Dear home, thou scene of earliest hopes and joys,
And who waits for thee in that cheerless home . . .
Then send the priests to every hearth and home . . .
Sighing to think of an unhappy home :
could fare Out of his home after a savage herd.
To fill our home with smiles,
in a desert hears The music of his home :—
when to thy home Thou dost return,
in their home Among their babes,
We moved towards our home ;
Even to the threshold of that lonely home :
Then to a home for his repose assigned,
As to our home we went,
We reached our home ere morning
Your own hands have built an home,
The outcast of a desolated home,
To his home each one returning,
That thus at midnight thou dost quit thine home ?
To a neat and happy home.
Horses, oxen, have a home,
Find a home within warm doors.
And talk of our abandoned home.
When evening fell upon our common home,
Duly each evening from her home,
Till we came to the home of Lionel,
'tis Helen's home, and clean and white,
As in an English home,
as sea from Helen's home,
She must quit at deep midnight her pitiless home.
And made their home under the green hill side.

 Or hope can paint or suffering may achieve,
 truth Had overlied hope's momentary youth,
 I would fain Reply in hope— Int. Beauty, II. 12.
 Look not so, Laon—say farewell in hope,
 A warmer zeal, a nobler hope how find;
 ay, thou didst rear That lamp of hope on high,
 those seeds of hope might yet be sown,
 When from all mortal hope she did depart,
 And hope, I know not whence or wherefore,
 For hope whose fountain can be thus profound,
 O Spring, of hope, and love,
 earnest of the hope Which made them great,
 All hope, or love, or truth, or liberty,
 Of youthful hope returning suddenly,
 Whose wand of power is hope,
 Dearer than life and hope,
 and in hope Closed their faint eyes;
 Since hope and peace, and joy, for aye are fled,
 That fire, more warm and bright than life or h,
 Green strength, azure hope, and eternity:
 To swallow all delight, all life, all hope. . . .
 We meditate In secret joy and hope
 Who bears the untransmitted torch of hope
 The sparks of love and hope
 Incapable of judgment, hope, or love?
 And full of wonder, full of hope as he.
 And many days of beaming hope
 With him lay dead both hope and pride.
 Alas! all hope is buried now.
 And hope, and courage mute in death;
hope and peace On all who heard him did abide,
 Whose hope was like the life of youth Within him,
 And winged hope, on which upborne
 How sad, when dear h, every sorrow is soothing,
 I have nor hope nor health,
 and in those eyes where once hope shone,
 And happy thoughts of hope, too sweet to last.
 (4) expectation, confidence.
 No other hope in Heaven
 Worse than the bitterness of death, is hope:
 Ah! wherefore didst thou build thine hope.
 Renew and strengthen all thy failing hope.
 still from hope to hope the bliss pursuing,
 And full of wonder, full of hope as he.
 With all the fear and all the hope they bring,
 And many days of beaming hope shall bless draw The unenvied light of hope;
 A short-lived hope, unceasing care,
 What hope of refuge, or retreat, or aid?
 But the unborn hour, Cradled in fear and hope,
 Like hope and terror,—
 Such hope, as is the sick despair of good,
 Unlinked with hope that thou wouldst free
 Thus power and hope were strengthened
 In hope on their own powers began to look,
 And power shall then abound, and hope arise
 once more. . . .
 a trace which awes The thoughts of men with h—
 the fearful overthrow Of public hope
 From glorious phantasies of hope departed:
 A pause of hope and awe the City bound,
 dimmed hope's newly kindled flame.
 And fame, in human hope which sculptured was,
 Since hope pursues immortal destiny
 And half in hope, and half in fright,
 One hope is too like despair
 'Twas the hope, the prophecy,
 still from hope to hope the bliss pursuing,
 how could false hope rend a bosom so fair?
 Health, hope, and youth, and brief prosperity;
 (5) confident trust that a thing may be possible.
 is the lady impossible to hope that I could lift my hope So high,
 And in that hope have saved your life three times.
 So, daughter, our last hope has failed;
 To feed his hope with cold encouragement:
 nor is there hope But from the Briton:
 Through the sunset of hope,
 When the last hope of trampled France had failed
 And baffled hope like ice stilled clung to me,
 From one faint hope whose flower a dropping poison shed.
 Why was this hope not torture?
 but to subdue Such dreadful hope,
 with which that child like h, with fear was blended.
 And desperation's hope in many hearts recurred.
 made free,—a hope which we have nursed
 this hope must ever rise.
 Why became cheeks Paler from hope?
 The hope which I had cherished went away;
 From eyes of quenchless hope
 The hope of what will be?
 with brief And blighting hope,
 With fear and self-contempt and barren hope.
 The hope of torturing him smells like a heap

‘till fear grew hope and faith, Rosal. 1001.

