*SOME WORDS BY WAY OF APOLOGY
FOR THE BRINGING TOGETHER AND SETTING FORTH OF THIS BOOK*

THE making of a concordance is but a simple matter, needing only patience, industry and time. With the two former humble requisites I have been furnished by nature, with the latter by circumstance. If in going beyond the plain matter of a concordance, my ambition and goodwill have overlapped my ability, then I must cry pardon of my critics, if indeed critics should trouble themselves with my work, of the shortcomings of which I am but too well conscious.

For efficient aid in the transcription of about one half of the lines, I render willing and hearty thanks to Mr. Alfred Fountain, Mr. Foster Watson, Mrs. Scoffern, Mr. G. Thorn Drury, Miss M. S. Grove (her last work alas!), Mr. G. R. Tutin, Mr. F. G. Aylward, Mr. W. W. Aylward, Miss P. M. Ellis, Miss V. V. Wilson, Mr. W. Kineton Parkes, Miss E. B. Cohen, Dr. C. E. Shepherd, Miss Power, and Mr. T. Herbert Bindley, to whom also I am greatly obliged for the help he gave me in the arrangement and annotation of the slips under M. The assistance thus given I estimate to have spared me a year's work, and so to have enabled me to bring the book out thus opportunely.

To Dr. Furnivall for his ever-ready advice and assistance, and to Mr. W. M. Rossetti for his valuable suggestions and corrections, which I cannot overvalue, I beg to tender my grateful acknowledgments.

To those who would induce time to spread wide his wings, and who would drive from their spirits the cloud of minor vexations with which life is beset, I can heartily recommend the making of a concordance. The day when I began this work, six years since, seems but as yesterday.

Had I been less in love with my author, I might have spared many hundreds of references without lessening the mere usefulness of the book, and with a good chance of bettering my publisher's profits; but those who love the poet as well as I do will spare their censures on this head, and tender me instead their thanks. If my work should in any degree be esteemed of value by that small number of persons who love Shelley's Poems, I shall then feel myself more than repaid for all the labour I have bestowed upon it.

I am led to believe that there is but a very limited number of people in the world who care for Shelley's Poetry, by the fact that I never met with a single person outside the circle of professed students of it, who could lay claim to having read more than two or three of his most celebrated lyrics.

This is not so surprising when we consider that there is little enjoyment to be derived from his works by those who read as they run ; but that they afford an ever-increasing and permanent treasure of delight to those who will be at the pains to study them, may, I am quite sure, be safely affirmed.

To those who would know Shelley, apart from his earthly entanglements, I would say, cast aside the so-called biographies and study all that is worth knowing of his life, his soul's life, in his poems. Let us call to mind and well think over the pregnant words of Walt Whitman :

'When I read the book, the biography famous,
And is this, then, (said I,) what the author calls a man's life?
And so will some one, when I am dead and gone, write my life?
(As if any man really knew aught of my life;
Why, even I myself, I often think, know little or nothing of my real life;
Only a few hints—a few diffused, faint clues and indirections,
I seek, for my own use, to trace out here.)'

Well would it be for the world if no more was known of any poet's life, except through his works, than is known of Shakespeare's; how greatly should we then be delivered from misknowing!

That this book is published in the centenary year of the poet's birth is an undesigned coincidence.

From the d. storm-clouds flashes a fearful glare, whose unconcealing dew, Dark, dark, yet clear,
a cloud, Dark as the frown of Hell,
A shapeless, dark, and rapid crowd,
Dark with the rain new buds are dreaming of:
countless stars Studded heaven's dark blue vault, Cloud upon cloud, in dark and deepening mass,
that dark red smoke blotting the silver moon?
Around, the dark tide of the tempest was swelling,
When o'er the dark ether the tempest is swelling,
Whilst a wreath of dark vapour encircles his head.
dark lower'd the clouds on that horrible eve,
the tempest-proof Pavilions of the dark Italian air, whose dim form Bends in dark ether.
I'll sail on the flood of the tempest dark,
dawns in the dark space of interstellar air.
Which the dark shadows hide.

