writings and preachings for the necessary instruction and edification of such, as hunger and seeke after the perfect knowledge and incstimable glorie which is in Christ Iesu, to the comfort and saluation of their soules.

Philip. 3. 8. 9.

I thinke all thinges but losse for the excellencie of the knowledge of Christ Iesus my Lord, for whom I haue counted all thinges losse, and doe judge them but vile, that I may winne Christ, and be found in him, not having myne owne righte-ousnes, which is of the lawe, but that which is through the faith of Christ, even the righteousnes which is of God through faith.

TO

TO THE RIGHT WOR-
SHIPFULL SYR THOMAS HEN-NEAGE KNIGHT, TREASURER OF HER MAiesties priuie chamber, VV. GACE wisheth peace and saluation in Christ.

Onsydering (right VVorshipfull) that saying of Dauid alleged by the Apostle Paul, that there is none that understandeth, none that seeketh after God; that all are gone out of the vway and become unprofitable: methinkes it doth line-ly set forth the blindnesse of mans understanding, the vwickednesse of his vwill, and his peruersnes and vhabilitie unto that vwhich is good. VVhereof if vve had not many testimonies of Scripture, yet common experience vvere able to confirme the same, vwhen vve daily see men so carefull to liue, and so carelesse to liue vwell. Howbeit this is no meruell: for as a tree vwhose roote is rotten and infected. vwith venomous sappe, bringeth forth none but corrupt and naughty frute: so from mans hart vwhich is corrupt and infected. vwith the venom of sinne, can proceede nothing that is good.

Now mans understanding being blinde, he is not able of himselfe to attaine to the knowldege of God; and consequently vwithout some other meanes or helpe can not be sauued: for this, as our Saviour in the Gospell sayth, is life euerlasting, to know vone onely true God, and him vwhom he hath sent Jesus Christ. Againe, mans vwill being corrupt, he is not able to serue God as his dutie requireth, as to honour him as his Lord, to obey him as his father, to trust in him as his Protector and preseruer, to be thankefull to him for his infinite benefites, &c. VVherefore leste man being ignorant of God should be excluded from saluation, or lest through the vwickednes of his vwill and inclination to euill, he should dishonour so high a Lord, disobey so good a father, distrust so carefull a preseruer, and be unthankfull to so gracious a giner, vwho doth not see how requisite and needfull it is, that he should by good instructions be brought to the knowldege of the Lorde God, and by godly exhortations and admonitions be reclaimed from his vicked vways to the performance of his dutie? Now forasmuch as God hath in his vword reuealed so much of him selfe as is expedient for man to know, & hath therein also prescribed that maner of seruing him vvhoso he accepteth, man must out of it learne the true knowldege and right seruice of God, and therefore most necessary it is that this vword be preached & taught, that thereby man may learne to know God, and truely to vvorship & serue him being knowne. So shall his minde be enlightened vwith diuine knowldege, and his vwill reformed according to Gods vvil, so shall this vword be a lanterne vnto his feete, and a light vnto his paths, vvhoso he may be directed in al his vways. But (alas) this is a thing to be lamented, that the haruest is great, but the labourers are few. For among them vvhich supply the places of labourers in the Lordes haruest, some there be vwho doe vwith diligence discharge their dutie, many moe there are, vwho albeit they be able, yet doe eyther quite neglect it, or very scleiderly execute it, but greatest is the number of them, vwho for lacke of skil & knowldege are not able at all to performe it. VVherefore there is great neede to pray the Lord of the haruest, that he vwill send forth labourers into his haruest, vvhoso many moe then doe may receiue the Gospell of Christ Iesus even to the saluation of their their soules.

The premisses well vveyed, I thinke (right VVorshipfull) there may a sufficient reason be gathered, vvhyl I did purpose the publishing of these Sermons of D. Martin Luther in our vulgar tongue, and vvhyl at the last I haue by some labour and paynes brought the sayd purposed publishing to passe. I vvas in deede at the first procured thereunto by a learned Father of this lande, vvhose vvorde and iudgement I make no small account of, but afterward entring into deeper consideration of the matter, and vveying on the one side the great ignorance of many eu'en in matters of saluation, together vwith the dayly dishonouring of God by ungodly life: and on the other side the diuine doctrine and most vvholsom exhortations vvhich these Sermons conteine, I vvas more forcibly stirred up thereunto, and thought that the painefull perusing of them, and frutefull followvng of that vvhoroof they entreat, vwould be a souereigne salve to help to cure such daungerous diseases. For by them may they learne to know vone onely true God, and vwhom he hath sent Iesus Christ; and the infinit riches vvhich are comprised in him, and offered vnto vs through him of God his Father: that he humbled him selfe to exalt vs, that he became a seruaunt to set vs at libertie, that he vvas emponerished to make vs rich, that he dyed for our sinnes, & rose again for our iustification, that through his meanes mercie hath swalowved vp miserie, and bounty hath ouercome all euill, finally that vwithout him there is no ioy nor consolation, no peace nor quietnes, no felicitie nor saluation, but that he is the onely meane's by vvhich all good thinges are attained: so that they vwhich enjoy him receiuue not one gift alone, as vwith Salomon vvisedom, vwith Samson strength, vwith Job patience, vwith Paule zeale, &c: but for pouertie they receiuue riches, for vweakenes strength, for folly vvisedom, for seruitude freedom, for grieve ioy, for sinne righteousnes, for death life, yea all good thinges vwhit-

Wherfore if the fauful man be pressed vwith pouertie, he may here learne that by Christ he is adopted to be the Sonne of God, and so may be comforted, saying to him selfe: How can he be poore vwhich hath God to his Father? vwho both is able to giue all thinges necessary, for his is the earth and all that therein is, and also vwill giue the same, because he is most louing and gracious to his children. Againe, if he feele in himselfe vweaknes, he may learne here that he is not able of him selfe to attaine unto strength, but that it is the gift of Christ, vwho strengtheneth such as beleue in him, & so may be stirred vp by harty prayer to aske the same of him, that he vwill vouchsafe by his holy spirit to strengthen and confirme him, that he may be able to performe that by grace, vwhich by nature and of him selfe he shall never be able to doe: as mightely to subdue the rebellious flesh, strongly to resist, and at the last valiauntly to ouercome the tentations of Satan, patiently to beare the troubles of the vworld, and constantly to contemne the allurements of the same. Moreouer, if he thirst after diuine and heauenly vvisedom, (vwhich is to know vGod aright, and those thinges that are necessary to be known vne to the attaining of salvation) he may finde here largely and lively set forth, that Christ came his Fathers Embassadour and Messenger to men, that by him they might be brought to the right know vledge of God, and into all truth, so that by him vwe are enlightened vwith the know vledge of God, by him vwe are instructed in all truth, and consequently by him vwe obtaine diuine and heauenly vvisedom. Here also shall he learne that Christ vwas made under the lawe, that he might redeeme them vwhich vvere in bondage vnder the lawe, & of seruile bondmen make them free sonnes, euuen the children of God.

Furthermore, if grieve and heauines come upon him, he is here taught vwhere true joy may be had, euuen in Christ

Iesus

DEDICATORIE.

Iesus alone, that in him onely he may fynde sure comfort, sovereigne medicines, present remedie, true ioy of heart and quietnes of conscience. Finally, vwhereas vve are synnefull, and haue by our synnes iustly deserued Gods eternall vvrath and most heauie vengeance, he shall here learne that Christ hath payed the ransome for our synnes, and pacified Gods most grieuous vvrath and displeasure iustly conceiued against vs.
And because it is not sufficient that due satisfaction be made for synnes, and Gods vvrath appeased, but vve must also ap-peare righteous before God, it is here shewved, that as by one mans disobedience many vvere made synners, so by the obedience of one, namely of Iesus Christ, as many as beleue in him shalbe made righteous, inasmuch as his righteousness is imputed to them as their owne, vwhereby they appeare perfектly righteous before God, and are accepted of him: so that vwhereas they had of themselues deserued eternall death, they are through Christ accounted vvorthe of euerlasting life. But vwhat doe I goe about to rehearse the infinite treasures vwhich the faithfull enjoy through Christ? it shall be sufficient to conclude vwith the Apostle Paule, and say: If God spared not his owne Sonne, but gaue him for vs all to death, how vshall he not vwith him giue vs all thinges also?

Now forasmuch as these thinges, and the right meanes to attaine unto them, are in these Sermons of that most learned Diuine Martin Luther most learnedly, yea euен diuine-ly set forth, they may vndoubtedly be a singular meane, not onely to instruct them vwhich be ignorant in matters of sal-uation, but also to increase and confirme the knowlledge of such, as haue already vwell profited in Christian religion.
Houbeit there is annexed hereunto sound and absolute doctrine concerning good vvorkes and godly conuersation, as being most necessary to be of all Christians perfectly knowyne, and effectually followved. For Christians through Christ being become the Sonnes of God, hou vimeete, yea hou abominable a thinge is it that they should resemble Satan in their doinges? being now made the members of Christ, how detestable a thinge is it that they should be instruments of iniquitie? being now the temple of the holy Ghost, how beastly a thinge were it to defyle the same with the filthines of synne? Finally having received so many and so great benefites of God through Christ, how wicked and shame-full a thinge should it be, to be unthankefull to so gracious a God, to be disobedient to so louing a Father, in any wise to displease so mercifull a Sauour? But it shalbe needelesse much to stand upon this point, seeing it is not unknowune to the faithfull with how great endeavour they ought to auoyde that which is euill, and embrace that which is good, and therefore shall sincere & perfect doctrine concerning good worfkes be unto them no lesse commodious and profitable, then needfull and necessarie.

For the causes aboue specified especially among other, I haue (right worshipfull) though not finely, yet faithfully translated these Sermons into our vulgar tounge, and haue done myne endeavour for the publishing of the same, which I doe humbly dedicate to your worshipships protection, by your zealous godlines and godly zeale chiefly moued thereunto, whereby I am induced to thinke that you will well accept of them. For as the godly do with Dauid delight in the Arke of the Couenant, in the Tabernacle of the Lord, in the holie Mount Sion, that is, in the Church of God: so doe they with the same Dauid desyre the building of this house of God, the florishing of this vine, the peace and prosperitie of this heauenly Ierusalem, and therefore that which is a meane and furtherance hereunto they doe not onely loue and like, but also hiely esteeme, and hartily praye for. Wherefore (right worshipfull) I thinke it altogether superfluous to goe about with wordes to procure your well liking and accepting of these Sermons, forasmuch as they tend onely to

this ende, that the Church of God may by them be edified, as in the premisses is of me declared. VVhereas in translating them I haue vsed a plaine kynde of stile (yet such as suffi- ciently expresseth the meaning of the author) and not stu- died for curious vvordes & eloquent phrases, the cause there- of is, for that I preferre plainnesse vvith profit, before much curiositie vvith smaller commoditie, so that I nothinge at all feare that in this respect they shalbe misliked of the godly, vvhose misliking onely I endeuour to auoide.

Thus (as it seemes vnto me) hauing intreated sufficient- ly of those thinges vvhich I thought pertinent to my pre- sent purpose, I doe here conclude, desyring the Lord God, that he vwill by his holy Spirit alvayes governe and direct you in the true obedience of his blessed vvorde, to the glorie of his diuine Name, to the profit of your neighbours, and comfort of your conscience, so shall you assuredly haue pro- sperous successe in all your affayres, and at the last obtaine euerlasting ioyes and endlesse felicitie, by the onely meanes of Christ Iesus our Sauour.

Your Worships humbly at com-

AN ADMONITION TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

EOR the commendation of this worke, and the Author thereof, there shall not neede I trust at this present any great discourse to be made, forasmuch as so many good bookeſ of the ſame writer be already ſet abroad, whereby may ſufficiently be conieuctured what is to be thought of this alſo. Againe because the worke it ſelue is ſuch, conteining ſuch matter of heauenly conſolation, that without any further commendation of other, it yeldeth cauſe ſufficient to commend it ſelue. Onely this then remaineth, to intreat and exhort the reader, but to perufe & reade the ſame, who in ſo doing ſhall fynde I doubt not, neither to lacke great cauſe in vs to ſet forth theſe Sermons, nor leſſe neceſſitie in the readers to bestow paines in peruſing and reading them, for the dignitie of the matter, and ſingular frute therein to be found. For what more worthye matter can be, then to ſet forth Christ in his right glorie, in his full riches and roiall eſtate to the hearts and ſoules of men, eſpecially ſuch as are heauie laden and diſtressed in ſpirit? what more comfortable hearinge, or doctrine more true, then of forgiuenes and remiſſion of synnes, ſo graciously purchased, ſo freely offered by our Sauour, ſo cleerely preached by his minifters? or what riches more excellent, then faith fixed in Christ, and hope ſtabliſhed in the promiſes of life? or what ſtudie more frutefull, then to ſeeke the kingdome of God? where the frute of all other studies decayeth and hath his ende, the frute of this study abydeth for euer. And therefore not without cause we be so willed by our Sauiour him selfe, first to seeke for this kingdoime and righteousnes thereof, promising withall in an other place, that he which seeketh shall fynde. In the seeking of which kingdom two special notes we haue to learn and search; first the glorie & grace of the King, secondly the welth and felicitie of the subiects. In which two partes as the whole summe of all our spirituall comfort most principally consisteth, groünded in the holy Scriptures: so of alle expositors of the same Scriptures, I know none or fewe, in these our dayes, more liuely to open these comforts vnto vs out of Gods worde, then this Doctor and Preacher of these Sermons here following: which as he hath done most effectually first in his owne tonge to his contrypeople, then in Latin to the learned: so this translator hath no lesse plainly and faithfully englished the same for the commoditie and vse of our contryfolke of England. By whose meanes and industrie this vantage we haue now gayned, that we haue gotten vnto vs one good preacher in England more then we had before, to the comfort and edification of all such as be disposed to read and learne. So that in such townes and villages, wherein before were mute ministers, κωφὴ προσωπα, this Preacher now may supplie the lacke, and there be receiued as their person, if they please, preaching now in their owne speech vnto them, and putting them to no charges of any tythes. And in other places where more plentie of learned teachers is, yet notwithstanding no hurt shall come to admit this stranger as a coadiutor, or fellowhelper vnto them. A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, OF THE NATIVITIE OF CHRIST.

Verse. 1.

Nd it came to passe in those daies, that there came a decree from Augustus Cesar, that all the world should be taxed.

2. (This firste taxing was made, when Cyrenius was gouernour of Syria.)

3. Therefore went all to be taxed euery man to his owne citie.

4. And Ioseph also went vp from Galile out of a citie called Nazareth, into Iudea, vnto the citie of Dauid, which is called Bethlehem (because he was of the house and linage of Dauid,)

5. To be taxed with Marie, that was giuen him to wife, which was with childe.

6. And so it was, that while they were there, the dayes were accomplished that she shoulde be deliuered,

7. And she brought forth her first begottē sonne, and wrapped him in swadling clothes, & layed him in a manger, because there was no roome for them in the Inne.

8. And there were in the same countrey shepe-

- heards, abiding in the field, and watching their flocke by night.
9. And loe, the Angell of the Lord came vpon them, and the glory of the Lorde shone abou them, and they were sore afayd.
10. Then the Angel sayd vnto them, Be not afraid: for beholde, I bring you glad tydinges of great ioy, that shall be to all people.
11. That is, that vnto you is borne this day in the citie of Dauid, a Sauiour, which is Christ the Lord.
12. And this shall be a signe to you: ye shall finde the babe swadled and layd in a maunger.
13. And straight way there was with the Angella multitude of heauenly souldiers praysing God, and saying:
14. Glorie be to God on high, and peace in earth, and towards men good will.

The summe of this text.

WHereas the Euangelist here describeth the time and place of the nativitie of Christ, first herein is required faith of vs, to witte, that we beleue this to be the same Christ, of whom these things be recorded. Moreover the house and stocke of Dauid is herein notified and shewed forth, whereof our Messias should rise.

2 The shepheardeſ which are here mentioned, are the firſte frutes of thofe Jewes, which come unto Christ, as the Wifemen from the Eaſt are the firſte frutes of the Gentiles, and the innocent infants of all them, which muſt beare the crosse for Christes ſake.

3 Whereas the Angel of the Lord appeareth to the ſhepheardeſ in great glory, it ſignifieth, that the Goffell commeth vnto men with the glory of God. Firſt in deede it maketh vs afraide, for it condemneth our darkenes and whatſoever is in vs, vntill we heare the comfort, which is here declared vnto the ſhepheardeſ in theſe comfortable ble wordes: Be not afraide, behold, I bring you tidinges of great ioy, which shall be to all people, because vnto you is borne this day a Sauiour, which is Christ the Lord.

4 Moreover, whereas one Angell first preacheth vnto the shepheheards, that noteth to vs the Prince of all preachers Christ him selfe. Secondly, whereas many Angells are gathered together, it signifieth the multitude of preachers, who all say with one mouth: Glorye be to God, and peace unto men.

5 The frute and profit wherfore Christ tooke flesh vpon him, is here expressed to be Euangelicall peace & good will to men, wherof the hymne of the Angells maketh mention: Glory be to God on high, and in earth peace, good will towards men.

The exposition of the text.

E haue often tymes heard this historie before, and must heare it still both this yeare, and every yeare, though to flug-gish & drousie Christians, that are soone weary and cloyed with good things, the same peraduenture may seeme tedious. But to them that are endued with true faith, it alwaises commeth againe as newe. For the holy Ghost can speake so diuersly of one thing, that to them which be his, it alwayes seemeth newe. Moreover we might speake at large of this historie, for it is very full of matter, if we shoulde not want tyme, and if it were not perillous least we shoulde somewhere straye from the purpose: Neuertheles we will entreate somewhat thereof, as God shall permit. We haue already heard in the text, how the Angell him selfe expresseth all this historie, giuing vs to understand, that the same is published for our cause: and that the frute thereof doth rebounde and appertaine to vs onely, and is wrought to our saluation. And therefore the Angell speaking to the shepheheards, sayth in these wordes: Be not afraide, behold, I bringe you tidinges of great ioy which shall be vnto all people, that is, that vnto you is borne this day in the city of Dauid a Sauiour, which Christ came is Christ the Lorde. Here is declared first, that his nativitie doth not for his pertaine vnto vs, when he sayth: vnto you is borne a Sauiour. owne cause, For the Lord Christ came not for his owne cause onely, but that but to worke he might helpe and succour vs. Wherefore let vs most diligent- our salvation ly endeavour, that we believe the Angell, and we shall enioy the whole benefit. I haue heretofore oftentimes sayd, that the Go- spell preacheth nothing else but faith, that the Angell also here- doth, and this must all preachers doe, otherwise they be not true ministers. For the Angell was here a beginning and example to all preachers. Now we must in this place speake of a double na- tivitie, namely of our owne and of Christes. But before I begin to entreat hereof, I will handle the historye briefly, that ye may lay it vp in your hart, and may be partakers of the ioy which the Angell here bringeth. First therefore the Euangelist sayth:

And it came to passe in those dayes, that there came a decree from Augustus Cæsar, that all the world should be taxed. This first taxing was made when Cyrenius was gouernour of Syria. Therefore went all to be taxed every man to his owne citie.

The time of fy coming of the Messi-as foretold by the Patriarch Jacob.
Gen.49.10.

We know right wel, that the Jewes had a promise made of the Patriarch Jacob, that a Prince, lawgiuer or ruler, of the house of Juda, should not be wanting in Judea, vntill the Messias which was promised them did come. For the wordes of Jacob to Juda are playne after this sort: The scepter shall not depart from Juda, & a law giuer from betwene his feete, vntill Silo come. Now at this time the case was so, that the Romanes possessed Judea, and had set a Lieutenant ouer it, whom the Euangelist here calleth Cyrenius. The Jewes before for a long tyme had vsed prie- stes for Kinges, when as the Maccabees had obtayned the king- dom, so that the dominion of the house of Juda was already ta- ken away and suppressed, neither was there any Prince or ru- ler, of the stocke and blood of Juda, gouernour ouer the people. But that Christ or the Messias shoude nowe come, that was a great signe, that the prophecie at that tyme especially might be fulfilled. Wherefore the Euangelist sayth here, that at the tyme when Christ was borne, Augustus Cesar had set a Lieutenant ouer Judea, vnder whom the Jewes shoule offer them selues to be taxed. As if he sayd: Euen at that tyme at which he shoule be borne, he is borne. All that liued vnder the Romane Emperour were were compelled to pay taxe, for a testimonie that they were subject vnto him. This the Jewes knew, but they did not understand the Prophecie. Jacob had sayd thus: The scepter shal not depart from Iuda, and a lawgiver from betwene his feete, vntill Silo come: That is, a Prince and ruler of the stocke of Iuda shall not be wanting in Iudea, vntil Christ come. Jacob did sufficiently shewe in these wordes, that he shoulde be wanting at the coming of Christ. Moreouer, whereas they understood it so, as though such a Silo shoulde come, as shoulde beare rule with the sword, it is a false understanding thereof, neither can it be gathered out of that text. For he sayth thus, that at the comming of Christ the temporall kingdome of the Jewes shoulde ende. So Luke also here sheweth that very time, when it behoued this to be done. It followeth moreouer in the text:

And Joseph also went vp from Galile out of a citie called Nazareth, into Iudea, vnto the citie of Dauid, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was of the house and linage of Dauid) to be taxed with Marie that was giuen him to wife, which was vith childe.

Joseph also and Marie obeyed this commandement of Caesar, and submitted them selues as other honest and obedient men, and went to Bethlehem, which was the chiese and head citie of the house of Iuda, and suffered them selues to be taxed. Marie, inasmuch as she was with childe, & neare her deliuerie, might haue excused her selfe, that she shoulde not take this iorney vpon her, but she doth not so, they will not be an offence to others. Moreouer it ought thus to be that they shoulde come to Bethlehem, because of the prophecie of the Prophet Micheas chap. 5. which foretolde that Christ shoulde be borne in Bethlehem of Iuda. Marke I pray you, how that taxe must serue hereunto, which neither Caesar nor his Lieuetenant did knowe: Thus God dealeth in his woikes, in which he vseth the meanes of heathen and euill men, whereby he may make vs, which are miserable & wretched men, and so deepeley drowned in flesh and blood, certaine of our faith, which the Euangelist Luke here specially setteth forth, inasmuch as he elssoones declareth in the historie, the places and times, least that we shoulde be deceived concerning this Christ. The maner of his birth the Euangelist sheweth moreouer, saying:

And so it was, that while they were there, the dayes were accomplished, that she should be deliuered: and she brought forth her first begotten sonne, and wrapped him in swadling clothes, & layd him in a manger, because there was no roome for them in the Inne.

Let it nothing moue vs, or be any offence vnto vs, that the Lorde commeth into the wold in so great pouertie and miserie. For it ought to be a great ioy and comfort vnto vs, rather then in any wise to discomfort & discourage vs. It may seeme a straunge thing, and hard and strait dealing, that a Virgin which was new maried, and that yeare ioyned to her hus band, might not be permitted to bryng forth her childe at Nazareth in her owne house, but was enforced in pooze estate to goe almost thzee daies iorney being great with child? And when she came at her iorneys end, she had not so much place in the Inne, as that she might be deliuered in some parlour or chamber. The Inne being full, there was none that would vouchsafe to giue place to this woman being great with childe, that she might haue the vse of their chamber, but she was enforced to go into a stable, that there she mische bryng forth the Creator of all creatures. Here may be plainly perceiued what is the knowledge and wisdom of the wold concerning diuine matters, namely, that it is blinde, and vaine in understanding, that it seeth not the works of God, and if it be so that it seeth them, that it knoweth not what they meane.

against world ly miserie &
contempt.

Henceof let vs learne, not to be moued or discouraged, if we be pooze and miserable, and forsaken of the wold, for we haue here great comfort. If Christ the maker of all thinges, with his beloued mother, was cast into so great miserie, and so contemned of the wold, why may not the same also come vnto vs? or why should not we being in miserie, and compassed about with all calamities, beare them patiently, yea if God will at any time kill vs with aduersitie and distres? But this thing is to be lamented, that we doe exclude such an example from our eyes, but much farther from our hart. We should easily suffer aduersitie and contempt, if so be that we beleued, and had a sure trust and confidence in God, when as we see that the Lord Christ suffered this miserie, pouertie, and calamite. Wherefore this is first thoroughly to be be marked and considered of vs, how Christ came into the world in so great pouertie, and found not so much as one in so great a citie, which was dutifull and beneficial toward him. Thus this nativitie was receiued in the earth, ouer which notwithstanding all the heauenly souldiers did exceedingly reioyce, as it followeth:

And there were in the same contrey shepheards, abiding in the field and watching their flocke by night. And loe, the Angel of the Lorde came vpon them, and the glory of the Lorde shone about them, and they were sore afraide.

Here is declared, how God in heauen setteth forth this nativitie, which the wold contemneth, yea knoweth not, neither seeth. This ioy is so great in heauen, that it can not be contained there: in, but beth forth, that it may be declared and communicated to the wold. For the Angell here bringeth tydings of great ioy to the shepheardes, which to them is great comfort, which the wold notwithstanding contemneth and rejecteth, but is of the Angells had in greate admiration, yea and if they might, they would with greater prayses, and more goodly pompe haue sette forth so wonderful a thinge. But it was not meete it shold be so. For God would set forth an example in this his Sonne, that the ostentacio & gloryng of the wold might at the last be negleced, and that it might be knowne what the wold is. Mans reason semeth alwayes very wise vnto it selfe, it alwayes looketh vnto thinges that are aloft, it considereth onely high matters, it humbleth not it selfe to those thinges that are below. This now is an excellent comfort, that the Angels and all the heauenly souldiers doe esteeme him so much, whom the wold contemneth, whereby we may learne that albeit we be outcasts in the wold, there be notwithstanding that haue regard and care of vs. Howbeit we do hardly beleue this, we doe not fasten our eyes thereupon, but looke vnto great, precious, and high thinges, according to the ex ample of the wold, and are dismayed, as soone as a litle misfor tune commeth, neither thinking nor knowing, if any aduersity assaileth vs, that it is done by the will of God. Beleue thou this vndoubtedly, if it had not so pleased God, he would not haue suffered this his heloued sonne to be layd in a manger, he would not haue permitted him to be borne in so great pouertie, miserie, and contempne. But the poorer and moxe despised that he is before the world, so much greater care and regard God and all the heauenly souldiers haue of him, so that we may conceiue comfort hereby, and beleue assuredly, that the more we are reiecte of the world, the more we are esteemed before God.

The blind & vaine deuotion of many

Thou mayst finde many which doe here thinke thus, and are touched with such deuotion as this: O, if I had bene there then, with howe great diligence woulde I haue serued this childe and done for him? yea I woulde haue washed euен his swadling clothes. O, if I had bene so happy as the shepheards, that I also might haue seene the Lord lying in a maunger. Nowe in deede thou wouldest be ready to doe those duties, when thou knowest Christ to be so high and noble. Surely thou wouldest haue bene as slacke in thy dutie at that time as the Citizens of Bethlehem were. Thou revoluest in thy mind childish and altogether foolish cogitations. Why doost thou not performe the like duties nowe? Behold Christ walking before thee in thy neighbour, do for him, & bestowe benefits vpon him, whatsoeuer thou shalt bestow vpon thy neighbour which is needy and destitute of helpe, that thou shalt bestow vpon Christ him selfe, as he shall say in the last day

Matt. 25.40 to the elect: VVhatsoever ye haue done to one of the least of these my brethren, ye haue done it to me. Wherfore it is a vaine and very foolish thing to admist such childish cogitations. Let vs therefore at the last open our eyes, let vs not heare examples of so great importance in vaine, otherwise the time will come when we shall be grieuously punished. But with what wordes did the Angell speake vnto the shepheards? the Euangelist sayth after this sort:

Then the Angell sayd vnto them; Be not afraid: for behold, I bring you glad tidings of great ioy, that shall be to all people, that is, that vnto you is borne this day in the citie of Dauid, a Saviour, vvhich is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a signe to you: Ye shall find the babe swadled, and layd in a mannger.

Learne by these wordes of the Angell, how to vse rightly the nativitie of þ Lord Christ, neither let it suffice you to heare them ouely. A great treasure hidden in the earth or some other where, is to no vse, but if it be opened, and occupied, then is it profitable and precious. Wherfore giue heede hereunto, that thou mayst vse this nativitie, otherwise it shal be no commodtie and comfort vnto vnto thee. For whereas thou knowest the bare historie onely, to write, what came to passe in his nativitie, and that he was borne needy and poore, thou shal take no greater commodicie hereby, then if thou heare a historie written of the king of Fraunce, or of some other puissant Prince, whereby no commodicie or comfort shal come vnto thee.

But how must we vse this nativitie righly and with frute? ¶ What it is to uen as I haue sayd, if we be thus perswaded that he was borne vse the nativitie vs, that his nativitie is ours. Our nativitie is such, that it al. uitie of christ together aboundeth with sinne, as David sayth Psal. 51: Behold aright. I was shapen in wickednes, & in sinne hath my mother conceiued me. As if he would say: here is nothing but sinne, as well in the conception as in the birth, whatsoeuer I bring with me from my mothers wombe, it is wholly damnable, it is due to death, Satan, & hell. ¶ Forasmuch then as our nativitie, skin & heare are defiled, what good can come therof? This is our ticle which we haue receiued from Adam, in this one thing we may glory and in nothing else at all, namely, that euery infant that is borne into this world, is wholly in the power of sinne, death, Satan, hel, and eternall damnation: our nativitie is altogether miserable, and on euery side to be lamented. To deliuere vs from this nativitie, God sent an other nativitie, which it behoued to be pure & without all spot, that it might make this vncleane & sinnesfull nativitie pure. This is that nativitie of the Lord Christ his onely begotten sonne. Wherfore he woulde not haue him borne of flesh & blood infected with synne, but it behoued that he shoulde be borne of a pure Virgine: He suffered no spot at all of sinne in his flesh, but replemished it with the holy Ghost, & permitted nothing to sticke therein, but those miseries which procede of flesh and blood, as hunger, chirst, aduersarie, and death, sinne excepted, as the Epistle to the Heb.chap.4.witnesseth, that he was in all things tempted in like sort, yet without sinne. This is that most excellene thing, which the Lord our God hath doone for vs, whereof none taketh any frute, but he that beleueth. And none will easily beleue this, but he that feeleth of what sorte his owne nativitie is. He that hath no feeling of his owne miserie, careth not of this nativitie of Christ. But if we feele our miserie, it followeth forthwith that we cry with the Prophet David and say: Behold I was shapen in wickednes, and in sinne hath my mother conceiued

When death shall come vpon vs, and our heart shalbe touched with anguish & grief, the at the last it may be, that we would cast of this happy & pure natiuitie, and will exceedingly thirst after it to enjoy it. But now when as we seele not our sinnes, neither doe as yet cast of the bitternes of sinne, it slideh coldly to the hart, we heare it in deede, but truely it doth not thoroughly enter vnto the hart. For if a man did beleue, that this natiuitie was for his commodity, he would feare neither sinne, nor death. Wherefore I haue sayd that a Christian must beleue, and dout nothing, that the natiuitie of Christ is as well his, as it is the Lord Chistes. And as he hath of the virgin pure blood and flesh, so that he him selfe also is pure, and that this virgin is his mother spiritually, as she was the mother of Christ carnally. Let the hart haue sure confidence in this perswasion, otherwise it will be in an euil case. This the Angell signifieth in these wordes. when he sayth: Unto you he is borne, as if he sayd, what souer he is and hath, ye may chalenge it to your selues. Also he is your Sauour, not that ye shold onely looke vpon him, but which is able to deliuere you from the tyramie of sinne, death, Satan, and all euell: yea and how great souer he be, he is borne unto you, and is yours with all that he hath. Nowe soasmuch as he is myne, and hath chaunged his natiuitie into myne, his flesh & blood also is myne, he him selfe is myne with all wherewith he is endued, so that I dare saye unto his mother: Beholde, that child which thou hast brought forth, is mine, his flesh and blood are my flesh and blood, yea and thou art my mother, and I will be counted of thee for thy sonne, for whatsoever Christ bringeth with him, it must be myne, euen as he himselfe is myne. If so be that his natiuitie be myne, being of a virgin, and without synne, replenished with the holy Ghost, my natiuitie also must be of a virgin, and pure from synne.

Christ is borne vnto vs, and is made wholy
ours.

Here now Eue the first mother is no more my mother, for it must needes be that that natiuitie doe utterly die and perish, that there may be no sinne remayning. Here this mother Marie is to be set against that mother, of whome I was borne in sinne. And thus the Angel bringeth with him great ioy, for it can not be, but that the hart shold be made glad, when it enjoyeth this Sauour as his owne. When we come to hand strokes, that is, when we seele feele our miserie and calamite, there remayneth no comfor^t or helpe, then my hart can not lift it selfe aboue the heauy burden, wherewich it is preßed downe, but it must needes faine and be discouraged. But if I conceiue a trut^t, and doute nothing that Chристs nativitie is mine, that my sinnes be taken away by him, I become exceeding ioyfull, & am confirmed with comfort, whereby all heauines and sorrow is shaken of. This onely is that com- True comfort, and no other, which maketh a good conscience, which sea- fort and ioy. reth neither death nor hell, for it alwayes resteth vpon the word of God, which giuerh Christ unto vs. Wherefore it is a thinge alcogether miserable and lamentable, if such a good conscience be sought in any other thinges then here. Thou shal find no ioy, no peace of conscience, neither in heauen, nor in earth, but in this Christ, be thou certaine and sure thereof. Wherefore let all other thinges passe, and cleave unto him onely, if thou desire to be bold and couragious against sinne, death, the deuill, hell, & all thinges that are against thee. He is the Lorde & Sauiour. Ye understand I trust this right wel, soasmuch as ye haue now heard it so ofte.

But I doe wch so great earnestnes as it were beate it into your mindes, that ye may see, that there is but one thing taught in the whole Scripture, which I would haue to sticke firmly and vndoubtedly in you, this is that which I haue sayd, that the vse of this nativitie be knowne.

They whiche seeke any other thing, and vse not this nativitie, are in a desperat case, as ye haue heard. Whiche ye haue very wel expressed in this songe, the autho^r whereof whosoeuer he was, did nothing erre from the purpose, to witte, that the onely childe Christ is our comfor^t. Whiche wordes surely are of very great importance, and deserue most diligently to be wyped. For ye did sing after this sort: A child highly to be prayed is borne unto vs this day of a chast virgin, to the comfor^t of vs wretches. If that child had not bin borne, we had perished all. Is it not sayd here, that there is no comfor^t beside only Christ? which in deed is most true. Without dout the holy Ghost taught him that made this songe to singe after this sort. If the case stand thus, it followeth that Monkes, Nunnes, Sacrificing Priestes, and all whiche leue this childe, and seeke to come to heauen by other wayes and works, be cōdemned. For such say that they neede not this childe, otherwise they woulde confess, that their owne wo^rkes be nothing worsh. These therefore do nothing but deceiue and seduce, of whom mens harts are procured to depart from Christ, and are led away unto Satan. In the aforesayd song is contayned moe-over : He is the saluation of vs all, oh sweete Jesu Christ, for as-much as thou art borne man, defende vs from hell. I greatly desire that ye did well vnderstand this. It is soong abroade every where, but there is none that thoroughly beleueth it. Whereupon it commeth that some doe oppugne these things, especially they, which know, sing, and babble very much of them, that truely I feare, that Christ is neuer more blasphemed, then at this feast of his nativitie, and at other great feastes, that it shoulde be no maruel, if, when he is so blasphemed, he shoulde suffer the whole world to be swallowed vp : but the last day is at hand. Wherefore endeavour that ye may sound this excellent song in your hart, and as ye sing it in mouth, so ye may also beleue it.

If thus the case stande, that all thinges without this child are vaine, what neede is there then of much busines? why doost thou runne this way & that way, and endewordest to do woxkes; whereby thou mayst prepare thee a seate in heauen? which they especially doe, that murmurre vp many Rosaries, and doe continually extoll the mother of God in mouth onely, but in hart thinke more evill of her then of all others: & not onely of her, but of Christ himselfe also the Lord and Sauour. Wherefore commit this so to memozie, that ye may be certainly perswaded, that whatsoeuer dependeth of any other then of that child, it is all damnable, otherwise the Angell had lyed. This must be compted for most certaine without any addition, neither are these trifles to be wei-ed, to witt, that this sufficeth not that thou doost beleue, moe thinges are to be added. Forasmuch then as the Angell sayth, that this child doth all, and that he is the Sauour, and if he be not, that all labour is lost, tell me, how can it follow, that some thing is to be done of thee, when it is already done before? Doost thou goe about to doe any thinge that thou mayst obtaine him?
That child sufferereth not himselfe to be apprehended and obtayned by woxkes, for albeit thou heape together woxkes, notwithstanding thou doost not yet enjoy the child. Moreouer thy woxkes be vncleane, by which such a great treasure can not be gotten, no though they were euen holy. But he is to be apprehended in hart, so that thou belieue, and say to the Angel: I beleue that it is true

No meanes

to come vn-
to heauen.

which thou sayest, and nothing at all dounting I count this childe for a Sauour borne vnto me. And this part wherof we haue now spoken, pertaineth to saith.

Now we haue here also an other part pertayning to Christ-an life, namely charitie, that woxes may not be rejected. If thou wilt doe woxes, doe them not in that respect, that thou perswade thy selfe that thou doost obtayne any thing of God by them. But follow this example : such a one as Christ hath shewed him selfe to thee be thou also towarde thy neighbour. If thou doe more nearely consider the example of Christ, thou shalte finde nothing but meere loue. Whereas he humbleth hym selfe and is borne in so great pouertie, that declareth nothing, but loue toward thee, which moued him to become a seruaunt for thy sake, as Paule Philip. 2. sayth, who knew that he might remayne in diuine glory. Now this he did for thy commodicie, he bowed his eies to thy miserie and calamite, which art so miserable a man, wholy damnable & abounding with sinne, thy nativitie is vncleane, thy misery is on every side most great, thou hast deserued nothing but the wrath of God & eternall damnation. If thou hadst bene a Carthu-lian Monke a thowsand yeares, thou couldst not deliuer thy self from this miserye and damnation. But Christ is able to helpe thee, he is rich and hath strenght sufficient: seeing therfore he can doe such chinges, he doth them willingly and with pleasure.
Loue enforceth him so farre, that he employeth all chinges for thy sake, and bestoweth whatsoever he hath for thee. Forasmuch then as Christ sheweth so great loue toward thee, and giueth unto thee whatsoever he is able, do thou likewise to thy neighbour.
Wilt thou woxe woxes? deriuue them to thy neighbour, who is compassed with troubles & miseries. Thou must doe nothing for this cause, that Christ hath neede thereof, whereby thou maist enrich him, for neither was he bountisful to this ende, that he might any thing profit his father thereby, or that he might receive any commodicie of him, but he did it onely for this cause, that therein the father might be well pleased, inasmuch as he submitteh him selfe wholy to his fathers will, and loueth vs with so great affection?

After the same sorte we also must doe in our works toward our neighbour, which we ought therfore onely to doe, that we may gaine thanks to the father, that he sheweth his sauour vnto vs, for that he hath giuen his beloued sonne unto me, to bestow vpon me whatsoeuer he hath. When I belieue this vndoubtedly, I burst soþt and say: If God sheweth vnto me so great benefits and fauour in his beloued sonne, þ he suffereth him to bestow all thinges vpon me, I also will doe the like againe, and bestow all thinges whereby I may doe good to my neighbour and loue him. And so I doe not lise vp myne eyȝ unto heauen, but I go thether, where my neighbour is oppressed w̄ aduersitie, pouertie, sicknes, sinnes, or errore, and I helpe him wherein soeuer I am able. Thus doe thou whosoever thou art, which mindest to do true good workes: as thou wouldest haue done to thy selfe, if thou were troubled with pouertie, so doe thou to thy neighbour being pooze. Againe, if thy neighbour be a sinner, and thou seest it, but thou thy self art without sinne, and hast a holy nativite, goe, preache vnto him, whereby he also may be delinued. But thou must doe all these things freely in euery respect, as Christ hath done for thee with-out all workes and merits, of pure grace, loue, and mercy. Such workes see thou doe, if thou wilt doe good and Christian workes in deede. God hath no neede of them, neuertheles thou must doe them in respect of him, inasmuch as it so pleaseth him, and he will haue it to be so. This onely is righly to doe good workes, which those hypocrites do not, which will merit heauen by their chasti-ty, pouertie, & obedience. Unto whom I pray you are such workes of theirs good? I my selfe neede them not, neither doe they profit my neighbour, wherefore it is mere deceit, whereas a name is giuen to workes as though they did merit heauen, when as they are nothing worth, neither profitable to others. Laye vpp these thinges in your hartes, and do also according to them. In all this text being discussed from the beginning to the ending, ye haue these two thinges, namely faith and loue. If ye shall keepe these, then boþ the holy nativite of Christ shall be a helpe, commodi-ty, and comfort vnto you, and also ye shall be spiritually the chil-dren of his mother, as Christ Iesus is her childe carnally.

An exposition of the song of the Angells, Glory be to God on high, &c.

Glory be to God on high, and in earth peace, good will to-wards men. Forasmuch as this song is very common, and there be fewe that righly understande it, when as notwithstanding it

con-

contayneth many thinges in it, I thinke good to handle it somewhat at large. The Angells in this hymne apply three things to thre: glory to God, peace to the earth, and good will vnto men. The first is the honour or glory of God, whch which we must beginne, that in all thinges prayse and glory may be ascribed to God, as to him which doeth, giueth, and hath all thinges, so that none may chalenge any good thing at all vnto him selfe, neither ought to count it his owne. Glory is so due to God onely, that no parte therof may be derived to any other. Adam being perswaded of Satan, went about to take this glory to him selfe, whereby all men fell into the displeasure of God, & haue that vice so throughly fixed in their mind, that no other thing can be so hardly pluckt away from them. Every man pleaseth him selfe, no man can abide to see me that he is nothing, or is able to doe nothing, whereof come almost all euill, so many contentions, warres, and immutterable other discommodities. This glory Christ gaue to God his fater, teaching that all our thinges are nothing before God but sinnes, which deserue his wrath and indignation, and nothing lesse then glory. Wherfore there is no cause, that we shold euen never so litle please our selues or glory in them, but rather that we shold be ashamed and feare, being set in so great perill and confusion, that so all our glory and pleasing of our selues may passe away and come to nothing, and we may reioyce being destitute of our owne glorie, that we may be found & saued in Christ alone.

The second is peace in earth. For, as where the glory of God is not, and where euery one seeketh his owne glory, there can not be peace, according as Salomon saith Proverb. 13. Among the proude there is euer strife: so contrariwise, where the glory of God is knowne, there true peace also must needes be. For why shold they contend? why shold they disagree, which doe know euery one of them, that they haue no good thing of their owne, but that all thinges which are, which they haue, and which they are able to doe, come from God, to whose power also they commit all thinges, they in the meane season being very wel content, that they haue God fauorable vnto them? Howe also can it be, that when one counteth nothing of himselfe and the thinges that be his, he shold be so carefull of him selfe and his thinges, that he shold moue contention with any because of them? Such be-

leeue that Christ onely is made all thinges vnto them, hym they thinke on, and for him alone they contend. Hereupon it certainly followeth, that there can be no contention or discord at al among true Christians: which maner of peace of Christians Esay declareth, & sayth: No man shall doe euill vnto an other, no man shall destroy an other in my holy hill, that is, in the Church of Christ. The cause hereof he addeth next after: The earth is full of the knowledge of God, that is, for all know God, as to whom all good thinges doe belong, and all their owne things they confess to be nothing but sinnes, they may easily therefore haue peace among them selues. Wherefore the same Esay sayth in an other place: They shall breake their swordes into mattocks, & their speares to make sythes, and one shall not lift vp a weapon against an other, neither shall they learne to fight from thence forth. Hereupon Christ is called the king of peace, or the prince of peace, of whom Salomon was a figure, who is called peaceable. For Christ is truly called our king Salomon, that is, peaceable, which hath restored peace vnto vs inwardly with God through faich in him, and outwardly w our neighbours through loue, whereby we liue friendly with all men: and so by him we haue peace euery where both inwardly, and outwardly in the earth.

The third is good will of men. Not that good will, whereby we worke good workes, but whereby we take in good part all thinges that happen, whether they be good or euill, sweete or sower, and do receive them with a quiet hart. The Angells knew that the peace which they did sing of, should be only among Christians, which in all thinges doe depend vpon Christ, and usurpe nothing to them selues as their owne. But in the meane season the world and Satan, which doe exceedingly enuie them, doe on every side procure trouble vnto them, and persecute them even vnto the death, so that they may looke for no peace or quietnes at all of these, for Christ sayth Joh. 16. In me ye shall haue peace, but in the world ye shall haue affliction. Therefore it was not euenough for the Angells to haue soong, peace in earth, but it was to be added: and good will towardes men, that when they, as much as they are able, haue peace with all men, and neuertheles are continually hated of all men, and doe suffer persecution, they may alwaies keepe a good wil, wherby they may take all things in good partie, and giue thankes to God, howesoever he dealeth with them, or suffereth them to be dealt with, they may not mur- mure, but resigne and commit them selues wholy to the will of God, yea (sozasmuch as they knowe that God doth dispose & go- uerne all thinges, whom they are sure, that they haue a mercisfull and most fauorable father vnto them through Christ) they may euere reioyce & be glad in persecutions, according to that saying of Paule in the Epistle to the Romanes: VVe reioyce in affi- ctions and persecutions. For inasmuch as they haue a ioyfull conscience and a sure trust of the fauour of God, they can not but count all thinges for the best, whatsoever happen.

Behold what kinde of good will it is in all thinges, whether they be prosperous or unprosperous, which the Angells doe here wish vnto men, & sing to be proper to the beleuers. Where such good will is wanting, there peace can not long be. If thou take all thinges in the worse part, they take nothing in good part, but do alwayes increase and double the euil. Hereupon howsoever God dealeth with them, they like it not, but require that they may be dealt otherwise with, and so it falleth out as it is in Psal. 18. with the pure thou shalt be pure, and with the foward thou shalt be foward, that is, with him that counteth all thinges pure to him selfe, and hath that good will in all thinges, whereof we haue spo- ken, thou also doest well agree, inasmuch as he pleaseth thee and all good men. But he that is foward, so that neither thou, nor those thinges that are thine doe like him, can not but displease both thee and all good men. Of this well pleasing one an other Paule speakeith 1. Cor. 10. Endeavour to please all men, euen as I please all. By what meanes shall this be done? If thou take all thinges in good part, and suffer others to please thee, thou also againe shalt please others. The matter may be comprehended in one word: If thou wilt be liked of none, nothing shall be liked of thee: If thou wilt be liked of all, suffer that all thinges may be al- so liked of thee, but so, that thou doe not neglect the worde of the Lord. For that ought to be preferred before all, without any re- gard had of all me, what pleaseith them, or what displeaseith them. But whatsoever may be done without transgressing the wrod of God, giue place to all, & submit thy iudgement to the iudgemente of others, that thou mayst take every thing in good part, which shall chaunce vnto thee, & so thou shalt haue the good wil, whereof the Angells did sing.

By this song it may be vnderstood, what nature the Angells haue. I omit those thinges which the Philosophers haue dreameed hereof: here is so described what the Angells are, that it can not be moze fully done, their hart and cogitations being declared. First with great ioy they sing prayses to God, acknowledging all thinges to be due unto him, and therefore doe with an ardent mind, and singing glorifie him. As therfore thou wouldest thinke of a right lowly, pure, and obedient hart, praying God, and alwayes enjoying perpetuall gladnes in him, so thinke also of the Angells: and thou hast now the nature of Angells, as much as they haue to doe with God.

thing to be considered in the Angells.

The second thing which we ought to marke in the Angells.

The second thing to be considered in them is their loue towardes vs. Thinke that they are most louing toward vs, which desire that it may goe as well with vs as with them selues, they doe no lesse reioyce for our safetie then for their owne, & euен in this hymne full of loue to vsward, they declare them selues so affected toward vs, that surely, we may thinke and reioyce of them, as of most louing friends. This is to knowe the Angells truely, not according to their essence, whereof the Philosophers doe foolishly & without frute babble many thinges, but according to their hart and mind, so that albeit I know not, what their nature is in it selfe, yet I know what is their chiefe desire, and their continuall wolke. Thus much shall suffice at this tyme concerning the song of the Angells, and the frute of the nativittie of the child Jesus Christ. God graunt vs his grace, that we may print these thinges in our hart, & according unto them also amend our life.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, OF THE EPIPHANY OR APPEARING OF CHRIST.

- Verse. 1. When Iesus then was borne at Bethlehem in Iudea, in the dayes of Herod the Kinge, beholde there came wise men from the East to Ierusalem,
2. Saying, where is that king of the Iewes that is borne? for we haue scene his starre in the East, and are come to worship him.
3. When kinge Herod hearde this, he was troubled, and all Ierusalem with him:
4. And gathering together all the chiese Priestes and Scribes of the people, he asked of them, where Christ should be borne.
5. And they sayde vnto him, at Bethlehem in Iudea: for so it is written by the Prophet, 6. And thou Bethlehem in the lande of Iuda, art not the least amonge the Princes of Iuda: For out of thee shall come the gouernour, that shal seede that my people Israell.
7. Then Herod priuily called the wise men, and diligently inquired of them the tyme of the starre that appeared.
8. And sent them to Bethlehem, saying: Goe and serch diligently for the childe, & when ye haue found him, bring me worde againe, that I may come also and worship him.

9. So when they had heard the king, they departed: and loe, the starre which they had scene in the East, went before them, till it came & stood ouer the place, where the childe was.
10. And when they sawe the starre, they reioyced with an exceeding great ioy.
11. And went into the house, and found the childe with Marie his mother, and fell downe, & worshipped him, and opened their treasures and presented vnto him giftes, euen golde, & frankincense, and myrrhe.

VCelebrate this day a noble, and most comfortable feast, concerning the appearing of the Lorde Jesus, who appeared, a special comfort to al them which seeke him with a stronge faith: first to the wise men which came from the East: secondly to John the Baptist, when being about thirty yeares of age he was baptizied of him in Iordan, and the holy Ghost and voyce of the father gaue testimonie of him, that he is the sonne of God: thirdly, when he shewed his glory and power in a miracle, wherein he turned water into wine at a mariage, whereby he would procure reuerence and estimation to matrimony, which now (Alas) is after a shamefull sorte toerne, contenned, and rejected of the Pope & his adherents as a certaine miserable and wretched state. For whatsoever God hath ordained, that of the world is contenned: whereof at conuenient time we will speake moze, and we haue already as I thinke writteyn sufficient therof. Now we will speake in few wordes of the first appearance.

The wise men of Arabia, which were industrious men, and without all dout gouernours of that countrie (as it was at that time the maner in those partes) when they had scene the starre in the East, breaking of all delaye, made haste to Jerusalem, diligently seeking for the kinge of the Jewes being newe borne. Where we ought to marke, that they could neither eeke nor finde finde out this king, the Loerde Christ, but by the starre going before them, which at the last ledde them so farre, that by the word of God they were certifiid, where this king was to be sound. So also is it with vs: we can not finde Christ without the Gospell, without the word of God. That must shew him vnto vs, & bringe vs thither, where we may finde him: which then onely is done, when we receive the same Gosspell by faith, otherwise, althoough we haue it, heare it, and know it, it proficeth vs nothing at all, we shall not therefore finde him, no moxe surely then the Scribes founde him, who notwithstanding had the Scriptures readily, and shewed the way to other, not comming into it them selues, for the thing did not touch their harts. They did drouingly neglect that king, whom with great sighes they had looked for many ages. Wherefore it is not enough that we haue the Gosspell, or that we heare it, but we must beleue it, and lay it vp in the secretes of our hart, otherwise we shall never finde Christ. Here also you see, that it doth not kill, whether one be learned or unlearned, instructed in many places of Scripture, or in few, vnto whom God giueth the grace, he enioyeth Christ. He respecteth not the person, but whom he draweth he is drawne, although in the meane season he prouideith that the Gosspell be alwayes preached.

After therfore that these wise men had found the child Christ, the king of the Jewes at Bethlehem, together with Joseph and Marie, by the shewing of the Scripture & guiding of the starre, they were nothing offended at the poore estate of the childe, but being caught by the word, acknowledged that Child for the Mesias and king of the Jewes, whom the Jewes had looked for so many yeares, & opened their treasures before him, offering vnto him golde, frankincense and myrrhe. Wherein againe we ought to marke the nature of faith, that it is offended at nothing, but cleaueth to the word onely, and nothing esteemeth those thinges that shine outwardly. These wise men doe not therefore dismayne neither turne backe, because the child together with his parents were without all pompe in pouertie and miserie, and nothing lesse then a kingly child appeareth vnto them, but they goe on, and vndoubtedly acknowledge him for a king, as they had learned concerning him out of the Scriptures. Moreouer they giue vnto him the honour meete for a king, they offer most precious gifts, which they had brought, being euene of the best sorte, out of their

Without the word of God receaved by faith, we can not finde Christ.

The wise men are not offended at the poore & miserable estate of Christ.

owne countrie. Nowe the world would haue done no such thing, but according to the maner thereof, would haue looked for garments of purple, and resort of seruaunts, and handmaydens. In such places it is wont to bestow his giftes, to wit, where there is great plentie and abundance of thinges before: yea it is of that qualitie, that it depriueth the poore and afflicted of those thinges that they haue, it taketh breade out of the mouth of the hungry & needie, which haue nothing, but as they get it hardly, by labou-ring loze all that they are able.

How the world dealeth with the poore and afflicted.

We must not esteeme those things which seeme precious to the world, but those which to the world seeme contemptible and of no value.

Whereof we haue to learne, that if we will honour Christ with these wise men, we must shut our eies, and turne them from all that which seemeth fayre, goodly and noble before the world: Neither must thou be offended or abhorre it, if any thing seeme vyle, contemptible and ridiculous vnto the world: let this suffize thee, that thou knowest that it pleaseith God, which is in heauen. Take heede unto thy selfe concerning those thinges, which shone before the world, exercise thy selfe in those workes, which seeme vnto reason foolish and light, as are, to helpe the needie, to comfort the afflicted, & to count the calamitie of thy neighbour, thine owne. If thou shalt be diligently exercised in these, and faith being thy guide, shal endeauer rightly to apply thy self vnto them, then other workes which haue a fayre shewe, as to institute masses, to be occupied in vigils and yeares mindes, to build temples, and such like follies, shal by them selues be pluckt out of thy hart & vanish away, vnto which workes, surely now almost the whole world is addicted: they are in deede fayre in the very outward shew, and seeme to be very precieus, when as notwithstanding they are an abomination vnto God. But whatsoever God hath commaunded, as to doe good to our neighbour, and to be couched with his aduersities no lesse then with our own, to beare a friendly and well willing minde toward him, these are neglected, and in the eyes of the world appeare trifling and foolish: whereupon we doe greatly abhorre them. How commeth this to passe? Euen therefore, because they haue no goodly shew outwardly. And the common people of Germanie are wont to say: That which shineth not, or hath not a fayre shew, is nothing set by.

Moreover God doth sooner suffer him selfe to lacke his owne honour and due service, then that he woulde haue vs to leaue of from doing our dutie toward our neighbour, as Christ witnesseth.

Matth.

Matth. 5. If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee, leue there thine offering before the altar, and goe thy way: first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come, and offer thy gift. Here ye doe most plainly both heare and see, that God will not be serued, unles we first goe to our neighbour, and be reconciled to him. For the same cause also God reiecteth the sacrifices of the Jewes, as it is in þ Prophesie of Esay chap. i for that they did neglect those thinges which were more necessary, namely mercy and faith: for thus he sayth: VVhy offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am ful of the burnt offerings of weathers, & of the fat of fed beasts, I haue no pleasure in the blood of bullocks, lammes, & goates. VVhen ye come to appeare before me treading in my courts, who hath required this at your handes? Offer me no mo oblations, for it is but lost labour: incense is an abominable thing vnto me. I may not away with your newe moones, your sabathes, & solemn meetings, your solemne assemblies are wicked. I hate your new moones and appointed feastes euen from my very hart, they make me weary, I can not abide them. VVhe ye hold out your handes, I will turne mine eyes from you: and though ye make many prayers, yet I will heare nothing at all, seeing your handes are full of blood. VVashe you, make you cleane, put away your euil thoughts out of my sight, cease from doing of euill. Learne to doe well, apply your selues to equitie, deliuere the oppressed, helpe the fatherles to his right, defend the widow, & so forth as is there rehearsed of Esay. By these words of Esay ye see what God requireth, & what he alloweth. When we neglect those workes, by which our neighbour is serued, he againe will neglect vs. For whatsoever benefit we bestow vppon our neighbour, that we bestow vppon God and Christ him selfe, as he shall pronounce in the last iudgement: VVhatsoeuer ye haue done to one of the least of these my brethren, ye haue done it vnto me. Matth. 25:40

When thou hearest this, thou wilt not glory much, of the temples which thou hast builded, or masses which thou hast founded. For then he will say: what haue I to doe with thy temples and Masses? what with thine altar and bells? thinkest thou that I am delighted with stones, and wood, with bells and banners? Are not all thinges mine first? Heauen is my seate, and the earth is my footestoole. Who commaunded thee to build temples? I haue set liuing temples before thee, these are to be edified, nourished, & relieved, but thou hast bene occupied with other trifles, which I haue not commaunded. I know thee not, away with thy temples and masses: ye ought to haue put your trust in me onely, but all your delight consisted in such workes, as though it had bene your purpose by so doing to wrest heauen from me, & that I may comprehend all in a briefe summe; whatsoeuer I haue commaunded, that hath bene of you neglected: and whatsoeuer I haue detested and abhorred, that ye haue diligently done: this therefore I will requite you with again, I know you not, ye may resort unto that god which hath commaunded you to doe these thinges.

Here therefore let vs learne, how the wise men did nothing abhorre the poore & on every side miserable appearance of this infant and his parents, that we also may be so affected toward the miserable and pitifull estate of our neighbours, & may be perswaded that we doe find Christ in them, & that whatsoeuer is bestowed upon them, Christ doth acknowledge it as bestowed vpon him selfe. His kingdom consisteth in the poore, despised & abiects, yea in the holy crosse, in contempt, in persecution, in affliction & miserie, as Paule sayth out of the Psalme: for thy sake we are killed all the day long, and are counted as sheepe appointed to be slaine. In an other place also he sayth: we are made as the filth of the world, the ofskowring of all thinges. Wherefore Christ sayd to his disciples, when he sent them forth to preach in Judea: Behold I send you forth as sheepe in the middes of the vvolues. They now that seeke Christ any other where then in such a contemptible forme, in þ crosse, & in persecution, do not find him. The wise men did find þ king Christ being newly borne, not in Herods court, not among the Princes & priests, not at Hierusalem, in so noble and famous a city, but at Bethlehem in a stable, with poore and despised creatures, namely Joseph and Marie. In a summe, Christ will there be found, where a man would least seeke for him.

But we must diligently consider also, what these wise men signified by their giftes. For assuredly they shewed by them, that this child is a king, and not a king onely, but also God, and man. In offering gold they acknowledged him for a king, as if they would say: We bring unto thee gold, not that we would thereby enrich thee. For gold, siluer, and whatsoeuer is made is thine be-wise men signified by their offring

of gold:

fore, but hereby we acknowledge thee to be a most mighty king ouer all thinges. So we also offer gold unto Christ, when we acknowledge him for our king and Lord: but unto this is required a very stronge faith. For if I ought to acknowledge him for my king and Lord, all mine owne will must be extinguished, that it reigne nothing at all in me: for Christ onely must reigne & rule in me, that he may doe whatsoeuer it pleaseth him in me, and concerning me, all thinges must be committed unto him. So the leper in Matthew did, which sayd unto Christ: Lord, if thou wylt thou canst make me cleane. Therefore my will must be utterly extinguished in me, if þ I will haue Christ to reigne in me. Christ also suffered not his owne will to rule, but he alwayses submitted himselfe to the will of his father, which he testifieth in the sixt chapter of the Gospell by S. John: I came dovvne from heauen, not to doe mine ovne vwill, but his vwill vwhich hath sent me. Yea he obeyed his father euuen unto death, and submitted him selfe wholy to his will. We imitating this example, which is written for our singular consolation, ought to submit our will to God and his Christ, and to rest confidently vpon him. He knoweth howe to bringe the matter notably well to passe, as it is sayd Psal. 37. Commit thy vway unto God, and put thy trust in him, and he shall bringe it to passe. And a litle after: Hold thee still in God, and suffer him to worke vwith thee. Such sentences ought to prouoke vs, patiently to suffer the will of God in vs, whether sweete thinges or sowe, commodities or discommodities come unto vs: for he knoweth with what temperature to lay them vpon vs. Blessed is he that beleueith these thinges from his hart. Who being such a one, can be troubled with soþow? Such a man howsoever he be hadled, whether he be burned or drowned, cast into prison, or otherwise grieuously delt with, he taketh all in good part. For he knoweth that these thinges shall turne to his commoditie. After this soþ doe we also offer golde with the wise men, when we take away rule from our owne will, and do suffer Christ to worke in vs accordinge to his will & pleasure. Wherefore they are hypocrites, which knowe not to suffer the will of God, but howsoever he dealeth with them, haue always, whereof they doe complayne. They forsooth suppose, that whatsoeuer they thinke, it shall haue successe according to their thinking. If it fall out otherwise, they are angrie, they do not patiently suffer persecution and contempt: they murmur, they finde fault, and vere when those thinges happen, no otherwise then horses being stirred vp with furie or rage. So therfore by resisting they staye the kingdome of Christ from them, and deprive Christ of gold, which notwithstanding they ought to offer and present vnto him, that is, they them selues will beare rule, & doe not vouchsafe to acknowledge Christ for their king and Lord.

Frankincense
what it signified, and when we offer the same vnto Christ.

Iob. 1.21.

By frankincense they resembled diuine honour, which we the offer vnto him, when we confesse, that whatsoeuer we haue, we must acknowledge it to haue come from God, and that we haue it freely, and without any merit of ours: Wherefore all these thinges are to be ascribed vnto him, as to the true Lord, neither must we glorie one whitte in the good thinges receiued, but his glorie is to be sought in them. And if he take them from vs againe, we ought to suffer him with quiet mindes, and to blesse him with the beloued Job in these wordes: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shal I returne thither again: the Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lorde. And so we ought to suffer all misfortunes and aduersities, as if God him selfe did cast them vpon our necke, so that none shall be able to offend vs, vntes he take away Christ from vs. Not so muche as a heare of our heades shal perish, as Christ sayth to his Disciples Luke 21. Wherefore whaisoeuer shal molest vs, what aduersity soever shal come vnto vs, we ought neuer to seeke any other God, we ought no where to seeke any other helpe and comfort, then of Christ alone. This is he which is made vnto vs of God the father, wisedom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Then onely we offer vnto Christ that right frankincense of Arabia, when we flie vnto him alone in our calamities, afflictions, and anguishes. But they that seeke after straunge helpes and comforts, as of Sorcerers, Witches, and such like, they doe not offer frankincense vnto Christ, but stinking brimstone, wherein they shall be burned for euer, for that they haue not beleued and trusted in Christ.

Myrrhewhat
it signified.

By myrhe they signified a mortall man: for with myrhe dead bodies were anointed, that for certaine yeares they should not putrifie. Now myrhe is a stronge and bitter iuice, which distillett from the trees of Arabia, like vnto gumme, or as with vs rosen issueth out of the pine tree, the firre tree, &c. But then we we offer my^rthe vnto Christ, when we firmly beleue that he by his death hath ouercome sinne, Satan and hell. And this is a speciall faith. If we doe but a litle dout here, it is not well with vs. But if I beleue from my hart, that death, sinne, the deuill, and hell are swallowed vp in and by the death of Christ, I shall not be afraid of them all. I shall easily be preserued from rotteness which death bringeth, when I haue my^rthe, that is, the death of my Lord Christ in my body and soule, this will not suffer me to perish. So stonge and valiant a thing is faith, vnto which euē all thinges are possible, as Christ sayth Mar.9. Here must we learne daily with our Lord Christ to bring vnder our old Adam, and to mortifie his concupiscentes, by the crosse, and temptacions, not that crosse which we doe chose, but which Christ layeth on vs, let vs beare it patiently and with a willing mind, that so our body may be subdued, and made subiect to the spirit, that being so buried with Christ through baptisme, we may be raysed vp againe with him, and he alone may reigne and liue in vs. Hereunto vehement sighing is required, which the holy Ghost doth make in vs for our sake, as Paule sayth Rom.8. that Christ will helpe vs, to keepe vnder this vnruley and obstinate flesh, that it presume not too licentiously, & thrust the noble soule into the myre. This our baptisme doth signifie, to wit, no other thing then that that olde and stinking Adam be mortified, and buried, which we alwayes ought to revolue in our minde, seeing that as long as we liue here, sinnes doe remayne in vs. Wherefore alwayes some thing must be repayzed in vs without all intermission, through the cogitation of baptisme, as it were in a house decayed through oldnes. euē vntill such time as we depart this life. Whereof S.

Paule entreateth in very goodly wordes Rom.6. which are diligently to be marked of vs, now he sayth thus : Knovv ye not that all vve, vwhich haue bene baptized into Jesus Christ, haue bene baptized into his death? VVe are buried then with him by ba-ptisme into his death, that like as Christ vvas raised vp from the dead to the glorie of the Father, so vve also shoulde vvalke in newnes of life. For if vve be planted vwith him, to the similitude of his death: euē so shall vve be to the similitude of his resurrection, knovving this, that our old man is crucified vwith him, that the bodie of sinne might be destroyed, that henceforth vve should not serue sinne. For he that is dead, is freed from sinne.

When we offer my^rthe

VVherefore, if we be dead with Christ, we beleue that we shal liue also with him, knowving that Christ being raysed from the dead, dieth no more : death hath no more dominion ouer him. For in that he died, he died once to sinne, but in that he liueth, he liueth to God . Likevvise thinke ye also that ye are dead to sinne, but are aliue to God in Iesus Christ our Lord. Thus much concerning the first appearance.

Now we will speake somewhat of the second, that is of the baptisme of Christ. In the baptisme of Christ three thinges are to be considered : The first, that the heauens were opened, when he was baptizied . The seconde , that the holy Ghost was seene in the likenes of a doue . The third, that the voice of the facher was heard, which sayd : This is my beloued sonne, in vvhom I am vwell pleased . Whereas Christ vouchsaued to be baptised with water, he hath hallowed baptisme, & made the water thereof holy, þ he which is baptizied in his name , might become likewise holy and cleane from sinne , and might haue the heauens open . Now Christ was not baptizied for him selfe, for he was not infected with the spot of any sinne, as S. Petet sayth I . Pet. 2. He behaued him selfe like unto a good Phisitian , which before the sick doth first drinke some bitter potion , that the sick may more gladly and boldly doe the same afterward . For we in baptisme drinke a bitter potion, namely, the mortification of the olde Adam, which with the bitternes thereof doth greatly trouble vs. For that dipping into the water or sprinkling with it doth signifie nothing els, but that that old Adam shoule perish & die. This is greatly furthered by the crosse , which God according to his diuine will layeth vpon vs , which we ought not to cast from vs, but beare it willingly & with a patient mind. But that this might be easier for vs to doe, euен Christ hath taken it vpon him selfe, he suffered him selfe to be baptizied , and tooke his crosse and caried it nothing resistinge or gaynesaying , and so was obedient to his facher unto the death, euен the death of the crosse, as Paule sayth Philip. 2. that he might deliuere vs from sinnes, and might againe appease his heauely father, which surely he did of his mere grace without any deserfe of ours : whereof we haue baptisme a signe & pledge, as Paule sayth unto Titus : But vwhen that bountifullnes and that loue of God our Sauour covraud man appeared, not by the vworks of righteousnes, vvhich vve had done, but according to his mercy he saued vs, by the vvashing of the newe birth, and the renuing of the holy Ghost, vvhich he shed on vs abundantly, through Iesus Christ our Sauiour, that vve being iustified by his grace, should be made heires according to the hope of eternall life.

Secondly the holy Ghost appeareth here in the likenes of a dove, when Christ is baptized, whereby is signified that we also doe receive the holy Ghost in our baptisme, whch ruleth and guideth vs according to the will of God, which is present with vs, & helpeth vs in bearing the burden of the holy crosse, whch exhorteth vs, is instant vpon vs, enforceth vs, and when we yeld to the burden of the crosse, is present and helpeth vs: if we fall, rayseth vs vp againe, and is with vs as a certeine faithfull companion in our iorney. He also maketh the burden of the crosse light, whch we were very vnable to beare, if he did not put to his helpe. If so be that thou fall into sinne, remember to goe backe vnto thy Baptisme, for this is the onely ship, wherein we passe ouer. Wherefore take heede of them which make two tables, wherby we passe ouer the sea of sinnes, namely baptisme and repentance. Beleeue them not, whatsouer they handle, it is mere delusion: baptisme is the beginning of repentance. As ofte therefore as thou fallest into sinne, haue recourse vnto thy baptisme, there thou shalt againe obtaine the holy Ghost, who may be present with thee. For repentance is nothing else, but a displeasing of him selfe, a detesting of his wicked life, and a renuing of the man, which is represented in baptisme. After such a renuing of the life, followeth the prayse of God, and thankes giuing vnto him for the grace received, then such a man bresteth for th, & behaueth him selfe friendlly toward his neighbour, & doth good to him in all thinges. This is signified by that, that the holy Ghost appeared vpon Christ in the likenes of a dove: for a dove wanteth the gall. Such they also become, which receive the holy Ghost in baptisme, to witte, they are gentle and without all bitterness toward all.

Thirdly, the voyce of the father is heard in the baptisme of Christ, which sayih: This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleased. This is that Sauicur, whch deliuereth vs from the tyramie of sinne, dea ih, Satan, and hell. And here we must learne, how we must come vnto God. He that desireth to be the grations & deare childe of God the father, must attaine vnto this through Christ, through him alone the beloued sonne, who sitteth in the bosom of his father: unto whom alone the father looketh, without whom he alloweth nothing, and whaesoever pleaseith the father, it pleaseith him in respect of this his sonne. Wherefore he that desireth to goe to þ father, must cleave to this beloued sonne, must lay him selfe vpon his backe. For by this voice all ticles albeit they seeme very goodly and holy, are taken away, nothing is of value or estimation wих the father but onely this his beloued sonne, he is in his especiall fauour. Now he that desireth to be in fauour with the father, and to be beloued of him, let him flie into the bosom of the sonne, by whom afterward he findeþ access to the father, as Paule sayth Ephe. i. that through Christ we are adopted, without this Christ we are the enemies of God. Whosoever therefore cleaueth to Christ through faith, he abideth in the fauour of God, he also shall be made beloued and acceptable, as Christ is, and shall haue felowship wihc the father and the sonne. But where this is not done, there is nothing but wrath, there no honestie, no vertue, no free will, neither prayer, nor fasting, nor other workes shall profit, thou shalt but trifle with all these. For this is a most mighty, and most excellent voice: This is my beloued sonne, in whom all thinges consist and are comprehended, which are extant in the whole Scripture. Euen as all things are deliuered into the handes of Christ, and gathered into one, that they may obey him, as S. Paule sayth. For when God sayth: This is my beloued sonne, by shewing Christ only, and shewing and naming no other, he makeþ it plaine enough, that none is his beloued sonne beside him. If so be that other are not beloued sonnes, it is certaine that they are the chidren of wrath and indigation. For if there were moe beloued sonnes, he would not so set forth & shew this sonne alone, saying: This is my beloued sonne; neither would turne his eyes unto him onely, and glory of him alone, as though he knew no other. For the wordes seeme to shew, that he did vilygently looke about, & yet founde none, beside him, of whome he sayth: this is he, as if he sayde: Here at the last I haue founde such a one as pleaseith me, and is my beloued sonne, all other generally are not such.

time, Thou art my Sonne, this day begat I thee? and againe, I will be his father, and he shall be my sonne, &c. For it is most certame that Christ in these wordes is declared to be the true and naturall sonne of God, seeing that this word was never sayd to any creature. Howbeit he had bene as well the sonne of God, and had so remayned for euer, as he hath bene from everlasting, al- though this had not bene spoken vnto vs from heauen, neither is any thinge added or taken away from him by this name, but we must thus thinke & perswade our selues, that so excellent a praise, and so noble honour of Christ was spoken for our cause. For he him selfe witnesseth in John, that this came not because of him 1ch. 12.30. selfe, but for our sakes. He hath no neede that it shold be sayd vni- to him, that he is the sonne of God. He knew this before, & hath from everlasting & by his nature, that which he heareth. Where- fore when that is conceyned by voyce and word, it pertaineth to vs, and not vnto Christ. Christ without the word, is such as he is said to be. We haue the word without him, of whom it is spoken. Wherefore we must lay fast hold vpon the word without the es- sence, euuen as he hath the essence without the word.

But what doth this word? it teacheth vs to know Christ, in which knowledge our saluation consisteth, as Elay, Paule, and Peter doe witnes. But how doth it teach vs to know him? so, that he is the sonne of God, and doth especially please God his father, by which wordes God cheereth the hartes of all the faithfull, and greatly delighteth them with mere comfort, and heauenly sweee- nes. Howe is this done? When I knowe, and am sure, that this man Christ is the sonne of God, and doth in all things please the father, whereof I must be most fully perswaded: soasmuch as the diuine maiestie doth confirme this by his voyce from heauen, which can not lye, whereby I am certaine, that whatsoever that man doth speake and worke, they are the mere wordes & works of the beloued sonne, which are aboue measure approued of God. This therefore I doe singularly well marke, and lay vppon the bottome of my harte. When as therfore I doe hereafter heare Christ speake, or see him doe any thing, and that for my commo- ditie, which surely he euery where doth, (for he sayth, that he doth and suffereth all thinges for vs, that he came to serue and not that he shoulde be serued,) then I remember these wordes of the father, that he is the beloued sonne, then I am enforced to thinke, that all that Christ speakeþ, doþ, and suffereth, and that for my sake, doþ singularly well please God.

Nowe howe can God poure out him selfe more liberally, or shew him selfe more louingly and sweetely, then by saying, that it doþ please him from þ hart, that Christ his sonne doþ speake so gently with me, doþ with so great affection looke unto my commoditie, and with such vnusuall loue suffer, dye, and do whatsoeuer for my sake. Doest thou dout, that if mans hart did with due sense feele such fauour of God in Christ, to wit that he doþ so much for our sakes, it would not for ioy burst into most small preeces? for then it woulde looke into the depth of the diuine brest, yea and into the exceeding and eternal goodnes and loue of God, which he beareþ toward vs, and hath borne toward vs from euerlasting. But we are too hard harted and cold, the flesh doþ lye more heauy vpon vs, then that we are able to comprehend such wordes, we doe not wel consider of them with our selues, neither doþ our hart come neare to feele how maruelous and unspeak-able loue and ioy they contayne in them, otherwise without dout we shoulde perceiue, that heauen and earth are full of the fire of the diuine loue, of life and righteousnes, full of honour and praise, whereunto the fire of hel, whereunto sinne, & death being compared, are nothing but as it were a thing painted or pictured. But we are colde, sluggish, & unthankfull wretches, for we passe ouer such precious wordes, as things of no importance, & as vttered of man, as being contained in a booke, or writte in paper, as things utterly decayed, and now long since growne out of use by long custom, as though they pertayne onely to Christ, and to vs nothing at all: And being dull and senseles, we doe not see that they belong nothing to Christ, but were committed to writing and are extant onely for our sake.

Seeing therefore that Christ the beloued sonne, being in so great fauour with God in all thinges that he doþ, is thine, and doþ in the same, serue thee, as he him selfe witnesseth, without dout thou art in the same fauour and loue of God that Christ him selfe is in. And againe, the fauour and loue of God are insinuated to thee as deepeley, as to Christ, that now God together with his beloued sonne, doþ wholy possesse thee, and thou hast him againe wholy, that so God, Christ, and thou doe become as one certaine thing. Hereunto make many sentences of the Gospell, but especially

ally in John, as this : If any man loue me , my father will loue John 14. 23.
him, and we will come vnto him, and will dwell with him. Also : Where I am, there shall also my seruaunt be. Againe : I pray John 12.26.
that they may be one in vs as thou and I are one , I in thee , and John 17.
thou in me , and they in me . But where is Christ ? In the fauour of God, in the depth of his hart, there also are we , if so be that we know and loue Christ , there I thinke we are sure enough, there our refuge is placed high enough, whither no euill can come, as it is in the 91. Psalme.

But thou seekest that faith is required hereunto , and that vnto these thinges no law, no worke, no merit doth preuayle. Hereupon it commeth to passe , that so precious wordes are so abstruse and unknowen to reason . For it hath bin gouerned of Satan from the creation of the world, when as in Paradise it would be as God, & presumed after honour , which God here attributeth to Christ alone, soasmuch as he is his sonne, wherunto it is yet also prone and inclined, and setteth it selfe against these wordes, & the wordes againe are against it. For because Christ is here declared the only sonne of God, it is mightely ouerthowne, whacieuer maketh it selfe god. But who be they that make them selues god ? surely Satan and man, which please them selues, and loue them selues, they seeke not after God, but striue to attaine vnto this, that they also may become gods. But what will God say vnto these : Truly a certaine contrary thinge to that which he layde vnto Christ: Christ is my beloved sonne , in whom I am well pleased , seeing that he glorificeth not him selfe, and maketh not him selfe God, although he be God. But ye are wretches, in whom I allowe nothing , seeing that ye glorifie your selues , and make your selues gods, albeit ye be creatures and men , and not God. So this sentence giuen of Christ doth humble the whole world, doth shew them to be all vnyd of diuinitie , and ascribeth it to Christ, and that all for our commodicie, if we will,
and do admit this sentence : or to our condemnation, if we will not, and do contēmne this sentence, so that I may say at once : without Christ there is no fauour , nor any beloued sonne, but very wrath and soxe displeasure
of God,

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER UPON THE HYMNE OF ZACHARIAS, COMMONLY CALLED BENEDICTVS.

Luke i.

Verse 68. Blessed be the Lord God of Israell, because he hath visited and redeemed his people.

Hat godly man Zacharias speakeþ here of things as already done, when he sayþ: he hath visited and redeemed his people, &c. For he was certayne of them: now the childe John was come, being aboue to begin to preache of our redemption, as the Angell had foretold of him, that he shoulde goe before the Lord in the spt. rit and power of Elias, to turne the hartes of the fathers to the childdren, and the disobedient to the wisdome of the iust men, to make ready a people prepared for the Lorde: this þromise he knew shoulde assuredly come to passe.

Wherin this redempcion consisteth, I thinke it is already sufficienly knowne vnto you, namely in this, that God visiteth and deliuereþ vs. Which visitacion and deliuernace is accmplished neither by sworde nor violence, but by the woyde alone wherein consisteth more; then in the blood and death on the crosse. * For because of the woyde Christ shed his blood on the crosse. It was the woyde that John preacheþ, when he shewed tho Lambe of God which taketh away the synnes of the worlde, that is, when he declared our visitacion and redempcion, whch Christ hath purchaſed with his blood. This John was the first messenger which preached the Gospel. Wherfore to vs, to whom the Gospel was not before preacheþ, it is, as if John hym selfe did nowe preach it, for now is first set forth vnto vs redempcion, sweete consolacion, deliuernace from synnes, deach, hell; and all euill. To visit is nothing else, then to come vnto vs, to bring and declare vnto vs the word of saluation, by which we are sauued.

Zacharias conceiued so great ioy and pleasure in his hart, that he could not contayne him selfe, but he must needes burst forth into those words which in this Hymne he uttereth, not onely because of the infant newly borne, although euen this brought great ioy vnto him, but also for that by the birth of this child he beholdeith a farre greater ioy, forasmuch as he was a Messenger sent of God to preach his word to the world. He reioyceth therefore because of such a word which he shoulde heare, and for that he shoulde be as it were altered from an olde man to a yonge man, and shoulde become a scholer of an infant now lying in the cradle, whom he confesseth to be a Prophet better learned then him selfe. Manifest naturall ioy is here, for that that infant was borne after a meruelous sort. Moreouer here is ioy of the spirit, inasmuch as that infant shoulde become a Preacher of the word of God. And I am of that mind that I thinke that there was never any father, which conceiued so great ioy of his childe, as this Zacharias did of his sonne being so meruelously borne by the power of God, and for that especially in the time of olde age, when he was nowe neare vnto death, he is made a father of so great a Sanct, which shoulde be a maister and teacher of the world. It is a delight and pleasure vnto vs, if we beget a childe that is sound, sayre, and wel proportioned in body, that I may say nothinge, what ioy it woulde bring, if our childe shoulde be an Apostle and Preacher of þ word of God to the world. Whatsoever ignominie therefore and contempt he did suffer before when he was barren together with his wife Elisabet, he is now most abundantly recompensed with plentifull honour and ioy, so great blessings doth God bestowe, if we patiently abide his leysure. For if he at any time come, he commeth very rich and plentifull in gifis, and doth giue much more then we ever either wished or hoped for.

Verſe 69. And hath rayfed vp the horne of ſaluation vnto vs, in the house of his ſeruaunt Dauid.

These wordes are not ſpoken of John, for that he is not an horne rayfed vp in the house of Dauid, for he was borne of the tribe of Leui: but Christ our Lord is of the house, and of the royall Stocke and blood of Dauid. Wherefore Zacharias doth not Singe here, in the house of Leui, but that in the house of David an horne is rapsed and listed vp: and when Christ was not yet borne, he nevertheles singeth so, as if he were borne, neither was the horne of saluation yet come, notwithstanding he knew by the revelation of the holy Ghost, that it shold forthwith come. An horne among the Hebrewes signifieth power, confidence, dominion, and that whatsoeuer, wherein any man may trust, &c. As we reade in Daniel chap. 7. where the Prophet first seeth kingdoms, then beholdeth beasts, some hauing one horne, some two hornes. And he afterward interpreting him self, expoundeth them for kingdoms and Ringes: and this is a phrase and maner of speaking peculiar to this language. Nowe Zacharias signifieth that Christ is our head, yea our God, whose kingdom is his horne.

An horne
what it sig-nifieth among the Hebrewes.

He addeth: the horne of saluation, or blessednes. Some king- What diffe- doms are famous in name and power, other are large, aboun- rence there ding with plentie of greate treasures, much people, honours, other king- and all tempozall thinges: But this is called a kingdome of sal- doms & the uation, grace, life, righteousness, truth, and of euery chinge that kingdom of pertayneth to saluation, whereby it differeth from all other king- salvation doms. For albeit they be large, riche or mightie, yet are they which God counted the kingdoms of death, for they that governe them must hath raysed vp. at the last fall, dye, perish, and leaue their power and riches be- hind them. Neyther was there euer any woyldely kingdoime which might be called a kingdom of life, wherein is life, peace, and saluation, for onely the kingdome of Christ doth glory and triumph in this title, inasmuch as God hath raysed it vpp, that there may be nothing in it but saluation and felicitie. Moreouer I finde nothing here spoken of maners and trades of life, or of workes: For this kingdome consisteth nether in outward life nor workes, but in the horne, in Christ, and his Gospell. This kingdom is ours, whereof ye haue heard, that it is a kingdom of grace, life, righteousness, saluation and mercy, so that whosoever is in it, although he be inferior to John in holines, and farre vn- like Christ in perfection, yet he liueth in a kingdom wherein is nothing but saluation and blessednes, whereof also it hath and re- serueth the name.

It is sayd moreouer that this kingdom is raysed vp in þ house of David: but by what meanes was it raysed vp? even by the holy Ghost, and by his worde. He sayth, in the house of David, for it must be a kingdome in the earth, and yet a kingdome of salvation. Howe conserre these two one with an other. The house of Dauid is the tribe and stocke of Dauid, who was a man, as the subiects of his kingdom. So that thou canst not say, that he doth here make mention of an heauenly kingdome amonge the Angells, when as he doth nothing lesse, but he speakeith of a certayne kingdome which is amonge men, which liue clothed with flesh. Dauid was a man, the subiects of his kingdome also were men, subiect to death. For as the Scripture witnesseth, man that is boorne of a woman liueth but a small time, he can not passe the boundes appoynted him. Howe is it then that honour and dishonour come together in this kingdom? What agreement and consent appeareth here, where mortall men are deliuered from the power of death, where they that are worthy of death, enjoy life, the unhappy are happy, and they that are subiect to Satan, become the sonnes of God? In the reason hereof I hope that ye are sufficiently instructed, yea I thinke that ye vnderstand it as well as I my selfe. But because the text so requireth, it must be esloones repeated.

A Christian
is deliuered from death, sinne, & Satan.

We haue affirmed therefore, that a Christian which liueth in this kingdom, shall never dye, sozasmuch as he can not dye. For Christ hath therfore suffered deathe, that he might ouercome death, and deliuere vs from it. He tooke our sinnes also vpon him selfe, that we might not neede to beare them. Moreouer he subdued and ouerthrew Satan, that we might not be subiect unto him. Wherfore it is giuen to a Christian that he can never dye, he can never be subiect to sinne and the deuill. For that must needes be true whiche he sayth, that he hath rysed vp an horne of blessednes or salvation. And in whatsoever place that horne shall be, there is no accesse neither for death, neither for sinne, nor the deuill. And that in the house of Dauid. Wherfore a Christian is both defiled and yet without sinne, and free from Satan. Howe commeth this to passe? After this sorte. Your brotherly charite hath oftentimes heard heretofore, that God leaueth in vs an appearance and feeling of death and the deuill, so that my sinne disquieteth me and troubleth my conscience, and would drieue me vnto desperation. Moreouer the iudgement of God terrifieth me, death assaileth me, as if it would devoure me. Satan is at hande and seeketh to suppresse me. God suffereth these to remaine & taketh

keth them not quite away. For this appearance must continue, that we may perceiue and feele that we are nothing else of our selues but sinners, subiect to sinne and Satan. And yet vnder this appearance liech hid, life, innocencie, and dominion and victorie ouer sinne, Satan, hell, &c, as Christ him selfe sayth Matthe.16. Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke will I build my Church, & the gates of hell shall not preuaile against it, he sayth not, they shall not assaile it, nor fight against it: for these two remayne to sinne and death.

Nowe it is also erpedient that I feele the biting of sinne, the terrorre of the wrath of God, the horzour of death, yea and death it selfe. But all this is a certaine ouerward appearance before my sight and the sight of the world, which knowe and iudge none otherwise, but that sinne, death, and Satan are present. Notwithstanding in the meane season vnder that assault and terrorre the word and spirit are, encouraging me, preseruing me, & assuring me, that God is not angry with me, that my sinne is forgiuen me, that I shall neither dye, nor be forslaken: Upon this foundation I hope my hart doth wholy rest. And no man hauing such a confidence in God, remaineth vnder sinne, neither is drowned in death, but is made a conquerour of sinne and death. This is, not to prouale or overcome, for that albeit Satan attempteth, yet he doth not get the victorie. We call the house of Dauid, a mortal house, sinnefull, and subiect to the deuill, according to the maner of all flesh and blood, and yet notwithstanding the horne of saluation is raysed vp in the same, that men of that kingdom may enjoy saluation and felicitie. Hereby ye see that this kingdom is the kingdom of faith, which can not be touched nor outwardly perceived of any, which one can not shewe to an other, but every one must haue it in himself, that when he shall draw neare unto death, shal feele sinne, or euenslee death before him, he may then in faith lay hold on this kingdom, & beleue that his sinnes are forgiuen him. For Christ therefore died, that thou mightest be in this kingdom of faith. Wherefore sinne shal encounter with thee in vaine, death is taken away, Christ is with thee, who can hurt thee, who can do any euill vnto thee? Here life and death, sinne and innocencie, Christ and Satan doe fight one with an other, but Christ, life, & innocencie doe ouercome and conquer. This is soone spoken, but not so easilly felt, yea the contrary surely is rather felt.

soze if thou wilst esteeme and consider this kingdom according to the iudgement of the world, thou shalt vterly erre and be deceipted. The world calleth that a good & peaceable kingdom, where all thinges are quiet, prosperous and goe well forward, where is safetie, peace, and innocencie outwardly. But here is the kingdom of saluation and grace, although it alwayes appeare otherwise. Wherefore all these thinges are to be understood in spirit and faith, & not to be iudged according to the person or outward appearance.

Neither ought it to seeme straunge that this kingdom doth flourish in the middes of sinnes, the force of Satan & death, wherof Zacharias here singeth euен from the bottom of his hart, and knoweth well how it commeth to passe, faith and the spirit renewing it. Concerning sinne I haue seene or knownen none in whom it is not. Whomsoever thou settest before thee, sinne will by and by appeare. Paule a most holy Apostle affirmeth of him selfe, that he feeleth sinne in his members. VVill, sayth he, is present with me, but I find no meanes to performe that which is good. For I doe not the good thing which I would, but the euil which I would not, that do I. He wished in deede to be free from sinnes, but yet he could not but liue in them. And I and such like are also desirous to be exempted from sinnes: but that can by no meanes be brought to passe, we doe onely reppresse and keepe them vnder: when we haue fallen into sinne, we rise againe. But as long as we are clothed with this flesh, and beare the burden thereof about with vs, so long sinne is not extinguished nor can be wholly subdued. We may well goe about and endeavour to subdue it, notwithstanding old Adam will leade his life also, vntill he shall dye and come vnto the graue. What shall I neede to say any moze? The kingdom of Christ is a certaine speciall kingdom, wherein euery one of the Sainctes is compelled to make this confession: Almighty God, vnto whose power all thinges acknowledge them selues subiect, I confesse my self to be a miserable sinner, reuenge not, I beseech thee my old iniquities. Al also must sing this song: Our father, &c. forgiue vs our trespasses, as we forgiue them that trespass against vs. Other righteous & holy ones, which knowe no measure or ende of their righteousness and holines, doe understand nothing hereof, and therefore this Gospell is not preached vnto them, seeing that they thinke the kingdom of Christ to be such such, that there is no sinne at all in it, but that all thinges in it are cleane & pure: they require such a Christian as is wholy cleane from all filth of sinne, and without sinne as Christ him selfe, such a one they shall never be able to finde.

Now he is a Christian, who being a sinner, confesseth him self a sinner, who hateth the feeling of sinne, striuing against it from his hart. He is not a Christian which thinketh that he hath no sinne, neither feeleth any. But if thou knowest any such, he is an Antichristian, and not a true Christian. The kingdom of Christ therefore consisteth among sinnes, it is established there where he hath set it, that is, in the house of Dauid. Yea set Dauid him selfe before your eyes, and ye shal finde him to haue bene a sinner: who notwithstanding is bold to glory, that he is a seruant acceptable to his Lord. There is none of y^e faidfull which ought to be ashamed of this maner of prayng vnto God, or of any other not much vnlke vnto it: Lord forgiue vs our sinne: is it therefore true that they haue sinne, because they say so? yea truely, for if they shold lye, they shold be the childdren of Satan. But godly Christians are weary of this life, greatly desiring the life to come. Now it is not giuen vnto them in this earth to goe so farre, that they may say: We are subiect to no vices, we are cleane from all sinne: if they shall goe so farre, it is Satan that deceiueth them. Notwithstanding they are sorie for their sinnes, and doe lament them, yea it grieueth them to the hart, that they must beare the miserable burden of this flesh, and they crie out together with S. Paule Rom. 7. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer me from the body of this death? This shrite & crie all the faidfull doe giue, for that feeling sinne, they doe most earnestly desire to be deliuered from it. And in this feeling & knowledge of sinne, the kingdom of Christ consisteth, so, that euē in sinne there is no sinne. That is, albeit I doe both acknowledge and feele sinne, yet saluation and the kingdom doe so firmly abide in my conscience, that God sayth vnto me: I will forgiue thee thy sinne, for that thou hast faith, and beleueest in Christ my especially beloued sonne, who was deliuered to death for thee, neither shall thy sinnes hurt thee. Others, which feele not their sinnes, but trust in their workes, and complaine nothing of their faultes and offences, thinking them selues cleane: such are giuen to Satan, & not received or admitted into the kingdom of Christ: for they which are partakers of this kingdom can not be without conflicts and tribulation.

Death, Satan and the world doe somewhat trouble the godly, but the godly at the last ouercome them.
Psal.118.18.

And that I may speake moze plainly, recken I pray thee, any of the Sainctes, whom death doth not trouble: yea I know thou shalt not finde one, which is not afraid, and trembleth not at the horrible sight of death. But the conscience taketh comfort here by the Prophet Dauid, who sayth: The Lorde hath chastened and corrected me, but he hath not giuen me ouer vnto death: it fighteth against vs in deede, but it preuaileth not. Thus a Christian wrapped in sinnes, is both vnder sinnes and aboue sinnes, & at the last notwithstanding obtaineth the victorie. After the same sort also must he haue to doe with Satan, with whom he must wrestle all his life, and at the last ouercome him. So in the world also he must suffer many conflicts and troubles, and yet at length become victor. For although it be a kingdom of saluation, which hath neither rest nor quietnes, but suffreth the force of hel, death, the devill, sinne, and all maner of aduersitie and tribulation, yec they which be in it, doe with an invincible courage endure, and at length ouercome all euills. But God therefore permitteth these thinges, that our faith may be exercised, and shew forth it selfe. Moreouer that is a pleasure to the conscience, and bringeth unto it comfort and ioye, that it hath such a kingdom, that it may say: Blessed be the Lord God, who hath visited and redeemed vs, and hath raised vp a kingdom in the house of Dauid. That is, for that he visiteth vs by his word, deliuereth vs from sinnes, and maketh vs conquerours ouer death and Satan.

Thus he haue heard both that a kingdom is raysed vp in the house of Dauid, and also that a Christian is both dead and yet alive, is innocent in the middes of sinnes, and although he be subiect to Satan, yet notwithstanding hath dominion ouer Satan. For both are true, for that sinne, death, hell doe assaile the flesh, but doe not ouercome, forasmuch as this kingdom of saluation triumpheth ouer them all. Wherefore as it were with a certaine great boldnes or confidence he calleth it a horne, that is a stronge and puissant kingdom: Which hath no rest or truce, but being assailed of many and stronge enemies, is always diligently occupied in defence of it selfe, and doth notably repell the force of þ enemie. So a Christian laying hold on this horne, ouerthroweth sinne, death, and Satan. Neither consisteth this horne in our strength, strength, neither are we makers thereof: for God hath made and raysed it vp by the ministerie of his word, whereby we are sauied. Wherefore Zacharias so singeth, that his songe hath respect not to his own sonne, but to Christ. Yea he celebrateth this kingdom as pertaining to the Jewes onely, and declareth that it shall be glorious, and maketh no mention of the Gentiles, how they also shoulde come vnto it, as beside others, Simeon in his songe, the beginning whereof is, Lorde nowe leuest thou, &c. did prophetic, that we Gentiles also are chosen into that kingdom. But here he foretelleth of a kingdom raysed vp of God to the Jewes, euena kingdom of salvation and blessednes, and that in the house of his seruaunt David. Wherefore he sayth moreover:

Verse 70. As he spake by the mouth of his holy Prophets: which haue bene since the world began.

Wherefore he hath raised vp this kingdom, that he might confirme his promise, whereby he had foretold that he would sometime rayse vp a kingdom, &c. And now that time is come, wherein he will fulfill that his promise. So Zacharias reduceth þ hope of salvation, the kingdom of Christ, to the olde Testament, that out of it he may bring witnessesse of so strong and puissant a kingdom. For the Prophets from the time of David did all prophete: The Prophets foretold of the kingdom þ should be raysed vp in the house of David. The seede of David shoulde haue a kingdom in the earth, yet a spirituall kingdom: and aboue the rest Elai and Jeremie foretold, that it shoulde be such a kingdom, that the government thereof shoulde consist in the spirit & woorde, to these especially Zacharias hath here respect. The other as Osee, Micheas, and the rest, doe speake of the same kingdom, but not so manifestly.

Verse 71. That he would deliuier vs from our enemies, and from the handes of all that hate vs.

The Euangelist hath hitherto generally rehearsed, what that kingdom of Christ is, whereof the Prophets prophesied. Nowe he speakeþ of it also, but particularly, declaring wherein it consisteth. First in this, that he deliuereþ vs from the handes of our enemies, yea and from all them that hate vs. Ye see here and vnderstand, most dearely beloued, that this verse doth witness & most Wherin this kingdom of salvation conplainely declare, that we which are his people and kingdom, doe live amongst enemies, and that no other is to be looked for of vs but to be hated of them: That also the force, qualitie, and nature of this kingdom consisteth in this, that it deliuereth vs out of the handes of all them that hate vs, as the Prophet David sayth Psal. 110. The Lord shall send the rod of thy power out of Sion: be thou ruler in the middes of thine enemies. And Psal. 45.

Thine arrowes are very sharpe, euen in the middes of the Kings enemies. It is a delight vnto Christ that his kingdom is set in the middes of the fight, yea and in the middes of the haters thereof. These things are written for our comfort, that we which mind to serue vnder the Prince of this kingdom, be so instructed, that we looke for no other then is here prescribed and set forth vnto vs: that we seeke not here to get vnto vs the fauour of the wold, neither that we serue the wold, and labour to haue no enemies therein. For the wordes of Zacharias declare that it is the quality of this kingdom to deliuere from enemies. Now if it deliuereth vs from enemies, and as it were draweth vs out of the hands of them that hate vs, surely it can not be a kingdom of peace, but such a kingdom as is subiect to the hatred and malice of the wold. As ye see at this daye, that our enemies beare a deadly hatred vnto the light, which hath a litle shined forth, thankes be to Christ therefore. No man is any where so hated as a Christian. Both the Pope, and the furious Bishops with their false Apostles, also the raging Princes, moreouer the holy, learned, and wise of the wold, all at this day doe most bitterly hate Christians. Neither are they content, that they be killed & slaine, but they would haue them extinguished and vtterly rooted out, that there may be no memorie of them, as they thinke, left among men. And this is the state, these are the badges, and cognisances of Christians: that when Satan by his ministers persecuteth vs, he thinketh quite to roote vs out. This verse also gineth vs to vnderstand, that Christ is our King, that he may saue and deliuere vs out of the handes of our enemies: which he notably performeth, and sheweth his power in the middes of the wold, in the middes of the force of flesh and Satan, when as peace and quietnes is no where left to a Christian, but in his Christ alone. This also we must marke, that there is not one but many, which assape & persecute Christians: but yet that we shall not therefore be destroyed, soasmuch as we haue one, which is stronger both then the world and the Prince thereof as John sayth. Nowe whereas he promisech vs, we know certainly, that he both will and is able to performe: we shall indeede feele the assault, but he will not suffer vs to be destroyed or ouercome, so that we hope and trust in him. It followeth moreover:

Verse 72. That he might shewe mercy towards our fathers, and remember his holy couenant.

Verse 73. That is, the oth which he sware to our father Abraham that he would giue vs.

He will deliuer vs, not onely from all euill both of body and especially of soule, but also from our enemies, Satan, and men, & as a Christian must be as it were ouerwhelmed with all euills together, so also he shal be againe wholly deliuered from all euils. And he sheweth that this grace and blessing was promised to their fathers. Such is the maner of the Apostles also, that they oftentimes haue recourse to the old Testament, as I haue sayd before, that God spake and promised by the mouth of the Prophets, &c. even as Zacharias doth in this place. Some man may now say: They are dead, how therefore will he shew mercy vnto them? Againe, what neede is there to rehearse, that he woulde shew mercy to the fathers, when as it is declared in þ Prophets? But this is therfore done, that the truth of God may be shewed forth, and may be also approued vnto vs, that we shoulde not be ignorant, that those thinges are not due to our merits. In the first booke of Moses is mentioned, how God promised to Abraham, that in his seede all þ nations of the earth shoulde be blessed. That is, that by Christ shoulde come peace, grace, and blessing to all nations. Which promise was differred so long a time, that it appeared, that it was in vaine and abolished. So vnwise, as it seemeth to the worlde, both God shewe him selfe in his matters, as though all thinges went backward. Notwithstanding howsoever it was delayed and seemed, yet it is fulfilled and performed whatsoeuer was promised to Abraham, and God hath not onely deliuered him from his enemies, but hath bestowed vpon him all good thinges, yea hath giuen him selfe unto him, and all that he hath. And all this is therfore done, for that (as Zacharias here sayth) this mercy and goodnes was before promised and confirmed by an oth unto them, which are long since dead, when as we yet were not. He is mercifull therefore and fauourable, not because of our merits, as though he did owe it unto our righteousness, but of his onely grace, fauour, and mercy.

God both promised, & fulfilled his promise, not moued through any workes or merits of men, but of his meere grace and mercy.

These are horrible thundrings against our merits & workes, that we can not glory, that we haue deliuered our selues from sinnes, or that we haue deserued his goodnes, and the preaching of the Gospell. No, it is not so. Here is no place for boasting; but this text sayth, that thou, O Lorde, didst promise certaine thousands of yeares before I was boorne, that thou wouldest doe it. Who did then desire him, that he would giue vs those thinges, when he had determined with him selfe to giue them? And vpon this promise the Prophets are bold and doe stay them selues, for by it we attaine unto true goodnes, that the mouth of euery one may be stopped, that he that wil glory, may glory in þ Lorde. For thus the Lorde may say: that thou liuest in my kingdom, that thou enioyest my goodnes & grace, it is not to be imputed to thee, but unto me: I promised, and determined with my selfe to fulfill my promises, thou being ignorant thereof. And here the mouth of euery one is stopped. So at this day also none of vs, unto whom, thankes be to God, the Gospel hath shined, can glory that we obtained it by our owne meanes, labour, endeouour, or good conuersion. For those which were counted the best workes, and the most excellent studys are disallowed and ouerthowne, as to celebryate Mass, to ioyne him selfe to this or that hypocriticall sect, which they call an order, &c. These the Gospell condemmeth and rejecteth, and how can I attaine to the Gospell by that which it rejecteth? Wherefore this standeth sure and certaine, that all that we haue, is of the meere grace and goodnes of God, so that with his honour and praise we may confesse, that we haue deserued farre otherwise, namely hell fire, if besides this he bestoweth any thing vpon vs, it is the gift of his grace and goodnes. And this is that which Zacharias sayth, that is was foretold by the Prophets, and boch promised and confirmed by an oth to the fathers, that he would performe unto vs the couenant made to Abraham. Thus he sayth to Abraham: By my selfe haue I sworne, sayth the Lorde, that in blessing I will blesse thee. And in thy seede, &c. Which words the Prophets diligently held, marked, handled, hadled, & alwaies trusted vnto them, for that he doth here solemnly sweare , that he might wholy assure vs , that he would poure forth his blessing vpon vs . And now the tyme is present, the hower is come, wherein, he hath sworne, that saluation shold come vnto vs , as it is declared Mar. 16. Goe ye into all the world & preach the Gospell to euery creature: he that shall beleue & be baptised, shall be saued: but he that will not beleue , shall be damned. Men surely haue not merited it, no nor Abraham him selfe, who was not made partaker of the promise, seeing that he died long before the fulfilling therof. In spirit in deede and faith he was partaker of it, but he liued not so long, til the Gospel was revealed to þ whole wrold. The promise therfore was made vnto him, although, as I haue sayd, he looked not for þ fulfilling ther-of in this life. That is, his life was not prolonged vncill the preaching of the Gospell in the whole wrold, although in faith he obtained the Gospell for him selfe . Wherefore it can not be sayd, that that promise was due to his merits, otherwise he must haue liued in the earth vncill the fulfilling therof, and a due price or reward must haue bene payd vnto him. But now the performing of the promise was after his death, so that every one must needes confess, that that promise was not made to Abraham because of his merits.

Againe, it can not be sayd, that the Gentiles which enjoy this promise, haue obtained it by their merits , which then were not. God promiseith to the fathers and performeth not, he performeth to the Gentiles, to whom notwithstanding no promise was made, tiles merited not the enjoying of the promise.
who all at that time were not. God will always retayne to him self his honour, and be the same God, although the wicked wrold can not be so persuaded . He chasteneth , reprooueth , rebuketh , pouoketh, stirreth, allureth, doth whatsoeuer is to be done, but the wroldlings rob him of his honour , and attribute it to them selues, that is, they will not acknowledge , that whatsoeuer they possesse or haue, it commeth vnto them by the only grace of God. When therefore we glory of such good thinges, & acknowledge not God to be the authoř and giuer of them, we make our selues as God, and him as our seruaunt. So he is dishonoured, and the honour attributed vnto vs . But albeit we make marchandize of his honour , yet he hath affirmed in the Scriptures , that he will keepe his honour and glorye onely to him selfe , that so he may be acknowledged to giue all thinges of his meere and only grace. These thinges he that beleueth, doth also receiue them:

he that doth not beleue, shall at the lēghth receiue his due reward.
Zacharias sayth moxeouer :

Verse 74. That we being deliuered out of the hands of our enemies, might serue him without feare, Verse 75. All the dayes of our life, in holines and righ-teousnes before him.

He hath defined the nature and propertie of this kingdom: that is, the couenant made with Abrahām, that in his seede all the nations of the earth shoulde be blessed, &c. Which words of blessing, thus sayth he, I will interpret unto you, that being deliuered out of the handes of our enemies, we may serue him without feare all our life long in holines and righteousnes before him. Which to the wōld and our flesh sauoureth not well. For the wōld thus murmureth here: I had thought that he woulde haue giuen vs some pretious thing, as a purse well stufed with money, a rich wife, fayre and bewtifull chiloren, goodly houses, and whatsoe-uer the wōld is delighted in. But now I perceiue it to be otherwise, I heare that we must without feare serue him in holines & righteousnes, and so please him. Wherefore it shalbe meete that we apply hereunto spirituall eyes and eares, that we may moze rightly consider and vnderstand the wordes. Whereas he sayth, that he will deliuere vs from all our enemies, it is againe thus to be vnderstood, that this kingdom is placed in the middes of enemies, and notwithstanding that it is not therefore destroyed, but that alwayes all the enemies and aduersaries thereof are ouer-come. We must understand also that the deliuernace from our enemis tendeth hereunto, that we shoulde alwayes obey him that deliuereþ vs, without any feare. And this is a Christian thing, & an amiable kingdom, that a Christian shal leade his life without feare. Howbeit God hath bestowed this vpon vs, that we shoulde hereafter serue him alone.

The words without feare, include in them, that we shall quietly enioy the good thinges of this present wōld, & of the wōld to come. For a Christian is sure and certaine of the forgiuenes of his sinnes, although he as yet feeleth them, as we haue sayd a li-

ile before. He is certaine that death hath no power in him : that Satan doth not ouercome him : that the wold can not preuaile against him. Such a hart is without all perill and feare, & plainly free from them. Which doe not thou so vnderstand, as though we do not seele sinne at all, but that we are greatly grieved when sinnes trouble vs, when the image or sight of death terrifieth vs, when as being reproched and sclaundered of the wold, we stand as destitute, and haue none in this earth, to whom we may turne vs or resorȝt for succour, but God alone . These thinges indeede are felt, but they doe not preuaile nor ouercome vs : for the hart notwithstanding remaineth safe and quiet in God . So pouertie also is felt, when thou art pinched with hunger, & hast not where-withall to fill thy belly , to maintaine thy wife and brynging vp thy children, nor any certaine place where to dwel and abide, but all these thinges shall not hurt thee : thou must aske of God whatsoeuer thou needest, & serue him without feare , as our present ex declareth. But herein we doe for the most part behauie our selues not as Christians , we iudge after our owne affection and sense, according as the wold doth blame vs, or report euill of vs. Also when our fieldes haue no corne , no money is in our purse , we thinke our selues vterly destitute and forsaken. But a true Christian with shut eyes and eares sayth with Paule speaking to the Galathians : O flesh, sinne, death, ye are dead unto me : and I againe am dead unto you, that Christ may liue in me . The wold is crucified unto me, and I unto the wold. That is, the wold hath no care or regard of me , and my preaching and life is mocked and scorned of it. But with the same measure that thou mea-surest unto me , I will measure to thee againe : if thou despisest me, I also will despise thee : if thou makest no account of me , I againe will make small account of thee.

What care I, if the wold hate me , when as I displease not him that dwelleth in heauen ? if this hatred continue euен dayly, if sinne rage, and the wold talke and prate many thinges, what then ? let it do so vwill it be weary, I wil passe ouer these things as if I heard them not. This is indeede to forsake the wold, and to die unto it, to liue without feare, to be occupied about no other thing, but that which is according to Gods will , to speake nothing at all but that which shall please him , and which I shall know to be agreeable to his wold : that I may liue so , and doe

those workes, which I knowe certainly are acceptable before him, that in my whole life whatsoener I doe either outwardly, or inwardely, I may be certaine that I seeke his glorie, and endeouour to fulfill his will. So I am separated from the wrold, and notwithstanding doe still liue in the wrold. No man is lesse in the wrold then a sincere Christian: and againe, no man is more occupied and hath to doe with the wrold then an entire Christian. That is, the wrold doth more intently looke unto him, and Satau more often and vehemently assaileth him, then him that is ignorant of Christ, of grace, and of faith. Christ and Paule had experience hereof: they had combats & conflicts with the wrold: they were troubled and molested, yea the whole wrold was against them. Againe, a true Christian is not in the wrold, albeit the wrold rage & fret cruelly against him: for he alwayes trusteth in God, and sayth: Lord, I am thine, thou shalt deale wel with me, graunt thou that my matters may goe forward according to thy will, onely be thou on my side, and I shall be in safety.

All the dayes of our life. All our life long, that is continually, without ceasing.

In holines and righteousnes before him. Here S. Luke diuideth righteousness and holines into two sortes: of which one is acceptable before God: þ other before him is of no value: wherby we haue to understand, that both the righteousness & holines of God are in no estimation before the wrold, euen as the wrold is wont nothing to esteem God, and againe God little to esteem the wrold. For that which God calleth iust, the wrold calleth unius: and that which it calleth right, God calleth crooked: and so these two Champions are continually at variance betwene them selues. That which God calleth holy, seemeth to the wrold deviliſh and vnrighteous. Wherefore he comforteth vs here, declaring that there be two sortes of righteousness and holines: One, which we ought to obserue diligently: An other which we ought to auoide. Hitherto it hath bene the chiese holines and righteousness of all, which could be inuented, to runne into Monasteries, to put on monkish apparel, to be shauen, to weare a hempten girdle, to give him selfe to fasting and prayer, to be clothed with heare cloth, to lye in wollen garments, to obserue an austere maner of living: and in a summe, to take vpon him monkish holines and religion. And thus sticking in a colourable shew of good works,

Hypocritical
holines and righteousnes

we knewe none other but that we were holy from top to toe : having regarde onely to woxkes and the body , and not to the hart, Where we were full of hatred,feare, & incredulicie, troubled with an euil conscience,knowing almost nothing righly of God. The the woxld cried openly : O that holy man : O holy and chast woman , which haue included them selues within the walls of Monasteries, which day & night kneeling vpon their knees say many rosaries,as they call them.O,what holines is there,where euen God him selfe dwelleth,where the holy Ghost the comforter abideth present ? These thinges the woxld boasteth of, and greatly esteemeth. But beside these they doe not marke, how they pray with no earnestnes of hart, howe they teach and instruct no man, howe they giue vnothing to any , but catch unto them selues both the blood and sweat of the pooze , and leauie true sincere woxkes vndone. This righteousnes & holines the woxld extolleth, which notwithstanding stinketh and is wholy vncleane before God, which he will haue euuen to be vnkowne vnto vs, yet the woxlde resulseth to admit any other.

But there is an other maner of righteousness then this whereof God esteemeth & accepteth, which also we must consider, now it is of this sorte : It consisteth not in a graye garment, nor in a blacke or white coule, but in a pure conscience . To wit,when I believe, that Christ is my saluation , and that my woxkes can preuaile nothing hereunto : but that he doth all thinges which God hath regarde vnto. Then I say no more: a gray garment is holy,a red garment is prophane, forasmuch as I know,that not in a gray or any other garment, but in Christ all thinges consist.
For no man can attaine to this , that a gray garment may clense his hart from filth , or that a monasterie may purifie it : for it is necessary that God onely purifie the hart by faith , and the holy Ghost,as Peter witnesseth Act. 15. When the hart is now pure, the house is vnto it as the fielde, and the fielde as the house : The market is as much esteemed of it as the Monasterie, and contrariwise. Neither remaineth there vnto me any woxke , place, or garment,which I count prophane : for all thinges are alike vnto me , after that holines hath fully possessed my hart. That euuen God sayth vnto me : Thou art godly , I am thy father , thou art my sonne. And herein we ought to persist , that we be holy , and without feare doe obey and serue him. Here the ticle and badges of a Christian are seene, & this is his cognisance, to wit, that being holy, he is the Minister of God without feare. But what sinner is there which dareth challenge to him selfe this title? Let one come forth, which dareth auouch him selfe to be godly, righteous, holy, and the seruaunt of God, destitute of no good thinges either of mind or body. Now he that can not glory of these thinges, is not a Christian. For of these thinges must a sincere Christian be partaker. But what lettech that one dareth not challenge to him selfe this title? Euen a timorous conscience: for we alwaies feele sinne, and our life is euer fraile. I see nothing but an honest life, although God require this also of vs, yet he will not be content therwith, but there is neede that there be yet a certain higher thinge, that I dare be bolde to say: Lorde God maker of the whole worlde, I am certaine that I am holy before thee, and am thy seruaunt, not for myne owne sake, who do as yet feele sinnes in my selfe, but through Christ, who hath taken away my sinne, and made satisfaction for me. These thinges surely I ought to glory of, if I be a true Christian.

But this seemeth difficult and hard: God admitteth no sinne, my fearefull and weake conscience is against me. How am I his seruaunt, when as notwithstanding I feele in my selfe, that I serue the deuill, and doe not knowe that I am holy? I speake not here of the common sort of Christians, such as I, and such like are: but of sincere Christians, which haue a good conscience, and in whose hartes the spirit of God abideth, whose conscience albeit it be frayle and weake, and they feele their sinnes, yet they are enforced to say: Howsoever sinne is, yet I know no sinne by my selfe, neither am I subiect to death and hell, and for this caule they striue, and at the last ouercome, that theresoere they would euen die, in that confidence. But I finde it farre otherwise, if I set my life before my sight. Here life and the wrod must be separated farre asunder. If thou wilt consider life, I will set also before thee the liues of S. Peter, Paule, or John, thou shalt finde euen them not to haue liued without sinne. When thou desirest to be holy before God, trust not to thy life, vntesse thou wilt perish for euer. For thou must trust to onely mercy and grace, and not to life or workes, otherwise thy case will be very ill. Wherefore our hart must be so affected that it say: Lorde, if thou shouldest call me to an account, I shoud not be able either by life or workes to stand

Stande in thy sight, no althoough I were euen John the Baptiste.
 Nevertheles therefore I glory that I am godly, & thy seruaunt, for that thou doest give unto me continually, and also for that, as thou hast promised to Abraham, thou doest for thy Christes sake, vouchsafe to shew thy mercy unto me: if so be that I of my selfe be not godly and righteous, yet he is godly and righteous for me: If I be prophane, he is holy: if I be not þ seruaunt of God, he is the seruaunt of God: if I be not without feare and carefulnes, yet he is void of all feare and carefulnes: that so I may as it were transferre my selfe from my selfe, and perse into him, & glory, that in Christ & by Christ I am good. Thus he will haue vs to glory, that we are godly and holy, but not by our owne merit: for we must glory of our selues, as of most desperate wretches.