Last, adj. (1) final, closing, ultimate.
 his last sight Was the great moon, Alastor, 645.

- even when his feeble hand Shakes in its l. decay.
 Rapid clouds have drank the l. pale beam of even:
 Tempt not with one last tear
 That I may kiss thee now for the last time—
 and its last and sole resort
 The tapers . . . Are their last cost
 So, daughter, our last hope has failed;
 it sounds Like the last trump has wrung a higher truth From my last breath.
 Like the last thoughts of some day sweetly spent the last day of the holidays
 Which, when ye wake from the last sleep,
 Draw the last spirit of the age of gold,
 I find the people ripe for the last day,
 Before my last step in the living dance
 tangled in the grasp Of its last spasms.
 But now if you would not your last sleep doze;
 'Tis the last hour of day
 On whose last steps I climb
 When the last hope of trampled France had failed
 As if by the last wreck its frame were overtaken.
 the last echo of those terrible cries
 the last Bursts on that awful silence;
 like the last beam Of dying flames,
 the last eventful day Will level all.
 Than the fell tyrant's last expiring yell?
 The last thing as he went to bed.
 Seeking in vain his last embrace,
 the languid close Of the last strain,
 Like the last glare of day's red agony,
 And death shall be the last embrace of her
 And emblems of its last captivity,
 the tortuous strength of their last pangs
 on the sun's last ray Hangs o'er the sea,
 from the last giddy hour Of dead endurance,
 sweetest, last and noblest tie—death;
 Scarce satiable by fate's last death-draught
 The last, when it had sunk;
 o'er my dying brain its last monotony.
 Toek the coffin, its last cradle, from its niche,
 (2) latest, youngest, the most recent.
 Thy extreme hope, the loveliest and the last,
 Be broken in its last and deepest wound;
 The last of the flock of the starry fold?
 veil her horn In thy last smiles;
 The last news from the camp is,
 Now the last day of many days,
 The loveliest and the last, is dead,
 the last living heart whose beatings bound thee
 Undarkened by their country's last eclipse.
Last of the Intercissors!
 By that last look of yours we think
 The last look Love remembers,
 since they had brought The last intelligence—
 (3) all that remains of number or quantity,
 companionless As the l. cloud of an expiring storm
 Consuming the last clouds of cold mortality . . .
 I'll feast on you the last of your companions . . .
 Hide the last altar's unregarded dust,
 till the pallid beams Of the last watchfire fell,
 The last of those who mocked thy holy name,
 Maintain you in to the last drop of Daylight on its last purple cloud drained to its last sand in weal or woe,
 Desire, like a lioness bereft Of her last cub,
 (4) after all others, ending a series.
 He came the last, neglected and apart;
 Quite a new piece, the last of seven,
 The best, loveliest and last Of his name!
 Whom Neptune and Apollo wooed the last,
Last came Anarchy: he rode and thou couldst not be, Last of the Romans,
 And the last is Peter Bell,
 Which last is a scheme of paper money,
 the last whom superstition's blight
 And that hour was the last Of peace to the dark monk's brain
 (5) next before the present or that which is to come.
 Even as he did after the feast last night.
 That Beatrice disturbed the feast last night?
 deprived last year Of a reward of blood
 After such torments as she bore last night,
 the music Mari received last week from Italy,
 How I ran home through l. year's thunder-storm
 Was roused last night by the alarm of battle,
 Stolen they were last night at set of sun,
 The words you spoke last night
 As come on you last night—
 One mood or modulation like the last.
 For hidden thoughts, each lovelier than the last,
 And each seems uglier than the last.
 (6) highest, most extreme.
 My last delight;
 (7) smallest, most minute.
 To the last fibre of the lottiest tree
Last, adv. (1) the end.
 From first to last, Clarin,
 (2) as a final consideration, lastly.
 and last From this;

