NIGERIA – Increased violence

- A Boko Haram suicide bomber killed yesterday 47 students and injured 79 in northeast Nigeria in one of the worst attacks against schools with a so-called Western curriculum.
- The massacre came a day after the release of a new Boko Haram video in which the militant Islamist group's leader, Abubakar Shekau, again rejected Nigerian government claims of ceasefire and peace talks.
- The attack follows a series of previous assaults carried out by Boko Haram against schools.
- The Boko Haram campaign of violence is continuing unabated and the group has seized at least two dozen towns and villages in recent months with the government being unable to control the region, causing massive displacement within Nigeria with a spill-over effect to the neighbouring countries.