And that this may be plaine, marke our life, consider our good conuersation and maners, weye how foolishly men apply them selues to the Gospell, that I am almost in dout, whether I should preach any more or no. For as soone as these thinges are taughe in a sermon, that saluation consisteth not in our works or life, but in the gifte of God, every one is slow to doe good, no man will liue an honest life, and be any more obedient, they falsly affirme every where, that good workes are inhibited. Nevertheles God requireth of vs, that we lead an honest life outwardly, and he that doth not so, shall at length finde his due punishment. Nowe if it happen that we liue godly and honestly outwardly, Satan by and by stameth his wickednes. Neither doe I know at this day how to ordre my selfe in this matter, not because of my owne person, but because of life. For if we preach of an honest and godly life, the woylde by & by furiously attempteth without iudgement,
 "to build ladders to heauen: which God neither can, neither wil by any meanes suffer: Againe, a dishonest and ignominious life doth not become Christians, neither doth a delicate life become them. What therefore must we then doe? They which haue respect onely to an honest and fayre life, it were better for them to be adulterers and adulteresses, and altogether to wallow in the myre. And yet notwithstanding God will not haue vs to lead our life filthily and dishonestly. For neither can he suffer that, adiud-ging thee euen unto hell therefore, if thou so doe. And if thou lead an honest life, thou wilt sticke in it, and arrogate unto thy selfe, which againe he can not suffer. Thou must therefore so prouide that thou remaine in the middle patche , declining neither to the right hand, nor to the left, and that thou lead a quiet, fayre, and amiable life in the sight of the world: which also may be acceptable before God , and yet that thou doe not therefore so greatly esteeme it, nor count so of it, as though thou doest merit any thing of God thereby.

Thus a Christian continueth the holy seruaunt of God without feare, not by his good woxkes and holy life , but by the grace of Christ. But he that affirmeth that he is holy by his workes, is blasphemous against God, robbeth God of his honour, and denieth Christ, for whom it were better, that he were ten times an homicide, or an adulterer , then that he shold thereby affirme him selfe to be a Christian, yea godly and holy: for he doth plainly dishonour Christ , and it is as much as to affirme that there is no Christ: for he is therefore called Christ, for that he is our grace, mercy, redemption, and holines. If I shold not attribute to the diuine mercy, that God him selfe doth sau me , what shold this be else, but to say, that he is neither holy nor blessed ? Wherefore if I be a Christian, I must confesse, that I am holy and a Christian for this cause, for that Christ him selfe is holy. And albeit my conscience doth reproue me of sinne, yet I must still perseuer in this , that his holines is greater then my sinnes . Thus I must liue honestly outwardly, but inwardly rest and trust in him alone. It followeth moreouer how Zacharias turneth his speech to the child, and sayth :

Verse 76. And thou child shalt be called the Prophet of the most High: for thou shalt goe before the face of the Lord to prepare his wayes.

This shall be thy office: Thou shalt be the first, and shalt first begin : that is, thou shalt be the Prophet of the most High: But what maner of prophecie shall that be, how shall it be done : After this sort : Thou shalt be the forerunner of the Lorde, & shalt prepare his wayes. When any Prince commeth , certaine goe before him, to prepare way and place for him, and say : Giue place, depart out of the way : John doing the like, runneth before and crieth unto the people : Goe aside , turne out of the waye , giue place, the Lorde him selfe commeth . Such a seruaunt is John, whom whom the Lord by and by followeth. Such thinges no Prophet at any time hath spokē, but they haue prophesied of these things, that a Prophet shoulde sometime come, which shoulde erect a kingdom that shoulde continue for ever, &c. But all dyed, not one remayned, which did behold this being aliue. But this Prophet doth liue euē at that tyme, when the Lord him selfe commeth, and by and by followeth him. For the Gospell was begon to be preached, Baptisme was begon to be ministred, by the coming and ministry of Iohn, who ceassing, Christ began, boch almost in the same yeaire. Now what shall be his office? This truely, to The office of Iohn. prepare a way for the Lord. Which preparation is nothing else, but to bring people to þ Loerde the Sauour. Christ is the grace, gift, King and horne of our salvation. This Loerde and King no man receiueth, unles he be first humbled, that he thinke nothing of himself. For he can not otherwise attaine vnto Christ, neither can stand together, to receiuie the grace of God by gift, and also to merite the same. Iohn therfore in this part teacheth men nothing else, but that they are sinners and altogether nothing. He now which acknowledgeth him selfe, and seeleth him selfe a sinner before, yea and to be nothing, well understandeth the voice of Iohn, which is, prepare ye a way for the Loerde: Give place to him: He is at hande that followeth me, who is greater then I, him ye shall heare, him ye shall obey. The other office of Iohn which followeth, is, that he bringeth men to the knowledge of salvation, and sheweth with his finger that pascall Lambe, that taketh away our sinnes, that he may fasten them to the crosse with him selfe and abolish them. Whereof Zacharias now goeth on to speake.

That is, thou shalt begin the office and ministry of the word, whereby is taught and learned how one is sauied. Which saluation or blessednes consisteth in this, not howe we may be famous through great abundance of riches, glory, and power in earth, as the Jewes haue hitherto understood it: but that we may obtaine remission of sinnes, and be made partakers of the grace of God. Now where remission of sinnes is, there is no merit, no reward or satisfaction, otherwise it could not be called remission of sinnes. So that this knowledge is, to understand, how God forgiueth vs our sinnes without workes and merits, and saueth vs by meere grace and mercy, as it followeth:

Verse 78. Through the tēder mercy of our God, wherby the day springe from an high hath visited vs.

Here it appeareth that they which teach and obserue lawes, workes, and merits, doe striue against both the mercy of God & knowledge of saluation. For he sayth not y forgiuernes of sinnes hath come by the prayers or workes of the fathers, or of any of meth not by the Sainctes, but through the bottomles mercy of God, which Luke calleth the tender mercy, and such mercy as commeth from the most inward affection and bowells. Notwithstanding this forgiuernes of sinne, which commeth vnto vs by mercye, is not without merit, although it commeth to passe without our merit: but a Mediatour commeth betwene, who hath in our steede deserued it for vs, which is Christ our Lorde. For God would that satisfaction shold be made vnto him for our sinnes, and that his honour and lawe shoulde be performed, here we were able to doe nothing. But Christ alone both was able, and satisfied for vs who of the infinit mercy of the father, was sent for y same cause, and that to vs, that he might dispatche it. Therefore he sayth, Through which infinit & bottomles mercy the day springe from an high hath visited vs, Without all dout it was no merit, but only unmeasurable mercy, that Christ came to vs, and merited and obtained for vs such remission of sinnes vnto eternall saluation. Now he calleth him, the day springe from an hie, which signifieth vnto vs his diuinitie. And this is his meaning: on hie, that is, aboue all creatures, where nothinge is hier, but heighth alone, there is Christ in his diuinitie, as the morning or day springe. For he proceeded from the father, as the beames doe from the sunne, whereof we haue elsewhere spoken at large.

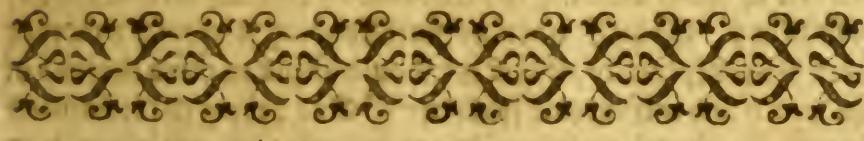

Verse 79. To giue light to them that sit in darkenes, & in the shadow of death, & to guide our feete into the way of peace.

Many of the fathers vnderstood this of Lymbus, as they call it:

Forgiuenes of sinnes cometh not by worke of ours, but through the tender mercy of God.

it; but Luke agreeith here with þ saying of Esai, where he sayth: The people that walked in darkenes, haue seene a great light, &c. His meaning therfore is this: Christ therfore came, that he might be the light of the world, and by the Gosspell might enlighten mens hartes, and allure them to him selfe, which were held captiue vnder Satan in the blindnes and darkenes of incredulicie, that so he myght guide our feete into the way of peace, that is, he myght gouerne our conscience well, quietly and chearefully in the kingdom of grace, that we may be afraid neither of Satan, neicher of sinne, death, hell, nor of any aduersarie, who heretofore haue rested, partie of vs in filiby vices, partie in good workes, notwithstanding we could on neicher side enioy any quietnes or peace, but were compelled to despeire vnder Satan, and the feare of death, neicher did we knowe howe to finde that way which leadeth unto peace, according to the saying of the fourteenth Psalm: The way of peace haue they not knowne, &c. Thus ye haue heard how Zacharias doth in most godly and fit wordes most liuely paint out the Gospel and kingdom of Christ, with all the frutes, colours & conditions thereof, that it is a wond and kingdom of grace, of forgiuenes of sinnes, also a kingdom of peace, joy, quietnes, saluation and all goodness. God graunt, that we may throughtly know and seele the same. Amen.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER OF THE MEDITATION OF CHRIST HIS PASSION.

Inst, some doe so thinke vpon þ passion of Christ, that they are incensed with anger against the Jewes, and doe inuict against wretched Iudas in songes and reprochfull wordes: and thus they are content, and thinke this to be sufficient, euen as they are wont in lamenting the case of other, to take pity on them), and to accuse and condemne their aduersaries. But that can not be called a remembryng of the passion of Christ, but rather of Judas and Judas his wickednes.

Secondly, some haue noted in their mindes diuerse commodities and frutes proceeding of the meditation of Christes passion, that saying which is ascribed to Albertus being commonly in their remembrance, that it is better to thinke vpon the passion of Christ superficially or once, then if one shoulde fast the space of a whole yeare, and daily in praying goe ouer the whole Psalter, &c. That they follow hitherto, being blind and iustly stumbling, contrary to the true frute of the Lordes passion. Moreover they seeke their owne thinges therein, and therfore they bringe with them images, booke, letters and croses. Some also go so farre, that they thinke they shall make them selues safe from waters, terrois, fire, and from all daunger, as though the Lordes suffering should be without suffering in them, contrary to the quality and nature thereof.

Thirdly, some haue compassion of Christ, lamenting & weeping for him as being an innocent man, like unto the women which followed Christ from Jerusalem, who were reprehended and admonished of him, that they shoulde weepe for them selues & for their childdren.

Fourthly, some so call to mind the passion of the Lord, and so consider Christ, that inwardly they are soze afraid, yea their reason also or vnderstanding is turned into a certaine astoniednes or balsfulnes. Which feare notwithstanding ought to proceede from hence especially, in that we shoulde be put in mind thereby of the wrath and immitable severite of God prepared for sinnes & sinners, soasmuch as he would not graunt to his onely begotten and beloued sonne that sinners shoulde be absoluued and pardoned, byles he did make so great a satisfaction for them, as he speakeith by Esay chap. 53: For the transgression of my people haue I smitten him. What shall come vnto the sinner, when a sonne so exceedingly beloued is smitten? It must needes be that there is an unspeakable and a most serious and earnest matter, where so great and excellent a person doth descend to doe good vnto him, & suffereh and dyeth for him.

Fifly, reuolve deepeley in thy minde, and dout not a whit, that thou art he which so tormenteth Christ, soasmuch as thy sinnes were

sion of Christ ought

were most certainly the cause thereof. Thus S. Peter in the second of the Actes, did strike & terrifie the Jewes as it were with a certain lightning, when as he sayd unto them generally: whom you haue crucified, so that the very same day three thousand men were greatly terrified, and being pricked in their hartes sayd unto the Apostles: Men and brethren, what shall we doe? Wherfore when thou considerest that his handes were pearsed with nayles, thinke that it was thy woake: when thou remembrest his crowne of thornes, perswade thy selfe that it was thy wicked cogitations, which caused it, &c.

Sirly, thinke with thy selfe, that whereas one thorne pricked Christ, thou oughtest worshiply to be pricked with an hundred thousand thornes, & that without intermission, yea & much more grievously: and that whereas one nayle pearsed the hands and feete of Christ, thou oughtest to be grieved & molested with many moe and farre moe sharpe nayles continually, euuen as it shall come at the last unto those, in whome the passion of Christ hath not bene effectuall but frustrat. For Christ who is the truth it selfe, will lye to no man, will delude no man, and that which he attempteth must needes be a matter of exceeding great importance and wonderfull high.

Seuerently, such feare Bernard had conceiuied hereof when he sayd: I did play abroad in the streeete, and in the Kinges priuie chamber sentence of death was giuen vpon me. The Kinges onely begotten sonne hearing this, layd of his diadem & came forth, clothed in sackcloth, his head sprinkeled with ashes, & bare foote, weeping and crying out that his seruaunt was condemned to death. I beholding him sodenly comming forth, am amased at the straungenes thereof, I aske and harken after the cause. What shall I doe? Shall I play still and delude his teares? Alas (sayth he) it is no time now to play, it is no time to be secure, when so weighty a matter is in hande. So he bad the women that they shoulde not weepe for him, but for them selues and for their chil- dren, and he adiogneth the cause: For if they doe these thinges to a greene tree, what shal be done to the drie? as if he sayd: learne what ye obtaine by my passion, and howsoever thinges fall out, per this is true and knowne among you, that the whelpe is sometime smitten, that the bandogge or mastiue may be terrified. So also the Prophet hath spoken: All kinieds of the earth shall waile before him. He sayd not, they shall bewaile him, but, they shal waile before him. Moreouer they were soye afraid, of whom it is before spoken, so that they sayde vnto the Apostles Act. 2: Men and brethren, what shall we doe?

Eightly, that this affection may be wrought in vs, the Lordes passion is very diligently to be considered of and meditated vpon, forasmuch as the most certaine profit thereof doth much consist herein, that a man may come to the knowledge of him selfe, and tremble and be troubled before him selfe: whereunto he that doth not come, hath not yet attained vnto the due profit of the Lordes passion. For the passion of Christ hath this proper and naturall vertue, to make a man like vnto him, that euuen as he was grieuously tormented both in body and mind for our sinnes: so we also to imitat him must be afflicted in the knowledge of our sinnes. Howbeit the matter is not here done in many words, but in depe cogitation and earnest weyng of sinnes. Take a similitude: as thou hast great cause to feare and tremble, if, when some malefactor is condemned, for that he hath killed the sonne of the King or Prince, thou in the meane season, singing and playing securely as being innocent, art terribly apprehended and conuicted, that thou diddest suborne the homicide: So thou oughtest to become much more fearefull when thou doest revolue in thy minde the passion of Christ. For albeit the wicked Jewes be now iudged of God and dispersed, yet were they Ministers of thy transgressions, and thou for a certainty art he, which with thy sinnes hast crucified and slayne the sonne of God, as it hath bene sayd.

Ninethly, he that feeleth him selfe so hardened and dull, that the passion of Christ doth not terrifie him, neither bring him vnto the knowledge of him selfe, is in an ill and lamentable case: for Christes passion is not effectuall in him. But nowe it is a harde thing for thee to be occupied in these thinges, and earnestly bent to the meditation of them: wherefore thou shalt pray God that he will mollifie thy hart, and giue thee grace profitably to meditate vpon the passion of Christ, because it can not in any wise be, that the passion of Christ should be inwardly and rightly thought vpon and considered of vs, vntles God inspire it into our hertes. Yea, neither this meditation nor any other doctrine is therefore set forth vnto thee, that thou shouldest boldly rushe vpon it of thy selfe to fulfill it, but that thou shouldest first aske and desire the grace

ation of

sion we

tion vpon

sion may be

grace of God, that thou mayst fulfil it, not by thine own strength, but by Gods grace. For hereof it commeth, that they of whom it is before spoken, do not meditate on the passion of Christ aright, because they desire not helpe of God thereunto, but rather trulling unto their owne strength, and following their owne inuen-tion, meditate vpon it altogether after the fashion of men, and after a slender and vnfrutefull maner.

Tenthly, if one shold through þ grace of God meditate righly vpon the passion of Christ, by the space of one day, or of one hower, yea or the space of a quarter of an hower, we would faithfully pronounce of him, that he hath done better, then if he had pined him selfe with fasting the space of a whole yeare, or had runne ouer the Psalter euery day. For this maner of meditation doth as it were chaunge a man, and almost regenerate him a new like vneo baptisme. Then in deede the Lordes passion doth his naturall, due and noble office, it killeth the old Adam, it diueth away all pleasure, ioy and confidence, which may be had of creatures, euen as Christ was forsaken of all, yea euen of his fether.

Eleuenthy, seeing that such a thing is not in our owne power, it commeth to passe that we doe often times aske it, and yet do not by and by obtaine it, notwithstanding we must not therefore dispeire or cease, though at the first we obtayne not that we pray
for.

Twelvthly, when as a man thus knowing his sinne doth wholy tremble in him selfe, he must especially endeouour, that sinnes doe not still remaine in his conscience, otherwise meere desperation will come thereupon, but he must shake them off and cast them vp-on Christ, and so vnburden his conscience. Therefoze see againe and againe that thou doe not that which peruerse men do, which wihin the secretes of their hart do vexe & disquiet them selues because of their sinnes, & striue with them, that by good woxkes or satisfactions, by farre going on pilgrimage, or else by pardons they may become safe, and may be made free from sinnes, which can not be. And (alas) such a false confidence in satisfactions and pardons hath preuailed very farre.

Moreover, then thou doest cast thy sinnes from thee vpon E iii.

What it is to cast our sinnes vpon Christ, when thou firmly beleuest that he suffered & was wounded for thy sinnes, and that he hath payd the ful ransom and satisfaction for the, as Esaias sayth chap. 53. The Lord hath thrown vpon him all our sinnes.

1. Pet. 2. 24.

2. Cor. 5. 21.

And S. Peter sayth: who his owne self bare our sinnes in his body on the tree. S. Paule sayth: He hath made him to be sinne for vs, which knewe no sinne, that we should be made the righteouses of God in him. In these and such like authoritie thou must repose thy hope with all boldnes, and that so much the more, as thy conscience doth more grieuously vexe and trouble thee. But if thou shalt not doe this, but presumest that thou shalt be quiet by thy contrition and satisfaction, then thou shalt never come unto quietnes, but at the last shalt fall euuen into desperation. For our sinnes kept and medled with within our conscience, and sette before the eyes of our hart, are farre stronger then we, and doe liue immortally. But when as we see them layd vpon Christ, and to be victoriously conquered of him by his resurrection, and doe confidently beleue this, then they are dead and brought unto nothing. And yet being layd vpon Christ, they must not remayne so: for they are swallowed vppe in the triumphe of his resurrection. Soe sayeth Sainct Paule: Christ was deliuered to death for our sinnes, and is risen agayne for our iustification, that is, he hath taken vpon him our sinnes in his passion, and hath thereby payed the ransome for them, but by his resurrection he iustifieth vs, and maketh vs free from all sinne, if so be that we doe beleue this.

What we must doe when we can not attaine vnto this faith, to beleue that Christ died for our sinnes and rose again for our iustification.

If thou canst not attaine vnto this faith, thou must as it is a little before sayd, resort vnto God by prayer, forasmuch as this gift is in the hand of God only, who bestoweth it when & vpon whom it pleaseith him. Thou maist also stirre vppe thy selfe hereunto: first, not now considering the passion of Christ outwardly, (for that hath nowe fulfilled his function and hath terrified thee) but rather by pearing inwardly and contemplating his most louing hart, with how great loue towards thee it is replenished, which brought him hereunto, that he did beare thy conscience together with thy sinnes with so great and painesfull difficultie. So thy hart shall waxe swete towards him, and the strength & boldnes of thy faich shall be increased. Then hauing entred vnto the hart of Christ, ascend higher euuen vnto the hart of God, and consider that the loue of Christ could not haue bene shewed vnto thee, except cepte the will of God by his eternall loue had so appointed, wherunto Christ by his loue toward thee did obey. There thou shal find a diuine hart, a good hart, a fotherly hart, and (as Christ sayth) thou shal be drawne vnto þ fother by Christ. There thou shal understand this saying of Christ: So God loued the world that he gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whosocuer beleeueth in him, should not perish, but haue eueralsting life. For this is to know God aright, when he is understood of vs, not vnder the name of power or wisedom (which is a terror vnto vs) but vnder the name of goodnes & loue. Then faith & confidence may stand constantly, & man him selfe is as it were regenerate a new in God.

When thy hart is thus established in Christ, so that thou art now become an enemy of sinne, and that by loue and noe through feare of punishment, then afterward the passion of Christ ought to be an example vnto thee in thy whole life, and is now to be considered of in thy mind after a farre other maner then before. For hitherto we haue considered it as an outward thing which should worke in vs, but now we will wey it so, that something is to be done of vs also. For examples sake: when griefe or infirmitie doth molest thee, thinke howe light these are being compared to the crowne of thornes and the nayles of Christ. When thou must either do or leaue of that which is grievous vnto thee to do or leaue of, thinke how Christ was taken and bound, and led vp & downe. When pride tempytest thee, consider with thy self how thy Lord was mocked, and reputed among theenes. When lust & pleasure pricke thee, thinke with how great sharpenes the tender flesh of Christ was corne with whippes, and pearlyd through. When anger, enuye, desire of reuenge moue thee, thinke with how great teares and cryes Christ did praye euen for his enemies, toward whom he might more iustly haue shewed him selfe sharpe and rigorous. When sadness or any aduersitie whatsoeuer either corporall or spirituall troubleth thee, strengthen thy hart, & say: well, why shoulde not I also suffer a litle sorrowfulnes, when as my Lord did sweat blood in the garden for anguish & heauines. Surely he were a sluggish and an ignominious seruaunt, who, his maister lying at the poynct of death, woulde be held from him with a soft and easie bed.

Lo, thus a man may find strength & remedie in Christ against

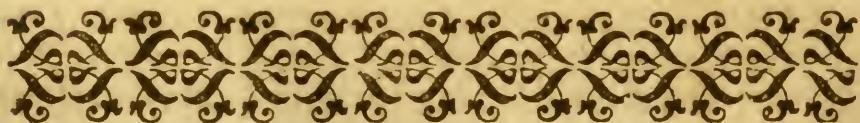

In the meditation of Christes passion we may finde remedy against griefe, pride, lust, anger, enuy, sorrow, trouble, &c, all crimes and offences. This is truely in deede to meditate vpon the passion of Christ: these are the frutes of the Lordes passion, in which he that doth after this soþt exercise himselfe, doþ surely without comparison better then if he heard all passions or all superstitious Masses. Such also are called true Christians, which doe so represent the life and name of Christ in their life, as S. Paule sayth: They that are Christes, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lustes with Christ. For the passion of Christ is not to be handled in wordes and outward shewe, but in deede and veritie. So S. Paule admonisheth vs: Consider him that endured such speaking against of sinners, least ye should be wearied and fainte in your mindes. And S. Peter sayth: Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for vs in the flesh, arme your selues likewise with the same minde. But such meditation is now growen out of use and begon to ware rare, wherewith notwithstanding the Epistles of Peter and Paule are most abundantly replenished.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER OF THE FRVTE AND VERTUE OF CHRIST HIS RESVRRECTION.

It is not enough to know the historie of Christes passion and resurrection, but the vse and frute of them must be preached and knownen

E haue heard in the treatise of the Lordes passion, that it is not sufficient to know onely the bare historie thereof. After the same maner it is not enough here to know, how and when Christ rose againe, but both the vse and the profit as well of his passion as of his resurrection must be preached and knowne, to wit, what Christ obtained for vs by them. For where the onely deede of the historie is preached, it is a friuolous preaching and without all frute, which both Satan and the wicked doe as well know, reade, and understand, as we doe. But when as the vse of them them is preached, and whereunto they profit, that in deede is a frutefull and wholsom Sermon, and full of sweete consolation. Wherefore Christ him selfe hath declared the vse and profit of his passion and resurrection, when he thus talked with the women Matt. 28: Be not afraid: Goe and tell my brethren that they goe into Galile, and there shal they see me. And this is the first word, which they heare of Christ after his resurrection from the dead, whereby he confirmeth all his sayinges, also all his benefites shewed vnto them before, to wit that they shold come vnto vs also that shold beleue in him, and pertaine onely to the beleuers, for that here he calleth not onely the Apostles his brethen, but also all them which beleue in him, although they doe not see him visibly as the Apostles did. He doth not differre vntill we pray vnto him and call vpon him, that we may be made his brethen. Let any of vs now come forth, and boast of his merit, or of the strength, whereby he is able to merite any thing. What had the Apostles merited? Peter denied Christ thrise. All the rest of the Disciples did flie away from him, they did perseuer and stand by him, euene as the hare tarieith with her yong ones, he might haue called them runawayes, and foysakers of their standing in the middest of their conflict, yea traitors and wicked men, rather then brethen. Wherefore of meere grace and mercy this worde was brought vnto them of the Matrones, which the Apostles them selues did then well perceiue, and we also doe throughtly feele, when we are set in the middes of sinnes, and are ouercome of damnation.

This word therefore is ful of all consolation and comfort, that Christ careth for such wretched men as we are, yea and that he doth call vs his brethen. If so be that Christ be our brother, surely I would sayne know what good thing we shall want. As therfore the case standeth among carnall brethen, so doth it stand here. They that are germane brethen by consanguinitie, do vse goods common among them selues, hauing the same father, the same inheritance, otherwise they were not brethen. So we also possesse common good thinges with Christ, enjoying the same father, the same inheritance, which inheritance is not diminished by parting it, as worldly inheritances are, but is alwayes made more abundant: for it is a spirituall inheritance. A corporall inheritance, when it is distributed into diuers parts, is made smal-

Ier, but in this portion of the spirit, the case is such, that he that hath gotten part thereof hath obtained the whole. What is therefore the inheritance of Christ? In his power are life and death, sinne and grace, and whatsoever is contained in heauen and in earth, his are eternall veritie, strength, wisedom, righteousnes. All power is giuen unto him, he hath rule ouer all thinges, ouer hunger and thirst, prosperitie and aduersitie, &c. he reigneth ouer all thinges that can be thought, whether they be in heauen or in earth, spirituall or corporall, and that I may speake at once: All thinges are in his power, as well eternall thinges as temporall. Now if I shall cleave unto him by faith, I shall be made partaker of all his good thinges, and shall not obtaine a part of the inheritance onely, but I shall possesse euен with him everlasting wisedom, eternall strength. My belly shall not be grieved with hunger, sinnes shall not oppresse me, neither shall I be afraid of the face of death, neither shall I dread the sight of Satan, neither shall I want the plenty of any thing that is good, euен as he wanteth it not. Hereby now we may easily understand the sayinges uttered commonly in the Prophets, & especially in the Psalmes, as where David sayth Psal. 34: The Lions doe lacke and suffer hunger, but they that feare the Lorde shall want no maner of thing that is good: and where he sayth in an other place; The Lord knoweth the wayes of the righteous, and their inheritance shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perious time, and in the dayes of dearth they shall haue enough. And againe: I haue bene yonge and now am old, and yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede begging bread. All which thinges Christ bringeth with him, so that we are, and are called his brethren, not because of any merit but of meere grace. If we would print these thinges in our hart, þ we might thorughly feele them, it should goe well with vs, but they goe in at one eare and out at an other. This is that wherof S. Paule so greatly glorieth Rom. 8. As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sonnes of God. For ye haue not receiued the spirit of bondage to feare againe: but ye haue receiued the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father: The same spirit beareth witnes with our spirit, that we are the children of God: if we be children, we are also heires, euен the heires of God, and heires annexed with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we we may also be glorified with him.

Moreover this title ascendeth so high, that mans mind is not able to comprehend it. For unles the spirit the comforter did impart this grace vnto vs, no man shoulde euer be able to say: Christ is my brother. For reason can not be bold so to say, albeit one repeat it in wordes very often, as the new spirits doe. It is a higher thing then that it can be so spoken, for except the hart feele it, as it is requisite it shoulde, it shall be nothing but onely flatterie. But if thou feele it inwardly in thy hart, it will be so excellent a thing vnto thee, that thou wilt much rather say nothing of it, then speake and talke of it, yea by reason of the greatnes of so good a thinge, thou wilt perhaps dout as yet and be in an vncertaintye whether it be so or not. They which onely cry out thus: Christ is my brother, are fanatical spirits, who vainly pronounce words without any frute. The case standeth farre otherwise and farre moze maruelously with a true Christian, so that he is thereby enforced to be amased, neither dareth he either say or confesse any thing sufficiently thereof. Wherefore we must endeavour, that we doe not heare this onely with fleshly eares, but that we feele it in our hart, for then we will not be so rash, but we shall be forthwith caried into an admiration thereof. True and sincere Christians enter into the viewing and feare of them selues, thinking thus: O wretched and defiled creature, which am drawned in sinnes, am I now made worthy, that the sonne of God shoulde be my brother? how doe I miserable wretch attayne to such a thing? Thus he is by and by astonied, and doth not well understand the thing. But a great studie and endeavour surely is required, that a man may beleue this, yea if it were felt, as it ought in very deede, a man shoulde forthwith dye thereupon. For he can not understand it according to his flesh and blood, and the hart of man in this life is moze narrow and straight, then that it is able to comprehend so great thinges. But in death, when the hart shall be stretched out, then I say we shall trie what we haue heard by the word.

In the Gospel of John chap. 20. Christ doth farre more plainly declare vnto Marie Magdalenthis vse and frute both of his death and also of his resurrection, when he sayth: Goe vnto my brethren and tell them: I ascende vnto my father and your father, vnto my God & your God, this is one of the most comfor-table places whereof we may glory and boast. As though Christ should say: Marie, get thee hence and declare vnto my Disciples which did flee from me , which haue thorooughly deserved punishment and eternall condemnation , that this resurrection of myne is for their good, that is, þ I haue by my resurrection brought the matter to that passe, that my father is their father , and my God is their God . They are but a fewe & verie short wordes in deede but they containe great matter in them,namely,that we haue as great hope & confidence repos'd in God , as his owne sonne him selfe. Who can comprehend such exceeding ioye, I will not say, bter it? that a wretched and defiled sinner may be holde to call God his father & his God euен as Christ himselfe. The authoř of the Epistle to the Hebrewes chap. 2. did well remember the wordes of the Psalme, and weied with him selfe how it speaketh of Christ, who,as he sayth, is not ashamed to call the beleeuers, brethren, saying : I will declare thy name ynto my brethren, in the middest of the Church or congregation will I sing prayses to thee.

If any worldly Prince or noble man should humble him selfe so low,that he would say to a cheefe or robber , or to one that is infected with the french pocks : thou art my brother, it would be a certaine notable thing which every one would maruell at . But whereas this king which sitteth in glory at the right hand of his father,sayth of some poore man : this is my brother, that no man layeth vp in the bosome of his brest , neither doth any man consider of it in his mind, wherein notwithstanding our chiefe comfort and confidence consisteth against sinne,death, the devils, hell, the law, and against all sinfuller successe of thinges as well of the body as of the mind. Moreouer, soasmuch as we are flesh & blood, and therefore subiect to all kindes of aduersitie, it followeth, that the case shold stand so also with our brother, otherwise he shold not be like vnto vs in all thinges. Wherefore, that he might be made conformable and like vnto vs, he tasted and had experience of all thinges euен as we haue, sinne only excepted, that he might be our true brother, and exhibite him self openly vnto vs. Which the Epistle to the Hebrewes doth liuely set forth chap. 2. where it sayth : Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh & blood,he also him selfe likewise tooke part with them, that he might destroy through death,him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, & that he might deliuer all the,which for feare of death were all their life time subiect to bondage. For he tooke not on him the Angells nature, but he tooke on him the seede of Abrahām. VVherefore in all thinges it behoued hym, to be made like vnto his brethren, that he might be mercifull, & a faithfull hie Priest in thinges concerning God, that he might make reconciliation for the sinnes of the people. For in that he suffered and was tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted. The profit, vse and frute of the Lordes passion & resurrection S. Paule hath gathered very biefly and as it were into one shourt summe, when he saith Rom. 4: Christ was deliuered to death for our sinnes, and is risen againe for our iustification. Whereof thus much at this time shall suffice.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER OF THE GOOD SHEPEHEARD.

Verse 11.

Jesus sayde vnto the Iewes: I am that good shepeheard: that good shepeheard giueth his life for his sheepe.

12. But an hyreling, & he which is not the shepeheard, neither the sheepe are his owne, seeth the woulfe comming, and leaueth the sheepe, and fleeth, and the woulfe catcheth them, and scattereth the sheepe.
13. So the hyerling fleeth, because he is an hyerling, and careth not for the sheepe.

14. I am that good shepheheard, and know myne, and am knowne of myne.
15. As the Father knoweth me, so know I the Father: and I lay downe my life for my sheepe.
16. Other sheepe I haue also which are not of this folde: them also must I bring, and they shall heare my voice, and there shall be one sheepefold, and one shepheheard.

His text is full of consolation, which in a goodly parable setteth forth Christ our Lord, & teacheth what maner of person he is, what be his workes, and of what affection he is toward men. Neuertheles it can not be vnderstood, but by comparing togither light and darkenes, day and night, that is, a good and an euill shepheheard, as the Lord also doth in this place.

We haue nowe oftentimes heard, that God hath instituted and ordeined in the worlde two maner of preachings: One is, when the word of God is preached, which sayth Exod. 20: Thou shalt haue none other gods before me. Also: Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not commit adulterie, Thou shalt not steale, & doth also threaten, that he which doth not keepe those precepts shall dye. But that preaching doth iustifie no man. For although a man be thereby compelled to shew him selfe godly outwardly before men, notwithstanding inwardly his hart is offended at the law, and had leuer there were no lawe. The other ministerie of the word is the Gospell, which sheweth where that is to be received, which the lawe requireth, it neither vrgeth nor threateneth, but allureth men gently, it sayth not: doe this or that, but it sayth thus: Goe too, I will shew where thou mayst receiue and take, whereby thou mayst become righteous: Behold, here is Jesus Christ, he will giue it thee. Wherfore these two disagree one with an other, as much as to receive and giue, to exact and reward. And this difference is to be well vnderstood and marked. To hardened and vntractable men, which feele not the Gospell, the lawe is to be preached, and they are so long to be vrged, till they begin to be mollified and humbled, and doe acknowledge their disease, which when it is done, there is then place to begin to preach the Gospell. These two sortes of preachinges were instituted and ordayned of God, besides these there are other which were not ordayned of God, but are traditions iauented by men, ordained of the Pope and his Prelats, wherewith they haue perverted the Gospell. These are not worthy to be called either shepheards or hirelings, but they are those which Christ calleth theues, robbers and wolves. For if we will rule and guide men rightly and well, that must needes be done by the worde of God: whereby if it be not done, we surely labour in vaine. Furthermore Christ enreaceth here of that second ministerie of þ word, and describeth of what sorte it is: he maketh him selfe the chiese, yea the onely shepheard, for that which he doth not seede, doth surely remayne valed.

. Ye haue heard that our Lorde Jesus Christ after his passion and death was raysed from the dead, is entred into, and placed in immortalicie, not that he myght sit idle in heaven, and reioyce with hym selfe, but that he myght receiuē a kingdom, might execute the function of a gouernour and king, of whom all the Prophets, yea & the whole Scripture doe speake very much. Wherfore he is to be acknowledged to be unto vs continually a present gouernour and ruler, neither must we thinke that he is idle in heaven, but that he doth from aboue both fill and gouerne all thinges as Paule sayth Ephes.4. who hath an especiall care of his kingdome, which is the Christian faith, hereupon it must needes be, that his kingdom doe florish amonge vs here in earth.

Of this kingdom we haue elsewhere sayd, that it is so ordayneyned, that we all encrease every day and become purer, and that it is not gouerned at all by any force or power, but by outward preaching alone, that is, by the Gospell. And this Gospell comineth not from man, but Jesus Christ him selfe brought it, and afterward put it into the hartes of the Apostles, and their successors, that they might comprehend it, and into their mouthes that they might speake and publish it. Hereby is his kingdom gouerned, wherein he so reigneth, that all the power thereof consisteth in the word of God. Now whosoeuer shall heare & beleue this, doth pertaine to this kingdome. Moreover this worde is afterward made so effectuall, that it giueth all thinges which are necessary to man, & bringeth a certain abundance of all good things which may be had. For it is the power of God which is able to saue every one that belieueth, as Paul witnesseth Rom. I: When thou belieuest that Christ died for thee, to deliuer thee from all euill, & so cleauest vnto the wozde, it is sure and certaine that no creature is able to ouerthow thee. For as none is able to ouerthow the wozde, so none is able to hurt thee, when thou stickest vnto it. By the wozde therefore thou doost overcome sinne, death, Satan, hell, and thither thou must resort and flie, where the wozde is, that is, to eternall peace, ioy, and life, and briesly, thou shalt be made partaker of all such good things as are promised in þ wozde. Wherfore the gouernment of this kingdom is maruelous: the wozde is published & preached through the whole wozld, but the power thereof is very secret, neither doth any man marke that it is so effectual, & that it so much profiteth them that belieue: howbeit it must be felt and tasted in the hart. We therfore of the ministerie are able to performe no more, then that we are the mouth of our Lorde Christ, and the instrument whereby he openly preachech þ wozde. For he suffereth the wozde to be published abroad, that every one may heare it. But faith maketh that it is felt inwardly in þ hart, yea and it is the secret worke of Christ, whensoeuer any knoweth that it is his duety, and is also willing to doe according to his divine will and good pleasure.

But that this may be the better perceived, we wil now intreat of our text, wherein Christ first sayth: I am the good shepeheard. And what is a good shepeheard? A good shepeheard, sayth Christ, giueth his life for his sheepe. And I leauie my life for my sheepe. Here the Lord declareth what his kingdom is, bringing a goodly parable of the sheepe. Ye knowe that it is a beast of all liuing creatures most foolish and most simple, so that thereupon it is commonly spoken as a prouerb, if we haue to speake of a simple one: He is a sheepe. Neuertheles it is of that nature moxe then other liuing creatures, that it quickly knoweth the boyce of his shepeheard, neither followeth it any beside his owne shepeheard, being alwaies of that qualitie that it cleaueth to him, and seeketh for helpe of him alone, being not able to helpe it selfe, neither to feede it selfe, neither to heale it selfe, nor keepe it selfe from the wolues, but doth wholy consist in the helpe of an other. Christ therefore bringeth the qualitie and nature of the sheepe in manner of a parable, and transformeth him selfe into a shepeheard, whereby he doth very well shewe, what his kingdome is, and wherein wherin it consisteth, and his meaning is this: My kingdom is nothing els, but that I may feede sheepe, that is, miserable, needy, and wretched men in the earth, which doe well perceiue and seele, that they haue no helpe or counsell any other where, but in me alone.

But that we may declare this more plainly, we will adde hereunto a place out of Ezechiel chap. 34. which speakest of euill shepheards that doe contrary vnto Christ, & sayth: Ought not the flockes suffer them selues to be fed of the shepheards? VVhy therefore doe you feede your selues? Ye haue eaten the milke of the sheepe, ye haue clothed your selues with the woll, the best fed ye haue slaine, but my flocke haue ye not fed. The weake haue ye not strengthned, the sicke haue ye not healed, the broken haue ye not bound together, the driuen away haue ye not brought againe, the lost haue ye not sought, but with force and crueltie haue ye ruled them. And now my sheepe are scattered, for that they are destitute of shepheards, yea all the beastes of the field deuour them, and they are dispersed ouer all mountaines, and ouer the whole earth. That which he here sayth is well to be marked: his very meaning in this place is, that he will haue the weake, sicke, broken, abiccts, and lost, to be strengthned, healed, cured, sought, not spoyled and destroyed. These thinges ye ought to doe, sayth he to the Shepheards, but ye haue done none of them. Wherefore I my selfe (as he afterward sayth) will deale thus with my sheepe: That which is lost will I seeke againe, that which is driuen away will I bringe againe, and iothat which is not well will I give a remedie and heale it. Here thou seest that the kingdom of Christ is such as hath to doe with those that be weake, diseased and broken, & hath care of them to helpe them. The preaching whereof in deede is very full of comfort, but this is wanting in vs, that we doe not throughly seele our miserie and weakenes, which if we felt, we would soothly runne unto him. But how did those shepheards behauie them selues? They ruled in rigour and straighly exacted obedience of the lawe. Moreouer, they added their owne tradicions, as they doe also at this day, which if they be not kept, they cry out, and condemne him that transgresseth them, so that they doe nothing else, but vrge more and more and commaund their owne iuinations. But this is not to feede wel or to gouerne a soule, as Christ sayth, who him self is not such a shepheheard, for by such maner of feeding none is holpen, but the sheepe are vitterly lost as we shall understand.

Weake con-sciences how they must be handled.

Now we will handle the place of the Prophet in order. First he sayth that the weake sheepe are to be strengthned, that is, the consciences which are weake in faith, and haue a sorrowfull spirit, and are of a faint courage, are not to be enforced, that it shold be sayd vnto them: This thou must doe, thou must be strong. For if thou be so weake, thou art ordyned to eternall punishment: This is not to strengthen þ weake. Thus saith Paule Rom. 14: Him that is weake in the faith receiue vnto you, & entangle not consciences. And by þ by after he addeth Rom. 15: VVe which are stronge ought to beare the infirmities of the weake. Wherfore they are not to be severely compelled, but to be comforted, that although they be weake, they may not therfore despaire, for afterwards they shall become stronger. Esaias the Prophet did thus forespeake of Christ cap. 42: A broosed reede shall he not breake, & the smoking flax shall he not quenche. The broosed reede signifieth miserable, weake, and broosed consciences, which are easily so shaken, that they tremble, and lose hope and trust in God. With these God doth not forthwith deale rigorously and after a violent maner, but he dealeth gently with them, lest he breake them. Moreouer the smoking flax, which doth as yet burne a litle, & nourisheth more smoke then fire, are the same consciences, which ought not againe to despaire, for he wil not vitterly extinguish them, but alwayes kindle them, and more and more strengthen them. Which truely to him that knoweth it, is a great comfort. Wherfore he which doth not gently handle weake consciences after this sort, doth not without dout execute the office of a true shepheheard.

Afterward the Prophet sayth: That which was diseased, ye ought to haue succoured. Who are those diseased ones? They whiche in their maner of living, and in their outward works haue certain diseases, and vices. The first pertaineth to the conscience when as it is weake: the other to the maners or conditions of life, when as any being caried with a wilfull mind and wayward braine, doth offend here and there, to wit by wrath & other foolish doings, as euен the Apostles fel sometimes grieuously. Such as are so vicious in the sight of men, that they are an offence to others.

thers, and are iudged obstinate and wayward, God will not haue to be rejected and despiered of. For his kingdom is not ordered after such a maner, that the stronge and whole onely shoulde lyne therein (which pertaineth to the life to come) but Christ is therfore set in it, that he may haue a care of such & helpe them. Wherefore albeit we are so weake and sickle, notwithstanding we must not so despaire, that we should say, that we are not in the kingdom of Christ, but y moxe we feele our disease, so much the more we must come vnto him, for he therefore is at hande that he may remedie and heale vs. Now if thou be weake and oppressed with faintnes, feeling great affliction, hereby thou hast gotten a greater occasion to goe vnto him, & to say on this maner: Most sweete haue to flic Christ, I therefore come vnto thee because I am a sinner, that thou maist helpe and iustifie me: yea very necessitie doth compell thee hereunto. For the greater thy disease is, so much moxe needfull is it for thee to be healed. And Christ him selfe requireth the same of vs, and doth allure vs to come vnto him boldly and cherefully. But others which are not such shepheards, do thinke that they shall make men righteous, if they exact much of them and vrge them much, whereby they onely make that which is euill worse, as we see it to be done at this day, whereas it is come to that disorder, that all thinges are most miserably brought out of course, as in this place the Prophet sayth.

The broken haue ye not bound togither. To be broken is, as when ones legge is broken, or a wound some where else giuen him. That is, when as a Christian is not onely weake and diseased, that he stumbleth sometime, but also runneth into so great tentations, that he breaketh some part, and so is brought to that passe, that he falleth and denieth the Gospell, after the maner of Peter, who did forsware Christ. Now if any shoulde so stumble, vounly that he should be compelled to goe backe, & be vitterly cast downe they even in minde, neuertheles we must not as yet cast him of, as though he did never any more pertaine to the kingdom of Christ: for we Gospel, must must leauie Christes propertie to him self, that his kingdom may remayne unto him selfe meere grace and mercy, whose desire is to helpe them onely, which are grieued with their calamitie and miserie, and doe greatly desire to be deliuerned from it. That his kingdom may altogether abound with comfort, and he himselfe be the comfortable and gentle shepheard, which prouokech and

ter cause we

allureth every one to come vnto him. And all this is done by the Gospell, whereby the weake are to be strengthned, the sicke to be healed. For it is such a word as is fit for all distres of consciences, giuing abundant comfort to all, that none despere although he be a great sinner. Christ therfore alone is y good shepheheard, which healeth all sortes of diseases, and helpeth them that are fallen: which he that doth not, is not a shepheheard.

The Prophet thus goeth foward: That which was driven away, ye haue not brought againe. What is that that is driven away? The despised soule, which is so scorned and contemned, that it is thoughte to be done in vaine, whatsoever Christian doctrine is bestowed vpon it. Notwithstanding Christ doth not yet suffer, that it shold be dealt roughly with. His kingdom is not compassed with so straight boundes, that onely the stronge, whole and perfect doe florish therein, for this pertaineth to the heauenly life to come, now in this his kingdom onely grace and sweetnes must abound. As God promised to y children of Israell Exod. 3. that y appointed land of Canaan shold flow only w milk & honyn, euen as Paule 1. Cor. 12. affirmeth, that vpon those members of the body, which we thinke moze vnhonest, we put moze honestie on.

He concludeth: The lost haue ye not sought. That is lost which seemeth to be condemned, of the returne whereof there is scarce any hope. Of which sort in the Gospell were publicanes & harlots, and at this day they, who haue not so much as a sparke of godlines, but are vrtractable and vruly. Neither are they notwithstanding to be lese, but all meanes are to be assayed that at the last they may be reclaimed and brought againe into the right way. Which S. Paule estloones did, as when he deliuered two of this sort vnto Satan, 1. Tim. I. I haue deliuered them vnto Satan that they might learne not to blasphem. And 1. Cor. 5. I haue determined, sayth he, to deliuere them to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may besaued in the day of the Lorde Iesus. Them he cast of as condemned, and yet notwithstanding did not despere of them. Christ therefore is so to be preached, that he reiecteth no man although he be weake, but that he willingly receiuesth, comforteth and strengthneth every man, so that he alwayes appeareth to be the good shepheheard. Hereupon it commeth to passe, that men willingly resort vnto him, and that it is no neede any moze to compell them. The Gospell spell so allureth, and maketh them willing, that they come with a certayne loue and pleasure, and with all boldnes, Wherupon a desire and loue vnto Christ is increased in them, so that they doe any thing willingly, who before were to be vrged and compelled.

If we be constrainyd, we doe grudgingly & unwillingly, which God plainly abhorreth. But when as I shall perceue that God dealeth so louingly and gentlyly with me, my hart is as it were rauished, so that I can not stay my selfe, but I must euuen runne vnto him, leauing all other things, wherupon afterward all pleasure and ioy ensueth vnto me.

Now consider how great an euill it is, when one iudgeth an other. The kingdom of Christ, as we haue heard, is so ordeined, that it healeth and iustifieth onely sickle and miserable consciences, wherefore all they are farte deceived, which haue regard only to the stronge and whole. It is great therefore and very effec-tuall knowledge whereby Christ is well knowne. It is grafted in vs by nature to be altogether euill and wicked, & yet notwithstanding we would haue euery one to be honest, we earnestly regard stronge Christians, not looking therewithall to the sickle and weake, thinking them not to be Christians, if they are not stronge, and iudge others euill, if they be not altogether holy, when as we our selues in the meane season exceede the rest in naughtines. Now the cause hereof is our most corrupt nature, & our blind reason, which will measure the kingdom of God according to her owne opinion, whereby it thinketh that those things are vncleane before God, which seeme vncleane vnto it self, wherfore that opinion must be remoued out of our minde. For if thou hast very much regard thereunto, thou shalt at the last come into the mind to thinke: alas, what shal become of me, if all Christians must be such, namely, stronge, whole, and godly? When shal I once attayne so farre? And so thou shalt bringe thy selfe into such a perplexitie, that thou shalt hardly euer attayne vnto true comfort and ioye. Thou therefore must be so affected, that thou say: Most gracious Jesu, although I finde my selfe altogether weake diseased, and in a wretched state, yet I will not therefore cast of all hope, but wil flie vnto thee, that thou mayst succour me, For thou onely art the Shepeheard, & the good Shepeheard, such a one I am perswaded that thou art, wherfore I will not despeire or be discouraged, although I come vnto thee being voyde of workes. We must thereforee bestow our diligence that we may wisely & well know Christ, that in his kingdom onely the weake and diseased are conuersant, and that it is nothing else, but as it were an hospitall, wherein onely the sicke and feeble doe lie, of whom a care must be had. But few men haue this knowledge, for this wisedom is exceeding hard to be attayned vnto, so that it is wanting euuen vnto them sometime, who haue the Gospel and the spirite, neither can any wisedome come vnto men which is greater then it. Wherfore, albeit men looke into the Scripture, which setteth forth the kingdome of Christ, affirming it to be most precious, neuertheles they haue not such a care what the wordes signifie, neither doe they marke that true wisedom is hidden therein, which excelleth our wisedom by many degrees. For it is not Christian wisedom to haue to dse with men which are accounted wise, and skilfull, and to make mention, and talke of them, but to be occupied among the vnwise and them that lack vnderstanding, not that delight & pleasure shoule be taken thereof, but that they may come from sinne and foolishnes to righteousness and sound vnderstanding. Whereof it appeareth that Christian wisedom doth consist in this, not that we looke aloft, & consider those thinges which are high and wise, and behold and see our selues in thē as it were in a glasse, but that we looke to those things that are belowe, & marke that which is humble & foolish. He which knoweth this, let him giue thankes vnto God. For by this knowledge he becommeth such a one as is able to prepare and apply him selfe to every thing which is in the world. But ye shall finde many, yea euuen among them that preach the Gospell, which are not yet come thus farre. Hitherto we haue bene so instructed & accustomed, that none must come vnto Christ, before he be altogether cleane, thou must thereforefor sake that opinion, that thou maist attaine to true vnderstanding, that thou maist knowe Christ aright, howe he is the true and good shepheard, whereof we haue heard sufficient.

Nowe he compareth the good shepheard with the euill, or hireling, and sayth: A good shepheard giueth his life for the sheepe: but an hireling, & he which is not the shepheard, neither the sheepe are his owne, seeth the wolfe comming, & leaueth the sheepe, & the wolfe catcheth & scattereth the sheepe. the sheepe. It is true in deede that Christ is properly the onely Shepheheard, euен as þ name of Christ doth belong to him alone, yet he communicateth the same vnto vs, that we also may be called Christians. So although he be the onely Shepheheard, yet he imparteth the same names to them that be of the ministerie. After the same maner Matth. 23. he forbiddeth, that we call no man father vpon the earth, so alsmuch as there is one onely our father, which is in heauen, notwithstanding Paule calleth him selfe the father of the Corinthians 1. Cor. 4. When he sayth: In Christ Iesus I haue begotten you through the Gospell. So therfore it seemeth as though God alone would haue the name of a father, and in the meane season notwithstanding he graunteh the same name to men, that they also may be fathers, howbeit that they haue not of them selues but by Christ. Euen as we are called Christians, because we haue nothing of our selues, but for that all thinges are giuen vnto vs through Christ.

Moreover, the hireling, sayth Christ, which is not the shepheheard, neither the sheepe are his owne, when he seeth the wolfe comming, leaueth the sheepe & fletch, &c. This surely is a hard saying, that they which truely preach the Gospel, and strengthen & heale the sheepe, neuertheles at the last doe suffer the sheepe to be caught and toerne in peeces, and doe then flie away, when the sheepe haue neede of greatest helpe. As long as the wolues doe not appeare, they do their dutie carefully & diligently, but as soone as they see the wolfe breake in, they forswyth leauethe sheepe. If they then haue fed them well, that they be fat, strong, & whole, they are the better liked of the wolues, for whome they haue fed them. But what is the hidde meaning of this parable? The meaning of Christ is this: In my kingdome (which consisteth in nothing else, but that the weake be strengthened, the sicke healed, the saynt harted encouraged) the holy crosse shall not be wanting. For when it is preacher, that Christ only, whose silly sheepe we are, hath care of vs, strengthneth, healeth, and helpeth vs, & that our owne strength and our owne workes are of no importancce at all, (whereby all workes of the world, and the diuerse sortes of worshipping God which it inuenteth are veterly disallowed) the world can not abide such maner of preaching, so that it is a natural propertie of þ Gospel, to bring þ crosse wþ it as vnseparably accompanying it, & he that will vnsemedly proffes it before the world, must needes yeld him selfe to beare persecution. Forasmuch as the case standeth thus, it is not hard to perceiue how great difference there is betwene the true shepheards and the hirelinges.

The hireling when the wolfe commeth leaueth the sheepe.

The crosse accompanieth the preaching of the Gospel.

The hireling how he behaueth him selfe.

true shepe-
heard doth,

He that is an hireling preacheth the Gospell as long as he is reported among men to be a learned, godly & holy man. But when as he is reprooued or set vpon as an heretike and wicked fellow, or moued to make a recantation, then he either recanteth, or taketh him selfe to his feete, leauing the miserable sheepe alone without a shepheard, then their case becommeth worse then it was before. Whac doth it then auaille the sheepe if they were wel fed before? If they were true shephearde, they would spend their life before they woulde so leauie the sheepe to the iawes of the wolues, and would be ready alwayes to offer their necke to the axe for the Gospells sake. They therefore are neuer good shepheards, which so preach the Gospell, that they may thereby get vnto them selues honour, riches, and profit, without all dout they are hirelings, who seeke after their owne thinges euen in sound doctrine, yea and in the word of God. Wherefore they abide no longer, then while they may haue honour, praise & commodity therewith, but as soone as the Wolfe commeth, goe backe, denye the worde, and get them selues away, leauing the sheepe, which very earnestly seeke for pasture and their shepheard, who may keepe them from the iniurie of the wolues, but that good shepheard can no where be found, who flieth away euen at that time, when the sheepe haue most neede of a defender and strengthner.

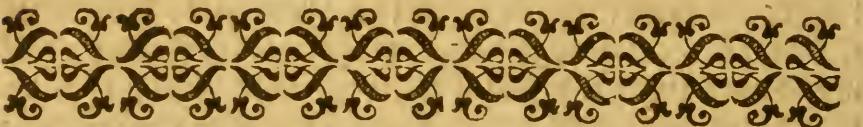

The same shall happen to vs in time to come, when we shall once begin to be touched in deede. Then the Preachers will shut their mouthes, and prouide for their safetie by flying, and the sheepe shall be miserably dispersed, so that one shall be caried this way, an other that way. God graunt that some of them may stand valiantly in defense of the Gospell, and spende their blood, if the case so require in deliuering their sheepe. Thus Christ hath painted forth þ hirelings in their colours, who thus sayth moreover: I am that good shepheard, and knowe mine, and am knowne of mine. These wordes doe containe much, I shoulde spend ouer much time, if I shoulde handle them severally. He speakest here of the peculiar dutie that belongeth to him selfe. I know my sheepe, sayth he, and they againe know me. Nowe the summe summe is this : Christ knoweth vs to be his sheepe, & we againe know him to be our shepheheard. He knoweth vs to be such sheepe as are weake and diseased , which he deil not cast of, but hath a care of them, and healeth them, although they be so diseased, that all the wozlde thinketh that they are not his sheepe , and this in deede is the knowledge of þ world. But Christ doth not so know them , neither doth he greatly regard what maner of ones they be, but considereth whether they be sheepe . They therefore are the true shepheheards, who following Christ , doe so know their sheepe, that they looke vnto the persons, not to the disease.

My father knoweth me, sayth Christ, but the wozlde knoweth me not. When as therefore the howre shall come, that I shal die an ignominious death vpon the crosse, all with one voice will cry out : was this the sonne of God ? he must needes be a condemned man, and giuen vp vnto Satan, both in soule and also in body. So the wozlde will consider and know me . But my father will say in this sort : this is my welbeloued sonne , my king and Sauour.
He beholdeth not my affliction, my woundes, my crosse & death, but he considereth my person, that is, me very selfe . Wherefore if I were in the middest of hell, or in the iawes of Satan, yet I should come out againe, for the father will not forsake me. Likewise I know my sheepe, and they knowe me . They are certaine that I am a good shepheheard, they know me, therefore they come to me for succour, and cleane vnto me, neither doth it any thinge feare them , that they are subiect to manifold infirmities and diseases , they knowe very well that I would haue such maner of sheepe to resorte vnto me . Other sheepe I haue also , which are not of this folde: them also must I bringe and they shall heare my voice, and there shall be one shepefold, & one shepheheard.
Some haue so handled this place , that they affirme it shall be fulfilled before the latter day, when Antichrist, John, and Helias shall come. Which is flatly against the truth, and forged of Satan, that men might beleue, that the whole wozlde shall at the last become Christian . Which Satan therefore did that he might darken the sound doctrine , that we might never righly understand it . Beware therefore of this delusion. For by and by after the ascension of Christ this was done and fulfilled , and is yet at this day fulfilled. As soone as the Gospell was published, it was preached to the Jewes, and this people was the shepefold. Now

knoweth not Christ.

he sayth, that he hath certaine other sheepe also, which are not of this fold, which also he must gather together, whereby he sheweth, that the Gosspell must be preached to the Gentiles that they also may beleue in Christ, that of the Jewes and Gentiles may be made one Church. Which he performed afterward by the Apostles, who preached the Gosspell to the Gentiles, and brought them to the faith. So there is now one body, one Church, one faith, one hope, one loue, one baptisme, and so of the like, which continueth at this day, and shal so continue euuen to the ende of the world. Wherfore doe not so vnderstand it as though all men shall beleue in Christ, for the crosse must alwayes be borne of vs, forasmuch as the greatest parte is alwayes of that faction, which persecuteth Christians. The Gosspell also must be continually preached, that alwayes some may be brought to Christianicie. And thus much for a compendious exposition of this text.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER OF THE LOST SHEPE.

Luke 15.

- Verse 1.* Then resorted vnto him all the Publicans and sinners to heare him.
- 2.* Therefore the Pharises and Scribes murmured, saying: He receiueth sinners and eateth with them.
- 3.* Then spake he this parable to them saying:
- 4.* What man of you hauing an hundred sheepe, if he lose one of them, doth not leaue leauc ninety and nine in the wildernes, and go after that which is lost, vntill he find it?

5. And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders with ioy.

6. And when he commeth home, he calleth together his friendes and neighbours, saying vnto them: Reioyce with me: for I haue found my sheepe which was lost.

7. I say vnto you, that likewise ioy shall be in heauen for one sinner that repenteth, more then for ninetie & nine iust men, which neede none amendment of life.

N this text, dearely beloued, euен that doctrine What kinde is contayned, whiche we are perswaded, and glory of doctrine to be our chiese doctrine, and whiche by best right this text cōdeserueth to be called christian doctrine, to wit of taineth.

grace and forgiuenes of sinnes, set downe against the doctrine of the law, and of workes. But it is a very shamefull thinge, that a sermon so excellent, and replenished with so great comfort and ioy, shold be heard of a man that is wicked & a contemner of the word of God. This is much more miserable, that all thinke they haue so soone thouroughly learned it, to the knowledge whereof every one will seeme to haue attaineid, thinking that there is nothing in it, which he doth not perfectly understand, and that there is no neede to spend any more studie in learning ic. Although it be not grievous to God him selfe, neither doth it yke or wearie him, every yeare repeacing it, or rather every day exercising it, as though he knewe to preach nothing else, being vnskillfull and ignorant of all other kind of doctrine. And we miserable and wretched men doe so soone as we thinke attaine to the knowledge of the chiest doctrine, that shortly with it is wearisom and tedious vnto vs to repeat ic, whereby all pleasure and loue of the worde of God dieth and is extinguished in vs.

But before I declare the article of chiese point here taught, I thinke it good, that the beginning of this chapter be diligently considered, whiche S. Luke setteth in stede of a preface, & shew-

eth what gaue Christ cause to make this sermon, where he sayth: Then resorted vnto him all the Publicans and sinners to heare him. In which wordes he plainly signifieth with what men Christ kept companie, namely with them, which in the sight of all men liued as it did not become them, and were openly called sinners and euell persons. Whereby it appeareth that the Pharisees seemed to haue sufficient cause to finde fault with Christ, for that he, which would be counted holy, did familiarly keepe companie with such men. For they were commonly called Publicans at that time, to whom the Romas did let out some citie or custome, or some charge or oversight in matters, for a certain summe of money: as the Turke or Venetians do now commit to some one some citie or office, for which a certain summe of money is yearly to be payed, and what soeuer they shall scrape togither by unius exactions aboue this summe, that is their owne. So also the aforesaid Publicans did, which so gathered those tributes and money wherewith they were charged, that they themselues also might haue some gaine thereby. And seing that a summe of money to be paide for some citie or office was not small, they desirous to gaine thereby, did by all meanes deale uniusly, and vsed extortion in all thinges, in all places, and with all persons. For the Lordes and masters held them so hardly and straitly, that they could not get much thereby, if they would deale rightly and iustly, and oppresse no man with unius exactions. Whereupon they had a verie euell report abroad, that they were most unius exactors, and endued with small honestie and integritie of life. Likewise the rest in generall were called sinners, which other wise liued dishonestly and wretchedly, & were defiled with filthie offences, as with couetousnes, with whozedeme, with surfeiting and drunkeunes, and such like. Such resort here vnto Christ, and come to heare him, when as before they had knownen him by report to be excellent and famous both in wordes and deedes.

Howbeit it is certaine that in them although they seemed euene desperate, there was a sparke of vertue and honestie, inasmuch as they longed after Christ, both courting to heare his doctrine, and also earnestly desiring to see the workes which he did, when before they knewe him to be a good man, and heard no ill report either of his doctrine or workes, so that their life did farre differ from his. Neuertheles they are so wel disposed, that they are not his his enemies, neither refuse or flie his company, but runne unto him, not of any euell purpose or intent, but to see and heare some good thing, whereby they may amend their life. Contrariwise the Pharises and Scribes, which were counted most righteous and holy, are such poysonfull beastes, that they are not only loze displeased at Christ, whom they can abide neither to see nor heare, but also they can not be content, that miserable sinners should come unto him, and heare him, whereby they being led by repentence might amend: Yea they do also beside this, murmur, and reprove Christ, for that he admitted unto him, and received Publicas and sinners, saying: Behold, is this that holy and famous man? Who will now say that he is of God, when as he hath society wth so wicked wretches? yea rather he is a drinker of wine and a glutton, as they say elsewhere, a freind to Publicans and sinners. Luke 7. 34.

Such a report he is constrained to beare of the holy Pharises, not for that he giuing himselfe to gluttonie and surfeiting, accustomed to feede excessively and followe riotous pleasure togither with them, but onely because he admitted such into his company, and did not contempnously reiect them. For in their opinion he shoulde haue gone wth a sad and austere countenance, in base apparel, & haue remained seuered from the conuersation and companye of men, and refusid their felowshippe, lest that by familiar custome wth them, he shoulde be defiled, and shoulde haue done as they were accustomed to do after þ maner of holy men. Of whom Esiae writteþ, that they studid for such puritie, that they did feare and suffer against their will euene the touching of a sinner. Which in deede plainly appeareth Luke 7. in the þharise murmur against Christ, because he suffered himselfe to be touched of the sinfull woman. And it was they, that would alway be his maisters, & prescribe unto him rules whereby to live, and behaue himselfe in this life. Therefore in this place they murmur, for that he did not applie himselfe unto them, neither did disdaine þ company & conuersation of such sinners according to their example.

Now Christ also is somewhat stout, plainly shewing here, that he can suffer þ maistership of none, but that he is altogether free & exempt from the commandements of all, as comonly in the Gospels we see him to be at his owne will & pleasure, who never helpeþ otherwise was both gēter and also moxe seruiceable then all the rest. But when as they woulde deale with him by lawes, to be his maisters, then all friendship ceassed, for he did not otherwise leape back, then the adamant layd upon y anuyple & striken, speakeing and doing onely the contrary of that which they require of him, although they seeme to speake euener tighly and well, alleaging thereunto also the worde of God. As they doe here, where they come and say: thou must doe thus, thou must follow the conuersation of honest men, thou must flee the compayne of wicked men. This truly is a substantiall doctrine, and confirmed by testimony of the Scripture. For Moses him selfe commaundeth the Jewes, to auoid euill men, & take away euill from amonge them. By this text they confirme their sayings, & come wicth their Moses, and woulde make Christ subiect to their lawes, and haue him ruled by them.

Christ compared to the Vnicorne.

Christ is impatient of lawes.

But Christ neuertheles will be at his owne libertie. And he is not unlike the Unicorne, which beast men deny that he can be taken aliue, with what kind of hunting soever he be assayled. He suffereth him selfe to be wounded, to be striken wicth darts, and to be slayne, to be taken he doth not suffer him selfe. No otherwise doth Christ also, who although he be set vpon by lawes, yet doth he not suffer them, but breaketh thorugh as thorugh a spiders web, rebuking them most sharpely. As Matthe. 12. where they found fault wicth his Disciples, because they had plucked y eares of corne on the Sabbath day, alleaging the commaundement of God that the Sabbath was to be kept holy, &c. he auoucheth the cleane contrary, tearing in sunder y commaundement, affirming the contrary both in wordes, and also by examples. Also Matthe. 16, where he declareth to his Apostles that he shall suffer and be crucified, but Peter admonisheth him to be of a good chere, and setteth before him the precept of charitie, saying: Maister, pine thy selfe, there againe he doth earnestly and sharpely blame and rebuke his admonisher, and sayth: Get thee behinde me, Satan thou vnderstandest not the thinges that are of God, but the thinges that are of men.

And in a summe, he is most impatient of all lawes wherewid they deale wicth him, he will be most free from all commaundements, and acknowledg'd to be the Lord of them. He alway giueth such awnswers, as with which he represelth the exactors neither wil he keepe any law as though he were compelled to di-

it. Contrariwise, when he doth any thinge of his owne accord, then no law is so litle or so light, whereunto he doth not willingly obey, and doth much more then it requireth. Wherefore there can none be sounde more gentle and seruiceable then he, if he be vrged with the controlement or exactio[n] of none. Moreover he doth so farre humble him selfe, that he washeth the feete of Iudas which betrayed him, according as he him selfe speaketh of him selfe: I came not to be serued, but to serue others, &c. which is manifest to them that consider his life, howe he walked abroade in Iudea, Samaria, Galile, and in the night slept on the ground, fasted forty dayes, and tooke no rest at all, but patiently sustaine[n]ed so much labour, that they feared lest he shoulde be rauished in minde, or finally bringe some hurt to his body. He doth all thinges that he can, but that he refuseth to be compelled, and suffere[n]t no lawes to be prescribed unto him, which if any set before him, he most stoutely resisteth and striueth against them. So he is both of a most stout and of a most milde spirit, neyther is there any more stout, nor more seruiceable then he, whoe can abide to doe none of those thinges that are exacted of him, and nevertheles doth all thinges euen most abundantly, and as it were overfloweth with a floud of good woxkes, and watereth all thinges, no man commaunding him, or by way of controlement exacting and requiring any thinge of him, but he beinge permitted to doe voluntarily and of his owne accord.

Christ both of a most stout and also of a most mild spirit.

These thinges are done for our example, that we may learne what a true Christian man is after the spirite, lest we judge him according to the lawe, and according to our owne wisedom and understanding. For Christ is therefore our Lorde, that he may make such men of vs, as he is him selfe. And as he can not suffer him selfe to be tied and bound with lawes, but will be Lorde of lawes, yea and of all thinges, so also ought not the conscience of a Christian to suffer them. For we are so much made free by Christ, that our conscience may know nothing cōcerning any law, whose judgement & controlement it may abide to suffer. Neither ought we any otherwise to be affected according to the state of y inward conscience, then if no lawe had bene giuen or made: yea as if neither of commandements, nor one, either of God, or of Bishop, or of Cesar were giue to vs, that we may plainly say: I know nothing

ence of a Christian must not be bound with lawes.

of any law, neyther wil I know any thing. For in that state and condicion, wherein we Christians are, our workes, & the workes of all men doe cease, yea and all lawes also. For where there is no worke, neither can there be any law, requiring a worke and saying: this thing was to be done of thee, this to be left undone. But we through Christ are wholly free from all workes, and righteous by meere grace and mercy, whereby we live onely before God. And this is our treasure, whereby we are Christians, and live and stand before God. For how we ought to live in outward conuersation, to wit in fleshe and blood before the world, it doth nothing pertaine unto this place.

must not suffer his cō-science to be held captiue of any lawe.

We of our selues are not able to pacifie and appease the lawe.

Wherfore a Christian must learne so to rule his conscience, that he suffer it not to be held captiue or entangled with any law. But whosoeuer will bind and hold it with any law, let him stoutly and boldely striue thereagainst, and doe as he seeth Christ doeth here and else where, where he vseth so great stoutnes and earnestnes of minde, that no Moses or Cractor of the lawe can prouale any thinge with him, although otherwise he be most humble, most sweete and gentle of all men. Howbeit this art is aboue measure high and excellent, which none but he vnderstandeth, whercof he is the Maister, who knoweth howe to appease all lawes and teachers of lawes. We are not able to doe so: For the Deuill mightely assaileth vs, and as often as he setteth vpon the conscience of man, he diueth him to that point, that he entreth disputation with him, what he hath done or not done. Then such a disputation beginneth, as wherein is debated of our sinne and righteousness, euuen then man is brought into a danngerous case and into the myze, where be sticketh, neither can he escape or rid him self out, but is soorthwith deeper and deeper plunged in. For he is laden with a heavy burden, which he is not able to beare, wherfore he walketh musing, gnawing & consuming his minde, neither can he get any quietnes thereof. Which I doe plainly feele in my selfe, neither can I whastle out, and deliuere my selfe by any trauell, although I labour alwayes, assayng all meanes to escape out of this goulfe, that I may aunswere the lawe, and obtaine so much, that it may keepe silence, and say, now at length thou hast done so much, wherewith I am constrainyd to be content. But all endeouour and study is in vayne: for such a deepe pit and daungerous goulfe it is, out of which no man is able to escape, although he ioyne the helpe of all men to hym self, as they can beare me witnes which haue made triall hereof, and doe as yet daily trie it.

The cause is our nature, which will haue to doe with woxkes and lawes, and heare what they say, and followe them that say: Why doth he eate with Publicanies and sinners? if he did eate and drinke with vs, he shold do wel. Also: why do thy Disciples plucke the eares of corne on the Sabbath day? &c. with whom it will haue to do so long, til the law sayth: now thou art righteous. For it can attaine to no higher vnderstanding, then that the doctrine of the law is the chieffest doctrine, and that the righteousnes thereof is the best life before God. In it it continually remai- nech so captiue pena and bound, neither can it by any meanes deli- uer it self out of this prislon, being not able to pacifie and appease the law, that it doe not exact any thinge of it, or reprehend it in a ny thing, but it is compelled to be captiue therin as in a perpe- tuall prislon, and the longer it striveth and figheth with the lawe, into so much worse case doth it alwayes come, vntill at the last it be wholy subdued.

What therfore must I do, the law assailing & vr ging my con- science, especially when I perceiue my selfe not to do that which it requireth? I aunswere, euен that which Christ doth here, who admiceth or acknowledgeth no law, although brought out of the law of God. So learne thou also to doe, that thou mayest boldly say to the lawe, leauing of lawe to dispute with me, I haue nothing to doe with thee. And soz that very same cause, for which thou commest to dispute with me, and to enquire of me, how good and righteous I am, I will not heare thee. For it here maketh no matter, what I am, or what I ought to doe, and what not to doe, but what Christ him selfe is, ought to doe, and doeth. For nowe we are in the brydechamber, where onely the brydegrome and the bryde must haue to doe, and it behoueth not thee to come thither, nor to intermeddle any thing there.

But nevertheles it now and then knocketh and sayth: in the meane season notwithstanding good woxkes must be done of thee, the commaundements of God must be kept, if thou wolt obtaine saluation. Aunswere againe: but thou hearest that it is not nowe tym to speake of them: for now I haue obtained my righteousness and the summe of all my saluation without my How we must aunswere the law whē it is instant vpon vs.

workes in Christ my Lorde , and am already saued before thou camest , therefore I haue no neede of thy presence . For as I haue sayd , where workes preuayle nothing , neyther is the law there of any importance or weight , and where there is no law , neither is there any sinne . The bride therefore alone , all the rest beinge excluded , must reigne in the bridechamber with Christ , in whom shee hath all thinges at once , neyther needeth shee any thinge more , which is necessary to saluation . Wherefore the lawe mast be excluded and utterly reiectt , yea and cast of , as ofteyn as it will inuade and set vpon the conscience . For surely it ought not to medle therewith , neither commeth it in tyme , when it will haue muche to doe there , where it ought to haue nothing to doe , and whither it ought in no wise to come . For the conscience resteth in this article of our Christian faith , I beleue in Jesus Christ my Lord , which suffered , died , & was buried for me , &c. unto whom both Moses law , & Cesars , & diuine lawes ought to giue place . All that therfore is boldly to be chased from me , whatsoeuer will dispute with me of sinnes , righteousness , and such like thinges .

Beholde , Christ would in this place resemble this libertie vnto vs , that as Christians we suffer no maister in our conscience , trusting most constantly to this one thinge , that we are baptised , and called vnto Christ , and by him iustified and sanctified , whereupon we may say : He is my righteousness , my treasure , my worke , and in a summe , what not ? against sinne and unrighteousnes (whereof the lawe indeuoureth to accuse me) If it please you to haue other righteousness , workes , lawe , &c. then may ye take them from whence ye will , surely ye shall finde no place for them in me . Thus may a man defend him self , and stande against the suggestions and tentations of the Deuill , and of sinnes either past or present . Wherefore Moses and Christ are farre to be separated asunder , as also workes and faith , the conscience and the outward life , so that if the lawe will sette vpon me , and make my hart astrayde , then is it tyme to sende it away , and if it will not giue place , to thrust it out by force , and to say : I will willingly doe good workes , and will goe forward as much as I am able for that time that I liue amonge men , but here I wil know nothing at al of them in my conscience , & therfore let me alone , & prate nothing of them . For here I will vouchsawe vouchsafe to heare neither Moses nor the Pharisees, but Christ alone doth obtaine place to reigne here. I will like vnto Marie, sit at his feete to heare his woyde, but let Martha tary abroade, and busie her selfe in the kitchin and about the houshold affayres. And in a summe, I will not trouble the quietnes of my conscience.

But what shall I say, whereas in the meane season I doe daily sinne, which surely is euill? I aunswere, in deede it is true, I am a sinner, and I do vnjustly, but I must not therefore despeire, as though I were subiect to condemnation, yea or tremble because of the rigour of the lawe. For by faith I apprechend him, which hath appreched me, and apply my selfe vnto him, which hath embraced me in baptisme, and hath put me in his bosom, and by the preaching of the Gospell hath called me to the communion of all his good thinges, bidding me to beleue in him. Nowe when as I haue appreched him by faith, then may I be bold to bid the Pharisees, and Moses with his tables, all Lawyers with their booke, all men with their workes holde their peace and giue place. No law hath then any power to comuince or accuse me: for in this Christ I haue all thinges abundantly, whatsoeuer can be required in me.

This, I say, is the doctrine and arte of Christians, the scope and ende whereof is this, even to reigne with Christ. But blockish men doe not understand it, taking hereupon occasion to liue moxe freely, as they list, saying: what neede is there that I shoule do good workes, sozasmuch as Christ hath abrogated the law, &c. There foolish babbling is in no wise to be borne, for Christ is on the other part also to be considered of thee, and thou must marke what he doth moxe. For here he him selfe sayth: that he is that man which seeketh the miserable and lost sheepe, which also he witnesseth by his present deede, by receiuing sinners and Publicanies, and by preaching vnto them. Wherby thou seest that he doth fulfill much moxe then the law commaundeth to be done, and teacheth thee to doe the same by his example. He is of such an heroicall stomacke, that he will not be vnder the law, yet doth he of his owne accord moxe thinges then the law requireth. Doe thou so also, neither looke when thou shalt be forced and driven on by the lawe, but without the lawe and of thine owne accord doe that which is needefull to be done, as Peter I. Pet. 2.

Christ.

admonishest saying: as free, and not as hauing the libertie for a cloke of malitiousnes, but as the seruaunts of God. And Paule Rom. 6: Being made free from sinne, ye are made the seruaunts of righteousnes. These are they, which do all thinges with a free conscience without the lawe, and unconstrained.

For where the Gospell is truely in the hart, it maketh a man to be such a one, as doth not looke while the law commeth, but is so full of ioy in Christ, that he is with speede caried unto good works, doing well to all men, as much as he is able, & that of his owne accord, before the law commeth into his minde. Moreouer he bestoweth both body and life, hauing no regard, what he must therfore suffer, and so he is full of good workes which voluntarily flowing as it were out of a continuall fountaine are derived unto many: As Christ being compelled, doth not abide to take vp so much as a strawe, but uncomelled giueth him selfe to be crucified for me, and for the whole woorlde, dying for the lost sheepe.

Howbeit it is very necessary to discerne these thinges well, when it is come to hand strokes and within the throwing of the dart, as it is said, the law and sinnes disputing now with thy conscience, then see that thou doe boldly represse Moses, and bid him keepe silence, sending him abroade to the olde man. Driue him into Moses schole, that he may dispute with him and say: Dost thou heare? thou art too slowe and sluggish in giuing and seruynge thy neigbour. When Christ is to be serued of thee, thou wilt more willingly serue thy belly: thou wilt come in no perill for Christes sake, thou doost deceiptfully robbe thy neigbour circumventing him by what meanes soever thou canst. For that sluggish asse flying labour and following onely idlenes and wantonnes, vse the tables of stone, whom euern against his will, constraine to goe on in his duety.

must be driven into Moses schole.

We must admit Moses to deale with the outward man, but not with the conscience.

Wherfore when thou shalt set upon me, in that chinge which is right and meete (thou must say unto Moses) I will willingly heare thee, and follow thy admonitions, namely according to the outward man, and in outward life, where thou maist bearre rule like a scholemaister, & as one gouerning a familie: Where thou hast power to comand me, to be obedient, modest, patient, good to my neighbour, dutifull and liberal toward the poore, & to celebrate God with praises poured forth to his glorie: moreouer to be content for his words sake to abide the concumelles & sclaunders of all persons, & to suffer every kind of iniurie of the wold. With all which I am not greatly moued, yea I would doe moe thinges then I am able to do according to the outward man. For the spirit, by the testmonye of Christ, is willing, and ready, althought the flesh be weake.

But if thou wilt go so farre, whither it is unlawfull for thee to come, that is, into my hart and conscience, there will I neither see thee, nor vouchsafe to heare thee. For there I haue an other both great & unspeakeable treasure, whose name is Christ. And in a summe, whatsoeuer pertaineth to bryde y^e outward man, thou canst not lay on a sufficien: burden thereto: but thou must burden the conscience nothing at all. For he that enioyeth Christ, is above all lawes, as Paul saith: the lawe is not giuen for the iust, who notwithstanding in the meane time doth moe thinges, then he is able to fulfill in the flesh. For according to the lawe we are sinners, and concerning our person we must abide vnder it. But through Christ we are farre aboue the lawe.

So Moses without Christ must exercise his grosse workes, whereby he may compel men which are not yet Christians, to be honest cluely before the wold: for he doth not make Christians righteous & honest. Howbeit I will not deny y^e he doth this, that he sheweth vnto them their duties, which otherwise they would willingly fulfil & satisfie, yea & doe moe things also, but that the flesh doth not so willingly & w^that readines wherwith it ought, follow the spirit. In which respect they are to be admonished and urged, the conscience nevertheles remaining free, so that the law haue no power to accuse them. Wherfore such doctrine & admonition ought to be among Christians (as it is certaine y^e among the Apostles there was) whereby every man may be admonished of his state & office. As so^r the rest which are not Christians, they must be ruled by Moses lawes, & burdened with them both outwardly & inwardly, wherby they may be forced and afflicted, that they may do that wh^tch is right, forsaking that which is euill, althought they do it not with a patient and willing mind. Of which kind y^e rash multitude of y^e vntruly comm^o so^r & y^e obstinat people is, who do not regard or understand y^e liberty of Christ, although they can babble & glory of many thinges concerning the Gospell, & they notwithstanding do abuse it only to y^e lust of their mind: lec-

For they are not such men, as are capable of this doctrine, which liue with such a secure mind, that they thinke, they haue no neede of the Gospel, or that they otherwise do sufficiently knowe it. But they onely are capable hereof, which are busied with the disputation of the conscience & the law, of sinnes & of the wrath of God, by consideration whereof they become astonied, feeling the words of the hart speaking thus: Alas, how wretchedly hane I led my life? what account shal I make unto God? & so they be too much fearful & amased, the rest being more then is meete secure and presumptuous, feeling no lawe nor sinne, no nor any trouble at all. And the case standeth very unequally with both, for they which should haue nothing to do with the law, do most of all warre with it, & alone feele it. But others of whom onely þ law should be felt, are nothing moued with it: yea the more grieuously they are terrifid by the lawe & the wrath of God, by so much they become more indurate. There must therfore be an other maister to amend these, namely, the slayer & tormentor, who may teach them, being unwilling to do wel in the name of the Lord & with fauour, in the name of an other to do that that becommeth them, with no fauour, the reward also of hell fire and of all miseries being set before them.

Howbeit Christ both here and every where else (as it is said) both by doctrine & also by his owne example teacheth vs, which feele our sinnes and the burden of the lawe, and would willingly be Christians, to accustome our selues to fight against it, & draine it from vs vnto others, to giue no place to the Deuile, who would by the lawe breake vpp the bidechamber of Christ, and thrust him selfe into his place, that is, take away from the conscience her ioy and comfort, whereby he may drawe man into desperation, that he may not be able cheerfully to lift vpp his hart and heade before God. For this is the arte of Christians whom it behouerth to knowe and learne moe thinges, then that profane and blockishe commonsorte knoweth and understandeth, that we may knowe well the maner how to fight with the deuill, and to beare his assault, as often as he shall set vpon vs, & dispute with vs out of Moses. With whome when he goeth about such things, we must not dispute in many wordes, but must forswicheappeale appeale from Moses to Christ; and cleave to him. For all his trauaills & deceites tend vnto this end, that he may craftly plucke vs from Christ, and draw vs vnto Moses. For he knoweth full well, the matter being broughte to that point, the victorie shalbe on his side.

Wherfore thou must againe and againe take heede that thou suffer not thy selfe to be plucked out of this hauen, neither to be encised out of this circle. And althoough he shall lay many things against thee out of the lawe, euen inasmuch as it is the word of God, whereunto it is meete that thou do obey, yet maist thou aunswere him and say: doest thou not heare, that I will now know of heare nothing concerning the lawe? for we are now in that circle and hauen, wherein it is not enquired what I must do, or leaue vndone, but by what means we obtaine to haue God gentle and fauourable vnto vs, and how we get remission of sinnes. Here I will abide in the armes of Christ, cleauning vnseparably about his necke, and creeping into his bosome, whatsoever the lawe shall say, and my heart shall feele: neuertheles, so that we keepe the principall part of our faith syncere, and the chiese point safe, outwardly I will willingly do and suffer, what burden soever it shall lay vpon me. Beholde, he that vnderstood this arte well, should be a right and perfect man, as Christ was, so farre aboue all lawes, that he might be bold to call Peter Satan, and the Pharisées fooles, and leaders of the blynde, and put Moses himselfe to silence, and so liue akogeher without the lawe, and yet in the meane season fulfill all lawes: furthermore be obstinate and stout against all that will enforce and constraine him, and yet notwithstanding of his owne accord profite and obey all. But truly herein consisteth all the defect, that we do never fully and perfectly learne this arte, the deuell so letting and hindering vs, that we go preposterously to worke, being too ready and willing to heare all things whatsoever the lawe sayth. At whose threarnings also we are not a litle astonied, which it had bin better for vs not to haue heard. Againe in ourward things also we giue our selues to libertie more then is conuenient, whereas the body shold be kept vnder & bridled with workes, whereby it might be compelled to heare what soever shold be grieuous vnto it, when as yet it oftentimes shalch, yet so, that sinne abide without, where it must abide, & haue his Moses, who alwaies may be nere vnto it with his exactiōs. Howbeit inwardly let no sinne or lawe beare rule , or reigne , but let Christ alone rule and reigne by mere grace , ioy and comfort . So all thinges shoulde be done rightly , and man shoulde be apt and fit to all good thinges , both to do , and also to suffer , with a glad and obedient heart by faith not seyned in the grace of God through Christ . Wherefore let the conscience beare rule ouer all lawes , let the flesh be subiect to euerie law .

Now he that is skilfull of this arte , let him giue thankes to God , and take heede that he be not too wise in it , and that he conceiue not a false persuasion of knowledge . For I and my like do not yet understand it , as we ought to understand it , although we be most expert of all , and haue bin longest exercised therein . For (as I haue said) it is such an art , as no man knoweth , but they which are Christians ; to þ learning wherof notwithstanding they are compelled to be scholers all there life longe . Wherefore most farre of from the knowing hereof are those secure spirits , who alone know all things , but who in very deed beside that false persuasiō of knowledge , know nothing at all , and by this verie persuasion they are farthest of all drawne from this art and from the whole Gospell . Neither is there any thing more grieuous , no nor a greater hurt can be brought vnto Christianitie , then by these peticie doctours and maisters , which seeme vnto themselues to haue some wisedome . For they fill all corners of the world with sects and factions , being such men , as serue neither God nor men , heare neither the lawe nor the Gospell , but contemne the lawe with a secure mynde , and loath the Gospell with hearing it , alwayes seeking after new doctrine . But truly we teach nothing for their sakes , inasmuch as they are not worshie of our doctrine , and are so punished of God , that they can never learne it , & bring forth any frute thereby , although they heare it . Therefore let vs only keepe it , whereof they do take away nothing at all from vs , but that they heare a vaine noysle and sounde of it .

And thus much for the first part of this sermon , in which Christ teacheth by his owne example , how every man ought to keepe his conscience free from all disputation of the lawe , and terrour of the wrath of God and of sinnes . Nowe consequently I thinke it good diligently to consider this excellent and goodly parable of Christ , where he beginneth and sayth : What man of you hauing an hūdred sheepe, if he lose one of them, doeth not leaue ninetie and nine in the wildernes, and go after that which is lost vntill he find it? Christ is not onely of a stout mynde, who will not follow the wordes and maistership of them, but he bringeth probable causes also of his stouenes, with great cunning refelling their obiections, and stopping their mouthes, so, that they can murmur nothing against him. Moreover he conuinceth them by their owne example and deede, and concludeth, that they ought for good cause to be vterly ashamed, being bold to speake unto him, & reprehēd that in him in so great a matter, which they themselues do in a much lesse. For by what meane could he better and more readily aunswere them, then if he shuld say: Will How Christ you, O excellent and most wise masters, commaund this thing, and teache me to dñe away and alienate from me miserable sinners, which long aske me, and come to heare me, when as there is nothing that you your selues do not for one lost shepes sake, who leauing ninetie and nine in the wildernes (that is in the field and at the fold) do runne to seeke that which is lost, neither do ye leaue of seeking, vntill such time, as ye haue found it, and brought it home? And you count it to be well and commendably done, for which if any shoulde finde fault with you, without doue ye would reproue him as mad and beside himselfe. And shoulde not I as a Sauour of soules do likewise with men, as you do with a lost shepe? seing there is no comparison euuen of one soule o all the creatures living & breathing in the earth. Why there-oxe are you not vterly ashamed of your doings, presuming to reprehēnd me in this worke, which you your selues commend, and are forced to commend? Wherefore if ye reproue and finde fault with me, you your selues are first to be reproued and found ault with. This is righly to haue aunswered, and with honour o haue stopped the mouthes of these controllers & fault finders, he causes being suffiently shewed, why they oughe not here to inde fault with him o controlle him. They haue well surely reelded vnto him with shame enough, as it is meete, and haue gained nothing els by their maistership and controlllement then other shame and ignominie. For it is a shame to such masters, ea and an exceeding great abomination, that they sticke not to trogate so much vnto themselues, as to teache that man, and adnonish him of his dutie, who of God is appointed a maister over all. But it ought so to fall out, as I haue said, that he which will rule and iudge a Christian by his maistership, and endeouureth to bring him from his baptisme and the article of Christ, to be ruled by his wisedome or law, doth not onely become a foole, but is also the autho^r of extreme abomination and homicide. For he worketh shame to the temple and sanctuarie of God, and with deuelish rashnes inuadeth his kingdom, where he alone with the holy Ghost must reigne. Wherefore he verie well deserueth, that God againe bring him to shame and ignominie before the whole world, seing that he taketh to himselfe maistership in that place, where only Christ ought to be maister, and not vnworthely to his great euell he kicketh against the pricke.

Wherefore it is not good to iest with Christians, for they are Saincts, and let him that is wise, not be too busie with that man, whose name is Christ, for he can get no gaine thereby, for Christ is most impatient of all their maistership and doctrine. So also a Christian must by no meanes suffer them, or if he suffer them, giuing place to such suggestions, to wit, thou oughtest to haue done this or that, or as yet thou oughtest to do it, then is his case become exceeding ill, inasmuch as he hath fallen from Christ. Therefore we must endeavour, to hold Christ fast, hauing no regard, altho^{ugh} all the world shall teach vs. For if we shall abide with him, and hold the true vnderstanding of the article concerning him, we shall easily ouercome all such masters and teac-chers. For this Christ wilbe most free from all controlement & maistership, contending to be the onely maister and controller of all men, that either in fauour they may reverently acknowledge him for the Lord and maister, and themselues for fooles, or in furie and indignation being subiect to the reproch of all men, may vtterly perish.

But I haue said before, that the present doctrine for the verie exceeding goodnes, sweetnes and consolation thereof, is not to be set forth to the rude, blockish, and vnrulely common sort, to whom we do not preache it, but to those onely, which striue with terrorre and anguish of conscience, or stand in perill and daunger of death, and dispute with the deuell cōcerning their sinnes committed, whereby he would drine them vnto desperation. Before these this amiable image is to be set, whereby they may receive comfort and cheeresfulnes of minde. As for others which live with a secure mind, and do little know what anguish and spiritual sorrowfulnes is, they are to be ledde to Moses to the tormentour. For it is an image most pleasaunt and amiable, and more artificially painted, then any Apelles is able to paint wth his penfull. Neither doth any man excell in such eloquence of speeche, that he is able sufficiently to declare & comprehend it in wordes. Wherefore it is to be apprehended in the hearte by sayth, as much as may be. Neuertheles we must speake something of it, that we may give cause and occasion to other to thinke and consider more earnestly thereof.

I also, sayth he, haue an hundred sheepe, that is, that little flock of all Christiandom, of which number one is lost, and fallen from the communion of Christians. Now therefore doest thou desire to know the affection of my minde? then must thou bestow thy diligence, to paint out well and cunningly both the shepheheard and the lost sheepe. For that shepheheard, which is but a man, and guideth the flocke, which is created to be slaine, hath great regard to preserue it in safetie, and is not a litle carefull, how he may finde the sheepe when it is lost, and bring it home againe, and with no lesse desire the sheepe longeth after the shephearde. Whom if it understand to be his owne shepheheard (as by nature it doth understand) it feareth him not, but runneth unto him with great confidence, and being full of good hope, goeth before him, Yea as soone as euer it heareth his voice, it aunswereþ by bleating. On the other side also the shepheheard hath greate care and desire to finde againe the lost sheepe, which hath strayed fr̄m him. Both he himselfe seeketh, & sendeth forth seruautes to seeke there, whithersoever he thinketh it is strayed, neither doth he leaue seeking, vntill hauing found it, he hath brought it home. For he is not ignorant how miserable a living creature a solitary sheep is, whose life consisteth onely in the helpe and safe keeping of the shepheheard, inasmuch as it can nothinge at all helpe it selfe, but being destitute of a shepheheard, is constrainyd to perish. Moreover, it is also fearfull and ready to goe stray, and as soone as it hath wandered out of the way, and from the shepheheard, for the with commeth into perill of life, & can not tary, although being brought, it commeth to an other flocke, and a straunge shepheheard calleth it, neuertheles it goeth on throught horrie and sedgie places, throught waters and fennes, vntill it come in daunger.

of þ woulſe, or wasted by ſome other miſchiefe vicerly periſheth. And althoſh it be brought into bywayes and deſerts, and iſ now thought to be loſt, notwithstanding it hath thiſ hope, as muſh as naſure hath put into it, that iſ it miſt heare hiſ ſhepheheard, it ſhould forthwith exceedingliſ reioyce being deliuereſ from al euell. Moreouer neither doth the ſhepheheard therelore ſeeke iſ that when he hath found iſ, he may wrathfully fight with iſ, or handle iſ ill for that it hath gone astray, or caſt iſ to the woulſe to be torne in pieces, but all hiſ care and thought iſ, that he may moſt gentleliſ allure iſ to hiſelfe, and may deale with iſ moſt louingly, to wit, lay iſ on hiſ ſhoulders and carie iſ, vntill he hath brought iſ unto the reſt of the flocke.

This iſ that picture, reſembled in thiſ creature & ſilly beaſt, whereby Chriſt ſheweth unto vs, what affection of mynde hi beareth, and what he doth toward vs, and alſo what we ought to promeſe our ſelues concerneing him. For ſeeing thiſ iſ maniſtly true in naſure, the ſame iſ muſh moze true in the kiŋdom o Chriſt, which iſ the kiŋdom of graſe, loue, and conſolation. Thereforo ſee that thou alſo do ſet before thy ſelue the ſheepe pertaining to thiſ ſhepheheard, then haſt thou truly vnderſtand, how muſt greater and behementer care he hath taken to preſerue iſ, alſo with how great ſtudy and diligenſe, yea and from the hear he iſ carefull for iſ, that he may finde iſ and bring iſ home againe. For he will haue hiſ maruelous and continuall kindenes, and the unſpeakable flames of hiſ moſt feruent loue to be ſhewed, or rather poured forth vpon miſerable, fearefull and trembling conſciences, which unſeynedly lament their ſinnes, and deſire to be deliuereſ from them, and ſuch are hiſ true ſheepe.

The parable of the ſheepe- heard & the lost ſheepe. For with a man that hath loſt thiſ ſhepheheard, and heareth him not, the caſe standeth as with the lost ſheepe, which being eſtraunged from hiſ ſhepheheard, strayeth moſe and moſe from lost ſheepe Christ, & the nech unto them, thinking that it haſ fynde hiſ owne ſhepheheard. Christia that yet faileſ of hiſ purpose it findeſ him not, but alway runneth iſ ſtrayed out from corner to corner, ſtraying vp and downe, and ſtil wandreth of the way. Neither iſ ſuccoured with any com- farther out of the way.

heart. For the Gospell of Christ being taken away or not exercised, here some false maister, or author of some sect, in an other place some fanaticall felowe thrusteth in himselfe, one peruertereth the Supper of the Lord, the other baptisme, one teacheth this, the other that, of a singular holines of life, both which allurereh to himselfe the miserable and straying sheepe, and shewereth himselfe so, as though he were he true shepheheard. But by the means of these the sheepe is entangled onely with greater errors, vntill it wandreth quite and altogether out of the way. To these commeth the deuill also with his cogitations, whiche he craftely putteth into the heart: Alas, if thou hadst done this or that, or hadst not done, &c. with all which he practizeth nothing els, but that he may make it fall into greater errors, that it may not know where to abyde. And this truly falleth out, Christ being remoued out of sight, and the article of him being extinguisched. Whatsoeuer moxe ouer shalbe caught, counseled, & shewed, by what meanes soever, all thinges nevertheles become worse and draw nere unto destruction, unles the true shepheheard come with his voice, and call backe and bring againe the straying sheepe.

Hereupon it appeareth that it is exceeding necessarie & conuenient, that we learne to know Christ well, that we do not behold him as a cruell tyranne or as an angrie iudge (as the preachers hitherto haue set him forth to the people, and the deuel himselfe sheweth him to the hearis of me no otherwise to be thought vpon and considered) who hath drawne his sword already against vs: But as the sheepe doth naturally looke on the shepheheard, not as on him, of whom it shall be terrifid, chased, and slaine, but so soone as it beholdeth him, is cheered and put in hope of helpe, & is no moxe in feare or solitarines, but forthwith speedely goeth to him with all boldnes: So also when we desire to conceyue a trust and hope of helpe, and to be strengthened and eased with comfort, then the voice of our shepheheard, that is of Christ, must be knowne and learned well of vs, all voices of other shepeheards not regarded, whiche draw vs only into errors, and tolle vs vp and downe, and that onely article must be heard and com-prehended in minde, whiche Christ so louingly and comfortably pauntereth in our heart, as by any meanes it can be painted, that I may with all confidence and boldnes say: The Lord Jesus Christ is my onely shepheheard, and I (alas) the lost shepe, which hath strayed in the desert, but am troubled with no small anguish of mynde for my wretched life, desyring with most feruent affectio, both to haue God fauourable vnto me, & also to haue peace in my conscience. But truly I understand here, that he is no lese desirous of me, then I am of him. I labour with great carefullnes to come vnto him, and he is carefull and desyreteth greatly that he may bring me againe vnto himselfe.

If we were certainly thus perswaded of his affection towarde vs, and did graue in our minde that it so greatly desreth after vs, and is so sweetely poured forth vpon vs, it can not be, that we shoule abhorre and feare him, but we would wish a cheeresfull minde runne vnto him, and tary only with him, abyding to heare the doctrine or voice of no other. For the doctrine of an other coming betweene, either of Moses or of any one what soever, doth nothing els but trouble and disquiet the conscience, so that it can neuer fynde any peace or quietnes. Therefore Christ sayth Matth. 11. Come vnto me all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will ease you. Take my yoke on you, and ye shall fynde rest vnto your soules, &c. As though he saide: runne and seeke in what places soever ye will, heare and learne what soever can be preached vnto you, yet shall ye fynde no quietnes of heart, ye shall fynde no peace but in me alone. We wil easily permit good woxkes to be preached, a righteous life to be taught, the ten comandements to be deliuered by instruction, and all things els which serue to the amendment of life, but so farre onely, as they are taught to the vnrulely and vtractable common sort, also to force and bryde the wantonnes of our old Adam. But they which preach to the conscience wrapp'd in anguishes and terrors because of synne, ought to preach no other word then of Christ. For this is that lost and miserable shepe, of whom no other master is to be borne or had, but that onely shepheheard Christ, who neither vrgeth it with the lawe, nor is eger vpon it, but most sweetely and gently handleth it, and layeth the miserable and sinfull sheepe vpon his shoulders, doing that of his owne accord, which was to be done of the sheepe, as we shall heare by and by more at large.

But surely in this place the doctrine of both (as is before also sayde at large) or the voice of Moses and of Christ, must be well

No peace or quietnes but in Christ alone.

well discerned. For Moses ought to haue no entraunce to the lost sheep, no nor by any meanes is to be admitted to it, although betwene the he preach best of all other. For if confounding these, we will comfort and erect the troubled conscience by the lawe after this sort: be of a good cheere, for thou hast not committed homicide, neither hast thou defiled thy selfe with adulterie, neither hast thou perpetrated any other haynous offence, or done it with a good will, &c. This also is a comfort, but which can endure a verie small time, neither can it sustaine the assaultis and violence of the enemie, neither bringeth it or containeth any thing els but confidence of it selfe, wherewith the miserable sheepe is holpen nothing. For it remayneþ as much wandring and lost as before, neither can it helpe it selfe, or come to his owne shepheheard. But if we will helpe & succour it, we must shew unto it the true shepheheard, who commeth to seeke it, that hauing found it he may bring it home againe, and exhibit his voice unto it to be heard. Hereby it may obtaine true and effectuall consolation, and be bold to aunswere Moses, and say: Now truely I haue not any care either of thy comfort or terror, and if it please thee, amplify my synnes as much as possibly thou canst, make me a man-slayer and parricide, or the worst man of all men. For now I will neither heare thee with an astonied minde, nor follow thee. But this is the summe of my comfort and saluation, whereunto also I do confidently trust, that I haue such a shepheheard as seeketh me of his owne accord, and hauing layd me on his shoulders carrieth me. Let vs enter disputation hereof if thou art so disposed, not how righteous or brighteous I am, but how I haue come onto Christ.

Wherfore we must alwayes preach according to the capacitie and qualitie of the hearers. For I haue sayd that this doctrine is not fit for a blockish and untractable man. As it is not neete þ a laboious thresher shold be fed with delicates, wherewith the sicke are to be strengthened and refreshed, but the hysing is to be fed with browne bread and chese, & with water. The other dainty meates and easy of digestion thou must reserue for be sicke or children, which are able to digest no grosse meat: So in this thing also thou must obserue the same difference, that thou o rightly distribute these things, and giue unto euerie one his portion as a prudēt householder. For thou must keepe the doctrine ched.

of Moses and of the Lawe, vntill thou light vpon vnruly, hardened, and vntractable men, which lead their life securely and without feare, set before these onely strong and common meates of thresheres to be eaten, that is, offer angrie Moses vnto them to be heard, who lighteneth and thundreth from the mount Sina, who terrifieth the people of Israel, bringeth them into the desert, and drowneth king Pharao in the red sea. But when thou shalt light upon troubled hearts, and weake and afflicced consciences, which are now become lost sheepe, then speake not a word concerning Moses and all the workes of God done in the lawe, but let thy talke be only of the workes done by Christ in the time of grace, & well and diligently repeate to the miserable conscience, how he sheweth himselfe toward the lost sheepe, to wit, that he is the gentle & good shepheheard, which is exceeding careful for the lost sheepe, so that leauing all the rest, he traueleth to synde that one, and to bring it againe into the way, neither doth he leauie off till he hath brought it home. For it is a verie great grieve unto him, that any man shoule be in synne, and therefore be troubled and feare, neither would he that any shoule remaine therein, and so perish.
Wherfore he doth most louingly allure & prouoke thee by his sweete Gospell to come vnto him, & suffer thy selfe to be layd vpon his shoulders and caried, and to be called his welbeloued sheepe.

The lost
sheepe.

As for them that liue securely and pleasauntly, & haue no regard whether God be angrie or pleased, they are not to be called lost sheepe, but rather wilde goats, which suffer not themselues either to be fed or ruled. But he, to whom his synnes are a burden, & who fighteth in the fight of faith, where he is not in daunger to lose Moses, but Christ himselfe, and the principall article, that is, where the conscience is in anguish, and feare, whether it hath God genile and fauourable, this is that verie man, who withgroning and sighes seeketh out and crieth for his shepheheard, & desireth to be holpe, as David doth Psal. 119. I haue gone astray like a sheepe that is lost: oh seeke thy seruaunt, &c. In the mouth of these this suger & these pleasaunt delicates haue a good tast, with which the heart is refreshed, that it fall not into desperation, but being againe recreated with such a consolation, is lifted vp, not by Moses but by Christ. Not that it hath Moses a freind or is able to pacifie him, but because it hath God fauourable throughe Christ, wheresoeuer Moses remayneth with his comfort. Although

though it be very well, as also it is meete, that we do not contrary to the lawe practice theuerie, that we steale not, that we commit not homicide, or otherwise do iniurie and hurt to our neighbour.
Howbeit that is not the right comfort of the heart, but onely a No true com-momentane tickling of the vtmost skinne, not during & pearsing. fort of con-For the deuell comming & setting vpon the heart, all comfort is science to be utterly taken away. And although in some point thou hast done had by the well and rightly, he neuertheles againe bringeth ten fold more, wherein thou hast done amisse, yea euen in the most pure woxkes he can finde much impuricie, and turne all into sinne.

Wherfore we must in no wise trust vnto such comfort, but We must not must rather refuse it and say: whether I be good or euell at this trust to the present I do not dispute, but wil reserue it rather vnto that place, comfort of y where it shalbe caughte and entreated con cerning woxkes. But in law, but must this circle wherein I now stand, there is no place to entreat of resort and woxkes and integrity of life, but of Christ and his woxkes, which cleave fast he dooth toward me a lost sheepe. Wherfore if thou demaund whether I be good or honest, I aunswere plainly, no, but if thou demaund whether Christ be good and righteous, that vndoubtedly I am able to confirme, and him I set for my goodness and righ-teousnes, vnto whom also alone I couragiously appeale. For in his name I am baptized, of which thing I haue a seale and testi-monie, to wit, that I am his sheepe, & that he is that good shephe-heard, seeking his lost sheepe, & dealing with me without all lawe, exactinge nothing of me, neither as Moses vrgeth, troubleth, and forceth me, but sheweth vnto me his meere & most sweete grace, while he submitteh himselfe to me, & layeth me on his shoulders, and carrieth me. Why therefore shold I feare the thundryngs of Moses and of the deuell, whē as I rest in his safe custody, which hath giuen vnto me his righteousness and all other things, which holdeth and carrieth me, so that there is now no more daunger lest I perish, I remaining a sheepe and denying not my shepheheard, but reposing my selfe wholy in him?

Thus hast thou Christ most louingly set forth, vnto thee. Now onely faith is required, whereof there is great neede. For this doctrine is excellent, & replenished with most sweete consolation A hard thing and comfort, but this is wanting, that the vse thereof is not felt, to feele true where it ought to be felt. For when the sheepe goeth astray, that comfort of is, when a man feeleth himselfe grieued with his synnes, and can conscience.

not tell where to abyde, and is cast of the deuell into a great feare of minde, then he alwayes runneth vnto the contrary, neither can he comprehend or conceyue in minde, that this is true, all things falling out of his minde, which he heard here, because of the present feeling and feare. For the deuell hath daaled his eyes, neither can he perceiue any thing els but the wrath and indignation of God. Wherewith his heart is so burdened, that he is not able to raise vp himselfe in minde, and to turne his eyes any other where. Nay he lyeth so drowned in it, that Christ appeareth no otherwise vnto him but as an angrie iudge, as he hath hitherto beeene painted out, and is so beaten into the hearts of all by the wicked Papists, sitting on the rayne bowe, with a sword comming out of his mouth. For this is one of the most decietfull crafts of the deuell, yea and of his mischiefes which he practizeth against the miserable shepe, to dasle his eyes, that he may not know any more his owne shepheard, & vnder a pretence of Christ to leade a man to Moses, disputing as much of Christ, as he had accustomed to do before of Moses. Wherefore we haue neede of a strong & firme faith, that we may beleue these things to be true, when a man himselfe must dispute euен against himselfe. For the sense is vehement of it selfe, whercunto the deuil also commith maruelously amplifying synne & terror, the greatness and anguish whereof is able to consume euen the marrow in the bones, yea and the heart in the body. It can not therefore be perfectly learned so soone as some thinke. In prosperitie it is easilie beleued that Christ is sweete and amiable, but anguish and terror comming vpon & ouer whelming the minde, man is blinde and without good understanding, and will iudge only according to the sense and vnderstanding of his owne heart, which he followeth, and confirmeth himselfe in his owne errour. For he is taken therein, and can thinke no otherwise, but that it is true, and nevertheles it is not true.

Now it were a point of this art, for a man thus to say vnto his heart, if thou confes thy selfe to be a lost shepe, thou sayest right: but that thou wilt therefore runne from Christ, and so thinke of him in thy minde, as though he were a man, which would chace and terrifie thee, it is a suggestion and tentation of the deuel. For if thou didst rightly consider him, and confes him as thy true shepheard, then wouldest thou not flie from his sight, neither wouldest

wouldest conceiue terror in thy minde , but with all cheeresful-nes and boldnes wouldest runne vnto him . For surely he is not therefore ready at hand that he may condemne thee , but he commeth to thee , seeking thee , that having layde thee on his shoulders , he may carie thee , and exempt & deliuier thee from sinnes , errores , the devill and his power , yea and from all perill . Thou perceuest therefore that thou art a sinner , and hast deserved indignatio[n] so much more earnestly is that shepeheard to be soughe and called for of thee , that he may deliuier thee from it : of whom consider no other wise in thy minde , then the shepe doth of his owne shepheard , whome it can not feare , but seing and hearing him becommeth glad and cheeresful , although it hath runne from him , so that for this deede it hath a sufficient cause to feare . The whole matter therefore consisteth onely in this , that thou do per-fecly learne Christ aright , & consider him according to the word We must coof God , and not according to the proper cogitacio[n]s of thy minde , sider Christ and thine owne senses . For the cogitations of men are false and according to lying , but his wordes are true and can not deceiue . Wherefore the word of the worde alone is to be engrauen in our heart , and we must cleaue unto it with a constant mynde , whereby we may reprove our owne heart of lying . For it alone must be true , and all things els that are contrarie to it , false and vaine . But truly this is an arte , whereof I am ignorant , but much moze those other light spirates , who boaste many thinges of it , as they that know all things , when as they haue euuen once heard any thing thereof , and nevertheles they do not a little perceiue or trie so much as any whit of it . For it is an easie thing to speake and preach of it , but how hard a thing it is to proue it in deede , they onely haue experience , who earnestly make triall thereof .

This is a most amiable demonstration of our Christ, described by himself in this Gospell, wherein he hath most abundantly poured forth the flames of his most fervent heart, and affection toward vs, shewing that he hath exceeding great care and regard to recover his shepe, which alone leauing ninety and nine he seeketh and enquireth diligently for, not to terrifie it and beate it, but that he may helpe it, and having found it, may bring it home, and with his louing and sweete voice and speaking unto it may chere it being miserable and afflicted in conscience. By all which thou seest, how acceptable a thing thou shalt do unto him, if thou truste and cleave vnto him with thy whole heart, and promise to thy selfe from him all goodnes and loue.

Secondly thou plainly seest this also, how by all maner of outward signes & meanes he poureth forth his ioy and vnspeakable goodnes, and also hauing found his sheepe how louing he sheweth himselfe. For surely he dealeth not with it by any law, as by his right he might deale, and drue it before him as he doth the rest, or suffer it to go by him. Howbeit he doth none of these, but layeth it vpon his shoulders, and all the iournay carieth it through the desert, taking all the labour and trouble vpon himselfe, that at the least wise the sheepe may rest. Neither doth he it grudgingly but willingly, for he is full of ioy for his sheepe recovered. Now marke this also, how wel it goeth with the sheepe, with how great quietnes and ease it lyeth on his shepheards shoulders, neither doth it unwillingly see it selfe resting so sweetly being deliuerned from the difficulty of the iourney, as also boyd of all feare both of dogs and woulues, that is, of all errores and lyes, yea and of all perils and mischieses. And this surely deserueth to be called a very pleasaunt picture, exceeding amiable and confortable to be looked vpon.

No otherwise doth our Lord Iesus Christ deale with vs, whiles he deliuereþ vs, which he hath once done corporally by his passion and death, but now doth estsoones the same by his power, and spiritually by the preaching of his word. Wherefore he layeth vs vpon his shoulders, carieth, and defendeth vs, so that we are safe from all perils of death and the deuell, which albeit they terrifie vs, and shew themselves so, as though they would denour vs, yet preuaile they nothing. For whereas we are caried, it is a safegard vnto vs, and the same exempteth vs from all daungers, and putteth awaye all feare. As the sheepe lying vpon the shepheards shoulders is little careful, though the dogs barke much, and the woulfe craftily goeth vp and downe, but rather hanging downe the head is quiet and sleepeþ soundly.

If we beleue also, if we stand and abyde unmoueably in this article, assuredly in I beleue in Jesus Christ our Lord, who suffered, died, rose againe for vs, &c. there is no cause why we should be carefull lest we perish, or be denoured of the deuell, though he open his iaws never so wide. For we are not then in our owne waye, neither never so sore. walke we vpon our owne feete, but we hange vpon the necke of our shepheheard , and lye vpon his shoulders , where we are safe enough. For sinne, death, and hell, although in deede they be terrible, yet dare they not set vpon him, otherwile if it were not for this , we should be miserable shepe , which shold forthwith be brought into a lamētable and wretched case. For euен as a shepe can not take heede and foresee to it selfe , that it stray not out of the way, vñles it be led of the shepheheard, & when it hath strayed and is lost, can not by it selfe come againe to the shepheheard , but must be sought and enquired for of him , vntill he hath found it, and so must be layd vpō his shoulders and brought home againe, lest that it be againe strayed and chased from him, or catcht of the woulfe and rent in pieces : So we also our selues can profitte our selues neither by helpe, nor counsel, that we might obtaine peace and quietnes of conscience , and escape out of the hands of the deuell, death, and hell, except Christ himselfe repeat his word vnto vs, and call vs againe unto him. And although we come vnto him, and now stand in faith , yet is it not in our powre to keepe our selues therein , or to stand by our owne strength , vñles he estloones by the power of his Word , hold, lift vp , and carie vs, for that the deuell alwayes imagineth and purposeth deceit and destruction toward vs , and goeth about like a roving lyon, seeking whom he may devoure, as S. Peter witnesseth. Wherefore here is no place to boast of free will , or of our owne strength, which is none, neither in beginning any thing, neither in going forward therein , much lesse in perseuering or continuing in it, but Christ our shepheheard alone doth all things.

Howbeit we are sure hereof, that whiles we lye vpon the shoulders of Christ , we shall remayne safe from all terror and misfortune. For he will not suffer vs to be plucked or taken from his necke, neither will he himselfe cast vs of, being so glad and ioyfull, that he hath found his lost shepe , and brought it againe to the rest of the flocke . And in a summe , here is no terror , or trouble, or exaction , but mere life and grace , whereby he handleth his shepe most louingly and gently . But on the contrarie Moses , not as a shepheheard of miserable and weake sheepe , but as a maister of stronger cattell , diueth his heards with a stasse and a rod three dayes iourney through the desert , vntill they be tyred and wearie with walking : of this shepheheard those hardeened and wilde ones are to be tamed and bridled . And we also, when we shalbe vnder Moses, to wit, according to the flesh and the outward life, must goe, and do that which the law requireth. But in that we are, and are called Christians, we must by no meanes suffer, that any worke be layed vpon vs, yea or exacted of vs, but must giue our selues onely to Christ to be caried and gentlylly lifted vp, not vpon hores and charrets, but euen vpon his onely shoulders. Which commeth to passe, as I haue sayd, when he suffreth the word to be preached vnto vs, and we also beleue the same, that he died for vs, that on the crosse he bare our sinnes in his body, that he hath ouerthowne the deuell, death, and synnes, and put them vnder his feete, and hath made and opened vnto vs entraunce to eternall life. Wherefore we must not haue respect to our owne life, how righteous and strong we are, but we must studie vpon his one thing, that we may rest lying vpon his shoulders. In this circle we must haue no care of synne, death, life, or penituenes, inasmuch as we haue all things to the full in Christ, who beareth and keepeþ vs.

Now he is not content with all these things, both that with such great trauell he seeketh his shepe, and also that hauing found it, he carieth it with incredible ioy, but it being brought againe, he maketh festial dayes, & exceedingly reioyceth, calling together his neighbours and friendes that they may reioyce with him. Yea he affirmeth, that God also in heauen with the whole heauenly host do reioyce ouer one synner that repenteþ. In which wordes he sheweth and declareth, who he is, which deserueth to be called his lost shepe, namely such a synner, as being led by repentaunce of his former life, doth amend, most fervently desyring to be deliuered from synnes, and earnestly endeouering to come vnto Christ: such a one hath a miserable and troubled, yea and a contrite and humbled heart, and an afflicted conscience, which the deuell by all meanes fighteth against, and so presseth it, that it is almost overcome with distresses, &c. But Christ assisteth and comforteth him, for he is such a man, as seeketh no shepe but that which is lost, and can not helpe it selfe.

How may Christ be preached with greater gentlenes, and more effectuall consolacio of words? or what thinkest thou shoulde he do more to cheere the mind of a sinner, and to confirme in him a sure confidence toward himselfe? For we see him set forth by himselfe to vs miserable synners as a most louing shepheheard, who most sorrowfully seeketh his sheepe being lost, and most ioyfully bringeth them againe being found, and taketh so great ioy, that with him all the Angells also and Sainctes doe reioyce ouer vs.