l. smallest chord Strung to unchanging unison,
It is bound Ere it has life;
Like that which gave it life, to spring and die.
All objects of our life, even life itself,
That fades not when the lamp of earthly life,
Eternal spring Of life and death,
And life, in multitudinous shapes,
Not more endowed with actual life
Poisoned the springs of happiness and life;
Thou art love and life! O come,
For love and life in him were twins,
In every other First l. then love its course begins,
I loved, and I believed that life was love.
A life in life, a second birth
For the spirit of life o'er every limb Lingered,
Falls when life deserts her brain,
Whilst animal life many long years
I loved—Alas! our life is love;
Is the flame of life so fickle and wan
And life, where long that flower of Heaven
whether life had been before that sleep
The action and the shape without the grace Of l.
Then, what is life? I cried.
Alas! what is life, what is death,
which move, And form all others, l. and love. When passion's, III. 5.
as if some controul, Mightier than l., were in them; Witch, LXIX. 5.
To live within the life which thou bestowest; Zucca, IV. 5.

(2) the period of a man's existence on earth, the time of living,
could crown Life's early cup with such a draught of woe? Adonais, XXXVI. 3.
He hath awakened from the dream of life—
XXXIX. 2.
Staking his very life on some dark hope,
Bearing within his life the brooding care
it hung Upon his life,
Thou imagest my life,
the highway of the life Which we all tread,
Than his most worthless life:—
The meanest or the noblest life.
I cannot thus relume My father's life:
Must quench the life that animated it.
For an old murderer's life.
the poor life Which is a mask without it.
A life of burning crimes
Would that my life could purchase thine!
Who was the loadstar of your life:
What is his poor life?
made thy life's path Over the trampled laws
When my life is laid asleep?
The atmosphere and breath of my dead life!
How weak, how short, is life to pay
This will I do with peril of my life,
Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
That piteous thought which did my life console!
The life that wears, . . . One object,
Be this our home in life,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.
The health of life's own life.
Ariel the unborn dream of our life
Gives grace and truth to life's unquiet dream.
When musing deeply on the lot Of life,
to my onward life supply Its calm—urged by the wind and goad To drag life on,
Most fortunate beneath life's beaming morn;
Whose life was like a setting planet mild,
in life's young hours These sights and sounds
Well might men loathe their life,
now she was all I had To love in human life,
To burst the chains which life for ever flings
That gentlest sleep seemed from my life to sever,
Until life's sunny day is quite gone down,
like the kiss of love when life is young,
the painted veil which those who live Call Life:
Sad was his life who bore thee in his breast,
Snatch'd from l. course ere half his race was run!
When endless bliss the woes of fleeting l. repay.
No life can equal such a death.
Forget thy life and love;
To curse the life which is the cage.
Utterly poisoned life's unmingled bowl,
Has thrown herself, her cause, her life, her all,
Though his life, day after day,
Pressed out the life of life,
Who mark the extremes of l. discordant span.
Asia, thou light of life,
and all That tempers or improves man's life,
Death is the veil which those who live call life:
Into the grave, across the night of life.
The painted veil, by those who were, called life,
Each day-dream of her mortal life,
and poisoning The choicest days of life,
that wastes A sunless l. in the unwholesome mine,
Whose life has been a penance for its crimes.
A life too void of solace to confirm
All objects of our life, even life itself,
His life a feverish dream of stagnant woe,
Life is its state of action,
Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
That, from earliest life,
And sleep, when the night of life is cloven,

