fifteen years old. His conception is not something that grew out of what he felt was a need for something new in music—he just played that way. His ear was hearing between the lines of its own accord, and that nonconformist ego told him that what he heard was perfectly valid. Time seems to have borne him out.

Too many stories have been written about the genesis of bop at Minton's; the footprints are all obscured, and I say why not? All the recounting of who played what for whom, and who picked it up, and who sat in and said "Man, this is it!" is producing some of the asinine squabbles which are the curse of traditional jazz. It seems definite that Monk and Clarke are chiefly responsible, and Monk has the advantage, historically, because he's a pianist and Clarke is a drummer. I doubt that either of them, or anyone else, knew what they were doing, saw anything momentous on the horizon, or even cared particularly.

Monk is fundamentally a catalyst, a well-spring; he is consistently interesting, whether he's playing or not. The complex personality which makes his behavior unpredictable has made his music stimulating to gifted and receptive men like Parker and Gillespie; that personality is unchangeable, the stimulus is unfading. He'll have both when he's ninety years old.

Those are the attributes he had at Minton's, and they made him a source, something fundamental, therefore priceless. Any new enterprise requires a certain personnel to be vital: several people who grasp because their sophistication tells them that here is a direction their machinery is admirably suited to travel in, and at least one who is there because he is unable to do anything else, the man with an honest germ of an idea. Monk fits neatly into the latter category; not a virtuoso, but a creator. He can't sell his product, but there are salesmen who can, and do, even though some may not believe in it implicitly.

Well, what is his product? It is something quite fragile and intangible, like the quality in the stories of Virginia Woolf and Gertrude Stein. In fact, there have been many times when Monk has offended delicate ears with his pianistic assertion that a theme is a theme is a theme. He is perfectly aware that he has nothing new to say, no revelations to make to anyone; it is the simplest thing in the world to say "all he's done there is to play a G 7th instead of, etc. . . ." which is like saying that all Cezanne did is to translate nature into cones. cubes and spheres, and what's so remarkable about that?

Listen to Thelonious and you hear a man listening to himself, playing variations on what he hears, so that you never really are in contact with his immediate impressions; it's a little like watching an essentially righthanded but ambidextrous man draw with both hands at once-the right hand's effort is calculated and familiar, but the left hand's, though it almost follows suit, has a weird distortion; it's the same thing, but different, and it is likely to be more interesting.

The identity of a tune is like the identity of a word-it remains itself only as long as it is scrupulously kept in its proper place, with its proper emphasis; a great many ingredients go into recognition of either one. Everyone has had the experience of having a word suddenly become a series of foréign letters, utterly unrecognizable; in Monk's hands, a well-worn tune may dissolve into that same unreality. For instance, Liza is a song I've always known and liked, and however I heard it, it was always undisputably Liza, with connotations of words, situations, and sensations; but I heard it for the first time when Monk played it, because he is under no such hallucinations about any melody. What I have described is not the same thing as improvising: to play exhaustive variations on How High the Moon is not the same as to reconstruct it entirely, any more than closing your eyes makes you see as a blind man sees.

Monk's product is essentially simplicity. Because of it, he is a provocative musician, one with whom other musicians play wellsometimes better than they ever have. Recognizing that he had something beyond a reputation to offer, Blue Note Records, a firm of almost suicidal integrity, decided to take the plunge and make some records with him. The idea bore fruit in more ways than one, because they immediately discovered a whole uneaten side of the evil apple which is belop-young musicians, without reputation, who were following the avant-garde Gillespie and Parker circles, and bringing with them something of their own. They discovered that Monk always knew of a guy "who could blow," trumpet, tenor, alto -whatever was required. Alfred and Lorraine Lion and Frank Wolff were, for a time, father, brother, moral support and employment agency for Thelonious and his crew, and there were some fantastically messed-up moments for all parties during the time the records were being cut.

The titles have the same charm as the music-'Round About Midnight, In Walked Bud, Humph, Ruby, My Dear, Evonce, Well You Needn't, Suburban Eyes, to name a few; the first one was Thelonious, which one reviewer described as "oddly affecting," and that's pretty close.

During the time that these records were made, Monk went back to work at Minton's with a quartet which has always been one of the high spots for me in the frenetic life of bop: Edmond Gregory (Shehab, as his adopted Moslem brethren call him) on alto, Al McKibbon on bass, the amazing Art Blakey on drums, and Monk. That was a perfect unit, unlike any other, before or since: they played no tunes but their own. in no way but their own; they did more rhythmically, than any musical group I ever heard anywhere; and they kept improving until the inevitable break-up came, after too

NEW ORLEANS

A YOUTHFUL JAZZMAN

AFFIRMS HIS FAITH

IN THE TRADITIONAL STYLE

Affirmation of his belief in New Orleans jazz by Turk Murphy is of special interest today, coming as it does at a time when many people feel we have reached the tail-end of the so-called "New Orleans revival." It is of even more interest since it is the carefully thought out and deeply felt credo of a practicing professional musician who, for the past ten years, has deliberately turned his back on the field of commercial popular jazz to play the music he likes best.

Turk Murphy is, of course, the trombone player with San Francisco's famous Lu Watters Yerba Buena Jazz Band which played such a vital role in the renaissance of New Orleans jazz. Turk played with the Yerba Buena Jazz Band until this past summer when he left Hambone Kelly's for the precarious life of a free lance musician who hopes to get his own band organized.

With an awesome and admirably controlled single-mindedness, Turk has concentrated on his kind of music, and in spite of the uncertainties of the jazz world today, he is quite definite about the future of the New Orleans style. He believes it to be the only kind of jazz with a future, and says, "I will play it as long as I can play."

Though many critics and collectors, especially those who have heard him in person, believe him to be today's outstanding trombone player, not very much has been written about him. His own account of how he started in music is intriguing because it is so unlike the story of the great Negro musicians born and raised in New Orleans. It is also intriguing because it might be the story of any number of young musicians growing up almost anywhere in the United States today. It follows here as Turk wrote it, in reply to my request:

Born in the unknown town of Palermo, Calif., Dec. 16, 1915. At about ten I tried to play an old short cornet my father left lying around. At about twelve I saw a parade so wanted to play trombone. My father bought one from Montgomery Ward, new price, $7.50. No lessons on any instrument. When I moved to Williams, Calif., at the age of 13 I received group training with grammar school band. My father played in jazz bands, not well known ones, however. He played cornet and my grandfather played baritone horn in someone's "Silver Cornet Band," I think this was in Placerville in the 90's. The first sound I remember that made an impression on me was hearing a cornet and clarinet playing together. The first tunes I definitely remember are Wolverine Blues and Copenhagen.

Played in several name bands but I don't think the names would matter. I had previously privately studied theory and harmony in order to arrange. I worked for years arranging for bands and stage shows. Wrote music for Sally Rand's shows for some time, I played many theaters, including the famed Southern "Cushman Circuit."

Yerba Buena's Harry Mordecai

Made some records for Will Osborne but the trombones worked as a team and no one can be heard. I gave up commercial life and good pay to be again close to the sound of the cornet and clarinet, and too, because my eyes were becoming quite bad. I was arranging a few tunes for Watters' large group that was playing in the Bay area in 1939. I was also writing and playing with a commercial group until the Fall of 1939 when we started getting together in the penthouse of the Mark Twain Hotel on Taylor St., in San Francisco. The group included Lingle, Patton, Helm, Watters and myself.

The rest is jazz history, and the story of the Yerba Buena Jazz Band is too well known to be retold here. With the exception of the war years, when he had what he calls a "tame career" in the Navy (aviation machinist's mate first class) Turk was an integral part of the Watters ensemble, and his theories and feelings about New Orleans style were intensified by the invaluable experience of so many years of continuous performance with other musicians who shared his enthusiasms.

Today, Turk is a man whose belief in ensemble playing is stronger than ever and he would subscribe to the analysis of the British critic Ian Lang (Jazz in Perspective), who said, in discussing the New Orleans style: "The performances consist almost entirely of ensemble playing, the only solo improvisations being 'breaks' of a few bars. In recordings made by colored bands four or five years later, while the emphasis is still on the ensemble, there are solos consisting of entire choruses, sixteen or thirty-two bars. The subsequent history of jazz is the gradual breaking down of the New Orleans ensemble tradition, until the typical performance came to be a series of solo choruses, with one or more members of the band 'filling in' behind each successive soloist." Lang goes on to say that the triumph of this "cruder" technique has meant an "impoverishment of jazz."

turk murphy and lester koenig

In an extremely personal way, Turk expresses the musician's point of view:

To me, there is no jazz music more enjoyable than that of several horns playing together, especially when each is listening to and trying to enhance the parts the others are playing. It's too bad that many musicians in so-called Dixieland groups feel that effort put forth in ensemble playing is wasted.

Ensemble playing is an art that might soon be lost because so many musicians feel it limits the show of their talents. Actually, the reverse is true, because in order to play an effective ensemble each musician involved must listen to the others in the group and must have a good ear in order to add to instead of detract from the pattern of the music. When an ensemble starts, it doesn't take long to pick out the musicians who have progressed only far enough in music to work out a few licks for themselves. An understanding of basic harmony is desirable but not necessary because there are too many snap-judgments involved and unless a cut-and-dried part is played over and over, the musician has no time to invoke the rules of harmony.

Ensemble playing can be much more exciting than solos because the talents and imagination of several musicians are involved. I like to think of it much like the weaving of patterned cloth, different colors of thread woven to produce a design that if done correctly will be an understandable finished product. If the threads are allowed to run wild with no thought as to the design, the result would be a jumble of colors that you would discard for good reason.

Many people feel that ensemble is merely a means of getting into the solos and out of the tune. The last chorus in this school of thought is usually a high screaming affair with each musician striving to be heard above the others. In these cases there is no chance for an ensemble feeling, neither is there a design or pattern. Musicians playing this "every tub sits on its own bottom" style fail to listen to each other in their desire to be heard.

Because he was part of the Yerba Buena Jazz Band for so many years, Turk is reluctant to set it up as an example of fine ensemble playing. Nevertheless, as far back as November 1941, the late Gene Williams, writing about the band in Jazz Information, was able to say, "... their main achievement follows their main goal: to build a good jazz ensemble.... Solo ability is incidental, for it grows out of good ensemble. Turk Murphy can turn in as fine a solo as Ory, Brunies or Jim Robinson. But like them, he excels in playing knocked-out tailgate background with full, brassy tone."

In the years that followed, it was that ensemble, more than any other single factor, that gave the Watters band its unique quality. Modestly enough, Turk says: "They did play well together. It can be said for everyone in the band that they enjoyed ensembles much more than solos." Incidentally, Turk feels it is difficult, and somewhat unfair, to judge the Yerba Buena Jazz Band unless you'd heard them in person because their records do not capture the special sound of the band.

In discussing solo improvisation in relation to ensemble, Turk does not attempt to diminish its value. He has as much admiration for a good solo as anyone does, but he thinks that a solo can be more effective coming out of the ensemble:

A good solo between sections of ensemble can be like jewelry, the setting being the ensemble and the set as the solo. Jewelry made entirely of sets would have nothing to hold it together, and settings without any stones might not be very interesting. But there are cases where the setting does have more value than the stone. The Oliver Creole Jazz Band got its rolling sound from the ensemble that it played so well. Their setting was certainly no less beautiful than the set.

The question of arranged ensembles is a difficult one. In general, Turk is not too hopeful of the possibilities of getting the most out of a tune if the parts are all written out. "It's true," he admits, "that Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers records were very strictly arranged by Morton, but they were written in good taste, and the musicians he used were very good at playing together. But, ordinarily, arranged jazz couldn't hope to sound like that band did."

As a matter of fact, various bands among the younger groups have tried to copy some of the Morton records almost note for note, but the result lacks the excitement and style of the originals and the difference is apparent to the casual listener. Turk believes that writing down parts for small jazz bands can be very useful as a guide until the band has learned the tune. Then, once they know it, the quality of their playing will be governed by their talent and imagination in improvising their own ensemble.

As for his own instrument, Turk has this to say:

Playing trombone parts in band ensemble does not generally call for a great display of technique even though a reserve of technical ability is a necessity. The problem is to keep simple in order not to jumble the ensemble and still play an effective part. Technical ability is necessary in any case because playing even a simple part without ability makes for an awkward, in the relation of the blues to bop

sidney finkelstein

The connection between the blues and modern jazz, particularly bebop, which I pointed out in my recent book on jazz, has aroused considerable dissent and questioning. I stated that there were blues phrases, blues idiom, blues feeling, in many jazz performances not labelled "blues," even in many whose starting point was a pop tune. This seems to have aroused the wrath of a whole school of bop critics.

Their theory is the familiar set of cliches: the blues are a definite "chord structure," and every blues performance is based on that "chord structure," which they will describe, write down in real notes, even play on the piano for any listener. Modern jazz, especially bebop, on the other hand, is based on the "chord structure" of a popular tune. It can't possibly be blues, can it?

I still think that to define the blues in terms of the simple chords used to accompany them is as accurate as to define a building in terms of its cellar, or a critic in terms of his haircut. Every building needs a cellar, or some substitute, and the cellar is planned to the needs of the building. But it still doesn't define what goes on above. When Bessie Smith sings the blues or Johnny Dodds plays them, what moves me so deeply is what she sings or he plays, not the "chord structure" underneath. And this, what she sings or he plays, is to me the "blues." If the blues were defined by a few simple chord progressions, how explain the fact that there are literally thousands of blues records, vocal and instrumental, which can be listened to with such pleasure? Why aren't three records enough, since they would contain all the blues "chord structures"? Ah, but they "improvise"! Yet even this magic word does not explain everything. What is it that they improvise? To me, again, these melodic phrases and breaks that they improvise are the blues.

And the character of this blues melody is nothing mysterious; it can be analyzed in terms of a definite scale structure, certain groups of notes and intervals preferred above others, certain haunting phrases that recur again and again in different combinations. All that the "chord structure" describes is the harmonic limit within which the blues move, the simple pillars used to support the rich melodic structure.

This is particularly important to know when it comes to modern jazz, for it is here that the "chord structure" theory blows up in smithereens. Just what is meant by improvising on the "chord structure" of a popular tune? It is a common practice of Tin Pan Alley to have one person write a melody, and another harmonize it. Then does the improvisation on a pop tune really use only the chords that the harmonizer adds? This is obviously not so, for it seems to the ear that something of the character of the original melody remains throughout the improvisation.

Yet I think I remember reading an article by Leonard Feather in which he himself admitted that he was up a tree. After naming in great detail the "chord structures" of pop tunes that were used as a basis for bebop improvisations, he confessed that the chord structures seemed to him to have nothing to do with the tunes themselves. Obviously, the same chords can be used for thousands of different tunes. And so, the statement, "improvisation on the chord structure of a pop tune," is meaningless.