B. Fig. (1) sad, troubled, unhappy.
Staking his very life on some dark hope,
Was kindled to illumine this dark world;
Thy settled fate, Dark as it is,
make the present Dark as the future!—
Spare aught but a dark theme,
For dark and cold mortality
A smile amid dark frowns?
Of a dark and distant shore
Or charm the dark past never to have been,
Like life and fear, a dark reality.
free This world from its dark slavery,
In thanks or hope for their dark lot,
I might reclaim him from this dark estate:
the tempests dark and wild which shake a dark and wild turmoil;
Thus the dark tale which history doth unfold,
a dark gulph before, The realm of a stern Ruler, Framed a dark dwelling for their homeless thought,
I must have sought dark respite from its stress the wave of life's dark stream.
despair Of human things, had made so d. and bare,
the poison clouds which rest On the dark world,
we cherish yet In this dark ruin—
Ah! it is dark with many a blazoned name
And I returned with food . . . And dark intelligence;
Fill this d. night of things with an eternal morning;
I see a dark and lengthen'd vale,
which made His solitude less dark.
Now dark—now glittering—now reflecting gloom—
Dark is the realm of grief:
Had left within his soul their dark unrest:
Pitying the tumult of their dark estate—
his age, dark, end, and tempest-tost.
a ruffling atmosphere Of dark emotion,
And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,
A dark yet mighty faith,
As southered her own dark lot.
The gates of that dark refuge closed,
And so through this dark world they fleet Divided,
And in that dark and evil day
And the dark monk now Wraps the cowl round his brow,
the last Of peace to the dark monk's brain.
And triumphant their gleam on the d. Monk glar'd,
To death on life's dark river.
some mortal slumber, dark and deep,
(2) wicked, evil, abhorrent.
I stood beside your dark and fiery youth
She expects some happy change In his dark spirit
Men, like my father, have been dark and bloody,
By a dark secret, surer than the grave;
But who can flatter the dark spirit,
must hasten thus To their dark end.
A dark continuance of the Hell within him,
the dark windings [of a] pregnant lawyer's brain,
and a dark yet sweet offence.
He loosens to their dark and blasting ministries, that dark power which brings Evil,
Upon her children's brow, d. Falsehood to disarm.
So that I feared some Spirit, fell and dark,
But the dark fiend who with his iron pen
It is the dark idolatry of self,
Its struggling fears and cares, dark Custom's brood, those dark conspirators He called:
a dying seer of dark oppression's hell.
Dark Priests and haughty Warriors dark Terror has obeyed Your bidding—
By the dark creeds which cover with eclipse
In their own dark disguise,—
As some dark Priest hastes the reluctant victim—
Strange, savage, ghastly, dark and execrable,
(3) of death, sad or gloomy.
Athwart that brow is that dark mantle thrown?
Breathed o'er his dark fate one melodious sigh:
Does the dark gate of death Conduct
Nor ever more offer at thy dark shrine
Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.
The tapers that did light them the dark way
Thee, light of life . . . dead, dark!
Yet tell me, dark Death, when time empire is o'er,
may go To the dark grave unhonoured.
The dark arrow fled In the noon.

Death, Dial. 19.
Faust, II. 279.
Ginevra, 211.

And death's dark chasm hurrying to and fro, quick and dark The grave is yawning but senseless death—a ruin dark and deep!
its bloody, dark, and secret grave;
My brain grew dark in death,
Welcome thou despot to my dark domain,
From death and dark forgetfulness released.
To the dark, to the past, to the dead.
Death is dark, and foul, and dull,
(4) obscure, mysterious, unknown.
whose names on Earth are dark
Dark Ethiopia in her desert hills dream Of dark magician in his visioned cave, Seek out some dark and silent corner,
Plotting dark spells, and devilish enginery,
In the dark Future's ever-flowing urn:
Traditions dark and old,
ere Dark time had there its evil legend wrought dark children of to-morrow,
From its dark gulph of chains,
From their dark desarts,
His mercy soothed it to a dark repose:
Like the man's thought dark in the infant's brain,
And the future is dark, and the present is spread
Checks its dark chariot by the craggy gulph.
What dark forms were they?
from its dark mine drags the gem of truth
(5) of expression.
A smile among dark frowns—
(6) of literary style, obscure.
Now made his verses dark and queer:
Dark-green, c. adj. of deep green hue.
from their deep And dark-green chasms,
I saw two little dark-green leaves
Dark-red, c. adj. of the glow of sunrise.
Which cleaves with arrowy beams the dark-red air,
Dark-robed, c. adj. sombrely habited.
The dark-robed priests were met around the pile;
Dark-rolling, c. adj. fiercely active.
Dares fearless the dark-rolling battle to pour,
Dark-skirted, c. adj. sombre-looking.