but in this life Of error,
He came like a dream in the dawn of life,
To be after life what we have been before?
And yet I wear out life in watching thee;
(3) as a personification or entity.
Spread thy couch in the chamber of Life!
at her silver voice came Death and Life,
and took From l. green tree his Uranian lute;
But a voice answered—Life!
For in the battle Life and they did wage,
(4) human affairs, daily life.
The monsters of life's waste had fled
Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
far above All else in human life?
The glory far above All else in life is—Love!
Linked with each lasting circumstance of life,
And all the fit restraints of daily life,
As tempers life's worst bitterness;
will find Life a worse Hell
as should make The peace of life,
To blacken the sweet light of life.
Thee, light of life . . . dead, dark l.
new strength to tread the thorns of life.
the arch of life, Whose safety is its strength.
Who complicate with laws the life of man,
Would make life sweeter for a longer time.
The greatest among men for joy of life.
Life is its state of action,
Which lurk beneath the tide Of l. unquiet stream.
Of acting a forced part in life's dull scene,—
She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way,
Under whose motions life's dull billows move;
this world of life Is as a garden ravaged,
Into the dreary cone of our life's shade;
Into the wintry forest of our life;
In the sea of life and agony:
Darkening Life's labyrinthine way.
for life's great cheat;
And look upon his day of life
But life's familiar veil was now withdrawn,
to hide us from the sun Of this familiar life,
If Liberty Lent not life its soul of light,
Alas! this is not what I thought life was.
Which had adorned his life in happier hours,
the various story Of human life,
I heard as all have heard, life's various story,
For to tread life's dismaying wilderness
the wave of life's dark stream.
while the stream Of life, our bark and life is poisoned in its wells.
ye twine the rings of life's perpetual coil,
which life's strong wings encumber.
Who might have made this l. envenomed dream
these myriads from life's crowded stage:
From the haunts of daily life.
Of what makes l. foul, cankerous, and abhorred;
Crowded him the King of Life.
if Life can breed New wants,
To judge with solemn truth l. ill-apportioned lot?
I fall upon the thorns of life!
For those who crown life's cup with poison
any whom life's sphere May comprehend
Pass triumphing over the thorns of life,
The desert of our life.
in life's green grove Sport like tame beasts,
Forcing life's wildest shores to own
To all that shares the lot of human life,
filled All human life with hydra-headed woes.
How calm and sweet the victories of life,
Through life's phantasmal scene in fearlessness,
Walking beneath the night of life,
Dull life's extremest goal
and call life pleasure;
Which rides o'er life's ever tumultuous Ocean;
wear These heavy chains of life with a light spirit,
And through our restless life,
It floats with rainbow pinions o'er the stream Of life,
To death on life's dark river.
In the light of life's dim morning,
That Nature masks in life several copies
The tasks of ruin in the world of life.
Which stirs the liquid surface of man's life.
beyond the rage Of death or life;
who expel Love's gentle Dryads from the haunts
of life,
With such swift feet l. green and pleasant path,
(5) mode or manner of living.
So bitter is the life I live,
And my life is not life.
One wants society, . . . Others a tranquil life;
And live a free life as to wine or women,
Will I not nurse this life of feverous hours:
And a new life, fashioned on old desires,
all the wretched life Which I have lived,
and tongues Are busy of its life:
Even of the life which now I live—
Hath so transformed the life which thou hast led,
Makes this cold common hell, our life,
Our simple life wants little.
one life, one death, One Heaven,

 'Tis long since these dry lips were wet with woe.
 By wandering long over the homeless sea.
 A living light, to cheer it long,
 So long have mingled with the gusty wind
 man was long the train-bearer of slaves,
 Oh! linger long, thou envious eastern lamp
 Like its glory long ago.
 And my spirit which so long
 How long have I been sweeping out this rubbish too l. We gaze on danger through the mist of fear, Nor long could in the sacred cradle keep,
Long having lived on thy sweet food,
 from the woes which had begirt it long.
 too long. Sons of the glorious dead,
 Whose l has so l betrayed your impious trust.

Cenci, i. i. 110.
 you look on me As you were not my friend,
 It is not true!—Dear lady, pray look up . . .
 Dare no one look on me? None answer?
 Where never eye can look upon thee more!
 He has made me look On my beloved Bernardo,
 Look up! Why, yesternight you dared to look
 She shall not dare to look upon its beams;
 Look upon this man;
 Let her not look on me!
 Who made all lovely thou didst look upon . . .
 Yes, pray your Grace look . . .
 Let your Majesty look at it . . .
 Look up, not downwards when I speak to you.
 Let him but look upon that lady's eyes,
 Look forth, you cannot see the end of it—
 Look here, Gentlemen;
 And look upon his day of life
 and bid you look upon the night.
 Look, Hassan, on you crescent moon,
 Knock and it shall be opened—look and, lo!
 Look Julian on the west,
 Look on the west, how beautiful it is yet dared not look upon the shape
 and breathlessly did look Oa her and me,
 that his soul on its revenge might look.
 I . . . ascend my bier Of fire, and look around;
 We look behind;
 Look upon them as they slay
 I look on high;
 Those spirit-bearing eyes, and look on me,
 Look on my works, ye Mighty,
 Let me but look into his eyes!
 O, sister, look! White fire
 Look! where round the wide horizon
 Look again, the flames almost
 Look, sister, where a troop of spirits gather,
 And then I said: Panthea, look on me.
 Look, sister, ere the vapour dim thy brain:

- Look* how the gusty sea of mist is breaking
Some look behind, as fiends pursued them there,
I dare not look on thee;
Will look on thy more warm and equal light
Listen; look!
Look on yonder earth:
need but look upon That dying statue,
Oh, I would look in thy dear beam
thou shalt look on it with me.
If I look on Spring's soft heaven,—
Look from thy dull earth, slumber-bound,
Not to look on those eyes,
Yet look on me—take not thine eyes away,
(2) used of inanimate objects or personifications.
Night, with all thy stars look down,—
that the light of day should look Upon that idol which from the towers Of Heaven look forth
Night, with all thine eyes look down!
Or the dews fall, or the angry sun look down
Fiercely look forth his awe-inspiring eyes,
Which, from their unworn obelisks, look forth
(3) consider, think of.
made me look Upon the monster of my thought,
And with thy memory look on thy friend's mind,
But look on that which cannot change—
Sweet friend! can look from our tranquillity
In hope on their own powers began to look—
Look on your mind—it is the book of fate—
shall start, Look back, and shudder Whose stings bad thy heart look further still,
We look before and after,
We look on the past

B. objectively. (1) (of appearance), seem, appear.
And their mothers look pale—
How hideously look deeds of lust and blood
Ah me! How pale you look;
and look averse and cold,
Your eyes look pale, hollow and overworn,
look as dark as a rock before the other.
All shapes look glorious which thou gazest on!
When trees look green
And ye, weak conquerors! Giants who look pale
In deeds which make the Christian cause l pale
And where the aged forest's limbs look hoar,
(2) of an assumed air or mien.
Look not so dreadfully!
Look not so calm and happy,
Love, look thus again—
Look not so, Laon—say farewell in hope,
Look, n. (1) glance or regard.
It was one word, Mother, . . . One look, one smile.
a snake whose look transmutes All things
That your look may lighten a waste of years,
from the look Of Mercury then laughed armed wrong Trembles before her look, tho' it be strong;
every deepest l, and holiest mind Fed on her form,
With a mild look of courage unswayed mine,
The depth of her unfathomable look;
Some smile, some look, some gesture
look more sweet Than happy love,
It dared not speak, even in look or motion,
On those high domes her look she cast.
asked forbearance with a mournful look;
The last look Love remembers,
The boy Lifted a sudden look upon his mother,
A farewell look of love he turned,
No word, no look, no motion!
Thy mingled look of love and glee
(2) expression, cast of countenance.
What look is more delightful than the smile
Have given you that cold melancholy look,
She interrupted us, and with a look
That stern yet piteous look,
with its numbing l, it freezes up the blood of man;
but she with patient look,
till life seemed l melting thro' their look,
there was thrown Over her look,
Or, cried he, a grave look collecting,
with look serene He was soon drawn
(3) mental appearance, seeming.
It had a queerish look of course—
Looked, v. l. tr. expressed by a look.

My Lord, 'twas what she looked;
II. intr. A. subjectively. (1) gazed, directed the eye.
Startled by his own thoughts he looked around.
And every one looked in his neighbour's face
I looked, and saw that home was hell.
She looked around in wonder and beheld Henry,
from the eye That looked on them—
I looked, and saw between us and the sun
I looked on him,
and looked forth and smiled
And then I clasped my hands and looked around
And after every groan looked up over the sea.
I looked, and we were sailing pleasantly,
Looked into mine, like moonlight, soothingly;
I looked, and lo! one stood forth eloquently,
Of the calm smile with which she looked on me:
I looked abroad, and saw a star
now looked on high,
And looked upon the depth of that reposing lake.
He looked on me, and cried in wonder—
My own sweet sister looked,
At length she looked on me,
They looked around, and lo! they became free!
Looked from their meal,
She looked upon the sea,
And the Lady ever looked to spy
And looked abroad if she might know
she looked behind And saw
She looked on that gate of marble clear,
And as she looked, still lovelier grew Those marble forms;
She looked, the flames were dim,
And looked,—and all was empty air.
And the prostrate multitude Looked—
I looked on them nine several days,
So in his Country's dying face He looked—
And as the lady looked with faithful grief
Alas! I looked forth twice, but will no more.
I looked, and all the blossoms were blown down;
but soon I looked, And behold,
She looked around in wonder and beheld Henry,
All looked on me,
My mother looked at each,
And we looked upon each other's face;
When I looked, and saw that there was death
I looked, and knew that he was dead,
as I looked, the bright omnipresence Of morning
(2) afforded a view.
Looked o'er the immense of Heaven.
(3) with for, searched, looked about.