Now he that could firmely beleue these thinges, shold without dout through Christ receive true comfort and ioy, forasmuch as here he hath a certaine promise, that if he surely cleaue vnto Christ, and rest vpon his shoulders, he shall be an acceptable and welcome guest in the kingdom of heauen, and shall be receyued with exceeding great ioye. But we being troubled with sorrowe and anguish of conscience, haue a farre other feeling and affectiōn, when as the hart can thinke nothing else, but that all the Angells doe stand behind vs with a drawne sword, which feare so troubleth vs, that we can conceiue no cheeresfulnes in our minde, neither of God, nor of the Angells. And there are some also, which can behold no creature with a glad minde, fearing the beholding of the sunne, yea being soze afraid at the noyle of a leafe. All which proeede from hence, for that they trouble and vex them selues with their owne thoughtes, out of which they would willingly wrastle, sparing no labour, that they might feele that vprightnes and integrarie in them, which would be abashed with no feare. But if thou be desirous to conceiue true comfort and ioye in thy hart, then see that thou doe diligently and well print and fasten therein this amiable image of the most louing shepheheard, and the word of the Gospell, and seeke it, where it is to be sought, that is, in Christ and no where else: for in this man thou shalt find all thinges, so that thou abide in his safe custodie and upon his shoulders. But whatsoeuer comfort can be obtained without him, it commeth not from the hart, although thou call to helpe thee all the creatures, and shouldest also be partaker of the pleasure and ioy of the whole worlde.

In Christ
true ioy is to be found, & without him can be found no true ioy

TIN LVTHER OF THE WO-MAN OF CANAAN.

Matth. 15.

- Verse. 21.* And Iesus went thence, and departed into the partes of Tyrus and Sidon.
- 22. And behold, a womā a Cananite came out of the same coastes , and cryed, saying vnto him, Haue mercy on me, O Lord, the sonne of Dauid : my daughter is miserably vexed with a Deuill.
- 23. But he aunswered her not a word. Then came to him his Disciples & besought him, saying: Send her away, for she cryeth after vs.
- 24. But he aunswered and sayd: I am not sent but vnto the lost sheepe of the house of Israell.
- 25. Yet she came & worshipped him, saying, Lord helpe me.
- 26. And he aunswered & said, it is not good to take the childrens bread, and to cast it to whelps.
- 27. But she sayd, truth Lord: yet in deed the welpes eate of the crommes , which fall from their maisters table.
- 28. Then Iesus aunswered and sayde vnto her , O woman, great is thy faith: be it to thee as thou desirest. And her daughter was made whole at that hourc.

LIn this text is set forth vnto vs an example of a constant and stedfast faith. For this woman did so perseuer, that she ouercame three most sharpe afflictions, and notably teacheth vs, what is the qualitie and proper vertue of a true & right faith. Which Faith what it in deede is a certaine trust, and most deepeley settled in the mind, of the diuine goodnes and grace, knowne and made manifest by the worde of God. For Marke mentioneth that she heard the report of Iesus, without dout good and ioyfull, that he is a bountifull man, and maruelous ready to helpe euery one. That report was good tidings & the worde of grace vnto her, whereupon also this her faith did begin. For vntill she had beleued that she also might be made partaker of Christes bountisulnes and goodnes, shee would not haue so followed him, or cried after him. Which is that wherof we haue often admonished, & which we are taught Rom. 10. that faith is by hearing. Wherfore the word ought alwayes to goe before, and gaine the beginning of saluation. But how came it to passe, whereas many other also heard the same report of our Sauour Iesus, yet they followed him not, yea they quite despised that report? I aunswere. They that are not sickle, as they haue no neede of the Phisitian, so neither are they desirous of him. But this woman was afflicted and felte her necessarie, yea that report was so ioyfull vnto her, that she being stirred vp thereby, did follow Chrift, running after such a pleasant sauour. Cant. 1. Wher. We must forse Moses must alway goe before, who may teach vs to feele sinne, whereby grace may be wished for and desired of vs. It is in vaine therfore, although Chrift be preached to be louing, and to be desired and longed for, if a man be not before humbled through knowledge of him selfe, and made desirous of Chrift, according to the songe of Marie: The Lorde hath filled the hungry with good thinges, and the rich he hath sent emptie away. Nowe all these thinges are written for the consolation & lifting vp of them which be miserable, poore, needie, oppressed with sinnes, and abjects, that they may knowe to whom they may flie in all distres, and where they may seeke for helpe and safetie.

But see howe Chrift urgeth and inflameth faith in them that be his, whereby they may become stronger and more confirmed. For first, whereas this woman being encouraged with that alluring fame of his, goeth after him, and cryeth for helpe, daunting nothing but she shold trie him to be such a one, as she had heard him reported to be, and that she shold forchwith entreat him for the recoverie of her daughter: Christ in all respects sheweth him selfe unto her so , as though he would deceiue all her trust , and make his report false, so that she might thinke with her selfe : Is this that man which is so bountiful and readie to helpe all? Doth he so fulfull the most commendable report which goeth of him? Where doth there appare so much as any thing like unto those thinges , which men haue told me of him ? They were deceiued them selues and deceiued me also . He sheweth him selfe an enemy rather then a friende . Why doth he not so much as speake a word , and friendly denie me helpe , if I be vnworthy thereof? He holdeth his peace like unto a blocke , & vouchsafeth not to speake a word , neither offereth his help . Here surely Christ gaue a grieuous blow to the minde of the silly woman . So it is an incomparable torment to them that beleue, being in distres , when God sheweth him selfe such a one at their prayers , like unto one that is angrie , and whom they pray unto in vayne , hiding so deepeley his grace , that they now perceiue nothing els , but that he will not performe those thinges which he hath promised , and that so he will shew his owne wordes to be false . That truely hapned to the Israelites at the red sea , and to many other excellent holy men . But what doth this woman to these things ? She remoueth out of her sight & mind , that Christ shewed him selfe so vngentle and hard to be intreated , he being constant and nothing moued hereat , persevereth in the trust of his goodnes , whereof she had heard , and which she had conceiued in her minde , suffering her selfe in no wise to be turned from it . So also must we do , we must trust unto the word alone , although God him selfe and all creatures pretende otherwise then the worde preacheth . But this is thysse most hard to nature & reason , to be so utterly destitute , and to depend on the word of God without any feeling of comfort , euen when a man feeleth and trieth all things to be contrary . God giue unto vs such a mind and faith , that we may so doe , especially at the point of death and in extreme necessities .

The constācie of this woman of Canaan.

We must not ceasse to trust in God , though he seemeth at the first not to heare our prayers , nor to fulfill his promise .

Secondly , whereas the cry and faith of this woman seemeth to haue suffered repulse , the disciples come with their faith , douting not but that they shal entreat the Lord , but when they thinke that they shall make him more easie to be intreated , they find him to be much more harde, repelling as it appeared; and as they sought, the faith and prayers both of the woman & also of them clues. Neither doth Christ here hold his peace, and leauue them in doubt, as before, but he seemeth plainly to deny that which they aske, saying: I am not sent but to the lost sheepe of the ouse of Israel. This stroke is much more grieuous then that forner, where not onely the person of the intreter is repelled, but I hope also whiche is wont to be left, is cut of, namely the comfort of the intercession of all the other Saintes and elect. For it is almost the last refuge to them that suffer distres and seele the indignation of God, to get them selues to godly & holy men, seeking of comfort and helpe, whereunto, as charitie requireth, they find hem ready and willing, but euен they also some time doe in vaine ske helpe and succour, for neither are they heard, and so the case of them that be in distre: becommeth worse and moze lamentable. So the afflicted and desolate may truely obiect unto Christ those wordes, wherein he hath promised that he will heare his Saintes, as: If two of you shall agree in earth vpon any thing Math. 18.19 whatsoeuer they shall desire, it shall be giuen them of my Father which is in heauen. Againe, V Whatsoeuer ye shall aske, be- Marke 11.24 eue, and ye shall receiue it. And many such like. But if to him hat obiecteth these thinges, and asketh him howe he can goe rom his wordes and promises, he aunswere thus: I goe not rom my promises, I haue not promised that I will heare all prayers, but the prayers of them that be myne, which are of the ouse of Israell, not of all whatsoeuer. What thinkest thou may he hart then thinke having taken such a repulse? Such an aunswere is as it were a flash of lightning, wherewith the hart and all trust is seuered and broken in a thousand peeces. For what rust can there be left, when he heareth that that doth not pertaine unto him, which because of the word of God he trusted to haue obayed, but unto others. Here not so much as a word can be left, sone doe according as he seeleth. But what doth this woman?

 She doth not so fall from hope, she still sticketh to the wordes The great constancie & faith of this woman of Canaan.
 which she had heard of Christ, albeit he went about by this other repulse as with a certaine force to wrest them out of her hart, she sufferereth not her self to be fraied away neither w that vngentleence, neither with this hard aunswere, shee continueth stedfastly in a sure confidence, beleeving that vnder this difficultie which Christ did pretend, that grace was as yet hidden and layd by her, which she had heard reported of him, shee can not be brought as yet to judge Christ not to be bountifull and gracious, and that he can deny the helpe which shee desireth. This was to perseue strongly in faith.

Moreover she followeth Jesus euuen into the house, as Mark writeth, she is instant vpon him, falleth downe before him, and sayth: Lord helpe me. Here the Lord giueth a deadly & the last blow saying unto her face, that she is a dogge, and unwororthy to be partaker of the bread of the children. What may she aunswere hereunto? For he seemed to signifie in these wordes that she is out of the number of the damned and desperat, which can looke for no part with the elect. This word seemeth eternall and that can not be gainsayd: For he which doth not pertaine to the compaines of the elect by the ordinaunce of God, what may he hope to be left for him? This woman is not yet discouraged and past hope, but yeldeith to this iudgement of the Lord, she confesseth of her own accord, that she is a dogge, neither desireth she any thing but that which is wont to be giuen to dogges, namely the crummes which fall from their maisters table. Seemeth she not to haue bled maruelous cunning? She taketh Christ in his owne wordes. He had made her like unto a dogge, she acknowledgeth it, and desireth that he will onely suffer her to be a dogge according to his owne saying: what shold he here do? how shold he escape he was now as it were euuen taken. For the crummes vnder the table are graunted to the dogge, for unto dogges they are said to be due. Here therefore Christ being as it were ouercome, doth open him selfe wholy, and grauntech the desires of the woman, and maketh that she is not now a dogge, but a true Israelite.

constant perseuerance & trust in Christ.

These things are written for the instruction and comfort of all vs, whereby we ought to learne, howe deeply sometime Christ hideth his grace from vs, and how we must not iudge of God according to our owne sense and opinion, but onely according to his wordes. For we see here, that albeit Christ shewed him selfe ver hard to this woman, yet he did not plainly deny to helpe her, but whatsoever he aunswered, howsoever it seemed to pretend a deniall, yet was it not a deniall, but did hange in dout, and left a entraunce for faith, although but small. For he sayd not at his first petition: I will not heare her, but he held his peace, neither promisyn

promising nor denying helpe. So to the second petition , which he Apostles made, he sayth not: she is not of the house of Israel, I can not therefore performe that which she desireth, but he onep sayth: I am not sent, but to the lost sheepe of the house of Iraell, leauing all thinges in doute, and in the middest betweene a laine graunt and a deniali. So when she had the third time desi-ed him, he sayth not: thou art a dogge, get thee hence, the bread of the children is not due vnto thee, but he sayth: It is not good to ake the childrens bread, &c. againe leauing in dout, whether she was a dogge or no. Neuertheles all these sayinges doe pretende outwardly rather a deniali of helpe , then prouoke her to hope, but in very deede they did containe in them rather a promise and hope, then a deniali. Yea there was nothing but a promise and a certaine expectation of helpe, (howbeit most deepeley hid and allogither secret) vnder that silence and aunswers , although they were hard, and a deniali onely sounded outwardly . By these it is hewed how our hart is wont to be affected in tentation. For according as that feeleth in temptation, so Christ here behaueth him else. It feeleth all thinges to be denied, when as it is farre otherwise. Wherfore it is requisite , that leauing it owne feeling, by a sure faith in the word of God it conceiuie and hold fast the pronise of helpe, deepeley hidden vnder the deniali, and yeeld vnto the entence of God toward vs, as this woman did, so shall we ouer-come and take the Lord in his wordes, that he can not but helpe vs. So that if we feele in our conscience at any time God rebuking vs, pronouncing vs sinners, and unworthy of the kingdom of heauen, then we feele as it were hell , and it seemeth vnto vs that we are past all hope and recouerie for ever : then if any had When God he s kill of this woman, that he could take the Lord in his owne pronounceth udgement and say: yea Lord, I am a sinner, and altogither vn- vs sinners, we worthy of thy grace , but thou hast promised forgiuenes to sin- ought to ac-iers, neither didst thou come to call the righteous, but as Paule knowledge ayth , to saue sinners : he truely shoulde bringe to passe that the our sinnes, & Lord should be enforced , euен by his owne iudgement to haue pray for me mercy vpon him. So did Manasses, when being penitent he pray- cye, which ed for pardon, as we read in his prayer: He yeelded to the iudge- God hath ment of God , acknowledging him selfe a most grieuous sinner, them that be and so he bound God with his promise, which had promised for- penitent for giuenes of sinne to sinners, not to the righteous . The same also their sinnes.

did David obserue Psal.51: Against thee onely sayth he, hau sinned, and done this euill in thy sight, that thou mightest be stified in thy saying, and found pure when thou art iudged. If that doth purchase unto vs all displeasure, that we disdayne suffer the iudgement of the Lord, and doe against our wills yee unto his sentence, when he pronounceth vs sinners. Such a gre thing is it to acknowledge sinnes, and to embrace the iudgement of God. We all confess our selues sinners in words, but as soone as the Lorde speaketh that in our hart, and pronouncest vs sinners, we doe not abide by that which before we confessed, we haueuer be counted righteous and free from that iudgement. But must needes be, if God must be iust in his wordes, that thou be sinner, then also maist thou use the right of sinners, which him selfe hath giuen unto them, namely to pray with a sure expectation of forgiuenes of sinnes. Then is it not permitted unto thee onely to feede vnder the table of crummes after the maner dogges, but being a child of the houshold, thou shalt sit at the vi ry table, having God nowe howe great soever he be, giuen unto thee according to thy desire. Hereof also we haue an historica exposition of this text according to þ allegories. For as it chaunceþ to this woman her daughter being sickle, for whom througþ faith she obtained health by a miracle: so also falleth it out with vs, when we are deliuered from þ spirituall sicknes to wit sinnes which truely are a most grieuous and troublesom Deuill unto vs. For as she acknowledged her selfe a dogge, so must we acknowledge our selues sinners and iudged unto hell, the Lord pronouncing it, which if we can doe as she coulde, we shall be safe. We haue already spoken elsewhere of other thinges, whereon there might be occasion to speake out of this text, as howe one may obtaine grace and safetie by the faith of an other, as here it fell out to the daughter of this woman. This thinge also (that Christ, his Disciples, and the woman are here examples of loue, forasmuch as none of them pray for, seeke or doe those thinges that are their owne, but every one that which is an others) is very manifest by it selfe, and easily acknowledged of euery one, especiall y seing that we haue so largely entreated hereof in an other place.

Christ, the Disciples, &
the woman in this place are examples of loue.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, WHEREIN IS TAUGHT THAT WE ARE SAVED freely by grace, without the workes and merits of men.

nes, which we had done, but according to his mercie he sauued vs, by the washing of the newe birth, and the renuing of the holie Ghost,

Iesus Christ our Sauour,

PAUL having willed before that all shoulde be put in mind to be obedient to such as be in authori-tie, and ready to euery good worke, to speake euill of no man, to be no fighters, but gentle, shewing all meekenes vnto all men, &c: these fewe wordes being put betweene ; that we our selues were in times past vnwise, disobedient, deceived, seruing diuers lustes and voluptuousnes, &c : he added those wordes which we haue already mentioned, as if he should say: Wherfore shold it grieue vs to deserue so well of all men, when as God hath before dealt so bountifullly, kindely, and gently with vs, with whom without comparison, we are lesse, and haue lesse of him deserued, then any being compared to vs can be, or can deserue of vs? As therefore God hath with exceeding bountifullnes and kindenes most gently behaued him selfe toward vs, of his mercy graunting and giuing vnto vs all thinges: so ought we to doe all thinges with all charitie and good will toward our neighbours, albeit they haue otherwise de-serued, forasmuch as we were like vnto them, subiect to all sinnes and euill desires. Here we see how the Apostle will haue vs to be affected toward men: He will haue vs subiect to them that be in authoritie, kinde vnto others, and readie to doe well vnto them with all gentlenes, although they be euill, blinde, and in errore, that we grudge not to beare these thinges, and as much as lyeth in vs, endeouour to doe them good, taking all things in good part, considering that God hath so dealt with vs, when we were euill and wicked, like vnto them.

FN. 2. 11.

Bountifullnes

This word, appeared, we haue elsewhere declared to signifie the revelation of the Gospele, whereby Christ appeared in the world: Albeit the vnskilfulness of Ministers hath wrested it to the carnall nativitie of Christ. He vseth not here the word grace, which he vsed before, but hath set in stede therof two other words of maruelous comfort, [bountifullnes, and loue toward men] which he attributeth to our God. The first is called of the Grecians Chrestotes, and is that kindnes, gentlenes and sweetenes of conditions, wherewith they that be endued, with them all of vs are with pleasure conuersant, & maruelously delighted with their companie, so that they doe with this their gentlenes and kindnes allure & greatly prouoke all men to loue them. For such can suffer all without griefe: they contemne no man: they repell or put none from them with bitter, hard, and disordered conditions: accesse vnto them is not hard, but they are so open, and ready for al, that every one dare resort vnto them, and desire their helpe. And to conclude: they are such men as the Gospeles describe Christ vnto vs, whom they declare to be gentle to all, a despiser of none, which denieth no benefit to any, pliant, prepared and ready to do good to all. So God also by the Gospele is preached and offered vnto vs whole good, bountifull and sweete, open to all, rejecting none, bearing all our sinnes and offences, repelling no man from him with excessive severite. For we read and heare nothing to be declared in the Gospele but meere grace, and meere goodnes, where-

whereby he doth most mercifully beare vs, & most gently handle vs, and not any man according to his deserts. This is the time of grace, wherein it is graunted to all to goe with great boldnes vnto the thronne of grace, as it is written Heb.4. and Psal. 34: Come vnto him, and be enlightened, and your faces shall noe be ashamed, that is, he will not suffer you to pray and come in vaine, neither to returne with confusione being frustrate.

The other word is Philanthropia, loue of men, as covetousnes Loue toward men. may be called loue of money, as David 2. Sam. 1. calleth the desire of women, the loue of women. And the Philosophers call certaine living creatures Philanthropa, that is louing toward men, as are horses, dogges, dolphins. For these creatures are by nature delighted with man, they desire his company, & do willingly serue him, as though they were moued with some reason & sense of humanity. This name, & such loue the Apostle here attributeth to our God, which Moses also did before him, Deut. 33: where he speaketh thus of God: The Lord appeared having in his right hand a law of fire, and he loued the people. The meaning therefore of the Apostle is this: Our God hath in the Gospell shewed him selfe vnto vs not onely bountifull, kinde, gentle, and sweete, which can beare, and will receiue all, but also he so loueth vs, that of his owne accord he adioyneth him self vnto vs, seeketh to haue to doe with vs, voluntarily sheweth and offereth his grace and bountifulnes vnto vs, and most gently embraceth as many as onely doe not refuse his grace and loue, and desire to drawe neare vnto him. What shoulde he doe more? Who can not see hereby, why we count the Gospell a preaching, ioyfull and full of all consolation of God in Christ? For what can be spoken more louingly and sweetely to a sinnesfull and afflicted conscience, then these wordes? O lamentable case, how miserably hath Satan by the lawes of his Pope oppressed and obscured this souereigne syncretie of the word of God.

Now let no man restraine these two wordes [bountifulnes, & loue toward men] to the persons, for God is plainly without respect of persons bountifull to all, and a louer of all, otherwise if we shoulde here make a difference betweene men, we shoulde acknowledge that some thing is received through our merits, and not all thinges through his mercy. Where it must be well marke, that God is sayd to be a louer of men, not of this or that nature onely, not held with loue of the person, and therefore these two, bountifullnes, and loue toward men, must be taken after a generall sort, that in all thinges the chiefe praise may be attributed to his mercy, that no man trust in his owne merits, neither be terrifid with sinnes, but that all togither doe trust to his grace, which he voluntarilly offereith unto vs with so great kindnes and loue toward vs. For if any respect of person might be had here, it shold surely be had of them, which are rich in the works of righ-teousnes, but Paul expressely reiecteth these, saying: Not by the workes of righ-teousnes, which we had done. Howe much lesse then shall this bountifullnes and loue of our God toward men ap-peare, because of any mans wisedome, power, nobilitie, riches or any such thing, when as no respect is had of workes of righ-teousnes? Great is the grace of God toward vs, which appeareth in the Gospell, yea and nothing but grace, which admitteth no merit at all of ours, utterly taketh away all boasting and glozing, and setteth forth the glory of God alone, who freely giueith it unto vs being vnworthy. So in this text these two, faith and loue, are taught to receive benefits of God, and bestow them on our neigh-bours, which the Scripture doth very often repeate, so that euē

of our saluation consi-steth in faith and loue.

the doctrine of saluation consisteth wholy in them, neither can one be separated from the other. For he that doth not firmly trust in the diuine grace, can not but be remisse and slow to doe well to his neighbour; and so witnes the faintnes and weakenes of faith, which is the fountaine of all duties and benefites: As contrari-wise the stronger faith that one is endued with, so much more dutifullly and with readier minde he endeououreth to deserue well of his neighbours.

By faith and loue man is made as it were a meane be-twene God & his neighbours.

All both doctrine and life worthy of Ch̄ist, (that all thinges may be declared most b̄iefly, manifestly and sufficienly) consist of these two, faith and loue. Whereby man is made as it were a meane betwene God and his neighbours, that he may receive of God from aboue, and may gine to his neighbours beneath, as it were a conduit pipe, through which the fountaine of the diuine goodnes doth continually flow to his neighbours. And such men are like unto God, whch in Ch̄ist receive of God whatsoeuer he hath, and doe againe by their good deedes declare them-selues as it were the gods of other, and fullfill the propheetie of the Prophete Psalme 82: I haue sayde, ye are gods, and ye ye all are children of the most high. We are children of the most high by faith, whereby of nothinge we are made the heires of God. And we are gods by loue, which maketh vs beneficiale to our neighbour: soasmuch as the nature of God is nothinge but bountifullnes, and Paul here sayth: the bountifullnes and loue of God toward men, which he doth with incomparable plentie daily poure forth vpon every one, as we see. We must onely en-deuour, that every one doe nothing doubt that these thinges are spoken to him, that the bountifullnes and loue of God to man-ward is reuealed and offered to every one, that by these wordes he may establish, exercise, and strengthen his faith, being certain that they are most true, and that God both vndoubtedly is, and alwayes will be bountifull and louing toward him. If thou canst beleue this, it will assuredly so come vnto thee: thou maist then with a full confidence pray and desire of him whatsoeuer thou wilt, and complayne vnto him of whatsoeuer doth grieue thee or other. But if thou want this faith, it had bene better for thee neuer to haue heard any thing hereof, for that by thy infidelity thou reprouest of falsehood these wordes so precious and full of consolation and grace, making so light account of them, as not belie-uing that they be true. Which surely is a great contempt and dishonour of God, that scarce a moze grieuous sinne can be committed of thee. Contrariwise if thou be endued with this faith, it can not be, but that thy hart being thereby cheered, should even as it were laughe and leape for holy ioy in God, being void of all care and trouble, and be made aboue measure confident.

 For how can any discouragement, any whit of sorrowe remayne in that hart, which douteh not that God is gracious and bounti-full vnto it, and beareth a singular affection of loue toward it, that it is a delight and pleasure vnto him to doe it good, and enjoy it as a friende? Surely the hart is necessarily delighted with this spirituall ioy and pleasure, or vndoubtedly it wanteth faith. Paule in the Epistle to the Gal. calleth this, to receive the holy Ghost by the Gospell. For the Gospell is so pleasant a preaching of the grace and goodnes of God, that while it is preached and heard, it bringeth the holy Ghost with it, no other wise then the beames of the sunne doe naturally bring heat with them.

The meines

ker of the

God is to

How could the Apostle vse more pleasant and sweete words?
 I dare say that I haue in the whole Scripture redde none more pleasant, and so sweete words of the grace of God, as these two, Chrestotes, & Philanthropia, that is, bountifulnes, and loue toward men, in which þ grace of God is so described, as wherby he doth not onely forgiue our sinnes, but doth also desire to be conuersant with vs, and is ready to doe the part of a very friend toward vs, voluntarily offering him selfe to helpe vs in al thinges, also to bestowe more benefits vpon vs then we can desire or aske, that we may presume of him no otherwise then of a most neare & familiar friend, of whom we may obtayne all thinges, in whose eyes we are most deare, and euuen delightfull. Thinke in thy minde of a most perfect friend, which hath fulfilled all the partes of friendship toward thee, & thou shalt haue after a sort a forme, although yet farre unlike, of the diuine goodnes and kindenes, which is here attributed to our God, by the name of bountifulnes and loue toward men. But when thou hast a sounde faith in this bountifulnes and loue to manward, and thereby doost live in thy God, so bountifull, gracious, and gentle to thee, reioycest, and art full of all good thinges, being certayne of his continuall grace, what shouldest thou doe any longer in earth? what in this life?

He that is partaker of the bountifulnes and loue of God can not be idle.

Thou canst not in this case be idle, as surely that loue of God and pleasure which thou enioyest in him will not suffer thee to be idle. Thou shalt be enflamed with a marueilous study and desire to doe what things soever thou canst know will be an honour unto thy God, so louing and bountifull unto thee, and will turne to praise, glory, and thankes giuing unto him. Thou shalt haue no choise of works, thou shalt passe for no precept, thou shalt seele no compulsion of the law, having a most ready will and pleasure to doe, whatsoever thinges thou shalt know to be acceptable unto God, whether they be contemptible or noble, small or great, thou shalt count them alike. But first of all it shall be thy desire, that this blessed knowledge of God may be common also to the rest, whereupon by and by thy loue will here shew it selfe, and will assay all meanes, to make this truth of saluation manifest unto all, it will publish and repeate it, wheresoever it shall be able, reiecting and condemning whatsoever other either teach or say, that agreeeth not with this truth. Whereby it will come to passe, that Satan & the wozlde, which heare nothing so unwillingly as this truth, & can not abide that their thinges should be condemned, wil

world can not abide falshood to rise against thee with all their might, wil by & by trouble thee, all the great, learned, rich & mightie of the wrold wil condemne thee of heresie and madnes, and will leau no meane unattempted vntill if they be able they haue dispatcht thee of thy life. Thus with Christ thy Lord thou shalt be persecuted, & suffer extreme igno-minie, thy body, life, goods, name, friendes, and all things being brought into perill, vntill they haue thrust thee from them out of this life into the eternal & blessed life: In the meane season thou must suffer all these things with a patient mind, and take them in good part, losing none of thy spiritual ioy, which thou hast of Christ in thy God, & for thy part shewing to thy persecutors all kindnes and loue, being alwayes mindful, that thou a litle before wast not much unlike them before God. All which thinges thou shalt doe through faith & loue, albeit they exceede the strength of nature.

And this in deede is a true Christian life, wherein thou doost en-deuour to doe so to other, as God hath done to thee.

Not by the workes of righteousnes which we had done. In these words the Apostle signifieth that which we haue now sayd, and proueth it as it were by rending a reason. For if the bountifulnes and loue of God to manward hath appeared, & he hath saued vs of his mercie, and not because of our owne righteousnes, yea we being by all meanes vnworthy, and subiect to innumerable sinnes, it is meete that we also do good to them that haue not deserued so much of vs, & are vnworthy therof. For we which are become the sonnes of God, must resemble God our father, and bestow benefits according to our abilitie as well vpon our enemis and persecutours, as vpon our friendes and them that do good vnto vs. Wherof Christ also hath admonished vs Matth. 5: Loue your enemies, that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heauen, who maketh his sunne to shine vppon the good & euill, & sendeth raine on the iust & vniust. For if ye loue them which loue you, what revward shal ye haue? vven as euuen the heathen & Publicans doe the same. Nowe the Apostle doth not onely expressely condemne vs for euill works, but sayth: Not by the vworks of righteousnes, or, which vve haue done in righ-teousnes. Where he also reiecgetteth those workes, which we counted righteous, and were thought both of vs & others to haue bin done in righteousnes, whē as they were so farre from being righteous, that they made vs more vnworthy of the grace of God, and more vnfitt to receiue it, for they are deceitfull worfkes, whereunto we adde this sinne, that we thinke them righteous, and trust in them, whereby God is prouoked to anger more then can be said, euen as our enemies are wont to moue vs to anger, when as they will auouch those thinges to be iust, wherein they sinne and doe vnjustly. But euen as God, when we being vnwise, by errour moued him to anger, counting our sinnes worfkes of righteousnes, did not therefore reject vs, but of his mercie deliuered vs from this errour and sinnes: so we neglecting the foolishnes and dotage of our aduersaries, whereby they contend that sinnes are to be counted for righteousness, ought neuertheles of meere loue, hauing no respect of euill or good deserts, to be beneficall vnto them, and endeuour to doe them good in all thinges, looking for frute of our benefits not of thē, but of God alone. Let these things suffize to haue bene spoken for a compendious and generall exposition of this text.

Nowe let vs also briesly wey the wordes, wherein he setteth forth and commendeth the grace of God. First he so greatly extolleth it, that in respect of it he condemneth all our good worfkes and righteousness: neither doth he condigne a small thing, when he condemneth our righteousness or righteous worfkes, the most excellent thinge that man can haue in earth. For if all men with all their might shoulde labour and endeuour to attayne to most exact prudencie, wisdome, and libertie of minde and will, which we reade that some Philosophers and Princes haue done, as Socrates, Traianus, and many other, whose fame the whole world hath long since spred abroade both by wordes and writinges: ne-uertheles all such wisdome, and all suche vertues are nothinge but sinnes before God, soasmuch as they be not done in and by the grace of God. Doers of such vertues are ignoraunt of God, and therefore they can not honour him by their studies and en-deuours, they thinke they haue all thinkes of them selues, when as no man can haue any good thinge at all, but of this grace alone, which the Gospell preacheth. So Paule glorieth, that he, before he knewe Christ, liued a blamelesse life, and was more zealous towarde the lawe then those of his age, that he also thought, that he did a thing acceptable to God by persecuting the Christians, which condemned that blameles life which he ledde, but afterwarde when he had learned Christ, he sayth,

We ought to be beneficiall to others of meere loue, hauing no respect to good or euill deserts.

The good
worfkes and righteousnes

they are c-steemed of.

that he counteth that righteousness to be but dounge, that he mighte be found not in such righteousness, but in Christ by faith. Philip.
3. The same thing he witnesseth and entreateth of at large in the Epistles to the Galatians and Colossians. Here therefore is condemned all boasting of free will, mans strength, righteousnes, and good workes, and it is concluded, that they are all nothing but sinnes, and certaine destruction, although they haue a fayre shew: that we are saued by the onely grace of God, as many of vs as beleue, and call for it, wch acknowledging of our owne vanitie and perdition.

Now we must accustome our selues to the Scripture, which tow sortes maketh mention of two sorte of rigteousnes, one humane, which of righteous-Paul here and in many other places hath mentioned, the other nes. divine, euē that grace of saluation, which iustifieth vs by faith, Divine righ-teousnes whereof he speaketh in the ende of this text: That being iustified by grace, we should be heires of eternall life. Here thou seest whereby we plainly that the grace of God is our true righteousness, whereby are iustified. we are iustified, which is therfore called y righteousness of God, for that it is giuen vnto vs of God, and is made ours, when we are made partakers thereof by faith. Of this he speaketh also Rom. I: In the Gospell is revealed the righteousness of God from faith to faith, as it is written: The iust shall liue by faith.
And Gen. 15: Abraham beleued, and it was counted to him for righteousness. Whereupon the Scripture concludeth, that no man is counted righteous before God, but he that beleueth, as the Apostle testifieth, where he reciteh that saying of Aba-cuc: The iust shal liue by faith. So it appeareth that faith, grace, mercye, truth, righteousness, that all these are that same which God worketh in vs by Christ and the Gospell. Whereupon it is said Psal. 25: All the wayes of the Lord are mercie and truth.
For those are the wayes of the Lord in which we obseruing his commaundements, do walke, and he againe in vs, now those wayes must be directed by his mercie and truth alone, not by our strength and industrie, soasmuch as our wayes being ordered hereby, are nothing but vanitie before God, and do deserue his wrath. According to that which the Lord sayth Esai 55: As farre as the heauen is higher then the earth, so farre do my waies exceede yours. As if he shold say: Your righteousness is earthly and of no value, wherefore ye must bid it farewell and walke in myne , sy ye hope for saluation.

But according to his mercie he saued vs . It is maruell how the credit of these wordes can stand , wherein the Apostle affirmeth that we are alreadie saued , although living yet in earth , and therefore in continuall miserie . But he did so speake , that he might more fully expresse the power of the diuine grace , and the nature of faith against hypocrites , who as though saluacio were yet farre off , do in vaine endeouour to get and obtaine it by their workes . For Christ hath already saued vs : he hath perfourmed all things which are required hereunto , that we may be saued : he hath ouercome and subdued synne , death , hell , &c . so that he hath left nothing , for any man to care for , he hath also giuen all these things unto vs in Baptisme , that who soever beleueith in Christ , that he hath perfourmed them , hath them togither in the same moment , so that he hath neede of nothing more unto saluation , but faith alone , that he may firmly beleue that these things are so perfourmed . But marke how incomparable riches of his grace God hath poured vpon vs in Baptisme , who hath deliuered vs euен from those workes , whereby those foolish holy ones go about to merit heauen , and to be saued . For we must haue heauen , and be saued before we can do any good workes , for that workes can not merit heauen , but heauen being before giuen of meere grace , causeth vs to do good workes , and that for no hope of merit or reward , but onely to the commoditie of our neighbours , and the glorie of God , vntill this bodie also be deliuered from sinne and death .

Wherefore all the life of a Christian after Baptisme is nothings , but an expectation of saluation and felicity to be revealed , which they that beleue in Christ do now possesse , al- though hidden . They haue all thinges nowe certainly , but they are yet hid in faith , which when as it is chaunged , knowl- edge being reuealed , all thinges as they now haue them , shall ap- peare , which shall come to passe , when pleasaunt and wished death commeth , according to that saying of John : Dearely be- loued , now are we the sonnes of God , and yet it doth not ap- peare what we shall be : But we know that when he shall ap- peare , we shalbe like him . And euerie man that hath this hope in him , purgeth himselfe , euен as he is pure . Wherefore suffer not thy selfe to be deceipted , and to be seduced from this truth by those those hypocrites, which contemning faith do falsely affirme that saluation is farre from thee, and teach thee to endeour in vaine to attaine vnto it by thy w^tkes. It is in thy selfe, if thou beleue that all things are perfourmed by Christ, euen as he himselfe witnesseith: The kingdome of God is within you, Luke 17. So that all our life after Baptisme ought to be nothing els but an expectation, that that should be reuealed which is already in vs, and that we may comprehend, as we are comprehended, as Paul sayth Philip. 3. I follow, if that I may comprehend that, for whose sake also I am comprehended of Christ, that is, that I may at length see those things which are giuen me, being as yet in the shut closet of faith. He coueteth, and burneth with desire to see the treasure which by faith he receiued both giuen and sealed in Baptisme. Whereupon he addeth in the same place: Our conuersation is in heauen, from whence also we looke for our Sauior Iesus Christ, who shall chaunge our vile bodie, that it may be fashioned like vnto his glorious b^dy. Herewich also agreeth that which he saith Gal. 4: Ye know God, and by and by he doth as it were correct that which he had sayd, Yea, sayth he, rather are ye knownen, both which are true, although not after the like sort: We are now knownen of God, so that he comprehendeth vs, and we in dede know God, but we do not yet comprehend, for that our knowledge is as yet hidden and closed vp in sayth. He sayth moreover Rom. 8: We are saued by hope, that is, we are saued, although we yet see it not, for that which one seeth, he hopeth not for, but if we hope for those thinges which we see not, we do with patience abide for them. Christ confirmeth this Luke 12: Let your loines be gird about, and your lights burning, and ye your selues like vnto men that wait for their maister, wher he will retayne from the wedding, that when he commeth, and knocketh, they may open vnto him imme-diatly. In which words he onely biddeith them that be his to be ready to looke for him the bridegrome, as which are already saued being admitted into the number of his ministers. Hereunto also pertaineth that which the Apostle sayth Tit. 2: Let vs liue soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and appearing of the glorie of that mighty God, and of our Sauior Iesus Christ. In these and such like places whereof thou maist reade many here and there in the holy Scriptures; he witnesseth that we are already saued, and that it doth not behoue, that a Christian man shoulde first seeke to attaine to saluation by his workes. This opinion and deuelish doctrine blyndeth the eyes of Christians, extinguisheth the knowledge of faith, and carieth men from the waye of truth and saluation. We must cleave unto that which the Apostle here saith: He hath saued vs according to his mercie, and that which he addeth in the ende of this text, that we are heires according to the hope of eternall life. We are now heires, but that is hidden in fayth, but we looke with a certaine hope, that hereafter it shalbe

Why God will haue vs to looke for this inheritance, and to liue a certaine time after Baptisme, that he may chastise our body by our ministry, and declare the power of our inheritance of his grace in fight against the flesh, the world and the deuil, but taunce a certaine time.

especially for this cause, that by vs he may helpe our neighbours, and both by doctrine, and also by our life whiche he liveth in vs, may bring them to the communion of fayth. And albeit he can do this by Angels, yet it please him rather that it shoulde be done by vs men, that both the maner of fayth may be the better knownen, and that all things may be done sweetely and louingly. For if Angels shoulde alwayes haue to do with vs, there shoulde not be so much fayth, neither shoulde it be so pleasant, as when we are taught and guided by them that are partakers of our nature, whom we do better know, and with whom we do moze familiarly associat our selues. And so, that there may be some, by whom other also may be conuerted both by doctrine, and good examples, it is not meete that we shoulde by and by after Baptisme be taken into heauen, wherein notwithstanding we are already admitted citizens.

A practice of Satan & Antichrist to delude me with Purgatory. Hereupon if one weye all things rightly, it can not be doubted, that it is a practize and miracle of Satan and Antichrist, that so much is spent for Purgatories sake, such faith as this being put quite out of mens myndes. For men are taught by their workes to sauue themselves from Purgatorie, or at the least to deliuere themselves out from thence, as though saluation were not yet giuen vs, and it were necessarie to come unto it by other meanes then by faith alone; which howe it disagreeth with the Scripture and a Christian life, there is no man that doth not see; but he that seeth nothing in the Scripture. For thus the holy holie Scriptures do teach euerie where, that who soever doth not receiue saluation by meere grace, through sayth before all workes, he shall never be partaker thereof. And that who soever referre their good workes, not to the profite of their neighbours, but to their owne commoditie, being moze carefull of their owne saluation then of their neighbours, haue no good workes at all.

All the workes of these are voide of sayth, and infected with pernicious errorre. It had bin greatly to be wished that Purgatorie had never bin inuented, and never mention made thereof in the pulpit, for it hath bin cause of such hinderance to Christian veri-tie and syncere truth, as can not be recovered. For we see it now brought to passe by the meanes of Satan, that almost al prayers are directed to onely Purgatorie, with this ungodly and pestilent opinion, whereby miserable men thinke that they shalbe redeemed from thence, and obtaine saluation by the workes of men.
Whereby the riches of Baptisme and sayth are had in no reputacio, and they at the last of Christians become Heathen. O most pernicious abomination. Christians should be taught as Christ and Paul teach them, that after Baptisme and absolution from ynnes they should so liue, that they should be ready every houre to receive death, with desire looking for the revelation of saluation already receiued. Now by the opinion of Purgatorie they are made secure and slothfull, so that they differre the study of godlines euен to their death, and thinke by contrition and confession they shall amend all things, as though there were some ynnes remaining for which they must go into Purgatorie, they iope that by Masses for the departed, and other bequests that they are persuaded to make in their testamēts or last willes, they halbe redeemed out of purgatorie, but these miserable men are in these things bitterly deceived, and shall at length trie them to be farre otherwise.

By the washing of the new birth. He setteth forth the grace of God giuen to vs in Baptisme, with wordes verie full of praise and commendation. He calleth Baptisme a washing, whereby not the feete and handes, but the whole man is at once washed, purified and sauēd, so that to the summe and inheritance of sal-uation there is neede of nothing but onely sayth in this grace of God, that it may remaine and be acknowledged the worke of grace alone, that we are sauēd without all our workes and me-rites, and so also there may remaine in vs pure loue, praise, giuing of thankes, and glorie of the diuine mercie, without all glorie and pleasing of our selues in our owne strength and endeouour, as it hath bin already sayd often and at large. Humane righteousnes is also a washing, but not where by the whole man is so washed, but that Pharisaitall washing, whereby onely the apparell and vessells which are outward, are made cleane, whereof it is spoken Matth. 23. Whereby it commeth to passe that men see me unto themselues pure, but inwardly neuertheles they remaine ful of filthines. Therefore he called Baptisme not a corporall or outward washing, but the washing of regeneration or new birth, by which not those thinges that are outward, are washed, and onely the outward man made cleane, but the whole nature of man is altered and changed into an other nature, that is, the carnall natiuitie is thereby destroyed, with all the inheritaunce of synnes Saluation cō- meth not by is giuen vs at once, so that it is not to be gotten by workes. For not one or two members are wont to be borne, as the handes or feete, but the whole man, which can not worke this that he may be borne a man, but is first borne that he may worke: Likewise our workes do not purifie or saue vs, but when as before we are pure, iustified, and sauied, we worke freely those things, which may be profit to our neighbour, and honour to God. And this is the simple and pure knowledge of the diuine grace, whereby a man learneth to know both God and himselfe: to praise God alone, to humble and cast downe himselfe: to trust in God, to despeire of himselfe. This doctrine of saluation they maruelously hinder, which vrgē men with lawes, precepts, and workes, and teach them to seeke thereby to be sauied.

He that is truely baptizē is become a new creature.

And the renewing. That this washing and new birth may be more fully understood, he hath added, the renewing, that thou maiest understand, that he that is truly baptized, is become a new man, and a new creature, ensued with a new disposition, which now is farre otherwise affected, loueth, liueth, speaketh and doth farre otherwise, then he was wont or could before. So the Apostle sayth, Gal. 6: In Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor vncircumcision, that is, no workes of the Lawe are of any value or importaunce, but a new creature. As if he should say: Saluatiō can not be perfected by ioyning togither certaine good workes.

workes, but the whole man must be at once renwed, and his nature chaunged, whereupon true good workes will follow of themselves, not by peecemeale, but togither with great plentie. Of this new birth, whereby the whole man is renewed, Christ speakeþ Ioh. 3 : He that is not borne againe, can not see the kingdome of God. Here againe it manifestly appeareth, that nothing is here done by our workes, but that it behoueth, that man, how great soever he be, must die, and be chaunged into an other, which is done in Baptisme, if we beleue. The condemned also halbe borne againe in the last day, but they shal not be renewed, they shall remaine uncleane, as they were here, and as they were borne of Adam. Therefore that he might speake righly of Baptisme, he calleth it the washing of the new birth, whereby they that are borne againe are also renewed. Of this new birth many things are to be found here and there in the Scripture, because of which also God calleth his word and Gospell a wombe and matrix, as Esai 46 : Harken all ye that remaine of the house of Israell, whom I haue borne in my wombe, as mothers are wont to speake of their children. He therefore that beleueþ the Gospell, is as it were conceiued in the wombe of God, & from thence borne a new man, and like unto God : Whereof we will in another place speake more. Now it shalbe sufficient, to haue learned by these words, how our workes are nothing in fulfilling the comauendments of God, and that it is a mad thinge to attribute here never so litle to our owne strength, seeing that it is sayth alone, whereby man is at once borne againe, & renewed. Wherefore understand this, that good workes must folow a new creature, but to attaine unto righedousnes, & that new creature they are able to helpe nothing at all.

No otherwise is the grace of God wont to renew man, then as if God shoud turne some drye and withered blocke into a new, greene, and florishing tree, which may afterward bringe forth frute plentifully. For the grace of God is a great, strong, verie mighty, and meruelous effectual thing, it lyeth not in the minde, as the Schoolemen dreameð : it sleepeth not, or is borne, as a painted table beareth a picture : it selfe beareth, guideth, vrgeth, draweth, chaungeth, and worketh all thinges in men, so, that euerie one may feele and haue experiance of it. It selfe indeede is hyd, but the workes of it can not be hyd, but do witness of it, as the leaues and frutes do of the tree, of what nature it is. Wherefore the Scholemen Thomas and Scotus do vngodlily detract from it, who attribute no more vnto it, then that it doth adorne the workes of nature, and is a helpe that they be brought to perfection. For it doth not adorne or helpe onely, but it alone worketh those thinges that be good, neither doth it worke them onely, but doth rather chaunge and renew the person. For it exibith the washing of the new birth, and of renewing, not of workes onely, but much rather of the whole man. He that shall preach these things of grace, shall truly and fully commend it. Which Paul endeououred to do when he said: He hath saued vs by the washing of the new birth, and renewing of the holy Ghost. Nothing can be done here by ioyning of workes togither, the nature must needes be chaunged, whereupon it cometh to passe, that they that truely beleue must suffer many thinges: for grace worketh in them, & declareth it selfe present. Hereunto pertaineth that saying of the 111. Psal. The workes of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that haue pleasure therein. What are these workes? We are they, by grace in Baptisme made the great, new, and regenerate workes of God. Is it not a great thinge for a man byandby to be saued, and deliuered from synnes, death, and hell? therfore he sayth: sought out of all them that haue pleasure therein. For by this new birth God hath found out, and done what soever men can desire. For what els do men couet and desire, but to obtaine saluation, to be deliuered from synne, death, and hell?

Of the holy Ghost. Lastly, that he may the moze expresse the greatness and vertue of grace, he attributeth this washing of the new birth, and renewing, to the holy Ghost. For this washing is so great, and of so weightie importaunce, that no creature but the holy Ghost alone is able to perfourme it. But how much, most excellent Paul, doest thou condemne free will, the great good workes of the proud holy ones, that is, the merits of hypocrites? In how hie a place doest thou set our saluation, and again, how doest thou bring it downe to vs, and placest it neere vs, yea euен within vs? how purely & sincerenly doest thou set forth grace in these wordes? Wherfore worke what soever and how much soever thou wilt, it is vnpossible for a man to be renewed, and the person chaunged (without which no workes acceptable to God can can be done) but by the washing of the newe birth, and the renewing of the holy Ghost. That we may plainly see in those hypocriticall counterfaictours of workes. For thou shalt fynde none harder, none prouder, none so rash and hastiz spirits. For they are broken, and not renewed, indurate, obstinate, confirmed by continuance, couering in deede and some what adozing that old Adam by thole their counterfaite good workes, but in the meane season thre doth not any whit appeare any chaunge of nature in them, they continue still in the oldnes of their corrupt flesh. O, what a pestilent people is this, and in how great indignation of God are they, when as in the meane tyme they thinke that they sit in Gods lappe?

Nowe whereas the Apostle attributeth this washing of the newe birth, and renewing to the holy Ghost, he sayth the same which Christ doth John 3, where he sayth: Except a man be borne againe of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdome of God. Washing of the new birth and renewing attributed to the holy Ghost.

For that which Christ signified by water, the Apostle calleth the washing, so both made mention of newe birth and of the holy Ghost. And we must marke that that which is spoken here of the holy Ghost both by Christ, and the Apostle, must not be referred to that Papisticall confirmation, as they call it, for both of them referred to Baptisme that which is here mentioned concerning the holy Ghost, who when the body is washed with water, doth himselfe worke the newe birth, and renewing by faith, which Christ called, to be borne againe of the spirit. We read in the Actes of the Apostles, that the Apostles did escoones lay their handes on them that were baptised, and that so the holy Ghost came vpon them by a visible signe, which the Papistes also snatch to their confirmation. But as that was done, that the beleeuers might by a visible signe be endued with the holy Ghost, to preach the Gospell in diuers languages, so it continued onely the time thereof, vntill the doctrine of the Gospell was commended to the worlde by sufficient signes, wherefore it is nowe long since worne out of use: but that a certaine ceremonie hath come from thence euuen vnto vs, of laying handes on them, which are ordained Ministers or Preachers, which is nowe brought into an ungodly and pernicious use: but of these thinges in an other place.

which he shed on vs abundantly. See how notably the Apostle setteth forth grace. He sayth not that the holy Ghost was giuen, but shed, and not that onely, but shed abundantly. For he can not sufficiently extoll and magnifie grace, and the worke thereof, and we, alas, count it so vile in respect of our

The workes of the diuine grace sufficiēt for our saluation without any addition of our owne works. It were a dishonour to God and to his holy Spirit, if when he hath plentifullly shed it vpon vs, there shoulde as yet be some thing wanting, necessarie to righteousnes and saluation, which we are able to perfourme, as though the workes of so incomparable grace could not be sufficient. And Paul surely might be reproued of lying, which had not spoken all thinges whereby we must be iustified and saued, when he affirmeth that he doth it. But as he writteþ, so it is: no man can attribute so great thinges to this washing and regeneration, no man can so much presume of them, but greater thinges may be attributed unto them, and thou oughtest to promise to thy selfe more thinges of them: no man shall beleue so great thinges, but he shall receive greater. Forasmuch as those good thinges which God hath giuen, are so great and so unspeakable, he would haue them here come vnto vs being included and hyd in his words and sayth, For the nature of our present life can not beare them being manifest; and therefore it must perish, when they beginne to be reuealed, that man maye by these inestimable riches, which he nowe possesseþ by sayth, be as it were swallowed vp, and vanish awaye. We are already abundantly iustified by sayth, without all our owne merit, therefore Christ sayth, Joh. 3: God so loued the world, that he hath giuen his only begotten Sonne, that who soever beleeueth in him, should not perish, but haue euerlasting life. Behold, they that beleue, haue already euerlasting life, and therefore undoubtedly are iustified and holy without all their owne labour or meanes: that thou maiest see, that nothing but grace and mercie is plentifullly powred vpon vs, and that our workes could availe nothing hereunto.

An obiectiō. Thou wilt perhaps say: Thou canst not preach sufficiently, that the grace and mercie of God doth worke all things in vs, and that no respect is to be had of our workes, to the attaining of saluation, but how commeth it to passe then, that the Scripture so oftē witnesseth that they shalbe saued which haue wrought good good workes? As John. 5: They shall come forth, that haue done good, vnto the resurrection of life, but they that haue done euell vnto the resurrection of condemnation. And Rom. 2: Honour and glorie to them that do well, wrath and indignation to them that do ill. We read many sentences here and there in the Scripture like vnto these. I answere: As the wordes The answere. sound, so take them without all glosse, for it is euens so, they that do well shalbe saued, they which do otherwise, shalbe condemned. But herein many erre from the truth of the Scripture, in that they iudge workes according the outward appearance, contrarie to the Scripture, which teacheth that no man can do good, whoe is not himselfe good before, and by workes no man can become good, but workes take their goodness of the worker, and he becommeth good by the washing of the new birth, and by nothing els. This Christ meant Matth. 7. sayng: A corrupt tree can not bring forth good frute, neither a good tree euell frute. Wherefore make the tree either good or euell, and it will bring forth like frutes. Hypocrites oftentimes do workes like to the workes of the Godly, yea sometime hauing a goodlier shewe, for they diligently praye, fast, giue almes, and pretend a meruelous holines, but Christ calleth these sheepeis cloathing, wherewith most hurtfull wolues are clothed and hidden. For none of them is of a true humble, meeke, and bountifull heart, which they chiesely declare when they are rebuked, when their holines is reproued: for then bring they forth their naturall frutes, whereby they are knownen. Those are, rash judgementes, impatiencie, stubburnnes, obstinacie, sclaunding, and such like. It is true therefore, he that doth well, shalbe saued, that is, his saluation shalbe manifest, but he can doe no good at all, if he be not before regenerate by the washing of the newe birth. For what good workes can one worke in the oldenes of the fleshe, and by the strength proceeded from Adam, they are the good workes which Paule here condemneth, saying: Not by the workes of righteousness which we had done. They are indeede good workes done in righteousness, but not before God, who first hath respect to the person, & then to the workes, as we read Gen. 4. that he had respect first to Abel, then to his sacrifice, as he first turneth himselfe from Cain, and then from his sacrifice, although according to the outward appear- Works must not be iudged good according to the outward appearance.

raunce it was as good a sacrifice and worke, as the sacrifice of Abel.

Through Jesus Christ our Sauiour. This he added that he may keepe vs vnder the winges of Christ, as chickens are wont to be preserued vnder the winges of the hen: for thus Christ sayth Matth. 23: Ierusalem, Ierusalem, how often would I haue gathered thy children togither, as the hen gathereth her chickens vnder her winges, and ye would not? And hereby the nature of a true and right faith is taught. For it is nothing which some say: I beleue in God almighty, as the Jewes and many other are wont, and do therefore receiue corporall benefites of God.

What a true & lively faith is it is a true and lively faith, whereby thou beleueest in God, & lively faith howbeit by Jesus Christ. First that thou dout not that God is beleueeth.

become a merciful father vnto thee, which hath pardoned all thy sinnes, & in Baptisme hath adopted thee for his sounē and heire, that thou maiest certainly know that thou art sauēd. Againe, thou must also knowe this, that that was not done freely, neither without satisfaction made to the diuine justice. For there can be no place in thee for the diuine grace and mercy to worke saluation, and to giue thee eternall good thinges, unlesse the iustice of God be before most fully satisfied. For Christ witnesseth Matth. 5: One iote, or one tittle of the Lawe shall not scape, till all thinges be fulfilled. That which is spoken of the grace and goodnes of God, can not come but to them which do most purely and exactly obserue his commaundements, according to that saying Mich. 2: When as the Jewes did presume of the goodnes of God toward them, and did alwayes promise vnto them selues peace, saying: How can God be alwayes angrie, is the spirit of the Lord shortened? It is aunswereed them: Are not my wordes good vnto him that walketh uprightly? Wherefore it shalbe lawfull for none to attaine vnto the abundance of grace, unles he hath before most exactly satisfied the commaundements of God.

Though we couldē and should fulfill before God, whereby we can not fulfill so much as the least commaundement of God, how much lesse shall we be able so to satisfie the iustice of God, that we may become worshipe of his grace? Moreouer, if we were able to fulfill all the commaundements of God, and in all thinges to satisfie his iustice, notwithstanding we had not as yet deserued grace and saluation, neither would he therefore owe it vnto vs, for that he may by the right of creation require as due seruice, all those things of vs his creatures, created to liue vnto him. Wherefore it shoule yet come of grace and mercie, what soever should come from him to vs.

This Christ declared verie well Luke 17. speaking in a paralle: VVhich of you hauing a seruaunt plowing or feeding cat-ell, would saye vnto him byandby, when he were come from he field: Go, and sit downe at the table? and would not rather say to him, dresse wherewith I may suppe, and girde thy elfe, and serue me, till I haue eaten and dronken, and afterward eat thou and drinke thou? Doeth he thanke that seruaunt, because he did that which was commaunded vnto him? I trowe not. So likewise ye, when ye haue done all those things which are commaunded you, say, VVe are vnprofitable seruaunts: we haue done that which was our dutie to do.

Seing then that heauen is giuen of grace, and for no merit, vne vnto thole, if there were any such, which haue done all things hat were commaunded them, according to that promise: If thou vilt enter into life, keepe the commaundements: what shall we boast of our good woxkes, which although they were most ab-olute, yet shoule they be vnworthe of heauen, but inasmuch as it s giuen vs by the free and mercifull promise? Hereupon (for hat we must so satisfie the diuine justice, and yet notwithstanding our woxkes are not able to attaine thereunto, whereunto if they shoule attaine, yet shoule they deserue no grace or saluatiō, or that they are before due) God first gaue vnto vs a man, which hould satisfie the diuine justice for vs in all thinges. Againe, he jath by the same man bestowed this grace and bountisfules vpon vs, that albeit we without our owne merit and worthines, yea hauing euell deserued and being vnworthe, do receiuue grace, yet it comineth not vnto vs altogither freely and without all merit, for we haue it through the merit and satisfaction of Christ.

Whereupon Paul sayth Rom. 5: As by the offence of one sinne came on all men to condemnation: so by the iustifying of one, that is, of Jesus Christ, the benefite abouide toward all men to the iustification of life. That is: As without all our merit, and owne woxke we fell into synne, being borne synners, so againe without all our merit and meanes, we are redeemed from sinnes, by the washing of the spirit borne againe the sonnes of God, partakers of grace and saluation. And this is the cause why the A postle where he speaketh of faith and grace, is wont to adde , b Jesus Christ : whereby surely he woulde giue vs to understand that none shoulde count it sufficient , if he say : I beleue in God Christ being neglected. He that truly beleueueth, must acknowledge, that his faith can not be acceptable to God, yea that it can be no faith at all , if all the commaundements of God be not be soze fulfilled, which seeing it is aboue thy abilitie, (and if it were not , yet notwithstanding thou hadst perfourmed nothing , bu that thou oughtest, and hadst as yet merited nothing, hauing ful filled euuen all the commaundements of God) thou hast neede o an other , which in all thinges may satisfie the diuine iustice for thee, and may also merit heauen for thee. Now this other is our Lord and Sauour Jesus Christ, who hath for thee fulfilled the whole Lawe, and merited for thee , that God now according to his iustice can not but give heauen vnto thee , and in all thinges acknowledge thee for his sonne and heire. And this is a true and sound faith , which trusteth in God by Christ , and is certaine that by his merit it hath already receiuued of God saluation, which shortly after shalbe reuealed with blessed abundance of felicitie.

Neither can any other be called Christian faith , but that, whereby it is beleueued , that by Christ do come vnto vs both satisfaction , which we owe to the iustice of God , and the gift of saluation, which we our selues by no meanes, if the Lawe could euuen be fulfilled of vs , can merit .. Whereupon Paul Rom. 4. sayth : Christ was deliuerner to death for our synnes ; and rose things neces- againe for our iustification . That is, by Christ we haue necessary to salua- ued, not onely remission of synnes , but moreouer also , that be- tition , not by soze God we are accounted righteous, & the sonnes of his grace, any merit of our owen , but by the merit and meanes of Jesus Christ. To the same effect also tendeth that which he sayth Rom. 3 : VWhom God hath set forth to be a reconciliation through faith in his blood. Where againe we learne, that it is true faith, which trusteth in the blood of Christ, and beleueueth that thereby it shall obtaine grace .. Whereas thou beleueuest that he hath shed his blood for thee, thou receiuest satisfaction : in that thou acknowledgest him the reconciliation , thou confessest that by his merit the diuine grace and saluation do come vnto thee . We haue all things without our owne merit and meanes, but not without the merit ierit and meanes of Christ, who hath for this cause shed his blood. Wherefore that we may allude vnto þ parable of Christ, we must containe our selues vnder his winges, and not vpon trust in our selues flie out, and contend to come vnto God, otherwise we shalbe a praye to the hellish kite. For as it hath bin oftē ayd, our righteousnes, our merits, yea and our faith shall preuaile nothing, without this our mediatour Christ. And therefore ye sayth Joh. 14: No man cometh vnto the Father, but by me. And in the whole Gospell what other thing doth he, but endeavour to take vs out of our selues, and to transserre vs to himselfe vnder his winges, that we may trust onely in his satisfaction and merit? The same the Apostle also teacheth in the wordes following.

That we being iustified by his grace, should be made heires according to the hope of eternall life. He sayth that we are iustified, not by our owne workes, but by the grace of the same Jesus fed by the Christ. That is, we are therefore iustified, for that Christ hath grace of the Father, hauing fulfilled his will in all thinges, and thereby merited eternall life. For seeing that he hath no neede of this merit, he giueþ it vnto vs which beleue in him, that before God all his thinges may be imputed to vs, and by them we may receiue saluation. See, how rich a thing sound faith is, and how great good things it bringeth with it. See also how precious a thing the Gospell is, and how great a treasure it is to haue it purely preached: and contrariwise, how great a discommoditie there is, where it is not preached, or not rightly preached, the inuentions of men being mingled with it, or thrust in stede of it. Take heede therefore of such deceiuers, and of their counterfet fauþ, rest not in thy selfe, but get thee vnder þ winges of Christ, keepe thy selfe vnder his protection, trust that thou art heire of eternall life, not by thy owne righteousnes, or grace which thou hast received, but whereby he is righteous and acceptable before God. Hereunto pertaineth this saying Psal. 91. He will couer thee vnder his winges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his fethers. And in the Songe of Salomon it is said: My spouse is a doue, building her nest in the caues of the rockes, and in the holes of the wall, that is, in the woundes of Christ. And this in deede is a true Christian fauþ, which resteth not in it selfe as the Scholemen dreameð, but reposeth it selfe wholy in Christ, and as it trusteth in him, so it resteth in him, hauing received eternall saluation. Whereas he saith that we are made heires of eternall life according to hope, beside that he proueth, that we without all our owne merits, by onely hope of grace are borne againe heires of eternall life, and do not become heires by working, whereof we haue already spoken at large, he also teacheth this, that our saluation and eternall life is as yet hid, although, if we beleue, we do verely possesse it, and this body being put of, and the kingdome of Christ reuealed, all thinges shall appere manifestly.

The weapons of this text.

Our owne
and good workes are of no power to saue vs.

This text fighthe most mightily, and with most plaine wordes against all righteousness and good workes of mans reason and free will. For the wordes are plaine. Not by the workes of righteousness, which we had done, but according to his mercie he saueth vs, by the washing, &c. All which wordes do utterly ouerthrow our righteousness, attributing all things to þ washing of the newe birth, and the renewing of the holy Ghost, to Christ and his grace. How can there notwithstanding any presumption as yet remaine in vs? Wherefore let all sacred and prophane lawes haue a fayre shew: let all sacrificing priests, monkes, and nunnes boast of themselues: let all religious and honest men and women seeme goodly in outward appearance: let them euener rayse the dead: if faith in Christ be absent, whereof we haue now spoken so much, all these things are to no purpose. These most false shewes do as yet deceiue the whole world, and seduce almost every one. They make the Gospell obscure, and extinguish the faith of Christ: All their workes and orders, although they appear goodly, and they thinke them to haue merited neuer so much, do auiale no more vnto saluation, then the workes of beasties, or of artificers, whereby they do maintaine themselues and theirs, yea they do most hurtfully hinder it. Therefore that I may conclude, take heede as much as thou art able, of these wolues, which vnder a faire pretence counterfet themselues sheepe, and learne and accustome thy selfe with a sound faith to cleave vnto Christ alone.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Bysasmuch as there is often mention made in the new Testament of these wordes, the kingdom of heauē, the kingdom of God, þ kingdom of Christ, and it is very profitable and expedient for a Christian to know these, to wit, that they are nothing els, but remission of sinnes, and grace preached and offered by the Gospell. For in this kingdom thou shalt finde nothing but grace and goodnes, pardon and forgiuenes of sinnes, loue and gentlenes: I therefore thinke it good to entreate somewhat at large of the state of this kingdom, and of forgiuenes of sinnes. The kingdom of God, whereby he reigneth ouer all the faithfull, and as a faithfull king defendeth, punisheth, rewardeth, guideth, and directeth them, &c. they againe from their hart trust in him, suffer his faterly chastisement and correction with a patient mind, and alwayes serue him through obedience, is not worldy or temporall, but spiritual. Neither consisteth it in meate and drinke, or in any outward thing, but onely in iustification, quieting and consolation of the hart and conscience of man. Wherfore it is nothing els, but forgiuenes and taking away of sinnes, by which consciences are defiled, troubled, and disquieted. For euē as a worldy and temporall kingdom is ordayned to this ende, that men may liue quietly & peaceably one with an other: So the kingdom of God giueth these thinges spiritually, and destroyeth the kingdom of sinne, and is nothing else, but an abolishing and pardoning of offences. God reigneth in the hartes, inasmuch as he worketh in them by his word, peace quietnes and consolation: euē as sinne worketh the contrary, namely, vnquietnes, anguish, and all kinde of euills. Herein God sheweth his maiestie and grace in this life, that he taketh away and pardoneh mens sinnes: and this is the kingdome of grace. Nowe when as sinne with his gard, that is Satan, death, and hell, shall trouble man no more, then at the last the kingdom of glory, and absolute felicitie shall be.

The kingdō
of God is gouerned, not by the law, but by the Gospell.

Hereupon it followeth: first, that the kingdom of God is rule or gouerned by no law, no not by the law of God, much lesse by the lawes of men, but onely by the Gospell, and faith in God, by which harts are purifited, comforted, and quieted, whiles that the holy Ghost poureth loue and the knowledge of God into them, & maketh man as it were one thinge and one spirit with God: so that his affection is set vpon the same thinge, he willeteth and desireteth the same thinge, he seeketh and louereth the same thinge, that God doth. Neither standeth the case otherwise here, then it doth betweene two frendes, which beare good wil one to an other, and agree one with an other in all thinges. Hereof it commeth, that a man in this kingdome of God is perfect, mercifull, pitifull and bountifull toward his neighbour, seeing that he knoweth by the instinct of the holy Ghost, that God is of the same affection toward him, and toward all men, and doth poure forth his goodnes plen-tifullly. Such affection of God no man can know by the lawe, but onely by the spirit, and word of the Gospell. None therefore shal obtaine quietnes, comfort, and peace of the hart, or attaine vnto the kingdom of God by any law. And they which prescribe many lawes, doe withdraw men from the kingdom of God, to the kingdom of sinne, wherein is nothing els, but vnpacnes, anguish, affliction, aduersitie, and all kind of euills tormenting the conscience. Like as on the contrary, in the kingdom and knowledge of God, ther is meere ioy, peace, and consolation of harts.

How Christ
reigneth in the kingdō
of God.

Secondly: In this kingdom of God the Lord Christ reigneth no otherwise, then as a Maister of an Hospitall among the sickle, poore, and diseased. For vnto this kingdome none pertaine, but sinnefull and miserable men, vnto whome their sinnes are forgiuen. Hereupon Christ sayth in the Gospell Luke 6: VVo be to you that are riche, which haue receiued your consolation. But contrariwise, the poore, miserable, and succourles receive comfort and ioy by the Gospel: for Christ came to call sinners onely, and not the righteous, that all glory may be referred to God alone, for that he forgiueth sinnes of his grace and meere mercy.
Such abolishing or putting away of sinne, wherein Christ reigneth as King of the kingdome of God, is done of him after two sortes: first thus, in that he remitteth, pardoneth and couereth sinnes, so that God will not regard, remember or reuenge them although

Christ put-teth away sinne after two sortes.

Although they be in a man. As it is in the 32 Psalme: Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiuen, and whose sinnes are couened. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord wil not impute sinne, n whose spirit there is no guile. And in Esay cap. 43 God sayth: I am, euen I am he, that for myne owne selfs sake do away thine offences, and forget thy sinnes, so that I vwill neuer thinke vpon them. Secondly thus, in that he purgeth or rather scoureth sinnes by diuers crossees and afflictions. For they are two things, to remit sinnes, and to weaken the body of sinne that it may not reigne in vs. If a man beleue, and is baptizid, then all his sinnes are forgiuen him. But afterwarde sinne must be scourched or abated by manifold affliction and mortification, as long as he shall liue. Sinne sticketh in vs, as long as the mortall body remaineth, but for Christes sake it is not imputed in the wrath of God, but freely remitted, and the force thereof diminished by his faterly chastisement. In such chastisement for their amendement, true Christians haue had great comfort, peace, and ioye, as Paule sayth Rom. 5: Then being iustified by faith, vve haue peace toward God, through our Lord Iesus Christ, by vvhō also through faith, vve haue had this accesse into this grace, wherin we stand, and reioyce vnder the hope of the glory of God. Neither that onely, but also vve reioyce in tribulations, knovving that tribulation bringeth forth patience, and patience experience, & experience hope. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the loue of God is shed abroad in our harts by the holy Ghost vvhich is giuen vnto vs. So thou hast two thinges to be considered: The first, that in this kingdom of God we are iustified. The seconde, that by tribulation and affliction we are glorified, without which we can not attaine vnto glory.

True Christians re-joyce in affliction.

Thirdly, good Christians are not knownen by this, when any suffer manifold tribulation & chastisement, that the body of sinne may be weakened, and they brought to amendment. For herein they doe al togither differ amonge them selues, one suffereth this, an other that: one is chastised thus, an other otherwise, so that euen the very Apostles did not loue and suffer alike: But they are knownen in forgiuenes of sinnes, or iustification by faith, wherein God turneth his anger from them, & receiueth them vnto grace, and counteth them for his deare childien, and imputeth no sinne to them vnto condemnation. Herein are all alike, euen as all live vnder one heauen. Wherefore they doe most grossely erre & stumble, which measure Christians by maners, woxkes, and the ouewarde maner of living, euен as the Pharisees were wont to doe, and did therefore finde fault with Christ, for that he did no obserue their ceremonies, but was a frend of publicanes and sinners. As that Pharise sayd within him selfe Luke 7: If this man were a Prophet, he would surely haue knowne who, and vvhac maner of vwoman this is, vvhich toucheth him: for she is a sinner. Hearre nowe an example of those thinges which are before said: A Phisitian which goeth about to cure the sicke, doth first promise him health by the assistance and helpe of God, whereby he putteth him in great hope and comfort. Afterward he beginneth to purge, to clese and strengthen, and such like thinges, which make to the recovering of health: So God also, when he hath remitted sinnes, and receiued man into the bosom of grace, doth lay on him all kind of afflictions, and doth scourge him, and renue him from day to day, in the knowledge and loue of God, vntil he become safe, pure and renued, which then at the last commeth to passe, when this mortall body dyeth.

A similitude

of men abuse the kingdom of grace.

Fourthly in these two partitions of the kingdom of God, two sortes of men are founde, which abuse the same kingdome of the grace of God, and the Gospell. Some become sluggish and slothfull, saying: Well, if sinnes be pardoned freely of meere grace, and be washed away in baptisme, there is no neede that I shoulde adde any thinge of mine owne. Other thinke contrariwise, that they shal put away their sinnes by works, and so trusting to their owne merits, they are prouid and arrogant, and in respect of them selues conteneine other, which doe not so. The first of these conteme Gods grace: the other oppugne it, as not sufficient, and so they represent swyne and dogges. Now all this appeareth by the Gospell, by which Christ reigneth in the kingdom of God. For some abuse it vnto carnall libertie: other contrariwise are perswaded, that it is not sufficient to saluation, but that their woxkes also doe helpe somewhat, and by this they deny and conteneine the grace of God. Hereof thou mayst read more in the Epistle to the Romanes, wherein these two sortes of men are plainly set forth.

Fiftly, this kingdom of God, or remission of sinnes hath no bounde or measure, as that place of the Gospell doth very well shew, where Peter asketh the Lord: Lord, how oft shal my brother

th sinne against me, and I shal forgiue him vnto seuen times? Iesu sayd vnto him, I say not to thee, vnto seuen times, but vnto seenty times seuen times, that is, as often as shall be needfull.

Aer this followeth a parable, which the Lorde there putteth We must fch, wherein he most seuerely admonisheth vs, if we will not fal forgiue our o: of the fauour of God, that we forgiue our neighbour his of- faces without all delay or grudging. Forasmuch as God al- wyes forgiueth vs innumerable sinnes. Our dette, whereby we a: bound vnto God, is ten thousand talents, that is, so vnmeasu- role and great, that we are not able to pay it with all our substance, all our strength and woxkes. For we can put away no one sinne, although it be euuen very little. Seeing therefore that God doth remit so many sinnes of his grace in his kingdome, it is mete, that we should forgiue our neighbour a few offences. Of tis kingdom of God, wherein sinnes are forgiuen, the Scrip- ture euery where maketh mention, and sayth, that the kingdom & dominion of Christ doth extend from one ende of the lande to the other. So sayth Dauid Psal. 72: His dominion shall be from t: one sea to the other, and from the fludde vnto the ende of t: earth. And a little after he sayth: All nations shall serue him. This also the Angell Gabiell declared to the Virgine Marie like I. where he sayth thus of Christ: The Lord shall giue vnto him the throne of his father Dauid, and he shall reigne ouer t: house of Iacob for euer, and of his kingdom shall be no end. These and such like places do shew that the forgiuenes of sinnes, herin the kingdom of God doth especially consist, hath no mea- sure or bound.

Sixtly, hereof we may see, how vnchristianly they doe, which An vncristian thinge forgiuenes of sinnes to a certaine measure, as they doe, stian thinge whiche measure out their indulgences for prescribed yeares, with to prescribe forgiuenes of the third, fourth, or halfe part. For hereby they kinge the kingdom of God into a narrow and straite roome, and are iniurious to his mercy, forasmuch as there is no ende of his kingdom, nor measure of his mercy. But whosoeuer shal in faith ill upon the name of God, shall be saued, as often as he doth it. Moreouer, when the sinner shall be sorry for his sinnes, the Lorde will no more remember them, as it is in the Prophecie of Eze- iel, chap. 18.

Seuenthly, as this kingdome of God hath no measure or mits of forgiuenes of sinnes, so also it hath no ende, but endure continually without ceassing: albeit the subiects of this kin-dom doe not abide in it continually, firmly and faithfully, but often times forsake it. So the fauour and grace of God were continually with Peter, although he denied the Lord, and reuolt from him. To the same effect tendeth the parable in the Gosp whereof we haue now spoken. For the seruaunt, which would haue pitie of his fellow seruaunt, did make him selfe vnwororthy the mercy of God, did deprive him selfe of the kingdom of Ge-which consisteth in pardoning of offences, as it is aboue mentioned. Here Uniuersitie Divines of a pregnant wit, as they seen vnto them selues, and puffed vp with knowledge, haue dispute whether, and how forgiuenes of sinnes doth come againe, wh-man iterateth or renuerth his sinne, not knowing what they sa-But follow thou the plaine and simple wordes of the Gospele, wit, that thy sinnes are so often forgiuen thee, as thou doost forgiue thy brother, whom thou must so often forgiue as he shall send against thee. Wherefore in this parable, whereof I haue uen now made mention, Christ doth admonish vs all, that we pa-don and forgiue all them that haue offended vs. As if he wou-say: As in mans assayres, he which is beneficial to an other, haother also beneficial vnto him againe, so sayth Christ, in þ kin-dom of heauen, which consisteth specially in forgiuenes of sinne that is in Christianity or among Christians, he which pardone an other his offences, I also will pardon him his. And on the contrary, he that is not mercifull toward an other, to him I a-will deny grace. I am ouer you as Lord and King, and ye are low seruaunts and companions one with an other. Seeing therfore that I your Lord doe readily forgiue you, you also ought more readily to forgiue one an other. After the same sort also hath commaunded vs to pray in the Lords prayer, Matth. 6: Forgiue vs our dettes: which he would not haue done, if he did not promise and would not mercifully forgiue vs. But nevertheles-he added a condition or signe to this promise, when he sayth: If forgiue men their trespasses, your heauenly Father will also forgiue you. The first is a signe, þ other a promise. Marke that it here enioyned vs, to forgiue one an other his sinnes and offence so, that we must be mercifull and bountifull towarde our neig-bours, if we will haue the heauenly father gentle and appeal-ward vs. And let vs be most certainly perswaded hereof, when we shall interpret at the best, and excuse, as much as equitie doth suffer, the offences and trespasses of other, although they be euen great and grieuous, that we also shall haue a bountisfull and mer-full facher toward vs in heauen. Wherefore it is a thinge most A most vn-ged.

 syd: I can not, neither will I forgiue him that which he hath committed against me, I wil be reuenged, &c. Surely those blind ie are ignorant, that they doe take from God his glory, to whom one vengeance belongeth, and chalenge it to them selues, and they giue vp to the devill their owne soules, which they haue receiued of God, & ought to render them vnto him againe, where-into they are perhaps prouoked euen with some small or trifling matter. Such kind of men as these ought to sette before the eyes of their hart, these wordes of the Gospele, Matth. 18: O eu-ill seruant, I forgave thee all that dette, because thou prayedst me: oughtest not thou also to haue had pitie on thy fellow servant, euen as I had pitie on thee? So his Lord was wrath, & delered him to the tormentors, til he should pay all that was due him: So likevise shall mine heauenly Father doe vnto you, except ye forgiue from your harts eche one to his brother their trespasses. Neither is it sufficient, if in gestures, signes, mouth or tongue thou shew thy selfe a frend vnto him, and forgiue him, but thou must doe it from thy hart, otherwise God will not forgiue thee, yea thou shalt be driven out of the kingdom of grace. Wher-he is at any tyme we haue tryed the mercy of God towarde vs, we must also readily pardon our felow brethen, which haue offended vs. For in that respect the mercifull Father forgiueth vs our sinnes, that we also shold forgiue our brethen, & shew mer-cifulnes toward them, euen as he is merciful toward vs, and remitteth the fault and the punishment. When we shal do this, then are we received into the kingdom of God. For the goodnes of God liueth in our hartes, and maketh vs also good. Christ sit-th at the right hand of the Father, yet neuertheles he reigneth the hartes and consciences of the faithfull, so that they loue, are, reuerence, and diligently obey him, no otherwise then obeient subiects doe their King, and in all their doinges are made ke to him, euen as he him selfe sayth, Matth. 5: Be ye perfect, as our Father vwhich is in heauen, is perfect. Now God is perfect in this, that he taketh away and pardoneth our wickednes, defect, sinne, and imperfection, that we also may doe the like to ou brythren. But when as we shall not doe the like, we are driven out of his kingdom, & are made subiect to the kingdom of sinne death, and the deuill, as disloyall and disobedient inhabitants of some countrie, are thrust out. Which God of his mercy turn from vs, Amen.

All these thinges may be comprehended in the principall poyntes followyng.

1 Christ reigneth, when by faith of the Gospell, he worketh the goodnes and grace of God in our hartes, and maketh them like vnto God.

2 In such a kingdom the conscience enjoyeth peace, consolacio and rest, when it understandeth and knoweth that God is merciful vnto it, and imputeth not sinnes.

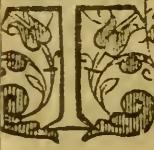

3 Therefore man beareth all kind of tribulation and affliction by which sinne is scourged, and the force thereof abated. He also endeoureth to be beneficall vnto other, as he him selfe hath bene as were ouerwhelmed of the benefits of God.

4 And so the Lord reigneth after two sortes: First, for that he maketh the faithfull certaine of the grace of God, and remission of sinnes. Secondly, for that he layeth the crosse upon them, that the body of sinne may be weakened, and they brought to amendment.

5 He that forgiueneth his detters pertaineth to the kingdom of God, but he that doth not forgiue them, remaineth under the kingdom of sinne.

These thinges I thought good to speake in this present place concerning the kingdom of heauen, the kingdom of God, or the kingdom of Christ, which is the same: to wit, that it is nothin else but a kingdom, in which thou shalt finde nothing but forgiuenes of sinnes. Which kingdom is preached and offered vnto vs by the Gospell, God graunt that we may so receiuie it. Amen.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER OF PRAYER.

Hat prayer may be good indeede, and may also be heard, we must first consider that two thinges are necessarie thereunto: one, that we first meditate vpon the promise of God, and doe as it were aduertize God thereof, and trussting vnto it, be embolded and made cheeresfull to pray; for vntill God had commauned vs to pray, and had promised also that he will heare vs, euuen ll creatures could not obtayne so much as a grayne by their petitions. Whereupon it followeth, that no man doth obtayne any hinge of God for his owne worthines, or the worthines of his prayer, but by the onely goodnes of God, who preuenting all our etitions and desires, prouoketh vs to pray and desire of him, y his gentle and bounteous promise and commaundement, that we may learne howe great care he hath ouer vs, and is ready to iue vs moe thinges, then we durst enterprize to aske, and that we may also learne to pray boldely, inasmuch as he giueth vs all hinges euuen in moe ample maner then we doe aske them. It is We must no

 aue a sure and stronge sayth, that our prayer shall be so heard, s he sayth Matth. 21. and Marke 11: VVhat souer ye shall ske in prayer, ifye beleue, ye shall receyue it. And in Luke hapt. 11: And I say vnto you, Aske, and it shall be giuen you: ceke, and ye shall finde: knocke, and it shall be opened vnto ou. For euery one that asketh, receiueth: and he that seeketh, indeth: and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a sonne hall aske bread of any of you that is a father, will ye giue him a tone? or if he aske a fish, will ye for a fish, giue him a serpent? or if he aske an egge, will ye giue him a scorpion? If ye then which are euill, can giue good giftes vnto your children, how much more shall your heauenly Father give the holy Ghost them that desire him? We must boldly trust to these, and such like promises and commaundements, and pray with true confidence.

He that douth of the promises of God in prayer, committeth a double sinne.

If one so prayeth, that he dout whether God heare him, an maketh his prayer onely at aduenture, caring not greatly whether it be hearde or not hearde: he committeth a double offence. One, for that he him selfe maketh his praier frustrate, and laboureth in vaine. For so James sayth chap. i: He that vwill aske the Lord, let him aske in faith, and vauer not: for he that vva uereth, is like a vvaue of the sea, tost of the vvinde, and caried a vvay, let not that man thinke that he shall receiuue any thinge of the Lord. Such a mans hart is not quiet & settled, wherefore God can giue him nothing. But faith maketh the hart quiet, and capable of the gifts of God. The other offence is, that he countreth the most faithfull and true God, as a lying, vaine, and unconstan man, as he which neither is able, neither will fulfill his promises so by his douting he robbeth God of his honour, & name of faith fulnes, and truth. Whereby it is so grieuously offended, that even that offence being committed, a Christian is plainly chaunged into an Heathen, and denieth and loseth his true God, so that if he continue therein, he is damned for euer without all comfort. And if any thing be giuen unto him, which he as keth, it is giuen him not to good, but to euill, as well temporall as eternall, no for his prayers sake, but from the wrath of God, that he may recompense those goodly wordes, which are vttered in sinnes, vbeleefe, and to the dishonour of God.

We must not therefore dout in our prayers for that we be vnworthy.

Some say: I would trust in deeede that my prayers should be heard, if I were worthy, or if I could pray well. Then, say I, thou wilst not pray, before thou shalt knowe and finde thy selfe fit to pray, that thou shalt never pray. For as it is before sayde, our prayer must not rest vpon our worthines, or the worthines of i fselfe, or be grounded thereon, but vpon the imminutable truth of the promise of God. If so be that it trust to it selfe or any other thing and ground it selfe thereon, it is false, and deceiueth thee, albes thy hart should euен be burst by reason of the ardent affection of godlines, and thou shouldest weepe nothing but dropps of blood. For therefore we pray, because we are vnworthy to pray, and hereby surely we are made worthy to pray, and fit to be heard.

As much as we thinke that we are vnworþy, and doe boldly and cheerfully trust to the faſthulnes and truſh of God. Although you be vnworþy, yet haue regard hereunto, and marke moſt di-gently, that a thouſand times moſe conſiſteth in thiſ, that thou stament, Exod. 14, when the children of Israell trusted that God would deliuer them, and yet no possible meanes were before their eyes, or in all their thoughts, then the red sea opened it selfe, and gaue them passage, drowning all their enemies at once. The holy woman Judith, when she heard that the Citizens of Bethulia would after the space of five dayes giue vp the citie, if God in the meane time did not helpe them, rebuked them saying: What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? these are not deuises and purposes, whereby we obtaine mercy of God, but rather whereby we prouoke him vnto wrath and displeasure. Will ye set the inercy of the Lorde a time, and appoint him a day after your will? Hereupon God did helpe her after a meruelous sort, that at the last she slue Holofernes, and put the enemites to flight, Judith 13: So S. Paul also sayth, Ephes. 3: that the power of God is such and so great, that it doth farre greater and better thinges then we eyther aske or thinke. Wherfore we ought to thinke our selues more vile, then that we may name, appoynt, or prescribe the time, place, maner, measure, and other circumstances of that which we aske of God, but we must leau all thinges wholy vnto him, constantly and boldly beleeuing that he will heare vs.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, CONCERNING THE BIDDING OF GVESTS TO THE great supper.

Luke 14.

Verse 16.  Certaine man made a great supper, and bad many.
17.  And sent his seruaunt at supper time to say to them that were bidden: Come for all things are now ready.

8. But they all with one mind began to make excuse: The first sayd vnto him, I haue bought a farme, and I must needes goe out and see it: I pray thee haue me excused.

9. And an other sayd; I haue bought ffe yoke of oxen, and I go to proue them: I pray thee haue me excused.

10. And an other sayd, I haue maried a wife; and therefore I can not come.

11. So that seruaunt returned, & shewed his maister these things: Then was the good man of the house angry, and sayd to his seruaunt: Go out quickly into the streetes & lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poore, & the may-med, and the halt, and the blinde.

12. And the seruaunt sayd, Lord it is done as thou hast commaunded, and yet there is roome.

13. Then the maister sayd to the seruaunt: Go out into the hie wayes & hedges, & compel them to come in, that mine house may be filled.

14. For I saye vnto you, that none of those men which were bidden, shall tast of my supper.

Sin the whole Scripture, so in this text also we must eudeuour, that according to our abilitie (as ye haue often ymnes hearde heretofore) we may understande the true and simple meaninge, and thereupon settle our harte and conscience. For he that shall encounter with Satan, must not waver and stag-ger this way and that way, but must be certayne of his cause, and instructed with manifest places of Scripture, otherwise when the Deuill shall by an vncertayne place of Scripture drawe him to his forke, he will tolle him this way and that way, as the wynde dothe a drye lease. Wherefore out of this text we must gather a certayne meaning, wherby we may persynt and stand sure. Howbeit it is not to be vnderstood of the reuerend Eucharistie, or the bread of the Lordes tabie, althoough our Papistes haue miserably wrested it, as they haue done many other authorities of Scripture. But this is the scope, this is þ summe of this text: that the Gospele is preached and published throughe the whole wold, but few receiue and embrase it. And it is therefore here called a supper, for that þ Gospel must be the last wold, which shall continue to the ende of the wold. Wherfore the supper here is nothing els, but a very rich & sumptuous feaste, which God hath made throughe Christ by the Gospele, which setteth before vs great good things and rich treasures. And he sent his ser-uaunt to byd men to this sumptuous supper. That is: The Apostles were altogither sent with one wold into þ whole wold, that they might byd and call men to this supper, with one voyce, with one Gospele, with one ambassade: after such sort, that if S. Peter had come, and preached the Gospele of God in that place where Paule had preached it before, yet had it bene one worde, and the same preaching, that the hearers shold haue bene compelled to say: Behold he preacheth the same that we heard before of the other, they wholy consent and agree, & the thinge that they publish is all one. That the Euangelist might insinuate this consent and agreement in preaching, he sayth: He sent his seruaunt, he sayth not, his seruaunts, as of many. Nowe this message the seruaunt must doe to the bidden guests: Come, for all things are now ready. For Christ had suffered death, & in his death had slaine sinne and death, also was risen againe from death, the holy Ghost was giuen: & briesly all thinges were prepared which pertained vnto that great supper. All things were ready without al our cost. For the Father by Christ hath payd the price of all things, that without all our merit and labour we might enjoy his goodnes, and be nourished and enriched. He sendeth his seruaunt therefore first to the Jewes, to byd them to this great supper, vnto whom the promise was made of God. For the lawe and all the Prophets were directed hereunto, that they might prepare the people of God.

As the Angel Gabriele declared of John the Baptiste to his father Zacharias Luke i: He shall be filled with the holy Ghost euyn from his mothers wombe, and many of the children of Israell shall he turne to their Lord God. For he shall goe before him in the

he spirit and power of Elias, to turne the harts of the fathers to he children, & the disobedient to the wisdom of the iust men, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. But what did the guests aunswere to the message of the seruaunt? the text following declareth.

But they all with one minde began to make excuse. This is that whereof the Lord speaketh Matth. 10: He that loueth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me. And he that loueth sonne or daughter more then me, is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his crosse, & followeth after me, is not worthy of me. For he that will be partaker of this supper, must put all thinges into daunger for the Gospells sake, body, goods, wife, children, frendes, &c. Moreouer he must leave all thinges whatsoever they be, that separate him from the Gospele, albeit great supper they seeme good, iust, right, & holy. Neither thinke ye that these men which here excuse them selues, were guilty of grieuous sinnes, or occupied about vniust matters and works. For it is not vniust to bie, to vse trade of marchandize, to maintaine him selfe honestly, to marie a wife, to be ioyned in matrimonie. But therfore can they not come to this supper, for that they will not forsake these thinges, but will rather cleaue to them in their hart. Howe they must be vterly forsaken and left, when the Gospele so requireth. Thou wilt perhaps say: I would in deede willingly follow the Gospele, I would cleaue unto it, & doe all other thinges whatsoever, but to forsake goods, houses, familie, wife, children, &c: surely this is a hard matter. God hath commaunded me to labour, to maintaine my wife and children, &c. Beholde therfore this is the scope and summe; that the Gospele is the wozde of faith and offence, because of which every faichfull man doth beare offence willingly. In deede God hath willed thee to doe these thinges, howbeit he hath also commaunded, that thou preferre him before all creatures, and loue him aboue all thinges, and thinke him higher then all thinges which thou canst know, euen as the chiese and greatest commandement giueth vs to understande: Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy hart, with all thy soule, with all thy minde, Deut. 6: Wherefore thou must forsake all thinges before thou suffer thy selfe to be pluckt away from the loue of him, or his wozde: although in deede he loseth nothing, which forsaketh any thinge for the Gospells sake. If so the Go-spells sake thou lose this temporall life, God will giue thee another farre better, to wit, eternall life, as Christ sayth Matth. 10: He that will finde his life, shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall finde it. If thou be compelled to forsake thy wife together with thy childzen, remember that God hath a care of them, he will be a better fater unto them then thy selfe, which undoubtedly commeth to passe, if so be thou beleeue. For we haue very great & rich promises that he wil not suffer his word to fail, but will alwayes fulfill it, if we can freely and confidently trust in him, and commit our selues wholly unto him. Christ sayth after this sorte Matth. 19: VVhosoeuer shall forsake houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or landes, for my names sake, he shall receiue an hundred fold more, and shall inherit everlasting life. We haue here his words and promise: what would we haue more? or what can we desire more? wherein therefore doe we sayle? onely in our faith. Wherefore no man commeth to this supper, but he that bringeth with him a sincere faith, which God preferreth and loueth aboue all creatures. But how doth the Lord recompense them which excused them selues that they could not come to the supper? The text it selfe declareth:

required in the guests of this supper.

Then vvas the good man of the house angry, and sayd to his seruaunt: Goe out quickly into the streetes and lanes of the citie, and bring in hither the poore, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. To goe into the streetes and lanes is nothing else, but that whereas the Jewes made them selues vnworthy of the Gospell, and did refuse it, the Disciples turned to the Gentiles. For it was enioyned them of Christ, that they shoulde not turne them selues to the Gentiles, nor preach the kingdom of God in the cities of the Samaritanes, but should goe onely to the sheepe of the house of Israell, and should feede them onely, as they did. Now the Jewes striuing against this worde, and by no meanes receiving it, the Disciples sayd, Act. 13: It was necessary that the word of God should first haue bin spoken vnto you: but seeing ye put it from you, and iudge your selues vnworthy of eu-erlasting life, lo, we turne to the Gentiles; for so hath the Lord comauanded vs, saying: I haue made thee a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be the saluation vnto the ende of the world. But what meaneth that which he sayth moreover to y seruaunt Goe

Goe out into the hie wayes and hedges , and compell them to come in, that myne house may be filled. This is to be vnder-stood of desperat and weake consciences, which also pertaine vnto this supper, and are compelled vnto it , but this compulsion is not outward , but inward and spirituall , and is done after this manner. When the law is preached , sinne is set before our eyes and revealed, that a man may come to knowledge of him selfe, so that to compel, to enter or come in, doth rightly signifie, to draine sinne into the conscience, wherby a man may know that he is nothing, hat all his woxkes are sinnes, and subiect to damnation , and so vndairly his conscience may become desperate, and his hart faint and terrifid, that all that confidence and opinion of helpe may depart , and man him selfe be able no where to comfort him selfe in any thinge, and at the last be drauen to despeire of him selfe. If it be that one be once after this so vt compelled, then doe not long delay to let him come in , but deliuere the man out of desperation.
 That commeth to passe , when thou comfortest hym by the Go-dell , and declarest that he is deliuered from his sinnes , saying : Beleue in Christ, that he hath made thee free from thy sinnes , then shalt thou be deliuered and free from sinne . And this is the meaning of that which he sayth : Compell them to come in. It is not to be vnderstoode of outwarde compulsion , s some interprete it , that wicked and vngodly ones shoulde be violently drauen to the supper , for this preuayleth nothing, eyther is it so meant in this place. Wherefore it is to be referred onely to the conscience , and is inwarde and spiritull. Nowe he goeth on to speake to the seruaunte and the rest.

For I say vnto you , that none of those men which were bidden , shall tast of my supper. This is the conclusion, that they which thinke themselues most certaine that they shall come to the supper, and tast of it, shall not tast of it : The reason ye haue heard. Now briesly the guests that are bidden and do not come, are they, which thinke that they shall obtaine the supper by their owne woxkes , verie much wearying themselues , thinking as-surely, that they shall tast of it. But the Lord mightely concludeth and sayth : Not one of these men shall tast of my supper.
 Wherefore most gentle Lord ? They haue committed no wicked thinge, neither haue bin occupied about vniusit matters. Behold,

What it is to compell to come in.

Why they - that were bidden shall not tast of the supper.

this is the reason, for that they haue forsaken fayth, and haue ne confessed it freely before euerie one, neither haue preferred the rich and sumptuous supper before all creatures. For seeing it i sumptuous, it requireth those men that do iudge it to be so, an do put any thinge in daunger, what soever it be, that they may b partakers of it: Thus ye haue the compendious meaning of thi text, which I haue onely briesly runne ouer, if any will expoun it more at large, I am well content he so do.

A SERMON OF D. MAR TIN LVTHER OF THE WORKES OF CHARITIE.

Luke. 6.

- Verse.36. Sesus said vnto his disciples: Be ye mercifull as your father also is mercifull.
37. Judge not, and ye shall not be iudged: condemne not, and ye shall not be condemned forgiue, and ye shalbe forgiuen.
38. Giue & it shalbe giuen vnto you: a good measure, pressed downe, shaken togither, and running ouer shall men giue into your bosom: for with what measure ye meat, with the same shall men meat to you again.
39. And he spake a parabale vnto them: Can the blynde lead the blynde? shall they not both fall into the ditch?
40. The disciple is not aboue his maister: but who soever wilbe a perfect disciple, shalbe as his maister.

41. And

1. And why seest thou a mote in thy brothers eye, and considerest not the beame that is in thine owne eye?
2. Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou seest not the beame that is in thine owne eye? Hypocrite, cast out the beame out of thine owne eye first, and then shalt thou see perfectly to pull out the mote that is in thy brothers eye.

HE workes of charitie which we must do to our neighbours in temporall thinges and in corporall necessarie, are described vnto vs in this text: which the Lorde then declared, when he layde a litle before in the same chapter, that we must do well vnto our enemies, and bestow benefits vpon them which hate vs: that we must blesse them that curse vs: that we must pray for them which persecute vs: if any man smite vs on the one cheeke, we must offer vnto him also the other: and if any man take away our cloke, we must not forbid him to take away our coate also. &c. All which he comprehending in a briese summe, sayth: Be ye mercifull, as your Father also is mercifull. Here ye see all good workes summarilie described which we must exercise among our selues, as our heauenly father hath exercised them toward vs. We haue oftentimes heard, that it is not needefull to do good workes toward God, but toward our neighbour onely. God can be made neither stronger nor richer by our workes: but man may be strengthened and enriched by them, vnto whom also they are necessarie, vnto whom onely they are to be directed, and not vnto God, which ye haue very often heard, and which is now in your eares: but would to God it would at the last burst forth both into your handes and workes. Marke therefore how peruerse an order it is, when any deale with God by workes, with whom notwithstanding they must deale by onely faith, and when faith is directed vnto man, whereas it is to be placed in God alone. Turne these contrariwise, and they shalbe right, after this sort: let vs first repose faith in God alone, and let vs then give our workes.

deale with God by faith and with our neighbours by good

selues to serue our neighbours, and to direct all our workes so that they may turne to their commoditie. We must deale before God by no other thing but by faith alone, because none is able to helpe vs but God onely, & whatsoever we possesse either in mind or body, that commeth wholy to vs from God alone, in whom we ought to trust, vpon whom we ought to set our hart. Nowe some vse suche a preposterous order, that they repose faithe, which ought to haue respect unto God onely, in them selues and others, they rest vpon their traditions, and whatsoever their great masters haue inuented, in that they put their trust. Of such God sayth in Ieremie? My people hath done two euills: one, for that they haue forsaken me the well of the water of life, and digged them pitts, yea vile and broken pitts that can holde no water: An other, for that thou darest say: I am without sinne and giltles, tush, his wrath can not come vpon me: behold I will reason with thee, because thou darest say, I haue not offended.

First he sayth, that his spouse is turned into an harlot, and hath estrangued her selfe from God the fontaine of life, from whom life, saluation & every good thing floweth, him they haue forsaken. Secondly they set vp their owne traditions, and digge vnto them selues a fountaine of their owne, which can holde no water. So our Papistes trust to their owne inuentions, to their founding of Masses, to their fastinges, prayars, and such like things. Which appeare to be as a fountaine, out of which they would draw life, and blessednes or saluation, when as notwithstanding it is able to hold no water: they forsake God the fountain of life. Afterward he sayth: they dare rise against me, that I shold not be angrie with them, alleging that their workes be iust, and they will goe to law with me. Beholde this is an other sinne, that they goe about to defende their workes. Whereupon God also sayth: I wil contend with thee in iudgment, & wil shew how thou gaddest hither and thither to change thy wayes.

Faith obtaineth all good things of God.

So faith pertaineth to God alone, whereunto it belongeth to obtaine all whatsoever thinges are necessary, as well temporall thinges as eternall, and so to obtaine them, that it thinke not that it hath merited in any thing. Also it must againe apply it self downward toward our neighbour, with out looking for any recompense, not that blessednes consisteth in that deriving of faith, to wit charity, for neither doth God require that, who will haue the conscience o rest onely in him: euен as the spouse must cleaue onely to her us bande and to no other: so also God requireth of vs that we rust in him alone. These things Christ declareth when he saith: Be ye mercifull as your father is mercifull. Wherefore I must order my conscience toward God, that I vndoubtedly beleue, hat I haue him a bountifull and mercifull father, as I will sterward declare, and that I also do shew mercy toward my neighbour. Which faith must be inward, and caried vpward vnto God, but woxes must be without, and deriued downward to ur neighbour. After this sort Abraham did, when at the mounaine in the countrie of Moria he ascended to God, he left his seruaunts and asses below at the bottoome of the mountaine, taking onely Isaac with him. The same must be done of vs if we will ascend vnto God, that we may come to him with Isaac oney, that is, with faith, seruaunts and asses, that is woxes, are o be left below. Thus much for the entraunce of this text concerning faith and woxes, to wit that faith must pearce inward and vpward, but woxes must go without and downeward, whereby at the length it commeth to passe, that we are righteous before God and men, for that we giue due honour vnto God, and beleue according to his word, and satisfie our neighbour in he dutie of loue. Nowe let vs see the very wordes of the text n order.

Be ye mercifull as your Father is mercifull. How therefore How our hea-s our heauenly father mercifull? after that sort, that he giueth uenly Father is all good thinges, corporall and spiritual, transitorie and eter-iall, freely and of his mercy. For if he shoulde giue vnto vs according to our desert, he shoulde giue vnto vs nothing but hell fire and eternall damnation. What soever therefore good thinges he bestoweth vpon vs, he bestoweth them of his meere mercy.
He seeth vs sticke fast in death, therefore he hath mercy vpon vs and giueth vs life: he seeth vs to be the children of hell, wherefore he taking pite vpon vs, giueth vnto vs heauen: He eeeth vs to be miserable and naked, hungerie and thirsty, it piping him hereof, he clotheth vs, and refresheth vs with meat & drinke, & maketh vs full of all good thinges: So what soever we haue either in body or in spirit, he giueth it vs of his meere mercy, without any merit or desert of ours. Wherupon Christ here saith: Imitate your father, & be ye mercifull like vnto him. This

What kinde of mercy re-son teacheth vs to vse.

is not simple mercy, such as reason teacheth, for that is greedy of her owne commoditie, which giueth onely to great and learned men, and to them that deserue it: it loueth them that be sayze and beautifull: it giueth vnto them, of whom it looketh for profit and commoditie againe, which is a mercy diuided, begging, and as it were toyne and broken in peeces. For if I shall giue to him that hath deserued, or if I shall regard sayzenes or friendship, it is a bargaine or det, and not mercy. Hereof Christ speaketh in the same chapter before this text in this wise: If ye loue them which loue you, what thanke shall ye haue? and if ye do good for them which do good for you, what thanke shall ye haue? for euen the synners do the same: and if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receiue, what thanke shall ye haue? for euen the synners lend to synners to receiue the like. But the mercy of Christians must not seeke her owne, but so behauie it selfe, that it be indifferent, that it regard all alike with open eyes, both freinds and foes, euen as our heauenly fater doth.

Luke 6.

Where true mercy is not,
neither is there any true faith.

And where soever this mercy is not, neither is there faith also. For thy heart being settled in faith, so that thou knowest God to haue shewed himselfe thy God, so gentle and bountifull, without thy desert and of mere grace, when thou wast as yet his ene-mie, and the childe of everlasting malediction, thy heart I say being settled in this faith, thou canst not containe thy selfe, but that thou shew thy selfe againe so to thy neighbour, & that wholy for the loue of God, and for thy neighbours commodities sake.
Take heede therefore what difference thou make betweene a friend and an enemie, betweene the worthy and unworthy: for ye see all which are in this text rehearsed, to haue otherwise de-serued of vs, then that we should loue them, or do well vnto them.
And the same thing the Lord meaneth when he sayeth Luke 6: But loue your enemis, do well vnto them, lend, looking for nothing againe, and your reward shalbe great, and ye shalbe the children of the most High: for he is kinde vnto the vinkinde, and to the euell.

An obiectio. But how commeth it to passe that a certain contrarie thing to þ which we haue taught seemeth to appeare in this text, where he saith? Be ye merciful, as your heauenly Father is merciful: againe, Iudge not, and ye shal not be iudged: condemne not, & ye shall not be condemned: forgiue and it shalbe forgiuen you: All

which authoritie sound so, that we must deale before God with our workes, and by them deserue the mercy of God, when as notwithstanding ye haue very often heard, that faith alone doth all? and both Paul and the whole Scripture do commonly say and affirme, that we must beleue in God alone, and deale by onely mere faith before him. It is requisite here to understand The answer. that good workes are onely a setting forth and commendation of faith, so that if I beleue, I must be mercifull, I must not judge nor condemne my neighbour, I must forgiue, and giue vnto my neighbour. Whereof set an example before your selues. What did Abraham being commaunded to offer his sonne? he obeyed Gen. 22. he commaundement, and drew forth the sword to kill his sonne: what ensued therevpon? the Angell of the Lord stayed him, saying: lay not thy hand vpon the child, neither do any thing vnto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, forasmuch as for my sake thou hast not spared thine onely sonne.

Howbeit this is here to be knownen and marked of vs, that we We must remust first receive, before we giue: before we shew mercy, we ceiu mercy remust receive mercy of God: we do not lay the first stone, neither before we doth the shepe seeke the shepheard, but the shepheard the shepe. shew mercy. Wherefore so beslow thy workes in euerie respect, that thou looke for nothing at Gods hand because of them: for we obtaine even euerie thing of God without merit or desert: so God sayth We obtaine all good Esay 65: I am found of them that seeke not for me, I haue ap- things of peared to them that aske not for me. And in the ende of the same god through chapter: The time shall come (sayth God) that or euer they his meere call I will aunswere them, and while they are yet but thinking how to speake, I will heare them. For in deede before we seeke him, he syndeth vs, before we aske him, he heareth vs. Likewise S. Paul sayth Rom. 3: There is no difference: for all haue sinned, and are depriued of the glorie of God, and are iustified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Iesus: whom God hath set forth to be a reconciliatiō through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousnes, in that he forgiueth he synnes that are past, through the patience of God, to shew at this time his righteousnes, that he might be iust, and a iustifier of him which is of the faith of Iesus. And in the chapter following he sayeth: Now to him that worketh the wages is not counted by fauour but by dette: but to him that worketh not, but believeth in him that iustifieth the vngodly, his faith is cou-ted for righteousnes. For if it be of Grace, it is no more of works, or els were grace no more grace, as he saith afterward in the eleuenth chapter.

Our good workes must be signes and testimonies of our sincere faith.

Againe, I must bestow my workes so, that they maye be a certayne signe, and as it were a seale grauen with letters, where by I may be assured that my faith is syncere. For if I feele it in my heart, that my worke proceedeth from loue, I am sure concerning the integritie and soundnes of my faith. If I forgive the same forgiuenes doth assure me concerning the sincerite of my faith, doth declare my faith, and certifie me, that God hath also pardoned my synne, and doth daily more and more pardon me. So it fell out with Abraham, his worke made his faith knowne vnto him. God in deede knew that he did beleue, but it behoued that Abraham also shold know, and shew forth his faith. Wherefore workes folowing onely freely as fruites of faith, are declarations of such a faith. For what shold it profit me, if I had euene a strong faith, but unknowen vnto me? even as if I shold haue a chest full of gold, yet I being ignorant thereof, shold take no commoditie thereby. But if any would shew it vnto me, he shold do me as great a pleasure, as if he gaue it me. So if I haue faith and yet be ignorant thereof, it is no profit vnto me. Wherefore it must burst forth, and be shewed by the workes that ensue, which are both signes and seales of the 2. Pet. 1. 18. 19 present faith. Soe Sainct Peter meaneth, when speaking of the workes of charitie, and the vertues of faith, he concludeth thus: Vv herefore brethren, giue rather diligence, to make your calling and election sure, which if ye do, ye shall not fall. For by this meanes an entering shalbe ministred vnto you abundantly into the euerlasting kingdome of our Lord and Sauour Iesus Christ. He sayeth not, do good workes, that by them ye may be called, but that ye may more assure your selues of your calling.
Accustome your selues therefore well vnto the phrasles and maner of speakeinges vsed in the Scripture, that ye rush not vpon them like blinde moules, and confirme workes in such places as this: for herein workes are reiecteſ if we thinke, that we are iustified by them: but herein they are extolled and commended, in that they are profitable to our neighbour and frutes and signes of faith. Behold, it was meete that I shold make

In this digression, least I shoule confirme the meaning of þ Papists.

Now if it shoule be demanded why God oftentimes setteth dwne such contrarie sentences, and disagreeing one with another, as it seemeth to vs & our reason, I answere, that he may cercle vs in reading, and that we shoule not thinke that we understand the whole Scripture, whcn we scarce understand one

Why God wil haue sentences in the Scriptures which seeme contrarie.

pace. Some sayinges do guide the spirit, how we ought to be-hve our selues toward God, onely by faith, as this: VVe are Rom. 3.24.

istified freely. Againe lest the body shoule be sluggish outward.

There are sentences also set forth vnto vs, which do guide and exercise the body, as these which we haue heard here rehearsed: brygine, and ye shalbe forgiuen: also where as Christ affirmeth, that he will require warkes in the last day, and will say after this þt vnto the condemned, Matthew 25: I was an hungred, and þ gave me no meat: I thirsted, & ye gaue me no drinke: I was straunger, and ye tooke me not in vnto you: I was naked and þ clothed me not, &c. Whiche sentences, whiles ignorant and þt spirits labour to wwest and applie to warkes, they see not þw great euell they commit. But spirituall men referre them þ the very body onely, they them selues standing naked before þod in spirit, which is both iust and necessarie. For there are þo thinges in man, the Spirit and the Fleſh. Hereupon there þe some places which do guide onely faith in the spirit: some, þich do direct onely warkes in the body: for one place can not þrect both the body and the spirite togidher. We must so do with þr substance, that we be willing to part from it, to lend, and to sue to our neighbour, when it shalbe requisite. And if we see any þt to haue, wherewith to make restitution, we must release him; þd forgiue the dette according to the example of Nehemias, as þe read in Esdras. 1. Esd. 5. For God hath giuen many things þto vs, who is able to giue vs moe thinges also if we beleue.

þnd thus we heare that if we will be Christians, we ought to þnd, giue, and to be willing to part from that which we haue, þtherwise we shall not shew the frutes of a lively faith. Whereþe lay þp this text inwardly in your mindes, that ye deale by þ other thing before God, but by onely faith, and referre and þstow your warkes to the only seruice and profit of your neighþour. Thus much shall suffice to haue bin spoken concerning the þmer part. Now what is to be sayd moreouer of this text, or what doth follow we will afterward consider. In the wordes following the Lord interpreteth himselfe, what kinde of mercy he understandeth, saying after this sort.

Judge not, and ye shall not be iudged: condemne not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgiue, and ye shalbe forgiuen: Give and it shalbe giuen vnto you. In this place the Lord diuideth mercy into thre partes, that we maye not be ignorant, wheramaner of mercy that ought to be, which it behoueth vs to shew our neighbours. First iudgement and condemnation is take from vs. Then thou must forgiue thy neighbour if he hath committed any thing against thee. Lastly thou must helpe the needy. These thinges this word (Mercie) signifieth, where soever it cometh in the Scriptures. And all these must proceede from sincere heart; all colouring and flatterie being taken away, there be no respect had of the person. For if thou desirest to well and to wish well to them, which will well to thee: or to do well to them, which do well to thee: or to hurt them, which hurt thee, thou art utterly deceipted. But thou must do so, as Christ saith a little before: Imitate thy heauenly father, loue thine enemye: do wel to him, which doth euill to thee: forgiue him that hurteth thee: lend to the needy, and so of the rest. That therefore we may speake of the former part, that we must not iudge or condemn, we must marke, that God hath ordained the sword of the magistrate, to the punishing of publike offences, so that it be provided that it be not done against the precept and commaundement of God, as that the innocent be not executed: for whereas the iudge dealeth unjustly, he is as well an homicide as an other, of which iudgement Christ saith nothing here. Else where he maketh mention thereof, when as he said to him, which desired, that he would his brother diuide the inheritance with him: Who made me a iudge or a diuider over you? For the care & gouerning of outward thinges do not belong to the kingdome of Christ.

The first part of mercy not to iudge or condemne an other.

Luk. 12. 14.

Of what iudgement Christ speaketh in this place.

But Christ speaketh here of an other iudgement, namely that whereby one reputeth and compteth an other good or euell when as notwithstanding he seeth no good or euell to be done to him. Which iudgement belongeth only vnto God. For it may be that thou see thy brother offend to day, whom notwithstanding to morow God doth receive, the may he both be, and also seeme vnto thee to be good, neither must thou remember his synnes, &c.

it Christ hath forbidden. For there can not be either any loue, concord, where this iudgement and condemnation is vsually amongst men. To iudge & condemne an other is nothing els, then haue a beame in his owne eye, which all hypocrites do without but beare in their eyes. For they that iudge themselues good, ie offended at their brother, what soever others do, it displeaseth them, soasmuch as they will not acknowledge their owne inne. But it commeth to passe, that when thou seest many sinnes in others, thou seest not the beame that is in thine owne eye, and fallest into the iudgement of God. Hereof it commeth, that thou which iudgeth an other, art made worse then the most wicked baude, the most unchaste harlot, before God, who alone knoweth who to be saued, and who to be condemned. Such hypocrites are of Iudgers of nature, that it is a pleasure vnto them, and they take no smal other. light thereof, if they reason and talke either of the adulterie or lust of an other man, yea they increase a small thing or trifles in their neighbour, and what soever others do, they interpret it at the worst, so that no man is able to do that which pleaseth or likeith them. And although they themselues do not such things, yet they willingly here that other men do them, whereas a godly man helpeh as much as he is able, that these thinges may be couered and amended. But it many times falleth out that they are most thie adulterers euuen according to the flesh, which do so iudge and condemn others, howbeit they do not iudge man onely, but even God himselfe. Wherefore if thy brother be a sinner, conceale his synne, and pray for him to the Lord: if thou reveale his sinne and rejoyce therat, surely thou art not the child of the mercifull Father, for if thou were, thou wouldest be mercifull according as he is. This is a thing most certaine, that we are not able to shew great mercy to our neighbour, as God both hath & doth shew vs. But that is the practize of Satan, that we do those things which are quite contrarie vnto mercy, which is an undoubted signe, that there is no mercy at all in vs.

Of these iudgers of other Christ speaketh in the Gospell whē he sayth: Can the blinde lead the blinde? shall they not both fall into the ditch? The disciple is not aboue his maister: but who soever wilbe a perfect disciple, shalbe as his maister. And why est thou a mote in thy brothers eye, and considerest not the beame, that is in thine owne eye? either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pul out the motethat is in thine eye, when thou seest not the beame that is in thine owne eye? Hypocrite, cast out the beame that is in thine own eye first, & the shal thou see perfectly to pul out the mote that is in thy brothers eie. As if he said : thou thinkest that thy brother is blinde, and in thi minde doest synde fault with an other, that is, thou wile guide an other, whē notwithstanding thou thy selfe art blind. Thou iudges him a synner, & thy selfe an honest & iust man. What other thing is this, the for thy heari to be so affected, that thou count thy selfe better? Which is nothing els, then that thou wile lead & guid other, whē thou thy selfe art blinder then a moule, so that he whiche followeth thee, doth fall with thee into the ditch. Of such as iudge themselves to excell others, & thinke themselves to be followe more then the word of God. S. Paul speaketh Rom. 2: Behold (saith he) thou art called a Iew, & restest in the law, & gloriest in God & knowest his will, and triest the thinges that dissent from it, i that thou art instructed by the law, & perswadest thy selfe, tha thou art a guide of the blinde, a light of them which are in darknes, an instructer of them which lacke discretiō, a teacher of th vnylearned, which hast the forme of knowledge, & of the truth in the law. Thou therefore which teachest an other teachest thou not thy selfe? thou that preachest, A man should not steale, doest thou steale? thou that sayest, A man should not cōmit adulterie, doest thou cōmit adulterie? thou that abhorrest idols, cōmitte thou sacrilege? thou that gloriest in the law through breaking th law, dishonourest thou God? Whereupon he also sayth in the beginning of the same chapter to hypocrites; Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, who soever thou art, that cōdemnest: for i that that thou condemnest an other, thou condemnest thy selfe for thou that condemnest doest the same thinges. But we know that the iudgement of God is according to truth, against them which commit such things. And thinkest thou this, O thou man that cōdemnest the which do such things, & doest the same, tha thou shalt escape the iudgement of God? Loe, this is to speake þ truth to hypocrites, who go about to shew þ way to other, which they themselves know not, leading so other men into þ ditch with the. Therfore þ Lord saith: The disciple is not aboue his maister but who soever wilbe a perfect disciple, shalbe as his maister. This is a common proverbe: I can learne no more of my maister the ten he knoweth himselfe. Wherefore doth the Lord speake this puerbe? because of two sortes of maisters: the one is blynde, whom if I shall follow, I also my selfe shall become blynde: he himselfe falleth into the ditch, and I follow. The other maister is the mercifull father, of whom we must learne mercy: whom if we follow, we also do become mercifull like as he is: if we were mercifull daily, we shold also become perfect, as he is perfect, ut that commeth not to passe, as long as we are in this life.

The second part of mercy is, that we forgiue them which haue damaged vs, or hurt vs by any meanes. A Christian can neuer so hurt, but he ought to forgiue, not onely seuen times, but se-enty times seuen times, as the Lord sayd vnto Peter. Matth.