Day after day, a weary waste of hours, Alastor, 245.
 The day was fair and sunny, 308.
 a day Of such festivity, Calderon, i. 22.
 more tiresome Than a procession day,
 this day I pledged to bear thee unto Cyprian.
 So the next day his wife and daughter came mark The day a feast upon their calendars, from this day and hour Never again, I think,
 If I must live day after day,
 And lest I he reserved, day after day,
 The other day when we conversed together?
 Grow, day by day, more wicked
 That wish Now comes a day too late.
 last thoughts of some day sweetly spent
 The day that dawns in fire Dragged for a day from cellars
 the last day of the holidays,
 To weep each day the wrongs on which it dawns;
 When strained upon a levee day,
 This day fends give to revelry,
 the speaking tones Of this bright day,
 Went creeping through the day with silent feet,
 This fair day smiles to see All those who love—
 My presence bore A part in that day's shame, the fourth day of the moon and pass each day In high communion, and fling The cradle-clothes about me all d. long,— no thing I know to teach Even this day:—
 with Gods and men even from that day Mingled,
 the day becomes more solemn and serene Fairer far than this fair Day,
 Now the last day of many days,
 This day had been cheerful but cold,
 But I imagined that if day by day I watched him,
 The day past thus:
 Thou must a listener be This day—
 We lived a day as we were wont to live, fraternal bands were reconciled that day.
 the eve of that great day
 Which that delightful d. with its own shadow bled.
 and still another day had fled;
 till on a day The Tyrant heard her singing and on a day When I was happiest
 I waded mure and more, Day after day,
 As day by day their altars lonelier grew,
day by day, The moon of wasting Science Day after day the burning Sun rolled on Day after day, when the year wanes,
 On the fourth day, wild as a wind-wrought sea
 Or he could ne'er have lived years, day by day.
 As just keeps life from day to day.
 One wandering thought pollutes the day;
 And January winds, after a Day Of butchering,
 The gaping neighbours came next day—
 Wounded and wasting, day by day,
 Up to this blessed day.
 Though his life, day after day,
 Like a storm-extinguished day,
 This is the season, this the day, the hour;
 On the day when He and thou Parted,
 and keen shrieks, day after day;
 That on the day when the clear hyaline
 The thoughts and actions of a well-spent day
 the slumbers That closed each well-spent day,
 Was but the mushroom of a summer day,
 Many a day and night?
 Many a weary night and day
 My heart each day desires the morrow;
 But day by day, week after week,
 And hour by hour, day after day,
 how every day Will pass in happy work and play,
 Like the unseen blight of a smiling day,
 And sit through the long day,
 That from that hour, throughout one day,
Day after day of happy hours.
 yet day by day He lived,
 Yet day by day he grew more weak,
 Leaf after leaf, day after day,
 We should have led her by this time of day.—
 when this sweet day is gone,
 Unlike this day,
 Each day a shadow onward cast
 That his day's path may end as he began it,
 and long before the day Was old,
 on the eve of this day,
 which I, day by d. Have so long called my child,
 And day by day, green as a gourd
Day by day I nursed the plant, and every day I went Watching its growth
 And as the day grew hot, methought I saw
 Whose date should have been longer than a day,
 All day the wizard lady sate aloof,
 A mimic day within that deathly nook;
 And when next day the maiden and the boy Met