The beautiful looked lovelier in the light Of love,
And the red tower looked grey,
but she now Looked meek
and columns riven Looked vast in twilight,
But Cythna's eyes looked faint,
And the sea-eagle looked a fiend,
Very smooth he looked, yet grim;
But she looked more like Despair,
He looked, as he no doubt felt, queer,
ere the first leaf looked brown—she died!
Though the noonday sun looked clear and bright,
Looked like the wreck of some wind-wandering

- and the love chng Like wasting fire Hom. Venus, 58.
 Let thy love in kisses rain Ind. Ser. III. 3.
 For thee,—if love and tenderness and truth
 Met love excited by far other seeming
Love sometimes leads astray to misery. Julian, 330.
 Did not thy love awaken mine? 344.
 That your eyes ne'er had lied love in my face—
 lips once eloquent With love's too partial praise—
 to meet my love when thine grew less;
 how I could e'er address Such features to love's work 349.
 But as love changes what it loveth not 402.
 I give thee tears for scorn and love for hate;
 some deadly change in love 423.
 thou Child of love and light. 455.
 Alas, that love should be a blight and snare
 That if I loved before, now love was agony.
 And marriageable maidens, who have pined With love, 462.
 And cast the vote of love in hope's abandoned urn.
 thoughtless pride his love in silence bound,
 Laone was the name her love had chosen,
 and ever in soft dreams Of future love
 eyes whose deepest light Of love and sadness
 the devotion Of love and gentle thoughts
 the gentle might Of earliest love,
 for love had nursed us in the haunts
 and sweet melodies Of love,
 with light of mutual love have shone—
 Cythna shall be the prophetess of Love,
 our life and love, Our happiness,
 controuled By instinct blind as love,
 Rapture, and love, and admiration
 liquid tenderness like love,
 In love and beauty—no divinity,— fed Looks of insatiate love;
 beside our love did fail Laon, Ded. I. 9.
 like the kiss of love when life is young,
 a look more sweet Than happy love,
 It was the calm of love—
 our minds were full Of love
 The day-star dawns of love,
Love's rose a host of thorns invests;
 Age cannot Love destroy,
 Ah! why was love to mortals given,
 Whilst love every care is erasing,
 Let love shed on the bosom a tear,
 To hide the love thou feel'st for me.
 Forget thy life and love;
 Singing love to its lone mate Laon, Ded. VI. 1.
 Dost bask under the beams of love,
 Shelter, food, love's gentle balm?
 Invites to love with her kiss divine Love, 12.
Love itself shall slumber on Love's Rose, I. 3.
 I can give not what men call love, M. N. Melody, 5.
 And tender love that fed those sweetest notes,
 O thou Whose dear love gleamed and so love consumed them.—
 Unhappy love, had made, thro' use and pity,
 Both love and we familiar to my heart M. N. Ravail, 75.
 dissolved Into the sense with which love talks,
 was shadowed o'er By love;
 Sick with sweet love, droops dying away
 And mothers, gazing, drank the love men see M. W. G. VI. 6.
 Whose is the L, that, gleaming through the world,
 press into thy breast this pledge of love;
 Which love and admiration cannot view
 to quench the flame Of natural love in sensualism,
 Without a hope, a passion, or a love,
 Even love is sold;
 where the vows of happy love Are registered,
 whilst its hopes were dreaming of her love;
 The growing longings of its dawning love,
 Woman and man, in confidence and love,
 Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
 Watching her sleep with looks of speechless love,
 like the light Of early love,
 he had refuge sought In love Magnet. Lady, III. 3.
 I loved, and I believed that life was love.
 I love, but I believe in love no more.
 but love Seemed now its sullen springs to move,
 A farewell look of love he turned,
 Enclosing there a mighty space Of love;
 they are two wells Of liquid love Mary, 4.
 And know, that if love die not in the dead Matilda, 45.
 Like a doe in the noon-tide with love's sweet want,
 Like young lovers whom youth and L make dear
 It loves, even like Love, its deep heart is full,
 With music sweet as L, which overflows her bower Men of Eng. IV. 2.

 all, save the voice of Love.
 Free love has this, different from gold and clay,
 In commendation of this kind of love—
 Folly can season Wisdom, Hatred Love.
 Who taunt me with your love!
 which inspires Love, only love—
 When, with the Lady of his love, mingled lay In love and sleep—
 Or live, or drop in the deep sea of Love;