8. Wherefore God forgiueth a Christian his synne or infirmitie, that he also may forgiue other their infirmitie: which Christ telleth forth els where in a most goodly parable, which he cõcludeth in these wordes: So likewise shall mine heauenly Father do Match. 18. 35. vnto you, except ye forgiue from your hearts, ech one to his brother their trespasses. And so we praye daily in the Lords prayer, with an addition saying: forgiue vs our trespasses, as we forgiue them that trespass against vs. Is this a hard matter, if I a wretched synner, do forgiue my neighbour his trespasses and his infirmitie, whereas the Lord will forgiue me my synnes and my infirmities? If one had killed my father, what were this being compared to my synne, wherewith I haue offended God, and pouoked him to anger?

The third part of mercy is, that we give to them that be in piserie and neede, and th at we helpe them. Whereof John spea- part of mer-

on him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? For where the loue of God is, it is moued to shew it selfe euē in outward works. Whereunto also pertaineth the saying of Christ Matth. 5: Blessed are the mercifull, for they shall obtaine mercy. Wherefore the Lord addeth a promise in the Gospell, saying: Giue and it shalbe iuen vnto you: a good measure, pressed downe, shaken togither, & running ouer shall men giue into your bosome. And continuing on his speech he sayth: For with what measure ye meat, with the same shall men meat to you againe. Thus much shall suffice concerning the partes of mercy whiche we ought to shew to our neighbours. Unto which the speciall wordes of Christ ought to exhort vs, who when in the Gospell of Matthew he hath spoken much of a Christian life, and of loue to be shewed to ou brethren, thus concludeth saying: VVhat soever ye woul that men should do to you, euen so do ye to them: for this is th Law and the Prophets. Now euerie one is so affected, that bein cast downe, and in distres, he would wish all the world to help him. If I be a miserable sinner, drowned in sinnes, bearing burdened and troubled conscience, I would that the whole world should comfort me, should helpe and succour me, should couer me in sinne and shame. So I also ought to behau my selfe toward my neighbour, not to iudge him, not to condemne him, but to forgiue him his offences, to helpe him, to prouide for him, to lend unto him, & giue him, euen as I would wish to be done vnto my selfe. I were driven into distres, necessitie, exile, or pouerty. And herein truly Christians are knowne, if they loue one an other, if they do such workes of mercy vnto an other, as Christ sayd vnto his disciples at his last Supper: I giue you a new commaundement, that ye loue one an other, as I haue loued you. By this shall men know that ye are my disciples, if ye haue loue one to another. Thus ye haue the meaning of this text, it remaineth that we call upon God for grace.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, OF THE SVMME OF CHRISTIAN LIFE.

I. Tim. i.

Verse. 5. ¶ He ende of the commaundement is loue out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith vnfeined.

6. Fron

From the which thinges some haue erred, and haue turned vnto vaine iangling.

They would be doctours of the Lawe, and yet vnderstand not what they speake, neither whereof they affirme.

Tis well knowne vnto you dearely beloued brethren, with how great seueritie God hath commaunded his worde to be heard and learned. For he most highly esteemeth it, and hath bestowed much labour in defending it, and publishing it to the wrold. He hath suffered all the Prophets to come into perils and daungers, at the last also he sent his owne sonne because of his worde, whom he suffered to die euен the death of the crosse. And what persecutions haue not the Apostles themselues abode for the wordes sake? what afflictions haue not all Christians suffered? vnto some of which he hath committed the ministerie of his word faithfully to be executed, and to other some hath enioyed the charge of hearing the same. If there were no other cause aside this, whereby we might be moued to heare & learne Gods word, but for that it is the good pleasure, will, and commaundement of God, yet this one ought to be sufficient great & weighty. For it is our dutie as creatures to obey our Lorde and Creator, and that with all readines of mynde, inasmuch as he hath giuen us so many good thinges, and doth as yet daily giue vs moe, of which we shall neuer be able to giue him sufficient worshipe.

Howbeit he is not content, onely to haue commaunded vs to do this, or to require it of vs as bounden dutie, but promiseth also that great fruits and commodities shall redound to vs thereby, stirming that by this meanes his greatest and highest worship is giuen unto him. For he is the great Lord, whom we serue, who God is served many and diuers kindes of seruice, and manifold maners of worship, and whom we may serue diuers wayes. But this onely seruice which is giuen to him by hearing the word, doth excell all the rest. For if any where a faithfull man of the countrie, or a citizen, or any which is otherwise in subiection doth serue his worde: Lorde or maister, he doth by the same seruice also serue God. Likewise a childe, a manseruaunt or a maydservauant, if they be obedient, and do diligently that which belongeth to their dutie; also a Prince and parents if they governe well, and do their dutie faithfully; they all do serue God. For it is his will and com-maundement which he requireth to be fulfilled of vs. Of such seruices and kindes of worship the world is full. For to euerie one in his state his workes are committed and inioyned of God, whereby he daily both ought and may serue him: that there may be left no place for excuse vnto any man, as though he were ignorant how, and wherefore he must serue God, neither that any seeke after other thinges, and inuent peculiar maners of seruynge God, which he hath neither ordained nor commaunded, and in the meane season neglect that which he hath commaunded, as we haue hitherto done in our blindenes.

But before all other seruices and doinges of duties, he hath most highly esteemed and extolled this seruice both of them that heare, and them that preach his word: And therefore hath ordained also a speciall day thereunto euerie weeke, in which we must applie our selues to no other busines: Albeit we serue God also by other labours all the wreke; which he hath bound to me time or certaine daye. But he hath chosen this daye specially which he hath severelye commaunded to be kept, whereby men maye haue time and leysure to performe this seruice, lest am might flie vnto this complaint, that he hath no leysure by reason of his labours and busines. Moreouer he hath appoincted speciall places also for this seruice, as among vs temples and houses, where we doe come togither. Yea he hath institute and kept the whole order of ministers hereunto, giuing all other thinges which pertaine to the performing of the charg of this office, as the knowledge of manye tounes, and divers giftes beside. And briesly he hath commaunded th whole world by a certaine speciall precept, that it thinke thi worship or seruice holy, and farre more excellent then the rest.

Which he will haue so to be delighted in of all Christians that it maye be manifest, howe much he doeth esteeme it, and howe acceptable vnto him the exercise and handlyng of hi word is.

These things I speake to stirre you vp, and to admonish you why ye ought willingly to heare the word of God, because it is which ought not only the commaundement of God, whereunto we must obey hi

It we haue also most ample promises, that it is a thinge accep-tale to God, and the greatest worship, whereby we can doe hour unto him. And it so farre exceedeth other kindes of worship, the brightnes of the sunne exceedeth the brightnes of the ouer starres, and the Sabbath day the other dayes, & in a summe, much as the heauenly kingdom excelleth the kingdoms of the worlde. For here all thinges are holy and specially chosen, the me, place, person, and that because of the woyde, which sanctifi-eth all thinges vnto vs. Wherefore we must earnestly endeouour, at we take heede vnto our selues, that we fall not into sluggish-nes, & slothfulnes, neither that we be caried away with contempt & lothsonnes of hearing the woyde, as those delicate and cloyed rites, which seeme vnto them selues already to be Maisters; d exactly to know all thinges, yea farre more perfectly then a-can teache them. Or as others also, which are soone cloyed ith it, thinking, why I haue heard this very often, wherefore ould I eftsoones heare the same songe? They knowe not howe eat & meruelous a thing it is, also howe great worship of God, ich they do so greatly contemne, & neglect with so great slothnes. Wherefore they doe after unspeakable meanes prouoke od to wrath, hauing his commaundement so in contempt, and ferring his promise to be made vnyld in them, and as much as is them impayzing and hindering by their example so commenible a worship and seruice of God.

But admite it to be true, which notwithstanding is not, that ou doost understand all thinges perfectly, and as cunningly and kilfully as Christ him selfe: yet thou seest how earnestly he permethe the office of preaching, and applyeth him selfe vnto this woke, whereof notwithstanding he was most skilful before, and ad not any whit neede thereof, as we doe greatly neede it. So auale also a Prince of Apostles, albeit he was exceedingly well arned, & so excellent a Doctor, yet going through many counties did eftsoones and every where preach, neither was he weaed or cloyed. Wherefore it is meete that thou be nothing at all earie of hearing this woyde, inasmuch as the ayde and helpe ereof is exceeding necessary for thee, both against the deuile and all other tentations. And although for thy instruction thou shoul-est not neede it, yet oughtest thou not to be wearied or cloyed, thou shouldest not beslowe a fewe howres in a day every weeke to me to heare Gods word.

We must nor be wearie of hearing the word of God.

Upon this worship and seruice of God: seeing that before, applying thy selfe to false worship, when thou didst passe the whole daie in temples, and didst runne from temple to temple, from altar to altar, thou felst no tediousnes or wearines, neither didst say a thou ddoest at this day: D. I haue heard no newe thinge, I haue heard these thinges before: But didst thinke thus: this day an yesterday I went to heare Mass, and to morow I mind to goe heare it againe. How much more oughtest thou to doe this now knowing assuredly that this is the right seruice and worship of God, & to say? Albeit I knew most perfectly, as I doe not know yet to giue honour and shew obedience unto God, I will doe this seruice, and because of his loue and prayse I will heare his word that my Lord may see by this chiese worship, wherewith I am especially delighted, that I am willing to serue him. For al though no other frute or profit come vnto me thereby, yet I ma reioyce that I haue performed a most holy and acceptable work vnto him, whereunto other kindes of worships and seruices being compared, are of small importanc.

Now, he that doth not care for these thinges, neither is moued with them, reverently to thinke and highly to esteeme of the woorke of God, willingly and earnestly to heare and learne it, whensoeuer opportunitie and meanes shall be offered, I wil haue nothing to do with him. For neither may I, neither will I draw any man hereunto violently. He that contemneth, let him contemne still and remaine a swine as he is, euен vntill that day, when God will kill him, and throw him downe hedlong to hel. For such a one can not be a good man, neither is it a humane sinne, but a certaine devillish obstinacie, so greatly to contemne that, whereunto God hath appoynted a place, person, time, &c. Whereunto mozeouer he moueth vs by his commaundement, louingly prouoketh vs by his promises, stirreth vs vp, and admonisheth vs by wordes, and offereth all these of his owne accord, and to be bought with no price or treasure, which is to be farre fetched, or hardly come by, the excellencie whereof can in deede be counteruailed with no gold. Adde hereunto mozeouer that it is a worship or seruice very easie to be done, which may be performed without all labour or griefe, but that thou must attentiuely heare the Preacher, or apply thy mouth to speake and read, then which labour none surely is moze easie. And albeit it is to be feared, that thou shalt therefo he beare the crosse, and suffer persecution, yet the woxke it selfe so ioyned with no difficultie, as no other labour is, no not euen at that is most easie. If so be that it be not grieuous unto thee, sitt the whole day in a tauerne or an alehouse, or otherwise with thy companions to triffe and spoyle thy selfe with filthy and vnemely gestes and pastimes, also to singe and prate, and yet art ot wearie, neither seekest any labour: thou mayst with as litle aine sit in the temple, and heare the Preacher, whereby thou ruest God, and doost that which is acceptable unto him. What pouldest thou doe, if thou shouldest at his commaundement cary stones in quarries, or goe armed on pilgrimage to S. James: or some other laborious and painefull woxke shoule be enioyned hee? as hitherto it hath bene the custom among vs, when as we ould doe all thinges willingly, whatsoeuer was enioyned vs, when we were deceived with meere trifles, and most impudent elusions.

But so doth the Deuill blinde men: in whom also he woxketh satietie and lothing of the word of God, whereby it commeth to asse that they haue no regard, what a treasure the word of God is, but liue after a beastly sort, contemning all good doctrine. Let s therfore at the last delight in these things, thinking thus with ur selues, that as often as we reade or heare the word of God either priuately or publikely, of whom soever it be preached, we ap-ly our selues to the chiese seruice of God, which pleasest God receedingly well. After this sort thou mayst inflame thy selfe to ear, and God will inspire thee with his grace, that the seede of is word be not sowne in vaine, but may bring forth plentifull frute. For the word is never caught without frute, whensoeuer it hal be diligently and attentively heard, neither can it be, but that y eftsoones hearing it, thou shouldest become better. And albeit or the present time thou seest or seelest no frute, yet in processe of ime thou shalt plainly perceiue & seele it. But it were long here to rehearse the frutes proceeding of the woxde, nay, in deede they can not be all rehearsed.

These thinges I thought good to speake in stede of a preface before the wordes of S. Paule, to the intent to stirre vs by more diligently to heare the woxde of God: and surely there is great neede of such an exhortation daily in every sermon, which also is much pertinent unto the text which we presently haue in hande.

God maketh
the seede of his worde frutefull in the diligent hearers ther
of.

Exhortation to y hearing of Gods word very needfull.

For Paule in this place reprehendeth curious spirits, which g about by their owne wisdom to be maisters of the word of God and doe by and by falsely perswade them selues, that they know it well, and that they neede not any more the help of any teache but turne them selues to triffling and vaine langling, that the may bring forth some new thing, which the common sort may desirous to heare, presuming also to be Maisters of the Scrip ture and of all men, labouring to teache every one, and yet in understanding what they speake, or whereof they affirme. Fi this is a plague and calamitie that followeth, where the word God is not handled diligently and seriously; the learners bein wearie of hearing, and the teachers slothful in preaching. Here it commeth that so great companies of hearers slide away, an Churches become desolate. Of which calamitie vaine talkin spirits are the cause, which promise new thinges, that they ma winne the hartes of the multitude unto them selues, boasting th they are Maisters of the Scripture, and yet are alwayes su men, as are ignorant, forasmuch as they haue never tried, what is to teach other: which we doe nowe plainly see, and the wa of God is at hand ready to punish our contempt and unthankes nes. Therefore Paule beginneth his Epistle to his Disciple T mothe so, that he shold take heede, that such teachers doe not rise, which can talke many thinges of the lawe, bringing mai new questions and doctrines, what is to be done, how righteou nes is to be obtained, all which they do for ostentations sake, th they may be seene and praysed, and seeme to be more learned th other, and yet they never came so farre as to teach any certay thinge, or that which might be counted to be of any importanc but doe all thinges confusedly and out of good order. Such ba lers vse onely these wordes, that we must be honest; that god workes must be done, and God must be serued, &c. but they u derstand not the sense of those wordes, what they meane. And b ing as ked how we must doe good workes, nowe they teach th particular worke to be done, an other time an other worke, as, c

¶ they know not how to instruct any after a constant & certayn manner of teaching, much lesse can they say, this is, or in this doth the summe of Christian life consist, &c. And yet in the meane season those thinges must be counted very excellent that they teach, so much doe they boast, and promise almost golden mountaynes, as though they alone were Doctors that might not be gainsayd, ad controulers and Maisters of all other.

But he is to be counted an excellent Maister, and highly to be reemed, which teacheth the chiese point and whole summe of doctrine, to wit, how the hart and conscience, yea and the whole man must live. They know nothing of that thing, although they be very full of wordes, but doe altogether erre from the summe principall point of the lawe. In the meane season they intangle the mindes of þ hearers with such a confused company of words, that they know neither how to make a beginning nor end of speaking, and it is vncertaine whereunto that disordered companie of wordes doth serue, whereby no man can be made better, much lesse can he confirme his conscience thereby, as we hitherto haue ough and too much seene and tried in the Papacie amonge our teachers of dreames. What therefore is the summe of that doctrine, which is to be taught to the people? Sainct Paule auntereth:

The ende of the commaundement is loue out of a pure hart, and of a good conscience, and of faith vnfeyned.

This is that Helen, here thou hast the summe of Christian life the most excellently and fully comprehended, compendiously and briefly vttered; and which may be not briefly printed in thy memorie. Thou must endeavour, if thou wilt not erre from the lawe, to attaine to the chiese point therof (that thou mayst know what to be done and what to be left vndone) to haue loue proceeding out of a pure hart, from a good conscience, and faith vnfeyned. If þ loue be of this sort, þe is it right, other wise thou errest from the meaning of the whole law. Now these wordes are profound, to comprehend muche matter in them: Wherefore we must rightly expound them, that they may be the better understande, & that we may accustom our selues to Pauls maner of speech. First attributeth to loue the summe of the whole lawe, wherein it

What it is

wholly consisteth. And to loue is nothing els (as I thinke it knowne to all) but to fauour and embrace one from the hart, and to shewe and performe vnto him all the duties of friendship and good will. Nowe those iangling Doctorz also vse such wordes preaching and boasting many thinges of loue, but all by peccameale and particularly applyed to their owne trifles and follies. Euen as heretikes, wicked men, and vngracious wretches haue loue also, but that which consisteth onely amonge them selues, them that are of the same sorte with them, in the meane seaso they hate and persecute all good Christians, whom they woul willingly accuse of murder, if they could, &c. But this doth not y^e deserve to be called true loue, if I choose one or two, whose condicions like & please me, whom I do friendly & louingly embrace, no man beside them. It is called a particular loue, which proceedeth not out of a pure hart, but from an infected and filthie hart. For true loue floweth out of a pure hart, when I endeuour a God hath commaunded me, to poure forth my loue toward my neighbour, and to fauour all without difference, whether they be friendes or enemies, euen as our heauenly father him selfe doth who suffereth his Sunne to arise on the good and euill, and sendeth his raine to the thankfull and vnthankfull, maketh the earth to bring forth many good thinges, giueth money, riches, fruite, cattell, and many times especially vnto them that are the worste of all other. But from whence commeth þ doing of these thinges truely from pure loue, whereof his hart is most ful. This he poureth forth abundantly vpon all, omitting no man, whether he be good or euil, worthy or unworthy. And this is called true, diuine entire, and perfect loue, which loueth no one, neglecting the rest neither cutteth or divideth it selfe, but imbraceth all indifferently. The other is loue of cheeuers and Publicaners, if I loue him which is for my turne, and may doe me a pleasure, and which steemeth well of me, and despise him that contemneth me, and which is not on my side. For that doth not proceede from the hart which ought wholly to be good and pure, indifferently toward all but he that is endued with such loue, seeketh his owne thinges, is full of loue of him selfe, and not of loue toward others. Neither doth he loue any man, but for his owne commodities sake, regarding onely that, which may serue for his owne vse, seeking his owne profit by every man, and not the profit of his neighbour.

Loue flowing out of a pure hart.

Loue that proceedeth not from a pure hart of what sort it is.

þ be prayed and honoured, he laugheth, but being looked vpon þch lower countenaunce, or an unthankfull word being spoken þ to him, he stomacketh, curseth & findeth fault, so that all friendþly forthwith ceaseth. Contrariwise he that hath a pure hart must be so affected according to the worde of God, and his examþple, that he fauour every one, and bellow liberall and friendly be-þfis vpon them, euen as God hath faououred him, and of his di-þne loue hath bestowed benefis vpon him.

But some man will say, he is myne enemie, and doth euill vnto We must not e. Surely he is an enemie also to God, vnto whom he doth ma- therefore þmoe thinges displeasant vnto him, then he can doe either to me abstaine frō þthee. But therfore my loue ought not to be extinguished or doing well þasse, because he is euill, and altogether unworthy thereof. If he to any beþeuill, he shall at the last suffer punishment according to his cause he is þedes, but his wickednes must not ouercome me. But if I can our enemic þrough loue rebuke and admonish him, or pray for him, that he þlay amend, and escape punishment, I must do it readily: I must þot be an enemie vnto him, or doe euill vnto him in any wise. For þhat profit shold redound vnto me thereby? neither am I made þetter thereby, and I make him so much the worse. This there-þre ought to delight me, if I shall fauour him, and bestowe beneþfis vpon him, if so be that he will suffer them to be bestowed on þim, and pray vnto God for him, so I may enjoy peace, and haue þo trouble or contention with any man, and perhaps I may so þprofit him, that he wil change his life vnto the better, and amend. þOtherwise surely loue being diuided or separated, I haue more þitternes and sorrow by them, whom I hate, then I haue ioy and þprofit by them, whom I loue and keepe companie with. And this þsayd to trouble the fountaine or water, from whence pure loue þan not flowe. As it is certaine that the Jewes also did, against þhom Paule speaketh in this place: for they loued them onely þf whom they were loued, whereby they defiled the synceritie of þoue with mans affections, and therfore their hart could not be þpure.

But whereby is the hart purified? I aunswere, it can not be Wherby the þpurified by any other thing better, then by that soueraine purifie- hart is purifiþed. þwhich is the wrod of God. Receiue that into thy mind, and order þthy life according to the rule thereof, and thy hart is purified. As þin this place, see thou set the wrod before thee, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe, & follow that whiche it commaundeth and by and by thou shalt see whether it purgeth & clenseth what soeuer desire there is in thee of thyne owne profit, or whatsoeuer loue of thy selfe. For commaunding thee to loue thy neighbour, maketh exception of none, either friend, or foe. Albeit some mabe euill, and hath bene oftentimes injurious unto thee, notwithstanding he doth not therefore lose this name, that he is not to be called thy neighbour, but neuertheles remaineth thy fleshe an blood, and is comprehended in these wordes, thou shalt loue th neighbour &c. Therefore I say, if thou shalt consider him and I behauie thy self toward him, as the word teacheth thee, then is th hart made pure, and loue sincere, so that thou makest no false di-ference of persons, neither otherwise considerest him, then another, which is good, and one of thy familiars. In deede we ca-not deny this to be true, that an honest man is moze worthy to be loued, unto whome also every one doth moze willingly apply himselfe by nature, then unto the conuersation of wicked men whose familiaritie there is no good man that doth not abhorre howbeit flesh and blood is the cause that true and Christian loue is not among vs. For a Christian must not derive his loue from the person, as the world doth: as some yong man seeing a maid is in loue with her because of her sayenes and beautie, and a co-uetous man taketh his loue and desire of his money, a Lord or Prince of honour and power, &c. For all such loue is sayd to be seyned and proceeding not from whence it ought, cleaving to th good thinges, wherewith he seeth the person adornd, neithedoth it continue any longer, then that which he loueth, continu-eth, and as long as he may enjoy it.

True loue.

But true loue ought to be such as floweth out of a continual fountaine, and proceedeth from the bottom of the hart, as a fresh and continuall water alwayes sprynging forth, which can not be stopped, and is neuer dryed vp. This loue sayth after this sort: I loue thee, not for thy honestie or dishonestie, for I doe not derive my loue from thy honestie, as from a strange fountaine, but out of myne owne fountaine, that is, out of the word of God which is planted in my hart, which commaundeth me to loue my neighbour. From hence loue plentifully floweth, open to al, which haue neede thereof, watering all both friendes and foes: yea chieflie prepared and ready for foes, inasmuch as they haue moze neede cha

that they may by my meanes be brought to amendment, I praying for them, and doing according to my abilitie that which I am able, that they also leauing their euill wayes, may be deliue-red from sinnes, and the snare of the Deuill. And this is sayd to loue flowing from the hart, and not derived from without: for he that is endued with such loue, findeth no such thinge in him whom he loueth, from whence he should derive it: But because he is a Christian, because he layeth hold on the word, which is altogether pure by it selfe, by the power of it his hart also is made pure, and replenished with true loue. Whereupon he poureth forth the treasures of his loue toward euery man, neyther is he loued or turned awaye with the person of any, whether he be good or euill. Behold, thus shoulde they preach, which will rightly teach loue required of the lawe, whereof our bablers knowe nothing, neither haue any regard thereto, albeit they talke many thinges of the lawe, and dispute much of loue. They doe not see, or they doe not so much as once thinke, that loue must be such, that it flow out of the hart, & that the fountaine must be first pure and cleare. This never descendeth into their hart, although they rare, read, and teach many things of it. They are occupied with very vncertayne, and vnyprofitable cogitationes, yea rather with bad dreames.

Wherfore whatsoever is preached of workes and of a good life, that onely is well done which proceedeth from the worde of True good God, a pure hart, and a true faith. This thou mayst see in all workes. ates, how every one ought in his calling to doe the office inioyed him, and exercise the workes of loue. A seruaunt labouring, & inking no more then thus: My Lorde or Maister payeth me my wages, for which onely I serue him, otherwise I would not ouchsafe to looke vpon him, &c: hath not a pure hart, for he doth not serue, but for a peece of bread, or for his hyre, which being taken away, his seruice also ceaseth. But if he were a right & true How a good Christian, he would rather be thus affected: I will not therfore seruaunt true, because my Maister payeth me wages, because he is ho- ought to be est or vnhonest, &c: but therefore, because the wrod of God doth affected. thus speake vnto me: Seruaunts be obedient vnto your Mai- Ephes.6.5. ters as vnto Christ, &c. This service proceedeth of it owne accord out of the hart, which layeth hold on the word and greatly e-xemeth it, saying: I wil serue my Maister, and take my wages, but this shal be the chiefeſt thing, for which I do this ſeruice, tha I may ſerue my God and Lord Iesuſ Chrift, who hath layd thi condition and ſtate of a ſeruaunt vpon me, which I knowe doct please him in me, &c. Here thou ſeest a true worke proceeding ou of a pure hart. So also let a Lord or Prince, and they which haue the charge of gouerning þ common weale, thinke thus: God hath committed vnto me the office of a Magistrate, that I ſhould be ruler: now if I will haue regard vnto thi onely, that I may en ioy my dignitie, riches, and power, it is certaine that my hart is not pure, and yet in the meane ſeafon I doe the works of a ruler ſo, that the world can not complaine of me, neither Cesar, or the Lawyers can blame or finde fault with me by their lawes. Euer as neither a ſeruant ſeruing onely for wages can be reprehended of the world, whether he ſeeketh his owne thinges or not. Sure ly the wordē of God is not regarded in the office of a ruler that doth ſo, but his owne idoll, his owne glorie, money and power &c.

But if thi affection be in his hart: because I am occupied in thi offiſe, wherein God hath placed me, and the word commandeth him that beareth rule to be carefull, it is meete that I doe execute the ſame with all faithfulness and diligēce, to the praise and glo ry of my God: The execution of the office of ſuch a ruler endued with thi mind, commeth out of a pure and ſincere hart, where with both God and good men are delighted. There is mozeouer in him loue, which doth not cleaue to þ person or outward thiſgs, but beginneth in the hart, which the wordē of God maketh mani fest, which forasmuch as it is pure & cleane, doth alſo purifie the hart. And ſo his gouernment and works are the meere ſeruices of God, & moſt acceptable ſacrifices vnto him, ſeeing that they are done onely according to the word of God, and for God his ſake.
But our talkers can not teach thiſ, neither are able to iudge of it, only crying out when they teach best of all, that we muſt be ho nest. They bring a certaine iuridicall ſermon out of the lawes of men, as Cesar and his Clerkes teach. But how the hart is pu rifed, they haue neuer ſo much as vnderſtoode or thought any thing thereof, or how loue is to be derived to all ſtates and condi tions of men according to the word of God.

Thus muſt thou ſay mozeouer euē in ſpiritual offiſes & ſtates also: If I or any other ſhall preache to get ſome good benefice, whereas otherwiſe I would eaſily ceaſe from doing thiſ offiſe;

How þ hart of a godly ought to be affected.

may preache the Gospell, but my hart is not pure, but most lainly polluted. Therefore although I doe longe and much affyme, that it is a good wozke and a weighty office, yet doe I not erforme it aright, sozasmuch as I doe it not from the hart. But certonly it is rightly done when the hart hath this affection: albeit I must get my liuing thereby, yet this ought not to be the ziefe ende thereof, but because God hath called me unto it, and ath committed it unto me diligently to be done, it remaineth, that I doe with all diligence labour therein to the glory of God, nd saluation of soules, which I doe otherwise also for the loue of the word, willingly and from my hart. Hereby I seeke neyther me or friendship, nor honours, nor thankefulnes of men, but my wozkes come from the hart, which I first doe, before I obtayne ny honour, glorie, rewarde, money, or fauour, although if yose come and followe, I may haue and receiuie them without me.

How ſt hart of a true Preacher & Minister
ought to be affected.

Lo, thus the word is the cause, fountayne, ground, fountayne nd springe of loue comming out of the hart, & of all good works that please God, which he can by no meanes away with, if the hart be not pure before: for neither are wozkes acceptable to men, which are done without the hart by diſſimulation. Nowe if Cesar and men require the hart, although they can not ſee it, of owe muſche greater estimation is that hart before God, which oeth all thinges for the wordes ſake? Therefore he alſo ſufferith his word to be preacheſ, that we may ordere all our life ac-ording to the preſcription thereof. And let not vs ſuffer our elues to be hindered, frayed from it, or diſcouraged with the lect̄ hinderance of any thinge, although for it we ſhall ſuffer all kinde of loſſes, unthankefulnes, contempt, &c: but let vs ſeake and goe through all brunts with a boulde and manly couage, and ſay thus: we beganne nothinge for any mans ſake, neither will we leauē of any thinge because of any man, but that we may doe that which is acceptable to God, we will goe on ſtil, howſoever thinges fall out with vs. They which doe thus, become men excellent and moſt highly to be eſteemed, who are eady to doe all duties, and ſerue God with all readines of minde nd loue not feyned. For the fountaine and ſpringe is good, not eriued and brought in from without.

These thinges I thought good briefly to ſpeake of the firſt part. howe the hart is purifid by the worde alone, and not as t Nunkes haue dreameid, by a figh taken vpon them against eu cogitations, & by feyning of good thoughts. For what though soever thou shalt feyne, the hart shal remain uncleane, if the wo of God be not in it, although it pretende a great shewe of a god lise, as Paule witnesseth. But this purenes, wherof he speakeit doth extend farther then outward & corporal purenes doth, whi the Jewes did vse, eating & drynking their hands being oftenw shed, which our religious men also vse in their fasting, diuersi of apparel, orders and rites, &c: soz this is called purenes of t spirit, which we then haue, when being instructed by the word God, we know thereby how he is to be serued in every state & ci ling, and endeouour to frame our liues according thereunto.

part.

A good and quiet con science to ward men.

Nowe followeth the seconde parte concerning a good consi ence, whereof also we must intreate, to wit, that loue must con form such a hart, as hath a ioyful & quiet conscience, both towa God, and also toward men. Toward men so, as Paule glorieth him selfe, that he liued so, that he offended no man, troubled man, was an euill example and burden to no man, but all that d see and heare him, must needes witnes, that he indifferently se ued all, helped all, counselled all, a deit friendly and gently wi all. Such a conscience Moses also glorieth of against þ sedition Numb. 16: Thou knowest that I haue not taken so much as a asse from them, neither haue I hurt any of them. And Jerem chap. 18: Remember, O Lorde, how that I stood before thee speake good for them, and to turne away thy wrath from them.
 Likewise doth Samuel 1. King. 12: I haue walked before yo from my childhood vnto this day: beholde here I am, beare re cord of me before the Lord, & before his anointed: whose ox haue I taken? or whose asse haue I taken? whome haue I don wrong to? whom haue I hurt? or of whose hand haue I receiue any brybe? and so forth as followeth in the same place. Such bo sting & glory every Christian must attaine vnto, that he do so liu toward every man, and so exercise and shew his loue, that no ma can worthely complaine any whit of him, whereby he shal troubl or dismay his conscience, but that all that wil confes þ truth, mai be enforced to say, that he hath so liued, þ he hath bin an exempl to every man of living wel, which will onely but follow him. And this is called a good cōscience before men, or against þ complaint as reprehensions of men. And albeit such a conscience is not able to stand before the judgement of God, nor noz any purenes of the hart in the outward life and works of loue (we continuing in sinning often times before God): yet we must attaine unto such a hart, that we may comfort our selues before him also, and say: as God hath bidden and commaunded to be done, therfore I do with a pure hart and a good conscience, neither would I willingly doe otherwise, neither of purpose hurt or trouble any man, he whatsoeuer I say and doe, that is willed and commaunded of god. Let no Christian suffer such a confidence to be wrested from him, that he may boast him selfe by the worde of God against the hole world. For he that hath no regard how he leadeth his life, that he may stoppe the mouthes of all blamers and accusers, and eare him selfe before all, and testifie that he hath lived, spoken, and done well, he I say is not yet a Christian, hauing not in himselfe a pure hart and loue. For we wil not presume of the doctrine of faith, as though that being had, every man may doe what he list, whether it be profitable or vnproufitable to his neighbour, that we must in no case doe. Otherwise that doctrine should haue ge name to giue licence and free libertie for every one to doe what he will. But we must so behaue our selues, that we may obaine loue out of a pure hart and a good conscience, that no man may accuse vs of any crime.

And although these thinges be spoken of our life and works, and a Christian is an other maner of man before God, as we shall heare, yet we must earnestly endeavour our selues in this albow, that we may be without blame before God. And when we shall not attayne thereunto, we must flie to prayer, and say before God and men: forgiue vs our trespasses, &c: that at the east wise, our life may remayne without blame, and we may obaine a good conscience before me. And if this can not be brought to passe by perfect loue and purenes of the hart, yet let it be done by humilitie, that we may praye for, and desire of all men pardon of our offences, when as we haue not purely and perfectly done our dutie, or are not able to doe it, so that thy neighbour may be enforced to say, albeit thou hast greatly hurt me, or hast not done thy dutie toward me, as it was meete, yet forasmuch as thou humblest thy selfe, I will willingly forgiue thee, and take it in the best parte. And for this humilities sake

must doe
when we fayle in our dutie toward our neighbour.

I say that thou art a good man, which doost not stande obstinately, as though thou wouldest advisedly and of purpose offend against me; but doost turne thy selfe vnto loue. Therefore thise is as yet sayde to be without blame, which albeit it was subject to reprehension, is with humilitie couered, and reforme that no man can worthely complayne thereof. Thus the law should be expounded and handeled, that both loue toward euery man may rightly proceede out of a pure hart for God his sake and the conscience may stande before the world. And this ought to haue bene practised of those bayne talkers in their Sermons their colde trifles and vaine follies being neglected and left. But that all these thinges may stande and be of force before God also, there yet remaineth one thinge, which pertaineth hereunto which is that that followeth.

And of faith vnfeyned.

For as I haue sayde, albeit I haue a good conscience before men, and doe exercise loue out of a pure hart, yet the olde Adam that is, flesh and blood remaine in me subiect to sinnes, whereto it commeth to passe that I am not altogether holy and pure. As Paule sayth Gal. 5: The flesh lusteth against the spirit, &c. And Rom. 7. he affirmeth that he must fight a dailie fight against him self, because he can not do that which is good, & yet he would willingly do it. The spirit in deed would very willingly liue purly & perfectly according to the worde of God, but the rebellion flesh resisteth the desire thereof, assailing vs with many and great tentations, that we shoulde seeke honour, wealth, riches, pleasure & shoulde become slothful & negligent in our state & duty. So theremaineth a continual fight in vs, because of the vnpurenes of our person, wherein there is not yet sincere purenes, nor a good conscience & perfect loue, unles there be perhaps somewhat before men. But before God many thinges are found lacking in vs, many things are worthy of blame, although all things be perfect before men. For examples sake; although David can obtaine the confidence before men, that he can be reprehended of no man, and the holy Prophets Esay, Jeremie, &c: do glory & are sure, what soever they haue done according to their dutie, is right and well done, seeing it is the word and commaundement of God, wherefore they haue exercised them selues with a pure hart & a good conscience, yet can they not stande by this confidence before the iudgement

Our olde Adam doth hinder vs that we can not attaine to perfect purity and holines.

Although we haue a good conscience, and do exercise loue out of a pure hart before men, yet the same can not stand before God.

rent of God, but are compelled to say: if we shold striue with the iudgement, then no man shall haue so good a conscience or spure a hart, which doth not dread thy iudgement, and acknowlege him selfe to be worthy of reprehension and blame. For God hath reserued that prerogative unto him selfe, that he may contred in iudgement with every one, albeit he be holy, and accuse hym of deadly sinne: neither is there any so holy, whom he may let iudge and condemne as worthy of destruction. Wherefore alough both the hart be pure & the conscience good before men, yet must thou endeouour to attaine unto this also, that the same may be likewise good before God, that he may not find fault with them, but that they may be safe and quiet from his iudgement, as they are before men.

Hereunto now pertayneth the thirde parte, that is faith. And The third is is the principall part and chiefe precept, contayning all the part. ist in it, that we may knowe, that where loue is not yet perfect, the hart not sufficiently pure, and the conscience not quiet, and God doth yet finde some thinge which is worthy blame, where the woorlde can finde fault with nothinge; faith must moreouer come, and such a faith, which is not fayned, and defiled with infidencie of a mans owne holines. For wheresoeuer this is not, there the hart is never purified before God, neither shall the conscience be able to stande, if they be examined by severer iudgement, and exact censure. Men indeede shall not iustly blame me, beit I glory, that I haue serued them by preaching, helping, ouerning, and by doing the dutie of an overseer or ruler, to all faithfulness. And if I haue done any thing more or lesse then I ought, I am sorie at my hart, for I would very willingly haue done all thinges that I ought. Wherefore I am quiet & ready excused, neither haue they any more, which they may ghetly require of me, but are enforced to acquire and discharge me. But here I must arrayne unto this also, that my hart be sure, and my conscience so good before God, that he may not by ny meanes accuse and condemne me. Howbeit we finde not this our selues, although we may glorie somewhat thereof before the woorlde. I must therefore obtaine some other thing wherunto I may trust, if I shall come into perill, and within the throwing of the dart, as it is commonly sayd, and I must say to my fearful and terrifid conscience, I haue done that which I haue bene able; and who knoweth how often I haue done lesse then I ought for I coulde not see and marke all thinges, as David also say Psal. 19: VVho can vnderstand his faltes? Therefore I can haue no foundation of trust vpon my owne holines and purenes. We I haue the word, so liue, loue, and haue a good conscience, whiche is pure and holy. But this I want, that I can not conclude, that that is in my hart, neither doe I finde so good a conscience in me as the lawe requireth of me: For there is no man liuing in the earth, which can say this truely, I knowe that I haue done a thinges, and that I doe owe nothinge before God. But the mo holynes must say thus: I haue done surely according to my ab ilitie that which I haue bene able, but I haue offended much of sinner then I knowe. Wherefore our owne conscience doth witnes against vs; accusing and conuincing vs, although be fore the worlde we are most free from reprehension or blame.

For it must followe the woyde which sayth: this thou shouldest haue done, this thou shouldest haue left vndone. It can not uoyde the iudgement of this, nor auiswerte to the accusacio thereof, but is at the least wise enforced to stande in an incer taintie, being wholly wrapped in douting. But if it dout, then i t by and by conuinced: for it standeth not before God, but fliet and trembleth.

and a good conscience as can stand before God.

Wherefore the principal part of our doctrine must here help vs, to wit, that our Lord Iesus Christ being sent of the father, di comes into the world and hath suffered and died for vs. Whereby he hath reconciled the good will and fauour of the father to vs his wrath being appeased, and doth nowe sitte at the right hand of the father, hauing regarde of vs as our Sauour, and as continuall Mediator and Intercessour for vs, making interces sion for vs, as for them which can not haue and obtaine of then selues such purenes and a good conscience. Therefore by hi helpe and benefite we may saye before God: although I am not pure, neyther haue a good conscience, yet I cleave to him by faith, which hath perfect purenes and a good conscience, which he gageth for me, or rather which he giueth vnto me. For he alone is he, of whome we reade written, as Peter, and Es aias chapt. 53 saye: vwho did no sinne; neyther was there guil founde in his mouthe. And this prayse belongeth onely vnto him, neyther hath he any neede to praye, forgive vs our deutes, neither ncher of that article of the Creede, I beleue the forgiuenes of sines, &c: but he is free and quiet in perpetuall, pure and perfect righeteousnes and purenes, vnto whose charge none can lay any thig, nor accuse his conscience of any crime, not man, not the duell, no not God hymselfe: for he hymselfe is God, who himselfe can not accuse himselfe.

And this is called faith neither coloured nor fained, which the conscience striuing and trembling, dareth come forth in the sight of God, and say: Almighty God, I am innocent before the wold and quiet in minde, so that noe man can lay any thing to my charge, or synde fault with me. For albeit I haue not done a thing, yet I aske pardō of euerie one, that he will forgiue me for God his sake, euē as I againe forgiue all. By this meanes I haue cut of the complaints of all, who haue no more whiche they my rightly lay against me. But before thee I must lay aside this trust and confidence, and must wholy acknowledge the guil-ties of innumerable synnes, and say as David sayd Psal. 143: Lord enter not into iudgement with thy seruaunt: for in thy sight shall no man liuing be iustified. Wherefore I can not contend vth thee, if thou requirest an account of my life. But I appeale to the iudgement seat to the mercy seat, I do easily suffer, that I have dealt with according to law & right before the iudgement seat the wold, and I will willingly answere, and will do what I am able: Howbeit before thee I will not come into iudgement, but I desire grace, whiche I take holde of on euerie side. For thus Scripture teacheth me, that God hath set two seates before men: the one a iudgement seat, for them whiche are yet secure and intractable, & acknowledge not their sinnes, neither wil confess ad acknowledge them: the other a mercy seate, for miserable fearfull consciences, whiche feele their sinnes, dread the iudge-ment of God, and do earnestly make request for grace. And this mercy seat is Christ hymselfe, as Paul witnesseth Rom. 3. whom God hath set forth vnto vs, that we might haue refuge vnto him, being not able to stand before God by our owne power. Unto me I wil applie my selfe, if I haue done or do lesse then is meete: ad how great purenes and goodness soever my heart and conscience haue before men, I will haue it here to be altogither noting, and hidden, and coueted as it were with a vaut, yea with sayze heauen, whiche may mightely defend it, whiche is called grace and remissiō of synnes. Under the defence thereof my hea and conscience must crepe, and remayne safe and quiet. For he commaunded his Apostles to preach & publish, that throug his name all that beleue in him, shal receiue remission of synne.

Againe, He that shall beleue and be baptized, shalbe sauē.
And Joh. 3. he saith: God so loued the world, that he hath giue his onely begotten Sonne; that who soeuer beleueueth in him should not perish, but haue eulasting life. Therefore God hath set forth the mercy seat vnto vs, whereunto he leadeth vs from the iudgement seat. Let vs leauē other before the iudgē seat, namely those proud holy ones, contemners and persecuter of the word of God, where they shall heare sentence according their deedes. We will suffer these to abyde in their circle, vntil they haue humbled themselues: but we will not abyde in thi circle, but will depart from it as farre as we shalbe able, into th circle of the mercy seat, vnto which we do appeale. Neithe haue we inuented this of our owne braine, but it is the word of God himselfe, which threatneth horriblie iudgement to them which come with their owne holines, and trussting thereunto, do hope that they shalbe able to stand before God the iudge, negli cting the mercy seat of Christ. For the sentence standeth, that they shalbe set before the iudgement seat, as Christ saith Joh.: He that beleueueth not is condemned alreadie, because he hat not beleueed in the name of that onely begotten Sonne of God.
He that beleueueth in him is not condemned, that is, shall not come to the iudgement seat, but to the mercy seat, where there is no wrath or rigour, but grace & forgiuenes of synnes, all thinge being remitted which be not pure, yea being blotted out and con sumed, as a droppe of water is consumed of the heat of the sunne. For where the mercy seat reigneth, there is nothing els but meere forgiuenes and remission of synnes.

This therefore being knowne, we must exactly understand the difference betweene the Lawe and the Gospel, whereof we often The office of teach. The lawe draweth vs to the iudgement seat, requiring the Lawe. vs integrarie of life, loue out of a pure heart & a good conscience it maketh vs also to exercise our selues therein, and must goe no further. But when it shall come and accuse thee, and will reason with thee, and haue those things to be performed which it requi reteth, then shalt thou be greatly troubled. For albeit thou hast done

ine them, yet art thou not able to stand before God, before whose judgement seat, many thinges are yet found wanting in thee, which shold haue bin done of thee, and thou hast left them undone, neither are they knowne unto thy selfe. Whither then wilt thou turne thee? Here the Lawe urgeth thee by all meanes, and thine owne conscience being witnes, accuseth thee, requiring the sentence of the iudge against thee. Then must thou despeire, there is no counsell or helpe to be had, except thou knowest to flie from the judgement seat to the mercy seat, as for example: Admit some iishop die in his owne holines, who while he liued was as it seemed, of a good life, and acknowledged Christ no otherwise then truell iudge (as it hath bin hitherto preached of him, neither shal he bin otherwise set forth, as he is also wont to be unto such, out of his owne nature, for in deede he is most gracious and committable, but because they esteeme him for no other in their heart) hold this man is a hinderance unto himselfe, that he can not obtaine any grace. For he knoweth no difference of the iudgement seat and the mercy seat, yea he is altogether ignoraunt, whether there be a mercy seat, from which he so erreth, and must be bound to the iudgement seate.

But we teach thus, that Christ is so to be learned and considered, that we be most certainly persuaded that he sitteth before How Christ must be learned and considered of.

desirable and trembling consciences, that beleue in him, not as an angrie iudge, which commaundeth forthwith to carie violent them that be gilty unto punishment, but as a gentle, louing, and comfortable Mediator, betweene my fearefull conscience and God, which sayth unto me: If thou be a sinner, and astonied, and the deuell laboureth to drawe thee to the judgement seat, then see that thou flie unto me, and feare no wrath or anger. Wherefore? Euen because I sit here, that, if thou beleue in me, I may make intercession for thee to my father, that no anger and severitie may hurt thee: for all anger and punishment shalbe sooner layde vpon me, then be boynce of thee. Howbeit that can not be: for he is the onely beloved sonne, in whom all grace and louour dwelleth, whom as often as the father doth behold, he can not but replenish both heauen and earth with grace and favour, and forget all wrath and displeasure. And what soever he shall aske of his father, that he shall forthwith obtaine without repulse or deniall. So by faith we are made wholy blessed and safe, subiect no more to any damnation, yet not for our owne h lmes and purenes, but for Chistes sake, to whom we cleave i faith as to our mercy seate, being assuredly perswaded, that wi him there remaineth no anger, but meere loue, and pardon a forgiuenes of synnes. Thus the heart is purified before Go and the conscience made good and quiet, not in respect had mine owne purenes or life led before the world, but by trust a confidence of that excellent treasure, which my heart apprehe deth, which is vnto me in stede of a pledge and fulnes, when before God I am not able to pape.

We must especially take heed, that our faith be not false or seyned.

But herein the whole force of the matter consisteth, that w do againe and againe take heede, that our faith be not false, or Paul speaketh, fained. For if this erre, and deceiue vs, all thing deceiue vs. For there haue bin many in all ages, as there be al at this day, which can speake many thinges of faith, and wil maisters not onely of the law, but even of the Gospell also. W say the same that we do, that faith performeth & doth all thing but that the Law and good workes are also to be ioyned vnto and that otherwise, if these be not added, faith availeth nothin In whiche words they mixe & mingle togither our life & woyke and Christ. But this is not purely and syncerely to haue saug faith, but to haue coloured, defiled and corrupted faith, so that can no more be called faith, but a feined colour & counterfeitt of faith, the trust and confidence of the heart standing not pure toward Christ, as the onely mercy seate, but being ground vpon our one holines, as being able to stand before the iudgen seat. Wherefore doing thus, we are most rightly cast of besi God, and condemned vnto destruction whereof we are most w thie. For if faith must be pure and boyd of all counterfecting a faining, then these two thinges, Christ and my workes must rightly discerned and seuered one from the other. For this plaine euен to him that is blinde, that Christ and his workes not my life and my workes, but are separated from the Law a from the workes of all men, yea and that by a greater distaunce then man is vnlke or differeth from man. For neither can I say that I and Cesar or the Bishop of Rome are the same thin yet I am much neerer and liker vnto either of them, then a mi call man and a sinner is vnto Christ the Lord, whoe is not on a pure and holy man, free from all spot and blot, but is moreoveron

Ed also. Therefore let the Lawe and the purenes of thy heart, y^e and thy good conscience auasle in earth onely toward men: But where the mercy seat is, to wit at the right hand of the father, and the Mediator betweene thee & God, thither no mans wrakes & merits ought to haue accele, much lesse be they there any force or value. Wherefore Christ is purely to be separat^e from all my life, deedes and woxkes, and we must without excution conclude, that he is an other thing then our life led before men with a pure heart and a good conscience; albeit it be led even perfectly and without blame. For it being ypresented before eos, and by the lawe brought to the iudgement seat, I am condunned and lost. But Christ is the mercy seat, and all that cleauet vnto him by faith, can not be condemned and judged. So the iudgement seat togither with the lawe and all my life goe into one part: but my faith must flie and lep farre vnto an other part, ad ioyne it selfe vnto him which is pure, and hath no synne, of whom the Scripture speaketh: he that beleuueth in him shal not be confounded. Because he is present in the sight of the father, ad maketh intercession for me. Moreouer he giueth me his owne purenes and holines, that being clothed and adorned therewith, I may be able to stand before God, and all wrath and displeasure may be taken away, in steede whereof I may enioy reuer loue and fauour.

Loe, thus faith remaineth pure and free from counterfeting, th^t it resteth not vpon my woxkes, that because of them it shoulde lhoue God to be gentle and fauourable vnto me, as a false and sined faith doth; which mingleth togither mans merits and the face of God, and althoough it hold the wordes of Christ, yet hath the confidence and trust of the heart reposeth in it selfe, so, that is certaine, that it is onely a colour which can not long continue. For the matter commeth at the last to this point, that belieuing that God is fauourable vnto thee because of thy life led without fault or blame, thou must despeire and say: who knoweth hat I haue done? whereby am I certaine that I haue neglect^e nothing through carelesnes, or that nothing is wanting in e? In this douffulness of minde the sondation faileth, slideing way vnder thee like sand moued or stirred, and so faith is of a force or value at all. Wherefore it is not unfitly called fained or painted faith, through whiche one seyth as it were through a lattis or painted glasse , through which the thinge that is representeth the colour of the glasse , and yet is not in deed that colour . So they also beleue that that affection is in that he vouchsaueh to regard our workes and merits . Wi they paint forth according to their owne opinion and dmean which are biterly false , rash and vnadvised . And so iudging & all things according to them , they see only as it were tho a lattis or painted glasse . But so onely thou shalt behold with pure and cleere eyes , if thou do wel separate the iudgen seat and the mercy seat one from the other ; that heauen with starres thereof may remaine pure to grace & remission of sy obtained by the Mediatour , where Christ reigneth with workes , and the earth also with her trees and herbes , whi we must be referred with our workes . The matter I say be brought of vs to that passe , if we will stand with a right an unfained faith before God ; that we do purely distinguish seuer our selues , our life , and Christ or the mercy seat : an that will not do this , but presenteth himselfe before the iu ment seat with a bold courage , shall feele the reward of his i nes . I my selfe haue bin in that daunger , and as it were a m bertie was giuen me to attaine to the mercy seat , and now I enforced to say , that albeit I haue liued very well before under the iudgement seat , to be punished according to the

Now he that knew this well , shoule be a man of a rese

th^es, God wilbe fauourable vnto thee, and they make the iudgement seat of the mercy seat ; and the mercy seat of the iudgement seat, which by no meanes can be, for the iudgement seat shall remaine, &c. Wherefore separate these two one from the other as faire as thou shalt be able, that they come not together, namely, th^e life and holines togither with the iudgement seat into one pice, which may driu^e & enforc^e thee to haue a good conscience, and to lead an upright life before men. But offer thy synnes to th^e mercy seate to be transferred into an other place, where God louingly receiuing thee, will embrace thee as a beloued sonne, and will neuer remember moze any wrath or synnes. If such doctrine of faith were set forth vnto men, then shoulde it be excellently well done, and all other thinges shoulde follow of their olne accord, as purenes of heart and goodnes of conscience, through right and perfect loue. For who soever is by faith quiet in his heart, and assured that he hath God fauourable vnto him, who is not angry with him, albeit he hath deserued his wrath divers wayes, he doth all thinges with a glad and cherefull ride. Moreover he liuereth so also toward men, that he is louing & beneficiall toward all, although they be not woxthie of loue. He is quiet toward God through Christ the Mediatour, who wil not thow him downe hedlong into hell, but doth louingly scour him, and listeth him vp into heauē. And this is the chiese p^tnes, and p^rincipall point and foundation of our saluation. Afterwardes he doth in his life shew himselfe dutysfull also toward his neighbour, doing all the best thinges he is able vnto hym, what soever his state or dutie commandeth or requireth. And when he doth lesse then is meete, he asketh pardon of his negligence before God and men, so that there is left occasion neither to him, nor to the world afterward to rebuke him, power so to deuoure him is taken from hell, & to teare him in peeces, f^r m the deuell. Thus a man is saide to be in all things perfect, How we be-ward men by loue, and toward God not by the lawe, but by come per-christ, whom he apprehendeth by his faith, as the mercy seat: fect. Which gageth his holines for the beleeuers, or rather giueth i o them, so, that in him they haue all thinges that are necessaria to salvation.

Now this is right and pure doctrine, which shoulde be exercis^b, and taught vnto men distinctly, that they might know how they may be able to stand both before God and men, that sa and loue be not mingled togither, or life referred both to G and men. This ought to haue bin perfourmed of those glorio and arrogant teachers, seeing that they wilbe counted maister of the law, that the difference of the law and faith might be w structed and trained vp in the doctrine of workes, and led on to the lawe and our owne workes. To these may be added o nature also, verie prone and ready by it selfe hereunto, and no brought into a custome, whereby it is confirmed, and in con nuance of time turneth the heart also into exercise and vse, that we can not abstaine, nor thinke otherwise, but, that G wilbe fauourable vnto vs, which haue done so great workes, a haue led our life so without blame or fault. Therefore we in striue against both our nature & custome. For surely it is a ve hard thing to thinke or be perswaded otherwise, and so purely put a difference betweene faith and loue, the filth still hangi vpon vs and cleaving vnto vs, albeit we be now in faith, so th our heart can scarce rule it selfe, that it say not: so long th haue I taught the Gospele, so haue I liued, such great work haue I done, &c. And we would very willingly haue God to gard our life, and turne his mercy seat for our cause into a judi ment seat. Thou mayst vse this boasting toward men, I ha done well to all as I haue bin able, and if any thing be wantin I as yet wil endeavour to make a recompense. But if thou be in ded to go vnto God, I aduise thee to ceasse from such arroga boasting, and thinke to appeale from iudgement to grace.

ding & writing, so that I may wel seeme to be ryd of this wick opinion. Notwithstanding I yet now and then feele the same c

Some thing with my selfe, because of which he shold for my hol-committ my selfe with all confidence to meere grace, which I ould doe: for we ought to flie onely to the mercie seate, for as-such as God hath set it before vs for a sanctuarie, which must be the refuge of all them that shalbe saued. Wherefore it is not to be merueled at, if it be grieuous vnto others, so purely to apprehend and lay holde of faith: but especially to such as be yet endered and entangled of deuelish preachers, of whom Paul teakech, which crie out against the doctrine of faith, and in else wordes vrg the workes of the Lawe. Doe this and thou ements, &c. Which in deede are true and right, if thou didst so rightly understand them. Declare vnto me the true mea-ing of these wordes, otherwise I know sufficienly already, that ought to be righteous and keepe the commaundements. But ow must I attaine hereunto? or what is it to be righteous? If you saiest that it is, to haue a good conscience and a pure heart, nd to doe all thinges, that Ged hath commaunded: Well, be it , but heare ye then, goe to, perforne me that, or at least shew me, that dareth say that he hath perfourmed it. For thou shalte ot yet so purifie my heart and conscience with thy doctrine, that God can not accuse and condemne me. But now the Lawe (as hath bin sufficienly declared) requireth such a heart, as hath good conscience before God. How therefore do we obtaine such conscience? This is the question and the cause, whereof the onrouersie is. Truly it commeth not hereof, because thou tea- How we ob-

Christ, in whom it most fully obtaineth all thinges which the Lawe requireth. So at length all thinges are brought to passe n me hauing a good conscience, inasmuch as I am now made ighteous and iustified before God. For although that many hings be as yet found wanting in me, yet he standeth on my side, who hath so much righteousness, as wherewith he is able to sup-

True doctrin concerning Christian righteousnes

Howbeit I ſhould haue bin thus taught of thee, as Paul com monly teacheth, that righteousnes muſt proceede from faith & ſayned, and before all thinges the mercy ſeate muſt be layd he of, from whence all thinges that are wanting in vs are to be
ken. And ſo in deede theſe wordes, keepe the commaundemen of God, are rightly vnderſtood. For the lawe requireth per fect righteousnes in thee, being of force as well before God before men: thou hauing obtained this, goe forth into the co panie and assembly of men, and exercise loue, and doe go workeſ. By this order and meanes ſomething is brought passe, and ſuch ſayinges of the Scripture are fulfilled. For man doth that whiche the lawe requireth, firſt before God, n by his owne ſtrength or vertues, but by Chrift, without who we can doe nothing before God, and ſecondly by his owne en nour before men. And he is now perfectly righteous, inwardly by faith in Chrift, and outwardly alſo by his workeſ, yet

How a Christian is perfectly righteous.

the there is place amōg men for mutuall pardoning of offences. Wherefore the righteousnes of Christians doth much more consist in forgiueing , then in their owne workes . Those vaine practis doe peruerit the order of this doctrine , and without preacing of forgiuenes , doe teache that workes onely are to be rged.

Loe , thus Sainct Paul reprehendeth the errour and ignorance of them , which speake much of the lawe , and repeate it in dily sermons , and yet they themselues doe not understand or ^{Vaine tea-} ^{chers.} lew the waye , how the lawe must be fulfilled , knowing noting so wel as to babble forth and often to repeate these wordes , tat the lawe , the commaundements are to be kept , if thou wilt be saued , good workes must be done , &c. As they do at this daye in all bookees with such confusson of wordes , and in all their sermons utter nothing els , then such vaine babbling , which they emselves understand not . But they never saye wordes of those inges whereof Paul here speaketh , namely of the summe of christian doctrine , how loue must flowe out of a pure heart , a god conscience , and faith unsayned , they say no moxe , but keepe the commaundements . They leueling at the true marke do neer hit it : wherefore they corrupt and fulfisse all thinges , loue , the hart , the conscience &c. For the head of the fountaine is waning , that is , sincere sayth , which if it be not right and sound , all thinges must needes be corrupt , which shall flow and pro-cede from it . And what soeuer they teach , it is a conceit of their owne imagination , and like to delusions , not unlike also to those inges , that are seene through a lattis or glasse , which resem-le the colour of the cleere glasse , and yet in deede are not of that colour . They thinke that God will regard them , when they liue so before men , as it seemeth good to their obscure opi-ton . But if God were of that opinion , he might then haue well kept still Christ and the Gospell . For what neede or necestie shoud moue him , to send Christ from heauen , who shoud urchase that vnto vs with his precious blood , which we ourelues haue before with vs ? He surely shoud be the foolishest of all men , which shoud poure forth a precious treasure , which no man needeth .

Thus thou seest how these men teach their owne dreames , whereof they themselves know or haue tried no certainty , neither doe any thing els but fill men with errorrs ; being not al to declare , how that which they teach is to be attained vnto They draw men vnto woxkes , whereby they confirme thi in their olde nature and custome , out of which they were to drawen. These truly are grieuous and odious men , and not i worshely verie sharply accused and reprehended of Paul : a it appeareth that they were of no small authortie and estima tion , seeing that he pronounceth of them , that they were call and would be counted doctours of the Lawe , and farre greater and worshier then the Apostles themselues.

Wherfore we must endeavour to lay vp and print this t euin in the bottom of our heart : for it is excellently well ope red , and is pure and perfect doctrine , teaching how we must righteous before God and men , as the Lawe requireth , if these three maye be as it were conioined in vs , namely , a pu heart , a good conscience , and sayth unsayned : and that our l may flow out of all these , and be occupied and led in them : th

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, OF THE QVESTION OF THE PHARISEES, AND aunswere of Christ concerning giuing tribute to Cesar.

Matth. 22.

- Verse 15. Hen went the Pharisees, & tooke counsell howe they might tangle him in talke.
16. And they sent vnto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying: Maister, we know that thou art true, and teacheſt the waye of God truly, neither careſt for any man: for thou conſiderest not the persone of men.
17. Tell vs therefore, how thinkest thou? Is it lawfull to giue tribute vnto Cesar or not?
18. But Iesus perceyued their wickednes and ſaid: Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?
19. Shew me the tribute mony. And they brought him a penie.
20. And he ſaid vnto them: Whose is this image and superscription?
21. They ſaid vnto him, Cesars, Then ſaid he vnto them: Giue therefore to Cesar the thinges which are Cesars, and giue vnto God, thofe thinges which are Gods.
22. And when they heard it, they merueiled, and left him, and went their waye.

Mans wise-dom & reason is not able to preuaile against the wisdom
of God.

N this text is set forth vnto vs, how subtil reasand mans wisedome agree with the wisedome of God, and how foully reason stumblyeth, when strineth to be euuen most subtil and wise, as it he falleth out with the Pharisées, who notwithstanding dind were the best and most wise of the Jewes, which euuen this their subtiltie they declare: neuertheles their wisedome here prooued to be foolishnes. They could blame Christ neith for his preaching nor for his workes, and yet would they wi-lingly haue had occasion to put him to death, wherefore they thought to set vpon him most craftely and wiley, propounding a subtil question vnto him, the subtiltie whereof was such, th mans reason was not able to comprehend it, then which also subtiller could not be inuented: and thus they speake vnto him: Maister, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God truly; neither carest for any man: for thou considere not the persone of men. Tell vs therefore, how thinkest thou Is it lawfull to giue tribute vnto Cesar or not. Here thinke they we shal entrappe him. For he shalbe compelled to awis whether tribute is either to be giuen, or not to be giuen. If he affirme tha it is to be giuen, we haue ouer come him: but if he denie that it is to be giuen, then is he giltie of death. Whereas they say, Maister, they will thereby moue him, and as it were constraine him to awis whether the truth. But whereas they say, We know tha thou art true, they do thereby put him in minde of his duty. Whither therefore should Christ turne himselfe? for there seemeth to be no way for him to escape, yet he would not for all that fall into their net. Was not this a subtil question? Do they not shew themselues to haue bin sufficient craftie and wily ones? for which way soever the Lord had awnswered, he had bin taken. Was not this done also full warely and circumspectly? for they associate to themselues the ministers of Herode, thinking no other but to entrappe him with deceit, that he shold not by any means escape, thus casting in their mindes: Now we will meete with him well enough, if he denie that tribute is to be giuen, the Herodians are present, which shall forchwith put him to death as a seditious felow, and one that resisteth the Romane Empire. But if he affirme that tribute is to be giuen, he speakeith against the libertie of the Jewes, then will we stirre up the people against him. For the ch Jewis^h people would be free , and haue their king of their one stocke , euen as it was promised them both of Moses and God , that their kingdome shoulde continue vntill the time of the tie king , that is , of Christ . Euen as the Patriarch did prophe-citheroof : The scepter shal not depart from Iuda and a lawgi. Gen.49 10. ut from betweene his feete vntil Silo come . And therefore God di choose this people specially to himselfe , and made a kingdom vnto them , onely for Christes cause . Moreouer there were many sentences in the Scripture which declared that they shoulde serue me , For they shoulde be the chiefeſt and not the lowest , &c. Deut.28.13.

This and ſuch like ſayings the Scribes had beaten into the peoples heads , wherewith they were greatly diſturbed : euen as at this day it is put into the peoples minde , that the Church cannot ere . Herupon the Pharisees thought thus : If he affirme that tribute muſt be giuen , he blaſphemeth God , he ſhalbe giltie of dath , as one iniurious to God , and then ſhalbe ſtoned of the people . For God hath graunted and promiſed libertie vnto this people , and they were all euen in the middest of captiuitie the people of God . Howbeit at that time they wanted a king , as they do at this day . Wherefore diuers tumults , ſeditions , & upprores were irred vp among them . For they were taught by the lawe , that they ſhould haue a king of their own flesh and ſtocke , as it is ſaid before , wherefore they did vncellanily ſtrive againſt ſtrange lings and gouernments , vntill not a few of them at times were katen & ſlaine . Neither did this happen ſeldom times , for they ere a ſtiffenecked , obſtinate , and vnruſy nation , & therefore the Romaines which at that time did beare rule ouer them , diuine rcumſpeciſly gouerne them , and diuided the land into fourē iāges of gouernment , that being on euerie ſide kept in awe by the gouerners and presidents , they might not ſo ſoone flocke iāger and moie ſedition , and that they might also be moie easily reſifted if at any time they ſhould riſe againſt the Romane Empire . Wherefore Pilate was appointed of the Romains efcenant of Judea , Herode Tetrarch of Galile , his brother Philip Tetrarch of Iturea , and of the countrie of Trachoniis , and Lysanias the Tetrarch of Abilene , as Luke reheareth them . And all this was done that they might keepe the ſewes vnder , whereupon the Jewes were inflamed with ani-cer , and in a rage and furie , but ſpecially in the time of Christ they would willingly haue had a king.

The subtill imaginacions of the Pharisees against
Christ.

Wherefore the Pharisées hauing sond out this deuise, thou thus with themselues: Well, we haue the matter now at a ge stay. The Romanes chalenge to themselves the gouernmet, n if he aunswere vnto the question that tribute is not to be giuen the lieftenant is at hand and ready to put him to death: if he au swere that it must be giuen, he shall stirre vp the people agai himselfe, and so we shall assuredly by this meanes entrappē hi thus they supposed that either they shold fynde cause of death the Lord, or at the least make his doctrine to be nothing set of the people. As the Jewes here do, so also do we, the chese a necessarie thinges being left, we are occupied about other m ters not necessarie. The Pharisées here moue a question, wh ther they be free or otherwise: forasmuch as they had the Law and the word of God, they supposed that they ought to be subi to none, but to their owne Ringe, yet they were now compell to obey Cesar Emperour of Rome. They had Scripture ce cerning the loue of God and their neighbour, but that being le they are occupied about other matters. It was promised vnto them, if they obeyed the precepts and commaundements of God that they shold then be a free people, they disobey and negle Gods commaundements, and yet notwithstanding they wil free, and haue their owne king. In like maner falleth it out wi vs, we earnestly chalenge to our selues Christian liberty, and y we thinke, that if we doe those thinges that seeme good in o owne braine and fantasie, we are thereby Christians, both fait and charitie being of vs neglected. But what doth Christ, t Pharisées so subtilly setting vpon him? he striketh them wi their owne sword, and entrappēth them in their owne deuise whereby they thought to haue entrapped him, aunswering ne ther of those thinges which they hoped he woulde, as the Eu gelist doth more at large describe, saying:

But Iesus perceiued their wickednes & said: VVhy tempt y The wisdom me, ye hypocrites? Shew me the tribute mony. And they brought of Christ in him a peny. And he said vnto the: VVhose is this image & super confounding scriptio? They said vnto him, Cesars. Here thou plainly seest th the craft and subtily of the Pharisées wisedom & meruelous dexterite of Christ, he willerth the tribut money to be shewed vnto him, and asketh of the image and superscription therof. They aunswering that it is Cesars, he very we an are most freely inferreth, that they are vnder Cesar, vnto whom they were compelle to pay tribute. As if he sayd: If ye haue so le in Cesar, that his money is coyned with you, surely he bea-rth rule ouer you, as though he shoulde say: It is come to passe through your owne faulc that Cesar ruleth ouer you. What ould they say or doe vnto this question? They merueiled and vnt their wayes, they thought that they shoulde notably haue o-uercome him, but for all their subtilitie and wisdom they were deceived.

This is written for our comfort, that we which are Christi: as may know that we haue such wisdom, as exceedeth all wise-dom, such strength and righteousness, as whereunto no strength of Christians righteousnes of man is like. For against the holy Ghost there is no counsell: this power and strength we obtaine through Christ, that we may tread sinne vnder foote, and triumph ouer death. When Christ dwelleth in vs by faith, we haue him which bringeth to passe such thinges, howbeit they are not thoroughly fut but in time of temptation. Wherefore when I stand in neede, he is present, and giueth vnto me strength, that I may courageously passe through. We must not therefore be afraide that our doctrine shall perish and be put to ignominie and shame. For let all the wise men of the world rise against the woerde of God, yea and I neuer so circumspect, and set them selues against it, yet shall they haue the foyle and be ouercome. It may be that they barke and bite, so that it seemeth unto men, as though they would destroy the Gospell, but when they haue set them selues against it extinguish it, they shall no whit preuaile, but in the snare that they haue layd for others, they them selues shall at length be taken. As we see here in this text, and commonly in Paule, but specially in the historie of S. Steuen, where we read how vainely is aduersaries vsed y Scriptures, yea those that they vsed were against them selues. For the Jewes did accuse Steuen, that he had spoken both against the temple, and against God which commanded the temple to be builded, bringing & alleaging Scriptures, whereby they thought to conuince and condemne him. But steuen being full of the holy Ghost, shewed them in order out of the Scripture, how that God dwelleth not in temples made with handes: David would haue built him an house, but God refused . What was the cause hereof? A long time before David was borne, God dwelt among his people. He surely should be a mirable God which should neede a house. And so he confirmeth many histories that God doth not dwell in houses or temples made with handes. What should the Jewes doe here? they manifestly acknowledge their owne Scripture, which they brought against Steuen. So all they shall be put to shame and uerthowme, which set them selues against the wisdom & wo^m of God.

The wisedō & power of þ world shall neuer be able to extinguish or supprese the Gospel.

Wherfore let no man be afraide, albeit all the wisedom a power of the world striue against the Gospell, although it were extinguished it euen by shedding of blood. For the more blood that shed, so much moxe is the number of Christians increased. The blood of Christians sayth Tertullian, is seede whereof Christians growe. Satan must be drowned in the blood of Christian. Wherfore it is not violence and force that is able to suppre the Gospell: for it is like vnto a palme tree, which hath this nature and qualitie, that albeit a weight be layd vpon it, yet it wayes riseth and liftesth vp it selfe against the weight. Such a nature also hath the Gospell, for the more it is striuen against, much moxe are the rootes thereof spred abroade, and the more mighty that it is oppressed, by so much doth it more and more grow and increase. Wherfore there is no cause that we shoule be afraid of power, but rather that we shoule feare prosperitie merie dayes, which are able to hurt vs more then anguish & persecutioⁿ. Neither let vs be afraid of the subtilitie and wisedom the world, for they can not hurt vs; yea the more that they striue against the truch, so much more pure & cleare is the truch mad of Christians.

Nothing therefore can come better to the Gospel, then when the world with his force and wisedom setteth it selfe against it. The more vehemently sinne and Satan doe fight against my conscience, so much stronger is my righteousnes made. For if sinnes i^vrage and disquiet me, I doe then more ardently pray and cry vnto God, and so my faith is more and more increased and strengthened. This is that which S. Paule meanech when he saith: Powe is made perfect through weakenes. Forasmuch therefore as we haue so great a treasure, which is increased and strengthened by persecutions and aduersitie, there is no cause that we shoule be afraid, but rather that we shoule with a cheerefull mind reioyce in tribulation, as S. Paule sayth Rom. 5. according as the Ap^{osto}le

Ies diu, who with great ioy departing from the councells, gaue god thankes, that they were counted worthy to suffer rebuke for the name of Iesus.

If the deuill were endued with such wisedom, that he would be quiet, and suffer the Gospell to haue free course, he shoulde not suffer so much losse. For when the Gospell is not impugned, it is as it were wasted with rust, neither hath it occasion to shew forth the vertue and power thereof. We liue therefore here secure as yet, for no man striueth against vs: wherefore we continue still as we were before, yea (alas) we become worse and worse. Whereas some of our aduersaries haue set vpon vs by writing, that per-sineth to a few. For inasmuch as they haue written against vs, they haue thereby done nothing els, but as it were blowen the fire, but if we had bene throwne into the fire, or slayne with the porde, the number of Christians would be greater amoung vs. Wherefore this is a comfort vnto vs, if we at any time be temp-teth, that Christ is ready to helpe vs, & reigneth among vs, yea he is so neare vnto vs, that alwaies through him we may ouercome, so long as we beleue and trust in him: Howbeit when we are ouched with no aduersitie, he doth little or nothing, but when we are fought against and oppressed, he is present, and bringeth all our enemies to confusion.

We haue moreouer to learne here that they which are wise & rightier then other, which are endued with the chiese gifteis of understanding and nature more then other, whch excell in greater industrie, learning and readier capacite then other, which are next to ouersee other, and can gouerne all thinges best, that they I say, doe many times most of all other resist God and faith, & trust noze to their owne strength and reason then to God. For they are caried so farre by their venomous nature, that they neither an nor will vse those things to the commodicie and profit of their neighbour: but trusting to their owne gifteis and abilitie, they hope that now they shall obtaine this, now that, neither doe they binke that they shall haue neede of Gods helpe also thereunto: Is it appeareth here in the Pharisees and Scribes, who were certaine, as they supposed, that if they so set vpon the Lorde, it could not be, but that they shoulde then entangle him. For it is impossible, thought they, that he shoulde haue escapa vs, we shal here hold him as it were salme into a net, whether he affirme or deny that tribute must be giuen. Marke moreouer how subtle and puerse y wit of mans nature is, which is here very lively set for There is nothing els in man but wickednes, delusion, guile, ceits, lying, fraude, and all kind of euill, yea of nature man is lyes and vanitie as the 116 Psalme sayth. We must not trust ny man in any thinge, doe not perswade thy selfe, that any n speaketh the truth vnto thee, for whatsoeuer man speakest it a lye. Why so? The fountaine ox springe head, that is, the hart not sincere, wherfore neither can the riuers be pure. And for the cause the Lord doth commonly call men the generation of vipers and broode of serpents. Is not this a goodly title of man?

Let any man nowe goe, and glory of his owne righteousnes strength or free will. Before the world in deede some man may be, and gloriously appeare goodly, righteous, and holy, but this is nothing els, but a generation of vipers and broode of serpents and that especially in those that seeme most excellent, most pitious, most wise, & of greatest vnderstanding. If thou go throu even all the histories of the Greekes, Jewes, & Romanes, thou shalt find the best and wisest Princes of all, which haue gouerned the affayres of their Empire prosperously, thou shalt find that I say to haue thought nothing of God, but onely trusting to thy selues, to haue acknowledged nothinge as receiued from God. Hereupon it is gathered, that the lesse a man excelleth in wisdom before the world, so much lesse doth he commit against God. For they that extell in counsell and authorty before the sight of the world, doe for the most part deceiue and lye more then other thinking, that if they deale by delusions and deceit, their fraude iniquitie is not perceiued: for they can after a pretie sorte clothe their craft and subtilitie. But the holy Ghost hath a most cleare bright sight, which they can not auoyde, but they shall be espied. The Scripture doth oftein times call such lyons, wolues, beare swine, and cruell beastes, inasmuch as they rage, and deuoure and consume all thinges with their fraude and deceit. Wherefore the old Testament the Jewes were forbidden to eate of certain beastes, as of those already rehearsed, and of others, for this cause especially, that it shoulde be a type and example to vs, whereby we might perceiue, that there are some me, which are from mighty, rich, witty, learned, skilfull, and wise, which are to be auoyded and eschewed as a certaine vncleane thing, and as such seduseice and deceiue others with their sayre shew, might, and wise-dom. For neither shall they be counted for such, neither will any man thinke them to be such, as doe so much as thinke any euill in thir hart, much lesse doe it. Wherefore thou must put no trust & confidence in any man, trust not unto him, for he will deceiue thee w herein sooner he is able. Againe if thou trustest man, thou art against God, in whom thou putteth not thy trust. It is written in the 17 chapter of Jeremie: Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, and, Blessed is the man that putteth his trust in the Lord.

Some man may now say: How shall we doe then? One man must haue dealing with an other, otherwise howe can the life of men continue? We must buy, we must sell, we must bter and clunge our wares with men: Now if one shold not trust an other, the whole trade of mans affaires shold be in perill, yea and perish. I say that no man can deny, but that there must be mutual dealings among men, and that one doth neede the helpe and trauel of an other. But this I will haue, that whatsoeuer dealing thou hast with men, either in buying or selling, thou count it for a tinge vncertaine, which thou must neither trust, nor build vpon it. For this is certaine, as soone as thou shalt trust to man, he will like to deceiue thee, forasmuch as the nature of man, as it is of itselfe, can doe nothing but lye and deceiue. Yea all thinges in men are vncertaine, both his works and wordes, there is nothing in him, but lighenes and vncostancie, which thou mayst boldly believe to be true. Wherefore all our hope and confidence must bereposed in God alone, and after this sorte we must say: Lorde, give thou me grace that I may direct & order my life, my soule, my body, my substance and goods, and whatsoeuer is mine, according to thy diuine will, for I beleue in thee, I trust in thee, Ie not thou forsake me in so perilous dealing with this or that man: I put no trust in man. If thou knowest that it is good for me, make him to deale faithfully with me: if thou knowest that it will be to my hinderance and hurt, helpe me to auoid it, for thy will onely pleaseth me, which I wish alwayes to be done.

As soone as thou thinkest in thy mind: He is a good man, and he that wil keepe his promise, I am sure that he wil not deceiue me, but wil deale faithfully, even then hast thou fallen from God, id worshipped an idoll, putting thy trust in a lyar. Wherefore when thou haſt any dealing with man, thinke boldly: If he deſſtantly, it is well, if he doe oþerwyse, in the name of God, him goe, I will commit all thinges to the will of God, he ſhall þprosperously bring them to pasſe. Of ſuch a false and vngodly confidence reproſed in men, that euill crept in amonge Chriftia-namely the worſhipping of Sainctes, whereby the Chriftian Church, that is, the true congregatiōn of the faithfull, hath ſuſered exceeding great hurt and incomparablae ruine. For what-ther was the ſeruice and worſhipping of Sainctes but a deuileſ-like thing? When as men uſed to reaſon after this ſorte: This n̄ was very holy, that which he taught, he did, whom we wil folleand doe the like. Hierome, Auguſtine, Gregorie ſayd this, the ſoþe is it true, & therefore will I beleeue it. Frauncis, Benedi-Dominicke, Bartholomewe liued thus, they did this and that will imitate their life and workeſ. Moreouer Auguſtine was ued by this rule, wherefore I alſo ſhall be ſaued by it. fy, ho-uorable and miſerable a thinge is this; they are onely lyes & dreameſ of men, there is not in one word mention made heretofore Chrift and his word, but they are onely the vaine inuentions & trifles of men. I would utterly breake the rule of Auguſtine, if therefore ordayneſd it, thinking to be ſaued thereby. So blind without understanding is reaſon, that it receiueth the doctorage vaine inuentions of men, when as notwithstanding the word God onely is to be received in matters of ſaluation, as if Herod, Pilate, Caiphas, & Hannas ſhould preache the Gospell, I ought to receive it. Againe, if thole that are counted holy, ſhould riſe & preache lyes, also rules, habits, ſhauings, ceremonieſ, and ſi-like vaine inuentions of men, I ought in no wiſe to receive the ſoþe we muſt here haue respect, not to the persons, but to the which they preacheſ.

Doſt thou preſume to be wiſer then all the fathers & ſaints then all the Bifhops and Princes of the whole worlde? Tho may ſome man obiect againſt me, Farre be that from me. For doe not contend to be wiſer then they. But this without conuincieſ is thus, that whatſoever is wiſe, great, liberall, mighty ſtrong before the worlde, doth ſeldom or neuer agree with y^e word of God. For ſo it falleth out, that they that are ſuch doe for the moſt part persecute the Gospell, and if they were not ſo great, the Gospell ſhould not ſo greatly ſhine forth and triumphhe. The ma-nine Emperours Hadrian, Trajan, Diocletian were the most vse Cesars of all, whose gouernment was so liked of, that it was payed of the whole wold, yet they persecuted the Gospell, and culd not abide the truth. The same we find written of the Kings of the Jewes, as of Achas and others, which governed their Kingdom very well, yet despised the word of God and disobeyed his commaundements. We in our time had never such Emperours or Princes, as are comparable to them. But it ought to be triffid in these, that God would by foolish preaching confound the wisedom of this wold, as Paule sayth I. Cor. I. All these thinges are shewed vnto vs in this text which we haue in hand, whch hath a simple and a sclender shewe and appearance of it selfe, but yet containeth many thinges in it most worthy the noting. Now how the Lord concluded with the Pharisees, when they had shewed him the tribute money, and had aunswered that iwas Cesars image and superscription, the Euangelist declart, saying:

Give therefore to Cesar the things which are Cesars, and give vnto God those things which are Gods. Although they had desired no such thing of the Lorde, neuertheles he teacheth them te right way. And in these wordes he confirmeth the sword and crosse of the Magistrate: they hoped that he would condemne & rיסט him, but he doth nothing lesse, for he commendeth and prayeth him, commaunding that they give vnto him those thinges that are his. Wherby he plainly will haue, that there be Magi-rates, Princes, and Rulers, vnder whose gouernment we must be. Neither must we care whether they vse and exercise their vle and authozitie well or ill, we must haue regard onely to their power and office, for their power & authozitie is good inasmuch as it is ordained & instituted of God. Neither is there any cause why thou shouldest find fault with power, if at any time thou beopressed by Princes and tyrannes: for whereas they abuse the power giuen vnto them of God, they shall surely be compelled to sue an account thereof. The abuse of a thing doth not make that thing euill, which is in it selfe good. A chayne of golde is good, A similitude. either is it therefore made worse, for that a harlot weareth it about her neck, or if one should put out myne eye with it, should I finde fault in the chayne therefore? In like maner the power of the Prince must be borne, for if he abuse his office, he is not to be counted of me as noe Prince, neither belongeth it vnto me to revenge or punish it in him. I must obey him for God his cause only, for he representeth the place of God. How grieuous thing soever therefore Magistrates shall exact, I must for God his cause beare them all, and obey them, so farre as they be not contrary to Gods commandements. If they doe iustly or vnjustly it shall in due time appeare. Wherefore if thy substance, life a body, and whatsoever thou hast should be taken from thee byt Magistrates, thou mayst say thus: I willingly yeeld them vnto you, and acknowledge you for Rulers ouer me, I will obey you but whether ye vse your power and authoritie well or ill, see ye to that.

Moreover whereas Christ sayth: Giue vnto Cesar the things that are Cesars, and vnto God those thinges that are Gods. We must understand that vnto God pertaineth honour, we must knowledge him for the living, omnipotent, and wise God, and crie vnto him what good thing soever can be named. And alwe doe not giue him this honour, he notwithstanding easily kpitch it, for nothing is either added to, or taken from him byt honouring. Howbeit in vs he is true, omnipotent, and wise, whas we count him so, and beleue that he is such a one, as he surely him selfe to be sayd to be. Nowe vnto Cesar and the Magistrate feare, custome, tribute, obedience, &c: are due. God requireth especially the hart, the Magistrate the body and goods, of which he executeth his office in þ place of God, which S. Paul doth most notably in plaine and manifest wordes declare Ro 13: Let euery soule be subiect vnto the higher powers: for there is no power but of God: and the powers that be, are ordain of God. VVho soever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist, shall receiue to the selues condemnation. For Magistrates are not to be feared for good workes, but for euill. VVilt thou then be without feare the power? doe well: so shalt thou haue prayse of the same. If he is the Minister of God for thy wealth, but if thou doe feare: for he beareth not the sword for nought: for he is the minister of God to take vengeance on him that doth euill. VVherefore ye must be subiect, not because of wrath onely, but also conscience sake. For, for this cause ye pay also tribute: for they are Gods Ministers, applying them selues for the same thin-

And therefore also are Magistrates ordayned of God, that they may defende & maintaine publicke peace, which alone exceedeth all worldly good thinges : we ffe a litle in the last cōmōtion of the common people, what losse, r̄serie, calamitie and grieuous sorrow conspiracie and sedition bringeth in the world. God graunt that it may so continue, that we trie it no more. Thus much shall suffice to haue bene spoken to the exposition of this text.

SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, TEACHING THAT SALVATION COMMETH by Christ alone.

Ioh. 6.

Verse 44.

NO man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him : & I will rayse him vp at the last day.

It is written in the Prophets: And they shall be all taught of God. Euery man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, commeth vnto me.

Not that any man hath seene the Father, saue he which is of God, he hath seene the Father. Verely, verely I say vnto you, He that beleueth in me, hath euerlasting life.

I am the bread of life.

Your fathers did eate Manna in the wildernes, and are dead.

50.

This is that bread which cometh downe from heauen, that he which eateth of it, shoulde not die.

51.

I am that liuing breade which came downe from heauen: if any man eate of this bread, he shall liue for euer: and the breade that I will giue, is my flesh, which I will giue for the life of the world.

The summe of this text.

Christ is knowne of none, but of him whom the Faith draweth, that is, except the Father teache vs the knowledge inwardly in the hart. Therefore Christ sayth to Peter Matth. 16: Flesh and blood hath not revealed it vnto thee, but my Father which is in heauen.

2 Christ is the wisedome of God, which is of more price then p[re]cious stones, and what soever can be wished, is not to be compared unto it, as Salomon sayth in the Proverbs.

3 The old heauenly bread, that is, the righteousness of the law doth not iustifie: But Christ, if we beleue in him, iustifieth euer.

Prov. 8. 11.

The exposition of the text.

Onely faith in Christ saueth vs.

His text teacheth vs nothing els but christian fauour, and stirreth it vp in vs, as surely John through his Gospel, doth almost no other thing but instruct vs how we must beleue in the Lord Christ. And such a faith as is grounded on the true promise of God made vnto vs in Christ, shall sauue vs, as this text plainly declareth. Also they are here all pronounced fooles, which haue taught an other way and meanes to obtaine righteousness. Whatsoeuer man's minde can inuenire, althoough it be holy, although it haue a shew before men, it must needes vitterly fal, if that he wil haue salvation to come thereby. So albeit that man is exercised with the duties of godlines, he shall not be able to attaine vnto heaven, t le God preuent him with his word, which may offer his diuine gice vnto him, and lighten his hart, that he may walke in the right way. Now this way is the Lord Jesus Christ, he that will Christ the like an other way, as the most part of men with their outward right way. vynkes commonly doe, hath now erred from the right and high way. For Paule sayth Gal. 2: If righteousnes be by the law, that is by the workes of the lawe, then Christ died without a cause.

Wherefore I saye, that a man must by the Gospell be as it were bised and broken, & humbled euuen from the bottom of his hart, a being fraile & weake, which can moue neither hands nor feete, but onely lyeth prostrate and cryeth: Helpe me O omnipotente God, merciful Father, I am not able to helpe my selfe: Helpe O Ihs Christ, myne owne helpe is nothing. That so against this corner stone which is Christ al may be broken, as he saith of him selfe in Luke, when he as ked the Pharisees and Scribes: VVhat Luke 20.17. reaneth this then that is written: The stone that the builders refused, that is made the head of the corner? VVhosoeuer shall fall vpon that stone, shall be broken: & on whomsoeuer it shall fall, it wil grinde him to pouder. Wherefore either let vs fall vp-on it by our imbecillitie and weakenes, by denying our selues, & be broken, or els he will breake vs for euer in his straite iudge-ment. But it is better that we fall vpon it, then that it fall vpon vs. Upon this foundation Christ sayth here in this text.

No man can come vnto me, except the Fathet which hath at me, draw him: and I will rayse him vp at the last day. Now whom the Father draweth not, shall surely perish. It is also included that he which commeth not to this sonne, shall be dam-ed for euer. He is the onely Sonne giuen vnto vs, which may ue vs, without him there is no saluation: if he helpe not, our Without use is most miserable: Of him Peter also speakest to the same Christ there fect in the Acts of the Apostles chap. 4: This is the stone cast is no saluaside of you builders, which is become the head of the corner, on. either is there saluation in any other: for amonge men there is iuen none other name vnder heauen, whereby vve must be ued. Whither would our Diuines and Scholemen turne them elues here, which haue taught vs that by many workes we must taine vnto righteousness? Here is that high Maister Aristotele onsounded, who hath caught vs, that reason endeouureth to doe the best things, & is always ready to the better. But this Christ doth here deny: for vntes the Father possesse and drawe vs.

Shall perish for euer. Here all men must confesse their inbecil and slownes to good thinges. If so be that any perswade him that he is able to doe any good thing by his owne strength, tr ly he hath reprooued Christ of fальhood, and with great arrog cie presumeth to come to heauen, albeit he is not drawn of þ ther. Wherefore where the word of God is in his course, & sou ly preached, whatsoeuer thinges are high and great, it cast them downe, it maketh all mountaines euuen with the vallei and ouerthoweth all hillies, as the Prophet Esai sayth, that harts hearing the woyde may despeire of them selues, otherw they can not come unto Christ. The workes of God are such, t ther did he wish for any, but now he hath found the speciaill cor lation & promise of God, which is after this sort: He that ask receiueth, he that seeketh findeth, & to him that knocketh it is pened. By such a promise man is more & more lifted vp in mi & conceiueth a greater trust and confidence in God. For as so as he heareth that this is the worke of God alone, he desireth God, as at the hand of his mercifull father, that he will vouchs to drawe him. If so be that he be drawne of God vnto Christ, doubtedly that also shall come vnto him, whereof the Lord mak mention here, namely that he wil raise him vp at the last day. Si he layeth hold on the word of God, & trusteth in God, whereby hath a certaine testimony, that he is he, whom God hath drawn

1.Ioh. 5.10. As John sayth in his first Epistle: He that belieueth in the Sonne of God hath the vyvitnes in him selfe. Hereupon it mu needes follow, that he is taught of God, and in verity now know eth God to be no other, but a helper, a comforter, and a Sauior.

Here

Verely it is now manifest, that if we beleue, God will be no other toward vs but a Saviour, helper, and giuer of all felicitie, who requireth and asketh nothing of vs, but will onely giue and cfer vnto vs, as he hym self sayth vnto Israel Psal. 81: I am God thy Lord, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide; & I will fill it. Who would not loue such a God, which sheweth himself so gentle and louing vnto vs, and offereth readily his grace and goodnes?

They shall not be able to escape the seuer'e and eternall iudgement of God, which do vnauidedly neglect so great grace, as the Epistle to the Hebrewes sayth: If they that transgressed the lawe of Moses, escaped not vnpunished, but dyed without mercy, howe much more grieuously shal God punish them, which contynge blood the Testament as an vnholy thinge, and tread vnder foote the name of God? D howe diligent is Paule in all his Epistles to teach how the knowledge of God may righly be conceived? D knowledge of God.

It would say: If ye onely knew and vnderstood what God is, ye could then be safe. Then ye would loue him, and do all thinges approued of him. Thus he sayth Colos. 1: VVe cease not to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be fulfilled with knowledge of his will, in all wisdom, & spiritual vnderstanding: that ye might walke worthy of the Lord, & please him in all things, being fruteful in al good works, & increasing in the knowledge of God, strengthened with al might through his glorious power, into all patience, & long suffering with ioyfulness: giuing thanks into the Father, which hath made vs meete to be partakers of the inheritance of the Sanctes in light. And Psal. 119 David sayth: Instruct me, & I will keepe thy lawe, yea I will obserue it with my vwhole hart. And thus ye haue out of the first sentence of this text, that the knowledge of God doth come from thy father. It is needful that he lay the first stone in our building, otherwise he shal labour in vaine. But that is done thus: God sendeth vnto us Preachers, whoni he hath taught, and prouideth that his word be preached vnto vs. First that all our life and condition, although we haue a sayre shew to be holy outwardly, is of no estimation before him, yea is abhorred and loathed of him. And this is called the preaching of the law. Afterward he maketh grace to be preached vnto vs, to wit, that he will not haue vs vterly condemned.

and cast of, but that he will receive us in his beloved sonne , an not simply receive us , but also make us heires in his kingdom yea and Lordes ouer all thinges which are in heauen and earth This nowe is called the preaching of grace v^e of the Gospel And all this is of God, which rayseth vp and sendeth forth Prechers . This S. Paule signifieth when he sayth thus Rom. I.
Faith is by hearing, and hearing by the word of God . This al the woxes of the Lorde meane here in the Gospell , when sayth :

It is written in the Prophets : And they shall be all taught God. Euery man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned the Father, commeth vnto me : Not that any man hath seene the Father, saue he which is of God, he hath seene the Father. Wh as we heare the first preaching, that is the preaching of the law howe we are condemned with all our woxes , then man sighet vnto God , and knoweth not what to doe , his conscience is eu and fearefull , and except helpe shoule come in tyme, he shoule despeire for euer . Wherefore the other preaching must not l ong differred , the Gospell must be preached vnto him, and th way vnto Christ must be shewed, whom God hath giuen vnto a Mediatour, that through him alone we may be saued, by meer grace and mercy, without all our owne works and merits . The the hart is made ioyfull, and hasteth vnto such grace, as the thi sty hart runneth vnto þ water. David had a notable feeling her of, when he sayd thus Psal. 42: Like as the hart desireth the wa ter brookes, so longeth my soule after thee, O God : My sou thirsteth for God, yea euen for the liuing God. When therfore a man commeth to Christ, through the Gospell, then heareth the voyce of the Lord Christ, which strengthneth the knowledge that God hath caught him : to wit, that God is nothing els but Saviour abounding with grace , who will be fauorable and mercifull to all them , which call upon him in this his Sonne .
Therefore the Lord sayth mozeouer :

Verely, verely I say vnto you, He that beleueueth in me, hat euerlasting life. I am that breade of life. Your Fathers did eat Manna in the vildernes, and are dead. This is that bread v^echic cometh dovvne from heauen, that he v^echich eateh of it shoul bred that I vwill giue, is my flesh, vvhich I vwill giue for the life of the vworld. In these wordes the soule findeþ a table daintily sunþed, whereby it may slake all hunger. For it knoweth assur-ely that he that speaketh these wordes can not lye. Wherefore it commit it selfe confidently vnto him, and cleave to the word, it estech vpon him, and so de parteth not from this goodly table.

This is that supper, to the preparing whereof the heauenly Father kalleþ his oren and satlings, and hath bidden vs all vnto it.

The liuing breade whereof the Lord here maketh mention, is Christ the living bread,
Christ him selfe, whereby we are so fedde. If we lay hold but of a morsell of this bread in our harts, and keepe it, we shall be satisfied for euer, neither can we euer be plucked from God. Moreover such an eating is nothing els, but to beleue in þ Lord Christ, that he is made vnto vs of God, as Paule sayth 1. Cor 1. wise-dom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. He that eateth this meat, liueth for euer. Wherefore by and by after this text, when the Jewes were at contention about these his wordes, he sloth: Verely, verely I say vnto you, Except ye eate the flesh of the Sonne of man and drinke his blood. ye haue no life in you.
Whosoever eateth my flesh, & drinkeþ my blood hath eternall life, & I vwill rayse him vp at the last day. Manna which the others did eate in the desert (as Christ here sayth) could not saue from death: but this bread maketh vs immortall. If we beleue in Christ, death shall not hurt vs any thing at all, yea there is no oþre death. This the Lord meaneþ by these wordes in an other lace, where he sayth to þ Jewes: Verely, verely I say vnto you, Ioh.8.51.
a man keepe my word, he shall never see death: where it is ceraine that he speakeþ of the word of faith, and of the Gospell.

But some man may say that holy men die notwithstanding, for An obiection.
Iþaham & the holy Prophets are dead, as the Jewes sayd vnto him. I aunswere: The death of Christians is onely a sleepe, as The answer he Scripture also commonly calleth it: for a Christian tasteþ & eech no death, that is, he hath the feeling of no death. For this Saviour Christ Jesus, in whom he beleueþ, hath ouercome death, þ afterwards he shoulde not feele or tast it, but death is vnto him onely a passage and gate to life, as Christ him selfe witnesseth Ioh.5: Verely, verely I say vnto you, he that heareth my word, & beleueþ in him that sent me, hath everlasting life, & shall not come into condemnation, but hath passed from death to life. Wherefore the life of a Christian is merie, and on euer side replenished with ioy, and the yoke of Christ is easie & sweete. But that it semeth heauy and grieuous vnto vs, this is the cause soz that the Father hath not yet drawne vs hereupon it commeth to passe that we take no pleasure thereof, neither is the Gospel comfortable vnto vs. If so be that we would lay vp the wordes o Christ well in our hart, they would be vnto vs an exceeding comfort. And thus ye haue heard howe we must feede on this bread which came downe from heauen, that is, on the Lord Christ, a wit by faith, which we therndo when we beleue in him, that he is our Saviour.

The whole chapter out of which this text is taken, commen deth vnto vs nothing els but spirituall meat. For when the multitude followed Christ, that they might againe eate and drinke which the Lord him selfe signifieth, he taketh occasion of the corporal meat which they sought, & almost through the whole chapter speaketh of spirituall meat, as he sayd: The wordes which speake are spirit and life. Wherby he would signifie, that he therfore fed them, that they shold beleue in him: & as they did eat the bodily meat, so they ought also to feede of the spirituall. Heri let vs weie and marke this, that the Lord doth so gently and graciously apply him selfe to vs, and offer him selfe in such gentil wordes, that it ought worthely to moue our hartes to beleue in him, to wit, that that bread, was therefore giuen for vs, inasmuch as it was behouefull that he shold cast death and suffer hellish paines: Also shold beare sinnes which he never had committed, as though he had committed them, and had bene his owne: and he did also the same willingly for our sakes, and tooke vs as he thzen and sisters. This if we beleue, we doe the will of the heauenly Father, which is nothing els but to beleue in his Sonne, & so be saved. As Christ him selfe sayth a little before: This is the will of him that sent me, that every man which seeth the Sonne, and beleueuth in him, should haue everlasting life. It now therfore appeareth that he that hath faith doth the will of God, and eateith of this heauenly bread. As Augustine sayth: What doost thou prepare thy mouth, beleue, and thou hast eaten. Of this spirituall supper the whole new Testament speaketh, but especially in this place of John. The Sacrament of Christes body & bloud is a certaine testimonie and pledge of this true supper, whereby wrought to strengthen our faith, and to be assured, that this body as this blood, whereof we feede in the Sacrament, deliuereth vs from synne, death, Satan, and all euill.

h heart with sweetnes and loue, that it is a pleasure and ioy vnto him to do good to his neighbour, yea and he is grieved if there be none toward whom he may be seruiceable. And besyde all this, his iractable and lowly towardes all men, he doth not esteeme it temporall pleasure and pride of life, he iudgeth no man, he damech no man, he interpreteth all thinges in the better part.

The as he seeth that the matter goeth not well with his neighbor, as that he fainteth in faith, wareth colde in loue, and that h life is not on euerie side approueable, he prayeth for him, and is oze grieved if any commit any thinge against God and his ngbour. In a summe, the roote and sappe are sound, for they are in a flourishing vine, to wit, Christ, and therefore such frutes cine forth. But if any be boide of faith, and not taught of God, sch a one doth not feede on this heauenly bread, neither bringeth sch these frutes. For where a right faith is not, there such sites are alwayes wanting. And therefore S. Peter teacheth v to make our calling vnto saluation, sure by good workes, v ere he speakest properly of the workes of loue, namely, that v do good to our neighbour, and be affected toward him, as to v r own flesh and blood. Thus much shall suffice concer-

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, CONCERNING GOOD WORKES THE FRVTES OF FAITH.

Rom. 13.

Verse 11. His also we know the season,  that it is time that we should arise from sleepe: for now is saluation nerer, then when we leeued.

12. The night is past, and the day is at hand, vs therefore cast awaye the workes of darenes, and let vs put on the armour of light.

13. Let vs walke honestly, as in the daye: no gluttonie and dronkennes, neither in chabering and wantonnes, nor in strife and uiyng:

14. But put ye on the Lord Iesus Christ, and to no thought for the flesh, to fulfil the lustes

Whereof the present text intreateth.

TH E Apostle in this text teacheth, not of faith, but workes the frutes of faith, shewing how the life of a Christian ought to be ordered and framed according to the outwardly among men. For how we must live in the spirit before God, faith doth teach, whereof Paul a little before place hath at large and euen apostolikely entreated. Yea consider this text well, it doth not so much teach, as prouoke hoyt, moue, and stirre vp them which are already taught, b*ut* they must do. For Paul diuideth the office of preaching into parts, into doctrine and exhortation, Rom. 12. Doctrine is, one teacheth that whiche was not knowne before, whereby instructed & come to vnderstanding. Exhortation is, when þ acher moueth & prouoketh unto þ which is already knowne. þer is necessarie to be done of him , who will christianly courme the duty of preaching , wherefore Paul doth verie nently apply himselfe to both, and that his exhortation may be e effectuall, & may moxe acceptably enter into the mindes of l m whom he hath purposed to exhort, he vseth certaine elegant figuratiue speches, and doth with an adornd maner of speak g allure their mindes unto him. For the wordes, sleepe, dark-, light, waking, armour, workes , the day, the night , which ere vseth, are all spoken figuratiuely, by which other thinges signified , then their nature and proprietie doe beare : for he aketh not of the naturall night, daye, darkenes, armour, wag, sleepe, &c : but he resembleth by these naturall thinges a taine likenes to our mynde , whereby he may moxe forcibly uoke and bring vs to those spirituall thinges. As if he saide, ye how men to get the riches of the present time , which do soone ish, rise early, and laying asyde the workes of darkenes , ap-themselves to the workes of the day , after the night is pas-and the day is come:with how much greater diligence ought , shaking of our sleepe , to rise early , and casting awaye the kes which we did whyle it was yet darke , to applie our ies now to those workes which are agreeable to our light, for-uch as the night is now passed, and the daye of our saluation h appeared?

By sleepe he signifieth euel workes which are boide of faith: What the sleepe is a worke properly meete for the night , and that he Apostle mea-aneth thus ; he sufficiently declareth , when he by and by after beth : Let vs cast awaye the workes of darkenes. So contrarise , to wake and to rise signifie good workes which come of
th. For as sleepe pertaineth properly to the night, so to rise is properly agreeable to the morning and daye . Wherupon it is d i. Thess. 5 : Beloued brethren, ye are not in darkenes, but are all the children of light and of the daye : we are not of the ght, neither of darkenes , wheresore let vs not sleepe as do-her, but let vs watch and be sober. For they that sleepe, sleepe the night, and they that be dronken, are dronken in the night: it let vs which are of the day , be sober , putting on the brest ate of faith and loue, and the hope of saluation for as helmet.

For God hath not appointed vs vnto wrath , but to obtaine sa vation by the meanes of our Lord Iesus Christ, which died for that whether we wake or sleepe , we should liue togither with him. It is sufficiently manifest, that the Apostle doth not in the wordes for bid vs the sleepe of nature , neuertheles he draweth similitude from naturall sleepe and waking, to spirituall, that is to a good and euell life . And to be briefe, to rise out of sleepe here the very same thing that the Apostle writeth , Tit. 2 : Th grace of God, that bringeth saluation vnto all men, hath appea red, & teacheth vs that we should denie vngodlynes & world lustes , and that we should liue soberly and righteously , an godly in this present world : looking for that blessed hope an appearing of the glorie of that mightie God, and of our Sauio Iesus Christ. For that which he calleth in these wordes , to den vngodlynes and worldly lustes , he calleth in the text which is haue in hand , to arise from sleepe , and that which he termeth liue soberly , and righteously , and godly ; that he calleth in o present text, to watch , and to put on the armour of light , an whereas he sayth: the grace of God that bringeth saluation, ha appeared, that he calleth here the day and light, of which we w hereafter speake more at large.

Naturall and spirituall sleepe compared to gither.

Now let vs see what likenes there is betweene naturall an spirituall sleepe . He that sleepeþ naturally , neither seeth , n feeleth any of those good thinges that are in the world , but liet among those thinges which are euē next adioyning vnto him as it were dead, seruing to no vse, neither regarding any thing all. For albeit he liue in himselfe , yet is he as dead to all other Againe, in stede of true thinges, he is in dreameis wholy occupie with vaine images and formes of thinges , which appeare tru and is so foolish that he embraceth those vaine formes , and thin keth them to be true thinges. But when he wakeþ, those image do togither banish awaie , and the man beginneth to be occupie with true thinges . After the same maner almost it is, when on is as it were swallowed vp of vngodlynes, for he sleepeþ ; and i like a dead man before God, neither seeth he , neither feeleth an of the good thinges , which are good thinges in deede , namely those spirituall good thinges , which are promised & offered him by the Gospell, albeit they be iust by him. For those thinges ar seen and felt by faith alone , otherwise they are remoued fro alight and feeling. Wherefore as long as by reason of the sleep of his vnbelleefe, he can haue neither any regard or sense of true god thinges, which are verie neere him through the GospeLL, he busieth himselfe with the false good thinges of this world; as riches, promotions, and pleasures, which being compared vnto eternall life, vnto heauenly ioy, and that perfect saluation which commeth to the godly, are altogether as dreames, and as those vaine visions compared to naturall thinges, whereof they are only representations. But when man awaketh, and hath receiuſ faith, all regard and desire of those false good thinges of this present life vanishest awaye, and he acknowledgeth that they are nothing els but meere vanitie and falsehood, euē as those visions do quite fade awaye as soone as a man awaketh out of naturall sleepe. Hereof the 76. Psalme speaketh? They haue slept their sleepe, and they whose handes were mightie, haue found nothing. And Psal. 73: Like as a dreame when one awaketh, so sall thou make their image to vanish out of the citie. And Esay 2: As whē a hungrie man dreameth that he is eating, & yet whē hawaketh his soule is emptie: or as when a thristie man dreameth that he is drinking, and when he awaketh he is yet faint, and his soule hath appetite: euē so shall the multitude of all nations be, that fighte ih against mount Sion. See how con-temptuously and disdainfully the Prophet speaketh of the chiese power, riches, pleasures and promotions of the world, and likevith them to dreames and most vaine visions wherewith they which are asleepe are deluded. What other durst say, that the god thinges, riches and power of these Kings, Princes, and rich men, are nothing els but dreames, when as for them men rangle earth with heaven, syer with water, raging without measure and ende in the world? But the cause hereof ia, for that they yet sleepe, therefore they do yet see nothing hereof, as they

For now is our saluation neerer then whē we beleued. What meaneth these wordes? did we beleue before, and do we not be-lieue now? Here we must call to minde that which Paul writeth vpon. I : that God promised the GospeLL by his Prophets in the holy Scriptures, concerning his Sonne Iesus Christ our Lord, Sonne. at all should by him be saued, according to that which was said to Abraham Gen. 22: In thy seede shal all the nations of the earth be blessed. This blessing promised to Abraham in his seede, is nothing els, but grace and saluation in Christ offered to the whole world by the Gospell, which Paule so interpreteth Rom. 4. and Gal. 3. For Christ is that seede of Abraham, it is, as he is man, his flesh and blood, by whom and in whom we be blessed, as many as beleue in him, and call upon him. This promise was afterward by the Prophets continually more and more declared and preached, for they did all write of the coming of Christ, of the grace which he shold bring, and of the Gospell, which Peter also witnesseth Act. 4. This promise of God all the faithfull beleueed which died before Christ was borne, who by this faith were saued, and obtained salvation through Christ. Hereunto Paul now had respect when he said: Our saluation is now nearer, then when we believed. For that which he saith is thus much in effect: We believed in time past that the promise made unto Abraham, should be fulfilled, now is it fulfilled, and those thinges that we beleueed should come to passe, are now present: Christ is come, the Gospell is revealed and published, and the blessing which we looked for, is spred ouer the world, all thinges which we taried for, beleueed being promised, are come. And hereby the Ap. signified the spirituall daye, whereof he speaketh afterward, which is properly the beginning and manifestation of the Gospell, whereof we will hereafter speake.

Now by this, that those thinges which we beleueed should be fulfilled, are now fulfilled, our faith is not any whit nayled or frustrate, but much more sound and perfect. For as of the olde time before Christes incarnation beleueed the promise of God which shold be fulfilled, so do we beleue that

The faith of them which liued before Christes incarnation, & theirs which liue after it, that Christ is to come, shold make God a lyer, as though he had all one in his selfe. ^{forasmuch as} But that our faith followed theirs, as the fulfilling followeth the promise. For either faith truthe in the seede of Abraham, that is in Christ, theris before his incarnation, ours after theirs which liue after it. Wherefore he that shold at this day beleue with the Jewes, that Christ is to come, shold make God a lyer, as though he had not yet fulfilled his promise, which he hath fulfilled, and being fulfilled would haue it published and preached. So also shall saluation be yet farre from the beleueers, which we shold loose for being as yet to come, in the time that shall hereafter foll

This double faith Paul speaketh Rom. 10: By the Gospell righteousnes, which God glueth, is revealed from faith to faith. That meaneth this, from faith to faith? nothing els, but that alerly the faith of the Fathers and our faith is the same, whereby its beleeuued in Christ either to come, or which hath already appered: yet the Gospell doth lead from their faith to ours, so that its now necessarie not onely to beleeeue the promise that was to be fulfilled, but also that it is fulfilled, which it did not behoue Abraham and the other Fathers to beleeeue, although they had the same Christ which we haue. For there is one faith, one spirit, or Christ, one communion of all Saincts, this difference onely here is betweene vs, that they went before Christ, we follow him.

We haue therefore beleuuued, and we do also beleeeue, to wit the Fathers and we, with a like and common faith in the same Christ, although not after the same maner, as it is saide: And, as by reason of this communion of faith which we haue a like in the same Christ, we say: we haue beleuuued, or we did beleeeue, when as not we, but the Fathers haue beleuuued or did beleeeue: so they aaine did say, that they shold haue heare, see, and beleeeue in Christ, when as not they, but we do live in that time. We read not in a few places of the Scriptures, that they which were before the incarnation of Christ, tooke vpon them the person of them which are after it, and they which are after it, of them which were before it, because of the communion of faith, and the same Christ, which they haue in common, and so there is as it were one companye of beleeuers. Now whereas the Apostle saith, that salvation is now neerer unto vs then when we beleuuued, that is, when the Fathers those auncient beleeuers did looke for it to come, he must not understand it of the neerenes of possession, as though he now had it neerer and more certainly then they, for the said fore Christes had altogether the same faith, as it is said, and the same Christ, wherefore salvation was as neere unto them as unto vs, or Christ yesterday, and to day, the same also is for euer. Heb. 3. Christ continueth the same from the beginning of the world unto the end, by whom all are sauved alike. But Paul speacheth of the neerenes of receyving, that what soever thinges were said before concerning Christ, they were now fulfilled, peacheing ouercame; the Lord did sitte at the right hand of the Father, ther, the Gospell was preached abroad in the wold, by whi Christ did come unto all in the whole wold, for this cause þe sayth that our saluation is neerer then when it was hidden, knowne unto few men; because that Christ being not yet glorified, it was not meete that the preaching of saluation shoulde made publike or common.

Whereas therefore the Apostle sayth here, Our saluation is now neerer vs, he sayth the same thing in the Epistle to Timotheus in other wordes: The grace of God, which bringeth saluation, hath appeared, that is, hath sprong forth, and is euerie where commonly preached: although it was not hid before in any of the Saints, notwithstanding it was not yet commonly knowne in the wold. After the same sorte the Scripture speaketh in many places, when it sometime saith that Christ is to come, someti that he is come, although he alwayes hath bin, and is in all elect. Howbeit because he had not before his resurrection communicated to all by publike preaching, the Scripture speaketh diversly of his coming: For because of this publike preaching he came in the flesh, being made man, for his incarnation had not bin pretable to any, if the Gosspell had not thereupon bin preached, which he came into the whole wold, and whereby it is commonly knowone, why he was made man, whereby that blessing promised to Abraham, is now published, and made common to which by the Gosspell beleeue in Christ. Hereupon Paul sauerie well, Rom. i. that the Gospel was promised of God, though he would say, although God hath promised euerie where in the writings of the Prophets his sonne in the flesh, yet so much as all that should be done, that the Gosspell might be preached abroad in the wold, whereby he commeth spiritually to myndes of the beleeuers, (which comming onely bringeth salvation, and is farre to be preferred before that comming in the flesh, insasmuch as it was done because of this) I say racher then God promised by the Prophets in the Scriptures the Gosspell concerning his sonne. For God considered the Gospell and our faith in all these thinges, for which he would also haue him to be made man, that the Gosspell might be preached of him, that bearing made man, he hath sauied vs by his death, and that the salvation which he hath wrought, might go into the whole wold, and be made neere unto all. Some haue caught sower comminge of

Ch

Crist , according to the sower sundayes in Aduent as they call it, ut his comming of Christ by the Gospell, which is most necearie of all, and of which all do depend , of which Paul here spaketh, this coming I say, they could not see, inasmuch as they arignozaunt, both what the Gospell is, and to what end it was gien. They babbie many things of the comming of Christ, and neertheles they drie him further from themselves, the heauen is istaunt from the earth. For what can Christ profit any man, whch doth not possesse him by faith ? or how can any man pos-see him by faith , where the Gospell is not preached ?

The night is passed and the day is at hand : His meaning in By the daye

It if thou do a litle more exactly wey the wordes , thou shalt se that Paule describeth that part of the daye, which is most de-licable of all, and most full of all pleasauntnes , namely the ioy-ful and amiable morning , and the rising of the sunne. For it is the morning when the night is gone and ended , and the daye nowe come , whereupon all thinges are meruelously cheered ad recreated, the birdes sing , other lyuing creatures doe stirre v with alacritie and ioyfullnes : men being as it were made ane againe , doe goe forth to their labours : all thinges , the dy sprynging , and the morning shining , are so affected , as ough the world were renued , and all thinges restored to life aine.

Wherfore in many places of the Scripture, the ioyfull, pro- The prealerous , and quickning preaching of the Gospell is likened to ching of the morning and the rising of the sunne , as it is here of Paule Gospell like-ho calleth the Gospell the day sprynging or arising. Also Psal. ned to the wombe of the morning, and the daye of the power of Chi wherein we are conceiued and boorne the children of God draw, to wit, without the labour of men, by the onely grace the holy Ghost from heauen. The most pleasaunt and comforble sunne Iesus Christ maketh this daye, whom the Scripture hereupon calleth the sunne of righteousnes. God sayth Mala.

To you that feare my name, shall that sunne of righteousi-arise, and helth shalbe vnder this wings. For as many as I leeue in Christ, do receive of him the beames of his grace a righteousnes, and doe obtaine saluation vnder his wing.
Whereupon it is saide Psal. 118: This is the daye which God himselfe maketh this daye, euен he is that sunne, fr whence those beames and that daye come, wherewith the whi-

For it is a word which quickneth, maketh glad, willing, chee-full, and ready to do good workes, and finally it bringeth with all good thinges. Wherefore it is called the Gospele or gl the grace of God, and of all good thinges.

But who is able to rehearse all those thinges, which this d tinges, and toward all, from whence we are, and whither we go. Yet neuertheles Satan hath deceiued vs miserable creatures, that neglecting such a day, whereby all thinges might be cleere ad manifest vnto vs, we seeke the truth of Philosophers and hathen men, who haue not so much as by a dreame knowne any vnit of these thinges, and so we haue suffered our selues to be tynded with mens traditions, and to be thrust backe againe in the night. For it is not light, whatsoeuer is not this day, otherwise Paul and the whole Scripture shoulde in vaine extoll this day alone, and call all other beside it the night. Surely the burden of Gods displeasure must needes be most grievous, for that contrarie to so plaine and manifest places of Scripture, he haue sought an other light; although the Lord himselfe calleth himselfe the light and sunne of the worlde. And if other peoples were wantinge, this one is sufficient, that vniuersitie doe so impudently both set vp and glorie of Aristotle as a light vnto them, in whom they exercise themselues much more i[n] Christ, yea nothing in Christ, but altogether in Aristotle.