What really happens in the process known as "improvising on the chord structure of a pop tune"? Actually, the words are misleading, but the real process is a familiar one in the art of music, classical and jazz. A set of chords generally is built about twoimportant elements: the melodic line, usually the top line of notes, or the second from the top, and the bass line, the lowest notes. Everyone who dabbles in harmony knows inis, from the barber-shop quartet, where the bass actually sings what is both the "bottom harmony" and a countermelody, and the New Orleans jazz band, where the trombone plays a line that is both "harmony" and a countermelody. And so, melody and bass are the two pillars of harmonic movement, (In the 17th and 18th centuries, the "Baroque" period, the art of writing a strong and powerful bass line was considered a central part of the art of harmony.)

Now, let us suppose a musician, improviser or composer, wants to "vary" a melody. A favorite way to do this is to throw the top line of melody to the bass and improvise new chords above this, using the original melody as the bottom notes of the new set of chords, and spinning a new countermelody on top. This was a favorite method in the 18th century (as in the great Bach sets of variations) and is a favorite method in jazz. When we see the process this way, then the term "improvising on the chords of a pop tune" can begin to make sense, except that it is not really the correct wording. It should be: improvising new chords, using the pop tune as a bass of the harmony, and spinning a new countermelody above.

When we look at it this way, the manner in which the blues can enter into a pop tune improvisation becomes pretty clear. It enters in the newly-improvised upper voice. It doesn't always happen this way, but it does so often enough to make it a pattern worth noticing.

Some examples: take the famous Armstrong I Can't Give You Anything But Love, first version. In the opening chorus, the melody distinctly moves to the bass, while Armstrong improvises above it. Then, in the chorus after the vocal, the melody again is in the bass. This time Armstrong actually improvises chords—broken chords, of course—above the melody, using key notes from it as the bass of his new harmony. And in these latter choruses, the blues distinctly enter, as melodic phrases and powerful breaks, in the melodic line that the trumpet spins. And so, while the performance is indubitably I Can't Give You Anything But Love, to my ears what Armstrong plays takes its character and feeling from the blues.

It has been pointed out to me that Ellington's Cottontail is really on the "chords" of Blue Skies. Maybe so. The way to find out is really the way I have outlined above as the process itself: play or sing the tune, and see whether it fits as the bass line of the music actually heard. But anyway, the trumpet passages in Cottontail, Ben Webster's remarkable tenor solo, Ellington's piano spot, are to me in the blues idiom. Lester Young's great solos, as in the Basie

Lady Be Good, are to me remarkable examples of exactly this giving of blues phrasings to an improvisation above a pop tune.

Similarly, it may be that such bebop performances as Parker's Billie's Bounce, Gordon and Gray in The Chase, and Gillespie's Emanon are based on pop tunes. There are traces of Tea for Two in The Chase. And in the Jazz at the Philharmonic record of Lady Be Good, with Charlie Parker and Lester Young, Parker's beautiful solo seems to invent phrases which later appear in Emanon. But those three performances, and many others I can think of, whatever the pop-tune starting point, are given their moving character through typical blues phrases and breaks.

Seeing the problem this way, we can see how modern jazz, and bebop, can be so creative, although seeming to use so many disguised pop tunes. To spin new melodies over a familiar bass is one of the favorite old methods of musical creation (as in Bach) and is as demanding upon the performer as any method of musical composition. So a great bebop performance (and those are certainly few and far between) regardless of the bass line it adopts, is a truly creative piece of musical invention.

Nor is this mixture of blues and pop strange to jazz, or invented only by the moderns. Charles Edward Smith, in his article in the August Record Changer, speaks of the rags as not jazz, but an "influence" on jazz, while the "blues" enter so importantly into jazz. What is meant by this "influence"? Is it not that the rag pieces, which are not blues, can be played with blues phrases and intonations above them?

The relation of blues to modern jazz and bebop is especially important because it indicates how a great deal of the free harmonic exploration, which is so fascinating a part of modern jazz, springs from the application of the blues. It is well known that a typical blues interval is the addition of the "diminished seventh" to a common chord. In other words, if we play a tonic chord, like C-E-G, then add the diminished seventh, the B-Flat, we seem to be "bluing" the chord.

Now, if we make the B-Flat permanent, we are really in a new key, the key of F. When we "blue" the tonic chord of that key by adding another diminished seventh, or E-Flat, we move to still another key. Thus, by continually "bluing" the key in which we are in, we can move through the entire circle of keys, until we are back at the beginning. (This is not my "discovery," but was explained by some jazz musicians who had studied the process.) But from this simple point, we can see how the new use of blues becomes a factor in the harmonic flights which are so fascinating in modern jazz, and it also explains-at least to my satisfaction—why the best belon seems to have, though in a different way, so much of the haunting qualities of the old blues jazz.

NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KING

MARES

One by one they go. It wasn't many years ago that Bix, Tesch, Jimmy Harrison, Bubber Miley, and only one or two others comprised the great jazzmen who had died. But the list gets longer every year. Between Bessie Smith and Bunk Johnson, each of the last twelve years has seen an everincreasing number of names added to the list. The great, near-great, and the ones who were just names on old records; their numbers keep mounting.

Paul Mares, trumpet player of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, is the latest. You have to go back to 1935 for his last records, and at that he had been off wax for a decade. So, to most collectors and jazz fans of today Mares is just another name on a reissue label or an early page in Hot Disc- ography. Chances are that nobody ever went out to collect Paul Mares records as such. His part in jazz is simple and somewhat underplayed.

In a time when rickey-tick was the thing, and Louis Panico was making a travesty of mutes as well as the trumpet, Mares was the one who showed the way for a whole slew of white trumpet players to follow—Muggsy Spanier, Jimmy MacPartland, Dick Feige, Johnny Mendel, Carl Rinker, and even Bix, whose first idol must unquestionably have been LaRocca. The Mares trumpet is inadequately documented on records, although there's a sufficiency of quantity, because only his last session was electrically cut. You can hear it for yourself—a hardpunching style with incisive tone. The first white trumpet player who swung.

The NORK was organized in Chicago in 1920. Paul Mares was a little older than most of the others (Rappolo was 17 and George Brunies not much older). He quickly became the "take-charge" guy of the band, even though he came into the group only as a substitute for Abbie Brunies, who couldn't leave New Orleans at the time.

It is Mares who is credited with organizing the final line-up of the group, stepping in from his chair in Tom Brown's band at the Camel Gardens. Having been in Chicago for four or five years, he knew more musicians and ropes than the newcomers from his home town. The successful fusing of Chicago and New Orleans musicians in the NORK is a tribute to Paul's experience and judgment.

Mike Fritzel, operator of the Friar's Inn, a joint with high-class pretensions (which didn't last long), wanted a New Orleans band to cash in on the popularity of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band and Tom Brown's band. The NORK made the grade in spades. The name of the group was changed to the Friars Society Orchestra, and it stuck until agent trouble caused them to switch to the name under which the band made its place in jazz history.

It was, in short, the second great band, chronologically, to get a reasonable amount of its work on wax. No need to repeat what the records say for themselves: glance through Discography or Index to Jazz and you've got the names, dates, and what was recorded. The repertoire, generally speaking, was that of the ODJB plus originals in the same vein and some good pops of the time. Tin Roof Blues, That's a Plenty, That Da Da Strain, Maple Leaf Rag—these were the sort of times that the NORK contributed or introduced to the jazz band repertoire.

In those days, Paul Mares was the top white trumpet player in Chicago jazz circles, which just about meant the U. S. of A. It was Mares who kicked off the tunes, led those ensembles that switched jazz playing from the staccato manner of the ODJB into a smooth-flowing, more-subtly syncopated style that the Negro musicians back home were developing. Mares got his style largely from Joe Oliver, but he knew about Louis Armstrong, too; he is credited with having warned Joe that if he sent for Armstrong to come into the Oliver band it wouldn't be long before Louis would overshadow the King himself.

But Mares didn't buddy around with the Chicago kids that followed Oliver and Armstrong around, nor did he go into the commercial music field as his compatriots Jack Pettis, Elmer Schoebel, Ben Pollack, and even George Brunies. He drifted back to New Orleans, out of the mainstream of jazz history, and then back to Chicago for depression-time jobbing which is remembered now only through one of the last sessions of the old Okeh label.

This date was set up by the Mills Music

This date was set up by the Mills Music Publishing Company, which contracted Mares for Okeh in order to cut two originals of Paul's. Along with Nagasaki and Maple Leaf Rag, Mills wanted to launch Paul's instrumentals, Reincarnation and Land of Dreams. The first was a slow blues, with a tantalizingly familiar phrase in the second and third bars which I have never been able to track down to its original source. (Anyone know?) Land of Dreams was a 32-bar extension of the Basin Street theme, which Santo Pecora tips off on his solo chorus. The records today are plenty rare, since Okeh folded a few weeks after the sides were issued, and are largely notable for the unusual personnel they brought Mares and Pecora hadn't recorded in more years than they'd have liked, and neither had drummer George Wettling, bass player Pat Pattison, and guitarist Marvin Saxbe. Omer Simeon was a last-minute substitute on clarinet, and he had been heard in recent years only with Earl Hines' big band. For Boyce Brown and Jess Stacy it was a record debut; well, Jess had cut a date in the twenties, but it still doesn't count. He did a great job on these sides with the group, and the story is that Benny Goodman hired him just from hearing these records. They're good sides, well worth having, though fuzzily recorded.

Mares has a big, broad, rough tone with unbridled power here. It's also interesting to note that he chose to call the group "Paul Mares and his Friar's Society Orchestra," recalling the original name of the NORK when it opened at the Friar's Inn when it opened at the Friar's Inn.

In the late thirties, Paul Mares opened the "P & M New Orleans Barbecue," and this unpretentious North Side restaurant promptly became a hangout for jazz fans and musicians. The best ribs I ever had

OVERSEAS JAZZ RELEASES

Although England may be squeezed for dollars, her citizens are still receiving some fine jazz releases.

The Yorkshire Jazz Band is about the most promising in England. These boys take it easy and play with real feeling. After listening to their Muskrat Ramble/Big Chief Battle Axe, Tempo A17, we place it on the "must" list as an interesting example of early New Orleans revival style. This band has every possibility of going places.

Recently, we received an announcement of the International Jazz Festival presented by the Hot Club of Belgium. At the festival there were 4 Belgian bands, 3 French, 3 Dutch, 2 American, and one each from Italy and Switzerland. When they say "International" they really mean it!

The latest Belgian Decca catalogue lists Stardust by the Gene Dersin Orchestra on 8016 with the same piece on 8975 by Louis De Rijick. Dawn-Marsh-Deniz combine to make St. Louis Blues on 8035.

Although the New Orleans Stompers continue to give their interesting "Riverboat" jazz sessions in Switzerland, they have not yet been commercially recorded. However, Swiss rumors are that they have been recorded by a U. S. label.

In Germany a new big-scale magazine has made its debut. Contents are varied with plenty of artistic illustrations filling the pages. It's called Jazz, and lives up to the title. Anyone interested in securing a copy can do so by contacting Olaf Hudtwalcker, Bockenheimen Landstr. 69, Frankfort, AM, Germany.

Although the Summit label is a U. S. product, we feel it rates a word here since most of the releases will be originals of foreign jazz bands. The Dutch Swing College of Holland has six originals on Summit 1002, 1003, 1004. We understand that Summit will soon issue some original Bell Band numbers. Three reissues of Luter's Band of France, which originally appeared on Selmer label are currently available. Experts say that these are the finest sides Luter has recorded to date.

From Finland comes Stig Wennstrom's Dixieland Jazz Band on Rytme 7012 doing Darktown Strutter's Ball. This is as fine a jazz record as you will find in any collection of foreign jazz and we definitely recommend you make all attempts to secure a copy. There are many Swedish collectors desiring U. S. trades and, while this record will be difficult for them to obtain, at 1½ for 1 they will get it from Finland. Get two copies—you'll soon wear one out. It's that good.

For the time being we are forced to retract our opinion of Russian jazz. The reason is our most recent package from Russia which contained one recording with some very interesting piano. It's a trio or quartet with drums, bass and clarinet—the pianist being outstanding. It's impossible to decipher or reproduce the Russian titles and names. Someone hazarded a guess that the title was Piano Variations. Instead of the usual USSR label, the Russians chose to give us a picture of a statue, man and woman with hammer and sickle on a red background. Number 15726.

There has been little news of interest from Sweden during the last month. Only one record of a jazz nature has been issued. However, the Swedes anticipate several new issues for October as well as the personal appearance of the Benny Goodman Sextet.

Here's a $10,000 idea if anyone is interested. Sweden has long been noted for the fine stiffs (hard folders) that come with discs purchased in that country. We note that our latest shipments are coming in these stiffs which are now about an inch wider, stapled margin, and punched to fit a loose leaf ring album. Quite a thought to buy your discs and get them in tailor-made album pages ready for insertion.

We had thought of calling this to the attention of the "Big 3," but decided that lately their time was too taken up with thinking up new speeds with which to confuse the collector.

It is only fair to the Changer and ourselves to advise you that a 13c ad placed in the classified section and requesting foreign trades will get at least twenty replies from about 7 different foreign countries. We know. We tried it. So, please give us a break and stop requesting contacts in England, France, Australia, etc., until you advertise. We're quite willing to cooperate should you desire help in countries like Japan, India, Russia, Iceland, etc., where the record collector exists in droves of one or two per country. A stamped self-addressed envelope will take the bite off our postage bills when you write.

Turk Murphy's Jazz Band

Chimes Blues

When My Sugar Walks Down the Street

Papa Dip Turk's Blues

A couple of more musts for your shelf, and good news: more will follow soon! Les Koenig's Good Time Jazz label is establishing a colossal batting average for itself, although this marks only its third and fourth trips to the plate. These sides by Turk Murphy and a group culled from the late Yerba Buena band are as exciting as the Fire House Five-Plus-Two sides which constituted the label's debut. Turk's boys are not instantly striking because they lack the complete freshness of the Red Suspender Serenaders, but they are surer of themselves and they crack down on four fine tunes just as smashingly.

Turk's bunch is a solid sextet: it's the Lu Watters band of recent years, with Lu and Bill Dart left out and Wally Rose's replacement, Burt Bales, at the upright. That means, as you expect, there is a slight flavor of "I've heard that band before" when you listen to these sides, but the dropping of two instruments (and a change of studio, no doubt) makes quite a change. These sides are much lighter than the Watters band ever sounded; otherwise, there is a certain affinity which is like sipping Cutty Sark with a memory of Teacher's Highland Cream still on your tongue. Mmmmmm—awful good!