- alas! our life is love;
 I do suppose love ceases too.
 In which the warm current of love never freezes,
 A love so sweet it could not last,
 I faint, I perish with my love!
 Faint with love, the Lady of the South
 the drought Of love was on her lips;
 Within my heart is the lamp of love,
 This word of love is fit for all the world,
 Whose love had made my sorrows dear

MAKES, v. I. tr. (1) causes to be, or to become.
 'Tis the bacchanal triumph which m. Truth dumb,
 my captious fancy makes The picture of its wish,
 Thy milky, meek face makes me sick with hate!
 their horror makes them dim To the mind's eye.—
 such . . . As makes remorse dishonour, makes more dark the dread abyss
Makes you thus rash and sudden with a friend,
Makes the rack cruel.
 all that makes the age of reasoning man More memorable
Makes it waa with her borrowed light,
Makes as a two-edged sword to all
 I know That Love makes all things equal :
Makes this cold common hell, our life,
 Who makes all beautiful on which she smiles,
 wronged Memory ever makes Bitterer makes pale The Christian merchant ;
 whose smile makes this obscure world splendid,
 which always makes the spirit tame
 As m. the slumberer's cheek with wonder pale!
 beauty, which makes hearts that feed thereon
makes his fame Enduring there,
 Love when Wisdom fails makes Cythaa wise :
 and makes she bare Her breast,
 thy stare Makes blind the volcanoes ;
m. my lot As full of flowers as thine of weeds,
 Which to the martyr makes his dungeon
 With life and love makes chaos ever new,
 'tis the sperm Of what makes life foul,
Makes her so hideous,
 Squabbling makes pig-herds hungry,
 Nor custom, Queen of many slaves, makes blind,
 those herds whom tyranny makes tame ;
 The beauty of delight makes lovers glad,
 Like music which makes giddy the dim brain,
 It makes the reptile equal to the God :
 Of the desire which makes thee one with me,
 Which makes all it gazes on Paradise.
Makes human will an article of trade ;
 and makes its tears First like hot gall,
Makes wan the quivering cheek,
 Whom youth makes so fair and passion so pale,
Makes faint with too much sweet these heavy-winged thievs :
 which makes Even the mud and slime
 a sea, which wrath makes hoary,
 Which makes night day :
 What now makes them tame,

(2) causes to.
 sorrow makes me seem Sterner than else
 A judge who makes Truth weep at his decree ;
makes my heart Sicken and pant ;
 which makes The guiltiest tremble ?
 A fearful pleasure makes it prick and tingle :
 That makes its eyes and veins o'erflow,
 Charged with the load that makes thee faint and mourn ?
 Sudden, as when the moonrise makes appear
 Her low voice makes you weep—
makes the stare Of hungry snakes
 Charms every sense, and makes all thought take wing,
 Which m. a thrilling vapour of the air Become a—
 it is not life that makes me move.
 which m. Unwonted tears thro' to the horneyes,
 and their speed makes night kindle ;
 Which makes the heart deify the yes it breathes,
 Or what is that that makes us seem
 in which Passion makes Echo taut

(3) produces.
 When night m. a weird sound of its own stillness,
 The sun makes music as of old
 Suffering makes suffering, ill must follow ill.
 his fine wit Makes such a wound, the knife is lost
 in it ;