Let vs therefore cast awaye the workes of darkenes, and let By light is y put on the armour of light. As Christ is the sunne, and the gospel the daye, so fayth is the light whereby to see and watch and men signified this daye. For it would not profit, albeit the sunne did shine, faith. and make the day, if the eyes did not perceiue the light. Wherefore although the Gospell be begon and preached in the whole world, yet none are lightened, but they that receiue it, and by lyth being made capable of the light, doe arise out of sleepe. But to them that as yet sleepe this sunne and daye bring no profit, of which they receive no light, no more then if no sunne had shined. And this is that season and hower, wherefore he speaketh: V Velbeloued brethren, forasmuch as we know his, that it is now time that vve should arise out of sleepe, &c. It is a spirituall time and season, although begun in this outward time, as it doth dailly also come, wherein we ought to rise out of sleepe, and lay aside the workes of darkenes. Whereby Paule sheweth that he doth not speake to them, which are yet vnde of fayth: for as it is saide, he teacheth not faith here, but the workes and frutes of fayth, when as he saith: We know that the time is come, and that the night being passed, the daye is at hand: they which beleue not can not know these thinges. Now if thou obiect and saye, what reason or cause is there why he shoulde write these thinges to the faithfull, inasmuch as t^e know that it is time? &c. Thou must call to mynde that in beginning of the exposition of this text of the Apostle, we haue saide that the office of preaching is of two sortes, one of ching, an other of exhorting and mouing. Now a man can attaine vnto that knowledge, that it shoulde not be needefull to he be alwayes moued, and kept in a continuall and fresh meditation of those thinges which he hath learned, least the uell, the wold, and the fleshe (which are enemies that uer graunt truce, neither slacke their assault) doe make h^e wearie and slouthfull, that he maye at the last sleepe, and come al togither negligent in good thinges. For the deuill sayth Peter, is such an enemie, as goeth aboute continuing like a rozing Lion, seeking whom he maye deuoure: Wherefore he sayth: VVatch and be sober. Paule also will haue doe the same thinge here. For seeinge that the Deuell, fleshe, and the wold keepe no meane, nor make no ende fightinge against vs, neither must there be any meane to be made of exhortinge, prouokinge, and mouinge to watche and worke. Hereupon the holie Ghost is led an exhorter, inasmuch as he inviteh and moueth vs vpon good.

Paule calleth
the workes
of light armour, and why.

For the same cause Paule also vseth here chosen wordes: workes of darkenes he calleth not armour, but the workes of light he calleth armour, not workes: vndoubtedly that he misshewe, that there is a fight, that labour and trauell is required, and that it can not be obtained without perill, to wate and liue well, soasmuch as so iugtie enemies, the deuell, t^e flesh, and the wold do without ceassing fight against vs, wherefore Job sayth chapter 7: The life of man vpon earth is a fig and tentation. Howe it is not a small matter to stand all oure long in the battaill, wherefore there is neede of verie shynge trumpets and warlike drummes, that is of earnest admonition and exhortations, whereby we maye be stirred vp and encouraged to perseuer valiantly in the fight. Hereupon nowe it is to peare, why he calleth good workes armour or weapons, and calleth not the workes of darkenes so, which notwithstanding i we consent vnto them are also weapons , Rom . 6 : Giue hartes , and enlightneth them , therefore the armour or weapons of light are nothing else but the woxkes of this sayth . Con-iariwise , darkenes is infidelitie or vnbeleefe , which is by rea-in of the absence of the Gospell as of the daye , and of Christ as the sunne . This darkenes the deuell doth rule , which cominfidelitie . For as Christ is the Lord and gouerner of the light , hich we saide to be sayth : so Paule Ephel . 6. calleth Satan e prince of darkenes , that is , of them which are without faith , id refuse to be obedient to God , as the same Apostle witnesseth Corinth . 4 : If our Gospell be then hyd , it is hyd to them that e lost , in whom the god of this world (namely the deuell) hath blynded the myndes , that is , of the infidels , that the light e the glorious Gospell of Christ should not shine vnto them .

 But what both this armour or weapons of light , and woxkes of arkenes are , it is now taught of the Apostle .

Let vs walke honestly as in the day . No man woxketh those vnges in the day , which he is wont to woxke in darkenes , euerie he feareth an other , and endeuoureth himselfe to liue honestly .
 t is commonly sayd : The night is void of shame , which is true , id therefore men doe those thinges in the night , which they ould be ashamed to do in the daye , but the daye is not without aine , and requireth an honest conuersation . After the same sorte at which our Sauour himselfe sayth Joh . 3 : Euerie man that othe euell , hateth the light , neither commeth to light , least his eedes should be reprooud . But he that doth truth , commeth o the light , that his deedes might be made manifest , that they re wrought according to God . Hereby it appeareth how necessarie it is, that we shold be prouoked and exhorted to watch and to put on the armour of light. For what one is there at this day among Christians, which can abide, that all his workes shold be published openly in the light. Now what a Christian life is this, how hypocritically do we liue, when as we can not suffer our life so much as to be disclosed before men, which now is disclosed before God and all his Angels, and in the last day shalbe disclosed before all creatures? Wherefore it behoueth a Christian to liue so, as he desireth to appeare in the last day, and before all. Hereupon Paul saith: VValke as the children of light: the frute of the Spirit is goodnes, and righteousnes, and truth. And Rom. i 2.: Procure thinges honest, not onely in the sight of God, but also in the sight of all men. And 2. Cor. 1: Our rejoicing is this, the testimonie of our conscience, that in simplicitie and godly purenes, and not in fleshly wisedome, but by the grace of God we haue had our conuersation in the world. Howbeit such a life shall nothing at all appeare, where faith is not, but where a lively, a cheeresfull and a strong faith is, there such a life can not be wanting, forasmuch as such a faith is not wearied, Preaching & exhortation necessary for them that do already beeleeue.

with well doing, neither sleepeth. Wherefore it is no lesse necessarie, to preach to them that haue receiuued the doctrine of faith, whereby they maye be prouoked and stirred vp to go on in the good life which they haue embraced, and that they suffer not theniselves to be ouercome by the assaults of the raging flesh, the craftie world, and most subtle Satan, then it is meete that the doctrine of faith be preached to them that be as yet ignorant of Christ.

Not in gluttonie and drunkennes, neither in chambering and wantonnes, nor in strife and enuying. Here he rehearseth the workes of darkenes by name, one of which he named also before, to wit, sleepe, according to that saying 1. Thessal. 5: Let vs not sleepe as do other, but let vs watch and be sober. Not that he forbiddeth naturall sleepe, but spirituall, which is infidelite, whereof those workes of the flesh proceede: howbeit naturall sleepe also is a worke of darkenes, if it be vsed for pleasure, and Paule by six workes of darkenes comprehendeth all the rest. through immoderate filling of the belly, so that it is a hinderance to the light, that is, faith, and to the armour thereof. Moreover these six workes of darkenes which he here rehearseth, do comprehend all the rest. For Gal. 5, and Coloss. 3, he reckneth vp moe noe of them. But we wil diuide those, which he here rehearseth, into two sydes, the right and the left. On the right syde these ower fighc with the spirit, gluttonie, drunkennes, chambering and wantonnes: on the left syde (soasmuch as the left syde in he Scriptures signifieth aduersitie) those thinges which proeede from thence do fighc, as are wrath, contention and such like: but the right syde signifieth prosperitie, and those thinges which ensue thereof, as delightes, gluttonie, drunkennes, and uermuch sleepe, &c. Now it is sufficiently manifest, that Paul vnder two workes of darkenes here rehearsed, namely, contention and enuyng, doth comprehend the rest also of that sort, among which are bitternes, anger, wrath, crying, and euell peaking. Ephe. 4. And those which he rehearseth in the Epistle to the Galathians: Hatred, debate, emulations, seditions, heresies, murthers, &c. In a summe, hereunto pertaine whatsoeuer come of euell anger, either in wordes or deedes, all which can not be numbered. After the same sorte vnder those fower, gluttonie, drunkennes, chambering and wantonnes, he comprehendeth the vices of lust, which are wont to be committed as well in wordes as workes, which also no man is able to number. And so the present wordes of the Apostle doe shewe, neither needeth it any further declaration, that by these six workes all thinges are to be vnderstood, whereby they that are vnyoyd of sayth, and are yet in darkenes, doe liue unpurely as concerning themselues, and vnjustly toward their neighbours, whose whole life is disordered and out course both toward themselues and toward others. For there is no man that knoweth not what it is to be glutinous and dronken, that is, either to eate or drinke aboue a measure necessarie for the body, it is as well knowne, what it is to sleepe in chambers, and to be wanton, that is, to follow the pleasure of the body, both with sleeping aboue measure, and with other lewd and unchast gestures and workes, which are wont to be committed in chambers of full fedde, well rippled, idle and slouthfull bellies, as well in the daye, as in the night, as well when they are alone, as in the resort and compaines of others. All which thinges do require euene naturall darckenes, and secret places, and are signified of Paule by chambering and wantonnes.

But put ye on the Lord Iesus Christ. In these wordes as it were in a summe, he sheweth all the armour of light, when Christ is put he exhorteth vs to put on Christ. Now Christ is put on of on two maner of wayes: after two sortes: first when we are clothed with his righenes, which is done by fayth, wherewith he that is endued, leueuth that Christ for him died, and fulfilled all thinges. If not ours, but Christes righenes hath reconciled vs to Father, and delivered vs from synnes. And so to put on Christ pertaineth to the doctrine of faith, which teacheth that Christ was giuen vnto vs, and is vnto vs in stede of a pledge. Wherof Paule speaketh Galat. 3: All ye that are baptized in Christ, haue put on Christ. The other maner of putting Christ is, when we wey and consider, that he is giuen vnto us also in stede of an example, that we shold shewe our selues se uiceable toward our neighbours, being endued with the sae vertues, with which we by fayth acknowledge that he being adorned, did serue vs, that so we may resemble him in all point and of this maner of putting on Christ Paule speakeþ her. The same also he willeþ vs to doe 1. Corinth. 15: when faith: As we haue borne the image of the earthly, so let vs no beare the image of the heauenly. And Ephes. 4: Cast off, concerning the conuersation in time past, that olde man which is corrupt through the deceiuable lustes, and be renewed in the spirit of your mynde, and put on the new man, which after God is created vnto righenes, and true holines. No in Christ we see nothing but the armour of light, no gluttonie, no drunkennes, but fasting, temperancie, keeping vndis of the flesh by divers labours, traueling, preaching, praying, and doing well to all men, in him was no place for slouthfynes or superfluous sleepe, much lesse for wantonnes, but a meuelous chastitie and puritie: he accustomed himselfe to watch to rise early, to lye on the ground in the field, hauing neithe house, neither chamber, nor bedde: in him was noe wrath contention or brauling, but altogether goodnes, sweetnes, meekenes, charitie, mercy, patience, &c. Wherefore whereas Paule sayth here briefly: Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ it is as much as that we shold set him before vs as an example to follow.

Colos. 3.12.

He teacheth the Colossians the same thing in somewhat more wordes after this sort: Now therefore as the elect of God holy

and beloued, put on the bowells of mercie, kindnes, humblenes ominde, meekenes, long suffering: forbearing one an other, & seguiung one an other, if any man haue a quarrell to an other: even as Christ forgaue, euen so doe ye. And aboue all these thnges put on loue which is the bond of perfectnes: and let the peace of God rule in your harts, to the which ye are called in one bdy, and be ye thankefull. And Philip. 2, after that he had exhorted them to loue one an other, and that euery man shoulde exterme other better then him selfe, and seeke to pleasure & do for pier, he also settech Christ before them as an example, who shwed him selfe to vs our seruaunt, & sayth: Let the same minde be in you that was euen in Christ Iesus, who being in the forme of God thought it no robberie to be equall with God: But he made him selfe of no reputation, and tooke on him the forme of a seruaunt, and was made like vnto men, & was found in shape of a man. The summe therefore is this: the armout or weapons of light are good woxkes, contrary to those woxkes of darkenes, gittorie, drunkennes, chambering, wantonnes, contention, and envyng, such woxkes are, to fast, to watch to pray, to labour, to sifer hunger, thirst, colde, heat, to be chast, to vse modestie, tem-ptacitle, goodnes, and that I doe not thrust in too many of myne yne woxdes, let vs hearre Paule him selfe rehearsting them in or-Gal. 5: The frute of the spirit is loue, ioy, peace, long suffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faith, meekenes, temperancie. But he nearseth them farre more at large 2. Cor. 6, saying: VVe befech you that ye receiue not the grace of God in vaine: for he ath, I haue heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of sal-uation haue I succoured thee: behold nowe the accepted time, hold now the day of salvation, as if he sayd: Our salvation is now nearer unto vs then when we beleued; to wit, that it would come to passe, that these dayes of salvation, in which the Gosspell is reachead abroad to the whole wold, shoulde appeare. It is therefore to arise out of sleepe: Let vs give no occasion of sence in any thinge, that our ministerie be not reprehended.
But in all things, let vs approue our selues as the Ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, stripes, in prisons, in tumults, in labours: by watchings, by falengs, by puritie, by knowledge, by long suffering, by kihdnes, the holy Ghost, by loue vnseyned: By the word of truth, by the power of God , by the armour of righteousnes on the right hand and on the left, By honour, and dishonour, by euill report and good report, as deceiuers, and yet true : as vnkowne, yet knowne : as dying, and behold we liue : as chastened, yet not killed; as sorrowing, and yet alway reioycing: as poore, and yet making many rich : as hauing nothing, and yet possessing all things. See what a plentifull and very golden streame floweth out of y^e mouth of Paule. Hereof I think we most plainly perceiue, what is the armour of light , wherewith we may be fenced and fortifieth both on the right hand, and on the left.

A most excellent and perfect example for all Christians to follow.

Now this most fitly agreeth with the matter, whereas he teth before vs a most excellent and perfect example , namel y^e Lord him selfe, saying : Put ye on the Lord Iesus Christ. For he is a sluggish beast and not a man , who when he seeth his fast, suffer hunger, labour, watch and to be wearie , yet getteth him selfe to gluttonie, sleepe, and pleasures . What Lord doth take these things at his seruaunts hand, nay what seruaunt presume to doe these thinges ? So it can not be that a Christian should not be ashamed, when he beholdeith Christ, and him selfe so unlike unto him, yea occupied in quite contrary thinges. For whom the example of Christ him selfe doth not stirre vp herte, and moue, who can bringe or stirre him vp unto good. What would the leaues of wordes doe with their small noise, these thundringes of the example of Christ doe not moue surely for this cause Paule of purpose adioyned this word, I saying : Put ye on the Lord Iesus Christ, as if he sayd: counte great noy burdenous thinge , to stand and fight in this armie of light, ye that are seruaunts, behold your Lord, who when he had no neede, did notwithstanding so wel & valiantly use this armie and fought in it for you.

Lawfull care for the flesh.

And take no thought for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts of it. Apostle in these few words hath noted two cares of the flesh: one is naturall, whereby necessary foode and apparell is provided for the body, that it may liue, and be able to sustaine his labours: lest that it be by ouermuch abstinence weakened, and made profitable to woxke . The other care is toynd with sinne, the body is provided for to fulfill the lusts thereof, and to be delighted: this care the Apostle here forbiddeth, for gendreth the workes of darkenes, so to pamper and make sh, which is continually to be chastised, that it may be obedient to the spirit, and may not shake of the sicker, like unto an untaimed hise, albeit that chastising is so to be tempered, that the body notwithstanding may doe his dutie, and beare the sicker. For as it sodder, the whippe and the burden belongeth unto the asse: so mat, correction, and worke unto the seruaunt. Ecclesiastic. 33. ¶ I doth not say that thou shal fle or slay the asse, neither that thou shal kill the seruaunt, or cast him into prison: so unto the boy the chastising and labour thereof is due, and necessary foode is not to be withheld from it. Paule him selfe sayth: I tame my body, and bringe it into subiection. He sayth not, I cast it into sines, or I kill it, but I subdue it to the spirit, that it may serue, & be obedient thereunto. 1.Cor.9.27.

Moreover these wordes, to fulfil the lustes thereof, Paule addij because of two sortes of men, whereof the first vnder a pretence of naturall necessitie, doe satisfie their pleasure, and couer the practize vnder this false pretence. We are so prone and read unto this, that euen many of the Sainctes haue very much cmployed of this euil, and because of it, haue oftentimes aboue measure afflicted their bodies: for the flesh is so craftie and ineruous subtle to prepare delights for it selfe, that no man can sufficiently take heede of it, yea it is needefull that a man here doe neuer leauue to care and feare. The other sort of men are those blindly ones, which thinke that the kingdom of God and the righ-tunes thereof consisteth in meates and drinke, and in chesen a parell, and doe beside their owne worke regard nothing: when they haue so fasted, that they haue made their head diseased, and their stomacke distempered, and doe bring unto their body some eat infirmitie or sicknes, they then thinke that they haue bene veruelous holy, and haue wrought incomparable good workes. ut Paule sayth: Meat maketh not vs acceptable to God, for either if we eat, haue we the more: neither if we eat not, haue we the lesse. And Colos. 2. he writeth thus much in effect: Beware of the worshipping of Angells, which hath a shew of wise-dom because of humblenes and superstition, whereby they spare not the body, while they withdraw from it the measure of foode unto it, bestowing nothing vpon it whereby it may be fedde.
This preposterous worshipping of Angells, yea in deede superstition, did so deceiue Gerson, otherwise a notable man, that he prayed the Charterhouse Monkes, for that they did so consta-ly abstaine from flesh, that euē when they were sicke they wo-ate none, although they might preserue them selues euē fr death thereby. But what, if God shall iudge them as killers their owne body? For there can be none at all either ordinaor oder, yea or bōw contrary to the commaundement of God if there be any such, surely it ought to be of no force, euē as if th haddest vowed adulterie.

Necessary provision must be made for the body.

Now God both here by Paule, and elswhere hath comma-ded, that necessary prouision shoud be made for the body, hath forbiidden that we shoud procure the death of it: wherefore those thinges that are profitable to preserue it, whether they flesh or egges, or any thing else, must be giuen vnto it, in w day or time soeuer, whether it be the sixt or first day of the wee whether it be Lent or after Easter, in the meane season whatuer orders, lawes, and bowes, yea euē of the Pope being nected. For it is not lawfull for any man, no not for the Angells forbid any thing against the commaundement of God. How-this madnes proceeedeth from that darkenes and blindnes, wh by miserable men doe regarde the worke onely, and thinke t they shall obtaine saluation throughe the greatness and multitu-

The true end of workes. But Paule willett that our fastings and other challenges of the flesh be the weapons of light, whereby the worke darkenes may be ouercome, and not the body destroyed: whifore there ought to be no other vse among Christians of fastin watchings and labours. As it is al one before God, whether th eate fish or flesh: whether thou drinke wine or water: whethou weare redde or greene garments: all these are the gi-creatures of God, made vnto this ende, that we may vse thihaue regard only to this, that thou mayst vse them with a mea-and mayst abstaine thy selfe so much from them, as shall suffize ouercome the workes of darkenes. Wherefore it is vnpossithat a common maner of this abstinence shoud be appoynted differently to all: for the constitution of all mens bodies is alike, it is aboue measure to one, which to an other is vnder me-sure: one hath neede of much, an other of litle, and therfore imeete that every one haue regard of him selfe, and gouerne that is, obey the wisdom therof so farre, that ye deny not þ necessarie things which it requireth, but graunt it not those things, which it requireth to the fulfilling of þ lustes thereof, more then cessarie to pleasure onely. If a better rule of moderation could be bene giuen beside this, Paule would not haue concealed it.

Hereby thou seest, that the popish ordinances, which forbid eating of flesh and certaine meates, are quite contrary to the Popish ordinances forosspell: Which Paule hath plainly foretold 1. Tim. 4: The bidding the spirit, saith he, speaketh evidently, that in the latter times some eating of all depart from the faith, & shall giue heede vnto spirits of er- flesh contratur, & doctrines of deuils, which speake lyes through hypocri- Gospell.

, forbidding to mary, and commaunding to abstaine from eates, which God hath created to be received with giuing ankes. No man surely can deny that these wordes doe briefly proue the orders of Monkes and sacrificing Priestes, so cleare d manifest are both these wordes, and also their preposterous ligion. Moreouer thou seest here also, godly Reader, that Paul þt not teach that dotage & womanly holines of certaine, which oose vnto them selues certaine dayes, wherein to fast to certaine Sainctes, one to this, an other to that, all which are blinde oceedings, and bulded vpon their owne wokes. True religion, without choyce of meates and dayes, all the life long to vse modestie and sobrietie. For seeing that these must be the armour light, and it is requisite that all our life be undefiled and chast, þt not we surely never to put of this armour, but we must be and alwayes sober, temperate, watching, labouring and pray-ng. But those doting holy ones one day fast nothing but bread & water, & afterward, three whole moneths they daily be drunken and eate excessively, euē vntill they be not well in their wits. Duers fast so, that at þ euerning they eate no meate, but in þ meane aison they make them selues drunke with drinking. Who is ale to rehearse all their dotages and all their works of darkenes? þt which proceede from hence, for that foolish men consider & re-urd the worke, & not the vse of the worke, they make of armour glasle, they are altogether ignorant, whereunto it is profitable fast and abstaine: they are like vnto him whiche caried a sword this ende, that he might looke vpon it, and knew not how to vse when he was beaten. These thinges may suffice to haue been þoken for the exposition of this text.

And the peace of God which passeth all in Christ Iesus.

His text in deede is but shorte, neuertheles it doth most plentifullly abound with right Christian ctrine, instructing first, howe we ought to beh our selues toward God, secondly, how toward neighbours, saying first: Rejoyce in the Lord way. This ioy is a frute of faith, most certainly following it.

Ioy in the Lord a frute of faith, without which there is no true ioy, but sadnes & feare.

Paule witnesseth Gal. 5 where he sayth: The frute of the Sp*irit* is loue, ioy, peace, longe suffering, gentlenes, goodnes, fa meekenes, temperancie, &c. Neither can it be that that he should rejoyce in the Lorde, which hath not yet beleueed in him.
Whereupon it commeth to passe, that where no faith is, there be nothing but feare, trembling, horrour, and sadnes, as often as such either remember God, or heare him named: yea hatred enmity

imitie of God remaineth in such harts, the cause whereof is, for at þ hart woyd of faith, findeth it selfe defiled with sinnes, wherþ it dourceth not but that it hath deserued the vengeance of God, at sinnes can not but be hated of God which is iust, & so, when doth not beleue that God will be mercifull and fauourable unto it, how can it not but detest all memozie of him? so farre is of that it can reioyce in the Lord, the reuenger of sinnes. These two things, the knowledge of sinne, and of the vengeance of God repared for sinnes are in the hart of the vnbeleeuers, which hart þ it is vnbeleeuing, so hath it no hope of pardon, and therefore hat other thing can these thinges worke in it, but cause it to be oubled, cast downe and alwayes fearefull, and greatly terrifiied, þ to thinke that þ vengeance of God doth every moment hang uer it, that so that may be verified which Salomon sayth: The ngodly fleeth when no man pursueth him. And that which is þ Deut. 28: The Lord shall giue thee a fearefull hart, and thy fe shall hang in dout before thee. If a man will much perswade þch a hart, to haue ioy in the Lord, he shall doe euuen as if he pervaded the water that it shoulde burne like vnto the fire, for it can ist none of this ioy, it alwayes feeleth in conscience, that the re-enging hande of God is heauie vpon it. Whereupon the Pro-het sayth Psal. 32. Be glad O ye righteous, and reioyce in the lorde: and be ioyfull all ye that are true of hart: for this ioy in he Lorde can not be but in the righteous and them that are vpight in hart. And therefore it is manifest that this part of Scriture was writte not to sinners, but to the righteous & Sanctes. sinners must first be shewed, how they may be deliuered from sinnen, and may obtaine God to be fauorable vnto them, which phen they haue learned and so obtained, it followeth that they do þ their owne accord reioyce in the Lorde, being deliuered from emoyle of conscience.

But if any demaund, how one may be deliuered from remorse of conscience, and haue God mercifull vnto him, that is declared before at large, and shall hereafter be copiously spoken of. He How a man which seeketh to haue a free and glad conscience, and God genle and fauourable, let him not begin at his owne workes, as the de-ceitfull Papists teach, onely tormenting consciences, and increasing the wrath of God, but let him despeire of him selfe and of all his owne workes, let him embrase God in Christ, having a sure faith in the Gospell, that he shall receiue whatsoeuer it profeth. But the Gospell promiseth that Christ is giuen to vs, t he may take away our sinnes, and be our h[igh] Priest, Mediat[or] and Advocate before God, that so we may nothing dout, but our sinnes through Christ onely and his workes are forgiuen, and that we are reconciled to God, and that by this meanes conscience is delinered and conforted.

The beleeving hart re-joyceth in the Lord.

When such a faith posselleth the hart, and the Gospell is so ceiued in deede, then God appeareth sweete & altogither louy neither feeleth the hart any thing but the fauour & grace of G[od]. it standeth with a stronge and bold confidence, it feareth not le-ny euill come vnto it, it being quiet from all feare of vengeance and displeasure, is merie, and glad of so incomparable grace goodnes of God giuen vnto it freely and most abundantly Christ. Wherefore there must needes forthwith proceede from such a faith, loue, ioy, peace, gladnes, giuing of thankes, prayl a certaine meruelous delight in God, as in a most deare and farable father, which dealeth so faterly with vs, and poureth fo his giftes so plentifullly and in so great a measure, vpon them t doe not deserue them. Behold of such ioy Paule speaketh he which truely where it is, there can be no place for sinne, or feare of death or hell, yea nothing is there but a ioyfull, quiet and cinipotent trust in God and in his fauour. Wherefore it is calioy in the Lord, not in gold or siluer, gluttonie or drunke[n]ness, in delicates or singeing, health, knowledge, wisedom, power, gry, friendship, fauour, no nor in good workes, holines, or wha-euer is without God. Of these thou shalt take but a deceitfull vaine ioy, which can not pearle the hart, or enter vnto the bottome thereof, whereof thou mayst rightly say that which is wont to be spoken as a proverbe amonge the Germanes: This man reiceth, but he feeleth not any ioy in his hart. There is one ful & perfect ioy, which the beleeuers take of and in the Lord, which is i thing els, then to commit them selues vnto him, and of him alto reioyce, trust and presume, as of a most fauourable and louy father. Whatsoever ioy is not after this sorte, the Lord doth contemne and reject it, whereof Jeremie speaketh chap.9: Let the wise man reioyce in his wisedom, nor the stronge man in his strength, neither the rich man in his riches: but whoso will ioyce, let him reioyce in this, that he understandeth and knoch me. And Paule 2. Cor. 10. sayth: Let him that reioyceith re-ioyce in the Lord.

He addeth, that we must reioyce alwayes, where he toucheth us, which onely halfe the time doe reioyce in the Lorde, and raise him that is, when all thinges fall out according to their dere, but when aduersitie commeth, they chaunge ioy with sadness and sorrow, of whom the 43 Psalme speaketh: So longe as thou doest well vnto him, he will speake good of thee. But the Prophet him selfe sayth not so: I will alway blesse God, his prayse shal euer be in my mouth. Psal. 34. And he hath a iust cause so to he, for who shall hurt him, vnto whom God is mercifull, surely none shall not hurt him, neither death nor hel, wherfore the Prophet sayth in an other place: Yea though I walke through the alley of the shadow of death, I will feare no euill. Psal. 23. And Paule sayth Rom. 8: VVho shall separate vs from the loue of Christ? shal tribulation or anguish, or persecution, or famine, or akednes, or peril, or sword? I am perswaded that neither death or life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor thinges resent, nor things to come, nor heighth nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate vs from the loue of God which in Christ Iesus our Lord.

Againe I say reioyce. This repetition of þ Apostle confirmeth is exhortation, and truely not without a cause, forasmuch as we ue in the middes of sinnes, and therfore in the middes of tributions, both which do moue vs vnto sadness & heauines. Whereþe the Apostle purposing to comfort vs against these, exhorteth us that we shold always reioyce in þ Lord, albeit we sometime fall into sinnes. For it is meete, the more God with his goodnes exceedeth the euill of sinne: so much more always to reioyce in him, when we are sorrowfull because of our sinnes, which albeit þ nature they bring sadness and sorrow with them, yet forasmuch as they can not bring so much hurt, as Christ, if we beleue in him, bringeth profit and safetie, ioy in the Lorð ought always to have the first place with vs, and farre to ouercome the sorrow and sadnes þ commith by reason of our sinnes. For we must always hinke on that whiche John wrighteth: If any man sinne, we haue an Advocate with the Father, Iesus Christ the righteous, and he is he reconciliation for our sinnes. I. Joh. 2.

Let your patient minde be knowne vnto all men. He hath already taught, howe men ought to behauē them selues toward God, namely that they must serue him with a cheerfull hart and contnuall joy: now he declareth in few wordes, how the beluers ought to behauē them selues toward men, saying: Let your patient mind be knowne vnto all men. Which wordes are clē much in effect: Be ioyful toward God, alwaies reioycing in him, but toward men be of a patient mind, & pliant, applying your selues to all, & so behauing your selues, that ye be ready to do & suffer all things, & to yeeld in every thing, as much as may be any meanes without transgressing the commaundement of God, whereby ye may approue your selues to all men, and please also that which is good: not onely hurting none, but also taking good worth all things of al men, interpreting aright the sayings of al men, & accepting them in þ better part, that mē may plainly see you to be them, vnto whom all things are alike, which taking good part whatsoeuer betideth you, which stick in nothing, whiche would not disagree with any man for any cause, which be rich the rich, poore with the poore, reioycing with them that reioyce, weeping with them that weepe, & to be briefe, which be made things to all men, that all men must needes acknowledge that are grieuous to none, but agreeable, of a patient mind, pliant, & obedient toward all in all thinges. The Greeke worde epies which the Apostle here useth, meaneith the same, which signifieth in our tongue a patient and pliant mind, whereby one doth supply and shew him selfe indifferent to others, that he is the same one that he is to an other, applying him selfe indifferently to the will of all, not requiring him selfe to be counted for a rule, whereunto the rest ought to apply and order them selues.

An old Interpreter translateth it modestie, which, if thou understand it aright, and not for the onely moderation & temperacie of meate and apparell, as it is wont commonly to be taken, is not altogether untruly translated, namely, if thou understand it to be a vertue, whereby one thinking modestly of himself, endeuereith to order and apply him selfe vnto all, according to the capacitie and abilitie of euery one, ready to permit, to take in his part, to obey, to giue place, to doe, to omit, to suffer all thinges as he shall see it will profit his neighbour, albeit he must suffer hinderance and losse of his substance, name, and body therby. That these thinges may be made moze playne, it shall

What it is to let our patient mind be knowne vnto all men.

pod to declare them by examples. Paule 1. Cor. 9 writeth thus him selfe: Vnto the Iewes I become as a Iew, that I may winne the Iewes: to them that are vnder the lawe , as though I were vnder the lawe : to them that are without lawe , as though I were without lawe (when I am not without lawe as pertaining to God , but am in the lawe through Christ) I am made all thinges to all men, that I might by all meanes saue some . Be-lo, thou seest here the patient & pliant minde righly obseruing those things which are here commaunded. For those things that he writeth of him selfe haue this meaning : Sometimes he did eate, drinke, and doe all thinges as a Iewe , albeit it was not necessary that he shold so doe : sometimes he did eate and drinke with the Gentiles, and did all thinges as free from the lawe. For surely faith in God , and loue toward our neighbour , are necessarily required, all other thinges are free , so that we may freely obserue them for one mans sake , & omitt them for an other mans sake, as we shall perceiue it to be profitable to every one.

Now it is contrary to this modestie or meekenes , if one having an impatient mind, trusteth to his owne wit, and contendeth that one thing among þ rest is necessary, which thou must either omit or obserue, and so applying him selfe vnto none, but contending to haue all other to apply them selues vnto him , he negleceth & peruertereth the softnes & meekenes which is here taught, ea & the libertie of faith also : such some of the Iewes were, vnto whom we must giue no place , euen as Paule peylded not vnto hem. We see the same example commonly in Christ, but specially Matth. 12, & Mar. 2. where we reade that he suffered his Disciples to breake the Sabbath , & he him selfe also, when the case required, did breake it, when it was otherwise, he did keepe it, wherof he gaue this reason: The Sonne of man is Lord, euen of the Sabbath. Which is as much to say as : the Sabbath is free, hat thou mayst breake it for one mans sake and commoditie, and for the sake and commoditie of an other thou mayst keepe it. So Paule caused Timothe to be circumcised because of the Iewes, for that they thought that it was of importance to their saluation: againe he would not haue Titus circumcised, because certain Iewe did vnjustly vrge it, so that þ circumcision of Titus would haue bene rather a confirmation of error unto them , then haue profited them any thing. Paule therefore would keepe circumcient minde what it doth.

sion free, that he might sometime vse it, and sometime not vse it as he shoulde perceiue it to be commodious and profitable to eu ry one.

How the or dinaunces & deccrees of men must be obserued or not obserued

So, to come to other matters, when the Pope commaundeth to make confession, to fast, to abstaine from, or vse this or that kin of meate, &c: and exacteth these thinges as necessary to saluation they are to be vterly contemned, and those thinges that are con trary to these, are most freely to be done: but if he shoulde not com maund them as necessary, if any man might be holpen or edified in any thinge by the obseruation of them, surely they were to be obserued, but freely, and of loue onely, as also they are to be omited, if the omitting of them may be profitable to any. The reasone of this libertie is this: The Sonne of man is Lord of the Sabbath: if of the Sabbath, howe much more of the traditions men? Whatsoever thou shalt obserue vpon this libertie, it can not hurt any, but to obserue them of necessitie, it extinguishe fauour and the Gospell. Likewise, if one liue as yet in a Monastrie, if he obserue the bowes and ordinaunces of that life vpon Christian libertie, and of loue to his brethren that he may edify them, and of no necessitie, neither with the hinderance of his owne or other mens saluation, he shall doe godly, for he is free but if those thinges be straitly required as necessary to saluation before thou suffer thy selfe to be brought into this errore Monasteries, shauings, hoods, bowes, rules, ordinaunces, all such like must be left, and the contrary must be done, to wenes, that onely fauour and loue are necessary for a Christian, and that all other thinges are free, so that he may eyther omit or do them for the edifying and cause of them with whom he liuet Whatsoever thou shalt obserue vpon libertie and of loue, is godly: but if thou obserue any thinge of necessitie it is ungodly. The same is to be sayd of all other ordinaunces and deccrees of men which are wont to be obserued in Monasteries, that whatsoeuer doth not disagree with the woerde of God, thou mayst being free eyther obserue or omit it, according as thou shalt knowe it to be profitable and acceptable to them, with whom thou art conuenient: but if they be required as necessary, reject them all vterly and tread them vnder thy feete.

Hereupon thou now seest, what a devillish thinge the Papacie Monasteries be. For whatsoever things be free & to be permittit to free loue onely, they make them necessary, and say the keeping of them is of importance to saluation, wherby truly as much as is in them, they togidher pervert and extinguish the Gospell and faith. I passe ouer with silence, that they hererupon set and sell the care of the bellie in steede of the seruice of God. For how many among them at this day do for Gods cause, & not rather for the bellies sake, take vpon them to be Monkes or Clerkes, do frequente the quier, sing, pray, say Mass, or doe any such thinge, wherein they counterfeit and corrupt the true worship & seruice of God? The common subuersion of all Monasteries were the best reformation of all these thinges, from which so much discommoditie and no whit of profit may be looked for. Besoze one Monasterie could be perswaded concerning true Christian libertie, infinite thousands of soules in others should perish, wherefore soasmuch as they bringe no commoditiie at all; neither is there any neede of them, and they are cause of greater hinderance to a Christian common weale, then can be thought, and can not by any meanes be reformed, what can be more profitable, then that they be utterly ouerthowne and abolished?

Moreover that we may admonish here concerning the ciuill Obedience Magistrate, when he commaundeth or requireth any thing, yea if he compel thereunto, we must obey, for there commeth no losse of Christian libertie or of faith hereby, soasmuch as they doe not der Christian contend that those thinges are necessary to saluation which they libertie. do ordaine or require, but onely to maintaine outward rule, publicke tranquilltie and gouernment, & so the conscience remaineth free. Wherefore, soasmuch as it doth nothing hinder faith to do those things which the ciuill Magistrate commaundeth, but doth also profit the common weale, it shall be without dout a point of Christian obedience to endeouour to do them with a willing mind, that we may be such as are pliant & agreeable to all men, willing to doe all things, ready to deserue well of every one, & to gratifie all. Howbeit if any should contend that those commaundements of the ciuill Magistrate be necessary to saluation, then, as it is sayd of the traditions of the Papistes, the contrary rather were to be done, or at the lest it were to be witnessed, that thou doost them onely for the common weales sake, because so it is profitable to others, and not, that thou mayst obtaine saluation by them, which we haue gotten by Christ Jesus alone, as many of vs as believe in him. According to this doctrine & the examples before mentioned every one ought to behau him selfe in euery thinge & toward all men, as Paule here teacheth, that he sticke not to his owne iudgement or right, but that he shew him selfe pliant unto others, and haue regard of those thinges, which he shall knowe will be acceptable and profitable to his neighbours.

When therefore it doth nothing hinder thy faith, and profiteth thy neighbour to yeeld somewhat of thine owne right, if thou doe it not, thou art without charitie, & neglectest that Christian solenes & patient mind that Paule here speakest of: Yea if thou hast regard hereof, as he that truly believeuth in Christ ought to haue, thou must take it patiently euен when any man doth iniurie unto thee, or endamage thee, and so interprete it in the better part, and alwaies think on that, which that Martyr when all his substance was taken from him, sayd: But they shall not take away Christ from me. So whatsoeuer chaunceth unto thee, say thou: I haue as yet suffered no losse of my faith, why shoulde I not take it in good parte, which my neighbour hath done? why should I not yeeld unto him, and apply my selfe to his will? Thou canst scarce find a moze manifest example hereof, then betwene two vnfeyned friendes: for as they behau them selues one toward an other, so ought a Christian to behau him selfe toward every one: Either of them endeuoreth to gratifie other, either of them giueth place to other, suffereth, doth, and omitteth whatsoeuer he seeth to be for the profite and commodicie of the other, & that freely without all constraint. Either of them doth diligently apply him selfe to the will of the other, neither of them compelleth other to follow his mind, & if one should vse the goods of an other, y other would not be offended, but would take it in good part, and would not grudge rather to giue moze, and that I may speake briesly, betwene such there is no exaction of lawe, no grudging, no constraint, no necessitie, but libertie, fauour and good will.

Contrariwise, such as be impatient and obstinate, which take nothing in good part of any man, but go about to make all things subiect to their owne will, and to order all thinges according to their owne iudgement. such I say trouble the world, and are the cause of all discordes, contentions, warres, & whatsoeuer discomoditicie there is, they say afterward, that they did those thinges for the loue of iustice, and for that they endeououred to defend that which is right. So that that heathen man sayd not amisse. Extreme rigour is extreme iniurie. And Salomon also sayth Eccl. 7. Be thou neither too righteous nor ouer wise. For as extreme rigour is extreme iniurie, so too great wisedom is extreme ill. Which also is meant by this common saying: when wise men dote they dote beyond measure. Surely if God shoulde deale with vs according to right, we shoulde perish in a moment, wherefore as Paule prayseth in him this moderation of right, and incomparable patience and gentlenes saying 2. Cor. 10: I beseech you by the meekenes and gentlenes of Christ, so is it also meete that we doe obserue a measure of our iudgement, right, wisdom, roudence, and in all thinges apply our selues to the profit & commodity of others.

But let vs weie the woordes of the Apostle, for they are placed or without a spirituall skilfulnes, he sayth: Let your patient minde or softnes be knowne vnto all men. Where thou must or thinke that he commaundeth thee to be made knowne vnto all men, or that thou oughtest to tell thy patient mind or softnes before all men. For he sayth not, tell it forth, but let it be knowne, that is, endeavour to practize it toward men, I doe not commaund that ye shoulde thinke or speake of it, but that ye labour that it may be knowne indeede, while all men doe trie and feele it, that no man may say any other thing of you, then that ye be of a patient minde, and pliant, applying your selues to all men, being enuyed so to say euuen by manifest experience. So that if any man were never so much bent to speake otherwise of you, his mouth night be stopped by yestimonie of all other, witnessing of your patient mind and meekenes. So sayth Christ Matth. 5. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good workes, and glorifie your Father which is in heauen. And Peter sayth: Iauie your conuersation honest among the Gentiles, that they which speake euill of you as of euill doers, may by your good workes, which they shall see, glorifie God in the day of visitation. It is not surely in our power, that our patient mind shoulde be knowne and acknowledged of all men, but it shal be sufficient for us, if we endeavour that all men may haue triall ther eft in vs, and that no man may finde it wanting in our life.

How our patient minde must be made knowne vnto all men

i. Pet. 2.

Moreover [all men] is not so to be taken, that thou shouldest understand thereby all men which are in the world, but rather all sortes of men, that we haue regard to be of a patient mind as wel toward enemies as friendes, as well toward seruaunts as Maiesters, small as great, poore as rich, straungers as them at home, toward them that we know not, as toward them with whom we are familiar. For there are some, which behauie them selues very gently and patiently toward straungers, but toward them that are in the house with them, or with whome they alwayes keepe company, there are none moze obstinate or stoward then they. And how many are there, which at great and rich mens handes take all thinges in good part, interpret every thinge at the best, and most gently beare, whatsoeuer they say or doe, but toward the poore and abiects they shewe no gentlenes or meekenes, neither take any thinge of them in good part. So we are all ready to doe for our childezen, parents, friends, & kinsmen, and most fauorably interprete and willingly beare whatsoeuer they haue committed. Howe often doe we euен prayse the manifest vices of our friend, or at the least winke at them, and apply our selues most fitly unto them? but to our enemies & aduersaries we impart none of this fauour, in them we can finde nothing that is goad, nothing that is to be borne, nothing that can be interpreted in the better part, but we dispayse every thing, & take it at the worst. Against such parted and vnperfect patient mindes Paule here speakeſt saying: Let your patient mind be knowne vnto all men: he will haue our patient mind and right Christian meekenes to be perfect and entire toward all, whether they be enemies or friendes he will haue vs suffer and take in good part all things of all men without all respect either of persons or deserſts. And such without dout will our patient mind be, if it be true and not counterfet: no otherwise then gold remaineth gold, whether a godly or vngodly man possesse it, and the siluer, which Judas, who betrayed the Lorde, had, was not turned into ashes, but remayned that which it was, as truely all the good creatures of God, whosoeuer haue them, doe continue toward all thinges, that which they are: So a patient mind which is syncere comming of the spirit, continueth like it selfe, whether it light vpon enemies or friends, poore men or rich. But our nature which is full of deceit & plainly corrupt, doth so behauie it selfe, as if that which is gold in the hande of Peter, were turned into a cole in the hande of Judas, and is wont to be patient and plynant toward riche men, great pershages, straungers, freinds, and not toward euerie one, whereke it is false, vaine, lyng, hypocriticall, and nothing but deceit and mockerie before God. Hereof now learne how vnpossi-ble sound and entire, that is, spirituall meekeſſe and a patient minde is vnto nature, and how ſew there be which marke this cell, by reaſon of that deceitfull meekenes and patient minde, rough in outward ſhed verie goodly, which they ſhew vnto cer-tayne, thinking that they do well and iustly, in that they are more iſrd and impatient toward ſome. For ſo their defiled and filthie ture teacheth them, by her goodly reaſon, which alwayes iugeth and doeth againſt the ſpirit and thofe thinges that are the ſpirit, because as Paſſalayth: Rom. 8: They that are after the fleſh, ſauour the thinges of the fleſh.

But to conclude, it is maniſteſt that the Apoſtle hath compreended in theſe few wordes the whole life worthy of a Chriſtian, which he ought to leade toward his neighbour. For he that is of patient minde, pliant and meeke in deeđe, ſtudieſth to deserue well of all men, as well concerning the body as concerning the ule, as well in deeđe as in wordes, and doth alſo beare with a ioliſt patient minde, the offences and maliceſ of others. Where-ch a minde is, there is alſo loue, ioye, peace, long ſuffering, meekenes, goodnes, & what foever is the frute of the ſpirit Gal. 5: ut here fleſh murmurēth: If we ſhould endeouour to be ſo meeke d patient, ſaith the fleſh, that we ſhould take all thinges in good irt of all men, it would come to paſſe, that no man ſhould be able keepe a peice of breade ſafely & in peace for the uiuſt which ould abuse our meekenes & patient mind, they would take away l thinges, penaſt they would not ſuffer vs to liue. Marke how comparably & abundantly the Apoſtle doth ſatiſtie this diſtrusting & oliſh cogitation, even from this place vnto the ende of this text.

The Lord is at hand. As though he ſaid: if there were no Lord no God, one might ſear, when by his meekenes and patient minde he compreth all thinges alike, and taketh all thinges in good part, that that would be damage and hurt vnto him, but now there not onely is a Lord, which gouerneſt all thinges moſt iſtly, but he is alſo at hand, he can nat forget or forſake thee, he you onely of a patient minde and gentle toward all, let him haue

Christians
must not be carefull, but must cast their care on God who careth for them.

Be nothing carefull. That is, take no care at all for yo selues, let God care for you, whoe knoweth and is able to do whom ye haue now knowne that he is good and gracious. T heathen haue not without a cause care of this present life, in much as they are ignorant and do not beleue that they haue God who hath care of all, as Christ Matth. 6. said: Be not ca full for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drinke: yet for your body, what ye shall put on: for after all these thing seeke the Gentiles, but your heauenly Father knoweth, that haue neede of all these thinges. Wherefore let the whole wo take from thee, and do thee iniurie, thou shalt always haue s ufficient, and it can not be that thou shouldest perish with any uerlitie, unles they haue first taken from thee thy God, but can take him from thee, if thou thy selfe doost not cast him.
There is no cause therefore that we shoule be carefull, seing th e is our father and prouideth for vs, which hath all thinges his own hand, euen those, which seeme to take away those thin that be ouers from vs, and to endamage and hurt vs wherein euer they are able. But we haue exceeding great cause alway to reioyce in the Lord, when we are of a patient mynde towa all men, soasmuch as we are certaine, if so be that we beleue that it can by no meanes come to passe, that good thinges shou be wanting vnto vs, having Almighty God our favourable a carefull father: whom they that haue not, let vs suffer them be troubled with carke and care. It ought to be our onely ca how we may be boyde of care, and be found always toyfull to God, and meeke and of a patient mynde toward men. So wi out dout we shall trie that which David tried saying: I ha been young & now am olde, and yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede begging their bread. And that wh sayth Psal. 40: The Lord careth for me.

But in all thinges let your requestes be shewed vnto God in rayer & supplication with giuing of thankes. In these wordes ie Apostle teacheth, how our care is to be cast vpon God, and the meaning of that which he sayth is this: Onely be not carefull, but if any thing chaunce, which may make you carefull (as deede innumerable such are wont to come vnto those that liue vpon God the world) so behaue your selues, that ye attempt nothing at all with your care, what soever that shalbe which chaunceþ vnto you, but casting of care, turne your selues with prayer and supplication vnto God, and desire him that he will bring to passe and wish that which your selues otherwise shoulde in vaine haue attempted with your care to accomplish. Howbeit desire this with giuing of thankes, forasmuch as ye haue such a God as hath care of you, and vnto whom ye may safely commit all carke and care vpon you. But he that will not so behaue himselfe when any thing appeneth, but will first weye all thinges by his owne reason, and order them according to his owne iudgement, and so take to himselfe the care of his thinges, he shall wrap himselfe in innumerabile discommodities, he shall loze all ioy and quietnes thereþ, and yet shall preuaile nothing, but labour in vaine, & plunge himselfe so much more in troubles and miseries, that he shall not be able to escape out of them againe, which we learne daily both by our owne and by other mens experience. Now that which Paule here admonishest concerning prayer tendeth vnto this end, lest that any man should neglect all thinges & commit them to God, and he himselfe sleepe and do nothing at all, no not so much as once pray for them: for he that shoulde vse this sloithfulness, albeit he were now quiet, shall easily be wrapped in cares, whereof he shall not be able to ridde himselfe: we must do our eneuour and not sleepe, and therefore it is that many thinges be incident, which are wont to bring carefullnes, whereby we mighte as it were compelled to pray vnto God. Wherefore Paule saith not in vaine ioyned togidher these two: Be nothing carefull, and: In all thinges let your requestes be shewed vnto God in rayer and supplication with giuing of thankes. Nothing and all do indeede greatly differ, howbeit the Apostle therefore put hem togidher, that he might signifie that it can not be, but that many and innumerable thinges be incident, which are wont to

Now we must here see how our prayer must be framed, what is the true maner of praying. The Apostle setteth downe four thinges, prayer, supplication, giuing of thankes, and questes or petitions. Prayer is those wordes or speche, where is, when the petition is urged or made moze earnest by so thing, as when one prayeth for his father, or for some oþ thinge which is deare and excellent vnto him, as when we pray vnto God by his mercy, by his sonne, by his promise, by his name, &c. As Salomon Psal. 132: Lord remember Dauid, all his trouble. And Paule Rom. 12: I beseech you by the mercies of God. And 2. Cor. 10: I beseech you by the mekenes a-

Prayer. Has sometimes some thing is desired, so also other thinges are Supplicatio[n] clared, as is the Lords Prayer and the Psalmes. Supplicati-

A petition gentlenes of Christ, &c. A petition or request is, when we na- or request. that which is desired, and for which prayer and supplication made, as in the Lordes Prayer, all that composition of wor[ship] is called prayer, but those seuen thinges for which we pray, halowed be thy name, thy kingdome come, &c. are petitions. according to that saying Math. 7: Aske, and it shalbe giuen ye- seeke, and ye shall fynde: knocke, and it shalbe opened vnto you. For whosoever asketh, receiueth: and he that seeketh f- deth: and to him that knocketh, it shalbe opened. Giuing

Giuing of thankes. thankes is when the benefites of God are rehearsed, where faith in God is strengthened, and stirred vp so much moze con- densly to looke for that which is desired, & for which we do pra- y. Wherefore prayer urgeth or earnestly asketh by supplicati- but is strengthened and made sweete & acceptable by giuing thankes, and so by this strength and sweetnes it preuaileth, a obtaineth, what soever it asketh. This maner of prayer we re- co haue bin vsed in the Church, and among the holy fathers of old Testament, which were wont alwayses in their prayers aske with supplication and giuing of thankes. The same also see in the Lordes Prayer, which beginneth with giuing thankes and with prapse, when as euen in the beginning ther we confes God a father, vnto whom the godly mynde hath celle by his fatherly loue and by the loue of his sonne, vnts wh-soplication nothing may be compared; wherefore it is beth the l^t and most excellent prayer of all which may be had.

Moreover in these wordes Paule hath verie well expressed The myste-read many thinges in the booke^s of Moses. It was lawfull f^{or} the Priestes only to burne incense, now all we which beleue in Christ, are Priestes, wherefore it is lawfull for all vs, and f^{or} vs onely to burne the incense of prayers. The censer that olden vessel, is the wordes which we vter in prayer, surely olden and precious, as those are, whereof the Lordes prayer insisteth, the Psalmes and other prayers of the Scripture. or commonly in the Scripture vessels signifie wordes, f^{or} that ir meanings are contained in wordes as in a vessell, and by wordes are vтерed and received as out of a vessell, as wine, water, burning coles, and such like, are contained in vessels, and taken out of vessels. So by the cuppe of Babylon Apoc. 17. the doctrine of men is understood, and by the cuppe wherein the lood of Christ is dronke the Gospele.

urthermore burning coles, whereupon the frankincense was What is signified by lyde, signifie giuing of thankes, and rehearasing of benefites in ayer, which we are wont to do in making supplication. For, the burning at by fierie coles benefites are signified it is manifest euē out f^{or} the 12. to the Rom. where the Apostle recitereth the saying of was layde.
Salomon Proverb. 25: If thine enemie hunger, feede him: if e thirst, give him drinke: for in so doing thou shalt heape coles f^{or} fire on his head. And benefites may be rightly called coles of he, sozasmuch as they inflame the heart with loue, although it be cold. In the Lawe it was prohibited to laye the frankincense vpon any other coles, but them that were of the altar of þ Lord, which signifieth, that we must not rehearle our own good deedes prayer, as that Pharise did, Luc. 15: but onely the benefites of We must God bestowed vpon vs in Christ. He is our altar, by him we must offer, for the benefites receiuued by him we must give thankes, give thanks to God by Christ.
and make mention of them in prayer f^{or} the increasing of our l^t. This Paule teacheth Coloss. 3: where he sayth: Do all inges in the name of the Lord Iesus, giuing thankes to God e Father by him. For God can not suffer, that thou shouldest loie of any thing els in his sight, which he declared in a type f^{or} figure Leuit. 10, where we read that Nadab and Abihu the sonnes of Aaron were taken and consumed of the flame from the altar of God, because they burned incense taking other fire than of the altar of the Lord. The workes of Christ only are acceptable to God, wherefore for these onely we must both give thank and reioyce in prayer.

The petition made in prayer signified by the incense laid on the burning coles.

The incense signifieth the petitions made in prayer. For petitions are, whereof prayer consisteth, and which ascend unto God, according as Paul sayth: Let your petitions be shewed unto God, wherein he seemeth to haue considered and interpreted them as a sauour ascending from the censer. As though had said: when ye will burne incense sweete and acceptable unto the Lord, make, that your petitions be shewed unto God with supplication and giuing of thankes, this incense and this sauour as it is most sweete unto God, so doth it ascend straight unto heaven, like vapoures of smoke, and entreth euuen unto the throne of God. And as burning coles do giue a strong sauour and make ascend vppward: so the memorie of the benefites of God, whiche we rehearse by giuing of thankes, and whereof we do as it we aduertize God and our selues, doth make prayer stedfast and bold, which cheerefully and gladly ascendeth into heauen, without which truly prayer fainteth, is cold and of no force. Wherefore whosoeuer thou art, before thou pray with faith and effectually, they heart must be inflamed with the memorie of the benefites, which God hath bestowed vpon vs in Christ.

But perhaps some man will demaund, how our petitions shewed or become manifest unto God; seeing that they be not only knowne unto him before we pray, but he also doth send that, which we aske? Whereunto I aunswere: the Apostle rejoyned this, that he might teach, of what sort true prayer ought to be; to wit, assured and hauing confidence and trust in God.

We must not praye at adventure but be certainly perswaded that we shall be heard of God. which passeth not away into the winde, neither is made at a venture, as their prayer is, which pray, and haue no regard whether God heareth or not, yea rather beleue that he doth not heare, which undoubtedly is not to praye or to aske of God, but to tempt and mocke God. For if any man did desire money me, whom I certainly knew, not to perswade himselfe that should receive it, I could not suffer such an asker, of whom might assure my selfe to be mocked: how much more is God offended at our much crying out and babbling, when we do continual ually babble much & crie out, & do not thinke at all whether he eareth vs. Learne therefore here, that they petitions must be ewed unto God, that is, that thou must so aske, that thou doute ot, that they petitions be knowne and accepted of God, and be eue certainly, that thou shalt obtaine what soever thou doest ske, with which faith if thou be endued, it shall so come unto thee indeed. For as we belieue, so it commeth unto vs. Where-he, as the smoke carrieth the sauour upward from the censer: so ith carrieth the petitions of the beleeuers into the sight of God, hereby we assuredly belieue, that our petitions shall come unto God, and that we shall undoubtedly obteine those thinges that we ske. Paul by these wordes [be shewed] did undoubtedly meane that, which is escriptoones in the Psalms: God hath heard my petition, Give eare Lord unto my prayer, and such like. Hereof Christ speaketh Matth. 21, and Mar. 11. Whatsoever ye shall ske in prayer, if ye belieue, ye shall receiuie it. And James saith Cap. 1: Aske in faith and wauer not, for he that wauereth shall receiue nothing of the Lord. Who may not now hereof perceiue, that much babbling and crying out, which is made common-through the world in monasteries, is a mocking and deluding of God? The prayers of these, if they may be called prayers, are boundantly shewed before men, for they crie out and babble too much, but there is no regard of them with God, they are not nowne of him, neither come they unto his eares, that is, he oth by no meanes heare them, for that they do not belieue, or re assured, that their crying out or much babbling is heard of God, wherefore as they belieue, so do they receive. It was time therefore long since, that those mockinges and blasphemies of God shold be abolished. But if we praye as we are here taught, there shalbe nothing surely whiche we may not obtaine. Now we praye for many things continually, and receive nothing, neither is it any meruell, seeing we praye so, that our petitions be not ewed unto God, for that we do not belieue that they be mani-est unto him. Wo to our diffidence and incredulitie.

And the peace of God which passeth all vnderstanding, shall reserue your hearts and myndes in Christ Iesus. In how goodly an order both Paul here instruct a Christian man? First he tea-beth him to be glad and ioyfull in the Lord by faith: secondly to shew himselfe meeke and gentle to all his neighbours. And if thou say, how can I do that without losse or hinderance? he answerech: The Lord is at hand. If thou againe obiect: But whif men persecute me, and euen bereue me of that I haue? He a deth: be nothing carefull, but let thy petitions be shewed vnto God. Where if the flesh againe murmur, what if in the mea- season I be oppressed and spoiled? he concludeth that there shal be nothing lesse, the peace of God shall preserue and keepe the whereof I must now entreat somewhat. By the peace of God is not meant here that peace, whereby God is peaceable and quiet in himselfe, but that which he giueth vnto vs, and poureth into our heartes, euen as also it is called the word of God whiche giueth vs, that we may preache it and beleue it. So when he giueth this peace vnto vs, it is called the peace of God, euen because we haue the same with him, when in the world notwithstanding we suffer affliction.

Now this peace passeth all vnderstanding, reason, and knotledge of man: which is not so to be vnderstood, as though man can not at all perceiue or know it, for if we haue peace with God truly it must be felt in our heart and conscience, otherwise our heartes and myndes could not be preserued by it, but it is thinke to be vnderstood: When tribulation commeth vpon them, which know not to flie vnto God with prayer and supplication, but trunche to their owne wisedome and care, whereby they seeke peace, but that which reason is able to know, which is that, whereby tribulation taketh an end, and is chaunged with outward tranquilltie: this peace doth not passe reason, but is agreeable vnto i[n]asmuch as it is sought and found out of it. Wherfore they that are vnyoud of sayth are exceedingly disquieted, and troubled vntill according to the reason of the flesh they obtaine th[is] peace by heardly delivering or ridding themselues of aduersitie not regarding whether they bring that to passe by force or by crasche, as he that hath receiued a wound seeketh to haue it healed, &c. But they that rejoyce sincelie in the Lord, it is sufficient for them, that they know that they haue God favourable vnto them, and haue assured peace with him, they abyde willingly tribulation, being nothing carefull for that peace of reason but the remouing of outward troubles, but they endure them valiantly, looking to be strengthened inwardly by faith, taking care whether the aduersities which they suffer, shall remaine hort or a long time, whether they shalbe temporal or continuing; neither are disquieted with caring what ende they shall haue; They comit all things to God, seeking not to know, when, how, where, or by whom he wil give them quietnes. Wherefore God igaine sheweth them this fauour, that he maketh the end of their riall to be such, and with so great commodities, as no man could other suspect or wish for. Loe, this is that peace of the crosse; the peace of God; the peace of conscience; true Christian peace, which maketh that a man outwardly also, as much as is in him, ieth quietly and peaceably with all men; & troubleth no man. This peace reason is not able by any meanes to know, or comprehend, that a man under the crosse may haue quietnes of minde and ioy of heart; and peace euen in the deadly iuision of his enemies: this is the gift and worke of God, knowne to none, but to him that hath it; and hath tried it: Christ our Lord and Deueil

Whereas Paul said: Now the God of hope fill you with all joy & peace in believing; that which he calleth in these wordes, peace in belieuing; he calleth in our present text y^e peace of God: Moreover Paul signifieth in these wordes, that whosoever will reioyce in the Lord by faith, and be meeke and of a patient minde toward all by loue, the Deuell undoubtedly is against him; and will raise vp some crosse, that he may drue him from sa Christian purpose, wherefore the Apostle will haue euerie one to be prepared against this assault of Satan, and to place his peace there where Satan can not trouble it, namely in God, and not chirke now he may cast of the crosse, but suffer the aduersarie to take on, and rage as he list, he in the meane season patiently looking for the Lord, that he comming may make an ende of aduersarie and trouble; for by this meanes his mynde, heart and conscience are reserved and kept in peace. Neither can patience endure, where he heart is not confirmed with this peace, for that he only which hath this peace doth throughtly perswade himselfe that God is auourable unto him, & carefull for him; and maketh no accompt what chaunceh unto him from creatures. Moreover let no man understand here the heartes and mindes to be the will and knowledge of nature, but as Paule himselfe interpreteth, the heartes and mindes in Christ Iesu, that is, such as we haue in Christ, of Christ; and under Christ. These are the heartes and mindes which faith and loue cause, with which they that be endued, do behave themselves most godly toward God, and most louingly and gently toward their neighbour. Toward God they so behau themselves, that they beleue in him, and loue him with their whole heart, and are also most ready, with their whole heart and with all their cogitations to do those thinges which shalbe ac ceptable to God and their neighbours; as much as, yea more then they are able: Such heartes and mindes the Deuell goeth about with the feare of death and other troubles to terrifie and drive from this godlines, erecting a false hope there against by the denises and imaginacions of men, wherewith the minde is seduced, that it may seeke to be comforted and holpen of it self or other creatures; which if it do, surely he hath drawne such a man from the care of God and wrapped him in his owne bain care, such as will endevour to get him away from him: and Verse 1 Then I saye, that the heire as long as he is a childe, differeth nothing from a ser-uaunt, though he be Lord of all,

- But is vnder tuters and gouerners, vntill the time appointed of the father.
Euen so, we when we were children, were in bondage vnder the rudiments of the world.
But when the fulnes of time was come, God sent forth his Sonne made of a woman, and made vnder the Lawe, That he might redeeme them which were vnder the Lawe, that we might receiue the adoption of the sonnes.
And because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts, which cryeth, Abba, Father.
Wherfore now thou art not a seruaunt, but a sonne: if thou be a sonne, thou art also an heire of God through Christ.

His text toucheth the very pith of Paules chiefe doctrine, the cause why it is well understood of so few, is not, for that it is so obscure and hard, but because there is almost no knowledge of faith lese in the world, without which it can not be that one shoulde rightly understand Paule, who euerie where intreathes of faith with such force of the spirit as he is able. I must therefore speake somewhat, that this text may be made plaine, and that I may more conveniently bring light unto it in expounding it, I will speake a few wordes in maner of a preface. First therefore we must understand that that treatise, wherein is intreated of good workes, doth farre differ from that wherein is intreated of iustification, as there is verie great difference betweene the substance and the working, betweene a man & his worke. Now iustification is of man, and not of workes: for man is either iustified and saued, or judged and condemned, and not workes. Neither is it in controuersie among the godly, that man is iustified by no worke, but rightheousnes must come unto him from some other where, then from his owne workes. For Moses wryteth of Abel after this sort: The Lord had respect vnto Abel, and to God first re- his oblation. First he had respect to Abel himselfe, then to hi garded the oblation, because that Abel was first counted righteous, entire man, and the and acceptable unto God, and then for his sake his oblation all the worke.

Was allowed, and not he because of his oblation. Againe, God had no respect to Cain, and therefore neither to his oblation where againe thou seest, that regard is had first of the worker th of the worke. Of this place it is verie plainly gathered, that n worke can be allowed of God, whereas he which worketh tha worke, was not first acceptable to him: and againe, that n worke is disallowed of him, unles the author thereof be disal lowed before. I thinke that these thinges wilbe sufficient concer ning this matter in this place, of which it is easie to understand that there are two sortes of workes: some going before iustifica tion, and some following it, and that these last are good worke in deede, but that those other do onely appeare to be good. Hereo commeth such disagreemet betwenee God, and those counterfec holy ones, for this cause nature and reason rise and rage against the holy Ghost, this is that whereof almost all the whole Scrip ture intreateith. The Lord in his word defineth, that all worke that goe before iustification, are euell, and of no importaunce and requireth that man himselfe before all thinges be iustified

he is regen erate can doe nothing that is good.

Againe, he pronounceh all men, which are not yet regenerate and haue not chaunged that nature, which they received of their parentes; with the newe creature of Christ, to be bimighteous and wicked, according to that saying Psal. 116: All men are lyars, that is, vnable to performe their dutie, and to doe those thinges, which by right they ought. And Gen. 6: The heart of man is alwayes ready vnto euell, whereby undoubtedly it commeth to passe, that he is able to do nothing that is good, which hath the fountaine of actions, that is his heart, corrupted. And it

God hath re- he do many workes which in outward shew seeme good, they are gard first to y no better then the oblation of Cain. & so doth the worker then H. Hereagainst commeth soch reason our reverend maistres to y worke, seeming to her selfe meruelous wise, yet indeede is vnwise and quite cōtra blynde, and is not ashamed to gainsay her God, & to reproue him rie, affirming of lying, she being furnished with her follies and verie strawie that by his armout, yo wit, the light of nature, free will, the strength of na works the worker is iu nature, also with the bookees of the heathen and wch. the doctrines nstified. of men! She dareth with her euell sounting stringes make a oyce against God, that the workes of a man euen not yet iustified, are good workes; and not workes like vnto Cains, (which God pronounceþ) yea and so good, that he that worketh them is iustified by them. For so Aristotle hath taught, that he that worketh well is made good. Unto this saying she leaneth and ticketh bnmoueably, and wresteth the Scripture cleane contrarie, contending that God will haue respect first to the workes, he to the worker. Such verie deuelish doctrine beareth the sway now euerie where in schooles, colledges & monasteries, wherein no other saints, then Cain was, haue rule and authoerite. Now of this errour an other immediatly springeth. They which attribute so much to workes, & do not accordingly esteeme the worker in sound iustification, go so farre, that they ascribe all merit and oueraigne rightheousnes to workes done before iustification, making almost no account of faith, alleaging that which James saith, that without workes it is dead. Which sentence of the Apostle when they little understand, they attribute almost nothing to faith, they alwayes sticke to workes, whereby they thinke they do merit exceedingly of God, and are perswaded that for their workes sake they shall obtaine the fauour of God, and by his meanes do they continually disagree with God, shewing hemselues to be the right posteritie of Cain. God hath respect unto man, these to the workes of man: God aloweth the workes for his sake that worketh, these require that for the workes sake the worker may be crowned. Now God goeth not from his sentence, as it is meete and iust, and these will seeme nothing lesse he to erre in any respect. They will not haue their good workes contemned, reason to be nothing esteemed, free will to be counted vnfectuall, or surely, if thou doest here strine against them, they beginne to be angrie with God, and count it a small matter to kill their brother Abel.

But here perhaps thou wilt say: what is needfull to be done? by what meanes shall I first of all become righteous, and acceptable to God? How shall I attaine to this perfect iustification? The Gospell aunswereþ, preaching that it is necessarie that thou heare Christ, and repose thy selfe wholy in him, denying thy selfe, & distrusting all thine owne strength. By this meanes thou shalt be chaunged from Cain to Abel, & being thy selfe acceptable, shalt offer acceptable giftes to the Lord. This faith, as it is preached unto thee for no merit of thine owne ; so is it giuen unto thee for no deseruing of thine, but of meere grace. And thifaith iustifieth thee, thou being endued herewith the Lord remis-teth all thy synnes, and that by the contemplation of Christ hisonne, in whom this faith beleueith and trusteth. Moreouer he giueth unto such a faith his spirit, which doth thoroughly chaung a man and make him new, so that now he hath other reason, an an other will, then before, namely that which is ready unto good.

Such a one worketh nothing but good workes, neither can it be but good, which he being good before, shall do, whereof I haue spoken somewhat before. Wherefore nothing els is required unto iustification, then to heare Jesus Christ our Saviour, and to beleue in him, howbeit neither of these is the worke of nature, but both of onely grace. He therefore that goeth about to attain hereunto by workes, shutteth the way to the Gospell, to faith grace, Christ, God, and all thinges that helpe unto saluation.
Againe, unto good workes there is neede onely of iustification, which he that hath attained, doth worke onely good workes; and beside such a one none. Whereof it sufficietly appeareth, that the begining, the thinges following, and the order of mans saluation are after this sort. First of all is required, that thou heare the word of God, next that thou beleue, then that thou do worke, & so at the last become saued and happie. He which chaungeþ this order, without doute is not of God. Paul also describeth this order Rom. 10, saying : VVhosoeuer shall call vpon the Name of the Lord, shalbe saued. But how shal they call on him, in whom they haue not beleueed ? and how shall they beleue in him, of whom they haue not heard ? and how shall they heare without a preacher ? and how shal they preach, except they be sent ? Therefore Christ teacheth vs to pray the Lord of the haruest, that he would send forth labourers into his haruest, that is, sincere preachers. Wher we heare these preach the true word of God, we may beleue, which faith iustifieth a man, and maketh him godly in deede, that he now calleth vpon God in the spirit of the sonnes, and worketh nothing but that which is good, and thus becometh a man saued. Which is no other thing, then if I say : He that beleueueth shalbe saued. Againe, he that worketh without faith is condemned, as Christ saith : He that doth not beleue shalbe condemned, from which no workes shall deliuere him.

What is required to iu-stification.

Conser now herewith those things which are wont commonall to be spoken of honestie and rightheousnes. Are they not wone us to say? I will endeavour, that I may yet become honest. It meete surely that we study to lead an honest life and to do good workes. Well, admit this to be so. But if one theſe aske them howe may applie our selues vnto honestie, and by what meanes we may attaine vnto it: they aunswere, that we must fast, praie, frequent temples, auoide synnes &c. Hereupon one becommeth a Hypocriticall charterhouse Monke, another chooseth some other order of & counterfeſt ionkes: an other is consecrated a Priest: ſome torment their flesh by wearing heare cloth: other scourge their bodies with whipps, ther afflicte themſelues after other ſorts. But theſe are euē of ſaints broode, & their workes are no whit better then þ workes of Cain. For the man himſelfe continueth the ſame that he was before, vngodly, and without all iuſtification: there is a certayne jaunge made only of outward workes, of apparell, of places &c. Neither are theſe any other the very apes of ſaints, for they do reþpectuously imitate the maners & workes of ſaints, when as they themſelues are nothing leſſe then the ſaints. They ſcarce thinke of faith, they presume onely of ſuch workes as ſeeme good vnto hemſelues, thinking by theſe to come vnto heauen. Of whom Christ alid: Enter in at the ſtraight gate: for I ſay vnto you, many ſeeke to enter in at it, & can not. Why is this? because they know not what this narrow gate is. For it is faith, which doth al togither annihilate or make a man nothing in his owne eyes, & requireth he put no truſt in any of his owne workes, but that he leane only on þ grace of God, & be prepared for it to leauē & ſuffer all things. But theſe holy ones of Cains broode thinke their good workes to be the narrow gate, & are not therfore extenuated, or made leſſe, whereby they might enter: they do not leauē confidence in their workes, but gathering them together in great coules, they hang hem about them, and ſo go about to enter in being burdened, and is it were swollen bigge, which is as poſſible for them, as for a camell with his bounched backe to go through þ eye of a needle.

Whē thou ſhalt begin to preach vnto theſe of faith, they laugh and hille at thee: Doest thou count vs, ſay they, for Turkes and Heathen, whom it behoueth now firſt to learne faith? Is there ſuch a compagnie of Priests, Monkes and Nunnes, & is not faith knowne? Who knoweth not what he ought to beleeue? euen manifest synners know that. And being after this so vt animated as stirred vp, they thinke that they be abouantly endued with fauour and that the rest is now to be finished & made perfect by worke Wherupon they make too small & scelender account of fauour, i I haue said, because they are ignorant both what fauour is, & th it alone doth iustifie. They call it fauour, when they beleue tho things which they haue heard of Chrift, which kynde of fauour Deuels also haue, & yet are nothing therefore iustified: but th deserueth to be called rather an opinion of men then fayth. For we do oftentimes admonish, it is not sufficient, that thou maist worfely be called a Christian, to beleue those things to be tru which are preached of Christ, which kynde of fauour they of Caire broode also haue: but thou must also nothing doute, that thou art of the number of them, vnto whom all those benefits of Christ are giuen & exhibited. Whiche he that beleueth, must plainly confesse that he is holy, godly, righteous, the sonne of God, and certaine of saluation, & that by no merit of his owne, but by the only me ry of God poured forth vpon him for Christes sake! Whiche he beleueueth to be so rich and plentifull, as it is in deede, that al though he be as it were dwowned in synnes, he is notwithstanding thereby made holy & the sonne of God. Whereof if he should an thing dout, he should procure exceeding ignominie & reproch at baptisme whiche he hath received, & to y^e Lords supper, & also ri proue y^e word & grace of God of falsehood. Wherfore take heed that thou nothing dout, that thou art y^e sonne of God, & therfore righteous, by his grace, let all feare & care be here awaye. How beit thou must feare & tremble that thou maist perseuer such a on vnto y^e end: Thou must not being in this case, be careful that thou maist become righteous & saued, but that thou maist perseuer and continue. Neither must thou do this, as though it consisted in thine own strengthe, for all thy righteousness & saluation is of only grace. whereunto only thou must trust: But whē thou knowest that it is of grace alone, & that they fayth also is the gifte of God, thou shal for good cause liue in feare & care, lest that any temptation do violently move thee fro this fayth. Hereunto pertaineth that whiche is writ ten in the 9. chap. of Ecclesiastes: The righteous & wise, yea and their seruaunts also are in the hand of God, & there is no man that knoweth either loue or hate, but all things are before thē. It hap peneth vnto one as vnto an other, &c. For y^e present time every one

ie by faith is certaine of his saluation; but constanly to stand ad persequer, as it is the gift of the Lord, and not in our owne strength, so ought we alwayes to haue a care and feare theredor.
Whē they of Cains bwoodē heare faith to be chaireid of after is soȝt, they can not sufficienly maruell at our madnes, as it comes vnto them. God turne this away from me, say they, that I ould affirme my selfe holy and godly, farre be this arrogancie ad rashnes from me. I am many wayes a miserable sinner, I ould be mad, if I shold arrogate holines vnto my selfe. And us they mocke at true faith, and count such doctrine as this soȝ ecrable error, and goe about with might and mayne to extin uish the Gospell. These are they that deny the faith of Christ, & persecute it in the whole world, of whom Paule speaketh I. Tim.
In the latter times many shall depart from the faith, &c. For ie see it brought to passe by the meanes of these, that true faith eth every where oppressed, is not onely not preached, but also ommonly disallowēd and condemned, with all them that either ach vȝ profess it. The Pope, Bishops, Colleges, Monasteries, nd Uniuersities haue now aboue ffe hundred yeares persecu ed it with one mind and consent, yea and that maruelous sticke nd obstinately, and haue done no other thing vnto the world, but very where as much as they were able vnto many vnto hell.
Which truely both hath bene, and is that last and most hurtfull persecution of Antichrist. The Lord at the last bring it to an end.
If any obiect against the admiration or rather mad sensenes f these men, that we doe nothing but that that is neete, if we ount our selues euē holy, trusting to the goodnes of God iustifi ying vs, seeing that David prayed thus: Preserue thō me, O Psa 86:14 Lord, for I am holy. And soȝ that Paule sayth: The Spirit of God Rom.8:46 beareth witnes vwith our Spirit that we are the children of God.
They answer that the prophet and Apostle would not teach vs n these wordes, or giue vs an example, which we shold follow, but that they being peculiarily and speciaill enlightened, received such reuelatiō of them selues, that they were holy. And after this soȝt they misinterpret and wlest whatsoeuer place of the Scritp tures affirmeth that we are holy, saying that such doctrines are not written for vs, but that they are rather peculiar miracles and prerogatives as they call them, which doel not belonge to all.

They attribute tha to their owne workes which they attribute not to the grace o

God: they affirme that they doe saue vs, and not this: they trus to works, they can not trust to Gods grace: which blindnes wot they commeth vnto them, inasmuch as they will not build vpon the rocke, let them build vpon the sand, & so be drowned by thei owne meanes, that by their owne workes and satisfactions they may torment them selues even vnto death, gratifying Satar herein, for that they will not rest vpon the grace of God, & seru

They that are endued with a true faith, are both ioyfull in God, and dutifull toward their neighbours, the Lord with a gentle and sweete seruice. For they that are endued with true faith, and doe rest vpon the grace of the Lord, it is meruelous, how they are in God, by his goodnes, of most quiet mindes, and greatly reioycing with holy ioy: whereupon they doe also with pleasure apply them selues to good workes, not to such as these of Cains broode doe, as to sayned prayers, fasting, base & filthy apparell, & such like trifles, but to true & right good workes, whereby their neighbour is profitid, and from whence no small commodicie redoundeth vnto men. Moreouer, they are of most ready mindes to suffer whatsoener thinges, inasmuch as they are certaine that God doth fauour them, and hath a care of them. These are right honest and profitable men, of whom both God is glorified, & men much profitid. When as those of Cains broode serue to no vse, either before God or before men, no, they doe not so much as profit them selues, but are onely an unprofitable lumpe of earth, yea not onely unprofitable, but exceeding pernicious and hurtfull also both to them selues, and to others. For inasmuch as they are destitute of true faith, they can not give vs

God his due glory, nor doe those good workes which may truprofit their neighbour. For those workes that they apply them sues unto, are their owne inuentions, consisting in gestures, aparell, places, times, meates and such like trifles, whereby their neighbour can be holpen neither in body, nor minde, nor in any inge els. For what can it profit me that thy crowne is shauen ry broad : that thou wearest a gray coule : what profit bringeth that thou fastest to day, and keepest holy day to morrow : that you abstainest from this meate, and eatest that : that thou remaiest in this place : that thou readest and mumblest vp daily so may wordes ? Surely thou doost nothing els by these, but torment y selfe to please Satan ; and to be a pernicious and hurtfull example to thy neighbours : for there is no Christianitie in thy life eing such : Thou belieuest not as it behoueth a Christian to be-lieue, and therfore neither doost thou pray Christianly : Thy fa-ting also is not true chastising of thy body, but rashly taken vpon thee in steede of a good worke : In a summe, this thy seruice and udy of religion is no other thing, then in time past amonge the ewes was the religion of Moltch and Baal, in the honour of hom they did kill and burne euuen their owne chldren. So pernitious and pestilent an example is this thy holines, which seeneth so goodly vnto thee, which when it meruelously counterfaeth a shew of godlines, it draweth miserable men to the follow-ng thereof, and vtterly extinguisheth true religion.

Here perhaps some godly man will thinke: If the matter be o, and our workes doe not saue vs, but onely to heare Christ and eleue in him, who is giuen vnto vs of the Father to be our righeousnes and saluation, to what ende then are so many precepts giuen vnto vs, and why doth God so severely require that they be beyed ? The present text of the Apostle shall giue vnto vs the solution of this question, and vpon this fit occasion we will now ener into the exposition thereof. The Galathians being taught of Paule the faith of Christ, but afterwards seduced by false Apostles, thought that the matter of our saluation must be finished & made perfect by the workes of the law, and that onely faith doth not suffice. These Paule calleth backe againe from workes vnto faith with great diligence, and words meruelous effectual, plainly prouing that the workes of the law which goe before faith, doe make vs onely seruaunts, and be of no importance to godlines & saluation: but that faith doth make vs the sonnes of God, & t from thence true good workes doe without constraint so thw most plentifullly flowe. But here we must accustom our selues Whom Paul calleth a seruaunt the wordes of the Apostle: He calleth him a seruaunt that is calleth a ser- cupied in workes without faith, whereof we haue already incul-taunt, and ued at large: he calleth him a sonne, which is righteous and whom a sonne in the uech by faith alone, without workes. The reason hereof is tht text which is this seruaunce, although he apply him selfe to good workes, here intrea- he doth it not with that minde, with which a sonne doth; thated of. with a minde that is free, willing, & certaine that the inheritance and all the good thinges of the Father are his: but doth it as that is hyred with a stipend in an other mans house, who hope-not that the inheritance shal come vnto him. The works in deof the sonne and the seruaunt are like, & almost all one accordito the outward appearance, but their mindes do differ exceeding-much, and their hope is nothing like, euen as Christ him selfe sayth: The seruaunte abideth not in the house for euer: but sonne abideth for euer. Joh.8. These of Cains broode want faith of sonnes, which they them selues confesse, for they think a most absurd thing, & wicked arrogancie, to affirme them seluto be the sonnes of God and holy, therefore as they beleue, en-so are they counted before God, they never become the sonnes God, or holy, nevertheles they are exercised with the workes the law, and are well wearied, wherefore they are and remaiseruaunts for euer. And they receiuue no other reward, but the temporall things, namely, quietnes of life, abundance of good dignitie and honours, &c. Which we see to be vsuall amongst followers of Popish religion, then whom there is none at th-day that liueth more pleasauntly, more welthily, more gloriouand honorably. But this is their reward, they are seruaunts and not sonnes, wherefore in death they shall be thrust from all godthinges, neither shall any portion of eternall inheritance convnto them, who in this present life would beleue nothing ther-of. So therefore it is that seruaunts and sonnes are not much bi-like in workes, but in minde and faith they are most unlike.

Now the Apostle endeuoureth here to proue, (which indeel is the very matter) that the law with all the workes thereof do make vs no other then seruaunts, if this faith in Christ, where we haue spoke, be away. For that alone doth make vs the sonn-

o God. Neither the law nor nature can give it, ouely the Gospel bringeth it, when it is heard with an holy silence of minde. It is the word of grace which the holy Ghost doth forthwith followe; all is shewed in very many places, and specially Act. 10: where it is read, that the holy Ghost did by and by fall on Cornelius and his familie hearing the preaching of Peter: Moreover the lawe is giuen for this, that we might learne by it, howe vnylly we are by grace, and howe farre from being of the minde of sonnes; ^{why it was} giuen.
For we are plainly of a seruile minde. For we being left to our sences, can in no wise be free from the lawe, neither if we doe any god thing, doe we it willingly, soasmuch as that faith of sonnes swanting, wherwith he that is endued, knoweth assuredly, that his eternall inheritance shall come unto him, and is of his owne accord inclined and bent, with a willing and ready spirit to doe those thinges that are good. Nowe these men doe willingly confess that they are vnde of this faith, and if they would confess the truth in deede, they shoulde also plainly confess, that they had ffre rather be without all lawe, and that they are against their wills subiect thereunto. Wherefore all thinges are among them constrained, and vnde of faith, and they are in very deede compelled to confess that by the lawe they can not attaine any further. Which one thing they ought to leirne by the law, and know, that they are seruaunts, and haue nothing belonging to sonnes, wherby they might be enflamed with desire to come from seruitude to the state and condition of sonnes: and might make no account of their owne thinges, as in deede they ought to doe, that God of his face might aduaunce them unto an other state by faith. Nowe is were a sound understanding of the law, and the true vse therewer, whereof this is the office, to reprove and conuince men hereafter, that they are seruaunts and not sonnes, as many as follow the lawe. In without fauour, and that they doe exercise themselues therein sainly against their wills, and with no confidence of grace. For causeth and maketh such to be offended at it, and learne by it, now unprepared, and unwilling they are to that which is good, soasmuch as they are vnde of faith; whereby it moueth them to leke helpe some other where, and not to presume of their owne strength to satisfie it. For it requireth a ready will, and hartes of sonnes, which alone can satisfie it: it viterly refuseth seruaunts, and them that be unwilling.

But these of Cains broode doe not onely of their owne accesse confesse, that they want this faith, which maketh the sonnes God, but also they persecute it: they feele and know also full how unwillingly they beare the lawe, and had rather to be free from it, neuertheles they thinke that they shal become righteous by these their unwilling and constrained workes. They will continue seruaunts, & will not be chaunged into sonnes, and yet they would enjoy the goods of a straunge fater. They do all thing cleane out of order: wheras by the law they ought to learne, that they are seruaunts, and unwilling to doe that which is good, a therefore should by faith aspire to the state of sonnes, notwithstanding they goe so farre that they seeke to satisfie and fulfil by their owne works onely. And thereby they doe alcogether hinder the ende of the law, and striue against faith and grace, whereunto if they were not blind, the law would direct and drieue them. And so they continue alwayes, a blinde, blockish, and misera people. These thinges Paule teacheth Röm. 3. and 7. and di freely pronounce that no man is iustified before God by y^e wo^rk of the lawe, adding no other cause hereof, then this, for that knowledge of sinne only commeth by the law. If thou wilt knowe this commeth to passe, consider well some one of Caines broode, and thou shalt by and by see it verified. First he worketh his workes according to the lawe, with great grieve and labour, yet he therewith confesseth, that he is uncertaine whether he be the sonne of God, and holy. Yea he condemmeth and curseth his faith, as the most pernicious arrogancie and errour of all others, and will continue in his douting, vntil he be made certaine by his workes. Here thou seest plainly that such a man is not good righteous, seeing that he wanteth this faith and beleefe, that is counted acceptable before God, and his sonne, yea he is an enemy of this faith, and therefore of righteousness also: Wherefore neither can his workes be counted good, although they pretend a faire shew of fulfilling the lawe. And thus is it easie to understand that which Paule sayth: that no man is iustified before God by the workes of the lawe. For the worker must be iustified before God, before he worketh any good thing, although before men, which esteeme a man by outward thinges, and not by mind, they are counted righteous which apply themselues to doing of good workes. For men judge the worker by the woor god iudgeth the workes by the worker. Nowe the first precept aquireth, that we acknowledge & worship one God, that is, that we trust and rest in him alone, which in deede is the true faith, hereby we become the sonnes of God. But how easie is it by his precept to know, that sinne is both in him of Cains brood, & thy selfe, inasmuch as both of you want such a faith, euen by pur owne nature? which thou couldest not know but by meanes this law. And this is that which Paul meaneth when he sayth: hat by the law compelleth the knowledge of sinne. Now thou must be deliuered from this euill of infidelicie, neither by thyne owne power, nor by the power of the lawe, wherefore all thy workes whereby thou goest about to satisfie the lawe, can be nothing but workes of the lawe, of farre lesse importance, then that they are able to iustifie thee before God: who counteth them on-righteous, which truly beleeue in him, for they onely acknow-dge him the true God, are his sonnes, and doe truely ffull the

 w. But if thou shouldest euen kill thy selfe with workes, yet is so fatre of, that thy hart can obtaine this faith thereby, that thy workes are euen a hinderance that thou canst not knowe it, yea they are a cause that thou doost persecute it.

Hereupon it is, that he that studieth to fulfill the law without iut, is afflicted for the devils sake, and not for Gods sake, and continueth a persecutour both of faith and of the lawe, vntill he come to him selfe, and doth plainly ceasse to trust in him selfe and his owne workes, doth give this glory vnto God, who iustifi-eth the ungodly, acknowledgeth him selfe to be nothing, and sigh-eth for God his grace, wherof he doth now know, being taughte p the law, that he hath neede. Then faith and grace come, and fill him being emptie, satisfie him being hungry, by and by follow good workes, which are truely good: Neither are they now the workes of the law, but of the spirit, of faith and grace, and they re called in the Scripture the workes of God, which he wor-eth in vs. For whatsoeuer we do of our owne power & strenght, All that we doe of our selues being not assisted by the grace
 of God, is
 euill

nd is not wrought in vs by his grace, without dout it is a worke f the law, and availeth nothing to iustification, but is both euill nd hated of God, because of the infidelicie wherein it is done. Aaine, whatsoeuer he of Cains brood worketh, he doth nothing rom his hart, nothing freely and with a willing mind, except he e as it were hyred with some reward, or be commaunded to doe some such thinge , whereunto he ought otherwise to be ready him selfe : Even as an euill and unchristie seruaunt suffereth his selfe to be brought to no worke, unles he be hyred with a rema-ys or commaunded , whereunto he ought otherwise to be willing him selfe. Nowe how vnpleasant is it to a man to haue such uaunts ? But they of Cains brood be plainly such, they would no good worke at all, if they were not either compelled by the feare of hell, or allureed by the hope of present good things. Wher-againe thou seekest, that these haue no mind to the law, they gape ly for gaine, or are indued with feare, whereby they bewray their selues, that they doe rather hate the law from their hart, and leuer that there were no law at all : Wherefore it is plainly nitself, that they are not good, and consequently that neither their worke be good : for how shoulde euill men worke good work ?

Moreover those their workes, which in appearance shewes selfe to be good, are either wrested from them by feare, or are bout with promises. An euill hart can doe nothing that is good. At this naughtines of the hart & unwillingnes to doe good, the li-bewrayeth when it teacheth, that God doth not greatly esteem what the hand doth, but what the hart doth : which, seeing it ceth the law that is good, who wil deny it to be most euill ? Sa-ly it is a sinne to be against the lawe, which is very good. Therefore suntime is knowne by the lawe, according as Paule teacheth, forasmuch as we learne thereby, howe our affection is set on that which is good, which ought to terrifie vs, and oure to ceasse to trust in our selues, and to long after the grace of God, whereby this naughtines of the hart may be taken away, and mind may become such, as is of it selfe ready to good things, louing the lawe, which voluntarilie, not for any feare of punishment, or respect of reward, but because it doth of it owne acci-ment, or respect of reward, but because it doth of it owne act like well of the law, and loue righteousnes, worketh those thinges which are cruelly good: By this meanes onely one is made seruant a sonne, of a slauie an heire. Whiche mind and spirit thou shalt receiue by no other meanes, then by faith in Christ, as is before spoken at large. Now let vs come to entreat of the text of Paule.

Verse 1. The heire as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a seruant, though he be Lord of

He propoundeth a similitude taken of the custom of men. For we see that the children, vnto whom their parents haue left some inheritance, be brought vp no otherwise then if they were seruants. They are fedde and clothed with their goods, but they are not permitted to doe with them, nor to vse them according to their owne minde, but are ruled with feare & discipline of maners, that euē in their owne inheritance they liue no otherwise then as seruaunts. After the same sort is it also in spirituall things. God made vnto the elect a couenant, when he promised that it shoulde come to passe that in the seede of Abraham, that is in Christ, all nations shoulde be blessed, Gen. 22. That couenant was afterward confirmed by the death of Christ, and revealed and publisht abroad by the preaching of the Gospell. For the Gospell is no other thinge, then an open and generall preaching of this race, that in Christ blessing and grace is layde vp for all men, whiche so many onely shall receiue as shall beleue. Nowe before that this couenant is truly opened and made manifest to men, the sonnes of God liue after the maner of seruaunts vnder the lawe, and are exercised with the workes of the law, although they cannot be iustified by them, inasmuch as they are seruile, and doe nothinge auailable to iustification as it is sayde before: Notwithstanding, because they are euē then predestinate to life, when they are after the maner of seruaunts helde vnder the lawe, they are true heires of heauenly good thinges, that is, of this blessing and race of this couenant: albeit they as yet doe not know, or enioy, but are wearied with workes no otherwise then other that are hidde of sayth. So at this daye thou mayest finde not a fewe, whiche nowe hauing faith, as they are the sonnes of God, so doe they also enioye the grace of God in the libertie of the sonnes, when as a litle before being drowned in workes, they knewe nothinge at all of faith, being in all thinges like vnto other hypothes. Neuertheles, because they were before the foundation of the worlde appoynted of God vnto this sayth and state of sonnes, they were euē then the sonnes of God before, when they were as yet altogether ignorant of faith. There are some so which being as yet as it were drowned in workes, are like seruaunts and those of Cains brood, who notwithstanding before God are sonnes and heires, whiche shall be brought vnto the birth of sonnes, leaving the state of seruaunts, and shall embrace the libertie and right of sonnes, shall ceasse from the worke of the law, and come vnto the inheritance of iustification, that being iustified by grace, they may wozke freely those things that be good, to the glory of God, and commoditie of their neighbours, being farre from all feare, or hope, as well of iustification, as of all other good things. For they shall then haue and possesse it by the couenant of the Father confirmed by Christ, & reuealed, published, and as it were deliuered into their handes by the Gospell through the onely grace and mercy of the Father.

The faithful before Christes coming had the same couenant which we haue.

This couenant boch Abraham and all the fathers, which were endued with true faith, had no otherwise then we haue, althoughe before Christ was glorified, this grace was not openly publisched and preached. They laved in like faith, and therefore they obtayned also like good things. They had the same grace, blessing and couenant with vs, for there is one Father, and the same God o all. Thou seest therefore that Paul, as almost in all other places so here also doth entreat much of faith, that we are not iustified by our wozkes, but by faith alone, whereby not certaine good thinges by peecemeale, but all good thinges at once doe come vnto vs. For there is no good thing, which this couenant of God doth not contayne in it, it giueth and bringeth rightheousnes, saluation and God him selfe. Wozkes can not be done at once, but by faith the whole inheritance of God is togither received. From thence also good wozkes doe come, howbeit not meritorious, whereby thou mayst seeke saluation, but which with a minde already possessing rightheousnes, thou must doe with great pleasure to thy profit of thy neighbours. For thou shalt nowe haue neede of nothing, being endued with faith, which bringeth all thinges, yea surely moe thinges then one dare wish, much lesse can deserue wherefore it is no meruell if such wozke all thinges freely, and so do vnto their neighbour, as they both beleue and reioyce, tha God of his goodnes & by his merit of Christ hath done vnto them. What rewarde shoulde they hope for, which already haue al things? the shadow whereof those most miserable ones of Cains brood seeke by their wozkes, but they shall never find it, they follow it, but they shall neuer come vnto it.

Verse 2. But is vnder Tuters and Gouerners, vntill the time appoynted of the father.

Tuters and Gouerners are they which doe bringe vppe the heire, and so rule him, and order his goods, that neither he wast his inheritance by riotous living, neyther his goods otherwise perish or be consumed. They permit him not to vse his goods at his owne will or pleasure, but suffer him to enioye them as they shall be needesfull and profitable vnto him. First, whereas they keepe him at home, and informe him with good maners, what doe they else but prepare and instruct him, whereby he may moste commodiously and longe enioye his inheritance? Agayne, the moxe straitely and seuerely they bringe him vppe, so muche greater desire they stirre vppe and enflame in him to come to, and enioye his inheritance. For as soone as he beginneth to be of any discretion and iudgement, it can not be but grie-uous vnto him, to liue at the commaundement and will of an other. After the same sorte standeth the case of the elect, which are broughte vppe and instructed vnder the lawe, as vnder a Maister, to the libertie of the sonnes. First the lawe profitech them in this, that by the feare of it, and of the punishment which it threatneth, they are driven from sinne, at the least from the outwarde worke, least that the libertie of sinning encrease ouermuche, and remoue them from all religion of God, that hope of saluation being past, and God quite concerned, they shoulde runne headlonge without all feare into all kindes of euill, as some desperate persons are wont to doe. Agayne, the lawe is profitable to them in this, that by it they are broughte vnto knowledge of them selues, and learne howe unwillingly they liue vnder the lawe, and that they doe no good at all with a willing and readie mynde as it becommeth sonnes, but with a seruile and unwilling minde: whereby they maye easily see, what is the roote of this euill, and what is especially needesfull vnto saluation, to wit a newe and a willing spirit to that which is good. Which surely neyther the lawe, nor the workes of the lawe are able to giue, yea the lenger and the moxe that they applye them selues vnto them, so muche more unwilling shall they finde them selues, and with so muche more grieve to worke those thinges that are good. Hereupon nowe they learne, that they doe not satisfie the lawe, although outwardly they liue according to the prescript rule thereof: for as they doe pretend to obeye it in worke, so in minde they doe hate it, wherfore in minde also they remayne sinners, although they pretende the selues righteous by woxkes, that is, they are like vnto those Cains broode, and to hypocrites, whose hande in deede is compelled to good, but they haue a hart, which as it is an enemie to the lawe, so doth it verely consent vnto sinnes, and is miserablie subiect vnto them. To knowe this concerning them selues is in the lowest degree to saluation.

The workes
of the lawe.

Hereof also we may see, howe fitly Paule calleth such constrained workes the workes of the lawe. For they flowe from a ready and willing hart, but are enforced by the lawe, the harte declyning an other waye. Howebeit the lawe doth en require workes alone, but muche rather the harte it selfe, that we might saye, not onely the workes, but rather the harte of the lawe: not onely the handes of the lawe, but rather the mynde, will, and all the strength of the lawe. Whereupon is sayde in the first psalme of the blessed man: But his delight in the lawe of God, and in his lawe doth he exercise him selfe daye and night. Such a mynde the lawe requireth in deed but it giueth it not, neyther can it giue it of it owne nature whereby it commeth to passe that whyle the lawe continueth exact it of a man, and to condemne him as longe as he hath in such a minde, as disobedient to God, he is in anguish on euery side, his conscience is grieuously terrified and without a counsell and helpe. Then in deede he is moste readye for grace.

The time
appoynted of the Father.

and this is that tyme appoynted of the Father, when his seruitude should ende, and he should enter into the state of the sonnes. For being thus in distresse and terrified, seeing that by no oþer meanes he can auoyde the condemnation of the lawe, he tunneth himselfe wholly to praye to the Father for grace, he acknowledgeth his frayltie, he confesseth his sinne, he ceaseth to trust in workes, and doth altogether, as it is meete, humblie him selfe, perciuing nowe full well, that betweene him and a manifest sinner there is no difference at all but of workes that he hath a wicked harte, euen as every other sinner hath. Peaþ it may be that such hypocrites doe farre more hate the lawe in their harte, then those famous sinners, which are euen as it were drowned in sinnes. For whyle these are euen wearyed with the workes of sinnes, and doe trye the filthines of them, it often tymes commeth to passe, that they doe in some par-

part loath and detest them; when as thole righteous ones doe alwaies thinke thole thinges that they haue not tried, to be more sweete, neither can they beleue þ there is so much gall in sinnes, whereof they are by nature inflamed with such a desire, & therefore as they doe moxe earnestly loue sinne, so consequently they doe much worse hate the lawe, which as a certaine scholemaister, is always against their desire.

Moreover forasmuch as the condition of mans nature is such, that it is able to giue to the lawe workes onely; and not the hart, who doth not see howe greatly it is contemned of vs? An Hypocrite vnequall diuision truely, to dedicate the hart, which doth incomparably excell all other thinges, to sinne, and the brutish hande to the lawe; which is nothing els, but to offer chasse to the lawe, and the wheat to sinne: the shell to God, and the kernell to Satan. So that commeth to passe which is in the Gospell; that the wickednesse of him, which is in thy iudgement a desperat sinner, are counted as a mote, and thine, which so playest the hypocrite are counted as a beame. If this euill be added hereunto, that such hypocrites doe not see a beame in their eye, but being blinded doe perseuer in their accustomed workes, not marking this their inward abomination of the hart, they byandby burst forth to iudge & condemne others, they despise sinners, as he did in the Gospell, they thinke them selues not like unto them, they are not as other men are, they thinke them selues alone godly and righteous. Whose vngodlines is one reppoure, & as it is meete, bewray, they byandby are in a rage and furie, and sticke not to kill innocent Abel, and to persecute all those that follow the truth. And they will seeme to doe that to defend good workes, and to obtaine righteousness, neither doe they promise to them selues a small reward for this, inasmuch as they doe, as they say, persecute heretikes, blasphemers, them which be seduced & doe seduce with mischievous errore, whiche labour to seduce and plucke euuen them from good works. Here thou maist see that that he wech it selfe, whatsoever the Scriptures attribute to these men being surely most pestilent spirits, to wit, that they are a generation of vipers, and serpents. They are no other but of Cains broode, and so they doe continue, seruaunts they are, and seruaunts they doe remaine,

But they whom God hath chosen Abels and sonnes, do learne What the by the lawe, howe unwilling a hart they haue unto the lawe, they law worketh in the elect.

fall from their arrogancie; and are by this knowledge of them selues which the lawe bringeth, brought euē vnto nothing in their owne eyes. Then by and by commeth the Gōspel, and lifteth them vp being humbled, whereby the Lord giueth his grace vnto them thus castinge downe them selues, and endueth them with faith. Hereby they receiuē that couenant of the eternall blessing, and the holy Ghost, which renueth their hart, that nowe it is delighted with the lawe, hateth sinne, and is willing and ready to doe those thinges that are good. And here nowe thou maist see not the workes, but the hart of the law. And this is the very time appointed to the heire of the Father, when he must be no lenger a seruaunt but a sonne, and doth now begin to be led by a free spirit, being no more kept in subiection vnder Tutors and Gouerners, after the maner of a seruaunt. Which is euē that that Paul teacheth in the wordes following.

Verse 3. Euen so, we when we were children, were in bondage vnder the rudiments of the world.

By the worde rudiments thou mayst vnderstand here the first principles or lawe written, which are as it were the first exercises and instructions of holy erudition, whereof it is spoken also Heb. 5: As concerning the time ye ought to be teachers, yet haue ye neede againe that we teach you what are the first principles or rudiments of the word of God. And Colos. 2: Beware least there be any that spoyle you through philosophie and vaine deceipt, through the traditions of men, according to the rudiments of the world. Again Gal. 4: How turne ye againe vnto impotent & beggerly rudiments, whereunto as from the beginning ye wil be in bondage againe? ye obserue dayes & moneths, &c. Here as it were in contēmpt he calleth the lawe rudiments, he addeth also, impotent, & beggerly, both because it is not able to performe that rigourousnes which it requireth, and also for that it maketh men in dede poore & impotent. For whereas it earnestly requireth a hart and mind given to godlines, and nature is not able to satisfie it herein, it plainly maketh man to feele his pouertie, and to acknowledge his infirmitie, that that is by right required of him, which he not only hath not, but also is not able to haue. Hereunto pertaineth that which Paul hath lest written 2. Cor. 3: The letter killeth, but the spirit giueth life.

Moreover

Moreover Paule calleth them the rudiments of the worlde, for that all that obseruing of the lawe, which men not yet renued by the spirit doe performe, doth consist in worldly thinges, to wit, in places, times, apparell, persons, vessells, and such like.
 But faith resteth in no worldly thinge, but in the onely grace, worde, and mercy of God, neither doth it make a man righteons and safe by any outward thinge, but onely by the invisible and eternall grace of God: Wherefore it counteth a like, dayes, meates, persons, apparell, and all thinges of this worlde. For none of these by it selfe doth eyther further or hinder godlines & saluation, as it doth the righteousness of those of Cains brood, which is as it were tyed to these outward thinges. Faith therefore deserueth nothing lesse then to be called the rudiments of the worlde, by which we obtayne the fulnes of heauenly good thinges: and albeit it be occupied also in outward thinges, yet is it addicted to no outward thinge, but doth freely in all thinges that whiche it seeth may be done to the glorie of God, and profit of our neighbours, alwayes continuing free and the same, and yet is made all thinges to all men, that so the conuersation thereof may want all peculiar respecte and difference. With those of Cains brood it agreeth neyther in name, nor in any thinge: one of them eateh flesh, an other abstayneth from it: one weareth blacke apparell, an other white: one keepeh this day holy, an other that: euery one hath his rudiments, vnder whiche he is in bondage: all of them are addicted to the thinges of the worlde, which are frayle and perish in an houre. Wherefore they are no other but seruaunts of the rudiments of the worlde, which they call holy orders, godly ordinances, and wayes to goe to heauen. Against these Paule speakest Colos. 2: VVherefore if ye be deade with Christ from the rudiments of the worlde, why as though ye liued in the worlde, are ye burdened with traditions? As, Touch not, Tast not, Handle not: which all perish with the vsing, and are after the commaundements and doctrines of men. VVhich thinges haue in deede a shewe of god-lines, when as they are meere superstition, whereby the mind is in vayne pressed downe to these outward thinges, &c. By this and other places aboue mentioned it is playne, that all Monasteries and Colleges, whereby we measure the state of spirituall men as we call them, doe plainly disagre with the Gospel and Christian libertie, and that therefore it is much more dangerous to live in these kindes of life, then among most prophane men. For all their things are nothing but rudiments & ordinances of the world, consisting in the difference and vse of apparel places, times, and other present thinges, whereunto seeing they are so addicted, that they hope by them to attaine righteousnes saluation, faith is made no account of amongst them, neither are they Christians, but in name; wherefore all their life and holine is meere sinne, and most detestable hypocrisie.

They that are vnder the rudimēts of the world, ought most diligently to looke to them selues.

It is needful therefore, that they that are occupied in such ordinances, should aboue all other men most diligently looke vnto them selues, that they trust not to these ordinances, that they be not too much addicted vnto them, but that they doe persever in free faith, which is tyed to none of those outward thinges, but resteth in the onely grace of God. For the fayre shewe of life & fayned holines, which is in those ordinances, doth with a mercious and secret force withdraw from faith, more then those manifest and grosse sinnes, wherof open sinners are guilty, and doth easily make men such as Paule here speaketh of: VVhen we were children, we were in bondage vnder the rudimēts of the world that is, when we were as yet ignorant of faith, and were exercise onely with the workes of the law, we did those outward works of the law, consisting in worldly things, but with an unwilling minde and with no faith, hoping that by these rudiments of the world we should obtaine saluation, wherfore we were no other then servants. Nowe this false and seruile opinion faith alone taketh away, and teacheth vs to trust vnto, and rest vpon the onely grace of God, whereby at once is giuen freely that which is needful to worke all thinges. For these workes of the lawe, if that false opinion were away, were not ill of them selues.

Verse 4. But when the fulnes of time was come, God sent forth his Sonne made of a woman, and made vnder the law.

Verse 5. That he might redeeme them which were vnder the law, that we might receiuie the adoption of the sonnes.

After Paule hath taught, that righteousness and faith can no com me to vs by the Law, neither that we can deserue it by nature, & sheweth him by whom we obtaine true righteousness & faith, & which is the autho^r of our iustification. Now this could not me vnto vs without any p^rice, for it cost a verie great p^rice, even the sonne of God : The Apostle therefore sayth : When the fulnes of time was come, that is, when the time was ended, that I say, wherein it behoued vs to liue chil^dren and seruaunts under the discipline of the Lawe. Wherefore the Maister of sentences hath erred here, who interpreted the fulnes of time, the me of grace, which began at the birth of Christ, plaine contrarie to the Apostle, who whereas he hath written, the fulnes of me, this man hath interpreted it, the time of fulnes. For Paul leakeith of the time, which was appointed of the father to the sonne, wherein he shoulde liue vnder cutters. Now as this time has full come to the Jewes and ended, when Christ came in the flesh, so is it daily fulfilled to others, when they come vnto the knowldege of Christ, and do chaunge the seruitude of the Lawe with the fau^th of the sonnes. And this in deede is that comming, whereby alone we obtaine the libertie of sonnes, without which that corporall comming would availe nothing. For Christ euuen h^e this cause hath come vnto vs, that beleueing in him, we may be restored to true libertie, by which fau^th they of the auncient time also obtained the libertie of the spirit. And so, whereas he shoulde come to the holy men of olde time, he came euuen then, forasmuch as by fau^th they fel^e him to be their true Sauour and deliuener, whicheit he is not yet come to our Jewes, although he is gone waye againe in body long since : for they do not beleue in him. All from the beginning of the worlde to the end must trust vnto the comming of Christ, whereby alone seruitude is chaunged with libertie, but yet by fayth, either in Christ being to come, as it was before he was boyn^e: or in him being come, as it is now. Wherefore as soone as thou beginnest to beleue in Christ, he commeth vnto thee a deliuener and Sauour, & now the time bondage is ended, that is, as the Apostle speaketh, the fulnes whereof is come.

This place surely is verie copious, and containeth in it viuers singes most worthie to be knowne, so that I greatly feare, that shall not be handled of vs according to the worshynes thereof. for it teacheth that it is not sufficient to beleue that Christ is come , but that we must also beleue that he was sent of God , the sonne of God , and also verie man , boorne of a Virgine , wh^e alone hath fulfilled the Lawe , and that not for himselfe , but vs , that is , for our saluacions sake . Let vs wey and consider the thinges in order . First it is sufficiently taught in the Gosspell John , that Christ is the sonne of God , and was sent of God which he that beleueuth not is in a most miserable case , as Christ himselfe pronounceth Joh. 8 : Except ye beleue that I am he ye shall dye in your synnes . And Joh. 1 : In it was life , and the life was the light of men . For this cause the mynde of man neither may nor ought to enjoy any other thing then that soueraigne good , so , that it shold be satisfied with any other then with i whereof it was made , and which is the fountaine of all good thinges : wherefore it is not the will of God that we shold believe or repose our trust in any other thing , neither doth this honour belong to any other . And therfore God himselfe ioyntly himselfe to man , being made man , that he might moxe forcib allure men into him , and stirre them vp to beleue in him . If good could come vnto God hereby , but it was necessarie for i that he shold be made man , lest that we shold beleue in another thing then in God alone . For if we shold beleue in Christ and not in God , as God shold be deprived of his honour , shold we be deprived of life and salvation . For we must beleue in one God , who is the verie truth , and we without him can neither liue , nor obtaine salvation . Whereas therfore the Apostle sayth : God sent forth his Sonne , it is thereby manifest , that i was , before he came and was made man . Now if he be a sonn he is moxe then a man or an Angell , which seeing they are the highest creatures , surely he is also true God . For to be the son of God is moxe then to be an Angell , as it is els where declareth Againe , seeing that he is sent of God , and is his sonne , he mu needes be an other person . And so the Apostle teacheth here ; that the Father and the Sonne are one God , and two persons . ¶ the holy Ghost it shalbe spoken hereafter .

Why it was requisite that God should be made man.

The second thing which ought here to be considered , is , th Christ is verie man and the sonne of man . This Paul teacheth when he sayth ; made of a woman . For surely that that is man or boorne of a woman , is man : A wonian by nature bringeth for nothing but verie man . This it is necessarie that we beleue :

Christ a distinct person from the Father .

Christ verie man .

he Lord himselfe declareth Joh. 6, in these wordes: Except ye cate the flesh of the sonne of man, and drinke his blood, ye haue no life in you. But to eate and drinke his flesh and blood, is no: What it is to bing els but to beleue, that Christ tooke these vpõ him in deed, and did also yeeld them to death for our sake. This is that coue-taunt which was promised to Abraham: In thy seede shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Gen. 22. Christ is this seede, and therefore the true sonne of Abraham, his flesh and blood.

hereupon it appeareth that they preuaile nothing, which make proper waye vnto themselues to God, by their owne workes and godlines, and neglecting Christ staine to come directly vnto God, as the Turkes and Jewes doe. This Christ alone is the mediator & blessed seede, by whom thou must receiuе blessing,

We must come vnto
God by
Christ.

therwise thou shalt continue for ever in malediction. This coueat of God shal not be violated because of any. Thus Christ himself sayth, Joh. 6: No man commeth to the Father, but by me.
The nature of God is otherwise higher, then that we are able to traine vnto it, wherefore he hath humbled himselfe to vs, and aken vpon him that nature, which is best knowne and most familiar vnto vs, to wit, euен our owne. Here he looketh for vs: ere he will receiuē vs: he that will seeke him here, shal synde: e that will aske here shall be heard: here is the thonne of grace nd the true mercy seate, from which none is driven or thrust hich w true faith resorteþ vnto it. They which do here neglece im, as though he were made man for nought, and in the meane ason to without a mediator praise vnto God, who hath created euēn and earth, they shall pray in deede, but none shall helpe em: they shall criē, but none shall heare them.

The chylding whiche is here setforth vnto vs to beleue, is, iat Marie the mother of Jesus is a virgine. This Paule affirmeth when he sayth, that he was made of a woman, and of a man, zother are wone. This is that one man, which was borne one of a woman. He would not say, of a virgine, for that a virgine is not a name of nature, but a woman signifieth a sex and certain indition, wherunto it belongeth to be with childe, and to bring ynch, that is, to do the partes of a mother. Seeing therefore iat Marie was a mother in deede, she is rightly called a woman, or the broughestre fruite vnto vs, which belongeth to a mother, and not to a virgin; although she broughe it forth alone,

The mother of Iesus a Virgine.

without the meanes of man, wherein she was declared both singular virgin and woman. But because it is of greater importaunce to the Apostle, and unto all vs, that Marie is a woman and thereby the mother of Christ, then that she is a virgine; so that this is onely an ornament unto her, but in that she was a woman she brought forth him which is saluation unto all, for this cause I say, the Apostle calleth her rather a woman then a virgine. Neither was it considered in choosing her, that she was virgine, but that she was a woman: for that she being a virgin became a mother, the cause was, for that it behoued that Christ should be borne without synne, and therefore without the commixtion of man. For of the seede of a sinfull man, nothing could be borne, but that which is defiled with synne: but it behoued Christ to be that blessed seede, whose blessing should be poured forth vpon all, as the maner of the divine couenant required.

Wherupon it is gathered, that Christ could not be borne of the seede of man, for that all men are by nature vnder the curse. For how shold blessing be promised to come unto all by Christ, if he were not subiect to the curse?

Forasmuch then as the couenant of God promised to Abraham, did require these two thinges, both that Christ should be the true sonne of Abraham, that is, his seede, his true flesh and blood, & that also he shold be borne pure from synne: this meanes was inuented, that he shold of Marie being verie woman and the daughter of Abraham, be borne verie man, and the righte spryng of Abraham: and also that he shold be borne without the commixtion of man, a virgine being conceiued with child by the onely meanes of the holy Ghost, that being full of blessing, mighte deriue the same unto all beleeuers. So was the couenant of God fulfilled on either side: and it came to passe, that Christ became both the true seede of Abraham, and yet free from all contagion of Adam, and is also the authoer of eternall blessing to them that beleeeue. Wherfore although Marie be holily to be reuerenced by the name of virgine, yet by no comparison greater reverence is due unto her then by the name of woman, for that her most holy members, inasmuch as she was a woman, were aduaced unto this dignitie, that they were as meanes toward the fulfilling of the holy couenant of God, and by them he was brought forth, which was to put awaye all curse from them that beleeeue.

him, that so he might be both the blessed seede of Abraham, and the blessed frute of the wombe of Marie. Unto which benefit the onely virginitie had not bin sufficient, yea it had bin euen unprofitable.

The fourth thing whereof the present place of the Apostle doth admonish vs, is, that Christ hath satisfied the Lawe for vs. Which he also witnesseth of himselfe Matthe. 5 : I am not come to destroye the Lawe, but to fulfill it. This also the reason of the It was needvnuant requireth : for if by this seede of Abraham all men must ful that christ be deliuerned from the curse, it is necessarie that by it the Lawe should fulfill be fulfilled. For as men are by nature the children of wrath, and biect to the curse, so it must needes be accursed, whatsoeuer ey doe, for it is before proued at large, that he which is euell mselfe, can wozke nothing that is good : likewise that we can nothing that God will approue, vntes we our selues be approu-d of him before : and seeing that the Lawe requireth the heart, which can not be performed of them, which are not as yet regerate by the spirit, it must needes be, that all the sonnes of Adam be giltye of transgressing the Lawe, and vntes, whereas they emselues are not able, an other, to wit Christ, should performe at which the Lawe requireth, and so satisfie the Lawe for them, they should altogither perish by the curse of the Lawe. But when as Christ, going about to shewe, that the heart is required of the Lawe, did condemne the workes which proceeded not from a hart that is godly and consenting vnto the Lawe, he was accustome of the Pharisees that he was come to destroie the Lawe. Because therefore he would take away this false opinion of himselfe, he sayd : Thinke not that I am come to destroy the Lawe, for I am not come to destroie, but to fulfill the Lawe : yea and I will giue a spirit vnto them that be mine, which shal iustifie their hart by faith, and incline it vnto true good workes. The same is vsuall with Paul also, who, Rom. 3, when he had rejected the workes of the Lawe, and extolled faith, aunswering such an objection, saith : Do we then make the Lawe of none effect ? God forbid : yea we establish the Lawe : For we teach that the true fulfilling of the Lawe is by Christ. The like also is wont to be reected to vs, as though we did forbide good workes, when we allow monasteries with their workes, & teach that they must fle by faith become good and approued of God, whereby they may afterward do true good workes, by which both their fles may be chastised, and their neighbours edified.