Turk is in great form, and gets—as you'd expect—a good chance to shine here and there. One suspects he hasn't worked too much lately because there is a certain roughness to his playing which wasn't apparent during the era of regular hours at Hambone Kelly's, but the only trombone players I ever heard who hit every note on the button were Tommy Dorsey and Jack Jenny, so ... Bob Helm shows considerable improvement over his West Coast cuttings, and for the first time I can say I've really heard Bob Scobey on records. Don't try to spot the Scobey and Watters solos on the old Yerba Buena records, though—that's still a job which only Scobey and Watters can tackle

Buy both records, to be sure, but like me you may find yourself playing the second one more often. Turk's Blues is the main reason. Some years ago a side like this would have meant (to those of us who then had bushy heads of dark brown hair, like Les Koenig or me, but are now either heavily silvered, like Les, or have to worry about severe sunburn of the skull, like me) a series of blues choruses, either in B-Flat, E-Flat, or F, with everybody taking a turn and then all out at the end. But wisely enough, Turk has actually written a tune for Turk's Blues, and a beautiful one it is. And not even a trombone solo in it, which sets some kind of all-time record. It's the standout side of the date.

Papa Dip is a grand revival of the old Lillian Armstrong tune (quick now, who did it—the Wanderers or the Bootblacks?), and Burt Bales once again shows what a fine solid pianist he is. Chimes Blues is taken at the original tempo; somewhat in ragtime fashion, which was the intent of the Oliver band when they first put this great tune on wax. Turk sings the Sugar side, including the verse, which I don't think I'd heard before. He's not in best voice, but small matter. The line "And in the evening when the sun goes down" is the sort of thing that scares the hell out of recording directors until three weeks later, when they smile the happy smile of smug satisfaction as they play the tests for their friends. It's worth the price by itself. (Good Time Jazz 3, 4) (G.A.)

Red Norvo's All Stars, both unissued masters

Congo Blues Get Happy

The practice, apparently spreading, of putting a 12-inch master on a 10-inch side, by condensing the grooves, is admirably justified here. As may have been said before, this is one of the classic bop records (though purists may protest the presence of such as Teddy Wilson, J. C. Heard, and Norvo) and, as such, will be around for a long time.

This is a confection of the tender green shoots of the new Thing, from the early

Burt Bales

"what's happening?" period, when, in retrospect, music was quivering with the birth of something new. Great times, and it isn't too hard to foresee the day when a different generation of wistful savants will remember, not the night when Ben Webster walked into the Henderson band and cut everybody off at the knees, nor the day when the issuance of Singin' the Blues laid it down for all concerned, but the days when Dizzy and Charlie were playing in the same band, and, for the same lousy $.90 that would buy you a beer in any respectable clip-joint, you could have one in the place where they were working on momentous things.

It doesn't seem possible that this record was made almost five years ago, nor that the circumstances that produced it have vanished into the limbo of the records that Freddy Keppard didn't make in 1917, the stick that Zutty dropped on Squeeze Me, and the sugar-filled loaves which King Oliver ate; but it was, and they have. The record is as good now as it was then—in fact, Get Happy is a little better, being at a more relaxed tempo, and having an even better Dizzy chorus than the first one, on Comet. Dial 1035.

Art Hodes' Blue Five

Gut Bucket Blues Nobody's Sweetheart

Maybe the past few months' pickings have been so lean that this sounds better than usual to these tired ears but it seems to me like a pretty fair record. Not that I'd want to compare the top side to the original by Louis and the Hot Five, yet Hodes seems to have captured some of the same excitement without in any sense copying it. His opening and closing piano work, for example, is an elaboration of the St. Cyr guitar opening and he works it up into something that sets the whole tone of the record and helps things along considerably because it is as haunting as hell and so catchy you find yourself humming it. The other side is a little more the standard fare, but a pretty rollicking performance nonetheless

Among the personnel is Hodes, of course, and Maxie Kaminsky, the mite from Beantown who supposedly cut his teeth on Louie's backing up of Maggie Jones on Good Time Flat Blues. Mezz has always been close to Louie, as has Pops Foster, which leaves Danny Alvin about the only one on the date who wasn't. All things considered I'd call this a pretty successful item and it's good to hear Mezz again with that harsh, gritty tone. I'd say he was more than a little rusty and though he was never of more than limited technique he feels things in a way that is wholly his own.

This is not the best in the world but coming at such a time it is more than welcome on my record shelves. (Blue Note 528) (B.M.)

Castle Jazz Band

Down In Jungle Town Kansas City Torch

When the Saints Come Marching In, Parts I and 2

We've said it before, and we'll say it again—there's something about the west coast that just can't seem to help producing good little jazz bands. In a time where the real product, New Orleans jazz in the flesh, doesn't truly exist, one must do either of two things: crawl into a shell and proclaim that the real stuff is getting played (when?—a Saturday night job with George Lewis and some highly miscellaneous part-timers?), or just shrug and takes what kicks come along the closest to the ideal. Of course you can also chuck everything and switch to Roy Acuff, but that has its pitfalls, too.

This reviewer has always confessed to a wide streak of maudlin sentimentality that has embraced everything from Red Mc-Kenzie's vocal on Who Cares to Louis Memories of You. So drag out the hip flask, the rainy-day slicker with movable Mickey Mouse eyes on the back, and gas up the Stutz Bearcat while I put on Kansas City Torch. Call up Roxie Hart while you're at it, too. The band plays this 4 A. M. beer-jerker just the way it deserves—sweet, but still jazzy. Your neighbors may cry "Good old-time corn," and may be righter than you might want to admit, but this is one of the greatest examples I know of a good bunch of musicians playing a slobbery old pop in a way to delight middleaged boys and girls and bitter-end jazz fans as well. Monte Ballou sings the vocal with just the right sob, and if Castle doesn't push this on juke boxes there's something wrong with the industry.

The Castle Jazz Band's Down in Jungle Town is a marvelous interpretation, easily surpassing the version in Decca's New Orleans album, which for a decade has been the definitive record of this great tune. Taken at a splendid tempo—not too fast—the band's ensembles are what make this side so superb. Recording balance, favoring Larry Du Fresne's piano, is a wonderfulsounding one because Du Fresne is well-recorded (something that doesn't happen too often in a balance of this sort) and—what's even more important once that first point is established—he plays marvelously throughout the side. Even a stop-chorus for the drums (a device which I usually rate on a par with a night club emcee's inevitable song that his friends have asked him to do, he says) doesn't harm the great spirit of this side.

The two-part Saints is something else again. Monte Ballou opens it on banjo and vocal alone, then the fellows start chiming in with him (vocally, I mean—not playing), clapping and stomping, and finally the band gets rolling on all seven. Part One fades out at high gear, and the continuous performance is faded in on the other side, which breaks down once again to Monte alone and even the saints actually marching off at the end of the record. It's an idea that no doubt developed over a goodly flagon or two, and must have been fun to do, but it doesn't really come across on the record. I must say I enjoyed the delightfully flagrant out-of-tuneness when Larry Du Fresne's piano came in, a full quarter-tone flat. Obviously the boys were so mad for atmosphere that. Monte deliberately tuned up brutally sharp. By the way, Bob Short's tuba solo sounds remarkably like a jug—again, great atmosphere. Subsequent solos by clarinetist Bob Gilbert and trumpeter Don Kinch are swell, too.

Still, the guarantee sign goes to the first pair. I must say this is a staggeringly won-derful month for those who love this kind of raggle-taggle lowdown stuff, what with of raggle-taggle lowdown stun, what with the swell Turk Murphy sides on Good Time Jazz and these fine Castle etchings. Latch on, kids, and help yourself to seconds. (Castle 7, 8) (G.A.)

Lee Konitz Quintet

Fishin' Around Marshmallow

During the time when general reaction to Lennie Tristano was "what the hell's so wonderful about a guy playing in eight keys at once?" it wasn't so easy to tell exactly what made his stuff sound unique. A lot of people were left so cold they weren't even curious, but many of them have reconsidered. An example of what that have reconsidered. An example of what that fugitive quality was is in this particular record. The peculiar, breathless, rhythmic pattern is the ingredient in question, particularly on Marshmallow, which features Wayne Marsh playing a tenor like an alto and Lee Konitz playing an alto like a flute, but good. The music is necessarily cerebral, because the technique consists of outsmart. because the technique consists of outsmarting one's rhythmic instincts, ignoring the obvious pauses, and ignoring the temptation to get on a beat and develop it. It is consistently interesting, and Konitz, Marsh and the rhythm section are capable of doing it very well.

· Without undue heresy, it is possible to say that the relation of this record to the rest of bop is very much like the relation of Wringin' and Twistin' and For No Reason at All in C to the rest of jazz. It has the same unpretentious and mellow feeling. New

George Lewis

Burgundy Street Blues A Closer Walk With You

Burgundy Street Blues is the same thing as the 12-inch classic previously issued by American Music with a different coupling. It's been out of print for quite a while, and its been out of print for quite a while, and its reappearance is most welcome, particularly as a 10-inch item. The grooves are, of course, more closely spaced on this reissue than they were on the original release, but there is no loss in reproduction. It still is one of the great jazz performances of all

For the benefit of those who missed this one before, Burgundy Street is a Lewis one before, Burgumay Street is a Lewis original played by George on clarinet with only bass (Slow Drag) and banjo (Lawrence Marrero) accompaniment. The melodic development is extraordinarily beautiful; undoubtedly it isn't spot improvisation, but a synthesis of great blues choruses as Lewis has developed them over many years. Several quite different ideas are presented Several quite different ideas are presented in the course of this extended solo, yet they hang together wonderfully well. Whether George Lewis uses an E-Flat clarinet for this side, I can't say. The matter has been discussed among collectors for some time, and a post card to Bill Russell, who made these sides in New Orleans in 1944, could have settled it. The range of the instrument sounds remarkable on this record; the low tones are rich and full as with a standard B-Flat instrument, yet the upper register is as clear and penetrating as only an E-Flat clarinet would be expected to sound. In any event, this is a great record and a great tribute to George Lewis' playing.

The reverse is a previously unissued version of the great hymn tune which Lewis has been heard on twice before. Relatively speaking, it is a disappointment, but taken by itself it's a good, solid side by a quartet consisting of Lewis, Jim Robinson on trombone, Marrero, and Baby Dodds. It may be that a bass is on this record, too, but it doesn't sound on my not-too-adequate ma-

Throughout the Closer Walk side, Lewis improvises with the others rocking along in merry style. Robinson's trombone keeps slipping around Lewis all the way, with much the same effect as on the rousing Ice Cream: by this unit, which had been the original backing of the 12-inch Burgrundy. It's not quite as good as the old Ice Cream, but it's still a fine one, even with the rhythm section rushing so much in a couple of spots that the record ends up considerably faster than it starts. A TREASURY OF THE BLUES. Edited by W. C. Handy, with historical and critical text by E. Abbe Niles and pictures by Miguel Covarrubias. Charles Boni; distributed by Simon and Schuster. 256 pp.

I have, it seems, been laboring under a false impression for a number of years and I am glad that Abbe Niles' historical and critical text for A Treasury of the Blues has set me straight. All this time I have been thinking that jazz originated in New Orleans by a slow process of evolution but lo and behold I now find that it was originated by Mr. Handy in Memphis, and the spark that set it off was when Paul Wyer, first fiddle for the father of the blues, filled in a natural break with a hot lick. So I'm going to sell all of my Jelly's, Dodds, and Louies, all my Olivers, Dumaines and Sam Morgans, even my Freddie Keppards, my Sunshine Ory and the rest. They can't fool me now-when the river boats came up to Memphis Mr. Handy taught the boys how to play. I'm out to corner the Handy record market immediately.

All fooling aside, though, don't let this text put you off a pretty damned swell book to have around. The transcribed blues music and text-alone are well worth the price of the book and I've always been a sucker for a Covarrubias drawing. But it does make me a little sad that a wonderfully made book that is handsome as all get out has to be loused up this way. I'm more than willing to go along with the Father of the Blues angle, to stretch a point, but if you ever listened to any Handy records you know the proof of the pudding. Actually, Handy was a force in jazz, and a big one, but this gets a little silly and all out of proportion when you try to do what Mr. Niles does, especially when he ridicules Jelly for having said, in one of his usual moments of deep modesty, that he invented Jazz in the back room of a New Orleans saloon in

There's a lot more of the same here but there really isn't much sense in going into it. Let's just say that this was one of those unfortunate errors and not be too hard on the book for it. As I said, the pictures and the music makes up for it; they are a real and lasting contribution. Maybe you might even do what Wingy did one time when he was hired in Chicago for a job in New York on the mistaken assumption that he could read. He showed for the first rehearsal and faked his way pretty good for the first hour or so and then they caught up with him.

"Can't you read the music?" the man asked him.

"Hell, yes," Wingy told him, "but you know a man gets mighty rusty riding that train all the way here from Chicago!"

Rusty old me, I'm going to give those pictures and music hell!

Unfinished business: In the September column we left incomplete the data furnished by Ozzie Shellum of Superior, Wisconsin, due to lack of space and never got to the rest last month as we promised. So let's tackle that first. Back in June we discussed the New Orleans Pepsters and Bay State Broadcasters on Van Dyke and Madison. Ozzie informs us that he has The Harlem Stomp Down (3844A) as by The New Orleans Pepsters on Van Dyke 81836 with composer credit going to Austin just as it does on The Rackett. He also has Van Dyke 81843 with The Rackett (3844A) and the Bay State Broadcasters' Saint James Infirmary (3912E). You'll note the one we covered in June was the C take while Ozzie's is the E take. This latter has a vocal which takes about half the record while the former has no vocal at all. Ozzie wants to know if these could be Bennie Ozzie has turned up one of the Adrian Rollini Me-Pe-Ba-Or titles on Conqueror 8279 as by Art Kahn and his orchestra! Title is I'll Be Faithful (14001-3). The question is, how many jazz sides have been released under Art Kahn's name and why?

In July the Changer ran a Gillespie discography and some additions and corrections have been received. So for those who want to bring that discography up to date a bit further we will pass on these data. One correction: erroneously listed as by the Be Bop Boys is For Heckler's Only on Savoy 976 which is actually issued as by Ray Brown's All Stars. The following all have been reported by Bob Bachelder, Sanders Russell, Elmer E. Magee, Jr., Ed Case, Andrew E. Salmieri, and G. O. Von Frank as omissions from this list:

George Cleary of New London, Conn., has some Claxtonola items which he is uncertain of. He thinks some of them may be items of interest and would like to have any data on them even if just a personal opinion.

Label of the month: our record this month has no jazz significance and we have no idea if any jazz ever appeared in the label at all but the label itself is unusual enough for consideration. The label is Tremont produced by the American Record Manufacturing Company. The one shown is Tremont 0543 with Wondering (1431 B1) credited to the Tremont Dance Orchestra and coupled with The Midnight Waltz (1397 C1) credited likewise. The label is orange with black letters and appears very much like the early Oriole when that label had the same colors. Come forth, experts, and let's have some info on this obscure label. Arnold Stilwell's Record Dating Chart mentions the label and puts 0525 with masters (1323) and (1375) in 1925 and mentions that Cameo masters are the only ones that coincide at this time.