on the sculptured disk Of the broad earth,
The dwellers of the earth and air
Victory! Earth's remotest shore,
And thus my prison was the populous earth—
As o'er the mountains of the earth
Earth and Heaven, The Ocean and the Sun,
From the utmost realms of earth.
From every nation of the earth they came,
when Earth is wrapt in gloom;
on earth's verge the sunken meteor gleams.
Like the swift moon this glorious earth around,
And the sunlight clasps the earth or let earth's fabric be no more.
The dædal e., That island in the ocean of the world,
Earth, and all earth's company,
I struck the crust o' the e. With this enchanted rod,
Shuts in the shaken earth;
I sang of the dædal Earth,
He'd seize the earth from underneath,
e. inwrap Less in the beauty of its tender light as the Heavens and the Earth arrayed Their presence
A star has fallen upon the earth regard this Earth Made multitudinous
From the ends of the earth, from the ends of the e.,
The heaven around, the earth below
Under the waters of the earth again.
We encircle the earth and the moon:
and illumined earth and heaven
Harmonizing this earth with what we feel above.
The abysses of the sky and the wide earth,
As I have said I floated to the earth:
On the wide earth, past;
Amid the dwellings of the peopled earth,
From the depths of the sky and the ends of the e.,
We encircle the ocean and mountains of earth,
clothe earth's monarch mountain-tops
And weed-overgrown continents of earth,
a rock, The utmost verge of earth,
Each action of this earth's inhabitants.
The Fairy pointed to the earth.
There's not one atom of yon earth
Yes! crime and misery are in yonder earth, Spirit! on yonder earth. Falseness now triumphs; orbs of mingling light. Of which yon earth is one,
Let heaven and earth, let man's revolving race,
in seven days' toil made earth From nothing;
made In mockery and wrath this evil earth?
In an unnoticed corner of the earth.
Within the silent centre of the earth
It sinks with the sun on the earth between the Earth and Mars.
When earth over her face night's mantle wraps;
Between the earth and moon,
And on the Earth lulled in her winter sleep
(2) terra firma, the earth as distinct from the sea, also the fruitful earth.
By man and beast and earth and air and sea,
Earth, ocean, air, beloved brotherhood!
the varying roof of heaven And the green earth
made the earth gleam With bright flowers,
Leaves the green earth to my embraces here.
All shapes on earth, or sea, or sky,
The niggard wages of the earth,
where the rainbow quenches its points upon the e.,
The pavement of this moist all-feeding earth;
Over earth and ocean, with gentle motion,
While the moist earth was laughing below.
the daughter of earth and water,
The earth, by force, whether it will or no,
And dreads no avengers To rise from the earth.
spring's awakening breath will woo the earth,
When the shoots of earth are tipped in the bud,
'twixt Heaven, Air, Earth, and Sea,
the Earth and Ocean seem To sleep
now bursts forth in fountains from the earth;
All gems that make the earth's dark bosom gay.
With the green earth harmonize,
The Earth is like Ocean,
And giving all it shrouded to the earth,
Whose fame, though e. betray the dust it clasped,
Earth and ocean, Space, and the isles of life or light
Where the earth and ocean meet.
For now the Earth has changed its face,
Such as from earth's embrace the salt ooze breeds, as if the Earth and Sea had been Dissolved for sudden, the firm earth was shaken, a wind that sweeps Earth and the ocean.
to spy What calm has fall'n on earth,
between E. and the upper air, the vast clouds fled,
And e. and sky shone through the atmosphere—
Wandered with mine where earth and ocean meet,
Earth, sea and sky, the planets, life and fame
when the shades of evening lie On E. and Ocean, earth wears The bloomy spring's . . . investiture,
Wrest from the unwilling earth his luxuries,
Which bloom on the wide earth—
Which made the earth seem fire, as if the sea, and sky, And earth, rejoiced
The sun, the wind, the ocean, and the earth,
Earth like an eagle springs.

And Earth, their mutual mother,
Of centipedes and worms, earth's hellish progeny!
Earth's cold and sullen brooks;
She looked upon the sea, and skies, and earth;
that dwell Within the dædal earth;
And what were thou, and e., and stars, and sea,
distil its foison From the Earth's bosom chill;
Bid the Earth's plenty kill!
Shall blow Her clarion o'er the dreaming e.,
Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed,
The earth pours forth its piteous fruits,
The earth did never mean her foison
Earth herself Has sent from her maternal breast
And the wide earth's bosom green,
The earth under his feet—the springs, o'er earth and sea its blast of war,
when the Earth upsprings From slumber,
The fresh and radiant Earth.
and when the earth is fair
like an exhalation Steaming from earth,
A wind swept forth wrinkling the E. with frost:
Where the Earth reposes from spasms, Dew-stars gleam on earth,
build a new earth and sea,
whose nuptial bed Is earth's un pitying bosom,
Is mother e. A step-dame to her numerous sons,
The stars, the sea, the earth, the sky;
bosom of the earth gives suck To myriads,
Daisies, those pearly Arcturi of the earth,
The fresh Earth in new leaves drest,
And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast
From the earth thou springest
Of the Nymphs of earth or ocean;
Which rain into the bosom of the earth
Encircling the earth, air, stars and sea;
The cold earth slept below darkness fell from the awakened Earth—
Of this green earth with them for ever low;—
Sheds on the common earth,
did fling Dew on the earth,
Under the earth, and in the hollow rocks
Which whirl the earth in its diurnal round,
Too happy Earth! over thy face shall creep
(3) this world as distinct from other scenes of existence, but his clear Sprite Yet reigns o'er earth;
Making earth bare and veiling heaven,
thy scarf hadst thrown O'er the abandoned Earth,
whose names on Earth are dark
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;
The mystery and the majesty of Earth,
Which torture the tenants of earth;
Knew I not what delight was else on earth,
Lifts from this earth to the great father of all great God, Whose image upon earth a father is, commits Its glory on this earth,
Her name shall be the terror of the earth;
upon Earth All good shall droop and sicken,
Both Earth and Heaven, consenting arbiters,
There was no other rest for me on earth,
and heaven and earth, and time,
That ever came sorrowing upon the earth.
I, alas! Have lived but on this e. a few sad years
If thou hopest Mercy in heaven, shew justice upon earth:
Who was most pure and innocent on earth;
the small justice shew'd by Heaven and Earth
No God, no Heaven, no Earth in the void world;
Even the form which tortured me on earth,
was he not alone omnipotent On Earth, the heart's blood of all I love on earth your high interest in the subject earth, a sword, Not peace, upon the earth,
born the King of heaven and earth,
Until Heaven's kingdom shall descend on earth,
earth be like a shadow in the light Of heaven absorbed—
Which range through heaven and earth,
On the false earth's inconstancy?
in the battle of the sons of Earth,
Into the skull of this one-eyed son of Earth.
Earth's unsubstantial mimicry!
nor aught Of earth may image forth its majesty.
O happy Earth! reality of Heaven!
stands Immortal upon earth:
happiness And science dawn though late upon the earth;
Whilst mind unfettered o'er the earth extends earth, Even as a child beneath its mother's love, Earth's wonders are thine owa,
earth has seen Love's brightest roses on the scaffold
E.'s pride and meanness could not vanquish thee,
And from the earth departing
Thus did the Devil, thro' earth walking, moved beside it oo this earth,