Here we must note moreouer, that the Lawe can be fulfill of no man, but of him which being free from the Lawe, is more vnder it. We must accustome our selues also to the man of Paules speeche, that we may know assuredly who is vnd-

Who be vn- the Lawe, and who is not vnder the Lawe. As many therefore der the Law. as worke good workes, because the Lawe hath so commaundis being brought thereunto either with feare of punishment, or hope of reward, are vnder the Lawe, and are compelled to do good thinges and to be honest, being not brought hereunto of their owne voluntarie will. Wherefore the Lawe hath dominion ou-them, whose seruaunts and captiues they are. Now such are men, that are not yet regenerate by Christ, which euerie one may easily learne with himselfe by experience, euerie mans own conscience shewing it vnto him. We all finde our selues so affi-ted, that if no Lawe did bryg vs, & both the feare of punishment and hope of reward were awaye, and it were plainly free for us to do what we list, we would do altogether those thinges that are euell, and omit the thinges that are good, especially either the incitation mouing vs, or occasion prouoking vs. But now, so much as the Law stayeth vs with the threatninges and promises thereof, we do oftentimes abstaine from euell thinges, and those thinges that be good, howbeit we do them not for the love of goodness, and hatred of euel, but onely for feare of punishment, and respect of reward: wherefore being left wholly to our selues, we are seruaunts of the Lawe, neither do we heare it any other wise, then seruaunts do their hard and cruell maister.

They which are not vnder the Lawe described, of what sorte they be.

But they that are not vnder the Lawe, that is, are not signed against their wills in subiection vnder the dominion thereof, they of their owne accord do good workes, and abstaine from euil, being neither terrified with þe threatninges of the Law, nor al-ured with the promises thereof, but euen so that they do of their voluntarie will beare a loue to honestie, and hate that which is dishonest, and are also from their heart delighted with the Lawe of God, so that if there were no Lawe made, notwithstanding they would desire to liue no otherwise then the Lawe commandeth: as, to shun those thinges that be euell, and applie themselues to honest studies and exercises. They that are such, re-sonnes, whom not nature, but that onely blessed seede of Abrahām, that is, Christ, could make such, renewing by his grace and spirit the heartes of them that beleue in him. Wherefore not to be vnder the Lawe, is not, to be free from the Lawe, that they may do those things that are contrarie thereunto, and omit those thinges that are good, but it is to do good thinges and abstaine from wicked thinges, not throught compulsion or necessitie of the Lawe, but by free loue and with pleasure, euен as if no Lawe commaunded them, and their owne nature brought them hereunto, as in deede it doth, howbeit the new nature of the spirit, not that olde nature of the flesh. For as there is neede of no Lawe for the body, which may compell it to eate, to drinke, to digest, to sleepe, to go, to stand, to sit, and to do the other workes of nature, so that it is ready to do them of it owne nature, when the case so requireth, and when it is meete, without all respect either of reward or punishment: and may not vnsily be said, as concerning these thinges, not to be vnder a lawe, notwithstanding thereupon nothing lesse followeth, then that it doth therefore abstaine from such workes, vnto which in deede it so much more applieth it selfe as they are lesse commaunded, and are moxe naturall vnto it: After the same sorte altogether doth the godly man behau him selfe concerning the workes of godlines, he is caried to the doing of them by that his new nature of the spirit, albeit there were no lawe at all, and all both hope of reward, and feare of punishment were awaie. This onely is the true libertie of a Christian man, and the deliueraunce of him from the lawe, whereof Paul speakeþ 1. Tim. 1: The Lawe is not giuen vnto a righteous man. Which is as much as if he had said: A righteous man of his owne accord doth good thinges, and abstaineth from euell, hauing no regard either of reward or of punishment. The same thing also he meaneth by that saying Rom. 6: Ye are not vnder the Lawe, but vnder Grace, that is, ye are sonnes, not seruaunts: We liue holily, being compelled or enforced with nothing, but of your free and of it selfe ready will. To the same effect pertaineth that saying also Romi. 8: Ye haue not received the spirit of bondage to feare againe, but ye haue receiued the Spirit of adoption of the sonnes. The Lawe maketh a fearfull, that is, a right seruile and cairnish spirit, but Grace giueth the free spirit of sonnes, like vnto Abels, by Christ the blessed seede of Abraham.

What it is,
not to be vnder the Law.
A similitude.

Whereof the 51. Psalme speakest: Establish me with thy fre spirit. Wherupon in the 118. Psalme Christian people are said to be of a free will.

Moreover Christ hath so fulfilled the Lawe, that he onely c all mankynde hath of his owne accord satisfied it, being with n thing compelled or enforced thereunto, neither is any other able to do the same, vntes he receive it of him, and by him: And ther fore Paul saith here: He was made vnder the Lawe, that h might redeeme them, which were vnder the Lawe. The fist thing therefore that Paul here commendeth vnto vs to be belie ly beleeueth, that Christ came for this cause, that he might deliu er vs from the Lawe, and that he hath delivered him already, he, say, hath in deede receiued the spirit of libertie, and doth veril obtaine that which he beleuueth: for both faith and this spirit c sonnes come togither. Wherupon Paul saith here: that Christ hath delivered vs from the Lawe, for this, that we might receiu the adoption of the sonnes: both which come vnto vs by faith

Thus therefore we haue those ffe thinges, whereof Paul admo nished vs in this so plentifull and fruitfull a place,

A question.

But here riseth a question: Forasmuch as to be vnder the Lawe is to be subiect to the Lawe by compulsion, and to obey the Lawe no otherwise then unwillingly, so that none of them which ar vnder the Lawe, are able to satisfie the Lawe, why Paul saith that Christ was made vnder the Lawe. I answeare, that the A postle maketh a verie great differenc betweene Christ, who wa made vnder the Lawe, and other men which are borne vnder th Lawe.

The answer.
Great diffe rence between

Lawe. For whereas he sayth that Christ was made vnder the Christes be-Lawe, he would signifie, that Christ did put himselfe vnder the ing vnder the Lawe of his owne accord, and was with his will made subiect into it of the Father, when as he might not haue bin vnder the Lawe. But we were vnder the Lawe, being the seruaunts of he Lawe by nature, and bearing the dominion thereof unwillingly: as Christ was willingly, not by nature, and against his will. Wherfore there is as great difference betweene, To be made vnder the Lawe, and, To be vnder the Lawe by nature, is betweene these, To be subiect to the Lawe of free will, and,
 To be subiect to the Lawe by seruile constraint. It was free vnio Christ, to be vnder the Law, or not to be vnder it, and he made himselfe subiect to it of his owne accord, that he might most diligently do all thinges that the Law requireth: but we were vnu-der the Lawe, euen against our will.

Thou mayst see a resemblaunce hereof in Peter, and the Angell which came into the prison to Peter to deliuere him. Both of hem were then in the prison, but Peter was there being cast ino it of Herode, not of his owne accord, wherein he was also to bide, for he could not go forth when he would. But the Angell went into the prison of his owne accord, whereupon it was free o him also to go forth when he wold: he was there onely for Peters sake and not for his owne, and freely euen at his owne will, whom when Peter heard and folowed, it was free for him also to go forth of the prison, whereas before it was not. This prison is the Lawe: Peter is our conscience: The Angell is Christ. Christ being absent, our conscience is held captiue of he Lawe, and being unwilling of it selfe, is moued vnto good hinges by the threatninges and promises thereof, and is tied nd bound vnto honest thinges with these, as with two chaines.
 The keepers of this prison are the teachers of the Lawe, which eclare the force of the Lawe vnto vs. So we being bound in the prison of the Lawe, Christ commeth vnto vs, and willingly maieth himselfe subiect to the Lawe, and doth the workes of the Lawe of his owne accord, which we did bend our selues to do agaist our wills, yea and doth them for our sake, that he may dyne vs vnto him, and also bring vs out togither with himselfe.
 For he may easily go forth, who is held in the prison by no ne-cessitie. If now we cleave vnto him, and follow him, we also do goe forth. But this cleauing to him and following him is nothing els, then to beleue in him, and not to doute that he became man, and was made subiect to the lawe for thy salutacions sake. Togither with this sayth commeth the spirit, he byandby maketh thee ready and willing to do with pleasure all thinges that the Lawe requireth: and so truly deliuereth thee from the captuite of the Lawe, those chaines of threatninges and promise fall of from thee, and thou mayst now go whither thou list, that is, thou mayst liue according to thine owne will, or rather according to the wil of the holy Ghost ruling all thinges in thee: finally what good thinges soever thou doest, thou doest them from the heart, and with great pleasure.

Christ made vnder y Law after two sorts.

Moreover, that it may be made more plaine, after what sorte Christ made himselfe subiect to the Lawe, we must understand that he was made vnder the Lawe after two sorte: both for that he did perfectly performe the workes of the Lawe, and also for that he suffered and overcame the curse and punishment thereto for our sake. For he was circumcised, presented in the temple and the time of the purification being finished, was obedient to his parents. All which thinges he might haue omitted, being Lord of the Lawe, and ouer all: Howbeit he applied himselfe to these thinges freely of his owne will, not being either compelle by any feare, or allure by any hope. In outward workes he was in the meane season altogether like unto them which were vnder the Lawe, that is, which did the workes of the Lawe against their wills, insasmuch as his free spirit was hidden from others, euen as also the seruile and constrained will of others is hidden. And so he both was vnder the Lawe, and not vnder the Lawe. He behaved himselfe outwardly in workes as they which are unwillingly held vnder the Lawe, when as notwithstanding he was not vnder the Lawe as they, but of his owne free will: Wherefore in respect of his workes he was vnder the Lawe, but in respect of his will he was free from the Lawe. But we as well by vnder y Law. will as by workes are vnder the Lawe by nature, for that we do workes according to the rule of the Lawe, of necessarie, yea and we do them with that will which the Lawe constraineth and brygeth, inasmuch as we do not endeavour to do them of our own accord. Christ made himselfe subiect to the punishment of the Lawe also for our sakes of his owne will. He did not onely per-

for me those workes which the Lawe commaundeth , but he suffered the punishment also which was due to vs being transgessors thereof : The Lawe condemneth to death and the eternall curse all those that continue not in all thinges that are written in the booke of the Lawe to do them , as Paule Gal. 3. reciteth out of Moses Leuit. 18. Now it is declared at large before , that the Lawe is fulfilled of no man , but that all men are against their willes held captives of the Law , wherefore euerie one is subiect to death and to the curse , so that there is no man subiect to the Lawe in respect of workes , and will , which is not also subiect to it in respect of the curse . For it curseth and condemneth all that do not performe it with their whole heart . But here Christ maketh intercession for them that be his , and the judgement which we haue deserued , he taketh upon himselfe , he suffered the punishment due unto vs , willingly making himselfe subiect to death and the curse , that is , to eternall damnation , no otherwise then if he had transgressed the whole Lawe , and had more then all , deserued the sentence thereof against transgressours . when as he did not onely not breake the Lawe , but himselfe alone fulfilled it , yea and fulfilled it when as he ought nothing to it ; so that he suffered otherwise then he deserued in two respects : both for that he had ought nothing to the Lawe , if he had not obserued it , and also for that moreover he most diligently obserued it , so that if the Law had had especiall dominion ouer him , yet had he come in no daunger thereof . But on the other side whereas we suffer , we suffer by double right : both for that by the transgression of the Lawe we haue deserued all the punishment thereof ; & also for that , if we had deserued nothing , yet being creatures we ought to be obedient to the will of our Creator .

Hereof it now plainly appeareth , what this meaneth , that Christ was made vnder the Lawe ; that he might redeeme them Why Christ which liue vnder the lawe : for our sakes , for our sakes , I say , and was made vnder the Lawe .
not for his owne he performed that , and that of no necessitie , but for his great loue toward vs : and thereby he hath declared his unspeakable both goodnes and mercy toward vs , being made accursed for vs , that he might deliuer vs from the curse of the Lawe . He willingly made himselfe subiect to the judgement of the Lawe , & did himselfe beare the sentece pronounced against vs ; that as many of vs as do beleue in him , might be free for ever .

By sayth we enjoy an incomparable treasure.

Whereby marke what an incomparable treasure faith bringeth vnto thee, whereby thou enjoyest Christ and all his workes, tha-thou mayst trust vnto them no otherwise then if thou thy selfe hadst done them. For Christ did them not for himselfe, wher-surely they could profit nothinge, he hauing no neede of an thinge, but by them he layd vp the treasure of saluation for vs whereunto we shold trust, and being made blessed might enioye it: Which which sayth also the spirit of the sonnes commeth which beareth witnes with our spirit, that we are the sonne and heires of God. What shold God nowe adde vnto these raunce from the Lawe, and the damnation of the Lawe, that is from synne and death, which deliueraunce commeth to vs by Christ. Yet not so, that there is nowe no lawe or death, but tha-they do not now trouble the beleeuers any thinge, that is, the are as though they were not: For the Lawe can not conuinc them of synne, neither can death confound them: but by sayt they most happily passe from synne and death to righteousne and life.

ordinances,
ceremonies.
&c. are to be obserued.

Here Munkes, Nunnes &c: were to be exhorted, if there wer-as yet left any place with them for counsell and admonition, tha-they would obserue their ordinances, ceremonies, prayers, ap-parell, and such like, as Christ obserued the lawe, by whiche meanes surely they shold bring vnto them no damnation: Thais, that they would set the faith of Christ in the first place, an-commit the rule of their heart vnto him, acknowledging tha-by that sayth onely they do obtaine righteousness and saluation and that all their ordinances & workes do availe nothinge here-unto. Againe that they would make themselves subject to them of their owne accord, in no other respect, then that by them the migh-

might serue their neighbours, and subdue the arrogancie of the flesh. But now seeing they are occupied in them with this double erroneous opinion, as though they were necessarie to saluation and righcousnes, and if they did not obserue them, they should grievously syne, they are vnto them a most certaine destruction, nothing but delusion and synne, whereby with their great affliction they draw vnto hell, where they shall fully suffer the vexations and tormentes vnder the Abbat the deuell, which being miserable and foolish men they haue here begon. For all their life doth utterly disagree with the fayth of the lounnes, and that which belongeth onely to fayth, to wit to iustifie and saue vs, they attribute to their workes. Wherefore these men can not both thus sticke vnto their ordinaunces, and therewithall haue fayth, which suffreth it selfe to be addicced to no certaine workes, but what thinges soever the Lord either sendeth or commaundeth, or the necessitie and neede of our neighbour requireth, it suffreth and doth them with great williugnes & ioy. These he that is endued with fayth, counteth his workes, hauing in the meane season no regard of Masses, or fasting, which some appoint to certaine dayes, of choise of apparell, of meates, of persons, of places and such like, yea he greatly disalloweth of these, inasmuch as they trouble Christian libertie. These thinges shall suffize to haue bin spoken concerning the exposition of this place of Paul, where about the matter it selfe required to spend so many wordes, forasmuch as the nature of fayth is so unknowen. For vñles thou do well understand the nature of fayth, thou shalt perceiue nothing or very little in the writings of Paul.

Verse 6. And because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts, which cryeth, Abba, Father.

Here we see verie plainly, that the holy Ghost commeth vnto the Saincts by no workes but by fayth alone, for Paul saith: And because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the Spirit, &c. Sonnes beleue, when seruaunts onely woxke: sonnes are free from the Lawe, seruaunts are held vnder the Lawe, as appeareth plainly by thole thinges that are before spoken. But how commeth it to passe that he saith: Because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the Spirit, &c. seeing it is before said: that by the coming of the spirit we are chaunged from seruaunts vnto the state of sonnes so that the spirit must be first sent vnto vs, before we are sonnes But here as though we could be sonnes before the comming o

The answer. the spirit, he sayth: Because ye are sonnes, &c. To this question we must aunswere, that Paul speaketh here after the same sort that he spake before: Before the fulnes of time came, we wear in bondage vnder the rudiments of the world. All the elect, which are predestinate of the Lord that they shall become sonnes, are counted in þ place of sonnes with God. Therefore he saith right ly: Because ye are sonnes, that is, because the state of sonnes is appointed vnto you fr̄o everlasting, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Sonne, to wit, that he might finish it in you, & make you such, as he hath long since of his goodnes determined that he should make you. Moreouer he calleth him the spirit of þ Sonne of God, that he might continue in commanding vnto vs this benefit of God, that he hath chosen vs to be sonnes. For Christ is the Sonne of God, and that most beloued. Now if the father giue vnto vs his spirit, he will make vs like to his onely begotten sonne, his true sonnes and heires, that we may with certaine confidence crie with Christ, Abba, Father, being his brethren, and fellow heires with him. Wherin þ Apostle surely hath notable set forth the goodnes of God, which maketh vs partakers with Christ, and causeth vs to haue all thinges common with him, so that we liue, and are ledde by the same spirit. Moreouer these wordes of the Apostle do shew, both that the holy Ghost is an other from Christ, and yet doth proceede from him, when as he calleth him his spirit. The spirit indeede dwelleth in the godly, and no man will say that he is their spirit, as here Paul maketh him the holy spirit of Christ, saying: God hath sent forth þ spirit of his Sonne, that is of Christ. For he is the spirit of God, & cometh from God to vs, and is not ours, vñles one will say after this sort: my holy spirit, as we say: my God, my Lord. Wherefore whereas he is here said to be þ holy spirit of Christ, it proueth him to be God, as of whom that spirit is sent, & is peculiarly counted his spirit.

Furthermore, Christians may perceiue by this place, whether they haue in themselues the holy Ghost, to wit, this spirit of the sonne, whether they heare his voice in themselues. For Paul saith, that he cryeth in the hearts which he possessest, Abba, Father: according as he sayth also Rom. 8: We haue receiued

How we may know whether þ holy

the Spirit of adoptiō, whereby we crie Abba, Father. Now thou hearest this voyce, when thou syndest so much faich in thy selfe, that thou doest assuredly without any doutinge presuine, not only that thy synnes be forgiuen thee, but also that thou art the beloued sonne of God, which being certaine of eternal saluatiō, darest both call him father, and be delightes in him with a ioyfull and most confident heart. Thou must be so certaine hereof, that thou canst not be moxe certaine of thy life, & must sooner suffer death, and hellish tormentes, then suffer this trust and confidence to be taken from thee. For to dout any thing herein were no small reprobach and contumelie to the death of Christ, as though that had not obtained all thinges for vs, and ought not farre more effectually to prouoke and encourage vs to haue a good trust in God, then all our synnes and tentations are able to put vs out of hope and fray vs from it. It may be in deede that thou shalt be so tempeted, that thou shalt feare and doute of thine adoption, and thinke plainly that God is not a fauourable father, but a wrathfull reuerencer of synners, as it fell out with Job and many other saints, but in such a conflict this trust & confidence that thou art a sonne iught to preuaile and overcome, or els thou shalt come into a miserable and desperate case.

When one of Tains bzoode heareth these thinges, he is as it were beside himselfe by reason of admiration and astonishment. Fye, sayth he, awaie with this arrogancie, and this most pernicious errore. God turne this mynde from me, that I do not presume to thinke that I am the sonne of God: I am a synner, most miserable and wretched, and I will neuer esteeme moxe of my selfe. But thou which desirtest to belong vnto Christ, flie this synde of men, no otherwise then most hurtfull enemies of Christian faith, and of thy saluation. We also know that we are synners, and verie miserable and wretched: but here we must not ieye or consider, what we either do, or are, but what Christ is, and what he hath done for our sake. It is not spoken here of our nature, but of the grace of God, which so farre exceedeth our synnes, as heauen is higher then the earth, and the east is distant from the west; as the 103. Psalme sayth: Now if it seeme vnto thee a great honour that thou art the sonne of God, as in deede it is verie great, consider that it is no lesse meruelous, that the sonne of God for this cause did come, was boorne of a woman, and made vnder the Lawe, that thou mightest become the sonne of God. These are great benefites of God, & do cause in the elect a great trust and confidence in the goodnes of God, and a spirit which is afraide of nothing, but is bold and able to do all thinges. Contrariwise the religion of those of Cains broode, as it is a thing meruelous strait and carefull, so doth it make heartes exceeding fearefull; which serue to no vse, but are vnapt to all thinges, fit neither to suffer or do anything, which tremble and are afraide euuen at the shaking of the leafe of a tree, as it was before spoken of them Leuit. 26.

Wherefore thou must lay vp these wordes of the Apostle well in thy minde, thou must feele this crie of the spirit, which crieth so in the hearts of al þ faithful. Fox how shouldest thou not heare the crie of thine owne heart? Neither doth the Apostle say that he doth whisper, speake, yea or syng, it is greater then all these which the spirit doth in thy heart; he crieth out a maine, that is, with all the heart. Wherupon it is saide Rom. 8, that he maketh request for vs with sighes that can not be expressed, and that he beareth witnes with our spirit that we are the children of God; how therefore can it be, that our heart should not heare this crie, sighes, and testimonie of the spirit? Howbeit hereunto tentations and aduersitie are very profitable, they moue to crie, and do exceedingly stirre vp the spirit. Notwithstanding we foolish men do greatly feare and fite the crosse, wherefore it is no meruell if we do never feele the crie of the spirit, and do continually remaine like them of Cains broode. But if thou doest not feele this crie, take heede that thou be not idle and slothfull, neither secure, pray instantly, for thou art in an euell case. And yet do not desire, that thou maist feele nothing but this crie of the spirit, thou must feele also an other terrible crie made, whereby thou mayst be prouoked and urged to this crie of the spirit, which happeneth to all the saints: That is the crie of synnes, which call most strongly and instantly unto desperation, but this crie must be ouercome of the spirit of Christ, by godly calling vpō the Father, and crying for his grace, that the trust and confidence of grace may become greater then desperation. Wherefore this crie of the spirit is nothing els, but to be with all our heart touched with a very strong firme, and unmoveable trust of most deare sonnes toward God, as our most tender and fauourable Father.

Hereby

Hereby we may see howe farre a Christian life exceedeth nature; which can doe nothing lesse then trust so in God, and call upon him as a Father, but is always afraid, and bittereith a voyce which is a witness of exceeding feare: Who is me, how cruell and intolerable a Judge art thou, O God? howe heavy is thy judgement vnto me? As Cain sayd Gen. 4: My iniquite is more then that it may be forgiuen. Thou hast cast me out this day from the pper face of the earth; and from thy face shall I be hid; yea it shall come to passe that every one that findeth me shall slay me, &c. This is a terrible and dreadfull crye, which is necessarily heard of all such as be of Cains brood, forasmuch as they trust to their selues and their owne workes, and put not their trust in the name of God, neither wiste and consider that he was sent of the Father, made of a woman, made vnder the lawe, much lesse that all these thinges were done for their saluation. They are continually tormentted in their owne works, the miserable men doe in nine goe about by them to helpe them selues, and to obtaine the race of God. And while their vngodlines is not herewith content, it beginneth to persecute euен the sonnes of God, as it is alwayes wont to doe, yea at the last they growe unto such crudite, at after the example of their father Cain they can not tell, vntill they slay their righteous brother Abel, in whom they doe also ill unto them selues Christ. Then the bloode of righteous Abel ieth unto heauen against unrighteous Cain, neichet ceaseth the cry vntill the Lord hath reuenged it. He asketh those sonnes of their brother Abel yea of Christ: but they deny all knowledge of Christ, which labour not to become the sonnes of God and heires of Christ, but to become righteous by their owne workes. In the iarie season the bloode of Christ continually crieth out against them, euen nothing but punishment and vengeance; when as for the elect, it crieth by the spirit of Christ for nothing but grace & conciliation.

A Christian life farre exceeding nature. A brow them which trust in their owne works, and not in Christ.

The Apostle beth here a Syrian, and a Greek word, saying: Abba, Pater. For this word Abba in the Syrian tongue signifieth a Father, by which name at this day the chiese of Monasteries are wont to be called, and by the same name Heremites in the past being holy men, did call their Presidents, at the last by it was also made a Latin word. Whether that which Paul saith is as much as: Father, Father, by it thou hadst rather, as,

Why the A. My father. But what is the cause why the Apostle doth double the word, Father, that is, the crye of the spirit? I will by your bleeding the leauue bringe forth my iudgement and opinion hereof. First word, Father. thinke that he would hereby shewe the force and straining of the holy cry. For when as we cal any with great affection, & throug no small necessitie, we are wont escoones to double his name. Howe because that sinne, and Cain doe alwayes goe about wi desperation to stoppe this crye of the spirit for the grace of the Father, it is neede surely to crye most strongly, and with a voice bo doubled, and exceedingly strained forth, that is, the trust of the grace of the Father ought to be most stronge and not able to be uercome. Againe such is the maner of the Scripture, to witnes the certaintie of a thing, sometime to double or iterate the word as Ioleph did to Pharas Gen. 41. So here also the spirit twi calleth vpon the Father, whereby it may shewe the certaintie his fatherly fauour and grace. For the trust hereof ought to be lesse certaine, then great and unmoveable. Finally it is meete so to perseuer, which againe this doubling of the name of fath doth note vnto vs. For as soone as we begin to call God Father Satan with all his band moueth warre against vs, and omitte no meanes to wrest from vs this trust of sonnes toward God or Father, wherefore thocher Father must be diligently double that is, our trust and confidence must be confirmed, neither mi we ever ceasse from calling vpon this Father, but must most easilly continue in this crye of the spirit, whereby we may obtain a certen sure experience of his fatherly goodnes, by which our trust in him may be made most certaine and safe. And perha Paul had respect hereunto, when he first set downe Abba, whi is a word straunge to them, to whom he wrote, after adding Father, that is Father, a familiar word and of their owne languag meaning to signifie hereby, that the beginning of so great trust God is vnaccustomed and euен straunge vnto men, but that whi the mind hath a while exercised it, and continued in it althoug assayled with tentations, it becommeth euен familiar and almost naturall, that we now enjoy God as a domesticall Father, and doe in every thing most confidently call vpon him.

Verse 7. Wherfore now thou art not a seruaunt, but sonne: if thou be a sonne, thou art also an hei of God through Christ.

Nowe, sayth he, that is after the comming of the spirit of the sonnes, after the knowledge of Christ, thou art not a seruaunt. For as it is sayd, a sonne and a seruaunt are so contrary one to another, that the same man can not be both a sonne and a seruaunt. A sonne and a seruaunt doe greatly differ. Sonne is free and willing, a seruaunt is compelled and unwilling: a sonne liueth, and resteth in faith: a seruaunt in works. And by this place also it appeareth, that we can obtaine no saluation of God by workes, but before thou workest that which is acceptable unto him, it is necessary that thou haue received of him and posseſſe saluation and all things, that thereupon works may freely flow forth, to the honour of so gracious a father, and to the profit of thy neighbours, without any feare of punishment, or looking for reward. This, that which Paule sayth, proueith: If thou be a sonne, thou art also an heire. For it is sayd before, that we become the sonnes of God by faith, without any workes, & therefore heires also, as this place witnesseth: for by nature they that are sonnes, the same also are heires. But if this inheritance of the father be nowe thyne by sayth, surely thou art riche in all good thinges, before thou hast wrought any thinge. For howe shoulde it be by faith thou art the heire of God, wout any works through truely grace, and that thou mayst againe first merit it by works? Wherefore the case standeth, as I often times say: To a man that is baptizid and beleueth in Christ, the heauenly inheritance the Father is already giuen at once, that is, all good thinges, they are only hid as yet by faith, for that the maner of the present life can not suffer, that he shoulde enioye them being revealed. Whereupon Paule sayth Rom.8: We are saued, but by hope, & ye doe not as yet see it, but doe yet waite, whan the possession of your good thinges shall be revealed. And I Pet.1. it is sayd: Your saluation is reserved in heauen and prepared for you, to be shewed in the last time. Wherefore the workes of a Christi: vVhereunto ought not to haue regard of merit, which is the maner of seruaunts, but onely of the vse and commoditie of his neighbours, that he doe not liue and worke to him selfe, but to his neighbour, whereby he may truely liue to the glory of God. For by faith he is rich in all good thinges, and truely blessed. Nowe the Apostle doeth, through Christ, less that any thinke that so great inheri-

And thus hath Paule called backe his Galathians from the teachers of woxes, which preached nothing but the law, periuting the Gospell of Christ. All which thinges are very necessary to be marked of vs also. For the Pope with his Prelats and Monks, hath now too long a time with intruding and vrging his lawes, which are foolish and most pernicious, inasmuch as they doe every where disagree with the word of God, seduced almost the whole world from the Gospell of Christ; & plainly extingshed the faith of sonnes, according as the Scripture hath in uers places very manifestly prophesied of his kingdom. Wherefore let every one that desireth to obtaine saluation, most diligently take heede of him and all his Apostles, no otherwise then Satan him selfe; and his chiefe and most pernicious Apostles.

TIN LVTHER, CONCERNING FAITH AND DIFFIDENCE IN
daunger and trouble.

Matth. 8.

Verse 23. When Iesus was entered into the ship, his Disciples followed him.

4. And behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, so that the ship was couered with waues, but he was asleepe.
5. Then his Disciples came, and awoke him, saying, Maister, saue vs, we perish.
6. And he sayd vnto them: Why are ye feareful, O ye of litle faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the windes and the sea: & so there was a great calme.
7. And the men merueiled, saying: What man is this, that both the windes & the sea obey him?

Acording to the historie this text setteth before vs an example of faith and diffidence: wherof we may learne both what a stronge and invincible thinge faith is, and that it must be exercised & tryed euē in great matters, and full of perill: and also howe esperate a thing on the other side diffidence is, and howe full of feare and trembling, which can never doe any thinge rightly or well. This doth experiance most lively set forth in the Disciples. How desperate & fearefull a thinge diffidence is, it appeareth by the example of Christes Disciples.
They, when they entered into the ship with Christ, and whilst there was calmnes in the lake, were nothing disquieted in mind, either felt any feare. Then if one should haue asked them whether they beleueed, they would haue aunswereid without dout that they did beleue. For they did not know that their hart did trust in that quietnes, for that all troubles were absent, and therefore id rest vpon a thinge visible, and not vpon the invisible grace of God. Which then was made manifest, as soone as the tempest was risen, and the waues did cover the ship; for by and by all their rust and confidence ceassed, for that the quietnes and calmnes whereunto they trusted was taken away, and diffidence, which before when al things were prosperous did lurke in their minds, did then appeare. For this is the nature of diffidence, that it beeeueth or knoweth no more then it seeleth. Forasmuch therfore as it had possessed the breastes of the Apostles, they felt nothing now but the fearefull tempest, and the waues couering the ship; they saw the sea swelling and greatly raging to threagien nothing but death. These thinges onely did they thinke vpon; these one did they consider, and therefore could there be no measure or en- of feare and trembling in their mindes: the moxe they weyed their mind the perill, so much moxe were they terrified, and si- med euern now to sticke in the very iawes of death, hoping for life or deliueraunce. And as they could not so much as thinke a chingels because of their vnbelieve, so all comfort also was fa- from them. For diffidence or vnbelieve hath nothing wherew- it may trust or flee, wherfore when outward aduersitie com- it admitteth nothing into the mind but it, and therefore it can- uer seele any peace or quietnes while this remaineth. So in he- where diffidence exerciseth full tyzannie, there can neuer be a intermission of desperation, trembling and terror.

The force of ^{2d. v. 12} faith, whereby death, the

and sinne are overcome.

But if the Disciples had bene then endued with a sound fai- and if it had ruled in this daunger, it would haue remoued fra- the mind the wind and all this tempest, & in steede of these wo- wholly haue thought vpon the power of God and his grace p- mised; whereunto it would no otherwise haue trusted, then had late vpon a most strunge rocke farre from the sea and from tempest. For this is the chiese vertue and cunning of faith, that seeth those thinges which are not seene or felt, and seeth not th- things which are felt, yea which are now soze vpon vs, and i- presse & vrge vs. As on the contrary side diffidence seeth noth- but that which it feeleth, neither can it rest vpon any other thi- but that which it feeleth. For this cause those thinges are of G- layd upon faith, which the whole world is not able to beare, s- sinnes, death, the world, and the devil; neither suffereth he it to occupied with small matters. For who flieith not death? who- not terrifieth & overcometh it? Against this invincible faith st- deth yea it couragiously setteth vpon it, which otherwise tam- all thinges, and ouer commeth and swalloweth vp that vnsatia- deuiter of life. So euern the whole world is not able to bring- ther and subdue the flesh, but it rather byngeth vnder and mak- the world subiect vnto it, & beareth rule ouer it, so that he liu- carnally whosoeuer is of the world. But faith subdueth this li- duer of all other, holdeth it in subiection, and teacheth it not o- ly to be ruled, but also to obey. Likewise who is able to beare & haire and furie, ignominie and persecutio[n] of the worlde? w- hich not yelde unto it and is oppresed with it? But faith ein- laugh b augheth at all the iniquitie, rage, and furie thereof, and maketh hat unto it selfe matter of spirituall ioy, wherewith other are ien killed. It doth no otherwise behauie it selfe against Satan ald: Who is able to ouercome him; which practizeth so many rastes and wiles, wherby he stayeth and hindereth the truthe, the woorde of God, faith, and hope; and soweth against them inna-nerable errours,sects, delusions, heresies, desperations, supertitions, and such kind of abominations without number? All the woorde is to him as a sparke of fire to a fountaine of water, it is pholy subdued unto him in these euills, as (alas) we both see and rie. But it is faith which troubleth him, for it is not onely not made subiect to his delusions, but it also discouereth and confoundeth them, that they be no more of any importance, that they are ible to doe nothing but doe vanish away, as we haue experience it this day by the decaying and vanishing of the Papacie and inulgences. Finally, sinne hath that force, that that which is euen he least, can not be appeased or extinguisched of any creature, that doth not gnawe and teare the conscience, yea if all men should goe about togither to confort the conscience wherein sinne hath egun to liue, they should goe about it in vaine! But faith is that oble Champion, which ouercommeth and extinguishest every inne; yea if all the sinnes which the whole world hath committed rom the beginning were layde vpon one heape, it would extinguish and abolish them all togither. Is not faith therefore most ightie and of incomparable strength, which dareth encounter with so many and so mightie enemies, and beareth away the ceraine victorie? Wherefore John sayth in his first Epistle chap.

: This is that victorie that hath ouercome this world, euen our aith.

Howbeit this victorie commeth not with rest and quietnes, we must tri the fight, not without blood and woundes, that is; we must needes feele sinne, death, the flesh, the devill, and the world, yea and that assayling vs so grieuously and with so great force, hat the hart of man doe thinke that he is past all hope, that sinne hath ouercome, and the devill gotten the upper hande, and on the contrary side very little feele the force of faith. We see an example of this fight here in the Disciples, for the waves did not onely strike the ship, but did euen couet it, that nothing could be now lo-ed for, but that it shold be drowned, especially Christ being asleepe, and knowing not of this perill : all hope was then past, li seemed to be ouercome, and death appeared to haue the victori But as it fel out with the Disciples in this tentation, so also do it fall out, and must fall out with all the godly in all kind of tentions, which are of sinne , the devill, and the world. In the tenta on of sinne we must needes seele the conscience thzall unto sinne the wrath of God and hellish paynes to hange ouer vs , and thinges to be in that case , as though we were past all recoueri Likewise when we haue conflict with the devill, it must appear as though truth shoulde giue place to errour, and Satan shoul dxiue the worde of God out of the wholle worlde, and he him self reigne for a God with his delusions & deceits. Neither stande the case any otherwise, when it commeth to passe that we are ex ed of the world, it must needes be, that it shold greatly rage and cruelly persecute vs, so that it shall seeme that no man at all is able to stand, that no man is able to obtaine safetie, or profes h faith : that Cain onely shall bear rule , and suffer his brother no place..

Albeit we be in daunger & great distres, yet must we not be dis couraged, but beleue that we shall be deliuered appearance of things, but according to faith. The present exar ple ought to stirre vs by hereunto, & to be receiued of vs in stee of speciaill comfort . For we learne hereof, that albeit sinnes druge vs, death disquiet vs, the world rage against vs, and the devill lay snares for vs, that is, although the waues doe couer th ship, yet we must not be discouraged . For although thy consi ence being wounded doth seele sinne, and the wrath and indign tion of God, yet shalt thou not therefore be plunged in hell. Rather shalt thou therefore die, although euен the whole world ha and persecute thee, and gape so wide to deuoure thee, as the mor ning spreadeth forth it selfe : They are onely waues , which sa lling upon thy ship doe terrifie thee, and compell thee to crie on we perish, Lord sau vs. Thou hast therefore in the former pa of this text, the nature of faith set forth, how it is wont and oug to behauie it selfe in tentation, also howe desperate a thinge diffidence is, and nothing to be counted of. The other part commen deth unto vs loue in Christ , whereby he was brought so farr that he brake of his sleepe , arose, and counted the daunger th his Disciples were in for his owne, and helped them freely, king or looking for nothing of them therefore . Euen as it is t natu nature of Christian loue to doe all things freely and of good will to the glorie of God, and profit of our neighbours , seeking to it else nothing thereby. For the exercising of which loue man adored of God, is left in the earth , even as Christ being made man dwied in the earth that he might do for vs, as he witnesseth of him else : I came not to be serued, but to serue, and to give my life Math. 20. 28 or the ransome of many.

The Allegories of this deede.

In this deede Christ hath set forth the life of Christians , and the state of such as preach and teache the worde of God. The ship signifieth the Church, the sea the world, the winde the deuill, the Disciples of Christ are the Preachers and godly Christians ; Christ the truth, the Gospell and faith. Now, before that Christ and his Disciples enter into the ship, the sea is calme, & the wind quiet, but when Christ with his Disciples are entered in, by and by riseth a tempest. This is that which he sayd : I came not to send peace but the sword. For if Christ would suffer the world to liue after his owne maner, and would not reprooue the workes thereof, it would be quiet enough. But now seeing that he preacheth that they which are counted wise men, are fooles : they that are counted righteous, are sinners : they that are counted rich, are not blessed, but miserable, it rageth & is in great furie. So thou maist see this daye finde wise men of this worlde , which in deede would suffer the Gospell to be preached, if the wordes of the Scripture houlde be simply declared , and in the meane season the state of Ecclesiastical persons not reprooued : but as soone as thou shal begin to condemne by the Scriptures all those thinges which haue bene hitherto brought in vnder a false name of religion, and to teach that they are to be reieced as being of no importance, thou preachest seditionously, and troublest the world with unchristian doctrine.

But how doth the present text pertaine unto vs? A great tempest did arise, where that ship went, wherein Christ and his Disciples were. Other ships did passe the sea quietly, nothing tossed of the windes, this ship onely must be tossed and couered with vauers, because Christ was carried in it. For the world can suffer my kind of preaching beside the preaching of Christ : the cause whereof that he condemneth all thinges of the world , and challen-preaching of Christ. Marth. 12.30. Joh. 16.8. geth all righteousnes to him selfe, according to that which he saith: He that is not with me, is against me: and againe: The Spirit will reprove the worlde of sinne, of righteousnes, and o iudgement. He sayth not: will preach, but, will reprove, and no this or that man, but, the world, and whatsoever is in the world. Against this ship of Christ all this tempest is raysed, and it is brought into daunger. For the world doth not suffer his own thinges to be condemned, but Christ can not allowe them, & if he should allow them, he had come in vaine. For if the world were wise by it selfe, and did knowe and followe the truthe, what need had there bene that Christ & his Disciples should preach? Wherfore it is not a small comfort to Christians, especially to Preachers, that they are certaine before, that as soone as they shal begin to preach Christ to the world, they must suffer persecution, & that it can not be otherwise. So that it is a sure signe, and there fore to be wished, that it is true Christian preaching, if it be triel with persecution, especially of the holy, learned and wise men of the worlde. As it is an vndouted signe also, that it is vncchristian preaching, if it be praysed commonly and honoured of the world, according to that saying Luke 6: Blessed are ye when men hate you, and put out your name as euill, for the Sonne of mans sake: for so did their fathers to the Prophets. Now marke how our spirituall men do behauie them selues, and of what sorte their doctrine is: They haue got into their subiection the riches, glorie, and power of the world, and they that prayse them, enjoy the honour and pleasures thereof; their case in all thinges agreeth with the case of the false Prophets, and yet they dare boast them selues to be Preachers and Teachers of Christ, and worshippers of God.

Of whom the Preachers of Gods word must looke for & desire helpe in the time of trouble and persecution.

The next thinge, whereby this deede doth comfort and encourage the Preachers of Christ, is, that it sheweth where helpe is to be asked, when a tempest is risen: to wit, not of the world, for not mans wisedom or power, but Christ him selfe, and he alone is able to helpe them. Unm they must call upon in every distres with full confidence, in him they must trust, as his Disciples here did. For vntles they had beleued that Christ was able to take away the daunger wherein they were, they would not haue awaked him, and prayed him to saue them: although their faith then was very weake, and very much dissidence was in them, for that they

they did not confidently commit them selues vnto daunger, douting nothing but he was able to deliuere them out of the middest of the sea, and from death it selfe. Whereof therefore let it be acknowledged as certaine, that as no Judge or Moderator can be giuen to the word of God, but God onely, so there can be had no other maintainer or defender thereof: who as he sendeth it out whether he will without any merit or counsell of men, so he alone also will defende & preserue it without the ayde or strength of men: and therefore he that seeketh ayde vnto this word of men, shall without dout fall, being forsaken as well of men as of God.

Whereas Christ did sleepe, it giueth vs to vnderstand, that in the time of persecution he doth sometimes withdraw him selfe, & seemeth as though he slept, whiles that he giueth not strength & power valiantly to resist, the peace and tranquilltie of minde being now disturbed, but suffereth vs to wrestle and labour with our infirmitie for a while, that we may acknowledge, how we are altogether nothing, and that all thinges doe depend on his grace and power. As Paule confesseth of him selfe 2. Cor. i. that it behoued that he shouide be so pressed and troubled out of measure, that we should not trust in our selues but in God, which rapseth the dead. Such sleepe of God David oftentimes felte, and maketh mention thereof in many places: Arise, awake, O Lorde: why sleepest thou? why doost thou forget vs? &c.

Christ sometimes in the time of persecution and trouble with draweth him self & differreth his help for a while.

In a summe, the present text offereth vnto vs two principall thinges full of confidence and godly boldnes. The first, that when persecution is risen for the word of God, we may say: We knew that it would so come to passe. Christ is in the ship, therefore the sea so rageth, the windes trouble vs, the waues fall vpon vs as though they would drowne vs. But let them rage and be furious as much as they may: it is certaine, the sea and the windes doe obey Christ which is the other principall thinge which this text offereth. Persecution shall extend no farther, nor rage any lenger then he will, and albeit the waues doe euen ouerwhelme vs, yet must they be obedient at his becke. He is Lorde ouer all, wherefore nothing shall hurt vs: he onely endue vs with his grace, that we be not ouercome by vnbelieve and so despeire, Amen.

Whereas the men meruelled and prayed the Lorde, as vnto whom the sea and windes doe obey, it signifieth that the Gosspell The Gosspell and word of God is so farre from being extinguished by persecu- is more spread ation, that thereby it is syread farther abroad, and faith also is increased and becommeth stronger. Wherein it appeareth how diuers the nature of this diuine good thinge is from the goi thinges of the wold, which decay by calamitie and misfortun and are increased by prosperitie and fortunate assayres: But the kingdom of Christ is increased and strengthened by tribulati and aduersitie: but is diminished and weakned by peace and tranquilitie. Whereupon Paule sayih 2. Cor. 12: The Lord power is made perfect through weakenes: which God perform in vs also, Amen.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, WHEREIN IS ENTREATED OF THE LIFE OF A CHRISTIAN.

2. Cor. 6.

Verse 1. O we therefore as workers togidher beseech you, that ye receiue not the grace of God in vain.

2. For he sayth: I haue heard thee in time accepted, and in the day of saluation hau I succoured thee: beholde nowe the accepte time, behold now the day of saluation.

3. Let vs giue no occasion of offence in any thing that our ministerie be not reprehended.

4. But in all things let ys behau our selues as the Ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses.

- In stripes, in prisons, in tumults, in labours.
 In watchings, in fastings, in puritie, in knowledge, in long suffering, in kindnes, in the holy spirit, in loue vnfeyned.
 In the word of truth, in the power of God, by the armour of righteousnes on the right hand and on the left.
 By honour and dishonour, by euill report and good report, as deceiuers, and yet true:
 As vnkowne, and yet knowne: as dying, and behold, we liue: as chastened, & yet not killed.
 As sorrowing, & yet alway rejoicing: as poore, and yet make many rich: as hauing nothing, & yet possessing all things.

His is an admonition and exhortation to the Corinthians, to apply them selues to those thinges, which they did already knowe. The wordes surely are easie to be understood, but hard to be done, and in vse most rare. For in such merueilous order and colours he painteth out Christian life, as it can not be pleasaunt to the flesh to behold. First he sayth: As workers togither we be-feech you. He calleth the Ministers of þ word togither workers, is 1. Cor. 3. he also sayth: VVe togither are Gods labourers, ye are Gods husbandrie, and Gods building. Which is thus much in effect: We preach and labour in the word among you by teaching & exhorting, but God inwardly with his spirit doth blesse and give the encrease, lest that the outward labour in the word be in vaine. And so God is the inward and true Maister, whiche bringeth to passe all thinges, whom we serue in the office of outward preaching. Now he calleth him selfe & his fellowes such togither workers, lest they shoulde contemne the outward word, as though they either had not neede of it, or had already sufficietly attayned to the knowledge therof. For although God can alone by his spirit, without the outward word worke all things in the mindes of the elect, yet he will not doe it, but rather will vse togither working preachers, & worke by their word wher & where it pleasest him. Forasmuch therfore as it seemeth good vnto God to giue i Preachers this office, name, & dignitie, that they be counted wo kers togither with him, it is not lawfull for any man to chaleng either that learning or helines vnto him selfe, that he neglect eneuer so simple a sermon wherein the word of God is preachei much lesse that he contemne it: for we know not when that tyme will come, when God by his Preacher will bouchsafe to accomplish his worke in vs.

The preaching of the Gospel doth not long cōtinue in one place sincere & vncorrupt

Secondly, the Apostle admonisheth of the daunger of losing light of the Gospel, when he sayth: that ye receiue not the graof God in vaine. Wherby he giueth vs to understand that þ pre-ching of the Gospel is not a perpetual, continuing & permanedoctrine, but rather that it is like raine that sovainly commeth soone passeth away when as the Sunne and heat come byandb and take away al the moisture that is left thereof, and afterwai scorch and hurt thinges neuertheles. This very experience prueth, for no man shall be able to bringe forth euен one place in th world, where the Gospele hath remained pure and sincere abou the age of one man, but continued and increased while those liui by whose ministerie it began, they departing hence that also a most wholly departed, and byandby after followed heretikes an false teachers, with their delusions and false doctrine perniciand corrupting all thinges. So Moses foretold his Israelites that byandby after his death it shoulde come to passe, that the should depart from the way of the Lorde, and corrupt their ow wayes, which the booke of Judges witnesseth to haue come pass. Moreouer the same booke sayth, that as often as any iudg which had called againe the word of the Lord did die, they fell gaine sorow with to their vngodlines, & made all things worse an worse. So Joas the king continued in his dutie so long as Iehi ada the Priest liued, who being dead, he began byandby to be King vnlke him selfe, & left the office of a good and godly King Neither fell it out otherwise after Christ had received his Apistles to him selfe, almost the whole world was filled with heresie and false doctrine. Which Paul pronounced before: I know this sayth he, that after my departing shall grieuous wolvies enter i among you, not sparing the flocke, &c. So standeth the tale: this day also, the pure and sincere Gospel hath shined vnto vs, th De

day of grace and saluation, and the acceptable time are present, but they shall shortly be ended if the world stand.

Moreover, to receive grace in vaine can be nothing els, then What it is to to heare the pure and sincere word of God, whereby the grace of receive the God is preached and offered, and notwithstanding to embrase it grace of with no diligence, neither to be chaunged or altered in life. By God in vaine this unthankfull slothfulnes we deserue to haue it taken away againe as being unworthy of it. For we making so light of the Gospell are undoubtedly they which are bidden and called to the mariage, but whiles being busied about other matters we despise this grace, the good man of the house is angrie with vs, & sweateth that we shall never cast of his supper. The same doth Paule now here admonish of, that we take heed to our selues, least that we receive the Gospell unthankfully & without frute. Vea Christ also admonished vs of the same: V Valke while ye haue the light, Ioh. 12.35.

For he sayth: I haue heard thee in a tyme accepted, and in the day of saluation haue I succoured thee: beholde nowe the accepted tyme. He describeth here the merueilous felicitie which is there where the Gospell flourishest, there is no wrath, no reuengement, all thinges are replenished with grace and saluation, yea it is unspeakable howe great felicitie these wordes doe speake of. Whereas he first sayth: a tyme accepted, it is spoken by an Hebrewe figure, and is as much as if thou say: a gratious tyme and replenished with the fauour of God, wherein God turneth away his anger, and declareth nothing but loue toward vs, and a ready will to helpe vs. Our sinnes are blotted out, not onely those that be past, but those also which as yet sticke in our flesh, and that I may speake in a word: the kingdom of mercie is present, wherein nothing but forgiuenes of sinnes, and restoring of grace is shewed: heauen standeth open, the right yeare of Jubile is come, wherein all dettes are remitted, and no grace is denied. Whereupon he sayth: In a tyme accepted haue I heard thee, that is, now I fauour thee & am mercifull unto thee, whatsoever thou wilt haue, pray for it, and thou shalt obtayne it, an certainly receiue it. Only let not the fault be in thy selfe; pray while this time endureth.

The day of saluation.

Beholde nowe the day of saluation. He calleth this the tim and day of saluation, that is of helpe and felicitie. For we are not onely certayne hereof, that God is mercifull and fauourabl unto vs, and we acceptable vnto him; but also as we beleue and by faith are sure of his goodnes toward vs, so he declareth in deede, heareth them that crye vnto him; helpeth and saueth them, yea and maketh them plainly blessed. We therefore worthily acknowledge and confesse this tyme to be the wished, prosperous, happie, and very day of saluation. For it behoueth that both be toghether, both that God fauour vs, and also that he declare his fauour towards vs by worke or deede. That he fauoureth vs, the accepted tyme which is nowe present doth witnes that he doth also helpe vs and finish our saluation, this other witnesseth, to wit the day of saluation, the day of helpe. But as the state of the life of Chritians is, if thou wilt judge accordinge the outward man, thou wilt judge it rather a tyme of affliction wrath and indignation, wherein the Gospell is preached, and wherein they liue, then a tyme of grace and saluation. Wherefore the wordes of the spirit must be spiritually vnderstood, so shall we easily see & perceiue that these noble and most pleasaun names doe most rightly and properly belong to the tyme where in the Gospell flourishest, that it is a tyme accepted, that is, ful of grace, and a tyme of saluation, whereby surely all the riches and felicitie of Chrities kingdom are notably commended and set forth vnto vs.

No offence

uen whereby
the Gospell
may be reprehended.
Double occation of offence may be giuen,

Let vs give no occasion of offence in any thinge. Forasmuch therefore as there is so acceptable and gratiouse a tyme, let vs sayth he, vse it worthely, and not receive it in bayne. First endeuouring to give no occasion of offence to any man, least that our office of preachinge Chrit be reprehended, whereby he sufficienly declarerh what offence he meaneth, namely, that the doctrine of the Gospell may not be stumbled at, as though he taught that which is not perfect and sound. Nowe there may be giuen a double occasion of offence, whereby the Heathen are offended, when as some vnder a pretence of the Gospel seeke the libertie of the flesh, wil not be obedient obedient to magistrates, turning the libertie of þ spirit, into flesh: whereby the ly licentiousnes. These do meruelously offend þ disreeter & wiser Gospel is re-out a cause, whch they thinke doth teach this licentiousnes: and so as it were with a certaine force they do by this their insolencie repell and drine them from the faith of Christ: for they measuring all Christians by these, do detest them as light men, and trou-blers of the common wealth, and therefore not to be suffered.

This offence therefore, and this reprehension, or rather hatred and persecution of the Gospell we acknowledge to come through these prepsterous Christians. An other offence is, whereby euē Christians amōg themselues are sometime offended, through the vnreasonable vse of Christian libertie, in meates and other indifferent thinges, whereat the weaker sort in faith do sometime stumble. Whereof the Apostle hath giuen many preceptes 1. Cor. 8. Rom. 14. He exhorteth therefore here vno that, wheredis he admonisheth in other wordes 1. Cor. 10: So behauie your selues, that ye giue none offence, neither to the Iewes, nor to the Grecians, nor to the Church of God: euē as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine owne profit, but the profit of many, that they might be sauied. The same he teacheth also philip. 2. that euerie man looke not on his owne thinges, but on the thinges of other men, for so all offence should be easily taken away, nay none at all should be giuen.

That our ministerie be not reprehended. Who can bring to passe that our ministerie shall not be reprehended, seeing that the Gospell is necessarily subiect to persecution, no lesse then Christ himself? In dede it is not in vs to make that the worde of God be not reprehended and persecuted of them which are ignorant of God, and do not beleue: for it is a rocke of offence, Esai. 8.
Rom. 9. this offence commeth because of our fath, and can not be avoided of vs, and therefore the blame thereof ought not to be layde vpon vs. Howbeit there is an other offence which procee-deth hereof, for that our loue is not sufficient duiifull, this commeth througþ vs, inasmuch as our workes are the cause thereof, because they do not so shone by fath, that they whch are conne-aunt with vs may thereby be prouoked to serue God, as it is neece. This offence is giuen througþ our fault, whom it becommeth so to lue, that the Iewes, Heathen & Princes of the world might haue no occasion to say: Beholde how light and naughtie these men are, yea and verie wicked wretches, the doctrine of life which they follow must needes be euell and pestilent. So ou infamie and crimes are occasion of offence to others, and of hatred and detestation of the most holy word of God. For where as we ought so to know, preach and folow it, that thereby both our neighbours might be brought unto God, and to the leading of godly life, and also the glorie of God set forth, we by our naughtie and stouchfull life bring to passe that it doth not onely bring n profit and commodity to our neighbours, but is brought into hatred and made detestable through our meanes, bearing our ignominie and reproche. Now it is a most horriblie synne and wickednes by our naughtines to make the word of God which is most holy and bringeth salvation, to make it I say, so odious, and to repell and drine men from it, to our owne, and their most certaine destruction.

But in all thinges let vs behaue our selues as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, &c. Here he describeth in order the signes & proper tokenes of a Christian life, wherewith it ought to be adorneed in outward conuersation: Not meaning that one is made a Christian and godly hereby, but as he sayth, that by these as by proper frutes and signes of Christianitie, we shold shew our selues to be both, and behaue our selues as the ministers of God, that is as Christians & godly men. And marke well that he sayth: as the ministers of God. It may seeme very straunge, that the ministerie of God consisteth in these, in many afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in prisons, in tumults, in watchings; in fastings, &c. Among these he numbereth not Masses, and prayers for the dead, or other trifles of fained worship of God. He rehearseth those things that pertaine to the true and right seruice of God, whereby the body is chasted, and the flesh tamed. Which is well to be noted, lest that any neglect fastings, watchings and labour, and make no count of them for that they do not iustifie. They bring not righteousness in deede, yet are they frutes of righteousness being obtained, wherein thou mayst be exercised, and whereby thou mayst keepe thy flesh in subiection, and enforce it to do his dutie.

In tumults. He rehearseth tumults or seditions among the rest, not that it becommeth vs to teach or moue them, who ought to obey Magistrates, and with quietnes to live obedient vnto all in that which is good, as Paule teachech Rom. i 31; and Christ Matth. 22: Giue vnto Cesar those thinges that are Cesars: but that we must beare tumultes of others, as also necessities, distresses, stripes, and imprisonments, which we must cause or procure vnto none, but suffer being procured and layde vpon vs by others. Wherefore in the first place he setteth much patience, which surely moueth no sedition or tumult, but rather suffreth it, and appeaseth it, if it can. But in the meane season it singulairely comforteth vs at this time, when as tumults are commonly imputed vnto vs, for that this is incident to a Christian life, that so by the preaching of the Gospell it is accused to raise sedition, which raise sedition is rather suffreth being raised of other against the word of God. For as in time past Achab accused the most holy Prophet Elias of sedition, affirming that it was he that troubled Israell, when as he himselfe in deede did trouble it: so is it neither a shamefull nor new thinge, for vs to be accused of the same when we preach the same word. Let vs thinke when the enemies of God lay this reproche and sclauder vpon vs, that not onely Elias, not onely the Apostles, but Christ himselfe was counted of the Jewes a seditious felow, & crucified, a title being written in three languages and put on the crosse, that he shold of all be counted as a seditious king of the Jewes, which would haue moued that people against Cesar, and adioined them to himselfe, who in deede by word and example of his life taught nothing more then submissio and obedience, and liued so that he was ready to profit and minister vnto all: As for the rest whereof the Apostle here maketh mention, as patience, affliction, necessitie, distres, stripes, prisons, labour, watchinges, fasting, purifie: it is easie to understand how they pertaine to the ministerie of God, who truely disdaieth to haue flouthfull, idle, gluttonous, and drowse ministers, and such as can not abide aduersarie and trouble. But he specially reprooueth our delicate ones, which quietly enjoy reuenues and rents, and take their delight and pleasure, thinking that it is an unwoorthie thinge that they shold labour, for they are shauen, weare long gownes, and crie out in temples &c. Howbeit these shall not be able to approue themselves before God, who will haue none to be idle, but as it is written by Paule to the Thessalonians, Who therefore all to labour,

God will haue none to be idle, but

and so eat their owne
bread.

reacheth here also, that God is serued by labour; and not cha only, but that we also are thereby proued and commended to b the ministers of God.

In knowledge. Paule taketh knowledge here for that whic we call pruence or wisdom, wherby we vse things with reason behauing our selues with discretion and comelines. Of whic knowledge hysaying also of Paul Rom. 10. is understood: The haue the zeale of God, but not according to knowledge, tha is, they bear a zeale to the lawe not prudently, not weyng an considering all things well, that they might do no vndecent thing Christians must frame their life prudently and with sufficiet discretion.

Wherefore whereas he here expressely requireth knowledge i the ministerie of God, he thereby admonisheth vs, that we fram our life with reason, and order it prudently, in all things keeping a meyne, and having an advised reharsall of our neighbours, let that in any thing we offend y weaker sort, with vnseasonable vs of Christian libertie; and that we do all thinges to the edifying o all. So we must labour, fast, watch, and applie our selues to cha sticie and such other thinges, not aboue measure, that either th body may be in daunger by too much honger and watching, or the true puritie of life by ouermuch abstinance from matrimo niall compaines but we must vse these thinges with knowledge, that is with conuenient wisdome and discretion, that they may not any whit hurt; but alwayes edifie. Whereupon Paule 1: Cor. 7. expressely admonisheth maried folkes, that they abstaine not ouermuch from mutuall compaines, lest that they be tempted of Satan. In all these therefore, in fastings, watchings, labours, chasticie &c: the Apostle would prescrive and appoint no rule, lawe or measure, which the councells of the Pope and Monkes do, but the meane or measure to be obserued in them he left free to euerie mans knowledge and discretion, that euerie one may consider with himselfe how much or long he must labour, fast, watch, or abstaine, to this ende that the flesh may be tamed and made obedient to the spirit.

In long suffering, in kindnes, in the holy Spirit. What the two former are the Apostle hath at large sufficiently declared Rom.
2. Gal. 5. But whereas he saith: In the holy Spirit, it may be un derstood after two sorte, either that he speaketh of y holy Ghost, God himselfe, or that he meaneth by the holy spirit the true force and maner of a spirituall life, as though he would admonish in

this maner: Beware of an hypocriticall spirit, which wilbe counted for a holy spirit through a meruelous shew and craftie counterfaiting of spirituall thinges, when it is in deede an uncleane, prophane, and an euell spirit, and bringeth in nothing but sects and heresies. But liue ye in the true & holy spirit which is given of God, which giueth and maintaineth vnitie, one mynde, heart and affection, whereof he speaketh also Eph. 4: Endeouour to keepe the vnicte of the spirit in the bond of peace. They therefore which perseuer in the same true faith, mynde and sentence, behauie themselves as the ministers of God in the holy spirit, being truly spirituall, and liuing a spirituall life. For a sincere spirituall life, which is led by the assistaunce of the holy spirit of God, is also led in the vnitie of myndes, the hearts by faith being affected after the same sorte.

In loue vnsained, in the word of truthe. As he set the holy spirit against heretikes and false Prophets, so he setteth vnsained loue against slouchfull and sluggish Christians, who albeit they haue the same meaning and mynde in the true spirituall life, as concerning opinions of doctrine, yet are they remisse, colde and怠 in loue. So he setteth the word of truthe against them whiche abuse the word of God, and interpret it according to their owne effectes, that thereby they may get them a name and profit. For is false spirits do conteneine the word of the Scripture, and preerre themselues before it: so these do in deede boast of the word, and wilbe counted maisters of the Scripture, but by their interpretations do pervert the sense and meaning thereof. Against hese Peter speaketh: If any man speake, let him speake as the wordes of God, that is, let him take heed that he be certaine hat those wordes which he speaketh, be the wordes of God, and not his owne vaine imagination. Now Paule calleth that here he word of truthe, whiche is sincere word of God, not whiche is insincere & fained, which so aliusch as it is ours, is falsly called he word of God. For that which we call the true & right word, he Hebrewes call the word of truthe.

In the power of God. Of this power Peter also speaketh i. Pet. i. If any man minister, let him do it as of the abilitie which God ministreth. And Paule Coloss. i. Whereto I also laboure and stiuie, according to his working, which worketh in me mightely. Againe Rom. i. 5: I dare not speake of anything which they are not certaine, that it is not they which worke, but G more at large in the Epistle to the Ephesians & Thessalonians.

He rehearseth there the girdle of veritie, the brest plate of rig teousnes, the shooes of preparation to preach the Gospell, i shield of faith, the helmet of saluation, &c. This armour of rig of God, both are to this ende, that he may turne Christians fr corporall and prophane armour, and admonish them, that th are a spirituall people, and therefore must be furnished with s rituall armour, wherewich they must alwayes fight a spiritu fight with spirituall enemies, which here he rehearseth, a sheweth that they do assaile vs both on the right hand and on t left. On the left hand he setteth dishonour, euell report, and sh we are counted as deceiuers, unknownen, dying, chasteined, si rowing, poore, hauing nothing. For all these thinges come p to Christians, they are openly defamed, being reproched to th face, and by infamie falsly accused and railed on, counted as d ceiuers and followers of most wicked trades. They are as b knowne although noble, all refusing to be friends with them b cause of the perilous confession of the name of Christ, yea it m nie times commeth to passe that they that were their most fa liar friends are ashamed of them, for that they haue so euell a t pose, and are verie ill spoken of among the chiese, richest, wised and mightiest of the world. They are dying, that is, as shee

They are chastened, for it often times falleth out that they are triken and beaten, and do by other discommodities trie how they are enued of the world, and how great indignation the mightie of the world beare against them. They are as sorrowing, for all inward thinges are against them, and the whole world giuech many causes of grieves unto them. They are as poore, for there is no man of the world which will giue them any thing, euerie man is ready to hurt and endamage them. Neither do they possesse any thinge, for al though all thinges be not taken from them at once, yet are they in that state that they daily looke for it. Against these aduersities & as enemies assailing vs on the leste haud, it is needfull that we be fortifid & fensed with þ armour of God, lest that we either despeire or faint. Now this armour is a sure The armour

When being furnished with these, we suffer all thinges patiently, standing stedfast in our dutie, we declare ur selues the sincere ministers of God, which the false Apostles and hypocrites can never do, although they faine that they true God.

On the right hand he settech glorie, prasses, that we are coun- Where a-here be some which make account of Christians, and reverence hem, among whom they are well reportid of, and counted true in doctrine, wherefore some are not wanting which ioyne themselves unto them, and do openly pretend friendship with them, reely pronouncing them to be the ministers of God. Neither do they die so oft as they are brought into daunger, and being cha-stened are not alwayes killed. Finally it commeth to passe by þe consolation of the spirit, that they do then most of all reioyce, when they are in greatest affliction. For their heart reioyceth in God, which ioy bursteth forth, and bicereth it selfe in wordes, workes, and gestures. And albeit they be poore in corporall substaunce, yet are they never famished with hunger, but with the word of God do enrich verie many in spirit, & stand not in neede of any thing, although they have nothing, for all thinges are in their handes, for that all creatures must serue the beleeuers, as Christ sayth: To him that beleueith all thinges are possible.

These things albeit they be the excellent gifteſ of God, notwithstanding if the ſearc of God ſhould be abſent, euen they ſhould be turned into enemieſ unto vs, and therefore is it needeſfull that we be ſtrongly feſled againſt them with the armour of God, leſt they make vs ware proud, or iſolently pufſe vs vp. A Chriftia‐man therefore is meruelouſly free, and addicteſ to nothing but God alone, he ſetteth God onely before his eyes, he endeouoreſ to come ſtraight unto him by the midle and hie waye, betweene those thingeſ which affaile on the right hand and on the leſt, that he is neither throwen downe by aduerſarie, nor puffed up by proſperity, but bleſt both moſt rightly, both to the glorie of God and profit of hiſ neigbours. We muſt, ſayth the Apoſtle, liue ſuch a life, while it is the time of grace and of the lively lighte the Gofpell, leſt that while thiſ daye ſhineſ we worke not, an that ſhall haue ſhined unto vs in vaine. Thiſ is the true minifrie of God which onely he alloweth. wherein he graunteth we may ſerue him, and that moſt dutiſfully, Amen.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, CONCERNING TENTATION.

Matth. 4.

Verſe 1.

He was Iefus led aside of the ſpirit into the wildernes, to be tempted of the Deuell.

2.

And whē he had fasted forty daie and fortie nights, he was afterward hungrie. Then came to him the tempter & ſaid, if thou be the ſonne of God commaund that theſe ſtones be made bread.

3.

4. Bi

4. But he aunswering, said, it is written: Man shall 5. not liue by bread only, but by euerie word that
 6. proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

7. Then the Deuell tooke him vp into the holy 8. Citie, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, 9. And said vnto him: If thou be the Sonne of 10. God, cast thy self downe: for it is written, that he
 1. will giue his Angels charge ouer thee, & with
 2. their hāds they shal lift thee vp, lest at any time
 3. thou shouldest dash thy foote against a stone.
 4. Iesus said vnto him, it is written againe: Thou 5. shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

6. Again the Deuell tooke him vp into an excee-7. ding hie mountain, & shewed him all the king-8. domes of the world, and the glorie of them.

9. And said to him: All these will I giue thee, if 10. thou wilt fall downe, and worship me.

1. Thē said Iesus vnto him, Auoid Satan, for it is
 2. written: Thou shalt worship the Lord thy
 3. God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

4. Then the Deuel left him: and behold, the An-
 5. gels came, and ministred vnto him.

His text hath therfore bin appointed to be redde in the beginning of the solemne fast, which hath hi-thereto bin commaunded for soxtie dayes, that the example of Ch̄rist being commēded to Ch̄ristians, they might thereby be prouoked to keepe that fast much more religiouly, which surely was nothing but a vaine riste. First, for that no man is able to follow y example of Ch̄rist, who liued without any meat, soxtie dayes, and so many nights.
 Ch̄rist rather followed the example of Moses herein, then gaue unto vs any example to follow. Moses receiuing the Lawe, was soxtie dayes & soxtie nights in the mount Sinai without meat: so long time would Ch̄rist also fast, coming to bring & publish a new law. Againe, this fasting is a peruerse thing, inasmuch as it was ordained of men. For albeit Christ fasted certe dayes, yet haue we no word of his whereby he hath commaunded vs also to do the same. He did many other thinges beside notwithstanding he will not haue vs also to do them: those thinges that he hath commaunded vs to do, those thinges, I say, we must endeour to do and meritorious worke, not to tame the flesh thereby, but to satiate for synnes, and to procure the fauour of God unto our selues Which wicked opinion made our fasting so soule, filthie and abominable before God, that no feastings, bankets, gluttonie and dronkennes are so filthie and detestable before him, & it were better to drinke and bibbe daye & night, then so to fast. And althoug this vngodly & wicked intent had not defiled our fasting, but tha Fasting must it had bin ordained for chastising y body, nevertheles forasmuch be left free.

A most wicke- that thereby we may obey his wil. But the most pestilent thing o ked abuse of all herein was, that we tooke vpon vs, and vsed fasting as a good fasting.

as it was not left free, that euerie one might haue taken it vpon him of his owne accord, but was enforced by the lawes of man so that most which fasted, fasted against their willes, and with grudging mynde, it could not be but vaine and unacceptable to God. I speake not what other hurt it did in women with childe, in yong childdren, in the weake and aged. Wherefore we will more rightly consider this text, and see what maner of fasting it teacheth by the example of Christ.

Two sorts of fasting, w are allowable & to be commended.

The Scripture commenedeth unto vs two sorts of fasting which are laudable: one, which is taken vpon vs of our owne accord, to tame the flesh, whereof the Apostle speaketh 2. Cor. 6. where he exhorteth vs to behau our selues as the ministers of God, by labours, watchings, & fastings among the rest. An other, which it deede is not taken vpon vs willingly, yet is willingly borne of vs, when by reason of neede and pouertie we haue not whereon to feede. Whereof Paule speaketh also in the first Epistle to the Corinthians, the fourth chapter: Unto this houre we both hunger and thirst. And Christ Matth. 9: VVhen the bridegome shalbe taken from them, then shall they fast. This fasting Christ teacheth vs by his present example, who being alone in the deserte and hauing no meat, did suffer that neede and hunger patiently. The first of these two fastes may when we please be left and broken with eating of meat: but this last must be suffered vntill the Lord ende and breake it.

Now the cause why the Euangelist did so diligently first declare , that Jesus was led aside of the spirit into the wildernes, that he shoulde there fast and be tempted, is this : lest that any taking vpon him to fast of his owne mynde and for his owne commodities sake , shoulde in vaine endeouour to follow this example of Christ . For he must looke for the leading asyde of the spi-rite, he will cause fasting and temptation enough : for he that without the leading asyde of the spirit, shoulde voluntarilie bring himselfe into daunger of hunger , or any other temptation , when by the blessing of God he hath what to eate and drinke , and whereby to liue quietly , he , I saye , should plainly tempt the Lord . We must not procure to our selues pouertie and tentation, they will come soone enough of themselues , onely when it.

We must not procure temptation to our selues , but patiently suffer it , when it pleasest thy Lord to send them. they are sent of the Lord we must endeouour to beare them patiently . Jesus , as the Euangelist wryteth , was led aside of the spirite into the wildernes , he did not choose to himselfe the wildernes . They are led with the Spirite of God , which are the sonnes of God , Romans 8 . The good thinges which the Lorde giueth , he giueth for this , that we maye enioye them with thankes giuing , not that we shoulde neglect them , tempting him.

Moreover, this history is written vnto vs both to instruct, and also to exhort . To instruct, that we may learne hereby, that Christ by this his fasting, hunger, temptation and victorie against Satan did serue vs , & furthered our saluation: that whosoeuer beleueueth in him, may never neede, or be hurt by any temptation, but rather shall abound with good thinges in the middes of pouertie, and be safe in the middes of temptation, for that his head and Lord Christ hath overcome all these thinges for him , whereof by sayth he is most certain, according as þ Lord himselfe sayth Joh. 16: Be ye of good comfort, I haue overcome the world. And if God could without meat nourish his Christ certe dayes & so many nighnts, so he can also Christians . We are exhorted also here, that according to this example of Christ, we suffer hunger, temptation , and other necessities whē they come, and when the case so requireth, to the glorie of God & profit of our neighbours . And surely if we do earnestly confesse and sticke to the word of God, these thinges will vndoubtedly come vnto vs . The present text therefore containeth a meruelous consolation and strengthening of faith, against the filchis and incredulous bellie, which being disligrētly and faſt full weyed, our conſcience ſhalbe verie much comfordeſt an ſtrengthened, that we may not be carefull for living, but truſt wiſ a full confidence, that God will giue vs plentifulliſh thofe thinge that be neceſſarie. Now, that thiſ tentation alſo is incident vni vſ it is maniſt. For as Chriſt was led aside into the wildeſneſſe that iſ, was leſt alone of God, Angels, men, and all creatures which miſt helpe him: ſo alſo falleth it ouer with vſ. We are led aside into the wildeſneſſe, we are forſaken and leſt alone. An this indeeſe iſ it, which eſpecially grieueth vſ, to feele or per ceiue nothing whereunto we may truſt, or from whence we ma looke for helpe. As when it lyeth upon me to ppreare ſuſtenanc for me and mine, and I haue nothing at all of my ſelfe, neitheſ perceiue any helpe comming from any man, neither know wher to looke for any. Thiſ is to be led aside into the deſert, and to be leſt alone, I being in thiſ caſe, am in the true exerſice of faſt then I leарne how I my ſelfe am nothing, howe weake my faſt iſ, how great and rare a thing ſounde faſt iſ, and howe deepe & vominable incredulitie iſ ſealed in the harts of all. But he thaſt hath as yet a purſe heauie with money, a ſeller ful of wine, a gaſ tar replenished with graine, he iſ not yet led aside into the wil deſneſſe, or leſt alone, and therfore can not feele tentation whil thiſe thiſges remaine.

Satan temp-teth Christ with care for the belly and diſſidence of Gods good nes.

Secondly, Satan commeth, and tempteth Chriſt with thiſ care for the bellie, and diſſidence of the goodnes of God, ſaying If thou be the Sonne of God, command that theſe ſtones be made bread. As iſ he ſhould ſay according to þ Dutch prouerbe Tarie till a roſted chicken flie into thy mouth. Go now, and ſay that thou haſt a God, who iſ carefull for thee. Where iſ now that thy heauenly Father, who hath ſo great a care of thee? Haſt he not goodly forſaken thee? Eate now and drinke of thy faſt, and let vſ ſee how thou ſhalbe ſuffiſed: iſ were well with thee; iſ thou couldest feede on ſtones. What a goodly ſonne of God art thou? How fatherly doth he behauie himſelf toward thee? He ſendeth thee not ſo muſh as a peecz of breade, but ſuffereth thee here to be pined with hunger. Go now, and beleeue yet that thou art the ſonne of God, and he thy Father. Surely with thiſe and ſuch like cogitationis he tempteth all the chiſzen of God, which Chriſt

Christ also vndoubtedly felt; for he was not a blocke or stone, but verie man, although pure from synne; as he also continued, which is not givene unto vs. Now that the Deuel tempted Christ with care of the bellie, dissidence and wicked desire, the aunswere of Christ doth sufficiently declare; Man liveth not by breade alone. Which is as much as if he had said: Thou wilt haue me haue regard to bread alone, thou dealest with me, as though I ought to haue no other care but of meate and soode for the bellie. This temptation is verie common, euен among men that are of the most perfect sorte, but they especially scelle it, which when they are poore, haue notwithstanding a wife and children to nourish and maintaine, and therewithall an empie house. Hereupon Paule calleth covetousnes the roote of all euels, for that it is the right offspying of dissidence. And what thinges els, but this dissidence and care of the bellie, is the cause that many are so loath to marie? what els doth hold so many thousand men in whoredome & unchast living, and detaineth them from matrimony, but this immoderate care of the bellie, and vngodly feare lest they shoulde be pined and perich with hunger? But the present deepe and example of Christ shoulde be thought vpon, who although he had bin without meate fortie dayes and so many nights, yet was he not quite forsaken and left destitute, but the Angels at the last came, and ministred all thinges necessarie vnto him.

Thirdly, we may see here how Christ meeteth with this temptation of the bellie, and ouercometh it. He seeth nothing in dredre but stones and that which can not be eaten, therefore from those thinges that were before his eyes he remoueth his minde to the woyde of God, thereby both strengthening himselfe, and ouerthrowing the Deuell. On which woyd Christians, especially when pouertie presseth them, and all thinges seeme to be turned into stones, and the minde doth now tremble for feare of hunger, ought with a strong faith to lay hold, and aunswere the temptation pouerty and that would quite discourage the: What if the whole world were full of bread? yet doth not man live by bread alone, there is neede of an other thinge, that is, of the word of Gov. Now forasmuch as these woydes are of meruelous force and efficacie, we must a little stand vpon them, and endeour to declare them, & not lightly passe them ouer. These woydes therefore Christ tooke out of the first booke of Moses chap. 8. where Moses speakest thus vnto the Israelites: The Lord thy God humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with Manna, which neither thou nor thy fathers knew of, to make thee know that a man doth not live by bread onely, but by euerie word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. Which is as much as if he had said Whereas he suffered thee to hunger, and yet thou diddest not perish, thou mayst thereby easly know, that it is God which sustai[n]eth thee by his word euen without b[e]read. For if we did live and were nourished by b[e]read alone, it were necessarie that we shoulde always be filled with b[e]read. But it is the word of God that nourisheth vs, which he will haue preached, that we may knowe that he is our God, and that he will shew himselfe bountifull and gracious vnto vs. We are taught therefore by this aunswere of Christ, and testimonie of Moses, that he which belieueth in the word of God, shall undoubtedly haue experiance of two thinges. First, that when meate is wanting, and he is pinched with hunger, he is as well sustained and strengthened by this word, that he die not or perish with hunger, as if he might abundantly enioye meate, this word of God, which he obtaineth in heart, nourishing and strengthening him without meat and drinke. And if he haue but a little meat, he shall perceiue that litle, although it were but euen one peece of b[e]reade, to feede and nourish him no lesse, then if he did enjoy princely fare. For not by b[e]read, but by the word of God the body is nourished and preserued, like as by it it was made, as also all other thinges, like as by the word they were created, so also by it are they preserued. The other thing, which we are here taught that the belieuer shall haue experiance of, is, that at the length he shall assuredly receive b[e]read, from whence so ever it come, yea although it should raine downe from heauen, as Manna did to the Israelites, in a place where no other b[e]reade could be gotten. Let a Christian quietly promise to himselfe and looke for these two thinges, his hope can not be frustrate, either he shall haue in hunger somewhat to eate, from whence soever it be giuen him, or his hunger shalbe made so tolerable vnto him, that he shalbe no lesse fedde, then if he were fedde with b[e]reade, the power of the word of God nourishing and sustaining him. Those thinges that I haue said of b[e]read that is, of meat, are also to be understood of drinke, apparell, house, house, and all thinges necessarie vnto this life.

It may be in deede that a godly man do neede apparell, or an Singular com house, &c. but at length he shall haue them. The leaues falling ffort against from the trees shall sooner be turned into coats and clokes, then pouertie and we can be left naked, or surely those garments which we haue shall not wax olde, which the Israelites tried, whose clothes and shoes in the desert were not corne, as also a most wide wildernes was vnto them in steede of houses, places vnpassable, passable, vnwaterie, waterie, finally the stonie rockes, fountaines of water. For the Word of God standeth sure and vnmoueable:
The Lord is carefull for vs. And Paule sayth: God giueth vs aboundantly all thinges to enioye. Also Christ sayth Marth. 6: 1.Pet. 5.7.
1.Tim.6.17.
Seeke first the kingdome of God, and all thinges shalbe ministred vnto you, onely be carefull for nothing. Such wordes and promises of God must needes remaine true for euer, and therefore no good thinge can be wanting to them that beleue. This euен daily experience may teach vs. We see commonly poore folkes and their childdren to be better liking then many rich folkes and their childdren, for that the vse of their small sustenaunce is by the blessing of God encreased, and doth much more feede and nourish them, then all that most abundant substance doth feede and nourish the rich. Now, whereas the wicked do sometime suffer neede, or in the time of famine some do euен die through hunger, that is the speciall vengeance of God, as is also the pestilence, warre and such like. Otherwise it plainly appeareth, that not meat but God doth feede and sustaine vs.

Howbeit whereas God feedeth the world with bread, and not It pleaseſeth with his word alone without bread, he therfore doth it, that he God to work may so hide his worke, and exercise our faith. So he commaun- by ordinarie ded the Israelites, that they shoulde prepare themselves to bat- meanes, yet taile, and yet he woulde not haue the victorie to be gotten by their of no necessword and labour: but he himſelfe woulde by meanes of their ſtricte. ſword and labour ouercome and vanquishe the enemies. Here alſo it might be ſaid, that the ſoldier doth ſlaie and ouercome the enemie, not by his ſword alone, but by the word which procee-deth out of the mouth of God. Whereupon David ſayth Psal. 44:
I will not truſt in my bow, it is not my ſword that can ſaue me.
And againe, He is not delighted in any mans legges: a man of great might is not deliuered by much ſtrength: a horse is but a Pſal. 147. 10.

vaine thing to saue a man , &c. Nevertheles God vseeth mer swordes, horses, and bowes, howbeit not by the power an strength of them, but by them as by certaine meanes or instruments, he himselfe fighteth & ouercometh. This he hath sufficiencely declared oftentimes, when he hath ouerthowen the enemies, and deliuered his people, which surely he daily doth, whe the case so requireth. After the same sorte God vseth bread also by it, soasmuch as it is made for that vse , he feedeth vs , howbeit when it is wanting, he nevertheles feedeth them that be his euene by his word , without bread , as he doth at other times by bread , so that bread doth as it were worke vnder God, as the A postles and preachers of the word in spirituall and euangelical meat serue vnder him, as it is mentioned 1. Cor. 2. For as God vseth their ministerie to teache men , he himselfe by his spirit speaking in their hearts through it, and doing all thinges alone which he both is able to do ; and often times wont to do without the ministerie of the preachers of his word , although he wil not in the meane season haue the ministerie of his to be despised and so himselfe tempted : so to the nourishing of our outward man, he outwardly vseth bread , although he doth make by his word inwardly, that we be nourished and strengthened, which he can as well do , and is wont to do when bread is awape , that all our nourishment may be attributed to the word, and not to bread, which he vseth as an instrument, but yet of no necessitie. That I may speake briesly , all creatures do as it were serue vnder him, and are his instruments , without which notwithstanding he is able, and often times wont to worke : by this meanes prouiding, that we may depend on his word alone, neither trusting more unto him , when we haue breade and other thinges which our life vseth, neither lesse when we want them , but may vse them with giuing of thankes when he bestoweth them vpon vs , when otherwise, may patiently be without them, being certaine nevertheles, that we shall liue and be nourished in both times , both when we haue them , and when we haue them not. And by this faith that vain and vngodly care of the bellie, greedie desire of thinges, and carefullnes of life are ouercome.

Tentation
whereby we are moued to such tentation also whereby he goeth about to moue vs to tempt God,

God, euen as he willeth Christ to cast him self downe from a pinnacle of the temple, and so tempt God, when there were ladders, by which he might descend. And that this temptation prouokest to tempt God, it is manifest euen by the aunswere of Christ, who aunswereth Satan in this maner: It is written: Thou shalt not tempt the Lorde thy God. Hereby he signifieth that the deuill would prouoke him to tempt God. Now this temptation doth noe amis follow the former. For when the deuill perceiueth the hart, that in pouertie and necessarie it trusteth in God, he by and by maketh an end of tempting by care of the bellie and desire of things, as being weaker then that by it he may ouerthow one so stronge in faith. He thinketh therefore with him selfe; If he professe him selfe to be of so religious and assured a minde, I will on this side also giue occasion to sinne. And so he setteth vpon him on the right side, affirming that that is to be beleued, whiche the Lorde hath neither spoken, nor commaunded to be beleued. As is this: If he shold bring thee to such madnes, that whē thou hast bread at home giuen thee of God, as he of his goodnes giueth vnto vs every day, thou wouldest not vse it, but wouldest procure to thy selfe necessarie and hunger, saying: I must trust in God, I wil not feede on this earthly bread, I will tarye till God giue me other from heauen. This were to tempt God. For he doth not commaund thee to beleue, that that thing shal come vnto thee wherof thou hast neede, if it be already come of his liberalitie. For why shouldest thou beleue that he will giue that, whiche thou hast already of his gift? Thou seest therefore that the deuill doth here obiect a certaine necessarie and neede vnto Christ, where there is none. For there was a sufficient meane to descende from the pinnacle of the temple, neither was it reason to attempt this newe vnaccustomed and vnecessary meane whereunto Satan persuaded.

Moreover allegorically we may by this doing of Satan perceiue his craft and suttletie. He tooke Iesus, sayth the Euangelist, into the holy Citie, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple. By this temptation he replenisheth men with cogitations that seeme most holy, that they may thinke them selues most plentifullie endued with faith, and to stande in a very holy place, when as notwithstanding they are sette not in the temple, but on the temple, that is, not in the syncretie of fayth, but in a hayre outward shew of faith. Neuertheles he is in the meane season by holy citie, because that this kind of men is wont to be no wher but among Christians, where the word of the Lord and the preaching of faith is daily heard, who also like unto Satan, haue sentences of Scripture in a readines as concerning the wordes, al though they alwayes peruert & wrest them to their owne errour and false imaginations. So Satan recited here unto Christ ou of the 91 Psalme, that God doth commaund his Angels concerning his children, that they keepe them, lifting them up with their hands. But the deceiver concealed that which is added, that is, in their wayes. For thus hath the Psalme: He will give his Angells charge ouer thee, to keepe thee in all thy wayes, &c. So that the custodie of Angells is not by the commaundement promised unto vs, unles we walke in our wayes whch he hath presribed vs. If we walke in them, we shal assuredly be kept of Angells. Howbeit the devill sayth nothing of the wayes of the Lord but promiseth by corrupting the saying of the Psalme, that it is commaunded to the Angells, to keepe vs in what wayes soever whereof the Lorde hath commaunded nothing. And this is Satans seducing, and persuasion to tempt God.

But this temptation doth not easily happen in these outward thinges, as are bread, apparell, houses, &c. Thou mayst finde indeed some rash heads, which for no cause do put their life, goods good name in great daunger, as they doe which goe on warfar of their owne accord, which leape rashly into most deepe water, or goe voluntarily into other no small daungers. Of whom Iesu the sonne of Syach sayth: He that loueth perill, shall perish in it. Whereof the Germanes haue a prouerbe: Selse do, self haue what every one followeth, that he commeth unto. So is it almalys usuall, that none are oftner drowned then they that are most exercised in swimming, and none fal more perilously, then they whiche vse to attempt hie matters. But he shall be hardly founde, whiche hauing a false and quermuch confidence in God, attempteth any such thing, or vseth not the thinges present, as bread, apparell, house, and such like, looking with perill, while God prouide other wise for him by miracle. We read of a certaine Heremite, whiche because he had vowed to take bread of no men, brought him self into perill by hunger, and so perished, and vndoubtedly went straunto hell, because of that false faith and tempting of God, whiche

Eccle. 3.27.

We are sel-dō brought to ſept God by not ta-king the vſe of outward things which he hath giuen vs.

he learned no other where but of þ deuill, so that his madnes was al togither like that, where unto Satan here persuadeth Christ, to wit, that he shoulde cast him selfe downe from a pinnacle of the temple. Howbeit thou shalt finde very few which doe follow this Heremite, and doe differre to enjoy corporall thinges present for that they hope that God will give them other from heauen.

But in spirituall things, which concerne the nourishement, not of the body, but of þ soule, this temptation is wont to be both mighty and often. In these God hath appoynted a certayne maner, whereby the soule may be fedde, nourished and strengthened, both most commodiously, and also most blessedly, so that no good thing at all can be wanting vnto it. This nourishement, this strength, his saluation, is Christ our Sauiour, in whom the Father hath most abundantly offered and giuen all good thinges. But there are very few which desire him, the mooste parte seeke some other where, whereby their soules may liue, & obtaine salvation. Such are all they which seeke salvation by their works. These are they whom Satan hauing sette on a pinnacle of the temple, biddeth hem cast them selues downe, and they obey him. They descend where as is no way: that is, they beleue and trust in God, yet so, as they trust also in their owne workes, in which is no place at all for faith and trust, no way or path vnto God, wherefore throwing hem selues downe headlong, they breake their necke, falling into vtter desperation.

Now Satan persuadeth miserable men vnto this madnes, as also he persuaded Christ to cast him selfe downe from a pinnacle of the temple, by places of Scripture peruerted and misapplied, wherein workes are commaunded, whereby he maketh them beleue, that the Angells shall keepe them, that is, that they shall be approued of God, when as in deede they can by nothing so offend hym, as by that madde trust and confidence in workes. For they acknowledge not, þ the Scripture doth no where require works without faith, or that it doth every where require a sound & lively faith from which workes proceede. We haue at large declared who are such, namely, incredulous hypocrites, which are given to workes without faith, which falsely boast of the name of Christians, chalenging to them selues to be chiese in þ flock of Christ: for this temptation must be in the holy citie. Now these two tentations, and the causes of them doe greatly differ: In the former the cause why men doe not beleue is neede and hunger, for they are thereby moued to distrust God, and despeire of his goodne. In the latter the cause why they doe not beleue is ouermuch bundance, for that miserable men are full of most plentifull and budent treasure, so that they loath it, coveting to haue some ther speciall thinge, whereby they may procure the saluation their soules. So out case standeth ill in both respects: If we haue nothinge we despeire, and distrust God: If we haue plentie thinges, we loath them, and require other, being then also voyd of faith. Concerning the first, we flie and hate scarsitie and seek plentie: concerning the latter, we seeke scarsitie, and flie plentie. Howsoever God dealeth with vs, we are not content: our incr dulicie is a bottomles pit of malice and vngodlines.

Tentation
by vaine glory, pleasures and delights
of the world.

Againe the devill tooke him vp into an exceeding high mountaine. Here he tempteth with vaine glorie & power of the worlde as by the wordes of the devill doth plainly appeare, who shewyn Christ y kingdoms of the worlde, offered them to him, if he woul worship him. By this temptation they are ouercome which reuol from faith, that they may enjoy glorie and power here, or at least doe so temper their faith that they lose not these thinges. In the number of these are all heretikes and troublers of the Church which do therfore either leauue, or oppugne the sincerite of faith that being exempted out of the common number they may be entollled on hie. So we may place this temptation on the right hand as the first assaileth vs on the left. For as the first temptation is aduersitie, whereby we are moued to indignation, impatiencie, diffidence, so this third temptation is of prosperitie, whereby we are prouoked to delights, glory, pleasures, and whatsoeuer is excellent and delectable in the worlde. The second temptation is al together spirituall, whereby Satan by deceit, and meruelous & secrete subtlety goeth about to withdraw man from faith. For whom he can not ouercome with pouertie, scarsitie, necessitie, & misery them he tempteth with riches, fauour, glorie, delights, power, & so he assayleth vs on either side, yea when he preuaileth by neither way, he goeth about, as Peter saith, & attēp̄teth all meane that whom he can ouercome neither by aduersitie, that is, by the first temptation, nor by prosperitie, that is, by the thirde temptation he may ouercome either by error, blindnes, or false understanding of the Scripture, that is, by the second temptation which spirituall, and therefore most hurtfull. By which if he preuaile against any, they are also ouercome both on the left side and on the right. For whether they suffer such pouertie, or enjoy plenty of thinges, whether they contend, or yeilde vnto all thinges, both is nothing: while they are in error, either patience in aduersitie or constancie in prosperitie can be of no importance. For in both even heretikes often tymes doe notably excell, and it is a practize of the deuill estsoones to sayne him selfe ouercome in the first and third tentation, that he may reigne viceroy by the second. He can e content that they that he his doe often tymes suffer pouertie patiently, and doe also contemne the world, although they do neither of both with a simple hart, and sincere faith. Every one therfore of these threee temptations is grieuous and very hard, but the middle one is most perilous of all, for it assayleth the doctrine of faith, and is spirituall, and wont to deceiue in spirituall thinges. The other two also doe assayle faith; howbeit in these outward thinges, as aduersitie & prosperitie, although they doe also vrge vs very soore. For it can not be a litle grieuous to suffer pouerty, want bread, and such other thinges necessary. Agayne it is noesse grieuous to neglect, & wholly to denye fauour, gloriy, riches, riendes, companions, and other commodities which we haue. But an entire and sound faith in the woorde of God can performe both notably, and if it be a strong faith, they seeme very easie and electable unto it.

We can not certaintly know þ order of these temptations which appened to Christ, for that the Euangelists haue not described them after one order. For Luke hath set that last, which Mat. new hath set in the middes, & that which Hatchew hath set last, Luke hath placed in the middes. But there doth not so much consist in the order. Notwithstanding when any wil teach the people concerning these temptations, it were better to follow the order of Luke. For he may fity say, and thus rehearse, that Satan doth first tempt vs with pouertie and aduersitie; wherby if he preuaile or, that he tempteth vs with prosperity and gloriy, whic h if he do abaine, that he assaileth vs with all his might, and tempteth vs with error, lyes, delusion, and other spiritual succleties. Yet neither is this order alwayes obserued of Satan: but he tempteth Christians sometime with the first, sometime with the third temptation, as he hath and seeth occasion. Hatchew was not carefull to rehearse them in that order, which they haue almost by their ow nature, and which may be commodious for him that shall rea

I thinke was done corporally, that they hauing taken bodie appeared, and ministred unto him meate and drinke, as his ser-ters at the table, and Ministers of all other thinges necessarie for his life. Pea and I thinke that the deuill also appeared vnto him in a corporall forme, perhaps as an Angell. For in that tooke Christ, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple: also wheas in a moment he shewed hym all the kingdoms of the world, sufficiently declared, that he was more then a man, & such a one surely he shewed hym selfe openly, when he offered that he wought vnto hym those kingdoms, and required that he would we-ship hym. And budoubtedly he did not appear like a deuill wher-he did these thinges, for he loueth to appeare after a sayre sort, especially when he will lie and deceiue: for then he transformeth him selfe into an Angell of light, as Paule witnesseth. Now th-of that God will suffer vs to be troubled and pinched with poue minister unto vs, to be our Butleres, our Cookes, and to helpe us with their ministerie in all necessitie. Neither are these thinges written for Christes cause, whome they can not profit, but they are written for vs, that we may learne to beleue, that if the An-quireth minister unto vs his brethren and mem-

THE LEADING OF A GODLY LIFE.

Ephes. 5.

verse 1.

BYE therfore followers of God as deare children.

And walke in loue , euен as Christ hath loued vs, and hath giuen him selfe for vs , to be an offering & a sacrifice of a sweet smelling sauour to God.

But fornication, & all vncleannes, or couetousnes, let it not be once named among you; as it becommeth Sainctes.

Neither filthines , neither foolish talking, neither iesting, which are things not comely , but rather giuing of thankes.

For this ye know, that no whoremonger, neysther vncleanie person, nor couetous person ; which is an idolater , hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and of God.

Let no man deceiue you with vaine words: for, for such thinges commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of disobedience.

Be not therefore companions with them.
For ye were once darkenes ; but are now light in the Lord: walke as children of light.

For the frute of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousnes, and truth.

profit or commoditie of vs, and yet he loued vs so greatly that he gaue him selfe for vs, and not onely his other good things which he giueth vs daily, and he so gaue him selfe for vs, that he might be an oblation and sacrifice, to obtaine the good will and fauour of the father toward vs, and to bring to passe, that we might now haue God a mercifull and fauourable father, being become his true childezen and heires, &c. So also it behoueth vs to giue and lend, not onely to our friendes; but also to our enemies, neither to count this sufficient, but to be ready also euen to dye both for friendes and foes, thinking nothing else, but that we may serue and profit our neigbours both in body and goods, as long as we shall be in the pilgrimage of this life, seeing that we possesse all thinges being givien vnto vs by Christ.

To be an offering and a sacrifice of a sweete smelling sauour to God. This maner of speech Paul borrowed out of the old Testament, wherein those corporall sacrifices are written eschowenes to haue peelded to the Lorde a sweete sauour, that is, to haue bene acceptable vnto him. Notwithstanding that was not the cause of the wo:ke and sacrifice in it selfe, as the Jewes falsely thought, & therefore were very often reprooued of the Prophets, but for Christes sake who was to come, the one and onely sacrifice of a good sauour, whom all those sacrifices of the lawe did shadow forth, and represent. Wherefore that which Paule here sayth, is as much as if he had sayd: All the sacrifices of the olde Testament haue an ende, they can nowe be of no price: Christ him selfe is the onely sacrifice, which peeldeth vnto God a sweete smelling sauour, that is, is pleasing and acceptable vnto him, whereby we are assured that we are acceptable vnto God, and do please him. Wherefore there is no other sacrifice in the Church which may be offered for vs, beside this onely sacrifice, which being once offered hath at once satisfied for the sinnes of all the elect. And although we after the example of this sacrifice, doe offer our bodies to God, as Paule teacheth Rom. I 2, yet we offer them not either for our selues or for other, soasmuch as that is proper to Christ, the onely sacrifice, whereby the salvation of all is obtained. Wherefore those thinges smell most stinkingly before God, whatsoever men offer with this mind, as though they would satisfie for their own sinnes, or for the sinnes of other, whereof we bothe haue and will elsewhere speake more.

But fornication, and all vncleannes, or couetousnes, let it not Vncleannes. be once named among you. By þ name of vncleannes beside fornication he understandeth all lust, & lecherous filthines, which is committed out of matrimonie, which for the filthines of them he doth not vouchsafe to rehearse by name, as Rom. i. he speaketh very grossly of them. Although in matrimonie also a meane may be exceeded, & it is the dutie of Christians so to moderate the vse of mariage, that they require & performe due loue & benevolēce only for avoiding fornication, but we are fallen so farre, that they are most rare, which come togither onely for procreation of children and to auoid fornication, which surely were best, and should very well become vs. Nowe the Apostle sayth, let it not be once named among you, that is, be so farre from these euils, that they

There is often falling among Christians through infirmitie, & how true Christians deale in this case. may not so much as be spoken of of you. Albeit it will never come to passe in this exile, that none among Christians be weake, & do not oftentimes fall, yet true Christians will never winke at those things: they will reprove, amend, put away, couer, & cure what soever such thing shal burst forth amongst them, that the heathen may not be offended and say: See what vices the Christians suffer among them selues, howe uncleane and lewde a life doe they leade & thinking that all their whole life is defiled with like vices as is their owne. We must needes confess that among Christians some doe esclones fal, which we must needes beare, it is wel if onely the better part liueth well, & winketh not at their sinnes, neither teacheth them, but rather reproveth and amendeth them. So Paule exhorteth Gal. 6. that they which are spirituall wil reftore them that offend, with the spirit of meekenes. And he sharply reproveth the Corinthians, for that they did lightly passe over many sinnes of certaine persons. For sinne being reprehended & punished, is now counted as no sinne, neither can the Church be blamed because of it. After the same sorte heede must be taken, that covetousnes be not named among Christians, that is, that they become not infamous by the name thereof, which they shal bring to passe, if, when it chaunceth that covetous men be amongst them, or one vseth deceite toward an other in their busines and affaires, or some contend in iudgement for those outward things, if I say, they doe not winke hereat, but do reprove & correct such, that the sinceritie of the doctrine of the Gospell may obtaine due estimation among the people, & there may be no cause openly to dispraise our ministerie, 2. Cor. 6. These things I haue spoken because of them, who as soone as they see that all thinges do not resemble & shew forth a holines among Christians, & that some doe stumble & fall, do thinke that there is no Christian left, that the Gospel is to no purpose, & that all things are taught and done in vaine. As though the life of Christians were nowe without fight, victorie & due triumph ouer sinne being obtained, whē as rather it is a warfare and a continuall fight. Whereas therefore they do now fight and are in the campe, it is no meruell if some flie away, if some be wounded, if some fal, yea & be euen slaine outright. Warre is not made without perill and hurt, if it be earnest warre.

As it becommeth Sancts. This he addeth to his exhortation, Christians as a reason & cause shewing whp it lieth vpon Christians, to take are Sancts, heede that they be not diffamed by these names: For they are & therefore Sancts, now it becommeth such to be chast, bountiful, & ready to must be giue, to teach and doe the same. Thou seest here, that Paul calleth Christians Sancts, while they remain yet in this life, & are filed with pressed with flesh & blood, from which nothing cometh but sinne, uncleanness, which he doth vndoubtedly not for their good woxkes, but because of þ sanctifying bloude of Christ, as he witnesseth I. Cor 6: couetousnes, &c. But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are iustified in the name of the Lord Iesus, & by the Spirit of our God. Forasmuch therefore as we are Sancts, it is meetz þ we should shew þ same in our woxkes, & albeit we be as yet weake, neuertheles we must daily endeouour to liue purely, & farre frō couetousnes, to þ praise & glory of God, & þ edifying of our neighbours, euen þ Heathen.

Neither filthines: Al vnbchast & lewd wordes of bauderie, vncleanenes, & lecherous matters, he calleth filthines, of which wordes abundance is wont to be poured forth in Innes & viceailing hou- se, in the time of eating, drinking, & playing. These the Grecians vsed very freely and accustomably moze then others, as their owne Poets & other writers do sufficiently witnes. But he especially reproueth here those lewde and wanton wordes, which are spoken openly without shame, which stirre vp wicked and vnbchast thoughts, and are cause of many offences, especially being spoken amonge youth, according to that saying: Enill speakings I. Cor. 15. 33. corrupt good manners, as the Apostle writeith to the Corinthians. And if any Christians should be so careles of their tongue, that such wordes should come from them, such must be chastised of the Church, and if they doe not amend, they must not be suffered, lest because of them the whole Church be ill reported of, as though these things were either taught among Christians, or suffered to be unpunished, as it is wont to be among the Heathen.

Foolish talking prohibited.

Neither foolish talking. Fables and other trifling speeches & jests are called foolish talking, which þ Grecians also were wont to use more then other nations, being very witty to invent such vaine speeches. Of this sort are those tales, which our women & maidens are wont to tell, spinning at the distasse, also the termes and verses of tuglers and such like fellowes, and many common songes, which are partly euene filthy, & partly containe other trifling and vaine things. But especially it is unseemely and unconuenient for Christians to use such foolish and trifling talke, when they come togither to heare the word of God, or to read and sercke the Scriptures, and yet notwithstanding almost euene such folly hapneth among them, whē many come togither. For albeit they begin with serious matters, neuertheles they are meruelous easilie brought unto trifles: from earnest and holy matters, to ridiculous and vaine speeches, wherewith both the time is spent in vaine, and better things are neglected. So haue they bene won certaine yeares hitherto, at every feast of Easter in the tyme of preaching to tel some ridiculous tale to stirre vp the people from sleepe. They did not unlike at the feast of the nativitie of Christ, sing songes or carolls, wherein they sayd, they made discourses of the birth and infancie of Jesus, howbeit ridiculous meeter and wordes, mouing rather laughter then devotion, as they called it. Also they soong many fained fables of the wise men, whom they made 3. Kings, of þ passion of þ Lord, of the punishment of Dorothea, & many other, all which were nothing but foolish talking & vain inuentiones, altogether unworthy of Christians. To the nūber of these I might well adde those histories of Saincts, which they call the legends, and that flood of lies, of miracles and pilgrimages to images, and monuments of Saincts, Masses, and worshippings of Saincts, indulgences and innumerable other, not so much foolish as ungodly inuentiones, which in the assemblies of the Church, were wont to be chiefly extolled in the pulpit, which were so contrary to godlines, that they deserue much rather to be called the wicked inuentiones of Satān, then foolish imaginations of me. For they did not as ridiculous lies are wont to do, corrupt good good maners onely, of which Paule speakeþ especially here, but they did wholy ouerthow faþt, and put out of place the word of God, so that they did not only not beleue Haintcs, but did plainly abolish all Haintcs. Those former therefore were fables and tales of men, which are not beleueed, neither esteemed any thing of, but rather laught at, although in the mean season they corrupt good maners, withdraw Christians from serious matters, and make them slack and sloþful. But these latter are deviþh fables, which are beleueed for a trutþ, and counted for serious, yea and heauenly matters, when as notwithstanding they be nothing els but fained deuises of Satan, whereby he with his angells deludeþ and mocketh vs.

Neither iesting. Hereby he vnderstandeth all pleasaunt speeches, which they whom they call iesters are wont to vse, to make men mery, which by pleasaunt discourses and mery tearmes doe moue laughter & stirre vp mens minds to mirth & cheeresfulnes, which is wont to be vsuall in ciuill bankers, and when ciuill companions meeþe togither. This iesting the Heathen counted for a vertue, especially Aristotle. But Paul among Christians giueth it place among vices. For Christians haue other speeches, wherþ by they may recreat and cheere them selues in Christ, which also do bring some profit with them, although it easilly hapneth, that many Christians do offend oftentimes herein. But they that are true Christians, doe neuer praise it, neither doe suffer that any should giue him selfe to this iesting, and study to excede therein, but they reþoue and prohibe him, especially in the Church, in þ time of preþaching and teaching. For Christ hath witnessed, that we shall in the last day give an account of every idle woorde. It is meeþe in deede that Christians be an elegant & amiable people, but therewithall graue, that there may be seene in them a seueré gentlenes, and a gentle seueritie, as the life of Christ is described vnto vs in the Gospells. Matth. 12. 36

Things which are not comely, but rather giuing of thankes. This comprehendeth all idle words, which want a proper name. Idle wordes. Now I call them idle words which make neither to the edifying of faþt, nor to the vse of our corporall life. For there be things known both profitable and pleasaunt, which wherit pleaseþ vs to speake, we may talke of in the shorþ time of this life, as of Christ, of loue, and other things either necessary or profitable. Whereof

Paule admonisheth when he sayth; but rather giuing of thankes. For our daily speech ought to be the praise of God, and giuing of thankes to him, as well privatly, as publikely in sermons, for such infinite good thinges, as he hath gauen unto vs in Christ, even unspeakable. But such is the maner of our reason & nature, that necessary and profitable thinges are neglected, and foolish & fruulous thinges are chiefly regarded. Now marke here, if Paul doth not suffer in Christians speeches that be onely pleasant and tending to mirth, what thinkest thou would he say of that pestilent backbiting and sclaunding, which reigneth now in all compaines of men, even them that be private, when two oftentimes doe talke togither? Pea what would he say of them, which openly in sermons do as it were bite and rent one an other with reprochful wordes, and maliciously accuse and speake euill one of an other?

For this ye know, that no whoremonger, neither vncleane person, nor couetous person, which is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. In these wordes he doth very plainly pronounce against them which are infected w^t such vices; that they are heathen vnder the name of Christians, how many soever do not bring forth the frutes of faith. This is a briefe and a certaine sentence: He that is a fornicator, hath denied his faith, an vncleane person hath denied his faith, a couetous person hath denied his faith, all such are Apostates, periured, & traitours towards God: as Paul writeth also vnto Timothe, of him he neglecteth them that be of his familie: If there be any, sayth he, that prouideth not for his awnes, & namely for them of his housshould, he denieth the faith, and is worse then an Infidell. How could he more severely and terribly fraie vs from vices? For he sayth:

For this ye know, as if he sayd: Do not so much as doute, count it not for a play, neither let it be a sport vnto you, neither comfort your selues with haine hope of a Christian name, and for that ye are counted Christians, these thinges shall profit you no more, then it profited the Jewes, that they were the childdren of Abraham, and Disciples of Moses. It was spoken to all which Christ sayth Matth. 7: Not euery one that sayth vnto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdome of heauen, but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heauen: there is neede of doing, and our faith must be proued by workes. Whom therefore that great force of heauenly fire shall not enflame vnto godlines, that is, the admonition admonition of the incomparable loue of God toward vs, which he set in the first place, him let these horriblie threatnings of hell fire moue, to wit, whereas he witnesseth, that as many as wil not follow God, and walke in loue, and shew forth their faith by their workes, are neither the sonnes of God, nor heires of his kingdome, whereupon it followeth, that they are vndoubtedly heires with Satan of hell fire. Whom therefore these two so mightie prouokements shall not stirre vp to the feare of God & godlines, with all diligence to doe the dutie of a Christian, he is plainly a blocke and a stome, hauing a hart harder then the anuill as Job sayth.

He particularly reproueth a couetous person, and pronounceth him an Idolater or worshipper of images, whereby surely he declareth, how greatly he is displeased with them that are infected with this vice, and in the third chapter of his Epistle to the Colossians he sayth also the same thing of him! The cause hereof I thinke to be this: other sinners vse onely that thinge, wherein they offend, and make it serue their lust and desire: so the fornicator and uncleane person vse their body to pleasure: the proud person vseth riches, learning, the fauour of men, and such like, vnto glory: onely this miserable Idolater is a slave to his money and riches, and his sinne is, that he spareth his money and goods, keepeth and houerdeþ them vp, dareth not apply them neither to his owne vse, nor to the vse of other, but doth plainly serue and worship them as his god, and so much esteemeth them, that he would sooner lose and suffer to perish the kingdome of God, then he would spende his money, or gine the value of a rush toward the maintaining either of a preacher, or an instructer of youth, wher-by the word of God and his kingdom might be furthered. For as much therefore as all the trust and hope of such a man is reposed in money, and not in God alone, who giueth him abundantly whereby to liue, money is worthely called his god, and he him selfe said to be an Idolater, and hath no inheritance in the kingdom of heauen. What can be inuented more filthy and pestilent then this disease? To vnto thee, incredulitie, howe an abominable and hurtfull euill art thou?

The cou-tous man an idolater.

We must take heede we be not deceiuied with vaine
wordes.

Let no man deceiue you with vaine wordes. These are the vaine wordes of them which extenuate and make light of fornication and such like sinnes; as though they were not greatly euill, or did so much offend God. There were not wanting Philosophers and Poets among the Heathen, which counted all vse of lecherie beside onely adulterie lawfull; as a thing naturall, as v to vse meate and drinke. So sayth Terence: It is not a wickednes, beleue me, for a yong man to follow harlots, &c. But this is to be ignorant of God, and to liue according to the soyle of concupiscence, as the Gentiles were wont to doe. Moreover such vaine words are those, which albeit they haue some likelihood of truthe, yet in deede are fisising, and shall not excuse any. So covetousnes doth not want a cloke and presence, for it selfe: for him that seeketh his owne with the discommoditie of others, they call a good husband, industrious, one that looketh to his busines; although in the meane while the poore perish with hunger, or are otherwise afflicted aboue their strength. Wherefore such speeches are profane and heathnish, by which loue is extinguished, & they which giue eare to them & beleue them, are deluded with a vaine hope.

For, for such things commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of disobedience. This is an other light which we ought to follow, leauing the obscure light of reason, which doth not great-

The wrath & vengeance of God hangeth ouer fornicators, vncleane & covetous persons.
ly condemne fornication, vncleannes, covetousnes, &c. This our light witnesseth, that for such things the wrath of God commeth upon vnbelleuers, whom he calleth the children of disobedience, and therefore can not abide to beleue the word of God, & to giue them selues to the obedience of faith. This Paule declareth I. Cor. 10 by many examples, where he sayth that a great part of the people was slaine for fornication, of which deede is spoken also Num. 25. For violence also, covetousnes, and vncleannes, the whole world was destroyed by the flood. Wherefore a sufficient sharpe, yea and a certaine vengeance abideth them that are infected with these wickedneses. Now he calleth them the children of disobedience, that is, of incredulitie, which is as much as if he had sayd: of them that haue revolted from the faith, and haue renounced Christ. Hereby therefore we see and learne, that he that doth not approue his faith by workes, is no better then a Heathen, yea worse, inasmuch as he hath renounced Christ, and denied the faith once received. For this cause therefore the vengeance and wrath of God shal come vpon them that are such, as we Germanes do now trie, vnto whom God sendeth abundantly the pestilence, famine, & cruell warres. Let men take heede they give no eare to those deceiuers, which with vaine wordes promise that those sinnes shal escape vnpunished: Let those slacke and slothfull Christians beware , who although they be not blinde Heathen, but know well that vncleannes and couetousnes are sinnes , and thinke or teach no otherwise , do nevertheles liue wickedly , resting vpon faith, whereby they hope that they shall obtaine saluation without workes, sozasmuch as workes do not saue : Yea albeit they verie well know , that faith without workes is a fained faith, and that worshie frutes and good workes must needes follow, where a true and sound faith is, yet notwithstanding they liue securely in their synnes , presuming of the grace and mercy of God, nothing fearing God and his iudgement, when as notwithstanding it is certaine , that God doth require the mortification of the olde Adam, and good frutes of good trees . Although perhaps Paule speaketh not here properly of these, but of thē which thinke, and in vaine wordes teach, that fornication, couetousnes, and such like are not synnes, as the blynde Heathen did , & many do at this day vnder the name of Christians: yet is it to be feared, seing they liue no better then the heathen do, & be themselues fornicacours & couetous persons, þ they shall seeele þ like vengeance of God with them, yea so much more grieuous vengeance, as they doe know more certainly that those are synnes; according to that saying Rom. 2 : Thinkest thou this , O thou man, that condemnest them which do such thinges, and doest the same , that thou shalt escape the iudgement of God? after thine hardnes , and haire that can not repent , thou haapest vnto thy selfe wrath against the daye of wrath , & of the declaration of the iust iudgement of God. &c.

Be not therefore companions with them : For ye were once darkenes , but are now light in the Lord: walke as children of light . So Peter also sayth , that it is sufficient for vs , that we haue spent the time past of our life after the lust of the Gentiles, but from hence forth should haue nothing common with them, but spend the rest of our life in the seruice and worship of God. They which When we were Gentiles , we knew not that these were synnes, are not yet lightned by Christ, are blinde and ignorant, but he hath light now to be in steede of light vnto others , and to teach them the tened, doe things which we haue learned. Such Paul said the Philippia know both were , that they shined as lights in the world in the middes of God & their naughtie & crooked nation. So before we were not onely dark duty toward him. but darkenes it selfe , inasmuch as we were not onely ignorante and erred , but did also bring other into the same darkenes , by wordes and deedes. Let vs be thankfull therefore to him which hath called vs out of this darkenes into his meruelous light , walking as the children of light , which Peter also admireth vs to do .

For the fruite of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousness and truth. Forasmuch as he hath here spoken of light , it had b more agreeable to haue added, for the frute of light , as the Latin editions haue , then of the Spirit , as it is read in the Greek Who knoweth, whether the greekes coppies were here changed vpon this occasion , for that Paule in the Epistle to the Galathians entreateth of the frutes of the spirit ? But this skillelitle, of the Spirit, and of light are all one in this place. Goodnes therefore is a frute either of the Spirit or of light , contri-rie to couetousnes , whereby a Christian man is good , that is profitable and beneficiall to others, ready to gratifie and do well to his neighbours . Righteousnes being a frute of the Spirit contrarie to couetousnes . For it maketh that no man doth talawaye from an other that which is his, either by violence, either by craft or guyle, but that he endeour rather to giue vnto ever man that which is his owne. Truth is a frute of the Spirit contrarie to hypocrisie & lying, which requireth that a Christian be true and vncorrupte not onely in wordes , but also in his whole life , that he doe not glorie of the name of a Christian without workes , that he be not cal-

TIN LVTHER, WHEREIN IS DECLARED HOW GOD CARETH and prouideth for them that be his.

Luke 5. 1-11.

Verse. 1. Hen it came to passe, as the people preased vpō him to heare the word of God, that he stood by the lake of Gennesaret.

And saw two ships stand by the lake side, but the fishermen were gone out of them, & were washing their nettes.

And he entered into one of the ships which was Simons, and required him that he would thrust of a litle from the land: & he sate down, and taught the people out of the ship.

Now when he had left speaking, he said vnto Simon: lanche out into the deepe, & let downe your nettes to make a draught.

Then Simon aunswere and sayd vnto him: Maister, we haue trauailed sore all night, and haue taken nothing, neuertheles at thy word I will let downe the net.

And when they had so done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes, so that their net brake.

And they beckened to their partners which were in the other ship, that they should come and helpe them, who came the and filled both the ships, that they did sink.

8. Now when Simon Peter saw it, he fell downe at Iesus knees saying: Lord go from me, for am a synfull man.
9. For he was vterly astonied and all that were with him, for the draught of fishes which he tooke.
10. And so was also Iames and Iohn the sonnes of Zebedeus, which were companions with Simon. Then Iesus said vnto Simon: feare not from hence forth thou shalt catch men.
11. And when they had brought the ships to land they forsooke all and folowed him.

The faithful
shall wa-ching that is the sustentation of this life.