More unfinished business: Last month we got started on Cecelia Stuckey's questions and again ran out of that premium item, space! Cecelia has turned up a Henderson item on Regal. It's I'll See You in My Dreams (5810-5) on Re 9775 coupled with Take Me (5720-2) by Lew Gold. Rudy Barlow pops up again as Miss Stuckey lists two Velvet Tones she has. These are Molly (100345-7)/Keepin' Myself for You (149987) (by Sam Lanin) on Ve 2109 and Sunny Side Up (100322-1)/Dance Away the Night (100323-1) on Ve 2020.

Wilbur Alcott of Waltham, Mass., sends in some very interesting data. He adds one more Operaphone to our list, this one being Op 31121—Jerry/Cairo by the Royal Society Orchestra. Then Wilbur has a very unusual Olympic platter to which he calls our attention. One side of it has an Olympic label and the other has a Symphony Concert Record label! The Olympic side is Some One Else by Bennie Kruger and his Orchestra and the catalog number is 15109. The Symphony Concert Record side is Yankee by the Jones Novelty Dance Orchestra (very symphonic!) and the catalog number is 21166. Referring to our label of the month for August, this seems to be quite a different Olympic label. Instead of Fletcher Record Company, this one says Olympic Disc Record Corporation, New York. Also you will note that no Olympic in this number series appears on Arnold Stilwell's Record Dating Chart. This is apparently earlier than the others. The Symphony Concert Record label on the reverse is pasted over the Olympic one and gives $1.00 as the selling price for the disc. All in all, it looks as if Olympic can use a lot more research.

Mr. Alcott also has some tidbits on Grey Gull to impart. He has come across an Original Memphis Five side on the label under the name of the Bostonian Syncopators. It's GG 1138—Bee's Knees and this is the same master as appears on Regal 1220. Another tie-in with Regal appears in Dumbell (1239) which is on Re 9413 as by the Six Black Diamonds and also on GG 1138 as by the Melody Dance Players.

Besides furnishing us information Wilbur has some questions he'd like answers to. He'd like to know if Harlem's Araby (2017 B3) which he has on Radiex 1283 as played by the Metropolitan Dance Players is in reality the In Harlem's Araby by the Memphis Jazzers which is listed in the Index to Jazz. Wilbur states that Grey Gull had a Jewel label around 1922 which had the same label design as Naasco. He wonders if anyone has seen this label. As a final question Wilbur would like to know who the Musical Comrades were. He has their Wop Blues (777 C3) on Muse 416 and would like to know who made up the group and if there are any other representative recordings by them. He deduces from listening that the group is made up of trumpet, clarinet, sax, piano, and banjo.

Tidbits: Joe Madison of San Francisco thinks he has turned up an excellent King Oliver trumpet solo and has the support of many collectors for whom he's played the disc. It is by Tom Griselle and his Orchestra on Ge 3081 and the title is Stop, You're Ticklin' Me with a vocal by Chic Sawyer. Master is (9573) and Joe says it was probably recorded in September 1925. The reverse is Funny by the Blue Beaver Orchestra but has no Oliver.

Bob Greer of Schenectady submits a mystery item for the boys to mull over. It's Before the Rain (2098) by the Carolina Collegians on Banner 6319. Bob reports a fine trumpet chorus which he thinks may be McPartland.

The questions and data pile up but the space to run them and our time do not increase even minutely. So have patience and we will eventually get your data, questions, or what-have-you in the column. Meanwhile, keep sendin' 'em in to us at 74 South Road, Harrison, New York or c/o the Record Changer.

ED NICKEL . BILL MULL

The first record we want to discuss should be of interest to all of those collectors interested in Johnny Dodds. Johnny has shown up on another Blind Blake recording. The titles are C. C. Pill Blues (20520) and Good-bye Mama Moan on Paramount 12634. Johnny appears on the first side only, along with a frisco slide whistle and guitar. The entire record is vocal, but there is no mistaking his work in the background. After checking the master numbers on the other Blake records on which Dodds plays, we find that all three are in succession. They are as follows: C. C. Pill Blues (20520), Hot Potatoes (20521) and South Bound Rag (20522). It is quite possible that there are more sides that were made at this session and if anyone should be of interest to all of those colthat were made at this session and if anyone happens to have any further information we would like to hear from them.

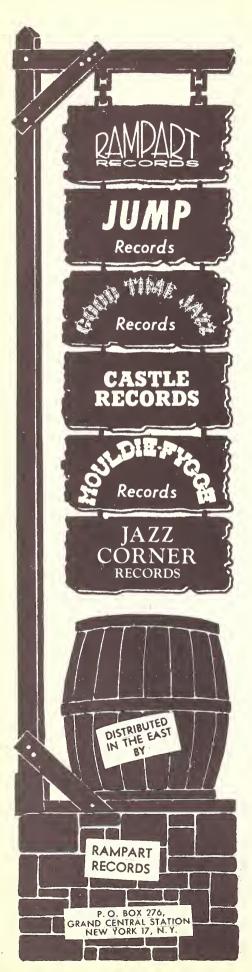

While on the subject of Blind Blake we have another record by him about which we would appreciate some information. The we would appreciate some information. The titles are Sweet Papa Lovdown (2088) and Search Warrant Blues (2087) on Paramount 12737. On the first side the "Guitar Accomp." turns out to be guitar, cornet, xylophone, and piano. The xylophonist is more than likely Jimmy Bertrand and the search may sow the search than search as likely Jimmy Bertrand and the cornet man sounds a little like Baby Jay, but I wouldn't want to bet on it. The piano man is too far in the background to be distinguishable. We have several other unlisted Blakes, but they all are with guitar accompaniment. If you ever happen to run into any Blakes while hunting it would be accompaniment of the property wise to pick them up as they may bring you a very pleasant surprise even though they do read "Guitar Accomp."

Now for a little something on Skiffle and what we believe to be another Roy Palmer side. The record is by the State Street Ramblers on Champion 16350 and the titles are Richmond Stomp and ! Want to Be Your Lovin Man. We believe Richmond Stomp to be the same as Champion 40009 as it is credited to Melrose, but the reverse is an entirely different matter. The instrumentation consists of trombone, clarinet, kazoo, piano, banjo, and washboard. It is no doubt Palmer with his usual rough barrefluence style, but as for the rest of the personnel we are uncertain. Unfortunately, neither side shows any kind of master number so it is hard to tell what session the Lovin' Man side is from. We would like to hear from anyone having this record along with his opinion of it.

A record that is quite good and a little different is I Wish I Had Died in Egyptland Pt. I and II on Paramount 12829. It is a religious record by Jessie Johnson and his Singers, but in the background of the singing are some very interesting fill-ins by cornet and trombone. It makes for quite an interesting item.

Auld, Ray Coniff, and Joe Bushkin. After his recovery Bunny again joined Tommy Dorsey, only to leave after four months to form the band that was to be his last. This form the band that was to be his last. This one was never very successful. There was dissension within the band, and many personnel changes, until the band was barely hanging together. They played at Coney Island, and the jitterbug heaven at the New York World's Fair, and in the summer of 1942 went on the road until Bunny's death abruntly halted the tour.

abruptly halted the tour.

Despite all this activity in the short space of twelve years, the admirer of Bunny Berigan is left only with his many records (most of which feature very little of his fine trumpet), and the moving picture, "Syncopation," which contains some of Bunny's very finest horn playing, although the plot, needless to say, was one of those terrible things that Hollywood usually falls back on when they turn to jazz, and Bunny was dubbed onto the sound track for the playing of an actor loosely patterned after King Oliver (and if there ever were two trumpet players more unlike than Berigan and Oliver, it's hard to imagine who they could be).

That's about all there is to be said about this musician who, most unfortunately, seems well on the way to being forgotten, his kind of music lost in the current battle between Dixie and bop. Perhaps if his better recordings were available this wouldn't be the case, but the collectors who have Bunny's records aren't selling, and Victor has seen fit to reissue only his lesser works. Perhaps also, if more of his work was played on the air he wouldn't be thought of only as the guy who made

I Can't Get Started.

Sometime, if you get the chance, listen to some of his great ones, sides like Let Yourself Go, Let's Do It, Wearin' of the Green, and Sophisticated Swing; then you've heard Bunny at his best, and then maybe you'll recall that wonderful solo on Marie and start wondering why you don't hear much of Bunny Berigan's music any more.

short a time. That band at Minton's made an era of its own, much as Jimmy Noone's did at the Apex Club.

I'll finish by saying that in listening to Monk, the same advice applies as is given to fans of traditional jazz, on hearing bop for the first time: forget what you know, don't compare-listen. Monk is likely to be as jarring a departure from Dizzy Gillespie as Dizzy is from Louis, and yet he may hit you right away. An open ear is a wonderful thing.

The Jazz Student

stantly before the student is the one which will hold the advantage. Regardless of one's loyalties, a constant barrage of knowledge in a basically allied, yet different field in which one is interested, will serve to turn the mind at least somewhat into new channels.

In the second place, closely allied with the above, is the fact that the mind is almost always stimulated by a fresh vista, a new and exciting field suddenly brought sharply into focus. The opportunities for study in "classical" music are almost unlimited, and to a mind which is interested in music regardless of its subdivisions, such free rein constitutes a tremendous challenge. Further, in the case of the young jazz musician, little theory, counterpoint, music history and the like have ordinarily been encountered, and thus what may be a first chance to understand music thoroughly is offered to the student who has formerly been playing "from the heart" and educating himself at the same jime.

Finally, it need hardly be mentioned that the average legitimate music school has little, if any interest in jazz, and often is violently opposed to it in any form, although these barriers are slowly being lifted. Thus, the influence of the music school on the jazz musician who has heretofore had little "straight" musical training is a powerful one, and, combined with other factors, may well cause him to turn his back in jazz.

This is not to say, of course, that the jazz musician should not have legitimate musical training; rather, it is but to point out that the ordinary music school has considerable effect on the new student who has formerly been a jazz musician. In many cases, of course, the student in the legitimate school continues to play jazz regularly, either simply for "kicks" or as a means of working his way through school, and this, as a matter of fact, is the case of both the men I have taken as examples here. Yet both are now espousing the pro-"classical" cause, if not actually that of anti-jazz.

The fourth, and by far the most important discernible reason for the decline of interest in jazz as evidenced by our two "examples" is the pure and simple fact that there is as yet no path to follow in jazz. By this I do not mean economic or prestige considerations, but rather, those of the mind. Where can the young and serious student of music in general and jazz in particular turn, once he has mastered the initial idiom? What avenues of study are open to him? What impartial and scholarly texts may he read? To what teachers may he go for guidance and direction in his study and research? The student of harmony may turn to any one of many schools or take correspondence courses in jazz harmony; the student of composition may study the Schillinger System, etc., but what of him who wishes to delve farther into less specialized branches of jazz, work into its anthropological or sociological backgrounds, or trace the various musics which combined to form the musical idiom called jazz?

It is recognized, of course, that I speak here of the student who wishes to pursue a study of jazz along thoroughly academic lines. There are, of course, isolated colleges and universities at which such studies may be made, but these are certainly not common; furthermore, even in such cases the student is forced into a series of problems which smack singularly of the proverbial chicken-and-the-egg. Although there exist some 120 books and lengthy pamphlets written on jazz in at least eight languages-English, Dutch, German, Italian, French, Danish, Swedish and Spanish—not a single one has yet proved to be a clear, concise and searching, yet unbiased exposition of jazz as a genre. Cultism, misinformation and anecdotage run rampant, and the two sides of the above question become obvious -can the student learn and be secure in his learning when he must go to separate books for separate bits of accurate information, or conversely, must be learn and form his own opinions before he reads the literature?

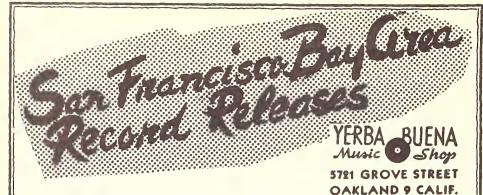

The point, then, is that the young musician who wishes to make a thorough study of jazz music, or who would make such a study were the opportunity available, is most often thwarted and turned into other musical channels. For after all, after he has mastered the musical idiom to his own satisfaction as a performing musician, after he has studied available phonograph recordings, after he has read the few jazz books usually to be found in local or even university libraries, to what source can he turn for an expansion of that knowledge? Only to himself, and the time for such independent work is not ordinarily available to the college student, nor is his inclination likely to turn in that direction when he is busy solving problems in another field of study.

What, then, is the solution to this pressing problem facing the serious student? It seems apparent that the answer lies in conquering the fourth problem presented here, for if the student is provided with adequate means for advanced study in the field of jazz, the first three questions will automatically be eliminated. Thus, the need is for an educational institution which is equipped and anxious to further the serious study of the jazz idiom as a recognized part of its curriculum. To this end, Professor Marshall W. Stearns of Cornell University is at present in the process of organizing just such a curriculum to be incorporated in an Institute of Modern American Music which, it is hoped, will serve the requirements of the serious student, and at the same time present informative courses for those persons who are merely interested in working with jazz for a short time in order to become better acquainted with it. Until such an institution is actually in existence, jazz can look forward to losing with monotonous regularity the very individuals, like my two friends, who are intellectually able to contribute to it, and to the public, serious and informative studies which could do much to clarify its position in the field of music as a whole, competent sound. When I say technical ability I don't mean the technique gained through the repeated playing of exercises written for the instrument. These exercises are important in beginning and are useful in "warming up" later, but an individual technique must be developed. A musician can copy another's style up to a certain point, then will find he cannot surpass the originator because that style was suited only to the mental, technical and physical abilities of its inventor.

Turk's favorite trombone players are Roy Palmer and Kid Orv. He is very fond of Palmer's humor as well as his rough and vigorous style. In addition to the trombone, Turk enjoys playing washboard, and beat one with the Watters band as background for the piano rags they featured. He has a favorite washboard player whose name he doesn't know, but whom he admires enormously. He almost gave up the instrument in an agony of frustration after hearing the unknown master's performance on Tiny Parham's Washboard Wiggles (Bluebird). "That's the end," he says. "It may be Jimmy Bertrand, but I don't know and would like to find out."

As a non-professional, Turk also admits to doing a little jug-blowing on the side. Some of the musicians and collectors (who get along remarkably well in the friendly San Francisco climate) like to get together for a session of banjos, washboards and jugs. "It's a change, anyway," Turk explains. The first objects one sees upon entering the Murphy living room are three assorted jugs sitting by the fireplace. After that you see a small piano which he uses in composing and writing arrangements. Then a cabinet full of records. He won't name ten favorite records, but with slight urging could "probably name a hundred and fifty. There are too many things I like on too many records."

Believing you can tell a musician's tastes by the musical company he would like to keep, Turk was persuaded to pick a band, either living or dead, with which he felt he'd have been content to play. There are very few surprises in his list: "Armstrong, Johnny Dodds, Morton, St. Cyr, Jimmy Bertrand (drum and washboard), John Lindsay (bass)." Then he thought twice, sighed, and said, "When I look at it, it's too fast company for me."