And ever from that hour upon me lay vass't vells that the unreposing billows ever beat,
 Ah me! alas, pain, pain ever, for ever!
 Ever thus we watch and wake.
 Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new,
 Stand ever mantling with aerial dew,
 Where ever lies, on unceasing waves,
 life's ever tumultuous Ocean;
 and kept for ever wet The stems
 And ever down the prone vale,

(3) at any time, on any occasion, under any circumstances.
 One human step alone, has ever broken nor wind, nor bird, The soul ever stirred;
 forbidden ever to see himself as he is,
 Liked than any Vandyke ever made,
 Would they ever change their hue
 what can ever lure Maidens to leave
 You kiss me not ever,
 Too earnest and too sweet ever to be denied,
 no ill may harm Thy Cythna ever—
 Might not my heart its craviogs ever slake?
 A light around my steps which would not e. fade.
 O wretched ye if ever any were—
 That ever soared on fancy's wildest wing!
 Promising children as you ever saw—
 Were as silent as ever old Tmolus was,

Ever, n. all time, eternity.

Lost, lost, for ever lost,
 Rage and resound for ever—
 Mocking its moans, respond and roar for ever.
 which night and time have quenched for ever,
 over the world wanders for ever,
 Into one thought—one image—yes, for ever!
 thus For ever, day and night, we two were ne'er Parted,
 To burst the chains which life for ever flings
 As if the light of youth were not withdrawn for e.
 Forget that thou must wake for ever;
 Dream that God will damn for ever
 Where waterfalls around it leap for ever,
 Their food and their retreat for ever gone,
 for ever Rolls its loud waters to the ocean waves,
 they are lost for ever:
 Hope, love, doubt, desire, which consume him for ever.
 Ah woe! Alas! pain, pain ever, for ever!
 No cessation! Oh! must this last for ever!
 for e. play A losing game into each other's hands,
 like slow rain Falling for ever,
 First like hot gal, then dry for ever!
 Out of their mossy cells for ever burst;
 Of this green earth with them for ever low;—
 So they might live for ever in the light
 Fear not the tyrants will rule for ever,