- Did thine own mind afford no scope Of love,
clothed In light of some sublimer mind,
thy mind may make its own,
Space, matter, time and mind—
- Each "movement of its progress on his mind."
with "taintless body" and mind; " " "
- Draws on the "virtuous mind,"
and kindling in his mind Hatred,
Peace cheers the mind.
- Whilst mind unfettered o'er the earth extends For birth but wakes the universal mind
and living fires Of mind,
of resolute mind.
- The miserable one Turns the mind's poison into food.—
Mind from its object differs most in this:
Between the Heaven and Earth of my calm mind,
Or the mind which feeds this verse
A poet's free and heavenly mind.
O mighty mind, in whose deep stream
Until his mind's eye paint thereon—
Through the dim wildernesses of the mind;
The self-impelling steam-wheels of the mind
and the pure Intense irradiation of a mind,
Their den is in the guilty mind.
Revolving in his mind some subtle feat
his mind became aware
Apollo darted from his mighty mind.
Soothing the mind with sweet familiar play,
For they are hidden in Jove's mind.
And, as she willed, his mighty mind deceiving,
An echo in another's mind.
Which from the mind's too faithful eye
Less oft is peace in Shelley's mind.
But in our mind?
In scorn or hate a medicine for the mind
I must remove A veil from my pent mind.
but can find No rest within a pure and gentle m.
to make that love the fuel Of the mind's hell;
Nor changed in mind or body,
had fixed a blot Of falsehood on his mind.
The colours of his mind seemed yet un worn;
find An entrance to the caverns of his mind.
Made for long years impression on my mind.
there came upon my mind A sense of loneliness,
All thoughts within his mind waged mutual war,
did shoot and quiver Thro' my beighted mind—
Some, female forms, whose gestures beamed with mind;
The oracular mind that made his features glow,
some monument Vital with mind:
which in her's mine own mind seeing,
the female mind Untainted by the poison clouds
the troubled stream Of mind;
tho' mine eyes might speak A subtle mind and strong
and still the grace Which her mind's shadow cast,
where to soothe his rankling mind,
a voice flowed o'er my troubled mind.
The dawn of mind,
Like mind while yet it mocks
calm was my mind, And piercing,
My mind became the book through which
One mind, the type of all,
Look on your mind—it is the book of fate—
Yet its swell pauses on my sickening mind;
and the hue Of his own mind did there endure
Till his mind grew like that it contemplated.
Weakness, and doubt, had withered in his mind.
Flows through the mind, and rolls its rapid waves,
My own, my human mind,
Teach the advertising mind.
If to the humao mind's imaginings
Tempt my unquiet mind—
a grief Which is the shadow of a gentle mind.
Thou art but the mind's first chamber,
and with earnest m. Fed hopes of its redemption,
Thoughts are but shadows which the flashing m.
Mining like moles, through mind.
He had a mind which was somehow
Of his mind's work,
With mind, and heart, and fancy muddled.
his own mind—which was a mist.
Was born anew within his mind;
The storm in Peter's heart and mind
He had a gentle yet aspiring mind;
Nor did his heart or mind's its portal close Between his heart and mind,— galled and bit His weary mind.
The mind becomes that which it contemplates,
Fiend, I defy thee! with a calm, fixed mind,
and the reluctant mind Flags wearily
Not me, within whose mind sits peace serene,
Thy works within my woe-illumed mind.
As the thoughts of man's own mind
It passes now into my mind.

- To every thought within the mind of man . . .
and the harmonious mind . . .
deeds which make My mind obscure with sorrow,
Then radiant, as the mind, arising bright . . .
See, where the Spirits of the human mind . . .
We come from the mind Of human kind . . .
From man's high mind, even to the central stone
thou wert my purer mind;
Thy mind, Is it not morbid as thy nerveless frame,
No working of the tyrant's moody mind,
Because thou art not human mind.
Long on the mind, . . . had brought:
Hatred, despair, and loathing in his mind,
lends Its force to the omnipotence of mind,
stricken deep With some disease of mind.
And so, his mind Was healed,
For he, they said, from his mind had bent
Ran like the thoughts of a single mind,
Then a dead sleep fell on my mind,
Whose mind is where his body cannot be,
until each mind Like springs which mingle
And the m. the mild joys of affection is proving,
Whose form was upborne by a lovely mind . . .
Whether that lady's gentle mind, . . .
the thoughts that fill The mind . . .
my mind can compass not;
And all the gazer's mind was strewn . . .
In which thou sittest sole, as in my mind, . . .
To work whatever purposes might come into her
mind;
Thou vainly curious mind.
O heart, and mind, and thoughts, . . .
- (2) heart, feeling,
one fountain of a mourning mind, . . .
and my mind misgives me
every deepest look and holiest m. Fed on her form, torn apart, a wide wound, mind from mind! . . .

Of m. whom neither time nor change can tame,
With deathless minds which leave catch from our uniting minds The spark the surprise And war of earthly minds, . . .
The light of other minds;
Congenial minds will seek their kindred soul,
O, that the wise from their bright minds
To believe their minds are given which ne'er in other minds A mirror found,— like the reflex of a thousand minds.
Evil minds Change good to their own nature.
Hypocrisy and custom make their minds . . .
in heaven-defying minds
Why may not human minds unveil
To stir sweet thoughts or sad, in destined minds.