Like many another West Coast jazz musician, Turk is very much concerned with playing for people. Too often the presentday jazz musician thinks only in terms of the music and not about the reason why the music exists. Jazz, especially, is music for the people, and it has survived only because people enjoy it, enjoy listening to it, and enjoy dancing to it. The collector who attempts to restrict jazz to the recorded performances of it is doing both himself and jazz a disservice. Turk has some pretty definite ideas about that:

The goodwill of the paying public is constantly being built up and torn down by jazz musicians. In many cases the worst enemies of "Dixieland," "ragtime," "jazz," or whatever it is, are the musicians who play it and try to make a living at it. Some think that notorious living will bring them fame, and in some cases this is true, but fame or infamy in regard to their private and public lives is not nearly as lasting as the fame connected directly with musical ability.

Some musicians are under the impression that if they maintain the attitude of a bunch of undertakers while on the stand and remain aloof from the people they are playing for they will be looked upon as truly great artists. When you find a band of this type playing you will find that the customers also look like undertakers, and when people start wondering if they're having a good time comes the floor shows and singers of love-sick ballads.

A band that enjoys playing has quite an edge over one that doesn't. When a band plays and has a good time the people in the audience tend to count themselves as part of it. Two bands that enjoy playing for people are Kid Ory's band and the Firehouse Five Plus Two, both of which are currently playing in Los Angeles. Recently I went with the Firehouse Five on a jaunt through Nevada where they played for a celebration of the Horseless Carriage Club of Northern California. I watched them make enough good will in a country not familiar with this type of music to offset performances of indecisive jazz bands for the next five years. By indecisive jazz bands I mean bands that either don't know what kind of music they want to play, or spend time apologizing for what they call "Dixieland" music.

What the future holds for Turk Murphy in music is uncertain. As the winter of 1949-50 approaches, he is still in his early thirties, the possessor of a thorough musical background, a tremendous technique, and all the equipment for a great career. He is ready and waiting. Meanwhile he remains unshaken in his musical faith:

New Orleans jazz has the best future of any jazz music. Small band jazz of this type if played sensibly will always pay its own way. If you watch the reaction from a responsive crowd to a jazz tune well played by a good band it make you sure of that. In any case, I will play it as long as I can play.

Johnny Wiggs and His New Orleans Music

Ultra Canal Two Wing Temple in the Sky Bourbon Street Bounce

Congo Square

A good white New Orleans band is heard on these sides, but not, one suspects, to its best advantage. There's a little too much arrangement (or pre-arrangement) to let the boys really settle into a free and comfortable groove, but that's understandable because none of the tunes are traditional evergreens that everybody knows to begin with. Secondly, the recording job varies from good to unbalanced. This is a common fault of small independent studios, and usually shows up with dead-thumping rhythm (particularly when the piano sticks to chords) and over-balanced piano fills cloudying up the ensemble playing of the band.

The only familiar name in the line-up is Santo Pecora, who at one time was right alongside George Brunies among the New Orleans tailgate kings. He always had a Orléans tailgate kings. He always had a more legitimate tone, solider and more compact than George's rambuctious, broader way of blowing. Pecora did an extraordinary job on some of the old Sharkey Bonano Vocalions, particularly on I'm Satisfied With My Gal, which was a great definition of fine trombone playing all the way through He's under wraps on this way through. He's under wraps on this date, comparatively speaking, but then he didn't have as fine a caliber of musicians working with him, and he was 15 years younger, too.

The boys in the band are good enough, although the history books won't have to be re-written as a result of these sides. Wiggs is a trumpet player with a Doc Evans sort of style; his tone, I would guess from many hearings of records of this type, suffers in recording and is probably much better than it sounds here. Armand Hug plays a good piano, although he should stick more to the Bob Zurke type of two-fisted work. The recording set-up gives him a bad deal in spots—he's much too loud in the last chorus of Two Wing Temple, which spoils things generally, and behind Lester Bouchon's solo work he sounds as though he's thumping on a corpse. It's not his fault.

Two Wing Temple and Congo Square are rather on the pretentious side and the trimmings interfere with the enjoyment to be derived from these Wiggs originals. The former, dedicated to the Bixian character, Snoozer Quinn, gets a rhapsodic, sentimental floor-show treatment for the first part, a fact that isn't likely to please many of the Changer clientele unless Bill Grauer's circulation list has altered considerably since I was k.h. to a g.h.* Congo Square is an odd mixture—overtones of Gutbucket Blues change into Bubber Miley with a Yancey Special background, but starting with Hug's piano solo things settle into a proper groove and the band is really going by the time the side ends.

Bourbon Street Bounce is a fair little tune which starts out like Down Home Rag, which disturbs Pecora and Hug enough so that they stick to the riff in starting off the two choruses of solo work on this side. It's an old Pecora habit, if you recall the odd way in which he tipped off Land of Dreams by blandly playing Basin Street Blues for his solo. Ultra Canal, subtitled A Jazz March, is not the best of its kind, but provides the boys with a chance to go whenever the changes in the melody don't pull them up short. (New Orleans 751, 752) (G.A.)

*Knee high to a grasshopper, of course.

Kay Starr

Break It To Me Gently
Ya Gotta Buy, Buy, Buy for Baby
Wabash Cannonball
How It Lies
Second-Hand Love
You Broke Your Promise

Kay Starr, who has been getting a build-up for some time as a "jazz" singer, leans more and more toward Beatrice Kay's kind of Gay Nineties vocalizing. This is fine as far as it goes, but it should either go all the way or not at all. In any case, there's not much jazz.

Buy Buy is a clever novelty number in which Miss Starr tries some unusual vocal phrasing based on trumpet techniques and gets it across, too, which is all to her credit. Kay's at her best in Wabash Cannonball, in which the old hillbilly classic is presented with a four-four mountain beat and extra bars added. The tune, basically, is a fine one and always worth a whirl.

The torchy side of La Starr is heard on How It Lies, a current pace-setter on the hit parade, and Second-Hand Love. You Broke Your Promise is on the country kick again, and you even get a touch of patter resembling the chanting of a soloist in an old-time Negro quartet.

Red McKenzie would have loved Kay Starr's heavy leanings on her phrase ends; she loves to slur her final notes as much as a third flat. Beatrice Kay must be kind of jealous these days, though. (Capitol 57-717, 15419, 15380) (G.A.)

Mahalia Jackson

Let the Power of the Holy Ghost Fall On Me

I Can Put My Faith in Jesus

I'm always glad to see another Mahalia Jackson come off the stampers because as readers of this magazine no doubt know she's my gal. Both of these sides are good and Apollo has added a little something to the accompaniment about which I'm sort of on the fence for the moment. The usual plan has been to label it organ, but if you have a sharp ear you'll notice most of the time that there is a piano too, and now they have tacked on a guitar. On the topside, which is a pretty jumpy gospel song, this seems to add a little rocking to the festivities, but on the reverse, which is one of those slow, deeply felt numbers she does so well, it sounds a little like a mandolin. This bothered me the first couple of takes, but in the end I almost made up my mind I liked it, though I do wish it had a little more bite. But first, last and always, the voice is the thing that matters here and this gal is really something to listen to. If you've heeded my drum beating you've already heard it; if you haven't you ought to, and fast. If Leonard Feather ever slips a little arsenic in my toddy I'll go happy if I know Mahalia will sing me into the cold, cold ground. (Apollo 213) (B.M.)

Fletcher Henderson's Orchestra Off to Buffalo

Swamp Blues

I've never been much of a big band man myself, but if we've got to have them I wish more of them sounded like this. I realize, of course, that any band that had Joe Smith and Tommy Ladnier, not to mention Louis because he isn't on this one, plus Big Green, Don Redman and Coleman Hawkins, Kaiser Marshall and, of course, Smack himself, was bound to be a pretty fair outfit. In fact I guess all things considered this was probably as near to a dream band as you'll ever get, and I leave out Ellington because he is in a class by himself—even when I don't like it I must admit it's good. Anyway, for all Henderson fans this is a break because it's a rare one. For those who like, as I do, few big band arranged numbers, this is one of the better ones and we got to be catholic in our tastes, pal. In fact, I guess anyone ought to have this one, one of the better Paramount re-issues. (Paramount 14012) (B.M.)

Meade Lux Lewis

Boy in the Boat Freakish Blues

I suppose its worth sitting through some of the dirtiest lyrics ever put into the grooves of a record in order to get this example of very early Meade Lux, but strong as my tummy is I could have done with a lot more piano and much less George Hannah. I don't think I need to say more. I you want Lux bad enough you'll want this. If you want a dirty record you'll want it even more. But if you don't care either way, let vour conscience be your guide. (Paramount 14010) (B.M.)

were served up by Paul, and I only regret that I was there after the Bob Crosby band left the Blackhawk, because up to that time there was a free-for-all every Monday night in Paul's place as the New Orleans expatriates got together with their horns. Eddie Miller, Matty Matlock, Nappy Lamare, Irving Fazola, and Ray Bauduc led the parade to Paul's place, which naturally included local friends as well, such as Boyce Brown and Jimmy MacPartland. The sessions continued for a while after the Crosby crew went to New York, but the enthusiasm faded and the P & M soon confined its music to the juke box, which included several of Paul's records.

The war years found Paul drifting into war work and even closing up the restaurant for a while. Recently he went back to playing at jam sessions, and started organizing a dixieland-type band, but time ran out on him and the Mares story had to stay as is.

During his lifetime, Paul Mares got the credit for launching the NORK and setting a style that crossed the ODJB's with Negro jazz, but after this great pioneering organization broke up, people kind of forgot about him and he became just a name in a personnel. In the hurly-burly of the music business, this sort of thing happens all the time. It's tough, but that's the way it is. It was no different with Paul Mares, except that with an older generation of collectors and fans, his name and records aren't going to be forgotten.

In the "For Disposition" section the condition of the record is indicated by these abbreviations:

N (New): Surface noise equal to an unplayed record; no visible or audible wear perceptible; original finish intact.

E (Excellent): Surface noise low, smooth, uniform. Not irregular or crackling, Easily disregarded in listening. No perceptible distortion

V (Very Good): Surface noise somewhat more prominent; light foreign noises, but slight distortion, if any; noises not seriously distracting slight distortion, if any: noises not seriously distracting.

((Good): A moderate amount of surface noise; background may be somewhat irregular and crackling; some foreign noises, and a little distortion: on the whole, reasonably satisfactory listening without undue distraction of attention. Foreign noises definitely less prominent than the music. F. (Fair): Foreign noises, taken together, are about as prominent as the music, and there is considerable distraction of attention, and listening requires some effort and concentration; nevertheless, under these conditions, listening should be fairly satisfactory. P (Poor): Foreign noises, collectively, are louder than the recorded music; continuous concentration is required, and there is little satisfaction in listening.

Column 4 of the "For Disposition" section shows the method by which each record is to be disposed.

"SAL": The record is for sale at the price indicated

"AUC": The record is at auction. The highest bid takes the record. Bid only what the record is worth to you.

"TRA": The record is for trade only. If you are not familiar with the wants of the advertiser send for his want list. If you have certain records in which he may be interested, mention these in your letter.

The extreme right column in both the "Wanted" and "For Disposition" sections shows the first four letters of the advertiser's name. His address is shown below.

It could only happen in Hollywood.

It could only happen in Hollywood. For the second year the best (Jazz) bands in Southern California, plus some out-of-town talent, gathered together for the world's biggest bash, and like some of Hollywood's film extravaganzas, it did not completely live up to its advance publicity. As in last year's jubilee there was a complete disregard for the endurance of the audience, and the program dragged on, long after the majority had their fill. Although each group was limited to three tunes, the time limit on each varied, so that some of the groups made a practice of playing the first chorus ensemble, and then each instrumentalist taking five or six choruses.

Much has been said in local papers about the sellout attendance, the terrific audience response, and the wonderful Dixieland music, but it is only fair to report that the whole evening was actually a let-down and real kicks were noticeably few.

Starting out the program with the Castle Band from Portland was a stroke of genius. The band had an enthusiasm that was transmitted to the audience and no other group during the entire evening seemed to have the power to once again bring that audience enthusiasm back to the same level.

The Chicago Loopers proved three things: that Andy Becrest still plays wonderful cornet, that George Van Epps is one of the greatest guitarists in the world, and that talent alone will not make a good Dixieland band.

Kid Ory and his band was one of the biggest disappointments of the evening. Not to the average listener, since he probably picked up twice as many fans as he lost, and the newspapers loved him; but the dichards, the ivory tower guys who collect New Orleans jazz and used to hang out at the Jade when Papa Mutt was with the Kid, had a big letdown.

It all started when Ory and the band played Savoy Blues with Lloyd Glenn pounding out a boogie beat. Then on the next number Ted Buckner, to the delight of the majority, tried to see how high he could play, while the remainder of the band struggled through Maryland, My Maryland. Some local collectors who got together at intermission were overheard saying, "Those great Exner and Crescent records are all we have left."

The Firehouse Five plus two and engine.

Muggsy Spanier leading the all stars.

The Castle Jazz Band.

1949

JUBILEE

The largest collection of Dixie fans in captivity.

Pete Daily's Chicagoans were just as they were billed, Chicagoans. They played good, happy, Chicago jazz. Their program was well planned and not overdone. The band still misses Rosy McHargue on clarinet, but the group as a whole was refreshing and did Capitol proud.

The Firehouse Five Plus Two received one of the biggest hands of the evening and whether it was for their musical performance or their fire suits and siren not even the crowd was sure. Although this band does not play great jazz, the boys know it and play with a wild abandon that was equalled only by the Castle group. Danny Alguire, on cornet, gives the band an added punch that was missing when Johnny Lucas was with them, but Johnny is one of the greatest New Orleans tradition trumpet players in the country and Blues numbers don't sound the same without him.

Red Nichols' Pennies were reminiscent of the New Orleans Lucky Seven with Red sounding more like Bix than ever, while Joe Rushton took Adrian Rollini's place as king of the bass sax. Rollie Culver continues to be one of the best local Dixie drummers.

The Bob Cats suffered from lack of ensemble playing. They weren't playing Dixie, they had a jam session. It was a shame, since potentially it was a great band. With each musician taking a solo of five or six choruses, they soon lost their audience.

The Spanier-Freeman group flopped flat on their faces. In all fairness it must be said that there was no time for a planned program since Freeman was late and arrived only seconds before he went on. The majority of the audience never had heard Muggsy in person and only knew him through the powerful Bluebird sides thus expecting much more than they received. It was the first time I ever heard a band that was afraid to end a number. They lost the audience, knew it, and kept trying to revive them. Albert Nicholas looked and played as if he wondered how in hell he got caught in this mess. Brad Gowans just doodled, while Zutty thought he could solve all their problems by playing louder.

The world's biggest band and the grand finale was the surprise of the evening. Matty Matlock did a great job in arranging the numbers for some forty musicians without losing the Dixieland ensemble sound. Matty wrote the traditional High Society clarinet chorus in the South Rampart arrangement and it was astounding to hear eight clarinets take that difficult chorus.