tho' mine e. might speak A subtle mind and strong thoughts which make the moist eyes overbrim : —
 Thus, while with rapid lips and earnest eyes
 there were eyes to weep But ye have quenched swift shadows n'er mine eyes had shed.
 With quivering lips and humid eyes — and fair eyes, gifted With feelings caught those softest eyes in trembling tenderness.
 all mortal eyes were drawn,
 To men's astonished e. most clear and crystalline,
 and one did keep Its watchful eyes
 While calmly on the Sun he turned his diamond e.
 Whose stony eyes glared in the morning light, his eyes divine With a mild look and their eyes started with cracking stare, Over mine eyes its shadowy strings it spread the eyes whose deepest light Of love and sadness
 And kissing her fair eyes, said, her dark and deepening eyes,
 when the faint eyes swim Thro' tears
 But Cythna's eyes looked faint,
 With horny eyes upon each other's face,
 Mine eyes and my heart ached,
 like thee, dear love, its eyes were thine,
 her waning eyes were grown Weary my wan eyes in stern resolve I turned when thy dear eyes Shone thro' my sleep,
 To combat with my overflowing eyes, fond eyes are pining till they come,
 the misery Told in these faded eyes, and the mild command Of thy keen eyes — but now the eyes of one dear Maid
 With eyes the shrines of unawakened thought,
 These eyes, these lips, this blood, obscure and rutting eyes to steep In joy; —
 O! willingly, beloved, would these eyes,
 Her dark deep eyes, her lips
 In their green eyes a strange disease did glow, spread With the quick glance of eyes,
 tho' sleeping there With lidless eyes,
 In dreams of frenzy lapped his eyes;
 Their lurid eyes are on us!
 which roasts the eyes in the head,
 thro' which her eyes and forehead shone.
 shot forth From her far eyes intricate eyes Orb within orb, their eyes In stony expectation fixed;
 Shone in a hundred human eyes —
 Closed their faint eyes;
 his eyes are mild And calm, Steeps the faint eyes in darkness sweet and deep;
 her eyes Which swam with unshed tears,
 fixed its blue and heaving eyes
 And hid mine eyes in dust,
 Whence tears of endless sorrow dim these eyes?
 Oh! yes I will kiss thine eyes so fair,
 Mine eyes were dim with tears unshed;
 thy dark eyes threw Their soft persuasion on my brain,
 Over thine eyes so dark and shent:
 The Lady closed her eyes so bright.
 And wherever the Lady turned her eyes,
 And veiled her eyes; she then did hear while from the veil Of her dark eyes the dream did creep,
 as clear and true As any waking eyes can view.
 With your brown eyes bright and clear,
 All disguised, even to the eyes,
 Peeps idly into those Gorgonian eyes;
 Whilst eyes that change ere night
 Be your wounds like eyes
 from his convex eyes He sees fair things
 Behold their face with unaverted eyes?
 Will blind your wondering eyes.
 in the black pits Which once were eyes,
 With her bright eyes sat listening by his side,
 turn Those spirit-beaming eyes,
 His eyes turned up,
 Then Peter rubbed his eyes severe,
 His eyes grew like two stars for bliss:
 He spoke with mild yet unaverted eyes;
 in his eyes a cloud and a barren lay,
 The light of his frank eyes,
 and eyes whose arroy light
 her sphered eyes were brown, Behold with sleepless eyes?
 With Asia, drinking life from her loved eyes;
 My wings are crossed o'er mine eyes:
 Let me but look into his eyes!
 Dear sister, close thy plumes over thine eyes
 We will but laugh into thy lidless eyes?
 I close my tearless eyes, but see more clear
 Unwonted tears thro' to the horny eyes,
 These e. which burn thro' smiles that fade in tears,
 While my shut e. and cheek were pressed within Lift up thine eyes, And let me read thy dream.
 Whose shadow thro' art — lift thine eyes on me.
 And passion-parted lips, and keen, faint eyes,
 Oh, lift Thine eyes, that I may read
 Thine e. are like the deep, blue, boundless heaven
 But in the depth of those beloved eyes
 Its billows now sweep o'er mine eyes;

Fills the faint eyes with falling tears
 Others, with burning eyes, lean forth, and his eyes Which gazed on the undazzling sun,
 On eyes from which he kindled it anew to drink the liquid light Out of her eyes
 May I then hide my eyes in thy soft arms,
 Think ye by gazing on each other's eyes
 And your eyes are as love which is veiled not?
 beyond our eyes, The human love lies its two eyes are heavens Of liquid darkness, and brightest eyes are dull;
 Like the polar Paradise, Magnet-like of lover's eyes;
 Whose eyes have I gazed fondly on,
 Fixed her ethereal eyes,
 That floats before our eyes in wavering light,
 His resolute eyes were scorched to blindness
 Thrills with her lovely eyes, Fairer than any awakened eyes behold.
 and thine eyes replying To the hues of yon fair heaven.
 lifting at intervals His broad blue eyes on her;
 his pale eyes ran With tears,
 and make My wan eyes glitter for her sake,
 For long, long years These frozen eyes
 And search the depth of its fair eyes
 The tears which fell from her wan eyes
 With eyes askance, which sought to see
 On his sweet lips and liquid eyes,
 His soul seemed hovering in his eyes,
 Whose hardened eyes grew moist the while,
 Amid the dew of his tender eyes;
 On my faint eyes and limbs
 And tears from her brown eyes did stain
 And his keen eyes, glittering through mine,
 With silver locks and quick brown eyes,
 You cannot see his eyes,
 The flowers (as an infant's awakening eyes
 Told, whilst the morn kissed the sleep from her eyes
 Thy deep eyes, a double Planet, whatever face thou paintest In those eyes,
 Bitter tears, from his eyes gush'd silent and fast;
 Then his eyes wildly roll'd,
 Which then reflects its eyes and hair?
 What is the colour of your eyes and hair?
 Her eyes were black and lustreless and wan:
 Thine eyes glowed in the glare
 The life of their sweet eyes,
 Had their eyes banded;
 with banded eyes could pierce the sphere
 Were or had been eyes:—
 I half disdain'd mine eyes' desire to fill Mine eyes are sick of this perpetual flow and laughed from their dead eyes and in those eyes where once hope shone, the light was gone Out of her eyes.
 It would play with those eyes
 Not to look on those eyes,
 Around her wild eyes,
 to see, Thy soft eyes gazing tenderly,
 The lucent eyes, and the eternal smile,
 deep her eyes, as are Two openings of unfathomable night
 The magic circle of her voice and eyes
 Or on her form, and in her inmost eyes.
 but if eyes needs must weep,
 With open eyes, closed feet and folded palm.
 With folded wings and unawakened eyes:
 hne which slumber could extend Over its lips and e.,
 to her eyes The naked beauty of the soul lay bare,
 Yet look on me—take not thine eyes away,
 (3) looks, regards, glances.
 Let nothing meet her eyes
 Mark you what spirit sits in St. John's eyes?
 Whose dying eyes reproach not
 That your eyes ne'er had lied love in my face—their mild eyes can they fill With the false anger with anxious eyes fixed on the lingering day.
 Her eyes mingling with mine,
 and the pity of sweet eyes Gave strength
 With folded arms and steady eyes,