SO D them that beleue this text is most easie to be understand, which setteth forth two thinges vnto vs namely faith, and temporall good thinges, & faith and eternall good thinges. First it declareth vnto them that beleue in Christ, that they shal haue sufficient wherewith to sustaine themselues euuen in this life: which necessary for Christ sheweth by this, when he giveth so many fishes to Peter and his companions, as they durst not so much as desire. So that Christ is carefull euuen how to feede the bellie, if that cursed credulitie be not an hinderance thereunto. For beholde S. Peter, and consider his heart aright in your minde, then shall you fynde, that he did not so much as thinke, that he should take so many fishes. God therefore is present, and causeth fishes to come into the nette, euuen moe then they would haue wished. By which example we are admonished that they shal haue sufficient of those thinges that are necessary for the sustentation of this life, which do beleue, but they that do not beleue can never be satisfied whereby they fall into all kinde of vices. Hereunto pertaineth that which S. Paule layth 1.Tim.6: Godlines is great gaine, if a man be content with that he hath. For we brought nothing into the world, and it is certaine, that we may cary nothing out, therefore when we haue foode and rayment, let vs therewith be content. For they that wilbe rich, fall into temptation and snares, and into many foolish and noysome lustes, which drowne men perdition & destruction. For the desire of money is the roote fall cuell, which while some lusted after, they erred from the truth, & perced them selues through with many sorrowes. This lace of S. Paul plainly declareth what foloweth our vnbeliefe, Frutes of in-wit, that it traueleth to get substance, and laboureth to be rich, credulitie. and falleth into the tentation and snares of the Deuell. But we an not see that, sozasmuch as it is spirituall. If we could as well ze the hurt, which it bringeth to spirituall thinges, as we can see hat which it bringeth to corporall and outward thinges, then were it an easie matter to preach vnto vs. For wee see plainly in outward thinges, how he that is giuen to the desire of money, crapeth and gathereth togither, doth iniurie to all men, that he lone may gather togither and he ape by many thinges; where-into he may trust and say: Well, nowe haue I goodes enough.

Whereby we may gather how vnkinde & unmerciful a covetous ian is: for he doeth good to no man, he sheweth himselfe gentle nd kynde to no man, he giueth nothing to any man, but looketh nto his owne lucre and commoditie.

Now this is a cursed thing, that we can not so much as trust nto the Lord, that he will feede our belly, thinking alwayes hat we shall perish with hunger, wheras notwithstanding we hall haue thinges necessarie and that which is sufficient for vs, s Christ sayth Matth. 6: I say vnto you, be not carefull for your fe, what ye shall eate, or what ye shall drinke: nor yet for your odie, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more worth then neate? and the bodie then rayment? Behold the fōules of the yre: for they sow not, neither reape, nor carie into the barnes: et your heauenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better hen they? Which of you by taking care, is able to adde one ubit ynto his stature? And why care ye for rayment? Learne now the lillies of the field do grow: they are not weried, neither pinne: yet I say vnto you, that euēn Salomon in all his glorie, vas not arayed like one of these. VVherefore if God so clothe he grasse of the field, which though it stād to day, is to morow cast into the ouen, shall he not do much more vnto you. O ye of idle faith? Therefore take no thought, saying: what shall we eat? or what shall we drinke? or wherewithal shall we be cloathed?
(For after all these thinges seeke the Gentiles:) For your hea-uenly Father knoweth that ye haue neede of all these thinges.

But seeke ye first the kingdome of God and his righteousne and all these thinges shalbe ministred vnto you. Care not the for the morow: for the morow shall care for it selfe: the day hath enough with his owne griefe. Ye see in this place, ho God hath a care for the foules and flowers, & doth adorne the after a most goodly sort: how much more will God giue vnto those thinges that be necessarie? and yet we can not put our trutrusteth in God, then charitie must needes sodenly ceasse, so th he doth good to no man, but onely prouideþ that his owne hea be encreased. Hereupon came the spirituall state of sacrificyn Priests and Monkes, that they might onely helpe themselues seede their belly, auoide labour, enter into Monasteries, th thereof did rise a true prouerbe: Desperation maketh a Monk yea not onyl a Monk, but sacrificing Priests, Bishops & Pope for they trust not in God, that he is able to feeue them, but thi studie vpon this onely, that they may be delivred from all m serie and infirmitie, whch is altogether to live in increduliti they never trusted in God, that he is able to gaine them nouris ment and thinges necessarie, if any of them shold mary a wi and remaine without that state of Antichrist.

Moreover, here is an example set forth vnto vs, which prou keth and allureth vs to confidence, and first that we commit ou bellie to God: for he hath a care of vs, euен in temporall thing Whch sufficiellt appeareth in Peter, whereas he tooke such great multitude of fishes, which ranne by great companies in his nettes. Wherby is plainly signified that God will forsak no man, but that euerie one shall haue enough, if that we sha onely trust in him, as the 37. Psal. affirmeth: I haue bin yong and now am olde, and yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaker nor his seede begging bread. Things necessarie shal not be wan ting vnto vs, if faith be not wanting: for before we shold wan the very Angels shold come, & minister vnto vs foode. Wherea therefore men are commonly oppressed with so great miserie onely unbelieve is the cause thereof. And albeit God be with vs notwithstanding he requireth yet of vs, worke or labour; an hope, if he at any tyme differre somewhat to helpe vs. He com maundeth Peter here, that for the taking of fishes, he shold ca ynth his nettes: Lanche out into the deepe, sayth he, and let lovvne your nets to make a draught; as if the Lord said: Do thou that which belongeth to a fisher, cast thy net into the deppes, and commit the successe unto me, leaue the care vnto me. God eaueth not the care vnto thee, but the worke and labour: howbeit we after a cleane contrarie order, study to commit the care o our selues and the labour to him. Wherby it commeth to passe, that euerie one for himselfe applieth his mynde earnestly o gaine; and to gather money vnto himselfe, that he may not be enforced by any meanes to take paines and labour. But if thou vilt live a Christian life, leaue vnto thy God to care howe the ishes shall come into the nets, and goe thou, and take vpon thee he state wherein thou mayst labour. Howbeit for the most part, we wish such states of life, as in which there is no neede of labour, which is altogether a deuelish thing. And therefore haue we bin consecrated Monkes and sacrificing Priests, that we night live onely like gentlemen, without labour. And for the same cause parents haue set their children to schole, that at y last hey might live merie dayes, and so serue God, as they thought. Wherby it came to that passe that they did not know, what a good life was: forasmuch as God especially commendeth that, and that in deed is acceptable vnto him, which is gotten with the weat of the browes, as he commaunded Adam. Gen. 3. In the vveat of thy face shalt thou eate breade. And the deeper thou art occupied in this lawe, in so much better case thy thinges are, wherefore follow thy worke, labour, and trust in God, all care-ulnes being cast of.

Now some murmur, and say, if faith be preached, that we must trust in God, and leaue the care vnto him, I might long enough, say they, beleue or trust, before I shold haue where-withall to be fed and susteined; if I shold not labour. Yea it is plaine enough that thou must labour, forasmuch as labour is commaunded thee: Howbeit suffer God to care for thee, beleue thou, and labour, then shalt thou assuredly haue those thinges that be necessarie for the sustentation of thy life. And this is an other thing, that we must hope notwithstanding, though God differreth for a time. Therefore he sufferth them to labour all the night, and to take nothing, and sheweth himselfe to be such a one, as will suffer them to perish with hunger. Which might haue come into the minde of Peter, when he had fished so long and taken nothing; so that he might haue said: now God will suffe my belly to perish with pining and famine. Howbeit he doth no so, but goeth on still in his labour, he plieith his worke, & hopeith that God at the last will giue him fishes, albeit he differreth time. God therefore is present, and giueth him so many fishes one day, as he could scarce take in þ space of eight daies. Wherefore these thinges are to be learned well of thee, that thou labor and hope, although God differreth his blessing a little. For albe he differreth a while, and suffreth thee to labour soþ, so that the now thinke thy labour to be lost, yet must thou not therefore de peire, but repose thy hope in him, trusting assuredly that he wi at þ last giue thee prosperous successe. For he wil certainly con & giue more then thou didst neede, as he did here vnto S. Peter. Wherefore if God delayeth with thee a little, thinke with th selfe, he delayed also with S. Peter; & yet afterward gaue vnto him abundantly. Commit thy matter therefore to his good wi and pleasure, and leauue not of thy worke, but hope still, and the shall not thy hope be frustrate. Thus much concerning the so mer part of the text, now let vs here the latter. After theresoþ that they had taken fishes, and tasted the fruite of faith, their fait is increased and augmented. We therefore must go so farre, that we may commit our bellie to God: for he that can not commit much as his bellie to him, will never commit his soule vnto him. Howbeit that is onely a childish faith: Here we learne first to g by benches and settles: here we do feede on milke as yet: but we must likewise learne by these to commit our soule also to God.

The Euangelist so meaneth when he sayth:

"Now when Simon Peter saw it, he fell downe at Jesus knee: saying: Lord goe from me, for I am a sinnefull man. For he was vitterly astonied, and all that were with him, for the draught of fishes vvhich they tooke. Let Peter here be a type or figure of them which beleue eternal good thinges, and counte him as on verily looking for & seeing the good things to come. A sinful con science is of that nature, that it so behaueth it selfe, as Peter her did, whereas he flieth his Sauour, and thinketh: Lord I am moþe unworthy; then that I shold be sauied; and sit among th Sainctes and Angels: for that good is most exceeding high. Here a straight conscience is not able to comprehend such gree goo good thinges, but it thus thinketh: If I were as Peter & Paul, I could easilie beleue: Which is altogether a foolish and vaine thinge. For if thou wouldest place thy selfe according to thine owne holines, thou shouldest build vpon the sande. Thou must not do so, but behauie thy selfe like unto Peter, for in that he esteemed himselfe vile, and iudged himselfe unworthy of so great grace, he rightly became worthy. And therefore, whereas thou art a synner, thou must trust in God, and dilate and open wide thy conscience and heart, that grace may enter in. After thou hast now knowne God, thou must reiect none of his giftes, that is, when as thou seest the great good things, thou must not despeire. It is good that we know our selues, & the deeper we know our selues, so much the better. But that grace is not to be refused because of thy synnes. For when thou shalt fynde thy conscience to tremble, so that it would drieue away synnes, then art thou most ready and most fitte to receiue grace, then shalt thou fynde comfort in thy conscience and say with Micheas: VVho is such a God as thou, Mich.7. that pardonest wickednes, & castest all our synnes into the botome of the sea? Whosoever take not away synnes, they are no Gods, but idols: whereupon he sayeth rightly, that none is like unto our God. For other gods will fynde and not bring godlines, but the Almighty God doth not finde it, but bring it: wherefore thou must not forswich despeire, if thy conscience trembleth and feeleth synne. For the more defiled that thou art, so much he sooner doeth the Lord poure in his grace, if so be thou be reverent and thirstest after it. A great part goe so farre that they abyde they merit grace, whiles they dispose them selues therewith, which is, as they interpret, whiles they do that which lyeth in them, and also that they doe satisfie for their synnes. But it is not so. The Scripture teacheth vs that it is God that taketh away synne, and casteth it into the bottome of the sea. We shall not put away synnes by our workes, neither shall we be iustified of our selues. God himselfe, and none but he shall do the thinge, of his meere grace as Esay saith: I am, euen I am he onely, that Es.43.25. or myn owne selfes sake doe take awaye thine offences, and orget thy synnes, so that I will never thinke vpon them more. And so must thou beleue, otherwise thou shalt never obtaine a yffull conscience. Wherefore, when as Peter sayd, I am a sinner, he saide right. It is true in dede, there were causes, why he might be afrayde of himselfe , and humble himselfe , but h ouight not to refuse God, but most willingly receive him. Wher soe when thou shalt seele thy synne ; like as Peter did , and ha perceine that thou wouldest now ffe from God , then is it need that thou do forthwith turne thy selfe , and come moxe and mo vnto him. For if God shold goe away , and would not take awa thy synne , would not come vnto thee , nor seeke thee , yet the mox thou perceuest thy selfe a synner , the moxe hast thou oughtest to make vnto him , which see thou marke well , and lay it vp in myndesfull memorie. For as Sainct Peter doeth here , so all con sciences do , which are terrifid of synnes , and would ffe from God , & seeke an other god , do not thou leaue so , but come boldly and toyne thy selfe neerer vnto God. Otherwise if one goe awa to seeke workes , and helpe of an other god , he is then found lik the foolish Virgines , which while they goe to get themselues ople , are in the meane season shut out. But what doeth Christ when Peter so humbleth himselfe ? and by reason of his grea feare and terrorre , desreth the Lord to depart from him ? did he leaue him in such desperation of himselfe ? No truly , but he com forsteth him , saying thus :

Feare not , from hence forth thou shalt catch me. This is a toy full word , whereby weake heartes receive comfort. Now there foxe , that God hath a care for vs , yea euen in thole thinges tha pertaine to the body , ye see by this , that he giueth Peter so many fishes : he maketh him also so full and rich in spirit , that he ough to bestow some of his plenty vpon others. He maketh him a fishe both in body and in spirit : in body , for that he taketh many fishes which he may sell : but in spirit he is a fisher of men. For he haile the Gospel , whereby other men must be brought to God by him and the kingdome of Christ be increased . Loe , it commeth to pasle , that where men beleue , the Lord giueth so much , as suc coureth and helpeth all men. The faithfull man outwardly hel peth the needy with his substance and goods : And from within he breaketh forth , teacheth other , and enricheth them also in wardly . For such a man can not hold his peace , but is enfor ced to shew and declare to others , how he is dealt with , as it is in the 51. Psal. Make me a cleane heart , O God , and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence , and take not thy holy Spirit from me. O giue me the comfort of thy helpe againe

againe, and stablish me with thy free Spirit. Then shall I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and synners shalbe conuerted vnto thee. And in an other Psalme also Dauid sayeth: I beleue, and therefore will I speake. Which is thus much in effect: when I beleue, I knowe God, and tast of his goodnes, then I consider the case of other men, and go and declare such knowledge and goodnes of God vnto them. We see therfore in this text, howe carefull God is for them that be his, and that he doth sustaine them both in body and in spirit. But if he doth sometime differre any thinge, without all doute it is through the fault of our incredulite, or because we haue now new begon to beleue. For where faith is new and litle, there is sometime small and sclender helpe, that we may learne to know the Lord, and to trust in him. But when we haue gone so farre that we trust strongly in God, then nothing can be wanting to vs, then God poureth vpon vs both corporall and spirituall good thinges, and so abundant treasures that we may be able to helpe others. This in deede is to enrich the pooze and to fill the hungrie. Thus much shall suffice concerning this text.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, CONCERNING TRUST IN GOD IN PEACE AND IN VIE AND DISTRESSE.

Marc. viii. 14.

Verse 1. IN those dayes, when there was a verie great multitude, and had nothing to eate, Iesus called his disciples to him, and said ynto them:

2. I haue compassion on the multitudē, because they haue now cōtinued with me thrēe dayes and haue nothing to eate.
3. And if I send them awaie fasting to their ow houses, they wōuld faint by the waye: for o m of them came from farre.
4. Then his discipiles aunswere him, whenc can a man satisfie these with bread here in th wildernes?
5. And he asked them, how many loaues hau ye? and they said, seuen.
6. Then he commaunded the multitude to si downe on the ground: and he tooke the seuen loaues, and gaue thankes, brake them, and gaue to his discipiles to set before them, & the did set them before the people.
7. They had also a few small fishes: and when he had giuen thankes, he commaunded them also to be set before them.
8. So they did eate and were suffised, and the tooke vp of the broken meate that was left seuen baskets full.
9. And they that had eatē, were about 4. thou sand: so he sent them awaie.

THE CONCLUDING PART

Hope dearely beloued, that ye doe well vnder stand the meaning of this text. For your vnder standing is sufficiently well grounded in these my steries, so that ye doe easilie perceine what good is to be looked for in the Gospell, and what is pre scribed vnto vs therein, namely the true nature and qualitie of fayth. And this is the cause why Christ is of all the Euange listes set forth to be so louing and gentle: for although the doings and workes described of them doe oftentimes varie, neuertheles the simplicitie of fayth remayneth alwayes alike. Moreouer this tyme doeth so lively set forth Christ vnto vs in his colours, that it may be manifest and well knownen vnto euerie one of vs, what we ought to promise our selues concerning him, to wit: that he is mercifull, bountifull, gentle, who succoureth all thae flie vnto him for helpe. And such ought to be the image of fayth. For the Scripture setteth before vs a double image: one of feare, which representeth to our eyes the horrible wrath of God, before which no man is able to stand, but rather we are all enforced to be cast downe in minde, when we see it, vntes we be strengthened by fayth. Howbeit against this is sette the other pell image namely of grace, which fayth doeth attentively behold, and taketh from hence principles of comfort, and conceiueth trust and confidence in the fauour of God, hauing this hope, that man can not promise to him selfe from God so manye good thinges, but that he hath infinite moe treasures in a readines for him.

We haue now oftentimes heard, that there are two sorte of good thinges, spirituall and corporall. The Gospell by these temporall and corporall good thinges teacheth vs the faith of chil- dren, and they are vnto the weake as a certayne meane or helpe, whereby they may learne the goodnes of God, how bountifull he is in bestowing his riches vpon vs, and that we ought in spiri- tuall thinges also to place all our hope and trust in him. For if we be now instructed by the Gospell, that God will giue foode to our bellie, we may thereupon account with our selues, that he will nourish & cloath our soules with spirituall good thinges. If I can not commit my body vnto him that he may feede it, much lesse can I commit my soule vnto him that he may alwayes preserue it. Or if I can not be brought to beleue, that a crowne of golde shalbe giuen vnto me of him, how I pray you, shall I hope for tenne of crownes of golde of him? from whom I dare not promise to my selfe so much as a peece of bread, truly much lesse shall I be perswaded to beleue, that he will giue a fearme vnto me, or his whole inheritaunce. Now he that is not able to atteine vnto this tender, and as it were as yet sucking faith, to him surely it is verie hard to beleue, that God will pardon his synnes, or preserue his soule for ever. Forasmuch as we are perswaded, that the soule is by infinite degrees to be preferred before the bellie, toward which notwithstanding he is touched with compassion as this our present text teacheith. Wherefore Saint Peter hath righly admonished : Beloued brethren, a new borne babes desire that sincere milke of the word , that ye may grovy thereby . For it is not enough that the infant being put to the teate doe sucke , but he must also wax greater , and gather strength , that he may accustome himselfe to feede on breade, and stronger meate . Now to eate milke is to tast of the fauour and grace of God , which is then tasted of , when a trial thereof is had in our life . For although I should preach an hundred yeares of the bountisernes , fauour , liberalite and gentle nes of God toward vs , it would profit me nothing vntille I haue a triall and taste of those commodities , neither could I learn rightly to trust in God thereby . Hereof also thou mayst conie cture how rare a Christian man is . There are many which say , that they commit their bellie to God , but that sticketh onely in the tongue and lippes , when as rather it ought to perce to the heart .

The qualitie and nature of faith . The Apostle Heb. 11. hath written thus : and nature of faith .

Faith is the ground of thinges , which are hoped for , and the evidence of thinges which are not seene , which is thus much in effect : faith is the foundation , whereby I looke for that good thinge , which is neither seene with the eyes , nor heard with the eares , but which I must onely hope for . Euen as in our pre sent text it plainly appeareth , wherein we reade that there were about fourre thousand men , who togither with their wifes and children had now suffred hunger three dayes (was not this a no table kynde of fasting ?) yet were not famished with hunger , being farre from their houses , and destitute of those necessaries , whereby the bodie is sustaineid . Now Paule sayth that faith is a thinge whereby a man hopeith for those thinges which appeare not to the eyes . Such a sayth had this multitude , which al though they see no meate , nevertheles they trust in God , that he will feede them . What doeth Christ here ? he is moued with compassion , he demaundeth of the disciples with what vittales , or with what thinge their hunger may be taken away . To whom his disciples aunswere : whence can a man satisfie such a multitude here in the wildernes ? Here ye see how mans reason and sayth agree togither , that the wiser reason is , so much leesse can it submit it selfe to the workes of God. For this cause therefore did he aske his disciples, that euerie one of them might trie their owne reason, and learne how much the capacitie of man and faith do differ one from an other.

Here it appeareth vnto vs how reason is blynde, and how, when faith commeth, it ought to giue place. Whereof let this be as an example: If I were a maried man, hauing a wife and a companie of children, and had nothing wherewith to nourish them; neither would any man giue me any thinge: yet shold it be my dutie to beleue and hope, that God will prouide for me. But when as I see my hope to be in vaine, and that I am not succoured byandby with nourishment and cloathing; then if I be faichles, I yeeld vnto desperation; and goe and purpose an other thinge with my selfe, I applie my mynde to vnhonest trades, that I may get somewhat thereby, as cheste, deceit, and other such practizes, and by all meanes that I am able, I passe through the stornies of aduersitie. See what filthie incredulite bringeth vnto man. But if I be endued with faith, I shye mine eyes and say: Most gentle father, I am thy creature, and thy worke, it can not be denied but thou hast created me; I will put all my trust in thee, which hast greater care of my welfare then I my selfe. Thou wilt well nourish, feede, cloath, and helpe, where and when thou shalt know best. So faith is a sure foundation, whereunto I crusting, doe looke for those thinges which I see not, and that I may speake at once, it shall not want those thinges that be necessarie. Surely the Angels themselues should come downe from heauen, & giue bread digged euene out of the earth, vnto such a faichfull man; that he might be nourished, rather then he should be pined with hunger, yea heauen and earth shall passe, before God will suffer a man endued with such faith to want either cloathing or any other necessarie thinge. This singular trust and confidence in God, the comfortable and effectuall worde of the diuine promise doeth require. Whereof David glorieth psal. 37: I haue been young and nowe am olde, and yet sawe I never the righteous forsaken, nor his seede begging bread. And againe: God knoweth the dayes of the righteous, their inheritaunce shall continue for euer: They shall not be confounded in the perilous time, and in the dayes of death they shall haue enough. But if we shalke counsell of reason, it will soorthwith say (as the disciples did before) this thinge is vnypossible: for it looketh for nothing, it trusteth to nothing, when nothing is present. Oflike diffidence were the disciples, who thought thus with theselues: how can it be that such a great multitude of men shold be here refreshed with meate truly it exceedeth our capacicie. If they had seene an heape o money, stoe of breade, and shambles full of flesh, they could ther haue easily relieved this present necessarie, they could haue pur all in a good hope, and fuly haue disposed all thinges; according to the capacicie of their reason.

And thus much shall suffize to be spoken concerning the faith of temporall good things: now we will entreat of spirituall good thinges, which shall come vnto vs when we shall die. Then shall we see death set before our eyes, when as notwithstanding we would willingly liue, then shall hell appeare vnto vs, when we rather desire for heauen, then shall we behold the iudgement of God, notwithstanding his grace would be much more acceptable vnto vs. In a summe, whatsoever we would desire to see, shalbe taken out of our sight, yea and no creature shall helpe vs against death, hell, and the iudgement of God. But if I belieue, I saye thus vnto my selfe: well, faith is a sure foundation: herewith I being stayed vp, shall attaine vnto those thinges which are verie farre out of my sight, albeit those thinges be horriblie which be in my sight, yet shall they not hurt him that beleueueth. Although therefore I doe presenyly see nothinge, but death, hell, and the iudgement of God, yet must I consider none of thele, but rather my mynde is to be confirmed with an vndoubted trust, that God by the vertue of his promise, not in respect of my merites or woxkes, will giue vnto me life, bles-sednes, and grace. This indeede is to cleave vnto God by syncere sayth, which is here verie well painted forth in this grosse and bodily image of soure thousand men, who cleaving to God only by faith, did not doute that they shold be refreshed of him.
If they had iudged accorsding to the capacicie of their reason, they wold haue murmured, and said after this sort: surely we are a verie great multitude, we are here in the wide wilernes, we haue empie and hungrie stomackes, here is nothinge that is able to fill the. Howbeit they murmured of none of these thinges, but conceiuing a sure confidence, reasoning nothinge against God after

after the affection of men, they commende them selues wholy to the good will of God, and commit vnto him this vrging necessarie of hunger, they them selues being quiet from all care. Then God, before this care commeth vpon them, and before they begin to aske of him, is present, being more carefull for them, then they are for them selues, & sayth on this sort : I am moued with compassion toward the multitude : if I send them away fasting, it is a daunger lest they faint by the way. Behold how gentle & bountifull we haue God toward vs, who hath euен a care to feede the uncleane belly. Here now our hope is erected, and the wordes of Christ are comfortable to a man, when he sayth : They haue now continued with me three dayes, it now behoueth me to giue sufficient vnto them to eate. Here we may see, that all that doe sticke diligently to the word of God, are fed of God him selfe.

Wherfore let vs dearly beloued, at the last begin to beleue, for onely diffidence and incredulitie is the mother of all sinnes & vices, which at this day reigne in all sorte of men. How commeth it to passe, that euery where, whethersoever we turne vs, there are so many harlots and baudes, such plenty of deluders and deceiuers, so many theenes, pillers, bserers, robbers, Simonists, as they call them, and sellers of benefices ? All these diffidence toward God bringeth forth vnto vs. For such kind of men do iudge onely according to humane reason, and reason looketh vnto that which is present : but that which it seeth not, it is not able to comprehend : wherfore while it doth not repose her trust by faith in God, it is enforced to despeire, which desperation afterward causeth such naughtie and wicked men. Behold thus it goeth out of frame with vs, when we comitt our selues to be ruled, not to faith, but to our owne reason.

Moreover, as ye haue now learned faith, so must ye also learne loue. For Christ is sette forth vnto vs in a double forme, in one, of faith, that we shoulde not be ouer carefull : in an other, of loue, that we may learne, that as he hath care of vs, giuing vs meate, drinke, apparel, & that of meere & bountiful loue, not for his owne commodities sake, or because of our merits ; so also we ought to doe well to our neighbour, and that freely, onely loue mouing vs thereunto, that as Christ is to vs, so we may be to our neighbour. Hereupon now we may perceiue, that all works of Monks and Nunnes are vaine and to be vitterly disallowed, when they are not directed to that end, that they may serue their neighbour; but areordeined onely vnto this ende, that they may merit much at Gods handes by them. For the true workes of Christians, which they desire to be accepted of God, must be done so, that they tend to the profit of our neighbour, and not to this ende, that we shoulde thinke that we shall merit many thinges of God by them, they must be cheerfully and freely bestowed vpon all euer as Christ hath done, who hath syzed abroade and freely bestowen his goodnes vpon all. These thinges haue I briesly spoken concerning this text, that ye may thereby learne, that God requireth this especially of vs, that we doe firmly and constantly trust in him, and that we freely doe good and be beneficiale to our neighbours, according as God hath of his meere goodnes and mercie bestowed infinite benefits and blessings vpon vs. The Prophet sayth Psal.50: Heare O my people and I will speake; I my selfe will testifie vnto thee O Israell, I am the Lord, euenth thy Lorde. I will not reproue thee, because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burnt offerings, for that they be not alway before me. I will take no bullocke out of thy house, nor goates out of thy foldes: for all the beastes of the forest are mine, and so are the castell vpon a thousand hills. I know all the soules vpon the mountaines: and the wild beastes of the field are at my commaundement. If I be hungry, I will not tell thee: for the whole world is mine, and all that is therein. Thinkest thou that I will eate bulls flesh, and drinke the blood of Goates? After the same sort he sayth vnto vs: Behold Israell, that is, thou faithfull man, I am thy God, thou art not my God, I will giue vnto thee, thou giuest nothing to me, I will not be angrie with thee, for that thou offerest not many things vnto me. For whatsoeuer is in thy stable, in thy houses, in thy court, it was all mine before, for I haue sent it thither. Whereby he briesly reproued the Jewes, who did meruelously please them selues in their sacrifices. Now because he reiecteth these sacrifices, what will he haue to supply the place of them? truely euен that which followeth in the same place: Offer vnto me praise, and thy vowes, call vpon me in the time of trouble, & I vvil heare thee, and thou shalt glorifie me. That is, I wil haue thine hart, giue ouer thy self to me, & account me for a gentle, favourable, yea and for thy God, and it shall suffize me. Wherfore place thy faich, trust and hope in him, count him for a gentle and louing louing God, cleave vnto him, and in extreme anguish flie vnto him for succour, and to none beside him. Beleeue and looke for helpe of him, then he will helpe thee, thou needest not any whit doute. Afterward doe good to thy neighbour with a cheeresful hart and freely. These two things are set forth in this our text, as also in many other places beside.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, WHEREIN IS DECLARED HOWE GRIEVOVSLY GOD PYNISHETH THE CONTEMNERS of his word.

Luke 19.

- Verse 41. ND when he was come neare to Ierusalem, he beheld the city, and wept for it, 42. Saying, If thou hadst euē knowne at the least in this thy day those thinges which belongeth vnto thy peace, thou wouldest take heede: but now are they hid from thyne eyes.
43. For the dayes shal come vpon thee, that thine enemies shal cast a trench about thee, & compass thee round, and keepe thee in on euery side, 44. And shall make thee euen with the ground, & thy children which are in thee, and they shall not leauie in thee a stone vpon a stone, because

- thou knewest not that season of thy visitation.
 45. He went also into the temple , and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought,
 46. Saying vnto them, it is written : Mine house is the house of prayer , but ye haue made it a denne of theeues.
 47. And he taught daily in the temple . And the high Priestes and the Scribes, and the chiefe of the people sought to destroy him.
 48. But they could not find what they might doe to him , for all the people hanged vpon him when they heard him.

HE summe and scope of this text is this : The Lord is troubled and lamenteth for the euils which were to come vpon the contemners of the worde of God. We haue often times heard, what the word of God is, what is the frute and commoditie thereof, also what Disciples it hath ; of which nothing is here done , or sayd: but the punishment and miserie onely is shewed, which was to come vpon the Jewes, for that they knew not the time of their visitation. Which thing let vs well consider of , for it pertaineth vnto vs also. If they be punished which know not y^e time of their visitation, what shal come vnto them, which persecute, blasphemē and reprehend the Gospell and Word of God ? howbeit he speakeþ here onely of them which know not the season of their visitation . The contemners of God are preached against after two soires : first by threatnings , as Christ threatneth them Matth. 11 : VV^e be to thee, Corazin : VV^e be to thee Bethsaida : for if the great works which vvere done in you, had bene done in Tyrus and Sidon, they had repented long agone in sackecloth and ashes. But I say to you , it shall be easier for Tyrus and Sydon at the day of iudgement , then for you . And thou , Capernaum (which was his owne citie , wherein chiefly he wrought miracles) vvhich art listed vp vnto heauen, shalt be brought dovvne to hell : for if the great wvorkes vvhich haue bene done in thee, had had bene done among them of Sodom , they had remained to this day. But I say vnto you, that it shall be easier for them of the land of Sodom in the day of iudgement, then for you. These are the threatnings wherewith he terrifieth them, that they shoulde not so neglect the word of God . The other way the Lord here sheweth, when as he shedeth teares, and is touched with pitie toward miserable and blind men , he doth not terrifie or threaten them, as being indurate and obstinate, but is rather wholly moued with loue and taketh pitie on his enemies , and would willingly call them backe, but that he could preuaile nothing with them, & the meanes which he vsed to reclaine them were in vaine. Before in Mathew, whereas he sharply rebuketh them , he dealeth not by loue, but by rigour, but here is pure loue and pitie, as we shall afterwards see.

First, when he drew neare to the citie, some went before him, and some followed him, with great ioy singing and saying : Hosanna the sonne of David, they spred their garments in the way, they cut downe branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way, and all thinges were done after a goodly maner , but in the middest of this ioy Christ beginneth greatly to weepe, he suffreth all to reioyce, notwithstanding his eyes gushed out with teares, when he beheld the citie, and sayd: If thou haddest euen knowne at the least in this thy day those thinges vvhich belongeth vnto thy peace, thou vouldest take heed : but now are they hid from thine eyes. As if the Lord should say : O, if thou knewest what belongeth vnto thy peace that thou mightest not be destroyed, but stand still, thou wouldest yet at this day consider of it and beware. Now it were time for thee to know that which shoulde be best for thee, but thou art blinde, & wiloneglect the time, then shall there be no place neither for helpe nor counsell. As if he sayd : Thou standest here adornd with sumptuous and goodly buildings, and there are in thee mighty citizens, which are both seure and mercie, thinking that no daunger hangeth ouer them, but after the space of forty yeares thou shalt be destroyed. Which the Lord plainly foretelleth in these wordes:

The dayes shall come vpon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compasse thee round, and keepe thee in on euery side, and shall make thee euen vwith the ground, and thy children vvhich are in thee, and they shall not leue in thee a stone vpon a stone; because thou knevest not that season c thy visitation. Now the Iewes, as they supposed, stode vnimou able & safe, resting vpon the promise of God, so that they thought no otherwise; but that they shoulde perseuerantly continue so fo ever, they were secure and thought thus with them selues: Go will not send such thinges vnto vs: we haue the temple, wher God him selfe is resident. We haue also plenty of excellent men money, and other thinges; Goe to then, who can doe any hurt o harme to vs? Moreouer the Emperour and people of Rome ha ving taken the citie, seeing it furnished with so many and so grea munitions and goodly and excellent buildings, merueiled great ly, and confessed, that it was vnpossible that so great a citie shoul be taken, vntesse it had bene the spciall will of God. Their bo sting therefore, and confidence in their owne false opinion decei ued them. Howbeit the Lord did more earnestly and deepeley con sider the matter then they; when he sayd: O Jerusalem, if thou knewest those thinges that are knowne to me, thou wouldest haue a care of thy peace (peace in the Scriptures is, when the mat ters and affaires of any haue good successe) thou thinkest tha thou hast yll and merie dayes; that it is well with thee, and tha thy affaires are in a prosperous state: but if thou knewest how thine enemis shall by siege afflict thee, keepe thee in on every side, and bring thee into such distresse, that they shall make thee e uen with the ground, destroy all thy buildings, and leauue not a stone vpon a stone, thou wouldest surely conueniently receive thi word, whereby thou mightest enjoy both true peace, and all good thinges. The reading of the historie of the destruction of this citie doth make much to the right vnderstanding of this text.

A descrip

Iewes for their contemp t and disobe dience.

God had plainly so ordained, that at the feast of Easter, at which time they came to Jerusalem out of all quarters, the citie should be besieged, and there were then gathered togither, as Iosephus reporteth, about thirty hundred thousand men, vpon whom the Lord woulde shewe his grievous indignation and wrath. All the Apostles and Christians were departed and gone into the cuntrie of Herod, not farre from Jerusalem. The Lord tooke ou the wheate, and put the chaffe togither on an heape; nowe there was so great a multitude of people, that they might seeme to ex ceede not onely a citie, but euery a kingdom. And they were driven into so great calamities, that all their victells were spent, and none at

at al leſt vnto them, ſo that they were conſtraineſ to eate þ strings of their bowes, & olde ſhoes, drefſing them in ſuch maner as they could, yea thorough the exceeding famine, they were diuen to kil their owne chilđen: the ſouldiers tooke the fleſh of chilđen ro-ſted from the mothers, ſmelling the ſauour of the roſted fleſh two ſtreeteries of: pigeons dunge was vnto them in ſteede of ſalte, and was alſo very deare: finally there was ſo great miserie, ſo great ſlaughter and ſhedding of blodd, that it would not haue bene meruell for a ſtone to haue bene moored with pitie. He that had ſeenie it, would haue thought that God could not haue bene ſo grievouſly angry, and ſo greatly haue afflieted a people. Both houſes and ſtreets were filled with carkaſes dead thorough famine. Notwithſtanding the Jewes remained ſtil ſo obſtrinate and without underſtanding, that they gloriied of God, and would not peelede them ſelues vntil the Emperor ſet vpon them with his whole power, and tooke the citie, which they were able to keepe no lenger. And when as ſome of them were ſo cracie that they devoured golde þ it might not be takeſ from them, the Romane ſouldiers thought that they had all ſo done, whereupon they ſlew about two thouſand, and hauing riſt their bellies ſought for golde. There was ſuch a ſlaughter & manquelling made, that it ſeemed a miſerable thing euē to the Gentiles, wherfore Cesar commaunded that they ſhould not be ſo ſlaine, but led captiue and ſould. The Jewes were then ſould ſo cheape, that thirty were bought for a penny, they were then diſperſed through the whole world, and were cou-ted the moſt abiect people of all other, as alſo at this day they are the moſt contemptible nation in the earth. For they liue ſpred here and there, without cities and countries of their owne, neither can they be againe gathered together into one place, ſo that they ſhall neuer be able any moſe to erect their Priechood and kiŋ-dom, as they hope they ſhall.

Thus God reuenged the death of Chrift, & all the Prophets, thus were they recompensed for that they knewe not the time of their viſitation. Wherfore let vs be here admoniſhed, for it belongeth not onely vnto vs, but euē vnto all Germanie. It is no ieſting matter or ſport, neither is there any cauſe why we ſhould to admoniſh Jewes would not beleue that euill ſhould come vpon them, vntil ther to know they had ſufficiently tried it. And we at this day are viſited by the their viſitabenefite of God: he hath opened vnto vs a treasure, his sacred and holy Gospell, whereby we know his will , and see how much we were subiect to the power of Satan : but no man wil receive this Gospell, yea we contemne it, and that which is more miserable, we persecute and blasphemē it. God is patient: it pleasech him to triē vs a while ; if we be not watchfull, so that the word be againe taken from vs , the same wrath and indignation which was poured forth vpon the Jewes, shal also be poured forth vpon vs. For there is the same Word, the same God , the same Christ at this day, that there was at that time , whereupon undoubtedly the punishment shal be the same, or at the least as grieuous both in soule and body.

We make almost a sport & trifling matter of the Gospel. For no man embraceth it from his hart, no man frameth his maners according vnto it. Which is a manifest argument of blindnes. D̄ thing surely most miserable . I feare lest the matter will shortly come to that passe , that all Germanie will fall togither vpon an heape, which (alas) in part of the communaltie hath already had a lamētable beginning, we haue lost a great multitude of people, almost an hundred thousand men haue bene slaine onely betwene the feasts of Easter and Whitsontide. It is a hard woxke of God, and I feare me the warre begon is not yet at an ende, this is one- ly a forewarning and threatening wherby God would terrifie vs, that we might diligently take heede to our selues: it was nothing but the Fores tayle , if he come againe with his whippe, he will scourge vs more grieuously . But we will behaue our selues as the Jewes behaued them selues, vntill there shall be place for no succour nor helpe. Now we might preuent it, now were the time to knowe what shoulde be best for vs , and to receive the Gospell with peace, for at this day grace is offered vnto vs , whereby we may live peaceably, but we suffer day to passe after day, yeare after yeare, applying our selues lesse to the Gospel then before. No man doth now pray vnto God for y increase of his word, no man receiueth it in his hart. If so be that the time shall passe, no pray- ers shal any more helpe. We wey not this matter in our hart, we thinke our selues safe, we do not througely perceiue the great miserie already come to passe, neither doe we consider in our minds, how miserably God punisheth vs with false prophets and sects, which he on every side sendeth vnto vs, which preach so securely, as if they had wholy received into their brest the spirit the comforter. Those which we counted best of all doe goe away, & bring men into such a perplexity, that they almost know not either what is to be done or not to be done. But this is onely the beginning, albeit sufficient horrible and cruell. For there can not be greater affliction and miserie, then if the Lord send amongst vs sects and false prophets, which are so rash and bold, that it is greatly to be lamented.

No; notwithstanding the time of grace is nowe present: Christ hath bene sent downe into the world, hath bene boyn man, hath serued vs, died for vs, is risen againe from the dead, hath sent unto vs the spirit the comforter, hath giuen vnto vs his word, hath opened heauen so wide, that al good things may be obtained of vs, moreouer hath giuen vnto vs rich promises, whereby he promiseth that he wil preserue vs both in this short and fraile time, and in the eternal times, in this life, and in the life to come, most plenifully pouring forth his grace vpon vs. Wherefore the time of grace is now before our dores, but we despise & neglect it, which God neither will, neither can pardon. For when as we contemne his word he threatneth punishment, and will at the last punish vs, although he shold deferre it euen an hundred yeares, but he will word to not deferre it so long. And the more purely that the word is preache, so much greater shal the punishment be. But I feare greatly lest this punishment require the subuersion of all Germanie. God graunt that in this thing I be a false prophet, but I feare exceedingly that it wil come to passe. God can not leauue this wickednes unreuenged, neither will he deferre long, for the Gospell is so abundantly preached, that it was not so manifest euen in the Apostles time as it is at this day, thankes be to Christ thereope. Wherefore I feare much lest that all Germanie be spoyled, lea and quite destroyed, vnaesse we otherwise apply our selues to his matter. We which haue long heard the Gospell, ought to pray God from the hart, that he would giue vs longer peace. The Princes goe about to bring all thinges to passe by hys sword, whereby they goe too rashly and rigourously to worke. Wherefore it is exceeding needefull, that we should pray vnto God, that his Gospell may sped farther abroade through Germanie, euen into them which haue not yet heard it. For if punishment come vndainly vpon vs, our case shall be miserable, then many soules

God will not suffer the contempt of his grace and word to be vnpunished.

shall be in daunger to be lost before the worde shall come vnto them. I woulde wish therefore, that we woulde not so cruelly despise the Gospele, that precious treasure, not onely for our owne sake, but also for their sakes which are as yet to heare it. A scourge is a litle begon: God graunt that it may so stay, that neither the Princes nor the communaltie be stirred vp to greater rage and furie. For if that ciuill warre shoulde begin againe, were to be feared that it would haue none ende.

We doe like as the Jewes did, who had a greater care of the belly then of God, having more regard how to fill the belly, then that they might be sauied, wherefore they lost both, and that wothelp. For, soasmuch as they would not receiuie life, God sent vnto them death, so they lost both body and soule. They pretended the same cause that we do. We would willingly in deede embrase the Gospele, if there were no daunger of body and goods, wife, & children. If we shal beleue him, sayd the Jewes, the Romanes wil come, and take away both our place and the nation, which nevertheless came vnto them, for that which y wicked man feareth, falleth vpon him. This was a lette and hinderance to the Jewes that they would not beleue the wordes of God, neither haue regard to the rich and large promises that he had made vnto them. So also doe we, we regard not the mighty and comfortable promises which Christ hath made vnto vs, as where he sayth: He shall receiuē an hundred fold more, and shal inherit euerlasting life. Leue thy wife and children, I will preserue them, I will restore them, so as thou goest to work boldly in my name. Thinkest thou that I can not build thee other houses? countest thou me so simple, who will giue vnto thee heauen? wile thou not put thy self in daunger for my sake? if thy goods be taken from thee, it is wel with thee, heauen and earth are mine, I will recompence thee abundantly. These and such like sayings we passe ouer, yea and also contemne, hauing diligent consideration only what we haue layd vp in our chest, and that our purse may be full, neither doe we see, that euē that which we haue God hath giuen vnto vs, & will as yet giue vs more, if we beleue and trust in him, neither doe we marke if that we lose God, we shall lose the belly also.

The faithful refuse not to suffer perill

Howbeit they that beleue in God, doe not auaride perill if it come for his sake, but commit all things to his diuinē power, that he may order them according to his will, and thus they thinke;

Chi

The Lord hath giuen me both a house and the furniture thereof, and trouble wife, children, &c. I haue not obtained them of my self, forasmuch then as they are Gods, I will commit them vnto him, he shal best preserue them. For euē otherwise I must leauē them, wherfore I will refuse to suffer no perill, and to leauē whatsoeuer I haue for his sake, if the case so require. If he will haue me so to doe, he can giue me other thinges, for he hath promised that he will giue sufficient to them that beleue, both here and in the time to come.
 If he will not haue me to liue here, I owe death vnto him, when he shall require me, I will be ready for his wordes sake. He that shall not doe thus, denieth God, and is notwithstanding compell-led to lose both this fraile life, and eternall life. The stinking belly which we make our god, is the cause, that we doe not cleave to Immoderate the word of God: for I will first be certaine howe I may feede care for the my selfe, and where my goods be. The Gospell sayth, Trust in belly the God, but I prouide for my belly, and if I haue one noble in gold, cause of dis-I thinke I haue sufficient to sustaine & nourish me for ten daies, & distrust of trusting vnto that which I haue layd vp, I trust not in God, that Gods care & as he hath hitherto fedde me, so he will nourish me still. Is not prudence. this a detestable thinge, that I trust to one peece of coyne onely, whereby I looke to haue my foode and sustenance to morrow?
 Fy, what a cursed thing is such care for the belly? Shall a vile peece of coyne be moxe esteemed of me, then God him selfe, in whose power are heauen and earth, who giueth vnto vs ayer and water, maketh graine to growe vnto vs, and sendeth all thinges necessary? It is moxe detestable then that it can be expressed by the voice of man, that God is not esteemed of vs so much as a litle money. Why doost thou not thinke: God who hath made me, will well nourish me, if he will haue me liue. If he will not, well, then shall I haue no neede. But sayth the belly, I finde no god in my chest. Thou foolish asse, who can assure thee that thou shalt liue till to morrow? It is vncertaine whether thou shalt keepe thy belly till to morrow, and desirdest thou to know where foode and sustenance is? If this did pearle our hart, we shold see how deviulish a thing incredulitie is. Is it not a horrible thing that I doe not make so greate account of God, who feedeth so many mouthes, as to trust in him, that he will nourish me, yea that I do make moxe account of one noble in golde then of God him selfe, who poureth forth his good things so abundantly? The world is full of the blessings and workes of God , he is on every sid with his good thinges; notwithstanding we doe not yet comm our selues to him, or receive his visitatio. O cursed world, whic can not trust to God euen one day , and yet trusteth to a peece c gold. Thus we see , as I thinke, of what sort the world is , how i despise God for the bellies sake , which notwithstanding it i compelled to lose. O how great contemners of saluation are we we ought rather to detest the world, but we are too deepeley drow ned in olde Adam. The world is as it were a figure of hell, yea very deuillish kingdom, & an entrance to hell. Wherefore Chil with weeping eyes exhorteth vs to knowe our saluation, and to receive his visitation, lest that a plague & scourge follow , whic undoubtedly shall come vpon them, which thinking them selues in safetie, doe not beleue and trust in God. God giue vs his grace whereby we may knowe him. It followeth mozeuer in thi text.

He went also into the temple , and beganne to cast out them that soulde therein, and them that bought, saying vnto them, it is written, Mine house is the house of prayer , but ye haue made it a den of theeuers. This is the second part of this text, where in is declared how the Lord going into the temple, beginneth to drive out the byers and sellers therein. The former part was no thing else but an exhortation and inviting to faith , but here the Lord insinuateth what the temple of God is , and bringeth a place out of the Scripture hereunto appertaining , namely out of Esai, where he sayth : Myne house shall be called an house of prayer for all people. This is a stronge saying, whereas the Pro phet sayth, for all people, against the Jewes , who trusting vnto that temple at Jerusalē, thought that this house made with hand, should continue for euer, supposing it to be vnpossible , that God would either destroy this temple, or leaue the citie desolate , be cause the word of God can not lye. Wherefore they stoned Ste uen, for that he spake against that holy citie , and affirmed that Jesus woulde destroy it , and chaunge the ceremonies giuen of Moses. For they sayd : The Prophets haue greatly praysed this house : and doe you Apostles preache that it shall be destroyed ?
Howbeit this saying is thus to be vnderstood , that the citie Je rusalem, the Temple , and the People should continue vntill the tyme of Christ, whereunto all the Prophets tend, which referred all thinges vnto Christ, that as he shoulde doe, so it shoulde be, and so it shoulde continue. Wherefore the place of Esai extendeth no farther then to the comming of Christ, which all the Prophets also witnes, affirming that there shoulde come a kingdom, which shoulde extend farre and wide ouer the whole worlde, as it is in Malachie: From the rising of the sunne vnto the going downe Mal. 1.11. of the same, my name is great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered to my name, and a pure offering: for my name is great among the very Heathen, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Here the Prophet speaketh of the spirituall kingdom of Christ; who would builde vnto him selfe an house of prayer in the whole world. It is true that God him selfe did confirme and sanctifie the temple at Ierusalem, not because it was furnished with precious stones and goodly buildings, or halowed of the Priestes, which maner of trifles and dotages we vse at this day, but because he had consecrated and halowed it with his worde, when he sayd: This house is my house: for his word was preached in it. Wheresoeuer the worde of God is preached, there is house of his true house; where the worde of God hath his course and p[ro]o: God. ceeding, there vndoubtedly God dwelleth with his grace: where his Gospell is, there is the holy house of prayer, there prayers both may and ought to be made vnto God. God also will heare vs, as Christ sayth Joh. 16: VVhatsoeuer ye shall aske the Father in my name, he will giue it you: hitherto haue ye asked nothing in my name: aske, & ye shal receive. Contrariwise, where the word is not, there is Satan wholy. Now, whereas we imitating the Jewes haue builded so many temples, it were tolerable, if we had therfore so done, that the word of God might be preached in them, for where Gods word is preached, there is he present, and poureth forth his grace. Deut. 32.18. 1 Kings. 8.29. Christ sayth moreouer that the Jewes haue made the temple at Ierusalem a denne of theeuers: But they were resistent in the temple which shoulde oxen and sheepe, that they which came might buy to offer and worship God: Why therefore doth he call it a denne of theeuers? Surely he giueth vnto it a soule name, which Why Christ came to passe upon this occasion: for that it was now any more calleth the counted of them for the house of God, but for a house of marchau- temple at Ie- dize, that is, the Priestes had no care how the word of God was rusalem a preached there, and did negligently and carelessly singe, bable, and denne of theeuers.

reade Moses and the Prophets. But God doth nothing esteeme that mumbling by of many words, which is onely vaine and childish. They behaued them selues like as our sacrificing Priestes and Monkis doe, who of temples & Monasteries making dennes of theeuers, preach popsonfull doctrine; and therefore onely they celebrare Mass, that they may thereby get unto them selues money, and fill the belly, killing & destroying silly sheepe with their traditions. Which is the denne, wherein soules are slayne, which title is to be ginen to al temples, wherein the word of God is not preached. For there they mocke God, kill soules, expell the true word, and set vp theeuerie. How sowly haue we bene deceipted in this point? But God at this day is hightly to be prayseed, that his word renueth & quickneth vs, & diueth away theeuers, & teacheth vs to pray aright. For a sincere Christian must pray not in mouth onely, but in hart also. Thus we haue þ second part of our text, how Christ casteth out the sellers, that is them þ serued the belly, and maketh place for his worde. It were very good if Monasteries were scoured after this sort, þ either Christian scholes, or places wherein the word of God might be preached, might be made of them; which if it come not to passe, they are, and doe re-maine dennes of theeuers. If Christ calleth his house a denne of theeuers, how much more shall our temples, which God hath not consecrated, be pronounced to be dennes of theeuers?

I haue often times desired you, that ye would devoutly pray unto God, that he turning away his indignation, would bridle the devill, who now rageith in the world. For ye haue heard of a great calamitie, how many thousand haue bene slayne, it is to be feared that they are all damned. God requireth obedience of vs, & he hath pronounced the sentence, that he that taketh the sword, shall perish with the sword. They were besieged of Satan, who knoweth whether the same shall come unto vs? Let vs pray God therefore that his kingdom may come unto vs, that Christians may be multiplied, and that he will send wise and meeke Preachers, whom the people may receiue and obey. Let him that

ENTREATED OF THE LAWE AND THE GOSPEL, AND OF THE DIFFference betwene them.

Luke 10.

- Verse 23. ND he turned to his Disciples and sayd secretly, Blessed are the eyes, which see that ye see.
24. For I tel you that many Prophets and Kinges haue desired to see those things, which ye see, and haue not seene them: and to heare those things which ye heare, and haue not heard them.
25. Then behold, a certaine Lawyer stooode vp & tempted him, saying, Maister, what shall I doe to inherit eternall life?
26. And he sayd vnto him: What is written in the law? how readest thou?
27. And he aunswered and sayd, Thou shalt loue thy Lord God with all thine hart, and with all thy soule, & with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbour as thy selfe.
28. Then he sayd vnto him: Thou hast aunswered right: this doe, and thou shalt liue.
29. But he willing to iustifie him selfe, sayd vnto Iesus, Who is then myneighbour?
30. And Iesus aunswered & sayd: A certayne man went downe from Hierusalem to Ierico, & fell

- amōg theeues, & they robbed hī of his raimēt, & wouūdēd hī, & departed, leāuing hī half dead.
 Nowe so it fell our, that there caine downe a certaine Priest that same way, and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.
32. And likewise also a Leuite when he was come neare to the place, went and looked on him, & passed by on the other side.
33. Thē a certain Samaritan, as he iornied, came neare vnto him, and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.
34. And went to him, and bound vp his woundes, and poured in oyle and wine, and put him on his owne beast, and brought him to an Inne, & made prouision for him.
35. And on the morrowe when he departed, he tooke out two pence, & gaue them to the host, and said vnto him, Take care of him, and whatsoeuer thou spendest more, whē I come again, I will recompence thee.
36. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour vnto him that fel amōg the theeues?
37. And he said, He that shewed mercy on hī, Thē sayd Iesus vnto him: Go, and do thou likewise.

Hope well that ye doe nowe rightly vnderstande this Gospell, soasmuch as it is preached of every yeaere: notwithstanding because occasion is now againe offered, we must againe entreat and preach of it. First the Euangelist sayth, that Christ tooke his Disciples aside, and sayd vnto them secretly after this sorte: Blessed are the eyes which see that ye see, For I tell you that many Prophets and Kinges haue desired to see those thinges which ye see, and haue not seene them, and to heare those things which ye heare, and haue not heard them. To see and heare is to be vnderstoode here simply of the outward seeing and hearing, to wit,

wit, that they sawe Christ come in the flesh, heard his sermons, and were present at those miracles which he did among the Jewes. The Jewes sawe the same according to the flesh, yea and felt them also: yet did they not truely acknowledge him for Christ, as the Apostles did, and especially Peter in the name of all the rest did confess him, saying: Thou art Christ the Sonne of the living God. We graunte in deede, that there were some among the Jewes, which acknowledged him, as the Apostles did, but the number of them was very small, wherefore he taketh his Apostles here severally unto himselfe. Many Prophets and Kings haue seene Christ, howbeit in the spirit, as the Lord himselfe sayth to the Jewes of Abraham, Joh. 8: Your father Abraham reioyced to see my daye, and he saw it, and was glad. The Jewes thought then that he had spoken of the bodily seeing, but he spake of the spirituall seeing, whereby all Christian heartes did behold him, before he was borne. For if Abraham saw him, undoubtedly many other of the Prophets, in whom y holy Ghost was, saw him also. And although this seeing saued the holy Fathers and Prophets, yet did they alwayes with most inward and heartie affection desire to see Christ in the flesh also, as is commonly shewed in the Prophets. Wherefore the Lord sayth here unto his disciples, which sawe him both in the flesh, and in the spirit: Blessed are the eyes which see those thinges that ye see. As if he said: Now is the acceptable yeare and time of grace: The matter whiche is now in hand is so weightie and precious, that y eyes are worthely said to be blessed, which see it. For now was the Gospell preached openly and manifestly both by Christ himselfe, and also by his Apostles, whereupon he here calleth them all blessed, which see and heare such grace. Of which grace I haue preached much & a long time unto you, I would to God ye did keepe that which I haue spoken thereof, fresh in memorie.

When the Lord spake these thinges, a certaine Lawyer sterte up, shewing himselfe as though he had bin some thing, who temping the Lord sayth: Maister, what shall I do to inherit eternall life? This lawer was endued with wisedome, and not unskilfull of the Scriptures, which euen his aunswere doth declare, yet in this place he is proued a foole, yea he is brought unto shame and ignomynie. For Christ taketh awaye all his gloryng euen in one worde. He was of this mynde; that he had obserued the whole

ful saw Christ before his incarnation.

Lawe, and that he was a certaine chiese one in respect of other as undoubtedly he was, and thought himselfe sufficient worthy b reason of his godlines and learning to be conuersaunt with th Lord. But what doth the Lord in this case? the text folowin declareth.

And he said vnto him , what is written in the Lawe ? ho readest thou ? And he aunswere and said : Thou shalt loue th Lord God with all thine heart, and with all thy soule, and wit all thy strength , and with all thy mynde , and thy neighbour: thy selfe. Then he said vnto him , Thou hast aunswere right:d this, & thou shalt liue. He thinkes that the Lord gaue this goo mā a hard lesson: he dealeth verie straitly with him, it may seem to some that he shoule haue spared him a little, he putteth him shame opēly before all: he proueth that he had done nothing, wh notwithstanding thought that he had done all chinges. He askes what he shoule do : but I thinke he had enough and ouermuch do, if he had bin able to do more then he was. If I had time, m nie things might be spoken of these two commaundements. If they are the chiese and greatest commaundements in Moses , e which the whole Lawe, and all the Prophets do hang, as Christ himselfe sayth in Mathew: Notwithstanding we will entre somewhat of them. If we consider all the commaundements Moses , they haue respect altogether vnto loue. For this com maundement : Thou shall haue none other gods in my sight , w can no otherwise declare or interpret, then, Thou shalt loue God alone, so Moses expoundeth it in Deuteronomie, where he say thus: Heare O Israell , the Lord our God is Lord onely. At thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with all thine heart , with a thy soule, and with all thy might: from whence the Lawer took his aunswere. But the Jewes understand this commaundement so , that they thinke it to extend no further , then that they shou not set vp, nor worship idols. And if they can say and witnes mouch, that they haue one God onely , and do worship none bi him, they thinke they haue obserued this commaundement. Afte the same sort did this Lawer understand it, but that was an eue and a wrong vnderstand thereof.

Matth. 22.40. Howbeit we must otherwise consider & understand this precep tcomande. Thou shalt haue none other gods in my sight. Thou , it sayth ment is to be with all that thou art, but especially it requireth all thine heart soul

soule and strength. It speaketh not of the young, not of the hand, not of the knees, but of the whole man, what soeuer thou art and hast. That no other God may be worshipped of me, it shalbe necessary that I haue the true and only God in myne heart, that is, I must loue him frō myne heart, so that I do alwayes depend on on him, trust in him, repose my hope in him, haue my pleasure, loue and ioy in him, and daily remember him. Euen as other wise, if we take pleasure of any thinge, we say; it doth me good inwardly at the heart. And if any speakeþ or laugheth, and doth it not in good earnest, neither from his heart, we are wont to say: Thou laughest in deede; but it cometh not from thine heart. The loue of the heart in the Scriptures signifieth a vehement & speciaall loue, which we ought to beare toward God. They which serue God with mouth, hands, and knees onely, are hypocrites, neither hath God any care of them. For God will not haue part, but the wholes. The Jewes did outwardly abstaine from idolatrie, and serued God alone in mouth, but their heart was farre remoued from him, being full of dissidence and unbelife. Outward they seemed to be verie earnest in seruing God, but within they were full of idolatrie. Whereupon the Lord said vnto them Matth. 23: VVoe be to you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye are like vnto painted sepulchers, which appeare beautifull outward, but are within full of dead mens bones, and of all filthines. So are ye also: For outward ye appeare righteous vnto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisie and iniquities.

These are those wicked ones, which glorie of the outward thinge, which go about to iustifie and make then selues good by their owne warkes, after the maner of this Lawer. Consider how great the pride of this asse was, he commieth forth as though he could not be blamed or rebuked of the Lord, he thought; yea it seemed vnto him, that the Lord would here communend and praise his life before the people. He thoughte not to learne any thinge of the Lord, but he sought onely his owne commendation, he would willingly haue had Christ to see forth his praise, toward whom the eyes of all were bent, and who was an admiration to all. So all hypocrites do, outwardly they pretend excellent, great and weightie warkes; they say that they haue respect neither of glorie nor praise, but within in their heart they are full of ambition, and wish that their holines were knownen to the whole world,

The qualitie
of hypocrites.

shewing a goodly signe of their religion; by the byting of their lippe, if they heare any speake thereof. But our Sauour Christ sheweth here no kyndnes or getlenes to this Lawyer, insinuall as he putteth him to shame: that great holy man notwithstanding continueth still in the same mynde; and supposeth that he shal receive great honour, & singular praise because of his precioule life, thinking that he had fulfilled the commaundement, whereupon also he looketh for a ioysfull aunswere, that the Lord shoule say: Good maister, your maistership hath done all thinges. But Christ aunswereth him: Do this. Whiche in deede is as much to say as: Thou art altogether a naughtie felowe, thou hast never in all thy life fulfilled so much as one letter thereof, so shewing vnto him how euill and naughtie he was.

Like vnto this Lawyer are all they which do most grievously offend against the first commaundement, and thinke that God is to be loued no more then the wordes sound for, and that thereby it is fulfilled: the commaundement therfore remaineth in their mouth, and doth as it were flote aboue the heart, and pearseth i not: but I must go much farther then so, I must loue God so that I can be content to forslake all creatures for his sake, and if i shall seeme good vnto him, my body and life, I must loue him above all things, for he is ielous, and can not suffer that any thing be loued aboue him, but vnder him he permitteth vs to loue any thinge. Euen as the husband can suffer, that his wife loue her maydes, the houle, houshold thinges, cattel, and such like, howbeit he suffereth her not to loue any with that loue wherewith sh is bound vnto him, but himselfe, yea he will haue her leauue all such thinges for his sake. Againe the wife requireth the same of her husband. After the same sorte God can suffer that we loue his creatures, yea therfore they are created, & are good. The sunne is a goodly creature, gold and siluer, and whatsoever by nature is faire, procureth vs to loue it, which maketh it deare vnto vs, neither is God offended therat. But that I should cleave vnto the creature, and loue it equally with him, that neither will he, neither can he suffer: yea he will haue me both to deny and forslake all these thinges, when he requireth it of me, and will haue me content, although I never see the sunne, money, riches, &c. The loue of creatures must be farre inferiour to the loue whic we must beare toward him. As he is the soueraigne good, s

must be loued of vs.

will he also be chiefly loued before all other good thinges, If he will not suffer that I shall loue any thing equally with him, much lesse will he suffer that I shall loue any thing aboue him.

Thou seest now as I thinke, what it is to loue God with all the heart, with all the soule, with all the mynde. To loue God with all the heart, is to loue God aboue all creatures, that is, although creatures be verie amiable and deare vnto me, and I take great delight in them, yet must I so loue them, that I do contemne and forsake them, when my God and Lord requireth that of me.

To loue God with all the soule, is to bestow our whole life & What it is to body at his pleasure, as if the loue of creatures, or any temptation loue God assaile thee, or would ouercome thee, thou mayst say : I will ra- with all the ther part from all these then I will forsake my God, whether he soule.

cast me of, either kill me, either dwynne me, or whatsoeuer through his permission shall come vnto me, I had rather leauie all thinges then him, I will depend on that my Lord, rather then upon all creatures, or vpon any other thing whatsoeuer it be. Whatsoeuer I haue and am, I wil bestow, but him will I not forsake. The soule in the Scriptures signifieth the life of the body, & whatsoeuer is done by the ffeu senses, as to eate, to drinke, to sleepe, to wake, to see, to heare, to smell, to taste, and whatsoever the soule worketh by the boody. To loue God with all the strength, is for Gods cause to renounce all the members and limmes of the boody, so that one will offer to perill whatsoeuer he is able in his flesh and boody, before he will commit that which is against God. To loue God with all the minde, is to enterprize To loue God nothing but that which may please God, whereby he vndersta- with all the deth the thought, which is in man, that that also be referred to mynde.

God, and to all thinges that be acceptable vnto him. Thou per- ceiuest now what this commaundement of God containeth in it. Thou shalt loue God, Thou, Thou sayth he, and that wholy, vuen euerie part of thee, not thy handes, not thy mouth, not thy knees alone. They which do these thinges, as it is said, do truely fulfill it: but no man liueth in the earth which doth so, yea we da ill otherwise. Wherefore the law doth here make vs all sinners, that not so much as the least iote or point thereof is fulfilled of hem that are most holy of all in the world. For no man doth sa leauie with all his heart vnto God, that he can leauie all thinges for his sake. We (alas) are gone so farre, that we can not suffer so much as a litle wozd , nay we will not forgoe the value of a halpenie for Gods cause.

We are farre of from loving God as
we ought.

How can it be that we shoulde loue God , when his will is not settled in our mynde ? If I loue God , I can not but loue his will also. Now if God send sicknes, pouertie, shame, and ignominie, it is his will, whereat what do we ? we murmur, we grudge, our mynde is caried hither and thither, we take it most vnpatiently, and yet is this the least . What would we do , if we shoulde leau our body and life for God & Christ his sake ? then would we shew our selues after an other sort. But in the meane season we do like unto this Pharise & Lawyer , we lead an honest life outwardly, we worship God, we serue him, we fast, we pray, and behauie our selues in outward appearance iustly and holily . But God doth not require that of vs , but that we shoulde bend our selues to do his will with pleasure and loue, cheerefully & louingly. Wherefore whatsoeuer the Lord sayth here to the Lawyer , he sayth it to all vs , to wit , that we haue yet done nothing , but that al thinges do yet remaine to be done. All men therefore are guilty of death and subiect to Satan : All men are lyers, vaine, filthie, and whatsoeuer they pretend, it is nothing worth. We are wiſe in our owne matters , that we may scrape togither money and goods, and we can speake most sweetely and fayrely before men, and cūningly propound or set forth our matter. What doth God care for these thinges ? He requireth of vs that we loue him with our whole heart, which no man living is able to performe, whereupon of this place is inferred , that we are all synners , but especially they, whose life hath a goodly outward shew only . This is the former part of this text, namely, the preaching of the law. Now followeth the other part , which is the preaching of the Gospell, which declareth how we may fulfill the lawe, and from whence that fulfilling is to be taken , which we shall learne of that Samaritane.

What doth the Lawyer moreouer , after that the Lord had thus delt with him ? He, saith the Euangelist, willing to iustifie himselfe , spake unto the Lord & asked him as followeth : Who is then my neighbour ? He asketh not : Who is my God ? As i he sayd : I owe nothing unto God , neither do I want any thing before God , yea it seemeth unto me , that I do neither owe any thing thing to any man: neuertheles I would willingly know who is my neighbour. The Lord aunswering him, bringeth forth a most goodly similitude, whereby he declareth that we are all neighbours one to an other, as well he that giueth a benefit, as he that receiueth and needeth one: although by the text it seemeth to appeare, that he onely is a neighbour, which bestoweth a benefit vpon an other. But the Scripture maketh here no difference, sometime calling him our neighbour, which bestoweth a benefit; sometime him that receiueth a benefite. By this similitude the Lord inferreth in these wordes: Go and do thou likewise, so that that Lawyer had offended not onely against God, but also against man, and wanted not onely loue towardes God, but also loue towardes his neighbour, unto whom he had not done that good which he ought. This wretched felow is brought into such a case that he is found wholy euell, euē from the head to the feete. How came it to passe that he being most skillfull of the Scripture could not beware of this? So fell it out: he led a pharisall, hypocriticall, and counterfaite life, which had not regarde unto his neighbour, and to succour and helpe others, but sought thereby onely glorie and honour before men, and so looked by negligent & dissolute living to come to heauen. But ye have heard verie often, that a Christian life consisteth in this, that we deale with faith and the heart in thinges that pertaine unto God, but life. vse our life and workes towards our neighbour, and that I must not looke while my neighbour seeketh a benefite, and requireth some thing of me, but according to my duty must prevent his asking, & of myne owne accord offer my liberalitie unto him. Now we will see what the parable containeth in it.

The Samaritan in this place is without all doute our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath declared his loue toward God and men: Toward God, in that he descended from heauen, and was incarnate, and so fulfilled the will of his father: Toward men, for that byandby after baptisme, he beganne to preach, to worke miracles, to heale the sicke, neither was there any worke that he did, which did concerne himselfe onely, but all his workes were directed to his neighbour, being made our minister, when as notwithstanding he is aboue all, and equall to God: but he did all these thinges, for that he knew that they did please God, and that it was the will of his father. When he had ascended to the height of the commaundement, that he loued God with all his heart, he left and committed the life of his body, and whatsoeuer he had to the pleasure and will of his father saying: Father, behold all thinges that I haue, my life and soule are readie at thy will: I leauue for thy sake the glorie and honour which I haue had among men, yea and all thinges how good soever they be, that the wold may understand how greatly I loue thee: My father let for thy sake my wisedome be contyned, that the worlde may count me for the foolishness of all: Now make I my selfe most contemptible of all other, who was before praised of þ whole wold: Now am I as a most wicked thesse, who before was liberall, profitable, and beneficial to the whole wold: My father, I make no account of all these thinges, that I may be found obedient to thy will. This is that Samaritane, whis being desired by no prayers, came, & fulfilled the law with his whole heart, he alone hath fulfilled it, which praise none can take from him: he alone hath deserued it, and to him onely it appertaineth.

But whereas he is touched with care of the wounded man, hath compassion on him, byndeth vp his woundes, bringeth him with him into an Inne, prouideth for him, that pertaineth vnto vs. The man which lieth half dead, wounded, beaten, & spoilles, is Adam, yea and all we. The theeuers which spoiled vs, wounded vs, and left vs halfe dead, as yet a litle pâting, are the Deuels. The horse and his litter do here fall downe, we are not able to helpe our selues, and if we should be left lying so, we should die, through great anguish and distres, our woundes would become fested, and our affliction miserable and exceeding great. This excellent parable is set before our eyes, lively painting forth vnto vs, what we are, what is the strength of our reason and free will. If that wretched man had gone about to helpe himselfe, his case would haue bene made worse, he would haue hurt himselfe, he would haue opened his woundes with rubbing, & so would haue fallen into greater calamitie. Againe if he had bin left lying, it had bin all one. So it commeth to passe when we are left to our selues: our studys and endeavour surely are nothing, howsoeuer we set vpon the matter. Hitherto sundrie waies & diuers meanes haue bin inuentioned, whereby we might come vnto heauen, and amend our life, this man found out this, an other that, whereupon haue increased innumerable sortes of Ordres, letters of indulgences, pilgri-pilgrimages to saints, which did alwayes make þ state of Christianitie worse. This is the world which is painted soorth in this wounded man, he being wholly laden with synnes, fainteth vnder so heauie a burden, and is not able to helpe him selfe.

But the Samaritane who hath fulfilled the Lawe, and is perfectly sound and whole, commeth, and doth more, then either the Priest or Leuite, he byndeth vp his woundes, poureth in oyle and wine, setteth him vpon his owne beast, bringeth him with him vnto an Inne, maketh provisyon for him, and when he shoulde depart, diligently commendeth him to the host, and leaueth with him sufficient for expenses, none of which either the Priest, or Leuite did. By the Priest the holy Fathers are signified, which flourished before Moses. The Leuite is a representation of the Priesthood of the old Testament. Now all these could do nothing by their workes, but passed by like vnto this Priest and Leuite. Wherefore although I had all the good workes of Noe, Abraham, yea and of all the faithfull Fathers, they would profit me nothing. The Priest and Leuite saw that miserable man lie wounded, but they could not helpe him any thinge: they saw him lie halfe dead, but what was that to the purpose? they could not giue him any remedy. The holy Fathers sawe men dwowned and plunged in synnes euuen vp to the eares, they also felt the sting and anguish of synne, but what coulde they doe hereunto? they could make the case worse and not better. And those were the preachers of the Lawe, which shew what the world is, namely that it is full of synne, and lieth halfe dead, and can not euuen any whit helpe it selfe with his strength, reason, and free will. But Christ is that true Samaritane, who is touched with as great care of that miserable man as of himselfe. Neither doth the Samaritane call him vnto him, for he hath no merit, but enjoyeth the meere grace and mercy of Christ, who byndeth vp his woundes, and hauing great care of him, poureth in oyle and wine, that is, the whole Gospell. He poureth in oyle when Oyle.

life: so the sweete and gentle preaching of the Gospell maketh my heart soft and tender toward God and my neighbour, so that I dare bestow my body and life, for Christ and his Gospell, if God and neede so require. Sharpe wine signifieth the holy crosse or affliction, which followeth. Neither is there any cause that a Christian shoulde looke farre about and seeke the crosse, for it sooner hangeth ouer his head then he is aware of, as Paul witnesseth 2. Tim. 3: All that will liue godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecutiō. This is the cognisance and badge of this king. He that is ashamed of this cognisance, pertaineth not vnto him. Moreouer that Samaritane putteth this wounded man vpon his owne beast: this is our Lord Jesus Christ, who beareth vs, we ly vpon his shoulders, vpon his necke & body. There is scarce a more amiable & comforteable historie in the whole Gospell, then where Christ comparreth himselfe to a shepheard, which carrieth againe the lost sheepe vpon his shoulders vnto the flocke.

The Inne
whereunto ſ wounded ma is brought, & the host to whom he is committed.

The Inne is the ſtate of Christianicie in this world, wherein we muſt abide for a little time. The host is the minifters & preachers of the worde of God, and of the Gospell, whose charge is to haue care of vs. This therefore is the ſumme: The kingdome of Christ is a kingdome of mercy and grace, where is nothing els but alwayes to be boynē and to beare. Christ beareth our defects and infirmitie, he taketh our synnes vpon hymfelfe, and beareth our fall willingly, we daily lie vpon his necke, neither is he wearied with thac bearing of vs. It is the dutie of the preachers of this kingdome, to comfort conſciences, to handle them gently, to feede them with the Gospell, to beare the weake, to heale the ſicke: Moreouer they ought fitly to applie the worde according to the neede of euerie one. This indeede is the dutie of a true Bishop and preacher, not to proceede by violence and iniurie, as it is the custome of our bishops at this daye, which vex, torment, and crie out: goe to, goe to, he that will not willingly, ſhalbe compelled to doe it againſt his will. We muſt in no wiſe doe ſo. But a Bishop or preacher ought to behauie hymfelfe as a healer of the ſicke, who dealeth verie tenderly with them, vttereth verie louing words vnto them, talketh very gently with them, and bestoweth all his endeour about them. The ſame muſt a Bishop, or minister of any particular parish do, and thinke no otherwiſe, but that his bishoprike or parish is as an hospitall, hospitall, wherein are such as are combred with diuerse and sundrie kyndes of diseases. If Christ be thus preached, then faith and loue come togither, which fulfill the commaundement of loue. Now so farasmuch as the knowledge of the Lawe and the Gospel, and of the difference betweene them is verie necessarie, I will intreat of them somewhat more at large.

Of the Lawe and the Gospell.

I haue verie oftē admonished your brotherly charitie, that the whole Scripture deuideth it selfe into two parts: into the Lawe, and the Gospel. The Law is that which teacheth what we must do, what the will of God requireth of vs. The Gospell teacheth where that is to be received, which the Lawe commaundeth. Euen as if I seeke to take phisicke, it is one art to tell what the disease is, & an other to minister that which is good and wholesom to remedie it. So standeth the case here: The Lawe revealeth the disease, the Gospell ministreth the medecine. Which is manifest euē by the text whereof we haue already inreated: The Lawyer commeth, and being verie desirous of eternall life, asketh what he must do. The Lawe declareth it vnto him, saying: Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy soule, with all thy strength, and with all thy minde, and thy neighbour as thy selfe. He that readeth these woxkes after a bare and sclender sorte onely, as this Lawyer did, understandeth them not. We must pearce into the Lawe, and euerie one behold his face and heart therein. God must be loued of me from the bottom of my heart: Againe, I must loue him with all my soule, that is, from the depth of my soule, so that I thoroughly feele in my selfe that I loue him. For to loue with the soule signifieth in the Scripture such loue as a yong man beareth toward a mayd, which he feeleth thoroughly in his minde. Moreover, with all my strength, that is, with all my members. Also with all my mynde, that is, all my senses, cogitations & thoughts must be directed vnto God: Now I finde in my selfe that I do none of these. For if I must loue God with all my heart, soule, strength and minde, it is requisite, that myne eyes shew no angrie twinkling or motio, þ my tong speake no angrie word, that my feete, handes, eares, &c. shew no signe of wrath, that my whole body euen from the crowne of the head to the soles of the feete, & all things belonging thereto, do walke in charitie, be as it were rauished with loue and pleasure toward God, & alwaies serue & worship him. Wherefore who is he which by the pleasure & loue of vertue is chaste & righteous? there can no be one such foun in y earth. For we always finde our selues readier to wrath, hatred, enuie, worldly pleasure &c: then to meeckenes & other vertues. I finde in me not onely a sparke, but euener a fierie fornace of wicked lust: for there is no loue in myne heart, ne not in all my members. Wherefore here in the Lawe as it were in a certaine glasse I see whatsocuer is in me, to be damnable and cursed. For not one iote of the Law must perish, but all must be fulfilled, as Christ saith: Truly I say vnto you, till heauen & earth passe, one iote or title of the Lawe shall not scape, till all be fulfilled. Now thou syndest not this in thee, that thou doest with all thy soule and heart, with cheeresfulnes and pleasure, whatsoever the Law exacteth and requireth of thee. Hereupon thou art damned and vnder the dominion of Satan.

The Lawe therefore serueth vs thus farre, to teach vs, that we are condemned: for by it we synde all wicked desyres in vs, and yet not so much as a sparke of them ought to be in vs. Howbeit our Scholemen not marking this, haue taught, that if one do according to his abilitie, God doeth giue his grace vnto hym. They are blynde guides: They graunt themselves, that a man is caried with no pleasure or cheeresfulnes to that which is good, and yet do they also teach, if one woxketh, although it be with griefe, difficultie, and slouthfulnes, that it is well with him before God. But Christ hath taught otherwise in this place, that we should worke that which is good with pleasure and loue, readines and facilitie. Whom therefore shall we rather beleue, Christ or the Scholemen: but I leaue that to your iudgement. Of such corrupt and euell understanding of the Lawe, Monasteries afterwardes came, whereby entred in this opinion, that it was thought to be sufficient to saluation, to liue in a Monastrie, and to follow the orders thereof, although that were done

We must worke with pleasure and cheeresfulnes, not w grudging or griefe. euen with griefe of mynde. So they taught: But Christ will haue vs to worke with pleasure and cheeresfulnes, so that if any thinge be done with burden or griefe of conscience, it is synnes: remoue thy selfe therefore quickly from such a worke. Wherefore thus it might be said vnto them: Behold O man, thou miserable creature oughtest to be caried with a certaine delight to the the doinge of, the lawe of God, but thou commest with no pleasure or cheeresfulnes hereunto, now see that thou shew thy pleasure and loue herein, otherwise thou shalt be the enemie of God, and the friend of Satan: thus men leauing their owne rashnes, might come to the knowledge of themselves, and might then say: Therefore; O God, am I condemned, and that not uniusually. Hereupon it followeth, that we are all under Satan, as long as we feele in vs this difficultie and hardnes to doe that which is good. Wherefore if I shold speake the truthe, I shold say thus, I synde in deede somethinge that is good in the lawe of God, but it is my death, and if it could be, I would wish that it were not. So are all men affected in their heart, as S. Paule plainly teacheth Rom. 7. If we shold remaine in such condemnation, we must needes perish for euer.

The office of sheweth comfort and saluation, declaring where that is to be had, the Gospell. whereby the Lawe is fulfilled. When therefore I know by the Lawe that I am a condemned man, then ly I halfe dead among theenes, Satan hath spesled my soule, and hath moreouer in Adam taken away all faith, all righteousnes, and hath left nothing but bodily life, which is also quickly extinguished. Then come Levites and Priestes, which teach this and that, but can helpe nothing, and so passe by. But when the Samaritane commeth, he helpeth: that is, when Christ commeth, he sheweth his mercy unto vs, saying after this sort: Behold thou oughtest in deede to loue God with all thine heart, but thou doest it not, now beleeue onely in me, & thou shalt enjoy my obedience as thine owne: this onely helpeth me: Then he putteth me on his owne beast, that is, on himselfe, and carrieth me into the Iunē, that is, into the Church of the faishfull, then he byandby poureth his grace into me, that is, oyle, that I may feele my selfe to be layd vpon his shoulber, that at the last maketh me to be of a good cheere, & quiet & well affected in conscience. Afterward he poureth in wine also, which with his sharpnes may abate & tame the force of old Adam. And yet am I not so wholy restored unto health, health is in deede poured in & begon, but not yet wholy finished: then Christ hath care of me, & by his grace poured into me, doth purifie me, that syō day to day I may become more chaste, meeke, gentle, faishfull, &c: vntill I wholy dy, for then I shalbe altogether made perfect. So when we shall come to God the father, and be asked of him, whether we beleue in God, whether we loued him, &c: the Samaritane Christ our Lord, who hath layed vs on his owne beast, will come forth and saye: Loe Father, although they haue not wholly fulfilled thy Lawe, yet haue I fulfilled it, suffer thou that to turne to the commoditie of them that beleue in me. So is it needefull that all the Saincts albeit verie holy, be layed upon the backe of Christ. If so be that the holiest of all, as the Priestes and Levites could not satisfie the Lawe, how shall we go about with our fained workes, as with haunting, habit &c, to fulfill the same? O wretched & miserable calamitie. These things shall now suffize to haue bin spoken concerning this text: Let vs pray vnto God, that he will giue vs his grace.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER, CONCERNING THE EXERCISE AND INCREASING OF FAITH.

John 4.

Verse 46. Here was a certeine ruler, whose sonne was sicke at Capernaum.

47. When he heard that Iesus was come out of Iudea into Galile, he wēt vnto him, & besought him, that he would go downe, & heale his sonne: for he was euen ready to die.

48. Then said Iesus vnto him, Except ye see signes and wonders, ye will not beleue.

49. The

49. The ruler said vnto him , Syr , goe downe before my sonne die .
50. Iesus said vnto him , Goe thy waie , thy sonne liueth : and the man beleueed the word that Iesus had spoken vnto him , and went his waye .
51. And as he was now going downe , his seruants met him , saying , Thy sonne liueth .
52. Then enquired he of them the houre when he beganne to amend . And they said vnto him , yesterdaye the seuenth houre the feuer lefte him .
53. Then the father knew that it was the same houre in the which Iesus had said vnto him , Thy sonne liueth , and he beleueed , and all his household .
54. This second miracle did Iesus againe , after he was come out of Iudea into Galile .

An excellent example of faith is set forth in this text , of what sort it is , of what nature and qualitie , namely , that it is not a resting or idle thinge , but lively and boyd of idlenes , which goeth not backe , but proceedeth on , and still more and more increaseth . Which if it be not done , it is no faith , but onely a dead opinion of God in the heart . For a true and syncere faith , which the holy Ghost poureth into the heart , can not be idle : which I say for this cause , that no man be therefore secure , albeit he hath obtained faith , neither that he stay there . It is nothing to beginne , unlesse we increase by continual going forward , and come to greater knowledge of God . For on the contrarie side it is the nature and qualitie of our aduersarie Satan , not to be idle , as S . Peter sayth : Satan sleepeth not , but goeth about as a roving Lion , seeking whom he may deuoure . If so be that the Deuell is neither idle , neither sleepe commeth vpon him , neither shall it be meete for a Christian to be idle or put his handes in his bosom, forasmuch as he hath the Deuill his enemie, who is stronger then himselfe: for he is called the prince of the world, as it is mentioned in the Epistle appointed to be read in the Churche on this day: VVe wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, & against the worldly gouernours, the princes of the darkenes of this world, against spirituall wickednesse, which are in hie places. This prince gouerneþ the world, syriously and fiercely rageþ, and can not suffer the prosperous succes of a Christian. Neither is it for his profit to be suffered of him, for an entrie being made hereby, his kingdome is burst into, and his net torn in peeces, out of which as much as he is able, he suffereth no Christian to escape. Moreouer when the fire of faith is kindled, and the flame fostered, and Satan trieth and marketh that, byandby he practizeth deceit against it, for he knoweth how much hinderance his kingdome shall take thereby, wherefore as earnestly as he can, euен with all his power, he defendeth his kingdome, & laboureth to keepe all in obedience to him.

True Christians are not free from tetatio, for the deuel bēdeth not yet sound, and that he hath not as yet truly received the Golhis force es-pell. For wicked Satan hath a verie sharpe sight, he byandby pecially aspieth out where is a true Christian, wherefore he applieth gainst them. himselfe wholy vnto this, that he may enforce him to fall, and may besiege him, and assaile him on euerie side: for he can not suffer that any shoulde revolt from his kingdome. It is perilous therefore for a man to beleue, for the Deuill is ready that he may set vpon him, and ouerthow him, which sometime chaunceth euen to verie holy men, which understand the word of God well, when they stand upright, and thinke themselves safe, that privie wicked fende commeth vpon them by litle and litle, and wraastleth with them so longe, till he ouerthow them, and cast them to the earth. Set before thine eyes Moses and Aaron, who were guides of the Jewes, they had an excellent sayth, when they brought the people out of Egypt, and all the people in sayth passed through the redde sea, death, the wide wildernes, and many other meruelous thinges, whereby they shewed their sayth, but at the last they fall grieuously, they feare that they

they shall perish with hunger. Is it not a thinge most miserable, that by so great signes they shew their faith, they goe into death and through death, wrastle with it, and ouercome it, and yet while they thinke them selues surest, they fal, and suffer themselues to be ouercome of the belly, murmure against God, and are so grieuously tempted, that they fall all togither. Wherefore it is not certaine and sure, if one begin to beleue, and doth not alwayes more and more increase in faith. Yea that godly man Moses, who had so great and so strong a faith, did fall also, when as he shold bring water out of the rocke with a staffe, he doubted, and talked thus to the people : Come let vs see whether we can bring water out of the rocke. That good Moses, which had shewed so many and so great signes, falleth into reason and carnall understanding, fearing lest the incredulitie of the people would hinder so great a miracle & signe. But it had behoued him to cleave fast to the word of God, and to thinke it higher, greater, stronger, and mightier, then the unbelieve of the people : that great man was tempted, he stumbled, and was ouerthowne.

We haue like examples in the newe Testament : Peter was hardie, and firme in faith, when he beheld Christ vpon the water, he sayd unto him with a strong faith : Lord suffer me to come vnto thee, committing him selfe to the water euен as to the ship, he thought assuredly that the water would beare him. Then was there an excellent faith in Peter, and great courage, which durst commit him selfe wholly vnto death in the middest of the sea, reposing his hope freely & boldly in Christ. But when he thought him self most safe, a storme and tempest ariseth, he forgetting the word, suffereth his faith to faile, and he him selfe also falleth, suffering Satan to plucke faith out of his hart. Faith truely is a subtil and delicate thing, a small thing maketh vs to stumble and fall. Satan is alwaies watchfull, and circumspect, and doth by & by obtaine his purpose, if we doe not diligently watch. How earnestly did the common people followe Christ ? they thought that he was a Prophet, and did so cleave vnto him, and so defend him, that the Princes of the people were made astonied, neither durst they so much as lay hand on him. But when they appreheend him, proceede against him, fasten him to the crosse, the people foriske him all that they may, and come no more at him. A Prophet is present, and no man any more assisteth him, but they rather cri-out against him, crucifie him, crucifie him: and that which is most detestable of all, his owne Disciples reuolt from him. What is become now both of their faith and holines?

So is it at this day in our time: at the first when the Gospell began to shone, the preaching thereof was acceptable and pleasant, then many seemed willing to embrase it, but when Munkes, sacrificing Priests, Nunnes, &c. began to be spoken against, and the Mass to be confuted, all (a meruelous thinge to be spoken) fell away as leaues of trees. Againe, when Princes also were touched, the Gospell suffered greater persecution, and did by little and litle daily decrease. Moreouer Satan is not idle, whereupon he stirreth vp heresies and schismes, for how many sects haue we hitherto suffered? he sleepeth not, he will stirre vp greater mischiefes also, he never resteth, but looketh about, and trieth every way, that he may bringe the matter to that passe, and prouale so farre, that no sound doctrine may remaine in the church, but that if all Germanie be diligently viewed, a sermon may nowhere be found, wherein the word of God is truely preached, as it was before. He goeth about to extinguish and abolish all the doctrine of Christ now increasing, for he can not abide it. It is not an easie thing to auoid so great an enemie, he lyeth in wait, and vieweth all places, and so diligently bestirreth him selfe, that euен the learned fall, and the elect stumble, as Moses, S. Peter, with the rest of the Apostles. We thinke our selues safe, and liue securely, no man considereth, no man hath a care of the worde, we should pray & beseech God, that he would vouchsafe to preserue the Gospell, and make his holy name to be spred and published more abroad. But no man is touched with care hereof, no man prayeth that it may haue good successe. Wherefore it is to be feared that at the last it will come to passe, that God will suffer Satan and vs to runne togither into one, then shal we be in a desperate case, for he will easily throw vs to the ground, when we are come into so great miserie by our owne slothfulnes and default.

Satan moxeouer can so sette forth the matter by seditious spirits, that men shall thinke it to be iust. As the Arians were pertrus to our swaded that their opinion was sound. But a Christian humbleth owne stregh him selfe, taketh nothing rashly vpon him selfe, but with an humble hart sayth thus vnto God: Moste gracious God, albeit I helpe & assisse of God, knowe that the cause which I fauour is not vniust, yet without thy thy helpe I am not able to maintaine it, thou therfore help me, otherwise I shall be cast and ouerthowne. He is in deede certaine of his cause, euen as S. Peter was on the water, who could not be surer, when the water did bear him. For he knewe no let or hinderance, but when the winde was great, and the water troubled, he perceiued what was wanting in him: Which is throught ly to be receiued into our minde, and considered of vs. For albeit the certaintie of our cause be confirmed, strengthened, and ratified with plaine sentences of the Scripture, yet is it by the might, counsell, and power of God, that we are defended, and Satan our chiefe aduersary and enemie repressed. Which is therefore done, that God may stirre vs vp to watch, and keepe vs in awe, that we may alwayes be watchfull, and crie vnto him: Lorde helpe vs, & increase our faith, for without thee we are able to doe nothing.

Our hart must be alwayes so disposed, as though we beganne to day to beleue, and alwaies so affected, that we desire and labour to goe more and more forward. For that is the nature, force, and qualtie of faith, that it alwayes increaseth and wareth stronger.
Satan, as it is a sicle before mentioned, neither is idle, nor resteth, if he be once ouerthowne he riseth againe, if he can not enter in by the doore, he endeuoureth to steale in on the backe side, & if this be not permitted him, he breaketh in throught the roose, or entereth in throught a hollow place digged vnder the threshold, for he doth so long earnestly follow his worke, vntill he come in, he useth many deceits and practizes, if he preuaileth not by one, he takeith in hand an other, and doth that so long, vntill he hath obtained his purpose. Man is a weake and a miserable thing, as S.
Paule sayth 2. Cor. 4: VVe have this treasure in earthen vessels.
I am moare fraile then a pot compared to the potter, and a pot is a very weake thinge, inasmuch as it is easily broken, and whatsoever is in it, is spilt.

Now Satan when he marketh how great a treasure faith is, kept in a fraile pot (that I may so speake) he is in a great rage & furie, and sayth thus vnto vs: I will touch thee, I will breake thy potte, thou hast a great treasure, which I will spill. So God settest the silly pot in the middest of enemies, which shoulde vter-ly perish euen in a momet, if he did not defend it, for it may quickly be shaken and broken in peeces, yea if it be but bitten of a viper, it perishest. And it is not hard from Satan euen in one moment to waste and destroy a whole country. Wherefore that vexed him, that God dealeth with him so simply, setting a silly potte gaines him, when as he notwithstanding is so great a Prince an the most mighty ruler of this world. Now it would grieue me, I being strange and valiant, any man should set vpon me with reedes, surely I being moued with anger would breake the reed in peeces: for I had leuer that he would set vpon me w a speare sword, and armed on all partes. It grieued stout Goliath, tha David durst come vnto him unarmed onely with a staffe. So i greatly grieueth the devill, that God will supprese him by fles & blood, if some stout spirit should resist him, it would not grieve him so much, for that troubleth him aboue measure, that a silly wombe, a fraile pot should come to despise hym, an earthen vessell against a most mighty Prince. God hath layd vp this treasure, sayth Paul, in a miserable and weake vessell: for man is a weake creature, by and by moued to wrath, to covetousnes, to pride, &c. so that Satan may easily shake and breake the vessell: for if God woulde permit him, he woulde forthwith breake it all to peeces.

Now all this is done, sayth Paul, that we may know, that not by our own power, but by the power of God we are preserued from all euills, and especially from the force and furie of Satan, who goeth about like a roxing lyon, desiring to huse and breake the weake vessells and fraile pots: and that we may hereby also be stirred vp to be watchfull and to lise vp our eyes toward heauen, and pray vnto God that he will bouchsafe to encrease and defend our faith, and preserue the vessell by his strength. Thus haue we an entrance vnto our text, it remaineth that we doe now consider the same in order: The Euangelist sayth thus:

There was a certayne ruler, whose sonne was sicke at Caper-naum: It falleth out with many other men also, that they haue their children sicke: but that which he sayth afterward is to be marked: VVhen he heard that Jesus was come out of Iudea into Galile, he went vnto him, and besought him that he woulde goe downe, and heale his sonne: for he was euuen ready to dye.
Here faith beginneth and trusteth in Christ. Nowe that he had faith the Gospell declareth: for he heard of Christ how he healed the sicke, thereupon his hart was set vpon him, and he resorted vnto him, thinking thus: If he helpeth all men, he will also helpe me, and will heale my sonne. He countereth Christ for such a man as

as is able to helpe men, and hopeth and promiseth to him selfe all goodnes from him : and that in deede is a true Christian hart, which cleaueth fast vnto God . If that this ruler had stooode in a place or way hauing two patches, douting with him selfe , he had not gone vnto Christ, but his hart would haue bene thus affected: He helpeth others in deede, but who can tell, whether he will help me also ? Howbeit he doth not thus dout of Christ, but riseth, and maketh hast vnto him. This is the beginning of faith, now ye shal see how Christ meeteth him on the other side, and aunswereþ oþerwise then he thought soþ, that his faith might be tried , and thus he sayth vnto him :

Except ye see signes and wonders ye will not beleue. Christ sayd also to S. Peter Matth. 14: VVhy doost thou dout, O thou of litle faith ? Peter vndoubtedly had faith, & did beleue in Christ, whereupon he committed him selfe to the water, but when he saw the winde, he was afraide, and beganne to be drowned : so in this place, that good man heareth a good report of Christ, that he helþeth every man, which he beleueþ and therefore resorth vnto him. But when he heareth that Christ denieth to come, he stumbles, and his faith faileth , fearing that Christ would not come vnto him. This is as it were an assault & soze blowe, here his new begun faith beginneth to be tempted. It was a hard saying: except ye see signes and wonders, ye will not beleue : which saying doth so tempt him, and bring him into dout, that he almost falleþ. Satan standing at his backe, sayth vnto him : get thee home and looke to thy busines, for he will not helpe thee. Notwithstanding the ruler did not by and by leaue of , but prayed the Lorde moreover : Lorde come downe before my sonne dye. Here his faith began to be in daunger & to faile, but God doth not forsake him, but liftest him vp againe, and sayth vnto him:

Goe thy way, thy sonne liueth. If the ruler had not had faith, he woulde not haue requested Christ to come to his sonne. What therefore doth he want ? even this : he beleueþ if Christ came to his house, he coulde then helpe his sonne , if he did not come, he could not helpe him. Neither did his faith extende so farre, as to beleue that Christ euē being absent could heale the sicke: but it behoued that he shoulde haue a higher faith. Wherfore Christ lifteþ him vp, and setteth him in a higher state, and sayth vnto him: Goe thy way, thy sonne liueth. Here he first ascendeth from his former faith, whereby he beleueed that Christ could heale being present, and commeth to a higher faith, so that now he beleueueth the word. For if he had not beleueued the word, he would not haue left Christ, neither would haue departed from him, vntill he had come with him to his house. But having layd holde on the word, he cleaueth vnto it by faith, for his sonne is at home, and Christ is with his father. Wherefore the Father receiuereth this word in his hart, and thinketh with him selfe after this sort: My sonne is sicke, but I shall find him whole: which faith was contrary both to reason & experience. Reason would haue thought thus: When I came from my sonne he was sicke, as I did leau him, so shall I find him. But faith sayth otherwise, it resteth onely in the word & crutcheth wholy vnto it, neither douteth it, that any thing will fall out otherwise then the word speaketh: Goe thy way, thy sonne liueth. This is a right and a stronge faith, when as man leaueth sense, wisedome, reason, and trusteth wholy to the worde of God. Christ sayth, thy sonne liueth: And he sayth with him selfe, without dout it is true, I shall so find it. So faith remaineth not idle, nor resteth, but increaseth and goeth forward.

Thus Christ dealeth with vs also, he suffereth vs to be tempted, that we may increase in faith: if in the ende of our life when we must dye, we shall haue but a sparke of such faith, we shall be in a good case, as Christ sayth vnto his Disciples Matth.17: If ye haue faith as much as is a graine of mustard seede, ye shal say vnto this mountaine: Remoue hence to yonder place, & it shall be remoued: and nothing shal be vnpossible vnto you. A graine of mustard seede is but a small thing, but he that hath faith agreeable to the smalnes of this graine, shall be sauad. Neither must we so much consider this, that our faith is litle, but we must looke vnto this, we must haue regard vnto this, that the graine of mustard seede do remaine, and be not eaten vp of the birdes, that Sathan plucke not faith out of our hentes. We must not looke how little the faith is, but we must regarde and take heede that faith be not taken away. Peter had faith vpon the sea, and therefore was he caried of the water, that he shold not be drowned, if he had so persevered in faith, he might well haue walked an hundred miles vpon the sea, but when he fayled in faith, he began to be drowned. So Moses had a stronge faith, but he fell from it. It consisteth not in the strength or slendernes of faith, that we doe stand, but in perseperseuering and remaining faithfull. It may be that he shall perseuer in faith, which hath but a slender faith, and he that hath a strong faith shall fall and dout. Moses and Peter had an excellent faith, so that Moses by faith did leade þ people through the middest of the sea and death, and Peter without douting went downe out of the ship into the sea, but they fall from their faith, howbeit God raiseth them vp quickly again. But the Theefe on the crosse hauing once layd hold of faith, continued constant. Nowe God therefore suffereth it to be thus, that he may bring downe rash arrogancie, that we doe not gloriouly extol our selues, but alwaies remaine in feare & awe. For when temptation commeth vpon vs, we doe soorthwith fal into errour, if God do not assit & strengthen vs, of which thinge we may see a very goodly similitude in a tree, which in the spryng time buddeth and openeth it selfe, so that it doth as it were become white by reason of the blossooms. A shrower falling vpon it, many of the blossooms are shaken of, & the frost also doth much more consume them. Afterward when the frute beginneth to spryng forth, some great winde blowing, much of it being newly come forth falleth downe, and when it waxeth ripe, the caterpiller commeth, which with other wormes gnaweth & spoyleth it so much, that scarce the twentith part, yea scarce the hundredth part many times remaineth. The same commeth to passe with the hearers of the Gospell, in the beginning thereof every one coueteth to be a true Chrystian, every one liketh of it very well, and the first frutes thereof are very pleasant. But when winde, a shower, or temptation commeth, all fall away from it by companies: afterwards sects and seditions arise, which like unto wormes and kankers gnaw and infect the frutes of the Gospell, and so many false opinions spring vp, that very few doe perseuer in the true profission of the Gospell.

We haue here, thankes be given to Almighty God, the woorde of God plentifully taught, we are deliuered out of deepe & great darkenes, but we forgetting the word are made weake, we liue hauing no care of the word, for it is not sauoy vnto vs. But when as hereafter false prophetyts shall breake in with their corrupt opinions, and Satan also shall violently assaile vs, finding vs idle, and the house swapt and garnished, he will bring with him seuen other spirits worse then him self, and the ende shall be worse then the beginning. Whiche thinges if they so fall out, let vs not there-soze be quite discouraged, but let vs rather instruct one an other that we may learne to cleave vnto God, and pray vnto him, and say: Mercifull God, thou hast giuen vnto me to become a Christian, giue vnto me also that I may perseuer, and become daily richer in faith. Albeit the whole wozld did resist, and euery one conspired to destroy the Gospell, yet wil I be nothing moued, but by thy diuine helpe will depend on the Gospell.

They which
beleeue shal taine al good

for.

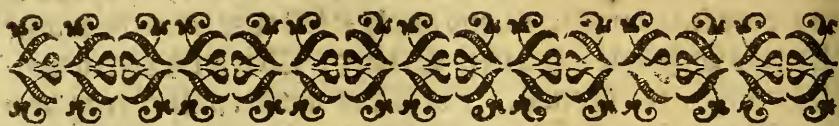

But to returne againe to the Ruler, ye haue heard that his faith was very notable and excellent, he heareth the wozde, thy sonne liueth, he beleeueth it, and goeth away giuing honour to God, he receiueth the only wozd, he trusteth wholy vnto it. Heretofore upō God dealeth so graciously with him, that he restoreth health vnto his sonne, raiseth him vp, and strengthneth him in faith, neither suffereth him to sticke in dout or infirmitie, but establisheth him, and maketh him stronge, and causeth him to goe forward & increase. Neither doth God delay vntill he commeth home, but declareth vnto him being yet in his iorney the helth of his sonne, sending his seruaunts to meeete him, that they might bringe him good newes, and say: thy sonne liueth. For God can not differre or delay, where there is a sincere hart, which trusteth in him alone, all other thinges being left, looking onely vnto the word of God, there God can not hide him selfe, but reuealeth him selfe, & commeth vnto such a hart, & maketh his abode there, as the Lord sayth Ioh. 14. Now what can be more ioyful, then for a man to giue credit to the word of God, & to be plucked from it by no affliction or temptation, but to shut his eyes against every assault of Satan, to lay aside humane sense, vnderstanding, reason, & wisedom, and to say daily in his hart: God hath spoken it, he can not lye. I say nothing is more ioyfull then such a faith. For whatsoeuer we aske of God with such a faith, we receive it more abundantly of him, then euer we desired it, and God is sooner present with vs, then we had thought. Hereupon the Euangelist vseth so many wozdes euene unprofitable, as it appeareth vnto vs, as these: The man beleeuued the word that Iesus had spoken vnto him, and went his wway. And as he vvas now going dovvne, his seruaunts met him, saying, Thy sonne liueth. Then inquired he of them the houre vwhen he began to amend: and they sayd vnto him: Yesterday the seuenth houre the feuer left him. Then the father knew, that it vwas the same houre in the vwhich Iesus sayd vnto him:

him : Thy sonne liueth. All which tende vnto this ende , that we shoud know that if we beleue in the Lord he will giue vs abundantly, whatsoeuer we shall pray vnto him for.

The conclusion the Euangelist maketh as followeth : And he beleued, and all his houshold. He so increased in faith, that he did not onely ascend from a low state to a higher, but he brought others also vnto faith. He had surely an effectuall faith, which did not rest idle and slothfull in the hart, but did breake forth , so that whosoever were in his house were brought vnto faith. For this is The nature plainly the nature of faith, this is the qualitie of it, to drawe others vnto it, to burst forth, and apply it self euuen vnto the worke of loue, as S. Paule witnesseth Galat. 5 : That faith which worketh by loue , is effectuall. For it can not keepe silence or be idle, as David sayth Psal. 116. which place Paule applieth to the faithfull 2. Cor. 4 : I beleued, & therefore haue I spoken. Faith can doe no other, for it is enforced to speake, neither can it keepe silence, iuasmuch as he that is endued with it, endeuoureth to profit his neighbour. This ruler had faith for him selfe , but it doth not remaine in him alone , but breaketh forth . For without all dout he declared to his familie, how he came vnto Christ, and received comfort of him, which they also believed. So we also, when we beleue must open our mouth, and confess the grace , which God hath shewed vnto vs. Which is the chiese and most excellent worke of faith, that one instruct an other in the worde. For Paule sayth Rom. 10 : VVith the hart man beleueth vnto righteousnes, and with the mouth man confesseth to saluation . If we be ashamed of this word, it is a certaine argument of a very light & uncertaine faith. We see therfore that there is no difference with Christ betwene the strong and the weake in faith : for a little faith is faith also . He therefore came into the world that he might receiuē to him selfe, beare and sustaine the weake. If he were so impatient as we be, he would by and by say vnto vs : Get thee from me, I wil none of thee, because thou beleuest not in me. But this is a thing greatly to be commended, when one can handle þ weake gently, and doth not deale rigorously with them, and repell them by impatiencie . For although they be weake to day , the houre may come , when they shall receiuē the word more abundantly then we. Thus we ought to instruct and teach one an other , that we may depend on þ word of God, For if we continue in sticking to the word, we shall be stronge enough for the deuill: for we glory of the word, albeit we be but weake. Unto Satan, who is ablieuen in one houre to ouerthow vs all, all men should be euene a fether; which he would be able to remoue away how and when he will, yea euene with his breath, but if we beleue, that fether is made more heauy unto him then the hill Olympus. For a Christian beareth Christ in him selfe, and Christ is heauier then heauen and earth. Thus much may suffice concerning this text.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, CONCERNING FREE REMISSION OF SINNES TO THE CONTRITE AND BROKEN IN HARRE, and terrible judgement to the in- durate and obstinate.

Matth. 18.

Verse 23.

Esus sayd vnto Peter & to the rest of the Disciples: The kingdom of heauen is likened vnto a certaine King, which would take an accouit of his seruaunts.

24.

And when he had begon to recken, one was brought vnto him, which owed him ten thousand talents.

25.

And because he had nothing to pay, his Lord commaunded him to be solde, and his wife, & his children, and all that he had, and the dette to be payed.

26.

The seruaunt therefore fell downe, and worshipped

- shipped him saying: Lorde refraine thine anger toward me, and I will pay thee all.
27. Then that seruaunts Lord had compassion, & loosed him, and forgaue him the dette.
28. But the same seruant went out, & found one of his fellow seruaunts, which owed him an hundred pence, and he layed handes on him, and thratled him, saying: Pay me that thou owest.
29. Then his fellow seruaunt fel down at his feete, and besought him, saying: Refraine thine anger towards me, and I will pay thee all.
30. Yet he would not, but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the dette.
31. And when his other fellow seruants saw what was done, they were very sory, and came, and declared vnto their Lord all that was done.
32. Then his Lord called him vnto him, and sayd to him: O euill seruaunt, I forgave thee all that dette, because thou prayedst me.
33. Oughtest not thou also to haue had pittie on thy fellow seruant, euen as I had pittie on thee?
34. So his Lord was wrath, and deliuered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due to him.
35. So likewise shall myne heauenly Father doe vnto you, except ye forgiue from your hartes, eche one to his brother their trespasses.

Ihesus Christ brought forth this parable vnto that awnswere which he had made to Sainct Peter, vnto whom he had before committed the keies of binding and loosing. For when S. Peter asked him, howe oft he shold forgiue his brother his offence, whether it were enough to forgiue him seuen times, & he aunswered, not seuen times, but seuentie times.

seuen times, he then added this similitude, by which he inferreth, that his heauenly father will do likewise vnto vs, if we do not forgive our neighbour, even as the King did here vnto the seruaunt, which would not forgive his fellow seruaunt a small det, when as his Lord had forgiue him so much. We haue often times caught that the kingdom of God wherein he reigneth by the Gospell, is nothing els, but such a state or gouernment, wherin is meere forgiuenes of sinnes: so that where such a gouernment is not, wherein sinne is pardoned, neither is there the Gospell nor kingdome. Wherefore those two kingdoms are to be separated: one, wherein sinnes are punished, & an other wherein they are forgiue, or wherein the law is exacted, & wherein that which is due by the lawe, is remitted. In the kingdom of God, where he reigneth by the Gospell, there is no exacting of the lawe, neither any dealing by the law, but onely remission and forgiuenes, neither wrath nor punishing, but brotherly seruice and well doing one to an other. Notwithstanding the ciuill law or Magistrate is not taken away, for this parable speaketh not any thing of worldly gouernment, but of the kingdom of God only. Wherefore he that is yet gouerned onely by the regiment of the world, is yet farre of from the kingdom of heauen, for worldly gouernment pertaineth wholly to inferiour thinges. As if a Prince gouerne his people so, that he suffer iniurie to be done to none, punishing offenders, he doth wel, & is therfore commended. For in that gouernment this sentence flourisheth: Pay that thou owest: which if thou doe not, thou shalt be cast into prisō. Such gouernmēt we must haue, howbeit we come not to heauen by it, neither is the world therefore sauad, but this gouernment is therfore necessary, that the world do not become worse. For it is only a defence & fortification against wickednes, which if it were not, one woulde deuoure an other, neither could any man keepe in safetie his owne life, wife, goods, children, &c. That therfore all things should not fal, come to ruine, and perish, God hath appointed the sword of the Magistrate, whereby wickednes may be partly repelled, peace and quietnes among men maintained, & one may not doe an other iniurie, wherefore this is in any wise to be kept. But, as I sayd, it is not ordained for them that are in the kingdom of grace, but therfore onely, that men be not more deeplē plunged in wickednes, and become worse.

Wherefore no man that is onely vnder the regiment of the world,

world, ought to glory, that he doth therefore well before God, before whom all is yet unrighteous. For thou must come so farre, that thou do resigne that which is iust before the world, & yeeld of thine owne right. This the Gospele doth here require, which on either side setteth forth vnto vs onely forgiuenes. First the Lord forgiueth the seruaunt all the deete: then he requireth of him, that he forgiue his fellow seruaunt his, and remit his offence. These thinges God requireth, and so must his kingdom be ordered: that no man be so wicked, neither suffer him selfe so to be moued, that he can not forgiue his neighbour. And as it is a litle before this text caught in the Gospel, if he shold prouoke thee to anger even seenty times seuen times, that is as ofte as he can offend against thee, thou must yeeld of thine owne right, and cheerfully forgiue him all thinges. Why so? because Christ did the same. For he set vp & erected such a kingdom, as wherein is onely grace, which must at no time ceasse, so that if thou repent all things may wholly be forgiuen thee, as often as thou shalt offend, soasmuch as he hath ordained the Gospele, that it might preach no punishment but onely grace & forgiuenes of sinnes. This kingdom standing, thou mayst alwaies rise again, how deepeley soever thou fallest, & so often as thou fallest, so as thou repent. For albeit thou fallest, yet this Gospele & mercie seate alwaies continueth. As soone as therfore thou hast risen againe & returned, thou hast grace restored. Howebeit he requireth this of thee, that thou also forgiue thy neighbour all things, which he hath committed against thee, otherwise thou shalt not be in this kingdō of grace, neither shalt becōe partaker of þ which þ Gospele preacheþ, that thy sinnes may be forgiuen thee. This briesly is the summe & meaning of this text.

Moreover, we must not here omit, to declare who they be that receive the Gospele, and vnto whom it is acceptable. For surely that kingdom and gouernment, wherin God reigneth and ruleth by the Gospele, is most excellent and gentle, soasmuch as in it meere forgiuenes of sinnes is preached, howebeit it pearseth not into the hart of euery one, neither is it considered or esteemed of all. For thou mayst finde many light and unconstant men, who abuse the Gospele, and leade their life dissolutely and loosely, doing what they list, who thinke that they shold be rebuked of none, seeing that the Gospel teacheth nothing but forgiuenes of sinnes. The Gospele is not preached to these, who do so viley esteeme of a precious treasure, and deale lightly with it. Wherefore neither doe they pertaine to this kingdom but to worldly gouernment, that they may be stopped & let from doing whatsoeuer they like and list. To whom then is it preached? to them which throughtly feele such miserie, as this seruaunt did here. Wherefore consider what happeneth vnto him: The Lord taketh pitie of his miserie, for giueth him more then he durst desire. But before this is done, the text sayth, the Lord first tooke account of his seruaunts, and when he began to recken, one was brought vnto him, which owed him ten thousand talents: and because he had nothing to pay, his Lord commaunded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and the dette to be payed. Which truely were no pleasant wordes, but euuen exceeding seuerarie and most terrible iudgement, then is he brought into so great perplexitie and distresse, that he falleth downe on the ground, and asketh mercie, and promiseth more then he hath, or is able to pay, saying: Lord restraine thyne anger toward me, and I will pay thee all.

The preaching of the law.

Here is set forth vnto vs, who they be, vnto whom the Gospell is acceptable. For so commeth it to passe betwene God and vs. When God will take an account of vs, he sendeth forth the preaching of his law, whereby we learne to know what we ought to doe: as when God sayth to the conscience: Thou shalt worship no other God, but shalt acknowledge me alone for God, shalt loue me with all thine hart, and repose thy trust and hope in me onely. This is the booke of accounts, wherein is written what we owe, whiche he taking into his hands, readeth before vs, and sayth. Lo, this thou oughtest to haue done, thou oughtest to feare, loue, and worship me alone, thou oughtest to trust in me alone, and from me to promise to thy selfe all good thinges. Howbeit thou doost otherwise, thou art mine aduersarie, thou beleeuest not in me, but reposes thy trust in other things: and in a summe, thou seest here, that thou doost not obserue so much as the least point of the lawe. When the conscience hath heard these thinges, and the law hath touched one well, he seeth then what he ought to doe, and what he hath not done, and findeth that he hath not kept so much as a letter of the law, and is compelled to confesse, that he hath not performed that obedience and dutie which God iustly requireth of him. What doth the Lord now? When thy conscience is thus touched, and seeleth it selfe condemned, and is distressed with exceeding ding great miserie, he sayth: Sell him, and whatsocuer he hath, and let him pay the det. This is the iudgement, which forþwith followeth, when the law hath reuealed sinne, and sayd: This thou must doe, that thou oughtest to haue done, and thou hast done nothing thereto: for to sinne is required punishment, that man may be compelled to pay. For God hath not so made his lawe, that he doth not punish them that transgresse it. It is not sweete & pleasant, but bringeth bitter and horriblie paine with it, it deliuereþ vs to Satan, it casteth vs downe to hell, and leaueth vs wrapped in temptation, vntill we haue payed the vtmost farring. This S. Paule hath notably well declared Rom. 4, where he sayth: The law worketh nothing but wrath. That is, when it reuealeþ unto vs, that we haue done vnjustly, it setteth nothing before vs, but wrath & indignation. For when the conscience seeth that it hath committed euill, it feeleth that it hath deserued eternall death, after which followeth punishment, whereupon it is compelled to despeire.