The lessons that were learned at this jubilee were: limit the time on each number; discontinue bringing out so-called all star groups and limit the participants to organized bands.

Since once again it was a sellout, we can look forward to the third annual Dixieland Jubilee, and this is good or bad according to where you are standing.

Zutty leads the parade.

One could almost call the loudspeaker the most important step in the process of sound reproduction, for without an adequate speaker, the best of records, phono-pickups, and amplifiers will fail to give you excellent results. Besides being the weakest link, it is also the subject of more misunderstanding and faulty reasoning than any other part of the sound system.

The loudspeaker converts the impulse picked up by the phono-cartridge into the original sound. To do this properly it should be able to reproduce, without distortion or discrimination, all the sounds audible to the human ear (for practical purposes, from about 40 to 15,000 cycles per second). Efficiency is another important requirement, the practical limit of which seems to be in the neighborhood of 70% of the power put into the speaker (the average home radio speaker is rated at only 20% efficiency with a frequency range of around 70 to 7,000 cycles).

To produce these results, a horn-type speaker similar to those used for movie sound systems is the most desirable. It is more efficient, particularly at high frequencies, and is the only type of instrument which will effectively create the illusion of presence. The horn, however, possesses certain disadvantages which put it outside the home reproducing field. These are its size and expense, for a large horn is required to reproduce the full range of frequencies, and a smaller horn can be used only where the lower frequencies are relatively unimportant as in a public address system where only speech is to he reproduced.

The "dynamic" speaker, such as is used in

The "dynamic" speaker, such as is used in most home radio-phonographs, can be manufactured in such a way as to give reasonably good results, but its construction also has certain innate disadvantages that cannot he overcome within its limits. If the paper membrane of the speaker cone is sufficiently heavy to reproduce the piston-like vibrations of the lower frequencies without distortion, it will not he sensitive enough to respond to the minute vibrations of the high-frequency tones and overtones. The reverse is also true; if a membrane of sufficient sensitivity to reproduce the highs were used, it would be shattered if the lows were allowed to flow through it with enough force to be heard.

Therefore a compromise is sought, and in the best custom-built radio-phonographs it is customary to use a small, horn-type speaker (called the "tweeter") to reproduce the higher frequencies and a large, cone-type speaker (called the "woofer") for the lows and the bass.

The "woofer," in the best of these speakers, handles the frequencies up to and around 400 cycles, with the "tweeter" taking care of those above that point. In some cases, however, this crossover may be anywhere from 600 to 4,000 cycles. The latter is most often the case with the "co-axial" type of system, wherein the high-frequency speaker is mounted in the center of the low-frequency unit in order to conserve space.

Because the lower frequencies are radiated almost uniformly in all directions, and as the frequency increases, the sound tends to travel more and more in a straight line about the axis of the speaker diaphragm, the "tweeter" portion of the speaker is usually portion of the speaker is usually a cellular horn. This means that the interior of the horn is divided into several cells, each having the characteristics of a complete horn and each being aimed a little more away from center as the outer edges of the "tweeter" horn are reached. The purpose of this is to disperse the higher frequencies throughout a larger angle. If you will stand in front of the loudspeaker of your own radio or phonograph and move your head about until your ear is on the axis of the speaker, you will notice that as the axis is approached, the brilliancy of the sound will increase until the maximum is reached directly on the axis. This point will probably be a foot or two above the floor on the average console cabinet.

The "woofer" resembles very closely the regular radio loudspeaker, its most striking difference being its large size and massive construction. A cone diameter of 12-inches is minimum for this service with the 14 or 15-inch sizes being the most frequently used while some models use an 18-inch cone. The driving coil, which is attached to the small end of the cone and moves with it, is anywhere from two to four inches in diameter.

Since sound is the result of air set in motion in waves corresponding to the frequency of the sound, the "woofer" unit is of little value as a generator of low-frequency sounds just as it stands. Suppose that at a particular instant the cone of the speaker moves forward under the influence of some sound. As it does so, a slight pressure will be created in front of the cone while a vacuum of equal and opposite magnitude will be created at the rear of the cone. In the case of a bare speaker, the vacuum and pressure will neutralize each other almost instantly; the result is that no sound will have been created since no air, except that which moved around the edge of the cone, has been set in motion. It is necessary, therefore, to mount this speaker in a cabinet with a baffle (which is basically a large wooden panel with a hole cut in the center to accommodate the speaker) to pre-yent the pressures from "sneaking out the

The effect of the baffle may be determined by removing the loudspeaker from your console while your set is playing; as the speaker is removed, the sound becomes thin and completely lacking in bass. It can be noticed, also, that the speaker cone can actually be seen to move under the influence of the bass tones though no sound is produced.

In many cases the bass boom so prevalent in home reproducing equipment can be traced directly to faulty speaker installation. The most common cause of this is cabinet resonance; in this case, the air-space around the speaker vibrates at one particular frequency much in the manner of an organ pipe. This, in turn, may impart a sympathetic vibration to the walls of lightly constructed cabinets.

It is a popular fallacy that the cabinet acts as a "sounding board"; this should not be so. Sounding boards may be all right for pianos, but not for loudspeakers. The part of the cabinet enclosing the speaker ought to be as heavy and rigid as it is possible to make it, and the interior should be lined with a sound-absorbing material. Such materials as hair felt, acoustical Celotex, Kimsul, rock wool, glass wool, and other like insulating materials are all suitable for this purpose. This material should be applied to a thickness of at least one inch for best results. Another good principle is to avoid parallel surfaces

as told to

KAY C. THOMPSON

It was Louis Armstrong who really summed up our subject for today when he remarked in a recent conversation:

"Lips has been doing all right. He doesn't need me in the audience!"

As usual, Louis' statement was brief and to the point. Adding up Oran (Hot Lips) Page's achievements during the past year, certainly no one can say that they have lacked in diversity. To fall back on a wellworked phrase, they have run the gamut, from last Spring's Paris Jazz Festival to his current juke box sensation, "The Hucklebuck," in company with Pearl Bailey. According to the N. Y. Daily News, sales of the latter are now approaching the million

Of the two experiences the former must have been by far the more exhilarating, jazzmusically speaking. There seems to be no question that Lips' special brand of horn made an indelible impression on friends of jazz overseas. And that wasn't the only feature that caught their fancy. The high point was reached when he got up and rendered "St. James Infirmary" in French. That, mes amis, brought down the house!

Subsequently, "Le Jazz Hot," the noted French journal, went into raptures, reporting on his career at length and extolling the authenticity of his blues manner. While L. P. would be the first to acknowledge the influence of Blues conceptions on his highly personalized style of playing and singing, my own notion is that it would have been more flattering to him had he been less dis-tinctly labelled. From what I know of him, and I think I know him rather well, it would have been more pertinent to say that he plays in the right tradition; i. e. that of sound musicianship. The truth is, his musical background has been extensive, more richly so, perhaps, than many jazz fans may realize. After all, he has been playing jazz for more than 30 years.

"I was born and raised," Lips said, "in Dallas, Texas. When I was a boy, my mother wanted me to be a doctor, and I went to college with that idea in mind, but I never finished. I was much more interested in music. I had always liked music. My mother gave me my first lessons. She had been a school teacher, teaching general subjects, but she also taught music on the side, taking private pupils at home.

"My father died in 1916, when I was still in short pants. He had been in the moving business. After his death, to help out at home, I took to running errands and doing odd jobs around the neighborhood. I began to take music seriously when I discovered I could make more money blowing a trumpet than shining shoes. Originally, I wanted to play clarinet, but changed to trumpet because it stuck out in a brass band like a sore thumb. My first regular chance to play came when I joined what we used to call a kids' band. They were run by a man named Lux Alexander. Lux played in one of the big city bands. He was a bass drummer. However, he could play all the different instruments, and he used to form kids' bands to play for weddings, parties, picnics, parades, fire sales, and lodge meetings. Sometimes he used as many as 35 or 40 kids in a band.

"By the time I was 15, I was too old for kids' bands. That was the age limit, so the next summer I began to play for carnivals and minstrel shows touring through that section of the country. In those days, before big bands really came into their own, colored shows were very popular everywhere, and an organization named T.O.B.A. used to book shows all over the South. One summer, we went as far East as Atlanta, Georgia, where we played a theatre date with Bessie Smith. At that time, Atlanta was considered quite a center. It was the town everyone wanted to play. Another time, we were booked for tent shows with Ma Rainey. She took an interest in my playing, and did what she could to encourage me, with the result that I got a chance to play with her when she worked at the Lincoln Theatre in New York City.

'Of the men who influenced me on trumpet, Louis Armstrong was the most important. I could sit today and listen to his 'Hot Fives' all night. The first time I ever heard Louis was with King Oliver. I had heard of the Oliver band, and once I went all the way to Chicago just to hear them play. Up until then, I thought I had heard (Continued on Page 18)

In the August column we discussed the Perry's Hot Dogs sides on Regal-Banner-Domino and affiliates and ran Dick Holbrook's excellent résumé of the situation. Dick has since written to Perry Bradford about these records and here's what he had to say. Perry definitely claims the Perry's Hot Dogs items as one of his recording groups and adds the information that they also recorded Show Me the Way to Go Home on the Okeh label. Perry states that the personnel included Gus Aiken(tp), Tom Aiken(tb), Ronald Smith(sax & cl), Dan Wilson(p), and Johnny Mitchell(bj). He also states that Fletcher Henderson recorded with one of his bands for Domino. So the controversy comes to a head with Perry's claim of the band as his. Is there any further

A bit more on the sides by the 11ot Dogs: Leonard Chiacchia has a copy of Steppin' Fool (6284) as by the Six Black Diamonds on Ba 1657 which is an addition to the list in the August column. Leonard also identifies Crazy Words/My Baby's Back, also listed in August, as by Perry's Entertainers, a white group that recorded a good year after the 11ot Dogs (around 1927 instead of late 1925 or early 1926). So delete this from the 11ot Dogs compilation. George Moss, Jr. of Sea Bright, N. L., adds the following to our listing: If You Hadn't Gone Away (6233-1P)/Feelin' Kind of Blue (6234-2P) by Mae French acc, by Perry's Hot Dogs on Ba 1632.

Bill Rogers of San Francisco sends us some comments and data regarding items mentioned in the June column. He gives further data on the Clarence Harris mention of recording with Lucille Hegamin for Arto. Specifically, Arto 9045 by Lucille Hegamin acc. by Harris' Blues and Jazz Seven. Title on the one side is The Jazz Me Blues (6) with the reverse billed as Albury's Blues and Jazz Seven with choruses sung by Lucille Hegamin. Title here is Everybody's Blues (1). While on Hegamin, Bill indicates a tie-up between Arto and Hytone. He notes that Arto 9105 is listed in the Index for the same coupling as he has on Hytone K105—Mississippi Blues (12)/Wabash Blues (11).

According to the labels Arto is made by Arto Co., Orange, N. J. Hytone says Indestructible Phonograph Record Co., but with no location mentioned.

Bill also gives us a tip on another side from the New Orleans Pepsters date on Van Dyke and associated labels. He has Radiex 945 as by the Levee Syncopaters doing Harlem Stompdown (3844). Composer credits again include Austin as well as the master being the next higher to that for The Rackett. Reverse on Bill's Radiex is Desert Blues (3931) by Marvin Smolev and his Syncopaters, if you're interested.

Rogers refers to our mention of Bennett's Swamplanders and comments that, in his opinion, Big Ben on Co 14557 is the same tune played by the same personnel (particularly the trumpet, trombone, and clarinet) as Memphis Stomp (3607A) by the Five Hot Chocolates on Van Dyke 71786 and Alabama Shuffle (3606) by the New Orleans Stompers on Vinylite Jazz Reissue. This latter is from Van Dyke 71775 and Grey Gull 1775 and was also reissued on Paradox 4. Both apparently were issued on Grey Gull under the name the Moonlight Revelers and on Van Dyke as the Five Hot Chocolates. To further substantiate this theory Bill ob-as composer for both Big Ben and Memphis Stomp as well as Alabama Shuffle. Bill doesn't agree with the reissuers who list Joe Oliver on horn in the group, but does think that the man who does play it is good, and suspects that it might be Junie Cobb.

As a final item, Bill wonders if anyone has yet mentioned the possibility that Fred-serves that "Johnson" is listed on the label

As a final item, Bill wonders if anyone has yet mentioned the possibility that Freddie Keppard is one of the cornet men in the Al Turk Orchestra. He has the latter's Ok 40653, Snag It (9733A)/Hi Henry Stomp (9734A), which was recorded in Chicago with a line-up including 2 cornets, trombone, clarinet-alto, tenor, baritone, piano, tuba, banjo, and drums. Bill comments that it certainly sounds like Keppard to him and notes that it was recorded at nearly the same time as Ok 40675 (9771) by Cookie's Gingersnaps.

Label of the month: This month's item is the Publix label put out for Paramount Pictures by Columbia using Columbia masters and that wonderful laminated surface found on all their labels at the time. The particular issue pictured is Piccolo Pete (149405-2) coupled with Turn On the Heat (149478-2) on Publix 1068-P as performed, according to the label, by The Paramounteers. The label is black with gold letters just like the Columbia one at this period (1929). We don't know how much jazz appears on Publix but any of Columbia's large supply of masters may have been used under many different pseudonyms. Arnold Stilwell's Record Dating Chart doesn't mention the label at all and we don't know when it first appeared, or when it was dropped. Can anyone furnish any data on this?

one furnish any data on this?

Odds and ends: Will Roy Hearne of Los Angeles supplies the title for the reverse of Tim Brynm's Wang Wang Blues on Ok 4310 mentioned in the July column. The title is Siren of the Southern Sea (S-7815-B). Joe Madison reveals another M. Lo Scalzo Instrumental Quartet on Pa 36036. This one is called Medley of Irish Favorites and using our "key" number between Pathe and Perfect (in effect at this period), 21819, we can determine the Perfect issue as 14217. Mr. Madison wants to know It's always good news to note a little action among the big companies on the re-issue front and I hope this may be a turning point, but just between me and you I wouldn't bet any money on it. First off, this isn't the old N.O.R.K. but the gang that made some pretty good sides in 1934 for Decca with Wingy, Brunies and Sidney Arodin. Of the eight sides recorded that September, six are represented here. Don't ask me why the odd side, Jazz It Blues and Panama, was left out of the package.

I've always been a little partial to these records and as I played them over I got to thinking about how little jazz there is around these parts at the moment that comes anywhere near them. They certainly aren't the best, but along with Muggsy's Ragtimers they are pretty damned solid fare of a kind that seems to have left for parts unknown. Wingy hadn't yet discovered the Isle of Capri and Brunies wasn't playing the trombone with his tummy. Fact is, I could do with a little more

In any event here is your chance to latch on to some free swinging sides that you won't just file away on your shelves. There isn't a dud in the lot and now that Decca has set some kind of a record (Columbia and Victor can come right along without making me feel bad) I wish they would dig a little deeper next time. After all they do have the rights on the Gennett list and a good part of the Vocalion list, enough to make even my mouth water right there, not to mention a few Brunswicks scattered about.