 Which free-born pigs regard with jealous eyes,
 (2) used of abstract things, as seasons, emotions, facult-

 Dimmed the aerial eyes that kindle day;
 O'er the fair front and radiant eyes of day,

 With new love within her eyes,
 Night with all thine eyes look down!
 Underneath day's azure eyes

That makes its eyes and veins o'erflow,— Veiling in awe her second-sighted eyes;
And day peers forth with her blank eyes;
Before the dazzled eyes of Error,
Fiercely look forth his awe-inspiring eyes,
morn did ope Its pale eyes then;
From eyes of quenchless hope and Philosophy did strain Her lidless e. for thee;
Religion veils her eyes;
Under the lightnings of thine unfamiliar eyes.
Jealousy's eyes are green, Scorpions are green,
Shadowing its eyes with green and golden wings,
Disarray thy dazzling eyes;

Nor gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
In duskie braids around the languid eyes of day;
Blind with thine hair the eyes of Day;

 Some few yet stolid around Gherardi and few who dare Win the desired communion—Ye few by whom my nature has been weighed such as it has been my doom To meet with few,

To few can she that warning vision shew,
 the many to the few belong,
 and few . . . endure its mortal dew
 Where some few feel such compassion
 Or fattening some few in two separate styes,
 And some few, like we know who, . . .
 and few Dug better friends, as few have ever been How few survive, how few are beating now!
 the few On whom my grace descends,
 Many are called, but few will I elect.
 Thou art fair, and few are fairer those leaves which for the eternal few the sacred few who could not tame

 The few surviving hours of the day,
 some few tumultuous years Will pass,
 There are few things that scandalize him not:
 Few flowers grow upon thy wintry way;
 Gleamed few and faint
 by the f. lines alone Which thro' her floating locks
 Left in the human world few mysteries;
 And very few, but kindly words he said,
 And the few sounds from that vast multitude Made silence more profound—ripening with its flame The few lone ears of corn;
 Why skin and booes, and some f. hairs for mortar.
 And after waiting some few days
 And the islets were few.
 And the stars are none, or few;—
 They have few pleasures in the world beside;

Fields, n. (1) open country, land generally, or enclosed spaces.

As long as skies are blue, and fields are green,
 And fields and marshes wide,
 Of templed cities and the smiling fields,
 Fresh ad warm from the fields of Spain, as he wanders, His fertile fields among,
 its fields and woods ever renew Upon your f., your gardens, and your house-tops, which shall not flow through streets and fields,
 which ever run Through the fresh fields—
 Turned back towards their fields of asphodel;—
 I am gone into the fields
 Shall clothe in light the fields and cities from mortal steel fell o'er the fields like rain.
 horsemen o'er the wide fields murdering sweep,
 With undivided fields of ripening corn,
 the blood which flowed over the fields,
 Among the wasted fields
 Peace in the desert fields and villages,
 O'er fields and towns, from sea to sea,
 The fields, the lakes, the forests, and the streams,
 The fields they tread look black and hoary
 Shall clothe the forests and the fields,
 Or walk thro' fields or cities while men sleep,