This is that that the Lorde commaundeth this seruaunt togidher with all his substance to be solde, forasmuch as he is not able to pay. But what doth the seruaunt say? the foolish fellow thinketh yet, that he shall pay the dette, he falleth downe and prayeth that he wil haue patience with him. This is the wound and croſſe of all consciences, that when sinne bitteth them so, that they feele in how euill case they are before God, there is no rest in them, but they runne hither and thither, seeking about, that they may be deliuered from sinnes, & rashly take vpon them as yet to do so great thinges, as wherewith they shall pay God, as we hitherto haue Superstitious bene instructed, whereupon came so many pilgrimages, collegiate houses, Monasteries, Masses, & other trifles. We pyned our selues with fasting, we scourged our selues with whippes, we were made Monkes and Nunnes, therefore onely, for that we went about to leade such a life, and to do such and so many works, as whereunto God might haue respect, and thereby be pacified, thinking so to appease and make quiet our consciences, so we committed the same thinges that this foolish fellow did. Such a hart as is touched with the lawe, & thoroughly feeleth it owne miserie and calamitie, is humbled truely and in deepe. Whereupon it falleth downe before the Lord and craueth mercy. Howbeit it is yet besiled with this vice, that it striueth to helpe it selfe, which thinge can not be taken away from nature. When as the conscience feeleth such miserie, it dar eth presume to promise more then all the Angells in heauen are able to performe. Then is it an easie matter to persuade it to apply it selfe to doe , whatsoeuer can be required of it. For it findeth it selfe alwayes in such a case, that it hopeth that it is able by workes to satisfie for sinnes. Consider those thinges which haue bene hitherto of longe time done in the world, then shalt thou find these thinges to be so : For thus was it preached : Giue somewhat to the building of a Church: Get to be admitted into an holy Monasterie, institute Masses ; and thy sinnes shall be forgiuen thee . And when consciences were urg'd in confession, they would not sticke to say : Whatsoeuer was enioyned vs, we haue omitted nothing of it, yea we haue giuen more then we were commaunded. Miserable men rejoiced that by this meanes they might prouide for them selues , and thereforee they pyned and afflicted them selues , that they might be vnburdened of their sinnes, yet did it pruaile them nothing . For the conscience remained in dout as before ; that it knewe not how it stode before God. But if it were secure and quiet, it fell into that which is worse, to thinke that God hath respect vnto workes , neither can reason doe any other but depend of works. The Lord therfore is touched w affection of mercy toward that misery, wherewith thy seruaunt so entangled & snared w sinnes, is holden, & taking pittie vpon him, doth forgiue and dimisse him. Here is now set forth vnto vs, what is thy special office & qualitie of thy gospel, & how God dealeth with vs. When thou art so drowned in sinnes, & weariest thy self, that thou mayst deliuier thy selfe from them, the Gospell commeth to thee, & sayth : Doe not so deare brother, it pruaileth nothing, although thou afflict and torment thy selfe euē til thou be mad, thy works do not profit, but the mercy of God shall deliuier thee. who is touched with thy miserie : for he seech thee w apparelled in calamite, & wearyng thy self, that thou mayst deliuier thy selfe out of the myre, & yet art not able : he, I say, hath regard vnto this, that thou art not able to pay, wherupon he forgiueth thee all, and that of his meere mercie . For he doth not forgiue thee the dette eyther for thy workes or merits , but for that he taketh pittie vpon thy crie, complainte and mourning, and thy falling downe before his knees : that is, God hath respect to an humbled hart , as the Prophet sayth Psal.51 : The sacrifice of God is a troubled troubled spirit: a broken & contrite hart, O God, shalst thou not despise. Such a hart he saith, as is broken and humbled, which is not able to helpe it selfe, but craueth the helpe of God, and rejoiceth in it, such a heart is an acceptable sacrifice to God, and he that hath it is in the right way to heauen. Now God having shewed this mercy vnto him, and taken pitie on his miserie, ceaseth to followe his right, and abrogateth it, and sayth no more: Sell whatsoeuer thou hast and pay the dette: although he might go forward and say: Thou must paye, for this my lawe requireth, which I will not haue abrogated for thy sake: yet will he not deale with him by the lawe, but chaungeþ the lawe into grace and fauour, taketh pittie on him, and dimisseth him with his wife, chilðen, and all his substance, and doþ also forgiue him the dette.

This is that which God suffereth to be preached by the Gospell: vnto him that beleueþ is remitted not onely the fault, but also the punishment, and that of meere mercy, not for any works sake. For he that preacheth, that by woþes the fault and the punishment may be put awaie, hath euен then denied the Gospell, Mercy and forasmuch as these two can not agree togither, that God hath merit ca not mercy on thee, and yet that thou doest merit some thinge. For agree togither if it be grace, it is not merit: but if it be merit, then shall it not ther be grace, but dette: for if thou pay thy dette, he sheweth thee no mercy: but if he sheweth thee mercy, thou doest not make payement. Wherfore we must needes acknowledge his mercie toward vs, we must receive of him, and beleue in him, which the Gospell here requireth. After therefore that this seruaunt is thus humbled with the knowledge of his synne, the word is exceeding comfortable vnto him, wherein the Lord pronounceth him free, and forgiueth him both the fault and the punishment. Wherby is also declared, that it toucheth not sluggish hearts, that feele no synne, neither those that are carried with rashnes, but onely such afflicted consciences, as are pressed with the heauie burden of profiteþ their synnes, which do greatly desire to be deliuered from them, of them God hath mercy, and forgiueth them all. Wherfore it behoued this seruaunt to receive the word, for vntles he had received it, forgiuernes had profited nothing, nay there had bene no forgiuenes at all. It is not therefore enough, that God suffereth remission of synnes, and a golden yeare full of grace to be preached vnto vs, but it is necessarie that we receiue and beleue it in heart. If thou beleue, thou art free from synnes. This is the first part of a Christian life, which both this place and diuers other in the Gospels do teach vs, which consisteth properly in faith, which alone hath to do before God; whereby also is shewed that the Gospele can not be received but of a troubled and miserable conscience.

Herupon now may be inferred that they are plaine delusions, whatsoeuer thinges are any otherwise taught concerning our workes, and free will, to wit, that they put away synnes, and obtaine grace. For the diuine maiestie alone, beholding our miserie, hath pittie vpon vs, for the text sheweth manifestly, that God pardoneth and forgiueth them, that haue nothing, and concludeth that we haue nothing left, wherewith we may pay God. Howsoeuer therefore thou hast free will in temporall matters, yet thou hearest here that it is nothing before God. Wherfore if thou desire to be deliuered from thy synnes, thou must ceasse to trust in any of thy workes, and must plainly despeire concerning them, and flie vnto Christ, pray vnto God for grace; finally receive the Gospele by faith.

Now followeth the other part, wherein the felow seruaunt also is delt with. This seruaunt now hath enough, he saueth his body, goods, wife, children, &c. and hath his Lord fauourable vnto him. Wherfore he shoulde surely be very foolish, if he shoulde now depart, and do what he is able for the reconciliation of his Lord, for his Lord might worthely say that he is mocked of him. He hath neede therefore of no worke, but that he receiue such grace & fauour as is offered him, so may he be of a good cheere, giuing thankes to his Lord, and dealing so with others as his Lord hath delt with him. After the same sort is it with vs, for when we beleue, we haue God fauourable & mercisfull vnto vs, neither do we neede any thing more, but now it were time that we shoulde forthwith die. Notwithstanding if we must as yet liue still in the earth, our life ought to be ordered so, that we seeke not to obtaine the fauour of God by workes. For he that doth this, doth mocke & dishonour God, as it hath bin hitherto taught, that God is to be sollicited so long by good workes, prayers, fastings, & such like, vntill we obtaine his grace and fauour. We haue obtained grace, not by workes, but by mercy, now if thou must lise, thou must haue what to doe, and wherewith to occupie thy selfe, and it is meete that all this be referred to thy neighbour.

The seruaunt went out, as Christ sayth, and found his fellow seruaunt, whome he taketh by the throte and dealeth rigorously with him, and will be wholy payd of him, shewing him no mercy or fauour at all. I haue said elsewhere, that Christians must burst forth by workes, & by their deedes before men witnes that they haue a syncere faith. God needeth no workes, but faith suffizeth him, howbeit he therefore requireth them to be done of thee, that by them thou mayst shew thy faith, both before thy selfe and also before the whole world, for he knoweth thy faith verie well, but thou thy selfe and men do not yet throughly see it. Thou therefore must direct such workes so, that they may profit thy neighbour. Now whereas this seruaunt shold thus haue done, what doth he ? euen the same that we doe, who seeme vnto our selues to be leeue, and partly haue faith, and are glad that we haue heard the Gospell, whereof we can dispisce and talke many thinges, but no Busie talkers man goeth about to expresse it in his life. We haue brought the & slow walkers. matter so farre, that the doctrine and trifles of Satan are some what abated and layde asyde, that we do now see and know, what is iust, and what vnjust : that we must haue to do with God by onely faith, and by workes with our neighbour. But we can not bring it to this passe, that loue may beginne, and doe that to an other which God hath done vnto vs, as we our selues complaine, that many of vs are become worse then they were before. As therefore this seruaunt refused to remit his neighbour the dette, and delt extremely with him, so also doe we, saying : It is not meete that I shold giue that that is myne to an other, neglecting myne owne right. If this man hath prouoked me to anger, it is his dutie to pacifie me, & to labour by intreatie to put away myne anger. Truly thus the world teacheth and doth, for it af-firmeth it to be iust and right. Neither will any Prince or magistrate enforce thee to giue that which is thine to an other, but wil suffer thee to do what pleaseth thee with thine owne goods. The magistrate in deede restrayneth thee from doinge what thou list with the good of an other, but he constraineth thee not to giue thine owne substance to an other, for that is against the Lawe of nations, which euern reason pronouncing it, giuereth to euerie one that which is his owne : wherefore he doth not vnequally or vnjustly , which bleseth his owne thinges at his will , & taketh not away wrongfully the goods of an other.

But what doeth the Gospell saye ? If God also had held his owne right, and sayd : I do well in that I punish offenders , and take that which is myne owne , who shall let me ? what I pray

We must be you shoulde become of all vs ? We shoulde be thrust downe to Ha-mercifull to tan. Wherefore, whereas he hath left his right toward thee , he our brethren will haue thee do the same toward other : and therefore thou ab-as God is mercifull to rogating thyne owne right , thinke thus with thy selfe : If God vs. hath forgiuen me tenne thousand talents , why shoulde not I forgive my neighbour an hundred pence ? God might haue exacted his owne right , neuerthelesse he dothe not soe , but becommeth a fauourable Lorde unto thee , taketh pittie vpon thee , and forgiuethe thee : why therefore shouldest not thou doe likewise to thy neighbour ? Wherefore if thou wilt haue to doe in his kingdome, thou must doe as he doeth : but if thou haddest rather remaine in the kingdome of the worlde, thou shalt never enter into his kingdome. Hereunto pertaineth that sentence, which

Matth. 25.

Christ in the last daye shall pronounce vpon the vnbelieuers : I was an hungred , and ye gaue me no meate : I thirsted , and ye gaue me no drinke , &c. But if thou contend hereagainst : Notwithstanding ye say , that God will not haue respect unto woxkes , neither will saue any because of them. I saye he will haue them done frankly and freely , not that we may merit any thing thereby , but that we may doe them to the profit of our neighbours , and witness our sincere sayth by them. For what hast thou that thou mayst giue him , and whereby thou mayst deserue that he should pardon whatsoeuer thou hast committed against him ? Or what doth he get thereby ? nothing truely , but that thou giuest vnto him praise and thanks. And this is the other part of a Chi-llian life , the name whereof is lone .

They therefore that shew not their faith by the woxks of loue , are such seruaunts , as will haue themselues forgiuen , when as they notwithstanding doe not forgiue their neighbour , neither yeeld of their owne right , with whom it shall likewise fall out as it did with this seruaunt. For when the other seruaunts (that is , the ministers and preachers of the Gospell) shall see it , that God hath forgiuen them all , and yet they will not forgiue any , they are troubled, that they are compelled to ~~see~~ such thinges, and it grieueth them verie soze, that men doe so vndiscreetly apply themselves to the Gospell, and not rightly receiue it. What doe they then? They can do no other, but come to their Lord, and complaine vnto him of such thinges, and say: Lord, thus it is: thou forgiuest them both the fault and the punishment, yea pardonest them all thinges, and yet we can not bring them so farre as to deale so with others as thou hast delt with them: This is the complaint: the Lord therefore will cause them to come before him in the last iudgement, and will lay these thinges against them saying: when thou wast afflicted with hunger, thirst, miserie, &c: I did helpe thee: when thou diest ly drowned in synnes, I having mercy vpon thee, did forgiue thee. Hast thou done the same to thy neighbour? Then he shall pronounce this sentence on him: Thou wicked one, I was touched with mercy toward thee, yea I yeelde of myne owne right, but thou wouldest not take pittie on others, nor forgiue them their offence, wherefore thou shalt now pay thy dette. Here is no grace and mercy, but most grieuous wrath and eternall condemnation, then no prayers di helpe; wherefore he is compelled to holde his peace, and is throwne hedlong into paine, vntill he pay the uttermost farthinge. This is that which Sanct Peter hath spoken of them, which after they haue heard the Gospell, notwithstanding goe backe, that it had bin better for them, if they had never acknowledged the waye of righeteousnes, then after they haue acknowledged it, to turke from the holy commandement giuen vnto them. Why had it bin better? Because while they goe backe, it becometh worse with them then it was before thy heard the Gos-pell, as Christ sayth of the unclean spirit Matth. 12, which taketh vnto himselfe seuen other spirits worse then himselfe, with which he commeth, and dwelleth in that man, out of whom he before had gone, and so the end of that man is worse then the beginning. After the same maner commeth it to passe with vs, and shal hereafter also be vsuall: so also hath it fallen out with Rome. In the time of the Martyrs she was in her best flower, but afterward she fell, and abomination was there erected, that Antichrist might reigne there, yea she became such a one, that worse she can not be. The grace of God, which is reuealed and preached by the Gospel, was hidde, that men might not attaine vnto it; where-soze it could not be, but a great and grieuous scourge and plague shoulde follow.

So we also shall trie that great vengeance will come vpon vs, for that we do not beleue nor obey the Gospell, which we haue, and know. For as often as God would send an horrible scourge and plague, he hath first set vp a great light: As when he would send the Jewes out of their owne countrie into captiuitie in Babylon, he first raised vp the godly King Hossa, who shoulde again restore the law, that the people might amend their life, but when they did againe revolt, God punished them according to their deserte. So when he mynded to destroy the Egyptians, he made a light to be set vp, and preached vnto them by Moses and Aaron: Moreouer when he would drowne all the world by the flood, he sent the Patriarch Noe, but when men did not amende, but became worse and worse, such a sore and grieuous plague did follow. Likewise the fwe cities Sodome and Gomora togither with the rest were destroyed, for that they would not heare Lot, who feared God. Wherefore as sharpe vengeance shall light vpon them also, which heare the Gospell, but do not receive it: euен as the seruaunt here in the Gospell, is deliuered to the tormentours till he shoulde pay all the dette: which is as much in effect as, that he is compelled to suffer punishment for his fault, and is neuer saued. For vnto synne is required death, and when he dieth, he dieth alwayes, neither is there any helpe or deliuerance remaining. Wherefore let vs receue these thinges for our owne admonition: as for them that will not heare, being harde ned and indurate, let them beware of the euell that hangeth ouer them.

This is a verie comfortable text, and sweete to troubled consciences, inasmuch as it containeth in it meere forgiuenes of sinnes: Againe it setteth forth terrible iudgement to the unmerciful & hard hearted, especially seeing that this seruaunt is not an Heathen, but had heard the Gospell, in that he had faith: insasmuch as the Lord tooke pittie on him, and forgave him his offences, without doute he was a Christian. Wherefore this is not the punishment of Gentiles, nor of the common sort that heare not the Gospell, but of them that with their eares heare the Gospell, and with their tonge talke of it, but will not expresse it in their life. We haue therefore the summe of this text. Whereas the Scholemen dispute here, whether synne commeth againe, which was before remitted, I let it passe, for they are ignorant what remission of synnes is: they thinke it is a thing that cleaueth to the hart, and lyeth quietly, when as notwithstanding it is plainly the kingdome of Christ, which endureth for euer without ceassing. For as the sunne nevertheles shineth, although I shut myne eyes: so this mercy seat or forgiuenes of synne standeth alwayes, albeit I fall. And as I againe behold the sunne when I open myne eyes: so I againe haue forgiuenes of synnes, if I rysle againe, and returne vnto Christ. Wherefore let no man bring forgiuenes into such a straite, as these made me dzeame of.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LUTHER, TEACHING THAT WE MVST CLEAVE WHOLY to Christ, and looke to obtaine all good things through him.

Matth. 9.

- Verse 18.  Hile Iesus spake vnto the people, behold there came a certaine ruler, and worshipped him, saying: My daughter is now deceased, but come and lay thine hand on her and she shall liue.
19. And Iesus arose and folowed him with his discipiles.
20. And behold, a womā which was diseased with an issue of blood twelue yeares, came behinde him, and touched the hemme of his garment.

21. For she said in her selfe, if I may touch but his garment onely, I shalbe whole.
22. Then Iesus turned him about, and seeing her, did say: Daughter, be of good comfort, thy fayth hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole in that same moment.
23. Now when Iesus came into the rulers house, and saw the minstrels and the multitude making noyse, 24. He sayd vnto them, Get you hence: for the mayde is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorne.
25. And when the multitude were put forth, he went in, and tooke her by the hand, and the mayde arose.
26. And this bruit went throughout all that land.

Dearly beloved, ye know that the Gospell is nothing els, but a treatise of the onely person, whose name is Christ. And albeit there be extant many bookes & sundrie treatises cōcerning diuers men, as well of the Gentiles as Christians, yea and of the mother of God, S. Peter, the Angels, and of many other Saincts besyde: yet be they not Gospels, but that onely is the syncere Gospell, whiche setteth forth Christ vnto vs, and what good we must hope for frō him. Sometime in the Gospell there is mention made of John the Baptist, Marie, and the Apostles, howbeit this is not properly the Gospell, but therefore is it written of them, that it might be more perfectly declared, frō whence Christ should come, and what is his office. So Luke describeth the historie of John the Baptist euen from the beginning, what was done both in his conception and in his nativitie, he writeth also of the virgine Marie. All whiche thinges were committed to writing not because of their person, but because of Christes person onely. In the Epistles of S. Paule there is nothing committed to memorie of the Saincts, but all thinges sound plainly of Christ. For God hath so ordained, that all men must depend pend on that one man Christ, must hope in him, must repose All that will their trust in him, if they desire to be saued, for he alone is set forth of God to be a reconciliation for vs, as Paule sayth Rom. 3. Hitherto one hath cleaved to this saint, an other to that, one chose to himselfe S. Marie, an other S. Barbarie, and divers sectes and sortes of religion did flourish. But Christ was in no p[ri]ce, for his name onely remained. We had many intercessours, all which being neglected we ought to haue cleaves onely to Christ. Hereupon S. Paule sayth, that the Gospell was promised of God by the Prophetes concerning his sonne. He reduceth and bringeth it into such a streight, that in the Gospell nothing is of any importance which concerneth not Jesus Christ. He that knoweth this, let him giue thankes to God, that he knoweth where he may seeke for consolation and helpe, and in whom he may repose his trust.

Christ in this dayes Gospell is set forth vnto vs, that he is conuersaunt in the myddest of the people, and draweth all the world vnto himselfe with his gentlenes and sweete doctrine, that they maye cleave vnto him in their heart, that they maye commit themselues to his goodnes, and hope that they shall obtaine of him both spirituall and corporall good thinges. Neither dothe he receiue any thinge of them, vpon whom he bestoweth benefites, nay he obtaineth nothing of them but ignominie and scorning, as is declared in this text. A benefite proceedeth from him, for which he receiueth a mocke and reproch. Nowe the Gospell is preached and offered to the whole world, that we may learne to know this man well, and how we must be made Christians, and not how we must be made good. Other creatures besyde the Gospell teach of those thinges, whereby men may be made good, as the writinges of the Philosophers and the rules of the ciuill lawe. The liues also of the Saincts haue especiall respecte vnto this, that men may imitate them. It belongeth not to the Gospell to make good men, but to make Christian men. For it is farre more excellent to be a Christian, then an honest and good man. A Christian can say nothing of his owne goodnes or righteousnes, for he syndeth in himselfe nothing either good or righteous, but he must flie to the righteousness which is an others, and which commeth vnto him from an other. Hereupon Christ is sette forth vnto vs, as a conti-

nuall fountaine, which alwayes overfloweth with meere godesnes and grace, for which he receiueth nothinge of vs, but that the godly do acknowledge so great goodnes and grace, doe giue him thankes for the same, doe prayse and loue him, others in the meane season mocking him, such a reward he receiueth of them.

A Christian
whereof so called.

Wherfore one is not therefore called a Christian, for that he worketh much, for there is an other thinge, which is cause hereof, namely for that he receiueth and draweth from Christ. If one receiueth nothinge any more of Christ, neither is he any more a Christian, so that the name of a Christian commeth onely by receiuing, and not by giuing or doing. If thou thinke that because of thy workes and deedes thou art a Christian, thou hast euē then lost the name of Christ. Good workes in deede are to be done, counsell thereunto is to be giuen and received, but no man is therefore called a Christian, neither is any therefore a Christian. Wherfore if any will more inwardly weye this name, in this respect onely a Christian is to be acknowledged, inasmuch as he receiueth of Christ alone. Euen as one is called white of the whitenes that is in him, blacke of the blacknes, great of his stature: so a Christian is called of Christ, whom he hath in himselfe, and of whom he receiueth that which is good. Now if one be named a Christian of Christ, he taketh not that name of his owne workes, whereupon it plainly also foloweth, that no man is made a Christian by workes. Which if it be true, as it is true and certaine, it shall folow that Ordres and Sects doe nothinge pertaine to the name of Christ, neither doe make a Christian. Wherfore they which preach or teach in the Church, and ordaine preceptes, workes, and decrees, are deceiuers, who albeit they pretend a Christian name, yet profuse they nothinge, for vnder the colour of that name they endeuour to burden and oppres vs with commaundements and workes. Of workes, giuing thy selfe to fasting and prayers, thou mayest be called abstinent and temperat, but by no meanes a Christian. For although thou didest laye all thy workes togither, yea and ioynedst the works of all other to thine, yet neither so hast thou Christ, neither art thou therefore called a Christian. Christ is a certaine other more excellent thinge, then either the lawe or mans tradition. He is the sonne of God, who is ready to giue onely, onely, not to receiue : when as I am such a one that I do receive of him, I haue him also, whom if I haue, I am by good right called a Christian.

Moreover, the Gospel preacheth Christ also to be the greatest and most highly exalted person in the wold, not that he doth ter-rifie men, but that he poureth forth all earthly and heauenly good chinges, so that all men must trust in him, must haue their hope repos'd in him, and alwayes receiue onely of him. If any synne terrifie me in my conscience, and the preachers of the lawe endeavour to helpe me with their workes, they shall preuaile no-thinge with me. For then Christ alone can helpe and none besyde him, yea others make the case worse, whether it be Peter, or Paule, or the blessed virgine Marie her selfe the mother of God. For Christ onely perfourmeth all chinges, who in his word, declareth that if I beleue, my synne is forgiuen me freely, without all both worke and merit, by pure grace through sayth in Christ. Which word when I shall receiue, I receiue also comfort, that my synnes be forgiuen me as well before God as before men, and I therefore giue thankes to God through Christ, which giueth the holy Ghost and his grace vnto me, that sinne may not hurt me, neither here, nor in the last iudgement.
If I feare death, and would not die willingly, in this Christ I shall finde comfort and remedie, that I shall not greatly passe for death. If because of the wrath of God I be afraid, he is my Mediator. And to be briefe, he that hath not this Christ, the wrath of God alwaies remaineth ouer him, and in that state he standeth.

Wherefore he that desireth to haue a glad conscience, which A glad con-is not afraid of sinne, death, hell and the wrath of God, must take science how heede that he repose his trust in this Mediator Christ. For he is it is obtai-a fountaine abounding with grace, which giueth both temporall ned. and eternall life. Endeavour thou to thinke and seele him euen in thy hart to be such a one, then shalt thou obtaine all chinges, for he aboundeth and overfloweth, neither can he but give, flowe, and abound, if that thou canst beleue. Then also shalt thou be a right Christian, howbeit by receiuing onely of Christ, and not by giuing. It is a verie rich and precious word, which Paule prayseth so greatly, neither can he euer prayse it sufficiently, whereby God so gently offereith his sonne, that he maye poure for the his grace vpon all, which doe not refuse to receiue it. Hereupon it moreouer foloweth: If soe be that a Christian doeth good woxkes, whereby he sheweth loue to his neighbour, he is not therefore made a Christian or righteous, but he must needes be a Christian and righteous before. He doeth good woxkes in deede, but they doe not make him a Christian. The tree bringeth forth and giueth fruite, and not the fruite the tree. Soe none is made a Christian by woxkes, but by Christ.

Christians
what they are.

Heresof now ye may understand, what kynde of people Christians be, namely, that they be a company whiche cleaueth unto Christ, and are of one spirit and giste with him. Hereupon it is that all Christians are alike, neither hath one more of Christ then an other. S. Peter is not better then the Theefe on the crosse: Marie the mother of God doth not excell Marie Magdalene the synnesfull woman. There is in deede a difference in outward thinges and doinges, so the worke of the holy virgin Marie was greater, then the worke of Marie Magdalen: Peter had a greater worke then the Theefe, if thou consider the works, but we are not therefore Christians. The holy virgine Marie is not a Christian because of her great worke, for that she did beare Christ so unspeakeable a treasure in her wombe, as Christ himselfe said to the woman, which cried vnto him from among the people, Luke 11: Blessed is the wombe that bare thee, and the pappes which thou hast sucked: yea rather, sayth he, blessed are they that heare the worde of God and keepe it. In which place thou seest, that he preferreth the faithfull euen above his mother. For Christians do therefore bear their name, because they beleue in Christ. A virgine and a mother are two notable names, howbeit they are nothinge being compared to the true name of the faithfull. Wherefore we are all alike in Christ through faith, albeit S. Peter haue a stronger faith then I, yet myne is as well fayth in Christ as his. For the same Christ is offered of God the father vnto all compaines and people, whom he that hath obtained, hath him whole, whether he be strong or weake, for that skilleth not. The woman mentioned in our text, which was troubled so many yeares with her disease, dothe receive and apprehend Christ as well as the virgine Marie his mother. Wherefore there is one Christian spirite, one excelleth with an other in the noblenes of bryth, S. Peter is enforced to call me his brother, and I againe deare be bolde to call him my brother. Yea Christ himselfe is touched with care of vs, and counteth vs for his brethen, as he saide after his resurrection to Marie Magdalen, Joh. 20: I ascende vnto my Father and to your Father, and to my God and your God.

And S. Paule calleth Christ the first borne among many brethren. Whereof also he writteh excellently in the first Epistle to the Corinthians, where entreating of false brethen he speaketh thus: Take heede lest by any meanes this power of yours ^{1. Cor. 8.9.} be an occasion of falling to them that are weake. For if any man see thee which hast knowledge, sitt at table in the idols temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weake, be boldened to eate those thinges which are sacrificed to idols? and so through thy knowledge shall the weake brother perish, for whom Christ died. Now when ye sinne so against your brethren, and wounde their weake conscience, ye sinne against Christ. Here thou seest, if a Christian be offended, or euell be done vnto hym, the same is done vnto Christ. This therefore is the summe of the whole Gospell, that we maye learne The summe so to knowe Christ, that the name onely doe not remayne, but of the Gos-that we maye knowe that all that we haue, we haue it from pell.
him. If we be Christians, we haue all thinges, then God is our father, and we are Lordes of all both heauenly and earthly thinges, which is gooten of vs by no worke be it never so great.

Thou seest nowe how farre they be from the name of Christ, which be vnder the kingdom of the Pope. They that will preach the Gospell must preach nothing els, besyde the onely person which is Christ, not Marie, so farre must they be from preaching the Pope or any worke albeit precious, they must preach & offer Christ onely vnto vs, & none besyde hym. When now he is preached vnto thee as a iudge (as he shalbe come in the last day) and how that good workes are to be done of thee, for which thou mayst be rewarded of him, & thou shal so receive it, surely without all dout he shalbe vnto thee a iudge and not a saviour. And if he be so set forth vnto thee, as he was wont to be painted, that his mother sheweth him her pappes, that is properly to preach Satan and not Christ, who giveth onely, and receiueth not. This is certaine, when thou shalt have received of him, the good workes do flow forth of their owne accord, being not compelled, as is set forth in this dayes Gospell: wherein moreouer is declared that Christ preacheth the Gospell to the people: now it is not a common worke to preach. For it is a great benefit vnto vs, that he is become our maister and instruer, that he teacheth vs by what meanes we may come to the knowledge of him, this is a parte of his great goodnes and grace. For as long as he was here in the earth, he cessed not to teach, that we might altogether receive him for the Messias and Saviour: and by his workes also did helpe and relieue enerie one, when the case so required.

The exceeding gentlenes and bountifullnes of Christ.

Luke 6. 19.

Thou syndest no man in the Gospell, to whom helpe was denied, or which at any time asked any thinge of the Lord, which was not giuen him. For how many soever went vnto him, that were blynde, deafe, lame, sicke of the palsey, had the drospie, he receiued all, and helped them all according to their desire, and healed them of all kindes of diseases, as Luke sayth: All the whole multitude sought to touch him, for there went verue out of him, and healed them all. So doeth he also to this woman. The woman heareth him preaching, and perceiuech him to be a bountifull and gracious man, which sheweth himselfe gentle to the whole worlde, whereupon she hath an affection both to loue him, and to cleave vnto him. For she maketh accompt, so as much as he purseth awaye none from him, that he would not denie her his goodnes, wherefore leauing all the Apostles, she casteth both her hearte and confidence vpon Christ alone, and thinketh thus with her selfe: If I may touch but the hemme of his garment, I shalbe whole. She thought no other thinge in her heart, but, certainly he will helpe me, if so be that I shall touch his garment with myne hand, yet hath she nor so good a corage, that she dare come before his face, she iudged her selfe moare unworthie; then thas she might either talke with him, or looke vpon him, for she knew that she hadde deserved nothing, and that she had bestowed no good thinge vpon the Lord, hereupon it is that she so behaueth her selfe, she cometh behynde his backe, she falleth downe at his feete, and toucheth ouely the hemme of his garment. In a summe, here is nothing but meere bashfulnes and want of merit: here is no preparation, here is no worke, and and yet the miserable woman promiseth her selfe much goodnes from the Lord, namely that he woulde heale her. She had bin diseased with an issue of blood twelue whole yeares, what could she merite thereby? how could she therefore be worthy of any thinge? Neuerthelesse being unworshie, and hauing merited nothing, she notwithstanding looketh for helpe of Christ, feeling her selfe to haue great neede thereof. And this is a true preparation, both to the grace and goodnes of Christ, when I feele my selfe to stand in neede thereof, and then doth it verie well fall out, when these two come togither, the rich and the pooze, Christ and the synner. But it is no small matter for men to be perswaded, that they are pooze, and stand in neede of grace. For that conimeth to passe verie hardly, Satan also doth not suffer it, but always draweth men backe to workes, that they may not come so farre, as to thinke that they haue neede either of the grace or mercy of Christ.

The text affirmeth that the woman was diseased with an issue of blood twelue whole yeares, and had spent all her substanciall vpon phisicians, and that the more medicines she tooke, the worse always she was. Luke and Marke do not a litle exaggerate and amplifie it; whereby they both signifie, that the more workes be preached, so much the worse is it with vs, and that there commeth nothing unto vs thereby, but a continuall multiplying of our euell. Our conscience can not be quieted with workes, for albeit some synne be driven out of the conscience, forthwith there is an other, yea the remedy and work oftentimes do make synne in vs, where there is no synne, vntill such time as we come to Christ, eue as it was w^t this woman, which had bin sick so long, neither had she bin euer helped, if she had not come to Christ, of whom she obtaineth helth without any workes, giuing him nothing; but receiueth onely of him, and suffreth to be giuen vnto her. Nowe here is also declared, how the word of God is preaching of dayly to be handled, and without ceassing to be vrged, for there the word of are as yet alwayes found such men, as haue verie troubled and afflicted consciences. For this woman is a type or figure of all men, which are diseased with an issue, that is, which feele there synnes, the issue whereof doeth alwayes runne, neither can it be stayed, for flesh and blood doeth no otherwise, then it is caried w^tch it owne lust and desire. Nowe if that feeling of synne be great, those wretches come forth and endeour to helpe themselves, then one taketh this worke in hand, an other that, and yet preuaile they nothing from hence so many orders, so many monasteries haue sprong, hereupon so many and so great works haue bin inuented, that they are almost without number. What was the cause of all these? surely euен the synnesfull conscience. For we haue thought to saue our soules by these, and to be deliuered wholy from all synnes. But Christ was not there present, for we would giue and not receive. Wherefore our case became alwayes worse, as it fell out also with this woman, who if she had tried the helpe of all Phisitians, neither yet so could she synde, whereby she might be holpen. So we also beleueed all Phisitians, for whatsoeuer euerie one brought, that we byandby received. And was it any meruell? for we desired to be healed and to haue a glad conscience. The Phisitians are the preachers of the Lawe: nowe if any desired to be deliuered from synnes, what did they unto him? they gaue him, whereby he became onely weaker and febler, which surely we haue seene and felt to our great euell, namely, how they would haue men to be iustified by workes, & by them to be deliuered from synnes. But it profited nothinge, for we were alwayes made more weake against synne and death, so that there is neuer found in the earth a more desperate sorte of people, then Sacrificyng Priestes, Monkes and Vestall virgines, and they whatsoeuer they by that trust in workes: if there did but a litle byle arise vpon them, byandby they must runne to the Poticarie, then is suche tryinge of medecine, suche running and hast, as though they had nowe breathed their last. Neither is any so afrafd of the last iudgement as this people. Which then they verie well shew, when they so deale with workes, that they rest onely vpon them, neither doe perseruer constant in any worke, and the more workes they doe, so much worse is their case, so much more are they cast downe in mynde and become more desperate, so that it falleth out with them as with this woman.

It is a verie goodly similitude, which may most fitly be applied to vs: for we do not onely bestow temporall thinges, but our body also by fasting, chastising, and bearing other hard and intollerable burdens, so that some haue thereby become mad, and destitute of all strength, yea & at the last lost their life. And I my selfe selfe haue bene such a one , and haue without dout more resorted to medicines then many other . I could not atteine so farre, as to leauue the Popes law . It seemed a hard and a soze matter vnto me to eate flesh on the friday, O good God, how hard a thing was it to me , before I durst attempt to doe that ? Wherefore if any pistrie being will be deliuerned from such thinges, and contemne the traditions once entan-of the Pope , truely he must haue a stronge foundation of faith, gled there-which if he shall not haue, let him looke about him againe and againe before he attempt it. For if faith be wanting, it will fal out with vs as with this woman, who had spent all her substance vp-on Phisitians, amending nothing, but rather waxing worse and worse : In like maner all our workes, labours & endeouours shall be lost, all our obedience, with all orders or religions, and whatsoeuer we haue bestowed therein shall be in vaine. Howbeit if we haue faith, we shall at the last see the decrees of the Pope and popish Bishops to be nothing, because of which before we trembled and were troubled, all which did helpe vs so much , as the Phisitians did that good woman, which had bestowed all her substance and riches, pea and her body also, that she might be healed. How many kindes of medicines and syrups thinkest thou did that woman vse ? how weake, feeble, & sicke was she oftentimes made with them : pea if she might haue bene healed , it may seeme she would haue taken any medicine, howbeit it profited her nothing, she was afflicted with her disease the space of twelue yeares. How therefore is this miserable woman at the last helped ? When she did light vpon a man whose name is Christ, and put her hope and trust in him, she was healed. But who led her to that man ? without dout not the Phisitians. For if our Preachers shoulde preach Christ , the marchandise of the Pope togither with his decrees would be nothing set by, but rather she heard it of some that was also restored to health , who told her without douting, that there was a certaine man, whom his parents had named Jesus , which is a gentle and good man, which helpeth euery one , and sendeth away none from him whom he helpeth not, and therfore is without dout sent of God, that he may helpe all . Which the woman hauing heard, she leaueth the Phisitians , and maketh hast unto Christ.

So also at this day it falleth out : Not Christ, bat workes only are preached, doe this or that, neuertheles it is spred among the people what Christ is, what we must looke for of him, & that he alone must do all things without our woxkes or merits. This report being heard, we follow him, and lay vp these words in the depth of our hart, we leauē the phisitians, nothing regarding the Preachers of the law and works, or their commaundements and traditions, but runne with all desire of hart to this man, which is Christ, saying to the Pope : if I must receiue onely of Christ, how unwiseley haue I delt, that I haue turned so much vnto thee? farewel therfore O Pope, farewell ye beloued Bishops, I neede no more your medicine, woxkes and merits, precepts and lawes, ye haue grieued me long enough with them, I haue gotten one, which bestoweth vpon me freely, whosomeuer I payed full deare for vnto you before : he giueth that vnto me without woxkes and merits, for which I was faine before to bestow my body, strength and helth, and yet could not obtaine it. Fare ye well, I minde to come no more to you hereafter. Christians therefore are made, not by the decrees of the Pope, nor by woxkes, nor by the ordinances of men, but by the grace and goodnes of Christ.

We must flie
in our di-stresse.

Wherfore if thou hast a disquieted and a troubled minde and conscience, so that thou art afraid of sinne, dreadest death, or hast some defect otherwise, get thee to that man, & confesse what thou wantest, call vpon him, then surely he will helpe thee : poure out thy hart before him, as the 62. Psalme sayth, and say thus vnto him : beholde here is an emptie vessell which greatly needeth wherwith it may be filled, I beseech thee, O my Lord, vouchsafe to fill it, I am weake in faith, I pray thee to strengthen me, I am cold in charicie, do thou make me whot, and feruent, that my loue may extende vnto my neighbour, I haue no firme faith, neither can I sometime trust in God, O Lord helpe me, and encrease my faith and confidence : in thee haue I reposeth the treasure of all good thinges, I am pooze, thou art rich, and therfore didst thou come, that thou mightest haue mercie on the pooze : I am a sinner, thou art righteous, yea I haue abundance of sinnes, but in thee is all fulnes and grace. When thou shalt once haue learned this, the Popes ordinaunces shall not snare thee, by which thou gettest nothing, but consumest all that thou hast, like as this woman did. Then wilt thou say : I will choose to my selfe him, of whom I may receive, vnto whom I neede not giue any thing.

The other Euangelists write concerning this woman, that after after she was healed, Christ perceiued vertue to haue gone out of him, and turned him about in the prease, and asked who had touched him, and that his Disciples made aunswere, that the multitude did throng & thrust him, but that the Lord would not be content with that aunswere, but sayd : some one hath touched me: for I perceive y vertue is gone out of me, I know that some one hath receiued some thing from me. All which the Lorde therfore did, that the faith of the woman might be thankefull unto him, which he would therfore haue made manifest before all the people, for that nothing is moxe acceptable unto him . then that we beleue and trust in him. & also that the Lorde might by this miracle confirme the faith of the Ruler. Wherefore Marke sayth, that when the woman understood that the Lord knew of her, she feared and trembled, and came and fell downe before him, and tolde him the whole truth, how it fell out with her : whereupon the Lord doth deliuer her and sayth : Goe in peace, & be whole of thy disease. Were not these louing wordes ? What great ioy did the woman take here, when as Christ had delt so bountifullly with her ? This ioy and peace all they obtaine, which repose their whole hope and trust in Christ Jesus. Where this ioy shall be. forwith workes must needes follow, which may shewe forth this ioy : as also the faith of this woman must needes come to light. For as soone as she had received of the Lord, she confessed before all the people, neither was she ashamed to declare , that she had receiued something of him , for which notwithstanding she had given nothing. Now, God requireth of vs these workes & this giuing of thanks, to wit, that we confess & declare before all men such good things, grace and benefites , that others also may be brought unto him, & suffer a benefite to be bestowed vpon them, as it was here done. Wherefore Christian life enforceth me to doe good unto others also, euen as God through Christ hath done good vnto me , but thereby am I not made a Christian ; as the woman here is noe healed by her confession, for she was healed before any work and confession, but after she had recovered her health, she confesseth Christ, and prayseth him, euen to the commoditie and converting of others . We also inasmuch as we are Christians, doe so liue, that one helpeth and pleasureth an other in what thing soever he is at any time able . And as this woman was healed before all workes, so we must be made Christians before we doe any worke.

true hope in Christ.

As the Gospell is set before our eyes in this woman: so is it also set forth in the Daughter of this Ruler. This chiese ruler of the Synagogue, whom Marke calleth Iairus, had a stridg faid and confidence, that Christ would raise vp his Daughter. For vntill he had bene of that minde concerning Christ, he had not come vnto him, neither had desired such a thing of him which exceeded the power & strength of nature. Wherefore by this pray-er he shewed his faith, which faith being perceiued, the Lorde could not but graunt his desire, wherefore rising forthwith, he went with him, & in this going this histoyrie of the woman came to passe, which had bene diseased of an issue of blood twelue yeares, as we haue now hearde. When therefore the Lorde was entered into the Rulers house, he sawe the minstrells and the multitude making noyse, which were there according to the lawe of Moses, and did sounde the trumpet and pipes as in our cuntrie they ringe the bells to gather the people togither. But he com-maunded the multitude to go forth, saying: The child is not dead but sleepeth. And they laughted him to scorne and mocked him. Which giueth vs to vnderstand, that when it is preached, that Christ is he which saueth, that our works preuaile nothing, then the world can not conteine it selfe, but that it scorneth & mocketh, for it can not be persuaded, that Christ doth helpe and succour, euen as this people without all dout sayd after this sorte: Beholde what an excellent Maister and a goodly Phisitian he is, what could he haue holpen, which knoweth not yet, what it is to sleepe, and what to be dead? This title must needes remayne to the Go-spell in the world, that the preaching thereof is counted foolish and contemptible. For Satan can not abide, that honour shoulde be giuen to this Gospel before the world, for it bringeth but smal commoditie to his kingdom, which forasmuch as he perceiuthe full well, he practizeth all crastes and wiles, that he may either altogether hinder it, or at the least make it to preuaile litle with them that be his, whose hartes he hath wholy blinded and posse-sed, that the light of the gloriouse Gospell of Christ shoulde not shine vnto them, as S. Paule sayth 2. Cor. 4.

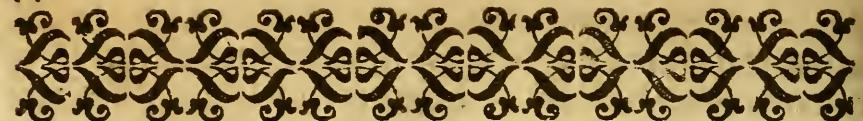

Neither yet can it be, that this preaching of Christ shoulde not be frutefull, forasmuch as it is not vicered in vaine: for albeit it be receiued but of a few, that doth not greatly fyll. When there-fore Satan perceiuthe any thing to be taken from him, and that

that preaching is ordained plainly against his kingdom, he doth without delay pursue it, contemne it, and assaile it on every side, that euen now he is fierce and rageh in the whole wold. For the Gospell of Christ ouerthoweth whatsoeuer the wold and Satan a most grieuous enemy to the preaching of the Gospell. Satan delight in, and whatsoeuer to the wold seemeth most holy & goodly. For the wold imagineh to it selfe such a God, as hath regard to our good wokes, and will be pleased with the erecting of Masses and vigiles for them that are departed, with Rosaries as they call them, habit, shauing, and whatsoeuer other trifles are vled in the Papacie. Now if there come any which bringeth the Gospell, and inuyeth against these vaine toyes of the Pope, and sayth that they are nothing worth, but are meere delusions, inasmuch as they are repugnant to Christ and the Scripture, he is counted a most wicked felow, and therefore must be punished, he is reprooued as an heretike and a seducer of the people: so that they burst forth into great wordes and say: wilt thou gouerne all the whole wold? doost thou thinke thy selfe the wisest man that is? and were our forefathers foolish and without all understanding? many holy men haue done these wokes, and haue preached of them, and wilt thou come, and turne them all to nothing? thou shalt not doe it. Then rage and furie beginneth, yea persecution, slaying and murdering, and the Deuill will seeme to haue a iust cause, howsoeuer the matter goeth. Thus much shall suffice at this time concerning this text. Now ye must take especial heed, that out of the Gospels ye learne thouroughly, how all things consist in the onely person, whose name is Christ, and lay vp this in the depth of your hart, that a Christian hath his name of Christ. For I know how much it auaileth bothe in tentation and in aduersitie to hold that fast. Let vs now by prayer call for the grace of God, that at the last we may with most earnest zeale and harty affection embrase true Christianicie,

Amen.

A SERMON OF D. MARTIN LVTHER UPON THE GOSPEL ON SAINCT THOMAS DAY, CONCERNING THE VVORKS VVHICH

Christ hath wrought for vs, wherin is contained a most sweete consolation against the Law, Sinne, Death, and Satan.

Ioh. 20.

Verse 24.

Homas one of the twelue, called Didimus, was not with them whē Iesuſ came.

25.

The other Disciples therfore sayd vnto him, we haue ſeen the Lord: but he ſaid vnto them: Except I ſee in his hands the print of the nayles, and put my finger into the print of the nayles, and put mine hand into his ſide, I will not beleue it.

26.

And eyght dayes after agayne his Disciples were within, & Thomas with them. Thē came Iesuſ when the dores were ſhut, and ſtoode in the middes, and ſayd: Peace be vnto you.

After ſayd he to Thomas, Put thy finger here, and ſee myne handes, & put forth thyne hand, and put it into my ſide, and be not faithles, but faithfull.

28.

Then Thomas aunſwered and ſayd vnto him: Thou art my Lord and my God.

29. Jesus sayd vnto him: Thomas because thou hast seene me, thou beleeuest, blessed are they, that haue not seene and haue beleeued.

The summe of this Gospell.

1 THOMAS doth not beleeue that Christ is risen from the dead, but when he seeth and feeleth him.

2 The Disciples beleue not without manifest signes. But blessed are they that haue not seene, but doe beleue the word onely.

3 It is a great matter to know Christ God and man. He which attaineth to this knowledg of Christ, feareth neither sinne nor death, neither the devill nor hell: briefly he is quiet from all anguish & temptation. For he hath a greater and mightier then he which is in the world, as Iohn sayth in his first Epistle chap. 4.

The exposition of this Gospell.

Know nothing moze certaine concerning S. Thomas, then that which this Gospell mentioneth of him. Other things which are written of him in the booke of Legends, are most impudent lies. And albeit they were partly true, yet haue they no authoritie, neither make vs any thing the better. Wherfore we will leaue them vtouched, & speake something of this Gospel, which shal be moze profitable & necessary for vs then all those Legends. The former part of this Gospell fell out about the euentyde of the Pasceouer, when two had returned from Emmaus, & shewed vnto the other Disciples, that the Lorde was risen againe. The latter part fell out the eight day after the Pasceouer. It is meruelous how comfortable this Gospell is, shewing vnto you, the frutes of faith, namely peace, and ioye, as Paule sayth Rom. 5: being iustified therefore by faith, we haue peace toward God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. But now we will entreat in few wordes, what this is that the Lorde sheweth to his Disciples his handes and his feete, whereby is declared vnto vs, what commodicte we haue by Christ, whereunto he profiteth vs, and what we must loke for of him. It is engraffed in the harts of all men as it were by nature, to haue a certen wil to be honest & godly, & euery one thinketh how he may come to saluation, wherby it hath come to passe, that one hath inuented this thing, an other that, being verily persuaded, that thereby he shoulde make God fauourable vnto him, and obtaine heauen, but none such at any time hath stooode in þ right way, sozasmuch as all haue had this dixit, that they myght procure Gods fauour by deedes and good woxkes. Notable Doctors also and holy fathers haue written & taught many things, how we myght attaine vnto godlines. About this they haue miserably troubled them selues, but as we see, and to our notable losse haue felt, they haue done litle. Wherefore it is exceeding necessary, that some sound knowledge be had hereof, wherby we must endeouour to true godlines, sozasmuch as it is a thing of no small importance. For he that is deceiued here, lozeth the summe and chiefe point of all Christianicie: hereof therefore we must nowe speake somewhat.

True righteousnes is obtained, not by our owne workes, but by the works which Christ hath wrought for vs. True & sound righteousness consisteth not in our owne woxks, but in the woxks of an other. Take an example hereof: One buildeth temples, an other for religions sake goeth to S. James, to Aquisgrane, to Rome, to the holy sepulcher, the third pineth him selfe with fastings, prayeth, weareth a cowle, goeth bare foote, or worketh some other such woxke whatsoever it be, these are our owne woxkes. God hath not commaunded them, but men and hypocrites, iustifiers of them selues haue inuented them, and haue thought that they are precious good woxkes, and greatly esteemed of God, sweetely persuading them selues, that they are by them deliuered from sinnes, and that God is pacified towards them. But these woxkes chosen of their owne proper will, are nothing worth at all, neither can stand, sozasmuch as they proceeide not of faith, yea they are sinnes, as Sanct Paule saith Rom. 14: VVhatsoever is not offaith, is sinne. These our woxks therefore are defiled and vncleane in the sight of God, yea he doth abhoyre and loathe them. Wherefore if we will haue to doe with God, we must not ascend trusting to our owne woxkes, but to the woxkes of an other. But which are those woxkes of an other, that are allowed of God? Truely the woxkes of our Lorde Iesus Christ, whom God the father sent downe from heauen, that by his death and and passion he might satisfie for our sinnes. This satisfaction fel out vpon this occasion: We were subiect to great daunger, grieuous tyzannes had power ouer vs, which day and night without ceasing did vexe vs. The law which God gaue unto man, did vrge vs, and required many thinges of vs, which we were not able to perfoyme, and thereforee it condeynned vs. Sinne also did lye vpon vs as a heauy burden which the lawe did oftentimes make greater & greater. Death went about to deuour vs, inasmuch as it is the wages of sinne, Satan also endeououred to throw vs downe headlong to hell, inasmuch as he would punish vs for our sinnes committed: all thinges were full of trembling and anguish.

God taking pitie vpon this so great calamity, sent his only begotten sonne, and that of his mere grace & goodnes, without our desert, that he might deliuer vs out of so great tyzannie, which he mightely did after this sorte: He satisfied the law, and fulfilled it perfectly. For he loued God with all his heart, and with all his soule, & with all his strength: he loued his neighbour also as himselfe, in these the whole law and the Prophete do consist. Nowe whatsoeuer Christ did, it consisted in these two. He loued God, inasmuch as he obeyed his will, he tooke vpon him the nature of man, and performed in all obedience those thinges that were enioyed him of the father, as Paul saith Phil. 2: He became obedient to the father vnto the death, euен the death of the crosse. Secondly, he loued his neighbour: for all þ workes which he did in the earth, tended vnto this end, that he might therby profit his neighbour, and thereforee he so loued his neighbour, that he euен died for him, as he saith himselfe to his disciples Joh. 15: Greater loue then this hath no man, when any man bestoweth his life for his frends: S. Paul doth more set forth this, saying, for his enemies, when he writeth thus Rom. 5: But God setteth out his loue towards vs, seeing that while we were yet sinners Christ died for vs. Forasmuch then as Christ hath so fulfilled þ law, it could not accuse him, neither was sinne of any force with him. He set vpon it, and did preuaile ouer it, and swallowed it vp, it was enforced to be extinguished of him, no otherwise then a sparke of fire in the most wide sea. For in him was nothing but mere righteousnes. Death also came, and went about to deuour him, it deuoured him in deede, but it could not digest him, it was enforced to peele him vp againe, yea and this deuouring was an vicer dis-commoditie to death, for the case being quite altered, Christ devoured death it selfe. For it had set vpon him, against whome it had no right, sozasmuch as not a whit of sinne did appeare in him. Where sinne is not, there death hath nothing to doe, as Sainct Paule sayth I. Cor. 15: The stinge of death is sinne, with this it killeth, otherwise it shoulde be dull, and haue no strength. Satan also made a triall of his strength in him, but in vaine, and to his owne griefe, for he layde handes on him, with whome he had nothing to doe. The wretched was ouercome in this conflict, and went away with shame, as Christ sayth, Joh. 14: The Prince of this world commeth, and hath nought in me. Hell also did open his mouth, and would haue devoured Christ, but contrariwise it was devoured of him. And so in this conflict the Law, Sinne, Death, Satan and hell were vanquished, ouer all which he triumphed & gloried with great pompe, as Paule sayth Col. 2.

The beleeuers by faith enjoy the works of Christ as their owne.

All these thinges were not onely done for our commoditie, but also if we beleeue in this Lorde Christ, they are giuen vnto vs. For whatsoeuer he hath, it serueth for vs, yea he him selfe is ours, as Paule sayth Rom. 8. God spared not his owne sonne, but gaue him for vs all to death, how shall he not with him give vs all thinges also? So that I may boldly glorie of all victorie, which he obtained ouer the law, sinne, death, the deuill, and may chalenge to my selfe all his workes, euен as if they were myne owne, and I my selfe had done them, so that I beleeue in Christ. Otherwise his workes shall profite me nothinge at all, if they were not giuen vnto me. These are the workes of an other which doe commende vs before God, and saue vs. Our owne workes shall doe nothing, we are weaker, then that we can resist eu'en the least sinne, so farre is it of that we are able to

How a Christian may notably comfort him self against the law, sinne, death, Satan. encounter with death, Satan, and hell. Wherfore when the Lawe shall come, and accuse thee, that thou doost not obserue it, sende it vnto Christ, and say: There is that man which hath fulfilled the lawe, to him I cleave, he hath fulfilled it for me, and hath giuen his fullfilling vnto me: when it heareth these thinges, it will be quiet. If sinne come, and woulde haue thee by the throte, sende it vnto Christ, and saye: As much as thou mayst doe agaynst him, so much right shalt thou haue agaynst me: for I am in him, and he is in me. If death creepe vpon thee, and attempt to devoure thee, saye vnto it: Good Maistres death, death, doost thou knowe this man? come and byte out his tooth, hast thou forgotten howe litle thy byting preuyaled with him once? goe too if it be a pleasure vnto thee, encounter with him agayne. Thou hadst persuaded thy selfe, that thou shouldest haue preuyaled somewhat agaynst him, when he did hange betwene two theeues, & dyed an ignominious death, which was counted cursed both before God and the worlde. But what didst thou gayne thereby? Thou didst byte in deede, but it turned worst to thy selfe. I pertaine to this man, I am his, and he is myne, and where he abydethe, there also will I abyde. Thou couldest hurce him nothinge, wherefore also let me alone. After the same sorte is the Deuill, if hell come violently vppon thee, and trouble thee, sende them vnts Christ, and thou shalt easily make them to cease.

And thus ye see what Christ is vnto vs, namely such a man as is giuen vnto vs of God, that he might extinguish sinnes, banquish death, destroy hell, ouercome the Deuill, and all these for our commoditie. If he had not done this, nor giuen vnto vs these thinges, we had bene for euer vnder the curse of the law, vnder sinne, vnder death, vnder the deuill, and vnder hell. God hath deliuered vs from these by that Christ. Wherefore S. Paul saith out of the Prophet Dsee 1. Coz. 15: Death is swallowed vp into victorie. O death where is thy stinge? O hell where is thy victorie? The stinge of death is sinne, and the strength of sinne is the law. But thankes be vnto God, which hath giuen vs victorie through our Lorde Iesus Christ. Hereof we may easily understand, what kinde of woxkes those be, which doe make vs entire and righteous before God. Surely they are the woxkes of another, and not our owne woxkes chosen of our selues. Wherefore the whole Papacie falleth here, with all the most precious and holy woxkes thereof, which hath this vixt onely, that miserable, wretched, and blinded men may be persuaded, that they obtaine heauen by their merits, and their owne woxkes. Hereuppon haue spronge so many orders, that they can not almost be numbered, of which one strived to be holier then an other, according as they exercised harder, greacer, and weightier woxkes. But this their miserable labour, anguish, prayars, fastinges, chastiing of the body, and such like, were vaine woxkes, and of no value at all, neither had they so much power, that they were able to take away so much as euен the least sinne, which they call veniall. They were altogether vnmindfull of this saying Esay 29, which the Lord repeateth Matth. 15: This people dravveth nere vnto me vwith their mouth, & honoureth me vwith their lippes, but their heart is farre off from me. But in vaine they vvorshippe me, teaching such doctrines, as are nothing els but the precepts of men. Hereupon now thou maist gather with thy selfe, that all holy men, although they be exceeding holy, yet do obtaine saluation, not by their owne holines, merites or workes. And not so much as Mary her selfe the mother of God, was made righteous & holy in respect of her virginitie, or in that she was the mother of God, but saluation hath come unto all by Jesus Christ, as by the workes of an other. Wherfore this is diligently to be noted, that our felicitie doth not consist in our owne workes, but in the workes of an other, namely of Chyist Jesus our Sauour, which we obtaine through only faith in him.

This also the historie of this Gospell seemeth to signifie, when as the Lorde sheweth to his disciples, but specially to Thomas, his handes & feete. By which deede he declareth, that it was necessary, that those handes and feete should do these things, & that no other workes, that is, their owne, & not the workes of an other, do pertaine unto saluation. For in the Scriptures by handes and feete workes & conuersation are signified. These hands and feete Christ doth as yet essoones shew to vs & say: Behold, I am that onely man, whose workes & conuersation are of force with God, thou shalt labour in vaine with thine owne workes, thine owne righteousness maketh nothing hereunto, it hath an other end. If thou be righteous, it is profitable to thee among me, here in earth thou hast the glory & praise thereof, as Paul sayth Rom. 4. But before God this thy righteousness is of no estimation, thou must set in place thereof an other, namely mine, this God my father doth allow. For I haue deliuered thee from sinnes, death, the deuill, hell, & from all euell, thou shouldest never haue escaped out of these by thine owne power, but hadst lyen as yet most deepe lyed drowned in them. I haue appeased the wrath of God, and of an angrie judge, haue made him, a gentle, mercisfull and gracious father, beleue this and it goeth well with thee, thou art then safe, entire, and righteous. Beware that thou presume not to deale before God with thine owne works, but if thou wilt do any thing thing with him, creepe into me, put on me, and thou shalt obtaine of my Father, whatsoeuer thou desirest and askest, as he him selfe sayth vnto his Disciples Job. 16: Verely, verely I say vnto you, whatsoeuer ye shall aske the Father in my name, he will giue it you. Wherefore as from the beginning sinne which was an others, hath bene derived vnto vs from Adam, so neither I, nor thou haue eate of the apple: so also by the righteousnes of an other we must be restored vnto righteousness and integrity. This other is Christ Jesus, by whose righteousness and works we are all saued, as I haue nowe sufficiently declared. This S. Paule hath very pithily comprehended euē in one sentence, where I. Cor. 1. he sayth thus: Christ Jesus is made vnto vs of God, wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, & redemption, that, according as it is written, he that reioyceth, let him reioyce in the Lord. And Rom. 4. he sayth: Jesus Christ was deliuered to death for our sinnes, and is risen againe for our iustification. In these two liile sentences are briefly comprised, and ioyned togither, whatsoeuer thinges we must looke for from Christ.

Howbeit all these thinges are enioyed by faith, for he that is without faith, to him they are vnpossible to be comprehended, yea they are counted foolishnes to reason & to the world, as Paul sayth I. Cor. 1: Christ vnto the lewes is euē a stumbling block, and vnto the Grecians, foolishnes, that is, when Christ is preached foolishly, that he is our righteousness, that saluation commeth vnto vs by him, and that by him we are made the children of euerlasting life, without our owne workes and righteousness, then those holy men, and iustifiers of them selues are offended, no otherwise then the Jewes. Moreover to the prudent and wise men of this world, it seemeth foolishnes and a certaine ridiculous thing, that a man being fastned to the croſſe and put to death, doth performe these thinges. Whatsoeuer therefore is counted righteous, holy, wise and prudent in the eyes of the world, it is offended and stumbled at this Christ. But, saith Paul moreover, Vnto them which are called, both of the Jewes & Grecians, we preach Christ, the power of God, and the wisedom of God. He sayth also Rom. 1. The Gospell of Christ is the power of God vnto saluation to every one that beleeueth, to the Jew first and also to the Grecian. For by it the righteousness of God is reuealed from faith to faith, as it is written Hab. 2. : The iust shall liue by faith. Wherefore the Lord saþt very well to the Disciples of John: Blessed is he that shall not be offended in me. So thou seest now plainly, that this faith which we haue in Christ, commeth by the preaching of the Gospell, as Paule affirmeth Rom.10: Faith is by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. Here, here I say doth all the force consist, by the word of God, not by the wozde of man. The word of God doth these thinges, not when we publish indulgences, or preach of workes, as hitherto (alas) it hath bene done, to our exceeding losse, as well in the good thinges of the body as of þ soule. We made no account of goods which we bestowed plentifullly, vñles we had afflicted our body with fastings, chasteisement, pilgrimages, and such like trifles. In deede these thinges had bene to be graunted and borne, if they had not with a false confidence in such doing, so miserably and lamentably led vs away & seduced vs from a true faith & confidence in God through Christ. But praise be vnto God, that we haue for the most parte perceived such delusions. For the wozld was so full of this miserie and preaching, that it did almost overflow, which surely came by the vengeance and wrath of God, for that we contemned his word, and followed mens fables, yea our owne wittes and opinions. Then we were in so great blindnes, that we did almost without difference heleene every man, what kind of worke soeuer he brought and gloriously set forth. From these deceitfull follies our consciences are nowe deliuered and set free, but no man doth so much as once giue thanks to God therfore. If we shal be contemptuously negligent, a moxe grieuous miserie shall light vpon vs then this was. Neither shold that come vnto vs vndeseruedly, sozasmuch as we doe greatly procure these euills against our selues by our vñthankefulnes. When as before we gaue with so great abundance and plentye, that by our liberalitie they were made almost Lordes of the wozld, nowe hardly six or seuen poore men are maintained in a citie, yea nowe the Minister of a Parish Church hath not sufficient wherewith to liue. Howbeit doe not impute this peruerse kind of living to the Gospell, as our aduersaries nowe impudently doe. It is not meete, that thou suffer thy poore neighbour by thee to neede: Yea rather the whole Gospel doth specially vrge this, that thou haue a care of thy neighbour, and that thou be seruiceable toward him, that thou help him both with thy counsell, and substance, euen as God hath holpen and instructed instructed thee.

Such a one without dout he that is endued w^t true faith sheweth him selfe : for he bursteth forth, and behaueth him selfe so toward others, as he hath tried God towardes him selfe, and as he desireth to be done to him selfe, if he were p^ressed with pouertie, anguish, and necessitie. God needeth not our good workes, our prayers, fastings, and buildings of temples, founding of Masses, doe displease him , he requireth not our sacrifices, but rather as Esay sayth, hateth and abhorreth them . He is content with this one thing, that we acknowledge him for our God, trust in him, & give him thankes, as he sayth Psal. 50 : Heare, O my people, & I will speake , I my felse will testifie against thee O Israeil : for I am God euenth thy God . I will not reproue thee, because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burnt offerings : because they were not alvvay before me, I vwill take no bullocke out of thy house , nor he goates out of thy foldes. For all the beasts of the forest are mine, and so are the cattels vpon a thousand hils. I knowv all the soules vpon the mountaines, and the vvild beasts of the field are in my sight. If I be hungrie, I vwill not tell thee : for the vvhole vvorlde is myne, and all that is therein . Thinkest thou that I vwill eate bulles flesh , and drinke the blood of goates ? Offer vnto God thankes giuing, and pay thy vovves vnto the most highest. And call vpon me in the time of trouble , so vwill I deliuere thee, and thou shalt prayse me. But God sendeth vs douneward with our workes to our neighbours, to the miserable, afflicted, & them that be voyde of comfort . It is our partes to helpe them, to comfort them, to teach and instruct them. And whatsoeuer benefit we shall bestow vpon them, that we shall bestow vpon God & his Christ, as he shall say in the last day : VVhatsoeuer ye haue done vnto one of the least of these my brethren , he haue done it vnto me. Thus ye now haue heard, that we are iustified and made righteous by the workes of an other, namely, by the workes of Christ, which we enjoy onely by faith : the same faith charitie doth naturally accompany, whereby we doe so to our neighbour, as we acknowledge that God hath done vnto vs. Hereof ye haue elsewhere hearde moze : here we will now make an ende, and call for the grace of God.

TIN LUTHER UPON THE GO-SPELL ON SAINCT MATTHIAS DAY.

Matth. ii.

Verse 25. AT that time Iesus aunswered and said: I giue thee thankes O Father, Lord of heauen & earth, because thou hast hid these thinges from the wise and men of vnderstanding, and hast opened them vnto children.

26. It is so, O Father, because thy good pleasure was such.

27. All thinges are giuen vnto me of my Father: & no man knoweth the Sonne but the Father: neither knoweth any man the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne wil reueale him.

28. Come vnto me all ye that are wearie & laden, & I will refresh you.

29. Take my yoke on you and learne of me: for I am meeke and lowlie in hart: and ye shall find rest vnto your soules.

30. For my yoke is easie, and my burden is light.

The summe of this Gospell.

Reason is not capable of the Gospell. For as Paul 1. Cor. 2. sayth: The natural man perceiueth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishnes vnto him:

him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Wherefore when reason seeketh salvation in worldly wisedome and foolishnes, it fyndeth it not.

2 Christ calleth them children here, which trust not to their owne wisedome and righteousness, but do beleue onely.

3 As children onely do obtaine salvation, so the Father also can not be knownen, unles he be revealed by Christ: that is, our wisedome doth not know God the father. But when as through fayth we are taught and instructed in bearing the crosse, then the power of God becommeth known unto vs. Therefore also he afterward comforteth them, upon whom the crosse is layd, saying: My yoke is easie, and my burden light.

The exposition of the text.

His text toucheth as it were, the verie pith and marrow of the Gospel. Other places of Scripture wherein the miracles and doinges of Christ are rehearsed, haue not so much cōfōrt as those, in which those sermons of Christ to the people are contained, wherein he doth so louingly teach vs, and allure vs to himselfe. I am not so certaine of the fauour, which I see shewed to others in working miracles, as if I haue the plaine wordes before myne eyes. It is a farre greater comfort also vnto me, to heare such louing admonitions and allurements, then the preaching of miracles: Albeit they also confirme my fayth, and are examples, that, as he hath holpen them, so also he will helpe me. Moreover this Gospell entreateth of the knowledge of God the father, and of Christ his sonne, shewing also whereof such knowledge doth consist. Now that the meaning thereroft may be well knowne, it is requisite to understand aright these two wordes, wisenes, and children or babes. But lest when we heare it, we say: this pertaineth nothing to vs, it is spokē to others, as the Jewes said to the Prophets, which referred all thinges to the Gentiles, the wordes going before do sufficiently shew, unto whom, or of whom these wordes of Christ are spoken. For before he speakeh of them that contemne the Gospell, nor vouchsafeing to embraze it, whose dutie notwithstanding especially was to embraze it, inasmuch as they would seeme alone to be them, that were occupied in the word of God, and were to be counted for the people of God. Of such he sayeth thus: Wherunto shall I liken this generation? it is like vnto little children which sit in the markets, and call vnto their fellowes, and say: we haue piped vnto you, and ye haue not daunced: we haue mourned vnto you, and ye haue not lamented. Which the Lord applieth to himselfe, and vnto John the Baptist: as if he would say: we haue preached vnto you the Gospele: John with a certaine seueritie and austereitie, but I with verie great clemencie and gentlenes. But ye contynne our preaching and will not receiue it, ye shall at the last feele without dout to your great euell, what it is to despise the word of God. This is verie true, howsoever thou preachest to the people, whether thou be fayre spoken or seuere, gentle or ungentle, they will alwayes seeme to haue some cause or other to complaine of thee.

These the Lord calleth here wise, and men of vnderstanding, to these the Gospele is hyd. He meaneth not here those wise men, which are truly wise in diuine matters. For it is a great commendation, if one be worthy to be called wise and prudenter. True wisedom is nothing els but the knowledge of God, to wit, when as I know what we must thinke of God, and do vnderstand his will. But prudence signifieth abilitie and knowledge to iudge of worldy thinges, what is right or wrong, which Paule often ioymeth togither, especially in his Epistle to the Ephesians chap. i. and in his Epistle to the Colossians chap. i. Of such wisedome Christ speaketh not here, but of worldy wisedome, which puffeth vp men, and excludeth the true wisedome of God. We are all of this disposition by nature, escloones to rise against the wisedome of God.

True wisedome what it is.
Prudence.

Humane or worldly wisedome.

That is called good, by the instinct of humane wisedome, which bringeth pleasure, honour, and profit, but those thinges that are contrarie to these, as affliction, dishonour, losse, those are called euill. For mans nature can seeke nothing els at all, but those things that are his owne, that which pleaseith and profiteth him, that he doth especially like: But that which displeaseith him, he counterth the worst of all thinges, although it be the best. Wherefore as I haue saide, the Lord speaketh here of those wise and prudenter men, which with their owne wisedome striue against the wisedome of God. Worldy wisedome seemeth to it selfe to be

be so great , that is it not content to rule onely these worldly and temporall thinges , but taketh also vpon it selfe to haue the ouer-sight of heauenly things , it alwayes sercheth out and imagineth some new thing , euen in spirituall and diuine matters . So manys owne wisedome hath inuented shauen crownes and cowles , & almost all that , wherein the papacie consisteth , euerie one hath chosen his proper worke to himselfe , this man hath inuented this , an other hath inueted that , and if this be abolished , and doth not greatly please , by andby they synde out some other thing , as (alas) we haue seene , and do as yet see , neither is there any measure in these trifles , whereupon it commeth , that we can hardly away with the word of God and the truth , but are alwayes delighted to inuent some new thing . For truly this is certaine , as often as we ordaine a new worship of God contrarie to the word of God , we are by andby blynded , and fall from errour to errour , then which calamitiis none greater can come vnto vs . Wherefore Paule 2. Thess. 2. sayth : Therefore God shall send them strong delusion , that they should beleue lies , that all they might be damned which beleue not the truth , but had pleasure in vnrighteousnes . Yea and at the last they become so blynde , that they understand nothing at all of God , as it is in the 14. Psal . The foole hath sayd in his heart , there is no God . For it can not be that the naturall man , which consisteth of flesh & blood , and is not instructed by the spirit of God , should iudge and understand those thinges which are of God , as Paule 1. Cor. 2. witnesseth : The naturall man perceiueth not the thinges of the Spirite of God : for they are foolishnes vnto him : neither can he know them , because they are spirituallly decerned . He which wil reade more hereof , let him peruse the first chapter of the Epistle of Paule to the Romanes , there shall he plainly enough perceiue , what blyndenes is , and what punishment doth ensue , if the word of God beinge neglected , we folowe our one iinventions and counsels .

All which we see in our spirituall monkes , nunnes , and sacrificing prestes , and do too truly trie it . God graunt that they may at the last repent , and giue vnto God his glorie . S. Paule sayth there of the Gentiles , that they turned the glorie of the incorruptible God to the similitude of the image , not onely of a corrupible man , but also of birdes , and fourre footed beastes , and of creeping thinges. So do our Papists also, yea and much more foolishly and madly then the Gentiles: for they make unto themselves a good which is delighted with a shauen crowne, with cowels, wch eating of flesh and fish, &c. Wherefore God hath giuen them vp through their hearts lusts vnto uncleannes, as he did the Gentiles, and that so filthily, that it is better to conceale it, then to rehearse it. For if such filthie and wicked thinges were committed among the Gentiles, which had many wines and many concubines, what would not these spirituall men com-Briefly whiche haue forbidden the use of women and matrimonie? mit, so is it wont to come to passe, where Satan beareth the swaie, and the word of God is wrested to serue mens affections, whiche euerie man may assuredly perswade himselfe to be so, yea these thinges are so knownen and vndoubtedly true, that children in the stretes speake and sing of them. Now this is not to be vnderstood of spirituall men onely, but euē the bulgar sort and common multitude do liue so, when the word of God is not admitted. As we see citizens to utter counterfet wares, marchants to deceiue in selling marchandise, and so many craftie practizes, so many deceits in subtill dealing, so much regard of vsurie and priuate profit, that it can not be rehearsed. As yet they endeouour againe to bring in the Malle, to set vp their tapers &c: being perswaded that God is pacified with such trifles, reuolting this onely in their myndes, that their fame may remaine vntouched and vnhurt in the world, howsoever they agree with God. Of such wise and prudent men Christ speaketh here in the Gospell, which heare the Gospell in deede, and see miracles, but it profiteth them nothing, forasmuch as their heart is not touched. Now Christ sayth thus:

Verse 25. I giue thee thanks O Father, Lord of heauen and earth, because thou hast hid these thinges from the wise and men of vnderstanding, and hast opened them vnto children:

Verse 26. It is so, O Father, because thy good pleasure was such.

Christ speaketh not here of verie children: there may be some notable doctor, whom he calleth a childe in this place. Contrariwise

wise there may be a rusticall felow, whom he calleth here wise and prudent. In the eight Psal. David also calleth these infants and children, when he sayth: Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies. They surely by whom God ordained strength against his enemies, which should extoll his glorie through the whole world, were not babes or children in verie deede. Those therefore the Lord calleth children here, which compt their owne worfes for nothing, attribute nothing to their owne wisedome, make no thing of themselues, but thinke God onely to be wise and of vn-derstanding. Wherefore they are humble and lowly, and how or babes. great soever they are, do submit themselues to God, of whom onely they suffer themselues to be caught. Now other be ouer wise, and will learne nothing of God, yea they presumptuously take to themselues iudgement and censure ouer the doctrine and worfes of God, whereof thou mayst read in the first and second chapter of the Epistle to the Corinthians. Wherefore Christ sayth Luke 16: The children of this world are in their generation wiser then the children of light. But the foolish children of light are of greater estimation before God, then the wise children of this world. Of these children the Lord speaketh: Thou hast hid them from the wise and men of vnderstanding, and hast revealed them to babes. For the wise and prudent know not these thinges, but the children and fooles know them. How commeth it to passe that the wise know them not? because thou hast hidden them from them. How do the children know them? because thou hast revealed them. What he meaneth hereby, we may gather of those thinges that were spoken before, to wit that he had preached the Gospell of the kingdome of God in many cities of Judea, as in Chorazin, Bethsaida, and in his owne citie Capernaum, which cities their owne wisedome being a hindrance and lette vnto them, did not receive the foolish preaching of the Gospell. The Gospel is a good and ioyfull message, which teacheth me to know the glorie of God, by which knowledge I obtaine pardon of my synnes, and life eternall: As Christ sayth to his father in the Gospell of John chap. 17: This is life eternal, that they know thee to be the onely very God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. He saythe also in this Gospell: No man knoweth the Sonne but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne will reueale him. Here he speaketh of the knowledge both of the Father and of the Sonne. To whom this is reuealed, he knoweth, and obtaineth eternal life. But the Father hath hid these thinges from the wise and prudent, that they may not know neither the Father nor the Sonne, and hath reuealed them to children, they haue the knowledge both of the Father and the Sonne, and so do obtaine everlasting life.

Moreover, if these thinges be thus, as they be in deede, what shall become of free will? Seeing thou seest such hainous and wicked thinges to be committed in the bodies, as it is written Rom. i. go thy wayes now, and glorie of free will. But this is a goodly free will, to liue in such a filthie life, which is altogether unworthy of a man, which is unknowen euen among beastes that are without reason. Howbeit it is wont so to come to passe, when God forslaketh vs. As soone as we are forslaken of God, by and by Satan commeth, and erecteth his kingdome in vs, wherein nothing els but such wickednesse are committed, which notwithstanding are so craftely coloured, and commited with such a presence of honestie, that it seemeth to be a most holy, yea and an angelike life. What I pray you can mans strength do here? whereby some go about to bring to passe many thinges, sweetely persuading themselves that they shall ascend by into heauen thereby. But thou hearrest here that Christ affirmeth, that the Father doth reueale these thinges: also that it is the good pleasure of the Father that it should be so. Whereby truly he taketh away all the merits of man, here no satisfactions profit, here is no respect of workes, it is done by the wil and good pleasure of the Father. For he respecteth not the person, as it appeareth before þ world. He doth not contemne and reiect the synner, albeit he come laden with sinnes. After the same sorte Christ saith to his disciples Luke 12: Feare not litle flocke; for it is the Fathers pleasure to give you the kingdome. This the hypocrites and iusticiaries can not abyde, yea they are driven unto furie, senslesnes, and madnes, when they see simple receiuers of custome and verie publicans to go before them into the kingdome of heauen, they themselues with their holines, & goodly and plausible workes to the world, being excluded: whom would not this drive unto madnes? who would not take it grievously, that he himselfe and his thinges should they come into, whom God forsaketh.

What state

Should be in such a case, and nothing at all counted of? But what shouldest thou do, or what shouldest thou murmur? The good pleasure of God is such, to whom he vouchsaueh to open, to him they shalbe opened: and from whom he hideth, from him they are hidden, which compt as vndoubtedly true: And marke well that Christ sayth here, It is so, O Father, because thy good pleasure was such, thy good pleasure I say, before þ world was made, as S. Paule sayth Ephes. i : God hath chosen vs in Christ before the foundations of the world were layd, that we should be holy and without blame before him in loue, who hath predestinate vs, to be adopted through Iesus Christ in himselfe, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the prayse of the glorie of his grace, wherewith he hath made vs freely accepted in his beloued. Here all merit is excluded, wherefore let it not come into thy mynde, that thou shalt obtaine any thing here by thy de-serts, neither let thy workes, wisedome, and merits puffe thee vp. Here all reioycing is taken away, that he that reiopceth, may reioyce in the Lord, as Paule sayth 1. Cor. i. It followeth more-over in the Gospell:

Ver. 27. All things are giue unto me of my Father: & no man knoweth the Sonne but the Father: neither knoweth any man the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne will reueale him.

Here thou seest the safetie, which is in the kingdome of Christ, by whom we haue knowledge and light. If therefore Christ holdeth all thinges in his hand, and hath power ouer all thinges as the Father hath, no man can plucke any thing out of his handes, which he himselfe also witnesseth in Iohn: I give Ioh. 10. 28. eternall life to my sheepe, and they shall neuer perish, neither shall any plucke them out of my hand: my Father which gaue them me, is greater then all, and none is able to take them out of my Fathers hand. I and my Father are one. Wherefore euery Christians joyce, that he is now vnder the tuition of Christ, and is not any reioyce al-thing troubled because of his synnes. If he hath embraced the though they Gospell, Christ vnder whom he fighthe will guide the matter be divers excellently well. Satan indeede will tempt him with this and wayes assai-led of Satan, for that they that vice, as, with adulterie, whoredome, theft, slaughter, enuse, be vnder the hatred, wrath, and other like synnes. But let him not therefore tuition of Christ, who be discouraged, he hath a king, that is strong & mightie enough, will defend of whom he shalbe easily defended. Notwithstanding it wilbe and preserue verie hard to stand strongly, and nothing to yelde, wherefore them.

prayer in this case is verie needfull, others also may by their prayers intreat for thee, that a stout corage and manly heart may be giuen unto thee, to withstand Satan. But it is certaine, that thou shalt not be destitute, Christ will easily preserue thee, be not disquieted in mynde, let it onely be thy care, that thou fallest not from his kingdome. Moreouer in this Gospell thou seest, that Christ is both God & man: Man, inasmuch as he prayseth God, and giueth him thankes: God, inasmuch as all thinges are giuen vnto him of the Father. Which ought to be great comfort vnto vs in all thinges that do trouble and afflict vs. Whereas he saith: No man knoweth the Sonne but the Father: neither knoweth any man the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne will reueale him: he in these wordes ouerthoweth free will, which will know God and Christ, when and how it pleaseleth it.
Here thou hast plainly, from whence the knowledge of God and of Christ is: the Father, saith he, knoweth the Sonne, and the Sonne the Father, but how do we know, by this or that preacher? no truly, these are onely certaine middle instruments, but he onely knoweth, to whom the Sonne will reueale. A litle before he saide that the Father doth reueale or open, here he attri-buteth the same to the Sonne. Surely both the Father and the Sonne do reueale, and as the Father reuealeth, so also doth the Sonne: and Christ also sayth in John chap. 14: The holy Ghost shall teach you all thinges. Wherefore as the Father teacheth, so teacheth the Sonne, likewise also teacheth the holy Ghost.
And where God the Father, and the Sonne, and the holy Ghost do not teach, there all thinges remaine boide of knowledge. It followeth moreouer in the Gospell.

Verse 28. Come vnto me all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will refresh you.

Verse 29. Take my yoke on you, and learne of me: for I am meeke and lowly in heart: and ye shall finde rest vnto your soules.

Verse 30.

Verse 30. For my yoke is easie, and my burden is light.

Hitherto we haue heard how the Lord dealeth with the wise and prudent, namely that he blyndeth them, and hideth the Gosspell from them. Likewise how he is delighted in childe[n] and simple ones, to wit, that he endueth them with right knowledge of himselfe, and openeth the Gosspell vnto them. But some man may here say and complaine: If the matter be so, surely my conscience shalbe in great daunger, before I heare and know that the Gosspell dothe pertaine vnto me. I am a wretched synner, and perhaps the Gosspell pertaineth not vnto me, what if I be vnworthe? Christ, that he may comfort these weake, dismayed, and troubled consciences, sayth: Come vnto me all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will refresh you. Here are we called What soever vnto comfort. Here forget all thy merit and worthines, for that burden we he plainly sayth: ye that are wearie and laden, to wit, with the burden of the lawe, the anguishe and affliction of synne, and wherewithall soever the conscience maye be troubled. There- fore he dothe not expresse it by name: for he saythe not, ye that if we flie to are troubled with this or that calamitie, but simplie, ye that him for sue- are wearie and laden. Neither will he haue any here exclu- cour. ded, sozasmuch as he saythe, All, which is a singular and speciall comfort, if any thinge trouble vs, what kynde of tentation so- euer it be.

Who soever theresoze is striken with the feelinge of his synne, and knoweth his one weakenes to fulfill the lawe of God, let him come hicher with a cheerefull and bold corage, and he shall certainly receiu comfor. I will refresh you, sayth Christ, as those that are pressed and burdened with soze labour and grieve. Let this onely be thy care, that thou beleue such a louing bidding and promise. After this sorte Christ cryed in the temple at Hierusalem at a certaine feast: If any man thirst, let him Ioh.7:37.38. come vnto me, and drinke. He that beleueuth in me, as sayth 39. the Scripture, out of his bellie shall flow riuers of water of life. This spake he of the Spirit, which they that beleued in him, should receiu. Which so commeth to passe: He causeth the Gospell to be preached vnto vs, which he that beleueuth, is endued with the holy Ghost, and obtaineth pardon of all his synnes.

This is truly to refresh him, whose conscience is troubled, to wit, when he feeleth that his synnes be forgiuen, and that he is become heire of the kingdome of God. Neither doth he refresh vs onely in the anguish and temptation of synne, but he will also be present with vs in other calamities and miseries, in famine, warre, dearthe of victuals, and whatsoeuer such like can come, in all these he will not leau vs destitute of his helpe, as he cared for the Patriarke Joseph, euен in a straunge countrie, with whom he was continually present, as well in prosperite as in aduersite. Nowe synne is a grieuous burden, whereof no man is eased, but he whom Christ the sonne of God deliuereþ, and that by the holy Ghost, whom he hath merited for vs of the Father, which maketh our hearts cheerefull, and readie to do all thinges which God requireþ of vs.

But what is this that he sayth? Take my yoke on you. Is this to refresh, if I take one burden from one, and lay upon him to the flesh, for it telleth vs that all our owne thinges are nothing, that our owne holines and righteousnes are of no impo-taunce, that all thinges which are in vs are damned, that we are the childe[n] of wrath and indignation. This is verie hard, and an intolerable burden to the fleshe, and therefore he calleth it a burden or yoke. But lest he shoulde terrifie or make afraide any, for that he is of great authoritie, high, and mightie, and therefore can not suffer synnesful and wretched men, or for that he may seeme to be tyrannicall and vngentle, he before cutting of this suspition, sayth: Learne of me: for I am meeke and lowly in heart. Christ will here louingly allure vs to his doctrine, for he had spoken before of the knowledge of the Father, as if he would saye: fleshe and a fearfull nature compteþ me for an austere, seuer[e], and rigorous man, but I am not of such a nature, Christ hum- yea I am humble and meeke in heart. I do not terrifie men as ble & meeke. Moses dothe, I doe not preach: doe this or that, but I preach forgiuenes of synnes, neither doe I preach that they shoulde giue any thinge, but rather that they may receive. There is not in me ambition and loftines, as is in the Pharises, whiche desire to be magnisier, but I am altogether gentle and lowly in heart, ready to receive synners. If so be that they fall againe into synnes, synnes, notwithstanding I doe not yet cast them from me, if they flie vnto me for succour, and doe with a sure confidence looke for comfort and helpe of me. I doe not curse men as the Pharisites doe, which curse them euuen for their owne ordinances, and for mens deuises, and will sooner suffer all the commandements of God to be neglected, then one of their decrees and ordinances not to be obserued. As we see in the Papacie, where it is counted a greater offence to eate flesh on the frydaye, or for a sacrificing Priest to marie, them to commit twentie adulteries or ten homicides. But here thou seest that God doth abrogate euuen his owne lawe, that he may so much the sooner procure synners vnto him.

The yoke of an other? This is that, whereof we haue oftentimes spoken, the Christ why Gospell doth first make astonied and discourage, and is grieuous so called.

Christ in a singular signification sayth here, that he is meeke, as if he saide: I knowe how synners are to be handled, I haue tryed what a fearefull and an afflicted conscience is, as the Epistle to the Hebrewes chapter 5. witnesseth, that he was in all thinges tempted in like sorte, except synne. Wherefore let no man be afrayd of me, I will handle all easilly and gently, I will saye nothinge with a lowre contenaunce, I make no man afraid, so as they come boldly vnto me, they shall fynde rest to their soules with me. To their soules he sayth, as if he would saye: outwardly in the bodie there maye be affliction and trouble, and calamities may ouerwhelme you, but ye ought to beare all these thinges lightly, as he also sayth to his disciples in the Gospell of Iohn: In me ye shall haue peace, but in the world ye shall haue affliction. Wherefore although outwardly all thinges fall out against vs, as though they would suppresse and deuour vs, yet are they nothinge to be esteemed of: For we haue the feelinge of peace inwardly in our conscience. And this is the first frute of fayth, as Paule saythe Rom. 5: Therefore being iustified by fayth we haue peace toward God through our Lorde Iesus Christ. Nowe when our conscience is quieted, and we haue peace with God, nothinge is able to moue vs, no nothing shall hurt vs, albeit it be euell and against vs.

Let no man thinke thus, and saye: this is not to amend ones state or case, if I take one burden from his necke, and lape on an other, as it is before sayd. For Christ sayth: My yoke is easie, and my burden is light, as if he would saye: the yoke of the law, vnder which ye liued before, was grieuous to be borne, but my burden is not so grieuous , it is light , and tolerable , ye may easily beare it . Our wisemen saye now , that the yoke of Christ is more grieuous , then the yoke of the Lawe was , and they alleage the fist chapter of Mattheue . But Christ dothe there interprete the Lawe , how it ought to be vnderstood , he doth not make lawes , but sayth , that murders and adulteries proceede from an cuell and vncleane heart . And so he doth onely expounde the Lawe of Moses , and prescribeth not any lawes

Why ſt yoke there . But the yoke of Christ is thereforee easie , and his burden of Christ is light , because he taketh awaye , not onely ceremoniall and ſaide to be mans lawes , but euē the whole lawe , the curse , synne , death , and what ſoever maye come vnto vs from the Lawe , all this Christ taketh awaye from me , and endueth me with his spirit , by the motion and iſtinct whereof , I doe gladly , willingly and with pleasure perſorme all the duties of the Lawe . It is therefore also called easie , sweete , and light , for that he him-ſelfe helpeth vs , and taketh part of the burden , if we be not of ſtrength ſufficient . It appeareth in deede grieuous and intolerable to the world , but it is otherwife when there is one ready to eafe the burden : It is a common ſaying : it is good to ſing with a fit companion , you two will easily beare the burden , although one alone were not of ſtreigh ſufficient to beare it . Thus much shall ſuffize for the expouneſt of this Gospell .

TIN LVTHER UPON THE GO-SPEL ON THE FEAST OF S.
PHILIP AND JAMES.

John 14.

- Verse 1.* Iesus said vnto his disciples: Let not your heart be troubled: ye beleeue in God, beleeue also in me.
- 2.* In my Fathers house are manie dwelling places: if it were not so, I would haue tould you: I go to prepare a place for you.
- 3.* And if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come againe, and receiue you vnto my selfe, that where I am, there may ye be also.
- 4.* And whither I go, ye know, and the waye ye knowe.
- 5.* Thomas said vnto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest, how can we then knowe the waye?
- 6.* Iesus said vnto him, I am the Waie, the Truth, and the Life. No man commeth vnto the Father but by me.
- 7.* If ye had knowne me, ye should haue knowne my Father also: and from hence forth ye knowe him, and haue seene him.
- 8.* Philippe said vnto him, Lord, shew vs thy Father, and it suffiseth vs.
- 9.* Iesus said vnto him: Haue I bin so long time with you, and hast thou not knowne me? Philip , he that hath seene me , hath seene my Father : how then sayest thou, Shewe vs thy Father ?

10. Beleeuest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me? The wordes that I speake vnto you, I speake not of my selfe , but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the workes.
11. Beleeue me that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me : at the least beleeue me for the verie workes sake.
12. Verely, verely I say vnto you, he that beleeueth in me , the workes that I do , he shall do also; and greater then these shal he do : for I go vnto my Father.
13. And what soeuer ye aske in my Name , that will I do , that the Father may be glorified in the Sonne.
14. If ye shall aske any thing in my name, I will doe it.

The summe of this Gospell.

1 IN this Gospell is contained a comfort against offence that tempteth vs through the crosse and persecution.

2 Without the merit of Christ no man commeth to glorie. Therefore he sayth : In my Fathers house are many dwelling places. For many are elect fro euerlasting of God the Father, which notwithstanding can not come vnto glorie without Christ.

3 The Disciples beleeneed in Christ, yet did they not understand, that he should come vnto glorie by death . Wherein we must marke, that fayth being unperfect in the Apostles and Disciples of Christ, is a comfort vnto vs, if we rest vpon the foundation Christ.

4 In Philip we see a verie grosse fayth , for he will see and know by experience . Wherefore Christ sayth : If ye will not beleeeue my wordes, at the last beleeeue the workes, that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.

5 These

5 These wordes: I say vnto you, he that beleueueth in me, the workes that I do, he shall do also, &c. shew that Christ shall reigne in vs, when he is glorified with the Father.

6 And thus we see that in all this Gospell, Christ requireth nothing els of them that be his, but fayth.

The exposition of this Gospell.

At the beginning of this Gospell Christ declareth wherfore he came, and what office he executeth, which is properly the preaching of the Gospell: So wit, that he is he which prepareth dwelling places with the Father, and wil when he comineth againe, receiue vs vnto himselfe. Moreouer he sayth, that he is the way, the truth, and the life, which he afterward more plainly expresteth when he sayth: No man comineth vnto the Father but by me. Also when he sayth: If ye had knowne me, ye should haue knowne my Father also. Hereunto moreouer pertaineth that which he sayth vnto Philip: He that hath seene me, hath seene my Father. This is the chiese and the greatest thing in this Gospell, vnto which all are to be referred. Hereof we ought to learne, that we are not iustified by our owne strength, neither salued by our owne merits, but are sanctified by þ spirit of Christ, and saued by grace, & that Christ is the way leading to saluation.

We will discusse and examine this Gospell throughout, as God shall giue vs grace. These wordes the Lord spake vnto his Disciples after his Supper, when he was now about to depart from them. Forasmuch as he had said many thinges vnto them of his departure and passion, they were after a soþ troubled and terrifid, wherfore the Lord beginneth louingly to comfort the, saying: Let not your heart be troubled. As if he would say: I perceiue that my departure doþe grieue you, and that ye are therfore troubled; But seeing it can not be otherwise, be not discomforþed, there is no cause why ye shold therfore be troubled, I will come againe vnto you. Notwithstanding ye shall see many thinges in me before, wherat ye wilbe offended, they shal crucifie me and vnworthely handle me. But be not ye troubled because of these thinges, be not afryarde, it wilbe better shortly after, the will of the Father is such. Howbeit flesh can not do otherwise but be offended, if it seeth Christ to be crucified, it byandby revolgeth from him, it belieueth him not, neither counteth him for a Saviour. Which also it doth, when it seeth holy men suffer persecution, to be afflicted and tormented, for then it thinketh that God hath no care of them. Against this offence Christ aforenhand confirmeth his Disciples, and sayth: Ye belieue in God, belieue also in me. That is, ye belieue that God loueth you and will gloriſe you, belieue that he will do it after that sorte, that ye ſee me glorified, and belieue that this my death is life, to the glorifying both of me, and of my whole body, that is, of all Christians, and that this death ſatisfieth for the synnes of the worlde, as the Apostles afterward witnessed of him in their witinges. Thus John sayth: Christ is the reconciliation for our synnes: and not for ours onely, but also for the synnes of the whole worlde. Wherefore thou ſeest that Christ here will haue heartes confirmed by faith, and by no other outward thinge. He sayth mozeouer:

In my Fathers house are many dwelling places. These dwelling places haue bin prepared from euerlaſting, neither is there any neede that they ſhould be prepared of him. Why therefore doth he ſay: I go to prepare a place for you? This is nothinge els but that he goeth and is made Lord of all, whereby he may prepare vs vnto ſuch dwelling places. For as long as we are not prepared, neither are the dwelling places prepared for vs, although they be ready by themſelues. Wherefore Christ mea-neth thus much: There are dwelling places, but not yet prepared rightly and as they muſt be. Howbeit then ſhal they be rightly prepared and appointed, whē as I haue taken away the kingdome of death by my death, and am now gone to reigne, and that by the holy Ghost: which by ſayth ſhall prepare and wholy make ready you also vnto ſuch dwelling places. So that this is the ſimple and plaine meaning of theſe wordes: There are dwelling places, to wit, where the Father gloriſteth, but theſe dwelling places are not yet prepared, for that the kingdome of death is not yet taken away. This Christ ſignifieth when he ſayth:

If it were not ſo I would haue tolde you: I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come againe, and receiue you vnto my ſelue, that where I am, there may ye be also. In theſe wordes the Lord declareth how theſe dwelling

ling places be prepared, namely, by the death of Christ as it is sayde, by which he came vnto glorie, and ruleth ouer all thinges, which are in heauen and earth. By which death he hath obtainede the holy Ghost for vs, which as is before sayde, may prepare vs vnto these dwelling places. For through his operation and working in vs, he maketh vs beleue the Gospell, by which beleeuing or faith we are prepared. Which could not be done if Christ shoulde not depart and dye, and so possesse a kingdome ouer all. This therefore is the summe of this text: They are foreseen, whome the Father will glorifie, but they can not be glorified but by Christ, who vntes he take away death and sinne, all shall be in vaine. Here thou seest that all tend onto this, that Christ is he which prepareth the dwelling places, and that we can not be glorified but by Christ, so that the whole dixit of this text is, that we are not iustified by mans strength, nor by our owne merits, but by Christ, which the whole Epistle to the Romanes effectually declareth, as also that which is written to the Galathians, & almost all that Paule doth in his Epistles, tendeth to the same ende. It followeth moreover:

And whither I goe ye knowe, and the way ye knowe. For ye beleue in me, and haue shewed signes in my name, whereby ye ought nowe to be certaine who I am, and what I doe, and wherefore I am come. Ye haue also seene and heard the testimonye of the Father of me. Wherefore ye may nowe knowe that the Father will glorifie me; and beleue that I and the Father are one, it shoulde be therefore superfluous to speake more of these thinges. But the Disciples albeit they were well instructed of the Lorde him selfe, and had seene his miracles, yea and they themselues also had preached the Gospell and wroughte miracles, were notwithstanding as yet somewhat grosse in understanding, neither did they perceiue whereof he here spake, and what was that way, and whither the Lorde did prepare to depart. Wherefore Thomas bursteth forth into open wordes and confesseith freely, that he is ignorant hereof, and sayth thus unto the Lord: Lord we knowe not whither thou goest: howe can we then knovve the way? Here ye heare and see, that albeit there was faith in the Disciples, notwithstanding they were not as yet persuaded that Christ shoulde be crucified, and by his death shoulde enter into his kingdome, and that the same kingdom should be spirituall, which they did not understand euen after the resurrection of the Lord: Lorde, say they, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israell? Those good men were as yet persuaded, that it should be a carnall & woyldly kingdom. Such grosse things may here and there be found in the Gospels, by meanes whereof the Disciples did sometime notably stumble and erre. All which were committed to writing for our comfort & confirmation, that we should not be byandby discouraged, when we haue sometime stumbled in faith, and can not at the first apply our selues to the workes and word of the Lorde. If this happened to these great mē, which afterward shoulde become pillars of Christianitie, there is no cause truely that any should meruell, if we also sometime faint in faith, yea, and let no man be afryad, although it falleth out that sometime throught infirmitie he so doe. It is the worke and matter of the Lorde, he will amends these thinges when it seemeth good vnto him.

Now of the wordes we mind to entreate somewhat at large. Not much before, when Christ would confirme his Disciples in faith, he promised them that they shoulde be glorified. Here he addeth and declareth how and by what meanes they must be glorified, affirming that that must be by his departure, that is, by his death, & that by that meane he must obtaine his kingdome. This he had often repeated vnto them, so that now it did become them to know and understand it. Therefore he sayth: VVhither I goe ye know, and the way ye knowe, but they did not yet thoroughly understand it, as the wordes of Thomas doe declare. Now, it is certaine that there was faith in the Disciples, which the wordes of Peter proue, who aunswereſt Christ in steede of the rest, when he asked them, whether they also would goe away: Peter sayd: Maister to whom shall we goe? Thou hast the wordes of eternall life: and we beleue and knowe that thou art Christ the Sonne of the living God. This appeareth also by the wordes of the Lord, which he had sayd to them a litle before at his supper: Ye are cleane, which he would not haue sayd, if they had not beleued: they knewe Christ therefore that he is the way to the Father. So they knewe the Father also, for that they had seene the miracles whereby he gaue testimonie of the Sonne, and had heard the voyce of the Father from heauen: This is my beloved Sonne, Sonne, in whom I am well pleased heare him. All these thinges did greatly increase faith in the Disciples hearts, notwithstanding they did not yet vnderstand, what they shoulde doe, and what ende concerning the matters of Christ was to be hoped for.

Set before you an example hereof in Abraham. Although in faith a sonne was conceiued vnto him, neuertheles he was yet ignorant, that he must be offered: Neither did faith manifestly shew it selfe, when a sonne was giuen vnto him: So was it also with the Disciples: although they had faith; notwithstanding they wanted as yet triall of their faith: Now nothing trieth faith better then the crosse and persecution. If Abraham had not bene commaunded to offer his sonne; he had had no triall of his faith. When as the Apostles did suffer persecution, they then had a cast and triall of their faith. As longe as we may liue without tentation, we thinke that we are endued with a strong faith, but if any aduersitie commeth to vs on any side, we byandby trie what faith we rested vpon. Wherfore S. Paul sayth Rom.5: VVe reioyce in tribulations, knowing that tribulation bringeth forth patience, & patience experience, & experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed. After the same sorte Salomon also sayth in the Proverbs: As siluer is fined, and golde tryed in the fornace, so doth the Lord trie the harts. Such a triall is made by þ crosse and persecution, when we are as it were crucified according to our old Adam, by which crucifying our faith is tried, and according to this trial of faith our flesh mortified, the spirit encreasing in the knowledge of Christ. And then is our flesh truely mortified, when we suffer the will of God to beare rule in vs; which is then done when we submit our selues to his will howsoever he dealeth with vs, renouncing our owne. This S. Paule will haue vs to doe, when he sayth thus Rom.12: I beseech you brethren by the mercies of God, that ye giue vp your bodies a liuing sacrifice, holy, acceptable vnto God, which is your reasonable seruing of God. And fashiō not your selues like vnto this world, but be ye chaunged by the renewing of your minde, that ye may proue what that good, and acceptable, and perfect yvil of God is.

When Thomas thus confesseleth that he is ignorant whither the Lord goeth, neither knoweth the way, the Lord doth not rebuke him with a sterne countenance, neither by and by casteth him of, nor diueth him fro him, he calleth him not either a grosse asse or oxe, as we are wont to handle the weake, but aunswering him very gently, saþt: I am the way, the truth, and the life. I, saþt the Lord, am the way, by whiche the father is gone vnto, alþest I be slayne: I cary them that beleue and are my sheepe, on my shoulders to the Father: no other way beside this leadeth vnto heauen. He that walketh not this way, goeth out of the way from the Father. I also am the truth. For I am the light which lighneth the worlde, and I teach true doctrine, and make true Christians. Moreouer, I also am the life, for it is I that quicken, he that beleueth in me shall not dye. This, as I sayd before, is to teach the Gospele rightly, that is, to shew the true and right way, which leadeth vnto eternall life. When the Disciples knew not the way that leadeth vnto glory, the Lorde making no delay, affirmeth vnto them that he is that way. As if he shold say: If ye desire to know the way to glory, seeke not the strength, light, and righteousness of creatures, but looke vnto me: for I am the way, the truth, and the life, although I must be put to death, alþough I am vile and of no reputation according to the outward appearance: neither let this offend you, that they which be mine, are subiect to persecutions. The right way to the father is found in me, let none remoue you from this perswasion. Therefore he sayth moreouer:

No man commeth vnto the Father but by me. As if he shold say: No man can come to the Father by his owne strength or merits: The lawe terrifieth the conscience that it can not goe to the Father: the word of Christ, which iustifieth vs by the righteousness of Christ, bringeth vs to the Father. Whereupon followeth that which he afterward sayth:

If ye had knovvne me, ye should haue knovvne my Fater also. For as no man commeth to the Father, but by the Sonne, so no man knoweth the Father but by Christ the Sonne. First the Fathers will is not knowne, to wit, that he wil saue vs, unles we see it in Christ. He which is in the bosom of the Father, hath revealed it vnto vs. Secondly the Father is not beleued. For reason by it selfe doth not understand, that it receiueth any thing of God. Wherefore it is needefull that Christ declare that bountifulnes and goodnes vnto vs. A troubled conscience flieth the Father, neither can it abide to commit it selfvnto him. But they that are

are iustified by the word of Christ, do not any more contemne the Father, neither flie him, as the Israelites did, but stande before him as Moses, and are enlightened with diuine light, that they may know the power of God and mercie of the Father. Hereupon commeth trust and confidence in him: hereby we knowe that we receiue all thinges at his handes, and looke for all as well spiritual as corporal things of him. All these we must acknowledge to be received by faith, reason can not attaine vnto them. For it endeuoureth to obtaine God by her owne strength and merits, but that endeouour is in vaine. Wherefore when it is not able to come to the knowledge of God by her owne strength, it utterly denieth God, and sayth that there is no God. After when it seeth vncleannes in her workes, it despeireth, and is in most great distres. But when we are iustified by foolish preaching, we come to the knowledge of God the Father, as soone as we beleue the word of Christ, and so we trie the power of the Father in afflictions and aduersities, although they be euен great. This was shadowed forth in that, that the people of Israell could not abide to heare the voice of God, but desired that Moses might speake vnto them. Where Christ also was figured, that he shoulde make intercession for vs to the Father, and be our mercy seat. For nature is more weake & fraile, then that it can abide to talke with God. Wherefore he hath giuen vnto vs this his Sonne a Mediatour, in whom and by whom we must haue to doe with him. When as the Lord so louingly and gently dealeth with Thomas, and sheweth vnto him, howe he must come to the Father, to wit, by the Sonne, and that the Father is knowne in the Sonne, there doth yet happen a grosser thing in Philip, who bursteth forth and will not be content with faith, but will knowe the thinge assuredly by feeling and seeing. Wherefore he sayth vnto the Lord:

Lord, shew vs thy Father, and it sufficeth vs. As though he would say, if thou wilt also shew vnto vs a signe, then will we beleue. Philip counteth it not sufficient to beleue the worde, but goeth about to come to the knowledge of the Father by an other meane then by the worde. For seing that reason can not beleue, he requesteth to be certified by an other meane and way. By the interrogacion therfore of Christ that followeth it is shewed, that the conscience is made certaine and quiet by no other thing, then by faith, for that we must clearie to the bare worde, and looke for no other signe. But Philip thought here that he shold be much more certified, if he did see the Father, then if he beleued the simple and bare word. This incredulitie Christ reprooueth somewhat sharply, and sayth :

Hau I bene so long time with you, & hast thou not knowne me? As though he shold say : I teach and preach, and yet thou knowest me not. Doost thou not knowe that the Father will be knowne by me, that my word is the worde and power of the Father, by which alone he will be knowne, and by nothing els? For thou hast heard the voice of the Father from heauen after this sorte : This is my beloued Sonne, in whome I am well pleased, heare him. Doost thou not yet vnderstande howe the Father is knowne? The Father is not seene with carnall eyes, as John in his first chapter sayth : No man hath seene God at any time: the onely begotten Sonne, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. Wherefore the Lord sayth to Philip: Philip, he that hath seene me, hath seene the Father. This saying is like vnto that former when he sayth: If ye had knowne me, ye should haue knowne my Father also. That is, forasmuch as the Father will be knowne by me, seeke no other way to knowe him, but beleue my word, that I am he, which sheweth vnto you the Father, and will make you to know him in me. Beleeue that by me thou hast accessse to the Father, by this meanes thou shalt knowe the Father, by faith thou shalt vnderstande the power and mercie of the Father, and shalt feele him to be comfortable and gracious. The Father will haue my word to be beleued, and them that beleue it, to be saued and obtaine eternall life. Seeing therefore that these thinges be thus, that we can not know the Father but in the Sonne, and when we know the Sonne, we know also the Father: the Lord sayth moreover vnto Philip:

How then sayest thou: Shewe vs thy Father? Beleeuest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me? As if he would say: Forasmuch as there is no other way to know the Father, but that which I haue shewed, why I pray thee, doost thou not beleue my wordes, seeing that I haue taught that I am the way, the truch, and the life? Doost thou not beleue that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? Beleeuest thou not that my diuinitie and the diuinitie of the Father is one? and that the Father will be knowne by me? But why is the Father knowne by the

the knowledge of the Sonne? euen therefore, for that the Sonne is in the Father, and the Father in the Sonne. For the word by which the Sonne is knowne, is the power of the Sonne and of the Father. Wherefore seing the Sonne is knowne by his word, it necessarily followeth, that the father also is knowne thereby.

Beleeue me, that I am in the Father, and the Father is in me: at the least beleeue me for the very works sake. Here he doth as it were appeale to workes, that they may giue testimonie of the word. As if he shold say: Seeing that ye can not be content to beleeue the word, at the least beleeue the signes which beare witness of the word, and whereby the Father hath giuen testimonie of me. For the works and signes are testimonies of the word. By these words Christ meaneth nothing els but to confirme the consciences of his Disciples, and of all vs against the offence of the crosse. For consciences wil know and not beleeue the bare words of God, but doe alwayes dout and say: What if God careth not for thee? and haue such like cogitations. Holy & godly men seeine for the most part to be neglected, as abiects and most contemptible men, inasmuch as the world according to the will & lust thereof, rageith and practizeth tyzannie against them, and doth almost what it list. Hereupon they are in anguish & in daunger of faith, & desire to know the will of God toward them. These Christ comforteth, that they may seeke no other comfort but in him and in his death, and beleeue that he is life, that he beareth rule, and maketh aliue them that be dead. And that they shold nothing dout hereof, he maketh them yet moze certaine, and sayth:

Verely, verely I say vnto you, he that beleeueth in me, the wworkesthat I doe, he shall doe also, and greater then these shall he doe. As if he shold say: Dout not any thing but that ye shall know the Father by me, and that my word is the power of God, & that by my word ye shal be sustained, although I be euен crucified. Ye shall haue triall hereof in your selues, for if ye beleeue in me, ye shall not onely worke such workes and shew such signes as I doe, but euен greater. Which came to passe after the ascencion of Christ, when the Apostles wrought greater miracles as well among the Jewes as Gentiles, then Christ him selfe. But what is the cause hereof? The Lord himselfe addeth it saying:

For I goe vnto my Father. That is, I will begin a kingdom, where I will sfull all thinges. Here the Lord annexeth the conclusion of all the questions and consolations going before. For a little before Christ had taught, that the Father is known by him, and that is because he is in the Father, he therefore is shewed by that word, by which the Father is shewed. But that he might confirme this, to wit, that his word is the power of the Father, he added and said : He that belieueth in me, the works that I do, he shall doe also. That is, by faith in me ye also shall doe those works, and know that my word is the vertue and power of God. But why doth he say : I goe to the Father ? I aunswere : Because Christ is in the Father, therefore doth he the workes of the Father, but we doe them not also therefore, but for that Christ who is in the Father, is now in vs. For to goe to the Father is to fulfill all thinges, & as Paule according to the saying of the Psalme declareth, to giue giftes vnto men, to lighten and to sanctifie. For this is the kingdom of Christ, whereby he reigneth in earth in the hartes of the beleeneres, and sitteth vpon the thone of his Father Dauid. The Lord also speaketh these wordes : I goe to the Father, to comfort his Disciples. For as he did before beginne to confirme them, that they should not be troubled and offended, although he should dye, but courageously cleave to him, and beleue in him : So here he promiseth them that they shall be glorified, for he goeth to the Father, who shall deliuier all thinges into his handes, that he may mightyly obtaine a kingdom ouer all things that are in heauen and earth. Wherefore they ought nothing at all to feare, He yet comforteth them more and sayth :

And whatsoeuer ye aske in my name, that will I doe. As if he should say : As soone as I come to the Father, there is no cause why ye should be carefull. For those thinges that ye haue neede of and aske, ye shall obtaine, I wil doe this for you, because I obtaine a kingdom. And he peculiarly addeth, in my Name, whereby he excludeth all our merits. For by Christ we are heard, as also in Christ we are loued, by whom also we are Priestes, as Peter sayth, to offer by spirituall sacrifices, and acceptable to God. All these thinges sayth Christ, I will doe for this cause :

That the Father may be glorified in the Sonne. The Father is then glorified, when glorie is giuen and ascribed vnto him, not vnto vs. That is, whē we acknowledge þ we are saued not by our owne merits, not by our owne wisedom and righteousnes, but do put our trust in his mercie. For he hath giuen his Sonne for our sinnes,

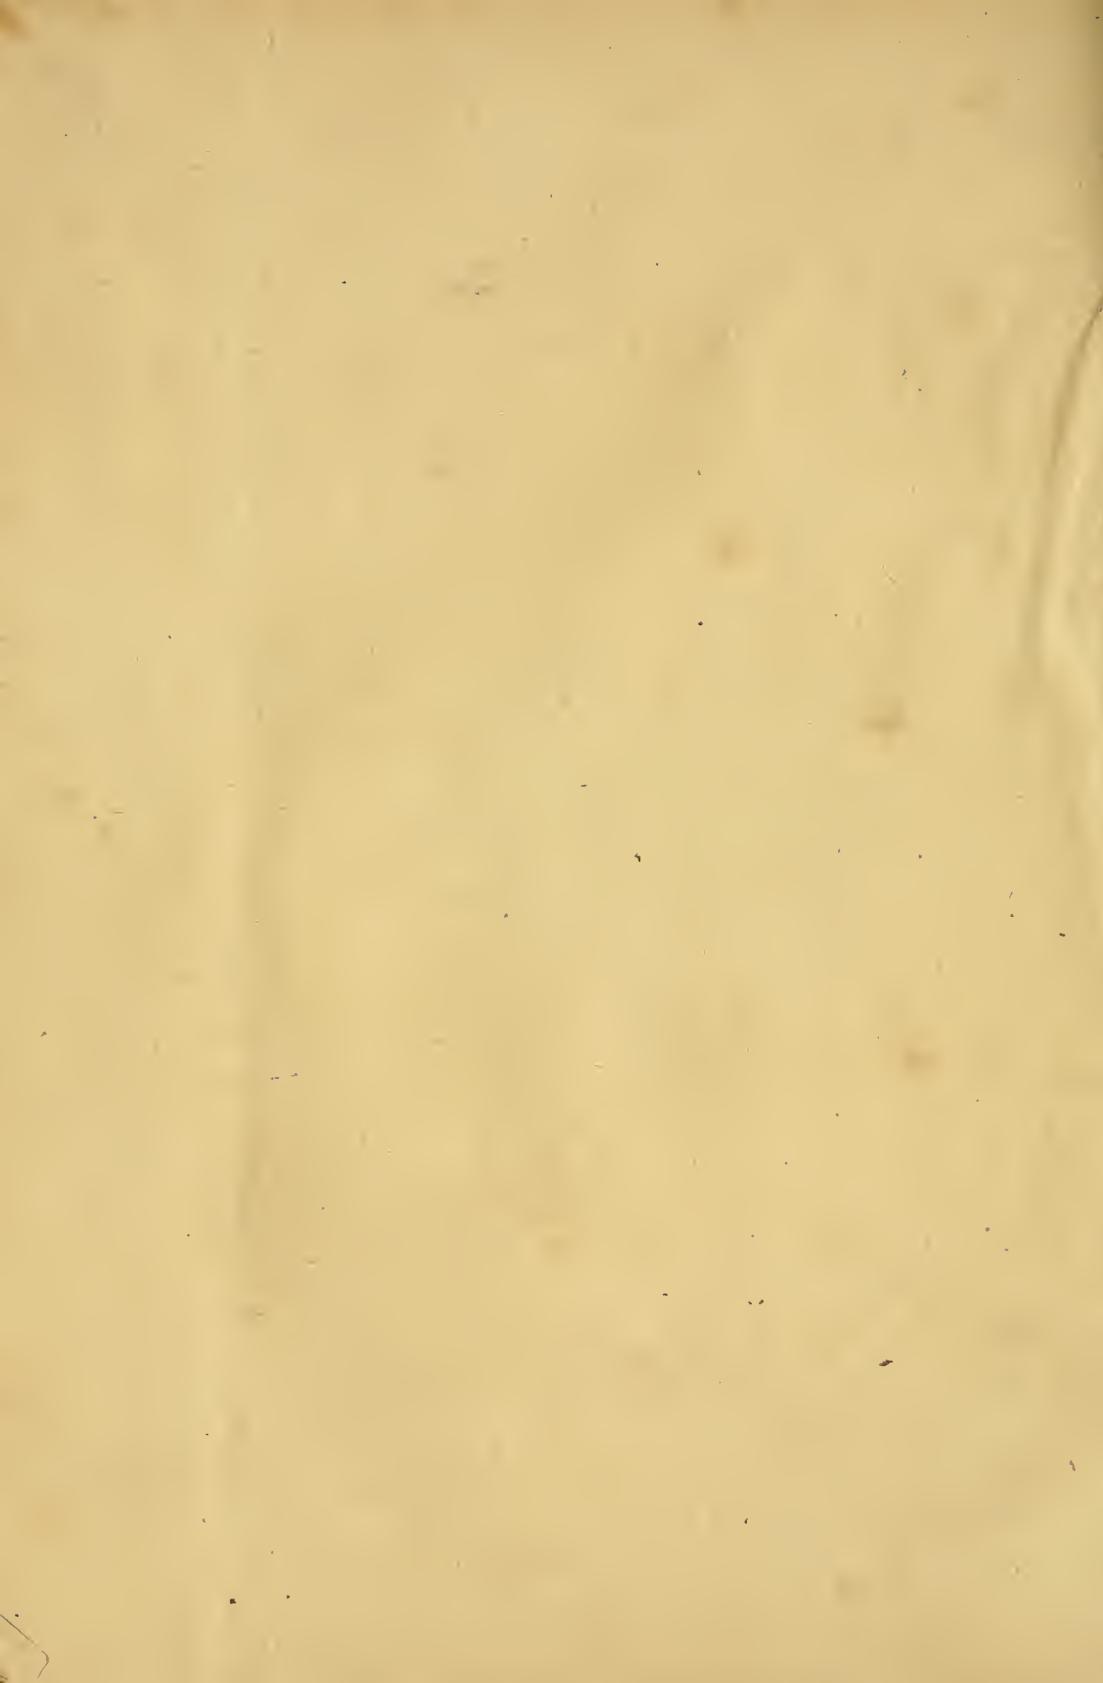

James, and whatsoeuer we purpose to aske, we must aske it by this Sonne, and we shall obtaine it. Wherfore he repeateth these wordes, and sayth:

If ye shall aske any thing in my Name, I will doe it. These wordes tend to this ende, that he may make vs certainly beleue his wordes, and cleave vnto him. This therefore is the summe of this conclusion: He biddeth his Disciples and vs therefore beleue, for that he goeth to reigne. Before he affirmeth, that he wil shew forth a signe and testimonie of his kingdom, & so reigne, that he will declare a notable token of his gouernment, that we may feele and perceiue it: to wit, that he will doe so great works by vs, as he him selfe hath done, yea and greater also. Also, that he will heare vs when we pray, and whatsoeuer we pray for vnto the Father in his name. By these promises the hart must be confirmed & made courageous against the gates of hell. For Christ reigneth by his word, wherefore it is needfull that we exactly know the vertue of the word: for the kingdom of Christ is the power & vertue of God. These things I thought good to entreat of concerning this Gospell: Let vs call vpon God for the ayde of his grace, that we may be able to vnderstand them, & by them to strengthen our weake faith.