I am not, God knows, unmindful of the troubles of the big three, and though my heart does not bleed for them, shall we say, I am willing to admit that sales to people like you and me are mere peanuts. But what I am not willing to admit is that any of them has really tried to turn goobers into a good thing. It might take a little effort but so far I can't see that even the effort has been thought worthwhile. To coin a trite phrase: little acorns grow up into big trees.

Maybe I should be grateful for even the little things, such as this album. I am and I hope they sell the hell out of it, but I'm not at all sure that if they don't they should shrug their shoulders and say: see, we told you so! But I guess I started out to review this album, didn't I? Well, I'll say it again. This is all right stuff and maybe if enough of us buy it and send the boys at Decca a card saying we like it and want more, we might get more. We might at that. In the meantime I hope you'll play these because they are worth listening to. (Brunswick Album BP-2) (B. M.)

Sidney Bechet and His Circle Seven Who September Song

I Got Rhythm Song of the Medina

Every now and then an album comes along that you don't quite know what to do with. It isn't New Orleans in style or feel, or even Dixieland for that matter, but after all it is Bechet. You can't blame the record company because they tell you that Pops chose the men himself, and even though the music was in a sense arranged (James Toliver, an old friend of Bechet's sat in at practice sessions and put it on paper) there is no doubt that this was the way Sidney wanted it. My own guess is that if you like Bechet enough you'll like these records, but if you can take him or leave him alone, you won't.

Looking at the names of these hand chosen men I find it a little hard to make much sense of the personnel. James P. is the only name that seems logical to me. I had thought at first that Wilbur de Paris had been on some of the New Orleans Feetwarmers sides, but a quick look through the discography fails to turn up his name. Albert Snaer, the album notes tell me, is an old New Orleans horn man seldom recorded. Walter Page for a number of years was in the rhythm section of Count Basie's band. And George Wettling is a veteran Chicago white drummer.

Of these four sides only one seems in any way special—Song of the Medina, a Bechet original. Two are show tunes and the third is strictly a pop. Since there is nothing different in the songs the only thing to do is to listen to the band. In other words if it isn't New Orleans or Dixieland, just what in the hell is it, bop? Rest easy, it isn't bop or anything close to it. Maybe Bechet just wanted to make some records, seems as good a guess as any.

I can listen to these records without gooping, though I am far from nuts about them. Maybe if I play them often enough, though I doubt it. What they seem to me to lack is something that Dick Holbrook and I were talking about the other night. I drove down to Dick's to play some records and he put on some of the really fine stuff (don't drool, kiddies) on the machine—Bayersdorffer, for example. As the music came out he mentioned that it always seemed as though they were holding something back; there was a feeling of latent power there that you always felt and it kept you on the edge of your seat. Maybe it was only, as he suggested, that if they had let go it would have jumped the needle on the old acoustical recording. But it gave an excitement to jazz, at least for me, that these Bechet records lack. It might be as easy as that, I don't know for sure.

In any event here's some Bechet for all you Bechet lovers, and possibly the last you'll have for a while. As you may know Pops recently walked out of jazz, Ltd. in Chicago, dumped his effects in his Cadillac car and drove it aboard a ship bound for France: Chances are he won't ever come back. Damp Weather Blues Tip Easy Blues

These four sides, recorded in New Orleans in 1929, have long been special favorites of mine. In spite of the fact that there are two saxes among the personnel the whole feel here is authentic New Orleans from start to finish, so much so that you catch it almost before the records start—which sounds a little silly if you want to be downright logical but if you play them I think you will know what I mean. The story goes that Collins had come back from Chicago in 1925 and was really standing the old Crescent City on its ear and these records prove it. They also prove that the Lee Collins so many people have been holding their nose about recently was once a hell of a trumpet player and (Continued on Page 15)

Here is the label which a multitude of record collectors has been awaiting these many years since the existence of the item it documents first became known. You will observe that the catalog number is 87499. 87001 likewise is the original number of a Caruso record, "Di quella pira" from Il Trovatore. It is fitting that the artist who began the 87000 series should close it. (The 87500 numbers are concerted selections.)

The story of how the world's first tenor came to sing a basso aria is generally well-known, as is the fact that he recorded the song involved—and that having presented copies to a small group of associates and intimates, he ordered the master destroyed.

But now there is a new master reposing in the RCA-Victor vaults at Camden, and a few details concerning how this came about are in order.

Mr. Wally Butterworth is an exceedingly tenacious idealist whose enterprise is altogether dauntless. While others are lackadaisically voicing their wishes and aspirations, Mr. B is determinedly acting to track down whatever it is he wants, and his failures are few. In the case of the Caruso "Vecchia zimarra" he interviewed surviving members of the Boheme cast who were the great tenor's associates on that blizzard-fraught night in Philadelphia when he rescued the performance by his basso tour-deforce. Mme. Alda's copy had been broken, de Segurola's unaccountably misplaced. No trace of the copy once owned by the late Antonio Scotti.

In California there lives Dr. Mario Marafioti, one-time physician at the Metropolitan Opera House. A Butterworth operative had learned that the doctor was among those to whom copies had been given. Would he allow it to be re-recorded and made available to as many of Caruso's admirers as might wish to adore it? He would, and he did.

And so, Caruso's "Vecchia zimarra" came back home to Camden for re-processing. A few comparatively minor marks of Time's unforgiving tooth were removed with absolute success and what you may hear today is perhaps even more revealing than the long-lost original. Pressed on vinyl, this disc's interest is further enhanced by Frances Alda's narration on the reverse side. The item is not obtainable from RCA-l'ictor nor through retail channels, the exclusive distribution rights having been assigned to Wally Butterworth.

This is the first of a projected series of historically important and interesting records to be issued from time to time in connection with Mr. Butterworth's "Voices That Live" radio program. Among other things played privately for your correspondent, there are three Gigli-Ruffo duets (unpublished, of course) from Boheme, Gioconda and Forsa del Destino. If the matter of re-processing can be accomplished satisfactorily, you will one day hear the "Parle-moi de ma mere" duet from Carmen as projected by Caruso and Alda.

Rummaging through the vaults in quest of other treasures, Mr. Butterworth found a file-card containing the information that the American tenor, Riccardo Martin, was represented by an unpublished rendition of My Old Kentucky Home. How nice! But the copy struck from that master proved to be a choral group tackling the ancient English madrigal, To Shorten Winter's Sadness. Shorten, indeed!

In December Victor will release an album called "Memories of Caruso." The set will consist of six operatic excerpts which are nominally active catalog items and all are

"re-vitalized" with electrically superimposed orchestral accompaniments. All the arias included in the album are worth having, but it might be mentioned that the most entrancing of the items chosen for re-vamping is not included. That is "Prete-toi mon aide" from Gounod's opera, Queen of Sheba (88552/6035 and presently 15732) which reveals lyric splendors that were not always Caruso's to command as late as February 10, 1916, on which date the Queen of Sheba air was recorded. And to think that on that same day he sent forth Colline's Coat Song!

Mrs. John McCormack's memoir of her life with Count John, entitled I Hear You Calling Me will be issued by the Bruce Publishing Co. on the date that this issue of The Record Changer goes on sale. It is a volume which no admirer of the renowned Irish tenor will wish to be without. The Countess writes as well as she converses, and that is sufficient recommendation for all human purposes. The complete and (I wish I had compiled it) exasperating McCormack discography which Philip F. Roden published originally in The Gramophone a few seasons ago is included as an appendix to the book. Hence, in addition to its narrative merit, I Hear You Calling Me becomes a record-collector's item of the very first importance.

Let no one who rejoices in the reinstatement to circulation of records long unobtainable pounce unquestioningly upon any item recently restored. Listen carefully before you buy is the advice of this badly burned correspondent. Quality control seems to have gone by the board in the past year and pressings are being taken from stampers that have long since outlived their usefulness. In some cases it would appear more seemly to re-record from perfect early pressings and thus recapture the superior essence which obtains in the originals. It goes without saying that high sales-volume means short stamper life—and here I am referring in particular to Victor set No. 54, the elderly (and superior) complete Aida which, purchased as a replacement for a play-worn album is, in the new edition, inferior to the oldish pressing.

As of this present year, the free catalog supplement is a thing of the past. Gone are the days when we were able to examine a tastefully presented broadside of new releases while awaiting our turn at the counter, and to entice ourselves into well-considered purchases. Such news is now buried in a slick monthly magazine for which the dealer must shell out a nickel and cannot leave lying about for deadheads to grab up and make off with. The dealer is not going for that sort of thing, let alone stocking the ill-advertised merchandise. Result: quick deletions.

This is by way of being a pro tem valedictory after three happy years with The Record Changer. To report on record activities has provided a much needed sense of sharing their joys. But, looking over several recent back issues, it occurs that interest in this department is rather limited—or else that almost every reader has everything and wants nothing. And so, rather than add to the publisher's burden at a time when advertising revenue as it pertains to classical records is not noticeably stupendous, I'm goina pick up my immies and go home. When something comes along in my field that calls for immediate and pressing notice either in praise or umbrage, you may hear from me. Otherwise, good day to yez.

ED NICKEL BILL MULL

Edna Winston is a singer whose records should be brought into the limelight for the simple reason of a knocked out New Orleans band in the background. We have four rec-ords by her, all of them fine. Her voice isn't anything out of the ordinary, but what she lacks the band more than makes up for. Of the eight sides we have, four are listed in the Index. They are: Mama's Gonna Drop Your Curtain, Pail in My Hand, Rent Man Blues, and Way After One and Daddy Ain't Come Home Yet on Victor 20424 and 20857 respectively. On the first side she sings throughout the entire record, but the band plays behind her in true New Orleans style. On the second side the band takes a fine ensemble chorus with nice breaks by cornet, clarinet, and trombone. On Rent Man Blues a sax is heard above the rest of the band to make this one of the least interesting sides, but on Way After One the band hits a solid pushing beat to make it stand out above the rest with a wonderful cornet break being the highlight of the side. The unlisted sides are as follows: I Got a Mule to Ride and Peepin' Jim on Victor 20407 and Ever After On and Joogie Blues on Victor 20654. On I Got a Mule to Ride the trombone cuts loose in a fine solo after Edna tells him to "Moan that thing, Papa." Immediately after the trombone the cornet takes over for a solo and on this side he sounds a great deal like Thomas Morris, but that is strictly a guess on our part. The reverse is entirely vocal but the band still pushes in the background. On the last two sides the band sounds somewhat like the Louis Dumaine group, not quite making the grade. Nevertheless they are still great blues records. But who are they? Could they be a Dumaine group, a Thomas Morris group or even a Jabbo Smith outfit? These records don't seem to be terribly rare so how about some opin-

"Mr. Engineer, let a man ride this line. I wouldn't mind it, fellow, but you know this train ain't mine." This verse is sung by Blind Sammy on Columbia 14484 entitled Travelin' Blues. Blind Sammy, a quite obscure Folk-Blues singer who, considering the many singers of that period, had an exceptionably good voice. His singing and guitar playing are a treat to hear. His voice is very sincere with a style that is a bit like that of Blind Mamie Forehand and Blind Willie Johnson. His vocal also has a touch of humor in it along with his guitar "answering" him. The reverse, Come On Around to My House, Mama is from an old theme which is still used a lot today, very recently by Nellie Lutcher under the name didn't always blast the way he did when the Ory band was last around these parts.

There is a wonderful Collins chorus in Duet Stomp, though I like the other side the best of the lot, and on Tip Easy Blues Lee takes a chorus in the middle register that is one of the really wonderful things to listen to in all jazz-restrained, full of emotion and warmth, and in every way satisfying.

Signey Arodin, the only white man on the date, adds some wonderful clarinet, biting and acid, a perfect foil for Collins and the rest of the band. There is also some pretty wonderful bass in the person of Al Morgan, not to leave out some pretty fine banjo by Rene Hall. Piano player is also a guy you may have heard of, fellow by the name of Joseph Robichaux. The drummer was Galbert Martin and the two saxes shall remain nameless because I wish they had stayed home.

It is good to see stuff like this available again. Neither of these two records was really what I would call rare, but all the same they turned up on auction lists infrequently enough to make this a sort of event. (Biltmore 1001 and 1002) (B. M.)

Jelly Roll Morton

Mamamita

Tia Juana

There isn't too much to say about this one. One of the baker's dozen or so that Jelly recorded for Gennett (and one of the four that Silvertone brought out from the same masters) it presents one of the best of the piano professors as he played in 1923 and 24, and that ought to be good enough for any-body. If I do not get up on the top of the house and cheer it is only because there is quite a bit of Jelly available these days.

Jelly once said that he invented jazz in the backroom of a saloon in New Orleans (I forget the exact date) and though I know that's stretching the truth a little I can only add not too far. He was one of the most inventive of the jazz greats and he always had perfect taste, plus a lightness of touch that was really remarkable. He was also one of the very few piano players who realized that to play jazz on the keyboard you really had to do everything a whole orchestra did. And if you don't believe he did play a piano side and then play his band recording of it right afterwards.

They can keep throwing stuff like this at me all night long! (Biltmore 1003.) (B. M.)

Duke Ellington and His Kentucky Club Orchestra

Immigration Blues The Creeper

Readers of these pages know by now that this for me was the Ellington Golden period, a peak, for my money, that he never reached again, save on a few records in the last of the twenties and the first few years of the thirties. For one thing he soon lost a brass man by the name of Bubber Miley and though the man who took his place was a pretty fair country sort of replacement (Cootie Williams) things were never quite the same afterwards. As I have also stated on occasion this was before he got too far away from the primary roots of jazz and before he got overly intoxicated with the mod-erns and the strange wonderful sounds of his later periods. In any event this is a hell of a good record and you ought to have it to go along with others, more easily attainable in the past, like East St. Louis Toodle-oo, Birmingham Breakdown and Black and Tan. This is the same band, by the way, that I used to drive a hundred and twenty-five miles to hear, then drive back the same night. Seems I had good taste because this still sounds mighty damned good, so good in fact I think I'd do it again! (Biltmore 1004) (B. M.)

Fats Waller

Muscle Shoals Blues Birmingham Blues

Here is the first record ever made by a man who attained a certain prominence later in life, though glancing through the discographies I find that he didn't make another for something like five years! Too long, for my

As a matter of fact this is a hell of an interesting record. For one thing it was made before Fats got into his bubbling period and it's pretty serious stuff without even one vocal aside. Anyone interested in his style can also get it pretty clear here because there are no outside interferences. That same wonderfully strong left hand is already apparent, as is his debt to his teacher James P. and one of his early_idols, Lucky Roberts. Fats was always an Eastern Seaboard boy and this stands out on the record.