Fiend, n. a demon or malevolent spirit.
 Like the fierce fiend of a distempered dream,
 There was no fair fiend near him,
 might kill the fiend within you.
 Hell's most abandoned fiend
 But like a fiend appointed to chastise
 a corpse in which some fiend Were laid to sleep.
 But changed to a foul fiend through misery.
 This fiend, whose ghastly presence ever
 And every fiend of the Stygian night, the Fiend did revel In victory,
 the conquering Fiend did own.—
 The Fiend, whose name was Legion;
 with that F. of blood Renewed the doubtful war—
 The victor Fiend Omnipotent of yore,
 Fearing it was a fiend:
 For Panic, the pale fiend who charms Strength from a likeness of aught human Into a fiend,
 The fiend of madness, which had made its prey
 And the sea-eagle looked a fiend,
 But the dark fiend who with his iron pen
 Some said, I was a fiend from my weird cave, did shine Like a fiend's hope
 Or a shivering fiend that thirsting for sin,
 It was not a fiend from the regions of hell
 a clogging fiend which clenched him Fiend, I defy thee! with a calm, fixed mind, with savage joy Lowered like a fiend, the pityless fiend, With all his winds
 A vengeful, pityless, and almighty fiend,
 Which every fiend can make his prey at will.
 Religion! but for thee, prolific fiend,
 the mad fiend Thy wickedness had pictured,
 And broken altars of the almighty fiend,
 built temples for the omnipotent fiend,
 When the fiend would change to a lady fair!

Fiends, n. pl. of Fiend.

the fiends will shake Thine arches like God's angel ministered upon By fiends ;
Where gods and fiends in worship bend,
or Erebus With all its banded fiends
But it lulls in oblivion the fiends of despair,
Fat as the fiends that feed on blood,
This day fiends give to revelry,
And war's mad fiends the scene environ,
To one whom fiends enthral, this voice to me ;
from thine hell of fiends and flame,
Feasting like fiends upon the infidel dead,
fiends and chasms of fire had dispossess
Or the laughter of fiends when they howl
A scoff of impious pride from fiends impure ;
And goading him, like fiends,
as the fiends Which wake and feed Chimæra and thron Spinx, subtlet of fiends
Or what more subtle, foul, or savage fiends
Call up the fiends.
Darest thou observe how the fiends torture him ?
Some look behind, as fiends pursued them there,
Oh ! they were fiends .

Fiend, adj. (1) of animated beings, ferocious, cruel, violent.

I know two dull, fiend outlaws,
The Cyclops' eye so fiery fiend ?
The fiend beasts of the woods
Be the fortune of our fiend oppressors weighed
And four fiend dogs watched there, unanimous as men.
Take these and the fiend oxen, Maia's child—
Over the sea with that fiend Serpent go ?
Fearless, and fiend, and hard as beasts of blood, like a beast Most fiend and beauteous nplited from the head Of some fiend Mænad,
So think their fiend successors,
This is defeat, fiend king, not victory.
Which chase denial From the fiend savage, who went before fiend and obscene.

(2) of passions, emotions, &c., ardent, vehement, ferocious, extreme.

That fiend desire had faded in my heart,
Between the sly, fiend, wild regard of guilt,
Keep the fiend spirit of the hour at bay,
Napoleon's fiend spirit rolled,
O Comet beautiful and fiend,
Be whelmed in the fiend ebb :—
When the fiend shout of Allah-illa-Allah !
whose fiend delight Is thunder—
In smiles or frowns their fiend disquietude, their fiend despair might nought avail
a fiend and monstros gladness
Till Love even from fiend Desire it bought,
Again fiend torments, such as demons know,
Oh ! now I die—but still is death's fiend pain—
Ruining its chaos—a fiend breath
Beneath the fiend omnipotence of Jove, with fiend dread Grew pale,
a thirst of fiend fever,
Suddenly fiend confusion fell from heaven
And in their desert hearts fiend wants he sent,
Yet burns towards heaven with fiend reproach,
The fiend despair and hate which kept Untameable and fleet and fiend as fire,
The million with fiend song that fiend spirit, whose unholy leisure

(3) of natural objects and forces, violent, intense.

With fiend gusts and precipitating force,
Higher and higher still their fiend necks writhed fiend fire And yon ancestral cauldron,
By the fiend blast's unconquerable stress.
Mingling fiend thunders and sulphurous gleams,
The strength of the fiend flame was breathed around :
the storm Pursued it with fiend blasts,
and their fiend roar to hear Amid the calm :
whirlwind, whose fiend blasts the waves and clouds confound,
Mock the fiend peal with beighings :—
To those fiend flames
Pour the fiend tide around this lonely form,
Yet when the fiend swell of the tempest is raving,
O'er him the fiend bolts of avenging heaven
Like one fiend cloud over a waste of waves
Be thou, spirit fiend, My spirit !
With loud and fiend, but most harmonious roar,
A fiend south blast tear through the darkened sky,
Guides the fiend whirlwind,
which heaven's fiend flame Had scathed
And the fiend storm did swell
O'er his form the fiend swell of the tempest is raving ;
Against the Serchio's torrent fiend,
Into columns fiend and bright,
as is the sun in his fiend youth,
flickering in ribbons within the fiend gale.
And the fiend winds are sinking with weary wings
when the fiend war Of wintry winds Clove the fiend streams