Muscle Shoals is a wonderfully satisfying blues and Birmingham runs it a close second. What more can one possibly ask for? (Biltmore 1005) (B. M.)

Sugar Underwood

Davis Street Blues Dew Drop Alley Stomp

I never thought I would get around to blowing my top about my favorite piano player because he only made one record and the chances of its being re-issued seemed pretty remote. But here it is, so now I can rest my original!

The record was made in Savannah on the twenty-third of August in 1927. Why no more were made, I don't know, because Sugar accompanied the Jacksonville Harmony Trio on a record the same day. For my money he was one of the really great piano players.

Of the two sides I prefer the slow one, Davis Street Blues, although Dew Drop Alley Stomp is a lot flashier. On that he sounds like one of those old time mechanical players run amok; it moves so fast you can't really realize how wonderful he is until you play the slow side. He is very inventive, and the intricate figures of the right hand are set off by a bass that at times sounds not unlike an organ.

I wish someone would discover about ten unknown masters by this guy. He is really terrific. (Biltmore 1006) (B. M.)

King Oliver

Jet Black Blues Blue Blood Blues

Put out under the name of Blind Willie Dunn's Gin Bottle Four this is one of those strange personnels that you have to listen to in order to really believe. In short, King

Oliver (c); Clarence Williams (p); Eddie Lang and Lonnie Johnson (g); Hoagy Carmichael (dm, bottles & scat vo.). The date was April, 1929. One other record came out of this same session, listed under the name of Clarence Williams' Novelty Four, if memory

As a matter of fact I'm a hog about records of this kind. I don't know how Hoagy got into the act but it's a nice little touch to have him around diddling with everything handy and identifying himself with that voice no one could possibly mistake.

There is also some good Oliver horn work on both sides, as well as exciting guitar from Lonnie and Eddie Lang. The Blue Blood side is the same number Jelly made such a grand record of along about the same time. This is another example of the really outstanding stuff lying around that so many other people seem to have forgotten. (Biltmore 1007) (B. M.)

Bessie Smith

Send Me to the 'Lectric Chair Them's Graveyard Blues

I'm Wild About That Thing You've Got to Give Me Some

Nashville Woman Blues I Ain't Goin'

I have every record the late Bessie Smith ever made except Co. No. 14634, a fact I mention not for bragging purposes but merely that some day somebody is going to re-issue it and thereby win themselves a bottle of cooling boundary. tle of cooking bourbon. Anyone turning up an original for me is liable to win a bottle of drinking whiskey. If this comes under the heading of advertising I hereby announce to Editor Grauer I owe him thirteen cents!

All fooling aside though there was only one Bessie and for my money she never made a bad record. The story is that only rarely did she have to make more than one take on a studio date because she always hit it on the head the first time and any further attempts were a waste of time.

As a matter of fact these three records are Bessie at her best and varied enough to be of extreme interest. The Nashville Woman coupling, for example, has Louis, along with "Big" Green and Fred Longshaw. Send Me to the 'Lectric Chair and its reverse has Joe Smith, Green and Fletcher Henderson. And I'm Wild About That Thing is one of those off color numbers that Bessie could make with the best of them, and yet in doing so somehow managed to keep it out of the class of mere dirt, not an easy job by the way.
Listening to some of the singers today sort of seems to me as though they were sending a boy out to do a man's job. Bessie was not only a blues singer (as a matter of fact her blues are considerably less pure than many) but she was the first of the torch singers. She could take a ballad and turn it into something that was so alive that you wanted to stand up and yell.

I only heard her once, at a Negro theatre over in Newark. It was not too long before she was tragically killed and the going was getting tough. The money that she had made in the past had melted away and there was nothing coming in from records to speak of; she was forced to hit that torture trail of the one night stand in the towns she wouldn't even have looked at in her better days. But when she came out on the stage and gave you those wonderful teeth, then proudly tossed her head as she went into the opening number nothing else mattered. She was a wonderful woman and records like these are a far better memorial than anything I could ever say, so I'll shut up. (Biltmore 1008, 1009, and 1010) (B. M.)

Johnny Dodds/Jelly Roll Morton Memphis Shake Dr. Jazz

As fond as I am of Dr. Jazz I wish we had gotten two sides of the Dixieland Jugblowers, preferably two of the sides that have been less easily obtained than has Memphis Shake, instead of the split bill here. However, I'm always one to be thankful for the matter at hand and so I can't kick too much

Dr. Jazz has often been put forward as the best example of New Orleans jazz ever put to wax. Myself, I wouldn't go that far but it is a record that ought to be in the hands of every one who has a real love for jazz. But let me get back to Johnny Dodds and his jug boys. My love for the jugband is of long standing and this is one of the best examples you'll find lying around loose. It's a little less rugged than my own favorites but Dodds and the man on that big jug more than make up for that. But now that Biltmore has given us this little taste I hope they will go whole hog on the next go-round. Maybe House Rent Rag or Hen Party Blues next time? (Biltmore 10011) (B. M.)

Bix Beiderbecke with Jean Goldkette's Orchestra

In My Merry Oldsmobile 1-2

For all Bix lovers this is perhaps the rarest of Bix items. For those who don't care much either way I think you may want to pass this up. One side, the waltz side, is pretty horrendous indeed, but the other is just what the label says. It's not that I'm against this kind of thing; certainly all people who like Bix should have a chance to get items like this. Even people, who like myself, don't like Bix too much ought to sit back and let the boys have their day. Count me out, but like Voltaire said, roughly, I don't agree with it but I'll fight anybody who won't let you listen to Beiderbecke. Fair enough? (Biltmore 1012) (B. M.)

Knocky Parker

Wolverine Blues Grandpa's Spells

Grace and Beauty Wildflower Rag

Crazy Kid Blues Pretty Baby

A couple of years back all I heard was Knocky Parker. Knocky Parker plays in a hill billy band. Knocky plays better ragtime than Jelly Roll Morton. Knocky is a professor and when he comes east to join the Columbia faculty you're going to hear some piano that will knock this town loose from its underpinnings. Well, he came and I heard him at a town hall session, which one I forget, and I haven't heard from him since. Probably what I am going to say isn't Probably what I am going to say isn't kind. I have nothing against Knocky Parker personally and I think he plays a nice piano.

I liked hearing these records once but I very much doubt if I will ever play them again. Why? Well, I'd much rather play Jelly, for one thing. Maybe if someone put one on and I didn't know I might guess it was Jelly, and yet I don't think so. I think I could tell, in spite of the fact that Mr. Parker can sound very, very much like him, because I don't think he has it inside. Jelly moves me very much and this guy doesn't. This was a nice try and I think the records were worth bringing out. They may affect you deeply and I hope they do. But they don't me, somehow. I don't mean everything concerned here is not sincere because it is. The one band side uses an arrangement that is Morton-like all the way through. But all I only hear is Parker playing like Jelly. One thing in closing—I wish Jelly had made a band number of Pretty Baby! (Paradox Album X-101) (B. M.)

The Dutch Swing College Orchestra Viper Mad Jazzin' Babies Blues

Jazzin Dabies Diues

A couple of issues back I reviewed the first records of this Dutch band, and fairly extensively, as I remember it. There isn't a great deal to add here except that this is a pretty good brand of jazz to have around your phonograph. By this I don't mean they are ever going to take the place of the classics but merely that they are good standard items I think you'll want to play more than once. Of the two sides I happen to like Jazzin' Babies best; it's an old Richard M. Jones tune that has been around a good long time and no one has worn it out for me yet. (Summit 1004) (B. M.)

Humphrey Lyttleton Get Out of Here Sunday Morning

I'm slowly getting a nice feeling for English jazz—that is versus the stuff that is floating around town these days. Here are two nice sides which are playable and have some rather exciting moments. I wouldn't go into hock to get them but if I had my choice between this and most of the stuff recorded over here the last few years in a comparable vein I think I'd put my money on this one. (Rampart 11) (B. M.)

everything! The next time I went to hear them, I had my little old $15.00 Sears & Roebuck horn tucked under one arm, hoping for a chance to sit in. I'd been sitting at a table over in the corner and when I commenced to play, waiters and bouncers came running from all directions, and I think they would have tossed me out then and there if Chippie Hill, who was on the floor singing, hadn't hollered at them to let me alone.

"Actually, I never had a real chance to spend much time with Louis until some years later. That was in Cincinnati in 1932. While I had met him before, he had always been like God to me, and it never occurred to me that he would ever spend a whole afternoon with me, giving me pointers on this and that. But that is just what happened that day.

"However, before I became acquainted with Louis' work, there were two other men who had made quite an impression on me when I was a youngster. One was Harry Smith. He died some years ago out in Kansas City, but he was a very fine trumpeter. The other man was Beno Kennedy. He specialized in the upper register, and he could play the most perfect high 'C' you ever heard. Frequently, he hit notes much higher than that, and we used to say that he had a trick lip. Of course, there's no such thing as a trick lip, but that's what we used to call it when I was just a kid."

After this bit of reminiscence had ended, L. P. resumed the story of his career: "Following the early experiences that I

"Following the early experiences that I have been telling about, the carnivals, minstrel shows, and stage shows for name singers, I had a chance in 1928 to join my older half-brother, Walter, the bass player. He had a band called 'Walter Page's Blue Devils.' King Oliver, of course, was the chief influence on the 'Blue Devils,' then Jelly Roll Morton, and then Duke Ellington, in that order. We played all around the Southwest, and when we hit Kansas City in 1930, Benny Moten came to hear us.

"Benny was a business man first and last. He had a lot of connections out there, and he was a very good friend of Pendergast, the political boss. Through contacts of this kind, he was able to control all the good jobs and choice locations in and around Kansas City. In his day, you might say that he was stronger than M.C.A. However, he was also a very good musician. A real old-timer, he was an excellent ragtime pianist and he could play along with the best of them. Benny liked our music, he liked the way we played, and he made us a proposition. If we would provide the music, he would provide the jobs, and that is how the 'Blue Devils' became the nucleus for the best band Moten ever had.

"Of course, we didn't need Benny as a pianist. We already had Basie. I had sent for Basie some time before when a previous man had left us, and he had fitted in O.K. At the time, Basie hadn't been out West long. Originally, he had come from Jersey, and was still more or less unknown. Consequently, Moten only played when he felt like it and was good and ready. Often, he'd just stand up alongside the piano and smile. At other times, he'd go off and join some influential people in the audience. All that was good inspiness

"Except for occasional changes in personnel, we all stuck together right up until Moten's death in 1934. During those years, we played all through that section. We also toured the East, playing New York City, Detroit, Cincinnati, and a number of big towns. And there's one thing I want to say about that band. I don't think that any other band of that period ever brought out the two-beat as definitely as Moten's. After Moten died, we held a conference, and voted Basie in as head. The choice was a logical one. Being a pianist, Moten had always built the hand around the piano.

the band around the piano.

"It was shortly after all this happened that I came to leave the band. Along with playing trumpet, I had been acting as M.C. when we put on shows, helping with radio announcements during broadcasts, and handling various promotional activities. When Decca sent Mayo Williams out to look us over, someone had given him a letter to me, and I arranged for him to meet Basie and the rest of the boys. Then John Hammond came to town. He was much impressed by what the former Moten band was doing, and as I recall, was the one who was really responsible for Basie's switch East. The same night that Hammond came in, Louis Armstrong and Joe Glaser were in town, and they came to hear us, too. The next thing I knew Glaser was urging me to come East to form a new outfit of my own. That's what brought me to New York again in 1935.

"Once I got to New York, one of my first jobs was at Small's Paradise, quite a spot in those days. Since then, I have continued to head groups of my own, and along with that, I've done a lot of concerts and personal appearances. Those activities, and recording work has kept me pretty busy. Lately, I've added television work, too."

the recent Paris trip, Page thought for a few moments, and then replied:

"Flying over, Sidney Bechet and I sat together. While we were circling around, getting ready to land, Sidney turned to me and of money.'

"Once the concerts started, we got the impression that we were the ones who had been brought over to draw crowds and sell tickets. We would always go on first, and we would knock the house out. Then the be-boppers would get up, and the audience would start to leave. That is the truth. About the only people over there who really seemed to like bop were the existentialists, but there weren't enough of them to fill the hall!

better it gets. The first chorus is by the piano followed by a vocal from Bumble Bee who then takes to the kazoo for the last chorus. (We presume it's Bumble Bee on kazoo.) This record isn't anything out of the world, but I don't believe any collector would throw it out of his collection. The back is straight blues vocal with piano and guitar accompaniment.

Our final item of this month is of great interest to us and we think that it is well worth some investigation. The record is by Skillet Dick and his Fryin' Pans on Cham-pion 15883. The titles are Asphalt Walk and Patent Leather Stomp. The feature of both sides is an excellent trumpet man. There are only three instruments on the record: trumpet, piano, and banjo so this gives the horn man a good chance to be heard. On Asphalt Walk the trumpet displays a nice broad tone with plenty of drive to it. On the reverse the piano man takes a very modern sounding solo along with the fine horn once again. Our guess as to the trumpet man's identity would be Punch Miller, or what are some other opinions?

We want to hear from you collectors, letting us know what your opinions might be on the records we have listed. Also let us know about any unlisted records that you might have in the line of New Orleans, Blues, or Skiffle style. the loudspeaker within the cabinet: in other words, make the inside some other shape than rectangular.

If space permits, the speaker should be mounted as far as possible to the rear of the cabinet, and a funnel-like chamber constructed in front of it. The rear end of this funnel, that next to the speaker, should be no larger than is necessary to accommodate the frame of the speaker and should taper outward so as to have the front opening occupy as much of the frontal area of the cabinet as possible. If a "tweeter" is used, it may be mounted in this space. The rear of the speaker should be covered with a heavy blanket of some material such as hair felt (the felt padding used under rugs, a blanket being made by sewing several layers to-gether, is very good for this purpose). The writers know of one particular installation of this type which gives outstanding results; the high frequencies are clear and brilliant while the lows have great depth and sonority without a trace of any annoying bass boom.

Since most of us cannot afford a "two piece" ("woofer" and "tweeter") loud-speaker system, a compromise must be sought. One manufacturer makes an 8-inch dynamic speaker rated at 8-watts and laving a frequency response of from 70 to 13,000 cycles. This speaker is unusual, however, as its good performance stems from the fact that it has a 2½-pound field magnet and a 2-inch voice coil which are much more generous specifications than are commonly found in speakers of this size. This speaker sells for about $45.00, and since most of us must trim our budgets to a point even below this, a commercially made 12-inch speaker seems to offer the best compromise. These may be purchased in good quality for as little as $20.00 although the price ranges up to $60.00 if top quality is desired.

However, if this speaker is properly mounted in a cabinet that adheres strictly to the dimensions recommended by the manufacturer for the particular speaker and the above suggestions are followed as to its mounting, reasonably good results should be attained, and the impulse that was picked up by your phono-pickup in our first article will have been guided to your ear with a good measure of the brilliancy that it deserves.
